THE

BANNER OF ISRAEL.

A Weekly Journal

ADVOCATING THE

IDENTITY OF THE BRITISH NATION

WITH THE

LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

VOLUME XII., 1888.

London:
ROBERT BANKS & SON, RACQUET COURT, FLEET STREET, E.C.,
F. W. PARRY & Co., 29, PATERNOSTER ROW, E.C.

Digitized by Google

JOHN T. GOTT
(Of West Hartlepool).

Digitized by Google

THE NEW YORK PUBLIC LIBRARY
811960
ASTOR, LENOX AND TILDEN FOUNDATIONS
R 1917 L

INDEX.

PAGE

Articles by the Editor.

A.D. 1588 and 1688 317
Africa, Complications in South 325
„ for Israel 413
„ Scheme to Absorb 409
African Company, The Imperial British East... 429
African Protectorate, A Fresh 197
Alarming News from France, Berlin, &c. 189
Amalek, The Lord Jehovah's Perpetual Enemy 381
Anticipations of the Coming Woe ... 327
Archbishop Whitgift's Prayer, 1588 ... 422
Argument in a Nutshell, The 53
Australia, Western 137
Austria Hungary 461
Austro-German Treaty, The 85
Baxter's Doleful Views 417
Beginning of the End, The 509
Bible and the British Empire, The (The Right Hon. A. W. Peel) 42
Bible in Italy 382
Bible in Russia, Suppression of the ... 382
Bible, The Nation of the (John Wilkinson) 444
Bishop Moorhouse "Is Sure of It" ... 445
"Blessed is He Whosoever Shall Not be Offended in Me" 359
Bombay 386
Book of the Lord Jehovah, The 88
Britain as a Naval and Military Power ... 256
Britain's Position on the Surface of the Globe 384
British Civilization One Hundred Years Hence 405
British Fleet 365
British Settlers in the United States ... 344
Britannia, Rule 390
Brotherhood of the Anglo-Saxon Race, The 277
Canadian National Song, The 418
Centenary of Australia, The 89
Chambers' New Encyclopædia on Our Identity 308
Christian Commonwealth on Our Identity, The 414
Church Missionary Society (Vide Societies General Articles) 229, 231, 262, 319, 387 447
Church, Third Decennial Council of the Anglican 346
Clouds Charged With the Electricity of War, The Great, Heavy 29
Coals 198
Coasts, Ends, and Uttermost Parts of the Earth, The 398
Colonizing Power of the Modern World, The One Great 369
Coming Disaster, The 206
Company of Nations, &c., The 179
Controversy in the North Manchester Guardian 443
Coronation Stone and Chair, The 449
Covenants With Man, God's Three Great 232
Defence of Coaling Stations 245
„ „ India 278
„ „ Isles of the West 240
„ „ London 213
„ „ the Empire (Lord Brassey) ... 71
Difficulties, Friendly (Dwyer, Tasmania) 55
Discovery of the British Empire 149
Doors Shut About Us at Home and Abroad, The 498
Drunkenness in India, British Responsibility for 96
Dutch Language, The 318
Dwellers in the Tents of Shem, The ... 439
"Dwelling Alone" 488
Echo v. BANNER, The 273
Education of the Young in Israel, The ... 335

PAGE

Egypt's Saviour, Defender, and Deliverer 72
„ „ The Great One 238
Emigration and Population 136
„ from Liverpool... 246
„ in 1887 128
Empire, Expansion of the 38
„ from a Peppercorn, An 385
„ Latest Addition to the 478
„ in the West, Our 306
„ The Greatest and Freest—the World Has Ever Known ... 285, 474
Enemy Cometh in Like a Flood, The ... 75
England, The Downfall of 271
England the Modern Israel 177
English Language, The 122
English-Speaking Race 53
Ephraim's Woe 288, 347
Epistle of St. Paul to the Romans... ... 241
Expansion in the S. Pacific (vide "Gates") 453
Facts, and What They Teach Us 226
"Fatal Marble Stone, The" 455
FEDERATION—A Prophetical Necessity? Is 407
„ Lord Brassey on 157
„ or Disintegration 421
„ (South African Dominion and Its Boundaries) ... 261
„ Tasmania 109
Flock of God, The 310
France and Italy 365
French Politics, The Unstable Condition of 165
GATES.—Vide General Articles:—
„ Calliope Dock, Auckland, New Zealand 255
„ Lord Carnarvon on Shutting the 351
„ Delagoa Bay 45, 52
„ Esquimalt or Burrard Inlet? ... 360
„ Indian, The Rev. W. R. Fletcher on the 385
„ Key of the Indian Ocean, The ... 182
„ Palestine 87
„ Quetta (A Correction) 30
„ Russian—The Russian and Bulgarian 21
„ The Enemies' Gate 126
„ Three Fresh in the Pacific 313, 453
General Conflagration, The 474
Germany 461
Germany and the African Slave Trade 473, 477
"Happy Art Thou, O Israel" 280
HEAD AND NOT THE TAIL—
Against the World 181
Agricultural Engineers 27
Barmouth (H. Owen) 219
Cycling 91
English an International Language 48
Great Tongues, The 465
Richest Country in the World, The 465
Shipping 138
Steamers of the World, The 35, 64
Universal Speech, A 374
"Heir of the World, The" 493
How One, Now Passed Away, "Saw It"... 504
"Hurrah! For the Land Shadowing With Wings" 304
"Iceland, and the Power to Get Wealth" 94
Imperial Expansion, &c. (Chamberlain) ... 237
India, Expansion of 50
India, M. Townsend on the Future of ... 357
India's Advance Under Israel's Guidance 74
Indwelling Presence of the Lord With Israel, The 446
"In the Latter Days Ye Shall Understand It" 65
Invasion of England, The 253
Invasion Scare, The 341
Irish Queen, Our 205
Israelitish Origin of the British People ... 397

PAGE

Israel and Her Colonies—Dominant ... 389
"Israel Blossoms and Buds," &c. 97
Israel Careless But Confident 294
ISRAEL'S Carrying Trade 288
„ Defence of India 278
„ Doors, Closing 133, 498
„ Empire Growing by Leaps and Bounds 373, 480
„ Property in West Australia ... 125
„ Redemption 80
„ Righteousness 62
„ Sanctification 73
„ Scare (Delagoa Bay) 52
„ Steamships 64
„ Wealth 234
"It Is the Lord" 391
Italy 461
Jacob the Supplanter 82
Jaffa and Jerusalem Railway 336
Jerusalem "Germanised" 457
Jew First, The (Reply to Dimbleby, Hull) 39, 79, 86
Jews' Home-Coming (Dr. Bonar)... ... 296
Jewish Nation, The (Rev. M. Wolkenberg on) 115
Jewish Quarterly Review on the Ten Tribes 454
Jewish Question, The Dean of Ripon on the 482
Josephus on the Ten Tribes 488
Juggernaut of Modern Europe, The ... 329
Keys of the Tsar's House, The 293
"Kingdom of God" Given To "a Nation" Other Than Israel, The 120
Language Must Follow the Race, The 47, 318, 458
"Leaps and Bounds," A Period of ... 480
London Overcrowded 102
Might and Grandeur of a United Empire, The 215
Military Strength of the Powers, The ... 93
Missionary Conference, The Centennial ... 350
Missions, Foreign 55
Monarchy, The Fifth 438
Mother of Nations, The 109
"My People Love To Have It So" ... 40
Naval Manœuvres and Their Warning ... 91
Naval Weakness, Our 448
New Application of an Old Identity Text 91
New British Protectorate, A 333
Norfolk Chronicle and Norwich Gazette, The 397
Norfolk Chronicle and Our Identity 481, 497, 506
OBJECTIONS, &C.—Vide General Articles:—
Anglo-Israelism (Pastor Soltan, Tasmania) 408
Identity "a Sheer Piece of Romance" (Spurgeon)... 396
Jackson, J. (Besses) 486
Manasseh 57
"Pioneer, The" (Tasmania) ... 396
Reply to a Doubter 169
Spanish Armada, The (The Rev. J. Robertson) 418
Ten Tribes Never Lost, The ... 396
Vicar's Daughter, The ... 181, 248
Wesleyan Minister 322
OPPONENTS.—Vide General Articles:—
An American... 129
Clerical 63
Melbourne Answered by F. J. Annear 254
Stroud Journalist 326
Omnivorous Race, The 123
Our Land and Flag 418
Pan-Anglican Conference, The 356
Papal Decree Regarding the Irish Conspiracy 214

Digitized by Google

PAGE

Pastoral Offices of the Lord Jesus Christ, The 216
Pearl of the Indian Ocean, The 69
People Who Are Never Forsaken, The ... 447
Population of France and of the British Empire, The 487
Power of God Unto Salvation, The ... 207
Preparations for the Coming War Woe ... 77
Professor Smyth, F.R.S. 450
Promises to the Fathers, The 281
Prosperity Returning 302
Psalms ii., lvii., and cxi. 337
Restoration of Israel and Judah 90
Roman Catholicism Coming In Like a Flood 180
Russia 381
Russian Extension South and East ... 117
Russian Suppression of Bible 382
Sabbath Desecrations by Israel's Upper Classes 178
Scott's Commentary 259
Sea Is English Territory, The 221
Security of Great Britain and Ireland ... 155
Ships, Guns, and Men, Our 173
"Shut Thy Doors About Thee" 71
Sikkim 70, 437
Slave Trade, Germany and the African 473, 477
Slave Trade, and How It Is To Be Put Down, African 501

TESTIMONY.—Vide General Articles:—
Berry, The Rev. C. A. 280
Bishop of Exeter 358
By Church Missionary 462
Of Israel and of Judah, that God Is, and Is Faithful and True ... 160
Sheriff of Hull (Allison) 319
South America 51
Testimonial Letter to the Editor 338
"There Is None Other That Fighteth For Us," &c. 233
Toronto News on Our Identity, The ... 314
Trade? Are the Germans Taking Our ... 152
Transvaal and the "Blessings of Abraham," The 301
Transvaal Yields to the Blessing of Abraham 469
Universal Language, The 458
Unprotected Female, The 343
"Utter Isolation" of Britain Among the Nations 41
Valley of Dry Bones 448
Volapuk and English 95
Volume Twelve 5
Weak Link in Our Chain of Evidence, The 466
Wealth, Our 37
We Do Not Know How Great We Are ... 61
What Men Are Thinking and Saying ... 78
What Think Ye of Christ? &c. 174
Which Is the True Church? (Mitchell) ... 211
"Word of the Lord Glorified, The" ... 355
Zambesi, The Frontier That Marches With the 342

General Articles.

A B C of the Scripture Proofs, The (Dr. Alder Smith) 135, 151
Africa, East Central 219
„ Our Aggressive Policy in 464
And so it came to pass that there were no English Swords in the Hands of Israel... 515
An All But Peaceful India... 517

ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATIONS—
Birkenhead 467
Bristol and Clifton 114
Christchurch, Sydenham, New Zealand 487
Manchester and Salford 251
Metropolitan... 186, 210, 222, 387, 435, 517
Newcastle-on-Tyne 463
Thames, New Zealand 475
Anglo-Israel Conversazione, Bath... ... 303
„ „ Clifton 479, 494
„ Delusions 481, 497

ANGLO-ISRAEL FREE DISTRIBUTION FUND, 19, 58. 107, 145, 155, 186, 235, 274, 315, 337, 339, 361, 40, 450, 490
A Warning (Reep) 518

PAGE

Antediluvian Names (Bullock) 315
Anti-Israelism the "Craze," not Anglo-Israelism (J. S. H.) 370
Birds of the Air and Grains of Seed (forwarded by C. E. P.) 403
Bishops on Our Identity, Right Rev. ... 64
British Identity with Israel 110
Ceylon, the Key of the Indian Ocean 182, 202
Chambers' New Encyclopædia 211
Chinese Question, The (R. Bell, N.Z.) ... 440
Christianity in Fiji (G. Wells, jun.) ... 144
Church, The 279, 352, 363
Church and State, The 10
Conference at Manchester 419
„ S'roud 289
Coronation Stone, The 455
Craze of the Day, The (J. S. H.) 370
Druids and Hebraic Levites 465
Edward's Chair, King 455

EGYPT (Vide Articles by the Editor)—
„ "A Blessing in the Midst of the Land" 54
Empire, Parliament, Crown and Language One 110
"Engelland," Schleswig (Dr. Bening) ... 397
England, A New (Canadian Advance) ... 427
English, an International Language (Jones) 48
Enquiries on an Important Subject (Lyon) 513
Federation 489
Founder of Nations, The (Curtis)... ... 53
Further Expansion 516
Grattan Guinness' Views, Mr. and Mrs. ... 398
Head and Not the Tail (Vide Articles by the Editor)
How Ships are Spoken at Sea (forwarded by J. Lawrence) 403
How to Spread the Identity 274
Idolatry (A. Winsor) 378
Idol-worship in the Churches (Rudder) ... 250
India and the Hindoos 256
„ English Rule in 74
Israel's Existence (T. M. Gee) 104
„ Historic Development 112

ISRAEL'S SCRIPTURE AND PRAYER UNION—20, 58, 106, 146, 187, 235, 274, 323, 361, 401, 451, 491
Israelitish Features in the Prayer Book ... 106
Jew First, The 39, 79, 86
Jewish 17th Century Search for Lost Israel in Britain (A. T. F., India) 305
Jubilee Letter to the Queen ...139, 153, 161
Judah in Israel 466
Key of the Indian Ocean, The ... 182, 202
Key to Prophecy, A (Jones) 113

LECTURES, SPEECHES, &C.—
Abrahamic Covenant Confirmed in the British People, The (Billington) ... 459
An Attack on the Strongholds of our Opponents (Cox) ...229, 239, 247, 258, 266
Anglo-Israelism (New Zealand) ... 81
Australasia (Sir H. Parkes) 312
Bible and the British Empire, The (Peel) 42
Brita'n's Destiny (Hindle) 394
British-Israel (Mr. Cormack, Otago, New Zealand)... 33
Divine World-regenerating Force (Douglas) 185
Founder of Nations (Curtis) 53
Israel's Existence as a Great Nation ... 56
Israelitish Origin of the British Nation (Bell, New Zealand) 57
Jews in their Various Habitations, The (Moccata) 466
Joseph's Birthright (Lt.-Gen. Beresford) 166
Lost Race. A (Greig, Montreal)... ... 269
Lost Ten Tribes (Dr. Evans) 91
Restoration of the Jews (Marchant) ... 371
Spanish Armada (Wright) 49
Things which are Beginning to Come to Pass (Rev. H. J. Hatch) 222
Trinity of Evidences, A (Douglas) ... 223
Which is the True Church? (Mitchell)... 211
Who are the Israelites? (Billington) ... 171
Why I Accept Anglo-Israelism (Rev. J. Jones) 228

PAGE

London, the City of Ships 499
Marchant and the Christian Commonwealth 386
Miracle in Stone (Dr. Seiss) 143
Missionary Work in China... 163
Mr. J. T. Crosthwait and the Rev. John Wilkinson 511
"My People doth not Consider" 514
Nations, The Two 330
Niger Districts (Anderson)... 43

OBJECTIONS (Vide Articles by Editor)—
„ A Clergyman's (Jew by birth) 20, 43
Olive Tree, The Good (McVey) 259
Olive Tree Symbol, The (Giles) 27

OPPONENTS (Vide Articles by Editor)—
Christian, Please Reply (Wishart) 185
Origin of the Russian and the British People (Oxonian)... 112
Our Identity in the East 64

POETRY—
Jubilee Ode (Lilwall) 67
"Lost Israel" Found (Crosthwait) ... 347
"Sanctuary, The" (Taylor) 395
Spanish Armada, The (Canon Burbridge) 432

PROGRESS—
Antipodean News... 54
Birkenhead... 491
Clergyman, A 506
Egypt 170
Market Weighton 143
New Zealand 101, 105
North Wales 474
Wolverhampton 80
Promises to the Fathers, The (Streator) ... 472

PYRAMID—
The "Great Step" Era (Mason) ... 264
Rarotonga, in the South Pacific, as a Gate 518
Remains of Thomas à Becket 235
Righteousness Exalteth a Nation 24
Reticence of Friends, The 243
"Scoti" on the Lost Ten Tribes 242
Scott (Commentator) on War 378
„ „ God's Faithfulness 434

SERMONS—
Deut. viii. 11—19 (Rev. F. Lillington, Clapham) 257
Dr. Wild on the "Cui Bono" Question... 46
„ „ Coming of Shiloh ... 121
„ „ French Armada ... 426
„ „ Future Benefit of Anglo-Saxon Faith ... 31
„ „ Growth of Gt. Britain 328, 334
„ „ Return of Israel & Judah 270
Land Shadowing with Wings (Greaves) 304
Siege of Suakin, The... 514
Slave Trade, Germany and the African ... 473
Smyth, Professor P. 337

SOCIETIES—
Church (Colonial and Continental) 231, 345
Promoting Christianity Among Jews, 231, 483
Religious Tract 231
Spanish Armada (Wright) 49
Steamers of the World 64
Ten Tribes of Israel (Omicron) 105
Testimonial Letter to the Editor 338

TESTIMONY—
Admiral Richards on Britain's Position on the Globe 384
By an English Bishop (Victoria) ... 390
Condition of Europe, London Echo ... 193
Honiton, S. Australia (S. Carter) ... 315
Jubilee Letter (New Zealand) 371
Mignot, P. T. (Ch. Eng. Missy., Canada) 367
P. Virgilius Maro (by Editor) 194
Queen's Empire, The (N. Y. World) ... 409
Scotsman on Our Identity, The 145
Spanish Armada, The (Robertson) ... 418
Teutonic Theory, The (S. Sharp) ... 143, 184
Universal Speech, A... 374
Unprotected Female, The 343
When Did the Seed of David Ascend the British Throne? (Rose) 250
Why Do the People Reject the Identity? (G.D.Y.) 343
Wolverhampton Conference 110

Digitized by Google

PAGE

Reviews.

Anglo-Israel Almanack and Diary for 1889 499
Are Foreign Missions doing any Good? ... 67
Christian Globe, The, on the BANNER OF ISRAEL 141
Drunkards of Ephraim (Lamb) 147
Facts and Probabilities Respecting the Identity (Delta) 402
God's Everlasting Faithfulness (Lieut.-Colonel Senior) 370
Israel—Where is She now, and what is her Mission? (Walsh) 275
Motto for Missionaries (Rev. C. J. Machin) 163
"My Jewels" (S. Sharp) 143, 184
"Nobly Won" (B. Puller-Burry) 459
Origin, Progress, and Establishment of the Kingdom of God (Dr. Grant) ... 401, 410
Pyramid and Freemasonry, The Great (Chapman)... 59
Talks for the Times (Dr. Wild) 297
Teutonic Theory, The (S. Sharp) 402
What is our Hope for the Church in Israel? (E. M. Rush) 146

Correspondence.

Abrahamic Covenant, etc. (E. C. B.) ... 459
"All the Year Round" (St. G. Priaulx) ... 131
American Identity Sunday-school Union 379, 427
Bible and English History, The (Hill) ... 291
Blore on Romans ix. 6 362
Britain's Upper House (E. M. Rogers) ... 171
British-Israel (J. Wright) 67
Church, The (D. W.) 331, 363
Colonel Hadfield on our Government ... 75
"Collector" 283, 339
Conversazione (Lieut.-Colonel Senior) ... 435
Cotton, A. on Jeremiah xli. 10 203
Current Events in the Light of Scripture (Crosthwait) 339
Dawley District (Roe) 187, 339
Egyptian Exploration Fund (Crozier) ... 403
Extinction of French Families (Ince) ... 459
"G. G." on Our Identity 362
Hosea iii. 4 43
Impossible that Happens, It is the (Taylor) 362
Israel's Existence (T. M. Gee) 66
"Jashub" on Ezekiel iv. 435
Jaffa and Jerusalem Railway (Crozier) .. 387
" " " " " (A. Ben-Oliel) 403
Knighthood, an Identity (J. R.) 59
Lever's Work at Manchester 195
Marchant's Lectures (Brighton) 251, 283, 475
Meeting of Jewish Rabbis (St. G. Priaulx) 187
National Defence 283
Not Reckoned among the Nations (Grant) 211
Packages Received (Parker) 203
Rawul Pindi (Hill) 131
Restoration of an Ancient Culture in Egypt (Gandy) 203
Revised Version as Bearing on Our Identity (Grant) 75
Rogers on Our Identity (E. M.) 275
Russia and Europe (C. P. Bird) 147
"Senior" on Our Identity 298
Sowing Identity Seed in Rawul Pindi (Hill) 451
Sowing Identity Seed in Wales (Priestly) 371
"Special Appeal" (J. P. B.) 203
Spurgeon and Anglo-Israelism (Bayly) ... 363
" " " " " (Wright)... 467
Stone Kingdom, The (Ruth) 283
"Sunday" and the "Sabbath" (Grant) 251, 299
Tara Hill (Denny) 298
" " (Colonel Forth) 338
Times of the Gentiles (Fyfe) 195
Universal Language, The (J. S. D.) ... 347
Unwarrantable Scare, The (Bayly) ... 299
War v. Peace (Wells, J.) 195

Obituary.

Bayly (Captain Geo.) 484
Emperor of Germany 117, 257
Greig, John, Sunderland 251
Horner, Charles 331, 347
Young, Dr. R. 444

PAGE

Adams, R. N., New Zealand.

British Empire and Contemporary Powers 456, 470, 484, 496, 503

Anderson, J. S.

Niger Districts, The... 43

Bassin, C. M., The Rev. E.

Epistles to the Jews Concerning the Ten Tribes of Israel 377, 406

Blore, W. L.

Israel's Advance 35
Jew and Gentile 507
Spurgeon and Anglo-Israelism 411

Cachemaille, M.A., The Rev. A. J. J.

Great Britain—The Solution of Politics, Sacred and Secular 17

Cavill, W. S.

Who has the Gospel Mission? 26

Cox, V. M.

An Attack on the Strongholds of our Opponents 229, 239, 247, 258, 266
Two Obvious Fallacies 9

Douglas, M.A., The Rev. R.

British Church, etc., The 352
Divine World-Regenerating Force ... 185
First Principles of Prophetic Interpretation 111
Israel's Historic Development 112
Romanism Refuted 114

Gee, T. M., Sydenham.

Opening Address 423

Gott, John T.

Crisis in France, The 176
Ephraim—"A Wild Ass, alone by Himself" 267
Ephraim, the "Silly Dove" 98
Federation Portrayed in the History of Joseph 489
"Israel Shall Blossom and Bud," etc. ... 6
London the City of Ships 499
Queen Victoria's Epiphany Offering, etc. 130
The Cities of the Plain 433

Grant, M.D., Surgeon-General J. M.

Fulfilled Prophecies Regarding Israel 113, 145
Gentile Church, The 279, 363
Not Reckoned Among the Nations ... 211
Old Testament Covenants 111
Revised Version as Bearing on Our Identity 75
Shepherds of Israel, The 170
Sunday and the Sabbath 25
The Jew First... 79
Where is He that is born King of the Jews? 72

Hanan, B.D., The Rev. Denis.

Ammi... 12
Criticism of a Sermon 217
Hebrew Gentiles 392
The Wild Olive Graft Boasts Itself ... 430
They Shall not Hurt nor Destroy in all My Holy Mountain 96
Which Teaching Wrests Scripture? ... 505

Hickson, M.A., The Rev. C. W.

British-Israelism 311
Israel as Jew and Gentile 112
Israelitish Features in the Prayer Book ... 106
Nation and the Company of Nations, The 191
The Prophecy of Isaiah, etc. 18, 23

L. P.

Manasseh 43

Larkins, Lieutenant-Colonel W. H.

Jews and Gentiles 150
"Ye are not My People," etc. 502

Lowe, M.B.A.S., The Rev. T.

Britannia the Daughter of Zion 167
Old Testament Idolatries, etc. 192
The Israel of God—National Use of the Harp 391

Mason, W. H.

Chinese Question, The 387
"Great Step" Era, The 264
The Identity and Spiritual Pride... ... 32
Unveiling of the Nations, The 415

PAGE

Mehl, J. C. H.

B.C. 720 and A. D. 60 383
Protracted Era of Grace, The ... 309, 320
The Dispersion among the Greeks... 158, 167

Onslow, Douglas, A.

Christianity, A Confirmation of the Abrahamic Covenant 112
"You Only have I Known of all the Families of the Earth"... 11

Pearse, E.

British Empire, The Tabernacle of Jehovah 286, 295
Thoughts on Britannia for English Israelites 282

Reep, E.

England's Doom 262, 311
"The Land which the Lord thy God careth For" 192
To our Race Belongs the Future of the World 142

Roberts, R. N., Commander.

Druidical and Hebrew Worship 112
History of the Ancient British People ... 113

Rogers, Mrs. G. A.

Britain in History, etc. 23
British Guide Book for the New Year ... 14

Sharp, S.

Benjamin 209
Company of Nations, The 202

Shaw, H. R.

The Name of God, an Identity ... 15, 22

Smyth, Professor C. P.

Israel versus The Alleged "Solidarity of the Peoples" 8

Taylor, J. G.

A Canaanitish Stratagem 249
A Policy of Wisdom... 30
Doubting the Absurdity 199
Freethought Liketh it Not 375
It is the Impossible that Happens... ... 362
Scientific Moonshine 287
Much Ado about Nothing 366

Thomson, Joseph.

Careless Dwellers in the Isles, The 425, 431
Dying Out Nation, A 462
More Evidence Connecting the Ancient Inhabitants of Ireland with the Phœnicians and Hebrews (continued from Vol. XI.) ... 101, 118, 127, 175, 190, 200, 208
Sabbath Sign, The 455
Some of Israel's Recent Acquisitions 354, 368

Wilmshurst, E.

Hadrech: The Stronghold 128

Texts.

Gen. v. 315
" xvii. 15 ... 109
" xviii. xix.... 433
" xxviii. 3 ... 179
" xxxv. 11 ... 179
" xlviii. 19 ... 179
Exod. xxiii. 16... 319
Levit. xxvi. 42, 44, 45, 259
Deut. viii.11—19 257
" viii. 18 37, 94
" xi. 12 ... 192
" xxxiii. 15, 16 198
" xxxiii. 16... 280
2 Kings xviii 31, 32 445
Psa. xxii., xxiii., xxiv., 393
" lxxxix. 34 446
Prov. xiv. 34 ... 24
Isa. viii. 20 ... 46
" xi. 96
" xviii. 1—7 ... 304
" xix. 24 ... 54
" xxvi. 20, 21... 71
" xxvii. 6 ... 6, 97, 231
Isa. liii., liv., lv. 393
" lix. 19 ... 75
Jer. xxx. 11 ... 217
" xxx. 24 ... 65
" xxxi. 31 ... 66
" xxxi. 34—40 217
" xxxiii. 14 ... 31
Ezek. xi. 16 ... 395
" xxxiv. ... 170
" xxxix. 6... 133
Hosea i., ii. 502, 510
" iii. 4 ...20, 43
" vii. 2 ... 98
" viii. 9 ... 267
Amos iii. 2 ... 11
Matt. ii. 2 ... 72
" xi. 6 ... 359
" xxii. 42 ... 174
" xxiv. 6 ... 77
Luke xxi. 25, 26 327
" xxi. 26 ... 77
John vii. 35 158, 167
" xxi. 7 ... 391
Rom. ix. xi. ... 241
" xi. 17—24 27, 259
Heb. xii. 5 ... 447
1st Peter v. 2—4 310

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."

(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. XII., No. 575. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 4, 1888. [DOUBLE NUMBER, TWOPENCE.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
Volume Twelve	5
Israel shall Blossom and Bud, and Fill the Face of the World with Fruit. By John T. Gott	6
Israel versus the Alleged Solidarity of the Peoples. By C. Piazzi Smyth, F.R.A.S.	8
Two Obvious Fallacies. By V. M. Cox	9
You only have I Known of all the Families of the Earth. By Douglas A. Onslow	11
Ammi. By the Rev. Denis Hanan, B.D.	12
The British Guide Book for the New Year. By Mrs. G. Albert Rogers	14
The Name of God—An Identity. By H. R. Shaw. Part I.	15
Great Britain the Solution of Politics Sacred and Secular. By the Rev. A. J. J. Cachemaille, M.A.	17
The Prophecy of Isaiah—Its Application to the Twelve, the Ten, and the Two Tribes of Israel. By the Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A. Part I.	18
Anglo-Israel Free Distribution Fund	19
Israel's Scripture and Prayer Union	20
An Objection Urged by a Clergyman, a Jew by Birth	20

VOLUME TWELVE.

WITH the present number we commence our Twelfth Volume. Eleven years of this little journal's life are past and gone, and we enter on our twelfth with feelings of thankfulness to the God of Israel that He has spared us so long to labour for Him in this portion of His vineyard, which is the House of Israel (Isa. v. 7). We look back during this somewhat long vista of years, and rejoice to see signs of progress all along the route. The BANNER OF ISRAEL has never flagged once during its existence as a journal, and the new year opens to us with good prospect of a fresh course of usefulness in the career which God has given it, as one of Ephraim's remembrancers or watchmen (Jer. xxxi. 6; Isaiah lxii. 6, 7).

The articles in this our opening number for 1888 tell their own tale. They prove we have a large staff of able and qualified writers who willingly give us their help. Those whose names appear in our present issue, however, are not all the writers who have come to our aid at this time. The papers of those crowded out must, we regret to say, appear in our next. The portrait of our friend, Mr. J. T. Gott, who from the very first issue of the BANNER has been our fast and faithful friend, adorns our frontispiece. Our readers will see with satisfaction the likeness of the fellow-helper who has so long given us the carefully prepared indexes of the BANNER, and who has not failed us even once since he kindly undertook the annual task. To all our friends who have so ably conduced to the success of our weekly periodical we tender our own and our readers' thanks. They have materially lightened our labours, and enabled us with health and vigour preserved to carry on our editorial functions for the good of the cause we so greatly love.

The year 1888 finds us nationally in a position of crisis. The beginning of 1887 we noticed then was a time of anxious suspense. Affairs have not changed for the better to-day. Europe is still armed to the teeth. The forces of the Gentile non-Israelite races are taking sides and awaiting the shock of war. Germany, Austria, and Italy are already ranged in a powerful alliance of defence, and the latter openly avows that she arms and stands linked in arms with others to prevent Russia's advance towards Constantinople. The designs of France are not secret. She desires to recover her lost provinces, and with her arms burnished and well-prepared she bides her time! Meanwhile the peace of Europe seems to hang upon the lives of three men, two of whom have reached the allotted limit of mortal life, and one is stricken with what men fear is a fatal sickness. Humanly speaking, the aged emperor of Germany and Count Von Moltke stand between the nations and forbid the clash of arms. The Crown Prince of Germany, a man of peace, is afflicted with a disease which scarcely gives promise of long life. Prince Bismarck, though not an old man, is yet by no means robust in health. His removal from active political life would render the peace of Europe precarious indeed. These causes are generating "perplexity" among the nations, and lead men to fear and tremble, looking after those things which are coming on "the earth," namely, distress of nations, and the roaring of the prophetic "sea and waves." Meanwhile the empire of Israel is expanding, and that in all directions! Whether we look to India, or South Africa, we find Her Majesty's dominions are increasing in size and population. The great and mighty nation is growing daily greater and mightier than ever.

While the "enemy seems to be coming in like a flood" in church and chapel, and political commotion in Ireland, and the metropolis, too, seems to say that the State also is not exempt from the taint, the Gospel is being propagated by the people of this race among Jews and Gentiles, among all alien nations, and all families and all kindreds of the earth, according to the prophecies respecting Israel. The Lord, we believe, is lifting up a standard against the enemy under which he must fall, as God is true.

We look for much trial, trouble, contest, and perplexity in the time to come in connection with the declaration of Our Identity. But we fear not for these things. Our blessed Lord has led us to expect them, and told us what Israel's attitude should be when confronted with them. "When these things begin to come to pass," He said, "look up, and lift up your heads, because your redemption draweth nigh" (Luke xxi. 28, R.V.). In regard to the progress the Identity is making amongst our people throughout this and Manasseh's empire, there is no doubt the seed is being sown extensively, and the fields will be ready to harvest as soon as the Lord's time for the discovery of His people shall have fully come. The progress is certainly greater than any of us imagine, and the final outburst of the recognition of Israel is only delayed till their King shall at the set time send some event which shall precipitate it, and announce to all the world that "Lost Israel is found." Meanwhile we may set before ourselves the consolation that if men cannot and will not yet acknowledge that the British races are "the remnant of Israel," they lack not to-day one of the signs of their Hebrew origin, but enjoy exclusively at this very moment all the national blessings which God, who cannot lie, sware by Himself to confer upon Israel exclusively. Why men cannot see the probative value of such a chain of evidence as this we cannot clearly comprehend, unless it be that being the Lord's servants they are His "blind people," according to the prophecies in Isa. xlii. 19, and xliii. 8, R.V. In His own good time, and in His own good way, He promises to remove this blindness, and knowing that He has promised it we are content that His will should be done on earth as it is done in Heaven, in respect to this matter too (Isa. xli. 16).

Digitized by Google

With these views, expectations, and comforts, we enter upon our New Year's work. That it may be a Happy New Year for "all Israel," is the hearty desire of their humble servant and fellow-believer who pens these lines. He desires that all his readers may live throughout the coming twelvemonth in the spirit of Psalm cl. R.V., and especially of the last verse:—"Let everything that hath breath praise the Lord; praise ye the Lord!"

"ISRAEL SHALL BLOSSOM AND BUD, AND FILL THE FACE OF THE WORLD WITH FRUIT."

(ISAIAH XXVII. 6.)

BY JOHN T. GOTT.

IN the beginning God planted a garden eastward in Eden, wherein He placed man to dress it and to keep it. It was a garden, sublime in beauty, perfect in irrigation, and evidently intended to fill the whole earth, for we find no mention of limit or boundary to its extent. But the divine intention was frustrated by Adam's fall. New laws and restrictions became necessary; new limits and boundaries were laid down. Ere Adam was driven from Eden, to know its beauty no more—no more to enjoy its labour of rest, or to participate in sweet communion with the Great Creator of the universe, in the cool of the day—there was vouchsafed to the seed of the woman the promise of Restoration.

Here is the beginning of all Bible lessons. With a short but graphic outline of the condition of man in Eden, we are called upon to consider the stages in the divine economy which will bring about the millennium era of a Sabbath-day's rest. Nearly six thousand years have rolled away, and Jehovah has been accomplishing His daily work—the New Creation. As in the beginning, one was driven out, so we find, early in the history of the fallen world, one called—Abram—with a distinctly defined object, that in him and his seed all the families of the earth should be blessed (Gen. xii.). This work of the new creation has progressed so far that all peoples of the earth know that there now exists a great nation, and a company of nations, wielding immense power and influence; a nation whose people are swarming about like fishes in the sea, filling up the desolate heritages; a nation extending its territory in spite of the most strenuous opposition. This is in exact accordance with the promise made to the Father of the Faithful.

Passing on, we come to another day's work in the New Creation. The Psalmist teaches us that the great Husbandman brought a vine out of Egypt, and planted it. The Evangelical prophet enlightens us still more, with a glowing description of His vineyard. It was a very fruitful tree, and He planted it with the choicest vine. A limit was put to the vineyard, for it was fenced all round as a protection against foreign inroads. A watch-tower was set up in the midst, and a wine-press was hewn out of the rocky undersoil of the vineyard. The great Husbandman expended much labour, thought, and care over His vineyard, and naturally looked for some measure of fruit; but, lo! the vine brought forth wild grapes, unwholesome and poisonous.

Need we wonder, then, that He took away the hedge of blessing, and broke down the wall of protection (Isa. v.)? that He allowed the boar of the wood to root it up, and the wild beasts of the field (jackals and foxes) to devour it (Psa. lxxx. 13)? that there should be no digging or pruning to make it healthy, no rain or sunshine to make it grow and flourish? and that it should become an utter waste (ib.)? This would seem to indicate the death of the vine, and that the vineyard of the Lord of Hosts, like the Garden of Eden, would be utterly destroyed. But the great Husbandman will not utterly destroy that which He has unconditionally covenanted to preserve, nor fail to do for the seed of Abram, His friend, that which He promised to do.

Growing in this vineyard are a vine and a stately cedar. Behold! two eagles appear in the heavens! One strips the vine, and carries his plunder away. The other crops off a tender twig from the highest branches of the royal cedar, and plants it. These eagles are divinely-sent couriers. Their sight is keen, their flight rapid, and their work quickly done. The eagle, high in the heavens, visible to the human eye as an indefinable object, can see a hare in a field; it can pounce upon it with the rapidity of a lightning flash, seize its prey, and disappear as quickly. Such is the prophet's description of the divine messengers sent to carry off Israel (the "seed of the land," to be "sown in the earth"), and a tender twig of the royal cedar.

> "The vineyard of the Lord of Hosts is the House of Israel,
> The men of Judah His plant of renown."—(Isa. v.)

Strictly in fulfilment of the above prediction was Ten-Tribed Israel—the vine—carried into captivity, and on exactly the same lines did the House of Judah go into captivity, with the exception of the tender twig "cropped off." Before the Jewish captivity, Jeremiah the prophet, the divinely-appointed courier, he who was sent to "root out, to pull down, and to destroy, and to throw down, to build, and to plant" (i. 10), carried off the tender twig of the royal House of Judah, Princess Tephi, together with the regalia of the land—viz., the Ark of the Covenant, and all that the Holy of Holies contained. All disappeared suddenly and mysteriously. We have now the riddle unfolded. The royal House of David, as a branch of the majestic cedar, is allied with "the seed of the land" (the House of Israel), not known as a vine, but "set as a willow tree" (Ezek. xvii. 5).

When the vine was brought out of Fgypt, the world knew nothing of its silent growth in the wilderness for thirty-eight years out of the forty, and when it was made manifest, fear and dread fell upon all nations. The same natural laws must be observed in Jehovah's New Creation. Israel, the seed of the earth, was sown among the nations. Seed thus sown is buried, and dies—i.e., it disappears from sight for a time, and appears again in a new form, which is not, and cannot be recognised. But as time rolls on and the plant ripens, we find the fruit to be identical with the seed sown. So is it with the House of Israel. "The vine is a tree of very slow growth, and it is long before the blossoms appear" (H. W. Beecher). The prophet Hosea presents the same truth under another form. Prophesying of the House of Israel, he says, "After two days (2,000 years) He will revive us, in the third day He will raise us up, and we shall live in His sight" (vi. 2).

Digitized by Google

Vine-dressers now do not desire the tree to attain a high stature, but train it so that it may spread forth branches, uniformly, in every direction. It often becomes necessary to prop up some of the branches until such times as they become strong enough to support their own weight. The vine planted as a weeping-willow tree was too obscure for passing notice. But it has grown into something very different. The world-Powers of ancient times are Biblically represented as trees, tall and majestic. The world-Power of the future is predicted to be a "tree of low stature," a nation physically incapable of towering over other nations, but one isolated by the silver streak of running waters, situated in the very midst of the land hemisphere, spreading forth branches, and shooting forth twigs in every direction throughout the round world. The vine-dresser seldom finds the tree grow as he wishes it. Adverse circumstances, such as the wind blowing constantly in one part, branches clustering too thickly in one part, render it necessary for him to prune and dig, in order that the rotundity of the tree may be effected; and where little or no fruit was forthcoming he inserts the sharp pruning-knife that "twenty blossoms may appear where before there was but one."

We are taught that the vine represents a nation, viz., the Ten-Tribed House of Israel; and we are called upon, now that the great work of the New Creation is nearly accomplished, to identify this nation. According to worldly laws, many proofs are required to prove the legal ownership of property that has been lost for a long time, and often overwhelming evidence is considered, legally, unsubstantial and unsatisfactory. The judge, who has mastered all the technicalities and intricacies of law, grapples with the evidence before him, and gives a just verdict. Outsiders, who know nothing about law, who form an opinion from newspaper reports, and have no true cognizance of the true bearings of the case, differ from his verdict. So is it with Our Identity! How few know the revelation God has made to man! How few know the many gracious things He has promised to do for His chosen people! And, as a carollary, we may add, How hard it is, under these circumstances, to prove the truth of Our Identity before a people (as a mass) utterly oblivious of the foundation of this great Scriptural truth.

