EXPANSION

By L. Ron Hubbard

It is an empirical (observed and proven by observation) fact that nothing remains exactly the same forever. This condition is foreign to this universe. Things grow or they lessen. They cannot apparently maintain the same equilibrium or stability.

Thus things either expand or they contract. They do not remain level in this universe. Further when something seeks to remain level and unchanged it contracts.

Thus we have three actions and only three. First is expansion, second is the effort to remain level or unchanged and third is contraction or lessening.

As nothing in this universe can remain exactly the same, then the second action (level) above will become the third action (lessen) if undisturbed or not acted on by an outside force. Thus actions two and three above (level and lessen) are similar in potential and both will lessen.

This leaves expansion as the only positive action which tends to guarantee survival.

To survive, then, one must expand as the only safe condition of operation.

If one remains level one tends to contract. If one contracts one's chances of survival diminish.

This is easily observed in nations. Whenever one seeks to remain the same or to lessen itself it usually perishes. It need not seek only to expand its borders. It can also expand its influence and service. Indeed, the effort to expand borders in a nation without increasing a demand for its influence and products is a primary cause of war. If a nation expanded the demand for its influence and products it would expand without war. When a nation seeks to merely expand by force of arms and does not expand the demand for its products one gets a dark age or at least a social catastrophe.

Rome, early on, was in great demand for its social technology and manufacturing skill and only a cruel streak in her made her wage war to expand. Britain, for instance was ready to welcome Roman baskets and pottery and art and had been demanding them for nearly a century when Caesar's vicious ambitions actually wrecked the smooth progress of Rome by enforced expansion by arms in excess of the demand for Roman products. This was one Roman product nobody wanted – Caesar and his legions.

Psychiatry's product of further insanity was not in demand by the people but by the state which sought to crush people or at least hold them down. So psychiatry expanded by government regulation not by popular demand and so at this writing stands in danger of complete extinction, for its influence depends utterly on "expanding" into the legislatures and government treasuries and no expansion whatever of any demand from the public and no product except slaughter.

The Roman Catholic Church once had a healing product, by actual treatment and by relics and miracles and was in great demand by the public and eventually even the barbarians. But she began to fight progress in science and knowledge and her product turned into exported ignorance backed by autos-da-fe' (burning heretics) and thus ceased to expand and today is rapidly shrinking.

Buddhism, earlier than that, expanded continuously as it never sought new extension of territory other than that of learning. Buddhism failed in India alone because its monks became licentious, ceased to deliver true teachings and were swept up, most likely, in India alone, by the Muslim conquest of that unhappy country sometime around the seventh century.

Britain of the 20th Century actively sought to contract her empire and did so to the tune of internal economic catastrophe.

SINGLE PRINCIPLE

Thus it should be obvious that contration leads to death and expansion to life providing that one maintains a demand for itself and the will and skill to produce and deliver a product.

If as ours is, the product is very beneficial and if we continue to produce and deliver the demand is assured. In this we are fortunate. And we are also fortunate that try as they will no squirrel is ever able to duplicate our product since one variation (that of changed brand) leads to others and they promptly have neither product nor demand – that observation is itself empirical. No squirrel has lasted more than 2 or 3 years in the past sixteen years. And there have been many. That they squirrel shows enough bad faith to drive away the public the moment the public hears of the original.

Thus, providing we maintain the will and skill to produce and deliver we can expand and proper expansion that will continue is possible.

All our policy than is built on EXPANSION.

It assumes we wish to survive.

And it stresses the production and delivery of a straight non-squirrel product.

It is calculated to ensure a continued and widening demand by ensuring that product remains good and beneficial.

The technology itself is complete but it expands also by experience of administration of it and simplifying its presentation.

But to alter the basics of the technology will stop expansion because it is what we are producing, not what we are building.

We are building a better universe. It has not been a good universe to live in so far but it can be.

Our punitive force is our Ethics system and it exists to ensure the quality of the product and to prevent the blunting of demand for the product.

CORRECT EXPANSION

Expansion which when expanded can hold its territory without effort is proper and correct expansion.

Hitler (like Caesar) did not "consolidate his conquered territory". It was not possible to do so, not because he did not have troops but because he didn't have a real demand for German technology and social philosophy before conquering. Thus Hitler lost his war and fascist Germany died. It is almost impossible to consolidate territory where one was not invited in in the first place and force had to be used in order to expand.

One can remove a real suppressive by force to ensure demand will then build, providing he does not seek to force the product on the suppressive and all those around the suppressive.

The suppressive, as an individual, can be removed by force because he is an anti-demand factor using falsehood and lies to prevent demand from occurring. But one, in removing the suppressive, has to be sure one's own product and delivery are still correct and straight and in no way suppressive of anything but suppressives.

Further one must leave at least a crack in the door and never close it with a crash on anyone because a demand still may develop there.

