LETTER OF TRANSMITTAL

DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE,
BUREAU OF THE CENSUS,
Washington, D. C., December 1, 1941.

SIR:

I transmit herewith volume I of the 1936 Census of Religious Bodies. Volume I presents an analysis of results with diagrams, and, also, summary and detailed tables of the principal statistics by denominations, and by geographic divisions, States, counties, and principal cities. These statistics, comprising 256 denominations, were published first in 78 separate bulletins. The data were obtained by mail and personal canvass in connection with the 1936 Census of Religious Bodies.

* * * * * * *

The collection and compilation of these statistics were under the supervision of Dr. T. F. Murphy, Chief Statistician for General Information, Records, and Religious Statistics.

J. C. CAPT,
Director of the Census.

CENSUS OF RELIGIOUS BODIES

Summary and Detailed Tables

INTRODUCTION

SCOPE OF THE REPORT

This report presents the results of the census of religious bodies for the year 1936. As its name implies, this is a census of the religious organizations in the United States rather than of individuals classified according to their religious affiliation.

The census of 1936 was conducted under the supervision of Dr. T. F. Murphy, Chief Statistician for Religious Statistics.

This investigation is made once every 10 years in accordance with the provisions of the Permanent Census Act approved March 6, 1902, as amended by the act of June 7, 1906, and as further amended by the Fourteenth Census Act, approved March 3, 1919. The present report represents the fourth complete report on this subject, the three earlier ones covering the years 1926, 1916, and 1906.

The statistics given here for the last census relate to the year 1936, or to the church record year most nearly conforming to the end of that year. They were obtained from persons connected with the local church organizations, and include, besides the number of active churches with their membership, statistics of church edifices and parsonages, value of church edifices and parsonages, debt on church edifices, expenditures, and Sunday schools conducted by the local churches.

At this census, as in 1926, urban and rural churches were separately tabulated from information on the schedules. Urban churches are those located in urban areas; these areas, as defined by the Census Bureau in censuses prior to 1930, included all cities and other incorporated places having 2,500 inhabitants or more. For use in connection with the 1930 census the definition was slightly modified and extended so as to include townships and other political subdivisions (not incorporated as municipalities, nor containing any areas so incorporated) which had a total population of 10,000 or more, and a population density of 1,000 or more per square mile. Rural churches are those located outside of the above areas. Thus to a very limited extent the urban and rural areas, as reported for 1936, differ somewhat from these areas as reported in the preceding censuses.

No attempt was made to enumerate the various organizations with interdenominational activities which supplement the work of the churches, such as the Young Men's Christian Association, the Young Women's Christian Association, the Women's Christian Temperance Union, the American Bible Society, the American Tract Society, and many others.

The investigation for 1936 is confined to continental United States, and does not include statistics of organizations located in outlying possessions or in foreign lands. Information relative to foreign missionary work was furnished, however, by those bodies which engage in it. This information is included in bulletins which were printed for the various denominations, and also in volume II.

SCHEDULE FOR LOCAL CHURCH ORGANIZATIONS

In preparing the form of the schedules used in this census, conferences were held with representatives of a number of religious organizations, statistical agencies, and others. The statistics cover the number of churches reporting that they had Sunday schools, together with the total number of officers, teachers, and scholars. There were other minor changes in 1936: The question regarding debt on parsonages was omitted; while questions on the value of church edifices constructed prior to 1936 and constructed, wholly or in part, in 1936, were added; and expenditures were classified under 10 heads as follows:

For pastor's salary
For all other salaries
For repairs and improvements
For payments on church debt, excluding interest
For all local relief and charity, Red Cross, etc.
For all other current expenses, including interest
For home missions
For foreign missions
Amount sent to general headquarters for distribution by them
For all other purposes

A sheet schedule, as used in 1926, was decided upon, and the following form of schedule was adopted:

INSTRUCTIONS FOR COMPLETION OF SCHEDULE

Fill out a separate schedule for each church. Additional schedules will be sent to you upon request.

Please answer each question to the best of your ability, sign your name, stating your official title (or your connection with the church or organization) and your post-office address in the spaces provided at the bottom of the form. The schedule should be returned promptly in the accompanying official envelope which requires no postage.

Date of census.—This census relates to the year 1936. If your church records are for the calendar year, the financial information and membership should be reported as of December 31, 1936. If your church year is not the same as the calendar year, indicate that fact, in which case the information should be reported for your church year, beginning not later than March 1, 1936. For example, where the church year begins March 1, the financial information should be reported for the church year beginning on that date, and membership should be reported as of the last day of your church year, February 28, 1937. Indicate the period for which the report is furnished in the space provided in the lower left-hand corner on the face of the schedule.

Definition of church.—The term "church" as used by the Census Bureau represents any organization for religious worship which has a separate membership, whether it is called a church, congregation, meeting, society, mission, station, or chapel, etc. This report should also include all organizations of an ethical character which people regularly attend instead of a church.

MEMBERSHIP

The figures for number of members should include all persons who are members of your church according to the definition of member in your church or organization. In some religious bodies, the term "member" is limited to communicants; in the Eastern Orthodox Churches, the Roman Catholic Church, the Lutheran Church, the Protestant Episcopal Church, and some others, it includes all baptized persons; and in still other bodies it covers all enrolled persons.

1, 2, 3.—Give in this section the total number of members in this church or organization only. Enter under Question 1 the number of males, under Question 2 the number of females, and under Question 3 the sum of these two, which will represent the total number of members in your church or organization.

4.—Under Question 4 enter the number of members of this church who are under 13 years of age. Do not report Sunday-school scholars here, unless they are also members of the church.

5.—Under Question 5 report the number of members 13 years of age and over.

6.—Under Question 6 give the total number of members (the sum of the figures reported in answer to Questions 4 and 5). Please make a careful estimate of the number of members in each age group if actual figures are not available.

7.—Under Question 7 report the average attendance at church per Sunday. This can be arrived at by making a count, as nearly as possible, of the number of persons present each Sunday for several Sundays.

CHURCH BUILDINGS

8.—A church "edifice" is a building used mainly for religious services. If services are held in a hall, school house, or private house, indicate that fact in reply to Question 8. Such a building is not a church edifice, and its value should not be reported under Question 9.

9.—Report under Question 9 the value of the church edifice, together with the land on which it stands and all furniture, organs, bells, and furnishings owned by the church and actually used in connection with church services. Do not include here either the value of buildings hired for church use or of buildings owned by the church but not used for religious services. Where parts of the church building are used for social or organization work in connection with the church, the whole value of the building and its equipment should be included, as it is practically impossible to make any separation in such a case. The value of buildings used for school purposes should be reported under Question 38.

10.—The total amount of money expended for the construction of new church buildings should be reported under Question 10. Do not include any of this amount in the value of church edifices as reported under Question 9. The value given for the church edifice should be the current market value as nearly as this can be ascertained.

11.—Give the total debt upon the church edifices reported under Question 9 and those reported under construction under Question 10.

13.—The value of the pastor's residence, if owned by the church, should be reported under Question 13. If actual figures are not available a carefully prepared estimate will be accepted.

EXPENDITURES

In this section, report the amounts expended by this church only during the last calendar or church year. Please indicate the period covered by this report in the space provided for the purpose in the lower left-hand corner of the schedule.

14.—In answer to Question 14, give the annual salary of the pastor. If the pastor's salary consists of voluntary contributions or is made up partly of such contributions, estimate the value of these contributions and include them in item 14.

15.—Under Question 15 report the total amount paid for all other salaries, including assistant pastors, clerks, the choir, janitor, and all other salaried employees.

16.—Question 16 should include all expenditures during the year for the repair and improvement of the church edifice and pastor's residence.

17.—The total of all payments made on church debt, not including interest, should be given in answer to Question 17.

18.—Under Question 18 report the amount collected and distributed by this church for local relief, charity and all other benevolent purposes. This amount should represent the distribution made by this church. In some religious bodies, contributions are given specifically for distribution by the individual church and it is this amount which should be reported in answer to this question.

19.—Under Question 19 report all other running expenses of this church, including interest on the church debt, which are necessary to carry on the work of the church during the year. These items will include rent, fuel, light, expenses of the Sunday school, and all other maintenance costs.

20, 21.—Under Questions 20 and 21 report the amount given by this church for home (or domestic) and foreign missions. In some religious bodies, an annual assessment, based on the membership or income of the church, is made for these purposes and the total amount is sent to headquarters to be distributed. If this is the case and the figures cannot be separated, please answer "None" for Questions 20 and 21 and report in 22 the total amount contributed for this purpose.

22.—If a lump sum is sent to general headquarters for all benevolent purposes, it should be reported under Question 22.

23.—Question 23 should include all other expenses not reported under Questions 14 to 22, inclusive, and together with these items should represent the total expenditures made by this church during the fiscal year.

24.—Total expenditures will appear in answer to Question 24.

CHURCH SCHOOLS

Report in this section only schools which are conducted by this church. If an individual serves as an officer and teacher in any of the types of school mentioned in this inquiry, he should be reported under that question which requires the greater part of his time; for example, if a person devotes the major portion of his time to teaching and incidentally serves in a supervisory capacity, he should be reported as a teacher and not as an official, except in the case of the Sunday-school superintendent who should always be reported as an officer. If the church has no Sunday school, summer vacation Bible school, or other type of school named in this inquiry write "None."

27, 30, 33, 36.—Questions 27, 30, 33, and 36 should represent the number of enrolled pupils who attend these schools. If the church conducts a summer vacation Bible school, or a week-day religious school, report only the members of this church who are in attendance.

37, 38.—Under Questions 37 and 38 should be reported the number of buildings used for school purposes, together with their value. Value of school buildings owned by this church should be reported under Question 38 and not under Questions 9 or 10.

PASTOR OR LEADER

39.—In most cases these questions will be self-explanatory. If your organization is one of those which does not use the term "pastor", give under Question 39 the name of the person in charge of the local church or organization, and consider him in place of the pastor in answering the other questions in this section.

43.—In many churches there are a number of lay workers who are employed by the church to carry on its numerous activities. They may be engaged in welfare work, missions, or other duties and their total number should be reported under Question 43.

Under remarks furnish any additional information which you believe will enable the Bureau to more fully understand your report.

Authority for collection of information.—The information to be used as a basis of religious statistics is collected by the Census Bureau under authority of Acts of Congress approved June 7, 1906, and June 18, 1929. These Acts make it the duty of every person in charge of any religious body to answer all questions on the printed schedule, applicable to the religious body, church, or organization; and upon refusal or neglect to comply, such person is subject to a fine not exceeding $500 or to imprisonment not exceeding 60 days, or both; and if any such person willfully gives false answers, he is subject to a fine not exceeding $10,000 or to imprisonment not exceeding one year, or both.

There are certain movements and cults which claim a number of adherents, but are not so organized as to make their presentation as religious bodies advisable. A partial list of these is given below. Because of the nature of these movements and for the reason that they do not have a distinctive membership, the Bureau did not consider it feasible to attempt to obtain any definite statistics.

METHODS OF COLLECTING DATA

The method by which statistics were obtained was similar, in general, to that of the three preceding censuses. As the census period neared, the Bureau of the Census established a contact with persons of authority in each separate denomination, in many cases the same person who had assisted at previous censuses.

Lists of church organizations obtained from ministers, yearbooks, or other denominational publications were checked against the lists for 1926, and supplemented by correspondence with officials of the denominations. Every effort was made to obtain the name of the pastor or the clerk of each individual church; and a schedule with instructions on the back as to the method of filling was mailed to this person with a return envelope which required no payment of postage. If, after a reasonable interval, no reply was received, a reminder was sent, followed in some cases by a second or third reminder, enclosing an additional schedule. When, through faulty address or for some other reason, a schedule was returned unclaimed, an effort was made to obtain a correct address and another schedule was mailed. When all these methods failed to bring complete information, appeal was made to the denominational officers, or to local postmasters, or special agents of the Bureau in the field were instructed to visit the church in person.

In case of some loosely organized denominations, or those averse to publishing the statistics of their organizations, it was necessary to appoint special agents; these were generally persons holding official positions in these bodies, or otherwise specially fitted by reason of personal familiarity with conditions.

The statements of history, doctrine, organization, and work published in 1926 in connection with the statistics for each denomination were submitted to someone in the respective denomination who was competent to pass upon them, for correction or such additional statement as was needed to indicate the development during the decade. The statements for denominations reported for the first time at the 1936 census were furnished by prominent persons in the denomination. These were reviewed in the office and supplemented, when necessary, by further correspondence and investigation.

CONDUCT OF THE WORK

As the foundation for the collection of schedules, there was prepared a card catalog of churches, based originally upon a similar catalog of the 1926 census. More than 600,000 schedules were printed, together with several hundred thousand special notices and letters for different denominations, forms for reminders, circular letters, with envelopes, outgoing and return, etc.

Schedules when received were checked to the card catalog, and then examined as to the fullness or consistency of report, and where necessary, correspondence was had with those making incomplete or inconsistent reports, due, often, in the latter case, to a misunderstanding of the inquiry. Schedules for each denomination were classed as urban or rural and by geographical areas (States, counties, and cities). The information on each individual church schedule was transferred to a punch card, which was used for a mechanical tabulation.

The same difficulties were present and prevented a rapid and complete collection of the data as had operated at previous censuses—difficulties inherent in any collection of statistics by correspondence. The survey received only half-hearted support from a few denominations and, to that extent, the data for them are incomplete.

The Jewish Congregations were enumerated at this census under the direct supervision of a special agent, who was selected and financially assisted by the American Jewish Committee. His work involved the preparation of four forms of schedules in both Yiddish and English, designed to locate isolated congregations of which there were no available records.

PLAN OF THE REPORT

This report presents the detailed statistics of all denominations for the United States, for States, counties, and cities, and separate statistics for those denominations composed wholly or in part of Negro organizations.

Digitized by Google

There is considerable diversity among the various denominations as to what constitutes a church member; each denomination was, therefore, requested to furnish a definition based upon its own constitution and practice and this statement is given in volume II, and in the bulletins for each separate denomination. In addition, since the membership 13 years of age and over usually affords a better basis for comparison between denominations, the age classification used in 1916 and 1926—"under 13 years of age" and "13 years of age and over"—was again adopted.

In 1916, 30,553,574 members, or 72.9 percent of the total, were reported in these two age classifications; in 1926, 45,269,045 members, or 82.9 percent; in 1936, 44,591,451 members, or 79.9 percent, were so reported. No attempt was made to estimate the distribution of the members not reported by age on the schedules.

As soon as preliminary figures for each body received the approval of the church officials, a bulletin was prepared in which its statistics for 1936 were presented in considerable detail, followed by a statement of the history, doctrine, organization, and work. This separate printing, which had never been attempted prior to 1926, proved an exceedingly valuable method of distribution. In the case of certain denominational families, such as the Methodist bodies and Presbyterian bodies, publication was deferred until each of the constituent denominations was completed and a bulletin covering the whole group was then prepared.

CLASSIFICATION OF RELIGIOUS BODIES

No radical departure was made from the method of classification used in the 1926 report, for various reasons. The grouping by denominational families, so far as possible, is convenient for reference and for comparative purposes; a strictly alphabetical arrangement would make such a grouping impracticable. Changes in these bodies are constantly taking place, and since 1926 the changes have been largely in the nature of mergers and divisions of existing bodies with similar denominational standards.

The total number of denominations, listed in this report including independent and federated churches, is 256. Of the 256 denominations, 183 are grouped in 24 families, and 73 are listed as separate denominations.

There are 57 denominations shown in 1936 that were not reported in 1926, and 14, reported in 1926, have either merged with other bodies or, so far as information could be obtained, have passed out of existence. This results in a net addition to the list of 43 denominations.

Federated churches continued to increase during the decade. There were comparatively few of these 20 years ago, and they were included in the group of independent churches; but in 1926 and 1936 they were reported as a separate group. Those churches listed in the church yearbooks or shown on the schedules as having more than one denominational connection were made the subject of special correspondence, which resulted in the collection of some very interesting statistics, showing a great variety of denominational combinations. This development has come partly from an effort on the part of weak churches to combine for more effective work without losing their essential doctrinal standards, and in some cases, for economic reasons, the movement received an external impetus from the central denominational headquarters.

The changes in denominations that have occurred since the 1926 census are shown in the following tabular statements and, more fully, in footnotes appended to table 23, p. 314. Most of the changes in denominations have occurred within certain family groups, only two mergers of previously unrelated bodies having been reported.

ANALYSIS OF RESULTS

SUMMARY

In this volume are presented, for the year 1936, general statistics for the church organizations situated within continental United States. This report deals primarily with the number, distribution, denominational affiliation, membership, church property, expenditures for the year, and Sunday school enrollment of these local churches.

The basic unit of this census was the local church organization. The term "church" as used by the Census Bureau represents any organization for religious worship which has a separate membership, whether it is called a church, congregation, meeting, society, mission, station, or chapel, etc. This report also includes organizations of an ethical character which people regularly attend instead of a church.

In 1936 there were in the United States 256 denominations reporting 199,302 local churches, while in 1926 there were 212 denominations with 232,154 churches reporting membership.

The total church membership reported for 1936 was 55,807,366, compared with total membership of 54,576,346 in 1926. The total membership in 1936 would have been much larger if all churches had furnished statistics.

The value of church edifices in 1936 was found to be $3,411,875,467, a decrease of $427,625,143 from the reported value in 1926 of $3,839,500,610. This is doubtless in part the result of incomplete returns.

During the year 1936 total church expenditures, including not only the sums paid for salaries, maintenance of church plants, and payments on debt but also contributions for benevolences, denominational support, and all other purposes, amounted to $518,953,571, as compared with $817,214,528 in 1926. The comparability of these figures is also affected by the lack of complete returns in 1936.