Many learned and worthy men have endeavoured to accomplish this great work, but their labour has had to undergo the same process as the seed sown. It has been lost, hidden, but the fruit of their labours will yet appear. There is only one simple, sure method, within the reach of all; one that may be understood by all, literate or illiterate; and one, therefore, that bears on it the stamp of divinity. It is one laid down by the Master Himself. He had mighty things to prove respecting His divinity and His mission, and people were then as curious and as ignorant of the plain declarations of Scripture truth as they are now. Many then, as now, would like to know how Jacob got to Padan Aram (Gen. xxviii. 2), the route he took, how he lived, where he rested, the people with whom he met, &c., &c. Whenever the Master reviewed the past history of the patriarchs, it was with the object of directing the attention of His hearers to the future, and He reduced all their effervescing demands for proofs by a practical appeal to their daily acts, and directed them to study the "signs of the times" (Matt. xvi. 1—4). Even so is it now. Men, curious and sceptical, demand minute details of the wanderings of lost Israel in the wilderness, details which can never be supplied. But the "signs of the times" can and will demonstrate the truth of Our Identity with the House of Israel.

The British Empire has grown like this vine. Obscure and despised in the beginning, hardly deemed worthy of notice by surrounding nations, it has developed into something the world has never witnessed before. It has not grown to the lofty stature of the old world-Powers; nor does it attain to the martial stateliness of modern Gentile nations, who vie with each other in their reputation for military glory; but its roots are firmly grounded and well nourished. Its branches (colonies) have grown large and strong, and many of them now can do very well without any props of support from the mother country. The bark of the vine is very tough, and this is truly symbolical of the hardy nature of the British people, whose sons and daughters have braved the greatest dangers, and who have proved that, with prudence, they can live in any clime. Many adverse circumstances have compelled the Master to use His sharp pruning-knife very severely, for His people Israel still require training. The Indian and Canadian branches have proved the good results of such severe remedies; and the boughs of Egypt, the Transvaal, Burmah, and others will yet bear much fruit.

Once the Master went out and found men standing idle in the market-place—men ready for work, and willing to do it, and He sent them to work in His vineyard. Now, what could they do? I suppose they would know as much about a vine as the majority of our readers do, which may be safely put down as nil. But let it be observed that the selection was indiscriminate. No qualifications were required! no testimonials of character demanded! Simply, Will you work? Then, Go, work in My vineyard. And what is the work required to be done? Simply digging and weeding. Hard work, and weary to those who desire to see an immediate result of their labours! But the soil is hard as adamant, and must be broken up. He who said "Gather up the fragments" will not pour down the refreshing showers till the soil is ready to receive the blessing. Thus we see another "sign of the times" in the increased demand for lay workers. Again, observe, the diggers have their respective work, humble and lowly, yet work in which they may and do find "pearls of great price." The great Husbandman trims and prunes the vine. None of the labourers are expected to do the Master's work. Therefore it is a fallacy to suppose that any human being, or any number of individuals, can, at will, clip off a twig, or cut down a bough—i.e., it is not in the power of man to disintegrate the Empire.

The tree of low stature has been planted by the Master in good soil, and by running waters. It has brought forth branches, noble and strong. It has blossomed, but the bloom of its beauty has been unheeded by the inhabitants of a busy world. The buds of promised blessing are formed, and still the world does not recognise in them the fruit of coming good. Israel-Britain's great missionary enterprise is despised because results do not speedily manifest themselves. We wait but for the "showers of blessing" (Ezek. xxxiv. 26), and the genial rays of the Sun of Righteousness to unfold to the gaze of an enlightened world "a vineyard of red wine" (Isa. xxvii. 2), pleasant and lovely in the sight of the Master of the vineyard. Israel's "seven times" punishment is ended. The signs of the times are pregnant with meaning. Short and sharp will be the means adopted by the Holy One of Israel to bring about the accomplishment of the "marvellous work" among His blind people (Isa. xxix. 13—17). Then will the unrecognised seed of Abraham (Israel-Britain) be known as His people, and "the glory of all lands" become as the Garden of Eden. While, before, He took away the hedge, broke down the wall, and laid the vineyard waste, now He declares that He will make with His people "an everlasting covenant of peace" (Ezek. xxxvii. 26), and they shall be as though He had not "cast them off."

Before, the vine was not pruned, nor the vineyard digged; now He declares, "Lest any hurt it, I will keep it day and night" (Isa. xxvii. 3). The briars and thorns (Canaanites) which were allowed to spring up in the midst of His people, shall be "thrust away, because they cannot be taken with hands" (2 Sam. xxiii. 6, 7); yea, "they shall be burned with fire" (Isa. xxvii. 4)—i.e., Divine agencies will be put in operation which will effectually eradicate the evil influence of briars and thorns. While, before, He declared that there should be "no rain," now He says, "I will water it every moment" (ib. 3). Nay, more, there shall be "showers of blessing" poured down upon His people, the long promised outpouring of the Holy Spirit. Then shall the "plant of renown" be raised up (the House of Judah), no more to bear the reproach of the heathen. Then shall all nations know the Master of the vineyard, and the people of Israel-Britain begin to understand what aforetime seemed to be foolishness.

Digitized by Google

Ancient nations are prophetically represented as trees, and their doom was predicted. But the "tree of low stature," Israel-Britain, will stand for ever. There is only one vineyard, only one vine, only one Master.

Solomon and the Temple were united. In prophecy we find the vine and the plant of renown together; and in modern days we find the throne of David and the Church of the land combined. Herein there is harmony, though proofs of the royal pedigree sufficient for all may not be conclusive. Nevertheless, we fully believe that where God's people Israel are now there is ruling over them one of the House of David, and there also is His tabernacle with them (Ezek. xxxvii. 27). Fruit indicates maturity and perfection. "I found Israel like grapes in the wilderness" (Hosea ix. 10). The days are at hand when Jehovah "will cause the captivity of Judah and of Israel to return, and will build them as at the first" (Jer. xxxiii. 7). Then will come the time when His people "shall be all righteous; they shall inherit the land for ever: the branch of My planting, the work of My hands, that I may be glorified" (Isa. lx. 21).

But we are fully persuaded that before this can be realised the broken links must be gathered up and welded together, in the strong bands of Federation (Ezek xxxvii. 6). This will be one of the greatest signs of the times, and one of the strongest proofs that the Israel of prophecy is the British nation of modern times, just as Gog of prophecy is modern Russia. In the families of the chosen people there have ever been broken links. Abraham's sacred household (Gen. xviii. 16—19) suffered this when Ishmael was sent away from Isaac (Gen. xxi. 10), but the links were united when "his sons Isaac and Ishmael buried him in the Cave of Machpelah" (xxv. 8). Broken links occurred in the family of Isaac when that fierce and bitter quarrel took place between Esau and Jacob, when Esau hated Jacob, and cherished in his breast the deadly viper of revenge (xxvii. 41); but reconciliation followed, and the links were united, for when Isaac died "his sons Esau and Jacob buried him" (xxxv. 29). Jacob, the prince of God, found the links of his family chain so broken up that, with a wail of despair, he gave utterance to the bitter lament, "Joseph is not, and Simeon is not, and ye will take Benjamin away: all these things are against me" (xlii. 36); yet when his earthly pilgrimage was drawing to an end, he was able to gather together all the links of his family chain that he might tell them what should befal them in the last days (xlix. 1). And if we look at the history of the chosen people as a nation we find the chain violently broken in two, after the death of Solomon, and finally the links in the longer chain broken and lost. But from the beginning Jehovah prescribed the "lot," "cord," or "measuring-line" of His inheritance, which, taken in the widest sense of its prophetic application, means universal empire (Dan. ii. 35, 45).

We therefore regard the Federation of the British Empire as an important sign of the times. It is within the bounds of possibility that, as of old, Israel-Britain will be driven, suddenly, to do it. When Federation has become a fact, it will lead to the conviction that what we have so long laboured to prove is truth. Conviction will lead to candid confession on the part of our erst-while opponents; confession will lead to national humiliation, and humiliation to earnest supplication. For it is written, "I will yet for this be enquired of by the House of Israel to do it for them" (Ezek. xxxvi. 37). "And it shall come to pass that before they call I will answer: and while they are yet speaking I will hear" (Isa. lxv. 24).

ISRAEL, VERSUS THE ALLEGED "SOLIDARITY OF THE PEOPLES."

By C. Piazzi Smyth.

(Astronomer-Royal for Scotland.)

After reading not a few recent publications by various eloquent, and I am told popular, preachers of the upper ranks of the Anglican Church in the present day, and having endeavoured to understand their reasonings in favour of what is now existing, as well as their hopes of what will soon come to be accomplished among, and for, them in this land, I cannot but conclude therefrom something after the following manner.

Here are growing proofs of a most indubitable kind, that a new, able, and ambitious priesthood is pushing the ancient ecclesiastical engine along, with a degree of fervour, a depth of calculation, and an amount of persistence and determination, which its members evidently expect will shortly give back into their hands all the dominating and irresponsible power they once possessed, before St. Augustine, unhappily, landed on these shores, and appropriated for a foreign potentate the licence they, as the Anglican Church, had previously possessed for controlling everything to be acknowledged as religion amongst and for the people. The "supremacy of the Crown," say they, "as Churchmen, we are ready to admit;" but any interference with their affairs by Parliament, they utterly eschew, are preparing to resist, and are already stigmatising i their "Congresses," with the odious and not very apposite name of "a would-be Pope." *

There may be much to be said on their side; and no doubt the existing English Church has many good men in it; is, throughout its ranks, exceedingly well educated; University learning is almost at its highest among them; and many of the sermons published may be held up as examples of sound evangelical teaching, containing Christian truths, remarkably well put, and powerfully enforced. But others of the discourses again show a resurgence of Romish ideas, together with an increasing amount of additions to the faith of old, derived from sources which Rome never knew; and would probably, in the present day, join with all the simpler British churches, chapels, and household congregations of the land, in declaring to be un-Christian, anti-Biblical, and even atheistic.

But how came the learned and wealthy Anglican Ecclesiastics to be dealing with such reprehensible matter, or to be on a slope so like the facilis descensus Averni? The beginning of error was small enough. In their desire to be dominant everywhere in this land, and especially to keep up their hold over the highly educated and excessively rich congregations in their beautiful cathedrals and the Babylonish metropolis—already far gone in the ways of rationalism—they passed the word amongst themselves no longer to dispute, deny, or denounce any free-thinking points with their upholders, but to receive such men as friends, cover them with blandishments, and enclose them softly, before they were aware of it, in the fold of the State-Church; a Church, however, where the State is to pay everything, and have power to interfere with nothing.

Now this course may have its recommendations with some onlookers; for does it not seem so Christian-like to leave off wrangling with sinners, and treat them as lovingly as the best disciples of the faith? Oh! surely. But on the other hand, to palter with the sins concerned, and gloze over their real

* See Scotsman newspaper, October 5 and 6, 1887.

Digitized by Google

character, for the sake and the hope of presenting a broad front of resistance to a reforming Parliament—that is, at least, a spiritual danger to those who undertake the difficult manœuvre in front of the enemy and before God. Indeed, it is too difficult a part for any mere human nature to attempt to play, and has proved so, to even some of the most dexterous casuists of the English Church; so that having begun with merely not condemning the anti-Bible account of the creation of man by the zoological evolutionists, they have fallen into the trap laid for them by a far deeper one than themselves, and have not only come to believe in evolution of natural history species, including man as one, but are applying the principle to minimise the importance of the sacred Scriptures, which they had vowed on ordination to support in all their integrity.

We insist, writes one of these modern ecclesiastics, of great success in the world, on having full freedom for employing anything and everything that the wit of man has anywhere, or in any age found out for itself; whether among the Boodhists of India, or the idolators of Ancient Greece or Rome, or the mysteries of Phœnicia, or the creeds of Mahommetanism, or the volumes of learning poured out by the free-thinkers of modern times, freedom we must have, for employing anything we can find there for improving our own religion! So no wonder, that in the present year, a Lord Bishop, preaching before Parliament in St. Margaret's Church, Westminster, should have there openly declared that the rash, the daring, and the hitherto totally unproved speculation, merely about zoological evolution of species, one from the other, was the most important discovery of the age; while he named, by their individual names, certain four living atheistical writers, and claimed their appearance as among the chief events during the last fifty years, for which the congregation should go down on their knees and thank Almghty God.*

Again, another idea which seems to delight this new order of Churchmen even more extensively, is the phrase which they have picked up from Continental free-thinkers, of "the solidarity of the peoples." Fifty years ago, say they, with boastings of the rapid advance of religious knowledge now-a-days, the words would have had no signification; they were never then heard, for they had not, in truth, been then invented. But now they are in everyone's mouth, and so suggestively set forth the great fact which the Church is now teaching, that amongst men, all evolved, according to undeviating natural laws, from one common, original monad, there is not, and cannot be, any innate religious difference, capacity, or destiny, between one nation and another!

How was it that the roof of the Abbey of Westminster did not rend over that reverend preacher's head, and some other tongue than his remind the startled audience that the Bible is not yet displaced from being the unique book of Divine Revelation to man; and that if anything whatever is taught by it, it is that God did choose one particular nation to be a most peculiar people to Himself, and specially to set forth His glory to all the rest of the inhabitants of the earth.

What can the clergy of the English Church be thinking of in these days? Some twenty-five years ago, when those who are now great dignitaries, and are surrounded, in their cathedrals, with long-robed assistants, semi-Romanesque chorister boys, and resounding organ machines; when those mature ecclesiastics were still young men, fresh from the Universities, how they fleshed their maiden swords in the very vitals of the over-broad "Essays and Reviews" of that day; and most eloquently, as well as truthfully, set forth that the history of the Jewish nation, in its close tallying with the prophecies of Moses regarding them, from the earliest to the latest times, is a most unique experience for a nation, as well as a perpetual miracle before the eyes of all other men, and sufficient of itself to establish the claim of the Bible to be the Word of God.

But that spectacle of the Jews cast off and disowned, scattered and oppressed on every hand, yet not vanishing away, was only half of what God had foretold by His prophets in that same category. For the other half of His communicated word referred to the major portion of the Tribes of Israel; so completely separated from the Judah part after the death of Solomon; pursuing for centuries, when in the land, a different career; lost, after that, in a long Northern captivity and wandering, but fated, "ultimately, to be found under another name, in an appointed place—a place of safety: not only enjoying all the temporal blessings promised to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, but having the high privilege of being then God's chosen instruments to carry Christ's Gospel and the blessings of Christianity to all the nations and peoples of the earth."* And the British people is, glorious to relate, this never really extinguished "All-Israel," yet non-Judah-Levi, nation, appointed of old, by the Lord, to carry out His missionary work to other nations in this, and the coming, latter day.

But the super-eminent scholars of the Anglican Church, who were so utterly blind to such a completion of God's testimony to Himself, when they were actually holding forth, a quarter-of-a-century ago, on the wonderful confirmations of prophecy in the cast-off, yet surviving, condition of the Jews,—must be still further removed now from the divine counsels; when, instead of preparing their congregations to appreciate the second witness, in whom, combined with the first, every word of God is to be established, they are taking up with natural history theories, teach the evolution of man himself from a primeval monad; the equal claim to attention of all religions, and in a word, "the solidarity of the peoples."

Wherefore, as the time for preparation seems now to be short, what other cry can, or should, be raised throughout the millions of this divinely chosen nation, and against the oligarchic and Romish cathedrals thereof, than, "To your tents, i.e., to your private chambers, and the 'churches' ye hold therein, O, Israel! Leave ye the Anglican Ecclesiastics to fight Parliament, if they will, over the loaves and fishes of human establishment; but ye, do ye, oh, people of Israel, prepare yourselves with prayer and diligence to serve your Lord, in purity of conscience and perfect obedience, when He shall, in supernatural power and overwhelming might, appear presently, according to His holy Word."

15, Royal-terrace, Edinburgh, Oct. 7, 1887.

* See "Strictures on an Episcopal Sermon." By B. St. J. B. Joule. Published by John Heywood, Manchester, 1887.

TWO OBVIOUS FALLACIES.

By V. M. Cox.

THE teachings of many of our dogmatic opponents are so hopelessly contradictory, and so glaringly unscriptural, that we are often compelled to wonder how it is that the average church and chapel-going public can swallow them at all, much less with an apparent relish; but we are driven to conclude that utter nonsense, provided it be enunciated by one of the orthodox school, is, in their view, preferable to the most temperate and reasonable expression of opinion by a heterodox and heretical Anglo-Israelite. These reflections were produced by a circumstance that occurred at one of our South-coast watering-places during the month of August in the present year.

There was in the town in question a branch of that excellent institution, the Children's Special Service Mission; and in connection with this, daily Bible-readings were given in the Sunday-school room of an evangelical church in that locality. I attended several of the meetings with pleasure and profit,

* See Joseph Baxendell's letter in BANNER OF ISRAEL, p. 395, for September 28, 1887.

Digitized by Google

but one, which I propose to describe, was (in my personal experience) productive of neither. It was conducted by a clergyman of the Episcopal Church, whose name did not appear. The portion he selected for exposition was Jeremiah xxxi. 30, 31. Of course I was fully prepared to hear about a "spiritual Israel" to whom alone the passage was addressed; and it was therefore gratifying to learn that the literal meaning must not be allowed to suffer eclipse; that the speaker recognised a wide difference between application and interpretation, and that while it was permissible to apply the portion to ourselves, we might only interpret it in reference to those people who were originally addressed by the mouth of the prophet.

I really began to feel quite hopeful. Perhaps this rev. gentleman might be instructed concerning Our Identity! Alas! No! He next proceeded to inform his hearers that the whole chapter (as well as the greater part of the prophetic writings) was the exclusive property of the Jews, and would be made good to them in due time, but not in the present dispensation. The present was a time of Gentile ascendancy and favour. Meanwhile, God's chosen people resembled a train shunted on to an off-line! There (on a siding, as it were) they must remain, in order to allow the Gentile Express to rush along (which it was now doing), but by-and-bye, when the aforesaid locomotive had reached its destination (which, by the way, was not specified) the shunted cars would be permitted to leave the siding, and resume their interrupted journey.

By the time the cleric, who was doubtless a "trained scholar," had reached this point in his discourse, two emotions struggled in my mind for the ascendancy—firstly, a strong inclination to laugh at the absurdity of the illustration; secondly, hearty indignation at this violent "wresting" of Scripture. But the clergyman's idea was not new, only the mode of its presentation. The "Gentile Express" is merely our old friend, the "Gentile Parenthesis," under a new name; and we have proved to demonstration, times out of number, that it is a view which has absolutely no shred of support from Scripture.

For what says God's Word? "Thou hast confirmed to Thyself Thy people Israel, to be a people unto Thee for ever." "Thou, Israel, art My servant. I have chosen thee, and not cast thee away." "I have loved thee with an everlasting love." Which of these passages favours the theory of a "Gentile parenthesis"? "Rejoice, ye Gentiles, with His people";—not, "Rejoice, ye Gentiles by yourselves, while His people groan under the curse till your temporary season of privilege reaches its termination." To be Scriptural, if we are to seek our illustrations from the railway we ought to consider Israel the forward portion of the train, and the Gentiles, coupled therewith, as travelling in the rear. But it is easy to see that the whole fabric of this huge blunder, yclept the Gentile parenthesis, depends upon the omission to distinguish between Israel and Judah. As long as our opponents persist in ignoring this distinction, it is no wonder they get into a perfect labyrinth of confusion in dealing with prophecy. On the contrary, it is surprising that they can make anything at all out of it. The line is very sharply drawn both in the historical and prophetical books of the Old Testament, and to attempt to obliterate it is an obvious fallacy.

Another very popular error is the idea that God has cast Israel away altogether. Strange as it may appear, many persons who hold this view do actually read their Bibles and profess to believe them; but, that the mixing up Israel with Judah, is at the root of this misconception, no less than the former, may be seen from the following letter, which appeared in the British Weekly of August 12th, 1887:—

CHURCH AND STATE.

To the Editor of the "British Weekly."

SIR,—In to-day's paper is the expression, "We dissent from the union of Church and State." Many appear to forget the origin of such a connection. When God formed the Israelites into a nation at Sinai, one of His earliest laws was, "Let them make Me a sanctuary that I may dwell among them" (Exodus xxv. 8). Unless the inspired history of the Jews was intended as a medium to teach the principles by which Theistic nations should be governed, it is difficult to understand why such care should have been divinely taken to preserve a record of their national life.

In a secular aspect the Jewish nation cannot compare with any of the ancient world Powers. For some twenty years of Solomon's reign, they prospered. The rest of their annals is a miserable record of national sin, idolatry, apostasy, and degeneration, interspersed with occasional periods of prosperity and reformation—until at the Roman invasion their national existence disappeared entirely. Their prosperity, according to the sacred history, was proportionate to their regard for the sustentation of their national Church; when this was destroyed, or, in other words, disestablished, their existence as a nation expired. The history of the Jewish nation, which originated with God's commission to Moses, and was governed by Divine laws, becomes, therefore, a revelation of the Divine principle that the connection between Church and State is essential to the permanent well-being and continuous existence of a Theistic nation.

I am, Sir, yours faithfully,

G. V. G.

It is clear from the foregoing that G. V. G. believes the Jews to be the only Israel extant. Moreover, he entertains no expectations of their ultimate restoration, even in a remote future. To be sure St. Paul affirms that "God hath not cast away His people whom He foreknew," but G. V. G. evidently opines that the Apostle made a grave mistake; and it becomes a source of surprise to him why Israel's history should have been preserved at all, unless in order that Gentile Christians, in the present day, should have the opportunity of deriving some instruction from its perusal. Perhaps he even imagines that the "Jews" (whose national existence he believes to date back to the days of Moses) were led through the strange diversity of experiences which are comprised in their various records, for the express benefit of Nineteenth Century Gentiles who may make these Old World chronicles a subject for improving meditation. It would be interesting to know for what purpose G. V. G. supposes the prophetical books have been preserved. Surely he must think, if he thinks at all, that there has been a signal failure in the divine purposes. Never, he says, in their best days, did Israel compare with any of the ancient world-Powers. So that the promise to set Israel on high above the nations of the earth collapses utterly.

In contrast with the splendid promise, "Israel shall blossom and bud, and fill the face of the world with fruit," we have G. V. G.'s sad testimony that "the rest of their annals (subsequent to Solomon's reign) is a miserable record of national sin, idolatry, apostasy, and degeneration." In contrast with the declaration (wholly unconditional) that Israel should be a nation before Jehovah for ever, we have G. V. G.'s assertion that "at the Roman invasion their national existence disappeared entirely." Yet God had solemnly affirmed:—"If heaven above can be measured, and the foundations of the earth searched out beneath, then (but not otherwise) will I cast off the seed of Israel for all that they have done, saith the Lord" (Jer. xxxi. 37).

It is evident half the errors of our opponents arise from their ignorance of the separate destinies of the two Houses, Israel and Judah. For since the Jews are indeed denationalised (as is patent to all the world), then, if they are the whole of Israel, a hundred Scriptures are meaningless, a hundred prophecies have no fulfilment; nay, they never can have any; and in that case, what of God's faithfulness? If He has indeed cast Israel away, it follows that Gentiles are trusting to a broken reed. "If"! did I say? Scorn the impious and God-insulting suggestion. "There hath not failed one word of all His good promise which He promised to the House of Israel" (1 Kings viii. 56).

Digitized by Google

Our Identity is a ray of brilliant sunlight, piercing and dispersing the fogs and mists which have obscured the fair landscape of Ephraim's glorious destiny. By-and-bye, "when the mists have rolled away," how men will wonder at their sometime dulness of perception; and how they will rejoice in the truth which now they contemptuously spurn. The time may be less distant than we deem it. God is working very wonderfully, and leading this blind nation of ours by a way she knows not. Her past has been a marvellous one; her present position is the wonder and envy of all less favoured nations; but both are leading up to an event before the magnitude of which the greatest glories of her past and present must dwindle into comparative insignificance—her manifestation before all the world, as the heir of the Abrahamic birthright, and the very "Israel of God."

Abingdon, Oct. 13th, 1887.

"YOU ONLY HAVE I KNOWN OF ALL THE FAMILIES OF THE EARTH."

By Douglas A. Onslow.

It is perfectly evident that the statement made by the prophet Amos, as the mouthpiece of the Holy Spirit, which I have placed as the title of this article, is not credited by our opponents to-day, nor, for that matter, has it been accepted by the Christian Church for ages past. The words of warning contained in the third chapter of Amos are addressed to the children of Israel "against the whole family" which the Lord "brought up from the land of Egypt, saying, You only have I known of all the families of the earth." These words are addressed, therefore, to the two families of Israel and Judah, and them only has God known of all the families of the earth. This seems a startling announcement, so much so that the world is unwilling to believe it, and has almost always acted as though they did not and would not believe it. And yet upon the truth contained in this passage hinges the whole harmony of the Bible as the unchanging word and unalterable purpose of the Almighty God.

Now what is the purpose the Lord had in view in knowing the children of Israel only to the exclusion of all other families of the earth? We get the answer in Deut. vii. 6, 8, and it is Moses, the servant of God and a type of Christ, who tells them: "For thou art an holy people unto the Lord thy God; the Lord thy God hath chosen thee to be a special people unto Himself, above all people that are upon the face of the earth. The Lord did not set His love upon you, nor choose you, because ye were more than any people, for ye were the fewest of all people, but because the Lord loved you, and because He would keep the oath which He had sworn unto your fathers hath the Lord brought you out," &c. Moses told the people of Israel—that murmuring, sinning, idolatrous, turbulent, and rebellious concourse of Jacob's descendants—that they were an holy people unto the Lord their God. Certainly not holy individually, as we understand and apply the term in the present day, but holy as a nation collectively. The people, or nation of Israel, had been chosen, separated, set apart, and sanctified by God for a particular purpose, which was declared to Abraham when the Lord took him out from his country, from his kindred and from his father's house to be—that he might become, so separated from all others—a great nation, and that in him all the other families of the earth should be blessed. This getting out from his country, his kindred, and his father's house is a type of the after gathering out from all countries and peoples among whom Israel's seed were to be scattered, and separation into a great nation of that people in order that they might become the great nation promised to Abraham. This separation and sanctification of the people for ever (2 Sam. vii. 24) was done because God loved this people, because He loved their fathers, because He had pledged Himself by His unalterable oath to use them for the purpose He had set forth to Abraham.

The text I have selected is very explicit as to Israel being God's sole choice of a people from out of all the families of the earth to be His own peculiar people. Is there anything to be found in His word to indicate, even by implication, if not directly, that God would ever at any time, even temporarily, discard this people of His choice for some other families of the earth to put in their places, and do the work that He had specially designed for Israel? I say, and every Anglo-Israelite will echo my words, that there is not from end to end of the Bible, in either the old or the new testaments, a fragment even of a verse that can be taken to mean that "I, the Lord, change not," is a lie, and therefore "the sons of Jacob are not consumed." If God has changed His purpose, and varied from the oath which He sware to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob, and has, since Christ came in the flesh, substituted aliens to do Israel's work, and to carry out temporarily Israel's specially appointed duties, Amos could not have been inspired when he wrote:—"Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but He revealeth His secret unto His servants the prophets," for everyone of His servants the prophets, under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit, have testified that Israel alone are God's chosen. If the Lord ever had any intention of setting Israel aside, on account of their wickednesses and rebellion, and of giving the Gentile non-Israel families Israel's prescribed work to do, even only for a time, then this secret was nowhere revealed by Him to His servants the prophets during the old testament days. Isaiah, the prophet, thus writes of Israel—not a spiritual substituted Israel such as Father Ignatius talks about, or Grattan Guinness, John Wilkinson, or Doctor Bonar pin their faith upon, but the people who have Abraham for their father, and who were born of Sarah:—"I (the Lord) have created him (Israel) for My glory; I have formed him; yea, I have made him." And in this same chapter the prophet writes, as if anticipating the ideas of these people who would desire to put some others in Israel's place, "Let all nations be gathered together, and let the people be assembled: who among them can declare this, and shew us former things? Let them bring forth their witnesses that they may be justified: or let them hear, and say, It is truth." But the opponents cannot, from Scripture, bring forth their witnesses against the literal Israel to justify their contention for the substituted spiritual Israel, and yet failing to do this, they will not listen to us who support the integrity and harmony of Scripture, and admit that it is truth!

Why do the prophets iterate and reiterate the fact that the Lord of Hosts is the God of Israel? Is it not done to shew that when the Lord told Moses that he was the God of Abraham, of Isaac, and of Jacob, that this was His memorial to all generations, He had no intention of changing His title, and that if He did not intend to change that title neither did He mean to put the people away from Him, except under special circumstances, for a time, and for the purpose of chastisement and chastening, but most assuredly not in order that He might take any other people in their stead! Israel is the foundation of the Church, and not the Church an organisation distinct and apart from Israel. If it be not as I say, but that the Church has during this dispensation taken Israel's place, why does the Lord tell Israel that they are His witnesses, that He has created them for His glory, that they shall show forth His praise, that it is He who has called Israel by His name, for he is the Lord's? For the Lord hath redeemed Jacob, and glorified Himself in Israel. Did not this take place when Jesus Christ came in the flesh to visit and redeem His people? And what other people could He possibly have had when Zacharias, speaking under the influence of the Holy Spirit, prophesied, saying, "Blessed be the Lord God of Israel, for He hath visited and redeemed His people"? And can our opponents tell us that there were at that time any other people who could possibly claim to be God's people, except Israel after the flesh? The so-called spiritual seed had never heard of Jesus, for the very excellent reason that He was not even then born. And can the opponents deny that this coming of the Lord was for the purpose of performing the mercy promised to Israel's fathers, and to remember and put in force the oath which He sware to their father Abraham, in the face of the testimony of Zacharias, who "was filled with the Holy Ghost"? And can they deny that the oath God swore to Abraham was that, He would make of Abraham's seed a great and mighty nation? And if Anglo-Israelism is a craze, and John Wilkinson, Grattan Guinness, Dr. Bonar, The Christian, et hoc genus omne, are all correct who say Israel is still under the curse, or that the Jews are their sole living representatives, will they tell us how God is performing that part of His promise to Abraham—which, according to these men, He seems to have forgotten, instead of, according to Zacharias, remembered?

Digitized by Google

The first promise—the very first promise—that God made Abraham was, "I will make of thee a great nation, and I will bless thee, and make thy name great." I hope my readers will observe this most attentively, for consider the utter absurdity our opponents' contention involves, when they insist that Israel is still cursed, and not blessed. St. Paul tells his converts dwelling at Rome, "Now I say that Jesus Christ was a minister of the circumcision for the truth of God, to confirm the promises made unto the fathers." St. Paul does not tell those he is addressing that only some portion of the promises were to be confirmed, but "for the truth of God" Christ came "to confirm the promises made unto the fathers." All the promises, or God would not be true to that oath He had made with Abraham, when He swore by Himself, for He could swear by no greater.

I will only here touch upon two of the promises, viz., the great nation, and the multitudinous progeny. The fathers were Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. To Abraham, God first promised that he (that is, his descendants) should become "a great nation," and that He would "make his name great" (Gen. xii. 2). The second promise (Gen. xiii. 16), that his seed should be "as the dust of the earth." Again, "as the stars of heaven," and, lastly, "as the sand upon the sea shore."

To Isaac, God promised, "I will perform the oath which I sware unto Abraham thy father," because Abraham had obeyed God's voice; and he also is told that his seed should be "as the stars of heaven" for multitude.

To Jacob, God said, "Be fruitful and multiply; a nation and a company of nations shall be of thee, and kings shall come out of thy loins."

If Christ's mission was to confirm the promises made to the fathers for the truth of God, to perform the mercy promised to them, and to remember His holy covenant, how comes it that instead of mercy having been extended to the fathers' children, there has been wrath meted out to them continually since the time of the Roman Emperor Titus? How is it that they have not been saved from their enemies all these centuries, or from the hands of all that hate them? Where is Abraham's great nation? where are his multitudes? Where Isaac's multitudes? Where Jacob's nation and company of nations? Where his millions like the dust of the earth, the sand of the sea, and the stars of heaven? And where are the kings that were to issue from his loins? All these, and more, appertain to the promises—not which were fulfilled before Christ came, but that He came to perform and to confirm; part of the holy covenant made under God's oath with Abraham? Where are they all? And if the opponents are right, and we in error, will they please show us how the non-performance of these promises prove the "truth of God"? It seems to me that, if the promises made to the fathers have been confirmed, as St. Paul testifies, by the coming of Jesus Christ, and to establish "the truth of God" by the performance of those promises to Isaac's and Jacob's seed, a fulfilment has taken place.

It is, therefore, the absolute duty of Christians to show us the realisation of them, and the promised mercy to the descendants of those fathers. But when we ask them to show us Israel in these days, they either point us to the Jews, or tell us of the Afghans or Nestorians, in none of whom it is possible to show that the promise of the great nation, the multitudes, as the dust of the earth, the stars of heaven, or the sand of the sea, are to be found. Nor do we see in the Jews a nation, and a company of nations, nor do the Afghans or Nestorians fulfil this requirement. We do not see kings among the Jews, nor among the Nestorians; and though the Afghans have a king, he certainly does not claim to be a descendant of David. What a fix, therefore, our opponents are placed in; they must either ignore what Zacharias spoke, "being filled with the Holy Ghost," or, if they admit the truthfulness of his prophecy, they must shew us the accomplishment of the promises made to the fathers in their children, not in a Gentile non-Hebrew or Israelite people, but in one of the families whom the Lord only has known, for they are not receiving accomplishment in the other only family, the Jews. Now, I would commend to our objectors the following words of the writer of the Epistle to the Hebrews—not to Gentiles, remember!—and who, there is but little doubt, was the faithful Paul himself: "For when God made promise to Abraham, because He could swear by no greater, He sware by Himself, saying, Surely blessing I will bless thee, and multiplying I will multiply thee. And so, after he had patiently endured, he obtained the promise. For men verily swear by the greater: and an oath for confirmation is to them an end of all strife. Wherein God, willing more abundantly to show unto the heirs of promise the immutability of His counsel, confirmed it by an oath: that by two immutable things, in which it was impossible for God to lie, we might have a strong consolation who have fled for refuge to lay hold upon the hope set before us."

The heirs of the promise referred to in the above quotation were Hebrews, and not non-Israelite Gentiles; they were the lineal descendants of Isaac and Jacob; and the writer of the Epistle, addressing Hebrews, shows them the "strong consolation" they have as the heirs of the promise made to Abraham, because it was impossible for God to lie, from the fact of His having made the promise and confirmed it by oath, to Abraham's only son Isaac's seed for ever! Under this promise and this oath, not only was it impossible for God to lie, by not fulfilling that promise to the destined seed, but it was, and is, equally impossible for Him, under that oath, to transfer those promises to any other seed than Sarah's, and they are not a spiritual seed. Therefore, "You only have I known of all the families of the earth" must be as true to-day as it was when Amos first gave utterance to those inspired words, under the Holy Spirit's influence.

"AMMI."

By the Rev. Denis Hanan, B.D.

A right judgment in all things is a grace for which we are taught to pray, and which we ought carefully to cultivate. But it is not always that we can so grasp the proportion of faith, as to see the full bearing of the various parts of the great whole of revealed truth; and we do frequently form false estimates of teachings, which dwell more upon any one particular phase of truth, than that which has been taken in by our own minds. A wise, modern writer has said:—"In no controversy is either party so completely in the right as to have nothing to learn from his opponents in the course of the dispute. Ordinarily, the victor has to make some approximation to the views of his adversary. He finds that he has made some over-statements, which must be withdrawn, that defects, or weak places in his own system have been pointed out, which need to be remedied."

The solution of one problem opens up questions which are deeper still. The mountain height which we have laboriously ascended, believing it to be the summit, but reveals to us a higher point beyond. There is no finality in the search after the knowledge of God. His purposes and His gifts are infinite. The faith which enables man to know Him needs to grow, if it stands still we must recede; and although there are individuals who do not seem to advance, yet, "at least, the generation catches sight of the new heights that must be scaled."

Digitized by Google

Our generation has so advanced; scarce an address has been delivered upon the Jubilee of our Queen that has not touched upon the marvellous progress made during the past fifty years. Yet that advance, whether made in the knowledge of things created, or the purposes of the Creator, will be seen to have been misunderstood and opposed by those who, having, as they deemed, ascended to the summit, were not willing to retrace their steps, in order that they might attain to that which lay beyond. The knowledge of the Identity of our race with Ephraim-Israel has been such an advance to many.

The conclusion, drawn from facts which the century has brought forth, is regarded with fear or with scorn; it is "a heresy" to suggest that God's purposes are being gradually developed, and that Israel is being prepared, by the reception of the Abrahamic covenanted blessings, to take her destined part in the age that is beyond; by some it is deemed impossible that there is ought yet to be revealed. There are others who have retraced their steps, to whom a careful study has made it plain, that the light beyond is higher and brighter, and that God's purposes in "His firstborn" have yet to be developed. Yet it is possible, as it seems to me, that these may fail to rightly estimate the advance made in another direction; and they think that the nation's fitness, to do Israel's work, is being hindered by that advance, instead of being helped.

The extremes of two parties—if I may so designate them—stand opposed. The Anglican churchman misjudges the Identity, and very many of those who are persuaded of the Identity misjudge the advancing element in the Church. Words have been spoken and written on both sides, which must be deplored, and I believe that they have been so used because of mutual misunderstanding and suspicion. I am aware that the "low" and the "broad" school, as well as the "high," have said hard things, but I only consider the opposition given by the latter, at this time. Why is it that there seems to be a repugnance to give even a fair consideration to the evidence adduced? I would reply, Dread of schism; the idea that the Identity is opposed to true Catholicity; spiritualising of the prophetic Scriptures; overwhelming ministerial work.

It cannot be too earnestly reiterated, that there is nothing in the historical fact of the Identity which can tend in any way to create or foster the sin of schism; while, on the other hand, there is very much in it which tends to promote a true Catholic spirit. It is impossible to sever God's mercies to the nation from His continued grace to the Church; and when the continuity of the Church of God, as manifested in the fact, that Israel has never been set aside, that the nation to whom the kingdom—forfeited by Judah—has been handed on, was, and is, the covenant people; that Gentile Christianity was grafted in upon the root and fatness of the original stem, and that, to that undivided kingdom and Church has been continued, by the overruling providence of the God of Israel, that union of purity of faith and historical succession of all that is essential to church life; when this is seen to be the necessary deduction from the teaching, we reach a platform which must ultimately produce union, and not division, and which, although incompatible with the overweening assumption of the Roman graft, is in full harmony with the Catholic ideal maintained by the Church of England. The Catholicity of the Church is no more marred by the discovery than it was when Apostles wrote to the tribes of the dispersion, or when the Gentile Churches were reminded that they were but wild grafts, partaking among and with the natural branches; or when the promise, given to Lo-Ammi Israel, was quoted as applicable to the early converts (Rom. ix. 25). Let it be granted, for the sake of illustration, that the Church of England is the Church of Israel, wherein is her Catholicity impaired? She simply takes her place as one of the original unexcised branches, and not as one of the wild olive grafts. Her's are the covenant blessings of both dispensations. In her the Lord has not destroyed but fulfilled the law and the prophets; the special preserving care which has raised up the nation, and given to it the national Abrahamic covenant blessings, has also preserved to the Church that which the wild grafts have been permitted to lack, and this, not because of our worthiness, but because of the covenant faithfulness of God. But if it be said, the promises are to the Church of Christ, and not to the nation of Israel, whether of the earlier or of the later dispersion, we appeal to the letter of Holy Scripture, and maintain that a view, which absolutely harmonises the promises to Israel and to the Church, bears the stamp of truth, which is absent from an exposition which would require us, invariably, to read "Church" while we spell "Israel."

Finally, there are men who are so engrossed in ministering to the want and woe that surrounds them, that they can take no interest even in the daily newspapers; but there are few who do not, more or less, know how the world moves, and the world's onward march, showing daily more clearly that Israel's inheritance is Britain's possession, is, together with an unsophisticated reading of the Holy Scriptures, all that is needed for the study of the most salient points of the Identity.

