This lesson will explain many of the very strange and curious beliefs that mankind has held throughout the ages. In all races or religions, we might say, universal, - there have been and are legends concerning the source of man's origin in the far distant days of the beginning of life.

Without exception, every race in the world, every religion, has somewhere or other taught that the source of man's first beginning was in the North. I, of course, am familiar with the modern theory of the migration of races from central Asia. That however, is understood by those who are students of the Ancient wisdom to have been a later migration than the separating of races in the primal or first division of the ancient races of mankind.

Also, the ancient wisdom teaches that man is far more ancient upon this earth than is ordinarily believed in our modern times, or than is taught in our modern scientific theories, or to use a five dollar word, 'hypothesis'. A theory is a guess of someone supported by certain facts and hypothesis is a five dollar word for guess.

The things that I am going to talk to you about are not theories and are not guesswork. They are taken from the most ancient of all the records which exist in the world today because there are records that go back to the time of man's very beginning and so, to begin my lesson at the proper place, I am going to start with the theory that is advanced in the Book of Genesis - that is, the theory of Eden as being the primal or first home of mankind.

When we read the Book of Genesis we find that Eden was East. That is, according to the translation as we find it in the Bible which says, 'Eastward in Eden'. That is obviously an incorrect translation because the original word was Neggedem. That is the word translated as east and nowhere else in the old Hebraic Testament is the word translated as beginning. Therefore, saying that 'Eden was East' is incorrect; that Eden was a place of beginnings. I want you to note that: 'Eden was a place of beginnings, because I want to show you how in all religions and beliefs the concept of man as originating in the North Polar Regions, the God-man, was taught universally.

Let us consider that we are at the direct North Pole. We would find certain conditions there prevalent that we would find nowhere else in the world. First, we would find that there would be a division of the year into day and night. That is, that approximately four-fifths of the year would be light in some degree, about one-fifth would be total darkness. We think of a day as being six months and also, night being six months long in the north - the full day is six months long but there is a period of dawn and a period of twilight which leaves approximately only one-fifth darkness. If we were at the Poles at this moment and looked up we would see stars move in a circular motion around us and nowhere else would that condition exist.

I want to say, the true North Pole has never been discovered. Later on in my talk, I will show you why it has not been discovered; though all current phenomena point to its discovery.

Standing at the North Pole there would be an unmoving center point directly overhead. This would be the top of the world or the very center of the earthly universe. The ancients, considered that as the true heaven, the center of the universe. If one were at that place and then would move away from it just a little bit they would seem to get away from the center of the universe. They would find the stars did not move in that apparent circular movement.

Let us say that in the very beginning of time, as the ancient records teach, that there are seven great continents or land masses; ancient tradition says the North Polar Continent was the first upon which life appeared and the first upon which man appeared, not only animal man but the first god-like man.

Conditions there were entirely different from anywhere else upon the surface of the earth. Later on, when that race moved away from that primal or original home; in other parts of the world it would be remembered as the central land.

You will remember, that in the Eden story in Genesis there were four rivers flowing out of Eden. If one were at the North Polar Regions the rivers would flow in different directions, so the legend of the four rivers flowing forth from Eden, taken from the material standpoint would pre-dispose us that it must come from some place like the North Pole.

At the time of which I am speaking, and evidence is borne out by geology and zoology, the North was a tropical fertile country. In fact, it has been taught that millions of years ago, the poles were hotter than the Equatorial regions at the present time. When the races of mankind migrated away from there, they would remember it as a great central point and the ancient wisdom tells us that at the very point occupying the center of that Polar Continent, that the great city of the god-race was built and in later legends that city became the home or mountain of the gods.

The Hindoos called it the Holy Mount Meru. They also spoke of Ku-Meru at the South Pole. The ancients said, that the god-like race lived at that pole; that later man was not like the original race; in that age of time the race of mankind were giants, they lived for an extremely long length of time, so long that for all practical purpose it was immortality.