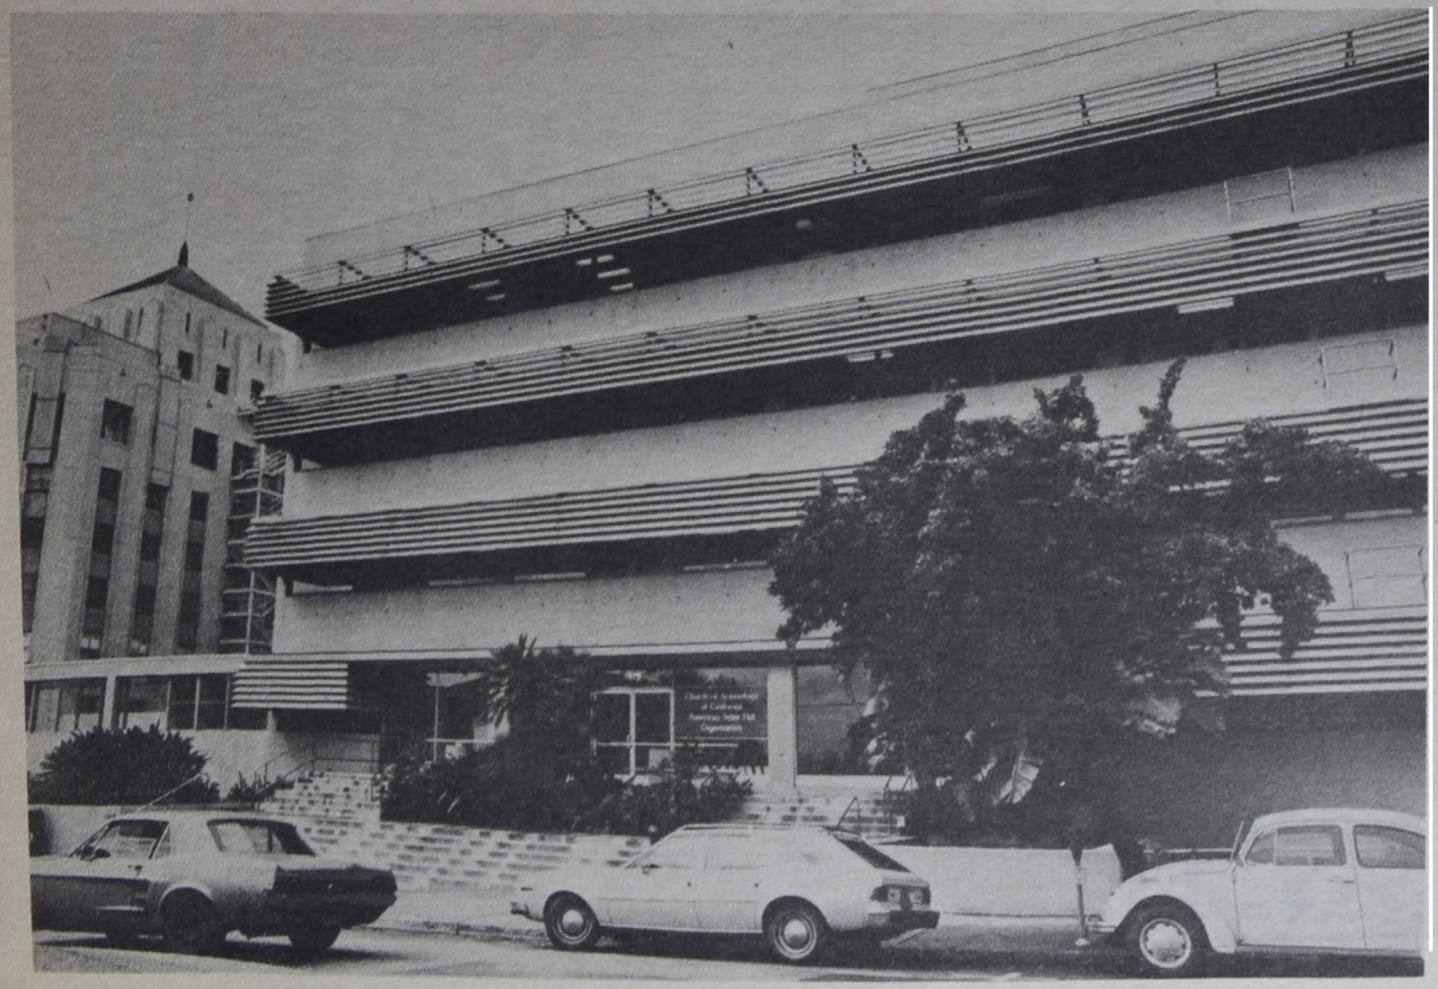

The only way to start a full scale revolution is totally and thoroughly slam the door. One must always leave a crack open. The suppressive can recant and apologize. The pauper can by certain actions, no matter how improbable, secure service. Etc.

