HUMAN EVALUATION

by L. Ron Hubbard

Human evaluation is born out of the fact that if you know some of the basic fundamentals of human thought, you can then predict behavior.

Somebody was saying this is the thing that people go into psychology classes in college to learn and are terribly disappointed never to find out. That is rather true. I have heard this complaint rather consistently about psychology. Psychology as a matter of fact is not in very good repute in the society because of this.

It gives us a very difficult time sometimes because people say, "Well, psychology's a lot of bunk. It doesn't work. So therefore Dianetics doesn't work either because it is also about the human mind." This wonderful piece of logic is something we run into all too often.

The whole subject of human evaluation derives from an understanding of human behavior. Human behavior is something human beings have been rather curious about in the last few thousand years.

Any time you meet a human being and become associated with him socially, it would be of some benefit to know, by looking at him and talking to him for a couple of minutes, what this individual had in store for you and his friendship with you. It would be of some small benefit to know whether or not he was going to run off with your wife or borrow your car and not come back with it, or whether or not he's going to be a good friend and would loan you that hundred bucks when you needed it.

In business, where we have a high level of competition and contest, human evaluation goes into two levels: one, the people with whom we do business; and two, the people we employ to take care of our business. It's very important to know, when one is dealing consistently, or means to deal consistently, with somebody in business, if this individual is going to be something less than kind in his dealings, and to have some idea in advance whether or not his word is to be trusted.

If you'll notice, most business failures, that are not founded upon sheer ineptitude, come about when trust is mistakenly placed in another human being. It would be very nice to know how much you had to be on your guard with somebody in doing business with him.

A banker, for instance, is subjected to a continual running fire of "I want a nice little short-term note here of, well, I can use five thousand dollars". He is trying to select, out of the mass of people that are coming in front of his desk one right after the other, the person who will pay it back.

The banker has been stung so often through an inability to know, that he now has to go around Robin Hood's barn as his test. He says, "How much collateral have you got?" and you say, "Well, I've got such-and-such", and he says "You want to borrow five thousand dollars? All right, you've got five thousand dollars in the bank now. If you leave your five thousand dollars in the bank we'll loan you the five thousand dollars."

In other words, bankers are not very trusting, through an inability to forecast who is going to repay the loan. It would be very interesting to a banker to know with considerable accuracy who would and who wouldn't.

In the matter of running a business it becomes of the greatest interest to an employer who will be reliable in his business staff. He has a hard time with it.

Human evaluation is valuable whenever you have two human beings newly met and without past experience with each other. If you had a method of establishing with a human being a few years of experience in a few minutes, that would have some value, particularly on the subject of employers and employees.

The tremendous expense in running a business as a testing crucible for employees, if added up, would probably make a lot of businessmen faint. Not only that, but the employees themselves would faint, and the people trying to do their jobs in the plant. These too are very definitely affected by using the whole business as a crucible in which you test employees.

You can have all sorts of beautiful tests: civil service tests that say "Do you have a high school diploma? Do you have a college diploma? Have you ever been in jail? Are you married? Do you have any children?" And you put all this down on a government employment record and they look it all over and they say "Yup, hire him" or "don't hire him" or something of the sort.

These efforts to discover data about an individual cost a great deal of money. They cost a great deal of time. And they sometimes cost a business its efficiency to a point where a business will fail which might otherwise have succeeded. All because this business itself had to be used as a testing ground.

Every time you bring in somebody, you have the feeling you are hiring a pig in a poke. You put him on the job, three months later you happen to wonder if that fellow's doing well and you find out the whole job has collapsed and it's stopped the whole assembly line. That becomes very serious, doesn't it?

Well, that's only one aspect of it. In the business of counseling, in the business of trying to help and aid one's fellow man, it's very important to know who and what one is trying to aid.

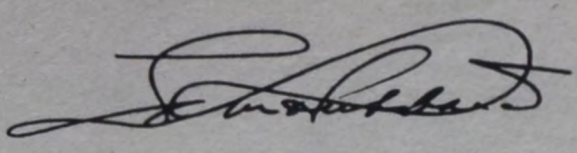

For instance, giving understanding or philanthropy to individuals, every so often there's a deadbeat, there's a professional desirer of sympathy. Some of these people seeking aid are very very deserving and some are not. How do you tell the difference?

How do you tell when a man is telling the truth? Is there a way of knowing whether a man is telling the truth without subjecting him to a lie detector which has a limited usefulness and to which he very often objects. And it's very difficult in the ordinary course of human affairs to go around carrying lie detectors under your arm – they weigh several pounds.

But there is a way of telling this.

The whole subject of human evaluation is something that Man has been trying to reach for a long time. In looking over the books of the ancients and the ideas that were handed down before things were written, I know Man has been interested in trying to discover this for 4500 years. I'm not trying to tell you that it was suddenly discovered all in one fell swoop. There was an accumulation of information over those 4500 years, a gradual accumulation.

Trying to find out what was important in what had been accumulated was a vital step. Organizing that material with which people had worked in the past, evaluating it and putting it together paid off. It paid off in the form of Dianetics and Scientology.