In that original Polar Land, as I said, four-fifths of the time there would be the light of the sun. It is for that reason that the ancients looked upon the North, not the East as the home of the sun-God. Those great nations of the east that worshipped the sun as a God always turned towards the North in their worship of the sun. They considered that the sun kingdom was in the north, not in the east where under ordinary circumstances they would have looked at the east as being the home of the sun gods.

The Scandinavian mythology and also those of the Hindoos, Egyptians, Chaldeans and others, taught that the Aurora Borealis was the light reflected from the home of the Gods and they said that as long as that light continued to shine in the North that the home of the gods remained; that that was the light of the gods reflected from the Holy Mount Meru. Other nations used other names which I will mention later.

The ancient records also say this; that that Aurora Borealis; - I suppose you all know what it is - to use a more common term, the Northern lights. I believe as far south as Denver you can see them at certain times of the year. When they first begin to break they are the color of a pearl. Then, that becomes shot through with all the colors of the spectrum and finally, a great mass of color hangs in the sky like a blanket.

The ancients say, that the north Polar region was, and still is, the home of the God-Race, because all of them have not disappeared from the earth. Also, at the North Pole there is a concentration of the magnetic currents of the earth and that the magnetic currents of the earth blending with the static electricity of the cold North form and create what we call the Northern Lights.

You understand, that the magnetic currents and the magnetic pole of the earth are two different things. The magnetic pole of the earth and the North and South Pole are two different things. The magnetic pole of the earth is centered at the Barren Grounds of Canada. The magnetic pole and the North Pole are two different things. Magnetic currents are subtle, invisible currents that flow through everything in Nature and they will eventually become the sole source of all the energies and powers that we will use in motivating our machines of all nature, from flying machines to automobiles. The ancient races knew how to control them and release them and in great power and force.

The Aurora Borealis is a by-product of the concentration of magnetic currents and electricity and it is released in that Polar Region even today for exactly the same reason that it was released years ago because all living things under the shadow of that force which we find manifested as the Aurora Borealis will not die as long as they are subjected to it periodically because it reacts on the very nucleus of the atom, molecule and cell.

For that reason, the God-Race was spoken of as the undying race; in later times, spoken of in the Christian Bible in Genesis as the giants of earth, also called the Sons of God. The Book of Genesis says "The Sons of God looked on the daughters of earth that they were fair and took of them all that they chose to wife and there were born of them mighty men of old, giants in their day."

In the ancient Greek teachings four divisions of the world were taught. They taught of it in this manner: they said, first, there was a central sun. Then, around it there were four concentric rings or rather, three around them; in the center was the home of the Gods; in the next circle was the home of men; in the next the home of the dead, and next, the home of the demons.

Today that seems like a very curious and fabulous belief because we know all about the world. We know that the world is not divided into circles and the home of men, gods and the dead are not relative to each other in that manner, but that is because we do not remember the ancient wisdom. Remember, that came down to them from ancient times when the world was not as it is today. They preserve in their legends the fact that the very apex of the world we now call the Poles was the home of the gods but around them were gathered the lesser men but who had mind and intelligence, who had soul and they had driven away from them the great soulless creation. They had driven them out from the home in which men who were entirely different from the God-men existed.

Then, farther out, at what we now call the South Pole was the place of the earth that they call the home of the demons. Do not laugh at that because before I am through I am going to show you where there is certain symbolism in the Christian Bible which really taught exactly the same thing.

Among the Hindoos a very strange and curious symbol was used - it was this: it was of a globe or sphere divided into four parts. On top of it was a triangle representing a mountain. Below it was another triangle; another mountain; the lower one representing the South Pole and the upper one, the North Pole. The four divisions represented or symbolized the four ancient parts of the world. To the student of symbolism there is a vast wisdom embodied in that. It dates back into the very beginning of time when the world was divided into four parts. In that symbol we find the origin of the worlds, because the worlds is nothing more or less than a division of the world of the beginning into four separate parts. The mountain, which by the Hindoos was called Su Meru, and the lower mountain called Ku-Meru; were the two mountains, the Holy Mountain and the infernal mountain. They always considered the South Pole as the lower or infernal mountain and the North Pole as the Holy Mount Meru.