In 1936 there were 162,233 churches reporting Sunday schools, with 2,261,740 officers and teachers and 18,389,001 scholars, compared with 184,686 such churches having 2,167,848 officers and teachers and 21,038,526 scholars in 1926. Here again the relative incompleteness of returns in 1936 must be kept in mind.

CHURCHES AND THEIR MEMBERS

Table 13 (p. 86), which is the first of the general tables presented in this report, gives, by denominations, facts about the number of churches and the number of their members. As used in this volume the term "denomination" refers to the general overhead organization into which local churches are combined, and to groups of independent and federated churches. The general church organizations are called by a number of different names, such as denomination, assembly, convention, council, or church; but for purposes of uniformity in this, as in previous enumerations, all have been classified as denominations.

The great majority of all churches were affiliated with a comparatively few denominations. The Negro Baptists had the most with 23,093, or 11.6 percent; the Roman Catholic Church followed with 18,409, or 9.2 percent; and the Methodist Episcopal Church with 18,349, or 9.2 percent. Three more, the Southern Baptist Convention, with 13,815,[1] the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, with 11,454, and the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, with 7,789, together contributed 16.6 percent. Thus nearly 50 percent of the total were reported by six bodies. Altogether there were only 19 denominations (presented graphically in diagram 1), with 2,500 churches or more; these few organizations included 73.8 percent of all the churches in the country. On the other hand, there were 121 denominations with fewer than 50 churches each.

For use in connection with the 1930 census the definition of urban areas was slightly modified and extended so as to include townships and other political subdivisions (not incorporated as municipalities, nor containing any areas so incorporated) which had a total population of 10,000 or more, and a population density of 1,000 or more per square mile. Rural churches are those located outside of the above areas. Thus to a very limited extent the urban and rural areas, as reported for 1936, differ somewhat from these areas as reported in the preceding censuses. On this basis the total number of rural churches was found to be 128,097 and of urban churches 71,205. Since the Nation's population is 12.4 percent more urban than rural, it is obvious that the ratio of churches to inhabitants is relatively high in rural as compared with urban areas.

[1] The Southern Baptist Handbook for 1937 shows 24,671 churches for 1936. The statistics for the Southern Baptist Convention are incomplete, because of the failure of the pastors or clerks of many churches to furnish a report to this Bureau after repeated requests. The data presented here represent a compilation of the reports received.

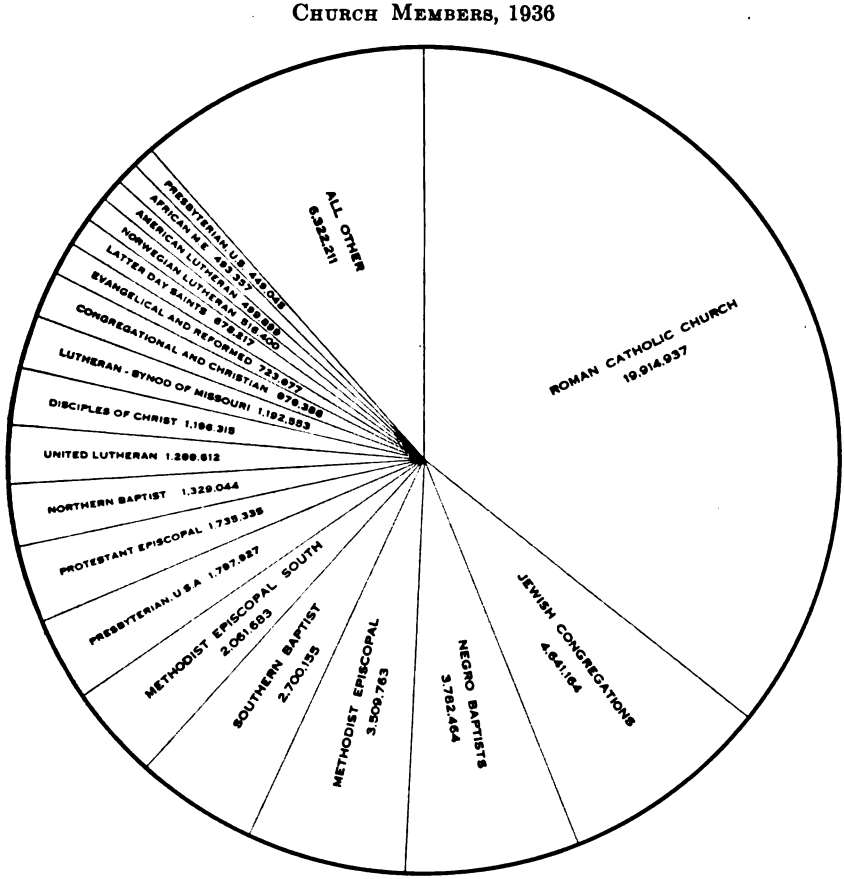
Certain denominations were found to be mainly urban and others chiefly rural. The Jews had only 141 rural congregations contrasted with 3,587 in cities, while the Salvation Army had but 21 of its 1,088 churches located in rural communities. Only 1,719, or 15 percent, of the churches of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and 1,843, or 13.3 percent, of those of the Southern Baptist Convention were urban.

Number of Members

Facts about membership, which are also shown in table 13, show that church membership was even more highly concentrated among a comparatively small group of denominations than was the number of churches. The 19 largest in point of membership included 88.7 percent of all the members. These are shown in the following diagram:

DIAGRAM 2.—NINETEEN LEADING DENOMINATIONS ACCORDING TO NUMBER OF CHURCH MEMBERS, 1936



Digitized by Google

Roman Catholics had by far the largest number of church members with 19,914,937; the Jewish Congregations came second with 4,641,184; the Negro Baptists followed with 3,782,464. The Methodist Episcopal Church was next with 3,509,763, while the Southern Baptist Convention and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, held fifth and sixth places with 2,700,155 [2] and 2,061,683 members, respectively. The six other denominations having a million members or more each were the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, the Protestant Episcopal Church, the Northern Baptist Convention, the United Lutheran Church in America, the Disciples of Christ, and the Evangelical Lutheran Synod of Missouri, Ohio, and Other States.

Differences in membership among denominations are partly explained by differences in the meaning of the term "member." Throughout this report the members of a local church organization (and thus of the denomination to which the church belongs) have been considered to be those persons who were recognized as constituent parts of the organization. In some religious bodies the term is limited to communicants; in others it includes all baptized persons; and in still others it covers all enrolled persons. The Jews, in contrast to the definition employed prior to 1926, now consider as members all persons of the Jewish faith living in communities in which local congregations are situated. Among the Roman Catholic and Eastern churches, all persons, even infants, are considered members, provided they have been baptized according to the rites of the church. On the other hand, certain denominations consider as members only those persons of mature years who have been baptized and enrolled as members. Between this more limited interpretation and the broad interpretation of the Catholics and Jews, there is nearly every possible variety of interpretation. The Protestant Episcopal Church, and the Lutheran bodies, because they also count as members all baptized persons in the congregation, tend toward the more inclusive definition of the term; while denominations like the Congregational and Christian Churches and the Presbyterian bodies lean toward the narrower interpretation.

Members Under 13 Years of Age

In order to secure membership figures that are more nearly comparable among denominations, each church was asked to give the total number of members 13 years of age and over. Returns were received from churches representing 44,591,451 of the country's 55,807,366 members, the Jewish Congregations being the largest denomination which did not report at all on this point. The data show that, on the average, 17.6 percent of the members whose ages were reported were under 13 years of age. This proportion varies decidedly from denomination to denomination. For Catholic bodies the ratio was relatively high, being 27.4 percent for the Roman Catholic Church. For the Protestant Episcopal Church it was 20.1, and for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 24.9. Among Lutheran bodies the proportion varied from 19.0 to 37.3 percent. For many churches, however, the number of members under 13 was relatively small. Eighty-two, or slightly more than one-third of the denominations for which data were recorded, had less than 5 percent of their members under 13 years of age. Among this group were the Churches of Christ, Congregational and Christian Churches, and the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America. The Northern Baptist Convention had 5.2 percent of its members under 13; the Southern

[2] The Southern Baptist Handbook for 1937 shows 4,482,315 members for 1936. Baptist Convention, 5.8; the Disciples of Christ, 7.3; the Methodist Episcopal Church, 7.6; and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, 10.8. It is apparent, therefore, that direct comparisons of the memberships of such organizations as the Catholic, the Jewish, the Protestant Episcopal, and the Lutheran bodies with those of most Methodist, Baptist, and other bodies, overemphasizes the numerical strength of the former group.

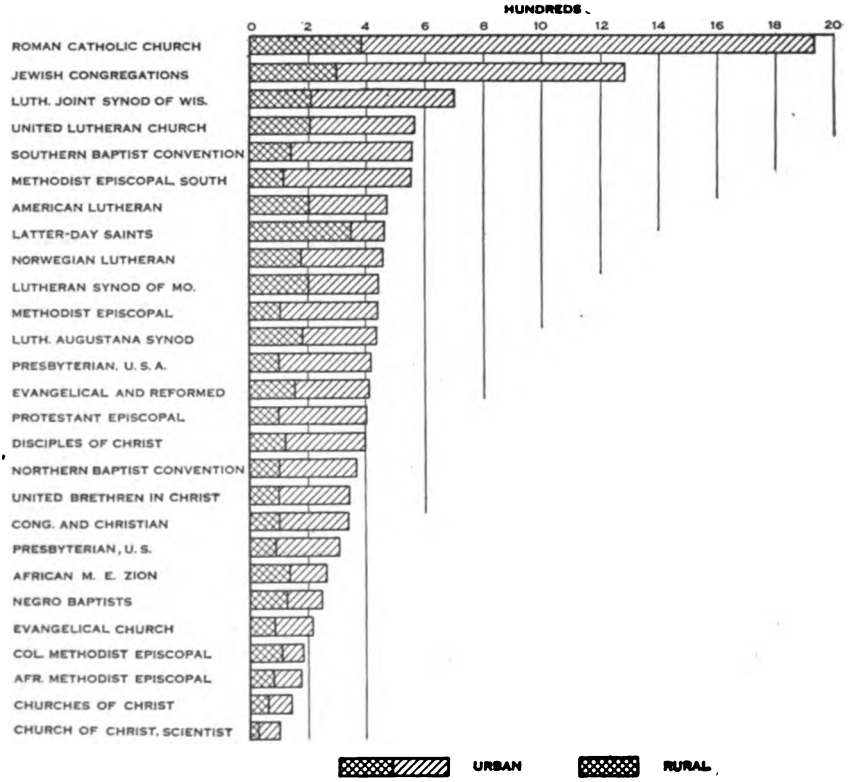
Members Per Church

The average number of members to a church was 280 for the country as a whole; 541 for urban and 133 for rural churches. These figures vary decidedly among denominations. For denominations having 200,000 or more members, the average number of members to an urban and to a rural church is shown graphically in the following diagram:

DIAGRAM 4.—AVERAGE MEMBERS PER CHURCH OF URBAN AND RURAL CHURCHES, BY PRINCIPAL DENOMINATIONS, 1936



The average Roman Catholic church in cities reported 1,939 members and the Jewish Congregation 1,282; while the 1,153 urban churches of the Seventh-day Adventist Denomination had, on the average, only 84 members. In rural districts the denominations having relatively large average memberships to a church included the Roumanian Orthodox Church, with 525; the Greek Orthodox Church (Hellenic), with 471; the Schwenkfelders, with 429; the Roman Catholic Church, with 382; and the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, with 346. Toward the other extreme were the churches of the Free Methodist Church of North America whose 599 rural churches had an average of only 23 members to a church.

Sex Ratios

Returns from churches having memberships aggregating nearly 46,000,000 show that, on the average, there were five women members for each four men. This ratio was almost the same for rural and for urban churches, but differed decidedly among denominations. The proportions of the sexes, in denominations having 200,000 or more members, are indicated in diagram 5. The Jewish Congregations are not shown, as they did not report their membership by sex.

There are 24 denominations in which the number of male members actually exceeded the female. In this group were seven of the Eastern Orthodox Churches, four of the Lutheran bodies, and The Volunteers of America. Twenty-seven small denominations reported less than half as many males as females.

CHURCH FINANCE

In table 14 are summarized the facts about church buildings and finances. It shows that the total number of edifices reported was 179,742. Any building used mainly for religious services and owned wholly or in part by the organization so using it has been considered a church edifice.

Although the majority of churches that reported the possession of any edifice had only one each, some organizations had two or more.

The Negro Baptists had the largest number of church edifices, with 21,350; the Methodist Episcopal Church was second, with 18,032; the Roman Catholic Church was third, with 16,637. The Southern Baptist Convention, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America were next with 12,742, 10,864, and 7,228 edifices, respectively. These six denominations reported 48.3 percent, or nearly half, the church edifices in the country.

Since there were only 179,742 church edifices reported to the 1936 census it follows that some organizations either failed to report or had no such edifices, but held their meetings in rented churches, halls, schoolhouses, or in other places.

Total Value of Edifices

The total value of church edifices owned by 173,754 churches that reported on valuation was $3,411,875,467. This large total is the more surprising because of the restricted meaning attached to the term. The "value of church edifices" comprised the estimated value of the church buildings owned and used for worship by the organizations reporting, together with the value of the land on which the buildings stood and the value of the furnishings and other equipment owned by the churches and actually used in connection with church services. Where parts of a church building were used for social or educational work in connection with a church, the whole value of the building and its equipment was included, as it was found practically impossible to make a proper separation in such cases. However, the term excluded (1) the value of investment property, (2) the value of parsonages or pastors' residences, and (3) the value of school buildings, parish halls, monasteries, and other property that, while owned and used in some way by the church organization, was employed for purposes not directly connected with church services. It, therefore, becomes apparent that the value of church edifices given in the table is considerably less than the actual value of all church property.

The highest value of church edifices was reported by the Roman Catholic Church, with a total of $787,001,357. The Methodist Episcopal Church was second, with $345,402,555; the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America third, with $270,464,345; and the Protestant Episcopal Church fourth, with $266,400,447. The six other denominations, each of which had edifices valued at more than $100,000,000, were the Northern Baptist Convention, the Congregational and Christian Churches, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Jewish Congregations, the Southern Baptist Convention, and the United Lutheran Church in America. The figures are shown graphically in the accompanying diagram.

Edifice Value Per Church

The average value per church of all the churches reporting was $19,636; but this figure varied greatly for the different denominations. Leaving out small denominations like the American Ethical Union, whose three reporting churches had an average value of $308,583, the figures show that, among the larger denominations, the Unitarians and the Jewish Congregations had the highest average value, $83,767 and $60,911, respectively. At the other end of the scale were a few very small denominations, like the Christian Unity Baptist Association, Church of God as Organized by Christ, and Two-Seed-in-the-Spirit Predestinarian Baptists, with an average value of less than $1,000 per church. Among the bodies with at least 100 edifices each, those of the 161 United Baptist Churches reporting had the lowest average value, $1,113.

Differences in the average value of church edifices were largely explained by the urban or rural location of the churches. As a rule, city churches had a much higher value than rural churches. The 60,073 urban churches reporting edifice value averaged $44,583 per church, compared with only $6,454 for the 113,681 rural churches that reported. Thus, the average value of the city churches was nearly seven times that of the rural churches. In value of edifices the churches in cities, therefore, accounted for more than three-fourths of the total for the entire United States, although in number of churches they represented only about three-tenths of the total.

Even within the same denomination, differences in value between the urban and the rural churches were striking. In the case of the Presbyterian Church in the United States the average value of a city church was $47,199, and of one in the country, $5,845. The differences were even greater in certain other denominations. For the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, the urban average was $55,769 and the rural $4,921; while for the Southern Baptist Convention the figures were $45,069 and $3,849, respectively.

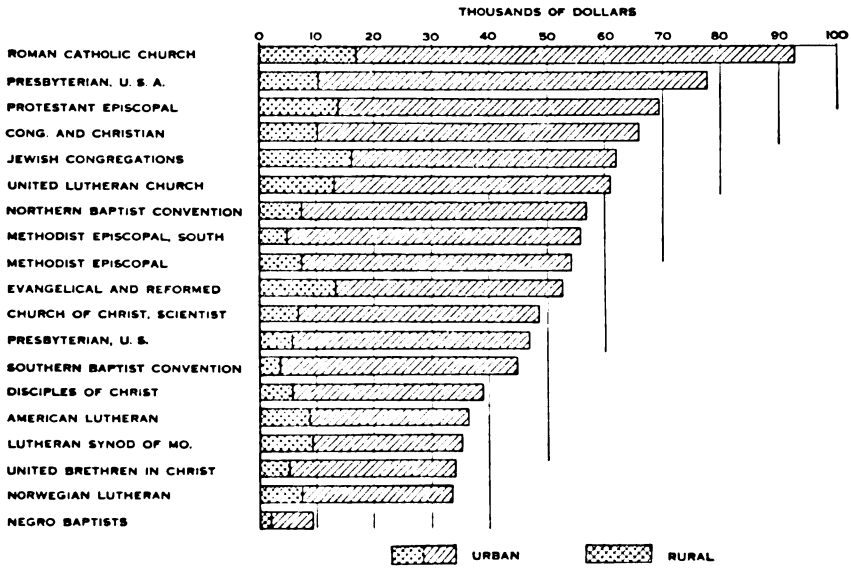
In diagram 7 the average values of urban and rural churches are indicated for the denominations shown in diagram 6.

DIAGRAM 7.—AVERAGE VALUE OF EDIFICES OF URBAN AND RURAL CHURCHES, BY PRINCIPAL DENOMINATIONS, 1936



Debt on Church Edifices

Data for indebtedness on church edifices, which are also given in table 14, reveal that the number of churches showing debts was 45,376, or 25.2 percent of all church edifices reported. While a few organizations with debts probably failed to report them, the number was presumably small, and it can therefore be assumed that virtually all the 134,366 churches that did not report debts had none.