L. Ron Hubbard

Scientology ministerial student Les Rogers from Toronto will study all Scientology and Dianetics books on human evaluation (such as those displayed in the window) on the Saint Hill Special Briefing Course at the American Saint Hill Organization in Los Angeles.

Readers understand themselves and others better with Scientology books

DIANETICS: THE MODERN SCIENCE OF MENTAL HEALTH

I had read books by Freudian students, eminent psychologists and psychiatrists – and my view of the mind was that it was mysterious and would take years to figure out an understanding of it.

Dianetics was different. It was clear, very detailed in its logic, and most of all, it made sense. The data in this book was observable. You could see it happening around you with startling consistency.

People became more understandable. I found myself more stable, more responsible, more in control, more self-respecting. And I understood others much better than I did before – which rather than making me cynical, increased my respect for them. I could tolerate people much more – for I could see they were basically good and were often acting in ways even they didn't want.

The data in this book laid out the fundamentals of the mind and life. I have never read anything else as valuable.

Steve Drabin

I was reading a science fiction book when I spotted Dianetics: the Modern Science of Mental Health lying on the floor. I picked it up and read it – I honestly thought someone had been following me all around my entire life and had written down what exactly was wrong with me and what to do about it. I thought someone was playing a trick on me. It was no trick! Now I am on the Saint Hill Special Briefing Course–maybe sometime after I am Clear I'll get around to finishing that science fiction story.

Ken Erwin

I had been having a problem with my girlfriend that I couldn't figure out. Every time I thought of her I would get these funny sensations – my hands would sweat, my arm muscles would twitch, my stomach seemed to do flip flops. I thought, "I must be in love."

I was reading Dianetics and got to a chapter on Emotions. Near the end, real life examples were given on how some people thought love was these funny body feelings.

I started laughing, and I laughed so hard tears were rolling down my face. For the first time I really understood why I had reacted to certain women with these strange sensations. From that very instant I ceased having these uncontrollable sensations that had hounded me for so long and was able to have a good relationship no longer plagued by mystery. And I didn't have to use those feelings to tell me whether or not I was in love. It was a great feeling of freedom.

SELF ANALYSIS

After reading Self Analysis I found that my ability to remember things improved about 50 times. I can remember things that happened in my early childhood that I thought were long since forgotten.

Doing the exercises in this book is what did it. It's like having a lost portion of my life restored to me again. I have a greater feeling of personal integrity now. I feel more whole–thanks to L. Ron Hubbard's Self Analysis.

J.B.

DIANETICS: THE ORIGINAL THESIS

When I first read the book Original Thesis I really understood what engrams were and could see precisely what it was that caused me to do certain irrational things that were unacceptable to me and which I didn't seem to have control over. I went right out and got myself some auditing and experienced immediate relief from the condition.

Jo Plunkett

SCIENCE OF SURVIVAL: Prediction of Human Behavior

While reading L. Ron Hubbard's Science of Survival I learned something I'd always suspected and never put into words, how a person's purpose and intention on something he really wants to do can enable him to rise above obstacles and win, no matter what shape he is in.

Kate Howson

DIANETICS '55!

Before I'd read Dianetics '55 I always had the vague suspicion that I was someone or something other than the thing that looked back at me when I looked in the mirror. I always knew this and tried to express it to other people but had difficulty doing so. Then, in Dianetics '55 I came across the term "awareness of awareness unit" as the description of the person himself, limitless, indestructible, capable of infinite creation. From that moment on I knew who I was, and I recognized my basic rightness and integrity.

INTRODUCTION TO SCIENTOLOGY ETHICS

About two years ago, my husband and I were having a terrible fight. It has gone on for days and we were barely speaking to each other, and I totally, totally miserable. I talked to a Scientologist friend and he asked if I was ready to "make up" with my husband or not. Faced with that decision I decided that I could take the first step towards getting us back together but I really did not know how to do it right.

My friend sold me the book Introduction to Scientology Ethics and showed me how to figure out what condition I was in, relative to my husband, at that time.

I took the book to my husband and explained what condition I was in and that I wanted to work out of that condition and get our relationship back to normal. He took a look at the book, decided he was in the same condition, and we worked on the formulas in the book together until we were totally satisfied with our relationship again. It took about 30 minutes! And it has had a lasting effect on our relationship.

ORGANIZATION EXECUTIVE COURSE VOLUMES and MANAGEMENT SERIES

My business affairs in ten years ranged from fair to lousy. I couldn't seem to figure out what I was doing wrong. With each new endeavor I'd wonder how I'd fail this time.

Then came the Management Series and Organization Executive Course volumes. I was told they would handle any and every thing that could come up in my business. I said "I can't afford it." I was told "You can't increase your business without increasing your tools, information and knowledge." That made sense. I bought them.

Two months later I was making twice what I normally did and to date, five months later, I actually make what I want – I have complete choice in the matter.

