THE

BANNER OF ISRAEL.

A Weekly Journal

ADVOCATING THE

IDENTITY OF THE BRITISH NATION

WITH THE

LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

VOLUME XI., 1887.

London:
ROBERT BANKS & SON, RACQUET COURT, FLEET STREET, E.C.
F. W. PARRY & CO., 29, PATERNOSTER ROW, E.C.

Digitized by Google

THE NEW YORK PUBLIC LIBRARY
811959
ASTOR, LENOX AND TILDEN FOUNDATIONS

INDEX.

Articles by the Editor.

	PAGE
Ananias	407
Anglican Dominion in A.D. 2000	327
Anglo-Saxon and the World's Future, The	303
Anglo-Turkish Convention, The	237
" Dead and Buried	333
Annexation of Zululand, The	445
Are the British People Ostensibly Lo-Ammi Gentiles, &c.	240
Argument in Another Form, The	443
August Mother of Free Nations, The	501
Australian Squadron, The	197
"Believer's Almanac" Settles the Question, The	89
Bitterness of Invasion, The	349
Blessed Stewards of a Thousand Responsibilities	46
Blessing in the Midst of the Land, A	441
Blood-royal of the World, The	326
Britain, Russian View of Great	223
Britain's Greatness, The True Cause of	353
" Place in the Bible? Where is	425
" Strength—the Bible	344
BRITISH.—Vide General Articles:—
" Commerce	209
" Difficulties	273
" Empire 331, 360,	395
" " Vulnerable Points of the	229
" Fulfilling the Prophecies, The	462
" Nation, The (Sir J. Lubbock)	201
" Trade. Encroachments of	55
" Wealth	209
Call for Prayer and Praise	6, 97
Christ's First Sermon	271
Church, American, The	291
" Archbishop Lynch and the Roman Catholic	289
" ? Where is the Gentile	64
Coaling Stations on the North Pacific Ocean	205
Colonial Conference 161, 165,	281
" Empires of Britain	274
Comparative Criminality	263
Company of Nations Approach the Sovereign, The	221
Crater of a Volcano in the Midst of Israel, The	489
David's Throne in Jerusalem	206
Decimal Coinage v. The British Penny	342
"De Saigner à Blanc"	61
"Down Grade," The Rev. C. H. Spurgeon's	513
Earthquake, Another Great	118
EGYPT—Be Evacuated by Israel? Will	77
" British Continuance in	470
" " Influence in	261
" " Occupation of	336
" In Possession of	341
" Neutralization of	88
" Rule of the Righteous Nation in	373
" Salisbury, Lord, on	358
Emigrating, Wandering Race, The	345
Empire, Polyglot, The	437
" Route, The	438
" Silent Growth of the	393
" The Stately Daughters of the	381
England's Destiny	354
" Duty in the Event of a Great European War	222
English Churchman and St. James's Chronicle	114
Ephraim's Dispersion and Subsequent Restoration	198
Europe. The Infirm and Tottering Peace of	21
" Yonder Ill-Consolidated	509
Fact of the Resurrection of Our Lord, and of Lost Israel, The	364
Fads. The Strangest of Recent (Dr. Bolton)	334
FEDERATION.—Vide General Articles:—
" Brassey, Lord, on	492
" Imperial in Melbourne	351
" Joint Deliberation of all Parts of Israel's Empire	29
" Premier of New South Wales on	403
French Aggression	336
" Colonies	183
" Commerce	477
" Depopulation	184
" in Madagascar	389
" Revolutionary Instability	502
Foreign Bounties on Sugar and Shipping	503
Froude on the "Unsprung World"	214
GATES.—Vide General Articles:—
" Bermudas	286
" Caucasus	66
" Constantinople. How Nearly Lost 293,	296
" Delagoa Bay	357
" Fortifying the	117
" Geography of the	286
" Great Maritime Confederacy, and the	157
" Heligoland	91
" Home	359
" Messenger, The, on the	219
" New Guinea	497
" Open Continuously	45
" Surrender of the Mediterranean and Its	390
" Undefended	37
" New Australian, The	503
Gentiles whom God hath Cleansed, The	49
Geographical Exploration	367
German Colonies? Where are the	173
God's Royal Bounty to the Children of Israel	433
Hebrew Prophecy and its Fulfilment in the British People	318
" Scholar on Our Identity	92
Home Defences	133
" Rule for Wales	285
House of Judah shall Walk to the House of Israel, The 290,	343
How Our Identity Strikes a Learner	47
India. Abolition of Transit Duties	180
" and its Trade	53
" Rukhambai's Testimony to the Government of	209
" Why Israel Must Hold	149
India's Strange Stroke of Destiny	110
Indian Empire Grows. How the	486
Ireland. The Deadly Struggle for	189
Irish Resistance to Israel's Supremacy	397
" Rebels and the Rt. Hon. John Bright	519
Is the Knowledge of Our Identity Advancing? (Boyce) 440,	483
ISRAEL Conquers the Soudan by the Arts of Peace	309
" Governs Oriental Races. How	454
" Must Hold India. Why	149
" Remembering the Lord in Far Countries	126
" Under Hezekiah and Under Victoria	310
ISRAEL'S Emigration Returns	40
" Colossal Wealth and Power	474
" Commercial Interests during the "Great Earthquake Woe"	85
" Increase of Population	487
" Mistakes	216
" Road to the East	464
" Savings	144
" Security	502
" Supremacy Among the Nations	501
Jacob's Trouble	152
Jewish Race. The Bishop of Manchester on the	220
Jubilee, Her Majesty's	245
" Retrospect of Her Majesty's Reign	269
" Service in Westminster Abbey 194, 206,	227
" Thanksgiving—Prayers and Hymns	335
" The Bishop of Perth (Australia) on the Queen's	523
" Year Concluded, Our	517
July 4th, 1887	301
"Knowing . . . Your Election of God"	512
Law of the Land, The	234
League of Neutrals, The	469
Lender to Many Nations, The	140
"Light and Time"	230
Lighthouse, The	414
London Society for Promoting Christianity Among the Jews	317
Lord's Firstborn, The	52
Lord Jehovah Will Not Forsake His People, The	366
Madagascar and French Commerce	477
Marine Engineering	316
"Messenger, The" and E. Hine	262
Missionary Journey Round the World	463
" Society, The South American	266
Mission of Israel, The	280
Missions, What British-Israelites do for	158
Multitude of Nations	161
"Name of Jesus, The"	128
"Nation before Jehovah for ever, A"	408
Nation in the World, The Greatest	404
Naval Review at Spithead	325
Neutralization of the Suez Canal	413
New N.W. Passage	438
" Testament in Hebrew	240
Nizam of Hyderabad, The	421
"None of those men which were bidden shall taste of My supper"	405
Offer of the Gospel and of Salvation, through Christ, to the Jews, The	154
One Hundred Pennons	213
OPPONENTS, Clerical 103,	382
Clergyman and a Layman, A	200
Miller on Our Identity, The Rev. J.	181
Scornful	93
"Our Fatal Policy of Shilly-shally"	478
"Peace is in Every Statesman's Mouth"	69
"Peace! Peace! Saying"	134
Pessimist Rebuked, The	138
Population, Increase of	135
Possibility of National Disaster, The	349
Presence of the Poor in Israel	342
Prophetic Dates (Guinness)	182
Queen's New Title, The 168,	265
" Jubilee, The 121, 122, 127,	329
Race Physically Deteriorating? Is Our	418
Romans ix., x., xi. 51, 63, 71, 94,	142
Ruskin on Christian Travellers on the Continent	406
Russian Finances and the Coming Woes	125
" Invasion of India	421
Sabbath? Does British-Israel Keep the	141
" "Rest for the People of God" "There Remaineth a	270
Sacrifice of Thanksgiving, The	444
Salvation in Zion for Israel, God's Glory	405
"Sceptre shall not depart from Judah, &c., The"	479
"Seated at the Right Hand of God in the Heavenly Places"	417
Second Commandment, The	329
Settlement of Two Burning Questions	461
Ship-building	216
Small Band of Enthusiasts, The (Chief Rabbi)	337
Sons of God, The	288
South African Railway	429
Special Services in Westminster Abbey	226
Spirit of Lawlessness Now Abroad, The (Jashub) 109,	195
St. Paul's Four Times Repeated "No More"	241
Ten Tribes were Never Lost. The "Churchman" Propounds that the	49
"Thy Seed shall be as the Dust of the Earth"	287
Times of the Gentiles, The	72
Tithes and Disestablishment in Wales	480
Titcomb, D.D., The late Right Rev. J. H. 153,	374
Transvaal and the Gold Mines. The	190
" Conquered by Israel for the Lord	485
Two Great Facts in the Physical History of Nations	101
Universal Asylum, The	311
War of Giants, The	453
What the Lord Jehovah "Remembers and Forgets"	376

Digitized by Google

PAGE

What Place is there in the Divine Economy for Our Identity in the Present Dispensation?... 251
Wilkinson at Northampton, The Rev. J. ... 179
" on "Anglo-Israelism" " ... 111
Year, Our New 5
Zululand, Annexation of 445, 478

General Articles.

American Confirmations (E. P. Ingersole) 73
ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATIONS—
Bristol and Clifton 69
Glasgow 281, 282
Liverpool 56
Metropolitan, 57, 107, 145, 171, 185, 208, 231, 363, 426
Newcastle-on-Tyne 163
Norton 129
Sunderland... 447
Sydenham 459, 493
ANGLO-ISRAEL FREE DISTRIBUTION FUND, 20, 59, 98, 144, 171, 186, 226, 235, 282, 320, 370, 409, 431, 435, 451, 496
Anglo-Israelism 491
Anglo-Saxon and the World's Future, The (Dr. Strong) 303
Answers to Five Objections (Dr. Wild) 442, 457
Australia, Education in 242
Australians (The Hon. J. Service)... ... 504
Bassin on the Jubilee Fund. The Rev. E.... 121
Beecher on England & America, Rev. H.W. 106
"Blessed are the Meek, &c." 169
Bright on Gladstone's Welsh Speeches ... 235
Britain and the Coming War (Dr. Wild)... 313
Britannia the Daughter of Zion (Lowe)...422, 490
BRITISH AND FOREIGN BIBLE SOCIETIES (Vide Leading Articles) ... 448
" Liberty, Judge Johnson (Canada) on 94
" Yard Measure for India... ... 459
Buddhism in Christendom (from A. Lillie) 409
Canadian Loyalty 122
Canals in Palestine (Collins) 376
"Celts and Celtic," the Blood Royal of the World 326
Cheese of the World... 398
Christmastide 138
Coinage, The New 265
Constantinople (forwarded by C. E. P.) ... 146
Cook on the English-speaking Community 355
Cui Bono? (from Auckland, New Zealand) 491
Discussion at Eccles... 481
Duration of the Captivity of the Ten Tribes (Fyfe) 238
Earthquake, Riviera... 136
EGYPT (Vide Articles by Editor)—
" Exploration Fund (Naville) ... 286
" Our Position in (Anderson) ... 386
Emigration 279, 294
England and Russia... 320
Ephraim's Woe and Israel's Wealth ... 136
Eureka! (Lowe) 328
Extension of British Territory at the Cape 361
FEDERATION (Vide Articles by the Editor)—
" Company, The World's (Monk) 214
" League admits Identity Views The World's 74
" Prophecy and Imperial (Mason) 82, 89
"Galilee of the Gentiles" (Porter) ... 478
GATES (Vide Articles by the Editor)—
"Gate" Defined, The 69
Gate of Gates (Col. Hadfield) ... 34
" Gift of the (Shaw) 16
" Sir A. Cotton on the 131
Germany's Sundays (Sharp) 143
Gift of the Holy Spirit to the British Nation (Sir A. Cotton, K.C.S.I.)... 495
Good Time Coming, The 502
How I Came to See it as a Minister of the Gospel (Vince) 518
Ingersol's Conversion? Colonel 27
Israel in the British Isles (M. Waltham) 33, 38, 50
Israel's Training in Exile (Cavill) ...23, 30

PAGE

ISRAEL'S SCRIPTURE AND PRAYER UNION—20, 59, 99, 145, 186, 227, 283, 321, 369, 410, 450, 496
Jacob's Stone... 57
Jewish Colonies in the Provinces 290
Jews of the World, The 224
Jews in London, The 343
JUBILEE at Kadur, South India 276
" Coins 385
" England's (The Rev. R. Douglas, M.A.) 246
" Freemasons and the 186
" Fund 115, 121, 163, 203, 211, 243, 298, 331, 435
" Offering, Women's 353
" Sermon at Portobello 366
King of Israel and His People, The (Blore) 419
Language (Forwarded by Dr. Prowse) ... 490
Language and Ancestral Prairies (Blore) 184
Languages 448

LECTURES: —
Ancient Britons (Commr. Roberts) ... 33
Are the British Hebrews? (Lamb) ... 306
Are the British Israelites? (Osborne) 74
Australia (Dr. J. E. Taylor) 345
Bible and British Empire, The (Taylor) 67
Britons at Home (Commr. Roberts) ... 120
Copthorne (Vince) 137
Early History of the Inhabitants of Britain (Lamb) 174
English and the Lost Ten Tribes, The (Clarke) 305
Fate of the Ten Tribes (Bp. Manchester) 113
Free Emigration (White) 279
Israel in Britain (Commr. Roberts) 235, 369
Is the British Nation the Lost House of Israel? (Barter)... 41
"John Bull and Jacques Bonhomme" 66
Lost Israel (Dr. Grant) 278
Lost Israel (Macallister) ... 83, 139
Our Israelitish Origin (Marchant at Brighton) 315, 375
Present and Future of Israel, The (Dr. Grant) 294
Queen Victoria (Mason) 146, 177, 191
Right Rev. Dr. Barry at Ballarat ... 526
Skegness, Dr. Grant at 27
Ten Tribes, The (Wilkinson) 180
What the Scriptures Say Regarding Israel (Hickson) 80
Where are the Israelites? (Lamb) 160, 344
Where are the Israelites? And Where is the Royal Seed to King David's Throne? (Wade at Shoreham) ... 185
Locust Plague in Spain 339
London in the Jubilee Season (Rutter) ... 481
Lost Tribes, The (Ashwin) 78
Mediæval Sculpture (Prof. Middleton) ... 352
Monk, H.W., on Israel and Judah (Denny) 22
Money Value of Human Life 487
Musical Conversion, A (Rush) 449
Naphtali (Porter) 478
New Answer to an Old Objection (Dr. Brown) 383
Our Magnificent Inheritance 521
Our Rest, and Signs of the Times (Cassino) 378
People that Dwell Alone, The 225
The Alliance of the Central Powers ... 520
The Importance of Vancouver 525

POETRY:—
Atlantic Cable, Whittier on the 264
Big Shoe, The 232
Jubilee and Israel, The 370
Jubilee Ode (S. Australia) 252
Jubilee Ode (P. J. Le Creyt) 256
June 20, 1887 (S. Grey) 224
"Laus Deo" (Cox) 258
Mighty Britannia, Mother of Nations ... 257
Questions (J. Rutter) 497
Rhine, The River 75
"Shine, Mighty God, on Britain Shine" 335
"Thou Holy Paschal Lamb" 299
"Three-Foot Rule, The"... 128
Triumph of the English Language .. 338
"Tupper" on John Bull and Brother Jonathan... 233

PAGE

"When Britain First, at Heaven's Command" 387
Post Office Work 406, 426
Pottery Trade, The 95
Practical Value of Anglo-Israel Truth (Hider) 250
Prayer Offered by Edward VI. (C. C.) ... 339
Prophetic Medallion Portrait of Israel in the Christian Era (Mason) 472 PROGRESS:—
Cheltenham 482
Clapham 119
East Grinstead 129
Egypt 146
India 338
Leicester 129
Lincolnshire 27
Peterhead 224
St. Albans 305
Queen of Sheba and King Solomon ... 321
Queen's Letter of Thanksgiving ... 275, 318
Rabbi and the Ten Tribes, The Chief 299, 337, 347, 379
Regalia of Scotland 57
Russia and Abyssinia 225, 447
Russian and British Difficulties 273
"Sabbath Day, &c., Remember the" ... 182
Salmon, Only a Tin of 74
Saxons Asserted to be of the Jewish Race 418
Singular Identity, A... 365
Soap as a Civiliser 129
Socotra 41
"Sown in the Earth" 399, 415
Spirit of Negation and Spirit of Prayer, The (A German) 446
"Stone Cut Out of a Mountain, The" ... 449
Ten Tribes were Never Lost, The 49
TESTIMONY:—
Australian (Macallister) 83
Bishop of Labore (C. P. Bird) 320
Bond, The Rev. John 505
Canon Brigstocke, N.B., Canada ... 424
Cruden's 283
Liverpool Incumbent Admits the Truth of Our Identity 202
Manchester, From... 246
The Hon. P. Carteret Hill 524
Unwilling. On Shipbuilding and Marine Engineering 316
Thoughts Suggested by an Anthem (Dr. D. Brown) 455
Throne of David, The 482
Trade of the World, The 510
Tsar 200
Tupper and the Jubilee 210
Tupper on Our Identity 93
Weights and Measures 58, 66, 107
Wesley an Anglo-Israelite, John 321
Where and Who are the Israelites? (The Rev. A. Ben-Oliel) ... 169, 176, 206, 215
Work for the Winter Evenings (Rush) ... 417

Reviews.

Britain and Prophecy (Wright) 394
Britain in History, Ancient and Modern (Rogers) 434
Chronological and Geographical Tree (A. C. Bell) 146
Consecrated Life, A (Mem. of Bishop Titcomb) 346
How do I Know the Sabbath was Made for Man? 130
Light and Time 230
Message to the Church from the Nineteenth Century, A (Bishop Titcomb) ... 162, 170
My Jewels (S. Sharp) 346, 374
Reasons for Dissenting from the Anglo-Israel Theory (Capt. G. Palmer, R.N. 34, 41, 81, 97
Sabbath, The (W. Spouse) 475
"Seek, and ye shall find" (Crosthwaite)... 203
Smith on Our Identity, Dr. Alder ... 306
The Anglo-Israel Almanack and Diary for 1888... 515

Digitized by Google

PAGE

Who Are We, and What is Our Mission? (Harrison) 210
Who Are You? 115
Words of Help and Wisdom (J. Lawrence) 507
Work, A Thought of the Past, Present and Future (E. M. Rush) 498

Correspondence.

An Appeal (Willet) 427
Barnes on Jer. xxxiii. 17—26 242
Bolton, Dr. J. G. T.... 371
Boyce on Our Identity 483
British Society for the Propagation of the Gospel among the Jews (Ben-Oliel) ... 187
British Vote, The 323, 352
Call to Prayer for the Jews (Bassin) ... 187
Capital of the World, The New (Shaw) ... 42
Church Missionary Society (M.C.C.) ... 97
Church? Where is the Gentile (Pearse) ... 115
Children singing the National Anthem (Davies) 227
Cox, E. W. on Our Identity 483
Dawley Circuit (The Rev. H. Roe) 27, 68, 98, 131, 203, 267, 419, 527
Eastern Position, The (Watcher) 43
"Echoes," Forwarded by W. R. W. ... 459
Evangelisation of the Heathen World (C. F. and M. C. C.) 97
Federation, Imperial (Billing) 395
Flag, The Honour of the (Nelson)... ... 95
Frith v. Philo-Israel 35
"Gretta" on the "Future and Imperative Forms" in Hebrew 115
Greeting, America 339
" India 338
" N. S. Wales 338
Hopton on Believers among Primitive Methodists 147
Infidelity Confuted (Scoti) 107
Israel Intermarried, yet Distinct (C. E. P.) 75
Jewish Thanksgiving Day (Hatch) ... 411
Jews in Italy (M. C. H.) 243
Jeremiah xxxiii. (Barnes) 242
Knighthood an Identity (Wright)... ... 427
Letter to Father Augustine (Philo-Veritas) 242, 243
" An American Pastor in Israel ... 498
Locusts 35, 339
Marchant v. Wilkinson 355
Marchant's Work at Brighton 482
Moral Kinship (Wright) 411
Morley, J. D. (Cape Colony) 410
Name of Jesus, The (Sharp) 187
Neubauer, Dr. on the Ten Tribes (No. 797) 387
New Alliance, The (From the Fenian N.Y. Sun) 395
"Oceana" and the Jubilee (C. P. Bird) ... 291
People not Reckoned Among the Nations (Paulinus, N. Zealand) 147
Poor in the Land, The (Victorine)... ... 507
Prayer during the Jubilee Year (Bayley)... 75
" (Catford) 411
Queen's Descent from the Kings of Judah, The (Burry) 203
Queen's Accession, The (W. Carter) ... 507
Rabbi, Chief, v. Col. Hadfield, 347 (Wood) 379
Religion v. Education in Victoria (Leechman) 467
Royal Naval Protestant Reformation Society (Brooks) 68
Royal Salute (Carter) 427
Royalty and Loyalty (Barton) 323
Rugg's Fanlight, The Queen, Dr. 379
Rule Britannia (W. McVey) 467
Rush, E. M., on the F. D. Fund 435
"Sion" on Signor S. Carrara's Article ... 68
South India 59
Tara Hill, Exploration of (Denny) 68, (W. C. L.) 267, (Rogers) 322
"Ten Commandments" or "Law," The (Wells) 227
Testimony by T. C. 225
Titcomb's "Message," &c. Col. Hadfield on the Right Rev. Bishop 171
Throne of David (Lamed) 195
Titles of the Almighty (C. E. P.) 371
Turtle Island & the Panama Canal (J.G.T.) 43
Victoria, Australia (Gosden) 97
Who are the Irish (Gandy)... 411
Wonderful Relic, A (E. B.) 475

Obituary.

Almond, J. D. (Liverpool) 459
Baxendell, F.R.S., &c., The Late J. ... 450
Hall, John (Liverpool) 242
Longdon, Robert (Manchester) 177
Lord Iddesleigh (Sir Stafford Northcote)... 31
Pettigrew, John (Tynemouth) 339
Thompson, H. B. (North Shields)... ... 490
Titcomb, D.D., The Right Rev. Bishop ... 153

Anderson, John S.

British Vote, The 352
Great Britain, The Sister Isle, and Confederation 488
Queen's Letter, The 318
Religion and Education in Australia ... 242
Spanish Armada (300th Anniversary) ... 430

Cachemaille, M.A., The Rev. A. J. J.

Epiphany, Anglo-Israel Aspect of 86

Cavill, W. S.

Christian Dispensation, and Israel's True Place Therein, The ... 150, 159, 166
Is the British Throne and Dominion Safe? 277

Cox, V. M.

Remarkable Selection, A 13
Past and Present History, and Its Testimony to Our Identity With Israel 210, 217, 232, 238, 257, 264

Gass, F.

Biblical Criticism and Egyptian Exploration 495
Bounding Lines of the Grand Gallery, The 112
Christian Missions 43
Fifty Years of Righteous Tendency ... 256
Israel and Judah's Choice of a Head ... 199
Present Time in the Great Pyramid, The... 18
Racial Characteristics of Israel ... 297, 302
Remarkable Coincidences 514

Gott, John T.

Canaanite, The 384
Centre of the Earth and Centre of Population, The 75
Restoration Times 24
Plague of Egypt, The 272

Grant, M.D., Surgeon-General J. M.

Anglo-Israelism in a Nutshell 174
Biter Bitten, The 58
Conference Association 451, 455
Israel's Place of Safety 32
Place of Israel's Acceptance, The 65
The Stone Which the Builders Rejected ... 48
Throne of David, The Late Bishop Titcomb on the 192
Where is the Gentile Church? 155
Where is the Sceptre of Judah? 129
Who Were the Early Moravians? 394
Who Were the Galilæans? 506
Woman Clothed With the Sun, The ... 11

Hanan, B.D., The Rev. D.

Church Times, The 488
God's Purposes of No Interest to the Spiritually-minded 402
Horns of a Dilemma... 522
"How Soon"... 106
Jubilate 255
People Shall Dwell Alone, The 217
Principles of Just Reason, The 8

Hickson, M.A., The Rev. C. W.

Gentilization of the House of Israel ... 248
Secret of Britain's Greatness 319

Horner, Charles.

How the Work is Going Forward 527
Pyramid Date—1887... ... ... 33, 65, 72

L. P.

Canaanite, The 515
Extracts from the Life of Lord Shaftesbury 368
Is It a Coincidence Only 470
On Unbelievers 352
Pedigree of the English People 102
Two Thoughts 495
Vision of a Present Reality, The 312
Wilkinson, The Rev. J., v. L. P. 147

Reep, E.

Historical Coincidences 137, 153

Ridder, De L. E.

Has Shiloh Come? 62, 70

Rush, E. M.

Sowing the Seed 123

Rogers, Mrs. G. A.

Coronation Stone, The 371, 386
Coronation Stone in Times Ancient and Modern 498
Israel's Jubilee 253
Our Year of Jubilee 15

Shaw, H. R.

Blessed Are the Meek 266
Gift of the Gate, The 16

Smyth, Professor C. P.

Jubilee of 1887, and the Silent Revolution, The 25
Unique Religion 4

Taylor, J. G.

Ancient Watchmen Interviewed 352, 365, 374, 384, 392, 401
A Slight Misunderstanding... 10
Relation Between Language and Ancestral Prairies 119
Samuel Lee on the Ten Tribes (1669) ... 315

Thomson, J.

An Old Objection Under a New Phase ... 362
Ancient Inhabitants of Ireland 423, 431, 439, 456, 465, 471
Druidical Circles: What Were They, and What Their Use? 511
Freemason Foundation-Stone, Laying ... 377
"Mighty Nation, The" 104
Navigation Among the Ancient-British Phœnicians and Hebrews ... 304, 312
Our Position in Egypt 386
Spiritual and Literal Interpretation of Prophecy 17

Titcomb, D.D., The Right Rev. Bishop.

History Viewed in the Light of Divine Providence... 7

Walsh, G. N.

The "Seven Times" of Israel's Punishment &c. 350, 361

Wilmshurst, E.

The Name is Called Bamah Unto This Day 26, 31, 39, 54

Texts.

Gen. xii. 1—3 ... 104
" xxviii. 14... 287
" xxxv. 11 ... 161
" xxxviii.10—22 57
" xl. 10 ... 62
" xlviii. 19 ... 161
" xlix. 10 ... 479
Exodus xx. 8 ... 182
" xxiii. 31 384
Num. xxiii. 9 ... 147
Deut. xx. 6 ... 140
1 Sam. xii. ... 366
1 Kings x. 9 ... 321
2 Kings xvii. 23 33
1 Chron. xxix. 23 177, 191
2 Chron. xxix. 23 192
Psalm xxvi. 67... 376
" l. 23 ... 444
" cvi. 5 ... 446
" cx. 1—4... 417
Prov. xxvi. 5 ... 366
Is. viii. 22 ... 38
" xii. 5 ... 424
" xix. 24 ... 441
" xxvi. 2 ... 373
" xlvi. 12, 13... 405
" lx. 11 ... 45
Jer. iii. 18 220, 343
" iii. 22 ... 50
" xxxi. 10 ... 442
" xxxi. 36 ... 408
" xxxiii.17—26 242
" lx. 11 ... 45
" iii. 18 290, 343
" iii. 22 ... 50
" xxxi. 10 ... 442
" xxxiii. 36 ... 408
Ezek. xx. ... 54
Dan. ii. ... 449
Zech. v. 6 ... 313
" x. ... 126
Hosea i. ... 65
Matt. v. 5 ... 199
" xvi. 28 ... 86
" xxvi. 8 ... 336
Luke iv. 17 ... 271
" xiv. 15—24 405
Acts x. 49
Rom. ix. ... 142
" ix. 7, 8 ... 94
Gal. iv. 4—6 ... 288
Col. i. 13—15 ... 52
1 Thess. v. 3 ... 69
Rev. xi. 15 ... 350

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."

(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. XI., No. 523. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 5, 1887. [DOUBLE NUMBER, TWOPENCE.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
Our New Year—The Year of Joy and Rejoicing	5
A Call for Prayer and Praise on Behalf of Our Nation, British-Israel	6
History Viewed in the Light of Divine Providence. By Right Rev. Bishop Titcomb	7
"The Principles of Just Reason." By the Rev. Denis Hanan, B.D.	8
Unique Religion. By C. Piazzi Smyth, Astronomer-Royal for Scotland	9
A Slight Misunderstanding. By J. G. Taylor	10
The Woman Clothed With the Sun. By Surgeon-General J. M. Grant, M.D.	11
A Remarkable Selection. By V. M. Cox	13
Our Year of Jubilee. By Mrs. G. Albert Rogers	15
The Gift of the Gate. By H. R. Shaw	16
Spiritual v. Literal Interpretation of Prophecy. By J. Thomson	17
The Present Time in the Great Pyramid. By F. Gass	18
The Anglo-Israel Free Distribution Fund	20
Israel's Scripture and Prayer Union	20

OUR NEW YEAR—THE YEAR OF JOY AND REJOICING.

WE commence our New Year's labours at a most auspicious time. Her Gracious Majesty has elected that her year of jubilee shall be reckoned from and during the new and now current year, 1887, instead of from June 20th, 1886, which really ended the 49th, and commenced the 50th, or Jubilee Year of her glorious reign. However it be reckoned, there is no doubt that the New Year's number of our journal is issued to-day at a time of great public joy and festivity, of gratitude and thanksgiving to God by reason of the fact that our beloved Sovereign has been spared to see the 50th year of her wonderful reign, and has entered on the period when, according to the Israelite law laid down in Levit. xxv. 10, liberty, holy, godly liberty, should be proclaimed throughout the Empire, since it is a time of reconciliation and family re-union, a time to serve the Lord and fear Him, because He is the Lord our own God (ver. 8—17).

The commencement of a new volume of the BANNER OF ISRAEL leads us to look back upon the past; and with thankfulness to record not only God's dealings with us as a people during Her Majesty's most prosperous and happy reign, but how He has blessed us as believers in Our Identity, and in all that He has done for us as His people Israel during the short period we have been permitted to draw attention to the fact of the Israelitish origin of the British people and of that of their Hebrew, because Jewish, Sovereign upon the throne.

During Her Majesty's reign the Empire has grown enormously in area, in population, in wealth and prosperity. The population in 1837 was, in the United Kingdom, 25½ millions, now 37 millions, while the Colonies have advanced in a much more rapid manner; thus:—

	1837	1885
The Dominion of Canada ...	1,472,122	4,708,646
Australasia	134,059	3,278,934
Cape Colonies...	142,865	1,252,347
	1,749,046	9,239,927

The following figures give a wonderful view of the progress of the Empire since Her Majesty's accession. We quote them from the Imperial Federation League's special number regarding "Fifty Years' Progress."

	1837 Population.	1886 Population.
United Kingdom ...	25,600,000	36,325,115
Dependencies ...	98,538,881	206,701,135
Colonies	1,967,200	9,538,597
Empire	126,106,081	252,564,847
	1837 Area. Square Miles.	1886 Area. Square Miles.
United Kingdom	120,757	120,757
Dependencies	705,569	1,335,989
Colonies	1,428,579	7,106,174
Empire	2,254,905	8,562,920

Those figures speak for themselves, and show that the population of the Empire has grown during Her Majesty's reign, at the rate of 100 per cent., having exactly doubled in 50 years, while the area of the Empire has expanded four-fold! These figures reveal a state of things unparalleled in the history of the world! We cannot illustrate these facts better than Mr. George Noah Johnson appears to have done at the meeting of the Court of Common Council of the City of London, held at the Guildhall, on November 18th last; when he moved the following resolution, accompanied by observations which are quite in accord with our BANNER'S remarks on this and many previous occasions. He said, in moving,

"That this Court resolves to commemorate the jubilee of Her Most Gracious Majesty's reign and that the committee for carrying this into execution be a committee of the whole Court," that loyalty was part and parcel of the ordinary feelings of Englishmen, and more especially of representative Englishmen. But those feelings of loyalty prevailed in the City in an unusual degree, and in a far more intelligent manner than in many other quarters. Having those feelings they could not approach that subject without deep reverential regard, not only for the august lady who ruled over their great Empire, but for that Empire itself —an Empire which was supreme among the nations of the earth, which included one-third of the human race, and which united under one Crown one-fifth of the habitable globe. Their's were great possessions, of which they were all proud. They were held without rivalry and without envy, and while every other capital in Europe was acquainted with the step of the invader, in London alone the sound of that footstep was unknown. The benefit of humanity had marked the progress of the Empire's growth and the nation had conferred an enormous boon on civilization. Over such an Empire as the world had never before seen Her Majesty was called to reign at an unusually early age, but the Queen showed her appreciation of her great position, with its responsibilities and privileges, by calling to her assistance able, wise, and experienced counsellors, and during her reign the country had made greater progress than had been shown in any previous 500 years. They were able, therefore, to look back over the long period of 50 years during which the Queen had reigned with the greatest possible satisfaction and pride. The present was the jubilee year, and the Corporation ought to resolve with enthusiasm and unanimity to commemorate that great event. In moving the resolution of which he had given notice, he was quite certain that he was but expressing the feelings of not only every member of the Court, but of every citizen, when he said they all sincerely hoped that Her Majesty would live long to reign over a happy, free, contented, and prosperous people.

Digitized by Google

Such, then, are the facts which call for our nation's thanksgivings at the opening of the New Year whereon we have entered. It is only when we recognise that this greatness, population, Empire, and international beneficence are God's good gifts to our race because we are Israel, and because He has made such promises to His chosen ones, that we see how glorious and safe is our position. Then only do we realise that our blessings are part of God's covenants made with Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, and their seed, and so become certified that they will be ours for ever. Our functions, too, as God's messengers, servants, and stewards, are also everlasting, because He is Jehovah, and changeth not (Mal. iii. 6).

Our national prospects, then, at the opening of this new and joyous year, are bright in the extreme. We have promises to depend on which the world knows nothing of. Our spiritual and temporal gifts are covenanted blessings which none can rob us of. They are ours, as part of the great plan established in the counsels of eternity, whereby God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Spirit, before the foundation of the world, resolved that in the fulness of time proclamation should be made by this, the chosen British-Hebrew race, that "God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son that whosoever believeth on Him should not perish, but have everlasting life" (John iii. 16).

Our opening year introduces to the reader the eleventh volume of the BANNER OF ISRAEL. We re-commence our work in humble confidence that He who has prospered us thus far will help, and guide, and bless, the editorial management as well as the readers of this humble serial, even more notably than He has done in the decade that has just closed. We rejoice to know that not one of the band of men and women, like-minded with ourselves, who has helped us from the beginning of our work, has ceased to labour for and with us by reason of any misunderstanding or divergence of views upon our sacred subject. Our first (surviving) friends are still our present friends to-day; and our readers, we have reason to know, have multiplied exceedingly. We give God all the praise for this.

Our nation's position at the present moment is one of crisis. We seem to be on the threshold of great and startling events. The Eastern Question is hourly threatening to become critical, and the nations of Europe (all save our own) are armed to the very teeth awaiting the outburst of that great war woe which seems to be Russia's mission to hurl upon "Yonder ill-consolidated Europe," as God's "indignation" against the nations. Egypt is in our possession, but the French are urgent and instant with us to depart and let them take our place. Their policy seems to be "ôte-toi de là, que je m' y mette," a policy which we cannot further or assist, since Egypt is the Gate of our many Eastern possessions, as well as of those few France owns there. God gave us this Gate according to His promise in Gen. xxii. 17; but France on that memorable occasion, in August, 1882, neglected her own interests and let us take up that position which gives us to-day the right and title to stop in Egypt as its natural protectors. From that we shall not and cannot recede.

The idea of the Federation of the Empire which has been so greatly and grandly helped forward by the Colonial and Indian Exhibition of 1886, is now one of the pressing questions of the hour. It only needs the stimulus of a serious outbreak of war on the Continent of Europe to make it a necessity of our national existence. With these prospects, anxieties, and comforts, we commence our New Year's labours—confident that as God has guided our blind nation in the past, so is He conducting us at the present hour, "bringing us by a way we know not; and leading us by paths we have not known." We rely further upon the promise of Him who cannot lie, that He will make the present "darkness light before us, and the crooked things" of to-day, "straight" (Isa. xlii. 16). For these things (blessed be His Name) He has declared He will do unto us His people Israel; and He will never, no, never, forsake us, because we are His chosen ones.

We present our readers to-day, as a part of the New Year's Number, with a speaking likeness of our good friend and very able literary fellow-helper in the work of the BANNER OF ISRAEL, the Rev. Denis Hanan, B.D., Rector of Tipperary, in Ireland. No one can read his papers without admiring his ability and the clear way in which he constantly presents his views of Our Identity to his readers in the four quarters of the globe.

The publisher and owner of our journal has not only done us the service in question, but he has wisely judged that a jubilee volume of the BANNER would be incomplete without a portrait of our gracious Sovereign, the Queen of Israel, and the Empress of India. That engraving also, therefore, ornaments our pages to-day, and will, we trust, make our opening number popular, and favourably introduce our eleventh volume to the notice of multitudes who hitherto have not been our readers regularly. All such, we trust, will now become subscribers; and so enable us to realise with joy that our splendid truths are spreading to the glory of God, and to the benefit and blessing of our countrymen at home and abroad.

May God bless the Queen of Israel, and the Empress of her Heathen Empire—India! and may He give to every reader of the BANNER during 1887, a truly happy and blessed New Year!

A CALL FOR PRAYER AND PRAISE ON BEHALF OF OUR NATION, BRITISH-ISRAEL.

THE opening of the Jubilee Year of Her Majesty's reign seems to be a call to all Anglo (or British) Israelites to unite in thanksgiving and prayer to Almighty God for the following mercies and blessings. Thanksgivings are due—

1st. For God's blessings granted to us during the long reign of our good and highly-favoured Sovereign the Queen.

2nd. For our great national, spiritual, gifts.

3rd. For our many national, temporal, mercies.

Earnest prayer is called for—

1st. For the promised outpouring of God's Holy Spirit upon our masses, as described in Joel ii. 28 and Jer. xxxi. 33, 34, and other passages of God's Word.

2nd. That we may as a nation become a blessing to "all the nations, families, and kindreds of the earth," as promised in Gen. xxii. 18, Zech. viii. 13, and other Scriptures.

Digitized by Google

3rd. That the Lord Jesus may come quickly to reign over His people Israel, and over the world at large.

We beg to propose, and shall constantly remind our readers of our proposal, that Monday, June 20th, 1887, the day of Her Majesty's accession to the Throne, be set apart by every believer in our "Identity with the House of Israel" throughout the world; and that prayer and praise ascend up to the throne of grace on high three times during that day—morning, noon, and night, thanking the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ for mercies vouchsafed to us nationally in the past, and praying Him for those rich blessings promised, and yet to come, according to the prophecies.

THE EDITOR.

HISTORY VIEWED IN THE LIGHT OF DIVINE PROVIDENCE.

BY THE RIGHT REV. BISHOP TITCOMB, D.D.

ENTERING, as we do this year, upon the Jubilee of Her Majesty Queen Victoria's reign over the British Empire, we find abundant materials for reflection. Our past history has been a moving panorama of shifting scenes and progressive change. What pictures are recalled to our minds of old invaders ravaging our shores! What struggles between heathenism and the early soldiers of the cross! What periods of internal conflict, of civil and religious discords! What transformations in our language and literature! What improvements in art and science, in machinery and weapons of war! Above all, what development in trade and commerce, and extension in population and territory! No corresponding interval of time within the whole history of the world has ever furnished such a splendid march of events as that which has taken place in Britain between the day when Queen Boadicea "bled from the Roman rods" to the present moment, when Queen Victoria sits peacefully upon her throne, ruling as the Empress of India and as Sovereign Lady over Colonies upon which the sun never sets.

To the thoughtful mind this progress and prosperity of one nation in Christendom, so outrunning and overlapping that of every other, is very wonderful, more especially when, from a Christian point of view, it is not merely the advancement of one elect nation in wealth, power, and empire; but the distribution by that nation of the Word of God, and of true religion throughout the entire globe. For wherever our ships take our colonists, there we carry our Bibles, our prayer-books, and our worship. The Church and the State ride upon the ocean side by side.

In connection with this thought I may quote an American writer, who says: "The history of the world is gradually losing itself in the history of the Church, To the casual observer the whole appears like a chaos of incidents; no thread, no system, no line of connection running through it. One course of events is seen here, and one there. Kingdoms rise on the stage one after another, and become great and powerful, and then pass away to be forgotten; and the history of the Church seems scarcely less a chaos than that of the world. Changes are continually going on in it and around it, and apparently without much order; yet it is not a chaos. The Christian student, with his eye devoutly fixed on God, looks out upon the world and back upon the field of history, and takes a different view. Then, what before seemed so chaotic and disorderly, puts on an appearance of system and form. All is animated by one soul, and that soul is Providence."

These remarks are not imaginary. They are confirmed by Scripture. It is written, "Blessed be the name of God for ever and ever; for wisdom and might are His. He changeth the times and seasons. He removeth kings and setteth up kings" (Dan. ii. 20, 21). In other words, there is an invisible and omnipotent power at work in the changing roll of history, which is overruling the events of the world toward a final consummation of purposes that are infinitely wise, and which have been foreordained from the beginning. Generations come and go; they play their part in the great drama of life under a system of moral government which allows the perfect freedom of will. Nevertheless, unconsciously to themselves, they are working out designs of Providence which mutually tell upon one another, and which ultimately result in the fulfilment of divinely predetermined ends. Thus, when Joseph was sold by his brethren into Egypt, and there became a great power in the government of the nation, neither he, nor his brethren, nor their bereaved father Jacob, knew any part of the hidden wisdom which lay concealed within their long and painful separation. Yet the divine Mind so arranged events that when the presence of famine brought the family together again, the secret wisdom of an all-controlling Providence was explained in those ever memorable words of Joseph: "God sent me before you to reserve you a posterity in the earth, and to save your lives by a great deliverance. So now, it was not you that sent me hither, but God" (Gen. xlv. 7, 8). Thus faith has a golden key placed within her hand which unlocks many an apparent mystery in the events of Providence, albeit time may be required for observation before the discovery can be made and the key be properly used.

This march of history has gone on ever since the House of Israel was led captive from Samaria—an event which ruptured the covenant of God and scattered the House of Joseph among the heathen. Since that day the House of Judah also has been exiled; heathen Rome also has disappeared, and the Moslem Power holds Jerusalem; while in Christendom the Kelt, the Teuton, the Slave, and the Tartar have all been playing their parts in most diverse and complicated chapters of history. We ask, then, "Is it mere chaos?" Was it merely by chance that this country received of old on its shores the Saxon, the Dane, the Norman, and other kindred tribes who, with the previously-arrived Kelts, built up the history of our own country? Does the Word of God inform us of nothing to which these events were gradually leading up? Have we no key given us in Scripture which may help us to unlock the drift of these changing scenes? We read, for instance, in Deut. xxxii. 8, 9, that in all the boundary-lines of nations, and, therefore, in all their changing histories, God has had from the beginning a predetermined purpose to limit them, or to arrange them in a manner that shall be subordinated to the ultimate execution of His purposes toward the Hebrew people. When, therefore, we see both JUDAH and Ephraim-Israel equally expatriated from that inheritance which was given them by "an everlasting promise," we feel assured that history must in some mysterious manner be still working out the final destiny of Jacob.

With that conviction, then, we examine the lines of covenant promise which were given to Jacob, in order to trace, if possible, what this final outcome of divine Providence regarding Israel is to be. And, having waited till the 19th century, we trace an unravelling of the mystery. Analagous to the personal career of Joseph, we believe that his descendants have now become a great and united people in a foreign land, feeding the world with the Bread of Life in all languages, just as Joseph fed the people of Egypt with corn; and that, like Joseph in Egypt, they are also being prepared for recognition by their unbelieving brethren, and gradually acquiring means for securing them the repossession of their ancient land, under the banner of the cross of Christ. These are noble convictions and aspirations, adding piety to our patriotism, and linking our duties both in Church and State with the splendid visions of the future. Thrice happy those who can enter upon the year 1887 in a spirit of unswerving faith, and such as this!

THE SECOND VOLUME of the Monthly Comments will be ready next week. In paper covers, 1s.; in cloth, 1s. 9d. May be obtained, post free, on receipt of remittance, from the publishers, R. Banks & Son.

Digitized by Google

"THE PRINCIPLES OF JUST REASON."

By The Rev. Denis Hanan, B.D.

There are certain questions upon which men are justified in holding their judgment in suspense, or upon which they are under no moral responsibility to pass a judgment at all. With respect to such questions they may assume the position of the critic, and endeavour to find out the weak points in their opponents' statements, without being called upon to define their own position. But there are other questions upon which men are not justified in so doing. When acceptance or rejection must influence conduct, then we cannot evade responsibility by refusing to make up our minds.

Under which of these categories does the question concerning the Identification of the Anglo-Saxon race with Ephraim-Israel come? In order to define my position more plainly, and to fortify my statement, I quote from the Donnellan lectures for the year 1877, preached by the present Provost of Trinity College, Dublin. In his introductory lecture, he says, "If of two controversialists the one is required to assume a position purely defensive, while the other is permitted to assume a position purely critical, there can be no doubt that the second controversialist starts with an enormous advantage. Not, be it observed, necessarily an unfair advantage. There are controversies in which the rules of right reason absolutely require those who conduct them to assume this relative position. There are controversies which, from their very nature, must be conducted between critics on the one side, and defenders or apologists on the other. Still, I repeat, in any such controversy the disputant who is allowed to assume the position of a mere critic enjoys an immense advantage. He is not expected to prove anything. He is not required to show that the position which he defends is stronger than that occupied by his opponent, for he defends no position. His duty is simply to criticise the argument of his opponent, to point out its weakness, if it have any such; to show that there are difficulties which his opponent has failed to remove; to show, in fact, that the argument which he criticises falls short of full proof. In a word, the apologist is required to prove his assertion to be true, while the critic is not required to prove it to be untrue. If the apologist fail to do that which is thus required of him, the critic has but to point out the failure, and he will be pronounced to have been victorious.

"Now, there are controversies in which this is quite right, but there are controversies in which it is wholly wrong; and as the controversial principle which I have stated gives necessarily to one of the supposed disputants a very serious advantage, it is right that before such a principle is adopted we should seek to define the class of questions to which it is applicable, in order that we may determine whether in this class the controversy in hand be included.

"Now, in the first place, it is quite plain that there is such a class. In the scientific world we know it well. Thus, when a scientific man is presented with a theory of any natural phenomenon, he is in general perfectly justified in assuming a position wholly critical. It is in general his undoubted right to criticise the theory which is submitted to him, to state any scientific objections which may be alleged against it; to point out any parts of the complex phenomenon which it has failed to account for; and that without being required to advance any theory of his own. This is perfectly just, so long as we have to deal with purely theoretical science. You may refuse to believe that light is an undulation without being required to maintain that it is a projectile, or to hold any theory on the subject; and you may do this because in such a question the mind may, after hearing the evidence, reasonably assume any one of three attitudes—namely, belief, disbelief, or unbelief.

"But let the question pass from the region of theory to the region of practice, and the third of these attitudes usually becomes impossible. If the question which the theory professes to solve be a practical one, you cannot usually take up the position of unbelief. You may act as if you believed the theory to be true, or you may act as if you believed it to be false; but you cannot act as if you did not know whether it be true or false. So far as your actions are concerned, you cannot leave the question undecided.

"A single example taken from the world of science will sufficiently illustrate this principle. The physicist, who believes in the nearly spherical figure of the earth, is bound to maintain his thesis against all comers, without being entitled to require of any objector that he should produce a counter-theory. If he attempts to meet an objection by asking of the objector, "Well, what do you believe the earth's figure to be?" the other may fairly retort, "I do not know; I have no theory on the subject, and am merely exercising my right to criticise yours."

"But this retort, perfectly fair when addressed to a physicist, would have no force at all if addressed to a sailor. For he may quite fairly reply, "Then I cannot listen to you. I must decide the question; the exigencies of my profession require that I should decide it. I must have charts; I must be guided by rules of navigation; and neither charts nor rules can be constructed without answering the question, 'What is the figure of the earth?' That which I have to determine, therefore, is not whether the received theory be free from all objections, but whether it be more probable than any other theory which has been started. Scepticism may be possible to you—it is impossible to me."

"The principle contained in this answer indicates exactly the inquiry which we ought to make before we allow a controversy to be conducted as between an apologist on one side and a critic on the other. Is the question at issue of such a kind that the mind may refuse to come to any decision? is an attitude of pure scepticism possible. If it be, then the mere critic has a legitimate standing ground, and this mode of conducting the controversy is legitimate too. If it be not, the position of the mere critic is untenable, and the mode of conducting the controversy of which I have spoken should not be permitted by the apologist, if he desire to do justice to his cause."

We have now to enquire to which of these classes the Identity belongs. Applying the test defined above, we must ask, Is it possible to maintain with regard to this teaching an attitude purely sceptical? As in the case of Theism or of Atheism, "the question which a man's life requires him to decide is not whether the existence of God be proved by overwhelming evidence, but whether the system which includes the divine element or a system which excludes it be the more probable. For according to one or other of these systems you must live. If you say, "The evidence is not satisfactory, and I must therefore decline to decide the question," you profess to do what you cannot do. Your life will decide it. You may imagine your attitude to be one of philosophic scepticism—practically it is an attitude of disbelief; and if you assume this attitude in the face of any preponderance of evidence in favour of the system of Theism as opposed to the system of Atheism, then I conceive your conduct is not consistent with the principles of just reason." * In like manner, the question having been brought before him, an Anglo-Saxon Christian must live either as a believer or a disbeliever in the statement that the God of Israel has given the Abrahamic covenant blessings to the Abrahamic race, and not to a Gentile people; for the acceptance or rejection of the position must influence his acts in all the relationships of life; as a citizen of the world, nationally, politically; as a member of the Church; as the head of, or the member of, a family; as one laying hold of the covenants which were confirmed in Christ the Lord, or as one oblivious to them.

* "The Efficacy of Prayer," being the Donnellan Lectures for the year 1877, by John H. Jellett, D.D. London: Macmillan and Co. Dublin: Hodges, Figgin and Co.

Digitized by Google

Before I proceed to show this, another illustration may be permitted. There are various theories as to in what way, or to what extent, the Holy Spirit used or overruled the writers of the books of the Bible. With regard to such questions a purely critical position may perhaps be assumed, insomuch as that the holding one or other of them may not affect the life and conduct. But it is far different with respect to the question, Does the Bible contain God's revealed will to man? For belief or disbelief must practically give direction to life and life's work:

So also our recognition or non-recognition of the faithfulness of God as manifested to those with whom the covenants were made, must mould our conception of Him, and influence immeasurably our recognition of national and personal duty; and therefore, we cannot regard the Identity as a mere theory.

Is the statement that the Anglo-Saxon peoples are the people of Israel—God's first-born Ephraim—of such a nature that our belief or disbelief must influence our knowledge of God, our witness to His Word written, and our life and conduct? In the first place we find that the Anglo-Saxon race are in possession of the earthly inheritance which God covenanted to give to Abraham and his seed for ever. I do not now repeat the proofs of this statement; they have been given again and again in the BANNER OF ISRAEL, and many other publications. Manifestly any opponent who is unacquainted with them is in no position to deny the statement. Now, our race, so being in possession, must either, being Israel, witness to God's faithfulness, or, being Gentile, witness to His breach of covenant.

The infidel has made use of this argument, and decidedly requires an answer. Our personal knowledge of God must be seriously affected by the answer that we give. This is no theoretical subject; it is eminently practical, and all are bound to give it the attention that pre-eminently belongs to it.

In the second place, our witness to the Bible must be affected to an extent which those who have not studied the question cannot conceive. Israel and Judah are the theme of the Old Testament Scriptures, and very largely of the New Testament; if the facts of the case require us to read Judah and non-Israelite peoples, we practically undermine the veracity of that which we may conventually continue to speak of as the inspired Book.

In the third place, our own life and conduct must be influenced (a) as a citizen of the world. The man who remembers that God deigned to say, "You only have I known of all the families of the earth," and, "Ye are My witnesses that I am God," must act with a sense of responsibility which will very practically guide his conduct and affect the acts of others if he knows himself to be one of that selected people, and vice versa. (b) Nationally and politically, Reform Bills have given us all but manhood suffrage, and political power must be exercised either with a conscious desire to direct the nation's acts in accordance with the duties of the firstborn, or with indifference to that object. Now, there may be certain questions unaffected by this knowledge (although a little consideration must show that they can be very few). But there are numerous questions which it bears directly upon, and such must multiply. I can conceive of nothing less theoretical and more practical than these questions. Like the sailor, we are bound to make up our minds and to act. (c) As a member of the Church, we are either in the position of the original branches upon the stem, or in that of those that were grafted in when certain of the original branches were broken off (Rom. xi.). If any would say, What difference does it make? we fear that such objectors have made but a very cursory study of that remarkable chapter. The relationship of the Hebrew Christian Church towards the Gentile Christian Church, their oneness inasmuch as the latter has been grafted in among the branches which represent the former; their respective positions, so different from that which a Gentile graft has arrogated to itself: these and many other kindred questions require practical recognition, and an unwavering witness to the divine wisdom which has caused the New Testament to confirm all the promises made under the Old Testament. This is surely a practical duty, which we shall either do or leave undone. (d) As the head, or as a member of a family, the responsibility which the decision of this question places us under will hardly be ignored, even by those who are not convinced. The individual inheritors of the position and duties which belong to the members of the firstborn nation ("Ephraim is My firstborn," see Jer. xxxi. 9) must be either actually recognised and undertaken, or conscientiously held to be not binding. If Ephraim-Israel has been Christianised, and if he has been restored to power, Empire, wealth, and influence, there is nothing which will so tend to bring back again chastisement and loss as the non-recognition in the family of the duties which the inheritance involves.

The sailor must have his chart, and his rules of navigation; it is but little use for us to point to a map such as that which was shewn in the Colonial and Indian Exhibition, whereon the magnitude of the Empire was seen, unless the especial duty which that Empire has to perform for the world's good is recognised as our rule. If Israel's sons are to be made princes (rulers) in the earth, they must learn of God's purpose and of their calling while under the shelter of their homes.

We may decide that God never purposed to have a first-born tribe, nation, race; or we may decide that He has withdrawn from His promises to that race; or we may decide that he has transferred the covenant promises to a pure Gentile people; or we may decide that the race in possession of all the promised temporal as well as spiritual blessings, are the descendants of him to whom the promises were made. But, whatever we decide, our lives, our conduct, our duties—national, ecclesiastical, personal—must be affected, influenced, shaped, thereby. This is a subject so eminently practical that it cannot be treated as if merely theoretical, and we cannot accept the position of "apologists," or mere defenders. We can no more theorise concerning the revealed purpose of God than we can theorise concerning the existence of God. The responsibilities and the duties of Ephraim-Israel must be either accepted and performed, or rejected and repudiated, and if the latter be the reader's choice, we repeat the words before quoted. You may imagine your attitude to be one of philosophic scepticism—practically it is an attitude of disbelief, and if you assume this attitude in the face of any preponderance of evidence in favour of God's faithfulness to Abraham and his seed for ever, as opposed to the theory that ignores His promises to Israel, then I conceive your conduct is not consistent with the principles of just reason.

UNIQUE RELIGION.

By C. PIAZZI SMYTH, ASTRONOMER-ROYAL FOR SCOTLAND.

ON almost all sides in polite society is a demand arising in the present day for instruction, and a degree of guidance amounting to cramming, in the new science, so-called, of "comparative religion." So that from the older universities, hitherto considered the peculiar seat of orthodox Christianity, according to either the Anglican or Scottish Established Church, and their ancient chairs of long and compulsory courses of far other kinds of lectures, down to the occasional single or double lectures of loud-mouthed orators in public halls—is it now the fashion to take some one or another Biblical doctrine, or record, or historical fact, and discuss it in this new comparative manner: and that is generally to shake it up, in a mere mechanical way, in a dark bag, together with a number of very petty details derived from other religions, more or less modern, more or less positively of human invention, and more or less positively idolatrous,—and then to declare that the one Biblical fact examined (generally a small one) is a mere variety of what man has always been inventing for himself, whenever he thought he was in need of anything of the kind.

Digitized by Google

The most recent of these cases is one that occurred last week, no further off than in a university not a hundred miles from Edinburgh, where an Oxford professor of repute, dilated most ingeniously in a small way on both the temple of Solomon and the Parthenan of the Greeks. I have indeed, elsewhere, seen the commencement of a noble memoir on Solomon's temple, showing by geometrical calculations the most striking and intellectually suggestive peculiarities ever found in any building. But on this late occasion, the learned doctor, without alluding to one of those features, made out that each of the two edifices was nothing more than the simplest outcome of the artistic and æsthetic qualities of the minds of the people amongst whom it was erected.

But the longest list of parallels between God's Christian religion, and the Mohammedan, Hindoo, Budhist, Persian, Phœnician, and I know not how many more religions besides, and in almost every item that could be culled for the first, from the beginning of Matthew's Gospel to the end of John's Revelation, was contained in a little book published in London last year on "The Mahdi"; then figuring so largely on the Upper Nile; but now where is he?

So completely, however, was the Christian religion, as hitherto taught and held by most of the Churches deprived of many of its cherished specialities, when thus "brayed up in a mortar," amongst fragments of all other religions, some ancient, some modern, or medieval at the utmost, by the new method of treatment, that I looked in wonder for the name of the author! Happily there was no British signature to it; the work being only a translation from the French, but of a French Atheist of the most confirmed type; and a standing example of what the new kind of researching into, and pronouncing on, religions is amazingly apt to end in.

Wherefore it instantly struck me how admirable both in itself, and exactly suited to these times, was the idea which the late Rev. F. R. Glover deduced from the Biblically sacred and scientific theory of, and its findings at, the Great Pyramid; when he emphatically declared, "Here is the very point to bring before our misled fellow-subjects in India, whether Hindoo or Parsee, Budhist or Mohammedan—viz., while you say that your religions were founded among you by men who were incarnations of God, which of them had his coming prophesied in an enduring and gigantic stone monument in the centre of the earth's inhabited surface, two thousand years before it took place, as we cans how still was the case with regard to Jesus Christ in the Great Pyramid; where also we read of His second coming in power and great glory in the years rapidly approaching."

Mr Glover's idea was grand and true; but it came too late for that worthy man, who was then far too aged to become an efficient missionary in a new campaign against the heathen. And, indeed, he had already accomplished his appointed work in life, honour too superabundant for any one man, by setting forth the unbroken genealogical connection between Queen Victoria on the throne of Great Britain and the line of David on that of Jerusalem, through Tea Tephi, daughter of Zedekiah, flying from the sacred city when surrounded by the armies of Nebuchadnezzar, but to become Queen of Ireland and crowned at Tara, as well as in her following line both in Scotland and in England — accomplishing thereby and setting forth the perfect truth of so many of the Biblical prophecies concerning the promised endurance of the line of Jerusalem's greatest human king.

All this evidently formed in itself one of those vital points, and holding turns for the divine origin of Biblical religion, which the comparative religioners would fail in matching elsewhere. And another, perhaps, still stronger case, at the same time that it adds completeness to the above, is the new established Identity connection of the entire British race with the Israelite kingdom of old. For when and where was there a nation lost to history and to sight so completely, but so exactly according to previous prophecies—and then again recovered so perfectly, after a lapse of 2,500 years, and found in possession of world-surpassing wealth, honour, and power—but also exactly as foretold in the same ancient Hebrew Scriptures long before the loss itself took place.

This fact in itself is worth any number of platform lectures on comparative religion, or religion treated in the degrading manner of that very small science, "comparative zoology." And it is not ever alluded to, I presume, by any of the fluent comparative orators at civic halls, because they cannot find anywhere amongst any other people or in any age, any case to make comparison with it; and thereby lower its intrinsic importance in the records of both heaven and earth; or the chronicles of God's wonderful dealings with mankind; and His merciful methods of leading His people still out of worse than Egyptian bondage, and by ways they knew not of—scientists of a certain kind though some of them may have been.

A SLIGHT MISUNDERSTANDING.

By J. G. Taylor.

It is now becoming clear that Balaam was one of those men whose excellencies are not appreciated during lifetime, and whose genius cannot be adequately estimated until after the lapse of many ages. When alive he endured even the contradiction of his ass, ever since which event he very properly sank in general esteem; but of late years he has sprung into marvellous popularity, and bids fair to eject the prophets of Israel from their enviable post as chief exponents of God's purposes concerning that nation. Indeed, if the exploders of the Identity be allowed to speak for the world of wisdom (and they usually do so), this turn of fortune's wheel is already accomplished, and Balaam's priority is fully assured. Nor is the cause of this sudden reaction far to seek. It must be evident to the most superficial student of Scripture that Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, and other such minor prophets, are much too lenient with Israel, and especially with they of the Ten Tribes. Their allusions to future power and prosperity in store for Israel are too frequent, and, what is perhaps worse, too plain. While reading their books it is difficult to avoid the impression that Ephraim was somewhat of a favourite with them, and that, in spite of his misdemeanours, they had a decided reluctance—amounting, in fact, to an absolute refusal—to disinherit him, or destroy him from off the face of the earth. This is not as it ought to be, if the commentaries are correct, and what is the use of a commentary unless it is correct? Besides, in this particular instance it is imperative that the commentaries should be correct. "Curse me, Israel," was the cry of Balak, and it finds a sympathetic echo in the heart of the modern Moabite, whose possessions are once more threatened with invasion at the hands of Israel. Balaam is again, therefore, dragged from his seclusion, and hurried to the hill-tops, in the hope that peradventure he may curse them from thence.

It is extremely rare that a discussion takes place on the subject of our oneness with Israel but the son of Beor is led forth to announce that "Israel had to dwell alone, and not be reckoned among the nations." This, we are informed, exactly describes the condition of the Jews, but is in total disagreement with that of the British, so that the alleged identification is illusory, and our attempt to discover the Israel of prophecy in the England of to-day becomes childish. Those who argue thus are not altogether blamable for distorting the passage into this extraordinary shape, as commentators have paved the way for it by applying the prediction to the actual state of the Jews. In their "explanatory notes" they affirm that the prognostication is being wonderfully fulfilled in the Jewish race, and this is repeated by hundreds of our opponents with all the well-known intelligence of the parrot. But, in common with the expositors, are they not making a serious mistake, and committing themselves to a grave perversion of Scripture? We are often accused of wresting the Scriptures to suit our nefarious purposes, but our poor exploits fade into insignificance when compared with this audacious proceeding.

Digitized by Google

It is quite true that the Jews dwell alone, but in what sense? Certainly not in the sense that Balaam foresaw when he said, "How goodly are thy tents, O Jacob!" They dwell alone because they have been driven into solitude by persecution, ridicule, opprobrium, and infamous enactments. The hunted stag dwells alone, away from its fellows, not, however, because it is a stag, but because it is hunted. And the Jews dwell alone, not because they shun or spurn society, but because society has spurned them, alike in autocratic Russia and democratic America. When the Jew, by virtue of his wealth or achievements, is able to break through the prejudices of his Gentile neighbours and command their respect, he does not dwell alone. He mixes freely with them, and takes his due share in public affairs. But the mass are despised and eschewed by the Gentile nations, compelling them to dwell alone, whether they will or not, and none can question that this is the direct outcome of the curses. It is equally true that the Jews are not reckoned among the nations, but for the obvious reason that they do not constitute a nation, lacking a land, laws, and rulers of their own; wandering in all countries, obeying all codes, and bearing arms against each other in the military forces of their oppressors. This, also, is the result of the curse; and do our opponents really suppose that these fearful calamities are a fulfilment of Balaam's utterance? If so, they egregiously misapprehend the spirit of the prophecy. They forget, or do not understand, that Balaam's parable is, from end to end of it, a blessing, and those who can see anything in the nature of a blessing in the present situation of the Jews must have very strong imaginations. If we were to tell the Jew that he was wonderfully fulfilling the blessings, he would probably be surprised to learn it, and would feel that the fulfilment was undoubtedly wonderful, whatever else might be said of it. To assign this prediction to the Jews is thoroughly unscriptural, for the Jews are under the curses, and how can they be under the curses and at the same time be under the blessings? If the prophecy is reflected in their modern impotent and afflicted condition, then Balak has triumphed after all, for the apparent blessing proves to be a grievous curse. But God, Balaam, and Balak concur at least in this, that the seer gave expression to what was an unalloyed blessing. God declares, "Thou shalt not curse the people, for they are blessed." Balaam expostulates, "I have received commandment to bless, and He hath blessed, and I cannot reverse it." Balak, too, was more shrewd than our opponents, for he exclaims: "I called thee to curse mine enemies, and behold thou hast altogether blessed them." The disbelievers in the Identity must be sorely pinched for material when they have to lay hold of a blessing and twist it into a curse, and this is the more remarkable when (as they say) the whole Bible is on their side.

"Dwelling alone" is, we should think, a parallelism with "not being reckoned among the nations;" but, be that as it may, what the prophecy indicates is signal national pre-eminence. And although it cannot, with the slightest show of logic, be applied to the social ostracism of the Jews, it may refer in a secondary manner to national and geographical seclusion such as that exhibited by the British. But just as Saul stood alone in Israel, rising head and shoulders above his compeers, so the idea of conspicuous elevation is the central thought of Balaam's prophecy. "His king shall be higher than Agag, and his kingdom shall be exalted." The character of Israel, as portrayed in the entire parable, might be embodied in the single word "unique"—unique, not in sufferings, but in relation to God and in grandeur of destiny. And unique is the word written over the career of the British realm. Its providential deliverances, its impregnable strength, its gigantic size, its colonising faculties, its unexampled wealth, its owning the ends of the earth, its family of nations, its missionary efforts, and other distinguishing features, separate it with incisive lines from all past or existing monarchies. And the peculiarity of the case is that they are Israelitish features. If this were not so, the circumstance would lose its weight; but that they are distinctively Israelitish traits is the essence of our contention, and, while this contention has been lavishly sneered at, it has yet to be refuted.

It may be demurred that the precise rendering of Num. xxiii. 9 is that Israel "among the nations shall not reckon itself;" but instead of impairing the argument, this version lends additional point to it. For, as Fauchet observes in his "Studies on England," "Every man born in Great Britain believes himself to belong to a privileged race; he feels that this race has received as its portion, or has conquered, riches, tradition, order, practical skill, roads, canals, railways, docks, vessels, Colonies without limit, institutions of credit; and he says in his heart, There is nothing to be compared to me under the sun." He continues: "The Britannic Empire is, without contradiction, the greatest curiosity that exists in our day. It is the dominant personage on the scene, that which we first perceive as soon as the sight can embrace an horizon of any extent; you will in vain attempt to turn your eyes from it; the phantom, once present to your gaze, grows in spite of yourself, overwhelms it, and follows you everywhere." Here the Frenchman confirms both interpretations. In the former quotation he tells us that the British Islanders do not class themselves with the rest of nations. In the latter he confesses that they cannot be classed with them, and sees in the Britannic Empire a prodigy that transfixes the attention, moving everywhere and visible everywhere, like the sun in the firmament. Our solar system boasts of numerous planets, but it has no room for two suns, and there is as little space for two Englands on the stage of history. Israel, truly, dwells alone, and is not reckoned among the nations.

THE WOMAN CLOTHED WITH THE SUN (REV. XII).

BY SURGEON-GENERAL J. M. GRANT, M.D.

I HAVE received a letter with reference to a paper on "The Ancient of Days," which I lately contributed to the BANNER OF ISRAEL, in which my correspondent said that he had long maintained in opposition to the usual interpretations, that the woman clothed with the sun, of Rev. xii., typifies Great Britain. The crown of twelve stars he regards as the Colonies; the moon under her feet as the Mahommedan power subject to us; the man-child as the Bible translated into the vernacular; and the wings of the great eagle as the sails of the ships which carried the "pilgrim fathers" to America. I could not accept his interpretation in detail for reasons which I stated to him, but I examined the commentators as far as I had access to them with the same result, and I am now disposed to accept his view that the woman represents Israel or Britain, but upon different ground than those on which he has formed his opinion.

None of the commentators offer any explanation of what is in reality the sign or wonder in heaven, that is to the heavenly host; the fact of the woman being with child; and their interpretations of the man-child are as conflicting as it is possible for them to be. Scott, following Bishop Newton, supposes it to have signified the Emperor Constantine, and objects to the interpretation of Faber that "the mystic Word of God is described as the Son of the Church because it is the incorruptible seed from which all true believers are born," on the ground that it makes the "mystic Word" of God the Parent, and not the Son of the Church. I will examine this interpretation by-and-bye; but in the meantime I may remark that the view of Bishop Newton, which Scott adopts, that the man-child must mean Constantine, who delivered the woman, or Church, from the persecutions of the pagan emperors who had preceded him, is open to the same glaring objection that it reverses the natural order of things, and makes the child deliver the mother instead of the mother the child. A woman is delivered by her own strength and effort; and as we do not read of the intervention of a mid-wife in this case, I fear that we must put the Roman emperor out of court.

Digitized by Google

It would be an amusing spectacle if we could remove the shade of sadness that overspreads it, to see the lights of our universities, and the stars of our theology in full and common cry on a wrong scent; calling a nation a church, and insisting upon an allegorical interpretation of passages of Scripture which admit a literal interpretation only; but at the same time wrangling for a literal rendering of such passages as the one before us, which are evidently allegorical, and so landing themselves in a slough of despond whether they adopt the figurative or plain meaning of expressions which very often have no obscurity except what they themselves impart to them.

Dean Alford ("New Testament for English Readers") tosses the views of Bishop Newton and Mr. Faber aside with equal contempt, and although he admits that the woman, the mother, cannot be the Virgin Mary, he insists that the man-child born of her must be the Lord Jesus Christ; the crown of twelve stars he calls the twelve patriarchs; and the woman, according to him, represents in part at least, the Old Testament Church. To get himself out of this hopeless confusion, he tells us that this twelfth chapter of Revelation is descriptive rather than prophetic, although the inspired apostle who wrote it says that the whole Book is a prophecy, or revelation by Christ of things which must shortly come to pass; and things, therefore, which can have no possible connection with Old Testament times! Alford is very positive on this point, so much so that his words are worth quoting. He says:—"And she bore a male child who shall rule (literally shepherd, or guide) all the nations with a rod of iron." "These words," he continues, "copied verbatim from the Septuagint version of the Messianic in Psa. ii., leave no possibility of doubt who is here intended. The man-child is the Lord Jesus Christ, and no other."

With all due deference to such a very high authority I venture to submit that ruling with a rod of iron, and dashing in pieces like a potter's vessel, seems rather an unusual way of "shepherding;" and it is remarkable that the Dean, starting in such complete harmony with his brother expositors on the application of this so-called Messianic Psalm to Christ alone, should be led into such hopeless antagonism to them about its further application to the passage under review. We have ventured to suggest that this Psalm should be applied not to Christ only, but to Christ and His people Israel, and although our interpretation has been branded as blasphemous (!) it is necessary for us to adhere to it, because unless we recognise on the one hand the close and intimate union which exists between Christ and His people Israel; and on the other, the immeasurable distance between them, it is impossible that we can understand any prophecy either of the Old Testament or the New. The words of this Psalm as rendered in the Revised Version, are, "Ask of Me, and I will give thee the nations for thine inheritance, and the uttermost part of the earth for thy possession. Thou shalt rule them with a rod of iron, and dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel." The word thee is an interpolation; but let it stand as meaning Christ the Son. The sense is not materially affected whether we reject or retain it, but it is different with the word "for," which may mean either that the heathen are to be, or become the inheritance of Christ, which is the meaning generally attached to it, or that they are to be given to a people which is in some special sense His inheritance, that is to a people deriving its claim from a federal union with Him so intimate that what belongs to the one belongs to the other, which is our interpretation. Now against the former of these interpretations it must be stated that Christ could not possibly inherit the heathen or nations which were His by the act of creation, and in favour of our interpretation we contend that Israel is called the Lord's inheritance throughout the Old Testament writings; and Psa. cxi. gives an interpretation of Psa. ii. which sets, or should set, controversy at rest by declaring that God had shewn His people the power of His works by giving them the heritage of the nations. And with regard to the dashing in pieces of the nations, we do not find that stated as being the personal work of Christ in any part of the Bible, but we do find it most clearly stated as the work of Israel, "His battle-axe, and weapons of war." If it be objected that Israel is Christ's by creation as well as the Gentiles, the answer is that, as their Kinsman, He specially redeemed them under the terms of the Levitical law, which did not apply to Gentiles. He bought them as a people eighteen hundred years ago, and those of them who have been born since have become His by generative succession, or inheritance in virtue of that purchase, so that they may be called with equal propriety His "inheritance," or His "possession."

Leaving to others who have more inclination for it the hopeless task of reconciling the commentators, and rejecting what appears to be too fanciful in their interpretations, as well as in that of our friend whose letter has suggested this paper, I will endeavour to extract from both an interpretation of this passage of Scripture which may meet the requirements of all sound interpretations of prophecy—viz., to harmonise every detail of the events predicted with what has passed, or is passing in the world around us; and with this view I will consider:—

1st.—The wonder, or sign in heaven. The commentators ignore this wonder altogether, as I have before remarked, although it has an obvious and important relation to all that follows. The mere fact of a woman being with child would be no cause of wonder, either in heaven or earth, so that we must look for something special in the surroundings of this woman, and the circumstances of her conception; and there is only one event in the whole course of the world which affords a clue to guide us in our search. This event, which is clearly foretold by the prophets, but ignored by theologians and historians alike, is the reception of Christianity, first by the twelve Galilean apostles, and afterwards by the whole outcast House of Israel, of which they were the chosen representatives, for we must always remember that they were not Jews. That a people so long cast off from God's favour, and lost to human ken, should receive Christ and become the heralds of His salvation to all the world, is described by St. Paul in his epistle to the Ephesians as a mystery, or wonder, which had been kept concealed for ages, but was now (in his day) revealed to the holy apostles and prophets (or teachers) by the Spirit. Our friend and fellow-labourer, the Rev. R. Douglas gives this interpretation of the mystery so often referred to by St. Paul, and it certainly appears to afford a clue to the "great wonder" in heaven which was revealed to John in Patmos.

2nd.—Such having been the conception, what must the birth have been? Evidently the Gospel; "the mystic Word of God," as suggested by Faber; the testimony of Jesus as embodied in the confession of faith by St. Peter, of which our Lord said that it was the rock on which He would build His Church, so that the gates of hell should not prevail against it; the labour-pangs being the witness for Christ which the woman (the nation, not the Church) had been striving to deliver to the nations around ever since she had felt the power of His Word, and which met with such fierce and persecuting opposition from both pagan and Christian Rome as might very aptly be compared to the pains of child-birth. And the man-child born of this painful labour, "the testimony of Jesus," has indeed been caught up to the throne of God, where it remains as the stay and the bulwark of the House of Israel; the past and surely abiding safeguard of our nation, the source of her strength, and the cause of her having received the "heritage of the heathen," that she might break and subdue them to obedience to her Lord.

Digitized by Google

3rd.—What is meant by the crown of twelve stars? I think, in common with some of the commentators, that it symbolises the New Testament Scriptures, or the teaching of the twelve apostles, which is the crown and glory of our nation; and that the woman being clothed with the sun indicates the imputed righteousness and glory of Christ (John xvii. 22); while the moon under her feet signifies the putting of Judah under Israel (Matt. xxi. 43), because she preferred to walk by the comparatively obscure light of the Mosaic law. It can hardly apply to the Mahommedan power, because that cannot properly be said to be put under our feet. It is true that a great many Mahommedans are subject to our temporal rule, but the Sultan is still their spiritual head.

4th.—When was the man-child born? The vision is progressive, but it evidently opens with the early ages of the Christian Church, because the birth of the child was before the flight of the woman into the wilderness; and the seven-crowned dragon would seem to indicate pagan Rome before the time of the papacy and the division of the Empire into ten kingdoms. Scott notices this in his commentaries, and says that it fixes the date of the vision as being before the flight of the Church into the wilderness; but he does not tell us, neither have I been able to gather from sacred or profane history, when that event took place. In the 66th chapter of Isaiah, which refers to the acceptance of Christ by the Tribes of Jacob, Israel is said to have been delivered of a man-child, which could not possibly have been the Emperor Constantine, and it is surely legitimate to connect this prophecy with that of Rev. xii.

5th.—What is meant by the flight of the woman into the wilderness, and the wings of a great eagle which were given to her to enable her to escape? I think that this can only apply to the influx of the Tribes of Israel into Britain, the place prepared for them (2 Sam. vii. 10); and there can be no doubt that the Roman invasion attracted attention to the geographical position of these islands, as well as to the possibility of overcoming the difficulties of navigation in approaching them, and that contact with the civilisation of the West was a factor in the development of the resources of the country; besides which, the rulers had been so long accustomed to lean upon the support of the Romans that when it was withdrawn they invited the Saxons to protect them from their more warlike neighbours; and so the Saxon invasion was the outcome of the Roman, and may, without any very bold figure of speech, be said to have been made with the assistance of the wings of the Roman "great eagle." And the 1,260 days during which the woman was to be nourished in the wilderness may indicate the period from her arrival to that of her restoration to her own land, or the close of the present dispensation.

I have thus endeavoured to harmonise this prophecy with others regarding Israel, which have had, and are having, their fulfilment in the history of our nation, and I hope that others may be able to throw more light upon it. I do not think that we should be deterred from offering new interpretations, especially of such passages of Scripture as appear to have any bearing upon the question of our Identity with Israel by the opposition which we so generally meet with from the clergy; and I think that we may consider them unreasonable, not to say unjust, in refusing us a fair hearing while they are so widely divided in opinion amongst themselves.

THE Portrait of the Queen can be had, printed separately, on toned paper (uniform with Denis Hanan), for one penny; by post, 1½d.

A REMARKABLE SELECTION.

By V. M. Cox.

THE year 1886 has been exceptionally fertile in developments which tend to establish the truth of our national Identity with Ephraim-Israel. Such have been the recent events in South-eastern Europe, which have again brought the terrible "Eastern Question" into such perilous prominence. Such was the result of the elections here at home; a result confidently anticipated by Anglo-Israelite believers, and which, once for all, proved beyond controversy how futile would be all attempts to effect the disruption of our Empire; the very strain upon the bond which unites Britain with the sister Isle proving that bond too strong to be broken, since the most popular statesman of the day entirely failed, in spite of his almost unrivalled eloquence, to carry with him the national voice at that momentous crisis! Such a confirmation of our belief, too, is our position in Egypt, evoking, as it does, expressions of impotent fury from disappointed France, who clearly perceives that the "Gate" of her foreign possessions in Madagascar and Tonquin is destined to remain in the keeping of the hated "English" nation. But none of these things are so important just now, from an Identity standpoint, as the late gathering (representatively) of Britain's daughter nations to behold that marvellous Exhibition which none of us who saw it are likely ever to forget; since, from the hour when it was opened by our beloved Queen, amid demonstrations of enthusiastic loyalty, it has stood a mute but eloquent witness to the truth that Israel's promised company of nations is a veritable reality at last; that the "divine evolution" of Ephraim-Israel is an accomplished fact; that the prophetic ideal is at length realised, and that the splendid Colonial Empire, composed of nations, free, civilised, multitudinous, wealthy and Christian, exists to-day to demonstrate to all who are not culpably indifferent on the one hand, or wilfully blind on the other, that God has carried His grand designs into execution, and that "there hath not failed one word of His good promise which He promised to the House of Israel."

When our Colonial guests visited the ancient and historic city of Canterbury, a special service was conducted within the precincts of the time-worn cathedral; in which service Anglo-Saxons from the remotest parts of our dominions joined in worship with Englishmen born; and on that memorable occasion a hymn was sung to which we want to invite the attention of BANNER readers, as we venture to submit, that such a composition, being throughout an accurate paraphrase of scriptures relating to Israel's destiny, cannot be rightly applied to any nation possessing no claim to a Hebrew origin. The hymn reads as follows:—

"Praise to our God! whose bounteous hand
Prepared of old our glorious land;
A garden, fenced by silver sea;—
A people, prosperous, strong and free.

Praise to our God! thro' all our past
His mighty arm hath held us fast;
Till wars and perils, toils and tears,
Have brought the rich and peaceful years.

Praise to our God! the Vine He set
Within our coasts, is fruitful yet,
On many a shore her seedlings grow;
'Neath many a sun her clusters glow.

Praise to our God! His power alone
Can keep unmoved our ancient Throne,
Sustained by counsels wise and just,
And guarded by a People's trust.

Praise to our God; who still forbears;
Who still this guilty nation spares;
Who calls us still to seek His face;
And lengthens out our day of grace.

Praise to our God! though chastenings stern
Our evil dross should thoroughly burn,
His rod and staff from age to age
Shall rule and guide His Heritage."

Digitized by Google

Assuredly the Identity points in the above are well worth noting! Ver. 1 reminds us most forcibly that "When the Most High divided unto the nations their inheritance . . . He set the bounds of the people according to the number of the children of Israel;" that in fact before Israel had any national existence He, with divine prescience, was preparing the Isles of the West to become the home of the people whom He purposed to form for Himself that they might shew forth His praise—His hand directed the course of the Gulf-stream, but for which our climate would have been on a par with that of Labrador; and all the tremendous convulsions of nature to which the igneous rocks found in many parts of this land bear testimony, were tending to the same end, to render "the appointed place" in all respects suitable to be the abode of God's chosen people. Again, the words "a garden fenced with silver sea," point to that isolation of Israel of which Balaam prophesied in Numbers xxiii. 9, and further remind us that it was in the Isles of the sea that Israel should renew her strength; that in the Isles she should be found glorifying the Lord God of Israel, and that from the Isles she should in the fulness of time return in company with Judah to their joint inheritance. The last line of verse 1 is true of us because the Lord declared "I will make her that was cast far off a strong nation" (Micah iv. 7), because it was part of His design to set Israel "on high above all the nations of the earth;" and lastly, because He decreed that though many people should own her sway, she should in the latter days be subject to none, but that her beneficent and salutary rule should comprise an area commensurate with the globe itself.

Verses 3 and 4 are full of Identity teaching, since they speak, in every line, of the destiny of Joseph as described by Jacob in Gen. xlix. and by Moses in Deut. xxxiii. The hymn refers to "wars and perils, toils and tears" in our past history; and Jacob declared that these should be Joseph's portion, yet assured him of ultimate triumph over them all. "The archers," he says, "have sorely grieved him, and shot at him and hated him; but his bow abode in strength, and the arms of his hands were made strong by the hands of the mighty God of Jacob." The rich and peaceful years of which the poet sings are no less certainly foretold by Moses in the language, "Israel shall then dwell in safety alone; the fountain of Jacob shall be upon a land of corn and wine; also his heavens shall drop down dew." (Deut. xxxiii.)

Verse 3 recalls the prediction, "Joseph is a fruitful bough; even a fruitful bough by a well; whose branches (margin, daughters) run over the wall;" and also reminds us of the assurance recorded in Isaiah xxvii. 6, "He shall cause them that came of Jacob to take root; Israel shall blossom and bud; and fill the face of the world with fruit."

Verse 4 refers to the stability of the throne, which we know to be secured to us because of God's covenant with David, which He affirmed He would neither break nor alter; a covenant most definite in its details, most solemn in its nature, and wholly unconditional. (See 2 Sam. vii. 15, 16; Psalm lxxxix. 33—37; Jer. xxxiii. 25, 26.) To no other people is this stability of the monarchy guaranteed, because there is only one nation of Israel; and she holds the monopoly of this promise. Every other throne in Europe may be overturned and probably will—but Israel's sovereign need entertain no fears. "Guarded by a people's trust," the throne of Victoria stands and will stand, occupied by herself or her posterity till the close of the dispensation, and the dawn of that better age when Israel's divine King shall return to reign over Ephraim and Judah both, who thenceforward shall be but one nation and kingdom, never again to be exiled or separated.

Verse 5 is quite on BANNER lines, for it sounds a note of praise for the Lord's forbearing mercy; who, in spite of our many and great shortcomings and offences, still extends His grace to us, and does not cast us away in anger. How could one ignorant of Our Identity explain why we are still recipients of divine favour while other nations (not more guilty than our own, considering the greater advantages we have received) have been visited with terrible judgments? But we understand that is is not because of anything good in us, but because Christ came to bring Israel back into the bond of the covenant, or rather into a new and better covenant, but still, one made with the same people; and that, therefore, the blessings she justly forfeited by her own apostacy are restored to her in greater abundance than ever for His sake who came to be Israel's REDEEMER, but the Saviour of the whole world. We may forget our duty; but God will not forget His covenant. Ephraim-Israel, at one period, fell into idolatry, at another into papistry; and has ever been addicted to drunkenness and too forgetful of the commands of God; yet again and again He has wrought His people's reformation and extended to them His mercy. "How can I give thee up Ephraim?" we hear Him cry. "Mine heart is turned within Me; My repentings are kindled together, I will not execute the fierceness of My anger. I will not return to destroy Ephraim; for I am God and not man; the Holy One of Israel in the midst of thee" (Hosea xi. 8, 9.)

But the concluding verse reminds us that though we shall never be cast away for our sins, we shall not escape correction. It tells us that the object of such correction is to remove our dross, and to purify our national character. And this is exactly what God promised to do for Israel. "For I am with thee, saith the Lord, to save thee. Though I make a full end of all nations whither I have scattered thee, yet will I not make a full end of thee; but I will correct thee in measure and will not leave thee wholly unpunished." Finally, the writer of the hymn claims for Britain a title to which, if she be not Israel, she has not the iota of a claim; and which it is almost profanity to apply to her—"His Heritage!" No other nation in any land, or in any age, was ever called that by divine appointment save Israel only. "For the Lord's portion is His people. Jacob is the lot of His inheritance." (1 Kings viii. 51; Psalm xxxiii. 12; Joel iii. 2; Isa. xix. 25.)

We have no idea who wrote these remarkable lines. It may have been an Anglo-Israelite, but the chances are about twenty to one that it was not. But the principal question is this—are they appropriate to the case of this nation or not? If not, why were they selected for the occasion of the visit of her Colonial children to Canterbury. But even our opponents will probably admit that they are true of Britain, and eminently appropriate too. Then it is for them to shew why we are standing in Israel's shoes in every particular! This is not a case of spiritualising. A literal nation is here credited with the possession of very substantial temporal blessings; and we have shewn that all these blessings, without one exception, were predicated of Israel under the Christian dispensation, and put on record, some of them before the nation had passed its infancy, and others at a time when it appeared on the very verge of extinction.

We heartily wish our opponents would exhibit more candour and less prejudice; and instead of deploring our heterodoxy and ignoring our proofs (for the Identity has been proved to demonstration, and to the entire satisfaction of thousands), that they would endeavour to find some other way of reconciling prophecy and providence; an attempt which we are well assured would terminate in utter failure, and constrain them to admit that Anglo-Israel light can alone enable men to understand the prophetic page, and to see, in the rapidly developing events of our own day, unmistakable verification of the inspired utterances of nearly twenty-five centuries ago. History, the future history of our own and other nations, is going to prove our entire vindication by-and-bye! And the day may be nearer than we think. Our happy work, then, is to maintain the truth, and do all in our power to propagate it, knowing that we have the Bible on our side, and nothing can prevent its ultimate triumph. It is only a question of time. Shall we not each adopt, as a watchword for the year now opening, the stirring and beautiful words,

Digitized by Google

"Forward out of error;
Leave behind the night;
Forward through the darkness;
Forward, into Light."

Abingdon, November, 1886.

OUR YEAR OF JUBILEE.

By Mrs. G. Albert Rogers.

1887! Another stroke has sounded upon the bell of time. Another year has dawned. Opening its scroll, the announcement meets our eye—that the year of Jubilee is come. Yet why should Britons be jubilant? Have we cause to rejoice on this the 50th year of our beloved Sovereign's reign? Men tell us England's glory is far on the wane, that her sun has set; that other nations who have had their day are now no more, and England soon too surely must follow in their wake. If so, this Jubilee but brings us one year nearer to our fall. Can this be cause for gladness?

Shall we echo these sad forebodings? these unbelieving fears? It is with many a foregone conclusion that Great Britain must one day pass away to let some other Empire arise upon her ruins. Is this founded on the word of the Most High, by whom kings reign? Nay, search not for His decrees. That word is silent now. Great Britain finds no place in prophecy! Such the reply which meets our query.

Neologian scepticism on the one hand, spiritualising expositions on the other, alike hold down the veil. What marvel if darkness blind us? Yet the faith of some has pierced the veil, and such have learned to read aright God's promises to Israel in their fulfilment.

To the law and to the testimony. By a vision intended for all time, Daniel was shewn the rise and fall of four great monarchies. The date of the rise of each nearly synchronises. Not one of them is actually named, yet expositors have not hesitated to identify them, and have usually assigned to Babylon, to Medo-Persia, to Greece and to Rome their respective places in the vision. Rarely, if ever, do we meet with those who would interpret the visions thus far, spiritually. "This," they say, "is fulfilled prophecy." We grant it; but Daniel stopped not here. "In the days of those kings," he was inspired to foretell, the germ of a fifth monarchy should be "set up by the God of heaven," and this one alone was to have no fall. It was gradually to extend till in the fulness of time it was to develop into a first-class Power, with a position of unparalleled magnitude. Whither shall we turn in search of it? "It was certainly destined to become no ordinary kingdom in the then far-off future. Commentators have clearly recognised this fact, but have been content, like Alexander the Great, to cut the Gordian knot. "This can be no earthly kingdom," they say, "therefore vain would be the effort to identify it." And "the times of this ignorance God winked at," as the Holy Spirit saith on another occasion; but the hour is coming when all will see His declared purpose in the Vision.

Two data are given. It was to be "set up in the days of these kings;" and history shows these "days" to have come and gone! Babylon, Medo-Persia, Greece, and Rome, where are they now! Their knell has long been tolled, yet "in their days" a fifth monarchy was to be set up by God Himself which "should never be destroyed." Spiritualise this prophecy if you will, but do it in its entirety. Tell us that Rome and Babylon were but figures of apostate churches, that Greece and Medo-Persia signified the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eye, and the pride of life, and men will ask if you are sane. Our contention, then, is this,—that if four-fifths of the vision is to be taken literally, the rules of evidence demand that the remaining one-fifth should also be regarded as a literal revelation to the Church.

Do you ask where, in the records of history, is an Empire to be found rivalling and excelling the greatness of Rome, Greece, Medo-Persia, and Babylon? A Power that should "break in pieces and consume these kingdoms,"—a monarchy that "shall stand for ever,"—a kingdom that "shall not be left to other people," and against whom "no weapon that is formed shall prosper"? You claim to see prophecy fulfilled in the first four monarchies. Have you no clue whereby as clearly to identify the fifth? Without such identification the interpretation of the vision is confessedly incomplete.

Tell us this: Were Greece, and Rome, Medo-Persia and Babylon, so near and dear to the heart of our God that He must needs honour them by special mention, and give to one of Judah's princes a revelation concerning these heathen nations, while omitting all reference to His chosen ones? Tell us further: Does a wise and tender earthly father delight to place his enemies in honourable evidence while in a document intended for his children's guidance to the end of time, he makes no mention of his sons? And shall we wrong Jehovah by declaring Him less mindful of His first-born? A veil indeed must blind our eyes that ever we should harbour thoughts so unworthy of our God. Let us consent to be disillusioned.

The Lord, when He came, expounded and explained this mystery. To Daniel was revealed a kingdom so unobtrusive in its commencement as to be likened to "a stone cut out without hands"—its date somewhere about the 8th century, B.C. It was to be "set up by the God of heaven." The Lord teaches us plainly that the "kingdom of God cometh not with observation." His parables enforce this, and exhibit this kingdom under similitudes of things "lost," or of small esteem. The "lost" piece of money, the "lost" sheep, the Prodigal "lost" for a time in a far-off land, and then restored to his father's embrace, are not more significant in their meaning than the parables of the seed growing secretly, the treasure hid in a field, the leaven concealed till the whole was leavened, the mustard seed of wondrous development, the pearl of priceless value unrecognised by all save the discoverer, the simple pound committed to servants in whose hands it grew to be £5 and £10 respectively, the debtor who had nothing to pay, the barren fig-tree spared at the mediator's intercession, the draw net enclosing fish both bad and good, the poor wayfarer robbed and wounded, the beggar full of sores, God's two sons (Israel and Judah), the former of whom—then in outward communion—said, I go sir, but went not, while the other, awhile disobedient, afterwards repented and went; the seed mingled with tares, and other parables, which space forbids us to cite, all point to Israel's restoration, and teach us two distinguishing facts respecting the kingdom to be "set up by the God of heaven." First, that it was evidently a kingdom of this world, and next that it would be almost imperceptible in its origin. Tares, leaven, and poisonous fish are suggestive of an earthly kingdom, mingled with much that is evil. But in its rise and progress it was to be a unique monarchy, unlike all others.

We ask for some clue to the discovery of this remarkable kingdom, some guiding date as to the period of its birth, and the prophetic answer is, "In the days of those kings." We take this clue as our sure guide. Coincident with the rise of Daniel's first four monarchies in the 8th century B.C., the House of Israel for her abominable idolatries was led away captive by Sargon, and departed to the borders of the Caspian Sea. Henceforth she is spoken of as blotted out of the page of history; God designed her to rank as lost. But the fifth monarchy which Daniel saw in vision, was to be "cut out without hands." God, who had caused His chosen ones to become fruitful and multiply when in the Egyptian house of bondage, could do the same when He suffered them now to be evil entreated by Assyrian tyrants. For a set purpose and for a set time Israel was to be concealed from view, but even in her captivity God sent messages to her by His prophets, telling her that Ephraim was still His first-born; and that although "for a small moment He had forsaken His Israel, yet with great mercies would He gather her." "Is Ephraim My dear son?" is the Lord's enquiry—"Is he a pleasant child? for since I spake against him, I do earnestly remember him still." Can we suppose that when God "earnestly remembers," He will lack power to recall and to restore?

Digitized by Google

The "stone kingdoms" of Daniel—like "the mystery" of St. Paul, can alone be understood by recognising in them the one NATION to whom our Lord declared the gospel dispensation was to be entrusted. The wrath of Judah was aroused when in sternly prophetic language He told them that the once rejected stone kingdom should now "become the head of the corner" (Matt. xxii. 42-48). The barren and divorced wife was to be recalled (Isa. liv.) when Judah rejected and crucified the Messiah (Isa. liii.). But from whence was she to arise? Man's extremity is God's opportunity. In Israel's low estate, captive on the borders of the Caspian Sea, God had visited her (in the days of these kings); caused her to become fruitful in the land of her affliction, and in His own good time destroyed the oppressor, and let her go free. Having given Sargon a charge against Israel in His wrath, the Lord added that when the chastisement should have been accomplished, He would "punish the fruit of the stout heart of the king of Assyria," and would "kindle a burning under his glory like the burning of a fire" (Isa. x. 6-16). Instantly follows the promise—"the light of ISRAEL shall be for a fire, and his holy one for a flame." That "light," both as regards military prowess, and in the reception of the gospel dispensation was now to be seen and felt all over Europe. The "stone cut out without hands," yet finally to "fill the whole earth" (Dan. ii. 34-35), was already under divine guidance, being propelled Westward. Space forbids our showing how it rested in "the isles of the sea,"* but history tells how its rest has been glorious. We are bold to declare that as face answereth to face, so the description of this predicted kingdom answers to, and has been fulfilled in its every feature in Great Britain. It were black ingratitude to deny God's wondrous care for this our favoured isle, and equally so to refuse to acknowledge the why and the wherefore of His providential dealings with us. This mysterious stone has already become "a great mountain;" and more than one-sixth of the whole habitable globe owns our Sovereign's sway. Year by year, almost month by month, despite protests, impediments and discouragements, this Empire steadily increases, till men who know not Israel's God nor His purposes concerning her, stand aghast at its magnitude.

Here, then, is why we call to gladness on this the Victorian Jubilee. On God's plighted word we take our stand, and believe His declaration respecting British-Israel's sceptre, that it shall stand for ever! The interpretation of her monarchy predicted in Daniel's vision (ch. ii. 34, 35) we find clearly given in verses 44, 45. Why should we disbelieve it?

In 1837, on the occasion of Queen Victoria's first visit to the City of London, laying her sword on the shoulder of a loyal subject, Her Majesty said, "Rise up, Sir Moses Montefiore." The significance of this act was then but little understood. To us who in 1887 read prophecy in the light of its fulfilment, we can now understand why this glorious reign was inaugurated by conferring honour upon a Jew. Sir Moses was the first of Judah's sons ever knighted in England. The predicted time had arrived when "the envy of Ephraim should depart" (Isa. xi. 13) as the day drew near for the united Return of Israel and Judah to the Land of Promise. The recognition of Israel must precede her Return.

Fellow British-Israelites, take courage, God is working for us. He has given us a stem of David's line to sit upon the throne of the House of Israel. Let us plead with Him who loves to be entreated, that Ephraim and Judah may speedily be made "one nation in the land upon the mountains of Israel," "when they shall no more be two nations, neither shall they be divided into two kingdoms any more at all." (Ezek. xxxvii. 22). Thus worthily shall we celebrate the glorious Victorian Jubilee.

* Jewish expositors admit Isa. xxiv. 15 to apply to the British Isles.

THE GIFT OF THE GATE.

By H. R. SHAW.

AT the threshold of a new year, the conventional gateway of time, and the season, moreover, of gifts and goodwill towards men, it may not be inappropriate to recur briefly to the original story of the Almighty gift of the enemies' Gate to the seed of His obedient servant Abraham, a benefaction of so remarkable a character as to be selected to form the crown of a long series of cumulative blessings bestowed upon the patriarch by his God, and being in fact, as far as may be gathered from the narrative, a souvenir, for there is no record that the Lord visited Abraham any more upon earth in visible person after swearing the oath to him upon Mount Moriah, upon this occasion of giving the Gate in question. As such it seems worthy of more than passing attention from us who claim that our nation is the very seed which is heir to all these blessings.

Briefly, then, this was not the first occasion of a personal interview between the patriarch and his Maker, but was the fifth or sixth meeting of the kind. At the age of 75 (Gen. xii. 1) Abram received his first "call" to get out of his country and leave his kindred, and go to another land for the purpose of founding a great nation, and it was thereupon promised that he should receive a blessing, get a great name, and be a blessing amongst his friends, and, indeed, to all families of the earth. So Abram departed in faith, and upon arriving in the land the Lord appeared, and promised the same specifically to his seed. Upon the second occasion (Gen xiii. 14), after Abram's separation from Lot in the land of Canaan, the promise was enlarged; the land in four directions, as far as the eye could reach, was given to Abram and to his seed for ever, and seed as innumerable as the dust of the earth was now promised him. Upon the third occasion (Gen. xv. 1), after the fighting and restoration of Lot to his home, the Lord renewed to Abram His promise of protection and great reward, when it seems to have occurred to Abram that as he was childless these rewards were of doubtful value, and he complained accordingly; upon which he was speedily reassured that his own flesh and blood descendant should be the heir whose seed should be comparable to the stars of heaven for number. And here Abram believed in the Lord, and He counted it to him for righteousness. But presently Abram shews something like symptoms of failing faith; upon a renewal of the promise of the land's inheritance he demands a sign whereby he may be assured he shall inherit it. And he gets a sign, a most unwelcome one, surely. During a deep sleep, in the midst of an horror of great darkness, he was duly informed that his seed "shall be a stranger in a land that is not theirs, and shall serve them in affliction for 400 years, and not come hither again until the fourth generation." Upon this same occasion the Lord made a covenant with Abram defining more particularly the boundaries of the land of the seed as being from the river of Egypt unto the great river, the river Euphrates. Now we come (Gen. xvii. 1) to the fourth appearance of the Lord to Abram when he was 99 years old, and his wife Sarai was 89, and both of them so far in despair of offspring as to laugh at the idea of a child being born unto them; yet the covenant is renewed and accompanied by change of their names to Abraham and Sarah, to signify further enlargement of the promises. It was now not merely a multitudinous and great nation, but a father of many nations, and the progenitor of kings, and the covenant to be their God was made perpetual to Abraham and his seed after him: and the promise was renewed of everlasting possession by Abraham and his seed of the entire land of Canaan. In the interesting narrative which now follows (Gen. xviii. 1), of the visit of the Lord in the form of Trinity to Abraham at Mamre, for the purpose of personally announcing to Sarah that she should have a son, it is not quite clear (ver. 17—19) whether the patriarch was made acquainted with what was passing in the Lord's mind as to the great and mighty, and earth-blessing Hebrew nation of the future, or whether the conversation opened at ver. 20 with the announcement of the intended inspection of Sodom and Gomorrah; but if Abraham was not aware of the fact, we, his children, must clearly take this as the fifth intimation of the Lord's intentions towards the chosen seed. Next and finally, as far as Abraham is concerned, we have the scene upon Mount Moriah (Gen. xxii. 15—18), where the angel of the Lord called out of heaven to him after he had, as shewn by St. Paul (Heb. xi. 17—19) proved his truly Christian faith in the resurrection of the dead from whence in a figure he received his only begotten son, born of parents already as good as dead (ver. 11, 12). And what is the message confirmed this time by the Lord's own oath, irrevocable and without condition or suspense? Because thou hast not withheld thine only son I will bless thee in blessing, multiply thy seed as the stars, and also (by a new simile) like the sand upon the sea-shore; and (by a new promise altogether) "Thy seed shall possess the Gate of his enemies" in order that there may be no difficulty experienced in carrying out the provisions of the last repeated promise of Messianic blessing to all the nations of the earth; and finally, all this is "because thou hast obeyed My voice," or because he had, as explained by St. Paul, shewn himself to be a faithful Christian.

Digitized by Google

From the foregoing observations, it follows that this Almighty gift upon oath can only commence to take effect in Christian times and amongst the Christian descendants of Abraham subject to the after limitations and distributions of blessings which we need not now discuss; there should be no mistake about this; we have the authority of St. Paul for saying (Heb. xi. 39, 40) that up to the time at which he was writing none of the children had received the promises, among which was included this gift of the Gate of the enemies; and as these four promises, omitting the Promised Land, are linked virtually in one by the oath which rewarded Abraham's Christianity the logical sequence seems to be that they must be synchronous in operation, and be working forward unchecked after commencement until the Stone Kingdom of Nebuchadnezzar's vision shall fill the whole earth by mere numbers, and the Messiah shall sit on His earthly throne at Jerusalem, and the seed shall have no enemies, and consequently possess no enemies' Gate. The acquisition of this gift, then, being limited to the time between the first and second advents, it seems remarkable that the nature of the promise should have remained so long unnoticed, or misunderstood by Christians, and even Anglo-Israelites, and that even now some otherwise well-informed persons should be doubtful whether the Gate of our enemies may not mean the Gate of our friends, or even our own Gate, past, present, or future.

It is not proposed now to go over the ground so frequently traversed in these pages during the past ten years in describing the number, strength, grandeur, importance and geography generally of the enemies' Gates held by Israel, alias Britain. Such of our readers who do not possess a file of the BANNER from the beginning may find abundant information, as well as stirring and profitable reading, in Philo-Israel's handsome little volume, entitled, "The Geography of the Gates," and they will no doubt rise from its perusal quite satisfied that the case is proved therein that Isaac's Anglo-Saxon seed are fully identified by their present possession of a sufficient number of their enemies' Gates as to put any other possible claimant out of court; in fact there is no other nation holding enemies' Gates —they, as a rule, cannot be said to hold their own, but broadly speaking, wherever British-Israel has an enemy, actual or possible, there she seizes his Gate, or commands his port of entry by water; in fact, since it is notorious that British possessions belt the earth, our Greater Britain may be considered to consist entirely of the enemies' Gates. Above forty of these maritime strongholds are described by Philo-Israel, of which only a few specimens, such as Gibraltar, Malta, Cyprus, Egypt, Aden, and the various mid-ocean spots need here be mentioned to conjure up the remainder, whose number, such is the rapid development of the promise, is yearly—nay, almost monthly—becoming augmented.

It is, perhaps, worthy of notice, as it does not already appear to have been observed, that in the passage (Gen. xxii. 15—18) where the promise of the Gate is introduced, we have the earthy simile of multitudinousness (dust) abandoned while the stars of heaven are retained, and the new simile introduced of the sand upon the sea-shore, both of which similes, it must be admitted, smack very strongly of "Rule Britannia" and her maritime achievements, and go far to prove what was passing in the mind of the Lord.

24, Ludgate-hill, E.C., December, 1886.

SPIRITUAL V. LITERAL INTERPRETATION OF PROPHECY.

By J. THOMSON.

ADVOCATES of our Identity are often charged with "twisting" Scripture to support their theory, and neglecting the spiritual lessons to be drawn from Holy Writ, and so resting too much in the literal interpretation. That this charge might just as consistently be often applied to devout students of Scripture who do not hold our views, will be evident from the following quotation, which, in some points, might almost have been written by a present-day Anglo-Israelite.

It is from a "Sermon for the British Society for the Propagation of the Gospel among the Jews," preached on June 16th, 1864, and is entitled, "The Political Restoration of the Jews"; if the last word had been "Hebrews," we think it would have been more correct. We quote from the Church of England Magazine for Oct. 8th, 1864:—

"Israel is now blotted out from the map of nations: her sons are scattered far and wide: her daughters mourn beside all the rivers of the earth. Her sacred song is hushed: no king reigns in Jerusalem: she bringeth forth no governors among her Tribes. But she is to be restored: she is to be restored 'as from the dead.' When her own sons have given up all hope of her, then is God to appear for her. She is to be re-organised: her scattered bones are to be brought together. There will be a native government again: there will again be the form of a body politic: a state shall be incorporated; and a king shall reign. Her sons, though they can never forget the sacred dust of Palestine, yet die at a hopeless distance from her shores. But it shall not be so for ever; for her sons shall again rejoice in her; her land shall be called Beulah; for as a young man marrieth a virgin, so shall her sons marry her. 'I will place you in your own land' is God's promise to them. They shall again walk upon her mountains; shall once more sit under her vines, and rejoice under her fig-trees. And they are also to be re-united. There shall not be two, nor ten, nor twelve, but one—one Israel praising one God, serving one king, and that one king the Son of David, the descended Messiah. They are to have a national prosperity which shall make them famous: nay, so glorious shall they be, that Egypt, and Tyre, and Greece, and Rome, shall all forget their glory in the greater splendour of the throne of David. The day shall yet come when all the high hills shall leap with envy, because this is the hill which God hath chosen; when Zion's shrine shall again be visited by the constant feet of the pilgrim ; when her valleys shall echo with songs, and her hill-tops shall drop with wine and oil. If there be meaning in words, this must be the meaning of Ezek. xxxvii. I wish never to learn the art of tearing God's meaning out of His own words. If there be anything clear and plain, the literal sense and meaning of this passage—a meaning not to be spirited, or spiritualised away—must be evident that both the two, and the Ten Tribes of Israel are to be restored to their own land, and that a king is to rule over them. 'Thus saith the Lord God, Behold, I will take the children of Israel from among the heathen whither they be gone, and will gather them on every side, and bring them into their own land ; and I will make them one nation in the land upon the mountains of Israel ; and one king shall be king to them all ; and they shall be no more two nations, neither shall they be divided into two kingdoms any more at all.' "

Digitized by Google

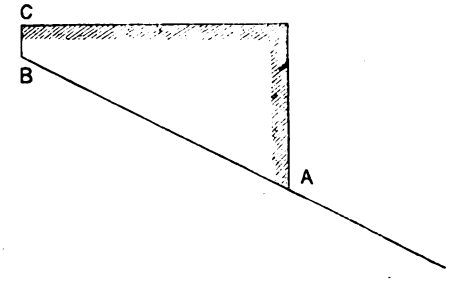
Thus far our "blind" witness. His testimony is valuable, as, in his opinion, equally as in ours, Ezek. xxxvii. (1) has not yet been fulfilled ; (2) that it cannot be fulfilled in a spiritual sense in the Church ; but (3) that it must be fulfilled literally, in the history of a people. He, evidently, only sees part of the whole truth, because he can only see the Jews as the modern representatives of the ancient Hebrew nation. But the prophecy speaks of "Joseph, the stick of Ephraim, and all the house of Israel his companions," as well as of "Judah, and the children of Israel his companions" (ver. 16—19). From the phraseology here employed, it may be gathered that the House of Joseph, with "all the children of Israel his companions," must be far more numerous than the House of Judah, and "the children of Israel his companions." And, besides, to the House of Joseph, as represented by the Tribes of Ephraim and Manasseh, the promise of multitudinousness was given : the one was to become a "great" people, but the other "a multitude of nations" (Gen. xlviii. 19). Where, then, we would ask, is this other nation represented by the stick of Joseph? Judah we know ; but where, upon our "blind" witness' principles, must we look for the House of Joseph ? They cannot have been "spirited" away, and our witness will not have it that the prophecy can be either "spirited" or "spiritualised" as applicable to the Church.



Our "blind" witness also avers that the kingdom of Israel is to be "re-organised," with a "native government," a "body politic," and an "incorporated state." He bases all this upon the wonderful prophecy of Ezekiel's vision of the "dry bones" and the "two sticks." We should have very much liked to have seen our "blind" witness's exposition of other passages of Holy Writ, which, to our thinking, equally as plainly teach that Israel is always to remain a "kingdom," and, as a body politic, have a king—a descendant of the royal House of David, ruling over her. God promised to David, "Thine house and thy kingdom shall be established for ever" (2 Sam. vii. 12-17). "Thy seed will I establish for ever, and build up thy throne to all generations" (Psa. lxxxix. 3, 4). "Thus saith Jehovah, which giveth the sun for a light by day, the ordinances of the moon, and the stars, for a light by night, which divideth the sea when the waves thereof roar ; Jehovah of hosts is His name. If those ordinances depart from before Me, saith Jehovah, then the seed of Israel also shall cease from being a nation before Me for ever. Thus saith Jehovah ; If heaven above can be measured, and the foundations of the earth searched out beneath, I will also cast off all the seed of Israel for all that they have done, saith Jehovah" (Jer. xxxi. 35-37). "For thus saith Jehovah ; David shall never want a man to sit upon the throne of the House of Israel. . . . If ye can break My covenant of the day, and My covenant of the night, and that there should not be day and night in their season ; then may also My covenant be broken with David My servant, that he should not have a son to reign upon his throne. . . . As the host of heaven cannot be numbered, neither the sand of the sea measured, so will I multiply the seed of David My servant. . . . Considerest thou not what this people" (i.e., the Jews) "have spoken, saying, The two families which Jehovah hath chosen, He hath even cast them off? Thus they have despised My people, that they should be no more a nation before them. Thus saith Jehovah; If My covenant be not with day and night, and if I have not appointed the ordinances of heaven and earth, then will I cast, away the seed of Jacob, and David My servant, so that I will not take any of his seed to be rulers over the seed of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob : for I will cause their captivity to return, and have mercy on them" (Jer. xxxiii. 14—26).

We, too, "wish never to learn the art of tearing God's meaning out of His own words. If there be anything clear and plain, the literal sense and meaning" of these passages—"a meaning not to be spirited or spiritualised away—must," evidently, be that Israel is always to remain a nation—not "blotted out"—a monarchy as regards the body politic, ruled over by a descendant of the House of David; and, as another prophecy declares, found dwelling in a land, or "place," of their own, undismayed by any fear of foreign invader. "Moreover, I will appoint a place for My people Israel, and will plant them, that they may dwell in a place of their own, and move no more ; neither shall the children of wickedness afflict them any more as beforetime" (2 Sam. vii. 10). This promise apparently has respect to the people, when national distress should overwhelm them in the Promised Land ; and a similar promise is vouchsafed to the House of David, when, by the captivity of Zedechiah, and the slaughter of his sons, its former prosperity seemed to have fallen to the lowest ebb. "Thus saith the Lord God : I will also take of the highest branch of the high cedar, and will set it ; I will crop off from the top of his young twigs a tender one (fem), and will plant it upon an high mountain and eminent: in the mountain of the height of Israel will I plant it : and it shall bring forth boughs, and bear fruit, and be a goodly cedar : and under it shall dwell all fowl of every wing ; in the shadow of the branches thereof shall they dwell" (Ezek. xvii. 22, 23).

There is no room for an hiatus, or "Gentile parenthesis" in God's treatment of His ancient people anywhere in these, and many more passages that might be quoted from Holy Writ; nor is there any evidence throughout Scripture of a transference of the promises given to Israel unto a Gentile people, or a Gentile select body called the "Church." Only on the lines of the Identity can Scripture prophecy be properly understood ; and our eloquent "blind" witness of 1864, has evidently not learnt the Scripture-made distinction between the two Houses of Judah and Israel, and their different destinies, prior to the second advent of their great King, our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ.

THE PRESENT TIME IN THE GREAT PYRAMID.

By F. Gass.

The chronology of the Grand Gallery, on the basis of a Pyramid inch to a year, is simple enough till the Great Step is reached. But at this point its simplicity disappears. The Step, a solid block of limestone placed right across the South end of the Gallery, creates great difficulty in proceeding further in the endeavour to penetrate its prophetic symbology. A glance at the diagram will show this. The first halting-place in the steady progress up the Gallery is at the foot of the Great Step (marked A), 1813·56 inches from the North wall. Reckoning the commencement of the Christian era from the Feast of Tabernacles in the autumn of B.C. 1, this represents the month of April, 1814. On the sixth of that month the allied armies of the nations in arms against France were in possession of Paris, and the desolating career of Bonaparte was virtually brought to a close by his solemnly abdicating his usurped crown, and retiring to the island of Elba in the Mediterranean. This was a period of great import in the history of the British Empire; the subjugation of France and humiliation of Napoleon were vital to its continued prosperous existence.

Digitized by Google

Continuing the floor-record through the Great Step, the South wall of the Grand Gallery (marked B) was reached in 1882. This was another important year for British-Israel. It saw the fall of Turkish rule, or rather misrule, in Egypt, and was in all probability a preliminary to the fulfilment of Isaiah xix. 25: "The Lord of hosts shall bless, saying, Blessed be Egypt, My people." The Lord smote Egypt (ver. 22) through Arabi, and the terrible slaughter and suffering of the Soudan rebellion. But, "He shall smite and heal Egypt;" the healing shall follow immediately on the smiting. The smiting has passed, the healing has already commenced, the daily press is the witness of the progress made in this direction during the last twelve months. The advent of Israel in Egypt was accompanied by well-deserved chastisement, but it saved the land from unprincipled oppressors, civilised and barbarous, who, if left to their own selfish devices, would have ruthlessly ruined the country. But considerable as was this advance in Israel's prophetic return-march to Jerusalem, it surely is not sufficiently determinative to be the terminal event closing up the height of the Grand Gallery. The Floor-line ended at B, but it does not follow of necessity that the counting of time passed at once into the Ante-Chamber passage beyond. There is a break at B, the Floor ending 5·85 inches below C, the threshold of the low passage above. There is nothing to prove that the distance from B to C is not to be taken into chronological account. In that case, the arrival at the threshold of the low passage will not take place until some time in the month of April, 1888, about fifteen months from the present time.

Several interesting suggestions have been made by writers in the BANNER, as to the symbolical meaning of this low, circumscribed, horizontal passage, leading away South from the Grand Gallery. The theory most generally accepted is that it presages a terrible, and in its consequences, unexampled conflict, of the so-called Christian European Powers, followed by a thorough change in their moral government, and by the national and cosmopolitan acceptance of the British nation as the lineal descendants of the Lost Tribes of Israel. The Rev. T. W. Boyce, B.A., a respected contributor to the BANNER (No. 415, 1884, and No. 458, 1885), considers that the low passage cannot refer to the physical condition of Israel, but does to their spiritual, because the passage, also low, leading into the North commencement of the Grand Gallery, symbolises their spiritual status only. I cannot fully discuss the matter here, but do not think this follows of necessity. It has yet to be proved that the First Ascending Passage symbolises only the spiritual state of the Hebrew race previous to the Advent. The passage ascends regularly, without a single check, which is more than can be said for the religious stability of Israel before the advent of Christ. The same remark may be applied to the Grand Gallery ascent. I doubt the spiritual condition of British-Israel being worse now than it has been, or was, say fifty years ago. On the contrary, since the foot of the Great Step was reached in 1814, the nation has made wonderful progress in spiritual matters. Christian missions have arisen, slavery has been abolished, and Sunday-schools have become a power for good in the land. The disgrace of drunkenness is recognised, even by the poorest classes, preparatory to the permanent decline of the vice. Countless benevolent organisations are doing untold good, and instead of few or none existing, the number of religious periodicals is legion, with an immense demand for them. Crime is decreasing as it never has before; but I must cease, a bare enumeration of Britain's advance in religious morality would fill this paper. The seductive doctrines of Materialism are a great danger ahead, but they have never obtained the hold of the people in this country that they have in Europe, and there are signs that in Great Britain the full force of their evil teaching has spent itself.

The daily and weekly papers, and the political monthly magazines, are unanimous in looking forward to a tremendous catastrophe presently to fall upon Gentile Europe. The BANNER is never tired of pointing it out, and it does not require special prevision to see its truth. Such a state of armed truce among 340 millions of human beings cannot go on for ever. Europe is assuming the appearance of a barrack. The nations are in a perplexity of jealous fear of each other, and the tread of armed men resounds everywhere. The desire for revenge on Germany, like anthracite coal, intensely smoulders in France. Russia is growing more and more anxious to throw off, in some way, even by war, the incubus of a vast debt, the interest on which she cannot meet much longer. She will proceed to extremities rather than stand quietly by while her way to the Gate, Constantinople, is being permanently barred by the formation of a powerful Balkan Confederation. Turkey is moribund, and is approaching an acute crisis. It may be that the horizontal low passage symbolises these impending troubles. But a European Titanic struggle cannot extend to anything like fifty-two years in duration, which is the length of the passage in inches; the present conditions of warfare render this impossible. Five years, or less, of war will be long enough to decimate the trained manhood of Europe. Worse, incomparably worse, than war may be expected to follow. Bloodthirsty revolutions would break out in all the great cities. "And the cities of the nations fell." "They that sow the wind shall reap the whirlwind."

Perhaps the chronological record of the Pyramid does not pass beyond the Great Step; the low passage may be prophetic without marking time. This would make the method of the Bible and Pyramid one in manner, future events foreshadowed sufficiently clear to prove divine inspiration, but a mystery as to exact dates beforehand.

There are many who believe that Rev. xi. 1, 2, refers to the Great Pyramid. The theory will not admit of proof, but the words, "Arise, and measure the temple of God and the altar," are remarkable. Elliott (Horæ Apocalypticæ) considers that in the original, "altar" should be translated, "altar-court." "But the court which is without the temple, leave out (Gr. cast out), for it is given to the Gentiles." The Greek word here used for temple is naos, and refers to the inner sanctuary only, and not to the whole of the temple buildings, which would be expressed by hieron. Hence the court to be cast out (a strong term) is the court without the holy place, and refers to the inmost court of all, situated between the sanctuary and the altar. Can it be that reference is intended to the narrow Ante-Chamber passage, which is without the King's Chamber, or naos, of the Pyramid, but between it and the Grand Gallery, or altar-court? If this is so, it looks like a judgment specially to fall on the Gentile nations.

The second low passage, that beyond the Ante-Chamber itself, and leading into the King's Chamber, may symbolise Gog's invasion of the land (Ezek. xxxviii.) after Israel has been in quiet possession for a considerable period, represented by the intervening Ante-Chamber. But I do not pretend to prophecy, the future belongs to God, and advise the reader not to rely too implicitly on any one particular date. It is well to bear in mind the proverb: "Man proposes, but God disposes."

There are sound thinkers who prefer to measure over the

Digitized by Google

Great Step. By this method the South wall of the Grand Gallery will not be reached before A.D. 1911. I accept this as the final closing of the prophetic record of the Gallery, but think the way through the Step has a primary significance. It is but natural that the near future should have the greatest interest for us. There are two other possible endings to the chronology of the Great Step, which I hope to have the opportunity of explaining at some future time.

THE ANGLO-ISRAEL FREE DISTRIBUTION FUND.

THIRTY-SEVENTH MONTHLY REPORT.

THE following donations and subscriptions, from Nov. 13th to Dec. 18th, are very gratefully acknowledged:—

Received by the Hon. Treasurer, Miss J. Lawrence:—Miss. L., Malmesbury, £1; Mrs. M., West Halton, 2s.; Miss C., Crewkerne, 4s. 6d.; Mrs. D., Froxfield, 3s.; Mrs. M., Thrupp, 3s.; Ephraim, Great Yarmouth, £1; Mrs. T., Tunbridge Wells, 8s.; R. K., George Town, 8s.; Mrs. P., Hastings, 10s.; H. G. (monthly sub.), 1s.; Mrs. N., Canonbury, 2s. 6d.; Miss O., Pershore, 2s. 6d.; H. and E. L., Upper Teddington, 10s.

By the Hon. Sec., Miss E. M. Rush:—G. J. C., 2s. 6d.; Mrs. M., Lee, 5s.; Mrs. M., Henley-on-Thames, £1; G. R., 2s. 6d.; Mrs. M. D., 1s.; M. L. W., £1; Miss B., Ripon, 4s.; "Liverpool Marine Engineer," £5; "Benjamin," per Philo-Israel, £1.

By the Secretary:—G. W., 9d.; Miss S. A. M., 2s. 6d.; Mrs. T., Sheffield, 6d.; G. R., Cosham, 2s.; Mr. H. E. T., Dorking, 10s.; N. C., 2s. 6d.; Mrs. C. B. (monthly sub.), 5s.

Total, £14 12s. 9d.

BANNERS are forwarded weekly by the Secretary, to Ohio., U.S.A., London, six to Birkenhead, two to Maesteg, Hatfield, Windsor, Wandsworth Free Library. The Messenger (monthly) to London, Hatfield, Richmond and Wandsworth Free Libraries, etc. The secretary has despatched one to three parcels of books, pamphlets, mixed leaflets, etc., to Sheffield, Rotherhithe, Bath, Goldsithney, Marazion; Ellington, Froxfield, Stoke's Road, Cosham; Bathgate, Bingley, Upper Teddington, Manchester, Hastings, London, South Hayling; George Town, British Guiana; Launceston, Tasmania.

By Miss E. M. Rush, 130 BANNERS weekly; 56 packets of literature to the following places:—Aldershot, Brixton, Croydon, Chiswick, Dover, Silver Town, Rotherhithe, Abergavenny, Alverston, Skegness, Yarmouth, Lowestoft, Sheffield, Ripon; Glasgow, Cocksburnspath, Bathgate, Hamilton, N.B.; Dublin; Montreal, Toronto, CANADA: Barbadoes; Auckland, N.Z.; Fiji Islands; Hong Kong; European Base Hospital, Rangoon, Moulmein, BURMAH; Missions to Seamen, ditto; Ahmedabad, Secunderabad, Poona, Peshawur, INDIA; Port Nolloth, Etshowe, Pietermaritzburg, SOUTH AFRICA; Cairo, Malta, H.M.S. "Orion," P. and O. steamer, "Pekin."

Since the last monthly report the secretary has received the names of two new friends who are anxious to help forward the work of the fund, the number now being eight.

With much pleasure and many thanks three useful packets of "Identity" literature are acknowledged; one from St. Albans, one from Mrs. F. (Guildford), one from London, without name or district being given. Readers of the monthly report of the F. D. Fund will probably have noticed that, as the weeks pass by, the names of new places appear in the lists given, to which literature has been sent, thereby showing the continual spreading of the truth it is the work of the fund to make known. Not unfrequently the method of procedure is as follows:—A specimen packet is sent to a known Christian worker for some good society with an offer of other publications later on, if desired, and the BANNER to be sent weekly; the following quotations sufficiently show how the plan works, and how the valuable aid of careful, trustworthy new sowers may be obtained:—

"I have carefully read the papers you so kindly sent, and have found them very interesting and helpful; they are much appreciated, not only by myself, but by others to whom I gave them to read. If convenient to you, I shall always gladly welcome any publications you may feel disposed to forward to me."

"I am very much pleased with the papers, and friends are also. The Identification is becoming clearer day by day. I think the evidence is manifest, and I will be glad to read the papers and give them away."

The above are but specimens of many welcomes afforded, and opinions received from time to time, which give great encouragement to our work. E. M. RUSH.

It is often asked of us, "What do the Jews (Judah) think of the doctrine of Israel in Britain?" Well, we have even heard an orthodox Jew avow his belief that we British are the Ten-Tribed House of Israel, after perusing the evidences adduced from Scripture and history, whilst most of our readers are acquainted with the writings of the Revs. E. Bassin and Bergmann which have appeared in the BANNER. This month, however, we have much pleasure in adding to their united testimony the following communication we quite lately received from a Jewish clergyman in Rome, who is zealously engaged in labouring for Christ among his brethren in Italy:—

"I thank you sincerely for your welcome letter, and for Wilson's valuable work. I read it in 1849 or 1850. I have a distinct recollection of the impressions left on my mind by its perusal, and I was longing to study it afresh. I have no longer any doubt as to the Israelitish origin of the Anglo-Saxons; but a man in my position must not be content with believing in this or that, but must be able to give clear and logical reasons why. Once the mind grasps this truth, it is wonderful how thought suggests confirmatory evidences and illustrations. The Jews ought to rejoice in the discovery of their brethren, and in the marvellous display of God's faithfulness to the covenant with our forefathers revealed thereby. Let us unite in prayer and praise—prayer that the 'Light' may spread, and praise for the 'Light' already shining. My family motto is Isa. lx. 1, 'Arise, shine.' With thanks for your kindness and excellent gift, believe me, yours sincerely in Christ our Lord, who has made us both one in a double sense." And in a later communication, he writes, "The Bible is a lucid book to me now, and the faithfulness of God to His promises to my forefathers is marvellously exhibited. Nothing could more forcibly confound and silence sceptics, or predispose the Jews to receive the Lord Jesus, and it will explode all the false expositions which represented God as not meaning exactly what He said. It is years now since I became a Literalist, but, like so many others, was led to spiritualise what seemed inapplicable or inexplicable literally. Now I can see the Word clear and bright, without contradictions and illogical shifts, and you have helped me to arrive at this glorious conviction."

CHARLES HORNER, Secretary.

Contributions to the Fund will be thankfully received and acknowledged by the Hon. Treasurer, Miss J. Lawrence, Rosslyn, Hampton-road, Upper Teddington, Middlesex; by the Hon. Secretary, Miss E. M. Rush, 103, Burnt-ash road, Lee, London; or by Mr. Charles Horner, 34, Sheen-park, Richmond-on-Thames. Grants of literature will be made, as far as funds allow, on application to the Secretary, or Miss E. M. Rush.

ISRAEL'S SCRIPTURE AND PRAYER UNION.

THE number of cards now issued, including those in the hands of the local Secretaries, is 1,412, one new member having joined since the last report.

The member who asked for the prayers of the Union for a Working Men's Bible Class, "desires to return hearty thanks to the loving Father of Israel for answers to prayer in this behalf; a manifest blessing is visible; members have doubled in numbers: many come to hear of Our Identity: one has confessed Christ, and all are interested and reverent in studying His own Word. Hallelujah."

The following sums, received towards the expenses of the Union, are thankfully acknowledged:—Miss S., Plymouth, 2s.; W. P., 5s.

The card of membership will be sent on receipt of three stamps.

The first and second series of Monthly Comments on the whole Bible, by Philo-Israel, may now be obtained in volume form. Price in paper cover 1s. 2d. each; in cloth 2s. each, post free.

The "Prayers for Daily Use," being a prayer for each day of the week, by Philo-Israel, are 1d., or 9d. per dozen, postage extra.

The prayer of the Union, as on the Card of Membership, may now be obtained printed in larger type, price 1d. for three copies, post free; or 1s. per 100 for distribution.

After Dec. 31st all letters relating to the Prayer Union should be addressed to Miss E. Sibbald, 3, Townshend-villas, Richmond, Surrey.

The accounts will shortly be audited, and the statement published in the BANNER. J. LAWRENCE, Hon. Sec.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."

(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4

VOL. XI., No. 524. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 12, 1887. [PRICE ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
"The Infirm and Tottering Peace of Europe"	21
Henry Wentworth Monk on Judah and Israel. By the Rev. Edward Denny, M.A.	22
Israel's Training in Exile. By W. S. Cavill.—Part I.	23
Restoration Times. By John T. Gott	24
The Name thereof is called Bamah unto this Day. By E. Wilmshurst.—Part I.	26
The American Atheist, Colonel Robert Ingersol	27
Correspondence	27

"THE INFIRM AND TOTTERING PEACE OF EUROPE."

THESE are the words in which a leader of the Daily Telegraph in the issue of December 9th described the condition of Europe at the present hour. "Its peace is infirm and tottering." The prospects of peace are vanishing, because France is arming against Germany, and Germany is arming against France. Russia is arming to give Turkey its coup de grace, but is aware that before she can do that Austria-Hungary must be overcome, and to make that task easy, the power of Germany must, in conjunction with France, be annihilated. Italy is arming in order to join Austria in opposing Russia, and in keeping France in check. The forces which these five Powers have ready in hand to bring against each other amount, by the Daily Telegraph's computation, to between 13 and 14 millions of soldiers, while the Daily Times and Mirror, of Bristol, declares the number approaches 20 millions of men! There are certainly on the peace footing now, in all the armies of Europe, over four millions of soldiers serving with their colours, and 9½ millions more are ready to be called out of the Reserves! But as every man fit to bear arms and under a certain age is liable, in case of necessity, to be called out to serve, under the system which is followed on the Continent, it really seems as if the estimate of 20 millions of armed men (men in nations, in short) is nearer the truth. These gigantic forces which the Continental nations are bound to keep up (in self-defence in some cases) are deliberately called together by France and Russia for purposes of revenge and destruction by the former, and in order to gratify ambition in respect to the great Gate of all the Gates by the latter; Germany and Austria, by their geographical position, are forced to pile up their armour to defend their own territories from their neighbours' attacks, and to resist the coming efforts of France to retake her provinces and fortresses, of which the last war deprived her.

The French and German armies contain, besides, 20,000 officers each, thirsting for promotion and longing for a great war that may accelerate it, but chafing under the fact that a 20 years' peace has blocked their chances of professional advancement almost hopelessly. Here, then, is a state of affairs which has been carefully prepared by God Himself since the conclusion of the last Franco-German war, 16 years ago, and is sure to eventuate in an explosion and cataclysm which will be unparalleled in the history of the world. The Spirit of God declared, in Rev. xvi. 18, that there should come to pass a "great earthquake such as there was not since men were upon the earth, so mighty an earthquake, so great," and we see now how all events during the last 20 years have been gradually, silently, and surely preparing for this tremendous issue, now apparently so close at hand. But how does all this affect our own nation? Are we putting on and piling up our armour? Nay, we are not under the necessity, prophetically, to do anything of the sort! We are bound to put our Gates in a state of defence, because God has said to us, "Shut thy doors about thee" (Isa. xxvi. 20); and this is the very thing that we are busily occupied in doing to-day in the four quarters of the globe! We have no prophetic guarantee that our foreign Gates shall be preserved without human means to safeguard them, as is the case in respect to "the appointed place" of our island home (2 Sam. vii. 10). We have consequently a call to defend our Gates by fortifications. "Shut thy doors about thee" is the figurative direction. But our own "appointed place," our "chambers," we are not told to fortify, or to shut our "doors" there, or to do anything in respect to them, but simply to "enter into them" and hide there for a limited and short period of time. The command is for our good, and betokens that God means to safeguard us there as He protected Noah and his family in the ark, what time the world around was destroyed by the waters of the Flood. The catastrophe now is to be by fire, and accordingly we see preparations for the destruction of life by the fire of the most deadly implements of war the world has ever seen brought into action, for the horrid work of taking life wholesale. How the crisis may be brought about none may say, though Ezek. xxv. 14, R.V., seems to point to the conclusion that "by the hand of His people, 'British-Israel,' the vengeance will be laid by the Lord upon Edom."

The conduct of Turkey is, at the present moment, suspicious, and she seems to be throwing herself at the feet of Russia. This may lead to some overt act on the part of the British Government, which will precipitate the conflict in which Austria is sure to sustain the first shock, and so draw in Germany. That will be France's opportunity for her "war of revenge," and Italy must needs then help the German allies in order to stay the growth of French influence in the Mediterranean on the opposite shores of Africa. "England's interest in Constantinople has nothing to do necessarily with keeping the Turk there," was the suggestive remark of a provincial newspaper lately. It points to the very heart of the question now becoming so acute and terrifying for Europe. The possession of Constantinople, which the Turk may suddenly hand over to the Russians, must be the point towards which British-Israelite policy must be daily and hourly directed.

Digitized by Google

There are powerful Continental allies of this country now equally interested with us in thwarting such designs, if they exist. But it is a matter of the first moment, that the secret spring of all the complicated action now in progress regarding the Eastern Question is, as a matter of fact, closely connected with God's sworn promise to His people—the afterseed of Abraham—(who are the British)—namely, "Thy seed shall possess the Gate of his enemies" (Gen. xxii. 17). Regarding the steps by which that consummation will be arrived at, we have no need to feel the least concern. It is enough for us to know that "the Lord reigneth," and that "He will provide" (Psa. xcvi. 10, xcvii. 1; Gen. xxii. 14).

HENRY WENTWORTH MONK ON JUDAH AND ISRAEL.

By the Rev. Edward Denny, M.A.

Henry Wentworth Monk, the Canadian M.P., who is the projector of the "great scheme" entitled the "New British Empire Company," the object of which, as mentioned in the Banner of Dec. 1st, is "to buy up Palestine, and proceed to found the metropolis of the world at Jerusalem," is also the author of "A Simple Interpretation of the Revelation," which was published by Tallant and Co., 21, Paternoster-row, nearly 30 years ago, for the preface to the first edition is dated from "Township of March, Canada West, 12th May, 1857." In the preface to the second edition, which is the one in my possession, and which is dated from "Worksop, Nottinghamshire, April, 1859," there is a passage which, taken along with others, to be subsequently mentioned, seems to prove that the great enterprise in which he has now embarked has been working in his mind during all that time. After stating that "the Revelation is divided into seven parts, inasmuch as it represents the future in seven different aspects," and describing the subjects of the first six parts, he thus proceeds: "The seventh part describes the Millennium, when 'the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given unto the people of the saints of the Most High,' which 'people' will be influenced, guided, and directed by 'the spirits of just men made perfect,' who are to be raised from the dead at the commencement of the Millennium, that they may live and reign with Christ the thousand years which constitute the Millennium (Rev. xx. 4); so that we shall have one universal and righteous government over the whole earth; for which state of things the progress made in this generation is preparatory: for we could not conveniently have a universal government without railroads, steamboats, and telegraphs; for, without these, the various nations of the earth would be too far asunder to be conveniently placed under one government. With these a universal government is quite practicable; therefore, these assuredly indicate the approach of a universal government, as the young leaves of spring foretell the approach of summer." Nor is he a stranger to the exalted position which will be occupied by Israel, as distinct from Judah, at that blessed period, as will be seen from some extracts, which I shall quote from an essay contained, amongst others, in his book, entitled, "The Restoration of Judah and Israel," and which seem to show that he was not then acquainted with the Anglo-Israel theory, a conviction of the truth of which is evidently now influencing him. After quoting Ezek. xxxvii. 15—23, he says: "In this prophecy, under the symbol of two sticks becoming one in the hand of the prophet, is foretold the union of the children of Israel with the children of Judah, when their restoration shall be accomplished." He then points out the distinction between the children of Judah and the Ten Lost Tribes, whom he regards as being mixed amongst the European, or nominally Christian nations, to the North of Palestine, quoting Hosea vii 8, Jer. iii. 12, 18, and xxxi. 6—9 in support of this view. "But one may ask," he goes on to say, "How is this restoration to be effected? Jesus answers, 'Then shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven, and He shall send His angels, and they shall gather together His elect,' etc. (Matt. xxiv. 30, 31)—i.e., it will suddenly be made apparent that Jesus still lives and is in heaven, for His angels will influence the best of mankind, and cause them to associate together for the purpose of effecting the restoration; and this will be the sign of the Son of man in heaven, for men have hitherto acted, in general, as if they considered that Jesus did not exist, or, if He did, that He paid little or no attention to the affairs of this world. But if they see thousands united together, and forming a community as evidently influenced by the Spirit or angels of Jesus, as the apostles and first Christians were on the day of Pentecost, they will have sufficient evidence that Jesus still lives in heaven; therefore, such an event would be 'the sign of the Son of man in heaven.' It should be observed that Jesus does not say that He will come Himself personally at this time, but merely that "He shall send His angels, and they shall gather together His elect,' etc." He then points out that it will not be from among the Jewish people that the leaders of the restoration will appear, but from among the descendants of the Ten Tribes of Israel, supporting His statement by quoting Isa. li. 17—20. "So it is plain," he goes on to say, "that it is not the Jews (who are represented by their capital, Jerusalem) who will be the first to 'awake [and] stand up' to effect the restoration, but the descendants of the Ten Tribes of Israel; for it is written, that 'there shall be a day that the watchmen upon the Mount Ephraim shall cry, Arise ye, and let us go up to Zion unto the Lord our God. . . . For I am a father to Israel, and Ephraim is my firstborn.' This prophecy shows us clearly that it is the descendants of the Ten Tribes, and more particularly of Joseph and Ephraim, who are to be the first and most conspicuous agents in effecting the restoration; therefore 'the Shepherd, the Stone of Israel,' which is destined to smite the 'great image' (which represented all the kingdoms of the earth), is said to be descended from Joseph. 'Joseph is a fruitful bough. . . . The arms of his hands were made strong by the hands of the mighty God of Jacob; from thence is the Shepherd, the Stone of Israel' (Gen. xlix. 22—24). . . . And that it is 'the sons of Joseph,' who are to be the most distinguished at the time of the restoration of Israel, is apparent also from the fact that 'the birthright' was given to them when it was taken from Reuben." . . . After quoting 1 Chron. v. 1, 2, he adds: "Here we find it distinctly stated that 'the birthright was given to the sons of Joseph,' and again that 'the birthright was Joseph's;' but that 'Judah prevailed above his brethren, and of him came the chief ruler.' 'The birthright' was never taken from Joseph and given to Judah, so the birthright is still Joseph's, although Judah has prevailed to that extent that 'of him came the chief ruler' (first David, the type of Christ; afterwards, Jesus Christ Himself). Yet Judah does not prevail to the extent of taking away the birthright from Joseph altogether; so at the restoration it is 'the sons of Joseph,' not those of Judah, who will inherit the birthright, and be the most distinguished in the work of setting up God's kingdom on the earth. It was quite distinction enough for Judah that 'of him came the chief ruler."

Having asked the questions, "How and when is the restoration to be effected?" and quoted Isa. xxx. 26; Dan. xii. 1; Joel ii. 32; and Jer. li. 5, 6, 9, 10, 46, he adds: "These quotations from the prophecies show us plainly how the restoration is to be effected. A very great degree of heavenly light and knowledge is to be given to the best among men, and at the same time all the nations of the earth are to be involved in trouble such as never was since there was a nation, even to that same time.' . . . In Daniel the sign of this time is given: 'Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased' (Dan. xii. 4). This sign is now fulfilled before our eyes! It is now that the 'many' travel or 'run to and fro;' for it is now that the 'many' have the means of doing so! It is now that we have railroads and steamboats, etc. Until this generation only few could travel, for as they had no better conveyances than coaches or ships, 'many' could not afford time or money to travel or run to and fro. It is now also that 'knowledge' is so greatly 'increased,' that the 'many' have access to all human knowledge, inasmuch as they read and write; so that when one does not read and write, he is an exception to the general rule. In all former generations the 'many' were unable to read or write, and it was only the few who could do either; therefore, it is this generation which is remarkably distinguished for travelling and for knowledge. . . . It only remains to notice that 'the glory of the Lord shall be revealed' suddenly, just when men least expect it; for, 'as it was in the days of Noah, so shall it be also in the days of the Son of man,' etc. (Luke xvii. 26—30). And if we are to be surprised so suddenly, surely we cannot reasonably expect any other warning of the time being near than that which the beforementioned signs give us; so now, at any moment, the best among the descendants of Judah (i.e., the Jews), and also of the Ten Tribes of Israel . . . . may be called upon to unite together as one community in order to effect the restoration of Judah and Israel; and their first requisite will be knowledge, for they cannot be expected to have faith sufficient to enable them to engage heartily in so great a work unless they have some knowledge of the purposes of God, as revealed in the prophecies, which were intended to be as 'a light that shineth in a dark place until the day dawn' (2 Pet. i. 19)." And he thus concludes his essay, "The restoration of Judah and Israel will most certainly be accomplished shortly. None can possibly hinder it, because none can frustrate the designs of the Almighty; nevertheless, though we cannot 'fight against God' and prevail, we may act in concert with Him as His servants, and be pre-eminently successful. We may find out what His designs and purposes are by studying the Bible, which was evidently written by men who were influenced by angels; and as we acquire information ourselves we may communicate it to others, and endeavour to induce them to co-operate with us and with the Almighty in carrying out these designs and purposes. Thus we may cause others also to become His servants, and so we may greatly lessen the 'trouble' which is now about to come upon the world, in order to bring about the restoration of Judah and Israel, and the establishment of God's kingdom in the earth."

Digitized by Google

It will be seen, from all this, that Mr. Monk is not a mere blind enthusiast, who has suddenly thought of this great project, but one who, after long and mature consideration of the wondrous subject, wishes, like myself, to proceed from theoretical speculation to practical effort. It seems quite evident to me that when he wrote this essay he never dreamed that he was actually located upon one of the most prominent peaks of the prophetic "Mount Ephraim," but that, having now at length made this important discovery, he is irresistibly constrained to act the part of a 'watchman' in the manner which appears to himself the most feasible. I shall certainly try to communicate with him, and point out to him the importance of setting about the exploration of Tara Hill, for the recovery of the "title-deeds," which I regard as an indispensable preliminary to any attempt to gain possession of Palestine. Should these be found, as I confidently anticipate, it would prove to the whole world our right to the possession of that country, and obviate the necessity of making a purchase of it. I cannot say how Mr. Monk's book came into my possession. When searching for material for the work which I mentioned in my pamphlet, "The Reappearing of the Ark of the Covenant," that I had prepared for publication, I found it in my bookcase, and have incorporated some of these extracts as specimens of independent testimony to the continued existence of the Ten Tribes, but, as I have not as yet got anything like enough subscribers to justify me in publishing it, I now place this information before the readers of the BANNER. And I would take this opportunity of asking them, and the readers of my pamphlet, to help me to bring it out. Even though they may not all agree with everything that I have stated in it, still they will find in it much to interest them, of which that I have now given is only a single specimen.

ISRAEL'S TRAINING IN EXILE.

By W. S. CAVILL.

PART I.

AMONG the numerous questions which arise for consideration in connection with the position and mission of the elect Hebrew race, none are more important than those which relate to the nature and aim of the divine dealings with the seed of Abraham, in view of the accomplishment, in due time and order, of the sovereign purpose of Jehovah by their instrumentality. Why should the history of the children of Israel be so many-phased? Why should the unity first established among them have been cleft in twain? Why should their perverse conduct have been endured with for so long? Why should the seeming climax before the world be extinction from off the scene of history? Why should the consummating acts in the great drama of providential dealings with Israel yet remain beyond the horizon of human vision? To these questions we cannot hope to gain a full reply. For even in making an attempt we should place ourselves on the border-line between "the secret things" which the Law-giver declared to "belong unto the Lord our God," and those things which are matters of distinct revelation. We have, however, before us for encouragement, that the latter are our heritage for ever, and, therefore, what we strive for is only to endeavour to gather the teaching of Holy Writ upon the important topic now under our notice.

What, in the first place, is the divine purpose to be wrought out through Israel under the strong over-ruling hand of her covenant God? Is it not that "Abraham shall become a great and mighty nation, and all the nations of the earth shall be blessed in him"? (Gen. xviii. 18). Is it not that "the glory of the Lord" shall be disseminated over the earth? (Num. xiv. 21, 22). Is it not that, through all time, there may be present in the world a living, active witness for God (Isa. xliii. 10), whose work shall be verily and indeed done (ver. 21), notwithstanding the opposition or combination of contrary forces? (ver. 10). Else why the emphatic words of the apostle Peter, when writing to the "sojourners of the dispersion," whom he describes as "guarded through faith unto a salvation ready to be revealed in the last time," he says, "But ye are an elect race, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, a people for God's own possession, that ye may shew forth the praises of Him Who hath called you out of darkness into His marvellous light"?

The late Mr. John Wilson thus wrote in his lecture on "The Training and Education of the Patriarchs," * "Having chosen a particular family whereby to exercise a most extensive influence among mankind; having appointed them the most advan-

* Both this lecture and the next on "The Training of Israel under the Judges and the Kings," would well repay perusal. See "Our Israelitish Origin," fifth edition, pp. 70—98.

Digitized by Google

tageous position from which to dispense to all the ends of the earth the blessings of which, in the first place, they were to be made partakers; having indubitably secured unto them by reiterated promise, the blessings of the firstborn; having chosen Israel to be the 'bond or cable of His inheritance,' the instructors of mankind, and the declarers of His glory unto the nations, the Most High dealt with them accordingly. He brought them near unto Himself, led them about, and instructed them (Deut. xxxii. 10). As a tender parent with a child, He took them by the arms, and taught them to go, gradually strengthening them for the service in which they were afterwards to be engaged for their heavenly Father and their brethren of mankind. He brought them into every variety of situations, thereby continually enlarging their experience, and giving them a sympathy with universal nature. He qualified them for all climes, and for meeting with every condition of life; for laying hold upon all instrumentality, and for seizing upon every medium through which blessing might be conveyed unto the whole family of Adam."

After touching upon many points of interest in respect to Israel in Old Testament times, Mr. Wilson thus wrote, "The most superficial view of the known history of Israel must convince us, therefore, that they cannot be found an inferior, or even a stationary people. They were ever in a state of transition, passing from one lesson to a higher in the school of their great Teacher. In them eminently was the saying to be fulfilled, 'Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it' (Prov. xxii. 6). Their symbols are the cedar, the olive, and the palm-tree, which all bring forth fruit, in old age 'they shall be fat and flourishing, to show that the Lord is upright, my rock, and no unrighteousness is in Him' (Psa. xcii). The training of Israel—in the fathers, in Egypt, in the wilderness, under the judges, and under the kings, more especially before the separation of Ephraim from Judah, and also afterwards under the prophets—all seems to indicate a peculiar interest taken in this people by the infinitely wise God, who has claimed them as His children, and has avowed His purpose to make of them a royal priesthood."

If such, then, be the purpose for the accomplishment of which the election of Israel was made; and if such be the care manifested toward this people in the course of their Old Testament history, can we doubt for a moment but that the hand of God still rests upon them? The purpose of Jehovah still stands firm. "My counsel," saith God, "shall stand, and I will do all My pleasure." And again, "For I the Lord change not; therefore ye, O sons of Jacob, are not consumed" (Mal. iii. 6). Need we a stronger guarantee for the preservation of the elect seed, and for the continuance of the mighty operations of divine power on their behalf.

We cannot pursue our subject better than by a glance at the picture presented to us by our blessed Lord in the Prodigal Son, in the light of its representation of the position of Ephraim-Israel during different stages of her history.

Tired of home life, and dissatisfied with parental control, the younger son is said to request to have beforehand his portion of the father's goods. His request being granted, he proceeded to secure unto himself the fullest enjoyment, in his estimation, of the liberty thus gained. But he does not remain long in the neighbourhood of his home. He urges his footsteps into self-imposed exile, and in a country far away wastes the substance the possession of which had been the burden of his aspiration. Careless of himself, disregardful of the common rules of prudence, he reaps a sad harvest of disappointment and trouble. At length, when he comes to realise his position, he bitterly reproaches himself, draws a harrowing comparison between the condition of the servants in his father's household and his own, and determines to return and ask to be taken by his father into hired servitude. Thus resolved, he sets his face homeward. But look! Far off—far in the distance—just within the possible border-line of vision, there comes the familiar form of the parent, from whose presence the prodigal had once rushed, and whose love he had truly forfeited. Once recognition assured, the steps of the father quicken, and in the fulness of acquitting love, he runs, falls upon his son's neck, and kisses him. The expression of unworthiness is tendered, but the loving response is far beyond what the son could have anticipated. "Bring forth quickly the best robe, and put it on him; and put a ring on his hand, and shoes on his feet; and bring the fatted calf, and kill it, and let us eat, and be merry; for this my son was dead, and is alive again; he was lost, and is found." The interposition of the elder brother availed not to arrest the rejoicing which attended the prodigal's return. He was only reminded of the privileges which had been his continuous enjoyment, while the meetness of the favour displayed towards his younger brother was affirmed in most emphatic language.

Such is the one picture; we now turn to the other.

A spirit of discontent early manifested itself among the Hebrew tribes. Even in the days of the theocracy, many of the tribes rendered but a partial service in the defence of what ought to have been for all matters of common interest. And when they were suffered to have the supposed luxury of kingly rule, they still nurtured a revolting disposition. At length their desire was granted, and "Ephraim departed from Judah" (Isa. vii. 17) under divine sanction (1 Kings xii. 24), carrying with them "the kingdom" (xii. 31), with the exception of a reserved tribe (ver. 32), and also the covenant name of Israel (Gen. xlviii. 16). The breach thus made was speedily widened. Worldly tactics on the part of Jeroboam, the new king, dictated the placing of two calves in Bethel and in Dan, and the appointment of an unauthorised priesthood. This was designed to withdraw the people from participating in the temple-worship at Jerusalem, and had also the effect of driving from the cities of Israel the Levitical priesthood. Even the solitary witnesses for God, who under the name of prophets were sent among them, they soon learned to despise, and under the rule of a later dynasty added greater approximation towards the idolatry of their Gentile neighbours. At length the anger of God fell upon them, and exile from the land of their fathers was the divine decree. From this there was no escape (Amos ix. 10), but their sin was charged upon them as the cause (Hosea viii. 5). They were to become "Wanderers among the nations" (ix. 17), and "as a vessel wherein is no pleasure" (viii. 8).

(To be continued).

RESTORATION TIMES.

By John T. Gott.

It is impossible to imagine the blessed condition of Adam and Eve in the Garden of Eden. Their posterity, alas, know too well the bitter penalty the breaking of the "one" command has cost. Ere they were "driven out" the Divine promise of restoration was made. Dark and vague it seemed, but the world is growing old now, and what has transpired on its surface enables us, in these latter days, to understand its meaning, and to witness, gradually developing, the Divine plan of restoration.

It is evident, from Gen. i. and viii., that God intended the whole earth to be occupied by living creatures, and His determination is reiterated in even more forcible language to Noah after the flood (Gen. ix. 7).

According to the Divine purpose, men were to fill the earth—i.e., "to spread over the whole earth; not, indeed, to separate, but to maintain their inward unity, notwithstanding their dispersion" (Jamieson).

We see the evil effect of the Fall, in the human idea of building a city and a tower. Why? "Lest we be scattered abroad upon the face of the whole earth" (xi. 4). This human idea was diametrically opposed to the Divine decree. The God of heaven must and will be obeyed. Thereupon followed the confusion of tongues, the Divine plan of compelling men individually to spread abroad and replenish the earth. As man, individually, failed to do this, God raised up from Abram a nation who should.

Digitized by Google

Again we see the evil effects of the Fall. Abraham's seed, exiled in Egypt, enduring untold sufferings, is delivered, and restored to the promised land, a slight foretaste of the second and final restoration predicted by the prophets of old (Isa. xi. 11.).

But the leprosy of sin still prevailed, and the Two Houses of Israel, like the individuals of the former era, sinned grievously in the sight of the Lord. The House of Israel was "cast out," lost sight of by mankind, uncared for, like the Prodigal Son of the Parable, but never forgotten by the Holy One of Israel. The House of Judah was afterwards banished, restored, and at length dispersed among all nations, but with this difference, that they are recognised and known wherever they may roam.

Now Jehovah's purposes must be accomplished. Through the instrumentality of the chosen people, Abraham's seed were to become a blessing to the whole earth, to carry to all people the glad tidings of the Gospel, and to fill the desolate heritages of the earth. The House of Judah—Jews proper—are not doing this in any shape or form; therefore, as God's Word is true, the House of Israel—Israelites—must be doing it in these latter days. The British people are the only people in the world doing this prescribed work, and must, therefore, be identified as Israelites.

The British nation is the stone kingdom of prophecy, which was predicted to grow until it filled the whole earth. So "Israel shall blossom and bud and fill the face of the earth with fruit." No one can honestly gainsay the fact that the British Empire is growing, in spite of all the opposing forces brought to bear against any further increase of our national responsibilities. If this be not so, then the Bible is SILENT respecting the most extraordinary people that ever ruled in this world. But, inasmuch as profane history bears due testimony to the truth of prophecy, and its literal fulfilment, in the rise and fall of all the great universal Empires of ancient times, we may rest assured that it will be right with respect to the last universal Empire—the "Stone kingdom,"—Israel-Britain of modern days.

The prophets, in their predictions, spake of nations under the name they had in their day. Time works wondrous changes, and even nations lose their ancient names. Nevertheless, the predictions of the prophets are sufficient guide for us, and enable us to identify them.

Israel in the latter days was to be a neutral power (Hide thyself, &c.—Isa. xxvi. 20). This has been Britain's policy. In the latter days two mighty Empires are to be opposed to each other, each desiring universal supremacy. In Bible terms, they are Gog v. Israel; in modern language, they are Russia v. Britain. The Bible declares the end of this conflict, and we have faith to believe that that end will be literally accomplished (Ezek. xxxviii.).

We, as a nation, shall be neutral during the European earthquake woe, powerfully described as a woe, for men everywhere now dread a European war, and for the best of reasons. As we, nationally, hold to-day the protectorate of the lands of the Bible, the Gates of our enemies, and the maritime highways of the world, so shall we, eventually, obtain peaceable possession of the last great Gate of the world—the sublime Porte—Constantinople. But ere that possession is acquired we shall be menaced by many dangers, dangers so great that we shall seem to be on the eve of national extinction, but it will not be so, for our God will ever remember His "covenant." In comparison with other nations, our land force is very small; our navy not what it ought to be; and altogether, we are not in a position, humanly speaking, to hold our own. This was predicted to be the condition of Israel in the latter days, "Strengthen ye the weak hands, and confirm the feeble knees" (Isa. xxxv. 3). "The Hebrew for strengthen refers to the strength residing in the hands for grasping and holding a thing manfully; confirm to the firmness in the knees with which one keeps his ground, so as not to be dislodged by any other" (Fausset: Read ib. to ver. 10).

These are the early signs of Restoration times. In connection with these times, Federation takes a prominent place, which seems to be the meaning of Ezekiel's vision, "I will lay sinews upon you." Federation with the mother country simply means universal Empire. Universal Empire means the spread, extension and prevalence of one universal language, as it was in the beginning (Gen. xi. 1).

The longest dream we can have occupies but a few seconds. Ezekiel's vision of the valley of dry bones was the vision of a miracle performed gradually, quickly, and successfully. Our Saviour came into the world to "fulfil the law and the prophets." We shall profit by meditating deeply over every word He uttered, every act He performed. His miracles were wonderful, and they were wrought to teach us the way in which Jehovah would fulfil all He had promised to the seed of Abraham, "Then shall the eyes of the blind be opened," &c. (Ib.).

For light and guidance on this subject, we must look to Him who said, "I am the Light of the world." From Him alone must radiate that light which will penetrate the obscurity that hangs over the dark sayings of Moses and the prophets, and the hidden meaning of that mysterious book, the Revelation of St. John the Divine. When men, taught by the Holy Spirit, come to realise fully the true meaning of His acts and sayings, they will then be able to see the harmony of the whole revelation of God. This, we opine, will be the great spiritual feast of the restoration times—times which will show how slow we have been to learn, how blind we have been not to perceive the meaning of the plainest and simplest declarations of prophecy.

These thoughts lead us to a brief consideration of one of the two most remarkable miracles of our Saviour, one that bears exactly on our own Identity times, and one in which "the details are the fullest" (Dr. Brown), viz. :—

"THE DISPUTED IDENTITY OF THE BLIND BEGGAR."

He was a "beggar," whose origin was unknown, for whom the majority cared nothing in those days, and for whom only a few had pity. This "beggar" is symbolical of the House of Israel, described in another way, in the parable of the Prodigal Son. He was a "blind beggar:" "blind from his birth." Blindness does happen to children through parental indiscretion, but it was not so in this case. Now we have to remember that it is written, "blindness" or "a hardening in part hath befallen Israel, until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in" (Rom. xi. 25). In order that this man might be healed, our Saviour spat on the ground and made clay of the spittle, and anointed his eyes with the clay, and said unto him, "Go, wash in the pool of Siloam" (which is, by interpretation, Sent). He put that on to his eyes, which, one would think, would prevent him seeing, a most unlikely remedy. This is, evidently, symbolical. The "clay" indicates that human instrumentality, not of the type humanly anticipated, would be used in bringing sight to the "blind people"—the House of Israel.

The "blind beggar," whose eyes were covered with clay, was sent to wash in Siloam, and returned seeing. This is symbolical of the son sent to work in the master's vineyard. The House of Judah said, "I go, sir, and went not." The House of Israel said, "I go not, but afterwards he repented, and went," and, to this people, restoration to sight is predicted.

Digitized by Google

Just as blindness in a beggar is a sign or mark by which his identity may be easily established, so must we understand that the House of Israel will bear characteristics which make them peculiar, easily known by all nations.

When the "blind beggar" returned "seeing," others saw a remarkable change in him, but he himself felt the greatest, for to him all things had become new: the blemish had been removed, and his countenance was illuminated by its most distinguishing features.

Now arises the dispute respecting his identity. Those who knew him said, "This is he." Others said, "He is like him," but he said, "I am he." This is plainly prophetical of the time when the Identity of the lost House of Israel should come to be established. Those who know the history and characteristics of the British people, say, This nation is Israel. Others say, This people is like Israel; and, as we find the "blind beggar" proclaiming his own identity, so do we find the British people, and no other people, declaring and proclaiming their Identity!

The disputed identity of the "blind beggar" was referred to the Pharisees, even as now, Our Identity has been, time and time again, referred to the clergy. A careful consideration of the context (John ix.) will show that we are passing through precisely a similar experience. The young man baffled the Pharisees at every point by natural logic. They questioned and cross-questioned him; they appealed to his parents, and threatened "to put him out of the synagogue." They recalled him, reviled him, but he, who was aforetime blind, courageously and tenaciously maintained his position (read ver. 30—33). Enraged at this overwhelming argument, they exclaim, "Dost thou, a base-born, uneducated, impudent youth, teach US, the trained, constituted, recognised guides of the people, in the things of God? Out upon thee" (Dr. Brown), and they excommunicated him. We shall not sully this page by illustrating the literal truth of this phase in these Identity times. Those who have worked with us, or who have studied the BANNER OF ISRAEL during the ten years of its career, know not a little of clerical pride, intolerance, and vindictiveness; and that for choice (?) invective there are some modern Pharisees who possess that power in a superlative degree, and who, like the Pharisees of old, in spite of the most irrefutable testimony, deny that this can be of God.

Some were brought to Jesus to be healed. Blind Bartimeus cried after Him, but this "blind beggar" neither "sought" nor "cried." "As Jesus passed by He saw a man, blind from his birth." So is it predicted of Israel. Isaiah, speaking of Israel's restoration times, says, "Thou shalt be called, Sought out" (lxii. 12). And again, "I am found of them that sought Me not" (lxv. 1).

These are further signs of restoration times—times which are described in such graphic and glowing language by the Evangelical prophet. These times seem to be at hand. The process has been gradually developing, and, as in the miracle performed on the "blind beggar," restoration may be brought about with startling suddenness.

This great theme brings us to new scenes and times as they existed before the Fall. We have seen restoration in the individual (the blind beggar) teaching us lessons respecting that great restoration which shall take place when "the Lord shall set His hand the second time to recover the remnant of His people which shall be left from Assyria," &c. (Isa. xi. 11). This will also lead to, and teach us much respecting universal restoration.

The national restoration of Israel (One of a city, &c.), or, in modern phraseology, the re-colonisation of Palestine, will be back to "a garden," for great terrestrial changes will take place in Palestine and the Arabian desert (the territory promised to Abraham's seed, but never yet inherited by them), "And they shall say, This land that was desolate is become like the Garden of Eden," et. seq. (Ezek. xxxvii. 35).

But "restoration" will be something more than to a garden or paradise. In the palmy days of King Solomon, Palestine was the glory of all lands: Jerusalem was the glory of Palestine: the temple was the glory of Jerusalem: and the pinnacle was the glory of the temple. But in these latter days it will be to something grander, nobler, more glorious. It will be to a city costlier, more stately, more glorious than the ancient city—Jerusalem. It will be to a temple (vide Ezek. xl. &c.), where God will be worshipped visibly, "in the beauty of holiness;" where the Shechinah glory will be seen, but "in a degree much more transcendent, even as the proportions of the new temple will exceed those of the old."

Dec. 1886.

THE NAME THEREOF IS CALLED BAMAH UNTO THIS DAY.

By E. WILMSHURST, RETFORD.

PART I.

IN the Illustrated London News of Nov. 6 and 13 last, are given, for the first time in history, accurate representations and descriptions of the wonderful rock-cut statues of the BAMIAN country, Central Asia. The largest, which is engraved on the first of the above dates, being the loftiest statue in the world (the whole are from sketches by Captain Maitland, of the Afghan Boundary Commission). It is now ascertained to be 173 feet high, or only three feet less than the height of the Nelson Column in Trafalgar-square, London.

The gigantic Egyptian statues in the now destroyed transept of the Crystal Palace, which towered up to the very roof, were only about 50 feet in height, the Olympian Jupiter of Phidias being 60 feet; the Colossus of Rhodes something over 100 feet. Yet this gigantic image was covered with burnished gold, for the Chinese pilgrim, who saw it about A.D. 630, says that "its golden hues sparkled on every side, and its precious ornaments dazzles the eyes by their brightness." He also states that it is a figure of Buddha.

In the early ages of man's history, it was the universal instinct of our Asiatic ancestors to associate the presence of the Almighty with "high places" and with stupendous mountain heights. The very name of the "Himal-ayas," or the "heavenly mountains," is in itself a link, which shows that the Indo-Germanic and Saxon races must have come from the cradle of the human race in Central Asia; for "heaven," in German, is Himmel; in Alemannic, Himele; in Francic, Himile; and in old Saxon, Himil; and the Eastern nations always associated sacred ideas with the immaculate purity of those snowy and inaccessible heights—the crystal floor, on which the throne of God reposed, and among the mountains, all Eastern nations believed that paradise was placed. Mount Meru, or Su-Meru, THE mountain, was the Olympus of the East.

We see, in the history of Israel, how the God of Abraham revealed Himself on Sinai, and how they worshipped Him on "high places," on Moriah, Carmel, and other elevations of the Promised Land; and from the mountainous plateau of Central Asia, Historians trace home the original streams of the Gothic and Saxon races, who call their heaven (Himmel) by the Oriental name. We must remember, therefore, that it was the sacred, classic, holy region of early Asiatic civilisation, and of those numerous nations of the ancient world, among which were the insignificant provincial peoples of the Jehudi, or Jews, under the rule of David's line; and the adjacent kingdom of the Beth k'Humri, the house of Omri, or Aumbri (otherwise called, as by the prophet Amos, Beth-Isaac, or Isaka); the Ten Tribes of Israel, the scapegoat, who wandered into the wilderness of the nations; the Prodigal Son, who rebelled from his Father's love; Ephraim, "my firstborn."

And in the Holy Records we see how the father's heart yearned after the Rebel "house," and how, though his justice chastised them with all the curses pronounced by Moses, the man of God, for the "seven times" which should pass over them in their Gentilised condition, yet we see in the utterances of the co-temporary prophets whom He sent after them from Judah to the lands of their captivity, for century after century, that He remembered his covenant with Abraham, His friend, and left them not alone in their misery, but sent prophet after prophet to recall them to a sense of their wretchedness and sin.

Digitized by Google

A hundred and twenty-six years after the deportation of Israel to the cities of the Medes, the word of the Lord came to His servant Ezekiel, when they had had time to recover from the shock of their captivity, to take root, consolidate, and increase among the Medes near to the Getæ, or Goths, on the river of Media, still called Habor (Abor), or K'habour river. At this date the military power of Nineveh was tottering to its fall; The rising power of Babylon was neutralising its pressure on the subject-peoples whom the astute policy of Sargon and Salmeneser had deported from the Mediterranean seaboard to the pasture lands of the Medes; and the restless, active, indomitable character of the Isacæ (or Scythic Israel), beaten, but never conquered, was beginning to show itself in their political life, destined shortly to assert itself in their nomade state, and, as God's "battle-axe," to smash up in turn Nineveh, Babylon, Persia, Greece, and Imperial Rome itself, in their Gentile disguise as Scythians; as sheep feeding Sakai in Xerxes' time; as Sassanidæ in the East, and as the Sac-Ambri, the Longobardi, Saxones and Cheruschi of the Indo-Germanic races, who checked the arms of Rome, and made Augustus Cæsar exclaim, "Varus, give me back my legions;" while other hordes broke out in another stream, and as Cimbri, Kelts, or Gaels, pounded away at Nebuchadnezzar's image, and sacked the eternal city herself. We do not imply that they were unmixed with, or rather among, Gentile emigrant Asiatic streams, but the "breed" of Israel assuredly was asserting itself, and was the motive power which hurled those Gothic hordes on that Roman Empire which had destroyed Jerusalem, and which was destined to be smitten on its feet of iron and clay by the "stone cut out without hands."

It was on the K'habour river that one main body of Israel was located, and we know that they were at this time divorced from their God, regarding Jerusalem not merely with no affection, but as a positively hostile city; hating with all the hatred of successful rebels David's line of kings, and not only indifferent to the Messianic promises given at a comparatively recent date to David and Solomon, to be fulfilled in their line, but probably incensed at the claims of the Jehudi to be the head House of the race, because in possession of the royal family, and the seat of the temple of Jehovah. We can understand, therefore, that it was their interest, no less than their desire, to deny the claims of the former, and to seek other "high places" than those of Judah and Jerusalem, and (as headed up by Ephraim, who was substituted for Reuben by Jacob as his political heir and firstborn), to fall back on those promises which originally were given to the whole race of Israel in common, and not to Judah in particular. To them the Psalms of David and their magnificent promises, were but the private sayings, or drivellings, of the hated dynasty of David, from whom they had rebelled, and whose religious and Messianic claims they treated with supreme contempt. Ephraim had turned to his idols, and his Father "Let him alone."

(To be continued.)

PROGRESS IN LINCOLNSHIRE.—Surgeon-General Grant gave a lecture at Skegness on Monday evening, the 22nd November. The general argument was that the nation fulfilling the prophetic mission of Israel in the latter days must be Israel. There were about 200 present, and the lecture was listened to with marked attention and frequent applause. On the following evening a meeting was held for conversation. It was not so well attended, but the result was that about 20 persons joined to form an association.

THE AMERICAN ATHEIST, COLONEL ROBERT INGERSOL.

TOWARDS the end of November last we were requested by Mr. Isaac Loveland to publish a statement in writing, sent him by Dr. H. Hodson Rugg to the effect that Mr. Edward Hine's lecturing efforts in America had resulted in the conversion of "Colonel Robert Ingersol, the American Atheist," and that 5,000 of his followers had also imitated his example and "joined the Episcopal Church." We thought the statement so extraordinary that we paused and resolved to write to Mr. Charles Latimer, the President of the "International Institute for Preserving and Perfecting Weights and Measures" in Cleveland, O., U.S.A., in order to ascertain the facts from him. We knew he sympathised with Mr. Hine in his work, and felt we should have an impartial report. His reply, dated Dec. 18, has just reached us, and is to the following effect:—

"With regard to the statement that Colonel Robert Ingersol, with 5,000 of his followers, have become Christians through the medium of Mr. Edward Hine's lectures, I regret to say that Colonel Ingersol, when last heard from, was as great an infidel as ever. He is said to be suffering from a very painful disease in the throat, but if that is true, it has not led him to express any change of opinion. I have no doubt that a large number of persons have been moved to consider the remarkable proofs of the truth of the Anglo-Israel theory; and that many of them have been led to this investigation through Mr. Hine's preaching. He has been wonderfully faithful in teaching the truths of the Identity. But it is difficult to give statistics on such questions, and I think such statements are calculated to injure, rather than do good." Mr. Latimer adds that "he has read the BANNER from time to time with very great interest."

We think it our duty to make the above known, as reported now by Mr. Latimer, because many of our friends, deeming the report true, are ready to proclaim "the glorious news" with shouts of joy. We must reserve these for a little time; but at present it is well to know that there has been some mistake on Mr. Edward Hine's part in sending the tidings home. The statement is clearly premature; and he ought to be made acquainted with that fact.

Correspondence.

DAWLEY CIRCUIT.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR PHILO-ISRAEL,—Many thanks for your last week's article on "The Starved." I would that everyone might read it. God will help the nation, and we must help one another. Here intense distress now prevails. The principal works, iron and coal, that feed this district have been closed 26 weeks, and are still closed. Many Christians who had saved a little money have removed. Twenty-eight left the station one day recently for America. The poor remain. Besides parish relief, a local committee feeds 300 families weekly in a comparatively small population. A working men's sick club had lent £400 on our circuit property, and have called it in, as they say, to pay pressing funeral claims. So unlikely were we and they to get this that they offered to give us £50, and leave £100 as debt for our paying £250. This we engaged, and have made every sort of local effort, as special sermons, lecture, tea meeting, service of song, and private donations. These continued services seriously drain our ordinary Church income, so that both efforts are combined, and cannot succeed without help from outside this distressed district.

My dear Sir, a short time ago letters appeared in this paper, and others came privately, offering money to build me a church and support my ministry on Israel. I thank all those kind friends, and should love such a ministry, but cannot forsake my people, because a Conference is for a time officially blind and unkind. Jesus accomplished more by enduring and waiting, and so shall I. I shall yet see the Conference converted to the Identity. Instead of helping me to a new church and ministry, will any of your readers send aid, however small, to our efforts in the midst of so distressed a neighbourhood?

Yours in the trials and glory of Israel,

Rock-villa, Dawley, Salop, Dec. 17th, 1886. HENRY ROE.

ISRAEL'S HOPE AND DESTINY.—The new Quarterly Part is now ready, and can be had, by ordering, of any bookseller. If any friends have been informed that the magazine is "not out," will ask their bookseller to again order of his London agent.

Digitized by Google

NOTICES.

All communications intended for the Editor, to be addressed: — "Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Clifton, Bristol.

SUBSCRIPTIONS £ s. d.

Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free - 0 7 6
Two Copies (including Double Numbers) - - 0 13 6
Three Copies " " " " - 1 0 4
Four Copies " " " " - 1 5 6
Six Copies " " " " - 1 16 4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-grand, London, to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C., and W. H. GUEST & Co. 29, Paternoster-row, London.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

Contents Bills and Show Cards may be obtained on application to the Publishers.

Advertisements should be sent to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

Prepaid Advertisements are inserted at the rate of 30 words for 1s. 4d.

Price 6d., by post 7d.; Annual Subscription, 2s. 6d., post free.

THE JANUARY QUARTERLY PART

OF

ISRAEL'S HOPE & DESTINY

London: ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.; F. W. PARRY (late Guest, Hayworth & Co.), 29, Paternoster-row.

The Church, the Throne, the Empire.

PUBLISHED MONTHLY, PRICE SIXPENCE.

THE MESSENGER.

A Monthly Expositor of the Fulfilment of the Scriptures in the British Folk.

WITH THE JANUARY NUMBER IS GIVEN

A LARGE MAP OF THE HOLY LAND,

Showing the

HOLY BLATION and TRIBAL DIVISIONS,

according to the Meaning by Ezekiel.

THE MESSENGER LEAFLETS, 1s. 6d. and 2s. 6d. per hundred.

London: F. W. PARRY (late Guest), 29, Paternoster-row

No Reader of Identity Literature should be without this Almanack.

Now Ready. Price 3d. (by post, 4d.).

Interleaved edition for notes, &c., in stiff paper cover, 5d. (by post 6d). Brown cloth, gilt lettered, interleaved throughout with ruled paper 1s. (Post free on receipt of postal order.)

The Anglo-Israel Almanack and Diary FOR 1887.

Being the Jubilee Year of Her Majesty the Queen.

London: Printed and published by R. BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C., and may be had by order of any bookseller.

Knight & Forster's Pens

Everybody's Pen

Turned up Points

KNIGHT & FORSTER LEEDS

3/6 PER GROSS

1/- PER 1/4 GROSS.

LONDON-STRAKER & SONS, 124, FENCHURCH ST

or post free direct from the Makers

Basinghall Works Leeds.

LUNG OWBRIDGE'S LUNG TONIC, THE MIGHTY HEALER. Save Your Lives by Taking OWBRIDGE'S LUNG TONIC. It has a power over diseases hitherto unknown in Medicine. Are you at all Weak-chested or inclined to be Consumptive, with just a touch of Cough now and then? "Try this Wonderful Medicine." The Cough and Weakness will disappear as if by magic, and you will feel a strength and power you never had before. HAVE YOU A COUGH? A DOSE WILL RELIEVE IT. HAVE YOU A COLD? A DOSE AT BEDTIME WILL REMOVE IT. Bronchitis & Asthma it relieves instantly The Spasms of Coughing so dreadful in Whooping Cough become less with each dose of the medicine. — Prepared by W. T. OWBRIDGE, Chemist, Hull Sold in Bottles 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d. & 11s. by all Chemists and Patent Medicine Vendors. Wholesale all London and Provincial Houses. TONIC

Grand New Year Present.

500 DOZEN CASHMERE MUFFLERS.

White or Cream Colour, extra large size. Suitable for Lady or Gentleman.

TO BE GIVEN AWAY

To every purchaser of a

Government Hearthrug

FOR ONE WEEK ONLY.

Every Lady or Gentleman reader of the BANNER OF ISRAEL will be entitled to receive one on production of the Coupon below.

150,000 Rugs have been sold in 12 months. Exquisite designs—ferns, flowers, oak-leaves, and various animal designs—viz., cat and kittens, tiger, dogs, deer, lions, &c. Suitable for drawing-room, parlour, bedroom, or kitchen. Size guaranteed 6 ft. long, 3 ft. wide. Sent to any part of the United Kingdom for 2s. 6d., two for 4s. 9d., six for 13s.

"BANNER OF ISRAEL" CASHMERE MUFFLER COUPON.—12.1.87.

This Coupon entitles every reader who purchases a Hearthrug this week to participate in my grand New Year Distribution of 500 dozen Cashmere Mufflers, free of charge.

J. WATTS, 113, BRUNSWICK ROAD, LIVERPOOL.

£5 GIVEN AWAY.

SILK HANDKERCHIEFS.

EVERY PURCHASER of our renowned SILK HANDKERCHIEFS will receive a Certificate, with all particulars, entitling them to competefor the following, SEVEN PRIZES—viz., £2, £1, 15s., 10s., 7s. 6d., 5s., and 2s. 6d., which will be awarded for the Longest List of References (giving Chapter and Verse) in the Four Gospels to the word ASTONISHED. Results in Standard, February 18th. Entries close February 14th.

We have another special line of 20,000 dozen beautifully-embossed, full sized, SILK HANDKERCHIEFS, which, in order to introduce other goods, will be offered, POST FREE, at the following low prices; One for 1s. 3d., or 16 stamps; two for 2s. 4d., or 30 stamps; three for 3s. 3d., or 42 stamps; six for 6s., or 76 stamps. The softness, elegance, and delicacy, of these goods make them infinitely preferable to the finest cambric. The brocaded designs are splendid, and display the wonderful beauty and variety of the weaver's art. Can be used for EITHER neck or pocket, and in almost any colour. Each Handkerchief will be exquisitely scented with EUGENE RIMMEL'S celebrated PERFUME. All Lists must be numbered and returned by February 14th.

No one need be afraid to send, as money will be refunded if goods are returned unsoiled. Orders will be booked in rotation until stock is exhausted. P.O.O.'s to be made payable at G.P.O. to

G. PALMER & CO., Silk Merchants, Oxford Road, Islington, London, N.

Price 6d., post free 7d.

ISRAEL'S CHRONOLOGY, compiled from the Old Testament, and arranged as a CHART giving the A.M. and B.C. dates, and Scripture references for every event therein specified, together with the points of agreement between the Bible History and the Marks and Measurements of the Great Pyramid. With Explanatory Notes and Observations by GEORGE N. WALSH.

London: Robert Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-st.

NEW WORK BY J. LEYLAND FEILDEN, Esquire.

VOX.

"THE VOICE OF HIM THAT CRIETH IN THE WILDERNESS, PREPARE YE THE WAY OF THE LORD, MAKE STRAIGHT IN THE DESERT A HIGHWAY FOR OUR GOD." (ISAIAH XL. 3.)

By J. LEYLAND FEILDEN, ESQUIRE,

AUTHOR OF

"The Word, The World, The Branch;" "The Meeting of the Nations in the Universal Day;" "Links in the Chain of Evidence Connecting Israel and England;" "The Gentiles and the Times of the Gentiles;" "Israel's Jubilee; or, 1882;" "Israel Ubiquitous,' etc., etc.

PRICE ONE SHILLING, free by post on receipt of remembrance.

London:

Robert Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

BY REV. HENRY ROE.

(Fifteenth Thousand).

1. Israel's World. Origin and Destiny of British Race, Colonies, and Empire. 2d., post free 2½d. "Worthy of a world-wide circulation."—H.B. Thompson, Association Sec. 50 post free from H. Roe for 4s. 9d.
2. Going to Africa. 1s., post free 1s. 1d.
3. Fernando Po Mission. 1s., post free 1s. 1d.
4. West African Scenes. 2s., post free 2s. 2d.
5. Consecration. 2d., post free 2½d.

50 post free from H. Roe for 4s. 9d.

No. 1 is published by R. Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.; Nos. 1 and 5 by E. Stock, 62, Paternoster-row, E.C.; and all by Rev. H. Roe, Dawley, Salop.

THE NOTE-PAPER FOR 1887.

THE JUBILEE NOTE-PAPER, 1887.

A HIGH-CLASS CREAM-LAID NOTE-PAPER, each sheet bearing a watermark device: The Portrait of Her Majesty Queen Victoria, in a wreath of Rose, Shamrock, and Thistle, and designs symbolic of the Colonies and India. Can be had glazed or unglazed surface. Price 1s. 6d. per packet of five quires; by post 1s. 10½d. Can be had with address neatly printed for 3s., by post 3s. 4½d.—Robert Banks and Son, Racquet-conrt, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

DEAFNESS IS CURABLE

R. M. says: "I am indeed pleased to tell you my hearing has returned, and that the noise in my head, which at times was most distressing, is also quite gone."

S. H. says: "Your Earal Drops, in five weeks, did what two doctors failed to do—namely, restore my hearing. I feel like a new man."

Send Postal Order for 2s. 6d. to

SPENCER GAY,

38, BATH ROAD, EXETER,

for a Bottle of Earal Drops and Medicated Wool, with instructions, post free.

ETHELINE

A New and most effective Remedy for CORNS.—Perfectly safe and harmless. Is very easily applied. Cures in a few applications, without the slightest pain. Everyone troubled with either Corns, Warts, or Bunions, will find relief by using ETHELINE. To be obtained of all Chemists, or post free for 14 stamps, from J. LLEWELLYN, CHEMIST, COWBRIDGE.

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. F. W. PARRY (late GUEST & Co.), 29, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, JAN. 12, 1887. [All rights reserved.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."

(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4

VOL. XI., No. 525. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 19, 1887. [PRICE ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
The Joint Deliberation of all Parts of Israel's Empire Regarding Federation	29
Israel's Training in Exile. By W. S. Cavill.—Part II.	30
The Name thereof is called Bamah unto this Day. By E. Wilmshurst.—Part II.	31
Israel's Place of Safety. By Surgeon-General J. M. Grant, M.D.	32
Israel in the British Isles. By Maud Watham	33
The Great Pyramid Date of A.D. 1887. By Charles Horner	33
A Lecture by Commander Roberts, R.N.	33
Lord Randolph Churchill and the Gate of Gates. By Col. Chas. J. Hadfield	34
Review	34
Correspondence	35

THE JOINT DELIBERATION OF ALL PARTS OF ISRAEL'S EMPIRE REGARDING FEDERATION.

THE Right Hon. Mr. Edward Stanhope, Secretary of State for the British Colonies, has just issued a circular to the Governors of the Colonies, which is likely to prove the first thin edge of the wedge which will, by-and-bye, result in the Federation of the Empire, and so fulfil the prophecy that "a nation or a company of nations," or "a federation of nations" shall be of Jacob. A confederation of Israelitish States is what is to come of the after-seed of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob—according to the promises—and, therefore, the circular in question, which asks the Colonies to send their representatives to consult, in April or May next, as to the possibility of establishing an understanding respecting the defence of the various parts of the Empire, and as to improved Imperial postal and telegraphic communications, will be an important step towards political Federation for which we may have some time longer to wait. Our own belief is that political Federation will not come until some acute stage of the convulsion in Europe shall have been reached, and when the danger to our race and Empire, for lack of political cohesion, shall have become apparent to the blind eyes which are now closed to all danger, and refuse to enter on paths which may lead to national expense and pecuniary embarrassment.

Mr. Stanhope's proposition, however, is one which puts the matter to the Colonies very tentatively and cautiously. It seeks not to offend or alarm them. It starts with the assumption that the Colonies all wish to be more closely united to the Mother Country and to each other than they have been hitherto. It next proposes that some definite plans for military defence should be taken into consideration—while the progress that has been made already in this direction, kept secret hitherto for obvious reasons, should be considered by a committee, as it were, of the whole Empire. This part of Mr. Stanhope's circular is very suggestive, and we reproduce it for our reader's information. He wrote thus:

Much yet remains to be done; and it is, of course, unavoidable that secrecy should continue to be observed with regard to many of the defensive measures in progress or in contemplation. The time has, however, now arrived when an attempt may fairly be made to attain to a better understanding as to the system of defence which may be established throughout the Empire. For this purpose an interchange of knowledge as to the state of preparation or as to the capabilities of organisation in each colony would lead to a more thorough understanding of their wants and wishes; but whilst Her Majesty's Government would thus be prepared to recommend for the consideration of the conference certain principles calculated to promote the general defence of the Empire, it is not our intention in calling the conference to commit either the Imperial Government or any colony to new projects entailing heavy expenditure, but rather to secure that the sums which may be devoted to this purpose may be utilised to the fullest extent, with complete knowledge of all the conditions of the problem.

Nothing can be more important than this cautious beginning of a great prophetic work. The Empire of Israel has to be confederated, in order that it develop into "a nation and a company of nations." To do this, we must lay the foundations carefully and with judgment, carrying all the Colonies with us at each step, and letting the finishing touches of the work be produced by some events which God, no doubt, has yet in store for us—to compel us to take the last decisive action. We cannot begin better than Mr. Stanhope suggests we should begin. Everybody, everywhere, agrees that we want some system of Imperial defence. Let the Empire meet by its chosen delegates, and talk the matter over, so that they may note what progress has been made already, what remains to be done, what the cost will be, and how that cost (the vital point) ought justly to be apportioned. On this last point alone will difficulty arise, for the Colonies think the Mother Country should undertake the lion's share of the expenditure, and the Mother Country naturally desires that the Colonies should pay their due and proper portion of the charges. The difficulty cannot be insuperable. Personal conference in London, in the year of our Sovereign's jubilee, cannot but result, with God's guiding and blessing, in such a decision as will meet with the concurrence of the united Empire. And this will pave the way for the political Federation yet to come!

The only other point on which the Colonial Office desires to consult, face to face with the representatives of the Colonies, is in respect to Imperial postal and telegraphic communication. The circular adds on this subject what follows :—

Digitized by Google

Second only in importance to this great question is one concerning in a special degree the interests of the Empire in time of peace. The promotion of commercial and social relations by the development of our postal and telegraphic communications could be considered with much advantage by the proposed conference. It is a subject the conditions of which are constantly changing. New requirements come into existence, and new projects are formulated, every year. It is obviously desirable that the question of Imperial intercommunication should be considered as a whole, in order that the needs of every part of the Empire may, as far as practicable, be provided for, and that suggestions may be obtained from all quarters as to the best means of establishing a complete system of communication, without that increased expenditure which necessarily results from isolated action.

Two leading subjects for consideration have been referred to, but it is not impossible that there may be some other important question which, in the general opinion of the Colonial Governments, might properly and usefully be brought under consideration. But I should deprecate the discussion at the present time of any of the subjects falling within the range of what is known as political Federation. There has been no expression of colonial opinion in favour of any steps in that direction; and Her Majesty's Government are of opinion that there would be no advantage in the informal discussion of a very difficult problem before any basis has been accepted by the Governments concerned. It might, indeed, be detrimental to the ultimate attainment of a more developed system of united action if a question not yet ripe for practical decision were now to be brought to the test of a formal examination.

The Daily Telegraph is right in its comments on the above when it says, that "Whatever be the outcome of the conference, there can be little question, that if and when it meets, it will form an era in the history of the Empire." For, in truth, as Mr. Stanhope himself wrote at the conclusion of his circular, "However modest the commencement may be, results may grow out of the conference affecting, in a degree which it is at present difficult to appreciate, the interests of the Empire and of the civilised world." The confederation of the Empire will unite the British Anglo-Saxon race as one man, and confer upon its united strength an influence which will make it the dominant Power upon the earth, for the good of all the other nations of it.

The Jubilee Year of Her Majesty will be an auspicious time to commence those consultations which, we trust, will end in Federation pure and simple. At any rate, it will be a great step towards it if the subject of the military and naval defence of the Empire, as well as of Imperial intercommunication, be placed on a sound practical basis.

ISRAEL'S TRAINING IN EXILE.

By W. S. Cavill.

(Concluded from page 24).

PART II.

But the people thus treated were pursued with promises of eventual restoration. "O Israel, thou hast destroyed thyself; but in Me is thy help" (Hosea xiii. 9). "I will ransom them from the power of the grave; I will redeem them from death: O death, I will be thy plague; O grave, I will be thy destruction:—repentance shall be hid from Mine eyes" (ver. 14). And when we further read that "Ephraim shall say, What have I any more to do with idols?" (xiv. 8) are we not reminded of the son who is represented in New Testament parable as declaring, "I will not," but afterwards repented and did the will of his father? (Matt. xxi. 29). Truly another picture of Ephraim-Israel! Resolute at first not to comply with the demands of their position under the divine covenant, and casting off from themselves every obligation, even aiming to become as other nations, this people have still, as we conceive fulfilled, and are fulfilling the high function of Jehovah's mission-agents to the world. There is, however, a strikingly peculiar difference between their position and that of the son named in the parable. He is represented as exercising free will; whereas, in the case of Israel, a strong and continuously exercised constraint of divine power produces the grand result of securing the fulfilment of duty.

A careful examination of the nature and bearing of the blessings and privileges covenanted to the Hebrew fathers must convince any candid mind that the mission committed to the seed of Abraham would be duly and fully accomplished. To Abraham, the oath of confirmation was vouchsafed (Gen. xxii. 16), and to Jacob the distinct assurance given that the word of promise should be jealously guarded to its fulfilment (xxviii. 15). But more. To Moses was afforded, by Jehovah Himself, a dark forecast of the fall of the covenant people. They would turn to idols, and Jehovah's face would be hidden from them (Deut. xxxi. 16—20). But what is added? "I said, I would scatter them into corners, I would make the remembrance of them to cease from among men: were it not that I feared the wrath of the enemy, lest their adversaries should behave themselves strangely, and lest they should say, Our hand is high, and the Lord hath not done all this" (Deut. xxxii. 26, 27). Thus does God declare Himself jealous for His own honour, and hence the promise that they should not be forsaken even in the land of their enemies (iv. 31).

We are thus led to look for the display of divine constraint, and it is both instructive and interesting to notice the fulness and firmness of the operation of the divine Hand.

Look first upon the Israelites in the place of their captivity. "We will be as the heathen" (or nations) was their resolution. "This shall not be," was God's determination. What a striking comment on what Esdras tells us of this people, that when they did move away they aimed to "go forth into a further country, where never man dwelt, that they might there keep their statutes, which they never kept in their own land" (Esdras ii. 39—48). Such might be their resolve, but its accomplishment could have no regard to the law which they had broken, but to the Gospel which they were eventually to embrace (Ezek. xx. 37), and unfold to the world. Meanwhile, the fulness of the prophecies which rested over them must be verified in their history, and that, too, while the divine recognition of them was withheld from the surrounding peoples (Hos. v. 15), although, in covenant mercy, Jehovah was verily to be their "sanctuary" (Ezek. xi. 16).

Look at the Israelites' captives next, in the wilderness of the peoples. There the divine Hand would lead them, and when there, the correction of their covenant God would be laid upon them. This is plainly shewn to us in Ezek. xx. 32—37. They were to become sifted among the peoples of the earth, even as "corn is sifted in a sieve" (Amos ix. 9; Hos. ii. 23; Zech. x. 9). But yet, how rich and how assuring the attendant promise that, however severe the correction might be, God was still with His people. "But now, thus saith the Lord that created thee, O Jacob, and He that formed thee, O Israel: Fear not, for I have redeemed thee; I have called thee by thy name, thou art Mine. When thou passest through the waters, I will be with thee; and through the rivers, they shall not overflow thee; when thou walkest through the fire, thou shalt not be burned; neither shall the flame kindle upon thee. For I am the Lord thy God, the holy One of Israel, thy Saviour" (Isa. xliii. 1—3). What a glorious prospect is here held out, that the consummation will be reached! "And ye shall know that I am the Lord, when I have wrought with you for My Name's sake" (Ezek. xx. 44).

But for Israel there was an appointed place (2 Sam. vii. 10). Hence we may expect to find a termination indicated to their wanderings (Isa. xli. 1). The consolidation of their power, and the renewal of their strength, was necessary to the fulfilment of their after-work. They were preserved for the inheritance of "the desolate heritages" (Isa. xlix. 8). And there was also the express command, "Enlarge the place of thy tent, and let them stretch forth the curtains of thine habitations; spare not, lengthen thy cords, and strengthen thy stakes: for thou shalt spread abroad on the right hand and on the left: and thy seed shall inherit the Gentiles (or nations), and make the desolate cities to be inhabited" (Isa. liv. 2, 3). In doing this, they would verify the blessing of Jacob (Gen. xxviii. 14). They would also realise how fully the preparations had been made for their movements in the distribution of the land-surface of the earth (Deut. xxxii. 8). And, at the same time, they would come into the possession of the bountiful blessings poured upon the head of Joseph.

Digitized by Google

But more is involved in the attainment of so grand an inheritance than the mere possession by Israel of worldly power and influence. Though in gaining the position of "the chief of the nations" (Jer. xxxi. 7), they would display lion-like power (Mic. v. 8), and defeat all opposition (Isa. xli. 15), yet something more was required of them. They were to "say to the prisoners, Go forth; to them that are in darkness, Shew yourselves" (Isa. xlix. 9). They were to be "as dew from the Lord" (Micah v. 7), in setting forth the praises of their covenant God (Isa. xliii. 21), and filling "the face of the world with fruit" (Isa. xxvii. 6). Thus were the people who were once "Lo-ammi," to become recognised as "the sons of the living God" (Hos. i. 10), and as "the seed which the Lord hath blessed" (Isa. lxi. 9).

Such is to be the climax before the world, but what is to be the effect upon Israel herself? On this point we are by no means in ignorance, "I will sow them among the peoples; and they shall remember Me in far countries: and they shall live with their children, and shall return" (Zech. x. 9). Though at one time regarding their hope as lost (Ezek. xxxvii. 11), they are represented as bemoaning themselves, owning their sin, and the just chastisement of their God (Jer. xxxi. 18-19). Thus are they ready to obey the command, "Return, thou backsliding Israel, saith the Lord; and I will not cause Mine anger to fall upon you; for I am merciful, saith the Lord, and I will not keep anger for ever" (Jer. iii. 12). Just what Jehovah declared as the result which would follow the removal of His manifest presence. "I will go and return to My place, till they acknowledge their offence, and seek My face: in their affliction they will seek Me earnestly" (Hos. v. 15). And what is the divine response? "I will heal their backsliding, I will love them freely: for Mine anger is turned away from him. I will be as the dew unto Israel: he shall grow as the lily, and cast forth his roots as Lebanon. His branches shall spread, and his beauty shall be as the olive tree, and his smell as Lebanon" (Hos. xiv. 4—6). And having the new covenant made with them, "the ransomed of the Lord shall return, and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads; they shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away" (Isa. xxxv. 10).

What a grand and glorious result! Notwithstanding their resolution to the contrary—in spite of all their perversity and folly—the covenant people have been led to the realisation of the blessings and privileges of their high position, and to the carrying out of their sacred mission, and that, too, in such a way, and under such conditions, that not only they themselves, but the peoples of the Gentile world will be compelled to own the sovereignty of the divine purpose, and to praise the name of Jehovah, the Lord of heaven and earth.

WE desire to join in the universal expression of regret at the sudden death of Lord Iddesleigh (better known as Sir Stafford Northcote). He was, in every sense, a worthy specimen of an upright and trustworthy English gentleman and Statesman. He was greatly respected by all parties in both Houses of Parliament, and during his long and honourable political career, laid the Conservative party under great obligations. May He who is the Husband to the widow, and a Father to the fatherless, comfort the bereaved countess and family.

THE NAME THEREOF IS CALLED BAMAH UNTO THIS DAY.

By E. WILMSHURST, RETFORD.

(Continued from p. 27.)

PART II.

IT is not generally remembered that the period in which outcast Israel was located in Halah, Habor, Hara, and the cities of the Medes—viz., about B.C. 590—was also the time of a great religious reformation in the Asiatic world, and of a movement which affects untold millions at the present day; a revolt against idolatry gross and material, a feeling after better things, the spirit feeling after God. Ezekiel, Pythagoras, and Sakya Muni, or Godama, the Indian prince-prophet, who was afterwards deified as the last incarnation of Buddha, were contemporaries; and there is strong evidence that these last two great spiritual teachers and reformers derived their esoteric doctrines and religious teaching from the first, Ezekiel, who derived his teaching from Israel's God; and while Godama Buddha regenerated the East, Pythagoras (otherwise the Pytho-"guru," or the Buddhist spiritual teacher) taught wisdom to the Greek and Ionic races; we must, therefore, expect that as Israel was to be scattered to the West and the East, the scattered people would be affected by the religious doctrines of both these two great teachers, and from their religious antecedents would be peculiarly liable to be influenced by them; as a holy nation, a peculiar people, with a national, innate knowledge of their great future, as promised to their forefather, Abraham. The district from which Godama came into India was from the "high places," Bamah, the Bamian land, the great mountainous holy region of Central Asia. In the description given of the Bamian statues in the London News, of Nov. 6, we read: "Bamian, between Cabul and Balkh, on the Paropamisus range, is 8,500 feet above the sea. Here, in A.D. 630, the Chinese pilgrim found, in the rock-cut caves, which extend for miles, over 1,000 religious monks, or Buddhists, and ten viharus, or monasteries; and this district was probably only a suburb of the great neighbouring city, Ghulghula, afterwards destroyed by Genghis Khan." In all probability a high place of remote antiquity, even in Godama the Buddha's time, and certainly within the classic and "heavenly" district of all Asia.

The prophet Ezekiel relates that (in B.C. 595), "I was among the captives by the river of Chebar," or Chabour, sent by God from Judea to this "most rebellious House" (Ezek. ii. 7); to them of the captivity in Tel-Abib," when he performed the singular prophetic actions recorded in Ezek. iv., against both Judah and Israel.

In B.C. 594 we find him back again at Jerusalem, with the elders of Judah before him (chap. viii.), when he was raised by spiritual levitation (chap. ii. 1) above the temple, and (ver. 24) then was transported by spirit-influence bodily back to the Chebar in Chaldea, and spoke to the elders of Israel thus: "Then came certain of the elders of Israel and sat before me" (chap. xiv.), and the prophet recorded the judgments against both Houses, and also in his riddle showed the *trans*planting of David's line, and the planting of the tender twig of the royal House on a fresh high place and eminent.

In B.C. 593 (chap. xx.) certain of the elders of Israel came to inquire "of the Lord," and sat before the prophet, showing that, though politically separate, and not attending the rites at Jerusalem established by David and Solomon, yet they still looked back to Jehovah: and later on, in B.C. 587 or 588, "One that had escaped out of Jerusalem came unto me saying, The city is smitten" by Nebuchadnezzar. It was during his long interview with the elders of Israel on the Chebar, in B.C. 573, that he told them "by the spirit," that in spite of their present state of rebellion both to the ordinances of Jehovah and the rule of the kingly line of David which He had chosen, yet that after "many days" of depression, the horn of the House of Israel should bud forth, and they should have a new heart, and should return to the Lord: that the hated royal line of David should reign over them in a far country, and that eventually the stick of Judah should be joined to the stick of Ephraim, and that the re-united peoples should again return to their land, and serve Jehovah on the mountains of Israel.

Digitized by Google

After he had told them his vision, they appear to have spoken to him of their desire to go to some country beyond, and inferentially to some high land, or "high place"; for he replies to them, referring to their desire, to their idolatry (or worship of the true God under forbidden emblems, or idols), and to the ultimate destiny which he had just foretold, "What is THE high place whereunto ye go? the name of it is even called Bamah (a high place) unto this day."

Dr. Moore remarks, "This play upon the words THE high place, and A high place, is unaccountable, except on the supposition that they mentioned their intention of going to some land to which they gave the name of Ha-Bamah. They talk of going to some place called THE Bamah—were they not always going to A Bamah?—committing idolatry with steady devotion." And we concur strongly with Dr. Moore in his opinion that they meant the Bamian or holy district; then, and for centuries after, the place of pilgrimage and "high place" of the Asiatic world; and at that very period, in a ferment of religious revival, or reformation, under the fervid zeal of Godama the Sak, whose recorded teachings in the many rock inscriptions of high Asia and North India, are expressed in the very ideas and words found in Ezekiel; and his sacred emblems are identically the same as those of that prophet, "the wheels," supported by the "living creatures" on a pillar, or "lifted up," the "coverings" and "chapiters," all are on the Buddhist topes at Sanchi, or Sachi; casts from which the reader may see in the South Kensington Museum.

"These symbols," says Dr. Moore, "adopted by Sakya (or Godama), afford a demonstration that Buddhism is indebted to Ezekiel for some of its grandest ideas, and would suggest the possibility that the prophet of Buddhism might even have conversed with the prophet of Jehovah, whose glory he imitates (in his emblems) and assumes." And that the Sacan people who disseminated the reformer's doctrines among the pure idolaters of India, were Hebrews, the following inscriptions testify, from the Buddhist topes and pillars at Girnor and Delhi, translated by Dr. Moore:—

"Behold, the worship is that of Jah; for the hand of God hath smitten the nation.

These are the tokens of Bamah, Dan, Budhar. . . O, our people of Sak.

Jah hath decreed judgments.

The calamity of my overthrow was the cause of the uncleanness of the Dannites, even the breaking to pieces of an entire overturning. (See Ezek. xxi. 27).

O Botans, O Nethenim, my breaking is a pure name; the state of the Nethenim is a dreadful renown.

A parching up is a sign decreed (see Isa. xli. 17). Jah hath decreed judgments.

——— and from Byrath, between Delhi and Jeypore.

There was destruction for the people; the Magadhim, (noble) the years of the suffering of Gath (Getæ?); the oppression of the times of Gomatta, (the Magian, the false Smerdis). The breaking of my speech is appropriate for the going up, as the hand of Moses. I will greatly multiply you by the exaltation of Budhen, by setting up the gifts of the high place (Bamah). The praise of Jehovah redeemeth; He hath made known the wall of defence, even the doctrine of thy Saka. The high place (Bamah) is my might (Dan. vii. 8)."

These are the doctrines of Godama the Sak, the Buddha, or Messiah of the Saxons of the East; from whence do we Saxons of the West trace our Sacan origin, and the name by which we address our deity—"God"?

(To be continued.)

ISRAEL'S PLACE OF SAFETY.

By Surgeon-General J. M. Grant, M.D.

After the exhaustive articles on this subject by Philo-Israel in the "Anglo-Israel Almanack" for 1885, and the Rev. D. Hanan in to-day's number of the Banner, I can only follow as a gleaner on the field of their labours.

If we change the tense, and read, "I have appointed" for "I will appoint," we must suppose that David was so ignorant of the promises to Abraham that he required a Seer to instruct him in them, and the same objection applies to the supposition that the more distant future of the time of the restoration of Israel to Palestine is referred to, because everlasting possession and security of occupation of the Promised Land were both promised to Abraham for his seed. They form the theme of the prophets and of some of David's most sublime prophetic Psalms, so that it is unreasonable to suppose that Nathan was commissioned to tell him what he knew and had frequently declared before. We are, therefore, driven to the conclusion that the place referred to must be one where Israel will be found securely established, and from which she will have spread abroad in all directions, as foretold by the prophets, at some time between the breach in David's kingdom and the final settlement of the Twelve Tribes in Palestine. This place is described as a wilderness, whereas we learn from Ezek. xxxvi. 8 that the fruitfulness of Palestine will be restored before the Tribes of Israel return; and from the 11th chapter and 16th verse of the same prophet, that the sanctuary, refuge, or place of safety, would not be confined to the place in which Israel would be first established, but extend to "the countries where they are come"—that is obviously her Colonies.

Having thus disposed of the locality, the next question is whether the promise of sanctuary was made to the Twelve Tribes, or only to the Ten.

Many passages of Scripture might be cited in support of Mr. Hanan's view that it applied to the Ten Tribes only; but Ezek. xi. 14—21 is so full and conclusive on the point that I will content myself with transcribing it from the Revised Version, as follows: "And the word of the Lord came unto me, saying, Son of man, thy brethren, even thy brethren, the men of thy kindred, and all the House of Israel, all of them are they unto whom the inhabitants of Jerusalem have said, Get you far from the Lord; unto us is this land given for a possession. Therefore say, Thus saith the Lord God, whereas I have removed them far off among the nations, and whereas I have scattered them among the countries, yet will I be to them a sanctuary for a little while in the countries where they are come. Therefore, thus saith the Lord God: I will gather you from the peoples and assemble you out of the countries where ye have been scattered, and I will give you the land of Israel. . . . But as for them whose heart walketh after the heart of their detestable things and their abominations, I will bring their way upon their own heads, saith the Lord God."

We must note that a distinction is made in this passage between "the countries in which they are scattered" and "the countries where they are come," the latter, not the former, being the sanctuary or place of safety. That the sanctuary is promised to Israel only, not to Judah; and that they are to be brought from it to "the land of Israel," as shewn by the fact that Israel alone is to be gathered before the Return to Palestine which is to be made by the Twelve Tribes, or a representative portion of them, together, Judah walking to Israel in the "land of the North," and returning with her (Jer. iii. 18); and I think, with Mr. Hanan, that, reading these prophecies in the light of the history of our nation, we being Israel, it is impossible to come to any other conclusion than that the place referred to in 2 Sam. vii. 10 is the British Empire of the present day.

Cheltenham, 29th Dec., 1886.

Digitized by Google

ISRAEL IN THE BRITISH ISLES.

By Maud Watham.

"The Lord removed Israel out of His sight, as He had said by all His servants the prophets."—2 Kings xvii. 23.

In this chapter of the Book of the Kings, Ezra (the author, or reviser) gives us a reason for the expulsion of Israel from their own land, and the words I have selected for our consideration open up a wide field of information, in which the Almighty's justice, mercy, free salvation, and election are brought out with marvellous clearness to the reflective and studious mind. Now what was said by the mouth of His servants the prophets respecting His "firstborn, Ephraim," (Jer. xxxi. 9)?

Read with care Hosea i. 1—10; pause at the word "yet" of verse 10; study Israel's future condition in that verse, and consider that the prophet appointed a set time by commencing verse 11 by the word "then." These two little words, "yet" and "then," are most important. They fix a time, and set forward a condition, which most certainly did not characterise the return from Babylon, and for the reasons given in our last paper. No one can read this Book of Hosea without being deeply touched with the mercies of God towards this erring, but greatly beloved people. I pray all to study every word with care, as the spiritual destitution of the house of our fathers, the work of the gracious Spirit, and the final mercy of God which He is pleased to show through His Son, our Saviour Christ Jesus, are so visibly and forcibly portrayed. No other book, to my mind, contains the Gospel so clearly, so beautifully, so concisely as this. Take, for instance, the following declarations:—"Ephraim is joined to idols, let him alone" (Hosea ix. 17). "I will allure her into the wilderness, and speak comfortably unto her" (ii. 14). "I will redeem them from death" (xiii. 14). And compare them with Gen. vi. 6; John xvii. 4; John x. 28—"It repented the Lord that He had made man;" "I have finished the work which Thou gavest Me to do;" "I give unto them eternal life." Thus from Hosea we see Israel banished, disgraced, gathered, honoured, a multitudinous, powerful, God-fearing, redeemed race.

Notice next the prophet Joel (iii. 2). "My heritage Israel" is clearly the Ten Tribes, Judah, or the Jews, having been located in Babylon, not scattered, as here described. Verse 20 of the last chapter clearly points to a union still later, when Israel stands first as the "Lord's heritage." Notice also that this ingathering commences with an outpouring of the Spirit of God; hence Israel, when found, must be a spiritually-minded people.

Next we have the prophet Amos. No one in pondering over the last chapter of his book, especially the last verse, could think for a moment that Israel ever did avail herself of the invitation of Cyrus to return to the Land of Promise with her brethren of Judah. Verse 9 of this said chapter speaks of Israel as a people overrunning the earth from end to end.

The prophet Micah (v.) also, bidden of God, raises the veil of futurity for us, that we may see and know that no down-trodden, destitute child of Abraham is the House of Ephraim, but a warlike, mighty, and purified race. Well might he cry out in the plenitude of his amazement and gratitude (vii. 18—20), "Who is a God like unto Thee, that pardoneth iniquity and passeth by the transgression of the remnant of His heritage? He retaineth not His anger for ever, because He delighteth in mercy. He will turn again, He will have compassion upon us, He will subdue our iniquities; and Thou wilt cast all their sins into the depths of the sea. Thou wilt perform the truth to Jacob, and the mercy to Abraham, which Thou hast sworn unto our fathers from the days of old."

Reader, can it be true that God is giving all these good things to a Gentile Church? If so, what do we make of these prophecies, and what of the following assertion and the context, "It is impossible for God to lie" (Heb. vi. 13—18). Another Scripture says, "God is not a man that He should lie." You, who have ever jeered at what is vulgarly called the Anglo-Israel craze, did you ever consider what you were charging the God of truth with when you persist in spiritualising His precious promises?

THE GREAT PYRAMID DATE OF A.D. 1887.

By Charles Horner.

It is now some years since I came to the conclusion, from my study of the Antechamber measures, that there must be other dates between A.D. 1882 of Grand Gallery floor length, and the second measured length over step of 1,910 inches, recorded in the Great Pyramid. It is therefore desirable the readers of the Banner should have before them, thus early, some of the results arrived at.

There was one particular date of A.D. 1960- which presented itself, in various forms, that first led me to investigate the question. Assuming that the N. face of granite bar of Antechamber marked the terminus of a measuring line 1960± inches long, it became merely a case of simple subtraction of antecedent measures to ascertain where the earlier dates would fall.

With distance from S end of passage to Antechamber to N face of bar we have—

$$1960\pm - 20{\cdot}979\pm = 1939{\cdot}021\pm;$$

and with mean length of said passage—viz., 52·3476±, we have—

$$1939{\cdot}021\pm - 52{\cdot}3476\pm = 1886{\cdot}673\pm,$$

as a terminal gallery date, on the step, of A.D. 1887.

(To be continued.)

A LECTURE BY COMMANDER ROBERTS, R.N.

On December 31st, 1886, Commander Roberts, R.N., delivered an address at the ordinary monthly meeting of the Bristol and Clifton Israel's Identification Association, his subject being "The Ancient Britons," a lecture illustrated by maps and diagrams of coins, etc., prepared by the lecturer himself.