The Roman Catholic Church had the largest number of churches reporting debt with 6,996; the Negro Baptists were second with 4,109; and the Methodist Episcopal Church third with 3,814. Eleven other denominations each reported having more than 1,000 churches with debts.

Among the denominations having a proportionately large number of their churches in debt were the African Methodist Episcopal Church, with 33.7 percent; the Assemblies of God, General Council, 37.3 percent; the United Lutheran Church in America, 37.9 percent; the Jewish Congregations, 41.1; the Evangelical Lutheran Synod of Missouri, Ohio, and Other States, 41.6 percent; the Roman Catholic Church, 42 percent; the Evangelical Lutheran Augustana Synod, 44 percent; the Church of the Nazarene, 51.4 percent; and The Christian and Missionary Alliance, 54.6 percent.

The total amount of reported debt on church edifices was $509,627,453. This figure does not include the debt on all church property, but only the debt on such buildings, together with their furnishings and other equipment, as were owned and used for worship by the churches reporting. For the most part debts are secured by real-estate mortgage or other claim on the property concerned.

The largest amount of debt was shown by the 6,996 Roman Catholic churches, which accounted for $189,350,733, or 37.2 percent of the total reported debt on church edifices. The 14 other denominations reporting church debt in excess of $10,000,000 were: The Methodist Episcopal Church, $42,863,553; Jewish Congregations, $30,649,721; the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, $28,125,616; the Northern Baptist Convention, $20,063,272; the United Lutheran Church in America, $18,447,882; the Protestant Episcopal Church, $16,003,462; the Southern Baptist Convention, $14,428,046; the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, $13,007,264; the Evangelical Lutheran Synod of Missouri, Ohio, and Other States, $12,761,589; the Evangelical and Reformed Church, $11,599,251; Disciples of Christ, $11,401,182; Negro Baptists, $10,913,652; the Congregational and Christian Churches, $10,906,080; Church of Christ, Scientist, $10,124,992. These 15 denominations accounted for 86.5 percent of all debt reported.

The debts of city churches were far larger than those of rural churches. Of the 60,073 urban churches that reported valuation there were 28,079 (46.7 percent) that showed indebtedness, the total amount being $458,386,969, or $16,325 per church. Of the 113,681 rural churches reporting value there were only 17,297 (15.2 percent) that showed indebtedness, the total being $51,240,484—an average of $2,962, or less than a fifth of the urban figure.

Total Church Expenditures

The 1936 census secured returns from 188,766, or 94.7 percent of all the churches, showing the amount expended by each during the fiscal year. These data, which are summarized in table 15, show that the total expended by the churches reporting was $518,953,571, and that, of this amount, $139,073,358, or 26.8 percent, was expended by Roman Catholic churches. The Methodist Episcopal Church reported $46,231,459; the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, $34,316,610; the Protestant Episcopal Church, $29,288,532; the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, $21,558,363; the Southern Baptist Convention, $19,630,844. These half dozen bodies account for 55.9 percent of all the expenditures reported. There were 8 other denominations showing expenditures of more than $10,000,000 (see diagram 8) and 28 with from $1,000,000 to $10,000,000 each.

Computed in terms of expenditures per church, the average was $2,749; but the majority of denominations fell below this amount. There were 175 bodies that reported expenses of less than $2,000 to a church. Among this number were 10 Two-Seed-in-the-Spirit Predestinarian Baptist churches with expenditures averaging $66, and 8 Church of God as Organized by Christ churches that reported an average of only $59. Eleven denominations, however, had expenses of more than $5,000 per church; and of this number only two—the American Ethical Union with six churches averaging $37,965 and the Catholic Apostolic Church with seven churches averaging $14,648—had an average of over $10,000. Among the larger denominations the 15,720 Roman Catholic churches with average expenditures of $8,847 come first, followed by the 2,159 Jewish Congregations which reported average expenditures of $6,672 each.

Differences in average expenditures are partly accounted for by the urban or rural location of the church. The expenses of 66,998 urban churches averaged $5,817, and of 121,768 rural churches only $1,061. The urban figure was decidedly influenced by returns from 7,123 Roman Catholic churches, whose expenses were at the rate of $15,897 each. Eliminating these, the urban average was $4,618. Among denominations large enough to have more than 100 urban churches reporting, the Reformed Church in America had the second highest average expenditures for city churches with $9,476, and the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America had $9,170. The Christian Reformed Church showed $8,992; the United Presbyterian Church of North America, $7,706; the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, $7,494; the Presbyterian Church in the United States, $7,421; and the Protestant Episcopal Church, $7,126.

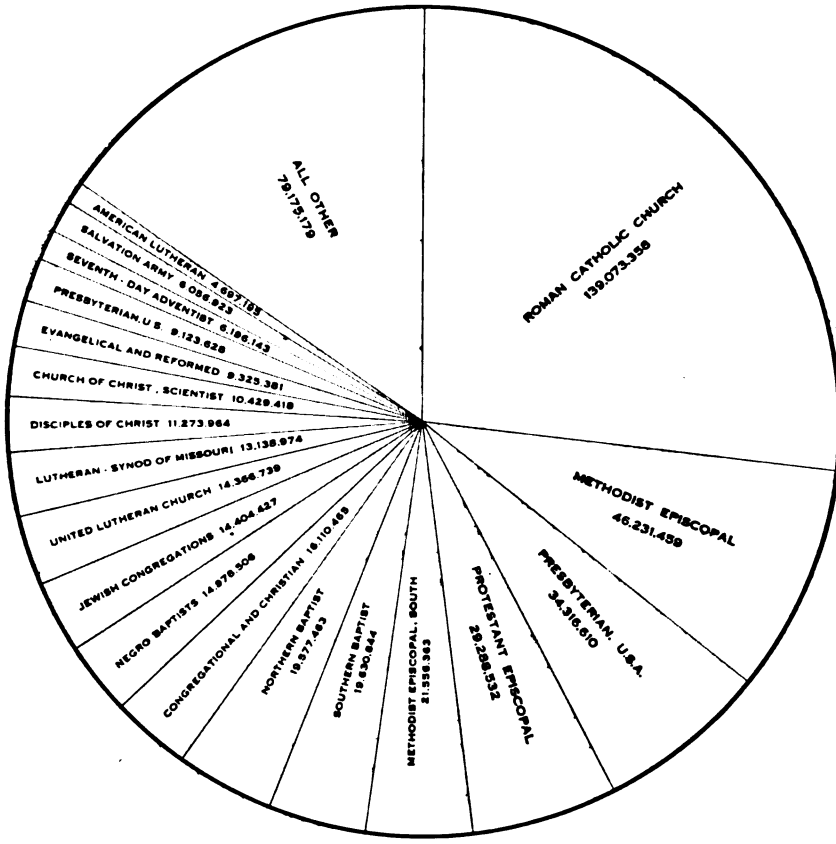
DIAGRAM 8.—NINETEEN LEADING DENOMINATIONS ACCORDING TO TOTAL CHURCH EXPENDITURES, 1936



Among denominations having 100 or more country churches reporting expenditures the Christian Reformed Church showed the highest rural average, $3,825. The Reformed Church in America was second with $3,304, and the Roman Catholic Church followed with $3,006.

Only 3 other denominations, with over 100 reported rural churches each, had expenditures averaging more than $2,000; the United Presbyterian Church of North America showed $2,205; the Federated Churches, $2,122; and the General Conference of the Mennonite Church of North America, $2,045.

The respective averages for urban and rural churches are shown graphically in diagram 9, for the 19 principal denominations.

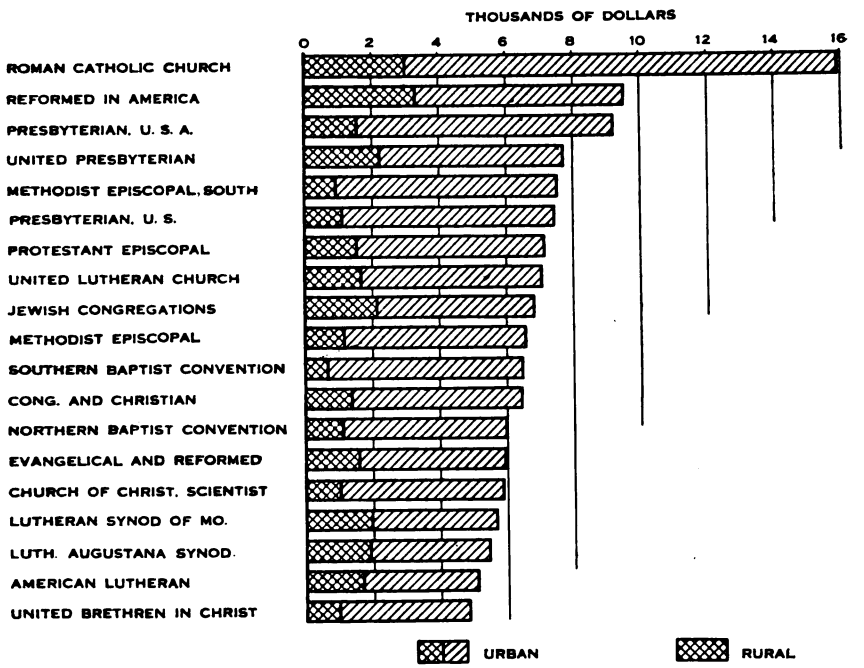
Local Expenses Versus Benevolences

The amount expended during the last fiscal year was separated by most of the churches reporting into 10 items, 5 showing the cost of current expenses and improvements and the other 5 the amounts contributed to benevolences, missions, etc. These figures, which are also summarized in table 15, indicate in a general way the distribution of church expenditures between the requirements of local self-support and the contributions of the church to larger interests.

The returns show that, excluding $30,820,347 for all other purposes, $417,054,056 went to current expenses and improvements and $71,079,168 to benevolences, missions, etc. This means that $1 was contributed to the larger interests of the church for every $5.87 that was expended for local self-support.

DIAGRAM 9.—AVERAGE EXPENDITURES OF URBAN AND RURAL CHURCHES, BY PRINCIPAL DENOMINATIONS, 1936



The proportionate amount contributed to benevolences was almost the same for urban and for rural churches. Omitting the expenditures that could not be classified, the returns showed that city churches spent $312,287,952 for upkeep and $53,396,943 for missions, etc., while the totals for rural churches were $104,766,104 and $17,682,225, respectively. The city churches, therefore, devoted 14.6 percent and the rural churches 14.4 percent of their total expenditures to missions and other benevolences.

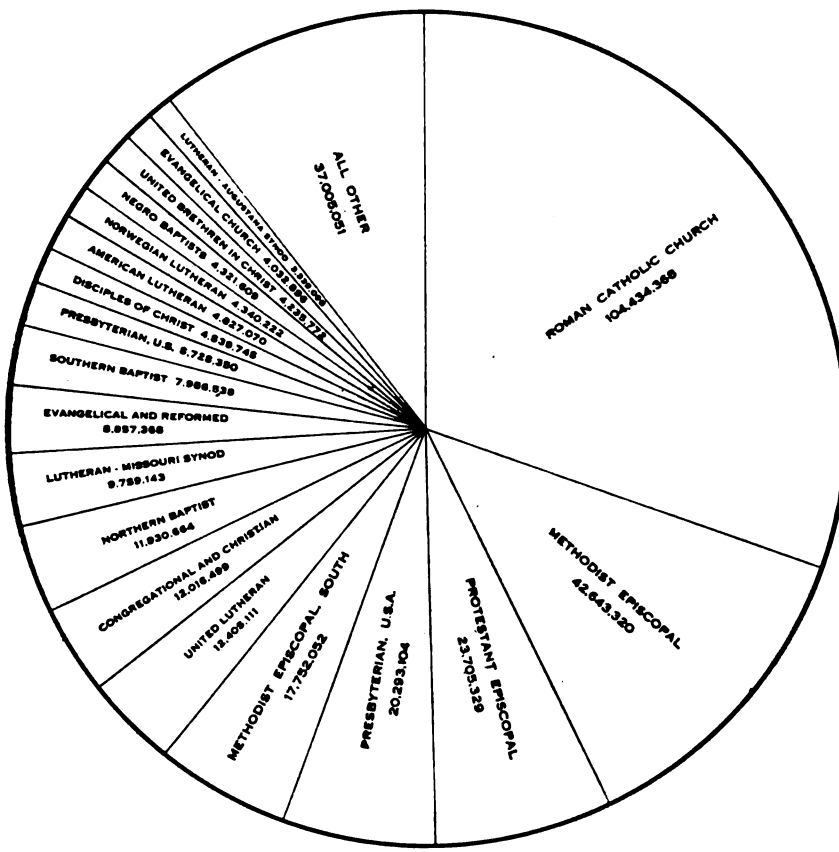
Value of Parsonages

Only 71,235, or slightly more than one-third, of all the churches in the United States reported the value of their parsonages; but, as brought out by the figures in table 16, the proportion of organizations reporting varied decidedly among denominations. There were 77 whose churches reported no parsonages at all.

Digitized by Google

Except for the Church of Christ, Scientist, all these denominations were comparatively small, having fewer than 500 local churches. Included among these are organizations that do not have regular ministers, such as seven of the eight Plymouth Brethren bodies and two of the four societies of Friends. The group of 77 also included other denominations, notably some of the Mennonite bodies and Evangelistic associations, whose ministers are not set apart as a special class and who receive no salaries.

DIAGRAM 10.—NINETEEN LEADING DENOMINATIONS ACCORDING TO VALUE OF PARSONAGES, 1936



Included in the 179 denominations that reported parsonages were many that had a very small number. On the other hand, 37 denominations reported at least half their churches owning parsonages. This group included 9 of the 20 Lutheran bodies, the Evangelical and Reformed Church, the Methodist Episcopal Church, the Free Methodist Church of North America, the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, the United Presbyterian Church of North America, two of the three Reformed bodies, and the Roman Catholic Church. In the case of the Christian Reformed Church, all but 35, or 13 percent, of their 272 churches reported parsonages.

Digitized by Google

The total value of the parsonages reported was $344,562,310, or about one-ninth (11 percent) as much as the total value of church edifices. The Roman Catholic churches reported $104,434,368, or 30.3 percent, of the total value of all parsonages. The Methodist Episcopal Church reported parsonages valued at $42,643,320; the Protestant Episcopal Church, $23,705,329; the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, $20,293,104; and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, $17,752,052. Each of 24 other denominations had parsonages worth $1,000,000 or more.

The 19 denominations which lead in respect to the aggregate value of their parsonages are indicated in diagram 10.

DENOMINATIONAL CHURCH SCHOOLS

Sunday schools were reported by 81.4 percent of all the denominations, or 162,233 churches. This figure excluded undenominational or union Sunday schools, which were not separately enumerated.

Only 15 small denominations indicated that they had no Sunday schools. Those in this group having larger memberships were the Old German Baptist Brethren (Old Order Dunkers), the Reformed Mennonite Church, the Old Order Mennonite Church (Wisler), and Two-Seed-in-the-Spirit Predestinarian Baptists.

Among the larger denominations the proportion of churches reporting schools differed considerably. Ranking first was the Salvation Army with 98.8 percent, followed by the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church, with 95.8 percent. The United Lutheran Church in America came next with a close 95.7 percent, followed by the Negro Baptists with 95.2 percent. The Presbyterian Church in the United States of America showed 94.7; the Church of the United Brethren in Christ, 94.5; and the Northern Baptist Convention, 94.4. The Disciples of Christ were close with 92.9 percent; the Evangelical and Reformed Church, 92.6; the Evangelical Church, 92.0; the African Methodist Episcopal Church, 91.9; the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, 91.4; and the Congregational and Christian Churches, 90.8. On the other hand, the Roman Catholic Church had Sunday schools reported by only 43.7 percent of its churches; the Jewish Congregations by only 27.6; and the Primitive Baptists by 2.4 percent.

In considering for the different denominations the proportion of churches reporting Sunday schools it should be remembered that the figures do not include parochial or other institutions that at least supplement, if they do not actually take the place of Sunday schools. Thus, the comparatively low percentage of Roman Catholic churches reporting Sunday schools is compensated for by the large number of their parochial schools, which, while conducted during the week, give religious as well as secular education. Returns for the Roman Catholic Church alone show that 6,825 churches reported parochial schools with 2,095,254 scholars. To a less extent the same situation prevails also among certain Lutheran bodies, while Jewish Congregations operate what are known as Talmud Torah schools. Thus the ratio of churches reporting Sunday schools should not be used as a direct measure of the extent of religious instruction.

Of 162,233 churches reporting Sunday schools, 58,765, or 36.2 percent, were urban and 103,468, or 63.8 percent, were rural. In cities, 7,250 Negro Baptist churches reported having 1 or more schools. The Methodist Episcopal Church showed 4,462; the Roman Catholic Church, 3,694; the Protestant Episcopal Church, 3,255; and the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, 3,138. These 5 denominations accounted for nearly three-eighths, or 37.1 percent, of all urban churches with schools. In rural areas, the greatest number of churches having schools—14,726—were those of the Negro Baptists. The Methodist Episcopal Church had 11,766; the Southern Baptist Convention, 10,408; the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, 7,762; and the Roman Catholic Church, 4,359. These five organizations included about half (47.4 percent) of all rural churches with schools.