In short, use force only to shut down false anti-demand factors. Yet leave the door at least a crack open in case demand without duress develops. Never finally shut off a possible demand.

You can stimulate demand. You can create it. But you may only comfortably and properly expand into demand.

Removal of a suppressive only brings a potential appearance of demand from the area he dominated. That potential, by some means, the best of which are good dissemination and service examples, must become demand before one can truly occupy territory.

ASHO's Grand Opening!

On March 12, 1978, the doors to the American Saint Hill Organization opened at their new home!

Laurel Watson, Ron's Personal Public Relations Officer represented Ron at the event. She relayed Ron's Commendations to all who contributed, it was a job very well done!

In 1968 ASHO was first opened. It was a small determined group of staff who had come to America from England. Now, in 1978 ASHO has grown to a large organization, and is ever-expanding in size and number.

Many students, and preclears helped on the nights of the history-making move of ASHO from it's old location to it's new position on the Bridge.

A large 6 tier cake in honor of Ron's Birthday and the new Center Span of the Bridge was shared by all.

There was music, cake, and a special showing of John Travolta's movie, "The Boy in the Plastic Bubble".

ASHO awaits you! Join the people who are moving up the Bridge, come to ASHO now!

Thus areas taken purely by force of arms can never be held by force of arms in the absence of demand for product and thus demand by the area for occupation and consolidation.

As we have a product that frees in an ultimate sense and de-aberrates there is of course an end to the game. But it is so far ahead, embracing a whole universe, that it requires minimal consideration.

Expansion requires area to expand into. And we are in no danger of running out of that.

If we were dependent as nations often think they are on boundary expansion on one planet, or into one planet's populations as companies think they are, we would have brakes on expansions due to territorial or population limitations alone. But we are not likely to encounter such barriers for a period of time so long we can consider our expansion potential as infinite – and are the only organization that honestly can so consider. We are not conquering land in the government sense anyway.

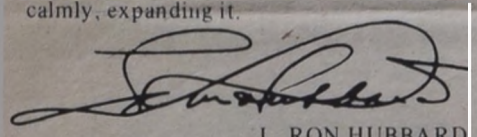

Scientology organisations are designed for expansion.

The ultimate product of Scientology is a universe that is decent and happy to live in, not degenerated and made miserable by suppressives as it has been. This is accomplished by the de-aberration of individuals and the prevention of blunted demand and re-aberration by suppressives and this is the method of expansion.

If in these early days of Scientology we have any troubles they occurred by an earlier imbalance of expansion.

Demand was created without handling suppressives which unequal expansion gave us a backlog of unhandled ethics in the society. All we need do is catch up our backlog in those organisational functions which were not expanded when they should have been and all will go smoothly.

Any time you do not expand uniformly with all functions you get an appearance of over-expansion by some functions. The best answer is not to cancel the expanded functions which over-reached but to catch them up by expanding the ones one neglected in support. You will have trouble wherever you cut back an expansion as that is contraction. The answer, within reason, is to advance all else to catch up to the expanded portion while still, more calmly, expanding it.

"A non-Scientologist is so surrounded by confusion that his present time is insufficiently clam for him to have any progress in the direction of OT. Training is definitely, definitely a part of the rout to OT. Definitely. This is something that it is not 'nice' to be a part of. This is something that is a vital part of becoming OT." – L. Ron Hubbard from Saint Hill Special Briefing Course Lecture of November 7, 1963.