Greg Nicoll, Iowa

I just received the Organization Executive Course and Management Series and am most pleased to have the data. I had an interest in this series for some time but failed to get it because I thought it would be way over my head. Now I know that I was "tempting the Fates" without it.

This series simply states the essentials for survival of a business–from a one man shop to a major corporation. It scares me to think I've gone years without it. Now I can plan bigger objectives in an organized way with certainty of reaching them.

Most recently, he has become interested in the problem of forced labor programs and other abuses existing in South African mental institutions.

SENATOR HERBIE GRAHAM, Australia: Mr. Graham's direct interest in public affairs dates back to 1929. First elected to the Parliament of Western Australia in 1943, he served continuously for 30 years. When he resigned in 1973, Mr. Graham was Deputy Premier of his state, where he is still very active in community affairs. Mr. Graham's topic will be, "Religion and Government."

LOFTY ADAMS, South Africa: The South African Coloured Representative Council member for Kasselsvlei is the recent recipient of a U.S. State Department grant which enabled him to study international and multinational marketing at Harvard. Mr. Adams has taken a major interest in mental retardation and in particular has concerned himself with the shortage of facilities available for colored mentally retarded people in South Africa.

The Honorable RONALD DAVIES, Australia: Mr. Davies has been actively associated with the Labor movement in Australia since 1945, and has represented Victoria Park in the Western Australian Parliament continuously for the past 15 years. Mr. Davies currently holds the position of Shadow Minister for Health and Community Welfare. RALPH HARRIS, New Zealand: Mr. Harris is the co-founder and current chairman of the original Crimanon group, started in 1970 in New Zealand for the purpose of initiating prison reform. For the past six years, he has taken up this cause with members of the New Zealand Parliament and ministers of Justice, spoken to other groups, organized seminars and staged numerous events to make the public more aware of the need for penal reform.

Greater understanding gained through training at the American Saint Hill

In addition to being an expert Scientology counselor, Ian Waxler is an authority on reptiles. Above, he takes a moment from his busy study schedule to feed one of his pet snakes.

Sioux Bushman skillfully re-designs a dress in her spare time.

Peace Corps Veteran

Ian Waxler, veteran of the Peace Corps, civil rights movement, and 2 years of teaching in Miami Public schools, had been actively trying to help people long before he heard of Scientology in 1969. But his efforts were hampered by lack of understanding of himself and others.

A graduate of Florida State University in history and anthropology, Ian says "Not all that data had significantly improved my personal life or understanding of myself. I found the value of the data in Scientology books so incredible as to dwarf the value of my 6 years of college. After my first Scientology course," he goes on, "I noticed an immediate improvement in my social life. For the first time, I could comfortably be with a member of the opposite sex and communicate relaxedly." He also made straight As in a post graduate course he was taking in addition to his Scientology studies and full time teaching job.

Several years later, after two years traveling abroad, he found himself $6000 in debt. With a $200 investment, he and two partners re-opened a bankrupt restaurant. In two years, he had paid off all his bills and earned enough for every technical course in Scientology up to Class IX Auditor plus enough to live on for two years of full time training.

SCIENCE OF SURVIVAL and DIANETICS '55! helped him most in his understanding of people in the restaurant business. "You meet all kinds. We had one dishwasher who even lived in a home for emotionally unbalanced people. I never had any problems with him, because I had enough data to totally predict him."

Ian has now finished the Saint Hill Special Briefing Course and is working on the Senior Briefing Course at ASHO. From Class V, he describes, "You get a terrific understanding of what areas a person is aberrated in, why, how you can handle these areas and why that handling works. You follow the development of Scientology and you see the reasons why Ron wrote each book."

Ian is training up to Class IX at ASHO and plans to be a professional Scientologist. "I consider Scientology is a priceless gift and the greatest thing one person could do for another is to introduce him to it."

Designer

Through her study of Scientology books and materials on the Saint Hill Special Briefing Course at ASHO, clothing designer Sioux Bushman has achieved a much greater understanding of her customers.

"I'm able to understand more precisely what my customers want, and so they're happier with my work," she observes.

Eight years ago, she had opened her own clothing shop in Berkeley. But lacking a good understanding of human evaluation, she had made a poor choice in a partner. The business failed. Closing it seemed the end of her dreams.

Finally, tired of being depressed, she heard about Dianetic training and decided to try it. Things began to improve. She began selling sewing machines, and after a short Scientology course in sales, quadrupled her salary in 3 weeks.

When she decided to train as a Scientology auditor full time, she took up designing again in the evenings. In August, 1975, she came to ASHO and graduated as a Class V Auditor last May. She is now training to Class VI.

It was coming to Los Angeles that put her Scientology knowledge to the test. She had no job, no customers, and knew almost nobody in town. Using the formulas in INTRODUCTION TO SCIENTOLOGY ETHICS, she rapidly got her business going very successfully! Recently she pulled in $200 of work in one day.

"I thought I knew it all before coming to ASHO," she recalls. "But I've learned so much here that I had not been applying quite right from the books before. My life has changed. I feel I can accomplish anything I want to – and the technology I've gotten from the Briefing Course is what I'll use to do it."