There was unfortunately a small attendance in consequence of the inclemency of the evening. The lecture, however, was very interesting and able, the object of the speaker being to prove the Israelitish origin of the ancient British, traced by their migrations through Europe and by the sea route through the Mediterranean and Atlantic to North and South parts of Ireland, and to the Southern coasts of England. The lecture was enriched by many diagrams of coins, from which the lecturer traced the people numismatically by the devices on their coinage from Palestine through Europe and the isles of the sea, till the people, whose constant device was the horse, the two-pronged spear, the trident, and the Trinakria (the three-legged emblem of the Isle of Man to-day), were domiciled in these their "Isles of the West.' The lecturer held that it was easier to identify the ancient Britons as Israelites than to come to the same conclusion in respect to the Anglo-Saxons. He believed that history and the science of nations justified him in saying that the ancient Britons were the bulk of the Israelitish immigrants into these islands, and that the Anglo-Saxons, who joined them in the fifth to the eleventh centures A.D., were the few. The ancient Britons, or Kelts, he believed, swallowed up their Anglo-Saxon conquerors and fellow-Israelites, but were not, as supposed, subdued and incorporated into the latter less numerous body. He believed that the ancient Keltic race was the supreme race still, though the Saxon immigrants gave their name to the country and people as we have them to-day in our land. He showed that there was a large departure from the Israelitish body, even when the people were captives in Egypt before the exodus, as Moses implied in Deut. xxix. 14, 15, when he said that he made the covenant of the Lord "with him that standeth here with us this day before the Lord our God, and also with him that is not here with us this day." A stream of the escaped of Israel, the lecturer also maintained, had left Palestine in anticipation of the Assyrian captivity, leaving the captivity to consist of the few and the poor and not of the wealthy and many of the House of Joseph. He traced the wanderings of Dan and Israel, viâ Greece and Macedonia (suggesting that the siege of Troy was a contest of two parties of Israelites), and, taking the victorious wanderers through Europe, where they possibly founded, he said, the splendid and powerful Etruscan State, through Spain and Gaul, and finally to Britain. Other parties, he showed, wandered viâ the South of Italy, by Tartessus in Spain, through the Atlantic to the South-west coast of Wexford in Ireland, and also to the North-east.

Digitized by Google

An interesting and ably argued lecture, proving great research, was concluded by a reference to the Bardic argument, showing from the Welsh Triads the close affinity that existed between the religion and religious ritual of the Druidical worshippers in Great Britain and that of Israel in their home in Palestine. The evidence from the ancient coins discovered on the route of Keltic Israel and of their comrades of the Phœnician Canaanites was an interesting feature of the address, which needed a lecture to itself to elucidate the subject. A warm vote of thanks to the lecturer concluded the proceedings.

LORD RANDOLPH CHURCHILL AND THE GATE OF GATES.

By Col. Chas. J. Hadfield.

While it becomes more and more evident that God is about to come out of His place to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity, generally, in the East of Europe, does it not seem also plain that Turkey, or Edom, is, by placing herself in antagonism to England at Russia's bidding, preparing herself for God's "vengeance" by the hand of His people Israel, or England? (Ezek. xxv. 14). So that, according to your view of the "Gates," we may have to hasten within our chief "Gate," or "Gates," in the Dardanelles and Bosphorus, "and shut our doors about us" ere opposing forces enter. The sagacity of our noble Premier, Lord Salisbury, I doubt not, will see to this by means of the Mediterranean Fleet and troops upon the station. This, I apprehend, as a first step only, of course; but, failing such energy, "the step in time" may not "save the nine" of protracted war! Lord Randolph Churchill won't do, evidently, for the pending crash of nations; however, he may be the "coming man" of subsequent peace and building-up of Israel-England. The crisis may, and probably will, be sharp and quick, and so grant it may be soon over! Thus we may look forward in a few years to a need of his statesmanship, and of his economical Exchequer powers; but such economy clearly is out of place now.

Lichfield, Dec. 27th.

Review.

"Reasons for Dissenting from the Anglo-Israel Theory"—Addressed to Philo-Israel. By Captain George Palmer, R.N., F.R.G.S., &c. Price 2d. W. F. Mack, 38, Park-street, Bristol.

PART I.

Captain George Palmer, R.N., is the writer mentioned in our notice of the British Protestant's article, in Banner No. 510, p. 401, wherein we said that "Captain G. P., of the Royal Navy," gave it as his opinion that "Anglo-Israelism" had not "a leg to stand on," and that he was astonished how "sensible people could entertain the idea." Captain Palmer has now, in accordance with our challenge and his own announced intention (Banner, No. 516, p. 458), given to the world "his reasons for dissenting from the Anglo-Israel theory." His pamphlet extends only to twelve pages, and discusses but two phases of our subject—namely, Philology, and the Scriptures. The gist of the objections raised, in regard to the two points respectively, is as follows:—

1. As to Philology. Our author is rather "mixed" in his ideas respecting the Scriptural distinction between Israel and the Jews. After telling us that "the Ten Tribes of Israel were carried captive by King Shalmanezer, B.C. 721, and placed in the provinces beyond the Euphrates, he adds that "Philo describes the Jews as very numerous throughout the East." Then, that "Manasseh-beni-Israel, and other writers, affirm the Ten Tribes retired into Tartary;" that Sir William Jones inclines to the opinion that "they went towards India, about Thibet and Cashmere; and it is well-known that the Jews have been very numerous in Bucharia ever since the Babylonish captivity, which happened 588 B.C., or 133 years after that of Israel." Further down we are told that the Beni-Israel of India have "Jewish names, read Hebrew, are circumcised, and observe Kippoor, or the great day of expiation, and are in fact Jews"—the deduction being, in the author's opinion, that the Ten Tribes, in their migration across Europe, would have called themselves not "sons of Isaac," but "Beni-Israel" too! This delightful mixture of Israel and Jews, and Jews and Israel, appears to prove that Captain Palmer's ideas, in regard to the complete separation between the Houses, are of the most indefinite and hazy character. But he seems to be surprised (p. 8) that we should see nothing improper in Nehemiah's description of the Jews as "the children of Israel in chap. ii. 10, whereas the prophet, according to our view, he says, ought to have spoken of them as the "children of Judah." Captain Palmer should remember that all "Jews are Israelites," and therefore, were properly termed "children of Israel" by Nehemiah; but that the Ten Tribes, also being "children of Israel" (Hosea i. 10), had distinct and separate promises and covenants, with which the Jews had no concern, as the text last quoted sufficiently proves.

Our opponent, in respect to philology, makes the objection which has been often advanced, and as often answered. He says that our language (as well as that of our Saxon ancestors) is Aryan, and radically different from the Semitic type of languages. Therefore, he declares our race must be Aryan, and not Semitic. But as the Israelites were Semites, the British cannot be Israelites.—Q. E. D. Now Captain Palmer knows well that "language affinity is only proof of contact, and not of racial affinity" (p. 5), but he believes that that rule can only hold good "regarding a people who have had no written language," as for instance, the negroes of Guinea, who now, in America, are speaking an Aryan British tongue, but have lost their own African vernaculars. We supply our opponent with a case in point in the Huguenots, who only came over to this country, from France, 200 years ago, 100,000 in number, their own language being written, and themselves skilled, civilised, and noble Protestant-French Christians, suffering for their faith. Two hundred years have sufficed, by contact, to cause these refugees totally to forget their mother language, and to-day their descendants exist in East London, an English-speaking, John Bull race, to all appearance, but in some cases with French names. Contact, in 200 years only, have changed the language in toto, and not a trace remains of French idiom, manners, customs, or anything, but a few rapidly disappearing names, to connect these Franks with the other so-called "Teutons" of Spitalfields.

But Captain Palmer quite misapprehends the problem which the case of the Ten Tribes presents to him. God's Word destined them to the very fate he declares on p. 5 was "impossible." "It is impossible," he tells us, "to imagine such a people being altogether swallowed up among the nations of the East, and disappearing from history, without leaving some trace behind them" (the italics are his). Yet what does he read in Hosea viii. 8, R. V.? "Israel is swallowed up: now are they among the nations as a vessel, wherein is no pleasure." Ezek. xxxvii. speaks of them as "dry bones," partly buried and exposed to view, utterly unrecognisable as "the whole House of Israel," which they really were; Jer. l. 17, as "sheep devoured" by the king of Assyria; Ezra, as people removed from God's sight, therefore, surely "lost" (2 Kings xvii. 18)—all figurative expressions, conveying the idea which Captain Palmer declares to be an "impossibility," that a people like Israel could be "altogether swallowed up." God declared Israel should "not find her paths," but "find her way hedged up by thorns." Captain Palmer rejects that idea as folly, and demands historical, philological, and geographical traces of a people, who he seems to admit exist, for they did not all return (as he allows) in a body with the Two Tribes from Babylon (p. 7). Where the general mass of Israel is now, he does not attempt to show us; though we are sorry to see he misunderstands "Josephus' Antiq.," book xi., chap. v., sec. 1, as that passage bears on the subject. Josephus never said that Cyrus' decree, being addressed "to as many Jews that dwell in my country," applied also to the "Lo-Ammi" Ten-Tribed outcasts, not then called Jews, or Israelites either. These last could not be included in that invitation, since they were then not "God's people" (Ezra i. 3, R. V.). The king's decree applied only to the "Jewish" nation, and the Jewish nation never did and does not now include the House of Joseph or Ephraim. This lesson Captain Palmer should learn, as one elementary to the proper study of God's Word.

The plain facts of the case which govern the philological difficulty, as Captain Palmer states it, are these. The English language is of the Aryan Indo-European class of language, but not Semitic. What then? Why should not a Semitic people, like Israel, cast away in small parties, into a country like that of the Medes, where an Aryan tongue or "old Armenian" was spoken, adopt that language, and gradually forget their own? "Contact" governs the case, and why should it not have influenced this? Two hundred years have sufficed in the case of the Huguenots of Spitalfields to effect the change. Why should 2,500 be too short a time to produce it in respect to Israel? Our contention is, that Israel, a Semitic people, given up to idolatry (Hosea ix. 17), abandoned by God, mingled with the Aryan races, did, in fact, forget their own native Semitic language, and adopted that of an Indo-European type, spoken by the people who held them in captivity. If Captain Palmer declares this to be impossible, let him turn to Neh. xiii. 24, R. V., and see how it fared with the Jews' children, after only seventy years sojourn in Babylon! These young Semitic people spoke half the speech of Ashdod, and could not speak in the Jews' language at all, but only according to the language of each people among whom their Jewish fathers had taken wives (ver. 23). If that were the case, after only seventy years—and if, as Neh. viii. 8, R. V. (margin), proves, the same Semitic adult people had forgotten Hebrew, and required an interpreter to understand their own Mosaic law when read to them in the Hebrew tongue—then our contention regarding the Ten Tribes of Israel, becomes perfectly reasonable, and explodes the philological difficulty our opponent starts once more, as if it were quite a novelty to us all! Our opponent's caution, that we are bound to attend to Paul's advice to Timothy and Titus, not "to give heed to Jewish fables, and endless genealogies" (Titus i. 14, iii. 9), we are ready to admit is wise. But our subject relates not to "Jewish fables," but to the stupendous realities of God's sworn promises to Ephraim, in which the Jews also will find their profit by-and-bye. Our's are not "foolish questions;" but matters of vast moment, the depth of which Captain Palmer does not seem to guage; for they relate to the faithfulness and the truth of God, and they are the only answer to the infidel, to convert him from the error of his ways.

Digitized by Google

Captain Palmer has raised his two difficulties to the acceptation of Our Identity—namely, philology, and a portion of the Scriptural argument, but he does not touch this fact, that God has granted exclusively, to a nation like the British, all the blessings He promised to His people Israel—without one solitary exception. Captain Palmer cannot deny that this is the case, as to "several remarkable instances" (p. 10), but explains the fact by saying, that they show that "God has generally approved of our race, in spite of all our national sins (and they have been many and grievous)"—but why? because "we have been the means of distributing the Word of God to all the nations of the earth; we send forth missionaries to preach the Gospel to every creature, and we have, till lately, kept the faith pure and undefiled" (p. 11). That is, we have been meritorious and "good" in His sight; and therefore, God has rewarded us Gentiles as He promised to bless Israel only, and He has seen us perform what He said on oath Israel only should do (Gen. xxii. 18), and therefore has consented to break His oath to Israel, and to give us Gentile non-Israelites what He faithfully bound Himself on oath to grant solely, exclusively and without abeyance, to the afterseed of Abraham. God forbid! Captain Palmer's explanation of the matter is revolting to every true Christian, for if God be false in one respect, who can rely on His promises in Christ? We have said enough in refutation of the philological difficulty, and of some of the chief arguments relied on by our opponent. In our next we must notice what the Scriptural grounds are which he deems fatal to our case.

(To be continued).

Correspondence.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—After reading the kind and candid comments in the BANNER of ISRAEL, on my lecture at Bath, though I have little time or disposition for paper correspondence, I shall be glad if you will kindly insert this note in your next issue, if possible.

Though I do not hold the Anglo-Israel theory, I have all respect for my Christian brethren who do, and yield to them, what I claim for myself—freedom of thought. Let each speak out kindly and candidly his views: each looking to the Spirit of God alone for light and guidance through the Word.

1. I hold the Ten Tribes to be distinct from the Two Tribes till Jehovah fulfils Ezek. xxxvii. 9—14, 19—23. But as I see, both remain separate and unconverted, as peoples, "till He come" to create the restoration and reunion (Hos. i. 10, 11).

2. I have seen no report of my lecture at Bath, and, ergo, cannot say how far it is correct, but the quotation you give from it is substantially my views as far as it goes.

3. The texts I am referred to for light and guidance are three. I have only time to notice Hos. i. 11. A few remarks on this must suffice. The events recorded in vers. 10 and 11 synchronise. The "place where," referred to in the 10th ver., is "the land" where Jehovah first called Israel His people; and Hosea says, "there" (though it is rather implied than expressed in the Heb.) "it shall be said, Ye are the sons of the living God." The 11th ver. begins, "Then;" or Kai, "And," as LXX., in order of time and sequence and order also, the great united convocation shall be held in the land, into which they will have been already gathered, in fulfilment of Ezek. xxxvii. 9—14, 19—23.

I can only say how glad I shall be, as time will permit, to arrange with any for the re-delivery of my lectures on the Eastern Question, which will be re-delivered in Oldham next week. Again, I would say, "Let brotherly love continue." Here is "One Body," and "One is your Master, even Christ, and all ye are brethren." "Praise His name!" "By Him, and to Him, and through Him, are all things," "to Whom be glory in the Church throughout all ages, world without end."

I am, yours in Jesus, WILLIAM FRITH,
One of the Editors of "The Silver Morn and Prophetic Voice."
The Manse, 111, Edith-road, W.

P.S.—I have no claim to the M.A. kindly appended to my name.

NOTE BY THE EDITOR.—In regard to our friend's exposition of Hos. i. 10, 11, we beg to point out to him that there are two futures in ver. 10, which may be read thus: "And it shall come to pass that in the place where it shall be said unto them, Ye are not My people (Lo-Ammi)," it shall be said unto them, "The sons of the living God!" The "place," therefore, is not "The Land," or Palestine, as Mr. Frith supposes, but the land of the outcasting—Great Britain. There the testimony of Lo-Ammi is being given to-day (Mr. Frith testifying with the others); and these men say justly of our race, "they are the Christian nation," "sons of the living God" (John i. 12). The gathering of Israel and Judah will not be in "the land," or Palestine, so much as in "the appointed place" Great Britain, which is Israel's home; and there the House of Judah must go to unite with Israel, and so travel together to "the land." Hosea i. 11 is precisely to the same effect.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—In a late BANNER there is a request made for an account of how the locust eggs are taken in Cyprus. I had a relative there who was superintendent of one of the districts, and paymaster. His sister, who resided with him, sent me the enclosed account, which I have pleasure in sending to you, hoping that it may be of service. I have also heard of a pamphet called "The History of the Locust War in Cyprus."

I am, Sir, yours truly, S. E. G.
London, Dec. 21st.

"THE LOCUST WAR.

"The locust lays a mass of eggs altogether in a stony or rocky place, and then covers them with a slimy substance, which hardens so much that it can scarcely be broken, and is only affected by great heat. The eggs thus look like whity-grey masses of larva, and it is difficult to distinguish them from the rock or stone. The peasants in Cyprus collect them in the autumn and winter. They bring them to the Commissioner of the District, who pays them so many piastres according to the quantity they bring, and the eggs thus collected are buried in lime. The eggs, if not destroyed, are hatched by the heat of the sun in the beginning of March. At first the grubs only crawl, then nets are prepared to catch them. A trench is dug in a straight line, and lime is put into it. A net is placed along it about three feet high, made of canvas, I think, turned back at the top to prevent the locusts crawling over. They then drop into the trench. The peculiarity of locusts is this, that they always go in a straight line, and never turn back; so they are caught in this trap, and the lime destroys them. But if these nets are not prepared in time, they are useless when the locusts begin to fly."

ERRATA.—Vol. XI., p. 9, col. 1, last line of paragraph 5, read "conventionally." Vol. X., p. 516, col. 1, foot note, 3rd line from end, read for "Glasgow," "Dublin."

Digitized by Google

NOTICES.

All communications intended for the Editor, to be addressed: — "Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Clifton, Bristol.

SUBSCRIPTIONS £ s. d.

Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) postfree - 0 7 6
Two Copies (including Double Numbers) - - 0 13 6
Three Copies " " " " - 1 0 4
Four Copies " " " " - 1 5 6
Six Copies " " " " - 1 16 4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-grand, London, to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C., and W. H. GUEST & Co. 29, Paternoster-row, London.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

Contents Bills and Show Cards may be obtained on application to the Publishers.

Advertisements should be sent to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

Prepaid Advertisements are inserted at the rate of 30 words for 1s. 4d.

PREPAID "WANTED," &c., ADVERTISEMENTS, 27 words, 1s.; 4d. every additional line.

Price 6d., by post 7d.; Annual Subscription, 2s. 6d., post free.

THE JANUARY QUARTERLY PART

OF

ISRAEL'S HOPE & DESTINY

CONTENTS:

The People Left of the Sword Found Grace in the Wilderness. By J. S. Lowe.—An Unassailable Position. By V. M. Cox.—The Ancient of Days. By Alexander MacPhail.—The Land of Hadrach, England's Stronghold. By the late Colonel J. C. Gawler.—The Conversion of the Jews Unscriptural.—More Links in the Chain. By J. Thomson.—To Our Readers.—The Mutual Trade of the British Empire.—Poetry.—Review.—Correspondence.

London: ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.; F. W. PARRY (late Guest, Hayworth & Co.), 29, Paternoster-row.

✣ A New Light. ✣

BY A E I.

Author of "The New Old Story," "4,000 Years Old," &c.

This pamphlet is prepared specially for general distribution, and as a means of introducing "Our Identity" to persons unacquainted with the subject will be found particularly useful. It is printed on good paper, in clear type, and bound in primrose colour cover.

Price 2d., post free 2½ R. Banks & Son, Racquet-court.

No Reader of Identity Literature should be without this Almanack.

Now Ready. Price 3d. (by post, 4d.).

Interleaved edition for notes, &c., in stiff paper cover, 5d. (by post 6d). Brown cloth, gilt lettered, interleaved throughout with ruled paper 1s. (Post free on receipt of postal order.)

The Anglo-Israel Almanack and Diary FOR 1887.

Being the Jubilee Year of Her Majesty the Queen.

London: Printed and published by R. BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C., and may be had by order of any bookseller.

Knight & Forster's Pens

KNIGHT & FORSTER LEEDS

Broad Point 3/- PER GROSS

University Pen

2/- PER GROSS KNIGHT & FORSTER LEEDS

Ledger Pen Fine Point

LONDON-STRAKER & SONS. 124 FENCHURCH ST

or post free direct from the Makers

Basinghall Works Leeds.

PUBLISHED BY ROBT. BANKS & SON,
RACQUET COURT, FLEET STREET, E.C.

WORKS BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Thoughts for the British Folk.

Suggested by PHILO-ISRAEL.

No. 1.—Multitudinousness.
No. 2.—The Gates.
No. 3.—The Nation and Company of Nations.
No. 4.—British Wealth.
No. 5.—The Rulers Over Many Nations.
No. 6.—The Universal Creditor.
No. 7.—The Ever-Continuing British Monarchy.
No. 8.—The Scattered People at Home in Every Climate.
No. 9.—The Queen, Lords, and Commons.
No. 10.—The Unconquerable Nation.
No. 11.—The Fatally Destructive Race.
No. 12.—The Isolated Nation.
No. 13.—The Nation Which Belts the Earth.
No. 14.—The Emancipators of the Slave
No. 15.—The Christian Nation.
No. 16.—The Ten Commandments.
No. 17.—The Asylum for the Foreign Refugee.
No. 18.—Possessors of the "Sign."
No. 19.—The Universal Missionaries.
No. 20.—Testimony of the Book of Common Prayer.
No. 21.—Church and State, and also Disestablishment.
No. 22.—Our Poor Laws.
No. 23.—The Labour Question is an Identity Question.
No. 24.—Emigration.

The History of the House of Israel: How they were Lost, and How they were Found, Told for the Children. Price 6d., cloth 1s.; post free 7d. and 1s. 1d. Fourth Edition. Eleventh thousand.

Our Identity with the House of Israel. Price 4d. Reprinted from "Clifton Chronicle Letters"

A Resume of the Scriptural Argument, proving the Identity of the British Race with the Lost Ten Tribes. Price 1d.; 6s. per 100. New edition now ready.

An Elementary Digest or Sketch of the Chief Facts and Teachings of the Great Pyramid of Egypt. Adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific 56 pages. Illustrated with Diagrams, price 4d., post free 5d. 10th Thousand.

Philo-Israel's Leaflets. Four pages Crown 8vo. Price 1s. 6d. per 100, postage 2d. No. 1.—"The Identity of the British with Lost Israel." 2.—"The Glory of God.' 3.—An Address to British Seamen. 4.—An Address to British Soldiers. No. 5.—The Communion of the Body and Blood of Our Lord Jesus Christ Viewed in the Light of Our Identity. 6.—The Bible and the Jew. 7.—The Jewish People. 8.—Lo-Ammi; or, the Gentilisation of Ten-Tribed Israel. 9.—The Atonement. 10.—Is Our Identity Evangelical, or Non-Evangelical in its Tendency? No. 11.—Cui Bono? No. 12.—The "Thoughts" of God Towards Israel, Judah, and the Gentile Nations. 13.—The Teutonic Theory—Is It True? 14.—An Address to the Police Force of Great Britain. 15.—An Address to Israel's Missionaries and Their Supporters. 16.—The One Seed, Christ. 17.—An Address to Israel's Electors. Price 1s. 6d. per 100.

The Geography of the Gates. With Map and six full page, and one double-page, Illustrations, printed on plate paper. 208 pages, in handsome cloth, gilt Price 3s. 6d., post free 3s. 10d.

Now Ready, Price 8s., in Handsome Blue Cloth.

THE NEW VOLUME

OF THE

BANNER OF ISRAEL

(VOL. X.)

A most suitable present to a Town Hall or Local Library. Sure to prove of great interest and be the means of introducing Our Identity to the notice of a numerous class of intelligent readers and students. Should be in every Bible-student's Library.

May be ordered of any bookseller, or sent direct from the Publishers on receipt of remittance for 8/-.

R. BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.
F. W. PARRY & Co., 29, Paternoster-row.

CASES FOR BINDING VOL. X.

ARE NOW READY,

Price 1s. 6d., post free 1s. 8d.

Robert Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

BY REV. HENRY ROE.

(Fifteenth Thousand).

1. Israel's World. Origin and Destiny of British Race, Colonies, and Empire. 2d., post free 2½d. "Worthy of a world-wide circulation."—H. B. Thompson, Association Sec. 50 post free from H. Roe for 4s. 9d.

2. Going to Africa. 1s., post free 1s. 1d.

3. Fernando Po Mission. 1s., post free 1s. 1d.

4. West African Scenes. 2s., post free 2s. 2d.

5. Consecration. 2d., post free 2½d.

50 post free from H. Roe for 4s. 9d.

No. 1 is published by R. Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.; Nos. 1 and 5 by E. Stock, 62, Paternoster-row, E.C.; and all by Rev. H. Roe, Dawley, Salop.

LUNG OWBRIDGE'S TONIC
LUNG LUNG TONIC, TONIC
LUNG THE MIGHTY HEALER. TONIC
LUNG Save Your Lives by Taking TONIC
LUNG OWBRIDGE'S LUNG TONIC. TONIC
LUNG It has a power over diseases hitherto TONIC
LUNG unknown in Medicine. TONIC
LUNG Are you at all Weak-chested or inclined TONIC
LUNG to be Consumptive, with just a touch of TONIC
LUNG Cough now and then? TONIC
LUNG "Try this Wonderful Medicine." The TONIC
LUNG Cough and Weakness will disappear as TONIC
LUNG if by magic, and you will feel a strength TONIC
LUNG and power you never had before. TONIC
LUNG HAVE YOU A COUGH? TONIC
LUNG A DOSE WILL RELIEVE IT. TONIC
LUNG HAVE YOU A COLD? TONIC
LUNG A DOSE AT BEDTIME WILL TONIC
LUNG REMOVE IT. TONIC
LUNG Bronchitis & Asthma it relieves instantly TONIC
LUNG The Spasms of Coughing so dreadful in TONIC
LUNG Whooping Cough become less with each dose TONIC
LUNG of the medicine. — TONIC
LUNG Prepared by W. T. OWBRIDGE, Chemist, Hull TONIC
LUNG Sold in Bottles 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d. & TONIC
LUNG 11s. by all Chemists and Patent Medicine TONIC
LUNG Vendors. Wholesale all London and TONIC
LUNG Provincial Houses. TONIC

THE NOTE-PAPER FOR 1887.

THE JUBILEE NOTE-PAPER, 1887.

A HIGH-CLASS CREAM-LAID NOTE-PAPER, each sheet bearing a watermark device: The Portrait of Her Majesty Queen Victoria, in a wreath of Rose, Shamrock, and Thistle, and designs symbolic of the Colonies and India. Can be had glazed or unglazed surface. Price 1s. 6d. per packet of five quires; by post 1s. 10½d. Can be had with address neatly printed for 3s., by post 3s. 4½d.—Robert Banks and Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

DEAFNESS IS CURABLE

R. M. says: "I am indeed pleased to tell you my hearing has returned, and that the noise in my head, which at times was most distressing, is also quite gone."

S. H. says: "Your Earal Drops, in five weeks, did what two doctors failed to do—namely, restore my hearing. feel like a new man."

Send Postal Order for 2s. 6d. to -

SPENCER GAY,
38, BATH ROAD, EXETER,

for a Bottle of Earal Drops and Medicated Wool, with instructions, post free.

ETHELINE

A New and most effective Remedy for CORNS.—Perfectly safe and harmless. Is very easily applied. Cures in a few applications, without the slightest pain. Everyone troubled with either Corns, Warts, or Bunions, will find relief by using ETHELINE. To be obtained of all Chemists, or post free for 14 stamps from J. LLEWELLYN, CHEMIST, COWBRIDGE.

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. F. W. PARRY (late GUEST & Co.), 29, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, JAN. 19, 1887. [All rights reserved.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."

(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. XI., No. 526. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 26, 1887. [PRICE ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
Our Undefended Gates	37
Bible Studies: Israel in the British Isles. By Maud Watham	38
The Name thereof is called Bamah unto this Day. By E. Wilmshurst.—Part III.	39
Israel's Emigration Returns	40
Is the British Nation the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel?	41
The Annexation of Socotra	41
Review	41
Correspondence	42

OUR UNDEFENDED GATES.

THOSE who have read Lord Carnarvon's letter to the Times, on "The Defence of our Coaling Stations and our Commercial Ports," as published on January 6th, 1887, must have had vividly brought to their recollection "the Gates of Israel," and God's promises to the British people (being Israel) in respect to them. "Thy seed," said the Lord to His friend, our forefather Abraham, "shall possess the Gates of his enemies," and the promise was confirmed by the oath of God! We see to-day the fulfilment of this promise, Lord Carnarvon and the Times being our trustworthy witnesses. These, it is true, call the Gates our "coaling stations"; but they describe them in terms which plainly point to these ports as strategic positions of first-rate importance to our race, and vital to our very existence. We have shown, times out of number, that we could not maintain our Empire in the four quarters of the globe even for a couple of months, in case of war, if we were deprived of these wonderful possessions, since they secure to us the supremacy of the sea, and give us all those blessings and mercies which God has tied up to us because we are His people, the remnant of Ten-Tribed Israel.

Both Lord Carnavon and the Times concur in describing the Gates now as in imminent peril, since we have, though duly warned, left them absolutely unguarded, without fortifications, or guns to use if the forts were built, in case of war. Hong-kong, Singapore, and Aden are, it seems, really in a state of unreadiness to meet an enemy, should our fleet, or some vessel of our fleet, in those parts, accidentally be absent from the port when a single armed cruiser of the enemy enters it and challenges the garrison to surrender. We grudge to spend a few hundred thousand pounds on the defences of these places; while France, whose naval power is rapidly and dangerously rising, "has commenced an estimated expenditure of £3,000,000 on one alone of her foreign outposts."

It is not, moreover, as if we were justified in neglecting to fortify our outland Gates, or could dare to throw their defence upon the chapter of accidents, trusting to the providence of God to save us from losing them in case of the sudden outburst of war. If we read Isaiah xxvi. 20 aright, God has given us a distinct direction and command to fortify our Gates, and only on our fortifying or shutting these doors does their safety seem to be guaranteed. Our home, or "chambers," are, it appears to us, clearly under God's protecting care as the Appointed place of His chosen ones; but respecting our Gates, or doors, He gives us the following precise directions: "Come, My people, enter thou into thy chambers, and shut thy doors about thee; hide thyself for a little moment, until the indignation be overpast. For, behold, the Lord cometh forth out of His place to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity; the earth also shall disclose her blood, and shall no more cover her slain." The Gates are, many of them, situated in close proximity to the vortex of the coming great earthquake woe, and will require to be protected by fortification, or "shutting the doors," from the attacks and insults of the raging foes around; whereas the British Islands, by their watery defence, and by the promises of God to Israel, are already surrounded by adamantine battlements, and want no human fortifications to protect them.

The leader in the Times on the subject, however, is sufficiently alarming, because the writer does not know what our true defence is. But he does well to remind this nation that the Gates are bound to be put in a condition of reasonable defence, and that without it we shall be, humanly speaking, deprived of them whenever a war breaks out for which we have neglected to prepare. The journalist describes the Gates, and the consequences of refusing to fortify them in anticipation of the coming times of trouble, in the following remarkable language. We beg our readers to let these words be imprinted on their memories, in view to those terrible times of destruction yet in store for the continental world, but which the Times believes, groundlessly, we shall ourselves encounter and endure. The writer said:—

We have so often set forth the importance of our coaling stations, and the whole affair is so simple and palpable, that we are almost ashamed to go over the ground again. This nation has possessions dotted all over the habitable globe, and a commerce that penetrates to the furthest corners of the earth. Upon that commerce it depends absolutely for its daily bread. Relying upon a constant and unfailing supply of every description of raw material and of food, we have filled these islands to overflowing with a population which they are totally inadequate to support. If our food supplies are stopped, we must starve; if our raw materials are stopped we shall no longer have wherewithal to buy food; and if our commerce is seriously injured, both food and raw materials must be cut off. The security of our commerce in case of war depends absolutely upon the ability of our fleet to guard our great lines of communication. The efficiency of our fleet for that purpose depends upon its mobility. Warships nowadays are moved by steam, and for the production of steam they require coal. But the coal they can carry is wholly inadequate for long voyages, because so much of their total displacement is used up by guns, armour and ammunition. Consequently, if they are to move with freedom along our great lines of communication, coal must be provided for them at frequent intervals, otherwise they become mere hulks. Thus the regular supply of our morning roll and our afternoon tea depends directly and absolutely upon the existence of chains of coaling stations all over the world from which our fleet may securely draw the supplies of fuel which are its breath of life. If these stations are allowed to slip out of our hands they will fall into the hands of other people, whose cruisers will gain the mobility and offensive power which ours have lost. Every link of the chain that is broken increases our difficulty in bridging the gap, and increases the facility with which our foes can widen it. That is briefly the case for defending our coaling stations, It is a case which has grown and strengthened with the increase in the use of steam and the evolution of the modern warship. But for some inscrutable reason the defence of coaling stations is in the hands of the War Office, which takes at least a decade to apprehend the changes brought about by science in six months. It is just finding out, to its no small consternation, that modern gunnery renders it impossible to fight casemates and cupolas upon which it has spent millions. It is just discovering that there may be something in the idea of sheltering guns below the natural surface of the earth, and scattering them for mutual support, instead of massing them to form an easy mark for the enemy, while concealing him from view behind their own smoke. If we were to lose half our coaling stations, the War Office might discover in the course of the next ten or twelve years that it would be well to defend what remained from seizure by any casual cruiser. But that is about the most we can hope from a department which deliberately adheres to what Lord Carnarvon well calls the "insanity" of leaving our lines of communication at the mercy of any Power that chooses to steal a march upon us.

Digitized by Google

We hope our readers now realise the gift God gave us when He bestowed upon us the Gates. By the plain and true teaching of the Times, the Gates support the Empire. If we lose them, the whole Empire must collapse, and our nation must surrender to whatever Power, or Powers, succeed us in the command and supremacy of the sea! Our food and commerce depend upon our hold on the ends and coasts of the earth, and we cannot continue to possess them, or derive our wealth from them, and so obtain our food and raw material, without the Gates, which store the coal that drives our steam navies through the ocean highways of the world. The supplies of fuel are our nation's "breath of life," and our coaling stations, or Gates, which contain them, are the vital points of our national existence, on which all depends. God foresaw all this, and ordered us, in Isa. xxvi. 20, to fortify them and hold them with all our might. "Shut thy doors about thee," are the pregnant words that convey to us the divine command, which Lord Carnarvon and the Times are striving hard to drive home into the nation's mind and heart. His lordship's letter brings out the value of the coaling stations as distinguished from the Imperial fortresses (as he describes them), Gibraltar, Malta, Halifax, and Bermuda. He reckons their importance to the nation thus:—

Coal has become the most potent factor in the arithmetic of naval war. Without it our foreign commerce and our vast carrying trade cease to exist; without it our ships of war can neither fight nor move; and even with it there is no security, unless it is adequately protected, for it becomes the prey of the first hostile cruiser.

On the other hand, our Empire, scattered as it is, has this advantage—that we hold a succession of defensible points, where our ships can find ports in which to coal, to refit, to repair, whence the great lines of commercial communication can be patrolled or guarded, and where a base of operations against an enemy can be secured. Further, the defence of these positions means not only all these advantages to us, but the loss of them to our foes; and therefore these stations are in one sense almost as necessary as ships and guns, for without them ships and guns may easily be rendered useless.

In regard to the defenceless condition of the Cape, his lordship wrote, using the very metaphor of Isa. xxvi. 20:—

Capetown is like a house with two doors, and it is useless to close one if the other is left open to an enemy. Simon's Bay, on the west of the Peninsula, is the one; Table Bay, that magnificent spot so familiar to many Eastern-bound travellers, is the other. Simon's Bay, which is used by the Admiralty as a convenient anchorage, is now fairly defended at Imperial cost for purely Imperial purposes; but Table Bay and Capetown are without a vestige of protection, On the shores of that bay colonial and commercial enterprise have been busy. Large floating basins and jetties, a fine breakwater. a graving dock, workshops, coal stores with appliances for coaling and repairing, have sprung into existence—an instalment only, I trust, of the still larger works of the future. Yet this great creation, a source of wealth and prosperity in peace, and a priceless resource in time of war, lies during some temporary absence of our fleet at the mercy of a single cruiser.

In short, Lord Carnarvon would have us "shut our doors about us" at the Cape and elsewhere, and that is God's own command to us, His people Israel. We may be sure that the direction will be obeyed, certainly unconsciously by the blind ones of our race, and the result we shall see when the Indignation is let loose. Israel will then be safe and sound. But the Gentile nations will be utterly undone. Oh, why will not men praise the Lord for His unutterable mercy towards His sinning, blind, and thoughtless people, British-Israel?

BIBLE STUDIES: ISRAEL IN THE BRITISH ISLES.

By Maud Watham.

"And they shall be driven to darkness."—Isa. viii. 22.

In the prophet Zechariah we have a most powerful argument in favour of the declared non-return of Ten-Tribed Israel from Babylon (x. 6). Here we are shown that gathered Judah should be strengthened, and captive Joseph saved—a spiritually-united people when gathered (ver. 9). I need hardly point out to the student that these words were written after the return from Babylon. Having thus briefly dealt with the testimony of the minor prophets, we turn to the greater, commencing with Isaiah, son of Amoz. You will observe from the margin of your reference Bibles that the prophecies date from B.C. 760, thirty-nine years before the second and final expulsion of Israel by Shalmanezer, King of Assyria; so that though he opens his book by declaring that his vision was concerning Judah and Jerusalem, we are not surprised that he hears of and reveals what shall befall Israel also (vii. 8). The misfortunes of Ephraim are predicted in chapter viii. 4, 6, 14, 22. Their miserable state is graphically described in the words, "And they shall be driven to darkness," and we are at once brought face to face with the mighty, marvellous scheme of redeeming love, reminding us, oh, how forcibly! of the declaration of St. Paul, that "where sin abounded grace did much more abound."

I wish the student to thoroughly understand to which of the two Houses the warnings and the promises were graciously given. In chap. viii. 14 both Houses are mentioned; but the Prince of Peace, as a blessed possession, as an accepted king and Saviour, is promised to those who are "driven to darkness" (viii. 22), to the afflicted ones of Zebulun, Napthali, and Galilee. The people who walked in darkness there (ix. 1, 2), unto whom Christ came (ver. 6, 7), are none other than the Reubenites, the Gadites, and half-tribe of Manasseh, spoken of in 1 Chron. v. 26, a portion of Lost Ten-Tribed Israel, as one may learn from their reference Bible, without studying the question at all.

Chapters x. and xi. are truly prophetic, not yet degenerated into history. Ver. 21 and 22 of the first-named chapter, and the entire of the second, speaks of gathered Israel joining Judah, free from envyings and vexations, at a time still in the future, as every student of prophecy must know.

Digitized by Google

Chapters xli. and xlv. refer to Ephraim more than to Judah. Again, the condition of Judah as a restored kingdom, free only in name, subject in turn to the Persians, Greeks, Ptolemies, and Romans, slaves to the letter, and blind to the spirit of the law of God, richly deserving and receiving the denunciations of the rejected Messiah hurled against them amidst a burst of bitter anguish, does not tally in the smallest degree with the happy state of those who are the subject of the prophecy in these chapters.

Once again, in chap. xlix., there is no doubt who the prophet is addressing. Compare ver. 1 with Hosea i. 10, also chap. l. with Hosea ii. 2, also li., liii., liv. Ponder well ver. 11—13 of this last chapter, and ver. 19—21 of chap. lix., culminating in that shout of triumphant exhortation, "Arise, shine!" or, as the margin has it, "Arise, and be enlightened;" and ver. 1, chap. lx., ver. 2 revealing to us that it is none other than Israel, "the people who walked in darkness," who are here addressed. Still reading onward, we are struck by the renewed promises of holiness and virtue, gifts of the blessed Spirit waiting to be outpoured upon this elected people. Look at chap. lxiii., and see there the lost ones awakening to the reality of their glorious destiny and pleading with their heavenly Father to reinstate them in their lost inheritance. Then once more comes the cry of the rejected Messiah, faintly borne on the prophetic breeze, "I am sought of them that asked not for Me" (lxv.), and we are reminded of the time when He said, in answer to the words, "God forbid," forced from the rulers, pharisees, and scribes, when He told them plainly they had forfeited the kingdom, "Have ye never read, The stone which the builders rejected, the same is become the head of the corner?" and we read on with awe, beholding two distinct peoples, one blessed, the other rejected, until in His own good pleasure He restores the rejected one again.

And now we ask you, careful student, can the servants who sing for joy of heart (lxv.) be a Gentile Church when they are sent into Tarshish, Pul, Lud, Tubal, Javan, and the isles of the sea, divinely commissioned, a missionary people, to set forth the glory of the Holy One of Israel among the Gentiles? Thus according to Isaiah's testimony also, Israel, when found, must be a prosperous, God-fearing, virtuous people!

THE NAME THEREOF IS CALLED BAMAH UNTO THIS DAY.

By E. Wilmshurst, Retford.

(Continued from page 32).

PART III.

Josephus states that "the Ten Tribes are beyond Euphrates, an innumerable multitude," and a careful study of ancient history must convince any impartial student that the Lo-Ammi, or cast-out Israel, under many differing names, and as separate, and sometimes hostile, hordes of nomadic race, exercised great power in Central Asia from B.C. 500 to Josephus' time, by throwing the weight of their power into the balance for, or against, the various military despotisms which dominated Asia at that period. Thus we find them fighting as Sacai, under Xerxes, and on the side of Darius, at Arbela, against Alexander the Great, and afterwards assisting Alexander in his conquest of India, where many of them undoubtedly remain to this day. In the great inscription on the Behustan Rock, we find three classes of Sacæ referred to—viz., the Sacæ named as next to India, the Sacæ who use arrows (probably nomades), and the Sacæ who are said to be beyond the river, showing that the one people were now widely scattered—one race, but no longer one nation.

The historian of the Anglo-Saxons, Sharon Turner (vol. i.), carefully traces the Saxons of these isles, from Germania to the K'habour district of Media, and most impartially, because without intent, shows the more than probability of their Identity with the Ten Tribes. Hengist and Horsa, and, indeed, all the Saxon chiefs, traced their genealogies from Woden, and, through him, to the patriarchs (Anglo-Saxon Chronicle).

The learned Philippus Cluverius, the "Camden" of Germany, in his "Germania Antiqua," also tracing the German tribes from their origin in Asia, states that the word Woden (a name common to their great Deity, and to the Hero, Odin, or Woden), was originally spelt Gwodan, or Gwotan (Gautama), and, quoting Paulus Diaconus, that the name, as applied to the Deity, came into Germania viâ Greece, the country in which flourished the doctrines of Pytho-goras, or the Buddha-guru, the contemporary of Gautama-Buddha, and Ezekiel; showing that the religion which our Scythic ancestors brought from Asia to their European home was, as has often been pointed out, and as might reasonably be expected, a form of worship greatly influenced by the doctrines of the great reformer of Asiatic thought, the light of Asia, Sakya-muni, otherwise called Gotama-Buddha, or Godama the Sak.

Cluverius also points out that the name by which the English (Angli) and Germans now address the Deity, "Got, or God," is simply the diminutive of Gwotan—i.e., Gaut-ama, or God-ama, the Eastern prophet, afterwards deified; and therefore when we in our daily prayers address the Most High, we do so under an appellation, "God," which was originally the name of the Eastern prophet, whom his followers, after his death, regarded as the last Buddha, or incarnation of the Deity Himself.

When Israel on the Chebar, therefore, provoked from the prophet Ezekiel the remonstrance, "Will ye go to Bamah?" the high place, even now called "Buddha-Bamian," par excellence, we must remember that they were one horde only of the "innumerable multitude," whom Josephus afterwards speaks of as being in his day beyond Euphrates, and that while some great caravans of emigrants from Media went off Eastward, and as recorded at great length by Dr. Moore in his "Saxons of the East and West," regenerated India by leavening the then corrupt Bhraminic system with divine doctrines, derived (though obscured) from Ezekiel and the prophets of Israel, and ultimately believed they had found the Messiah in Godama Buddha; yet that other emigrant hordes, probably from the other localities named, as Hala, and Hara, and Gozan, went off Westward into Europe, as so clearly shown by "Oxonian" in "Israel's Wanderings," and mixed with other Asiatic peoples (as the Chatti, etc., etc.), ultimately found a home in Germany, whence the pure race of Israel, the seed to be scattered but never lost, at last found a little sanctuary in these isles of the West.

That there was in the early days of the dispersion a regular communication between Scythian Israel in the East and their brethren in the West is absolutely certain. Buddhist emblems: the trident, the wheel (or Britannia's shield), the lion and unicorn, the white horse, common to the Kadphises Coins in Bactria, and the Banner of Kent, the fragments from the Bardic poems, "Sak is my guide," all show that the wonderful energy of the early Buddhist missionaries has left its impress on countries as distant as Burmah and Arracan in the East, and Bodotria and the Hæbudes (Scotland, or Scyth-land, and the Hebrides) in the West.

At Pevensey, Sussex, originally a great commercial harbour, and the landing-place of successive invaders, a Celtic settlement, destroyed by the first South Saxon king, were found coins of the Buddhist Bactrian kings, Kadphises, Menander, Apollodotus, date B.C. 200; and the writer has seen a gold coin of the Greek concave type, only recently dug up in a village on the Trent, in Notts, which is certainly of the date 300 to 400

Digitized by Google

B.C. No doubt a constant flow and reflow of religious mendicants and commercial people, followed the well-known emigrant Scythian routes from Central Asia viâ the Cacausus and Crimea, to Scythia in Europe; and many who had "gone to Bamah," and possibly had seen the wondrous rock-cut statues of Bamian, may have joined their brethren in Europe and Britain.

We are strongly of opinion that, while the smallest of the four Bamian figures is intended for Gautama, the Indian "Last Incarnation of Buddha," elevated to a place of honour in the pantheon of preceding Buddhas at Bamah, yet that the gigantic figure engraved in the London News of November 6 is of a far antecedent date, as evinced by the archaic character of its execution, which, unlike the smaller sitting conventional Godama of Buddhist art, is more akin to the earliest Phœnician sculpture, and resembles—but as a prototype, rather than a copy—the wondrous (also rock-cut) statues of Rameses I. at Aboo-Simbel in Nubia (a king also of a Rama, or Indian dynasty), engraved in Roberts, R.A.'s "Holy Land," and of which Dr. Croly writes: "Concealed in sand for 3,000 years. . . . If the arts were thus advanced at so remote a period, what has become of those which preceded it? For such excellence can only have sprung from progressive improvement."

But the Great Pyramid, the FIRST production of architecture, is to this day unsurpassed; and the Bamian statue, the highest by far ever executed, is unsurpassed in its majestic simplicity, and must have been executed, like its copies at Aboo-Simbel, very many centuries before the birth of Gautama Buddha. May it not more probably be the representation, cut in the solid rock for ever by their descendants, (cotemporary, be it remembered, from Shem to Abraham), of their great father-king and lawgiver, Menu, or Noah himself, always recognised as a former Buddha, or "Son of God."

The Druids of Britain called their sacred isle, their high place in the West, by the same name, Mona (now Anglesey), the "Menai" Straits perpetuate the name, as do the Indian "Institutes of Menu," and between the Magi of Persia, then a part of India, and the Druids, there was a continuous intercourse. Cluverios states: "Persis Deus dicitur 'Choda,' ex quo nostrum 'God;'" showing our and the German's connection with Persia and Media. They first venerated and then worshipped the great Chodama, or Godama, and the Indo-Germanic races testify to their ancestral connection with the East; for they also worshipped and swore by "Godam."

(To be continued).

ISRAEL'S EMIGRATION RETURNS.

As some doubt appears to exist in certain quarters in reference to the exact proportion in which our English, Scotch, and Irish emigrate to the English-speaking Colonies and countries of the world, we are glad to be able to publish some official returns which appeared in the Times of Nov. 5, 1886, signed by Mr. R. Giffen, and dated "Commercial Department, Board of Trade," the day before. From these returns it will be seen that the total emigration in 1886 and 1885 respectively, of the English, Scotch, and Irish, was as follows:—

	DURING OCTOBER ONLY.		DURING 10 MONTHS ENDING OCT. 31.
	1886.	1885.	1886.	1885.
English ...	14,169	12,004	129,552 ...	111,574
Scotch ...	2,179	2,037	22,477 ...	19,073
Irish ...	4,579	4,370	57,275 ...	56,432

It appears, then, that for one month only the English emigration was this year seven times larger than that of the Scotch, and over three times larger than the Irish; that for ten months the proportion was 6 to 1 in favour of the English as against the Scotch, and only about 2 to 1 as compared with the Irish. The return is valuable, as showing in what direction the three divisions of our race mostly betake themselves. We regret to see that the vast bulk still go to the United States, since during ten months this year 140,000 odd have gone there out of the total emigration of 209,304, being two-thirds of the whole! The table in question is as follows:—

EMIGRATION.

Return of the numbers, nationalities, and destinations of the passengers that left the United Kingdom for places out of Europe during the month ended October 31, 1886, and the ten months ended October 31, 1886, compared with the corresponding periods of the previous year:—

Nationalities.	MONTH ENDED OCTOBER 31.										TEN MONTHS ENDED OCTOBER 31.
	United States.		British North America.		Australasia.		All other Places		Total.		United States.		British North America.		Australasia.		All other Places.		Total.
	1886	1885	1886	1885	1886	1885	1886	1885	1886	1885	1886	1885	1886	1885	1886	1885	1886	1885	1886	1885
English	7,972	6,943	1,439	1,026	3,396	2,861	1,362	1,174	14,169	12,004	74,929	66,535	18,156	14,321	27,921	23,315	8,546	7,403	129,552	111,574
Scotch...	1,386	1,122	256	146	342	590	213	179	2,197	2,037	15,148	11,707	2,869	2,343	3,444	4,162	1,016	861	22,477	19,073
Irish...	3,968	3,519	270	193	289	579	62	79	4,579	4,370	49,934	48,110	2,802	2,610	4,209	5,363	330	319	57,275	56,432
Total of British origin...	13,316	11,584	1,965	1,365	4,027	4,030	1,637	1,432	20,945	18,411	140,011	126,352	23,827	19,274	35,574	32,840	9,892	8,613	209,304	187,079
Foreigners	5,456	3,206	268	354	107	136	216	297	6,037	3,993	75,644	42,594	5,244	3,006	781	1,088	1,854	2,141	63,523	48,831
Nationality not distinguished	—	—	—	—	—	—	594	588	594	588	—	—	—	—	—	—	2,696	2,352	2,696	2,352
Total	18,772	14,790	2,223	1,719	4,134	4,166	2,447	2,317	27,576	22,992	215,655	168,946	29,071	22,282	36,355	33,928	14,442	13,109	295,523	238,262

NOTE.—The above figures, being made up at the earliest possible date after the close of each month, are subject to correction in the annual returns.

R. GIFFEN.

Commercial Department, Board of Trade, November 4.

From Mr. J. Henniker-Heaton's letter to the Standard, published on Oct. 28 last, it appears that 1,275,000 British-born persons left these shores for our Australasian Colonies alone between the years 1841 and 1885! They were distributed as follows:—

Victoria, 510,000; New Zealand, 223,000; New South Wales, 200,000; Queensland, 164,000; South Australia, 135,000; Tasmania, 28,000; West Australia, 15,000. In one year, 1884, the total number of persons who arrived in the whole of the Australasian Colonies from England was 78,126 souls! These numbers show how vast is the movement which is taking place in effecting the peopling of the Colonies of the British Empire, and how wonderfully large must be the vital power of a people which can bear such a strain upon it, and yet not only survive, but continue to pour forth its streams of emigrants literally "as fishes do increase," according to Gen. xlviii. 16. The fact, however, is that the British, being Israel, they are in all this only fulfilling the prophecies of Hosea i. 10 and Zech. x. 8, 9, 10, "Yet the number of the children of Israel shall be as the sand of the sea, which cannot be measured nor numbered" . . . "they shall increase as they have increased . . . and I will bring them into the land of Gilead and Lebanon, and place shall not be found for them." These two prophecies were of comparative recent date, Hosea's being pronounced just before the Ten Tribes were carried away (i.e., in B.C. 785), and the second long after the restoration of Judah—viz., in B.C. 487, near the close of the Old Testament canon of Holy Scripture. To no other nation is granted such wonderful multitudinousness, and none exhibit such peculiar results as the effects of this redundancy. For our nation by these offshoots has secured the desolate heritages of the earth, and has transformed them into true "gardens of the Lord" (Isa. xxxv. 1, 2, li. 3).

Digitized by Google

These are some of the most remarkable of the signs which prove our Hebrew origin. We recommend our readers carefully to study this question of our nation's emigration statistics, and to watch the results thereof. They will see that thereby the Scriptures are being fulfilled to the very jot and to the very tittle, and that our superabundant population, by emigrating to foreign parts, is laying the foundation of that grand "company of nations" which, confederated with "the old Mother in the West," will eventually dominate the whole world (Deut. vii. 27, Rom. iv. 13).

IS THE BRITISH NATION THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL?

On Tuesday, the 14th instant, Mr. Frank C. Barter read a paper at the weekly meeting of the Courtenay Mutual Improvement and Literary Society, in the Congregational Hall, Plymouth, on this subject; the Rev. J. Townsend Maxwell in the chair. In opening, the essayist spoke of the old spirit of nationality that now seemed to be asserting itself in all parts of the world, and said he thought this had a providential meaning, and was the sign of the revival of Israel as a nation. He then proceeded to show the distinction between the House of Israel and House of Judah; how the prophecies to the latter had been, and were now being fulfilled, and then briefly traced the history of the House of Israel up to the Assyrian captivity. He then said there must be a nation somewhere in possession of the blessings promised to Abraham and his seed the House of Israel, and as we had no trace of them we must turn to Identity and prophecy to discover them. The essayist then dealt with a dozen identities in a concise but telling manner, and concluded by pointing out that being the Lost House of Israel would not give us salvation, or any other blessing, except by faith in our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ

At the close a very animated discussion took place. Mr. Miller testified to the British nation being undoubtedly the universal rulers. He had been in all parts of the world, and had more than once been asked by foreigners what made our country so powerful, rich, and free. He could only reply that because, he believed, God was ruling over us in His own way, which was best. Mr. Winter and Mrs. Ambrose Taylor spoke in support of the Identity. Mr. J. Lake, Mr. Luxton, Mr. A. W. Ivey, the Chairman, and others followed in discussion, the latter questioning a few Biblical quotations only. A few points were argued, but not one speaker repudiated the Identity, and all agreed it was well worth considering. They thanked Mr. Barter for having brought it forward.

The meeting closed with the benediction, pronounced by the Chairman.

Israel's Scripture and Prayer Union.—Will members kindly note that the Monthly Comments will not be issued again in single numbers; and that all letters should be addressed to Miss E. Sibbald, 3, Townshend-villas, Richmond, Surrey.

THE ANNEXATION OF SOCOTRA.

On October 30th, 1886, Brigadier-General Hogg, the British Political Resident of Aden, annexed the Island of Socotra to the British Empire. The island was virtually annexed in April, 1876, when an arrangement was made with the Sultan of Kishen, on the Arabian Coast, that the reversion in the island belonged to this country, and that it should never pass to any foreign Power. The British Government then stipulated that, when needful, they would assume charge of the island and use it as a new defence of the Indian Empire ("Geography of the Gates," by Philo-Israel, p. 47). The time had now arrived, we presume, when it was deemed necessary to secure our position against French pretensions in the Indian Ocean, and arm our Gates in preparation for the sifting time soon to come upon the world. The inevitable step has, therefore, been now taken, and this fine island just opposite to, and South-east of Aden, will henceforth take its place as one of our Asiatic Gates—a defensive, strategic position as respects the Southern entry to the Red Sea, and a warning to France and all others whom it may concern that the road to the East from Europe is under Israel's lock and key. The following is a short memorandum respecting the value of this island which is not new to Identity readers, but may be welcome information to those who have only recently learnt what the British Gates are, and what purposes they serve as part of God's gift to His people Israel. We take the facts from the Bristol Times and Mirror of Nov. 24:—

Socotra is an island in the Indian Ocean, about 120 miles East of Cape Guardafui. It is mountainous, and the greater part of the soil is sterile, but on the sides and summits of the limestone mountains aloes are grown, which are deemed the finest in the world. The gum known in commerce as dragon's-blood is also a valuable export. The island has been subject to the Imaum of Muscat, who maintained on it a lieutenant-governor, and who bound himself by treaty to allow no settlement on the island without the consent of the British Government. The area of the island is estimated at 1,000 square miles, and the population at about 10,000.

Review.

"Reasons for . Dissenting from the Anglo-Israel Theory"—Addressed to Philo-Israel. By Captain George Palmer, R.N., F.R.G.S., &c. Price 2d. W. F. Mack, 38, Park-street, Bristol.

PART II.

(Concluded from page 35).

Capt. Palmer lays it down as law that "our theory is untenable, as based on holy Scripture" (p. 6). If we ask why, we are told that we have no business "to literalise the promises made to Israel in the Bible!" The believers in Jesus, it appears, are "the spiritual seed of Abraham, and as "such inherit the promises." Now we object to both these statements. Those who may be ranked as "true believers" are "the spiritual House" it is true (1 Peter ii. 5), but we deny that such personally enjoy all "the promises." For instance, the true believers in Tinnevelly and Japan, in China and South Africa, nay, the true believers in our own most favoured land, of whom we doubt not Capt. Palmer is himself a good example, do not by any means personally enjoy or inherit the promises which are national! Such believers have, no doubt, the blessings connected with salvation by grace, but cannot, from the nature of things, inherit the national blessings enumerated in Gen. xii. 2, 3, xviii. 18, xxii. 17, 18, xxviii. 14, xxxv. 11, xlviii. 16—19, xlix. 22—26; Deut. viii. 18, xv. 6, xxviii. 1 to 13, &c., &c., all which are tied up to the nation Israel, but are not, and cannot be the portion of individual believers anywhere. Capt. Palmer cannot put these national promises aside, for they are God's good gifts to "His people Israel," and they are unconditionally theirs nationally, but not individually—that is, as separate believers in Jesus.

We are not, therefore, affected by our opponent's charge and taunt, on p. 9, that we "seek to do away with the spiritual promises," and, by so doing, bring harm, but not good, as the result, in these days of "scepticism and unbelief." Neither do we admit that our views are calculated "to buoy up the English nation as the salt of the earth" to rely on their Abrahamic origin rather than on the blood of Calvary, because it is part of our teaching that salvation by grace is an individual thing, and a man or woman may, as part of this nation, have all the national Abrahamic blessings, but lose their own souls for lack of faith, as did Ahab—Judas Iscariot, and many another Israelite son of Belial, whose cases are recorded in the Bible. Capt. Palmer quotes Rom. iv. 16, 17, as though that text decides the point that the spiritual seed (i.e., believers in Christ only) "inherit the promises." But this text is one of our strongholds as proving that "the seed" or "all the seed" of Israel are of two Houses—namely, that which is "of the law" or Judah, and that which is of the faith of Abraham or the House of Ephraim, Lo-Ammi Israel, "the sons of the living God," who are Christ's (Hosea i. 10; Isa. lxv. 1). To the same effect is St. Paul's testimony in Rom. ix. 6—23—26, which our opponent believes makes against us, but we know is in our favour. For St. Paul quoted Hosea ii. 23, a prophet who predicted nothing respecting non-Israelite Gentiles, but everything regarding Gentilised Lo-Ammi Israel. This is "the mystery of Israel," spoken of by St. Paul in Rom. xi. 25, which Capt. Palmer must comprehend before he can have the key which unlocks Rom. ix. 23—26, and Gen. xlviii. 19. There the apostle wrote of "the Lord's call of His people," not from the Jews only, but from the Gentiles also, and those Gentiles could only be Hosea's Lo-Ammi Gentiles of the Ten Tribes, or Jacob's multitude of Gentile Ephraimite nations. Our opponent appeals to Gal. iii. 7 to 9 as though that were a fatal text to our contention. But our views are founded on the great fact that "God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son that whosoever believeth on Him should not perish but have everlasting life." Israel is the national instrument made and formed to take the Gospel of salvation to all Gentile nations, and God thus blesses the latter by means of Abraham's afterseed as the messengers of His grace. The temporal and spiritual national gifts He has endowed Israel with, were needed to qualify them for this work, and without such national gifts it is clear God did not intend the chosen nation to begin or carry on the work. No one wants to rob the Church of Christ of one of the spiritual promises. But no one can rob Israel the nation of the secular and spiritual gifts needed to enable them, as God's instrumentality, "to blossom and bud and fill the face of the world with fruit" (Isa. xxvii. 6); for in truth God formed them for Himself that they might show forth this, His praise (Isa. xliii. 21).

Digitized by Google

The foundation of all Capt. Palmer's mistakes in reference to this subject arises from his views stated on pp. 6 and 7 of his pamphlet. There he says, "It seems to me the very existence of your theory depends on the supposed separation of Israelites and Jews," a "separation not recognised by either Cyrus, Ezra, or Nehemiah, and certainly not by our Lord Jesus Christ and His apostles." He cannot see the Scriptural distinction between Israel and Judah in God's Word, or in the record of Josephus! Now Josephus very plainly recorded his belief in this distinction, as Antiq. xi. chap. v. 1, 2, proves—Cyrus' proclamation, as both Ezra and Josephus tell us, was to the Jews only, being then the only people on earth called "God's People" (Ezra. i. 3; 2 Chron. xxxvi. 23; Hosea i. 8, 9; Joseph. xi. v. 1, 2). Our Lord Jesus Christ's mission was to be "Governor" or "Shepherd" of "His people Israel" (Matt. ii. 6; Micah v, 2). That that people was Ephraim-Israel, is apparent from Micah v. 2 (whence Matthew quoted), because in that verse the two names are placed in juxtaposition—Judah was to furnish the prince who was to rule "God's people Israel" (see Jer. vii. 12—15, xxxiii. 17—26). In Heb. viii. 8—12 the two Houses are clearly separated, and Judah's blessings as well as Israel's distinguished! So much for Capt. Palmer's argument. We make him a present of that founded on Matt. x. 6, and xv. 24, as we admit a doubt may here rationally arise.

Capt. Palmer, in a spirit of banter, perhaps, is willing enough to literalise a prophecy respecting "Ephraim's drunkards" (Isa. xxviii. 1), and says it is the only passage in God's Word applicable to our Identity! Well and good! There is one literal prophecy then, after all, which we may safely apply to the British folk and say it fits! Why not, then, the scores of others which fit exactly, besides the few which, on page 11, our author tells us "our great Anglo-Saxon race fulfils" among the many promises God made to His chosen ones? The burden of proof in regard to the negative proposition now lies on Capt. Palmer, and he must tell us why we are wrong when we declare that our nation has all the signs and marks God put on Israel of the latter day, that we lack not one, and that, therefore, the British are Israel, but not otherwise?

What, we would ask Capt. Palmer, was the evidence of our Lord Jesus Christ's identity as the Son of God, but a mass of prophetic facts literally fulfilled? The Jews made the same mistake our friend does, and refused to accept them literally, and so fell into the deadly sin of murdering the Prince of Life (Acts iii. 15). Every clause of Isa. liii. related to a literal, earthly fact, literally fulfilled in Him. So of the prophecies generally. He was to be born in Bethlehem; brought up in Nazareth; to be the Son of a virgin; to fly into Egypt; to be called out thence; to speak in parables; to open the blind eyes; to ride into the City of Jerusalem on an ass, and the colt the foal of an ass; to be rejected of men; to be priced at 30 pieces of silver; to have His garments parted, and for His vesture to have lots cast; to be buried with the rich; to die with the wicked; to rise from the dead on the third day, and to ascend up into glory. Every single prophetic fact was a literal fact literally fulfilled in Jesus of Nazareth, and to these fulfilments the Gospels constantly point to condemn the unbelieving Jews who doubted. Why then now, are we, at Capt. Palmer's demand, to take the same prophet's statements regarding God's people Israel (His chosen), and to evaporate all their literal allegations of fact respecting Israel in the last days, and deny them a literal, but give them only a spiritual signification? We cannot and we dare not so act! In one respect we perceive Capt. Palmer dares not either. For we find (on page 9) that he admits Israel are scattered among all nations, and are yet destined to be gathered from them all. Why is this prediction to be literal, but the others that arise out of Israel's gathering in the Isles of the West—their occupation of their enemies' Gates, their Heathen and Colonial Empires, their wealth and power, and their present realisation of the blessings of Ephraim, described in Genesis xlviii. 19, to be ignored as matters not worthy of regard?

Capt. Palmer's scoffing words in regard to the coronation stone we leave for others to answer. For ourselves, we have said enough to show that our opponent has not yet seen the distinction between Israel and Judah as established by the whole testimony of God's Word, and that, therefore, he is not yet in a position to understand it fully.

We observe that he expresses himself quite satisfied that he has an heirship and heritage as a saved sinner in Christ (p. 11). We are rejoiced to know it! But we beg leave to tell him that there is yet another aspect of that question which concerns God's glory, His truth, and faithfulness. His own salvation is a very secondary concern in comparison! For first, God's oath and promises must stand and be found to be literally true; failing which the New Testament covenants derived from the same Testator's Words must be open to the impious assault of the infidel and the atheist! Our views prove God's truth. Capt. Palmer sacrifices it, in order that he may hug himself with a selfish sense of his own security. We entreat him to pause and to consider before he contents himself with so dangerous a view of the foundation on which he is resting for his soul's security, how God (who is a jealous God, and who tells us that "He changeth not, and therefore the sons of Jacob are not consumed)," will estimate a doctrine, which practically declares He has changed, and that His sworn covenants and promises to the House of Joseph are now completely null and void! Capt. Palmer's "Cui bono?" argument on p. 11 of his pamphlet, we have dealt with on p. 465, vol. x., of the BANNER already, and we need not, therefore, repeat the reply here.

Correspondence.

THE NEW CAPITAL OF THE WORLD.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—It is somewhat satisfactory to find that some of our contemporaries are not above perusing the pages of the BANNER in search of an occasional note of news, as the subjoined extract from such an intelligent sheet as the St. James's Gazette of this evening sufficiently proves:—

"That London will not always be the capital of the world there can be no reasonable doubt: the only question has been as to the city which will be its successor. This little matter has now been satisfactorily settled, and the new capital is to be Jerusalem. The British-Israelites long ago assigned this honour to the fortress of Jebus; but the practical details of effecting the change have been independently taken in hand by some Imperial Federationists of Canada, at the head of whom is Mr. H. W. Monk, M.P.

Digitized by Google

(for Ottawa). Mr. Monk has formed a company for the purpose of buying up Palestine and establishing there the capital of the earth. The capital (of the company) is 10,000,000 dollars, and more than a seventh of this sum has already been subscribed. The President of the United States is named in the prospectus as a vice-president, and among the patronesses is the Queen of England. The BANNER OF ISRAEL looks with favour on the scheme, but permits itself to doubt whether Mr. Monk has hit upon the exact way which was contemplated in Isaiah for bringing about the same purpose."

Let our readers now refer to the BANNER for 1st Dec., 1886, and carefully look through the article on page 472, and they will perceive that the entire inspiration of the note in the Gazette is derived from that same article; and reading between the lines it is easy to see that the writer, in spite of a little shamefacedness of manner, may be much more in sympathy with BANNER opinions than his uneasy assumption of a light vein of irony would lead his readers to suppose.

I remain, dear Sir, yours faithfully,

Dec. 18, 1886. H. R. SHAW.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—My authority for the statement that in 1786 no native of Britain was engaged as a missionary to the heathen, is the writer of the review on "Modern Christian Missions" in the Quarterly Review for July, 1886. In a letter from the reviewer, in answer to my enquiry, he says:—"The statement that in 1786 no native of Britain was engaged in mission work to the heathen is to be found in Dr. G. Smith's 'Life of Carey,' and also in his 'History of Missions.' Before using it, I verified it as far as I could, but was unable to discover any exception to it. The S.P.C.K. certainly had no British missionary, nor had S.P.G., nor had the English Nonconformists or Scotch Churches any. If Mr. La Trobe's statement, that the Moravian staff of missionaries at that date contained 18 British-born persons, is correct, they must have practically renounced their country and their Church, or sect, and become merged and lost in the German Herrnhutlers, and thus left no trace of themselves as British except in the private records of the Moravians."

However, there is no doubt, from Mr. La Trobe's statement, which he has since verified to me, that at the time mentioned, 1786, there were 18 natives of Britain (14 male and 4 female, i.e., wives of missionaries) who had received a call from the settlement of Herrnhut in Saxony. This connected them with a Continental Directing Board, which, no doubt, is the reason Dr. Smith and the writer of the review overlooked them.

The central fact remains, that John Carey was the father of the present great British missionary movement for the conversion of the heathen. None of the large societies were in existence in 1786. Carey, with a dozen others, in 1792, founded the Baptist Missionary Society, subscribing among themselves £13 2s. 6d. to start the enterprise of converting the world! In 1795, after Carey's first report from India had been received, the London Missionary Society was founded, which was followed four years later by the Church Missionary Society, which is now, with its annual income of over £230,000, at the head of the Evangelical organisations of Christendom. It is only within the last fifty years that the missionary agencies have passed from the era of beginnings and experiments to the commanding position held at the present day.

An interesting little tract has just been published by the Unitas Fratrum, "The Moravian Church and her Missions." It can be obtained from the Rev. B. La Trobe (Mission Secretary), 29, Ely-place, London, E.C. They have always been a brave band of earnest Christian men, enduring the most horrible persecutions, and to the front whenever any special hardship was to be faced, or where the work for Christ seemed the roughest and least hopeful. Their success has been great.

Yours truly,

F. GASS.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—I have read lately, either in "Across the Jordan," G. Schumacher, or in "Heth and Moab," Capt. Conder, but I cannot find the passage now, that the Crusader's Churches East of Jordan, were oriented just like English churches, and Sir Gilbert Scott told me that Gothic churches were always directed to the sun-rising on the day of their dedication, like those at Cashel. Therefore, the true Church of Christ, in all ages, has prayed towards the sun-rising instead of towards the threshing-floor of Araunah, and the temple which covers it.

It is a beautiful allegory. The sacrifice of Isaac was a symbol of the sacrifice of Christ, which the Israelites of old were watching for; and the sun, with its life-giving properties (which we feel with double force in this promised land) is the truest symbol of the life-giving Saviour. The sacrifice on the cross was life from the dead to all who, like Abraham, looked to it in faith. The second rising of the sun of righteousness, as Shiloh, is life to all who watch for it now. It is an identification of our new "tongue" that son and sun have the same sound in it, but in no other language; and are both used in Holy Scripture to express the Son of God.

This orientation is an argument for "the Eastern position at the altar," as well as at the Creed and Litany, in churches which are oriented; and Romanists having perverted this to mean transubstantiation cannot alter the case, any more than their Idolatry can make it wrong for "all generations" to call the blessed virgin "blessed." The arch deceiver always uses the best steel in his most insidious attacks on our faith and practices.

Yours truly,

A WATCHER.

Beyrout, Syria, Dec. 12th, 1886.

NOTE BY THE EDITOR.—We publish the above out of deference to our distant correspondent. But we must demur to the expression, "the Eastern position at the altar." The Church of England knows of no "altar" in her Churches, or her services; and nothing of the "Eastern position" at the holy table either. We can want no motive, therefore, for an "Eastern position" during the celebration of the Holy Communion; wherefore, in the name of Protestant consistency, we must, as the Editor of the BANNER OF ISRAEL, reject in toto any such argument as that our "Watcher" brings before us, in the last paragraph of the above letter.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—I beg to acquaint you with the discovery of another Gate! The appended cutting will give you full particulars; and the way in which this Gate has come into the possession of Her Majesty's Government is certainly amusing.

"A PANAMA CANAL PROBLEM.—Paris, Dec. 13.—One of the foreign questions with which M. Flourens will have to deal is that of Turtle Island, which, it is held here, commands the future of the Panama Canal, as Aden does that of the Suez Canal. The Turtle Island affair is thus: Fifteen years ago the Haytian Government granted it to a Mrs. Maunder, the widow of a Haytian citizen. Soon after an attempt was made to withdraw her privilege, and she obtained British protection, got herself naturalised as English, and as such was protected. Inasmuch as possession was taken quietly of the island by a representative of her Britannic Majesty, the Haytian Government protested, and demanded the arbitration of France, which demand was rejected on the ground that Mrs. Maunder could not pay the expense of arbitration. Hayti persists in its demand, and there is talk of a movement being got up at Port-au-Prince to sell the Tortoise or Turtle Island either to France or to the Panama Company."

Yours, &c.,

Dec. 29th, 1886. J. G. T.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—In 1875, Hine's "Identifications" and several numbers of "Life from the Dead" were handed me by a stranger, which I read with a thirst for more. Up to then the Bible was no book of mine, and that I was almost prayerless is not surprising. But after the above date the Bible became the Book of books. A daily reading was commenced; next family prayer was introduced (Bickersteth's forms); lastly, when, in 1881, an illness set in which has kept me to my room till now, the form of prayer was cast aside and our daily petitions shaped according to our wants. So that the question of Lost Israel has been to me a personal question of the utmost importance.

V. J.

THE Remarkable Jew, Rabinowitz, has come on a visit to this country, and was welcomed at a conference at the Mildmay Hall.—A useful and beautifully illustrated book for a present, has recently been published by Messrs. Nelson and Sons, of Paternoster Row, entitled, "Jerusalem, Bethany, and Bethlehem." The price is 12s.—Mr. H. M. Stanley, starts immediately for Africa to rescue Emin Bey.

Digitized by Google

NOTICES.

All communications intended for the Editor, to be addressed — "Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Clifton, Bristol.

SUBSCRIPTIONS £ s. d.

Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free - 0 7 6
Two Copies (including Double Numbers) - - 0 13 6
Three Copies " " " " - 1 0 4
Four Copies " " " " - 1 5 6
Six Copies " " " " - 1 16 4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-grand, London, to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C., or F. W. PARRY & Co., 29, Paternoster-row, London.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

Contents Bills and Show Cards may be obtained on application to the Publishers.

Advertisements should be sent to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

Prepaid Advertisements are inserted at the rate of 30 words for 1s. 4d.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

The Rev. JAS. BILLINGTON, F.R.H.S.

Will LECTURE in the

MORAVIAN CHAPEL, 32, FETTER LANE, FLEET STREET, E.C.,

ON TUESDAY AFTERNOONS, JANUARY 25, FEBRUARY 1, and 8, commence at Three o'clock.

Admission Free.

Price 6d., by post 7d.; Annual Subscription, 2s. 6d., post free.

THE JANUARY QUARTERLY PART

OF

ISRAEL'S HOPE & DESTINY

CONTENTS:

The People Left of the Sword Found Grace in the Wilderness. By J. S. Lowe.—An Unassailable Position. By V. M. Cox.—The Ancient of Days. By Alexander MacPhail.—The Land of Hadrach, England's Stronghold. By the late Colonel J. C. Gawler.—The Conversion of the Jews Unscriptural.—More Links in the Chain. By J. Thomson.—To Our Readers.—The Mutual Trade of the British Empire.—Poetry.—Review.—Correspondence.

London: ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.; F. W. PARRY (late Guest, Hayworth & Co.). 29, Paternoster-row.

No Reader of Identity Literature should be without this Almanack.

Now Ready. Price 3d. (by post, 4d.). Brown cloth, gilt lettered, interleaved throughout with ruled paper 1s. (Post free on receipt of postal order.)

The Anglo-Israel Almanack and Diary

FOR 1887.

Being the Jubilee Year of Her Majesty the Queen.

London: Printed and published by R. BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C., and may be had by order of any bookseller.

Price 6d., post free 7d.

ISRAEL'S CHRONOLOGY, compiled from the Old Testament, and arranged as a CHART giving the A.M. and B.C. dates, and Scripture references for every event therein specified, together with the points of agreement between the Bible History and the Marks and Measurements of the Great Pyramid. With Explanatory Notes and Observations by GEORGE N. WALSH.

London: Robert Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-st.

Knight & Forster's Pens

Everybody's Pen

Turned up Points

KNIGHT, FORSTER LEEDS.

3/6 PER GROSS

1/- PER 4 GROSS.

LONDON-STRAKER & SONS, 124, FENCHURCH ST.

or post free direct from the Makers

Basinghall Works Leeds.

PUBLISHED BY ROBT. BANKS & SON,

RACQUET COURT, FLEET STREET, E.C.

WORKS BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

The History of the House of Israel: How they were Lost, and How they were Found, Told for the Children. Price 6d., cloth 1s.; post free 7d. and 1s. 1d. Fourth Edition. Eleventh thousand.

Our Identity with the House of Israel. Price 4d. Reprinted from "Clifton Chronicle Letters"

A Resume of the Scriptural Argument, proving the Identity of the British Race with the Lost Ten Tribes. Price 1d.; 6s. per 100. New edition now ready.

An Elementary Digest or Sketch of the Chief Facts and Teachings of the Great Pyramid of Egypt. Adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific 56 pages, Illustrated with Diagrams, price 4d., post free 5d. 10th Thousand.

The Geography of the Gates. With Map and six full page, and one double-page, Illustrations, printed on plate paper. 208 pages, in handsome cloth, gilt Price 3s. 6d., post free 3s. 10d.

Now Ready, Price 8s., in Handsome Blue Cloth.

THE NEW VOLUME

OF THE

BANNER OF ISRAEL

(VOL. X.)

A most suitable present to a Town Hall or Local Library. Sure to prove of great interest and be the means of introducing Our Identity to the notice of a numerous class of intelligent readers and students. Should be in every Bible-student's Library.

May be ordered of any bookseller, or sent direct from the Publishers on receipt of remittance for 8/-.

R. BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.
F. W. PARRY & Co., 29, Paternoster-row.

CASES FOR BINDING VOL. X.

ARE NOW READY,

Price 1s. 6d., post free 1s. 8d.

Robert Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

THE TEETH, THE TEETH, THOSE PRECIOUS TEETH!

Save, Purify, Beautify.

GEORGE & WELCH'S

CARBOLINE

1/6 (TOOTH PASTE). 2/6 per Pot.

Is the Best Known

Cleanser, Preserver, and Deodoriser.

Dental Guide says:—"No Tooth application equals the Carbolics."

Proprietors: GEORGE & WELCH, Worcester.

Through Chemists, or Post Free from Makers.

BRONCHITIS, ASTHMA, COUGHS, COLDS, CONSUMPTION, and all Pulmonary Affections can be immediately relieved and rapidly CURED by simply using the AMMONIAPHONE FOR THE Voice, Throat, Chest, and Lungs.

21s. post free. WILL LAST FOR YEARS.

Used and recommended by the Royal Family, and principal Physicians, Clergymen, Vocalists, and Public Speakers throughout the country. New illustrated Pamphlet with copies of Thousands of Testimonials may be had FREE OF CHARGE on application to Medical Battery Co. Ld. 52, OXFORD STREET, LONDON, W.

Corner of Rathbone Place

BY REV. HENRY ROE.

(Fifteenth Thousand).

1. Israel's World. Origin and Destiny of British Race, Colonies, and Empire. 2d., post free 2½d. "Worthy of a world-wide circulation."—H. B. Thompson, Association Sec. 50 post free from H. Roe for 4s. 9d.
2. Going to Africa. 1s., post free 1s. 1d.
3. Fernando Po Mission. 1s., post free 1s. 1d.
4. West African Scenes. 2s., post free 2s. 2d.
5. Consecration. 2d., post free 2½d.

50 post free from H. Roe for 4s. 9d.

No. 1 is published by R. Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.; Nos. 1 and 5 by E. Stock, 62, Paternoster-row, E.C.; and all by Rev. H. Roe, Dawley, Salop.

THE NOTE-PAPER FOR 1887.

THE JUBILEE NOTE-PAPER, 1887.

A HIGH-CLASS CREAM-LAID NOTE-PAPER, each sheet bearing a watermark device: The Portrait of Her Majesty Queen Victoria, in a wreath of Rose, Shamrock, and Thistle, and designs symbolic of the Colonies and India. Can be had glazed or unglazed surface. Price 1s. 6d. per packet of five quires; by post 1s. 10½d. Can be had with address neatly printed for 3s., by post 3s. 4½d.—Robert Banks and Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

LUNG OWBRIDGE'S LUNG TONIC, THE MIGHTY HEALER. Save Your Lives by Taking OWBRIDGE'S LUNG TONIC. It has a power over diseases hitherto unknown in Medicine. Are you at all Weak-chested or inclined to be Consumptive, with just a touch of Cough now and then? "Try this Wonderful Medicine." The Cough and Weakness will disappear as if by magic, and you will feel a strength and power you never had before. HAVE YOU A COUGH? A DOSE WILL RELIEVE IT. HAVE YOU A COLD? A DOSE AT BEDTIME WILL REMOVE IT. Bronchitis & Asthma it relieves instantly. The Spasms of Coughing so dreadful in Whooping Cough become less with each dose of the medicine. — Prepared by W. T. OWBRIDGE, Chemist, Hull. Sold in Bottles 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d. & 11s. by all Chemists and Patent Medicine Vendors. Wholesale all London and Provincial Houses. TONIC

DEAFNESS IS CURABLE

R. M. says: "I am indeed pleased to tell you my hearing has returned, and that the noise in my head, which at times was most distressing, is also quite gone."

S. H. says: "Your Earal Drops, in five weeks, did what two doctors failed to do—namely, restore my hearing. I feel like a new man."

Send Postal Order for 2s. 6d. to

SPENCER GAY,

38, BATH ROAD, EXETER,

for a Bottle of Earal Drops and Medicated Wool, with instructions, post free.

ETHELINE

A New and most effective Remedy for CORNS.—Perfectly safe and harmless. Is very easily applied. Cures in a few applications, without the slightest pain. Everyone troubled with either Corns, Warts, or Bunions, will find relief by using ETHELINE. To be obtained of all Chemists, or post free for 14 stamps from J. LLEWELLYN, CHEMIST, COWBRIDGE.

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. F. W. PARRY (late GUEST & Co.), 29, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, JAN. 26, 1887. [All rights reserved.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."

(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. XI., No. 527. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 2, 1887. [DOUBLE NUMBER, TWOPENCE.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

PAGE

"Thy Gates Also Shall Be Open Continually" 45
The Blessed Stewards of a Thousand Responsibilities 46
How Our Identity Strikes a Learner 47
"The Stone Which the Builders Rejected." By Surgeon-General J. M. Grant, M.D. 48
The Gentiles Whom God Hath Cleansed 49
The "Churchman" Propounds that the Ten Tribes Were Never Lost 49
Bible Studies: Israel in the British Isles. By Maud Watham 50
Romans IX., X., and XI., Revised Version.—Part I. 51
The Lord's Firstborn 52
India and Its Trade 53
The Name thereof is called Bamah unto this Day. By E. Wilmshurst.—Part IV. .. 54
French and German Encroachments on British Trade 55
The British-Israel Identity Association, 24, Newington, Liverpool 56
The Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association at Work Once More 57
Jacob's Stone 57
International Institute for Preserving and Perfecting Anglo-Saxon Weights and Measures 58
The Biter Bitten 58
The Anglo-Israel Free Distribution Fund 59
Correspondence 59
Israel's Scripture and Prayer Union 59

"THY GATES ALSO SHALL BE OPEN CONTINUALLY."

LORD CARNARVON has followed up his first letter to the Times on the subject of the foreign Gates, or coaling stations, by a second, on the subject of "The Defence of our Commercial Ports." The latter appeared in the Times of January 8, 1887. Lord Carnarvon's account of our utterly defenceless condition at home must be gall and wormwood to our military experts to whom we imagined we had confided our commercial ports in the certainty that they, and we, were now safe in their charge. It appears we have no fortifications to-day of any service for such first-class British home Gates as those on the Humber, the Tyne, the Tees, the Clyde, the Firth of Forth and the Mersey! In regard to the guns required to meet the frightful weapons which war ships now carry, our case is even worse. We have not a single gun anywhere which could stop the approach of an enemy's war ship if our Fleet were by accident away from the spot!

We quote Lord Carnarvon's words that our readers may guage the extremity of the danger, humanly speaking, and what a critical moment the present is, supposing we have really, nationally, no security provided, by reason of our defenceless state. He said:—

But the question of guns is different. Immediate action there is possible and within reasonable limits of expenditure. It was the duty of the Commission of which I was chairman to inquire into the then imminent revolution in the construction of our guns, and we anticipated and recommended the great change which has actually taken effect during the last five years. The result has justified us, and the new type of gun, which we so strongly urged upon the Government, is now recognised as the only reliable armament in the attack or defence of first-class positions. A length of range and an accuracy of fire which a few years since would have been deemed fabulous, under the control and direction of the most beautiful application of science, are now attained. It is true that in their elaborate mountings and machinery such guns combine the disadvantages of slowness of manufacture, delicacy of construction, shortness of life, and great costliness. But a good article is generally expensive, and if such guns contribute materially to the public safety they are in the long run cheap. Moreover, a smaller number of them will, under our new system of defence, do the work of a much larger number under the old conditions. But be the number what it may, we have no choice in the matter; these costly but effective weapons will decide modern wars and the fate of nations, and yet—marvellous to say—we have not one of them in our home ports, nor have we even one first-class one mounted in any arsenal or dockyard.

The marvel which astonishes Lord Carnarvon, however, is one very easily explained. This nation is Israel; Israel is under the protecting care of God Almighty in the Isles of the West, "the appointed place" of her safe domicile and habitation. God has promised that those very home Gates which Lord Carnarvon finds are completely defenceless and open to the hostile visits of a foreign foe "shall be open continually" for the peaceful pursuits of commerce, "that men may bring to us the wealth of the nations and their kings led with them." (Isa. lx. 11, R.V.). These promises make it unnecessary to fortify and defend our great rivers and estuaries lest the Gates situated thereon may be insulted, violated, or captured by a blockading attacking naval force. Hence, in blind response to these great blessings, freely given to us on oath by the Father of Israel himself, our nation has for ages lived confidently, carelessly and safely withal, in these islands, making light of foreign attacks, and despising all projects of home protection from the hostile invasion of her foes. No reason could possibly be assigned for such conduct, which Lord Carnarvon plainly declares is "madness" at the present time. But we imagine that the British public will think once, twice, and even thrice, before they waste their millions sterling on making elaborate and costly preparations for defence such as Lord Palmerston did, only to result, at this hour, in such becoming the laughing-stock of the world, which sees that the forts around the arsenals at Portsmouth and elsewhere, built at such prodigious expense, are now almost useless for the purpose for which they were constructed. We believe these considerations will cause Lord Carnarvon's second letter to fall to the ground unheeded—while his first, having reference to the defence of the foreign Gates, is sure to attract immediate attention, because these are in peril, and God has ordered us at this very juncture to fortify them, when He said in Isa. xxvi. 20, "Shut thy doors about thee." If it should be found that our commercial ports are in the real peril Lord Carnarvon describes (and who can doubt it ?) and if it should turn out that our British people nevertheless absolutely refuse to expend the vast sums needed to fortify them, then surely it will be seen by the world at large, that this nation—which as by a miracle exists and "dwells safely," though to all human calculation it is in the very extremity of peril,—must be the House of Israel, since in this, as in all other respects, it enjoys, and enjoys exclusively, all the blessings and benefits God swore to give to the afterseed of Abraham "His friend." One of the chief of these is safety from foreign attack in our island home. Why, then, should we faithlessly proceed to fortify our home Gates as if we derived our safety from such defences ? Our safety depends on God's character for faithfulness and truth. He undertook our defence when He appointed us a safe asylum here, and we need be under no pains or expense to erect fortresses to keep out an enemy who, after all, will never approach our shores with hostile or evil intent. Looking round the world at this moment, what nation is likely to harass and invade ? Save France, there is no other nation which would have the chance. Neither Germany, nor Italy, or Austria would wish to molest us. The Russian navies are shut in by ice for several months in the year, and can be shut into the Baltic and Mediterranean by our Fleets at other seasons. There remains the rising naval Power of France. Is France ever likely to become the insulting enemy of Great Britain ? All the signs are the other way ! The policy of France is to keep on friendly terms with the British nation until the return duel with Germany has been fought out, and it is seen whether France emerges from it a ruined and ravaged nation or the dictator of peace at Berlin. She will not want to be brought between two fires at such a time as that ! She keeps her naval and military strength for her wars now surely coming on with Germany. Why, then, should we consent to plunge into tremendous costs for useless home expenses, when the adequate defence of Singapore, Hong Kong, Aden, Colombo, Cape Town, and dozens of our outland coaling stations are left to chance, contrary to the distinct command of the God of Israel ? Lord Carnarvon at the end of the second letter makes the following observations, which call for a word of remark. He said :—

Digitized by Google

> We have outgrown the old system, and we are making no determined attempt to cope with the new order; we spend on things obsolete, we economise on things vital, and we seem to imagine that our past fortune is a guarantee for our future safety. If the Government are now disposed, without fear or favour, to do their duty, I believe they will receive the hearty support of every lover of his country.

"Our past fortune" in respect to our safety in these islands, has been of a truth God's good gift to us, in accordance with the prophecies, because we are His People Israel. We may trust in the continuance of His divine favour, and regard it "as a guarantee of our future safety," because He has told us in 2 Samuel vii. 10, R.V., that "He has appointed a place" for His people Israel, and has planted them there that they may dwell in a place of their own and move no more, and that the children of wickedness may not afflict them any more as at the first."

It would be a strange illustration of our arguments in regard to the Identity, if it should appear at last that while we are to all appearance open to invasion and insult by our foreign enemies, the cost of Lord Carnarvon's suggestion should very likely be so enormous that the nation could not endure it, in addition to the responsibility of putting the coaling stations and Imperial fortresses into a proper state of defence against an enemy. We should thus be safeguarding our extremities, but leaving the vital parts of our body politic exposed to danger. Such danger, however, is nil, because we have the Lord Jehovah's defence as promised, and "He changeth not, therefore we sons of Jacob are not consumed." Israel, consequently, is bound to praise the Lord !

THE BLESSED STEWARDS OF A THOUSAND RESPONSIBILITIES.

How many of us Anglo-Israelites remember in the midst of the contention we are carrying on with our provoking antagonists, that being Israel we British folk nationally and individually are the stewards—highly honoured and blessed stewards of a thousand responsibilities? We fear we are apt to forget the fact, and do not realise how weighty are our duties towards the world at large, as a nation, and how, as individual Israelites, we are constrained by our position as God's stewards to the nations to carry out His purposes, to enable Him "to establish His covenant which He sware unto our fathers, as it is this day" (Deut. viii. 18). The Psalmist, in Psa. lviii. 1, gave expression to our thoughts when he said, "Do ye indeed speak righteousness, O ye congregation?" or, as it is said in the Prayer Book Version, "Are your minds set upon righteousness, O ye congregation?" meaning, of course, the congregation of Israel, and as to the righteousness, the righteousness—the perfect righteousness—of Jesus, the Son of God. Here is the keynote of Israel's responsibilities! They were "formed, created, made, and fashioned" by the God of Israel, as a nation, and as the units which make up the nation, to make known to all the other "nations, families and kindreds of the earth," the spotless, precious, blood-bought righteousness of the Lamb of God, the Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. Do we speak, or tell out and preach, this righteousness, and this only, as the one ordained means of salvation to the sinful nations and inhabitants of the earth? and are our own minds, as individuals of the favoured race, "set upon" this "righteousness" as our own only hope, our only aim, our only desire? On these two considerations hang all our national duties and all our personal obligations to the King who bought us, and to the God who created us for His glory, and to show forth His praise (Isa. xliii. 21, liv. 17). Israel's evangelising functions are part of our national and personal responsibilities to God, as His people and His chosen messengers to the world. Do we British, as His people, preach the Lord Jesus Christ as the God-man to the world "lying in the wicked one," as Him who, "after He had offered one sacrifice for sins, for ever sat down at the right hand of God, from henceforth expecting till His enemies be made His footstool"? (Heb. x. 12, 13).

We do indeed nationally, though in an inefficient, half-hearted way, carry out this portion of our stewardship, and aim, at any rate, by our British and Foreign Bible, and Tract and Missionary Societies, to preach the Word to all, to take the written message—our Holy Scriptures, or Bible—to the ends, the coasts, and the uttermost parts of the earth, to all the nations, to all the families, and to all the kindreds of the earth—in fact, according to the prophecies (Gen. xii. 3, xxii. 18, xxvi. 4, xxviii. 14; Acts iii. 25; Isa. xxvii. 6; Matt. xxviii. 19, 20). The ministry of the Word is one of our chiefest responsibilities, and, as compared with other nations, ours is the only one existing which attempts it in accordance with the exigencies of the divine command, "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature." This was the Lord Jesus' own direction in Mark xvi. 15, and the British nation alone attempts to carry it out as regards "every creature." The Hebrew race was the only one designated by the promises of God to Abraham and Jacob to do this very work. "In thee and in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed" (Gen. xii. 3, xxii. 18, xxviii. 14). But Israel, and therefore the British, who are Israel, are God's stewards to the nations, to administer to them not only the Gospel of the righteousness of Jesus and the Word of God, but also His Sabbaths (which were meant for man) and the Ten Commandments of the law, the reflex of His mind and will, which the Lord Jesus kept for man, and, by keeping them, secured for him "the righteousness of God." This the British do, as no other race can, or desires to do. For we alone of all the nations keep the Sabbaths of the Lord, and we only respect the ten true laws of God, after a fashion which no other race so much as attempts.

Digitized by Google

These four sacred things—the Gospel, the Word of God, His Sabbaths, and His laws—are not the only benefits and blessings of which God has made us His stewards and His high almoners towards all the other races of the earth. Many another blessing follows in the train of these four. Protestantism is one, the true and valid witnessing "that God exists," and "that He is faithful and true to all His promises to the obedient, and to all His threats to those who scorn His revelation and refuse to obey His will." This witnessing function Israel possesses, and ministers it to all those who are willing to listen to and accept their teaching. Civil and religious liberty British-Israel bestows upon her subject and federated races. By her example and help she enables those who, as independent nations, watch her progress, to adopt her institutions, which give freedom, liberty, and progress. Boundless wealth is God's gift to British-Israel, and He gives it to her to impart to others by the commerce, trade, and peace she is enabled by her supremacy to confer on other subject-peoples. We have said enough. We have, as a nation, boundless responsibilities, and are stewards of the Lord God of Israel to administer our trust in respect to the nations of the earth honestly and honourably, as in the sight of God. We have to give them—1. The pure, unadulterated Gospel of the grace of Christ. 2. The Bible. 3. The Sabbath. 4. The Decalogue. 5. Protestantism, or the witnessing faculty. 6. Civil and religious liberty. 7. Freedom to the enslaved. 8. Commerce. 9. Peace. 10. Wealth; besides all those gifts and grace which have been bestowed upon our favoured race as almoners of the grace of God. After this, who will dare to put the stupid question to us, Cui bono?

Our Identity is the most glorious and unselfish fact existing! It is a provision made by God Himself for the benefit of the world, whereby His love to the sons of men may flow out towards them, reaching them through the blessed instrumentality of Israel, according to the prophecies. They are His stewards, the honoured channel of His gifts to the world at large, purchased by the sacrifice of Jesus, who is God the Son, and sanctified by the operations of God the Holy Spirit. The humble, earthly instruments of good to do the work are His chosen, selected, educated, and endowed people Israel—the Ten-Tribed House of Joseph. Israel, praise ye the Lord!

HOW OUR IDENTITY STRIKES A LEARNER.

We take the following interesting sentences from a letter addressed by a Canadian to a friend in New York, which have been repeated to us for our encouragement:—"As far as I can see," wrote the Canadian, "if God's Word be not worse than a fable, Israel, literal Israel, must have continued to exist, and must now be somewhere as a nation. That is a great point to be clear upon! The slight belief that I have of that apparently incontrovertible truth has already brought joy and gratitude into my heart. I have heard it objected that such a belief would foster personal and national pride. My experience is the opposite. It is that of humble gratitude. If I can once see this truth and get a firm grip of it; if I can get a little better acquainted with it, and if an acquaintance with it gives me joy and gratitude, and reveals to me more of God's purposes, it must occasionally be on my tongue and become the subject of my conversation." We cannot but compare this warm and appreciative reference to Our Identity with the cold and cynical Cui bono? questionings of our clergy and ministers. Joy and gratitude is felt by the earnest inquirer; but the teachers of religion can do nothing but ridicule; and neither inquire into, nor care for what excites humble gratitude in the believer in God's promises to Israel.

The Canadian inquirer finds comfort in what seldom or never occurs, we believe, to our clergy—namely, the fact which the Lord Jehovah asserts in Jer. xxxi. 36, R.V., in the most impressive language: "If these ordinances (the sun, the moon, the stars, the sea, and the waves) depart from before Me, saith the Lord, then the seed of Israel also shall cease from being a nation before Me for ever." It is as certain, then, as the existence of God and of His ordinances, that Ephraim-Israel is to-day a nation, because the Jews are not a nation, but only a scattered people, and we have the sun, moon, and stars, the sea, wind and waves to assure us that, as these are extant, so must Israel be somewhere to-day existing as a nation. The only question is where such a great nation can be hidden away? We have the testimony of the Jews that the House of Ephraim is not now amalgamated with them, the House of Judah. The Jewish Chronicle, some time ago, remarked: "The problem is reduced to the simplest form. The Ten Tribes are certainly still in existence. All that has to be done is to discover which people represents them." The Word of God is here our guide. We are not to look for Ephraim-Israel or Joseph under the law. They are dead to the law, because married to Christ (Rom. vii. 4). They are now "the sons of the living God," therefore believers, nationally, in the Lord Jesus Christ (Hosea i. 10; John i. 12; Isa. lxv. 1). We must find them, consequently, not as Jews, but as a Christian nation. We must discern them located geographically just where God's Word tells us to look for them—namely, in "the Isles afar off" from Palestine (Jer. xxxi. 10), such being "the Isles of the West," or of the sea (Isa. xxiv. 15; Hosea xi. 10), that is, "the North country" (Jer. iii. 18; Isa. xlix. 12). Looking, then, for the lost nation Northward, Westward, and in the "afar off Isles," we must find Israel there a wonderfully multitudinous people, throwing off colonists to distant shores, "as fishes do increase" (Gen. xxii. 17; xxxv. 11, xlviii. 16), developing into "a nation and a company of nations;" throwing off a great and independent people, Manasseh; wealthy to a degree; lending to many nations, borrowing from none; the very "chief of nations" (Deut. viii. 18, xv. 6; Isa. xli. 9; Amos vi. 1); reigning over many nations, yielding supremacy to none; possessors of the Bible, and loving its circulation (Psa. cxlvii. 19, 20; Isa. xxvii. 6). Keeping hold of God's Sabbath-days, and honouring His ten true laws as the foundation of their own (Exod. xxxi. 13, 17; Deut. vi. 4—9); loving the souls of alien men, and going forth to tell them of the great salvation among "all the nations, families, and kindreds of the earth" (Matt. xxviii. 19, 20; Isa. lxvi. 19, 20). Here, then, are some of the chief marks God has put upon His people whereby we may know them. By their names, Israel, Ephraim, Joseph, Jacob, this lost nation will not be recognised, because God has planned to hide them (Hosea i. 9, ii. 6, 7; vi. 2, Deut. xxxii. 26; Isa. lxv. 15). As outcasts and aliens they were to be scattered among the nations, buried in their graves and swallowed up by them (Ezek. xi. 16; Hosea viii. 8; Ezek. xxxvii. 1—14). But the Lord has searched and found the "lost sheep" of the house of Israel, and finding them, has them safely upon His shoulders secured for ever (Luke xv. 4-7). The people we have described can be none other than the British, for they respond to the description in all particulars. They have been endowed in their concealment as we have described, according to the prophecies; and the object the

Digitized by Google

Lord has had in view in so dealing with them was and is, to enable them to go forth to all the Gentile non-Israelite nations, families, and kindreds of the earth, to tell them of the "so great love" of the Lord Jehovah, in sending His only begotten Son, "that whosoever believeth on Him should not perish, but have everlasting life." This view of God's dealings with His people Israel puts a glory on Our Identity which no other sheds upon it. It presents us with a consecrated nation devoted by the Lord to His special service. That service is the evangelisation of the whole world, and their witness to the universe that God exists. He, the faithful and true God, performs thus the mercy promised to our forefathers, as declared in the inspired song of Mary, the mother of Jesus, in Luke i. 54, 55 :—

"He hath holpen Israel, His servant,
"That He might remember mercy.
"(As He spake to our fathers)
"Towards Abraham and his seed for ever." And by Zechariah, "The Day-spring from on high hath visited us. To shine upon them that sit in darkness, and the shadow of death. To guide our feet into the way of peace" (v. 78, 79).

The object of God's mercy towards His people Israel is plainly shown in Psalm lxvii. where the statement is :—

"God be merciful unto us and bless us,
"And cause His face to shine upon us." Why? "That" (or, "in order that") "Thy way may be known upon earth, Thy saving health among all nations."

God's face must shine upon Israel, and His mercy be bestowed upon them as His people, in order that by their means the nations upon earth may fear Him, and His "saving health" in Christ Jesus, their King, may be diffused among all nations. Therefore, Israel should surely praise the Lord!

"THE STONE WHICH THE BUILDERS REJECTED."

By Surgeon-General J. M. Grant, M.D.

When we tell our clerical friends that this expression, as applied in Matt. xxi. 42, refers to the Ten-Tribed kingdom of Israel as established in these latter or New Testament times, they are a good deal surprised and somewhat shocked at our "impiety" (?) and answer us rather warmly that St. Peter applies it to Christ. Of course we know that just as well as they do; and we know also, what they appear to have overlooked, that the same expression is applied to Christ and His people Israel in other passages of Scripture. For example, both are called the Son of God (compare Matt. ii. 15 with Hos. xi. 1), and "Israel" is one of the names of Christ (Isa. xlix. 1—6). St. Peter regards the question from its spiritual side, and tells the Jews that without believing in Christ they cannot be "living stones" in His "spiritual house," while our Lord regards it more in its temporal aspect, and tells them that in rejecting Him they reject the privilege of being subjects of His kingdom, which He came to restore by building the tabernacle of David "as in the days of old" (Amos ix. 11), that is, bringing the severed House of Israel again under David's sceptre, and that this kingdom, that is, the privilege of belonging to it and extending it, would be taken from them and given to another nation. The use of this word "nation" shows that Christ was dealing with the temporal aspect of the question, because He never would have put such a restriction on the spiritual blessings which were to flow from belief in Him, and which our opponents would be the first to maintain were to be alike free to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, including the Jews themselves, from whom it had been expressly declared that the kingdom would be taken! It is evident also that the time of their deprivation is limited to the Christian dispensation, because the testimony of Scripture is very explicit that at its close the Jews would be restored to all the blessings, national and spiritual, of the chosen people of God.

If we examine the passages of Scripture which our Lord quotes, with even ordinary attention, and in their plain, literal sense, it will be evident that He does not apply the expression "the stone which the builders rejected" to Himself, but to Israel. The first quotation is from Psa. cxviii. 22, 23, which is throughout a song of thanksgiving by Israel for restoration to God's favour. We do not read in any part of the Bible that Christ in His humanity has ever been exalted to the place of admiration and honour, which is the sense intended to be conveyed by the expression, "become the head of the corner"; while, if we regard Him as God, we find nothing marvellous in such exaltation, and St. Peter does not comment upon it as such. The marvel, or mystery, which is so strongly insisted upon by St. Paul was that a people so long cast off and alienated as Israel had been should have been so cast off, not only as a punishment for their sins, but in furtherance of the purpose of God, that in the fulness of time they should be raised to the highest honour and distinction amongst the nations, and become the messengers of salvation in Christ to all the world.

Having told the Jews that the kingdom would be taken from them and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof, our Lord proceeds, evidently referring to the second chapter of Daniel, "Whosoever shall fall upon this stone" (that is, the head corner-stone, or nation, above referred to) "shall be broken; but on whomsoever it shall fall it will grind him to powder." Here we have an inspired interpretation, showing that the head-stone of the corner refers to Israel, the nation to which the kingdom would be given; and that this nation further refers to the stone kingdom of Daniel, while the commentary of the evangelist on the parable shows that the Jews to whom it was addressed perceived that Christ spoke of them, not of Himself, as our theologians affirm, and that their wrath was kindled accordingly. They knew that none but an Israelitish nation could be the kingdom of God, for with all their blindness and unbelief, they never blundered into the absurdity of a spiritual kingdom! They were proudly conscious that, although humbled as a people in being subject to a foreign yoke, they were still the "head-stone of the corner," honoured and exalted amongst the nations as the custodians of the oracles of God; and they heard, in the words that had been spoken, the death-knell of the Mosaic worship, with all its splendid and imposing ritual, and saw the kingdom of God thrown open to the heathen as freely as themselves; nay, more, that their despised brethren of the House of Israel, to whom they had said, "Get you far from the Lord," were to be the subjects and heralds of His kingdom, from which they themselves would be excluded; and that the prophecy of Isaiah, that the Lord would appear to the glory of their brethren, whom they hated and despised, but to their own shame, had received its fulfilment. We need not wonder that they were desirous of silencing the tongue which uttered such unpalatable truths, interpretations of prophecy so different from those to which they had been accustomed, more especially when we consider in what a hostile spirit our own interpretations are too generally received, for no better reason than that they are new!

It seems strange that such a fuss should have been made about this expression, "corner-stone," or "chief corner-stone," which is used figuratively in the Bible to denote conspicuous excellence of any kind. It is applied by St. Peter to Christ on account of the excellence of His work of redemption; by Christ to His people Israel, on account of the excellence and glory attached to them as His chosen and representative people; and by the Psalmist (Ps. cxliv. 12) to the daughters of Israel, on account of their excellence in personal comeliness. And yet, forsooth, our divines tell us that the figure having been once applied to Christ by an apostle, it is impious (!) to give it any other application, thus making the Word of God of none effect by their traditions!

Digitized by Google

THE GENTILES WHOM GOD HATH CLEANSED.

CORNELIUS, the Centurion of the Italian Band mentioned in Acts x., was recognised by the Jews of that time as one distinctly non-Israelite in origin, probably a Roman by birth, and a heathen once in religion. To such an one the grace of God came, and he was the first to be received into the Church of Christ by the baptism of the Holy Ghost, and also by the baptism of water into Christ (ver. 44 and 48). To the apostles and brethren in Christ assembled in Judæa this was an unheard of, unexpected innovation. They never realised that the very object for which Christ came was that the Gospel might be preached to all nations, all families, and all kindreds of the earth; and they never remembered the words of the Lord Himself, when in parting from them He said, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the Gospel to every creature" (Mark xvi. 15).

Christianity was meant for the whole world, and Christ came that He might show forth the love of God to it, whereby whosoever believeth on Him should not perish, but have everlasting life (John iii. 16). But did this fact make any change in God's selection and choice of a people through whom the world was to be benefited? Certainly not. Even under the old dispensation, there was always an honoured place in the purposes of God for the non-Israelite Gentiles; Isa. lvi. 3—8 teaches us that. There the strangers are promised a place in God's holy nation, or mountain of Israel. "The Lord God which gathereth the outcasts of Israel saith, Yet will I gather others to him besides those that are gathered to him." These strangers and outcasts, being non-Israelite Gentiles, will not supersede Israel, but find a place in God's nation, and will be gathered to it as those that have been gathered to it before have been gathered.

The narrative in which God taught this lesson to Peter (Acts xi. 1—18) tells us this great truth. The call of Gentile Cornelius, the soldier of the Italian Band, did not cast out Peter and the Hebrew Church in order that he might be introduced to Christ. On the contrary, the message of salvation could not reach Cornelius without the interposition of the Hebrew messenger, Peter. The angel who appeared to Cornelius made no communication to him in respect to the way of salvation, but merely gave him Peter's address at Joppa, who would tell him "what he ought to do" (Acts x. 6, and xi. 14). Why was this? Because God had once for all chosen His instrumentality to bless the nations when He blessed Abraham and told him, "in thee and in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed" (Gen. xxviii. 14). Therefore He said afterwards by the mouth of David, "He showeth His word unto Jacob, His statutes and His judgments unto Israel. He hath not dealt so with any nation, and as for His judgments they have not known them" (Psa. cxlvii. 19, 20). To Israel the Lord has committed His oracles, that they may teach them to all nations. They are His ministers and messengers, set apart for this very thing, and their high honour is like Peter's, that not even an archangel or an angel may usurp their place, but to them as Israel alone is committed the ministry of the Word to all the nations, families, and kindreds of the earth.

The apostle of the circumcision was Peter, and to him was granted the privilege of bringing the first true Gentile convert to Christ by baptism, and by the outpouring of the Holy Spirit. So to Paul, as the apostle of the Gentiles (Rom. xi. 13), was committed the Gospel of the uncircumcision, including the ministry to the Lo-Ammi, outcast Israelites. Hebrews thus in each case were the teachers, and members of the Tribe of Benjamin (certainly in St. Paul's case, and probably also in St. Peter's) were the selected agents of the Lord to carry the Gospel to circumcised and uncircumcised alike, to Israel outcast, and to the non-Israelite Gentiles also.

God never changes (Mal. iii. 6); and therefore when once He had made His choice of His messengers, He adhered to it, and gave to Israel the ministry of the Word to all the nations. "Israel shall blossom and bud, and fill the face of the world with fruit," was a standing promise requiring to be continually fulfilled, and that without abeyance or cessation. When men, therefore, laudably filled with holy zeal to send the Gospel to the ends of the earth, are keen to provide the means, and earnest in finding the agents from among the members of the Anglo-Saxon race (who alone are willing to do the work), they are forgetful of God's plan, which tells them that the "sent ones" are always nationally Israel, because in that race all the nations of the earth are to be blessed, as the Lord sware to Abraham and his seed for ever.

The fact is, God has "cleansed" the whole Gentile non-Israelite world, whom He so loved as to give for them His only begotten Son. He has, indeed, determined that the time shall come when "the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of God as the waters cover the sea" (Hab. ii. 14). In making that resolve, the Lord has arranged how the design is to be gloriously accomplished; and the House of Joseph is to be the human instrumentality to perform it. When we see a people, then, whose desire is, and that more and more as time goes on, to take both the Gospel and the Word of God to all the nations without any exception, there we see the true Israel of God, the servants whom He has set apart to do His will. This people is a nation, not many nations of divers races, languages, and tongues, but "a nation and a company of nations," of the same ethnic origin—one in language, religion, laws, institutions, manners, and customs, endowed with all the qualities to fit them for their splendid task. We may search the world over, but we shall never find "the chosen ones" of God outside the British Anglo-Saxon races; and these are they who, heart and soul, are engaged, and exclusively engaged, in carrying the Word of Life to all the nations, all the families, and all the kindreds of the earth. Israel, praise ye the Lord!

THE "CHURCHMAN" PROPOUNDS THAT THE TEN TRIBES WERE NEVER LOST.

IN the January, 1887, number of the Churchman, p. 193, we find an article by Edward F. Willoughby, M.B., on the subject of the Ten Tribes. The writer asks the question, "Have the Ten Tribes ever been lost?" and answers it triumphantly by saying that "there is no evidence, either in history sacred or profane, that they were ever lost in either of the usually accepted senses" (p. 194). These two senses are described thus: They may be lost, but still be destined to be restored if "they are hidden, or incog.—that is, they must be located in some undiscovered region, or must exist as a distinct nation, known to us by some other name."

The first hypothesis is discarded by Dr. Willoughby, because, as he justly observes, the whole world has been pretty fully explored, and none "but the wildest enthusiasts would allege that they are concealed in the interior of Africa, Australia, or South America." The other alternative, he says, is that they must be sought among some peoples who have maintained their nationality more or less distinctly, but whose true origin has been masked by their adoption of other languages or creeds.

Dr. Willoughby considers that the attempt to identify the Afghans as the Lost Tribes has a degree of plausibility; but the idea that they are the Mexicans, Redskins, or English, is, in his view, a baseless conjecture. He believes, in short, that the Ten Tribes never were lost at all, but that we can tell very satisfactorily where they are and who they are. To begin with, there were not Ten Tribes at all. Dan and Simeon were Tribes which early were re-united to the kings of Judah, and therefore THEY did not share "the fortunes of the kingdom of Israel."

Digitized by Google

The Tribes who were really deported to Media were, Dr. W. says, "only the people of the trans-Jordanic Provinces, with the contiguous territory of Naphtali. Samaria was also captured and its people deported; but the captivity did not embrace any other Tribe." These remained in the land, and rejoined the Jewish monarchy. "Ephraim and Manasseh were never removed from their ancient homes," says Dr. Willoughby, "but their descendants were the Galileans of Gospel history." These certainly were not lost, in our author's opinion, though he adds, rather ominously for his consistency, that they were not lost, "at any rate till long after the fall of the Roman Empire." Dr. Willoughby fortifies his argument by saying that the deported portion of Israel were reported by Josephus (in Antiq. xi. 5, 2) to be still beyond the Euphrates in his day, and that Jerome (tom. vi. 9, Ed. Vallarsii. Veronæ, 1736), in his notes on Hosea i. 6, 7, says that the Ten Tribes were in captivity still in his times—i.e., in the fifth century, A.D.

Dr. Willoughby asks if they are there still? and he comes to the conclusion that Dr. Asahel Grant was right; also that the Nestorians, as the Rev. John Wilkinson also finds, from the evidence of Deacon Abraham, and other Nestorians visiting this country, are part of the Ten Tribes. Finally, Dr. Willoughby believes that the rest of the Ten Tribes, whom we have failed yet to identify, are the Jews! The despised Ashkenazim, or German Jews, he believes we may recognise as "the humble despised—perhaps deservedly despised—Galileans (or Ten Tribes), but the noble Spanish Jews he deems to be the Sephardim, who declare that they alone are of the Tribe of Judah, and despise the Ashkenazim accordingly."

So far Dr. Edward F. Willoughby. Our readers can see that Scriptural prophecy, as bearing on this subject, is held by him to be very unimportant compared with what he deems to be historical facts. Prophecy, he says, is connected with "the fervid language of oriental poetry," and with "the figures of rhapsody." It cannot compare, he believes, with the history which he thinks he has ascertained in reference to this matter. He sweeps prophecy aside, therefore, and leaves the subject as we have described, little aware what the consequences of his theory would be, if we could find that the "testimony of Jesus," which is the spirit of prophecy, is so treated in God's Word. Let us imagine for a moment that Dr. W.'s views are correct. The Ten Tribes were not lost. If not, how comes it that our author is obliged to hazard such guesses as he does in regard to the identity of the Ashkenazim, or German and Polish Jews, with the lost Galileans? His hypothesis is denied by the Ashkenazim themselves; by the modern Jews in general; by the Church of Christ from the earliest ages, till these our own modern days; and it is flatly contradicted by the whole tenor of Scripture.

The House of Israel is one thing in Scripture, the House of Judah another. These two Houses are never confused or mingled together, either in the historical or prophetic portions of God's Word, in the fashion Dr. Willoughby would have us believe was the case. Even on his own showing, there is no certainty as to the Ten Tribes' identity with any modern nation or people now existing on the earth. It is a mere matter of inference that Dr. Asahel Grant was correct in saying that the Nestorians are part of the Ten Tribes. As to the Rev. John Wilkinson's conclusions from Deacon Abraham's conversation, we also enjoyed the latter's acquaintance, and found from him that he quite rejoiced in the discovery that the British were the great House of Israel, his people's powerful brethren, and he promised to teach the glorious fact when he got home among his people. But we refuse to be parties to the wholesale rejection of God's prophetical promises to the House of Israel. It may suit Dr. Willoughby to insult God's Word after that fashion. We dare not be parties to such treatment of it. The prophecies are full, from end to end, of promised blessings to the people of God, His inheritance and Heritage, and these must be fulfilled, as God is true, to Ten-Tribed Ephraim.

Hosea's prophecy is the record of Ephraim's fall, wanderings, and recovery. He sends Israel, or Ephraim, to the "West" (chap. xi. 10), assigning a chronological limit to their national eclipse, a limit of time now fully elapsed (chap. vi. 1, 2). Dr. Willoughby is quite right in saying that Israel was never lost to human history and ken till the Roman Empire broke up. This is our own contention; and history, as he truly declares, supports us.

But the question is, Where is Israel now, and where are we to look for and find her? We say, in the British Empire and the United States of America, because we British respond here to all the prophecies of the Scriptures respecting Israel or Ephraim, and the Americans to those regarding the Tribe of Manasseh. On Dr. Willoughby's hypothesis, not a single prophecy of the Bible regarding the Two Houses can be harmonised; on ours, all do harmonise perfectly.

Against this writer's ingenious and really unsound views, we bring forward the words of a Jewish journalist of the present day, the editor of the Jewish Chronicle, of May 2, 1879. He said then: "The Scriptures speak of a future restoration of Israel, which is clearly to include both Judah and Ephraim. The problem, then, is reduced to the simplest form. The Ten Tribes are certainly still in existence. All that has to be done is to discover which people represent them."

The Jewish Chronicle holds that the Ten Tribes are for the present lost to human knowledge, but certainly exist somewhere. Dr. Willoughby differs from the Jewish author, and believes, in direct opposition to the account the Bible gives, that the Polish and German Jews, the Nestorians, and the scattered remnants of Jews (!) in Central Asia, China, India (Travancore to wit), may represent the descendants of the exiles of Reuben, Gad, Manasseh, and Ephraim (p. 200).

We have said enough to show what Dr. Willoughby's views are. He clearly does not regard the Scriptural distinction between Judah and Israel, and as he refuses to rely upon the prophecies of the living God, we would ask him how, as a Christian, he expects that the Jews could, in that case, have properly been called on to recognise Jesus of Nazareth as the Messiah of prophecy? and how he expects reasonable men are to be satisfied that the Ashkenazim are the Tribes of Israel, when no king of the House of David reigns over them; when they have no kingdom, no "appointed place" for their local habitation, no Gates, no wealth, no Empire, no island home, no colonies, no commerce, no national wealth, and no like blessings, as were promised abundantly to the Ten Tribes, but to the Jews never?

BIBLE STUDIES: ISRAEL IN THE BRITISH ISLES.

By Maud Watham.

"Return, ye backsliding children, and I will heal your backslidings. Behold, we come unto Thee, for Thou art the Lord our God" (Jer. iii. 22.)

We have now arrived at the writings of one whose clearness as to the distinction between Israel and Judah is beyond all dispute. Jeremiah wrote when Israel as a kingdom was ruined and annihilated (2 Kings xxiii. 27; Jer. vii. 12—15). Yet he is very careful to add, "I will perform that good thing which I have promised to the House of Israel and to the House of Judah." "Considerest thou not what this people have spoken, saying, The two families which the Lord hath chosen, He hath even cast them off? Thus they have despised My people, that they should be no more a nation before Me." "For I am a Father to Israel, and Ephraim is My firstborn" (Jer. xxxiii. 14, 24, xxxi. 9).

I suppose we consider ourselves guiltless of despising God's people, and the Word of God with them, when we assert that the Houses are mixed together in inextricable confusion? Israel, as an independent nation, had for years been swept out of the land. Still God's prophet reveals how the all-seeing eye, the ever-guiding hand, the ever faithful, tender heart is seeking the divorced one. As a divorced wife, Hosea, as we have already seen, speaks of Israel, Isaiah also, and Jeremiah (iii. 1—11), uses the same figure of speech in reference to Jehovah's firstborn. Chapters xxx. and xxxi. are especially interesting. They commence by showing how, together, Judah and Israel are to enjoy the Lord's covenant grace, but the sun, moon, and eleven stars must bow down to the one elected star, the eleven sheaves of wheat must do obeisance to that of "Ephraim the firstborn" (Jer. xxxi. 9). The genealogy must not be reckoned after the birthright. The birthright was Joseph's (1 Chron. v. 1—2). Here is Israel called by name, and the mother of this mighty race is here described as weeping for her children, refusing all comfort, because they were not; and the chapter closes with a marvellous declaration. Here are the hosts of heaven immoveable in their stronghold, taken as proof of the stability of the oath of God. Some people have a pet argument:—They declare that the Jews and Israel alike have forfeited the blessings in favour of a Christian Gentile Church. They found their declaration on the words of Christ Himself (Matt. xxi. 43). May I pray all such so minded to study first the twentieth Article of our Church, and then to compare Jer. xxxi. 35—37 with Matt. v. 17—18, after which read once more Matt. xxi. 33—44, comparing it with Isa. v. 1—7. Christian friends! it is only by comparison that we learn to appreciate the beauty of anything, and in this case, after due care, in searching and comparing, the parable of the vineyard let out to husbandmen to me echoes and re-echoes the Master's words, "I am not sent but to the lost sheep of the House of Israel" (Matt. xv. 24).

Digitized by Google

Again, in Jer. xxxiii., the durability of the kingdom of Israel and Judah is repeated at a time of a reigning monarch. (I must here remind the students that if this reigning king be a spiritual one, the Messiah, He is reigning at the present moment over neither Jew nor Israelite—that is, if we are not Israel—but over a Gentile Church!!). Upon the other hand, if the king be a mortal, he must be reigning over Israel, since we know that Judah is without a prince, without sacrifice, without an image, without an ephod," etc. (Hosea iii. 4), even to this day. In chapter li. 5, we have a reference to Judah, not as Israel, but to Israel and Judah as distinct nations, because verses 19 and 20 do not refer to the House of Judah, as all students of history must know. Israel is described as a mighty, warlike, highly privileged people—the Lord's firstborn recipient of the covenant blessing, as the prophets also testified.

Lastly, we have Ezekiel's testimony. Being a priest, he was doubtless of the Tribe of Levi (i. 3); and was carried captive to Babylon with King Jehoiachim, some twelve years before Judah was uprooted from his land. In the spirit he was carried back to Jerusalem, and there identified with the Ten-Tribed exiled House (xi. 15). Here we find how the Almighty is about to provide for His exiled firstborn—the divorced wife of Hosea's vision, betrothed again in righteousness to the divine Spouse, who loved her with an everlasting love. How deeply touching all this is to the contemplative, spiritually-minded child of God! Study chapters xxxvi.—xxxix. They need no comment, excepting that which we may borrow from St. Paul, "O, the depth of the riches, both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! How unsearchable are His judgments, and His ways past finding out!" (Rom. xi. 33). From our brief study of the Scriptures, we have learned that Israel was and is exiled. In her exile she is to be a mighty, God-fearing people, lost to all save to the eye of the Omniscient, and that she is to be gathered to be a praise in the earth, the wonder of the heathen, the delight and glory of her Creator. Having, therefore, satisfied ourselves that she is lost; having some idea of what kind of a people we may expect her to appear when revealed, we will now, with all due caution, prayerfully trace her history in the Holy Scriptures and elsewhere.

ROMANS IX., X., AND XI., REVISED VERSION.

PART I.

WE propose to transfer to our pages the three most difficult chapters in the New Testament, distinguishing in each verse, where allusion is made to them, the two Houses of Israel, as indicated by the Apostle Paul. We refer, of course, to his Epistle to the Romans, chapters ix., x., and xi. We shall proceed on the principle that at the date St. Paul wrote these chapters, there was no people of "Israel" extant, known by that name, but the Jews only. But one Tribe comprising the latter was Benjamin, originally a Tribe of the House of Joseph, but called at that date by the name of Judah, according to common parlance, but Israelites of Ephraim nevertheless (2 Sam. xix. 20; Gal. ii. 14, 15). Bearing this rule of interpretation in mind, we now proceed to our quotation, recollecting, however, that Mr. E. Hine also attempted the same, in "Life from the Dead," so far back as 1873-4, p. 9, vol. i., in respect only to Rom. xi. Our version differs from his in some particulars; but our readers must judge if we are right or not.

ROMANS IX., R.V.

Verse 1.—"I say the truth in Christ. I lie not, my conscience bearing witness with me in the Holy Ghost,

2.—"That I have great sorrow and increasing pain in my heart.

3.—"For I could wish that I myself were anathema from Christ, for my brethren's sake, my kinsmen according to the flesh,

4.—"Who are Israelites [the Jews]; whose is the adoption and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law, and the service of God, and the promises.

5.—"Whose are the fathers, and of whom is Christ as concerning the flesh, who is over all, God blessed for ever. Amen.

6.—"But it is not as though the Word of God hath come to nought. For they are not all 'Israel' which are of 'Israel' [the chosen House].

7.—"Neither because they are Abraham's seed are they all 'children,' but 'in Isaac shall thy seed be called.' [The House of Isaac, the Ten Tribes; Amos vii.].

8.—"That is, it is not the children of the flesh (the Jews) that are 'the children of God' (Hosea i. 10); but the children of promise (the Ten Tribes) are reckoned for a seed.

9.—"For this is a word of promise, 'According to this season will I come, and Sarah shall have a son.'

10.—"And not only so; but Rebecca also having conceived by one, even by our father Isaac;

11.—"For the children being not born, neither having done anything good or bad, that the purpose of God, according to election, might stand, not of works, but of him that calleth;

12.—"It was said unto her, 'The elder shall serve the younger.'

13.—"Even so it is written, 'Jacob I loved, but Esau I hated.'

14.—"What shall we say then? Is there unrighteousness with God? God forbid.

15.—"For He saith in Moses, 'I will have mercy on whom I will have mercy, and I will have compassion on whom I have compassion.

16.—"So then it is not of him that willeth, nor of him that runneth, but of God that hath mercy.

17.—"For the Scripture saith unto Pharoah, 'For this very purpose did I raise thee up, that I might show in thee My power, and that My name might be published abroad in all the earth.' [Exod. ix. 16.]

18.—"So then He hath mercy on whom He will, and whom He will He hardeneth.

19.—"Thou wilt say then unto me, 'Why doth He still find fault? For who withstandeth His will?'

20.—"Nay, but, O man, who art thou that replicst against

Digitized by Google

God? Shall the thing formed say to Him that formed it, 'Why didst Thou make me thus?'

21.—"Or hath not the potter a right over the clay, from the same lump, to make one part [the Ten Tribes] a vessel unto honour, and another [the Jews] unto dishonour?

22.—"What if God, willing to show His wrath, and to make His power known, endured with much long-suffering vessels of wrath [the Jews] fitted unto destruction:

23.—"And that He might make known the riches of His glory upon vessels of mercy [the Ten Tribes], which He afore prepared unto glory;

24.—"Even us, whom He also called not from the Jews only, but also from the Gentiles [Lo-Ammi Israel].

25.—"As He saith also in Hosea [chap. i. 10, and ii. 23], 'I will call that My people which was not My people [Lo-Ammi]; and her beloved, which was not beloved.

26.—"And it shall be that in the place where it was said unto them, 'Ye are not My people' [Lo-Ammi]; there shall they be called, 'Sons of the living God' [Hosea i. 10; 'Believers in Christ,' John i. 12].

27.—"And Isaiah cried concerning Israel [the Jews], If the number of the children of Israel be as the sand of the sea, it is the remnant that shall be saved:

28.—"For the Lord will execute His Word upon the earth, finishing it and cutting it short [Isa. x. 22, 23].

29.—"And as Isaiah hath said before, 'Except the Lord of Sabbaoth had left us a seed, we had become as Sodom, and had been made like unto Gomorrah' [Isa. i. 10].

30.—"What shall we say then? That the Gentiles [Lo-Ammi Israel], which followed not after righteousness, attained to righteousness, even the righteousness which is of faith [became Christians].

31.—"But Israel [the Jews] following after the law of righteousness, did not arrive at that law.

32.—"Wherefore? Because they [the Jews] sought it not by faith, but as it were by works. They stumbled at the stone of stumbling [Christ].

33.—"Even as it is written, Behold, I lay in Zion a stone of stumbling and a rock of offence: and he that believeth on Him shall not be put to shame" [Isa. viii. 14, xxviii. 16].

(To be continued).

THE LORD'S FIRSTBORN.

THE Scripture is careful to tell us who the Lord's firstborn sons are. First we have it plainly on record that the Lord Jesus Christ is God's Firstborn—"the firstborn of every creature." In Col. i. 13—15, we have it distinctly stated of God's "dear Son," that it is "He in whom we have redemption through His blood, even the forgiveness of sins, who is the image of the invisible God, the Firstborn of every creature, who is before all things, and by Him all things consist." Christ, then, is God's "Firstborn." But as Christ's people are one with Him, partakers of His glory through grace, we expect to find them also united with Him as "God's Firstborn."

This is clear from the Word of God. His people Israel—not Judah, mark! nor Manasseh—are distinctly set apart for this honour. "Ephraim is my firstborn," is the verdict of the Lord God Almighty! We find it so stated in Jer. xxxi. 9, at the time when Ephraim, or the Ten-Tribed House, was in idolatry, cast out of their land for their wickedness against the Lord; and yet we find in that passage (Jer. xxxi. 8, 9), in connection with Israel's joyous return to their land, "Behold, I will bring them from the North Country, and gather them from the coasts of the earth . . . . . they shall come with weeping, and with supplications will I lead them. I will cause them to walk by the rivers of waters in a straight way, wherein they shall not stumble; for I am a Father to Israel, and Ephraim is my firstborn."

The glory that appertains to the Firstborn Son of God, the Lord Jesus Christ, is, therefore, in its proper degree, to belong also to God's erring, but beloved son, the children of Israel of the House of Ephraim! For, "In the place where it was (or shall be) said to them, Ye are not My people, there it shall be said unto them, Ye are the sons of the living God" (Hosea i. 10). Ephraim, the sons of God, are His firstborn. "Christ the first fruits, afterwards they that are Christ's at His coming" (1 Cor. xv. 23); so here "Christ is God's Firstborn." But Ephraim, in his own degree, is God's "Firstborn," too, in Christ.

But before God elected to have Ephraim as His firstborn at all, He had set apart the whole of the Tribes as His firstborn among the nations. We find that stated in Exod. iv. 22. It was God's message to Pharoah, sent through His servant Moses. "Thou shalt say unto Pharoah, Thus saith the Lord, Israel is My Son—even My Firstborn." It is clear, then, that here is an election; and an election within an election. First we have the choice of the Twelve Tribes to represent God's Firstborn among the nations; and then there is the choice of Ephraim, or the Ten Tribes, to the exclusion of Judah and Manasseh, to represent God's Firstborn among the Twelve Tribes of Israel. Lastly, there is the choice of the King of Ephraim—the true King of Israel (which is the kingdom), to testify that the great antitype of the rights and privileges of the Firstborn centres in the Lord Jesus Christ, who is the Head of all things.

But in regard to "the Firstborn," the type is Ephraim, the antitype is Christ; the Ten Tribes are "the kingdom" (1 Kings xi. 35), the Lord is "the King" of that kingdom. The two Firstborns are tied together as king and kingdom, as king and subjects, as king and people, in a glorious, gracious union; and so the Ten-Tribed House of British-Israel are one with the Lord Jesus Christ, because they are with Him, reckoned by God Himself to be His own true and literal "Firstborn" sons.

But how is the Firstborn of Israel sanctified to the Lord? Why does He regard the Firstborn with such supreme love and affection? Let Num. viii. 17 tell us. "All the first-born of the children of Israel were" (in olden times) "the Lord's, both man and beast, on the day that He smote every first-born in the land of Egypt" He sanctified or set apart the "Firstborn" of Israel for Himself. They were all doomed to death that night by the destroying angel, but saved by the typical blood, which showed forth the precious blood of Jesus shed upon Calvary afterwards. Therefore Israel's "Firstborn," as dead, and yet saved by grace from death, were set apart to the Lord for His service and worship.

By substitution the Levites were taken by the Lord instead of Israel's Firstborn, and they became His (ver. 14).

Here, again, was an election within an election according to sovereign grace. The Twelve Tribes were chosen first, and their Firstborn taken by the Lord for His own, saved by blood. In place of them the Levites were sanctified and set apart for service as God's redeemed ones, instead of the Firstborn of Israel. This, however, did not abrogate the privilege of Ephraim as "God's Firstborn," announced long afterwards in Jer. xxxi. 9, when that House was in idolatry, and outcasted for sin in a foreign land. They were the "Firstborn of God" then, and they are His Firstborn to-day, because He changeth not (Mal. iii. 6).

But what were (and are) the privileges of the Firstborn? This is a very important inquiry, which has already been answered in part when the case of the Levites was considered. They were set apart for God's service and worship due by Israel's Firstborn redeemed ones. The duties of the Firstborn, then, consist in this. They have, like the Levites, to serve the Lord and lead His worship, to teach His faith and fear, and to become His missionaries to the world. The Firstborn had a double portion of all the Father had. Deut. xxi. 17 teaches us that: and to the Firstborn there belonged the birthright blessings, as a part of His inheritance.

Digitized by Google

The Rev. Denis Hanan, in his monograph on the Hebrew birthright, in vol. vi. of the BANNER, pp. 347 and 348, has shown us in what it consisted. It gave the holder of the birthright the right "to deliver, to avenge, to free, to bless by ruling, and to rule by blessing." This was Joseph's portion as the inheritor of the birthright in substitution for Reuben, who forfeited it by sin (1 Chron. v. 1, 2). It devolved on Ephraim, Joseph's son, (and on his "fellows"), to the exclusion of Manasseh, since to Ephraim was the national greatness granted, by reason of his possession of "the multitude of nations," and of the multitudinous seed (Gen. xlviii. 19; Jer. xxxi. 9). Power and wealth, the Gates, and Empire, followed these blessings; and all appertain to temporal dominion, as they do this day, in our own case, as the Israel of God. It is ours, by the grace of God, to be the "Levite" nation of the earth—to serve God, and to teach the nations how to worship Him acceptably. It is ours to take the Gospel to all nations, families, and kindreds of the earth, and to circulate the Word of God to the very ends and uttermost parts of the globe. To do this effectively God has given us the power to get wealth (Deut. viii. 18). He has granted us "the Gates" whereby the supremacy of the sea is secured to us; and our influence is able to extend to the four quarters of the earth. He has given us the desolate heritages of the world for colonies—and those "desolations" He has preserved for us in the temperate zones, in lands the most fitted for the European constitution—and He has put it in our hearts to make these spots into veritable Gardens of Eden—where our Anglo-Saxon race has rapidly multiplied, and developed into "nations" in federation with "the old mother of nations" in the West. He has made us hate the slavery of men, to which we were once addicted ourselves, and caused us, according to the prophecies (Isa. lviii. 6), to become the great slave emancipating nation of the world, on whose territories, and on board whose war ships the manacles of the slave drop off, never to be imposed again!

Ours is, then, the function of the firstborn owner of the birthright; for we exist to "deliver, to avenge, to free, to bless by ruling, and to rule by blessing." Therefore, all oppressed nationalities look to us to help them, and desire to come under our sway. The down-trodden Fellaheen of Egypt, and the oppressed peasantry of Syria and the Holy Land, look for the time when the British flag shall wave over their fatherlands, and ask, When are the English coming? The 250 millions of India remain contented with the British Râj, resolved to defend its flag against the Russian invasion, when it comes, as come it will, they think.

The universality of the approaching Israelite kingdom is another point. The world is going to be blest by the reign of the Son of God over the whole of it, for "the kingdom of the world is to become the kingdom of our God and of His Christ" (Rev. xi. 15). And "He is to reign there for ever and ever."

But the throne of God's true Firstborn must be prepared, and who so fitted to prepare it as His earthly Firstborn—the House of "Ephraim and the Tribes of Israel His fellows"? (Ezek. xxxvii. 19). To them, accordingly, there is promised "The kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven," as the gift of God, in Dan. vii. 27. They are the King's servants and subjects to bring His kingdom into subjection under Him as His "battle-axe and weapons of war" (Jer. li. 20), and they are accordingly at this moment bringing one portion after the other of the earth under their Master's domination, winning it for Christ. After the sword has opened the way, they bring the Bible and the Gospel in their train, to teach the nations and to subdue them thereby to the obedience of Christ. These are the duties of the "Firstborn," and what race upon the face of the earth is performing them but the British? No continental nation is performing the functions of Israel, and to none of these is the birthright blessing of the Lord's Firstborn granted by the Lord God of Israel.

The aim of these Gentile races is not to deliver, avenge, or free the down-trodden nations of the earth. They do not "bless by ruling," nor do they "rule by blessing." They have not the Word of God to distribute among the nations, and therefore they do not circulate it. They have no Sabbath to confer upon their subject races, where such exist, and in consequence do not bestow it upon the nations. They have no love of souls, and therefore do not strive to preach the glorious Gospel of the grace of God through the blood of the everlasting covenant to perishing sinners. Among all the nations they have no Heathen Empire in subjection wherein to minister the Gospel, and therefore do not go forth to convert the heathen in the four quarters of the globe, as we do. They have no abounding wealth to enable them to carry out the Lord's prescribed work for Israel, "that He may establish His covenant which He sware unto their fathers" (Deut. viii. 18). They have no national blessing, no multitudinous seed, no Gates, such being Israel's gifts, and therefore they have no heart nor means to perform Israel's functions for the benefit of the world, which God has tied up to His people Israel alone.

Here, then, is the case. Our British race has exclusively the whole of the birthright blessing of Israel, and the other nations of the earth lack them all. What is the only proper conclusion to arrive at from these premises? Surely that the British are God's "Firstborn," in possession of the birthright, and that the other alien nations of the earth, not being Israel, are Gentiles, who have no part or lot in the Firstborn's birthright privileges.

Possessed as we are of these great and splendid gifts, however, there are yet found among us infatuated men who despise their birthright, and look down upon the gifts that are included in it! This birthright, they tell us, is a "fancy," a "craze"; of no earthly advantage or use to us now, because we are in the dispensation of the Spirit, and require none of the things which the birthright is supposed to confer. So thought Esau regarding his birthright, what time he sold it for a morsel of meat! God, however, thought it of inestimable advantage to the possessor, and declared that Esau, who despised it, was a "profane person." How can those who look down on the more glorious birthright of God's own Firstborn Son on earth escape the condemnation attached to those whom He who is the all-wise Judge deems to be "profane"?

May wisdom be granted to all the readers of these lines never to despise or make light of what God esteems so highly, that He has given those precious gifts to the race He has linked to His own well-beloved Son, as His "Firstborn" upon the earth, His subjects and servants, His kingdom, His people, and His Church. On them He has showered all the blessings that lie at His right hand, and bestowed upon them the inconceivably precious honour and privilege of being His messengers to announce to the whole of the inhabitants of the earth that "God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on Him should not perish but have everlasting life" (John iii. 16).

INDIA AND ITS TRADE.

THE review of the trade of British India for 1884-85 has just appeared, and throws a wonderful light on the benefit which India has derived from British rule. We have raised India to the rank of fifth in the scale of magnitude among the trading nations of the earth. There are only four which exceed her, in fact, in the volume of their trade, and these are

Digitized by Google

Great Britain, Germany, France, and the United States, in the order named. The following figures show that clearly :—

Names.	Value of exports and imports for 1884-5.
United Kingdom ...	£622,703,000.
Germany	£326,795,000 (for 1883).
France	£315,043,000.
United States ...	£290,138,000.
India	£133,462,000.

But the trade of India is increasing faster than that of the foreign countries named. It has increased 57½ per cent. during the last decade, while that of France has grown only 7¼ per cent., that of Germany 8 per cent. Our own has grown in volume greatly, though less in value than it was ten years ago !

The trade of British India was in 1873-4, about 84¾ millions in value, whereas in 1884-5 it had grown to 133½ millions sterling. But India's present trade is said to average only twelve shillings per head of her population, while that of the United Kingdom in 1884 was equal to 350 shillings per head. That of France was equal to 168 shillings per head, the United States giving 105 shillings per head of their population. India therefore has enormous room for increase before she can reach the figures of either France or the United States. The Suez Canal has been India's "God-send." Accordingly we find that two-thirds of all India's external commerce passed in 1884-5 through the Canal. Of this more than 76 per cent. was carried between India and the United Kingdom. 78·3 per cent. of the total trade was carried in British vessels, and 4·3 per cent. in British Indian shipping, or a total of 82½ per cent. carried under the British Flag.

"The Review of the Indian Trade" in 1884-5 further give us information deeply interesting to our own manufacturers here. It is this : More than half of the imports taken by India every year come from the United Kingdom. More than half of the exports of India are consumed by the inhabitants of these Islands ! Great Britain monopolises 55 per cent. of India's export trade, "all the rest of Europe, with Egypt and the United States, only require 19 per cent !" This state of things must last, too, because we are the chief producers of the articles India most wants, and ours are the cheapest markets for Indian goods, since all others are closed by heavy protection duties against India. In 1884-5 India took over one-third of our cotton fabrics, such being home manufactured, and worth 20 millions sterling ; she imported, in fact, 1,731,565,000 yards of cotton fabrics, nearly all of which were produced by British hands and looms. In the year in question India imported 10,700,000 yards of woollen fabrics ; the same in silk-stuffs, also spices, beer, metals, and mineral oils, the last chiefly from America. In 1884-5 India exported 80 millions sterling worth against 53 millions worth of imports. She is a large exporter of rice, wheat, coffee, tea, raw cotton, wool, jute, hides, tobacco, opium, indigo, seeds, sugar, &c., &c. India is becoming a large wheat exporting country, the amount being still on the increase, and of raw cotton she exported in 1884-5 no less than 13 millions sterling worth ! Her trade in seeds has doubled itself in five years, and last year amounted to 10 millions sterling in value. It is rapidly advancing.

On the whole, then, we see that India is a very valuable commercial help to our country and that we could not now do without her. She is one of our best customers, and we are rapidly monopolising her export trade. We have so faithfully fulfilled our stewardship towards our Indian adopted daughter that we have conferred on her enormous commercial advantages, opened to her the avenues of great wealth, and placed her in a position of unparalleled advantages for the future growth of her prosperity. But when we have said all this (taking our facts from the Scotsman of June 10th, 1886), we must not be supposed to assume credit to ourselves as a nation for the wisdom and power and wealth whereby these results as to India have been arrived at. Far from it ! We know that India is God's good gift to His people Israel that He might thereby show them "the power of His works." (Psa. cxi. 6). It is not for their strength or might, or worthiness, that He has entrusted them with the burdensome care of India. It is, as He declares, to show them His "power in His works"; to constitute His people the stewards of His grace towards the nations of Hindostan, that under the standard of Israel they might all be brought to Christ. We accordingly have given India not only wealth and commerce, as we have seen, but the Gospel, and the Bible, and the ten true laws of God, civil and religious liberty, and all those good things that God has bestowed on us first, that we may afterwards pass them on to the nations of the earth, as God's gracious gifts to them, bestowed through the instrumentality of ourselves, His almoners and stewards.

THE NAME THEREOF IS CALLED BAMAH UNTO THIS DAY.

By E. Wilmshurst, Retford.

(Concluded from p. 40.)

PART IV.

When "the Elders of Israel by the river Chebar" spoke to Ezekiel about going to BAMAH (Ezek, xx.), the "seven times" foretold by Moses as the period fixed from the beginning for the punishment of Israel, and for the coinciding "times of the Gentiles," had commenced some century or more before; then the centre of civilisation was in the East, the patriarchal system,—once the universal mode of government—(the Abi-Melek, Abimelec, or "father-king," of each tribe being its ruler), had been succeeded by splendid military despotisms; Asia was overflowing with population, and the exodus of the nations to Europe had well set in.

The descendants of Heber, in the Line of Joktan, had entered India Proper by the K'hïber Pass, and probably formed the population of the Bamian land, near the Paropamisus Mountains, (Pahar-oop-Bamis; or, the mountains near Bami, plural Bamian); was it not likely, therefore, that some of Israel, having settled on emigration from the Chebar district, should elect to go back to that cradle of the race of Abraham, the Heberite, or Hebrew. From that district of high snow-capped mountains, came the first settlers in Pali-stan, where the Su-Meru, a sacred mount of India, reappears in Samaria, (Semeron, and Someron, in Kings), and probably in Su (THE) MORIAH in Judah. It was a natural instinct, divorced as they now were from the later Mosaic Law, to seek the high places, Bamah, identified with Noah, Shem, and Heber, from whom, through Abraham, they inherited the Semitic and Messianic promises; they rebelled against Moses' and David's scheme of religion; they would fall back on the ancient paths.

It was in answer to thisr ebellious policy, and undutiful state of feeling against their God and His chosen King of David's line, and also against His chosen BAMAH, or high place in Jerusalem, that the prophet Ezekiel was sent to tell them that in spite of their rebellion, and in His appointed time (when the seven times foretold by Moses had run out), that not their will, but His will, should prevail, they might go to their unauthorised Bamah, they might choose other rulers than David's race. "Go ye, serve every one his idols," but, "when I bring you out from the people and gather you out of the countries whither ye have been scattered," "In MINE holy mountain, or Bamah, of the height of Israel saith the Lord God, THERE shall all the House of Israel, all of them in the land, serve Me," and "I will bring them out from the people, and gather them from the countries, and will bring them to their own land, and feed them upon the mountains of Israel" once more. And with special regard to their revolt from David's line, "I will overturn, overturn, overturn (the dynasty), remove the diadem, take off the crown (from the perjured Zedekiah). I will take off the highest branch of the high cedar (or, genealogical tree of David's family). I will crop off from the top of his young twigs, (the younger children of the blood royal) a tender one (a girl), and will re-plant it upon a high mountain and eminent, and it shall bring forth boughs, and bear fruit, and be a goodly cedar (a royal dynasty), and under it shall dwell all fowl of every wing (diverse Gentile nations), and I will set up one shepherd over them, and he shall feed them, even My servant David; and I the Lord will be their God, and My servant David a prince among them." At the time this was spoken, there was only one feeble colony of Israel absolutely free, as we have before pointed out in BANNER, vol. ix., p. 105; towards that mountain (or dominion) of Israel, in the far-off isles in the West, trace we the tender twig from the destroyed Jerusalem, to Tahphanes, in Egypt; thence to the Hebrew colonies in Tarshish, or Spain, and from Spain to far Ierne; and from the union of Eochoid—the crowned Heremon of Ulster, and the Fair Princess from the East, can be traced, link by link, the genealogy of the royal line, which in this 19th century, the 26th since the beginning of the dispersion, has culminated in the Jubilee year of the reign of Victoria, Dei Gratia, Queen of Great Britain, and Empress of India, who rules over the Saxons and Angles of Britain, and equally over the Saxons of India, the Saks, both of Europe and Asia. The chronicles of Cashmir, says Dr. Moore, in "The Saxons of the East and West," p. 138, enable us to connect the Sacas at once with Hebraism and Buddhism, and to trace them from the North.

Digitized by Google

The outcasts from Chebar, who went to Buddha-Bamian, may still be traced in Ariana, or Afghanistan, in the numerous clans calling themselves to this day Beni-Israel, and among them are also probably still many families of Jews, transported from Judah by Nebuchadnezzar, and settled on the neighbouring mountains of Ghore; but equally certain is it that vast quantities of them afterwards journeyed to the South, to India; thus in the early history of Orissa, the records of the Panji assure us that a mighty man, Saca-Deo-Rajah, came from the North with a large army, conquered Delhi, and founded his Empire there, and from that period the Saca'bda, or Æra of Saca, began. The Cashmir records state that the M'lech'chas, or foreigners, of whom the Sacas formed one class, came to that country from Scythia. We know that the Saca revolted from Darius, B.C. 522, under the influence of Gomatta, the false Smerdis, the magian who arose from the country close upon Dwipa-Saca. Whence the Sacas came into India, and the Buddhist inscriptions, before referred to in these articles, mention Gomatta by name.

The "seven times" of Moses, or $360 \times 7 = 2520$ lunar years, dating from the period of Israel's deportation, would run out in or about our own times, and if the prophecies of Ezekiel are to be fulfilled, we must now look out for the locale of the outcast "House of Israel," in all the countries where they are scattered, and must expect to find them, as predicted, ruled over by a Raj, whose genealogy can be traced to David. Is there not a high and mysterious will which is bringing together under the shadow of one Empire, of our Cedar Tree with far-spreading branches, the various divisions of the people who were on the Chebar, and in Hura, Gosan, and the cities of Medes, who drifted away, seeking their Bamah, some to India, and some to Europe, which Will is "drying up the Euphrates," and preparing the way for a triumphant Return to their own land, (desolated during all the times of the Gentiles) of the veritable "Kings of the East;" which is enervating the Moslem rule over the City of Jerusalem, and which will surely lead back, to the "Bamah" of His own choosing, the Saxons of the East and West. Gloria Tibi Domine.

FRENCH AND GERMAN ENCROACHMENTS ON BRITISH TRADE.

A FRIEND at Manchester has sent us an extract from the Manchester Guardian, of November 9, 1886, in which the report of a gentleman (name not given), just from the West coast of Africa, is published. He takes a very gloomy view of the future of British trade on both the West and East coast of Africa. On the West, he declares, the French are taking measures to annex Ashantee. They are now in possession of countries formerly British. The French hold land North of the Tando river, being part of Apollonia, and these and other acquisitions, he tells us, are only preparatory to Ashantee becoming French, and then our trade with the interior will be barred. "All communications will thus be cut off for us," is his dismal foreboding. The Ashantees long for a British protectorate, but we refuse it, and the French are resolved to secure it.

On the East, too, he declares that the Germans are trying to outwit us. They have annexed "Krepe," a part we were justly entitled to keep. No British trade will, he declares, be done viâ Krepe, henceforth; and much used to pass down through this spot from the interior. The alarmist concludes thus:—

> Unless the Germans are dispossessed of this country no British trade will be done this way. I hope you will call the attention of your Society to the neglect of British interests by the Government, and to the need for instant action, or else the whole of the British trade in these parts will fall into the hands of other European Powers. If Ashantee is not soon included in the protectorate it will probably be French.

On the same lines is a review by the Edinburgh Scotsman, dated November 23, of a volume by Captain C. B. Norman, respecting the history of French intercourse with Further India, and describing the present position of France in Annam, Tonkin, and Cochin China. Captain Norman also considered, in his work, "the bearing which events in those parts have had upon questions of Asiatic politics, and of British colonial expansion and defence." It is seen from this work, what vast progress the French are making in outland Empire. Exclusive of Algeria, she has obtained half-a-million of square miles, and twenty-five millions of inhabitants. In size they are beginning now to compare favourably even with British possessions, though, in natural wealth and commercial importance, these Colonies (so-called) are poor indeed. What the reviewer says, regarding these acquisitions by the French, is this—remarks which, it seems to us, will answer the dismal forebodings and warnings of the West African correspondent of the Manchester Guardian:—

> The truth is that France has not, in all her scattered dominions over seas, a single tract of territory in which the experiment of European colonisation, in the sense in which it is carried on in Australia and in other countries under the British flag, offers any promise of success. The opinion of M. Leroy Beaulieu upon Madagascar as a field for French enterprise might be extended to embrace the whole colonial possessions of the Republic; the choice is "itself a proof of the utter ignorance that exists in France of the necessary conditions for successful colonisation." The blindly selfish spirit in which the French Colonies have been acquired and managed—the cynical disregard for native rights, the restrictive shackles placed on foreign commerce, the prevailing spirit of bureaucracy, are also things that help to explain why, in spite of the hopes that heralded their acquisition, they have remained, each and all of them, a burden on the home country. Administered as it has been, Colonial France is a source of loss rather than of profit in time of peace, and, one might suppose, of weakness rather than of strength to the Republic, in the event of war. That, however, is not the opinion of the French themselves; nor is it the opinion of Captain Norman. In his view a very intelligible and consistent purpose runs through the whole of France's recent colonial adventures, in the far East more especially. He says:—
>
> "There is no shutting our eyes to the fact that the distant pos-

Digitized by Google

sessions of France are not Colonies in our sense of the word; nor are they looked upon as Colonies by our neighbours. They are purely military settlements, destined, in the event of war, to be strategic points whence England's trade can be crippled, and England's Colonies ruined. Scarcely a week passes without some leading Parisian journal betraying this sentiment, and it behoves us to act in time. To be forewarned is to be forearmed. The whole Eastern portion of the peninsula of Further India is now overrun with French troops, and ere long our frontiers will be conterminous with those of France on the Eastern boundary of India, as they practically are with those of Russia on the Western frontier. We may rely upon it that the harbours in Tonkin and Madagascar will yet be used to give shelter to the squadrons which Admiral Aube and his fellow-workers are now constructing for the express purpose of ruining British commerce—a commerce which would have found new outlets had our Governments shown themselves firm and prompt enough in putting an end to the pretensions advanced by the Republic to the island of Madagascar and the Kingdom of Annam."

And again:—

"French Colonies lie in the fair way of every single trade route we possess. Their squadrons could swoop down on the flank of our great commercial highways, and ruin our maritime supremacy. Algeria and Tunis are designed to become the head-quarters of a groupe de combat, which should sweep the British flag from the Mediterranean; Obock would hermetically seal the Red Sea; Saigon and Haiphong would paralyse our China trade; Réunion and Madagascar would give shelter to groups destined to dominate the Indian Ocean; Tahiti and New Caledonia would be a source of grave danger to Australia; from the harbour of Gaboon vessels would swoop down on ships engaged in the West African trade; while Martinique and Guadaloupe would enable France to put a finishing touch to the disasters which overhang our West Indian possession."

These rather alarmist schemes, Captain Norman admits, sound more threatening than they might actually prove to be in actual experiment. We could not be expected to sit perfectly passive while all this "hermetic sealing" and "swooping" was being done. There have been repeated trials of strength before, with the result that France has always been "checkmated," and lost much more than she gained in colonial territory and commercial importance. It is not necessary, however, to attribute to French statesmen and the French people these far-seeing and, it must be said, supremely foolish designs, to recognise in the revived spirit of colonial aggrandisement a subject that is of the highest possible interest to us as a commercial and maritime nation. Captain Norman's book is a most timely and useful source of information on questions that are likely to press themselves more and more on the notice of our statesmen and our merchants.

We are very much of the opinion of the Scotsman's reviewer, and think the French will find the hot and inhospitable spots they have resolved to occupy, in West Africa and elsewhere, will disappoint them in the end. Their possessions in the Indian and Chinese seas can only be approached through the British Gates, which lock up the Red Sea and Cochin Chinese Seas. The question of coal will be her difficulty in the East, and as God has not given her the Gates, her position in these quarters must always be at the mercy of the British in case of war. But even if it came to war with France, is it likely that the nation that contested with us for India and lost, that fought us for the Mauritius and lost, that lost her Canadian Colonies to us, and has had now to retreat from Egypt, is likely to do us harm in the Eastern seas, because in time of peace, and without anxiety about her free passage to these distant possessions, she is able now to acquire a doubtful foothold, by injustice and force, among hostile races, in hot and deadly climates, unfit for European colonization? France has not, and never had God's blessing as a Power. To her is not given the dominion of the earth. Hers is a dwindling race, whose numbers are, in comparison with ours and Germany's, rapidly falling in proportion. Besides that, France cannot afford to become an enemy of the British, even with or without Russia's help, because she needs to husband all her strength to meet Germany in the field, and endeavour to recover her lost provinces.

Our Manchester friend need not be alarmed at advances made by our Gallic neighbours in and about Ashantee. Our merchants and Governments abroad are quite able to estimate the value of the French acquisitions, if they have made any, and can calculate how far they are likely to injure British interests. We have heard, hitherto, no public complaints, and doubt if the anonymous alarmists' facts are true, and if true, whether they are really likely to hurt our commerce as alleged. British acquisitions in Africa, as a whole, have, in recent times, been enormous—utterly beyond comparison with those of the French and Germans. Our ships and steamers are busy with the trade of all the coast tribes wherever it is likely to be profitable. We do not think so poorly of our merchants as to imagine that they need fear the competition of either French or German traders. The power to get wealth is not God's good gift to either of these nations, for they are not Israel. But He has given this gift to the British, and to them alone, "that He may establish His covenant that He sware unto our fathers, as it is this day" (Deut. viii. 18). Let us, therefore, not fear, but praise the Lord for these and all His other national mercies and blessings to our race.

THE BRITISH-ISRAEL IDENTITY ASSOCIATION, 24, NEWINGTON, LIVERPOOL.

We beg to introduce to our readers the following wonderful Report of the above institution, which was read at its second annual meeting and tea on December 2, 1886. Mr. E. W. Elam presided on the occasion, and after the Report and accounts had been read, short addresses were delivered by Messrs. J. C. Kenworthy, E. Lyon, and E. P. Dix.

The Report was to the following effect:—

Since last addressing the members and friends of the Liverpool British-Israel Identity Association, your committee have been in a position of furthering such a work that has probably never before been accomplished in this country—certainly not in this city—for the spread of that which is commonly called Identity truth, and which has resulted, we believe, in much fruit to God's glory, and for our encouragement.

The first year of our work was pleasantly brought to a close by the holding of a largely attended tea meeting, at the Young Men's Christian Association, Mount Pleasant, followed by a lecture in the large hall, delivered by the Rev. Robert Douglas, M.A., of Kidsgrove. Since that time we have held a series of five lectures in our own room on different phases of Bible interpretation. We have also taken part in discussions, and delivered lectures in different parts of the city and neighbourhood. At all of these we believe good work was done, and the attendances were very satisfactory; but it is to the quantity of literature which has gone forth from this place that your committee would specially direct your attention. During the months of May and June about half-a-million leaflets were stored in our room. These were divided into seven classes (of 50 and 100 thousand each)—viz.: No. 1, "The Union of the British Race"; 2, "The Gentile Question"; 3, "The Will of Peter the Great"; 4, "Lord Beaconsfield and the Eastern Question"; 5, "The New Jerusalem"; 6, "Fifteen Questions"; and a special leaflet, with portrait, entitled, "The Queen's Royal Descent from King David the Psalmist," for circulation during Her Majesty's visit to Liverpool. In addition to these, the broadsheet, "Britain's Inheritance," has been periodically published, the last issue being its eighth edition, or 130th thousand. The number published during the year has been six editions, or 90,000 to 95,000 papers.

Could you at once fully realise the amount of labour incurred in the disposal of such a mass of paper, your first thought would probably induce you to look round our premises and wonder what has become of it all. We have heard of some being divided into paragraphs and pasted in books, for safe keeping and future reference; others have been passed from one person to another until worn out. But these instances do not account for the disposal of 500,000 to 600,000 leaflets and broadsheets, and you will naturally enquire, "Where are they?" The question is more easily asked than answered. However, with your indulgence, we will give the information as briefly and accurately as possible.

Digitized by Google

In Liverpool and neighbourhood there have been distributed about 400,000 leaflets and 35,000 to 40,000 broadsheets. The largest distribution effected in one day was on July 12, when 32,000 were given to Orangemen and others. The leaflet that has excited the greatest interest seems to have been No. 3, "The Will of Peter the Great," and it is somewhat remarkable that many persons who called here for further information said they had "picked the papers up in the street." Parcels have been sent to all parts of England, Ireland, Scotland, and Wales, and also to the following places in more distant parts of the world (space forbids a full enumeration of the places, so we must confine ourselves to Ports, Islands, Colonies, &c.):—

Beginning at Heligoland, and touching at Havre, we go on to Sierra Leone, St. Helena, Cape Town and Colony, Cape of Good Hope, Natal, Transvaal, Zanzibar, and across the Indian Ocean to Australia, where we leave 123 parcels (each parcel containing six or seven papers), and pass on viâ New Guinea and Norfolk Island, to New Zealand, where we leave fifty-one parcels. Crossing, then, the South Pacific, we drop a couple on Pitcairn Island, touch the South American coast, hurry on to the West Indies, where we leave a liberal supply, and then return home. But we have not finished yet. We must commence again at Gibraltar, and take the Mediterranean route: Malta, Constantinople, Crete, Cyprus, Alexandria, Port Said, and Jerusalem. Then Cairo, and other places in Egypt; Ports on the Red Sea, and up the Persian Gulf. India has received a good share—viz. 163 parcels, Ceylon 4, China 45, Burmah 8, and Japan 2. Leaving Asia, we come, viâ North Hamilton and the North Pacific, to Esquimault and San Francisco. From California we liberally scatter the truth amongst our brethren in Canada and the United States, finishing in Philadelphia, Boston, Brooklyn, and New York. After having thus compassed the globe a second time, we may be allowed to return quietly across the Atlantic, but we think some evidence of our presence will be found even on the great passenger steamer.

And now your next thought might be, How has it all been done? A very reasonable and practical question, certainly; for such a work must necessarily entail great expenditure. However, as our balance-sheet will show, most of the expenditure has been provided for, partly by the membership subscriptions, but mainly by one or two friends, who deeply realise the importance of God's revealed Word, and who seek to magnify His glory, rather than to receive the praise of men.

Lastly, the results: These, of course, we shall never expect to see in their fulness, so we must trustfully leave them in the hands of the "God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob," knowing that He alone is worthy to reap the fruit of our labours. Still we may recount a few instances for your encouragement. From Australia came a cry for more information on the subject treated upon in "Britain's Inheritance." A conversion to the truth in the South of England through the same source. During the last General Election one of the same papers got into the hands of a gentleman who had intended voting for disunion; but when he read of the position to which God has raised this nation he felt compelled to support its unity, and therefore voted for the Empire—not disunion. Again, by the same channel, it pleased God to bring a Romanist to the true Christian faith. He suffered much persecution in consequence; but he had not to bear the joy of the former, or pain of the latter, for long—he has gone to his long rest, and we hope will have part in the first resurrection.

Having now given you some idea of the work done from this place, and should it commend itself to your sympathy as worthy of your further support, we would earnestly solicit your two-fold help. "The harvest is ripe, but the labourers are few," and there is need of additional aid to clear off our small deficit, and further the divine work of proving the Bible to be a non-contradictory book; God's revelation—not mystery.

The British-Israel Identity Association, 24, Newington, off Renshaw-street. Reading-room open Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday evenings from 6.30. Reference Library. Fortnightly lectures. Publishers of "Britain's Inheritance."

All who realise the importance of God's promises to Israel are earnestly solicited to help in spreading the truth by becoming Members (subscription, 5s. per annum), Associates (1s. per annum), or honorary donors.

SECOND ANNUAL STATEMENT FOR THE YEAR ENDING OCT. 31, 1886.

Dr. RECEIPTS.	£	s.	d.	Cr. EXPENDITURE.	£	s.	d.
To Cash brought forward	1	9	0	By Rent (5 quarters)...	23	0	0
„ Subscriptions and Donations ...	273	10	0	„ Publishing "Britain's Inheritance" and Leaflets ...	229	15	2
„ Sale of Literature...	5	1	4	„ Postage and distributing	18	4	5½
„ Collections ...	2	18	0½	„ Gas, Coal, Cleaning, &c.	3	18	0
„ Chart Fund ...	0	12	6	„ Literatures, &c. ...	4	14	8
				„ Balance Lecture Fund	1	13	0
				„ Cash in hand ...	2	5	7
	£283	10	10½		£283	10	10½

There is a small deficit of £7 7s. 10d. due on a comparison of assets with liabilities outstanding.

THE METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION AT WORK ONCE MORE.

We are glad to know that, under the influence of our new and active secretary, the Rev. James Billington, the Metropolitan Association is now getting into good and useful work. The following list of openings speak wonders for energy in organisation, and for future usefulness. That Identity truths will shortly be expounded in the Moravian Chapel, Fetter-lane; in the Caledonian Scotch Church, Holloway-road, N.; and in St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, Milwall, E., is indeed satisfactory proof of advance. We wish we could see like evidence of earnestness in other directions. The notice is to the following effect:—

In the Moravian Chapel, Fetter-lane, Fleet-street, E.C. On Tuesday afternoons at 3 o'clock. January 25, February 1 and 8.

In the Caledonian (Scotch) Church, Holloway-road, N. (near the Railway-station). On Sunday evenings at 6.30. January 23, February 6 and 20.

In St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, West Ferry-road, Millwall, E On Thursday evenings at 7.30. January 27, February 3 and 10.

SUBJECTS OF LECTURES OR ADDRESSES.

1. "Jews and Israelites; Their Several Portions in the Abrahamic Covenants."
2. "Jews and Israelites; Their Distinction and Difference, Historical and Geographical."
3. "Jews and Israelites; Their Present Condition and Future Destiny."

[This series of three discourses will be given in each place, the time and place of delivery so arranged as to suit the convenience of all classes of Identity believers].

JACOB'S STONE.

We have noticed with surprise the following in The North Wales Chronicle, of October 9 last, in reference to "Jacob's stone." The writer admits that the name of the stone in Westminster Abbey is "Jacob's stone," bnt feebly confesses his inability to account for the name. We should recommend a study of some of Our Identity literature in conjunction with the narrative in Gen. xxviii. 10—22, which will enable our North Wales contemporary to see that the "stone" is called "Jacob's pillow" for a very good and sufficient reason. Our extract is as follows:—

"Regalia of Scotland.

"The stone which is under the coronation chair in Westminster Abbey, and which is known by the name of Jacob's Pillow, was a part of the regalia of the ancient kingdom of Scotland brought from the Palace of Scone by Edward I. The ancient chroniclers allege that this celebrated stone was brought by a colony from Egypt into Ireland, that it was always treated with singular veneration, and that it was accompanied by a singular prophecy, that wherever this stone was found, a prince of Irish race should be crowned. This prophecy was fulfilled when James VI. of Scotland became the First of England, but we are not aware of the reason of its being called Jacob's Pillow."

Digitized by Google

INTERNATIONAL INSTITUTE FOR PRESERVING AND PERFECTING ANGLO-SAXON WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

THE annual meeting of this society was held on the 10th of November in the Young Men's Christian Association building at Cleveland, O., and as it was not possible to read all the reports in one evening, it was adjourned to the 17th. The meeting on the 10th was opened by prayer by Mr. A. M. Searles, Vice-President of the Ohio Auxiliary Society. Mr. Charles Latimer, President, in the chair. Mr. W. H. Searles moved that a nominating committee be appointed for the election of officers for the ensuing year. The President appointed Mr. W. H. Searles, Dr. J. W. Redfield, and Mr. R. D. Noble for that purpose.

While the committee was considering the elections, letters were read from Rev. H. G. Wood, Rev. James Bolles, and J. H. Dow, regretting their inability to attend the convention, and wishing the society success. A telegram was read from Mr. Jacob M. Clark, in behalf of the New York and New Jersey branch of the institute then in session, as follows:—"To Charles Latimer, President. The Branch International Society here sends to the International Society now in session meeting, be of good cheer, we are with you in spirit, and we abound in hope. All our members who can be reached are in favour of the continuation of the presidency in the same person; for we are not disposed to swap horses in the middle of the stream; certainly, until we are stronger, we cannot afford to indulge in any such risks as that of changing good and tried officials."

The Treasurer's report was read by the Assistant Secretary, showing that the balance on hand was 159 dollars 56 cents. The President announced that the magazine, which had been suspended since January last, would be issued again at the beginning of the year 1887. Mr. W. H. Searles, Chairman of the Nominating Committee, then stated that the Committee agreed to recommend the election of the present officers for another year; and they advised that the vacancy in the Vice-Presidency, left by the death of the late Lucian I. Bisbee, should be filled by the election of the Rev. H. G. Wood. The officers are, therefore, as follows:—President, Charles Latimer; Vice-Presidents, Professor C. Piazzi Smyth, Astronomer-Royal of Scotland, Edinburgh, Scotland; Jacob M. Clark, C.E., New York; Rev. H. G. Wood; Samuel Beswick, C.E., Tyrone, Pa.; Treasurer, A. M. Searles, Cleveland; Secretary, Rev. H. G. Wood; Assistant Secretary, Miss Mary B. Sanford. The Committees were appointed as follows:—On "Evidence of the Sacred Character of the Pyramid:" Chairman, Charles Casey, C.E.; Pollerton Castle, Carlow, Ireland; James Simpson, 15, Palmerston Road, Edinburgh, Scotland; Robert Courtenay, Ratnagiri, Bombay Presidency, India; Dr. Joseph Seiss, Philadelphia, Pa.; Charles F. Garland, Public School, Nelson's Plain, New South Wales, Australia; W. E. Bond and G. T. Heisel, Cleveland; Archdeacon Stock, Faro Parsonage, Wellington, New Zealand; Cockburn Muir, Melrose, Scotland; Rev. Louis Lambert, Waterloo, New York; F. A. R. Winter; J. R. Bryden, Demerara, British Guiana. "On Devising Means to Carry on the Magazine:" Chairman, Colonel S. M. Chester, C.E., New York; W. H. Searles; George Kellogg; Mrs. E. Bedell Benjamin; W. A. Haven; Thomas Rowland. Committee on Membership: Miss M. A. Quirk, Chairman; A. M. Searles; W. E. Bond, G. T. Heisel, Thomas Reeves, all of Cleveland. "On Expedition to Egypt:" Chairman, Lewis Miller, Akron, Ohio; John F. Seiberling, Akron, Ohio; Ghauncey Andrews, Youngstown, Ohio; C. E. Bolton, New York; W. U. Masters, Cleveland, Ohio; Alfred Watkins, Orange, New Jersey; Rev. Jevons Perry, Alnwick, England; Samuel Murphy, Nashville, Tenn.; Rev. H. G. Wood; Rev. James French, Philadelphia, Pa.; Edward Wilson, New York. "On the Origin of the British Inch:" W. H. Searles, C.E., Cleveland, O.; J. H. Dow, Cleveland; F. Gass, Reigate, England; Professor Frank H. Bigelow, Racine College, Racine, Wisconsin; Professor C. Piazzi Smyth; James Simpson; Lieut. C. A. L. Totten, Fort Adams, Newport, Rhode Island, U.S.A. "On International Coinage:" Dr. Watson F. Quinby, Wilmington, Delaware, Chairman; John B. Kellogg, Harlem, New York; Theo. Gribi, Waltham, Mass.; Professor Hilgard, Washington, D.C.; Edward Jacobs, Alexandria, Egypt; Professor Ferdinando Borsari, Naples, Italy. "On the Origin of the Division of the Circle:" Jacob M. Clark, C.E., 119, Liberty Street, New York, Chairman; Professor John N. Stockwell; Professor C. P. Smyth; Professor W. A. Rogers; Joseph Baxendell; Lieut. C. A. L. Totten; Rev. H. G. Wood; George Felt. "Standard Time and Prime Meridian:" Chairman, Colonel A. T. Frazer, Vizagapatam, Madras, India; Sandford Fleming, C.E., Ottawa, Canada; Rev. H. G. Wood. Care of Standards: Prof. N. B. Wood, Cleveland. Weights and Measures: Rev. H. G. Wood, Chairman; Professor C. P. Smyth, J. F. Holloway, N. B. Wood, Professor Alfred Taylor, Samuel Beswick, Jacob M. Clark, Charles Latimer, Lieut. Totten, W. H. Searles, Frank H. Bigelow, J. K. Hornish, Professor John Stockwell, Professor W. A. Rogers, Colonel S. M. Chester.

The reports read at the two meetings were as follows:—

President Charles Latimer read his seventh annual address, covering the work for the year just closed. He referred to the agitation of subjects which have overshadowed the United States. He spoke of the labour troubles; of the presentation of the statue of "Liberty enlightening the world;" of which he remarked, "There is only one thing we do not like about the statue, we prefer a statue of liberty measured in good earth-commensurable Anglo-Saxon inches, not in French millimeters, the result of caprice." A large part of Mr. Latimer's address consisted of a report of a discussion in Congress on an Appropriation Bill, the object of which was to send 2,270 dollars to the International Bureau of Weights and Measures, in conformity with the terms of the treaty of May 24, 1875. Hon. O. D. Conger opposed the bill, and proved, by reading portions of it, that the object of the International Bureau was "to perpetuate for ever, without change, the basic units of the metric system of weights and measures." England is not represented in this bureau; there are twenty-one foreign members, and one from the United States. Mr. Conger made an eloquent speech; but his motion was defeated, and the bill for appropriation was passed. It was plain, nevertheless, that the senators did not understand the object of the appropriation. Mr. Latimer urged the members to watch every movement of the metric advocates, to remember that this treaty would expire in 1888-1889, and to call upon their senators and congressmen, and work against the renewal of the treaty. If they persist in remaining ignorant of the situation, send men to the polls who will keep themselves informed. Mr. Latimer referred to the work done by the committees and members, and spoke of the generous gift of books and pamphlets to the Institute by Professor C. Piazzi Smyth.

Reports were read on the "Origin of the British Inch" from Mr. F. Gass, W. H. Searles, and Charles Latimer. On the "Division of the Circle," by Jacob M. Clark. On behalf of the Committee on Weights and Measures, Rev. H. G. Wood. On "International Coinage," Dr. W. F. Quinby. On "Electrical Units"; and on "Ways and Means," Colonel S. M. Chester. These reports will appear in full in the January number of The International Standard.

THE BITER BITTEN.

THE following capital story has been told me by a clergyman, who believes and preaches the Identity. A dissentient brother cleric said to him, with reference to a sermon he had preached on the Abrahamic Covenant, "You make these promises too literal, Mr. ——. They are to be understood spiritually." A discussion followed, with the not unusual result that each party was the more confirmed in his own opinion. At length our opponent, in taking leave, said to my friend, "Will you preach in my church next month? The collection will be for the poor. We are a very poor parish, you know, and should be helped by those that are richer." "Certainly," was the reply, "and you may put my name down for two guineas."

This liberality was met with a profuse expression of thanks, which was, however, a good deal damped by the further explanation, that the promise was not to be taken literally, but in a spiritual sense only, as expressive of the will to give, which must be taken for the deed. "In that case," said the disappointed applicant, "I fear your promise is not worth much"? "It is worth absolutely nothing," said the other. "That is the point to which I want to bring you. And so the promises of God to Abraham, distorted as you distort them, are not worth the paper upon which they are written!"

J. M. GRANT, M.D., Surgeon-General.

Cheltenham, January 11, 1887.

Digitized by Google.

THE ANGLO-ISRAEL FREE DISTRIBUTION FUND.

THIRTY-EIGHTH MONTHLY REPORT.

THE following donations and subscriptions, from Dec. 18th, 1886, to Jan. 15th, 1887, are very gratefully acknowledged:—

Received by the Hon. Treasurer, Miss J. Lawrence:—J. P. Worthing, 4s.; Two Friends, Montrose, 5s.; F. A. W., Piltown, 5s.; M. B., Brighton, 1s.; Mrs. S., Sidcup, 3s.; Mrs. R., Polmont, £1; H. G. (monthly sub.), 1s.; Mrs. M., Carshalton, 5s.; Captain B., Streatham, 5s.; Mrs. S., Kilburn, 6d.; Miss P., Topsham, 5s.; W. R., Cardiff, 2s.; Miss B., New Hampton, 2s.

By the Hon. Sec., Miss E. M. Rush:—Mrs. D., Exeter, £1 1s.: Mrs. S., Sandown, Isle of Wight, 10s.; Miss C., Clifton, 5s.; J. W., Trimulgherry, India, 7s. 6d.; Miss S., Tunbridge Wells, £1; E. S., Ponsanooth, £1; H. C., Port Nolloth, 5s.; The Lady J. E., £2; S. H., Ripon, 10s.; J. A., Ripon, 10s. A packet of useful leaflets for children from Mrs. T., Bath.

By the Secretary:—G. S., 9d.; Mrs. C. B., South Hayling (monthly sub.), 5s.; The Lady J. E., £5.

Total, £15 12s. 9d.

BANNERS are forwarded weekly, or monthly, by the Secretary, to Ohio, U.S.A.; six to Birkenhead; two to Maesteg, Wandsworth Free Library, Richmond, Southampton. Messengers to Upper Teddington, Free Public Libraries of Wandsworth and Richmond, two copies to Demerara, one to Richmond, Tasmania, and Rome. The Secretary has despatched sundry parcels of literature, including the new Almanack, to Eastbourne, Hull, Sunderland, Abergavenny, Cosham, British Guiana, North Shields, Sheffield, Cardiff, Dalston, Chippenham, Upper Teddington.

By Miss E. M. Rush, in the London district, to Rotherhithe, Silvertown, Stepney, Lee, Blackheath, Westminster, Catford, Blackfen, Aldershot, Caterham, Farnborough, Chatham, Portsmouth, Netley Hospital, Ponsanooth (Cornwall), Mitcham, Deal, Carlisle. The following to North Britain: Edinburgh, Glasgow, Stirling, Hamilton, Fort George, Dublin, Moose Jaw (Canada), Port Nolloth (South Africa), Barbadoes, Trimulgherry, Bangalore (India), Rangoon, Cairo, Rome.

In all, 46 packets of literature, and 130 BANNERS sent out weekly.

Many interesting letters have come to hand during the month, one tells of the home-coming of one of our valued Sowers from Port Nolloth, South Africa, and his desire to set to work in Cornwall. A second expresses the desire of another worker to take the vacant sphere of labour in Port Nolloth, which we gladly accept, so we still retain two witnesses for Identity truth in that distant part of the Empire, to which weekly supplies of literature are sent, and, we are thankful to say, made the most of.

One quotation, from a Sower in the Army, is specially valuable. "I am sure you will be delighted to know that the packets of literature are a great help to me in my work, being a standing witness for the truth of God's Word, against the infidelity of the world in general, of which the Army has, I think, more than its share. About twenty years experience and study of this grand subject (the Identity) has taught me that there is nothing, apart from the New Birth, to equal the Identity in convincing the gainsayer of the truth of God's Word."

A Sower at Skegness has sent us a copy of an admirable photograph of Surgeon-General Grant, M.D., taken during his recent visit to lecture in that town, and gives intimation of a kind offer of the Photographer to allow the Free Distribution Fund one-third of the price on all copies sold. We hope that many sympathisers with the work of our Fund will speedily procure the speaking likeness of Dr. Grant, so well-known now amongst British-Israelites as a writer and speaker on Our Identity. The photo is cabinet size. Price 1s. Address: Mr. W. E. Swift, Lumley-road, Skegness. E. M. RUSH, Hon. Sec.

We have received other most encouraging letters from our Sowers in various localities, particulars are unavoidably postponed until next report. CHARLES HORNER, Secretary.

Contributions to the Fund will be thankfully received and acknowledged by the Hon. Treasurer, Miss J. Lawrence, Rosslyn, Hampton-road, Upper Teddington, Middlesex; by the Hon. Secretary, Miss E. M. Rush, 103, Burnt-ash road, Lee, London; or by Mr. Charles Horner, 34, Sheen-park, Richmond-on-Thames. Grants of literature will be made, as far as funds allow, on application to the Secretary, or Miss E. M. Rush.

Correspondence.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR PHILO-ISRAEL,—I send you a few words from my daughter's letter, from India, to show you what a comfort and joy Our Identity and your BANNER is to us Christians. Every day Our Identity becomes clearer, for God is working it out before the eyes and hearts of all men. Yours faithfully, M. C.

"SOUTH INDIA.—Our Identity does comfort us so much, when we see terrible things coming to pass, and what looks like disaster to Britain; when we can rest assured that the Lord knows all about it, and He is allowing it, and will bring it all right in the end. And then, when it is patent to the whole world that we are Israel, what an astonishment to all mankind there will be! Then, I expect, a kind of 'hush' will come over all the peoples, and they will repent in thousands. What a triumph of God over man! They have dared to laugh at His Word, His promises, that cannot be broken—His Word, His oath! Ah! I do hope I shall be alive when that happens. I should like to see the wave of awe, and astonishment, and wonder; then a burst of praise that will go up to His throne for His mercy and faithfulness. That is what is so lovely; God is so faithful! What He has said He will perform."

ISRAEL'S SCRIPTURE AND PRAYER UNION.

THE number of cards now issued, including those in the hands of the local Secretaries, is 1,418, six new members having joined during the past month, one of whom is living in New Zealand; two cards have also been given out by our agent at Malta. A member at Southampton earnestly desires the prayers of the Union, that God would bless the means used to avert a dangerous illness; the member has great faith in "believing prayer."

The following sums, received towards the expenses of the Union, are thankfully acknowledged:—Mrs. A., Fotheringhay, 6d.; Miss M. W., Hampstead, 5s.; Mrs. A., Clifton, 2s.; G. B., Streatham, 4s.

The chapters for February are as follow:—

1st ... Job xxxviii.	11th ... Psalm vi.	21st ... Psalm xvi.
2nd ... „ xxxix.	12th ... „ vii.	22nd ... „ xvii.
3rd ... „ xl.	13th ... „ viii.	23rd ... „ xviii.
4th ... „ xli.	14th ... „ ix.	24th ... „ xix.
5th ... „ xlii.	15th ... „ x.	25th ... „ xx.
6th Psalm i.	16th ... „ xi.	26th ... „ xxi.
7th „ ii.	17th ... „ xii.	27th ... „ xxii.
8th „ iii.	18th ... „ xiii.	28th ... „ xxiii.
9th „ iv.	19th ... „ xiv.
10th „ v.	20th ... „ xv.

The card of membership will be sent on receipt of three stamps.

The first and second series of Monthly Comments on the whole Bible, by Philo-Israel, may now be obtained in volume form. Price in paper cover 1s. 2d. each; in cloth 2s. each, post free.

The "Prayers for Daily Use," being a prayer for each day of the week, by Philo-Israel, are 1d., or 9d. per dozen, postage extra.

The prayer of the Union, as on the Card of Membership, may now be obtained printed in larger type, price 1d. for three copies, post free; or 1s. per 100 for distribution. Address: Miss E. Sibbald, 3, Townshend-villas, Richmond, Surrey.

N.B.—Now that the second series of Comments is completed, there will be no further issue of them in single numbers.

Statement of Accounts from July 1, 1885, to December 31, 1886.

RECEIPTS.	£	s.	d.	EXPENDITURE.	£	s.	d.
Balance in hand, July 1, 1885	1	0	4	"Monthly Comments," Aug., 1885, to Feb., 1887	28	10	0
Members' Subscriptions and Donations... ...	33	7	4	Binding Vols. of "Comments" (First Series)	1	12	6
Cards of Membership ...	0	18	0	Postage and carriage ...	10	6	8
Prayers	0	12	5	Balance in hand... ...	0	10	3
Bound Vols. of "Monthly Comments"	2	10	0
Ditto Sold by Messrs. R. Banks and Son ...	2	11	4
	£40	19	5		£40	19	5

Examined and checked by vouchers, and found correct. CHAS. HORNER.
January 1, 1887.

Digitized by Google

NOTICES.

All communications intended for the Editor, to be addressed: — "Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Clifton, Bristol.

SUBSCRIPTIONS £ s. d.

Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free - 0 7 6
Two Copies (including Double Numbers) - - 0 13 6
Three Copies " " " " - 1 0 4
Four Copies " " " " - 1 5 6
Six Copies " " " " - 1 16 4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-grand, London, to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C., or F. W. PARRY & Co., 29, Paternoster-row, London.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

Contents Bills and Show Cards may be obtained on application to the Publishers.

Advertisements should be sent to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

Prepaid Advertisements are inserted at the rate of 30 words for 1s. 4d.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

The Rev. JAS. BILLINGTON, F.R.H.S.

Will LECTURE in the

MORAVIAN CHAPEL, 32, FETTER LANE, FLEET STREET, E.C.,

ON TUESDAY AFTERNOONS,

FEBRUARY 1, and 8, commence at Three o'clock.

Admission Free.

THE SILVER ANGLO-ISRAELITE BADGES can be obtained from Miss L. Hope, 7, Ovington Gardens, London, S.W., on payment of 5s. 6d., postage 3d. extra.

ISRAEL IN THE NEW TESTAMENT

OR,

Proofs of the National Conversion of the Ten Tribes to Christianity.

By SURGEON-GENERAL J. M. GRANT, M.D.

Author of "Jeshurun," etc.

Price 4d., post free, 4½d.; 12 Copies, post free, 4s.

London: R. Banks and Son, Racquet Court, Fleet St., and by order of all Booksellers.

Now Ready, Price 8s., in Handsome Blue Cloth.

THE NEW VOLUME

OF THE

BANNER OF ISRAEL

(VOL. X.)

A most suitable present to a Town Hall or Local Library. Sure to prove of great interest and be the means of introducing Our Identity to the notice of a numerous class of intelligent readers and students. Should be in every Bible-student's Library.

May be ordered of any bookseller, or sent direct from the Publishers on receipt of remittance for 8/-.

R. BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.
F. W. PARRY & Co., 29, Paternoster-row.

CASES FOR BINDING VOL. X.

ARE NOW READY,

Price 1s. 6d., post free 1s. 8d.

Robert Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

Knight & Forster's Pens

KNIGHT & FORSTER LEEDS — Broad Point. 3/- PER GROSS

University Pen

2/- PER GROSS — KNIGHT & FORSTER LEEDS

Ledger Pen Fine Point

LONDON-STRAKER & SONS. 124 FENCHURCH ST

or post free direct from the Makers

Basinghall Works Leeds.

PUBLISHED BY ROBT. BANKS & SON,

RACQUET COURT, FLEET STREET, E.C.

WORKS BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Thoughts for the British Folk.

Suggested by PHILO-ISRAEL.

No. 1.—Multitudinousness.
No. 2.—The Gates.
No. 3.—The Nation and Company of Nations.
No. 4.—British Wealth.
No. 5.—The Rulers Over Many Nations.
No. 6.—The Universal Creditor.
No. 7.—The Ever-Continuing British Monarchy.
No. 8.—The Scattered People at Home in Every Climate.
No. 9.—The Queen, Lords, and Commons.
No. 10.—The Unconquerable Nation.
No. 11.—The Fatally Destructive Race.
No. 12.—The Isolated Nation.
No. 13.—The Nation Which Belts the Earth.
No. 14.—The Emancipators of the Slave
No. 15.—The Christian Nation.
No. 16.—The Ten Commandments.
No. 17.—The Asylum for the Foreign Refugee.
No. 18.—Possessors of the "Sign."
No. 19.—The Universal Missionaries.
No. 20.—Testimony of the Book of Common Prayer.
No. 21.—Church and State, and also Disestablishment.
No. 22.—Our Poor Laws.
No. 23.—The Labour Question is an Identity Question.
No. 24.—Emigration.

Philo-Israel's Leaflets. Four pages Crown 8vo. Price 1s. 6d. per 100, postage 2d. No. 1.—"The Identity of the British with Lost Israel." 2.—"The Glory of God." 3.—An Address to British Seamen. 4.—An Address to British Soldiers. No. 5.—The Communion of the Body and Blood of Our Lord Jesus Christ Viewed in the Light of Our Identity. 6.—The Bible and the Jew. 7.—The Jewish People. 8.—Lo-Ammi; or, the Gentilisation of Ten-Tribed Israel. 9.—The Atonement. 10.—Is Our Identity Evangelical, or Non-Evangelical in its Tendency? No. 11.—Cui Bono? No. 12.—The "Thoughts" of God Towards Israel, Judah, and the Gentile Nations. 13.—The Teutonic Theory—Is It True? 14.—An Address to the Police Force of Great Britain. 15.—An Address to Israel's Missionaries and Their Supporters. 16.—The One Seed, Christ. 17.—An Address to Israel's Electors. Price 1s. 6d. per 100.

An Elementary Digest or Sketch of the Chief Facts and Teachings of the Great Pyramid of Egypt. Adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific 56 pages, Illustrated with Diagrams, price 4d., post free 5d. 10th Thousand.

The Geography of the Gates. With Map and six full page, and one double-page, Illustrations, printed on plate paper. 208 pages, in handsome cloth, gilt Price 3s. 6d., post free 3s. 10d.

THE TEETH, THE TEETH, THOSE PRECIOUS TEETH!

Save, Purify, Beautify.

GEORGE & WELCH'S

CARBOLINE

1/6 (TOOTH PASTE). 2/6 per Pot.

Is the Best Known Cleanser, Preserver, and Deodoriser.

Dental Guide says:—"No Tooth application equals the Carbolics."

Proprietors: GEORGE & WELCH, Worcester.

Through Chemists, or Post Free from Makers.

A BOON TO SUFFERERS!!

HARNESS' ELECTROPATHIC BELT CURES Gout, Rheumatism, Lumbago, Sciatica, Epilepsy, Indigestion, Constipation, Liver and Kidney Complaints, Ladies' Ailments, Nervousness, Neuralgia, General and Local Debility, etc.

HARNESS' ELECTROPATHIC BELT

NEVER FAILS to promote HEALTH, STRENGTH, AND VITAL ENERGY; therefore it will pay you to procure one without delay.

NERVOUSNESS CURED.

Every man and woman suffering from any disorder of the Nerves, Stomach, Liver, or Kidneys, should at once stop physicing, and send a P.O.O. or cheque for 21s., for HARNESS' ELECTROPATHIC BELT (post free) and obtain immediate relief. Pamphlet and Book of Testimonials post free. THE MEDICAL BATTERY CO. (LTD.),

52, OXFORD STREET, London, W.

(CORNER OF RATHBONE PLACE.)

Dr. JOSEPH WILD'S WORKS

NEW EDITION JUST PUBLISHED.

THE LOST TEN TRIBES

Price 3s., post free 3s. 3d.

The FUTURE of ISRAEL and JUDAH.

Price 2s., post free 2s. 3d.

London: Robert Banks & Son, Racquet court, Fleet-st.

✣ A New Light. ✣

BY A E I.

Author of "The New Old Story," "4,000 Years Old," &c.

This pamphlet is prepared specially for general distribution, and as a means of introducing "Our Identity" to persons unacquainted with the subject will be found particularly useful. It is printed on good paper, in clear type, and bound in primrose colour cover.

Price 2d., post free 2½d. R. Banks & Son, Racquet-court.

Price 2s. 6d., Cheap Edition, 1/-

Bible Lessons and Reflections.

BY ROBERT GAIRDNER,

OF KILMARNOCK, N.B.

"Mr. Gairdner has given us in his book a series of Bible lessons, with his own reflections added thereto, and though he has been very cautious in the latter, and has not committed himself too broadly, he has plainly let it be seen that he is an Anglo-Israelite by conviction, and that the Scriptures which he quotes at length and extensively throughout his book, are meant to teach Our Identity and God's faithfulness, from first to last, to His promises to Abraham and His seed for ever."—Banner of Israel.

ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-st

THE NOTE-PAPER FOR 1887.

THE JUBILEE NOTE-PAPER, 1887.

A HIGH-CLASS CREAM-LAID NOTE-PAPER, each sheet bearing a watermark device: The Portrait of Her Majesty Queen Victoria, in a wreath of Rose, Shamrock, and Thistle, and designs symbolic of the Colonies and India. Can be had glazed or unglazed surface. Price 1s. 6d. per packet of five quires; by post 1s. 10½d. Can be had with address neatly printed for 3s., by post 3s. 4½d.—Robert Banks and Son, Racquet-conrt, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

LUNG OWBRIDGE'S LUNG TONIC, TONIC

THE MIGHTY HEALER.

Save Your Lives by Taking

OWBRIDGE'S LUNG TONIC.

It has a power over diseases hitherto unknown in Medicine.

Are you at all Weak-chested or inclined to be Consumptive, with just a touch of Cough now and then?

"Try this Wonderful Medicine." The Cough and Weakness will disappear as if by magic, and you will feel a strength and power you never had before.

HAVE YOU A COUGH?
A DOSE WILL RELIEVE IT.
HAVE YOU A COLD?
A DOSE AT BEDTIME WILL REMOVE IT.

Bronchitis & Asthma it relieves instantly. The Spasms of Coughing so dreadful in Whooping Cough become less with each dose of the medicine. —

Prepared by W. T. OWBRIDGE, Chemist, Hull

Sold in Bottles 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d. & 11s. by all Chemists and Patent Medicine Vendors. Wholesale all London and Provincial Houses.

ETHELINE

A New and most effective Remedy for CORNS.—Perfectly safe and harmless. Is very easily applied. Cures in a few applications, without the slightest pain. Everyone troubled with either Corns, Warts, or Bunions, will find relief by using ETHELINE. To be obtained of all Chemists, or post free for 14 stamps from J. LLEWELLYN, CHEMIST, COWBRIDGE.

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. F. W. PARRY (late GUEST & Co.), 29, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, FEB. 2, 1887. [All rights reserved.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."

(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx 4

VOL. XI., No. 528. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 9, 1887. [PRICE ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
"De Saigner à Blanc"	61
Has Shiloh Come? By L. E. De Ridder.—Part I.	62
Romans IX., X., and XI., Revised Version.—Part II.	63
Where is the Gentile Church?	64
The Great Pyramid Date of A.D. 1887. By Charles Horner.—Part II.	65
The Place of Israel's Acceptance. By Surgeon-General J. M. Grant, M.D.	65
The Gate Defined	66
Weights and Measures	66
M. Max O'Rell on "John Bull and Jacques Bonhomme"	66
Correspondence	68

"DE SAIGNER À BLANC."

IN Prince Bismarck's long speech before the Reichstag, or German Parliament, on January 11th, 1887, he made use of a terrible expression. The French armies, he said, had imposed a yoke upon the German people from 1807 to 1813, by which the latter had been bled by them almost to death, in their wish, "de saigner à blanc." The French had caused the Germans then "to bleed," as butchers bleed calves before they kill them, till they become white! In the war now approaching, the Prince said that if it broke out "we (the Germans) should endeavour to make it impossible for France to attack us again for 30 years, and to secure ourselves completely against France for at least a generation. In comparison with the war of 1890, or I know not what other year, the war of 1870 would be mere child's play in its effects on France, so that on the one side, as on the other, there would be the same endeavour—namely, de saigner à blanc!" It would, in short, be a war of desperation, when each of the combatants would strive to destroy the other, leaving no life-blood in their enemies' bodies to sustain vitality! These dreadful words remind us of those of which Prince Bismarck's are only the earthly echo. "And there was a great earthquake, such as there was not since there were men upon the earth, so great an earthquake, so mighty" (Rev. xvi. 18, R.V.). It is this earthquake which Prince Bismarck foresees to be approaching, and consequently dreads. He spoke of the returning strength of France from a military point of view in ominous tones, his words, as reported, being as follows:—

"France," said Prince Bismarck, "is a great and powerful country, as powerful as we. France has a warlike people, and a brave people, and at all times has possessed skilful generals. It is an accident that the French have succumbed to us. You under-estimate the French in a most mistaken way, and it would be vanity to say that France might at once be regarded as beaten if she were opposed to us."

Referring to the chances of Germany being defeated by France, the Chancellor averred that this was quite possible now that France had doubled her army and tripled her reserves, and always granted what the Government wanted in the shape of military outlay with the greatest readiness and devotion, and without a second's discussion of the matter. He added:—

"The fact of our having once beaten France is no guarantee that we should do so again, and we must therefore strengthen this guarantee now that, in the opinion of our competent military authorities, it is insufficient. And if it were insufficient, and if ever the victorious foe stood in Berlin, as we were once in Paris, and if we were forced to accept his peace conditions, what would these conditions be, think you? I do not speak of the money question, although in this respect the French would not deal with us so gently as we did with them, for so moderate a conqueror as the Christian German no longer exists in the world. The money would be the least of it. For the French would take care that the German Empire remained no longer so strong as it is now. Beginning with the Rhine frontier, they would deprive us of as much of the Rhine as they could. Not contenting themselves with Alsace-Lorraine, they would demand an alterum tantum down stream. And not satisfied with this, they would, above all things, insist on the re-establishment of the Kingdom of Hanover. . . . Moreover, we should doubtless have to cede Schleswig to Denmark.

Count Moltke also spoke in the same alarmist strain. "None of us deceives himself (he said) as to the gravity of the times in which we live. All the great European Governments are busy making preparations for an uncertain future. Everybody is asking, Is there going to be war?" He declared that if the 40,000 additional men the Government wanted annually for seven years for service in the army were refused by the Parliament, there would be war for a certainty." "Men's hearts," we thus see, "are fainting for fear, and for expectation of the things which are coming on the world" (Luke xxi. 26, R.V.). War, and the preparations for it, are in all men's thoughts. Over three millions of men are permanently under arms on the Continent on "the peace establishment" (some say it is over four millions), and in all, when the reserves are called out, there might be as many as 12½ millions embattled to raise the armies of those nations to a war footing. Meanwhile, what are our own prospects of being outside the frightful conflagration that is evidently about to happen to "yonder ill-consolidated Europe"? Are we arming by land or by sea? Nay; it was because he declared there was no need to arm or to take the least precaution by increasing the estimates for military or naval preparations that Lord Randolph

Digitized by Google

Churchill suddenly resigned his position in the Ministry and left the Cabinet at a moment's notice, in the very heart of the Continental crisis! Are we taking alarm by reason of Lord Carnarvon's warning letters, and seeing to the fortification of our foreign coaling stations, or of our commercial home ports? We see no signs of it, and yet it is admitted that many of the former, and of the latter, too, are lying utterly defenceless, like Singapore, the Cape, and Colombo, inviting capture, as it were, by an enemy's single cruiser! The British nation verily is living "carelessly," and yet "safely, in the Isles," confidently, too, and almost foolhardily, in her foreign coaling stations. Being Israel, this, it seems to us, was to be her destiny. For of her the Lord spake in Deut. xxxiii. 29: "Happy art thou, O Israel; who is like unto thee, O people saved by the Lord, the shield of thy help, and that is the sword of thy excellency. And thine enemies shall submit themselves unto thee, and thou shalt tread upon their high places" (Deut. xxxiii. 29, R.V., compare also Jer. xxx. 10—11, R.V.).

But the Lord works by means, and we, therefore, expect that though our home ports are under God's own guarantee of security and are safeguarded by His promises (Isa. lx. 11, 12), yet that our foreign coaling stations will be put into a condition of moderate defence sufficient to protect them against a coup de main. For there is no promise that the safety of these spots, scattered as they are over the whole of the earth's surface, has been, or will be, guaranteed by the Lord; but rather a warning seems to stand on record that Israel must fortify her "coaling stations," if that be the meaning of Isa. xxvi. 20. "Enter thou into thy chambers" (thy "strongholds," or imperial fortresses, such as Gibraltar, Malta, the Bermudas, and the like), "and shut thy doors" (fortify thy coaling stations, or Gates), "about thee."

The command is prophetically given, and practically, when the time comes, Israel will certainly obey. The time seems now at hand, if we may judge from the fact that "the great earthquake woe" is approaching, and men here begin to see that if they wish to keep the "coaling stations" (now utterly defenceless in many cases), they must be up and about and carry out the task, not regarding the expense, forthwith. Our Identity, in short, meets us in every phase of our national life, and gives us precepts how to live, how to act, and what we must do, to fulfil the prophecies, and to give to the Lord our God the glory and praise which His love, mercy, truth, and faithfulness towards us, His people, absolutely demand.

HAS SHILOH COME?

By L. E. De Ridder.

PART I.

We read in Gen. xlix. 10, a very peculiar portion, of Jacob's blessing of his son Judah. In this chapter we find that he has called all his sons around him, and one by one he prophetically blesses them, which blessing, it would seem, that they were to carry with them as their characteristic until the end of time. We see that the national monarchy is given unto Judah, and he is to retain the sceptre until One shall come whose right it shall be to reign. This portion of the prophecy reads thus: "The sceptre shall not depart from Judah, nor a lawgiver from between his feet, until Shiloh come; and unto him shall the gathering of the people be."

Now, to many minds, it will appear very dreadful to assert that Shiloh has not come, and that the time for the advent of Shiloh has not yet arrived.

We see in the above that Shiloh is to take upon himself Judah's hereditary right of kingship, and to be the lawgiver unto Israel. We also find that Shiloh means "He that is sent," "Peace," or "He that is sent to reign in peace." This question resolves itself very easily, if we take the Word of God, and be guided simply by its teaching. By it we are taught to look upon the kingdom of Israel in a twofold, or dual character. 1. The kingdom, or national life. 2. The Priesthood, or spiritual life. This we find to be the old charter God-given unto Israel, when the people were before Sinai, and budding, so to speak, unto national life, under Moses in the wilderness. "Now, therefore, if ye will obey My voice indeed, and keep My covenant, then ye shall be a peculiar treasure unto Me above all people; for all the earth is Mine, and ye shall be unto Me a kingdom of priests, and an holy nation" (Exod. xix. 5, 6).

Here we have plainly the twofold polity of Israel, and we find from 1 Sam. xii. 12, that God was their King; and we know also that He was their Lawgiver. Thus, in the commencement of Israel's national life they had the Lord their God as their King and Lawgiver; but they rebelled, and would have an earthly king, the same as the nations around them, and Saul, of the Tribe of Benjamin, was chosen; but he did that which was evil in God's sight, and David, of the Tribe of Judah, was selected in his place; and to this king God made certain promises, and confirmed it unto him by oath. "And thine House and thy kingdom shall be established for ever before thee; thy throne shall be established for ever" (2 Sam. vii. 16). "If ye can break My covenant of the day, and My covenant of the night, and that there should not be day and night in their season, then may also My covenant be broken with David My servant, that he should not have a son to reign upon his throne" (Jer. xxxiii. 20, 21; read also ver. 22, 25, 26). This covenant of day and night is continuous for ever, and speaks of the continuous or unbreakable nature of David's sceptre, so that if it can be proved that day and night have not succeeded each other in regular succession during the past 2,500 years, then, and only in that case, has the earthly sceptre of Judah, through David, ceased out of Israel.

But as the ordinances of day and night have been continuous and unbroken during all those years up to the present, so must we find that Israel has not ceased to be a nation reigned over by an earthly sovereign, lineally descended from King David. This covenant to David and Israel is one of the stumbling-blocks in the path of the infidel, and one of the chief corner-stones upon which he has built up the edifice of infidelity and unbelief, now to be found so rampant in the world.

The infidel says—aye, and says truly—that unless you can show me Israel as a nation in the world at the present moment, over which is reigning one of the seed of David, I will not believe that the Scriptures are true; for if the God that you worship and say is a covenant-keeping God, has broken His oath and covenant here made to David and Israel, which is the most solemnly ratified covenant He makes in the whole of the Bible, how can you expect me to believe that there is any truth in any other portion of the Scriptures? The whole is a tissue of falsehood, from beginning to the end, concocted by the priestcraft to enable them to retain their position and influence over the people. And what answer has the minister of the Gospel to make to this serious and solemn charge? and it is one that I have heard again and again put to them by infidels in various parts of the earth. Chiefly this, that when Christ came, He brought fulfilment with Him; for when He came He took unto Himself the sceptre of Judah, and since then the earthly sceptre has departed from Israel, but Christ still reigns spiritually over His people. And when it is pointed out to them that His people, the Jews, do not believe in Him, and are a wandering people, wandering all over the earth without a king, then their answer is that they mean by His people His Church, His saints; and some have been in doubt whether His reign commences on earth or in heaven.

Altogether, the answers that have been given to these questions have seemed, to the critical mind of the infidel, to be a mass of contradictions, and to be directly opposed to the historical evidence of Scripture. For, bearing in mind the minister's own teaching—viz., that the Jews represent the whole Twelve Tribes of Israel, and are therefore the nation, or kingdom of Israel, we have it plain enough from Scripture that the earthly sceptre had departed from this so-called kingdom of Israel six hundred years before Christ came to claim it, and that the sceptre that was found in Judah when Christ came, profane history tells us, was set up by a tyrannical priesthood, and not on account of any lineage through David's royal line.

Digitized by Google

The facts, as shown in Holy Writ and profane history, are simply these: (2 Kings xxv.). In the year 590 B.C. we find that Nebuchadnezzar came again to besiege Jerusalem, and, after a long siege, took and broke up the city, and threw down the walls thereof. "And they took the king, and brought him up to the King of Babylon, to Riblah; and they gave judgment upon him; and they slew the sons of Zedekiah before his eyes; and they put out the eyes of Zedekiah, and bound him with fetters of brass, and carried him to Babylon" (ver. 6).

We also learn that after the death of Nebuchadnezzar, Evil-Merodach reigned in Babylon, and the same year took Jehoiachim, King of Judah, out of prison, and set his throne above the thrones of the kings that were with him in Babylon, and that during his lifetime a daily allowance was given him by the King of Babylon. After Jehoiachim's death we do not read of there being any other King of Judah during the days of their captivity. When the days of their captivity were ended, we find that Zerubabel led the return of the 47,362 captives to rebuild the temple, and became the governor of the Jews; and, further, that on the return of Ezra with 2,000 more of the remnant of this captivity, the returned portion of the House of Judah was governed by a sanhedrim of holy men of the priesthood, the High Priest, by virtue of his office, being the chief ruler.

This continued until the death of John Hyrcanus, who held the government for thirty-one years, and then died, leaving behind him five sons. At this point of the "Antiquities of the Jews," written by Josephus, we have a note taken from "Strabo" to this effect.

Here ends the High Priesthood, and the life of this excellent person, John Hyrcanus, and, together with him, the holy theocracy, or divine government of the Jewish nation, and its concomitant oracle, Urim. Now follows the profane and tyrannical Jewish monarchy; first, of the Asamoneans or Maccabees, and then Herod the Great, the Idumean, till the birth of Jesus Christ, so that when Christ came He found a usurping priesthood and a usurping king; neither of whom did He supplant, but ascended unto His Father's kingdom, leaving them in full possession of their usurpation.

It seems monstrous to an intelligent mind that ministers should make this coming of Christ the fulfilment of the grand and stately promise to Israel and David contained in Jer. xxxiii., "Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, and I will perform that good thing which I have promised unto the House of Israel and to the House of Judah. In those days, and at that time, will I cause the branch—i.e., sceptre—of righteousness to grow up unto David, and he shall execute judgment and righteousness in the land. In those days shall Judah be saved, and Jerusalem—i.e., the House of Israel—shall dwell safely, and this is the name wherewith she shall be called, the Lord our Righteousness."*

With the above evidence before him of the sceptre having departed from Judah before Christ came, making a break of upwards of 600 years, is it any wonder that the infidel should spurn with contempt the lame testimony of our ministers as to the truth of this portion of God's Word? The wonder is that such lame testimony should ever have been set up as evidence, it being so totally unwarranted by Scripture and history. I speak feelingly, because I have known so many intelligent and earnest men who have become infidels because of this erroneous teaching, and it is yearly driving hundreds, if not thousands, into infidelity.

(To be continued).

* The Church of England clearly recognises that this portion of Scripture has NOT been fulfilled, for it has ordained that every year it shall be read in all the Churches; and whatever other lesson is left out, this must not be, as is seen by a footnote at the end of the lesson.

ROMANS IX., X., AND XI., REVISED VERSION.

(Continued from page 52).

PART II.

ROMANS X., R. V.

VERSE 1.—"'Brethren' [of Judah], my heart's desire and my supplication to God is for them [the Jews], that they may be saved.

2.—"For I bear them [Judah] witness, that they have a zeal for God, but not according to knowledge.

3.—"For being ignorant of God's righteousness, and seeking to establish their own, they did not subject themselves to the righteousness of God.

4.—"For Christ is the end of the law unto righteousness, to every one that believeth.

5.—"For Moses writeth, that the man that doeth the righteousness which is of the law, shall live thereby.

6.—"But the righteousness which is of faith, saith thus: Say not in thy heart, Who shall ascend into heaven?

7.—"(that is, to bring Christ down;) or, Who shall descend into the abyss (that is, to bring Christ up from the dead)?

8.—"But what saith it? The word is nigh thee, in thy mouth, and in thy heart: that is the word of faith which we preach;

9.—"Because, if thou confess with thy mouth Jesus as Lord, and shalt believe in thy heart that God raised Him from the dead, thou shall be saved;

10.—"For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness, and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation.

11.—"For the Scripture saith, Whosoever believeth on Him shall not be put to shame.

12.—"For there is no distinction between Jew and Greek [Lo-Ammi Israel]; for the same Lord is Lord of all, and is rich unto all that call upon Him;

13.—"For, 'Whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved' [Joel ii. 32].

14.—"How, then, shall they call on Him in whom they have not believed? And how shall they believe in Him whom they have not heard? And how shall they hear without a preacher?

15.—"And how shall they preach, except they be sent? even as it is written, How beautiful are the feet of them that bring glad tidings of good things! [Isa. lii. 7.]

16.—"But they did not all hearken to the glad tidings. For Isaiah saith, 'Lord, who hath believed our report?'

17.—"So belief cometh by hearing, and hearing by the Word of Christ.

18.—"But I say, Did they not hear? Yea, verily,
Their sound went out into all the earth,
And their words unto the ends of the world [Psa. xix. 4].

19.—"But I say, Did Israel [THE JEWS] not know?
First Moses saith:
I will provoke you to jealousy with that which is no nation [Lo-Ammi Israel];
With a nation, void of understanding, will I anger you [Gal. iii. 1; Deut. xxxii. 21].

20.—"And Isaiah is very bold, and saith [Isa. lxv. 1, 2]:
I was found of them that sought Me not,
I became manifest unto them that asked not of Me [Lo-Ammi Israel].

Digitized by Google

21.—"But as to Israel [the Jews], he saith: 'All the day long I spread out my hands unto a disobedient and gainsaying people.'"

CHAPTER XI.

Verse 1.—"I say, then, Did God cast off His people [the Ten Tribes, or Lo-Ammi]? God forbid! For I also am AN ISRAELITE, of the seed of Abraham, of the Tribe of Benjamin [therefore, one of the Ten Tribes: 2 Sam. xix. 20].

2.—"God did not cast off His people [the Ten Tribes] which He foreknew. Or wot ye not what the Scripture saith of Elijah? [a Ten-Tribed prophet] how he pleaded with God against Israel [of the Ten Tribes].

3.—"Lord, they [the Ten Tribes] have digged down thine altars; and I am left alone, and they seek my life.

4.—"What saith the answer of God unto him? 'I have left for Myself seven thousand men who have not bowed the knee to Baal' [among the Ten Tribes].

5.—"Even so, then, at this present time also [A.D. 60], there is a remnant [of the Ten Tribes = Benjamin] according to the election of grace.