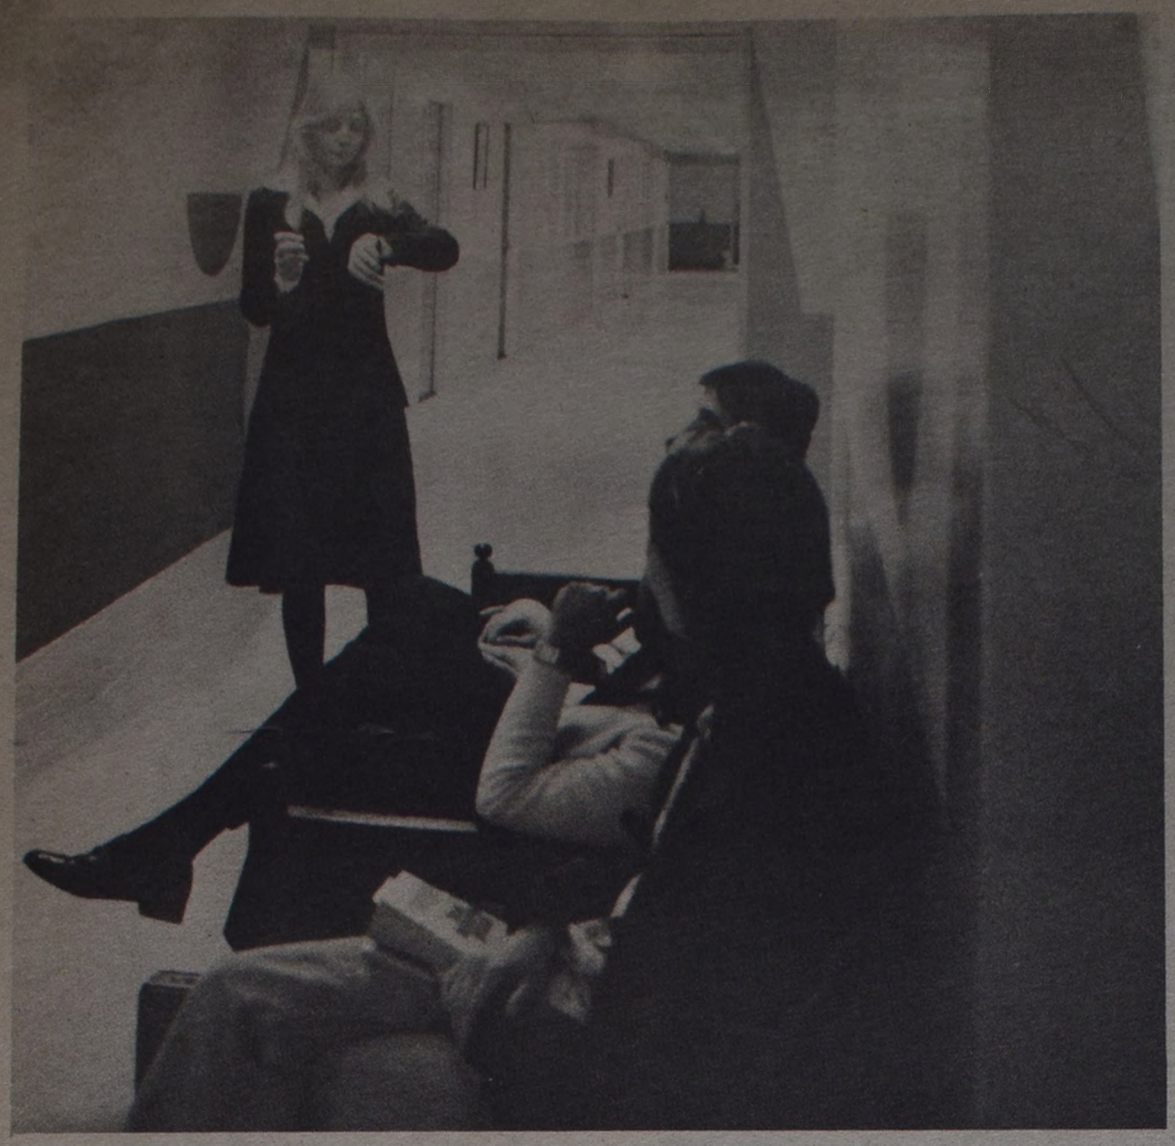

The ASHO Internships are the proving grounds of an auditor. Here the intern studies, does TR's, audits and audits and audits to a point where he is flubless. SALLY TATE, ASHO's First Class VI Graduate after the Move, auditing her preclear, Barbara Lewis.

ASHO Graduates First Class VI In New Home!

Sally Tate first started in Scientology in 1973. She was attending one of many lectures at the Los Angeles Church of Scientology when Seaton Thomas asked for a volunteer from the audience for a demonstration. Sally volunteered, and after a few minutes knew she had to know more about Scientology. She started the Communication Course soon after. She did her training at the Los Angeles Organization up to Class IV, and then she came to ASHO to do her Class IV Internship and the Expanded Dianetics Course and Internship.

In March of 1977 Sally started the Saint Hill Special Briefing Course. "I felt that after the Briefing Course I would be able to do everything my preclear needed, from beginning to end, and I was really looking forward to having that ability," Sally says.

So on March 16, just 4 days after ASHO's historic move Sally graduated the Briefing Course. "There are so many wins. My tech is better, my responsibility and ethics level is way up, and the tech to me is so much more accessible. With all the data on the Briefing Course you have a broader view of Scientology and what we are doing. It's a phenomenal expansion!" says Sally.

Sally plans to continue training at ASHO on the Class VI Internship, the New Expanded Dianetics Course and Internship to up date her application of the technology of Expanded Dianetics. Then she will go to the Stevens Creek Mission in Northern California, to apply what she has been learning, and knows, by auditing full time. She is currently receiving her processing on Power, in ASHO's New Hubbard Guidance Center.

"ASHO's staff are so fantastic! All are working toward the same purpose. It's so right – the new building plays a back ground to the standardness of the delivery of the technology," exclaims Sally.