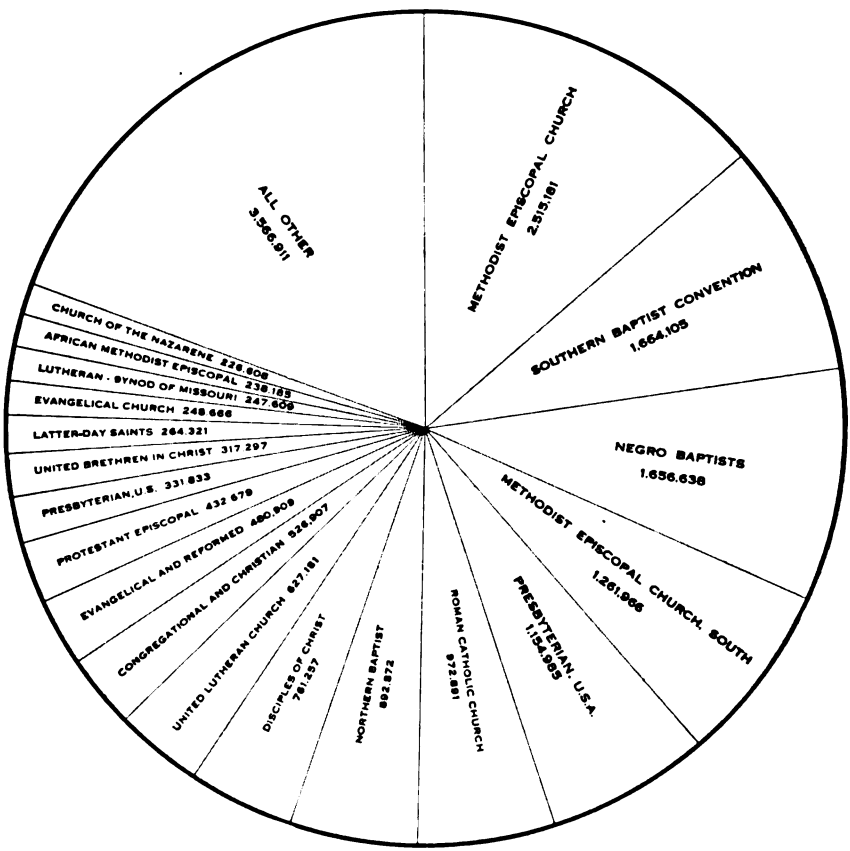
The 162,233 churches with schools reported 2,261,740 officers and teachers, or about 14 to a church. For urban schools this average was about 19 and for rural schools about 11.

The returns received show the number of scholars in denominational Sunday schools to have been 18,389,001. The Methodist Episcopal Church had 2,515,181 pupils in its schools; the Southern Baptist Convention, 1,664,105; the Negro

DIAGRAM 11.—NINETEEN LEADING DENOMINATIONS ACCORDING TO NUMBER OF SUNDAY SCHOOL SCHOLARS, 1936



Baptists, 1,656,638; the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, 1,261,966; and the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, 1,154,985. These 5 denominations were the only ones with more than 1,000,000 scholars in their schools and embraced 44.9 percent of the total. The Roman Catholic Church was close with 972,891; and following were the Northern Baptist Convention with 892,872; the Disciples of Christ with 761,257; and the United Lutheran Church in America with 627,181. These 9 denominations, showing the largest figures, embrace 62.6 percent of the total. Figures for the 19 leading denominations are indicated in diagram 11.

DIAGRAM 12.—URBAN AND RURAL CHURCHES, BY STATES, 1936

The number of scholars attending urban schools was 10,455,919; and the number in rural schools, 7,933,082. In both areas the Methodist Episcopal Church showed the largest membership, having 1,342,873 and 1,172,308, respectively.

The average number of scholars per church was 113, being 178 for urban and 77 for rural; but denominational variations from these averages were wide. Among the denominations having at least 100 urban churches reporting, the Southern Baptist Convention had the highest average, 411. The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, followed closely with 357. At the other extreme were the Colored Primitive Baptists with but 37 scholars to a city church. So far as rural churches of the larger denominations are concerned, the General Conference of the Mennonite Church of North America had the largest Sunday schools, with an average of 205 scholars per church, while the Church of Christ, Scientist, showed the lowest average with 24.

DISTRIBUTION OF CHURCHES

Table 17 shows the distribution of churches on a geographic basis. Figures are presented by divisions and States, giving summary facts about the number of urban and of rural churches and their members. There are 3 separate States with 10,000 churches or more and 13 with from 5,000 to 10,000 each. Only 10 States had fewer than 1,000 each.

The ranking of the individual States according to the number of their churches did not follow exactly their ranking according to population. Pennsylvania, which was shown by the 1936 population estimates to be the second most populous State in the Union, had in 1936 the greatest number of churches—13,461. Texas was the fifth most populous State but second in the number of churches, with 11,190, while New York, which has by far the largest number of inhabitants, was third in the number of its churches, with 10,543. No other State had as many as 10,000 churches, but 13 had between 5,000 and 10,000 each, and 16 between 2,000 and 5,000. There were 7 States, 3 of them in the Mountain division, that had from 1,000 to 2,000 churches each, while 10 had fewer than 1,000, Nevada reporting but 153.

The States ranked quite differently in the number of their urban and the number of their rural churches. City churches were naturally concentrated in the industralized East. Pennsylvania had the most, with 6,523; New York was second, with 6,413; Illinois came third, with 4,198; and Ohio fourth, with 4,131. Rural churches were found in greatest numbers in Southern States. Texas had 7,697; Georgia, 7,416; Alabama, 6,267; and North Carolina, 6,136.

Diagram 12 presents graphically the proportionate number of urban and of rural churches by States and shows that in each State, with the exception of the District of Columbia, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, California, New York, New Jersey, and Connecticut, a majority of the churches are rural. Indeed, there are five States in which more than four out of every five churches are rural. The record is held by North Dakota, where only 9 percent are urban.

The different States ranked much the same in total number of church members and in total population. The 4 States that had the largest number of inhabitants had exactly the same ranking when classified by church membership. New York led with 7,150,501 members; Pennsylvania was second, with 5,412,246; Illinois had 3,556,852; and Ohio, 2,934,248. At the other extreme are Delaware, Wyoming, and Nevada, which not only rank lowest in the number of church members but also in the number of inhabitants. The ranking of the States by church membership, by the number of churches, and by population is presented in the accompanying table:

The 3 States—New York, Pennsylvania, and Illinois—that had the highest ranking based on total membership had also the highest ranking based on urban membership; while the States with the largest rural membership were Pennsylvania, with 1,137,195; Texas, with 976,009; North Carolina, with 786,259; and Georgia, with 722,552.

The average number of members of urban and of rural churches varied from State to State. In the East, where Roman Catholic and Jewish organizations were relatively numerous, churches generally had larger memberships than those in the South and West. The average urban church had in Rhode Island 1,161 members; in Massachusetts, 1,017; in New York, 1,014; in Connecticut, 962; and in New Jersey, 846. On the other hand, 14 Southern and Western States had less than 300 members to a city church.

In general, rural churches showed, from State to State, much the same kind of differences as city churches.

State Membership by Sex and Age

Table 17 also gives for divisions and for States the membership figures reported by sex and by the age groups "13 years and over" and "under 13 years." Leaving out of account the members for whom sex was not reported, the Eastern, Middle Western, and Mountain divisions showed proportionately more men church members than the Southern and Far Western divisions. In the 5 States of Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota, Idaho, and Utah there were 9 or more males to every 10 females. The highest proportion of males to females was reported by Utah which showed 99.1 males to every 100 females. In the District of Columbia, North Carolina, Florida, Tennessee, Alabama, Mississippi, Arkansas, and Oklahoma there were no more than 7 males to every 10 females. Twenty States had from seven-tenths to four-fifths as many men as women in their memberships, and 16 States from four-fifths to nine-tenths.

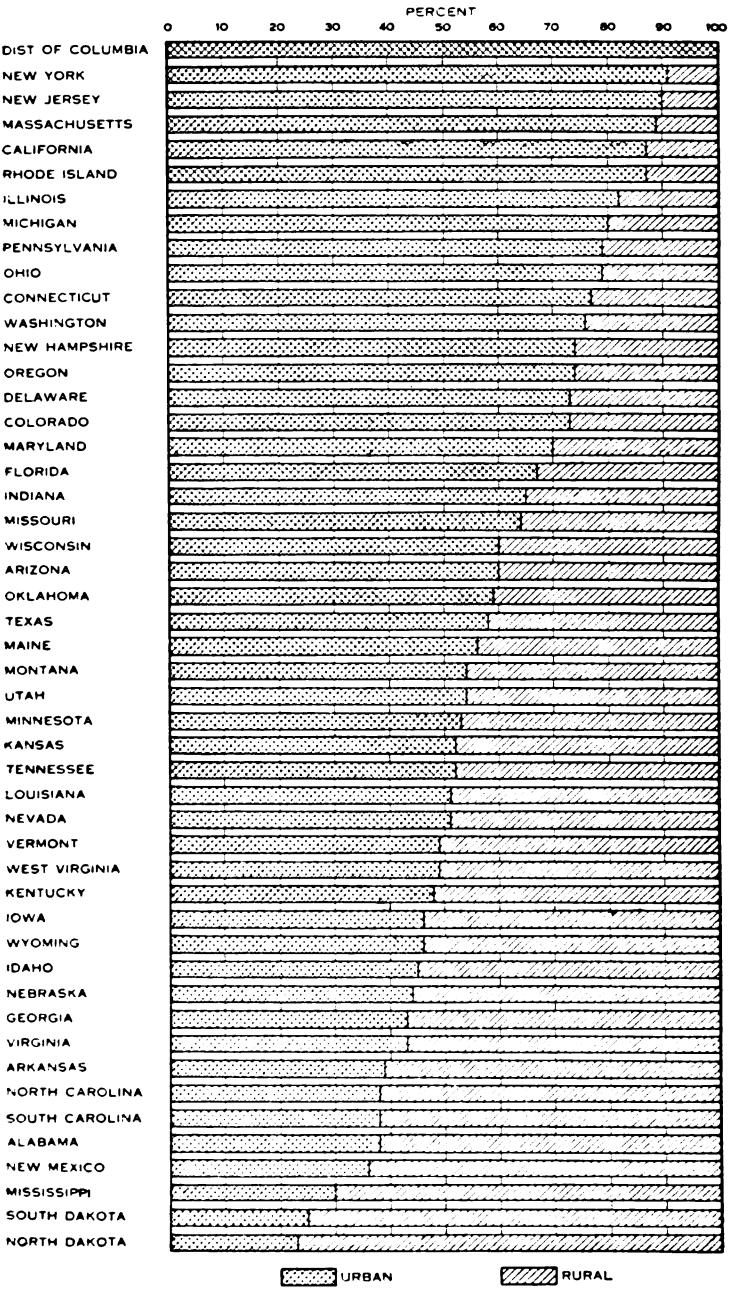
Diagram 13.—Urban and Rural Membership, by States, 1936



Digitized by Google

So far as the proportion of members under 13 years of age was concerned, the Eastern, Middle Western, and Mountain divisions again ranked above the national average, while the Southern and Far Western divisions had comparatively few young members. In New Mexico, 29.5 percent of the members reported were under 13 years of age; in Utah, 28.5; in Arizona, 26.6; in North Dakota, 26.4; in Nevada, 25.4; in Idaho, 24.4; and in Wisconsin, 23.6 percent. The States with but few young members were North Carolina, South Carolina, Mississippi, and Arkansas with slightly less than 11 percent each; while Virginia reported 10.0, Georgia, 9.6, and Tennessee, 9.1. In these States the Methodist and Baptist bodies were strong.

Sunday Schools by States

The distribution of churches having Sunday schools is presented in table 17, and these data naturally show a close relation between the number of these churches and the total number of all churches. Nineteen States had exactly the same ranking according to the number of churches with Sunday schools as when classified by the total number of churches, and 17 other States varied in their ranking by only 1 place.

Pennsylvania and Texas, which were shown to have the greatest number of churches, had also the most churches with Sunday schools, with 11,317 and 9,326, respectively. Georgia, which was fourth in the number of its churches, ranked third in churches having Sunday schools, with 7,943, followed by New York (7,612), and Ohio (7,433). However, there were 12 States, including the District of Columbia, that had fewer than 1,000 churches with Sunday schools, Nevada being last with 124.

In respect to the number of teachers and scholars, Pennsylvania had the highest ranking, with 215,490 officers and teachers and 1,987,242 scholars. Ohio was second with 127,837 teachers and 1,177,522 scholars, New York third with 117,238 teachers and 1,017,432 pupils, while Texas with 122,521 teachers and 960,354 pupils and Illinois with 114,991 teachers and 938,834 pupils were virtually tied on each of the two counts.

The urban-rural distribution of Sunday school scholars in each State is indicated in diagram 14.

The following table ranks the States by the number of their Sunday school scholars and includes, for purposes of comparison, rankings based upon the number of churches with Sunday schools, the total number of churches, and the total population.

Church Edifices by States

Table 18 gives by divisions and States the number of church edifices and parsonages, amount of church debt, and expenditures.

Pennsylvania reported the largest number of church edifices, with 12,237; Texas reported 9,931; New York, 9,185; and Georgia, 9,105. Ohio had 8,023, while three States—Illinois, North Carolina, and Alabama—reported from 7,000 to 8,000. Thirteen States had from 4,000 to 6,000, and nine other States, from 2,000 to 4,000. Only a dozen States had fewer than 1,000 each.

The total value of church edifices was highest in New York, $512,836,758, and next highest in Pennsylvania, $401,157,932. These two States alone accounted for more than a quarter (26.8 percent) of the reported valuation of all church edifices in the United States. In Illinois and Ohio the valuation exceeded $200,000,000, and in each of four other States—Massachusetts, New Jersey, Michigan, and California—more than $100,000,000.

Computed in terms of the average value per church the New England and the Middle Atlantic divisions, with their large number of urban churches, naturally showed much higher average valuation per church than the other divisions, while in the East South Central division, where the population is dominantly rural and the proportion of Negroes is high, the churches showed average valuations of only $6,849. Excluding the District of Columbia, the average value per church ranged from $63,961 in Massachusetts to $4,038 in Mississippi.

As was to be expected, the actual number of churches in debt was greatest in the State having the largest number of church edifices—Pennsylvania. New York, with the third greatest number of church edifices, came second in the number of churches in debt. In relation to the total number of churches reporting the value of their edifices, the Pacific division had the highest proportion in debt, 40.3 percent, while the Middle Atlantic States followed with 39.7 percent and the New England and East North Central divisions reported 32.7 percent and 31.2 percent, respectively. At the other end of the scale was the East South Central division with 17.4 percent and the South Atlantic with 17.2.

Of the total indebtedness on church edifices, 29.4 percent was reported by churches located in New York and Pennsylvania. Debts in these two States amounted to $94,222,672 and $55,853,033, respectively.

The average debt per church was $18,721 in the Middle Atlantic division, $17,379 in the New England division, $14,505 in the East North Central, and $9,150 in the Pacific. In the other division these averages were lower, being $7,479 in the West North Central, $7,272 in the South Atlantic, $5,545 in the West South Central, $5,248 in the Mountain, and $4,241 in the East South Central area.

Data regarding parsonages, which are also presented in table 18, show that in the New England, Middle Atlantic, and East North Central divisions together, about one-half (47.2 percent) the churches reported value of parsonages, while not quite 1 in 5 (19.2 percent) did so in the East South Central division.

Of the 71,235 churches reporting parsonages, 6,139 were in Pennsylvania, 5,021 in New York, 3,852 in Illinois, 3,785 in Ohio, and 3,199 in Texas. These five States accounted for 30.9 percent, or almost a third, of all parsonages.

The average value of parsonages was comparatively high in the Eastern divisions, somewhat lower in the South Central, Middle West, and Far West, and lowest in the West South Central division. In Massachusetts, Rhode Island, and the District of Columbia parsonages averaged more than $10,000, while in Oklahoma and in Arkansas this figure was less than $2,000.

Church Expenditures by States

Table 18 also presents, by States, church expenditures for the year, and shows that New York reported the largest amount, $71,291,095, or a little more than one-eighth (13.7 percent) of the national total. Pennsylvania reported $51,426,700, followed by Ohio with $32,968,462 and Illinois with $32,100,392. Three States—Massachusetts, California, and Michigan—each reported expenditures for the year of from $20,000,000 to $25,000,000; and nine States showed from $10,000,000 to $20,000,000. Wyoming, New Mexico, and Nevada were the only States whose church expenditures were less than $1,000,000 each.

Worked out on the basis of average expenditures per church, the Eastern divisions showed higher averages than the Middle Western and Pacific divisions; and these in turn higher averages than the Mountain and Southern areas. Excluding the District of Columbia, whose expenditures amounted to $9,602 per church, Rhode Island had the largest average—$8,495. Massachusetts showed $7,652, New York $7,548; Connecticut $6,904; New Jersey $5,916; and California $4,696. In New Hampshire, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Delaware, and Maryland expenditures ranged from $3,000 to $4,500 to a church and in 11 States from $2,000 to $3,000. Twenty-two States showed less than $2,000 each; among these were Alabama, $832; Arkansas, $813; Georgia, $785; and Mississippi, $704.

Urban Versus Rural Figures

Since tables 19, 20, and 21 present detailed figures by States for urban and rural churches separately, they bring out, among other things, the great difference between the financial status of the city and the country churches. In 1926 there were 6 States, all in the South, whose urban church value was more than 10 times that of the rural. In the past decade, however, there has been a change in this ratio; while the average value of rural churches remained about the same, urban values have decreased, the ratio for the six States mentioned being only 8 to 1, in 1936. The United States urban average dropped over 16 percent, while the rural increased 4 percent. In Georgia the average value was $14,943 for urban churches and $1,843 for rural, while the total expenditures averaged $2,179 and $347, respectively. These differences were owing in part to the relatively large number of Negroes living in the rural areas of the Southern States; but even in the North the differences were very striking. In New York State the average value of edifices was $93,691 for a city church and $14,675 for a country church; the average total expenditure was $11,354 for a city church and $2,307 for a rural church. These figures, therefore, make it clear that in church finances, averages for a State are greatly influenced by the relative size of the city population of the State. These differences within the States are shown graphically in diagrams 15 and 16.