And now, on the other side, prejudice or ignorance prevents many from rightly estimating the true nature of the life and energy of the national Church. The most advanced churchman errs when he deprecates the reality and the value of the so-called evangelical revival of the early years of the century. The evangelical errs when he undervalues the Anglican revival of the present day. Even had its leaders lived, the Anglican revival would have been impossible in the year 1801, and mistaken leadership could not stay its growth now, or during the past fifty years. Yet the later revival could not have taken place without the earlier. That early movement was the outcome of the Holy Spirit's power working upon a dead and materialistic age. The revival of personal, as distinguished from corporate Christianity, was the only possible means whereby the nation and the Church could have been aroused, and prepared for its work. This revival caused at first, many results which cast suspicion upon it, and are to be deplored; divisions multiplied; ordinances were, in a great measure, ignored; the oneness of the body of Christ was but a theory; the actual rule of the Church from her great Head above—and not from her members below—was not contended for.

Later on, and as a necessary outcome from this revival of personal life, came the sense of corporate life; this work also, at the outset, produced results which cast suspicion upon it. Before it had developed its true power, the ostensible corporate unity of the Church of Rome beguiled unstable souls, while the unsatisfied deeper spiritual need of very many drove them despairingly in the same direction. But this was never the aim of, or the true tendency of the revival; and where it has been reasonably developed, the Anglican and truly Catholic movement is the most certain check to apostasy to Rome; by the self-denying labours of thousands, the sin of the nation is being combated as it never was before. There are no workers more successful than those whose personal religion is intensified by, and in proportion to, their realisation of corporate life, of the living personal reality of the rule of their Lord, and of His gifts bestowed through His body, the Church, in the channels of His appointment.

Thus, as one recognising God's good gifts to Israel, I cannot fall into the error of under-estimating the present revival of church life and work. I look upon the movement as a future ally—although, undoubtedly, not helpful at present—I guard against the interested or uninstructed representations which cause many ardent believers in the Identity to bewail what they conceive to be injurious. The influences of this revival extend far beyond its immediate centres; there are forces at work which ultimately, by the good hand of our God upon us, will tend to undo the evil of either extreme, and promote that oneness of Church and nation, which will enable us to bring forth fully the fruits of the kingdom, and to witness at home and abroad for God the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit, as we have never done hitherto.

Digitized by Google

I have endeavoured to treat this question, as far as possible, in a philosophic spirit, and to avoid the odium theologicum. The acceptors of the historical and Biblical evidence, whereby the Identity of the Anglo-Saxon race with Israel is established, need take no party position; as in the time of our blindness, so now, all things will work together toward the accomplishment of God's purposes, and many things which seem to retard or to thwart, will yet prove themselves to be but the necessary steps towards the slow but steady growth. As the revival of the early part of the century, made possible the church life of the present, so also the corporate life of the church will prepare the way for the national work and witness which Israel has to perform; when, in every place where it was said, "Ye are not My people," there shall come the acknowledgment, "Ye are the sons of the living God."

THE BRITISH GUIDE-BOOK FOR THE NEW YEAR.

By Mrs. G. Albert Rogers.

Author of "The Coronation Stone"; "Britain in History Ancient and Modern; or, Proofs Linking Israel with Britain throughout the Ages;" &c., &c.

"We always know the Inglesi," said a Roman friend as a party of distinguished-looking tourists passed, each holding in his or her hand a well-known red book, or one with the unmistakable cover of "Hare's Walks in Rome," "the Inglesi never go about without their guide-books." And never, it may be added, are our sight-seeing countrymen to be found more seriously bent on acquiring knowledge than in the Eternal City. The conversational trivialities of the dinner table seem forgotten in the presence of the mighty surroundings, awakening memories of the past. "Have you seen the Colosseum yet?" "We have been in the dungeon to-day where St. Paul was imprisoned." "Have you visited the catacombs?" "I was just now in the Palace of the Cæsars, and stood on the stone on which St. Paul must have stood when brought before Nero's judgment-seat," are samples of the questions put and the information volunteered on every side at the daily table d'hôte, and which it is needless to say minister to "the feast of reason and the flow of soul"-awakening interest and kindling enthusiasm even in the most careless traveller. Yes! a visit to Rome is an education.

And who cannot recall the keen sense of disappointment manifested when one who has left the City seated on the Seven Hills is questioned respecting some notable spot of interest which would have been visited, had it only been pointed out and attention directed thereto? "Why did no one remind me of it?" has been asked again and again, and generally responded to by the irritating counter-enquiry, "Why did you not study your guide-book?"

Yes! the guide-book is a sine qua non when travelling in a country which claims to have a history; and those too self-sufficient or too indolent to study it, only discover, when too late, how much they lose.

May we not, as Anglo-Israelites, make an application of these patent facts? A well-known publishing firm, to whom the offer of a work on Our Identity was lately made, rejected it on the ground that Anglo-Israelism was dying out; that a few years ago it had attracted some attention, but that no one ever heard anything of it now! We know them to have been singularly misinformed; but the fact that in such a quarter such an idea could be entertained, points to the need of increased exertion. An authoritative Guide-Book is needed, when we would trace the remnant of God's people Israel. Our Murrays and our Baedekers avail us not, for to the apprehension of those still unenlightened on the subject, Israel is nowhere. No "Handbook to Jerusalem," or Palestine, still less to Britain, will meet our need, but the sure Word of God will be a guide-book to those who seek. In mundane affairs the demand creates the supply, and in this case, too, those who seek shall find.

"But," say some, "the canon of Scripture has been closed for 1,800 years. We need a Guide-Book brought down to the present date. We would trace the House of Israel throughout the Ages." Know you not, is our reply, that the same sure word of prophecy which foretold their punishment, foretold in language equally explicit their restoration?—that Holy Writ, if studied as our Guide-Book, will indicate their prescribed wanderings, and point out their present whereabouts, if indeed His pledged Word has assured their return? Know you not that history is but prophecy fulfilled, and prophecy but history in outline?

A Guide-Book needs a preface, an introduction, or a starting point; and we prize it all the more if it has an index, and a table of contents condensing or summarising the whole. All this has been provided for us in our God-given guide-book; yet how greatly has the fact been overlooked that Israel's Handbook was in our actual possession! We have thirsted—and would that thirst were increased a thousandfold—for its spiritual teaching, while ignoring the primary and literal signification of its prophecies declaring God's mind and purpose in connection with His people Israel.

We claim that the Index to our Guide-Book was written for us in Anno Domini, and like its inspired Author, we too would call for a pen, and transcribe the Benedictus upon our own pages. The purpose of an index is to simplify and direct attention to the guide-book itself, and we would now follow its leadings. To what, then, does it refer?

When was our Index indited? It was the inspired utterance of the prophet Zacharias on the birth of the Herald, telling that the Messiah was at hand. It was written after the appearance of the angel to Mary, and after her faith had seen Jesus as already born, enabling her to "rejoice in God her Saviour." It was after God, "remembering His mercy," had, by sending His Son, "holpen His servant Israel, as He promised to our forefathers, Abraham and his seed for ever." It was the "new song" (Isa. xlii. 10), which God Himself had put in the mouth of the House of Israel, and which should now soon be proclaimed in "the Isles" (ver. 10, 12). It dates from Anno Domini.*

Our present space forbids much reference to our Guide-Book. We must concentrate our attention upon its index. Its opening ascription of praise seems to point to Isa. xlix. 5—9, and we should do well to mark this passage in our Guide-Book. The plan, too, is one which commends itself to tourists as useful for future guidance. What do we here find to be the declared purpose of the Redeemer's advent, whereof Zacharias sang, "To raise up the Tribes of Jacob; to restore the preserved of Israel." The Tribes of Jacob? Judah, then—the lone Tribe—is not here designated. Judah, too, was still in the land, and in no sense was she to be

* The Birth of John the Baptist preceded that of our Lord by six months, but it took place in the same year. Hence the inspired song of Zacharias—the Inauguration Ode of the New Dispensation—was composed Anno Domini.

Digitized by Google

"raised up" nor "restored," nor even "preserved," at the First Advent. Rather did it sound her death knell, since for her sin in rejecting the Messiah, God turned and slew her. Let the long drawn agony of 1800 years convince us that Judah is "the nation" spoken of in verse 7, as abhorring "the Redeemer of Israel," and "despising" His "Holy One." So far from "raising up" those who had crucified the Lord of glory, they were now doomed to see the Romans come and take away both their place and nation. We must look back then to the opening verse of this prophecy (chap. xlix.) to see who are intended.

"Listen, O isles, unto Me!" We do listen, Lord: our ears hast Thou opened. "Hearken, ye people from far." Speak, Lord, for Thy servants are hearkening; let us hear Thy voice, for it is lovely. Again the Lord calls. This time He makes mention of my name (verse 1). "Thou art My servant, O Israel, in whom I WILL be glorified" (verse 3). Enough, Lord, then "shall I be glorious in the eyes of the Lord, and my God shall be my strength" (verse 5). But love, such as His, cannot find vent in a single outpouring of goodness. Though Judah would reject Him, though the Jews would treat Him as "a servant of rulers" (verse 7), though the chief priests and scribes would send Him in cruel hate and mockery from Pontius Pilate to Herod, though the nations would join in the still unpardoned cry, "Crucify Him! crucify Him!" yet "kings should see and arise, princes also shall worship because of the Lord that is faithful, and the Holy One of Israel, and He shall choose thee." Choose whom? Who is the "thee" who is to take the place of honour? Not surely to a Gentile-Christian Church are God's promises to Abraham to be transferred? Nay, faithless ones, believe His guiding Word when He saith, "THOU ART MY SERVANT, O ISRAEL, IN WHOM I WILL BE GLORIFIED."

Did space permit, it were a grateful task to call attention to that portion of Israel's Guide-Book which is contained in Isaiah's songs, and to shew that it is the House of Israel led captive by Assyria (Isaiah lii. 4)—not by Babylon—which, while they were yet captive, Jehovah still called "My people." "THEREFORE My people shall know My Name: THEREFORE they shall know in that day that I am He that doth speak: behold it is I" (verse 6). No marvel that planted in the isles, Israel—under the name of Britain—is in every land publishing salvation, proclaiming peace (verse 7). Can we do other than love Him who first loved us?

"But the question of nationality is unimportant so long as we are Christians," say some. All indeed "are not Israel, who are of Israel," as Ahab and myriads more have found to their cost. Far better to be as Naaman, a Syrian, offering henceforth neither burnt offering nor sacrifice unto other gods but unto the Lord—than of the seed of Jacob, sitting on the throne of Israel, yet "worshipping Baal, and provoking to anger the Lord God of Israel." But when God has set His heart upon restoring lost Israel, when He has placed salvation in Zion, for "Israel His glory," can we, dare we, lightly esteem the status which we know assuredly is ours to claim? Britons, awake to your high calling! Consult your Handbook. Whether remaining in England, or travelling abroad, be ever seen with your Guide-Book in your hand, See for yourselves that the promises made to His Israel restored, are fulfilled in Britain; and what God hath joined together let no man put asunder. "The Bible, and the Bible alone," said Chillingworth, "is the religion of Protestants." Let us show that the Bible, and the Bible alone, has been in Britain throughout the ages, and shall be throughout the coming year, British-Israel's Guide-Book.

THE following articles are in type, but are unavoidably crowded out of the present number:—"The Identity and Spiritual Pride," by Mr. W. H. Mason; "Who Has the Gospel Mission?" by Mr. W. S. Cavill; "A Policy of Wisdom," by Mr. J. G. Taylor; "Righteousness Exalteth a Nation," by A German, etc., etc.

THE NAME OF GOD—AN IDENTITY.

By H. R. SHAW.

PART I.

MANY and various are the names of God to be found in the pages of Holy Scripture, but there is one name above all others specially manifested to the chosen race of Israel, and always set prominently before that race when it needed comfort or deliverance from bondage or troubles of any kind whatever; therefore it must be this name to which we direct our attention in seeking to demonstrate the Identity of the British race or English-speaking peoples with Ten or more of the Tribes of Israel, and our purpose will be accomplished if we show, as we hope to do, that the name and the people are now indelibly associated together to the exclusion of all other nations, some of whom have voluntarily cut themselves off from the possibility of taking the name upon themselves in the way now to be described.

In Exodus vi. 2, 3, we find, when God was about to display His power upon Pharaoh for the deliverance of the children of Israel from their Egyptian bondage, He "spake unto Moses and said, I am the LORD, and I appeared unto Abraham, unto Isaac, and unto Jacob, by the name of God Almighty, but by My name, JEHOVAH, was I not known to them." This declaration appears to have been in confirmation of that originally made in Exodus iii. 14, where Moses, having enquired of God what name he should announce to the children of Israel, as that of the God from whom he professed to come, God answered him: "I AM THAT I AM: and He said, Thou shalt say unto the children of Israel, I AM hath sent me unto you . . . this is My name for ever, and this is My memorial unto all generations;" the words here employed being translated into English instead of being left in the original Hebrew, or taking the customary form of "The Lord," as is invariably done throughout our Bible (except in three or four instances), in order to avoid what has always been thought a needless taking of the name in vain, but having the same significance—viz., the self-existing God. That the Israelites, whilst they continued to be Israel-obedient, attached great importance to, and found great virtue in this name, is evident from the writings of all the prophets and psalmists, which positively teem with references thereto. The ten commandments were the commandments of I AM, and the people were to keep them because it was I AM which had brought them out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage. In Psalm lxxvi. 1, we read: "In Judah is God known; His name is great in Israel:" and David declares (Psalm cxxiv. 8): "Our help is in the name of the Lord." Among the prophets, Zechariah (chap. x. 12), predicting the future glories of Israel, but more particularly of them of Ephraim-Israel, says: "I will strengthem them in the Lord, and they shall walk up and down in His name, saith the Lord." Micah also declares of the time when the Lord will gather together halting Judah as a remnant, and outcast Israel as a strong nation (chap. iv. 5): "We will walk in the name of the Lord our God for ever and ever." Again, in the vision of St. John (Rev. xiv. 1), where the seer beholds the hundred and forty-four thousand out of all the Tribes of Israel, sealed in their foreheads with the name of the Lamb's Father, there can be no doubt as to which Divine Name is sealed upon these Israelites of the future. One of the ten commandments is directed against taking this name in vain or lightly, and we have seen how our translators of the Scriptures take the command very literally, and almost entirely suppress the name for the substituted word, "Lord," which is really a translation of the name, "Baal," and, as such, quite inapplicable as between Israel and her God; indeed, Hosea seems to be predicting this very proceeding on the part of Israel (chap. ii. 14—23), where, in describing the mercies in store for the Ten Tribes when allured into the wilderness by the Lord, he says (verse 16), "And it shall be at that day, saith the Lord, that thou shalt call Me Ishi (my Husband), and shalt call Me no more Baali (my Lord)," meaning, of course, that Israel shall serve her God, and keep His commandments from spontaneous love, rather than slavish fear. But this peculiar method of dealing with the name of Israel's God is no new thing, as is testified by ancient Hebrew writings, where we find it is considered necessary to avoid using, even for purposes of numeration, any combination of letters that expresses the sacred name—thus the ordinary Hebrew expression for the quantity of 15, in this language that knows nothing of the cipher, is 10, 5, but it is never written this way because those characters spell JAH, the abbreviated form of Jehovah, or the everlasting God (Psalm lxviii. 4); and so, to avoid profanation, fifteen is written as 9, 6. When the Lord Jesus claimed this title, as being equal with the Father (John viii. 58), the Jews took up stones to stone Him for the alleged blasphemy.

Digitized by Google

It is well known, although not always sufficiently realised by some professing Christians, that this name, with its attributes of everlasting power, was always claimed by Jesus Christ the Messiah, and for Him, by His apostles; thus, in the introduction to St. John's Revelation (chap. i. 8) we read: "I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the ending, saith the Lord; which is, and which was, and which is to come—the Almighty." Then, at the commencement of the vision (ver. 10, 11), John hears behind him a great voice, as of a trumpet, saying: "I am Alpha and Omega, the first and the last," &c.; this is but an echo, as it were, of the words of the prophet Isaiah (chap. xliv. 6), where, after again passing in review the oft-repeated promise of spiritual regeneration to Jacob, My servant, and Israel whom I have chosen, "thus saith the Lord, the King of Israel, and His Redeemer, the Lord of hosts; I am the first and I am the last; and beside Me there is no God:" also in chap. xli. 4, addressing the islands where the people are to renew their strength, we read: "I, the Lord, the first, and with the last; I am He;" and again, chap. xlviii. 12, "Hearken unto Me, O Jacob, and Israel My called; I am He; I am the first, I also am the last: Mine hand, also, hath laid the foundation of the earth," &c. But John, turning round to look from whence proceeded the trumpet voice, found one like unto the Son of man, in the midst of seven golden candlesticks, who informs him (ver. 17, 18): "Fear not; I am the first and the last: I am He that liveth, and was dead; and behold, I am alive for evermore, amen; I have the keys of hell and of death;" and as the expression is several times repeated after this, during the vision, we may safely conclude that we hereby identify Jesus, the Saviour of the world, with Jehovah, the Redeemer of Israel, both past and future.

But we require now to identify the English-speaking peoples, the chief, although very imperfect propagators of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, with Israel, the nation specially selected for this purpose, and Israel, the specially protected people of Jehovah, walking up and down in His name always. We must, therefore, now turn from the witness of the written Word to a witness in stone, but a witness, nevertheless, not unknown to, and far from disregarded by the ancient writers of Scripture. We have seen that the name was first revealed at a time when God purposed to show His power upon the land of Egypt for the recovery of His chosen Israel from bondage, and it would be quite appropriate were we to find in this land of Egypt a stone record indicating where may be discovered the outcast descendants of this same Israel—lost to the world's ken, but still walking up and down in the name of their Lord Jehovah. At any rate, we have a whole chapter in Isa. xix. devoted to the burden of Egypt, and a heavy burden it is, indeed—utter ruin, desolation, and degradation is purposed against this land by the Lord of hosts. But better times are apparently to follow, as verse 21 says: "The Lord shall be known to Egypt, and the Egyptians shall know the Lord in that day. . . and they shall return even to the Lord, and He shall be entreated of them, and shall heal them." Meanwhile, says verse 19, "In that day there shall be an altar to the Lord in the midst of the land of Egypt, and a pillar at the border thereof to the Lord, and it shall be for a sign and a witness unto the Lord of hosts in the land of Egypt; for they shall cry unto the Lord because of the oppressors, and He shall send them a Saviour, and a great one, and He shall deliver them."

Now without attempting to anticipate precisely how Egypt is to be restored to divine favour—for the day has evidently not yet arrived when she is with Israel and Assyria to become a blessing in the midst of the land, as says ver. 24—we may yet safely affirm that the altar and pillar of witness (which must not be confounded with an altar of sacrifice) is already existing in that land, and has existed there for at least four thousand years, although its witnessing functions have only recently begun to be understood. Readers of past issues of the BANNER, or of the works of Professor Piazzi Smyth and other writers on the subject, are fully aware that the Great Pyramid of Jeezeh, standing on a low hill a few miles to the south of the city of Cairo, answers in every particular to Isaiah's prophetic object. It is the largest, and by far the heaviest structure in the world, and also the oldest one, being the last remaining of the seven so-called wonders of the world of the ancients. It is in the midst of the land of Egypt, and also at its border, because the hill on which it stands is just a few yards south, or outside of the fertile land of Lower Egypt, and yet overlooks the whole of the said sector-shaped land from a point which is virtually the centre of the same. It also enjoys the unique advantage of being in the precise centre from north to south, and from east to west, of all the known and habitable lands of the earth—a very fit place, therefore, for anything claiming to be a universal witness, such as the Lord of hosts should require. The building then, again, has been shown to bear witness, as can none other, to the works of the Lord of the heavens and the earth, as well as to accurate knowledge of such modern scientific problems as squaring the circle and doubling the cube, as could only be known to its ancient builder by direct instruction from God Himself. Its shape is such that its height forms the radius of a circle equal in circumference to the actual measurement of the four sides of its square base, which, if divided by 36,524, the number of days in 100 solar years, gives us a dimension which is practically our British inch, or, more accurately, an inch obtained by dividing the earth's axis of rotation by 500 millions. The diagonal lines joining the corners of its square base cross-wise, sum up a number of these same inches 25,827, equal to the quantity of years in the grand astronomical cycle known as the precession of the equinoxes. The shape of the building at its corners is expressed mathematically as an angle of 10 to 9, which, by another mathematical expression, signifies 1,000 millions; and a thousand million pyramids as high as this one would, if placed on top of each other, just touch the sun, as is practically proved by the recently-published results of the observations taken by the astronomers during the last transit of Venus. All this and more can be learnt from the building's exterior proportions, but much more remarkable are the proportions of the chambers inside and the passages leading thereto, which, besides proving or confirming all the mathematical and astronomical problems, presents us, as far as the two inclined passages at least are concerned, with a floor line of chronology in inches for years, as is proved by the fact that the entrance passage on the northern side descends at such an angle that an observer from inside turning back to look at the sky would see a spot where, according to the known precession of the equinoxes, appeared the pole star of the year 2170 B.C. at the autumnal equinox of that year the believed date of the building's erection, as is further shown by a pair of fine marks, long called an uninterpreted sign, chiselled on the passage walls just 2,170·4 inches from a place where the rather cramped way enters a spacious chamber called the Grand Gallery, assumed to represent the birth of Christ and the duration of the Christian dispensation. Much more of a chronological nature can be read off in these inches of floor lines, but space now forbids further notice of this or of the many sacred symbolisms to be discovered about the building.

Digitized by Google

(To be continued).

GREAT BRITAIN THE SOLUTION OF POLITICS SACRED AND SECULAR.

By the Rev. A. J. J. Cachemaille, M.A.
(Vicar of Oldham).

Within the last ten years three most interesting and valuable books have been given to the world by Mr. and Mrs. H. Grattan Guinness. They are respectively, "The Approaching End of the Age," issued in 1878; "Light for the Last Days," issued in 1886, and "Romanism and the Reformation," issued in 1887. The rapidity with which the first of these books has passed through ten editions, is of itself a most powerful evidence both of its interesting character and also of the value which is felt to attach to the subject it deals with. The other two volumes being, to some extent at least, expansions of the first, are not perhaps likely to be so widely circulated, though the second deserves the attention and the thanks of all students of the historical school of prophecy. Amongst this school the adherents of the Banner take a position of growing prominence—a prominence which the reasonableness and common sense character of their contention has secured, where it has never before been won to anything like the same extent, viz., amongst the plain Bible-reading public of the Anglo-Saxon race all over the world. The plain English Bible has become a living book, in the double sense, that its history as well as its doctrine has been shown to have issued from God, and to be the continuous expression of His dealings with mankind from man's first appearance down to the time of his restoration, when the triumph of Jesus shall have been consummated.

The three books of Mr. Guinness deal with this question, not of Anglo-Israelism, but of historical prophecy; and they deal with it both courageously and intelligently, though they fail to make out a clear and consistent issue for two chief reasons.

Firstly, because he is so absorbed with the idea of the Roman Power in its Papal development, that he entirely fails to use the fact, which he nevertheless states, viz., that a Fifth Empire was to spring up out of the first four, and chiefly, of course, out of the fourth, which was to fill up the remainder of history, and to stand for ever and ever.

Secondly, because he commits the really unpardonable error of so confounding and confusing the history of the House of Israel and the House of Judah, that he is compelled to contradict himself frequently to make the argument seem to fit.

It, therefore, amounts to this, stated in the fewest words, that these three books are so attractive and so nearly accurate, that they only need the light of Anglo-Israel truth to unravel the otherwise tangled argument, and also to set at rest the anxiety of both writer and reader with regard to the Papal power, or, better still, with regard to the seat of the power which is to be paramount in the world in the near and ultimate future.

In "Light for the Last Days" we are told repeatedly that the fourth Empire is dead and gone. It is hardly necessary to state that Gibbon, years ago, wrote the history of the Decline and Fall of Imperial Rome; yet it is needful to recall even ancient facts now and then. Mr. Guinness is evidently most honest in stating facts which unfortunately hit his view very hard, and take all the point out of his argument. For instance at chap. ix., p. 233, he says: "The year A.D. 476, was the date of the fall of Romulus Augustulus, the last of the long line of the Cæsars, the last of the Western Roman Emperors. His fall marks the end of the four great pagan empires of antiquity." (The italics are his). He says at p. 236: "If A.D. 476 was the terminus of the old world—the Roman Empire—it was, as we have seen, equally the starting point of the new." Mr. Guinness is too absorbed by the rise of the Papal power at this date, to give due attention to the fact (exhibited in the chart of the world's history, from the German of Strauss, which he gives at p. 440), that it is exactly at this same date that Britain arises, a fact of significance greater even than that of papal Roman pontifical power, which attains its influence only about A.D. 750. It is impossible to multiply quotations in a short paper—still it is well to remark that at p. 246, we read: "This year (1860) was also a decidedly critical one, as we have seen, in Italy—the great year of Garibaldi, the Liberator, in which Italy was reconstituted as a kingdom under Victor Emmanuel." Clearly old pagan Rome, the fourth empire, is gone, and even the name has gone, for it is now the Italian kingdom over which Victor Emmanuel reigns. But the terrible spectre of papal Rome has arisen and fills all the field, so that Mr. Guinness is absorbed by the idea of the "little horn" of the Roman beast, which drags up the Roman power all through these long centuries up to the present day, and grows us a monster which is destined to do such mischief as might be done supposing God had not made other provision all through the centuries for meeting and overwhelming this power, and for preserving "the kingdom and dominion and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven." A dominion so great, and lodged in so carefully described hands, that we wonder it has not risen before the faith and before the palpable sense of such an earnest and devout student of the Bible as Mr. Guinness—for this kingdom is to be "given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey Him" (Dan. vii. 27).

Before going further we had better let Mr. Guinness himself lay the ghost he has raised with which to disquiet his soul. He writes, p. 275: "The king forewarned the Pope of his intention to occupy Rome on September 8th, and did so in the following month. Rome decided, by an overwhelming vote, for union with Italy, and was, with the surrounding territories, incorporated with the Italian kingdom in October, 1870. This was the full and final fall of the temporal power of the papacy." P. 264: "The year 1878 was also that of the death of Pius IX., the last Pope wielding temporal power." It is therefore clear that Mr. Guinness has killed the ghost which keeps him from seeing concrete facts elsewhere, though, unhappily, the remembrance of the ghost leaves him unable to derive comfort from its death. For although the spiritual dominion of the Roman pontiff did not die with his temporal power, this need not cause us anxiety, because Mr. Guinness has himself declared that the power and the kingdom which was to succeed the fourth pagan power, a power dead and gone, was to be no mere spiritual kingdom, nor even such a compromise as "a Church," but, speaking of this kingdom of the people of the saints of the Most High which follows the fourth, he says, p. 510:" To make it a spiritual kingdom is to miss its character altogether. For first, as we must again recall, this kingdom is one of a series of earthly monarchies, standing fifth after four preceding ones. This shows that in the main it must resemble them in its nature, although having many points of total contrast." P. 512:" The stone which destroyed the image of Gentile power takes its place, succeeds it, becomes a mountain, and fills the whole earth. This clearly symbolises a visible, outward, earthly kingdom . . . It is not a universal Church, but a universal kingdom."

From what has been advanced thus far it is evident, that, as a kingdom and not a Church is to be sought for, and as a visible and imperial, not a spiritual power, is to be found—we must discover some power which corresponds to such a description, arising at the proper date and fulfilling the conditions of its growth and permanence. Is this possible? Let us see.

The reason that Mr. Guinness has not found it, and equally the reason why a great many others do not find it is, that they gratuitously and hopelessly confound the distinction which the Word of God maintains between the House of Israel and the House of Judah. I say gratuitously, because Mr. Guinness is only a representative man in the most astonishing practice of laying down a fact and then consistently neglecting and contradicting this fact. For instance, we find Mr. Guinness stating at p. 30 ("Light for the Last Days"): "The restoration for which Daniel prayed came, but it proved to be only partial, the Ten Tribes not having been restored at all. It proved also to be only temporary . . . even while it lasted it was not a restoration to complete national independence; for during its entire course Jerusalem was tributary to one Gentile Power or another, and was, as we know, actually under Roman domination at the Advent of Christ." It is clear that Mr. Guinness recognises the fact that there are Ten Tribes distinguished from Two Tribes in their history. He quotes at p. 65, the promise of the throne to Judah and David as a continuous and permanent fact; though he has just shown them that it ceased apparently at the captivity, B.C. 588. He tells us at p. 89, that "accuracy requires that a distinction be made between Israel and Judah." That distinction goes to prove that the dispersion of Israel has ceased, and Israel ought, in consequence, to be in some condition of restoration, whereas the dispersion of Judah still continues. He quotes, p. 527, the promise that God will gather the "outcasts of Israel and the dispersed of Judah," and yet with this knowledge that there are Two Houses, into which the Twelve Tribes are very clearly divided, and to each of which a distinct history attaches, he argues all the way through as if there were none but the Jews. This brings hopeless confusion into the narrative, and actually blinds one to the existence of a grand history the facts of which are not only the greatest, but the most unique the world has ever had before its palpable sense.

Digitized by Google

It has been shown that the temporal estate of the Roman Empire, both in its heathen and its papal forms is dead. There must, therefore, be in existence at this present some Power which shall satisfy the conditions of Daniel's prophecy in his second chapter, and which must fulfil the conditions which Mr. Guinness has stated, but fails to be able to use or establish, because he has neglected Israel of the Ten Tribes, and has created a phantom out of the papal power which threatens to overwhelm us.

It is stated in Daniel ii. 44, that God "in the days of these four great kingdoms, shall set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed." The material channels of that kingdom were in existence all through that time in the people of Israel of both Houses. But the kingdom was not "set up" until the Incarnation of Jesus Christ, when, in accordance with the promise of the angel Gabriel to the Virgin Mary (see Luke i. 30—34), that kingdom was undoubtedly set up. It was to be, most clearly, a Christian kingdom, for it was built out of Christ, and it was to be one and perpetual. The mission of Jesus Christ was from this date stated to have reference to "the House of Jacob," and in His own words to "the lost sheep of the House of Israel." From this time, then, we are justified in looking for the emergence, the gradual growth and expansion of some Christian Power which shall fulfil the conditions of the prediction and promise, a Power which shall not be a Church or spiritual body only, but an imperial earthly power of the same character as the four preceding ones, though in many points differing widely from them.

Of Israel, repentant and obedient—of Israel under the redemption effected after the Birth of Christ, and by means of His Cross and Passion, it was declared that she should become especially multitudinous (Gen. xlviii.); wealthy in money and trade (Deut. xxviii. 1—14; xxxiii. 13, seq.); a colonising nation (Deut. xxxiii. 17; Isa. xlix. 18—24; liv. 1—4; Hosea i.); a missionary nation (Isa. xlix. 3—6); leading back the Jews (Isa. xviii. 7; lxvi. 19—20; Jer. iii. 18; Zeph. iii. 10); possesing the Gates of her enemies (Gen. xxii. 17; xxiv. 60); an Empire (Gen. xvii., et passim, Dan. ii.; vii.); ruled over by David's line (Psa. lxxxix., et passim); a Christian nation (Hosea i. 10, 11; ii. 14, seq.; Isa. liv.; xlix.; Micah iv. 7; Matt. i. 21; Luke i. 68; ii. 10, 25). The new or Christian covenant must be made with the same people as the old covenant (Jer. xxxi. 31), with the Sabbath as a special sign (Exod. xxxi. 13; xxxv. 3); and with many other marks and characteristics by which she should be known and recognised. And this repentant, restored, blessed Israel was to be the successor of the four Empires and the permanent kingdom of the world. Whatever assault was made against her, and there would be many, was to fail—whilst her beneficent rule was steadily to win the allegiance and the service of every other portion of the world (Dan. vii. 27). Such a kingdom, if only it could be in existence, would be both the solution and the hope of all politics sacred and secular. It would win the confidence of other nations because they would discern presently that the reason of her prominence and prosperity was owing to the fact that she was "the seed which the Lord hath blessed" (Isa. lxi. 9); they could therefore trust her to be kept from abusing her vast powers for selfish purposes, and to extend them for the benefit of all who came under her influence, protection, and sceptre. Such a nation, and people, and kingdom are before our face this day—not in their fully developed condition, nor yet so purged from their old sins that they can be described as a holy nation in its widest sense. But still a nation fulfilling all the required marks and characteristics; a nation of whose expansion such books as "Oceana," by J. A. Froude, and "The Expansion of England," by Professor Seeley, give two most interesting accounts from different points of view; a nation whose federation just being rendered into fact, tells us that the future of her empire will vastly eclipse her remarkable past and her noble present, and will, by her very greatness, and the justice of her administration, secure to the world the blessings of peace, under which she will be able to spread the knowledge of God as the secret of her power, and as the source of every blessing, temporal and spiritual, which man, as an individual, a society, or a race, enjoys (Gen. xxii. 18).

Nov. 1887.

THE PROPHECY OF ISAIAH—ITS APPLICATION TO THE TWELVE, THE TEN, AND THE TWO TRIBES OF ISRAEL.

By the Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A.
(Vicar of St. Bartholomew, Bristol.)

PART I.

In his "Anglo-Israel Postbag," Letter xxvii., the lamented author says:—

"You may very likely expect me to comment upon some of Isaiah's wonderful proclamations of Israel's future restoration. If so, I shall disappoint you; for though many advocates of this theory quote unsparingly from the latter part of Isaiah's prophecy, I find, on a critical examination of their writings, that they often spoil their cause by working out doubtful texts. I mean to say that on the ground of Israel being named in certain passages, they take it for granted the Ten Tribes were meant; whereas the whole Hebrew family was frequently designated by that title, and the covenant promises contained in such passages were no more intended for the Ten Tribes than for the other two, but were given to the nation as a whole. At all events the handling of such doubtful passages raises such a host of side issues, that I prefer taking up only such texts as are unequivocally referable to the subject in hand."

There can be no doubt that the prophecies of Isaiah need careful handling by those who appeal to them in support of British-Israel views, and that there is a danger of quoting texts which are not applicable to the matter in hand: but at the same time I am not altogether disposed to admit that the usage of the prophet is quite so hazy as the above extract seems to imply.

Digitized by Google

The earlier prophecies appear to contain little that has to do with Ten-Tribed Israel distinctively. The first five chapters seem to be addressed entirely to the Jews, the House of Judah, the House of Jacob; and, beyond perhaps one passing allusion (v. 7), to have nothing to do with the House of Israel. Chap. vi. describes Isaiah's personal call and commission. Chapters vii. to xii. seem to be one continuous prophecy, called forth by the alliance between Ephraim and Syria (vii. 1) against Judah. It may be considered as intended specially for Judah and Jerusalem, while it contains several references, as might be expected from its occasion, to Ephraim. The failure of the allied attack is predicted (vii. 4—7) and the cessation of Ephraim from being a people is foretold as to happen in 65 years, i.e., about B.C. 677. 2 Kings xvii. 24 shows the fulfilment of this prophecy. In viii. 4, too, Samaria's spoiling is announced to happen before Mahershalalhashbaz should "have knowledge to cry, My father, and my mother." Ephraim are spoken of (viii. 6) as refusing the waters of Shiloah, and therefore to be overflown by Assyria, who, it is said, shall also sweep onward into Judah. Ephraim is the subject of the paragraphs in chap. ix. 8—21, and so also probably of x. 1—4. In x. 5—11, Judah is threatened with the king of Assyria, and verses 12—19 predict Assyria's own destruction. This is followed by a passage whose primary reference seems to be to the return of the Jews from Babylon, and which is spiritually applied by St. Paul in Rom. ix. 27, 28, to the small elect remnant of believing Jews in Christian times (verses 20—23). Chap. xi. 1, 2, predicts Messiah's first advent, and verses 3 to 9 His millennial reign on earth, with which is connected, as to happen "in that day," the second and final return of the whole Hebrew nation, Israel and Judah, to their own land (verses 11—16); and the prophecy concludes with a song of praise (xii.) to be sung by all Israel on that day. Chapters xiii. to xxiii. contains prophecies relating to Babylon, Moab, Damascus, Judah, Egypt, Babylon, Edom, Arabia, Jerusalem, and Tyre. I think xiv. 1, 2, has exclusive reference to the return of the Jews from Babylon, coming as it does in the middle of predictions of the fall of that power. The ultimate reference of chap. xviii. is the bringing back of Judah (ver. 7) to their own land by a mighty maritime people belonging evidently (compare verses 2 and 7) to the same race, i.e. by Israel, which we believe to be Great Britain. The "Israel" of xix. 24 seems to mean the whole restored nation of the Twelve Tribes. Chap. xxiv. describes the utter desolation of Palestine (verse 5), and goes on (13—15) to describe another branch of the same people as glorifying God in the Isles of the sea (or of the West). This cannot be the unconverted Jews, and must therefore refer to Christianized Israel-Ephraim, Great Britain. From xxiv. 21 to xxvii. 13 seems to refer to the millennial reign of Christ, and the restoration of Israel in that day. Chap. xxviii. 1—6 is a denunciation of Ephraim for his drunkenness: and the rest of the chapter a rebuke of the scorning rulers of Jerusalem. Chapters xxix. to xxxiii. seem to be entirely concerned with Jerusalem, predicting its destruction, exhorting its inhabitants, and foretelling its future glory under the reign of Messiah. The execution of judgments on Edom by Messiah, at His second advent, is described in xxxiv., and the ultimate happy state of all Israel in their own land in xxxv.

Chapters xxxvi. to xxxix. are a historical appendix to the first part of Isaiah's prophecies, relating chiefly to Sennacherib's invasion and the slaughter of his host, to Hezekiah's sickness and his miraculous recovery, and to the friendly intercourse between him and the king of Babylon.

The first nine chapters of the later prophecies (xl. to xlviii.) appear to me unquestionably to be addressed to Jerusalem and the House of Judah, and to have almost exclusive reference throughout to them; their captivity in Babylon, and their emancipation by Cyrus. A typical reference, of course, to more remote events, must be admitted (e.g., chap. xl. 3—11, referring to John the Baptist's ministry and the first advent of Christ) but the primary and more immediate reference is as I have stated, and where there is a reference to more remote events, it would be only as regards the Jews or House of Judah. Cyrus is undoubtedly referred to in xli. 2, 25; xlii. 1; xlv. 1—5, 13; xlvi. 11. Yet no doubt xlii. 1—9 has typical reference to Messiah, and verses 10 to 17 to the ultimate restoration of Israel and Judah in the last days. Chapter xlvii. is addressed to Babylon: and the end of chapter xlviii. clearly refers to the return of Judah from Babylon. The whole ends with a word of caution to the impenitent: "There is no peace, saith the Lord, to the wicked."

(To be continued).

ANGLO-ISRAEL FREE DISTRIBUTION FUND.

FORTY-NINTH MONTHLY REPORT.

THE following donations and subscriptions, from Nov. 17th to Dec. 16th, are very gratefully acknowledged:—

By the Treasurer: J. L., Manchester (per Philo-Israel), 2s.; Miss H., Ealing, 2s.; the Misses F., Margate, 2s. 6d.; "Marine Engineer" (per Miss E. M. Rush), £1; Mrs. P., Hastings, 10s.; W. H., New Hampton, 2s. 6d.; Mrs. N., Canonbury, 2s. 6d.; Miss O., Pershore, 2s. 6d.; G. J., Hamilton (per Miss E. M. Rush), 2s. 6d.; Anonymous, Darlington, 5s.

By Mr. C. Horner: Mrs. T., Bath, 5s.; Mrs. M., Ramsgate, 2s.; "Anon," 5s.; G. W., Barnsley, 2s.; Mrs. C., Tenby (monthly subscription 2s. 6d., and 6d.), 3s.; J. W., Bangalore, 7s. 6d.

Total, £3 16s. 0d. J. LAWRENCE, Hon. Treasurer.

In consequence of the limited receipts during the month, we are sorry to say that a great many Sowers have been obliged to go unsupplied with literature, while we have also been compelled to diminish the BANNER distribution to ninety-six copies weekly. We trust our friends will endeavour to do all in their power to assist the Fund, not only to enable us effectively to maintain the distribution in our already well-established centres, but to follow up new channels of operation, which are now, more than ever, demanding our attention.

We have to acknowledge, with thanks, the receipt of 375 BANNERS from an anonymous donor.