6.—"But if it is by grace, it is no more of works [Mosaic Law]: otherwise, grace is no more grace.

7.—"What then? That which Israel [the Jews] seeketh for, that he obtained not; but 'the election' [Benjamin] obtained it, and the rest [of the Jews] were hardened:

8.—"According as it is written, God gave them a spirit of stupor, eyes that they should not see, and ears that they should not hear, unto this very day [Isa. xxix. 10].

9.—"And David saith,

Let their table be made a snare, and a trap,
And a stumbling-block, and a recompense unto them:

10.—"Let their eyes be darkened, that they may not see,
And bow Thou down their back alway.

11.—"I say, then, Did they [the Jews] stumble that they might fall? God forbid: but by their fall salvation is come unto the Gentiles (Lo-Ammi and non-Israelites), for to provoke them [the Jews] to jealousy.

12.—"Now if their [the Jews] fall is the riches of the world, and their loss the riches of the Gentiles; how much more their fulness?

13.—"But I speak to you that are Gentiles [non-Israelites], inasmuch as I am an apostle of Gentiles, I glorify my ministry:

14.—"If by any means I may provoke to jealousy them that are my flesh [the Jews], and may save some of them.

15.—"For if the casting away of them [the Jews] is the reconciling of the world, what shall the receiving of them be, but life from the dead?

16.—"And if the first-fruit [Benjamin] be holy, so is the lump [the Ten-Tribed body]; and if the root [the Abrahamic stock] be holy, so are the branches [the Twelve Tribes].

17.—"But if some of the branches [the Jews] were broken off, and thou [non-Israelite Gentiles], being a wild olive [branch], wast grafted in among them [the Ten remaining Tribes], and didst become partaker with them of the root of the fatness of the olive tree [the Hebrew nation]:

18.—"Glory not over the branches [the Jews]; but if thou gloriest, it is not that thou bearest the root, but the root thee."

(To be continued.)

WHERE IS THE GENTILE CHURCH?

A CLERGYMAN has, it seems, started a new objection, and we are requested to publish a few lines in the BANNER to answer him. The objection is this: "If the British people are the Lost Ten Tribes, there can be no such thing as a Gentile Church." Surely there never was so glaring a non sequitur as this! "Because the British are Israel, therefore there is no Gentile Church!" The British are Israel. The evidence is overwhelming. Does the clergyman mean to tell us that that fact necessitates the proposition he formulates, that therefore there is no Gentile Church existing anywhere? The idea is absurd. For the British, being Israel, they minister to masses of humanity, and spiritually put the Gospel before nations without number, all of whom are non-Israelites, therefore Gentiles pure and simple. In short, the British, being Israel, exist to preach God's truth to the world lying in the wicked one, also to found Churches among them; and all these are non-Israelite Gentiles! Such are the French, the Germans, the Austrians, the Dutch, the Danes, the Swedes, the Italians, the Spaniards, the Portuguese, the Greeks, the Russians, the Hungarians, besides the Turks, the Hindus, the Africans, the Persians, the aborigines of many continents and islands—all, in short, who are not British, or Americans, or Jews.

"There can be no such thing as a Gentile Church," says our opponent. But why does he say so? It does not appear why, and without reason assigned we cannot argue the case with him. We beg our clergyman, however, to remember this, that God formed, made, and created His people Israel to show forth His praise (Isa. xliii. 1, 7, 21). He promised them that they should "blossom and bud, and fill the face of the world with fruit." Their future duty was to bless all the nations, all the families, and all the kindreds of the earth, taking to them the Word of God, the Gospel of the grace of God, the Sabbath, and the laws of God, besides civil and religious liberty, as well as all the blessings which lie at the right hand of the God of Israel, stored up in Christ, His well-beloved Son.

The opposing clergyman does not understand the plan on which is founded the Word of God. He fails to see that Israel only lives to bless the Gentile world, and that the reason why they are such as we see God has created the British nation to be, is that they may be God's messengers, almoners, and servants, to bless and help the Gentile nations, whose existence our opponent is inclined to doubt, if Israel be found extant in the world as the British folk. Our clergyman, perhaps, may mean that he sees no Christianity in any other Church but the British, and that if the British be not a Gentile Church then there is no Gentile Church to be found anywhere. We beg to point out to him that there are pure Gentile Churches among the Hindus, the Africans of the West Coast, among the Swiss, the Swedes, and Norwegians, among the Germans, too, and even in France, where Protestantism survives, or has taken root in modern days.

But we reserve one piece of consolation for our desponding clerical opponent, and that is, that even though the British be the Lost Ten Tribes, they are to all intents and purposes a Gentile people themselves, and their Church a Gentile Church. Lost Israel became Gentilised in her outcast condition, and being Lo-Ammi now, or "not God's people," she is nationally accounted a Gentile race, according to the prophecies. For when Jacob blessed Ephraim, the Hebrew Israelite lad, he said, "Howbeit his (Manasseh's) younger brother (Ephraim) shall be greater than he, and his seed shall become the multitude of Gentiles, or nations" (Melo-hag-goim.). The British Church, then, is a Gentile Church, and our opponent is wrong, even on this view of the facts of the case, because the nation, being the Lost Ten Tribes, they are necessarily Gentile, and their Church a Gentile Church. There are, in short, Gentiles and Gentiles. The British are Gentile Israelites, and as such are fit agents to take the Gospel to Gentile non-Israelites, which is just the object for which they were formed, made, and created by the Lord, that they might thereby shew forth His praise (Isa. xliii. 1, 7, 21, R.V.).

The Gentilisation of Lo-Ammi Israel is a great mystery, and so St. Paul describes it in Rom. xi. 25, R.V., when he said, "For I would not, brethren, have you ignorant of this mystery, lest ye be wise in your own conceits, that a hardening in part hath befallen Israel, until the 'fulness of the Gentiles' (Gen. xlviii. 19, melo-hag-goim) be come in; and so all Israel shall be saved." When we are able to realise that Israel of the Ten Tribes is a Gentile people, now developed into "A (Gentile) nation and a company of (Gentile) nations," all sprung from the Hebrew and Israelite boy Ephraim, the son of Joseph, and grandson of Jacob, whose God-given name was Israel (Gen. xxxii. 28), then we shall see that the Lost Ten Tribes found, will prove to be the Gentile Church discovered, and our clerical opponent's objection, therefore, will thus disappear into thin air.

Digitized by Google

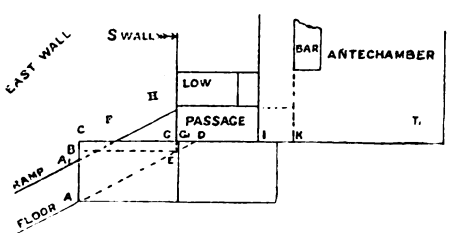
The last verse of one of our Church hymns runs thus, illustrating our position:—

"O make Thy Church, dear Saviour,
A lamp of burnished gold,
To bear before the nations
Thy true light, as of old.
O teach Thy wandering pilgrims
By this their path to trace,
Till clouds and darkness ended,
They see Thee face to face!"

The Church of Christ is Israel's Church, and, as in the days of old, its function is to bear before the nations (or Gentiles) the true light now shining in the world, which is Christ (Gen. xxii. 18; Acts xiii. 47). But this Church belongs to "the wandering race" (Hosea ix. 17), and therefore are wandering pilgrims; but they can trace their origin by this Identification —namely, they teach all the nations the Gospel of the grace of God, as seen in the face of Jesus Christ (Gen. xxviii. 14). This will be their work till the clouds and darkness are made light before them, and the crooked things straight (Isa. xlii. 16). The Church thus is Israelite, but yet a Gentile Church, and it ministers to the Gentile world, according to the prophecies, of the things of Christ. We thank God that this so highly favoured Church is our own Gentile, Lo-Ammi, Israelite, Ten-Tribed Church, which is the dear Saviour's own, bought with His most precious, precious blood, and redeemed so as to be in His sight a lamp of burnished gold, whose righteousness is God's (Isa. liv. 17; 2 Cor. v. 21).



THE GREAT PYRAMID DATE OF A.D. 1887.

By Charles Horner.

PART II.

(Continued from page 33.)

A sectional sketch of the South end of the Gallery and passage to the Antechamber, will make the foregoing and following remarks clearer to the reader.

If, then, it be true, that the point K on floor of Antechamber, which is the N face of granite bar produced, mark the date 1960 ±, and minus the length G K, similarly mark A.D. 1886·673 ± within the Gallery, on the step, then we ought to find a corresponding length from the N wall of Gallery, also ending on the step at the point G.

Now if we take the mean of the E and W measures along the ramps, duly corrected by "rod A" (see Professor Smyth's "Life and Work," etc.), we obtain the following results:—

North Wall of Gallery to A_1, = 1813·225 ± ins., then plus the length A_1, C, CG, we have 1886·662 ± ins., or A.D. 1887, and plus G K = 1960 ±, or A.D. 1960 ±. Hence we have the date A.D. 1887 in the Great Pyramid as a measured fact.

To whatever event this date may refer, it will be something important there can be no doubt, since several confirmatory results of a most interesting character have rewarded the investigation.

Let us turn to the consideration of the geometric section of the Great Step, A C G. First as to the height. The mean of E and W heights gives 36 B. inches = 35·364 ± Pyramid ins. Now I have found that within ·001 of an inch, or with 35·96527 + ins., arises the equation, $365{\cdot}2422 \times 2\sqrt{\pi} = 35{\cdot}96527 \pm$ as a theoretic height, and $(35{\cdot}96527 \pm \times 6^2) \div \pi = 412{\cdot}1317 +$—that is to say, this height, multiplied by the number of the Gallery's roof stones, divided by π, is equal to the mean length of King's Chamber. And as a corollary, the hypothenuse, A D = 81·1649 + ; and 3^2 (81·1649 ± ÷ $\sqrt{\pi}$) = 412·1317 ±.

(To be continued.)

THE PLACE OF ISRAEL'S ACCEPTANCE.

By Surgeon-General J. M. Grant, M.D.

I see that the Editor of the Silver Morn leans, as most interpreters do, upon Hosea i. 10, 11 to show that Israel is not to be called "the sons of God" until after their Return to Palestine; but how does he deal with the fact that Peter quotes Hosea i. 10 as fulfilled in his day? (1 Pet. ii. 10).

As I have pointed out before, Israel is compared by the prophets to a divorced wife, who is recognised as long as she remains in her husband's house, so that while Israel remained in Palestine, her covenant home, she must have been, and she was, recognised as God's chosen people. It was not until after the bill of her divorcement had been prepared, and she had been ejected from her home, "put away," or cast out, that it could be said to her, "Ye are not My people," or that her relationship to God as her Husband had ceased. We know from St. Peter that that relationship was restored in his time, and from the full testimony of Scripture that it has never again been broken.

The time of restoration to the position of sons or people of God was when Israel received the Gospel, and the place was all places in which she did receive it, the grand centre and focus of them being the British Islands. I cannot see that the word "then" or "and" synchronises the events of verses 10 and 11, neither can I understand why the sense of the Bible should always be determined by a strained interpretation. When a man says, "I will have breakfast, 'and,' or 'then,' take a walk," he means that he will breakfast first, and walk afterwards; and so in these two verses four distinctly consecutive events are predicted.

1st—The restoration of Israel to God's favour.

2nd—The walking of Judah to Israel.

3rd—The conference of the Two Houses for the appointment of a common head, and 4th—The Return of the two together to Palestine under the mutually appointed head.

If any doubt could reasonably be entertained of the meaning of what is so plainly expressed, it would, or should, be removed by reference to Jer. iii. 18, where we read that the Houses of Judah and Israel will walk together out of the land of the North to the land of their fathers. When will people learn to let the Bible be its own expositor?

Our literal interpretation and the strained interpretation of the Silver Morn lead to the most seriously antagonistic views of the mind of God as declared in His Word. According to us, Israel is to be established as a Christian nation, and to bring Judah as a present to the Lord, still in unbelief, but accepted on account of the faith of the bringer to that Saviour, whom she will acknowledge when she has seen Him (Zech. xii. 10). While, according to the Silver Morn, both Houses are to return to Palestine in the same state of unbelief as caused their expulsion from it, a proposition the most monstrous that it is possible to advance, as reflecting on the justice and holiness of God, and equally monstrous in its repugnance to common sense, as involving the supposition that the Houses of Judah and Israel, restored to their own land in a state of unbelief, are to evangelise the world during the millennial dispensation!

Digitized by Google

"THE GATE" DEFINED.

THE following has been "going the round of the papers," and accurately defines the true meaning of a country's "Gate." Batoum is such a "Gate of the Caucasus," and is so described in the annexed, which we take from a recent copy of the Scotsman. The friend who sent it to us was struck, we suppose, with the aptness of the paragraph, and therefore wrote over the same in large letters the word "Gate":—

THE GATE OF THE CAUCASUS.—In an article upon the town and port of Batoum, the Moscow Gazette states that its abolition as a free port by the Czar a few months ago created a great sensation. The growth of Batoum since it was declared a free port in 1878 has been immense. Nearly all the Turkish inhabitants migrated to Trebizond in 1878, leaving behind only a small population of 3,000 souls, which has since increased to 10,000. The Greek element preponderates, though there are also a large number of Armenians. The Russians are a very small minority. Batoum, from being a purely Asiatic town, has now become quasi-European. The central meeting-place for transacting business is a café facing the sea. The conversation there is limited to Turkish affairs; Turkish coffee is the only beverage, and nothing is smoked but Turkish tobacco. Gambling goes on in the open air, and tables for playing games of hazard extend along the footpath. It is believed that, despite all difficulties, the future of Batoum is assured, as well by the superiority of its harbour as by its geographical position. It is the best port of the Black Sea; it has a depth of water close to the shore of from 30 to 50 fathoms; and its area would accommodate 15 war vessels, without counting a vast number of merchant men. Batoum, further, forms the outlet to a railway, 800 versts in length, connecting two seas, and transporting goods not only from Baku and Tiflis, but from Transcaspian territory. The Krasnovodsk-Merv line will supply it with considerable quantities of cotton and silk for transportation. Persian wheat is already carried thither in large quantities, along with naphtha from Baku. There is a question of constructing a canal from the latter town. It is regarded as probable that the whole trade of the decaying town of Poti will pass over to Batoum, which will also offer advantages to settlers when its marshes have been drained.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

MEETING OF THE INTERNATIONAL INSTITUTE—IMPORTANT ASTRONOMICAL DISCOVERIES.

AT the regular meeting this week of the International Institute of Weights and Measures, Captain E. Day, of East Rockport, C. M. Ross, of Bessemer, Mich., and Mrs. Fred E. Sutton, of Newark, N. J., were elected members.

Letters were read from Joseph Baxendell, astronomer, England, Professor C. Piazzi Smyth, Colonel A. T. Frazer, Professor Hess, and others. The subject of the annual meeting on November 10 was discussed.

Mr. Charles Latimer gave some black-board illustrations of the Pyramid. Commencing at the Coffer, he unfolded from the interior measures, a constant, one-half the square root of pi, by which, commencing at the square of the Coffer's length, 8,100 in inches, and dividing by this constant, he showed how the monument was constructed, and evolved the distance from the earth to the sun, the diameter of the sun, and the diameter of the earth, and other astronomical relations. He also brought forward Rev. H. G. Wood's discovery. He took Clark's equatorial radius of the earth in feet, that is, 20,926,485 feet, and added to it the allowance for land, 353 feet, and dividing this sum by 60, he got 365,242·26, which is feet for the number of days and fractions of a day in the year, and the amount that one degree subtends at the equator. From this, and the calculation of the geocentric latitude, Mr. Wood proves that the British mile, 5,280 feet, subtends one minute of arc in longitude at the Great Pyramid of Ghizeh.

A criticism was read from the "Albany Medical Annals" on Christopher Giles' book, "Why we do not adopt the French Metric System in place of our Anglo-Saxon Metrology." The critic says: "It is shown that the basis of the French system, the quadrant of a meridian circle, while practically a right line, is really a curve; hence its use is, as Sir John Herschel styled it, 'a scientific sin.' Next, the meter is shown to be not earth-commensurate, though it was claimed and intended to be so. The measurement of the quadrant passing through Paris, selected as the basis of the system, has been proven too small by 4,008 feet. Further, this curve, 'taken, or rather mistaken, for a basis, even if properly measured, is not a mean of all quadrantal arcs of the spheroid earth, which arcs all differ in length from each other in every longitude, but was intended to be that particular arc which passes through Paris. This French offspring, with all its crooked inborn sins, and with its non-cosmopolitan character, and representative of the folly of men, but of nothing whatever in science, attacks and seeks to destroy what its friends call 'our barbarous and unscientific measures.' The 'barbarous and unscientific' is inherent in the meter, as is seen not only in its origin, but, besides this, in the failure of attempts at universal daily use.

"It is true that in India, in 1870, an act was passed for the adoption in that country of this monstrous system, but rumours have reached us of its having been abandoned, after creating much confusion. This very fact that the French system is decimal only makes its measures either too large or too small for convenient use, and gives rise to confusing decimal places, and it for ever cuts off the use of binary and duodecimal subdivisions. On the other hand, it is plain to see that decimals do not belong to the French only, but any system may be decimalized, while the French measures must remain decimal only."—From the "Cleveland Plain Dealer," Oct. 8, 1886.

M. MAX O'RELL ON "JOHN BULL AND JACQUES BONHOMME."

WE take the following amusing lecture from the report in the Western Times of November 13:—

M. MAX O'RELL IN EXETER.

ON Thursday evening M. Max O'Rell, the well-known French writer upon English life and manners, appeared before a crowded audience at the Royal Public Rooms, and delivered a lecture, under the auspices of the Literary Society, on "John Bull and Jacques Bonhomme." The lecturer at the outset called attention to some very striking differences between the English and the French, remarking that he should like to be able to congratulate an English audience upon the less frequent use, when speaking of the Frenchman, of the "d" that was once so common. He wished he could see still further removed the prejudice that existed between the two countries, for he maintained that it was desirable that two nations, the most intelligent and industrious, and the pioneers of civilisation, should love each other. As an instance of this prejudice, when the ordinary John Bull went to Paris and found no soap upon his washstand, did they think he concluded that the French carried soap in their trunks when they travelled? Oh, no; he concluded that they did not wash. (Laughter.) After giving a diverting sketch of peasant life in France, he proceeded to make a striking comparison between the peasant proprietary of France and the English landowners. John Bull was a very large landowner. His estate, which he added little bits to day by day, consisted of all the British Isles, to which he had given the name of the United Kingdom. Then he possessed the Channel Islands, Gibraltar, Malta, Cyprus; and when one day he had added Constantinople, he would be satisfied with his slice of Europe. (Laughter.) In Egypt he was not quite comfortable yet; he was trying to make himself a home there. He took good care not to invent the Suez Canal, and he called M. Lesseps a dangerous lunatic, and moved heaven and earth to prevent the Canal being made, now behold him as a shareholder in the Canal. Then there were 240 millions of people in India governed by Princes covered with gold and precious stones, who blacked his boots and were happy. (Laughter.) In Africa he possessed Sierra Leone, Gambia, the Gold Coast, Lagos, Ascension, St. Helena. To the South and West he owned Canada, Newfoundland, the West Indies, Jamaica, Honduras, the Island of Trinidad, Falkland Islands, Australia, New Zealand, &c., &c. (Laughter.) Such were John Bull's estates. He had acquired all this territory at the cost of relatively little bloodshed; it was all the gift of a friend. (Laughter.) He kept it with an army considerably inferior to the armies of any of the other Continental Powers. People fought for different motives. The French fought for glory, the Germans for a living—(laughter)—the Russians to divert the attention of the people from home affairs; but John Bull was a reflective, reasonable, and moral character, he fought to promote trade, to maintain peace and order on the face of the earth, and for the good of mankind in general. (Laughter.) If he conquered a nation it was to improve its condition in this world, and its welfare in the next. (Laughter.) The Englishman did nothing by halves, and the more difficulties he had to surmount the more he was in his element. He was a curious mixture of lion, mule, and octopus. (Laughter.) On the continent, when visiting places of interest, he had seen nothing if he did not see all; and Frenchmen considered themselves lucky if he did not take the opportunity, while they turned their backs, of hoisting the Union Jack upon the highest tower. (Laughter.) For making himself at home John had no equal; nothing astonished, nothing stopped him; cosmopolitan, he felt at home anywhere in the four corners of the earth. Capable of playing a thousand different parts, he was always guided by reason. In the singular, a man upon whose word they might rely as upon a trusty sword; in the plural, as a nation, the shrewdest of diplomatists. In politics, possessing the virtues that were indispensable to the prosperity of a nation—respect of the law and respect of power clearly manifested. Wise, industrious, and persevering, never doubting his strength, he seemed to have chosen for his motto, "Do well and thoroughly what you do." He thought that the world was made for him—the Italians to give him concerts, the French to dig the Suez Canal, the Spaniards to provide figs for his puddings, and the Germans to do his office work for £20 a year. He did pity those poor foreigners from the bottom of his heart. (Laughter.) He (the lecturer) felt inclined to ascribe the success of this great and hospitable country to what he would like to call British philosophy. The French did not possess this philosophy. Success turned their heads; reverses discredited and demoralised them. They knew not how to profit by victory nor to put up with defeat. In victory they saw only glory; in defeat only disgrace. It was in adversity that the Englishman was to be admired. He had the shrewdness to acknowledge the plain fact. He accepted his defeat and made the best of it. The Englishman was the staunchest monarchist, and, at the same time, the freest man in Europe, which proved that freedom was compatible with a monarchical form of Government. (Applause.) In France people would be treated as dangerous demagogues for demanding liberties which the English had long possessed. There was a striking contrast between the English and French officials. When the English appointed a new official he was a new servant added to their household. When the French appointed an official it was one more master that they took to themselves to snub them or to bully them. In England there was so little difference between Liberals and Conservatives that it was not strange to a foreigner to find that the science of politics consisted in doing, while in office, what had been invariably combated in opposition. Much as he admired the English political system, and the friendly personal relations that existed between different sets of followers, he condemned as the vulgarisation of politics the appeals made to the ignorant multitude, by offering them with their politics the attractions of a fête. He had often heard it said, both in France and in this country, that trade was going to the dogs; but trade was not going to the dogs—it was going to the Germans. (Hear, hear, and laughter.) The industrial crisis through which we were passing in France, Belgium, and in England to a certain extent, was to be ascribed to the appearance of the German in the market. Having shown what France had accomplished in the present century, which, he said, entitled her to the respect and the affection of England, the lecturer concluded by prophesying that the countries of England and France would be yet knit more closely together.

Digitized by Google

So far M. Max O'Rell. We wonder why the clever Frenchman always credits this country with the desire to add Constantinople to the Empire? He says, that when we have added it to our other estate, "we shall be satisfied with our slice of Europe." Yet nothing, humanly speaking, is less likely than our taking possession of "the Gate of Gates." M. Max O'Rell, we all know, has studied Our Identity, and probably knows that that is part of our birthright-inheritance, according to the prophecies. He has given a long list of John Bull's estate, but he has omitted some important parts of it, regarding which, perhaps, he has failed to realise the facts. Thus he omitted to say that the Basin of the Niger, Bechuanaland, the half of Zululand, and all the littoral of South Africa, North Borneo, the half of New Guinea, are British now. The lecturer was right when he said the Britisher thought the world was made for him. It is made for him! His nation is the heir of the world, since he is Abraham's seed (Rom. iv. 13). To them, as the people of the saints of the Most High, "the kingdom" of the earth, "the dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven," is promised by God Himself. "Little bits of this earth," accordingly, are being daily added to the estate of John Bull, because their Friend above, the God of Israel, has deemed it right to give them a splendid estate in trust, which is their's, as stewards, to administer for the good of all the nations, families, and kindreds of the earth, as God's gracious gifts to them. But this people have yet another duty, of which M. Max O'Rell takes no cognizance. They have to prepare a kingdom for its King! The kingdom is the world. The King of that kingdom is the Lord Jesus Christ, the King of Israel and of Judah too! To this effect is the declaration in Rev. xi. 15, R.V., where it is said that "there followed great voices in heaven, and they said, The kingdom of the world is become the kingdom of our Lord and of His Christ, and He shall reign for ever and ever."

The means by which this great change in the condition of the world shall be accomplished, is told us in Dan. vii. 27, R.V., where the testimony is direct and clear. "The kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High; His kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey Him." Here, then, is portrayed the joinder of the King and of His servants! The kingdom includes the powers and dominions of the whole world, and the immediate delegated authority over them is given to "the people of the saints of the Most High"—that is, to the children of Israel (Psa. cxlviii. 14). But the King supreme, whose is the everlasting kingdom, and who claims the allegiance of all dominions, is Jehovah-Jesus, the Lord of hosts, the King whose throne will be "in Mount Zion and Jerusalem"—what time "He reigns before His ancients gloriously" (Isa. xxiv. 23). Israel, praise ye your Lord and King, your Redeemer, your Saviour, and your God!

A LECTURE, entitled "The Bible and the British Empire," was delivered in the Hall, 5, St. Andrew Square, last night, by Mr J. G. Taylor, Newcastle-on-Tyne. There was a large audience. Major-General Hogan, C.B, occupied the chair.—"Scottish Leader," January 28, 1887.

MR. JAMES BILLINGTON, Secretary of the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association, gave an interesting lecture on Tuesday afternoon, at the Moravian Chapel, Fetter Lane.—The Rev. Herbert Marriott has returned to England, and is shortly expected to lecture at Exeter Hall, London.

Digitized by Google

Correspondence.

ROYAL NAVAL PROTESTANT REFORMATION SOCIETY.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—I am full of gratitude to you for making our wants known to colleagues and friends who are interested in spreading the knowledge of Israel's God amongst our bluejackets, who in this day can read and think for themselves (when the reading is placed within their reach). They are capable of unravelling old yarns, tangled by systems of learning. "The sons of the living God" acknowledge in this the guiding hand of Him who rules all things well.

Your arduous labours are abundantly blessed of God. It is quite impossible for you to come to a knowledge of the extent; and perhaps it is right it should be so. I am glad, in humble sincerity, to tell our friends of one recent case (of very many I know) of conversion to God and a coming to a knowledge of a personal interest in Christ Jesus, through reading "Thoughts for the British Folk." Three years ago some copies were sent me by "Mary" (a sailor's daughter and bluejackets' friend). These were scattered amongst the crew of the vessel to which I belong—H. M. yacht Victoria and Albert. Many of the yachtsmen became interested; for the Spirit of God so worked that one of them, W. C., after many times reading about the Lord's goodness to Israel, whereby they would "lend and not borrow," was brought by this and other scriptural statements in the leaflets (he had three), to see that the British folk are Israelites. The result came out a few weeks ago, when he brought the leaflet to me, saying: "Do you remember this? I have read it many times, and have stowed it away as many! You know my conscience told me to accept this truth. I could see the power of truth in it, and could understand it all; but the devil has been too powerful for me. However, now, bless the Lord God of Israel, I am His! I have wealth, peace, and joy that none can take away." The prayerful expression which followed was very earnest: "Spare us, good Lord; spare Thy people, whom Thou hast redeemed with Thy most precious blood.' My heart was made glad, and I am sure those who distribute our tracts will also be encouraged to continue to do so.

Now allow me heartily to thank the friends who have sent me parcels, per post and rail, large and small, new and old, all so acceptable for Sunday reading upon the lower deck. I am continually sending these away; but future help with papers and pamphlets, &c., upon the Identity, and donations, will be very serviceable. Parcels have been received from the following places:—Brixton Rise, Berlin, St. Leonards, Buxton, Brokenhurst; every week, postmark W.; Crew, Bayswater, Dorking, Bracknell, Upper Tooting, Clevedon, Westbourne Park, Montebello, Bridge of Allen, Manchester, Weston, Burlington House (Piccadilly), Clapton, Sydenham Hill, Cheltenham, Ramsgate, Dorking, Kensington, Brixton Hill, Folkestone, Shrewsbury, Salisbury, and continually from Miss E. M. Rush, Free Distribution Fund, Upper Arundel-street, Landport.

Yours very truly,

WALTER BROOKS, Hon. Sec.

Protestant Buildings, Portsmouth, Jan. 22.

DAWLEY CIRCUIT.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—In response to the appeal in BANNER, of Jan. 12, I most thankfully acknowledge the following:—Mr. Dudley, 5s.; Mrs. D., 7s. 6d.; E. B., 1s.; Frank Collins, 10s.; Miss S. S., Tunbridge Wells, £1; G. R., 2s.; Better Off, 10s.; A Constant Reader, 4s.; Anonymous, 1s.

Since writing the appeal, the distress has greatly increased, as the works continue closed, and the severe weather has afflicted those most who were not sufficiently fed. Just as I was going to preach, at evening, one of my congregation said, "We are four in family, and have had nothing to eat to-day but one piece of bread at breakfast-time, and we have no fire." The snow was then deep, and it was a bitterly cold night. The head of that family is a respectable member of the Church. I administered relief at once, and the next day the first of the above donations came. Many prayers are gone up to God for blessings on the givers, and I knowthey will be answered.

Yours in the trials and glories of Israel,

Rock-villa, Dawley, Salop, Jan. 22. HENRY ROE.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR PHILO-ISRAEL,—Will you allow me, through the medium of the BANNER, to ask your Toronto correspondent, whose name and exact address you could not give me, and who supplied you with the information as to Mr. Monk's project, kindly to try and procure, and forward to me, his Canadian address, or his address in England, should he have proceeded hither, which he may probably have done, as the Canadian Parliament has just been dissolved. I have great hopes that he may be induced to set about the exploration of Tara Hill. I am still as confident as ever, notwithstanding adverse criticism on the point in the Messenger, that the bringing to the light of the Saviour's throne will be the signal for the outpouring of the seventh vial, or third woe, the signs of the approach of which are becoming every day more and more distinct, and I think I have clearly shown this in my pamphlet. I also still believe that, during that awful period, this glorious throne will serve as the palladium of our Irish Church, either by completely overawing our enemies, or by bringing them round to our side.

Yours faithfully,

EDWARD DENNY.

Laracor Vicarage, Trim, Co. Meath, Jan. 19.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—I forward you the translation of Signor S., of Carrara's, article, which I mentioned to you in my last, as interesting to BANNER readers. It is to be found in the weekly paper of that town, dated Jan. 10, 1887, is entitled, "A glance at 1886," and opens as follows:—"For many of the European nations, the year 1886 began badly, but finished worse. By no means a pessimist, it is still impossible to view without fear and trembling, the inheritance of confusion, misery, and alarm which the year 1886 has left to its successor." Then follows a résumé of the principal European events during 1886, The closing paragraphs only are interesting to us as Anglo-Israelites, and are as follows:—

"But the most important part of the eventful history of the year 1886 belongs to England. The year opened with the Irish question, to which the nation answered by the fall of the Gladstonian Government, thereby proving that the British peoplewill never consent to the dismemberment of the United Kingdom. London saw the opening of the colossal Colonial Exhibition, revealing in a coup d'œil the immense resources of the British Empire, the greatness, richness, and power of which are beyond the scope of our imagination.

"It is worthy to note the progress which the belief that they are the descendants of Abraham has made amongst the Anglo-Saxon race. They are the remnant of the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel as distinct from the Two Tribes which form the House of Judah, and so well known amongst us to-day as Jews. The Anglo-Saxon branch from Britain, which peopled the United States of America, are identified with the Tribe of Manasseh. The Colonial Exhibition has had a mighty effect in confirming this historical fact, of such enormous importance to every nation under the sun. And everyone must, at first glance, realise its great value; who only reflects that such a discovery would result in the Federation of all the British Colonies with the Mother Country. This confederation, ventilated at first in a preliminary way by the different sections of the Anglo-Saxon family, has taken now such a hold of the public mind, that the Queen was obliged to take note of it at the opening of Parliament, and the Government is now taking it into serious consideration. The culminating point, however, in the discovery of the Lost House of Israel in the great Anglo-Saxon family will be the fulfilment of Scripture prophecy in the most literal and indisputable manner. What a new horizon will then be opened up for the right understanding of history—past, present, and future."

(Signed) "SION."

Florence, Jan. 20.

THE signs of the times are ominous enough to cause great apprehensions lest the peace of the world be broken. Our fleet may be ready now, in a year and a half it will be beyond all challenge or possible combination. In what state is the army? Is it ready now? Will it be ready in a year and a half? The truce which keeps 8,000,000 of men standing by their piled arms will surely be ended by the death of the aged German Monarch.—Extract from "The Army and Navy Gazette," December, 1886.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."

(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. XI., No. 529. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 16, 1887. [PRICE ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
"Peace is in Every Statesman's Mouth"	69
Has Shiloh Come? By L. E. De Ridder.—Part II.	70
Romans IX., X., and XI., Revised Version.—Part III.	71
The Great Pyramid Date of A.D. 1887. By Charles Horner.—Part III.	72
The Times of the Gentiles	72
American Confirmations	73
Only a Tin of Salmon	74
Imperial Federation, of December 1, 1886, Admits Identity Views	74
Mr. Osborne's Lecture	74
Correspondence	75

"PEACE IS IN EVERY STATESMAN'S MOUTH."

IN the Times leader of January 19, 1887, the sentence occurs, a part of which we have placed at the head of this article, as illustrative of St. Paul's words in 1 Thess. v. 3, R.V.:—"For when they shall say peace and safety, then sudden destruction shall come upon them, as travail upon a woman with child, and they shall in no wise escape." "Peace," said the Times, "is in every Statesman's mouth, and peace this country at least will do all that is humanly possible to maintain." But the Times is forced sadly to conclude with these ominous words, "If peace is in every mouth, there is menace on every brow, and every hand from the Pyranees to the Urals is instinctively feeling for the sword hilt." That is, men are "saying, Peace and safety," wishing for it, agonizing for it, praying for it, but war is at the doors, and preparations are being made for battle on an enormous scale in France, in Vienna, in Germany, in Turkey, and in Russia. "There is," says the journalist again, "a feeling of suspicion and solicitude, penetrating the most obstinately optimist minds throughout Europe." In short, men are fainting for fear, and for expectation of the things which are coming on the world, for the powers of heaven shall be shaken" (Luke xxi. 26, R.V.).

Upon the earth there is doubtless "distress of nations, in perplexity for the roaring of the sea and the billows." But among God's people Israel, the British, how is it? Are we in perplexity, consumed with terror, moved with suspicion and solicitude, and fainting with fear? Far from that! Our anxiety just now is, how we are best to combat the almost insane demand some are making, and which Lord Randolph Churchill abandoned office rather than refuse, namely, that we should as a nation spend less on armaments, guns, fortresses, and the fortification of distant coaling stations, and take no note of the awful convulsion which is imminent on the Continent of Europe! In fact men are here crying "Peace and safety," forgetting that God is preparing war among the Gentiles, and there is to be a divinely-appointed "great earthquake, such as there was not since men were upon the earth, so great an earthquake, so mighty" (Rev. xvi. 18, R.V.). It is true there is to be for us in these Islands of the West peace and safety, but we have to fortify our Gates in order that we may within them safely ride out the storm that is to wreck the nations, and when these things begin to come to pass it is ours to look up, and lift up our heads, because our "redemption draweth nigh" (Luke xxi. 28, R.V.).

"It behoves this nation," as the Times declares, "to be prepared for all contingencies," but we have no call for despair, despondency, or even for alarm! Our position is guaranteed, our peace in these Islands and throughout our Empire is sure. God Himself has promised us immunity from invasion in this our "Appointed Place;" and in regard to the outlying Empire, He has bidden us be of good cheer, since He has charged us, in the coming time of fiery judgment for the world, that we enter into our chambers, and with our doors shut behind us, be in hiding "for a little moment, till the indignation be overpast" (Isa. xxvi. 20, R.V.). The case of Noah and his ark of safety are thus proposed to us for our encouragement. His escape, when the world perished, is the lesson we are to learn in the coming awful time of judgment. This nation, the blood-bought, blood-sprinkled seed of Abraham, is to be saved amid the overthrow of the ungodly nations, who have refused the sacrifice on Calvary, and laughed to scorn both the remedy for sin and the God-provided innocent Substitute who has borne its punishment for us in the sight of God! Means, however, must be employed to effect the Lord's purposes, and these means are usually human. In the present case we must provide the means of defence. Our coaling stations must be fortified and defended. Our war ships, which protect the seas and our mercantile navies on them, must be kept up to a point of high efficiency to enable them to do their strictly defensive work. Our nation's interests in Egypt, Constantinople, China, the Cape, and wherever else they are menaced at the present time, must be carefully watched, and if needful defended. Noah and his family were saved, but it was only by means of the ark he made, possibly with his own hands, according to God's commands.

So, now, we shall nationally be saved, but it will only be by strict compliance with God's directions for our conduct in the time of trial. We must "enter into our chambers and shut our doors about us, and hide ourselves for a little moment," if we would be safe, because God prescribes these means for our adoption, and they will surely and certainly be used by us according to the prophecies. Let us not, then, fear! The Lord Jehovah is on our side, and will undertake our nation's cause, and bring us through! The prayer which is prescribed in Jer. xxxi. 7, "O Lord, save Thy people, the remnant of Israel," will yet be heard, and our nation, sanctified by the Holy Spirit, "shall know the Lord," and "our sins and our iniquities," which are now red as crimson and high as mountains, the Lord God of Israel Himself "will remember no more," for He has said it; and to Him shall be all the praise! (Jer. xxxi. 33, 34).

Digitized by Google

HAS SHILOH COME?

By L. E. De Ridder.

(Concluded from page 63.)

PART II.

Let us now see what God's Word really does teach, and I would earnestly ask my readers not to take this as granted, but to search diligently, that they may also see the light, and be guided by its teaching.

The Bible teaches that God called Abraham from out of the darkness of idolatry into His marvellous light, that He might make of him a great nation or Church, and this Church He called by His own name—Israel.

To it he gave a two-fold polity and destiny:—

1st. National, universal, and everlasting dominion of the whole earth.

2nd. Ecclesiastic (or spiritual) everlasting authority over the earth; and to this Church He appointed one head—Jesus the Christ, who was also to have a two-fold office:—

1st. The King of Israel, or Shiloh, the Prince of Peace, who shall reign before His ancients gloriously.

2nd. The High Priest, after the order of Melchisedec, and the Redeemer of Israel.

There was also to be a two-fold coming of the Messiah, or Two Advents.

1st. As the High Priest, to offer himself as a Redemption for His people, and through them as the Saviour of the world.

2nd. As the King of Israel, to take unto Himself the sceptre of David.

The Bible teaches that this Church rebelled against the divine government, and demanded an earthly monarch, like unto the nations around them. Having obtained their desire in this respect, they began to tire of a God that they could not see, and took unto them the gods of the idolatrous nations whose gods they were told to destroy. For this idolatry they were at first sorely chastised, and finally were driven out of the land to become wanderers in the earth.

First the House of Israel went, and then the House of Judah, but unto the latter a partial return was granted, that the land might be prepared for the first Advent.

After the House of Israel were driven out of the land, their loving God repented Him of the evil He had done, and promised to send them redemption and forgiveness of their national sins, that their very exile, or Gentilised and scattered condition should be a means of blessing to the world at large, and that He would gather them into a place of refuge, where they might rest and renew their strength (also read Jer. xxxi. 1, 2.) "And I will bring you out from the people, and will gather you out of the countries wherein ye are scattered, with a mighty hand, and with a stretched-out arm, and with fury poured out. And I will bring you into the wilderness of the people, and there will I plead with you face to face." Yet during this time of pleading He promised to His saints that He would give them divine protection, for again God sends this further message after them:—"Thus saith the Lord God: Although I have cast them afar off among the heathen, and although I have scattered them among the countries, yet will I be to them as a little sanctuary in the countries where they shall come." Then, when He has sanctified them in the sight of the heathen, He will permit them to return to their land, but only after this sanctification has taken place (Ezekiel xxviii. 25.) But before we consider this final return, let us see what means God takes that they should become sanctified. So manifest and so public is the means that God takes to this end, that He says, "All flesh shall know that I, the Lord, am thy Saviour and thy Redeemer, the Mighty One of Jacob. I will ransom them from the power of the grave: I will redeem them from death; I will hiss for them, and gather them; for I have redeemed them."

This promised redemption comes in the person of God's only-begotten Son, Jesus, the Christ, the Messiah, or the Anointed One; who, after three' years ministry and witness as to the fulfilment of that portion of prophecy which relates to His mediatorship, is offered up for the sins of God's people, Israel, and by His death purchases an everlasting ransom or redemption for them, and through that act of redemption He becomes the Light of Salvation unto all people; for in Isaiah xlix. 6, 7, He says: "It is a light thing that thou shouldest be My servant, to raise up the Tribes of Jacob, and to restore the preserved of Israel. I will also give thee for a light of the Gentiles, that thou mayest be My salvation unto the end of the earth. Thus saith the Lord, the Redeemer of Israel and His Holy One, to him whom man despiseth, to him whom the nation abhorreth, to a servant of rulers. Kings shall see and arise, princes also shall worship because of the Lord that is faithful, and the Holy One of Israel, and he shall choose thee."

This is a most beautiful testimony to the nature of Christ's first Advent, and we have it confirmed by inspiration through Zechariah:—"Blessed be the Lord God of Israel, for He has visited and redeemed His people;" and again by Simeon, "Which Thou hast prepared before the face of all people. A Light to lighten the Gentiles, and the glory of Thy people Israel." St. Paul, by divine inspiration, speaks of Him as the Mediator of the New Testament, that by means of death He might bring redemption of transgression to all that were under the First Testament. And again—"Which hope we have as an anchor of the soul, both sure and steadfast, and which entereth into that within the vail, whither the forerunner is for us entered, even Jesus, made an High Priest for ever after the order of Melchisedec."

Here, then, we have the explanation of Christ's first Advent upon earth—viz.: that He is the High Priest, the Redeemer, the Mediator of the covenant unto Israel; and the light of salvation to the ends of the earth; but nowhere do we find that he is represented as Shiloh, having the sceptre of Israel and ruling in peace. Christ's own testimony is against any such assumption, for when, just before He ascended into heaven, His disciples asked Him, saying, "Lord, wilt thou at this time restore again the Kingdom of Israel?" showing very plainly that the portion of the House of Judah then in the land, had not the kingdom or the sceptre of David with them, and that Christ had not taken unto Himself the regal attribute of King of Israel, His reply to them was, "It is not for you to know the times or the seasons, which the Father hath put in His own power," thus plainly intimating to them that the time had not yet arrived when He should reign before His ancients (Israel) gloriously, and that therefore we must look forward to another or second coming of Christ to His people; and this second coming, or millennial reign of peace, has been preached all down through the ages that have passed since the apostles, by divine inspiration, began to teach and preach that doctrine.

Therefore, to say that Christ came as Shiloh, the prince of peace, and has taken unto Himself the sceptre of David, is one of those erroneous statements without the warranty of Scripture, which the infidel has been prone to lay hold of as a weapon by which to mock at Christianity; they scoffingly point to the songs of the angel:—"Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, goodwill to all people." The infidel at once turns round and says: "Look you back along all the ages or centuries that have passed, and where is the peace and goodwill that was ushered in by this supposed song of the angels, and which your Shiloh was to bring?" This error has arisen, first through the Romish Church putting aside God's true Church, Israel, and establishing a usurping Church outside of Israel, amongst the Gentile peoples, and calling it God's Church. When the purer light of Christianity, seeing the errors of the Romish doctrines, raised itself into a separating and protesting existence, it also perpetrated the same error by putting aside Israel; and establishing itself as a Church opening its doors to all nations and peoples, it took unto itself all the promised blessings to Israel, and left all the curses to the Jews, whom it looked upon erroneously as Israel. Men now call themselves God's Church, and have in later years split themselves up into a thousand different sects or Churches, all contending that they are right, and that you must believe as they do to be saved. The infidel, therefore, looking through the world, sees so-called Christians arming themselves for each other's slaughter, and the Churches at war also with one another. He naturally says that there is no peace within the world, but a spirit of unrest, and that there is neither peace within or without the Church. There is one fact that this Church has to face, and it has the warranty of God's own statement—viz., God has not known, and will not know any other Church but His people Israel; therefore, if we, the British race, be not Israel, then this Christian Church will have to confess that it is a usurping Church, as well as the Church of Rome.

Digitized by Google

But did the angel proclaim peace to the world, and did also Christ proclaim peace? We will first take the new version of the New Testament as our witness:—"Behold I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all the people." Dean Alford's version has the same rendering, "the people." Then in the song of the angels, we have this rendering: "And on earth peace among men in whom He is well pleased." Dean Alford's version says: "And on earth peace among men of His good pleasure." Now the question comes, who are "the people" and the "men of His good pleasure"—Are they Gentiles? or are they His elect and precious people Israel, whom He raised up to be a nation or Church before Him for ever? We think that very few candid minds, after a moment's reflection that the Bible is a Hebrew history of a Hebrew people, and written by Hebrew men, who wrote as they were inspired by a Hebrew God, who, through His Hebrew people, was the God of all the families of the earth, and only through His people Israel, can fail to come to the conclusion that they are God's chosen people, Israel.

Christ Himself bears witness that He does not bring peace to the Gentile earth when He says: "Think not that I am come to send peace on earth; I came not to send peace, but a sword."

This throws a beautiful light upon the present aspect of the nations of the earth. All the Gentile nations are in a spirit of unrest, and armed to the teeth, whereas God's people Israel, the British race, are seeking after peace, and carrying the blessings of peace and the gospel tidings to all lands in which they, as wanderers, seek a home. Thus, by their labours, they are preparing for the Second Advent, when their King shall come with ten thousands of His saints to usher in the millennial reign of peace. Of the increase of His government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it and to establish it with judgment and with justice, from henceforth, even for ever. The zeal of the Lord of Hosts will perform this.

For this advent of Shiloh the whole world is waiting, and the confederation of British-Israel, now being brought to the front by all shades of politicians in every part of Britain's world-wide Empire, is one of the great events of the age that point to the near approach of the advent of the eternal King of that universal Empire of peace.

ROMANS IX., X., AND XI., REVISED VERSION.

(Concluded from p. 64.)

PART III.

CHAP. XI., VERSE 19.—"Thou wilt say their branches [the Jews] were broken off that I might be grafted in.

20.—"Well; by their unbelief they [the Jews] were broken off, and thou standest by thy faith. Be not high-minded, but fear;

21.—"For if God spared not the natural branches [the Jews], neither will He spare thee [non-Israelite Gentiles].

22.—"Behold then the goodness and severity of God; toward them that fell [the Jews] severity; but towards thee God's goodness, if thou continue in His goodness; otherwise [since] thou also shalt be cut off.

23.—"And they [the Jews] also, if they continue not in their unbelief, shall be grafted in; for God is able to graft them in again.

24.—"For if thou [non-Israelite Gentile] wast cut out of that which is by nature a wild olive-tree, and wast grafted contrary to nature, into a good olive-tree; how much more shall these [the Jews], which are the natural branches, be grafted into their own olive-tree? [the Hebrew or Israelite nation].

25.—"For I would not, brethren, have you ignorant of this mystery, lest ye be wise in your conceits, that a hardening in part hath befallen Israel [the Jews], until the FULNESS of the GENTILES [Ephraim's company of nations—Gen. xlviii. 19, xxxv. 11] be come in.

26.—"And so All Israel [the Ten Tribes or Ephraim, recognised by their old name again] shall be saved; even as it is written [Isa. lix. 20]:

> "There shall come out of Zion the Deliverer; He [Christ] shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob:

27.—"And this is My covenant unto them [the Ten Tribes],

> "When I shall take away their sins [Jer. xxxi. 33, 34; Heb. viii. 10—12].

28.—"As touching the Gospel, they [the Jews] are enemies for your [non-Israelite Gentiles'] sake; but as touching the election [Benjamin?], they are beloved for the Father's sake.

29.—"For the gifts and calling of God are without repentance.

30.—"For as ye [non-Israelite Gentiles] in time past were disobedient to God, but now have obtained mercy by their [the Jews'] disobedience;

31.—"Even so have these [the Jews] also now been disobedient, that by the mercy shown to you [non-Israelite Gentiles], they also [the Jews] may now obtain mercy.

32.—"For God hath shut up all [the Jews] unto disobedience, that He might have mercy upon all [the Jews, Joseph, and Gentiles].

33.—"O the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and the knowledge of God! how unsearchable are His judgments, and His ways past tracing out!

34.—"For who hath known the mind of the Lord? or who hath been His counsellor?

35.—"Or who hath first given to Him, and it shall be recompensed unto him again?

36.—"For of Him, and through Him, and unto Him are all things. To Him be the glory for ever. Amen."

So far the Word of God. Our own interpretation, interspersed in brackets, may be deemed correct, or not. We do not say they are, but we offer them for our readers' consideration, as the view we ourselves firmly hold and believe to be generally correct. "The Lord's judgments are unsearchable, and His ways past tracing out." Therefore we must all refrain from dogmatic teaching in reference thereto, and merely tentatively explain difficulties which the text certainly presents, even to ourselves, much more to the expounders of God's Word on the spiritualising principle, and after the fashion of our opponents generally.

Digitized by Google

THE GREAT PYRAMID DATE OF A.D. 1887.

By Charles Horner.

(Concluded from p. 65.)

PART III.

We are now enabled to ascertain two additional measures—to wit, the entire length of slope to the point where the produced line from A intersects the passage floor at D, and the length from the same starting point—viz., the N end of Gallery's floor, continued over the step, also to the same point at D. Hence we have 1813·225 + + 81·1649 ± = 1894·389 ± ins. for length of slope:

And 1813·225 ± + 108·74 ± (A C + C D) = 1921·965 + ins. for the measure over the step to D.

Now the relationship between these two measures is remarkable, for here we have an instance where the slope measure is in terms of the solar year, while the second, over the step to D, is the length in terms of the prophetic "time"—that is to say, 1921·965 ± prophetic, or calendar years, are equivalent to 1894·379 ± solar years.

The other section of the step, A B E, now demands our attention. We already know that E marks the end of the Gallery's Floor-line—viz., 1881·5985 ± ins., or A.D. 1882, which runs parallel with ramp line through the step to South wall as at H. It is, therefore, merely a matter of computation that we arrive at a knowledge of the remaining elements, A B, B E; and, consequently, it is found that A B = 30·297 ± ins., and B E = 61·294 ± ins., therefore A B E = 91·591 ± ins., or very nearly the theoretic quantity of $\frac{2}{3}$ (412·1317 ±).

The step's height, attained by the slope of 1881·5985 ± ins. is equal to A B, or 30·297 ± ins. Therefore the length along Gallery's Floor, and then through the step's lower section, A B E, is equal to 1904·816 ± ins. Having obtained the elements of the large right-angled triangle A C D, and the smaller A B E, we have the ratio:

$$\frac{1921{\cdot}965 \pm \times 1881{\cdot}5985 \pm}{1904{\cdot}816 \pm} = 1898{\cdot}591 \pm,$$ or a new chronological term, which indicates another date at the point D. Then subtracting D G from this, or which is practically the same as the direct measure along the ramp over the step to G, as shown in Part II.

$$1898{\cdot}591 \pm - 11{\cdot}913 \pm = 1886{\cdot}678 \pm,$$

Again, if instead of measuring along the whole of the step's surface, as before, we stop short at F, and then continue the line along F H, we obtain the length, when duly corrected by "rod A," of 1914·038 ± ins. Moreover, I find there exists a decided connection between this length and the date under investigation, for 1914·038 ± prophetic, or calendar years, are equivalent to 1886·567 ± solar years, the difference between this and the direct measure being only ·1 ins., a difference probably due to the non-allowance of the South wall's impend at H.

Another fact I have discovered in reference to the step should be recorded. The mean length over the step A C G = 96·8031 ins., and the following equations:—

$$[7\,(360^2)\,]^{\frac{1}{3}}, \text{ or } (2520 \times 360)^{\frac{1}{3}} = 96{\cdot}8057 \pm,$$ showing this quantity to be intimately associated with the prophetic "time."

There remains to note four subsidiary, though none the less important, confirmations.

(1) The complete measure over the step, from A to the joint at G_1 = 98·01758 ± ins., and $6\sqrt[4]{98{\cdot}0175} \pm = 1887{\cdot}8166$. Subtracting from this quantity, G G_1, and we have 1886·617 ±.

(2) The mean length from N wall of Gallery along the ramps over step to the end of Antechamber floor at L, is 2055·277 ± ins. Now the equation—which is within ·12 ins. of corrected length, and by subtracting length of Antechamber and Low Passage, we have 1886·543 ±.

$$(412{\cdot}1317 \pm \times 10^2) \div 3^2 \times 7 = 2055{\cdot}1585 \pm,$$

(3) Then we have the theoretic equation—

$$\left(\frac{365{\cdot}2422 \times 3^2 \times 5 \times}{100\,\pi}\right) \times 515{\cdot}1646 \pm \div 10 \text{ (diagonal of King's Chamber)} = 1886{\cdot}633 \pm.$$

(4) But perhaps the most striking is the elegant confirmation derivable from the Passage system.

SUMMATION OF LENGTHS OF PASSAGES TO POINT D IN THE DIAGRAM.

Length from beginning of Entrance Passage	= 985·4136 ±	P. inches.
Length of Ascending Passage ...	= 1542·3561 ±	„
Length of Grand Gallery along the Floor over Step to D... ...	= 1921·6579 ±	„
	4449·4276 ±	„

These lengths, corrected by "rod A," become 4450·139 ± ins., which will probably be found to be slightly in excess when the exact dimensions are determined. When, however, these quantities are separately divided by 5^7, and multiplied by 300, we have, for uncorrected total:—

$$300\,(4449{\cdot}4276 \pm \div 5^7) = 1898{\cdot}574 \pm;$$

and corrected total:—$300\,(4450{\cdot}139 \pm \div 5^7) = 1898{\cdot}726 \pm$; which we have already shown to be a date at that particular spot in the Great Pyramid, and arrived at by quite independent methods. But there is a double interest attaching to this singular corroboration, inasmuch as the accuracy of Professor Smyth's original measures receives a complete verification.

Looking at the historical aspect of the subject, and referring to the dates from which so many prophetic periods have commenced, we find that from 598 B.C., when "All Jerusalem was carried away captive" to A.D. 1887, there will elapse 2520 prophetic "times," or 2483·83 solar years. As we have already observed, what event, or series of events, this date of 1887 is intended to mark we cannot say, but must patiently await the history of the current year to unfold. From one end of Europe to the other there is the ringing clangor of war preparations on a portentous scale, while no statesman can tell where the storm-cloud will burst. Meanwhile the arms of Israel are made strong, "by the hands of the mighty God of Jacob." To those of us who believe the Great Pyramid to be the predicted "sign and witness unto the Lord of hosts in the midst of the land of Egypt," this brief exposition will be welcome. They will know, at present, even the best amongst us can only "see as through a glass darkly," and must, therefore, wait for further light as it may be revealed to us, even though it be "line upon line, and precept upon precept," "until the day break and the shadows flee away!"

"THE TIMES OF THE GENTILES."

An argument against Our Identity with the Ten Tribes of Israel which we often hear from the lips of opponents and our clergy is this, "These are the 'times of the Gentiles,' and this, therefore, a parenthetical dispensation, when the Gentiles are, by the sovereignty of God, endowed with all the promises of Israel. When their times have elapsed and passed away, then will come the turn of the Israelites. We are the favoured Gentiles at the present moment, and therefore as the times of such favour have not passed away yet, we must not yet expect to find Israel. Certainly we cannot look for Israel in the British folk, because we are the favoured Gentiles, and the favoured Gentiles cannot be the favoured Israelites." We have here a vicious circle of argument, begging each question in issue, beginning and ending with outrageous non sequiturs. These mistakes originate with a fundamental error in regard to an alleged text, which really does not exist in the Bible, in respect to the "times of the Gentiles." There are but two passages in the Scriptures in which the words "times of the Gentiles" can in any way be supposed to be under reference. These are Luke xxi. 24; and Rom. xi. 25. We quote them from the Revised Version for purposes of comparison. It will be seen that as ordinarily understood by our opponents, these two texts distinctly contradict each other!

Digitized by Google

Luke xxi. 24; "And they (the Jews) shall fall by the edge of the sword, and shall be led captive into all the nations; and Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled." Here the Gentiles who are treading down Jerusalem, just before the deliverance of the Jews takes place, will come to an appointed end; and then the "times of the Gentiles" so engaged will be fulfilled, or pass away. The evil of the Gentile occupation of Jerusalem is to pass away; a matter for joy.

Rom xi. 25. "For I would not, brethren, have you ignorant of this mystery, lest ye be wise in your own conceits: that a hardening in part hath befallen Israel, until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in." Here the fulness of the Gentiles is to come in, not pass away, and the matter will be one for joy and congratulations, because the next verse (26) shows that when this "fulness of the Gentiles" comes in, "All Israel shall be saved, even as it is written, Then shall come out of Zion the Deliverer, He shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob," etc.

If these two passages refer to the same "times of the Gentiles," then they directly contradict each other. In the one case the Gentiles are to be abolished, as the persecutors and destroyers of the city of the great King; in the other their "coming in," will be the signal of Israel's salvation! The fact is, there is no such intimation from one end of the Bible to the other, as that our opponents contend for in reference to "the times of the Gentiles," as times which give them Israel's blessings parenthetically, and keep Israel out of them. The true meaning of the passages lies on the surface, and need not, if the verses are read without sophistication, be the least perplexing. That in Luke xxi. 24 means what it says—viz., that Jerusalem shall have the Gentiles to tread it down till the time of those same Gentiles is "up." Then those Gentiles will be swept away, and Israel will go back to her capital. The Gentiles who in these last days, for 1,260 years past, have been treading Jerusalem down, have been the Turks. Their "times" are nearly over. They have had to run 1,260 years (or 42 months) and when that time shall have been *ful*filled (Rev. xi. 1. 2). they will then be swept away, and Israel will return to her own again. The passage in Rom. xi. 25, as our readers know, contains a reference to Gen. xlviii. 19, where Jacob gave to Ephraim, the Hebrew lad, a blessing which recognised his descendants as "a fulness of Gentiles." When that "fulness" or "multitude of nations" (or Gentiles) shall have been discovered (being a Federation of States), then the mystery of Israel will have been consummated and revealed, and all Israel's salvation or Return be at hand.

The expression "fulness of Gentiles" occurs only twice in the Bible, once in Hebrew in Gen. xlviii. 19, as Melo-hag-goim, and once in Greek, where the exact translation is used, "Plerôma tôn Ethnôn." For both cases blessings to the House of Ephraim are predicted: by Jacob, who described Ephraim's progeny as a multitude of Gentile nations (a nation and a company of nations (Gen. xxxv. 11); by St. Paul, who declared that as soon as that great sign appeared, "All Israel should be saved." There is no hint here of the transfer of Israel's blessings bodily, to the Gentile non-Israelites, as our opponents believe to be the case; but intimation on the contrary is given that there is to be no abeyance in God's promises to Israel, which are in their present enjoyment as Lo-Ammi outcasts, according to His promises to them in Ezek. xi. 16, and Zech. x. 6. On the whole the objection founded on "The Times of the Gentiles" plea, is discounted and exploded, and should never be advanced again by our adversaries. If it should ever be brought forward by our opponents, we trust our readers will use the argument with which we have now supplied them, and so cause them to collapse.

AMERICAN CONFIRMATIONS.

THE following letter, addressed to Professor C. Piazzi Smyth by an American minister of religion, speaks for itself. It is a remarkable document, because it affords a proof of the correctness of Our Identity views and deductions from an independent mind in America, which, having got well hold of one of the facts, has made out the whole of the great truth, past, present, and future. It is fact for fact, Scripture for Scripture, exactly what has been current among us for several years past; witness more especially the testimony of Ezekiel in the revivification of the House of Israel in the valley of the dry bones. This was Bishop Titcomb's strong point, and one now long established among us. Mr. Ingersoll has grasped it all.

Springfield, Kansas, Nov. 29, 1886.

MY DEAR BROTHER SMYTH,—Be not surprised at my frequent intrusions upon your attention. For I am pressed in spirit, for the work of the Lord. While preparing "Lost Israel Found," that little book, small in volume, but mighty in its contents, I had no idea of the use to be made of it, nor any desire to know, for I was wholly swallowed up in the wondrous work assigned me to do, and of the marvellous truths revealed to my consciousness. But the book having been published and circulated abroad, I now find that this little book was designed by Him whose amanuensis I was, as a foundation simply for some future superstructure; but what that was to be I still had no idea. But now it has been shown me—yes, one of the plainest things in the world, just as all truths are when made known—that the superstructure with which to crown the foundation is the return of the Lord to enter upon His reign. What could be more natural than this? Indeed, what other possible reason can be assigned why lost Israel should be brought to light at all? For this is the only means we have (is it not?) of finding a solution of the prophecies touching our Lord's return.

You are aware, my brother, that all the writers on the prophecies have hitherto laboured in doubt, there being no definite bound from which to commence their reckoning in the development of the prophecies. Hence the great disagreement among them all, and this necessarily, for, having no fixed bound to start from, how could it be otherwise? But now, since Lost Israel is found, we have, as I think, disclosed to us a bound fixed by the God of Israel, but which could never have been discovered in any other way. I refer to Ezek. xxxvii. 1—14, this valley of dry bones. In reply to Ezekiel's intense inquiry as to the meaning of this wonderful vision, God says, "This is the whole House of Israel," etc. Now you know, and I know, that "this whole House of Israel" is proved to be the Anglo-Saxon race, which is being brought to light at this very time, A.D. 1886. And here we have a bound, a date, fixed by Him who cannot lie, from which we may reckon in safety.

There is now, as I think, a great drama about to be enacted, in which are four, at least, separate Acts. This drama is brought upon the stage here and now. The curtain is already drawn, and will not be closed till all these Acts are performed, and which all terminate at one and the same time, when Christ Himself shall appear. The first Act is found in Ezek. xxxvii. entire. The beginning of this Act is the bringing to light the whole House of Israel. The work is but just begun, not yet fully recognised. But when this is so done, then will the other part of the act be transacted—Judah and Ephraim joined in one, and thus transported to Jerusalem, to become no more two nations, but one nation, and there "to have one king over them, My servant David" (and is not this the Christ?). But how long ere this shall be? The prophet does not tell us. This, then, is Act 1.

Act No. 2 is found in Ezek. xxxviii. and xxxix. Here is the minute description of that great battle soon to be fought by Gog, the land of Magog, Prince of Rosh, Meshech and Tubal. As to the identity of this Gog, there is no difference of opinion among commentators, so far as I know. All agree that Russia is the nation referred to. Ezekiel tells us that the mighty host led by

Digitized by Google

Gog is to seek its way to Jerusalem; and there, in the mountains, the great battle is to be fought, and God shall Himself appear, with rain and pestilence, with fire and hail, to the utter destruction of this mighty host. This Act is not yet upon the stage; but who doesn't know that all Europe is now in anxious perplexity, armed to the teeth, every hand upon the sword, ready to strike? But no one dares to strike the first blow. So this scene may be introduced on the stage soon, even while Act No. 1 is still being performed, and is to terminate at Jerusalem the same as the other.

Next is Act No. 3. This is found in 2 Thess. ii. 1—12. The delineation of this Act, the manifestation of that wicked one, Antichrist, you do not need me to point out. But this Act is to terminate like the others. This array of infidelity is to be destroyed with the brightness of Christ's coming.

Act No. 4 has its origin in Matt. xxiv. 14. This work is thought by some to be already completed; but to me it does not so appear. All that we have accomplished hitherto is to have preached the Gospel to the outskirts of the nations only; the great mass have not yet been reached. But when that work shall have been thoroughly accomplished, then shall the end come. This end, I need not tell you, is the end of the present dispensation. Here, then, is completed this great drama. The curtain drops; but is this all? Can we learn nothing more about the end? Not that the prophet has disclosed. But you know, my brother, there is another volume, written by the finger of God, and sealed up in that wonderful monument, to be disclosed in this latter day, whose passages you have, by divine aid, surveyed, and given to the world the measurement thereof, and the key discovered by John Taylor. This Great Pyramid points with such marvellous precision to the time of the end that one stands with bated breath, then lifts up his cry, Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly.

In love and in sure hope of Christ's speedy appearance, I am, yours, &c.,

E. P. INGERSOLL.

ONLY A TIN OF SALMON!

YES, only a tin of salmon; yet may not that very salmon rather forcibly remind those who have eyes to see God's faithfulness to His promises made to Joseph, by the mouth of Jacob and Moses, many centuries ago. Through both did He promise to Joseph blessings of the deep that lieth under. The Anglo-Saxons of old, long before they found entrance into Britain, seemed to look upon the deep as their monopoly, and it is the Anglo-Saxons who now rule the waves. But looking at it from rather a lower point of view, the preserved salmon and lobster which comes to us from the United States and Canada, bringing within the reach of the working man those good things which could only fall to the lot of the high and the rich, unless so provided by our God, who knew, when He promised such a multitudinous seed to Joseph, that the greatest proportion of his children must needs be working folk. There is something very suggestive even in the design of the label by which the salmon-tin is covered. On the one side is the salmon on the water, suggesting the riches of the deep; on the other the Union Jack of Ephraim, and the Stars and Stripes of Manasseh, united in the centre by Israel's Coat of Arms, the Lion and Unicorn.

There is no doubt but that in the deep which coucheth beneath all our coasts, both home and colonial, God has stored up for us great abundance of fish, which, were it not for the avarice and indifference of those who deal in it, could and would become a plentiful article of diet to all God's people of Joseph.

Three times in Isa. lx. God promises to Israel the forces, or, as the margin has it, the wealth, of the Gentiles, and chapter lxi. 6 says, "Ye shall eat the riches of the Gentiles, and in their glory shall ye boast yourselves." We need but to walk through our towns and gaze into the shop windows to see how truly those words are being fulfilled, luxuries and necessaries being brought within the reach of all. It does seem wonderful how God has provided for us. There was a time in the past when laws were actually passed forbidding in London the building of any more houses, the dearth of viands being one of the reasons. How wonderfully has the population increased since then, and yet how little does that fear trouble us now. Truly God is good to Israel. And let not the rich and learned Christian, who rejoices that he belongs to spiritual Israel, think that we are carnal because we can see God's hand in all these every-day blessings.

M. J.

"IMPERIAL FEDERATION," OF DEC. 1, 1886, ADMITS IDENTITY VIEWS.

OUR readers will be pleased to see that we have a friend at Worthing, Mr. Joseph. C. Paine, whose bold, out-spoken Israelite assertion, has been accepted and published in Imperial Federation, the organ of "The Imperial Federation League." We like the letter because it is short, decisive, and to the point. With the growth of the idea of Federation on Israelite grounds, we see, side by side, gigantic preparations making by Russia, Germany, France, Austria, and Italy, for the great earthquake war-woe of Rev. xvi. 18, while we as a nation are in peace and safety, as Luke xxi. 28 and Isa. xxvi. 12, 20, 21, prescribe. We anticipate that these two sets of facts together will bring men at last to see that Our Identity with Israel of the Ten Tribes is a practical nineteenth century matter, leading to incalculable blessings hereafter for our people. Certain it is that newspapers like St James's Gazette and Imperial Federation are beginning now to allow the subject to appear in their columns. Presently they will admit its truth and glory in the facts. May that time soon come! And then the BANNER OF ISRAEL will have done its work! The letter we republish is as follows:—

WHY ARE WE CERTAIN TO GET IT?

To the Editor of "Imperial Federation."

SIR,—I notice in the introductory article to "Fifty Years' Progress" that there are three queries to be worked out, viz:—

1. What do we want?
2. Why do we want it?
3. How do we mean to get it?

These questions have been answered in a very satisfactory manner, but a fourth question has been suggested to my mind which appears to me the most important of all—viz., Why are we CERTAIN to get it? Because we, as Anglo-Saxons, are descended from Jacob or Israel, of the TEN TRIBES, and therefore must inherit God's promise to Jacob in Genesis xxxv. 11: "A nation and a company of nations shall be of thee."

This will be fulfilled in our case immediately we federate with our Colonies. But God makes use of man to carry out His designs hence the necessity of this work.

Yours truly,

Dane Lodge, Grafton-road, Worthing. JOSEPH C. PAINE.

INTERESTING LECTURE.—Under the auspices of the Young Men's Christian Association, a most admirable lecture was given in the Blackburn Institute on Thursday evening, by A. Osborne, Esq., the subject being, "Are the British Israelites?" The room was crowded, and the greatest interest was shown, as the lecturer made point after point in establishing his conclusion that Israel's place in prophecy is Britain's place in history. Mr. Osborne, on this occasion, confined himself to the Scriptural aspect of the question, and showed a most complete knowledge of his Bible, throwing great light on several difficult and little-understood passages. It should be stated that Mr. Osborne is a gentleman engaged in business in the Borough (Southwark), and refused even his travelling expenses, expressing a wish that the whole of the collection made after the meeting should go the funds of the Young Men's Christian Association. That Association now numbers thirty-seven members.—Deal Mercury, January 15, 1887.

A LARGE and influential deputation from the State-directed Colonisation Association waited on Lord Salisbury on Friday, with the view of securing the support of the Government for their scheme. In introducing the deputation Lord Brabazon stated that their object was endorsed by fifty-five trade societies representing 200,000 working men. The idea was to send out small colonies to settle on free grants of land, such as Canada is now offering. In order to carry this project out, it was proposed that there should be an Imperial Commission, which should be empowered to raise loans in the open market, the Government guaranteeing the interest. Mr. Arnold White further remarked that in South Africa, where the white race needed strengthening, such colonisation tended to prevent native wars. As the result, he added, of an experiment in colonisation tried in Africa in 1819 by Lord Liverpool, a community had been formed now worth £20,000,000.

Digitized by Google

Correspondence.

ISRAEL INTERMARRIED, YET DISTINCT.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

SIR,—In your note at page 4 of your "Historical, Ethnic, and Philological Arguments in Proof of British Identity with the Lost Ten Tribes," it is stated as follows:—

"The mixed multitudes, or great mixtures of Gentiles, who have always allied themselves with Israel, need not be regarded as an objection. There was just such a gathering to the Tribes when they left Egypt (Exod. xii. 37, 38), but they did not thereby vitiate the unity of God's people! That mixture in time was absorbed by the Tribes. So Joseph married a Gentile princess of the Egyptian race, and Ephraim and Manasseh, the heads of the House of Israel, were the fruits of that mixed marriage (Gen. xli. 45, 50, 51). Our Lord's lineage was twice crossed by Gentile blood; once by Rahab the harlot, a woman of Gentile Jericho, and again by Ruth the Moabitess (Matt. i. 5). Doubtless there was a "great mingling of Israelite with Gentile blood during the wanderings of the Tribes through Europe, but God kept the race distinct, as He promised all through (Amos ix. 9)."

A few weeks ago, one of your correspondents (very happily, I thought) illustrated the "unity" in mixed races by the river Rhine. This mingling of the races is (in my experience) an oft-repeated objection against our Israelitish descent.

THE RIVER RHINE.

First view the source of that great river Rhine—
Behold that tiny rill—you can define
Its path with certainty, as on it speeds,
Past lofty castles and expanding meads.

See now, like some great serpent gliding on,
'Tis deep and turbid, and its current strong;
Increasing size soon marks its rapid course
(This river that you saw at yonder source).

But as through many a vale its way it winds
Full many a river joins of various kinds,
Some clear, some muddy are, whilst others slow
All in the Rhine together calmly flow.

For miles eight hundred still this river flows,
Large now, indeed, from whence it first arose;
But when at length it reaches yonder sea
As Rhine at first, so Rhine at last 'twill be!

C. E. P.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—I am sure it will interest you to know that Mr. Osborne paid us a visit on Jan. 13, and gave a most admirable address on "Are the British Israelites?" The room, a large one, was quite full, and the deepest interest was excited in the subject. The lecture was under the auspices of the Young Men's Christian Association, Deal, and Mr. Osborne confined himself on this occasion to the Biblical aspect of the question. We are deeply obliged by your mentioning Mr. Osborne to us.

Yours faithfully,

D. BRUCE PAYNE.

Deal, Jan. 19.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR PHILO-ISRAEL,—In the BANNER of the 5th inst., you suggest that all British-Israelites should unite in thanksgiving and prayer for certain mercies and blessings during this Jubilee year.

After I became convinced that the British race and Israel were identical, through reading "Our Israelitish Origin," and diligently searching out the references in the Scriptures, some forty years ago, I felt deeply impressed with the importance of praying for the prosperity of Israel, both for ourselves and for our brethren of Judah. If the prayer which, with occasional variations, I have offered up daily for many years past should meet your views, I send it that you may make whatever use you please of it, or no use at all:—

"O, Almighty Father, look down in mercy upon Thine ancient people the Jews; soon may the time come when they shall be restored to Thy favour, and be brought in with the fulness of the Gentiles. Now they are being so bitterly persecuted, put it into their hearts, if it be Thy holy will, to come over under the protection of the British flag, and send them the means of doing so. May Ephraim open his arms wide to receive his brother Judah, until the time Thou hast appointed for Judah and Ephraim to walk together to the land Thou gavest for an inheritance unto our fathers. And, oh, have mercy upon Ephraim. Turn from us all those evils which we most righteously deserve. May a mighty outpouring of Thy Holy Spirit come upon Thy people, and induce us to cast away every weapon of rebellion, and the sins that do so easily beset us; and may we turn unto the Lord that He may have mercy upon us, and to our God, for He will abundantly pardon. May the whole British race become in reality what we profess to be—a race of Christians.

"By the instrumentality of Thy missionary servants, may Thy holy Word have free course and be glorified amongst all the nations of the earth, until all shall know Thee, from the least to the greatest. Oh, Lord, hasten the time when Thou wilt take unto Thyself the power and reign, and rule the world in righteousness, and bring about the blessed time when 'the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord as the waters cover the sea' (Hab. ii. 14)."

I remain, yours very sincerely,

GEO. BAYLY.

5, Kempshott-road, Streatham Common,
January 27th, 1887.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—Kindly allow me, through the BANNER, to thank the many friends who have sent me the parcels of Identity literature, especially C. G. P., Sheffield. I am rather out of the way to supply foreign-going ships, so I have to do the best I can among the coasters. I am happy to say that many of the Welsh people firmly believe the Identity, and in a little time I hope to be able to report the formation of an association in the town of Llandudno. We have several ardent believers and friends there, and we expect to send for an able lecturer as soon as we can find a building or school for the purpose. I still continue to distribute, and shall always be glad to receive any literature our many friends have to spare.

I find here a very ancient family, who trace their descent down from Noah, through the kings of Judah and Israel. The scroll is 42 feet in length, and is deposited in the Chester Library. I am preparing a parcel of literature for the hon. lady, and should be thankful to you for two or three copies of Résumé.

E. W. DEANE.

11, Park-terrace, Tywyn, Conway, N Wales,
January 25th, 1887.

THE CENTRE OF THE EARTH, AND THE CENTRE OF POPULATION.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

MY DEAR SIR,—As I also have made the statement in some of my contributions to Identity literature that London is a centre of the habitable earth, perhaps you will allow me to quote the authority.

"Carl Ritter, the founder of historical geography, applied himself chiefly to investigating what are the fundamental conditions of the form of the surface of the globe most favourable to the progress of man and of human societies. He showed 'that not only the lands are more numerous in the Northern portion of the earth than in the Southern, but that, if we draw a great circle at once through the coast of Peru and the South of Asia, the surface of the globe is found to be divided into two hemispheres, of which the one contains the most terrestrial masses, the nearest together, and the most important; while we behold in the other only vast oceans, in which appear, here and there, the peninsular extremities of the principal lands, narrowed and dispersed, with Australia, the smallest and most isolated of the continents. One is, then, the Continental or Land Hemisphere, the other is the Oceanic or Water Hemisphere. It should be observed that London is nearly the centre of the Land Hemisphere, and therefore a natural meeting point of communication for the countries of the globe" (Extracts from Guyot's "Earth and Man," pp. 13, 14).

Yours faithfully,

Jan. 5th, 1887. JNO. T. GOTT.

THURSDAY, February 10, was the forty-seventh anniversary of the Queen's wedding-day.—The Queen having intimated that she would consider the gift of an equestrian statue of the late Prince Consort, to be placed in Windsor Park, as a touching personal present from the women of England, their Jubilee offering will be devoted to this purpose.

Digitized by Google

NOTICES.

All communications intended for the Editor, to be addressed: — "Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Clifton, Bristol.

SUBSCRIPTIONS £ s. d.

Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free - 0 7 6
Two Copies (including Double Numbers) - - 0 13 6
Three Copies " " " " - 1 0 4
Four Copies " " " " - 1 5 6
Six Copies " " " " - 1 16 4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-grand, London, to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C., or F. W. PARRY & Co., 29, Paternoster-row, London.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

Contents Bills and Show Cards may be obtained on application to the Publishers.

Advertisements should be sent to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

Prepaid Advertisements are inserted at the rate of 30 words for 1s. 4d.

PUBLISHED BY ROBT. BANKS & SON, RACQUET COURT, FLEET STREET, E.C.

WORKS BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Thoughts for the British Folk.

Suggested by PHILO-ISRAEL.

No. 1.—Multitudinousness.
No. 2.—The Gates.
No. 3.—The Nation and Company of Nations.
No. 4.—British Wealth.
No. 5.—The Rulers Over Many Nations.
No. 6.—The Universal Creditor.
No. 7.—The Ever-Continuing British Monarchy.
No. 8.—The Scattered People at Home in Every Climate.
No. 9.—The Queen, Lords, and Commons.
No. 10.—The Unconquerable Nation.
No. 11.—The Fatally Destructive Race.
No. 12.—The Isolated Nation.
No. 13.—The Nation Which Belts the Earth.
No. 14.—The Emancipators of the Slave
No. 15.—The Christian Nation.
No. 16.—The Ten Commandments.
No. 17.—The Asylum for the Foreign Refugee.
No. 18.—Possessors of the "Sign."
No. 19.—The Universal Missionaries.
No. 20.—Testimony of the Book of Common Prayer.
No. 21.—Church and State, and also Disestablishment.
No. 22.—Our Poor Laws.
No. 23.—The Labour Question is an Identity Question.
No. 24.—Emigration.

Philo-Israel's Leaflets. Four pages Crown 8vo. Price 1s. 6d. per 100, postage 2d. No. 1.—"The Identity of the British with Lost Israel." 2.—"The Glory of God.' 3.—An Address to British Seamen. 4.—An Address to British Soldiers. No. 5.—The Communion of the Body and Blood of Our Lord Jesus Christ Viewed in the Light of Our Identity. 6.—The Bible and the Jew. 7.—The Jewish People. 8.—Lo-Ammi; or, the Gentilisation of Ten-Tribed Israel. 9.—The Atonement. 10.—Is Our Identity Evangelical, or Non-Evangelical in its Tendency? No. 11.—Cui Bono? No. 12.—The "Thoughts" of God Towards Israel, Judah, and the Gentile Nations. 13.—The Teutonic Theory—Is It True? 14.—An Address to the Police Force of Great Britain. 15.—An Address to Israel's Missionaries and Their Supporters. 16.—The One Seed, Christ. 17.—An Address to Israel's Electors. Price 1s. 6d. per 100.

An Elementary Digest or Sketch of the Chief Facts and Teachings of the Great Pyramid of Egypt. Adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific 56 pages, Illustrated with Diagrams, price 4d., post free 5d. 10th Thousand.

The Geography of the Gates. With Map and six full page, and one double-page, Illustrations, printed on plate paper. 208 pages, in handsome cloth, gilt Price 3s. 6d., post free 3s. 10d.

Now Ready, Price 8s., in Handsome Blue Cloth.

THE NEW VOLUME
OF THE
BANNER OF ISRAEL
(VOL. X.)

A most suitable present to a Town Hall or Local Library. Sure to prove of great interest and be the means of introducing Our Identity to the notice of a numerous class of intelligent readers and students. Should be in every Bible-student's Library.

May be ordered of any bookseller, or sent direct from the Publishers on receipt of remittance for 8/-.

R. BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.
F. W. PARRY & Co., 29, Paternoster-row.

BY REV. HENRY ROE.

(Fifteenth Thousand).

1. Israel's World. Origin and Destiny of British Race, Colonies, and Empire. 2d., post free 2½d. "Worthy of a world-wide circulation."—H. B. Thompson, Association Sec. 50 post free from H. Roe for 4s. 9d.
2. Going to Africa. 1s., post free 1s. 1d.
3. Fernando Po Mission. 1s., post free 1s. 1d.
4. West African Scenes. 2s., post free 2s. 2d.
5. Consecration. 2d., post free 2½d.

50 post free from H. Roe for 4s. 9d.

No. 1 is published by R. Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.; Nos. 1 and 5 by E. Stock, 62, Paternoster-row, E.C.; and all by Rev. H. Roe, Dawley, Salop.

ISRAEL IN THE NEW TESTAMENT
OR,
Proofs of the National Conversion of the Ten Tribes to Christianity.

By SURGEON-GENERAL J. M. GRANT, M.D.
Author of "Jeshurun," etc.

Price 4d., post free, 4½d.; 12 Copies, post free, 4s.
London: R. Banks and Son, Racquet Court, Fleet St., and by order of all Booksellers.

The Identity Demonstrated

See new book by the Rev. R. DOUGLAS, M.A.
(Vicar of Kidsgrove, Stoke-on-Trent), entitled,
Ephraim-England.

PRICE 4s., Cloth Gilt.

London: Sold by R. Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C., who will forward a copy free on receipt of P.O.

Second Edition, just published. Price 8d., by post 10d.; Two Copies, 1s 6d.

Can now be had mounted on linen, and varnished, price 2/-, by post 2/3.

✣ A Chronological and ✣ ✣ Geographical Tree, ✣

Showing the Development of the British Power and the Affinity of the British Nation with the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel, with Scriptural Quotations.

This attractive illustration of a Tree, showing all the Dependencies of the British Nation, has been re-drawn and corrected up to date of issue, July, 1886. There is also a Table showing the Area and Population of the various countries. This Chart should be had by every Identity believer, as it will prove most useful in attracting the attention of strangers to the subject; also for creating an interest in towns where Lectures on the subject of the Identity and the Empire of Great Britain are to be delivered. A Reduction will be made for quantities.

☞ Be particular to order the Revised Edition, 1886.

Printed and Published by ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet Court, Fleet Street, E.C.

Knight & Forster's Pens

KNIGHT & FORSTER LEEDS. Broad Point. 3/- PER GROSS " ¼ "
University Pen
2/- PER GROSS KNIGHT & FORSTER LEEDS.
Ledger Pen Fine Point
LONDON—STRAKER & SONS. 124 FENCHURCH ST
or post free direct from the Makers
Basinghall Works Leeds

CASES FOR BINDING VOL. X.

ARE NOW READY,

Price 1s. 6d., post free 1s. 8d.

Robert Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

LUNG OWBRIDGE'S TONIC
LUNG LUNG TONIC, TONIC
LUNG THE MIGHTY HEALER. TONIC
LUNG Save Your Lives by Taking TONIC
LUNG OWBRIDGE'S LUNG TONIC. TONIC
LUNG It has a power over diseases hitherto TONIC
LUNG unknown in Medicine. TONIC
LUNG Are you at all Weak-chested or inclined TONIC
LUNG to be Consumptive, with just a touch of TONIC
LUNG Cough now and then? TONIC
LUNG "Try this Wonderful Medicine." The TONIC
LUNG Cough and Weakness will disappear as TONIC
LUNG if by magic, and you will feel a strength TONIC
LUNG and power you never had before. TONIC
LUNG HAVE YOU A COUGH? TONIC
LUNG A DOSE WILL RELIEVE IT. TONIC
LUNG HAVE YOU A COLD? TONIC
LUNG A DOSE AT BEDTIME WILL TONIC
LUNG REMOVE IT. TONIC
LUNG Bronchitis & Asthma it relieves instantly TONIC
LUNG The Spasms of Coughing so dreadful in TONIC
LUNG Whooping Cough become less with each dose TONIC
LUNG of the medicine. — TONIC
LUNG Prepared by W. T. OWBRIDGE, Chemist, Hull TONIC
LUNG Sold in Bottles 1s. 1½*d.*, 2s. 9*d.*, 4s. 6*d.* & TONIC
LUNG 11s. by all Chemists and Patent Medicine TONIC
LUNG Vendors. Wholesale all London and TONIC
LUNG Provincial Houses. TONIC

A BOON TO SUFFERERS!!

HARNESS' ELECTROPATHIC BELT CURES Gout, Rheumatism, Lumbago, Sciatica, Epilepsy, Indigestion, Constipation, Liver and Kidney Complaints, Ladies' Ailments, Nervousness, Neuralgia, General and Local Debility, etc.

HARNESS' ELECTROPATHIC BELT

NEVER FAILS to promote HEALTH, STRENGTH, AND VITAL ENERGY; therefore it will pay you to procure one without delay.

NERVOUSNESS CURED.

Every man and woman suffering from any disorder of the Nerves, Stomach, Liver, or Kidneys, should at once stop physicing, and send a P.O.O. or cheque for 21s., for HARNESS' ELECTROPATHIC BELT (post free) and obtain immediate relief. Pamphlet and Book of Testimonials post free. THE MEDICAL BATTERY CO. (LTD.),
52, OXFORD STREET, London, W.
(CORNER OF RATHBONE PLACE.)

THE TEETH, THE TEETH, THOSE PRECIOUS TEETH!

Save, Purify, Beautify.

GEORGE & WELCH'S
CARBOLINE

1/6 (TOOTH PASTE). 2/6 per Pot.

Is the Best Known
Cleanser, Preserver, and Deodoriser.

Dental Guide says:—"No Tooth application equals the Carbolics."

Proprietors: GEORGE & WELCH, Worcester.

Through Chemists, or Post Free from Makers.

ETHELINE

A New and most effective Remedy for CORNS.—Perfectly safe and harmless. Is very easily applied. Cures in a few applications, without the slightest pain. Everyone troubled with either Corns, Warts, or Bunions, will find relief by using ETHELINE. be obtained of all Chemists, or post free for 14 stamps from J. LLEWELLYN, CHEMIST, COWBRIDGE.

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. F. W. PARRY (late GUEST & Co.), 29, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, FEB. 16, 1887. [All rights reserved.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."

(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. XI., No. 530. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 23, 1887. [PRICE ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

PAGE

Will Egypt be Evacuated by Israel? 77
The Lost Tribes. By the Rev. C. Godfrey Ashwin, M.A. 78
A Lecture by the Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A., at the Guildhall, Bath 80
Captain George Palmer, R.N., Rejoins 81
Prophecy and Imperial Federation. By W. H. Mason.—Part I. 82
The Identity at Clapham 83
Australian Testimony to the BANNER OF ISRAEL 83

WILL EGYPT BE EVACUATED BY ISRAEL?

THE debate on the Amendment to the Address, moved by Mr. Cremer, in the House of Commons, on Feb. 4th, regarding the subject of the immediate evacuation of Egypt, which the mover recommended, collapsed by reason of its rejection by 263 votes to 97. The Government's policy therefore triumphed, and the British will not forthwith evacuate that country, as Mr. Cremer and his supporters wished. There is no doubt, however, that all parties in the House of Commons desire that the occupation by our nation's troops should not be continual. All desire it to terminate when it can safely be brought to an end.

"The Government," said Sir J. Fergusson, "had no desire to perpetuate the occupation; but were bound not to abandon their task till we had made its fruits secure and enduring." What, however, is the object this country has at heart in remaining in Egypt? Sir J. Fergusson stated it clearly. It was, he said, "to improve the Egyptian Administration, to ameliorate the condition of the people, to make the army and navy effective; in fact, to retire when a real native Government has been created and set to work." We have been employed on this task since 1882, or for about four years. What has been our progress? Is there such a Government of native officials in sight? The Times declares, and no doubt truly, that "there do not now exist the very elements of such a Government." If the "very elements" do not exist, after four years of earnest effort, how many decades will be needed to make the elements in question appear? There would be hope, it seems, if we had a free hand, and other rival nations, such as the French, did not systematically oppose us in our endeavours to benefit the Egyptian people. Thus the Corvée, or system of compulsory labour, is a decided national abuse and disgrace. It ought to be abolished, and would be swept away to-morrow by us if we were at liberty to abolish it. A decree abolishing it has been prepared, and it was said the French had no objection to the Act. But "the French Government finds itself supported by the Russians, and refuses to consent. Sixty thousand fellaheen, therefore, are to be taken from their fields to be subjected to the cruelties of forced labour. They must sacrifice their crops and the country generally, and suffer great hardships and miseries," because the French have a voice in the finances of Egypt, and are angry because the "Egyptian (and British) Government declines to appoint a Frenchman as Procureur-Générale." The impediments cast in our way by the French, then, constitute one of the reasons why we cannot give Egypt a good native Government, and why, therefore, our task being unfulfilled, we cannot evacuate Egypt.

Meanwhile it was abundantly shown during the debate that the British Government has done great things for the country, and for the Egyptians in general. "Justice was purer, crime less, the prisons reformed, the finances improved. Irrigation has been immensely extended, and the amelioration of the condition of the Egyptian fellaheen largely carried out. The cost to this country of the occupation is large, but is being lessened by the reduction of the army of occupation from 11,000 last May to 9,000 in the autumn of 1886, and to 5,000 very shortly; rendering the cost to the British Exchequer only £50,000 a year for the future. All these reasons doubtless combine to make it very desirable that the occupation should cease without delay. But the difficulty always arises which chains us to the spot, as God no doubt meant it to do—namely, if we leave the country, what will follow? Revolution certainly, and the occupation of Egypt by the French on the plea that they must carry out the task we failed to effect, by annexing the country, or assuming its protectorate, as Tunis has been included in their Empire, and Algeria annexed. Such results we cannot for a moment permit, and therefore we shall doubtless remain in Egypt till our work is done. This is the nett result of the debate which ended on the 4th February in the House of Commons. It seems to us to point to a conclusion we have long arrived at—namely, that God means us to stay in Egypt, and that when Mr. Gladstone, over and over again, and Lord Hartington often, announced the resolve of this country to give up Egypt and retire, God as often sent us events which stopt the execution of their plans.

Now, again, the Conservative Government are equally resolved that out of Egypt they must and will go, when they can; and no doubt, as time goes on, we shall see that events will bar our way and prevent it. One speaker, Mr. Redmond, in the late debate, openly charged the Government with desiring "to kindle a war between France and Germany, so that Britain might annex Egypt!" "He was bound to say," he added, "that it looked very like it." We believe that, while this is a libel upon our nation, it seems very possible that the coming wars in Europe will have the effect Mr. Redmond mentioned. We believe the gigantic war now at hand will brush away many a fallacy, and put things in their true light. Then it will be seen that, since India, Australasia, the Cape Colonies, and the Gates of the world generally, are in British hands, the protection of our trade routes through the Red Sea and the Mediterrannean require our continued occupation also of the land of Egypt to safeguard those routes.

Digitized by Google

The original gift of God to the seed of Abraham included, as one of its boundaries, the river of Egypt. "Unto thy seed have I given this land, from the river of Egypt unto the great river, the river Euphrates," was the covenant God made with His friend, as Gen. xv. 18 declares. Now the "river of Egypt" was not "the brook of Egypt," "the Rhinocorura" of ancient days, the Wady-el-Arish of modern times, but "the Nahar," or "flowing river," the Nile. In Joshua xiii. 3 the Lord described this boundary as "the Sihor," the dark, turbid, black, river Nile, and a reference to Isa. xxiii. 3 (R.V.), as well as to Jer. ii. 18 (R.V.) will prove that "the Sihor" was the Scriptural name of the deep, dark, turbid Nile, but not of the dry brook, or Wady, in which no water ever flows. The Nile being, then, our boundary, the land of Goshen, Middle Egypt, and the country about Cairo and Assouan, also the Delta, it seems to us, are to be our future possession. This fact seems to point to our continued occupation of the land of Egypt to-day, or at any rate to our protectorate thereof, as the blessed and blessing nation, "the third with Egypt and Assyria," which is the subject of Isaiah's glorious prophecy in chapter xix. 24, 25.

THE LOST TRIBES.

By the Rev. C. Godfrey Ashwin, M.A.

All who read the extremely interesting article in the January number of the Churchman on this subject, must have been struck with the calmness and reasonableness of the manner in which it was treated, even if they were not convinced that the author had succeeded in establishing his three theses. The fact that a large and rapidly increasing number of thoughtful students of Holy Scripture and history are convinced that the theory which identifies the English people with the Ten Tribes does not rest on a "baseless" foundation, makes a calm consideration of it a duty on the part of those who believe in the inspiration of Holy Scriptures, and the dangers arising from misinterpretation of it, and the blessings arising from any fresh light which increased knowledge throws upon it. On this account it is to be regretted that prophecy, which plays so important a part in the Sacred Volume, and is so permeated with the future history of those of whom the prophets wrote, should be excluded from our consideration of the subject, for divine prophecy is history written in advance.

But the object of this paper is to endeavour to prove that, historically, the writer has not demonstrated the truth of his conclusions. Too much stress cannot be laid on the fact, so properly emphasised, that if the Tribes of Israel are still in existence—in the knowledge we possess of the inhabitants of the world in the present day—they cannot be hidden, but must be incog. Let us keep this fact before us in our studies of Scripture and modern history. The statement that "racial identity" could not be maintained amongst a people who had changed their religion and their language, is not conclusive. It is quite conceivable that people who had done both of these things, should yet tenaciously cling to intermarriage amongst their clans, and so strictly maintain their "racial identity," and if the family pride of the Maygars has had much to do with maintaining the purity of their race, the family pride of the Israelites, even after, firstly, their lapse into heathenism, and secondly, the loss of their language in the countries of their captivity, would be likely to have had a still greater influence upon them than on the Maygars.

The first point Dr. Willoughby tried to establish was, that the separation of the two kingdoms of Judah and Israel was never so complete as is commonly supposed. Scripture history must answer this, and it would be difficult to imagine any more absolute, national, racial separation than is there recorded. The national severance between the United States of America and the empire kingdom of Great Britain, is not more distinct. A revolution on the part of ten-twelfths of the Israelites from the remaining two (1 Kings xii. 20—24), the establishment of two distinct capitals, two distinct governments, a distinction maintained, notwithstanding the many dynasties which occupied the throne of Israel; alternate wars and treaties of peace between the two kingdoms, now at enmity with one another, now combining together to promote some common political object, and this continued until the Ten-Tribed kingdom had ceased to exist altogether, seems conclusive that the national severance was absolute. The argument from the existence of a small portion of the Tribe of Dan in this Southern kingdom does not militate against this, for it is plain from the very expression "from Dan even to Beersheba," that the tribe had selected, as their family home, the Northern part of the kingdom. Simeon, too, was—if I may be allowed to quote prophecy—scattered throughout the other tribes (Gen. xlix. 7), and under these circumstances the comparatively few of these tribes in the South would naturally nationally be incorporated into the kingdom of Judah, the surplus population of which tribe would, as naturally, occupy their districts. Thesis (1) therefore, is not proved.

(2). With regard to the extent of the deportation of the Israelites into Assyria, the writer of the paper admits that the trans-Jordanic tribes were removed, and the land became occupied by heathen, and the by no means insignificant, contiguous territory of Naphtali, was also depopulated by the victorious Tiglath-Pileser; and, as Kedesh is especially mentioned as one of the towns captured by him, it is a fair inference that he over-run and carried away the inhabitants of all the Northern districts East of the coast-land of Asher, that is, about one-third of the whole of Israel, West of the Jordan. As to the inhabitants of the coast-line, if we have no historical record of their deportation into Assyria, we have strong reason for concluding they escaped from the conquering host by sea. On a former occasion, of much less danger, we have a record that they temporarily availed themselves of this mode of escape (Judges v. 17).* The land was over-run by their enemies; the prospect of commerce was at an end. Familiar with other countries, and possessing the means of going to them, their commercial instincts would lead them to migrate and seek a fresh permanent home.

The invasion of Shalmaneser, twenty years after that of Tiglath-Pileser, practically removed the rest of the inhabitants of Israel, for the writer, in his interesting reference to the mission of Hezekiah to endeavour to turn the "remnant" (2 Chron. xxx. 6) that Tiglath-Pileser had left, overlooks the fact that this mission of Hezekiah's was before the invasion of Shalmaneser. A comparison of 2 Kings xviii. and 2 Chron. xxx. proves this. In 2 Kings xviii. 1. we read that it was in the third year of Hoshea, king of Israel, that Hezekiah began his reign. In 2 Chron. xxix. 3, we read that it was in his first year he commenced his great reformation; and the subsequent history shews that it was pursued with the greatest energy and

* Bishop Ken gives the sense of this verse so far as it relates to the maritime tribes in these words, "Dan! why abode he in ships? Asher! continued in the harbour of the seas."

Digitized by Google

rapidity to prepare his own people of Judah, and those who could be persuaded from amongst the grievously idolatrous kingdom of Israel, to keep the next passover according to the divine appointment. "The posts," therefore, that passed from city to city, through the country of Ephraim and Manasseh, even to Zebulun" (and this marks the extent of the kingdom that had been depopulated by Tiglath-Pileser), "even to Zebulun," were sent out in the first year of Hezekiah, in the third year of Hoshea. It was a last message of divine mercy to the remnant that was left. And, as in the days of Ahab, God had reserved to Himself 7,000 men who had not bowed down to Baal, so there was a remnant now; "many of Ephraim, and Manasseh, and Issachar, and Zebulun," but not all, or, as the language seems to intimate, anything like the majority of these tribes, for ver. 11 describes them as "divers of Asher, and Manasseh, and Zebulun humbled themselves and came to Jerusalem." Then, three years afterwards, in the sixth year of Hoshea, Shalmaneser "came up throughout all the land,"* and besieged during three years, and finally took Samaria (2 Kings xvii. 5). The expression involves what we should have expected. During three years, while the siege force was occupied with Samaria, bands of soldiers were carrying on the conquest of the country, as bands of the Germans were occupied in France, while the main body was engaged in the capture of Paris. This adds force to the expression quoted in the note, page 197 of the Churchman (2 Kings xvii. 18), "that none were left but the Tribe of Judah only." Surely this is a positive statement of an inspired scribe, that certain men, Assyrians, did a certain thing, and removed certain people from certain places, and these people constituted, nationally, the Ten Tribes of Israel, who were removed to certain places, as Dr. Willoughby admits, note page 197, "the mountains of Media and Assyria." But though the statement is so distinct that it must be taken in a broad and full sense, in the light of what follows it must be subject to some limitation. What is it? That a remnant of the Ten Tribes was left in Palestine, while, nationally, the Israelites were carried away, and we have no historic record that they ever returned. Who were the remnant, and what became of them? The history we possess is a grand, comprehensive, short summary of great events, and we are compelled, in entering into details, to fill up many blanks according to our ability, no doubt to some extent influenced by previous conclusions, not to say prejudices. But we have analogy to guide us.

We know that when the separation of Israel from Judah took place, in the time of Rehoboam, certain of the Israelites elected to reside in Judah and continue the worship of the Lord God of Israel, according to His own appointment, and became virtually incorporated into the Tribe and kingdom of Judah (2 Chron. xi, 16. and xxxi. 6). What more probable than that the believing Israelites, in the time of Hezekiah, when the foretold invasion became a reality, and knowing what the issue must be, should flee to Judah for safety, and, when the conquerors had withdrawn, return to their desolated homes, and retaining their ancestral faith, became subject to their ancient line of kings, who would naturally, as far as they could, resume the rule over the whole country. Hence Josiah's laudable journey to remove the altar of Bethel, and the high places of the cities of Samaria (2 Kings xxiii. 15—19.) Why did he not proceed further North, even to the altar that was in Dan? Because his rule did not extend so far, and, possibly, there were no Israelites there. But the paucity of the inhabitants, at any rate, in the time of Hezekiah, is witnessed by the lions which devastated the country (2 Kings xvii. 26), and the fact that the king of Assyria sent one of the priests who had been taken to Assyria, to teach the heathen he had planted in Samaria, "the manner of the God of the land," also suggests that they could not obtain this knowledge from any Israelitish neighbours.

It is also noteworthy that, in Josiah's mission, little is said of the inhabitants. There were Israelites there, who explained the title on the tomb of the man of God, who foretold his mission, and whom he commanded to keep the passover (2 Kings xxiii. 15, 19, 21). But I conclude that these were the descendants of the remnant who were left in the time of Hezekiah, and, consequently also, that Dr. Willoughby did not substantiate his second thesis—but that the majority which continued to represent the nation were carried away.

The third thesis is almost entirely involved in the conclusions from the second, and what the writer admits respecting the Babylonish captivity. For it is admitted that the brunt of Nebuchadnezzar's vengeance and the deportation which followed, was confined to the territory of Judah and Benjamin. And the restoration recorded in Ezra and Nehemiah is carefully limited to the descendants of those taken captive by Nebuchadnezzar, and the genealogies given do not include any of the families of the Ten Tribes of Israel. That the name Israel should afterwards be generally used does not imply a fusion of the Tribes. Judah was as much an Israelite as Ephraim, though the Ephraimites could not be Jews. But now that the Jewish branch of the family were the principal, if not the only recognised descendants of the Patriarchs in the promised land, the cherished covenant name was adopted, as it was no longer necessary to distinguish between the two kingdoms, and in the admitted fact that in the time of the Maccabees the inhabitants of Galilee were almost exclusively Gentiles, that in the time of Ezra, supposing him to have written 1 Chron. v. 26, he believed the captive Israelites were still in the place of their exile, that Josephus regarded them as still existing, an immense multitude, not to be estimated by numbers, beyond the Euphrates, and in the absence of historic proof that the Galileans of the Gospel history were descendants of Naphtali, Ephraim, and Manasseh, the third thesis seems to me not to be proven.

The habitual use of the word Jew in the book of Esther seems to indicate the very opposite conclusion from that the writer derives from it, and is very important. In the face of Ezra and Nehemiah, no one has ever attempted to maintain that all the Jews returned under their auspices, but that the majority remained in their new settlements. Now, those referred to in Esther viii. 9, still adhered, as far as they could, to the rites, ceremonies, and observances of the Abrahamic and Mosaic covenant, and the worship of Jehovah. But the Israelites of the captivity did neither one nor the other, so far as we know. In their own land they had cast off all allegiance to Him, and lapsed into the most open and avowed Baal worship. They had rejected God's statutes and His covenants (2 Kings xvii. 15.). Ephraim was joined unto idols, and, as we are confined strictly to history, there is no trace of evidence that they had repented and become subject to God's statutes, and obedient to His covenant. The use of the word Jew, therefore, in Esther, is emphatic, and the writer used the distinctive title with a definite purpose, to mark them out from the Israelites, who, having rejected the covenant, and also discarded the sign of the covenant, were to the Jews, in those days, "as the uncircumcised," and, unless evidence to the contrary is forthcoming, probably remain so to this day.

While the writer has wholly failed to substantiate his theses, the conclusion of the paper is based on hypotheses, not history. Suppose that we grant that the Nestorians are Beni-Israel—that the Affghans are so also—that the Syrian Christians of India, &c., &c., are also branches of the great family of Israel—would their number, collectively, at all represent the whole progeny of prolific Israel? The fact that the Nestorians have strong Jewish features, and some of them pride themselves on clinging to the Abrahamic covenant, favours the idea that they are of Jewish, not Israelitish origin. Why! the number of those who are called Jews are estimated at from seven millions upwards, and there is solid ground for believing their numbers are always understated by themselves, and these descended from a remnant 1800 years ago. How vastly greater, according to all human experience, must the descendants of the Ten Tribes be! and if certain members of the Sephardim Jews look with contempt upon their Ashkenazim brethren, and deem them Galileans, does this outweigh the united testimony of Sephardim and Ashkenazim alike for 1800 years, as still witnessed week by week throughout the world, that they deem the Ten Tribes still lost—lost to knowledge, and lost to God, and pray for their restoration and conversion?

* Gesenius, on the Hebrew word translated "all," gives (1) All, thus, every man, all animals, &c. (2) Every one. (3) The whole, and adds a note when used in this comprehensive way; it is followed by the article, as is the case in this passage.

Digitized by Google

But that I fear to make this paper too long, I would have added reasons for my own conclusion that the Ten Tribes are no longer hidden, nor ought to be altogether incog.

NOTE.—The above was sent to the Churchman, but declined in consequence of pressure of other matter.—C. G. A.

A LECTURE BY THE REV. C. W. HICKSON, M.A., AT THE GUILDHALL, BATH.

ON January 22nd, 1887, at three o'clock, the Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A., of Bristol, delivered an address on the subject, "What the Scriptures say regarding Israel." Surgeon-General J. M. Grant, M.D., took the chair, and the Rev. E. J. Wemyss Whittaker, M.A., Colonel Thompson, Philo-Israel, and others were present and took part in the proceedings.

The rev. lecturer said that a relation of his own, Dr. E. Willoughby, had published in the Churchman for December, 1886, an article which attempted to cut the ground from under Anglo-Israelites by asking the question, "Were the Ten Tribes ever lost?" and answering the same in the negative. Dr. Willoughby got rid of the difficulty by refusing all appeal to prophecy, and declaring that as the Ten Tribes were partly merged in the surrounding heathen, and were partly to be found to-day among the Nestorians, the Afghans and other extant races, they could not be said to be "lost" at all. The prophecies of the living God, however, cannot be so repudiated or put aside in a case of this kind, where the people of God are concerned, and these flatly contradict Dr. Willoughby. He says that if the Ten Tribes, by losing their language and religion, are merged in other nations, they can never be recovered or restored; but Amos ix. 9 tells us, in contradiction of Dr. Willoughby: "For lo! I will command, and I will sift the House of Israel among all the nations, like as corn is sifted in a sieve, yet shall not the least grain fall upon the earth." The Tribes are never to be so lost or merged finally among the nations, as to make their recovery impossible to the power of God.

God's promises, the lecturer went on to say, applied to the whole Twelve Tribes of the children of Israel in perpetuity. There was to be no gap or hiatus in that condition. They were to be always blessed. If we find, therefore, that at any time some of the Tribes are visited with God's wrath, anger, and curse, it is absolutely certain, as God is true, that the rest of the Tribes, or a portion of them, must be at that very time under the divine blessing to fulfil the prophecies.

The Christian Dispensation is the time of God's manifest blessing to the world. It is absurd then to recognise that fact, and at the same time to say that the race which God specially marked out for blessing in perpetuity, is the only one then excluded from it, as some of our opponents allege, and as Dr. Willoughby maintains to be the case. On the contrary, because God declared that Israel were "His witness that He is God" (Isaiah xliii. 10, 12), it stands to reason that during this witnessing dispensation, some of the Tribes of Israel must be testifying for Christ. Since the Jews are not witnessing for Him, the Ten Tribes, or House of Joseph, that is, Ephraim, must be Christian in religion, and foremost witnesses for God that He has sent His Son to save the world. Let us look now, said the lecturer, at some of the Scriptures that relate to the Ten Tribes only, exclusive of the Jews or Judah. Gen. xlix. 22 to 26 is such a passage. This scripture can have its fulfilment only in "the latter days," as verse 1 shows, and "the latter days" are our times, or the Christian Dispensation. In this chapter are predictions of blessings to be enjoyed by the Tribes under their distinct appellations separately, and must have their fulfilments before Christ's second coming; because then the Thirteen Tribes will be re-united, and will share and share alike in all the covenanted benedictions and blessings promised by God to our forefathers. This chapter (Gen. xlix.) contains a list of pure unalloyed blessings, and no curses appear here at all. They were none of them fulfilled in the House of Joseph, when in their own land, before the first advent, and those allotted to Joseph bear a most striking resemblance to the blessings we British, as a nation, now enjoy in this our land. The lecturer then read Deut. xxxiii. 13, 17, and pointed out that the blessings here enumerated were also to be Joseph's, while in a state of separation from his brethren (ver. 16). They were never the portion of that Tribe in the times of the occupation of Palestine under Joshua and afterwards. They must therefore be fulfilled or under fulfilment now. No one can doubt that verse 17 exactly corresponds with the colonising history of our own country to-day. For with our horns—or our military power—"we push the peoples all of them, even the ends of the earth," and in our huge Empire we enjoy the precious things of heaven, of the dew, of the deep, the chief things of the ancient mountains, and of the everlasting hills, the coals, the mines of gold, and silver, and diamonds, and rubies, and the pearls of the sea banks of those fisheries off Ceylon, and off Australia too. But let us look, said the lecturer, to the passages wherein promises were made to Ephraim only. Gen. xlviii. 19 is the key to them all. Manasseh and Ephraim, Joseph's sons, were blessed by Jacob, their grandfather; and we find that to the younger son was given a remarkable blessing. His offspring were to become Gentiles, non-Israelites, to all appearance, but by them the world was to be "filled up" with inhabitants. These were to be outside the Abrahamic stock and land. This "fulness" was to take place under Christ, and would cease when Christ came, for then this prophecy would be fulfilled in them. Then "the hardness in part" which was to happen to Israel or the Jews would pass away, and "so all Israel would be saved" (Rom. xi. 25, 26.) We must find Ephraim, then, to-day under Christ, a Christian people—"Sons of the living God" (Hosea i. 10.)—ostensibly Gentile, non-Israelites, of a Japhetic, Gomerian race; yet blessed of God as "the fulness of the Gentiles," who were "to fill the earth" with blessings from on high, according to the prophecies.

Jer. xxxi. 6 to 9, R.V., said Mr. Hickson, is another prophecy applicable only to Ephraim. That race only is the subject of the context—"Sing for gladness for Jacob; and shout at the head of the "chief of the nations," is the divine command. Is the Afghan race "the chief of the nations?" or the Nestorians? Are they "the chief?" Ephraim is the chief of the nations! and therefore in this passage "Jacob" represents "Ephraim," the British, who are "chief of the nations." They are to be brought at the restoration from "the North Country," where we are, as "God's first-born," accounted the elder instead of Manasseh, in "the latter days," our times. The 8th verse announces that Ephraim shall be then a multitudinous race, as always throughout their career; occupying "the coasts of the earth," "the North country," and "the isles of the sea"—showing, from this and other scriptures, that the nation of Ephraim in the latter days, or times, would be found to be an "island" Empire, "the chief of nations," occupying "the ends and coasts of the earth," a maritime, colonising race.

The lecturer then rapidly passed in review the verses of Hosea xiv., declaring they presented a very accurate picture of the British nation as Israel; both materially and spiritually considered; depicting our rapid growth in population, power, colonies, influence, religious knowledge, evangelistic effort, and Bible circulation. Zech. x. was read and commented on. The passage (ver. 6 to 10) proved the scriptural distinction between Israel and Judah, that the House of Joseph had been "cast off," but was still under blessing, even in that adverse position, with a prospect of a glorious future. They were to be "sown" by God in mercy among the peoples; and "in far countries" would be found "remembering God," living with their children "and turning 'again' to the Lord;" facts pointing to the wide Colonial Empire of a people Christian in character, and believers nationally in the Lord Jesus Christ (ver. 9.) They were to be also a people "strengthened by Jehovah, and walking up and down in His name" (ver. 12); words which state as plainly as they can that the "House of Joseph" would be found at last a Christian people, serving Christ, their Lord.

Digitized by Google

The lecturer finally drew attention to Hosea i. as an epitome of the whole subject, and concluded an able and exhaustive address by saying that this chapter proved how erroneous were our opponents' teaching who denied the separate careers of the Two Houses, Israel and Judah; and affirmed that Israel was destroyed from off the face of the earth, and would never be heard of again as "the people of the Lord."

A vote of thanks was passed by acclamation to the rev. lecturer for his able address—after some remarks by the chairman, and also by Philo-Israel. The latter drew attention to Gen. xxviii. 12—14, as showing, in confirmation of the lecturer's address, that God had predicted the history of our race to-day, showing that it would be a wonderfully increasing one, "spreading abroad" in a phenomenal manner to the West first (in America); to the East next (in India); to the North (in Rupert's land); and to the South last (in Australasia and South Africa)—their final condition, leading to the return of the Tribes, being that the nation (Joseph) so multiplied and blessed, and spread abroad, would carry the gospel of the grace of God in Christ Jesus," to all the nations, to all the families, and to all the kindreds of the earth." No other nation, since time began, said the speaker, had done these three things in this consecutive order, but the British, Anglo-Saxon, Israelite nation, to which we belong, and therefore, he argued, we are and must be—"Israel."

CAPTAIN GEO. PALMER, R.N., REJOINS.

SIR,—I have to thank you for sending me the BANNER OF ISRAEL for Jan. 19 and 26, containing your review of my pamphlet. There is one statement you make which I think necessary to set you right upon—namely, that in which you instance the Huguenots, expelled from France 200 years ago, having forgotten their language, and their descendants living in Spitalfields, as a convincing proof that a people can lose their language by racial contact. You seem, however, to forget that their names betray them.

If I found John Smith and his family located in the heart of Tartary, and speaking the dialect of the Ugro-Ostiakes, I should, notwithstanding that circumstance, know that they came originally from England. Wah-ro-nee-sah, living in Paris, and speaking the purest Parisian, could, nevertheless, be traced back to his ancestral prairies in North America. In like manner, it would be easy to trace Sjarsuddaulus and his family back to their primitive home in North-eastern Asia, though residing in New York, and speculating daily in Wall-street.

I do not pretend to know where Israel is, but the Bible tells me they will be gathered from "all countries." It is better to be content with what God says by the mouth of His servant Jeremiah, "He that scattered Israel will gather him" (Jer. xxxi. 10); which He will do in His own way when the time comes.

Your concluding remarks relative to salvation, seem to me to savour of serious error, inasmuch as they tend to place the belief in the Anglo-Israel theory as necessary to salvation. You say my explanation of the matter is "revolting to every true Christian," but what can be more revolting than anything placed in the room of Christ and His finished salvation? "Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ" (1 Cor. iii. 11).

I am sadly afraid that your theory has blinded your eyes to this fact. Let me, therefore, remind you, "There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female; for ye are all one in Christ Jesus. And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise" (Gal. iii. 28, 29).

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

GEO. PALMER, Captain, R.N.

Ryde, Jan. 28, 1887.

NOTE BY THE EDITOR.

We do not usually allow an author, whose work has been reviewed in the BANNER, to return to the charge and seek to have the last word. Captain Palmer, R.N., has, however, favoured us with the above letter; not conceived, perhaps, in the best spirit or taste; which is of the character we have described. But as he evidently thinks there is a weak point in our armour, and wishes now to expose it, we have no objection to his bringing the matter publicly forward in the columns of the BANNER, on the understanding that we shall point out the poverty of this fresh attempt to discredit our arguments in favour of the Identity.

Captain Palmer considers that because some French names linger yet in Spitalfields (as we admit) that therefore he has obtained a triumph, since these names would betray the nationality of the owners. Of course, this does not exactly follow. But we must remind Captain Palmer that the argument respecting Israel, as he put it originally, related to the philological question only, and had nothing to do with the individual names of the persons speaking what he calls an Aryan tongue, who could not, therefore, he declared, be racially of Semitic origin. The question was whether in modern times we have a case which is on all fours with that of the British-Israelites, who, we maintain, by contact with the Aryans, have lost their own Semitic language and acquired the Aryan or Gothic speech, which is their present vernacular. How is it that Captain Palmer does not see that the survival of a few French names does not vitiate our argument in the least, but rather strengthens it? We prove that French families, whose names still may possibly betray their origin, are so entirely changed in language, manners, customs, and physique, that they are absolutely undistinguishable now in these respects (after only 200 years contact with Londoners) from the inhabitants of the city where they dwell.

If Captain Palmer will submit to the test as to the names of our people and their identity with those of our Hebrew forefathers, as proof of our origin, we can supply him with scores of such which are pure Hebrew to-day, and should satisfy him that our British folk are Israel. He would know John Smith, he says, to be an Englishman, even if he were located in Tartary and spoke Ugro-Ostiak only. But why will not the argument hold good when he finds up and down this country surnames by thousands which are scriptural and Hebrew, and yet used by British families. Such, for example, are Abdy, Abel, Acker, Adam, Ami, Arden, Asher, Balam, Benn, Boaz, Brahan, Cannon, Claudi, Dann, Elam, Ely, Eden, Gershon, Gad, Hanan, Heber, Heman, Hozah, Hosi, Hull, Isaac, Job, Joel, Jonathan, John, Jude, Kish, Oram, Oshea, Obed, Rachael, Reu, Ram, and so on through the whole alphabet!

"John Smith," in Tartary, if he have forgotten English and can speak nothing but Ugro-Ostiak, as the result of only 200 years contact, is an excellent illustration of our argument, and proves that Our Identity is not discredited by philology. We wonder Captain Palmer has fallen into so palpable an error on this point as he has done. Captain Palmer's argument as to matters connected with salvation are of the tu quoque order. We implored him to beware of views which sacrificed God's truth and faithfulness, assuring him that he thus prejudiced God's promises in Christ, and served the cause of the infidel and atheist. Captain Palmer does not refute that argument in the least; but simply tells us that our "eyes are blinded" to the "only foundation which can be laid—namely, Jesus Christ;" and that we place "Anglo-Israel belief as necessary to salvation," "in the room of Christ and His finished work." Our only answer to such a statement is that nothing of the sort appears in our review, or can be gathered therefrom; but that the gloss on our words is the creation of Captain Palmer's own brain, but not otherwise. No one doubts that "if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise;" also that "Jesus Christ is the only foundation which can be, or is laid." But everybody must see, and we are sure Captain Palmer does too, that the reasonable trust or faith of a sinner must rest on the solid foundation of an absolutely true, faithful, and covenant as well as promise-keeping God, to enable the faith of the sinner justly to cling to and rest on the divine Saviour. Our views prove God's truth in this respect as the Promiser. Captain Palmer starts with the monstrous assertion that all God's solemn promises on oath to His chosen people Israel have been abrogated, and the blessings they were to have had have been transferred en bloc to British-Gentiles, in utter contravention of the unconditional covenants and engagements made by the Almighty with Abraham, the great forefather of the Semitic race! How Captain Palmer may persuade himself that these views of God's character are conducive to His glory we know not; but we do know that they have caused men to lapse into infidelity by thousands; and for this, among other and graver reasons, we do entreat him to repudiate and renounce them.

Digitized by Google

One word more and we have done. Captain Palmer tells us that God's Word declares Israel will yet be gathered from "all countries," and therefore presumably is not to be found massed in the British Islands. But while we also contend that this is partly so, and that the British at this very moment are scattered in all countries according to the prophecies, we beg to remind our opponent that the Scripture also tells us that Israel shall be found in "a place of her own" (2 Sam. vii. 10; Jer. iii. 18), in the "West" (Hosea xi. 10), in "isles afar off" from Jerusalem (Jer. xxxi. 10); in the "North country," or "Land of the North" (Jer. xxiii. 7, 8). "The isles" are constantly spoken of as Israel's habitat; and Captain Palmer, as a naval man, ought to know that this our own nation has for a thousand years enjoyed entire freedom from hostile attack in regard to her own home-ports, according to Isa. lx. 11; while ours is the only nation which, in all quarters of the globe, has "the possession of the Gate of her enemies," according to God's promise (on oath) to Abraham and his seed for ever, in Gen. xxii. 17. These texts suffice to identify these our "isles of the West" with Israel's House or home, the locality of "the nation" which has a "company of nations" belonging to it, North, South, East, and West, according to the prophecies (Gen. xxviii. 14; xxxv. 11).

The Rev. Herbert Marriott, who has recently returned from Jerusalem, is to lecture at Exeter Hall, London, and at Bath; full particulars will be found on our advertisement page.—The Queen' Jubilee was celebrated with great rejoicing in India, on Wednesday, the 16th inst.—Mr. Goschen writes to a correspondent that the impression that he is of Jewish descent is quite unfounded. His family has always been Protestants.

PROPHECY AND IMPERIAL FEDERATION.

By W. H. Mason.

PART I.

A Lecture, under the above title, was given on January 10th, in the Front Committee-room of the Montgomery Hall, Sheffield, by Mr. W. H. Mason, to a very appreciative audience.

The lecturer said that the subject of Imperial Federation was no new one to Anglo-Israelites. They thought that such a thing was distinctly promised by the Almighty, thousands of years ago. They looked back on the world's history and could find no record of such a thing in any past age or country. They found that mighty kings had conquered many countries and incorporated them into one Empire, but this was not the kind of thing they looked for; it was not Federation. They found instances of Federation, but not of nations, only of States. The Federation Anglo-Israelites looked for was one of distinctly separate nations of the same stock and race, such an one, in fact, as that which was now becoming such a burning question of British Imperial politics. Yea, they had long looked for and confidently expected this identical case of Federation. Their warrant for this expectation was a certain promise made 4,000 years ago to a certain man and his descendants:—"A nation and a Company of nations shall be of thee" (Gen. xxxv. 11). If any condition had been attached to this promise, the privilege might have been forfeited, but there was no condition whatever annexed; it was a free and absolute promise, which admitted of no reversal or failure on the part of a true and Almighty God. Relying, then, on the faithful word of the Almighty, Anglo-Israelites looked for the formation of a number of nations of Jacob's race, and for the union of these several nations into a community or "company of nations." Before proceeding further, said the lecturer, with our main subject, it may be as well here to note that the promise under consideration does not appear to have been a mere arbitrary one, having no further object in view than the aggrandisement of the people referred to. It indicated, rather, one of the great steps or stages of progress in God's grand and glorious scheme of salvation, and restoration to Himself of our ruined and revolted world. It had in view, and was part of, the preparation for the realisation of the Apocalyptic declaration:—"The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our God and of His Christ," which glorious consummation was to be realised through the agency of the race which was heir both of our presently considered promise and of that far greater one, "In thee and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed," of whom it was later said: "This people have I formed for Myself, they shall shew forth My praise;" and again, "The remnant of Jacob shall be in the midst of many peoples as a dew from the Lord, as showers upon the grass which tarrieth not for man, nor waiteth for the sons of men." Now, said the lecturer, seeing that we have before us a promise having such a great and glorious end and aim in view, let us consider it a little more closely, and ascertain its real meaning and design; first observing that if we are right as to the why and wherefore of this promise, then, though we need not look for worthiness, seeing that none is demanded by the promise, yet must we look for fitness and preparation for the work to be accomplished by the people who realise the promise. "A nation and a company of nations shall be of thee." This was said, not to Abraham, from whom several nations originated; nor to Isaac, the father of Israel and Edom; but to Jacob, from whom Israel alone descended. In ancient days, Jacob's children became two nations, Israel and Judah. This was not a nation and company of nations, even in numbers. It was the very opposite in sentiment. They were bitter rivals and foes—not companion nations. When the restoration of Israel takes place there is to be only one nation. No more two, still less a company of nations. This phenomenon must, then, occur in the meantime—during the period of exile—in the latter, not the last days. Do we, then, witness this promise realised by the Jews, the only popularly supposed descendants of Jacob now existing? No, decidedly not. What, then, becomes of God's promise? Let us look at another for further light:—"He also shall be a people, and he also shall be great, but truly his younger brother shall be greater than he, and shall become a multitude of nations" (Gen. xlviii. 19). This seems to carry on the "company of nations," to Ephraim, who was made heir to Joseph, in whose blessing occur these words:—"Joseph—a fruitful bough—a fruitful bough by a well—his branches (margin, daughters) run over the wall." Further, Joseph was made heir and firstborn, by God's direction, instead of Reuben. Ephraim was, then, heir to Jacob, and as such is frequently in the prophets called God's firstborn. We may therefore leave the Jews out of consideration in this matter, and look elsewhere for the "nation and company of nations." Still, we are not now seeking Israel, but when we have found the nation and company of nations, we shall at the same time have found Ephraim-Israel, as distinguished from Jewish Israel. Is there, then, anywhere in the world, any approach to that which the promise indicates? Nowhere, except in the case of our own people; but with us is the very exact thing in process of formation, and fast approaching consummation, and that in spite of the opposition of our statesmen. It has come about accidentally, as it were, without premeditation or design, on the part of Governments or peoples. Let us glance at the process and note its agreement with the prophetic announcement. Our first colony was planted nearly 300 years ago at St. John's, Newfoundland. For generations very slow and fitful progress was made with this and other colonial ventures, until the North American colonies were formed and lost. About, or soon after that same time, the great island-continent of Australia was appropriated by England, and lands and islands, in various parts of the world fell into our hands, where in subsequent years colonies were founded and settlements made, which have now grown into nations, while still continuing attached to the Mother Country. Thus is being realised the order indicated in the promise. It is evident that the mere growth of a nation and its expansion on the same continent would never form a "company" of nations. Brother Jonathan when he fills the entire continent, will still be but one nation. To form a "company" of nations of the same race, it is absolutely necessary that the children of the mother nation should leave their home and settle in other more or less distant lands—daughters who have run over the wall—and there grow up into nations, just as our colonies have done. To form a "company" they must remain, though independent, more or less attached, and to form "a nation or company of nations," they must be associated with the Mother Country and with each other, into one Federal Union of nations, with the same interests, hopes, fears, aspirations and aims, just as a commercial company, which, though the individual members are severally independent and distinct as individuals, yet, as a company, have one common interest and purpose and life. But one thing is now wanting to consummate the great and unique phenomenon, and that is the final act of Federation which is now occupying so intensely the minds of men at home and in all our colonies. As surely as all preparation has been providentially made for this great event, so surely will the event be realised, and very soon our people shall enjoy to the full, all the blessing which is enfolded in the promise to our forefather Jacob, "A nation and a company of nations shall be of thee." Mr. Mason proceeded to point out the great benefits which would follow the realisation of the promise, first to our own people individually and nationally, and then through them to the whole world. These we propose to give in a subsequent paper.

Digitized by Google

(To be continued.)

AUSTRALIAN TESTIMONY TO "THE BANNER OF ISRAEL."

We quote the following from the Gippsland Times, of Oct. 22, 1886. The paper is published at Sale, near Melbourne, and draws attention to a lecture or lectures to be given at the Christians' Chapel on the next succeeding Sundays, by Mr. D. Macallister, the subject being "Lost Israel." We publish this somewhat flattering notice of the Banner of Israel, because at home we obtain no such generous appreciation at all from opponents, and we fear but little from avowed literary friends of our cause, who apparently do not feel particularly friendly to our humble journal. The editorial summary of our "aims and objects" by our Gippsland friend is remarkably terse and concise: we recommend it to our readers at home, to note and copy

Mr. Macallister's first lecture appears to have been of a very elementary kind, and not free (as reported) from errors of fact. We hope the second, yet to come, may prove better calculated for notice in the Banner. Our quotation is as follows:—

A Lecture is to be delivered at the Christians' Chapel on Sunday evening by Mr. D. Macallister, on "Lost Israel." For some years past there has existed in England a large and highly intelligent body of Christians who believe that the English people are the heirs of all the magnificient promises of future national greatness and splendour made to the Israelitish nation of old, in virtue of their descent, and that they are in fact Anglo-Israelites. This sect, if indeed the term is applicable to a society composed of members of nearly all Christian denominations, has a journal of its own, the Banner of Israel, which is most ably and intelligently conducted, and enjoys a large circulation. In it the "Identity question," as it is called, is propounded and defended with much ability by writers of all grades of society. It must be remembered that the party is composed of orthodox Christians, who profess and insist upon the truth of the cardinal doctrines of Christianity, and they maintain that if their arguments be proved, and their conclusions correct, all the unfulfilled promises regarding the latter-day splendour of the kingdom of Israel will centre in the British nation; while a general belief in this will naturally be attended with a greater degree of confidence upon the part of our nation at large in all their relations, domestic, political, and military. Mr. D. Macallister's lecture should command a large audience.

We beg to assure the Gippsland Times that those who entertain our Anglo-Israelite hopes and belief form no new "sect." Our subject has no new religion or form of worship to prescribe to our fellow believers. We belong, as the journal admits, to all sections of the Church of Christ, and belief in "Our Identity" with Lost Israel in no way necessitates a change from one section of the Church, or form of worhip, to another. Episcopalians remain Episcopalians; Baptists Congregationalists, Wesleyans, Methodists, Quakers, and Romanists may each and all believe in Our Identity with the Ten Tribes, and yet continue to worship as their fathers did, without feeling constrained to change. Of course we cannot explain how a Roman Catholic can continue to profess that belief after a long course of study of the Word of God to see if Our Identity be true as a fact, but we believe that some Romanists have embraced our views, being, we suppose, British-Israelites first, and Roman Catholics afterwards.

We beg to thank our Melbourne journalist for his fair and candid mention of our little serial; and while we thank God for all the success the Banner justly deserves, we trust it may yet be privileged to carry the good news of Our Identity far and wide, so that "the company of nations" of which Victoria promises to be one, may universally acknowledge that the subject we advocate is, after all, the truth of God.

The Identity at Clapham.—A Tea and Public Meeting will be held in the Clapham Assembly Rooms (opposite Clapham Road Station), on Tuesday, March 1st, to inaugurate an Identity Mission. Friends are earnestly invited to attend the meeting. Tea at 6.30. Chair to be taken at 8.

Digitized by Google

NOTICES.

All communications intended for the Editor, to be addressed: — "Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Clifton, Bristol.

SUBSCRIPTIONS

	£ s. d.
Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free	0 7 6
Two Copies (including Double Numbers)	0 13 6
Three Copies " " " "	1 0 4
Four Copies " " " "	1 5 6
Six Copies " " " "	1 16 4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-grand, London, to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C., or F. W. PARRY & Co., 29, Paternoster-row, London.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

Contents Bills and Show Cards may be obtained on application to the Publishers.

Advertisements should be sent to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

Prepaid Advertisements are inserted at the rate of 30 words for 1s. 4d.

A LECTURE

WILL BE DELIVERED (D.V.) ON

"Our Present Position as Delineated in the Features of the Great Pyramid,"

BY REV. H. MARRIOTT, M.A.,

AT THE

ASSEMBLY ROOMS, BATH,

On March 2, at 3 p.m.

A LECTURE

ON

"MISSION WORK IN JERUSALEM,"

WILL BE GIVEN (D.V.)

BY REV. H. MARRIOTT, M.A.

(Some time resident in that City), at

EXETER HALL (LOWER ROOM), STRAND,

On March 3, at 3 p.m.

PUBLISHED BY ROBT. BANKS & SON,
RACQUET COURT, FLEET STREET, E.C.

WORKS BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Thoughts for the British Folk.

Suggested by PHILO-ISRAEL.

No. 1.—Multitudinousness.
No. 2.—The Gates.
No. 3.—The Nation and Company of Nations.
No. 4.—British Wealth.
No. 5.—The Rulers Over Many Nations.
No. 6.—The Universal Creditor.
No. 7.—The Ever-Continuing British Monarchy.
No. 8.—The Scattered People at Home in Every Climate.
No. 9.—The Queen, Lords, and Commons.
No. 10.—The Unconquerable Nation.
No. 11.—The Fatally Destructive Race.
No. 12.—The Isolated Nation.
No. 13.—The Nation Which Belts the Earth.
No. 14.—The Emancipators of the Slave
No. 15.—The Christian Nation.
No. 16.—The Ten Commandments.
No. 17.—The Asylum for the Foreign Refugee.
No. 18.—Possessors of the "Sign."
No. 19.—The Universal Missionaries.
No. 20.—Testimony of the Book of Common Prayer.
No. 21.—Church and State, and also Disestablishment.
No. 22.—Our Poor Laws.
No. 23.—The Labour Question is an Identity Question.
No. 24.—Emigration.

Philo-Israel's Leaflets. Four pages Crown 8vo. Price 1s. 6d. per 100, postage 2d. No. 1.—"The Identity of the British with Lost Israel." 2.—"The Glory of God.' 3.—An Address to British Seamen. 4.—An Address to British Soldiers. No. 5.—The Communion of the Body and Blood of Our Lord Jesus Christ Viewed in the Light of Our Identity. 6.—The Bible and the Jew. 7.—The Jewish People. 8.—Lo-Ammi; or, the Gentilisation of Ten-Tribed Israel. 9.—The Atonement. 10.—Is Our Identity Evangelical, or Non-Evangelical in its Tendency? No. 11.—Cui Bono? No. 12.—The "Thoughts" of God Towards Israel, Judah, and the Gentile Nations. 13.—The Teutonic Theory—Is It True? 14.—An Address to the Police Force of Great Britain. 15.—An Address to Israel's Missionaries and Their Supporters. 16.—The One Seed, Christ. 17.—An Address to Israel's Electors. Price 1s. 6d. per 100.

An Elementary Digest or Sketch of the Chief Facts and Teachings of the Great Pyramid of Egypt. Adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific. 56 pages, Illustrated with Diagrams, price 4d., post free 5d. 10th Thousand.

BY REV. HENRY ROE.

(Fifteenth Thousand).

1. Israel's World. Origin and Destiny of British Race, Colonies, and Empire. 2d., post free 2½d. "Worthy of a world-wide circulation."—H. B. Thompson, Association Sec. 50 post free from H. Roe for 4s. 9d.
2. Going to Africa. 1s., post free 1s. 1d.
3. Fernando Po Mission. 1s., post free 1s. 1d.
4. West African Scenes. 2s., post free 2s. 2d.
5. Consecration. 2d., post free 2½d.

50 post free from H. Roe for 4s. 9d.

No. 1 is published by R. Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.; Nos. 1 and 5 by E. Stock, 62, Paternoster-row, E.C.; and all by Rev. H. Roe, Dawley, Salop.

ISRAEL IN THE NEW TESTAMENT

OR,

Proofs of the National Conversion of the Ten Tribes to Christianity.

By SURGEON-GENERAL J. M. GRANT, M.D.

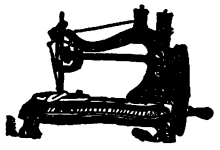
Author of "Jeshurun," etc.

Price 4d., post free, 4½d.; 12 Copies, post free, 4s.

London: R. Banks and Son, Racquet Court, Fleet St., and by order of all Booksellers.

The Geography of the Gates. With Map and six full page, and one double-page, Illustrations, printed on plate paper. 208 pages, in handsome cloth, gilt Price 3s. 6d., post free 3s. 10d.

Robert Banks and Son, Printers, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

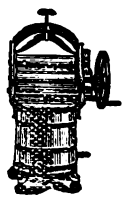


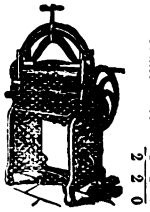
SEWING, WASHING, and WRINGING MACHINES at WHOLESALE PRICES.

CARRIAGE PAID.

New Medium.

Usual price	..	£7	10 0
Discount	..	3	12 6
		3	17 6





Improved Hand.

Usual price	.. ..	£4	4 0
Discount	.. ..	1	14 0
		2	10 0

Model Washer.

Brass Cup.	£5 15 0
Best Rollers.	1 5 0
Usual price	.. .. 4 10 0
Discount	.. ..

Wringer & Mangler.

Best Rollers.	£3 3 0
Usual price	.. .. 1 1 0
Discount	.. .. 2 2 0

Why pay Agents' wages, when you can save 30, 40, and 50 per cent. by buying from the Makers? We have no Agents, but do all business direct from the Firm. Our Machines have only to be seen to be admired, and used to give satisfaction.

AFTER FIVE YEARS' TRIAL!!

Hallam Fields, near Nottingham.

Gentlemen,—The Machine you sold me five years ago has given perfect satisfaction. I would not sell it now for what it cost me if I could not replace it.—Yours sincerely, E. STEVENSON.

Every prudent Housekeeper should, before purchasing elsewhere, apply to the

MIDLAND COUNTIES MACHINE CO.,
EASTWOOD. NOTTINGHAM.

Knight & Forster's PENS

The Coming Pen, Best Quality, the result of wide experience. "EVERYBODY'S PEN." Turned-up Points.
GREAT THOUGHTS says: "They are admirable."
SCHOOLMASTER says: "Adapted to suit every style of writing." 3s. 6d. per gross; 1s. per ½-gross.

LONDON: STRAKER & SONS, 124, FENCHURCH STREET,
And of all Stationers; or post free direct from the Makers,

BASINGHALL WORKS, LEEDS.

CASES FOR BINDING VOL. X.

ARE NOW READY,

Price 1s. 6d., post free 1s. 8d.

Robert Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

THE TEETH, THE TEETH, THOSE PRECIOUS TEETH!

Save, Purify, Beautify.

GEORGE & WELCH'S

CARBOLINE

1/6 (TOOTH PASTE). 2/6 per Pot.

Is the Best Known Cleanser, Preserver, and Deodoriser.

Dental Guide says:—"No Tooth application equals the Carbolics."

Proprietors: GEORGE & WELCH, Worcester.

Through Chemists, or Post Free from Makers.

LUNG TONIC

OWBRIDGE'S LUNG TONIC,

THE MIGHTY HEALER.

Save Your Lives by Taking

OWBRIDGE'S LUNG TONIC.

It has a power over diseases hitherto unknown in Medicine.

Are you at all Weak-chested or inclined to be Consumptive, with just a touch of Cough now and then?

"Try this Wonderful Medicine." The Cough and Weakness will disappear as if by magic, and you will feel a strength and power you never had before.

HAVE YOU A COUGH?
A DOSE WILL RELIEVE IT.
HAVE YOU A COLD?
A DOSE AT BEDTIME WILL REMOVE IT.

Bronchitis & Asthma it relieves instantly
The Spasms of Coughing so dreadful in Whooping Cough become less with each dose of the medicine. —

Prepared by W. T. OWBRIDGE, Chemist, Hull

Sold in Bottles 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d. & 11s. by all Chemists and Patent Medicine Vendors. Wholesale all London and Provincial Houses.

ETHELINE

A New and most effective Remedy for CORNS.—Perfectly safe and harmless. Is very easily applied. Cures in a few applications, without the slightest pain. Everyone troubled with either Corns, Warts, or Bunions, will find relief by using ETHELINE.

To be obtained of all Chemists, or post free for 14 stamps from J. LLEWELLYN, CHEMIST, COWBRIDGE.

BRONCHITIS, ASTHMA.

COUGHS, COLDS, CONSUMPTION, and all Pulmonary Affections can be immediately relieved and rapidly CURED by simply using the

AMMONIAPHONE

FOR THE Voice, Throat, Chest, and Lungs.

21s. post free.

WILL LAST FOR YEARS.

Used and recommended by the Royal Family, and principal Physicians, Clergymen, Vocalists, and Public Speakers throughout the country. New illustrated Pamphlet with copies of Thousands of Testimonials may be had FREE OF CHARGE on application to Medical Battery Co. Ltd.

52, OXFORD STREET, LONDON, W.

Corner of Rathbone Place.

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. F. W. PARRY (late GURST & Co.), 29, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, FEB. 23, 1887. [All rights reserved.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."

(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. XI., No. 531. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, MARCH 2, 1887. [DOUBLE NUMBER, TWOPENCE.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

PAGE

Israel's Commercial Interests during the Great Earthquake War-woe 85
Epiphany—Anglo-Israel Aspect. By the Rev. A. J. J. Cachemaille, M.A. 86
The Neutralization of Egypt 88
The "Believer's Almanack for 1887" settles the Question 89
Prophecy and Imperial Federation. By W. H. Mason.—Part II. 89
A Description of Some of the British Gates 91
The Opinion of a Hebrew Scholar 92
Martin F. Tupper and Our Identity with Israel 93
A Scornful Opponent 93
Romans ix. 7, 8 94
"The Head and not the Tail" even as to the Pottery Trade 95
The Honour of the Flag 95
A Call for Prayer and Praise on Behalf of our Nation, British-Israel 97
Correspondence 97
The Anglo-Israel Free Distribution Fund 98
Israel's Scripture and Prayer Union 99
The Bristol and Clifton Israel's Identification Association 99

ISRAEL'S COMMERCIAL INTERESTS DURING "THE GREAT EARTHQUAKE WAR-WOE."

WE have always maintained that when the approaching mighty convulsion of war takes place in "yonder ill-consolidated Europe," the results to these "Isles of the West" will be very harmless, commercially considered. The Lord, we believe, is going "to ordain peace for us," what time He calls for war among the Gentile nations of the earth, and we may be sure that the country which is strictly neutral during the great conflagration, must reap the benefit of that favourable position. In the first place it will not be wasting its strength in ruinous preparations for war, nor in the still more ruinous consequences of international conflict. A European war which would enfold France, Germany, Italy, Austria, Hungary, and Russia, in its deadly embrace, would stop all commercial progress wherever it may be waged; but the commercial, seafaring nation, which will be then at peace with all the world, will inevitably become the prosperous, commercial purveyor of them all, their agent, carrier, and broker. This has been openly declared both by the Times and by the Standard newspapers as a matter which is "well understood" in our cities and commercial centres here in our land. The effect has been clearly foreseen, too, of such a policy. It would enable us to remain quiescent, but interested spectators of an internecine conflict, that would leave our resources and commerce untouched, but ruin those of all the European races of the Continent now reckoned among military or naval Powers. "Every other nation," said the Times correspondent, on February 11th, 1887, "will be torn and impoverished, but you will be enriched"! Surely this is the very way God means to deal with Israel during the coming times, when her enemies, past, present, and future, will be visited by the "indignation" of the Lord, even "by His fierce anger, and by the fire of His jealousy" (Zeph. iii. 8). Then will Israel be safe behind her closed doors and her chambers of safety, hidden in the hollow of the Lord's hand, like Noah in the Ark, for "the little moment" while the work of punishment of the rebellious world is going on outside the allotted place of Israel's safety.

The Vienna correspondent of the Times, under date February 10th, wrote thus, respecting the subject which now engages our attention:—

None of the Magyar newspapers cry for war, but there is observable in their articles an increased scepticism as to the possibility of maintaining peace, and, moreover, a growing impatience with respect to petty expedients for patching up things. In a private letter which I have received from one of the foremost Hungarian statesmen the following passage occurs:—

"Europe can now have peace in two ways—either by the summoning of a Congress of all the Great Powers for the purpose of arranging a general disarmament, or else by the formation and open proclamation of an offensive and defensive alliance between England, Germany, Austria-Hungary, and Italy. The former idea is hardly to be entertained. It would only conjure war away for a few months, as the Congress would certainly break up without having decided anything. But the second idea could be realized if England were willing.

"Perhaps Lord Salisbury would be willing, for he looks at things from a very lofty standpoint and regulates his conduct by high principles; but the factiousness of your Radicals makes it most difficult for any English Ministry to enter upon a foreign alliance, and in the present instance it so happens that the Radicals, while working against European peace, would be serving England's commercial interests. A European war, which would stop all manufacturing on the Continent, would make of England the universal market. This is perfectly well understood in every one of yonr great cities, and therefore the powerful voice of your country will not be cast for peace. At the critical moment England will be silent, folding her arms, hiding her sword, and siding with nobody. Then there must be war, out of which you will be enriched, while every other nation is torn and impoverished."

Who can read these words and not see that here we have a Scripture that will be literally fulfilled! "Hide thyself," is God's command. "You will hide your sword," says the foreign correspondent, "and thus bring on the war which will enrich you, but ruin us"! "By the hand of My people Israel will I lay My vengeance upon Edom," is God's message to our race regarding (we suppose) the coming downfall of Turkey (Ezek. xxv. 14), and here we find the correspondent of a newspaper telling us to-day, that the act of Great Britain, her refusal to move at the critical moment, also her halting, hiding, policy, will precipitate a war which will be the undoing of Europe! In a late "money-market" article in the Standard newspaper a writer discussed the subject of the late panics, and explained why it was the stockholder was subject to these sudden spasms of abject terror and alarm :—

Digitized by Google

The stockholder sees his property apparently declining in value day by day, and at last, terrified lest everything should be lost, he rushes to sell out, frantic to "save something out of the wreck." It must also be remembered that a panic like the present one unavoidably gives rise to many precautionary sales. In its beginning the Bourse panic was political, in its progress it has become more and more an outcome of the rotten financial methods practised abroad. It consequently does not affect us to any material extent, and even if the fall in Foreign Stocks forbodes the worst, the chances are that war in Europe would mean extended prosperity to England and to all her Dependencies, as well as to the United States. Business would flow to us and to them, and population and savings would pour in from the lands oppressed by the horrors of war. Nothing, then, could be more senseless than for people in this country to give way to feelings of panic at the present moment. We have no cause for it, and in the city itself, at the most, there is only doubt and anxiety, and that not for ourselves, but for what may be about to happen abroad.

We have above the same anticipations as come to us from a foreign source in Vienna, and both agree with views we have constantly enunciated in the BANNER for many years. The Great Earthquake Woe, we have continuously declared, will affect, not Israel in her blessed "Island home" of safety, but only "yonder ill-consolidated Europe." In the coming wars we shall take no part, but out of them we shall derive immense advantage, because the Lord is on our side to favour us, His people Israel, and to make us, by the awful collapse of our neighbours, the one race "high above all the nations of the earth," "above only, and not beneath, the head (of them all), but not the tail" (Deut. xxviii. 1, 13). All this we know, not because we who say these things are prophets prophesying from prophecy. Far from that! We say them because this nation is Israel, and of Israel God's Word speaks when it tells us that these terrible events are in store for the Gentile non-Israelite nations of the earth, what time Israel herself shall be restored to God's favour and to their land, endowed themselves besides with prosperity, honour, glory, wealth, and spiritual blessings, the like of which no nation has ever yet experienced or is likely to enjoy, for ever.

God has said to Israel, as a fact to be repeated during all time, "Thou shalt remember the Lord thy God, who giveth thee power to get wealth; that He may establish His covenant which He sware unto thy fathers, as it is this day" (Deut. viii. 18, R.V.). The destruction of the polities of Europe during the coming frightful and unparalleled wars (Rev. xvi. 18, R.V.), will throw into Israel's hands the commercial wealth, literally, of the whole world, and the object of the gift will be that the God of Abraham may fulfil to him and to his seed for ever the oath that He sware unto them, that the land of Palestine, their inheritance, should be in their possession, and so remain according to the promise. Then will follow, we suppose, that other world-wide blessing, when "the kingdom and dominion and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be Israel's" by gift, to enable them thus to prepare the kingdom for the Lord Jesus Christ the coming King thereof, to the praise and glory of the Promiser, the Lord Jehovah; to whom shall be all the thanks we owe, for ever, and for evermore.

EPIPHANY.—ANGLO-ISRAEL ASPECT.

A Sermon preached in Oldham Church, Jan. 30, 1887.

BY THE REV. A. J. J. CACHEMAILLE, M.A.

"Verily I say unto you, there be some standing here which shall not taste of death till they see the Son of man coming in His kingdom."—Matt. xvi. 28.

IT is not often that the date of Easter allows more than three or four of the Sundays after the Epiphany to be observed. We arrive therefore at this fourth Sunday as being practically the last of the subjects of the Epiphany which is brought specially to our notice. It is the subject of the Transfiguration of Our Lord—a subject of very singular character in the history of our Lord, yet one of very deep importance from almost whatever side we look at it.

The question which arises in our mind is probably in the first place "In what way is the Transfiguration the manifestation of Jesus," and secondly, "What is the signification of the Transfiguration?" That the Transfiguration is a manifestation of Christ under a special aspect, we may consider to be admitted by every one who accepts the Gospel record. We shall probably find more to claim our special attention in the second question—viz.: What is the signification of the Transfiguration? in answering which we cover the ground of both questions. What, then, is the signification of this remarkable event in the history of our Lord, which was specially witnessed by only three of His chief disciples? The words of our Lord which precede the description of the event, are these, "Verily, I say unto you there be some standing here which shall not taste of death till they see the Son of man coming in His kingdom." Turning to the "Speaker's Commentary" at that verse, I find the following explanation, which is that commonly given—viz.: "Our Lord proceeds to declare that some of those there present should live to see the foundation of a Church which should acknowledge Him as its King, and over which He would reign till the end of the world." That is the common explanation of the very striking event before us to-day, but it seems to me to be a most inadequate, as well as an inappropriate, explanation of the Transfiguration. I am aware that the "Speaker's" comment upon this passage is that which is generally given by theologians, and I am also aware that, in placing before you another view, I am taking one which, as far as I know, has no support from the commentators, but which, it seems to me, is clearly stated both by our Lord in this passage, and confirmed by other parts of Scripture, which refer to this subject. I would ask you, then, first of all to notice the words which our Lord uses. He says that there were some standing there that should not taste of death till they had seen the Son of man coming in His kingdom. There is not a word about a Church here, of which commentators usually speak, nor does it seem to me that the title of King is appropriate to the idea of a Church; we should rather expect to find the title of priest, or prophet, or head. We may also do well to remember that only Peter, James, and John, were called to see the Transfiguration, whereas a great many more of those who stood around our Lord at the time He spoke, also saw the foundations laid of that Church which was to embrace the faith of all men. The idea, therefore, of a Church is not adequate nor appropriate to this event. It is promised that these disciples shall "see the Son of man coming in His kingdom."

We notice, then, (1), that the subject is a vast one, its words seem to touch all the breadth of the purpose of Christ's work. We notice (2), that it touches that question from the human aspect of it, for it speaks not of the Son of God, but of the Son of man. We notice (3), that it touches not the priestly office or the Church, but the kingly office and the kingdom. We notice, lastly, that from other passages it is declared that this kingdom shall never cease. These are, each of them, vast openings of thought, and it is clear that they can only be touched this morning in the barest outline; but they are of such interest and importance, that, having the outline, you may feel encouraged to fill it up. Of the vastness of the subject I need not speak—it stands there before you—but I point out what is of great significance—that the subject is not, as commentators usually suggest, "the coming of the Kingdom or Church of Christ, but the "coming of the Son of man in His kingdom." It is not, therefore, the idea of the beginning of that kingdom which is before us, but rather it is the completion of it—the coming of the Son of man in the acquired and completed glory of His dominion. We are led thus at once to ask, What is this kingdom of which Jesus speaks? And I ask you first to carry in your minds the remembrance, that it is the kingdom which has to do with the Son of man. I take it, therefore, that it is some aspect of the revelation of Jesus that has to do with the human side of His twofold nature. We must, therefore, go back to that time and place when and where God planted the foundations of this kingdom visibly in the person of Jesus; that is, we must go back to the Annunciation and to the Nativity of our Lord. We turn to Luke i. 31, and we read thus: "And behold thou shalt conceive in thy womb and bring forth a Son, and shall call His name Jesus. He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the highest, and the Lord God shall give unto Him the throne of His father David; and He shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever, and of His kingdom there shall be no end." We learn, then, that the birth and coming of Jesus was (1), for the redemption of man—for His name was Jesus, the Saviour; (2) that He should accomplish this through the throne or the kingly power of David (3), and that this dominion should be exercised through the house of Jacob as the human instrumentality for ever and ever.

Digitized by Google

It was of this kingdom that Jesus spoke repeatedly, when He said that the kingdom of heaven was likened unto certain human activities of society and conditions of social life, It is, I believe, of that kingdom that our Lord taught us to pray "Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven." It was the coming of Jesus in that kingdom which the Transfiguration placed in a sudden vision before the three disciples; and it was not, if words convey any accurate sense, it was not the coming of the kingdom in Jesus which was referred to by this event.

Having rapidly and most insufficiently stated this outline of the direction the words of our Lord take, we are led to ask, Are there any means whereby we may give substance to this view, out of the earlier Scriptures, a revelation of the purpose of God? and the answer is not uncertain—we can undoubtedly do so.

The visions, more especially of Daniel, were given by God, for this especial purpose, and by turning at your leisure, to Daniel, you will see that the expanding visions were given in response to the very earnest supplication and meditation of Daniel.

Those visions give, as they so declare, the outline of the history of the world from the days of Daniel up to the time of the consummation of the end, in fact to the crowning event of which our text and the Transfiguration of our Lord refer.

In the vision of Daniel God declares, that, from Daniel's days down to the establishment of the kingdom of Jesus, there should be four great earthly empires, and only four, which should succeed each other. These four empires, history tells us, were the Babylonian, the Medo-Persian, the Greek, and the Roman Empire. God also declares, that at a certain point in the history of this fourth, or Roman Empire, He would begin to set up a kingdom which should thus make a fifth empire, which should gradually expand till it covered all the earth, and that this fifth or last empire should be permanent, that it should never pass away nor be succeeded by another.

To those who are familiar with the words of Daniel, this kingdom was to be known as the Kingdom of the Stone cut out of the mountain, and its people were to be known as the people of the saints of the Most High.

It must be noticed here that this last empire is spoken of and described in such terms as entirely forbid us to look upon it as being only a spiritual empire or such a condition of people as is carried in the idea of a Church. The descriptions of the fifth empire lead us clearly to see that the power wielded, and the people governed, were to be as truly human in their visible aspect as the four preceding empires were so.

Can we, then, trace anything in the history of the world which would answer to these outlines of prophecy, and these words of declaration on the part of our Lord? If so, it ought naturally and intelligently, to correspond with the statements we have read, that God made concerning Jesus at the Annunciation, and they ought to correspond with the facts of the Nativity of Christ.

It is well known that our Lord was born during the days of the fourth or Roman Empire, and further, that He was born when the Roman Empire had reached its zenith. Far from proving greater in any sense after that date, it actually began to decline, and presently decayed so rapidly that it is not too much to say that 500 years after Christ was born the Roman Western empire had passed away completely. It had been swept by the hordes of invaders, and what remained was simply the fragments of an empire, over which fragments was a series of kings who shared the wreck of Rome. We may, therefore, say that by the year A.D. about 500 the fourth of those empires spoken of by Daniel had practically ceased to exist. But if even so, in order that the Word of God should stand true, God must have been planting the foundations of a kingdom which was to expand gradually till it absorbed all the rest, and was so established as to last for ever.

We notice, then, that from the date of the Nativity of Jesus, and still more clearly from the Crucifixion and Resurrection of Jesus, there was being founded a kingdom which, braving all the wrath and desperate opposition of the world, was growing and collecting itself in such wise, that, by the time the Roman empire fell it was already showing itself to be a power in the world, and a power which, within the strict statements of prophecy, has continued to grow with steady increase, until there is standing now in the face of the world a kingdom and empire which has undoubtedly come into existence since the fall of Rome, which is not only the greatest in the world at present, but vastly greater than any empire which has ever swayed the destiny of man.

That there should be such a striking historical fact before our eyes, who read the Bible, who print and circulate the Bible, and who are more influenced by the Bible than any other people, cannot but arrest attention of the most serious nature, nor can it fail, at this particular date of history, to claim our more intelligent observation, when the cords of the empire are being gradually drawn together, and the nations which have sprung out of the loins of our race are seeking to come into touch and bond with the head of this people, which is fast filling up all the spaces of the earth.

It is because our Lord spoke of a kingdom both in Daniel and to the disciples at the Transfiguration, that we are compelled to seek for such historical facts as correspond with His Word, and we are bound not to apply such intangible ideas as those which apply to a spiritual congregation, and to a heavenly Church, to what is clearly, in our Lord's words, something that can be seen and understood—namely, something that comes within the cognisance of our senses. This great kingdom of which Daniel and our Lord spoke was to have a feature of very special marks and interest. It was to be no new creation which was to be a break with the past dealings and declarations of God—on the contrary, it was to be effectually linked with the unbroken purpose of God from the first, it was to be nothing less than the fulfilment of what God spoke to Eve—the first parent of man—what He repeated to Abraham, and what He confirmed to David. The kingdom was to be that from whose throne David had ruled and the people were to be the people of the House of Jacob. The ancient past, therefore, the central condition of its history, and the last features of its grandeur, were to be all along one unbroken thread of purpose and of promise. The throne is still that of David, and the people are still those who issued from the loins of Jacob. And the imagery of the Transfiguration lends itself clearly to this truth, for they were Moses and Elias, the representatives in Moses of the whole Hebrew race, and in Elias of the House of Jacob specially, who met our Lord, the Prince of the House of David, on the Mount of Transfiguration. It was Moses and Elias, the representatives of the quick and dead, who there shewed that the hand of death in no way barred the purpose of God; but who even spoke of the decease of Jesus as that which should accomplish the very purpose of God, bruising the head of the serpent, and giving freedom at last to man from the bondage and cruel tyranny of Satan.

Digitized by Google

My brethren, looking at the light of the Transfiguration, we are expecting to see that same Jesus coming in all the plenitude of His power to take the dominion of the world. We are expecting that the day is not far away now, when its promise shall be fulfilled. How shall we, how can we bear to think of it? How can we bear to meet it? Only if, in these days of patience and of warfare, in these days of the Cross of Jesus, we have learned to bow lowly at His feet with the prayer for pardon, and then to look up into His face with the glad acknowledgment of peace and eternal hope, shall we be able to see His shining glory and meet His coming with rejoicing souls.

May He of His grace so touch our hearts and open our eyes that we may recognise Him to-day as a Saviour and to-morrow as our King.

NOTE.—The subject of the Transfiguration is not one of those which the Church brings before us under the teaching of the Epiphany, but it occurred in the Second Lesson for January 30th, being fourth Sunday after Epiphany.—A. J. J. C.

THE NEUTRALIZATION OF EGYPT.

THERE have been reports circulating far and wide that Sir H. D. Wolff has been sent by our own Government to perfect an arrangement with the Porte, whereby Egypt, or the Canal, or both, will be neutralized, that is, be declared independent of all Powers, yet under the protection of all, just as Belgium, a weak State like Egypt, is neutralized, subject to none, and independent of all the European Powers, who yet, by treaty, have agreed to respect its neutrality in war. There are, however, several absurd rumours afloat, which will doubtless all be contradicted before these lines see the light, to the effect that even the Porte has agreed to give up her suzerainty over Egypt, that the European Powers will be called on to resign the capitulations, and that they will be content to see British officers commanding the Egyptian army. Well may the Journal des Débats say, in respect to these most improbable rumours that appeared in the London Times and other papers of February 12th,—

Let us suppose France or Germany to be invested by formal treaty with the right of commanding Belgian soldiers, with the right of sending an army corps across Belgium, and the right of occupying Antwerp, Brussels, and Liege in case of a rebellion, and we shall have an approximate idea of the sort of neutrality which England has in view for Egypt. In French it would be called a Protectorate.

The Débats, in conclusion, expresses the belief that Turkey will still prefer the status quo, which leaves her liberty of action to the strange kind of neutralization for Egypt which is proposed to her.

It is not likely, we may be sure, that France will voluntarily consent to an arrangement like that foreshadowed in the above. It is, besides, impossible to conceive that Lord Salisbury can consent to a treaty of the kind, involving the evacuation of Egypt by the British garrison, when as a nation we have declared over and over again that we have no intention of quitting Egypt till our work is done, and the country is able to go alone with independent authority and an autonomous government. A writer in Cairo put the matter clearly to the readers of the Times a few weeks ago, when he said, regarding the proposed evacuation and neutralization of Egypt—

With reference to this latter policy, which we are told in a brief telegram is the latest view propounded for the solution of the Egyptian question, I am tempted to quote the reply of Nubar Pasha when asked some years ago as to the advisability of turning Egypt into an African Belgium. "It is eminently desirable," replied the Pasha, "provided you import the Belgians." Neutrality implies self-government, and that is impossible.

The Egyptians have never been accustomed to self-government, but have for ages leaned on other Powers for government and help. It is just as foolish to expect Egypt to go alone after long generations of submission to their powerful neighbours, as to expect the Hindoos of South India to maintain self-government in the face of the powerful military races of the North. Egypt cannot be independent, but will be a "base kingdom" to the end, according to the prophecies (Ezek. xxix. 14, 15). "Neutrality implies self-government, and that," says the Cairo correspondent on the spot, "is impossible." If we were to quit the country now, after all our sacrifices in blood and treasure since 1882, we should open the way to massacres and revolutions throughout Egypt, which will either recall us to the spot never to leave it again, or will relinquish Egypt to the French, according to their wishes, and thus hand over to our real enemies the chief Gate of our Eastern possessions and colonies lying North and South of the Red Sea.

The idea is incredible, and on the face of it absurd. We shall not credit it until we have, on the admission of some responsible member of the British Government, an assurance that so insane a project has been adopted by the Cabinet of Lord Salisbury. Of one thing we are sure, that this nation will not endure the abandonment of British influence as the paramount influence in Egypt. We shall never allow French influence to become supreme there. We were glad to read in the Times' leader on February 11th, that if the French are "anxious to see the controlling influence of England in Egypt superseded, that is an object which is unattainable" by the French. The hope that the British occupation will soon cease, is, according to the London journal, attainable "under conditions" by our Gallic neighbours, and those conditions are that they leave us unmolested to carry out the reforms needful to make Egypt what she must attain, before we can evacuate the land—namely, an orderly, tranquil, powerful, stable, solvent, autonomy. If our troops are to be withdrawn to please and pacify the French, they must be within call to return when the peace is threatened, or if the French should show symptoms of a wish to take possession of Egypt. Why we are continually so sensitive to the feelings of the French, who never spare ours, but plainly and openly do all they can to thwart us in all directions in Egypt, we cannot understand. Such is the case however; and the nervous fear of complications makes all British Governments dealing with Egypt timid and vacillating to a degree.

We hope our readers notice how, once more, the surrender of that land has become a national question. It was constantly Mr. Gladstone's wish to withdraw from it, but his purposes were thwarted from on High, and he was ever chained to the spot. To-day, Lord Salisbury shows timidity in regard to the same land, and evinces a desire to be rid of it. In vain! We believe we are there by God's own arrangement and command. We bid our readers to notice, in the near future, how the project, if such it be, to relinquish what He has given us will be set aside, and we shall remain in Egypt, according to the promises, to be a "blessing in the midst of the land." This, our nation, is Israel, and we must fulfil Israel's duties and functions in reference to Egypt according to the prophecies. "In that day," says the Word, "shall Israel be the third with Egypt, and with Assyria; even a blessing in the midst of the earth; for that the Lord of Hosts hath blessed them, saying, Blessed be Egypt, My people, and Assyria the work of My hands, and Israel Mine inheritance" (Isa. xix. 24, 25, R.V.). As a race we are destined to be closely connected with Egypt in these last days, and our function is to bless its inhabitants. To no other nation than ours is that duty assigned, and we know, therefore, that we shall perform it.

Digitized by Google

"THE BELIEVER'S ALMANACK FOR 1887" SETTLES THE QUESTION.

On page 29 of the "Believer's Almanack for 1887," published for One Penny, by Alfred Holness, 14, Paternoster Row, London, we have the following remarkable statement respecting the origin of the British nation ethnologically considered. The writer said:—

"Japheth, enlargement, eldest son of Noah, progenitor of the insular Gentiles (Gen. ix. 27; x. 2—5).

"Shem, name, second son of Noah, progenitor of the Israelites, Persians, etc. (Gen. ix. 26; x. 21—31).

"Ham, black, youngest son of Noah, progenitor of the Africans, Canaanites, etc. (Gen. ix. 25; x. 6—20).

"The British are descended from Japheth, and the Israelites from Shem. How, then, can the English-speaking peoples be the long-lost Ten Tribes?

"What a crowd of historical and other questions bearing upon the history and distribution of the race are answered in chapter x. of Genesis!"

We hope our readers notice the unblushing way in which the writer of the above begs the question at issue. The object evidently was to discredit those who hold Our Identity with Israel and whose contention is, and must be, that the "British are Israel," to prove which, we, as in duty bound, have very largely produced what we believe and know to be credible evidence. But the "Believer's Almanack" settles the question after this fashion:—"Noah had three sons, Japheth, Shem, and Ham. The British, who pretend to be Israelites, are really of Japhetic origin. They cannot therefore be Shemites, and must give up the idea they are Israelites, who derive from Shem"! The "Believer's Almanack" is bound to prove that the British are of Japheth, because our evidence to prove we are of Shem has not been discredited, and the presumption, therefore, that ours is a Shemitic race must prevail until the presumption is rebutted by credible evidence on the other side.

The only facts in the case which are indisputable are these;—The British nation is composed of several tribes who originally were located in Media, Assyria, and Persia, in the very spots where Israel were carried captive in the 8th century B.C. These tribes were kinsmen; and as soon as they met in these islands they united under a monarchy which has continued from that day to this. The British, so derived, are to-day enjoying all the blessings God promised to give to Israel exclusively, and no other nation on the face of the earth has so much as one of them. They have the two signs God declared in His word should ever accompany Israel, and be the proof to the world that they are His people, These signs were the Sabbath and the Decalogue. They have, besides, not only multitudinousness, but also the Gate of their enemies, wealth abnormal, an appointed place of residence, wherein they have been safe and secure for a thousand years. They have the Word of God committed to their charge, and the Gospel of the grace of God which they preach as no other nation does to all the nations, to all the families, and to all the kindreds of the earth. But these are the good gifts God gave to His Shemitic people, Israel, and He sware by an oath (than which He could swear by no greater, namely, by Himself), that those gifts His people should exclusively enjoy, and that for ever.

How, we ask the "Believer's Almanack," can such a people as the British, so blessed by the God of Israel, be descended from Japheth, to whom no such blessings were ever promised by the Lord? And how can they fail to be Shemitic Israelites to whom alone God declared those blessings should always belong? If this writer could establish his contention that the British are Japhetic by race, then he could also succeed in what he probably does not desire to see established by proof—namely, that God Almighty has violated His oath, proved false to His promises, and has failed in His truth and faithfulness to His people Israel—which God forbid! If these monstrous allegations could be proved, then the New Testament promises to the Christian believer must be deemed worthless and vain, for who could believe a God, who, having made such promises to Israel, can justly be convicted of dealing falsely with His people in the matter of His covenants with them, covenants now declared to be bodily transferred to the Gentile, non-Israelite races, of whom it is allowed the British are the chief? We should like our opponent of the "Believer's Almanack" to tell us what inherent impossibility there is in the supposition that the Ten Tribes, scattered by God's providence among a people in Central Asia, speaking an Aryan or Japhetic language, abandoned their own vernacular, and in process of time adopted that of their conquerors? It is clear, from Ezek. xi. 16, 17, and Amos ix. 9, that the Israelites were destined to be scattered among the heathen in far-off countries, and that they were in due time to be freed from such penal wanderings and be reinstated in their own land. How could Israel, mingled with the Aryan-speaking races of Central Asia for centuries, and scattered among all the nations of the earth, have done anything else but what they did—viz., forget their own tongue and learn that of their conquerors? Hence our Indo-European language to-day, which no more testifies that we are a Japhetic race, than the Jewish habit in England of speaking English proves that the said British Jews are not a Shemitic but a Japhetic race. "Contact" rules such cases. We shall be pleased to learn that these considerations have led the readers of the "Believer's Almanack" to the conclusion that the British are not Japhetic Gentiles, but Shemitic Israelites.

PROPHECY AND IMPERIAL FEDERATION.

By W. H. Mason.

(Concluded from page 83).

PART II.

BENEFITS OF IMPERIAL FEDERATION.

This part of my subject, said the lecturer, calls forcibly to mind the often asked question, "What's the good?" In considering the subject we shall find abundant answers to the question, and find also that the good is very great indeed; first, the good of being the people to whom the promise we are considering was made; and secondly, the good of the thing promised, "A nation and a company of nations." One cannot but observe at the outset, that, to the Christian, it should be sufficient guarantee of the goodness of a thing to know that God had promised it. That not being so, apparently, we will see if any good is likely to result from the realisation of this promise—any benefit to nation and individual, from Imperial Federation. Federation is Union. Is union a good or a bad thing, in Empire, nation or family? The very mention of the thing conjures up pleasant pictures of the prosperity and happiness resulting from union, and to speak the word "disunion" or "separation" suggests at once disaster and sorrow. In the first place, then, in this as in all cases, the mere act of union will be good and pleasant, and the sure source of many and great benefits. "Union is strength." This well tried old aphorism at once starts up in the mind, and one cannot but think with admiration of the mighty Empire which will stand forth before the world when the Federation of the Anglo-Saxon nations takes place! When these now scattered, oft discordant, and sometimes antagonistic nations are united, and one Imperial Parliament breathes the wishes, plans, and purposes of the whole, who will dare to say "nay" to its behests? Will it not control the world? Will it not be able to command peace among the nations, and bid them turn their swords into ploughshares and their spears into pruning-hooks, and learn war no more? What strength to resist! What power to compel! What influence to persuade will be that of the mighty Imperial Federation of the Anglo-Saxon nations! Union is strength, and an almost infinite power for good will result to us from the promised Federation.

Digitized by Google

A further benefit accruing from this Union will be this, that whereas now, to the great majority of our people, the colonies are foreign countries, they will then be felt to be really part and parcel of our own country, and our surplus population will no longer regard it as exile to go there, any more than now to move from one town to another, more or less distant. Thus our population, instead of being crowded together injuriously close on one spot, will spread themselves through the Empire and thus benefit the whole. This feeling and reality of the oneness of the different portions of the Empire will produce this further benefit, that it will abolish the Custom Houses which now demand toll from the incoming goods of each to the other, and commerce will flow as freely between the several portions of the Empire as now between town and town, or county and county, where fiscal barriers would be an absurdity. Further:—Interests now thought to be antagonistic will then be found to be mutual, and each part will see and seek the common interest in the welfare of the whole: the abolition of Customs' Tariffs just mentioned being an instance in point. This would follow also on another beneficial result of Federation—viz., the necessity that would arise and soon be seen and acted upon, of each portion of the Empire producing such things as nature had best fitted it for. The shortsighted selfishness which would be and do and keep everything to itself, and let all besides starve, will be unable to maintain itself by prohibitory tariffs, and God's gracious purpose will be realised—the purpose I believe He had in view when He deposited different substances, plants and animals in different parts of the world—in the benefit each and all will enjoy by the cultivation and production of their several specialities, and their free exchange, for the welfare of the whole. Everything that man can possibly need is produced in one part or other of the Anglo-Saxon territories, and if produced and spread abroad, as I believe God designed, and as will therefore certainly be done when His "company" of nations is formed, must perforce be of the greatest possible benefit to the whole Empire, nations and individuals. The baneful opposition between town and country, manufacture and agriculture, which has wrought so much evil in the old country, and is the cause of so much of the commercial depression of to-day, will be banished by the force of circumstances, and town and country, works and farms, will find themselves each equally needful and helpful, and mutually beneficial. The certain result will be universal prosperity, of which no better instance occurs to me for illustration than that of Israel under Solomon, and no better description seems to be possible than that given of Israel in the future by the prophet Isaiah in the 60th and 61st chapters.

The Federation of the Empire will solve in a natural and beneficial way many of the perplexing social and political problems of to-day. Land, labour, local government etc., will find their several settlements through and by the union of the Empire. When our people realise what immensities of land are to be had within their own wide Empire, and means are found, as they will certainly be, for bringing the would-be tillers to the would-be tilled land, then, ceasing to quarrel over the morsels they could get here, those who want land will go where it is to be had in abundance, and, while prospering there themselves, become customers of, and help to bring prosperity to those who remain at home in our factories and workshops. The labour question will be settled by every man having so much to do, owing to the real free trade which will then exist, that the surplus Chinese and Hindu population will have to be called in to do the laborious and more menial services, while our own people will perform the skilled work, which will find them ample employment. The local government question again will resolve itself naturally too. There must perforce be a real Imperial Parliament, centrally situated, and the several portions of the Empire must also perforce have their own Local Parliaments for the management of their own local affairs, which cannot possibly be managed by the Imperial Parliament. Our colonial nations have their parliaments already and it will only remain to supply any still without, and to give one each, probably, to the several portions of the United Kingdom, now all imperfectly served by one Parliament. So with other questions time will not allow the mention of, any more than it will afford details of the examples given. Thus far we have thought only of ourselves nationally and individually, but at the outset I said that this great promise to Jacob and his seed was but the realisation of a step in the direction of the attainment of a greater blessing—viz., the realisation of the greater promise to Abraham. "In thee and in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed." It is that Israel may bless the world that she herself is blessed. It is that she may teach the nations that she herself is taught and trained of God. It is that the nations may be restored to God, that she is adopted, redeemed and saved, and made head and chief among the nations when federated, and all her mighty powers, resources and influences are centred in and wielded by one Imperial Parliament, under one royal Prince of David's line; then but one thing will be wanting to fully equip her for the great and glorious work for which she is designed, and has been so many ages in training, and some few years in tentative practice. That crowning blessing, too, is promised; and the Holy Spirit poured out upon our people will fit them both to enjoy all the before-mentioned good things, and to carry to all the nations, all the families of the world, the peace, civilisation and holy religion, she has herself received, and gradually incorporating them under her own sceptre, bring about finally the realisation of that most glorious declaration—"The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our God and of His Christ." Replying to a hearty vote of thanks, the lecturer said that the issue of the coming dreadful European war would clear the way for the exercise of British-Israel's mission among the nations, and furnish her with the site for her Imperial Parliament—viz., Jerusalem, which a political writer a short time ago rightly pointed out in a pamphlet as the best place in the world for such an institution and seat of Imperial Government.

VISCOUNTESS FOLKESTONE, speaking at a jubilee meeting on Tuesday, related a conversation between herself and Princess Christian to show how lonely the Queen is. Said Princess Christian to the Viscountess:—"You do not know how lonely mamma is. She feels as if all her old friends were dying off one by one. All her daughters are married and have left her except Beatrice, and mamma is so lonely."

Digitized by Google

A DESCRIPTION OF SOME OF THE BRITISH GATES.

(From "The Times," Oct. 19. 1886).

A VISIT TO HELIGOLAND.

From a Correspondent.

M. THIERS, in his "History of the Consulate and Empire," calls Mauritius the "Malta of the Indian Ocean." If it were not for the accurate and graphic descriptions of that lovely island in "Paul and Virginia," few Englishmen who have not been stationed there in the civil or military service of the Crown would know much of Mauritius; and still fewer know anything of Heligoland, our curious and interesting "Malta of the North Sea." And yet it is only some 30 hours from London viâ Flushing and Bremen or Hamburg, from which two ports excellent steamers run thither daily in Summer with a sea passage of little over two hours. Moreover, in addition to its many historical and patriotic associations for Englishmen, it has been truly said by a recent visitor and able writer: —

Heligoland means a balmy and bracing air, a translucent sea, the best of bathing and boating, any amount of excellent sea fishing, walking without fatigue, no place being distant, and losing one's way impossible; to say nothing of the music and dancing without fuss or heat, the good living, and good company.

As the same writer continues:—

Heligoland is but a speck on the ocean, but it is peopled by the lineal descendants of the race from which the Anglo-Saxons sprang, and it is a living monument and memento of that tremendous war in which, when all the nations of the Continent lay prostrate at the foot of Napoleon, England remained the solitary champion of the liberty and independence of Europe. Heligoland was never German, and no German who knows the history of his country should grudge its possessions to the flag that braved the oppressor of Germany and snatched it from his grasp. Germany really has just as little right to Heligoland as France has to the Channel Islands; the one belonged to the Dukes of Schleswig (who were also Kings of Denmark), the other to the Dukes of Normandy (who were also Kings of England). France has absorbed Normandy, and Germany has annexed Schleswig; yet Heligoland and Alderney still belong to England.

A short sketch of the history and present condition of this smallest, but not least important, dependency of the British Crown may be new and interesting to most Englishmen.

The island is called Heligoland by its own inhabitants, and in the German and Danish languages. This name is derived, according to some authorities, from a Scandinavian Prince Helgo, of legendary fame; according to others, it is a corruption of Heilige's Land—i.e., Holy Land—so called either because it was a sacred place of the old Norse heathen deities, or because wholesale conversions to Christianity are alleged by tradition to have taken place there at an early period. The island was surrendered to an English squadron in 1807, and formally ceded to the British Crown by Denmark by treaty in 1814. Its entire area, inclusive of the adjacent "Sandy" islet, covers only three-quarters of a square mile. It is about 25 miles from the mouth of the Elbe, and commands the entrance of that river, and also of the rivers Weser (on which Bremen is situated), Eider (where is the Port of Tonning and the entrance to the Baltic Canal), and Jahde (with the naval port and arsenal of Wilhelmshaven, the Portsmouth of Germany). It was owing to this commanding position that England seized Heligoland as a station for her blockading squadron in the great war, and as a depôt for her merchandise when excluded from the Continent by the decrees of Napoleon I. It has now become the most fashionable sea-bathing resort for Germans and is visited every summer by from 10,000 to 14,000 persons, including every rank in society, from princes of reigning families down to tradesmen from Hamburg and the other towns on the neighbouring coast. In short, it is at once the Brighton and the Margate of Germany. The islanders, who are about 2,000 in number, live mainly by fishing and letting lodgings. They are of Frisian origin, and have an unwritten dialect of their own and a picturesque national costume; but all speak German also, and many of them English. They all belong to theLutheran Communion. They have a large and curious red brick church, built in the 17th century. The interior contains a series of old pictures of Biblical subjects, and a very ancient and remarkable bronze font which looks as if it might once have served as the brazier of a Viking.

Education has been made compulsory between the ages of six and fourteen, and 360 children are now taught in the Government schools in both English and German.

By orders of the Queen in Council, the executive and legislative authority are centred in the hands of the Governor, assisted by a small Executive Council. The Governor acts also as Judge, subject to appeal to the Privy Council, and performs his manifold duties, including the exercise of a very liberal hospitality to the numerous visitors of distinction, on the very inadequate salary of £800 a year. This salary is the only charge which the possession of Heligoland entails on the Imperial Treasury, all the other expenses of the Government being defrayed by a few local taxes of a municipal nature. There is no garrison, and the police force is provided by six men of the English coastguard, with two native Heligolanders. The islanders are a law-abiding race, and are well contented generally with the mild rule of England, for they know that if they were transferred to Germany their island would soon be converted into a fortress, and they would all be obliged to serve in the German army or navy. Their only material complaint seems to be that when the public gambling tables, which formerly brought so much money to the island, were abolished by orders from England in 1871 they were led to expect that the Imperial Government would give them a harbour of refuge for their fishing boats as compensation for their lost profits, and that this expectation still remains unfulfilled. The eminent civil engineer, Sir John Coode, was sent some two years ago to make an examination on the spot, and reported that a sufficient harbour could be constructed for about £30,000. The interest on this capital sum would probably be recouped by the dues that would be levied, especially on the steamers from the neighbouring ports, which are now obliged to anchor in the roadstead and to land their cargo and passengers in open boats, often in stormy and even dangerous weather. It will be remembered that, as the island is frequently visited by English men-of-war and by our Channel Squadron, this is a question of Imperial as well as of Colonial interest.

Heligoland alone among the dependencies ef England is now without a public debt, the small debt which previously existed having been paid off by the present energetic and popular Governor, Colonel O'Brien, C.M.G., who has given the island in this and other respects the benefit of the varied experience which he had acquired during his long and honourable career of nearly 40 years in the civil and military service of his country.

With regard to the material aspect of Heligoland, the island consists of a triangular red sandstone cliff, rising almost perpendicularly from the sea to the height of about 180ft. The town is divided into upper and lower—the Unterland, on the beach, containing the bathing establishment, theatre, conversation-house (where balls and concerts are frequently given), reading-room, and several hotels and restaurants; while the Oberland (to which access is now obtained by a flight of 192 easy steps and by a "lift" worked by steam power), contains the Church, the Government-house, the schools, the lighthouse, and the residences of the principal inhabitants. The large and yearly increasing number of visitors renders desirable the erection of a new hotel and casino on an extended scale, and a proposal is now before the public with this object.

It has been truly remarked that, at a little distance Heligoland looks like a huge ship becalmed on the sea; but that on a nearer approach the red cliff, crowned with verdure above, and with the white sand and foaming breakers below, dispels this illusion, and calls to mind the German verses explaining the tricoloured flag of the island—

Digitized by Google

"Grûn ist das Land;
Roth ist die Wand;
Und weiss der Strand;
Das sind die Farben von Helgoland."

In conclusion, it may be stated that the writer of the above imperfect remarks has derived much information and pleasure from a brief visit to Heligoland, and that he hopes that his example will be followed by many of his countrymen. The best season is from the beginning of July to the middle of September, when the temperature resembles that of our English Summer.

Every visitor to Heligoland should see also the neighbouring towns of Hamburg, Bremen, and Lübeck, the last three surviving free cities of the German Empire and of the famous Hanseatic League, which once comprised 80 cities and maintained fleets and armies of its own. Of these, Hamburg is by far the most important in trade and population; indeed, next to London, Liverpool, and Glasgow, it is the most important commercial port in Europe. The above account of Heligoland, our "Malta of the North," naturally suggests a reference to Hongkong, our "Malta in the Far East." It is a striking fact that Hongkong, which was a desolate and barren rock, haunted only by a few Chinese pirates and fishermen, when it was first occupied by the English in 1842, has already a much larger amount of shipping than Hamburg, which has been a leading mart of trade for nearly a thousand years. The official statistics show that in 1884 the port of Hamburg was entered by 6,813 vessels, of 3,607,189 tons, whereas in the same year the port of Hongkong was entered by 26,763 vessels, of 5,167, 231 tons. In other words, the shipping trade of Hongkong has already outstripped that of Hamburg by nearly one-and-a-half millions of tons, and comes next after the shipping trade of London and Liverpool. Indeed, in 1842, when the British flag was first hoisted on Hongkong, the shipping trade of London itself, which had been a mart of commerce even under the Romans, did not exceed 4,000,000 tons—that is, more than a million tons less than the shipping trade to which Hongkong has arrived in the brief space of little more than 40 years.

Let us take another comparison. The population of Hamburg is now about 300,000, which is less than the population of Melbourne, where the first white man settled in 1835—barely 50 years ago.

Such are a few of the many facts and figures showing the progress of the British Empire during the last half-century, which are so animating to all patriotic Britons throughout the world, and encourage them to aspire to that Imperial Federation which has been publicly advocated by the late Mr. W. E. Forster, and by Lord Lorne, Lord Rosebery, Sir George Bowen, and other speakers and writers. Lord Salisbury observed recently, in effect, that the idea of the future Federation of the Empire had made more rapid progress of late years than any other political idea within his recollection.

So far the Times correspondent. Our "Malta of the Indian Ocean" (The Mauritius); our "Malta of the North" being Heligoland; Our Malta in the Far East (Hongkong); and finally the veritable Malta of the Mediterranean, are only some of the first-class Gates of the British folk throughout the world. The Mauritius holds up the British flag and power in mid-ocean South of Hindostan; the Malta of the Far East is, as the journalist shows, one of the most remarkable free ports on the face of the ocean, a leading mart of trade in the Chinese Seas, and a Gate of great power and influence throughout the East. Our "Malta of the North," little Heligoland, is a Holy Land, named (who knows?) after the Holy or separated Land of the Inheritance in Palestine! and "it is our smallest but not least important dependency." All these are Island Gates, and confer power over oceans and seas in their neighbourhood.

The Mauritius and Malta were wrested from the French in open war, Hongkong was taken from the Chinese by treaty at the conclusion of a campaign. Heligoland was Israel's property by treaty from Denmark, being taken first as we see by a British Squadron in 1807, and seven years afterwards ceded to the British Crown by treaty. Very useful are the sea-island Gates of Israel! They confer upon her immense power and prestige, as we may see by reference to our maps, when we find how wonderfully they are placed in the midst of busy seas and oceans at the very centres of military and naval influence. The Gates named in the Times are all in close contiguity to to the lands of Israel's enemies in past or present times, and serve to remind the world that the blessing God gave by promise to "Abraham and his seed for ever," these are to-day in the enjoyment of the British people, who must therefore be Israel, as God is true!

THE OPINION OF A HEBREW SCHOLAR.

We have been favoured with the sight of the written opinion of a Hebrew scholar, now deceased (one, in fact, who was, for a time, engaged in the revision of the Old Testament Scriptures), and his opinion of the subject we call Our Identity, was to the following very unfavourable effect. The letter is dated October, 1876, or ten years ago, and the judgment arrived at had reference to Mr. E. Hine's work, "The Forty-seven Identifications."

After a good deal of strong writing against Mr. Hine's powers as a logician, the opponent, who was, we believe, in Holy Orders, wrote as follows:—"If we know anything, we know, by all the tests the case admits of—history, language, religion, race characteristics, mental and physical—that the English are not descendants of Israel." We believe the testimony of Lo-Ammi, called for by Hosea i. 10, could not go further than this. God's Word called for this declaration; and the witnesses to furnish it, ignoble as it is, have been ready to declare the untrue testimony. "And it shall come to pass," said Hosea, speaking by the Spirit of the living God, "that in the place where it shall be said unto them, 'Ye are not My people,' it shall be said unto them, 'Ye are the sons of the living God." The writer of the letter in question, like the late Rev. J. B. Clifford, the Rev. John Wilkinson, and Captain George Palmer, R.N., and a host of others, declare, in impassioned language, here in Great Britain and in her Empire, but nowhere else, that this nation is "not Israel"—"not God's people," emphasising their words by the use of italics; and they are, at the same time, ready to admit that this is par excellence, "a Christian nation," or "sons of the living God," as predicted by Hosea i. 10. This testimony is not given in Germany, France, or any Continental nation, but here, and here only. This is "the appointed place" of Israel's safety, as 2 Sam. vii. 10 proves, and here, therefore, the testimony of Lo-Ammi must be given, and it is freely given accordingly.

Our present opponent did not stop to tell us why and wherefore "our history, language, religion, race, and characteristics, mental and physical, show that the English are not Israel's descendants." We, on the contrary, have given reason upon reason for ten years past, to prove that we British are Israel, of the House of Ephraim or Joseph. Let us recapitulate, and see if any opponent, likeminded with the deceased, can take up the gauntlet, and show us that our reasonings are vain and delusive. To begin with, we affirm that—

1. The British are a Central Asiatic people, as our historians allow, in respect to their origin.

2. Our ancestors came from Central Asia at a period, B.C. 630—650, when it was quite possible they might have been Israel escaped.

Digitized by Google

3. We occupy "islands afar off" from Palestine, "West" in direction therefrom, and yet in "the North country," as prescribed in the prophecies for Israel.

4. We respond to the prophecies in every minute particular, and do so exclusively.

5. We are multitudinous to an extraordinary degree.

6. Our race occupies Colonies in the four quarters of the globe, and are already "a nation and company of nations."

7. Our wealth is abnormal, and used largely for God's glory in the Mission field.

8. "We lend to many nations, but borrow from none."

9. "We reign over many nations, but none reign over us."

10. We "possess the Gate of our enemies" everywhere, and in all climates.

11. Our home is ever secure from foreign foes, being, in all points, the exact copy of the God-"appointed place" for Israel, mentioned in 2 Sam. vii. 10.

12. We are the foremost Christian nation.

13. The chief missionary Power.

14. The custodians and publishers of the Word of God.

15. The national keepers of God's Sabbath-day, according to the Commandment.

16. Observers and respecters of the ten true laws of God.

17. Blessed with the outpouring of the Holy Spirit, and looking for larger blessings of the same kind in time to come.

18. Living under a monarchy of the race of David, and therefore, of the House of Judah.

19. Full of the fruits of the Spirit, "blossoming and budding, and filling the face of the world with fruit."

20. With all the sins and failings of Israel in past times, as to excess in drink, and as regards the toleration of idolatry.

These, and such like, are the points of identity between our race and the House of Israel, as painted in God's Word. We argue, that a race so distinguished and blessed, and responding exclusively in so many points to the people of God's choice, must be Israel, and not otherwise; because these are the blessings God swore to Abraham He would bestow upon his seed in the latter days, and He cannot change.

It was vain, then, for our "Hebrew scholar" to tell us that "the English" cannot be descendants of Israel, because of their diversity in history, and religion, and race characteristics from Israel of old; for in those very particulars our identity is striking! In language, no doubt, there is diversity, and it could not be otherwise; for Israel, the Semitic race, was cast out among an Aryan-speaking people in Media, and had been in contact with them for over 1,000 years, when the bulk arrived in these "isles of the West." What wonder, then, that the Hebrew vernacular was dropt, and the Indo-European language of their captors was adopted by paganised, scattered, and isolated Israel, so dealt with according to God's prophetic determination? Ostensibly He did this for the nation's abounding sin, but really for their good; that the Lord, by and through them, might, in these latter days, bring the blessing of Christ's Gospel to the Gentile, non-Israelite races, among whom Israel dwelt so long unknown, and ignorant themselves of their truly royal origin, as God's chosen, never-abandoned, but always-blessed people, the House of Isaac!

MARTIN F. TUPPER AND OUR IDENTITY WITH ISRAEL.

We have been favoured with a copy of Mr. Martin F. Tupper's Jubilee offering, entitled, "Jubilate," being an ode to commemorate Her Gracious Majesty's Jubilee, or fiftieth year (Sampson Low, Marston, Searle, and Rivington, 188, Fleet-street, London, E.C. Price 1s.). In this beautiful ode Mr. Tupper startles the world with what appears to us to be the announcement that he has resigned his judgment to "the craze," and that he believes our nation to be Israel. The passage occurs in Stanza III., thus:—

"Jubilate! raise the song,
Loud with triumph deep and strong;
Let the trumpet swift and sharp,
Meet the soft and loving harp—
All ye sons of music, come,
Viol, cornet, flute, and drum—
Clanging steeples, cannons roar,
Hurl the joy from shore to shore,—
Jubilate! shout the song,
Thrilling, joyous, loud, and long—
Jubilate! fling the sound,
All the startled nations round,
Israel lost, and Israel found!"

Again, in Stanza IV., a reference to our origin appears in the following lines:—

IV.

"Yea: for Mother England stands,
Girt with children in all lands,
And her tenfold Tribes are seen,
Bringing homage to their Queen;
Thanking God for all the praise,
That has blest her many days,
And has brought her to this hour,
Crown'd with love, and throned in power."

In his prefatory notes to the poems, Mr. Tupper, on p. 6, states: "It is manifest, that for personal merits in the Sovereign, and national happiness in the governed, they (her royal precursors) must all yield to one so blest of heaven and earth as the present Imperial Ruler of Britain and her dependencies, the true Anglo-Israel of God." These quotations, we think, suffice to prove to us that Mr. Tupper has now thrown in his lot with the despised Anglo-Israelites, and that he is willing to bear the reproach of believing truths which our opponents declare to be crazy delusions. All honour to Mr. Martin F. Tupper if this be the case! We hope all Anglo-Israelites will mark their appreciation of his act by purchasing his little book, and studying its contents. Besides "Jubilate," it contains an ode Mr. Tupper wrote in 1838, to commemorate the Coronation of Her Majesty, of which, it appears, he was an eye-witness, and several deserving sonnets written in the same year. The short poem, lately noticed in Vol. x., p. 443 of the BANNER, entitled, "Imperial Federation," which appeared first in the Morning Post, is also incorporated in this little "Jubilee offering," and adds to its value.

A SCORNFUL OPPONENT.

One who professes to have made some progress in the science of philology and ethnological knowledge is very merry, and at the same time scornful, regarding Our Identity with the Lost Ten Tribes. When told that there were distinct traces of Hebrew in the Welsh language—"How can that be?" cries our opponent, "when the one was Aryan and the other a Semitic tongue?" He doubts if there are any so foolish as to affirm "that there are Hebrew words and idioms in Welsh." In regard to Gaelic, he remembers, he says, a story told of a mad Scot who declared that Adam and Eve spoke that language in Eden. This was 80 years ago, and people laughed then. He wonders at the revival of the folly now. In regard to Our Identity, our scornful opponent adds this: "I read many arguments in favour of the idea a year or two ago, and I must say that those I was competent to judge of I found to be such sheer nonsense that I naturally drew my own inferences about the others. However, I do not inquire into the matter, because frankly, I do not care sixpence whether we are Israelites or no. Let those who think so retain their belief—a harmless one, anyhow, and I retain my (let us say) doubts without rancour."

So far our scornful Gallio. He cares for none of these things that so intensely interest us—nay, he values them at not even a sixpence! The idea is beneath his lofty mental position! To be an Israelite is to him as nothing! Foolish persons like

Digitized by Google

Anglo-Israelites may amuse themselves about this trash, but he cannot condescend to such absurdity. When we tell him that our national blessings are all owing to our Israelitish origin, and that we have nationally received them because of the faithfulness of God, his reply is a pitying smile. "The thing is impossible, because Max Müller says we are of the Aryan stock of races, since our language is Aryan, or Indo-European; and if the promises of God seem to favour the claim we set up, so much the worse for the promises." They are not to be considered in such a contention! We may feel surprise at so wilful an opponent as this, but he exists, to our certain knowledge, and we make no doubt that he has a large following. Where God Almighty declares that "His whole heart and His whole soul" is fixed upon planting His people upon their land, and so fulfilling His promises to the Patriarchs (Jer. xxxii. 42), our thoughtless opponent laughs heartily at the idea, values it at less than sixpence, and dismisses it with a jeer, saying "it cannot be, because we are not of the Semitic race of Israel by reason of our total difference in the matter of the class of language which is our vernacular." Let us grant the latter statement to be true. Let us allow that there is no trace whatever of Hebrew in Welsh; that the late Dr. Margoliouth, Dr. Wainwright, and others were wrong in the matter; and that the Welsh language is an Indo-European tongue, and therefore not Semitic; does it follow that the Cymry, who speak this Indo-European language, are therefore not Semitic in origin? Certainly not! "Affinity of language is no proof of affinity of race, but only of contact." The Bible being true, it is positively certain that Semitic Israelites of the House of Joseph must have been, in large numbers, in close contact, mixed up, and mingled with Aryan Indo-European speaking races, because Ezek. xi. 16, 17; 2 Kings xvii. 6; and Amos ix. 9 distinctly affirm that such should be, and was the case.

These Semitic Israelites, in contact with the Aryan, speaking races, must have learnt their language and forgotten their own, under the circumstances of their banishment from Palestine. What would have been the result? That which our scoffer now declares an impossibility! We should have found a Semitic population speaking an Aryan tongue! But modern times give us parallel cases in abundance to show how shallow is our scoffer. The Huguenots left France 200 years ago, pure Frenchmen, to take up their residence in London, and they were 100,000 strong. Their descendants exist now speaking the English tongue, and are socially fused and amalgamated with our own race here. French-speaking people transformed in 200 years into English men and women! Similarly the English-speaking slaves of 100 years ago (now freedmen) of the Southern States of America, know nothing of their African languages, but speak the Aryan British tongue. Are they, therefore, of the Aryan stocks? Are they not black, woolley-headed negroes still, in spite of the accident of their Aryan speech, derived from their contact with the English-speaking Anglo-Saxons?

Our opponent gives no thought to the fact that he belongs to a nation which at this moment enjoys all the blessings God sware to give to the afterseed of Abraham. He is content to remain under the stigma that he is witnessing to the blasphemy that God has violated His oath, broken His promises, and failed to perform His Word "to Abraham and his afterseed for ever." For He promised certain blessings exclusively to the Semitic Israelites, but, according to our opponent, transferred His promises to the Aryan Japhetic British, to whom no such blessings were ever offered by "the God of Israel." Our opponent probably would not take to heart such a charge as this, as he does not believe, we suppose, in the reality of any of the promises of the Pentateuch, but thinks it far more important that Max Müller's idea should be supported through thick and thin rather than that God's Word should be vindicated, even though the great philologist should be found to have fallen into an error such as that we now describe.

ROMANS IX. 7, 8.

OUR notice of the above verses, on p. 51 of BANNER No. 527, has already drawn forth a protest from Mr. E. Lyon, of Liverpool. He considers we were wrong in referring to St. Paul's allusion to "the Isaac seed as applying to the Ten Tribes," but believes the matter in the apostle's mind was not at all the Judah-Israel division of the Israelites, but the fact that among Abraham's children by Sarah, Keturah, and Hagar, the "chosen seed" was his son Isaac. "St. Paul was here establishing the original selection, 'For this is the word of promise, According to this season will I come, and Sarah shall have a son.'"

In reference to the objection thus raised, we reply that our comment on verses 7 and 8 in nowise limited the apostle's reference to the House of Isaac, but merely pointed out that the House in question, in whom the seed was to be called, embraced not only the head of that House, Isaac, but his posterity also—that is, the chosen "Isaac-suna," called after Isaac to this day. St. Paul was writing, we believe, of the Scriptural distinction between Israel and Judah in verses 1 to 6, and again also in verses 21 to 26. The intermediate verses, it seems to us, referred to particular instances of election and selection, by the God of Israel, of the holy seed, and of others, such instances being, Isaac (verse 7), Jacob (verse 13), Pharoah (for punishment, verse 17), and Israel and Judah, for blessing and cursing respectively (verses 21—26). Verses 7 and 8, though they refer primarily, no doubt, to Isaac's selection from among Abraham's children by his concubines, apply also, as we have shown from references to Amos vii. and Hosea i. 10, to the Ten Tribes as distinguished from the two. Mr. Lyons' letter we publish below for our readers' consideration:—

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

SIR,—In reference to your running comment upon the difficult chapters of the Bible—viz., Romans ix., x., and xi., in verses 7 and 8, chap. ix., St. Paul is interpreted to be arguing for the two Houses—viz, Judah and Israel, the Ten Tribes. It seems clear that St. Paul has there in his mind the selection of Isaac from amongst the other sons of Abraham, the six sons of Keturah and Ishmael (all Abraham's). These were called the children of the flesh, not the Jews, as the comment gives it. Rom. ix. 7, "Neither because they are all Abraham's seed are they all children, but in Isaac shall thy seed be called." See Gen. xvii. 19, "I will establish My covenant with him (Isaac), and with his seed after him."

Verse 8, "That is, it is not the children of the flesh (Keturah's six sons, nor Ishmael) that are the children of God, but the children of promise (the seed of Isaac)." Verse 9 makes it clear that St. Paul was here establishing the original selection, "For this is the word of promise, According to this season will I come, and Sarah shall have a son." The 10th verse makes reference to Jacob's mother, Rebecca, thus making it clear that St. Paul has taken the line from the first, downwards. That the truth may not suffer, I trust you will re-consider this portion and correct, if you agree with me.

Yours truly,

E. LYON.

11, Magdala-street, Smithdown-road, Liverpool,
Feb. 4th, 1887.

A CANADIAN JUDGE (JOHNSON) ON BRITISH LIBERTY.—"Whatever we may enjoy in connection with the liberty of the press on the right of public discussion is due to the beneficent rule of England and to the constitutional freedom that followed it, without which the early and heroic French colonists of this country could never have dreamed of, nor their descendants now have attained, the blessings of the liberty they now enjoy; nor need any dependency of England repine at the bounds of English liberty which are found sufficient for England. What is complained of in this case occurred in a French Canadian constituency. Of course I don't mean to say that abuses of this kind are confined to people of one origin more than another. If such were the case it would be deplorable indeed."—Montreal Daily Star, November 30th, 1886.

Digitized by Google

"THE HEAD AND NOT THE TAIL" EVEN AS TO THE POTTERY TRADE.

WE take the following from the Liverpool Courier of January 10, 1887, as a fresh illustration that Israel, having God's blessing, is, under any circumstances, and especially where they desire to have the pre-eminence, "the head and not the tail, above only and not beneath, the nations of the earth." At one time it was strongly suspected that in the "Ceramic art" the British manufacturers were completely surpassed by French and other nations. This has now been altered, and the following tells us how completely the supremacy of British workmen and artists is acknowledged. We need express and feel no surprise at this; God's promises to Israel (and the British are Israel) are immutable, and universal in their application. The wonder would be if in any department of manufacture they were to be permanently distanced by any nation on the face of the earth. Our quotation is as follows:—

THE ENGLISH POTTERY TRADE.

CRUSHING REPLY TO MR. HORSLEY, R.A.

Mr. Thomas Minton, chairman of Mintons', limited, writing under date Stoke-upon-Trent, January 6th, to the Times says:—Mr. Horsley has made a rash attack in your columns upon the English pottery trade, and upon the South Kensington Art Department, using Mintons' Company to support his assertions. I venture to say that the Marquis of Lorne was perfectly correct in his statement that "in the ceramic art foreign nations had never got the better of Stoke-upon-Trent." From the time of Wedgwood all the earthenware manufacturers of the continent have given up their old processes, their white faience or delft, and their old style of decoration. They have adopted the style of the Staffordshire ware, and there can be no doubt that since then the English have been the leaders and pioneers of art pottery and the pottery trade. I am quite content that Mintons' Company should be used as an illustration; but Mr. Horsley, who has been round the works not long since, and had the opportunity of arriving at the facts, has no right to misrepresent them, or twist them to suit his own theories. So far from the company being "entirely in the hands of foreigners, and everything in the shape of design being carried out by French modellers and French painters," the fact is that all our modellers are English (if we may include one who has lived in England from the age of five), and all have been apprenticed to us and brought up by us; while out of 142 of the best artists we have only two who are foreigners; the remaining 140 are all English. Most of them had been brought up on our own works, none abroad, and at least half of them have been students of the Stoke-upon-Trent School of Art.

Another peculiarity of the all-conquering race is exemplified by an extract from the Standard of January 12, 1887, wherein the journey round the world of a Mr. Stevens is noticed. The salient fact in the traveller's recollection must be, said the reviewer, "the endless Little Englands which dot the surface of the Globe along the route which he took." Here is, if we mistake not, a clear fulfilment of a prophecy which told Jacob that his afterseed should increase "as the dust of the earth" and then "spread abroad to the West, and to the East, and to the North, and to the South"; forming endless "little Englands," in the four quarters of the globe: each being either an "official, mercantile, or military colony of Britons," and all "little copies' of the "Old Mother in the West!" Among all nations of the earth is Israel thus being sifted; but not a grain falls to the earth (Amos. ix. 9). They are "sown" by the Lord, in blessing, among the peoples of the earth, and there they will remember Him, if they do not so now, in far countries, and live there with their children, that is, as colonial settlers, but not as mere passers-by, like the garrisons of India (Zech. x. 9). There, too, will they "turn again," and repent (like Ephraim) before they are blessed with the outpouring of the Holy Spirit, promised to the House of Israel in Jer. xxxi. 33, 34; and Heb. viii. 10—12.

A third corroboration of our contention that we are Israel is found in the fact that the lately turbulent insurgents of Upper Burmah are showing by their conduct that they know and feel that their master, Israel, is asserting his power over them, and that like the other heathen throughout Hindostan they must submit. The Standard said:—

Our recent telegrams from Mandalay will have prepared the public for the announcement we make this morning that the military operations in Upper Burmah have been practically brought to an end by their complete success. General Roberts will shortly proceed to Rangoon; and General Arbuthnot, the Commander-in-Chief in Madras, will arrive in Burmah early next month, and take over the command, Sir Frederick Roberts then returning to India, The rapid and effective manner in which General Roberts has done the work entrusted to him, cannot be too highly praised. The latest news from every quarter points to the perfect success of the arrangements made by the Commander-in-Chief, and to the soldierly and business-like manner in which they have been carried out. In the Yemethen district, our correspondent at Mandalay telegraphs, the Dacoits are so broken and terrified that whole gangs of them fly at the sight of a single Lancer. The heliographic system of signalling seems to have proved very useful, communications being thereby rendered complete between the four Southern Brigades. The area thus affected lies between the Shan and the Arracan Hills, and covers two thousand square miles.

The prophecy of Micah v. 8 R.V., describes Jacob's case thus, "The remnant of Jacob shall be among the nations in the midst of many peoples, as a lion among the beasts of the forest, as a young lion among the flocks of sheep, who, if he go through, treadeth down and teareth in pieces, and there is none to deliver." General Roberts has resolved to "go through," and the result has been that rapid and complete success has been granted to his operations by the God of battles (2 Sam. xxxii. 8). The British being Israel are thus shown by this third fact to be fulfilling the prophecies respecting Israel. They are "the head and not the tail" among their Gentile neighbours in arts and manufactures; they are "spread abroad" in the earth, carrying their country's laws, literature, religion, manners, and customs with them wherever they go, and they are able, God helping them, to subdue a nation in insurrection with a handful of troops, in comparison, the native Indian horsemen of the Nizam's Cavalry doing the lion's share of the work, and making havoc of the enemies' brave but defeated troops, for Israel their paramount chief. And for all these signal mercies, shall not we heartily and earnestly "praise the Lord"?

THE HONOUR OF THE FLAG.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—I enclose a cutting from the Telegraph, containing facts concerning the claim of England to rule the seas, which would probably prove interesting to your readers.

As to the origin of the claim—a distinct point from the fact of its having been maintained—it may, perhaps, have been based on the circumstance that the Belgic tribe of the Semnones, Senones, Semeni, or Iceni, to which the British Royal Family belonged, at the time of the Roman invasion, had settlements, and exercised rights of suzerainty over the other tribes, in Belgic Gaul, Eastern Germany, and Denmark, as well as in the British Isles.

A British princess gave laws to the Sicambri, and a British prince, Brennus, led an army of Senones into Italy, which they nearly conquered, and then, having been at last repulsed by the Romans, they passed on to the East of Europe, and ultimately to Asia Minor, where, as Galatians, they were recognised by St. Paul and other apostles as being Israelites.

Irish historians, also, say that the Belgoi, who invaded Ireland, were of the tribe of Simeon, and of the same race as the tribe of Dan; and this is borne out by the near resemblance of the names Simeon and Semnones.

I believe the right of any Power which has sovereignty on both sides of a sea, to rule the sea itself, without regard to the three mile limit, is not disputed,

Digitized by Google

I am, dear sir, yours obediently,

JAMES EDWARD NELSON.

Field House, Islip, Oxford.
29th Nov. 1886.

NOTE BY THE EDITOR.

We are unable to give in extenso the interesting article from the Daily Telegraph sent us by our correspondent, but the following extracts comprise the salient points, and for these we gladly find room in our crowded pages. The article is headed

THE HONOUR OF THE FLAG.

Regarding a book by John Selden, the writer says:—

"The book pre-eminently concerns the honour of our flag, of our dominion over the seas, more particularly in regard to the right of our kings and queens to grant licences to foreigners to fish in the sea, and of the obligation on all ships of what denomination soever to strike their topsails to our flag, or in other words to salute the symbol of Britannia's sovereignty wherever they shall encounter it. For how many centuries this act of courtesy has been exacted as a right by the monarchs of England you must read Selden's book to discover. Writing in James I.'s reign, he shows how he traces it back for above 400 years by this: That at Hastings it was decreed by King John, in the second year of his reign, with the assent of the peers, 'if the governor or commander of the King's navie, in his naval expeditions (which were all in that age upon the Southern Sea) shall meet any ship whatsoever, by sea, either laden or empty, that shall refuse to strike their sails at command of the King's Governor or admiral or his lieutenant, but make resistance against them which belong to his fleet; That then they are to bee reputed enemies if they may bee taken, yea. and their ships and goods be confiscated as the goods of enemies.' He points out that it was accounted treason in any man who omitted to acknowledge the King of England in his own sea by striking sail; nor would the circumstance of his country being friendly with that of the transgressor protect him. Another illustration of the antiquity of this custom, or exaction rather, Selden finds in a piece of gold termed a rose noble, that was coined in the reign of Edward III. The stamp on one side of it represented a ship floating on the sea, and a king, armed with sword and shield, sitting on the ship as on a throne, the device being obviously intended to represent the maritime dominion of the ocean.