Individual Denominations by States

In table 22 church statistics by individual denominations are presented for the different States; these show that the Roman Catholic Church has more organizations than any other in each of 15 States, including the 3 in the Pacific division, New York and New Jersey in the Middle Atlantic division, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, and Connecticut in the New England division, Wisconsin in the East North Central region, South Dakota in the West North Central group, and Montana, Wyoming, Colorado, New Mexico, and Arizona in the Mountain area. The Methodist Episcopal Church ranked first in the 11 States of Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, Delaware, Maryland, and West Virginia; while the Negro Baptists held first place in the District of Columbia, and the 9 Southern States of Virginia, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Arkansas, Louisiana, and Texas. The Southern Baptist Convention had the most numerous group of churches in Missouri, North Carolina, Kentucky, Tennessee, and Oklahoma; the Congregational and Christian Churches, in New Hampshire and Vermont; the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, in Idaho and Utah; the Protestant Episcopal Church, in Nevada; the Norwegian Lutheran Church of America, in Minnesota and North Dakota; and the Northern Baptist Convention, in Maine. Table 3 on p. 44 shows for each State the three denominations having the largest number of churches.

It is interesting to note the extent to which the churches of a State are concentrated in a few denominations. There are 14 Commonwealths in each of which the churches of less than 4 denominations actually constitute a majority of all the churches. The record is held by Utah, where 562 of the 730 churches belong to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

In considering these figures it should be borne in mind that the number of churches does not necessarily constitute an accurate gage of the strength of a denomination. It has already been shown that Roman Catholic churches had on the average much larger memberships than those of Protestant bodies. Thus it happens that the denomination having the most churches in a State is often different from the denomination having the largest number of members.

The Roman Catholic Church was first in the number of members in the District of Columbia and in 34 States, including all the States of the New England, the Middle Atlantic, the East North Central, and the Pacific divisions, and all but Idaho and Utah in the Mountain division. In addition, this body led in Delaware, Maryland, Louisiana, and Texas. The figures for the Roman Catholic Church were, of course, influenced by the more inclusive definition of membership employed by that denomination; but, as table 4 (p. 46) clearly indicates, its preponderence in membership in most of the 34 States was too great for this factor alone to account for its first-place ranking.

The Negro Baptists had the most members in seven States, Virginia, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, and Arkansas; and the Southern Baptist Convention in four States, North Carolina, Kentucky, Tennessee, and Oklahoma. The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints ranked first in Idaho and Utah, and the Northern Baptist Convention in West Virginia.

GROWTH OR DECLINE OF CHURCHES SINCE 1906

Table 23 presents for the four census years, 1906 to 1936, the denominational returns received relating to the number of churches, the memberships, and the Sunday schools, and indicates the status of the different denominations at the census dates.

The total number of churches reporting membership, which was 210,418 in 1906, increased by 1916 to 226,718; by 1926 to 232,154; and by 1936, due to many churches failing to report, decreased to 199,302. Thus the net gains during the earlier decades were 16,300 and 5,436 and during the last 10-year period a decrease of 32,852. For each of the years 1906 and 1916 the number of churches given in table 23 is slightly lower than the total published in earlier reports, for the reason that only churches reporting membership figures were included in the 1926 and 1936 census, and it was considered advisable throughout this report, as in 1926, to limit the comparisons to churches that actually reported membership in 1906 and 1916.

While table 23 indicates the net increase or decrease in the number of churches, the figures cannot be used in all cases to show the increase or decrease in number resulting from actual growth, because certain denominations have been influenced by organic changes. Since 1926, for example, figures for the Congregational and Christian Churches are a result of the merger of the Congregational Churches and the Christian Church (General Convention of the Christian Church). All their churches did not participate in this merger. The same holds true of the Evangelical and Reformed Church, a merger of the Evangelical Synod of North America and the Reformed Church in the United States, some of the churches remaining with the Reformed congregations. The American Lutheran Church is a merger of the Evangelical Lutheran Joint Synod of Ohio and Other States, the Evangelical Lutheran Synod of Iowa and Other States, and the Lutheran Synod of Buffalo. The Primitive Advent Christian Church is an outgrowth of the Advent Christian Church; the Christian Unity Baptist Association from the Regular Baptists; the National Baptist Evangelical Life and Soul Saving Assembly of the United States of America from the Negro Baptists; the Plymouth Brethren VII and VIII from Plymouth Brethren I; The Pentecostal Church, Inc., from the Pentecostal Assemblies of the World; and The Orthodox Presbyterian Church from the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America. These and similar changes must be taken into account before one attempts to compute the growth or decline of individual denominations.

There is another factor, also, to be considered. For certain bodies the figures for 1906 and 1916 are not sufficiently comparable with those of 1926 and 1936 to be used as they stand for ascertaining the increase or decrease in the number of churches, not only because of the transfer of certain churches from one denomination to another, but also because the number of organizations was incompletely reported at one or more census periods. This applies particularly to comparisons between 1926 and 1936, because, as already indicated, the returns in 1936 for a number of denominations were seriously incomplete.

Adjustments for changes in denominational affiliation, etc., are made in the figures presented in table 24 for the denominations reporting 10,000 or more members in 1936. The table shows that, after omitting the figures for the Jewish Congregations, the total number of churches between 1926 and 1936 decreased 33,462, or 14.6 percent, compared with a growth of 1.7 percent during the previous decade.

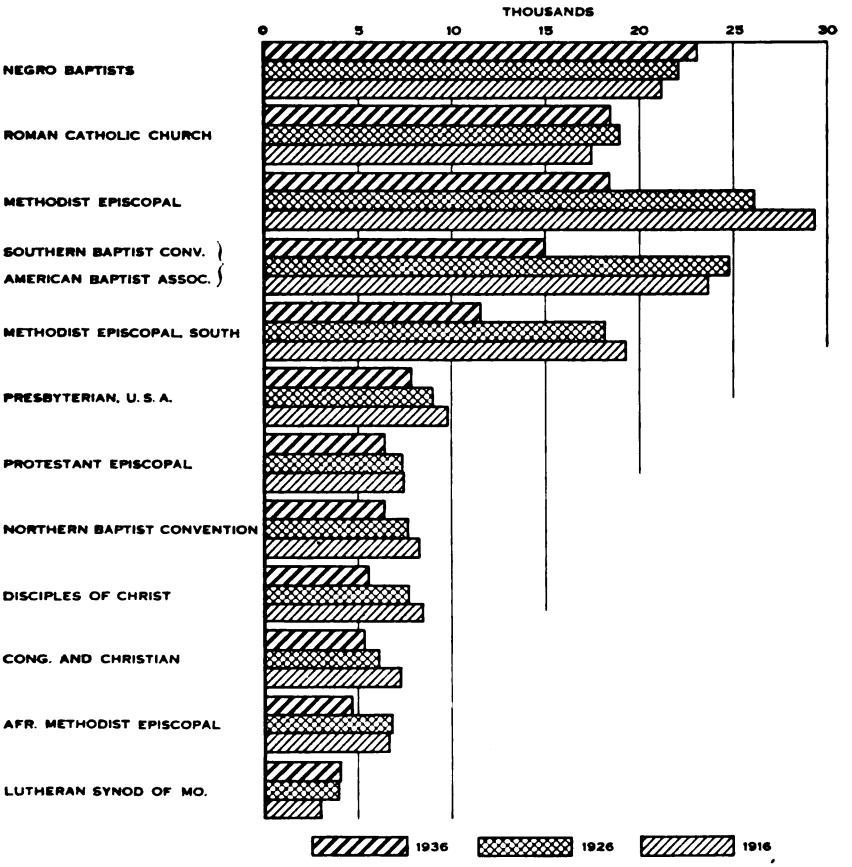
Diagram 17 shows graphically the changes from census to census for the 12 denominations which have the largest number of church organizations in 1936. Organic changes have been taken into consideration in the preparation of this diagram.

DIAGRAM 17.—NUMBER OF CHURCHES IN THE PRINCIPAL DENOMINATIONS, WITH ADJUSTMENT FOR ORGANIC CHANGES, 1936, 1926, AND 1916



The total number of churches reporting for 1936 shows a decrease of 14.2 percent in the 10 years. Significant, therefore, are the following figures which show the percentage of decrease in a few of the leading denominations: The number of churches of the Southern Baptist Convention, 40.9 percent; Churches of Christ, 38.7; the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, 36.7; the Methodist Episcopal Church, 29.8; Disciples of Christ, 27.2; Northern Baptist Convention, 17.4; the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, 12.9; and the Protestant Episcopal Church, 12.2.

A few churches, however, have had a steady increase, as the Church of the Nazarene, which reported 100 churches in 1906 and 2,197 churches in 1936; the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, from 683 to 1,452; and the Salvation Army, from 662 to 1,088.

Membership Growth

The fact that between 1926 and 1936 the number of churches, exclusive of Jewish Congregations, decreased 14.6 percent should not be understood to demonstrate a decline in the strength of the church as measured by church membership. Rather it reflects a tendency toward consolidation, arising in part from considered policy and in part from population trends. The last decade saw a rapid development of cooperation among churches and with it a tendency toward the voluntary elimination of overlapping churches. It also witnessed a continued movement of people from farms to cities. The data have already shown that the average city church has more than four times the membership of a country church. Thus, the mere movement of religious populations from country to cities means their redistribution into fewer churches with larger memberships.

Table 23 presents the membership figures actually reported by the churches for 1906, 1916, 1926, and 1936. But those figures do not furnish an adequate basis for computing membership growth, not only because of organic denominational changes, but also because of basic changes in the definition of a "member" adopted within those dates by certain denominations. In 1906 the Jewish membership figures included only heads of families, principally male heads, while in 1916 the effort was made to enumerate heads of families, seat holders, and other contributors. But, unfortunately, confusion arose; some congregations reported only seat holders and others only heads of families; some included women and others only men. Thus, the Jewish figures for 1906 and 1916 have little value. In the 1926 census the whole procedure was changed. Working directly through Jewish authorities, the enumeration was made on the assumption that all Jews in communities having synagogues were members. On this basis the number of Jewish members in 1926 was found to be 4,081,242, or more than 11 times the 1916 figure. Obviously, it would be fallacious to assume that this increase of 3,724,107 represented the growth in Jewish membership during that decade. Because of this fact it was decided to omit entirely the Jewish figures when computing the membership growth. In the 1936 census the same procedure was followed and a normal increase of 13.7 is shown for the Jewish Congregations.

Other denominations, notably the Protestant Episcopal Church, the Christian Reformed Church, and the Lutheran bodies, also changed their definition of membership between 1916 and 1926. Prior to 1919 most Episcopal churches limited the term "members" to persons who were communicants, while after that date the definition was expanded to include all baptized persons in the congregation. Church membership figures, which are presented in detail in table 25, show an increase of 2.3 percent during the last 10-year period.

Table 5 summarizes the increase in church membership between 1926 and 1936 for those denominations which had 200,000 or more membership. Diagram 18 has been prepared from detailed figures in table 25.

The data show that among the larger bodies the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church reported the most rapid increase—33.2 percent—followed by the Church of Christ, Scientist, with 33.1 and the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints with 25.1. Some denominations showed an apparent net loss during the period. The Churches of Christ, which returned 433,714 members in 1926, reported only 309,551 in 1936, and the Southern Baptist Convention with 3,524,378 in 1926 reported only 2,700,155 in 1936, but the returns for these two denominations are known to be incomplete, by reason of the failure of many churches to furnish information.

Returns from a number of big denominations show that their rate of growth (see table 25) was less during the last decade than during the preceding one. Some denominations which had shown an increase in 1926 actually show a decrease for 1936. From 1926 to 1936 the Roman Catholic Church increased only 7 percent, as compared with 18.3 percent for the earlier period. The Northern Baptist Convention showed only 3 percent increase in the last decade, as contrasted with 8.3 percent for the preceding 10 years. The Protestant Episcopal Church, which in 1926 had shown an increase of 25.5 percent, in 1936 has a decrease of 6.7 percent; in 1936 there is a 5.1 percent decrease shown for the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America as contrasted with a 16.5 increase in 1926; and the Methodist Episcopal Church likewise shows a 14 percent decrease in 1936 as compared with a 9.8 increase in 1926. Returns from other denominations show similar but less extreme differences.

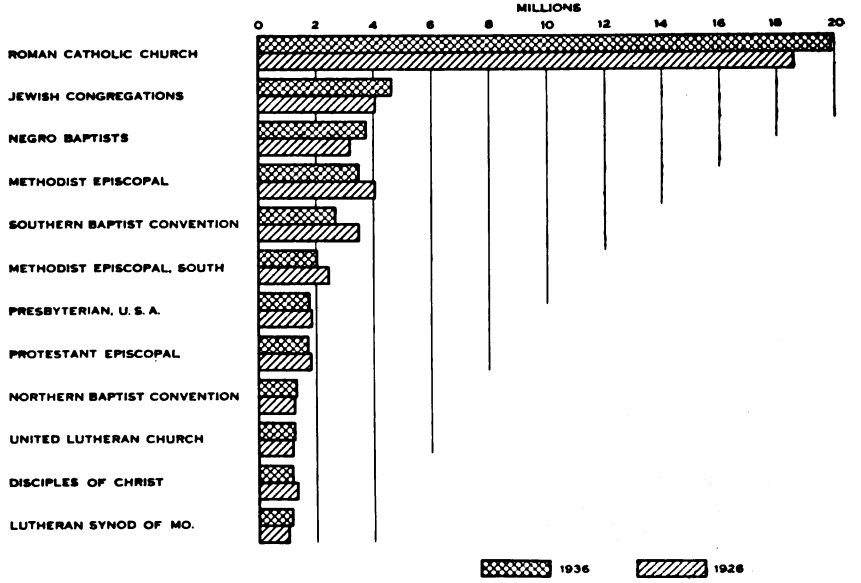
Since the number of churches has decreased while the church membership has increased, it follows that the number of members per church has been increasing. The average membership in 1926 was 235 as compared with 280 in 1936.

DIAGRAM 18.—NUMBER OF CHURCH MEMBERS OF PRINCIPAL DENOMINATIONS, 1936 AND 1926



The Roman Catholic Church grew in average membership from 982 in 1926 to 1,082 in 1936; the Southern Baptist Convention from 151 to 195; the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, from 137 to 180; and the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints from 425 to 467.

Development of Sunday Schools

As shown in table 23, the 162,233 churches reporting Sunday schools in 1936 were 22,453, or 12.2 percent, less than the figures of 1926. Since there was a decrease of 14.2 percent in the total number of churches reporting in 1936, there would naturally be a decrease in churches reporting Sunday schools. The following denominations showed the largest decreases: Northern Baptist Convention, Southern Baptist Convention, Churches of Christ, Disciples of Christ, African Methodist Episcopal Church, Methodist Episcopal Church, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Presbyterian Church in the United States, Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, and Protestant Episcopal Church. Altogether 89 denominations showed decreases.

On the other hand some denominations showed increases. Of the denominations of more than 1,000 churches reporting Sunday schools that showed increases in 1936, the Assemblies of God, General Council led, with an increase of more than 300 percent, or from 549 in 1926 to 2,321 in 1936. Others showing considerable increase were the Church of the Nazarene, all the larger Lutheran bodies, the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, the Jewish Congregations, and the Negro Baptists. Many of these denominations showed continuous increases since 1906.

Digitized by Google

There was also a decrease of 12.6 percent in the number of Sunday school scholars during the past 10 years, compared to an increase in each of the preceding decades. The rate of increase, however, was much less between 1916 and 1926 than in the earlier period, due mainly to the loss of 659,506 scholars in the schools of the Roman Catholic Church. Since no inquiry was made in 1916 regarding the number and enrollment of parochial schools, it is probable that Roman Catholic churches in that year included some parochial school figures under the heading of Sunday school figures, thus swelling the 1916 Sunday school returns in comparison with those of the 1926 census, which secured separate reports for each type of school. This factor alone, however, cannot account for a decline in Roman Catholic Sunday school scholars of more than a third in the 10-year period. Rather, there has been a real decrease in Sunday schools, along with a definite increase in parochial schools, which, of course, give religious instruction.

In diagram 19 the changes which have occurred with respect to Sunday school scholars since 1916 are graphically presented, based on detailed figures in table 23, making necessary adjustment for organic changes in certain denominations.

The average number of scholars to a church showed a steady increase until 1936 when a slight decrease was reported. In 1906 it was 88; in 1916, 107; in 1926, 114; but in 1936 the average dropped to 113.

Among the larger denominations showing the highest averages in 1936 were the United Lutheran Church in America with 188, the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 185; the Evangelical and Reformed Church, 181; the Evangelical Church, 160; the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, 157; and the Methodist Episcopal Church, 155. All of these except the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America and the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints showed continuous increases in averages since 1906. Most of the large denominations of 1,000 or more churches reporting Sunday schools showed increased averages. Only the Church of Christ, Scientist, the Congregational and Christian Churches, the Disciples of Christ, the Jewish Congregations, the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, the Roman Catholic Church, and the Church of the United Brethren in Christ showed decreases in the last decade.