LITERATURE DISTRIBUTION.—Eighteen packets of pamphlets and leaflets have been forwarded to Upper Teddington (2), Ramsgate, Manchester, Tenby, Richmond (2), Wandsworth, Barrow, Dundee, New Southgate, Tunbridge Wells, Clapham, Lee, Norwich, Malta, Springfield, U. S. A., Tasmania, Auckland, New Zealand.

BANNER DISTRIBUTION.—Ninety-six BANNERS are forwarded weekly to the following places: Lee, Shetland, Ponsanooth, Devonport, Silver Town, Catford, Commercial-road, Southwold, Walton-on-Naze, Cockburnspath, Carlisle, Aldershot, Dover, Dublin, Edinburgh, Glasgow, Westminster, Sheffield, Hamilton, Hound, Cowbridge, Farnworth, Upper Teddington, Birkenhead, Maesteg, Minehead. To the following Libraries and Institutions: Barrow-in-Furness, Wandsworth, Manchester, Crewe, Wimbledon. To the Colonies, India, and other countries: Jaffa, Cleveland, Ohio; Port Nolloth (S. Africa); Toronto (Canada); New South Wales; Peshawur, Secunderabad, Trimulgherry, Poona, Bangalore, Ambala, Nellore (India); Hong-Kong; Rangoon (Burmah); Barbadoes, Malta.

DISTRIBUTION TO FREE PUBLIC LIBRARIES.—Small parcels of literature, comprising Dr. Smith's "Ten Tribes;" "Israel in Britain," by C M., "A Lecture on the Great Pyramid," by Rev. S. Minton-Senhouse, etc., have been despatched to these Institutions at Brighton, Bristol, Cambridge, Cardiff, Cheltenham, Chester, Crewe, Coventry, Derby, Exeter, Ealing, Dundee, Hereford, Handsworth, Doncaster, and Glasgow. We have received the Annual Report of the Wandsworth Library, where the BANNER appears in the list of periodicals, and which is weekly by the Free Distribution Fund.

DISTRIBUTION TO THE UNITED STATES.—The ap literature from Manasseh forms a decided epoch an the operations of the Free Distribution Fund. That is beginning to spread there is of remarkable interest, and will rejoice the hearts of our readers everywhere. A communication has come to hand from the influential society entitled the AMERICAN SUNDAY SCHOOL UNION, wherein one of its superintendents, of the Springfield, Missouri, branch, states that, "much good could be done here by a wise, judicious distribution of Identity literature. I find quite an interest here on the Identity question, and am not able to furnish the necessary literature." He wishes to distribute gratuitously among ministers. Here, therefore, is a grand opening for the useful action of the Fund. The uprising of an interest in the United States may ultimately react on Britain, causing a great impetus to the movement among all classes. Any donations from friends for this special object will be gratefully received.

Digitized by Google

Of correspondence, we have the following from one of our Sheffield staff of Sowers:—

"You desired a few lines from me, as a Sower of the good news of Our Identity. I may say since I last wrote the work has been going on slowly, but surely. One of my newly made converts has had the courage to stand by his convictions in one of our meetings at the church. He also takes every opportunity to spread the truth by lending his BANNERS, and explaining the truth to his fellow-workmen and friends; and this is not all, for he has become a member of the Sheffield Association, thus helping the cause materially by his subscription. Another man, who works with me at the shop, has become a subscriber, and takes the BANNER every week. Others, too, are taking a great interest in the subject through the literature you kindly sent me. An elderly lady seems deeply interested, and when returning the books thankfully acknowledged the great benefit she had received from their perusal, and says there is no doubt about it, that we really are God's long-lost Israel. All this has considerable weight, when we consider that she is not an ignorant but well-educated person, and who attends a women's class, where she will no doubt express her newly-adopted views. I must now conclude a rather lengthy letter by heartily thanking all those ladies and gentlemen who spend their money in such a cause by sending us literature from time to time, which has resulted in giving happiness to many doubting minds—praise the Lord!—and saving others from falling into the pit of infidelity, and scattering their unbelief to the winds. 'Verily they shall have their reward.'"

We have no space left for further detailed contributions this month, but one and all speak of good sound progress being made. We wish all those kind friends who have helped us with their money, and those who have likewise helped us with willing hands in the work of distribution, both near and afar, a Happy New Year; and may God bless us all abundantly, for Christ's sake!

CHARLES HORNER, Secretary.

Contributions to the Fund will be thankfully received and acknowledged by the Hon. Treasurer, Miss J. Lawrence, Rosslyn, Hampton-road, Upper Teddington, Middlesex; or by Mr. Chas. Horner, 34, Sheen-park, Richmond-on-Thames. Cheques may be crossed, "London and Provincial Bank, Teddington Branch." Grants of literature will be made, as far as funds allow, on application to the Secretary.

ISRAEL'S SCRIPTURE AND PRAYER UNION.

DURING the past month four cards of membership have been issued. The total number now is 1,440.

New members are requested, when writing for cards, to kindly state whether their names are to be entered as Mr., Mrs., or Miss, etc.

The donation of 1s., from Mrs. S., Manchester, is thankfully acknowledged.

A new member writes to say he "is most thankful that the subject of the Identity has been brought under his notice by a reader of the BANNER. The startling facts brought to light are astonishing, enhancing the value of the Scriptures a hundredfold, and opening up a vast mine of riches, and also throwing light on numberless passages which before were read year after year without any intelligent understanding."

The prayers of the Union are desired for all workers, great and small, in the New Year, that they may have imparted to them the needful wisdom, courage, and strength to proclaim, to the glory of God, the glad tidings that Israel is found!

For the convenience of those members who wish to continue the daily reading, the following list of chapters for January is printed:—

1st ...	Ezekiel	vi.	12th ...	Ezekiel	xvii.	23rd ...	Ezekiel	xxviii.
2nd...	,,	vii.	13th ...	,,	xviii.	24th ...	,,	xxix.
3rd ...	,,	viii.	14th ...	,,	xix.	25th ...	,,	xxx.
4th ...	,,	ix.	15th ...	,,	xx.	26th ...	,,	xxxi.
5th ...	,,	x.	16th ...	,,	xxi.	27th ...	,,	xxxii.
6th ...	,,	xi.	17th ...	,,	xxii.	28th ...	,,	xxxiii.
7th ...	,,	xii.	18th ...	,,	xxiii.	29th ...	,,	xxxiv.
8th ...	,,	xiii.	19th ...	,,	xxiv.	30th ...	,,	xxxv.
9th ...	,,	xiv.	20th ...	,,	xxv.	31st ...	,,	xxxvi.
10th ...	,,	xv.	21st ...	,,	xxvi.
11th ...	,,	xvi.	22nd ...	,,	xxvii.

The card of membership will be sent on receipt of three stamps.

The first and second series of Monthly Comments on the whole Bible, by Philo-Israel, may be obtained in volume form. Price in paper cover, 1s. 2d. each, post free; in cloth, 2s. each, post free. The "Prayers for Daily Use," being a prayer for each day of the week, by Philo-Israel, are 1d., or 9d. per dozen, postage extra. The prayer of the Union, as on the Card of Membership, may be obtained printed in larger type, price 1d. for three copies, post free, or 1s. per 100 for distribution. Address, Miss E. Sibbald, 3, Townshend-villas, Richmond, Surrey.

AN OBJECTION URGED BY A CLERGYMAN, A JEW BY BIRTH.

A JEWISH convert to Protestantism, who is, we learn, a rev. doctor of the establishment, is satisfied that there are some trivial coincidences which might lead him to acknowledge "as a kind of link," that "the English are Anglo-Israel," were it not for one text which militates against this view. That text is Hosea iii. 4. We quote it from the Revised Version—"For the children of Israel shall abide many days without king, and without prince, and without sacrifice, and without pillar, and without ephod or teraphim." We are not informed where the difficulty is, but we suppose it is in the words "The children of Israel," and applying the term to "The British people" it is argued that to-day we British do not answer to this picture; for we have a king and prince, and sacrifice, and pillar, ephod (?) and teraphim (?) and therefore cannot be Israel.

We suggest what has often been advanced, but must, it seems be offered again as an explanation, whenever it is thrown at us as a fatal missile. That is, that whether the text apply to the British people as "the House of Israel," or to the Jews as "the children of Israel" (so called by Scripture during the temporary excision of the House of Joseph from the body politic of Israel during their Lo-Ammi condition), the text is perfectly true. It is true, literatim et verbatim, of the Jews to-day and for the last 1,800 years.

They have now no king, prince, sacrifice, pillar, ephod, or teraphim. For many days they have so abided; and we believe that now in these "latter days" (ver. 5, R.V.), these Jewish "children of Israel will return and seek the Lord their God and David their king," and shall come with "fear unto the Lord, and to His goodness."

But supposing the words apply to the British Ephraim-Israelites, as our Jewish clergyman supposes, were they not true of them in the days of their penal wanderings from Central Asia to these "Isles of the West?" Between B.C. 620 and A.D. 450, or for 1,000 years, where were Ephraim's king, or prince, sacrifice, pillar, ephod, or teraphim? All were wanting! But in these "latter days," between the two advents, Israel (the British) has returned and sought the Lord their God, even David's greater Son Jehovah-Jesus, their King, according to the prophecies in Isaiah lxv. 1, and lxiii. 16—19. Our Israelite clergyman's objections should be satisfied by the above line of reasoning; and we hope that he will now cease to depend on mere coincidences such as the trifles he names, but regarding the subject from the standpoint of the mighty prophecies of Moses, and of the prophets of Israel, will come to the conclusion that the British are his long lost brethren of "The House of Joseph," ready to return with the House of Judah and Manasseh to the Land of the Inheritance; to the praise and glory of the grace and faithfulness of the Lord Jehovah our God!

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."

(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. XII., No. 576. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 11, 1888. [PRICE ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

PAGE

The Russian Gate and Bulgaria 21
The Name of God—An Identity. By H. R. Shaw. Part II. 22
The Prophecy of Isaiah—Its Application to the Twelve, the Ten, and the Two Tribes of Israel. By the Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A. Part II. 23
"Righteousness Exalteth a Nation" (Prov. xiv. 34). By A German 24
Who has the Gospel Mission? By W. S. Cavill 26
The Olive-Tree Symbol in the Epistle to the Romans (xi. 17—24). By C. Giles 27
The Head and Not the Tail 27

THE RUSSIAN GATE AND BULGARIA.

THE Eastern Question is coming up again, and in the old form, for a decisive answer. Lord Derby was right when he said long ago that "the last word in the Eastern Question was, Who is to have Constantinople?" On that subject there is now, just as it was after the Crimean War, no manner of doubt. All Russia's aims are directed towards the annihilation of Turkey and the acquisition of the Gate of her Empire, Stamboul. "The imperious impulse of Russia," said a correspondent of the Times, writing from Rome on Dec. 22, "is to the possession of Constantinople, as a Gate by which to go out to the sun and to the South, and to shut out everybody else from its vitals." As a means to that end, the writer, who, as we see, uses the very language of the BANNER in describing Constantinople as Russia's Gate, tells us that Bulgaria is indispensable to the Czar. He cannot endure that it should acquire a settled government, and so finally become too strong for his ambitious designs on the Sultan's capital. Bulgaria is on the road to it, and it is necessary that Russia should become predominant there, that she may by-and-bye be able to spring upon her quarry and bestride the points of her ambition, the Bosphorus and the Dardanelles. The Italian correspondent, in writing the remarkable communication on the subject which appeared in the Times, calculates the pros and cons of British interference in the pending quarrels. It seems that the adhesion of this country to the Tripartite Coalition, or alliance of Germany, Austria, and Italy, is deemed very important, because though her military aid would count for nothing, her naval assistance in guaranteeing the Italian and Turkish coasts from invasion by France would give enormous help in the fight with Russia, which all foresee is at hand. Let it be observed here that God's determination regarding the Gate of Gates will be carried out not by a war between Russia and Britain, but by a war between that Colossus and the three great Powers of Europe, which will fight Israel's battles and defend her Gate. The Lord will ordain peace for us according to the prophecies (Isa. xxvi. 12).

The arguments by which the Italian writer convinces himself that we ought to help the cause of the Central Powers is stated in the following, and deserves a place in the BANNER. He wrote thus:—

England's military co-operation will directly be of small importance, but by bringing in Turkey and securing Italy from an attack by sea, she will add enormously to the forces which Russia will have to overcome, and make the success of the resistance to her plans as nearly certain as war combinations can be. But I am constrained to admit that, all the circumstances being taken into consideration, the adhesion of England to the tripartite alliance will not make an approach to certainty of averting a war; if it would postpone it a year it would be a great gain; but even this I doubt.

The question, therefore, remains, what grave interest has England in interfering in the question? The first answer to this is, the importance of maintaining intact the position of Italy, England's only important maritime ally, of preventing her navy from being crushed by the overpowering forces of France in case the latter should make common cause with Russia, and even possibly of deterring France from entering into a so unequal conflict. This will be equally well gained by a treaty with Italy, guaranteeing her against any attack by sea. I have a very high opinion of the Italian navy, but its forces are not sufficient, even united with those of Austria, to meet the concentrated attacks of the French, and a successful raid by the latter might upset all the present arrangements of the Mediterranean, and leave England alone on the seas to meet a victorious and bitter enemy, with every other nation in Europe alienated by her indifference to the general good. Can England in such critical circumstances afford to stand aloof from co-operation in plans which have as their general and direct object the good of Europe and the advancement of liberty and progress in all its Eastern States? The stake to be played for in Bulgaria is, not Bulgaria, but the security of the Austrian Empire, and ultimately that of Germany. Permit no illusion on this score. The participation of England in this struggle in either of the ways alluded to will help to construct so solid a barrier to Russian invasion that any conquest in this direction will become hopeless; the failure in which means, ultimately, Russia at Trieste and holding control of the entire peninsula of the Balkans. Is it possible for England to contemplate such an eventuality?

It appears clear from the above that the action of "England" in the coming troubles will have a very decisive effect. If she join the alliance, Russia and France will probably postpone their attack or find their efforts when made abortive. But if the British refuse on the other hand to interfere in any way, but fold their hands and look on with indifference at the mighty contest about to take place, then the Italian tells us such conduct will bring the Russians to Trieste and give them control of the whole Peninsula of the Balkans. That is to say "by the hand of God's people Israel the Lord will lay His vengeance on Edom," and by obeying His declared will, the destruction of Europe and the dangerous aggrandisement of Russia will be the result. We Anglo-Israelites are no prophets, and we cannot assume the rôle of such. But we can see what God prescribes; and we find from His Holy Word that in the approaching crisis we are directed to do the very thing the Italian tells us will surely be the destruction of Europe! He fails to see, however, that just as we are installed to-day in Egypt, with the consent of Europe, so we may, in obedience to the prophecies become possessors of the Bosphorous and "The Gate" before the Russians can seize them, and that, therefore, there is no question of the Russians being at Trieste or of their capture and retention of "the entire Peninsula of the Balkans!" The Italian, like all Europe, is ignorant of the fact that by the prophecies the nations of the Gentiles outside Israel are to be collected for the terrible arbitrament of war, that being the day of the Lord's vengeance in the year of recompense in "the controversy of Zion," to the people of the Lord (Isa. xxxiv. 8. R.V). The danger is seen to threaten the Austrian Empire first, and ultimately Germany. Italy will suffer at the hands of France, and all this will occur, it is said, if Great Britain obey the command given to Israel, and by a policy of non-intervention leave the combatants to fight out their own quarrels among themselves. Israel will thus secure her own interests by occupying Constantinople at the critical moment. "Thy seed shall possess the Gate of his enemies," is the promise. We see that events are very likely so to shape themselves that, as the last word in the Eastern Question, Great Britain, because she is Israel, will possess herself of the Gate of Gates as an act of high policy of state, to safeguard her Indian, and Palestine, as well as Egyptian interests, drawing down upon her the vengeance of her bitter enemy, Russian Gog, what time France and Russia together have carried out God's purposes respecting the nations of Central Europe. "The Indignation" is but "for a moment;" may it soon pass away, and leave Israel to administer the blessing of God Almighty upon the nations of Europe, as well as upon the Eastern nations there committed to her charge.

Digitized by Google

THE NAME OF GOD—AN IDENTITY.

By H. R. Shaw.

(Concluded from page 17).

PART II.

The pyramid bears eloquent witness to the Lord of hosts through His people Israel by means of their sacred cubit of 25 inches, as used by Noah, Moses, and Solomon in their several works, which cubit is found much monumentalized there, as well as in use to demonstrate over and over again all the mathematical and astronomical problems noticed. But it has also been shown more recently by the present writer that the British yard of 36 inches is there too, adding its silent witness to the Lord and many of His works—long known in the height of the Grand Gallery Step as a veritable stumbling-block and rock of offence to the student, but now become literally the headstone of the corner when in union with Judah's cubit, as on the surface of the same Step which measures 61 inches over, and which Step-measure divides and measures all parts of the building in such a faultlessly simple manner as to prove that the combination was part of the architect's design to identify the people of the yard as brethren of the people of the cubit, and the sharers of the inheritance of this building, indisputably of Hebrew origin and design. More than that, to Britain would seem to have fallen, metrologically, the lion's share of the inheritance, for we may find, with little trouble, the whole system of our long measure within or about the buildings, from barleycorns to miles, and occasionally, too, even confronted antagonistically by the false metre, or millimetre of our French neighbours; but never to any further purpose or result than the futile attempts of the one people to turn out from the land of the pyramid the other people, who have closely held it for the last five years now past. Further, if the yard and cubit be resolved into their elementary inch factors of five and six, the results are most remarkable of all, for, not to particularize, it may be briefly said that most of the arrangements of the architect's design are, where not pure science, simply quinto-sextuple, or a play upon fives and sixes.*

Upon this matter of fives and sixes some noteworthy observations have been delivered by the Rev. H. G. Wood, of Sharon, Pa., at the Chautaqa Assembly, New York, 1886, and reprinted in the Banner, No, 510, October 6th, 1886. He points out, amongst other things, that in the Temple vision of Ezekiel, the grand plan of the gateway exhibits in cubit measures the numbers five and six alternated throughout, which he considers to be a continuation of the root symbol of the sacred name Ha, Va, H, 5, 6, 5. If an ancient Hebrew architect, he says, had laid out the gateway described by the prophet, and had written upon each division its measure in Hebrew letters, the sacred name, signifying the Existing One, in repeated form, would have been the result! Hebrew scholars will best judge how far Mr. Wood is justified in claiming the two letters or numbers as the root of the whole word—the scriptures seem to give no warrant for such an assumption, whilst the practice of Hebrew scribes of tabooing the combination of 10 and 5, because they formed the first and last letter of the name, would appear almost to settle the point adversely. Professor Piazzi Smyth, however, in the "International Standard," January, 1887, page 72, considers Mr. Wood's symbolic use of the numerals an ample confirmation of the quinto-sextuple arrangements, which the present writer finds, and has been finding for so many years, to so thoroughly permeate the whole Great Pyramid building.

It now only remains to be shewn that the entire sacred name of Jehovah is really written in the floor line of the Great Pyramid's passages in the architect's own peculiar and indelible manner, and that not in sacred cubits or geometrical inches, not in Egyptian cubits more or less ancient, not in the combined measure of the Step-surface, or in simple quantities of five or six inches, but in our own British yards (corrected or not to the scientific standard of the Pyramid, makes practically no difference in the short distances and rough ways we have to consider), and that, too, combined with the Almighty symbol, Alpha and Omega, and assisted as to its initial letter by the Messianic symbol of the ruled lines in the entrance passage. Turn we to the West, then, and look with the mind's eye at the vertical section of the Pyramid thus laid open, and we may read in Hebrew fashion, regularly from right to left, the four letters composing the name in well defined sections of 10 yards, J; 5 yards, H; 6 yards, V; 5 yards, H; or turn to the East, and we may read the Hebrew name of our God in a similar manner, but English fashion—from left to right—by taking the two Alphas or first marked sections of the two inclined passages (one descending, the other ascending), and the two Omegas or last marked sections of the two level passages terminating respectively at the entrances to the Queen's and King's chambers—thus 10 yards, or 360 inches, is the quantity accurately marked off from the commencement of the entrance passage by the Messianic ruled lines; 5 yards, or 180 inches, of the commencement of the ascending passage are blocked up by granite plugs or stoppers—a most effectual tally, providentially left in place to this day it would seem; 6 yards, or 216 inches, are clearly cut off from the end of the Queen's chamber passage, which is about 21 inches deeper for this distance beyond its ordinary depth; while the passage leading to the King's chamber, also level from the top of the Grand Gallery Step, has a well-defined concluding section of 5 yards, or 180 inches, also in granite, indicated by the Southern face of the granite leaf, or portcullis, immediately above, and also by the centre of the raised granite floor-stone, sufficiently attractive to the visitor as being the first piece of flooring traversed in that material.

* See the Author's "Egyptian Enigma," published by Banks and Son.

Digitized by Google

Reading thus the name of Israel's God in the most ancient and remarkable building of the earth, and written in the measure of the British people—that measure, too, to which the standard measure of any other people does not, even remotely, approximate (the French once had a "Systeme Usuel" bearing some resemblance; but that they threw away in 1840)—we are forced to the inevitable conclusion that the yard measure identifies at once the God and the people of Israel, and stamps the British nation, and the people also of the United States, who are still unpersuaded to give up yard measuring, as the veritable Israel of the House of Joseph, possessors of the birthright blessing; for how could it be otherwise, since it is no straining of facts to aver that the most useful and popular measure of our daily life and occupations is also the pen which the Lord used or caused to be used wherewith to write His sacred Israelitish name 4,000 years ago, before Britain or Israel were a people, and before even Abraham was; and thus very literally, as regards British-Israel, placing their Father's name in their hands, sealing it, we may even say, in their foreheads, and causing them to walk up and down in it continually.

One further observation remains to be made in regard to the part played by the ruled lines on the walls of the entrance passage, which serve the double purpose of indicating Southward, in inches, the number of years between the building's foundation or inauguration, and the date of Messiah's appearance; and Northwards indicate the initial Hebrew J in yards. It has been darkly hinted by the scornful that Piazzi Smyth must have put them there for Mr. Casey to discover in substantiation of his inches theory seven years afterwards! but how about the ten yards on the other side of the lines? Methinks ingenuity sufficient for this master-stroke belongs only to the master-mind that designed the structure. The remarks of a recent visitor to the Great Pyramid on these lines are well worth quoting here. He says, "I like to picture the hand of the Great Architect holding the chisel and putting that finishing touch and seal, as it were, to His great work; and I confess to a feeling of veneration for the master-mind which directed every detail of that vast construction." And looking to the astonishing double purpose just shewn to be served by these lines, and also to the further facts of the ample confirmation afforded by them in yard measures of the 10 to 9 shape of the complete building, and consequently of the thousand million pyramids' distance of the sun from the earth, as well as their exhibition of a single inch measure to their Northward, as duly explained in BANNER for Oct. 4th, 1882, pages 417, 418, we must now claim for them something else than the mere properties of a seal, something more akin to the fabled Promethean spark, by whose agency the work is set aglow, and the entire plan of the Architect is illuminated, that who runs may read; the breath of life by which the dead mass of stone becomes vocal with testimony to its existence as an altar and pillar of witness to the Lord of Hosts in the land of Egypt.

24, Ludgate Hill, E.C., Dec. 1, 1887.

HER MAJESTY has received a copy of Mrs. G. A. Rogers' new work, "Britain in History, Ancient and Modern, or Proofs Linking Israel with Britain Throughout the Ages," and has graciously signified, through General Sir H. Ponsonby, her acceptance of the same.

THE PROPHECY OF ISAIAH—ITS APPLICATION TO THE TWELVE, THE TEN, AND THE TWO TRIBES OF ISRAEL.

BY THE REV. C. W. HICKSON, M.A.
(Vicar of St. Bartholomew, Bristol.)

(Concluded from page 19).

PART II.

It is remarkable that the next section, as I look at it, ends with the same words: "There is no peace, saith my God, to the wicked" (chap. lvii. 21). The nine chapters, xlix. to lvii. appear to me in the main to refer to Israel-Ephraim, even as xl. to xlviii. do to Judah. This part of the prophecy begins with an address from Messiah calling upon the isles to listen to Him. He declares His mission to be "to bring Jacob (Judah) again to the Lord, and that Israel be gathered unto Him. Not only should He be the raiser up of the Tribes of Jacob and to restore the preserved of Israel, but He was to be a light to the Gentiles and God's salvation to the end of the earth" (xlix. 1—6), And the following verses (7—26) seem to point to the gathering of the Lost Ten Tribes and their ultimate restoration to their own land. Verse 21 points to their wonderful increase, as well as their sudden manifestation: while the use of the word "desolate" (A.V.), "solitary" (R.V., margin, "barren") links the passages to chap. liv. 1, where undoubtedly the "barren" woman means Israel distinguished from the married wife, Judah. Again in chap. l. the question is asked, "Where is the bill of your mother's divorcement wherewith I have put her away?" This question cannot apply to Judah, who is never spoken of as divorced from Jehovah. Compare Jeremiah iii. 8, where "backsliding," divorced, Israel is clearly distinguished from, and contrasted with, treacherous Judah. Isaiah li. appears to describe the Lord as comforting and encouraging His people Israel in their wilderness state (compare Hosea ii. 14, 15), dwelling in "the isles" (ver. 5), "knowing righteousness," and destined afterwards to return (ver. 11) to their own land. The ultimate restoration of Jerusalem after her full measure of affliction seems predicted in li. 17 to lii. 6. At verse 7 of chap. lii., the spiritual emancipation of believing Jews by the Gospel seems to be predicted. This is followed by the well-known and beautiful prophecy of Messiah's sufferings (lii. 13 to liii. 12) after which Ephraim, barren Israel, is called upon to break forth into joy, and to enlarge her tent, lengthen her cords, and strengthen her stakes, because of her spreading abroad on the right hand and on the left: her seed possessing the nations and making the desolate cities to be inhabited, as Britain's empire is now doing in all parts of the world. Israel's evangelistic work seems then to be portrayed in chapters lv. and lvi. as far as verse 8. Israel's ill-desert of all this future blessing is then forcibly set forth in the portion from lvi. 9 to lvii. 14, after which the Lord further declares His gracious purposes to the penitent, concluding again with the words: "There is no peace, saith my God, to the wicked."

Chapter lviii. and lix. I take to be a direct address from the prophet to the Jews of his own day. Chapters lx., lxi. and lxii., addressed to Jerusalem, describe its glories in the millennial latter day. The first six verses of chapter lxiii. seem descriptive of Messiah's triumphs over His enemies at His second coming, and appear to be parallel to Rev. xix. 11—21. The remaining verses of the chapter, and all the next contain Israel's recital of God's past mercies to them, and plea for restoration to their own inheritance. They speak as a people not acknowledged to be Abraham's seed, nor recognised by the Jews, but yet claiming God as their Father. They speak of themselves as having become as those over whom the Lord never bare rule, as those that were not called by His name. And so in lxv. the Lord responds, "I am inquired of by them that asked not for Me: I am found of them that sought Me not. I said, Behold Me, behold Me, unto a nation that was not called by My name." This undoubtedly means once outcast, lost Israel, and is best explained by reference to Hosea i. 9, 10. The rest of chapter lxv. appears to be addressed directly to the Jews under Cyrus, who, like Jeremiah's baskets of figs (see Jer. xxiv.), are in two sections, godly Jews, and ungodly Jews. Verses 2 to 7, 11 to 12 refer to the ungodly Jews, while verses 8 to 10 refer to the pious ones. In verses 13—16, the two are set forth in many contrasts. I am bound, though an Anglo-Israelite, to confess that the application sometimes made of this passage to Jews and Israelites seems to me open to grave suspicion. I am free to admit, however, that on that interpretation verse 15 presents an intelligible sense; whilst on my own view, it is difficult to say what it means. Verses 18 to 25 refer to Jerusalem in millennial times. In chapter lxvi., Judah, perhaps after Cyrus's edict, seems to be addressed in verses 1 to 4; and outcast Israel in verses 5 to 9. The rest of the chapter describes the blessedness of millennial Jerusalem, Messiah's judgments upon His enemies, the evangelization of the world, the bringing of Judah to their land by Israel, the permanent establishment of the Hebrew people in their own land, the worship of Jehovah there by all flesh, and the permanent memorial of the awful nature of sin.

Digitized by Google

I fear this is but a poor attempt to give guidance to others in ascertaining what parts of Isaiah have reference to Israel and what have not; but I venture to think that if any are interested enough in the subject to read over the whole book, if possible at one reading, making use of these notes, they may perhaps be led to feel that the views here expressed are in their main points at least not without foundation.

"RIGHTEOUSNESS EXALTETH A NATION."

(PROV. XIV. 34).

BY "A GERMAN."

HISTORY proves that this is not the view generally taken by the nations of the world, whether in the more immediate or remoter past, neither is it their thought now in their efforts to attain pre-eminence, to rank at least, as first-rate Powers. Each nation has sought, and still does seek, the much-coveted prestige by means suited to its own character; and what it prized as the best towards this end at one time, it would at another set aside for something more in accordance with its altered condition. True, in all ages the fact could not be overlooked, that with a view to the establishing and consolidating of any State, a code of laws aiming more or less after justice and equity, and the repression of evil where it proved a source of trouble and weakness, was felt to be an essential requisite. How strongly this necessity was realized by the senators of the Roman Republic in its early stage, when they sent commissioners into all the nations at that time known to possess a settled government, for the purpose of collecting the best laws in order to incorporate them into their own code; and the wise legislation resulting therefrom has furnished to this day the basis of the judicial system of those States of Continental Europe whose territory once formed part of the great Roman Empire. And no doubt in proportion to the prevalence of the principles of justice and righteousness in a polity was their effect beneficial and enduring; all this, moreover, not without the controlling power of an Almighty hand, even where His name was not known.

But we need not search further than the history of the chosen people, with their divinely-given moral law, and their judicial laws to enforce it, to learn that the most perfect and suitable code possible does not suffice to exalt a nation permanently, neither does the righteousness of its king or of the throne. In the severed kingdom of Judah, indeed, judgments were again and again averted and stability restored, whenever a faithful prince of the House of David bore sway, calling the people to repentance, cleansing the sanctuary, and honouring Jehovah's name in the sight of the heathen: for the promise to Solomon under the Mosaic dispensation was, "If thou wilt walk before Me as David thy father walked, and wilt keep My statutes and My judgments, then will I establish the throne of thy kingdom . . . But if ye turn away and forsake My statutes and My commandments, then will I pluck them up by the roots out of My land which I have given them" (2 Chron. vii. 17). Therefore, whenever a king arose who did that which was evil in the sight of the Lord, and walked not in the ways of David his father, or not with a perfect heart, the kingdom took a step in the downward direction, until the threatened judgment came and closed the scene. It is not therefore the possession of a perfect law, nor the rule of a righteous king: it is not in this sense that righteousness can permanently exalt a nation and make it a "righteous nation that keepeth truth" (Isa. xxvi. 2),* and that shall be pre-eminent and established for ever. Yet, that there should be a people so exalted is the Divine thought.

But to return to what we started with. By what means do the nations of the earth hope to attain this pre-eminence? We need not go back further than a century to discover a variety of ways in which it has been sought:—Republicanism, military glory, territorial aggrandisement, a compact nationality, an ever more highly wrought civilisation; and they look around and see one nation steadily, mysteriously increasing in territorial possessions, in wealth, in population, in influence—even Great Britain—notwithstanding troubles from enemies without and enemies within her own borders, and bitter aspersions, and a consequent show of weakness, exalted above all other nations: her word relied upon, her good will sought, her alliance coveted, though often withheld; and the cry is, "a world-wide commerce is the cause of it, the power to get wealth! Let us also have colonies and a good navy and a mercantile fleet!" And every nerve is strained, and yet the object is not attained. The British Empire remains the object of their wonderment and jealousy. How is this to be accounted for? Those nations may not dream of it, but every reverent student of the scriptures of truth ought to have an opened ear to hear those words, coming down to our generation through the "grey mist" of well-nigh 3,000 years: "Righteousness exalteth a nation!" uttered some centuries before the Assyrian had become the "rod of Jehovah's anger," the Assyrian, the precursors of the four great empires in Nebuchadnezzar's vision; these to be succeeded by a fifth, and—no more; by "a kingdom which shall never be destroyed, nor shall the sovereignty thereof be left to another people, and it shall stand for ever" (Dan. ii. 44).

Having then before our eyes a great Empire, yea, the greatest ever known, although still in process of formation; its various parts fast tending to become more solidly united, growing ever more imposing in spite of much evil within, and many mistakes of its rulers in times past; in spite of a most singular lack of that ambition so variously manifested by other nations—is it reasonable or not to suppose that the principles of righteousness has been working within a people thus exalted, and that we are witnessing the firstfruits and foreshadowings of that which is predicted of that fifth and final Empire? which is further thus described: "And the kingdom and the dominion and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High: whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom and all dominions shall serve and obey Him" (Dan. vii. 27)! Who are the people of the saints of the Most High to whom this kingdom and the dominion shall be given? Let scripture prove itself. In Isa. liv. it is said of Israel, the Ten-Tribed House of the barren that did not bear, of the desolate one whose children, nevertheless, were to be more than those of the married wife (Judah), who was to spread abroad on the right hand and on the left: "Thy seed

* N.B.—"Keepeth truth," not the truth, although that is their privilege also. But the sense in which these words are to be understood is shewn in Psa. cxlvi. 6, where it is said "Jehovah . . . . keepeth truth for ever."

Digitized by Google

shall possess the nations . . . . no weapon that is formed against thee shall prosper; and every tongue that shall rise against thee in judgment thou shalt condemn. This is the heritage of the servants of the Lord." See also chap. lx. 12: "For that nation and kingdom that will not serve thee shall perish; yea, those nations shall be utterly wasted." (It may be helpful also to notice, by the way, that this discomfiting and destruction of refractory nations must necessarily take place before millennial times). And what characterises this favoured people? "All thy children shall be taught (disciples) of the Lord . . . . In righteousness shalt thou be established;" and further on, in lx. 21: "Thy people also shall be all righteous," corroborating Matt. xxi. 43: "The kingdom of God shall be taken from you (Jews) and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof."

But if these things be so, then the inference is plain—viz., that the British race (for we cannot exclude their brethen on the other side of the Atlantic) and the House of Joseph are identical. Proofs in support of this conclusion have been so amply furnished in the pages of the BANNER and other Identity publications, proofs adduced too from scripture and from scientific research, that we can but refer the uninitiated reader to these; to the regular readers of this periodical it would prove a weariness to repeat them.

Yet what greater guarantee of stability have we now? At a time when the mighty acts of Jehovah might still have been fresh in their memory, Israel quickly corrupted themselves in the goodly land given them. Rallied again under David and Solomon, and the Ark of the Covenant in their midst, the tabernacle of the wilderness replaced by the temple, its service inaugurated so magnificently, the cloud of glory filling the house, the fire from heaven consuming the burnt offering, was there not, had there not been such a display of Jehovah's might, such pledges of His presence and abiding favour, that His people almost seemed called to that easier walk by sight rather than by faith?

The promise (see 2 Chron. xxxiii. 8) had been, "neither will I any more remove the foot of Israel from off the land which I have appointed for your fathers; if only they will observe to do all I have commanded them, even all the law and the statutes, and the ordinances by the hand of Moses." But we know the end: Israel became outcast and Judah was dispersed (Isa. xi. 12). Whence then is derived that element of stability and consequently of enduring righteousness, which will admit of that same nation being yet established for ever?

Heb. vii. 19 witnesses to the weakness and unprofitableness of that Mosaic dispensation, for "the law made nothing perfect;" and wherefore? because it could not impart the element of life. "If there had been a law given which could make alive (Gal. iii. 21, R.V.) verily righteousness would have been of the law." Hence for a people ranged under the covenant of the law, on the condition of carrying out what they bound themselves to (see Exod. xxiv. 7, 8), failure was the inevitable result. They found themselves in fact under "a ministration of condemnation" and of "death," shewn up in 2 Cor. iii. 9 in strong contrast to the "ministration of righteousness consequent upon the introduction of the New Covenant, of which St. Paul declares himself to be a minister.

The great prominence given in the Scriptures to this "new" and "better" covenant proves the importance of grasping the meaning of it. In the immediate prospect of the consummation of the sacrifice of Himself, as the Lamb without blemish, foreknown before the foundation of the world, at the Last Supper, in giving the cup, Christ says: "This cup is the new covenant in my blood." Surely, in the minds of the disciples, Israelites as they were, and having companied with their divine Teacher for more than three years, these words would only point to that blessed "better hope" spoken of in the prophets: "My covenant of peace shall not be removed" (Is. liv. 10): "I will make a covenant of peace with them; it shall be an everlasting covenant with them" (Ezek. xxxvii. 26); but above all must they have connected with those words that promise in Jer. xxxi. 31., &c: "Behold the days come, saith the Lord, that I will make a new covenant with the House of Israel, and with the House of Judah: not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers . . . . which My covenant they brake. But this is the covenant . . . . I will put My law in their inward parts, and in their heart will I write it . . . and they shall all know Me, from the least of them unto the greatest of them . . . . for I will forgive their iniquity, and their sin will I remember no more." In the Epistle to the Hebrews this subject is most fully developed, from chap. vii to x., shewing how "He (Christ as High Priest) obtained a ministry the more excellent, by how much also He is the Mediator of a better covenant enacted upon better promises," and having "through the eternal Spirit offered Himself without blemish unto God," He necessarily "obtained an eternal redemption" and "became the Author of eternal salvation to all them that obey Him," "and for this cause He is called the Mediator of a new covenant . . . . that they that have been called may receive the promise of the eternal inheritance."

But if it is claimed for the British race that they are Israel, and that in them is about to be fulfilled the promise of a nation established in righteousness, upon whom will eventually devolve the sovereignty of the fifth empire which shall never be destroyed; if we think we see already working in their midst an indestructible principle of righteousness, to which, although as yet not manifested as it will be, we attribute the even now apparent exaltation of the nation, we must be prepared to prove that nationally, and increasingly individually, and in reality of faith, they are ranged under that new and better and everlasting covenant, which, because of the infinite value of the blood shed, the Life laid down, carries with it all the sublimity and stability suited to a ministration of righteousness of the spirit, and of which Christ is also declared to be the "Surety."

It needs but a glance at the nations composing Christendom, and but a slight knowledge of facts, to come at once to a conclusion as to which is the pre-eminently Christian nation of the world: Christian, not in a loose sense, as having adopted certain truths taught in the New Testament centring around Jesus Christ as the Founder of Christianity, and approving of its ethics; but a people proclaiming by its numerous missions (carried on by divers committees) loudly to the world, that there is "no other name under heaven whereby we must be saved" no other source of righteousness and life but the finished work of the Son of God made man, and having "suffered death for every man," a people which in its national Church from week to week worships on the ground of that same truth, even of that "full, perfect, and sufficient sacrifice, oblation and satisfaction, for the sins of the whole world," a people too the only one which, in the words, "write all these Thy laws in our hearts, we beseech Thee," prays for the fulfilment to it of the glorious promise (Jer. xxxi.) to be realized, as we have already seen, under the New Covenant in days to come.

These things being true, may we not thankfully say: "Surely this is a plant of the Heavenly Father's planting, and therefore it shall never be rooted up!" Through many generations this product of the grace of God may have been, to use Arch. Leighton's words, but "as a tender plant in a strange unkindly soil;" it may yet have to weather fierce storms and blighting influences; yet, withal, has it never been so vigorous as now. Planted in British soil as far back as the latter end of the first century of our era, (as we now know from diligent research into early church-history, and not only by Anglo-Israelites) it struck root there, and has since then borne fruit, intermittently it may have been, but evermore perceptibly down to our own time. Yet it is evident that whatever life, whatever vigour there is, whatever efforts are being made in the spreading of truth and righteousness, are traceable to individual believers a goodly number in our day; but the heart of the nation as such has, as yet, not turned to the Lord. For that which every true child of God has to experience in his own soul before he can rightly embrace and value so great salvation, that revolution in his innermost being which leads him to "repentance towards God and faith towards our Lord Jesus Christ," this the nation must still pass through before "the seasons of refreshing from the Lord can come, and He may send the Christ . . . . whom the heaven must receive until the times of restoration of all things." This was the burden of the Apostles' preaching to their own kindred, the condition placed before them under which the promises connected with the second covenant should be fulfilled to them; for this the nations, or shall we not rather say God, is still waiting. The time will surely come—He being faithful! "So the Lord God will cause righteousness and praise to spring up before all nations."