"The question of this dominion became a vital one to this country with the growth and the aggressions of Holland. Was she or England to be sovereign of the sea? And was an English ship, figuratively speaking, to bow to a Dutch one when she met her? Selden offered the world precedents enough on our behalf. That King John should have claimed a universal striking to the Royal flag was surely proof that what might impress the foreigner as an extraordinary pretension was founded on the unquestioned rights of our predecessors. Edward III., in his commissions to his admirals, repeatedly styled himself sovereign of the English seas, affirming, with perfect justice, that he derived the title from his progenitors. In Hakluyt there is preserved a curious metrical admonition, presumably written in or about the sixth year of the reign of Edward IV., entitled 'De politia conservatira Maris,' with a heading to the general introduction that runs thus: "Here beginneth the prologue of the processe of the libel of English policie, exhorting all England to keep the sea, and namely the narrow sea; shewing what profite commeth thereof, and also what worship and salvation to England, and to all Englishmen.' It will be owned that the anonymous author's appeal was not addressed to deaf ears. An immortal proof of British resolution in this direction occurs in the reign of Queen Mary. Lord William Howard, created Baron of Effingham, was sent with a fleet of twenty-eight sail presumably to guard the coast, but in reality to escort Philip of Spain, whose own fleet, however, consisted of 160 vessels. His admiral came sailing along with the Spanish flag flying at his mast-head, which so offended Lord William Howard that he fired a shot at him and forced him to strike or haul down his colours before he would make his compliments to the prince. This was followed by another lively example of a like kind. When the Spanish fleet went to fetch Anne of Austria, who was in Flanders, Sir John Hawkins, with a small squadron of her Majesty's ships, was riding in Catwater. The Spanish admiral endeavoured to pass without saluting. Sir John sent a shot at the admiral's rigging, but no notice was taken of it. A second shot went clean through the Spaniard's hull. On this the Don sent an officer of distinction with compliments and complaints to Sir John Hawkins, who refused to admit the officer or hear what he had to say; but simply required him to tell his admiral that, having neglected to pay the respect due to the Queen of England, in her seas and port, he must not expect to lie there, but to be off within twelve hours. Sir John's flag was flying on the Jesus of Lubeck; to this ship came the Spaniard full of remonstrance, declaring he knew not what to make of the treatment he had received, seeing that there was peace between the two Crowns. 'Put the case, sir,' said Sir John, 'that an English fleet came into any of the King, your master's, ports, his Majesty's ships being there, and those English ships should carry their flags on their tops, would not you shoot them down and beat the ships out of your port?' The Spaniard confessed himself in the wrong, and submitted to the penalty the English Admiral imposed. It was the Hollander, however, who gave the English most trouble in regard to the honour of the flag. It was in or about 1604 when Sir William Monson was cruising with a fleet with instructions to assert the superiority in the British seas which came to James I. from his ancestors that the contests about the flag began. Sir William has told the story himself in his Naval Tracts. On his return to Calais in July, 1605, he found an addition of six ships to the Dutch squadron he had left off Dover three days before. One of them was the admiral's. 'Their object,' he says, 'in coming in show was to beleaguer the Spaniards who were then at Dover.' As Sir William approached, the Dutch Admiral struck his flag thrice, meaning that the Spaniards as well as others should conclude that, by continuing to 'wear' his flag, he represented a sovereignty of the sea as complete as that of the English. Sir William requested him to take in his flag; he refused, alleging that he had struck it three times which he held was acknowledgment enough. There was some discussion, after which he was told that if he did not salute, the British Admiral would weigh anchor and fall down to him, and then the force of the ships should determine the question; 'for rather than I would suffer his flag to be worn in view of so many nations as were to behold it, I resolved to bury myself in the sea.' 'The Admiral, it seems, took better advice,' adds Sir William, 'took in his flag and stood immediately off to sea, firing a gun for the rest of the fleet to follow him. And thus I lost my guest the next day at dinner as he had promised.' Amongst others who witnessed this was Sciriago, the Spanish General, who told Sir William that if the Hollanders had worn their flag, times had strangely altered in England, for he remembered his old master King Philip the Second being shot at by the Lord Admiral of England for wearing his flag in the narrow seas when he came to marry Queen Mary.

"The honour of the flag was a distinct element in the origin of the war of 1665. Sir John Lawson, in command of a squadron of ships, was in the Mediterranean with De Ruyter. The Dutch admiral saluted the English flag, a compliment which Lawson refused to return, alleging that his orders did not allow him to strike to the subjects of any king or State whatever. It may be supposed that such treatment pretty liberally envenomed the soul of the fine old Dutchman, who, when he was shortly afterwards sent to commit hostilities against us, made sail on that adventure with a hot heart. In 1674 we find the Dutch in the treaty of peace professing to understand a point that in spite of previous treaties they had refused to admit. In the treaty with Cromwell they had agreed that their ships should salute the English, and in subsequent treaties the same undertaking appears. But their usual apology for failure was that striking was a mere matter of civility, and that if they declined to pull off their hat there was no obligation upon them to do so. But by 1674 the political atmosphere had been cleared by British cannons, and the Dutch were now able to distinguish. The treaty ended the doubt; what was before styled courtesy was here confessed a right. Not only was the extent of the British sovereignty clearly defined; the State undertook that whole fleets, as well as separate ships, 'should strike their sails to any fleet or single ship carrying the King's flag, as the custom was in the days of his ancestors.' It was said by Secretary Coke in letter addressed by order of Charles I. to Sir William Boswell, ambassador at the Hague, 'This cannot be doubted, that whosoever will encroach upon him (the King) by sea will do it by land also, when they see their time.'"

Digitized by Google

A CALL FOR PRAYER AND PRAISE ON BEHALF OF OUR NATION, BRITISH-ISRAEL.

THE opening of the Jubilee Year of Her Majesty's reign seems to be a call to all our British, or Anglo-Israelites, to unite in thanksgiving and prayer to Almighty God for the following spiritual and temporal blessings and mercies:—

Thanksgivings are due—

1st. For our God's blessings granted to us during the long and prosperous reign of our good and highly-favoured Sovereign, Queen Victoria.

2nd. For our great national spiritual gifts—ex. gr., the open Bible, the Sabbath, the ten true laws of God, the missionary spirit, our revivals of religion, and the knowledge of Our Identity with the Lost Ten Tribes.

3rd. For our many national temporal mercies; such as peace and quiet, civil and religious liberty, wealth, our Colonial and Heathen Empires, and our wonderful influence for good among the nations.

Earnest prayer is called for—

1st. For national repentance and change of our people's heart, as promised in Jer. xxxi. 19, 33, 34; Heb. viii. 10—12: Exek. xxxvii. 23.

2nd. For the promised outpouring of God's Holy Spirit upon our masses, as described in Joel ii. 28, 29; Ezek. xxxvii. 14.

3rd. That we may, as a nation, become a blessing to all the nations, all the families, and all the kindreds of the earth, as promised in Gen. xxii. 18, xxviii. 14; Acts iii. 25; Zech. viii. 13, and other Scriptures.

4th. That the Lord Jesus Christ may come quickly to reign over his people Israel and over the world at large, as the following Scriptures declare shall be the case: Rev. xxii. 20; Isa. xxiv. 23; Luke i. 31—33; Rev. xi. 15; Micah iv. 7; 2 Thess. i. 7—10, &c.

It is proposed that Monday, June 20, 1887, the day of Her Majesty's accession to the throne, be set apart by every believer in "Our Identity with the House of Israel" throughout the world, and that praise and prayer ascend up to the throne of grace on high, three times during the day—morning, noon, and night—thanking the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ for mercies vouchsafed to us nationally in the past and present, and praying Him for the rich blessings promised, and yet to come, according to the prophecies.

PHILO-ISRAEL.

January 1st, 1887.

[Issued by ISRAEL'S SCRIPTURE AND PRAYER UNION, and THE ANGLO-ISRAEL FREE DISTRIBUTION FUND].

Correspondence.

AN ISRAELITE JUBILEE FUND TO AID THE EVANGELISATION OF THE HEATHEN WORLD.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—As people are always asking, "What's the good of believing that we are Israelites?" would not this Jubilee Year be a capital opportunity for us to prove that our belief, at all events, brings forth practical fruits? Let us all unite in a Jubilee offering to the "Church Missionary Society," and let it be a public and open subscription. I say distinctly, the "Church Missionary Society" for three reasons:—

1st. That there may be no frittering of the sum itself, or of the minds of the givers, as to "what society shall we choose?"

2nd. That the bulk of believers in our Israelitish origin are (almost necessarily, it seems, from) Church people.

3rd. That the extension of the Messianic kingdom among our heathen inheritance is surely the leading desire of all true Israelites.

If you approve this suggestion, will you speedily appoint a banker and local receiving agents, to whom contributions of any and every amount may at once be forwarded?

I am, sir, faithfully yours, C. F.

P.S.—I will at once forward my own contribution on seeing in the BANNER your arrangements for the receipt of money for this purpose.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—In connection with the missionary meetings which have just been held in London and its suburbs, an idea has occurred to my mind, which, I think, might be carried out, if approved of by you. You know how dear to the heart of all true Anglo-Israelites is the subject of foreign mission work; this year an especial appeal is being made on its behalf. Would it not be glorifying to our Master, and a worthy offering this Jubilee Year, if all BANNER readers would assist in making up a sum of money to be handed over to the Church Missionary Society in the name of the Anglo-Israelites? it would then be seen that we, whilst recognising ourselves as God's peculiar people, also realise our responsibilities as such. Let each give according to his or her means. Many, doubtless, like myself, can contribute but very little, but if each gives something the amount may not prove very insignificant. This, or similar suggestions, may already have been made to you. If so, please pardon me for troubling you, and pray take no notice whatever of it, unless anything I have written commends itself to your judgment; in which case, may I ask you not to let my name appear in print,

May I take this opportunity of thanking you for the instruction I receive from your valuable paper. I feel that your work must have God's blessing upon it, for it is for His glory. Amongst my limited circle of friends, I find the subject of the Identity is being more thought about.

Yours truly, M. C. C.

Stockwell, S.W., Feb. 12, 1887.

NOTE BY THE EDITOR.—We are quite ready to fall in with the suggestion of our two correspondents, whose letters have reached us by the same post. We shall be glad to receive all the contributions, personally, or through Anglo-Israelite Association Secretaries everywhere, acknowledge them in the BANNER, and hand them over finally, about the 20th June next, to the Secretary to the Church Missionary Society, Salisbury-square, London, as "The Jubilee offering of the British-Israelites to the work of Christian evangelisation throughout the world." God has greatly blessed the Church Missionary Society, and we hope all our readers will acknowledge their responsibility as men and women of Israel to help on that work.—PHILO-ISRAEL, a District Association Secretary (C. M. S.), Feb. 20, 1887.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—As a result of your recent review of Captain George Palmer's pamphlet, the gallant officer will, I think, frankly admit that he has been not only refuted but enlightened. With regard to his objections to the possibility and probability of the Ten Tribes having abandoned their Semitic tongue and adopted an Aryan-Indo-European one, as involving absurd postulates, I put part of your argument thus:—If the Ten Tribes were to be lost—that is, if their identity was to be destroyed for a time, is it likely that they would be allowed to keep their own language as a palpable, striking mark of who and what they were? That would indeed be an absurd presumption. Reason suggests irresistibly that one of the things that would be brought about to prevent their identification for a time would be a complete change of tongue, rendered easy by contact with other nations.

Yours faithfully, J. A. S.

Feb. 5, 1887.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

SIR,—I have just been reading a very interesting work (sent to us from Australia) on the colony of Victoria; and on pages 165, 212, 213, occur the passages which I have copied, and now forward to you, and which, perhaps, you will think worthy of a place in the BANNER:—

Page 165.—"Perhaps, to home readers, we could hardly give a better idea of Melbourne and its surroundings, than by again quoting from one of James Smith's descriptive articles:—'Englishmen reproduce England wherever they go. Is it the ingrained love of precedent, the deep distrust of innovation, and the profound reverence for authority which constitute the very substance of the national character that impel us to be so careful of the type, so imitative of the Imperial model? Is it affection for what is old, and familiar, and home-like? Or the want of imaginative and inventive power? Or is it the conservative instinct which is born with us, and asserts itself in each of us the moment we acquire something that is worth conserving? Why does society, so soon as it has emerged from an inorganic condition, arrange itself in the same groups, fall as far as practicable into the same habits and usages in democratic Victoria as it does in aristocratic England? And why should many of the features—topographical and social—of London and its suburbs, which Cowper compares to a swarth Indian with his belt of beads, repeat themselves in Melbourne and its precincts? It can be neither by accident, nor design, but owing to certain natural tendencies, and propensities, operating unconsciously to ourselves, but with a constant and irresistible force. Be this as it may, and all hypothesis apart, the repetition or reproduction is a substantial fact."

Digitized by Google

Pages 212 and 213.—"Society in Victoria, subjected to the sifting process of four decades, has, though in a lesser degree, the cliques and 'sets' of older countries; but whatever divisions may thus exist, all Victorians unite in a fervent spirit of loyalty to the throne, a keen appreciation of the value of a British birthright. The constant use of the term 'home,' as applied to Great Britain generally, in itself serves to show how warm is this attachment, how little the sense of severance, even though 'rolling seas divide.' Ninety-five per cent of Victorians are British subjects by birth, and ready any day to join in such a chorus as the following, sung for a season on the local stage, and invariably greeted with storms of applause:—

"'There is not a strong right hand
Through all this Southern land,
But would draw a sword in dear old England's cause;
Our numbers may be few,
But we've loyal hearts and true,
And the lion's cubs have got the lion's claws.'"

Yours truly,

H. W. Gosden.

Glenrose, Longley-road, Tooting Graveney, Jan. 3, 1887.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

Dear Sir,—In perusing a volume of sermons (published 1871) by the Rev. James MacIvor, D.D., M.R.I.A., in the chapel of Trinity College, Dublin, I have been much struck with the following passage, among indeed many others of deep import. There seemed to me in it so much of blind witness and true spiritual instinct, that, feeling incapable myself adequately to comment on it, it has occurred to me to send you a copy of it, to do with as you think fit.

There is just one thought I wanted to add in connection with another subject—viz., the interpretation of the prophetic visions of the beasts in Daniel and Revelation. It would save some confusion if it were found to be a true principle (as I am persuaded it is) that no great world-power or system is ever typified in this way, or made the subject of prophecy, that has not to do with the people and the land. I mean, directly to do with them, either for good or ill, or both. Hence the Moslem Empire replaces the moribund Eastern, Roman, or Greek Empire, and is continuing to this day the Gentile power, "treading down" Jerusalem, although meanwhile, in Western Europe, great and more influential powers have had sway. This view is quite in accordance with the article in the Banner, of October 6, by Alex. MacPhail on the four beasts in Daniel and St. John's vision in Rev. xvii. and xiii.; but not with those, as stated and combated by the "Review" on page 481, in the Banner of Dec. 1, 1886.

Yours truly,

A German.

December 5, 1886.

Page 278, &c.—"There seems a very general impression that we are passing through a like transition now (the transition alluded to is the period of the reformation), and that the immediate future of the world will show some vast advance on all preceding periods. Men now 'run to and fro, and knowledge is multiplied on the earth; to an extent that hitherto was inconceivable. This is indeed the character of our times, and its moral results must be immense. Before it all partition walls must be prostrated; men's conceptions enlarged, perhaps with violence; definite sentiments and definite opinions bewildered or impaired, and a commingling, assimilation and expectancy produced, which, however high and effective in some respects, will seem to many, and will often be, in fact, a weakening of the most just and necessary bonds. Such agitation of society and threatened chaos could only be the beginning of some further end, the genesis of some new Sabbath light, to create and lead a higher dispensation. . . . . And who may tell how soon? Not we, brethren, and not the angels of God, and not the Son Himself. The Father hath set it in His own power. For us to know would manifestly derange the Church's functions, and distract her duty. She is as though she were in the middle of her work, with vast deficiencies to be made good at home, still vaster beyond her pale. . . . Many tokens 'of that day and hour' are given, and we are commanded to note them well. . . .

"But must not large preparations precede 'that day,' and, specially, must not the Gospel be preached in every nation under heaven? Yes, it must. But who may tell by what voice from earth, or heaven, or human feeling, the true message of that Gospel shall be commanded to make its way, or by what power of the Spirit made effectual? or who may gauge for the world or Church, any more than for the individual, what amount of warning, and patience, and preparation, should precede the great transition? Nay, it is for us to watch; it is not for us to know. And that amazing parable, which seems designed to teach us all history and prophecy, all religion and theology at once—the story of the prodigal and of the other son—may remind us even of this, that time itself may be compressed, and some intensity of purifying vision work profoundest change. One broad, deep, natural thought within the outcast's breast, and one overwhelming vision of his father's face, have brought the lost one to himself, and more than restored him to the arms of home. And one gentle remonstrance—nay, entreaty—with the elder son, is enough to melt again that more disciplined and holy, yet more narrow heart, and brings him, too, within the strong contagion of that natural joy that blended earth and heaven. All we look for, perhaps an hour or a moment will effect, when the Eternal has unveiled His heart, and all things are at one. No doubt each will be rewarded and placed according to his works, and well-earned Terror will mingle with our Joy. But the sum of all will be some depth of mercy such as we dare not either ask or think. And if this be the end—and what else could be the 'end'?—surely its foretaste may inspire our energies to fellow-work therewith."

N.B.—The italics and capitals are the author's; also the words between inverted commas.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

Dear Sir,—The Rev. Thomas Lowe, M.B.A.S., is one of the most able and popular ministers and authors in Primitive Methodism, and is powerfully impressed with the identity of Anglo-Saxons as Israel. If he become a witness and advocate for Israel, it will be, I fully believe, a vast blessing to many thousands, as his name is a household word in our Churches of one hundred thousand members, and his ministry of speech and writing reaches so very many in Great Britain and her colonies. Do write him an encouraging letter, and send him such paper or pamphlet you deem suitable in his case. He has decided to take the Banner weekly.

Henry Roe.

Rock-villa, Dawley, Salop, Jan. 18, 1887.

N.B.—Another of our preachers recently read my "Israel's World," and confessed being a convert to the Identity. So the light is spreading. Even my trials for Israel's sake are leading ministers to examine and believe. Praise the Lord.

THE ANGLO-ISRAEL FREE DISTRIBUTION FUND.

Thirty-ninth Monthly Report.

The following donations and subscriptions, from Jan. 15 to Feb. 12, 1887, are very gratefully acknowledged:—

Received by the Hon. Treasurer, Miss J. Lawrence: Mrs. S., New Hampton, 2s.; F. W., George Town, 5s.; Mrs. C., Ryde, 5s.; A Friend, Worthing, 3s.; H. G. (monthly sub.), 1s.; Mrs. M., Doncaster, 3s.

£0 19s. 0d.

By the Hon. Sec., Miss E. M. Rush: From "A Friend," with parcel of Banners, 2s. 6d.; Major P., 5s.; E. S., 9d.; E. L., £1; L. L., 1s.; M. O., 4s. 6d.; Mrs. M., 5s.; E. S., 9d.; "A Friend," per Mr. May, Malta, £1; J. C. M., 2s. 6d.; Anon., per E. P. D., 2s. 6d.; "Nemo," £1; Rev. T. W. B., £1 1s.; Master-Gunner P., 2s. 6d.; "A Sower," Bridge of Allan, £1; Lady W., 10s.

£6 18s.

By the Secretary: Mrs. T., Sheffield, 1s.; G. H. C., Stockport, 5s.; W. L. H., per Mr. Waters, 4s.; The Lady J. E., £1; Mrs. H., Bromley, 1s.; Mrs. C. B. (monthly sub.), 5s.

£1 16s. Total £8 14s.

Digitized by Google

NOTE.—Last month's statement requires correction. The donation from Lady J. E., £5, being intended for the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association, the total receipts were only £10 12s. 9d.

BANNERS are forwarded weekly by the Secretary, to Ohio, U.S.A.; twenty-four monthly to Birkenhead, two to Maesteg, one to Wandsworth Free Library, Southampton, three to Upper Teddington, Osborne. Messengers to Upper Teddington, Richmond and Wandsworth Free Libraries, two copies to British Guiana, one to Rome, Osborne, Tasmania, etc. Sundry parcels of pamphlets and leaflets to Sheffield, to the "Thames Mission to Seamen" (including 100 BANNERS), Richmond, Stockport; Gravely-hill, Birmingham; South Hayling, Sunderland, Bromley in Kent.

By Miss E. M. Rush: Thirty-two packets to Brixton, Catford, Notting-hill, Shadwell, Stepney, Silvertown, Chatham, Farnborough, Westgate, Dover, Walmer, Portsmouth, Ponsanooth (Cornwall), Ripon, Northroe (N.B.), Dublin, Malta; Montreal, Toronto, Moose Jaw (Canada); Cleveland (U.S.), Barbadoes, Fiji Islands, Moulmein (Burmah), Cape Town, Blackfen (for Constantinople).

One hundred and twenty-four BANNERS have been sent out weekly, and in addition twelve fortnightly.

We are pleased to inform our friends that new fields have been opened up in the neighbourhood of Birmingham, Stockport, and Crewe, three gentlemen in those respective localities being desirous of circulating our literature.

The Free Distribution Fund has received from the Queensland Anglo-Israel Association, Brisbane, through their Secretary, G. R. Townsend, Esq., fifty copies of a pamphlet, entitled, "Confederation," for distribution, with a request that any publications we may have to spare will be gladly accepted by them. On behalf of the Fund, the Secretary has cordially responded by writing a letter of thanks to Mr. Townsend, and despatching a miscellaneous assortment of pamphlets and leaflets, best adapted for circulation.

We have also to acknowledge a few copies of the Anglo-Israelite, now in the seventh year of its existence, from the esteemed Editor, James Warner, Esq., Sergeant-at-Arms, Queensland Parliament.

Our chief Sower at Sheffield gives a most encouraging report of the progress made there, and in the adjacent districts. A staff of six companion Sowers are energetically spreading the news, and it is often our lament that we cannot always adequately meet their demands. It is also expected that other friends will, in like manner, come forward and join the present staff.

A new "Sower" at Crewe, believes there is very little knowledge of the discovery of Israel in that town, and offers his kind help to make the cause better known. He adds the pleasure it affords him in reading our monthly record of progress.

Our Sower at Birkenhead reports: "The six copies of the BANNER, now received each week for free distribution, are doing good service here. I find none of our literature of greater value, it seems to open people's eyes at once; and having, beside, a deeply Scriptural and common-sense ring about it, goes at once to the understanding of an enquirer. I give one copy each week to the Young Men's Christian Association, and five amongst the members of the Working Men's Bible-class, many of whom are now deeply interested; besides my own copy each week—for four years past—to the Free Library." In a still later despatch he states that two of his class have been won for Christ, and eight total abstainers from all intoxicating liquors. This active Sower has now a Bible-class of forty-five working-men, who are taking such interest in the subject of the resurrection of Israel in Britain, that the demand for various publications is considerable.

CHARLES HORNER, Secretary.

Contributions to the Fund will be thankfully received and acknowledged by the Hon. Treasurer, Miss J. Lawrence, Rosslyn, Hampton-road, Upper Teddington, Middlesex; by the Hon. Secretary, Miss E. M. Rush, 103, Burnt-Ash Road, Lee, London; or by Mr. Charles Horner, 34, Sheen-park, Richmond-on-Thames. Grants of literature will be made, as far as funds allow, on application to the Secretary, or Miss E. M. Rush.

ISRAEL'S SCRIPTURE AND PRAYER UNION.

SINCE our last report three new members have been added to the list, the total number now is 1,421. Two Cards have also been given out by our agent at Malta.

The prayers of the Union are asked in behalf of the members of a Bible-class, who are receiving Identity teaching, "that the young men may not only believe in Israel's God, but accept Christ into their hearts."

A short article, headed, "A Call for Prayer and Praise," by Philo-Israel, which appeared in the BANNER a few weeks ago, has been printed separately, copies of which will be gladly supplied to members on application to Miss Sibbald.

Towards the expense of printing the above "Call" 5s. has been received from E. L., Teddington, and 1s. from J. D., Chatham, towards the expenses of the Union.

For the convenience of those members who wish to continue the daily reading, the following list of chapters for March are printed:—

1st ... Psalm xxiv.	12th ... Psa. xxxv.	22nd ... Psa. xlv.
2nd ... „ xxv.	13th ... „ xxxvi.	23rd ... „ xlvi.
3rd ... „ xxvi.	14th ... „ xxxvii.	24th ... „ xlvii.
4th ... „ xxvii.	15th ... „ xxxviii.	25th ... „ xlviii.
5th ... „ xxviii.	16th ... „ xxxix.	26th ... „ xlix.
6th ... „ xxix.	17th ... „ xl.	27th ... „ l.
7th ... „ xxx.	18th ... „ xli.	28th ... „ li.
8th ... „ xxxi.	19th ... „ xlii.	29th ... „ lii.
9th ... „ xxxii.	20th ... „ xliii.	30th ... „ liii.
10th ... „ xxxiii.	21st ... „ xliv.	31st ... „ liv.
11th ... „ xxxiv.

The card of membership will be sent on receipt of three stamps.

The first and second series of Monthly Comments on the whole Bible, by Philo-Israel, may now be obtained in volume form. Price in paper cover 1s. 2d. each; in cloth 2s. each, post free.

The "Prayers for Daily Use," being a prayer for each day of the week, by Philo-Israel, are 1d., or 9d. per dozen, postage extra.

The prayer of the Union, as on the Card of Membership, may now be obtained printed in larger type, price 1d. for three copies, post free; or 1s. per 100 for distribution. Address: Miss E. Sibbald, 3, Townshend-villas, Richmond, Surrey.

THE BRISTOL AND CLIFTON ISRAEL'S IDENTIFICATION ASSOCIATION.

The Treasurer in Account for the year ended December 31, 1886.

RECEIPTS.	£	s.	d.	DISBURSEMENTS.	£	s.	d.
Cash in hand	8	0	6½	By Messrs. Banks' Acct.	0	14	8½
Donations and Subscriptions	15	2	6	„ Travelling Allowances for Lecturers	2	16	6
Collections at Meetings	11	17	8	„ Affiliation fee, Metro. Ang.-Isrl. Assoctn.	1	1	0
				„ Hire of Rooms ...	15	10	0
				„ Printing and Advts.	12	6	11
				Balance for New Year carried forward ...	2	11	7
	£35	0	8½		£35	0	8½

Examined with vouchers and found correct,

January 26, 1887. C. GODFREY ASHWIN, M.A., Clerk.

O. ANDREWS, M.D., Hon. Treasurer,
Clifton, January 1, 1887.

The arrangements for the Lectures of this Association for the current half year, are as follows:—

For Friday, January 28, Mr. E. W. Bird.
„ February 25, Commander Roberts, R.N.
„ March 25, The Rev. J. Billington.
„ April 29, Miss V. M. Cox.
„ May 27, Surgeon-General J. M. Grant, M.D.
„ June 24, H. Brittain, Esq.

By order of the Committee,

E. W. BIRD, Hon. Sec.

841959

Digitized by Google

NOTICES.

All communications intended for the Editor, to be addressed: — "Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Clifton, Bristol.

SUBSCRIPTIONS £ s. d.

Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free - 0 7 6
Two Copies (including Double Numbers) - - 0 13 6
Three Copies ,, ,, ,, ,, - 1 0 4
Four Copies ,, ,, ,, ,, - 1 5 6
Six Copies ,, ,, ,, ,, - 1 16 4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-grand, London, to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C., or F. W. PARRY & Co., 29, Paternoster-row, London.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

Contents Bills and Show Cards may be obtained on application to the Publishers.

Advertisements should be sent to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

Prepaid Advertisements are inserted at the rate of 30 words for 1s. 4d.

A LECTURE

WILL BE DELIVERED (D.V.) ON

"Our Present Position as Delineated in the Features of the Great Pyramid,"

BY REV. H. MARRIOTT, M.A.,

AT THE

ASSEMBLY ROOMS, BATH,

On March 2, at 3 p.m.

A LECTURE

ON

"MISSION WORK IN JERUSALEM,"

WILL BE GIVEN (D.V.)

BY REV. H. MARRIOTT, M.A.

(Some time resident in that City), at

EXETER HALL (LOWER ROOM), STRAND

On March 3, at 3 p.m.

PUBLISHED BY ROBT. BANKS & SON,
RACQUET COURT, FLEET STREET, E.C.

WORKS BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

The Geography of the Gates. With Map and six full page, and one double-page, Illustrations, printed on plate paper. 208 pages, in handsome cloth, gilt Price 3s. 6d., post free 3s. 10d.

An Elementary Digest or Sketch of the Chief Facts and Teachings of the Great Pyramid of Egypt. Adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific 56 pages, Illustrated with Diagrams, price 4d., post free 5d. 10th Thousand.

Our Identity with the House of Israel. Price 4d. Reprinted from "Clifton Chronicle Letters"

A Resume of the Scriptural Argument, proving the Identity of the British Race with the Lost Ten Tribes. Price 1d.; 6s. per 100. New edition now ready.

The History of the House of Israel; How they were Lost, and How they were Found, Told for the Children. Price 6d., cloth 1s.; post free 7d. and 1s. 1d. Fourth Edition. Eleventh thousand.

Robert Banks and Son, Printers, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

Price 6d., post free 7d.

ISRAEL'S CHRONOLOGY, compiled from the Old Testament, and arranged as a CHART giving the A.M. and B.C. dates, and Scripture references for every event therein specified, together with the points of agreement between the Bible History and the Marks and Measurements of the Great Pyramid. With Explanatory Notes and Observations by GEORGE N. WALSH.

London: Robert Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-st.

Price 3d., post free 3½d.

PRESENT-DAY PROBLEMS,

How Anglo-Israel Truth Explains and Solves Them.

By V. M. COX

Author of Ephraim-Israel, the Pivot Nation of Prophecy and History

"A book to read is 'Present-Day Problems: How Anglo-Israel Truth Explains and Solves Them.' By V. M. Cox. This little book is an excellent summary of the clearance effected in the great burning questions of the time, the moment it is understood that the Anglo-Saxon folk is the very Israel of God. Federation of the Empire, the Irish question, the Eastern question, our relation to Russia, our hold on Egypt, submitted to this solvent, become parts of one intelligible scheme. The paragraphs on Foreign Missions, as the special work of Israel, and on our relation to our fellows of the tribe of Judah, are especially good.—The Messenger.

Published by ROBERT BANKS & SON,

RACQUET COURT, FLEET STREET, E.C.

Postal Orders may be obtained at any Post Office in the United Kingdom for the following amounts: 1s., 1s. 6d., ½d. each; 2s., 2s. 6d., 3s., 3s 6d. 4s., 4s. 6d., 5s, 7s. 6d., 10s., 10s. 6d., 1d each; 15s., 20s., 1½d. each. They should be "crossed" City Bank, Ludgate Hill, E.C. Stamps received.

JEHOVAH TRIUMPHANT. The New and Complete Theology and Electric Light of the Bible, containing the History of British-Israel, Compiled from the Sacred Scriptures. Cloth gilt, price 10s. 6d., post free for Postal Order or Cheque.

THE GEOGRAPHY OF THE GATES. By PHILO-ISRAEL. With Map, and six full page, and one double-page, Illustrations, printed on plate paper. 208 pages, in handsome cloth, gilt. Price 3s. 6d.; post free.

THE WORD: THE WORLD: THE BRANCH. By J. LEYLAND FIELDEN, Esq. Price 12s., post free.

EPHRAIM-ENGLAND. The Nineteenth Century Revelation of the Fruits of History. By Rev. R. DOUGLAS, Vicar of Kidsgrove. Cloth gilt, lettered, 4s., gilt edges 5s., free by post.

FIFTY REASONS WHY THE ANGLO-SAXONS ARE ISRAELITES of the Lost Tribes of the House of Israel. By Rev. W. H. POOLE, D.D. Price 6d., post free 7d.

BIBLE LESSONS AND REFLECTIONS. By the late ROBERT GAIRDNER, of Kilmarnock, N.B. Price 2s. 6d., by post 2s. 9d.; cheap edition, limp cloth, 1s., by post, 1s. 2d.

THE ANGLO-ISRAEL POST-BAG; or, How Arthur Came to See It. By the Right Rev. BISHOP TITCOMB. Price 2s. 6d. in cloth gilt; paper cover, 1s. 6d., by post 1d. extra.

THE ISRAELITES FOUND IN THE ANGLO-SAXONS. The Ten Tribes supposed to have been Lost, traced from the land of their captivity to their occupation of the Isles of the Sea. By WILLIAM CARPENTER. Price 2s. 6d., by post 2s. 8d.

THE ANSWER TO THE EASTERN QUESTION. With Some Facts Concerning the Identity of the British With Israel. By the Author of "The New Old Story." enlarged. Price 3d.; for distribution, 50 copies, 11s., post free.

CARDINAL PROOFS THAT THE BRITISH Are the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel — the Abrahamic Covenant. By F. W. PHILLIPS. With two chapters by PHILO-ISRAEL. Price 6d., post free 7d.

THE NEW OLD STORY. By "A.E.I." Price 6d., post free; in cloth, 1s., post free.

THE BIBLE ATLAS. To Illustrate the Old and New Testaments. Price 1s.; post free 1s. 1d.

ANGLO-ISRAEL TRACTS. 8 pp. Royal 16mo., on toned paper. Adapted to enclose in letters, and for general distribution. No. 1—12. Half-penny each, 12 copies post free, 6d. Specimen packet for 6 stamps.

Dr. JOSEPH WILD'S WORKS

NEW EDITION JUST PUBLISHED.

THE LOST TEN TRIBES

Price 3s., post free 3s. 3d.

The FUTURE of ISRAEL and JUDAH.

Price 2s., post free 2s. 3d.

Printed and Published by ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet Court, Fleet Street, E.C.

ISRAEL IN THE NEW TESTAMENT

OR,

Proofs of the National Conversion of the Ten Tribes to Christianity.

By SURGEON-GENERAL J. M. GRANT, M.D.

Author of "Jeshurun," etc.

Price 4d., post free, 4½d.; 12 Copies, post free, 4s.

London: R. Banks and Son, Racquet Court, Fleet St., and by order of all Booksellers.

Knight & Forsters PENS

KNIGHT & FORSTER LEEDS.

For Bold Writing no Pens can surpass "THE UNIVERSITY" Broad Point (3s. per gross, or 1s. per ¼-gross); while for Smooth and Clear Work "The Ledger" Pen (2s. per gross) stands supreme. GREAT THOUGHTS says: "They are a great help."

KNIGHT & FORSTER LEEDS.

"THE LEDGER" PEN.

London: STRAKER & SONS, 124, FENCHURCH ST., And of all Stationers; or direct from the Makers, post free.

BASINGHALL WORKS, LEEDS.

CASES FOR BINDING VOL. X.

ARE NOW READY,

Price 1s. 6d., post free 1s. 8d.

Robert Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

THE TEETH, THE TEETH, THOSE PRECIOUS TEETH!

Save, Purify, Beautify.

GEORGE & WELCH'S

CARBOLINE

1/6 (TOOTH PASTE). 2/6 per Pot.

Is the Best Known Cleanser, Preserver, and Deodoriser.

Dental Guide says:—"No Tooth application equals the Carbolics."

Proprietors: GEORGE & WELCH, Worcester.

Through Chemists, or Post Free from Makers.

LUNG OWBRIDGE'S TONIC
LUNG LUNG TONIC, TONIC
LUNG THE MIGHTY HEALER. TONIC
LUNG Save Your Lives by Taking TONIC
LUNG OWBRIDGE'S LUNG TONIC. TONIC
LUNG It has a power over diseases hitherto TONIC
LUNG unknown in Medicine. TONIC
LUNG Are you at all Weak-chested or inclined TONIC
LUNG to be Consumptive, with just a touch of TONIC
LUNG Cough now and then? TONIC
LUNG "Try this Wonderful Medicine." The TONIC
LUNG Cough and Weakness will disappear as TONIC
LUNG if by magic, and you will feel a strength TONIC
LUNG and power you never had before. TONIC
LUNG HAVE YOU A COUGH? TONIC
LUNG A DOSE WILL RELIEVE IT. TONIC
LUNG HAVE YOU A COLD? TONIC
LUNG A DOSE AT BEDTIME WILL TONIC
LUNG REMOVE IT. TONIC
LUNG Bronchitis & Asthma it relieves instantly TONIC
LUNG The Spasms of Coughing so dreadful in TONIC
LUNG Whooping Cough become less with each dose TONIC
LUNG of the medicine. —— TONIC
LUNG Prepared by W. T. OWBRIDGE, Chemist, Hull TONIC
LUNG Sold in Bottles 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d. & TONIC
LUNG 11s. by all Chemists and Patent Medicine TONIC
LUNG Vendors. Wholesale all London and TONIC
LUNG Provincial Houses. TONIC

ETHELINE

A New and most effective Remedy for CORNS.—Perfectly safe and harmless is very easily applied. Cures in a few applications, without the slightest pain. Everyone troubled with either Corns, Warts, or Bunions, will find relief by using ETHELINE. To be obtained of all Chemists, or post free for 14 stamps from J. LLEWELLYN, CHEMIST, COWBRIDGE.

A BOON TO SUFFERERS.

HARNESS' ELECTROPATHIC BELT.

Testimonial

From Miss J. HOULDSWORTH, Rozelle, Ayr, N.B.

"I am glad to be able to tell you that the HARNESS' ELECTRIC BATTERY BELT has been very beneficial in strengthening the system generally, as well as instrumental in relieving the Neuralgic pains from which I have suffered.

NEURALGIA & DEBILITY.

Every man and woman suffering from any disorder of the Nerves, Stomach, Liver, or Kidneys, should at once stop physicing, and remit six stamps for HARNESS' ELECTROPATHIC BELT (post free) and obtain immediate relief. Pamphlet and Book of Testimonials POST FREE. MEDICAL BATTERY CO. Ltd.

52, OXFORD STREET, LONDON, W.

Corner of Rathbone Place

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. F. W. PARRY (late GUEST & Co.), 29, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, MAR. 2, 1887. [All rights reserved.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."

(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx 4

VOL. XI., No. 532. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, MARCH 9, 1887. [PRICE ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
The Two Greatest Facts in the Physical History of Nations	101
From the Pedigree of the English People. Forwarded by L. P	102
Another Clerical Objector	103
The Mighty Nation, Blessed and Blessing. By J. Thomson	104
The Rev. Henry Ward Beecher on England and America	106
"How Soon." By the Rev. Denis Hanan, B.D.	106
Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association	107
Correspondence	107

"THE TWO GREATEST FACTS IN THE PHYSICAL HISTORY OF NATIONS."

WHAT possibly can be these "Two Greatest Facts in the Physical History of Nations"? The expression occurs in the leading article of the Scottish News of Feb. 5, 1887, and had reference to the unique position of the British people. Two of the national facts in their history are, it seems, "the greatest in the physical history of nations." The facts which so captivate the imagination of a secular journalist are unique Identity facts, closely bound up with the history of God's people Israel, as described in the prophecies of the living God. They are these, as the journalist describes them: "First, we have colonised the New World; and secondly, we have given peace to the Old. On the one hand, we have stamped with our civilisation continents that will yet contain 250 millions of our race; and on the other, we have saved from hopeless decay an ancient land where as great a population now rests securely under our rule," meaning, of course, British India.

The great continent of North America has been colonised by this our own race, and though Europe has poured into the midst thereof her millions of foreign emigrants, the product is still British only. Our race, which is the strongest, has absorbed all the rest, and the language, religion, laws, institutions, manners, and customs of the New World are British Anglo-Saxon only, but not European at all. There at present are 55 millions of our race located. It requires no great stretch of the imagination to believe that before very long a people who double their numbers once in 25 years, will reach the stupendous aggregate of 250 millions in a little over 50 years from this our time.

In India we have already 250 millions of dusky fellow-subjects, a cluster of mentally active Hindu and Mohammedan nations, who had fallen into the lethargy of ages of neglect, when we appeared upon the scene and woke up the dormant mind of the East. Hopeless decay had set in; but India was saved from it by the interference of British-Israel, who have given that Land of the Sun not only the Bible, the Sabbath, and the Gospel of Christ, but, besides and beyond those three gifts of God, civil and religious liberty, wealth, and the power to get it, peace, safety, and commerce, and protection from all foreign foes.

These, then, are the two greatest facts in the physical history of nations, and they meet in our own thrice blessed nation. But what are these "greatest of facts?" They are blessings promised by God Himself to His people Israel exclusively. They are the gifts prophetically granted, without conditions, to Joseph in the latter days, when God said of him, in Gen. xlix. 22, R.V., "Joseph is a fruitful bough, a fruitful bough by a fountain. His branches (or daughters = colonies) run over the wall." The peace we have given to the Old World, that is, to the Heathen Empire of the East, is the Lord's gift to Israel when, in Psa. cxi. 6, He declared that "He hath shewed His people the power of His works, in giving them the heritage of the heathen." "The two greatest facts of the physical history of nations" thus merely illustrate God's dealings with His own people Israel; and as all His works towards them are glorious and unparalleled, it is meet that the two greatest facts should be Identity facts, since they are national, physical, and historical, proving that "He hath not dealt so with any nation" but theirs. In grace it is the same. "He showeth His word unto Jacob, His statutes and His judgments unto Israel. He hath not dealt so with any nation, and as for His judgments they have not known them" (Psa. cxlvii. 19, 20).

The vast increase of the British people has enabled them to lay hold of the New World. But this is only half the tale. The unparalleled exuberance of our population has given us also Australasia, where 3½ millions of our race are already domiciled, where, too, the 3½ will, at the present rate of increase, become over 100 millions in about 125 years. South Africa, a third "desolation," or "desolate heritage" of the earth, is also ours by reason of our unique powers of multiplication, and thus the two pre-eminently great facts of the physical history of nations resolve themselves into the most remarkable confirmations of our nation's Identity with Lost Israel that the most sceptical opponent could demand.

But the matter does not end even here. For our national increase has not only compelled us to lay our hands upon the distant desolations of the earth as our colonial possessions, but it has also forced us to seize all the strategic positions of the world in the direct line by sea to these outlying colonies from our Isles of the West, in order that by means of these "Gates" we may at all seasons navigate the ocean highways which lead to our outland Empire; among the rest on Egypt, which is the very heart and centre of the route, and is now necessary to the very existence of our Imperial power East and West, and North and South, of that strategic central land. Consequently God has, in a most mysterious, miraculous manner, placed it in our charge. In August, 1882, when the nations of Europe voluntarily left us face to face with Arabi Pasha, and thus handed Egypt over to our charge, we became possessed of it, and that possession, we believe, will never change. What we are doing there, and what the result will be, has been well told in the Scottish News of Feb. 5. Let us conclude our remarks by quoting its words:—

Digitized by Google

It is too true that our connection with Egypt has been in some part a miserable story of wicked and foolish blundering, subservient to the demands of party expediency in Parliament. What is done cannot be undone, but it may be atoned. If we have done wrong, we will not right it by ignoring the conditions that we have created. If there is blood on our hands, it is no sign of repentance to wash them and walk away. We are doing good in Egypt, and we may fairly hope to do more. Then, by all means, let us go on. What has to be done is very simple, and it is a matter in which we have ample experience. Our task in Egypt is very similar to that in India save that in the smaller country it is rendered more difficult by the doubt that rests on our tenure, and by the Conventions which permit the ruffians and adventurers of all nations to defy the properly-constituted tribunals, and appeal to the biassed decisions of their own Consuls. These difficulties must be faced. If they can be overcome, as indeed they are being overcome to a great extent, and if we can continue to extend to Egypt the blessings of good government, this generation will do a work inferior only in magnitude to that whose glories they have inherited.

We are in Egypt "because of a train of deeds which is part of the world's irrevocable story, and we are enabled to stay there with the assent of the world, and without danger to ourselves, or to anyone." The cost is £50,000 a year to a nation of 36 millions, and this trifle gives us a steadily increasing trade, and a tighter grip of the nation's highway to the East from the West, where, as Israel, we are established by our God, the God of Israel. To Him be all the praise.

FROM THE PEDIGREE OF THE ENGLISH PEOPLE.*

FORWARDED BY L. P.

THE Roman residents withdrew, en masse, from Britain when the military occupation terminated. The fact thus stated, if true, is a very surprising one. The Romans had been masters in Britain for more than 400 years. They had been engaged in all the enterprises in which a conquering people delight in a newly acquired land. They had made colossal fortunes; had been born and educated here, for eight or ten generations running in the same families; their sires and grandsires for as many generations were buried here; cities, large and splendid, temples classic and colossal, villas and baths, rivalling those of Baiæ and Pompeii; fortresses, roads, bridges, amphitheatres, which would command the admiration of ages, had been reared by them all over the island; and the images and altars of their gods consecrated a thousand spots from South to North. And yet, no sooner does the army vanish, than the Roman people quit the island, leaving all these splendid and precious memorials of their wealth, genius, and piety to be the property of the liberated Britons. It is an astounding fact.

The Triad relates that "the third invading tribe which came to the Isle of Britain, and departed from it, were the Cæsarians, who, through violence, continued in this island upwards of 400 years, until they went back into the country of Rhufain (Rome), . . . and there remained of these only women and young children under the age of nine years, who became a part of the Cymry."

Scarcely is anything of the kind known elsewhere in history, and yet we can hardly disbelieve the representation. We have a difficulty in accounting for it [Identity believers have not!], but the fact cannot be cavilled at.

When the Romans withdrew, the population of Britain was substantially Celtic, as they found it. Neither the occasional immigrants from North Germany, nor the influx from Italy during the Imperial rule, produced any such change in the inhabitants as to render it inappropriate still to call them the ancient Britons.

Once the land was free from the repressive power of strangers, the original race resumed its old position, and we need no better evidence that the Government of Rome had never obliterated the distinctions of rank and family recognised among the Britons than the fact that when this resumption of power was set on foot the genealogies of the princes were known, and the rightful claimants to power identified. [Here we think of the tribal distinctions of the descendants of Jacob being preserved during the captivity in Egypt.]

"The researches of modern historians unequivocally favour the opinion that under the names of Gauls, Gaels, Gwyddyls, Celts, Cimerie, Cimbri, Cymry, Brython, Lloegrians, Scots, and Picts, only one race, under different tribe or clan divisions, political organisations, and periods of existence, is spoken of; and while different degrees of diversity, through shorter or longer periods of estrangement and foreign admixture, had intervened, still no such diversity prevailed as would materially affect their unity and integrity, and hence the classification as one people."

Again, "The Belgœ of Britain, therefore, were of a cognate race with the Cymry, and their presence under a name somewhat non-Celtic disturbs not the substantial unity and integrity of the ancient Britons."

But we have historic as well as philologic testimony respecting the Celtic character of the Belgœ. Out of some fifteen Belgic tribes enumerated by Cæsar, he selects only three or four as distinctively Germanic. To none of the great tribes of Belgica, but only to a few of the more insignificant, does Tacitus attribute a Germanic origin. Such is the case with Strabo. The Galatœ of Asia Minor are allowed to be Celts, but St. Jerome testifies that the Belgic Treviri spoke a language similar to theirs.

ENGLISH LAW.

Did the Anglo-Saxons to any extent adopt the ancient British laws? We are not writing for the information of lawyers; they all know that the question can only be answered in the affirmative. The Anglo-Saxons certainly did to some extent embody in their Code, when they became ripe to construct one, elements belonging distinctly to the ancient British jurisprudence. The quantum was, perhaps small, but it was there.

Sir F. Palgrave, no mean authority, has written thus:—"Opposed as the native and the stranger were to each other, the main lines and landmarks of their jurisprudence were identical. They agreed in their usages respecting crimes and punishment; they agreed in allowing the homicide to redeem his guilt by making compensation to the relatives of the slain; they agreed in the use of trial by ordeal and by compurgation; and these being the chief features of the law, and of its administration, the question whether such analagous customs be of British or of Saxon origin is little more than a mere verbal dispute."

We shall again quote Sir F. Palgrave in the judgment he pronounces upon the quality of the ancient British legislation. The readers of the "School Histories of England" will, of course, decline to understand such language. The Britons

* By Thomas Nicholas; 3rd edition, 1873.

Digitized by Google

are known to have been barbarians, and therefore such sentiments must be absurd, etc.

"The historical order prevailing in this code," says Palgrave, "shows that it was framed with considerable care, and the customs it comprehends bear the impress of great antiquity. . . . The character of the British legislation is enhanced by comparison with the laws which were put in practice amongst the other nations of the Middle Ages. The indignant pride of the Britons, who despised their implacable enemies, the Anglo-Saxons, as a race of rude barbarians, whose touch was impurity, will not be considered as any decisive test of superior civilisation. But the Triads and the laws of Hoel Dda, excel the Anglo-Saxon and other Teutonic customals in the same manner that the elegies of Llywarch Hên and the odes of Taliesin soar above the ballads of Edda. Law had become a science amongst the Britons, and its volumes exhibit the jurisprudence of a rude nation shaped and modelled by thinking men, and which had derived both stability and equity from the labours of its expounders."

Great mystery hangs over the derivation of the greater part of the common law of England.

FROM "THE CONCLUSION."

We have been engaged in slowly tracing the beginnings and early developments of one of the most colossal creations of time, the British nation. Were we to examine the field of universal history, our survey would command no other such ethnological marvel. In no epoch, in no land, has anything of the sort appeared. It would seem as if the world, at the birth of the British people, had grown consciously old and desolate (?), and that, like the fabled Phœnix, it had undertaken, by a painful but sublime process of fire, to renew itself; and the island of Britain was selected as the theatre where the prodigy was to be accomplished.

It took a long time to lay the foundations of this great national superstructure. Some thousand years elapsed before all the kinds of materials were brought together. The Celtic tribes had inhabited the island, probably, for many hundred years before the Republic of Rome was inaugurated; but, solitary and self-contained, they possessed an insufficient amount of those elements of expansion and development required for national maturity. The Roman added a mighty impulse by lodging in the mass the seeds of the Old World's civilization. Christianity added a still mightier and sublimer force. The Saxons, Danes, and Normans, a rough and energetic race, poured in their successive contributions of influence; and by the union of all in one body, and its tempering by long and painful discipline, under the guidance of religion, commerce, science, and education, the result has come forth in the shape of this English nation, which is to-day not the envy so much as the pattern and friend of all surrounding peoples, and promises to continue for many ages the exemplar and director, if not the virtual ruler, of the civilised world.

ANOTHER CLERICAL OBJECTOR.

We have been favoured with the opinion as to our subject entertained by a clergyman, who tells us he is not unfamiliar with the Anglo-Israel discussion, but has taken a very unfavourable view of our side of it. He declares the idea is not one, which, under any circumstances, could awaken much interest in his mind. Even supposing we had made good our ground, he deems that all we should have done would be to bring to light an ethnological curiosity, and nothing more. His New Testament, he adds, has taught him long ago that race distinctions have now no religious significance whatever, and even the expectation of a Jewish restoration he has always felt to be a vain anti-Christian dream! There is but one Gospel for Jew and Gentile, and that is not a Gospel of national superiority, but of individual righteousness and peace. If Englishmen were to believe themselves all that the advocates of Identity claim for themselves, the only result, he fears, would be that they would be puffed up with pride even more than they are now. If the Old Testament taught the perpetuation of national or race privileges a hundred times more clearly than the advocates of Identity declare, he would simply brush it all aside and say the "Old Testament must be interpreted by the later and plainer language of the New." So far our out-spoken cleric, who wrote the words we quote some time ago, and may have now come to a better mind. But we feel that there are thousands of his cloth and others, who use precisely the same language now, and believe the truth of the same arguments. We cannot do wrong, therefore, in quoting the sentiments, and giving them a plain answer.

On one point we quite agree with our opponent. There is no doubt "that there is to-day only one Gospel for Jew and Gentile." But whoever denied the fact? Not the Anglo-Israelites! We have always maintained the universal application of the Gospel to all mankind. We declare that "God so loved the world that He gave His only-begotten Son, that WHOSOEVER believeth on Him should not perish but have everlasting life" (John iii. 16.). In regard to the salvation of the soul, we have always consistently maintained that all the sons and daughters of mankind, are absolutely on one and the same platform. All are sinners; and if any be saved, either of Israel or of the Gentile non-Israelite world, they must be saved by the blood of Calvary alone, but not otherwise. For there is "none other name that is given among men wherein we must be saved," but Christ's (Acts iv. 12, R.V.). Wherein, then, do we differ from our clerical opponent? He thinks race distinctions are now abolished, and that they have no religious significance whatever. We submit that the chosen people of God, the Twelve Tribes (now thirteen), must have this very weighty religious significance, that if they do not exist to-day racially, then is God's promise, and Christ's promise, and St. Paul's prediction, one and all absolutely vain and worthless, then are the Christian's hopes wrecked, and the alleged purchase of the Cross of Calvary is vanished into thin air! For if God and Christ be false in one, they must be untrustworthy in respect to their other promises; which God forbid!

Let us see what promises we find in the Old and New Testaments alike as regards the perpetual continuity of the Twelve Tribes to carry out God's purposes of grace and mercy to the world as His intermediaries or commissioned servants. First, we have the unconditional promise made on oath by the Lord Jehovah to His servant Abraham, "In thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed," because thou hast obeyed My voice (Gen. xxii. 18, R.V.). Isaiah proclaimed, "In days to come shall Jacob take root, Israel shall blossom and bud and fill the face of the world with fruit" (Isa. xxvii. 6, R.V.). "The people which I formed for Myself, that they may set forth My praise" (Isa. xliii. 21., R.V.), spoken regarding Israel. "Their seed shall be known among the nations, and their offspring among the peoples; all that see them shall acknowledge them, that they are the seed which the Lord hath blessed" (Isa. lxi. 9, R.V.). Here is very clear and plain Old Testament testimony that the Lord Jehovah promised to this, His chosen Israelite people, great spiritual honour, as the preachers of righteousness to the whole Gentile world. What did the Lord Jesus Christ teach? That these Twelve Tribes should exist in the coming times of His own Majesty, when, seated on the throne of His glory, and that the twelve apostles, seated on twelve thrones, should judge, or rule, or feed those same Twelve Tribes of Israel! But could the Lord Jesus preach or teach anything contrary to the Old Testament? Hear what He Himself said in Matt. v. 17, R.V., "Think not that I came to destroy the Law and the prophets. I came not to destroy, but to fulfil." St. Paul bears strong testimony to this when in Rom. xv. 8, R.V., he said, "For I say that Christ hath been made a minister of the circumcision for the truth of God, that He might confirm the promises given unto the fathers." The same apostle, in Heb. viii. 8—12, described to us at length, quoting from Jer. xxxi. 33, 34, the glorious spiritual blessings reserved for the Houses of Israel and Judah, in days that are future yet. Are these passages in the New and Old Testaments alike no proof of race distinctions as bearing some religious significance? The Old Testament here is quoted by the New, and the latter interprets the Old by repeating the promise, word by word and clause by clause.

Digitized by Google

This cleric, in another part of his letter, calls our views "inexpressibly silly, and inexpressibly sad." But what are we to say to opinions regarding the Old and New Testaments which the above quotations contradict, showing that the New repeats the Old, and confirms its teaching? showing also that "the Lord He is Jehovah, He changeth not. Therefore the sons of Jacob are not consumed" (Mal. iii. 6). The Old Testament declares that "God showeth His word unto Jacob, His statutes and His judgments unto Israel. He hath not dealt so with any nation, and as for His judgments, they have not known them" (Psa. cxlvii. 19, 20). The Lord Jesus Christ, addressing His Hebrew disciples and apostles, told them to go and preach the Gospel to all nations, promising His constant presence among them to the end of the age or dispensation. Here, then, in Old and New Testaments alike, are race distinctions portrayed, having a distinct religious significance, since they confer on one people privileges and spiritual blessings absolutely denied to other nations.

But these (and here is our clergyman's mistake) do not grant to the recipients any special advantage respecting the salvation of the soul. They confer national privileges, to enable the nation so honoured to become God's messengers for salvation to the ends of the earth, qualifying them by special national gifts for the functions of world-wide evangelisation.

This is all we claim for our subject, and we do not believe that its hearty, grateful acceptance by our race can make them one whit more "puffed up with pride" than a humble believer in Jesus is calculated to become, when assured that he has been chosen by the Lord for the unutterable joys of Heaven, merely by reason of his faith in the merits and sufferings of the adorable Redeemer. If these promises do not tend to pride, neither will the promises of God to Israel make this nation unduly buoyed up with spiritual pride, because the Lord "giveth more grace," and He changeth not. Therefore the sons of Jacob are not consumed, and not "puffed up" with spiritual pride either!

THE "MIGHTY NATION," BLESSED AND BLESSING.

By J. Thomson.

1. THE PROMISES.

1. To Abraham God said:—"I will make of thee a great nation, and I will bless thee, and make thy name great; and thou shalt be a blessing, . . . and in thee shall all families of the earth be blessed." "I will make thy seed as the dust of the earth: so that if a man can number the dust of the earth, then shall thy seed be numbered." "Look now toward heaven, and tell the stars, if thou be able to number them. . . . So shall thy seed be." I will multiply thee exceedingly, ... and thou shalt be a father of many nations, . . . and kings shall come out of thee." "Abraham shall surely become a great and mighty nation, and all the nations of the earth shall be blessed in him." "In blessing I will bless thee, and in multiplying I will multiply thy seed as the stars of the heaven, and as the sand which is upon the sea-shore; and thy seed shall possess the Gate of his enemies; and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed; because thou hast obeyed My voice" (Gen. xii. 1—3; xiii. 14—17; xv. 1—6; xvii. 1—8; xviii. 17—19; xxii. 15—18).

2. To Isaac:—"I will be with thee and will bless thee; . . . and I will perform the oath which I sware unto Abraham thy father; and I will make thy seed to multiply as the stars of heaven, and will give unto thy seed all these countries; and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed." "Fear not, for I am with thee, and will bless thee, and multiply thy seed, for My servant Abraham's sake" (Gen. xxvi. 1—5, 26).

3. To Jacob:—"I am the Lord God of Abraham, thy father, and the God of Isaac: the land whereon thou liest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed; and thy seed shall be as the dust of the earth, and thou shalt spread abroad to the west and to the east, and to the north and to the south: and in thee, and in thy seed, shall all the families of the earth be blessed. And, behold, I am with thee, and I will keep thee in all places whither thou goest, and will bring thee again into this land; for I will not leave thee, until I have done that which I have spoken to thee of." "And God said unto him, I am God Almighty: be fruitful and multiply: a nation and a company of nations shall be of thee, and kings shall come out of thy loins" (Gen. xxviii. 13—15; xxxv. 11).

4. To Joseph and his two sons:—"And Jacob blessed Joseph, and said, God, before whom my fathers, Abraham and Isaac did walk, ... bless the lads: and let my name be named on them, and the name of my fathers, Abraham and Isaac; and let them grow into a multitude in the midst of the earth. . . . He shall become a people, and he also shall be great; but truly his younger brother shall be greater than he, and his seed shall become a multitude of nations." "Joseph is a fruitful bough, even a fruitful bough by a well; whose branches run over the wall. . . . the Almighty, who shall bless thee with blessings of heaven above, blessings of the deep that lieth under, blessings of the breasts and of the womb; the blessings of thy father have prevailed above the blessings of my progenitors unto the utmost bounds of the everlasting hills: they shall be on the head of Joseph, and on the crown of the head of him that was separate from his brethren." "Blessed of the Lord be his land, for the precious things of heaven, for the dew, and for the deep that coucheth beneath. And for the precious fruits brought forth by the sun, and for the precious things put forth by the moon, and for the chief things of the ancient mountains, and for the precious things of the lasting hills, and for the precious things of the earth, and the fulness thereof, and for the good will of Him that dwelt in the bush: let the blessing come upon the head of Joseph, and upon the top of the head of him that was separated from his brethren. His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the horns of unicorns: with them he shall push the people together to the ends of the earth: and they are the ten thousands of Ephraim, and they are the thousands of Manasseh." "The sons of Reuben, the firstborn of Israel [for he was the first born, but . . . . his birthright was given unto the sons of Joseph, the son of Israel: and the genealogy is not to be reckoned after the birthright. For Judah prevailed above his brethren, and of him came the chief ruler (marg. prince); but the birthright was Joseph's.]" (Gen. xlviii. 15—20; xlix. 22—26; Deut. xxxiii. 13—17; 1 Chron. v. 1—2).

2. THEIR FULFILMENT.

Such are the Divine promises. They clearly and explicitly refer to a numerous posterity of the Hebrew Patriarchs, which should both be blessed of God, and a medium of blessing to others. No doubt the principal fulfilment is found in Christ, who is "the Seed"; but a nation which should be the instrument of conveying the blessed news of salvation and forgiveness to the other nations, is equally pointed out. The history of the Hebrews as recorded in the Old Testament, does not exhaust the meaning of these prophecies. Their most flourishing period was the reign of King Solomon; but at that time we find no pre-eminent development of Ephraim and Manasseh into a "multitude of nations." Besides, the time when this development is to take place, is not obscurely indicated by Jacob as "the last days" (Gen. xlix. 1); and St. Paul appears to refer to the same prophecy when he tells us that "blindness in part is happened to Israel, until the fulness of the Gentiles (multitude of nations) be come in" (Rom. xi. 25).

Digitized by Google

It is not our intention now to enter upon a lengthy investigation of the evidences identifying the modern British people with the lost Ten Tribed-House of Israel; but as briefly as possible indicate the remarkable manner in which the British Empire, in our time, responds in no small degree to these ancient predictions found in Holy Writ, in its extent, population, resources, and influence.

1. Extent of the modern British Empire. The extent of dominion acknowledging one sovereignty is ever an important factor in determining the greatness of any empire. "Thy name shall be great," God said to Abraham: and though from this it might not beforehand be inferred that the nation referred to should be so designated, it may be noted as a remarkable fact that our country is called Great Britain. It may seem a small thing this, in the eyes of some; but as "straws show the direction of the wind," so this little thing is seen pointing in one direction. It is comparatively a modern term, used first on the union of the crowns of England and Scotland; and very appropriately, as it was even then thought. We may also remark in passing, that we do not remember any other nation of either ancient or modern times so appropriating this term "great," and being also acknowledged by others, their contemporaries. And now we hear of an outside Greater Britain, which, in extent, far eclipses the area of the British Isles. The present possessions of the British people amount to nearly 9,000,000 of square miles, or one-fifth part of the habitable globe. The Mother Country is, itself, only one-seventieth part of the whole empire. Compared with it, other empires shrink almost into insignificance. The British Empire is four times the size of that of Rome at its greatest extent; and five times that of the Persian Empire, under the Great King Darius. Of modern empires Russia is the largest, but the British is one-eighth larger, and is still growing. Compared with France it is sixteen times its size; and forty times as large as the United German Empire. The United States are a very large territory, but the British Empire is three times larger; and when we remember that that is an offshoot of the British race, answering to Manasseh (who was to become "a great people"), and add it to the British Empire, we shall find that the possessions held by modern Israel very far exceed in extent any empire of ancient or modern times, amounting indeed to one-fourth of the habitable earth.

2. The population of this empire, and its rapid increase, are also very remarkable. Though Julius Cæsar, and other ancient writers describe this country as being very populous in their day, we have no reason to suppose that, at any period before comparatively modern times, it ever exceeded a few millions. The best authorities compute it at about 2,000,000 near the end of the fourteenth century; and at the beginning of Elizabeth's reign it only amounted to about 5,000,000. In 1801 the population of England and Wales was about 8,872,000, but at the present time it reaches 27,280,000—fully a three-fold increase; besides the vast numbers sent off to the colonies and the United States, the latter numbering now over 50,000,000. In 1837 the total population of our North American Colonies was under 1,500,000; at the end of 1885 they numbered over 4,700,000. In 1837 the total population of the Australian Colonies was hardly 140,000, now they number 3,278,934. In 1837 the population of the Cape of Good Hope Colony was about 143,000, now it is 919,513, and with its dependencies (332,834) added, 1,252,347. The whole total number of the Anglo-Saxon race throughout the world already numbers over 100,000,000; and it has been calculated that if the present rate of increase goes on, that this race will number somewhere between 800 and 1,000,000,000 by the year A.D. 2,000. Besides these, which represent a population of chiefly British descent, our Queen rules over more than 260,000,000 in the great dependency of India; and to them must, we think, shortly be added the myriads of China and Japan, as well as Egypt, and the bulk of Africa; while indirectly, we already influence Turkish rule in Asia Minor

3. The resources of these British-Israel possessions cannot be expressed in more pointed and expressive words than those of the prophecies of Jacob and Moses. They are not so many square miles of arid waste, or snow-clad mountains: for within their area are found all the most favoured climatic conditions, and every production necessary for both life and luxury. Ours are the "blessings of heaven above";—all fruits in abundance; of the "deep beneath,"—the harvests of ocean abound about our coasts; while the "chief," and "precious things" of the "lasting hills" are found abundantly in the coal, lead, iron, silver, gold, and precious stones in our territories. It is needless to enumerate more fully the resources of our empire, seeing that we have everything in such abundance—the gift of our Almighty Covenant God—that our land has become by far the richest country in the world, for its size, and we could at once become independent of the foreigner if we would only cultivate our own estate, and manage it for the advantage of our own population.

4. It is evident that the influence of so great a Power in the world upon other nations, cannot but be great, whether for good or evil. But we hold that, without doubt, the influence of Great Britain has been, and is, on the whole, for the good of those brought under it. This is often admitted, even by those who would detract therefrom. Thus, in a lecture delivered in this town the other day, Max O'Rell, the author of "John Bull and His Isle," &c., said, 'the French fought for glory, the Germans for a living, the Russians to divert the attention of the people from home affairs; but John Bull was a reasonable, moral, and reflecting character,—he fought to 'promote trade, and the good of mankind in general.'"* Truth is often spoken in jest, and we may admit this to be true, though it was only intended to raise a laugh. As sure as it is that "trade follows the flag," so sure is it also that the "good of mankind in general" follows "the flag." Wherever British rule extends, British Christianity is also most active. British missionaries may, and often do, precede British rule, but their greatest success always follows. Witness India: until the British flag was supreme, India was all but closed to missionary effort; and in Afghanistan the missionaries retired with the temporary retirement of British arms, to return again only when British influence and protection could be extended unto them. And so it has been more or less everywhere else. The vast amounts spent upon Foreign missions may also be taken as a fair guage of British influence. On Foreign missions, the Church of England alone now spends £1,216,000; the London Missionary Society considerably over £100,000, and the Wesleyan Society nearly as much per annum. If to these we add the amounts contributed by other societies in this country, and that contributed by similar societies in America, we shall have a total of something near £2,500,000 spent upon foreign missions,—an amount far exceeding that of all other countries put together. The British and Foreign Bible Society expend over £240,000 annually, and has translated the Bible into 267 languages or dialects; a work unequalled by any other society in any foreign country. From its formation in 1805 to the year 1881, the society had issued 100,000,000 copies of the Holy Scriptures, in 260 languages; America, 40,000,000, but all the other countries put together, only 7,000,000, or a twentieth part of the total of England and America. In 1885 the distribution of the Scriptures by the B. and F. Society was still going on at the rate of 5,000 copies a day, or 30,000 weekly. What shall we say also

* See the Ashton Reporter for Nov. 20th, 1886.

Digitized by Google

concerning the prosperity of the nations under our rule? India never was so prosperous and contented as at the present time.* Egypt seems fairly entered upon the same course; while, following the example of the Fiji islanders, the Zulus themselves are asking for protection and annexation. We need not go any further into the mass of evidence producible of this sort, which clearly proves the truth of Holy Writ; "Israel shall blossom and bud, and fill the face of the earth with fruit" (Isa. xxvii. 6). "This people have I formed for Myself; they shall shew forth My praise" (Isa. xliii. 21). For these and every other evidence of our Jehovah's faithfulness and mercy, unto our obstinate, blind, and stiff-necked nation, Israel, praise ye the Lord!

THE REV. HENRY WARD BEECHER ON ENGLAND AND AMERICA.

We take the following from the Leeds Mercury of December 11th, 1886:—

England and America.—Mr. Ward Beecher (says the Nonconformist) is writing in the Christian Union of New York some reminiscences of his late visit to this country. The last we have seen refers to the relations of the United States with England, which he regards as decidedly satisfactory as compared with the state of things during his former visit. He quotes a conversation with some experienced manufacturer, who expressed a hope that for the sake of British industries America would continue her Protectionist system, which prevents her rivalry in foreign markets. The general conclusions of our late visitor are as follows:—"On the whole, in refreshing my memory with regard to the state of public feeling in 1863, and comparing it with that of 1886, it is evident that England has gone through many degrees of latitude politically and socially, and no longer lies so far up as then towards the Arctic zone. Every allusion made to America during my lecturing tour was received with applause. In all the speeches introductory or following my lectures great emphasis was laid upon the identity of our origin and interests, and no sentiment was more popular than that the English-speaking people of this world should stand together, and that the institutions which are common to Great Britain and America, by which liberty is conserved, should be spread abroad as the greatest blessing to all the nations of the earth. Certain it is that the success of English institutions in America is now producing a profound impression in Great Britain, and that our example is the leaven that is working to influence all those changes which are now taking place, and others which must come within a few years. In fine, it may be said that America and England were never so intimately in sympathy as they are to-day, and the causes of disagreement so few and so little likely to increase, and the causes of sympathy and affection so numerous and so deep seated."

* From Arnold's "India Revisited" (London, Trubner and Co., 1886), which furnishes many evidences of the good influence of British rule in India, we quote the following:—"Political mischief-mongers who talk at home, or in India, of the discontent and ill-will of her inhabitants towards the British, are either ignorant or malignant. I have recently passed through hundreds of her towns and cities, and over thousands of miles of her districts—often wandering alone in crowded bazaars or solitary jungles, and have not encountered a single evil look, or received one rude or unfriendly answer. In conversation with intelligent people of all castes and classes, I have found the blessings of our strong and upright sway, perfectly well understood, and repaid,—not, indeed, with affection, since that is asking too much from Hindu natures—but with respect, admiration, and general acquiescence. There are classes, of course, who will always remain hostile, and India is an ocean of humanity, about the various seas, gulfs, and inlets of which no man can ever securely generalise. Yet I am personally convinced by observation and enquiry, that the roots of our Râj—despite all drawbacks and perils—were never so deeply struck into the soil as at present, and that while we must strive, more and more, to develop the boundless resources of the country, and to win the hearts of her people by fearless, but wise and gradual expansion of their rights and liberties—India at large knows well that she never has received from heaven a richer blessing than the Pax Britannica" (p. 293, 294).

"HOW SOON."

By the Rev. Denis Hanan, B.D.

At this time, when wars and rumours of wars are so rife, and when men ask one another "how soon" will the outbreak take place which makes hearts fail for fear, it seems that there are certain well-marked prophetic dates, which, considering the rapidity of modern warfare, would seem to indicate that an immediate and final rapture should be regarded as premature. They are these:—Jerusalem is to be trodden down of the Gentiles until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled (Luke xxi. 24). This period is elsewhere mentioned as 42 prophetic months—i.e., 1260 years (Rev. xi. 2). And this period is half the prophetic week or 2,520 years of Gentile domination. Jerusalem is now being trodden down; the present Turkish occupation dates from A.D. 636, and 1,260 solar years will expire in 1896-7. (Due allowance must be made for errors in chronology.)

Thus it seems most probable—and who will say that the present state of the world does not confirm the probability—that within ten years must come that convulsion which will cause "the sick man" to die. But a ten years' war seems to be almost an impossibility. Modern wars are fearfully rapid, as well as deadly; and there is hardly time for two distinct continental wars. Therefore, there seems to be a probability that the period of tension will be prolonged, and that the final outbreak will not take place for some years. As this calculation is based upon the date of the Turkish occupation of Jerusalem A.D. 636, it may not be amiss to add a few of the calculations which make that year remarkable. It is the bisection of both the lunar and the solar reckoning of time, with respect to the 2,500 years, or prophetic week. Thus:—

Lunar.

Holy vessels taken to Babylon—Dan. i. (1242) B.C. 606 + 1260 = 636 A.D. (1242) + 1260 = 1878 British protection of Syria, &c.

[Note.—1260 lunar years equal 1242 solar.]

Solar.

Finding of the Book of the law. Irrevocable doom pronounced.—2 Chron. xxxiv. B.C. 624 + 1260 = 636 A.D. + 1260 = 1896-7. Jerusalem to be restored.

In these latter days, we have the advantage of being able to fix upon certain actual or probable final dates—e.g., the fall of the temporal power; the Berlin Treaty; the bombardment of Alexandria; the near Turkish overthrow. If we find that by reckoning backwards for a foretold period we reach a remarkable date—e.g., the rise of the temporal power exactly 1,260 years before its fall—our conjectures become certainties.

We have here two remarkable dates, reckoned in different ways, but with a common bisection, and leading backwards to dates which give remarkable commencements. That the date B.C. 624, with which I am now more particularly concerned, is a remarkable one, will I think be admitted, when it is remembered that then the prophetic voice proclaimed that even repentance could not avert the judgment; and the one copy of the forgotten law was providentially brought forth to pass sentence upon the nation.

Doubtless there are among the readers of the Banner of Israel those who will recall to mind the prominent place which this historic incident is given in an ancient ritual, and be ready to acknowledge the coincidence. I am well aware that a few months, or even weeks, may upset my theory; nevertheless, trusting to the kindness of my readers, I venture to record it. May the law soon go forth from Zion, and the Word of the Lord from Jerusalem.

Erratum.—Page 95, col. 2, line 34, read 2 Chron. xxxii. 8.

Digitized by Google

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

DURING the past month this Association has been busily at work in quarters hitherto deemed inaccessible to the teaching of Anglo-Israelism. Our three Tuesday afternoon lectures at the Moravian Chapel exceeded our expectations; a growing interest was evident; the last attendance being by far the best, and friends were sorry the course had ended all too soon. The three Sunday evening services at the Caledonian Church, Holloway, were largely attended here; as on Tuesdays, the interest grew—our last attendance filling the Church. Our Thursday evening lectures were not so well attended, although a good few were present; but on each evening we were most unfortunate in the weather. First the fog was so thick, people dared not venture out; second, the rain fell heavily; and the last evening was a cold, biting frost. Probably, on some future occasions we may have more favourable conditions under which we shall get large gatherings.

As the result of these NINE lectures we have received several testimonies of good being accomplished; some have decided to be on our side; while throughout the whole course, not a dissentient voice has been heard; on the contrary, so much have our labours been appreciated in each case, we have been asked to repeat our visits at some future time.

To the ministers of these three churches we desire publicly to give our best thanks for the kindness they have shown in granting the free and unrestricted use of their pulpits and buildings for the promulgation of the truths so dear and precious to all Identity believers. To the Rev. James S. Forsyth, M.A. (National Scotch Church), Rev. John Porter (Moravian Church), Rev. John T. Dixon (Presbyterian Church), we tender our warm and heart-felt acknowledgments for the kind help they have rendered this Association to carry out this course of lectures.

In addition to the foregoing we have been privileged to deliver two lectures in St. John's School-room, Woking, Surrey; the Rev. J. F. Lory (Church of England) presiding. There were good attendances; a lively interest was excited, as was evident from the fact of our opponents discussing the varied points of our subject for over an hour on each occasion. It will thus be seen that in all ELEVEN lectures have been delivered by the secretary. We have been asked to visit Dublin and Edinburgh for lectures and sermons. On March 24th, we shall be visiting Bath; 25th, Bristol; 27th, Burnham (Somerset); going on to Exeter and Torquay, and probably one or two other places. While we hope to give six or eight other lectures in London during the months. These are signs of life with the old Association; and with God's help, we hope to make its influence felt far and wide, beyond anything it has achieved in the past.

From March 1st the Association will enter upon a new era in its history, and will present such a front to the public as will be worthy its name and objects. Large premises have been taken at 14, King William-street, Charing-cross, London, W.C., which will be devoted to the purposes of a library and reading-rooms, supplied with daily and weekly newspapers and all the current Anglo-Israel literature as soon as published; a room for the supply of tea and coffee; secretary's and other offices, which will be open every day (Sundays excepted) from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m., to which every member and subscriber will have free admission; thus giving all the privileges of a club or institute to every subscriber in return for their subscriptions. The premises comprise three floors in perhaps the most central and busy part of the Metropolis. This change will involve a large outlay; but the Council of the Association believe that a permanent home, available to all Anglo-Israelites from every part of the world, will be so much appreciated that funds will quickly come in by an increase of members and otherwise so soon as these advantages become known, as will justify the course they have decided upon. We shall need £100 per year for rent; while the furnishing will cost about £70. The latter expense will, it is hoped, be met by special contributions to a fund which has been started already by the following gentlemen:—Admiral Bedingfield, £1 1s.; Major St. George Priaulx, £1 1s.; H. H. Pain, Esq., £1 1s.; H. S. Icke, Esq., 10s. We will be glad to receive further help in this direction at once, so as to proceed without delay. We are doing a great work. As God has blessed you, will you help us? All contributions, however small or large, please send till March 15, to 5, Wilton-road, Pimlico, S.W.; after that date, to 14, King William-street, Charing-cross, London, W.C.

JAMES BILLINGTON, Secretary.

P.S.—Subscriptions will be acknowledged next month.

NOTE BY THE EDITOR.—We give our hearty support to the arrangements indicated above, and trust our friends will agree with us that our Metropolitan Anglo-Israelites deserve our help and sympathy in their spirited endeavour to make the cause we love prosper in Israel's chief city. The London Association is doing real and valuable work in making Our Identity known, and deserves our hearty thanks and pecuniary aid in its effort to give the Metropolitan Association a good, respectable, and central position in town; one which our country friends may look on as their own club or institute; their rallying point, where they may meet their friends when they visit London. Any names or subscriptions forwarded to the Rev. James Billington will periodically be published in the BANNER.

Correspondence.

INTERNATIONAL INSTITUTE FOR PRESERVING AND PERFECTING WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—We send you the January number of The International Standard, which is published after a year's suspension. I much regret to find that in consequence of our change of publishers. all the book reviews and notices of publications have been left out. Reviews of all publications received during the past year were written and sent in, but, through a mistake, they were omitted.

I hope that you will understand that our members do not endorse the language of our warlike senator in relation to the Canadian Fisheries' question. We do not like bluster. The heart of the American people is knit to the heart of the English people. We are brothers, and we must act like brothers. We have a common enemy against whom we must stand firmly, and that is the Romish ecclesiastical power. Yours, &c,

CHARLES LATIMER.

Cleveland, O., Feb. 1.

INFIDELITY CONFUTED.

BY SCOTI.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

SIR,—I notice in the last week's number of the BANNER the great power that we have, as Anglo-Israelites, in defending the truth of the Bible against the deep and pointed questions asked by infidels, who so easily and successfully put many a minister and student of God's Word to shame and silence. Permit me to give you an instance that happened to me nine or ten years ago, at Brighton. I was engaged in some work with a very thoughtful and intelligent young man, but one who made light of divine things. "You seem," said he to me, "to be well versed in religious subjects, and profess to be a Christian; can you answer one question?" "I will try," I replied. "If you can," he continued, "you will have answered a question that has put many a preacher here to the blush."

Question: "What became of the sceptre 400 years B.C., which it was said should be retained by Judah 'till Shiloh come,' as prophesied by Jacob?"

The question at first put me to confusion, when suddenly I remembered that very subject in connection with the beautiful, clear Identity truth I happened to have heard of but a week before, relating to the Tribe of Dan, to the captivity of the Jews by Nebuchadnezzar, to the death of Zedekiah (the last king), but the saving of the life of his royal daughter, Tea Tephi, who came to Ireland with Jeremiah soon afterwards, there founding another monarchy. I gave my friend the whole history of these facts, clearly and forcibly; adducing proofs and authorities showing that the sceptre was still existing from that date to Queen Victoria of our time; thereby not a little astonishing him by this remarkable (and to him new) lineage of our Queen, derived from Tea Tephi, the daughter of King Zedekiah. He was very silent as well as surprised, and confessed himself well and ably answered. I have often wished I had told him more, that he might have been won over to Identity truth. But some other duties separated us, and we have not seen anything of each other since. Perhaps these lines may meet his eye; if so, he will remember the circumstance. Had I known as much as I do now, I might have shown him also how "that a lawgiver" has not yet ceased among us. How strongly we are fortified against infidelity and scepticism when God's Word is taken just as it stands!

Forest-row, East Grinstead, Feb. 14.

Digitized by Google

NOTICES.

All communications intended for the Editor, to be addressed: — "Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Clifton, Bristol.

SUBSCRIPTIONS	£	s.	d.
Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free	0	7	6
Two Copies (including Double Numbers)	0	13	6
Three Copies " " " "	1	0	4
Four Copies " " " "	1	5	6
Six Copies " " " "	1	16	4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-grand, London, to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C., or F. W. PARRY & Co., 29, Paternoster-row, London.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

Contents Bills and Show Cards may be obtained on application to the Publishers.

Advertisements should be sent to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

Prepaid Advertisements are inserted at the rate of 30 words for 1s. 4d.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

The Rev. JAS. BILLINGTON, F.R.H.S.

Will LECTURE at

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH, ROBERT ST., GROSVENOR SQUARE, W.

(First turning in Davies-st., or Gilbert-st., Oxford-st.),

On WEDNESDAY EVENINGS, March 9, 16, & 23.

Commencing at 7.30.

PUBLISHED BY ROBT. BANKS & SON, RACQUET COURT, FLEET STREET, E.C.

WORKS BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

The Geography of the Gates. With Map and six full page, and one double-page, Illustrations, printed on plate paper. 208 pages, in handsome cloth, gilt Price 3s. 6d., post free 3s. 10d.

An Elementary Digest or Sketch of the Chief Facts and Teachings of the Great Pyramid of Egypt. Adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific 56 pages, Illustrated with Diagrams, price 4d., post free 5d. 10th Thousand.

Our Identity with the House of Israel. Price 4d. Reprinted from "Clifton Chronicle Letters"

A Resume of the Scriptural Argument, proving the Identity of the British Race with the Lost Ten Tribes. Price 1d.; 6s. per 100. New edition now ready.

The History of the House of Israel; How they were Lost, and How they were Found, Told for the Children. Price 6d., cloth 1s.; post free 7d. and 1s. 1d. Fourth Edition. Eleventh thousand.

Robert Banks and Son, Printers, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

COMBINATION IVORY PENCIL AND PENHOLDER FOR ONLY 1s. 6d.

The Greatest and Most Wonderful Scientific Novelty of the Age. This is the most useful and valuable article of the kind ever invented for either man, woman, or child. The holder is made of ivory, and contains a Screw Telescope Pencil at one end, and a Pen at the other. It can be carried in the pocket always ready for use, and in one end of the holder it contains a Powerful Miniature Microscope, no larger than the head of a pin, containing either the Lord's Prayer or the Ten Commandments magnified over 1,000 times, which can easily be read by holding to the eye. We will send this post free on receipt of only 1s. 6d., and if you send in your order before March 31st, we will send free with each Holder one of our Golden Pens, also Lead for Pencil. ANGLO NOVELTY COMPANY, 33, LUGARD ROAD, PECKHAM, LONDON, S.E. Please name this Paper. Send for our Catalogue, containing over one hundred useful Novelties, post free one stamp.

BRONCHITIS, ASTHMA.
COUGHS, COLDS,
CONSUMPTION,
and all Pulmonary Affections can be immediately relieved and rapidly CURED
by simply using the
AMMONIAPHONE
FOR THE Voice, Throat, Chest, and Lungs.
21s. post free.
WILL LAST FOR YEARS.
Used and recommended by the Royal Family, and principal Physicians, Clergymen, Vocalists, and Public Speakers throughout the country. New illustrated Pamphlet with copies of Thousands of Testimonials may be had FREE OF CHARGE on application to Medical Battery Co. Ltd.
52, OXFORD STREET, LONDON, W.
Corner of Rathbone Place.

J. THEOBALD & COMPANY.
GOD SAVE HER MAJESTY.
Grand Jubilee Prize Picture Puzzle.
£200 IN CASH PRIZES.
No charge for entering this Competition.
1st Prize, £25 in Cash. 2nd Prize, £15 in Cash.
3rd Prize, £5 in Cash & 155 Prizes of £1 each Cash.
Also, if more than five hundred successful solvers, we shall give in addition 100 REAL GOLD FINGER RINGS.
The first Competition of the kind ever advertised.

THE Picture Puzzle Competition may be briefly described as follows: We have produced a very beautiful engraving. This picture has been cut up into small squares, the pieces then mixed up, put together anyhow, and printed. It is really precisely the same as the Picture Block Puzzles given to children to put together, only of course more elaborate and many more pieces. The perfect picture has to be formed by gumming the little squares on to a sheet of paper, connecting one piece with another so as to form the proper engraving. Anyone having the necessary patience and perseverance can put it together. It forms not only amusement and occupation of time, but an opportunity of winning a considerable sum of money. To prove that the picture can be properly put together we shall be prepared, after the Competition is over, to supply anyone with the engraving correctly engraved, but up to that time not a single perfect picture will be issued. Should more persons put it together properly than there are prizes given, the prizes will be awarded according to the neatness and cleanness of the work, the head prizes being given in a similar manner. We may mention that in a Competition we gave last Summer everyone obtained a prize that sent in, as a lesser number sent in than there were prizes offered. The names and addresses of the winners will be duly advertised. A Certificate entitling the holder to enter into this Competition is given gratis with every one of our

GRAND JUBILEE PACKETS,

which have been specially prepared in celebration of Her Majesty's Jubilee. This packet contains the most marvellous value for money, as we have determined to make it the most successful that we have ever offered. Everyone who has seen it wonders how we can possibly sell it at the price. As these articles are specially Jubilee goods every loyal patriotic person ought to possess a parcel, and treasure up the articles as mementoes of this most auspicious occasion. Each parcel contains The Great Puzzle Picture itself, with full instructions for putting it together, the Prize Certificate, date to be sent in, &c., also containing ten beautiful Coloured Engravings, illustrating the most interesting events in Her Majesty's life; also a carte-de-visite picture, handsomely coloured, and mounted on card, of the Queen; an elegant Jubilee Brooch, being a beautiful heavily gold-plated Brooch in the shape of an extended Fan, with the word "Jubilee" across it. This is no common loud cheap jewellery, but finished in the highest style of art, and could not be detected from a Brooch costing a guinea; a Jubilee Fancy Scarf Pin, most richly finished, the centre of the Pin represents the Royal Arms of England in brilliant colours, surrounded by a gold-plated band, bearing the motto, "Honi soit qui mal y pense," surmounted with the Royal Crown in gold and crimson colours, and crossed by two sceptres; besides this also a handsome Jubilee Medal, bearing the Queen's Head as a medallion, and the words, "Queen Victoria's Jubilee, 1887," set in a handsome star; also a beautiful Jubilee Ivorine Penholder, delicately carved, with silvered mounting, and Ivorine Paper Cutter, with five beautiful photographs, mounted on a magnifying glass, of the Queen, Buckingham Palace, Windsor Castle, Balmoral Castle, and Osborne House, the Homes of Her Majesty. In addition to all the above we shall present with every packet two large

THE QUEEN'S JUBILEE ALBUM,

MAGNIFICENT PANEL PICTURES

by the celebrated artist, Harry Bright, Esq., the one entitled

THE BIRDS' JUBILATE, executed in 17 different colours, representing a dear old country church, green fields, trees, and villagers, and high up, on a massive church bell, a life-sized Robin Redbreast trilling forth its song of gladness on the morning air, whilst below, nestled in the ivy leaves, is her brood of young. The other picture, entitled depicts a high rocky cliff, far up in the hollows of which, in a crevice in the rocks, can be seen four hungry little birds stretching out their heads, with wide open mouths and hungry looking eyes, eagerly waiting for the tiny worm which the mother bird has just arrived with, whilst papa is flying away in search of further food. Both these companion pictures have outside the Panel Picture striking contrasts in black and white of Winter Scenes, with fields and houses covered with snow, frozen streams, and children scampering across the whitened meadows. These pictures are executed in the very highest style of chromo-lithography, are on thick cardboard, and will without doubt be framed and treasured long in every home they enter. We also give eight very pretty Text Cards, with embossed flowers in many colours, and six Pictures in gold and brilliant colours, representing Twelve Negro Specialities: The Boss of the Shanty, the Cordeon Coon, Susie Snow Flake, Fiddle Charlie, Clapper Joe, India Rubber Sim, Lucky Sambo! Sambo's Girl, Brudder Slimbone, A Negro Belle, Sambo's Best Man, and Mrs. Sambo! forming a set of the most comical Negro Characters ever seen.

FAMILY CARES,

Our price for each packet containing everything mentioned in the above list, carriage free, is 2s. 6d. Postal Order, or 2s. 9d. in stamps. Carriage abroad 1s. extra on each packet. When two packets are ordered at a time we shall give in addition, free, one copy of the large Magnificent Oleograph Picture by J. Wilson, Esq., entitled, Fishing off the Coast of Dover. This splendid Picture, in sixteen colours, is candidly worth 2s. 6d. If three packets are ordered this picture and also one entitled, Nearing Home, after the painting by the celebrated artist Drummond, also in sixteen colours, depicting the sturdy fisherman and his boys guiding their boat towards the land, with their bronzed, ruddy faces, lit up with eager anticipations of joy. This picture is grand in its vivid reality, and measures 20 inches by 15 inches. Or again, if four packets are taken, we will include the companion picture to the above, Waiting the Return—the anxious wives, mothers, and sweethearts, standing on the beach gazing out to sea. These pictures, as works of art, although given away, are worth the price alone charged for the entire packets. Call and see these packets if possible. We court the fullest inspection, knowing they cannot fail to please.

No Certificate to compete for the £200 Cash Prizes will be guaranteed unless the Coupon below is cut out and sent with the order. Remember you have all the contents of the packet, and a fair, equal chance of winning £25 in addition, for 2s. 6d.

All orders for these packets to be sent within 28 days, except from abroad.

"BANNER OF ISRAEL" COUPON.
Entitles holder to Grand Jubilee Packets at above prices, and Certificate conferring right to enter for the Grand Picture Puzzle Competition.
Signed—J. THEOBALD & COMPANY.

J. THEOBALD & COMPANY,
Established over 50 Years,
6 & 7, BATH PLACE, KENSINGTON, LONDON, W.

THE TEETH, THE TEETH, THOSE PRECIOUS TEETH!
Save, Purify, Beautify.
GEORGE & WELCH'S
CARBOLINE
1/6 (TOOTH PASTE). 2/6 per Pot.
Is the Best Known
Cleanser, Preserver, and Deodoriser.
Dental Guide says:—"No Tooth application equals the Carbolics."
Proprietors: GEORGE & WELCH, Worcester.
Through Chemists, or Post Free from Makers.

LUNG OWBRIDGE'S LUNG TONIC,
THE MIGHTY HEALER.
Save Your Lives by Taking
OWBRIDGE'S LUNG TONIC.
It has a power over diseases hitherto unknown in Medicine.
Are you at all Weak-chested or inclined to be Consumptive, with just a touch of Cough now and then?
"Try this Wonderful Medicine." The Cough and Weakness will disappear as if by magic, and you will feel a strength and power you never had before.
HAVE YOU A COUGH?
A DOSE WILL RELIEVE IT.
HAVE YOU A COLD?
A DOSE AT BEDTIME WILL REMOVE IT.
Bronchitis & Asthma it relieves instantly
The Spasms of Coughing so dreadful in Whooping Cough become less with each dose of the medicine. —
Prepared by W. T. OWBRIDGE, Chemist, Hull
Sold in Bottles 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d. & 11s. by all Chemists and Patent Medicine Vendors. Wholesale all London and Provincial Houses.

Knight & Forster's PENS
KNIGHT & FORSTER LEEDS.
The Coming Pen, Best Quality, the result of wide experience. "EVERYBODY'S PEN." Turned-up Points.
GREAT THOUGHTS says: "They are admirable."
SCHOOLMASTER says: "Adapted to suit every style of writing." 3s. 6d. per gross; 1s. per ½-gross.
LONDON: STRAKER & SONS, 124, FENCHURCH STREET,
And of all Stationers; or post free direct from the Makers.
BASINGHALL WORKS, LEEDS.

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. F. W. PARRY (late GUEST & Co.), 29, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, MAR. 9, 1887. [All rights reserved.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."

(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4

VOL. XI., No. 533. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, MARCH 16, 1887. [PRICE ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
The Spirit of Lawlessness Now Abroad	109
India's Strange Stroke of Destiny	110
The Rev. John Wilkinson, "The Friend of Israel," Lectures at Northampton	111
The Bounding Lines of the Grand Gallery. By F. Gass	112
The Fate of the Ten Tribes, as Described by the Bishop of Manchester in His Lecture on Hebrew Prophecy	113
The English Churchman and St. James's Chronicle	114
Review	115
Correspondence	115

THE SPIRIT OF LAWLESSNESS NOW ABROAD.

THE present day seems to be especially noted for the spirit of lawlessness, which pervades almost all classes. The evil spirit is not confined to our own country. It is seen in even worse form, and with more fatal results, abroad than at home. But here it is bad enough just now, and there seems no prospect of an early abatement of this social sore. There are riots in Great Britain, and also in Ireland. In London the riots were committed to illustrate the poverty and misery of the working classes. In Lanarkshire quite recently they were the wanton, lawless action of men with plenty of work to do, but the will only to do it on their own dictated terms. The rioters in both cases showed that the spirit of lawlessness actuated them, for they robbed shops and carts of their contents, and appropriated the booty, attacking the police when they came to the rescue.

In Ireland "the Plan of Campaign," which is theft pure and simple, and born of lawlessness, has the support of some English Statesmen, and of many Irish demagogues. It is carried out wherever the disaffected Irish can work the scheme, in the very spirit of lawlessness, in the malicious hope that by the robbery of the landlords' rights the fee simple of the land may fall into the tainted and wicked hands of the conspirators, whose only tie is the lawless one of union for robbery and rapine. The lesson taught in Ireland is being rapidly caught up and learnt by the British and Scottish labourer, and lawlessness, if not speedily checked, will become planted on our British soil, and indigenous. Lawlessness, as our readers know, has long found a home in the Church of England, where there are clergy in numbers, supported by a large following of laity, whose object seems to be to defy the power of the law, and of the authorities who administer it, in their reckless determination to have their own way, and to bring the Church of the fathers down to the ground.

The rapid and alarming extension of this evil spirit among our own people and abroad throughout the nations of the earth has, however, a place in God's providence at this particular juncture. The existence of the lawlessness is part of God's plan for these "the last days," and is connected, we suppose, with the coming in of the enemy like a flood before the Spirit of the Lord shall lift up a standard against him to destroy him (Isa. lix. 19). This is one of "the unclean, frog-like spirits of devils working signs, which go forth unto the kings of the whole world to gather them together unto the war of the great day of God, the Almighty" (Rev. xvi. 14, R.V.). But this enemy who is to come in like a flood, only to meet the promised destruction from the uplifted standard of the Spirit of the Lord, is an enemy whose aims are directed against God's people Israel. The whole context of Isa. lix. 19 teaches us that. The mighty war of Har-Mageddon, which is to take place in the great day of God, the Almighty, is a war waged on the mountains of Israel against Israel, and the rescue of the latter is to come from Jehovah-Jesus, the Son of God. The whole world is to be incited to attack and destroy the people of God; but the God of His people will defend them, and cut off those who rise up against them to destroy them. The teaching of Ezek. xxxviii. and xxxix. suffices to prove that.

St. Paul warned Timothy, the Christian Bishop of Crete, that in the last days (which are our days) there should come perilous times, when men (Christian men) should become truce-breakers, lawless ones (2 Tim. iii. 3). In 2 Thess. ii. 7, R.V., the mystery of lawlessness is described as already working among Christians in St. Paul's day, and the coming of the lawless one, the very personification of the lawlessness, is predicted as certain to be revealed, "whom the Lord shall slay with the breath of His mouth, and bring to nought by the manifestation of His coming." We do not therefore look for any cessation of the lawless spirit now rampant in Church and State, among the clergy, and also the laity, till the day of the Lord comes, when He will cure all the ills of Israel's body-politic by the gift of His Holy Spirit to the masses, when the new covenant will be made by the Lord of hosts with the House of Israel, and "He will put His laws into their mind, and write them on their hearts (as the very cure of lawlessness), when He will be to them a God, and they to Him a people. Then shall they not teach every man his fellow-citizen, and every man his brother, saying, Know the Lord; for all shall know Him, from the least of them to the greatest of them: for He will be merciful to their iniquities, and their sins will He remember no more" (Heb. viii. 10—12, R.V.).

Digitized by Google

But while we look for the cure of the lawless spirit in our own nation because, and solely because, of its Israelitish origin, and because of God's exclusive promises to that race, we look for the time to come when just as the cure is applied to ourselves, the destruction of the evil spirit among the non-Israelite Gentiles will take place by the occurrence of the great earthquake war-woe, which is the subject of Zeph. iii. 8, and Rev. xvi. 18, R.V. For then "His determination is to gather the Gentiles, or nations (Goim), that He may assemble the kingdoms to pour upon them His indignation, even ALL His fierce anger; for all the earth shall be devoured with the fire of His jealousy." Then will He turn to the British-Israelite peoples (the nation and company of Ephraimite nations) a pure language, that they may all call upon the name of Jehovah to serve Him with one consent. This, of course, implies the Christian profession and salvation of these nations, as contrasted with the ruin of the polities of the non-Israelites, in order that, with new combinations, the earth at last may (by Israel's instrumentality) "be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord as the waters cover the sea" (Hab. ii. 14, R.V.)., and to Him shall be all the praise.

INDIA'S "STRANGE STROKE OF DESTINY."

THE Times leader of Feb. 16 had for its subject the past and present condition of British India, and the writer could not but reflect upon "the strange stroke of destiny" which has given to this little group of islands in the Atlantic Ocean, where our own fortunate lot is cast, the heritage of 250,000,000 of Orientals as their subjects. The occasion of these reflections was the unique spectacle which these countless natives of nearly a score of different nations in India present to the world, celebrating as they were doing that day Her Majesty Queen Victoria's Jubilee. It has been right-royally celebrated there. All India, from North to South, and from East to West, has been en fête. The Government has liberated 25,000 prisoners; civil debtors imprisoned for small amounts have been released, and their debts paid by the rejoicing Government. A new order of Knighthood has been established to honour the occasion. Native proclamations have been issued, praising Her Majesty's Government for her equal and just rule, the chief excellence of which in Oriental eyes has been that she has allowed the native subjects of her Crown to worship God according to their consciences.

During the Queen's happy reign of fifty years British India has enormously expanded. The Punjab and Burmah have been added to it in the time. Oude, Berar, Nagpore, Scinde, these have been annexed. The whole Peninsula, in short, has, in these fifty years, been so subdued that everywhere the British is acknowledged to be the paramount Power. But what has been done for India by the British nation to bless and benefit her during the Queen's reign? We have built 13,000 miles of railway throughout the land, and thousands more are under construction at this moment. These are extending trade all over the Peninsula, destroying caste, removing religious prejudices, and bringing commerce and wealth to the Queen's native subjects.

Some idea of the growth of trade which has accompanied this spread of railways may be gathered from the official figures, which show that in the year of the Queen's accession the imports and exports of India amounted to £21,000,000, that in the year before the Mutiny they reached £53,000,000, and that in 1885-6 they amounted to no less a sum than £156,000,000.

We have besides given India peace during the last 50 years; peace which was broken only by the mutinies for a short period, and by a few frontier wars. This Pax Britannica has added enormously to the population of India, and made it a problem and a puzzle to our rulers how they are to contrive to find food and sustenance for the vast multitudes our mild and beneficent rule has created, under God, in our distant Heathen Empire. For 50 years it has been an Empire without a history. The Times has commented on this point, and respecting the growth of population, very happily, in its leader we have already quoted, and the writer's words, we think, ought to be recorded in the BANNER. They are as follows:—

In his farewell Minute as Governor of Madras, Sir Mountstuart Grant-Duff illustrates this by a reference to Bishop Caldwell's History of Tinnevelly, in which the writer fills page after page with the terrible records of the period before it passed under British rule, but finds a paragraph or two enough to describe the unbroken progress of the last eighty years. "And why? Because those eighty years have been years of profound peace, whereas before they began Tinnevelly had never, from the beginning of time, known eighty consecutive months, perhaps not even eighty consecutive weeks, of peace." To say, however, that peace has lightened the tremendous task of Indian government is to misunderstand the whole conditions of the problem. Peace and orderly rule have increased population to a degree unknown in days when wars, pestilence, and famine acted as the natural checks upon its too rapid growth. New knowledge and new experiences have changed, and will change still further, the point of view of the Queen's Oriental subjects; it remains to be seen whether the change will make them easier to govern. It is unnecessary to add that the growth of the Russian power in Central Asia has vastly increased the anxiety of the foreign outlook. In every way, in fact, the difficulties of Indian government are such as to tax to the utmost the capacities of the governing race. That Englishmen will surmount them triumphantly we feel no manner of doubt; for the qualities that carried them to power are with them still, and the energy, the judgment, the justice, the foresight which have marked the British administration for many a day are now, we rejoice to think, more conspicuous than ever in the rulers of India.

So far the Times. Does it mean by its "strange stroke of destiny," as applied to India, that our Empire there has fallen to our lot by destiny, or chance? It has been strange, no doubt, that two small islands in the West should be granted so vast an Empire in the East as India and Burmah present to the astonished gaze of mankind to-day. How is it this wonder has happened? Why are we so favoured? Why, when the French, the Dutch, the Portuguese essayed to acquire this Empire, did they so utterly and miserably fail? Why are we, naturally as wicked a race as they, so highly favoured as we are? There is but one answer to this question. This nation is Israel, and to Israel God has granted, in His prophetic Word, the heritage of the heathen. We find it so stated in Psa. cxi. 6, R.V., and in Psa. ii. 8, R.V., corroborated by Rev. ii. 26.27, R.V. Thus: "He hath showed His people the power of His works in giving them the heritage of the heathen." "Ask of Me, and I will give the nations for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession." "He that overcometh, and he that keepeth My works unto the end, to him will I give authority over the nations. And he shall rule them with a rod of iron, as the vessels of a potter are broken to shivers: as I also have received of My Father."

God has given us the heathen to rule and feed, that we may bring them to Christ, that we may preach the Gospel to them, and confer upon them the Word of God and the message of salvation; that we may say to them, in short, "God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

Archdeacon Farrar, in his sermon in Westminster Abbey, on Sunday, Feb. 6th, brought out this thought in connection with a promise of God to the seed of Abraham—namely, the heirship of the world. The archdeacon, however, made no mention of Israel, but gave the dominion of the world to the British. "We, therefore, must undertake missions," he said, "because God has evidently assigned to our race the world's future!" His words are thus reported by the Christian World of Feb. 10th:—"The sermon had its customary quota of anecdotes, was eloquent throughout, and contained one or two novel arguments, such as that missions are incumbent on the British race, because God has evidently assigned to it the world's future."

Digitized by Google

The world's future, however, is assigned, in Rom. iv. 13, to Abraham and his seed, and as the British are they, Archdeacon Farrar, of course, is right. A correspondent, in drawing attention to the sermon, remarks that "our great divines, one after the other, are coming to the conclusion that the future of the world is in British hands, and therefore missions must be theirs to carry out." The writer in the Christian World calls it a "novel idea." It may be so to him. Those who oppose us are constantly making wonderful and, to them, new discoveries, which our knowledge of the Identity has enabled us to see years ago. This is true. We have the light of Our Identity to tell us that India's position to-day is no "strange stroke of destiny," but God's determinate counsel and plan, whereby He has given the heathen to Israel to rule and bring to Christ. He has given us those millions in India to bless, and to raise in the scale of civilised nations. Accordingly, we have done, and are doing, for the East all that the Times describes because we are Israel. And to the God of Israel, who is Jehovah-Jesus, shall be all the praise!

THE REV. JOHN WILKINSON, "THE FRIEND OF ISRAEL," LECTURES AT NORTHAMPTON.

On Feb. 10 the Rev. J. Wilkinson delivered the first of two lectures at Northampton, the printed report of which has been anonymously sent to us by some friend at that place on the 23rd idem. Assuming that the report is a correct one (and we see nothing to doubt the fact), we feel we ought in justice to let our Banner friends read what this long-persisting foe has now to say, after answers to his objections have been published by different champions of our cause in the Banner, as well as in separate works, not twice nor thrice. We are surprised to find that Mr. Wilkinson has apparently nothing new to allege, save in one respect, and in that what he says that is new is not true. We are sorry to make such a statement as that regarding a minister of religion, but we are forced to do so in respect of the allegation he makes, that one of the "doctrines," therefore "teachings," of Anglo-Israelite advocates is, "that if men believe their identity with the Ten Tribes, they need not trouble themselves about conversion, or the blessings of the new birth."

We ask Mr. Wilkinson in all earnestness to tell us who are the teachers of this false doctrine? Not the Banner of Israel, or its Editor, Philo-Israel! Not Hope and Destiny and its Editor, Mr. Douglas A. Onslow! Not Glad Tidings and its Editor, the Rev. Robert Douglas! Not Mr. Edward Hine and his work, "The Forty-seven Identifications." We are absolutely ignorant of the fact, if such it be, that any Anglo-Israelite writer of any repute has ever held such monstrous views, or taught them. We are glad Mr. E. Law stood up at the end of Mr. Wilkinson's first lecture, withstood him to the face on this point, and made his own distinct protest, as an Anglo-Israelite, against what he called "such a blasphemous doctrine." Mr. Law had never read it himself, he said, and we can add that no teacher of our views, or any instructed Israelite, has ever held so absurd an one, falsified as it is by such Biblical examples as those of Judas Iscariot, Demas, Ahab, Absalom, Jeroboam, Amnon, and the sadly long list of Israelites of the pure blood who, dying impenitent and out of Christ, if that were so, were lost.

For the rest, Mr. Wilkinson's statements were the old ones, which have been answered in the Banner and elsewhere over and over again. We mean, however, to notice them once more, as our friends may not have easy access to the refutations already published of Mr. Wilkinson's rather crude and jejune objections to our case. Before we do so, we ask our friends' careful perusal of what follows. We shall only reply to the first four points. The fifth we have already touched upon above. The report was to the following effect:—

THE REV. J. WILKINSON ON ANGLO-ISRAELISM.

Lecture in the Old Theatre.

On Thursday evening, Feb. 10, in the Old Theatre, Marefair, Northampton, the Rev. J. Wilkinson, of Mildmay, author of "Englishmen, not Israelites," delivered the first of two lectures on "The Ten Tribes: Where are they not, and where are they?" There was not a large attendance. Major Liebenrood presided, and was supported by the Rev. E. G. C. Parr and the Rev. E. J. Austin. After prayer offered by the Rev. E. G. C. Parr, the chairman, in a few brief remarks, introduced the lecturer, who gave an interesting account of the manner in which he first became interested in the subject, and said he believed the views he was opposing were unscriptural, and consequently mischievous. He had been vilified for years on this subject, but he had never answered back, and never should. The first pamphlet he wrote on the question, "Englishmen, not Israelites," now out of print, was of a controversial character, and was an answer to "Twenty-seven Identifications," and "Flashes of Light." Proceeding, he observed that it was repeatedly asked, "If the Anglo-Saxons are not the Ten Tribes, who are the Anglo-Saxons?" That was altogether beside the question. Supposing the Anglo-Saxons could be traced back to their origin as satisfactorily as the Jews could be traced back to Abraham, this would by no means prove the Anglo-Saxons to be the Ten Tribes. The more pertinent question was, "If the Anglo-Saxons are not the Ten Tribes, who are? and where are they?" These were the questions he proposed to consider. He asked them to be concerned only for the truth at all cost, since even unpalatable truth was more profitable than palatable error. He then proceeded to show that the Ten Tribes were not the Anglo-Saxons for five Scriptural reasons. The first was based on Numb. xxiii. 9, and it was shown that the people shall dwell alone, and not be reckoned among the nations, was true of the Jews, but not of the Anglo-Saxons. The second point was founded on Hosea iii. 4 and 5, where Israel was to remain many days without king or prince, and without a true knowledge of God. The Anglo-Saxons were not in these circumstances. The third point was that the Twelve Tribes, out of Palestine, were to be few in number, under national curse, and multiplied, and no longer few, when restored. But the Anglo-Saxons, though out of Palestine, were enjoying national blessing, and were not few in number. The fourth point was based on Gen. xvii. 10—14. The penalty of uncircumcision was excision. The Anglo-Saxons were uncircumcised. The last point was as follows:—Anglo-Saxons are either saints or sinners; if saints, then detached (though Israelites) from the nation, and incorporated with the Church; if sinners, then under the curse of the law. So that it would not do to urge the plea that because the Anglo-Saxons were nominally Christian, therefore they had escaped the curse of the law; since that curse could only be escaped by true conversion, and it was a dangerous doctrine that if they believed their identity with the Ten Tribes they need not trouble themselves about conversion or the blessings of the new birth.

An opportunity having been given for putting questions, Mr. E. Law rose, and said he loved Mr. Wilkinson for his work's sake, but the lecture had only confirmed him in his own belief. He could not help rising, however, to express his horror at such a blasphemous doctrine as that intimated by the lecturer as being expressed by some, though he had never read it himself.

In reply to a question by a Mr. Chambers, Mr. Wilkinson explained that the term Israel included the Jews. All Jews were Israelites, though all Israelites were not Jews. On the motion of Mr. E. Law, seconded by the Rev. E. J. Austin, a hearty vote of thanks was accorded the lecturer, and the meeting closed with prayer.

We are bidden to conclude that the Ten Tribes are not the Anglo-Saxons, for the following four reasons:—

Point 1: Our old friend founded on the prophecy of the son of Beor does duty again as usual. Numb. xxiii. 9, it is said, bars the way. The Israelites were to "dwell alone," and "not be reckoned among the nations." "This is true of the Jews," said Mr. Wilkinson, "but not of the Anglo-Saxons." Our reply must be based on Mr. J. G. Taylor's clever remarks on this point published in our last New Year's No., Vol. xi.,

Digitized by Google

p. 10, 11. Balaam's statement was that Israel was to "dwell alone, and not be reckoned among the nations," as an unalloyed blessing. This is true of the Jews, either as a blessing or as a curse. Will Mr. Wilkinson maintain that the Jews are blessed by reason of their dwelling alone and not being reckoned among the nations? We are sure he will admit they are under disability, divine displeasure, and curse in this respect. It is clear, then, that Balaam's prediction, being a pure blessing, and nothing else, has no reference whatever to the condition of the Jews in the sense Mr. Wilkinson understands the words. In what sense are we to understand them, then, as our own nation's blessing, being Israel? We find the reply in Exod. xxxiii. 16, and it answers Mr. Wilkinson by showing that "the dwelling alone" is separation from the world by reason of God's presence with His people, which is an unalloyed blessing not possessed just now by the Jews. "For wherein shall it be known here that I and Thy people have found grace in Thy sight? Is it not in that Thou goest with us? So shall we be separated, I and Thy people, from all the people that are upon the face of the earth." Christian Israel verily dwelleth alone, and is not reckoned, or does not reckon herself, among the nations. For God is with her, and not with them, a truth taught also by Psa. cxlvii. 19, 20, as to the Word of the Most High.

Point 2: Hosea iii. 4 and 5 bars our claim, said Mr. Wilkinson, "because Israel was to be many days without king or prince, and without a true knowledge of God." The Anglo-Saxons were not in these circumstances, is Mr. Wilkinson's dictum. We are sorry to differ. This is exactly what our Anglo-Saxon ancestors were from the time they left Media till the time they embraced Christianity in these Isles of the West. Should this view be deemed inconclusive, there is the argument which, to our mind, is convincing—namely, that Hosea, in chap. iii., was speaking of the House of Judah, or the Jews, under the name of the children of Israel, which they were and are. The wife of chapters i. and ii. was the Lo-Ammi outcast House of Ephraim. In chapter iii., after Ephraim had been cast off for a time, the history of the second wife, the House of Judah, was the subject of the prophecy; and therefore Mr. Wilkinson's argument falls to the ground, as based upon this particular point.

Point 3: "The Twelve Tribes, out of Palestine, were," according to Mr. Wilkinson, "to be few in number, under national curse, and only multiplied when restored." We do not so read either Deut. xxviii. or Hosea i. 10. In the latter, and also in Zech. x. 6 to 9, we find words which ought to cover Mr. Wilkinson with confusion. The children of Israel were, in Hosea i. 10, promised they would become, in their Lo-Ammi state, like the sand of the sea, which cannot be measured nor numbered; and in the place where it was to be said unto them, "Ye are Lo-Ammi," or, not My people, there they were to be called "the sons of the living God," or the Christian nation. After that event the Restoration, in union with Judah, was to follow, but not before. In Zech. x. the increase of Joseph is to be followed by their dispersion to far countries, and then their Restoration in vast multitudes is predicted. Ezek. xxxvii. 10 is to the same effect. Mr. Wilkinson is bound, as an honest man, to admit he is in error on this point.

Point 4: Circumcision, it is said, bars the claim, because Israelites were circumcised; and the Anglo-Saxons, being uncircumcised, the penalty of excision would be theirs. Therefore, argued Mr. Wilkinson, the Anglo-Saxons cannot be Israel. But surely the lecturer here forgot that Israel suffered excision from the parent stock! Were they not cut off from their land, their law, their God, and so became Lo-Ammi, not God's people? But after becoming what Mr. Wilkinson denies Israel ever could become, God's Word rebukes him, and tells us in Ezek. xi. 16, R.V., "Whereas I have removed them far off among the nations, yet I will be to them a sanctuary for a little while in the countries where they are come." "They shall be as though I had not cast them off" (Zech. x. 6). Here is the excision of Israel which Mr. Wilkinson implies is an impossibility, and their restoration to God's favour after their cutting off, which is what we maintain has been God's dealing with us as a nation, because we are His Lo-Ammi Israelites of the House of Ephraim under blessing.

We propose to reply to Mr. Wilkinson's second lecture when we are favoured with a printed report thereof.

THE BOUNDING LINES OF THE GRAND GALLERY.

By F. Gass.

The bounding lines of the Antechamber and King's Chamber are well known; they represent significant numbers. But what are the bounding lines of the Grand Gallery? At first sight this will appear a difficult question to answer, but in reality it is not so. Looking at the Gallery, in its original design, as a theoretically perfect and beautiful chamber, with exactly squared and finished ends, and overlaps, of which there are seven, extending at the general incline right up to their ends, the bounding lines are: (1) The circuit of the floor; (2) the circuit of the roof; (3) the vertical height of each of the four corners, based on the mean vertical height of the Gallery; and (4) the inclined width N. to S. of the overlaps at the four corners of the North and South walls. The roof is shorter and narrower than the floor, which is caused by the seven overlaps closing in, one above another, on all sides, until the roof is reached. Thus a side of any one of the four walls near the roof has very much the appearance of the under side of a flight of stone steps when standing beneath them.

The exact length of the roof is not essential to the solution of the problem, as whatever length is accepted, the length of the overlaps at the corners will be regulated thereby. With regard to the floor, I shall keep to the well-proved length, but propose to use Mr. Flinders Petrie's measures of the roof and overlaps, as they are the most complete yet taken.

The length of the floor is 1881·6, the width 82. Length of roof 1836·5, the width 41·2. The mean vertical height 339·55. The mean inclined width of overlaps at each corner, 22·55. The mean width is taken to save needless discussion of separate measures. For the purposes of this measurement, the ramps and Great Step must be considered as non-existent, and the Gallery bare from floor to roof. The result, which will be found very interesting, had better be put in a simple tabular form, that will be easily understood by all. The numbers in brackets refer back to the description of the bounding lines:—

(1) Circuit of floor—
1881·6+82+1881·6+82 ... ... =	3927·2
(2) Circuit of roof—
1836·5 + 41·2+1836·5 + 41·2 ... =	3755·4
(3) Mean vertical height up the corners—
339·55 × 4... ... ... =	1358·2
(4) Inclined width of overlaps at corners—
22·55 × 4 ... ... =	90·2
	9131·0

Giving the highly satisfactory result, for the sum of the bounding lines of the Grand Gallery, of exactly the number of inches in a base side of the Pyramid. Or, expressed in another form, the days in a solar year multiplied by the inches in the sacred cubit, 365·242 × 25. That this is a wholly unbiassed result, arrived at by a rigorous application of the universally approved measures of the dimensions of the Grand Gallery, will be clear to everyone.

There is a simple method of proving this calculation that avoids any difficulty that may be supposed to exist as to length of roof, or width of end overlaps. Take a rectilinear figure with the same dimensions as the Gallery, but a width throughout equal to the floor: Length 1881·6, breadth 82, height 339·55. Deduct from the bounding lines of this figure the difference, 40·8, between the width of roof and width of floor at both ends, and the quotient will give the bounding lines of the Gallery. Thus:—

Digitized by Google

(1881·6 + 82 + 339·55) × 4	= 9212·6
Deduct 40·8 × 2	= 81·6
	9131·0

There is a further development of the bounding lines that is too good to be omitted. Produce (i.e., extend) the four vertical walls of the Gallery downwards to the level of the pavement outside the building (see former papers), and the sum of the bounding lines of such a figure gives a remarkable corroboration of the correctness of our figures, and generally of some of the most important scientific theories of the Pyramid. The lines of this interesting geometrical figure must be measured just as it may be pictured, standing on the pavement-basal-plane, and capped by the roof of the Grand Gallery; of course the circuit of the floor has to be deducted. Decimals are omitted in the totals, but then the measures are at least as exact as it is possible to verify them by actual measurement:—

Circuit of roof of Grand Gallery	3755
Width of overlaps at the four corners	90
Height above base of two South corners of roof, measured up the corners (1692 + 339·5) × 2	= 4063
Height of two North corners measured in the same way (858 + 339·5) × 2	= 2395
	10303

Equal to 25 times the length of the King's Chamber, or 100 times the height of the Eastern granite wainscot in the Ante-chamber. This brings to light the hitherto hidden, but always existent, fact that there are two numbers connected with the bounding lines of the Grand Gallery, 9131·055 and 10303·3, the first of which equals a side of the square base, and the second the diameter of a circle of the same area as the base.

Thus giving another instance, and a marvellous one, of the powers of the Pyramid in the demonstration of the abstruse problem of the quadrature of the circle!

Reference has not been made to the rough groove running round the Grand Gallery near the bottom of the third overlap, as it clearly has no connection with its architectural design. Mr. Petrie states that it was cut out after the walls were built, and classes it as an inexplicable alteration. The vertical height of the Gallery agrees with a perpendicular-to-incline height of one-thirtieth of a base-side. And it is curious that this perpendicular height almost exactly agrees with the length of the Antechamber, plus one-tenth of the length of the Gallery = 116·26+188·16, which again is equal to the inclined distance from the South wall of the Grand Gallery to the South wall of the Ante-chamber added to the length of the chamber. Apparently there is no end to this wonderful interlocking of Pyramid numbers and consequent repeated demonstration of their correctness. If the outline of the original fundamental base of the Pyramid were destroyed beyond recovery, the interior measures would be amply sufficient to prove its dimensions. The distance from the North wall of the Grand Gallery to the foot of Step and up its face to level of top of ramps, is very close to Petrie's length of roof. To foot of Step, 1813·56 plus 22·94 the vertical height to top of ramps=1836·5.

The Illustrated London News, for March 12, gives as a special supplement an illustration of the Royal Oak, being a Jubilee Genealogical Tree, showing the descendants of Her Majesty Queen Victoria, whose portraits are given in the various branches. The work is beautifully executed, and is alone worth more than the amount charged for the number complete.

Erratum.—Page 98, col. 2, 29th line, for "His heart," read "his heart."

THE FATE OF THE TEN TRIBES, AS DESCRIBED BY THE BISHOP OF MANCHESTER IN HIS LECTURE ON HEBREW PROPHECY.

There is a fine passage in one of the lectures of the Bishop of Manchester, on Hebrew Prophecy in the eighth century B.C., as reported by the Manchester Guardian of October 11th, 1886, which we should like to present to our readers. Its last few sentences, which point to our own nation's present circumstances, require a few words of comment. He said:—

The Israelites unhappily did not live alone in Palestine. In the Phœnicians and Canaanites they had neighbours who became most seductive tempters to them. Continuing, the Bishop pointed to the many resemblances and affinities between the Hebrew and the Canaanite races, and showed how the chosen people were led away into idolatrous compliances. To make their own shrines attractive the priests were naturally led to make concession after concession to the popular demand. A little more glitter, a little more jollity, a little more licence—what could each concession signify? So it went on till at last the places of pilgrimage became those shocking scenes of drunkenness and lewdness painted by the prophets of the 8th century. Let them not be too indignant at that priestly unfaithfulness. Had we known nothing of this eager vieing of priests with one another who should make his own church most attractive by glitter, and show, and swell of music? The moral declension of Israel went on—the more sins, the more sacrifices; the more sacrifices the more offerings to the priest. Such a state of things would be bad enough if it existed in the worst quarters of a dissolute city, but in Israel it was all connected with religion—nay, more monstrous still, with the religion of the pure and holy Jehovah. One specially prominent feature in the prophetic picture of the demoralisation of Israel was the heartless oppression of the poor by the rich. Like a dark thread it ran through the whole texture of the prophetic accusation. The condition of Israel appeared outwardly fair and prosperous —a propitious God, and a pious, grateful, people would have been the terms in which the prophetic sycophants of the Court would have described the situation. Very different, indeed, was the verdict of the true prophets of God. They saw at once through all the specious disguises, the horrible, terrifying facts which they covered—ritual without religion, wealth without prosperity, power without foundation, the riot of the few rebuked by the misery of the many, the splendours of the Court dimmed by the squalor of the cottage. And then suddenly on the fair horizon there appeared a dark threatening cloud no bigger than a man's hand. Upon this hollow shell of fair-showing power there was about to be hurled the mighty mountain of Assyrian strength. Already the tramp of the Assyrian legions broke upon the prophetic ear like an advancing storm; already that storm blackened the heavens, already the wrecks of the rotten monarchy of Israel were seen tossing upon the waves of its devastating flood. Safety was vainly sought in alliances, but against all such carnal devices the prophets lifted up an unfaltering protest. It was not confederacy, they declared, with one heathen power or another which could save Israel, but repentance, amendment and trust in Jehovah. "Precisely," cried the people and the priests and the demoralised prophets of the popular religion; "Jehovah is stronger than Assyria; it is in Jehovah that we put our trust." Could anyone say, they said, that they failed to honour Him, to make His temples more splendid, His offerings more costly? Was there a hill in the land upon which altars did not smoke and sacrifices burn in His honour? Must He not be on their side, and if He be, could Assyria prevail against Israel? Was any god mightier than Jehovah? "No," the prophets replied; but they affirmed—and here was the great revelation which the prophets made to Israel and the world—that Jehovah was not merely the strong God of Israel, but the almighty God of holiness. The one thing which Jehovah demanded was righteousness, and if Israel continued in her wickedness like her heathen neighbours Jehovah should break her and them to pieces by his rod the Assyrians. Nothing could live before God but righteousness. "The fire of his judgment cometh burning like an oven." "If any man, if any people would escape the flames of that fiery judgment, that man or people must break off sin. What a message for us (concluded the Bishop) in this day of England's emergencies! We seem to stand almost alone in the midst of giant forms of earthly force, preparing to dash themselves together in deadly encounter, and timid voices were asking "Where shall we find a refuge, how shall we escape being ground to powder in the awful collision of the nations?" Not one word will I say against prudent alliances and timely preparation, if only those alliances are based on righteousness and that preparation on pious trust in God. But this I will say, this the prophets of Israel and the great story of our country teach us with consentient voice, that if England is to live it must be in virtue of her own intrinsic strength, and that if she is to be the strong bulwark in the future, as she has been in the past, of human freedom and happiness, her strength must be based on righteousness; and that, once more, if she is to be righteous her righteousness must be gained and sustained, not by high civilisation nor a splendid religious cultus, but by that faith in Christ which is "the victory that overcometh the world."

Digitized by Google

Such were the Bishop's utterances. All we can say in regard to that part of the lecture which related to our own land is this; If "England is to live because of her own intrinsic strength," and that "strength is to be based on righteousness," we feel very doubtful whether our country will long survive. It is quite certain she has no intrinsic strength, but that what strength she has, and what righteousness she possesses, are based on the strength and righteousness of the Son of God, who died on Calvary "to redeem Israel" (Isa. xliii. 1; xliv. 6). Faith in Christ the Bishop puts forward as the means by which Christ's righteousness is to be given to this nation. But though this is true of the individual believer, we do not think it is so respecting the nation at large. We do not read in the Scriptures that Israel's national restoration is contingent on her repentance and faith in Christ, but in God's grace and truth which gives her redemption, and therefore repentance and faith.

This is the covenant which God promises to make with Israel, (not Israel with God). "He will put His law in their inward parts, and in their heart He will write it; He will be their God and they shall be His people; and they shall teach no more every man his neighbour and every man his brother saying, 'Know the Lord,' for they shall all know Him, from the least of them to the greatest of them, saith the Lord, for He will forgive their iniquity, and their sin He will remember no more." Until Ephraim is turned to his Lord he will never repent, but when God turns him he will be found bemoaning himself and repenting in dust and ashes. The Bishop seems to expect that in the coming collisions of nations the British people too will be found involved in the catastrophe if they be then without "intrinsic strength," and personal, national, "righteousness." We do not so read the prophecies. In Zeph. iii. 8, R.V., we find the Gentiles, quâ Gentiles and non-Israelites, will be obnoxious to God's wrath and to His indignation, but that towards Israel, His "peoples," "He will turn a pure language, for the express purpose that they may all call upon the name of Jehovah, to serve Him with one consent." The favour thus shown to the latter will not depend then on "intrinsic strength," or national righteousness, but upon God's faithfulness to His oath to "Abraham and his seed forever," whereby He said to them, even when guilty of idolatry, "I will never breakMy covenant with you" (Judges ii. 1, R.V.).

The Bishop does not know or admit that the British are Israel, and therefore a people with whom God has made a solemn covenant. One part of that covenant was the unconditional promise that "He would never leave them nor forsake them," but "dwell among them and be their God" (Josh. i. 5; Exod. xxix. 45, 46; Haggai ii. 5). The "strength" which the British (being Israel) possess, is the "strength" of the Lord Jehovah, their God. Their "righteousness" is also of Him (Exod. xv. 2; Isa. liv. 17). Their faith which is really needful is provided for them, because the promise is, "I will betroth thee unto Me in faithfulness (or faith) and thou shalt know the Lord" (Hosea ii. 20). The fact that the British are Israel makes the difference between this nation and those which are not of the seed of Abraham. To the former the promises belong, but to the latter there is not a single promise in the four corners of the Bible, which is unconnected with the children of Israel, God's Heritage and Inheritance. The promises of Christ are theirs as Gentiles; but they have to receive them through the accredited agents and messengers of the Lord, even by the hands of the House of Israel, the missionaries to the nations of the whole world. Let Israel therefore praise the Lord.

"THE ENGLISH CHURCHMAN AND ST. JAMES'S CHRONICLE."

In the issue of the above journal of December 30, 1886, we find a rather unflattering notice of the Banner of Israel. We feel honoured, however, that the English Churchman and St. James's Chronicle should care to intimate that the Banner's opinions are nothing to it. The Banner, nevertheless, deals with a subject which ought to be important to the journalists of all the papers in the land, and we should, therefore, rejoice to know that the St. James's Chronicle had adopted our views and had begun to promulgate them as its own. After quoting the St. James's Gazette respecting Mr. H. W. Monk's proposal "to buy up Palestine in order to find a capital for the world," the English Churchman said :—

> We confess we are not greatly concerned about the opinions of the Banner of Israel, or of Canon Liddon, but the following, taken from an interesting little book by the United States Consul (Warder Cresson) at Jerusalem in 1845, is more to the point :—
>
> "Some say that Rome is, and ever will be, the centre of unity and mother of us all; but God says, and the Prophets say, and Paul says, that Jerusalem is to be the great centre of unity where He will place His great Name, and that she is the mother of us all. Saith David, 'Beautiful for situation, the joy of the whole earth is Mount Zion—the City of the Great King' (Psa. xlviii., v. 2)."
>
> As to the inaccessibility of the Holy City, Dr. Liddon can scarcely have read—or reading did not understand—what "the prophets (Isaiah, Ezekiel, Zechariah, &c.) say as to the great physical changes which will be effected at the time of Messiah's second coming. When, without the interposition of any Lesseps, a magnificent waterway, connecting the waters of the Mediterranean with those of the Gulf of Akaba, shall have been suddenly established, Jerusalem in all its glory will become a place of easy access to all the dwellers upon earth.
>
> Mr. Monk's plan for buying up Palestine reminds us of the not dissimilar scheme of the late Mr. Cazalet, whose widow is now, we believe, the owner of what was Sir Robert Peel's house in Whitehall Gardens. Mr. Cazalet had the money in his pocket, and was gone to Constantinople for the purpose of completing the covenant between the Porte and himself, when he was suddenly attacked by fever, and died within a few days. This occurred about five years ago, but the lesson remains. Such disappointments ought to teach us that although "the time to favour Zion" is manifestly drawing near, God reserves to Himself the precise mode in which the blessed change will be brought about.

It is strange that the writer of the above should be so ready to adopt the views of a now deceased Anglo-Israelite—Major J. Scott Phillips, of Wimbledon—in regard to the probable future canal which God is to give His people near Jerusalem, and yet be so scornful in regard to one of the chief exponents of these views, the Banner of Israel. However that may be, if the future of Jerusalem is a matter of interest to the writer in the English Churchman, how is it he seems so entirely indifferent as to the future occupants of Jerusalem? He seems to be interested in the Jews. How is it he is careless as to the future of Ephraim, without whom the Jews will find it impossible to return to their land, according to the prophecies. The opinions of the Banner may be matters of no concern to the English Churchman, but the statements of God's Word ought not to be received with indifference. Our Banner's opinions are founded on the Holy Scriptures, and therefore should not be so scoffingly rejected as we fear they are by our contemporary.

Digitized by Google

Review.

Leaflet for the Young, Who Are You? 1s. per 100; to be had of the Hon. Sec., Anglo-Israel Association, 27, Pulteney-st., Bath.

THE above is the earnest effort of an Israelite friend at Bath to bring the subject of "Our Identity" with the lost Tribes down to the capacity of the young. It is a happy effort, well and successfully made, and like y to lead to good results. The leaflet teaches "the Scriptural distinction between Israel and Judah," the separate captivities of the Two Houses; and the certainty of Israel s existence somewhere now, as a distinct nation. The conclusion points to the British as they, by reason of our nation's possession of the Gates, the Sabbath, the evangelising functions, and of their occupation of the desolate heritages as colonies. A warning not to depend on our origin for salvation properly closes a very deserving little attempt to publish our glorious news, and we hope many of our readers will help the effort by buying these leaflets and distributing them widely.

Correspondence.

THE BRITISH-ISRAELITE JUBILEE FUND.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR PHILO-ISRAEL,—I had been wondering how British-Israelites as a body could best celebrate this Jubilee Year in some way that should take a practical form, as it is good for us to work as well as offer prayer and praise. I am consequently delighted to see the proposals of "C. F." and "M. C. C." in this week's BANNER, and I gladly send you my small offering (2s. 6d.), with the hope that all people to whom the knowledge of Our Identity with Israel has been given will contribute something, for the pennies of the poor will serve to show true thankfulness as well as the pounds of those who have had more of this world's goods committed to them. For the information of my correspondents, and sowers at home or abroad, I should like to state that I will forward to you, with pleasure, any sum, from a single stamp upwards, which it may be found convenient to enclose to me when writing here, so as to save postage.

One wish permit me to add that it might be considered; it is that if, as I hope, our Jubilee Offering will amount to a goodly sum, I wish that it may be divided between the Church Missionary Society and the British and Foreign Bible Society. I suggest this because (1st) our action will thus give two witnesses to the truth we hold for public acknowledgment by the two largest Societies for carrying on the work of God. (2nd) I would add the Bible Society as a sharer of the gift because it also is taking the Gospel, though silently, to all people, while at the same time it is laying the foundation of the knowledge of Israel in Gentile and all heathen minds by its presentation to them of the Bible in all languages, and thereby, when the British stand before them revealed as Israel, putting proof into their hands of the absolute truth of the Word of the living God, and of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. (3rd) The Bible Society, besides working for the stranger, gives the Word to British-Israel at home, amongst whom we have many who are practically heathen.

With all good wishes for a great success in our undertaking, I remain, very sincerely yours,

E. M. RUSH,
Hon. Sec. "Anglo-Israel Free Distribution Fund."

Lee, London, March 2nd, 1887.

"WHERE IS THE GENTILE CHURCH?"

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—Will you forgive me for saying that your reply to the clergyman who has started this question does not satisfy me, and therefore I have a right to suspect it may not satisfy him. I should like to be permitted to call his attention, through the medium of the BANNER (not knowing his address) to another way of meeting his difficulty.

The word Gentile is carelessly used in our translation of the Bible. In Ainsworth's Latin Dic. (Carey's second Ed., 1823), "Gentiles" is given as "Of the same House, family, name, ancestry, or stock, belonging or proper to a nation or family. Gentilitas—The multitude of a people or family. The relation and alliance of the same stock and kindred. Agreeableness of nature; similarity or affinity of name," &c.

Now, if Ainsworth be an authority on the meaning of the word, it is clear that the word "Gentile" ought only to be applied to kindred heathen. It cannot properly be used in reference to any peoples not of the Hebrew race, by Hebrew writers, and therefore ought not to be carelessly used in any translation of their writings.

In "The Englishman's Greek Concordance of the New Testament," published by Bagster, I find "Ethnos," translated by four different words, having different meanings—namely, "heathen," "nation," and "nations," "people," and "Gentiles." On examining the passages where the word Gentile is used in our Bible, I found it used about 120 times, and as I thought, incorrectly, a hundred times. I would ask the clergyman to take these facts into consideration, and examine the correctness of my statement. If he sees, as I think he will, that the word Gentile should never be used but in reference to the Lost Ten Tribes of the House of Israel, he will be led to examine the sense of the various passages, and then he will come to the conclusion that these Gentiles—these lost sheep, this House of Israel—can only be put out of sight for a time, like the dry bones of Ezekiel's vision, and that the time is close at hand when the dry bones will have come together, put on sinews, and flesh, and skin, and are ready to stand up an exceeding great army, or an exceeding great people. He will then search for this people and rejoice to find it domiciled in these isles of the North and the West, a place appointed for them, and from which they go forth to the nations as God's appointed messengers and witnesses,

Yours faithfully,
CAROLINE PEARSE.

Launceston, Feb. 14.

NOTE BY THE EDITOR.—The clergyman who, on page 64, asked the question, "Where is the Gentile Church?" evidently meant (putting aside the exact classical meaning of the word Gentiles), "Where is the Church of the non-Israelite races?" The word Gentilis, of course, means what our correspondent says; but any dictionary will give her as the Bible meaning, "Anyone not a Jew; (adjective) belonging to any but the Jews" ("Chamber's Etymological Dictionary"). That question we answered in the BANNER; and we submit to our readers, correctly. We quite agree with Miss C. Pearse, that it is a pity the words, Goi, Goim, and Etnos, and Ethnê, were not translated throughout the Bible, from the Hebrew and Greek respectively, by the words "nation" and "nations," leaving the reader to make his own application in each text of the word, racially. It will be found, we believe, that "Goi" and "Goim" are used constantly in the Old Testament to describe "nations outside Palestine," racially distinct from Israel s polity, or ostensibly so; and that Ethnos and Ethnê are words used in the New Testament, sometimes of Israel in the singular only, but of the non-Israelite races, in the plural, always. With these views we cannot endorse our correspondent's opinion that the word "Gentile should never be used but in reference to the Lost Ten Tribes of the House of Israel." We should rather say the words, "Gentile" and "Gentiles" should be abolished altogether; but as our clergyman clearly meant by the word "the non-Israelite races," the matter is as we explained it (we believe), but not otherwise.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

SIR,—I am not aware whether any of your writers on the Identity have taken notice of a grammatical coincidence between Hebrew and English, not found, so far as I can learn, in any other language. In Hebrew, the same form serves for the future and the imperative; whence Dr. Adam Clarke, in his commentary, contends that many of the prayers in the Psalms should have been rendered as future tenses; for example, in the 38th, "Break their teeth," &c., is synonymous with, "Thou wilt break their teeth." In English the future form is often used as an imperative. "Thou shalt not kill," is understood as "Do not kill." I know of no other language, except these two, in which the future and the imperative are conservative, as Hebrew grammarians express it. It strikes me as being a beautiful Hebrew peculiarity. Every command thus conveys a promise of power to fulfil it; every prayer offered in faith is equivalent to a prediction it shall be done,

I am, &c., GRETTA.

Grange-terrace, Boness, N.B., Feb. 14.

Digitized by Google

NOTICES.

All communications intended for the Editor, to be addressed: — "Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Clifton, Bristol.

SUBSCRIPTIONS £ s. d.

Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free - 0 7 6
Two Copies (including Double Numbers) - - 0 13 6
Three Copies " " " " - 1 0 4
Four Copies " " " " - 1 5 6
Six Copies " " " " - 1 16 4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-grand. London, to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C., or F. W. PARRY & Co., 29, Paternoster-row, London.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

Contents Bills and Show Cards may be obtained on application to the Publishers.

Advertisements should be sent to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

Prepaid Advertisements are inserted at the rate of 30 words for 1s. 4d.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

The Rev. JAS. BILLINGTON, F.R.H.S.

Will LECTURE at

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH, ROBERT ST., GROSVENOR SQUARE, W.

(First turning in Davies-st., or Gilbert-st., Oxford-st.),

On WEDNESDAY EVENINGS, March 16, & 23.

Commencing at 7.30.

A COMMENDABLE OBJECT.

THE ROYAL NAVAL PROTESTANT (CHRISTIAN) REFORMATION SOCIETY circulates on Her Majesty's Ships Christian Reading, with a desire to promote Godly living and Christian truth, to preserve and unite Protestant Bluejackets from Romanism. Any Christian Bluejacket will receive sound Reading whose address is forwarded to the Hon. Sec., on whatever station serving. Funds are urgently needed; also free grants of Christian, Temperance, Anglo-Israel, Anti-Infidel Tracts, etc.

WALTER BROOKS, Hon. Sec.

Office: PROTESTANT BUILDINGS, PORTSMOUTH.

PUBLISHED BY ROBT. BANKS & SON,
RACQUET COURT, FLEET STREET, E.C.

WORKS BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

The Geography of the Gates. With Map and six full page, and one double-page, Illustrations, printed on plate paper. 208 pages, in handsome cloth, gilt Price 3s. 6d., post free 3s. 10d.

An Elementary Digest or Sketch of the Chief Facts and Teachings of the Great Pyramid of Egypt. Adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific 56 pages, Illustrated with Diagrams, price 4d., post free 5d. 10th Thousand.

Our Identity with the House of Israel. Price 4d. Reprinted from "Clifton Chronicle Letters"

A Resume of the Scriptural Argument, proving the Identity of the British Race with the Lost Ten Tribes. Price 1d.; 6s. per 100. New edition now ready.

The History of the House of Israel; How they were Lost, and How they were Found, Told for the Children. Price 6d., cloth 1s.; post free 7d. and 1s. 1d. Fourth Edition. Eleventh thousand.

Robert Banks and Son, Printers, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

PREVIOUS TO ALTERATIONS.

GENUINE SALE

OF

FIRST-CLASS BOOTS AND SHOES

AT

WALTER KEAST'S

Family Boot and Shoe Warehouse,

102, KENNINGTON PARK RD., LONDON, S.E.

WALTER KEAST will, on receipt of P.O. for 5s., send by Parcels Post a pair of Ladies' High-leg Balmoral, Stylish Walking Boots, suitable for Spring or Summer wear. These goods are made of French Lasting, with Morocco Vamps, and give universal satisfaction. Glazed Kid Walking Shoes, entirely new this season. These Shoes are finished in first-class style, lined with Black Leather, and are wonderfully cheap. Sample pair on receipt of 4s. 9d. W. K. is also forwarding hi-French Lasting Shoes, Military Heels, suitable for walking, garden, or house wear. Sample pair on receipt of 3s. 3d.

102, KENNINGTON PARK RD., LONDON, S.E.

Published by ROBERT BANKS & SON,

RACQUET COURT, FLEET STREET, E.C.

Postal Orders may be obtained at any Post Office in the United Kingdom for the following amounts: 1s., 1s. 6d., ½d. each; 2s., 2s. 6d., 3s., 3s 6d. 4s., 4s. 6d., 5s., 7s. 6d., 10s., 10s. 6d., 1d. each: 15s., 20s., 1½d. each. They should be "crossed" City Bank, Ludgate Hill, E.C. Stamps received.

THE ANGLO-ISRAEL POST-BAG; or, How Arthur Came to See It. By the Right Rev. BISHOP TITCOMB. Price 2s. 6d. in cloth gilt; paper cover, 1s. 6d., by post 1d. extra.

THE ISRAELITES FOUND IN THE ANGLO-SAXONS. The Ten Tribes supposed to have been Lost, traced from the land of their captivity to their occupation of the Isles of the Sea. By WILLIAM CARPENTER. Price 2s. 6d., by post 2s. 8d.

THE ANSWER TO THE EASTERN QUESTION, With Some Facts Concerning the Identity of the British With Israel. By the Author of "The New Old Story," enlarged. Price 3d.; for distribution, 50 copies, 11s., post free.

CARDINAL PROOFS THAT THE BRITISH Are the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel — the Abrahamic Covenant. By F. W. PHILLIPS. With two chapters by PHILO-ISRAEL. Price 6d., post free 7d.

THE NEW OLD STORY. By "A E I." Price 6d., post free; in cloth, 1s., post free.

THE BIBLE ATLAS. To Illustrate the Old and New Testaments. Price 1s.; post free 1s. 1d.

ANGLO-ISRAEL TRACTS. 8 pp. Royal 16mo., on toned paper. Adapted to enclose in letters, and for general distribution. No. 1—12. Half-penny each, 12 copies, post free, 6d. Specimen packet for 6 stamps.

PRESENT-DAY PROBLEMS, and How Anglo-Israel Truth Explains and Solves Them. By V. M. COX. 1d., by post 4 stamps.

LIGHT SHED BY THE GREAT PYRAMID OF EGYPT on the Last Days of this Dispensation, from A.D. 1814 to A.D. 1922. By JAMES KEITH. Price 4d., by post 5 stamps.

NEW TESTAMENT TRUTH on the Anglo-Israel Controversy. By J. G. TAYLOR. Price 3d., by post 4 stamps.

A NEW LIGHT. An Elementary Pamphlet for General Distribution. By A E I. Price 2d., by post 2½d. in s amps.

EPHRAIM-ISRAEL, the Pivot Nation of Prophecy and History. By V. M. COX. Price 1d., one dozen free for 1s.

AMMI; OR THE CHOSEN PEOPLE. By MISS BIRD. Tracing the Descent of the British People from Abraham the "friend of God," and showing that true science, history, philology, and ethnology, are on the side of the Identity of the Anglo-Saxon Race with the Ten Lost Tribes. Price 2d., post free 2½d.; 12s. 6d. per 100 for distribution.

IS NOT QUEEN VICTORIA the Royal Seed to King David's Throne, and Are Not Her Subjects, the British People, the Ten Lost Tribes? By W. HOPTON. Price 2d.; 12s. 6d. per 100.

A Complete Catalogue Free on Application.

ISRAEL IN THE NEW TESTAMENT

OR,

Proofs of the National Conversion of the Ten Tribes to Christianity.

By SURGEON-GENERAL J. M. GRANT, M.D.

Author of "Jeshurun," etc.

Price 4d., post free, 4½d.; 12 Copies, post free, 4s.

London. R. Banks and Son, Racquet Court, Fleet St., and by order of all Booksellers.

LEAFLET FOR THE YOUNG.

WHO ARE YOU?

Price 1s. per 100.

To be obtained from the Hon. Sec., Anglo-Israel Association, 27, Poulteney Street, Bath

Knight & Forster's PENS

KNIGHT & FORSTER'S "LEEDS"

For Bold Writing no Pens can surpass "THE UNIVERSITY" Broad Point (3s. per gross, or 1s. per ½-gross); while for Smooth and Clear Work "The Ledger" Pen (2s. per gross) stands supreme. GREAT THOUGHTS says: "They are a great help."

KNIGHT & FORSTER'S LEEDS

"THE LEDGER" PEN.

London: STRAKER & SONS, 124, FENCHURCH ST., And of all Stationers; or direct from the Makers, post free.

BASINGHALL WORKS, LEEDS.

CASES FOR BINDING VOL. X.

ARE NOW READY,

Price 1s. 6d., post free 1s. 8d.

Robert Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

THE TEETH, THE TEETH, THOSE PRECIOUS TEETH!

Save, Purify, Beautify.

GEORGE & WELCH'S

CARBOLINE

1/6 (TOOTH PASTE). 2/6 per Pot.

Is the Best Known

Cleanser, Preserver, and Deodoriser.

Dental Guide says:—"No Tooth application equals the Carbolics."

Proprietors: GEORGE & WELCH, Worcester.

Through Chemists, or Post Free from Makers.

LUNG OWBRIDGE'S TONIC
LUNG LUNG TONIC, TONIC
LUNG THE MIGHTY HEALER. TONIC
LUNG Save Your Lives by Taking TONIC
LUNG OWBRIDGE'S LUNG TONIC. TONIC
LUNG It has a power over diseases hitherto TONIC
LUNG unknown in Medicine. TONIC
LUNG Are you at all Weak-chested or inclined TONIC
LUNG to be Consumptive, with just a touch of TONIC
LUNG Cough now and then? TONIC
LUNG "Try this Wonderful Medicine." The TONIC
LUNG Cough and Weakness will disappear as TONIC
LUNG if by magic, and you will feel a strength TONIC
LUNG and power you never had before. TONIC
LUNG HAVE YOU A COUGH? TONIC
LUNG A DOSE WILL RELIEVE IT. TONIC
LUNG HAVE YOU A COLD? TONIC
LUNG A DOSE AT BEDTIME WILL TONIC
LUNG REMOVE IT. TONIC
LUNG Bronchitis & Asthma it relieves instantly TONIC
LUNG The Spasms of Coughing so dreadful in TONIC
LUNG Whooping Cough become less with each dose TONIC
LUNG of the medicine. — TONIC
LUNG Prepared by W. T. OWBRIDGE, Chemist, Hull TONIC
LUNG Sold in Bottles 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d. & TONIC
LUNG 11s. by all Chemists and Patent Medicine TONIC
LUNG Vendors. Wholesale all London and TONIC
LUNG Provincial Houses. TONIC

ETHELINE

A New and most effective Remedy for CORNS.—Perfectly safe and harmless. Is very easily applied. Cures in a few applications, without the slightest pain. Everyone troubled with either Corns, Warts, or Bunions, will find relief by using ETHELINE. To be obtained of all Chemists, or post free for 14 stamps from J. LLEWELLYN, CHEMIST, COWBRIDGE

A BOON TO SUFFERERS.

HARNESS' ELECTROPATHIC BELT.

Testimonial

From Miss J. HOULDSWORTH, Rozelle, Ayr, N.B.

"I am glad to be able to tell you that the HARNESS' ELECTRIC BATTERY BELT has been very beneficial in strengthening the system generally, as well as instrumental in relieving the Neuralgic pains from which I have suffered.

NEURALGIA & DEBILITY.

Every man and woman suffering from any disorder of the Nerves, Stomach, Liver, or Kidneys, should at once stop physicing, and remit 12s. for HARNESS' ELECTROPATHIC BELT (post free) and obtain immediate relief. Pamphlet and Book of Testimonials POST FREE. MEDICAL BATTERY CO. Ltd.

52, OXFORD STREET, LONDON, W.

North of Rathbone Place

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. F. W. PARRY (late GUEST & Co.), 29, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, MAR. 16, 1887. [All rights reserved.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."

(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. XI., No. 534. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, MARCH 23, 1887. [PRICE ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
Israel Fortifying Her Foreign Gates	117
Another Great Earthquake	118
The Relation Between Language and Ancestral Prairies. By J. G. Taylor	119
The Identity at Clapham	119
A Lecture by Commander Roberts, R.N., at Clifton	120
The Rev. Eliezer Bassin on the British-Israelite Jubilee Fund	121
The Church Missionary Society in 1837 and 1887. "The Queen's Jubilee"	121
Canadian Loyalty	122
Sowing the Seed. By E. M. Rush	123
Correspondence	123

ISRAEL FORTIFYING HER FOREIGN GATES.

WHEN we published our leading article on "Our Undefended Gates," on January 26, in No. 526 of the BANNER, we made sure that before long we should find that our blind and careless nation, true to her Israelitish character, would obey God's command "to shut her doors about her," close her Gates, and "enter into her chambers," preparatory to the frightful cataclysm which clearly is going, in God's appointed time, to engulph the nations of the Continent; those earthly powers, whose punishment is determined on by the God of Israel, as Zeph. iii. 8 declares. That the work has been going on without our knowledge is obvious from Mr. Edward Stanhope's reply to a question asked him in the House of Commons, on Tuesday, February 15th. He was interrogated as to the progress made in the defensive fortifications of our coaling stations, by Sir William Crossman—and made the following satisfactory statement:—

It is not desirable to give complete details respecting the defence of our coaling and naval stations; but I can state that the Colonial Legislatures of Hong-Kong, Singapore, Ceylon, and Mauritius have voted £270,800 towards the defences of the stations in those colonies—some of the money having been voted recently. The Imperial Government has expended £183,500 for the armaments, and contemplates a further expenditure of £206,500; and on other coaling stations for Her Majesty's Fleet abroad the Imperial Government have spent £192,164, and expects to spend a further sum of £513,000.

The Home and Colonial Governments therefore, are alive to the risks they are running, and have resolved to take steps to defend the foreign Gates abroad, which, after the manner of careless Israel, they have been utterly neglecting for many years past, making sure that no one would dare to touch their Outland Empire of strategic possessions. Now, however, a crisis has arrived in the history of the world. God has told Israel what she must do, and, accordingly, our blind ones, quite unaware that they are Israel, and as Israel are obeying God's commandments addressed directly to themselves, are beginning to safeguard their coaling stations and their chain of posts, which lie at present or did quite lately, as tempting prizes for their enemies to try and force from their grasp. Hong-Kong and Singapore, our far-distant Eastern gates, we see, were till recently literally lying undefended; and we now admit, by our feverish haste in trying speedily to defend and fortify them, that we had neglected our duty hitherto in respect to them. Ceylon and Mauritius, two gems of the Eastern Indian Ocean, we are hurrying to secure from a coup de main or insult from an enemy's cruiser. It must be admitted that we have for 80 years held these two island fortresses simply by the power of prestige, and by such strength as the weak Indian squadrons of our Navy in those parts possess.

Henceforth these coaling stations will rank as moderately strong Imperial fortresses, which will hold their own in case of a sudden attack, and repel their would-be assailants. But why is it so essential that these coaling stations and fortresses of Israel should be just at this juncture looked after in this way, and put in a state of military and naval defence? Why have they been neglected so long? Why provided with fortifications in the year of grace 1887, when peace reigns throughout the civilised world? Let the Patriotic Association tell us in a paper they have just issued. It was quoted in England, Feb. 19, and headed thus:—

NO TIME MUST BE LOST.

At this moment all Europe is bristling with arms, and no man can predict the moment of the outbreak. The great Powers, without an exception, are concentrating their forces. Russia has been arming ever since she was repulsed from Bulgaria. The German Government demands 40,000 fresh soldiers. The French Assembly has voted an additional expenditure of £3,400,000 for the army, and the French Navy is increasing with a portentous growth. Austria has hastened the calling out of her recruits, and has doubled her reserves. The Italians have already planned an immediate mobilisation of 400,000 men. Even the Belgians and the Danes have voted large credits for national defences. This is not the time for us to refuse necessary support to our national defences. The present is, too, a suitable time for work in the dockyards. Materials are comparatively cheap, and by utilising the thousands of unemployed labourers in necessary works we can at once relieve distress and strengthen the effective force of the Empire.

So far the secular journalist and writer. But what account does God's Word give of the matter? It is most explicit and clear. Let us open it at Isa. xxvi. 20, 21, R.V., and then read Zeph. iii. 8, R.V. "Come, My people, enter thou into thy chambers and shut thy doors about thee: hide thyself for a little moment, until the indignation be overpast. For behold the Lord cometh forth out of His place to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity; the earth also shall disclose her blood, and shall no more cover her slain." "Therefore wait ye for Me, saith the Lord, until the day that I rise up to the prey; for My determination is to gather the nations, that I may assemble the kingdoms to pour upon them Mine indignation, even all My fierce anger; for all the earth shall be devoured with the fire of My jealousy." Here, then, is an event which God has Himself revealed to us as closely approaching. To prepare for its advent He deems it proper that we should "shut our doors about us, enter into our chambers," and hide ourselves in them, what time the fury of the storm which is to be the undoing of the nations of yonder unstable, ill-consolidated Europe, is spending itself on them.

Digitized by Google

Why God directs us to guard our outland foreign Gates and coaling stations by human means, but desires us to leave unguarded our home Gates, trusting for their safety to the promise He made to David in 2 Sam. vii. 10, we cannot clearly explain. The facts around us show that the foreign Gates alone excite our anxieties, while regarding our home ports and their safety from invasion, we feel no serious misgivings. Humanly speaking, we have just ground to fear for our foreign Gates; while the security of our home in these islands of the West seems to rest on good foundations, even without any coast fortifications of the first class to protect them. The grounds for solicitude respecting our valuable foreign Gates are these. Our Gates protect our Outland Empire, and that is situated in the most valuable and fertile portions of the earth. "All nations envy us our possession of them, and desire to rob us of them. This empire, in Australia, North American Canada, and Asia, is the source of our political strength and grandeur. It is the market for our manufacturers, and the feeding-ground for our surplus population." The nations envy us because we have become a first-class Power, with 320,000,000 of subjects, with a trade of a thousand millions of pounds a year, also because we cover a fifth of the globe with our Queen's flag, and promise yet to incorporate all the nations of the earth into our body politic, by reason of our enormous increase, and our God-given prosperity. The whole of this empire, this grandeur, and this prosperity are (speaking as men) dependent upon our continued possession of our Gates and coaling stations. Therefore, their fortification becomes imperatively necessary in the face of the tremendous conflict of the nations impending; and God Himself, as we have seen, commands that it shall be carried out just before the outburst of the punishment of the Gentiles. Facts show us that that time is at hand, and thus we may know where we, as a nation, chronologically stand in the chart of prophecy.

The following information, which we find in the Manchester Evening Mail of January 14 last, is to the same effect as that already noticed, but refers to Table Bay and Simon Bay, which together constitute the Gate of the Cape, now quite without defence in respect to the former:—

I am informed that one of the first of the coaling stations to be vigorously taken in hand will be Table Bay and Simon Bay. Lord Carnarvon's letters have, therefore, done real service to the empire. The actual land defences will fall upon the War Office, but the Admiralty will contribute their quota by reinforcing the squadron on the station by two of the most powerful of modern ironclads, one of which will probably be the Devastation. A heavily-armoured Monitor will also be sent out to remain permanently in harbour, but this cannot be done yet, as it will be necessary to build a high superstructure on the present flush deck to enable the ship to make the ocean voyage out with a prospect of safety.

ANOTHER GREAT EARTHQUAKE.

"AFTER rumours of wars and perplexity of nations, we now come to earthquakes," were the words of a secular newspaper of Bristol on Feb. 26, describing the great earthquake in the Riviera on Wednesday the 23rd. The loss of life on this occasion seems to have been heavy, but not so great as at first supposed. It is calculated that in the Province of Porto Maurizio there were 570 killed and 156 injured, and in the Province of Genoa 34 killed and 37 injured, or about 800 killed and injured. The panic was great in Cannes, Nice, Mentone and Monte Carlo, but beyond a few damaged and fallen houses and churches there was no loss at any rate of human life. The occurrence was a lamentable one, but quite prophetical and in keeping with the times we live in, as even the secular journals of the day, as we see, admit in their description of the facts. "The great earthquakes" were predicted by our Lord as events to be expected in the latter days preparatory to His own return. "Nation," He said in Luke xxi. 10, R.V., "shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom, and there shall be great earthquakes in divers places, famines and pestilences; and there shall be terrors and great signs from heaven."

We have had the famines and pestilences in divers places, but Great Britain and her Colonies have all been spared. We have had the great earthquakes, and no doubt more and even greater than this last we shall hear of in time to come; but they have not touched our favoured land or our Colonies as yet: and we firmly believe they will not come near us in the future. "Nation" is ready "to rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom," but our own happy land knows nothing of war at present or in prospect; and we believe the Lord Jehovah "will keep us in perfect peace," having "ordained peace for us" (Isa. xxvi. 3—12, R. V.). Coming war is the burden of all the newspapers of our day, and preparations for the most terrible conflict the world has ever seen are making by Russia, Germany Austria, France and Italy, the Turks also doing something in the same direction. The difficulties seem insuperable, and must end in war unless a mode of settlement can be found; Russia wants Constantinople and Bulgaria as a means to that end. Austria will fight to prevent Russia attaining these objects. If Austria and Russia fight, Germany must help Austria, having Italy also as an ally. But that will be France's opportunity to regain her lost provinces, unless Alsace and Lorraine can be erected into a separate autonomous State under the joint protection of Europe, or some arrangement made by the restoration of Lorraine to France by which permanent peace may be secured. We doubt whether the will of God will suffer such an arrangement as we have mentioned for the pacification of Europe. We believe it to be His object to bring about the great earthquake war-woe of prophecy, and that therefore the tension will continue till the great war breaks out and brings all Europe down to the ground in one vast ruin.

The Times of Feb. 26 published a communication from Berlin of the previous day in which the following ominous words, exactly like our own often-repeated warnings on the subject, were published. He said:—

The Septennate will make the French more inclined to pause before attacking Germany by themselves, and it will enable the Empire to defend itself all the better if so assailed. But it will do very little to remove the cause of danger to the peace of Europe still prevailing in the East, which Prince Bismarck, unless I am very much mistaken, looked upon from the beginning as the more direct source of peril. France will not make an isolated attack on Germany; no serious and well-informed person here ever feared she would. But she will spring upon the Empire at the first convenient opportunity—for which she is ever on the alert—and this opportunity would present itself if Germany were involved somehow in an Austro-Russian conflict. If there is to be an European war, it will certainly break out on the Danube, not on the Rhine; and, nisi Fata fallunt, this is what is firmly believed here in the higher spheres of observation, though it may not have been deemed expedient to present this view of the situation just before the elections.

Digitized by Google

The result would be what the same writer described in another part of his communication as "the horrors of an unparalleled war." These are, however, the words of the seer in Rev. xvi. 18, R.V: "And there was a great earthquake such as was not since there were men upon the earth, so great an earthquake—so mighty;" a catastrophe indeed, not paralleled in the history of mankind! Whether "the coming great earthquake" is to be a mighty war or succession of wars having the physical effects of a disastrous earthquake affecting the surface of the ground, but unaccompanied literally by the latter, is what we cannot predict. The language of Rev. xvi. 18—21, seems to point to the occurrence of a Northern war, the "hail" of which, "falling out of heaven upon men," will cause them "to blaspheme God because of the plague of the hail, the plague thereof being exceeding great;" but we think it possible and even probable that the political commotions described in this New Testament prophecy may be preceded or accompanied by a seismic agitation unheard of in violence, which will mark the event as unparalleled in the annals of the world, as the exponent in fact of the "indignation, and all the fierce anger of the Lord," destined "to devour the earth with the fire of God's jealousy" (Zeph. iii. 8). It is an awful thought that we may be now on the threshold of these terrible events, and a comforting one to know that, being Israel, we shall be saved out of them all. Israel, praise ye the Lord!

THE RELATION BETWEEN LANGUAGE AND ANCESTRAL PRAIRIES.

By J. G. Taylor.

From the last letter of Captain George Palmer, R.N., it is clear that he considers the matter of language an invincible argument against the identity. Such a change as (we say) has happened to Israel in this respect is in his opinion an event unparalleled in history, and an idea of the most consummate absurdity. He is not satisfied with the lesson drawn from the Huguenots of Spitalfields, for "their names betray them. If I found John Smith and his family located in the heart of Tartary, and speaking the dialect of the Ugro-Ostiakes, I should, notwithstanding this circumstance, know that they came originally from England; Wah-ro-nee-sah living in Paris and speaking the purest Parisian, would nevertheless be traced back to his ancestral prairies in North America." Our opponent evidently supposes that this makes a great hole in the Anglo-Israel armour, but we must not succumb to John Smith without another struggle, and I will therefore submit a further illustration to show that the loss, by contact, of language, names, religion, customs, traditions, and every other national characteristic, is not some foolish and impossible theory, but an episode which has occurred in comparatively modern times.

The Captain will, perhaps, have heard of the Normans. If he is at all acquainted with their history, he will be aware that they were Danes. While one division of these pirates were pillaging our Northern coasts, a second detachment descended on France and settled down in Neustria. They came over to England one hundred and fifty years after this, and they had lost every particle of their Danish exterior. They spoke the French language, they observed French customs, they were devoted to the French religion, they bore French names, they practised French laws, and they brought with them a French literature; in fact, they were so completely Frenchised that they passed for Frenchmen, and probably three-fourths of the English people are to this day under the impression that they were French. Even Macaulay terms them Frenchmen, not that he was ignorant of their real ancestry, but because he wrote in the common tongue. As to names—on which Captain Palmer lays particular stress—there is no mistaking their French complexion, and the doughty barons conversed, to boot, in the "purest Parisian." These French patronymics are so embedded in English annals that the Captain's position becomes what, in a naval engagement, would be described as "precarious," and leads one to think that in attacking the identity the gallant officer has exceeded his commission. "Simon de Montfort" has a decidedly Gallic sound. "Cœur de Lion, also, savours of a Southern clime, and if we are to be guided by the Wah-ro-nee-sah rule of logic we shall have to look for Richard's "ancestral prairies" in the direction of the equator. But the change extended deeper than to names and language. It affected their religion and their very traditions. Freeman says, "The memory of their heathen descent was forgotten." Again, "There can be little doubt that the speedy fusion of Normans and English was greatly promoted by the fact that conquerors and conquered were, in truth, kinsmen. But this influence was a purely silent one, and it was in no way acknowledged by those on whom it acted. Neither side thought at all of any kindred as existing between them. To all appearances no two nations of Western Europe could have been found which, in speech, feelings, and manners, differed more widely from one another" (Norman Conquest, vol. i. p. 149). If your correspondent consults the following paragraph from the same author, he will find two examples of that principle which he believes exists only in the excited imagination of Anglo-Israelites. "The Danish settler in England, when once baptized, readily became an Englishman. This absorption into a kindred nation is less remarkable than the fact that the same people in another land adopted a language and culture which was wholly alien to them. The Normans of the eleventh century were men of Scandinavian descent who had cast away every outward trace of the language, manners, and feelings which made them kindred to Englishmen, and had adopted instead the language, manners, and feelings of Latin France." Here, then, is a transformation of the most root and branch nature, a transition that obliterated even the remembrance of their origin, and this was the work of a century and a half. Yet there are people, like Captain George Palmer, who tell us that the adoption by Israel of foreign habiliments in the course of a thousand years or so is an historical impossibility, and that the scientifically-balanced mind laughs at the preposterous conception. It seems to me, however, that these gentlemen know as much about history as they do of the Identity, and if they studied both a little more they would consign their pamphlets to—the heart of Tartary.

Newcastle-on-Tyne, February 28th, 1887.

The Identity at Clapham.—A most enthusiastic and highly-successful meeting was held in the Assembly-rooms, Clapham, on Tuesday, March 1, to inaugurate an Identity mission, to be carried on systematically in this locality. A. Osborne, Esq., took the chair, and the meeting was addressed by the Rev. Reuben Harris, Mr. Farquharson (who is in charge of this mission), Mr. Hook (who is in charge of the Millwall branch), Messrs. Brooks, Crandell, Spencer, Cooper, Jacobs, &c. Votes of thanks to the ladies for providing the tea and to the chairman brought a highly-successful meeting to a close. Friends willing to assist in any way in this good work, address James Farquharson, 111, Stockwell-road, Brixton, S.W.

Notice to Correspondents.—We regret that the Rev. H. Roe's letter has been so long crowded out. We hope it will appear next week with several other important communications not yet published.—Ed.

Digitized by Google

A LECTURE BY COMMANDER ROBERTS, R.N., AT CLIFTON.

COMMANDER ROBERTS, R.N., delivered a lecture at Clifton, on February 25th, before the Israel's Identification Association at their usual monthly meeting, W. M. Webb, Esq., being the chairman, on the following subject :—"The Britons at Home (a glance into the bardic and historic times before Cæsar)." The lecturer began by observing that his subject was the Britons in their homes, here in Britain. They came hither from Egypt and Palestine, and Greece, and Thrace, and Spain, and Gaul, and the Baltic till they all converged into these our British islands. He stated his preference for the literal interpretation rather than the spiritualising mode of dealing with the Holy Scriptures, because it was the best method of answering the atheist. Coming then to the literal journeyings of the children of Israel, we find them safely arrived in this our favoured land. They arrived as a first invasion of Britain under three distinct names—The Khumri, the Lloegrys, the Brythons. These were three "peaceable tribes," whose route was partly by the German Ocean, partly by Gascony, Holland, and Spain. These reached our shores as early probably as the twelfth or thirteenth century B.C. The Khumri occupied the North and the West.

The second invasion of our country, about 300 B.C., was by tribes called the Coritani and the Belgæ, who settled on the East coast and on the South. The "three peaceable tribes," did not oppose the new comers, but retired before them. The new comers were pretty much the same as the first arrivals as to manners, customs, and habits ; but their religion was not as pure as that of the three peaceable tribes.

We now come to the third great invasion of our islands, and that was by the Romans, under Julius Cæsar, B.C. 55. There were two invasions and settlements by the Romans, and they made but a slight impression on the warlike and sturdy Britons, who were described by the Latin writers as "the yet unsubdued Britons." The lecturer stated he had a very poor opinion indeed of Julius Cæsar as an authority regarding our British folk. He doubted his truth, and convicted him of divergent, if not of false, statements in regard to the Britons whom he came to conquer. At one time he described them as barbarous savages ; then as people who could not have been such, on his own showing. Tacitus, Pliny, Strabo, and Diodorous Siculus, give widely different accounts of our ancestors. They describe them as a noble race. Rome Pagan found the British a wealthy, happy, noble people. It left them poor, divided, miserable, and degraded. Rome pagan, Rome papal, and Rome infidel, have done no good to the world at large, and have left it worse than they found it. The Roman people are a race whom Satan has used in the various stages of their existence to debase, degrade, and injure God's people Israel. Till Rome came to Britain there was no image worshipped in this land. The Britons worshipped God through His attributes, and as recognising the work of His hands, but never under the form of gross idolatry in image worship. There was one good work however, which Rome did, and that she effected involuntarily as regards the ancient Britons. In her second invasion of this land, after the Christian era, she gave her the Gospel by the hands of a noble band of missionaries who came with her invading armies. The light that those zealous men brought and planted here with the second Roman invasion has never been quenched to this day. It still exists, as God said it would, and never will expire.

The first authority to whom the lecturer appealed in regard to the character of the early British folk was Diodorus Siculus. He described those of South-west Britain as a mercantile, settled, civilised, hospitable, agricultural people—a race who were engaged in civilised operations, such as mining, refining, producing tin from their local mines, and exporting it. Cæsar describes the Veneti who resisted his invasion of this island, and says they possessed 220 vessels of war, built of oak, that they had chain cables and anchors which must have been of wrought iron—that they used leathern sails and nails of iron in building their ships, and that the Britons sent sailors to help to man their fleets. Propertius says these British were like the Parthians on land, and describes the power of the British ships. That their trade was from Cornwall and Devon, to Spain and France through Gibraltar too, and to all the coasts of Europe in the Mediterranean.

The Brigantes and Veneti on the coasts of Gaul were a Khumri race—a British people who are positively stated to have had the mariner's compass and the telescope in use. The British Triads also tell us that the British had a formidable naval force. Could such a people as are here described be savages or barbarians, as Julius Cæsar falsely tries to show they were ? "Peaceable" though the early British tribes certainly were, yet they were full of health, and skilled in all manly games and chariot exercises. Their chariots were exquisitely manufactured. There were six descriptions of such vehicles mentioned by Cæsar himself. They were scythed and bound with iron as to the wheels. These chariots were similar in kind to those used by the Trojans. Some of these chariots were adapted to carry two armed men, some to convey many more ; some were meant to carry infantry soldiers into battle, and rapidly to remove them if needed elsewhere. So armed and so provided the ancient British were no despicable foe indeed ! And consider how numerous their chariots were ! They are said to have had 4,000 of them. Cæsar mentions that. Other chariots, too, the Britons manufactured, which won the admiration of the Roman world. Pliny tells us what other implements these so-called "barbarians" had. A reaping machine he describes as their invention or possession, which deftly cut the ears of corn, as it passed on wheels and drawn by cattle or horses through the fields of wheat, and cast the severed heads of corn into a copper receptacle attached. Were such a race as this "barbarous" or "savage" ? Pliny also tells us these barbarians invented a mode of manuring their fields which might be copied with advantage to-day—namely, the use of chalk dug out of the earth from deep pits or excavations, so as to ensure its absolute purity. This placed upon the soil would fertilise it for years. These barbarians, too, invented and made soap. The word, in fact, has a Keltic derivation (sope). These savages owned corn, cattle, gold and silver, iron, tin—all these they raised for themselves, and exported. Brass they imported from abroad. Were such a race low down in the scale of uncivilised people? They made butter and cheese, mead, and brewed their beer. They made glass, and used coal ; their dress was manufactured. It is true they did tattoo their bodies all over, as British man-of-war's men do to this hour ; and as the Phrygians and Etrurians did before them in Italy and Asia. Our "savages" of Her Majesty's naval service do that to-day. This people of whom I speak wore tight-fitting trowsers, tunics, and a loose cloak over all, thrown over the shoulders ; also a small round hat. Gold was their common ornament. They used that metal to make armlets, necklaces, rings, and cups. Their drinking horns were tipped with gold; their shields were ornamented with it, and some had solid gold shields in use. The Romans levied on the British a heavy tribute, paid in gold, and the cities and temples had much gold to adorn and beautify them. You may see these things for yourselves in the British Museum in London, and in the Museum in Dublin ; and wonder with great admiration at the splendid workmanship of these gold ornaments and shields. Can such as these have been manufactured by savages such as Cæsar describes, and men often believe, the ancient Britons to have been ? But where did the Britons get their possessions of gold ? There were gold mines and silver mines in Wales and Scotland in those days, and traces of them are found to-day in certain places in those countries.

The habits and feats of strength of the British were the admiration of their Roman conquerors. Their powers of endurance in running and swimming were remarkable. Their dwelling-houses, as Cæsar admits, were sometimes of stone, with stone foundations, as their remains prove to this day. Their temples were magnificent.

Digitized by Google

The British ancient mythology, when carefully examined, shows traces of an Eastern and Israelitish origin. The lecturer concluded by glancing at the descriptions left by Roman writers, of the British temples and Bardic worship. He pointed to the twelve stones placed in a circle round the central stone, as shewing a resemblance to the Israelite temple and altar commemorating the Twelve Tribes. The twelve stones were the stones of Federation, and the central one the stone of the Covenant. The Bardic service was Israelitish; the high priest was Israelitish. His breastplate, some of which have been dug up with other British remains, and bear a close resemblance to to the breastplates of the high priest of Israel were Hebrew and Israelitish, too, in their form and fashion.. So was the Bardic headpiece and tiara. The lecturer concluded an interesting address by pointing out the importance of the subject which had occupied their attention.

THE REVEREND ELIEZER BASSIN ON THE BRITISH-ISRAELITE JUBILEE FUND.

THE following letter is characteristic. The Reverend Mr. Bassin would have us, as British-Israelites, commemorate our Queen's Jubilee by raising a Fund for the conversion of the Jews only! We cannot see that that would be our duty at all. Our privilege is to take the Gospel to all the nations, families, and kindreds of the earth—the Jew being first. On this principle we are prepared to act. We propose, therefore, to receive whatever funds our friends may intrust to us, and account for them periodically in the BANNER, finally disposing of them thus:—

1. All amounts received for the conversion of the Jews will be, in June next, collected and paid to the London Society for promoting Christianity amongst the Jews, as the Jubilee Fund of the Anglo-Israelites.

2. All sums received for "the conversion of the nations" outside the family of Judah, will be paid over to the Church Missionary Society, through its local branch in Bristol, on the like account.

3. All remittances made on account of the Bible Society as our friends' Jubilee gifts will be paid to the British and Foreign Bible Society's agents in Bristol. Our time and powers forbid us to undertake any more extensive operations than these;—and we must, with regret, decline all proposals for such further extension. The Reverend Mr. Bassin wrote as follows:—

MY DEAR PHILO-ISRAEL,—The BANNER of March 2nd, 1887, just to hand, and among your correspondence I notice a letter from C. F., in which he makes a suggestion to have "an Israelite Jubilee Fund to aid the evangelisation of the heathen world." While I agree with C. F. that an Israelite Jubilee Missionary Fund be established, I beg to differ from him that the Jubilee offering be given to the Church Missionary Society. C. F. gives three reasons why he distinctly says to the Church Missionary Society—First, "that there may be no frittering of the sum itself, or of the minds of the givers, as to what society." Now, would it not be better to unite and establish "An Israelite Jubilee Fund to aid the evangelisation of the Jews"? This would be more in accordance with the spirit of true Israelites to care for the spiritual welfare of their Jewish brethren. This in itself would attract the attention of many, and force them to inquire into the truth of the British Identity with Israel.

The second reason of C. F., "that the bulk of believers in our Israelitish origin are Church people," is not, I believe, a good reason why the offering should be given to the Church Missionary Society. First, why not to the London Society for promoting Christianity among the Jews, which is a Church of England institution the same as the Church Missionary Society? Secondly, why should we estrange believers in the British Identity with Israel, belonging to other denominations? Thirdly, why should we not establish a special Israelite Jubilee Mission Fund, and a missionary be appointed direct by an Anglo—or British—Israel committee?

The third reason of C. F. is, "that the extension of the Messianic Kingdom among our heathen inheritance is surely the leading desire of all true Israelites." That is a well-known fact that the interest for the extension of Christianity among the heathen is great, while that for the promotion of the Gospel among the Jews is rather small. Would it not therefore be a good opportunity, now the Jubilee year of an Israelitish Queen has come, to establish an Israelitish Mission to the Jews? and awaken a desire to give to our brethren of the House of Judah what we have received—namely, the unspeakable gift of God in Christ Jesus?

If you approve of this suggestion to establish "An Israelite Jubilee Mission to the Jews," I will at once forward my own contribution, and the contributions of other Scottish Israelites who belong to the Presbyterian churches.

I am, my dear Philo-Israel,

Your old friend of the House of Judah,

ELIEZER BASSIN.

THE CHURCH MISSIONARY SOCIETY IN 1837 AND 1887.

"THE QUEEN'S JUBILEE."

THE above is the title of an admirable and able pamphlet issued by the Church Missionary Society, of Salisbury Square, E.C., London. Its object is, of course to compare the condition of the Church Missionary cause fifty years ago, with what it is now; and in doing this it finds a ready helper in the writer in the Quarterly Review, of July, 1886. "Missionary activity is the characteristic feature of the Christianity of the present century," said the Quarterly; and it went on to add in very remarkable language—the language of the BANNER slightly modified: "this is, above all, the era of advance and conquest. By its charter the Church Catholic is the heir of the world; and the divine power which has prospered it hitherto, may be trusted in due time to put it in possession of its inheritance." These words the Church Missionary Society seems to approve, and publishes with its imprimatur. But surely the authors of this pamphlet knew, if the Quarterly did not, that by the fiat of Scripture "the heir of the world" is Abraham and his seed? For St. Paul said in Rom. iv. 13, R.V.: "Not through the law was the promise to Abraham or to his seed, that he should be heir of the world—but through the righteousness of faith." The promise, then, is to the seed of Abraham when under Christ, or in the present dispensation that they should be "heir of the world"; but the promise makes no mention of "the Church Catholic" of the Quarterly and Church Missionary Society? If, however, these authorities were to admit that the British nation is "the Church Catholic," and thus "the seed of Abraham," we should not dispute the question; but as no such admission appears in the pamphlet, we do most earnestly oppose that claim—not as an enemy of the Church Missionary Society—God forbid! but as one of its honorary district secretaries, earnestly desirous that the foundation of the noble association should rest on the solid structure of the British nation's identity with God's chosen witness Israel, but not on the shifty basis of "the Church Catholic," which has nothing to do with the sanctions under which the Church Missionary

Digitized by Google

Society (essentially a British one) works among "all the 'nations,'" "all the families," and "all the kindreds of the earth" (Gen. xxii. 18 ; xxviii. 14 ; Acts iii. 25).

If the reader will make this correction in the Church Missionary Society's pamphlet, and read it through from end to end with identity light upon its pages, it will be found well worth perusal, bristling, as it does, with wonderful facts and figures, all proving that the British are Israel, though of that fact the compiler of the pamphlet seems to be completely unaware, since, as we have shown, he was quoting from Scripture passages which ought to have put him upon inquiry. Let us give our readers a few of the facts the Church Missionary Society presents to us in these pages. In 1837, Carey and a handful of men represented all the missionaries to Foreign nations our people commissioned and sent.

"We have now in the world, covering nearly all lands, with a marvellous network of stations, 3,000 ordained European and American missionaries, 730 laymen, and 2,500 women, preaching and teaching the precious truths of the Gospel in twenty times as many languages as were spoken on the day of Pentecost; some 3,000,000 of souls are living to-day in all parts of the world who have shaken off their allegiance to the false system of Mohammedanism and heathenism, semi-cultivated and pagan : 27.000 native converts are employed and paid as Evangelists to their own countrymen and 2,500 are ordained pastors of native congregations." At the basis of operations, in Europe and America, there were in 1800 but six English Missionary Societies, two only of any age, and three continental; in 1835 these had increased to 12 British, 8 Continental, and 7 American organizations; while at this date there are little short of 150 such, who are gathering and laying out for God and His Christ some £2,450.000 annually. "Of this amount about £1,450,000 is raised annually in the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, enough to prove that at least a considerable section of our population is in earnest in the work." Using such language, how is it the writer did not think of such texts as these: "Israel shall blossom and bud and fill the face of the world with fruit" (Isa. xxvi 7). "In thee and in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed" (Gen. xxviii. 14). "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature" (addressed to Hebrew disciples by the Lord, in Mark xvi. 15).

The writer goes on to remark on the smallness of this nation's contributions, when it finds from Mr. Gladstone's estimate that the whole aggregate income of our land amounts to £1,000,000,000 sterling." In comparing the revenues of the two great Church Societies—viz., the Church Missionary Society and the Society for Promoting the Gospel in Foreign Parts, in 1837 and 1887, the pamphlet we are reviewing tells us that in 1836-7 the Church Missionary Society had £71,727 paid into its coffers, and the Society for Promoting the Gospel £78,120 ; or a total of £149,847. The nonconforming societies, four in number, then contributed £156,495 ; Scotland, £10,268 ; America, £78,819 ; but all Continental societies, only £26,669. That is Israel and Manasseh together, contributed as "witnesses to God in heathen lands" £395,429, as against £26 669, the entire quota of the Gentile non-Israelites. In 1885 the British people only, contributed as much as £1,222,261, being more than double the sum realised in 1864-5. In regard to the work in India only, the following gives a cheering account of existing facts:—"In 1886-7 from Peshawur to Gondwana, from Kurâchi to Calcutta, all North India, the Punjab and Sindh, are garrisoned for God and His Christ ; in every principal centre of religion, and race, and power. We register, under 2 bishops, 70 European clergy, 35 native clergy, 813 native lay teachers, of whom 153 are females ; 15,384 Christians (15,055 baptized), 4,079 communicants, 16,683 scholars in 383 schools (1,964 being females). Christianity is spreading everywhere, and the praises of Christ are heard in the streets from the lips of children."

While the savings of the British nation amount to £240,000,000 per annum, the Church Missionary Society declare men can and must give to the Lord's work among the heathen (which is Israel's work) more than they do. Israel has "to blossom and bud and fill the face of the world with fruit." "The world demands our aid," cries the Church Missionary Society writer, and we echo the cry, giving a good Bible reason for our statement, which the writer lacks; because we declare that this nation is Israel, and Foreign missions are Israel's special duty, whereas the Church Missionary Society pamphlet assigns the work to "the Church," forgetting that outside Great Britain, no Church, whether in India or elsewhere out of Israel's community, recognises any duty to go "to all the nations, to all the families, or to all the kindreds of the earth." That is Israel's function, and hers alone.

CANADIAN LOYALTY.

THE Montreal Daily Star of Nov. 30, 1886, had the following leader, which is too important to be omitted:—

"THE QUEENS JUBILEE.

"A correspondent who signs himself 'A Canadian,' asks, Why should this city take any share in the celebration of the Queen's Jubilee? and requests us to explain what possible interest Canadians can have in a Sovereign who lives three thousand miles away.

"We trust there are not many Canadians who need to be enlightened on such a simple subject as this. We hope to celebrate the Queen's Jubilee, because Her Majesty is the Queen; because she is the chief ruler of the great empire of which Canada forms an important part; and also because, leaving the rest of the empire out of consideration for the moment, she is the Queen of Canada. While we deeply regret that our Sovereign Lady finds it impossible to take up her residence in Montreal, we also feel constrained to acknowledge that in the present condition of the empire, it is more in the interests of her people that she should live at Balmoral or Windsor—especially Windsor. Long may she reign, and may we and our correspondent live to assist at the celebration of her centennial. Meanwhile all Canadians who are loyal to Canada will yield due respect to the lady who beyond all possible question is to-day the chief ruler of this Dominion. Further, whatever the future may have in store for Canada, it is foolish for us to ignore the fact that our country is to-day a part of the British Empire, and that we are the Queen's subjects.

"Those Canadians who aspire to become the caudal appendage of the great American dog, need not, until they realise their ambition, feel under the necessity of sulking and refusing to enjoy the full privileges of British citizenship. Our right to share in the glories of the empire is second to none. The flag under which so many Cadadians have fought, we cannot despise; it is our flag, and it will be a long time before it is without Canadian defenders. One can understand an oppressed people refusing to celebrate the festivals of their tyrant ruler: but why the freest people on earth should be expected to have any reluctance about celebrating the fiftieth year of the reign of their Sovereign, and that Sovereign the most popular that ever wore a crown, passes comprehension. The most important feature of the Victorian era has been the colonial development of Great Britain. Not merely in area or in population, but in constitutional government. During Her Majesty's reign the same self-government as is enjoyed by the Mother Country has been conferred upon the principal colonies. Naturally the progress of the colonies has been out of proportion to that of the Old Country. Shall the colonists, then, be so churlish and unpatriotic as to hold aloof from the national celebration? We warn 'A Canadian,' that loyalty is contagious and if he stays in Montreal next June he will find himself singing, 'God Save the Queen' with heart and voice. The only way to save himself is to retire to some place where there are no other Canadians."

A Conference on Our Identity will be held on Easter Monday at the Ark, Paradise Street, Rotherhithe.

Digitized by Google

SOWING THE SEED.

By E. M. Rush.

After many years of quiet, steady effort by an ever-increasing body of men and women who proclaim the new revelation of the British people as Hebrews of the House of Israel, we are tempted at times, with a view to accomplish the best work in the future, to glance backwards to note if possible by what means the greatest progress has been made. While probably the important truth of Our Identity with Israel has in the first instance been introduced to people by word of mouth in public or in private, it must be absolutely conceded that without the good news set forth in writing, an outcome of much thought, and arguments carefully prepared and digested, and given to us as printed matter in great variety, it is more than probable that the advance would have been very slow. This being so, it may perhaps be taken for granted that we must still look to the many publications at hand, and make free use of them as affording the best means of diffusing the special knowledge we would make generally known. But still these questions remain to be decided by those who would gladly shew the new light to all men. To whom should we turn with our gift of good news, and where shall we find those who after due study will become the most earnest, the best workers?

A little thought tells us that what concerns God's truth, revealed in His Word, is likely to be most willingly and earnestly made use of by those who set the highest value on the Scriptures, those who take them as their own sure guide, and who love to help others to find in the Bible the full directions for the adoption of that rule of life—obedience to God—which through faith leads to peace and safety. Experience in a wide field of operation with many labourers proves the conclusion to be correct that such Christian workers are the best.

Very good initial work, doubtless, is done by some people who look on the "Identity" question mainly as one of political, social, or commercial significance; on all these grounds there is room and reason for labour which has its value, for they are in touch with all those things which concern our material well-being; these we cannot afford to ignore, neither may we rightly be indifferent to them, for they come to us as blessings from the hand of our loving Father in Heaven, who has planned all things great and small so wonderfully for His people Israel. If, however, we sow our seed only on the lower levels, and watch over it with hope for material benefits principally, the fruit when gathered will not be as good as that which will be yielded after the work of those who have sown the seed of God's truth not only on the lower ground for our own national good and advancement, but also, and more particularly on the higher, for the glory of God, and the benefit of the whole world. Those who take the highest view of the importance of the revelation of Israel in these days, while teaching the people to recognise the blessings poured out upon ourselves, will lead them to see the great and enduring obligation laid upon us to be an example and a blessing as a really Christian people to all other nations, so that God may be sanctified in us in the sight of the heathen (Ezek. xxviii. 25).

We may be next led to consider where, outside our own circle of acquaintance, we shall find those teachers who may be led to accept the good news, and pass it on to others which we have received. Need it be said that connected with our many missions and Religious Societies are bands of Christian workers who would really prize the light, could they but see it, which shews so much in the Bible that is now hidd n from them, and would therefore be of great value for their work. It is these workers for the masses of the people whom we do well to try to reach, though it may appear difficult to do so, but what has been done may be done again—and so for the encouragement of those conscious Israelites who wish to work it may be stated that between thirty and forty Sowers have been won for the Free Distribution Fund, who are also earnest workers for existing valuable Societies, the names of which perhaps it is wisest at present to refrain from publishing, as opposition must still be expected from members, and the subscribing public, who are yet blind to the fact of our Hebrew origin. For the Sowers above referred to, and others it is hoped to win shortly, I would plead earnestly for support to our Fund for the supplies of Literature constantly, and now immediately needed. In one Home Mission carrying on a great work we have a Sower who meets on a given day month by month twenty of his brother missionaries, to whom, as he has opportunity, he speaks of "Our Identity." It may well be imagined that I am anxious to win every one of the number. By God's blessing, if we have means, it will be done. We want the various publications, and several of each, for the study that is invited, so as to suit every need as it arises, and then to supply all with Seed as it will be wanted for each new Sower for his own field of labour. I look with confidence for a great result from this special work, and trust to be able to give account of it hereafter.

It will be interesting to many to note again how the truths newly revealed to us in the Bible are welcomed. One of our latest gains amongst the workers of another admirable Society wrote as follows:—"How can I thank you sufficiently for so kindly sending me the Banner of Israel, and other papers (various publications). It is indeed a weekly treat; many things are explained which were very obscure. What can I do but accept as truth what throws so much light on the Word of Life? I do all I can to let others see the Light. May God bless you and your work more and more." From another new Sower in the same Soc ety came the following, which will fitly close the present paper:—

"You will be glad to know that several influential persons to whom I have given the papers have commenced to lay hold, and seem anxious to know more about the subject. For my own part I am simply delighted with the readings you have so kindly sent me, and I look anxiously for the Banner of Israel every week, and then pass them on to others who I believe are also much interested. There is no subject more important to my mind, except the saving knowledge of Christ Himself."

Contributions to Free Distribution Fund will be gratefully acknowledged by the Treasurer, Miss Lawrence, Rosslyn, Hampton Road, Upper Teddington; by the Hon. Sec., Miss E. M. Rush, 103, Burnt Ash Road, Lee, London, S.E., and by the Secretary, C. Horner, Esq., 34, Sheen Park, Richmond, Surrey.

Correspondence.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

Dear Sir,—My object in writing you is to solicit the favour of any data you can conveniently furnish on a question which, if not yet a "burning question" of our times, will ultimately become one. I refer to the Israelitish origin of the British nation. This is a question of growing interest and importance, of vital national and imperial importance, and of supreme Biblical interest. At present my views are in a transition state. What the works of Mr. Hine have failed to do in my enlightenment, a booklet by my highly esteemed friend, the Rev. Henry Roe, has accomplished, viz., "Israel's World." With my mind freely open to conviction, intensely anxious to know "the way of God more perfectly," I perused that precious publication, and have been surprised and delighted with this unpretending and able exposé of the manifest teaching of Holy Scripture on a theory affecting "the sure word of prophecy" relating to God's Israel in the latter times, His covenant kept for 1,000 generations, a right comprehension and exegesis of some of the most magnificent passages of the Bible, and the grand rôle of Britain on the world-wide glory and dominion of God's Israel—

"Thine the lands of lasting summer,
Thine the myriad rolling ocean,
Light and shadow illimitable;
Thine the North, and thine the South,
And thine the battle-thunder of God."

Any information for my fuller enlightenment you can furnish will be highly appreciated. "Blessed be the Lord God, the God of Israel, who alone doeth wondrous things. And blessed be His glorious name for ever, and let the whole earth be filled with His glory. Amen, and amen" (Psa. lxxii. 10, 19). In "the hope of Israel,"

Yours truly,

Thomas Lowe.

3, John-street, Stratford-on-Avon, Jan. 19, 1887.

We understand that Bishop Titcomb has a new volume on Our Identity in the press. It will be published by Messrs. Banks & Son.

Digitized by Google

NOTICES.

All communications intended for the Editor, to be addressed: — "Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Clifton, Bristol.

SUBSCRIPTIONS £ s. d.

Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) postfree - 0 7 6
Two Copies (including Double Numbers) - - 0 13 6
Three Copies " " " " - 1 0 4
Four Copies " " " " - 1 5 6
Six Copies " " " " - 1 16 4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-grand. London, to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C., or F. W. PARRY & Co., 29, Paternoster-row, London.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

Contents Bills and Show Cards may be obtained on application to the Publishers.

Advertisements should be sent to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

Prepaid Advertisements are inserted at the rate of 30 words for 1s. 4d.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

The Rev. JAS. BILLINGTON, F.R.H.S.

WILL LECTURE at

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH, ROBERT ST., GROSVENOR SQUARE, W.

(First turning in Davies-st., or Gilbert-st., Oxford-st.),

On WEDNESDAY EVENING, March 23.

Commencing at 7.30.

A COMMENDABLE OBJECT.

THE ROYAL NAVAL PROTESTANT (CHRISTIAN) REFORMATION SOCIETY circulates on H r Majesty's Ships Christian Reading with a desire to promote Godly living and Christian truth, to preserve and unite Protestant Bluejackets from Romanism. Any Christian Blue-jacket will receive sound Reading whose address is forwarded to the Hon. Sec., on whatever station serving. Funds are urgently needed; also free grants of Christian, Temperance, Anglo-Israel, Anti-Infidel Tracts, etc.

WALTER BROOKS, Hon. Sec.

Office: PROTESTANT BUILDINGS, PORTSMOUTH.

PUBLISHED BY ROBT. BANKS & SON,
RACQUET COURT, FLEET STREET, E.C.

WORKS BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

The Geography of the Gates. With Map and six full page, and one double-page, illustrations, printed on plate paper. 208 pages, in handsome cloth, gilt Price 3s. 6d., post free 3s. 10d.

An Elementary Digest or Sketch of the Chief Facts and Teachings of the Great Pyramid of Egypt. Adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific 56 pages, illustrated with Diagrams, price 4d., post free 5d. 10th Thousand.

Our Identity with the House of Israel. Price 4d. Reprinted from "Clifton Chronicle Letters"

A Resume of the Scriptural Argument, proving the Identity of the British Race with the Lost Ten Tribes. Price 1d.; 6s. per 100. New edition now ready.

The History of the House of Israel; How they were Lost, and How they were Found, Told for the Children. Price 6d., cloth 1s.; post free 7d. and 1s. 1d. Fourth Edition. Eleventh thousand.

Robert Banks and Son, Printers, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

PREVIOUS TO ALTERATIONS.
GENUINE SALE
OF
FIRST-CLASS BOOTS AND SHOES
AT
WALTER KEAST'S
Family Boot and Shoe Warehouse,
102, KENNINGTON PARK RD., LONDON, S.E.

WALTER KEAST will, on receipt of P.O. for 5s., send by Parcels Post a pair of Ladies' High-leg Balmoral, Stylish Walking Boots, suitable for Spring or Summer wear. These goods are made of French Lasting, with Morocco Vamps, and give universal satisfaction. Glazed Kid Walking Shoes, entirely new this season. These Shoes are finished in first-class style, lined with Black Leather, and are wonderfully cheap. Sample pair on receipt of 4s. 9d. W. K. is also forwarding hi-French Lasting Shoes, Military Heels, suitable for walking, garden, or house wear. Sample pair on receipt of 3s. 3d.

102, KENNINGTON PARK RD., LONDON, S.E.

Published by ROBERT BANKS & SON,

RACQUET COURT, FLEET STREET, E.C.

Postal Orders may be obtained at any Post Office in the United Kingdom for the following amounts: 1s., 1s. 6d., ½d. each; 2s., 2s. 6d., 3s., 3s 6d. 4s., 4s. 6d., 5s., 7s. 6d., 10s., 10s. 6d., 1d each; 15s., 20s., 1½d. each. They should be "crossed" City Bank, Ludgate Hill, E.C. Stamps received.

THE ANGLO-ISRAEL POST-BAG; or, How Arthur Came to See It. By the Right Rev. BISHOP TITCOMB. Price 2s. 6d. in cloth gilt; paper cover, 1s. 6d., by post 1d. extra.

THE ISRAELITES FOUND IN THE ANGLO-SAXONS. The Ten Tribes supposed to have been Lost, traced from the land of their captivity to their occupation of the Isles of the Sea. By WILLIAM CARPENTER. Price 2s. 6d., by post 2s 8d.

THE ANSWER TO THE EASTERN QUESTION. With Some Facts Concerning the Identity of the British With Israel. By the Author of "The New Old Story," enlarged. Price 3d.; for distribution, 50 copies, 11s., post free.

CARDINAL PROOFS THAT THE BRITISH Are the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel—the Abrahamic Covenant. By F. W. PHILLIPS. With two chapters by PHILO-ISRAEL. Price 6d., post free 7d.

THE NEW OLD STORY. By "A.E.I." Price 6d., post free; in cloth, 1s., post free.

THE BIBLE ATLAS. To Illustrate the Old and New Testaments. Price 1s.; post free 1s. 1d.

ANGLO-ISRAEL TRACTS. 8 pp. Royal 16mo., on toned paper. Adapted to enclose in letters, and for general distribution. No. 1—12. Half-penny each, 12 copies post free, 6d. Specimen packet for 6 stamps.

ISRAEL IN THE NEW TESTAMENT
OR,
Proofs of the National Conversion of the Ten Tribes to Christianity.

By SURGEON-GENERAL J. M. GRANT, M.D.

Price 4d., post free, 4½d.; 12 Copies, post free, 4s.

London. R. Banks and Son, Racquet Court, Fleet St., and by order of all Booksellers.

EDWARD HINE'S PUBLICATIONS
SHOULD BE READ & DISTRIBUTED.

FORTY-SEVEN IDENTIFICATIONS, 6d.; post free, 7d.

CUI BONO? 6d., post free, 7d.

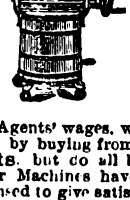
LOST ISRAEL FOUND, 3s. 6d., post free, 3s. 9d.

F. W. PARRY, 29, Paternoster Row, London, or direct of ISAAC LOVELAND, Shoreham, Sevenoaks.

SEWING, WASHING, and WRINGING MACHINES at WHOLESALE PRICES.
CARRIAGE PAID

New Medium.

Usual price ..	£7	10	0
Discount ..	3	12	6
	3	17	6



Improved Hand.

Usual price	£4	4	0
Discount	1	14	0
	2	10	0

Model Washer. Brass Tap given.

Best Rollers.	£5	16	0
Usual price : :	1	6	0
Discount	4	10

Wringer & Mangler.

Usual price	£3	3	0
Discount : :	1	1	0
Best Rollers.	2	2	0

Why pay Agents' wages, when you can save 30, 40, and 50 per cent. by buying from the Makers? We have no Agents, but do all business direct from the Firm. Our Machines have only to be seen to be admired, and used to give satisfaction.

AFTER FIVE YEARS' TRIAL!!

Hallam Fields, near Nottingham.

Gentlemen,—The Machine you sold me five years ago has given perfect satisfaction. I would not sell it now for what it cost me if I could not replace it.—Yours sincerely, E. STEVENSON.

Every prudent Housekeeper should, before purchasing elsewhere, apply to the MIDLAND COUNTIES MACHINE CO., EASTWOOD, NOTTINGHAM, J. Hanson, Mang.

EDWARD B. SPENCE,
Nurseryman, Seedsman & Florist
18, VICTORIA RD., DARLINGTON,
(ESTABLISHED 1796),

Will be glad to send to the Readers of The Banner of Israel, Seeds, Plants, and Fruit Trees.

CATALOGUE FREE ON APPLICATION.

THE TEETH, THE TEETH, THOSE PRECIOUS TEETH!
Save, Purify, Beautify.

GEORGE & WELCH'S

CARBOLINE

1/6 (TOOTH PASTE). 2/6 per Pot

Is the Best Known Cleanser, Preserver, and Deodoriser.

Dental Guide says:—"No Tooth application equals the Carbolics."

Proprietors: GEORGE & WELCH, Worcester.

Through Chemists, or Post Free from Makers.

LUNG OWBRIDGE'S TONIC
LUNG LUNG TONIC, TONIC
LUNG THE MIGHTY HEALER. TONIC
LUNG Save Your Lives by Taking TONIC
LUNG OWBRIDGE'S LUNG TONIC. TONIC
LUNG It has a power over diseases hitherto TONIC
LUNG unknown in Medicine. TONIC
LUNG Are you at all Weak-chested or inclined TONIC
LUNG to be Consumptive, with just a touch of TONIC
LUNG Cough now and then? TONIC
LUNG "Try this Wonderful Medicine." The TONIC
LUNG Cough and Weakness will disappear as TONIC
LUNG if by magic, and you will feel a strength TONIC
LUNG and power you never had before. TONIC
LUNG HAVE YOU A COUGH? TONIC
LUNG A DOSE WILL RELIEVE IT. TONIC
LUNG HAVE YOU A COLD? TONIC
LUNG A DOSE AT BEDTIME WILL TONIC
LUNG REMOVE IT. TONIC
LUNG Bronchitis & Asthma it relieves instantly TONIC
LUNG The Spasms of Coughing so dreadful in TONIC
LUNG Whooping Cough become less with each dose TONIC
LUNG of the medicine. TONIC
LUNG Prepared by W. T. OWBRIDGE, Chemist, Hull TONIC
LUNG Sold in Bottles 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d. & TONIC
LUNG 11s. by all Chemists and Patent Medicine TONIC
LUNG Vendors. Wholesale all London and TONIC
LUNG Provincial Houses. TONIC

ETHELINE

A New and most effective Remedy for CORNS.—Perfectly safe and harmless. Is very easily applied. Cures in a few applications, without the slightest pain. Everyone troubled with either Corns, Warts, or Bunions, will find relief by using ETHELINE. To be obtained of all Chemists, or post free for 14 stamps from J. LLEWELLYN, CHEMIST, COWBRIDGE

PRICE 21s., POST FREE. HARNESS' WILL LAST FOR YEARS.

ELECTROPATHIC BELT.

An agreeable, natural, and certain remedy for

Rheumatism, Lumbago, Sciatica, Nervous Affections Sleeplessness, Paralysis, Indigestion, Constipation, Liver and Kidney Disorders, Ladies' Ailments, &c.

SEND POSTAL ORDER OR CHEQUE FOR 21s. FOR AN Electropathic Belt (post free), and you will have an effectual and marvellous remedy always at hand. Harness' Electropathic Belt promotes Health, Strength, and Energy.

Thousands of Testimonials received. Write for copies or call and see the originals.

Pamphlet and advice free of charge.

The Medical Battery Company, Limited,

52, OXFORD ST., LONDON, W.

Corner of Rathbone Place.

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. F. W. PARRY (late GURST & Co.), 29, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, MAR. 23, 1887. [All rights reserved.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."

(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. XI., No. 535. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, MARCH 30, 1887. [PRICE ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
Russian Finances and the Coming Wars	125
Israel Remembering the Lord in Far Countries	126
How Israel's Heathen Empire Rejoices Because of the Empress's Jubilee	127
The Name of Jesus	128
A Three-foot Rule	128
Where is the Sceptre of Judah? (Gen. xlix. 10). By Surgeon-Gen. J. M. Grant, M.D.	129
Progress in Leicester and East Grinstead, Sussex	129
Norton Israel's Identification Association	129
A Lecture on Our Identity at Copthorne	130
Review	130
Correspondence	131

RUSSIAN FINANCES AND THE COMING WARS.

THE Madras Mail some weeks ago published an article on the subject of "The desperate straits of Russia," alluding to the known fact that the value of Russian securities is falling on all the Continental exchanges, and that the Russian rouble, nominally worth 3s. 2d., has fallen as low as 1s. 11d. These securities were once largely held by our own people, but now the estimate is that 200 millions sterling is the value of Russian paper held by the Germans. Herein the latter have been less wary than their British and French neighbours; for both these, foreseeing the coming troubles, have lessened their liabilities by sale—though there is still a large amount held among us of securities which, ere long, according to the Madras Mail, may disappear altogether, by the process of repudiation on the part of Russia. That country, however, never has yet, even in the worst times of the Crimean war, failed to pay the interest due on its bonds. But now it is declared that the Russian Government has for years past been borrowing money to pay the interest due on its past loans, and "has at last overtaxed its credit." No one would now lend to Russia anywhere. Under these circumstances it may be asked, how could Russia think of carrying on war—and how can she venture to meddle in the affairs of the Porte, of Bulgaria, and of other countries, when the risk arises of a war of stupendous dimensions with nations which are not so deeply plunged in debt as she is herself? This is how the Madras Mail answers that question, which is often put to us by those who wonder how a bankrupt State can dare to go to war :—

War, it is often asserted, cannot be carried on without an abundant supply of money, but in truth that remark is rather applicable to Government in time of peace, as is the case at present with Bulgaria, where the exchequer is empty, and taxes cannot be levied.

It is the preservation of peace, not the plunge into hostilities, which is dependent on the regular payment of salaries, pensions, and other kinds of official expenditure, including interest upon borrowed money. Hitherto, the Russian Government has honourably fulfilled all its engagements. Even during the Crimean war there was no repudiation of national obligations. But now the crisis is acute. Millions upon millions of foreign money have been sunk in unproductive railways, dockyards, arsenals, and war-like preparations. An enormous army is maintained, ready to take the field at the shortest notice, while the navy is believed to be formidable. Horse, foot, and artillery are thoroughly organized, and efficiently equipped, and await only the word of command to rush across the frontiers, and descend like a torrent upon Europe and Asia. War would not be conducted after the fashion of civilised nations. The world would witness a repetition of the excesses committed by Goths, Huns, and Vandals. It must not be forgotten that the Muscovite armies would not lack sympathisers. The Slav nationalities would rally round the banners of their race, and the Austrian Empire would, probably, cease to exist. In all probability, the Socialists and Anarchists, especially in France, would seize the opportunity of warring upon property and privilege. Civilisati on might be arrested as much as when the barbarians overran and extinguished the Roman Empire—only that Byzantium would be the first instead of being the last city to fall into their hands. The first Napoleon foresaw the danger of some such cataclysm. He feared that the Cossacks would one day dominate Europe, and his forebodings are far nearer to realization now than they were when he gave expression to them. Perchance out of the darkness a purer light may eventually be evolved, as happened when the Dark Ages were replaced by the Renaissance, which preluded the Reformation. No such aim as that, however, is contemplated by Alexander III., in his morose and wilful moods.

So far the Madras Mail. We do not, of course, see with the Eastern journalist that Constantinople is likely to fall into the hands of Russia; because we know better. Our Identity with Israel informs us the Madras paper is wrong, and that, so far from the Cossack getting into the peerless port, it is destined for the British people, as the promise of Gen. xxii. 17, to the after-seed of Abraham, being God's best blessing to the race. "Thy seed shall possess the Gate of his enemies." We fully concur, however, with our somewhat "blind witness" that the cataclysm is coming, and that in spite of the bankruptcy of Russia. We quite think that in the crash of nations the Austrian Empire will cease to exist, and that Germany will probably follow. These have all to feel the indignation, all the fierce anger—and the devouring fire of the jealousy of Jehovah! (Zeph. iii. 8). They have made Him jealous with their idolatries and worship of false gods—and He will destroy them by the avenging sword, probably of Russia and France combined, as the preliminary step to the restoration of Israel, Judah, and Manasseh to the land of their united inheritance. Lack of money never deterred a resolute, desperate nation from making war, when the means of its national existence were exhausted, and nothing remained but the spoliation of its neighbours to carry on its corporate existence. So, after the French Revolution, when the national armies were in the extremity of want, and the Republican exchequer was empty, Napoleon did not hesitate to hurl them on the neighbours of France, to live on the enemy, and to win back prosperity to the national revenues. Russian impecuniosity will lead the nation to foreign invasion and war in order to replenish its exhausted treasury; and that is the very character God's word gives to the Muscovite under their Scriptural designations of Gog Magog (Ezek. xxxviii. and xxxix). "Sheba and Dedan, and the merchants of Tarshish, with all the young lions thereof," are to say to invading Gog when they overrun 'the mountains of Israel,' Art thou come to take a spoil? hast thou assembled thy company to take a prey? to carry away silver and gold, to take away cattle and goods, to take a great spoil?" (Ezek. xxxviii. 13). "Great spoil" is what Russia wants now, to balance her national accounts—"great spoils in silver, and gold, and cattle, and goods," are her necessity. It is a wonderful fact that the Scripture just quoted states the character of the Russian aggressive proceedings against Israel in great detail, and points to her felonious intentions and her "spoiling" tactics as identifications of the ruined, bankrupt, desperate nation, which none will mistake when the time comes. The Madras Mail gives us the first public notice that Russia is preparing for her rôle, and being impecunious already, and bankrupt as a nation, she will ere long "descend like a torrent upon Europe and Asia." The prophecy speaks of Gog's "coming like a storm, and like a cloud to cover the land," by reason of the "hordes and many peoples with her" (v. 9, R.V). The metaphors are different, but the ideas are precisely the same! The same Power figures in prophecy and in the news of the day as the one which, because it is without pecuniary means available, is ready to rush upon wealthier communities (like Israel), and in a barbarous, uncivilised, immoral, violent fashion, "to descend like a torrent, like a storm, and like a cloud," upon two great continents at once—Europe and Asia—the chief object being the holy places in the land and mountains of Israel, to rob, plunder, spoil, and destroy. The Madras Mail, in its blindness, has hit upon the very result of all these efforts on the part of the Russian Empire, which God's word declares shall come from Gog's invasion of the Holy Land on the borders of both Europe and Asia. "This darkness, perchance" (it says), "will yield to purer light, just as the Renaissance preceded the Reformation, and followed the Dark Ages." So by Ezekiel's prophecy we know Russian Gog's attempt to rob God's people and their Inheritance of their treasures, their gold, and silver, and cattle, and "great spoils" will terminate in Gog's utter collapse and overthrow, and then finally in the recognition of God Almighty's own glory amidst the nations. "And so," says the divine Record, "the House of Israel shall know that I am the Lord Jehovah their God, from that day and forward" (Ezek. xxxix. 22). God's glory and praise will result from all the troubles and trials of that dread time now at hand. But out of them all shall British-Israel, God's people, be saved and delivered, for the Lord God Almighty hath sworn it! And His is all the praise! For He hath redeemed and saved His people by the precious blood of His own well-beloved Son, and nothing now can harm them, because of the Anointing (Isa x. 27).

Digitized by Google

THE Christian World says:—"The life of the Czar of Russia is not to be envied. More than any other monarch on the face of the earth, he must feel that 'uneasy lies the head that wears a crown.' The Autocrat of all the Russias has just escaped one plot, but he must be in daily and hourly fear of renewed attempts upon his life."

ISRAEL REMEMBERING THE LORD IN FAR COUNTRIES.

ZECHARIAH the Prophet, who ministered to Judah after their return from Babylon in B.C. 487, declared by the spirit of prophecy that Joseph's House as distinguished from Judah's would at last be "saved;" "brought again;" "experience the mercy of Jehovah;" be as though He had not cast them off; be sown among the people; and remember God in far countries! (Zech. x. 6, 7, 8, 9). There is no mistake here as to dates, or in regard to the people respecting whom all this was promised and predicted! It was not of the Jews, but of the Ten-Tribed Israelites; not of Judah, but of Joseph, alias Ephraim, the prophet spoke. And the prediction was dated long after the return from Babylon took place, perhaps 50 years after that event. The facts show that it was not respecting that return Zechariah prophesied; for nothing occurred then like the events the prophet described in the verses mentioned above. And, as the Return has not become history yet, we can all see that the fulfilment of verse 10 and part of verse 9 is yet future even now, but that the rest of the context must be under fulfilment to-day to prepare for the restoration of Israel and Judah together, according to this and other prophecies. We ought, then, to see to-day:—

1. Joseph "saved"—i.e., a Christian people; (ver. 9) preparatory to their being "brought again," to place them (Ibid).
2. Joseph must be to-day so blessed and so prosperous that men shall be obliged to declare they are not under curse, and therefore can not be Israel (ver. 9; Hos. i. 10).
3. Joseph must be to-day a "praying" people, whose God is Jehovah; and He must be showing signs that He "hears" them (ver. 9).
4. Joseph must be to-day a "mighty" people, an Imperial race; rejoicing in God as their Lord. Their Colonies (or children) too, must see the Identity of their race with God's people, and be "glad" (ver. 7).
5. Joseph must be "gathering" by God's direction to confederate. He must be "hissing" for them, and they "gathering" in obedience, and men must find that the people so confederating are a wonderfully "increasing" people; increasing in fact as Israel has increased in bygone times (ver. 8).
6. Joseph must be found to-day a scattered, God-sown people in the earth, a godly people there; "remembering God in far countries" (mark the plural!), where their Colonies are situated, living there as their fixed abode, with their children (not as in India or China or Borneo, without them, on account of the heat of those climates); and there "turning again," after a period of alienation and darkness, to the Lord (ver. 9), being converted therefore to Christ in the Colonies.