Changes in Church Expenditures

The figures which are presented in table 26 show that 93.1 percent of all churches reported expenditures in 1926 and 94.7 percent in 1936. Though this is a slight increase (1.6 percent) in the relative number of churches reporting expenditures, there is a large decrease (36.5 percent) in the amount reported. In 1926 the amount of expenditures was $817,214,528; in 1936 this amount was only $518,953,571, a decrease of $298,260,957. This decrease can be accounted for, in large part, by the economic depression which gripped the country during the greater portion of the period between 1926 and 1936. In most denominations there was comparatively small difference in the percent of churches reporting at the two census dates. In the case of the Colored Primitive Baptists, however, the 12 percent reported in 1926 contrasted sharply with the 92.7 in 1936, while the Church of God showed the marked increase of from 73.1 percent reporting in 1926 to 93.5 percent in 1936. The denominations in which 100 percent reported expenditures for 1936 were the United American Free Will Baptist Church (Colored), the Church of God and Saints of Christ, the Mennonite Brethren in Christ, The General Synod of the Associate Reformed Presbyterian Church, the Christian Reformed Church, and the Evangelical Congregational Church; the latter reported 100 percent in both 1936 and 1926.

The table also makes it possible for the different denominations to compare the church expenditures of today with those of a decade ago. The figures show that the Roman Catholic Church reported, in 1936, $139,073,358, a large decrease from the $204,526,487 reported for 1926. A similar decrease is shown by the Methodist Episcopal Church which expended $89,422,307 in 1926 and only $46,231,459 in 1936.

Certain organic changes, however, which have occurred in some of the denominations during the decade, constitute a factor which must be borne in mind when comparing the figures for 1936 with those for 1926.

The most satisfactory basis for ascertaining the extent of increase or decrease in denominational expenditures is by means of the average per church, because this figure eliminates differences arising from variations in the relative number of churches reporting. Such averages, which are also shown in table 26, reveal that in 1926 average expenditures for all churches were $3,783, as compared with $2,749 in 1936, or a decrease in 10 years of 27.3 percent.

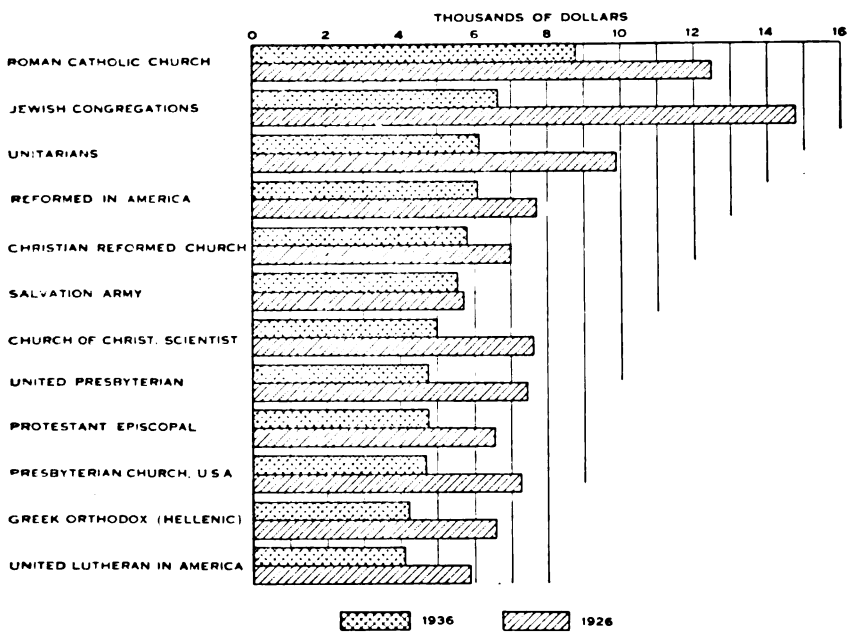
The averate rate of expenditures per church was greater in 1936 than in 1926 in 30 of the bodies reporting. In one denomination the average was the same, and in the remaining denominations the average rate shows a decrease since 1926. Of the bodies which show an increase in the past decade the majority have a comparatively small number of churches, 20 having not more than 20 churches reporting; the Church of God and Saints of Christ, however, showed 213 churches reporting, and the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 1,416.

Separate bodies having average expenditures of more than $4,000 per church in 1936 are shown in diagram 20.

DIAGRAM 20.—AVERAGE EXPENDITURES PER CHURCH IN PRINCIPAL DENOMINATIONS, 1936 AND 1926



Increase in Edifice Value

Data on the value of church edifices in 1936, with figures for 1926 and 1916, are also presented in table 26 and show that for all denominations the percentage of churches reporting edifice value was almost identical at all three dates, being 87.1 in 1916 and 87.4 in 1926 compared with 87.2 in 1936.

In 1916 the total value of the church edifices reported amounted to $1,676,600,582. By 1926 this sum had increased to $3,839,500,610, but 1936 shows only $3,411,875,467, a decrease of $427,625,143, or 11.1 percent, between 1926 and 1936. However, this decrease can be explained in part as being due to a decrease of 29,176, or 14.4 percent, in the number of churches reporting the value of edifices.

Worked out on the basis of the average value per church, the figures in 1916 and 1926 were $8,488 and $18,920, respectively, compared with $19,636 in 1936.

For 21 of the bodies which had 100 or more reporting churches, the average edifice values are compared for the three census periods in diagram 21.

Increase and Decrease by States

Interesting differences not disclosed in the national totals are revealed in an analysis of the returns for geographic divisions. Table 27 gives, by States, the returns received in 1906, 1916, 1926, and 1936 relating to the number of churches, of members, and of Sunday school scholars; but it should be constantly kept in mind that the figures in this table are not in all cases comparable.

Because the number of Jewish congregations was not similarly reported at all four census periods, they were entirely eliminated in computing the increase in the number of churches by divisions and States as presented in table 6. This table reveals that between 1926 and 1936 a decrease of 14.6 percent is shown for the country as a whole. No increase is reported by any of the nine geographic divisions. The Pacific division registers the smallest decrease, 0.3 percent, while the largest decrease, 23.4, is shown for the West South Central division.

There were only four States—Connecticut, Arizona, Utah, and California—and the District of Columbia that showed an increase in the number of churches for the last decade.

Table 27 also presents returns on church membership by States, but these figures must be decidedly modified before they can be used in computing membership increase or decrease. Not only must Jewish Congregations be entirely eliminated, but returns for the Protestant Episcopal Church, the Christian Reformed Church, and the Lutheran bodies must be adjusted to take into account the change in the definition of a "member" adopted by these denominations between 1916 and 1926. Such revised figures are presented in table 7 and make it clear that during the last decade the Pacific division showed the most rapid increase, with 18.8 percent, followed by the Mountain division, with 5.5, and the New England group, with 5.1. The West North Central, the South Atlantic, and the East South Central divisions show decreases ranging from 3.0 to 8.5 percent.

During the last 10-year period 17 States reported decreases in church membership.

The average number of members per church was also affected by the changed definition of a "member" adopted by certain bodies. In table 8 revised figures for 1916 are presented by geographic divisions, in comparison with 1926 and 1936 figures. On the basis of average membership, increases are shown for each of the geographic divisions, both in 1926 and 1936.

TABLE 7.—NUMBER OF CHURCH MEMBERS, BY DIVISIONS AND STATES, 1906–36

[In this table the 1916 figures, where used in comparison with the number of members reported for 1926, have been adjusted on account of differences in 1916 in method of reporting members in the Lutheran bodies, the Protestant Episcopal Church, and the Christian Reformed Church; figures for Jewish Congregations have been deducted in all years. In the 1906–16 comparison, figures for Jewish Congregations were deducted, but other membership figures were substantially comparable]

Changes in Sunday School Enrollment by States

Sunday school enrollment showed, from division to division, rates of change quite different from those of church membership. In New England the number of scholars reported in 1936 was actually smaller by 163,075 than the number returned in 1906. While every State in the New England division showed a decrease, in the other divisions every State except New York and Delaware showed an increase for the period. New York enrollment for the 30 years showed a decline of 229,619, or 18.4 percent; Delaware declined 2,794, or 5.6 percent. The Pacific and Mountain divisions, however, showed a rapid increase, the number of pupils reported in 1936 being 106.8 percent and 75.5 percent, respectively, more than the 1906 total.

There was an increase in the total number of scholars enrolled in every geographic division except New England since 1906, but during the last decade only the Mountain division has an increase in the total.

There was a decrease in the New England and Middle Atlantic divisions during the 1916–26 period, but during the 1926–36 period all divisions show a decrease except the Mountain, which showed a rate of increase of 1.2 percent in comparison with 12 percent for the earlier period. Between 1906 and 1916 Vermont was the only State that showed a net decline in number of Sunday school scholars; during the next decade there were 16 such States; and during the last period there were 42 such States, the District of Columbia, Louisiana, Idaho, New Mexico, Arizona, Utah, and Nevada being the exceptions.

The decrease in Sunday school scholars is explained in part by the sharp decrease in the number of Roman Catholic churches reporting schools, which totaled 9,406 in 1906, 11,748 in 1916, but only 8,239 in 1926 and 8,053 in 1936.

It is interesting to note in this connection that between 1906 and 1916 the average number of scholars per church increased for every State in the Union except Montana; but that between 1916 and 1926 it declined for each State in the New England and the Middle Atlantic divisions, and also for Delaware, Mississippi, Utah, Nevada, and the District of Columbia. Between 1926 and 1936 there was a decline in the New England, Middle Atlantic, East North Central, West North Central (except Missouri, which remained the same), and in the Pacific divisions; while in the South Atlantic there was a decrease in only two States and the District of Columbia, against an increase in six States, and in the Mountain division there was a decrease in three States compared with an increase in five States. In the East South Central and the West South Central divisions there was an increase in each State.

Changes in Church Finances by States

The rise or fall in expenditures and in value of church edifices is shown in table 28 by divisions and States, and it is apparent that the changes in these items varied geographically.

Decreases in average church expenditures for the past decade are shown for all the States and the District of Columbia. Montana registered the smallest decrease, 4.2 percent, while Florida showed the greatest decrease, 51.7 percent. Decreases in the New England division ranged from 8.6 percent to 29.7; the Middle Atlantic, 31.4 to 39.8; the East North Central, 14.3 to 38.4; the West North Central, 24.4 to 40.2; the South Atlantic, 12.5 to 51.7; the East South Central, 16.4 to 37.2; the West South Central, 21.2 to 31.7; the Mountain, 4.2 to 30.4; and the Pacific, 26.0 to 35.9.

Changes in the average value of church edifices varied from State to State. For the country as a whole the increase in the last decade was $716, or 3.8 percent. Increases were reported by six of the nine geographic divisions, while three divisions—the Middle Atlantic, the South Atlantic, and the Pacific—each showed a small decrease.

The 15 States registering decreases were New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Iowa, Nebraska, Delaware, West Virginia, Georgia, Florida, Louisiana, Montana, Colorado, Nevada, Oregon, and California, and the District of Columbia.

Denominational Expansion by States

In table 29 the 1936 memberships of more than 100 denominations are compared, by States, with similar returns for 1926, 1916, and 1906. In considering these figures it should be recalled that some of the listed organizations like the Southern Baptist Convention, the Congregational and Christian Churches, the Evangelical and Reformed, and certain Lutheran churches have undergone organic changes through division or consolidation, and that others like the Jewish Congregations have experienced changes in the method of enumeration, so that in a number of cases the figures presented do not furnish an adequate basis for computing by States the rate of growth or decline. But for the denominations for which the figures are comparable the membership changes from division to division show different trends.

The Roman Catholic churches in the West North Central division reported 1,757,304, which was lower than the 1926 but higher than the 1,511,494 total of 1906. This decrease occurred mainly in Missouri, which showed a decline of 85,122 members. There has been a rapid increase (109.7 percent) since 1906 in the Pacific division—mainly in California, which shows an increase of 134.8 percent.

The Methodist Episcopal Church, which had shown an almost continuous increase in membership till 1926, showed a decline in each division in the last decade, though the 1936 totals are still 17.5 percent above those of 1906. Only three divisions—South Atlantic, East South Central, and West South Central—fell below the 1906 totals, and the Mountain and Pacific divisions are respectively 73 and 84 percent above that of 30 years ago.

The figures in the table make possible similar comparisons for other denominations.

Table 29 also brings out the tendency on the part of certain denominations toward geographic expansion. The Church of the Nazarene in 1936 is reported in 27 more States than in 1906. In 1936 the Church of God and Saints of Christ reported members in 12 States which had reported none in 1906. These gains were mainly in the East North Central and East South Central divisions and in Utah and California. In 1916 members of the Assemblies of God, General Council, were in only 22 States; but in 1936 they were reported in 47 States and the District of Columbia, Vermont being the only State in which there were no churches. The Christian and Missionary Alliance and the Church of God were reported respectively in 17 and 18 more States than in 1916.

In addition, table 29 makes it possible to see how the membership of any denomination is distributed among the different States, and demonstrates that most denominations are concentrated geographically. More than half (57.6 percent) of the membership of the Congregational and Christian Churches was in the New England and East North Central divisions; three-tenths (30.4 percent) of the Negro Baptists lived in Alabama, Mississippi, and Georgia; nearly one-half (47.7 percent) of the membership of the Church of the Nazarene was in the East North Central and West South Central divisions; almost one-half (48.7 percent) of the American Lutheran Church members was in the East North Central division. Of the Jewish Congregations 6 out of every 10 (62 percent) were found in the States of New York, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania; while nearly one-half (49.6 percent) of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints membership was found in Utah alone; about 1 out of every 3 (33.96 percent) members of the African Methodist Episcopal Church was found in Georgia and Alabama; 39 percent of the Methodist Episcopal Church membership was found in New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, and Illinois; while almost 4 out of 10 (39.2 percent) of the members of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America were found in New York, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania.

Church Totals for Large Cities

The church statistics for 1936 for the 378 cities having 25,000 inhabitants or more in 1930 will be found in table 30. New York City, which reported 3,181 churches and 4,245,907 members, Chicago with 1,496 churches and 1,796,156 members, and Philadelphia with 1,217 churches and 1,205,694 members, held first, second, and third places, respectively, not only in population but in number of churches and in membership as well.

Of the other cities, however, most of them did not rank the same on all three counts. Detroit, which was the fourth largest in population in 1930, also ranked fourth in membership with 655,320, but had 72 fewer churches than Los Angeles (fifth in population) which reported 724 churches with only 427,348 members. Ranked by number of members, Boston, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Baltimore, Los Angeles, and St. Louis held fifth to tenth places, respectively, with memberships ranging from 520,708 to 416,057.

Considered in terms of the average number of members, Revere, Mass., showed the highest figure with 2,117 persons to a church. Central Falls, R. I., was second with 2,015; Bayonne, N. J., was third with 1,974; and Hoboken, N. J., was fourth with 1,788. In all, 63 cities had average memberships per church of more than 1,000. It is noteworthy that most of these cities were located along the northern half of the Atlantic seaboard, where Jewish congregations and Roman Catholic churches were relatively numerous. At the other extreme were cities like Macon, Ga., which showed 233 members per church; in Texarkana, Ark., the number was 227; in Meridian, Miss., 219; in Bellingham, Wash., 217; in San Angelo, Tex., 209.

The ratio of men to women in the membership also varied. In 36 of the 378 cities there were 90 males or more to every 100 females, including 3 cities in which the men members reported actually outnumbered the women—East Cleveland, Ohio, 111.1; Rome, N. Y., 103.2; and Hamtramck, Mich., 100.1. However, in Asheville, N. C., there were not, on the average, as many as 60 males for every 100 female members, the ratio being 59.8. There were also four other cities which were on the margin, St. Petersburg, Fla., with a ratio of 60.0; Battle Creek, Mich., and Jacksonville, Fla., each with a ratio of 60.6; and Galveston, Tex., with 61.4.

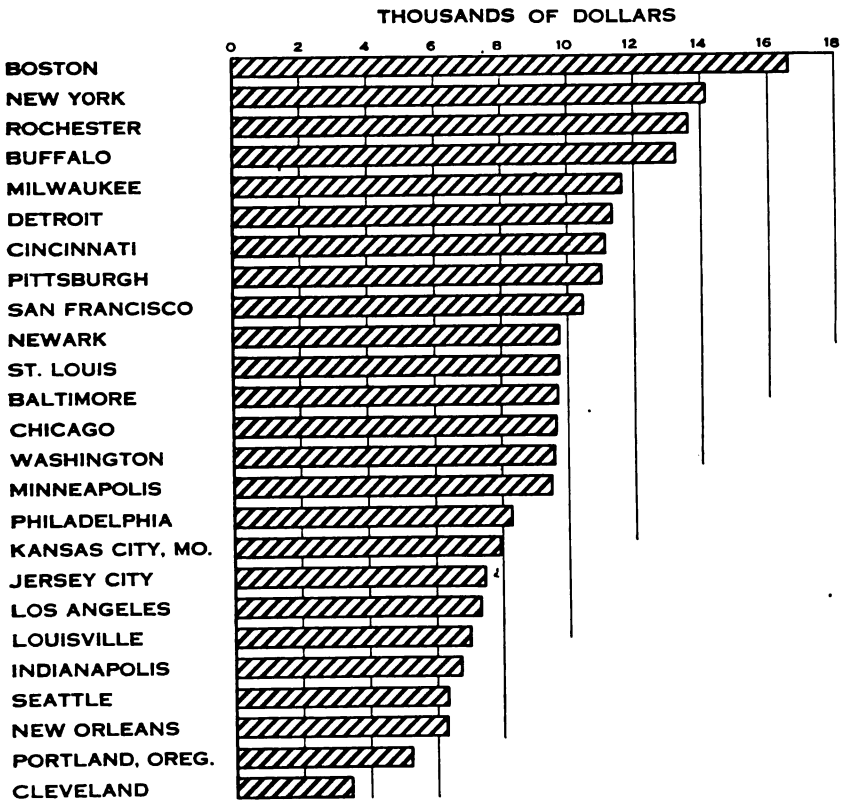
In New York City, Sunday school scholars numbered 329,770; in Chicago, 227,019; in Philadelphia, 219,193; in Detroit, 124,637; and in Los Angeles, 122,445. No other city had as many as 100,000, although Pittsburgh had 95,767 and Baltimore, 91,879.