Digitized by Google

We know the full measure of blessing to the people and to the earth will only be realized in the millennial reign under conditions differing from those that obtain now: for Satan will be bound, and righteousness asserted universally, without failure and weakness. We know also that to those who during this still present protracted period of grace and patient intercession on Christ's part, have been by faith waiting for Him, and shall be "accounted worthy to attain to that world (age) and the resurrection from the dead," these promises under the New Covenant will be made good in a transcendent and heavenly fashion.

Meanwhile, what an inducement have those who hold the truth of the Identity—and who see as others cannot, the day approaching—to pray fervently, as they can also intelligently: "Thy Kingdom come!" That sanctification which must pervade the whole nation before it can be manifested as "the righteous nation," the effect of which upon the world will be "as life from the dead," it now behoves the individual believer to follow after. So will he hasten the coming of that Kingdom. To him has been imparted a new and blessed life; in him has been accomplished that "new birth" into righteousness, a righteousness which can only mature in the daily and hourly recurring by faith to that "precious blood (of the everlasting Covenant), which cleanseth from all sin." "And their righteousness is of Me, saith the Lord."

October, 1887.

WHO HAS THE GOSPEL MISSION?

By W. S. Cavill.

There is no more important or valuable aspect of the British-Israel question than that under which it is viewed in regard to the Gospel mission work. Indeed, this is the main-spring—the very centrality of the question itself. The chosen seed were elected in order that they might occupy in the world a position of usefulness And the sphere of usefulness which they were called to fill, was that of witnessing for the truth of God to the other nations or peoples of the earth. And, moreover this Gospel mission of the Hebrew race was embodied in the very earliest promise vouchsafed to Abraham, the progenitor of the race: "In thee shall all families of the earth be blessed" (Gen. xii. 3). For this, every blessing of a temporal kind which could be useful in facilitating so high and sacred a work was graciously added. And hence the fulness and grandeur of the complementary portions of the promises to the fathers. Whoever examines them with due diligence and care will readily see how grandly they are made to compass the development of the "great and mighty nation," which, on the highest possible authority, was declared should spring from Abraham (Gen. xviii. 17—19).

But the precise question with which we are now dealing is not what is the mission of Israel. This has again and again been treated of in Identity writings. The question is, who has the Gospel mission? And the importance of this will appear, more clearly the more closely we seek for the answer.

In viewing the elect seed as holding in their hands the ministerial function, we must necessarily regard them as having a distinct position from that held by any other people upon the face of the earth: "Ye are My witnesses, saith the Lord, that I am God" (Isa. xliii. 12). The division thus made among the nations of the earth is that of Israel and the Gentiles. We cannot therefore look to the Gentiles for any inauguration of missionary agencies, if we recognise and bear in mind that this has been committed to the care of the elect Abrahamic seed. But the central truth which we require to grasp is, that God having elected a people for the accomplishment of a given work, cannot, consistently with His own glorious attributes of truth and sovereignty, either remove that mission from them or suffer them to escape from its responsibilities. In writing this, we do not mean that no work for the Gospel can be done by Gentile hands. The individual worker for God does not work on his own behalf. He labours for others. It is his aim, it is the glory of his calling, it is the very proof of his success, that others are drawn into association with him. What applies to the individual minister or missionary, applies equally to Israel as the elect missionary nation. It is for them to open up the mission field. But it is the blessed privilege of those who accept the Gospel through their ministrations, to become united with the covenant people in their work. It is the happy lot of the chosen seed to become "as a dew from the Lord." But for the Gentiles there remains a valuable blessing. For did not God say at the first, "I will bless them that bless thee"? (Gen. xii. 2). And in what higher aspect can this be secured than by union with the elect seed in obeying the injunction of the God of the universe for the dissemination among mankind of the words and admonition of true wisdom?

We are thus brought to concentrate attention upon the elect seed themselves in regard to the Gospel mission work. And this brings us to a new line of thought, and to deal with preconceptions of a new order. The children of Israel remained united until the death of Solomon. There were truly within the nation, many premonitory signs of coming division, but to the view of surrounding nations they were one united people. But after the accession of Rehoboam, the son of Solomon, they became "two nations, two kingdoms." A period of 250 years passed on, and Israel, the name assumed by the Ten Tribes, Judah being the name given to the other House, was driven forth into captivity on account of idolatry and sin, and the decree was given forth that they should become "sifted among all nations" so as to be indistinguishable from them, as far as human recognition was concerned. This was their condition when Christ came to proclaim the Gospel message. And it is also the position to-day that no nation exists, other than Judah, upon whom rests manifestly the name of covenant favour. But bearing in mind the mission given to the elect seed, let us now review the position.

The Gospel was proclaimed by the Son of God. But what was its effect upon the House of Judah. "He came unto His own and His own received Him not" (John i. 11). They saw not in Him their Redeemer, their Saviour, and so refused to accept the mission offered to them. But could the mission fail? Would Jehovah suffer His gracious designs for the good of humanity to be hindered? Had He not said, "I will work, and who shall let it?" (Isa. xliii. 13). Christ had indeed come down from Heaven "in the fulness of time" (Gal. iv. 4) with a prepared blessing for fallen man. And the message of sovereign mercy and love must be borne forth. This was the work which the Jews endeavoured, in every way, to hinder. And even in Rome, at the end of long missionary labours, which they had also sought to hinder, St. Paul rehearsed in the ears of this people the emphatic declaration of the prophet Isaiah against their stubborn and rebellious conduct, adding, "Be it known therefore unto you that the salvation of God is sent unto the Gentiles, and that they will hear it" (Acts xxviii. 28). But when the Lord of the vineyard looked upon the House of Judah in their rebellion, what was His judgment? This is the all-important matter. In the parable of the wicked husbandmen (Matt. xxi. 33, 46), our Lord clearly lays the matter open before us. That it was clear to the Jews we are not left in doubt, for it is written, "And when the chief Priests and Pharisees had heard His parables, they perceived that He spake of them." Note especially; "But last of all he sent unto them his son, saying, They will reverence my son. But when the husbandmen saw the son, they said among themselves, This is the heir; come, let us kill him, and let us seize upon his inheritance. And they caught him, and cast him out of the vineyard, and slew him. When the Lord therefore of the vineyard cometh, what will he do unto those husbandmen? They say unto him, He will miserably destroy those wicked men, and will let out his vineyard unto other husbandmen, which shall render him the fruits in their seasons. Jesus saith unto them, Did ye never read in the scriptures, the stone which the builders rejected, the same is become the head of the corner; this is the Lord's doing, and it is marvellous in our eyes? Therefore say I unto you, the kingdom of God shall be taken from you, and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof."

Digitized by Google

Here is, indeed, a clear and unmistakeable declaration. From the House of Judah, as a House, is definitely removed the ministerial function of the Gospel. And as we have before noted that it could not be taken up by the Gentiles, we are constrained to enquire who was the nation to whom our Lord refers as being the instrument in the divine hand for the blessing of the nations. Surely it could be none other than Israel of the Ten Tribes, who, sifted among the nations or peoples of the earth, had ceased to bear the covenant name. But still they must be there, for "not the least grain" was to "fall upon the earth" (Amos ix. 9). Had not the exiled House many gracious guarantees of preservation? Had not Jehovah said, in stern reproof to the members of the House of Judah, by the prophet Ezekiel (xi. 16): "Although I have cast them far off among the heathen, and although I have scattered them among the countries, yet will I be unto them as a sanctuary in the countries where they shall come"? And so, under the divine hand, they would move in obeying the commands," Enlarge the place of thy tent, and let them stretch forth the curtains of thine habitations; spare not, lengthen thy cords, and strengthen thy stakes; for thou shalt break forth on the right hand and on the left: and thy seed shall inherit the Gentiles, and make the desolate cities to be inhabited" (Isa. liv. 2, 3). Jehovah's wrath would be removed, and returning mercy become their assured portion (ver. 7—10, 17). But if we have any doubt as to whether this work of Israel follows the return, then we are supplied with the answer in Hos. i. 10. Israel was to become Ammi where she was known as Lo-Ammi. This can have no reference whatever to the period of the final repossession of the land of covenant promise. Israel's Lo-Ammi state is her captivity state. It will therefore be in the end of that exile state that she will be known as Ammi. "And it shall come to pass that in the place where it was said unto them, Ye are not My people, there it shall be said unto them, Ye are the sons of the living God." And thus it is that St. Peter, writing to the "sojourners of the dispersion," describes them as an elect race, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, a people for God's own possession, in strict conformity with Isaiah, who says, "This people have I formed for Myself; they shall shew forth My praise" (Isa. xliii. 21).

Our blessed Lord would beyond doubt refer to the House of Ten-Tribed Israel, as the nation who should receive the Gospel blessing, and bring forth its hallowed fruits. And when we scan the pages of the history of our dispensation, and recognise how all things have worked together to make our own land the stronghold of freedom, and her people the champions of civilisation and truth; when we see that the movements of our race over the face of the globe have been so far controlled as to secure to our missionaries the fullest possible scope for the accomplishment of their sacred task; when we see further that there is no known land to which our missions have not been sent forth, can we refuse to own that we have had centred in our British race the Gospel mission, and been gifted with all the endowments and privileges essential to its success? Rather let us rejoice that so many evidences abound that we are indeed the descendants of the Israel of old; that the covenants and promises are our irremovable portion; and that we have been led to the accomplishment of the divine will and pleasure in making known to the world the glad news of the Gospel. Then will praise be in our lips, while we await the day for the "manifestations of the sons of God" (Hos. i. 10; Rom. viii. 19), herald, most surely, of the bright millennial day of Christ!

THE OLIVE-TREE SYMBOL IN THE EPISTLE TO THE ROMANS.

(xi. 17—24.)

By Christopher Giles.

To our opponents generally, but especially to the clergy among them, I should much like, through you, to put a question arising from the contemplation of the allegorical passage quoted above.

It is simply this—Who were and are intended to be represented by "the good olive-tree"—the tree

(a) Out of which some of its branches were broken;

(b) Into which certain other wild ones were to be grafted in;

(c) Into which (their own tree) the broken branches are yet to be re-grafted?

Now since the greater cannot be grafted into the less, the "good olive-tree" must be

(1) Greater than the "Gentile" Church (wild olive branches).

(2) Greater than the Jewish (broken branches), and

(3) Capable of having both these added as (mere) grafts.

Therefore, both now and in the yet future—seeing that the Jews are not yet re-grafted in—there must be a Church greater than either of those in (1) and (2), and greater than both taken together; What and where is she?

Adelaide, South Australia, Oct. 30, 1887.

THE HEAD AND NOT THE TAIL.

The following appeared in the Daily Telegraph, of December 11, in an article on the agricultural outlook. It gives general support to our contention that this our nation, being Israel, is bound to be "the head and not the tail; above only and not beneath all other nations of the earth," if only they resolve to "go through," and achieve the position God has assigned to them among the nations.

"Bearing on this subject is the fact that, however greatly some articles of foreign produce may be superseding British, our agricultural engineers have the first place all the world over, having no competitors that run them hard in any branch except the Americans. Messrs. Harrison and McGregor, who engaged so determinedly in the field trials of France for reaping and mowing last summer, were enabled to display on their stand at Islington a valuable objet d'art, the highest award at the International Exhibition at Toulouse, under the auspices of the French Government, it being of massive silver, and a chastely moulded representation of Spring, in the form of Flora distributing her flowers and a little child gathering them up. Peculiarly gratifying does it seem that such a trophy has come to England instead of going to America, where the manufacture of mowing and reaping machines is so much studied."

Fifteen million letters and newspapers passed through the General Post Office on December 24. At Coldbath-fields, where the parcel post is now conducted, there were 70,000 packages.

During the past year at least £1,000,000 was left as legacies to charitable institutions.

Digitized by Google

NOTICES.

All communications intended for the Editor, to be addressed: "Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Clifton, Bristol.

SUBSCRIPTIONS. £ s. d.

Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free 0 7 6
Two Copies (including Double Numbers) 0 13 6
Three Copies ,, ,, ,, ... 1 0 4
Four Copies ,, ,, ,, ... 1 5 6
Six Copies ,, ,, ,, ... 1 16 4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-grand, London, to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C., or F. W. PARRY & Co., 29, Paternoster-row, London.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

Contents Bills and Show Cards may be obtained on application to the Publishers.

Advertisements should be sent to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

Prepaid Advertisements are inserted at the rate of thirty words for 1s. 4d.

VALUABLE CONSULTATION PRESCRIPTION for cure of Indigestion sent to any address for One Shilling. Part profits to Banner Free Distribution Fund.—"Identity," 8, Charlotte-terrace, Clacton-on-Sea.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

BIBLE READINGS will commence Tuesday, January 17.

A LECTURE will be Delivered in the ASSOCIATION ROOMS, 14, King William-street, Charing Cross, W.C., on THURSDAY EVENING NEXT, January 19, 1888, at 7.30 o'clock, by Miss V. M. COX. Subject: "An Attack on the Stronghold of Our Opponents." Strangers will be made welcome.

JAMES BILLINGTON, Sec.

THE ANNUAL VOLUME

OF THE

BANNER OF ISRAEL

IS NOW READY.

Price, in Handsome Blue Cloth, Gilt, 8s., Post Free for Postal Order.

Forms a handsome present. Useful for presentation to Working Men's Institutes, Libraries, etc., etc.

Price 1s. 6d.

CASES FOR BINDING

THE YEARLY VOLUMES.

ROBERT BANKS AND SON, RACQUET COURT, FLEET ST.

Price Sixpence.

ISRAEL'S HOPE & DESTINY.

Edited by DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, J.P.

QUARTERLY PART NOW READY.

CONTENTS.—Eighteen Hundred and Eighty-seven.—The Teaching of the Writers in the "Silver Morn." By J. T. Crosthwaite.—To D. A. O., Christmas, 1887." By Hecla.—The Gentilisation of Israel. By the Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A.—The Britons and the Epistle to the Hebrews. By the Rev. Herbert Marriott, M.A.—The Messianic Symbolism of the Well. By F. Gass.—The Throne of the House of Israel. By the Editor.—In Defence of our Methods. By J. G. Taylor.—Is the Conversion of the Jews at the Present Time Scriptual? By George Dimbleby.—Reviews.—Correspondence.

EIGHTH VOL. NOW READY.

Demy 8vo., Handsome Cloth Gilt, price 3s. 6d. Post Free for Postal Order.

R. BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-st., E.C.

Price 8d., post free for 8 stamps.

THE RAPTURE OF THE SAINTS.

By H. C. N.

This small tribute to the Faith, earnestly requested by dear friends, is now humbly inscribed to them, and to all others like them, "Who love the appearing of the Lord Jesus Christ" (2 Tim. i. 10), "And long for the manifestation of the Sons of God" (Rom. viii. 19).

London: Robert Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

THE MESSENGER, 1888.

NOTICE.—In the January number of this Magazine is commenced

A NEW AND IMPORTANT WORK

bearing on the Identity of the British People with Lost Israel, and entitled

"RUSSIA JAPHET,"

Treating of the History, Geography, and Destiny of the Peoples subject to the Czar.

By "OXONIAN,"

Author of "Israel's Wanderings," &c.

Price 6d., post free 7d.

London: F. W. Parry & Co., 29, Paternoster-row.

The Anglo-Israel Theory.

Every believer in it should read the Sermons of the REV. JOSEPH WILD, D.D., of Toronto, Canada, who is the leading exponent of the theory in America, and whose Sermons and Books have a world-wide circulation, which are reported weekly in

"THE CANADIAN ADVANCE,"

A Religious, Literary, and Fireside Weekly. Remit a P.O.O. for 4s. 6d. to the publishers for a year's subscription.—Address: YEIGH & CO., Toronto, Canada.

Fifteenth Thousand.

BY REV. HENRY ROE.

Israel's World. Origin and Destiny of British Race, Colonies, and Empire. 2d., post free 2½d. Fifty post free from H. Roe for 4s. 9d.

Philo-Israel says: "I am perfectly delighted with your pamphlet."

C. E. Priestly, Esq., says: "For its size I never read a better work. I have given away two lots of fifty each, and enclose money for fifty more. I have sent it to clergymen, bishops, and archbishops."

Rev. Thomas Lowe says: "What the works of Mr. Hine failed to do in my enlightenment, 'Israel's World' has accomplished. I now read the Scriptures in a new and vivid light."

Going to Africa. 1s., post free 1s. 1d.

Fernando Po Mission. 1s., post free 1s. 1d.

West African Scenes. 2s., post free 2s. 2d.

Consecration. 2d., post free 2½d.

50 post free from H. Roe for 4s. 9d.

Robert Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleets-treet, E.C.; and Rev. H. Roe, Dawley, Salop.

Price 6d., by post 7d.

THE GREAT PYRAMID AND FREEMASONRY

A Lecture delivered by MR. JOHN CHAPMAN, with Illustrated Coloured Plates. Published by request.

London: Robert Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-st.

ADVICE TO LADIES!!—We will send a full Dress Length of beautiful cloth (for good strong serviceable winter wear), in any of the following colours, carriage paid to any address, for 10s. 6d. Colours—Black, blue, fawn, ruby, slate, brown, green, claret, grey, myrtle, tabac, peacock, bronze, navy, reseda, sage, olive, tobacco, grenat, &c., &c. These Wonderful Dress-lengths have gained a world-wide reputation for Magnificence, Cheapness and Durability, having no equal. Thousands have been sold, and given the highest satisfaction. Lady's Pictorial says: "Excellent quality, and very good value for the money." Young Ladies' Journal says: "They are very firm and nicely finished, and will be both useful and stylish wear for Ladies and Children. Bazaar, Exchange and Mart says: "It is a good cloth, and extremely nice dresses can be made of it." Ladies should write at once for patterns, which may be had free, and need not be returned. SPECIAL OFFER! We will give a very handsome Brocaded Silk Handkerchief with each Dress Length ordered before March 1.—LUTAS B. LEATHLEY Armley, Leeds.

Ready at Advent. Price 6d., by post 6½d.

Old Dogmas From New Aspects.

By Vox Feminæ Auriculæ Hominis.

Contents: . The Apostolic Succession. 2. The Apostle Peter. 3. The Successor of Judas Iscariot. 4. The Athanasian Creed. 5. The Trinity. 6. Eternal Punishment. 7. The Great Tribulation. 8. The Great White Throne. 9. The Atonement of Jesus Christ.

H. E. Hill, 60, Nevillroad, Stoke-Newington, London, N.

WORKS BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

The Geography of the Gates. With Map and six full page, and one double-page, Illustrations, printed on plate paper. 208 pages, in handsome cloth, gilt. Price 3s. 6d., post free 3s. 10d.

The History of the House of Israel. How They Were Lost and How They Were Found. Told for the children. Price 6d., cloth 1s.; post free 7d. and 1s. 1d. Fifth edition.

A Resume of the Scriptural Argument, Proving the Identity of the British Race with the Lost Ten Tribes. Price 1d.; 6s. per hundred, postage 6d.

Robert Banks & Son, Racquet Court, Fleet Street, E.C.

LUNG TONIC

SAVE YOUR LIVES BY TAKING

OWBRIDGE'S LUNG TONIC

THE MIGHTY HEALER.

It has a power over disease hitherto unknown in Medicine.

Are you at all Weak-chested or inclined to be Consumptive, with just a touch of Cough now and then?

"Try this Wonderful Medicine." The Cough and Weakness will disappear as if by magic, and you will feel a strength and power you never had before.

HAVE YOU A COUGH?
A DOSE WILL RELIEVE IT!
HAVE YOU A COLD?
A DOSE AT BEDTIME WILL REMOVE IT.

Bronchitis & Asthma it relieves instantly

The Spasms of Coughing so dreadful in Whooping Cough become less with each dose of the medicine.

Prepared by W. T. OWBRIDGE, Chemist, Hull

Sold in Bottles 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d. and 11s. by all Chemists and Patent Medicine Vendors. Wholesale all London and Provincial Houses.

CARBOLINE

1/6 (TOOTH PASTE). 2/6 per Pot.

Is the most complete Cleanser, Preserver, and Beautifier of the Teeth, perfectly harmless, but marvellous in effect. By its use Toothache and Tartar are prevented, decay arrested, colour improved.

DISEASE by INHALATION AVOIDED

Makers:

GEORGE & WELCH

CHEMISTS, WORCESTER,

Who will forward Free of Postage.

HUMAN LIFE.—FIFTY YEARS' Record of Facts, Principles, and Discoveries (just published, complete) Relating to the Improvement and Preservation of Human Life on Earth. Origin and true treatment of diseases. A series of articles by DR. SAMUEL BIRLEY, M.D., Ph.D. Book form, 50 pages. SENT FREE to every applicant by the publishers, GORDON B. MURRAY & CO., 50, Theobald's-road, Holborn, E.C. Write to-day.

RHEUMATISM, GOUT,

SCIATICA, LUMBAGO, INDIGESTION, CONSTIPATION, LIVER & KIDNEY COMPLAINTS, NERVOUS DISORDERS, LADIES' AILMENTS, ETC. Promptly Relieved and CURED BY

HARNESS' ELECTROPATHIC BELT

ALL sufferers should read "Harness' Guide to Health," free by post, containing copies of Thousands of Testimonials. Every man and woman in search of Health, Strength, and Energy, should at once send a 21s. postal order to the Medical Battery Co., Ltd. 52, OXFORD ST. LONDON, W. and procure one of these famous Belts, and they may rely upon being CURED

Corner of Rathbone Place.

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, by F. W. PARRY (late GUEST & Co.), 29 PATERNOSTER-ROW, E.C. WEDNESDAY, JAN. 11, 1888. [All rights reserved.]

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. XII., No. 577. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 18, 1888. [PRICE ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
The Great Heavy Clouds Charged with the Electricity of War	29
A Correction in Regard to Quetta	30
A Policy of Wisdom. By J. G. Taylor	30
The Rev. Dr. Wild's Sermon on the Future Benefit to Come of the Anglo-Israel Faith	31
The Identity and Spiritual Pride. By W. H. Mason	32
British-Israel. A Lecture in Otago, New Zealand	33
The Steamers of the World	35
Israel's Advance. By W. L. Blore	35

"THE GREAT HEAVY CLOUDS CHARGED WITH THE ELECTRICITY OF WAR."

THE Marquis of Salisbury, in his fine speech at Derby on Dec. 19th, when speaking of the state of tension existing on the Continent between Russia and Germany (with Austria), declared that the peace of Europe was hanging in the balance. "These great heavy overcharged clouds, charged with the electricity of war, near each other," he said, "coming closer and closer. Who is he who shall be bold enough (he asked) to prophesy that at any given time the thunder-clap shall not ensue?"

If the thunder-clap of war should ever break, his lordship declared, it will give us no warning! Our fate will depend upon our state of readiness when the storm-cloud bursts, and on the preparations we have made in time of peace! His lordship did not think the outburst was to be expected momentarily, but he felt that the vast armaments of the foreign Powers which are continuously growing were "a constant and steady danger." The cause which would precipitate it, he observed, was not the desire of the chiefs and rulers of the nations for war, but those "great waves of popular sentiment sweeping over the nations of Europe. No one knows (he added) what impulse they may give to the councils and to the rulers whom they seem to obey, but whom they in reality govern."

Surely in saying this Lord Salisbury was involuntarily referring to the "determinations" of the God of Israel, as described in Zeph. iii. 8, R.V. where he said; "My determination is to gather the nations, that I may assemble the kingdoms, to pour upon them Mine indignation, even all My fierce anger, for all the earth shall be devoured with the fire of My jealousy." The impulse which Lord Salisbury is sagacious enough to see will not issue from the rulers of the Continent, but be the result of great waves of popular sentiment "from the democracy who really rule," is as near an approach to the idea of God's overruling Providence as we can expect from a purely secular statesman. The instrumentality needed to give effect to the Lord Jehovah's determinations" thus is ready and prepared! The nations are gathering for war. Causes in abundance are ready waiting to light up the horrid flames, and only the word from on High giving effect to the Divine determination is wanted now to launch the storm-clouds upon "yonder ill-consolidated Europe," and plunge the nations who dwell therein, into the terrors and horrors of an earthquake such as there was not since men were upon the earth, so mighty an earthquake, so great!" Meanwhile, how are God's people, British-Israel, faring? Lord Salisbury seemed to strike a note of warning for us, and told his hearers at Derby that if the British happened to be involved in these calamities, our fate would depend on "the preparations we had made in time of peace." Herein his lordship was in error, because he was ignorant of the fact that the British are Israel, and heirs therefore of peculiar and splendid promises, which will safeguard them in the time of coming peril that is to destroy the nations of the Continent but preserve the chosen ones in the awful wreck of Empires. Besides this, there are the other promises of God to which Lord Salisbury, as a British statesman, of course could not venture to allude in an assembly of Israelites who publicly will not recognise their Maker's hand in any of their concerns. These promises include the gift of the Gates, and "the closed doors" thereof, which God's word declares shall be a means of safety provided at the time of peril for His people. In the very paper which recorded Lord Salisbury's speech, we have the report of Admiral G. Phipps Hornby on three of the Gates on the West and South of the Continent of Africa. The admiral declares that there are three Gates it will be absolutely needful to fortify. "I hold," he wrote, "that Simon's Bay, Table Bay and St. Helena, should each be securely fortified." Simon's Bay, he tells us, must be made secure because it is a harbour well sheltered by nature, and it is "the very haven a hostile admiral would wish for, one to shelter fighting ships and colliers." St Helena he asks for as a fortified Gate in preference to Ascension, because it is easily defensible, self-supporting and invigorating. It has in Rupert's Valley a site for a coaling station (or Gate) into which no shell can be thrown, and landing there is not interrupted by rollers more than six days in the year on the average, and that in the month of February. From the above we gather what we believe to be the fact, that Lord Salisbury's government has not taken a single step to fortify Simon's Bay, St. Helena, or the port of the Cape, Table Bay! This is the preparation he has provided for the imminent war he foresees, and his neglect is bringing home very forcibly to us that Israel dwells alone "carelessly or confidently in the Isles" (Ezek. xxxix. 6). The command, however, is, that we must "shut our doors about us" (Isa. xxvi. 20), and this no doubt we shall ere long do, if the Prime Minister be sincere, in regard to these three Gates in question, as we have done it in the case of the Indian Ocean Gates and those in the Peninsula.

Digitized by Google

For though Perim, Aden, and Singapore have not received their final armament of the heaviest guns, they are duly armed with heavy guns capable of piercing the plates of any cruiser likely to make a dash at these places in view to capture them. Bombay is adequately protected, and the verdict of men who know the fact is that, as regards India, the Indian Ocean, and the Eastern Gates, the "door-shutting" process is fairly advanced. It is true that Lord Brassey, who has just returned home in the Sunbeam, gives a very poor account of the defences of some of the Gates, but we trust the promises and purposes of God more than our naval, military and governmental authorities. Lord Brassey wrote thus:—

PORT DARWIN.—An important strategical position; remains absolutely defenceless.

MAURITIUS,—Few defences begun. Graving dock needs enlarging. Telegraph-cable communication wanted, and a line of steamers. Manning of works still awaits solution.

THE CAPE.—Nothing done at Table Bay. Works at Simon's Bay well advanced; to be armed with obsolete muzzle-loaders of short range.

ST. HELENA.—New works in progress; guns not yet to hand.

ASCENSION.—Naval stores worth £50,000 practically undefended.

SIERRA LEONE.—Works of defence in active progress.

The St. James's Gazette comments thus on the above:—

Lord Brassey has been round the world to look at the defences of the coaling ports and Colonial stations, and the more he sees of them the less he likes them. He finds that Port Darwin, the key to North Australia, would be at the mercy of the first hostile cruiser that cares to call. Simon's Bay is defended by obsolete guns and works, and Table Bay is not defended at all. St. Helena is naked and unprotected; Mauritius still needs much strengthening. Yet if we lose St. Helena, the Cape, and the great island in the Indian Ocean, we lose our alternative sea route to the East. All this is most true.

Such is the pessimist view of a secular writer, who cares not for Our Identity and the promised blessings it brings with it. But God said, "Thy seed shall possess the Gate of his enemies," and we believe the Word of the Lord, that it shall be even as He said! War will come, no doubt, but He will ordain peace for us, keeping us safe as the apple of His eye in our fortified Gates and in our locked-up "Chambers," according to the prophecies! Israel may therefore continue to live "confidently in her Isles," trusting in the Lord and praising His glorious name!

A CORRECTION IN REGARD TO QUETTA.

THE following appeared in the Times, of Dec. 12, as part of the India telegram of that day:—

"Allahabad, Dec. 11.

"There is no foundation for the report which has obtained currency that Quetta has been made an integral part of British India and formed into a Chief Commissionership. No change has been made in the status of Quetta, which has merely been raised from a second to a first-class agency consequent upon routine changes at the Indian Foreign Office."

Our remarks on the report in question on p. 486, Vol. XI., were founded, we thought, on good authority. What reliance can be placed on the contradiction we now republish we cannot yet state. But one thing is clear. Israel's hand is upon the territory, and her capital is being largely spent upon the spot. If the report be premature, we know at any rate that the country, if not yet fully annexed, is never likely to be relinquished. Between such occupation as exists, and annexation outright, the distinction is rather fine. But we are glad to publish the correction, however, and ask our readers to note it.

A POLICY OF WISDOM.

By J. G. TAYLOR.

THE person and attributes of God are confessedly surrounded with mystery. His revealed word is full of mysteries. Creation is crowded with them, and so is Providence. We may not, therefore, feel surprised when it is declared that Israel—His masterpiece—is associated with a mystery. It is strange that theologians have made no serious essay to ascertain the nature of this mystery. The number of the beast seems to have monopolised their curiosity, and exhausted their speculative powers. Those who identify Israel with the British races are satisfied that they understand the Apostle's allusion better than the generality of people, but are we able to account for the mystery and expound the rationale of it? Why was it that the Ten Tribes were blinded at all? This is a question which often prompts itself, and one which is put to us in a variety of shapes by the gentlemen of the opposition. The idea that Israel should have forgotten her ancestry is laughed at by many, and denounced by some, as a fanatic's dream. But the more sober disbeliever remonstrates thus: If we admit the Identity we have to admit the extraordinary theory that Israel was allowed to lose the knowledge of her lineage, and this is scarcely credible, for what possible object could God have had in bringing about so abnormal an event?

We shall endeavour to answer this. Of course it is not the distinctive office of Anglo-Israelites to unravel or defend the mysteries which God has seen fit to form. We are not sufficiently familiar with the Divine mind to explain dogmatically why He should have blinded Israel as to her descent. It is enough for us to read that she had to be so blinded (Isa. xliii. 8, xlii. 19, xlii. 16), and her paths hedged up with thorns. But, apparently, it is not enough for our opponents, and we are willing to admit that their attitude is logical, since no act of God is causeless or useless. If, then, we can discover any practical reason for the eradication of her origin from the memory of Israel we shall not only rebut a very plausible argument, but add a further page to the ever-growing volume of evidence in support of Our Identity. Probably there were numerous reasons, but we will submit three, and affirm that the blindness referred to was imposed as a punishment, a precaution, and a preparative.

1. As a punishment. Israel had come to worship Abraham rather than God, and, judging by their social life, they expected the covenanted blessings to flow in upon them regardless of that righteousness which exalts a nation. Nobility of ancestry, and a complete dependence on it for Divine favour, led on the one hand to a supreme contempt for the Gentiles, and on the other to a widespread adoption of heathenish customs pleasing to their idolatrous inclinations. Both of these vicious symptoms found an appropriate punishment in the Gentilising process. The scornful and birth-proud Israelite was lowered to the level of those he had misvalued, as it is written, "I will turn their glory into shame." And half-paganised Ephraim, who preferred the cruel ceremonies of Moloch to the mild ritual of Sinai, was cut off from Moses, and cast to the idols after which he hankered: "Ye are not My people, and I will not be your God."

2. As a precaution. Had we been conscious of our origin we should also have been conscious of our destiny, and that consciousness would have interfered with the spontaneous and untrammelled development of prophecy. This is as clear as noontide. If Moses had known from his youth that he was the great deliverer and law-giver of Israel it would have been no advantage either to himself or to the slow and orderly purposes of God. Had David heard from his infancy that he was Israel's mightiest monarch he would not have been content to control sheep and carry cheeses. The past career of Ephraim furnishes us with an example of the effect produced by this kind of prescience. Ephraim was made aware of his eminent position among the tribes, and it conduced to discord, turbulence, and rebellion. History would certainly have repeated itself in this respect. Conversance with our appointed supremacy would have engendered restless and reckless ambition on the part of the public, together with unnecessary wars and premature aggression on the part of the government. Tempered by the modern spirit of Christianity that peril has quite disappeared, and coincident with this we see the Identity being gradually unfolded. But in days when nations were so many bandits, and the heinousness of warfare was totally unperceived, intimacy with our future would have incited to bloodshed and an incessant snatching at the inheritance. But beyond that, Israel having striven to work out her lot, she would be disposed to entertain the thought that her own right arm had gained her the victory, or at least that it had earned an honourable share of the laurels. And the atheist would hasten to concur therein. He would maintain that we had set an ideal empire before us, and by virtue of conviction and tenacity had fought our way to it, as Mahomet had done in advance of us. In this fashion the supernatural element would have been eliminated, and the grand aim of Israel's resurrection entirely frustrated. The whole force of Anglo-Israelism is in the fact that God has moulded us in absolute ignorance to ourselves—driven us along the prophetic rails not merely in ignorance, but frequently in direct antagonism to the popular wishes. This is Our Identity pure and simple, and the staggering message which will come like a thief and a thunderbolt on the infidel camp. But again the knowledge of our Israelitish origin and aspirations would have exercised a baneful influence on our external relations. Let us suppose there was a nation in the midst of us imbued with the belief that it had a claim to the heirship of the world, determined to possess the Gates of her enemies, the ends of the earth, and the desolate continents, and insisting on its prerogative of inheriting the Gentiles—that nation would have a miserable existence. The very suspicion that it harboured these sentiments would suffice. Its every word would be distrusted, its every step hampered, and its diplomacy systematically counteracted. We venture to pronounce that if our Hebrew extraction were bruited abroad to-morrow, and its consequences appreciated, there would be an immediate confederacy against us. Europe would strongly object to literal fulfilments, and by means of cannon and cavalry would try to persuade us that prophecy should be interpreted in a spiritual sense. Fortunately for us the revelation is to take place at a time when Europe will have something else to do.

Digitized by Google

3. As a preparative. The blinding of Israel was an imperative preliminary to the task of universal evangelisation. Recognition of our race would have been an enormous hindrance. God's dealings with the Jews will help us to apprehend this. Paul states that through their fall salvation came unto the Gentiles, and how? The usual answer is, That the Gentiles might receive the offer of the Gospel. The explanation is absurd. Is the Gospel too cramped for Jews and Gentiles in common? Or do theologians imagine that if the Jews had embraced the Gospel it would not have been preached to the Gentiles? On the contrary, its apostles would have gone out in hundreds instead of tens. The Jew was fated to refuse the Gospel, not that the Gentiles might have the offer of it, but that they might be enabled more readily to accept the offer. If the Jews had believed on Christ and erected Christianity into the established Church, its ambassadors would have poured forth over the Roman earth; but with small chances of success. The world would have looked upon their propaganda as the attempt of a petty Syrian province to thrust its religion on mankind for selfish ends. It would have closed its ears. But Judea having spurned Christ, the local character of Christianity was removed, and the imperious Greek and Roman could therefore accept of it without doing homage to a people whom they intensely despised. The blinding of Israel is exactly parallel with this rejection of Judah. For, not to speak of Russia and the nations that hate us, how could our missionaries proceed to even friendly States or heathen countries and proclaim, "Our Ezekiel says this, our Jesus did that, and our Paul has commanded the other?" Racial prejudices would to a large extent have nullified their efforts. National antipathies and susceptibilities would have blocked the progress of the Gospel at every turn. To ensure a willing reception for the tidings of which we were and are the bearers it was expedient that our Israelitish origin should be hid from the world, and, obviously, to accomplish this it was requisite to hide it from ourselves.

Having replied to the questionings of our critics, and shown the vital need for Israel to temporarily lose sight of her ancestry, we are now entitled to ask them how they would have arranged matters, provided the matters had been given them to arrange? Would they have permitted Israel to remain cognisant of her true lineage? If so, are they prepared to deny that the difficulties just enumerated would have ensued? No unbiassed thinker (we are persuaded) will assert that the dangers we have indicated are either unreal or exaggerated. They lie on the surface, and constitute a Gordian knot which nothing but Omniscience could have untied. Our contention may be condemned as folly by the shallow sciolists, who safely soliloquise in the religious press, and explode the Identity in their well-protected columns. But sooner or later—and not for the first time—they will learn that God's folly is wiser than the wisdom of men, and they will then have to concede that the sealing of Israel's eyes was no fable or unintelligible freak, but a cardinal and indispensable portion of the Divine Administration.

THE REV. DR. WILD'S SERMON ON THE FUTURE BENEFIT TO COME OF THE ANGLO-ISRAEL FAITH.

The Rev. Dr. Wild, on Sunday, Oct. 2nd, preached at the Bond-street Church, Toronto, a second sermon on the Cui bono? question. He took for his text Jer. xxxiii. 14, and considered the future aspect of the case. "Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will peform that good thing which I have promised unto the House of Israel and to the House of Judah." He began by sketching the separate careers of the two Houses. Israel was carried captive to Assyria (2 Kings xvii. 6, 24), Judah afterwards to Babylon (2 Kings xxv.) Israel never returned; but became God's castaways, wanderers among the nations; but they had many promises of future restoration (Zech. x. 6; Jer. iii. 12; Hosea i. 9, 10, 11; Jer. iii. 8, 14; Hos. ii. 16). The preacher noticed that at present God's promises were beginning to be fulfilled in our nation. We are nearer to God as Israel than when we held slaves and carried on the slave business. Yes, and God will come nearer unto Israel and fulfil His promises." "What are His promises?" Dr. Wild described them thus. 1. Multitudinousness. 2. Increase of the beasts of the field, of the fruits of the orchard and of the grains. We have all these, he contended; and "if you were not Israel," he added, "you would have to suffer the consequences by failing to enjoy these gifts." Because of our origin we experience no famines like other nations who have no such guarantee. It is a good thing to be the chosen of God, was the preacher's next point, and, quoting Isa. xli. 8, he remarked very justly, how splendid a blessing it was to be "the friend of God!" "Yet some are vexed because they come of the friend of God! It is astonishing!" We are a nation under God's special care and favour. Surely that is a good thing! Isa. xliv. 21 promises this blessing to His people, and British history, no less than Hebrew history, has told us that all along God's hand has been with our nation, never forgetting us, guarding, guiding, blessing us! We are God's agent to carry out His wise will in the world. Their's is the burden of carrying it out for Him! "He furnishes us the means to carry out His wants. He gave us the isles of the sea, great continents, and the money flows into our lap so that we can do just as He wants." Speaking of the late Lord Beaconsfield, Dr. Wild remarked as follows:—

Digitized by Google

"The late Lord Beaconsfield was a believer in the theory, and shaped his foreign and home policies agreeable to it, and with all his defects there never was a man so successful as a leader of the British Empire. He saw the importance of the Suez Canal, and made a private bargain and purchased the controlling shares in it, against the wishes of his own cabinet, and against the government of the people. Why? That highway, he said, we must have for Egypt and India. We must have no superior Power there, for the Hebrews, as he called them, must control the East. Now, in that disturbance we had in Egypt, if France had the controlling shares she would have stopped the canal. He believed in the Ten Lost Tribes' theory. It has saved us millions of money and some humiliation. You take him with regard to India. Against his cabinet he proclaims Her Majesty as Empress of India, and see the effect upon that people! They demanded that they should see the heir, and the Prince of Wales went to them. It has bound them to us with a loyalty nothing else would have done. He did this because he says in his early writings, even in his novel tinkering, forty years before he made this proclamation, he said that the Queen of England would be the Empress of India. Look at the advantage it has been! It has quieted India and brought its people more closely to us. It did not cost much, only the printing and proclamation of it. Is it of any advantage to believe in this theory? Then again see the Russia-Turkey war, when Turkey lay bleeding at the feet of Russia. Who steps in to save Turkey and save Constantinople from the paws of the bear? He does. He bids the Russians to go back, and thus he leaves Constantinople free. He formed his policy in the line of this theory. It does not belong to Russia, it is to come into the hands of the Hebrew race. Then again, by some craftiness he managed to get from Turkey the Isle of Cyprus, which in Scripture is called the Isle of Chittim, and is a rendezvous for Britain in the time of the battle of Armageddon. He got it for us. It is a prosperous isle, paying its way, and he got it without paying a cent. Is it an advantage to be of Israel?"