Here, then, is a picture of Britain and her Colonial Empire, recorded in the Bible 487 years before Christ, or 2,374 years ago, which is accurate and exact to the life; and such that the most sceptical must admit this is the portrait of our own nation, now! What is the condition of our Colonies to-day regarding spiritual privileges? Is it not dark in many parts, and do not these regions, peopled by our own children, want our immediate help? In the outlying portions of Canada and of Australia, and of New Zealand too, our Colonists have none of the privileges we enjoy here. They have no house of God to resort to, no place wherein to serve the Lord. Their lot is not like ours in England, happy England; and no sanctuary is open to them in which they may or can worship the Lord, and do honour to His holy name. No Sabbath day comes round for them, with its sanctifying influences! No minister stands up to tell them of Jesus and His love! No Sabbath-schools summon their children to learn there of the way of salvation! Those portions of our Colonies like Manitoba, the great North-west Territory, the interior of Australia, and parts of New Zealand,

Digitized by Google

Tasmania and the Fijis, are sparsely occupied by our race; and there men have not yet had the means of grace sent to them by their old Mother in the West! To such as these, if they could calculate on the visit of a clergyman or a missionary once a month, once in six months, nay, even once in a year, it would be something. But when it happens, as it often does, that no help comes at all for a full generation, then in truth that part of Israel's Colonial Empire is in bad case. Such was the condition of Newfoundland within the memory of living men, when for a 100 miles of that coast there was not a soul of its population who could read, not one who had ever seen a church, or a minister of religion, or heard of the Gospel of the grace of God! But all that is now changed! and now these regions are wealthy, and have provided for their own spiritual wants. But let us think what these men are doing for our Empire, and then resolve to send them spiritual help such as the Colonial and Continental Church Society sends out to our Colonies. These forlorn ones, without intending it, and without any commission from ourselves, obeying God's leadings, have made and are making our Empire! They bring us our trade, supply our wealth and commerce, and deserve at our hands temporary assistance, during their early and infant struggles, to enable them to enjoy those spiritual and educational advantages we have so largely, and which we ought to impart to them. The British people, of all people of the world, alone enjoy the blessings God granted to Noah and to his seed. "They are fruitful and multiply, and they replenish he earth" (Gen. ix. 1). Surely that other blessing also goes with this, which the Lord gave to Israel when He told them "to go into all the world and to preach the Gospel to every creature" (Mark xvi. 15).

The first claim on the multiplying race is their own flesh and blood in foreign lands. To them first is the Gospel message due, since the prophecy declares that the Lord has "redeemed them, and will cause them to remember Him in far countries." It is ours "to preach the Gospel to every creature" but certainly the claim of our own children, whom God does not forget, must be our first concern, in order that when these our distant children "turn" to the Lord they may help us as from a new centre of operations by taking the Gospel of the grace of God to the distant regions of the heathen, Gentile, non-Israelite, world beyond them. And then shall all the earth unite in praising the Lord, the God of Israel, and the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea" (Hab. ii. 14).

HOW ISRAEL'S HEATHEN EMPIRE REJOICES BECAUSE OF THE EMPRESS'S JUBILEE.

THE following deeply interesting account of the way in which the Queen's Jubilee was celebrated throughout India on Feb. 16, 1887, the date appointed there, appeared in the Times of Feb. 18. It must find a place in the BANNER as proving (1) the magnificence of the Indian Empire; (2) its love for the British Queen and Empress; and (3) the excellence of Israel's rule, which makes 250 millions of the warlike races of India content with her supremacy. The account is as follows:—

THE QUEEN'S JUBILEE.

Calcutta, Feb. 17.

The scene at the race-stand yesterday was very striking. Ninety-two deputations, consisting of about 350 delegates, presented to the Viceroy loyal addresses for transmission to the Queen. The first deputation was that of the Calcutta Corporation. Next came the Asiatic Society and the Bengal Chamber of Commerce. Then followed a host of delegates representing the commercial and landed interests of Lower Bengal, and the municipalities, literary and political societies, the Hindoo, Mahomedan, Armenian, and Jewish communities, &c. The Lieutenant-Governor, in his opening speech, called special attention to the fact that this was the first occasion on which delegates from bodies elected under the local self-government scheme were present in the metropolis.

After all the addresses had been presented, the Viceroy made an eloquent speech, which was loudly applauded. He laid stress on the fact that in a land where official action was generally the prime mover, officialism had for once stood aside and had left the nation face to face with the Empress, to whom from the whole Indian Empire, he said, there had to-day gone up the incense of an honest, trustful devotion. He hoped that the great achievements of the Victorian era did but foreshadow even greater and happier times. While fully approving that natural ambition of the natives for more extensive association with the administration of the country, he hoped it would not divert them from equally imperative duties lying outside the circle of political interests, such as improved agriculture, sanitation, education, industry, and art. He could say from personal knowledge that there was no section of the Queen's subjects whose interests she watched with more affectionate solicitude than those of India. Through the mysterious decrees of Providence the British nation had been called to undertake the government of that mighty Empire, to defend it, to rule it justly, and eventually to form it into a loyal, patriotic, and compact whole. When that result would be achieved was a secret hidden in the future, but meanwhile there was no resolve more fixed in the will of England, no wish dearer to the heart of Her Majesty and to the British people, than to faithfully, firmly, and boldly discharge those difficult and stupendous duties for the benefit of their Indian fellow-subjects and brothers. The speech was greeted with loud and prolonged cheering.

Besides the thanksgiving services mentioned in my telegram of yesterday, special services were held in the Baptist and Greek churches, in the Jewish synagogues, the Brahmin and Parsee temples, and in several English, Scotch, and Catholic churches.

The following Central India chiefs, in honour of the jubilee, have abolished all transit duties through their respective States:—The Maharajah of Dhar, Nawab Jaora; the Rajah of Jhabna, the Rana of Barwani, the Thakur of Piploda, and the Rana of Jobat. Some minor Bombay chiefs have also abolished import duties on trade.

I hear from Lahore that the Punjab, which fifty years ago was still ruled by Rungit Singh, is now celebrating the jubilee with the utmost enthusiasm. The festivities included a durbar at the headquarters of every district, the presentation of addresses of fervent loyalty, the parade of troops, the release of 2,000 prisoners, and the foundation or opening of many public and charitable institutions.

There are also general illuminations and sports, and largesse is distributed to the poor. The occasion is made the signal for every type of social entertainment, from dinners and receptions at Government-houses to the Khuttach sword-dance on the frontier. At the thanksgiving service held in the new cathedral, the Lahore choir sang the National Anthem. The Bishop preached. The parade mustered 2,600 troops, besides volunteers, and outside Fort Northumberland the Fusiliers trooped the colours, the Lieutenant-Governor and most of the civil population being present. Afterwards the Lieutenant-Governor received in durbar the native nobility and gentry, and the representatives of native States. Fourteen khillats, or gifts of honour, of a value of 5,300 rupees, were presented, besides twenty-seven certificates of high character and proved loyalty, including seven to the representatives of native States.

The Governor next laid the foundation stone of the Nowshera Marble Victoria Jubilee Hall. In the evening there was a general illumination, that of the Banshah's Mosque, built by Aurungzebe, being especially fine. The Governor and leading residents drove round the city. A large dinner was given at Government House, all the chief officials being invited. A reception followed, and was attended by a large company of Europeans and natives. Fifteen societies and local bodies, including the Punjab University, presented addresses, and the recitation of a Persian poem concluded the festivities about midnight.

I learn from Delhi that the quarrel between the Mahomedans and Hindoos has been happily composed. Sports were held, followed by fireworks and illuminations. Prayers were offered for the Queen. The restoration of the Jumma Musjid, towards which Nawab Rampore has given 15,000 rupees, has begun. An address was forwarded to the Queen enclosed in a silver model of the kutab minar at Peshawur. The troops were paraded, and the Deputy Commissioner laid the foundation stones of two public buildings. Lalla Burendamall has given a lakh of rupees to the poor-house. Gholam Rassul, a silk merchant, has given 60,000 rupees to provide new gates for the city. The city was illuminated, and was crowded with visitors from the district and from beyond the frontier.

Digitized by Google

At Simla there were fireworks and illuminations, and the hill chiefs lit bonfires on the peaks. At Dera Ghazi Khan the durbar was attended by many Belooch chiefs and notables. A large sum was collected for a free caravanserai to be called Shahiserai. Festivals wers held at the headquarters of various Belooch tribes.

At Umballa the Commissioner laid the memorial stone of a jubilee well. At Bannu eighty prisoners were released, mostly faction fight cases. The measure is highly appreciated by the Pathans. Many independent wazeers came to attend prayers for the Queen in the grand mosque.

The native States in the Punjab are celebrating the occasion with every demonstration of loyalty, such as durbars, parades, thanksgivings, the release of prisoners, feeding the poor, and distributing money. The Rajah of Nabha gives 10,000 rupees to the Imperial Institute, and has a seven days' nautch. The Maharajah of Puttiala builds a public hall, and gives 20,000 rupees to the Punjab Association. The Rajah of Kapurtalla lays the foundation stone of the Victoria Hospital. The Nawab of Bawulpur opens the Empress tramway.

The proceedings at other great cities were equally loyal and hearty. Accounts are published in the same issue of the Times of the rejoicings at Allahabad, at Hyderabad in the Deccan, in the stations in Berar; at Bhownuggur, in the Bombay side; at Kolapore, at Baroda, at Poonah, at Ahmednuggur, at Rangoon, at Ahmedabad, at Bombay, at Surat, and at Dhawar. The Rajah of Bhownuggur held a durbar, when "he expressed his reverence and affection for the Queen as the best Sovereign who had ever wielded a sceptre in this world." At Surat the Brahmins drank to the health of the Empress in tea! The Parsees held a special thanksgiving service. At Bombay there was a State Ball, whereat the Governor entertained 3,000 guests, of whom the Duke and Duchess of Connaught formed part. The illuminations were grand everywhere; and the people, out in millions, were most orderly in behaviour, showing childlike enthusiasm and delight. "From the beginning of the festivities," says the Times correspondent, "yesterday morning, the natives participated in them most heartily. To-night their enjoyment reaches the culminating point; and certainly no better means could have been devised to bring home the meaning of the jubilee to the minds of the most ignorant."

In Hyderabad the Nizam founds a women's hospital, built at his personal cost, besides giving 12,000 rupees to Lady Dufferin's Fund. Special religious services were celebrated by all races, classes, and persons of different religious beliefs. Reviews took place in all large cantonments. Thousands of school-children marched in procession in various localities, "singing the praises of the Empress;" and, in fact, such a day as that India saw on Feb. 16, was one nobody who witnessed the spectacle is ever likely to forget. We thank God for the testimony the whole bears to the justice, purity, and equity of Israel's rule, and for the affection and loyalty with which the multitudes of India regard our Queen and their own Empress, who is also the head of the House of Israel, on David's throne.

THE NAME OF JESUS.

A CORRESPONDENT at Liverpool, Mr. C., has favoured us with a letter, under date of March 8, 1887, in which he tells us that he finds "only one blot in the BANNER OF ISRAEL, and in ourselves as its editor"—a blot friends and foes alike have been also busy in pointing out to him—namely, that "whilst we lay no end of stress on the name of Anglo-Israel, we hardly, if ever, say a word about the Name above every name." Our correspondent has published a leaflet with that title, and his object, we suppose, is that we should accept the leaflet, and give it a wider circulation in the BANNER. He adds, indeed: "If you should be so religiously disposed by the influence and direction of the Holy Spirit, you may possibly give it an entrance into the BANNER. One such article," he considers, "published by us once a month, would go a long way to disarm hostile, but, as he takes it, inevitable criticism." So far Mr. C——. We have read his leaflet, and are bound to say it is a good and excellent paper, suited for "private circulation," which is its object, as the author tells us. It would not be unsuited further for the pages of the BANNER, were its aim the furtherance of our special object, which is distinctly to prove the Israelitish origin of the British people, but not directly to teach men the offices, the glory, the power, and majesty of the God-Man, the Lord Jesus Christ, the King of Israel. These things are good and right, and are not so often absent as Mr. C. declares, from the articles which appear in our humble journal. "The praise of the Lord Jesus, whose is the Name above every name," is the burden of almost every editorial, for when we call for "praise to the Lord," we ask for praise to the only Name to which praise is due! Men complain that our iteration of this call "to praise the Lord Jesus" is wearying, and deprecate its often repetition! We dare not so do; and cannot plead guilty, therefore, to Mr. C's. charge that "we hardly, if ever, say a word about that Name, which is above every name!" To take only one No. of the BANNER (532)—that published on March 9th—we find "all praise demanded for Him." On page 103, in our reply to the new "Clerical Opponent," answered there, the glory, grace, and love of Christ to sinners is partly our theme; and the Great Sacrifice on Calvary is pointed out as the only remedy for universal man, the sinner. We hold that the BANNER, properly considered, has for its entire theme the praise of the "one Name, which is above every name," even the Name of Jesus. But we do not desire to disassociate from that Name the glory He has given to His people, the House of Joseph. The two go together. His, the praise of the King, the Prophet, the Priest, the Elder Brother, the Husband, the Friend, the Saviour and Redeemer of His people. Theirs, that of the subjects—the Kingdom—the Bride—the saved and the chosen, redeemed ones of the gracious Lord, Jehovah-Jesus. We care not to separate the two; and we decline, at Mr. C's. invitation, to do so. We wish his effort every blessing; but even at the risk of alienating him, and those who have intimated their dissatisfaction to him, we must proceed on the path we have chosen for ourselves. But that path honors the name of Israel's beloved King as the possessor of the Name which is in truth above every name, whether in heaven or in earth, or under the earth. And God forbid that we should ever neglect to do so; nay, woe is unto us if we forget this our bounden duty.

A THREE-FOOT RULE.

When I was bound apprentice, and learned to use my hands,
Folks never talked of measures that came from foreign lands;
Now I'm a British workman, too old to go to school;
So whether the chisel or the file I hold, I'll stick to my three-foot rule.

Some talk of milimétres, and some of kilogrammes,
And some of décilitres to measure beer and drams;
But I'm a British workman, too old to go to school;
So by pounds I'll eat, and by quarts I'll drink, and I'll work my three-foot rule.

A party of astronomers went measuring of the earth,
And forty million métres they took to be its girth;
Five hundred million inches, though, go through from pole to pole;
So let's stick to inches, feet, and yards, and the good old three-foot rule.

The great Egyptian pyramid 's a thousand yards about;
And when the masons finished it they raised a joyful shout;
The chap that planned that building, I'm bound he was no fool;
And now 'tis proved beyond a doubt he used a three-foot rule.

Digitized by Google

WHERE IS THE SCEPTRE OF JUDAH (GEN. XLIX. 10)?

By SURGEON-GENERAL J. M. GRANT, M.D.

AGAINST the commonly-received but altogether untenable proposition that the Sceptre of Judah remained with the Jews until Christ came, because they had a tribal government up to that time; and that then He assumed it, we have long maintained that it must have been transferred by some means to the other House of Israel;—and it is satisfactory to find our view confirmed by Scripture. It has not occurred to me until now, and as far as I know it has not occurred to others, that the 20th and 34th chapters of Ezekiel give the most clear and unqualified support to our view. In the former of these chapters, from the 32nd to the 37th verse, we find that Israel was to be gathered out of the nations in a state of heathenism into "the wilderness" of the people, and converted to Christianity there. In the 34th chapter, from the 22nd to the 30th verse, we find that David is to be a prince among them, when, like a flock of sheep, they dwell safely in the wilderness, and sleep in the woods—that is, when, as a people, they have been established in the place of safety promised in 2 Sam. vii. 10, and have spread abroad from it into other lands; and the prophet seems to have anticipated and guarded against the "spiritualising" interpretations of the present day by declaring that the Lord will be their God, while David will be a prince "among them," which must mean exercising a personal and hereditary government, if it means anything at all. The next event predicted, verses 28 and 29, is the raising up to them a plant of renown, which I think must mean Christ, after which they are to know that the Lord their God is with them; and that they are His people; a knowledge which we as a nation possess and profess even now, and will profess more rationally when we know that we are His people, because we are Israel.

I commend these two chapters of Ezekiel to the careful study of your readers. To my mind they prove conclusively that when the Jewish polity was uprooted in Palestine, the Sceptre was transferred to the other House of Israel in another part of the world.

PROGRESS IN LEICESTER AND EAST GRINSTEAD, SUSSEX.

WE are glad to report indications of progress in two places so far apart as Leicester and East Grinstead. In Leicester the "Aylestone Park Magazine" is published monthly as the advertising medium of an artist photographer named S. W. Broadhead. This gentleman offered to Mr. H. Beckwith, of Leicester, a couple of pages monthly for a series of short articles. Mr. Beckwith, who is a believer in Our Identity, thought this too good an opportunity for ventilating our subject to be refused, especially as 1,000 copies of the Magazine are gratuitously distributed from house to house in Leicester every month. Mr. Beckwith, accordingly, has written and issued five chapters of what will be an interesting Identity work, when it has come to its conclusion. His first chapter appeared in October, 1886, the next in December, followed up by papers in January, February, and March, of 1887.

His first chapter was an introduction; chapter ii. went into the subject of the promises; the 3rd related to the Disruption; and the 4th to the Captivity of Israel and its consequences. The fifth paper, just published, points out what the destined Identifications of Israel of the Ten Tribes were to be, according to the Scriptures. Mr. Beckwith writes to us to say that already, to his own knowledge, "much interest has been awakened in many cases, and that he hopes to follow this up by a lecture or two in the locality shortly." We hope these lectures may attract the attention of the Rev. A. A. Isaacs, of Christ Church, Leicester, and that he may be present at them. Mr. Beckwith thinks he perceives already a "growing sentiment in favour of our glorious truth," which he feels sure must, ere long, become generally known and acknowledged. In East Grinstead, in Sussex, a paper entitled The Southern Free Press and East Grinstead Times, is published, enjoying, we are told, a good circulation. One of the staff of that journal has obtained the editor's permission to occupy a column or so now and then in elucidating the subject of our nation's Identity with the lost Ten Tribes. Our friend, accordingly, has published four papers, which he has kindly sent to us for perusal. The subject is the "Lost Ten Tribes," and the matter has been treated in a popular and pleasing way, which is sure to interest. The first paper pointed to the distinction between the Jews and the Israelites as based on the facial differences; the second to the special characteristics of the Ten Tribes, or House of Ephraim. The next told of the history of the House of Judah, her captivity and condition up to the time of the Lord, with some mention of the tribe of Benjamin. These papers are signed "Scoti," and promise to do as much good in Sussex as Mr. Beckwith's are calculated to effect in Leicester. We notice these efforts, because they show what valuable opportunities God throws in the way of those able and willing to publish our great truths, and how necessary it is to embrace every one of such that we may be favoured with. Such publication of the truth is sure to be blessed from on High, as has clearly been the case in both the instances we report. The writer of the Sussex letters has been so encouraged by his success that he contemplates giving some lectures in the town, and he tells us that his Bible-class has become intensely interested in the subject of Our Identity. All these are encouraging signs, and should incite our readers in all parts to go and do likewise—copying Mr. Beckwith's and "Scoti's" examples—and looking for God's blessing on their efforts to make known one of the greatest and most glorious truths of modern times.

NORTON ISRAEL'S IDENTIFICATION ASSOCIATION.

THE Jubilee meeting in connection with this association was held on Wednesday evening, March 9th, in Mr. Cammel's schoolroom, Norton Woodseats. About 70 persons sat down to tea, and the number was considerably increased for the after meeting. The president, Mr. E. Lister, was in the chair. A number of select hymns were sung at intervals, in which all heartily joined, including a specially written hymn for the occasion by Hecla. The first address was given by Mr. John Bramall, on "The Light of the World, and the Glory of Israel." Then the chairman took in hand the question, "Is not Britain the Tarshish of Scripture?" A recitation entitled, "The Queen's Jubilee," was then given by Miss E. Wrigglesworth. Next followed a paper on "The Sifting and Consolidation of Israel," by Mr. W. S. Cavill. Mr. E. Jones then read Mrs. Roger's paper on "The Victorian Jubilee," and the proceedings terminated with the singing of the National Anthem.

SOAP AS A CIVILISER IN THE EAST.—The introduction of soap, it is said, is doing much to civilise the people of the Holy Land. A large soap factory has been established on the site of the ancient Shechem, and the people are beginning to use it on their persons instead of trying to eat it as they did at first. Along with the introduction of soap other reforms are going on. Bethlehem has been rebuilt, and the streets are lighted with gas. Cesaræa is having a building boom. Nazareth is becoming the head-quarters of big olive oil speculators. Corner lots in Joppa are going up with a rush, and real estate in Mount Carmel is largely held by speculators for an advance. All around Shechem there is a lively demand for good soap fat, and the sleepy inhabitants of Ramoth Gilead think of building a glue factory. Jerusalem is waking up also. It has a street cleansing bureau, big clocks on its public buildings, and its suburbs are being built up rapidly. Even in the Vale of Gehenna the price of land has gone up. The ladies of Jerusalem take all the Parisian fashion journals, and know all about the latest style of hair-dressing.

Digitized by Google

A LECTURE ON OUR IDENTITY AT COPTHORNE.

For some time past a good many of the inhabitants of Copthorne have been deeply interested in the above subject, and made many diligent inquiries of the sacred records for the purpose of gaining a clear light. That light has taken a firm hold. In consequence of this, Mr. G. Vince, of Ashurst-wood, delivered on Tuesday evening, at the Copthorne Chapel (which was well filled), a very able and critical lecture on the Ten Tribes of Israel. He showed that the British nation and her multitudinous colonies were one and the same family—viz., the Ten Tribes—basing his teaching upon the records of the Scripture, as well as on secular history and geography. The chair was taken by Mr. W. McNaughton, of Forest-row, who opened the meeting with a brief introduction in support of the subject. At the close he pointed out his connection with and great interest in the matter. Questions and discussions were cordially invited, but some of the audience thought and felt that the lecture was too conclusive, and proved by too reliable evidences, to admit of question or doubts. The lecture was highly appreciated.

Recently (Dec. 9) at Ashurst-wood, the chairman of the above meeting delivered a lecture upon the subject from the secular, historical points of view, which was much appreciated by many, and resulted in the formation of a weekly Bible-class dealing with the matter, and that is still going on. Mr. McNaughton was the first to introduce the Identity at that place, with the result that a very earnest and close inquiry into the Scriptures has begun. Hence the origin of the lecture so successfully given by Mr. Vince at Copthorne, who has now become an ardent advocate of and convert to the truth of Our Identity.

Review.

How do I know that the Sabbath was made for Man? By the Author of "How do I know that the Bible is true?" &c. 10th thousand. Price ½d. James Nisbet & Co., Berners-street; The Religious Book Society, 28, Paternoster-row.

This little tractate, like those of the author, previously published, has an excellent object, and the proceeds or profits are devoted in this instance to aid the operations of the Church Missionary Society. We have the heartiest sympathy with the author in the aim he has in view, and desire all men to see that the Lord's Sabbaths are golden opportunities for good to the whole "world lying in the wicked one." "The Sabbath was made for man, and not man for the Sabbath," as the Lord declared in Mark ii. 27, and "He is Lord even of the Sabbath-day" (Matt. xii. 6). Our author's view, however, is that the Sabbath as we have it was an institution given for his good to Adam, and through him to the whole human race, as a law and a privilege, binding upon all mankind. It was a good and perfect gift to our first parents "freely to enjoy," and "enforced upon them that they might rest from their labours and employments on the seventh day."

We confess we do not see where in the sacred record the author finds this view confirmed? That "God rested from His work on the seventh day," and that He therefore blessed the seventh day and sanctified it, is clear (not from Gen. i. 31, as our author states on p. 6, but) from Gen. ii. 2, 3. This being undeniable and incontrovertible, what proof is there that the Lord enforced the observance of that day upon Adam and Eve? on their righteous posterity? on Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob? or on the Twelve Tribes of Israel, till the eve of the giving of the law on Sinai, as recorded in Exod. xvi. 22—30, after they had crossed the Red Sea, and by the Exodus had been delivered from the cruel bondage of Egypt? We confess we see none; and we doubt the fact as stated by our author. We think that there is strong probability that the Lord made known His statutes and His judgments, including His will regarding the due observance of the Sabbath-day to the patriarchs and Adam and his posterity, as instituted in Eden in memory of the creation. Yet we believe there was no "enforcement" of the obligation, but only the privilege of the blessing, given to these early saints. At any rate the Scripture is entirely silent on the subject; and we doubt the policy of so roundly stating conclusions for which there is really no scriptural authority whatsoever. Not a word is there to show that Adam, or Noah, or Abraham, or Isaac, or Jacob had a Sabbath law delivered to them, such as we find recorded in Exod. xx. 8—11. In Egypt we have reason to believe that the idolatrous Israelites knew nothing at all of it. For in Ezek. xx. 5—20 God's blessings to the chosen race while in Egypt are mentioned, but the Sabbaths are not included. Ver. 12 tells us the Sabbaths were enjoined on them as God's sign between Him and them, just after they left Egypt, and while they were in the wilderness. If that be the case as to the Twelve Tribes, surely there is not a scintilla of evidence to show that Jacob, Isaac, Abraham, Terah, Noah, or Adam had this gift bestowed upon them as a sign or seal of God's approval; though as a privilege it is quite possible, and even probable, that the chosen ones or the children of God in the selected line might, till the sojourn in Egypt, have had some knowledge of the significance of the day, and of God's purposes therein. We see no reason, therefore, to endorse our author's view that the Sabbath of Eden being enforced upon Adam, was therefore made binding upon us all, meaning thereby "the whole family of man." The Sabbath of Exod. xvi. was God's good gift to Israel of the Twelve Tribes, a gift whereby, as declared in Exod. xxxi. 13, 17, and Ezek. xx. 12, 20, they might know Him as Jehovah their God, who by that gift sanctified them or set them apart for Himself, in separation from all the other races of the earth. The Sabbath then, so far from being obligatory on all mankind, was instituted at Sinai as the special mark of the separation of Israel from the outside world, and is a gift now from God in Christ by the hands of Israel, to all nations, families, and kindreds of the earth, that accepting it, the latter may become God's people too, Israelites by faith, Christ's own, Abraham's seed, heirs according to the promise, the children of the living God, and, by adoption, Israelites indeed (Ezek. xlvii. 22, 23; Gal. iii. 7, 26, vi. 16—29; Hosea i. 10).

The author of the pamphlet evidently believes the British to be non-Israelite Gentiles, and therefore he is anxious to propose an argument whereby the Sabbath (a blessing tied up to Israel only, and to all who become Israelites by faith) may be held obligatory on Gentiles like them also, by the device he assumes—namely, that Adam and the patriarchs had the Edenic Sabbaths enforced on them, and that the whole race of man, therefore, irrespective of Israel, were under the obligation faithfully to observe it. No doubt the law of the Sabbath was one of God's fundamental laws just as much as the laws against theft, false-witness, covetousness, or the law which demanded the worship of the Lord God who brought Israel out of Egyptian bondage. But these laws codified and written were only given to Israel at Sinai, and the nations not present and represented there are the Gentiles without law, who are judged by another standard altogether than Israel's—namely, they are a law to themselves, as Rom. ii. 14, 15 shows.

But the chief argument remains which our author uses, "The Sabbath was made for man, not man for the Sabbath;" therefore it was enforced on Adam, and is applicable through him to all mankind. Surely our Lord's words in Mark ii. 27 and Matt. xii. 6 will not bear the weight of this reasoning? In those cases the Lord rebuked the Pharisees for their rigid observance of the letter, but neglect of the spirit of the Sabbath law. His words had no reference to the institution of the Sabbath in Eden, or to its application to all mankind. Even if they could be so construed, the holy day might be made for man in general, but its benefits need not therefore have been granted to the human race as a whole till the Lord came to give this and other gifts to men. As a fact we know the knowledge of God soon died out, and the deluge was the consequence. In Egypt, too, Israel (God's chosen) had no Sabbaths, for they were idolaters then. The Sabbath is Israel's, and by Israel, and through their instrumentality, it will yet, we believe, become Christ's gift to the whole world.

The Ancient Britons.—At a meeting yesterday of the Royal Society of Literature, in their rooms in Delahay Street, Sir Patrick Colquhoun, President, in the chair, a paper was read by Mr. R. B. Holt on "The Culture of the Ancient Britons." The reader maintained that the language, laws, and literature of the ancient Britons proved that they must have attained a relatively high culture before their civilisation was destroyed by barbarous invaders. Upon the conclusion of the paper, the President expressed his disbelief in the authenticity of many of our sources of information respecting ancient British history. After some discussion, Mr. E. Gilbert Highton, the secretary, held that the general knowledge of the Druids was fully confirmed by the evidence of classical writers, who testified to their attainments in medicine, botany, astronomy, and even anatomy; but that the stains of human sacrifice undoubtedly clung to their religion, and that they kept the people in a state of servile superstition.—Standard, January 27th, 1887.

Digitized by Google

Correspondence.

DAWLEY CIRCUIT.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR PHILO-ISRAEL,—I very thankfully acknowledge the following:—S. Newsome, 5s.; Mr. Archer, 2s. 6d.; G. K., 2s.; Miss S. B. Dauberry, £2; "A Daughter of Israel and a Salopian," 5s.; "An Anglo-Israelite," 5s.; Mr. Archer, 2s.; Mr. S. Newsome, 3s.; Miss S. B. Dauberry, £5 10s. Miss B. Cooke, 2s.; "Anonymous," 4s.; Miss S. S., Tun. Wells, £1; K. E., 5s.

I rejoice that the distress is now much less than in the severe weather, as some men have obtained open-air work, and others have removed. Still, the public works are closed, and five hundred families are receiving from 1s. to 3s. 6d. per family weekly as food relief. Many of these in my own congregations are evidently in a half-starving condition. To these first I minister relief, and then to the outsiders. This week I openly asked my congregation, "Do you know of any distress overlooked?" An aged man spoke up saying, "Me and my wife has nothing to eat but potatoes, and when I last got money for a loaf of bread I walked nearly two miles each way to get it a halfpenny cheaper." And several members of the Church said, "We know that is true." May we all hear this said to us, "I was an hungered and ye gave Me meat. . . . Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these My brethren, ye have done it unto Me."

Yours in the trials and glory of Israel,

HENRY ROE.

Rock-villa, Dawley, Salop, Feb. 18th, 1887.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—I have been asked, "Why does BANNER fall flat and apparently produce so little result?" For thirty years our blessed Lord was an unknown Gælic artizan, and for the other three years "He was despised and rejected among men." If we really are at the extreme end of the "times of the Gentiles;" if great dangers are at hand in the political state of Europe and Asia; if Christianity in all lands, except among the literal descendants of Abraham, where alone faith nationally remains, is dying out, and if the nations are becoming anti-Christian (in spite of the residuum of the faithful witnesses for Christ in all lands), must we not regard the marvellous fact of the discovery of the Identity of Israel, and the necessary accomplishment of those prophecies of restoration to "the land," which are to accompany the identification, as somewhat like a further development of this dispensation; or rather a renewing, at its near end, of Christianity—in fact, "the latter rain"—of the Spirit. But the Spirit works unseen, quietly, noiselessly, without observation, until the mass is leavened, and then we may expect a sudden and national burst of identification, probably occurring during some dire time of "travail" for our race, when a "nation shall be born in a day."

We have set ourselves against all the traditions of the schools; university men, and graduates in all sciences, would think it infra dig. to learn of us (except a few Gamaliels); and yet, when the great fact does burst upon the nation, all the world of M.A.'s and "doctors of the Law" will triumphantly turn round and say, we told you so—WE saw it all along.

The night watchman gives the first alarm, the sentinel at his post first notices and reports the enemy's approach; but the superior officers get the credit for the vigilance in the official reports.

Let us be thankful that we are permitted to see a little ahead, and to be the humble instruments in calling attention to the great events of the future; may we be permitted to be of some use; the reward will not be here. W. E.

December, 1886.

NOTE BY THE EDITOR.—No doubt Mr. W E. is right. The progress of our glorious truth is not greatly apparent, but it is steady, gradual, and universal. The national cry for "Federation" is really a sign of progress, as the study of Our Identity educates people to grasp the bare idea of a great world power for our race. In any great development of nations the Hebrew element must be taken into account. One Tribe we know (the Jews) holds the purse-strings of Europe. The Ten Tribes must be in possession of the birthright, and therefore of the dominion of the world, to prepare for its evangelisation and its true conversion to Christ (Gen. xlix. 22—26; Deut. xxxiii. 13—17).

SIR ARTHUR COTTON ON THE GATES.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

MY DEAR PHILO-ISRAEL,—I quite agree with you as to the certainty of God's great purposes by the hands of England, and, at the same time, as to the necessity for the most energetic efforts on England's part to prepare in every way, and especially by fortifying the "coaling depôts." How remarkable it is that the possession of those Gates is now becoming the very essential foundation of power in the world in a way far beyond, and quite unthought of by those who hoisted the British flag on them, inasmuch as the holders of these fuel depôts must necessarily command the world. What a striking sample of absolute certainty of security, and the most energetic efforts is the account of Paul's shipwreck! If ever a man had an excuse for sitting still in the fore-deck and saying, "Don't trouble yourselves; it's all right," certainly he had. But what did he do? Prisoner as he was, he ran aft, called upon the officer commanding the guard to throw over the authority of the captain of the ship, take possession of the boat by force, and cut it adrift, saying unless the sailors remained on board they couldn't be saved. A grand lesson that the servants of God must understand their circumstances, and take the measures suited to them, however extraordinary they may both be. What an encouragement to missionaries, as well as rulers, to use all the means that the occasion calls for, however out of the ordinary routine they may be. We had an exceedingly able lecture here by Mr. Douglas, on our "Ephraim rights and duties." He is an exceedingly able man, and I don't think I ever heard a more admirable lecture.

Yours, &c.,

ARTHUR COTTON.

Woodcot, Dorking, Surrey, Feb. 25th.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

MY DEAR PHILO-ISRAEL,—The subjoined extract from a very interesting little work is in its main purport in such agreement with your not unfrequent expressions in the BANNER, that I transcribe it for you—if of any use. There is much in the book which throws light on French inability to colonise. The author (apparently a former citizen of America) writes of himself as now a neutralised Australian; but I cannot distinctly trace any acquaintance with the Anglo-Israel subject; though here and there he seems to allude to it.

"A NOBLE ANTICIPATION.

"Mr. Julian Thomas, the talented and enterprising author of several works on the South Sea Islands, concludes his book on 'Cannibals and Convicts' in the following words:—

"'For myself I believe, first in Australian Federation, the political unity of the colonies, which will make us more powerful for defence and offence. Looking into the far future I see the time, not of which the poet wrote—

"'When the war-drums throbbed no longer,
And the battle-flags were furled,
In the Parliament of men—
The Federation of the world'— but of a grand Federation of the whole English-speaking race, when cannibals and convicts will have disappeared from the South Seas; when our dear old motherland, with her eldest-born the United States of America and the Dominions of Canada, and Australia, peopled by millions, all bone of our bone and flesh of our flesh, shall be joined together heart in heart and hand in hand, and shall be so mighty in war that they can impose peace upon the nations of the world.'"

T. W. B.

Clapham, Feb. 24.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—While spending an hour or two in the town of Newcastle-under-Lyme, I noticed in several shop windows a Police Notice to the following effect, "That proceedings would be taken against persons illegally trading on Sundays." This proves undoubtedly that a national Sabbath exists, and that there is a law which secures to us its due observance. It would be to Britain's credit if every town would do likewise.—Yours, &c.,

CREWE.

THE Right Rev. Bishop Titcomb's new work entitled, "A Message to the Church from the Nineteenth Century" will be published on Wednesday, March 30. The price is 3s.

Digitized by Google

NOTICES.

All communications intended for the Editor, to be addressed: — "Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Clifton, Bristol.

SUBSCRIPTIONS £ s. d.

Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) postfree - 0 7 6
Two Copies (including Double Numbers) - - 0 13 6
Three Copies " " " " - 1 0 4
Four Copies " " " " - 1 5 6
Six Copies " " " " - 1 16 4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-grand, London, to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C., or F. W. PARRY & Co., 29, Paternoster-row, London.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

Contents Bills and Show Cards may be obtained on application to the Publishers.

Advertisements should be sent to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

Prepaid Advertisements are inserted at the rate of 30 words for 1s. 4d.

A COMMENDABLE OBJECT.

THE ROYAL NAVAL PROTESTANT (CHRISTIAN) REFORMATION SOCIETY circulates on Her Majesty's Ships Christian Reading, with a desire to promote Godly living and Christian truth, to preserve and unite Protestant Bluejackets from Romanism. Any Christian Bluejacket will receive sound Reading whose address is forwarded to the Hon. Sec., on whatever station serving. Funds are urgently needed; also free grants of Christian, Temperance, Anglo-Israel, Anti-Infidel Tracts, etc.

WALTER BROOKS, Hon. Sec.
Office: PROTESTANT BUILDINGS, PORTSMOUTH.

PUBLISHED BY ROBT. BANKS & SON,
RACQUET COURT, FLEET STREET, E.C.

WORKS BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

The Geography of the Gates. With Map and six full page, and one double-page, Illustrations, printed on plate paper. 208 pages, in handsome cloth, gilt Price 3s. 6d., post free 3s. 10d.

An Elementary Digest or Sketch of the Chief Facts and Teachings of the Great Pyramid of Egypt. Adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific 56 pages, Illustrated with Diagrams, price 4d., post free 5d. 10th Thousand.

Our Identity with the House of Israel. Price 4d. Reprinted from "Clifton Chronicle Letters"

A Resume of the Scriptural Argument, proving the Identity of the British Race with the Lost Ten Tribes. Price 1d.; 6s. per 100. New edition now ready.

The History of the House of Israel; How they were Lost, and How they were Found, Told for the Children. Price 6d., cloth 1s.; post free 7d. and 1s. 1d. Fourth Edition. Eleventh thousand.

Philo-Israel's Leaflets. Four pages Crown 8vo. Price 1s. 6d. per 100, postage 2d. No. 1.—"The Identity of the British with Lost Israel." 2.—"The Glory of God.' 3.—An Address to British Seamen. 4.—An Address to British Soldiers. No. 5.—The Communion of the Body and Blood of Our Lord Jesus Christ Viewed in the Light of Our Identity. 6.—The Bible and the Jew. 7.—The Jewish People. 8.—Lo-Ammi; or, the Gentilisation of Ten-Tribed Israel. 9.—The Atonement. 10.—Is Our Identity Evangelical, or Non-Evangelical in its Tendency? No. 11.—Cui Bono? No. 12.—The "Thoughts" of God Towards Israel, Judah, and the Gentile Nations. 13.—The Teutonic Theory—Is It True? 14.—An Address to the Police Force of Great Britain. 15.—An Address to Israel's Missionaries and Their Supporters. 16.—The One Seed, Christ. 17.—An Address to Israel's Electors. Price 1s. 6d. per 100.

Robert Banks and Son, Printers, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

PREVIOUS TO ALTERATIONS.
GENUINE SALE
OF
FIRST-CLASS BOOTS AND SHOES
AT
WALTER KEAST'S
Family Boot and Shoe Warehouse,
102, KENNINGTON PARK RD., LONDON, S.E.

WALTER KEAST will, on receipt of P.O. for 5s., send by Parcels Post a pair of Ladies' High-leg Balmoral, Stylish Walking Boots, suitable for Spring or Summer wear. These goods are made of French Lasting, with Morocco Vamps, and give universal satisfaction. Glazed Kid Walking Shoes, entirely new this season. These Shoes are finished in first-class style, lined with Black Leather, and are wonderfully cheap. Sample pair on receipt of 4s. 9d. W. K. is also forwarding his French Lasting Shoes, Military Heels, suitable for walking, garden, or house wear. Sample pair on receipt of 3s. 3d.

102, KENNINGTON PARK RD., LONDON, S.E.

Published by ROBERT BANKS & SON,
RACQUET COURT, FLEET STREET, E.C.

Postal Orders may be obtained at any Post Office in the United Kingdom for the following amounts: 1s., 1s. 6d., ½d. each; 2s., 2s. 6d., 3s., 3s. 6d., 4s., 4s. 6d., 5s., 7s. 6d., 10s., 10s. 6d., 1d. each; 15s., 20s., 1½d. each. They should be "crossed" City Bank, Ludgate Hill, E.C. Stamps received.

THE ANGLO-ISRAEL POST-BAG; or, How Arthur Came to See It. By the Right Rev. BISHOP TITCOMB. Price 2s. 6d. in cloth gilt; paper cover, 1s. 6d., by post 1d. extra.

THE ISRAELITES FOUND IN THE ANGLO-SAXONS. The Ten Tribes supposed to have been Lost, traced from the land of their captivity to their occupation of the Isles of the Sea. By WILLIAM CARPENTER. Price 2s. 6d., by post 2s. 8d.

THE ANSWER TO THE EASTERN QUESTION, With Some Facts Concerning the Identity of the British With Israel. By the Author of "The New Old Story," enlarged. Price 3d.; for distribution, 50 copies, 11s., post free.

CARDINAL PROOFS THAT THE BRITISH Are the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel—the Abrahamic Covenant. By F. W. PHILLIPS. With two chapters by PHILO-ISRAEL. Price 6d., post free 7d.

THE NEW OLD STORY. By "A E I." Price 6d., post free; in cloth, 1s., post free.

THE BIBLE ATLAS. To Illustrate the Old and New Testaments. Price 1s.; post free 1s. 1d.

ANGLO-ISRAEL TRACTS. 8 pp. Royal 16mo., on toned paper. Adapted to enclose in letters, and for general distribution. No. 1—12. Half-penny each, 12 copies post free, 6d. Specimen packet for 6 stamps.

JEHOVAH TRIUMPHANT. The New and Complete Theology and Electric Light of the Bible, containing the History of British-Israel, Compiled from the Sacred Scriptures. Cloth gilt, price 10s. 6d., post free for Postal Order or Cheque.

THE GEOGRAPHY OF THE GATES. By PHILO-ISRAEL. With Map, and six full page, and one double-page, Illustrations, printed on plate paper. 208 pages, in handsome cloth, gilt. Price 3s. 6d.; post free.

THE WORD: THE WORLD: THE BRANCH. By J. LEYLAND FIELDEN, Esq. Price 12s., post free.

EPHRAIM-ENGLAND. The Nineteenth Century Revelation of the Fruits of History. By Rev. R. DOUGLAS, Vicar of Kidsgrove. Cloth gilt, lettered, 4s., gilt edges 5s., free by post.

FIFTY REASONS WHY THE ANGLO-SAXONS ARE ISRAELITES of the Lost Tribes of the House of Israel. By Rev. W. H. POOLE, D.D. Price 6d., post free 7d.

BIBLE LESSONS AND REFLECTIONS. By the late ROBERT GAIRDNER, of Kilmarnock, N.B. Price 2s. 6d., by post 2s. 9d.; cheap edition, limp cloth, 1s., by post, 1s. 2d.

PRESENT-DAY PROBLEMS, and How Anglo-Israel Truth Explains and Solves Them. By V. M. COX. 3d., by post 4 stamps.

LIGHT SHED BY THE GREAT PYRAMID OF EGYPT on the Last Days of this Dispensation, from A.D. 1814 to A.D. 1922. By JAMES KEITH. Price 4d., by post 5 stamps.

NEW TESTAMENT TRUTH on the Anglo-Israel Controversy. By J. G. TAYLOR. Price 3d., by post 4 stamps.

A NEW LIGHT. An Elementary Pamphlet for General Distribution. By A E I. Price 2d., by post 2½d. in stamps.

EPHRAIM-ISRAEL, the Pivot Nation of Prophecy and History. By V. M. COX. Price 1d., one dozen free for 1s.

AMMI; OR, THE CHOSEN PEOPLE. By MISS BIRD. Tracing the Descent of the British People from Abraham, the "friend of God," and showing that true science, history, philology, and ethnology, are on the side of the Identity of the Anglo-Saxon Race with the Ten Lost Tribes. Price 2d., post free 2½d.; 12s. 6d. per 100 for distribution.

IS NOT QUEEN VICTORIA the Royal Seed to King David's Throne, and Are Not Her Subjects, the British People, the Ten Lost Tribes? By W. HOPTON. Price 2d.; 12s. 6d. per 100.

A Complete Catalogue Free on Application.

BANNER OF ISRAEL
(VOL. X.)

A most suitable present to a Town Hall or Local Library. Sure to prove of great interest and be the means of introducing Our Identity to the notice of a numerous class of intelligent readers and students. Should be in every Bible-student's Library.

May be ordered of any bookseller, or sent direct from the Publishers on receipt of remittance for 8/-.

R. BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.
F. W. PARRY & Co., 29, Paternoster-row.

ISRAEL IN THE NEW TESTAMENT
OR,
Proofs of the National Conversion of the Ten Tribes to Christianity.
By SURGEON-GENERAL J. M. GRANT, M.D.
Price 4d., post free, 4½d.; 12 Copies, post free, 4s.
London: R. Banks and Son, Racquet Court, Fleet St., and by order of all Booksellers.

EDWARD B. SPENCE,
Nurseryman, Seedsman & Florist
18, VICTORIA RD., DARLINGTON,
(ESTABLISHED 1796),
Will be glad to send to the Readers of The Banner of Israel, Seeds, Plants, and Fruit Trees.
CATALOGUE FREE ON APPLICATION.

THE TEETH, THE TEETH, THOSE PRECIOUS TEETH!
Save, Purify, Beautify.
GEORGE & WELCH'S
CARBOLINE
1/6 (TOOTH PASTE). 2/6 per Pot
Is the Best Known
Cleanser, Preserver, and Deodoriser.
Dental Guide says:—"No Tooth application equals the Carbolics."
Proprietors: GEORGE & WELCH, Worcester.
Through Chemists, or Post Free from Makers.

LUNG OWBRIDGE'S TONIC
LUNG LUNG TONIC, TONIC
LUNG THE MIGHTY HEALER. TONIC
LUNG Save Your Lives by Taking TONIC
LUNG OWBRIDGE'S LUNG TONIC. TONIC
LUNG It has a power over diseases hitherto TONIC
LUNG unknown in Medicine. TONIC
LUNG Are you at all Weak-chested or inclined TONIC
LUNG to be Consumptive, with just a touch of TONIC
LUNG Cough now and then? TONIC
LUNG "Try this Wonderful Medicine." The TONIC
LUNG Cough and Weakness will disappear as TONIC
LUNG if by magic, and you will feel a strength TONIC
LUNG and power you never had before. TONIC
LUNG HAVE YOU A COUGH? TONIC
LUNG A DOSE WILL RELIEVE IT. TONIC
LUNG HAVE YOU A COLD? TONIC
LUNG A DOSE AT BEDTIME WILL TONIC
LUNG REMOVE IT. TONIC
LUNG Bronchitis & Asthma it relieves instantly TONIC
LUNG The Spasms of Coughing so dreadful in TONIC
LUNG Whooping Cough become less with each dose TONIC
LUNG of the medicine. — TONIC
LUNG Prepared by W. T. OWBRIDGE, Chemist, Hull TONIC
LUNG Sold in Bottles 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d. & TONIC
LUNG 11s. by all Chemists and Patent Medicine TONIC
LUNG Vendors. Wholesale all London and TONIC
LUNG Provincial Houses. TONIC

A BOON TO SUFFERERS!!
HARNESS' ELECTROPATHIC BELT CURES Gout, Rheumatism, Lumbago, Sciatica, Epilepsy, Indigestion, Constipation, Liver and Kidney Complaints, Ladies' Ailments, Nervousness, Neuralgia, General and Local Debility, etc.
HARNESS' ELECTROPATHIC BELT
NEVER FAILS to promote HEALTH, STRENGTH, AND VITAL ENERGY; therefore it will pay you to procure one without delay.
NERVOUSNESS CURED.
Every man and woman suffering from any disorder of the Nerves, Stomach, Liver, or Kidneys, should at once stop physicing, and send a P.O.O. or cheque for 21s., for HARNESS' ELECTROPATHIC BELT (post free) and obtain immediate relief. Pamphlet and Book of Testimonials post free. THE MEDICAL BATTERY CO. (LTD.),
52, OXFORD STREET, London, W.
(CORNER OF RATHBONE PLACE.)

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. F. W. PARRY (late GUEST & Co.), 29, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, MAR. 30, 1887. [All rights reserved.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."

(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. XI., No. 536. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, APRIL 6, 1887. [DOUBLE NUMBER, TWOPENCE.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
The Home Defences of Israel's Isles of the West	133
"Saying Peace! Peace!"	134
British Increase of Population	135
Earthquake Experiences in the Riviera	136
Ephraim's Woe and Israel's Wealth	136
Historical Coincidences. By E. Reep.—Part I.	137
The Protestantism and Loyalty of Ulster	137
The Pessimist Rebuked	138
The Identity of the Anglo-Saxon Race with Lost Israel	139
The Lender to Many Nations	140
Does British-Israel Keep Holy God's True Sabbath-day?	141
Lo-Ammi Israel described in Romans ix.	142
Germany's Sundays considered in the Light of the Teutonic Theory of the Rev. Robert Douglas, M.A. By S. Sharp	143
Israel's Savings	144
The Anglo-Israel Free Distribution Fund	144
Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association	145
Israel's Scripture and Prayer Union	145
About Constantinople. Forwarded by C. E. P.	146
Progress among Soldiers in Egypt	146
Review	146
Jubilee Lecture at Sheffield	146
Correspondence	147

THE HOME DEFENCES OF ISRAEL'S ISLES OF THE WEST.

WE hope our readers carefully noted the debate in the House of Commons on March 14th, when Sir Edward Hamley made a speech on the defences of this country against foreign invasion, and against insult by an enemy's cruisers. During his speech he proposed a scheme of home defence, to cost the country 6½ millions sterling, to be raised by a loan. Captain Colomb followed up Sir Edward Hamley's speech by a plain unequivocal admission that "no real steps had been taken to insure the safety of the people of the United Kingdom!" He doubted if any foreign nation had sufficient mercantile marine to put 100,000 men on board ship and transport them safely to our shores for the purposes of invasion. "The main danger to which these islands were exposed," he said, "would be a variety of small blows delivered on our seaboard." He declared that we had made little or no preparation to defend our own mercantile ports. To show how exceedingly valuable our nation's trade was, he said that it ought to be remembered that the value of exports and imports at the ports of London and Liverpool was in excess of the total seaboard commerce of France. A blow struck successfully at that trade, he pointed out, would be an equivalent disaster to the total destruction of the commerce of France! So again he declared the total value of the exports and imports of London was more than double the whole seaboard commerce of Russia! The result of a blow struck at London by a foreign hostile fleet would thus be equal to that of the total annihilation of the whole seaboard trade of Russia! Both Sir Edward Hamley and Captain Colomb drew frightful pictures of the result of such disasters as they described, and called upon the House and the country to bury their political differences and regard this subject solely from the standpoint of the nation's safety, which they declared was in the extremity of danger. Sir Edward Hamley alluded to the device of trusting this nation's safety to prestige, and ridiculed the idea in the following humorous way. We quote his words because they illustrate how utterly averse men are to trust the nation's security to God's protection, and how they insist on leaning on the arm of flesh:—

He now came to the question of our internal defences against invasion—that was, the army with which we could meet an invading army, and he concluded that everyone would agree that if we had an army at all it should be sufficient for that purpose. We might remember that no less influential a person than the noble lord the member for Paddington suggested that we should dispense with costly defences and rely on a substitute of unparalleled cheapness — our "undying historic memories." (Laughter.) It was unfortunate that the only historic memory applicable to the case should be our subjugation by William the Conqueror. (A laugh.) But, however that might be, he could imagine the perplexity of a hostile army, landed and looking to be met with a storm of shot and shell and a forest of bayonets, on finding itself confronted only by "undying historic memories." (A laugh). He was inclined to think that on recovering from its pleased surprise it would resume its march upon London (hear, hear,) while we, on our part, would have to console ourselves with the advantages which the noble lord said our refusal to spend our money on armaments would have secured to us—namely, cheap beer, and tea, and tobacco, and an income tax still not exceeding 8d. But he feared the beer and tea and tobacco would be for the refreshment of the enemy, who would also undertake the control of the income tax along with all the rest of our national revenues. ("Hear, hear," and laughter.) Happily, we had something more substantial to rely on. In conjunction with the regular forces in the country the Militia and Volunteers formed an immense army, fit in numbers and quality of men to oppose any armies which could land on our shores. But those armies would consist of trained and disciplined troops, while our auxiliary forces could give only a fraction of their time to military exercises. Moreover, they could not take the field for want of equipment. The first step was then to equip them.

Sir Edward Hamley referred to past history, and assured the House that "only a series of fortunate events leading to the Victory of Trafalgar" prevented Napoleon the First's successful invasion of this country in 1805, when he waited at Boulogne for a chance to land and destroy the British nation at a blow! For, he declared, "experienced sailors and other naval authorities had lately assured us that the Navy had so many and such important duties to perform that it could not be relied upon to defend our shores from the attack of an enemy's squadron if an alliance of the great Powers were formed against us and succeeded in depriving us of the command of the Channel for a few days."

Digitized by Google

In all this we see clearly that our statesmen, our leading soldiers, and sailors, have no idea of our nation's perfect safety by reason of Our Identity with the lost Ten Tribes, and how God's hand has hitherto saved us from invasion not twice or thrice, and will always do so again as God is true! The rejection of Our Identity here becomes the reason for unseemly terror, deep national anxiety, and tremendous expense. Six and a quarter millions sterling is the lowest estimate Sir Edward Hamley can recommend to ensure our perfect safety. He might as well have asked for 200 millions! The House was not at all disposed to grant him the one or the other sum! They did not believe in the danger nor in the remedy proposed! And yet Captain Colomb told the real truth. "No step had been taken," he declared, "to insure the safety of the people of the United Kingdom!" Perhaps not by British statesmen, but long ago God took steps to make that matter sure, for He gave the promise to His servants the prophets, that in the place of safety appointed for His people's domicile, the foot of the hostile invader should never intrude. "I will appoint a place for My people Israel, and will plant them that they may dwell in a place of their own, and be moved no more; neither shall the children of wickedness afflict them any more as at the first, and as from the day that I commanded judges to be over My people Israel." Such was the declaration of God Himself as recorded in 2 Sam. vii. 10, R.V. Similar is the promise in Isaiah lx. 11, R.V.: "Thy Gates also shall be open continually; they shall not be shut day nor night, that men may bring unto thee the wealth of the nations, and their kings led with them." It was recorded by Moses in Deut. xxxiii. 29, R.V.), "Israel dwelleth in safety, the fountain of Jacob alone. Happy art thou, O Israel; who is like unto thee, a people saved by the Lord." The chosen people have their God for their Protector, Guardian, and Guide. He has guaranteed to them their safety in these their "Isles of the West." He has always inspired His people with the feeling that they are secure in their allotted home, without any such elaborate system of human defence, as the nations having no guarantee like that they possess, find by dire experience they must have to secure their own peace and safety. The reply of Mr. E. Stanhope gave no hope that Sir Edward Hamley would get his 6½ millions! It was of the usual sort—an apology for matters remaining as they are, and an assurance that matters are not so bad as military and naval experts painted them. He admitted, however, that "the defences of the country are not what they ought to be!" and pacified the alarmists by declaring that the Government were quite alive to the danger, and would—— see to it! The country will remain as it was before. Perfectly defenceless against attack, with enormous wealth inviting pillage and destruction, but in the result as safe as the word and promise of our Lord Jehovah can make us—"dwellers," as we are, and always shall be, "carelessly" in the Isles, safeguarded only by the promises of God which cannot fail; and by His abiding presence, which by day and by night is and will be our ever sufficient strength, help and righteousness (Isa. xli. 10). Israel, praise ye the Lord!

A JUBILEE POEM, by Lord Tennyson, is published in the April number of Macmillan's Magazine.—The quarterly part of Israel's Hope and Destiny, being the first of the new volume, is now ready.—The Anglo-Israel Free Distribution Fund have just issued their Annual Report.

"SAYING PEACE! PEACE!"

AN event of "capital importance" has taken place according to the newspapers, because Germany, Austria-Hungary, and Italy, have entered into a defensive alliance directed against Russia, and applicable also to France. The maintenance of European peace is now deemed almost assured, and it is quite accepted as a certainty that Russia will think twice and thrice before she ventures to disturb the peace of Europe. In fact there is a chorus of satisfaction throughout Europe, and men are beginning to cry, "Peace! Peace! there is no fear now that war will break out between the Powers!" For the central European nations have entered into a defensive alliance, and whoever attacks one will find three empires to fight! If France should join hands with Russia, she must now count on the hostility of Italy, and on the aid the latter will give to the two Teutonic empires, Germany and Austria-Hungary. The readers of the BANNER will notice in all this how exactly the journals of the day now speak of the division of Europe into two hostile camps, "Two being against three and three against two," as we have often described the facts of the present and coming time as fulfilments of our Lord's words in Matt. x. 34—36 and Luke xii. 49—53. The Lord then declared His mission was to send fire and sword upon "the earth and its inhabitants," but not peace, and assured us that five should be in one house, divided;—"three against two and two against three." Whether this is being literally enacted before our very eyes while yet men are saying, "Peace! Peace!" when there is really no peace, but sudden, imminent war and judgment, let the following words of the Times of March 19th, teach us:—

M. de Lesseps may declare that Germany is the natural friend of France; but Prince Bismarck knows well enough that natural friendship is consistent with political animosity, and takes his measures accordingly. It is idle to disguise the fact that of the five great Continental Powers Russia and France are the restless and aggressive Powers, while Germany, Austria-Hungary, and Italy are sincerely desirous of peace and tranquillity. An alliance between Russia and France would, as every one knows, portend war. It is equally patent to all that an alliance between Germany, Austria-Hungary, and Italy constitutes a strong guarantee for peace, not only because all the parties to it sincerely desire peace, but also because it tends directly to neutralise the possible consequences of an alliance between Russia and France.

Here we see the three Powers united already, and forming a triple alliance against an alliance of the two other empires, which if it is ever formed would mean war. All five Powers, we know, are armed to the teeth, and though we believe the new alliance just formed will cause both Russia and France to pause before they precipitate war, we also are aware that Russia is an incalculable Power, whose actions cannot be confidently anticipated. The recent attempt to assassinate the emperor is a mere sign of the times, proving that the volcano which smoulders beneath the surface of Russian society may at any moment force the emperor to fasten a quarrel on Austria-Hungary, which will set the whole continent on fire. The danger to Europe is very real and very imminent, but for the present the formation of "the Triple Alliance" as a substitute for the late Dreikaiserbund, has given hope to our continental neighbours; which, for their sakes, we trust, but hardly believe, is well founded. Contented with the precarious position of continental affairs, we see how different is our own position in these Isles of the West. Here, on April 4th, will assemble in Conference the representatives of eleven colonies, now British nations, to discuss, not Federation exactly, but matters which must lead to it if God's blessing rests upon their deliberations. Regarding this wonderful and unique assembly, the Times, on March 19th, made the following significant remarks:—

When Sydney harbour is safe against sudden attacks, when New Zealand is not at the mercy of a single hostile ironclad, when each Colony is able to assist itself and its neighbours in an emergency, when a letter will pass as freely throughout the Empire as it now does through the length of the United Kingdom, and communication with a great Colony will no longer depend on a single cable, we shall pass on with renewed confidence to the consideration of other questions. A few more similar efforts of co-operation, and we shall have got the substance, if not the form, of FEDERATION. Of all the events of the Jubilee year, none are likely to be more interesting and memorable than the approaching Conference. It is a meeting like none that has been. It is the expression of some of the best influences of Her Majesty's reign. It has in it the promise of great things to come. Her colonial subjects have been quick to appreciate the advantages of such a conference, which touches the pride, raises the hopes, and accords with the aspirations of every good citizen.

Digitized by Google

Behold, then, the contrast these two modern facts present to us to-day. Here was lately a union of three empires, a Dreikaiserbund, inaugurated to help to maintain peace by preparations for war, and we see it superseded now by a triple alliance of three warlike but alien Powers, who, depending on the arm of flesh, prepare by threat of warlike defence to compel peace as against those other races who are ready, on the first symptom of weakness, to spring on and devour them all. In these islands, on the other hand, there will meet the representatives of an empire which consists, not of a Dreikaiserbund, or even of three nations, but of many, nay, of a company of homogeneous nations, wealthy to a fabulous degree, determined to defend their possessions to the death; one in race, in blood, in religion, in literature, in manners, customs, and in all that makes for unity and union of polity. These meet at the very crisis when the nations of "the earth" are meditating war or the way to prevent it by vast armaments; seeking peace through warlike preparations. The Anglo-Saxons meet to consult as to the best and most efficient method of organising the military defence of the whole empire, and to ascertain if something cannot be done for the better organisation of postal and telegraphic intercourse between the members of the empire. No war, or threat of war, disturbs this company of nations. They are peaceable folk, united as one people, under one sovereign head, and they know they are soon to become, by mere force of numbers, the rulers of the world. They fear no war, for they will, ere long, compel peace by their gigantic power in numbers, wealth, and influence. For "the nation and company of nations" are divine in origin, prophetic by history, and their mission is to work for God's glory, as the servants of the Lord Jesus Christ, who is God the Son. "This people have I formed for Myself," is the Scriptural record, "they shall shew forth My praise." Their destiny is to become a people set on high, above all nations of the earth: "The head and not the tail, above only and not beneath," to the praise and glory of the Lord Jehovah, the God of Israel; and therefore their God (Deut. xxviii. 1—13.)

BRITISH INCREASE OF POPULATION.

THE rapid way in which our people increase has been for some time a subject of deep concern to our statesmen, and it is now becoming acute. Our population in England and Wales in 1800 was only 8,500,000, and is now about 27,000,000, giving a doubling rate of once in about 55 years, the rate being more rapid now. The following, from a journal recently started, the British Weekly, has some remarks on this matter, which seem worth repeating. It said:—

> Lord Derby recently called attention to the grave questions which are raised by the rapid growth of our population. Every day adds its thousand; the increase of a year would do more than people a town as large as Manchester. Can this go on indefinitely? We can better appreciate the figures when we turn to France, where the opposite evil is exciting great misgiving. The contrast has been presented in the gloomiest manner by the Marquis de Naduillac, entitled "Affaiblissement de la Natalité en France." He says that while the annual increase in England is 12 per 10,000—the proportion is really greater—in France it is only 3 per 10,000. Throughout this century the relative number of births has been steadily decreasing. The following table, which we give on the authority of Dr. Bertillon, sets out the proportion of births to a population of 10,000:—1801-10, 325; 1811-20, 316; 1821-30, 309; 1831-40, 289; 1841-50, 274; 1851-60, 267; 1861-68, 264; 1869-80, 245. For the last period the birth-rate in England was about 350 per 10,000.

Every day adds its thousand! That is, every morning when we sit down to breakfast there have been added to our population within the three kingdoms, after deducting the dead and the 800 souls or so who have also departed as emigrants to distant lands, one thousand persons. Three hundred and sixty-five thousand new subjects of the Queen every year in excess of the number there existed the year before. In London the same thing happens every week, not every day—the addition being more than 1,000 per week; since 87,000 or thereabouts are added to the population of the metropolis annually. "Can this go on indefinitely"? asks the journalist in terror! Yet what did God say should be the condition of His people Israel in these our "last days?" Hosea i. 10 tells us:—"Yet the number of the children of Israel shall be as the sand of the sea, which cannot be measured nor numbered." Zech. x. 8—10, gives us a hint regarding it:—"They (meaning Ephraim) shall increase as they have increased. I will sow them among the people. . . . . I will bring them again out of the land of Egypt . . . . and place shall not be found for them." Ezek. xxxvii. 10 describes Israel during the restoration as "an exceeding great army," and St. Paul quoting Isa. x. 22, says in Rom. ix. 27, that "Israel shall be like the sand of the sea for number."

What our statesmen are terrified at, therefore, is only the fulfilment of God's promises to His people Israel, and the object of their abnormal increase is clearly that they may go forth "as fishes do increase," and fill with their overflow the desolations of the earth, and make them "blossom as the rose" (Isa. xxxv. 1, 2). The statement of the Times some years ago is true to-day:—"The most increasing people in the world are found in the United Kingdom—in France the least," and "this is not half the tale. So increasing at home are we, that we are filling continents, fringing oceans, and making the whole world our home." We are, in short, "overflowing our old boundaries, and peopling the globe." "A century ago," wrote Mr. Gladstone lately (BANNER, vol. ix., p. 96), "the Anglo-Saxon race did not exceed 15,000,000—now they may be taken at 100,000,000; but 100 years hence Mr. Barham Zinke, no incompetent calculator, reckons that the English-speaking peoples of the world will probably count 1,000,000,000." De Candole estimates the number even higher, and declares that if the increase of the race goes on as it is now doing, in A.D. 2000, our language, English, will be spoken by 178,846,153 in Europe, and by 1,658,440,000 in the British Colonies and the United States together, or a total of 1,837,286,153 souls. Good Tidings concurs with De Candole, and the writer we mentioned in the British Weekly, in stating that our nett rate of increase at present is nearly 1,000 every day (BANNER, vol. ix., p. 412). "Population is empire," and therefore the portentous increase we now behold going on in our race, fraught with trouble as it certainly is in a vast number of cases, is yet the means God is using to drive our population to seek by emigration for that relief which our land cannot afford them. They go, therefore, at the rate of nearly 800 souls a day to the United States and the other available portions of the earth (our own Colonies), and there taking possession of the desolations of the earth are making them, like the Garden of Eden, to blossom as the rose (Isa. xxxv. 1, 2).

We wonder our opponents can pass over such a sign as this, which is God's own material token to us that we are Israel, and that they can look on the increase of our race as a "fortuitous circumstance," having no particular reference to prophecy. But prophecy, from Genesis to Revelation, teems with notices of Israel's ever-present and coming "multitu-dinousness," and it is a sign of our own blindness, that with facts so constantly and persistently appealing to us, our nation can still resist the light, and insist, in spite of all the facts and arguments we may bring forward, that they, possessed as they are of all God's blessings promised to "Abraham and his seed for ever," are, nevertheless, non-Israelite Gentiles for all that! They thus witness not for God, but against Him, declaring that He has violated His oath, cancelled His promises, broken His covenants and His truth to His people Israel, and that He has given them, Gentiles as they declare they are, what He swore by His own Being that He would reserve exclusively for all time, as well as unconditionally, for His own people, the after-seed of Abraham, His friend, for ever. God forbid that there should be even the shadow of a shade of truth in our opponents' allegations on this subject! Let us hold fast to our Israelitish origin, because it honours God, acknowledges His truth and faithfulness to His people Israel (the British), and puts its seal upon the Bible as the Word of God, declaring that it is, verbatim et literatim, the Truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth.

Digitized by Google

EARTHQUAKE EXPERIENCES IN THE RIVIERA.

MR. W. H. PETERS, J.P., of Harefield, who is staying at the Hotel Royal, San Remo, writes on February 27th :—It may interest the readers of the BANNER to have a few particulars about the severe shaking we have all lately experienced in the Riviera. On Wednesday morning last, about 5.30, I was rolled over in my bed from East to West by a sudden wave of earthquake. I felt for about 60 seconds as a rat would do while being shaken by a terrier dog. I remained in bed, but heard a great rush from all the landings, attended by the deep howlings of the Italians, and the cries of ladies and their maids, who one and all made a stampede into the gardens. I dozed until 7.30, when a second or third serious shock caused still more confusion. I remained in bed until my warm water was brought by the servant, who said, "Quatre fois." I said I only heard two shocks. The last was accompanied by falling glass inside, and a regular stampede of the Italians towards the station.

The visitors were in the garden with pillows, cushions, and rugs. My friend and myself breakfasted alone in the restaurant, after which I looked around the Hotel Royal, and found only a few cracks in the wall, and a door or two that were jammed. The hotel was well filled with visitors, among whom were Sir Ferguson and Lady Davie, Mr. and Mrs. Gore Langton, Colonel and Mrs. Cockburn, Lord and Lady Delamore, Lady Biddulph, Mr. Gray, &c. It was a lovely, bright, and calm morning, with a glassy sea, air quite still, with an occasional flash of lightning. San Remo escaped very lightly. The Roman Catholic Church was damaged by the falling in of the top of the steeple, and the Hotel de Rome was much shaken. It was remarkable that all the dogs barked previous to each severe shock. There were slight shocks during the day after; and at night almost all the visitors slept in carriages or encamped out. I liked my bed better, where I felt quite secure in His keeping, and only heard two out of four shocks.

After breakfast I went with my friend to Bassano, five miles Eastward, an Italian citadel village (with 500 population), which was nearly all thrown down, only ten cottages remaining standing. Thirty-six dead bodies had been taken from inside the church, which had fallen in, 26 from the cottages, and 50 wounded. We saw the sick and wounded and gave them relief. The whole of the inhabitants left alive were encamped outside the walls. This village and Biajardo (about six miles, which also fell North) were both built upon a lava sand, and the buildings, being only cemented together with the same sandy mortar, at once succumbed to the shock. I hear that 300 perished at the latter place, chiefly by going into the church, as at Bassano. Biajardo also is totally destroyed. We visited Mentone the following day, which is almost deserted and in ruins, the inhabitants having taken to their tents along the shore. The bakers having all gone away from their shops, starvation was approaching yesterday. Although but few lives have been lost, the whole of the town seems to be in a state of ruin, and the inhabitants are encamped on the shores.

One-hundred-and-fifty buildings—the new Post-office among them—are unsafe and deserted. In many the sides have fallen. It seemed as if there had been an upheaval wave which had thrown down these houses. Cordons of soldiers prevent anyone entering the many dangerous and narrow streets. The old town or citadel is condemned and deserted, and poor people are living in tents. In my old hotel which I visited the chimney fell through the drawing-room roof down to the fire-place where my party usually sat, and a top chimney fell close to a friend of ours who lay within three feet of it in his bedroom. The plaster fell from above every door in all the landings. Ladies whom we left there with my own niece went on board yachts in the harbour on the second night. Great confusion prevailed at the railway stations. If Italian officials are put out they are utterly useless. Abroad the English are the kings of the creation, and the Italians say, "De English are like de boddle of portier, but de French like de ginger beer boddle."

Now, for a moment, may I give my Scriptural experience and views of those earthquakes in divers places, this terrible shaking of the nations, these wars and rumours of wars, all which I believe foretell the approaching time of the end of this present dispensation, but not the end of time, when at the close of the present six thousandth year, or sixth day of the week, the seventh Sabbatical year or seventh day of the week will surely then arrive, when British-Israel, or the Ten Lost Tribes, will arise like giants refreshed to rule for 1,000 years over all the nations of the world."

"EPHRAIM'S WOE AND ISRAEL'S WEALTH."

THE following has been sent us by a friend in the North, as illustrative of two points—one a sad one, the other a sign of the immense latent wealth there is in this nation, only waiting to be drawn out. The sad point is the fact that to make money by encouraging habits of drink (even though it be the national beverage, beer), there are tens of thousands ready to invest their savings in immense brewery concerns. Our quotation is this :—

"It has transpired in the Law Courts that the offers for shares in the Arthur Guinness, Sons and Co. (Limited) Brewery, amounted to £130,000,000; and the shareholders have already been informed that the profits guaranteed in the prospectus are exceeded. In the Messrs. Alsopp and Co. (Limited), more than £100,000,000 was offered by over 36,000 persons."—Manchester Evening Mail, Feb. 9th and 10th, 1887.

The wealth of this country is clearly proved by the fact that 130 and over 100 millions sterling respectively, were offered by multitudes of capitalists for what were deemed by the public two safe and good investments. One-seventh of the National Debt was thus forthcoming in an hour from our rich community, who thus showed that they were Israel, in possession of the good gift of "the power to get wealth" (Deut. viii. 18). The desire to invest in two gigantic breweries was not, we fear, an equally favourable sign. It pointed in the direction of "Ephraim's woe"--drunkenness—but at the same time served in a new way to prove the fact that the would-be investors in the two largest breweries in the world are Ephraim, whose vice, as Isa. xxvii., xxviii. 1 to 8, shows was and is inebriety.

Digitized by Google

HISTORICAL COINCIDENCES.

By E. Reep.

PART I.

When the islands of Great Britain received certain hostile tribes known as Saxons, Danes, Jutes, &c., history was not at all clear as to the origin of the barbarian invaders; later history asserts that they belonged to a certain branch of the Teutonic family, and that they were bound together by the ties of a common blood and speech. Leaving the assumption for a moment that they were indigenous to Germany, we have the assured opinion of historians that these several tribes were of one and the same family. Of their Northern life little is known, but from the little which can be gleaned we learn that they were a race of land-holders and land-tillers, possessed of unconquerable and inherent love of freedom.

It is in the fifth century that the first Englishmen are tempted to leave their pastures and homesteads of the far North, to establish themselves in Britain. While these Englishmen are battling their way into the British Channel, Rome has been compelled to recall her legions from her conquered province for the defence of Italy against the Goths, which event gave the Picts—who were, says Green, simply Britons who had been sheltered by the fastnesses of the Highlands—the opportunity of committing all kinds of daring depredations upon the Romanised South. Not strong enough to hold the invaded territory, the Picts were repelled and forced to retreat again to the security of their mountain strongholds, there to wait the alliance of another tribe of assailants coming from Ireland, called Scots.

Powerful and warlike as these two Celtic tribes were, their strength was further augmented by a treaty with the English warriors, who were quietly and steadily approaching our shores. Leagued together they were only now to be resisted by the advent of the Jutes, who were brought unconsciously face to face to fight against kinsmen. Time rolls on, and news of other heathen nations comes across the Baltic from English missionaries, who, we are told, were toiling among the Saxons of the Elbe. In due course these unknown heathen are drawn to English shores, gathered gradually in, writes the historian, tribe by tribe, fugitive by fugitive, all being quietly absorbed into a people whose social and political form was already fixed.

Something of that early social and political life is learnable from history, provided we bring the qualification to learn. As we study its aspect we can but see a fundamental resemblance between some of the laws of these early English and those of the Israelites—an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth, a life for a life, was as much a Saxon precept as an Israelite. The earliest English code of justice, imperfectly formed as it was, embodies many points bearing a striking resemblance to some of the customs of the chosen people. Any wrong-doing was, according to Green, considered to cast reproach not only on individual offenders, but upon the people at large—every outrage was held to have been done by all those who were linked by blood to the doer of it—each kinsman was his kinsman's keeper, bound to protect him from wrong. There are many instances in the history of the Israelites of how keenly individual guilt was felt to reflect dishonour upon the people generally. One is to be found in the story of the Levite and his wife, whose cry of injury called for the vengeance of the community, knit together as one man to avenge the folly wrought in Israel. That kinsmen were bound to protect kinsmen by avenging each other's wrongs needs no telling. The carrying out of the law of retribution was a sacred duty, as we see exemplified by the manner in which Gideon avenged the murder of his brothers; and again in the case of David, who, as his days drew nigh that he should die, charged Solomon, his son, to bring certain of his foes to the grave with blood, that his enemies should not go unpunished.

There is something in the account given of the land-tiller from Sleswick, in their new island home, that savours exceedingly of the settlers in the land of Canaan. These English kinsfolk settled in groups over the conquered country as the lot fell to them. Each little village commonwealth lived the same life in Britain as its farmers had lived at home. Each had its moot hill, or sacred tree, much as the Israelites had their sacred oaks and elms on the hills of Palestine; further analogy there is in laws relating to slavery.

Moses, says a Hebrew history at hand, saw fit to allow or tolerate slavery amongst the Israelites, but it was slavery of a very different kind from that now understood by that term, slaves being treated with signal kindness and forbearance. Prisoners of war were invariably made slaves, a custom as uniformly practised by the Norsemen if English history be trustworthy in the matter. "No rank," says Green, "saved the prisoner taken in battle from the doom of slavery, but it was not such a slavery as that we have known in modern times, for stripes and bonds were rare."

It is difficult to think of our fierce invincible forefathers as a people naturally given to calm agricultural pursuits, but so it was, and when settled on the soil their domestic history shows the same love of husbandry as we find so conspicuous in the domestic history of the Hebrews. Their religion, too, has its correspondences forthcoming in the religion of Odin, and the utterly corrupt system of idol-worship so perversely loved by the kingdom of Israel after the division of the Empire, and which more or less entirely supplanted the pure faith as taught by Moses. Carlyle, in his "Lectures on Heroes," lets in a flood of light upon the character of the Scandinavian Odin, removing thereby a good deal of unsound error as to that pagan's peculiar qualities and reputation. Carlyle, in characteristic manner, protests against the common idea that a Pagan's religion is all quackery, priest-craft, and dupery; it must have had some element of truth in it, or men would not have taken it up. To the author of this lecture, there was in the Norse system something very genuine, very great, and manlike. It is Thought! the genuine thought of deep, rude, earnest minds, fairly open to the things about them . . . not graceful lightness, half sport, as in the Greek paganism, but a certain homely truthfulness and rustic strength disclosing itself in a great, rude sincerity.

Spiritually, as well as bodily, these untamed Norsemen are our progenitors. All life is figured by them as a tree—Igdrasil, the tree of existence, has its roots deep-down in the kingdom of Hela, or death; its trunk reaches up heaven-high, spreads its boughs over the whole universe; it is the tree of existence. It is the past, the present, and the future. "Strange enough," says Carlyle, "this old Norse view of nature—whence it specially came, one would not like to be compelled to say very minutely; one thing we may say—it came from the thoughts of Norsemen." This belief in Igdrasil, the tree of existence, is peculiar, and of much interest to those who would fain trace the Ten-Tribed House of Ephraim in these hardy Norsemen.

(To be continued.)

THE PROTESTANTISM AND LOYALTY OF ULSTER.

A Banner reader in Cleveland, Ohio, United States America, sends us the following for reply :—

"There are many here who take much interest in the political affairs of England, and especially of 'the Irish Question.' But there is one thing we do not understand. You often speak in the Banner of the unflinching loyalty of Ulster. Now, how is it that Ulster has so strong Parnellite representation in Parliament? and recent elections in Ulster seem to show that such influence is increasing. Now, if you can enlighten us a little in some little corner of the Banner, a number of which are taken here, as to the political complexion of Ulster and its probable future tendencies, you will confer a favour on many readers of your paper here, and enable us to watch more intelligently the progress of events."

Digitized by Google

To qualify us to give a clear and fair reply, we consulted an Anglo-Israelite friend in Ireland on this knotty point, and quote some of his suggestions in answer. "Ulster," he said, "is not all Protestant;—therefore not all Loyalist. The Protestant population of all Ireland is only about a fifth of the whole, and the Loyalist is altogether swamped in the South and West, also in Leinster. Ireland returns 103 members. Deduct 2 for the University, and one-fifth would be 20. We return 18 Loyalists—16 from Ulster, that is, from its Protestant towns and counties. But Donegal is Roman, and so is one division of Belfast (as one division of Liverpool is Roman!) But the Protestant counties, whether Presbyterian or Church of Ireland, return Unionist members. The Presbyterians are at heart Radical and Gladstonian, but they won't vote against the Union, though ready to take advantage of the strike against rents. The Parnellites did get a few votes in Ulster from these men at the last election. But they are not really Home Rulers. The landed gentry are reaping what this and earlier generations have sown. Their love of popularity, love of sport, and lukewarmness caused them to drive away their Protestant tenants; and except in Cork, where they are headed by a few true men, they have had no cohesion amongst themselves. But this does not refer to Ulster, but only to the South."

So far our Irish friend. It seems the whole strength of the Unionist minority in Ireland is estimated at one-third of the whole population of five millions. The last census showed there were of Roman Catholics in Ireland, 3,960,891. The other religious professions were 1,173,600 in all; of whom Episcopalians numbered 639,500; Presbyterians, 470,700; Methodists, 48,800; Independents, 6,200; Baptists, 4,800; and Quakers, 3,600. To these opponents of Home Rule must be added (according to "Notes from Ireland" of March 12) all Roman Catholic gentry; three-fourths of Roman Catholics who are in professions; all the great Roman Catholic merchants and traders, and half the domestic class, the total being about one-and-a half millions opposed to Home Rule. The Parnellite members are returned by an electorate of which one-fifth is illiterate. The Loyal population and electorate are the intelligent, independent, and educated minority. At the last election 194,994 persons voted in Ireland, of whom 36,722 were illiterate. But in the 2,316,272 voters in the whole of England and Wales, there were only about the same number of illiterates, that is, 38,587! "An examination of the statistics returned to Parliament shows conclusively that the Parnellites sit by the grace of the illiterate portion of the Irish people." We do not think the future of Ireland rests with the illiterate majority, but with the educated, influential "witnessing" Israelite minority, and they, as it is seen, are principally to be found just now in Ulster. The Roman Catholic portion of Ireland is decreasing in numbers by reason of emigration, and as they will not serve Israel it is manifest they must decrease and utterly perish, according to Isa. lx. 12.

THE PESSIMIST REBUKED.

We take the following from the Eastbourne Standard of Dec. 24, 1886, and commend it to our readers' notice. The article takes a hearty, healthy view of our British life and condition at the present hour, as compared with fifty years ago. It gives us cause to admit that God has been very good to us, and blessed us as a nation. It would be hard for any one apart from "Our Identity" to account for this improvement. But seen in the light of our Israelitish origin, we notice that God has in fulfilment of His oath and promise "to Abraham and his seed for ever" given us all the blessings that lie at His right hand, because He reckons us to be "obedient" to His will, for the sake of the merits of His blessed Son, and because of the outpouring of the precious blood, shed for His people's sins. The article is as follows:—

CHRISTMASTIDE.

"A Merry Christmas to you." Surely there never was penned or spoken a sentence so full of Anglo-Saxon character as this one; none that ever appealed more forcibly to the Anglo-Saxon heart. On Saturday next, under the frosty sky of Manitoba, the bright sunshine of Australia, the tempered warmth of Hindostan, the, descendants of the Saxon, Norman, Danish and British who finally became a nation under our third Henry six hundred years ago, will be repeating the old Yuletide greeting, and we are grateful to remember, will be forgiving old personal grudges for the sake of the associations of Christmastide. This expanding of hearts that prompts the forgiving of slights and injuries is, after all, the glory of the festival, the symbol of Him in whose glad worship it was instituted. Beyond this one mark of the Master how strangely has Christmas changed in England during the last thousand years. The gathering of the retainers around the plain wooden tables of the great Earls, with the rude banquets of flesh and mead and ale, the riotous wassailing, even the mummery, are gone, and happily gone. The old order of things has changed, and, to be frankly honest, in spite of our instinct love of our old traditions, have changed for the better. It is too much our custom nowadays to speak with regret of the past, whose distance chiefly lends enchantment to its view; but if we shake ourselves free from our Christmas-coloured fancies and look upon the old times prosaically and commercially, we shall find very few of us willing to change the present for the good old days for which we sigh and sing so lustily. We need not go back to the feudal ages to find favourable comparison for our much-bemoaned modern Society. Nearly fifty years ago Her Gracious Majesty ascended the throne of her ancestor, Egbert, the first King of England, a throne whose traditions she has enriched as it was scarcely ever enriched before, by a sweet, womanly, and a noble motherly life. At that time the young Queen looked upon a nation that for wealth and physique, and the diffusion of culture and comfort, cannot be compared with that which will presently hail the Jubilee of her reign.

There were no railways then, a deficiency that will weigh with those who are looking forward to being the guests or the hosts of old friends from whom circumstances have caused a merely geographical separation. Then it was the custom of visiting friends to avail themselves of the mail-coach—an admirable means of conveyance—with a bright spring sky above and a hard Roman road beneath, but one from which a biting North wind and a thick earth-coating of snow borrowed all the poetry without the slightest acknowledgment. Sitting by one's own fireside with one's chosen and accustomed comforts, a story of the winter night's adventures of a stage-coach, written by somebody else, seated by his own fireside, frequently proves pleasant reading enough, but the truthful chronicles tell us of human beings frozen to death on their journey, even in the temperate climate of England, on these terrible journeys. In the matters of conveyance then, we are, as we should be, considerably in advance of our ancestors. We are hearing a good deal at present about the stagnation of trade and the want of employment in England, and we are decidedly of opinion that the more the distress amongst us is forced upon public attention the better will it be for all classes of Society; but fifty years ago we had a state of things far harder than that at present, hard as the present undoubtedly is. At that time one person in every eleven was a pauper, one in every five hundred was a convicted criminal. The conditions of life of the poor show a marvellous improvement. We have jerry-building, we have over-crowding, but jerry-buildings make far better habitation than the cellars in which the poorer part of the population of our cities lived fifty years ago. The brick and mortar genius has not been wholly reprehensible. The science of Sanitation has been introduced among us since then, and to its beneficial working out may be attributed the striking difference in the death-rate of then and now. The death-rate then was 22 per 1,000, now it is only 19, or in other words we are now saving the lives of 150,000 annually, who, under the sanitary conditions of our ancestors would have perished, and all this in spite of the vast increase in area of our towns and cities that would, but for sanitation, have vastly increased the old death-rate. When we remember, too, that for one life saved we have saved several persons from sickness, we can get at a pretty accurate idea of the services of our modern sanitary systems. The necessities of life then were very dear, now they are very cheap indeed. In the matter of illumination, which has been said to be a criterion of the progress of a nation we have made astonishing strides. The poorest cottage may now possess, without extravagance, a better light than was to be found in the mansions of fifty years ago. "Dips" and "rushlights" that the poor then used sound strangely in the ears of the very poorest of the present generation. At that time the poor worked far longer hours, had far less wages, far dearer food, far worse habitations and fewer comforts than to-day, and, in spite of the over-crowding and the want of employment that exists among us, we have no hesitation in saying that the Christmas of 1886 will find happiness far more widely diffused among the population of these islands than did that of 1836.

Digitized by Google

A short passage in a sermon preached by the Rev. Dr. Wild in Toronto, Canada, and published in the Parkdale News of Nov. 25, 1886, will be read with interest in connection with the above. The subject was "Thanksgiving," and the text, Psa. c. 3:—

We are children one of another, and as children our duty is to love and honour and obey our earthly parents. So it is equally our duty to love, honour and recognise the great and good Father of us all, the Lord our God. We should do so individually, because as individuals we have special favours, and no individual should be indifferent to the fact of his obligation to God, for every individual may know that he has not made himself. We should do so collectively, for in a collective capacity we have many blessings that we could not have individually, blessings in our homes, at the social fireside, at the festive table of our litt'e homes. So we have favours conferred upon us in our church relation; and then, collectively, as a nation, as a State, blessings are conferred upon us, and it only needs that the citizens of Canada compare their condition with that of many of the nations of the earth and they shall find the very best of reasons for being grateful unto God. Duty imposes, and common-sense sanctions a day set apart by the nation for thanksgiving. If there be a people and if there be a nation that we can with propriety call Christians, they are found in the British Empire. Historically and constitutionally Britain is the offspring of Christianity, and naturally she is the foremost propagator and the strongest defender of the same. Her growth, her prosperity, her peace and her plenty are intimately related to the Gospel of Jesus Christ. Whatever others may think of the Bible, we have reason affectionately to cling to it, for it has had a talismanic effect upon the growth, upon the forces, and upon the course of our civilisation. Take away the effect of the Bible upon Britain, and where would Britain be to-day? We may speak of her supremacy upon the sea and upon the land. How came she by that supremacy? Through the Gospel of Jesus Christ as taught us in His Holy Word. If a man wants to rob Britain of her glory: if he wants to diminish her strength; if he wants to make her a secondary Power, speak against the Bible that has lifted her up, and you can do your work as far as you are able to do it. Let us not be ashamed of the good old book nor of its teachings, for which our fathers and mothers suffered so much and died freely, defending it with their lives that it might be handed down to us as a sacred heritage. Let us not in these days think it has lost its sanctity and its purity, and that it needs culling and trimming in order to place it in our public and private schools.

THE IDENTITY OF THE ANGLO-SAXON RACE WITH "LOST ISRAEL."

We take the following report of an excellent lecture, the second and final one of Mr. Macallister (who delivered it), from the Gippsland Times of November 17, 1886. The journal in question belongs, we believe, to the neighbourhood of Melbourne, Victoria :—

Mr. Macallister delivered his concluding lecture on the above subject in the Christian Chapel, York-street, on Sunday evening last, when there was a large attendance present. At the outset the lecturer remarked that if we believed God's word, we cannot doubt that the Israelites do exist, and that they are to be made manifest is equally clear in the sure word of prophecy. Who, then, are they, and where may we seek for them? Many attempts to trace them have been made, and many people have been named as Lost Israel. They have been found in India, Asia, Africa, and even in America. When on these people so discovered the rays of prophetic light are concentrated, we find that they are wanting in most of the essentials of the Israelitish people. The speaker selected six points of identification for the ground-work of his discourse, stating they were characteristics which must be found in or with the Israelitish people when discovered—viz., multitudinousness, expansiveness, wealth, possession of the Gates of their enemies, control over the heritage of the heathen, and their being a Christian and missionary people. If we apply the light of history and the word of prophecy to the nations of the world, we find that there is but one people who possess all these qualifications, and they are the Anglo-Saxons. Each point of identity was then dwelt upon briefly in order. Taking the British empire as a whole, its people are the most prolific in the world. They double themselves in from 33 to 41 years. Leaving America out of the question, there is no other nation that approaches it in this respect. It takes France 140 years to double its population, Germany and Russia each 100 years, Italy 130 years, and Turkey over 500 years. The British people are, therefore, far more prolific than the others. Reference was made to the wonderful growth of the Anglo-Saxon language, which appears to be destined by its unifying power to knit all mankind into a universal empire. As to the second point, expansiveness, meaning by that the capacity of going out into distant parts of the earth and there founding Colonial Empire, resulting in the formation of nations, if we look at the British Isles we discover its area to be only about 120,000 square miles, a mere flower-plot as compared with the 50,000,000 square miles, the total area of the habitable globe. From this little flower-plot, "the isles of the West," the British dominions extend North, South, East and West, enlarging the possession of that little spot to nearly one-fifth of the habitable surface of the globe. The next point was wealth. The promises were that they should lend unto many nations and should not borrow. No other nation than the Anglo-Saxon are or ever have been wealthy enough to become bankers for the world. In proof of the enormous increase in our capital, the speaker asserted that the trade of the Australasian colonies now exceeds by about £20,000,000 that of Great Britain in 1837. He then went on to the next point—possession of the Gates of their enemies. As we look over a map of the world and mark the British possessions, we will find that there are some 30 or 40 rocks or islands which are held simply on account of their stratagetical importance. But while possessing and maintaining all these as a silent menace to our enemies, we have few fortifications at home. Why, then, do we possess the Gates of our enemies and neglect our own doors? That was because there is an intuitive conviction in the hearts of the British people that the words of God, "I shall be a strong wall round about you," addressed to Israel, applies to them. He then passed on to the fifth point—the heritage of the heathen. Among the subjects of Queen Victoria, the heathen population outnumbers by many millions that ever possessed by any other nation. Lastly, as a Christian missionary people. God's words are, "This people have I formed for Myself; they shall show forth My praise." That was the mission of Israel. What nation now more than all others shows forth the praise of God? Since the British and Foreign Bible Society came into existence, the Anglo Saxons have spent over £200,000,000 sterling in Christian missionary work in foreign parts. No other civilised power ever attempted such a work as that. The lecturer then asked the question, who are the Anglo-Saxons, or where did they come from? We can all study these questions for ourselves in ordinary history. Suffice it to state that they first began to appear in history a very few years after the disappearance of Israel. And still more remarkable, that on the first appearance of our Anglo-Saxon progenitors they are found about the borders of the Caspian Sea, in the very neighbourhood where Israel was placed by the Assyrians. These are positive facts of history which all can verify. In speaking of the gloomy outlook of the political horizon at the present time, so gloomy that many British hearts have been depressed about the safety of Old England, he referred to our Israelitish identity as the silver lining to the war-cloud that hangs over us, and concluded by stating that the Spirit of God was to be in the Israelitish nation. It appears to be in the Anglo-Saxon race, and where that spirit is, dwell power, unity, and a burning intense desire to bring all people to the knowledge of God. This was to be Israel's mission. The Anglo-Saxon people are accomplishing Israel's work, the inheritors and recipients of Israel's blessings. They came from where Israel was lost, and in their appearance synchronised with the disappearance of that people of Israel. What other conclusion can we come to but that in the Anglo-Saxon people we have discovered "Lost Israel?"

Digitized by Google

So far Mr. Macallister. Our readers on this side of the great waters will be pleased to know we have in the lecturer so gifted and well-read an advocate of our views near Melbourne as he is proved to be. We like the six points Mr. Macallister took up as distinctive of Israel. The chief of all, of course, is multitudinousness. The Israelites were to be that at all the stages of their history, "for population is empire," and empire is what God designed them for.

Greatness and mightiness as a nation was promised them in Gen. xii. 2, xviii. 18, and vast population is inherent in that idea. A development into "a nation and company of nations" was foretold of them in Gen. xxxv. 11 and xlviii. 19, and thus the blessing of numbers promised to the Twelve Tribes was divided off and granted to Ephraim or Joseph, as distinguished from Judah—to be the mark of that House only for ever. Facts corroborate this, and show that the multitudinousness and the expansiveness have been the portion of the British folk when the time to bless them came, because they are Ten-Tribed Ephraim, or Joseph. Then there is "wealth." It was to be Israel's generally, as Deut. viii. 18 proves; and doubtless it is so now. The Jews are proverbial for wealth, and so are the British. In the hands of a few Jews, it is said, the purse-strings of Europe are held. But the British folk have "the power to get wealth," par excellence. Their exports and imports together amount to about a million sterling per diem! Their annual national income is between 1,000 and 2,000 millions sterling. Their savings are of the value of 200 millions a year! There has been no parallel to all this in the history of nations since the world began. The lecturer drew a proper distinction between Israel's Home Gates and "the Gate of their enemies"—necessarily, therefore, their foreign Gates. The former depend on Isa. lx. 11, R.V. for their security; the latter exist because of God's sworn promise to Israel in Gen. xxii. 17—"Thy seed shall posses the Gate of his enemies." The "intuitive conviction" it must be which prevents British-Israelites fortifying their Home Gates in an adequate manner;—a conviction that really rests on God's promise: "Thy Gates shall be open continually; they shall not be shut day nor night, that men may bring unto thee the wealth of the nations and their kings led with them." God's gift of the Gates at home and abroad is clearly one restricted to Ephraim, since to them is given "the population," and therefore the Empire—the Home—and therefore the Home Gates. The gift of the heathen, too, was theirs, to bring them to Christ, since Israel or Joseph alone were to become "the sons of the living God," or Christians, as Hosea i. 10 distinctly proves. The sixth mark of British Identity with lost Israel was described to be the possession of the Christian missionary spirit. Besides Isa. xliii. 21, quoted by the lecturer, many other texts might have been referred to as proofs that this was to be one of Israel's chief points of resemblance, whereby they were to be brought to light and to recognition by the world. "Israel shall blossom and bud, and fill the face of the world with fruit" (Isa. xxvii. 6); is one promise. "In thee and in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed," is another (Gen. xxviii. 14). Israel blesses the Gentile races of the earth by giving them the Bible, with which, as the oracles of God, they have especially and exclusively been entrusted. "He showeth His word unto Jacob, His statutes and His judgments unto Israel. He hath not dealt so with any nation" (Psa. cxlvii. 19, 20). In this gift the Jews have not participated, because they have rejected God the Son, the Saviour of the world. The Sabbath is Ephraim's as well as Judah's; but Israel's day of holy rest is different from the Jewish Sabbath, in order that thus they may keep up the racial distinction, and so commemorate not the Jewish bondage in Egypt, but the glories of the Creation, and God's rest after it was over, in Eden. The knowledge of the ten true laws of God is Israel's as well as Judah's; but the Jews do not teach the nations what their laws are, as the evangelising function is not theirs, but Christian Israel's—and the latter's Gospel message is based upon those same laws which are the schoolmaster or tutor to bring men to Christ, and so justify them by faith (Gal. iii. 24, R.V.). These marks suffice to identify the people bearing them with lost Ephraim, Israel, or Joseph. They do not exhaust the list, but they are the most important of the number. Their character is such that the nation possessing them all, without a solitary exception, must infallibly be Israel, since the promises of God, His oath and His covenants cannot fail, and must indicate without error, or doubt, or uncertainty, the Identity of the race possessing them every one. Laus Deo!

THE LENDER TO MANY NATIONS (DEUT. XV. 6).

WE propose to enrich our pages with a quotation from the March number of the Messenger, entitled "The Great Money-Lender," written by the Editor. It is an able and exhaustive article, quite in accord with our own views. We regret that our space forbids us to quote the whole of it.

We are concerned to see, from p. 85 of this number of the Messenger, that that journal is already in trouble for means to live. Printers' bills are said to be the difficulty, and an Editor's Fund started some time ago seems to meet with scant response. We are sorry to observe this, as the Messenger is ably conducted, and must reach large classes of readers whom other journals, including probably the BANNER OF ISRAEL, do not touch. Such a testimony to the Messenger's excellence is recorded on p. 107 of the number in question, where a correspondent praises "the high tone of the Messenger, a thoroughly practical periodical." The writer deplored the nauseous twaddle of some other unfortunate Identity journal, designated "The * * *." To meet such cases, the further existence of the Messenger is absolutely needful, and we trust that the Journal may henceforth pay its way by sales alone, and that the questionable recourse to an "Editor's Fund" (always a sign of trade weakness) may be unnecessary. We think it very possible the Messenger's failure to "pay" may arise from the Editor's constant recurrence to what he calls, in somewhat violent language, "the monstrous doctrine of eternal torment." This doctrine he calls "the doctrine of whited sepulchres, full of dead men's bones; a doctrine of devils." The doctrine in question has, it appears to us, nothing to do with the Messenger's raison d'être as stated on its title-page, and we regret its constant intrusion into its pages.

Passing these matters by, we are glad to notice the able leading article on the subject of "The Great Money-lender." The portion we quote commences thus:—

The materials available for our purpose are—(1) The annually published "Official Information," by Mr. Burdett, the secretary of the Stock Exchange; (2) "The Stock Exchange Year-Book"; (3) "The Annual Report of the Corporation of Foreign Bondholders." From these we may arrive at the total amounts issued of all Foreign Loans dealt in, and therefore in greater or less degree held, in this country. It is, of course, understood that all loans or investments to Colonies and dependencies of the Empire are absolutely excluded. These are monies lent to our own children, and are, so to speak, private household transactions. We repeat that the one thing we want to know is how much we have lent to the nations, and to how many nations. The only method to arrive at an approximate answer appears to be to collect summarily, in alphabetic order, the whole quantity of Foreign Loans recognised and dealt in by the Stock Exchange: and against each item to set an estimate to the best of our knowledge and judgment of the proportion of each actually subscribed in this country. To such as are familiar with the history of the Loans, and with the specific relations between the country in each case and our own, this is by no means so difficult as might appear. In the following summary, then, the first column gives the gross amount of Loans for each country, with the years over which they were distributed, and without any reference either to any proportion originally subscribed on other than the London market, or to subsequent foreign purchases, or to repayments in redemption. This last is, of course, wholly irrelevant to the primary question. The second column sets out an approximate estimate of the proportion lent by this country, based in each particular case on the notorious circumstances of each case. If in some cases the estimate be too high, it may in others be too low, so that the average result may be taken as near the truth. The figures are given to the nearest thousand.

Digitized by Google

Argentine Republic. 1868 to 1886	£23,635,000.	Say 80	p. cent.	£18,908,000
Austria. 1870 to 1881	289,051,000	„ 4	„	11,562,000
Belgium. 1842 to 1882 ...	41,749,000	„ 10	„	4,175,000
Bolivia. 1872 (amount uncertain)	2,000,000	„ 40	„	800,000
Brazil. 1860 to 1886	37,389,000	„ 20	„	7,478,000
Buenos Ayres. 1824 to 1886 ...	14,053,000	„ 80	„	11,242,000
Chilé. 1842 to 1886	16,509,000	„ 60	„	9,905,000
China. 1885	3,755,000	„ 90	„	3,380,000
Colombia. 1873...	2,000,000	„ 90	„	1,800,000
Confederate Loan. 1863. (Secession U. S.)	3,000,000	„ all		3,000,000
Cordova. (Argentine State.) 1886	595,000	„ all		595,000
Costa Rica. 1871 to 1872 (approximate)	3,500,000	„ 90	„	3,150,000
Cuba. 1878 to 1880	20,000,000	„ 30	„	6,000,000
Danubian Principalities. 1864 to 1867	2,180,000	„ 80	„	1,744,000
Denmark. 1850 to 1863 ...	1,154,000	„ 90	„	1,039,000
Ecuador. 1855	1,824,000	„ 90	„	1,642,000
Egypt. 1876 to 1885	111,139,000	„ 70	„	77,797,000
Entre Rios. (Argentine State.) 1885 to 1886...	2,331,000	„ all		2,331,000
France. (Rentes unredeemed). 1886	988,089,000	„ 3	„	29,642,000
Greece. 1879 to 1884	8,200,000	„ 50	„	4,100,000
Guatemala. 1856 to 1869 ...	600,000	„ all		600,000
Holland. 1814 to 1886... ...	88,124,000	„ 35	„	30,843,000
Honduras. 1867 to 1870 ...	6,080,000	„ 90	„	5,472,000
Hungary. 1868 to 1884 ...	71,413,000	„ 20	„	14,283,000
Italy. 1851 to 1862. (Include Sardinia)	165,358,000	„ 15	„	24,803,000
Sardinia, 1855—6 (Guarant. British Gov.)	2,000,000	„ all		2,000,000
Japan. 1870 (not stated) 1873. Say	4,000,000	„ 80	„	3,200,000
Jassy (Rumania). 1875 ...	187,000	„ 70	„	131,000
Liberia. 1871	100,000	„ 60	„	60,000
Louisiana, U.S. 1874	3,000,000	„ 30	„	900,000
Massachusetts, U.S. 1866 to 1875	4,120,000	„ 30	„	1,236,000
Mexico. 1851 to 1864 (with French moiety, 1864) ...	27,471,000	„ 50	„	13,735,000
Mississipi, U.S. 1831 to 1838...	2,000,000	„ 60	„	1,200,000
New York City. 1872 to 1875...	3,313,000	„ 10	„	331,000
Norway. 1876 to 1886... ...	5,876,000	„ 40	„	2,350,000
Orange Free State. 1884 ...	100 000	„ all		100,000
Paraguay. 1871 to 1872 ...	3,000,000	„ 80	„	2,400,000
Peru. 1870 to 1872	35,230,000	„ 60	„	21,138,000
Portugal. 1848 to 1886 (total uncertain)	126,000,000	„ 20	„	25,280,000
Prussia. (Consols quoted.) 1880	16.250.000	„ 5	„	813,000
Rumania. 1875	1,784,000	„ 10	„	178,000
Russia. 1822 to 1884	236,190,000	„ 20	„	47,238,000
Santa Fé. 1883 to 1885... ...	2,473,000	„ 90	„	2,226,000
Spain. 1870 to 1881 (only Stocks quoted)	82,578,000	„ 40	„	33,031,000
Sweden. 1875 to 1883	15,112,000	„ 70	„	10,578,000
Transvaal. 1876...	113,000	„ all		113,000
Tunis. 1876	6,308 000	„ 90	„	5,677,000
Turkey. 1854 to 1870	124,273,000	„ 80	„	99,418,000
United States. 1876 to 1882 ...	298,838,000	„ 5	„	14,942,000
Uruguay. 1883	11,127,000	„ 90	„	10,014,000
Venezuela. 1881...	4,000,000	„ 80	„	3,200,000
Virginia, U.S. 1854 to 1882 ...	5,232,000	„ 40	„	2,093,000
To 40 Nations ...	£2,924,403,000			£579,873,000

Until this final summation was made, we had no remote idea of the amount which might result. We thus arrive at a sum of about 580 millions which we have lent to 40 nations; or about 20 per cent. of their whole indebtedness. It is to be clearly understood that this estimate endeavours to represent the proportion of our original advances on Loans "placed" wholly or in part on the London market, or afterwards "quoted"; and quite apart from consideration of the extent to which such Loans may have been wholly or partly redeemed by the customary processes. We repeat that the question of the present indebtedness to us of the nations is wholly irrelevant to the question we are considering, to wit, the amount which we have at divers times lent to many nations. The estimate is given in detail, that any who desire may revise it according to their judgment. We are persuaded that none who have competent knowledge in the matter will refuse to admit that, on the whole, it is probably much below the truth.

But also there are the innumerable investments, already mentioned, in foreign railways and other various undertakings, such as the Suez Canal, &c., &c. If we make for all these what must be admitted to be a fair addition of say 170 millions, we arrive at a great total of about 750 millions.

To what end have we undertaken this toilsome labour? To the end for which we have hitherto toiled month by month, to demonstrate that there is no promise of the Most High God by His prophets to Israel, of what should happen to them in the latter days, which is not fulfilled to the yod and tittle in the British folk. Already proof has been piled upon proof. This now set forth is another step in the great argument; one within the knowledge and apprehension of the simplest. To Israel, while in the wilderness, landless nomads, the word of Yehova by Moses was, "Thou lendest to many nations; and thou borrowest not." Note, moreover, this. The promise was to the whole House of Israel, to Judah (the Jews) as much as to the Tribes distinguished specially as "Israel," Israel of Ephraim, in later time Israel of Samaria and of the Captivity upon the river Khabor, and in the cities of the Medes. Now it is notorious that at this moment the most influential and powerful financiers on the chief continental Exchanges—Berlin, Frankfort, Vienna, Hamburg, and even at Amsterdam and Paris—are the Jews. This is the real reason, as every man knows, of the jealousy and hatred of which they are the subject. To the estimate, then, of the amount which we have lent to many nations may be added the amount which has been lent by the continental Jews. Can any man with knowledge question that if it were practicable to compute this amount, the estimate here presented would have to be at least doubled?

How comes it that it is we alone of all the nations who can show this record? Once more:—men may deny that we are Israel. But no man can deny that we, and none other, fulfil to the yod and tittle the promises of the Most High which were made to Israel, and to none other.

So far the Messenger. We wonder if we shall be bracketed with "The * * *" of twaddling proclivities if we make one remark respecting the Messenger's quotation from Deut. xv. 6, and its alleged application to the Jews? It is this. Moses' promise to Israel in the wilderness was not only "Thou lendest to many nations, and thou borrowest not"; but also, "Thou reignest over many nations, but they reign not over thee." If the first clause of verse 6 related also to the Jews, so must the second. Will the Messenger find a parallel, and show us how many nations the Jews reign over, and that no Jews are now in subjection to many nations? This is an impossible task. Therefore we argue that neither did the Lord refer to the Jews when He promised the Ten-Tribed House, or Israel obedient, that they should lend to many nations, but never borrow.

DOES BRITISH-ISRAEL KEEP HOLY GOD'S TRUE SABBATH DAY?

A RATHER remarkable letter has reached us from Adelaide, South Australia, dated December 26th, 1886. The writer, Mr. A. Bicknell, of Norwood, near Adelaide, is a believer in Our Identity with the Ten Tribes. But nevertheless he cannot accept as a fact, that this nation, blest of God as he knows it to be, is free from the deadly error of keeping holy a day not sanctioned of God, and in breach of the fourth commandment, which in spite of their disobedience, their pastors openly recite, Sunday after Sunday, as if they keep, but do not break this law. It never occurs to Mr. Bicknell that God Almighty, the omniscient God of His chosen people, now accounts Israel, the British, as "Israel obedient." This must be so, because we know He has granted to this nation special gifts and blessings which He declared He would only give them on condition that they hearkened to His voice, to observe and "do all His commandments." Those commandments included in a very special manner the due observance of the seventh day of holy rest, contained in the ten true laws given at Sinai. In Deut. xv. 5-6, and xxviii. 1—13, we have very remarkable promises tied up to implicit "obedience," by carefully hearkening unto the voice of the Lord their God. Those promises, so hedged in with conditions, are all to-day in the enjoyment of the British people exclusively! The Jews do not possess so much as one of them! The Gentile, non-Israelite nations of the earth, know nothing of them. We alone, being the Ten Tribes, as Mr. Bicknell knows we are, enjoy these good things. "We lend to many nations, but we never borrow." We "reign over many nations, but none rule over us" (Deut. xv. 5, 6). "We are high above all the nations of the earth, the head and not the tail, above only and not beneath them." We are blessed in the city, in the field, in our children, in our agriculture, in our cattle, kine, and flocks of sheep (especially in Mr. Bicknell's portion of the Israelitish Empire). When we go out we are blessed of God; when we come in it is the same. God gives us victory over our enemies, and prosperity in manufactures, in stores, and in our lands. He has made us a holy or separated people, "dwelling alone," for the reason explained in Exod. xxxiii. 16, that is, because God goes with us. The Lord has given us His good treasure, rain from heaven, blessing our imports and exports, and in the power to get wealth generally (Deut. xxviii. 1—13). Such being the facts, and such being the conditions on which we have come into the enjoyment of these divinely granted blessings, how can Mr. Bicknell, of South Australia, being an Anglo-Israelite, aware of the facts and of the promises of God, venture to set himself against his Maker, and tell us that while God has blessed us because we have diligently hearkened unto His commandments, of which one of the chief is the fourth, we nevertheless have systematically disobeyed God in this matter, and are keeeping Sunday as His Sabbath, whereas he (Mr. Bicknell), knows that Saturday is His Sabbath, but not Sunday at all? We wonder an Anglo-Israelite can fall into such an error as this, and that he does not fail to suspect that after all God may be right and he himself quite wrong; that the Lord may be trusted to know when His people have "diligently hearkened to His voice" and "obeyed His commandment," in respect to the Sabbath day. We now proceed to quote Mr. Bicknell's letter in extenso, reserving our further remarks on the subject till our readers have perused it:—

Digitized by Google

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—As I believe that the British are the descendants of the lost Ten Tribes of Israel, I think it very strange and incompatible that they do not keep holy the Sabbath day, for the seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God, and not the first day which we keep. If we say that we keep one day in seven, that will not do, for that would be the Sabbath of man, and not of the Lord thy God, which He made, hallowed and sanctified, and man cannot hallow and sanctify anything.

It is a Roman Catholic Sabbath that we keep, instituted by the symbolic beast of Revelation, who should seek to alter times and laws; and he did alter time and law, even the time and law of the fourth commandment.

It distresses me beyond measure to hear on Sunday the Church of England minister stand in what they call the Holy of Holies, and boldly repeat the fourth commandment, in the face of which they are at the same time breaking it.

A. BICKNELL.

Adelaide, South Australia, Dec. 26th, 1886.

We ask Mr. Bicknell to consider this fact. If God is with us, His people Israel, as such texts as Exodus xxix. 45, 46; xxxiii. 16; Haggai ii. 5, and others like these show, surely He has Himself allowed Israel to sanctify the first day of the week, calling it the Lord's day, as the testimony of the New Testament and of the whole of the Christian dispensation past shews that He has, blessing the nation while so acting? Further, does he not read in comparing Exod. xx. 10 and 11, with Deut. v. 14, 15, that there were two days separated by the Lord to be His Sabbaths; the one, probably the Edenic, which we keep, as recorded in Exod. xx. 10, 11; the other the day hallowed on Sinai, as a memorial of the Egyptian slavery of Israel and their liberation from it, as Deut. v. 14, 15 tells us was the case. What, then, more fitting than the arrangement that Israel should recur to the Edenic Sabbath, sanctified by the Resurrection as well as by the apostolic usage; and blessed by the Lord for 1,800 years of Israel's Christian life? This question was discussed in the BANNER, so far back as April 2nd, 1879 (Vol. iii., No. 118, p. 139). There it was stated by "a country parson" (now gone to his rest), that this question was carefully considered in Dr. Jennings' Jewish Antiquities (A.D. 1776, vol. ii. 146). In that work the author noted, with reference to Exod. xvi. and the raining of manna for the children of Israel, that the institution of the Sabbath in connection with the manna (ver. 22, 23) was plainly a new appointment then—and one not observed up to that period by the Israelites; since on the day week before that hallowed for the Sabbath by the cessation of the manna, the children of Israel had made a journey from Elim (ver. 1), and had not observed it therefore as a Sabbath. Dr. Jennings consequently believed that the Sabbath given on that occasion was the memorial of the deliverance from Egypt, a new event, and unconnected with the other Sabbath instituted in Paradise for all mankind. The latter we believe to have been reconsecrated by the resurrection of our Lord, and it was therefore very naturally and properly accepted by His disciples and by His Church as the true primeval Sabbath; while the Jews, to whom the seventh day was allotted under the law, still cling to the memorial of the Egyptian bondage and their deliverance from it, to distinguish them from Israel, whose memorial is that of God's resting from His labours in creation—a nobler memorial requiring a separate and holier day. Of one thing Mr. Bicknell may rest assured. The Lord Jesus Christ has sanctioned the observance of the Christian Sunday as the Sabbath prescribed in His Holy Law; and that being so our South Australian friend need feel no more "distress" in regard to the matter, and need have no fears that ours is a "Roman Catholic Sabbath," "instituted by the symbolic Beast of Revelation!" Ours is the day the Lord rested from His work, and rose from the dead: and we do well to cling to it; but we must rejoice that we are no longer bound to the Mosaic Sabbath of the Jew—the record of shameful bondage—and of the deliverance therefrom. For her Sunday rest day too, Israel may thus praise the Lord.

LO-AMMI ISRAEL DESCRIBED IN ROMANS IX.

A VALUABLE correspondent writes as follows from London:—"I like your exposition of Rom. ix. very much in the last BANNER (No. 527), as far as it has gone. The more I consider the subject the more convinced I am that the whole Scripture, from Genesis to Revelation, refers to the people of Israel only; the Gentiles, that is the heathen nations, being merely subsidiary. The very fact of their 'becoming children of Abraham by faith in Christ,' strengthens me in my opinion. The Gentilised, or 'Lo-Ammi,' condition of the Ten-Tribed house, has been the cause of the confusion which exists in so many minds on the subject. The 'spiritualising away' of the true meaning of the Bible, has led to this. It is the means probably adopted by the Almighty to blind our eyes, until the time comes for the revelation to be made known; and so 'a nation will be born (as it were) at once.' I must tell you an anecdote to shew what extraordinary reasons men find at times for studying the Identity. I went yesterday to see a small tradesman in the neighbourhood, who is a firm believer in Our Identity, and he told me that he had been having a long conversation with a gentleman, a very High Churchman, a member of a Government office ; a clever man (he tells me), one who had been many years in India, and had travelled a good deal. He, the tradesman, turned the conversation to the Identity, and the other replied, 'I really must look into it, I am sure there must be something in it for the "Rock" abuses it so!' So he took some Identity literature with him, which he promised to read. I shall be curious to hear the result."

Digitized by Google

GERMANY'S SUNDAYS CONSIDERED IN THE LIGHT OF THE TEUTONIC THEORY OF THE REV. ROBERT DOUGLAS, M.A.

By S. Sharp.

I READ with much interest your article in the BANNER of the 29th of December on "German lack of reverence for the Lord's Day." Having resided nine years in Germany, I can fully bear witness to the national sin of Sabbath-breaking there, both among Protestants and Papists. Even among Protestants, who profess "spiritual religion," there is very great indifference about observing the sanctity of the day. With the mass of Church-goers, Sunday seems over on leaving Church, when service is generally at an end at 12 o'clock. After that preparations for amusement and pleasure are made; first, morning visits, then, after dinner, dances, card parties, drives, excursions by train; and then in the evening the opera, when the most brilliant performances are given on Sunday, and the same with the other theatres. The lower orders have their beer-gardens, where there is music and dancing, which goes on till late at night; and the noise in the streets is always worse on Sunday nights. All resorts and places of amusements have to prepare for an extra amount of labour, so that, in proportion to those who spend the day in pleasure, is the number of those who are forced to engage in extra labour; and if there is any desire for a different way of spending Sunday, it is amongst the class of people who have to spend week-day and Sunday in labour for the public. Often in speaking to these burden-bearers, when I have described to them our English way of keeping Sunday they have exclaimed, "It must be like Paradise!" The same in the shops, where I remember a shopman said he had had but one day of rest in seven years! And now, can we at all agree with Mr. Douglas in thinking that this Sabbath-breaking people can have any claim to being a part of God's people, Israel? God says in Exod. xxxi. 13, "Verily, My Sabbaths ye shall keep: for it is a sign between Me and you THROUGHOUT YOUR GENERATIONS." But in no generation at all have the German people had this sign. Again, Israel was to "undo heavy burdens" (Isa. lviii. 6), whereas, here is a people oppressed with Sunday labour. Again, Israel is to have knowledge of God's laws; but the Germans, as a nation, set aside the Old Testament Scriptures. No portion is ordered to be read in Churches. The decalogue is kept out of sight, and in neither Protestant nor Roman Catholic places of worship is it ever to be seen. Congregations are never reminded, "Remember that thou keep holy," etc. Thus God is insulted by the omission of all allusion to His own day. How, then, can this German nation have any part in Israel? Another very striking evidence against Mr. Douglas's theory is the hatred of the Germans to the Jews, whom they have so shamefully persecuted, and are ready to do so again if they can; and what an example the Jews have set them of keeping their Sabbath! Jews abroad think it impossible for a Christian to have any religion, because he keeps no Sabbaths; so that there is very little, in the way they are treated abroad, to induce a Jew to embrace Christianity. Again, we are told that in the latter days "The House of Judah shall walk to the House of Israel" (Jer. iii. 18). Now, Christians in all countries agree that we are living in these latter days. Is there any sign of the fulfilment of this prophecy? We see the Jews, not walking to, but away from Germany. In these latter days they are more than ever persecuted and hated there. Even the rabble in the streets in Germany cry out constantly, "Away with you; go back to Palestine, go back!" This does not look like a union with any portion of Israel with the Jews in Germany. The Jews, on the contrary, do walk to England and America, where they know they will meet with a fellow-feeling of sympathy and help. Therefore, the English and Americans are the House of Israel. So we have three very striking reasons for rejecting Mr. Douglas's theory that the Germans are a part of the Ten Tribes. 1st. Their neglect of, and indifference to, the due observance of the Lord's-day. 2nd. The absence of the use in Churches of the Old Testament Scriptures, and the ignoring the Ten Commandments in religious worship. The law and testimony of God not respected. 3rd. Their persistent persecution of, and hatred to, the House of Judah.

One thing more as regards Sunday abroad, which I must not be silent about in respect to Sabbath observance in Germany. I sent you in May, 1885, on my return to England from Germany, the little tract I wrote and published in Munich, 1883, before I knew of Our Identity. On its appearing it made a great stir in all parts of Germany and Switzerland, where many copies were circulated. Letters were sent to me from societies, founded from the example and pattern of our "Lord's-day Observance Society," and I was surprised to see the number of such societies in mutual union and sympathy. The Secretary of the largest of these, in Geneva, wrote and thanked me for my work, and I heard that he was greatly aided with English grants of money from our L.D. Society. Others put extracts from my "Sunday" in their religious journals, and, altogether, by the truly religious Germans, my effort was greatly blessed to individuals. A dear friend, the pastor, Dr. Schick, and a learned scholar, was delighted at my bold attempt, and said: "England's observance of the Lord's-day is the necessary model for all the nations of the earth."

Any falling off in England in this respect would entail calamitous consequences throughout Christendom. So you see the admiration of good people for our Sunday. From all parts kind expressions of sympathy with my efforts came to me——viz., from Berlin, Geneva and Baden, Leipzic, etc., and I am truly thankful, when I look back to the time when I was preparing this work, to see that I was the instrument God used to bring a blessing to many in Germany and other parts. I must acknowledge, too, the readiness of friends to undertake the translation of the tract into German, in which language it first appeared at the time the Sunday question was so ably advocated by some godly members of the Reichstag in Berlin, though with but little success, the democrats having in most things the upper hand. So it would be ungrateful of me if I ignored that a great desire for improved Sundays has arisen from the effects of "The dew on many nations."

Another anti-Douglas idea has just occurred to me. God has declared that all those who have persecuted the Jews shall suffer for it. Germany (Prussia and Bavaria), Austria, and Russia are the guilty nations; and what is preparing for them in the council of God? This. "Thus saith thy Lord, the Lord, and thy God that pleadeth the cause of His people, behold, I have taken out of thine hand the cup of trembling, even the dregs of the cup of My fury; thou shall no more drink it again. But I will put it into the hand of them that afflict thee, which have said to thy soul, bow down, that we may go over; and thou hast laid thy body as the ground, and as the street to them that went over" (Isa. li. nearly all). Now all this evil, those nations literally did to the unhappy Jews; therefore, they cannot be their brethren of the Ten Tribes! The judgment is fast coming, and then (chap. lii.), "Awake, awake, put on thy strength, O Zion, put on thy beautiful garments, O Jerusalem, the holy city."

Tunbridge-wells, January 31st, 1887.

Digitized by Google

ISRAEL'S SAVINGS.

THOSE who believe the British nation is in a bad way financially, and that there is no wealth or money to be found among the lower and middle classes should study the following, taken from "A Journal of Commerce" called "The Financial World," published in London on November 13th, 1886. The article is headed "One Hundred Millions Sterling," in regard to which the writer said:—

It may be a surprise to many of our readers to learn that by the last Saving Bank Returns the balances exceeded one hundred millions. The exact figures were:—

Banks for Saving	46,323,716	17	3
Post Office Savings' Bank	50,163,925	18	6
Stock held for depositors in—
Trustee Savings' Banks	779,875	4	3
Post Office Savings' Banks... ...	2,772,335	5	11
	£100,039,853	5	11

* * * * * * * * *

The balance-sheets of these institutions are an accurate and sensitive barometer of the condition of those who live by weekly wages. Hence it is most satisfactory to note that the Government Return, just issued for the four weeks ending the 6th of November last, shows an increase in the total sums credited to the Banks for Savings and the Post Office Savings' Bank of nearly four millions sterling, compared with the corresponding period of last year, while the amount of stock held for investors has risen by over £600,000. Increased savings may be, no doubt, in great part due to increased frugality, self-denial, and prudence. In these virtues the nation is certainly improving. But even so, there must be a good deal of work going on, when wage-earners can effect such substantial additions to their accumulations. Things, after all, are not so very bad.

There is distress, no doubt, among some of our bread-winners, for "the poor we shall always have with us;" but it is true, nevertheless, that "God giveth us power," as a nation, "to get wealth, that He may establish His covenant which He sware unto our fathers as it is this day" (Deut. viii. 18). The fact of the latent wealth of this nation, hoarded up in the savings' and other banks of the land, may be tested by any one who notes the variety of projects which from time to time are put forth by speculators seeking for the aid of investors. In times of prosperity they come out daily, and now that the dark cloud of depression seems to be passing away from our nation, we see the sign of the revival in the appearance of the prospectuses which are issuing, once more asking the public to invest their savings. The last we have ourselves received is quite an Identity in itself. It is a project, accompanied by a map, giving details of a new proposal for an International Cable Company, Limited—a British company, which wishes to construct new lines of ocean telegraph cables from the Lizard to the Azores; thence to Lisbon on the East, viâ St. Michael's; then to our great West Indian Gate, Bermudas, on to Jamaica, and to Cuba, viâ Nassau and the Bahamas on the South-west; to New York on the North-west; to Sable Island and Nova Scotia to the North, giving New York an alternative line also from Sable Island, off the coast of Nova Scotia.

The company proposes to raise a million sterling as capital in 100,000 shares of £10 each, and they present a glowing account of the probable profits they are sure (?) to realise. Then there are Indian Railways by the score, all asking for and getting British coin to spend on remunerative works on the soil of the Heathen Empire of the Empress; mining speculations dangerous, but many, all seeking to withdraw Israel's savings from the security of the banks with their modest and safe return of 2½ per cent. to the snares and pitfalls of over 5 per cent., with which they seek to entice the people who are in hot haste to get rich. "Things are not, after all, in a bad way," and we are glad to know it. We hope our pessimists, who are legion, will take some comfort from our figures, and will learn to trust the Lord their God, the God of Israel, who means, by the instrumentality of this nation, the Ten Tribes, to bring about the amelioration of the condition of the world, causing them to blossom and bud, and to fill the face of it with fruit. Wealth is needed for that result, and He gives it, we see, with no stinted hand. Distress there is, and must be among some, because we are just now passing through a period of severe crisis. But there is a good time coming, as Zech. viii. 11, 12, R.V., declares, where it says, "But now I will not be unto the remnant of this people as in the former days, saith the Lord of Hosts; for there shall be the seed of peace, the vine shall give her fruit; and the ground shall give her increase, and the heavens shall give her dew; and I will cause the remnant of this people to inherit all these things."

The Lord's purposes towards the House of Israel are purposes of mercy and enlargement, but not of scourging and punishment. He is going to bestow upon us, as a race, His pardoning mercy, when He gives us the full blessing of His new covenant mentioned in Heb. viii. 10—12, and concurrently with that He will grant us universal dominion, as promised in Dan. vii. 27, for the benefit and blessing of all the nations, families, and kindreds of the earth (Gen. xxii. 18, xxviii. 14), to the praise and glory of His grace in Christ Jesus our Lord and King.

THE ANGLO-ISRAEL FREE DISTRIBUTION FUND.

FORTIETH MONTHLY REPORT.

THE following donations and subscriptions, from Feb. 12th to March 19th, 1887, are very gratefully acknowledged:—Received by the hon. treasurer, Miss J. Lawrence: Miss H., Lymington, 10s.; H. G. (monthly subscription), 1s.; Miss K., Wandsworth, 1s. 6d.; E. L. and J. L., £2. By Miss E. M. Rush: A. C., Port Nolloth, South Africa, 10s.; J. S., Catford, 2s.; Miss L., High Wycombe, 10s. By the Secretary: D. McL., 3s.; W. T. W., 7s. 6d.; Mrs. C. B. (monthly subscription), 5s.; G. W., 1s.; H. E. T., 10s.; J. J. C., £1; Mr. Gilbert, 10s.; Mr. Tarbutt, 2s. 6d.; Mr. Peace, 2s. 6d.; Mr. Spirrit, 2s. 6d.; Mr. Glenny, 2s. 6d.; Mr. J. Mason, 2s. 6d.; Mr. Butler, 2s. 6d.; Mr. Thomas Craig, 5s.; from Auckland, New Zealand, per Mr. Thomas Craig, Miss E. P., 2s. 6d.; G. S., 9d. Total, £7 14s. 3d.

ERRATA.—In last report, line 10 from top, for "L. L., 1s.," read "L. L., £1"; and on same line omit "E. S., 9d." Total of month's receipts, therefore, £10 11s. 3d.

The Secretaries acknowledge, with many thanks, a parcel of BANNERS from H. E. T., and another from A. and E. Powels; also from proprietor of "Britain's Inheritance," 500 leaflets and 52 broadsheets.

BANNERS are forwarded weekly by the Secretary to St. John's, South Africa; to Ohio, U.S.A.; twelve monthly to Birkenhead, two to Maesteg, three to Upper Teddington, one to Wandsworth and Wimbledon Free Libraries, to Southampton, to Mechanics' Institute at Crewe, and to Richmond. The Secretary has forwarded 18 parcels of books, pamphlets, and leaflets to the undermentioned places:—

Birmingham, Manchester, Conway, Fulham, Crewe, Dundee, Sheffield, Barnsley, Hull, Warborne, Upper Teddington, Querneford, Wimbledon, Rome; Brisbane, Queensland, and Auckland, New Zealand.

By Miss E. M. Rush: Twenty-two packets of literature have been despatched to the following places—Cubitt Town, Lee, Stepney, Sidcup, Westminster, Great Yarmouth, Chatteris, Devonport, Ponsanooth, Dublin, Northroe (Shetland); Malta; Poona, Peshawur, Secunderabad (India); Rangoon; Hong-Kong; Barbadoes; and to H.M.S. Orion. Small packets of "A Call for Prayer and Praise," with a few leaflets, have been sent to correspondents in various places; and 124 BANNERS have been sent out weekly, with 12 in addition fortnightly.

The Annual Report of the Free Distribution Fund, for 1886, is now printed, and will be forwarded to those friends wishing for a copy on application to either of the Secretaries. Copies are sent to those subscribers whose addresses are available.

We have received much cheering intelligence as to the efforts and results of various "sowers." One writes from Bingley: "I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your 'Chronological Tree,' for which please accept my best thanks. I will put it in some conspicuous place, where I hope it will do some good. I am also expecting to have a young men's class to teach once a week on the subject of Israel in Britain. I have roused some interest on this question by a discussion which I opened and maintained before a large number of teachers and scholars of the various Sunday-schools. I am sowing the good seed on every opportunity. I pray God will prosper the work of our hands."

Digitized by Google

From one at Hull, who is also engaged in a mission to sailors, and in the dissemination of the Scriptures and sound Protestant magazines, writes: "I have been waiting, expecting to have another supply of literature. I have also to inform you that in the good providence of God I now have charge of the Young Men's Bible Class, which meets in the church vestry every Sunday afternoon. Our next lesson is Luke xvii., when I purpose reading the Rev. R. Douglas' paper on 'England's Future.' I have referred to the subject of Israel on several occasions, and find them greatly interested. If you can supply me with another parcel I shall feel extremely obliged, and promise you it shall be carefully distributed."

At Eastbourne, our friends there are holding drawing-room meetings once a month for discussing Israel in Britain. The Secretary sends some selected leaflets and tracts for distributing amongst the company. This plan should, when feasible, be adopted in different places, and invitations issued to the inhabitants. Gatherings of this kind are extremely helpful in extending the movement. The Secretaries will always be happy to aid our friends with suitable literature.

We have to report that on the 28th of February the first conversazione was held in Rome, when the Rev. A. Ben Oliel read an interesting paper entitled, "Where and who are the Israelites?" before an appreciative audience. Afterwards a discussion was opened by the Rev. Dr. Gray. On the table were placed a number of leaflets supplied by the Free Distribution Fund, which were taken away by those present. The Rev. Ben Oliel writes, as regards this his "first very imperfect effort to spread abroad a grand and glorious truth, the bearings and ultimate outcome of which no human ken can forecast," continues: "As a mere novice, still feeling the need of deeper study and research, and speaking to those who either know nothing of the theory, are indifferent, or opposed from presumed higher spiritual insight, I deem it imperative to proceed cautiously, and advance nothing that does not admit of clear and conclusive demonstration." The next meeting is fixed for March 28th, when the rev. gentleman will probably read a paper entitled, "A Company of Nations." These meetings in Rome mark an important advance of this most wonderful movement in modern times, for in the "seven-hilled city" itself is now heard the proclamation of the "Resurrection of Israel!"

CHARLES HORNER, Secretary.

Contributions to the Fund will be thankfully received and acknowledged by the Hon. Treasurer, Miss J. Lawrence, Rosslyn, Hampton-road, Upper Teddington, Middlesex; by the Hon. Secretary, Miss E. M. Rush, 103, Burnt Ashroad, Lee, London; or to Mr. Charles Horner, 34, Sheen-park, Richmond-on-Thames. Grants of literature will be made, as far as funds allow, on application to the Secretary, or Miss E. M. Rush.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

DURING the past month evidences have not been wanting to show that God is blessing His own work through the agencies of this organisation, as intimated in our last monthly report. We have entered into possession of our new premises, 14. King William-street, Charing-cross, W.C.; and all who have called to see the society's new home have expressed their pleasure in terms of warm approval at the prospect of great success which must attend the future efforts of this Association. While having our time greatly occupied in removing from one place to the other, we have not neglected the outside work of the Association. In God's good mercy we have been privileged to accomplish the following:—

LECTURES.—Three in the Congregational Church, Robert-street, Grosvenor-square, W. Two in the Baptist Chapel, St. Peter's-park, W. One at each of the following places in the provinces:—Bath, Bristol, Paignton, Dawlish. Three at Burnham, Somers TWELVE in all.

FREE DISTRIBUTION OF LITERATURE.—Three thousand pamphlets and magazines have been sent out to Crewe, Corwen, North Wales, and to 400 men, the crews of 36 light-ships, extending from the Humber to Penzance.

FURNISHING FUND.—Towards this fund we have received the following donations:—Rev. S. M. S., £1; J. S. Anderson, Esq., 10s. 6d.; J. G. Taylor, Esq., 10s.; Mrs. Bailey, 10s.; K. E, Wandsworth, 2s. 6d.; Miss Babington, 5s.; Mrs. Hepenstal, 5s.; Miss Deane, 5s.; Frank Collins, Esq., 5s. Amount previously acknowledged, £3 11s. Total—£7 3s. For which we tender our grateful thanks. Will friends kindly help us to obtain the £60 needed to provide them with an "Identity Home" in London worthy the cause they have so much at heart.

MEMBERS' SUBSCRIPTIONS.—During the past month the following subscriptions have been received:—Receipt, No. 1966, 10s. 6d.; 1967, 2s. 6d.; 1968, 2s. 6d.; 1969, 2s. 6d.; 1970, 5s.; 1971, £1 1s.; 1972, £5; 1973, 5s.; 1974, 5s.; 1975, 2s. 6d.; 1976, £5; 1977, £2; 1978, 10s.; 1979, 2s. 6d.; 1980, 2s. 6d.; 1981, 10s.; 1982, £1; 1983, 10s. 6d.; 1984, 10s. 6d.; 1985, 10s.; 1986, 5s.; 1987, 2s. 6d.; 1988, £1 1s.; 1989, 5s.; 1990, 5s.; 1991, 10s.; 1992, 10s. 6d.; 1993, £1; 1994, 2s. 6d.; 1995, 2s. 6d.; 1996, 10s.; 1997, 5s.; 1998, 5s.; 1999, 5s.; 2000, 10s.

DONATIONS OF BOOKS for the library will be very acceptable. Already we have received the following:—Fifteen volumes from Rowland Mackworth, Esq.; 2 volumes from Mr. J. S. Lowe. These are valuable additions in history, travels, &c. Many friends may have books they have done with, or can well spare. Will they kindly send them on to swell the number of those in the Library of the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association.

The Council confidently rely upon the help of Identity believers everywhere to sustain them in their efforts to enlarge the sphere of the Association's operation, by sending in donations as JUBILEE OFFERINGS in aid of the special fund for furnishing the new offices, as well as for the general purposes of the society. We are needing some £50 more to enable us to open the new premises free of debt; while our general expenses are largely increased by the acquisition of a centre of work worthy the high aim and noble object for which this Association exists.

The Council have only to point out to all believers in the "Israelitish origin of the British people," the many advantages members now enjoy by connecting themselves with the Metropolitan Association, to secure for it a large increase in the numbers and amount of annual subscriptions.

The Council further take this opportunity of stating that donations and subscriptions WILL ONLY BENEFIT THE METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION when sent DIRECT TO THE OFFICES—14, KING WILLIAM-STREET, CHARING-CROSS, LONDON, W.C.

JAMES BILLINGTON, Secretary.

ISRAEL'S SCRIPTURE AND PRAYER UNION.

DURING the past month two new cards of membership have been sent out; the number issued is 1,423.

The donation of 1s. from E. K., Wandsworth, towards the expenses of the Union is thankfully acknowledged. A short article headed, "A Call for Prayer and Praise," by Philo-Israel, which appeared in the BANNER a few weeks ago, has been printed separately, copies of which will be gladly supplied to members on application to Miss Sibbald.

For the convenience of those members who wish to continue the daily reading, the following list of chapters for April are printed:—

1st ...	Psalm lv.	11th ...	Psa. lxv.	21st ...	Psa. lxxv.
2nd ...	„ lvi.	12th ...	„ lxvi.	22nd ...	„ lxxvi.
3rd ...	„ lvii.	13th ...	„ lxvii.	23rd ...	„ lxxvii.
4th ...	„ lviii.	14th ...	„ lxviii.	24th ...	„ lxxviii.
5th ...	„ lxix.	15th ...	„ lxix.	25th ...	„ lxxix.
6th ...	„ lx.	16th ...	„ lxx.	26th ...	„ lxxx.
7th ...	„ lxi.	17th ...	„ lxxi.	27th ...	„ lxxxi.
8th ...	„ lxii.	18th ...	„ lxxii.	28th ...	„ lxxxii.
9th ...	„ lxiii.	19th ...	„ lxxiii.	29th ...	„ lxxxiii.
10th ...	„ lxiv.	20th ...	„ lxxiv.	30th ...	„ lxxxiv.

Digitized by Google

The card of membership will be sent on receipt of three stamps.

The first and second series of Monthly Comments on the whole Bible, by Philo-Israel, may now be obtained in volume form. Price in paper cover 1s. 2d. each, post free; in cloth 2s. each, post free.

The "Prayers for Daily Use," being a prayer for each day of the week, by Philo-Israel, are 1d., or 9d. per dozen, postage extra.

The prayer of the Union, as on the Card of Membership, may now be obtained printed in larger type, price 1d. for three copies, post free; or 1s. per 100 for distribution. Address: Miss E. Sibbald, 3, Townshend-villas, Richmond, Surrey.

ABOUT CONSTANTINOPLE.

FORWARDED BY C. E. P.

THE following is an extract from "Ivan at Home," or Pictures of Russian life, by Herbert Barry, Author of "Russia in 1870," &c., &c. (p. 283, chap. 42):—

"CONSTANTINOPLE AND SAINT SOPHIA.

"I am not going to horrify my readers with a disquisition upon politics as they might fancy from the title of this sketch. I have always believed that Russia must one day have Constantinople, leaving alone all questions such as the gathering together of the Slav family with the Czar of Russia as their head—the rights of race—fighting for the independence of people, &c.—which eighty per cent. of the population neither understand nor care about; the universal feeling among all the Russian people who know that there is such a place as Constantinople is, that the place belongs to Russia, and that one day they must have it.

"To illustrate this feeling, I cannot do better than relate the following anecdote, told me by one of the parties mentioned in it:—

"'One of the largest and richest merchants in the Empire, a man who counts his fortune by millions, had two sons, to whom he wanted to give the advantage of travel; he secured the services of a distinguished Professor of the University of Kazan, and giving him an unlimited credit, sent his sons abroad under his care to visit the world. Two years of travel over, they returned, and the Professor presented to the father two polished young gentlemen. 'Well,' said the father, addressing the Professor, 'where have you been—to Constantinople?' 'No.' 'To America?' 'Yes.' 'Have you seen the President?' 'Yes.' 'Seen the Pyramids?' 'No.' 'Well, I am not astonished,' replied the father, 'that you have not seen the Pyramids, but I cannot understand why you have not shown my sons our Saint Sophia.'"

PROGRESS AMONG SOLDIERS IN EGYPT.

WE have received the following encouraging report of Identity progress among our British soldiers in Egypt from Mr. R. F. Banks, the publisher of the BANNER OF ISRAEL, and we are sure it will be deemed interesting by the bulk of our readers. He wrote thus:—

"A gentleman called on me this morning and said that on Saturday evening he received a visit from a young Scotch soldier who had just returned from Egypt. He found the soldier a most ardent Anglo-Israelite, who said that the subject was much taken up by the soldiers, and frequently discussed in the barracks and in the camp—many of the soldiers being greatly interested, and some of them very firm believers in Our Identity. I mention this as a little more evidence of steady progress."

JUBILEE LECTURE.—On Monday evening, March 7th, Mr. W. H. Mason delivered an interesting lecture in the front Committee-room of the Montgomery Hall, Sheffield, to a large and appreciative audience, the chair being occupied by Charles Wardlow, Esq., the president of the Association. The subject treated was, "Queen Victoria, David's heir, sits upon the throne of the Lord over Israel" (1 Chron. xxix. 23). The several matters embraced were brought forward and dealt with in a lucid and forcible manner, and the evidences adduced of connection between the family of Zedekiah, the last king who reigned in Judah, and our beloved Queen. This was shown to have been the special work of Jeremiah the prophet, in accordance with the divine purpose, to maintain the unconditional covenant with David. A cordial vote of thanks was passed.

Review.

A Chronological and Geographical Tree, showing the Development of the British Power, and the affinity of the British Nation with the Ten Lost Tribes of Israel. Price 8d. Robert Banks and Son.

WE have an old friend here with a new face, and under a new and improved edition. The work was originally brought out by Mr. A. C. Bell in 1881, has been corrected by him up to 1886, and can be had for the small sum of eightpence, being a marvel of cheapness; or can be had mounted on linen, and varnished, for two shillings. The design of the Map, or Tree, is to give in chronological order the dates of the acquisition of the various British Gates and possessions as we have and hold them to-day, the same being under the quaint but effective device of a big tree with numbers of branches and leaves, the leaves representing the parts of the Empire named thereon, with dates. The geography of the Empire is indicated by the leaves being right or left of the trunk of the tree, as they lie East or West of Greenwich respectively. We have only a few criticisms to offer in reference to the entries we find on the Tree. For instance, the Tree indicates only the severance of the British Colonies to form the American Republic in 1776; but does not tell us that in 1585, 1620, and 1664 British settlers in North Carolina, in Massachusetts, and New York respectively, laid the foundations of Manasseh's dominions, and fulfilled the prophecies which said that Israel's expansion should and would be West first (Gen. xxviii. 14). We were doubtful, too, whether Surat was really the first position occupied by the British in 1611, being inclined to believe no settlement was made there till later. We know the French essayed to occupy it in the seventeenth century, but failed. In fact, till 1639, when the British built their first fortress at Madras, they had no Gate in India, properly so-called, but only held certain insecure factories, or commercial houses, which they occupied at the mercy of the natives. Such was Dugarajapatam, North of Madras, and probably Surat was the site, early of some such commercial house or temporary residence. On the whole the Tree is a very valuable help to the eye and to the mind, enabling one to grasp the wonderful fact of our possessions in India, with the rest of the Empire, also the mode of its acquisition. The Chart, or Tree, is divided into parallel lines indicating dates, ranging from 1600 to 1890. The Tree tells us at a glance that the great mass or majority of our Indian and other territories and Gates was given to us as the Imperial race between the years 1770 and the present time. The largest proportion by far clearly date quite recently, between 1840 and 1886. We propose to give a general sketch, quoted from the Tree, showing when our various possessions, constituting the greatest Empire the world ever saw, fell to our nation's keeping:—

Before A.D. 1600—The Channel Islands, the Isle of Man, and Gambia.

Between 1600 and 1700—Bermudas, Madras, Bombay, Calcutta, St. Helena, Jamaica, and the Virgin Islands.

Between 1700 and 1800—East of Greenwich—Gibraltar, New South Wales and Australasia, Penang, Malacca; (West) Quebec, New Brunswick, Ontario, Newfoundland, Grenada, B. Honduras, the Bahamas, Trinidad, Sierra Leone, Falkland Islands, South Georgia.

Between 1800 and 1886 the acquisitions are so numerous that we cannot venture to give full details. Suffice it to say they include New Zealand, Australia and Tasmania. Singapore, British Burmah, Assam, Hong-Kong and the Fijis, Oude, the N.W. Provinces, the Punjab, Perim Socotra, Cyprus, Aden, the Mauritius, Malta; all to the East. To the West—Heligoland, the Cape Colonies, Ascension, Bechuanaland, Tembu Land, Frigo Land, Basoutoland, Pondoland, British Guinea, the Windward Islands, the Leeward Islands, Manitoba, British Columbia, Prince Edward's Island, Vancouver's Island.

The "Tree" is enriched by information, which appears in an inset column, respecting the area of the countries comprising the British Empire, and their respective populations. Thus it appears that the area of Great Britain and Ireland is only 121,115 square miles, while that of the outlying beyond-sea Empire is 8,870,139 square miles. The population of the United Kingdom was 36,400,000 in 1886; that of the rest of the Empire, 279,485,000. The motto of the Tree is, "Seek and ye shall find," alluding, we suppose, to Lost Israel, and the certainty of finding her in the British Empire and people. When we add that the leading Identifications of the British people with Israel are given on the marginal columns of this Tree Chart, and that each point is supported by a profusion of texts, also that there is some ethnological information in the work pointing to our origin, we have said enough to recommend Mr. Bell's Tree as an excellent production, and worthy of a place in every Anglo-Israelite's library.

Digitized by Google

Correspondence.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—I rejoice to see you have civilly told the Rev. J. Wilkinson, in BANNER, No. 533, that he is propagating a falsehood concerning believers in the Identity. I should like to ask him a few questions, though with small hope he will read, much less answer them.

The first is, does he consider that all Identity believers are unconverted? If he does not, he contradicts himself, as none could entertain the un-Scriptural and un-Christian doctrine he imputes by implication to the holders of our belief, if they be be real converted persons. We would call upon Mr. Wilkinson to state distinctly if in his opinion we are all unconverted. If the facts be otherwise, and any of us are really converted, how can we deny the necessity of conversion, which would at once prove we have not experienced it?

"Of two things, one." Either we are all unconverted, or, if this be not so, then Identity does not destroy the belief in the necessity of the new birth.

The second question I would ask Mr. Wilkinson is, which would appear to an unprejudiced person to be the truest converted person? He who declares so long as he knows his salvation is secure through trust in the atonement of our Lord he does not care a rap if he is the descendant of Abraham, the friend of God, or not; or he whose heart dwells with joyful love, believing he is by birth of the chosen, elect people of God, called in Scripture His firstborn, and whom He favoured beyond all the other nations of the earth?

If the former be a converted person, yet I venture to think there is yet something lacking in him of sanctified love for the God of Israel.

Again I would ask, who shows the firmest faith and most glorifies God? The one who says he believes the New Testament promises, though they have swallowed up and destroyed those of the Old Testament, and caused them to be valueless; who declares they are broken, scattered to the winds, and not meant now to be understood literally; or, on the other side, he who declares God's words are words of truth, that His purposes are unchangeable, that His promises are to be taken in the fullest and most literal sense, and that what He covenanted to bestow on the seed of His friend shall never be taken from them and bestowed on another people.

Doubtless there may be believers in Our Identity who are unconverted. Alas! how many of those who do not share our belief are equally so?

Yours faithfully, L. P.

March, 1887.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR PHILO-ISRAEL,—I have just made arrangements to supply an excellent News-room in the Strand (No. 402) with the BANNER, and they will circulate the Messenger. The News-rooms are the very thing I have long wished for. The charge is 2d. for as long a read as you wish to take. You get all the British, colonial, and continental papers, besides the leading periodicals, and also the Jewish papers. I consider, from the flow of visitors, that it is just our opportunity of spreading our glorious truth, and I hope our people will visit the rooms and ask for the Anglo-Israel papers, in order to show what I have explained to the manager, that we number many thousands, and are a reading and progressive people. He will then, perhaps, accept also Israel's Hope and Destiny. I much wished it, but as yet he has accepted no religious periodical. Please back me up in this effort.

Yours earnestly in the cause,

R. MACKWORTH.

118, Great Portland-street, London, W.,
6th March, 1887.

"THE PEOPLE SHALL NOT BE RECKONED AMONG THE NATIONS" (NUMB. XXIII. 9).

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

SIR,—Before coming to New Zealand, I lived for many years in France, in the influential and almost cosmopolitan city of Bordeaux. Stately Bordeaux, as she has been called, is particularly interesting to an English resident, as having once been held by the English, and the magnificent tower and church of St. Michael, and also part of the still more beautiful cathedral, with its exquisite tracery, dedicated to St. Andrew, are fitting monuments of Israel's sway. Although ignorant at that time of Our Identity, yet I could not help noticing how different we English were to the other nationalities with which I came in contact, more especially as regards the Sunday. Friends would scarcely take a refusal on my part to join in their festivities, such as dances, going to concerts, to the races, &c., on that day. Yet many were earnest Protestant Christians, and all were religious. They would ask. "Do you think we are so wicked, then, more than vous autres?" "No," was the answer, "it may not be wrong in you, because you have not been brought up in these ideas; but I am English, and though I would join with you most willingly on any other day, it would be wrong in me on a Sunday."

Later on my attention was drawn to the Israelitish question, and I read a few BANNERS. Still I could only half believe it, thinking it too good to be true. Therefore, any proof I found out for myself came with double force; and in reference to the above-quoted text (of which I have never yet seen a reasonable explanation), I cannot but feel that the following must be the true one. As Bordeaux is a maritime and commercial city, statistics relating to such matters were often in the papers, and I was struck with the way in which such articles were written. If they wished to compare France with other countries, or to arrive at the highest statistics for any country, either about the comparative wealth, commerce, marine, or population, &c., all the nations of Europe were compared with one another, Britain being left out; and of course France was often at the top of the list, and then some such remark as the following would be made: "Naturally we do not count or reckon Great Britain and the United States, whose numbers are such and such," giving them separately, and making no comparison between the two lists; so that the verb used by Balaam is an inspired word. Israel is, literally, "not reckoned," not counted up with, or among, the nations. They may compare themselves with themselves, but Israel is so great, so multitudinous in comparison to them, that they dare not reckon her among themselves, nor compare themselves with her, so far is she above them. Verily, "this people shall dwell alone, and shall not be reckoned among the nations."

Believe me, Yours truly,

Bay of Islands, New Zealand, 1887. PAULINUS.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—The Rev. Henry Roe is not the only believer in the Identity amongst the Primitive Methodist ministers. The Rev. A. Kirkland has been a believer many years. The Rev. T. Inman said to me, "I have not read much of the Identity question, but I believe there is more in proof of its truthfulness than can be found against it." Once I was the only believer in the Identity amongst the Wesleyans at Nut-grove, now near all the members are believers in it. Some time ago Mr. Bainer, of Liverpool, gave us a lecture on the subject. Our Wesleyan minister, the Rev. T. Baine, of St. Helens, presided. The chairman, in his remarks, said he had been a believer in the Identity many years, and had spoken to a great number of people in reference to it: he found not many believed in it, because, said he, they have read little on the subject, as the proof of its truthfulness cannot be refuted.

I have taken the BANNER every week for about eight years: since that time many people in St. Helens and district believe in the Identity, yet we all appear to be neutral, and say little except in our own district. Go on, brethren, ministers of the Gospel, and all people will shortly believe in it. I am, faithfully yours,

WILLIAM HOPTON.

P.S.—I gave the first lecture on the Identity question in St. Helens. I met with much opposition from the Primitive Methodist minister, which was the cause of my resigning membership from that body of worshippers. However, I expect to see shortly many ministers of that body converted to the Identity belief, and then they will preach it everywhere.—W. H.

Digitized by Google

NOTICES.

All communications intended for the Editor, to be addressed: — "Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Clifton, Bristol.

SUBSCRIPTIONS	£ s. d.
Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free	0 7 6
Two Copies (including Double Numbers)	0 13 6
Three Copies " " " "	1 0 4
Four Copies " " " "	1 5 6
Six Copies " " " "	1 16 4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-grand, London, to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C., or F. W. PARRY & Co., 29, Paternoster-row, London.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

Contents Bills and Show Cards may be obtained on application to the Publishers.

Advertisements should be sent to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

Prepaid Advertisements are inserted at the rate of 30 words for 1s. 4d.

ANGLO-ISRAEL FREE DISTRIBUTION FUND. Donations will be gratefully received and acknowledged by the Treasurer, Miss Lawrence, Rosslyn, Hampton-road, Upper Teddington; by the Hon. Sec., Miss E. M. Rush, 103, Burnt Ash-road, Lee, London, S.E.; by the Secretary, C. Horner, Esq., 34, Sheen Park, Richmond, Surrey; or by the Hon. Local Secretaries, Mr. John May, 26, Piazzi Miratore, Floriana, Malta; E. C. Baxter, Esq., Vryburgh, Bechuanaland, S. Africa; and E. L. Dwyer, Esq. Sand Hill, Launceston, Tasmania.

Price 3d., post free 3½d.

PRESENT-DAY PROBLEMS,

How Anglo-Israel Truth Explains and Solves Them.

BY V. M. COX.

Author of Ephraim-Israel, the Pivot Nation of Prophecy and History

"A book to read is 'Present-Day Problems: How Anglo-Israel Truth Explains and Solves Them.' By V. M. Cox. This little book is an excellent summary of the clearance effected in the great burning questions of the time, the moment it is understood that the Anglo-Saxon folk is the very Israel of God. Federation of the Empire, the Irish question, the Eastern question, our relation to Russia, our hold on Egypt, submitted to this solvent, become parts of one intelligible scheme. The paragraphs on Foreign Missions, as the special work of Israel, and on our relation to our fellows of the Tribe of Judah, are especially good.—The Messenger.

NEW VOLUME JUST COMMENCED.

Price 6d., by post 7d.; Annual Subscription. 2s. 6d., post free.

THE APRIL QUARTERLY PART

OF

ISRAEL'S HOPE & DESTINY

CONTENTS:

The Jubilee Year. By Hecla.—Literary Culture Among the Ancient British. By J. Thomson.—The Time of Jacob's Trouble. By Sur.-Gen. J. M. Grant, M.D.—The Sovereignty of God as Seen in the Light of Anglo-Israelism. By Mrs. G. Albert Rogers.—Jezreel. By Rev. Hebert Marriott, M.A.—Gog's Attempted Invasion Against Israel—Does it Take Place in India or Palestine? Being John T. Crosthwait's Reply to A. MacPhail's Objections.—Is the Conversion of the Jews at the Present Time Scriptural? By George Dimbleby.—The Woman Arrayed with the Sun (Rev. xii., R.V.). By J. C. H. M.—The Sifting and Consolidation of Israel. By W. S. Cavill.—The Mystery of the Prophetic Dates Unsealed. By A. MacPhail.—The Unscripturalness of the Present Scripture Teaching.

London: ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.; F. W. PARRY (late Guest, Hayworth & Co.), 29, Paternoster-row.

THE TEETH, THE TEETH, THOSE PRECIOUS TEETH!

Save, Purify, Beautify.

GEORGE & WELCH'S

CARBOLINE

1/6 (TOOTH PASTE). 2/6 per Pot

Is the Best Known

Cleanser, Preserver, and Deodoriser.

Dental Guide says:—"No Tooth application equals the Carbolics."

Proprietors: GEORGE & WELCH, Worcester.

Through Chemists, or Post Free from Makers.

A New Work on the Identity of Lost Israel By BISHOP TITCOMB.

Now ready, in Cloth Gilt, Bevelled Boards, Imperial 8vo. Price 3s.; sent Post Free for Postal Order or Stamps.

A MESSAGE TO THE CHURCH FROM THE NINETEENTH CENTURY,

BY THE

RT. REV. BISHOP TITCOMB, D.D.

London:

ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-st.

(See advertisement enclosed in this number).

Published by ROBERT BANKS & SON,

RACQUET COURT, FLEET STREET, E.C.

Postal Orders may be obtained at any Post Office in the United Kingdom for the following amounts: 1s., 1s. 6d., ½d. each; 2s., 2s. 6d., 3s., 3s 6d., 4s., 4s. 6d., 5s., 7s. 6d., 10s., 10s. 6d., 1d. each: 15s., 20s., 1½d. each. They should be "crossed" City Bank, Ludgate Hill, E.C. Stamps received.

JEHOVAH TRIUMPHANT. The New and Complete Theology and Electric Light of the Bible, containing the History of British-Israel, Compiled from the Sacred Scriptures. Cloth gilt, price 10s. 6d., post free for Postal Order or Cheque.

THE GEOGRAPHY OF THE GATES. By PHILO-ISRAEL. With Map, and six full page, and one double-page, Illustrations, printed on plate paper. 208 pages, in handsome cloth, gilt. Price 3s. 6d.; post free.

THE WORD: THE WORLD: THE BRANCH. By J. LEYLAND FIELDEN, Esq. Price 12s., post free.

EPHRAIM-ENGLAND. The Nineteenth Century Revelation of the Fruits of History. By Rev. R. DOUGLAS, Vicar of Kidsgrove. Cloth gilt, lettered, 4s., gilt edges 5s., free by post.

FIFTY REASONS WHY THE ANGLO-SAXONS ARE ISRAELITES of the Lost Tribes of the House of Israel. By Rev. W. H. POOLE, D.D. Price 6d., post free 7d.

BIBLE LESSONS AND REFLECTIONS. By the late ROBERT GAIRDNER, of Kilmarnock, N.B. Price 2s. 6d., by post 2s. 9d.; cheap edition, limp cloth, 1s., by post, 1s. 2d.

PRESENT-DAY PROBLEMS, and How Anglo-Israel Truth Explains and Solves Them. By V. M. COX. 3d., by post 4 stamps.

LIGHT SHED BY THE GREAT PYRAMID OF EGYPT on the Last Days of this Dispensation, from A.D. 1814 to A.D. 1922. By JAMES KEITH. Price 4d., by post 5 stamps.

NEW TESTAMENT TRUTH on the Anglo-Israel Controversy. By J. G. TAYLOR. Price 3d., by post 4 stamps.

A NEW LIGHT. An Elementary Pamphlet for General Distribution. By A E I. Price 2d., by post 2½d. in stamps.

EPHRAIM-ISRAEL, the Pivot Nation of Prophecy and History. By V. M. COX. Price 1d., one dozen free for 1s.

AMMI; OR, THE CHOSEN PEOPLE. By Miss BIRD. Tracing the Descent of the British People from Abraham, as "friend of God," and showing that true science, history, philology, and ethnology, are on the side of the Identity of the Anglo-Saxon Race with the Ten Lost Tribes. Price 2d, post free 2½d.; 12s. 6d. per 100 for distribution.

IS NOT QUEEN VICTORIA the Royal Seed to King David's Throne, and Are Not Her Subjects, the British People, the Ten Lost Tribes? By W. HOPTON. Price 2d.; 12s. 6d. per 100.

A Complete Catalogue Free on Application.

THE JUBILEE NOTE-PAPER, 1887.

A HIGH-CLASS CREAM-LAID NOTE-PAPER, each sheet bearing a watermark device The Portrait of Her Majesty Queen Victoria, in a wreath of Rose, Shamrock, and Thistle, and designs symbolic of the Colonies and India. Can be had glazed or unglazed surface. Price 1s. 6d. per packet of five quires; by post 1s. 10½d. Can be had with address neatly printed for 3s., by post 3s. 4½d.—Robert Banks and Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

EDWARD B. SPENCE,

Nurseryman, Seedsman & Florist

18, VICTORIA RD., DARLINGTON,

(ESTABLISHED 1796),

Will be glad to send to the Readers of The Banner of Israel, Seeds, Plants, and Fruit Trees.

CATALOGUE FREE ON APPLICATION.

NERVOUS EXHAUSTION

PULVERMACHER'S WORLD-FAMED GALVANIC BELTS, for the cure of Nervous Diseases, have received Testimonials from three Physicians to Her Majesty the Queen, and over Forty Members of the Royal College of Physicians, London.

The distressing symptoms of Nervous Exhaustion and Debility are speedily removed by means of PULVERMACHER'S world-famed Galvanic Belts, which are so arranged as to convey a powerful electric current direct to the affected parts, gradually stimulating and strengthening all the nerves and muscles, and speedily arresting all symptoms of waste and decay.

Dr. VINES, Fellow of the Royal College of Physicians, writes, 19th September, 1885: "Having used Mr. Pulvermacher's Belts for many years, in the course of medical practice, I am in a position to speak of their great value as a curative agent in cases of nervous disease or functional malady where Electricity is likely to be serviceable. I am entirely convinced of their efficacy."

Dr. C. HANDFIELD JONES, F.R.C.P., F.R.S., Physicians to St. Mary's Hospital, says: "I am satisfied that Mr. Pulvermacher is an honest and earnest labourer in the field of science, and I think he deserves to meet with every encouragement from the profession and scientific men."

Dr. GOLDING BIRD, M.D., Physician, Guy's Hospital says: "I can hardly recommend Mr. Pulvermacher's invention too strongly to the notice of my medical brethren."

For full Price List and Particulars see New Pamphlet "Galvanism, Nature's Chief Restorer of Impaired Vital Energy." Post free from

Pulvermacher's Galvanic Establishment,

194, REGENT STREET, LONDON, W.

Price 2s. 6d., Cheap Edition, 1/-

BIBLE LESSONS & REFLECTIONS.

By ROBERT GAIRDNER, of Kilmarnock, N.B.

"Mr. Gairdner has given us in his book a series of Bible lessons, with his own reflections added thereto, and though he has been very cautious in the latter, and has not committed himself too broadly, he has plainly let it be seen that he is an Anglo-Israelite by conviction, and that the Scriptures which he quotes at length and extensively throughout his book, are meant to teach Our Identity and God's faithfulness, from first to last, to His promises to Abraham and His seed for ever."—Banner of Israel.

ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-st.

A BOON TO SUFFERERS!!

HARNESS' ELECTROPATHIC BELT CURES Gout, Rheumatism, Lumbago, Sciatica, Epilepsy, Indigestion, Constipation, Liver and Kidney Complaints, Ladies' Ailments, Nervousness, Neuralgia, General and Local Debility, etc.

HARNESS' ELECTROPATHIC BELT

NEVER FAILS to promote HEALTH, STRENGTH, AND VITAL ENERGY; therefore it will pay you to procure one without delay.

NERVOUSNESS CURED.

Every man and woman suffering from any disorder of the Nerves, Stomach, Liver, or Kidneys, should at once stop physicing, and send a P.O.O. or cheque for 21s. for HARNESS' ELECTROPATHIC BELT (post free) and obtain immediate relief. Pamphlet and Book of Testimonials post free. THE MEDICAL BATTERY CO. (LTD.),

52, OXFORD STREET, London, W.

(CORNER OF BATHBONE PLACE.)

ETHELINE

A New and most effective Remedy for CORNS.—Perfectly safe and harmless. Is very easily applied. Cures in a few applications, without the slightest pain. Everyone troubled with either Corns, Warts, or Bunions, will find relief by using ETHELINE.

To be obtained of all Chemists, or post free for 14 stamps from J. LLEWELLYN, CHEMIST, COWBRIDGE

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. F. W. PARRY (late GUEST & Co.), 29, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, APRIL 6, 1887. [All rights reserved.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."

(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. XI., No. 537. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, APRIL 13, 1887. [PRICE ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
The Selfish Reason why Israel Must Hold India	149
The Christian Dispensation and Israel's True Place Therein. By W. S. Cavill. Part I.	150
Jacob's Trouble	152
The Late Right Rev. Jonathan Holt Titcomb, D.D.	153
Historical Coincidences. By E. Reep.—Part II.	153
The Offer of the Gospel and of Salvation Through Christ to the Jews	154
Correspondence	155

THE SELFISH REASON WHY ISRAEL MUST HOLD INDIA.

THOSE who know nothing of Our Identity, and care less than nothing, if that be possibe, for it, are obliged to be bribed by earthly and pecuniary motives for retaining India. If we tell them that God's gift to His people Israel—therefore to the British—is the Heathen Empire, and that that mighty gift is declared by the Lord Himself, in Psa. cxi. 6, to be the evidence of the power of His works, they fail to see or understand the force of that argument. We assure them that having the Gospel ourselves, God means us to communicate it to the nations at large, and to the heathen of India and of the East in particular, and that thereupon we are bound to hold our glorious Empire in Hindostan in order to carry out God's gracious purposes as declared in His Holy Word. But men fail to comprehend the meaning or cogency of our statements, and insist that we ought to give up those costly Indian dominions, as they are sure they do not "pay." To such as these the pecuniary advantages we derive from holding those Eastern lands may properly be exhibited, and accordingly, Sir Richard Temple has just been giving a lecture on "India and the Working Classes," under the auspices of the North-west Ham Conservative Association, at the Town Hall, Stratford, wherein he showed, by a mass of statistics and by arguments founded thereon, that India was our best commercial customer, and had become, in fact, absolutely indispensable to our manufacturers, and commercial as well as working classes. The address was delivered on Saturday, February 26th, under the presidency of Mr. Forrest Fulton, M.P. The value of Sir Richard Temple's lecture is this, that when he speaks of the enormous "market" India presents to our manufactures, he points to the still greater markets of China which lie beyond it, and are ready to be opened by British enterprise and commercial activity. His address was reported as follows:—

Sir Richard Temple said that India offered to the people of England the second greatest market in the world. China occupied the premier position in this matter, and if he were asked why India only came second he would point out that that country had a population of 250,000,000 as against 300,000,000 in China. There were two grand trunk systems of railway, each of which would tend to extend British influence in China, and when by means of railways the Chinese were connected with the Indian market there would be opened out a boundless vista of progress for British enterprise. India was 15 times larger than Great Britain, and its population was increasing by about a million every year. Its cultivation was also spreading, and its agriculture expanding. Wages and the price of commodities had doubled within a generation. Houses and implements had improved during the last 20 years, and the country drove a great foreign trade and had a large accumulated capital. They exported grain for food in millions of tons, and it was noteworthy that if famine came on them, by their stocks of grain they were able to sustain life for several weeks or even months before the pinch came. Sir Richard Temple then quoted figures showing the export and import trades of England and India. Of the total exports of India England imported one-tenth, and of our total exports India imported one-fifth. Clearly, therefore, India was one of our best customers in the world. But still there were articles which could be sent to the East, and it was to impress this fact on the British working man that he was giving that address. We had a great country and a grand market, of which nothing could deprive us. India was a better customer than France or Germany, a better customer than the United States, better even than the Colonies, and he was happy to say that the next best customer after India was Australia. We might lose all the foreign markets, the Continent of Europe might close its ports to our goods, the United States might cripple our trade by import duties and prohibitory tariffs, and the colonies might do the same, but with all this we should still have the grandest customer which such a vast population afforded. So long as we had command of the seas, so long as Britannia ruled the waves, the 40 millions of the most skilful people on the earth had 250 millions who would take their produce and furnish a market. As an industrial people we must maintain our foreign markets. India now imported £65,000,000 sterling, and of this she took £50,000,000 from us, £3,000,000 from Europe, and the remaining £12,000,000 from British Colonies and British possessions. We had thus the greater part of her trade, and by our skill, energy, and enterprise we ought to strive to keep it. It was easily conceivable that she would take more from us than she did. £65,000,000 meant only 5s. per head of the population. England imported £9 per head, France £5 per head, and the United States £3 per head; and when he said that the United Kingdom imported 36 times more than the people of India they could see what an opening there was for the British. He must remind them that the greater part of the great traffic in which we had so great an interest went through the Suez Canal, and the Canal was, of course, most valuable to us; but still he did not admit that it was indispensable. We might lose its benefit, but only by a defeat in a naval engagement in the Mediterranean. That was an almost impossible supposition. If it should be stopped up we still had the old route open by the Cape. Still we needed to keep our maritime supremacy; we must have a Navy to protect our coasts, our Colonies, and our commerce, and he would earnestly warn them that if we were beaten at sea nothing but ruin—black, blank ruin—stared the working men of England in the face. The usual votes of thanks concluded the proceedings.

Digitized by Google

This account of the value of India to our country is, we have reason to know, true and accurate. How is it, then, that people still tell us that that vast Empire is a burden on our people, and should be got rid of as soon as possible? Do they suppose that Russia would not be glad to take our place as the paramount Power in Hindostan? or that the French would not be delighted to become its rulers in accordance with the dreams of the Great Napoleon? The fact is, without India Egypt would be of no value to us, the Australian Colonies could hardly be retained by this country, and there would be no object to be gained by our retention of the Mediterranean and Eastern Gates. The possession of India is the key to our existence as a nation, and therefore it is that God regards its possession by our race as so important that He declared in the passage already quoted, "He hath showed His people the power of His works in giving them the heritage of the nations" (Psa. cxi. 6, R.V.). The object, however, that God has in view in making over the heathen to His inheritance, that is, to the people of Israel, is, that the latter may confer on them the blessings of the Gospel of His grace. Israel is the race destined "to blossom and bud and to fill the face of the world with fruit" (Isa. xxvii. 6, R.V.). Therefore the nations are given to Israel that with Israel they may be brought to Christ. Our secular journals and their worldly readers cannot be expected to see the necessity for our retaining India in this light, and therefore God, to force them to do His will and to induce the nation to hold the Empire of the East with a grasp of iron, has made India profitable to our calculating race, and given them a reason which they all can well understand to carry out His purposes. One of our provincial journalists commenting on the facts, wrote thus a few weeks ago:—

India is, for England, the most important market in the world. As long as England holds India, she need never be at a loss. There is another thing. Of course we must hold the seas. In that case, we have at home a population of 40,000,000 of the most industrious and skilful in the world, and we have 250,000,000 of fellow countrymen, as they may be called, ready to take our produce. There is, in fact, no limit to the resources of the British Empire, except that which depends on the willingness of the English people to hold their own.

The possession of India, it is thus seen, necessitates the retention by our nation of the supremacy of the seas, which are the highways of our approach to the Eastern Empire. To secure that supremacy we are bound to have "the Gates of the route" throughout the whole earth, and that gift too our God, who has graciously foreseen the whole from the beginning, has conferred upon our nation as it is this day. Thus we have Israel, God's chosen ones (1 Chron. xvi. 13), located in her place of appointed safety in "the isles of the West" (2 Sam. vii. 10; Isa. xxiv. 15), and endowed with the possession of "the Gate of her enemies." We recognise her thereby as constituted "the Mistress of the Seas" (Gen. xxii. 17). These gifts secure to her "the Heathen Empire," exhibiting thus "the power of God's works" (Psa. cxi. 6). In that Empire as a theatre for her evangelistic operations, she preaches the Gospel to the heathen, circulates the word of her God, extends the Kingdom of Christ the King, and thus proves she is the people whom God has formed for Himself, that He may show forth His praise (Isa. xliii. 21). Therefore, oh, British-Israelites, praise ye the Lord, who has so highly honoured, endowed, and blessed you with all the blessings which lie at His right hand. Of these gracious blessings none exceed in greatness the gift of India to your race, for thereby the power of the works of God are manifest to Israel first, and then to all the universe besides (Psa. cxi. 6).

THE CHRISTIAN DISPENSATION, AND ISRAEL'S TRUE PLACE THEREIN.

By W. S. Cavill.

PART I.

When any subject involving the consideration of "times and seasons" is brought up for discussion, a notable utterance of our Blessed Lord—culled from His parting words to His disciples—is usually introduced for special notice. And the grand motive for reference to this passage is to supply an injunction against inquiry into matters of a peculiar or questionable value. But when we look a little closely into the historical account, and in addition compare notes with what the prophetic writings teach, we shall apprehend more clearly why restraint was so imposed upon the curiosity of the disciples.

Look at the question itself: "Lord, dost Thou at this time restore the kingdom to Israel?" (Acts i. 5). The minds of the disciples were evidently fixed upon temporal blessings. Their longing was for the advent of a time such as that during which David held the royal sceptre. Sharing the sympathies of their countrymen in a natural desire for freedom, they would have had the hated Romans driven out of the land. The restoration to bright and peaceful days such as those of Solomon, alone could answer to their present hopes and aspirations. And surely He was with them who could effect the desired change! How much they had to learn in correction of this mistaken notion was a matter of after-experience. Like Peter, on the Mount of Transfiguration, they neither understood their position nor their duty. And so they must wait. "It is not for you to know times or seasons," was the divine reply, "which the Father hath set within His own authority." So far the injunction. But what followed? "But ye shall receive power when the Holy Ghost is come upon you: and ye shall be My witnesses, both in Jerusalem and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth."

Here lies the essence of the matter—the key-note to our present consideration. And if we do nothing beyond ascertaining the strength of the position herein presented, we shall assuredly have secured a decided advance towards properly understanding the place assigned to the present dispensation in the order of the divine government.

In marked contrast to the disciples' present question, we might place the after-teaching of these same men, when the Holy Ghost had descended upon them. Respecting their Master, upon whom they would fain have urged the assumption of the kingly authority, they then declared—"Whom the heaven must receive until the time of restoration of all things whereof God spake by the mouth of His holy prophets, which have been since the world began" (Acts iii. 21). And in one of the epistles to the Churches we find this sentence: "But concerning the times and the seasons, brethren, ye have no need that aught be written unto you" (1 Thess. v. 1). And if this was the position of Christian thought in those early times, have we less ground for confidence as we approach the perusal of the inspired word? Surely not, when we call to mind the benediction which rests upon the study of the most difficult part of the New Testament Scriptures. "Blessed is he that readeth, and they that hear the words of the prophecy, and keep the things which are written therein: for the time is at hand" (Rev. i. 3).

The current views respecting the present dispensation are both confused and misleading. And this must necessarily be so, when we consider that due attention has so long been withheld from so large a portion of the divine word as the prophets embrace. For although Peter wrote—"And we have the word of prophecy made more sure; whereunto ye do well that ye take heed as unto a lamp shining in a dark place, until the day dawn, and the day-star arise in your hearts" (1 Pet. i. 19).

Digitized by Google

Yet how neglected has this part of the Old Testament writings been? Verily, concerning them, has it been true that "all vision has become unto you as the words of a book that is sealed, which men deliver to one that is learned, saying, Read this, I pray thee: and he saith, I cannot, for it is sealed; and the book is delivered to him that is not learned, saying, Read this, I pray thee: and he saith, I am not learned" (Isa. xxix. 11, 12). Thus has a veil of indifference been cast over us. But now, as the day draweth nigh when we may look for "the restoration of all things," ought we not to rejoice that the veil is being removed, and we are thus introduced into the enjoyment of a deeper insight into the works and ways of God with fallen men?

Much of the misconception which exists in the minds of men concerning the position of this dispensation in the divine plan, arises from insufficient attention to the consideration of the order in which the offices of the Son of God are held and exercised by Him as the Messiah of promise and prophecy. To this we will now give special notice, as it is of prime value and essential importance. Fully to understand this matter, will be to remove out of our path a stumbling-block to the proper recognition of Israel's true place and work, at the same time that it will open to us an invaluable field of enquiry concerning the highest interests of the human family.

The offices fulfilled by Jesus Christ in carrying out the grand work undertaken on man's behalf, are those of Prophet, Redeemer, Saviour, Priest, Mediator, King, and Judge. For a careful student of the inspired word, these offices will be found to bear actual relation one to another in the order here given. As a Prophet, Christ was our great example. His life on earth was the grand model—an unfailing pattern of obedience to the will of the Father. As Redeemer, He secured the release of the chosen seed from under the thraldom of the law which they had failed to keep. As Saviour, He gained freedom of access to the Father, and reconciliation with an offended God, by taking our iniquities upon Him, and submitting in our stead to the stroke of divine justice. As Priest, He has entered into heaven itself, there to appear in the presence of God for us. As Mediator, He is ready to receive our prayers, and present them as incense before the mercy seat. As King, He will come to reign over a people made ready for His advent, and amid a glory and power which will be a fitting consummation of His work. As Judge, all men will be summoned before Him, and He will reward every man according to his work. Then, when those who are His have been acquitted openly at the bar of divine judgment, will the Son return to the bosom of the Father, that "God may be all in all." Such is the due order of the several parts of what we may denominate Messianic history.

We need not enter into detailed consideration of the pattern-life of our Blessed Lord in the fulfilment of His mission as Prophet, as this will be familiarly known to every reader of the New Testament Scriptures. Nor need we concern ourselves with any account of the work of Christ as the Saviour of men. These are embraced under pure Gospel teaching, and there is nothing comprehended thereunder which British-Israelism affects in any way.

But in respect to the others, current views are not at all clear. Redemption and salvation are generally confounded, and regarded as interchangeable terms. The exercise of the kingly rule—an act yet future—is treated as of a purely spiritual nature, notwithstanding the many declarations of the divine Word, which teaches the contrary view, while the second advent is regarded as contemporary with the judgment, and thus a wrong impression is left upon the public mind.

It is from the consideration of the nature and effect of Christ's work as the Redeemer of Israel that we are enabled rightly to estimate the benefits and privileges which are our enjoyment in the present age. When we read in the apostolic writings that "the law was our schoolmaster to bring us unto Christ" (Gal. iii. 24), what must we understand? Must it not be that the chosen seed were, during the Mosaic period, caused to pass through a divinely-controlled education? For, verily, this could not be true of the Gentiles which "had not the law" (Rom. ii. 14). Their great cause of rejoicing was when the forms and strictures of the law had vanished both in substance and in shadow. Why, then, we may ask, did the Mosaic ceremonials exist? Why the rigour with which they were enforced, and the severity of the penalty of non-compliance with their demands? Are we to suppose that God chose Abraham, called him to His foot, and made him the father of a nation whose greatness was to disappear as soon as it existed, whose might was to pass into impotence, and whose mission of usefulness on behalf of the human family should pass into other hands? Why, if this be so, should there have been such marvellous interest taken in the Hebrew race at all? Why the release from Egyptian bondage? Why the displacement of the inhabitants of Canaan? Why the reiteration of the promises, and the rich addition thereto made in the days of David? Why the divine reproofs, which again and again were borne on prophetic lips? Why the bright anticipations of these same inspired seers as they scanned the future beyond them? Was all this for nought? Was this solicitude and care and oversight to be in vain? Can anyone who rejoices in the observation of the harmony and beauty pervading the works of nature—can anyone who glories in the realisation of the unity of purpose and grandeur of design which the plan of salvation unfolds—permit themselves to imagine for a single moment that there should be in the works of the same divine Being, in His government of the world, such a lack of harmony and evidence of disunity of effort as would be displayed by the failure—ultimately and completely—of the divinely chosen instrument to accomplish the end of its election? Surely—surely—surely no. Then, if not, and we are assured that they are to be brought unto Christ, may we not believe it? But we have to bear in mind that their position is not to be that of mere recipients of divine blessing. They must be dispensers of blessings. Upon them must devolve the ministerial function—to them can be committed the power to be a blessing to all other peoples. Hence they must be brought to Christ—and hence their release from the law "that the blessing of Abraham might come on the Gentiles through Christ Jesus" (Gal. iii. 13). It is the enjoyment of this "blessing of Abraham" which specially marks our own age, and gives its transcendant value over every preceding period of the world's history.

"The blessing of Abraham." By those who look at the matter superficially—or who think and act under the influence of the bias given to their views by the currently received notions of Scripture teaching, we may appear chargeable with profanity, when we claim that "the bestowal of the blessing of Abraham" upon the world is the central and all-important characteristic of the age in which we live. And, moreover, when we are bold to add that in order that this bestowal of blessing upon mankind should possess all possible fulness, the divine wonder-workings which marked preceding ages were performed, those ages were but periods of transition—times of training for the enjoyment of the privileges to come. Strange, however, if the people upon whom the attention of the schoolmaster was so long and so intently fixed should elude his care, and not merely pass into the wilderness of forgetfulness, but into the desert and waste regions of absolute and prolonged unprofitableness!

"The blessing of Abraham." Is not this the Gospel blessing itself? What other blessing, higher or of equal value, has Jehovah prepared for man? Truly none; and, therefore, we must conclude that upon the due preparation, completeness, and bestowal of this blessing all the power and fulness of divine solicitude would be brought to bear. Nay, it is even thus expressly taught—"And the Scripture, foreseeing that God would justify the Gentiles by faith, preached before-hand the Gospel unto Abraham, saying, In thee shall the nations be blessed" (Gal. iii. 8). And when we call to mind that this blessing was forcibly embodied in the words of high commendation which are recorded as being uttered in the council-chamber of heaven just prior to the condescending act of Jehovah in talking with Abraham as His friend, what a view does it give us of the faith of the patriarch, by which he was enabled to behold the day of Christ, and therein to rejoice! (John viii. 56). "Shall I hide from Abraham that which I do, seeing that Abraham shall surely become a great and mighty nation, and all the nations of the earth shall be blessed in him?" (Gen. xviii. 18). Such are the recorded words of the Deity. And shall we labour to qualify their force?

Digitized by Google

Two things are expressly named in this remarkable sentence. (a) The great and mighty nation; and (b) the blessing of the nations. Here we have the temporal and spiritual blessings in conjunction, and so placed by an unquestionable authority. The temporal, moreover, is placed first, and if we enquire the reason, we may discover it in the necessity that the nation to whose lot it should fall to perform the Gospel work must be both great and strong, and be possessed of all needful endowment, before she could enter upon her work—only then by the view which presents the chosen seed of Abraham attaining to the fulness of national development and power, and combining therewith the disseminations of the blessings of civilisation, freedom, and truth, can this striking declaration be held to have its fulfilment. And do we not hence see the wisdom which kept the elect seed under training until Christ came? Do we not, at the same time, recognise the necessity of the removal of the law, and the prudence of Christ's work as the Redeemer of Israel? Do we not see, moreover, that the promise given in Eden, and which was so minutely fulfilled in the end of the Mosaic days, was richly embodied in the promises given to the head of that chosen race whose mission it should be to unfold the truth of God for the enlightenment and joy of the Gentile world?

(To be continued.)

JACOB'S TROUBLE.

Our friend, Surgeon-General J. M. Grant, in the April No. of Israel's Hope and Destiny, at pp. 20 to 22, gives us some cheering information when he tells us that, in his view, the time of Jacob's trouble mentioned in Jer. xxx. 7 is past and gone, but is not to be expected in future. He argues that if Jacob, whom we see he identifies with Israel, has to expect trouble in the future, then the promises of peace, and rest, and safety of Isa. liv. 8—10, Jer. xxx. 10, 11 are contradicted and rendered of none effect. Therefore he concludes that Jacob's trouble of verse 7 must refer to the past time of Israel's captivity, but not at all to the coming happy period of his return and restoration to the Land of the Inheritance.

With these conclusions, we are aware, others, whose judgment we respect, fully concur. For instance, Major-Gen. M. Beresford, and our friend L. P., quite see with Dr. Grant, but do not take the view we have done—namely, that Jacob's trouble is a time of coming distress and fear, but not of real danger or affliction from the hand of God, as respects His people Israel. We think the appeal to Jer. xxx. 1, 2, which has been made by Dr. Grant already, supports our view, but not his. For how does the chapter open? By an announcement from the Lord Jehovah: "Lo, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will turn again the captivity of My people Israel and Judah, saith the Lord, and I will cause them to return to the land that I gave to their fathers, and they shall possess it." Words could not more plainly point to the final and yet future return of Israel with Judah which is described in Jer. iii. 18, and which everyone must admit is yet future. From verses 4 to 8 (Jer. xxx.) there follows a description of the terrors of that time, when trembling, fear, but not peace shall be heard, and Jacob's trouble shall be upon him. Deliverance comes, and then the Lord of hosts becomes the acknowledged God of Israel, and David their king is raised up to them. Were these the events which accompanied the captivities of Israel and Judah in time past? Have we known anything of the facts here described, or of David our king raised up for us to aid us? Ezek. xxxiv. 22—31, and xxxvii. 20—28 prove that these events and David's reign are connected with the final and yet future restoration of both Israel and Judah, and that between this time and that a period of confusion and terror must intervene, which God's Word calls "Jacob's trouble," from or out of which the deliverance of Jacob is certain (Jer. xxx. 7).

Putting aside, however, this contention, and allowing that, after all, Dr. Grant may be right as to Jer. xxx. 7, and we heartily hope he is, we desire to point out that the events described in Ezek. xxxviii. and xxxix. (supposing them to refer to Palestine, and Gog-Magog's invasion of that land), constitute a picture of trouble, distress, and terror, for both Israel and Judah, recently returned and settled there, which may indeed be called a time of Jacob's trouble. Can anything be conceived more dreadful than the picture there drawn of what is coming on that land and its Hebrew inhabitants, if words mean what they say? To begin with, we see from Ezek. xxxviii. 14 that Israel certainly, and Judah possibly, being settled in the land, dwelling safely, and surrounded by riches, goods, and cattle, a terrible event is to take place. Their mountains are to be invaded by a vast host of allied Eastern and European troops, mostly cavalry, whose object will be to rob and destroy, "to take away a spoil and prey of cattle, goods, and great spoil" (ver. 13, R.V.). The invasion is to be on a tremendous scale! It will cover the land, and resemble a cloud upon it (ver. 16). God Himself brings it about, to show His power against His enemies, but His love and His tender protection of His people Israel (ver. 16). That is the day for which it seems almost as if the world were made! Its approach was the theme of the prophets, and on the results of that day God's glory will depend, both among His people Israel, and among the nations who are not Israel (Ezek. xxxix. 7, 8).

The events are described as unparalleled in the world's history, and the catastrophe for the enemies of Israel so dreadful (being God-wrought) that their weapons will take seven years to burn, and it will occupy seven months to bury the dead of these assailants of Israel (Ezek. xxxix. 14, R.V.). We are well aware some read these two sublime chapters in Ezekiel's prophecy (xxxviii. and xxxix.) and see in them only the reports of an unsuccessful invasion of Syria and Palestine by the Russian armies, such troops never passing beyond the Valley of Megiddo, and being annihilated there by the power of God. It may be so. But the whole tenor of the two chapters appears to us to be terrifying in the extreme to a people without faith, and who are only to know the Lord as their God from the date of Gog's overthrow and forward (Ezek. xxxix. 22). Prior to that event their fears must surely be terrible, because the object of the invasion will clearly be patent to Israel (Ezek. xxxviii. 13), and the accompanying events described in verses 19 to 23 will, we may be sure, suffice to strike terror into the hearts of a faithless and unbelieving race, ready then as now to doubt their Identity, and only to be convinced of the fact by the awful overthrow, by supernatural means, of their powerful enemies.

But here the difficulty, of course, arises which Dr. Grant and others present to us—namely, that Israel, according to Jer. xxx. 10 and Isa. liv. 8—10, are not to experience anything but ease and quiet after their return, and God promises not to be angry or wroth with them, but treat them with everlasting kindness. This Dr. Grant believes to be inconsistent with the passage which speaks of Jacob's trouble as yet future, and the latter also to be quite opposed by our Lord's promise to His people in Luke xxi. 28. We do not deny the difficulty, but meet it by supposing that the Lord's dealings with Israel and Judah in the land during the Russian invasion will be accompanied by God's love and consideration towards His people as it was in Egypt, when faithless Israel, safe in God's hands from Pharoah and his host, yet cried to Him in terror, though secure from all evil by the protection of the pillar of fire and the cloud which was between them and their enemies night and day. Some such help to the faithless British-Israelites and to Judah, in the times of Gog's invasion, might give them a sense of ease and quiet and fearlessness as predicted. We know there will be a way of reconciling the difficulty when the time comes; and therefore we believe that in the coming crisis of Jacob's trouble by reason of Gog's invasion, the Lord Jehovah will comfort His people, unbelieving though they will be, as He comforted them in the former crisis of their fate during the terrors of the Exodus and of the fearful passage through the sea, when their enemies perished in their very sight.

Digitized by Google

THE LATE Rt. Rev. JONATHAN HOLT TITCOMB, D.D. (First Bishop of Rangoon).

We deeply regret to announce the death of the respected President of the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association, Bishop Titcomb, D.D. He died somewhat unexpectedly, at St. Leonards-on-Sea, on Saturday, April 2, having been ill for some time. The sudden removal of the Bishop is a great blow to all our "Anglo-Israel" Associations. His works have been of the greatest help to our cause; and the last, published during the present week, reached us on the very day of his death. The late Bishop was a steady and consistent believer in Our Identity, as his works, "The Anglo-Israel Post Bag," "Is It Not Reasonable?" and his two sermons on "Joseph's Birthright, England's Possession," clearly prove. The Bishop differed from us, and other Banner writers, on some material points, as it was natural he should. We feel, however, at the side of the grave of so good, learned, and respected a man, that we have lost a personal friend, and one whose like we shall not easily find again. Verily, a prince and a great man has fallen this day in Israel (2 Sam. iii. 38)! The obituary notice of the late Bishop, which appeared in the Times of April 4, is very full and satisfactory; but we regret to see, that among his literary remains, his publications on the subject of the Identity are carefully omitted by the Times' compiler! The notice was as follows:—

Bishop Titcomb, vicar of St. Peter's, Brockley, died on Saturday night last. He had gone to the seaside for the benefit of his health, and intelligence of his death was received at Brockley yesterday. At morning service at St. Peter's Church, as a mark of respect, the "Dead March" in Saul was played on the organ. The death of the vicar was entirely unexpected by his congregation. Bishop Titcomb, who was about 68 years of age, succeeded to the incumbency of St. Peter's about seven months ago, on the death of the Rev. J. C. Wetherell. The Bishop graduated at St. Peter's College, Cambridge, taking his degree in 1841, and spent the early days of his ministry in Ireland. In 1845 Mr. Titcomb was appointed vicar of St. Andrew-the-Less, Cambridge, which he vacated 15 years later on accepting the Secretaryship of the Christian Vernacular Education Society. In 1861 the Rev. Charles Kemble, who had then accepted the rectory of Bath, appointed Mr. Titcomb his successor, as vicar of St. Stephen's, South Lambeth. Mr. Titcomb was rural dean of Clapham from 1870 till 1876, and was appointed an honorary canon of Winchester in 1874. In 1876 he was appointed vicar of Woking, and in the following year he was consecrated Bishop of Rangoon by the late Archbishop Tait. Five years later Bishop Titcomb suffered a great bereavement by the death of his eldest daughter. To add to the trial, a second daughter was prostrate, and the medical opinion was that nothing short of instant removal from the climate could save the sufferer's life. Bishop Titcomb, therefore, obtained leave of absence, and brought her to England, where she died in June, 1880. After a period of rest he once more returned to work, and rendered great service by superintending the stations of the Established Church of England on the Continent as a deputy of the Bishop of London. His health, however, proving unequal to the strain upon it, he, a few months since, accepted the vicarage of St. Peter's, Brockley. Dr. Titcomb is the author of several works, including "Before the Cross; Short Chapters on Buddhism," "Personal Recollections of British Burmah," "Revelation in Progress," "Cautions for Doubters," &c., &c.

HISTORICAL COINCIDENCES.

By E. Reep.

(Concluded from page 137).

PART II.

As we study the subject there is present to the mind's eye a picture relating to another tree of existence—the tree of knowledge; its roots too, deep down in the kingdom of death: "For in the day," said God to Adam, "that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die."

Over the universe, also, has that tree of Eden cast its shadows. Again and again in the pages of Scripture do we read of the similitude of life in a tree. "When thou shalt besiege a city," commanded Moses, "and take it, thou shalt not destroy the trees thereof, for the tree of the field is man's life." The peculiar treasures of wisdom are by Solomon likened to a tree, inasmuch as wisdom is a tree of life to them that lay hold upon her.

The fruit of the righteous is a tree of life. A wholesome tongue is a tree of life. In fact, as by the Norsemen, so by the Israelites was all life figured by a tree, even our Saviour using that special form to delineate life:—"To him that overcometh," is His promise, "will I give to eat of the tree of life, which is in the midst of the paradise of God." The passages above quoted are sufficient to show that the Norsemen were not alone singular in their conception of Igdrasil, the tree of existence. To the Israelites, as well as to themselves, it was the past, the present and the future.

The Norse Eddas, it is said, are not works representing one coherent system of thought; but properly the summation of several successive systems. The Norse historian Snorro tells how Odin was a heroic prince in the Black Sea region, with twelve peers and a great people, straitened for room. How he led these Asen (Asiatics) of his out of Asia; settled them in the North parts of Europe by warlike conquests; invented letters, poetry, etc., and came by-and-bye to be worshipped as chief god, his twelve peers made into twelve sons of his own, gods like himself. Exceedingly interesting is this piece of historical information, clearly stating as it does, the coincidence of our English fathers having had an origin as Asiatic as the Hebrews themselves. "Who knows," asks Carlyle, "to what unamiable subtleties of spiritual law all these Pagan fables owe their origin?"

Considered from a particular point of view, it would be easy to moralise upon this question; manifestly to some minds there was a directive power working in some inexplicable manner that preserved to us in these Norse fables the germs of an ancient and better faith. The Icelandic historian speaks of twelve peers or princes, who were made heads of the people; in which figure we have a correspondent number in the princes of the Twelve Tribes who were the heads of the thousands in Israel. Why should Odin have fixed upon this figure twelve? Was it a traditional number handed down through ages of the distant past? The answer has not been transmitted to us, but there is all the same the coincidence of the exact number of princes being appointed to rule over the thousands in Israel, as over the thousands of Odin.

This name Odin, Woden, or Wuotan, signifies movement, the force of movement, a name well befitting a man endowed with the qualities of a great leader, a man, too, of such great general capacity as to appear to his people—even as Moses appeared to Pharaoh—a god. "How he came to be regarded in this light, is a question," says Carlyle, "not to be dogmatised upon . . . Enough for us to discern far in the uttermost distance some gleam as of a small real light shining in the centre of that enormous camera-obscura image; to discern that the centre of it all was not a madness, and nothing but a sanity and something." Though there was error in this Norse system—error enough, yet Carlyle refuses to believe that it was all sheer falsehood, idle allegory aforethought, that our fathers believed in. There is little more to tell of this remarkable Odin. His Runes (Scandinavian alphabet), are a significant feature of him, the use of which, we are told, has some air of being original among the Norsemen.

Digitized by Google

Snorro relates that Odin invented poetry. Whether he did or not, the fact that he used that vehicle for the expression of his thoughts reminds us that the language of the mighty ones in Israel was more often than not the sublime language of verse. Odin was to his people what Moses or David was to the children of the covenant—"a great lion-heart, a poet, a prophet, and great devout thinker." "To the wild Norse souls he was," writes Carlyle, "noble and noblest, hero, prophet, God. The rough words that he articulated are the rudimental roots of those English words we still use." To Carlyle, these Norsemen were a right valiant, true old race of men. They understood in their heart that it was indispensable to be brave; they were the progenitors of our own Blakes and Nelsons. Before we part with Odin, we must with Carlyle listen to that warrior speaking with a hero's voice and heart, as with an impressiveness out of heaven, telling his people the infinite importance of valour, how man thereby became a god, a message his people believed, and thought it a message out of heaven, and Odin a divinity for telling it them. In their rude childlike way of recognising the divineness of nature, we have a resemblance to the Medes, whose religion was Magism, a religion that was entirely given to the worship of nature, in the elements of fire, air, earth, and water.

This adoration of nature was what Carlyle found to be the primary characteristic of old Northland mythology, which was a simple recognition of the workings of physical nature, regarded as a thing wholly miraculous and divine. Fire in the Norseman's creed was a god; also frost, thunder, and sea-tempest. The god thunder corresponds with the Assyrian Vul, god of thunder to the nation that deported the Ten Tribes from Samaria to their own land, and to the country of the Medes.

Now if Snorro be right (and Carlyle says he is very positive about it) in saying that Odin brought his people from Asia, and Anglo-Israelites in saying that these Norsemen are the descendants of the lost Ten Tribes, then there is in all this Norse mythology a tangible meaning, and the very correspondences we should expect to find, inasmuch as the Israelities in their Assyrian environment would naturally (considering what their love of religious novelty was) conform to the creeds of the people amongst whom they dwelt, and in subsequent migrations would, to a great extent, preserve traces of their sojourn in other lands than their own. Truly this old Norse system is a strange blending of all sorts and conditions of faith, and yet not strange if we accept the belief that these Norsemen were the captive tribes of Israel, for it is certain that the nations around them, in the home of their captivity, were much mixed in their religious tenets, some holding to one thing and some to another, even the worship of Jehovah being not unknown, as we know from Scripture evidence itself.

For further confirmation of our Norse forefathers being the veritable lost tribes of Israel, we have the sure word of prophecy declaring that out of the North country shall Israel be found, and when found may it not be said, in the words of Balaam, as recorded by Josephus, "Happy is this people; all the earth, as well as the sea, shall be filled with your glory: and you shall be so numerous as to supply the world in general, and every region of it in particular, with inhabitants out of your stock. . . . Know ye the whole world is proposed to be your place of habitation for ever. The multitude of your posterity also shall live as well in the islands as on the continent, and that more in number than are the stars in heaven." What wonder, then, when we see this prophetic vision fulfilled, that men should marvel and wonder how this incredible thing has come to pass, even as Macaulay did when he wrote, "How it chanced that a country conquered and enslaved by invaders should have become the seat of civil liberty, the object of the admiration and envy of surrounding States, is one of the most obscure problems in the philosophy of history." Verily, as Carlyle says, "This is a ferocious earth, and the grain of mustard-seed will grow to miraculous extent in some cases."

Abinger, Sylvan-road, Upper Norwood.

THE OFFER OF THE GOSPEL AND OF SALVATION THROUGH CHRIST TO THE JEWS.

OUR notice regarding the Jubilee Fund published on page 121 of the present volume of the BANNER, has brought forward Mr. George Dimbleby, of Hull, with a protest against our desire to offer the gospel and salvation by the blood of Christ to the Jew. We reproduce his letter below, that the exact grounds of his opposition may be seen. He has also, on page 39 of the April number of Israel's Hope and Destiny, No. 69, contributed an article which appears without editorial or other protest, to the same effect, the article being entitled, "Is the Conversion of the Jews at the present time Scriptural?" We would observe that Mr. Dimbleby's arguments are those of Mr. Edward Hine, whom we answered so far back as February 7, 1877, No. 6 of the BANNER, vol. i., p. 53, in our leader, entitled, "The Jew First." As a considerable period (ten years) has elapsed since that date we propose to review the ground again, and to offer such arguments as occur to us why, in our opinion, which we retain to this hour, the duty of the British people, as Israel, is to preach the Gospel to the Jews, leaving the question of their acceptation or rejection thereof to the individuals to whom the offer of salvation is made. We are perfectly aware with Mr. Dimbleby that the Jews will not as a people or a race accept Christ till after their return with the House of Israel to the land of the inheritance. But that is not the question, any more than it is the question whether all the Gentile non-Israelite races can be reached savingly by our preachings. The presumption, and the teaching of Scripture, is, that the vast majority of such Gentiles will not be converted by our efforts, but that some among them only will give heed and believe, "for a witness" to the rest that salvation by the blood of Jesus is true, and has been offered for their acceptance (Matt. xxiv. 14). The only question, regarding the Jews as well as regarding the non-Israelite Gentiles, is what Mr. Dimbleby denies, namely, has the Lord by His Holy Word suggested, approved, or sanctioned the attempt to convert the Jews? Before we address ourselves to the argument let us see what Mr. Dimbleby's statement is. He writes thus:—

With The Call to Prayer just to hand, and I presume it is from you, I heartily agree; except with reference to one paragraph—viz., as to the conversion of Judah, which I believe to be quite opposed to Scriptural teaching. With all your other views I thoroughly agree, and have done so for ten years past. But I am now more than ever convinced (and I am sure you will respect my convictions) that no passage of Scripture ever suggests, approves, or sanctions the conversion of the Jews yet. If we un-Jew the Jew to-day, what becomes of the Old Testament. Now I take my stand, first, upon the Saviour Himself (see Matt. xiii. 10), "Because having eyes they see not," &c.; Isaiah vi. 9, 10, "Lest they (the Jews) should be converted and I should heal them." The same truth, in order that it should not be misunderstood, is repeated by Mark iv. 11, 12, Luke viii. 10, John xii. 40. History and experience, too, all go to prove, in my opinion, this to be true. I am sure you will excuse me laying my views before you, and if I am mistaken shall be pleased to be put right.

So far Mr. Dimbleby. We proceed to inquire, What saith the Scripture on this point? To begin with: Christ went to His "own"—the Jews—but they received Him not (John i. 11). He set us an example, which we are bound therefore to follow! But did He lay no specific commands on His people in regard to the Jews, and salvation by grace? Surely He did! "Repentance and remission of sins," He declared in Luke xxiv.

Digitized by Google

46, 47, R.V., "should be preached in His name unto all the nations, beginning at Jerusalem." In St. Mark's Gospel, xvi. 15, R.V., He charged His disciples "to go into all the world and preach the Gospel to the whole creation." Who dare refuse obedience to the command by excluding the Jews? St. Peter did not understand the Lord as Mr. Dimbleby does, for he addressed the men of Judea, and all that dwelt in Jerusalem (Acts ii. 14—39, R.V.), and assured them that "the promise was to them, to their children, and to all that are afar off (Israel), as many as the Lord our God shall call unto Him." The call was responded to by many Jews and priests, as Acts vi. 7 proves. What was right and according to God's and Christ's mind in A.D. 33 must be so still in A.D. 1887. But St. Paul understood his duty to the Jews differently from Mr. Dimbleby, and he certainly had the mind of Christ to guide him (1 Cor. ii. 16, vii. 40; 1 Thess. iv. 8). What was St. Paul's constant practice in regard to his efforts to convert the Jews of his day? Directly after his conversion he preached to them in Damascus, that "Jesus was the Son of God" (Acts ix. 20). In Salamis Paul preached to the Jews (Acts xiii. 5). It was the same in Antioch of Pisidia (Acts xiii. 14). In Iconium Paul did not desist from preaching to the Jews (Acts xiv. 1). In Acts xvii. 1, 2, we are told that Paul's "manner" and custom was what Mr. Dimbleby would certainly have disapproved; for he frequented the synagogues of the Jews, trying to persuade them that the death and resurrection of the Lord Jesus Christ was efficacious for them as for others; and actually the 4th verse comes to confound Mr. Dimbleby, and shows us God blessed the preaching, and some believed and consorted with Paul and Silas. Surely, after this, Mr. Dimbleby is somewhat rash when he wants us to believe that God's Word never "suggests, or approves, or sanctions the effort to convert the Jews!" In short, not only is the Word of God full of encouragement to such effort, but the presence among us to-day of the Rev. Eliezer Bassin, a Rabbi, converted to Christ; of the Rev. Mr. Kröenig, a convert to Christ from Judaism in Mr. Dimbleby's own town, Hull; and the scores of Jews now Christians, whom we all know to be living to-day, put the pleas of Mr. D. quite out of court. The burden is on him to show, under the circumstances, a single text forbidding effort in these days to reach the Jews! The Lord Jesus came to die for Judah as well as for Israel, and numbers did actually, and do so still to-day, accept the invitation (John i. 11, xi. 50—52, xviii. 14).

Mr. Dimbleby, we see, by his article in Israel's Hope and Destiny, has embraced the fatal and foolish mistake of Mr. E. Hine, that the Jews' religion is quite sufficient to save him, and that God wills him to remain so saved as a Jew. He argues, therefore, that it is wicked to try and un-Jew them, and cause them thus "to forsake a religion in which their salvation is secure." We should like to see the text on which Mr. Dimbleby founds the monstrous doctrine that the Jew, quâ Jew, is safe for eternity as he is! It must be in the Bible, if true. Why does not Mr. Dimbleby quote it? It is not there! But other texts are there, which tell a very different tale. Here is one: "In none other (that is, Christ) is there salvation, for neither is there any other name under heaven that is given among men wherein we must be saved" (Acts iv. 12, R.V). This is strong; and the context shows it was addressed to Jews! Will Mr. Dimbleby break this Scripture, and point us to another proving that now the Jews have salvation out of Christ, and by some other name? Impossible! But this is not all. Mr. Dimbleby considers that "the provision for the salvation of the Jew in the Old Testament is as sure and certain as the salvation of all others through the death of Christ" (p. 40, Israel's Hope and Destiny). But what is the testimony of Scripture in regard to the Jews under their law? In 1 Thess. ii. 15, 16, we have a very strong statement. There God's Spirit records that "the Jews both killed the Lord Jesus and the prophets, and drove out us, and pleased not God" (just the thing Mr. D. says they do), and "are contrary to all men, forbidding us to speak to the Gentiles that they may be saved; to fill up their sins alway: but the wrath is come upon them to the uttermost." To the uttermost! And yet Mr. D. maintains that they are safe as they are, that their religion (!) gives them salvation as a matter "secure" to them! The subject does not require further notice, save that Mr. Dimbleby's opinions, utterly opposed as they are to the Scriptures, deceive himself and others, set him in opposition to God's will in the matter, and cause men to disobey the divine instruction to Israel conveyed by St. Paul, twice in Rom. i. 16, ii. 9, 10, that they should take the Gospel of Christ, as the power of God unto salvation, to every one that believeth, to the Jew first, and also to the Greek. In short, in this dispensation, God's offer is to the Jew first, and his is the responsibility in rejecting it, as his is the blessing first in accepting it! We conclude in the words of our own article in No. 6, vol. i. of the BANNER. The opinions there expressed are true to-day as they were ten years ago, and they are these: "We hold with our friends, and quite as strongly as they do, that as a body, or a mass, and as a people, the Jews will not be converted to Christ. The vast bulk of prophetic testimony quite suffices to negative that idea. We have no more notion, in sending the Gospel to the Jews, that that scattered people will as a race accept Christianity, than we have, by labouring for the sixteen heathen nations in India, or for those in China, Africa, and South America, that the Gentiles there will acknowledge Christ en masse at the present day, in response to our evangelising efforts. Why, then, continue them? Because the Lord has bidden us. We have "to preach the Gospel to every creature," and the description must, by its very terms, include the Jew, but the results are in the Lord's hands." Mr. Dimbleby would look behind the Lord's purposes in respect to the Jews as if he could understand them. He cannot understand them, but he is bound to obey. The Lord tells him, as He tells us all, to preach the Gospel to all nations, all families, and all kindreds of the earth, the Jews being especially named as the first; and such being the case, we wonder any one can dare to limit the Lord's commission! We cannot venture so to cross the Lord's purposes, and thus cannot follow Mr. Dimbleby, or ask any of our readers to do so either.

Correspondence.

WHERE IS THE GENTILE CHURCH?

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—Will you allow me to say with reference to former correspondence on the above question, that in my opinion there is no such thing as a Gentile Christian Church. The Church which Christ founded, and which was called "Christian" after His disciples had been called Christians (about A.D. 41), was an Israelitish body, and has no more ceased to be Israelitish on account of the admission of heathens to its communion than that branch of it which we call the Church of England has ceased to be English from the same cause.

We must remember, too, that all the Gentiles or heathen who have become Christians have joined themselves to Israel by professing a common faith, and submitting to the Israelitish ordinance of baptism; an ordinance which was introduced by John the Baptist, and established by Christ in the place of the older rite of circumcision; but this religious unity does not in any way affect the distinct nationality of Israel for which we contend. Yours truly, J. M. GRANT, M.D., Surgeon-Gen.

N.B.—St. Paul speaks of "the Churches of Galatia," but not of the Church of Rome, Corinth, Ephesus, Philippi, Colosse, or Thessaly. The last he calls the Church of the Thessalonians, which is in God the Father and the Lord Jesus Christ: and even "the Churches of Galatia" he distinguishes as Christian by sending them a message of peace from God the Father and our Lord Jesus Christ: so I claim him to be more on my side than yours. The Lo-Ammi question we will not argue upon. Unless I mistake the meaning of the Word, if it means "not My people," it must mean also, as far as I can see, what St. Paul calls "strangers"—that is, estranged "from the covenant of grace." However, that question has not been raised by the cleric, and we need not moot it.

Digitized by Google

NOTICES.

All communications intended for the Editor, to be addressed: — "Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Clifton, Bristol.

SUBSCRIPTIONS £ s. d.

Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free - 0 7 6
Two Copies (including Double Numbers) - - 0 13 6
Three Copies " " " " - 1 0 4
Four Copies " " " " - 1 5 6
Six Copies " " " " - 1 16 4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-grand, London, to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C., or F. W. PARRY & Co., 29, Paternoster-row, London.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

Contents Bills and Show Cards may be obtained on application to the Publishers.

Advertisements should be sent to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

Prepaid Advertisements are inserted at the rate of 30 words for 1s. 4d.

ANGLO-ISRAEL FREE DISTRIBUTION FUND. Donations will be gratefully received and acknowledged by the Treasurer, Miss Lawrence, Rosslyn, Hampton-road, Upper Teddington; by the Hon. Sec., Miss E. M. Rush, 103, Burnt Ash-road, Lee, London, S.E.; by the Secretary, C. Horner, Esq., 34, Sheen Park, Richmond, Surrey; or by the Hon. Local Secretaries, Mr. John May, 26, Piazzi Miratore, Floriana, Malta; E. C. Baxter, Esq., Vryburgh, Bechuanaland, S. Africa; and E. L. Dwyer, Esq. Sand Hill, Launceston, Tasmania.

PUBLISHED BY ROBT. BANKS & SON,
RACQUET COURT, FLEET STREET, E.C.

WORKS BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

The Geography of the Gates. With Map and six full page, and one double-page, Illustrations, printed on plate paper. 208 pages, in handsome cloth, gilt Price 3s. 6d., post free 3s. 10d.

An Elementary Digest or Sketch of the Chief Facts and Teachings of the Great Pyramid of Egypt. Adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific 56 pages, Illustrated with Diagrams, price 4d., post free 5d. 10th Thousand.

Our Identity with the House of Israel. Price 4d. Reprinted from "Clifton Chronicle Letters"

NEW VOLUME JUST COMMENCED.