You might also say, in those triangles, that triangle with the point upward symbolizes God; the triangle with the point downward symbolizes the negative or lower plane existence and sometimes, it is shown in the six-pointed star joined together so that the protective mountain of heaven will neutralize or balance the mountain of evil, and therefore becomes a balanced symbol. The Egyptians had exactly the same symbol as that one and they taught that at the North Pole that Holy Mountain reached from the earth into heaven.

To give you a quotation from the Egyptian Book of the Dead, the Papyrus of Ani. "Oh, the very tall hill of Hades the heaven rests upon it. There is a snake or dragon upon it. Sati is his name". They believed that at the North and South Poles were mountains, that the heaven surrounded them, that the Holy Mount Meru reached into heaven, the gods dwelt on the mountain and the topmost peak rested in heaven and on it rested the great serpent of wisdom and beyond it was a great Hydra which they called Sati. Can't you see from the term Sati where the ancients got their Satan. Sati easily becomes Satan. I am going to show you more about that in just a minute.

The ancient records of the Hindoos, the Vishnu Purana among others, tells us that at the time when the North Polar region was free of ice and the man of the beginning formed there, that two great stars were in conjunction, that the Alpha Draconis was the North Star and at the same time, the Eta Hydra was the South Polar Star. The Eta Hydra also means, the man-headed dragon; the Alpha Draconis meant great serpent and they are able to place the time of that ancient God-race at the time when Alpha Draconis and Eta Hydra were in perfect conjunction; one as the North Star and one as the South Star.

That legend has been preserved down to the present day and there are people of today who preserve the legend of the great dragon of the North and they worship it because that great dragon is the symbol of the home of the gods. I am going to show you something that perhaps you have never seen from my own collection. I am going to show you a bronze figure of the winged dragon, the serpent of Alpha Draconis, the serpent of wisdom. If you can see clearly, you can see figures kneeling with stars all around. That is the symbol of the cult of the silver serpent, the cult of Alpha Draconis, the great dragon of the North. They are shown bowed down worshipping the great dragon of the North. It is the symbol of a cult that still exists and has existed for many centuries. They look at Alpha Draconis as being the symbol of the home of the gods at the North Polar regions. It is the worship of Alpha Draconis, the North Polar home of the gods and it is the symbol of the time when the gods lived among men and they are kneeling down, praying for the time of the conjunction to come again, which would allow the ice to melt.

According to the ancient wisdom, when the Age of darkness is past that ice will be unlocked and the ancient wisdom will once again be made free for man so you can once again travel to the Holy Mountain and there again stand before the home of the gods.

The Akkadians, one of the ancient races of Chaldea; worshipped Ishtar. They taught that Ishtar was the Queen of the Mountain of the world at the axis of the world from which flowed four rivers. Mind you, that statement has been found graven upon stone tablets more than seven thousand years old. Ishtar, not the Goddess of love as we have mistranslated it but Ishtar, the Queen of the Mountain of the world, the home of the axis of the world and what is the axis but the North Pole. Though the earth has changed its balance four times, at the present time, it is as near back to its original balance as it will ever be.

Here is a quotation from Isaiah: I will sit also upon the mountain of the congregation in the uttermost parts of the North". Did you ever read that statement and meditate upon it "in the uttermost parts of the North?"

The Chinese called it the Pearl Mountain or Mountain of the Great Pearl with a living fountain flowing forth from it that forms four rivers and around it revolves the visible heavens.

The Taoists of Japan when they address the gods turn with their face towards the North, the remnant of the ancient knowledge that the north was the place of beginnings.

I might mention, for the benefit of some of you who do not know what the word Meru means in Sanskrit, Meru means 'axis or pivot, the Holy Mountain axis or pivot.' Strange is it not, but if we understand that we were referring to the Holy Mountain or great raise of ground which existed and still exists, upon which the City of the gods was built.

I am using the term, gods to concern the ancient or beginning race that was so much greater than later man, that to later man they could only be called gods. In other words, what we would call the direct manifestation of the divine upon earth.

The Japanese say this: that a God and Goddess were standing on the bridge of heaven and stuck a spear into the earth and turned it round and round and it became the axis of the earth; that is, the North Pole and from it was formed the home of the beginning of man.