The political aspect of the question engaged Dr. Wild's attention, and in respect to that too he had a good word to say. He declared:—

"This theory makes plain and clear the line of policy for Britain, her Colonies, and the United States to pursue. Take, for instance, Imperial Federation. All but Anglo-Israelites look at this question from different standpoints, that are weaker than the point the Anglo-Israelites look from. Those ignorant of this theory look at it, in the first place, some from a commercial point, some from a military point, some from a political point, 'How is it going to serve our party?' But the Anglo-Israelite looks at it from a divine point. They see it as a divinely-appointed thing, as one of those agencies designed to work out the supremacy of Israel, and the restoration of Judah, the civilisation and Christianisation of the Gentile world. At the same time they see its commercial, military, and political advantages. With the Psalmist we can say (Psalm cvi. 5): 'That I may see the good of Thy chosen, that I may rejoice in the gladness of Thy nation, that I may glory with Thine inheritance.'

"Take the Eastern Question, and the Ten Lost Tribes' theory solves that. Palestine, Egypt, Syria, Constantinople, are by divine promise ours, and we will have them. God so designs it. Russia is working in Jerusalem through the Greek Church, France through the Latin, Turkey through Mohammedanism, and Providence through the Protestant Church, and He will win. We know beforehand who will finally possess these places. When the grand and great struggle comes at the battle of Armageddon, we can ask and believe with the Psalmist (Psalm cviii. 10—13): "Who will bring me into the strong city? Who will lead me into Edom? Wilt not Thou, O God, who hast cast us off? And wilt not Thou, O God, go forth with our hosts? Give us help from trouble, for vain is the help of man. Through God we shall do valiantly, for He it is that shall tread down our enemies." This strong city is by Jerome and other fathers interpreted Bosphorous or Constantinople. He says He will bring us there. We will triumph over the enemy; God will be on our side when that battle comes. This theory being God's plan for the civilisation and Christianisation of the world, there is as much philosophy and good sense in our working harmoniously with it as a people and empire as it is for the farmer to work and co-operate with nature, or the doctor with the laws of medicine. We need to learn and be willing, nationally and individually, to co-operate with God."

Such are the salient points of an excellent discourse on the subject of "Cui bono?" Dr. Wild writes clearly and ably on our topic; and his sermons, printed in the new series, called, "Canada's Advance" to be had of Mr. Thos. Claxton, 197, Yonge Street, Toronto, Canada, are worthy of perusal by all British Anglo-Israelites.

THE IDENTITY AND SPIRITUAL PRIDE.

By W. H. Mason.

It is often asserted, and especially by clergymen, that a belief in the Identity fosters pride and tends to confidence in a man's nationality instead of to trust in Christ. If this were true, or even likely to be so, it would be a serious matter, and would evidence something dangerous in the subject. Let us not, however, be led away by mere assertion but examine the matter, and see if this danger really exists or is ever likely to do so.

First, what is the Identity? It is the belief that the British people are the Ten-Tribed House of Israel, the people called, chosen and trained by Jehovah to be His own peculiar people, the messengers and agents of His grace and mercy to the world, to all the families of the earth. Individually, therefore, we claim to be Israelites, members of the chosen nation, and, as such, sharers in all the high duties and privileges of the nation. Does this faith foster pride and lead away from Christ?

If it do so, then the danger lies either in the principle of choice, or in the particular instance of it, or else in the mere belief in this particular instance. Our friends surely will not condemn the principle of choice, seeing how often Jehovah exercised the principle, as for instance in the case of Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Joseph, Ephraim—as individuals preferred by Him before their elders; and in the case of Israel, as a nation, certainly chosen by Him to be His own peculiar people, in preference to any and all other nations. Neither can they surely condemn the principle of choice as illustrated continually in their own case, individually, or as a body the clergy or ministry. The clergy are supposed to be called and chosen of God for the very same work for which Israel was chosen. At their ordination they profess to believe that they are so called. Is the principle of choice less dangerous in their case individually or collectively, than is that of Israel? If so, then a doubtful case of calling by God to His service is safer than a certain one. Though all clergymen on ordination profess to believe themselves called of God to the work of the ministry, surely all will admit that in many cases this is, to say the least, a mistake. In Israel's case however there is no room for doubt; it is absolutely certain that Israel was called of God to be His own peculiar people; to shew forth His praise; to be as the dew upon the grass to many peoples; to blossom and bud and fill the face of the world with fruit; to be the instruments in His hands of blessing to all the nations, all the families of the earth. For this purpose "He shewed His words unto Jacob; His statutes and ordinances unto Israel," thus bestowing upon them that which St. Paul considered the highest of all privileges, the custody of the "Oracles of God." We believe that "the gifts and calling of God are without repentance," and that when St. Peter wrote to the Diaspora and reminded them of their calling as " the holy nation, the peculiar people, called to shew forth God's praise," he shewed to them and to us that God really had not repented of His calling of Israel; that " He had not cast away His people which He foreknew," but was continuing still their training for the great work to which He had called the nation, and which could only be accomplished under, and through, the Gospel. We believe that the God of Israel, the Redeemer of Israel, still, through all the ages, was mindful of and faithful to His promise and calling of Israel; and, finding a nation to-day in possession of all the promised privileges and fulfilling the work of Israel, we believe that nation to be Israel! This is the Identity. It is simply faith in God's faithfulness, wisdom and grace! Is this likely to lead to pride? Does it not rather lead to the very opposite? No one can suppose that God chose Israel for their worthiness! He tells us Himself, by Moses and by Ezekiel, the very opposite, and by the latter assures Israel that when they in the future apprehend and realise His faithfulness and love, they will be utterly ashamed and confounded for their unworthiness. If He foresaw that this would be the effect of His choice upon the nation, may we not look for the same effect upon every individual who now through grace sees and believes that same love and faithfulness, and realises that he himself, as a member of that most unworthy but most highly favoured nation, is a privileged partaker in the same most undeserved grace? Will not this rather humble him than puff him up with pride? When a man becomes, through grace, a child of God, and believes in his sonship, does he become proud and self-righteous? How much less will this be the result when he realises that to the same free grace he owes all his high privileges as a Briton, a British-Israelite. Surely such a one will be more humble, seeing more cause for humility, than an ordinary Christian! Do not our friends both impugn the wisdom of God and discredit the effect of the reception of His grace! Do they not also condemn the practice of setting men apart for the ministry and the exercise of the work of that ministry, the natural effect of which is to lead men to the realisation of their sonship with God, and thus expose them to the danger of spiritual pride? Does the Identity lead men away from Christ to trust in their nationality as Israelites? How can this be, when we look upon Him not only as our personal Saviour but as really the " Redeemer of Israel " and its future great and glorious King? He is more, not less, to us than to the ordinary Christian, and we exalt and glorify Him more, believing and proclaiming as we do that He has fully accomplished the work the Father gave Him to do: to bring Jacob again to God, and to gather Israel unto Him. Thus believing we feel better able to rely upon Him for our own salvation than we should do if we held the commonly accepted belief that He had failed to save Israel, and that the nation specially chosen by Jehovah to be His own peculiar people had so belied His foresight, and so resisted His grace, that He had been compelled to give them up entirely, not being able to reclaim them even by the sacrifice of His Son for them. Such views of God and His Christ might turn men away from Him who if He failed in one case might fail in others. We believe however that the Psalmist spoke by Divine inspiration when he said, " He shall redeem Israel from all his sins," and that the angel spoke the truth when he said, " He shall save His people (Israel) from their sins," and finally that St. Paul also spake by the Spirit when he said, " And so All Israel shall be saved."

Digitized by Google

Thus, then, the acceptance of the Identity leads to humility, not to pride; to Christ, not away from Him; and the final issue of the Identity will in the fullest measure be, Glory to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost, the one Triune, ever-blessed Jehovah.

A LEASE of 999 years, made in the days of King Alfred, has just expired in England. The land was leased by the Church to the Crown, and reverts now to the Church of England after one thousand years.

"BRITISH-ISRAEL."

A LECTURE IN OTAGO, NEW ZEALAND.

IN Oamaru, Otago, New Zealand, a Society called " The Columba Musical and Literary Association" exists; which holds its meetings twice a month, or once a fortnight, when lectures and essays are delivered, or entertainments are given, for the benefit of the public. On July 14 last, an essay was read at the meeting of the Society by Mr. Cormack, a copy of which he has kindly forwarded to us for publication. At the conclusion of the paper comments were made on it by the Rev. Dr. Macgregor, and Messrs. C. G. Moore, R. Beattie, Dunn, and Rodger. A cordial vote of thanks to the essayist concluded the meeting, the chairman being Mr. Neill Fleming. Mr. Cormack's address was to the following effect:—

MR. PRESIDENT, LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,—The subject of my essay to-night is British-Israel. You know that much has been written about the origin of races, and those of you who have selected this branch of study, have doubtless found a great amount of pleasure in the work. Perhaps some of you have asked yourselves the question, Where did my forefathers come from? I have asked questions like that, many a time before I had made up my mind regarding the tribes we spring from. The British nation, according to all recognised authorities, consists of the following peoples, namely, the Iberians, the Welsh, the Picts, the Gaels, the Scots, the Gauls, the Jutes, the Saxons, the Angles, the Danes, the Normans—these eleven being the various tribes that landed in Britain, and became amalgamated into one nation.

Before commencing to prove that these tribes are the descendants of ancient Israel, it is necessary to ascertain what scripture says respecting the Lost Tribes. That the Israelites are a people entirely distinct from the Jews, there are few who will deny, for we cannot read the Bible without perceiving that after the death of Solomon the Twelve Tribes were divided into two kingdoms: the kingdom of Israel, of which Jeroboam was king, and the kingdom of Judah, of which Rehoboam was king.

Following their history as described in scripture we find that the Ten Tribes of Israel were carried captive into Assyria 130 years before the Jews were conveyed to Babylon. If we look at the map of the ancient world we can find their settlements on the banks of the Cyrus or Kir, a river that flows into the Caspian Sea. There they have left the same names as they gave to Ireland and Britain, when they landed in these islands and made them their future home, namely, Iberia and Albion. Now we must remember that although the Jews are a portion of Israel, the Lost Ten Tribes are not a portion of the Jews, and must never be confounded with them. The histories of the two peoples have been wide apart, and as different as they well could be.

We find in 2 Sam. vii. 10, God appointing " a place for His people Israel to dwell in, a place of their own; that they would not have to move any more, neither shall the children of wickedness afflict them any more." I think all of you will admit that it is to the Ten Tribes this promise is given, and not to Judah; as a matter of fact, Judah has not been, and is not now, in a place of her own, but scattered over the earth.

But the promises to the Israelites were, that they "were to be numerous and to inhabit the isles of the sea," islands that were North-west of Canaan, and where are such islands to be found, but in the British Islands? so that the ancient Israelites must be the modern British. In Gen. xxii. 17, it is written, " Thy seed shall possess the Gate of his enemies." There is no nation in possession of the Gates of the world but Britain; although some of the European nations would like to get a few if they could, but they are all too late. The Gates of the world have already been secured, and are to-day the sole and exclusive possession of the British nation, according to the prophecies, because the British are Israelites. The Dutch have attempted to colonise other lands, and so have the Spaniards, the French, the Germans. But where are their colonies now? They have either dwindled away into insignificant places or fallen into the hands of Britain, whose colonies are in every region of the globe. There were over thirty of Britain's colonies and military possessions represented at the Colonial Exhibition. Such facts are unique in the history of the world, and cannot be matched in ages past or present. On the Empire of Queen Victoria the sun never sets. Our Queen rules over more than nine million square miles of land, and a population of more than 315 millions. It would take up rather too much of our time to go over the names of all the different possessions, for there are about fifty-eight of them. I think if we had a map of the British Empire here, it would be a discovery to some of us, for although we all know the British are very large landowners, they add day by day portions to the Empire; but there is one Gate yet wanting, and that is Constantinople. This we shall obtain as sure as we have Egypt to-day. We have acquired all our possessions at the cost of very little bloodshed. We fight to promote trade, to maintain peace and order on the face of the earth, and for the good of mankind. If we conquer a nation it is to improve its condition in this world and its welfare in the next.

Digitized by Google

Max O'Rell, that eminent French writer on English manners and customs says, "we are a curious mixture of lion, mule, and octopus," for we feel at home everywhere in the four corners of the earth. Wise, industrious, and persevering, we never doubt our strength, and are never astonished at anything. Not one of us would be in the least moved to-night if it were possible to convince us that the loss of Israel was the finding of Britain, fulfilling all that has been foretold of Israel. For they are now doing all in their power to prepare a kingdom for their king, the Lord Jesus Christ, the King of Israel. As it is written in Rev. xi. 15: "The kingdom of this world is become the kingdom of our Lord and of His Christ, and He shall reign for ever and ever."

"One faith in God, one speech are ours,
Around the world our Empire towers,
One sceptred Queen we hail.
Beneath one flag we plough the seas,
And one in hope and destinies,
Our Union shall not fail."

If we want another proof that Britain is Israel, let us take Deut. xv. 6. Here we find Israel was to be "a wealthy nation," lending to many and borrowing from none. The British nation has lent to forty nations about 580 millions of pounds sterling, the colonies not included.

There is no promise of the Most High made by His prophets to Israel, regarding these latter days, which is not being fulfilled in the British. I would ask, how it comes to pass that we alone of all the nations show this record? Men may deny that we are Israel, but no man can deny that we, and none but we, are fulfilling the promises which were made to Israel. If the Bible be not worse than a fable, Israel—literal Israel—must have continued to exist, and must now be somewhere as a nation. In Jer. xxxi. 36, God says, "If the sun, the moon, the stars, the sea, and the waves depart from before Me, then the seed of Israel also shall cease from being a nation before Me for ever." Now the only question is, where such a great nation can be hidden away. That problem, in my opinion, is a very simple one. We know the Ten Tribes do exist. All that has to be done is to discover which people represents them. The word of God is our guide. Isa. lxv. 1, says, "I am inquired of by them that asked not for Me, I am found of them that sought Me not. I said, Behold Me, behold Me, unto a nation that was not called by My name." Consequently they must be found, not as Jews, but as a Christian nation, located geographically where God's word tells us to look for them, in isles afar off from Palestine. Read Jer. xxxi. 10, "Hear the word of the Lord, O ye nations, and declare in the isles afar off;" "And in those days the House of Judah shall walk to the House of Israel, and they shall come together out of the land of the North." Looking then for the lost nation, Northward, Westward, and in the "afar off isles," we must find Israel there a wonderfully multitudinous people, throwing off colonists to distant shores, developing into a nation and a company of nations; throwing off a great and independent people: wealthy to a degree; the very chief of nations; (Isa. xli. 9—14), reigning over many nations; yielding supremacy to none; possessors of the Bible, loving its circulation (Psalm cxlvii. 19, 20, and Isa. xxvii. 6); keeping hold of God's Sabbath days, and honouring His ten true laws as the foundation of their own. Here, then, are some of the chief marks God has put upon His people, whereby we may know them. The people here described can be none other than the British, for they respond to the description in all particulars.

If you would like me to name one mark more, read Isa. lviii. 6, there you will find who made us hate the slavery of men and become the great slave-emancipating nation of the world. We exist to deliver, to free, to bless by ruling, and to rule by blessing.

Another mark. If we be Israel we must be a missionary people, loving the souls of alien men, and going forth to tell them of the great salvation among all the nations, families, and kindreds of the earth (Isa. lxvi. 19, 20). Now, I would ask, is there a nation in the world doing this work but Britain and America? One Society in Britain is circulating throughout the world more Bibles than all the other nations put together. The British and Foreign Bible Society has spent nearly ten millions in the work of translating, revising, printing and circulating the Scriptures; while over one hundred millions of Bibles, Testaments, and portions thereof, have issued from its depôts in 267 different languages and dialects, many of which have been reduced to writing for the first time. The issues of the Society for the past year were, from the Home depôt, 2,193,000. The average issues from the London depôt alone are 5,000 volumes a day. Printing presses are employed not only in London, Oxford, and Cambridge, but in many other places, such as Sydney, Cape Town, and other centres of activity.

Having identified the British with the Ten Tribes of Israel, it is necessary to enquire into the advantages to be derived from such a connection. If we be Israel all the promises were made to the British race. From the promises one can infer that Britain will never be blotted out as the Empires of Alexander, and of Rome, or the Empire of Napoleon, have been. Neither can we fall into the condition of Venice, of Spain, or of Holland. We are to fill the waste places of the earth. We are to continue Christianising the nations of the world till their conversion shall be as life from the dead. What a glorious future is this awaiting the British race! Wherever the Israelites are to be found we know that they are to become finally one with the Jews. We can see that part of Scripture now being fulfilled, for the British were the first to admit the Jews into their Parliament as equals.

In conclusion, I will repeat that the House of Judah were never lost, but have always been known; but the lost sheep of the House of Israel, whom Christ came to redeem, and to whom our Lord told His disciples to go, were to be a nation for ever, also to be a monarchy, and an undefeated nation, a wealthy nation, a multitudinous nation, a missionary nation, the greatest nation, and high above all other nations, hid for ages, but now found in the Empire of Great Britain, agreeing and corresponding in every respect with what, according to prophecy, Israel was to be. Such tests will not apply to any other nation.

AN ANGLO-ISRAELITE.—The work entitled "Eureka" is now out of print. If you send a post-card with name and address, Messrs. Banks will forward a copy of their Catalogue containing a list of books on the subject of "Our Identity."

Digitized by Google

THE STEAMERS OF THE WORLD.

WE take the following information from the October, 1887, number of The Shipwrecked Mariner, a quarterly maritime magazine, giving interesting statistical information regarding the total number of steamers in the world, with the nationalities which own them. The journal stated what follows:—

Recent statistics show that the number of steamers existing in the world in 1886 was estimated at 9,969, of an aggregate burden of 10,531,843 tons. In the previous year the number was stated at 9,642, of an aggregate burden of 10,291,241 tons. The world's steam shipping in 1886 was thus distributed:—Iron steamers, 8,198, of an aggregate burden of 8,911,406 tons; steel steamers, 770, of an aggregate burden of 32,820 tons; and wooden steamers, 822, of an aggregate burden of 380,655 tons. Of the steamers afloat in 1885, the United Kingdom with the Colonies owned 5,792, the burden being 6,595,871 tons. The other countries of the world owned steamers in the order following:—

Germany	579	Japan	105
France	509	Greece and Turkey, each	82
Spain	401	Belgium	68
United States	400	Chili and the Argentine Republic, each ...	43
Norway	287	China and Portugal, each	27
Russia	212	Hawaii	21
Denmark	200	Mexico	15
Italy	173	Miscellaneous	50
Holland	152
Brazil	141

From the above figures it appears that, notwithstanding the great depression prevailing in the steam shipping trade, the number of steamers afloat last year increased to the extent of 327, as compared with the number in 1885.

So far the nautical journal. Our readers will at once see that the disproportion between the British and foreign steamers is immense, for in 1885 the former were to the latter, as to numbers, in the proportion of 5,792 to 3,850. The British that year had 1,942 steamers more than all the rest of the nations of the world put together. In steamers, then, as in everything else, the British (being Israel) are the "head and not the tail, above only and not beneath; and high above all the other nations of the earth," according to the prophecies (Deut. xxviii. 1, 13). Taking each nation separately, the British were in 1886 about 5,200 steamers ahead of the number possessed by Germany, the next in order of strength. Russia is nowhere in the competition, and France makes a very poor third, indeed, the United States being quite as bad! We do not wonder, reading such a list, that the carrying trade of the world is mostly in British hands, and that three-fourths of the tonnage passing up and down the Suez Canal steams under the British flag. British steamers verily are "in many waters," as Balaam declared Israel's seed should be, in Numbers xxiv. 7. Ours is the land "shadowing with wings," sails of ships, or steam of marine engines (Isa. xviii. 1), being supreme at sea, because as Israel she is possessor of the Gates (Gen. xxii. 17). Here we have, then, fresh evidence of our Israelitish origin, which is patent to the most careless observer, and obviously depends on the word of God. Such facts prove God's faithfulness, and testify that we are His people. To Him be all the glory and all the praise!

ISRAEL'S ADVANCE.

By W. L. BLORE.

I HAVE just read the article on "Malthusian's" letter to the Times in the BANNER of yesterday, and am pleased to find that you have shown the absurdity of his statement that our increased population "becomes a curse and not a blessing." He also states that the £159 "Farr value per head (Farr died in 1883) becomes a debit factor." Now "Malthusian" is absurd in these statements. Note—first from 1871 to 1881 he gives the increase of population at 11 per cent.; from 1861 to 1871 at 10 per cent.; and from 1881 to 1891 at about 12 per cent.; giving an average of 11 per cent.

The King of Israel has in His Divine Sovereignty, "multiplied the nation, has increased their joy (New Version); they joy before Thee according to the joy in harvest, as men rejoice when they divide the spoil." He has done this in a most remarkable manner in the history of His people Israel during the last generation. Eleven per cent. average increase for each of the three last decades in population, and an increase of nineteen years in the duration of life, are but two of the manifestations of His Divine Sovereignty.

Let us take first the Criminal Convictions.

In 1864 they amounted to		20,000.
1871	„	16,000.
1881	„	16,000.
1885	„	14,000.

Instead of an advance of 30 per cent. in crime between 1864 and 1885, as for increase of population, there is a decrease to the amount of thirty per cent. in these 30 years.

Then as to Education, we find that

The average attendance in 1861 was		920,000
„	1871 „	1,520,000
„	1881 „	3,270,000
„	1885 „	3,820,000

or an average of 300 per cent. between 1861 and 1885, and of 20 per cent. nearly during the last five years.

On Tuesday, December 6th, the President of the Statistical Society delivered his inaugural address, and inter alia stated that in 1875 the Savings' Banks had 3,256,000 depositors, and in 1886 they had increased to 5,320,000, or an increase of upwards of 60 per cent., and the amount deposited in 1875 was £67,600,000, whereas in 1885 it amounted to £97,700,000, or an increase of 48 per cent. for an increase of only 11 per cent. in the population. His address clearly shows that the diminution of income is affecting the larger incomes; but increasing in number and raising in value the smaller incomes; e.g., he stated that "the Report of the Royal Commission on the depression of Trade showed that they had distinct evidences that profits were becoming more widely diffused, and the number of persons who were making a profit—though the amount of the profit was smaller—was on the increase." As to income, the returns show for the last nine years an increase of 19 per cent. in incomes between £150 and £1,000; but a decrease of two and a-half per cent. nearly in incomes between £1,000 and £2,000.

Further, there has been an increase of 21 per cent. in incomes between £150 and £500; but no increase at all in incomes between £500 and £1,000.

"It resulted from this that the incomes of the people showed a most satisfactory increase."

The increase in the registered paid-up capital of all companies shows for ten years "no less than 92 per cent." There was also an increase of 90 per cent. in the number of companies during the last ten years.

In order to ascertain "whether there had been an actual increase in the number of shareholders he had taken twelve companies entirely at random," and found an increase of 80 per cent. in ten years.

Then he found that in five years houses between £20 and £30 rental increased 19 per cent.; between £30 and £40, increase 19 per cent.; and in no class of house had there been a decrease, except in those of a £1,000 a year rental and upwards.

"The investments of the aristocracy of the working classes last year touched one hundred millions."

"In 1875 there were 1,168 Provident Societies, Capital £5,600,000. Membership 480,000.

"In 1885, Societies 1,346, increase 15 per cent.
„ Capital £10,700,000, increase 80 per cent.
„ Membership, 810,000, increase 66 per cent.

"In 1875, Building Societies, 500; 1886, 2,000; increase 150 per cent. 1875, Liabilities, 21 millions. 1886, Liabilities, 53 millions. Increase 150 per cent.

"All this showed that the working classes were becoming property owners; and everybody must look with gladness upon this advancement of one of the best classes of the community.

"It seemed to him that a silent socialistic reconstruction of society was going on, which, from any point of view, seemed to be a matter of rejoicing."

Truly "Malthusian" might leave the government, and protection, and happiness of the children of Israel to the King of Israel. He is working surely and beneficially on our behalf, and we are satisfied that hitherto the "multiplication of the nation has been attended with an increase of their joy; and that they joy according to the joy of harvest, as men rejoice when they divide the spoil" (Isa. ix. 3).

Hill House, Sandown, Isle of Wight, December 8th, 1887.

Digitized by Google

NOTICES.

All communications intended for the Editor, to be addressed: "Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Clifton, Bristol.

SUBSCRIPTIONS. £ s. d.

Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free 0 7 6
Two Copies (including Double Numbers) 0 13 6
Three Copies " " " 1 0 4
Four Copies " " " 1 5 6
Six Copies " " " 1 16 4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-grand, London, to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C., or F. W. PARRY & Co., 29, Paternoster-row, London.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

Contents Bills and Show Cards may be obtained on application to the Publishers.

Advertisements should be sent to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

Prepaid Advertisements are inserted at the rate of thirty words for 1s. 4d.

VALUABLE CONSULTATION PRESCRIPTION for cure of Indigestion sent to any address for One Shilling. Part profits to Banner Free Distribution Fund.—"Identity," 8, Charlotte-terrace, Clacton-on-Sea.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

BIBLE READINGS will commence Tuesday, January 17.

A LECTURE will be Delivered in the ASSOCIATION ROOMS, 14, King William-street, Charing Cross, W.C., on THURSDAY EVENING NEXT, January 19, 1888, at 7.30 o'clock, by Miss V. M. COX. Subject: "An Attack on the Stronghold of Our Opponents." Strangers will be made welcome.

JAMES BILLINGTON, Sec.

THE ANNUAL VOLUME

OF THE

BANNER OF ISRAEL

IS NOW READY.

Price, in Handsome Blue Cloth, Gilt, 8s., Post Free for Postal Order.

Forms a handsome present. Useful for presentation to Working Men's Institutes, Libraries, etc., etc.

Price 1s. 6d.

CASES FOR BINDING

THE YEARLY VOLUMES.

ROBERT BANKS AND SON, RACQUET COURT, FLEET ST.

Price Sixpence.

ISRAEL'S HOPE & DESTINY.

Edited by DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, J.P.

QUARTERLY PART NOW READY.

CONTENTS.—Eighteen Hundred and Eighty-seven.—The Teaching of the Writers in the "Silver Morn." By J. T. Crosthwaite.—To D. A. O., Christmas, 1887. By Hecla.—The Gentilisation of Israel. By the Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A.—The Britons and the Epistle to the Hebrews. By the Rev. Herbert Marriott, M.A.—The Messianic Symbolism of the Well. By F. Gass.—The Throne of the House of Israel. By the Editor.—In Defence of our Methods. By J. G. Taylor.—Is the Conversion of the Jews at the Present Time Scriptual? By George Dimbleby.—Reviews.—Correspondence.

EIGHTH VOL. NOW READY.

Demy 8vo., Handsome Cloth Gilt, price 3s. 6d. Post Free for Postal Order.

R. BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-st., E.C.

Ready at Advent. Price 6d., by post 6½d.

Old Dogmas From New Aspects.

By Vox Feminæ Auriculæ Hominis.

Contents: . The Apostolic Succession. 2. The Apostle Peter. 3. The Successor of Judas Iscariot. 4. The Athanasian Creed. 5. The Trinity. 6. Eternal Punishment. 7. The Great Tribulation. 8. The Great White Throne. 9. The Atonement of Jesus Christ.

H. E. Hill, 60, Nevill-road, Stoke-Newington, London N.

Dr. JOSEPH WILD'S WORKS

NEW EDITION JUST PUBLISHED.

THE LOST TEN TRIBES

Price 3s., post free 3s. 3d.

"We have much pleasure in directing attention to this handsome volume. . . We promise our readers that if they procure this work, and will peruse it, they will find 'Our Identity' discussed in a clear, novel, racy, and from an American point of view, which is sure to interest."—Banner of Israel.

THE FUTURE OF ISRAEL AND JUDAH.

Price 2s., post free 2s. 3d.

LONDON: ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet Court, Fleet Street, and all booksellers.

Just Published, crown 8vo., elegantly bound in cloth. price 3s. 6d.

BRITAIN in HISTORY:

ANCIENT AND MODERN.

Or, Proofs Linking Israel with Britain Throughout the Ages.

BY MRS. G. A. ROGERS,

Author of "The Coronation Stone," "The Star-lit Crown," &c., &c.

London: J. NISBET & Co., 21, Berners-street, W.; ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, who will send a copy free by post on receipt of P.O; and to be had of all Booksellers.

THE MESSENGER, 1888.

NOTICE.—In the January number of this Magazine is commenced

A NEW AND IMPORTANT WORK

bearing on the Identity of the British People with Lost Israel, and entitled

"RUSSIA JAPHET,"

Treating of the History, Geography, and Destiny of the Peoples subject to the Czar.

By "OXONIAN,"

Author of "Israel's Wanderings," &c.

Price 6d., post free 7d.

London: F. W. Parry & Co., 29, Paternoster-row.

Fifteenth Thousand.

BY REV. HENRY ROE.

Israel's World. Origin and Destiny of British Race, Colonies, and Empire. 2d., post free 2½d. Fifty post free from H. Roe for 4s. 9d.

Philo-Israel says: "I am perfectly delighted with your pamphlet."

C. E. Priestly, Esq., says: "For its size I never read a better work. I have given away two lots of fifty each, and enclose money for fifty more. I have sent it to clergymen, bishops, and archbishops."

Rev. Thomas Lowe says: "What the works of Mr. Hine failed to do in my enlightenment, 'Israel's World' has accomplished. I now read the Scriptures in a new and vivid light."

Going to Africa. 1s., post free 1s. 1d.

Fernando Po Mission. 1s., post free 1s. 1d.

West African Scenes. 2s., post free 2s. 2d.

Consecration. 2d., post free 2½d.

50 post free from H. Roe for 4s. 9d.

Robert Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.; and Rev. H. Roe, Dawley, Salop.

The Woman Clothed with the Sun.

Divine Revelation re-opened as foretold (John xvi. 12; Daniel xii. 4; Rev. x. 4, etc.). Entirely new light thrown on Bible and Pyramid, and on the Divine plan for the latter days—and offered first to Ephraim-Israel.

Part 1, 2s. 6d.; Part 2, 5s.

FIELD & TUER, The Leadenhall Press, E.C.; Simpkin, Marshall & Co.; Hamilton, Adams & Co.

HUMAN LIFE.—FIFTY YEARS' Record of Facts, Principles, and Discoveries (just published, complete) Relating to the Improvement and Preservation of Human Life on Earth. Origin and true treatment of diseases. A series of articles by DR. SAMUEL BIRLEY, M.D., Ph.D. Book form, 50 pages. SENT FREE to every applicant by the publishers, GORDON B. MURRAY & CO., 50, Theobald's-road, Holborn, E.C. Write to-day.

WORKS BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

The Geography of the Gates. With Map and six full page, and one double-page, Illustrations, printed on plate paper. 208 pages, in handsome cloth, gilt. Price 3s. 6d., post free 3s. 10d.

The History of the House of Israel. How They Were Lost and How They Were Found. Told for the children. Price 6d., cloth 1s.; post free 7d. and 1s. 1d. Fifth edition.

A Resume of the Scriptural Argument, Proving the Identity of the British Race with the Lost Ten Tribes. Price 1d.; 6s. per hundred, postage 6d.

Our Identity: What it is Not; What it is; and Our Obligations To-day in Respect to it Being a Lecture recently delivered in London by Philo-Israel, and published by special request. Price 2d., a reduction for quantities.

Are the English People the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel? An Inquiry Establishing the Identity of the British Nation with the Lost Ten Tribes. 4d.

Robert Banks & Son, Racquet Court, Fleet Street, E.C.

LUNG SAVE YOUR LIVES BY TAKING TONIC
LUNG OWBRIDGE'S TONIC
LUNG LUNG TONIC TONIC
LUNG THE MIGHTY HEALER. TONIC
LUNG It has a power over disease hitherto TONIC
LUNG unknown in Medicine. TONIC
LUNG Are you at all Weak-chested or inclined TONIC
LUNG to be Consumptive, with just a touch of TONIC
LUNG Cough now and then? TONIC
LUNG "Try this Wonderful Medicine." The TONIC
LUNG Cough and Weakness will disappear as TONIC
LUNG if by magic, and you will feel a strength TONIC
LUNG and power you never had before. TONIC
LUNG HAVE YOU A COUGH? TONIC
LUNG A DOSE WILL RELIEVE IT! TONIC
LUNG HAVE YOU A COLD? TONIC
LUNG A DOSE AT BEDTIME WILL TONIC
LUNG REMOVE IT. TONIC
LUNG Bronchitis & Asthma it relieves instantly TONIC
LUNG The Spasms of Coughing so dreadful in TONIC
LUNG Whooping Cough become less with each TONIC
LUNG dose of the medicine. TONIC
LUNG TONIC
LUNG Prepared by W. T. OWBRIDGE, Chemist, Hull TONIC
LUNG Sold in Bottles 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d. TONIC
LUNG and 11s. by all Chemists and Patent TONIC
LUNG Medicine Vendors. Wholesale all London TONIC
LUNG and Provincial Houses. TONIC

CARBOLINE

1/6 (TOOTH PASTE). 2/6 per Pot.

Is the most complete Cleanser, Preserver, and Beautifier of the Teeth, perfectly harmless, but marvellous in effect. By its use Toothache and Tartar are prevented, decay arrested, colour improved.

DISEASE by INHALATION AVOIDED

Makers:

GEORGE & WELCH

CHEMISTS, WORCESTER,

Who will forward Free of Postage.

PRICE 21s., POST FREE. HARNESS' WILL LAST FOR YEARS.

ELECTROPATHIC BELT.

An agreeable, natural, and certain remedy for Rheumatism, Lumbago, Sciatica, Nervous Affections Sleeplessness, Paralysis, Indigestion, Constipation, Liver and Kidney Disorders, Ladies' Ailments, &c.

SEND POSTAL ORDER OR CHEQUE FOR 21s. FOR AN Electropathic Belt (post free), and you will have an effectual and marvellous remedy always at hand. Harness' Electropathic Belt promotes Health, Strength, and Energy.

Thousands of Testimonials received. Write for copies or call and see the originals.

Pamphlet and advice free of charge.

The Medical Battery Company, Limited,

52, OXFORD ST., LONDON, W.

Corner of Rathbone Place

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. F. W. PARRY (late GUEST & Co.), 29 PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, JAN. 18, 1888. [All rights reserved.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."

(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. XII., No. 578. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 25, 1888. [PRICE ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

PAGE

Our Wealth 37
A Further Expansion of the Empire 38
The Jew First 39
My People Love to Have it so 40
The Utter Isolation of Britain Among the Nations 41
The Speaker of the House of Commons on the Bible and the British Empire 42
A Few Words Concerning Manasseh 43
Israel's Progress 43
Correspondence 43

OUR WEALTH.

WE are not about to glory in our nation's prosperity, or to exult in the enormous riches we possess. On the contrary our object is always to show that in respect to our nation's wealth it is simply the gift of God. "He giveth us power to get wealth," and He told us that in Deut. viii. 18. But why? That He might establish His covenant which He sware unto our fathers, as it is this day. What was that covenant? Gen. xxii. 17, 18, describes it. God gave it to Abraham and his seed by oath, and because He could swear by no greater He sware by Himself that He would bring it to pass. This is the covenant in question. "In blessing I will bless thee, and in multiplying I will multiply thy seed as the stars of heaven, and as the sand which is upon the sea shore, and thy seed shall possess the Gate of his enemies, and in thy seed shall ALL the nations of the earth be blessed; because thou hast obeyed My voice." A glorious and a splendid cluster of blessings! Let our readers' ponder over them, and ask themselves how such a rôle as this could be nationally performed by Abraham's afterseed without money? Impossible! Therefore God, who knew the fact, promised Israel "the power to get wealth;" in order that He might Himself establish that covenant which, as we see, He sware unto our (Israelite) fathers, as it is this day. The question now arises, Is it so this day? Nay, is it not? What nation is richer than the British? To whom are the purse-strings of the continent proverbially declared to belong? Is it not to the Jews? The British and the Jews, then, have the power to get wealth, and that without any manner of doubt. We were speaking lately to one of the Americans employed at the Wild West show in South Kensington, London, and commented on the fact that the American United States were a wealthy nation. "Nay," he replied. "The British possess the wealth of the world. They are the great money owners, and here is the counting-house of the globe. The money," he added, "is here!" Our New Orleans friend was quite right. The Americans are enormously indebted to the British. They are, as the Standard wrote on Sept. 14 last, "permanently and enormously in our debt, and we can control their operations in gold by ceasing to buy their securities, or by selling back to them those previously bought and paid for." In the list of debts due by the nations generally to the British, as computed by the Messenger, and quoted at p. 141 of last year's BANNER, we find the indebtedness of the United States to Great Britain thus stated:—

Louisiana, U.S., 1874	£900,000.
Massachusetts, U.S., 1866, 1875 ...	1,236,000.
Mississipi, U.S., 1831, 1838	1,200,000.
New York City, 1872, 1875	331,000.
United States 1876, 1882	14,942,000.
Virginia U.S., 1854, 1882	2,093,000.
Total	...£20,702,000.

Over twenty millions sterling, then, is what the United States have borrowed of the Ten Tribes of Ephraim-Israel, but never have we borrowed from Manasseh! even the smallest sum! "Thou shalt lend unto many nations, but thou shalt not borrow," is true of the House of Israel even as respects their brethren of Manasseh. They borrow of us, but we never borrow from any, not even from our own brethren of the House of Joseph! So literally is the word of God true even as to the jot and to the tittle. But as the Standard explains, "The whole world is in debt to the British people," and therefore we are able to command the pecuniary supplies of the world, and attract to ourselves their wealth. "Nations," the writer says, "must either pay or break; and most of them are as yet so far from breaking point, that there does not appear to be much reason to fear coming storm rates." "It is the constant tendency everywhere for money to come here, because we hold a similar position everywhere to that we hold in respect to the United States, and the extent and amount of the fresh foreign investments of the English people are the only influences in operation which prevent the country from being glutted with bullion." That is to say, that such is our wealth, so exuberant, so enormous, that we attract to ourselves the gold of the whole earth, and we should have a great deal too much of it if we did not fulfil prophecy by "lending it to many nations," and therefore never requiring to borrow it from them (Deut. xv. 6).

When the bank rate, then, goes up, the result is that our gold accumulates here, and we do not send it abroad to the borrower; when our bank rate is high our colonies refuse to borrow, waiting for the fall. Unable to borrow, our world-wide debtors, to pay their interest due to us (or their principal) must send cash instead of goods (if the latter fall short) in discharge of their debts due on drafts, and hence our position as a weathy nation is unique, and our national bank is never in want of money, but can get it whenever it requires to attract it from the four quarters of the globe. Verily God has given us "the power to get wealth," and the power is ours only because we are Israel! Can anyone declare this is a chance fortuitous circumstance, accidental in its character? If this be a mere coincidence then what do our opponents, and our clergy as the chief of them, say to our British possession of Israel's blessings of the multitudinous seed? of the nation and company of federated nations? of the Gate of our enemies? of the Word of God, of the Sabbath, of the ten true laws of God, of the evangelising function? Are these all fortuitous coincidences? and are God's sworn promises "to Abraham and his seed for ever," to be thus frittered and explained away, and the accumulation of blessings guaranteed to Israel only, be admitted to be the possession of an alien non-Israelite race, without dishonour done to the faithfulness of the Lord? Surely our opponents must see that their objections are futile, and that in the face of the accumulated evidence we adduce, their position is as reasonable as that of Paley's opponent whom he described as maintaining that the works of a chronometer were the fortuitous gathering together of wheels, accidentally combined to form what is a wonder of science in the department of Horology.