Price 6d., by post 7d.; Annual Subscription. 2s. 6d., post free.

THE APRIL QUARTERLY PART
OF
ISRAEL'S HOPE & DESTINY

CONTENTS:

The Jubilee Year. By Hecla.—Literary Culture Among the Ancient British. By J. Thomson.—The Time of Jacob's Trouble. By Sur.-Gen. J. M. Grant, M.D.—The Sovereignty of God as Seen in the Light of Anglo-Israelism. By Mrs. G. Albert Rogers.—Jezreel. By Rev. Hebert Marriott, M.A.—Gog's Attempted Invasion Against Israel—Does it Take Place in India or Palestine? Being John T. Crosthwait's Reply to A. MacPhail's Objections.—Is the Conversion of the Jews at the Present Time Scriptural? By George Dimbleby.—The Woman Arrayed with the Sun (Rev. xii., R.V.). By J. C. H. M.—The Sifting and Consolidation of Israel. By W. S. Cavill.—The Mystery of the Prophetic Dates Unsealed. By A. MacPhail.—The Unscripturalness of the Present Scripture Teaching.

London: ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.; F. W. PARRY (late Guest, Hayworth & Co.), 29, Paternoster-row.

THE TEETH, THE TEETH,
THOSE PRECIOUS TEETH!
Save, Purify, Beautify.
GEORGE & WELCH'S
CARBOLINE
1/6 (TOOTH PASTE). 2/6 per Pot
Is the Best Known
Cleanser, Preserver, and Deodoriser.
Dental Guide says:—"No Tooth application equals the Carbolics."
Proprietors: GEORGE & WELCH, Worcester.
Through Chemists, or Post Free from Makers.

A New Work on the Identity of Lost Israel
By the late BISHOP TITCOMB.

Now ready, in Cloth Gilt, Bevelled Boards, Imperial 8vo. Price 3s.; sent Post Free for Postal Order or Stamps.

A MESSAGE TO THE CHURCH
FROM
THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.
BY THE LATE
RT. REV. BISHOP TITCOMB, D.D.
(This work was completed by the late Bishop only a week previous to his death).

London: Robert Banks & Son, Racquet court, Fleet-st.

Published by ROBERT BANKS & SON,
RACQUET COURT, FLEET STREET, E.C.

Postal Orders may be obtained at any Post Office in the United Kingdom for the following amounts: 1s., 1s. 6d., ½d. each; 2s., 2s. 6d., 3s., 3s 6d., 4s., 4s. 6d., 5s., 7s. 6d., 10s., 10s. 6d., 1d. each; 15s., 20s., 1½d. each. They should be "crossed" City Bank, Ludgate Hill, E.C. Stamps received.

JEHOVAH TRIUMPHANT. The New and Complete Theology and Electric Light of the Bible, containing the History of British-Israel, Compiled from the Sacred Scriptures. Cloth gilt, price 10s. 6d., post free for Postal Order or Cheque.

THE GEOGRAPHY OF THE GATES. By PHILO-ISRAEL. With Map, and six full page, and one double-page, Illustrations, printed on plate paper. 208 pages, in handsome cloth, gilt. Price 3s. 6d.; post free.

THE WORD: THE WORLD: THE BRANCH. By J. LEYLAND FIELDEN, Esq. Price 12s., post free.

EPHRAIM-ENGLAND. The Nineteenth Century Revelation of the Fruits of History. By Rev. R. DOUGLAS, Vicar of Kidsgrove. Cloth gilt, lettered, 4s., gilt edges 5s., free by post.

FIFTY REASONS WHY THE ANGLO-SAXONS ARE ISRAELITES of the Lost Tribes of the House of Israel. By Rev. W. H. POOLE, D.D. Price 6d., post free 7d.

BIBLE LESSONS AND REFLECTIONS. By the late ROBERT GAIRDNER, of Kilmarnock, N.B. Price 2s. 6d., by post 2s. 9d.; cheap edition, limp cloth, 1s., by post, 1s. 2d.

PRESENT-DAY PROBLEMS, and How Anglo-Israel Truth Explains and Solves Them. By V. M. COX. 3d., by post 4 stamps.

LIGHT SHED BY THE GREAT PYRAMID OF EGYPT on the Last Days of this Dispensation, from A.D. 1814 to A.D. 1922. By JAMES KEITH. Price 4d., by post 5 stamps.

NEW TESTAMENT TRUTH on the Anglo-Israel Controversy. By J. G. TAYLOR. Price 3d., by post 4 stamps.

A NEW LIGHT. An Elementary Pamphlet for General Distribution. By A E I. Price 2d., by post 2½d. in stamps.

EPHRAIM-ISRAEL, the Pivot Nation of Prophecy and History. By V. M. COX. Price 1d., one dozen free for 1s.

AMMI; OR, THE CHOSEN PEOPLE. By MISS BIRD. Tracing the Descent of the British People from Abraham, the "friend of God," and showing that true science, history, philology, and ethnology, are on the side of the Identity of the Anglo-Saxon Race with the Ten Lost Tribes. Price 2d., post free 2½d.; 12s. 6d. per 100 for distribution.

IS NOT QUEEN VICTORIA the Royal Seed to King David's Throne, and Are Not Her Subjects, the British People, the Ten Lost Tribes? By W. HOPTON. Price 2d.; 12s. 6d. per 100.

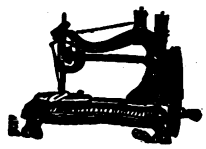
A Complete Catalogue Free on Application.

ISRAEL IN THE NEW TESTAMENT
OR,
Proofs of the National Conversion of the Ten Tribes to Christianity.
By SURGEON-GENERAL J. M. GRANT, M.D.
Price 4d., post free, 4½d.; 12 Copies, post free, 4s.
London: R. Banks and Son, Racquet Court, Fleet St., and by order of all Booksellers.

EDWARD HINE'S PUBLICATIONS
SHOULD BE READ & DISTRIBUTED.

FORTY-SEVEN IDENTIFICATIONS, 6d.; post free, 7d.

CUI BONO? 6d., post free, 7d.



LOST ISRAEL FOUND, 3s. 6d., post free, 3s. 9d.

F. W. PARRY, 29, Paternoster Row, London, or direct of ISAAC LOVELAND, Shoreham, Sevenoaks.

SEWING, WASHING, and WRINGING MACHINES at WHOLESALE PRICES.
CARRIAGE PAID

New Medium.
Usual price .. £7 10 0
Discount .. 3 12 6
3 17 6

Improved Hand.
Usual price £4 4 0
Discount 1 14 0
2 10 0

Nonpareil Washer.
Brass Tap given. £5 15 0
Best Rollers. 1 5 0
Usual price 4 10 0
Discount

Wringer & Mangler.
Usual price £5 15 0
Rollers. 3 3 0
Discount 2 0 0

Why pay Agents' wages, when you can save 30, 40, and 50 per cent. by buying from the Makers? We have no Agents, but do all business direct from the Firm. Our Machines have only to be seen to be admired, and used to give satisfaction.

AFTER FIVE YEARS' TRIAL!!
Hallam Fields, near Nottingham.
Gentlemen,—The Machine you sold me five years ago has given perfect satisfaction. I would not sell it now for what it cost me if I could not replace it. Yours sincerely, E. STEVENSON.

Every prudent Housekeeper should, before purchasing elsewhere, apply to the
MIDLAND COUNTIES MACHINE CO.
EASTWOOD. NOTTINGHAM, J. Hanson, Mang.

A Resume of the Scriptural Argument, proving the Identity of the British Race with the Lost Ten Tribes. Price 1d.; 6s. per 100. New edition now ready. R. Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

RHEUMATISM, GOUT,
SCIATICA, LUMBAGO, INDIGESTION, CONSTIPATION, LIVER & KIDNEY COMPLAINTS, NERVOUS DISORDERS, LADIES' AILMENTS, ETC. Promptly Relieved and CURED BY
HARNESS' ELECTROPATHIC BELT
ALL sufferers should read "Harness' Guide to Health," free by post, containing copies of Thousands of Testimonials. Every man and woman in search of Health, Strength, and Energy, should at once send a 21s. postal order to the Medical Battery Co. Ltd. 52, OXFORD ST. LONDON, W. and procure one of these famous Belts, and they may rely upon being CURED
Corner of Rathbone Place

ETHELINE
A New and most effective Remedy for CORNS.—Perfectly safe and harmless. Is very easily applied. Cures in a few applications, without the slightest pain. Everyone troubled with either Corns, Warts, or Bunions, will find relief by using ETHELINE. To be obtained of all Chemists, or post free for 14 stamps from J. LLEWELLYN, CHEMIST, COWBRIDGE.

EXTERMINATION OF ALL
CORNS & BUNIONS

Guaranteed by using Gardner's Patented Corn and Bunion Exterminator, an ingenious little instrument which can be used by anyone. Painless in operation, "never fails." Price 1s. The highest Surgical Testimonials can be seen and operations successfully performed in all peculiar cases, bad nails, &c., at the Patentee's, who will send the Exterminator direct for 13 stamps.
C. GARDNER, Chiropodist,
94, REGENT STREET, LONDON, W.

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. F. W. PARRY (late GUEST & Co.), 29, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, APRIL 13, 1887. [All rights reserved.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. XI., No. 538. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, APRIL 20, 1887. [PRICE ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
The Gates and the Great Maritime Confederacy	157
What British-Israelites do for Foreign Missions	158
The Christian Dispensation and Israel's True Place Therein. By W. S. Cavill. Part II.	159
Lecture in St. John's Schools, Middlesborough. Part I.	160
The Multitude of Nations	161
Review	162
The BANNER British-Israelite Jubilee Fund	163
Newcastle Anglo-Israel Association	163

THE GATES AND THE GREAT MARITIME CONFEDERACY.

WHEN our friends write books on "Our Identity with the Lost Ten Tribes," but omit all mention of the Gates of Israel, failing at the same time to tell us what the promise of the Gates really meant in Gen. xxii. 17, we wonder whether they read the newspapers of the day, or take notice from current facts, on what foundations God has chosen to build up this mighty Empire which they well know is the House of Joseph! If able and intelligent Israelite authorities are really and truly conversant with the literature of the day—which, of course, they are—they cannot fail to see that our whole national position rests at this moment on those unique possessions God has given us, which men call our coaling stations, or Imperial sea fortresses, but God's Word, rightly understood, designates the Gates of our enemies.

We have always maintained that this is so, and we have recognised the fact to be the most important of all God's good gifts to us as a nation to secure to us naval and military ascendency throughout the world. Long before the newspapers began to proclaim the fact that on the coaling stations and sea fortresses the weight of our Empire rests, we were constantly pointing out in these pages the immense importance of the Gates, and how, by means of them, God had given us the supremacy of the sea, our Heathen and Colonial Empires, our commerce and resultant wealth, our world-wide ability to circulate the Word of God, and our power to preach the Gospel to all the nations, to all the families, and to all the kindreds of the earth. How is it, knowing and seeing all this, that men have not been put upon inquiry whether the coaling stations and sea fortresses may not be God's prophetical gifts to His people Israel, those Gates of their enemies which the oath of God foretold should be theirs, as a blessed possession, the result of their unique multitudinousness, and the needful antecedent to their promised power to become a blessing to all the nations of the earth? For these coaling stations and sea fortresses are, many of them, so situated geographically that there is no name so appropriate to them as that God has given them—namely, "the Gates," for they are Gates! They are the Gates of nations at enmity with the British, either now or in times past; and in some instances the spots in question are called Gates by the nations to whose territories they belong! Thus Perim, a British fortress, is situated in the Straits of Bab-el-Mandeb, "the Gate of Tears;" Port Said, which is virtually British, is by interpretation "the Gate of the chief." The sea fortress we hold in Spain—Gibraltar—is called one of the Pillars or Gates of Hercules. "The Porte," a political term, is applied to the spot called in Arabic Bab-i-Humayoon, "the Chief Gate," and we also designate it "the Gate of all the Gates," since Constantinople is the "Peerless Port," the chief Gate of the world!

By means of these Gates, we have secured all our outland possessions, colonies, and India, and by their retention as coaling stations and sea fortresses we are able to continue in quiet, undisturbed possession of them all. Were these Gates taken from us, and fall under the military and naval occupation of any other (hostile) Power, we could not hold India, the Cape, Australia, or Canada! The loss of the supremacy of the sea would follow, and the ability to preach the Gospel and to circulate the Scriptures throughout the world would cease! Our wealth would collapse, because the fountains whence it flows would be cut off. Is it likely that so stupendous a blessing as the Gates would be passed over in silence by the God of Israel? When we find, however, that so far from failing to mention them, God, when He made oath to Abraham in Gen. xxii. 15—18, and because He could swear by no greater sware by Himself that the afterseed of His friend should possess the Gate of his enemies, we surely are justified in concluding that these unique gifts are now in our enjoyment, and are those the Word of God itself promised? If we are wrong, we think those who differ are bound to show us wherein the Gates of Scripture differ from the Gates of our earthly possessions to-day; and if these last be not they, where the Gates are which God promised in Gen. xxii. 17 to the House of Israel?

To illustrate our statements as to the real foundation on which our national power actually rests, we quote now the words of a leader in the London Standard of March 29, 1887. Nothing could be more to the point, or more direct evidence of our contention, given, be it remembered, by a "blind witness." The writer said, respecting our Colonial Empire:—

Digitized by Google

Left each to itself, the colonies might be able to defend themselves against the risk of serious invasion from any but a first-class Power, but they could hardly be expected to do more. Combined with us, each province would become one link in such a chain of maritime fortresses as the world has never yet known. An Empire which is scattered over five continents is easily attacked; but if its strength is rightly organised, this very diffusion adds to its capacity for resistance and offence. But a modern fleet cannot fight unless it has its stores of fuel, its arsenals, its docks, and its victualling-yards within easy reach. England, alone of all the Powers, has its harbours in every sea, and its coaling-stations always at hand. It is no vain boast that, if our opportunities were properly utilised, we should be able to defy the combined naval strength of the world. With a great line of sea fortresses extending from the Channel, through Gibraltar, Malta, Aden, and Hong-Kong, to the Pacific; with a second Chatham at Esquimault, and a Southern Plymouth at Port Philip; with an Australian and a South African navy, sailing under the Imperial flag, and forming an integral part of the Imperial armament; with Canada, the fourth maritime country of the world, to draw upon for ships and sailors—with such a combination, the supremacy of the Anglo-Saxon race on the ocean would be greater than in the most glorious days of our past history. Nor is this a mere dream of the future. Political federation may be distant, and fiscal union more remote still; but the first steps have already been taken towards the formation of the great maritime confederacy, and it needs nothing but resolute and patriotic statesmanship to bring it to maturity.

The great maritime confederacy will be formed as soon as the Conference of the Colonies and Great Britain has had time to consider a practical scheme. Then it will be seen that the Gates are the very mainspring, heart, and foundation of the Maritime Confederacy, and of all that makes ours the Power able, in God's strength, to defy the combined naval strength of the world! No doubt this is what God meant when He declared what "Israel obedient" would become when "He set them on high above ALL nations of the earth . . . the head and not the tail, above only and not beneath" (Deut. xxviii. 1, 13). God works by means, and the means by which He is working all His wonders towards His people is the power of the Gates.

We are sorry that some have set their faces like a flint against this crowning proof of our nation's Identity with the lost Ten Tribes. Their opposition, however, is evanescent and momentary. God's purposes endure from everlasting to everlasting, and for this reason we believe all our opponents, excellent men as they are, will see, one day, that in rejecting the Gates they have made a great mistake. But to the Lord shall be all the praise at last.

WHAT BRITISH-ISRAELITES DO FOR FOREIGN MISSIONS.

IT is right that we should at intervals ascertain and publish what our British Anglo-Saxon folks are doing for the spread of the Gospel throughout the earth, because if we seek to prove they are the remnant of Israel, we are bound to show that the evangelisation of the world is their work, and that they are succeeding in their efforts therein as no other nation does succeed. Some years since we looked into this matter and found "that the British and American people together maintained twice as many Foreign Protestant Missions as all the other Christian nations of the earth put together." The former we found spent then over a million-and-a-half sterling on Foreign Missions, while the expenditure on the same object of all foreign nations combined was only £120,000, the ratio being over 12 to 1. In 1884 the sum had risen, for then we ascertained that seven of the leading Protestant Missionary Societies of Great Britain only had received as income £1,027,557 for Foreign Missions. In the BANNER published on Nov. 24, 1886, vol. x., p. 466, Mr. F. Gass furnished us with some valuable statistics regarding the total Missionary incomes of the 58 societies in the British Empire in 1885, as contrasted with that of the 35 societies of the European Churches—the 33 of the United States American Churches—and the 20 of the Independent Missions, most of such being also British. The British Empire subscribed £1,316,793; the European Churches £193,553; American Churches (U.S.) £606,450; Independent Missions £26,000; the total being £2,142,801. Thus British Churches exceeded the evangelising efforts of the European Churches by nearly 7 to 1; but allowing for the difference in the numbers of the populations of Europe and Britain, the proportion is found as high as 50 to 1 in favour of the British.

We have now to notice some figures forwarded to us by Mr. J. Rutter, of Southampton, who has also investigated this subject, and submits the following:—"The total contribution of the British Isles," writes Mr. Rutter, "to Foreign Missions, to Heathen, Mohammedans, &c., &c., in the year 1884 was £1,220,861. This excluded balances in hand and interest on investments. Of this sum, the proportions contributed by the Church of England, Nonconformists with Scotch Presbyterians, and Romanists respectively, were as follows:—

Church of England	£642,000
Nonconformists and Scotch Presbyterians	£565,965
Romanists	£12,896
	£1,220,861

That same year (1884) the Roman Propaganda raised from the whole of Roman Catholic Christendom only £273,300, being not much more than one-fifth of the contributions of the British Isles alone. During the 25 years from 1860 to 1884," adds Mr. Rutter, "the contributions of the Church of England in the British Isles alone, exclusive of contributions of Churches of the Anglican communion in foreign parts, were £10,100,000." These figures point with no uncertain indication to the Israelitish origin of the British people, to whom God has given such abounding wealth, as well as such zeal and love for the souls of perishing heathen throughout the world. To Israel God gave the commission to bless "all the nations, families, and kindreds of the earth," and in response, the British people with their "British and Foreign Bible Society," their "Tract Society," their very numerous Foreign Missionary agencies, have undertaken, in dependence upon God, the propagation of the Gospel in all lands, "blossoming and budding and filling the face of the world with fruit" (Isa. xxvii. 6; Gen. xxii. 18; xxviii. 14; Acts. iii. 25).

To one race exclusively God gave the world-wide commission, and one race, the British, accordingly fulfil the divine command exclusively. They thus prove by an infallible process of reasoning, based upon true evidence, that they alone are the House of Israel to whom this high honour is assigned. The Jews, who are of the same race, are at present disqualified, since they have refused to submit to their King and Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ, whose Gospel it is Israel's glory to proclaim—and as the rest of the world outside the British Anglo-Saxon races are apathetic in regard to world-wide evangelisation, it follows that the former are not Israel, but that the latter are, because the Lord "made, formed, created," and commissioned His people Israel to do this very thing which the British alone and exclusively are performing. The British must, therefore, since they answer to the portrait, and are performing the functions allotted by divine omniscience to His chosen ones, be the people of His choice. The figures we have alluded to, consequently, are of vast importance to our contention, and seal the testimony that the British are Israel. For the information that they give us let us praise the Lord.

Digitized by Google

THE CHRISTIAN DISPENSATION AND ISRAEL'S TRUE PLACE THEREIN.

By W. S. Cavill.

PART II.

(Continued from page 151).

Seeing then, that the blessing has been so richly prepared, and that its presentation for the acceptance of the peoples of the earth is the marked characteristic of our own day, are we not justified in expecting to find that the elect seed of Abraham has been pre-eminently employed in connection therewith? This is exactly what we conceive to be the fact of the present moment, and the prominence held by our own nation in this high and noble work points Britain out as the distinctly favoured of Heaven.

Before we pass to the consideration of the more precise point of Israel's true place in the present age, we would observe that if we are to have in our minds a correct idea of the Christian dispensation, we must dismiss the misleading current notions of the kingship of Christ, and fix the assumption of that office by the Messiah in the millennial age. We must also transfer to the latter time, as duly appertaining thereunto, many of the glowing pictures of peace and happiness which are contained in the prophetic writings; and which have been wrongly associated with the first advent of our Lord, or surrounded with the false glow of a mystical spirituality. We shall thus more nearly approximate to a due understanding of the character, duties, and responsibilities of our own day. We shall be heedful of what the apostle teaches when he says: "But this Man, after he had offered one sacrifice for sins for ever, sat down on the right hand of God: from henceforth expecting till His enemies be made His footstool" (Heb.x.12,13). This is the day of Christ's mediatorial work. The day of His royal triumph is yet future. To it, in faith and confidence, the devoted servant of God ever presses. Even in its bright forecast, faith gains an inspired vision, hope an assured anchorage, and love an unbounded fulness of reality and power. The judgment beyond will afford no sense of dread to those whose daily effort it is to secure to themselves participation in the glories of Christ's millennial reign.

We will now concentrate attention upon Israel's true place in the present dispensation. The pictures drawn for us in the prophetic, and reproduced in the New Testament writings are truly graphic in their clearness, fulness, and beauty.

In the prophecies bearing upon the present or exile-state of Ephraim-Israel, two apparently opposed lines of divine conduct are forcibly and beautifully blended. And it is this peculiar blending which has instrumentally led to the full and clear accomplishment of the divine pleasure concerning this branch of the elect Hebrew family. In no other respect is the wisdom and foreknowledge of God so powerfully set forth. Those who love to recognise the attributes of the deity in full and active operation, need wish no more striking examples than are supplied in the reverently studied history of the House of Israel during our present era.

The diverse lines of divine conduct herein referred to, may be expressively and conveniently called restraint and constraint. The two motive influences are inseparably linked together, made subservient to the attainment of one grand end, and their action so governed that the involved object cannot fail of its accomplishment. But the singularity of the human position in respect to them is that only the action of one has been under observation. These have been quick to recognise the restraining hand of Jehovah. That Israel was cast forth from the land of promise for her sin has never been lost sight of. Nor has it been overlooked that the hand of divine correction would pursue her into exile. Nay, so far has this view been carried that the House of Israel has been looked upon as non-existent, or as so far under divine displeasure as to be beyond recovery. In taking such a view, we should be acting in disregard of what Jehovah has declared by His prophet:—"For My thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways My ways, saith the Lord. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are My ways higher than your ways, and My thoughts than your thoughts. For as the rain cometh down, and the snow from heaven, and returneth not thither, but watereth the earth and maketh it bring forth and bud, that it may give seed to the sower, and bread to the eater: so shall My word be that goeth forth out of My mouth—it shall not return unto Me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and prosper in the thing whereto I sent it." This strong and striking declaration prepares our minds for rich and powerful displays of divine overruling, and when we are confronted with the words, "I will work, and who shall let it?" may we not take upon ourselves the prophet's resolve, "I will wait upon the Lord that hideth His face from the House of Jacob, and I will look for Him." (Isa. viii. 17).

In the concentration of attention to the divine correction, sight has all but been lost of the promises which abound in the prophets affecting the position of Israel in her exile-state. Complaint cannot be fairly made that this has been so; but why should we shrink from the effort to realise the truth of the position when in the fulness of God's appointed time the hitherto secret operations of sovereign power are being unfolded before us?

Our position in this particular respect is strengthened by the due consideration of those pledges which the Divine Guarantor of Israel's covenant blessings has given by the mouth of His servants, the prophets. Vain was the thought of their brethren of the House of Judah that Israel had departed from under covenant mercy, for how powerful the words of reproof: "Son of man, thy brethren, even thy brethren, the men of thy kindred, and all the House of Israel, all of them, are they unto whom the inhabitants of Jerusalem have said, Get you far from the Lord; unto us is this land given for a possession—therefore say, Thus saith the Lord God: Whereas I have removed them far off among the nations, and whereas I have scattered them among the countries, yet will I be to them a sanctuary for a little while in the countries where they are come" (Ezek. xi. 14—16). Note here the strong recognition which Jehovah gives to His own out of expatriation. But yet, though He is not openly manifested as the God of His people, yet His covenant mercies are continued with them, and wherever they should go, His gracious favour would be extended to them. And where would they not go? By another prophet the statement was made, "For, lo, I will command, and I will sift (or cause to move to and fro—marg.) the House of Israel among all nations like as corn is sifted in a sieve, yet shall not the least grain fall upon the earth" (Amos ix. 9). Here we have the grand reason supplied for the continual presence of God with Israel. If the chosen seed of Israel were thus to be mingled among the people of the earth so as to be indistinguishable to human recognition, and yet plainly and unmistakably preserved, what other hand than that of Omnipotence could accomplish so miraculous a result? And so in words which deal with both phases of the divine dealing, the command is given, "Fear not," accompanied by the assurance, "for thou shalt not be ashamed; neither be thou confounded; for thou shalt not be put to shame: for thou shalt forget the shame of thy youth, and the reproach of thy widowhood shalt thou remember no more. For thy Maker is thine Husband: the Lord of Hosts is His name: and the Holy One of Israel is thy Redeemer; the God of the whole earth shall He be called. For the Lord hath called thee as a wife forsaken and grieved in spirit, even a wife of youth, when she is cast off, saith thy God. For a small moment have I forsaken thee; but with great mercies will I gather thee. In a little wrath I hid Myself from thee for a moment, but with everlasting kindness will I have mercy on thee, saith the Lord thy Redeemer." And then in words of glowing reference to the covenant with Noah, of the stability of which we have ourselves seen the sign stretched in freshness and beauty across the heavens—"the bow in the clouds"—the divine utterance proceeds: "For this is as the waters of Noah unto Me: for as I have sworn that the waters of Noah should no more go over the earth, so have I sworn that I would not be wroth with thee, nor rebuke thee. For the mountains shall depart, and the hills be removed; but My kindness shall not depart from thee, neither shall the covenant of My peace be removed, saith the Lord that hath mercy on thee" (Isa. liv. 6—12). What striking, soul-stirring words are these! What a strong assurance have we of the transition from the wrathful displeasure which attended exile to the fulness of love and covenant favour!

Digitized by Google

But yet another guarantee. "And the Word of the Lord came unto Jeremiah, saying, Considerest thou not what this people have spoken, saying, The two families which the Lord did choose, He hath even cast them off; thus do they despise My people, that they should be no more a nation before them. Thus saith the Lord, If My covenant of day and night stand not, if I have not appointed the ordinances of heaven and earth—then will I cast away the seed of Jacob and of David My servant, so that I will not take of his seed to be rulers over the seed of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob—for I will cause their captivity to return, and will have mercy on them" (Jer. xxxiii. 23—26). But not only is the past and the present referred to, but the future is anticipated in another very striking form. For God, by Isaiah (lxvi. 22), "For as the new heavens and the new earth which I will make, shall remain before Me, saith the Lord, so shall your seed and your name remain." And so through all time will the promise stand sure. "No weapon that is formed against thee shall prosper, and every tongue that shall rise against thee in judgment thou shalt condemn. This is the heritage of the servants of the Lord, and their righteousness, which is of Me, saith the Lord" (Isa. liv. 17).

After the perusal of the passages now quoted, surely there is no candid reader of the Sacred Word who would lend themselves to the adoption of the notion that Ephraim-Israel—the House of Israel—are at the present moment not in existence. The responsibility accepted by the promulgation of such a view would be very great indeed. The argument will not avail that Israel was to be punished for her sins, and as such was cast off, removed from the divine mercy, and the favour of Heaven. To rest contented with such a view is to display the utmost ignorance of the Word of God. The driving of the House of Israel into captivity—the scattering and sifting of the chosen seed—their suffered abandonment to their own ways and follies—and the removal from off them of the visible marks of divine recognition—all these Jehovah claims as His own acts. There is no discovery in them, therefore, on the part of man. They are so plainly impressed upon every prophecy that their clearness and fulness cannot well be missed. No flexibility of purpose—no turning aside from the enforcement of the mission entrusted to the elect seed, is anywhere discernible. Rather otherwise must we expect it to be; for hath not God said, "I, the Lord, change not: therefore ye sons of Jacob are not consumed." We must, then, not merely look for the preservation of Israel, but for their retention in a position in which they will be enabled to show forth the praises of their covenant God. But when did they become so placed? This is the all-important question for our present care and thought.

One of the most striking passages in the whole range of prophecy here demands attention. "But there shall be no gloom to her that was in anguish. In the former time He brought into contempt the land of Zebulon and the land of Naphtali, but in the latter time hath He made it glorious, by the way of the sea, beyond Jordan, Galilee of the nations. The people that walked in darkness have seen a great light: they that dwelt in the land of the shadow of death, upon them hath the light shined" (Isa ix. 1—3). The immediate application of this passage in Matt. iv. to our Lord's Galilean ministry, gives a chronological commencement to its realisation. We thus are taught that immediately Christ came, and opened up the Gospel work, there was the time for the transition to take place in Israel's history—the time when she should cease to be suffered to pursue paths of her own, and be placed under the constraint of the divine hand.

(To be continued.)

LECTURE IN ST. JOHN'S SCHOOLS, MIDDLESBOROUGH.

[From the "Daily Exchange," Middlesborough, Feb. 19, 1887.]

PART I.

On Wednesday night Mr. R. Lamb delivered a lecture, entitled, "Where are the Ten Lost Tribes of Israel?" in the St. John's Schools, under the auspices of the local branch of the C.E.W.M.S., more especially for those who honestly have difficulties in reconciling apparently conflicting statements of the Bible.

Mr. J. Marney presided. He stated, in introducing the lecturer, that he believed it was a disputed point whether there was more than one tribe now. Some people held that the Jews constituted the whole of the race. He commented on the fact that many people in the present day were puzzled and uncertain about certain parts of Scripture which were apparently contradictory, and concluded by saying that he considered those who removed them, or did whatever they could to do so, were conferring a boon on humanity.

The lecturer preluded his remarks by mentioning that it was a very debateable question. He had considered it for 20 years, and he would only utter what were his convictions, and the facts relevant to the subject upon which scientific light had been thrown recently. The view he took of the subject seemed to be so utterly at variance with the common teaching and the collegiate education in this matter, that it was almost impossible for the clergy to look at the matter seriously. They therefore went on preaching "We are Gentiles!" Now, he did not believe that they were Gentiles—they, the Anglo-Saxon race. He believed they were Gentilised Hebrews. He believed that they were descended from God's ancient people—not from the Jews, but from a different section of the Hebrew people altogether. As the chairman had stated, the general impression was that the Jews constituted the whole of the Hebrew race. If that were the case, he would be in a very difficult position that night. It might be asked what matter it made. Well, it meant a great deal, and it touched them in a national point. It was the most important subject under consideration at the present day, and he wondered that ministers did not take it up. Working men shared his views, but latterly they had got some eminent scientific men, and also theologians on their side. To bring his argument at the outset very clearly before them, he gave an illustration which was as lucid as it was probable. He contrasted the Punic and Irish languages. He chose the phrase "Oh! may the good Baal favour thee!" In Punic, which was the Canaanitish language, it was as follows: "Gan ebel Balsameni ar a san," while in Irish at the present day it was "Guna bil Balsamen ar a son." Well, this showed that if it were not an Hibernianism to say so, the Canaanite language was Irish, or, to put it the other way, that the Irish language was that of Canaan. Well, the fact was that those who could speak pure Irish could understand Canaanitish. They would find two very long pages in McDermott's history of Ireland, now a scarce work, but there was one in Durham, giving a similar illustration. Mr. Chamberlain, the other day, got into very sad disgrace with a section of his political friends by saying that there were two sorts or two nations in Ireland. He (the lecturer) contended that there were two. It was in the South-west where they always had trouble, and they were Phœnician settlers to whom this land belonged. Consequently they were Canaanites. The Hebrews were commanded to destroy the Canaanites, but the women of Canaan were beautiful, and the Hebrews did not follow out the command. For this they were told that the nation "would be hewers of wood and drawers of water to My people." The South-west people of Ireland were doing the menial work for others. Some time ago a newspaper said that the Irish question was a thorn in the side of the body politic of England. In the Bible the Hebrews were told the Canaanites would be a thorn in their flesh for ever. Some years ago, in London, he heard an Atheist lecture, which stated that the Bible was unworthy of credence, because it said in one part that these people shall be few in number, and in another they shall be a multitudinous people. Comparatively, the Jews were not so, because they were estimated to be about seven millions altogether. He went on to the platform and explained that the people who were to be few in number were the Jews belonging to the House of Judah, and the Israelites were to be multitudinous. There were two divisions of Hebrews. To this the Atheist retorted that the ministers did not teach that. "No," he (the lecturer) replied; "if they did you wouldn't have a leg to stand upon." The rebellion that was made after the death of Solomon divided the people of God into two distinct nations. The one section were dispersed, the other outcast; and, if they notice, these were the words that were used throughout in application to the two nations. In 740, B.C., the Assyrian monarch carried out a ruthless policy of expatriation. In order to break the power and destroy the nationality he took hundreds away, and placed hundreds in their places in whatever towns he conquered. They were never allowed to return to Canaan. The Samaritans cleverly evaded their removal by stating falsely where they came from. This made them hated. These people who were expatriated certainly never returned, and he could give testimonies from 60 commentators to bear this out. In the second book of Kings they were told that they were removed to a river South of the Caspian Sea. Turner, the great historian of the Anglo-Saxon race, had traced Saxons there. After speaking at considerable length on this point, and explaining it in detail, he stated that the religion of the 42 countries which the Assyrian king had conquered was identical with that of the Druids. Since the Reformation they had returned to a surer path, and in their Church they asked God to perform the mercy which He promised to their father Abraham, and to remember His Holy Covenant. He had said that if they returned to Him He would remember His Covenant. They had done so, and consequently it would be in remembrance. They had become the chief of nations, the greatest of Christian people, and held all the strong points of the earth, and no other nation was more able or more likely to restore the Jews to Palestine than were the English, who had always given them protection. The Welsh people were the first arrivals in England. Their great writers advised students of Hebrew to learn Welsh first, because it was alike nearly in every respect, and especially in pronunciation. The Welsh people to this day called their country Khumree; and there was an inscription in the British Museum which has on it the words "Beth Khumree." This inscription bore out the Scriptures in regard to the matter. In conclusion, he referred to the story of the two sons in the vineyard. He believed the story had a deeper meaning. There were two sections of the Hebrew people. The Jews said they would do the work, but they didn't. They even rejected the Messiah. The others who refused went into the wilderness, but afterwards repented, and now they were doing the work. Not so much as they ought to perhaps, but they would do more if they knew it was their proper work. As soon as Judas Iscariot betrayed the Saviour the brotherhood ceased, and the 11-12ths, the great portion, did not share in the Crucifixion. Jesus said to the Jews that "the kingdom of God shall be taken from you, and shall be given unto a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof," and that was why, the lecturer considered, Christianity was so soon brought to England after the Crucifixion.

Digitized by Google

The lecture was listened to throughout with great interest, and a discussion followed. Mr. Howe stated that although he had no objections to bring against the lecture, he was inclined to accept, unpleasant as it was, that they were part of the Jews, yet he was compelled to think that the lecturer left them where they began, and one involuntarily asked the question, Where are the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel?

(To be continued.)

"THE MULTITUDE OF NATIONS."

THE Colonial Office has lately issued the following notice or "statement," which appeared in the London papers of March 18th, 1887. Those who can read this announcement without being reminded of God's promise to Jacob, "a nation and a company of nations shall be of thee," or of the prophecy of Jacob respecting his grandson Ephraim, "his seed shall become a multitude of nations," must indeed be wanting in the knowledge of Scripture, and callous as to the condition and future prospects of their own native land (Gen. xxxv. 11 and xlviii. 19). What appears clear from these two passages is this: that Jacob's offspring, Joseph and Ephraim, were destined to inherit the birthright blessing, being the possessors of the multitudinousness promised to Abraham, such developing also into the national blessing implied in the fact that Ephraim, as representing Joseph's House, was to become "a great and mighty nation," a "confederation of nations," numerous as a multitude of independent States, all clustering round the parent "mother of nations" (Gen. xvii. 4, 6, 16). What have we now in the colonial office's statements? We have the recognition of the fact that at least eleven colonial governments, ranking to-day as independent nations, endowed with separate and free governments of their own, were to meet in this country in an official capacity, by the representation of their respective delegated officers. It appears, too, that the object of their meeting under the hospitable roof of their "Mother in the West," was to work out a plan for mutual defence in war, for postal and other intercommunication, and to devise plans generally for a closer federation in other matters. The eleven Colonial governments were to be represented by twenty-four officials belonging to their respective countries, and they were to be met by the Secretary of State for the Colonies, and addressed probably at the opening of the Conference by the British Prime Minister himself. The meeting was indeed a solemn and unique one, such as our country, and indeed the world, has never witnessed before. We can see that it partakes also of a prophetic character; for it is easy to discern that the meeting of this conference will be the prelude to a closer union of the now separated Colonial Empire of Her Majesty, and that it is the precursor of what is known among us everywhere to-day as "the Federation of the Empire." The statement was to the following effect:—

THE COLONIAL CONFERENCE.

We have received the following statement from the Colonial Office:—

The conference of delegates and representatives from the principal colonies will assemble on Monday, the 4th of April, at 11 o'clock, under the presidency of the Right Hon. Sir Henry Holland, G.C.M.G., M.P., Secretary of State for the Colonies. The first meeting will take place in the Conference-room at the Foreign Office, when the Prime Minister and other members of the Government will be present, and a certain number of peers, members of Parliament, and other gentlemen of distinction connected with the colonies, will also be invited. The subsequent meetings of the conference will be held at the Colonial Office, and will be conducted in private.

Digitized by Google

The names of the delegates expected to be present are as follows:

Canada.—Sir A. Campbell, K.C.M.G.

Victoria.—Sir Graham Berry, K.C.M.G. (Agent-General), the Hon. A. Deakin (Chief Secretary), the Hon. J. Lorimer (Minister of Colonial Defence), and the Hon. J. Service (late Premier).

New South Wales.—Sir Saul Samuel, K.C.M.G. (Agent-General), Sir P. Jennings, K.C.M.G. (late Premier), and the Hon. R. Wisdom.

South Australia.—The Hon. J. W. Downer (Premier), and Sir Arthur Blyth, K.C.M.G. (Agent-General).

Queensland.—Sir Samuel Griffith, K.C.M.G. (Premier), and Sir James Garrick, K.C.M.G. (Agent-General).

Western Australia.—The Hon. John Forrest (Commissioner of Crown Lands) and Mr. Septimus Burt.

Tasmania.—The Hon. John Stockell Dodds (Attorney-General), and Mr. Adye Douglas (Agent-General).

New Zealand.—Sir W. Fitzherbert, K.C.M.G. (Speaker of Legislative Council), and Sir F. Dillon Bell, K.C.M.G. (Agent-General).

Newfoundland. The Hon. R. Thorburn (Premier), and Sir Ambrose Shea, K.C.M.G.

Cape of Good Hope.—The Hon. T. Upington (Attorney-General), the Hon. J. Hofmeyer, and Sir Charles Mills, K.C.M.G. (Agent-General).

Natal.—Mr. J. Robinson.

The Governments of the colonies not possessing responsible government will not be officially represented at the conference, but the Secretary of State will invite gentlemen specially conversant with the affairs of any such colony to attend at the opening meeting, and also during the subsequent discussion of any particular subject, should it be thought that their local knowledge would be useful.

Should the Secretary of State be unable to be present at any meeting of the conference, his place will be taken by the Earl of Onslow, the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State.

The conference will sit from the 4th of April to the 7th, inclusive, and will then adjourn, probably until the 15th.

Mr. W. A. Baillie Hamilton, private secretary to Sir Henry Holland, has been appointed to act as secretary to the conference, and all communications on the subject should be addressed to him at the Colonial Office, Downing-street.

Here we see the fact acknowledged that within Her Majesty's empire there are at least eleven governments possessing "responsible government," a circumstance which necessarily ranks them among "the nations" of the earth. These responsible governments, and therefore nations, are at this moment part and parcel of Her Majesty Queen Victoria's empire. Consequently we are already, in the language of Scripture, "a nation and a company of nations," in the aspect we present to the world. But our union is of an indefinite character, and requires to be clearly traced and established, with the consent of all the confederated members. To carry this out into the domain of practical politics is the object of the now sitting Conference. Men say that the difficulties to be overcome in effecting the object will prove almost, if not altogether, insuperable. But we have no such fears. This nation and her colonies are "the House of Israel," whose representative was prophetically considered "the House of Joseph," or "Ephraim." That House is to develop into "a nation," as the central link, and "a company or crowd of federated 'nations,'" which together, situated as they strategically are in the most favourable positions of the earth, will dominate the same in the interests of peace. The prospect before us is glorious and very cheering. For not only is this powerful cluster of States one which has God for its King, and the Lord Jesus Christ for its Redeemer, Saviour, and Deliverer, but it has the promise also of the outpouring of the divine Spirit to give it national repentance, to teach it God's will and word, to give it revivals of religion, and the new covenant of the Lord God of Israel. Then will be fulfilled, in the case of British-Israel, such spiritual promises as those contained in Jer. xxxi. 8, 9, 33, 34; Heb. viii. 10—12; Joel ii. 28, 29; Psa. cxlvii. 19, 20; and to the Lord Jehovah will be all the praise.

Review.

A Message to the Church from the Nineteenth Century. By the late Right Rev. Bishop Titcomb, D.D. Robert Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, 1887. Price 3s.

PART I.

We welcome another thoughtful argumentative volume from the graceful pen of (alas! the late) Bishop Titcomb, and regard it as a timely help in our contention for the truth—one which the clergy and ministers of our day ought to respect. The work is a scholarly contribution to our subject, and one which cannot be set aside or ridiculed. The late Bishop has thought out and produced a line of argument which he believed rests on no fanciful interpretations of Scripture, and only adduced as "evidence" what he believed does not rest on "wild and imaginary fancies." Many of our writers, he declared, "have laid themselves open to this charge—first by picking out isolated texts, and then arbitrarily piecing them into modern events, without the least regard to careful criticism." What the author meant by this denunciation, or against whom it is directed, we are not told; but we need not remain in any doubt that he had in his mind those who rely upon what they believe regarding the British Queen's alleged present occupation of the throne of David. In appendix F, at p. 139, the Bishop put his foot down firmly, and declared against the entire assumption, believing the idea to be "unscriptural, and calculated to bring the whole subject upon which he has written into public discredit." The grounds for the Bishop's strong condemnation of what nine-tenths of our Anglo-Israelites hold dear as a vital point, as one which also answers the infidel, we must consider further on. At present we indicate the fact, and also admit what we fear puts the late bishop's ban upon the question of "The Gates," as a piece of material evidence—namely, that his book is utterly silent respecting them, and does not indeed once quote Gen. xxii. 17, 18 as a text material to our contention. This is the more extraordinary because he dealt largely with the question of the blessings connected with Ephraim-Israel's prosperity as a nation—their excessive multitudinousness—their Gospel message to all the nations of the earth. Everything, in short, but "the Gates." If we are wrong in recognising our "coaling stations," and other strategic places which are not coaling stations as "the Gates" of prophecy, then the bishop might have enlightened us as to what God's oath meant when He told Abraham on Mount Moriah that "his seed should possess the Gate of his enemies." Only once does the subject of the Gates come into notice in the book—on page 68, where the late bishop quoted Isa. xxvi. 2, and told us "the Gates" in that text described "the land in general." He quoted, also, Deut. xxviii. 52, Lam. i. 4, and Exod. xx. 10, to prove the same point—namely, that the expression referred to the land of Palestine, or Zion. But he did not say that in Gen. xxii. 17, where the promise was that the seed of Abraham were to possess the Gate of their enemies, the Lord merely meant that the land of Palestine was to be theirs. We presume, however, the Bishop's silence meant that; and if so, we remark that he had changed his views since the second edition of the "Anglo-Israel Post Bag" was published in May, 1876. For there, in very explicit terms, the Bishop gave in his adhesion to the subject of "the Gates," as we hold it, quoted the Inquiry in loco word for word, and spoke of the confirmation the Gates gave us of our nation's unmistakable inheritance in the promises. We have the "vast colonial Empire," wrote the Bishop then (page 166, "Post Bag"), and "even up to the present moment possession also of the Gates of our enemies." It probably was not within the scope of the late Bishop's plan to enter now on the question of "the Gates," or quote God's oath in Gen. xxii. 17, 18. If so, we marvel that while almost all other "Identifications" have a place in his book, this "confirmation" of all the rest departs out of the list, rejected by the Bishop, as by Mr. Hine, the Rev. R. Douglas, and others, who, on various points, decline longer "to see eye to eye" with the writers in the BANNER OF ISRAEL. However that may be, we think the book the good bishop has given us is a very thoughtful and excellent one, and we are greatly pleased with it. We are glad to see on page 81 that the author once for all parted with the Teutonic theory, "and will have no more of it!" He tried the nations of Europe to see if there are any but the British who correspond with the Bible portrait of "Ephraim-Israel regenerated," and he found first that Russia fails, second that the French do not come up to the standard, and third, that the German Empire (Mr. Douglas's protégés) are nowhere! "Where is her foreign Empire?" asked the Bishop. "Is she the mother of nations? Has she colonies in the waste places of the earth? Does she remember God in far countries? Does she honour 'the Sabbath?' Is she a maritime people, having ships of Tarshish? or a 'messenger people?' Finally, is she the nation of Europe to which Judah would be likely 'to walk' for an alliance when seeking restoration to the ancient Inheritance?" To all these questions the Bishop answered "No, no, no!" And he turned at last and indicated what the Nineteenth Century says of the British Empire. He found (in chap x.) that our Queen's Dominion is unique among the sovereignties of the world. In area and population it is grander, he said, than Nebuchadnezzar's, than Darius', than Alexander's, than Cæsar's. It is the fifth Empire of the vision of Daniel—five times as large as the Persian Empire under Darius; four times that of Rome under Augustine; an eighth larger than all the Russias; sixteen times that of France, and forty times as big as Germany! (page 84). The Bishop won't hear of the objection that Britain is one of the ten toes of the Roman Empire, and so cuts off the Rev. W. Baxter's opposition (page 84); and then he quotes eleven witnesses (some from the BANNER) to show and prove Britain's "stupendous extension." All this the Bishop calls "probable evidence," a term the meaning of which we scarcely comprehend. In the language of the Courts, it is not admissible at all if it be not "evidence" or proof of the matter in dispute. It is admissible, for the Bishop produces and exhibits it, and it testifies to the point at issue—namely, that the British nation has in modern days (our Christian Dispensation) enormously extended, till it is an Empire which exactly corresponds with the Empire promised to Ephraim-Israel. If the British did not answer to this sign, then such evidence, if produced by the opponents, would destroy our case. It is admissible on ours, and proves the fact asserted—namely, that in this matter, too, we respond to the features of Israel, and so far there is established thereby Our Identity with them. "Probable evidence" is simply, we believe, a misnomer. The author holds with us that our geographical location answers to that of regenerated Ephraim—viz., "the Isles of the Sea" in "the North and West" (page 107). He pointed out that we have "the blessings of the deep," promised to Joseph; that we are the Gospel messenger nation described in Isa. xviii., represented by the ships and land of Tarshish, which he distinctly identified with the British (page 108, and appendix B). He found that the Jews are "walking" to us as they were destined to walk to the House of Israel (Jer. iii. 18); and he argued, therefore, that we are that House. He felt that we are fulfilling the prophecy in Isa. xix. 23—24, in respect to Egypt and Assyria, or Armenia; and on page 111 he drew the inference that here, too, we respond to Israel's portrait, and must be they. He referred to Ezek. xxxviii., and found the young lions of Tarshish are the colonies of Great Britain, coming to the aid of their old mother in the West, just as they did in the Egyptian war (page 113).

Digitized by Google

The Bishop has a chapter on the ethnological difficulty, which, however, is too sketchy to be satisfactory; and he answers a few practical difficulties (page 118) which have often been met in the BANNER. The Bishop's reasons, however, are all sound, logical, and cogent, and we hope our opponents will one and all read them, mark, learn, and inwardly digest them to their own satisfaction and conviction. We are glad to see the Bishop holds with us that "Jacob's trouble" is a season of trouble, trial, and sifting, which we as a nation must go through (page 122); and we commend the Bishop's words of wisdom in this respect to all it may concern. We are thankful for this timely volume, and if the author could not quite see with us in the matter of the Gates, we gladly welcome his calmly-reasoned book without them, satisfied, however, that one day all men will accept them (as the late Bishop saw the truth about Germany), and admit that, after all, the Gates are the crucial fact of the whole matter, and are so represented in God's oath in Gen. xxii. 17. Though the author saw fit to dismiss the Gates now with a silence which is remarkable, if not positively deplorable, we know that they constitute a part, and a very important central portion, of a wondrous passage, relating to a Hebrew nation, such as he describes Ephraim-Israel to be in the Christian, evangelising period of their history. One word more in respect to the moot point that "Queen Victoria sits upon the Throne of David." The bishop said it was impossible this could be true, because the promise was to A MAN, and that could not possibly have reference to A WOMAN. Also, that the Throne of David was to be over the Twelve Tribes, not over the Ten. Christ alone, he added, is heir of the Throne of David, and "He is now seated on that throne in Heaven" (page 142). This assertion surprises us! Where in the four corners of the Bible can anyone find the Throne of David described as the Heavenly Throne of Christ to-day? We find, on the contrary, that He Himself said in Rev. iii. 21 R.V. that He is now seated "with His Father on His throne." David's Throne was in Jerusalem. There Christ is to reign over His ancients gloriously, as Isa. xxiv. 23 teaches us; and over the House of Jacob (an earthly, but not a heavenly people), the angel declared in Luke i. 32 Jesus was yet to reign (see, too, Micah iv. 7; Isa. ix. 6—7, &c., &c.). In regard to the promise that a man should never be lacking to sit on the Throne of David, surely the bishop was aware that the word Ish, used in Jer. xxxiii. 17, 1 Kings viii. 25, and other like passages, refers to "a human being," but not to the sex of the sovereign; also that the Ten-Tribed House is even now, and always has been, a representative House containing families of Judah among them, as Jer. xxiv. sufficiently proves? Besides, by refusing the teaching that the British Queen's throne is to-day David's throne, and that she is a descendant of Zedekiah's royal lineage, how can men harmonize the prophecies? Zedekiah's offspring failed in the male line in B.C. 588. But it was to continue "till Shiloh come" (Gen. xlix. 10). By what process of reasoning can it be made to appear that Christ reigned on David's Throne from B.C. 588, when Zedekiah was deposed, till the first advent? And how can anyone show us that Christ Jesus became "King" on David's throne while on earth? or that when He ascended He found David's throne, formerly in Jerusalem, transported to the heavens, and that it was there occupied by Him? The Scriptures deny the facts! Can we allow such a triumph to the Infidel as all this would constitute? Let Jer. xxxiii. 25, 26, decide the point.

(To be continued).

THE "BANNER" BRITISH-ISRAELITE JUBILEE FUND.

THE CHURCH MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

	£	s.	d.		£	s.	d.
Mrs. Rush	0	2	6	Mrs. Thompson	0	2	6
Miss Rush	0	2	6	F. E. C.	0	1	3
Miss E. M. Rush	0	2	6	Ephraim	1	0	0
Mrs. Reep	0	10	0	Mrs. Terry	0	5	0
A. I.	1	0	0	Miss F. Nuttall	0	10	0
Mrs. Mathie	0	6	0	J. H.	0	5	0
W. W. Ince, Esq.	1	0	0	Mrs. Bailey	0	10	0
M. R.	0	10	0	Mr. John Spencer Hall	1	0	0
R. F. Banks, Esq.	0	10	6	Mrs. Brake	0	10	0
Miss M. Chatfield	0	2	6	The Misses Parker	0	5	0
H. E. T.	0	10	0	F. R. Clarke, Esq.	0	2	6
Colonel Thompson	0	2	6
					9	10	3

THE JEWS' SOCIETY.

	£	s.	d.		£	s.	d.
M. K.	0	10	0	The Misses Price	0	5	0
Miss L. E. M. Richards	0	2	6	The Lady Jane Ellice	2	0	0
					2	17	6

THE BIBLE SOCIETY.

	£	s.	d.		£	s.	d.
R. F. Banks, Esq.	0	10	6	The Lady Jane Ellice	3	0	0
Colonel Thompson	0	2	6	E. L.	0	5	0
Mrs. Thompson	0	2	6	L. L.	0	5	0
F. E. C.	0	1	3
					4	6	9

The Editor of the BANNER requests Association Secretaries to be good enough to remit to him all sums paid to them from time to time on account of the above Funds. PHILO-ISRAEL.

April 4th, 1886.

NEWCASTLE ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.—Last night, the annual meeting of the Newcastle Anglo-Israel Association was held in the hall of the Church of the Venerable Bede, Gateshead. A large number of members and friends sat down to tea, after which a meeting was held, presided over by the Rev. James Macintosh, and speeches were delivered by the Rev. H. Morton, the Rev. Mr. Watt, Captain Watkins, and Mr. J. G. Taylor. At intervals selections of music were rendered by a string band.—Newcastle Evening Chronicle, March 30, 1887.

Digitized by Google

NOTICES.

All communications intended for the Editor, to be addressed:—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Clifton, Bristol.

SUBSCRIPTIONS £ s. d.

Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free - 0 7 6
Two Copies (including Double Numbers) - - 0 13 6
Three Copies " " " " - 1 0 4
Four Copies " " " " - 1 5 6
Six Copies " " " " - 1 16 4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-grand, London, to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C., or F. W. PARRY & Co., 29, Paternoster-row, London.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

Contents Bills and Show Cards may be obtained on application to the Publishers.

Advertisements should be sent to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

Prepaid Advertisements are inserted at the rate of 30 words for 1s. 4d.

A GENTLEMAN and his wife require Board (with separate Dining Room, available also as Sitting Room) in a quiet family in suburban locality. Terms, £100 per annum. Address, "Alma," Banner of Israel Office, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

THE BRITISH-ISRAEL IDENTITY ASSOCIATION, 24, Newington (off Renshaw-street), Liverpool. The Social Gathering to close the Lecture Season, will be held (D.V.) on Thursday, April 21st, at the above address. Tea on the table at 6 30 prompt, after which an Address will be delivered by Rev. HENRY ROE, of Dawley, Salop. Tickets, One Shilling each, to be had at the above address, or from the "Howe Machine Company," 34, Renshaw Street. Please secure Tickets or advise Secretary not later than the 20th.

NOW READY.

SPLENDID PHOTOS OF THE LATE BISHOP TITCOMB.

Sent post free, Carte de Visite, 1s., Cabinet 2s., direct from the Publishers,

F. W. PARRY & Co., 29, Paternoster Row, E.C.

ANGLO-ISRAEL FREE DISTRIBUTION FUND. Donations will be gratefully received and acknowledged by the Treasurer, Miss Lawrence, Rosslyn, Hampton-road, Upper Teddington; by the Hon. Sec., Miss E. M. Rush, 103, Burnt Ash-road, Lee, London, S.E.; by the Secretary, C. Horner, Esq., 34, Sheen Park, Richmond, Surrey; or by the Hon. Local Secretaries, Mr. John May, 26, Piazzi Miratore, Floriana, Malta; E. C Baxter, Esq., Vryburgh, Bechuanaland, S. Africa; and E. L. Dwyer, Esq. Sand Hill, Launceston, Tasmania.

WORKS BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

The Geography of the Gates. With Map and six full page, and one double-page, Illustrations, printed on plate paper. 208 pages, in handsome cloth, gilt Price 3s. 6d., post free 3s. 10d.

An Elementary Digest or Sketch of the Chief Facts and Teachings of the Great Pyramid of Egypt. Adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific 56 pages, Illustrated with Diagrams, price 4d., post free 5d. 10th Thousand.

Our Identity with the House of Israel. Price 4d. Reprinted from "Clifton Chronicle Letters"

The History of the House of Israel; How they were Lost, and How they were Found, Told for the Children. Price 6d., cloth 1s.; post free 7d. and 1s. 1d. Fourth Edition. Eleventh thousand.

A Resume of the Scriptural Argument, proving the Identity of the British Race with the Lost Ten Tribes. Price 1d.; 6s. per 100. New edition now ready.

R. Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

ISRAEL IN THE NEW TESTAMENT

OR.

Proofs of the National Conversion of the Ten Tribes to Christianity.

By SURGEON-GENERAL J. M. GRANT, M.D.

Price 4d., post free, 4½d.; 12 Copies, post free, 4s.

London: R. Banks and Son, Racquet Court, Fleet St., and by order of all Booksellers.

The Identity Demonstrated

See new book by the Rev. R. DOUGLAS, M.A., (Vicar of Kidsgrove, Stoke-on-Trent), entitled,

Ephraim-England.

PRICE 4s., Cloth Gilt.

London: Sold by R. Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet street, E.C., who will forward a copy free on receipt of P.O

A New Work on the Identity of Lost Israel

By the late BISHOP TITCOMB.

Now ready, in Cloth Gilt, Bevelled Boards, Imperial 8vo. Price 3s.; sent Post Free for Postal Order or Stamps.

A MESSAGE TO THE CHURCH

FROM

THE NINETEENTH CENTURY,

BY THE LATE

RT. REV. BISHOP TITCOMB, D.D.

(This work was completed by the late Bishop only a week previous to his death).

London: Robert Banks & Son, Racquet court, Fleet-st. F. W. Parry & Co., Paternoster-row, and all booksellers.

PUBLISHED BY ROBT. BANKS & SON,
RACQUET COURT, FLEET STREET, E.C.

JEHOVAH TRIUMPHANT. The New and Complete Theology and Electric Light of the Bible, containing the History of British-Israel, Compiled from the Sacred Scriptures. Cloth gilt, price 10s. 6d., post free for Postal Order or Cheque.

THE GEOGRAPHY OF THE GATES. By PHILO-ISRAEL. With Map, and six full page, and one double-page, Illustrations, printed on plate paper. 208 pages, in handsome cloth, gilt. Price 3s. 6d.; post free.

THE WORD: THE WORLD: THE BRANCH. By J. LEYLAND FIELDEN, Esq. Price 12s., post free.

EPHRAIM-ENGLAND. The Nineteenth Century Revelation of the Fruits of History. By Rev. R. DOUGLAS, Vicar of Kidsgrove. Cloth gilt, lettered, 4s., gilt edges 5s., free by post.

FIFTY REASONS WHY THE ANGLO-SAXONS ARE ISRAELITES of the Lost Tribes of the House of Israel. By Rev. W. H. POOLE, D.D. Price 6d., post free 7d.

BIBLE LESSONS AND REFLECTIONS. By the late ROBERT GAIRDNER, of Kilmarnock, N.B. Price 2s. 6d., by post 2s. 9d.; cheap edition, limp cloth, 1s., by post, 1s. 2d.

THE ANGLO-ISRAEL POST-BAG; or, How Arthur Came to See It. By the Right Rev. BISHOP TITCOMB. Price 2s. 6d. in cloth gilt; paper cover, 1s. 6d., by post 1d. extra.

THE ISRAELITES FOUND IN THE ANGLO-SAXONS. The Ten Tribes supposed to have been Lost, traced from the land of their captivity to their occupation of the Isles of the Sea. By WILLIAM CARPENTER. Price 2s. 6d., by post 2s. 8d.

THE ANSWER TO THE EASTERN QUESTION, With Some Facts Concerning the Identity of the British With Israel. By the Author of "The New Old Story," enlarged. Price 3d.; for distribution, 50 copies, 11s., post free.

CARDINAL PROOFS THAT THE BRITISH Are the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel—the Abrahamic Covenant. By F. W. PHILLIPS. With two chapters by PHILO-ISRAEL. Price 6d., post free 7d.

THE NEW OLD STORY. By "A E I." Price 6d., post free; in cloth, 1s., post free.

THE BIBLE ATLAS. To Illustrate the Old and New Testaments. Price 1s.; post free 1s. 1d.

ANGLO-ISRAEL TRACTS. 8 pp, Royal 16mo., on toned paper. Adapted to enclose in letters, and for general distribution. No. 1—12. Half-penny each, 12 copies, post free, 6d. Specimen packet for 6 stamps.

PRESENT-DAY PROBLEMS, and How Anglo-Israel Truth Explains and Solves Them. By V. M. COX. 3d., by post 4 stamps.

LIGHT SHED BY THE GREAT PYRAMID OF EGYPT on the Last Days of this Dispensation, from A.D. 1814 to A.D. 1922. By JAMES KEITH. Price 4d., by post 5 stamps.

NEW TESTAMENT TRUTH on the Anglo-Israel Controversy. By J. G. TAYLOR. Price 3d., by post 4 stamps.

A NEW LIGHT. An Elementary Pamphlet for General Distribution. By A E I. Price 2d., by post 2½d. in stamps.

EPHRAIM-ISRAEL, the Pivot Nation of Prophecy and History. By V. M. COX. Price 1d., one dozen free for 1s.

AMMI; OR, THE CHOSEN PEOPLE. By Miss BIRD. Tracing the Descent of the British People from Abraham the "friend of God," and showing that true science, history, philology, and ethnology, are on the side of the Identity of the Anglo-Saxon Race with the Ten Lost Tribes. Price 2d., post free 2½d.; 12s. 6d. per 100 for distribution.

IS NOT QUEEN VICTORIA the Royal Seed to King David's Throne, and Are Not Her Subjects, the British People, the Ten Lost Tribes? By W. HOPTON. Price 2d.; 12s. 6d. per 100.

A Complete Catalogue Free on Application.

NEW VOLUME JUST COMMENCED.

Price 6d., by post 7d.; Annual Subscription. 2s. 6d., post free.

THE APRIL QUARTERLY PART

OF

ISRAEL'S HOPE & DESTINY

CONTENTS:

The Jubilee Year. By Hecla.—Literary Culture Among the Ancient British. By J. Thomson.—The Time of Jacob's Trouble. By Sur.-Gen. J. M. Grant, M.D.—The Sovereignty of God as Seen in the Light of Anglo-Israelism. By Mrs. G. Albert Rogers.—Jezreel. By Rev. Hebert Marriott, M.A.—Gog's Attempted Invasion Against Israel—Does it Take Place in India or Palestine? Being John T. Crosthwait's Reply to A. MacPhail's Objections.—Is the Conversion of the Jews at the Present Time Scriptural? By George Dimbleby.—The Woman Arrayed with the Sun (Rev. xii., R.V.). By J. C. H. M.—The Sifting and Consolidation of Israel. By W. S. Cavill.—The Mystery of the Prophetic Dates Unsealed. By A. MacPhail.—The Unscripturalness of the Present Scripture Teaching.

London: ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.; F. W. PARRY (late Guest, Hayworth & Co.), 29, Paternoster-row.

THE TEETH, THE TEETH, THOSE PRECIOUS TEETH!

Save, Purify, Beautify.

GEORGE & WELCH'S

CARBOLINE

1/6 (TOOTH PASTE). 2/6 per Pot

Is the Best Known Cleanser, Preserver, and Deodoriser.

Dental Guide says:—"No Tooth application equals the Carbolics."

Proprietors: GEORGE & WELCH, Worcester.

Through Chemists, or Post Free from Makers.

A BOON TO SUFFERERS!!

HARNESS' ELECTROPATHIC BELT CURES Gout, Rheumatism, Lumbago, Sciatica, Epilepsy, Indigestion, Constipation, Liver and Kidney Complaints, Ladies' Ailments, Nervousness, Neuralgia, General and Local Debility, etc.

HARNESS' ELECTROPATHIC BELT

NEVER FAILS to promote HEALTH, STRENGTH, AND VITAL ENERGY; therefore it will pay you to procure one without delay.

NERVOUSNESS CURED.

Every man and woman suffering from any disorder of the Nerves, Stomach, Liver, or Kidneys, should at once stop physicking, and send a P.O.O. or Cheque for 21s., for HARNESS' ELECTROPATHIC BELT (post free) and obtain immediate relief. Pamphlet and Book of Testimonials post free. THE MEDICAL BATTERY CO. (LTD.),

52, OXFORD STREET, London, W.

(CORNER OF BATHBONE PLACE.)

ETHELINE

A New and most effective Remedy for CORNS.—Perfectly safe and harmless. Is very easily applied. Cures in a few applications, without the slightest pain. Everyone troubled with either Corns, Warts, or Bunions, will find relief by using ETHELINE. To be obtained of all Chemists, or post free for 14 stamps from J. LLEWELLYN, CHEMIST, COWBRIDGE.

EXTERMINATION OF ALL

CORNS & BUNIONS

Guaranteed by using Gardner's Patented Corn and Bunion Exterminator, an ingenious little instrument which can be used by anyone. Painless in operation, "never fails." Price 1s. The highest Surgical Testimonials can be seen and operations successfully performed in all peculiar cases, bad nails, &c., at the Patentee's, who will send the Exterminator direct for 13 stamps.

C. GARDNER, Chiropodist,

94, REGENT STREET, LONDON, W.

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. F. W. PARRY (late GUEST & Co.), 29, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, APRIL 20, 1887. [All rights reserved.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. XI., No. 539. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, APRIL 27, 1887. [PRICE ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
The Colonial Conference and its Prophetic Teaching	165
The Christian Dispensation and Israel's True Place Therein. By W. S. Cavill.—Part III	166
The New Title Proposed for Her Majesty the Queen	168
Where and Who are the Israelites? By the Rev. A. Ben-Oliel—Part I.	169
Review	170
Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association	171
The Third Annual Report of the Anglo-Israel Free Distribution Fund for 1886	171
Correspondence	171

THE COLONIAL CONFERENCE AND ITS PROPHETIC TEACHING.

APRIL 4th, 1887, was a red-letter day in Israel's history. It was the beginning of the fulfilment of a splendid prophecy given by God Almighty Himself to His servant Jacob in Gen. xxxv. 11, 3,620 years ago, when He said, "A nation and a company of nations shall be of thee!" The nation exists to-day, and the company of nations are extant too! They met for the very first time in solemn assembly in the metropolis of the Empire at the invitation of "the mother of nations" in her "Isles of the West" on Tuesday, April 4th, in Her Majesty's jubilee year now current. It was a notable, unique assembly—one which the enemies of Israel must have shuddered and quailed to see coming together! The president was Sir Henry Holland, Secretary of State for the Colonies, and there were present not only Lord Salisbury and a host of British celebrities, but the representatives of the following Colonies, each having responsible Governments—namely, Newfoundland (the oldest), Canada, New South Wales, Tasmania, Cape of Good Hope, South Australia, New Zealand, Victoria, Queensland, Western Australia, Natal—eleven in all. The following Crown Colonies were also present by their representatives: Barbadoes, Bermudas, Leeward Islands, Jamaica, Gold Coast, Gibraltar, Windward Islands, British Honduras, Sierra Leone, Gambia, Ceylon, Trinidad, Malta, British Guiana, Mauritius, Falkland Islands, Hongkong, Straits Settlements, the Native States, Cyprus—20 of these, and 31 in all!

We were glad to see that Sir Henry Holland inaugurated the proceedings by what was virtually a prayer that God's blessing might rest upon the Conference. The wish was met with the united response, "Amen!" Lord Salisbury's address was hearty and very stirring, but Sir Henry Holland's contained matter in which we are most interested. He pointed out by figures the wonderful progress of the Empire during the last 50 years, and especially that of the Colonies. In regard to Australia, he said (quoting his own father in the Quarterly Review) that 50 years had seen "a nation created out of a wilderness." Surely these words remind us of Gen. xxxv. 11 and of Isa. xxxv. 1, 2! Then his ideas as to the Empire's wealth illustrated Deut. viii. 18, since they showed that God has given us "power to get wealth." He declared that taking Colonial imports and exports together, they were in 1885 eleven times what they were in 1837! British shipping trade with the Colonies in 1837 was 3,700,000 tons, but in 1885 it was 56,000,000 tons! As to population, Sir Henry said that in 1837 the Colonies then existing contained 4,204,700 souls, less than the present population of London! But the numbers rose at the last census, in 1881, for the same Colonies, to 12,753,277! All the British Colonies in 1881 numbered 15,763,072. In Ceylon the population had doubled in the 50 years! The other Asiatic Colonies presented the same result. In the Cape the increase was eightfold; in Canada three times as large as it was! In the West Indies the numbers had nearly doubled. In Australia it was 12 times as large as it was! The address of Sir Henry dwelt largely on the British maritime Gates, and their enormous value to our Empire. We quote a part of what he said in respect to this important subject for future information. He remarked:—

The necessity of having secure and well-defended coaling stations as the basis of all naval action for the protection of the Imperial commerce and interests is apparent. Two classes of coaling stations are required:—1. Refitting stations and harbours of refuge in which coal is stored in large quantities. These must be strong enough to resist such attacks as may reasonably be expected, so that Her Majesty's ships may look with the full assurance of certainty to finding in them, at all times, the means of repair and all necessary supplies; while merchant ships will find a refuge from pursuit and the means of coaling in security. The defence of these ports involves a heavy expenditure of money and large garrisons; their number therefore must be as limited as possible. 2. Stations at which coal is, and always must be, kept for the navy, but for which it is unnecessary to provide an extensive system of defence. Where the question is simply one of maintaining a stock of coal in security, the defence of a harbour is not always a necessity; the object may be attained by keeping the coal inland and guarding it by a small redoubt beyond the range of artillery fire from ships. In addition to the Imperial fortresses Malta, Gibraltar, Bermuda, and Halifax, it would seem necessary to defend on an adequate scale Cape Town and Simon's Bay, St. Helena, Sierra Leone. Port Louis (Mauritius), Aden, Colombo (Ceylon), Singapore, Hongkong, Port Royal (Jamaica), Port Castries (St. Lucia), and Esquimault, in addition to minor coaling stations. Since the issue of the report of the Royal Commission modifications of various kinds have been adopted. Military progress, especially in relation to armaments, has made great strides, and the guns which are being provided under the existing scheme are more powerful and accurate than those with which the Commission had to deal. It cannot be hoped that finality has in any sense been reached, but the works which are now in process of construction are such as will lend themselves to revision and re-armament at comparatively small expense in the future; while the magazines and other accessories of the defence may fairly be regarded as little likely to be affected by future advances in the power of the attack. While the defence of British commerce and possessions abroad must be based on the action of a strong navy vigorously handled, and by means of a system of protected coaling stations rendered free to act all over the world, there remains the passive defence of exposed property locally accumulated, as well as the temporary shelter of the slower class of merchant steamers and sailing vessels. In the case of many of the coaling stations the measures of defence now in progress do not merely provide protection for naval stores and coal supply. A great wealth of private property both on shore and afloat will at the same time receive protection, while the defended ports which are being created will provide shelter for slow mercantile steamers and sailing ships at the outset of war, before the action of Her Majesty's Navy has had time to make itself felt.

Digitized by Google

We observe that the Press is beginning to raise the question how an Empire which increases as ours increases can be held together in the future and prevented "falling to pieces by reason of its own weight and fulness." The fear seems to be that rival Empires are rising, and "these are ambitious of emulating our world-embracing system of colonisation." The fear is vain, and our public writers and our Colonists themselves would know it to be so, if only they could see with their eyes, and believe the truth: that our Colonial Empire is a God-created thing, a God-protected political entity, and that it would be as easy to destroy it as to pluck the sun from the firmament, or to dethrone the God of Israel, who is the Omnipotent Creator of His people, British-Israel! No doubt the Conference which is now sitting will be viewed with the deepest anxiety, not only by our own race, but by our rivals and enemies, who must shortly see that this Confederation, once formed, will dominate the earth, and in the end attract to itself the co-operation and adhesion of the United States. It will thus become a Federation of the English-speaking races! The Colonial speakers at the Conference gave a very graphic picture of the might and power of Greater Britain. The Hon. Robert Thorburn, for instance, the Premier of Newfoundland, declared that the dominion, with his own province combined, could furnish 50,000 of the finest seamen in the world, and that near Cape Breton coal-fields existed of the greatest value in case of war. Sir Alexander Campbell, delegate for Canada, looked on the assembled nations as "one people," which is Federation already realised. Sir Patrick Jenning, ex-Premier of New South Wales, regarded a good scheme of joint naval defence of the trade of the Colonies as the very heart of the idea of Federation, and professed that it was the sincere desire of the Australians to carry it out. The representatives of Tasmania and the Cape gave cordial support to the idea of Federation, and Mr. John W. Downer, the Premier of South Australia, declared that nowhere was Her Majesty more loved and respected than in his own Colony. The Agent-General for New Zealand, the Chief Secretary of Victoria, and Sir Samuel Griffith, the Premier of Queensland, each expressed their determination to do all they could to make the Conference successful. The delegate of Queensland truly called this a new step in the history of the Empire, and the delegate from Victoria urged a "spirited Colonial policy," such as the nations of Europe were following.

Taking a broad view, surely the first meeting of the Conference of our Colonial Empire was a marked success, and the blessing of God was upon it. May its deliberations result in he prophetically-promised union of Israel's mighty nation till men, seeing "the nation and company of nations" before them already, "a blessing to all the other nations of the earth," they may realise that "this people" hath been formed for Himself by the Lord of glory, and that they are "showing forth His praise." "all that see them acknowledging them that they are the seed the Lord Jehovah hath blest," and to Him shall be all the praise! (Gen. xxii. 18, xxviii. 14, xxxv. 11, xlviii. 19; Isa. xliii. 21, lxi. 9, R.V.)

THE CHRISTIAN DISPENSATION AND ISRAEL'S TRUE PLACE THEREIN.

By W. S. Cavill.

PART III.

(Concluded from page 160).

Into the associated question which crosses our path in the consideration of such a passage as we have just cited of the Israelite character of the disciples of Christ, we have not opportunity here to enter. Suffice it to say that the argument in support thereof we conceive to be definite and clear. From the necessity of the case, the mission work of the Gospel could not be undertaken by purely Gentile hands. Christ "came to His own, and His own received Him not." This was true of the House of Judah. They spurned the Gospel offer, amid loud professions remained inactive, and took the part of the older brother, as illustrated in our Lord's parable, towards those who gladly received the word of life. It was conduct such as this which led to their disallowance, as a house, from participation in the work of the Gospel. "Therefore, say I unto you, The Kingdom of God shall be taken from you, and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof." Surely this nation must be the other house, respecting which God had said, "This people have I formed for Myself: they shall shew forth My praise."

But is there any indication of the character, manner, and extent of the change to be effected? This question is also answered for us with remarkable clearness and fulness.

The quotation of the entire chapters i. and ii. of Hosea would serve our purpose admirably here, but I must content myself with commending them to your own quiet reading. They will amply repay perusal. The last verse of chapter ii. is referred to by the apostle Peter in a manner which shows how inseparable is the link between the Old and New Testaments. "And I will sow her unto Me in the earth: and I will have mercy upon her that had not obtained mercy; and I will say to them which were not My people, Thou art My people; and they shall say, Thou art my God."

The words of the apostle, in his first epistle, are most important in connection herewith:—

"Peter, an apostle of Jesus Christ, to the elect who are sojourners of the Dispersion in Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia, and Bithynia, according to the fore-knowledge of God the Father, in sanctification of the spirit, unto obedience and sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ: grace to you, and peace be multiplied. Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who, according to His great mercy, begat us again unto a living hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead." Here the apostle looks upon the resurrection of Christ as being a dividing line between two distinct states of the people to whom He wrote. And were they not Israelites? "Sojourners of the Dispersion" could have no other force. For we cannot imagine an apostle who wrote under the influence of the Spirit applying such remarks to the Jews. For had not the words been emphatically used: "It was necessary that the word of God should first have been spoken to you: but seeing ye put it from you, and judge yourselves unworthy of everlasting life, lo ! we turn to the Gentiles" (Acts xiii. 46). When, therefore, the apostle speaks of the people to whom he wrote as "guarded through faith unto a salvation ready to be revealed in the last time," he must, under the influence of his inspiration, give concentrated reference to the members of the other house. And what follows is equally forcible: "Wherein ye greatly rejoice, though now for a little, if need be, ye have been put to grief in manifold temptations." What a reminder this of the "small moment" of Isa. liv. ! Continuing: "That the proof of your faith, being more precious than gold that perisheth, might be found unto praise and honour and glory at the appearing of Jesus Christ." In the meantime, the transition from the one state to the other of their exile history must be perfected. "Wherefore girding the loins of your mind, be sober, and set your hope perfectly on the grace that is to be brought unto you at the revelation of Jesus Christ ; as children of obedience, not fashioning yourselves according to your former lusts in the time of your ignorance: but like as He which called you is holy, so be yourselves also holy in all manner of living: because it is written, Ye shall be holy ; for I am holy. And if ye call on Him as Father, who without respect of persons judgeth according to each man's work, pass the time of your sojourning in fear: knowing that ye were redeemed, not with corruptible things, not with silver or gold, from your vain manner of life, handed down from your fathers, but with precious blood, as of a Lamb without blemish and without spot, even the blood of Christ."

Digitized by Google

Thus does the apostle clearly indicate the character and extent of the change wrought in the people to whom he penned his epistle. And as if to anticipate the peculiarities of view which some adopt in our own day, he adds :—"But ye are an elect race, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, a people for God's own possession, that ye may shew forth the excellencies of Him who called you out of darkness into His marvellous light: which in time past were no people, but now are the people of God: which had not obtained mercy, but now have obtained mercy."

After this strikingly clear quotation from Hosea's prophecy, and the declaration of its fulfilment in the condition of those whom he was addressing, the apostle gives a strong admonition which is couched in such language as to leave no question whatever as to whether he was writing to a purely Gentile people:—"Beloved, I beseech you, as sojourners and pilgrims, to abstain from fleshly lusts, which war against the soul ; having your behaviour seemly among the Gentiles; that wherein they speak against you as evil doers, they may by your good works, which they behold, glorify God in the day of visitation."

From these select portions of the sacred writings it is clear :

1. That the Election of Israel is not lost sight of.
2. That though in Dispersion the House of Israel was still under divine control.
3. That they were passing through a time of trial.
4. That the line of demarcation between the two states of their history had been reached. They were now to be under mercy, and to be Ammi.
5. That they had a mission to perform, even to shew forth the praises of their covenant God.
6. That they were in a state of probation, waiting for blessings yet to be vouchsafed to them.
7. That though described as "sojourners and pilgrims," they were still in a position of absolute distinction from those among whom they were scattered. That is from the divine standpoint, as set forth in Amos ix. 9.

Such is a summary of the teaching of Holy Writ concerning the position of Ephraim-Israel during the present age. Though in exile, she must be under blessing, and engaged in Gospel mission work.

The quotation from the 1st epistle of Peter may seem to require some special comment. The people of the Dispersion to whom he wrote were living in the localities where flourished what are commonly known as the seven churches of Asia. From their midst, however, the Gospel speedily disappeared. Errors became rampant, and their candlesticks were removed in accordance with the divine threatenings uttered in the opening chapters of John's apocalyptic vision. May it not have been effected by the transfer of the remnant of Israel to other more genial spheres ?

The history of the Gospel, and the mission work in connection therewith, must necessarily be a theme of deep interest to every member of the Christian community. It might well form a subject for separate treatment. But a rapid glance may give point to my effort in this paper.

The Gospel was first promulgated in the East. And when the commission was given to the disciples concerning it, they were commanded to begin at Jerusalem, and then to go forth into all the world. The hand of persecution scattered the disciples of Christ far and wide, but the result was to further spread the good news. Over the Roman Empire the message was borne forth, and the efforts which were spasmodically or systematically made to repress the truth availed not. The divine light still shone—brightly here, dimly there—but, nevertheless, surely.

But where was its presence most manifested? Where is the display of its influence felt to-day? By whose instrumentality has it been preserved ?

These are potent questions, to which the voice of history gives no uncertain answers.

The fact is indelibly impressed upon the pages of history that the Gospel has secured the firmest hold of the people of our own island. Very early was the truth planted here—most probably by the apostle Paul himself. The Church of Britain had its orders, and had also had its martyrs long before Augustine came, who is wrongly credited with the work of founding the English Church. Much missionary work had also been done. But the incoming of the Saxons cast a dark shadow over the land. And some time had to elapse before the truth could triumph. At length the day-star arose, and Britain was again in the arms of the Christian faith.

The first earnest and effective protest against the errors and superstitions of Rome came from John Wycliff—the morning star of the English Reformation. And considering the decree for the sifting of Israel, it is not too much to suppose that Luther and the noble band of champions for the truth in his day would in the main be of Israelite origin.

Britain, however, was looked up to by the Continental peoples as the Defender of the Faith. She gained, and has kept the lead in the religious world.

But yet again. Another fact is impressed upon the face of history. Only when Britain had secured her independent position in the world as the supporter of the Gospel, did missionary work really commence. She was the pioneer. Others may have joined, but she led the way. And to her, under God, the world is indebted for the widespread dissemination of the true and abiding principles of civilisation, freedom, and truth.

It is not my intention—indeed, it is not my province—in this paper to deal with any matter affecting the Identity proper. This can be done under other subjects, and on different occasions. What I have been solicitous for has been to show that the Christian dispensation, when rightly viewed, has a different aspect to that which is ordinarily accorded to it. It is the time of Christ's mediatorial work—the time when our Blessed Lord is seated at the right hand of the Father, to plead our human cause, until, in the fulness of time, He shall descend to reign as King where once He suffered for our sins. It is the time, moreover, of the mission work of Israel—the people of the Ephraim house. We are not to look for them under the name of Israel. They will have "another name." Their history will be that they have been in darkness, ignorant of and indifferent to divine truth in its saving power ; but that, under the marvellous constraints of Heaven-descended influences, they will have passed through a transformation, and become engaged in useful works of philanthrophy, and in high and noble enterprises of Christian effort.

Digitized by Google

Is not this a high place in the world for any nation to fill? Is there anything unworthy of the highest Christian thought and aspiration in connection therewith? Does it not rather add honour to the name of the God of heaven and earth, that history can be shewn to contain such a powerful proof of His presence and power throughout the ages?

One other matter only commends itself to my attention.

There is a common misconception concerning mission work. The apparent smallness of the results are commented upon by sceptical persons as not at all proportionate to the exertions made. But what did our Blessed Lord say? "And this Gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in the whole world for a testimony (or witness, A.V.) unto all the nations; and then shall the end come" (Matt. xxiv. 14). This passage places the matter in another light, and leads us to the question—Has the Gospel been so preached? Is there any part of the habitable earth where its saving power has not been felt? If not, then we are near the end of the present age. Other signs, too, abound—wars, earthquakes, famines. "Upon the earth" there is verily "distress of nations," "men fainting for fear, and for expectation of the things which are coming on the world." But we have the command—"When these things begin to come to pass, look up, and lift up your heads; because your redemption draweth nigh" (Luke xxi. 28).

"Your redemption!" Most expressive words! Full of profound meaning! The prodigal House of Israel will have been brought back; and no longer will individuals alone rejoice in the Gospel light, but the nation, freed from idolatry and sin, and having received the gift of the Spirit, will worship the Lord God of hosts in the beauty of holiness. Then will be seen, in full and frankly acknowledged reality, that the nation of God's peculiar choice, which was lost to human view for so long, has not only been punished for her sin, and kept under correction for the same, but that, under the mighty operation of the Divine Hand, she has been led to the accomplishment, in due form and order, of the high and holy mission which was entrusted to the elect seed of Israel. Grand and ennobling thought!—fitting theme for contemplation, while we look for the end which draweth nigh, when the promised restoration of Israel and Judah to the land of their fathers the land of covenant favour—shall be brought to pass:—herald, most surely, of that yet brighter day—the day of Christ.

THE NEW TITLE PROPOSED FOR HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN.

A VERY wise proposal appeared in the Times a few weeks ago, under the signature of "George Baden-Powell," respecting the future title of Her Majesty, which the circumstances of our times require. It is the addition of the words, "Queen of all the Dominions and Territories of the British Nation," to the present title; to be read as follows:—"Victoria, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and of all the Dominions and Territories of the British Nation, Queen, Defender of the Faith, and Empress of India." The grounds for the change are that the times require "it should be made perfectly clear that our colonies and dependencies are integral parts of the British Empire." The letter which was dated March 19, House of Commons, was to the following effect:—

The crowning event of the jubilee year of Her Majesty's auspicious reign is the first conference of representatives of all the colonies; the crowning memorial of the year is the Imperial Institute of the United Kingdom, the Colonies, and India; the crowning fact of the past 50 years is the national expansion, which has added a great and growing Colonial Empire to these relatively small mother islands.

In 1876 it was found to be necessary to mark the position of India in the Empire by amending the title of the Sovereign. What I would propose as the crowning act of the jubilee year is the completion of this amendment of the Sovereign's title by the addition of words acknowledging that the great colonies are now, together with the United Kingdom, part and parcel of the nation's heritage, and that it is necessary there be an expansion of the Royal title to meet and cover the expansion of the nation.

The general facts of this expansion are clearly illustrated by adding together area, population, State revenues, external trade, and shipping for the years 1835 and 1885 respectively, for thus we arrive at the following index numbers as to growth:—

	1835.	1885.
Of the United Kingdom	223	870
Of India	130	460
Of the colonies and dependencies	107	735
Of the whole Empire	460	2,065

It will thus be seen that if in 1876 there was reason to define that the Queen was Empress over India, still more is it desirable in 1885 to make it clear to all the world that the queenly title is co-extensive with the limits of our great Colonial Empire. Over and over again, in every capital and corner of that Empire, the most honoured toast is "the Queen." Over all that Empire such an amendment of the Queen's title will be warmly welcomed.

I have taken means for placing the suggestion in appropriate detail before the representatives of the colonies who come home to attend the approaching Colonial Conference, and I am confident that when the right time arrives the Imperial Government will take the right means to enable Her Majesty to express her pleasure in a matter of such wide concern.

The general idea of the amendment would be embodied in some such alteration of the Royal style and titles as "Victoria, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and of all the Dominions and Territories of the British Nation, Queen, Defender of the Faith, and Empress of India."

I have the honour to remain your obedient servant,
GEORGE BADEN-POWELL.

The change in the title will make it perfectly manifest to the whole world that God's promise to Jacob is now being fulfilled. "A nation and a company of nations" will be thus presented to the world as bending to the sceptre of "Victoria, Queen and Empress, and Defender of the Faith," which is "the Faith of Christ." The Queen's throne in "the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland," represents "the nation." "All the Dominions and Territories of the British Nation," are additions which embrace the Heathen and Colonial Empires, that is, India in its immensity, and the eleven Governments, ranking as a Company of Nations, enjoying representative and responsible institutions; besides the twenty Crown Colonies now gathered together with the eleven to deliberate on the future destinies of the Empire of Israel and its needed modifications, to suit the requirements of the prophecies as they bear upon the latter-day condition thereof.

The letter in question is valuable also as pointing out the enormous advance of the Empire during the fifty years which have succeeded the Queen's Accession, viewed in the threefold aspect of the United Kingdom, India, and the Colonies and Dependencies. In regard to area, population, internal trade, and shipping, the United Kingdom has advanced fourfold, India fourfold too, the Colonies sevenfold, and for the whole Empire as an average the advance in prosperity has been fivefold. Surely the Lord's blessing has been on our race during the Queen's good reign, and we should be ungrateful indeed if we did not acknowledge it by returning to Him all the praise and all the glory.

ON May 2, (D.V.) Surgeon-General J. M. Grant, M.D., will deliver a lecture in St. Peter's Parish Room, Lee Green, Lee, London, to commence at 8 p.m. The Vicar of the Parish, Rev. R. J. Simpson, M.A., will preside. Subject of the lecture: "Where are the Ten Tribes of Israel now? and what will be their position in the Millennium?" Lee Green is within easy reach from Blackheath, Eltham, Lewisham, and Greenwich.

Digitized by Google

WHERE, AND WHO ARE THE ISRAELITES?

AN ADDRESS GIVEN IN ROME AT A DRAWING-ROOM MEETING BY THE REV. A. BEN-OLIEL, ON FEBRUARY 28TH, 1887.

PART I.

THE object of our friendly, social gathering this evening is to study a deeply interesting and most important subject. A fortnight ago we met here for prayer and intelligence of the spread of the Gospel amongst the Jews. To-night we propose to examine a subject relating to Israel, as distinct and separate from the Jews.

It is a mere truism to say that while the Jews are of Israel, they are not Israel; they are a part, not the whole. From the time of the division of the kingdom under Jeroboam, Solomon's son, the Ten Tribes which rebelled against the royal House of David became thereafter known as the House of Israel, the House of Jacob, the House of Joseph, all Israel, the whole House of Israel, and Ephraim—Ephraim being the predominant tribe; while the other Two Tribes, Judah and Benjamin, were designated the House of Judah, and eventually came to be called Jews, which is an abbreviation of Judahites.

It must be admitted, however, that even after the division of the kingdom, the appellation Israel is sometimes applied to the Jews, especially after the return from the Babylonian captivity. This seems perfectly natural. While the Judahites, or Jews, gloried in belonging to the royal tribe, they could not forget that they were also Israelites—a part of the larger nationality, and occasionally use the more comprehensive name bestowed by the Almighty on their common progenitor, Jacob, as a title of honour, for, "as a prince he had power with God and with men, and had prevailed" (Gen. xxxii. 28). Exceptions prove the existence of a rule, but do not invalidate it. What is contended for is not that the rule holds good absolutely and invariably—strange indeed it were, if any portion of a people once distinguished by a common, honourable appellative, should cease altogether from at times reverting to it, but that the distinction stands good in the vast majority of cases.

This is a material point to be insisted upon. The neglect of it has led to great confusion of thought in the best writers and preachers. Judah and Israel were one people, and will again constitute only one nationality; but at a certain date they were divided into two separate and antagonistic kingdoms, without, however, ever disowning that they were still one and the same people. They formed two parts of one acknowledged whole.

Having established this essential distinction, it is time to describe the theory we have to examine. That theory propounds the Israelitish origin of the Anglo-Saxons. For the purpose of a thorough study of the subject, I prefer to formulate it thus: Are the Jews of the present day the whole people of Israel, or only the descendants of the House of Judah, with an admixture, doubtless, of members of the Israelite tribes? If the latter proposition is found to represent the true facts of the case, the question necessarily arises, What has become of the descendants of the House of Israel? where, and who are the Israelites?

The extraordinary and rapidly extending interest exhibited by so many thoughtful minds regarding the whereabouts of the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel, leading a daily-increasing circle of intelligent, godly men to the belief that the Anglo-Saxons must be the missing tribes—for they are found occupying the precise position which prophecy assigned to Ephraim-Israel—is, to my mind, a singular sign of the times we live in. The literature on this theory has been growing at a marvellous rate of late years, from bulky volumes and pamphlets to innumerable leaflets, and now fills a whole catalogue; and there are several periodicals, weekly, monthly, and quarterly, spreading throughout the Christian world the gladsome news that the tribes of Israel have been at last discovered and identified with the Anglo-Saxons.

It is now nearly forty years ago since I read the first book that was published on this subject, "Lectures on our Israelitish Origin," by the late John Wilson, a most industrious and assiduous student of prophecy. It left a deep impression on my mind. Later on, while crossing the Bay of Biscay, a clergyman on board the steamer lent me Hine's "Forty-seven Identifications" to read. Since my arrival in Rome the subject has been pressed on my attention, and during the last twelve months I have devoted much of my spare time to the study of this truly important problem, and have again read carefully Wilson's masterly work, with the result of arriving at the conclusion that it is substantially true, and that it merits the serious attention and careful study of all lovers of truth—of Biblical truth—and especially of the Jews, and of all who take an earnest interest in the prophetic destiny of the ancient people of God.

This truth throws a flood of brilliant, illuminating light on the page of prophecy. It renders the Bible lucid and clear as noon-day, as well as self-consistent, and free from contradictions, generally solved by incongruous, fanciful interpretations. And, oh! how beautifully it manifests the faithfulness of our God—God, who is truth—to His promises to His chosen people, and to the whole of mankind through them! That this truth should have been hidden hitherto is not to be wondered at, for so it was foretold. No one is to blame for not discovering it before, for God intended it to be revealed at a given time, when the facts would be so patent and self-evident as to command the ready assent of all who tremble in presence of His Word. But I must not, and do not propose taking you by storm. All I ask of you is to give to this subject your candid and unbiassed attention and reflection. To you, as to me, in this, as in all religious and prophetic studies, the sole, main question is, "What saith the Scripture"? This is the only legitimate criterion for Christians.

In the first of my lectures, printed here in Rome, I described the Bible as "nothing else but a consecutive history of that most remarkable nation, commencing in the ages of hoary antiquity forward to the very end of time. All its allusions to other peoples and to other events in the stage of this world's everchanging panorama are but introductory, subordinate, and subservient to its one grand theme—the Jews. Why? Because they, of all peoples, constitute the foundation, and will form the pinnacle of the Church of God throughout the world and through all the ages." If this be so, then it follows that the answer to the questions proposed must be sought in the Bible itself, and nowhere else. The Bible, apart from its ethical, doctrinal, and devotional parts, is virtually a detailed history of the chosen race—the people of Israel, interspersed with condensed summaries, or epitomes, of the history of all other nations. And that universal, inspired history consists of two parts, the past and the future. Past history is narrated in language plain and prosaic enough. Not so the future. The future is embodied in the prophetic books, and though prophecy is clothed to a large extent in magnificent, poetical phraseology, replete with the Eastern gorgeous imagery of parabolicisms, allegories, and emblematic symbolisms—for the right comprehension of which we should compare Scripture with itself—it is history nevertheless; and so distinct are the outlines it traces on its canvas that when the predicted events are fulfilled, the wonder is that anybody could have failed to understand them correctly!

Take as an illustration Isa. liii. and other prophetic delineations of the advent, life, work, and sufferings of Messiah. Do we not marvel that the Jews should have failed to see in that particular chapter a graphic portraiture of Jesus of Nazareth? Glance over the prophecies relating to the ancient Empires of the world. How definite and circumstantial they were, as we know them, from their accomplishment! Voltaire, I think it was, who sneered at the idea of the existence of such an immense metropolis as Nineveh, yet leaving no traces or monuments behind. It was all fable, he thought. But the excavations of Layard, whom I had the pleasure of knowing as Her Majesty's Ambassador in Madrid, effectually helping me in defending religious liberty in Spain, confounded infidels, and confirmed the faith of believers in the infallibility of God's Word. Its stones came out crying against doubters of the inspired Word, and stones keep crying out in rapid succession, assisted by the decipherment of cuneiform inscriptions in confirmation of the oracles divine. And thus God will in His providence continue to bring to light monuments, papyri, tablets, inscriptions, and MSS., to put to silence the daring incredulity of this shallow age. Profane history, headed by Herodotus, its father, is but an handmaid—a useful and necessary handmaid—to the Biblical narratives; and profane history, rightly understood, is in accord and consonance with the inspired seers and penmen of Israel.

Digitized by Google

(To be continued.)

Review.

A Message to the Church from the Nineteenth Century. By the late Right Rev. Bishop Titcomb, D.D. Robert Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, 1887. Price 3s.

PART II.

(Concluded from page 163).

HAVING indicated, as in duty bound, some of the points on which we think the late bishop's timely volume is defective, let us now address ourselves to the more pleasing task of illustrating its excellencies and value to all Anglo-Israelites. To begin with, the work is deeply interesting to all earnest students of our subject, in connection with the Word of God. It is so charmingly written, that the reader cannot lay the book down without perusing it to its close. It contains the outcome of a decade's study of Our Identity, and is the calm and careful result thereof arrived at by a mind not given to take any but rational and sober views of the facts it deals with. It supplies those who are in the centre of this controversy with a multitude of criticism on many texts which our opponents are zealous to advance against these truths, and the book thus gives valuable help to those who have not had the same advantages as the late bishop. Finally, this is the work of a bishop—a cleric—one whose praise was in all the Churches, and who was regarded by most men as a calm, cautious, deep thinker, one not likely to be carried away by enthusiasm and "fanciful ideas," which he himself ever repudiated without scruple. He thus, in at least two instances, cut to the core views on the subject which the writer of these lines, and vast numbers of other Anglo-Israelites, conscientiously hold to be vital truths, indispensable to our contention. Let us now, in a short and summary manner, indicate to our readers the general character of the late bishop's argument.

"The Message," be it remembered, is one from this present nineteenth century to the Church of Christ. What does it tell us? First, that the prophetic portrait of the Tribes of Ephraim disclosed in the Scriptures, is before the world to-day in the features of the British Empire. What said the Scriptures respecting Ephraim-Israel? She was to appear as "a strong, prosperous, oceanic nation, faithful to God in far countries, occupying the coasts of the earth" (also, we would add, the Gates of her enemies). She was to be "a messenger people," sending ambassadors by sea in swift vessels, to take back Judah to the land. She must be a regenerated, Christian people; kind to Judah now; living in Christendom. This nation must be a kingdom, an Israelite kingdom, the stone kingdom of Daniel—in short, Christ's kingdom; but also a temporal sovereignty, such, in fact, as the British nation and her world-wide Empire appears to-day (chap. viii).

The bishop, on p. 59, entered on the consideration of the really vital point, that the converted Israelite, or Ephraim kingdom, was Scripturally destined to become, in exile, "a strong nation." To prove this (a point our opponents often strongly deny), our author, on p. 58, quotes Micah iv. 6: "I will assemble her that halteth, and gather her that is driven out." The halting one is Judah, always spoken of as a "remnant." The "cast out" one is "gathered," and made a "strong nation." Ephraim, of the Ten Tribes, was "cast out," and is, therefore, to be gathered, converted to Christ, and made, in exile, a "strong nation" (ver. 7). The conversion of Israel in exile is proved by reference also to Zech. x. 6, where the salvation of Joseph is promised before she is "strengthened." Their increase in numbers is their strengthening; for thus they become a "multitude of nations" (Gen. xlviii. 19), and place, therefore, in the restoration, cannot be found for them all in Palestine (Zech. x. 10; p. 65). "Population is Empire," and the late bishop properly pointed to the multitude of Israel's nations as a proof that she is to become a "strong" Empire.

On the subject of the "fulness" or "multitude" of Ephraim's nations, in the Christian dispensation, the bishop is very decided. He declared (p. 39) that "the inspiration of Scripture must stand or fall by the Church's discovery of Ephraim (either now or hereafter) as a multitude of non-Palestine nations (Goyim), restored to the covenant of God in the last days!" The dispersion of the Ten Tribes, he showed, was predicted in Deut. iv. 27—32 (p. 40), but their restoration to God's favour is provided for in ver. 30, and confirmed by Hosea xiv. 4, 5; the promise being that they should become "strong" and powerful—possessors of the blessings guaranteed to them by Gen. xlix. 1—22. 26. Our author rejected the claims of the Afghans, Karens, Nestorians, Red Indians, and the gipsies, to the honour of representing the Ten Tribes; for all these utterly lack any such imperial, national blessings, as are tied up by God to the true House of Joseph. None of these have "pushed the nations to the ends of the earth," as Israel was to do under the prophecy of Moses in Deut. xxxiii. 17, or developed into "a nation" and "a company of nations," which was Israel's appointed sign in Gen. xxxv. 11.

The bishop was particular to enforce the fact that this strong and mighty nation was to be one chosen "to keep the truth"—that is, to be the depositary of the revealed Word—up to the very end (p. 69). Ephraim, then, was the nation to which the Lord transferred His kingdom in Matt. xxi. 43. The nation, strong and faithful to the truth, is thus, it was shown, to be rebetrothed to the covenant, and made God's witness. The bishop, on p. 72 and 73, gave a very clear and satisfactory explanation of the puzzling prophecy respecting the Tribe of Dan, its disappearance from Palestine when the book of Chronicles was written, and its "leap from Bashan"—Bashan was the synonym for Palestine—nay, for Samaria, in God's Word (Psa. lxviii. 15, 16; Amos iv. 1). The "leap," then, "from Bashan," was the prophetic announcement of Dan's escape from the land before the Assyrian captivity took place. His appearance in Ireland is referred to, evidently, in a note which points to Gawler's "Dan the Pioneer," and Mr. Adams' work on "Great Britain's Rank Among the Nations" (chap. viii.).

The bishop, in chap. ix., clearly laid down his belief that neither Russia, France, nor Germany could be held to answer to the prophetic portrait of Ephraim's regenerated kingdom predicted by Daniel's vision. The message of the nineteenth century to the Church then was, and is, that (as stated, at length, in chap. x.) the great British Empire, called, on p. 83, the great Anglo-Saxon Empire, not excluding the United States of America, is regenerated Ephraim's and Manasseh's Empire, described in God's Word. The British Empire's religious distinctiveness proves it (p. 95). So does its religious extension (p. 96); its international, private beneficence supports the claim (p. 99).

Such, and much more, is the evidence the late bishop adduced to prove that this nation was Ephraim, or Ten-Tribed Israel. To this book attaches the melancholy interest that the late author died, as it were, in the act of writing it! He corrected its last proof-sheets a few hours before he breathed his last. It was the expiring effort of his genius. We feel a sad interest in this work, because in it the deceased bishop, who once held Teutonic views, as the first edition of the "Anglo-Israel Post Bag" proved, in this, his last book on the same subject, most decidedly declared that those views were erroneous, and that he adopted that which regards Ephraim-Israel as the great British, Anglo-Saxon race. Our readers well know we have consistently upheld the latter for twelve years and more—ever since, indeed, we began to write upon this subject. The volume we have thus briefly reviewed is an excellent one. We hope all our friends will read it, and, noting the few defects that it presents to their view, accept its teaching, in other respects, as the last dying effort of a ripe scholar, a zealous Christian, and a truly devoted servant of his Lord.

Digitized by Google

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

On Monday afternoon, the 18th inst., Lady Jane H. Ellice performed the ceremony of inaugurating the new offices at 14, King William-street, Charing Cross, London, W.C. The offices are very centrally situated, and within a stone's throw of Charing Cross Station, and well calculated to be a rendezvous for all persons interested in the question, who may be visiting London from any part of the world. On the first floor there is a well-furnished sitting-room and library, supplied with the daily papers and other publications, and here the distinguished assembly gathered and welcomed Lady Jane Ellice on her arrival. We noticed among those present, beside the Rev. Jas. Billington (secretary), the Rev. T. W. Boyce, M.A., Rev. H. John Hatch, M.A., Rev. R. E. Forsaith, Colonel Lambert, Admiral Bedingfeld, Major St. George Priaulx, Douglas A. Onslow, Esq., J.P., F. C. Danvers, Esq., Isaac Loveland, Mrs. De Bergue, Mrs. Victor Buckley, Basil Buckley, Miss E. M. Rush, Miss Babington, A. J. Stevenson, Esq., etc., etc. The proceedings were commenced with prayer, after which several addresses were delivered, both by gentlemen and ladies, but space forbids us to give even an epitome of them. The Daily Chronicle of the following morning did so. Lady Jane Ellice gave a very telling address, and then declared the new offices open. Tea and coffee, with accompaniments were provided in the Secretary's office on the next floor, to which most of those present retired, and enjoyed quite a re-union, which was very delightful to see. The last of the company did not leave till nearly seven.

THE THIRD ANNUAL REPORT OF THE ANGLO-ISRAEL FREE DISTRIBUTION FUND FOR 1886.

We are glad to see that the Free Distribution Fund is fairly flourishing. The financial statement just received, and which we publish below, shows that £107 14s. 5d. has been received during the year in subscriptions and donations, and the whole sum, save £5 11s. 11d., has been expended on books, leaflets, pamphlets, Banners, and postage (with salary to secretary), sent to an incredible number of destinations, literally in the four corners of the earth. To Great Britain and Ireland, to London and its suburbs, to Africa and Zululand, to North Australia and British Guiana, to Barbadoes and Burmah, to Canada and Fiji, to 14 stations in India, to New Zealand, to Egypt, France, Italy and Malta, to Tasmania, to the United States of America, to six of H.M. ships, and to one of the P. and O. Company's steam fleet, have 600 parcels of literature and 1,660 packets of the Banner of Israel gone forth. The labour of packing so vast a number of parcels and their transmission by post has been a labour of loving and willing hands. In 131 towns and villages in the United Kingdom the good news of Our Identity with Israel has been made known by the secretaries and treasurer of our excellent association. They verily have, during the year, been "sowing the seed," which shall by-and-bye result in a gracious harvest to God's glory. The great want at present is money, and we hope, therefore, the subscribers to this fund will redouble their efforts and give our friends the means to make known the good news that Ephraim-Israel is found! We are requested particularly to intimate to P. G. C. and other anonymous donors to the Free Distribution Fund that their liberal gifts (£7 by P. G. C.) have been duly received and expended as they desired. We quote a few sentences from the report, as well as the balance sheet, for our readers' information and satisfaction. After thanking the British-Israel Identity Association, the managers of the fund continue thus:—

The distributors of the fund desire to record most thankfully that, by the blessing of God, to whom we desire ever to look for guidance, much general progress has been made in spreading the knowledge of the Identity of the British people with Israel of the Ten Tribes, many fresh places have received the light of "Identity" truth, and feel the power of its missionary spirit. While a goodly number of new "sowers" have been obtained, who are workers for existing religious societies, others also have come forward, from various fields of labour, to take their part in "sowing the seed." It is satisfactory also to suggest that probably the political thought of the country has not remained uninfluenced, since the Primrose and Imperial Federation Leagues have distributed literature received from the Anglo-Israel Free Distribution Fund.

A few words must be given concerning the special free distribution of the Banner of Israel, which is doing far greater service than can be set forth in a short report, but ample evidence is at hand to prove how the Banners kindle interest in "Our Identity," and are powerful to revive that which had been aroused years ago, but had since lapsed; at the same time they continue to supply general and varied information that is most highly appreciated and desired by many Christian workers at home and abroad, who are not in a position to purchase the paper for themselves. For this special distribution generous aid has again been given by Messrs. Robert Banks and Son, who have presented one dozen copies of the Banner of Israel each week throughout the year. This has been a great help, which is acknowledged with many thanks.

Cordial thanks are tendered to "Philo-Israel," Editor of the Banner of Israel, for allowing the monthly reports of the Free Distribution Fund to appear in its columns, thus making known what is being done, and what it is hoped may be accomplished. The distributors of the fund desire to thank Mr. T. Large, who has kindly audited the accounts, also all who have helped forward, directly or indirectly, the great work that is being attempted in order to bring the light of the Word to the hearts of the people with fresh assurance of the continual love and faithfulness of our Triune God. So may His way be known upon earth, His saving health among all nations, that the people may truly praise God, and that He in all things may be glorified.

Statement of Accounts from Jan. 1st to Dec. 31st, 1886.

RECEIPTS.	£	s.	d.
Balance in hand Jan. 1	2	2	4
Subscriptions and donations	107	14	5
	£109	16	9

EXPENDITURE.	£	s.	d.
Books, Pamphlets, and Leaflets	45	14	0½
The Banner of Israel (including postage of majority)	32	15	2
Report for 1885 ...	1	17	6
Postage, carriage, etc. (including payment for parcels from publishers)	15	18	1½
Honorarium to Secretary	8	0	0
Balance in hand	2	1	11
„ for Banners	3	10	0
	5	11	11
	£109	16	9

Jessie Lawrence, Hon. Treasurer.

Rosslyn, Upper Teddington, Middlesex,
January 22, 1887.

I hereby certify that I have carefully checked the above accounts with the several vouchers relating thereto, and find same to be correct. Dated this 24th January, 1887.

8, Coburg-villas, Teddington. Thomas Large.

N.B.—Copies of the report can be had of Miss Lawrence, Miss Rush, or C. Horner, Esq., at the addresses given in the Banner.

Correspondence.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

Dear Sir,—You will, I am sure, lament the tidings of this day reporting the rather sudden removal from us of the Right Rev. Bishop Titcomb. I am in the midst of having read to me his just published little work, "A Message from the Nineteenth Century to the Church," which seems a most valuable little book; I trust calculated to help you and others to lead this Church and nation, and I trust, too, the world at large, to the knowledge and reception of the truth of God concerning Israel and Judah as predestined in this latter day. I am glad, too, that he dies bearing testimony to the Banner of Israel's good work in the same great and good cause—Our Identity with the Ten Tribes of Israel. His being now taken away is mysterious, and I doubt not intended, in God's wise providence, to revive the good work in our remarkable day of grace

Surely goodness and mercy follow this great people in spite of the shame and contempt some of our would-be leaders in Church and State would involve us. May the Spirit of God and of Christ be ever with you and the Banner of Israel and its writers.

Always yours faithfully and affectionately,

Charles J. Hadfield, Col.

Lichfield, April 4.

Errata.—Page 153, col. 2, line 41, "unknowable subtleties," and on page 154, col. 2, line 4, read "a feracious earth."

Digitized by Google

NOTICES.

All communications intended for the Editor, to be addressed: — "Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Clifton, Bristol.

SUBSCRIPTIONS

	£ s. d.
Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) postfree	- 0 7 6
Two Copies (including Double Numbers) -	- 0 13 6
Three Copies " " " "	- 1 0 4
Four Copies " " " "	- 1 5 6
Six Copies " " " "	- 1 16 4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-grand. London, to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C., or F. W. PARRY & Co., 29, Paternoster-row, London.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

Contents Bills and Show Cards may be obtained on application to the Publishers.

Advertisements should be sent to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

Prepaid Advertisements are inserted at the rate of 30 words for 1s. 4d.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION,

14, King William-street, Charing Cross, W.C.

Bible Readings on the Book of Hosea

Every TUESDAY afternoon (commencing May 3) at 3.30, lasting One Hour only. All are invited.

JAMES BILLINGTON, Secretary.

LEAFLET FOR THE YOUNG.

WHO ARE YOU?

Price 1s. per 100; postage 1½d.

To be obtained from the Hon. Sec., Anglo-Israel Association, 27, Pulteney Street, Bath.

"A happy effort, well and successfully made, and likely to lead to good results. The Leaflet teaches the Scriptural distinction between Israel and Judah. . . . The separate captivities. . . Our nation's possession of the Gates, the Sabbath, etc."—Banner of Israel. Mar. 16, 1887.

NOW READY.

SPLENDID PHOTOS OF THE LATE BISHOP TITCOMB.

Sent post free, Carte de Visite, 1s., Cabinet 2s., direct from the Publishers,

F. W. PARRY & Co., 29, Paternoster Row, E.C.

NEW VOLUME JUST COMMENCED.

Price 6d., by post 7d.; Annual Subscription. 2s. 6d., post free.

THE APRIL QUARTERLY PART OF ISRAEL'S HOPE & DESTINY

CONTENTS:

The Jubilee Year. By Hecla.—Literary Culture Among the Ancient British. By J. Thomson.—The Time of Jacob's Trouble. By Sur.-Gen. J. M. Grant, M.D.—The Sovereignty of God as Seen in the Light of Anglo-Israelism. By Mrs. G. Albert Rogers.—Jezreel. By Rev. Hebert Marriott, M.A.—Gog's Attempted Invasion Against Israel—Does it Take Place in India or Palestine? Being John T. Crosthwait's Reply to A. MacPhail's Objections.—Is the Conversion of the Jews at the Present Time Scriptural? By George Dimbleby.—The Woman Arrayed with the Sun (Rev. xii., R.V.). By J. C. H. M.—The Sifting and Consolidation of Israel. By W. S. Cavill.—The Mystery of the Prophetic Dates Unsealed. By A. MacPhail.—The Unscripturalness of the Present Scripture Teaching.

London: ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.; F. W. PARRY (late Guest, Hayworth & Co.), 29, Paternoster-row.

ISRAEL IN THE NEW TESTAMENT OR, Proofs of the National Conversion of the Ten Tribes to Christianity.

By SURGEON-GENERAL J. M. GRANT, M.D.

Price 4d., post free, 4½d.; 12 Copies, post free, 4s.

London: R. Banks and Son, Racquet Court, Fleet St., and by order of all Booksellers.

A Resume of the Scriptural Argument, proving the Identity of the British Race with the Lost Ten Tribes. Price 1d.; 6s. per 100. New edition now ready.

Robert Banks and Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

New and Useful Work for Students of the Origin of the British Race and Their Mission.

Just published, price 5/-, free by post for Postal Order.

WHO ARE WE? AND WHAT IS OUR MISSION?

By J. THORNHILL HARRISON, of Ealing.

With Seven Maps, printed by the Woodbury Permanent Process, illustrating—

1.—Showing the Dispersion of the family of Noah after the Flood. 2.—Great Western and Eastern Plains. 3.—Colonisation of the Tribes of Dan and Asher from Phœnicia, B.C. 1,400 to 740. 4.—The Assyrian Empire, B.C. 710. 5.—Extent of the Persian Empire and its Division into Twenty Satrapies, B.C. 521 to 464. 6.—The Parthian Empire, B.C. 207 to A.D. 226. 7.—The World with the Commencement of the Christian Era.

The Work is printed on good toned paper, and handsomely bound in cloth, bevelled boards, with handsome design in gilt on cover, gilt lettered.

LONDON: ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet Court, Fleet Street, E.C.

A New Work on the Identity of Lost Israel By the late BISHOP TITCOMB.

Now ready, in Cloth Gilt, Bevelled Boards, Imperial 8vo. Price 3s.; sent Post Free for Postal Order or Stamps.

A MESSAGE TO THE CHURCH FROM THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.

BY THE LATE

RT. REV. BISHOP TITCOMB, D.D.

(This work was completed by the late Bishop only a week previous to his death).

London: Robert Banks & Son, Racquet court, Fleet-st F. W. Parry & Co., Paternoster-row, and all book-sellers.

Published by ROBERT BANKS & SON,

RACQUET COURT, FLEET STREET, E.C.

Postal Orders may be obtained at any Post Office in the United Kingdom for the following amounts: 1s., 1s. 6d., ½d. each; 2s., 2s. 6d., 3s., 3s 6d. 4s., 4s. 6d., 5s., 7s. 6d., 10s., 10s. 6d. 1d each; 15s., 20s., 1½d. each. They should be "crossed" City Bank, Ludgate Hill E.C. Stamps received

PRESENT-DAY PROBLEMS, and How Anglo-Israel Truth Explains and Solves Them. By V. M. COX. 3d., by post 4 stamps.

LIGHT SHED BY THE GREAT PYRAMID OF EGYPT on the Last Days of this Dispensation, from A.D. 1814 to A.D. 1922. By JAMES KEITH. Price 4d., by post 5 stamps.

NEW TESTAMENT TRUTH on the Anglo-Israel Controversy. By J. G. TAYLOR. Price 3d., by post 4 stamps.

A NEW LIGHT. An Elementary Pamphlet for General Distribution. By A E I. Price 2d., by post 2½d. in stamps.

EPHRAIM-ISRAEL, the Pivot Nation of Prophecy and History. By V. M. COX. Price 1d., one dozen free for 1s.

AMMI; OR THE CHOSEN PEOPLE. By MISS BIRD. Tracing the Descent of the British People from Abraham as "friend of God," and showing that true science, history, philology, and ethnology, are on the side of the Identity of the Anglo-Saxon Race with the Ten Lost Tribes. Price 2d., post free 2½d.; 12s. 6d. per 100 for distribution.

IS NOT QUEEN VICTORIA the Royal Seed to King David's Throne, and Are Not Her Subjects, the British People, the Ten Lost Tribes? By W. HOPTON. Price 2d.; 12s. 6d. per 100.

A Complete Catalogue Free on Application.

The Identity Demonstrated

See new book by the Rev. R. DOUGLAS, M.A., (Vicar of Kidsgrove, Stoke-on-Trent) entitled

Ephraim-England.

PRICE 4s., Cloth Gilt.

London: Sold by R. Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet street, E.C., who will forward a copy free on receipt of P.O

WORKS BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

The Geography of the Gates. With Map and six full page, and one double-page, Illustrations, printed on plate paper. 208 pages, in handsome cloth, gilt Price 3s. 6d., post free 3s. 10d.

An Elementary Digest or Sketch of the Chief Facts and Teachings of the Great Pyramid of Egypt. Adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific 56 pages, Illustrated with Diagrams, price 4d., post free 5d. 10th Thousand.

Our Identity with the House of Israel. Price 4d. Reprinted from "Clifton Chronicle Letters"

The History of the House of Israel: How they were Lost, and How they were Found, Told for the Children. Price 6d., cloth 1s.; post free 7d. and 1s. 1d. Fourth Edition. Eleventh thousand.

R. Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

THE TEETH, THE TEETH, THOSE PRECIOUS TEETH!

Save, Purify, Beautify.

GEORGE & WELCH'S

CARBOLINE

1/6 (TOOTH PASTE). 2/6 per Pot

Is the Best Known Cleanser, Preserver, and Deodoriser.

Dental Guide says:—"No Tooth application equals the Carbolics."

Proprietors: GEORGE & WELCH, Worcester.

Through Chemists, or Post Free from Makers.

A BOON TO SUFFERERS.

HARNESS' ELECTROPATHIC BELT.

Testimonial

From Miss J. HOULDSWORTH, Rozelle, Ayr, N.B.

"I am glad to be able to tell you that the HARNESS' ELECTRIC BATTERY BELT has been very beneficial in strengthening the system generally, as well as instrumental in relieving the Neuralgic pains from which I have suffered.

NEURALGIA & DEBILITY.

Every man and woman suffering from any disorder of the Nerves, Stomach, Liver, or Kidneys, should at once stop physicing, and remit 21s. for HARNESS' ELECTROPATHIC BELT (post free) and obtain immediate relief. Pamphlet and Book of Testimonials POST FREE. MEDICAL BATTERY CO. Ltd.

52, OXFORD STREET, LONDON, W.

Corner of Rathbone Place

ETHELINE

A New and most effective Remedy for CORNS.—Perfectly safe and harmless is very easily applied. Cures in a few applications, without the slightest pain. Everyone troubled with either Corns, Warts, or Bunions, will find relief by using ETHELINE. To be obtained of all Chemists, or post free for 14 stamps from J. LLEWELLYN, CHEMIST, COWBRIDGE.

5/- 2,000 CARPETS 5/-

EACH. EACH.

MESSRS. HARGREAVES AND COMPANY, Carpet Weavers, will forward to any address on receipt of postal order for 5s., to the first 2,000 persons that apply, a genuine, WOVEN, REVERSIBLE CARPET, bordered, and woven in colours, large enough to cover any ordinary sized room, as an advertisement for their goods. A Rug will be sent with the carpet for 1s. 6d. extra. Satisfaction guaranteed.

This extraordinary offer will not be repeated.

Address: HARGREAVES & COMPANY, 59 and 60, Chancery Lane, London.

N.B.—Agents wanted all over the Kingdom.

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. F. W. PARRY (late GUEST & Co.), 29, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, APRIL 27, 1887. [All rights reserved.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."

(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. XI., No. 540. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, MAY 4, 1887. [DOUBLE NUMBER, TWOPENCE.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
Where are the German Colonies?	173
Anglo-Israelism in a Nutshell. By Surgeon-General J. M. Grant, M.D.	174
Lecture in St. John's School-, Middlesborough	174
Where and Who are the Israelites? By the Rev. A. Ben-Oliel—Part II.	176
A Jubilee Lecture. By W. H. Mason—Part I.	177
The Rev. John Wilkinson, the Friend of Israel, Lectures for the Second Time at Northampton	179
The Abolition of Transit Duties in India	180
Another Clerical and Adverse Opinion	181
Prophetic Dates according to Mr. and Mrs. Grattan Guinness. By H. L.	182
"Remember the Sabbath Day to Keep it Holy."—By a German	182
French Commercial Prosperity and French Depopulation	183
Language and Ancestral Prairies. By W. L. Blore	184
Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association	185
The Anglo-Israel Free Distribution Fund	186
Israel's Scripture and Prayer Union	186
Correspondence	187

WHERE ARE THE GERMAN COLONIES?

THE German nation has been making annexations in various parts of the earth, and Africa especially has been largely appropriated by them. The Imperial flag waves over a very large region on the Eastern and equatorial parts of the dark continent. On the Western coast, near our Orange River boundary, the Germans have also a large stretch of coast, and in New Guinea they have the Northern and hottest part of the island, which, when the colonising fit was on them, they appropriated with a flourish of trumpets. But where are the colonies of Germans who were to go out and occupy these regions, and so make the fortune of the Fatherland, as our colonies have made ours? The German emigration has not commenced yet; and in the opinion of Dr. Bamberger, the leading economist of Germany, it will come to nothing! Not a single shipload of Germans has yet ventured to cross the sea to settle in these lands from which so much was expected. "It would be a good thing," said one of our London journalists, "for the world at large if the Germans would begin to colonise the almost boundless regions of Africa over which they have hoisted the Imperial flag, and which they have begun to paint with the national colour on their maps. At present most of the districts know the German only as an occasional visitor in naval uniform, the European being represented to them mainly by the English or Scotch missionary or trader." What is the reason of this backwardness on the part of the Germans? If they want trade and the wealth it brings, why do they not go out and settle in some of these places they now call "German Africa," and so provide "an ample market for the productive industries of the mother country?" The fact is the German has no aptitude of foreign settlement, and if he goes abroad to seek a livelihood, he prefers a place where the British or the American flag is peacefully flying, and he abides there till time and contact transform him into a Briton or British-American. To the German, God does not seem to have granted a desire to found German colonies, or Outland Empire. His destiny seems that of enhancing the population, size, and wealth of the British or American empires! His is not "the chosen nation" destined to colonise the earth, and to raise up its desolations. That is the God-assigned function of Israel, as Isa. xlix. 8, R.V., testifies, thus:—"Thus saith the Lord, In an acceptable time have I answered thee, and in a day of salvation have I helped thee; and I will preserve thee and give thee for a covenant of the People to raise up the land and make them inherit the desolate heritages." These words addressed to Israel have no reference to the Germans; for the Germans (pace the Rev. Robert Douglas) are not Israel. The "desolate heritages" or "desolations" of the earth are given to British-Israel to occupy and colonise, but they are not so given to the Germans. Hence we see that the latter cannot occupy the lands they have annexed because they have no mandate from the God of Israel to do this work. That has fallen to the House of Ephraim or Joseph to perform—that is, to the British Anglo-Saxons of our times. The only truly colonising nation is the British. Not even to American Manasseh has God given the power to go out and fill up the "desolations" of the earth with their excess of population. The Americans grow largely by accretion, but it never occurs to them to seek for an outlet in colonies in distant regions. Their own almost boundless continent amply suffices for their rapidly increasing population. The Germans increase, but not so rapidly as we do. But when they go abroad, as they have been going for some years past, their desire is not to found new States and "little Germanies" abroad, but to lose themselves in British-Israel's colonial possessions; to make themselves at home among them; and finally by intermarriage to become British themselves at last, more loyal to the old mother in the West than the true sons themselves, if such a thing be possible! We are not, then, at all afraid of German colonial enterprise. Our only regret is that in Africa they will not go and found settled States, and help us to bring the native African maritime nations into "orderly" communities, capable of influencing for good the vast masses in the interior of the continent who are still quite beyond the influence of Christianity and civilisation. When the great earthquake war-woe breaks out, and Germany is fighting for bare existence against both Russia and France, then there will be no more heard of German colonies or German Outland Empire. It requires no prophet to predict that then the German people will have learnt that for them no colonies are possible, but that God has given "the earth and the fulness thereof" to His people Israel, and to them alone, to bring it all to Christ, since He is the rightful king of all the nations of the world. And to Him will be all the praise.

Digitized by Google

ANGLO-ISRAELISM IN A NUTSHELL.

By Surgeon-General J. M. Grant, M.D.

The following extract from a letter which I have lately written to a gentleman halting between two opinions, being perplexed at finding that Anglo-Israelites give very different, and often opposite interpretations of particular prophecies, may be acceptable to Banner readers. I told him that it is not easy and not material to decide whether any particular prophecy refers to one or other of the Houses of Israel, or to both. We must take the consensus of Scripture for our guide, as for example: In the parable of "the husbandman," in Matt. xxi., our Lord asks the Jews what the lord of the vineyard will do to his unjust and rapacious tenants; and they answer that he will destroy them and give the vineyard to other husbandmen, "which shall render him the fruits in their season." Christ at once shows them the connection between their answer and prophecy by quoting Psa. cxviii. 22, 23, and applying "the other husbandmen," &c. of their answer to the stone which the builders rejected, a nation bringing forth the fruits of the kingdom, and therefore Israel, which is so described in Isa. xxvii. 6. If we read the whole of the 118th Psalm, and compare the 19th verse of it with Isa. xxvi. 2, we cannot fail to see that it refers to Israel, especially with the light which our Lord throws upon "the stone which the builders rejected," by identifying it with the fruit-bearing nation of Israel, and the stone kingdom of Daniel, grinding to powder all upon whom it might fall; and so I find from our Lord's application of prophecy, that "the kingdom of God" is the kingdom of Israel; and that the kingdom of Israel is the stone of Daniel. What I have now to determine is when this kingdom of Israel was to be established, and I find, from our Lord's teaching, that it was to be when the Jews should cease to be "the kingdom of God"—that is, when "the kingdom," or the state of being the kingdom, or being its subjects, heralds, and representatives, should have been taken from them. I find also that it was to be in the latter days, or the Christian dispensation, from Gen. xlix. 1 and Numb. xxiv. 14, 17. St. Paul also teaches that God confirmed the promises which He had made to the fathers, to Israel their children, in that He had raised up Jesus from the dead; and turning to Deut. xxviii. 1, I see that the promise to obedient Israel was that God would exalt her high above all the nations of the earth.

Having thus ascertained that Israel is to be Christian, and chief of the nations in the Christian dispensation, it only remains for me to decide which of all the nations answers most fully to that description; and when I say "England," nobody contradicts me; but when I press the logical conclusion that England must be Israel, I am met with a storm of opposition.

The further question may be raised whether I have rightly interpreted the teachings of Christ, Moses, and St. Paul, to which I answer that I have read the record in its plain, literal meaning; and that unless I am justified in having done so, the Bible might as well have been presented to me in an unknown tongue, or not presented at all.

LECTURE IN ST. JOHN'S SCHOOLS, MIDDLESBOROUGH.

(Concluded from page 161).

[From the "Daily Exchange," Middlesborough, March 2, 1887.]

On Tuesday night a lecture was delivered by Mr. Lamb on the "Early History of the inhabitants of Great Britain," in St. John's Schools, Middlesborough. Mr. J. Marney presided. Amongst those present were the Rev. E. O. Herbert (vicar), Mr. Whatcroft, and Mr. Herne.

The Chairman, in opening the meeting, stated that he was afraid an erroneous impression had got abroad with regard to the last lecture, which was entitled, "The Lost Ten Tribes of Israel." He thought the lecturer had proved undoubtedly on historical grounds that the English people were possibly Gentilised Hebrews; in all probability they were. When they reflected on what the Hebrews had endured it was marvellous that the race had not disappeared. For nearly 3,000 years, according to Archbishop Usher, they had defied exile, massacre and spoliation. Still, everywhere the Hebrew faces his fellow man, and he not only works his way to the front, but often stands a full head and shoulders above the rest of the crowd. Admitted as it were but yesterday to the bar, he is in the first rank as counsel, second to none in eloquence, or in the skill of the advocate. The realm of finance has always been his especial dominion. But never has he occupied so powerful a position as at the present day. He holds Empires in pawn, and by a wish to realise his possessions could reduce half a continent to bankruptcy. His civil disabilities being removed, he became legislator, distinguished by his ready gift of debate, or a magistrate conspicuous for his tact and common-sense. Music, and song, and the drama has been so eminently the monopoly of the Hebrew race that no one is surprised at a great composer, or a great actress, or a prima donna of European celebrity, being of Jewish descent. In art, science, and literature the Hebrew is again among the most gifted in his profession. Whatever department is open to him his success in it is so remarkable as to make him one of the most conspicuous. When the field of his intellect was limited to medicine and finance he rose till he could rise no higher, and now the world closes none of its avenues at his approach, the talents which made him attain distinction when under persecution renders the career he selects in this age of his toleration seldom a failure. He then called on Mr. Lamb for his lecture.

Mr. Lamb then gave an able lecture on the interesting subject he had chosen. After briefly reverting to his previous lecture, he said: So far we have learnt that Ephraim-Israel, the lost Ten Tribes, were the heirs of the temporal part of the covenant, and Judah the spiritual heirs; that Ephraim-Israel was removed to North-West Asia, near the South of the Caspian Sea, and outcast among the Gentiles "as a vessel wherein is no pleasure;" that the acknowledged ancestors of the British people were in the same neighbourhood at the same time; that these Gentile people were known as Gimiri by the Assyrians, and Saca by the Aryan nations, that it is probable from the reference in Hosea, 1st chapter, that it was amongst these Cimiri, Cymry, or Gomerim, otherwise Saca, afterwards Saxons and Cymry, that Ephraim-Israel was mingled and lost. The prophet Amos (ix. 9) says, "For, lo, I will command, and I will sift the House of Israel among all nations like as corn is sifted in a sieve, yet shall not the least grain fall upon the earth." After this took place we can realise Isaiah's words—"Except the Lord of Hosts had left unto us a very small remnant we should have been as Sodom, and we should have been like unto Gomorrah." The census report for 1871 alludes to the invasions of the Saxons as "a few ship-loads of hardy adventurers." The Hebrew element of this mixture were led to Britain, the Gentile element sifted out in crossing Europe. In the course of centuries of emigration across Europe they had fulfilled part of their destiny. They have become God's hidden ones: "Lost to their land," "Lost their language" (Isaiah xxviii. 2), "Lost to their name of Israel" (Isaiah lxv. 1—15). First as to their language. Max Muller's Genealogical Table of the Aryan family of languages contains old Armenian among the number, so that the first language with which they came in contact was Aryan, and this, as we have seen, they had to learn, according to Bishop Wilson, like little children. English is an Aryan tongue. They were to acquire another name, of course; they became known by the name of the people among whom they were for 600 years or more mingled—viz., the Saca and Cymry; and yet there is a faint gleam of light even on this point. It has often been remarked as strange by historians that the little tribe of the Angles, or Angli, should be preferred above all other tribes of Saxons to give their name to England. Providence had something to do with the choice; Hosea says (viii. 5, 6): "Thy calf, O Samaria, hath cast thee off." It is worth notice that the word translated "calf" is "Engli," so that the very name of England, and the name of Angli, our ancestors, connects us with the enormities of Jeroboam in setting up calf-worship in Samaria. But this by the way. Let us now contrast the prophetic history of Ephraim-Israel, and the historic past of Britain, for enough has been said to render the notion of their identity both possible and probable. We will now make it certain. (1) "A multitudinous seed."

Digitized by Google

The Newcastle Daily Chronicle, some years ago, had a powerful article headed, "Population is the strength of the Empire." We see this in the case of the British Empire. How would our mighty colonies have been built up if it were not for our overflowing population? And so Jehovah, when He promised Abraham to make of his seed a great nation, also promised a remarkable fecundity of his descendants, repeated at the very moment of captivity by Hosea, and by Zechariah 100 years after captivity (Zech. x. 10). This increase and extension and consequent strength of the Empire, we find, was to be coincident with their "Obedience to God" (Deut. xxviii. 2). Look at the history of the British people in regard to this matter. The population of this country at the compilation of Doomsday Book was about two millions. In the year 1600 the population had risen to seven millions. This was because our people had turned to a purer faith, and, consequently, were in closer obedience to God. But let us quote the census report of 1871. It has the following:—"It is not for us here to tell how this Empire subsists or has been built up, yet the census will show its essential parts in relation to each other, constituted not only for continuance but for 'growth,' for it is growing, increasing, and multiplying still, and this development of the nation is the characteristic of its life. How a few shiploads of hardy adventurers from the other side of the North Sea settling among and mingling with a scanty population of Celts and Gaels multiplied and became seven millions in the year 1700, sixteen millions in 1801, and thirty-two millions in 1871 is the problem to which the series of facts in the census must materially contribute. For the evolution of such a nation is not the 'result of chance,' and, although it cannot be traced to the policy of any one man, it will be found to be the result of an elaborate and skilful organization, acting under constant forces, regulated by wiser and Diviner laws than Plato gave his commonwealth." He believed that the greatest Empire known within historic times was the Roman, which according to Gibbon at the time of its greatest glory, comprised 1,600,000 square miles of territory, with a population of about 120 millions. Vast as these figures may appear, they are dwarfed into insignificance when compared with similar statistics of the British Empire. At the date of the census of 1871, the population of the entire British Empire was 28,528,612 or one-fourth of the entire population of the world. The territorial extent of the Empire was at the same time 8,489,789 square miles, since augmented by vast tracts in Southern and Western Africa, to say nothing of Burmah and the practical sovereignty of Egypt. Besides this, there resided in foreign countries 3,182,199. This is exclusive of the United States of America, who are people of our own race and blood. Truly, as Zechariah in ii. 6 says—"I have spread you abroad as the four winds of heaven." A great statesman once said, "That Empire was formed by the enterprise and energies of your ancestors, and is also one of a very pecular character. I know no example of it either in ancient or modern history. No Cæsar or Charlemagne ever ruled over a dominion so great. Its flag floats over many waters, it has provinces in every zone; they are inhabited by persons of different races, different religions, different laws. That Empire is no mean heritage." It is a property of our British race to double itself in exceedingly short periods of time. Mr. W. E. Axon, M.R.S.L., in an article on the language of the future, in the Quarterly Journal of Science, July, 1873, tells us that the Germans double once in 100 years, the French in 140 years, Russians in 100 years, Swedes in 92 years, Spanish in 112 years, Italians in 135 years, Turks in 555 years, British in 55 years, Colonies in 25 years; mean, 41 years. Calculating the present rate of increase of the different nationalities, he found that in the year 2,000, 113 years hence, there would be 550 millions of non-British race, and 1,558 millions of Anglo-Saxon, a majority of 1,000 millions for our race in the population of the world. Truly Balaam spoke truly, "Who can count the dust of Jacob, and number the fourth part of Israel?" The Times of July 15th, 1876, observed, "That the most increasing people in the world are found in the United Kingdom—in France the least. That 'this is not half the tale,' that 'so increasing at home are we that we are filling continents, fringing oceans, and making the whole world our home; that overflowing our old boundaries we are peopling the globe.'" Truly "Joseph was a fruitful bough whose branches run over the wall." Is not the word of God true? "The children which thou shalt have after thou hast lost the other shalt say again in thine ears, The place is too strait for me, give place to me that I may dwell" (Isa. xlix. 20). And "more are the children of the desolate (i.e., Israel). than the children of the married wife" (i.e., the Jews). Hard times are sent by God to be the means of dispersing His people over new countries. It was His plan to induce people to fulfil His will, and carry out His word. "Israel shall blossom and bud, and fill the face of the earth with fruit." "Thou shalt make the desolate places of the earth to blossom as the rose." Not only that, but Ephraim-Israel (not Judah-Israel) was to become a company of nations, possessing the Gates or strategic positions of the globe, such as Gibraltar, Malta, and Cyprus, which was the Gate of Palestine. Whether we were Israel or not we were responsible for the safety of all the land promised to Abraham, from the Nile to the Euphrates, and any Power placing a single regiment on any part of that territory would speedily be "chucked out." The British Empire grew larger in spite of the wishes of both political parties. The reason was that political parties and statesmen were so many tools in the hands of God to further His purposes, while they—poor, blind men—only had their petty ambitions in view. David predicted that Ephraim should have "his dominion in the sea, and his right hand in the rivers," and Jeremiah that David's throne should be continuous over a continuous nation of Israel; consequently, when Judah lost her king, God raised up David's successors over the other branch, which at the time had partly arrived in Ireland. He heard a clergyman lecture about the Levitical priesthood being continued in the Church of England ministry, but that the same promise had failed in the case of the nation and its Davidical reigning race. He contended all three had been fulfilled in the British Church and nation. The Bible mentioned three nations in alliance at the time of the return of the Jews, two of which were Israel (Britain) and Egypt.

Digitized by Google

God had led us to Egypt in spite of ourselves. They would never be annexed by Britain, but would be under her protection. In conclusion, he quoted some verses by Martin Tupper, just published as a jubilee poem, acknowledging Britain to be the Anglo-Israel of God.

The lecture was listened to with rapt attention, and with evident signs of approval; and in the discussion which followed the vicar (the Rev. E. O. Herbert) eulogised the study of these deep questions by working men, and expressed his gladness that in the present age the barriers of pre-conceived opinions were being removed, and the laity were coming to the front in defence of the Scriptures, and manifesting God's wonderful works to the eyes of a startled and sceptical world.

WHERE, AND WHO ARE THE ISRAELITES?

An Address given in Rome at a Drawing-Room Meeting by the Rev. A. Ben-Oliel, on February 28th, 1887.

(Concluded from page 170.)

PART II.

The inquiry into the subject under consideration divides itself into two parts, the prophetic and historical—mainly past—Biblical history. To us, who accept the Bible as the Word of God, the prophetic should be decisive by itself, provided we give it a correct interpretation. To achieve this, we must approach the study of the Bible, and of prophecy in particular, without biassed or preconceived notions, with plenty of conscientious common sense, and in a child-like disposition, filled with an earnest desire to be taught by the Spirit of God the meaning and import which He intended to convey to our minds. One general rule is applicable to all Scripture. The literal, grammatical sense of the words should be preferred to all fanciful, far-fetched, spiritualising human ingenuities. Origen did enormous harm by his pernicious allegorical interpretations. I was pleased to find that Nicholas de Lyra, a Hebrew convert of the 12th century, whose Commentary on the Bible was of so great help to Luther and the Reformation, while adopting the Rabbinic code of interpretation, makes the most sensible and admirable observation, that "all those rules pre-suppose the literal sense as the foundation"; and he compares mystic and allegorical interpretations, deviating from the literal, to a building declining from its foundation, and ready to fall.

If this be granted, how absurd and illogical, how dishonouring to God, to suppose for a moment, either that He does not mean exactly what He says, or that He changes His mind and bestows on other people the blessings He had promised to one in particular! No one appropriates the awful threatenings and curses pronounced against the idolatrous Israelites or the unfaithful Jews; and yet how many there are who, when they come to the promised blessings of a glorious future, rob Israel and the Jews by claiming them for themselves and their friends! If Gentile believers share in the blessings promised to the Hebrews, it is because by faith in Christ they become "fellow heirs, fellow members, fellow partakers of the promise, and fellow citizens with the saints, and of the household of God" (Eph. ii. 19; iii. 6); but they do not become substitutes, or take the place of those to whom the promises were made, although temporarily excluded in great part from those blessings through unbelief; for God can, and will, graft them in again in His own time, in conformity with His unconditional promises to the fathers and the word of prophecy, neither of which can fail of complete literal fulfilment.

Perhaps you think this is too long a prefatory introduction. Some among you are so thoroughly convinced of the truthfulness of the identity, that you think the whole subject may be expounded in a few terse sentences. I do not think so. If conviction is to be produced in the minds of those to whom the theory is wholly new, their minds must first be set free from prejudices, and be prepared to enter into its study with the assurance that it has a real and solid basis in the Word of the living God, when it is interpreted by a rule which the mind can grasp and accept as true and legitimate.

Let us now take up one of the points which demand consideration—Multitudinousness. We must examine each point separately and fully, if we are to arrive at a right conclusion.

The Lord says to Abraham—I am quoting from the Revised Version—"I will make of thee a great nation" (Gen. xii. 2); "I will make thy seed as the dust of the earth; so that if a man can number the dust of the earth, then shall thy seed also be numbered" (ib. xiii. 16); "Look now toward heaven, and tell the stars, if thou be able to tell them; and He said unto him, So shall thy seed be" (ib. xv. 5); "The father of a multitude of nations have I made thee; and I will make thee exceeding fruitful, and I will make nations of thee" (ib. xviii. 5, 6); "In multiplying I will multiply thy seed as the stars of the heaven, and as the sand which is upon the sea-shore" (ib. xxii. 17). To Isaac God says: "I will multiply thy seed as the stars of the heaven"; "And multiply thy seed for My servant Abraham's sake" (ib. xxvi. 4, 24). To Jacob He says: "Thy seed shall be as the dust of the earth, and thou shalt spread abroad to the West, and to the East, and to the North, and to the South" (ib. xxviii. 14); "Be fruitful and multiply, a nation and company of nations shall be of thee" (ib. xxxv. 11). Jacob, blessing Joseph's sons, says: "And let them grow into a multitude in the midst of the earth"; and of Ephraim he predicts: "His seed shall become the fulness of nations," rather it should be of the nations—of the Gentiles— (ib. xlviii. 16, 19).

It may be alleged that those promises of multitudinousness to the Patriarchs were fulfilled in the tribes of Israel, as also in the Ishmaelites, Abraham's sons by Keturah, and the Edomites. The objection to this view is, that these promises were unquestionably intended to descend to the son of promise, Isaac, to whom they were repeated, and to Jacob, to whom they were renewed; and we have seen Jacob predicting a special application of the promise in its broadest extent to Ephraim, the representative of Israel, as distinct from Judah.

And there is a more conclusive argument than this, for Jeremiah predicts: "As the host of heaven cannot be numbered, neither the sand of the sea measured, so will I multiply the seed of David My servant, and the Levites that minister unto Me" (ch. xxxiii. 22). Here David and the Levites may be fairly understood as representing Judah, for the royal and sacerdotal elements belonged to the House of Judah alone. In Hosea we read: "Yet the number of the children of Israel shall be as the sand of the sea, which cannot be measured nor numbered" (ch. i. 10). These predictions prove that the promise of multitudinousness belonged to the Hebrews, and to them alone.

Now, when and where has this promise of multitudinousness been fulfilled? The Israelites did indeed increase and multiply rapidly during the Egyptian bondage; but there is no evidence to show that they multiplied to any extraordinary degree while settled in Palestine. They were not certainly more prolific than other peoples have been in our own days, and not assuredly in the proportion in which the Pilgrim Fathers have increased in the United States of America. In the palmy reign of Solomon the population was not probably larger than twelve millions, perhaps fifteen at most. Some statisticians compute the number of Jews in the present day as high as ten millions.

The question is, are these promises mere hyperboles? Did they mean that the seed of Abraham would increase at a ratio exceeding that of other peoples, as the promises do seem to imply, or is their superlative language simply empty phrases? This cannot be; far be it from our thoughts! The Word of God must be true, and in this case it either means an unusual, extraordinary multiplication, or it has little or no meaning.

Digitized by Google

And what about the "multitude of nations," and Ephraim becoming the very "fulness of the nations"? The division of the kingdom was a curse, not a blessing. That is not, surely, what was meant by those promises. Since the captivity the Jews can hardly be described as a nation. They are a people scattered and peeled.

But assume, for argument's sake, that the Anglo-Saxons are the descendants of the Ten Tribes, and how marvellously has the promise been fulfilled literally! Apart from the seven millions of Jews, or say even ten millions; and apart from the Afghans, Caucassian tribes, and others, who are supposed to descend from the Israelites, here we have a people multiplying again in times of adversity, as their ancestors did during the Egyptian bondage; and then invading distant lands; finally settling in "the isles of the West"; and from thence spreading to the four quarters of the world, as was promised to Jacob, and becoming, indeed, a multitude of nations—the fulness of the Gentiles!

I have selected this promise of multitudinousness as a crucial one, other test points will come for consideration hereafter; but this I consider as one of the most important and conclusive. Either there is a people, or peoples, the descendants of the Ten Tribes, as a flourishing, multiplying people, and becoming a multitude of nations, or there is not. If there is—and I do not see who else they could be but the Anglo-Saxons—then the Word of God has been, and is being, fulfilled; and God's faithfulness to promise becomes so forcibly patent as to call forth the adoration and praise of His believing people; or, there is not, and the promise has failed! The Jews of the present day are not a numerous people, and never have been in the sense implied in God's promises to the Patriarchs and in the prophets. They were not, and they are not, a people that could be compared to the stars of heaven, the dust of the earth, or the sand on a sea-shore.

But there is a people, or, rather, several tribes, coming out from the very quarter into which the Israelites were carried away captive, and who, since their true, or full conversion to the Gospel in Reformation times, are manifestly fulfilling God's promise of multitudinousness. If they are not the Ten Tribes of Israel, who are they? The problem assumes a double form. What is become of the Israelites? Who are these Anglo-Saxons, &c., who came out from the very quarter where the Ten Tribes were located after their captivity?

The prophets foretold the leading events and destiny of the Empires and Kingdoms of the earth—Egypt, Assyria, Babylon, Persia, Media, Greece, and Rome, not to mention other smaller States and nations, all occupy adequate places in the visions of the prophets. And will any one venture to assert that the mighty Empire of Britain—mightier far than any of its predecessors—and the wonderfully growing United States of America, have no assigned place in the prophetic vista! It cannot be; it is impossible! for the Bible, as I say in the quotation from one of my lectures in Rome, in narrating the history of the Jews—of Israel—includes and embraces also the history of the human race to the very end of time. If the Anglo-Saxons are not Israel, where is their page in prophecy? If they are, then, oh! how full is the Bible of them! If they are not, how can we account for the unprecedented omission? It cannot be that it is wholly silent regarding them. And if they are not the Ten Tribes of Israel, who else are they? Echo replies, who are they?

It is with regret we announce the death of Robert Longdon, Esq., of Ward's-buildings, Manchester, which took place at his residence, Burbage, Buxton, on Saturday, April 23. Mr. Longdon was admitted a Member of the Manchester and Salford Anglo-Israel Association on February 14, 1831, and on April 4 of that year elected President, which office he has held up to his decease. He was a warm supporter of the British and Foreign Anti-Slavery Society, and other charitable institutions.

A JUBILEE LECTURE.

BEING A LECTURE DELIVERED BY W. H. MASON, AT THE SHEFFIELD ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

"Queen Victoria, David's heir, sits upon the throne of the Lord over Israel" (1 Chron. xxix. 23).

PART I.

WHAT a wild and preposterous assertion! What an insane idea! Is not this the thought of many who for the first time see or hear this statement? Doubtless to anyone wholly unacquainted with the subject, such would be a natural exclamation. Our study of the subject will, however, lead us, I think to the conclusion that our above title is both reasonable and true; and, moreover, the only conclusion we can come to if we are believers in the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, in whom all the promises of God are yea and amen. We want but the acknowledgment, at the outset, of the axiom, that God is God—Almighty, Allwise, and Alltrue—to compel the candid admission, after hearing the evidence, that, in truth, Queen Victoria is David's Heir, and, as such, sits upon the throne of the Lord over Israel, in fulfilment of the promise and oath made to David by the faithful covenant-keeping God, the God of Israel.

Before considering that promise, let us be sure that the throne of Israel was the throne of the Lord, and was meant to be such to all time. If it be so, and our throne be indeed the throne of Israel, then surely the subject is of the very greatest importance and interest to every individual amongst us—yea, to the wide, wide world, and all its peoples. With what different feelings shall we hold the Jubilee if we are convinced that we celebrate the Jubilee of David's heir, the representative of his chosen and perpetual race—the race which shall, without intermission, occupy that throne till He come whose right it is, when viceroy or vicegerent shall no more be needed, for David's Son and David's Lord shall sit upon that throne, and reign in righteousness over a renewed and reconciled world.

In the viii. chap. of 1st Samuel we read that when Israel demanded a king, God said to the Prophet—"They have not rejected thee, but they have rejected Me, that I should not be King over them." Later, Samuel, reproving the people, said: "Ye said unto me, Nay, we will have a king to reign over us: when the Lord your God was your King." Although Israel would have thus deposed their great King and Lord, He did not abdicate His throne, but, in gracious condescension to their weakness, He gave them a human representative of His authority, and appointed David and his seed His perpetual vicegerents, until in His appointed time the Anointed King, the Messiah, shall return to reign. The assertion of the real character of the throne is clearly made twice in 1st Chronicles. In the 28th chap., v. 5, it is called "the throne of the kingdom of the Lord over Israel," and in chap. xxix. v. 23, we read that, "Solomon sat upon the throne of the Lord as king instead of David, his father." I will only further quote on this subject the prophetic language of Israel in the happy times to come, as recorded in Isaiah xxxiii. 22: "The Lord is our King, He shall save us." Not Saul, or any other human king shall be leaned upon in that day, but the true King of Israel alone.

Now let us look at the promise which forms the corner stone of our lecture. It is given in 2nd Samuel vii. 16, and forms part of God's message to David by the hand of Nathan, when the "Man after God's own heart" declared his purpose to build a house for the Lord God. "Thy throne shall be established for ever." If the whole passage be read, as it should be, it will be seen that there is absolutely no qualification or condition attached to this promise. Moreover, the absolute nature of the promise as respects David is brought into fuller and clearer relief by the threat of punishment to his son, in case of desert, being followed by the assurance—"Nevertheless My kindness will I not utterly take from him as I took it from Saul, whom I put away before thee," and yet more decisively by the concluding assurance of our text, as we may call it—"And thy throne and thy kingdom shall be established for ever before thee; thy throne shall be established for ever."

Digitized by Google

What means this repetition and emphasis? Is it merely an Eastern mode of speech? Is it not rather meant to fix our attention upon the evident purpose and determination of God to make the house and throne of David an absolute perpetuity? Thy throne shall be established for ever! So, David's children reigned until Zedekiah was carried captive to Babylon, and the monarchy apparently ended. Then was probably written that 89th Psalm, which one of our most determined opponents advances as proof that the monarchy in its human form did indeed end and was continued only in Christ, the true Son of David. Merely remarking that, as the Christ did not become David's Son till above 500 years after the death of Zedekiah, He could not possibly maintain the perpetuity of David's throne, even had He sat upon it when He came, which He did not, let us spend a few minutes in examining this psalm, and then proceed on our proper course.

Our friend points to the 30th, 31st, 32nd, and 38th and following verses:—"If his children forsake My law . . . I will visit their offences with the rod," &c. He omits the notice of what follows—"But My mercy will I not utterly take from him, nor suffer My faithfulness to fail. Once have I sworn by My holiness, I will not lie unto David: His seed shall endure for ever and his throne as the sun before Me."

Again, verse 38 says—"But Thou hast cast off and rejected Thine anointed; Thou hast cast his throne down to the ground." Placing this alongside Ezekiel xxi. 27—"I will overturn, overturn, overturn it"—our friend decides that, for the transgressions of David's children, the heritage was cut off, the promise and oath to David were broken, and David's race set aside, till He come whose right the throne is. Yet the Psalm ends with a joyous ascription of praise to Jehovah! Wherefore? Because He had belied the promise and oath only just a few lines before alluded to and reiterated? had suddenly changed His mind, and decided that He would lie unto David? How horrible the idea! Yet what else can be logically made of it if our friend's contention is right? No, the writer of that Psalm knew quite well that, in spite of all appearances to the contrary, God was and would be faithful to His promise and oath; therefore that ascription of fervent praise! Let me here illustrate the action of both promise to David and threat to his children by the example of Josiah and his children. On the death of Josiah, his eldest son succeeded him in due course, and was soon set aside for his trangressions. His brother Jehoiakim reigned in his stead, and was followed by his son Jehoiachin, who, after a short reign of three months, gave place to his uncle Zedekiah. Thus the three sons and the grandson of Josiah all realised the threatened punishment for their wickedness, while through all the promise to David was maintained, yea, even, as we shall see, in Zedekiah's case. Let me here say one word on what we may call the moral aspect of the case.

In the 17th chap. of Ezekiel we have God's denunciation of the king, for his breach of the oath he had sworn to the king of Babylon. Yet at the very same time, according to our friend and those who think with him, God was Himself about to do the very thing for which He denounced judgment against Zedekiah. Yea, worse! Zedekiah had taken his oath under compulsion, and through fear of his mighty foe. God had sworn His oath and made His covenant of His own free will, and with His own chosen and faithful servant! Nay, worse still. God was at this very time declaring by another prophet, Jeremiah, His determination to maintain this very covenant as inviolate as His covenant of day and night, and of unfailing sun and moon! Yet, say our friends, He was just on the point of deliberately, or weakly, breaking all these repeated and sworn promises! What a character they thus exhibit of God! Is the prevalence of infidelity in our land a very wonderful thing after such interpretations of God's Word? Some of our friends make matters worse still by asserting that the promise to David was kept by the bringing back of Zerubbabel from Babylon as ruler of the Return. Yet Zerubbabel was the grandson of Coniah, of whom the infidel reads, in Jeremiah xxii., that God had said: "Write ye this man childless—a man that shall not prosper in his days, for none of his seed shall prosper, sitting upon the throne of David, and ruling any more in Judah." My friends, flee commentators, and search the Word of God for yourselves with sincere and believing prayer for the promised teaching of His Holy Spirit. May I just remark what a mockery this sentence on Coniah was if God knew that Zedekiah would be the last king of Israel; and if He did not know——well, I must leave our friends to draw the conclusion, while I proceed to show how God at this very time was exhibiting His plan for the maintenance of His oath, and the preservation of the chosen sceptre. In the 17th chap. of Ezekiel we have a parable and its explanation by God Himself. He says that the cedar of the parable represents the royal House; the topmost branch the king, and the young twigs the king's children. Denouncing judgment against the cedar, and the punishment of the king, He proceeds, in the 22nd and following verses, to outline His future course with the Royal Line. "I will also take of the highest branch of the high cedar and will set it; I will crop off from the top of his young twigs a tender one, and will plant it upon a high mountain and eminent, upon the mountain of the height of Israel will I plant it; and it shall bring forth boughs and bear fruit and be a goodly cedar, and under it shall dwell all fowl of every wing. In the shadow of the branches thereof shall they dwell. And all the trees of the field shall know that I, the Lord, have brought down the high tree, have exalted the low tree, have dried up the green tree, and have made the dry tree to flourish. I, the Lord, have spoken, and have done it." Again, in chap. xxi., v. 26, God says of the same royal house and crown: "Exalt the low, abase the high. I will overturn, overturn, overturn it, until He come whose right it is, and I will give it Him." Now what do all these things mean? Remembering that in both these passages the word low is in the feminine gender—according to the Eastern custom, which gives gender to adjectives—we can only conclude, especially in the light of the subsequent history of Zedekiah's family, that its meaning is this:—I will reject the king and his sons, and will adopt one of the daughters of Zedekiah as heir to the throne. I will make her sovereign of the House of Israel—the high mountain and eminent. From her shall spring forth a powerful race of kings, supreme among the princes of the earth—the trees of the field. So mighty shall this monarchy become, that all peoples shall find protection under the shadow of its power, and all kings shall ultimately know that this great kingdom and sceptre is indeed of My planting, preservation, and establishment. Further, the 21st chap., ver. 26, &c., shows that the sceptre and crown shall be, three successive times, overturned—or removed, as other versions put it, and shall be ultimately handed over to Him whose right it is. Now let us take note that here again we have a free, unconditional promise, made by Jehovah in furtherance and confirmation of His promise and oath to David. A portion of the parable was fulfilled. Zedekiah and his sons all perished, and, strange to say—considering Eastern usages—the daughters of the king, instead of being carried off to Babylon, were left free in their own land, under the protection of Jeremiah and Gedaliah. The threat, then, was fulfilled. What of the promise? God remembered judgment. Did He forget the mercy promised? It is very strange that, according to the common interpretation of Scripture, we must often give an affirmative answer to these questions! We must in this case. We must in the case of Jeremiah's commission. We must in the promise to David; in the great promises to Jacob and to Abraham, and in many others. The spiritual Israel theory of interpretation commonly has this effect, that, through some strange perversity of the Divine Nature, the promises of judgment are always fulfilled, and the promises of mercy as often broken. We do not thus dishonour God and give occasion to the enemy to blaspheme. Hence, in this particular instance, we believe that, as Jeremiah had fulfilled the destructive portion of his commission, he would also accomplish the "building and planting" entrusted to him, and that as God had executed the judgments on the topmost branch and twigs of the royal cedar, so certainly would He plant the "tender one" on the high mountain and eminent; as He had "abased the high" so also would He "exalt the low"; and the daughter of Zedekiah was therefore left free in Judea instead of being carried captive to Babylon; for the same purpose was Jeremiah left there, that he might "plant" this tender one on the high mountain, and "rebuild" the Royal House on the "mountain of the height of Israel."

Digitized by Google

After the murder of Gedaliah, these two, together with Baruch and others, were carried down to Egypt by Johanan. There, by God's direction, Jeremiah denounced destruction against the Jews, who had compelled this flight to Egypt, and promised return to Judah, to a small remnant, which would certainly include the three already named, Jeremiah, Baruch, and the Royal Princess.

(To be continued).

THE REV. JOHN WILKINSON, THE FRIEND OF ISRAEL, LECTURES FOR THE SECOND TIME AT NORTHAMPTON.

A NAMELESS friend has at length (April 11th) sent us a copy of the Northampton Daily Chronicle of February 12th, wherein we have a continuation of the Rev. J. Wilkinson's lectures, the first of which we noticed on March 16th, at page 111 of our present volume, No. 533 of the BANNER. In that issue we gave some replies to Mr. Wilkinson's famous five points contra the Identity, and we believe they were conclusive as against him. We are sorry to find that at his second lecture, which was largely attended, no one was found able enough or bold enough to oppose him, and that the lecturer had it all his own way. This was unfortunate, but not fatal. Northampton is not Great Britain, nor the British empire. Elsewhere than at that town probably Mr. Wilkinson would have found "foemen worthy of his steel." The object of the lecturer on the second occasion was to show "where the Israelites are, if the Anglo-Saxons are not they." This point, of course, has been discussed before by Mr. Wilkinson, and he has received replies from the BANNER, and in other publications; but we shall repeat our side of the contention once more, to enable those who have not had access to our arguments to judge on which side the truth lies.

Mr. Wilkinson's contention attenuated the separation of Israel from Judah, as much as possible, by supposing "that large numbers of the Ten Tribes fell away to Judah" down to the period of the destruction of the Kingdom of Israel by Shalmaneser in B.C. 721. This is, however, a pure assumption, and for it we know there is not the least Scriptural evidence. In 2 Chron. xi. 16, 17, we find those out of Israel who set their hearts to seek the Lord "came to Jerusalem to sacrifice unto the Lord God of their fathers." They visited the city for that specific purpose, but not to reside there, or for domicile. They so resorted only for three years, and then it is to be presumed they came no more. In 2 Chron. xxx. 25, we read of a congregation that came out of Israel with "strangers" out of their land in the days of Hezekiah, the king of Judah, to keep the Passover in Jerusalem. But there is no evidence that they came to stop there. On the contrary, 2 Chron. xxxi. 1 declares that "all the children of Israel returned every man to his possession into their own cities." The next point the lecturer took up was the alleged freedom of Israel to return to Jerusalem with the Jews under the proclamation of Cyrus in B.C. 536. We find here no evidence in support of Mr. Wilkinson's dictum. There is not a shred of proof to uphold it. In the first place, the invitation was given to "God's people," who were the Jews. Israel were Lo-Ammi—not His people—and therefore could not have been included in the permission. Ezra ii. 1 shows that the actual restoration was confined to Judah, who alone were carried away by Nebuchadnezzar; and Ezra i. 1, compared with Jer. xxv. 12 and xxix. 10, shows that the proclamation of Cyrus had reference to God's promises to the Jews by the mouth of the prophet Jeremiah. Josephus's account in Antiq. xi. 5, 2, plainly declares that the message of the king was sent to the Jews, but not to the Ten Tribes, and these, as Josephus reports, remained an immense multitude beyond the Euphrates when the Jews returned. "Those who remained behind," says Mr. W., "were called Jews, and not Israel, as those who were restored were called not only Jews, but Israel." But all Jews were Israelites, as Mr. W. well knows; and therefore those left behind, as well as those restored, must have been of Israel—therefore, Israel and Israelites. Those restored besides included Benjamin, a tribe of Israel of the House of Joseph (2 Sam. xix. 20).

As to the sacrifices offered for the whole Twelve Tribes, if this argued the presence of the whole Twelve Tribes, or representative portions thereof, during the return, so the Twelve Tribes must have been present on Carmel when Elijah offered to the Lord in the midst of the Ten Tribes, as described in 1 Kings xviii. 31, which is simply absurd. Mr. Wilkinson's reasoning, then, has nothing on which to rest, and accordingly falls into fragments in regard to the alleged joinder of Israel with Judah when the return from Babylon took place. But Mr. W. is too cautious to deny that the Ten Tribes are in bulk most likely somewhere or other in the world now, and will have to be discovered to enable them to unite with Judah. In fact, he thinks the search for Israel should be neither useless or hopeless—he knows, in short, it is a good thing to try and find them, and believes the search will be rewarded by our finding them. All he objects to is finding them among the British. Here Mr. W. enunciates his famous bit of wisdom. "When a thing is lost," he says, "always look for it where it was lost." Is that wise? A flock of sheep is "lost" on the mountain side. Sheep are given to stray. A wise man, says Mr. W., ought to look in the field itself which was the home of the sheep for the "lost" sheep. God said Israel should be "wanderers among the Gentiles, or nations," and "sifted among all nations" (Hosea ix. 17; Amos ix. 9). Our lecturer bids us not to heed these predictions, but to go and look for Israel in Media, where they were "lost." He thinks there is much in the Nestorians' case to lead one to think they may be the Ten Tribes—not all of them, mark, but a part of them. So that, at any rate, the rest must, on his own admission, have gone elsewhere. If some, why not all? If the Nestorians be the Ten Tribes, why do they themselves only claim to be part of the one tribe of Naphtali? Besides, Mr. W. being a cleric, or a teacher of the ignorant among the Jews, is bound to bow to the authority of Scripture, and there we confront him with texts to show that, so far from all Israel being destined to be found "a remnant ready to perish in Assyria," the House of Ephraim is to be discovered at last "in the West" (Hosea xi. 10), "in the isles of the West, or sea," "glorifying Jehovah" (Isa. xxiv. 15); "in the North country," with "a place of their own" there (Jer. iii. 18; xxiii. 7, 8); "in the isles afar off" from Jerusalem (Jer. xxxi. 10); a "multitudinous" Christian nation (Hosea i. 10; Zech. x. 6—9); custodians of God's word (Matt. xxi. 43; Psa. cxlvii. 19, 20); tied to the Sabbath (Exod. xxxi. 13—17); evangelists "to all nations, all families and all kindreds of the earth" (Gen. xxii. 18, xxviii. 14; Acts iii. 25). These are the true descriptions God gives us of the status, character, and geographical habitation of Israel in these our latter days of the Christian Dispensation; but Mr. Wilkinson's crude description of the people and their present home does not tally at all with them. Of course Mr. Wilkinson abuses our belief by calling it "one of the leading latter-day errors of these 'perilous times,'" but he gives us no reasons for such a sweeping condemnation, and we may therefore afford to pass by his words on that subject.

Digitized by Google

We now ask our friends' attention to the report of the lecture, and ask them to say whether Mr. Wilkinson is a satisfactory guide in respect to this matter or not.

LECTURE IN THE OLD THEATRE.

On Friday evening, the Rev. J. Wilkinson delivered the second lecture on "The Ten Tribes: Where are they not, and where are they?" in the Old Theatre, Marefair, Northampton, in the presence of a large audience. Major Leibenrood presided, and was supported by Col. Ball-Acton and the Rev. E. G. C. Parr. After a few preliminary remarks from the chairman, the lecturer proceeded to answer the question: If the Anglo-Saxons are not Israelites, where are they? At the outset he expressed himself as exceedingly pleased with the spirit, tone, manner, and words of his opponents on the previous evening, but regretted that the opposition was so very weak. He would rather have had someone who could have brought some strong reasons to show that his five points could be met and explained in harmony with the Anglo-Israelitish theory. The opposition should be prepared to show that his positions were false. Proceeding to his subject, he traced the history of the Ten-Tribed kingdom of Israel from the time of its separation from Judah in 975 B.C. down to the period of its destruction as a kingdom by Shalmaneser, 721 B.C., and showed that during this period large numbers out of the Ten Tribes fell away to Judah. The next stage of history referred to was from the latter date to the period subsequent to the return from Babylon in 536 B.C., the lecturer explaining in regard to the restoration from Babylon, that Israel was as free to return to Palestine as was Judah, the way being as wide open to the one as to the other. Those who remained behind were called Jews, and not Israel; and as those who were restored were called not only Jews, but Israel, and sacrifices were offered for the whole Twelve Tribes, it was a just and natural inference that a considerable proportion of those who returned represented the Twelve Tribes of Israel, so that should no other people in the world ever present a reasonable claim to Israelitish descent, the people known as Jews may be regarded as fairly representative of the interests and destiny of the whole Twelve Tribes. From the predictions of God's Word, however, the search for the Ten Tribes among some portion of the world's present population should, he thought, neither be useless nor hopeless. He remarked that the lost tribes had been sought for in China, Afghan, among the North American Indians, in Wales, and Ireland. Laying down the principle that they should look for a thing where it was lost, he adduced much evidence in favour of the Nestorians, in the mountains of Kurdistan, and by the Lake Ooroomiah, in Persia, as being the lost tribes of Israel. He did not, by any means, consider it necessary to believe that these Nestorians and Jews in Ooroomiah and Kurdistan constituted the totality of Ten-Tribed Israelites, over and above those mingled with Judah; but firmly believed that the evidence in favour of their being at least the nucleus of the Ten Tribes was perfectly satisfactory. In the concluding portion of his lecture he showed the mischievous character of the modern theory—that the Anglo-Saxons were the lost tribes of Israel, a theory he described as one of the leading latter-day errors of these "perilous times." —An opportunity was given at the close for questions, but was not taken advantage of, and the meeting closed with the singing of the Doxology and prayer.

COLONEL S. B. BEVINGTON informs us that on the occasion of the Easter Volunteer Review at Eastbourne, the Rev. Irton Smith preached a special sermon to the troops at the Town Hall. The text chosen was: "And Ahab said, By whom? And the prophet answered, Thus saith the Lord, even by the young men of the princes of the provinces" (1 Kings xx. 14).

THE ABOLITION OF TRANSIT DUTIES IN INDIA.

THE Government of Israel is in India a paternal despotism. It rules India for its benefit, and like the owner of that glorious birthright "it rules by blessing and blesses by ruling," freeing, delivering, redeeming, helping all its subject races. It has abolished suttee throughout India. It has forbidden infanticide, thuggee, and dacoity, and in practice has done its best to protect the native races from the evils these cruel crimes used to bring upon the hapless inhabitants. But the home trade and commerce of the country was also greatly hampered and injured by the transit duties which restricted and burdened it. Each petty native State had its custom houses on the frontier, and heavily fined the goods entering their territories by the duties each levied in transit. Thus a cartload of sugar, weighing eighteen maunds, had to pay, in the ninety miles between Neemuch and Julrapatam, the sum of eighteen and a half rupees, or nearly £2, to the officers of Scindiah and Holkar for transit duties. On the same route, as the Times correspondent reported on Sept. 21, English cloth had to pay 24 rupees (£2 8s.), and native butter (or ghee) nearly 16 rupees (£1 12s). But this was not all. Some of the native States, Indore for instance, used to levy new exactions at every point where foreign territory intervened in the State. In our own settled territories these duties have died hard, and have long survived. It is only recently they have been completely abolished. We ourselves recollect the custom houses (or chowkies) in the Madras Presidency so recently as 1844, when they were removed. They harassed and repressed free trade in the most perverse fashion, and it is a wonder they were so long tolerated. In 1836 these duties were finally abolished by the Honourable East India Company in the North-west provinces and in Lower Bengal. Madras did the same in 1844, as before stated, and in the smaller native States directly under British protection these duties have been abolished for many years. The vast district called Central India, including within it the great native States of Gwalior, Indore, and Bhopal, have always held out and refused to abolish these lucrative duties, which brought a large income to those princes annually. Now, however, by the good offices of Sir Lepel Griffin, the Governor General's Agent in Central India, these native princes have of their own free will abolished these custom duties and the custom houses with them. Trade therefore now is free from one end of India to the other, in Central India as in the territories of the paramount British Râj. For these splendid results the British merchant princes have to thank an Englishman, Sir Lepel Griffin. Now real progress will be made in commerce. To quote the Times' correspondent:—

> Railways which have hitherto paid no dividend may expect increased traffic, and roads made and maintained by the Government at great cost will come in for the use for which they were intended. A brighter era dawns, in fact, for one of the most fertile and productive parts of India; and, although the revenues of these States may for a time be adversely affected, there is no doubt that in the end they will find they have adopted the right policy from even financial considerations. If the States in question do not wish to feel the pinch of pecuniary necessity, they can easily avoid the unpleasantness of a financial deficit by a reduction in their military expenditure. However that may be, the Maharajah Holkar, Sir Gunpat Rao, and the Begum of Bhopal have taken a step of the highest political wisdom, but one which is still more worthy of commendation as an act of self-sacrifice rare in the annals of native Indian rule.

Such is the fact which cheers us in the midst of a gloom which has for three or four years past hung over the commercial prospects of our country. Trade, it is said, is beginning to improve: exports are increasing, imports diminishing, and to crown the pleasing prospect, inland trade in India, in the protected as well as in the semi-independent States, is as free and open as in Devonshire or Cornwall, Kent or Sussex. We have entered into these details to point to the fact that the effect of British rule is to free and deliver, to enrich and bless our subject races, as it was promised by the Lord it should be. "In thee and in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed" was the promise of Gen. xxviii. 14. It is Israel's privilege to "blossom and bud," that she may "fill the face of the world with fruit" (Isa. xxvii. 6). In the management of her Indian territories the House of Israel has on the whole striven in later times to be a blessing, but not a curse. In some respects, she still continues to curse the inhabitants of the lands God has given into her charge in the East, as predicted in Zech. viii. 13, by the ungodly immoral lives of many of her civil and military officials working there; but on the other hand she is giving India the Bible and the Gospel, the Sabbath and civil and religious liberty. She has freed Indian trade, as we have seen, from all its trammels, and given the peninsula peace from its foreign enemies. These are Israel's duties toward the subject native races, according to the prophecies, and we thank God we see evidence that she is carrying out the purposes for which He gave her the Heathen Empire, to be her own inheritance to bring it to Christ (Psa. cxi. 6; ii. 8).

Digitized by Google

ANOTHER CLERICAL AND ADVERSE OPINION.

THE Rev. J. W. Miller is the pastor of St. Stephen's Presbyterian Church, Leicester, and has lately been giving a course of Sunday Evening After-service Lectures, with singing and music by way of attracting people to enter his Church who refuse to attend a place of worship during the regular hours of service. At these services there are sung musical solos, part-songs, and choruses, and short lectures conclude the proceedings. Hitherto, Mr. Miller has delivered lectures, 1st, on the subject of "A lost language or group of languages which have been discovered and read principally within the last twenty years, and the light they throw on the Bible," and 2nd, on the "History of the Lost Race, and the light it throws on the Bible." What race was described as the "lost" one we are not aware, but suppose it was the Hittites; the 3rd lecture, just delivered, has reference to the Jews—"the real aristocracy of the world, and their witness to the truth of the Bible." In the course of this last lecture, the Rev. Mr. Miller gave the place of honour to the Jews. They were everything. They were the aristocrats of the world. Moses was the founder of their—the Jewish—nation. Abraham was their forefather, one of nature's noblemen. The Jew owed his position, not to man, but to God. Hebrew was the Jews' language. The Jews were from the earliest ages a very important nation, and were able to build towns and cities, and the kings of Egypt and Assyria had to take them into account.

The lecturer then went on to make the following observations, which especially concern our own side of the question:—

He would not, on that occasion, do more than refer to a race related to the Jews, namely, the Arabs, pronounced by all competent authorities to be the descendants of Ishmael, and who were to-day fulfilling those prophecies again and again repeated in the Bible concerning them, to the effect that they would remain wild men, children of the desert, "whose hand shall be against every man, and every man's hand against them. Nor would he spend time in combating those silly notions that the English nation was composed of the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel, in support of which idea there was not a particle of proof in the history of our race or of our language. These ideas might be very well to play with, as children played with bubbles in the air, but whenever we attempted to grasp them they burst.

This is all that Mr. Miller said in regard to the "Lost Ten Tribes," and in regard to himself it was enough. He believes the Ten Tribes are "lost," evidently, but he considers ours "silly notions" in regard to the Identity of "the English nation" with them, because neither our history nor our language presents to his view a particle of proof to substantiate the idea that the English are "lost Israel." Evidently Mr. Miller expects that a people once "the Kingdom of Israel," which God had determined should be "lost" as a people, would continue to speak its native Hebrew vernacular through all time. This, however, if he considers it, will be found to be an absurd expectation, for how could the Ten Tribes be "lost" if throughout all their history they had never ceased to speak the language of Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, and the Hebrew fathers? In regard to history—what would Mr. Miller desire more than we can tell him in this respect? Here is a people carried into captivity into Media in 720 B.C., and the historians tell us the ancestors of the British came from that very spot, in B.C. 650—630, after Israel was cast away into captivity there. Is not this a remarkable historical link which cuts the ground from under Mr. Miller, when he tells us we have not a "particle of historical proof"? Again—the Khumri of Wales are historically connected by our scientists, such as Rawlinson, Niebuhr, and Sharon Turner, with the Cimbri of the Romans, the Cimmerioi of the Greeks, the Gimiri of the Assyrian inscriptions, and with the Beth-Khumri of Samaria.

Here is another very important historical link which ought to make Mr. Miller pause when he next lectures against our views. The historical traces which the Triads afford us, and which the Saxon chronicles furnish, point back to Palestine and the Hebrew race as the origin of the British nation; facts which serve to contradict Mr. Miller's very decided statements. But when we come to the Scriptural argument we are surprised to find a minister of religion like Mr. Miller silent regarding them. He strives to allure the careless folks of Leicester to good things by solos, and part-songs, and choruses sung in the House of God, but when it comes to a scriptural subject, like the discovery of God's people, the Ten Tribes of Israel, God's Word is closed, and we are sent to the dry bones of history and philology for argument to support the testimony of Lo-Ammi; but the Scriptures are not allowed to declare the truths they are ready to announce, and with which they are vocal, that the British, who have all "the signs" God promised to His people in the latter day, are the remnant of Israel indeed. History and philology are not silent in regard to the testimony, as Mr. Miller supposes—but the Scriptures, whose verdict he dare not deny, are full of the glorious truth that the Lost Tribes are found, and found in the British races; for they have exclusively all the promises of God made on oath "to Abraham and his seed for ever," not one wanting.

They are blessed as a nation, and are a blessing to all other races (Gen. xii. 2, 3, xviii. 18).

They are the most increasing race on the face of the earth (Hosea i. 10; Zech. x. 6, 9).

They are the wealthiest (Deut. viii. 18).

They rule over many nations, and serve none (Deut. xv. 6).

They lend to many races but never borrow (Ibid.).

They have a splendid Colonial Empire, and that empire was established in the desolations of the earth (Isa. xlix. 8; Gen. xxxv. 11).

They have a Heathen Empire such as the world never saw before (Psa. cxi. 6, ii. 8).

They have God's signs He put on Israel—namely, the Sabbath (Exod. xxxi. 13, 17), and the Decalogue (Deut. vi. 6—9); and

They have the Bible and the desire to circulate it throughout the world (Psa. cxlvii. 19, 20; Isa. xliii. 21).

They have, finally, the wish to save sinners and bring them to Christ, and their operations extend, as God declared Israel's should, to all the nations, all the families, and all the kindreds of the earth (Isa. xxvii. 6; Gen. xxii. 18, xxviii. 14; Acts iii. 25).

We ask the Rev. J. W. Miller, then, as an honest man, to look into these matters, and if he finds the facts to be as we have stated them, can he, dare he, again, in the sight of God, venture to call ours "silly notions," "without a particle of proof in the history of our race or of our language"? We wait for his reply.

Digitized by Google

PROPHETIC DATES ACCORDING TO MR. AND MRS. GRATTAN GUINNESS.

By H. L.

In the interesting books published by Mr. and Mrs. Grattan Guinness, the Christian world has been made familiar with the methods of calculating prophetic dates, and a means of confirming our faith in the Scriptures has been placed in our hands, which is well worth using. The principle laid down is, that the events of earth's history are regulated by astronomical periods—that there is, as it were, some great clock, by which the time is marked—and that we shall find a striking correspondence between an astronomic cycle and a prophetic or historic interval; in short, that the sun and moon are set "for signs and for seasons," in a fuller sense than is generally supposed.

"There are in nature years of three different lengths, years measured by the moon, years measured by conjoint movements of the sun and moon, and years measured by the sun alone—that is, there are—

1. Lunar years of 354 days,
2. Calendar years of 360 days,
3. Solar years of 365¼ days.

Hence 1,260 lunar years equal only 1,222½, and 1,260 calendar years equal only 1,242, and so lack eighteen years of the solar 1,260."

The conclusion arrived at is, that we should calculate prophetic dates by each of these three methods, and we shall find that many of them are fulfilled in three stages, answering to this way of counting. This is very remarkably the case in calculating the period of power allotted to the Mahomedan rule; and whether we reckon the date from the Hegira, or from the capture of Jerusalem by Omar, we come, in each case, to three stages of its downfall. Again, this is observable in the period of power allotted to the Papacy, whether calculated from the decree of Justinian or that of Phocas. This system explains what have been considered conflicting dates.

The measuring rod of 1,260 years may be worked both forwards and backwards, with very interesting results; and we shall notice that the events at each end of the rod have an unfailing correspondence. Thus, the rise of a power at one end corresponds with its fall at the other, and vice versa. This seems too obvious to need pointing out, and yet in several instances, in the books in question, the rule has been lost sight of, and it has caused a curious gap in the interpretation of prophecy, which will be specially interesting to Anglo-Israelites. For instance, the well-known prediction in the twenty-sixth of Leviticus, which foretells that Israel would be punished "seven times" for her sins, and which is emphasised by its fourfold repetition in that chapter, signifies a space of time extending over seven times 360 years—that is, 2,520 years, or twice 1,260. This term of punishment is again spoken of by Hosea, who prophesied to the idolatrous Ten Tribes shortly before their exile:—"Come, and let us return unto the Lord, for He hath torn, and He will heal us; He hath smitten, and He will bind us up. After two days will He revive us, in the third day He will raise us up, and we shall live in His sight." On the year-day interpretation, the rise again of the hidden and buried people is here foretold to be in the third thousand years from the beginning of their punishment, harmonising with the term of 2,520 years.

Now if we lay one end of the measuring rod on the year 721 B.C., the date of the exile to Assyria, the other end will touch the year 1801 A.D., or the first year of the nineteenth century, a notable time indeed in the history of our race and country—a time that marked the revival of religion among us, the outburst of missionary enterprise, the contest with Napoleon, when we stood alone, and successfully, against the world; and, from being a second-rate or third-rate Power, rose to the first rank as a naval, military, colonising, mighty people. It was indeed a Resurrection. Yet in dealing with this measurement, the writers lay their measuring rod, at one end, on the captivity of the Ten Tribes, and, regardless of their rule, point at the other end to the greater freedom and prosperity of the Jews, or Two Tribes, as a suitable fulfilment of the prophecy. But according to analogy, the fulfilment must concern the Ten Tribes, and not the Two.

Another of the measurements given in "Light for the Last Days," should specially interest Anglo-Israelites. The Fall of the throne of Judah is the subject of it, and that date is reckoned from the year B.C. 598. The triple measurements being applied, the following dates are arrived at—namely, A.D. 1848, 1887, and 1923. Now what do these dates indicate in connection with the throne? The writers do not attempt any explanation, but to those who believe our Queen to be the representative and literal descendant of David's royal line, and who can see what a significant place her glorious reign occupies in these stirring latter days, the dates have a curious significance. The year 1848 witnessed the downfall of the thrones of Europe. The throne of Great Britain alone stood firm in the great crash, for it was founded on a rock, the promise of Jer. xxxiii. 17. The year 1887, the present one, has again a great significance in connection with our throne. It is not only the Jubilee year of our Queen, but it will inaugurate the movement for the Federation of the greatest Empire the world has ever known, a movement as yet in its infancy, but whose results are likely to strengthen, beyond all thought, the stability of the throne. Of the further date, 1923, we can but speculate, but it may point to the transfer of the throne of David to the Holy Land, and to the fulfilment of the many hopes and aspirations which we have learnt to entertain for the British race, the covenant people of Jehovah.

April 1, 1887.

"REMEMBER THE SABBATH DAY TO KEEP IT HOLY" (Exodus xx. 8).

By a German.

So much has already been said, and so well said, in the pages of the Banner, as to the importance to be attached to the fact that the British are the only people who nationally, and, to a great extent, individually, obey the fourth Commandment—thereby furnishing another proof of their identity with the House of Israel, according to Exod. xxxi. 17—"it is a sign between Me and the children of Israel for ever,"—that it seems presumptuous to attempt to add anything further. Yet in this day of conflicting moral forces, and when a great truth has to make its way through a host of difficulties, none should withhold their testimony, where it may be of any use. And it may be of use where it is given by one not born and bred to the observance of that holy day.

But here, at the outset, an intelligent foreigner, one, let it be supposed, who does not occupy the standpoint of a sceptic, or of an opponent of Christianity, will at once meet us with the assertion: "But we do observe Sunday, as a day set apart! Do we not make a difference? Listen to our church-bells! Behold the crowds—respectable, orderly-looking crowds, too—going in and out of our churches, Roman Catholic and Protestant! In many countries the children and young people are actually obliged to be present at a religious instruction, given regularly before or after the public services! See our better houses of business closed all day—all shops closed till Divine service is over! Is not this observing the Sabbath, as you call it? although I object to the expression: we see too much of the keeping of the actual Jewish Sabbath outwardly, where yet a back-door is left open for the transaction of all sorts of business." To be candid, there is a measure of truth in all this, and what good it implies one would certainly rejoice in. There are those in the present day who maintain that Christianity is "effete," or nearly so, on the Continent, and in time will fail likewise in England ; so that it is a relief to find it still has a hold, and by no means a slight hold, on the minds of people throughout Christendom. Oh, that—there being still such proofs of the presence of the living seed of truth—one could indulge in the hope of its gradual increase and final yielding of a golden harvest!

Digitized by Google

But this leads at once to the heart of our subject :—"Remember the Sabbath Day to keep it holy." Our intelligent foreigner would concede that the words mean what they express, and that a devout "Jew" of old (and why not of the present day?) was bound to set the seventh day apart, to the best of his ability, abstaining from work and from all that would lay a burden of work upon others, and spending his hours in austere retirement ; "but"—thus would he continue his argument—"we are more enlightened now, and must act in the spirit of Christ, who said 'the Sabbath was made for man'; consequently the early Church shifted it from the seventh to the first day of the week. It is well (for those who need such helps) to give up a portion of it to the hearing of a profitable Christian discourse ; it is well to spend some of the morning hours in cultivating pious reflections and aspirations, and to remember one's Creator; but this done,—having 'rendered unto God the things that are God's'—man is entitled to have his share; let him employ the rest of the day in the pursuit of innocent pleasure. This will keep him fresh in mind and body, and fit him for his six days' work. Besides—what better does the Englishman, in reality, even though he goes to church twice? All day long he is dull and sleepy, his devotions culminate in half-a-dozen yawns, and in his life he shows himself silent and morose, and inaccessible! Then, why should not some poor struggling shop-keeper, who might honestly, and without trouble to himself or others, add a trifle to his gains by opening his shop on Sunday afternoons, why should he not take advantage of the fact that there is no hindrance on the part of the authorities?" May it be excused that these arguments have thus been stated at length; for in one form or another, in a garb more or less attractive, they have, in this our generation, been greatly urged for acceptance upon the British people. Let them praise God that, in this also, they have been "led by a way they knew not," and for centuries taught to give their humble response to the fourth Commandment—"Have mercy upon us, and incline our hearts to keep this law." There is a time for nations, as well as individuals, when they need "line upon line, and precept upon precept"; and it is already a great point gained when a law is bowed to even before the principle of it is understood.

How, however, does our friend's theory bear the test of practice? To a superficial observer there is a universal gladsomeness about a Sunday abroad, which he may well feel to be catching. Yet let him look a little more closely behind the scenes of domestic life; let him put a few searching questions, and—another picture is revealed. This setting apart of the latter half of the day (in how many cases is it the entire day !) for pleasure, involves inevitably a train of baneful consequences, too numerous to detail. Everyone being set free, and claiming the right to please himself, attractive programmes of amusements are held out on all sides, and for all classes. Public traffic is as great or greater than on week-days, though running in another direction; and the wants of the hour are provided for to suit all tastes. How much of the week's wages of the labourer and artisan, how much of the income of the well-to-do, is spent in this way, only they themselves can compute ; but it is well known to amount to an enormous sum. In the poorer families, misery is often the lot of mother and children, of the female portion especially, because the head of the house must and will gratify his desires. While, thanks be to God, in many towns and districts in the United Kingdom, communities have, of their own free will, arranged so as to set even the letter-carrier free on that day; abroad, the number of officials and attendants to accommodate the public must be increased, and are made to labour indeed in the "sweat of their brow." To how many, that are the bearers of the burdens on these occasions, to how many who are thus trying to draw refreshment out of broken cisterns, does life become a dreary blank, because the Christianity surrounding them is of so low a type that it presents not one truth clearly to the mind to grasp and hold on by to the end! This picture is not overdrawn. It is true in instances too frequent to reflect on without pain. It need not be so darkly shaded when speaking of some places, especially in countries where Protestantism prevails, and there are smaller Christian communities noted for godliness of life; but these have nowhere sufficed to set their mark upon the people among whom they dwell. That Sunday is the day for the pursuit of pleasure, amounts among all professedly Christian nations, the British excepted, to the force of an axiom!

Does not He, "whose throne is in heaven, whose eyes behold, whose eyelids try the children of men," take note of these things? There is a nation, yea, a company of nations, upon this earth, who nationally set apart this one day, and who many of them individually remember to keep it holy. It is this latter clause, the import of it, which Christendom at large has missed. Has it not made a difference, and must it not eventually work wonders, when, on every first day of the week, the Resurrection day, the opening day of the new creation, even a small, but happily an ever-increasing portion of a whole race, renew their strength, in very deed spending hours in the presence of God ? But who can fully estimate the consequences as time goes on ? The inspired Word does reveal them:—

On the one hand we read of "lovers of self—lovers of pleasure rather than lovers of God—who received not the love of truth that they might be saved . . . . that they all might be judged, who believed not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness."

But to Israel it is said: "If thou turn away thy foot from the Sabbath, from doing thy pleasure on My holy day, and call the Sabbath a delight, and the holy of the Lord honourable; and shalt honour it, not doing thine own ways, nor finding thine own pleasure, nor speaking thine own words; then shalt thou delight thyself in the Lord, and I will make thee to ride upon the high places of the earth, and I will feed thee with the heritage of Jacob, thy father: for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it."

FRENCH COMMERCIAL PROSPERITY AND FRENCH DEPOPULATION.

WE found the following in two of our public journals, the first in the Times of Nov. 19th, the second in the Edinburgh Evening News of Nov 11th, and invite our readers' attention to these reports respecting French commercial prosperity on the one hand, and French depopulation on the other. We are surprised to find the French journals claiming Madagascar and other dependencies as French Colonial territory. We were not aware that the power of France was established over the Malagasy Monarchy in such wise as to give the French the right to claim its four millions of people and its 375,000 square miles as parts of the French outland possessions. However that may be, the results, as claimed by them, are represented below for the information of our readers.

THE FRENCH COLONIES.

Some interesting information has lately been given by M. A. Rambaud in La France Coloniale with regard to the different colonies and countries under "the protection" of France. His statistics refer both to the extent and the population of the different colonies, the latter being the more important element of the two, for a very extensive region may be very thinly inhabited, and be, therefore, of much less value than a smaller region with a more dense population. As regards area, the French colonies, including in them the "protectorates" of Tunis, Cambodia, Annam, Tonquin, Madagascar, and the Congo, are of about 1,900,000 square miles, or nearly six times that of France itself. The total population is about 28½ millions, exclusive of the Congo, for which no figures are to hand. The description of these Colonies is given by M. Rambaud as under:—

Digitized by Google

Name of Colony.	Square Miles.	Population.	Date of Census.
The Congo	470,000 ...	Population Unknown. ...	—
Algeria	420,000 ...	3,310,412 ...	1881
Madagascar and other Dependencies	375.000 ...	4,000.000 ...	1882
Senegal	190,000 ...	197,000 ...	1882
Guinea and the Gaboon... ...	125,000 ...	200.000 ...	1882
Guyana	94,000 ...	128,000 ...	1884
Tunis	87,500 ...	1,500,000 ...	1881
Annam	75,000 ...	4,000,000 ...	1883
Tonquin	62,500 ...	12.000,000 ...	1883
Cambodia	62,500 ...	1,945,954 ...	1883
Cochin China	37,500 ...	1,633,824 ...	1883
New Caledonia, &c. (exclusive of the New Hebrides) ...	12,500 ...	60.000 ...	1884
Chak-i-Ched Seid	7,500 ...	22,000 ...	1882
Tahiti, &c.	2,300 ...	25,050 ...	1884
Réunion	1,650 ...	170,518 ...	1882
Guadeloup, &c.	1,200 ...	182.866 ...	1884
Martinique	615 ...	167,679 ...	1884
French India	315 ...	282.723 ...	1883
Mayotte	230 ...	11,900 ...	1882
Nossi-Bé	185 ...	9.539 ...	1884
St. Pierre and Miquelon ...	150 ...	5,765 ...	1885
Ste. Marie	95 ...	7,287 ...	1882

The trade with all the French Colonies, Algeria and Tunis excepted, is estimated by M. Rambaud for 1883 at £19,200,000, and if to this is added the £16,000,000 of Algeria and the £1,800,000 of Tunis, the total would be £37.000,000, this being about a tenth of the total trade of France herself. Out of the total of £37,000,000 of the Colonial trade about £22,000,000 is with the mother country, and this represents a larger trade than is done by France with any other country except England (£60,000,000), Belgium (£38,520,000), Germany (£31,480,000), and the United States (£28.120,000). Small as this trade is compared with that of the English Colonies, there is a gradual improvement in that of nearly all the Colonies which have been acquired during the present century, for Algeria, which in 1840 had a trade of only £900,000, has reached a total of £16,000,000, while Senegal, which in 1823 had a total of less than £100,000 exceeded £1,300,000 according to the latest statistics. The trade of Martinique has risen within the last 40 years from £1,200,000 to double that sum, and that of the Islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon from £320,000 in 1858 to £1,200,000 in 1884. Nearly all the trade with the Colonies is done in French bottoms, as of the 1,315,144 tons of shipping which entered and left the ports of these Colonies in 1883, 1,235,392 tons were French, this being over 95 per cent.

THE DEPOPULATION OF FRANCE, 1886.

If it be true that the increase or decrease in the population of a country is the surest index of its prosperity or weakness, the French cannot conceal from themselves that there is much to disturb them, and even to terrify them, in the statistics on the subject for the year 1885, which have just been issued by the Government. There is, perhaps, no question of greater gravity for the French at the present time, and a thoughtful study of the figures just issued must inevitably (says a correspondent) produce reflections the very reverse of encouraging. The latest statistics show that the progressive decrease in population received a check during the last year. The births, which in 1884 numbered 937.758, last year were reduced to 926,558, showing a decrease of 11,200. The difference, it will be seen, is enormous, and is sadly significant. The excess of births over deaths during 1885 compensates in some measure for the lower birth-rate. The total of births last year (independent of the statistics of stillborn children, the number of which reached 44,000) was 926,558; the number of deaths was only 836,897, giving a net gain to the births of 87,661. It would be puerile (adds the correspondent) to attempt to declare that the falling off in the birth-rate of France arises from physiological causes, or from the degeneracy of the French race. Official figures prove that the people are not less healthy, nor are possessed of weaker constitutions, than those of other nations. The deaths are proportionally fewer in France than in Hungary, Italy, Germany, or Austria. No, the diminution of the birth-rate, it is to be feared, is to be attributed to special causes, and, one is compelled to add, to moral causes. Amongst the first must be reckoned the diminution in the number of marriages, and the constant increase of illegitimate children; and these latter, in consequence of their neglect in infancy, as is distinctly proved by statistics, have a rate of mortality at least double as high as that of ordinary children. Of the moral causes one cannot speak here, but there is abundant and daily evidence of an appalling and lamentable state of things in that direction—a state that is scarcely dreamed of by the vast proportions of he people of England.

LANGUAGE AND ANCESTRAL PRAIRIES.

By W. L. Blore.

In the Banner of the 23rd of March, I find reference made to a letter by Captain George Palmer, R.N., on the above subject, in which he states, that "If I found John Smith and his family located in the heart of Tartary, and speaking the dialect of the Ugro-Ostiaks, I should, notwithstanding that circumstance, know that they came originally from England," etc. If Captain Palmer visited South Africa he would find John Smiths, William Shaws, and Barnabas Shaws speaking the dialects of Kafirland, etc., who never came originally from England. By the Palmer rule of judgment as to national descent—namely, the surname of any individual, Sir Moses Montefiore cannot be a Jew as to descent, but an Italian. I have met with hundreds of Jews that have purely European surnames—Russian, German, Italian, Dutch, French, Spanish, and Portuguese, and many English surnames. Orilvie says that "a surname is an appellation added to the original name," and Johnson that "to surname is to name by an appellation added to the original name;" and so we have John Smith, John the Baptist, Simon Peter, Joseph called Barnabas surnamed Justus, Saul surnamed Paul, Nathanael surnamed Bartholomew—for Bartholomew is not a proper name (Brown of Haddington), John, whose surname was Mark—a Hebrew "original," and a Greek or Roman surname. There may be thousands upon thousands of Smiths, but the number of Adam, John, James, Thomas, and Peter Smiths is not so large as the number taken without the "original" names.

Now John, or Johanan, is as much a Hebrew name as Moses; and therefore, John Smith and Sir Moses Montefiore may both be of Hebrew descent, notwithstanding the surnames of Smith and of Montefiore. We find that, as a rule, a change of name was often insisted upon in the East whenever a people were made captive; and in Poland we find that that captive nation is having its very language obliterated by its conquerors. Even in Alsace-Lorraine Germany is trying all it can to destroy the French national feeling. We read in Daniel that "the prince of the eunuchs gave unto Daniel the name of Belteshazzar," and that the names of his companions were all changed, and so Joseph, when in Egypt, was named Zaphnath-Paaneah by Pharoah. "This practice is common in Oriental courts. It is possible that this changing of names may have been designed to make them forget their country."

The captivity of Israel took place twenty-five centuries ago, and they must have undergone a complete transformation as to their whole social life during that time, for they are now spoken of by all as "the lost tribes," whilst the Jews are not spoken of as "lost." A "lost" tribe evidently signifies a tribe of whose nationality, as deduced from religious rites, from mere name, or from language, there is no apparent trace. Yet in the matter of name it is a fact that in the Anglo-Saxon race, taking the "original" names and rejecting the "appellations added to the original names," we have persons with Hebrew names by the million, such as Aaron, Abel, Abraham, Ada, Adam, Amos, Ann, Anna, Barnabas, Bartholomew, Benjamin, Caleb, David, Daniel, Deborah, Ebenezer, Elizabeth, Eliza, Elijah, Enoch, Esau, Hannah, Esther, Hester, Gideon, Jacob, James, Jabez, Joshua, Job, Jonathan, Jael, John, Joseph, Josiah, Leah, Levi, Magdalene (Dutch), Mary, Matthew, Michael, Miriam, Naomi, Nathanael, Reuben, Ruth, Rachel, Rebecca, Samuel, Saul, Sarah, Seth, Simeon, Simon, Susanna, Susan, Thomas, Zechariah, etc., etc.

Digitized by Google

But we have only to go across the water to the United States to observe how names and language have been entirely obliterated by captivity. There we find six millions of coloured people, whose ancestors two centuries ago spoke the languages of Africa and had African names. At the present time it may safely be affirmed that not one of the six millions speaks an African language, not one has an African name, not one knows whence his ancestors came; and yet the six millions are all of African descent.

In the "Key to Uncle Tom's Cabin," pp. 346—363, there are descriptions of sixty captives—not one of them with an African name—all of them having rather English or Hebrew names. Who will recognise these as Africans in another ten centuries? Not one. The Jews of the present day speak the languages of Europe in ordinary intercourse. We never hear them conversing in Hebrew, although they read it. But Hebrew to them for ordinary purposes is a foreign language. But the Jews are not "lost." How much less is it to be supposed that the "lost" tribes should speak Hebrew or have Hebrew names, seeing that a portion of them is thus described by Simon, who was surnamed Peter by our Lord; "The elect, who are sojourners of the dispersion;" James calls them "The Twelve Tribes which are of the dispersion." Upon these texts I find the following in Bishop Ellicott's commentary: "The remaining ten had lost their tribal distinctions, and have now perished (?) from all historical record."

It seems strange that these epistles by James and Simon Peter should have been written to the dispersion, and that the commentator should suppose that ten out of the twelve should "have now perished from all historical record," for in the fifth verse Simon Peter writes: "Who are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation, ready to be revealed in the last time." Here the Bishop's commentary observes: "This, however, will not take place till the exact period, and that period will be the last of the world's history." Who are thus kept by the power of God? The answer is, "You," "sojourners of the dispersion." If kept by the power of God, surely they "have not perished from all historical record," whilst but the Two Tribes remain.

Hill-house, Sandown, Isle of Wight.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

Our work, during the past month, has been full of interest, accompanied with tokens of God's blessing attending the various operations of this Association. The principal item of encouragement may, perhaps, be found in the large and influential gathering which met to inaugurate the opening of our new premises on Monday, April 18. Lady Jane H. Ellice, one of the oldest and most valued friends of the Society, in formally declaring the new rooms open for the furtherance of Identity truth, made one of the most touching little addresses it was our lot ever to have heard, it fairly won its way into the hearts of the audience by its earnest simplicity. Her ladyship was well supported by Members of the Council, and friends of the Association.

Lectures.—Our tour in Somerset and Devon was productive of good results, especially was this the case at Dawlish and Burnham, where the audiences far exceeded our most sanguine expectations. Since our return home we have received testimonies from each of the places we visited, telling of enquiry awakened, and truths accepted. During the last three months we have delivered twenty-three addresses, and purpose (D.V.), after the Association's Annual Meeting, to arrange for others in various parts of the country. We shall be pleased to receive many applications from friends for this department of Association work.

Free Distribution of Literature.—Special opportunities occur to us of judiciously distributing Anglo-Israel literature at our lectures, and in the Association's Rooms, in addition to which our Branch Associations are continually asking us for supplies. In the first years of our existence (1879—80) we did much in this way. We shall be glad to extend our efforts in this direction, if friends will help us with gifts of literature and donations. A lady has given 10s. for this special work. Who will follow?

Jubilee Fund for Furnishing New Offices.—The following amounts have been received since our last monthly report:—

	£	s.	d.		£	s.	d.
Miss Mullett	0	2	6	Philo-Israel	1	1	0
Widow's Mite	0	2	6	Henry Lewis, Esq. ...	0	10	0
Captain Bayly	1	1	0	Mrs. Anne Sealey... ...	0	10	0
Miss Hulley	1	1	0	Mrs. Thomas Paley ...	2	2	0
Mrs. Grieve	0	4	0	Thomas Holland, Esq. ...	0	5	0
Mr. Albert W. Smith ...	0	2	6	W. H. Peters, Esq., J.P...	5	0	0
A. J. Stephenson, Esq. ...	0	10	0	I. Loveland, Esq.... ...	1	1	0
Mr. and Mrs. Hird ...	1	1	0	A Friend, per Lady Jane Ellice	5	0	0
Lady Jane H. Ellice ...	1	0	0	Rev. T. W. Boyce, M.A. ...	3	3	0
Major-General Wm. Hill...	0	5	0
Douglas A. Onslow, Esq...	0	10	0

The foregoing amounts, with those previously acknowledged, bring the total received to date to the gratifying sum of £31 18s. 6d. A further sum of at least £25 is required to relieve us of all anxiety as to the liabilities incurred by entering upon this new phase of the Association's history. What can be more natural or reasonable than for British-Israelites to contribute their Jubilee Offerings to a fund which provides for them a permanent central home, surpassing everything, for position and accommodation, they have hitherto possessed? We therefore believe that our appeal to successfully complete this enterprise will meet with a cordial and immediate response from the friends of Anglo-Israelism the wide world over.

Member's Subscriptions.—The following subscriptions have been received since our last monthly return:—Fifteen of 2s. 6d., one of 4s., four of 5s., three of 10s., two of 10s. 6d., one of 20s., one of 21s.—total £7 13s. 6d. Many of our oldest members who discontinued subscribing for a time are returning to help us.

Donations of Books for the Library.—We have to acknowledge with many thanks gifts of valuable works for our library from the Rev. A. B. Grimaldi, M.A., and a second supply from Rowland Mackworth, Esq. Surely many Anglo-Israelites have spare books on biography, travels, history, &c. Please look over your stores and send on what you are not needing at your earliest convenience.

Our Annual Meeting will be held at Exeter Hall on the evening of Tuesday, May 24th. We shall have a capital arrangement of some of our most prominent public speakers, but must refer our friends to the advertisement columns to learn all about what we are going to do.

The Council ask British-Israelites from every part of the world to come and avail themselves of the conveniences and accommodation of the Association's new premises, and to make it what they have designed it to be—a central home for all identity believers, and where they will meet with a hearty welcome.

The Council further take this opportunity of impressing upon the minds of the Association friends that donations and subscriptions will only benefit the funds of the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association when sent direct to the offices, 14, King William Street, Charing Cross, London, W.C.

James Billington, Secretary.

The Identity at Shoreham.—A Lecture was delivered at the Young Men's Institute, Shoreham, on Wednesday last. by Mr. A. W. Eade, entitled. "Where are the Israelites, and where is the Royal Seed to King David's Throne?" The essayist dwelt principally upon the promises made to Israel and how they were fulfilled in the British nation, and in them alone. He traced the descent from David to Queen Victoria, and mentioned the chief points in her reign. She was, he said, the noblest and purest type of Christian womanhood on the earth. At the close of the Lecture a debate took place between the members. Mr. Snelling presided, and the attendance was good.

Digitized by Google

ANGLO-ISRAEL FREE DISTRIBUTION FUND.

FORTY-FIRST MONTHLY REPORT.

The following donations and subscriptions, from March 9th to April 14th, are very gratefully acknowledged:—

Received by Miss E. M. Rush: H. W., Montreal, £1; E. J., 5s.; Mrs. B., Weymouth, 10s.; T. D., 2s. 6d.; P. C., a collection from a few working men, 3s.; J. C. H. M., 2s. 6d.; W. F. L., 10s.; Mrs. B., per Philo-Israel, for BANNERS, 10s.; M. P., for BANNERS, 1s.; An Anglo-Israelite, Bath, 5s.; "A. E. I.," for BANNERS, £1; J. D., 2s. 6d.

By Mr. C. Horner: Mr. W., per Mrs. T., 10s.; N. C., "a thank-offering," 5s.; Mr. G. H. C., 2s. 6d.; C. T., 2s. 6d.; Mrs. C. B., monthly subscription, 5s.; Mrs. H., 1s. 6d.

By the Treasurer: Mrs. L., Teddington, £1; Mrs. C., Chippenham, £1; J. A., 6d.; H. L., 5s.; Mrs. A., Haverthwaite, 3s. 6d.

Total, £8 7s.

J. LAWRENCE, Hon. Treasurer.

FOR several reasons it has been deemed advisable to have a Banking Account for the Free Distribution Fund, and, therefore, one has lately been opened at the London and Provincial Bank, Teddington Branch, in the names of the Free Distribution Fund and Hon. Treasurer. It is hoped that this new arrangement will prove convenient to subscribers who are in the habit of remitting donations by cheques, in which case they may be crossed "London and Provincial Bank, Teddington Branch." Also, in the Provinces where this Bank has an establishment. sums can be deposited with instructions to be made payable to the Hon. Treasurer of the Anglo-Israel Free Distribution Fund, Teddington Branch, thus saving the cost of commission on P. O. O. or Postal Notes.

The extended field of operations now carried on by the Fund necessitates a larger outlay for literature, with consequent additional expenditure. Of late the receipts have been inadequate to meet the requirements of many old "sowers," while several kind offers to distribute in new places cannot, unfortunately, be satisfactorily attended to. As one instance, since the last report, the Secretary received a letter from Australia, in which the writer asks for literature, promising to do his best with it, and hoping in due time to help the Fund by subscriptions.

We have to acknowledge, with many thanks, parcels of back Nos. of BANNER from Teddington, Earl's Court, and Vere Street. These have been sent to Portsmouth, Hull, and Croydon. In future, friends having BANNERS to give away, are particularly enjoined to communicate, first of all, with either of the Secretaries, who will furnish the addresses of "sowers," to whom such packets may be transmitted. This course will save any additional cost of carriage.

One to three BANNERS are forwarded weekly or fortnightly, by the Secretary, to St. John's, S. Africa; Ohio, U.S.A.; Birkenhead, Upper Teddington, Southampton, Mechanics' Institute, Crewe, Richmond, Maestag, and to Wandsworth and Wimbledon Free Public Libraries. Literature packets, to Sheffield, Stockport, Camberwell, Eastbourne, Birkenhead, S. Hayling, East Charlton, Demerara, Rome, and Tasmania.

By Miss E. M. Rush:—15 packets to the following places—Botany (New South Wales), Port Nolloth (S. Africa), Assouan (Egypt), Malta, Toronto (Canada), Barbadoes, Liverpool, Alvaston, Norwich, Great Yarmouth, Devonport, Silver Town (London), and Plaistow.

A packet of literature has also been accepted with thanks by the Secretary of the "Mariners' Friend Society," London Docks; and another by a worker in the "London City Mission." One hundred and twenty four BANNERS each week, and twelve fortnightly have been sent out during the month.

Miss E. M. Rush has much pleasure in acknowledging the fol owing contributions to the British-Israel Jubilee Fund, which have been received up to April 15th, and duly forwarded to Philo-Israel. Mrs. T., 5s.; E. L., 5s.; L. P., 5s.; J. H., 5s.; Mrs. B., 10s.; The Misses P., 5s.; J. D., 1s.; "An Anglo-Israelite in Bath," 5s.; Miss B., Ripon, 5s. Also by the Secretary, from Mrs. M. A. H., 1s. 6d.

CHARLES HORNER, Secretary.

Contributions to the Fund will be thankfully received and acknowledged by the Hon. Treasurer, Miss J. Lawrence, Rosslyn, Hampton-road, Upper Teddington, Middlesex; by the Hon. Sec., Miss E. M. Rush, 103, Burnt Ash road, Lee, London; or by Mr. Charles Horner, 34, Sheen-park, Richmond-on-Thames. Cheques may be crossed "London and Provincial Bank, Teddington Branch." Grants of literature will be made, as far as funds allow, on application to the Secretary, or Miss E. M. Rush.

ISRAEL'S SCRIPTURE AND PRAYER UNION.

SINCE our last report, three cards of membership have been sent out. As we are using cards returned by a local secretary, the number issued remains as before, 1,423.

The following sums, received towards the expenses of the Union, are thankfully acknowledged:—Member 209, 5s.; Miss S., Plymouth, 1s.; Miss B. Leicester, 9d.

A short article, in reference to the Jubilee, headed, "A Call for Prayer and Praise," by Philo-Israel, which appeared in the BANNER in January last, has been printed separately, copies of which will be gladly supplied to members on application to Miss Sibbald.

A gentleman, writing from Amersham, Bucks, says:—"I am a constant reader of the BANNER, which I have taken for the last five years, and much enjoy in conjunction with the Bible."

For the convenience of those members who wish to continue the daily reading, the following list of chapters for May are printed:—

1st ...	Psalm	lxxxv.	12th ...	Psalm	xcvi.	23rd ...	Psalm	cvii.
2nd...	,,	lxxxvi.	13th ...	,,	xcvii.	24th ...	,,	cviii.
3rd ...	,,	lxxxvii.	14th ...	,,	xcviii	25th ...	,,	cix.
4th ...	,,	lxxxviii	15th ...	,,	xcix.	26th ...	,,	cx.
5th ...	,,	lxxxix.	16th ...	,,	c.	27th ...	,,	cxi.
6th ...	,,	xc.	17th ...	,,	ci.	28th ...	,,	cxii.
7th ...	,,	xci.	18th ...	,,	cii.	29th ...	,,	cxiii.
8th ...	,,	xcii.	19th ...	,,	ciii.	30th ...	,,	cxiv.
9th ...	,,	xciii.	20th ...	,,	civ.	31st ...	,,	cxv.
10th ...	,,	xciv.	21st ...	,,	cv.
11th ...	,,	cxv.	22nd ...	,,	cvi.

The card of membership will be sent on receipt of three stamps.