DIAGRAM 22.—AVERAGE EXPENDITURES PER CHURCH, FOR 25 CITIES OF 200,000 OR MORE INHABITANTS, 1936



The value of church edifices, also given in table 30, shows that the 2,143 reporting churches in the 5 boroughs of New York City alone claimed to be worth $243,240,170.

In Chicago this figure for 1,060 churches totaled $95,617,815; and in Philadelphia, for 833 churches, $73,889,477. Pittsburgh, Buffalo, Detroit, Boston, Washington, D. C., Baltimore, Cleveland, and St. Louis reported values ranging, in the order mentioned, from $42,778,762 to $31,884,986.

On the basis of the average value per church, Brookline, Mass., showed the largest figure—$234,948; University City, Mo., ranked second with $230,793; Manhattan Borough, including the figures for the Jewish Congregations, ranked third with $224,473, while New York City as a whole ranked twenty-first among the 378 cities; Cleveland Heights, Ohio, showed $210,774; Oak Park, Ill., $165,534; Hartford, Conn., $145,860; Buffalo, N. Y., $141,933; and Albany, N. Y., $140,309.

New York City reported debt on church edifices amounting to $48,486,863; Chicago, $19,431,432; Detroit, $12,216,661; and Buffalo, $9,528,859. Nine other cities—Philadelphia, Baltimore, Cleveland, Los Angeles, Rochester, N. Y., Washington, D. C., Pittsburgh, St. Louis, and Cincinnati—each reported debts of from $8,637,926 to $5,740,887.

Church expenditures reported for the year aggregated $33,841,197 in New York City, $12,463,335 in Chicago, $8,218,414 in Philadelphia, and $6,878,494 in Detroit. Boston, Pittsburgh, Los Angeles, Baltimore, St. Louis, Buffalo, Washington, and Cincinnati, held fifth to twelfth places, respectively, with totals ranging from $5,300,026 to $3,651,439.

The average expenditure showed wide fluctuations from city to city. Brookline, Mass., had the highest average, with $22,138; Lewiston, Maine, was second, with $19,502; Manhattan Borough ranked third, with $18,734, while New York City as a whole ranked fifteenth, with $14,171; Lakewood, Ohio, and Cleveland Heights, Ohio, held fourth and fifth places, with $17,931 and $17,461, respectively; Oak Park, Ill., was a close sixth, with $17,139. The first five places also showed high average value per church.

In 1936 there were 78 cities of 25,000 inhabitants or more whose church expenditures did not average $5,000 a year, in comparison to the 1926 figures which showed only 6 such cities. This may be due to the small average membership per church in these cities and to the economic depression which existed during this period.

A comparison of the average expenditures per church, for the 25 largest cities, is shown in diagram 22.

Denominational Data for Cities

In table 31 church data by individual denominations are presented for each city having 25,000 inhabitants or more in 1930. In a majority of the places the largest group of churches was Roman Catholic. This denomination ranked first in 32 of the 50 largest cities. In Baltimore, Washington, New Orleans, Indianapolis, Louisville, Houston, Columbus, Atlanta, Dallas, Birmingham, Memphis, Oklahoma City, Richmond, and Fort Worth the Negro Baptists led; while in New York City the largest group was that of the Jewish Congregations; in Seattle the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America ranked first; the churches of the Christian Reformed Church were most numerous in Grand Rapids; and in Flint the Methodist Episcopal Church led. Table 9 ranks the 50 largest cities according to their 1930 population and shows for each the 3 denominations having the largest groups of churches.

Ranked according to membership, the preponderance of Roman Catholics in the large cities is still more pronounced. This denomination held first place in this respect in all but 9 of the 50 largest cities. The Jews again led in New York City; while in 6 of the larger southern cities the Negro Baptists were most numerous. Table 10 shows which 3 denominations have the most members in each of the 50 largest cities.

[1] A minus sign (−) denotes decrease.

The data show that Houston reported the largest increase, 49.1 percent; while St. Louis registered a decrease of 21.1 percent. All but 8 of the 50 largest cities showed increases, ranging from 0.3 to 49.1 percent.

Membership figures for each State, by counties, are presented in table 32 and include not only the total reported church membership for each county, but also figures for leading denominations, selected, however, on the basis of their importance in the whole State, rather than in the individual county.

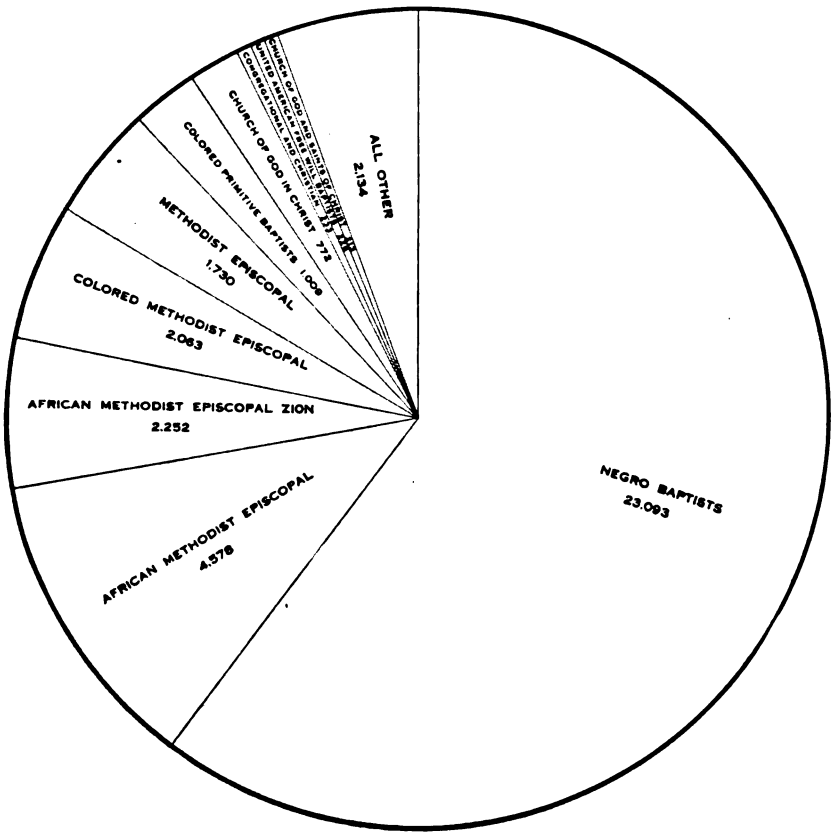
THE NEGRO CHURCH

These summary statistics are based on the returns for Negro churches made in connection with the 1936 Census of Religious Bodies. At this census, as at the censuses of 1906, 1916, and 1926, no attempt was made to enumerate the individual Negro members of primarily white local churches.

Table 33 shows that of the 256 religious bodies included in the 1936 census, 59 reported Negro churches. Of these denominations, 33 were exclusively Negro in membership and 26 were primarily white in membership, but reported one or more Negro churches.

DIAGRAM 23.—NEGRO CHURCHES—DISTRIBUTION BY PRINCIPAL DENOMINATIONS, 1936



Returns were received for 38,303 Negro churches. Of the total number of Negro churches the Negro Baptists reported 23,093; the African Methodist Episcopal Church, 4,578; the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, 2,252; and the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church, 2,063. The Methodist Episcopal Church in making returns for 1,730 Negro congregations reported a larger number of Negro churches than any other primarily white denomination. The five denominations mentioned claimed approximately seven-eighths (88 percent) of all Negro churches for which returns were made.

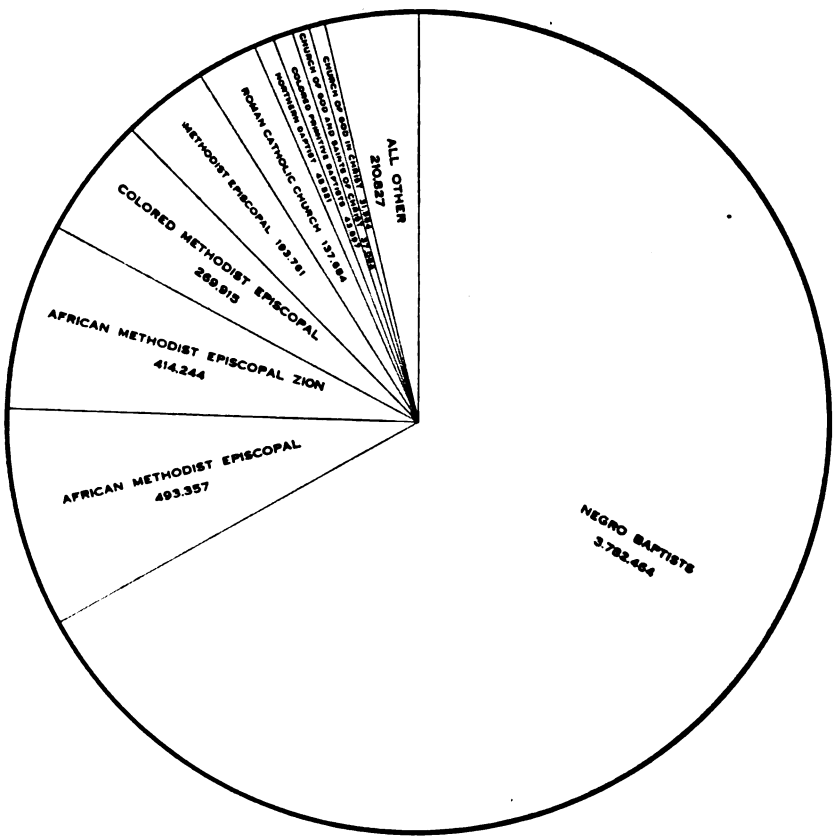
The 1930 census showed that 43.7 percent of the Negro population resided in cities, but the figures based on the 1936 census of Religious Bodies show that 13,528 Negro churches (35.3 percent), or approximately one out of every three, were located in cities. It is not to be concluded, however, that none of the denominations reported more Negro churches in urban areas than in rural areas, for located in cities were 140 of the 178 Negro congregations of the Romal Catholic Church, 111 of the 145 Negro Protestant Episcopal Churches, and 84 of the 97 Negro churches of the Seventh-day Adventists.

DIAGRAM 24.— NEGRO CHURCHES— DISTRIBUTION OF MEMBERSHIP BY PRINCIPAL DENOMINATIONS, 1936



Membership in Negro churches totaled 5,660,618, or slightly more than one-tenth (10.1 percent) of the total church membership reported. That proportion is greater than the proportion (9.5 percent) of Negro church members at the 1926 census, and the proportion (9.7 percent) of Negroes in the total population at the 1930 census.

Large Negro denominations do not include many of the young people in their membership. Table 13 shows that the proportion of young people under 13 years of age for the Negro Baptists was 9.7; for the African Methodist Episcopal, 13.7; for the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, 16.5; and for the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church, 18.4.

Digitized by Google

Negro Baptists in reporting 3,782,464 members accounted for more than two-thirds (66.8 percent) of all Negro church members. The Negro membership of all other denominations fell far below that noted for the Negro Baptists. However, three of the denominations reported more than 200,000 members. Returns for the African Methodist Episcopal Church totaled 493,357 and those of the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church and the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church 414,244 and 269,915, respectively. Among the primarily white denominations the Methodist Episcopal Church made returns for 193,761 members in Negro churches; Negro congregations of the Roman Catholic Church reported 137,684 members and those of the Northern Baptist Convention, 45,821.

A comparison as to average membership per church discloses that the average membership of white churches exceeded that reported for Negro churches. For Negro urban churches the average was 219 members, for all urban churches, 541. In rural areas the average for Negro churches was 109 and for all churches was 133. In both the urban and rural areas the averages for the Negro Baptists, the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church and the Negro congregations of the Roman Catholic Church exceeded the averages already noted.

Compared with the ratio of 78.5 men per 100 women for all churches, in the Negro church membership there were 60.5 men for every 100 women. The ratio of 97 males per 100 females reported in the 1930 census for the Negro population does not explain the relatively large excess of females in Negro churches. In diagrams 23 and 24 may be seen the distribution of Negro churches and members according to the principal denominations.

Value of Negro Church Edifices

Table 34 shows the value of 34,250 Negro church edifices for which returns were made. The total value of Negro church edifices amounted to $164,531,531 and represented 4.8 percent of the value of all church edifices reported. More than one-half (57.0 percent or $93,798,181) of the total value was reported by the Negro Baptists. Following that denomination in total valuation of their edifices were the African Methodist Episcopal Church with $20,710,623, the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church with $14,750,165, and the Negro churches of the Methodist Episcopal Church which reported $10,065,869.

A value of $119,960,281 was reported for 11,847 Negro urban church edifices. Negro rural churches reporting value of church edifices were almost twice (22,403) as numerous as Negro urban churches, but their combined values amounted to only $44,571,250. In both urban and rural areas the average values per Negro church were below those reported for all churches. For Negro churches located in urban areas, the average value was $10,126; for all urban churches, $44,583. The corresponding averages for rural churches were $1,990 and $6,454, respectively.

Possibly because a much larger proportion of the edifices of the Negro churches than of the white churches were located in the South and in rural areas where land values are comparatively cheap, construction cost less and edifices, especially those in rural areas, less pretentious than in the North and West, the proportion of the Negro churches reporting debt was smaller than the proportion of all churches, the percentage for Negro churches being 22.5 (7,712) and that for all churches, 25.2.

Approximately one out of every three, or 34.9 percent, of the urban Negro churches reported debt, while debt on edifices was reported by less than one out of every six rural churches.

The combined indebtedness of 4,132 Negro urban churches amounted to $16,664,034, or $4,033 per church. The indebtedness of 3,580 rural churches totaled $2,560,824, or $715 per church. For all urban churches the amount of debt totaled $458,386,969 and for all rural churches, $51,240,484.

Negro Church Expenditures

The expenditures reported for 37,308 Negro churches for the year 1936 are shown in table 35. According to these data the Negro churches made expenditures of $27,802,469 or 5.4 percent of all expenditures reported. More than half (53.9 percent) of the total expenditures ($14,978,506) were made by Negro Baptist churches. Ranking below the Negro Baptists, but with expenditures of more than $1,000,000, were the African Methodist Episcopal Church, with $4,059,809, the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church with $2,319,367, the Negro congregations of the Methodist Episcopal Church with $1,576,527, and the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church with $1,378,746. Among the remaining denominations the Negro churches of the Roman Catholic denomination reported the largest sum, $763,392.

Average expenditures for Negro urban churches were $1,353 and for rural churches $413. Comparable averages for all denominations were $5,817 and $1,061. Among the denominations which reported 100 or more Negro urban churches the highest average, $5,609, was obtained for the 127 Negro congregations of the Roman Catholic Church and the lowest, $353, for the 334 Colored Primitive Baptist Churches. In corresponding positions among the denominations which reported 100 or more churches in rural areas, were the 1,429 congregations with average expenditures of $634 of the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church and the 601 churches of the Colored Primitive Baptists with average expenditures of $149.

Excluding from consideration expenditures of $1,419,403 designated as "for all other purposes," Negro churches expended $23,669,940 for current expenditures and improvements and contributed $2,713,126 (10.3 percent) for missions and benevolences. In making these outlays, the average Negro church contributed $1.00 for the larger interests of the organization, for each $8.72 for maintenance. The ratio for all churches was $5.87 for local maintenance compared with $1.00 for benevolences and missions.

Negro Parsonages

Table 36 shows that 16.4 percent (6,285) of the Negro churches reported the value of parsonages as compared with 35.7 percent of all churches. Two primarily white denominations, the Roman Catholic and Methodist Episcopal Churches, reported the largest proportions of Negro churches with parsonages; 53.4 percent of the churches of the first denomination and 48.7 percent of the churches of the second had parsonages. Among the exclusively Negro denominations the African Methodist Episcopal Church with 39.4 percent of its organizations with parsonages ranked first, followed by the African Methodist Episcopal Zion and the Colored Methodist Episcopal Churches, each of which reported 24.4 percent of their churches with parsonages. The percentage of the Negro Baptist Churches with parsonages was relatively small, being 9 percent.

Despite that small proportion, parsonages of the Negro Baptists were valued at $4,321,609, or 34.9 percent of the total value ($12,392,842) claimed for Negro parsonages of all churches. The value reported for parsonages of churches of the African Methodist Episcopal Church was $3,006,672, or $1,314,937 below the value of parsonages of the Negro Baptist Churches. Both the African Methodist Episcopal Zion and Methodist Episcopal Churches claimed valuations in excess of $1,000,000; the amounts were $1,492,450 and $1,482,288, respectively. The values reported by the four religious bodies mentioned above amounted to 83.1 percent of the total value of Negro parsonages.

Digitized by Google

The average parsonage value ($1,972) was considerably below that ($4,837) for all churches. The range of values is indicated by the average value of $5,915 obtained for the 95 parsonages of the Negro Roman Catholic Church and the average value of $1,180 for the 503 parsonages of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church.

Negro Sunday Schools

The proportion of Negro churches supplying data for Sunday schools (see table 36) was greater than the proportion of all churches supplying similar information, the proportion being 91.4 percent (35,021) for Negro churches and 81.4 percent for all churches. The 1926 census showed that 85.4 percent of the Negro churches reported Sunday schools as compared with 79.6 percent of all churches. From these figures it appears that the Sunday school is considered a more important part of the Negro church than of the white church, especially churches of denominations conducting parochial schools and other institutions which, in a measure, take the place of Sunday schools.