Digitized by Google

We conclude with some remarks which the Spectator, already alluded to, made on the subject. They are not without comfort to us as a nation:—

It so happens, that every year the brunt of the gold demands, no matter whence they come, falls more and more exclusively on London. At present we may say this is the only open market where the metal can be freely bought by all comers. There are only four great Money Markets in the world—London, Paris, Berlin, and New York, and three of these are, at present, nearly useless as international gold markets. Paris cannot sell gold freely without endangering the national credit and the entire fabric of its fiduciary circulation. Berlin cannot sell it because the German Government keeps full coffers as one of the best of preparations for war; and New York is at present a needy market, eager to buy gold to prop its enfeebled credit. Thus the entire strain of the demand, whether from New York or from any other part of the globe, falls on London, where the law insures gold payments to all comers. "It is a tremendous strain to put upon the city," people often say. "Some day the Market will break down under it." No doubt that is true, and hence the ready fears. It is important, however, to bear in mind that there are compensations to us in holding this post of danger, and that always hitherto the strength these compensations give, has saved us in the darkest of times from financial extinction. It is certain that they will do so again, and that if mischief does not arise outside England, the Money Market here will ride through the storms of Autumn and Winter tolerably scathless, whether the bank rate be five per cent. or six. There will be much inconvenience and loss, but nothing worse.

So far the journalist. Prophecy gives us the same consolation. For the matter is in the Lord's hands. "He giveth us power to get wealth;" and the object of the gift is, His own honour, glory and faithfulness! To Him, therefore, must be all the praise!

"Non Nobis Domine!"

ERRATA.—In BANNER, No. 576, page 24, second column, line 15 from bottom, read principle, not principles; page 25, second column, line 34 from top, insert and after righteousness; page 25, second column, line 28 from bottom, read communities, not committees; page 26, first column, line 12 from top, read nation, not nations; page 26, first column, line 36 from top, read unto righteousness, not into.

A FURTHER EXPANSION OF THE EMPIRE.

IT has been announced that a British East African Association having been formed has succeeded in securing from the Sultan of Zanzibar a concession for fifty years of a large territory, 50,000 square miles in extent, and possessing a native population of two millions of souls. This territory, which probably will, before the fifty years are over, be included in the British protected African States, is very rich in all wealth-bringing properties, and it has the advantage of a ready-made Port or Gate of entry at the sea, which is already a settled and flourishing Church-missionary station, Mombassa. The country thus added to British administrators, under the sanction of the Sultan, and with the approval of Her Majesty's Government, is under the tropics between the parallels of 3° and 5° South Lat., between the Umba and Tena Rivers, and including Mount Kilima-Njaro. The highlands in the interior of the new British territory, as well as the whole country, is described in glowing language in the Times of December 5. We must here reproduce the account:—

The region which the British East African Company has just leased for fifty years from the Sultan of Zanzibar is one of many-sided value. True, the belt immediately to the north of Kilima-Njaro and between the rich coast strip and that mountain, is to a great extent desert. This, however, is mainly due to the want of water, for, according to Mr. Joseph Thomson, the soil is of the richest character, as might be expected from its past volcanic history. The north of Masai Land, again, with its fine plateaux and picturesque mountains, its European vegetation and its numerous streams, is, perhaps, one of the most healthy and promising regions in Africa. The warlike Masai, as we know, are great rearers of cattle, and their country is admirably adapted for such an industry. The rainfall here is from 30in. to 40in. a year, and violent hailstorms are not uncommon; further south it is only 15in. Many fine mountain summits are scattered over the region, culminating in Mount Kenia, which in some respects may even rival Kilima-Njaro. Great pine forests are abundant, and Mr. Thomson felt when he was travelling among them as if he were in his native land of "brown heath and shaggy wood." Europeans, we are assured, may not only maintain their health in a considerable area of this region, but even work with impunity. "A more charming region," Mr. Thomson writes, "is probably not to be found in all Africa, probably not even in Abyssinia. Though lying at a general elevation of 6,000ft., it is not mountainous, but extends out in billowy, swelling reaches, and is characterised by everything that makes a pleasing landscape. Here are dense patches of flowering shrubs; there are noble forests. Now you traverse a park-like country. enlivened by groups of game; anon great herds of cattle or flocks of sheep and goats are seen wandering knee-deep in the splendid pasture. There is little in the aspect of the country to suggest the popular idea of the tropics. The eye rests on coniferous trees, forming pine-like woods, and you can gather sprigs of heath, sweet-scented clover, anemone, and other familiar forms. The country is a very network of babbling brooks and streams."

The Masai themselves are a fine race of people, allied to the Galla, and it will probably not be difficult to persuade them of the advisability of permitting trading caravans to pass through their country in peace. South of the Masai we merge into the great Bantu stock, the "Teutons" of Africa. The coast region is of the usual tropical richness, and if its resources are exploited with intelligent care they ought to yield a fair return. The Port of Mombassa, which may be regarded as the main outlet of the region under consideration, is an excellent commercial port, and may even accommodate a limited number of ships of war; while other good harbours exist in its neighbourhood. The area of the whole region which has thus been virtually brought under English influence may be estimated at about 50,000 square miles, and its population at about two millions.

It is not only the direct value of the region thus brought under English influence and opened up to English commerce that should be taken into account in estimating the value of the concession made by the Sultan of Zanzibar. While in itself it may prove of great commercial value, it is the highway to a region which all travellers whose testimony is of value admit is one of the richest in all Africa. The whole of the great lake region of Central Africa, including Uganda and neighbouring States, the upper region of the Nile, the plateau country round Albert Nyanza, is capable, we are told, of immense development, and is, on the whole, well adapted for European residence. True, the Congo, especially if the Wellé turns out to fall into it, will take a certain proportion of its trade; but if the east coast route be once well organised, a glance at the map will show that there is the natural trade outlet for this region. Even now Victoria Nyanza is within six weeks of the coast, and with a cheap railway it would only be a couple of days off. Emin Pasha is so confident of the trade which may be carried on with the Southern Soudan that we know he has urged his friends to send right off their caravan loads of goods. The company which has made the treaty is under the same guidance as the expedition under Mr. Stanley, and there is little doubt that Wadelai will come under their exploitation.

Digitized by Google

Here we have, then, a new opening for British commerce and emigration, in a fine healthy region, with a British Gate to depend upon, and a fifty years' lease to begin with, given us, wherein to sow the seeds of what will doubtless become in time a British possession of vast value. It forms already a fresh addition to the British Empire, and a fresh link in the great chain of British possessions in Africa, which, originating in the Gates, are all extending into the interior, in all directions, and will end in Empire. We say this confidently, because such has been the history of our Indian and South African Empires. In respect to mid-Africa it seems likely that we shall acquire our new territories there by peace and not by war, by treaties as in the present case, but not by conflict with native States and tribes. Side by side with the country now coming under British superintendence and British capital, the German nation has large portions of country equally fertile and valuable, as compared with that leased to the British company. But the Germans are poor, and their Government's support of such new settlements as those in question cannot be expected at rates which can compare with those we are accustomed to allow to our rising settlements. It is probable, moreover, that the German territory will be found to be so situated that it can only be "properly developed through lines of communication lying within the territory leased to the British company," and through the British Gate, Mombassa. Mr. Holmwood, British Consul-General at Zanzibar, who has explored the new region thoroughly, tells us that the climate "is one of the healthiest in the world, a sort of combination of the Riviera, and the bracing effects of an Alpine sanatorium." It has a rich belt of coastland, vast grazing grounds for cattle, and above all a splendid highland plateau covered with pine-like woods and European vegetation, plentifully watered, and enjoying a climate in which Europeans may live and work." Such is the new acquisition which one day will fall into and form part of the Empire! We have seen its birth and find in it all the signs of true Israelite growth. Here is a Gate on the coast already in use in the innocent and unsuspected aspect and garb of a C. M. S. Missionary station, with Frere Town hard by. Inland, there is a rich and splendid territory just suited to our race, and beckoning them to come and occupy it! A native Prince to whom the land belongs has given a British-Israelite company a lease for fifty years, of the territory, for a valuable consideration (the annual value of the present revenue, plus fifty per cent;), and lo! we have Israel in possession; dispossession somehow never afterwards is thought of; because prosperity follows, and no one can then endure the idea of checking it! God blesses Israel's rule, and "all who see them acknowledge them that they are the seed the Lord hath blessed." (Isa. lxi. 9, R.V.) We beg our opponents to note all these circumstances we have now brought to their notice, and adding to them what is taking place in the Transvaal, Delagoa Bay, and throughout South Africa, the Niger basin, and Egypt, to ask themselves who can these British be if they be not Israel?

THE Church at Bond-street, Toronto, has increased the stipend of their pastor, Dr. Wild, to five thousand dollars, thus showing the appreciation in which he is held by his large congregation.

THE JEW FIRST.

MR. GEORGE DIMBLEBY, of Hull, has returned to the charge in reply to our article published in the BANNER on April 13, 1887, No. 537, p. 154. His rejoinder appears, without editorial note or comment, on p. 249, No. 72, of the last expiring number of "Hope and Destiny," leaving thus a sting behind it on a subject vital to our Christian profession, and to the revealed purpose of the sacrifice of Christ for the sins of the whole world. Mr. Dimbleby, reiterating his views, which are those of Mr. Edward Hine, maintains that God has tied the Jew to the law and the law to the Jew, being unwilling that the latter should be converted to Christ, as proved by reference to Isaiah vi. 9, 10, quoted by our Lord Himself in Matt. xiii. 10; Mark iv. 11, 12; Luke viii. 10, and John xii. 40. Mr. Dimbleby is surprised to find that "these texts, upon which he based his argument, were not even referred to by us, because the Lord's answer to His disciples is pregnant with meaning; and to enforce it, or prevent its meaning from being misunderstood, He confirmed Isaiah's prophecy by His teaching." The Prophet's words, inspired by the Holy Spirit, were these—being the words of God, and relating to the Jews of our Lord's time, and afterwards—"Go, and tell this people, Hear ye indeed, but understand not; see ye indeed, but perceive not. Make the heart of this people fat, and make their ears heavy, and shut their eyes; lest they see with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and understand with their heart, and convert, and be healed." Our Lord enforced that by saying to His disciples (Matt. xiii. 13, 14, R.V.): "Therefore, I speak to them" (the Jews) "in parables, because seeing, they see not; and hearing, they hear not, neither do they understand;" and then He appealed to the prophecy of Isaiah, just quoted, to show that He acted as He did to fulfil it (comp. Acts xxviii. 25—28).

Mr. Dimbleby complains that we did not, on April 13, 1887, allude to these prophecies and sayings of the Lord Jesus. But herein he is mistaken. We did allude to them at the end of our remarks on p. 155, Vol. xi., when we reminded him that "the vast bulk of the prophetic testimony quite suffices to negative the idea that the Jews, as a body or mass, will be converted to Christ;" and that the object of the preaching to the Jews was not to convert them as a people, but distinctly to obey the Lord our God's commands. Mr. Dimbleby takes no notice of this argument, but quietly repeats the monstrous assertion, for which he has not a vestige or iota of proof to adduce, from one end of the Bible to the other, that God has "provided salvation for the Jews at Sinai by a perfect law given by Himself, and the conditions are simply, Obey and live." "That law and that condition," says Mr. Dimbleby, "are binding upon Judah or the Jews, but not upon Israel, who, being once under the law, are redeemed by Christ," and therefore, are no longer "under the law but under grace." In all this Mr. Dimbleby falls into error, by not taking heed to the Scriptures of the prophets. He deprecates efforts to convert the Jews, by preaching the Gospel to them, as the only way of salvation revealed unto men, and utterly ignores God's teaching, as well as our Lord's, upon the subject. In Isa. vi. 9, R.V., God told His messenger —"Go, and tell this people (the Jews), Hear ye!" Nay, says Mr. Dimbleby, that is not wise or godly counsel! God does not want the Jews to hear, and no one need "go!" Which are we to believe? God? or Mr. Dimbleby, who professes to obey God, but tells us to disobey Him, by flatly refusing to "go and tell this people"? Our Lord's example, further, ought to teach Mr. Dimbleby a lesson! Why will he not learn it? The Lord knew the purposes of His advent; and they did not include, as Mr. Dimbleby alleges, that the Jews were quite safe for salvation without His redemptive work. For what did He do? What, according to Mr. Dimbleby, was a very improper thing. "He came to His own (the Jews), and they received Him not" (John i. 11). He made them the offer of redemption and salvation, but they spurned it. And with what result? (1) They had, therefore, no right to become the children of God (John i. 12, R.V.); (2) they became the children of the devil (John viii. 44, R.V.); (3) murderers of the Son of God (Matt. xxvii. 25, R.V.; 1 Thess. ii. 15); (4) therefore obnoxious to the wrath of God, and that to the uttermost (1 Thess. ii. 16).

Digitized by Google

Is this the result Mr. Dimbleby admires and pretends is the destiny to which God has now consigned the Jews, as one He commends to them as ensuring to them salvation? Does he not read our Lord's words, which he desires us to note? In Matt. xiii. 13, 14, the Lord condemned the Jews to the condition of those who, spiritually, cannot see, cannot hear, cannot understand, and cannot perceive; whose heart is waxed gross, being wilfully deaf, wilfully blind, and obdurately opposed to the blessed Being who would have saved them had they been willing! Is Mr. Dimbleby ignorant of all this? And does he not know what the same Omniscient One said in Matt. v. 20, R.V., speaking to the Jews of the Scribes and Pharisees, the most advanced of the Jews in religious knowledge, outward show, in piety, and all that goes to make up ostensible religious character? This was His testimony: "I say unto you, that except your righteousness exceed the righteousness of the Scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in no wise enter into the kingdom of heaven." Did the Jews' righteousness, that which was according to the Law ("obey, and live"), exceed the righteousness of the Scribes and Pharisees, and so entitle them to entry into the kingdom of Jesus? Alas! let the scene at Calvary, the destruction of Jerusalem, the Jews' dispersion in misery for 1818 years, and their present obduracy, put Mr. Dimbleby to shame, and teach him that those whose condition he regards with such complacency, wrung bitter tears from his Redeemer, the tender, loving Jesus of Nazareth, and caused the Jew, Paul of Tarsus, to write what he did concerning them, in Rom. ix. 1—3, R.V. He felt for them "great sorrow and unceasing pain in his heart." He wished himself anathema from Christ for those his miserable brethren, his kinsmen, according to the flesh, who were Jews and Israelites, but not all of them Israelites, though of Israel! St. Paul's standard was different from Mr. Dimbleby's, and as to the Lord Jesus Christ's, His sorrow for the spiritual, lost condition of the Jews, for whom Mr. Dimbleby feels nothing, forced from Him the cry: "Your house is left unto you desolate. For I say unto you, Ye shall not see Me henceforth till ye say, Blessed is He that cometh in the name of the Lord!" (Matt. xxiii. 37—39).

Mr. Dimbleby seems to speak lightly of the Jews' condition under the law, and fancies anyone can easily come up to its requirements, "Obey and live." Has any one of Adam's sons done so to this day? And did not St. Paul the Apostle, a Jew and Israelite together, find its burden so heavy and crushing, that in Rom. vii., and iv. as well, he lamented his own condemnation under it, and the impossibility of appearing before God in the righteousness it could confer on a lost and ruined sinner, such as he was! If Paul could not use the law, "obey and live," how could or can the Jews? And besides, as the law pointed to the sacrifice of Jesus for sin, how can they, apart from the Christian's hope, be saved now by that which works only condemnation in the sight of God? Mr. Dimbleby entirely misunderstands the scheme of salvation and God's purposes regarding British-Israel, if he supposes, that apart from Jesus and His righteousness, any son of Adam (not excluding the Jews) can "obey it and live." They want, as we do, a better righteousness—even God's own righteousness —to be acceptable to Him; and this lesson we commend to Mr. Dimbleby as one he must speedily learn, if he would write or think correctly respecting the deplorable condition of Judah to-day, as a people under "God's wrath to the uttermost."

Mr. Dimbleby considers we "have taken up the cudgels" in this case, "being compelled to do so by reason of our connection with the Society for the Conversion of the Jews." We can afford to pass by this unworthy inuendo without remark. We write on this point from earnest conviction, and trust that the arguments from Scripture, as to which Mr. Dimbleby challenges our reply, will satisfy him that while ours is a true view, which has Scripture for its basis, his ideas have not the shadow of a shade of support in the Bible, from one end of it to the other, but rather is condemned by the Lord, by St. Paul His apostle, and by the testimony of the law and the prophets, throughout.

"MY PEOPLE LOVE TO HAVE IT SO."

THE words which appear above are a portion of two remarkable verses in Jer. v. 30, 31 (R.V.): "A wonderful and horrible thing is come to pass in the land. The prophets prophesy falsely, and the priests bear rule by their means; and My people love to have it so: and what will ye do in the end thereof?" An able sermon lately preached on these sentences applied the description and warning of the prophet to our own present times, and pointed out that the facts of our own day are exactly parallel with those Jeremiah denounced among the Jews of his time, and that the results, nationally and personally, were likely to be the same. The prophetical function and the priestly are now in abeyance, and both are represented by the ministerial body, which to-day merely teaches the people, but has no priestly or sacrificial work to perform for them God-wards.

But what do we see? said the preacher. We find "a wonderful and horrible thing in the land." The ministers of Christ's Church and people here teach false doctrine, and false doctrine inculcated from the pulpit, leads directly to priestly assumption of power and the domination of the sheep by false shepherds, who usurp the authority of Christ alone, pretend to supplant the merits of His sacrifice by sacrifices they claim to offer themselves, and absolve sins from which they have not a particle of power to cleanse the souls of sinful, deluded men. These abominations would, no doubt, have had little or no effect, said the preacher, amongst our people, were there not another fact which causes error to pervade our masses and to fly like wild-fire through the land. "The people love to have it so." The false doctrine which leads to "priestly domination" is agreeable to the people! They are ready to adopt the commercial principle of "division of labour," and to have their religion done for them by a body of (so-called) sacrificing priests who will "take God off their hands," and leave them to enjoy the world according to their own hearts' desires without reference to His commands. "The people love to have it so," and therefore the preacher drew a dark and dismal picture of the fearful gulf opening before our nation in the judgments and punishments that are sure to follow our national declension and wicked obduracy. "What will ye do in the end thereof?" he cried, pointing out the terrible fate that overtook the Jews, reminding his congregation of the condition of England before the Reformation, and asking if the people of this land desired to return to that? bidding them go also and see into what depths of spiritual ruin and wretchedness Italy, France, and Spain have fallen by permitting Rome and Roman doctrinal errors to rule their lands, so placing the rod of power in the hands of a tyrannical priesthood, to their national undoing. A personal and spiritual application of the text was also made to suit the case of those who listen with satisfaction to Popish or Ritualistic doctrines, and so rivet the chains of priestly domination over their own homes and families. "What will be the end thereof," was again the question asked, "when death draws near and the terrible account of personal responsibility has to be rendered before the great white throne?" Such was the able and faithful discourse we heard founded on the text in question.

Digitized by Google

One or two reflections we desire to make on the subject, not by way of captious objection, but in the interests of truth. To begin with, we wish to point out that the expression "My people" in the passage applies obviously not to the true believers in the Lord Jesus Christ, but to the Jewish people of the prophet's day, good and bad together, who, being "God's people," nevertheless "loved to have it so" in matters which were hateful to their God, and would end in their own eternal ruin if they persevered in their evil courses. We can point to the Church of England Book of Common Prayer for an instance of the use of this expression in a connection precisely of the same kind as that in the text. In the "Absolution" at the commencement of the service the minister declares that "Almighty God, the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ . . . hath given power and commandment to His ministers to declare and pronounce to His people, being penitent, the absolution and remission of their sins," etc. It is clear from this that "God's people" are entitled to be absolved by Him, only if penitent, implying that there may be some of His people who are not penitent, and, therefore, will not be absolved. "His people" are, in short, a race of men—the Hebrew race, both in Jeremiah's days and ours; and they may, in spite of their relationship to God, be lost. The expression is not confined either in the Bible or in the Prayer-book to "the saints," or true believers in the Lord.

The next reflection that we make is this. The preacher's text (Jer. v. 30, 31) refers, as the context shows, to the Jewish people. The British nation, if non-Israelite Gentiles, can have no part or lot in the matter, since there are no promises of mercy and no such denunciations as this in the Scriptures applicable to them, quâ Gentile nations. If, however, the British be Israel, as is the case, and as the preacher might have known by inquiry, then the denunciation in Jer. v. 31 cannot apply to them at all, since Ephraim-Israel is under a totally separate and different class of promises and punishments from those the Lord has announced regarding Judah. For instance, in the matter in question—namely, the declension of Ephraim-Israel into Popery and semi-Popery, or Ritualism, what do the Scriptures declare? Isa. lix. 19 tells us. She is to fall, and the enemy is to get the fullest advantage over her. He is "to come in like a flood." What will happen then? Will Ephraim be punished as Judah was? She will not go unpunished, but she will be "punished in measure" (Jer. xxx. 10, 11). In her case there is a full and ample remedy provided which was not offered to Judah. "When the enemy shall come in like a flood, the Spirit of the Lord will lift up a standard against him," and under that standard the adversary must, and will, fall, vanquished and slain! Nor is that all. The evil in Ephraim-Israel shall be subdued and neutralised by the gift of God's holy Spirit promised to that House exclusively, not only in Isa. lix. 21, but in Ezek. xxxvii. 14, Jer. xxxi. 33, 34, and Joel ii. 28. In Judah's case "the end" was the ruin of her polity, because she rejected the redemption of Him who "came to His own, and His own received Him not." They cried out, on the contrary, "Crucify Him, Crucify Him," and "killed the Prince of Life" (Acts iii. 15; Matt. xxvii. 22—25). But Israel was the "Lord's redeemed," who were "found of Him," to whom He cried, "Behold Me, behold Me," when they were as yet a nation "not called by His name" (Isa. lxv. 1, R.V.).

For them God provided mercy, and "the blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth them from all sin." To them "He showeth His words, His statutes and His judgments, and He hath not dealt so with any nation" (Psa. cxlvii. 19, 20), no, not even with Judah! Such being the case, we feel bound to say that while we admire the preacher's learning, his eloquence and power, in the exposition of Jer. v. 30, 31, we are unable to concur in his application of these verses to the British Church or nation (whether it be Ephraim-Israel or not), because the passage in question cannot apply to our race, as far as the implied punishment is concerned, for reasons stated already. We are, no doubt, guilty, every whit as deeply as the House of Judah. But God has decided, for reasons of His own, to treat the two Houses differently. It seems improper, therefore, to ignore His determinations on the subject, and to disdain His merciful intentions towards the House of Israel as if they never had any existence at all! That may God forbid!

THE "UTTER ISOLATION" OF BRITAIN AMONG THE NATIONS.

THE triple alliance just renewed between Germany, Austria and Italy, leaves the position of Great Britain in doubt. To the continental folks who are looking forward with dread to the coming great earthquake woe it is a matter of some moment whether the British will be on their side of the quarrel or will stand entirely aloof. They cannot understand how it can be to our interest to take no part in the conflict. They think the positon of "utter isolation" has something terrible in connection with it which must make it unbearable for us as a nation. But in thinking so they fail to realise the character of our Empire. The Berlin Post declares that "if England refuses to take part in the differences between other Powers, such conduct must in the end utterly isolate her, especially if the Franco-Russian coalition were victorious." A correspondent of one of the London papers replies to this that "the latter hypothesis is of infinitely greater interest in the first place to the Central European Powers; and in the meantime England, with her three hundred millions of subjects, will continue to regard the prospect of her "utter isolation" with considerable equanimity. "Here then is the secret of our nation's security and equanimity. The cause is an Israelite blessing promised by God Himself to Abraham's afterseed, but now in the enjoyment exclusively of the British. Our multitudinousness has brought to pass our Colonial Empire, and that is developing into a grand Federation of States, such as the world never saw before! Our Empire is self-contained, and independent of the whole world besides. We can afford to be "utterly isolated," "boycotted" by all the world outside the Anglo-Saxon race, because that race, situated in the four quarters of the earth, can supply all its own wants, and enjoy a commerce among themselves which practically makes them perfectly independent. God foresaw that when He prescribed His people's attitude during the coming "earthquake-woe," when He said, "Come, My people, enter thou into thy chambers, and shut thy doors about thee; hide thyself for a little moment, till the indignation be overpast. . . " (Isa. xxvi. 20, 21, R.V.). Here He told us that "utter isolation" was to be the chosen nation's condition; and while the foreign continental Powers see this impending to-day they do not see the reason for the thing, or how, when God prescribed it, He arranged that while it should be a bitter thing for them, we should suffer no loss by reason of our enormous numbers, and because we are "a nation and a company of nations," self-sufficent and self-contained. We have no quarrels with our neighbours, and see no reason to espouse any of theirs. For instance, we have no wish to uphold either France or Germany in their coming "war of revenge." We regret the necessity for it, but are well aware that it is inevitable as the natural result of the events of 1870. We feel no sympathy with the Russians in their desire to possess themselves of Bulgaria; but while they refrain from touching Constantinople, have no objection to see Germany, Austria, and Italy resisting Russia's military advances towards her coveted prey. These contests will not impede the road to India, Australasia, China, and the Cape Colonies. Nations are necessarily selfish, and are careful of their own but not of their neighbours' welfare when it is a question of life and death, wealth or poverty. The interest of Great Britain is to sit still and take no part in the quarrels of Europe till they touch some vital point where their own interests clash with those of one of the European

Digitized by Google

Powers. Then she must and will interfere. But if these are not threatened, why should she weaken herself to please some of her allies? and not rather let them, if they must and will, weaken themselves by their foolish dissensions, thus reducing their own power to meddle with our aims and objects and those of our "company of nations" in the four quarters of the globe. The quarrels and wars of the continent will certainly be for our nation's benefit financially, and commercially, provided only we can keep ourselves free from the entanglements of their quarrels. We see then why the Lord has given to us His people so blessed a gift as that involved in the "Peace" which He is going to "ordain" for us during the coming awful times of Europe's trouble (Isa. xxvi. 12). Peace and prosperity are to be ours, with a policy of non-intervention in war, but benevolent neutrality towards the sufferers. And yet men say to us, "Cui bono?"

THE SPEAKER OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS ON THE BIBLE AND THE BRITISH EMPIRE.

In the Times of November 3, 1887, a report was published of a meeting of the British and Foreign Bible Society held at Warwick on November 2, at which the Right Hon. A. W. Peel, the Speaker of the House of Commons, presided. A portion of his address as chairman will prove very interesting to our readers as bearing on the subject of our Israelitish origin. We cannot therefore refrain from quoting it. The speaker, no doubt, knows nothing of "Our Identity," but he spoke like an Anglo-Israelite for all that! The report was as follows:—

The Speaker of the House of Commons (the Right Hon. A. W. Peel) presided last night at a meeting of the British and Foreign Bible Society at Warwick. Having mentioned that the first Warwickshire auxiliary of the society was formed in the county town in 1821, the right hon. gentleman spoke of the romantic history of the society in disseminating the Bible in foreign lands. Up to the present time it had issued 110 million copies of the Bible and portions of the Scriptures. It commenced at home, and here were translations in Gaelic for the Highlanders, in Welsh for Wales, in Manx for the inhabitants of the Isle of Man, and in Irish, printed in native as well as Roman characters, for the people of Ireland. All this implied a very considerable amount of work, if they only looked at the circulation in the United Kingdom. But the Bible had also been published in all languages and dialects of the globe, 271 in number. . . . . The society was essentially unsectarian, and all sects might consistently advocate its claims. People spoke of the responsibilities that attached to Empire, and he admitted them to the fullest degree. The British Empire had extended in a marvellous way, and a responsibility of circulating the Bible went hand in hand with our responsibilities of Empire. (Cheers.) He then quoted from the recent article by Archdeacon Farrar statistics as to the extension of the British Empire and the increase of population. In 1837, when the Queen came to the throne, she had 130,000,000 subjects, now she had 309,000,000, while the extent of the Empire had increased from 2,000,000 square miles to 8,000,000. The increase of population in Gt. Britain alone was 10,000,000. What must be the responsibility which attached to a nation whose Empire increased at that enormous rate, and if it continued to grow at the same rate promised to become the dominant race of the globe. (Cheers). He supposed that nobody in any nation could at once understand the Bible without learning the two great commands upon which the Founder of the Christian religion told His hearers hung all the law and the prophets—the love of God and the love of neighbour. Abraham Lincoln said, "When any Church will inscribe over its altar as its sole qualification for membership the Saviour's condensed statement of the substance both of the law and the Gospel in these two great commandments, that Church will I join with all my heart and with all my soul." Dean Stanley, quoting this saying of the great American President, remarked that there might be an exaggeration in the expression, but the thing intended was true. If any Chuch existed which in reality and in spirit put forth these two commandments as the sum and substance of its belief, as that to which all else tended, and for the sake of which all was done, it would indeed take the first place among the Churches of the world, because it would be the Church that most fully expressed the mind and intention of the Founder of the Christian religion.

So far Mr. Peel. He described several of the lineaments of Israel in the course of this short speech, and declared they all applied to the British people. He stated that we were a rapidly increasing people, the rate of increase being "enormous." Israel's population was to be also of that character, as Gen. xxii. 17, Hosea i. 10, and Zech. x. 8—10 tell us. He said that the Empire of the Queen had increased territorially fourfold since the Queen's accession to the throne. So vast is the expansion of the nation that in Mr. Peel's opinion it promised "to become the dominant race of the globe." But this is the verdict of the Bible regarding Israel, which St. Paul said in Rom. iv. 13 was the "heir of the world," and Dan. vii. 27, predicts that Israel shall have bestowed upon her "the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven." Mr. Peel made one statement which, unless the British are really Israel, can have no reasonable foundation. He said that "the responsibility of circulating the Bible went hand in hand with our responsibilities of Empire." What did he mean by that? What has expansion of population and territory got to do with the circulation of the Word, apart from the duties and privileges of Israel? We can see no connection between the two things! The Chinese increase marvellously, but they are under no responsibility whatever to circulate the Bible. The Germans are numerous and increasing, but no one dreams of their being under any obligation to circulate the Scriptures? The fact is, the Speaker was referring blindly to his fellow-subjects as if they were God's chosen people Israel, to whom alone the Lord had confided the glorious duty of publishing the Word among all nations. To them He gave in charge the custody of the Word when "the kingdom of God taken from the Jews" was made over to the fruitful Ephraimite nation described in Matt. xxi. 43. With the Scriptures of truth in their hands, to them was given the commission to become a blessing to "all nations, families, and kindreds of the earth," since they were the race of whom the Lord made mention, saying, "This people have I formed for Myself, they shall show forth My praise" (Isa. xliii. 1, 7, 21; Gen. xxii. 18; xxviii. 14; Acts iii. 25). To no other Empire than Israel's (and therefore, but not otherwise, to the British) God has given the splendid privilege of circulating "the Word of truth." This our own nation, as Mr. Peel admits, enjoys that privilege exclusively. But it was only because we are Israel, we are so blessed! To enable us to carry out this function God has given our race vast multitudinousness, according to the prophecies, to end in the complete "dominion of the world," in order to bless and save it, by the knowledge and grace of Christ, our Lord.

"The love of God and the love of one's neighbour," are the two great fundamental Scriptural precepts on which the law and prophets depend. To no nation but the British has God given these two blessings in so marked a degree. They show their love of God by working for Him and doing His will. Not fully, or as they ought to do it! but in such wise, that they prove their desire to love and serve Him, nationally. And they love their neighbour, as no other nation on earth carries out that duty: by spending and being spent for the nations of the world; sending them the Gospel, the Scriptures, the Sabbath, and the means of grace; helping those in distress or want, or affliction, wherever the necessity is made known, and the cry for help comes across the ocean, to their island home. The British Church and nation then (being one) are the Church and nation of the Book. And the Book is in a special sense their Book! The nation which is so blessed cannot be other than Israel, since God has said, "He showeth His words unto Jacob, His statutes and His judgments unto Israel. He hath not dealt so with any nation, and as for His judgments they have not known them. Praise YE the Lord!"

Digitized by Google

A FEW WORDS CONCERNING MANASSEH.

When reading Mr. Weldon's very excellent lectures on "The British Nation the Remnant of Israel," I should wish (writes L. P.) to make two remarks, where the writer deals with the prophecy concerning Manasseh in particular, and the prophesied exceptional future of this Tribe of Israel as compared with the descendants of Ephraim.

I would first observe that the expressions, "the stick of Ephraim, and for all the House of Israel, his companions" (Ezek. xxxvii. 16), and again (ver. 19), "The stick of Joseph, which is in the hand of Ephraim, and the Tribes of Israel, his fellows," would seem expressly worded so as to include Manasseh, which, we may suppose, is alone the Tribe of Israel not included in Ephraim, and we believe is now a distinctly separate nation. Nevertheless many of its sons and daughters are largely associated with those of Ephraim in carrying on the work expressly allotted to Israel, of being witnesses for God among the heathen, and each year they seem drawing more and more closely to us in companionship and friendliness, such as had not been known since the States cast off our rule.

The second remark I would make is in answer to those who refer to the future, the fulfilment of God's promises to His servants Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. It surely cannot be that Manasseh is to be set up as a great nation after Israel is restored to Palestine, for then must they break away from their brethren; and God says He will make Judah, Israel, and Israel's companions one nation in the land upon the mountains of Israel, and one king shall be king to them all.

ISRAEL'S PROGRESS.

In the Gazette of the 21st October, the following appeared regarding

THE NIGER DISTRICTS.

"It is hereby notified for public information that, under and by virtue of certain Treaties concluded between the month of July, 1884, and the present date, and by other lawful means, the territories in West Africa, hereinafter referred to as the Niger Districts, are under the protectorate of Her Majesty the Queen. The British Protectorate of the Niger Districts comprises the territories on the line of coast between the British Protectorate of Lagos and the right or western river bank of the mouth of the Rio del Rey.

"It further comprises all territories in the basin of the Niger and its affluents, which are or may be for the time being subject to the Government of the National African Company, Limited (now called the Royal Niger Company), in accordance with the provisions of the charter of the said Company, dated the 10th July, 1886. The measures in course of preparation for the administration of justice and the maintenance of peace and good order in the Niger Districts will be duly notified and published."

In this manner we are gradually but surely fulfilling our rôle. "Not unto us, O Lord, not unto us, but unto Thy name give the praise: for Thy loving mercy, and for Thy truth's sake" (Psa cxv. 1).

J. S. Anderson.

Croydon, October 22nd, 1887.

Correspondence.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

Dear Sir and Brother,—May I be permitted to add a few remarks with respect to the concluding article of this week's Banner of Israel (p. 20, Jan. 4th), relative to the "objection urged by a clergyman, a Jew by birth," as to the rendering of certain passages, especially, I suppose, pointing to Hosea iii. 4. The learned doctor of the Hebrew law is evidently satisfied that there are some trivial points which might lead him to acknowledge, as a kind of link, that the English are Anglo-Israel; but, like many other Hebrew scholars, does not like to admit the iron grip the British Lion's paw has on the shoulder of the unicorn, or (John) Bull. Neither does he perceive with what a firm hold the paw of the old and young lion of Judah has upon the hearts of the English people of to-day.

Now, in reading the portion to which attention has been invited, it strikes me that the passage, in either A.V. or R.V, puts the matter very clearly before us under the light of Identity. It is first necessary to go to the foundation of the subject, and ask the following questions:—

1. Who was Israel's King?
2. Who was Israel's Prince, Captain, and Saviour?
3. Who was Israel's Sacrificial Priest and Offering?
4. Who was Israel's Pillar, upright, standing image, figure, or statue?
5. Upon whose shoulders was the ephod to be borne?
6. Who was the Teraphim, or Household God?

These questions appear to answer themselves in the following way:—

1. Israel's King is the King of kings, Ruler over heaven and earth, the Almighty, the I Am, "Jehovah," whom the House of Israel had cast off. See chap. x. 3: "For now they shall say, We have no king, because we feared not the Lord; what then shall the king do for us?"

2. Israel's Prince, Captain, and Leader, is Jehovah-Jesus, the Son of God Most High, who came down from heaven to earth to save and redeem Israel from their sins, and lead them safely into a harbour of rest and safety. This same Jesus is the centre or pivot of the compass upon which revolves the needle of hope in redeeming love—David's greater Son.

3. This said Jehovah-Jesus was the anointed High Priest of our profession, the Lamb slain for the sins of the whole world; hence the sacrifice, or offering.

4. Israel's Pillar, upright statue, image, or idol, was the pillar of fire in the form of the star of Jacob, which rose and stood over the Inn of the House of Bethlehem, the House of Bread, to mark the spot where lay the Babe of Bethlehem, Jehovah-Jesus, the hidden manna, or angels', or spiritual food of the House of Israel, upon whose shoulders the ephod was to rest.

Many days was this rebellious house without a king, for they had cast Him off and set up a usurper in His stead. Many days (3) were they without a Prince, during the days of His sojourn in the tomb. Many days were they without sacrifice, for by the death and offering up of this Prince and Saviour, the emblematical Lamb once slain, the daily sacrifice was done away with and abolished, and no need of a further offering for sin. Many days also without priestly pillar, image, idol, or statue, standing as an ensign or leader, for He, Jehovah-Jesus, the Captain of our salvation, had gone up on high, in reunion with His Father, and set down in the royal priestly throne at the right hand of His Father, the King of heaven and earth, as a mediator and intercessor for and on behalf of His brethren, the after-seed of faithful Abraham. Without Teraphim, or household God, or visible or priestly leader or teacher, because He had vanished out of sight and was no more visible to human reason; but upon a given day descended in the shape of fiery cloven tongues, and secretly took up His abode in the heart, ark, or coffer of His chosen sons and daughters, and is so hidden from view at the present moment, yet reigning King, Prince, and Priest supreme.

By and through this offering of blood, are all the sons of faithful Abraham raised from being sons of Abraham, through the hope of redemption, to the exalted rank and position of sons of the living God, no more orphans and fatherless, but heirs and joint-heirs of the kingdom of heaven.

I will conclude by drawing attention to the last verse of the chapter: "Afterwards shall the children of Israel return and seek the Lord their God, and David their king, and shall fear the Lord and His goodness in the latter days." In this manner, I suppose, our learned brother will admit we (Christians) in these latter days have a King, a Prince, a Saviour, a sacrifice, a pillar of righteousness, justice and uprightness, strength and beauty, an ephod-bearer, eternal in the heavens, for, said He, "Where two or three are gathered together in My name, there am I in the midst.

Yours faithfully and fraternally,

A Constant Reader of the "Banner."

London, Jan. 5th, 1888.

The Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association commenced the 1888 afternoon series of Bible readings on Tuesday, January 17. The Association is making a special appeal for Funds to carry on their work, and meet current expenses.

Digitized by Google

NOTICES.

All communications intended for the Editor, to be addressed: "Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Clifton, Bristol.

SUBSCRIPTIONS. £ s. d.

Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free 0 7 6
Two Copies (including Double Numbers) 0 13 6
Three Copies " " " 1 0 4
Four Copies " " " 1 5 6
Six Copies " " " 1 16 4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-grand, London, to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C., or F. W. PARRY & Co., 29, Paternoster-row, London.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

Contents Bills and Show Cards may be obtained on application to the Publishers.

Advertisements should be sent to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

Prepaid Advertisements are inserted at the rate of thirty words for 1s. 4d.

TWO LADIES offer a happy home to one or two Christian Ladies, invalid not objected to. Terms and particulars on application. References exchanged M., 8, Charlotte Terrace, Clacton-on-Sea, Essex.

THE ANNUAL VOLUME

OF THE

BANNER OF ISRAEL

IS NOW READY.

Price, in Handsome Blue Cloth, Gilt, 8s., Post Free for Postal Order.

Forms a handsome present. Useful for presentation to Working Men's Institutes, Libraries, etc., etc.

Price 1s. 6d.

CASES FOR BINDING

THE YEARLY VOLUMES.

ROBERT BANKS AND SON,
RACQUET COURT, FLEET ST.

Price Sixpence.

ISRAEL'S HOPE & DESTINY.