The first and second series of Monthly Comments on the whole Bible, by Philo-Israel, may now be obtained in volume form. Price in paper cover, 1s. 2d. each, post free; in cloth, 2s. each, post free. The "Prayers for Daily Use," being a prayer for each day of the week, by Philo-Israel, are 1d., or 9d. per dozen, postage extra. The prayer of the Union, as on the Card of Membership, may now be obtained printed in larger type, price 1d. for three copies, post free, or 1s. per 100 for distribution. Address, Miss E. Sibbald, 3, Townshend-villas, Richmond, Surrey.

THE FREEMASONS AND THE JUBILEE.—Notice of Motion in Grand Lodge of Ancient Free and Accepted Masons for Wednesday, 2nd March, has been given by Brother C. W. Meiter, W.M., Mizpah Lodge, London:—That in order to perpetuate the memory of the Queen's Jubilee, it be resolved that the Grand Lodge of England do prepare forthwith a Foundation Stone, and the same be consecrated by Most Worshipful Grand Master the Prince of Wales, or his nominees in London. The stone to be ultimately firmly placed, if possible, upon the ground in or near the original site of King Solomon's Temple in Jerusalem, and that the rebuilding of the said Temple as a "House of Prayer for all Nations" shall be proceeded with as soon as necessary funds be provided. That with a view of providing the funds as speedily as possible for the rebuilding of the Temple, it be resolved that all present at the consecration of the foundation stone shall be allowed to place contributions on the stone, the same to be publicly acknowledged; that the stone shall remain in London for a given time, the general public to enjoy the same privilege of subscribing and placing their subscriptions upon it as those present at the consecration. The stone to be then forwarded to the principal cities of the United Kingdom and other countries, and that the custodians, composed entirely of free and accepted masons to be nominated by the Grand Lodge of England, shall be responsible for its safe custody and the amounts placed thereon or otherwise subscribed for this object at each resting station, and to forward all contributions to the treasurer, or as may be directed by order of the Grand Lodge of England.—London Paper, March, 1887.

Digitized by Google

Correspondence.

BRITISH SOCIETY FOR THE PROPAGATION OF THE GOSPEL AMONG THE JEWS.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—The proposal of a British-Israelite Jubilee Fund in aid of the spread of the Gospel throughout the world is good. That it should embrace Jews and Gentiles is perfectly in accordance with Israel's mission to the world at large. The Rev. E. Bassin's suggestion of a special Israelitish mission to the Jews does credit to his heart's love to our brethren, but is most probably unattainable; nor is there any valid reason for starting a new society or a separate mission. He, however, raises a very strong and unanswerable objection to any limitation of the fund to Church of England Societies exclusively. "To the Jew first," speaks with emphasis to Anglo-Israelites. There are two leading Societies for the Jews—the London (Episcopalian), and the British (undenominational). There are two great Societies for the Heathen—the Church Missionary Society, and the London Missionary Society. Identity belief is not, and could not be, circumscribed by any ecclesiastical polity. Either the proposed Jubilee Fund should be apportioned by a united committee to the four societies named above; or the BANNER should welcome Jubilee thank-offerings for any and every work of love, to Jews or the heathen, at home or abroad, Bible and Tract Societies, &c., at the option of the donors. This, I submit, would obviate objections, evoke Jubilee offerings from Jews and Israelites, Churchmen, Presbyterians, Dissenters, &c., alike, and prove to the world that Identity belief is broader and more catholic than any existent ecclesiastical organisation. Believe me,

Yours in our one Lord and Saviour,

A. BEN-OLIEL.

Rome, March 30th, 1887, via Palestro, 29.

NOTE BY THE EDITOR.—Quot homines tot sententiæ! We have said before (p. 121) that what we have undertaken in this matter is the extent of our powers. We cannot see that, as yet, the Anglo-Israelite public very much appreciates the idea of giving "Jubilee gifts" to the London (Jews) Society, the Church Missionary Society, and the Bible Society. To add to the three objects merely to gratify our readers and their special favourites, would be a vain and burdensome task, beyond our strength. We have done what we can, and are unable to do more.

A CALL TO PRAYER FOR THE JEWS.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

MY DEAR PHILO-ISRAEL,—I read with joy and delight your excellent article, "The offer of the Gospel and of Salvation through Christ to the Jews," in the BANNER of April 13, and I hasten to thank you for it, and to ask your permission "to make a call to prayer" for our Jewish brethren, through your valuable paper. I do it in accordance with Rom. xi., "Brethren, my heart's desire and prayer to God for Israel (of the House of Judah) is, that they might be saved." I am sure that this call will be responded to by most, if not by all the readers of the BANNER OF ISRAEL. Of one thing I am sure, and that is that it will not meet with opposition on the grounds assigned by Mr. Dimbleby, especially after your excellent article. I even believe that Mr. D. sees his mistake now, and is thankful that you have put him right.

I am very sorry that Mr. D. has embraced the views of Mr. E. Hine, that the Jewish religion is quite sufficient to save the Jews. You have already pointed out from Acts iv. 12, that there is only one means of salvation for all men, without distinction, whether a man be of the seed of Abraham or otherwise—The name of Jesus is the only name given to men whereby they may be saved. I would like only to add that had Mr. Hine known the present Jewish religion he would not have said that it is quite sufficient for the Jews' salvation. Mr. Hine's fatal and foolish mistakes have done much harm to the Identity. I believe we should not have had such opponents as we have now among Jewish missionaries had we not had such foolish assertions as we have in Mr. Hine's writings and in those of others. I thank God that you are always at the right time with the right word in the BANNER; and I pray that the Lord may give you strength to fight for the truth under the BANNER OF ISRAEL, and may the God of Israel be your help.

I would like just to say a word before closing with regard to the fear of Mr. Dimbleby, that "if we un-Jew the Jew to-day, what becomes of the Old Testament?" Is Mr. D. really so ignorant of the fact that British-Israel are now the custodians of the Old as well as the New Testament? Is he really ignorant of the fact that the Christian-Israelites have translated the Word of God into nearly every language that exists in the world, and that they present it to every nation and tongue without any additions?—while the Jews of the present day never study the Old Testament without their Rabbinical expositions which make the Word of God to none effect.

We need much prayer for the Jews that they may read the Bible without the Rabbinical commentaries, which makes them blind and unable to see the truth. We are living now in a wonderful time! There are great movements among the Jews in all parts of the world, and we have great reason to believe that the union of Ephraim and Judah will soon take place.

You will no doubt be glad to hear that a converted Jew has offered £50 as a Queen's Jubilee offering; if other friends will also subscribe £50 I shall be very thankful to you if you will kindly make this fact known in your valuable paper so that some friend of the Jews may help us to get the £50, and thus our Scottish Home Mission to Jews may have £100 as an offering for the Jubilee of Israel's Queen. Contributions will be thankfully received by the Hon. Treasurer, E. Raphael, Esq., 4, Hampton Terrace, Edinburgh, who is a converted Jew, who gives his time and his substance to the work of the Lord. The Editor of the BANNER OF ISRAEL I am sure will also be glad to receive any contributions on behalf of the Queen's Jubilee for the "Scottish Home Mission to Jews."

Repeating "the call to prayer for the Jews,"

I remain, Your old friend of the House of Judah,

ELIEZER BASSIN.

63, South Clerk Street, Edinburgh,
April 13th, 1887.

"THE NAME OF JESUS."

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—I read (BANNER, of March 30) with much surprise and concern, the remarks of a correspondent in Liverpool, under the heading of "The Name of Jesus." Your correspondent writes that he finds only one blot in the BANNER OF ISRAEL and in its editor—viz., that whilst no end of stress is laid on the name "Anglo-Israel," hardly ever a word is said about the Name above every name.

Surely your correspondent can have entered very little into the spirit of the BANNER, if he does not see that the preciousness of the beloved Name pervades all that comes from your pen in its pages. A careful reader of your journal should feel more and more drawn to Jesus, as you unfold continually the glorious and precious promises that He, the King of Israel and our Redeemer, has showered down on us, His unworthy people, and, as you often remind us, of the great future that He is preparing for us. We are the nation chosen by Him to make "His name" known, and to publish the "glad tidings" of His Gospel amongst all peoples. You remind us that we are appointed "ambassadors" for Christ, to beseech the nations in Christ's stead to be reconciled to God; that we are His evangelists to "Tell it out among the heathen that He (our Lord) is King" (Psa. xcvi. 10. As Anglo-Israelites we are to shine as lights in the world, holding forth the Word of life (Phil. ii. 15, 16). Further, that we who "have heard the blessed call of the Spirit and the Bride" are to remember the command and promise of Jesus, "Ye shall be witnesses unto Me . . . . unto the uttermost parts of the earth" (Acts ii. 8). The very name of Israel seems bound up in the name of Jesus, our Head; and if the Holy Trinity, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, take such delight in using every endearing expression towards His people Israel, shall not Israel, unworthy though we be, humbly rejoice in this great privilege, and gratefully acknowledge and accept the gifts of Christ's love?

All this and much more you bring before the eyes of your studious readers in the BANNER, and we are bound to thank you for your most interesting and instructive journal. We would also join with you in your oft-repeated call to praise the Lord, the Redeemer, and Saviour, and the glory of His chosen people, Anglo-Israel. Yours faithfully,

S. SHARP.

Tunbridge Wells, April 4, 1887.

Digitized by Google

NOTICES.

All communications intended for the Editor, to be addressed: "Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Clifton, Bristol.

SUBSCRIPTIONS.

	£ s. d.
Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free	0 7 6
Two Copies (including Double Numbers)	0 13 6
Three Copies ,, ,, ,, ...	1 0 4
Four Copies ,, ,, ,, ...	1 5 6
Six Copies ,, ,, ,, ...	1 16 4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-grand, London, to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C., or F. W. PARRY & Co., 29, Paternoster-row, London.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

Contents Bills and Show Cards may be obtained on application to the Publishers.

Advertisements should be sent to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

Prepaid Advertisements are inserted at the rate of thirty words for 1s. 4d.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION,

14, King William-street, Charing Cross, W.C.

Bible Readings on the Book of Hosea

Every TUESDAY afternoon (commencing May 3) at 3.30, lasting One Hour only. All are invited.

JAMES BILLINGTON, Secretary.

MANCHESTER AND SALFORD ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

THE NEXT MEETING

Of this Association will be held at St. James's School, Major-street (off Portland-street), Manchester, on Monday evening, May 9, at 7.45.

A New Work on the Identity of Lost Israel
By the late BISHOP TITCOMB.

Now ready, in Cloth Gilt, Bevelled Boards, Imperial 8vo. Price 3s.; sent Post Free for Postal Order or Stamps.

A MESSAGE TO THE CHURCH
FROM
THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.

BY THE LATE

RT. REV. BISHOP TITCOMB, D.D.

(This work was completed by the late Bishop only a week previous to his death).

The Kentish Mercury, April 21st, says:—"This book derives a peculiar and pathetic interest from the circumstances that the proofs of its concluding pages were revised by the author during the last few days of his life, and that its publication took place simultaneously with his death. One feels, in noticing a book under such circumstances, a special responsibility, when the author is removed beyond the reach of human criticism of whatever kind. But in truth it is impossible to glance at these pages without being struck by the deep and reverent research into the prophetic Scriptures which it manifests, by the tone of piety that pervades it, as well as the lucidity and eloquence of its style. Nor is it necessary to express concurrence with the views of the gifted and pious author in his prophetic theories to give this praise. Of course with regard to Dr. Titcomb's prophetic interpretations there will be much difference of opinion, but there can be none in the mind of any impartial person who reads this work, either as to the diligence with which the testimony of the prophets has been studied, or the earnestness of the expositor in stating his conclusions. Bishop Titcomb, it is well-known to those who have studied his works, was one of the school of prophetic interpreters who believe that the British Empire, or perhaps, more accurately speaking, the English-speaking race, are identified with those whom we have been in the habit of calling the Lost Tribes of Israel.'" [Then follow several extracts.]

London: Robert Banks & Son, Racquet court, Fleet-st F. W. Parry & Co., Paternoster-row, and all booksellers.

LEAFLET FOR THE YOUNG,

WHO ARE YOU?

Price 1s. per 100; postage 1½d.

To be obtained from the Hon. Sec., Anglo-Israel Association, 27, Pulteney Street, Bath; and of R. Banks & Son, Racquet Court, Fleet Street.

"A happy effort, well and successfully made, and likely to lead to good results. The Leaflet teaches the Scriptural distinction between Israel and Judah. . . . The separate captivities. . . Our nation's possession of the Gates, the Sabbath, etc."—Banner of Israel, Mar. 16, 1887.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION

THE NINTH ANNUAL MEETING

WILL BE HELD IN

EXETER HALL, STRAND, ON TUESDAY EVENING, MAY 24, 1887.

Addresses will be delivered on the following subjects:—

The Rev. C. W. HICKSON, M.A., of Bristol, "The Gentilization of the House of Israel."

E. W. BIRD, Esq. (Philo-Israel) of Bristol, "What place is there in the Divine Economy for Our Identity, in the Present Dispensation."

The Rev. GEORGE HIDER, of Paignton, Devon, "The Practical Value of Anglo-Israel Truth."

The Rev. ROBERT DOUGLAS, M.A., Vicar of Kidsgrove, "England's Jubilee—A Divine Manifestation of British-Israel's Truth and Duty."

The Chair will be taken at Seven o'clock precisely.

The ANNUAL MEETING of the Members and Subscribers, to receive the Report, and elect Officers for the ensuing year, will be held on MONDAY EVENING, MAY 23, 1887, in the Library of the Association, 14, King William Street, Charing Cross, London, W.C. Chair to be taken at 7 o'clock.

E. W. BIRD, Esq. (Philo-Israel) is expected to preside. JAMES BILLINGTON, Sec.

New and Useful Work for Students of the Origin of the British Race and Their Mission.

Just published, price 5/-, free by post for Postal Order.

WHO ARE WE?
AND
WHAT IS OUR MISSION?

By J. THORNHILL HARRISON, of Ealing.

With Seven Maps, printed by the Woodbury Permanent Process, illustrating—

1.—Showing the Dispersion of the family of Noah after after the Flood. 2.—Great Western and Eastern Plains. 3.—Colonisation of the Tribes of Dan and Asher from Phœnicia, B.C. 1,400 to 740. 4.—The Assyrian Empire, B.C. 710. 5.—Extent of the Persian Empire and its Division into Twenty Satrapies, B.C. 521 to 464. 6.—The Parthian Empire, B.C. 207 to A.D. 226. 7.—The World with the Commencement of the Christian Era.

The Work is printed on good toned paper, and handsomely bound in cloth, bevelled boards, with handsome design in gilt on cover, gilt lettered.

LONDON: ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet Court, Fleet Street, E.C.

NOW READY.

SPLENDID PHOTOS OF THE LATE BISHOP TITCOMB.

Sent post free, Carte de Visite, 1s., Cabinet 2s., direct from the Publishers,

F. W. PARRY & Co., 29, Paternoster Row, E.C.

Select School for Girls,

ELM VILLA, JUNCTION RD., ANDOVER.

A LADY, holding Government Certificates, &c., Assisted by exceptionally good Visiting Teachers, is prepared to receive Pupils, to educate with her own children. Term commences May 9. Apply for Prospectus to Mrs. Day, Principal.

THE TEETH, THE TEETH, THOSE PRECIOUS TEETH!

Save, Purify, Beautify.

GEORGE & WELCH'S
CARBOLINE

1/6 (TOOTH PASTE). 2/6 per Pot

Is the Best Known

Cleanser, Preserver, and Deodoriser.

Dental Guide says:—"No Tooth application equals the Carbolics."

Proprietors: GEORGE & WELCH, Worcester.

Through Chemists, or Post Free from Makers.

NERVOUS EXHAUSTION.

PULVERMACHER'S WORLD-FAMED GALVANIC BELTS, for the cure of Nervous Diseases, have received Testimonials from three Physicians to Her Majesty the Queen, and over Forty Members of the Royal College of Physicians, London.

The distressing symptoms of Nervous Exhaustion and Debility are speedily removed by means of PULVERMACHER'S world-famed Galvanic Belts, which are so arranged as to convey a powerful electric current direct to the affected parts, gradually stimulating and strengthening all the nerves and muscles, and speedily arresting all symptoms of waste and decay.

Dr. VINES, Fellow of the Royal College of Physicians, writes, 19th September, 1885: "Having used Mr. Pulvermacher's Belts for many years, in the course of medical practice, I am in a position to speak of their great value as a curative agent in cases of nervous disease or functional malady where Electricity is likely to be serviceable. I am entirely convinced of their efficacy."

Dr. C. HANDFIELD JONES, F.R.C.P., F.R.S., Physicians to St. Mary's Hospital, says: "I am satisfied that Mr. Pulvermacher is an honest and earnest labourer in the field of science, and I think he deserves to meet with every encouragement from the profession and scientific men."

Dr. GOLDING BIRD, M.D., Physician, Guy's Hospital says: "I can hardly recommend Mr. Pulvermacher's invention too strongly to the notice of my medical brethren."

For full Price List and Particulars see New Pamphlet "Galvanism, Nature's Chief Restorer of Impaired Vital Energy." Post free from

Pulvermacher's Galvanic Establishment,
194, REGENT STREET, LONDON, W.

BRONCHITIS, ASTHMA.
COUGHS, COLDS,
CONSUMPTION,
and all Pulmonary Affections can be immediately relieved and rapidly
CURED
by simply using the
AMMONIAPHONE
FOR THE Voice, Throat, Chest, and Lungs.
21s. post free.
WILL LAST FOR YEARS.
Used and recommended by the Royal Family, and principal Physicians, Clergymen, Vocalists, and Public Speakers throughout the country. New illustrated Pamphlet with copies of Thousands of Testimonials may be had FREE OF CHARGE on application to Medical Battery Co. Ltd.
52, OXFORD STREET, LONDON, W.
Corner of Rathbone Place

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. F. W. PARRY (late GUEST & Co.), 29, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, MAY 4, 1887. [All rights reserved.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. XI., No. 541. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, MAY 11, 1887. [PRICE ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
The Deadly Struggle for Ireland	189
The Transvaal and the Gold Mines	190
A Jubilee Lecture. By W. H. Mason—Part II.	191
The late Bishop Titcomb on the Throne of David. By Surgeon-General J. M. Grant, M.D.	192
The Royal Jubilee Service in Westminster Abbey	194
Correspondence	195

THE DEADLY STRUGGLE FOR IRELAND.

WE hope our readers are watching the struggle now going on in Parliament, as well as in Ireland itself, between the powers of Darkness on the one hand, and the powers of Light on the other; the former desiring the separation of Ireland from the Empire, and thus the disruption of Israel's dominions. This is Satan's master-piece, for which no doubt he has been preparing ever since, in 1829, the Roman Catholic Emancipation Bill passed, and the plans were laid which seem now to have but one possible issue—namely, the separation of Ireland from Great Britain. That that separation will come there are many among us who constantly and confidently affirm. The Rev. M. Baxter, for instance, in The Christian Herald and Signs of our Times, never tires of repeating that since Britain (as he affirms) is one of the ten horns of Daniel's wild beast, and one of the ten toes of that prophet's metallic image (Daniel ii. and vii.), Britain must be legislatively separated from Ireland, India, and the Colonies; and form, with France (!), Spain (!), Austria, Greece, Italy, Egypt, Syria, Thracian Turkey, Bulgaria, &c., the confederacy which will be anti-Christum. Every effort we see is being made in Parliament to compel this country to give up her legislative control of Ireland, and let her go free. To effect this object the late Premier, Mr. Gladstone, has been so influenced by the enemy of God's people, that he has, without scruple, cast consistency to the winds, turned his back upon his party, and joined hands with the separatist Parnellites, men whose antecedents have, as Mr. Chamberlain describes it, "the taint of murder and crime." The members of Parliament who are members of the Irish National League, "stand openly charged by the Times with complicity in schemes and acts of murder," and the lately honoured Prime Minister of England has no word of reprehension or abhorrence to bestow upon these men, but accepts them as his allies.

The Times on April 18th published a fac simile copy of a letter purporting to be signed by Mr. C. S. Parnell, which (if genuine) plainly points to him as an accomplice after the fact—a condoner of the murder of Mr. Burke, a week after that dreadful occurrence took place in Phœnix Park, Dublin.

Surely a man like Mr. Gladstone must be blinded when he makes light of unrebutted accusations like these, and joins hands with such men in order that by the policy they advocate he may once more regain the power he has lost? But this is not all. So blinded have honourable men become in this tremendous contest that they seem to have lost all sense of moral turpitude in the political dispute now pending, and profess themselves ready and willing to hand over the government of Ireland, and its two millions of Protestants and Roman Catholic loyalists, to the tender mercies of men who have shown no pity to men, women, or animals, and are many of them reeking with murder and blood. Here we see, indeed, the hand of Satan! His object is to destroy God's handiwork, to separate the islands God gave for an "appointed place" of safe domicile to His people Israel, and to bring to destruction the Empire which depends upon the union of the two "Islands of the West," where the central nation that binds "the company of nations" together, has its God-appointed, local habitation. Will the effort succeed? On the one side is Satan and the satanic agents he naturally chooses for his hellish work,—the men who are steeped to the lips in bloodshed and crime,—who mean to drive a proud nation of thirty-four millions of freemen, by dynamite and the knife, to give up the contest in despair to a handful of three millions of desperate and discontented papists. The effort is doomed to failure, as all Satan's efforts are! He always bungles in his work, and fails egregiously when he thinks he has obtained the upper hand. In his contests with the Son of God on earth, failure was written on all his attempts. He is a beaten and a fallen foe, and his Irish schemes are as foolish and as futile as any that have gone before. His agents are exposed, and their blood-stained hands never will be trusted by the Israel of God to exercise authority over their loyal Irish fellow-subjects, and to constitute Ireland a hell upon earth, the home of rebels and enemies of the British at their very doors. The success achieved with Mr. Gladstone and his blinded followers will work mischief to Satan's plans, because the exposure of Mr. Parnell and his followers is of such a kind that it is sure to produce a revulsion in the public mind, and cause the final fall of those who support the Irish conspiracy, and thus leave it powerless for mischief. "Enough," said Mr. Arnold Foster, in the Times of April 18th, "is already known and proved to place the Parnellites in a category apart from that occupied by any set of men who have ever sat in the British House of Commons. What is already known is much; what will be known before all is done will be still more."

Digitized by Google

Honourable men, as many on Mr. Gladstone's side are, cannot longer hesitate, but will surely at once abandon allies that reek with crime, or knowledge of it, and so serve, by pointing to the wickedness of his agents, to discountenance Satan's aims. The Empire will not be riven in two, as the arch-enemy, acting behind Mr. Gladstone and his Irish partisans, desires shall be the case. God is on our side, and His purposes must stand. They cannot be defeated by men of no principle, or of the principle of selfish disregard of the nation's good. They cannot be set aside by such as Mr. Parnell and his following; nor can Satan himself, wily as he is, succeed now in thwarting the purposes of God in respect to His people Israel. Their world-wide power is to increase, but never to decrease, as the Irish demagogues would fain see it do. Theirs is to be "a nation and a company of federated nations," not the divided, impotent, despised, and ruined thing her Parnellite and Gladstonian enemies would rejoice to see her become. The struggle is a critical and a dangerous one. But "underneath are the everlasting arms." The Lord Jehovah is with us and sees all our distresses, and the extremity of our dangers at the present moment. He tells us, not twice nor thrice, "Fear not! Fear not! for I am with thee! Be not dismayed! for I am thy God! I will strengthen thee; yea, I will help thee; yea, I will uphold thee with the right hand of My righteousness" (Isa. xli. 10). "We are blind" as a nation, but the Lord is bringing us "by a way we know not; and by paths we have not known He is leading us!" What is "darkness" to us now He promises to make "light" ere long; and the present "crooked things straight." "These things," He says, "He will do for us, and He will not forsake us" (Isa. xlii. 16, R.V.) Shall we then continue our tremors and our murmurs? On the contrary, let us praise the Lord, even for the disgraceful scenes in the House of Commons, which took place on Friday, April 15th, and for the miserable muddle to which Irish affairs are reduced to-day, because God's hand guides all these events, and they all will conduce at last to His own glory and His praise, but to Israel's happiness, safety, and salvation.

THE TRANSVAAL AND THE GOLD MINES.

Our opponents, who ought to be ready with an answer explaining each point of our likeness to lost Israel, and accounting for the facts, should make it clear to us why we British have invariably secured the lion's share of gold, silver, copper, coal and ruby mines in the earth, whereas in fact God promised all these things to the House of Joseph as part of his birthright. In Gen. xlix. 22—26, R.V., there are enumerated a cluster of blessings for Joseph's enjoyment "in the latter days" (verse 1), which include those "of heaven above, of the deep that coucheth beneath, blessings of the breast and of the womb, even to the utmost bound of the everlasting hills." In Deut. xxxiii., 13 to 17, R.V., these details are amplified, and the gifts bestowed on Joseph are declared to be "the chief things of the ancient mountains, the precious things of the everlasting hills, the precious things of the earth, and the fulness thereof, also of the deep"—words which describe, no doubt, coal mines, diamond, gold, silver and ruby mines, pearl fisheries, iron mines, marble, stone, and slate quarries, and all precious things that the earth, the hills and seas produce. Our own land is simply founded on coal and iron mines, and marble and stone quarries, the store being all but inexhaustible.

In Australia the gold mines are fabulously rich, and have yielded wealth of gold, which has affected the markets of the world, and effected revolutions in the colonies and at home. The Cape has been famous in recent years for the discovery of diamond mines, which have enriched the South African States, attracted an enormous population of Anglo-Saxons and others to the localities of the mines, and given a vitality to our possessions there which nothing else could have afforded. The pearl fisheries of Ceylon, India and Australia are the richest in the world for the production of pearls. The best ruby mines anywhere are now situated in British territory in Upper Burmah. The waters around the British Islands and the Canadian seas to the West teem with the treasures of the deep—fish being far more plentiful there than anywhere else in European seas, or even in those off the coasts of the United States. The best and most productive silver mines in the world are in the territories of American Manasseh, in California. "The mineral wealth of the world, thus, is largely coming—nay, has already come, into the hands of the British races." How can this be, unless we be Israel of the Ten Tribes—the Jews having none of it? The recent discovery of gold in large and paying quantities in and near the territories of the Transvaal is a marked sign of the times. It is a proof to us that God intends that land for us, and that we foolishly rejected it in obedience to Mr. Gladstone's affected horror of "blood-guiltiness" after the British defeat at Majuba Hill. God is now going to restore it to His people in a way of His own—one in accordance with Joseph's blessing in Deut. xxxiii. 13—17. So far back as Nov. 24, 1886, in No. 517 of the Banner, vol. x., page 464, we drew attention to "the new gold fields in South Africa," and pointed out how the discovery had already drawn together large masses of British folk there, and we suggested that their numbers would increase, and finally wrest the Transvaal back again from the Boers, and restore it to the Queen's dominions. Gold discovery, we conjectured, would be the death of the Boers' misgovernment, and so solve the South African question by making that part of the colony British, rendering it thus as prosperous as Australia and Canada already are. "Verily," we said, "God is working for His people Israel in the most unforeseen and unexpected ways, thus giving us the heritage of our father Jacob." "Gold fields there, are bringing Anglo-Saxon enterprise, emigration, and capital, besides towns, railways, commerce and rule (all British) to the spot." The end, we declared, would be that "the land would be appropriated by the multitudes of Israel in a natural, easy, and lawful way; one that has succeeded so wonderfully and so simply in New Zealand, Australia, and Tasmania, testifying that those countries had been given by the Lord Jehovah to His people as His blessing on their increase, in accordance with the prophecies of Isa. xlix. 8, and xxvii. 6."

Only three-and-a-half months have elapsed since we wrote these words, and lo! to-day we find in the St. James' Gazette of March 3, 1887, a notice of the state of things now obtaining in the South African gold fields, which more than corroborates our anticipations of November last. The journalist wrote thus on the subject:—

> The Government of that "ox-wagon Republic," the Transvaal, must surely rub their eyes in amazement at the extraordinary change that has come over the finances of their State in the last twelve months. During that time the debt with which the Republic had long been encumbered has been got rid of, and an entirely new revenue, which apparently is likely to be indefinitely expanded and continued, has sprung into existence. But the Boers have not themselves to thank for this wondrous change, which has been brought about solely and entirely by the influx of the British and foreign element to the gold-fields of the Transvaal, and principally those of the De Kaap or Barberton district. From these fields alone the South African Republic is now drawing an income of something like £100,000 per annum, which sum is very likely to be largely increased in the next six months. At present the gold-seekers—who in eighteen months have converted a savage and unknown solitude, peopled only by wild beasts, into a busy mining district, boasting a considerable town—have had little time to look after questions of taxation and customs. They are now beginning to grumble heartily, however, at the way in which they (who are bringing all this wealth into the land) are taxed and impeded, and these grumblings are likely to take definite form very shortly. There are signs that this country, from which Mr. Gladstone so ignominiously scuttled, will undergo a bloodless restoration to Anglo-Saxondom at the hands of the mining population now overrunning it.

Digitized by Google

In fact, gold is attracting so vast a population of British Anglo-Saxons and others to the spot, that the small population of Boers (50,000 in all) will, like the Maories of New Zealand, soon become the minority, to be ruled by the sturdy British miners, who will overpower them in numbers. Surely, here is the hand of God visibly appearing in our midst, working to counteract in His own way, and for our good, the fatal mistake Mr. Gladstone lately made in throwing up the advantages we had then already secured in the country, and submitting to victorious rebels, standing in our own territory with arms in their hands. God has relieved us of the consequences of the great disgrace we incurred in that matter, and given us now, by the most natural way in the world, the prospect of a speedy restoration of the land to the rule of God's people, British-Israel.

Once a British population such as the gold miners are have taken firm hold of a country, the rest is short work. The "flag" follows, and with the flag the Gospel, the Bible, civilisation, peace, commerce, advancement, and vast blessings to the rest of the inhabitants of the world. May these results soon be realised! and may the Transvaal speedily be added to the Queen's dominions by the mighty Anglo-Saxon invasion, which already is becoming the ruling power in the land of the Boers!

A JUBILEE LECTURE.

BEING A LECTURE DELIVERED BY W. H. MASON, AT THE SHEFFIELD ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

"Queen Victoria, David's heir, sits upon the throne of the Lord over Israel" (1 Chron. xxix. 23).

(Concluded from page 179).

PART II.

HERE the history ends. We have no record of the return to Judah, or of the destruction of Egypt by Nebuchadnezzar. But God had promised both, and we believe He kept both promises, and that, therefore, the escaping of the House of Judah did return to Judah, and there for the present we must leave them, and turn our attention to profane history, or myth, or tradition, as it is variously termed. We call it history because it seems probable and reasonable, and especially because it exhibits the faithfulness of our covenant-keeping God, showing it to be an absolute truth that "He is faithful that promised," thus showing the soundness of St. Paul's reasoning on the "two immutable things," and the consequent reasonableness of the strong consolation offered to believers in Christ.

History, then, relates that in the 8th century B.C. a people called the Tuatha de Danan arrived in Ireland, settled there, and became one of its most powerful septs, or small kingdoms. About two hundred years later arrived another company, of whom only three are particularised—an old man, called the Ollam Fodhla; an attendant named Brug, and a young female. Just at the time of their arrival the chief of the Tuatha de Danan was about to be elected Heremon, or chief king of the Irish nations. The old man promised this Heremon-elect that if he would accept the religion he would teach him, instead of the Baalism practised in the island, would marry the young princess who accompanied him, and be crowned on the stone he had brought with him, he would, in the name of his God, promise to him and his seed perfected sovereignty. These terms were accepted. The marriage was celebrated, the royal pair were crowned on the stone, and the worship of the true God was set up in lieu of the worship of Baal. A school was established for training teachers of the newly-introduced religion, and the whole polity of the country was re-modelled in accordance with its precepts. A most happy and flourishing state of things followed, and Tara became the centre of civilisation, progress, and true religion.

The same history records the fulfilment of the promise of perpetual sovereignty, until, in the 6th century A.D., it was transferred to Scotland in the person of Fergus, the first king of Scotland. Fergus was the brother of the reigning heir of Eochaid, the Heremon-elect to whom the promise was given. The Irish, or, more correctly, the elder Scottish line, perished shortly after through the death of the reigning monarch, and the stone, which Fergus had borrowed for his coronation, did not return to Ireland, but remained as the coronation seat of the kings of Scotland, until it was seized by our Edward I. and brought to England. When James of Scotland became James I. of England, he, and afterwards his successors, were crowned upon that stone—fixed in the seat of the coronation chair—until our present gracious Queen, who also, like her ancestors, received her royal crown seated upon that stone, which has been the coronation seat of every sovereign of the line, from Eochaid to Victoria, with the exception of the Scottish kings between the times of Edward I. and James I.

Now let us return to Ireland and the Tuatha de Danan, to ascertain who they were. Tuatha means "tribe," and the whole means "the Tribe of Dan." The time of their arrival in Ireland (now so called) was immediately after the captivity of Israel. We naturally come to the conclusion that as Dan, the chief portion of the tribe at least, dwelt on the shore, and followed maritime pursuits, together with their neighbours, the people of Tyre and Sidon, they would take refuge in their ships and escape when the inland and Eastern Tribes were carried by the Assyrian monarch into captivity. Fleeing as far as possible out of the reach of their great enemy, they, as naturally, passed over to those Isles of the West to which they had gone as traders, and where their neighbours had already established settlements; probably also some of their own people were already located there. Here Dan, thinking himself finally safe, calls his new home Dan Lobairske—Dan's resting-place—now Carrick Fergus. Here, then, was Israel planted, representatively, in freedom; and where else should we expect the "tender one" to be planted but in the one position of Israel, then free? The Almighty could, of course, have sent her to the captives in Assyria or Babylon, have preserved her there, and restored her and the throne at the return from Babylon. Such was not His plan, however; the reason, perhaps, being that He would not in this, as He does not in other cases, act by main force, and so destroy man's responsibility.

Surely it is quite reasonable that, a portion of Israel being free, the transplanted throne should there be planted, and the "tender one" placed there in safety upon it. Thus it was done, we believe, and the old man who made such a remarkable promise to the Danite Prince of Ulster was the man chosen by the Almighty to build and plant anew the Royal House and Throne of David. The attendant, Brug, who accompanied him, was his scribe, Baruch; and, above all, the female under his care was the daughter of Zedekiah, the tender one, whom God had promised, by Ezekiel, that He would plant upon the mountain of Israel, as representative of David, for the perpetuation of his throne, and whom, by Jeremiah, He had preserved for this very purpose from Babylon and from Egypt, and now, by the hand of the same prophet, and in fulfilment of his pre-natal commission, did plant upon the Danish-Israel high mountain. The royal twig thus planted has grown into the stately cedar, the noblest and mightiest of the trees of the field. Under its shadow already dwell in safety all fowl of every wing, and soon shall we see the day when all the trees of the field shall acknowledge that God, the God of Israel, hath done this, and shall confess, with Nebuchadnezzar, that He ruleth among the kingdoms of men. He removeth kings, and setteth up kings, and doeth according to His will in the armies of heaven, and among the inhabitants of the earth.

Digitized by Google

We will now glance at a few supplementary proofs of the truth of this "Hebrew episode in Irish history," as one fitly terms it. All readers of the BANNER will probably have noticed the recent discussion on the philological phase of our great Anglo-Israel question. They will probably have noticed the assertion of our opposing friend, that if the language were lost he could trace the origin of a people by the names which would survive in the adopted language. "John Smith," found embedded in a Central Asian or African language, would, in our friend's opinion, decide the English origin of the bearer of that name, however remote that origin might be. Just so, certain words found embedded in the Irish language, but having no meaning in it, must point out and decide the origin of the people who introduced those words, and may even indicate the circumstances attending that introduction. Ollam Fodhla: Ollam (Hebrew), "future" is the nearest English meaning; Fodhla—Irish meaning, "revealer"=Revealer of the Future, Prophet. Jodhan-Moran (Hebrew): The Righteous Judge, the wearer of the breast-plate. Urim and Thummin: The prophetic name of the Messiah, in Isaiah ii. Tara (Hebrew), Taurah, the Law. Lia Phail: Lia (Celtic), stone; Phail (Hebrew), wonderful. Gin Aaomta (Hebrew), Emmanuel; offspring of glory. Tephi (Hebrew), a pet name for a female, beautiful, fragrant, &c. Mur Ollamin (Hebrew), school of prophets. Mergech (Hebrew), repository, place of safe keeping. This is the name given to the tomb of Tea Tephi, the daughter of Zedekiah, at Tara. This place was called Lothair Crofinn, before the establishment there of the Hebrew throne and religion. All these and other Hebrew words of most significant and important meaning, are found in the Irish language, in which, as before said, they have no meaning, and to which they are far more foreign than the mere name John Smith is to Ojibbeway or Timbuctees. How came they there, those words of momentous import? How came the name of the Ulster capital to be changed from the Celtic Lothair Crofinn to the Hebrew Taurah, or Tara? How came the whole political and religious life of the nation to be transformed into accordance with that law of divine promulgation? Surely the cause must have been great and weighty! Nothing less—and it needed no greater—than that we have been considering, and which, while fully accounting for the otherwise impenetrable mystery, also shows us how God maintained His faithful word and oath to David, and exhibits to us the fact that the gracious Queen whose Jubilee we this year celebrate is indeed David's heir, and sits upon the throne of the Lord over Israel.

In conclusion, let me give a few words of Scoto-Irish history in illustration of Ezek. xxi. 26: "I will overturn, overturn, overturn it," that is, the throne and crown of Judah. We have already just hinted at rather than stated, the fact that Ireland, then called Ultima Thule, was settled by two neighbouring peoples from the Eastern coast of the Mediterranean—the people of Tyre and Sidon, Canaanites, or Phœnicians, as the Greeks of five or six centuries later called them; and the Tuatha de Danan. The latter occupied the North, now called Ulster, while the Phœnicians peopled the South. Both, in later days, sent colonies over to what we now call Scotland. It was so named after the ascendant Scoti, or Danites, of Ulster, who, as has been said, obtained the sovereignty in the sixth century A.D. in the person of Fergus. Their neighbours of the South of Ireland became in the new country what in history are called the Picts, represented to-day by the Islanders and Highlanders of Scotland. From the emigrants from Ulster descended those immigrants to Ulster who, in the time of James, passed over to Ireland to help to maintain the English authority in the island. Thus you will see the affinity between the Phœnician, or Fenian, Irish and the Crofters, and between the men of Ulster and of Scotland proper, and understand better the feuds at present waging in Ireland and in the West of Scotland. You will also recognise the three "overturnings"—from Judæa to Ireland, from Ireland to Scotland, and from Scotland to England; from Zedekiah to his daughter and the Danite Prince of Ulster, from Murtagh of Ireland to Fergus of Scotland, and from the Scottish to the English representative of the chosen line now seated upon that exalted throne in the person of our beloved Queen. There will be no more "overturning" of that throne, though there will be a "removing" of it back to its ancient seat. The sceptre will pass to no other branch of the race, but will remain in the present one until He come whose right it is. The three overturnings are realised, and God's word to that effect fully accomplished in the branch descended from David through two lines—viz., the one we have been considering, and what we may call the Anglo-Saxon line; for the great chief Odin, who led the Anglo-Saxons from the Danube to the Baltic, claimed descent from David, and the Anglo-Saxon Chronicle gives the line of descent through Odin as the early Irish histories give the genealogy from Eochaid to Fergus. Yet not genealogies, but God's Word, must be our reliance in this and every question concerning Our Identity. This is our reliance in this lecture, and we have only accepted such history as agrees with and confirms the Word of the living and true God.

THE LATE BISHOP TITCOMB ON "THE THRONE OF DAVID."

By SURGEON-GENERAL J. M. GRANT, M.D.

IN an appendix, marked F, to his book entitled "A Message to the Church from the Nineteenth Century," Bishop Titcomb treats the opinion very generally held by those who agree with him in considering the British nation identical with the kingdom of Israel, that the sovereigns of Britain must be lineally descended from David, as "unscriptural, and calculated to bring the whole subject into public discredit."

This is a serious charge, as coming from one whom we regarded, both from his position in the Church and his advocacy of our views, to be one of our pillars; and, ungrateful as the task may be, it behoves us to rebut it, if we can, by bringing the views of our opponent to the test of the Bible, which he takes as his standard of comparison.

He says that the House of David was established for ever only by passing into the kingship of Christ, the Messiah—a proposition which I shall not dispute, so long as it is clearly understood that the royal dynasty of David passed into the kingship of the everlasting Son of the Father on the day that David sat upon "the throne of the Lord" (2 Chron. xxix. 23), and was established upon it in his generation s for ever as the anointed King of Israel; for although the tabernacle of God is not now with men, He is still King of Israel, and we learn from the concluding chapters of Ezekiel that during the Millennium the presence of God will be manifested as it was in the days of Moses and Joshua, by the Shekina glory, and that He will govern, as He did then, by a representative head of the people, who will be a hereditary prince, and presumably of the House of David; so that the Bible gives us no reason to suppose that the dynasty of David will ever be supplanted as the rulers of Israel immediately under Christ—that is, from the position which they now occupy.

The arguments by which Bishop Titcomb tries to show that the succession of David was established in Christ are singularly inconclusive. CHRIST succeed David! Surely there is irreverence in the thought! But let that pass. The Bishop trusts to Psalm ii. 6, which appears to refer to Christ's triumph over the rebellious nations at the close of this dispensation and the commencement of His Millennial reign; and to the 110th Psalm, which, unfortunately for him, is quoted by our Lord in Matt. xxii. 41—45 to show that He was not the Son of David. He says that Christ was revealed to the House of Israel as continuing the kingdom during the interval between the failure of David's dynasty in Jerusalem and His ascension as "the man upon the throne" of Ezek. i. 26; and, he continues, that when Christ became incarnate, it was proclaimed by the angel, "The Lord shall give Him the throne of His father David." Now it is impossible to give a person what he already possesses; but here we have God represented as promising to give Christ at some future time a throne upon which He had been seated for nearly six hundred years, and which His prophet Ezekiel distinctly shows to have been transferred from Judah to the other House of Israel in another part of the world, at the very time that Bishop Titcomb says, upon what Scriptural authority he does not tell us, that it was transferred to "heaven," where Christ is now seated upon it!—a statement strangely at variance with that of Christ Himself, who tells us (Rev. iii. 21) that He is set down with His Father on His throne—a throne established over the whole universe, not over the House of Israel only. (See in this connection Ezek. xxxiv., and especially verses 22—25.)

Digitized by Google

The vision of the Man upon the throne of Ezek. i. 26 may, and probably does, indicate the sovereignty of God over Israel, of which He never divested Himself; but it does not and cannot be supposed to indicate, without doing violence to the Bible, to history, and to common sense, that Christ was seated on the throne of Israel as "the Man on the throne" guaranteed to David's House, that is to continue David's posterity at the time of Ezekiel's vision, about 595 years before He became Man, and before the supposed time of the coming of Shiloh, which nearly all commentators consider, however erroneously, to be the time of the first Advent, and the appointed limit to the literal or earthly dynasty of David.

If Great Britain be Israel, its present form of government either is a theocracy or is not. In the latter case, the kingdom must be ruled by a race of sovereigns lineally descended from David, or God must have "lied" to His servant, which He swore that He would not do. We must take our stand upon the one ground or the other, because the Bible gives us no alternative choice. I quite see the argument which our author follows. It is the old spiritualising interpretation of the schools, that the throne and line of David have been continued in Christ; but such a view is misleading, and gives a handle to the infidel, because, according to the law of Israel, Christ could not have inherited from David, inasmuch as He could not have traced his genealogy to him on the father's side. Hence we read that at His Second Coming God will give Him the throne of His (reputed) father, David (Luke iii. 23, and i. 32), which has been His as GOD since Israel became a people, but to which as Man He had no right whatever.

We are next told that the promise to David, that he would never want A MAN to sit upon his throne, could not be fulfilled in A WOMAN. This is a favourite objection with the "JOHN WILKINSON" class of objectors, and it is rather disappointing to find it brought forward by Bishop Titcomb. Surely he might have remembered that the expression, A MAN, is constantly used in the Bible as including both men and women. The question, "What shall a man give in exchange for his soul?" does not involve the supposition that a woman has no soul, or that she is altogether indifferent about it. He might have seen, too, if he had quoted the whole passage (Jer. xxxiii. 17—26), instead of only two words of it, that the expression, a man, in ver. 17, is qualified and explained by the expression, "any of his seed," in ver. 26; and that Scripture is violated by those who affirm that God's covenant with David must necessarily be broken by the sitting of a woman on his throne, but not by those who assert the contrary.

The next remarkable statement is that the kingdom of the House of Israel, which was taken from Rehoboam, included the Twelve Tribes, whereas we read in 1 Kings xi. 11—13 that the kingdom which was rent from Rehoboam consisted of eleven tribes only, one of which was given to him, and the remaining ten to Jeroboam. No mention whatever is made of Judah in this partition of "THE KINGDOM." The two promises are that Israel shall not cease from being a nation before God for ever, and that David would never want a man to sit on the throne of the House of Israel, evidently to the exclusion of the House of Judah—the dispersion of which in the latter days had been foretold by Moses and the prophets. But although shut out for a time from the kingdom, Judah had received the promise that she would always rule it; and we believe that this promise has been faithfully kept in the continual sovereignty of the House of David, superfluous as Bishop Titcomb seems to regard it, in his oft-repeated question, "Is it not enough that we, as a nation, enjoy the blessings promised to the House of Joseph, whether those to Judah have been observed or broken?" I answer that it is not enough; that any interpretation which ignores the promises of sovereignty to Israel is unscriptural, and that it is unscriptural to say that the continuation of the royal dynasty of David was established in Christ, and not in "the sons of David" (2 Chron. xiii. 5), or "his seed," who could trace their geneaology from the father's side, as required by the law of Israel (Ezra ii. 50). Christ was not the heir by right of descent.

We do not ground our contention that wherever Israel may be found as a nation, there also must be found the throne of David, upon Irish or any other legends, but on the sure Word of God. These legends materially assist us in identifying the British throne with that of David, but they are of no value, and we do not use, or even credit them, except in so far as they are confirmed by the Bible. Under these circumstances we do not share in Bishop Titcomb's fear that our beloved Queen, sitting on the throne of David, even if she knew, and asserted the high position above all the kings of the earth in which she has been placed in the providence of God, might be involved in a "usurpation of dominion perilously approaching that of an Antichrist"!!! Bishop Titcomb does not appear to have adequate Scriptural grounds for representing St. James as applying the prophecy of Amos, which he quotes in Acts xv. to the "whole church of Israel" neither does he tell us how, or when the whole church of Israel fell down and became a ruin; so that it will be safer for us to interpret St. James and the prophet Amos, whom he quotes, by the prophet Isaiah; and following his inspired guidance, we find that the mission of Christ was to "raise up the tribes of Jacob" (xlix. 6), by the degradation and severance of which from his kingdom, the tabernacle, or royal state of David, had fallen down; and it was only by the restoration of these tribes to his sceptre, the necessary condition of which was their restoration to covenant with God, that his tabernacle could be built again as in the days of old.

I wish to speak of the late Bishop Titcomb with the most profound respect; but I cannot extend the same indulgence to this most unfortunate appendix to an otherwise meritorious, although by no means original, work. I think it is much to be regretted that he should have bequeathed such a legacy to those with whom he was associated in an important investigation of prophecy; and I am sure that it will be the unanimous verdict of men of intelligence that he would better have secured "the whole subject" from falling into public discredit if he had given the same literal interpretation to the promises to Judah that he insists upon for those to Joseph. It may not be necessary to the identification of Great Britain with Israel that we should be able to trace the throne of David, but it certainly gives great strength to our argument if we can start it from either end, and trace the throne from the kingdom, as well as the kingdom from the throne. The late Rev. R. Glover has supplied this important link to the chain of our evidence, and although Bishop Titcomb seems to hold his work in small estimation, I think it will be generally regarded as one of the most able and valuable of the contributions which have been made to our literature.

Digitized by Google

THE ROYAL JUBILEE SERVICE IN WESTMINSTER ABBEY.

In the Daily Telegraph of April 20 there appeared a sketch of the programme of the musical arrangements in connection with the solemn celebration of Her Majesty's Jubilee in June next. We quote the article below, as the subject is one of great interest and importance, and our readers will like to know what is to take place on the auspicious occasion in question. The point to which we now desire to draw attention is the fact that the anthem by "the Abbey organist" is to be on the words of the Queen of Sheba to Solomon, as recorded in 2 Chron. ix. 8. This remarkable verse, it will be noticed, declares that God set Solomon on Jehovah's throne to be king "for" the Lord God. And why? Because the Lord loved Israel, and therefore made Solomon king "to do judgment and justice." If God did this for Solomon, and Solomon's earthly throne was the Lord's, what difficulty is there in believing that, since the British are Israel, our Queen is therefore occupying the Lord's throne over Israel, and that God made Victoria Queen "to do judgment and justice," according to the prophecies? (Jer. xxxiii. 17 and 26). Our quotation runs thus :—

THE ROYAL JUBILEE SERVICE.

Dr. J. F. Bridge, organist of Westminster Abbey, has now completed the musical arrangements in connection with the solemn celebration of Her Majesty's Jubilee. It is intended to employ a special choir of 200 voices, but there will be no orchestra, the organ being supplemented only by a band of trumpets and drums. The order of the music has been settled as follows: On the entry of the Queen into the Abbey, the State trumpeters will execute a fanfare; the Royal procession then advancing along the nave to the strains of a march by Handel. The responses chosen are those known as the "Accession," but the Proper Psalms will be sung to a special setting by Dr. Bridge. The "Te Deum" is that composed by the latePrince Consort, and published in the collection of His Royal Highness's works, edited by Mr. W. G. Cusins. A less pretentious musical version of the great Ambrosian Hymn could hardly be, but simplicity in this case is allied to appropriate dignity of expression. An anthem has been written for the occasion by the Abbey organist. The words are those addressed by the Queen of Sheba to Solomon (2 Chron. ix. 8): "Blessed be the Lord thy God, which delighted in thee to set thee on His throne, to be King for the Lord thy God; because thy God loved Israel, therefore made He thee King, to do judgment and justice." In the setting of this text there are some special features, but the music, taken generally, may be regarded as a happy blending of the traditional style of English Church composition with the greater freedom and expressiveness of modern usage. Hence, while there are no passages of stiff and formal counterpoint, neither is there any lapse into the mawkish sentimentalism which, to a certain extent, has enfeebled our service music. In this respect the anthem may perhaps be best described as strong yet flexible. Its special features are the introduction on several occasions of phrases from the National Anthem, to be accompanied by the trumpets and drums, and the use of the late Prince Consort's tune "Gotha," set, for bass solo and semi-chorus, to the words "Because thy God loved Israel," &c. The same tune, it may be remembered, figured in the anthem, "Blessed be the Lord," composed by the late Sir John Goss for the Thanksgiving Service held in St. Paul's on the occasion of the Prince of Wales's recovery. At the close of the religious ceremony the march in Mendelssohn's "Athalie" will be played as the Royal procession leaves the Abbey.

Here are words about to be addressed to Her Majesty in the anthem of Dr. Bridge which the Queen of Sheba knew to be applicable to our Queen's predecessor on the throne of Israel. Solomon's reign had for its divine object the doing of "judgment and justice," and surely this has also been the characteristic of Her Majesty's reign, in regions of the earth where "judgment and justice" had not been known before the shadow of her throne happily fell across them.

The late respected Bishop Titcomb, in his last work, which we lately reviewed (pp. 162 and 170), could not adopt the view that Her Majesty's throne was David's. He regarded the idea with aversion, and considered it "unscriptural, and calculated to bring our subject into public discredit." Yet, if he had reflected, he must surely have seen, as one of our late correspondents has expressed it, that if "the kingdom of God taken from the Jews" was given to the British as Ephraim-Israel, the temporal sovereignty must of necessity go with "the kingdom," and remain with it till Shiloh came (Gen. xlix. 10). There is a temporal as well as a spiritual side to the whole subject of the Identity, and that the Bishop was ready to admit. Where, then, is the unscriptural and improper character of our teaching in respect to the throne of our Queen, and why should not that throne "over Israel" be God's throne now, as in Solomon's days? Why should it not be destined to remain in the hands of one of David's lineage on earth till Israel and Judah be re-united, Christ's Advent taking place then that He may reign thenceforward there in Jerusalem in person over them, for He is the one whose right it is (Ezek. xxi. 27). We may not doubt that the Queen of Sheba's words in declaring Solomon's earthly throne in Jerusalem was the Lord Jehovah's, and that He made him His Vicegerent upon earth, were inspired; because David's inspired declaration in 1 Chron. xxviii. 5 plainly asserts that "of all David's sons the Lord had chosen Solomon his son to sit upon the throne of the kingdom of Jehovah over Israel." Judah was the ruler, but the sovereignty was "over Israel for ever" (ver. 4). In 1 Chron. xxix. 23 we have an historical statement which is a part of the inspired word, to the effect that "Solomon sat on the throne of Jehovah as King instead of David his father, and prospered, and all Israel obeyed him." If Solomon, why not Queen Victoria? for, as the late Bishop admitted, this nation is Ephraim-Israel, and God is faithful that promised. He cannot promise a perpetual throne over Israel to the House of Judah "for ever" and then proceed to break that promise without even proposing a remedy for the prophetic failure? We may thank God that Her Majesty's throne is the Lord's, and that a Queen of the lineage and House of David now rules over us on that throne, the dynasty being perpetual till He comes whose right it is, and then in the presence of the rightful king all murmurs shall be silenced, and the righteous reign of the King of Israel, even Jesus, in Mount Zion and Jerusalem, shall be to the glory of God, and for the salvation of all His believing people (Isa. xxiv. 23).

We had written thus far when "Lamed's" letter, which appears below, reached us. It seems to suggest a harmony which would go some distance to reconcile the late Bishop's view with Dr. Grant's and our own. We are quite ready, if difficulties are explained, to accept the idea (with which, by the way, all we have written above accords) that David's throne is now vacant, fallen down, and will have its local habitat by-and-bye in Jerusalem; but that God's word is nevertheless true; that David does not want "a man" or "heir" to sit upon "the throne of the Lord Jehovah over Israel," and He never shall or will want one, because His Word promises it. The throne of David is strictly confined to Jerusalem, and Mount Zion no doubt; and has not been transported either to Heaven or to London. But "the throne of the House of Israel" is in the midst of God's people Israel now in Britain, and on that throne an heiress of David's House is now seated to be Queen "for the Lord"—and this dynasty must last for ever. But still Jer. xxxiii. 21 presents a difficulty which has to be met.

Digitized by Google

DEAR PHILO-ISRAEL,—If it is not too presumptuous to touch on the subject of Appendix F. in "The Message from the Nineteenth Century," while it is still under your hands, I should like to bring before you a few thoughts, which if they do not commend themselves to you, can be thrown into the fire.

May it not be that "the throne of David" and "the throne of the House of Israel" are not identical?—that the former is restricted to Jerusalem, while the latter is established in Israel's home in the Isles of the West. Is not the promise of the continuity of David's throne conditional? (Psa. lxxxix. 28, 29; xxxiii. 37). It is to be an everlasting throne, but if David's children "forsook God's law," &c., "their transgression would be visited with the rod and their sin with scourges." What the rod and the scourges would be we are told in verses 38—44. There would be a break in the continuity. Do not these verses make us think of Ez. xxi. 25—27, where we find the wrath of God burning against the "profane wicked prince" King Zedekiah? "I will overturn, overturn, overturn." "Remove the diadem and take off the crown." Is not this profaning the crown by casting it to the ground, and casting the throne down to the ground? And do not the words, "It shall be no more, until He come whose right it is, and I will give it Him," teach us that there would be an interval between Zedekiah and Christ, during which David's throne in Jerusalem would remain empty, though preserved faithfully according to covenant promise for the divine Heir (Jer. iii. 17; Ezek. xliii. 7). And do not the words, "This shall not be the same," suggest the thought that when the throne is overturned the crown and diadem would be worn under changed conditions? especially when read in the light of the words that follow, "exalt him (or her) that is low," the tender twig cropped off, "and abase him that is high," the highest branch of the royal cedar tree.

The expression, "the throne of the House of Israel," so far from necessitating the previous union of the two sticks, rather requires that the throne should have been set up when the Houses of Israel and Judah were in separation. And if the good Bishop has proved his contention that the lost House of Israel has been found in Britain, then the throne of the House of Israel must be in Britain, and the Sovereign who sits on that throne must be a descendant of David, and must be holding Judah's sceptre (Deut. xv. 6; Jer. xxxiii. 17, 25, 26). The Sovereign cannot be a Gentile, and must be of the family of David to rule over Christianized Israel.

There is a striking difference between Ezek. xxi. 27 and Gen. xlix. 10. The throne in Jerusalem shall be no more until Christ comes. The sceptre in Judah shall not depart till Christ comes. Someone must have been holding Judah's sceptre from the day that it fell from Zedekiah's hands until now, and someone must be holding it now. May not our Queen be a true descendant of David, and be wearing his crown, though not sitting upon his throne; holding Judah's sceptre in her hand, and sitting on the throne of the House of Israel?

Another thought crops up in connection with Jer. xxxiii. 17. This statement occurs in the midst of a description of millennial days, and a continuous succession of heirs to sit on David's throne in ver. 21, as well as a continuous succession of heirs to sit on the throne of the House of Israel in ver. 17, are promised with equal distinctness (Isa. xxxii. 1). When there is the divine King reigning over all, will there not be human kings reigning under Him? May not the British throne of the House of Israel still exist after the union of the sticks, and after the return and conversion of Judah to their land, and after the representative return of the Ten Tribes, and of Manasseh with Judah?

Israel will still have the dominion of the world, and still be the kingdom, even though all the blessings of grace and all the blessings of the land of promise will be shared by Judah. Is it not more than likely that while there is the throne of David in Jerusalem there will also be the throne of the House of Israel in Britain, both subordinate to "one King who shall be King to them all"? for all cannot dwell together, even in the enlarged Palestine, and multitudes must continue to dwell in the many lands their God gave them in this dispensation. And though Jerusalem is specially called "the throne of the Lord," yet will there not be a human prince reigning, even there? else there would be no need for the promise of an unfailing seed to David "in those days when Judah shall be saved and Israel shall dwell safely," and when "the branch of righteousness" is Himself executing "judgment and righteousness in the land."

I have no one at hand to ask whether the word "son" in ver. 21 is more defined than the word "man" in ver. 17.

With grateful acknowledgments of all you are doing for us as Editor of the BANNER,

I remain yours sincerely,

LAMED.

Weston-super-Mare, April 22.

Correspondence.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—No doubt your article upon "The Spirit of Lawlessness now Abroad" was in print before the meeting of which the enclosed is a short account was held, but if anything was required to confirm and intensify what you therein stated, certainly we have it here. Ordinary people who have not Anglo-Israel truth—that craze—to help them may well have their hearts failing them for fear of those things that are looming in the future. But how different with Christian Anglo-Israelites! Amidst all this they can and ought to sing, "God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble; therefore will we not fear, though the earth be removed," and why?—because "Jehovah Tzabaoth is with us (compare with Josh. v. 14), the God of Jacob (see Gen xxxii. 1, 2, 9—12) is our refuge. Selah!" When speaking with a friend some time ago upon this very point, I showed him my ground of confidence, and he expressed his surprise and wish for participation, but alas! "busy here and there" (1 Kings xx. 40); he had no time to look into this matter, and so, like many others, prefers being like the wave of the sea. Oh, that such were wise and prudent! (Hosea xiv. 9).—Yours,

JASHUB.

Stoke Newington, N., Mar. 27, 1887.

The meeting of anarchists to which the above letter refers was described in the Echo on March 19. It took place in "South Place Institute," in the neighbourhood of Wapping, and was attended chiefly by foreigners and a few red republicans, who we are ashamed to own were Englishmen. The speeches were of the usual violent sort, denouncing organised law as a "bloody monstrosity," and describing "the four enemies of the human race" to be "capital, interest, profit, and taxes." One of the speakers is thus sketched by the correspondent:—

"The hero of the evening was a little fellow standing about five feet three inches, who up to this point had been quietly hawking revolutionary literature among the audience. He wore a long and rusty looking overcoat; a dirty cravat encircled his throat, and effectually prevented whatever shirt he may have worn from being seen. It was he who spoke of that "bloody monstrosity called a Government." He denounced the payment of rent and taxes. He only paid his own under protest. "What were taxes?" he asked. They were the means of furnishing our soldiers and police with arms to knock the people's brains out. He poured out the vials of his wrath on the curs who had not the courage to refuse to pay blackmail to the monster who came for his rent every Monday morning. "We must have another revolution," he declared, "but at our own time and in our own way. We cannot fight against disciplined troops. Guns," he went on, "cost from three pounds to four pounds a piece. but a dynamite bomb costs only threepence," an announcement which was received with enthusiastic cheers. Turning to the capitalist class, he swore that if he thought it would do any good to the proletariat cause, he would shoot the Duke of Westminster, who was at the top of the tree, to-morrow. This seemed to be rather too much for the audience, from some of whom a kind of growl proceeded; and the little man, after repeating his willingness to shoot the Duke of Westminster under certain circumstances, quitted the platform, clapped his hat upon his head, and taking a sheaf of papers under his arm, resumed his hawking, as if nothing had happened."

Verily we may say "the enemy is coming in like a flood," and the time, thank God, must be very near when "the Spirit of the Lord shall lift up a standard against him," and put him down (Isa. lix. 19). Let Israel therefore praise the Lord, even for the approach of such Satanic anarchy.

Digitized by Google

NOTICES.

All communications intended for the Editor, to be addressed: "Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Clifton, Bristol.

SUBSCRIPTIONS. £ s. d.

Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free 0 7 6
Two Copies (including Double Numbers) 0 13 6
Three Copies ,, ,, ,, ... 1 0 4
Four Copies ,, ,, ,, ... 1 5 6
Six Copies ,, ,, ,, ... 1 16 4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-grand, London, to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C., or F. W. PARRY & Co., 29, Paternoster-row, London.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

Contents Bills and Show Cards may be obtained on application to the Publishers.

Advertisements should be sent to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

Prepaid Advertisements are inserted at the rate of thirty words for 1s. 4d.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION,

14, King William-street, Charing Cross, W.C.

Bible Readings on the Book of Hosea

Every TUESDAY afternoon (commencing May 3) at 3.30, lasting One Hour only. All are invited.

JAMES BILLINGTON, Secretary.

A New Work on the Identity of Lost Israel By the late BISHOP TITCOMB.

Now ready, in Cloth Gilt, Bevelled Boards, Imperial 8vo. Price 3s.; sent Post Free for Postal Order or Stamps.

A MESSAGE TO THE CHURCH

FROM

THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.

BY THE LATE

RT. REV. BISHOP TITCOMB, D.D.

(This work was completed by the late Bishop only a week previous to his death).

The Kentish Mercury, April 21st, says:—"This book derives a peculiar and pathetic interest from the circumstances that the proofs of its concluding pages were revised by the author during the last few days of his life, and that its publication took place simultaneously with his death. One feels, in noticing a book under such circumstances, a special responsibility, when the author is removed beyond the reach of human criticism of whatever kind. But in truth it is impossible to glance at these pages without being struck by the deep and reverent research into the prophetic Scriptures which it manifests, by the tone of piety that pervades it, as well as the lucidity and eloquence of its style. Nor is it necessary to express concurrence with the views of the gifted and pious author in his prophetic theories to give this praise. Of course with regard to Dr. Titcomb's prophetic interpretations there will be much difference of opinion, but there can be none in the mind of any impartial person who reads this work, either as to the diligence with which he testimony of the prophets has been studied, or the earnestness of the expositor in stating his conclusions. Bishop Titcomb, it is well-known to those who have studied his works, was one of the school of prophetic interpreters who believe that the British Empire, or perhaps, more accurately speaking, the English-speaking race, are identified with those whom we have been in the habit of calling the 'Lost Tribes of Israel.'" [Then follow several extracts.]

London: Robert Banks & Son, Racquet court, Fleet-st F. W. Parry & Co., Paternoster-row, and all booksellers.

WORKS BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

The Geography of the Gates. With Map and six full page, and one double-page, Illustrations, printed on plate paper. 208 pages, in handsome cloth, gilt Price 3s. 6d., post free 3s. 10d.

An Elementary Digest or Sketch of the Chief Facts and Teachings of the Great Pyramid of Egypt. Adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific 56 pages, Illustrated with Diagrams, price 4d., post free 5d. 10th Thousand.

Our Identity with the House of Israel. Price 4d. Reprinted from "Clifton Chronicle Letters"

The History of the House of Israel; How they were Lost, and How they were Found, Told for the Children. Price 6d., cloth 1s.; post free 7d. and 1s. 1d. Fourth Edition. Eleventh thousand

A Resume of the Scriptural Argument, proving the Identity of the British Race with the Lost Ten Tribes. Price 1d.; 6s. per 100. New edition now ready.

R. Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

THE NINTH ANNUAL MEETING

WILL BE HELD IN

EXETER HALL, STRAND, ON TUESDAY EVENING, MAY 24, 1887.

ADMIRAL BEDINGFELD in the Chair,

Addresses will be delivered on the following subjects:—

The Rev. C. W. HICKSON, M.A., of Bristol, "The Gentilization of the House of Israel."

E. W. BIRD, Esq. (Philo-Israel) of Bristol, "What place is there in the Divine Economy fo Our Identity, in the Present Dispensation."

The Rev. GEORGE HIDER, of Paignton, Devon, "The Practical Value of Anglo-Israel Truth."

The Rev. ROBERT DOUGLAS, M.A., Vicar of Kidsgrove, "England's Jubilee—A Divine Manifestation of British-Israel's Truth and Duty."

The Chair will be taken at Seven o'clock precisely.

The ANNUAL MEETING of the Members and Subscribers, to receive the Report, and elect Officers for the ensuing year, will be held on MONDAY EVENING, MAY 23, 1887, in the Library of the Association, 14, King William Street, Charing Cross, London, W.C. Chair to be taken at 7 o'clock.

E. W. BIRD, Esq. (Philo-Israel) is expected to preside. JAMES BILLINGTON, Sec.

Price 2s. 6d., Cheap Edition, 1/-

BIBLE LESSONS & REFLECTIONS.

By ROBERT GAIRDNER, of Kilmarnock, N.B.

"Mr. Gairdner has given us in his book a series of Bible lessons, with his own reflections added thereto, and though he has been very cautious in the latter, and has not committed himself too broadly, he has plainly let it be seen that he is an Anglo-Israelite by conviction, and that the Scriptures which he quotes at length and extensively throughout his book, are meant to teach Our Identity and God's faithfulness, from first to last, to His promises to Abraham and His seed for ever."—Banner of Israel.

RCBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-st.

Fifty Reasons Why the Anglo-Saxons are Israelites of the Lost Tribes of the House of Israel?

By Rev. W. H. POOLE, D.D.

"There is a principle which is a bar against all argument, and which cannot fail to keep a man in everlasting ignorance. This principle is, contempt prior to examination."—Dr. PALEY.

Price Sixpence, by post Sevenpence.

London: R. BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

EDWARD HINE'S PUBLICATIONS.

SHOULD BE READ & DISTRIBUTED.

FORTY-SEVEN IDENTIFICATIONS, 6d.; post free, 7d.

CUI BONO? 6d., post free, 7d.

LOST ISRAEL FOUND, 3s. 6d., post free, 3s. 9d.

F. W. PARRY, 29, Paternoster Row, London, or direct of ISAAC LOVELAND, Shoreham, Sevenoaks.

ETHELINE

A New and most effective Remedy for CORNS.—Perfectly safe and harmless. Is very easily applied. Cures in a few applications, without the slightest pain. Everyone troubled with either Corns, Warts, or Bunions, will find relief by using ETHELINE. To be obtained of all Chemists, or post free for 14 stamps from J. LLEWELLYN, CHEMIST, COWBRIDGE.

THE TEETH, THE TEETH, THOSE PRECIOUS TEETH!

Save, Purify, Beautify.

GEORGE & WELCH'S

CARBOLINE

1/6 (TOOTH PASTE). 2/6 per Pot

Is the Best Known Cleanser, Preserver, and Deodoriser.

Dental Guide says:—"No Tooth application equals the Carbolica."

Proprietors: GEORGE & WELCH, Worcester.

Through Chemists, or Post Free from Makers.

PHOTOGRAPHY EXTRAORDINARY

THE Jubilee SET

PRICE 3/6

Delivered by Parcel Post, 6d. extra.

Portable Stands, 1/- each extra.

By the aid of expensive machinery, and a demand from almost every civilised region on the globe, we are enabled to supply a Complete Set of apparatus for 3s. 6d., and any person can now produce the most perfect Works of Art in Dry-plate Photography. The process is simplicity itself, the exposure being instantaneous. The portrait or view produced is a never-failing source of delight—old friends and old associations being ever with us.

OBSERVE.—This is not a Toy or a Joke or a Cardboard Camera or a Copying Process. We offer no £100 prizes (which, of course, the purchasers must pay for), nor indulge in no advertising legerdemain; but we give the following marvellous Set of Apparatus, and defy the entire trade to equal it at six times the price. A Beautiful Mahogany Polished Dove-tailed Sliding bellows Camera, ¼-plate size, made of American hard wood, perfectly light proof, with dark slide and instantaneous shutter, powerful rapid French lens developing and fixing solutions, box of special dry plates, and a book of instructions: enabling any person to produce photographs, either at home or in their holiday tour, equal to professional photographers.

67,000 ALREADY SOLD.

"The Vicarage, Wiveliscombe, Somerset, "December 10, 1886.

"DEAR SIR,—Your Jubilee Set is a marvel of cheapness and efficiency. My children are delighted with it, and we have turned out some really good Pictures.

"Yours faithfully, REV. J. T. TROTT."

Address MANAGER LL DEPARTMENT, the

AMERICAN CAMERA COMPANY,

399, EDGWARE ROAD, LONDON.

SHIPPERS AND THE TRADE SUPPLIED.

A BOON TO SUFFERERS.

HARNESS' ELECTROPATHIC BELT.

Testimonial

From Miss J. HOULDSWORTH, Rozelle, Ayr, N.B.

"I am glad to be able to tell you that the HARNESS' ELECTRIC BATTERY BELT has been very beneficial in strengthening the system generally, as well as instrumental in relieving the Neuralgic pains from which I have suffered.

NEURALGIA & DEBILITY.

Every man and woman suffering from any disorder of the Nerves, Stomach, Liver, or Kidneys, should at once stop physicing, and remit six stamps for HARNESS' ELECTROPATHIC BELT (post free) and obtain immediate relief. Pamphlet and Book of Testimonials POST FREE. MEDICAL BATTERY CO. Ltd.

52, OXFORD STREET, LONDON, W.

Corner of Rathbone Place

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. F. W. PARRY (late GUEST & Co.), 29, PATERNOSTER-ROW, WEDNESDAY, MAY 11, 1887. [All rights reserved.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."

(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. XI., No. 542. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, MAY 18, 1887. [PRICE ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
The Australian Squadron	197
Ephraim's Dispersion and Subsequent Return to their Inheritance	198
Israel and Judah's Choice of a Head. By F. Gass	199
"Blessed are the Meek, for they shall Inherit the Earth" (Matt. v. 5). By A German	199
Another Clerical, and a Fresh Layman's Objection	200
Sir John Lubbock on the British Nation	201
A Liverpool Incumbent Admits Our Identity to be True. By C. W. E.	202
Review	203
The BANNER British-Israelite Jubilee Fund	203
Correspondence	203

THE AUSTRALIAN SQUADRON.

ONE of the benefits we have already derived from the Colonial Conference now sitting in London is, that the settlement of the question of the naval defence of the Empire is making some progress. The chief result as yet is that we are to have an "Australian Squadron." At the banquet given to the Colonial Conference Delegates, at St. George's Club, Hanover Square, the Earl of Onslow made that statement on the authority of one of the Delegates, and the Duke of Cambridge said that "he had been delighted to hear from the Secretary to the Admiralty that an arrangement had been come to with the Australian Colonies on the subject of naval defence." He only wished that they might establish a system of military defence as well.

In the London papers of April 23 and 25, identically worded telegrams appear from the Governments of South Australia, Queensland, Western Australia, Tasmania, and Victoria, accepting the proposals of the Imperial Government relating to naval defence. New Zealand also accepts conditionally. The New South Wales Government is, as usual, unwilling to sanction or give aid to the proposals; but we suppose will tender its adhesion when the other six Governments are beginning, with the sanction of their Parliaments, to enjoy the benefits and protection of the scheme as adopted by them. This is decidedly a good commencement, and it seems very likely that a similar scheme "for the protection of Imperial and Colonial interests in South Africa is not far off."

Once Australia and South Africa have become united to the Home Government and to the old Mother of Nations in the West, by the powerful link of a good system of naval defence, Canada will not be long behindhand, or remain out in the cold. East, and West, and South thus, British squadrons will finally be maintained at the united cost of four confederated nations, and bold, therefore, will be the alien Power which will dare to cross their path or wantonly break the peace. Then, indeed, will Britannia rule the waves. For hers will be the world-wide Power resting on the navies of a nation, and of a company of nations, too, all wealthy, powerful, resolute; having already the supremacy of the sea by reason of the prodigious strength of the Mother Country, and possessing besides, the resources of new and unexplored regions of the earth, wherewith to maintain and increase their strength at sea.

It is a great and incalculable, advance, then to find that the first grand step towards Imperial Federation has been taken by the united action of three out of the four Anglo-Saxon nations of Australia, when they consented, as they have just done, to carry out the scheme for naval defence, proposed by the Home Government. Here, then, is the fulfilment of a splendid prophecy in which we, and we alone of all nations have an interest, gradually taking place before our very eyes. "God said to Jacob, I am God Almighty; be fruitful and multiply. A nation and a company of nations shall be of thee; and kings shall come out of thy loins." This was the promise of Gen. xxxv. 11, which is so peculiarly our own.

The geographical positions of these nations now about to unite with us for purposes of defence, give us, in conjunction with the maritime Gates we already possess, immense power in the ocean highways of the world. Gibraltar flanks the advance of our fleets at the distance of a thousand miles from our shores. The African West coast stations then give some support. St. Helena (to be made impregnable) is the next great coaling station and maritime fortress on our journey South, till we join hands with the South-African British Squadron lying off Cape Town and Simon's Bay to protect the trade of Britain passing Eastwards and Westwards from that extreme "end of the African earth." Thence passing Eastward, the advance of the British navies is adequately protected on the North by the distant power of India, by the maritime fortress of the Mauritius, till the helping hand of the Australian-British squadron, lying off St. George's Sound, makes the arriving ships from Britain feel that they are in safe waters again, within hail of the Chatham and Portsmouth of Port Phillip, in Victoria.

This, then, is the achievement of the day, and the result already of the Colonial Conference. What will it be when Canada also throws in her lot with the Australian and South African Colonies! With the Atlantic bounded on the East and West by great Anglo-Saxon confederated nations, surely that great ocean will become a British lake! The South Atlantic and the Indian Oceans will be the undisputed highways of Israel, and the North and South Pacific Oceans must also follow, since Esquimault and the Canadian strategic railway to the Pacific already bring the power of the Gates to bear upon those oceans also, and cause Australia and its squadrons to be in touch with the British navy once more at Victoria, in Vancouver, via New Zealand, the Fijis, Honolulu, and Esquimault. Surely and steadily thus, like the tide which never recedes but always advances, we see the Empire grows. The Colonies have been gradually formed, as far as we are concerned, in a haphazard fashion, at spots where we had no design when they were secured by us as settlements. But God fixed our habitations in these strategic positions round the Gentiles' countries, and caused the former almost suddenly to develop into mighty nations, loyal to the core in regard to their old Mother in the West. Soon has followed the desire to confederate for purposes of self-defence. Accordingly, to-day we see that the wish is maturing into military and naval facts, and already we find that an Australian squadron is agreed upon, to be followed by another for South Africa, and doubtless, by-and-bye, a third for the Canadian Dominion. An Israelitish prophecy is thus developing into fulfilment in the British nation and her Colonies exclusively, and who can fail to regard the facts as proofs that this people is indeed Israel, the chosen Ten-Tribed inheritance of the Lord? Therefore, let Israel praise their God who made, created, and formed them for His praise (Isa. xliii. 21).

Digitized by Google

EPHRAIM'S DISPERSION AND SUBSEQUENT RETURN TO THEIR INHERITANCE.

WE are apt to read portions of the Word of God to which we have been accustomed from infancy, and to attach indefinite general meanings to them, but we usually fail to see the force of each sentence and word, because we do not understand God's purposes respecting His people, or how He has always meant to employ them in carrying out His designs for the salvation of the nations of the Gentile earth. Such passages as Gen. xxviii. 3, 4, also vers. 13—15, are cases in point. How many, in reading ver. 3 and 4, for instance, stop to reflect that Jacob's afterseed was to become a "blessed" nation, so numerous that by reason thereof his descendants would develop into "a company of peoples"—that is, a multitude of federated Hebrew nations? Who, again, reading vers. 13—15, pauses to consider in what sense the Hebrew nation was "to spread abroad to the West" first, and then "to the East, the North, and lastly to the South"? Who has hitherto desired to ask when these things would come to pass? And yet the meaning of the passage lies on the surface, literally understood, and yields splendid "Identity" lessons when read with intelligence by those who understand that Jacob's seed here indicated was not the Twelve Tribes nor the Two, but the Ten only.

We know this by comparing Scripture with Scripture, the only true method of interpretation. To Abraham, for instance, was given the promise which was the leading one from the first—namely, that of his afterseed should come a "company" or federation of "nations." We find it so stated in Gen. xvii. 4, R.V.: "God talked with Abraham, saying, As for Me, behold My covenant is with thee, and thou shalt be the father of a multitude of nations." The same was repeated to Jacob by Isaac first, and then by the Lord Himself, in Gen. xxviii. 3, 4. "God Almighty bless thee (said Isaac), and make thee fruitful, and multiply thee, that thou mayest be a company of peoples, and give thee the blessing of Abraham." To Jacob God Himself spoke directly after, and said (ver. 14), "Thy seed shall be as the dust of the earth, and thou shalt spread abroad to the West, and to the East, and to the North, and to the South, and in thee and in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed." But this very blessing, the blessing of Abraham, was passed on by Jacob to Ephraim in Gen. xlviii. 16—19, to the exclusion of all the other tribes. The two lads, Joseph's sons, were "to grow into a multitude in the midst of the earth," and Ephraim's seed compared favourably with Manasseh's, because Ephraim's seed was to become "a multitude of nations," and therefore was to be distinguished from and excel Manasseh's by the possession of this very unique gift, called in Holy Scripture "the blessing of Abraham." In Gen. xxviii. 14, R.V., we see the order in which the events must occur to realise the predicted blessing. To begin with, the seed to come of Jacob and Ephraim (through Joseph) were to be multitudinous as "the dust of the earth." By reason of such increase they were "to break forth" abroad next, to the West, East, North, and South. Then, but not before, and by reason of that wide-spread multitudinousness, but not otherwise, the seed was to be a blessing to all the families of the earth, and that blessing was to be the knowledge of Christ and His Gospel. The plain consequence of all this is that the increase of Ephraim and the wide planting of Ephraim, and the evangelising functions of that race, must take place synchronously with the Christian dispensation, and between the two Advents. It is vain to look for these things before the First Advent, or after the Second; for in the latter case Ephraim and Judah will be reunited and fused into one nation, leaving Ephraim nothing for separate enjoyment; but in the former there could have been no Christ to preach, no Gospel to publish, and no Christian blessing to impart to the nations before Christ came! It remains, then, that the whole prophecy is to be fulfilled in the Christian dispensation, and therefore we are bound to look for it now during the present times.

Here we have, then, in the four corners of a single Scripture, the whole of our own national privileges and blessings focussed into one or two verses! Our matchless position in the world among the nations is promised us and guaranteed by God Himself! The Promiser was the Lord Jehovah, the God of Abraham, of Isaac, and of Jacob. He told His servant that during the very times in which we British are now living—that is, in the days of the Christian dispensation, He would cause his seed to be for multitude "like the dust of the earth," innumerable. That the result would be that we (Jacob's offspring) should be, in love and mercy, sown broadcast over the earth by the Lord Himself, such "sowing" being, according to His own divine plan, to the West first! The seed would spread next, He said, Eastward; then to the North, and lastly to the South. These signs would serve to identify the seed, what time during their penal dispersion they should lose their Identity, and men should deem the House of Isaac "lost." But there would be one very precious, decisive, sign more. While dispersed in blessing, and sown among the Gentiles by the Lord Himself (as Zech. x. 9 declares they would be) "among the peoples remembering God in far countries," the Abrahamic seed would then begin, He said, to fulfil their predestined functions as the almoners of the grace of God to all the nations, to all the families, and to all the kindreds of the earth. Then, but not before, the Gentile nations would begin to receive that benefit from "the creation" of Israel which God designed should follow, when He declared that "they should show forth His praise" (Isa. xliii. 1, 7, 21). As a natural consequence of these blessed promises to our race, the Lord added one word more, applicable, of course, directly to Jacob's case primarily, but certainly also to his afterseed: "Behold, I am with thee, and will keep thee whithersoever thou goest, and I will bring thee again into THIS land, for I will not leave thee until I have done that which I have spoken to thee of" (Gen. xxviii. 15). Nearly all this has come to pass already in our most favoured nation! Our seed has become already "as the dust of the earth," for multitude, our enemies and opponents being the judges. We have in our multitudes, and because of it, "spread abroad" or "broken forth" to the West first, when we came to these "Isles of the West" from Central Asia, and again to America in A.D. 1620 when the "Mayflower" sailed for New England from our shores. We spread next to the East, when in 1639, 1662 and 1700 we laid the foundation of the Indian, or Heathen, Empire, by the occupation of the Gates—Madras, Bombay, and Calcutta; to the North, when in 1783 we laid the foundations of the Hudson Bay Government in the North-west of America, and to the South, when in 1788 to 1859 Australasia became British, and in 1795 to 1806, when the Cape began to bend to the meteor flag—a process not finished yet in 1886! And then, finally, we have—since this wondrous but blessed dispersion and spreading abroad took place in A.D. 1650, and afterwards—become the missionaries of the whole world, taking the Gospel to all nations, all families, and all kindreds of the world, with God's Word and God's laws, to bring the world to Christ, and proclaim that message which is divine in its origin and inception, "God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on Him should not perish, but have eternal life" (John iii. 16, R.V.).

Digitized by Google

ISRAEL AND JUDAH'S CHOICE OF A HEAD.

By F. Gass.

The time is drawing near when Judah will join Israel in Great Britain, "the land of the North," and they will return to Palestine together (Jer. iii. 18) to take repossession of the inalienable inheritance of their forefathers, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. It is impossible to see exactly how this will be brought to pass, but judging from several passages in the prophets, and from the present ominous state of the international relations of the European nations, there is not much doubt that it will be for both Houses of Israel, but especially for Judah, a time of deep anxiety and trouble. After the tremendous general war now impending in continental Europe, during which it is only too probable that commerce and the cultivation of the soil will have to be neglected, a time of frightful scarcity, even famine, may come upon the nations. God declares through His prophet Hosea, speaking in all probability of this anxious period, that Israel and Judah will seek His face. "In their affliction they will seek Me early." At a time of such widespread disaster the development of a strong sympathetic feeling between British-Israel and the continental Jews would be as the bitterness of gall to the excited combatants. This hatred of Judah would be strongest in Russia, which country is the home of nearly a third of the whole existing race of Jews, and it would be intensified if England succeeded in standing aloof from actual warfare, and claimed blood relationship with her Jewish brethren. It would not be surprising were the Jews driven out, almost literally into the sea. Then will the time have arrived for the ships of Tarshish, of "the land of the rustling of wings" (Isa. xviii. 1, R.V.), the swift fleets of British ships, to fulfil prophecy by saving a remnant of Judah, large or small, from unbearable persecution, and even threatened extermination. Of that time (Jer. iii. 18) if this delineation of the future is near the truth, Hosea tells us (i. 11, R.V.) that "The children of Judah and the children of Israel shall be gathered together, and they shall appoint themselves one head, and shall go up from the land: for great shall be the day of Jezreel." From the land, England, shall go up to worship the Lord of Hosts at Jerusalem, the united Twelve Tribes of Israel—not the whole mass of them, which would be a physical impossibility, but representatively, "one of a city and two of a family" (Jer. iii. 14). They would probably be volunteers, two of a family for companionship, and a leader from each city, or district, accustomed to the ways of those of his countrymen amongst whom he had been reared. We may be sure that there will be a large leaven of old and firm believers in the Identity among them, urged forward by an irresistible pioneer missionary zeal. These events, I believe, will occur in the midst of the quiet but deep national revival, depicted so graphically by Jeremiah (xxxi. 18—20. R.V.): "I have surely heard Ephraim bemoaning himself thus, Thou hast chastised me, and I was chastised, as a calf unaccustomed to the yoke: turn Thou me and I shall be turned: for Thou art the Lord my God. Surely after that I was turned. I repented, and after that I was instructed, I smote upon my thigh." God declares: "Behold I will turn again the captivity of Jacob's tents, and have compassion on his dwelling places." Again (l. 4, 5, R.V.), "In those days, and in that time, saith the Lord, the children of Israel shall come, they and the children of Judah together, they shall go on their way weeping, and shall seek the Lord their God. They shall inquire concerning Zion with their faces thitherward." Israel and Judah united together shall seek the Lord with earnest prayer, and with broken and contrite hearts. The description glows with the feelings, and finely exhibits the state of real penitents. No distinctions being then felt or attended to; all will feel themselves sinners, the descendants of a long line of disobedient ancestors, the recipients of grace beyond their highest expectations. "Going and weeping shall they go;" their repentance does not preclude activity; their preparations to return to Zion will be carried on without ceasing, and crowned with divine accomplishment.

Then, when the representatives of the Twelve Tribes are assembled together, in companies, with their captains over them, Hosea i. 11 will receive its fulfilment; they will "appoint themselves one head." Who will this leader be? It cannot be Christ, for God appointed Him. Israel never had in the past, and cannot have in the future, any choice in this divine selection. Nor can it be the occupant of "the throne of David" in the British Isles, at the time the appointment takes place. The selection and appointment of David, and his descendants was divine (Acts xiii. 22), and therefore cannot be repeated. Unless the literal meaning of the prophecy is departed from, and I can see nothing to justify this course, it is evident that the "head" or leader, appointed by Israel and Judah, in solemn assembly, to guide them through the events of the great "day of Jezreel" is not Christ, neither will he be a member of the Davidian Royal Family of Great Britain. Is this "appointed head" mentioned in other Scriptures? It would be remarkable if he were not. Most commentators connect Hosea i. 11; iii. 5; Jeremiah xxx. 9; Ezekiel xxxiv. 23, 24; xxxvii. 22; but at present it is impossible to decide how far they may be right in their judgment.

"BLESSED ARE THE MEEK, FOR THEY SHALL INHERIT THE EARTH" (Matt. v. 5).

By A German.

On examining into the full purport of these words it will, I think, be found that they admit of a two-fold application—viz., an individual and a national one, the lesser being contained in the greater, neither neutralised nor limited thereby, for thus it must ever be in divine things.

The Saviour of the world, in the days of His humiliation, said, "Learn of Me, for I am meek and lowly in heart, and you shall find rest unto your souls; and in 1 Pet. iii. 4 we read of a meek and quiet spirit, which in the sight of God is of great price. Well-known though these words and many similar ones are, it is good for us to ponder them and lay them to heart, as implying present blessing and favour, for the spirit of meekness is part of the very essence of a truly Christian character: "Put on, therefore, as God's elect, holy and beloved, a heart of compassion, kindness, humility, meekness, long-suffering" (are not all these cognate attributes?) And so, truly, "blessed are the meek" (Col. iii. 12).

But He who quoted the Scriptures in the fulness of the meaning thereof enforces this beatitude with, "for they shall inherit the earth," referring to Psa. xxxvii. In this psalm those to whom, in the presence of the momentary triumph of evil, the inheritance of the earth is promised, are interchangeably addressed as "the righteous," the meek," and "those that wait upon the Lord." Yet, as it is contained in Rom. iv., "the promise was to Abraham and to his seed, that he should be the heir of the world," and as, again, in Isa. liv. 3, Israel, desolate and forsaken, is bidden to rejoice, "for thou shalt spread abroad to the right and to the left, and thy seed shall possess the nations" (is this not equal to inheriting the earth?) the inference is that a time was to come when Abraham's seed, characterised by the spirit of meekness, would be manifestly the possessors of the earth.

Digitized by Google

And this may well lead us to consider the beautiful fitness there is in this promise that the meek shall inherit the earth, that is the seed of Abraham, Israel, characterised by this meekness. For, if in them all the families of the earth are to be blessed, if they are to be the dispensers of benefits to all the nations, if they are to move among them in the conscious possession of privilege and prerogative; if they are to be "named the priests of the Lord, if men shall call them ministers of our God," if "all that see them shall acknowledge them (and be willing to do so) that they are the seed which the Lord hath blessed" (Isa. lxi. 6—9), then this spirit of meekness will be an essential qualification. Without it their ministrations would not result in unmitigated blessing, their ascendancy would be felt as a burden, and they would not be "in the midst of many peoples as dew from the Lord, as showers upon the grass."

Where, in looking over the nations of the world, do we see a sign, a promise, of any one of them developing this characteristic of meekness, while seeking to exercise a beneficent influence all around? It is, indeed, still a day of small things, but, assuredly, there is a nation, a race, beginning to "blossom and bud, and to fill the face of the world with fruit," where strong men, men of intellect and culture, may be found "receiving with meekness the engrafted word," not ignoring it, nor sitting in judgment over it, but bowing the knee and praying (if not always in those very words, yet in the spirit of them) for "increase of grace to hear meekly Thy word, to receive it with pure affection, and to bring forth the fruits of the Spirit," a people out of whose midst there arise, from year to year, a greater number of devoted men and women, constrained by the love of Christ, and exhibiting, too, some of the gentleness and meekness of their Master, willing to go forth at home or abroad, and to become all things to all men, that by all means they may save some. Shall we not thankfully acknowledge this growing good in the presence of evil more pronounced? knowing that the God of Israel, the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, is working in the midst of His people, leading them out with that thought in their hearts, "Freely ye have received, freely give!"

And shall this great good end, as some would have it, in the final triumph over it of the power of darkness? No, assuredly not, as God is true and faithful! "for the Lord taketh pleasure in His people," so says the Psalm cxlix., ushering in the millennial reign of righteousness, "He will beautify the meek with salvation" (marg., victory; ver. 4, R.V.).

Tzar.—Doubtless it is well known to every student of Hebrew that the word Tzar is not always translated in precisely the same way. In (A.V.) Isa. lix. 19 Tzar is rendered "enemy," and Zech. viii. 10, where the same word occurs, it is "affliction." The R.V. has it "he" and "adversary" in the respective verses, and in reading the chapters carefully we find that this Tzar has much to do with the trouble that shall overtake God's people Israel before their restoration to their own land. Though we may not grasp the whole meaning, yet is it not deeply interesting to study these chapters, and with the light they give us, through the help of God's Holy Spirit, consider with less dismay the puzzling "Eastern Question" and the mysterious tactics of Russia and her imperious Czar?—B. A. S.

ANOTHER CLERICAL, AND A FRESH, LAYMAN'S OBJECTION.

At a meeting lately held in a certain town by clerical and lay friends, to consider a subject in which Our Identity came prominently to the front, a clergyman present, and a layman who had spent many years in India, both gave expression to arguments against us which, though not new, were not fully answered at the time for want of opportunity and leisure. These we propose to consider and answer now, dealing with the layman's case first, as involving considerations of some importance. The layman, who avowed himself a believer in our Israelitish origin, was nevertheless one who in this subject can find no consolation. He is somewhat of a "pessimist," and takes very dismal and sombre views of our nation's future fate, because of her exceeding wickedness, because of her declension into Popery on all sides (!), of her open idolatry in the matter of the worship of the sacramental bread and wine in some of her Churches, and because we could, he affirmed, no longer be deemed a Christian nation, since we have denied God in our Parliaments, and in our scheme of public education, since in the Parliament we suffer Jews and Heretics, Roman Catholics, Infidels and Atheists to take part in the Government of the country, and because in our Board Schools we insult His Holy Word by not making it a recognised and prescribed part of the education of the people. Such being the case he looked not for God's blessing, but for God's curse and frown upon this people. Further, as all God's blessings promised to Israel were conditional on her good behaviour and obedience to God's word and will (marks of approval were here given by some, and also of dissent by the other members of the Conference), he believed God would punish us as He punished Israel before, and therefore he could not take roseate views of our nation's future, but rather looked for our being involved in the tremendous wars coming on the earth, and for the condign punishment we deserve because of our excessive wickedness as a nation. So far the layman. He was answered at the time, but not fully, because the meeting was on the point of separating. But the reply to our too desponding friend was and is to this effect. Our opponent makes a great mistake in confounding God's unconditional with his conditional promises to the afterseed of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob,—i.e. to the children of Israel. The unconditional promises related to "the land" (Gen. xii. 7; xiii. 7; xv. 18; xvii. 7, 8; xxviii. 13; xxxv. 12); to the "multiplicity of offspring" (Gen. xv. 5; xvii. 6, xxii. 17; xxvi. 4; xxviii. 14; xxxv. 11; xlviii. 19; xlix. 22; Hosea i. 10; Zech. x. 6—9); to "the Gates" (Gen. xxii. 17); to God's blessing on them as a "great and mighty nation" (Gen. xii. 2, 3; xviii. 18; xxii.17; xxvi. 3, 4); "to the evangelising function" tied up to them alone (Gen. xxii. 18; xxviii. 14; Acts iii. 25); to the gift of the Word of God to them exclusively (Psa. cxlvii. 19, 20); to the Gift of abnormal "wealth" (Deut. viii. 18); to the gift of "the Sabbath" (Exod. xxxi. 13—17); to the "Decalogue" (Deut vi. 6—9). All these were God's unconditional gifts to His people: not a single condition can be shown to exist in any one of the passages where these promises are recorded. To make the statement that there were such conditions attached, is to add to the Scriptures, and so to incur the penalty prescribed for that deadly sin in Rev. xxii. 18. The promise of a perpetual monarchy in the line of David to the House of Israel, further, was an unconditional promise to Israel, as reference to 2 Sam. vii. 12—16; Jer. xxxiii. 17—26; 1 Kings viii. 25, will show. And all these great gifts became attached to Israel as distinct from Judah because they mostly belonged to the birthright, which was Joseph's or Ephraim's, as separated from Judah (1 Chron. v. 1, 2). Judah, besides, rejected Christ, and therefore lost "the kingdom of God," "the word of God" and all that appertains to that spiritual gift, as our Lord's words in Matt.

Digitized by Google

xxi. 43 clearly prove. The "nation" which inherited all these spiritual blessings was "the fruitful one" or "Ephraim," that is "Joseph" (Gen. xli. 52; Matt. xxi. 43). The conditional blessings were few, and almost all merged in the unconditional. Such were those described in Deut. xv. 6; xxviii. 1—14. But the British possess every one of these now, not one failing; and consequently we argue that the British, being admitted by our layman to be "Israel," God, who cannot err, has deemed them to be "Israel obedient" to-day, and therefore has given them the blessings conditionally promised to Israel but not otherwise! Under these circumstances the question of Israel's present wickedness and stubbornness, and popish proclivities, is quite beside the mark! Israel was never anything but a wicked, froward, rebellious, naughty nation, even from Egypt, till they were cast away into Media. And yet not even for five minutes did God separate them from His love and affection all that weary time! Even when He had carried them captive into Media for their sins, He sent messages of love after them, as Jer. iii. 12, R.V. affirms, and assured them "He would be to them as though He had not cast them off" (Zech. x. 6. R.V.), and "would be to them as a sanctuary for a little while" (Ezek. xi. 16. R.V.). When the Lord unconditionally announced that "He was a Father to Israel and Ephraim was His firstborn" (Jer. xxxi. 9, R.V.), the Ten Tribes were at that very hour open unrepenting idolaters in Media, and their national wickedness made no difference in God's love to them. For He loved them for two reasons, just as He does to-day, in spite of their wickedness and declensions:—1st, Because He loved them; and 2nd, because He would keep the oath He sware unto their fathers (Deut. vii. 7, 8, R.V.).

"He loves them because He loves them!" and their sinful character cannot alter that love a jot, or His resolve to redeem, convert and save them, by and through the work and precious blood of Christ, whose is the "Name which is above every name." The layman's dismal anticipations are therefore groundless fears, dishonouring to the character and promises of God! They give the lie to God's solemn declaration that this people shall not be punished by taking part in the tremendous wars coming upon the non-Israelite nations, but shall on the contrary be hidden in the hollow of His hand, and kept in safety, while the latter are destroyed (Zeph. iii. 8, 9; Isa. xxvi. 19, 20). But one word more. Let none suppose God loves His people to continue in their sins! God forbid! He has made full provision for that! He has arranged that Israel shall repent, be converted, be blessed with the outpouring of the Spirit, and be finally the blessed people whose picture is drawn in Jer. xxxi. 33, 34; Heb. viii. 10, 12; Joel ii. 28—32. So far as to the layman.

The clergyman's pathetic statement was that he regretted he could not accept, because he could not "see," the proof of Our Identity. His difficulty was that our nation was derived from cosmopolitan sources: Angles, Saxons, Jutes, Frisians, Celts, Normans, Romans, Danes and Teutons. He thought, therefore, on ethnological grounds they could not be Israelites who are of one Semitic, homogeneous race. The answer of course is that ethnic authorities tell us that, excepting the Romans, all the rest of our British ancestors were kinsmen, tribes of the same Eastern race, and that all came from the same part of Central Asia where the Ten Tribes were carried captive, and that they came away Westward about 100 years after Israel was located there (and therefore might quite possibly have been Israel themselves). These tribes arrived in this country from the East, just as God said Israel should. They were "mingled among all nations first," and yet were "gathered from among them" and given a "place appointed for them," of "their own," in "the Isles afar off" from Palestine (Ezek. xi. 16, 17; 2 Sam. vii. 10; Jer. xxxi. 10, R.V.).

But, said the cleric, "I have still a fresh difficulty. If the British are Israel, then the people from among whom they came, such as the Germans, the Danes and the Franks, must have been and must be Israelites too. How is this to be met?" We replied that this was a non sequitur. God engaged, in Ezek. xi. 17, to assemble and gather, out of the nations, His people, whom He had scattered among them previously; and is it right to say that what is impossible to man, is therefore impossible to God? Is anything too hard for the Lord? God caused Israel to be "sifted among all nations as corn is sifted in a sieve, and yet He has not allowed a grain to fall upon the earth" (Amos ix. 9), but has drawn all away from their Gentile companions, and brought or is bringing them still, safe to their haven in the "West." Such were the difficulties raised, and such the answers sketched out on the occasion; to the satisfaction, we must hope, of the objecting parties.

SIR JOHN LUBBOCK ON THE BRITISH NATION.

OUR readers have doubtless seen Sir John Lubbock's letter in the Times of March 18, controverting Mr. Gladstone's and others' statements "that there are four real nationalities within the compass of the United Kingdom." There is so much in his statement which bears upon our own views of the Israelitish origin of the British folk, that we do well in quoting some paragraphs of the letter for the information of our BANNER friends. He begins thus:—

It is worth while to enquire what the facts really are. As regards South Britain, it will be generally admitted that, omitting the question of pre-Celtic races, Wales and Cornwall are predominantly Celtic, that the South and East are predominantly Saxon, with a considerable Norman intermixture; that certain districts are mainly Scandinavian; that our population is built up of three principal elements—Celtic, Saxon and Scandinavian.

In Ireland the population of the East and North is mainly Saxon, in the North-west Celtic, while in the extreme South-west the basis is Iberian, akin to the population of parts of Spain. Very many of those who imagine themselves to be Celts, and the natural foes of the Sassenach, are descendants of English colonists, even in Munster and Connaught. The Parnells, Grays, Moores, Burkes, Fitzgeralds, M'Mahons, Barrys, Butlers, are Anglo-Norman. I pass to North Britain. Here we are met at once by the curious fact that the Saxons were in Caledonia before the Scots. In fact the Scots were an Irish tribe. Ireland, says Bede, "was the original country of the Scots."—"Ibernia propria Scotorum est patria." "Scotia was originally Ireland," said Bozius—"Scotia, quæ tum erat Ibernia." The Scotch came from Ireland, says Marianus, "Scotus, de Ibernia insula natus." Ireland, says Chalmers in his great work, was "known at the end of the third century as the native country of the Scots, and in after ages by the name of Scotland; this appellation was afterwards transferred from Ireland to Scotland;" and he asserts, as the result of all his inquiries, that no permanent settlement of the Scotch in Caledonia took place till towards the close of the sixth century.

In fact, down to the middle ages, if a person was called a Scot it was meant that he was born in Ireland. I must not overwhelm you with quotations, but, having given several of the earliest authorities, perhaps you will allow me to quote two of the latest. Mr. Bonwick says, "the real Scotia was Ireland, whose name got transferred to North Britain," and Mr. Taylor, in "Words and Places," remarks that "the Scots, this conquering Irish sept, which appears to have actually colonised only a part of Argyle, succeeded in bestowing its name on the whole country." Argyle is indeed the country of the Gael or Irishman. In the North of Scotland, the Orkneys, and Shetlands, the population is mainly Scandinavian, Sutherland being so named as the Southern portion of their territory. In the East and South the population is mainly Saxon. Edinburgh is a Saxon city, built by Edwin, King of Northumbria, and called after him.

Thus, then, in Scotland, as in England, the East is mainly Teutonic, the West mainly Celtic.

Huxley and Beddoe have both pointed out, and it will be generally admitted, that the people North and South of the line dividing England and Scotland are practically identical. On the other hand, so far from Scotland being inhabited by a single homogeneous people, the struggle between the East and West was bitter and prolonged. A Mac Donald burnt Elgin in 1402; and, says Burton, "It will be difficult to make those not familiar with the tone of feeling in Lowland Scotland at that time believe that the defeat of Donald of the Isles (at Harlaw) was felt as a more memorable deliverance even than that of Bannockburn."

Digitized by Google

I maintain, therefore, that the defence of Home Rule, on the ground that there are four "real nationalities" in our islands is entirely without foundation. If, however, we are to be divided at all according to blood, the divisions would not be into England, Scotland, Ireland, and Wales. The main division in Great Britain would be not from East to West, but from North to South; the Saxon division would include the greater portion of the East of England, the East of Ireland, and of Scotland; the Celtic division would comprise most of the West of Ireland and West of Scotland, with Wales and Cornwall; the Scandinavian the North of Scotland, several maritime districts on the East, Westmoreland, Cumberland and Pembroke, while the extreme South-west of Ireland would be Iberian.

The exact limits would give rise to an endless number of bitter disputes. Indeed, so much intermingled are the different races that one of our highest authorities, Dr. Beddoe, after careful and prolonged study, says:—"With respect to the distribution and commixture of race elements in the British Isles, we may safely assert that not one of them, whether Iberian, Gaelic, Cymric, Saxon, or Scandinavian, is peculiar to or absent from, or anywhere predominant in any one of the three kingdoms." This being so, I submit that any argument in favour of Home Rule based on the existence of distinct nationalities falls utterly to the ground, while the effect of rousing race antagonisms, from which we have suffered so terribly in the past, and which are now happily latent, can only add to our political difficulties and tend to weaken the British Empire; while, on the contrary, if we recognise the undeniable ethnological fact that English, Irish and Scotch are all composed of the same elements, and in not very dissimilar proportions, it would do much to mitigate our unfortunate dissensions and add to the strength and welfare of our common country.

I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

JOHN LUBBOCK.

House of Commons, March 18.

The latter part of the above letter is remarkable, since it gives Dr. Beddoe's opinion that the various elements which go to make up the so-called three kingdoms are now completely fused and commingled. Saxon, Gael, Khumri, Dane and Northman are all found everywhere; and the whole United Kingdom, including even Ireland with its Spanish-Iberian (probably its Phœnician) elements, occupied by a race which is the "amalgam" of many tribes. They are all Easterns; and they were, as regards all but the Iberian element, kinsfolk. They came from different parts, and reaching the opposite coasts of England, Scotland and Ireland as they approached from the West of Europe or from the Mediterranean, Spain, or the South of France, they have since become welded into one race, an Imperial one. The varieties of language we find North and South of the Tweed and across the Irish Channel are not indications of the variety of the race, but show that contact has produced its usual result, and caused a diversity in pronunciation and idiom, and even of language itself, among the same people, according as they have settled to the North or to the South of these Islands. As a united whole they represent not "four real nationalities," but one single race, "Israel of the Isles." For they all came from the exact spot in Central Asia where the Ten Tribes were carried away captive. They reached these shores just as God said Israel should,—namely, as a people scattered and mingled among several alien races. Once they reached these Islands they united in England at once under a Sovereign head, and in process of time the three kingdoms and the many ostensibly different races became one and indivisible.

It is vain, then, for Mr. Gladstone and his Irish allies to allege that the Irish are a foreign element among us, requiring to be treated as an alien race, and given a liberty to separate politically. For such measures would ruin the Empire, and bring God's purposes as to His people to the ground, in confusion and destruction. In proof that our statements are correct we find our United Kingdom the centre of an Empire which is endowed with all the blessings God promised to give to His people Israel exclusively. The Empire has become "a great and mighty nation," blessed of God in every possible imaginable way; "multitudinous" beyond conception; therefore a multitude of colonial nations ready to federate and become "a nation and a company of nations;" "wealthy" beyond all other races; "possessing the Gate of their enemies;" dominant at sea; with "a Heathen Empire" such as the world has never seen before; and yet blessed with spiritual blessings such as God promised to no race but His people Israel only. We have the custody of the Word of God and the duty to disseminate it. We have the Sabbath and the Decalogue, and the privilege devolving upon us of preaching the Gospel of the grace of God to all nations, families, and kindred of the earth, to the glory of the Lord Jesus Christ, who is God the Son, and yet the Son of God, and Man. The wonderful picture, then, of the British people drawn by Sir John Lubbock, is nothing more than the picture of God's people Israel, as we see them here in our British Islands, the place of God's appointment, where He said He would gather them and cause them to dwell in peace and safety, as it is this day (2 Sam. vii. 10). To Him be all the praise!

A LIVERPOOL INCUMBENT ADMITS OUR IDENTITY TO BE TRUE.

By C. W. E.

BRITAIN IN THE NEW TESTAMENT.—A lecture was delivered last evening on the above subject in St. Athanasius' schoolroom, Chancel-street, by Mr. E. P. Dix, hon. secretary of the British-Israel Identity Association, the chair being occupied by the incumbent, the Rev. F. J. Parkinson. In the course of his remarks the lecturer referred to the national blessing included in Joseph's birthright, and in conclusion endeavoured to show that as the British people are now enjoying privileges which appear to fulfil the covenant promises, therefore they must be the rightful heirs, and the people to whom Christ, St. Peter, and St. Paul specially addressed themselves under the new covenant or Testament. The Rev. Chairman said he had been greatly interested in the study of the subject, and had come to the conclusion that in its main points it is perfectly Scriptural, and hoped his parishioners would give it their careful and prayerful attention. A vote of thanks was unanimously passed to the lecturer, and the meeting closed with the doxology.—Liverpool Evening Express, April 26, 1887.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

SIR,—The above is a cutting from the Liverpool Evening Express, of the 26th of April, which deserves more than a passing notice. Seeing that it is the first time, so far as we have been able to ascertain, that a clergyman of the Church of England in Liverpool has proclaimed publicly the truth of British-Israel's Identity on Biblical lines. I am sure your readers generally will rejoice to hear of the fact with thankfulness that Liverpool contains one clergyman who has dared to acknowledge his belief in the truth of the Identity, and publicly preach it, notwithstanding the prejudices of many and the sneers and scoffs of others, which might for a time injure his stipend, but this we are happy to say is not likely to occur, if we may judge from the appearance of his Church, which is largely attended by men (young and old), this being unusual in Liverpool audiences, for the great majority are usually females, who are more easily attracted by kindness and sympathy rather than the strong reasoning of the minister. Men are often differently constituted, and seek a ministry where they can get reasonable answers to reasonable questions and doubts, and if this is not supplied them they quietly lapse into indifference, and not unfrequently into open and avowed infidelity. We trust sympathisers with the Rev. Mr. Parkinson and the Identity truth will rally round him so as to make his ministry a complete success.

ERRATUM.—BANNER, No. 539, page 169, column 1, line 13, read "*Reh*oboam, Solomon's son."

Digitized by Google

Review.

"Seek and ye shall find." Who are the Israelites, and Where are They? By J. T. Crosthwaite, 5, Maunder's-terrace, Dublin. 6d. per doz.; 1s. 6d. per 50, and 2s. 6d. per 100.

The above is the first of a series of leaflets by the author, and the design is to make known the Identity of the British people with the Ten Lost Tribes of Israel. The leaflet is arranged in the form of questions and answers, there being twenty questions propounded, and all shortly and concisely answered. The whole story of the Identity is thus clearly stated in outline, and hints afforded to an enquirer for the fuller investigation of the subject. The chief points taken up in this leaflet are the Scriptural distinctions between Israel and Judah—their captivities—the limits as to time of their dispersion—the Tribe of Benjamin—Israel's condition in exile; their appointed place of safety—the British Islands—Cui bono?—the unconditional promises of God to Abraham and his seed—Israel's sign, and the proofs of the truth of Scripture derived from the continued separate existence of the House of Judah and of the House of Israel. We are not sure that the dialogue form of instruction is one that is popular with people in general. The present series, however, has the recommendation of novelty, and it contains a vast amount of information on our subject which ought to command success.

THE "BANNER" BRITISH-ISRAELITE JUBILEE FUND.

Church Missionary Society.

		£	s.	d.
1887.	Amount acknowledged on page 163	9	10	3
April 9.	—Miss Hulley (5, Camden-crescent, Bath)	1	1	0
„ 13.	—Mrs. M. A. H. (East Charlton)	0	1	6
„ 18.	—Mrs. and Miss Lawrence	0	5	0
„ 18.	—Miss Browne (Ripon)	0	5	0
„ 21.	—Mrs. A. Sealy (1, Kent-avenue, Ealing)	0	5	0
„ 22.	—Surgeon-General Grant (Cheltenham)	1	0	0
„ 26.	—F. C. (London)	1	0	0
„ 26.	—L. E. J. (Lymington)	0	2	6
„ 26.	—Faith (Paddington)	0	2	6
„ 27.	—Mrs. Place (Sherborne)	0	10	0
„ 30.	—J. M. (Leamington)	0	10	0
„ 30.	—Mrs. N. „	0	5	0
„ 30.	—C. F. „	25	0	0
„ 30.	—Mr. E. W. Bird (Philo-Israel)	1	0	0
		£40	17	9

The Jews' Society.

		£	s.	d.
	Amount previously acknowledged	2	17	6
April 5.	—K. T. (Camberwell)	0	10	0
„ 9.	—Miss Hulley (5, Camden-crescent, Bath)	1	1	0
„ 26.	—C. J. H. (Lymington)	0	5	0
„ 29.	—Martha (Ulverston)	0	3	0
„ 30.	—Mr. E. W. Bird (Philo-Israel)	1	0	0
		£5	16	6

The Bible Society.

		£	s.	d.
	Amount previously acknowledged	4	6	9
April 9.	—Mrs. J. Deprose	0	1	0
„ 9.	—Miss Hulley (5, Camden-crescent, Bath)	1	1	0
„ 9.	—An Anglo-Israelite (Bath)	0	5	0
„ 21.	—Mr. H. W. Gosdey (Tooting Graveney)	0	1	0
„ 21.	—Mrs. A. Sealy (Ealing)	0	5	0
„ 26.	—F. C. (London)	0	10	0
„ 26.	—C. J. H. (Lymington)	0	5	0
„ 26.	—Faith (Paddington)	0	2	6
„ 27.	—C. P. T. (Per Miss Rush)	0	5	0
„ 27.	—Miss Rush „ „	0	2	6
„ 27.	—Mrs. Rush „ „	0	2	6
„ 27.	—Miss E. M. Rush „	0	2	6
„ 27.	—M. O. „	0	2	0
„ 27.	—A Recent Israelite „	0	2	0
„ 29.	—Miss Cox (Abingdon)	0	2	6
„ 30.	—Mr. E. W. Bird (Philo-Israel)	1	0	0
		£8	16	3

Correspondence.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

Dear Mr. Editor,—During the many years in which the Banner has been constantly read by me, I have not seen it remarked, that there is more than a possibility of our Queen being doubly decended from the Kings of Judah through Baruch, son of Neriah, son of Maaseiah the "king's son," Ahaz being that king (see Jer. xxxii. 12; 2 Chron. xxviii. 7), which seems to be also established by the fact that Seraiah is called, in Jer. li. 59, a prince, and he was brother to Baruch, being likewise descended from Maaseiah through the same parentage. Consequently all these were royal princes of Judah. Also I note that Jeremiah of Libnah and of Anathoth were identical, because Libnah had fallen into the hands of Sennacherib of Assyria, and Anathoth being the nearest Levitical city, there would Hilkiah's family be living at this time—Jeremiah being son of Hilkiah. It is a most interesting family history, introducing us later on to the very natural circumstance of Jeremiah taking his great granddaughters, the princesses of Judah, to their uncle's house in Egypt, he having been expatriated.

Here at Tapanhes (Daphnæ) we see the meeting of Jehoahaz with Zedekiah's daughters, their aged great-grandfather Jeremiah, the prince-scribe Baruch, and their following, previously to the going forth "to build and to plant" (Jer. i. 10) a colony safe from the wars which were to devastate Egypt (Jer. xliii. 10) so soon, and thus to bring about events the revelation of which in our time are so moving and so dear to every Anglo-Israelite.

Truly it is well to "seek," and "out of the book of the Lord," as said Isaiah the prophet, and for the reason he gives in the same verse, for—"none of these (prophecies) shall want her mate (fulfilment), for my mouth it hath commanded, and my spirit it hath gathered them."

If my letter be in any way useful, dear Mr. Editor, you are welcome to publish it.

Your fellow worker,

Emily Pullen Burry.

Sompting, near Worthing, Easter Sunday, 1887.

DAWLEY CIRCUIT.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

Dear Philo-Israel,—Kindly permit me to thankfully acknowledge the following relief to the distressed here:—A Sympathiser, 2s. 6d.; Agnes Nuttall, 2s. 6d.; Mr. J. Dudley, 5s.; One who Sympathises, £5; A Mite for the Poor, C. E., 2s.; Martha Atkinson, 2s.; M. E. S. Liverpool, 3s.; Masonic, 5s.; Lady Jane Ellice, 10s.; G. W., Jun., £1.

All that has been sent has been faithfully devoted according to the expressed wishes of the senders. In some cases I told the receivers the names of givers, and asked them to specially pray for such, and I've witnessed them do so as their tears of joy fell fast. Now I see why God sent me here to aid in keeping His people alive, and to fulfil his eternal covenant. Almost all the relief I've been able to administer to the starving has come from readers of the Banner, so that it is here said that the Israel believers are more like God than are the ordinary religious folk, and I never deny that.

I do not ask for any more help, but ought to say that the public works remain closed, with no prospect of being soon open. The Food Relief Committee has ceased through lack of funds, with over three hundred poor families on the books. Many of these will have to enter the workhouse, as outdoor parish relief is so often denied them. To many of them who have been in comfortable circumstances, and even liberal in Christian efforts, it will be a heavy trial.

As this is probably my last letter to you on the subject, I thank you for the space you have so liberally allowed me. "I was an hungered, and ye gave Me meat. . . . Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these My brethren, ye have done it unto Me."

Yours in the trials and glory of Israel,

Henry Roe.

Rock Villa, Dawley, Salop, April 26th, 1887.

N.B.—As I am mentioned in the Banner as lecturing for Israel, Associations, I wish it to be understood that I lectured on my "African Experience" without breaking my Conference engagement. H. R.

Digitized by Google

NOTICES.

All communications intended for the Editor, to be addressed: "Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Clifton, Bristol.

SUBSCRIPTIONS. £ s. d.

Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free 0 7 6
Two Copies (including Double Numbers) 0 13 6
Three Copies ,, ,, ,, ... 1 0 4
Four Copies ,, ,, ,, ... 1 5 6
Six Copies ,, ,, ,, ... 1 16 4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-grand, London, to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C., or F. W. PARRY & Co., 29, Paternoster-row, London.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

Contents Bills and Show Cards may be obtained on application to the Publishers.

Advertisements should be sent to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

Prepaid Advertisements are inserted at the rate of thirty words for 1s. 4d.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION,

14, King William-street, Charing Cross, W.C.

Bible Readings on the Book of Hosea

Every TUESDAY afternoon (commencing May 3) at 3.30, lasting One Hour only. All are invited.

JAMES BILLINGTON, Secretary.

JUBILEE.—ONE HUNDRED SHILLINGS required to give a Tea-Dinner to sixty aged persons. Will any reader of the BANNER OF ISRAEL kindly subscribe? Letters acknowledged if desired.—J. W. SAVAGE, Schoolmaster, Sculthorpe, Fakenham, Norfolk.

New and Useful Work for Students of the Origin of the British Race and Their Mission.

Just published, price 5/-, free by post for Postal Order.

WHO ARE WE?

AND

WHAT IS OUR MISSION?

By J. THORNHILL HARRISON, of Ealing.

With Seven Maps, printed by the Woodbury Permanent Process, illustrating—

1.—Showing the Dispersion of the family of Noah after the Flood. 2.—Great Western and Eastern Plains. 3.—Colonisation of the Tribes of Dan and Asher from Phœnicia, B.C. 1,400 to 740. 4.—The Assyrian Empire, B.C. 710. 5.—Extent of the Persian Empire and its Division into Twenty Satrapies, B.C. 521 to 464. 6.—The Parthian Empire, B.C. 207 to A.D. 226. 7.—The World with the Commencement of the Christian Era.

The Work is printed on good toned paper, and handsomely bound in cloth, bevelled boards, with handsome design in gilt on cover, gilt lettered.

LONDON: ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet Court, Fleet Street, E.C.

Price 3d., post free 3½d.

PRESENT-DAY PROBLEMS,

How Anglo-Israel Truth Explains and Solves Them

BY V. M. COX.

Author of Ephraim-Israel, the Pivot Nation of Prophecy and History

"A book to read is 'Present-Day Problems: How Anglo-Israel Truth Explains and Solves Them.' By V. M. Cox. This little book is an excellent summary of the clearance effected in the great burning questions of the time, the moment it is understood that the Anglo-Saxon folk is the very Israel of God. Federation of the Empire, the Irish question, the Eastern question, our relation to Russia, our hold on Egypt, submitted to this solvent, become parts of one intelligible scheme. The paragraphs on Foreign Missions, as the special work of Israel, and on our relation to our fellows of the Tribe of Judah, are especially good.—The Messenger.

LEAFLET FOR THE YOUNG,

WHO ARE YOU?

Price 1s. per 100; postage 1½d.

To be obtained from the Hon. Sec., Anglo-Israel Association, 27, Pulteney Street, Bath; and of R. Banks & Son, Racquet Court, Fleet Street.

"A happy effort, well and successfully made, and likely lead to good results. The Leaflet teaches the Scriptural distinction between Israel and Judah. . . . The separate captivities. . . . Our nation's possession of the Gates, the Sabbath, etc."—Banner of Israel, Mar. 16, 188 7

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

THE NINTH ANNUAL MEETING

WILL BE HELD IN

EXETER HALL, STRAND, ON TUESDAY EVENING, MAY 24, 1887.

ADMIRAL BEDINGFELD in the Chair,

Addresses will be delivered on the following subjects:—

The Rev. C. W. HICKSON, M.A., of Bristol, "The Gentilization of the House of Israel."

E. W. BIRD, Esq. (Philo-Israel) of Bristol, "What place is there in the Divine Economy fo Our Identity, in the Present Dispensation."

The Rev. GEORGE HIDER, of Paignton, Devon, "The Practical Value of Anglo-Israel Truth.'

The Rev. ROBERT DOUGLAS, M.A., Vicar of Kidsgrove, "England's Jubilee—A Divine Manifestation of British-Israel's Truth and Duty."

The Chair will be taken at Seven o'clock precisely.

The ANNUAL MEETING of the Members and Subscribers, to receive the Report, and elect Officers for the ensuing year, will be held on MONDAY EVENING, MAY 23, 1887, in the Library of the Association, 14, King William Street, Charing Cross, London, W.C. Chair to be taken at 7 o'clock.

E. W. BIRD, Esq. (Philo-Israel) is expected to preside. JAMES BILLINGTON, Sec.

WORKS BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

The Geography of the Gates. With Map and six full page, and one double-page, Illustrations, printed on plate paper. 208 pages, in handsome cloth, gilt Price 3s. 6d., post free 3s. 10d.

An Elementary Digest or Sketch of the Chief Facts and Teachings of the Great Pyramid of Egypt. Adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific 56 pages, Illustrated with Diagrams, price 4d., post free 5d. 10th Thousand.

Our Identity with the House of Israel. Price 4d. Reprinted from "Clifton Chronicle Letters"

The History of the House of Israel: How they were Lost, and How they were Found, Told for the Children. Price 6d., cloth 1s.; post free 7d. and 1s. 1d. Fourth Edition. Eleventh thousand

A Resume of the Scriptural Argument, proving the Identity of the British Race with the Lost Ten Tribes. Price 1d.; 6s. per 100. New edition now ready.

Anglo-Israelism. True, Not False. Being Philo-Israel's Reply to the Rev. Canon Bell's pamphlet, "Anglo-Israelism: True or False?" Price 1d., 6s. 6d. per 100. 16 pages, crown 8vo.

R. Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Fifty Reasons Why the Anglo-Saxons are Israelites of the Lost Tribes of the House of Israel?

By Rev. W. H. POOLE, D.D.

"There is a principle which is a bar against all argument, and which cannot fail to keep a man in everlasting ignorance. This principle is, contempt prior to examination."—Dr. PALEY.

Price Sixpence, by post Sevenpence.

London: R. BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

ETHELINE

A New and most effective Remedy for CORNS.—Perfectly safe and harmless. Is very easily applied. Cures in a few applications, without the slightest pain. Everyone troubled with either Corns, Warts, or Bunions, will find relief by using ETHELINE. To be obtained of all Chemists, or post free for 14 stamps from J. LLEWELLYN, CHEMIST, COWBRIDGE.

THE TEETH, THE TEETH, THOSE PRECIOUS TEETH!

Save, Purify, Beautify.

GEORGE & WELCH'S

CARBOLINE

1/6 (TOOTH PASTE). 2/6 per Pot

Is the Best Known

Cleanser, Preserver, and Deodoriser.

Dental Guide says:—"No Tooth application equals the Carbolics."

Proprietors: GEORGE & WELCH, Worcester.

Through Chemists, or Post Free from Makers.

PHOTOGRAPHY EXTRAORDINARY

THE Jubilee SET

PRICE 3/6

Delivered by Parcel Post, 6d. extra.

Portable Stands, 1/- each extra.

By the aid of expensive machinery, and a demand from almost every civilised region on the globe, we are enabled to supply a Complete Set of apparatus for 3s 6d., and any person can now produce the most perfect Works of Art in Dry-plate Photography. The process is simplicity itself, the exposure being instantaneous. The portrait or view produced is a never-failing source of delight—old friends and old associations being ever with us.

OBSERVE.—This is not a Toy or a Joke or a Cardboard Camera or a Copying Process. We offer no £100 prizes (which, of course, the purchasers must pay for), we indulge in no advertising legerdemain; but we give the following marvellous Set of Apparatus, and defy the entire trade to equal it at six times the price. A Beautiful Mahogany Polished Dove-tailed Sliding bellows Camera, ¼-plate size, made of American hard wood, perfectly light proof, with dark slide and instantaneous shutter, powerful rapid French lens, developing and fixing solutions, box of special dry plates, and a book of instructions: enabling any person to produce photographs, either at home or on their holiday tour, equal to professional photographers.

67,000 ALREADY SOLD.

"The Vicarage, Wiveliscombe, Somerset, "December 10, 1886.

"DEAR SIR,—Your Jubilee Set is a marvel of cheapness and efficiency. My children are delighted with it, and we have turned out some really good Pictures.

"Yours faithfully, REV. J. T. TROTT."

Address MANAGER LL DEPARTMENT, the

AMERICAN CAMERA COMPANY,

399, EDGWARE ROAD, LONDON.

SHIPPERS AND THE TRADE SUPPLIED.

BRONCHITIS, ASTHMA,

COUGHS, COLDS,

CONSUMPTION,

and all Pulmonary Affections can be immediately relieved and rapidly CURED by simply using the

AMMONIAPHONE

FOR THE Voice, Throat, Chest, and Lungs.

21s. post free.

WILL LAST FOR YEARS.

Used and recommended by the Royal Family, and principal Physicians, Clergymen, Vocalists, and Public Speakers throughout the country. New illustrated Pamphlet with copies of Thousands of Testimonials FREE OF CHARGE may be had on application to Medical Battery Co. Ltd. 52, OXFORD STREET, LONDON, W.

Corner of Rathbone Place

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. F. W. PARRY (late GUEST & Co.), 29, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, MAY 18, 1887 [All rights reserved.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. XI., No. 543. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, MAY 25, 1887. [PRICE ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
Our Only Coaling Station on the North Pacific Ocean	205
David's Throne in Jerusalem	206
Where and Who are the Israelites? By the Rev. A. Ben Oliel.—Part III.	206
Report of the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association for 1886	208
British Commerce and British Wealth	209
Rukhmabai's Testimony to the Government of India	209
Miss Cox's Lecture at Bath	210
Mr. Martin F. Tupper and the Jubilee	210
Review	210
Correspondence	211

OUR ONLY COALING STATION IN THE NORTH PACIFIC OCEAN.

WHEN we say we have but one coaling station in the North Pacific we mean that we have but one single Gate there. It is a magnificent one, but it is our single Gate as yet. We noticed this Gate, Esquimault, some time ago (p. 406, vol. x., Dec. 13, 1886). Since then, however, wonders have been effected at that British-Israelite harbour. Some docks have been finished there which are capable of receiving the largest of our ships of war, and a great deal of Imperial money has been spent on them. Guns and armaments have been sent to this Gate, and it is clearly going to be made one of the strongest and most powerful of all our Gates. This is perhaps not one of "the Gates of our enemies," but it is a coaling station and an Imperial ocean fortress situated on our own colonial territory, which is destined to dominate the Pacific Ocean, and make us supreme there as elsewhere. But how has this been brought about? By the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway, which connects the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans by a road constructed altogether on British territory, 2,500 miles in length, and has brought the Pacific Ocean within 14 days' distance of the English coast. Before this railroad was built it took vessels two or three months to reach Vancouver's Island. The railway has brought us within a fortnight's communication of British Columbia, of which Vancouver is the centre.

British Columbia, as the Earl of Harrowby told us in the House of Lords on April 29, during a debate on the Canadian Pacific Railway, "has 450 miles of coast, has a climate of singular merit, excellent fisheries, the most magnificent timber, a soil suited for every kind of cereal, while gold is concealed beneath the soil. It has the only good coal supply on the North Pacific, and possesses a good dry dock." Of the three routes to the East—namely, that by the Suez Canal, the Cape, and Esquimault—the latter is the shortest to Hong Kong and China, besides being absolutely safe from our enemies' attacks, because the journey across the continent of Canada is on our own British territories, and the two sea routes in the Atlantic and North Pacific are over oceans which we can make, and which are virtually now, our own ocean highways. This route has the further advantage, as Lord Dufferin tells us, that it will enable our Government to send troops to reinforce India from the East as well as from the West; and this, he thinks, will have an "enormous effect upon the native mind of India." The Canadian people, being less than five millions in number, have expended twenty-five millions sterling on the great work of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and they have finished it in the incredibly short period of four years, whereas their engagement under the "Canadian Railway Pacific Act" only required that the 2,500 miles of line should be ready in May, 1891, or in ten years from the commencement in 1881. This railway, which is a strategic one, confers on our nation the following advantages:—It gives us a rapid through postal and passenger route to the East; a complete and independent telegraphic line to the East on British soil throughout; rapid and cheap transport for troops and stores to the East from our own land here; and lastly, the ships which are being constructed for the Pacific service are to be used as cruisers and fitted to carry heavy guns. The whole value of this route, and the certainty of the ocean transit in the Pacific, depends upon the strength of the ocean Gate at the Pacific end of the Canadian Railway. If that be made invulnerable (as it will be) then the whole route will be safe, and no other European Power will be able to take the supremacy of the Pacific from our grasp. Germany and Japan, it appears, are striving to secure the carrying trade between the East and Vancouver, but this we can and must prevent if we desire to retain the supremacy God offers us, which also He has secured to us by the gift of the Gate Esquimault. It is true there is an element of weakness in the surroundings of this Gate, since the approach to it from the Pacific is by the Straits of Juan de Fuca, and the Southern shores of that strait, commanding it, belong to the United States. But "there is a channel in the straits, admirably suited for large ships with an average depth of 100 fathoms which can be made impregnable at small cost." We see, then, the enormous value and importance of the Gates. That at Esquimault opens the road of access to India, China, Japan, Australasia, and to the East in general. God's promises to Israel guarantee that this Gate, which is one of their "own," "shall never be shut day nor night," but shall be "open continually, that men may bring to her the wealth of the Gentiles" (Isa. lx. 11). This mighty Gate will act, we see, with vast effect upon our nation's interests in the Pacific Ocean, and it will give force and effect to the strategic railway which connects the two seas, because it will furnish to its Western terminus an efficient defence and an impregnable harbour for the navies of Britain. These will certainly dominate the Pacific, and cover that ocean with British commerce to create "the wealth" which God promises to use "to establish His covenant which He sware to our fathers as it is this day" (Deut. viii. 18). In one sense Esquimault may be said to be one of "the Gates of our enemies" described in Gen. xxii. 17, for as we stated in vol. x., p. 326 and 327, on the authority of Sir Edward Palliser, Esquimault "dominates the Pacific, and absolutely commands the rear of any ring-fence of islands foreign Governments may think to set up round Eastern Australia." It commands our enemies, therefore, in a very practical and real manner, since it "dominates" the Pacific. The proposal with which our Government is now dealing is made to them by the Canadian Pacific Company. The latter proposed for £100,000 to be paid them as a subsidy "to build under Admiralty supervision vessels of first-class type, capable of steaming eighteen knots, adapted for the conveyance of troops, and also for conversion at short notice into armoured cruisers; to carry the Japan and China mails between the Atlantic port and Vancouver free of charge, to carry troops on service between the Atlantic port and Hong Kong at absolute cost, and to carry war materials and Government stores across the continent at absolute cost."

Digitized by Google

The Government are shrinking from the expense, but are prepared to give £60,000 for a monthly service of steamers to China and Japan, the Canadian Government accepting also a share of the burden. Here, then, is revealed a gift of God to Israel, a Gate of the first class, which is sure to add enormously to our nation's power and wealth, and to God shall be all the praise.

DAVID'S THRONE IN JERUSALEM.

In reference to the difficulty which we suggested on page 195 was attached to "Lamed's" view that David's throne and David's "sceptre over Israel" were two distinct things, and that Jer. xxxiii. 21 presented an obstacle to the acceptation of the new view proposed by our friend at Weston-super-Mare, the latter has sent us the following in explanation, which we beg our readers to consider. We believe the idea is not acceptable at all to Dr. Grant, and that he will oppose it either in these columns or in those of Hope and Destiny. We anticipate, however, that there is nothing unscriptural in the proposed reading of a difficult series of prophecies, and we seem to see a fitness of things in the idea which tells us (what is the fact, namely) that as the throne of David in Jerusalem has disappeared, so have the Levites, and so has "the Kingdom," or Ten-Tribed portion of God's people. When "the Tabernacle of David which is fallen down" is built up again, and the Ten-Tribed kingdom is restored to the land, then will the Throne, the people, the Temple, and the Levites also, be restored as at the first. David's throne was certainly established over the Twelve Tribes, not the ten; and it does not seem right to claim that it was transferred from Jerusalem, where it once was erected, and is yet to flourish, to the Isles of the West. The sceptre "being that of an Heir of the House of David" is, according to "Lamed," now wielded, not on the throne of David, but on "the throne of the House of Israel," which he regards as quite another matter altogether. The writer addressed us as follows :—

With your permission I would further suggest that the difficulty you refer to can be got over by understanding Jer. xxxiii. 19—22 as belonging to millennial days, in harmony with the rest of the chapter. To an English reader it does not seem necessarily to mean that from the days of David and onward a son should not be wanting to reign upon his throne. May we not date the commencement of this promise from "those days" and "that time" of verses 14, 15, and 16? The writer of Psalm lxxxix. brings in the sun and moon in connection with the certainty and perpetuity of the covenant with David (ver. 36, 37). Yet it is after that we read that the crown and the throne are cast to the ground (ver. 39—44). But the covenant is not "made void" in the sense of being cancelled, but only suspended; the throne is not destroyed, but only "overturned"; it is not given away to another family, but is being sacredly kept in reserve for David's son until the chastisement is finished (ver. 30—32). The Psalmist asks. "How long, Lord?" (ver. 46). How long will this state of things continue? And Ezekiel answers, "Till He shall come, whose right it is." Therefore the covenant is not broken, although for more than two thousand years there has been no occupant of David's throne. The covenant itself is an everlasting one; but man's faithfulness failed, therefore God in very faithfulness to His word caused the perpetual succession of kings upon David's throne to cease for a time. He forewarned them of the rod and of stripes, yet graciously declared, "Nevertheless My loving-kindness will I not utterly take from him, nor suffer My faithfulness to fail." Jer. xxxiii. describes a time of favour after judgment, from verse 6. When God remembers His covenant with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob; when He remembers the land; when He rebuilds Jerusalem; when He remembers His people and brings back their captivity, and forgives their sins and cleanses their pollution; then will He remember His covenant with David; the King will come; and from thenceforward David shall never want a son to reign upon his throne.

And another covenant is referred to in that passage, one made "with the Levites, the priests, My ministers." They, too, are to have a perpetual succession, and shall never want a man before the Lord "to offer burnt offerings, and to kindle meat offerings, and to do sacrifice continually." Where are the Levites now? Is not the fulfilment of this double covenant with the throne and the altar, with the Church and the State, a future one? Does it not belong to the time when Messiah will sit as a Priest upon His throne? when not only the overturned throne will be set up again, but also the destroyed temple will be built again?—Yours, &c.,

LAMED.

Weston-super-Mare, April 25.

WHERE, AND WHO ARE THE ISRAELITES?

BY THE REV. A. BEN OLIEL. DELIVERED AT ROME, MARCH 28.

(Continued from page 177).

PART III.

THE subject which we meet to consider and examine at these monthly conversazioni, alternately with the cause of the Jews, is the theory of the identity of the Anglo-Saxons with the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel. For the benefit of those who were not present at the last meeting, it seems desirable to recapitulate the points I touched upon in the introductory paper I read a month ago, and at the same time meet the objections that were raised at the close.

First, I laid stress on the distinction between the Houses of Judah and Israel—a distinction pervading the Scriptures, and particularly the prophetic books, from the time of the division of the kingdom, and so markedly, that it is really strange that readers of the Bible should fail to notice it, and to take a distinct note of it, as I have myself failed to do for long years, in common with thousands of earnest students of the inspired Word.

Next, I pointed out that the Bible is virtually a detailed consecutive history of God's chosen people from the call of Abraham onward to the very end of time, interspersed with epitomised histories of the leading nations and empires of the world, mainly with reference to their respective attitudes towards Israel and to their ultimate destiny.

Digitized by Google

I then touched upon the only safe and logical rule of Biblical interpretation—namely, the literal. It is quite true that the Bible is full of figurative, poetical language, metaphors, allegories, symbolisms, types, emblems, similitudes, parables, proverbs, maxims, axioms, aphorisms, apothegms, and gorgeous imagery, like the effulgent splendour of the Eastern mid-day sky: these constitute some of the charming characteristics and fascinations of the incomparable Book; but all these modes of speech convey a definite significance—they all have a literal meaning, which it is not permissible to twist or wrench at any one's caprice or whim. The Bible breathes most profusely the poetic spirit, sometimes in the highest flights of imagination, and anon rising so loftily to sublime and magnificent ideas, which alone constitute the essence of all true poetry, that the phraseology becomes per force the purest prose, as witness that superb 40th chapter of Isaiah, whose elevated, grand conceptions of the Almighty challenge comparison with anything that ever sage or poet indited either in ancient or modern times. It also deals betimes with apparent paradoxes, and what reads very much like hyperbolic utterances; but even here it is only so far, and no further, than was consonant with the common parlance of the times, and having, therefore, likewise a definite import. Take, for instance, the objection raised from the words "Jerusalem and all Judea" flocking to John's baptism. The mind at once thinks of the Frenchman's "Tout le monde," and similar expressions, which nobody takes to be strictly literal. "All Rome was astir" the other day to witness the military review on the King's birthday; but no one imagines that babies left their cradles and servants forsook their indoor duties to be there.

The promise of MULTITUDINOUSNESS was the crucial point I dwelt upon, and I endeavoured to demonstrate that it had not been fulfilled in Palestine; and that, therefore, it must find its fulfilment in the posterior history of the people of Israel. It was objected that the stars of heaven are, after all, a calculable number; but then, in those early ages, there were no celestial globes, or star maps, and the people of ancient times, like those of our own days who are not practised astronomers, when they looked up to the skies on a dark night and a clear atmosphere, concluded that the stars were innumerable for multitude; and as every new telescope with larger magnifying lenses discerns more stars in the profundities of space, and dissolves nebulæ into clusters of stars, too far away to be visible to the unaided eye, I am not sure that we ever gainsay the inference which is drawn ordinarily.

My attention has been called to Moses saying to Israel, "Ye are this day as the stars of heaven for multitude" (Deut. i. 10), and so they were in comparison with the threescore and ten that went down into Egypt, and with which he contrasts them (ib. x. 22). In 1 Kings iv. 20, we read, "Judah and Israel were many, as the sand which is by the sea in multitude," but the writer of 1 Chron. xxvii. 23 does not seem to look upon the promise as exhausted in David's time.

The question really is, Did those reiterated promises of multitudinousness refer to any particular epoch in the national annals of Israel, or to all time, and whensoever the people were obedient to the voice of the Lord their God? If all those emphatic promises to the patriarchs of their seed becoming as the stars of heaven, the sand on the sea-shore, and the dust of the earth, meant no more than the numbers which inhabited Palestine of old, then they were indeed mere hyperbole, for, after all, the Israelites did not increase much more than the Ishmaelites, Edomites, and other peoples of antiquity, and certainly not to the extent that the Chinese have. I incline to the conviction that a closer examination of Scripture proves that the promise was not exhausted by the increase during the Egyptian bondage, in the wilderness, or in Palestine; and that it is to be a continuous characteristic of the chosen people, and ample confirmation of this view is found in the fact that the promise of multitudinousness is repeated long afterwards.

Hosea, who prophesied almost exclusively of Ephraim-Israel, depicting in darkest colours the terrible calamities that were to befall the rebellious, idolatrous, and immoral House of Israel, in the midst of his awful denunciations breaks out, like the sun's rays piercing the black clouds of a stormy sky, into words of consolation and hope. He says, "Yet," or in spite of all that, "the number of the children of Israel shall be as the sand of the sea that cannot be measured nor numbered" (chap. i. 10). This should be accepted as conclusive evidence that the promise has not been exhausted, abrogated, or cancelled, but still applies, and will meet with even larger and more notable accomplishment. The Bible everywhere implies this peculiar feature of the people God had set apart for Himself, that the more they are oppressed the more they multiply. They were to be indestructible, or, as Dr. Saphir calls them, "the everlasting nation." Look at the Jews of the present day. They are as numerous now as at any time since Solomon's reign, despite all the terrible losses and calamities they have so frequently endured; but the Jews are only a fractional part of the people of Israel. They themselves deny that the Ten Tribes joined them at the restoration or during the second temple, though doubtless some did.

"Where are the ancient Egyptians, Assyrians, Chaldeans, and Medes? Where are the Phœnicians, Carthagenians, and Macedonians? Where are the Hittites, Amorites, and other nations of antiquity? Where are the formidable, conquering legions of proud Rome? Where are they all?"

"But there is a people to whom God has said: 'Fear thou not, O My servant Jacob, saith the Lord, neither be dismayed, O Israel; for, lo, I will save thee from afar, and thy seed from the land of their captivity: and Jacob shall return, and shall be in rest and be quiet, and none shall make him afraid. For I am with thee, saith the Lord, to save thee; though I make a full end of all nations whither I have scattered thee, yet will I not make a full end of thee: but I will correct thee in measure, and will not leave thee altogether unpunished" (Jer. xxx. 10, 11).* Here, then, is an indestructible people destined to survive all other nations.

I have been told that the prophets predict that Israel would cease from being a nation. I have searched for any such prediction in vain. What I find is, that God, speaking by Hosea, says that He "will cause the kingdom"—observe, it is the kingdom, not the nation—"of the House of Israel to cease" (chap. i. 4). This is admitted on all hands. No one pretends that the kingdom of Israel exists still. No, the kingdom of Israel, as distinct from Judah, has ceased for ever. It was a rebellious kingdom—a corrupt, idolatrous kingdom; and it was destroyed and blotted out from off the face of the earth. But, as to the nation of Israel, the Bible is full of predictions of its continuance, as is proved by the prophecy of Jeremiah already quoted, and that glorious promise is as emphatically repeated by the same prophet in chap. xlvi. 28, not to refer to other similar promises throughout the prophetic books. The Anglo-Israelite theory does not hold or teach that Israel exists as a kingdom, but as a nation and a multitude of nations. The kingdom is Judah's, agreeably to prophecy; and this point will be discussed (D.V.) in due course. It would be premature to dwell on that part of the subject now.

I concluded by remarking on the singular and extraordinary fact, that if the mighty empire of the Anglo-Saxons, mightier far than any which have preceded it, is not identical with the House of Israel, prophecy seems absolutely silent regarding it! This is hardly conceivable. I said it was impossible. But assume that the two peoples are identical, and then the Bible is full about them, and has distinctly foretold, not only the actual spread and power of the Anglo-Saxons, but also their ever increasing and expanding destiny, till they shall become

*See the first of the writer's three Roman Lectures on the Jews, to be had from him. Address, Via Palestro, 29, Rome, and sent to all contributors to his mission work.

Digitized by Google

"the fulness of the Gentiles." "In days to come," saith the Lord, whose word cannot fail, "shall Jacob take root; Israel shall blossom and bud: and they shall fill the face of the world with fruit" (Isa. xxvii. 6).

A large class of Christians say, All this is very beautiful and sublime, and it is quite true when applied to believers in the Lord Jesus. I do not deny that in a secondary sense some of those predictions may be applied to the spiritual Israel, whether they be Jews or Gentiles; but their primary and direct reference, and in most cases their only application, is unquestionably to the literal Israel; else Christians must appropriate to themselves also the terrible denunciations against Israel, dealing mainly with temporal matters as the natural outcome of spiritual blessings. There is no legitimate, rational alternative, and it is idle to attempt forced, ungrammatical interpretations, offensive to common-sense and uprightness of thought. In the vast majority of cases Israel means Israel—literal Israel, whether in weal or woe. It cannot be literal Israel when God says, "Ye are not My people," and some one else when He says, "Ye are the sons of the living God," for this last is said of the very same people, and in the very same verse (Hosea i. 10).

It is high time that we should have done with those illogical, inconsistent, contradictory misinterpretations of the Word of God, for thereby we are simply forging handles and levers for infidels, and unwittingly undermining all evidence in the divine inspiration of the Scripture. It is dishonouring to God, who is ever true and faithful to His Word and promises. I feel persuaded this needs only to be pointed out clearly, and to be brought home to the hearts and consciences of believers, and they will readily come to think differently, and think with higher admiration and greater reverence of the oracles divine.

I have thus met every objection or difficulty that has been raised on my first address on this subject. Let us now consider another crucial point closely related to that of multitudinousness of people—I mean

MULTIPLICITY OF NATIONS.

(To be continued.)

REPORT OF THE METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION FOR 1886.

YOUR Council, in presenting their ninth annual report, desire to acknowledge the goodness and mercy of God vouchsafed them in the growing success and prosperity of the Association.

The past year's history of the Society has been marked by those various vicissitudes which are the common experiences of all earthly institutions. New friends have come forward to help, old ones have passed away; nevertheless the good hand of our God is upon us, and your Council are conscious that the Friend of Israel will carefully keep and prosper the people of His choice until His word concerning them shall have been accomplished, to the glory and honour of His great name, and the name of Jesus, His ever blessed and eternal Son, and Israel's great Redeemer and King.

It is with sorrow your Council mourn the loss of friends, who from the first have been connected with the welfare of this Association. The Association suffered a severe loss by the death of its President, the late Right Rev. Bishop Titcomb, whose important services rendered to the cause of British-Israelite truth can never be forgotten, almost his last public act being to issue to the world a plea and a defence in the interests of our common cause, which we trust will indeed be a message of truth to the Church in the 19th Century. The love and esteem in which this honoured servant of God was held by British-Israelites are universally acknowledged. Two other members of Council are numbered with those who have gone before us—Admiral Dunn, who presided at the Association's first annual meeting, and William Haslam.

In November last the amalgamation of the British-Israel Association with the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association was accomplished, and it is believed that this union will tend to consolidate and strengthen the cause of the truth which all Anglo-Israelites have so much at heart. This event again brought the Rev. James Billington into the office of secretary. Mr. Billington was one of the founders and first Secretary of the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association, and your Council have pleasure in stating that his great experience and energy have already borne fruit in an increase of members, as well as in an increase of work.

Early in this year the Association entered into the occupation of new and larger premises, at 14, King William-street, Charing Cross. Your Council sincerely hope and believe that this move will greatly add to the prosperity of the Association, as the rooms they now occupy are tolerably spacious, and well furnished and fitted. The new premises were opened by the Lady Jane Ellice on April 18th, 1887, her ladyship on the occasion being supported by many of the oldest and best friends of the cause.

LECTURES, your Council believe, should form an important part of the Association's work, and they have pleasure in stating that since January of this year over THIRTY have been delivered by the Secretary under the auspices of the Association. The places visited include Essex, Devon, Somerset, Surrey, London and its suburbs; Dublin, Ireland. Lectures have also been delivered by Mr. Douglas A. Onslow and other members of the Association.

BIBLE READINGS are held weekly on every Tuesday afternoon in the library of the Association's rooms, and have been well attended. Sundry other meetings have shown the advantages possessed by the new premises for the proper working of the Society.

THE FREE DISTRIBUTION OF LITERATURE was first commenced in 1879, eight years ago, and has always been considered a most important part of the Society's operations. Several parcels have been sent during the past year, in addition to which about 3,000 copies of various Identity publications have been sent to the crews of various lightships, extending from the Humber to Land's End. As special opportunities are afforded of judiciously distributing literature through the various affiliated associations, friends are desired to send their contributions for this department of work direct to the Secretary at the offices of the Association, 14, King William-street, Charing Cross, W.C.

THE INCOME OF THE ASSOCIATION during the past year has been for the General Fund £195 14s. 8d., and the expenditure £185 9s. 6d., leaving a balance of £10 5s. 2d. to carry forward to the next year. A special fund for the furnishing of the new offices, the total cost of which is £50, has realised £32, leaving a balance of £18 still to be raised, which your Council feel assured will soon be accomplished by special donations of friends before the close of this anniversary.

In conclusion, your Council view with satisfaction the growing favour with which Anglo-Israel truths are received. Unexpected channels are opening through which they are enabled to make known the faithfulness of God's promises made to this nation, His chosen people, and they believe that this Jubilee year of the reign of our most gracious and much beloved sovereign Queen Victoria will be significant for the success of the British-Israel Cause in general, and for the increasing prosperity of the METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

ABERGAVENNY CORRESPONDENT.—The publications you mention were published in England by Messrs. Banks. They are "out of print." A pamphlet entitled, "Our Place in History," by De St. Dalmas, can be had of the before-mentioned firm for 6d.

Digitized by Google

BRITISH COMMERCE AND BRITISH WEALTH.

THE value of the exports and imports of the United Kingdom for the year 1885, is stated in a letter in the Times, of Feb. 1, 1887, under the well known signature of J. C. R. Colomb, to be £644,000,000 or more than two million pounds sterling a day for every week day throughout the whole year! But this does not give the full idea of the Empire's wealth, for the exports and imports of the outlying portion of the British dominions amount to £434,000,000 and this vast sum, added to the sum total for the United Kingdom, brings up the total of the whole to £1,078,000,000, as the value of the exports and imports of the British race throughout the world, or nearly three millions sterling per diem for every day in the year, Sundays included! Where are such totals as these exceeded or ever approached in the fiscal history of any nation, past or present? Surely such a commerce and such resultant wealth has never been enjoyed by any nation since there were nations upon the earth? The British being Israel the reason for the thing is apparent: God promised to that race and to them exclusively "the power to get wealth," for the special purpose that "He might establish His covenant which He sware unto their fathers, as it is this day" (Deut. viii. 18 R.V). The subject of discussion in the Times, however, was not the wealth of the British nation, so much as the percentage they pay annually to safeguard the enormous commerce which God has given them as a race, as a means to the end proposed—namely, "to get them wealth."

The insurance they pay is the cost of their naval armaments, which exist to protect the world-wide commerce. This cost is just now 12 millions sterling, which is $1\frac{3}{5}$ per cent., as compared with the total exports and imports of the United Kingdom, but only one per cent. and a trifle over as compared with the value of the commerce of the whole Empire. That God means us to defend our outland possessions seems to be apparent from the fact that He early promised to our forefathers that the Israelite Empire would in the latter day assume the strategically strong aspect of a Federation of States. The idea of Federation implies united effort for defence and commerce; and the presence of Israel's enemies on all sides of their world-wide possessions is met, in the providence of God, by the military and naval expedient of the possession by His people of the Gate of those enemies, a protective, defensive measure, proving that He means us to employ ordinary effort to safeguard our outlying Empire. To the same effect is the precept in Isa. xxvi. 20 where Israel is directed to "enter into her chambers" or strongholds (or Gates) and "to shut her doors" about her. These commands plainly prove that not to Divine protection alone, without human means, does God mean Israel to trust for safety in the time of trouble yet to come. Human means are to be used in dependence upon God's blessing, and without them there is no promise or guarantee of safety. With the home in the Isles of the West the case seems to be different; for there the Lord has promised safety from foreign aggression, and even immunity from threatened blockade, which is the privilege of His people Israel only, but not the promise of any other race on the face of the earth. The blessings promised to Israel are indeed all of them exclusively theirs, unique in their character; their commerce is unique of its kind, and can only be described as "world-wide," for their "seed was to be in many waters, and water was to flow from their buckets" (Num. xxiv. 7, R.V.). Their wealth was to be phenomenal, for their "power to get wealth" was to be God-given for a specific and sacred cause, namely, that He might by that earthly wealth "establish His covenant which He sware unto their fathers as it is this day." The comparative list of exports and imports of various nations published on p. 54 of this year's vol. of the BANNER shows how immensely our wealth and commerce exceed those of the leading foreign nations. While ours in that computation was described as worth 623 millions sterling, France owned a commerce valued at less than half that sum—namely, 315 millions, the United States at 290 millions, and Germany a few years previously 326 millions. Our own most favoured country, then, leads the way, being nearly twice as prosperous as the Germans, who approach nearest to ourselves. Israel, praise ye the Lord!

RUKHMABAI'S TESTIMONY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

OUR readers have all doubtless read the pitiful story of Rukhmabai, the Hindu virgin wife of a man she detests, and with whom she will not live. She was married to him as a child of 11 years of age and now at years of discretion she hates the idea, and will not fulfil her contract by becoming his wife. At Hindu law she has lost her case; and now she is to be compelled by the British criminal law to undergo the punishment she has incurred by refusal to live under the protection of her lawful husband. Her case, as the Bishop of Carlisle wrote to the Times, on April 9, is hard in the extreme. Her appeal to the Queen is, he says, "infinitely pathetic," and her cry for help against the cruelty of the Hindu law is one which must be heard and answered by the great British people! The tribute of this afflicted but gifted Hindu lady to the government of Queen Victoria, as administered by our public officials in Hindostan, is worthy of a place in the BANNER. She illustrates by her powerful panegyric the words of Scripture which declare that Israel is a "righteous nation" (Isa. xxvi. 2). We ask attention to her words, and then beg our opponents to tell us whether Rukhmabai is right or wrong? and whether there is any other government on the face of the earth whose justice and righteous dealing equals ours?

She wrote these burning sentences when pleading for the millions of Indian women who claim the Empress Victoria as their "Mother;" and look to the British people to liberate them from an awful thraldom. She said:—

> Everywhere it is considered one of the greatest blessings of God that we are under the protection of our beloved Queen Victoria's Government, which has its world-wide fame for best administration. If such a Government cannot help and unyoke us Hindoo women, what government on earth has the power to relieve the daughters of Ind from their present miseries?
>
> This 50th year of our Queen's accession to the most renowned throne is the jubilee year in which every town and every village in her dominions is to show their loyalty in the best way it can, and wish the Mother-Queen a long happy life, to rule over us for many years with peace and prosperity. At such an unusual occasion will the mother listen to an earnest appeal from her millions of Indian daughters, and grant them a few simple words of change into the books on Hindoo law—that "marriages performed before the respective ages of 20 in boys and 15 in girls shall not be considered legal in the eyes of the law if brought before the Court." This mere sentence will be sufficient, for the present, to have enough check on child marriages, without creating a great vexation among the ignorant masses.
>
> This jubilee year must leave some expression on us Hindoo women, and nothing will be more gratefully received than the introduction of this mere sentence into our law books. It is the work of a day if God wished it, but without His aid every effort seems to be in vain. So far, dear lady, I have dwelt on your patience, for which an apology is necessary. With best compliments, I remain, yours very sincerely,
>
> RUKHMABAI.

THE LONDON CHILDREN'S JUBILEE.—It is proposed to give a treat to about 30,000 children attending the London Board and Voluntary Schools. The Prince of Wales is president, and Mr. Lawson (of the Daily Telegraph) is the hon. secretary and treasurer to the Fund. The proprietors of the before-mentioned journal contribute one thousand pounds.

Digitized by Google

MISS COX'S LECTURE AT BATH.
April 28th, 1887.

Anglo-Israel Association.—Yesterday afternoon a lecture was delivered at the Assembly Rooms by Miss V. M. Cox on "Past and Current History and its testimony to Our Identity with Israel," before a fairly large audience. The chair was taken by Mr. E. W. Bird, "Philo-Israel," who congratulated the Bath branch on its growth and success. Alluding to Miss Cox, he said that a previous lecture she delivered was greatly appreciated, and had been published in pamphlet form. Her subject of that afternoon was an excellent one, for enquirers concerning their belief always wished for historical information. She was not going to bring up the dry bones of the Anglo-Saxon, Celts and Teutons, but would deal with more recent periods. Miss Cox, who at the commencement of her address alluded to the number of converts that had of late years been made to their theory, was listened to with much attention.

[The above Lecture was repeated by Miss Cox, at Clifton, on April 29th, and will shortly be published, in extenso, in the pages of this journal.—Ed.]

MR. MARTIN F. TUPPER AND THE JUBILEE.

"That much ridiculed body, the Anglo-Israelites, whose theory of the British identity with the Lost Ten Tribes is conventionally designated 'a craze,' have just secured a notable adherent to their creed—no less a personage than Martin F. Tupper, of whose magnum opus, 'Proverbial Philosophy,' it was not long ago exultingly announced that 'the two hemispheres have absorbed a million and a half copies.' The venerable philosopher, who is now in his seventy-seventh year, has just published a 'Jubilee Ode,' in the third stanza of which the declaration occurs which will undoubtedly cause rejoicing among the 'Identity' brethren :—

"'Jubilate! raise the song,
Loud with triumph deep and strong;
Let the trumpet swift and sharp
Meet the soft and loving harp—
All ye sons of music come,
Viol, cornet, flute, and drum—
Clanging steeples, cannons roar,
Hurl the joy from shore to shore,—
Jubilate! shout the song,
Thrilling, joyous, loud, and long—
Jubilate! fling the sound,
All the startled nations round,
Israel lost, and Israel found!'

That the last line is no mere poetical fancy (as proceeding from the pen of an arch-framer of 'quaint conceits'), is borne out by a reference to the preface, where the author speaks of 'Britain and her dependencies, the true Anglo-Israel of God.'"

The above, taken from the Liverpool Courier of March 11, speaks for itself. We are not sure that Mr. Martin Tupper means much by his expressions in the Jubilee Ode. We are informed by one of his relations that he means nothing. To ourselves it is a matter of pure indifference whether great names adhere to our views or not. Ours are true views, according to our belief, and we know, that if true, they must and will prevail, though all mankind oppose; and if false, they must collapse, though all the world affirm them to be true. There is no doubt, however, that the teaching of "Our Identity" is now largely accepted in quarters where, till quite lately, it would have been ridiculed and rejected. We attended a meeting of clerical and lay friends not long since, to discuss a subject bearing on the Identity, where, in fact, it was the principal topic of conversation. There were present four clergymen and nine laymen. Of these, six laymen declared they were full believers in "British Identity with Israel." Two of the clergy "could not see it," as they declared (using the language of "the blind;" Isa. xlii. 19). One expressed no opinion, and the fourth clergyman was doubtful. Of the laymen, one was utterly opposed; another took no part in the debate: and a third thought there was a "good deal in it." This, we suppose, is about the proportion in which, in society at large, our views are accepted, rejected, or treated with silence and disdain. The clergy are almost all opposed or indifferent; of the laity, a fair number, perhaps not quite so large a proportion as above indicated, are favourable, and few are still violently opposed, and a large minority are unable yet to see their way to adopt our views, and do not take the trouble to become informed.

Our duty, under the circumstances, is to continue our efforts to enlighten public opinion, and in season and out, to force our convictions before any who will listen, in view to their acceptance. We know of no better way to carry out these objects than an impromptu lecture, explanatory of the Imperial Federation League's Map of the British Empire, just issued for £1 1s., by Messrs. W. and A. K. Johnston, called "the Howard Vincent Map." At the close of the meeting in question, we were requested by the host to explain this map, which he had just obtained from the publishers, to the members of his own family. We found that Identity light, thrown on this map, made the subject of our Israelite origin perfectly clear to the small audience, and secured several intelligent believers. We trust our readers will try the experiment for themselves, and mark its effect.

Review.

Who are We? and What is our Mission? By J. Thornhill Harrison. Robert Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street. 1887. Five Shillings.

The writer of this handsome volume, got up in the best style by Messrs. R. Banks & Son, and embellished with maps, is stated to have been a reader of the Banner for some time past. If so, he must indeed have differed from the editor and writers of that journal, for his work is totally at variance with its teachings. It is a Teutonic book throughout. It differs from the views of our own journal in many points, but in none more than in the reply given to the question, "Who are We?" We give some of Mr. Harrison's answers to this important question, that there may be no mistake as to his opinions. In chapter xiii., after a vast amount of preliminary investigations as to the previous history of the children of Israel, and of the Gentile races who have held dominant positions in the earth, the important questions are asked, "Who are We?" and "What is our Mission?" The answers are on page 182. The Israelites are first of all not the Mongols, Chinese, or Japanese. They are not the negroes of Africa. The Arabs are not the Israelites. There may be some among the Karens in Burmah, and some among the Brahmins and Parsees of India. There are vast numbers of the Israelites among the Afghans and Persians, and a good number among the Bactrians, Mervians, and other races just subdued by Russia. The Nestorians hold a large number of the tribe of Naphtali, and probably the Turks are of Israelitish origin. So far, so good. But our author gives us no proofs to show that these people now have Israelites among them, nor does he tell us why we are to come to the conclusions he announces.

When we turn to the inhabitants of Europe, however, we shall find that Mr. Harrison should have a warm supporter in the Rev. Robert Douglas, the author of "Ephraim-England," but can scarcely expect us to bestow much sympathy or approval on his work. On page 183 he declares that "the Anglo-Saxons are called Britains,' and that "the Welsh are the representatives of the Britains." Can Mr. Harrison mean by "Britains," those we know by the term "Britons"? or has he made a mistake as to the correct designation of this people? However that may be, he tells us the Welsh are Danites intermarried "with the children of Japheth." How he proves that point we do not know. Then as to Germany; the Germans of the present day, he says, are not to any great extent Germans, "but Israelites of the Ten Tribes." The present inhabitants of Saxony "are truly Saxons, and as truly Israelites." "The Teutons generally are of Israelitish origin." The French of Normandy, too, are of the Anglo-Saxon race, therefore Israelitish. In Spain, the Gothic tribes are Israelitish tribes. The Danes are of Dan, and the Swedes and Norwegians are of Israelitish blood. The English are Israelites, and so were the Phœnicians (pages 44 and 45), being of the tribes of Dan and Asher. According to the author's opinion (page 190), he also is pretty certain that the children of Israel are mingled among the peoples who now occupy the "Image territory" of Daniel's metallic image, and are now in spiritual subjection to Rome. On page 200, Mr. Harrison throws in his lot with the Teutonic theorists, for he says we English, "as Saxons, are not merely Israelites, but that we are of the tribe of Ephraim," and that, as such, it appertains to us, and is our mission, to bring back "as a present to the Lord," to their own land, the children of Jacob, both the Houses of Judah and Israel. Where he found in the four corners of the Bible that it is the mission of "the Tribe of Ephraim" to do this as he affirms, we know not. We thought that Isa. xviii. 1 and 7, and Zeph. iii. 9, 10, gave that honour "to the daughter of the Lord's dispersed," the scattered, outcast, Lo-Ammi, House of Israel, of the Ten Tribes, "a people terrible from their beginning hitherto." Ephraim, the Tribe, is never so described; Ephraim, the Nation, is. Is it possible our author does not know the difference? It is also reserved for Mr. Harrison, student of the BANNER as he has been, we are told, to pass by all that has been written in our journal regarding Gen. ix. 27, and to come to the conclusion (page 73) that the proper interpretation of that text is, that "Japheth was destined to be enlarged, as Noah foretold they should be, and, as they were to dwell in the tents of Shem, we learn that it was Shem who should cause their enlargement." The text says:—"God shall enlarge Japheth, and that He (God) should dwell in the tents of Shem." Mr. Harrison does not deign to notice the true reading, but without giving reasons for it announces that of our opponents, unaware probably that they hold it. On p. 189 Mr. Harrison reproduces the Rev. R. Douglas' sentiments, and declares that "the Church of Christ is to be found, however faulty and unworthy she may be, among the Teutonic-Protestant nations of the West of Europe, who, as we have endeavoured to prove, are Israelites, whom God in His good providence has been leading these many centuries, and preparing to accomplish His will." The Saxons, however, the author says in the same page, are "Israelites of the family of Joseph." In regard to "the stone cut out without hands" of Daniel's metallic image. the author, on page 188, contrary to all writers in the BANNER, declares it to be "the kingdom which our Saviour taught us to pray might come," that is, "the Kingdom of Christ and of God," and the time when "the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea." This seems to be the "spiritual kingdom" of our clergy, but not the kingdom of the stone, or "stone kingdom," as usually accepted (and rightly so) by our Identity writers.

Digitized by Google

In regard to the Restoration to Palestine, our author, on pages 197 and 198, seems rather confused. The Israelites are, he says, to be restored; but it is reserved for "England" to restore them and be their protector. They are to do this as "Ephraim, God's firstborn," and to take the lead in restoring the Jews and other Israelites to the mountains of Israel. But in Jer. xxxi. 9, 18—21, we read that Ephraim is "the virgin of Israel," not the Tribe, but the Ten-Tribed nation. We find in this instance, too, our author differs from the teaching of BANNER writers, and also, we must add, from that of the Bible itself. The provoking thing, however, is that Mr. Harrison does not stop to show where and how the BANNER was and is wrong, but without argument or even mention of the views of 99 out of every 100 Anglo-Israelites, asserts his own opinion, and so leaves it.

Having indicated the character of our author's views in regard to the questions, "Who are We? and What is our Mission?" we have little more to say of this book. We cannot now repeat the arguments we have often adduced before to prove the error of the Rev. R. Douglas' Teutonic notions, and those of the original Metropolitan Association, whose secretary then was the Rev. A. B. Grimaldi. What we wrote on those occasions must suffice. It is enough for us to have proved that Mr. Thornhill Harrison is a Teutonic theorist, and we have, therefore, no sympathy with his book, and really cannot recommend it. "Our Mission" is rightly described by our author, but if so how is it the Protestant nations do not join us in carrying it out?

Correspondence.

THE "BANNER BRITISH-ISRAEL" JUBILEE FUND.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR PHILO-ISRAEL,—After reading the letters of the Revs. A. Ben-Oliel and Eliezer Bassin, I shall be glad to be permitted to add a few words in confirmation of the propriety of your decision not to increase the number of the Societies that are to be the recipients of our Jubilee Fund.

While, perhaps, it is not unnatural that people, and especially Christian Jews who are Missionaries to Jews, should expect us to regard with especial care our brethren of Judah, it may appear upon consideration, that by your allowing our gift its three divisions, as it finally stands decided, you have, in fact, specially favoured Judah. Here is the proof. All who so desire may give their offering entirely to the London Jews' Society, one out of the three selected, therefore standing on equal ground with the other two. By the gift to the Jews' Society only Jews will benefit; but what of those to the others? We will not be so rash as to think that never a Jewish man or woman in any land is offered the Gospel of salvation from the devoted Missionaries of the Church Missionary Society. Grant this, and the balance of equality referred to above becomes at once disturbed. But let us note, in addition, the peculiar work for the evangelisation of the Jews accomplished by the British and Foreign Bible Society. A suggestion of that work is intimated by the Rev. E. Bassin in his valuable and instructive letter, to which the following quotation more particularly refers, taken from an article entitled—"The Power of the New Testament amongst the Jews," which appeared in the Monthly Reporter of the Bible Society for December, 1886:—

"That the New Testament is no longer almost universally spurned by the Jews, as was formerly the case, is clear when it is seen that this Society has issued, in whole or in part, more than 90,000 copies of it in Hebrew alone; whilst in Judeo-German, Judeo-Persian, Judeo-Polish, Judeo-Spanish, and Arabic, in Hebrew character, more than 130,000 books have been disposed of either as New Testaments, New Testaments with Psalms, or New Testament Portions."

The whole article is well worth reading, for it gives evidence from both Missionaries and Jews, both Christian and unconverted, that the New Testament presented without argument, read in its own light, is winning its way marvellously, and compelling belief in the truth of the Gospel. What success, we may ask, would any of the Societies for the Propagation of the Gospel among the Jews have amongst the numerous Jews in foreign lands but for the Bible Society, which provides for them the New Testament in each language as required? Surely it is evident that this British-Israel Jubilee Fund is in favour of our brethren of Judah; and again I would express an earnest wish that it may be heartily supported. In slight addition to what has been previously said on its behalf, I think we may rejoice for one peculiar feature it has, thanks to the happy inspiration of those who first suggested the foundation of this Fund; our support of it takes us completely out of ourselves. Not for our own work is it established directly, but indirectly its effect will, I believe, be sure and lasting, for it can ever be pointed to as proof that British-Israelites, who realise the true import of what God is revealing in His Word, are not wrapped up in merely selfish considerations of the glorious blessings poured out upon our race in this life, but that they are in sympathy with all good work for the highest benefit of all mankind. So shall we be found to have striven to be true witnesses for God.

Though intentionally writing for one object, I am very wishful to say a word concerning the letter signed S. Sharp, which appeared also in this week's BANNER, headed "The Name of Jesus." I am anxious to endorse every word therein written; the letter gives an accurate and admirable description of what is the teaching of the BANNER on the point at issue; those who read, noting the full meaning of what they read, surely need not miss it. From my own experience I can confidently state that it is because the "Name of Jesus" is rightly valued, and the finished work of our Saviour, and our need for it, is continually set forth in the BANNER by you, its Editor, that the paper is accepted by many Christian workers whose lives are devoted to evangelistic work. and who would neither give the time to read the paper, nor would they distribute it if it were not distinctly in accord with, and helpful for their own life's work.

It is this special tone and teaching of the BANNER which will doubtless still constitute its charm as an "Identity" paper for all who recognise their own responsibility on account of the Light that is given us, and by those whose special sphere of work brings before them continually much sad evidence of carelessness and infidelity, which makes them thankful for every aid that will induce men to search the Scriptures, and prove their truth.

Ever sincerely yours,

E. M. RUSH, Hon. Sec.

Anglo-Israel Free Distribution Fund, Lee, May 7th, 1887.

Digitized by Google

NOTICES.

All communications intended for the Editor, to be addressed: "Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Clifton, Bristol.

SUBSCRIPTIONS. £ s. d.

Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free 0 7 6
Two Copies (including Double Numbers) 0 13 6
Three Copies " " " 1 0 4
Four Copies " " " 1 5 6
Six Copies " " " 1 16 4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-grand, London, to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C., or F. W. PARRY & Co., 29, Paternoster-row, London.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

Contents Bills and Show Cards may be obtained on application to the Publishers.

Advertisements should be sent to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

Prepaid Advertisements are inserted at the rate of thirty words for 1s. 4d.

A New Work on the Identity of Lost Israel

By the late BISHOP TITCOMB.

Now ready, in Cloth Gilt, Bevelled Boards, Imperial 8vo. Price 3s.; sent Post Free for Postal Order or Stamps.

A MESSAGE TO THE CHURCH
FROM
THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.
BY THE LATE
RT. REV. BISHOP TITCOMB, D.D.

The Kentish Mercury, April 21st, says:—"This book derives a peculiar and pathetic interest from the circumstances that the proofs of its concluding pages were revised by the author during the last few days of his life, and that its publication took place simultaneously with his death. One feels, in noticing a book under such circumstances, a special responsibility, when the author is removed beyond the reach of human criticism of whatever kind. But in truth it is impossible to glance at these pages without being struck by the deep and reverent research into the prophetic Scriptures which it manifests, by the tone of piety that pervades it, as well as the lucidity and eloquence of its style. Nor is it necessary to express concurrence with the views of the gifted and pious author in his prophetic theories to give this praise. Of course with regard to Dr. Titcomb's prophetic interpretations there will be much difference of opinion, but there can be none in the mind of any impartial person who reads this work, either as to the diligence with which he testimony of the prophets has been studied, or the earnestness of the expositor in stating his conclusions. Bishop Titcomb, it is well-known to those who have studied his works, was one of the school of prophetic interpreters who believe that the British Empire, or perhaps, more accurately speaking, the English-speaking race, are identified with those whom we have been in the habit of calling the 'Lost Tribes of Israel.'" [Then follow several extracts.]

London: Robert Banks & Son, Racquet court, Fleet-st F. W. Parry & Co., Paternoster-row, and all booksellers.

New and Useful Work for Students of the Origin of the British Race and Their Mission.

Just published, price 5/-, free by post for Postal Order.

WHO ARE WE?
AND
WHAT IS OUR MISSION?
By J. THORNHILL HARRISON, of Ealing.

With Seven Maps, printed by the Woodbury Permanent Process, illustrating—

1.—Showing the Dispersion of the family of Noah after the Flood. 2.—Great Western and Eastern Plains. 3.—Colonisation of the Tribes of Dan and Asher from Phœnicia, B.C. 1,400 to 749. 4.—The Assyrian Empire, B.C. 710. 5.—Extent of the Persian Empire and its Division into Twenty Satrapies, B.C. 521 to 464. 6.—The Parthian Empire, B.C. 207 to A.D. 226. 7.—The World with the Commencement of the Christian Era.

The Work is printed on good toned paper, and handsomely bound in cloth, bevelled boards, with handsome design in gilt on cover, gilt lettered.

LONDON: ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet Court, Fleet Street, E.C.

WORKS BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

The Geography of the Gates. With Map and six full page, and one double-page, Illustrations, printed on plate paper. 208 pages, in handsome cloth, gilt Price 3s. 6d., post free 3s. 10d.

An Elementary Digest or Sketch of the Chief Facts and Teachings of the Great Pyramid of Egypt. Adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific 56 pages, Illustrated with Diagrams, price 4d., post free 5d. 10th Thousand.

Our Identity with the House of Israel. Price 4d. Reprinted from "Clifton Chronicle Letters"

The History of the House of Israel: How they were Lost, and How they were Found, Told for the Children. Price 6d., cloth 1s.; post free 7d. and 1s. 1d. Fourth Edition. Eleventh thousand

R. Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Fifty Reasons Why the Anglo-Saxons are Israelites of the Lost Tribes of the House of Israel?
By Rev. W. H. POOLE, D.D.

"There is a principle which is a bar against all argument, and which cannot fail to keep a man in everlasting ignorance. This principle is, contempt prior to examination."—Dr. PALEY.

Price Sixpence, by post Sevenpence.
London: R. BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

5/- 1,000 CARPETS 5/-
FIVE SHILLINGS EACH.

THE BRITISH CARPET WEAVING COMPANY will forward to any address in the Kingdom, on receipt of Postal Order or Stamps for 5s., to the first 1,000 persons who apply for them, a genuine WOVEN Reversible CARPET, with handsome border, and woven in colours, large enough to cover any ordinary-sized room, as an advertisement for their goods. A Rug will be sent with the Carpet for 1s. 6d. extra. All Carpets are made and supplied by us direct from our looms, thus saving any middle profits. This extraordinary offer will not be repeated.—Address:

76, St. John Street, Clerkenwell,
LONDON. E.C.

N.B.—Agents wanted all over the Kingdom.

A BOON TO SUFFERERS.
HARNESS' ELECTROPATHIC BELT.
Testimonial

From Miss J. HOULDSWORTH, Rozelle, Ayr, N.B.

"I am glad to be able to tell you that the HARNESS' ELECTRIC BATTERY BELT has been very beneficial in strengthening the system generally, as well as instrumental in relieving the Neuralgic pains from which I have suffered.

NEURALGIA & DEBILITY.

Every man and woman suffering from any disorder of the Nerves, Stomach, Liver, or Kidneys, should at once stop physicing, and remit 2/6 for HARNESS' ELECTROPATHIC BELT (post free) and obtain immediate relief. Pamphlet and Book of Testimonials POST FREE. MEDICAL BATTERY CO. Ltd.
52, OXFORD STREET, LONDON, W.
Corner of Rathbone Place.

THE TEETH, THE TEETH,
THOSE PRECIOUS TEETH!
Save, Purify,
Beautify.
GEORGE & WELCH'S
CARBOLINE
1/6 (TOOTH PASTE). 2/6 per Pot
Is the Best Known
Cleanser, Preserver, and Deodoriser.

Dental Guide says:—"No Tooth application equals the Carbolics."

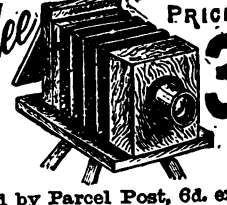
Proprietors: GEORGE & WELCH, Worcester.
Through Chemists, or Post Free from Makers.

NERVOUS EXHAUSTION.

PULVERMACHER'S WORLD-FAMED GALVANIC BELTS, for the cure of Nervous Diseases, have received Testimonials from three Physicians to Her Majesty the Queen, and over Forty Members of the Royal College of Physicians, London.

The distressing symptoms of Nervous Exhaustion and Debility are speedily removed by means of PULVERMACHER'S world-famed Galvanic Belts, which are so arranged as to convey a powerful electric current direct to the affected parts, gradually stimulating and strengthening all the nerves and muscles, and speedily arresting all symptoms of waste and decay.

Dr. VINES, Fellow of the Royal College of Physicians, writes, 19th September, 1885: "Having used Mr. Pulvermacher's Belts for many years, in the course of medical practice, I am in a position to speak of their great value as a curative agent in cases of nervous disease or functional malady where Electricity is likely to be serviceable. I am entirely convinced of their efficacy."



Dr. C. HANDFIELD JONES, F.R.C.P., F.R.S., Physicians to St. Mary's Hospital, says: "I am satisfied that Mr. Pulvermacher is an honest and earnest labourer in the field of science, and I think he deserves to meet with every encouragement from the profession and scientific men."

Dr. GOLDING BIRD, M.D., Physician, Guy's Hospital says: "I can hardly recommend Mr. Pulvermacher's invention too strongly to the notice of my medical brethren."

For full Price List and Particulars see New Pamphlet "Galvanism, Nature's Chief Restorer of Impaired Vital Energy." Post free from

Pulvermacher's Galvanic Establishment,
194, REGENT STREET, LONDON, W.

PHOTOGRAPHY EXTRAORDINARY
THE Jubilee SET
PRICE 3/6

Delivered by Parcel Post, 6d. extra.
Portable Stands, 1/- each extra.

By the aid of expensive machinery, and a demand from almost every civilised region on the globe, we are enabled to supply a Complete Set of apparatus for 3s. 6d., and any person can now produce the most perfect Works of Art in Dry-plate Photography. The process is simplicity itself, the exposure being instantaneous. The portrait or view produced is a never-failing source of delight—old friends and old associations being ever with us.

OBSERVE.—This is not a Toy or a Joke or a Cardboard Camera or a Copying Process. We offer no £100 prizes (which, of course, the purchasers must pay for), nor indulge in no advertising legerdemain; but we give the following marvellous Set of Apparatus, and defy the entire trade to equal it at six times the price. A Beautiful Mahogany Polished Dove-tailed Sliding-bellows Camera, ¼-plate size, made of American hard wood, perfectly light proof, with dark slide and instantaneous shutter, powerful rapid French lens developing and fixing solutions, box of special dry plates, and a book of instructions; enabling any person to produce photographs, either at home or on their holiday tour, equal to professional photographers.

67,000 ALREADY SOLD.

"12, Cazenove-road, Stamford-hill, N.

SIR,—I am very pleased with your 3s. 6d. Jubilee Set. It is really, without exaggeration, the cheapest and best apparatus I have ever purchased, and a friend of mine, who has also invested in one, fully endorses my opinion. "HARRY SALTER."

Address MANAGER LL DEPARTMENT, the
AMERICAN CAMERA COMPANY,
399, EDGWARE ROAD, LONDON.
SHIPPERS AND THE TRADE SUPPLIED.

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. F. W. PARRY (late GUEST & Co.), 29, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, MAY 25, 1887 [All rights reserved.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."

(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. XI., No. 544. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, JUNE 1, 1887. [DOUBLE NUMBER, TWOPENCE.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
"One Hundred Pennons!"	213
Mr. Froude on "The Unsprung World"	214
Where and Who are the Israelites? By the Rev. A. Ben-Oliel.—Part IV.	215
Israel's "Mistakes"	216
The People shall Dwell Alone. By the Rev. Denis Hanan, B.D.	217
Past and Current History and its Testimony to Our Identity with Israel. By Miss V. M. Cox.—Part I.	217
The Gates according to the "Messenger"	219
The Bishop of Manchester and the Jewish Race	220
The Company of Nations Approach the Sovereign	221
What Would be England's Duty in the Event of a Great European War? By Philo-Israel	222
A Russian's View of Great Britain	223
Progress at Peterhead, N.B.	224
June 20, 1887. By Standish Grey	224
The People that Dwell Alone. A Bible Study	225
Why I Accepted the Anglo-Israel Belief. By T. C.	225
Special Services at Westminster Abbey	226
The Anglo-Israel Free Distribution Fund	226
Israel's Scripture and Prayer Union	227
Correspondence	227

"ONE HUNDRED PENNONS!"

LORD GEORGE HAMILTON'S speech at the Royal Academy banquet on April 30, 1887, was a memorable one on every account. On that occasion he told this nation what sort of naval review it may expect on July 23rd next, when Her Majesty means graciously to inspect "the part of the fleet now in the home ports, and available for immediate foreign service." "That day," said his lordship, "we may without boasting declare that there will be seen paraded at Spithead a fleet superior in strength and power to any which has ever been inspected by any Sovereign in time of peace." "It will number," he added, "upwards of 100 pennons, which will include every variety of the most modern war ships, from the torpedo-boat with its gossamer skin of three-eighths of an inch to the great mammoth ironclad with its pachydermatous hide of two feet of iron. There will be present every variety of ordnance, from the 110-ton gun, capable of projecting a missile weighing 1,800lbs. a distance of six miles, to the rapid-firing machine-guns capable of discharging many hundred rounds of ammunition in a minute." Well may his lordship have concluded by saying that "all those who witness the forthcoming review will arrive at the conclusion that the fleet there paraded is no unworthy product of England's manhood and England's manufacturing skill." His lordship told his audience what BANNER readers know very well—namely, "that our British ocean-going steam-commerce is enormous, and ever increasing; and that it is double the amount of the whole sea-going tonnage of all other nations!" The problem is how that magnificent commerce is to be defended while crossing the seas? The Admiralty have taken two steps to effect this object. They have engaged the best and strongest vessels of the British Mercantile Marine, so that in time of war they may be converted into cruisers capable of holding their own in a naval engagement. Besides this they have come to an arrangement with the representatives of the colonies at the conference now sitting, the details of which we will state in Lord George Hamilton's own words. He said:—

We were anxious to seek the aid of the colonies and to ask them to join us in some kind of naval partnership, and the conference which is now being held seemed to afford a favourable opportunity for consolidating a plan which had long been maturing. The scheme has been assented to, subject to the approval of the Parliaments of the colonies concerned, and it will place one-fourth of Her Majesty's colonies and the Mother Country in a different position from that which they have hitherto occupied so far as naval defences are concerned. (Cheers.) As this desirable work has been consummated it is only right that credit should be given where credit is due. If this scheme is realised and bears fruit, it will have been brought to maturity mainly through the statesmanlike attitude adopted by the representatives of the colonies with whom the members of the Government have come in contact. (Hear, hear.) They have met us in no haggling or parochial spirit, for they have confidence in the idea of Imperial unity and solidarity; and if I venture to allude to this scheme to-night I do so because Her Majesty's Government, in common with all preceding Governments, attach the utmost importance to its realisation. We value it, not merely because it may and will make a substantial addition to the effective strength of the fleet, not merely because it brings the colonies into financial partnership with the Mother Country in supporting the cost of the Imperial Navy, but because it embodies the idea of identity of interests, the sense of common advantage, which is the only durable material which can weld together in permanent unity the Mother Country and the colonies. (Cheers.)

The arrangement arrived at, it seems, is this. The colonies of Australasia are to pay their old "Mother in the West" a subsidy of £120,000 a year alike in times of war and peace, and in return the British Government, through the Admiralty, will supply the Australians with ships and men to constitute "a permanent squadron of cruiser-hunters," to be kept in Australian waters. By God's grace and help the arrangement is now certain to be carried out, and the Parliaments of the colonies concerned will be sure to confirm the proposals, because the delegates were sent to this country on purpose to carry out the plan. Henceforth the British nation and her colonies will be one in respect to naval defence. The Federation thus happily commenced must speedily develop in respect to other matters besides the defence of the ocean highways of the world, and of the "Gates" of the colonies. "The nation and company of nations" promised in Gen. xxxv. 11 to Jacob and his after-seed, have now entered into "financial partnership," as Lord George Hamilton described it, and this "identity of interests in one direction with the sense of common advantage" will permanently unite the Mother Country and the colonies, making the whole what God said Ephraim-Israel's seed should be at last, "a multitude of nations," federated, united, and compact for "defence but not defiance." Surely the 30th April, 1887, will be accounted a day of vast importance to this our country henceforward; for on that day one of Israel's nobles and statesmen publicly made proclamation of the fact that "the British nation and her daughters" were become one upon the sea; that henceforth whoever touched them at the Antipodes touched her; and that the whole power and might of "the nation and company of nations," aided by their "Gates" throughout the world, would be used to quell the invader, and to bring him down to the ground defeated, conquered, and dishonoured. The arrangement so happily concluded with the Australian colonies, and New Zealand will ere long, we are confident, be accepted by the Cape Colonies also, in order that those valuable possessions and the Gate at Cape Town may be properly safeguarded in the interests of the mighty daughters of British-Israel beyond, and the vast commerce which passes by the South African colonies along the sea. The Canadian colonies are close to our own shores, and probably will not require the naval defence which the geographical position of the Australasian and South African possessions demands. They will, however, take up their position, no doubt, as our best and strongest allies, in line with their Australian and South African brethren, and then will come to pass the fulfilment of the promise that "a nation and a company of nations" shall be of Ephraim-Israel. To the Lord will be then, as now, all the praise!

Digitized by Google

MR. FROUDE ON "THE UNSPRUNG WORLD."

AT a dinner given to Mr. Froude, the historian, at the St. Stephen's Club, on the 15th December, 1886, the Lord Chancellor, proposed the health of the distinguished guest.

Mr. Froude, in his reply, dwelt upon the increasing jealousy with which the commercial prosperity of our colonies was regarded. Since, however, the present Administration had been in power there had been a unity of feeling, based on a unity of character and purpose, and upon a joint sense of responsibility, which led him to believe that if any crisis arose in the relation of England and her colonies to foreign countries it would be found that England existed over the whole surface of the globe as an "unsprung world," only requiring the magic wand of necessity to produce a united action, calling into play the vigour and courage which characterised the British race in all its offshoots.

Surely Mr. Froude must be an Anglo-Israelite! When he spoke of "England existing over the whole surface of the globe as an unsprung world," "ready to start into life at the touch of a magic wand," he approached very near to the state of things which is destined to be Israel's future according to the prophecies. "The kingdom and the dominion and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven," are yet to be "given to the people of the saints of the Most High," and they we know are "the children of Israel," for Psa. cxlviii. 14 distinctly tells us so. The greatness of the Imperial Power which exists in the possibilities of the Colonial Empire of Great Britain is accurately described in the well-known words of the Lord to Jacob: "A nation and a company of nations shall be of thee" (Gen. xxxv. 11). This seems to betoken a sudden appearance of the federation of nations which is to be the wonder of the world, and its master too! Froude can compare it to nothing but a world-wide "unsprung" empire, dormant now, but ready at a word to spring into being, a federation united in political action, and full of vigour and manhood and courage to dominate the world for its spiritual good. This, in fact, is the truth of the nineteenth century which fills the nations of the world with such dismay, and impels them by every means in their power to stay the onward progress of this world-absorbing nation, that advances in population, in prosperity, and wealth by "leaps and bounds." A communication has just reached us from Mr. W. H. Billing, Toronto, Canada, which encloses us Mr. Henry Wentworth Monk's scheme for a "World's Federation Company," very different indeed from that we noticed on Dec. 1st, 1886, in BANNER, vol. x., p. 472, No. 518. We believed then that Mr. H. W. Monk desired a "British Empire Company" to promote the idea of "the Federation of the British Empire." It now appears that he is anxious for what he never can attain—namely, a "World's Federation Company," in which all the nations will combine in one stupendous confederation, with Palestine for the capital of the world! This absurd and Utopian idea has only to be stated to be rejected! It flatly contradicts the revealed will of God in respect to His determination regarding the Gentile non-Israelite races; and completely destroys the idea of "the British Confederation," which alone is God's revealed plan for the future government and restoration of the world. We quote a portion of Mr. Monk's strange circular, but feel that an apology is requisite for offering to the reader's attention so grotesque a parody on God's purposes, as revealed in His Holy Word. Mr. Monk published the following on October 19, 1886, at Ottawa, Canada:—

THE WORLD'S FEDERATION COMPANY

proposes to unite in one grand organisation all the most philanthropic, as well as the most worthy and capable among men, that their combined influence may be exerted simultaneously over the whole world, in the hope that the great majority of the people of the more advanced nations may thus be induced to declare themselves in favour of now promptly securing the peace of the world for "many generations," by means of a confederation of "all nations"—Palestine to be the capital of the world, and every nation to be fairly represented in the world's Parliament there. That henceforth there shall be neither occasion nor excuse for war between nation and nation, any more than there is at present between province and province in this Dominion of Canada, or between State and State within the limits of the United States of America.

After stating that the shares of the undertaking are to be 100 dollars each, the prospectus goes on to speak of the prospects of profits in the following way:—

SHAREHOLDERS' DIVIDENDS

will doubtless be large enough when our object is accomplished and Palestine is recognised as the future capital of the world by the most advanced nations, for then, of course, we shall have proved ourselves the worthiest of all the world to possess wealth and honour and power, and we shall certainly then find ourselves actually in possession of these advantages, having fairly gained the confidence and respect of a world rescued from impending anarchy, and elevated to a much higher degree of civilisation and moral and intellectual advancement.

Faithfully yours,
HENRY WENTWORTH MONK.

Ottawa, Canada.

We see by comparison how grandly different is Mr. Froude's conception to Mr. Wentworth Monk's. The former reflects the purpose God has in view for His people Israel, and creates them a people "existing over the whole surface of the globe—a yet unsprung world," but one ready in a moment to rise in its might and cause the rest of the nations of the globe to submit themselves to the rulers of it, being God's viceregents and the subjects of God the Son! Mr. Monk's is a vulgar commercial speculation, of the earth earthy; having no support in God's

Digitized by Google

Word, and based upon an ideal which has no foundation in modern experience, or in the history of the nations of Continental Europe, past or present. "Wealth, honour, and power" Mr. Monk expects we shall nationally acquire when we shall have persuaded all the nations to join his little scheme of universal Federation and submit themselves to the British leaders in the capital of the world in Palestine. God gives wealth, however, to His people Israel only, and that for a certain prescribed purpose, as Deut. viii. 18 shows, and it is certain He is not going to give His land and "the place where His glory dwelleth" (Psa. xxvi. 8, R.V.) to any but the people of His choice, the Thirteen Tribes of Israel. The non-Israelite nations, quâ nations, will never obtain any inheritance there, and Mr. H. W. Monk's scheme is discredited already. He had better drop his plans and study for a time what God says in His Word He means to do with "the Inheritance of Israel" and whose it is destined to be in the times before us.

Mr. Froude is a traveller and a historian. He has seen "Greater Britain" and knows its power, present and yet future. He finds no "unsprung world" of Gentiles (non-Israelites) to play the leading part in the world's future action. He sees only "England and her Colonies" everywhere, and we recommend Mr. Monk to learn a lesson from Mr. Froude, who, he may depend on it, "knows."

WHERE, AND WHO ARE THE ISRAELITES?

BY THE REV. A. BEN-OLIEL. DELIVERED AT ROME, MARCH 28.

(Continued from page 208.)

PART IV.

MULTIPLICITY OF NATIONS.

THE Lord said to Abram :—"As for Me, behold My covenant is with thee, and thou shalt be the father of a multitude of nations ;" and then changing his name to Abraham, He said, "for the father of a multitude of nations have I made thee. And I will make thee exceeding fruitful, and I will make nations of thee, and kings shall come out of thee." So also Sarai became Sarah, and the promise was confirmed :—"I will bless her, and she shall be a mother of nations; kings of peoples shall be of her" (Gen. xvii. 4—6, 16). Isaac, blessing Jacob, prays, or predicts, besides fruitfulness, that he will be "a company of nations" (ib. xxviii. 3); and God confirmed this, saying :—"A nation and a company of nations shall be of thee, and kings shall come out of thy loins" (ib. xxxv. 11).

This promise of multiplicity of nations cannot apply to either Ishmael, the sons of Keturah, or Edom, any more than that of multitudinousness of people applied to them, for, as we have seen, it is renewed to Sarah in conjunction with the son of promise, and it is reiterated to Jacob. Nor could it have been fulfilled in the division of the kingdom, for that was a curse, not a blessing, and, by weakening the nations, became the precursor of the breaking up of both kingdoms, and of the dissolution of the commonwealth.

The terms of the promise demand special attention. To Abraham it is "a multitude of nations," or Goyim—Gentiles—it is the appellative generally translated Gentiles, and usually referring to non-Israelites; whereas to Jacob it is Kahal—"a company"—literally a congregation—"of nations." This implies clearly and distinctly united, affiliated, or confederated nations, rather than separate peoples; and there is, moreover, the singularity of a nation as well as a company of nations.

Again I say, assume, for argument's sake, that the Anglo-Saxons are Israelites, and how marvellously has the promise been fulfilled! There is the United Kingdom, the only one called United, though other kingdoms are similarly composed of several anterior smaller kingdoms; and there are the rapidly growing colonial nations in the Dominion of Canada, Australasia, and South Africa; while there is also the one separate nation—the United States of America, sprung from the same stock, and now a distinct people and government, but not a kingdom. And there is more—there is now serious talk of a Federation of the colonies with the Mother Country for purposes of mutual defence. When this is accomplished fully, I anticipate that the United States will join the Federation and participate in its commercial and political benefits.

Is not all this wonderfully like what was promised to the Patriarchs? What other people is there among the nations of the earth that can be said to correspond so fully and strikingly with those promises of multitudinousness of progeny, and a congregated or affiliated company of nations as the Anglo-Saxons do?

THE GATES.

And there is another most notable feature associated with these remarkable promises. God says to Abraham, "And thy seed shall possess the Gate of his enemies" (Gen. xxii. 17). This expression occurs only once again in the Bible—it is included with a slight variation, in the blessing bestowed on Rebekah by her friends before proceeding on the journey to become Isaac's wife.

Without giving any varied illustrations of the meaning of Gate among the Easterns, which can be easily found in any Cyclopædia or commentary—and the Bible itself offers the best—it will suffice to say, that to possess the Gate of one's enemies means to possess a commanding and controlling position on their borders, giving access, or forbidding access to the territories of those enemies. Need I remark how wondrously is this true of the Anglo-Saxons, to which there is no parallel in the history of any other modern Power! You will at once think of Gibraltar, Malta, Cyprus, Aden, Hong-Kong, the Mauritius, and of so many other islands and possessions of Great Britain.

Here, then, is another crucial test. How comes England, if the Anglo-Saxons are not Israel, to be in possession of this singularly striking promise made to Abraham and his seed? No one, I should think, would venture to assert that the promise had its fulfilment in Tadmor, or Talmyra, for it simply protected a caravan route, and was in no sense the Gate of an enemy's country. It was built, more probably rebuilt, by Solomon, whereas the promise clearly implies the possession of what had belonged to an adversary and was forcibly wrenched from him.

THE BIRTHRIGHT.

Let us now take a rapid glance at a memorable scene. The venerable patriarch, Jacob, is lying on his dying couch. Joseph, the viceroy of Egypt, is informed that his father is about to depart hence, and he hastens with his two sons to the side of his father's bed. The dying patriarch refers to God's promises of multitudinousness of progeny, and multiplicity of nations, and he declares that Ephraim and Manasseh shall be reckoned as his own eldest sons, Reuben and Simeon. In blessing the lads he intentionally puts his right hand on the head of Ephraim—the younger—and the left on that of the elder—Manasseh. Joseph wants to correct what he presumes is an oversight, but his father insists, and utters this remarkable prediction regarding their future destiny: "I know it, my son, I know it: he—Manasseh—also shall become a people, and he also shall be great; howbeit his younger brother shall be greater than he, and his seed shall become a multitude of nations" (Gen. xlviii. 19). I am quoting from the Revised Version, but own it is faulty. The correct rendering of the original is, "And his seed shall become the fulness of the Gentiles." This, necessarily, brings to mind the other, and only other "fulness of the Gentiles" (Rom. xi. 25), and the correlative "times of the Gentiles" in our Lord's prophetic discourse (Luke xxi. 24). In Moses' benediction of the tribes, we read of "the ten thousands of Ephraim, and the thousands of Manasseh" (Deut. xxxiii. 17).

Digitized by Google

What Jacob meant by comparing Ephraim to Reuben is found in 1 Chron. v. 1, 2, where it is said, that though Reuben was the firstborn, the birthright or primogenitorship had, for a just cause, been taken away from him, and had been bestowed upon Joseph's sons, and it is added: "For Judah prevailed above his brethren, and of him came the prince; but the birthright was Joseph's." We have seen who it was that Jacob put in the place of Reuben—it was Ephraim; and hence we read also of God calling Ephraim "His firstborn" (Jer. xxxi. 9). In Exod iv. 22 God says, "My son, My firstborn, is Israel," and here Ephraim, from among the Thirteen Tribes, is specified as succeeding to Israel's birthright.

The passage in 1 Chron. v. 1, 2, is a parenthesis, and perhaps the day will come when the successors of the present school of hypercritics will allege that it is an interpolation fabricated by believers in the Identity!

CUI BONO?

I must not proceed further, to allow time for conversation. Some of you may be disposed, perhaps, to rehearse a question which has reached me from a dear relative in England. "Cui bono?" he asks. I reply, whatever is revealed in God's Word must be good, and conducive to our good; and it must be good for you to know whether indeed you are of the seed of Abraham, God's friend—natural branches of the good olive tree (Rom. xi. 24)—and joint-heirs of the promises given to Israel. It seems to me that the following, among others, must be the fruits of belief in your identity with Israel. First, and foremost, greater reverence for the Word of God, and stronger faith and reliance on His promises; second, a higher standard of piety and of devotedness to God's service and glory, for you are the sons of God in a double sense (Hosea i. 10); third, an intenser interest in the spiritual welfare of your brethren, the Jews, and greater liberality in the work of evangelising them, to bring them to Jesus, "the King of the Jews," "the Prince of Israel," and the Saviour of the world. Such must assuredly be the results that may be naturally expected to follow the conviction that you are indeed and in truth descended from the people of whom God has said: "This people have I formed for Myself, they shall show forth My praise" (Isa. xliii. 21).

Having been led myself, providentially, to a belief in the substantial truth of this theory of the Identity of the Anglo-Saxons with the House of Israel, my brethren, I shall be glad to impart my conviction to you, for then, I feel persuaded, I shall win a deeper and more practical interest on your part, in my humble efforts for the spiritual good of my brethren and your brethren, the Jews, as also a larger share in your prayers for richer blessing on my labours among the Jews of Rome and of Italy. "Pray for the peace of Jerusalem; they shall prosper that love thee."

ISRAEL'S "MISTAKES."

THE St. James's Gazette is always good reading. The number issued on April 29th contained an article on "Our New Road to the East," meaning "The Canadian Pacific Railway" route viâ Vancouver's Island, to the Pacific Ocean. The gist of the article is that we as a nation are always making "mistakes" in our public policy; but that, by a sort of national "luck," we are always getting new "chances"; though our mistakes are such as "would prove the ruin of less 'fortunate' nations." Then comes the following singular sentence, in which "the Gates of our Empire" are clearly identified with strategic places which admit the foreigner by our own laches into the heart of our possessions in the Eastern and Southern seas. "For the last few years," wrote the journalist, "we have been steadily engaged in letting the foreigners into the Gates of that Empire in the Eastern and Southern seas, which the valour of our fathers (and a large number of happy 'flukes') acquired for us."

The writer deprecates our neglect to fortify our coaling ports and naval stations, and now we are firmly seated "in the half-way house to the East"—which, of course, is Egypt—"we have only been too anxious to run away again." We are calmly allowing our road to India, he says, to be threatened, and now that we have got hold of a safe route through Canada to Vancouver, and so to Hong Kong and the Antipodes, by the ocean route (which we have done nothing to deserve), it is to be expected that we should throw our latest chance away! We have haggled about the £100,000 for which the Canadians offered to institute a fortnightly service of fast steamers from Vancouver to the Chinese Ports, but have agreed to give £60,000 for a monthly service!

All these things appear to the St. James's Gazette to be against us. The writer evidently considers that we are indebted to "luck," or "chance," and a blind "Providence," for all the good things we have nationally obtained, also that our "mistakes" in Central Asia, Egypt, and elsewhere, will one day cost us very dear! He admits, however, and there is some comfort in this,—that no one can touch us on the land section of the new route viâ the Canadian Pacific Railway; "while the maritime portion lies through the open spaces of the Atlantic and Pacific, with no Spezzia, or Toulon, or Constantinople to trouble us anywhere. With Hong Kong properly fortified and stored on one side, and Esquimault on the other, and a sufficient fleet in the Pacific, we could send troops and goods to India though half Europe were in arms against us!"

These sentiments, however, are thoroughly ungodly, and start with the supposition that there is no God,—no divine interference with the affairs of our nation, and that our mistakes can ruin us, and our "lucky" acquisitions must, by accident, turn out for our good. The whole chain of reasoning is faulty and false. God is ruling in all our national affairs. He has put us where we are, and His hand directs our course, whether they appear to be mistakes or "lucky chances" to our editors. Our position in Egypt, and our apparent willingness to admit our enemies into that half-way house to the East, are under God's own directing care. We have to advance cautiously, lest we should become embroiled with France, and, therefore, God so compels us to progress, that, without yielding an inch to France, we hold Egypt with an apparently irresolute grasp, neither desiring to remain, nor wishing to give up our hold to a Power that will be sure to occupy the country to our disadvantage the moment we depart. Russia's forward position, on the frontiers of Afghanistan will probably some day be found to be necessary as a part of the plan which will end in Gog's destruction on "the mountains of Israel."

Thus it will be seen that the diversion on India will enable Russia to make a bold and successful dash on the holy places and Palestine, which will end in her own undoing. God's loving kindness to His people in giving them "the Imperial Route," through Canada to the Pacific, is His own way of constituting them the masters of the seas, both East and West of the Dominion. There is no luck and no chance in the matter from the beginning to the end. It was the same divine providence directing His people's wanderings which led Israel to "the Isles of the West," and then sent them to colonise North America, to seize and subjugate India, to occupy Australasia and South Africa, and to acquire possession of all the Gates of the routes—East, West, North and South—throughout the globe!

What strikes the journalist as "chance," is proof of the faithfulness of the Lord to "His servant Abraham, and his seed for ever." No chance directed our steps to Madras in A.D. 1639! But it was the first Gate seized which was to give us the whole of Hindostan. Many an apparent mistake or mishap has attended our nation's advance to power in India; but each of those we now see had a reason for its occurrence, and by means of each so-called "mistake," the advance of British-Israel's Râj was secured. Sir Hugh Gough's apparent defeat at Chillianwalla seemed a disaster which would probably have cost us India; but it led to the battle of Goojerat, the subjugation of the Punjab, the final defeat of the mutinous Bengal Sepoy army by means of the Punjab troops, and to the assumption, by Her Majesty the Queen of Great Britain, of her glorious title of Empress of Hindostan! So now the current history of the British nation is one continuous advance to power; though every now and then there may be apparent pauses in the flow of the tide, and momentary irresolution in the blind and faithless agents who are always, and all through their course, carrying out the pre-determined plans of their glorious King, Redeemer, and Almighty God. To Him be all the praise, and let not Israel take aught of it herself!

Digitized by Google

THE PEOPLE SHALL DWELL ALONE.

By the Rev. Denis Hanan, B.D.

I have found, and doubtless so have many, that, when the subject of the Identification of Israel is mentioned, a ready and constant reply is, "Is England a nation?" Answer, "Yes." "Then out of your own mouth you are condemned, for Balaam prophesied—'The people shall dwell alone, shall not be reckoned among the nations.' England is counted among the nations of the world, and therefore is not Israel. The Jews are not reckoned among the nations, and they alone are the people to whom the prophecy relates—that is conclusive."

It is well to be armed at all points, to be able to give an answer to those who oppose themselves, and although this objection has frequently been answered in the Banner of Israel, I may be permitted to direct attention to it again.

Let us consider what were the words used, and what they imply. Alone (badad) means separate; reckon (chashat), reflexive, means shall not reckon itself. Thus the text would read, "So it is a people that dwell separate, and shall not reckon itself among the nations" (or be reckoned).

This condition was exemplified in the time of the nation's glory and independence under Solomon; it was a people dwelling separate, and not reckoning itself among the nations; cut off from them by its unique faith and worship and law, and in a measure isolated by its frontiers.

So far from Judah presenting these conditions now, she is not a nation; is not dwelling separate, but is scattered among all nations, and is reckoned, and reckons herself, as subjects of whatever nationality she may find herself among. The argument from this passage which would make Judah All-Israel is indeed a forlorn hope.

Apply the prophecy to England. Here we have a people dwelling separate from other nations as in the days of Solomon. Protesting against their beliefs, separated by its faith—its law, and essentially by its frontiers; not reckoning itself among the nations, pursuing its own policy, fulfilling its own peculiar destiny, and not reckoned by the nations as being at one with them, feared, but not loved, because of that very distinctiveness.

But as Balaam is weakly quoted against the Identity, it is only fair that opponents should explain his prophecy concerning the latter-day multitudinousness of the people typified by the lion and the unicorn, or wild ox; whose seed is to be found in many waters—although nationally dwelling separate—and whose kingdom is to be exalted, although not reckoned among the nations. Where is the Israel that is to "do valiantly"? the inheritor of the covenant blessing quoted by Balaam, which was given to Abraham and his seed for ever? Will they say that Judah alone is yet to occupy the position that England occupies now? or will they open their eyes to the fact that Ephraim, and not Judah, is God's first-born?

PAST AND CURRENT HISTORY AND ITS TESTIMONY TO OUR IDENTITY WITH ISRAEL.

A Lecture by Miss V. M. Cox, delivered at Bath and Clifton on April 28 and 29, 1887.

PART I.

The belief that the English-speaking race is identical with the Israel of prophecy, is one which has long ceased to possess the characteristic of novelty. Whatever their merits or demerits, our arguments have now been before the public for its acceptance or rejection for forty years and upwards: that is to say, our foundation truths have had their able and enthusiastic advocates for quite as long as that. But our belief is not like some cut and dried scientific theory, established on the evidence of certain natural forces, which, under the same conditions never fail to produce similar phenomena. On the contrary it is ever receiving a fresh illumination from each new departure both in home and foreign politics, therefore our position must be incomparably stronger or weaker than it was twenty or thirty years ago. And events now move so rapidly that we scarcely think it rash to predict that another decade or two will set the question at rest forever; and satisfy all reasonable people that as surely as God's word is true, so surely the nation inheriting the Abrahamic promises is the literal Ephraim-Israel of the prophetic page, and that the supposed "Gentile parenthesis" of our clerical opponents is an egregious mistake, and a God-dishonouring misrepresentation as well.

For we steadily maintain, and we challenge disproof, that, if our position was strong in 1877 (the first year of the Banner's publication), every year since that date has witnessed events which have "made assurance doubly sure," and those who then believed we had truth on our side and who since have scanned the records of passing events with ever deepening conviction, now hold to their faith with tenfold tenacity, seeing, as they must do, that the promises to Israel are in course of daily, hourly fulfilment to this most favoured nation of ours; and being well assured that if indeed "coming events cast their shadows before them," still more remarkable confirmations of Our Identity await us in the all but immediate future.

In 1877 Anglo-Israelites could see plainly enough that Federation was bound to come eventually, but it was not then within the sphere of practical politics. There were plenty of near-sighted politicians (the race is nearly extinct, we believe), who were loud in asserting that our Colonies were useless and costly incumbrances, and that we should do well to allow them to drift away from us, the sooner the better. India, too, was supposed by such to be a valueless and dangerous possession; that day is past. No statesman to-day who would formulate such a policy could long be tolerated, and of separation we hear no whisper. On the contrary the progress in regard to Federation has been by leaps and bounds. It is already a burning question of the hour. We are beginning to understand what "the Empire" means. We are opening our eyes to the real value of "Greater Britain," and are little likely to return to the strangely mistaken ideas of fifteen or twenty years ago. The action of New South Wales at the time of the Soudan campaign was to Britons at home a startling revelation. For the first time the parent nation realised what might be the inestimable worth of the loyal affection and ready assistance proffered by her true-hearted sons on the other side of the globe. All honour to New South Wales, and not the less to those other Colonies who offered help as promptly and generously, though their assistance was not at that time called into requisition. The old British lion is little likely to forget "the first roar of the young lions of Tarshish," as the Banner appropriately designated the event in question; and a day is coming when their united strength shall be brought to bear with overpowering force on our deadliest foe, in a future possibly nearer than we deem, if the present aspect of the "Eastern Question" may be rightly regarded as the "shadow" of a coming event.