In the Talmud of the Hebrews there is this curious quotation: "There is an upper and lower paradise - between them a pillar joining them together, called "Strength of the Hill of Zion". They considered that the Holy Mountain of the North was the Paradise of the North and from there the ascent into the heaven world was just one step.

I might go so far as to say this: that the story of the Tower of Babel in the Christian Bible is nothing more or less than the story of the Mountain, which reached into the Home of the Gods. Once it rose, high upon it was built the City of the God-race. Around it, lower down were built the cities of ancient man. The man races looked with longing upon the Home of the Gods on the Holy Mountain and they tried to force their way up the mountain and the super human divine power of the God man drove them out and they scattered into different parts of the world and the story of the confusion of tongues was nothing more or less than a legend arising from the fact that when men were scattered and formed tribes and nations and later, when they got together they could no longer understand each other so the story of the Tower of Babel arose, when it was merely the Reincarnation memory of Ezra, in which he remembered the driving forth of man from the home of the Gods.

In the Vishnu Purana there is a very curious symbol shown. Only fragments of it have been translated into the English language, and in that they showed the world divided into nine divisions. They showed it divided in this manner, they showed the world as a globe, this in a work written at least twenty thousand years ago and they showed it in this manner: 1,2,3,4,5,6,7,8,9. I show all parts of one side, but actually, they said the world was divided into nine parts. You will note the symbol that they use, the square in the center, the crest of the world and you will notice the elongations, the symbol of the four rivers flowing forth.

In the Book of Revelations it speaks of the City Four-Square, an attempt by John to preserve the legend of the Great City of the North. All the symbols he uses of the twelve gates made of different stone is the symbol of this teaching.

Another thing, too, among the Egyptians, in the most ancient times, in the earliest of the Papyrii we have been able to decipher, the world was divided into two parts; the home of the living and the home of the dead. It was not until later Papyrii that they showed the Halls of Amenti as being the underworld or the Realm of the Dead, while the Home of the Gods was at the North.

In the old Greek teachings the place of Atlas who upheld the world on his shoulders was shown as being in the North. In mentioning that too, it might be of interest to you to know that Apollodorus called the lost land Meropia and its inhabitants the Meropes and the word, 'Merope', meant issued from Meru, and the word, 'Meru' meant the axis or pole. The Meropia were issued from the Pole.

One of the more ancient of our Greek writers, Anaxagoras, one of the other ancient Greek writers said this: "In the beginning the stars revolved in a Thali-form manner or revolve in a horizontal manner. From the memory of man in the ancient times, where man first lived the stars revolved in the horizontal manner.

In the Zend Avesta of Zoroaster, we find this quotation: "There the stars, the moon and the sun are only seen to rise and set once a year and a year seems only a day". He is speaking of the Holy City of the Gods upon the Holy Mountain. Is there any other place in the world where the sun seems to rise and set only once a year?

In the law of Manu one of the great

Hindoo works we find, this: That Yama, the first man lived at the North Pole; a clear, a definite statement.

In the Surya Siddhaanta, another great Hindoo work we find this: The Gods behold the sun, after it has risen for half a year. Again, we find the Place of the Gods as the North Pole.

In the book, "The Institutes of Vishnu", one of the most ancient of all Sanskrit manuscripts: "The Northern progress of the sun is a day with the Gods. The Southern progress is a night. A year is with them a day and night." We might even find one of the misquotations in the Bible: "A year is to the Lord as a day." In another place it is "A thousand years."

In the Book of Job, we find that where he speaks of the North, South, the East and West, he said, "the left is the North", and is it not curious to note that the Home of the Gods is at the North or left hand and it thus throws the home of negation or evil at the South or right hand, and does not the Bible tell us, "I go even to the left hand where he doth work": another quotation of Isaiah.

Again, in the Bible, we find this quotation: "The Lord is thy shade on the right hand". Why is the Lord thy shade on the right hand? Because according to ancient tradition; the place of evil was the South or at the right hand.

Again, in the Psalms, we find this:

"The Lord let stand at his right hand". Always the Lord stands at the right hand as a protection against the mindless ones from the South.