Of the 59 denominations having one or more Negro churches, only three reported no Negro Sunday schools.

Five religious bodies with a total of 33,716 churches made returns for 90 percent (31,521) of all Negro churches with Sunday schools. Of the total number of churches in that classification the Negro Baptists reported almost two-thirds (62.8 percent) or 21,976. The African Methodist Episcopal Church made returns for 4,120; the African Methodist Episcopal Zion, 2,059; the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church, 1,976; and the Negro congregations of the Methodist Episcopal Church, 1,390.

Congregations of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church with Sunday schools represented 95.8 percent of that denomination's total number of churches. Slightly below the proportion for the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church was the proportion of churches of the Negro Baptists who reported that 95.2 percent of their churches had Sunday schools. Only a small difference is noted in the percentage of churches with Sunday schools recorded for the African Methodist Episcopal Zion and that for the African Methodist Episcopal Churches. The percentages were 91.4 and 90.0, respectively. Eighty-one and five-tenths percent of the congregations of the Church of the Living God, "The Pillar and Ground of Truth," and 80.3 percent of the Negro congregations of the Methodist Episcopal Church made returns for Sunday schools.

Of the Negro churches with Sunday schools nearly two-thirds (64.3 percent) or 22,508 were in rural areas and 12,513 in urban areas. The schools conducted by 390,454 officers and teachers were attended by 2,424,800 scholars. These figures give a ratio of 6 scholars to a teacher. In urban areas the ratio was 7 to 1 and in rural areas 6 to 1. Comparable ratios in all denominations were 8 to 1, 9 to 1, and 7 to 1.

More than two-thirds (68.1 percent) of all Sunday school teachers and scholars were reported by the Negro Baptists. Following the Negro Baptists were the African Methodist Episcopal Church and the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church.

There were 97 scholars per Negro church in urban areas and 54 per church in rural areas. Corresponding averages for all churches were 178 and 77.

Distribution of Negro Churches

Table 37 shows that 86.8 percent of the Negro churches were reported from the South Atlantic and the two South Central divisions where 78.7 percent of the Negro population of the United States resided in 1930. Each of the seven States from which more than 2,000 churches were reported were in the South. There were 5,954 churches in Georgia, 4,011 in Alabama, 3,638 in Mississippi, 3,081 in Texas, 2,562 in North Carolina, 2,158 in South Carolina, and 2,028 in Louisiana. Among the remaining States Arkansas reported the highest total, 1,939.

Comparing the States by membership in Negro churches discloses that Georgia with 629,028 members ranked first and Alabama with 585,733 members, second. Other States which made returns for 400,000 or more members were Texas, 464,937, North Carolina, 434,951; and Mississippi, 415,182. States for which more than 300,000 but less than 400,000 members of Negro churches were reported were Louisiana, 330,990; South Carolina, 330,479; and Virginia, 308,779. Negro churches in Arkansas, Pennsylvania, and Tennessee made returns for 217,123, 216,020, and 212,223 members, respectively. In each of the following States membership in Negro churches totaled more than 100,000 but less than 200,000: Florida, Illinois, Kentucky, New York, and Ohio.

In the South, where at the 1930 census 68.3 percent of the Negro population was rural, Negro churches and members in Negro churches were concentrated in rural areas, but in the North where 88.3 percent of the Negro population was urban, urban churches outnumbered rural churches. For example, in the South Atlantic and East South Central divisions the proportions for rural churches and membership in rural churches were 72.8 and 59.9, respectively. However, in the East North Central States the corresponding proportions for urban churches were 86.6 and 95.8.

Average membership per Negro urban church ranged from 307 in the Middle Atlantic States to 81 in the Mountain division. For rural churches the ratios ranged from 114 in the East South Central division to 35 in the Mountain division. Higher averages than that reported for the Mountain division where only 25 rural churches were located, were obtained for other divisions. In the West South Central division the ratio was 110, in the South Atlantic division, 109, and in the Pacific division with 27 rural churches, 49.

The reports for 317,597 members of Negro churches carried no designation as to sex. Excluding these members from consideration, a comparison of males to females by divisions shows a variation of from 63 males per 100 females in the South Atlantic division to 51 per 100 in the Mountain division.

Eighty-six and six-tenths percent (30,333) of the churches with Sunday schools were in the South, and 79.5 percent (1,928,697) of the scholars were reported by churches located in that area. Although Negro Sunday schools were more numerous in the South, schools with the largest membership were located in the Middle Atlantic division. In this division the average was 121.9 scholars per church. The average for Sunday schools in the East North Central division was 120.3 and for the New England division, 106.1. There were 62.5 scholars to a Negro church in the South Atlantic division and 41.0 to a church in the Mountain division.

Negro Church Finances by States

Data relating to the finances of Negro churches, presented in table 38, show that of the 38,303 Negro churches, 34,896 reported church edifices. According to these returns, 93 percent of the churches located in the South Atlantic and the East South Central divisions, 91.6 percent of the West South Central division, 77 percent of the churches in the Middle Atlantic States and between 79 and 87 percent of the churches in each of the remaining divisions, reported one or more church edifices.

The church edifices of Negro churches located in Pennsylvania were valued at $12,875,777, while the valuations placed on the edifices of Negro churches in Alabama and North Carolina were $11,432,063 and $11,204,158, respectively. The churches of Texas reported valuations which totaled $10,692,465 and those of Georgia values which totaled $9,442,345. The returns also show that the Negro churches of 23 of the other States reported values in excess of $1,000,000.

The average value per church was higher in the New England and Pacific areas than in the Mountain and Southern States. In the densely settled Middle Atlantic States where Negro urban churches outnumbered rural churches of the same class, the average value per church was $19,471. The average for New York Negro churches was $26,739. The lowest average value ($3,235) was obtained for church edifices located in the East South Central States. However, valuations lower than that noted for the East South Central division were returned for Negro church edifices reported from the State of New Mexico in the Mountain division and the State of Georgia in the South Atlantic division, where the averages were $1,968 and $1,730, respectively.

To some extent the difficulties which Negro congregations in various parts of the country have experienced in acquiring property for religious purposes are reflected in the amounts reported as indebtedness on church edifices. In the Pacific States 53.8 percent of the churches which reported value also reported indebtedness, and in the Middle Atlantic States debt on church edifices was reported by 50.7 percent of churches reporting edifices; but in the South Atlantic division only 16.7 percent of the churches reported debt on edifices. Not only was the proportion of churches large in the Middle Atlantic States but the average amount ($6,302) of indebtedness was highest in that division. The ratios of indebtedness for New England, the East North Central, and the Pacific States were considerably below that given for the Middle Atlantic States, but much higher than the ratio for the East South Central States. In the New England States the average indebtedness was $4,842, in the East North Central $4,665, in the Pacific States $4,485, but in the East South Central States $1,423.

Approximately one-third (33.7 percent) of the Negro parsonages were located in the South Atlantic division where Negro church edifices were found to be comparatively numerous and the average debt low. In the Mountain division, where the contrary was true, 63, or 1 percent of the churches, reported parsonages.

The average value of the 66 parsonages in New England was $4,613. Approaching this value was that of $4,139 for the parsonages of the Middle Atlantic States, but far below these average values were those for parsonages located in other divisions. In the East North Central, the Pacific, and the South Atlantic divisions, the average values were $2,996, $2,215, and $1,988, respectively. The average value for parsonages of the West North Central division was $1,724, and for the Mountain division $1,654. In both the East South Central and the West South Central divisions average values were below $1,400.

The churches of no State made expenditures of more than $2,246,783, the amount reported by the Negro churches of Alabama. Churches in Texas expended $2,134,573, and the returns for the Negro congregations of 11 other States show that in each of the States sums in excess of $1,000,000 were expended. Average expenditures of churches of no single State exceeded the average expenditure of $3,275 obtained for the churches of the District of Columbia. States in which the average expenditures of churches were above $2,000 but less than $3,000 were New York, $2,644; Massachusetts, $2,599; Rhode Island, $2,526; Minnesota, $2,265; Connecticut, $2,238; Colorado, $2,227; and Illinois, $2,047. In the Pacific States and each of the following States average expenditures per church were above $1,000: Delaware, Indiana, Kansas, Maryland, Michigan, Missouri, Nebraska, New Jersey, Ohio, Pennsylvania, and Wisconsin. In all of the remaining States except Georgia, Montana, and South Dakota (States for which the averages were between $300 and $400) averages were more than $400 but less than $1,000.

Statistics of Negro Denominations by States

Statistics for denominations which reported Negro churches and members are presented in table 39 by States. The data presented disclose that the Negro Baptists reported the largest number of churches and members in the District of Columbia and in all but 6 of the 47 States from which returns for Negro churches were made. Returns from Delaware and Montana show that the churches and members of the African Methodist Episcopal Church outnumbered those of other denominations. In the State of Washington the membership of the African Methodist Episcopal Church exceeded that of other denominations, but the Negro Baptists and the African Methodist Episcopal Zion denominations in that State reported an equal number of churches. Congregations of the Methodist Episcopal Church were more numerous than those reported for the other denominations in Maryland. The actual figures for each of these States are given in the following table.

Growth of Negro Churches

In table 40 the 1936 figures for Negro churches, membership, and Sunday schools are given by denominations, with figures for 1926, 1916, and 1906.

Returns were made for 38,303 churches in 1936; 42,585 in 1926; 39,592 in 1916; and 36,563 in 1906. From 1906 to 1916 the increase in the proportion of Negro churches was 8.3 percent and from 1916 to 1926, 7.6, but from 1926 to 1936 a decrease of 10.1 percent is noted for Negro churches. These figures compare with 7.7 percent and 2.4 percent increases in the two earlier census periods, and a 14.2 percent decrease from 1926 to 1936 for all churches.

It is probable that the 1936 figures evidence the disintegration of some congregations resulting from migratory movements of population, as well as the consolidation of two or more churches of the same denomination because of the expense involved in operating more than one church in a community served by good roads. Despite the general decrease in Negro churches returns from 19 religious bodies revealed an increase in churches, and those from 18, a gain in members. Negro church membership increased from 5,203,487 in 1926 to 5,660,618 in 1936, an increase of 457,131.

The Negro Baptists, for whom increases in both churches and members have been reported at each past census of religious bodies, show an increase of 1,012 (4.6 percent) churches and 585,841 (18.3 percent) members. The United American Free Will Baptists Church (Colored) made a gain of 60 churches (36.1 percent) and 6,220 members (46.4 percent). The increases for the Roman Catholic Church were 31 churches (21.1 percent) and 13,360 (10.7 percent) members. Returns from the Church of God and Saints of Christ show an increase from 112 to 213 churches, an increase of 90.2 percent, and from 6,741 members to 37,084, an increase of 30,343, or 450 percent. Substantial increases were made by smaller denominations.

Included among the denominations which experienced a sharp decrease in churches and membership since 1926 were Churches of Christ and the Disciples of Christ.

Among the 14 bodies reported for the first time in 1936, are the United Holy Church of America, Inc., with 162 churches and 7,535 members, the National Baptist Evangelical Life and Soul Saving Assembly of the United States of America with 28 churches and 2,300 members, and the Fire Baptized Holiness Church of God of the Americas with 59 churches and 1,973 members.

At the 1906 census the average number of members per Negro church was 101, and at the 1936 census, 148. Among the larger denominations the most consistent increases were noted for the Church of God and Saints of Christ. In 1906 that denomination's average was 38 members per church and in 1936, 174 per church. In the Roman Catholic Church average membership per Negro church decreased from 846 in 1926 to 774 in 1936. The Negro churches in that denomination increased from 147 to 178 in the 10-year period.

Negro churches reporting Sunday schools decreased from 36,378 in 1926 to 35,021 in 1936, but despite the decrease of 1,357 Sunday schools the total number of scholars increased from 2,144,553 to 2,424,800, and the average number of scholars per church from 59 to 69.

Growth in Negro Church Finances

In table 41 the expenditures of Negro churches for 1936 are given, together with figures for 1926 and 1916. The figures show that information concerning expenditures was supplied by 37,308 churches in 1936 and by 39,245 in 1926. Churches which made returns including information relating to expenditures constituted 97.4 percent of all the returns for Negro churches in 1936, and 92.2 percent of all returns for Negro churches in 1926.

During the 10 years total expenditures for Negro churches declined 35.4 percent, that is, from $43,024,259 in 1926 to $27,802,469 in 1936. The proportion of decrease for all denominations was 36.5 percent. Average expenditures per church for all Negro churches decreased from $1,096 to $745, or 32 percent. Corresponding averages for all churches—Negro and white—were $3,783 and $2,749. The expenditures of large denominations decreased but those for six denominations increased. Among these denominations were the Colored Primitive Baptists whose returns increased 426 percent and the Church of God and Saints of Christ whose returns increased 164 percent.

Concerning the decrease in total and average expenditures it is thought that the prevalence of unemployment in the population prevented church members from supporting their organization to the same extent in 1936 as in 1926 and that as a result, churches were forced to reduce salaries, refrain from making repairs, and practice other economies.

The figures for value of church edifices for 1936, 1926, and 1916 also are compared in table 41. These figures disclose that the proportion of churches reporting in 1936 was 89.4 percent, in 1926, 87.7 percent, and in 1916, 93.7 percent. The amount ($164,531,531) reported for 1936 was $41,251,097 below the sum reported for 1926 but $77,721,561 more than the value of church edifices reported for 1916.

Edifice value per Negro church was $4,804 in 1936 and $5,510 in 1926. Corresponding values for all churches were $19,636 and $18,920.

CONCLUSION

Church membership during the two decades between 1906 and 1926 grew at approximately the same rate as the population, but the membership reported in 1936 was only 2.3 percent greater than that reported in 1926. This unfavorable showing was the result, however, of relatively incomplete reporting in 1936 on the part of a number of denominations, to which reference has already been made. Incidentally, it may be noted that the increase in population between 1926 and 1936 was only about 10 percent. The number of Sunday school scholars reported showed great gains between 1906 and 1916 and increased less rapidly from 1916 to 1926. The number of scholars reported in 1936, like the number of churches reporting, was appreciably smaller than the number reported in 1936, though it may be assumed that this apparent decline is primarily the result of the incompleteness in reporting in 1936.

Between 1916 and 1926 the value of church edifices increased from $1,676,600,582 to $3,839,500,610, or 129 percent, and church expenditures increased from $328,809,999 to $817,214,528, or 149 percent. Partly as a result of incomplete reporting and partly, it may be assumed, as a result of actual declines in values, the value of church edifices reported in 1936 amounted to only $3,411,875,467, or 11.1 percent less than in 1926. The expenditures reported for 1936 were likewise lower than those reported for 1926 by 36.5 percent, being only $518,953,571.

As in 1926, data for rural and urban churches in 1936 are tabulated separately, bringing out the striking contrast between these two types of churches. The usual country church has 133 members who worship in a church building worth $6,454 and expend annually $1,061 per church; while the average city church has 541 members, the church edifice is worth $44,583, and the yearly expenditures average $5,817 per church.

[1] Membership as defined by the particular denomination.

[2] Figures are to be used with due consideration of the number of members not so reported, notably in the case of the Jewish Congregations.

[3] The statistics given relate only to the Sunday schools reported by individual churches and do not include undenominational or union Sunday schools; nor do they include the parochial or weekday schools that are maintained by a number of bodies, particularly the Roman Catholic Church, Jewish Congregations, and certain Lutheran bodies. Information regarding the various types of religious instruction is given in vol. II, in the section on "Work" under the respective denominations.

*The Southern Baptist Handbook for 1937 shows 24,671 churches and 4,482,315 members for 1936.

[1] Includes only organizations reporting members.
[2] Membership as defined by the particular denomination.
[3] The statistics given relate only to the Sunday schools reported by individual churches and do not include undenominational or union Sunday schools; nor do they include the parochial or weekday schools that are maintained by a number of bodies, particularly the Roman Catholic Church, Jewish Congregations, and certain Lutheran bodies. Information regarding the various types of religious instruction is given in vol. II in the section on "Work" under the respective denominations.
[4] Corrected figures: see explanation on p. 29, pt. I, of the 1916 report, for change in the number of members of the Roman Catholic Church.
[5] For changes in denominations, see pp. 338-340.
[6] So far as can be learned organic denominational existence has ceased, any organization formerly belonging to this group being included among the Independent Churches.

[1] Includes only organizations reporting members.
[2] Membership as defined by the particular denomination.
[3] The statistics given relate only to the Sunday schools reported by individual churches and do not include undenominational or union Sunday schools; nor do they include the parochial or weekday schools that are maintained by a number of bodies, particularly the Roman Catholic Church, Jewish Congregations, and certain Lutheran bodies. Information regarding the various types of religious instruction is given in vol. II, in the section on "Work" under the respective denominations.

[3] The statistics given relate only to the Sunday schools reported by individual churches, and do not include undenominational or union Sunday schools; nor do they include the parochial or weekday schools that are maintained by a number of bodies, particularly the Roman Catholic Church, Jewish Congregations, and certain Lutheran bodies. Information regarding the various types of religious instruction is given in vol. II, in the section on "Work" under the respective denominations.

[1] Membership as defined by the particular denomination.

[2] The statistics given relate only to the Sunday schools reported by individual churches and do not include undenominational or union Sunday schools; nor do they include the parochial or weekday schools that are maintained by a number of bodies, particularly the Roman Catholic Church, Jewish Congregations, and certain Lutheran bodies. Information regarding the various types of religious instruction is given in vol. II, in the section on "Work" under the respective denominations.

[3] Includes age not reported.

[4] Based on membership with age classification reported; not shown where base is less than 100.