Digitized by Google

But the last two years have been richer in progress regarding the Federation movement than any previous ones. The Colonial and Indian Exhibition was in itself a powerful stimulus to it, besides being one of the most striking proofs of Our Identity with which we have yet been favoured. There, for the first time, Israel's "nation and company of nations" met, representatively, on a common soil and beneath one roof. Britons from Australia, New Zealand, the Cape Colony, Canada, and all the other portions of our widely extended dominions then heard the stirring strain of welcome penned by the Laureate for the grand occasion, and joined in the familiar but well-loved language of the National Anthem, that fitting expression of every true-hearted Briton's desires on behalf of the noble woman whose reign has seen the development of such an Empire as past history knows nothing of, and the parallel of which future history is not destined to produce, inasmuch as the "Stone Kingdom" of Daniel's prophecy is never to suffer destruction or decay, but to expand unceasingly till it fills the whole earth; and thenceforward to continue and to prosper perpetually. Reverting for a moment to the Colonial and Indian Exhibition: Surely it was in itself a marvellous confirmation of the truth we are striving to make known. From the moment of entering the building, objects met the eye on every side, which, to an Anglo-Israelite believer, continually recalled to the mind one or another of the predictions regarding the nature and extent of Joseph's inheritance. Even the "Daily Programme" offered for sale just within the turnstiles, bore on its cover a highly suggestive design, depicting in very truth "a nation and a company of nations," personified. The central figure is, of course, Britannia, who is seated on a lion, and around whom are grouped in a variety of graceful attitudes her daughters, Australia, Canada, New Zealand, the Cape Colony, and others, while dark-browed India, decked with gold and gems, stands in the foreground, gazing up into Britannia's face with an expression of reverential affection.

Passing down the Indian Court, the life-sized models of various native types, clad in appropriate costumes and widely diverse in complexion and features, yet representing races who all owe allegiance to a common sovereign, the words of Scripture came forcibly to remembrance, "Thou shalt reign over many nations, but they shall not reign over thee," for India we know contains sixteen distinct nations, all owning the sway of Great Britain. Again, the Colossal Arch in the Victorian Court (representing the quantity of gold yielded by that Colony since its foundation in 1851, which amounts to £216,000,000 sterling) as well as the diamonds in the Cape Court, and the stupendous mineral wealth of the Indian Empire, all served to remind us that Joseph's birthright should comprise "the chief things of the ancient mountains, and the precious things of the lasting hills," while the magnificent fruit trophy in the Dominion of Canada, and the splendid variety of food samples in every court suggested that the "precious things of the earth and the fulness thereof," are in the actual possession of that people whose great Colonial Empire has furnished material for such an unique display as that of the Exhibition of 1886.

And who could help asking the question, "What other nation on the face of the planet could produce a parallel to this? What would a Colonial Exhibition of Russia, France, Italy, Austria or Germany be like? Could such a thing exist?" We think not. Yet why? these are great nations, several of them with armies immensely larger than our own. Why cannot they colonise successfully, since there is but one among them whose attempts in the direction of colonisation have been crowned with any semblance of success?

Because, firstly, they have no surplus population which is bound to seek an outlet beyond the narrow confines of home; secondly, because they are not physically adapted for every variety of climate, and for taking root on a foreign soil, as Englishmen can. "As Englishmen can." Yes, but why can they? and why is colonisation obviously their destiny, and as obviously that of no other race on the face of the earth to-day? Only because Britain is Israel, whose clearly specified destiny it is to become "a multitude (or fulness) of nations," to inherit the desolate places, and to cause them "to rejoice and blossom as the rose." So that whether under the tropical sun of Southern India, in temperate New Zealand, or in ice-bound Canadian latitudes, whether in foggy Newfoundland, or fertile Manitoba, Britons multiply and prosper, because it is written, "He shall cause them that come of Jacob to take root; Israel shall blossom and bud and fill the face of the world with fruit."

And that this is being done, admits of not a moment's question. Among the most interesting objects in the late exhibition was a life-like model of a group of aboriginal Australians sitting around a wood-fire before one of their primitive encampments, "hut" it could scarcely be called, consisting only of a few pieces of bark propped against wooden supports fixed into the soil, and movable at a minute's notice in case of the wind suddenly shifting to a different quarter.

In the foreground of this remarkable group was placed a placard, bearing the following inscription:—"This camp has been erected, as it is thought it will prove of interest to many who have never seen anything of the kind before; for it is hard to imagine that less than fifty years ago, the only dwellings which existed on the site of the great city of Melbourne were similar to these, and the only sound which broke the stillness was the howl of the wild dog, the 'cooey' of the wild black man or the stroke of his stone tomahawk."

Only fifty years ago! and what is Melbourne now? A city already rivalling Birmingham, Bristol or Liverpool in commercial importance. Nor does Melbourne stand alone. Sydney, Adelaide and Brisbane, with many others, all attest the indomitable energy, power and activity of the British brain and the vigour of the British muscle; and nothing is more certain perhaps to-day to any one with a grain of foresight, than that Australia has a magnificent future in store. A grand cluster of nations, these Colonies of ours in the Southern seas! ours now, and always to remain so, forming part of a glorious chain of federated peoples that shall circle the world. Everything is unmistakeably "making" for Federation. The recent Colonial Conference is a decided step in the right direction. Were the Colonies opposed to the movement it would not be for us to force it on them, but as the proposals in most cases originate with themselves, the whole question becomes ripe for practical consideration.

It has ceased to be a dream too good to be true, a glorious vision incapable of becoming a realised fact. It has grown into a hope, bright and glowing, which for those who know our Israelite truth, becomes a splendid, happy certainty! Men who never gave Our Identity a serious thought are yet being used by God to carry out His foreordained purposes, working out in absolute blindness His divine designs. So the Imperial Federation League has been formed, and is already becoming an immense power in our land. A deputation from this League was cordially received by Lord Salisbury in August of last year, commenting on which event the admirable journal, "Imperial Federation" (the organ of the League), said:—

"The Premier of England, and the Secretary of State for the Colonies, not only receive the advocates of Federation with cordiality, but speak with unmistakeable warmth and sincerity of their deep interest in the question, and their determination to further the cause. Three years ago the whole scene would have been impossible! It is no affair of parties, scarcely even of men. The happy change is merely the outcome of that transformed public opinion which, with incredible rapidity, the League has half created and half revealed."

So it appears from the foregoing that what would have been an utter impossibility only three years ago, has actually been accomplished now! So fast are events moving! Statesmen may not yet be unanimous on the subject. Strange is the paradox presented in the case of a Liberal Unionist of note, who regards Federation as an absurdity, and of a leading member of the Peace Society who takes up a line of distinct opposition to the very measure which above and beyond every other is calculated to promote universal peace, just as disintegration must eventuate in universal discord. But such a view as Mr. John Bright takes of the question is happily quite exceptional. Federation is no party matter. It has some of its most enthusiastic advocates in the Radical ranks, while on the other hand many staunch Conservatives are ardent members of the society which has been formed for the furtherance of this unique object.

Digitized by Google

But what makes this splendid scheme so eminently practicable is that in all our colonies loyalty and patriotism are the prevailing sentiments. Rare indeed is the exception, as recent events have shewn. Mr. J. A. Froude has lately visited each colony in turn, with the specific purpose of ascertaining the state of feeling in Greater Britain respecting a closer bond of union with the Mother Country. What has been his testimony? In "Oceana" he has recorded it. "They claim still," says he, "their share in the inheritance of the nation from which they sprung; British they are, and British they wish to remain, and impossible as it is to weld together two pieces of steel while below the welding temperature, let the desire for a union of equality rise in England, and rise in the colonies to a sufficient heat, the impossibility will become a possibility and of all political possibilities the easiest."

And again:—"They prize their privilege as British subjects. They are proud of belonging to a nationality on whose flag the sun never sets. They honour and love their Sovereign, though they never look upon her presence. Separation, if it comes will be no work of theirs. Nor shall we part friends, as I have heard expected; for the dissolution of the bond will be regarded as an injury to be neither forgiven nor forgotten. If that step is once taken in some fit of impatience or narrow selfishness it will never be repaired; for the tie is as the tie of a branch to the parent trunk, not mechanical, not resting on material interests, but organic and vital, and, if cut or broken, can no more be knotted again than a severed bough can be reattached to a tree."

(To be continued).

THE GATES ACCORDING TO "THE MESSENGER."

We are glad to see that the editor of The Messenger, in the April number of that journal, has a capital article on the subject of the Gates, and has written almost a monograph upon the topic. We wish our space allowed us to quote the whole article, which, with the exception of a few lines, near the conclusion of it, is admirable. He defines the word as a "gangway," "or door of entry or exit," using as illustrations, London as the great Eastern Gate of Britain; Liverpool as the Western Gate, and citing Constantinople as the "door of the Russian house," as described by a Russian journal in 1878. The following passage deals with the general subject of Great Britain's, or Israel's Gates, and is worth repeating in the Banner:—

Of the many unique characteristics of the Empire of Britain, one of the most remarkable is our possession or command of an extraordinary number of Gates of other folk's lands—doors of other people's houses. We hold dispersed over the world small territories which on the map are mere minute specks, but which to the wise insight of the military and naval strategist are of incalculable value. They are places of arms, manned with troops and stored with munitions. They are auxiliary arsenals, where our war-ships on ocean-duty can rendezvous, replenish their stores, refit, and execute occasional repairs. They form a chain of posts by which the remote dominions of the Empire are strategically connected, and by which the routes of our trade and of communication with our world-wide possessions are protected. But their ultimate purpose and value, the very reason for our holding them, and for holding them with tenacity and perpetual preparedness, is that, in the event of aggression upon our rights and interests, they are points of support for active military and naval operations to be directed upon the territories or the sea-routes upon which they abut, and of which they are the Gates. They endow us with the obvious advantage of striking quickly, and striking home, at the aggressor. By the very conditions of the extent of our Empire, in contact at innumerable points with competing interests and jealousies, we are exposed to risks of hostility direct and indirect.

Upon a good Mercator map we may execute a rapid globe-trotting excursion which, to minds endowed with the synthetic faculty of putting things together, will be of interest and service. The reflective will apprehend that the value of the possessions is not merely in our having a Gate here and a Gate there, but in the accumulated strength of their combination as parts of a strategic system, extending entirely round the world.

The author then reviewed the Gates, taking, in his rapid survey, notice of Heligoland, the Channel Islands, Gibraltar, Malta, Cyprus, the Suez Canal, Perim, Aden, Socotra, Penang, Malacca, and Singapore, Sarawak, Labuan, Hong Kong, Bathurst and Melville Islands, Fiji and Rotuma, the Falklands, Tristan D'Acunha, Mauritius, Mombaza, St. Helena, Ascension, Lagos, Sierra Leone, The Bermudas, British Guiana, British Honduras. The editor of The Messenger truly declares that "no such like thing was ever known in history" as the fact now patent to the world that "on all coasts and seas, at the inlet and outlet of every trade-route, the triple cross of the Union Jacque floats over the Gates of the adversaries, past, present, or to come, of Britain."

On one point we remarked that we could not accord approval to The Messenger's words. They are these. Premising that the argument as to the Gates rests "on the possession of strong places which are strictly the entrances, or command the ingress and egress, of lands and seas of the alien," he added, "for the purposes of this demonstration we are not to include—as some have absurdly included—such places as Peshawur, Bombay, Ceylon, Madras, Calcutta, the Gates of India, of our fellow-subjects as loyal to the Empress as we to the Queen, excepting only a few pampered 'competition-wallahs,' who ape the perversity of our home-bred radicaille," still less do we take account of such places as Cape Town, Natal, Perth, Adelaide, Melbourne, Sydney, Brisbane, Hobart, Wellington, Auckland, which are Gates of the homesteads of our own children." Regarding these sentences we must, in self-defence, as the author of "The Geography of the Gates," say a word. We have—"absurdly," says our mentor, but not "absurdly," we maintain—included the Gates of India as the Gates of our enemies on the very principle he himself avowed, as quoted above—namely, because India once was in possession of our enemies, and we won those Gates by force of arms, and held them ever since by the power of our military and naval strength. Peshawur we won from our Afghan enemies after Goojerat. Ceylon we fought for and wrested from our enemies at the end of last century. Madras was drenched with British blood in fight with our native enemies, backed by French adventurers. Calcutta had its "Black Hole," and was the scene of many a scare and many a fight.

The mutinies tell a different tale from The Messenger, and declare that only thirty years ago all India was in a ferment, and only saved from general insurrection by the grace and mercy of our God. We were ourselves on the Madras side in those dread times, and never failed to anticipate the worst, till the tide of native insurrection in the North ebbed, and the Sepoy game was utterly defeated.

We do well indeed to denominate the places named, "the Gates of India," for through them, by the railway and steamboat routes, which all converge to these sea-coast Gates, those troops and armaments are transported through the length and breadth of Hindostan, by means of which we hold that splendid Empire. India is truly retained by alien Israel to-day by the power of the cannon and the sword; and the points through which this force is applied from beyond sea, are those very Gates we have (not absurdly, but soberly and truly) described in our work, "The Geography of the Gates," as "the Gates of India." The colonial towns which The Messenger names, some would not now probably describe as "Gates," with the exception of those true "doors of entry," "the Cape" and "Natal." The latter were both wrested from our foes in fair military warfare, and are now the Gates by which the Dutch, Boer, and native enemies of the British are held in subjection. Without these Gates, at any rate, we should soon be turned out of South Africa by our Africander enemies. The colonial towns in Australia and New Zealand were wrested from native enemies in the first instance, but the fact that these have mostly died out, scarcely affects, we suppose, the question whether these places are properly described now as "the Gates of our enemies"? They were "Gates of our countrymen's enemies" in time past, and therefore we believe we properly so described them in "The Geography of the Gates." Saving on this one point we have nothing but approbation to express of The Messenger's leader for April; and are glad, in these days of tergiversation. that its editor is loyal to this capital identification, the foundation, we maintain, of them all, the one all the world appreciates, and the one which confounds the opponent, be he who he may.

Digitized by Google

THE BISHOP OF MANCHESTER AND THE JEWISH RACE.

SPEAKING on Thursday evening in the Preston Guild Hall to a very large audience, the Bishop of Manchester said that he dearly loved the Jewish race. If he had to select the race from which to be be born, he would have selected to be born a Jew, cheerfully taking part in their reproach for the high honour of belonging to the blood of Abraham and Isaac and Jacob, of Peter and Paul, and, above all, of One who was greater than either. Sir Walter Scott must have had a similar feeling about the Jewish people, else he would not have put into the mouth of Rebecca the Jewess that magnificent speech in which she told the Templar that before the ancestors of the upstart Northern nobility were known at all, her fathers were bidden to stand nearest to the Congregation of the Vision. The treatment of the Jews was a pitiful, a horrible story. They were murdered, robbed of their goods, their bodies were given over to the tormentors, they were driven hither and thither, and found a home—nowhere. We in England had treated the Jews as badly and barbarously as any of our continental neighbours. But times had changed, and he felt proud to know that England had removed all disabilities from the Jews, and now treated them as she treated the favoured members of her family. He spoke of the great men the Jews had produced; they were not merely statesmen, but prophets. Among others he named the late Earl of Beaconsfield, whose name was received with loud applause. Long centuries had passed before the Jew got full justice, and it was but natural that he could not so speedily forget his wrongs and the terrible persecution to which he had been subjected. If Christians had received the same treatment he questioned whether they would have had the toughness of fibre to survive; but if they had, would they not have hated the name under which they had been so cruelly wronged? He bespoke the sympathy and help of his countrymen for their Israelitish brethren.—The Right Rev. Dr. Hellmuth, D.D., late Bishop of Huron, and Assistant Bishop of Ripon, afterwards spoke, and said the feeling words of the Bishop of Manchester had moved him deeply, for he had Israelitish blood running through his veins, and was labouring on behalf of his brethren.

The above is taken from the Manchester Guardian of Nov. 13, 1886, but our attention has only been drawn to the remarkable speech of the Bishop during the first week in January. The Bishop considers it a high honour to belong to the Jewish race, and declares that had he the option he would elect to be born a Jew. We beg to offer to his lordship a close blood relationship to the Jew, and declare to him that as one of the House of Ephraim his lordship has already got it in his power to rejoice in his Hebrew Israelitish origin. No doubt when the matter is thus thrust before his notice the Bishop will, with a smile or a jest, toss this splendid offer aside, and content himself with his present despised position, which after all is, according to his own views, that of a non-Israelite Gentile, without one single national promise belonging to him to be found recorded within the limits of the four corners of the Bible. Had Dr. Hellmuth spoken out he could have told his lordship the Bishop of Manchester that though he was himself of Jewish origin he had learnt enough to know that the British people were "Ephraim" his brethren; and that therefore his lordship had exactly that comfort and happiness he desired, since he could justly and properly claim blood-kinship with Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Paul, Peter, and above all with the Lord Jesus Christ, the Redeemer of Israel, "the King of Israel," and yet "the Father of Ephraim," "His firstborn" (Isa. xliv. 6; Jer. xxxi. 9; John i. 49, xii. 13). The former ill-treatment of the Jews by the British House of Ephraim is no matter for wonder or surprise. For Isa. ix. 21 distinctly foretold the enmity between Ephraim with Manasseh on the one side, against Judah on the other. "Manasseh Ephraim and Ephraim Manasseh, and they together shall be against Judah" was the prophecy. This may imply that while the two sons of Joseph were sojourning together in this our land on terms of equality, their joint hatred of Judah should find a vent. But when Manasseh should have departed for America, and left Ephraim to pursue her own solitary history alone, and such should result in her superiority over Manasseh (Gen. xlviii. 19), then Ephraim's ill-treatment of his Jewish brethren would cease and determine for ever. For "then the House of Judah" would prepare "to walk to the House of Israel" before they "come together out of the land of the North to the land that God hath given to their fathers for an inheritance." The existence of the Jews under awful persecutions to the present time is indeed an evidence of the truth of God's Word. But it requires to confirm and establish it the concurrent testimony of the House of Ephraim, God's firstborn; so that while the Jews' sufferings may testify to the justice of God in the matter of the crucifixion, His tender mercies towards the House of Israel in giving them the birthright of Joseph, must prove to all the world that He is a faithful, long-suffering Creator, who has done for us all that He promised to do for our forefathers, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and will fulfil to us every jot and every tittle of His covenants in their case made and provided for ever. If the branch or nation of the children of Israel which is just now under the hidings of God's face is so lovely in the Bishop of Manchester's sight that he wishes he had been born a Jew, how much lovelier should be the British-Israelite race in his eyes, since they are under God's special blessing and benediction now, because He has said that "He will save the House of Joseph and bring them again and have mercy on them; and they shall be as though I had not cast them off, for I am the Lord their God, and will hear them, and they shall increase as they have increased . . . for I have redeemed them . . . I will strengthen them in the Lord, and they shall walk up and down in His name, saith the Lord." But if the Bishop waits for evidence to convince him that this nation is really Israel before he can yield belief to the glorious proposition that the British nation is lost Israel of the Ten Tribes found, then we submit to his lordship that his brother Bishop Hellmuth, a Jew by birth but a Christian by conviction, and a man of parts and learning, has yielded his reason to the evidence we have to adduce in support of the facts, and believes that the British are his lost brethren of the House of Joseph. The evidence in question is the fact that the Anglo-Saxon British folk enjoy to-day all that God promised Israel in the Old Testament prophecies. God cannot promise on oath to one race, and perform those promises to quite another! "God changeth not; and therefore the sons of Jacob are not consumed." He sware, and according to His oath the blessings He engaged should be Israel's are now our own! Will not this fact satisfy the Bishop of Manchester that we are God's heritage and inheritance, His chosen Hebrew nation? It should do so, if his reason be reasonably exercised; and then he will not need to envy the lot of the Jewish rejectors or persecutors of his Lord, but will rather rejoice that his lot is cast with those who, being Ephraim, have been saved from this great sin, and are now glorifying their Lord by publishing the Gospel of His grace and the written Word of the living God in the four quarters of the globe, among all the nations, families, and kindreds of the earth! Well, therefore, may we as a nation praise the Lord, and rightly should the Bishop of Manchester rejoice in the fact that he belongs by blood, not to the Jews, but to the House of Israel, God's own inheritance, His firstborn.

Digitized by Google

THE COMPANY OF NATIONS APPROACH THE SOVEREIGN.

On the 4th May, 1887, the eleven colonies which are autonomous and quasi-independent nations approached Her Majesty at Windsor Castle, and presented her with addresses on the occasion of her Jubilee. The list of those who appeared on the occasion before the Queen, as well as the address and reply of Her Majesty, we quote from the Times of May 5th, as follows:—

The Queen received at Windsor Castle to-day the delegates from the Colonies.

Her Majesty, accompanied by their Royal Highnesses Prince and Princess Henry of Battenberg, entered the White Drawing-room at 3 o'clock, attended by the Dowager Duchess of Athole (Lady-in-Waiting to Her Majesty), Lord Henniker (Lord-in-Waiting), General the Right Hon. Sir H. Ponsonby, K.C.B., General Sir Michael Biddulph, K.C.B. (Groom-in-Waiting), General Lynedoch Gardiner, and Colonel Sir Henry Ewart, K.C.B. (Equerries-in-Waiting), and the Master of the Household.

The Right Hon. Sir Henry Holland, G.C.M.G., then presented to the Queen the following gentlemen, who handed to Her Majesty addresses from their respective colonies:—

Sir Robert Thorburn, K.C.M.G. (Premier), Sir Ambrose Shea, K.C.M.G., from Newfoundland.

Sir Alexander Campbell, K.C.M.G. (Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario), Mr. Sandford Fleming, C.M.G., from Canada.

Sir Patrick Jennings, K.C.M.G. (late Premier), Sir Robert Wisdom, K.C.M.G., Sir Saul Samuel, K.C.M.G., C.B. (Agent-General), from New South Wales.

Mr. John Stokdell Dodds (late Attorney-General), Mr. Adye Douglas (Agent-General), from Tasmania.

Sir Thomas Upington, K.C.M.G. (Attorney-General), Mr. Jan Hendrick Hofmeyer, Sir Charles Mills, K.C.M.G., C.B. (Agent-General), from the Cape of Good Hope.

Sir John William Downer, K.C.M.G. (Premier), Sir Arthur Blyth, K.C.M.G., C.B. (Agent-General), from South Australia.

Sir Francis Dillon Bell, K.C.M.G., C.B. (Agent-General), Sir William Fitzherbert, K.C.M.G. (Speaker of Legislative Council), from New Zealand.

Mr. Alfred Deakin (Chief Secretary), Sir James Lorimer, K.C.M.G. (Minister of Colonial Defence), Mr. James Service (late Premier), from Victoria.

Sir Samuel Griffith, K.C.M.G. (Premier), Sir James Garrick, K.C.M.G. (Agent-General), from Queensland.

Mr. John Forrest, C.M.G. (Commissioner of Crown Lands).

Mr. Septimus Burt, Q.C., from Western Australia.

Mr. John Robinson, from Natal.

Sir Augustus Adderley, K.C.M.G., from Bahamas, and Mr. A. P. Marryat, from Trinidad.

The following address was then read and presented to the Queen by Sir Robert Thorburn, K.C.M.G., Premier of Newfoundland, on behalf of the Colonial Conference, all the representatives being present:—

"May it please your Majesty,

"Your Majesty's subjects from distant provinces of your Empire assembled in London upon the summons of your Secretary of State for the Colonies, to confer on questions affecting your Imperial possessions throughout the world, desire to avail themselves of the opportunity which their meeting affords to approach your Majesty with their humble, united, and earnest congratulations on the approaching completion of the 50th year of your reign.

"Your Majesty has witnessed the number of your colonial subjects of European descent increase from under two millions to nine millions, and of Asiatic race in your Indian Empire from 96 millions to 254 millions, and of other peoples in your colonies and dependencies from two millions to seven millions.

"The area now governed by your Majesty in India is 1,380,000 square miles, and in your colonies 7,000,000 square miles. The increase of trade, of shipping, and of revenue, has been in proportion to that of population; and no one in your wide dominions is subject to any other sway than that of even and impartial law.

"Your Majesty's reign has, under divine providence, endured for half a century; and amidst revolutions and changes of dynasty, and of systems of government in other countries, the principles of the laws of your predecessors for a thousand years still afford your subjects that safety and prosperity, and the Empire that stability, which claim the admiration of the world.

"We beg to assure your Majesty of the continued loyalty and devotion of your colonial subjects; and we humbly pray that your happy reign may still be prolonged, and that your Majesty's throne may remain established in the land, in justice and righteousness, for generations to come.

"We remain, with the profoundest veneration, your Majesty's most faithful subjects and dutiful servants."

To which Her Majesty made the following gracious reply:—

"I accept with much satisfaction the loyal and dutiful address which you have presented to me on behalf of my colonial subjects, and it has given me great pleasure to receive in person here to-day the representatives of so many portions of my dominions.

"I have observed with the liveliest interest the steady advance of my colonies in wealth, population, and good government. This has been a constant and increasing source of gratification to me during the 50 years on the completion of which you now offer congratulations; and nothing can give me greater pride and pleasure than to know that the loyalty and affection of my subjects in distant lands have developed along with their prosperity and success."

The few words that the representatives of Israel's "company of nations" addressed to their Queen proved that the British are God's blessed and favoured people, possessed of Israel's promised prophetic attributes and blessings. The representatives told Her Majesty that her British colonial subjects had within her reign of fifty years risen in numbers from two to nine millions (exhibiting a doubling rate of once in 25 years); that her Asiatic subjects had increased from 96 to 254 millions, and other peoples in the colonies from two to seven millions. These figures prove that the British, in their Colonial Empire, respond to prophecy, and increase as Israel was destined to increase. The enlargement of the Empire in superficial extent, the increase of trade, shipping, and revenue, all prove that the British enjoy Israel's promised blessings, are waxing greater and greater in power, and are rapidly becoming higher than all the nations of the earth, "the head and not the tail, above only and not beneath" them all (Deut. xxviii. 1, 13).

The representatives stated that the predecessors of the Queen for a thousand years had given this nation even and just laws, the Empire having thereby the stability which makes it the admiration of the world, and gives its people, the Queen's subjects, safety and prosperity. All these are Israelite blessings, as reference to Deut. xxxiii. 28 and Jer. xxxiii. 9 prove, and there is no other nation on the face of the earth which can point to such gifts in their own possession as proofs that they are God's people Israel. Israel, praise ye the Lord!

Digitized by Google

"WHAT WOULD BE ENGLAND'S DUTY IN THE EVENT OF A GREAT EUROPEAN WAR?"

(Being a Paper Read Before the Clerical and Lay Association of Bristol and Clifton, on March 11, 1887, by Philo-Israel).

My Friends,—It seems a strange thing that a company of peaceable and peaceful Christian men and citizens should be assembled to discuss gravely a momentous question which Statesmen and Parliaments alone will have to decide when it arises—namely, "What would be England's duty in the event of a great European war?" We are now met, however, not to argue this subject out academically; but to inquire of God's Word and ask each other as believers what the Lord would have us nationally do in this matter, in the extremely probable event of "a great European war" in the near future; and whether under our present national circumstances, it would be our bounden duty to join in the conflict, or stand entirely aside, as a Christian people?—a most profitable and interesting topic. But first, is "a great European war" likely to occur in these our times, and are we near so dreadful a catastrophe? We must, I think, be very poor watchmen of "the signs of the times," not to see that the nations of Europe are armed to the very teeth, and are arming yet more and more to be ready for a contest they see to be approaching. What are the causes which are likely to precipitate such a quarrel? First, there is France's long-standing and bitter complaint against the Germans, that in 1870 Prince Bismarck robbed them of their two precious Rhenish provinces, Alsace and Lorraine, with those first-class fortresses Metz and Strasbourgh. France can never forgive that deep wound to her national pride, and she has never rested since she lost them from her preparation to recover them. Men say the time is come, and that France is ready! She probably only waits a favourable moment to spring upon the German Empire, and strike a final blow for the recovery of her beloved territory, and for the destruction of the hated people who have so humiliated her in the eyes of all Europe! So far the causes in the West of Europe. How is it in the East? There, the ever-recurring "Eastern Question" is always ripening for its settlement. There "Turkey moribund" is ever drawing nearer and nearer to her final fall. There Russia, gigantic Russia, waits the favourable moment to seize on the Turk's capital, the only prize she seeks, because with Constantinople she will have gained all she covets. That "Gate of the world" in her possession, Russia will be then, she thinks, mistress of the Globe! To attain this object she means to secure Bulgaria; refuses to allow any settlement of the political situation there; and when the time comes, will evidently be ready to contest with Austria, and with Germany too, if needful, the right to govern in the Thracian Peninsula. Thus she hopes to open her path to the object of all her desires, Constantinople. France on one side, Russia on the other, are therefore at one in their ultimate objects. They both aim at the destruction of the German Empire, each for purposes of its own, because Germany is in the way. As soon as Russia strikes the blow in the East, the French no doubt will attack the Fatherland on the West. If France is impelled to strike the first blow, nothing will be easier than to provoke a quarrel, which Russia will pick with Austria, to seize upon the road to Stamboul, in the hope that Germany, engaged in the West, will be unable to resist her in the East. Austria is bound to oppose Russia in her designs, even to the death, and Germany cannot afford to allow Austria to perish in her struggle to keep Russia from obtaining the mastery in the Bosporus. Italy will probably side with the Germans in the mêlée, from motives of revenge against France, because of her conquests in Africa, her annexation of Tunis, and her evident designs on Egypt, to the destruction of Italy's wish for African development on the Red Sea littoral at Massowah. So far for the probabilities of "a great war" in the near future. There are causes enough extant here for a dozen wars of the first class! But are the European continental nations prepared? Alas! too well! There are now 3,000,000 men in arms on the Continent, permanently, on the "peace establishment," (save the mark!) and when "the Reserves" are called out there will be 12½ millions (some think 20 millions) ready for this frightful conflict! "Nations" literally are standing armed now in "yonder ill-consolidated Europe," not armies only, ready to fly at each other's throats! Their object, too, is not merely to conquer; but to destroy each other! This, France openly avows; and Prince Bismarck has clearly stated quite recently in the German Parliament, that the object of the next war will be, for each combatant, de saigner á blanc the other—to bleed his adversary, that is, TO DEATH!

With such prospects before us, and with such frightful wars in the immediate future, what is our beloved country's bounden duty to herself and to the world at large? Surely this: "Our strength is (like Israel's) to sit still"! (Isa. xxx. 7). Our duty is to defend our own: to keep what God has given us; and to interfere in no way with the nations in their mad and wicked tumults against each other, and leave them, save in one respect only, to carry out their own devices, if they will and must. That one exception, I suppose, is Russia's attempt to secure "the Gate of all the Gates," Stamboul. But this can never be obtained by Russia, while Austria, Germany and Italy can draw the sword to save it; and these Powers, to serve their own interests, will fight our battles till necessity forces us to defend the spot by the British fleet, as was done once not long ago, and done successfully! But alas! this Christian policy of non-intervention in the quarrels of Europe will of itself be the cause (if you reflect on it) of the outbreak of the war upon the Continent! That war will be the making of British commerce, and well our merchants and our cities know that fact! This nation, therefore, will not permit their Government to draw the sword! They will force them "to hide it." "At the critical moment" wrote a correspondent of the Times in Vienna lately, "at the critical moment England will be silent, folding her arms, hiding her sword, and siding with nobody. Then there must be war, out of which you will be enriched, while every other nation will be torn and impoverished!" Here then, friends, is the terrible dilemma and impasse, in which we find ourselves to day! Duty, self-interest, Christian principle, love of peace, hatred of war, all urge us, as a nation, to abstain from taking part in the approaching internecine quarrels of the nations of Europe, our neighbours. To avoid complicity, we are even now doing our "duty" by abstaining from complications, alliances, and other conventions likely to draw us into war. What follows? Russia and France, both freed from fear of British intervention in troops and treasure will, when the time and opportunity arrive, precipitate the cataclysm which will draw into its fatal embrace France and Germany, Austria and Hungary, and Italy and Turkey; also the Balkan States; will destroy Turkey; will probably uproot Austria; will enfeeble Germany and France; and leave Russia (the gigantic, Satanic scourge of Europe) ready at last to turn on ourselves for the mastery of Palestine, the possession of India, and for the acquisition of the commerce and wealth of the whole world. Our Christian "duty" to-day is obviously to seek for peace and to avoid war. That very pursuit of peace will certainly be the undoing of the nations of Europe, and cause our own national aggrandisement! What will ruin the nations of the Continent, must feed our own wealth and commerce and power, for we shall, by the chain of circumstances I describe, be the only unexhausted, unimpoverished, surviving nation, because we shall have avoided the horrors and the curses and expenses of those wars which cannot but be the undoing of all the rest of Europe. The wars now coming will no doubt be "unparalleled" in the history of the world. The numbers engaged, the weapons to be used, the results sought, are beyond all calculation greater and more terrible than those of past times and past conflicts.

Digitized by Google

But why shall we be so favoured? and why is our righteous policy at this juncture to be followed for the nations by such disastrous, such truly awful consequences? For one and only one reason that I can see. This our British nation is Israel. The time to discover her is at hand; and when she is to be brought forth and revealed, God's Word tells us plainly "the nations shall be gathered for destruction," but Israel shall be in hiding, covered by God's hand, hidden as in the Ark, till the trouble be overpast! Two passages occur to me to prove that the character of the Crisis in which we are now involved is that I have stated; and what is our nation's "duty" in it. The first is in Zeph. iii. 8, R.V., to this effect: "Wait ye for Me, saith Jehovah, until the day that I rise up to the prey; for My determination is to gather the nations, that I may assemble the kingdoms to pour upon them Mine Indignation even all My fierce anger; for all the earth shall be devoured with the fire of My jealousy. For then will I turn to the peoples a pure language, that they may all call upon the name of the Lord Jehovah, to serve Him with one consent." The other supplementary passage is in Isa. xxvi. 20, 21. "Come My people, enter thou into thy chambers, and shut thy doors about thee; hide thyself for a little moment, until the Indignation be overpast. For behold the Lord Jehovah cometh forth out of His place, to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity; the earth also shall disclose her blood and shall no more cover her slain." Here then is "the indignation" of the Lord exhibited, ready to fall on the "nations;" and yet Israel, at the same crisis, is sent into "hiding," like Noah into the ark, and God's providence prescribes the action in both cases! Our duty therefore, now being "to sit still," to "hide our swords," and to refuse to take part in the commotion of the nations, we are thus but carrying out our God's commands, and we thereby are in the path of duty, as prophetically prescribed for our people at this juncture, by the word of the living God. "By the hand of My people Israel will I lay my vengeance upon Edom" was God's "determination," as expressed in Ezek. xxv. 14, and whatever modern Power or Powers "Edom" may prophetically represent, this scripture plainly shows us that this our nation, being Israel, is destined (probably by its inaction and non-intervention in the quarrels of Europe), to bring about that very thing the Continentals so clearly foresee and so greatly dread, and which, too, we are anxious to avoid, namely—the destruction of the nations who are verily "the enemies of the Lord." The passage in Rev. xvi. 18 R.V., relating to the events which are to occur when the assemblage of the nations into the plain called in Hebrew Har-Maggedon takes place, is to the like effect. "There was a great earthquake, such as was not since there were men upon the earth; so great an earthquake, so mighty," followed by the crash and fall of cities, the disappearance of mountains and islands (churches, states and polities I think); and then the great hail or Northern war, which will only result in more blasphemy of God because of its exceeding greatness.

Why then, knowing all this, and seeing all this coming, do not our Statesmen throw in their lot with Germany and Austria, and Italy and Turkey, and by a bold front compel the peace of Europe, over-awe Russia, and make France see that her Revanche against Germany must be laid aside, and that sine die? I answer, because first God's will is to destroy the nations, the enemies of the Lord Jesus Christ, and to save His people Israel, the British. And next because, as before said, inactivity on our part is recognised by our cities and by our merchants as the paying policy. It will save our purses and our resources, and will probably fill our pockets, when the war breaks out; and lastly, we have no adequate reason why we should fight or espouse the cause of Germany in the Russian or French quarrels. The Teutonic races will fight our battles at first in respect to Constantinople, and beyond that we have no sympathy at all with any other question now dividing Europe. Germany has earned the undying hate of France, and must bear the brunt of that odium. What have we to do with French projects for revenge? "The Eastern Question" is not yet our concern! It is Austria's first, and then Germany's. It will be ours when both of these are destroyed by Russia, if that is to be the case; and when we occupy Palestine in the interests of the Jews and of ourselves, then will the Eastern Question become the question of the Lord's recompense for the controversy of Zion, and our question too (Isa. xxxiv.; Ezek. xxxviii. 8).

To sum up. On the whole, then, our national duty at this crisis is, I believe, inaction: non-intervention. For that policy will end in our own nation's enlargement, prosperity, wealth and greatness, and therefore will command the votes of our masses. The blessing of God will follow us by pursuing it! for God has prescribed it! And when "the indignation" towards "the nations" is overpast, then will be the time of the Lord's full blessing of His people Israel, the British, for His enemies will have then been destroyed; and by the blessed instrumentality of Ten-Tribed, British, Christian Israel, "the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea" (Hab. ii. 14; Isa. xi. 9), and then will begin Christ's millennial reign in Mount Zion and Jerusalem, and over His ancients gloriously (Isa. xxiv. 23).

A RUSSIAN'S VIEW OF GREAT BRITAIN.

We find the following in the Montreal Shareholders' and Insurance Gazette of February 11th, 1887 :—

GREAT BRITAIN—A CONTRAST.

What a Russian writer says of England :—Britain is a menace to Europe. She is the most aggressive Power of modern times. There is no part of the world where she has not established her garrisons or her colonies. Her fleets dominate every sea. What Power is there that has not suffered from her ambition? She has torn Gibraltar from Spain, Malta and Canada from France, Heligoland from Denmark, the Cape of Good Hope from the Dutch, the Gold Coast from the Portuguese, and Hong Kong from China. She has built up by the sword military power in Asia, which secures her government over two hundred million subjects in India. At Aden she holds the Gates of the Red Sea. At Singapore she commands the road to China. From Fiji she dominates the Pacific. Her territory is vaster in extent than the whole of Europe. Russia annexes no population except Slavs and a few tribes in Asia, while of 250,000,000 of Britain's subjects only 20,000,000 are Englishmen. What nationality has not some of its members under British rule?

Supposing the above to be the genuine production of a Russian writer, we have here a variety of points stated which are pure Identifications of the British folk with the lost House of Ephraim, as recorded in the Scriptures. The Russian declares that—

1. "There is no part of the world where Britain has not established her garrisons or her colonies." In Gen. xxviii. 14 we have God's promise to Jacob's afterseed that "they should be as the dust of the earth, and spread abroad to the West, and to the East, and to the North, and to the South."

2. "That her fleets dominate every sea." The son of Beor prophesied in Numbers xxiv. 7 that Israel's seed "should be in many waters, and his king shall be higher than Agag, and his kingdom shall be exalted."

3. That she has the Gates of the world—"Gibraltar taken from Spain, Malta and Canada from France, the Cape from the Dutch," and so on respecting Hong Kong, the Gold Coast, Aden, Singapore, all dominating the neighbouring seas. But all this is exactly the description of Israel's Gates as promised them by God's oath in Gen. xxii. 17.

4. "That her territory is vaster in extent than the whole of Europe." So Israel was to be "the head, and not the tail, above only, and not beneath all the nations of the earth (Deut. xxviii. 1—13).

Digitized by Google

5. That she "reigns over many nations," for "what nationality has not some of its members under British rule?" These are the very words of Deut. xv. 6, and if the Russian intended it, he could hardly have made a closer translation of God's promise there made to "Israel obedient"—"Thou shalt reign over many nations, but they shalt not reign over thee."

6. That twenty millions of Englishmen reign over 250 millions of aliens; that is, one Englishman dominates over twelve or thirteen foreigners. This is God's promise, to the letter, made to Israel in Psa. cxi. 6; and ii. 8, where He declared that "He shows His people the power of His works, in giving them the heritage of the heathen."

In one respect, no doubt, the Russian spoke the truth—"Britain is the most aggressive Power of modern times." Being Israel it must be so. The British are Israel, and to Israel God made promises that theirs should be "the kingdom and dominion and greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven." He constituted them "the heir of the world" (Rom. iv. 13; Dan. vii. 27).

The Russian, however, mistakes when he thinks that our power in India has been built up entirely by the sword, and that 200 millions submit to us there only because we are a strong military Power. Nothing of the sort! India has been God's good gift to us because we are His people. He tells us plainly so in Psa. cxi. 6, and ii. 8, that "He showeth His people the power of His works (not their works) in giving them the heritage of the heathen." Our victories in India could not alone account for the wonderful fact that, at this moment, 250 millions of Hindoos and Mohammedans are submissive to and content with, the authority of the British, who are supported by only 60,000 bayonets, keeping the peace in territory 1,000 miles by 1,500 in extent! On the whole, the Russian's remarks are very wonderful, because they so exactly corroborate our contention, that the British possess and enjoy to-day all the blessings God bestowed upon Israel of old, making them theirs by oath, and declaring that their enjoyment of them should be everlasting. In one respect the Russian is silent. He says nothing of our nation's wonderful "multitudinousness." He implied it, no doubt, when he spoke of our establishments of colonies and garrisons "in all parts of the world," but did not distinctly say that our nation's rapid increase was in any way portentous, which it is. In regard to this point, we publish an estimate which appears in The Hebrew Annual, and quoted by the St. James's Gazette on March 6th, declaring the total number of the Jews in the whole world at the present hour to be only 6,300,000. If so, they have certainly not had bestowed on them the blessing of Abraham in regard to the gift of multitude. They have probably doubled their numbers only once since the destruction of Jerusalem by Titus! How striking is the contrast in regard to the British races! They double once in about fifty-six years at home, and once in twenty-five abroad in the Colonial Empire, the average being about forty-one years for the race. Well may a friend remark on these figures, "That whereas the Rev. John Wilkinson says we British are Gentiles, he also declares 'that the blessings promised to Israel have not passed to the Gentiles.' What a dilemma he finds himself in!" The rev. opponent cannot deny now that the Jews, with their paltry six millions, are utterly distanced by the 100 millions of Anglo-Saxons now existing on the globe with a multiplying power which will double their number nearly three times over in a century! He sees we have the Abrahamic blessing of multitudinousness, but the Jews have it not; and therefore either he must be wrong in denying we are Israel, or God's Word must be wrong in insisting on that as a special mark of Israel, which God forbid! The following is the estimate of the number of

THE JEWS OF THE WORLD.

Concerning the figures of the entire Jewish population on the globe, there is a difference of opinion among the statisticians; but the Hebrew Annual declares that France contains 600,000; Germany, 562,000, of whom 39,000 inhabit Alsace and Lorraine; Austria-Hungary, 1,644,000, of whom 688,000 are in Galicia and 638,000 in Hungary Proper; Italy, 40,000; Netherlands, 82,000; Roumania, 265,000; Russia, 2,552,000 (Russian Poland, 768,000); Turkey, 105,000; Belgium, 3,000; Bulgaria, 10,000; Switzerland, 7,000; Denmark, 4,000; Spain, 1,900; Gibraltar, 1,500; Greece, 3,000; Servia, 3,500; Sweden, 3,000. In Asia there are 300,000 of the race; Turkey in Asia has 195,000, of whom 25,000 are in Palestine. 47,000 are in Russian Asia, 18,000 in Persia, 14,000 in Central Asia, 1,900 in India, and 1,000 in China. In Africa, 8,000 Jews live in Egypt, 55,000 in Tunisia, 35,000 in Algeria, 60,000 in Morocco, 6,000 in the Tripolitan, and 200,000 in Abyssinia. America counts 230,000 among her citizens, and 20,000 more are distributed in other sections of the Transatlantic continents; while only 12,000 are scattered through Oceanica. In short, the entire total of the Hebrew race on the surface of the globe is estimated at 6,300,000.

PROGRESS IN PETERHEAD, N.B.

We are much interested to learn that Our Identity has found a resting-place in Peterhead, in North Britain, and that an Association has been formed there with eight members to begin with. They meet weekly on Monday nights, and are studying "The History of the House of Israel told for the Children," as they find that "the best work to use as an introduction to the subject." The account the Secretary, Mr. W. Spence, gives us, is deeply interesting in one point. He assures us that one of the members of the new Association was once "a pronounced infidel," but by the grace of God "the Identity was the means of turning him." Every denomination of Christians, it seems, is represented in the Association, plainly showing that ours is no new sect, no new religion, but a truth that binds men of all shades of Protestant doctrine into one united body. It is also the cure, under God, of the infidels' deadly disease. The Peterhead Israelites are under the impression that if they could get a good lecturer to come among them and teach them, they would "be able to do some good." Already without this aid they "have been able to interest several of the clergy." We wish it were in our power to recommend some lecturer to the notice of our Peterhead friends. There seems to be none in Scotland, and none nearer than the Rev. R. Douglas, of Kidsgrove Vicarage, Stoke-on-Trent, to whom our friends could apply. They may go further, but they will not be able to fare better.

JUNE 20, 1887.

Great Queen and Empress of thy peoples' heart!
That heart beats true for thee throughout the world:
To-day it leaps, while closed is every mart,
And joyous hails thy royal flag unfurled.

Empress and Queen beyond all former powers!
Thy people greet thy day with song and shout;
What if, abroad, the sky with storm-cloud lowers,
Thy kingdom nestles safe from fear without.

Long-dreaming Science raised her sleepy eye
When thou wert mounting thine all-puissant throne;
Now, as a giantess, she holds the prize
Of central thoughts and deeds, not thoughts alone.

Great Israel's Queen, of Judah's royal line,
See how the tribes confederate hither come!
The Lion rampant, and the "Stone" the sign,
The nations rally round their island home.

Peace be within thy walls, thou blest of God,
Prosperity within Thy palace gates;
The sceptre wielding, holding firm the rod,
England alone defies the threatening fates.

These fifty years what wonders have they wrought,
In science, art, and all the works of peace!
Space shortened, and words flashed like arrowy thoughts;
Thy progress, dear Britannia, ne'er shall cease

Till all the world old England's greatness see Towering above the nations in her might,
Till wars shall end, and blissful liberty
Herald the glorious day that hath no night.

Standish Grey.

Digitized by Google

THE PEOPLE THAT DWELL ALONE.
A Bible Study.

The above is the heading of a leaflet issued by the Rev. Ralph W. Harden, B.A., Secretary of the Irish Auxiliary of the Society for Promoting Christianity among the Jews, last Christmas. In this leaflet and the letter that accompanied it all God's promises and blessings are claimed for the Jews as "Jacob," "Israel," "His people," "God's witnesses." The position of Ephraim or Joseph is as utterly ignored as though the name never occurs in the Word of God—and a wholesale robbery is perpetrated in favour of the Jews of all God's special promises, blessings, and covenants made and given in favour of His people, "Lo-Ammi" Israel, the Ten-Tribed House of Isaac.

It is claimed by Mr. Harden for the Jews, under the name of "Israel," that their "isolation" will be conspicuous "when the fourfold promise to their forefather Abraham shall be fulfilled—when they shall be (1) a numerous people, (2) a prosperous people, (3) a glorious people, and (4) a beneficent people" (Gen. xii. 7).

We must conclude, when Mr. Harden puts out such a paper as this to obtain money for the society for converting Jews to Christianity, that he supposes his readers are ignorant of the Scriptures, or that he himself does not know the scriptural distinction between Israel (or Joseph) and the Jews (or Judah). Mr. Harden seems to admit that the Jews are not now either "numerous," "prosperous," "glorious," or "beneficent." That being the case it is certain, since God's Word cannot fail, and the Scriptures cannot be broken, that the other House of Israel —i.e., Ephraim, must be to-day endowed with all four blessings. They must be "numerous," because Hosea i. 10 predicts the very thing of them when in separation from Judah. "They are as the sand of the sea, which cannot be measured nor numbered." Why was Mr. Harden so disingenuous as to omit all mention of that text? But there is another. In Zech. x. 8 God describes Ephraim in exile—some in "far countries"—as "increasing as they have increased." In the return, "place shall not be found for them" (v. 10). Will Mr. Harden tell us these texts are not in the Bible, or deny their reference to Ephraim as distinguished from the Jews? But God promised Ephraim he should be a "prosperous" people when obedient to the Lord. Accordingly, Deut. xv. 6 promised them, under those conditions, power "to lend to many nations—need to borrow from none: power also to reign over many nations—freedom from subjection to any." The text cannot apply to the Jews, for they have no national status giving them power to issue national loans, and they cannot rule over many nations, for they are only a scattered people, serving at this moment many foreign nations themselves. Ephraim was to be a "glorious" people. For God promised them, in Zech. x. 7, that they should be like "a mighty man," "their heart rejoicing as through wine." Theirs is, we believe, the Imperial Israel to whom Isa. lx. refers, on whom "the glory of the Lord" is described as "risen" (ver. 1 and 2).

Ephraim was also to be finally "a beneficent people." For they, but not Judah, were to become "sons of the living God," as Hosea i. 10 declares,—blossoming and budding and "filling the face of the world with fruit" (Isa. xxvii. 6). In them all the nations, families, and kindreds of the world were to be blessed, since they alone, but not Judah, would accept Christ, and in Christ only could the nations be blessed at all (Gen. xii. 2, xxii. 18, xxviii. 14; Acts iii. 25; Isa. lxv. 1). From Judah the Lord took away "the Kingdom of God," and His "word" (Matt. xxi. 43; Psa. cxlvii. 19, 20), but "the nation" to whom they were transferred could be none other than Ephraim—"the fruitful one"—since that was the meaning of "Ephraim" (Gen. xli. 52), and to Israel only did God intend to "show His Holy Word" (Psa. cxlvii. 19, 20). We must not, however, be misunderstood. We do not deny the Jews' isolation at the present time, nor their claim on Ephraim-Israel's (the British nation's) pity, piety, prayers, and efforts. All these they ought to receive from Christian Israel—God's people, His witnesses, His sons. Nor do we deny that when the return of Israel and Judah takes place in the future, that the two Houses united will then enjoy all God's blessings, as promised to Abraham, in common. It is for this very reason that we insist on the self-evident fact that, such being the case, and because God's word cannot be broken, therefore at this present time, before the return, Ephraim must be in actual enjoyment and possession of all the good things God promised them in His Word exclusively. These good things are—(1) multitudinousness (Hosea i. 10); (2) the fulness or multitude of nations (Gen. xlviii. 19, xxxv. 11; Rom. xi. 25); (3) "prosperity and wealth" (Deut. xv. 6); (4) "glory" (Isa. lx. 1, 2); (5) "beneficence" as a nation internationally (Isa. xxvii. 6); (6) colonies (Zech. x. 8, 9); (7) the Gospel and Christian character (Hosea i. 10, Zech. x. 6, 8, 12).

We object to Mr. Harden's circular because he deliberately omits all these references to Ephraim-Israel, and arrogates to the Jews all the blessings God granted to Ephraim or Joseph alone just now, to the glory of His grace.

WHY I ACCEPTED THE ANGLO-ISRAEL BELIEF.
By T. C.

I had seen the Banner of Israel several times in 1884, not, however, taking any particular notice of it. A few months before I wrote to you, in 1884, and sent you a copy of the American Sunday School Times, containing the article, "A Religious People," I took rather more notice of it, and frequently scanned the contents of one of the numbers that used to appear in the window of Mr. Witts, of Colston-street.

Well, I thought, here is one of those things that in the last days are to come upon us to deceive us! As I was passing by, I noticed a small pamphlet, "Fifty Reasons." I partly resolved in my mind to purchase it. When I passed another time, I had another look at it, and read on the cover what Dr. Paley and Solomon said.

I bought it, and soon discovered that all the blessings we ever enjoyed as a nation were those promised to the House of Israel; and having already set my hand to the seal that "God is true," I felt convinced that we were God's people, the "nation of nations."

Some of my friends to whom I introduced the subject were angry; others said that to accept such things tended to make one proud. But it had far from such an effect upon me, for the 11th verse of chapter iii. 2 Peter came before me, which, in my mind, occurred thus:—If we really are of the Ten Tribes of Israel, the recipients of all the blessings so repeatedly promised, what manner of persons ought we to be in all holy living and godliness?

Seeing my friends were so opposed to it, I left off introducing the subject to them, but took care to explain myself when they did. When I wrote you, I believed that God's promises to the Israelites were ours because we are the people to whom He made them through His servants of old, our forefathers. I believe it, as I do any other of God's words.

Bristol, 9th March, 1887.

Russia and Abyssinia, "A Sign of the Times."—We take the following from the Manchester Courier, April 22, 1887:—"The organ of the German Templars in Palestine quotes the following explanations of the wish of Abyssinia to play a part in the East under Russia, a fancy which may yet turn out to be a matter of great political importance. 'The two great empires of Abyssinia and Russia,' says the publication in question, 'have the great advantage over all others of alone possessing the true and pure Christian faith, which important fact must lead to their ultimately ruling the world. On the Plain of Saron, in the Holy Land, the armies of the two empires will unite. The two Emperors will take the Holy Communion together, and will then proceed to share the world between them, in order to subject it to the true faith.'" (Compare Ezek. xxxviii. 5, R.V., "Cush" is "Ethiopia.")

Digitized by Google

SPECIAL SERVICES AT WESTMINSTER ABBEY.

"SIMULTANEOUS special meetings and services in connection with the efforts of the Church Missionary Society to bring before the public the claims of the heathen and Mohammedan world are now being held in the metropolis. At Westminster Abbey yesterday morning the Bishop of Cork, speaking from the words, 'Therefore they that were scattered abroad went everywhere preaching the Word' (Acts viii. 4), reminded his hearers of their obligation to spread the Gospel among the people of the earth, and at the same time condemned the introduction of the drink traffic into foreign countries, as it was a great drawback to the operations of the missionary. He also alluded in deprecatory terms to the drink traffic in England. In the afternoon Archdeacon Farrar preached from the words, 'Tell it out among the heathen that the Lord is King' (Psa. xcvi. 10), and in the course of his sermon alluded to the great growth of the Church Missionary Society, and gave some interesting statistics respecting missionary enterprise generally."

The above appeared in one of the London papers of February 8th or 10th, and it is remarkable on some accounts. The Bishop of Cork, preaching from Acts viii. 4, reminded his British hearers that as the persecuted Hebrew Christians went everywhere preaching the Gospel, so they were bound to spread the Gospel among the people of the earth. But we would ask the Bishop where he finds this stated in the four corners of God's Word as an "obligation" on any but the Hebrew people? Is it one pressing on Japanese, Chinese, Hindu, Cingalese, or Mohammedan, converts to Christianity? Surely not! Certainly these races converted to Christ do not obey the precept or go among the people of the earth to preach? The British only do it, and that because they are Israel, to whom the command went forth, "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature" (Mark xvi. 15). "Israel shall blossom and bud, and fill the face of the world with fruit" (Isa. xxvi. 7). "In thee and in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed" (Gen. xxxv. 11).

Archdeacon Farrar, preaching on Psa. xcvi. 10 (Prayer-book Version) seems also to have applied to his British (and therefore, in his view, to his Gentile, non-Israelite) congregation the Lord's command to His people to "Tell it out among the heathen (or nations), the Lord is King, the Lord reigneth." This message is not entrusted by the Lord to the heathen, or Gentiles, to proclaim "among the Gentiles." Israel is His messenger and minister (Isa. xlii. 19, lxi. 6). To them only "He sheweth His word, His statutes, and His judgments; and He hath not dealt so with any nation" (Psa. cxlvii. 19, 20). If we admit that the British are "lost Israel found," then the Bishop of Cork and Archdeacon Farrar were quite right. Their hearers were under the obligation in that case to spread the Gospel among the people of the earth, and to say to them, "the Lord Jehovah is King."

We are well aware that this teaching is abhorrent to the minds of most of our clergy, who cannot bear to think that God has still a chosen people through and by whom He works. In respect to salvation by faith alone, without works, there is doubtless no difference between Jews and Gentiles (Rom. iii. 22). "All have sinned and come short of the glory of God," and to all the offers of pardon through the precious blood are made without distinction of race, or clime, or colour. But the question still remains. God created, formed, made, and fashioned Israel to be His special separated people. "They shall show forth My praise," is His declaration respecting them in Isa. xliii. 21. "He changes not!" Who therefore will dare to say that God's ministers are changed under the Christian dispensation, or that a new (British) agency has been adopted by the Lord in violation of His oath and promises to Abraham and his seed for ever? God forbid it!

MICAH v. 2.—Therefore will He give them up (the Jews) until the time that she which travaileth hath brought forth (Israel, Isa. liv.); then the remnant of his brethren (Jews) shall return unto the children of Israel (Jer. iii. 18; Hosea i. 11; Psa. cvii. 43; Hosea xiv. 9; Dan. xii. 10).

A FULL report of the speeches (revised by the speakers) delivered at the Annual Meeting of the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association will appear in our issue for June 22, which will consist of 16 pages, price one penny.

ANGLO-ISRAEL FREE DISTRIBUTION FUND.

FORTY-SECOND MONTHLY REPORT.

THE following donations and subscriptions, from April 14th to May 13th, are very gratefully acknowledged:—

Received by Miss E. M. Rush: Mrs. H., 5s.; Rev. T. W. B., £3 3s.; Mrs. V. B., 2s. 6d.; P. N., 5s., for BANNERS; C. J. P., 5s., for BANNERS; Miss. C. (per Philo-Israel), for BANNERS, 5s.; Mrs. H. (per Philo-Israel), for BANNERS, £1.

By Mr. C. Horner: Miss M., 2s. 6d.; W. W., 3s.; Commander C., 1s.; H. E. T., 10s.; G. W., 1s. 6d.; Miss S., 1s.; Mrs. C. B. (monthly sub.), 5s.

By the Treasurer: H. G. (monthly sub.), 1s.; M. A. C., Dorking, 2s. 6d.; E. L., 5s.; J. S. C., 2s. 6d.; Mrs. P., Leamington, 3s.; Rev. R. L. B., 10s.; C. R., Devonport, £1 1s.; Miss L., 2s. 6d.; F. B. (per Rev. J. Billington), £2.

Total, £10 17s.

J. LAWRENCE, Hon. Treasurer.

The Secretaries beg to acknowledge, with many thanks, the following generous gifts:—50 copies BANNER OF ISRAEL, from Messrs. Banks and Son. 9 dozen copies Messenger, from the promoters of the JUBILEE MESSENGER FUND. 8 dozen copies "Israel in Britain," from the Author. 1,000 "Britain's Inheritance," from T. D. Alward, Esq. Parcel of BANNERS from Clevedon.

One to three BANNERS are forwarded weekly, and two fortnightly, by the Secretary, to St. John's, S. Africa; Ohio, U.S.A.; Birkenhead, Upper Teddington, Southampton, Mechanics' Institute, Crewe, Richmond, Maestag, and to Wandsworth and Wimbledon Free Public Libraries.

Forty packets of various books, pamphlets, leaflets, etc., have been forwarded, during the past month, to the following places, and public institutions:—Moreton-in-Marsh, Richmond, Upper Teddington, Charlesworth, Barnsley, Sheffield, Eastbourne, Quernerford, Lambeth, Stockwell, Crewe, Putney, Bath, Manchester, South Hayling, Stockport, Wilsden, Conway, Hull, Chippenham, Horsforth, Earl's Court, and Rome. To the Free Public Libraries at Richmond, Wandsworth, Wimbledon, Kingston, Halifax, Salford, Tonbridge, Walsall, and Newcastle-on-Tyne. Also pamphlets and leaflets, on the elementary parts of the subject, were sent to each member of the Prophetic Convention held in London. Parcels of BANNERS, etc., to Haverthwaite, Portsmouth, "Thames Church Mission," and "Mission to Deep Sea Fishermen." By Miss E. M. Rush: 25 packets of literature have been sent to the following places:—Westminster, Kensington, Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association, Blackfen (Kent), Aldershot, Caterham, Walton-on-Naze, Dover, Great Yarmouth, Alsager (Cheshire), Carlisle, Ayr (N.B.), Stirling (N.B.), Jersey, Malta, Banda (N. W. P. India), Ambala, Moulmein (Burmah), Hong Kong, Fiji, Barbadoes, Pietermaritzburg (South Africa), Port Nolloth (South Africa), Etshowe (South Africa). Also 125 BANNERS each week, and 10 fortnightly.

From our Sowers in Sheffield we learn that the work of distribution is going on apace, as well as enquiries for literature being made to them from poor working men. Further quantities will accordingly be supplied.

Another, and an indefatigable Sower, at Barnsley, is doing excellent work, and has aroused sufficient interest to induce some few more to take in the BANNER, which, he says, "Keeps one's mind well stored with good ideas." This Sower is a working man, but who frequently helps the Fund with a subscription, partly collected amongst his friends.

Our Sower at Manchester writes to the Secretary: "The books you sent me I find very useful indeed, and have been able to carry on the work more extensively, but of course it takes time to see the results of the efforts put forward, though, within the last few weeks, I have increased the sale of the BANNER by two copies a week. I have got two co-workers who take great interest in the work, and are very anxious to spread the subject of Israel in Britain; so that anything you may send will not come amiss, and I can assure you will not be wasted, but on the contrary, will be used to the best advantage." He adds, "Some of the books you sent me are now protected by cardboard backs, and will last a long time. I have one book to which I put a soft cardboard back, which has been read by over a score of persons, and is likely to last a long time yet."

Digitized by Google

Further good news comes from New Zealand, showing that God is blessing the work there too. Our correspondent, writing for a large parcel of books, states the movement is spreading, and that "not a week passes but some one calls at my house for pamphlets and information."

Another correspondent writes:—"I am trying to look on the subject at present on a purely Scriptural basis, and in an independent spirit, and in the hope of presenting it in a stronger light progressively. . . . . It will gratify you to hear that I hope my addresses are being blessed to an Australian gentlemen, who, by listening to, and reading infidel writings, had lost faith in the Word of God."

CHARLES HORNER, Secretary.

Contributions to the Fund will be thankfully received and acknowledged by the Hon. Treasurer, Miss J. Lawrence, Rosslyn, Hampton-road, Upper Teddington, Middlesex; by the Hon. Sec., Miss E. M. Rush, 103, Burnt Ash-road, Lee, London; or by Mr. Charles Horner, 34, Sheen-park, Richmond-on-Thames. Cheques may be crossed, "London and Provincial Bank, Teddington Branch." Grants of literature will be made, as far as funds allow, on application to the Secretary, or Miss E. M. Rush.

ISRAEL'S SCRIPTURE AND PRAYER UNION.

Two Cards of membership have been sent out during the past month. As we are still using Cards returned by a local Secretary, the number issued remains as before, 1,423. Two Cards have also been given out by our agent at Malta.

A donation of 1s. 2d., from M. H., Dorchester, towards the expenses of the Union, is thankfully acknowledged.

A new member, living in Dorset, writes: "I have been a constant and interested reader of the BANNER for many years past, in fact, I believe from its first issue, and I am a firm believer in 'Our Identity,' which I endeavour to help forward when opportunity serves, and I have long felt it to be a duty on my part to become a member."

A member in New Zealand earnestly requests the prayers of the Union in behalf of friends who are avowed infidels.

Will those members, who care to distribute the leaflet in reference to the Jubilee, headed, "A Call for Prayer and Praise," by Philo-Israel, kindly apply, without delay, for copies, as it is desirable to circulate the leaflet before June 20.

For the convenience of those members who wish to continue the daily reading, the following list of chapters for June are printed:—

1st ...	Psalm	cxvi.	12th ...	Psalm	cxxvii.	23rd ...	Psalm	cxxxviii
2nd...	„	cxvii.	13th ...	„	cxxviii.	24th ...	„	cxxxix.
3rd ...	„	cxviii.	14th ...	„	cxxix.	25th ...	„	cxl.
4th ...	„	cxix.	15th ...	„	cxxx.	26th ...	„	cxli.
5th ...	„	cxx.	16th ...	„	cxxxi.	27th ...	„	cxlii.
6th ...	„	cxxi.	17th ...	„	cxxxii.	28th ...	„	cxliii.
7th ...	„	cxxii.	18th ...	„	cxxxiii.	29th ...	„	cxliv.
8th ...	„	cxxiii.	19th ...	„	cxxxiv.	30th ...	„	cxlv.
9th ...	„	cxxiv.	20th ...	„	cxxxv.
10th ...	„	cxxv.	21st ...	„	cxxxvi.
11th ...	„	cxxvi.	22nd...	„	cxxxvii.

The card of membership will be sent on receipt of three stamps.

The first and second series of Monthly Comments on the whole Bible, by Philo-Israel, may now be obtained in volume form. Price in paper cover, 1s. 2d. each, post free; in cloth, 2s. each, post free. The "Prayers for Daily Use," being a prayer for each day of the week, by Philo-Israel, are 1d., or 9d. per dozen, postage extra. The prayer of the Union, as on the Card of Membership, may now be obtained printed in larger type, price 1d. for three copies, post free, or 1s. per 100 for distribution. Address, Miss E. Sibbald, 3, Townshend-villas, Richmond, Surrey.

Correspondence.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—Perhaps the following extract, taken from a Church of England newspaper (the Fireside News) will be interesting to readers of the BANNER:—

"The Queen is to sit in the CORONATION CHAIR at the Jubilee Service in Westminster Abbey. It will be placed just under the lantern, where the lecturn usually stands. The choir will be occupied by royalties and the personages in the procession; and the House of Lords will be in one transept, and the House of Commons in the other, so that the Queen will have the 'High Court of Parliament' on both sides of her.

"Tiers of seats are to be erected in the transepts and in the nave, and there are to be galleries above the aisles, on each side of the choir and nave, just as at the coronation. The composition of the 'representative congregation' is giving infinite trouble to the Lord Chamberlain and his myrmidons, but it has been settled that all mayors of England and Ireland are to be invited, and all the provosts of Scotland."

F. S. G.

47, St. Oswald-street, Queen's-park, Manchester,
May 14, 1887.

"OUT OF THE MOUTHS OF BABES AND SUCKLINGS THOU HAST PERFECTED PRAISE."

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—I have been much impressed with the description of numbers of children singing the National Anthem (which is in itself a national prayer) as the Queen entered Birmingham. In all public receptions of our Royal Family, this singing of the children forms an especial feature. and is surely an Israelitish custom, for the children sang when our Lord entered Jerusalem in triumph. I would wish also to draw attention to the two striking events of the past week. The festivities of the German Court, in celebrating the 90th birthday of their Emperor, and the enthusiastic reception of our Queen in the democratic town of Birmingham in her Jubilee Year. Contrast the facts. Here are the two great Protestant Sovereigns of Europe, each rejoicing in the love and loyalty of their people, blest with descendants even to the fourth generation, honoured and respected by the whole world. Then behold the Autocrat of "all the Russias" flying in rage and fear from the murderous attempts of his subjects, to hide himself and his family in the fortified Palace of Gatschina. Truly "Godliness is profitable unto all things, having promise of the life that now is, and that which is to come" (1 Tim. iv. 8).

I am, Sir, yours very truly,

L. T. DAVIES.

2, River Street, Bath, March 26th, 1887,

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—In chapter ii. of the Epistle to the Romans, ver. 14, we have these words written—"For when the Gentiles, which have not the law" (or have NO law), "do by nature the things contained in the law" (these Gentiles) "having not the law" (or NO LAW) "are a law unto themselves."

Now, Sir, when I read this verse, I thought what a wonderful proof this is that we are not Gentiles, because if we were Gentiles, we should not have the law, but we have it, and being Israelites of the Ten Tribes, it is right that we should have it, but not otherwise. What business has one Gentile nation with the Ten Commandments rather than any other; and yet people will have it that we are Gentiles, especially ministers of the Gospel. St. Paul tells us the Gentiles have not the law, but our clergymen say we, as the British Gentiles, have it,—entirely contradicting St. Paul! Who are we to believe? For my part I intend to believe what St. Paul says, and let the clergy and anyone else say what they like.

Dear Sir, this is a clear proof of our Hebrew origin.

I remain, yours in hope of Israel,

G. WELLS, JUN.

38, Dudley Road, Tunbridge Wells.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR PHILO-ISRAEL,—Would you kindly publish the following questions addressed to our opponents?

The first refers to the head-lines of Isaiah lx., viz.—"What Church is meant here? and where shall we find it?"

The second refers to Romans xv. 10—"Rejoice ye Gentiles with His people." Who are these people that we British Gentiles are to "rejoice with"? and where shall we find them?

If any of our opponents will give a clear answer to these queries, it will greatly oblige,

Dear Sir, yours very truly,

TYRO.

Digitized by Google

NOTICES.

All communications intended for the Editor, to be addressed: "Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Clifton, Bristol.

SUBSCRIPTIONS.

	£	s.	d.
Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free	0	7	6
Two Copies (including Double Numbers)	0	13	6
Three Copies ,, ,, ,, ...	1	0	4
Four Copies ,, ,, ,, ...	1	5	6
Six Copies ,, ,, ,, ...	1	16	4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-grand, London, to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C., or F. W. PARRY & Co., 29, Paternoster-row, London.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

Contents Bills and Show Cards may be obtained on application to the Publishers.

Advertisements should be sent to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

Prepaid Advertisements are inserted at the rate of thirty words for 1s. 4d.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION,
14, King William-street, Charing Cross, W.C.

GEORGE LILWALL, Esq.,
Will Lecture on THURSDAY EVENING, June 2, in the LIBRARY OF THE ASSOCIATION,
At Half-past Seven o'clock. Admission Free.

A New Work on the Identity of Lost Israel
By the late BISHOP TITCOMB.

Now ready, in Cloth Gilt, Bevelled Boards, Imperial 8vo, Price 3s.; sent Post Free for Postal Order or Stamps.

A MESSAGE TO THE CHURCH
FROM
THE NINETEENTH CENTURY,
BY THE LATE
RT. REV. BISHOP TITCOMB, D.D.

The Kentish Mercury, April 21st, says:—"This book derives a peculiar and pathetic interest from the circumstances that the proofs of its concluding pages were revised by the author during the last few days of his life, and that its publication took place simultaneously with his death. One feels, in noticing a book under such circumstances, a special responsibility, when the author is removed beyond the reach of human criticism of whatever kind. But in truth it is impossible to glance at these pages without being struck by the deep and reverent research into the prophetic Scriptures which it manifests, by the tone of piety that pervades it, as well as the lucidity and eloquence of its style. Nor is it necessary to express concurrence with the views of the gifted and pious author in his prophetic theories to give this praise. Of course with regard to Dr. Titcomb's prophetic interpretations there will be much difference of opinion, but there can be none in the mind of any impartial person who reads this work, either as to the diligence with which he test mony of the prophets has been studied, or the earnestness of the expositor in stating his conclusions. Bishop Titcomb, it is well-known to those who have studied his works, was one of the school of prophetic interpreters who believe that the British Empire, or perhaps, more accurately speaking, the English-speaking race, are identified with those whom we have been in the habit of calling the 'Lost Tribes of Israel.'" [Then follow several extracts.]

London: Robert Banks & Son, Racquet court, Fleet-st F. W. Parry & Co., Paternoster-row, and all booksellers.

EDWARD HINE'S PUBLICATIONS.
SHOULD BE READ & DISTRIBUTED.

FORTY-SEVEN IDENTIFICATIONS, 6d.; post free, 7d.
CUI BONO? 6d., post free, 7d.
LOST ISRAEL FOUND, 3s. 6d., post free, 3s. 9d.
F. W. PARRY, 29, Paternoster Row, London, or direct of ISAAC LOVELAND, Shoreham, Sevenoaks.

LEAFLET FOR THE YOUNG,
WHO ARE YOU?
Price 1s. per 100; postage 1½d.
To be obtained from the Hon. Sec., Anglo-Israel Association, 27, Pulteney Street, Bath; and of R. Banks & Son, Racquet Court, Fleet Street.

"A happy effort, well and successfully made, and likely to lead to good results. The Leaflet teaches the Scriptural distinction between Israel and Judah. . . . The separate captivities. . . Our nation's possession of the Gates, the Sabbath, etc."—Banner of Israel, Mar. 16, 1887.

WORKS BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

The Geography of the Gates. With Map and six full page, and one double-page, Illustrations, printed on plate paper. 208 pages, in handsome cloth, gilt Price 3s. 6d., post free 3s. 10d.

An Elementary Digest or Sketch of the Chief Facts and Teachings of the Great Pyramid of Egypt. Adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific 56 pages. Illustrated with Diagrams, price 4d., post free 5d. 10th Thousand.

Our Identity with the House of Israel. Price 4d. Reprinted from "Clifton Chronicle Letters"

The History of the House of Israel; How they were Lost, and How they were Found, Told for the Children. Price 6d., cloth 1s.; post free 7d. and 1s. 1d. Fourth Edition. Eleventh thousand

A Resume of the Scriptural Argument, proving the Identity of the British Race with the Lost Ten Tribes. Price 1d.; 6s. per 100. New edition now ready.
R. Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Crown 8vo., wrapper, price 6d.
Where is the Firstborn?
An investigation of the British Claim to Identification with the House of Israel. By the REV. G. A. ROGERS, M.A. Edited by his Widow. Author of "The Coronation Stone," "The Stranger Crowd," &c., &c.

"Ably written, well edited, and carefully presented to the readers . . . We wish it a large circulation."—Banner of Israel.
R. Banks and Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London.

Fifty Reasons Why the Anglo-Saxons are Israelites of the Lost Tribes of the House of Israel?
By Rev. W. H. POOLE, D.D.

"There is a principle which is a bar against all argument, and which cannot fail to keep a man in everlasting ignorance. This principle is, contempt prior to examination."—Dr. PALEY.

Price Sixpence, by post Sevenpence.
London: R. BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

THE TEETH, THE TEETH, THOSE PRECIOUS TEETH!
Save, Purify, Beautify.
GEORGE & WELCH'S
CARBOLINE
1/6 (TOOTH PASTE). 2/6 per Pot
Is the Best Known
Cleanser, Preserver, and Deodoriser.
Dental Guide says:—"No Tooth application equals the Carbolics."
Proprietors: GEORGE & WELCH, Worcester.
Through Chemists, or Post Free from Makers.

ETHELINE
A New and most effective Remedy for CORNS.—Perfectly safe and harmless. Is very easily applied. Cures in a few applications, without the slightest pain. Everyone troubled with either Corns, Warts, or Bunions, will find relief by using ETHELINE.
To be obtained of all Chemists, or post free for 14 stamps from J. LLEWELLYN, CHEMIST, COWBRIDGE.

PRICE 21s., POST FREE. HARNESS' WILL LAST FOR YEARS.
ELECTROPATHIC BELT.
An agreeable, natural, and certain remedy for
Rheumatism, Lumbago, Sciatica, Nervous Affections, Sleeplessness, Paralysis, Indigestion, Constipation, Liver and Kidney Disorders, Ladies' Ailments, &c.
SEND POSTAL ORDER OR CHEQUE FOR 21s. FOR AN Electropathic Belt (post free), and you will have an effectual and marvellous remedy always at hand. Harness' Electropathic Belt promotes Health, Strength, and Energy.
Thousands of Testimonials received. Write for copies or call and see the originals.
Pamphlet and advice free of charge.
The Medical Battery Company, Limited,
52, OXFORD ST., LONDON, W.
Corner of Rathbone Place

PUBLISHED BY ROBT. BANKS & SON,
RACQUET COURT, FLEET STREET, E.C.

ISRAEL'S HOPE AND DESTINY. By D. A. Onslow, J.P. Vol. II., III., IV., and V. Cloth, gilt, 3s. 6d. each. Quarterly parts, 6d.

THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL. By the Rev. Joseph Wild, D.D., Pastor of Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, New York. Price 3s., post free 3s. 3d.

THE FUTURE OF ISRAEL AND JUDAH. Companion volume to above, By the Rev. Joseph Wild, D.D. With Portrait of the Author. Cloth, gilt lettered, bevelled boards. Price 2s., post free 2s. 3d.

THE SISTERS OF HARROWDALE RECTORY. A Tale of Great Interest for Young People. By Mrs. M. A. Searson. With double-page illustration of Harrowdale Rectory. Price 2s. 6d., post free 2s. 9d.

JEHOVAH TRIUMPHANT. The New and Complete Theology and Electric Light of the Bible, containing the History of British-Israel, Compiled from the Sacred Scriptures. Cloth gilt, price 10s. 6d., post free for Postal Order or Cheque.

THE GEOGRAPHY OF THE GATES. By PHILO-ISRAEL. With Map, and six full page, and one double-page, Illustrations, printed on plate paper. 208 pages, in handsome cloth, gilt. Price 3s. 6d.; post free.

THE WORD: THE WORLD: THE BRANCH. By J. LEYLAND FIELDEN, Esq. Price 12s., post free.

EPHRAIM-ENGLAND. The Nineteenth Century Revelation of the Fruits of History. By Rev. R. DOUGLAS, Vicar of Kidsgrove. Cloth gilt, lettered, 4s., gilt edges 5s., free by post.

FIFTY REASONS WHY THE ANGLO-SAXONS ARE ISRAELITES of the Lost Tribes of the House of Israel. By Rev. W. H. POOLE, D.D. Price 6d., post free 7d.

BIBLE LESSONS AND REFLECTIONS. By the late ROBERT GAIRDNER, of Kilmarnock, N.B. Price 2s. 6d., by post 2s. 9d.; cheap edition, limp cloth, 1s., by post, 1s. 2d.

THE ANGLO-ISRAEL POST-BAG; or, How Arthur Came to See It. By the Right Rev. BISHOP TITCOMB. Price 2s. 6d. in cloth gilt; paper cover, 1s. 6d., by post 1d. extra.

THE ISRAELITES FOUND IN THE ANGLO-SAXONS. The Ten Tribes supposed to have been Lost, traced from the land of their captivity to their occupation of the Isles of the Sea. By WILLIAM CARPENTER. Price 2s. 6d., by post 2s. 8d.

THE ANSWER TO THE EASTERN QUESTION, With Some Facts Concerning the Identity of the British With Israel. By the Author of "The New Old Story," enlarged. Price 3d.; for distribution, 50 copies, 11s., post free.

CARDINAL PROOFS THAT THE BRITISH Are the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel—the Abrahamic Covenant. By F. W. PHILLIPS. With two chapters by PHILO-ISRAEL. Price 6d., post free 7d.

THE NEW OLD STORY. By "A E I." Price 6d., post free; in cloth, 1s., post free.

THE BIBLE ATLAS. To Illustrate the Old and New Testaments. Price 1s.; post free 1s. 1d.

ANGLO-ISRAEL TRACTS. 8 pp. Royal 16mo., on toned paper. Adapted to enclose in letters, and for general distribution. No. 1—12. Half-penny each, 12 copies post free, 6d. Specimen packet for 6 stamps.

PRESENT-DAY PROBLEMS, and How Anglo-Israel Truth Explains and Solves Them. By V. M. COX. 3d., by post 4 stamps.

LIGHT SHED BY THE GREAT PYRAMID OF EGYPT on the Last Days of this Dispensation, from A.D. 1814 to A.D. 1922. By JAMES KEITH. Price 4d., by post 5 stamps.

NEW TESTAMENT TRUTH on the Anglo-Israel Controversy. By J. G. TAYLOR. Price 3d., by post 4 stamps.

A NEW LIGHT. An Elementary Pamphlet for General Distribution. By A E I. Price 2d., by post 2½d. in stamps.

EPHRAIM-ISRAEL, the Pivot Nation of Prophecy and History. By V. M. COX. Price 1d., one dozen free for 1s.

AMMI; OR THE CHOSEN PEOPLE. By Miss BIRD. Tracing the Descent of the British People from Abraham as "friend of God," and showing that true science, history, philology, and ethnology, are on the side of the Identity of the Anglo-Saxon Race with the Ten Lost Tribes. Price 2d., post free 2½d.; 12s. 6d. per 100 for distribution.

IS NOT QUEEN VICTORIA the Royal Seed to King David's Throne, and Are Not Her Subjects, the British People, the Ten Lost Tribes? By W. HOPTON. Price 2d.; 12s. 6d. per 100.

A Complete Catalogue Free on Application.

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. F. W. PARRY (late GUEST & Co.), 29, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, JUNE 1, 1887 [All rights reserved.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."

(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. XI., No. 545. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, JUNE 8, 1887. [PRICE ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

PAGE

The Vulnerable Points of the British Empire 229
"Light and Time" 230
The Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association. Annual General Meeting 231
Past and Current History and its Testimony to Our Identity with Israel. By Miss V. M. Cox.—Part II. 232
The Law of the Land 234
Israel in Britain 235
Correspondence 235

THE VULNERABLE POINTS OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE.

THE Germans seem to be exercised by the fact that the British Empire is practically defenceless, and that the outland portion of it is at the mercy of an "enterprising enemy." Our "military impotence" is the subject of inquiry by foreign staff officers, and these from time to time publish the results of their investigations. They all have come to the conclusion that the Empire of Great Britain is on its "last legs"; that we are not prepared for defence, and that we are sure to collapse and submit, if vigorously assailed. "The current number of the Deutsche Rundschau (says the Manchester Guardian) has a careful essay by Herr F. H. Geffcken, expounding to all reading Germans how the great English "World-Empire is no longer able to defend itself." The writer explains how the people here resolutely refuse to fortify the coaling stations (our Gates) abroad, and surveys our coasts, suggesting, kindly, that a number of points exist on our coast where a landing will be perfectly easy, naming others where he advises nothing to be attempted, because they are adequately protected. "He describes London as the heart of the whole Empire, not of England only; and the unexpressed inference is the exclamation of Marshal Blucher, 'What a city to sack!'" Such are the cogitations and hopes of our German brothers—fellow Israelites, according to the Rev. Robert Douglas! These all conveniently forget, or perhaps do not know, that the British are Israel, and have the defence they lack in their own Fatherland! While they are in terror lest by another war with France they may lose their newly-acquired provinces, Alsace and Lorraine, and that the frontier may be shifted to the Rhine, we British give the idea of invasion no thought, but live "carelessly" and confidently in our isles, according to the prophecies (Deut. xxxiii. 28; Ezek. xxxiv. 25; xxxviii. 11; xxxix. 6). Our world-wide Empire further gives us no anxiety. We seem to deem ourselves perfectly secure, even at the Antipodes, and it requires incessant warnings from home and abroad to induce our thoughtless people to take even a single step towards the fortification of our defenceless coaling stations. We believe ourselves to be invulnerable, and we never imagine that we occupy a position that all the world envies; or an empire, in short, that every nation under the sun covets to possess. This state of confidence is horribly imprudent, of course, but it is prophetic, and an indication that we are Israel; for it is predicted in God's Word, as we have seen, that Israel shall dwell "confidently" and "carelessly" in the isles. The wonder is, that lying a prey, as it were, to the national robbers of the spoils of the earth, the Germans, French, and Russians, who clearly want to humble and destroy our Empire, have not yet laid hostile hands upon our Gates and colonial and heathen dominions. Why is this? The will is not wanting. These nations have the power! According to them we are powerless to resist! Why do they not, then, help themselves? The fact is, the Lord God of Israel is our defence. He has promised that our island home, His appointed place for Israel (2 Sam. vii. 10), shall be inviolate, and never insulted by the foot of foreign foe. He, therefore, is our guardian, and surrounds our islands with a defence which our German and French would-be invaders and conquerors may try to pass, but will find to their cost they cannot. As to our foreign Gates and coaling stations beyond sea, they are God's gift to us, His people Israel, and while He bids us fortify and close them, as Gates, we shall not lose them, even though an "enterprising enemy" tries hard to capture them. For God has given us a splendid "marine" and magnificent war-fleets, which are now, or will be, when the time comes, more than a match for all our enemies. Besides that, our German and French "fire-eaters" forget that they have their own quarrels to compose and the great earthquake woe to pass through before they can venture to make Israel their enemy. Perhaps when they are engaged in that tremendous conflict they will find their power to invade British territory here or abroad a little beyond their strength, especially when they come to realise that we have God Almighty's defence, which they themselves conspicuously lack. Meanwhile the empire is increasing in several directions, and our "vulnerable points" are decidedly multiplying too! The following, for instance, shows that we have now the Boers for neighbours in Zululand, and that we have pushed the frontier in South Africa well forward Northwards, to include a fiercely warlike native race, dependent for existence to-day on the sword of the British people:—

Digitized by Google

We have received the following telegrams through Reuter's agency:—

ZULULAND, Pietermaritzburg, May 13.

It is officially announced that Sir Arthur Havelock has been authorised to proclaim the whole of Zululand, with the exception of the New Boer Republic, as a British possession.

A Royal Commission will shortly be issued appointing Sir Arthur Havelock Governor of the new territory, and empowering him to legislate by proclamation.—Times, May 14.

Egypt also is another case in point. The Egyptian public is greatly exercised by the reports which are rife that Sir H. D. Wolff has, by order of the British cabinet, concluded an arrangement with the Sultan whereby Egypt will be evacuated by our troops "in not less than two or more than five years." This is considered fatal, and so it will be, if true; because we promised to continue in Egypt till our specified stipulated work was done, and "the determination of a fixed period is itself sufficient to prevent the accomplishment of the task." "If the troops are absolutely withdrawn within five years," wrote the Times' correspondent on May 12th from Cairo, and

If the protection of the country be left exclusively to native troops, twelve months will not elapse before there will come about a military revolt, an exodus of the Europeans, and a financial collapse. Whether these consequences, which are purely local, are counterbalanced by Imperial considerations I offer no opinion, but that they will ensue is as certain as is your reception of this despatch. The highest authorities may blind themselves as to the effect of the personal influence of the Khedive, the possibility of playing black regiments against fellaheen, or the employment of hostility against the Turks in favour of English administrators, but the whole fabric is only a flattering tale of hope. The period between the fixed date of the evacuation and the day when that date is made known will be one of ceaseless intrigue, and the sole hope of even the English sympathising party will be in provoking a premature ebullition, so as to render the fulfilment of the promised evacuation impossible. With every class thus interested in promoting disturbance, I have no hesitation in saying that sudden evacuation to-morrow, before the disorder was organised, would be less dangerous.

So far the fears of the Egyptian people, and the Times' correspondent's description of the matter. But what is the true explanation of all this? Are we really going to abandon Egypt in two or five years? Is the "unspeakable Turk" to come back into Egypt to rule there again as in the old days? Do financial men believe this? Let us ask the Financial News of the 13th of May, and hear what it says:—

Sir H. Drummond Wolff is said to have agreed that we should retire in five years. He had already agreed to the appointment of Moukhtar Pasha to represent Turkey in Egypt, and that alone has proved a mischievous nuisance. The proposal that we should withdraw in five years was modified by a stipulation that if disorder recurs we shall return. And what is the reply? We turn our cheek to the smiter, and we are smitten: the Porte insists that we must go in less than five years, and that when we go we must not return. For once, and only once, and by means of England, Turkey hopes to resume authority over one, and that the richest, of its alienated provinces. What will be the next step in these miserable negotiations no one can tell. Everyone knows that without our control Egypt would, in a year, be given up to anarchy or re-occupied by Turkey; everyone knows that in either case the Suez Canal would be in danger, and the interest on the Egyptian Debt would cease to be paid. In view of these mischievous proposals and their inevitable results, why do not Egyptian Stocks fall with a rush? The answer is that no one believes that we shall do any of these things that are suggested. The farce is kept up partly to satisfy the extreme Radicals here and partly to show that we are willing to meet "the natural susceptibilities of France." But it is time that the farce was over, and that by a permanent settlement one burning question at least should be withdrawn from European politics.

Egyptian stocks have not fallen, and there is the true index of the facts! We are not going to give up Egypt, and no one believes we shall!

But here is a very "vulnerable point of the British Empire," which we are persuaded God Himself is protecting for us. How it will be brought about in respect to Egypt we cannot possibly guess. But we are sure of this: the matter is in God's hands, and He will see that the land of Egypt which He has once given us to bless and save, will be placed under the protection of His people Israel, to His own glory. To Him shall be, in the result, all the praise.

"LIGHT AND TIME."

A CURIOUS pamphlet under the above title, "Light and Time," has been forwarded to us. It is compiled and edited by Major-General J. W. Hoggan, C.B., of Edinburgh, who we have observed sometimes takes the chair at meetings where Our Identity is mooted, and appears generally inclined to adopt some of our Anglo-Israelite views. We say some because in other radical directions he differs from the writers in the BANNER, as we shall presently notice.

On page 4, the writer speaks very favourably of our notions and intentions as Bible students who desire to literalise the Scriptures, as against those whose object is altogether to spiritualise them. He sees that there must be a body of Israelites somewhere to answer to "the day of Jacob's trouble," predicted in Jer. xxx. and Rev. vii., and thinks that "Israel will be in all probability found amongst the British nation" (p. 5). If we enquire why the General holds that belief, we find it is because, like the Jews in the time of Esther, the whole House of Israel must be providentially preserved and delivered from their enemies, since Michael, the special angel appointed by God to look after them (Dan. xii. 1) must be doing his work for their benefit now. Then follows this remarkable sentence: "There is no nation in the world blessed by God as the British nation is, for it alone is in the enjoyment of most of the blessings that were promised to Israel" (Lev. xxvi).

Instead, however, of arguing from these just premises that the British must therefore be Israel (God being true), the compiler of the pamphlet comes to the conclusion that because "the whole House of Israel is sure to be restored after a day of trouble, and made to inherit their land, therefore this is a parenthetical dispensation, having much higher advantages than those that Israel will ever enjoy!" This strikes us as distinctly a non sequitur, and unreasonable as it is unscriptural! The writer has adopted the idea that in the present time "Christendom," and "not the British nation only," has been brought by God into the place and position, nationally, once occupied by Israel!" (p. 6). Here is another surprising declaration, for which the Word of God gives not the slightest support, but on the contrary, proves it to be impossible, because the latter represents Him as faithful to His oath to Israel, and always unchangeable. General Hoggan says, "Israel in the past were highly favoured." "Now Christendom is highly favoured" (p. 7). That is, God has changed, and gives to "Christendom" to-day what He promised exclusively on oath to the seed of Abraham for ever, but never promised to Christendom at all! In fact, if General Hoggan be right, then "Christendom" ought to have the "signs" of Israel, such as "multitudinousness, Empire, the throne of David, Sabbath observance, the Word of God, truth in religion, the missionary spirit, great wealth, a Western island home, the Gates of the world, a mighty Colonial Empire, the Heathen Empire of the earth, and so on." Has it? It has none of these things, as a whole! The next sentence of the writer however is bewildering, for on p. 7 he says: "Christendom is the wild olive now grafted contrary to nature into the good olive tree and is partaking of the root and fatness," pro tempore. It is not explained which is "the good olive tree" into which the said "Christendom" has been grafted, nor what that "good olive tree" really is!

Digitized by Google

General Hoggan commends to us for our consideration as Anglo-Israelites certain propositions, five in number, which evidently in his opinion go counter to our asserted claims, that our nation, quâ nation, is Israel of the Ten Tribes. He states them thus :—

The Anglo-Israel theorists should consider the following :—

Can a nation be under the favour and goodness of God, and at the same time under His wrath and judgment?

Can a nation be set aside, God declaring them to be not His people (Hos. i. 6, 9), He having disowned them for a while because of their idolatries, and at the same time be taken up by Him for such rich blessing, and called His?

Can a people who, through ignorance and blindness (which God in government has permitted to happen to them), hate the name of Christ, be the same as those who, in profession at least, accept of Christ, and call themselves by His name—Christians (Christ's men)?

Can a people of whom it is written, they "shall dwell alone, and not be reckoned among the nations," be the same as a people which in wealth, position, and greatness, is reckoned as the first or chief amongst the nations?

Can a people about whom it is written, they "shall abide many days without king, and without prince, and without sacrifice," etc. (Hos. iii. 4, 5), be the same as those who have NEVER been without a king, prince, etc.?

These five difficulties submitted for our cogitation are clearly the outcome of want of information on the part of the General.

He has failed to realise the Scriptural distinction between Israel and Judah, and that while one House was sentenced by the Lord for sin, to wrath and judgment, to the other was given, for obedience and submission to the Atonement of Christ, the favour and goodness of God. The difficulty that Hosea i. 6—9, suggests to the General is answered by ver. 10 and 11 of the same prophet. "Lo-Ammi" Israel having been under God's curse at one period of their history, was to be restored to favour when they accepted Christ, and become "sons of the living God" by faith. Then such promises as Jer. iii. 12 to 14 ; Ezek. xi. 16 ; and Zech. x. 6 (R. V.) would be theirs, and "multitudinousness" and Christian blessings would become their national possessions because of "the anointing" (Isa. x. 27).

The third difficulty has no place in Scripture, but only in General Hoggan's mind. "The blindness in part" has happened to Judah-Israel, as St. Paul implies in Rom. xi. 25; while Ephraim-Israel, accepting Christ as his "Lo-Ammi," have become "sons of the living God" or the Christian nation (Hosea i. 10). The stock objection respecting Balaam's prophecy we have lately met and answered in these pages (see pp. 111, 112). The people who "dwell alone, not reckoning themselves among the nations" are pro tanto a blessed nation, for Balaam's words were intended to convey a blessing and not a curse (see Numb. xxiii. 8, 11, 12, 13, 20, 25, 27). Therefore it is natural, right, and proper, that a people possessing the blessings the General mentions, should also be honoured by wealth, position, greatness, and the chieftainship of nations! Their unique position, "dwelling alone," is that described in Exod. xxxiii. 16—viz., their possession of God's presence continually with them as a nation. The last difficulty is one which we are surprised the General should have advanced at all. Were not the ancestors of the British for centuries "without a king, prince, or sacrifice," while they were painfully struggling across the continent and by sea from Media and Palestine to these islands of the West? and is it not true that if we suppose Hosea iii. to be applicable to Judah (but not to Israel) the words have always been, and are now to-day literally fulfilled by them? The pamphlet continues after the following fashion. The readers will see how close the writer comes to the truth, and yet how unaccountably he falls, immediately after, into error. He says :—

Israel (or Ephraim)—the Ten Tribes; Judah and Benjamin—the Two Tribes, are distinct from one another, and will be differently dealt with by God in the future.

Judah has been two or three times restored to the land, God showing more favour to them because of David having sprung from Judah (both the typical and the antitypical), and thus they were in the land when Christ, the true David, was born. But Judah was guilty of the murder of Christ, whom they rejected as their King. Hence their judgment when Jerusalem was taken by Titus, and the yet greater judgment of the Tribulation that awaits them when Jerusalem will again be destroyed. Israel (or Ephraim) has never been restored. These Ten Lost Tribes are spoken of as scattered and outcast, and it is said, "He that scattered Israel will gather." It is likewise stated from whence God will gather them,—"from ASSYRIA, EGYPT, PATHROS, CUSH, ELAM, SHINAR, HAMATH, and from the ISLANDS OF THE SEA" (Isa. xi. 11—16). The East countries, then, chiefly, rather than the West, is the quarter in which these tribes will be found, though it is possible that some of them may also be amongst the British nation. This admission, however, differs from the positive assertion that the British are the Lost Tribes. Those of Israel are spoken of as lost because their identity before man has been lost, but God knows them, of course. With Judah it is different. Their identity is preserved. Hence it is proverbial that a "Jew is known anywhere."

Israel will not be in the land (Palestine) till after the Tribulation. They will THEN get their blessing; all the promises will be made good to them, the rebels having been previously purged out, and the nation duly sifted (Ezek. xx. 38).

No doubt the "gathering" will be from all parts, but inasmuch as Isaiah mentions the Islands of the Sea (or West) as one of the spots where Israel will be found; and Hosea and Jeremiah declare that the West, and yet the North country will be the seat of Israel's power, we do not see that "the East rather than the West is the quarter in which these Ten Tribes will be found." As to the supposition that Israel will get her blessing after restoration and after her tribulation is over, we should like General Hoggan to explain to us (if this be so) when and where Joseph is to enjoy his birthright prior to the restoration and union with Judah? It cannot be after that event because at that period all the tribes will "share and share alike" (Ezek. xxxvii. 22—28). It was not before the First Advent; history tells us that! Logic affirms that therefore it must be NOW! Will the General deny that? Will he substantiate his contention from the Scriptures? Let him try! We promise him he will fail.

THE METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING.

THE Ninth Annual Public Meeting of this Association took place in Exeter (Lower) Hall, on Tuesday evening, May 24th. There was a large attendance and the meeting was in every respect a success. Prayer having been offered by the Rev. James S. Forsyth, M.A., the National Anthem was sung, it being the Jubilee year, after which the secretary (the Rev. James Billington, F.R.H.S.), gave an abstract of the report.

Admiral Bedingfeld, who occupied the chair, said he was sure they all joined cordially with the Council in regretting the deaths of their president, the Right Rev. Bishop Titcomb, and their two vice-presidents, Admiral Dunn and Mr. William Haslam. He spoke feelingly when he said these three old friends had their highest esteem, and the Association regretted their loss exceedingly. He would not detain the meeting with any remarks of his, seeing that they had so many able and eloquent speakers to address them, including their old friend Philo-Israel.

Douglas A. Onslow, Esq., J.P., in proposing the adoption of the Report, said: I think we may congratulate ourselves in having presented a tolerably fair report of the past year's labours. Personally I take every opportunity of speaking on the subject wherever I am. I have been extremely surprised lately. A gentleman, who is an inspector of one of Her Majesty's Local Government Boards, has written a book on the subject. I should have as soon have expected him to write a book on the Chinese language as upon this subject; and I am pleased to find that men occupying the position of this gentleman are taking an interest in this great matter. Mr. Onslow then referred to a Prophetic Conference held in the North-western division of London, at which a paper by Dr. Alder Smith was read, and concluded his speech by moving the adoption of the report.

Digitized by Google

The Rev. Robert Douglas, M.A., next addressed the meeting on the subject of "England's Jubilee—A Divine Manifestation of British-Israel's Truth and Duty." This was an able address and was several times applauded. The Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A.; followed with a learned and carefully prepared speech on "The Gentilization of the House of Israel." The Rev. George Hider, of Paignton, spoke on "The Practical Value of Anglo-Israel Truth," and Mr. E.W. Bird (Philo-Israel), followed with an address on "What Place is there in the Divine Economy for Our Identity, in the Present Dispensation." A vote of thanks to the chairman succeeded, and the meeting concluded by singing, "All hail the power of Jesu's name." The Benediction closed a meeting which was a decided success; the collection and contributions sent in amounting to nearly £50.

[The four addresses above referred to will be published in extenso in our number for June 22, which will consist of sixteen pages, the price being one penny. We trust our friends will endeavour to give this, our Jubilee number, a wide circulation].

PAST AND CURRENT HISTORY AND ITS TESTIMONY TO OUR IDENTITY WITH ISRAEL.

A Lecture by Miss V. M. Cox, delivered at Bath and Clifton on April 28 and 29, 1887.

(Continued from page 219).

PART II.

So far Mr. Froude. But we can assure him that this gloomy apprehension is utterly groundless. For Britain is the House of Joseph, the "fruitful bough by a well, whose branches (the very word employed by the Author of 'Oceana') run over the wall," yet nevertheless derive perpetual nourishment and strength from the parent stem, which still remains fruitful and flourishing. God's word cannot fail, and it is because of His faithfulness to His covenant that so deep a love for the Homeland is implanted in the breasts of her colonial children. Have they not shewn their fidelity in such wise that we should be mad to question it. Did they not, in a dark hour of our national history, pour their gathered gold with lavish generosity into Britannia's lap? nay, did they not devote to her service what was far more precious than gold, the flower of their little army? 700 noble hearted men who were ready, aye! and glad to take their lives in their hands, and march into the very jaws of death if by doing it they could bring honour to the old flag, and strengthen Britain's hands in the day of her sore necessity.

And is not India loyal? For answer we need only remember how prompt and hearty were the offers of assistance even from native princes when the stealthy advance of Russia toward our frontier made war for a time seem imminent. India has learned to understand that she is happiest, freest, safest under British rule, and she is well resolved to acknowledge no other. Read the interesting accounts of the Indian celebrations in honour of the Jubilee. Learn how 18,000 children of Bombay marched in procession past the Duke of Connaught, bearing banners with the inscription "Our beloved Empress;" how everywhere the fiftieth year of Victoria's reign was hailed with a boundless enthusiasm that would have been less surprising in our own flesh and blood, but was unprecedented from a conquered and a subject people. India in truth is being silently revolutionised. Our Western civilisation is leavening that mighty mass; our glorious language is spreading in every direction, and slowly yet surely the pure truths of Christianity are undermining the hoary superstitions of ages. For Israel first subjugates and then evangelises. For this her empire ever grows, no matter what party dominates in the State. God gives her "the heritage of the heathen," that she may give the heathen the divine message of free salvation. Far other were the conquests of the old time empires of Babylon, Greece and Rome, far other those of Spain in mediæval times, and those of France to-day. Not truth but error has been propagated by these nations, while their rule has been anything but a blessing to the unfortunate peoples that have been compelled to submit to it. Israel-Britain's rule, and hers only, brings civilisation, security, and Gospel light!

Before passing to a different phase of our subject may I invite your attention to an entirely new version of a very old story in verse; that of "the old woman who lived in her shoe." You will probably agree that if the unknown author is not aware of Our Identity it is a thousand pities that he should remain in ignorance of it. We are all familiar with the old nursery rhyme, and shall not find it difficult to comprehend the following clever adaptation, which fairly sparkles with Identity points.

"THE BIG SHOE." *

"Can you find out the likeness? a portly old dame,
The Mother of millions, Britannia by name;
And, howe'er it may strike you in reading the song,
Not stinted in space for lodging the throng:
Since the sun can himself hardly manage to go
In a day and a night from the heel to the toe.

On the arch of the instep, she builds up her throne,
And with seas rolling under, she sits there alone,
With her heel at the foot of the Himalayas planted
And her toe in the icebergs, unchilled and undaunted!

Yet, though justly of all her fine family proud,
'Tis no light undertaking to rule such a crowd;
Not to mention the trouble of seeing them fed,
And dispensing with justice the broth and the bread.

Some will seize upon one, some are left with the other;
And so the whole household gets into a pother;
But the rigid old dame has a summary way
Of her own, when she finds there is mischief to pay.

Only once she was posed, when the little boy, Sam,
Who had always before been as meek as a lamb,
Refused to take tea, as his mother had bid,
And returned saucy answers because he was chid!

Not content even then, he cut loose from her throne,
And set about making a shoe of his own,
Which succeeded so well, and was filled up so fast
That the world in amazement, confessed at the last,
(Looking on at the work with a gasp and a stare)
That 'twas hard to tell which would be best of the pair!

Side by side they are standing together to-day,
Side by side may they keep their strong foothold for aye;
And beneath the broad sea whose blue depths intervene,
May the 'finishing string' be unbroken between!"

To one sentiment in the foregoing we must take exception. There can be (for us) no question, now or ever, as to "which will be best of the pair." That point was finally settled when the aged patriarch Jacob, under divine inspiration, pronounced over Manasseh's head the prophetic words: "He also shall be a people, and he also shall be great, but truly his younger brother shall be greater than he; and his seed shall become a multitude of nations." There have been prophets of evil who have predicted that Canada will, in course of time, separate herself from the British Empire, and enter upon a political union with the United States. But the Marquis of Lorne (an ex-Governor-General of Canada) entertains a widely different opinion, and he is not an unlikely man to know something of the Canadian sentiment in regard

* From "Bell's Elocutionist."

Digitized by Google

to this matter. His views are exactly on our lines, as a brief quotation will shew; not that we have reason to suppose the Marquis in sympathy with Anglo-Israel teaching; he is but one more blind witness; and his testimony is certainly not the less valuable on that account.

In a most interesting volume, entitled "Canadian Pictures" (of which he is the author), there is a chapter headed "Relations between Canada and England," towards the close of which he remarks:—

"I have often been asked whether the feeling of Canada in regard to its connection with the Empire remains as strong as before. I believe it to be even stronger than it was formerly; and the best test that this is the case is seen in the fact that no public man or public body, has ever ventured to formulate in recent years, with any success, a contrary policy. I have often been asked too if I believed that the feeling of the United States with regard to the incorporation of Canada is not as strong as before: and in reply to this I would say that it is an undoubted fact that the United States would gladly welcome Canada into their empire; but the Canadians show as yet no sign that they desire this consummation, and except under very great provocation it would not be pressed by the public men of the United States. Their idea is that the pear when ripe will drop into their lap, but meantime the pear is ripening with a tendency to sow vigorous seeds under its own old branches, and to live on in a more vigorous and extended life as a separate nationality, holding the alliance with England as its best guarantee for the same."

On another page the Marquis describes in ardent language the intense loyalty of our Colonies as follows. "They are," he says, "thoroughly devoted to the connection that exists between them and the Mother Country, a parent land which has allowed its children the utmost freedom. It is our duty to cherish and foster those feelings of loyalty which they express. We should remember what strong nations their descendants must become, and how it is for our interest to make them satisfied to live under the flag we serve, for commerce always follows the flag, and a greater commerce both for them and for us will be obtained by an adhesion to the sentiment which made them one with ourselves. Their countries offer to our youth, unable to find a proper outlet at home, an unfailing field of success. . . . Almost everywhere our tongue predominates, and our own customs are observed. With the dominion of Canada and the Australian Continent in close relation to England she need never fear that the proud position she has gained in the world can ever be shaken or even questioned."

We have said that we cannot believe Canada will become detached from the empire and unite herself to the States. We do, however, look confidently forward to a day, distant perhaps, but sensibly drawing nearer, when the great American nation shall voluntarily seek a closer bond of association with that yet greater nation whence it originally sprung. Ten years ago this very month, the BANNER (then in the first year of its existence) published an article on "the Federation of the whole of the English-speaking peoples," and, after quoting at some length from a speech of Lord Dufferin's, proceeded to comment on it as follows:—

We know, though our blind Viceroy probably does not, why Great Britain and her many colonies are closely "bound in the bonds of friendship and unity"; why the American States and the British nation, with her Colonies, are annually drawing nearer and nearer to each other in the ties of friendly union; why the English tongue has already covered one-third of the human race; why the representative Government flourishes among this people, and among them alone; and, finally, why it is in truth a matter for pride and elation merely to belong to this imperial race. The secret is one lying on the surface! It is this—that, being Israel, "the Anglo-Saxon nations" are destined eventually to become "one grand, united Federation of States," "a nation and a company of nations," as God promised Jacob that it should be (Gen. xxxv. 11); that this race being destined to inherit the earth, "their language has already dominated over one-third of the human family, and will ere long fill the whole earth" (Dan. ii. 35).

To such a future not ourselves alone, but many who have no suspicion of Our Identity are hopefully looking forward. Among such is Mr. Osborne Morgan, the Radical member for Battersea. "Imperial Federation," says he, "may possibly be followed by the union of Great Britain and the United States. If ever these two Anglo-Saxon nations re-unite, it will be a happy day, not only for the English-speaking people throughout the world, but also for all oppressed nationalities." Froude tells us that Sir George Grey, too (whom he visited in New Zealand) contemplated "some eventual far-off league between the members of the British race scattered over the world, for mutual defence and assistance. The policy of kindred he believed to be so strong in us that, in some form or other, America and the old home would draw together again, and the Colonies be included in the bond." Froude himself expresses the opinion that "if such a bond were ever formed, time, which dissolves all things, would soon dissolve it again." But Froude knows nothing of Our Identity. Time, doubtless, dissolves many things, but its destructive power has a limit divinely ordained. It cannot touch the changeless faithfulness of God's everlasting covenant with His chosen. It cannot impair the stability of the Stone Kingdom which He has set up, and respecting which He has recorded it as His fixed determination that it "shall break in pieces and consume those other kingdoms, and shall (itself) stand for ever." "There shall be one King over all the earth, and His Name One." His kingdom it is that shall not be destroyed. That kingdom is Israel, the dominant power of the millennial era, whose divine Sovereign shall take His great power and reign, and under whose beneficent sway the golden age shall be inaugurated; while the Twelve-Tribed nation, reinstated in their land of promise, shall become, and forever continue, the central point of His government, and millennial Jerusalem the temporal and spiritual metropolis of the whole world!

How the re-union of the great American nation with the British Empire is to be brought to pass, on what lines arranged, or in what manner consummated it is impossible to forecast. The Bible tells us that in the partition of the land, just subsequent to the return thither of Israel and Judah, Manasseh will have a share; and we also learn that ever after that general resettlement, the whole Hebrew family shall constitute only one nation and kingdom, and not even two, much less three. We see already that the hostility with which a century ago America regarded England, has given place to warm regard, entirely reciprocated by the British people. There have been temporary sources of irritation, but never since the war of Independence has either of the two great English-speaking nations lifted sword against the other, and we do not believe such will ever be the case again. The Fisheries question, we feel confident, will be amicably settled between Canada and the States, without recourse to arms. Martin Tupper (whom we believe we may number among the warm adherents of our faith) has written some capital lines on the relations between "John Bull" and "Brother Jonathan," and he concludes in terms we shall all heartily endorse, and than which nothing could be more appropriate at the present time. They are as follows:—

"Oh! brother, could we both be one,
In nation and in name,
How gladly would the very Sun
Lie basking in our fame!
In either world to lead the van
And go-a-head for good;
While earth to John and Jonathan
Yields tribute gratitude.

Join but your stripes and golden bars
To brave St. George's Cross;
And never dream of mutual wars—
Two dunces' mutual loss;

Digitized by Google

Let us two bless where others ban,
And love where others hate:
And so my cordial Jonathan,
We'll fit, I calculate.

What more? I touch not holier strings,
A nobler praise to win;
Nor speak of prophets, priests and kings,
And Heavenly kith and kin:
As friend with friend, as man with man,
Oh! let our hearts be thus!
As David's love to Jonathan,
Be Jonathan's to us."

(To be continued.)

THE LAW OF THE LAND.

THE Hon. E. J. Phelps, Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States of America, delivered an address in the Edinburgh Philosophical Institution, on the 12th of November last. His subject was, "The Law of the Land." This expression, he stated, was first used in Magna Charta, which King John was forced by the barons of England to sign and grant. That Charta was, he declared, "the criterion and bulwark of the rights of Englishmen," and the most significant expression in it, in its most celebrated clause, was the phrase, well-known now, "per legem terræ," "by the Law of the Land." The original significance of the expression was, that "it was the law that runs with the land, and descends with it," that "higher law under which legislation itself obtains its authority and courts their jurisdiction." Magna Charta gave the guarantee of personal liberty to every man, and defined personal and political rights. "The written constitution of the United States and the unwritten constitution of Great Britain both distinctly recognise these rights. The Law of the Land is the law that does not change—which protects the necessary and superior rights of man."

The theory upon which our system of government rests (said Mr. Phelps), is that mankind possesses certain natural rights usually described as those of life, liberty, and property, indispensable to human freedom and happiness; that these rights are not derived from, but are antecedent to, government, which is instituted for their maintenance as its first and principal object; that it can never be allowed, therefore, to infringe or disregard them, nor to fail to offer redress for their invasion; and that when it ceases to respect and uphold them, the obligation of allegiance terminates, and the right of revolution begins. These constitutional principles are of perpetual duration, and of perpetual authority, because the natural rights they maintain are of perpetual obligation. No change of time or circumstance, no new discovery in political science, no modification of the forms of government, can affect their validity, or restrict their control. The principles of law which I have thus endeavoured to state belong exclusively to the Anglo-Saxon race. In no other system that ever existed are they to be found. They are the distinctive characteristic of the common law of England, which is likewise the common law of the English-speaking race everywhere. They were the offspring of no man's creation, the product of no man's brain. Through centuries of vigorous Saxon life, through much oppression and violence, through the rise and fall of kingdoms, and wars and tumults innumerable, the great idea that underlies free government slowly ripened into perfection. It found its first definite and permanent expression in Magna Charta, and became there the foundation of English law, to distinguish it thenceforth from all other law, and to conduct the people to whom it belonged, and their descendants, to a prosperity which the world had not seen before. I do not mean to say that under no other system of government are the personal rights maintained. They may be upheld to a greater or less extent, and possibly to the full extent, under others. A wise and humane despot might promulgate a code of laws which should afford as complete a security to these rights, while it lasted, as the law of England does. But under no other theory than ours can they be assured of a complete or permanent protection. In governments based upon different principles, personal rights, so far as they exist, are derived from the governing power, and may therefore at any time be abridged or taken away by it. Human experience has shown that rights which are thus conferred are sooner or later lost. It is only when they are conceded to be inviolable, and when the observance of them by Government becomes the condition of its existence, that they ever can be permanently safe. But no system, however elaborate, and no contrivance, however ingenious, can be finally effectual for the preservation of personal liberty without the constant assistance of an enlightened, healthy, and vigorous public sentiment. Law, however fundamental, is but the reflex of public opinion, and in the long-run in a free country must be maintained by that opinion, or must perish. Constitutions, however guarded, cannot provide for their own immortality. The principles of civil liberty had their origin in the convictions of mankind, and have been nurtured into perfection by the devotion of the race in which they started. Under them the Anglo-Saxon people has become what it is, and by that people they have been made what they are. It is a hackneyed saying, but hackneyed because it is constantly true, that "eternal vigilance is the price of liberty." But vigilance to be of any avail must be intelligent as well as active. From whom is it required? From whom is it to be reasonably expected? Who are the true and natural guardians of the law of the land? Manifestly those who are the best qualified to understand it, and best capable of patriotic and disinterested conduct. It was the barons of England who obtained Magna Charta. It has been the best life of Great Britain that from century to century, from generation to generation, in many a crisis, by many a victory, not less of peace than of war, has maintained inviolate its great principles. No demagogue, no self-seeker, no man who "follows for a reward," has ever struck an effectual blow for liberty, or has advanced the cause of human freedom a single step. The name of liberty is always in the mouths of such men, but they are its enemies, not its friends. They have retarded and disgraced it, but they have never done it any good. They are only camp-followers, not soldiers, in the great march, destined, we hope, to overcome the world. Liberty, everywhere and always, has been maintained by the best class of its subjects. I use the term in no conventional sense. I understand the best class to be that which is composed of the best people.

So far Mr. Phelps. He gives here, if we mistake not, strong evidence that the Anglo-Saxon race is Israel, for he tells us we possess the very highest principles of law, principles which are at the foundation of liberty, and good government, and national happiness, and that we, of all nations, exclusively possess them all. How came we to acquire them? Who conferred these principles on the Anglo-Saxons—said to have been originally a rude and barbarous people? "This Law of the Land," says Mr. Phelps, "is the foundation of English law, to distinguish it from all other law, and to conduct the people to whom it belongs, and their descendants, to a prosperity which the world has not seen before." These are wondrous words, and add fresh force to the evidence we have compiled from other sources, to show that ours is a God-blessed, heaven-favoured race, and now seen to be, even in common law, "the head and not the tail, above only and not beneath" all the other nations. Well did Moses say of our ancestors, on this very subject of this nation's laws:—"Keep, therefore, and do them; for this is your wisdom and understanding in the sight of the peoples, which shall hear all these statutes and say, Surely this great nation is a wise and understanding people" (Deut. iv. 6). The Laws of Sinai, said a Roman newspaper once, are the foundation of the laws of England. "English legislation is nothing else than the faithful echo of that of Sinai, received through Christianity. The laws of God are the laws of the State. The one takes its force from the other." The laws of Sinai respected the rights of personal liberty and of political freedom, and they put the service and claims of God upon the worship and services of men in their right place, as the motive power of every rightly constituted code of laws. The British Constitution and Legislature is, as the Italian journal admits, based on this right principle—which is nothing more nor less than that "Law of the Land" of which Mr. Phelps so eloquently spoke. We thank God that even in such a point, our race comes out distinctly as "the Chosen Nation," the "one that the Lord has blessed." "Their seed is known among the nations, and their offspring among the peoples; all that see them acknowledge them that they are the seed which the Lord hath blessed" (Isa. lxi. 9, R.V.). And shall we not, for these things too, praise the Lord?

Digitized by Google

ISRAEL IN BRITAIN.

Two popular lectures were given by Commander Roberts, R.N., at St. George's Hall, Weston-super-Mare, on Tuesday afternoon and evening, the subject on the former occasion being "The historical links in the chain from Egypt to Britain," and that in the evening on "What the Bible says about Great Britain." General Hailes presided, and in the afternoon there was a large audience.

The Chairman observed that they were wont to think from their earliest days of their ancestors as savages dyed with woad and clothed in skins, and he was sure it would be gratifying to them to learn from the lecturer that England boasts an older civilisation, and that, as far as history reaches, those who populate these islands may be traced to those who made bricks under the Pharaohs in Egypt. There was surely great subject of thought in this, and if the lecturer proved it they would be thankful to him, not only for a lesson in history, but for enabling them to exclaim, "How wonderful are God's ways!"

Commander Roberts said that was not the first time he had visited Weston to lecture on the subject of "Who were our ancestors." He proposed that afternoon treating of the historical argument, and in the evening of the Biblical or Scriptural side of the question. He intended to demonstrate to his hearers that afternoon, that our forefathers, the British races inhabiting these islands, were no mere savages, but a highly civilised people, emanating from the races that had led the world in civilisation, and they came here long before our islands were known popularly in the Roman Empire. The argument was that our ancient Britons were descendants of the tribes of Israel, not from the captivity, but prior to the captivity, and that ever since the remnants of the scattered tribes of Israel have been gathering together in this home which has been prepared for them by God. In an exhaustive, lucid and interesting manner, the lecturer proceeded with his argument, quoting largely from ancient historians, and supplementing their observations with references to maps showing the wanderings of the nation, and diagrams of coins, by means of which the established connections were harmonised. The gallant officer was listened to very attentively, and frequently applauded. At the close, on the motion of the Chairman, a vote of thanks was accorded to the lecturer.

The evening lecture was fairly attended; the downpour of rain, which unfortunately took place just before the hour of meeting, no doubt prevented many from attending, and thus deprived them of a treat. The marvellous manner in which the lecturer opened out the Scriptures, shewing his great knowledge of them, as well as the writings of ancient historians, if it failed to convince any that God's covenant people Israel are found in these Isles, must at least have stirred them up to take a deep interest in the subject, and make them like the Bereans of old "search the Scriptures daily whether those things are so." The lecturer shewed that the promises of God to Abraham had been most literally fulfilled in the British race, and that in these latter days Israel in Britain had been the prolific instrument (compared with other nations) of sending the Gospel of salvation into all the regions of the earth. Thus the British and Foreign Bible Society had translated the Scriptures into 290 languages, and issued upwards of 100,000,000 copies. The Religious Tract Society had disseminated its tracts in 186 languages and nearly 2,600,000,000 of issues, making on the average two issues for every person living in the whole world. The enormous wealth of our nation was given us by God to use for this and kindred purposes as a means of blessing all the nations of the earth. The audience were also shown by Scripture the breaking away of a portion of Israel from Moses in the wilderness, their settling in Phœnicia, at Tyre and Sidon, their migration into Greece, and finally into the Isles of the West. It was interesting to notice how these pioneers of their brethren performed the rôle allotted by the patriarch Jacob to Dan, who was to be a serpent by the way, an adder in the path who bit the horse's heels and made the rider fall backwards. This was precisely the order of events with these first wanderers from the Israelites; wherever they came, into Greece, or Italy, Spain, or Gaul, they prepared the way for their brethren in the future, by overthrowing the ruling powers of the nations with which they came into contact, and setting up their own authority as Danai in Greece, as Etruscans in Italy, and as Tuatha de Danans in Ireland. Jeremiah was shown to have taken Zedekiah's daughter to Egypt and brought her to Ireland, there to have married her to Heremon, King of Ulster, and from these two is descended the royal line of David, now ruling in the person of our gracious sovereign Queen Victoria; and that when Palestine was emptied of Israelites, these first migrators had formed already a nationality in these islands, ruled over in some parts by one of the seed of David.

The admission was free, but there was a collection to defray expenses, and it was announced that the balance would be devoted to the Bristol Ragged Schools.—Weston-super-Mare Gazette, April, 9, 1887.

Correspondence.

THE ANGLO-ISRAEL FREE DISTRIBUTION FUND.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR PHILO-ISRAEL,—Will you kindly allow me to give information through the BANNER OF ISRAEL that, with extreme regret, I am obliged entirely to relinquish all work for the Anglo-Israel Free Distribution Fund after June 15th, as I find it impossible any longer to devote to it the requisite time for all that is necessary to carry on my branch of the work. Home responsibilities and duties painfully pressing on account of the continual illness and increasing age and infirmity of one very dear to me, demand my attention and devotion. I hope all who have so kindly trusted me and enabled me to carry on the operations of the fund, and also those who have worked with me, will understand that for no lighter reasons than those I have stated would I give up that which I believe is real missionary work of the deepest importance to be engaged in, which has been a great pleasure, but more than that, a great privilege; it is now nothing less than a sorrow to cut myself off from it and from regular communication with my Sowers, many of whom I may never hope to see in this life, but whom I have reason to regard as valued friends. On account of this, as well as the kindness I have continually met with in my work, and because of the number of my correspondents, with all of whom it would be difficult to communicate at once, I would beg to be excused for the strong personal element in this letter; also I would ask one favour, which is, that what I have written may be passed by in silence, so that as soon as possible I may have time at my disposal, which is so much needed; also because (as some will understand, I know) trial and sorrow will be less difficult to bear in silence.

While thanking you very gratefully, and all who have assisted me, I gladly add that I hope always in private if not in public, to spend and be spent as far as shall yet be possible, for the high purpose of making known the great truth of Our Identity, and I shall be thankful indeed if anyone with the necessary time to spare regularly can and will volunteer to take up at once one special branch of my work, the free distribution of the BANNER OF ISRAEL, from which I ever look, not without solid reason, for great and good results.

Believe me, ever faithfully yours,
E. M. RUSH.

Lee, London, May 19, 1887.

P.S.—I should have mentioned that I will continue to send the BANNER to three Sowers who have sent me subscriptions for the year.—E. M. R.

NOTE BY THE EDITOR.—We deeply regret the necessity which compels Miss Rush to resign the duties she has so admirably performed for so long. We trust that she may yet be able to resume her work with the restoration to health of her for whom she is so anxious. In these observations we know we shall carry all with us who read these pages, and who value the disinterested and admirable labours of the Hon. Secretary of the Free Distribution Fund.

ERRATA.—No. 544, p. 213, col. 2, line 7, read "lately sitting." Also, p. 224, Ode, ver. 3, line 4, read "centred"; ver. 6, line 3, read "thought"; and ver. 7, line 3, read "Liberty."

Digitized by Google

NOTICES.

All communications intended for the Editor, to be addressed: "Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Clifton, Bristol.

SUBSCRIPTIONS. £ s. d.

Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free 0 7 6
Two Copies (including Double Numbers) 0 13 6
Three Copies " " " 1 0 4
Four Copies " " " 1 5 6
Six Copies " " " 1 16 4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-grand, London, to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C., or F. W. PARRY & Co., 29, Paternoster-row, London.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

Contents Bills and Show Cards may be obtained on application to the Publishers.

Advertisements should be sent to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

Prepaid Advertisements are inserted at the rate of thirty words for 1s. 4d.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION,
14, King William-street, Charing Cross, W.C.

Bible Readings on the Book of Hosea

Every TUESDAY afternoon (commencing May 3) at 3.30, lasting One Hour only. All are invited.

JAMES BILLINGTON, Secretary.

A New Work on the Identity of Lost Israel
By the late BISHOP TITCOMB.

Now ready, in Cloth Gilt, Bevelled Boards, Imperial 8vo, Price 3s.; sent Post Free for Postal Order or Stamps.

A MESSAGE TO THE CHURCH
FROM
THE NINETEENTH CENTURY,
BY THE LATE
RT. REV. BISHOP TITCOMB, D.D.

The Kentish Mercury, April 21st, says:—"This book derives a peculiar and pathetic interest from the circumstances that the proofs of its concluding pages were revised by the author during the last few days of his life, and that its publication took place simultaneously with his death. One feels, in noticing a book under such circumstances, a special responsibility, when the author is removed beyond the reach of human criticism of whatever kind. But in truth it is impossible to glance at these pages without being struck by the deep and reverent research into the prophetic Scriptures which it manifests, by the tone of piety that pervades it, as well as the lucidity and eloquence of its style. Nor is it necessary to express concurrence with the views of the gifted and pious author in his prophetic theories to give this praise. Of course with regard to Dr. Titcomb's prophetic interpretations there will be much difference of opinion, but there can be none in the mind of any impartial person who reads this work, either as to the diligence with which he testimony of the prophets has been studied, or the earnestness of the expositor in stating his conclusions. Bishop Titcomb, it is well-known to those who have studied his works, was one of the school of prophetic interpreters who believe that the British Empire, or perhaps, more accurately speaking, the English-speaking race, are identified with those whom we have been in the habit of calling the 'Lost Tribes of Israel.'" [Then follow several extracts.]

London: Robert Banks & Son, Racquet court, Fleet-st
F. W. Parry & Co., Paternoster-row, and all booksellers.

Price 3d., post free 3½d.

PRESENT-DAY PROBLEMS,
How Anglo-Israel Truth Explains and Solves Them.
BY V. M. COX.
Author of Ephraim-Israel, the Pivot Nation of Prophecy and History

"A book to read is 'Present-Day Problems: How Anglo-Israel Truth Explains and Solves Them.' By V. M. Cox. This little book is an excellent summary of the clearance effected in the great burning questions of the time, the moment it is understood that the Anglo-Saxon folk is the very Israel of God. Federation of the Empire, the Irish question, the Eastern question, our relation to Russia, our hold on Egypt, submitted to this solvent, become parts of one intelligible scheme. The paragraphs on Foreign Missions, as the special work of Israel, and on our relation to our fellows of the Tribe of Judah, are especially good.—The Messenger.

R. Banks and Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London

EGGS from Prize Strains, 4s. per Sitting; two, 7s. Plymouth Rock, Light Brahma, Pheasant, Malay, Black Cross, non-sitting, good layers; if requested, mixed sittings. Ducks' Eggs, cross Pekin and Rouen.—J. R. Horne, West Farm, Allington, Salisbury.

WORKS BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

The Geography of the Gates. With Map and six full page, and one double-page, Illustrations, printed on plate paper. 208 pages, in handsome cloth, gilt Price 3s. 6d., post free 3s. 10d.

An Elementary Digest or Sketch of the Chief Facts and Teachings of the Great Pyramid of Egypt. Adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific 56 pages, Illustrated with Diagrams, price 4d., post free 5d. 10th Thousand.

Our Identity with the House of Israel. Price 4d. Reprinted from "Clifton Chronicle Letters"

The History of the House of Israel; How they were Lost, and How they were Found, Told for the Children. Price 6d., cloth 1s.; post free 7d. and 1s. 1d. Fourth Edition. Eleventh thousand
R. Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Price 2s. 6d., Cheap Edition, 1/-

BIBLE LESSONS & REFLECTIONS.

By ROBERT GAIRDNER, of Kilmarnock, N.B.

"Mr. Gairdner has given us in his book a series of Bible lessons, with his own reflections added thereto, and though he has been very cautious in the latter, and has not committed himself too broadly, he has plainly let it be seen that he is an Anglo-Israelite by conviction, and that the Scriptures which he quotes at length and extensively throughout his book, are meant to teach Our Identity and God's faithfulness, from first to last, to His promises to Abraham and His seed for ever."—Banner of Israel.

ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-st.

Fifty Reasons Why the Anglo-Saxons are Israelites of the Lost Tribes of the House of Israel?

By Rev. W. H. POOLE, D.D.

"There is a principle which is a bar against all argument, and which cannot fail to keep a man in everlasting ignorance. This principle is, contempt prior to examination."—Dr. PALEY.

Price Sixpence, by post Sevenpence.
London: R. BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

THE TEETH, THE TEETH,
THOSE PRECIOUS TEETH!
Save, Purify,
Beautify.
GEORGE & WELCH'S
CARBOLINE
1/6 (TOOTH PASTE). 2/6 per Pot
Is the Best Known
Cleanser, Preserver, and Deodoriser.
Dental Guide says:—"No Tooth application equals the Carbolics."
Proprietors: GEORGE & WELCH, Worcester.
Through Chemists, or Post Free from Makers.

ETHELINE
A New and most effective Remedy for CORNS.—Perfectly safe and harmless Is very easily applied. Cures in a few applications, without the slightest pain. Everyone troubled with either Corns, Warts, or Bunions, will find relief by using ETHELINE. To be obtained of all Chemists, or post free for 14 stamps from J. LLEWELLYN, CHEMIST, COWBRIDGE.

A BOON TO SUFFERERS.
HARNESS' ELECTROPATHIC BELT.
Testimonial
From Miss J. HOULDSWORTH, Rozelle, Ayr, N.B.
"I am glad to be able to tell you that the HARNESS' ELECTRIC BATTERY BELT has been very beneficial in strengthening the system generally, as well as instrumental in relieving the Neuralgic pains from which I have suffered.
NEURALGIA & DEBILITY.
Every man and woman suffering from any disorder of the Nerves, Stomach, Liver, or Kidneys, should at once stop physicing, and remit 21s. for HARNESS' ELECTROPATHIC BELT (post free) and obtain immediate relief. Pamphlet and Book of Testimonials POST FREE. MEDICAL BATTERY CO. Ltd.
52, OXFORD STREET, LONDON, W.
Corner of Rathbone Place

PUBLISHED BY ROBT. BANKS & SON,
RACQUET COURT, FLEET STREET, E.C.

THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL. By the Rev. Joseph Wild, D.D., Pastor of Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, New York. Price 3s., post free 3s. 3d.

THE FUTURE OF ISRAEL AND JUDAH. Companion volume to above, By the Rev. Joseph Wild, D.D. With Portrait of the Author. Cloth, gilt lettered, bevelled boards. Price 2s., post free 2s. 3d.

THE SISTERS OF HARROWDALE RECTORY. A Tale of Great Interest for Young People. By Mrs. M. A. Searson. With double-page illustration of Harrowdale Rectory. Price 2s. 6d., post free 2s. 9d.

WHO ARE WE & WHAT IS OUR MISSION? By J. Thornhill Harrison. With seven Maps. Handsome cloth, gilt, price 5s. Free for P.O.

JEHOVAH TRIUMPHANT. The New and Complete Theology and Electric Light of the Bible, containing the History of British-Israel, Compiled from the Sacred Scriptures. Cloth gilt, price 10s. 6d., post free for Postal Order or Cheque.

THE GEOGRAPHY OF THE GATES. By PHILO-ISRAEL. With Map, and six full page, and one double-page, Illustrations, printed on plate paper. 208 pages, in handsome cloth, gilt. Price 3s. 6d.; post free.

THE WORD: THE WORLD: THE BRANCH. By J. LEYLAND FIELDEN, Esq. Price 12s., post free.

EPHRAIM-ENGLAND. The Nineteenth Century Revelation of the Fruits of History. By Rev. R. DOUGLAS, Vicar of Kidsgrove. Cloth gilt, lettered, 4s., gilt edges 5s., free by post.

FIFTY REASONS WHY THE ANGLO-SAXONS ARE ISRAELITES of the Lost Tribes of the House of Israel. By Rev. W. H. POOLE, D.D. Price 6d., post free 7d.

BIBLE LESSONS AND REFLECTIONS. By the late ROBERT GAIRDNER, of Kilmarnock, N.B. Price 2s. 6d., by post 2s. 9d.; cheap edition, limp cloth, 1s., by post, 1s. 2d.

THE ANGLO-ISRAEL POST-BAG; or, How Arthur Came to See It. By the Right Rev. BISHOP TITCOMB. Price 2s. 6d. in cloth gilt; paper cover, 1s. 6d., by post 1d. extra.

THE ISRAELITES FOUND IN THE ANGLO-SAXONS. The Ten Tribes supposed to have been Lost, traced from the land of their captivity to their occupation of the Isles of the Sea. By WILLIAM CARPENTER. Price 2s. 6d., by post 2s. 8d.

THE ANSWER TO THE EASTERN QUESTION. With Some Facts Concerning the Identity of the British With Israel. By the Author of "The New Old Story," enlarged. Price 3d.; for distribution, 50 copies, 11s., post free.

CARDINAL PROOFS THAT THE BRITISH Are the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel—the Abrahamic Covenant. By F. W. PHILLIPS. With two chapters by PHILO-ISRAEL. Price 6d., post free 7d.

THE NEW OLD STORY. By "A E I." Price 6d., post free; in cloth, 1s., post free.

THE BIBLE ATLAS. To Illustrate the Old and New Testaments. Price 1s.; post free 1s. 1d.

ANGLO-ISRAEL TRACTS. 8 pp. Royal 16mo., on toned paper. Adapted to enclose in letters, and for general distribution. No. 1—12. Half-penny each, 12 copies post free, 6d. Specimen packet for 6 stamps.

PRESENT-DAY PROBLEMS, and How Anglo-Israel Truth Explains and Solves Them. By V. M. COX. 3d., by post 4 stamps.

LIGHT SHED BY THE GREAT PYRAMID OF EGYPT on the Last Days of this Dispensation, from A.D. 1814 to A.D. 1922. By JAMES KEITH. Price 4d., by post 5 stamps.

NEW TESTAMENT TRUTH on the Anglo-Israel Controversy. By J. G. TAYLOR. Price 3d., by post 4 stamps.

A NEW LIGHT. An Elementary Pamphlet for General Distribution. By A E I. Price 2d., by post 2½d. in stamps.

EPHRAIM-ISRAEL, the Pivot Nation of Prophecy and History. By V. M. COX. Price 1d., one dozen free for 1s.

AMMI; OR THE CHOSEN PEOPLE. By Miss BIRD. Tracing the Descent of the British People from Abraham as "friend of God," and showing that true science, history, philology, and ethnology, are on the side of the Identity of the Anglo-Saxon Race with the Ten Lost Tribes. Price 2d., post free 2½d.; 12s. 6d. per 100 for distribution.

IS NOT QUEEN VICTORIA the Royal Seed to King David's Throne, and Are Not Her Subjects, the British People, the Ten Lost Tribes? By W. HOPTON. Price 2d.; 12s. 6d. per 100.

A Complete Catalogue Free on Application.

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. F. W. PARRY (late GUEST & Co.), 29, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, JUNE 8, 1887
[All rights reserved

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. XI., No. 546. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, JUNE 15, 1887. [PRICE ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
The Anglo-Turkish Convention	237
The Duration of the Captivity of the Ten Tribes Stated in Scripture. By A. W. Fyfe	238
Past and Current History and its Testimony to Our Identity with Israel. By Miss V. M. Cox.—Part III.	238
Are the British People Ostensibly Lo-Ammi Gentiles, or, on the Contrary, God's Manifested Israel To-day?	240
St. Paul's Four Times Repeated "No More"	241
Religion and Education in Victoria. By John S. Anderson	242
Obituary	242
Correspondence	242
The BANNER British-Israelite Jubilee Fund	243

THE ANGLO-TURKISH CONVENTION.

ON May 23, 1887, there was signed at Constantinople a Convention between the British and Turkish authorities respecting our future relations with Egypt. The Convention stipulates as its leading feature that Turkey, as represented by the Sultan, is the Suzerain or Sovereign of Egypt. The instrument engages that the English troops will evacuate Egypt at the end of three years, provided that then that country is menaced by no danger at home or abroad. If such dangers threaten then in either case the evacuation will not take place. For two years after the termination of the British occupation the latter are to officer the Egyptian troops, and be in charge of the military forces in Egypt. The capitulations are to be practically abolished; the criminal jurisdiction over Europeans thenceforth will be exercised not by consuls as at present, but by the international courts. The Suez Canal is to be neutralised both in peace and in time of war. That is to say it will be free to all nations, and for all ships, at all times. The Egyptian finances are to be readjusted, the Turkish tribute, payable by Egypt to Turkey at the highest scale, being left as now a first charge on the revenues of Egypt. Turkey and Britain are to ask the Powers of Europe to refrain from interfering in the affairs of Egypt, and to solicit their adhesion to the terms of this Convention.

Such are some of the main features of a new arrangement, which if agreed to by the nations of Europe, and especially by France and Russia, will make a good deal of difference to ourselves in our relations with Egypt. In the first place it will place this country in the position of the military protector of Egypt in case of such revolts as Arabi's, or of invasion by foreign enemies. In the former case the Convention would compel us to interfere, but there would be no need, as in 1882, to ask the consent of the other Powers before any action could be taken. The consent of Turkey to these arrangements, of course, had to be paid for, and the cost has been the guarantee of the tribute on the revenues of Egypt as a first charge, and the public admission before all the world of Turkey's claim to the sovereignty of Egypt. The weak point, of course, is that the Powers of Europe must give their consent to the Convention as a whole before it can be regarded as a working instrument. The question arises, Will they ever give that consent? It may be calculated beforehand that Germany, Austria, and Italy will be glad to agree; for all have interests to be served by our supremacy on the Nile, and all three have already consented to and urged our annexation of the country. Russia is not likely seriously to object, as she has in past times wished us to seize Egypt, in order that she might, acting on our lead, annex other portions of the Sultan's territories. France is the only Power which will make serious objection. But in this matter she is not likely to find allies. Her objections might, if we thought right, be disregarded. It would, however, be equally to our benefit if, when France objects to the Convention and refuses to entertain the idea, we reply that in that case we shall stay where we are, since the sovereign Sultan is a consenting party, and we mean to occupy till France does agree! The doctrine, J'y suis j'y reste, would meet the case and suit our convenience in all respects. We wonder if the Convention was made by our wary statesmen in order to get a pretext for staying where we are? If France refuses to agree to our Convention with Turkey, or delay to sanction it, she cannot legally interfere, for we are at one with the owners of that land; and France would have no legal right to intrude. War would be her only remedy; but she is not likely to resort to that extremity, while she has no allies to support her in such a quarrel, and her own political condition is so precarious that no stable government can be framed likely to endure six months.

Regarded in the light of Our Identity, then, we are by no means dissatisfied with the terms of the Convention. It gives us five years certain from the present time to remain in the virtual protectorate of Egypt. Within five years we are quite sure many things will happen. It is quite possible that ere that date France and Germany, with Russia, Austria, and Italy, may be engaged in that terrible conflict which God's Word calls "the great earthquake," a "war-woe" such as there has not been the like since men were upon the earth. We do not think that that will be a time for French interference, for sentimental reasons, in the affairs of Egypt, and it certainly will be no convenient crisis for relinquishing our hold of a land which is the Gate or Gateway of the countries and seas South, North, East, and West of it.

Digitized by Google

We are yet in ignorance of the secret reasons which have induced our Government to consent to abandon Egypt within three years, and to admit as a principle that we have no business to remain in it. We recollect, however, how often Mr. Gladstone, when he was in power, resolved that he would give up the country, and how often God sent him a blow which each time compelled him to retain it. We expect Lord Salisbury will receive ere long just such a reminder from on High that he is acting contrary to the will of Him who is Israel's God, and has given Egypt as an inheritance to His people. We have no expectation that our present Government's plan to give up the land to the autonomy of the Egyptians will ever be carried out, and that thus Egypt will be permitted to go back into barbarism. We believe that our grasp on the land will be tightened by what is now taking place. For both the resident Europeans and the Egyptians themselves well know that the just and equal rule of the British is the only hope they have of peace, safety, and prosperity. It is very possible, we think, that the terms of the Convention will be used by those who do not desire British control to be relaxed, to bring on commotions and revolts in order to prevent the possibility of our departure. No doubt God's hand is visible in all that is taking place now in regard to Egypt, and to Him be all the praise for the expected result!

THE DURATION OF THE CAPTIVITY OF THE TEN TRIBES STATED IN SCRIPTURE.

By A. W. Fyfe.

Ezekiel prophesied during the time of the Jewish captivity. The opening chapter states that it was in the 30th year, and the duration of the Babylonish rule over his countrymen was revealed to him when he was told he was to bear the iniquity of Judah 40 days, "a day for a year" (a plain statement of the year-day theory). Forty years added to the 30 already mentioned, gave exactly the 70 years of the captivity of the Jews under the Babylonians.

The captivity of the "House of Israel," "the Lost Ten Tribes," is given with equal distinctness in the same chapter. "I have laid upon thee the years of their iniquity, according to the number of the days, 390 days; so shalt thou bear the iniquity of the House of Israel."

Israel was carried captive to Assyria by Shalmaneser, 721 B.C. Take 390 from 721, 331 remain. Alexander the Great conquered Persia in 333, 332, and a third victory in 331. He released multitudes of captives, and no doubt the Israelites then were free to begin their Westward migrations. Assyria had been conquered by the Babylonians, they in turn by the Persians, and the latter by Alexander. We have thus the duration of Israel's captivity foretold plainly in Scripture, the events in secular history corroborating the prophetic statements. There are records preserved among the Jews in India to this day, tablets of brass dated in the time of Alexander, which prove that many of the Israelites left the East and went to Spain during his reign. This is an answer to the question, "How or when did they come here?"

One strong proof that the British and Israel are one lies in the relative positions of England and Russia. One writer on prophecy states "that it is an interesting fact that Russia (Gog) is the only modern nation mentioned in the Bible." Is there, then, no mention of the British Empire—the greatest the world has ever seen? How comes it, then, in Daniel's vision there are but four empires seen—Babylon, Persia, Greece, and Rome; Britain being at the present day greater in every sense of the word than any of these? Why was there not a fifth? Evidently because Britain and Israel are one, and its history is written all through the pages of the Bible, and because it is not one of the world-powers, but the people God chose in Abraham. Who is Gog's opponent in the Bible? Israel. Whom does Gog attack? Israel. Who is the only enemy which can oppose England? Gog (Russia). Whom alone does Russia dread? England. In Ezekiel it appears that Israel and Gog are the only two opposing Powers in the latter times. The conclusion is obvious.

PAST AND CURRENT HISTORY AND ITS TESTIMONY TO OUR IDENTITY WITH ISRAEL.

A Lecture by Miss V. M. Cox, delivered at Bath and Clifton on April 28 and 29, 1887.

(Continued from page 234).

PART III.

Another powerful confirmation of our truth is seen in the extraordinary progress of missionary enterprise during recent years. This has been the case at a time when depression of trade has been general, and when we should have supposed that societies exclusively supported by voluntary contributions would have suffered greviously, and would have been constrained to curtail their expenditure greatly, instead of continuing to extend their evangelising operations in every direction. But the work of the societies for the spread of Christian truth has not been curtailed, and the incomes have in few cases fallen below the average. This indicates that stringent self-denial must in many cases have been practised, to enable regular supporters of missions to contribute still as largely as in more prosperous times. At a recent missionary meeting it was related of a poor Welsh miner (who formerly had six days work per week, but now obtains usually only two days), that he still continues to send his guinea per annum to the Congo Mission, albeit he does not see meat on his table for weeks together sometimes. This is the spirit that has enabled Israel to pursue unhindered her work of evangelisation, in spite of the hard times which have affected, more or less, almost every class in the community.

The London Missionary Society constantly employs three ships to carry the Gospel of Christ to the dark places of the earth. These vessels entail an annual expenditure of £5,000 sterling. Well! This large amount has been raised for the last ten years in succession, entirely by British children, almost entirely by those in British Sunday-schools! That is a noble and significant fact! The missionary spirit is little likely to die out since the future men and women of our country are being indoctrinated into it, and educated up to it from infancy. A parallel to this, we will venture to assert, can be shewn by no other nation under heaven. It is an honour reserved for the one respecting which the Lord has declared: "This people have I formed for Myself; they shall shew forth My praise." Only a century ago, not a single one of all the great societies now existing for the spread of Christian truth had yet been founded. A few date their origin from the last decade of the eighteenth century, but by far the greatest advance has been during the reign of our beloved Queen, as the following statistics will shew.

"In 1837 the heathen and Mahommedan population of the world was reckoned at 1,000 millions. At that date there were not ten missionaries in Egypt and Abyssinia, not twenty-eight on the whole West coast of Africa, not thirty in the South, while the whole East coast, the Northern States and the interior, were without a single one. At the same date the missionaries in India did not exceed 180, while the native Christians numbered less than 75,000. In 1837 there were but twelve missionaries for the whole Chinese people. Half of these were in the straits of Malacca, where there were known to be seven converts, and one native evangelist; the others were on the coast of China, where they did not know of a single convert, and the empire was practically closed to missions till 1842. Through all Japan, Siam and Central Asia, there did not exist one solitary Protestant missionary."*

How is it to-day? Central Africa (first opened up by the venerable Moffat and the intrepid Livingstone), has to-day a flourishing and successful mission on the densely populated region bordering Lake Tanganyika. In Madagascar Christianity is the established religion, the Queen being herself a professed

* Missionary Chronicle, January, 1887.

Digitized by Google

Christian, while idolatry is practically abolished. China is entirely open, and is a splendid field of labour, where already the Gospel is making its power widely felt. Eastern Africa is being gallantly laid siege to in Christ's name, and there some glorious soldiers of the Cross have sacrificed life itself in the heroic struggle, among whom there is no more honoured name than that of the martyred Bishop Hannington, whose untimely fate we have so recently had to deplore.

In India grand work is being done, notably among the women of the Zenanas, to raise and evangelise whom so many noble-hearted English women are now devoting their lives and energies. Fiji is entirely Christianised, while a new impetus has been given to missions in New Guinea since the standard of Britain has been firmly planted on its soil. Summing up briefly the work of the present century, the Missionary Chronicle informs us that "the seven Protestant Societies of 1800 have now become more than 100. Their total income was £50,000. It has now grown to the enormous sum of £2,220,000 per ann. The converts to Christianity then numbered about 50,000. They are to-day upwards of 3,000,000. One other statement is worthy of attention. Out of the total income of the societies, £210,000 is subscribed by Protestant nations on the Continent of Europe; £780,000 by the United States of America, and the balance, about £1,220,000, is supplied by our own nation, Christian Britain.

How can this circumstance be accounted for? It has been frequently remarked that although the Bible is an essentially Eastern Book,—Eastern in ideas, language and imagery—it has yet become the standard of faith, not to an Eastern, but chiefly to a Western people; and various modes of explaining this notable fact have been suggested. On this subject the Christian World lately wrote:—

> This is one of the great points of difference between Christ and the great leaders of other faiths—Buddha, Mahomet, Confucius. They belong to the race from which they sprang. Buddha is the son of India, Mahomet of Arabia, Confucius of China. Their spell is broken when they reach beyond the ethnic conditions out of which they sprang. It is impossible to imagine Buddha supreme in England, or Mahomet in Germany, or Confucius in the United States. The Western mind is untouched by these Eastern ideals. But Christ stretches out his hands to both East and West; yea, His hold of the West is mightier than of the East, to which, according to the flesh, He belonged. If we may so put it—His head-quarters—the chief propaganda of His faith, are in lands remotest both as to place and character from that in which it took its rise. And the secret of this lies in the fact that He is "Son of Man," and so holds the key to the hearts, not of a race, but of the world. (The italics are mine).

This explanation cannot be considered altogether satisfactory. That Christ is "the Son of Man" we are well assured. That His religion is perfectly adapted to every section of the human race, irrespective of colour, language or location, we cannot doubt. But this does not account for what the Christian World terms His "head-quarters" being in the West, or indeed in any one country more than another. It does not shew why the keeping of the oracles of God should pertain to any one nation upon earth, or any one race; and we must seek further a satisfactory reply to the inquiry, "Why is Britain especially singled out for this work?" We think Bishop Titcomb (our late and deeply regretted President) shewed a far deeper insight into the divine scheme in affirming on page 131 of his "Anglo-Israel Post-bag," that Our Identity alone "accounts for the geographical march of Christianity." According to our belief, he says, "the fulness of the Gentiles which had to be brought back into the covenant, lay within the exiled House of Israel: and the main body of that people had migrated in a North-westerly direction through Europe. It became, therefore, absolutely necessary that the geographical march of Christianity should take that course rather than any other. Indeed without such a fact the Scripture conditions of prophecy could not possibly have been fulfilled."

So far the late Bishop. And who can deny the cogency of his reasoning? Where Israel, the God-appointed evangeliser of the world, had gone, there the world of divine inspiration must go too. For "He sheweth His Word unto Jacob, His statutes and His judgments unto Israel. He hath NOT dealt so with ANY nation." Shall we dare to pronounce this statement a falsity? as we assuredly imply that it is, when we assert that while the religions of Buddha, Mahomet, and Confucius, pertain especially to the races from which they sprang, the Christian religion has been alienated from the race which Christ came to (nationally) redeem, and the custody of the divine oracles entrusted to a non-Hebrew people, on whom are also conferred the whole of the temporal blessings and gifts comprised in the Abrahamic covenant, and secured by the oath and promise of Jehovah to the literal seed of Abraham absolutely, unconditionally and perpetually. True the spiritual blessings are free to all mankind through Christ, but they must receive the message of mercy from Israel's lips. She is God's witness, and directly or indirectly the truth must be conveyed by her instrumentality to "all the nations, families and kindreds of the earth."

This, and this alone, explains Britain's unique position in regard to Christian missionary enterprise, nor can the phenomenon be adequately accounted for on any other hypothesis whatever.

Neither can we explain on other grounds that marvellous "expansion of England," which has been such a source of astonishment alike to statesmen and savants during the past few years: that continuous extension of territory which seems forced upon us quite apart from our own seeking, and often in direct opposition to the will of our national leaders. Nothing stops, nothing can stop it. As well essay to stem the advances of the rising tide, as to place a bourn upon the extent of British territory. In 1881 when Guest's "Scale of Nations" was published, the area of our dominions was estimated at 8,426,000 square miles. To-day it has grown to the colossal proportions of 9,126,999 square miles. In 1881 the population ruled over by our most gracious Queen numbered 301,000,000. It now reaches the enormous total of 305,337,000. The British Union Jack has been planted on the most Northerly spot yet trodden by the foot of man; only 400 miles from the pole. So true it is that Joseph's inheritance extends to "the utmost bounds of the everlasting hills"! Nor do we believe that our progress has now reached its zenith, and that decline has set in. "They shall increase as they have increased," is the prophetic assurance; and we can afford to smile at the doleful prognostications of our pessimists, because we know that Britain's identity with Israel of the Ten Tribes is an absolute guarantee for the perpetuity of her national existence and well-being. What a consolation is this firm conviction of ours! With lurid storm-clouds lining the horizon; with Popery seeking to corrupt the State Church; with Socialism daring to lift its presumptuous head in sacred places; with wars and rumours of wars around; with insidious foes within our own borders; with Atheism rampant; with the enemy coming in like a flood; what an unspeakable comfort to know that against the people whom the Lord "hath chosen for His own inheritance," Satan's arrayed legions are powerless! He is striving now to corrupt Israel; to lead her away from her allegiance to the true faith, to incite her to profane her Sabbaths, to neglect the Word of God, and to accept the spurious philosophy that is but Atheism under another name. But he will have a very partial measure of success, and then, enraged by failure, he will at length resolve to compass Israel's final overthrow. Then shall be brought up against her the great latter-day enemy, Gog, whose nineteenth century name we need not that any should tell us, and whose tremendous forces will be marshalled in hostile array upon the hills of Palestine. And then the Lord shall Himself appear for His people in such wise that Gog shall be utterly broken in pieces, while at the close of the awful conflict Israel shall survive, Israel shall triumph, and in the supreme hour of her national extremity and seemingly inevitable peril, it shall be said of her:—

Digitized by Google

"Stretched underneath are the Arms everlasting;
And thou art saved from the wreck of the world!"

(To be continued).

ARE THE BRITISH PEOPLE OSTENSIBLY LO-AMMI GENTILES, OR, ON THE CONTRARY, GOD'S MANIFESTED ISRAEL TO-DAY?

WE desire to give some reason for the view that we hold on this point, because some very strongly contest our position, and declare that the British, being Israel, are no longer a "Lo-Ammi" race—that is, a people "estranged from God;" but are His Ammi, and have been so ever since St. Peter and St. Paul both assured us that the estrangement ceased when the Ten Tribes embraced Christianity. The passages relied on are 1 Peter ii. 9, 10, R.V., and Rom. ix. 23, 24, 25, R.V. "But ye (the Galatian Christians) are an elect race, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, a people for God's own possession, that ye may show forth the excellencies of Him who called you out of darkness into His marvellous light, which in times past were 'no people,' but now are the people of God, which had 'not obtained mercy,' but now have obtained mercy." Again, as to the Romans: "What if God, willing to show His wrath, and to make His power known, endured with much long-suffering vessels of wrath fitted unto destruction, and that He might make known the riches of His glory upon vessels of mercy which He afore prepared unto glory, even us whom He called, not from the Jews only, but also from the Gentiles? as He saith in Hosea, I will call that My people which was not My people, and her beloved which was not beloved," etc.

In the first place, we contend that being God's Lo-Ammi Israel at the present time, the designation "Lo-Ammi" does not at all, since the Advent, convey the idea that the people bearing it are "estranged from God." We may be, nay, Hosea i. 10 proves that the Ten Tribes were to be so manifestly "Lo-Ammi," that men would persist (as they do here to-day) in declaring that British-Israel are "Lo-Ammi" (not Israel), and yet the people at the very same moment would be not only not "estranged from God," but on the contrary His very sons, "the sons of the living God," believers in Christ, born again of the Spirit, "His children" by new birth and grace. St. Paul and St. Peter then merely repeated what Hosea's and Zechariah's prophecies declared should be the case—namely, that Israel, under Christ, would, as Galatians and Romans, be yet "God's people," His Ammi, sons of the living God, being at the same time ostensibly Gentile Galatians and Gentile Romans still. In Paul's day the "called," according to Hosea, were those "called from the Gentiles," but not named as Israelites by the apostles. In St. Peter's account the Galatians, who so exactly answered to the description of Israel, as recorded in Exod. xix. 6; Hosea i. 10, and ii. 23, were "among the (non-Israelite) Gentiles," as ver. 12, R.V., shows. They were, in fact, "Lo-Ammi" to all appearance, but Israelites in fact, and "sons of the living God," a part of "the spiritual House," as Hosea i. 10 and 1 Peter ii. 5 clearly prove. But other arguments go to show that the Ten Tribes at the present hour must, in fact, be reckoned as ostensible non-Israelites or "Gentiles" in the technical sense, because prophecy demands the fact. Thus Christ came "to unveil the Gentiles," as Luke ii. 32, R.V. (margin) declares—that is, to reveal Israel hidden among and passing as Gentiles, and Rom. xi. 25, R.V., tells us how long the obscuration of Israel as Gentiles should last before the unveiling takes place. The words of St. Paul, speaking by the Spirit of God, are "hardness in part hath befallen Israel (i.e., the Jews or 'Israel' of St. Paul's day) until"—when?—"until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in, and so all Israel shall be saved." Now "the fulness of the Gentiles," or the Federation of the Empire of Gen. xxv. 11 and xlviii. 19, R.V., has not yet taken place or "come in." "The nation and company of nations," or "the fulness" of Ephraim's Gentile nations, are all existing at this moment; but we cannot say it has yet prophetically "come in," because St. Paul's Israel, or the Jews, still stand out in hardness, and therefore prove to us the Gentile "disguise" of the Ten Tribes cannot yet be deemed to be put off. The time for the "unveiling" has not been yet reached, and therefore British-Israel appears to men's minds and eyes to be non-Israelite, Gentile, Lo-Ammi still.

But, say some of our friends, "What disguise can Israel or the British folk be under now, seeing we have plainly stamped upon us, as a people, every one of the marks by which the prophets declared that Israel would be distinguished in the latter days? The only disguise which is apparent is that the commentators have put upon us by their spiritualising interpretations." In reply, we say that whatever be the cause, our best and holiest men, our learned ones, and the simple, too, in their masses, have as yet their eyes holden, and cannot detect, or will not see in their blindness, that the British are indeed Israel of the Ten Tribes. The blindness in the nation prevents its own recognition by itself, and the reason for this, doubtless, is the will of God, which sees that the proper time for "the unveiling" has not yet come. The veil is on the heart, and the nation cannot see its own lovely features as "the Israel of God." There are many secondary causes that deepen the darkness over the people's hearts and eyes. For the British are called not by the name of Israel, but by "another name." They occupy a position of majesty and power in the world, which is strange and unlooked for by the nation. Besides, the nation, by lapse of time and strange vicissitudes, has lost its Asiatic habits, manners, customs, religion, laws, circumcision, and Israelitish appearance as contrasted with the Jews, and men are therefore, for these and many like reasons, ready and glad to cry, "Lo-Ammi! These British are not, never were, and never can be Semitic Ten-Tribed Hebrews of the House of Joseph or Ephraim!" Just so the disguise of Joseph before his brethren was complete, though he had every mark that his own visions and prophetic announcements should have led them to expect him to possess. So, too, the Lord Jesus, disguised in the humble form of a lowly carpenter's son, was rejected by the Jews, who loudly cried out that "this man was not Messiah," "Crucify Him! Crucify Him!" In conclusion, then, we submit that on the subject in review our proposition is correct. The British, though Israel, are ostensibly Gentile non-Israelites to-day, and not yet manifested to the world as God's people; therefore, Lo-Ammi to all appearance still.

NEW TESTAMENT IN HEBREW.—The New Testament, which was translated into Hebrew by the late Rev. Isaac Salkinson, missionary among the Jews of Vienna, of the British Jews' Society in London, has been reprinted in Austria in a second edition of 120,000 copies. Of this number 100,000 have been bought by the subscription of one generous Scotch donor, who requested that they might be distributed gratis among Hebrew-reading Jews all over the Continent. Two missionaries lately came from England to make a distribution from Vienna, and they have been sending copies to about 300 Rabbis, many of whom have undertaken to circulate these Scriptures among their co-religionists. Very few have stated that they had any objection to read the New Testament. In connection with this movement the Times correspondent mentions that one of the most learned and respected of Hungarian Rabbis, Dr. J. Lichtenstein, who has been 35 years Rabbi of Tapio-Szele, has lately startled his co-religionists by two pamphlets in which he affirms the divinity of Christ. The pamphlets, being very ably written, have been noticed by all the leading newspapers, and have raised much controversy, for Dr. Lichtenstein professes to remain obedient to the Mosaic dispensation while recognising that Christ was the Messiah.—East Anglian Daily Times, May 12th, 1887.

Digitized by Google

ST. PAUL'S FOUR TIMES REPEATED "NO MORE."

In St. Paul's Epistle to the Hebrews (who were Israelites probably of the Ten Tribes) he showed them in chap. x. how inferior the law was as a system leading to salvation when compared with the precious blood and sacrifice of the God-Man Jesus Christ, who by one sacrifice for sins for ever took away our iniquities, and perfected for ever them that are sanctified in Him (ver. 1—14). In the course of his argument the apostle four times over repeated the words "no more," and these have a remarkable significance for us as God's people Israel in these our latter-day times. In verse 2 he argued that if the Mosaic sacrifices had been able to atone for sin with God they would, once offered, have ceased—for then, he added, the worshippers "once purged" of sin, "should have had no more conscience of sin." But they had conscience of sin, and that continually, as the repetition of the Mosaic sacrifices daily, weekly, monthly, and annually proved. What then was wanting? The anti-type was required to offer the "one sacrifice for sins for ever," acceptable to God, sufficient for sinful man, and so meritorious that God Himself, the pure and Holy God of Israel, could look on it with satisfaction, and say, as He promised He would in Jer. xxxi. 34; Heb. viii. 12, and x. 17:—"Their sins and their iniquities I will remember NO MORE." None of the false religions of the world can promise us this! Purgatory cannot guarantee that God will always forget. Idolatry and Mohammedanism, Judaism, and other man-made religions, never can or do guarantee to us that God will never remember against us our past sins, or visit for them in the coming future. The religion of Jesus Christ does give us the certainty that the blood of Jesus Christ, accepted and applied to the guilty sinner's soul, acts as a perfect cure, and assures us that the stains of guilt are so absolutely and completely purged by the sacrifice of Christ, that God Himself, the Omniscient and the Holy One, declares He is satisfied, and will remember our sins "NO MORE." Such being the fact, the Gospel provides a remedy for our case, which is the absolute eradication and cure of the guilt of sin. God Himself being the Judge, He declares that sin has disappeared not only from His sight but (wonderful words!) even from the memory of His Omniscience! And what is the cause of that? Because the Offerer was all worthy, His sacrifice eternally precious and acceptable to the Father, to make the needful propitiation to the broken law and justice of God. The remedy being perfect, there can be, in the third place, no more offering for sin! The repeated masses of the Church of Rome offered in the alleged unbloody sacrifices of bread and wine are therefore utterly condemned by such a text as this. God declares that now Christ has suffered He will recognise "no more offering for sin" (ver. 18). The door is shut against the attempt, and such offerings are an abomination to Him, such offerers His insulting foes. In Jesus only is redemption and salvation, and there is "no more offering for sin" for ever! Henceforth if the offerer is conscious of sins it is because he has not ceased from sin, and has not applied for pardon to the perennial fountain of the blood of Jesus, which keeps on cleansing us from all sin (1 John i. 7). It is because he does not believe that God will have no more remembrance of sins washed in that crimson flood; but looks for some other way of remission than the one prescribed. The case of such obdurate ones is provided for in ver. 26 of Heb. x., "To such there remaineth NO MORE sacrifice for sins;" words which should send every unsaved Israelite away trembling with dread and anguish; because if "there remaineth no more sacrifice for sin," then are all attempts at working for salvation, to earn it as a reward, vain and hopeless; because by God's own decision He will accept but one sacrifice—the blood of the Cross—to wash out sins; and that, and that alone, will wipe them out from the memory of Him who cannot forget what offends His justice, His holiness and His purity.

So far the personal and individual application of the subject. Has it a national aspect, too, as presented in the apostle's teaching? We think it has. St. Paul quoted a national promise in ver. 16 and 17 of Heb. x.; a promise that he repeated in Heb. viii. 10—12; and took, as we all know, from Jer. xxxi. 33—34, addressed distinctly to one of the two Houses of Israel, to which it was directly applied. The reference in vers. 1 and 2 Heb. x., was to the Hebrew worshippers nationally considered, under the Mosaic law; and regarding them he said that their sacrifices were defective because they failed to purge their sins away, but left them as worshippers, on the contrary, with "conscience of sins."

The blood of Jesus was indeed shed to save His people from their sins, as Matt. i. 21 distinctly indicates; and throughout the Gospels we see that the national aspect of the work and sacrifice of Jesus of Nazareth is constantly presented to us for contemplation, with individual application, doubtless, pressed home at the same time. Such national references are to be found in Matt. ii. 6; iv. 17—23; x. 6; xv. 24; xiii. passim xxvii. 11—37; John xi. 52, &c., &c. The House of Israel being redeemed and saved by the blood of Jesus is no longer under the law but under grace, and God remembers no more against them, their sins, and their national iniquities, as Jer. xxxi. 34 distinctly promises. This is, moreover, a national promise, which was, long before Jeremiah's date, published by God Himself by the mouth of His unworthy heathen prophet Balaam, in Numb. xxiii. 21, where he said: "He hath not beheld iniquity in Jacob, neither hath He seen perverseness in Israel." The blood, in fact, of Jesus Christ, was shed from the foundation of the world for this one nation only, quâ nation, and therefore they have been clean in His sight from all eternity (Rev. xiii. 8).

Nationally there has been but one offering to God for the sins of this people. "The blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth from all sins," and has been shed for this nation's sins as well. Therefore there can be no more offering for sins for them, and there can be "no more sacrifice for sins" from the very nature of the case! It is Christ who redeemed, and as a Shepherd He has guided, guarded, led, and blessed, His people from first to last. They could not, cannot save themselves. They are a blind, stubborn, sin-stricken, helpless people, bent on backsliding. But He has died for them and has redeemed them. No one can pluck them out of His hand, for He is their Almighty Saviour-God, who has promised and never will foreswear Himself, saying that "He will never, no never, never, leave them, nor forsake them" (Heb. xiii. 5; Judges ii. 1; Josh. i. 5; Deut. xxxi. 6). The sacrifice for sins has been made once, for ever, and never will be repeated. There is "no more sacrifice for sins," for Jesus has made "one sacrifice for sins for ever," and has sat down on the right hand of God, expecting from henceforth till His enemies be made His footstool (ver. 12, 13). Let Israel, then, learn this lesson; that salvation and redemption are ready for them nationally and personally, stored up in the infinite merits of the Lord Jesus Christ, and cannot be found or obtained by them elsewhere. In Him they are in glorious amplitude, and to the faith of His people they shall be and ever are, granted, as God is true.

SPECIAL NOTICE TO AUSTRALIAN READERS.—THE BANNER OF ISRAEL should now be ordered of Messrs. Gordon and Gotch, or Messrs. Sampson Low and Co., as Messrs. George Robertson have given up a branch of their Australian magazine business.

A MEMOIR of the late Right Rev. Bishop Titcomb, D.D., by his friend the Rev. Allen Edwards (late Rector of St. Philip, Kennington), will shortly be published. The volume will also contain the funeral sermon preached by Dr. McCann, at St. Peter's Church, Brockley. The frontispiece will be a photo-portrait of the late Bishop. Messrs. Banks & Son will be the publishers.

ERRATUM.—Page 224, col. 2, ode, verse 3, line 1, read "eyes."

Digitized by Google

RELIGION AND EDUCATION IN VICTORIA.

By John S. Anderson.

A startling statement is made in "Echoes," of the 7th instant, a weekly publication of the Church Expansion Association; it is as follows:—

"EDUCATION IN AUSTRALIA.

"We are told that the Victorian system of education is not only irreligious, it is anti-religious, so far as the influence of the Ministry of Education can make it so. No religious services are permitted in the schools, and the Bible is strictly excluded. More still, at the bidding of Jewish or infidel parties in the electorate, all passages which in any sense recognise Christ are expunged from the reading-books. Nelson's "Royal Readers" are used, but in an edition specially prepared to the order of the Victorian Government, in which all passages that could be supposed to be Christian are cast out. Some of our finest poetry has thus been murdered in order that such words as 'Christ' and 'Christian' may not be heard within the State School walls. So far as the Government is concerned, all is done to secure that a child shall be able to pass through its school course without suspecting that such a thing as Christianity ever existed.

"Religious Education has lately been spoken of by Lord Salisbury as 'the foundation of the character of the citizen, that which alone can give the orderly freedom, strength and independence combined with docility of character, which are the conditions of social order, and of the prosperity of a nation.'

"This being the case what fears may we not entertain for the future of Victoria?

Well may the editor of 'Echoes' ask the above question!

Our object in calling the attention of the readers of the Banner to this subject is that we trust it may be the means of having the matter well ventilated, and that some means may be devised whereby such evil influence may be counteracted.

According to the reports of the progress already made towards the Federation of the Empire, the prophecy of our being "a nation and a company of nations,' seems on the point of being fulfilled. What a blot on 'the charter of our land' this Victorian system of education will be!"

Croydon, 12th May, 1887.

Obituary.

On May 16th, at 4, Normanby-street, Liverpool, aged 50 years, John Hall, Artist and Marine Draughtsman. In the falling asleep of Mr. Hall, the British-Israel Identity Association in Liverpool will deeply regret the loss of a faithful and earnest fellow-worker, and the counsel of a careful student and logical exponent of God's Word. It was in the studio of our late friend that the Association was first set in motion, where also many profitable meetings were held, and from which emanated considerable influence for the spread of the Truth. We are sure the deepest sympathy will be felt by our friends in Liverpool for Mrs. Hall and her family in their great bereavement. May the God of Israel in His mercy comfort and sustain them.

Correspondence.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

Dear Sir,—Jer. xxxiii. 17—26 is a tremendously practical Scripture, and so impresses me more and more every time I read it. The logical consequences are to me simply inexorable.

1. If the continuity of the literal line of royal personages has not been maintained in the line of David and Judah, then "Scripture is broken." In the "mouth of two witnesses" this thing is established. Jacob (Gen. xlix. 10) *af*firms it in connection with Judah; and Jeremiah, in the passage above referred to, *con*firms it in connection with David, "of the house and lineage" of Judah.

How profoundly thankful we all should be who believe in the sweetly romantic story of the "Maid of Israel" landing in Ireland nearly 2,500 years ago—the predicted "tender one" from the "top of the young twigs" of Lebanon's stately cedar, destined to be a mighty planting in the "Western Isles," and for the pedigree of our beloved Queen with all its gaps—through which a hostile critic might triumphantly drive a coach and four—from Tea-Tephi down, I think, we ought to praise the Lord continually. But leaving this point I come to

2. If literal Levites be not now continuously ministering before the Lord, their functions only modified by the changes introduced by the Lord Himself, and plainly set forth in the epistle to the Hebrews, then, again, God's dear Word is "broken," and we are all at sea. As logical propositions, these two hold me in a grip of steel. As an honest man, I am bound to accept them with all their consequences. And I do; and, firmly believing as I do, that in the Church of England—antedating Rome—(her foisted abominations not yet wholly purged, I grieve to write) these ministrations now continue, and will, in perpetuity, par excellence, I wish to face ingenuously the reasonable recoil that some of your readers displayed last year, when you did me the honour of reproducing my little tract, "Eureka," in the columns of the Banner. I felt then, and do now, the justice of some of those protests, and I give here a brief suggestion that may remove the edge of those objections, or, at least, modify them.

I think it is quite fair in Dissenters when they tell us that such men as Spurgeon, and Parker, and Arthur, and Moody, judged by any Scriptural standard, are real "ministers of the sanctuary," though they of the apostolical succession "are ignorant of them," and bishops "acknowledge them not." And, on the other hand, I fear there are many who have an unblemished pedigree apostlewards, who are only priests in vestment, and not in heart. Once begin to look towards the "East" in reality, and trace the true "succession," viâ Belfast Bay, where God's truth once quivered in one frail life, touching His priesthood as it hung suspended in one still frailer, touching the royal line, and the mystery begins to clear. God will, in His own good time, roll the mists away from these literal Levitical pedigrees, even though the process of lifting exclude many now accredited as genuine who are not. And then I believe it will be found that our God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob has kept His priesthood intact, as promised in Jer. xxxiii.—Dissenters and Churchmen alike included. Of course this will not please some, but let us have the truth, whether it pleases or not.

It will be seen that I "lightly esteem" the modern exclusiveness of the "apostolical succession" dogma that has done so much harm, and outraged so many loving hearts by its narrowness; and, holding to the true literality of Scripture, which always has respect to other Scriptures, and comparing Jer. xxxiii. with the epistle to the Hebrews, I am not troubled by "burnt-offerings" and "sacrifices," as set forth in verse 18.

I hold that the modern "clergyman," or minister, is a "priest," a Levite, and does as truly offer "sacrifice" in the "Holy Sacraments" as the priests of old did in the burnt-offering. The one, a type of blessings to come; the other, of blessings already in hand; and both but figures of Him who is the glorious antitype and fulfilment of everything redemptive. Who can tell me the essential difference between the "blood of a lamb" and the "fruit of the vine?" Of course the Romish abomination, called the "sacrifice of the Mass," I cannot away with; but let us not be afraid of true words, however abused.

Ever in Jesus,

Geo. O. Barnes,
Mountain Evangelist of Ky.

Jackson, Mississippi, U.S.A., April 17th, 1887.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

Dear Philo-Israel,—I feel sure that Banner readers will be interested in knowing somewhat regarding my printed Italian "letter" to Father Augustine, the great Lent preacher here, regarding whose persuasive eloquence all Florence has gone mad. My "letter" contained a résumé of Identity truths of the future reunion of Judah and Israel, alias Britain, and of Christ's return to reign over them. 500 out of the 2,000 copies have sold, but the father having gone, and interest in his name, and in what was addressed to him having died out, I have recalled the 1,500 which remain, and am having the title, which was "A Letter to Father Augustine of Immense Importance on Religion and Politics, by a Christian of Florence," changed to the following, "The Resurrection of the House of Israel, Prophesied of in the Holy Scriptures, being now Verified in the History and Politics of the day, Dedicated to the Hebrew ladies of Florence, by an English Sister Israelite."

Digitized by Google

The "Letter" to the Roman Catholic Father is not changed. I have only added the following dedication and warning:—

"Dear Sister Israelites,—Deception never won the day, rather bitter self-contempt and open shame. I have been afraid hitherto to appear before the Florence public under the weak name of woman, deceived by the hope that under a feigned name of the sterner sex, I might win the public ear and respect. My deception has been discovered, and won me only contempt. Know me now for what I am—an English sister Israelite, resident for 20 years in Florence. This 'letter,' first written and sent to Father Augustine, whose hearers so many of you have been, I now dedicate to you, because my heart of hearts is with you. I would willingly lay down my life if it would avail to lead you to the study of those Holy Hebrew Scriptures, which have enlightened my mind and opened my eyes to the knowledge of the religious and political truths, which in the following pages I lay before you. Sister Israelites, I have been for ten years an enthusiastic reader of the sacred Scriptures, Old and New, and my enthusiasm is daily renewed, because, before I open that holy Book, I pray to God for that sacred Teacher, the Holy Spirit, whom He has promised to all who ask. Sisters, that Book contains a divine romance, the history of our race, part yet in prophecy, part fulfilled, before which all human romances shrivel up and vanish away.

"These Holy Scriptures point out an omniscient Politician, whose divine hand guides the hand of every player in the great chess-board of so-called human politics. That holy Book contains a tragedy, the love and death of the Lamb of God, of Christ our King, Lion of the tribe of Judah, for man; and finally, oh, sisters of my heart, that Book speaks to us poor wives of a divine Husband, who is our Maker and Redeemer (Isa. liv. 5), whose fidelity to us the world has rewarded with a crown of thorns, and whose love, even unto death, won for Him a malefactor's cross (Isa. liii.). Sisters, do not our hearts daily swell with anguish for such a Husband? Do we not long to lay our little ones in the arms of such a father? Let us open to Him, then, for He knocketh now at our doors, and from His heavenly lips drop these words of divine forgiveness and love: 'If any man (or woman) open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with Me' (Rev. iii. 20).

"You will find that I have written in the preface of this little pamphlet with great enthusiasm of the Rev. Father Augustine. I regret that it is now my sad duty to warn you all against him. His latter sermons—viz., Mary, Purgatory, the Confessional, the Temple, and the Eucharist—have proved him to be no true apostle of the pure and simple Gospel of Christ, but a member and servant of the Church of Papal and idolatrous Rome, ever fabricator of doctrines that detract from the ineffable perfection and glory of that expiatory work of Christ which proclaim Him 'The Lamb of God that taketh away the sins of the world' (John i. 29, and 'only Mediator between God and man' (1st epistle Tim. ii. 5)."

PHILO VERITAS.

Dear Philo-Israel, I am sure you will be glad to know that this little pamphlet, which preaches Christ as well as proclaims British identity with Israel, and Judah's reunion with us, is going to be posted to all the Jews of sufficient education to read it, and they are a large, rich, and influential class in Italy. I beseech BANNER readers to add their prayers to mine that this weak effort may be blessed. You all know that He has promised "that the things that are not shall bring to nought the things that are." Alas! that I should have to tell you that amongst the Christians and evangelicals here these things are nowhere. O, dear Anglo-Israelites, wherever you are in our vast and glorious Empire, when you read these lines, pray for the Jewish wives and mothers in Florence. Think of what it must be to be a wife and mother without a Jesus to turn to, no good Shepherd for yourself, no tender one to carry your little lambs in His bosom!

I agree with you in your reply to Mr. Dimbleby in the BANNER of April 13th. How can we help but preach Jesus to the Jews? Our very love to Judah arises out of our love to Christ. My ultimate object in seeking to lead them to think of the Land of Promise is to lead them first to the ancient Scriptures, and through that to Christ in Isaiah, and then to the Gospel. Only get folks by hook or crook to the holy Book, and surely that is a good long way on the road to Christ When a man or woman has taken to his or her Bible, there is large room for hope.

M. C. H.

Florence, April 17th, 1887.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR PHILO-ISRAEL,—I would suggest to our friends travelling about this summer, to celebrate the Jubilee year by distributing cheap Anglo-Israel-literature as they pass through the villages on their pleasure trips. I generally find it is well received.

Last Saturday our duty required us to drive across Guernsey. On the way I as usual cast out a lot of "THOUGHTS FOR THE BRITISH FOLK," "WHO ARE YOU," and other leaflets. This is a cheap way of extensively increasing the belief in our Israelitish origin, as well as leading to greater study of the Holy Scriptures.

This morning a man who had picked up some of those distributed on Saturday called on board to thank the gentleman who had thrown the papers to him, and to ask if there were any more to spare, for "they had done his soul good." He should like to frame them, but they were printed on both sides. I remedied that defect for his purpose, by giving him a set of "Thoughts" in duplicate, and sent him away happy.

Yours sincerely,

GEORGE BAYLY.

Trinity Yacht "Vestal," May 30, 1887.

THE "BANNER" BRITISH-ISRAELITE JUBILEE FUND.

CHURCH MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

	£	s.	d.
Amount acknowledged on pp. 203 and 163	40	17	9
Mrs. Man, Surrey	0	5	0
A British-Israelite Family, Demerara	0	10	0
Mrs. A. J. Stephenson, Lee, near London	0	2	0
A Friend, Worthing	0	2	6
S. A., 16, Chantry-road	0	2	6
M. W., Stockwell, London	0	1	0
M. C. C., ,,	0	2	6
Miss Sharp	1	0	0
Mrs. Sullen (per Miss Sharp)	0	5	0
A. Badcock (ditto)	0	1	0
G. Wills (ditto)	0	2	0
M. (ditto)	0	1	0
Mrs. Huyshe, near Exeter	1	0	0
A Marine Engineer, Liverpool	0	2	6
Miss Blyth, 46, Clapham-road	0	2	0
E. B., Clifton	0	2	6
Miss Blake, Clifton	0	10	0
J. B.	0	2	6
Friends (by J. B.)	0	2	10
G. M. A. (per Miss Jones, Hereford)	0	5	0
F. J. (ditto)	0	1	0
Miss Pringle, Hawick, N.B.	0	2	0
E.S.B., Bury St. Edmunds	0	2	0
E. D., Manchester	0	2	6
M. T. T., Paris	5	0	0
Mrs. Cox, Surrey	2	0	0
Mrs. M. Barker, Chichester	0	10	0
Miss Phillips, Chichester	0	2	6
J. C. H. M., Dublin	0	2	6
	£54	2	1

JEWS' SOCIETY.

	£	s.	d.
Amount previously acknowledged	5	16	6
Mrs. Speir, Tunbridge Wells	0	1	0
Mrs. Hill, Banbury	0	2	6
E.S.B., Bury St. Edmunds	0	2	0
M. T. T., Paris	5	0	0
Geo. Haworthy, Liverpool	0	5	0
Mrs. Crufurd, Earl's Court, London	0	10	0
	£11	17	0

BIBLE SOCIETY.

	£	s.	d.
Amount previously acknowledged	8	16	3
A British-Israelite Family, Demerara	0	10	0
Jubilee Gift at a Lecture at Lee	1	6	1
Miss Sharp	0	10	0
Miss Hutton, Moffat, N.B.	0	2	0
Mrs. S. Gairdner ,,	0	2	0
A Marine Engineer, Liverpool	0	2	6
Mr. John May, Malta	0	2	6
Mrs. Bannatyne, ,,	0	2	6
Master Gunner Pierce, Malta	0	1	0
Mr. W. Hurst, Malta	0	1	0
T. J., Hereford	0	1	0
G. M. A., Hereford	0	3	0
Mrs. Hill, Banbury	0	2	6
Miss M. Livesay, Bayswater	0	2	6
E.S.B., Bury St. Edmunds	0	2	0
M. T. T., Paris	5	0	0
Mrs. Parker, Newton Abbot, S. Devon	1	0	0
Mrs. Butterworth, Brighton	1	0	0
J. C. H. M., Dublin	0	2	6
	£19	9	4

Intending subscribers are requested to send their contributions to the Editor of the BANNER OF ISRAEL as soon as possible, as the lists will be closed ere long.

May 30th, 1887. PHILO-ISRAEL.

Digitized by Google

NOTICES.

All communications intended for the Editor, to be addressed: "Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Clifton, Bristol.

SUBSCRIPTIONS. £ s. d.

Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free 0 7 6
Two Copies (including Double Numbers) 0 13 6
Three Copies ,, ,, ,, ... 1 0 4
Four Copies ,, ,, ,, ... 1 5 6
Six Copies ,, ,, ,, ... 1 16 4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-grand, London, to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C., or F. W. PARRY & Co., 29, Paternoster-row, London.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

Contents Bills and Show Cards may be obtained on application to the Publishers.

Advertisements should be sent to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

Prepaid Advertisements are inserted at the rate of thirty words for 1s. 4d.

A New Work on the Identity of Lost Israel
By the late BISHOP TITCOMB.

Now ready, in Cloth Gilt, Bevelled Boards, Imperial 8vo. Price 3s.; sent Post Free for Postal Order or Stamps.

A MESSAGE TO THE CHURCH
FROM
THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.
BY THE LATE
RT. REV. BISHOP TITCOMB, D.D.

The Kentish Mercury, April 21st, says:—"This book derives a peculiar and pathetic interest from the circumstances that the proofs of its concluding pages were revised by the author during the last few days of his life, and that its publication took place simultaneously with his death. One feels, in noticing a book under such circumstances, a special responsibility, when the author is removed beyond the reach of human criticism of whatever kind. But in truth it is impossible to glance at these pages without being struck by the deep and reverent research into the prophetic Scriptures which it manifests, by the tone of piety that pervades it, as well as the lucidity and eloquence of its style. Nor is it necessary to express concurrence with the views of the gifted and pious author in his prophetic theories to give this praise. Of course with regard to Dr. Titcomb's prophetic interpretations there will be much difference of opinion, but there can be none in the mind of any impartial person who reads this work, either as to the diligence with which he testimony of the prophets has been studied, or the earnestness of the expositor in stating his conclusions. Bishop Titcomb, it is well-known to those who have studied his works, was one of the school of prophetic interpreters who believe that the British Empire, or perhaps, more accurately speaking, the English-speaking race, are identified with those whom we have been in the habit of calling the 'Lost Tribes of Israel.'" [Then follow several extracts.]

London: Robert Banks & Son, Racquet court, Fleet-st
F. W. Parry & Co., Paternoster-row, and all booksellers.

LEAFLET FOR THE YOUNG,
WHO ARE YOU?
Price 1s. per 100; postage 1½d.

To be obtained from the Hon. Sec., Anglo-Israel Association, 27, Pulteney Street, Bath; and of R. Banks & Son, Racquet Court, Fleet Street.

"A happy effort, well and successfully made, and likely to lead to good results. The Leaflet teaches the Scriptural distinction between Israel and Judah. . . . The separate captivities. . . Our nation's possession of the Gates, the Sabbath, etc."—Banner of Israel, Mar. 16, 1887.

Crown 8vo., wrapper, price 6d.

Where is the Firstborn?

An investigation of the British Claim to Identification with the House of Israel. By the REV. G. A. ROGERS, M.A. Edited by his Widow. Author of "The Coronation Stone," "The Star-lit Crown," &c., &c.

"Ably written, well edited, and carefully presented to the readers. . . . We wish it a large circulation."—Banner of Israel.

London: Robert Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-st.

Price 2d., 12s. 6d. per Hundred,

Is Not Queen Victoria the Royal Seed to King David's House, and Are Not Her Subjects, the British People, the Ten Lost Tribes?

By WILLIAM HOPTON,
Colliery Manager (Author of "Conversations on Mines"), St. Helen's.

London: R. Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

WORKS BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

The Geography of the Gates. With Map and six full page, and one double-page, Illustrations, printed on plate paper. 208 pages, in handsome cloth, gilt Price 3s. 6d., post free 3s. 10d.

An Elementary Digest or Sketch of the Chief Facts and Teachings of the Great Pyramid of Egypt. Adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific 56 pages, Illustrated with Diagrams, price 4d., post free 5d. 10th Thousand.

Our Identity with the House of Israel. Price 4d. Reprinted from "Clifton Chronicle Letters"

The History of the House of Israel; How they were Lost, and How they were Found, Told for the Children. Price 6d., cloth 1s.; post free 7d. and 1s. 1d. Fourth Edition. Eleventh thousand
R. Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Thoughts for the British Folk.

Suggested by PHILO-ISRAEL.

No. 1.—Multitudinousness.
No. 2.—The Gates.
No. 3.—The Nation and Company of Nations.
No. 4.—British Wealth.
No. 5.—The Rulers Over Many Nations.
No. 6.—The Universal Creditor.
No. 7.—The Ever-Continuing British Monarchy.
No. 8.—The Scattered People at Home in Every Climate.
No. 9.—The Queen, Lords, and Commons.
No. 10.—The Unconquerable Nation.
No. 11.—The Fatally Destructive Race.
No. 12.—The Isolated Nation.
No. 13.—The Nation Which Belts the Earth.
No. 14.—The Emancipators of the Slave
No. 15.—The Christian Nation.
No. 16.—The Ten Commandments.
No. 17.—The Asylum for the Foreign Refugee.
No. 18.—Possessors of the "Sign."
No. 19.—The Universal Missionaries.
No. 20.—Testimony of the Book of Common Prayer.
No. 21.—Church and State, and also Disestablishment.
No. 22.—Our Poor Laws.
No. 23.—The Labour Question is an Identity Question.
No. 24.—Emigration.

London: R. BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

THE TEETH, THE TEETH, THOSE PRECIOUS TEETH!
Save, Purify, Beautify.
GEORGE & WELCH'S
CARBOLINE
1/6 (TOOTH PASTE). 2/6 per Pot
Is the Best Known
Cleanser, Preserver, and Deodoriser.

Dental Guide says:—"No Tooth application equals the Carbolics."

Proprietors: GEORGE & WELCH, Worcester.
Through Chemists, or Post Free from Makers.

ETHELINE

A New and most effective Remedy for CORNS.—Perfectly safe and harmless. Is very easily applied. Cures in a few applications, without the slightest pain. Everyone troubled with either Corns, Warts, or Bunions, will find relief by using ETHELINE. To be obtained of all Chemists, or post free for 14 stamps from J. LLEWELLYN, CHEMIST, COWBRIDGE.

RHEUMATISM, GOUT,
SCIATICA, LUMBAGO, INDIGESTION, CONSTIPATION, LIVER & KIDNEY COMPLAINTS, NERVOUS DISORDERS, LADIES' AILMENTS, ETC. Promptly Relieved and CURED BY
HARNESS' ELECTROPATHIC BELT
ALL sufferers should read "Harness' Guide to Health," free by post, containing copies of Thousands of Testimonials. Every man and woman in search of Health, Strength, and Energy, should at once send a 21s. postal order to the Medical Battery Co. Ltd. 52, OXFORD ST. LONDON, W. and procure one of these famous Belts, and they may rely upon being CURED
Corner of Rathbone Place.

PUBLISHED BY ROBT. BANKS & SON,
RACQUET COURT, FLEET STREET, E.C.

THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL. By the Rev. Joseph Wild, D.D., Pastor of Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, New York. Price 3s., post free 3s. 3d.

THE FUTURE OF ISRAEL AND JUDAH. Companion volume to above. By the Rev. Joseph Wild, D.D. With Portrait of the Author. Cloth, gilt lettered, bevelled boards. Price 2s., post free 2s. 3d.

THE SISTERS OF HARROWDALE RECTORY. A Tale of Great Interest for Young People. By Mrs. M. A. Searson. With double-page illustration of Harrowdale Rectory. Price 2s. 6d., post free 2s. 9d.

WHO ARE WE & WHAT IS OUR MISSION? By J. Thornhill Harrison. With seven Maps. Handsome cloth, gilt, price 5s. Free for P.O.

JEHOVAH TRIUMPHANT. The New and Complete Theology and Electric Light of the Bible, containing the History of British-Israel, Compiled from the Sacred Scriptures. Cloth gilt, price 10s. 6d., post free for Postal Order or Cheque.

THE GEOGRAPHY OF THE GATES. By PHILO-ISRAEL. With Map, and six full page, and one double-page, Illustrations, printed on plate paper. 208 pages, in handsome cloth, gilt. Price 3s. 6d.; post free.

THE WORD: THE WORLD: THE BRANCH. By J. LEYLAND FIELDEN, Esq. Price 12s., post free.

EPHRAIM-ENGLAND. The Nineteenth Century Revelation of the Fruits of History. By Rev. E. DOUGLAS, Vicar of Kidsgrove. Cloth gilt, lettered, 4s., gilt edges 5s., free by post.

FIFTY REASONS WHY THE ANGLO-SAXONS ARE ISRAELITES of the Lost Tribes of the House of Israel. By Rev. W. H. POOLE, D.D. Price 6d., post free 7d.

BIBLE LESSONS AND REFLECTIONS. By the late ROBERT GAIRDNER, of Kilmarnock, N.B. Price 2s. 6d., by post 2s. 9d.; cheap edition, limp cloth, 1s., by post, 1s. 2d.

THE ANGLO-ISRAEL POST-BAG; or, How Arthur Came to See It. By the Right Rev. BISHOP TITCOMB. Price 2s. 6d. in cloth gilt; paper cover, 1s. 6d., by post 1d. extra.

THE ISRAELITES FOUND IN THE ANGLO-SAXONS. The Ten Tribes supposed to have been Lost, traced from the land of their captivity to their occupation of the Isles of the Sea. By WILLIAM CARPENTER. Price 2s. 6d., by post 2s. 8d.

THE ANSWER TO THE EASTERN QUESTION, With Some Facts Concerning the Identity of the British With Israel. By the Author of "The New Old Story," enlarged. Price 3d.; for distribution, 50 copies, 11s., post free.

CARDINAL PROOFS THAT THE BRITISH Are the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel—the Abrahamic Covenant. By F. W. PHILLIPS. With two chapters by PHILO-ISRAEL. Price 6d., post free 7d.

THE NEW OLD STORY. By "A E I." Price 6d., post free; in cloth, 1s., post free.

THE BIBLE ATLAS. To Illustrate the Old and New Testaments. Price 1s.; post free 1s. 1d.

ANGLO-ISRAEL TRACTS. 8 pp. Royal 16mo., on toned paper. Adapted to enclose in letters, and for general distribution. No. 1—12. Half-penny each, 12 copies, post free, 6d. Specimen packet for 6 stamps.

PRESENT-DAY PROBLEMS, and How Anglo-Israel Truth Explains and Solves Them. By V. M. COX. 3d., by post 4 stamps.

LIGHT SHED BY THE GREAT PYRAMID OF EGYPT on the Last Days of this Dispensation. From A.D. 1814 to A.D. 1922. By JAMES KEITH. Price 4d., by post 5 stamps.

NEW TESTAMENT TRUTH on the Anglo-Israel Controversy. By J. G. TAYLOR. Price 3d., by post 4 stamps.

A NEW LIGHT. An Elementary Pamphlet for General Distribution. By A E I. Price 2d., by post 2½d. in stamps.

EPHRAIM-ISRAEL, the Pivot Nation of Prophecy and History. By V. M. COX. Price 1d., one dozen free for 1s.

AMMI; OR, THE CHOSEN PEOPLE. By Miss BIRD. Tracing the Descent of the British People from Abraham as the "friend of God," and showing that true science, history, philology, and ethnology, are on the side of the Identity of the Anglo-Saxon Race with the Ten Lost Tribes. Price 2d., post free 2½d.; 12s. 6d. per 100 for distribution.

IS NOT QUEEN VICTORIA the Royal Seed to King David's Throne, and Are Not Her Subjects, the British People, the Ten Lost Tribes? By W. HOPTON. Price 2d.; 12s. 6d. per 100.

A Complete Catalogue Free on Application.

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. F. W. PARRY (late GUEST & Co.), 29, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, JUNE 15, 1887. [All rights reserved

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."

(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. XI., No. 547. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, JUNE 22, 1887. [16 PAGES, ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
Her Majesty's Jubilee	245
England's Jubilee—A Divine Manifestation of British-Israel Truth and Duty. By the Rev. Robert Douglas, M.A.	246
The Gentilization of the House of Israel. By the Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A.	248
The Practical Value of Anglo-Israel Truth. By the Rev. George Hider	250
What Place is There in the Divine Economy for Our Identity, in the Present Dispensation. By the Editor.	251
A Jubilee Ode from South Australia	252
Israel's Jubilee. By Mrs. G. A. Rogers.	253
The Jubilee of 1887 and the Silent Revolution. By C. Piazzi Smyth, F.R.A.S.	254
Jubilate. By the Rev. Denis Hanan, B.D.	255
Fifty Years of Righteous Tendency. By F. Gass.	256
Ten-Tribed Israel's Jubilee Ode	256
Past and Current History and its Testimony to Our Identity with Israel. By Miss V. M. Cox.—Part IV.	257
Laus Deo. By Miss V. M. Cox	258
Correspondence.	258

HER MAJESTY'S JUBILEE.

THE present number of the BANNER OF ISRAEL is a double one, issued (not at the usual price, but) at a penny, as our publishers contribution to the present joyous festive occasion, when our gracious and beloved Sovereign, having reached the end of the 50th year of a most prosperous and blessed reign, the nation is making holiday in consequence. We joy and rejoice exceedingly that our God's good hand has been upon us as a nation, and has blessed us in every possible, imaginable way during the last fifty years. He has given us, in the compass of the Queen's long and happy reign, every blessing that He promised to His people Israel, unconditionally, in Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and conditionally on Israel "hearkening to His will, and obeying His commandments." He has granted to her a contented, righteous people, who hold the true, evangelical, Protestant faith, as "witnesses" to the Lord's faithfulness, truth, and love to them. He has honoured her by giving to her people a large measure of the missionary spirit which urges them to take the Gospel and the Word of God to "all nations, families, and kindreds of the earth." He has given her millions of subjects who value the pure Word of God as they do their very lives, and who exist to guard it, translate it, distribute, and teach it, to the heathen at home and to the heathen abroad; a people who are the only existing national examples of the fulfilment of God's promises to Israel, "He showeth His word unto Jacob, His statutes and His judgments unto Israel. He hath not dealt so with any nation, and as for His judgments they have not known them" (Psa. cxlvii. 19, 20). He has given her a people who love the Sabbath of the Lord their God, who, nationally, turn away their foot from the Sabbath from doing their pleasure on God's holy day, and call the Sabbath a delight, the holy of their Lord, honourable, and honour Him, not doing their own way, nor finding their own pleasure, nor speaking their own words; who therefore delight themselves in the Lord; and according to the promise, ride upon the high places of the earth, and feed on the heritage of their father Jacob (Isa. lviii. 13, 14).

God has further distinguished Her Majesty's happy reign, by giving her a people blessed with multitudinousness inconceivable, so that their surplus population has gone abroad to the "desolations of the earth," and there founded Colonies, which have developed into nations, and those nations into a "Federation of States," shortly to appear, such as the world has never seen before. These are all Israelitish blessings, promised to the children of Israel by God Himself, in consequence of His love "to Abraham and his seed for ever," and in order that He may establish His covenant which He sware unto their fathers as it is this day.

During Her Majesty's reign her people have shown that to whatever they put their hands to do it, God has blest them in their doing. Their manufactures have taken the lead in all the markets of the world, and as compared with other nations, they appear to be "high above them all"—"the head and not the tail, above only and not beneath." How the manufactures of our race now compare with the products of foreign manufacturers, is well told in an article on the coming Paris Exhibition, in the Scottish News of May 17 last, when the writer, speaking of the present attainments of our handicraftsmen as compared with their foreign rivals, said:—

We had learned many lessons at Paris in 1867; we sent back our revised and corrected themes and versions for the inspection of the French and of the whole world in 1878. Finer porcelain and earthenware, more tastefully designed carpets and hangings, more elaborate metal work, more chastely decorative wall-papers and floorcloths—all these attested the beneficent influence of contact with French taste, combined with the training of the schools of design which now cover the United Kingdom. Proudly we could show that the lace curtains of Nottingham could not only equal but surpass the analogous products of France, Switzerland, and Belgium. With equal pride we could prove to demonstration, that notwithstanding all the desponding talk about our want of technical training and the injurious competition of the foreign artisan, with his long hours and poor wages, we could still manufacture the best glass, the best cutlery the best saddlery, harness, and general leather work, the best electro-plate, the best flannels, and serges, and fleecy hosiery in the world. That which our manufacturers and traders did twenty and eleven years ago they ought to do again, and gloriously, in Paris in 1889. . . . . It is all very well to sneer at "trophies" of pickles and preserved meats; to laugh at "monuments" of soap and candles; to deride "achievements" in biscuits and food for infants. "Those laugh best," says the proverb, "who laugh the last." The homely articles which we have enumerated, together with cognate commodities, are among our specialities. The French are justly proud of their articles de Paris; and as justly may we pride ourselves upon our articles d' Angleterre. Our painters and sculptors can execute splendid work; our art manufacturers can vie successfully with their French brethren; but it is in the fabrication of all that conduces towards the comfort of domestic life, and what may be termed the "solidities" of civilisation, that industrial England excels.

Digitized by Google

Since Her Majesty came to the throne, the national wealth has increased by leaps and bounds, as we have often shown. It amounts now to an income of between 1,500 to 2,000 millions a year, of which 200 millions are invested by the nation annually. The British Gates and outland possessions are now sixty-five in number, conferring on Her Majesty vast territories and immense influence throughout the globe. Her Empire is five times as large as that of Darius the Great, four times larger than Rome's, an eighth larger than Russia's now, sixteen times larger than France's Empire, forty times bigger than Germany's, three times larger than the mighty dominions of America. This gigantic Empire is yearly increasing, and instead of exhibiting a tendency to break up and collapse, as other previous Empires have done, it has possession of nearly all the strategic positions of the earth, at sea and on land, and when confederated, will obviously be irresistible by all the nations of the world combined. The Heathen Empire of the Queen is larger, and more entirely under the power of her sceptre, than it ever has been before. It is larger and more populous than it used to be at any period of Her Majesty's reign. She reigns over 250 millions of Indians, Hindus, and Mahommedans, and literally, as representing this nation, fulfils God's promise to Israel—"She reigns over many nations, but none of them reign over her" (Deut. xv. 6). In India sixteen nations acknowledge her supremacy. In Canada and the Mauritius Frenchmen are her subjects, a million in number. Dutch and Germans owe allegiance to her at the Cape; in Cyprus and Aden Turks, Arabians, Africans, Jews, and Levantines, submit to her rule; in Canada, Russians; at Gibraltar, Spaniards; in Malta, Italians; Borneans in Borneo; Chinese and Malayans in Hong Kong, and in the Straits Settlements; and so throughout the world she reigns over many nations, but none of them reign over communities of her subjects anywhere! The Jubilee of so great a Sovereign, sprung from the House of David, and seated on the throne of the House of Israel, we joyously keep at this time; and while we joy and rejoice for the truly divine blessings we possess as British-Israelite subjects of such a Queen, we call upon all our readers, wherever they may be, to praise God for good Queen Victoria, and to pray that her reign may yet be long over God's people, committed to her charge! And let us all say, "Amen! Amen!"

"THE use of this subject lies in the truth of it, because truth, in every department of knowledge, is both invaluable and indispensable."—The late Bishop Titcomb.

TESTIMONY FROM MANCHESTER.—A reader of the BANNER in Manchester testifies to the good he has derived spiritually from the study of the subject dealt with in these pages, and declares he takes all opportunities of making the subject known. He has a Sunday class of thirty boys, to whom he is giving lessons in it. They are interested and benefited; the boys teaching their parents, and the parents examining the Bible to see if the good news is true.—ED.

ENGLAND'S JUBILEE—A DIVINE MANIFESTATION OF BRITISH-ISRAEL TRUTH AND DUTY.

BY THE REV. ROBERT DOUGLAS, M.A.
(Vicar of Kidsgrove, Stoke-on-Trent.)

[This article and the three which follow are reports of the speeches delivered at the Annual Meeting of the Metropolitan Association, held in Exeter Hall. They have been carefully revised by the authors. In our brief report of the meeting in a previous number it was inadvertently omitted that W. H. Peters, Esq., J.P., of Exeter, seconded the adoption of the report, and in doing so presented a cheque for £25 as a Jubilee offering, and as an encouragement to others to double their contributions.]

DEAR ISRAELITE FRIENDS,—A few days ago a gentleman in Manchester who knew I was coming here asked if this was considered one of the May meetings. I answered, "Yes; truly the root of the grand May-meeting system." (Hear, hear.) We are now in the place of the root; but in a short time, I hope before many years elapse, we shall grow up to the big hall, and I feel sure that ere long this great truth which we seek to disseminate will be rehearsed in St. Paul's Cathedral and in Westminster Abbey, where, in the latter place, we have one silent but eloquent witness to the truth. (Hear, hear.) Now some one will say, "You are an enthusiast." Well, my friends, it is well to be zealously affected always in a good cause; but I am not speaking, I trust, the language of mere enthusiasm, but of calm and cumulative conviction, the result of eight or nine years close and careful study of Scripture and history, as bearing upon each other. Now, the ground of my confidence is not in ourselves. If Christianity had depended upon its advocates, we should have heard the last of it long ago, and we may say the same, perhaps, of British-Israelism. But our point is this, that British-Israelism is not a human discovery, but a Divine revelation—(hear, hear)—and because it is a Divine revelation, because it is in the hands of our ascended Redeemer, therefore I thus speak. My subject is the manifestation of British-Israelism, the culminating manifestation of the Royal Jubilee; for I believe, while we have many commemorations of the Jubilee, from the sublime to the ridiculous, this is the great truth which the Jubilee enforces upon all careful students of the history of the past fifty years, when that history is illuminated by Divine prophecy. I have got but twenty minutes, and so my remarks will necessarily be somewhat sketchy; but I will endeavour to draw an outline of the arguments which you may go by, and I will mention four points. First of all, in its facts, the Jubilee is a manifestation of British-Israel truth; secondly, in its theology, British-Israelism is entitled to this place; thirdly, in its teaching or practical doctrine; fourthly, in its call to the nation. Now, I think that which causes the idea of the Jubilee to strike so deep a chord in British hearts all over the world is not merely the fact that our gracious Queen has reigned for fifty years. I think it is not merely the fact that whatever is Hebrew, as George Eliot remarks, has such a singular fascination for British minds; that, as she observes, the singular passion of the English people for the Hebrew writings seems to imply some affinity. (Hear, hear.) Not merely so. I think we may say, without the slightest exaggeration, that the more closely you examine the history of our country during the past fifty years, the more you will be struck with the conviction that the history of this period is absolutely unique in the history of the world. (Hear, hear.) Take what is disclosed to us by these May meetings. Here you have some 150 societies, from April to June, celebrating their anniversaries; and only think of the deep, earnest enthusiasm and earnest conviction expressed by those societies! They have no May meetings in Paris. (Hear, hear.) We are, in that respect, singular. Mr. Douglas Onslow has referred to the Conference held a month ago, which I attended. I was very much struck with a remark of the Chairman, the Dean of Ripon. He said the great thing that struck him as an objection was these words: "The people shall dwell alone, and shall not be reckoned among the nations." I think it is extraordinary that a man of his learning and penetration of judgment should not see that in the only sense in which Israel of old ever dwelt alone was this, namely, in its spiritual and moral superiority. (Hear, hear.) In that we dwell alone, without the shadow of a doubt. (Hear, hear.) My friends, not only have we this great spiritual characteristic brought to light, but we have our great moral marks of distinction. We see British enthusiasm enlisted in everything noble and good—in the cause of popular education, in ameliorative legislation, in philanthropy, in everything that can benefit, not only ourselves, but the world; for there is one principle which has struck deep root into the British conscience, and it is the principle of the old promise, "I will bless thee, and thou shalt be a blessing." Then, besides our moral superiority, we have also specially brought to light at this time our national, we may say our racial, superiority. Look at that Conference which has just concluded its sittings —the Colonial Conference—(hear, hear)—and think what that Conference represents. Think of the population, the British population, the English-speaking population, it represents—a population, as Mr. Gladstone remarks, that has increased during the last century from fifteen millions to one hundred millions, and consider how that population is still increasing, so that, at the same rate, in another century it will be a thousand millions. Consider how we have extended to the utmost points of the earth. See how the words of Moses have been accomplished in us: "The people shall push the nations together to the ends of the earth." And we see, not as a vague, uncertain guess, but as a clear deduction from the present position of our nation, a universal British empire—that is, an empire with its sixty-five or so settlements and islands all welded together into one living whole, welded together for the highest religious and moral purposes, welded together to defend liberty in all parts of the world, welded together to promote the extension of trade, commerce, and human emancipation from all evil. (Hear, hear.) You see, I say this Conference represented that, and it also represents the changed providential conditions of human life which render a universal empire practicable. The practical annihilation of distance by steam and telegraph enables men to carry on what used to be impossibilities. What was impossible by the obstacle of distance in the days of Greece and Rome has become practical to us. I must not speak too long of these facts. There are many others calling for our attention. There are the facts of our ascendancy in Syria and Egypt, in the lands of the Bible, and you will notice the Convention which is concluded in regard to Egypt between Turkey and England. It practically gives to England, I believe, certainly for three years, the supreme influence in that country; and if we have it for three years I do not believe we shall ever lose that influence again. (Hear, hear.) I come now to my second point—the theology of British-Israelism as manifested by these Jubilee facts. You say, How do these things show that we are Israel. First, because these fruits can only come out of Israel, because races and nations are not formed capriciously or by accident, and if Rome was not built in a day, Britain was not built in a year. I say that the mission which the race has accomplished in these days is essentially, by all sound philosophy, the same mission which it accomplished three thousand years ago. Again, I say, these facts prove our doctrine, because they mark out this nation, or this race, as God's chosen race, and the facts, from their very nature and consequences, are such that they are determinative of the whole future condition of humanity and of the world. But the great proof, as you have often heard, is this, if you carefully analyse the leading facts of the past fifty years, these marvellous blessings which the God of grace in His providence has bestowed upon us as a people, you will find that they are exactly the blessings that He said He would give to Ephraim-Israel in virtue of the Abrahamic covenant which was renewed in Moses and ratified by Christ. I cannot enlarge upon that point, but if you will examine the facts of the past fifty years, in spiritual blessing, in multiplied population, in extending colonies, you will find that they are exactly the blessings God promised He would give to Ephraim-Israel. (Hear, hear.) Again, this is just the time when, according to the chronology of prophecy, there should be a new departure in Israel's history, and it is just the time when precisely this new departure is taking place in British history. You will find that the new covenant with the House of Israel and the House of Judah, confirmed in Christ, came into operation when He said the old covenant was finished. And further, you will see from the prophecies of the Old Testament there were to be seven times of judgment to Israel. Take the striking passage in Leviticus, where these seven times of judgment are spoken of, just as the seven times are spoken of in Dan. iv. I cannot say now how I explain the connection of these two prophecies. But the seven times, according, I believe, to all sound interpretation of prophecy, mean 2,520 years. Israel's chastisement, then, was to wholly expire at the close of that period. Now, when we consider that it was in B.C. 721 or so, that the calamities of the nation culminated in the Assyrian expatriation, and reckon from that, we come exactly to the beginning of this century of marvellous, we may almost say, miraculous phenomena, with respect to the British race! We come exactly to the time when these identical promises to Israel through Ephraim, should come to Israel, that they have come to us. My time is up, but there are two other points that I would have touched upon. I will just indicate what they are before I sit down, but not enlarge upon them. One is the doctrine of British-Israelism in its establishment of the exact and literal truth—(A voice, "And spiritual truth")—of God's Holy Word from the beginning, in its reproducing in actual fact and history the words of the Bible, in its exaltation of the blessed Saviour, the Lord Jesus, not only as the justification of the individual soul, but as the righteousness of the Nation of Israel. My other point is the call to the nation, as a nation, to repent and turn to God, and the call to the nation to go forward in its high mission, and in the call to us to fulfil the command of Jeremiah to declare His praise "in the isles afar off, and say, He that scattered Israel will gather him." In all these respects the teaching of Anglo-Israelism, rightly understood, is the nineteenth century adaptation of New Testament, of Bible Christianity, to the needs, and the circumstances of the age in which we live. There is the call to us as a people to go forward in our blessed and glorious work. We are met by the most paltry objections on the part of those who oppose us. We are perfectly sure ourselves that by-and-bye the opposition must give way; and I think we are called upon to make some special effort this Jubilee year, and I will just throw out a suggestion which occurred to my own mind. I believe there are hundreds of clergymen of the Church of England who are ready to receive fair scriptural interpretations of this truth; I believe they are quite prepared to open their pulpits to men whom they can trust to set the subject forth in a fair and scriptural manner. I have myself had a great many practical illustrations of that. Some of my brethren, who were by no means professed Anglo-Israelites, have been delighted to allow me to preach on the subject; but with a large parish under my care, I cannot do the work that should be done: but it is work of the highest importance to indoctrinate the pulpits of the Church of England with this glorious truth. As an Anglo-Israel Society we want men to send forth as preachers, under proper rules and directions, to wherever they can get an opening in the pulpits of our national Church, and this is a suggestion I should make, with all deference to the friends on the platform, as worthy of the most deep and prayerful consideration. (Hear, hear.) In conclusion, let me say that I have one strong and earnest desire, and that is, that you all may be led to the same blessed knowledge of God's holy Word that this truth has communicated to me. (Applause.) Let me conclude with an accommodation of the words of the well-known hymn:—

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

"Waft, waft, ye winds, this story,
And you, ye waters, roll,
Till like a sea of glory
It spreads from pole to pole;
Till o'er our ransomed nature,
The Lamb for sinners slain,
Redeemer, King, Creator,
In bliss returns to reign."

(Applause.)

THE GENTILIZATION OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL.

By the Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A.
(Vicar of St. Bartholomew's, Bristol.)