In ancient times, before the Temple was built, the priest stood at the North. When he stood at the Holy of Holies in the Temple he faced the North; when he clasped the horns of the altar of the Temple of God.

In Ezkiels vision we find this: "The Ideal Temple of the future had a chamber for the priests of the altar -- whose prospect was toward the North".

In Scandinavia in the old religions they said that in the Northern Heaven, the Tree, Yggdrasil stood at the very center of the North and that is the Tree of Life upon which the world hung. The Eddas say, it was built in the center of the world and that very center Pole was the watch-tower of Odin.

In Finland among the ancient Finns, the Home of the Gods, the place they always faced, was called Tahtela which in Finnish meant the Polar Star.

It is a very curious fact that in contradiction to many of our modern mythologies who say that pillars and altars were phallic symbols, they say, the pillar represented in ancient times the axis which reached from earth into heaven where the Home of the Gods rested. At the North was the tree which stood in the midst of the Garden of Eden. Man tried to eat of the forbidden fruit and was driven forth because he was not worthy of the ancient land of the beginnings.

When we examine and study the ancient works we find that man universally believed in the North as the Home of the Gods. In the East today they speak of Northern Shamballa; they speak of Shamballa and Northern Shamballa.

In Tibet and India they say it is from Northern Shamballa that Maitreya, Lord of the world will come forth with the warriors of light bearing aloft a Diamond Banner to bring the spiritual truth and light and a glorious age to mankind. That Northern Shamballa is nothing more or less than the lost hidden land of the Gods.

There is a small area in the North only about one hundred and fifty miles in circumference that is still as tropical and fertile as it was in the beginning of time; in that there rests what remains of the ancient Holy City from which all mankind came in the dawn of time, those who remain as the guardians of the children of men in the world. The Aurora Borealis is nothing more or less than the energies used to give light to that region around them. They literally bend or curve space in such a manner that it strikes upon a warp in space which they create so that if man has a compass and moves towards that he is diverted in a circle around it and though he thinks he is going straight he is not but they have built or cast around it a delusion so man is always diverted around it because the delusion of ice and snow is shown so he is unaware of them as being anything other than that and they thus have preserved it as a secret hidden land.

In it even today, there still live certain of the giant God-race from the very beginning of mankind, because under the influence of the very force of life itself they do not die. They may pass into another plane beyond the understanding of man in the outer world. They can pass if and when they will but as long as they remain in the outer world they remain undying, not changing in any way. It is for that reason it was called the Hyperborean Race, the Land of the Gods.

In the East today, we are told that Maitreya has come, that the time is almost at hand for the city of the North to be opened for the world, that the entrances will be opened and Maitreya and his warriors come forth to show man the way to regain his heritage which he lost when he tried to eat of the Tree of Life while he was still in darkness.

There is so much material, scientific proof of it that any person who correlates it cannot, at least, but be impressed by the fact that all mankind must have in the beginning looked to the North for spiritual light and for the teaching which has become the religion of all races of man.

BOOKS ON SYMBOLISM

The study of symbolism is a fascinating and necessary subject for the occult student. In symbolism is found a universal language which can be translated by any individual, of any race or age. If he has the required knowledge of Universal or Cosmic Law. The ancient mysteries were always concealed in symbols, for thus the secret wisdom could be kept hidden from the unworthy. Among all races and religions some parts of the whole truth are found, only to be interpreted by one who has the keys.

FLYING SAUCERS

AN OCCULT VIEWPOINT

BY M. DOREAL

There have been a very considerable number of books written by people who have observed flying objects of different kinds and types in the sky over a period of many years. In the last few years when there has been a considerable increase in such objects, there has also been a greater number observed. One reason for that is that today we have larger populations, people at more obscure points, better systems of communication and so forth. Yet, such phenomena is not a new thing. For centuries, strange objects have been observed in the skies and beyond the skies.

Perhaps my explanations will be obscure and not understandable by those who are not members of the Brotherhood. Yet, I believe that if you bear with me during the course of my explanations, that the picture will become clear to you.

The book is divided into three chapters, one for each major classification of flying objects.