Edited by DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, J.P.

QUARTERLY PART NOW READY.

CONTENTS.—Eighteen Hundred and Eighty-seven.—The Teaching of the Writers in the "Silver Morn." By J. T. Crosthwaite.—To D. A. O., Christmas, 1887.—By Hecla.—The Gentilisation of Israel. By the Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A.—The Britons and the Epistle to the Hebrews. By the Rev. Herbert Marriott, M.A.—The Messianic Symbolism of the Well. By F. Gass.—The Throne of the House of Israel. By the Editor.—In Defence of our Methods. By J. G. Taylor.—Is the Conversion of the Jews at the Present Time Scriptual? By George Dimbleby.—Reviews.—Correspondence.

EIGHTH VOL. NOW READY.

Demy 8vo., Handsome Cloth Gilt, price 3s. 6d. Post Free for Postal Order.

R. BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-st., E.C.

The Anglo-Israel Theory.

Every believer in it should read the Sermons of the REV. JOSEPH WILD, D.D., of Toronto, Canada, who is the leading exponent of the theory in America, and whose Sermons and Books have a world-wide circulation, which are reported weekly in

"THE CANADIAN ADVANCE,"

A Religious, Literary, and Fireside Weekly. Remit a P.O.O. for 4s. 6d. to the publishers for a year's subscription.—Address: YEIGH & Co., Toronto, Canada,

WHO ARE WE & WHAT IS OUR MISSION? By J. Thornhill Harrison. With seven Maps. Hand some cloth, gilt, price 5s. Free for P.O.
Robert Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

Ready at Advent. Price 6d., by post 6½d.

Old Dogmas From New Aspects.

By Vox Feminæ Auriculæ Hominis.

Contents: . The Apostolic Succession. 2. The Apostle Peter. 3. The Successor of Judas Iscariot. 4. The Athanasian Creed. 5. The Trinity. 6. Eternal Punishment. 7. The Great Tribulation. 8. The Great White Throne. 9. The Atonement of Jesus Christ.
H. E. Hill, 60, Nevill-road, Stoke-Newington, London N.

Dr. JOSEPH WILD'S WORKS

NEW EDITION JUST PUBLISHED.

THE LOST TEN TRIBES

Price 3s., post free 3s. 3d.

"We have much pleasure in directing attention to this handsome volume. . . We promise our readers that if they procure this work, and will peruse it, they will find 'Our Identity' discussed in a clear, novel, racy, and from an American point of view, which is sure to interest."—Banner of Israel.

THE FUTURE OF ISRAEL AND JUDAH.

Price 2s., post free 2s. 3d.

LONDON: ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet Court, Fleet Street, and all booksellers.

Just Published, crown 8vo., elegantly bound in cloth. price 3s. 6d.

BRITAIN in HISTORY:

ANCIENT AND MODERN.

Or, Proofs Linking Israel with Britain Throughout the Ages.

BY MRS. G. A. ROGERS,
Author of "The Coronation Stone," "The Star-lit Crown," &c., &c.

London: J. NISBET & Co., 21, Berners-street, W.; ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, who will send a copy free by post on receipt of P.O; and to be had of all Booksellers.

THE MESSENGER, 1888.

NOTICE.—In the January number of this Magazine is commenced

A NEW AND IMPORTANT WORK bearing on the Identity of the British People with Lost Israel, and entitled

"RUSSIA JAPHET,"

Treating of the History, Geography, and Destiny of the Peoples subject to the Czar.

By "OXONIAN,"

Author of "Israel's Wanderings," &c.

Price 6d., post free 7d.

London: F. W. Parry & Co., 29, Paternoster-row.

Fifteenth Thousand.

BY REV. HENRY ROE.

Israel's World. Origin and Destiny of British Race, Colonies, and Empire. 2d., post free 2½d. Fifty post free from H. Roe for 4s. 9d.

Philo-Israel says: "I am perfectly delighted with your pamphlet."

C. E. Priestly, Esq., says: "For its size I never read a better work. I have given away two lots of fifty each, and enclose money for fifty more. I have sent it to clergymen, bishops, and archbishops."

Rev. Thomas Lowe says: "What the works of Mr. Hine failed to do in my enlightenment, 'Israel's World' has accomplished. I now read the Scriptures in a new and vivid light."

Going to Africa. 1s., post free 1s. 1d.

Fernando Po Mission. 1s., post free 1s. 1d.

West African Scenes. 2s., post free 2s. 2d.

Consecration. 2d., post free 2½d.

50 post free from H. Roe for 4s. 9d.
Robert Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.; and Rev. H. Roe, Dawley, Salop.

THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL. By the Rev. Joseph Wild, D.D., Pastor of Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, New York. Price 3s., post free 3s. 3d,

THE FUTURE OF ISRAEL AND JUDAH. Companion volume to above. By the Rev. Joseph Wild D.D. With Portrait of the Author. Cloth, gilt lettered bevelled boards. Price 2s., post free 2s. 3d.

London: Robert Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

HUMAN LIFE.—FIFTY YEARS' Record of Facts, Principles, and Discoveries (just published, complete) Relating to the Improvement and Preservation of Human Life on Earth, Origin and true treatment of diseases. A series of articles by DR. SAMUEL BIRLEY, M.D., Ph.D. Book form, 50 pages. SENT FREE to every applicant by the publishers, GORDON B. MURRAY & CO., 50, Theobald's-road, Holborn, E.C. Write to-day.

WORKS BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

The Geography of the Gates. With Map and six full page, and one double-page, Illustrations, printed on plate paper. 208 pages, in handsome cloth, gilt Price 3s. 6d., post free 3s. 10d.

The History of the House of Israel. How They Were Lost and How They Were Found. Told for the children. Price 6d., cloth 1s.; post free 7d. and 1s. 1d. Fifth edition.

A Resume of the Scriptural Argument, Proving the Identity of the British Race with the Lost Ten Tribes. Price 1d.; 6s. per hundred. postage 6d.

Our Identity: What it is Not; What it is; and Our Obligations To-day in Respect to it Being a Lecture recently delivered in London by Philo-Israel, and published by special request. Price 2d., a reduction for quantities.

Our Identity with the House of Israel. Price 4d., Reprinted from "Clifton Chronicle Letters'

An Elementary Digest or Sketch of the Chief Facts and Teachings of the Great Pyramid of Egypt. Adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific 56 pages, Illustrated with Diagrams, price 4d., post free 5d. 10th Thousand.

Are the English People the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel? An Inquiry Establishing the Identity of the British Nation with the Lost Ten Tribes. 4d.

Robert Banks & Son, Racquet Court, Fleet Street, E.C.

Published by ROBERT BANKS & SON,

RACQUET COURT, FLEET STREET, E.C.

Postal Orders may be obtained at any Post Office in the United Kingdom for the following amounts: 1s., 1s. 6d., ½d. each; 2s., 2s. 6d., 3s., 3s 6d., 4s., 4s. 6d., 5s., 7s. 6d., 10s., 10s. 6d., 1d each: 15s., 20s., 1½d. each. They should be "crossed" City Bank, Ludgate Hill, E.C. Stamps received.

PRESENT-DAY PROBLEMS, and How Anglo-Israel Truth Explains and Solves Them. By V. M. Cox. 3d., by post 4 stamps.

LIGHT SHED BY THE GREAT PYRAMID OF EGYPT on the Last Days of this Dispensation. from A.D. 1814 to A.D. 1922. By JAMES KEITH. Price 4d., by post 5 stamps.

NEW TESTAMENT TRUTH on the Anglo-Israel Controversy. By J. G. TAYLOR. Price 3d., by post 4 stamps.

A NEW LIGHT. An Elementary Pamphlet for General Distribution. By A E I. Price 2d., by post 2½d. in stamps.

EPHRAIM-ISRAEL, the Pivot Nation of Prophecy and History. By V. M. Cox. Price 1d., one dozen free for 1s.

AMMI; OR, THE CHOSEN PEOPLE. By Miss BIRD. Tracing the Descent of the British People from Abraham as "friend of God," and showing that true science, history, philology, and ethnology, are on the side of the Identity of the Anglo-Saxon Race with the Ten Lost Tribes. Price 2d., post free 2½d.; 12s. 6d. per 100 for distribution.

IS NOT QUEEN VICTORIA the Royal Seed to King David's Throne, and Are Not Her Subjects, the British People, the Ten Lost Tribes? By W. HOPTON. Price 2d.; 12s. 6d. per 100.

A Complete Catalogue Free on Application.

LUNG TONIC

SAVE YOUR LIVES BY TAKING

OWBRIDGE'S LUNG TONIC

THE MIGHTY HEALER.

It has a power over disease hitherto unknown in Medicine.

Are you at all Weak-chested or inclined to be Consumptive, with just a touch of Cough now and then?

"Try this Wonderful Medicine." The Cough and Weakness will disappear as if by magic, and you will feel a strength and power you never had before.

HAVE YOU A COUGH?
A DOSE WILL RELIEVE IT!
HAVE YOU A COLD?
A DOSE AT BEDTIME WILL REMOVE IT.

Bronchitis & Asthma it relieves instantly

The Spasms of Coughing so dreadful in Whooping Cough become less with each dose of the medicine.

Prepared by W. T. OWBRIDGE, Chemist, Hull

Sold in Bottles 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d. and 11s. by all Chemists and Patent Medicine Vendors. Wholesale all London and Provincial Houses.

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. F. W. PARRY (late GUEST & Co.), 29 PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, JAN. 25, 1888 [All rights reserved.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."

(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. XII., No. 579. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 1, 1888. [DOUBLE NUMBER, TWOPENCE.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
The Importance of Delagoa Bay	45
The Rev. Dr. Wild, of Canada, on the Cui Bono? Question	46
The Language Must Follow the Race	47
The Story of the Spanish Armada. By Mr. W. H. K. Wright, F.R.H.S.	49
How India Has Grown since the Empress's Accession	50
The Testimony of South America	51
Israel's Scare Respecting Delagoa Bay	52
The Foun der of Nations	53
A Blessing in the Midst of the Land of Egypt	54
Antipodean News	54
British Contributions to Foreign Mission Work	55
A Couple of Difficulties Suggested from Tasmania	55
How Anglo-Israelites Deal With the Subject of Our Identity in New Zealand	56
Lecture at Christchurch, New Zealand	57
Notice to Correspondents	57
Israel's Scripture and Prayer Union	58
Anglo-Israel Free Distribution Fund	58
Review—Correspondence	59

THE IMPORTANCE OF DELAGOA BAY.

WE must again and again refer to the subject of Delagoa Bay, because it is really one of the most important of the African Gates. There is none like it on the South-east African seaboard, and at present there is the deepest interest surrounding the question, because the Germans and Boers and the Portuguese are all apparently struggling to secure the independent possession of it in order to keep out the British and their pushing multitudes from acquiring it. It remains to be seen whether the Gate-holders of the world will be denied possession of this one in South Africa, or whether, in spite of all the odds against them, the British, after all, will be found at last to have come out the owners. If we trust the Word of God and notice how wonderfully Delagoa Bay operates as a Gate towards the Transvaal, Amatongaland, Swaziland, and the Boer New Republic, we may be sure that the controversy and excitement going on about the question will terminate as all such questions have hitherto ended—namely, in the acquisition by Israel of her promised Gates. We submitted the question of our right to Delagoa Bay thirteen years ago to arbitration, but we were defeated in the final award which was made by the Frenchman. Now we have discovered that the possession we thought so little of then is of vital importance to our Empire, since the Delagoa Bay Railway, which is being constructed between that port and Pretoria in the Transvaal, will, if worked as intended, so as to destroy British commerce from the Cape Colonies, do incalculable injury to our South African Empire. For "the railway is to take the great markets of the gold-fields on the way, and not stopping at Pretoria, but heading right across South Africa, will tap the great trade routes running North and South, and intercept the traffic that has hitherto flowed in those channels." The railway is, in the Boers' scheme, to work the greatest amount of ill possible to British interests. It is to be constructed with Dutch and German capital, and "managed on the principle of excluding, by means of differential carriage rates, goods of British and Cape origin."

Delagoa Bay is, according to these arrangements, to become the great "port of entry for the whole of South Africa North of Cape Colony"—therefore a commanding South African Gate; one which, though God promised all Gates to Israel, shall be the marked exception, and an instance to prove that God Almighty is not true to His promises. In vain! The result will prove that somehow or other God will fulfil His promises, and will yet confer upon us the position of the "head and not the tail, the one above but not beneath," in regard to this commanding Gate. The scheme, as devised by the Transvaal Boers, is directed against our British ascendency. But there are some points in which the hostile plan is yet undeveloped. The Transvaal portion of the new railway, 250 miles in length, is not so much as begun. The Portuguese portion is finished up to the foot of the Lobombo Mountains, which divide the two sections. These mountains interpose nine miles of most difficult engineering, certain to be very costly. Nothing has yet been attempted regarding them; but it is certain the difficulties can be overcome, and will probably soon be so. If the work is carried out by a Boer-German coalition, as proposed, the injury to British interests is sure to be immense. But there is a way still open by which all dangers can be avoided, and it will be well for the British Government to apply this remedy. The following portion of a Times leader, of Dec. 26, describes what it is. We leave our readers to judge of the probability of the measure being carried out. At any rate the subject is now well before the public, and we think we may soon hear that, like the Suez Canal Shares in 1875, there has been some diplomatic communication between the Portuguese Government and our own by which Delagoa Bay itself will become part of the British Empire, and so settle many points which are now in uncertainty in South Africa! The Times wrote thus:—

The efforts of the British Government will, it may be hoped, be directed to a larger object. The acquisition of Delagoa Bay itself by purchase or exchange would settle the question of British, Boer, or German ascendency in all the countries of which that port is the natural outlet. The Transvaal would once again become a country well-disposed to and connected by close ties with the British Colonies in South Africa. The new Boer republic would follow the fortunes of the Transvaal. Amatongaland and Swaziland, concerning which our correspondent this morning supplies some interesting information, would fall directly or indirectly under British rule. The Sovereigns of those two countries, both of which are destined to be rapidly colonized on account of their mineral wealth, have actually begged for British protectorates. But the Colonial Office, mindful probably of the many false steps which the Imperial Government has previously taken in Africa, and unwilling to incur further responsibilities, hesitates and hangs back. In the meantime the Boers with their Winchester rifles, and the Germans with their syndicates and great trading companies are on the look-out. Delagoa Bay itself is exposed to Boer invasion from the land and to German intervention from the sea. Whatever may be thought of the probability of either contingency (and our correspondent gives grounds for thinking neither improbable), it seems to be the duty of the Government to see whether they cannot place such things beyond the bounds of possibility. There is good reason to believe that the Cape colonists are willing to bear a fair share of the cost of a transaction upon which their commercial prosperity greatly depends. Before the MacMahon award, Portugal gave a promise to the British Government not to cede Delagoa Bay to a third Power. But it remains to guard against the danger that duress may compel Portugal to do us an injury which she has promised not to do of her own accord.

Digitized by Google

Such are the salient facts of the case, and the dangers to Israel's interests which seem now to be involved in it. Let us watch the result with intense interest, knowing that here a crucial test of our Hebrew origin and of Our Identity with the Ten Tribes can be applied. Because, if we be Israel, Delagoa Bay is certain to lapse in some way to our nation, but if we be not Israel, then the Gate we see to be so important to our South African Empire will be acquired by races which will avowedly use it to destroy our rising power in the dark Continent, and prevent our growth as the paramount nation in the South and Central parts of Africa. We are in the hands of God in this matter. And such is our confidence in His faithfulness, that, without claiming the prophetic function, we are able to foresee in a general way that Delagoa Bay will ere long become one of Israel's Gates, but will certainly not be given to the half-civilised Boers, or to the non-Israelite Germans. To the Lord be all the praise!

THE REV. DR. WILD, OF CANADA, ON THE CUI BONO? QUESTION.

THE REV. DR. WILD, as reported in the Parkdale News of September 29 and October 6, has preached two very original and excellent discourses in Bond Street Church, which we only regret we cannot reproduce verbatim in the BANNER. They had for their subject the Cui bono? objections of some of our opponents to our claim that the British are Israel. His text on the first occasion was Isaiah viii. 20, and on the second Jer. xxxiii. 14. The first sermon replied to the general question, and maintained that there was good in the subject of Our Identity; the second treated of "The Future Benefit of Anglo-Israelism." The salient points of the Doctor's replies are all we can notice. The two sermons would form a useful pamphlet on the subject, and bring into a short compass the whole that is to be said to our opponents regarding it. The first argument the Doctor took up was that Our Identity exhibited Divine truth, and it was always good to know revealed truths, as they are made known to us in the prophecies. The Christian Hebrews at the siege of Jerusalem found the benefit of their knowledge of the prophecies, for they fled from the impending destruction, guided by Jer. vi. 1, and by our Lord's warning to His disciples. Coming to particulars, Dr. Wild is reported to have continued thus:—

"Did the whole British nation know their identity it would save them from much trouble. The dispute in Ireland would be settled in a year if the British Government and leaders only knew this point; and they never would have committed the blunder of going into the Soudan (for the prophecy had marked out their course as plainly as A B C) and slaughtering about 70,000 of our subjects, and spending 80,000,000 dollars, had they but known God's will. What good is it? Paul in Romans divided the human family into three (Rom. xi. 17). The broken-off branches are the Jews; the wild olive tree grafted in are the Gentiles, and the stock from which the Jews were broken off, and Gentiles grafted in, was Israel. That is plain. Of this stock Paul is mindful to tell us how he was derived. For in the first verse he says, 'I say, then, Hath God cast away His people? God forbid. For I also am an Israelite of the seed of Abraham, of the Tribe of Benjamin.' If Paul had been in Bond Street, and made such a statement as that he would have been pitched into by the audience and the press. They would have said, What difference does that make? We do not care who you are. But he seems to glory in it because it brought him special opportunities and privileges. Being Israel we inherit the Gospel. Is that not an advantage? And who shall tell us the blessings of having been the heirs and depositories of the Gospel? Why should we be the people to begin an agitation to free the slaves? Why should we be the people to send forth missionaries to all parts of the world? We are Israel, and that is our duty. We have partially fulfilled it. The Gospel started in Palestine, locating itself in Eastern Europe, Asia, and Africa, and when these people emigrated out of these countries and came westward darkness came upon the people who still remained there. Look at the desolation yonder in Africa, Asia, and in a sense in Eastern Europe. Why is it that Britain, her colonies and the United States are so far advanced? Because this people brought the Gospel with them. The Gospel brings in its train prosperity and God's blessings. Hence, my dear friends, we can see it is a blessing to be of Israel. How come we to be the most Christian of people? Our laws, customs, instincts, we have inherited, and these things have been in our favour socially, morally, intellectually, commercially and spiritually.

"Take the Bible and our respect for it, and then think of its influence upon our legislation, and upon our commercial intercourse, and upon us as families. O, the blessings of this Word of God! Why have not other people it? Because it was committed to us, and it is to be sent by us around the world through the Bible societies and the colporteur agencies. We are actually translating it for them. God gave it to us.

"Take our Sabbath, and see what a wonderful benefit it has been, physically, socially, commercially and spiritually. It raises wages always one-seventh wherever the Sabbath is duly observed. You have one-seventh more pay in any regular or ordinary trade. You never put as much in the collection plate as you get back from it. If you were in France you would not get by one-seventh as much as you get now; as I quoted to you in a previous sermon, the wages that are given in other countries are far less than in this. What has that to do with it? It is one of the heirlooms belonging to Israel. It benefits us physically, for we are stronger because we are not compelled to be slaves the whole seven days. We are stronger socially, because we can cultivate the social instinct on that day of rest. We are stronger commercially, because we are not overflooded with things, and it makes trade more lively. We are better spiritually, because we have the holy opportunities of worshipping one with another in the quietude and sanctity of the Sabbath. Then imagine a man asking the good of this Ten Lost Tribe theory. You would think he had come out of Africa, and never heard anything in his life. Yet some will turn round and say, What is the good of it? All you have to do is to get the sermon when it is printed, and we will supplement it next Sunday night. We can answer any objections a man can raise. We are not afraid; indeed we court inquiry.

"Touching the Sabbath, read Exodus xxxi. 12, 13: 'And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying, Speak thou unto the children of Israel, saying, Verily, My Sabbath shall ye keep, for it is a sign between Me and you, throughout your generations; that ye may know I am the Lord that doth sanctify you.' Take out the British Empire and the United States, and there is no other country on the face of the earth that keeps the whole Sabbath. It was to be a sign between the descendants of Jacob and God; it is hung up from twelve o'clock midnight on Saturday to twelve o'clock midnight on Sunday. How is it we are the only people on the face of the earth that keeps the whole day? Because we are the people it was to be assigned to. We inherit also the islands. Geographically, that is a most wonderful advantage to us. God has given us thousands and thousands of square miles that we might be in possession of these territories, and thus fulfil the mission He gave to us. If God has set it apart that we evangelize and civilize the earth, He must give us the means, the money, the influence and the territory. Is it any advantage? If you will turn to Isa. liv. 3, you will find: 'For thou shalt break forth on the right hand and on the left; and thy seed shall inherit the Gentiles, and make the desolate cities to be inhabited.' That could not be true of Judah. He does not inherit the cities of the Gentiles. It is true of Israel, though. Is it of no advantage to have territory, when you see the way nations are fighting for it? We have supremacy upon the sea because we are Israel. Why? When Balaam was making his prophecy, as recorded in Num. xxiv. 7, it was said: 'His seed shall be in many waters, and his king shall be higher than Agag, and his kingdom shall be exalted.' Is it no advantage? Read also Deut. xx. 8: 'And the officers shall speak further unto the people, and they shall say, What man is there that is fearful and faint-hearted? Let him go and return unto his house, lest his brethren's heart faint as well as his.' What does this mean? The Hebrew army was a voluntary one; no man could be compelled to go in; and if we are the descendants of these Hebrews we too will, in like manner, fight voluntarily, and not by compulsion or law. In Pagan and heathen lands the ruler owns the people and their lives, and can marshal them together in any battle. Thank God they cannot in Britain. They cannot make me a soldier unless I want to be one. They cannot in the United States, because they are Israel, of the tribe of Manasseh, and there is no other country on the face of the earth you can say that of. What good is it? Supposing you had been born in some country in Europe, the most enlightened of the continents, say, for instance, Germany, you would have to serve seven years in the army, three years of which is active service; or in France you would have to serve nine years, five of which is active service; or in Austria you would have to serve ten years, three of which is active service; or in Russia you would have to serve fifteen years, six of which is active service. How many years have you served, young men, in Canada? You have not served any except you so desired it. Are three or five years out of the prime of a man's life worth anything? How much do you get a year—500 dollars? Well, you get just 1,500 dollars more for being born of Israel. And after these years of service are actually over, the Government holds on to you, and can call you out at any time on active service either away from home or self-defence. I am astonished that anybody could ask the question, What good is it? Can we not properly quote the following verse, Isa. lxi. 9? 'And their seed shall be known among the Gentiles, and their offspring among the people; all that see them shall acknowledge them, that they are the seed which the Lord has blessed.' You say, I don't want to be blessed. I won't believe this theory. All right, just stay outside and not get the advantages. You ought to go to Alaska or some other place where this theory is not extended, then you would see the difference.

Digitized by Google

It is because we are of Israel that other nations are flowing in by the thousands in the stream of immigration. Why will not men immigrate to Russia, to Germany, or to France? There is no inducement for any living soul to emigrate to such places. It is because of the blessings promised to Israel that so many come to these shores. What do we inherit? Read Rom. ix. 4—5. Paul, speaking of his kinsmen in the flesh, says, 'Who are Israelites, to whom pertains the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law, and the service of God, and the promises, whose are the fathers, and of whom as concerning the flesh Christ came, who is over all, God blessed forever. Amen.'

"Eight distinct blessings coming to Israel. What advantage is it by being born in Israel? Then, the beauty is, it did not make a point of difference what nation you are of, for you can by faith be adopted in the Abrahamic family, and thus enjoy these blessings as much as if you were literally born. It does not exclude a single soul on God's earth. I may fitly close with the following quotation from Deut. xxxiii. 29: 'Happy art thou, O Israel; who is like unto thee, O people saved by the Lord, the shield of thy help, and who is the sword of thy excellency: and thine enemies shall be found liars unto thee; and thou shalt tread upon their high places.'

"Do you think I have made a good point to-night? Do you not think I have appealed to the law and to the testimony? I honestly think I have. Israel is somewhere, and there are certain prophecies that belong to her, and I believe it is as easy to select her from amongst the rest of the nations as it is to select Dr. Wild from among the rest of the ministers of Toronto. Do you know Israel from what I have said? Do you suppose it is possible for a man to disbelieve this book, the law and the testimony. You would require to account for scores of accidents in the history and progress of the present Anglo-Saxon race. I do not call them accidents. They are all uniform. You may get one accident to suit you, but you cannot get three or four on the line of your interest. May God bless us to understand who we are, and be faithful to our trust. Amen."

[Dr. Wild's second sermon we hope to quote on a future occasion.]

THE LANGUAGE MUST FOLLOW THE RACE.

We have always held it to be an axiom that where a language promises to become universal, it is clear that the race which speaks that language must have previously been taking up a foremost position in the world, with prospect of dominating it at last. The language follows the race. If the British be Israel, then the British, as Israel, have the "heirship of the world" in reversion, as well as the promise that "the kingdom and dominion and greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven shall be given to them as the people of the saints of the Most High," that is, as "the children of Israel, God's chosen ones" (Rom. iv. 13; Dan vii. 22—27; Psa. cxlviii. 14; 1 Chron. xvi. 13). We should expect, therefore, as we are near the end of the present dispensation, that Israel would now be appearing in her character of "the heir of the world," and the inheritor of the ends, the coasts and uttermost parts, of the earth. Such being the case, another sign that the favoured people are assuming their allotted position and making some advance in that direction, would be the fact that their language was gradually taking up a forward place among the vernacular languages of the earth and claiming to be "International." The British are proved, by many lines of evidence, to be the Lost Ten Tribes, or House of Ephraim. Are they at the present time so placed in the world as to respond to the prophecies in Israel's favour in that respect? Surely they are! They occupy two small islands in the North-west of Europe, and yet already their possessions are in the four quarters of the earth, and 65 governments in various parts of the world acknowledge Victoria, the British Sovereign, as their Queen or Empress. They hold the whole of India, and Burmah. The race occupies the whole Continent of North America. They possess the whole of the Continent of Australia; also the islands of New Zealand, Ceylon and Tasmania, the Fiji Islands and North Borneo are theirs; and in South Africa they have a dominion growing as large as all Europe put together! The Gates and ocean highways of the world are theirs. They occupy a fifth part of the entire habitable globe, and a sixth of the entire inhabitants of the planet are British subjects! The British race has spread abroad to the West, and to the East, to the North and to the South, according to the prophecies, and they are established in political power everywhere. They dominate the seas, hold the Gates, and rule the waves.

Digitized by Google

We may expect, then, that while the race has settled in all zones, everywhere, and is doing such wonders, their language would follow them, and be showing such signs of that ascendency over all the other vernaculars of the earth, as to make it likely that it would become, eventually, the international language. That such is the fact has been shown over and over again in the pages of the BANNER; but we have seldom read a more clear and decisive piece of evidence to this effect, than that which appeared in the Times on Dec. 30, furnished by Mr. Charles Jonas, of Prague, Bohemia, whom we must regard as a "blind witness" to Our Identity; one who knows nothing of our "Israelitish origin," but furnishes us proof positive that it is a fact. His letter was to the following effect:—

ENGLISH AS AN INTERNATIONAL LANGUAGE.

To the Editor of the "Times."

SIR,—The Philological Society, which a few days ago held a meeting at University College, London, seems to be inclined to patronise the "world-speech" recently invented and christened "Volapük." In my humble opinion such an effort on the part of an English philological society would be sadly misdirected.

"Volapük" is a system arbitrarily constructed by an individual; it is a "world-speech" that nobody speaks at present or is expected to speak in the future. "Volapük" is not intended to have a literature, but it is claimed that this invented language would be useful as a written medium of understanding for commercial, scientific, and diplomatic purposes.

Now, if we are to have a "world-speech," why should it be the arbitrary creation of an individual, not yet spoken by anybody in the universe, in preference to a language already spoken by more than 100 millions of people, the most enlightened and progressive of mankind in all parts of the world? Why should "Volapük," the more or less interesting hobby of an individual, be preferred to the living English tongue, which has already become a "world-speech" in a far greater degree than the world has ever seen before?

In the time of Shakespeare and Queen Elizabeth the English language was confined to the British Isles, and spoken by about 5,000,000 people. Since then, and especially within the last few decades, it has made a wonderful and unprecedented progress. It is now the native and dominant language in Great Britain and Ireland, the United States of America, British America, Jamaica and numerous other West India Islands, South Africa nearly to the Zambesi River, Australia, Tasmania, New Zealand, and many islands of the Pacific, and in numberless other British colonies throughout the world. These English-speaking countries have an area of more than ten millions of square miles, or more than one-fifth of the whole habitable globe.

But English is, furthermore, the language of the dominant power in the British East Indies, with an area of at least one million and a half of square miles, and its knowledge is spreading fast among the 260 millions of people inhabiting that grand empire. English has already become the language of international commerce in China and Japan; it is the language of the high seas, and spoken in every maritime port, so that already 30 years ago the Austrian traveller Carl von Scherzer was struck with wonder at the ubiquitous character of the English tongue. An American lady—Mrs. Perkins from Minneapolis—whom I recently met in this city said to me:—"I have been travelling all over Europe, speaking only my American language," meaning the English. This simple but expressive utterance shows the wonderful spread of the English language upon the Continent of late years.

English is easily learned, having, in comparison with other civilized languages, a mere apology for a grammar. It has been said, with a touch of humorous exaggeration, that English is learned in three months, French in three years and German in 30 years. It is indeed a fact that any man of ordinary intelligence, applying himself diligently to the study of English, can master it in a few months. The English language is brief and pointed in expression, being the only tongue of the civilized world in which whole books of history may be written in words of one syllable. It has the greatest literature, and fully one-half of the entire newspaper Press of the globe is already printed in English.

In view of the above facts I think it idle and futile for individuals to burn the midnight oil in order to invent a "world-speech," based upon arbitrary rules and fancies, and for other individuals to lose time and patience over attempts at its mastery. I believe that all mankind will shortly have an international language of natural growth, and answering in every way the requirements of such a medium; and that it will be the English tongue, dominant and victorious wherever it comes in contact with other languages, whether civilized or not.

I have the honour, Sir, to be most respectfully yours,

CHARLES JONAS.

Prague, Bohemia, Dec. 24.

So far Mr. Charles Jonas. His testimony is that the British language is already "the head and not the tail, above only and not beneath" all the other tongues spoken on the earth, and that it will be dominant and victorious over all the rest wherever it comes in contact with others, civilized or not! Surely these words prove Our Identity with Israel, and tell us that a language and a race so predominant, and so filling the earth, must be Israel's. For they are the possessors of the pure language promised to them in Zeph iii. 9, to enable them "all to call upon the Lord Jehovah, and to serve Him with one consent." The Times comments on the letter of Mr. Jonas rather in a jocose vein, making fun of "Volapük" and all its prospects. Regarding our English tongue, the writer, after remarking that many modern languages have aspired to the honour of becoming the international, adds:—

Meanwhile, English goes on quietly training year by year fresh millions of native subjects to its sway. A language aided by the Anglo-Saxon birth-rate is certain to win in the end, unless the rules of arithmetic be subverted. It has too on its side a force against which the most encroaching competing languages are helpless. To the shame though it be of the victor, the Anglo-Saxon tongue, while Anglo-Saxon prosperity and fertility continue, gains a tremendous advantage from some mental slowness in the race which indisposes it for learning two languages. The incapacity cannot be simply insular; for it is more strongly marked in their American cousins than in Englishmen. In time an English generation might possibly grow up actually able to speak French, if not German. Americans, it may be taken for granted, will retain their singleness of speech. Like the estimable lady from Minneapolis, instanced by Mr. Jonas, they will, in larger and larger numbers, traverse the globe unaffected and undismayed by its eccentricities of speech. As the Celtic or the Anglo-Saxon maiden, or both, passed unharmed with her golden bracelet, they will bear aloft through the Babel of the Continent that which they are pleased to call their "American." That points to a quality which constitutes for English, as we prefer from prejudice to style the language, an impregnable stronghold. French may urge its precision, Italian its elegance, and German its malleability; English is invincible in the peculiarity that the two hundred millions born to employ it are given to travelling, have money to spend, and for the most part can shop in no other language. Against such a conjunction of qualities and deficiencies the mighty and mystic Volapük itself will be powerless.

That is to say, the British folk are the wanderers still. They are wealthy to a degree; and they are 100 millions strong already talking the language which is their mother tongue, and yet destined to be that of the world! These are all Israelitish traits and promises. They singularly support our claims to the racial rights we assert, and prove that we are Ephraim-Israel, the heirs of all the blessings, which lie even at God's right hand. To Him be all the praise!

Digitized by Google

THE STORY OF THE SPANISH ARMADA.

A Lecture Delivered at Plymouth

By Mr. W. H. K. Wright, F.R.H.S.

At the Plymouth Mechanics' Institute, on Tuesday, Mr. W. H. K. Wright, F.R.H.S., delivered a lecture on "England's Salamis of 1588, or the Story of the Spanish Armada." There was a large audience, and the chair was occupied, in the absence of the Mayor, by Mr. Alfred Hingston, who, in introducing the lecturer, remarked that the subject was signally interesting to them as inhabitants of Plymouth, and more so because they were contemplating a celebration of the tercentenary of the Armada. Mr. Wright was well known to them all as the Borough Librarian, and he was sure they would not feel that the time spent in listening to him had been wasted.

Mr. Wright introduced the defeat of the Spanish Armada as an event which had, perhaps, more important and far-reaching results upon the destinies of nations than any other since the Conquest; and explained that his endeavours would be to give a faithful picture of "the spacious days of Queen Elizabeth," of the relations which England bore to Spain, of the great struggle then at its height between Popery and Protestantism, of the impulses which actuated the great statesmen and heroes of that remarkable era, of the culminating event of the arrival and destruction of the "Invincible Armada," and of the effect of that happy deliverance upon England and her allies. The subject, he urged, is fraught with the deepest possible interest to Englishmen, for they now enjoyed liberties and privileges which were threatened by Philip of Spain in 1588, and were reaping the harvest of those who toiled for home and religion three centuries ago. Comparatively few persons nowadays take the trouble to read history, and fewer still weigh the causes and effects of such events as the defeat of the Armada. The present was an essentially busy age, and the majority of our young men and women do not take the interest they ought in the history of their native land, or in ascertaining how and why it is they enjoy such great privileges beyond those of their forefathers. The great bulk of the people knew very little of the causes which led to the threatened Spanish invasion, of the great dangers then so imminent, of the deadly perils which the wisdom of an over-ruling Providence averted. The defeat of the Armada decided once for all that England and the future English-speaking colonies of the world should be Protestant and not Catholic. That was the principle at stake—a principle underlying everything that Englishmen of the nineteenth century hold most dear.

Coming to his narrative of the Armada, the lecturer pointed out how Drake had by his expeditions crippled the resources of the Spaniards, and diverted their attention for a time from England; how Philip II. believed himself to be the chosen instrument of Heaven, to crush the Protestantism of England; and how the obstacles to the realisation of the Spanish king's dream of bringing all Europe under the power of the Pope, were England and Holland, two little nations whose united populations did not exceed the aggregate population of London to-day. It was a noble resolve of these two nations to withstand the great usurping power of Spain, backed up by the Papacy, and it was a glorious struggle in which England and Holland risked their all. Drake, by the success of his daring expedition to Lisbon and Cadiz, destroying ten thousand tons of shipping, delayed the coming of the Armada by a year. Philip, however, so far from being daunted, took prompt and vigorous action. In interesting detail the great Spanish fleet was described. It consisted of 132 ships with an aggregate tonnage of 59,120, carrying 3,165 guns, 21,855 soldiers, 8,766 sailors, 30,611 all told. After doing full justice to the chivalrous side of the Armada from the point of view of the knights of Castille and Andalusia, the lecturer described at length the preparations that were made in England for the contest, the forming of the fleet, the calling out of volunteers to repel the Duke of Parma's army of 30,000 which the Armada was to convoy across the Channel, the coming of the Armada into the Channel (a most interesting passage being devoted to the bringing of the news to Plymouth when Drake was playing at bowls on the Hoe), the going forth of the much smaller but handier English fleet, the encounters in the Channel, the chapter of accidents to the Spaniards, the sending of the fire-ships among the already crippled Armada as it lay at anchor in the Calais Roads, the consternation and confusion that followed, the whole day's desperate encounter off Gravelines, and the retreat of the remnant of the fleet around Scotland and Ireland, on the coasts of which many a proud galleon was wrecked, looted, and its crew killed or imprisoned. The effect of the telling of these stirring incidents was heightened by the reciting of poems by Macaulay, Southey, Austin Dobson (a native of Plymouth), the lecturer himself, and others.

Proceeding to sum up, the lecturer referred first to the effect of the events on Spain. Out of the whole Spanish fleet only some 53 or 54 returned to Corunna, and nearly 20,000 persons perished in the expedition, while the loss of treasure was enormous. Froude says, "The cry that went up from the Peninsula was as the cry of the Egyptians when the destroying angel had passed over the land. There was not a house where there was not one dead, and that the best and the bravest. When the Armada first reached the Channel, rumour, at its common work, had spread news of a glorious victory. The English corsairs had fallen under the wrath of Don Alonzo's sword. The usurping Queen had stooped her dishonoured head before the legions of Parma and Sidonia. A few days dispelled the pleasant dream. The true story came of the scene at Calais, the fire-ships, the action, and the flight of the Armada; and then for some weeks there was the prolonged agony of uncertainty, until the remnant of the shattered ships reappeared, bringing testimonial in their sides from what banquet they came, with loss of half their men in fight, famine, and sickness, crying out on Sir Francis Drake, saying that he was a devil, and no man. Drake's was the name in every mouth. Drake against whom saints and angels had no more power than mortals; an incarnated spirit of evil let loose to afflict the Spanish race throughout the globe." Even Parma, in his report to Philip, said the honour of the victory belonged to Drake; the admiral was supposed to have been backward.

So much for Spain's losses. What were England's gains? It may truly be said that the English fleet—and that alone—had saved England from certain invasion, and from probable conquest. Elizabeth acted in the most parsimonious manner. She grudged the food, and the munitions of war served out to the fleet, and when the accounts came in she cavilled at every item, and would not give any order for payment until every penny had been accounted for. Howard had undertaken responsibilities in connection with the fleet, and having exhausted his own means had to petition the Queen for assistance. "The matter is not great," he wrote Burleigh. "Five hundred pounds with the help of my own purse would do it. However, it fall out I must see it paid." To meet some urgent necessities in the fleet he had used 3,000 pistoles (about £2,400) of the money which had been taken in the Capitana, and had to defend himself against a charge of peculation brought when he was in the very agony of the conflict. He wrote to Walsingham, just a month lacking two days after the great battle off Gravelines, "I did take them as I told you I would, for I had not £3 left in the world, and had not anything which would get money in London. My plate was gone before. But I will repay it within ten days after my coming home. I pray let her Majesty know so. By the Lord God of Heaven I had not one crown more; and had it not been mere necessity I would not have touched one; but if I had not some to have bestowed upon some poor miserable men I should have wished myself out of the world." In the accounts appeared a charge of £620 for "extraordinary kinds of victuals, wine, cider, sugar, oil, and fresh fish," distributed among the sick and wounded by order of Howard and Drake. Howard petitioned that the Queen would admit that charge. If it was done at all it was done so grudgingly that Howard struck another similar charge from his account-book and wrote to Burleigh—"I will myself make satisfaction as well as I may, so that her Majesty shall nor be charged withal."

Digitized by Google

Next after Drake and Howard the overthrow of the Armada was due to Hawkins. Indeed, without what Hawkins had done, Drake and Howard could have effected nothing; for it was owing solely to his care and skill that the vessels were sent to sea so sound in hull and rigging that they withstood the stress of battle and storm. He had also the sole charge of shipping and paying off the crews, who so skilfully handled and bravely fought the ships. But owing to the changeable humours of Elizabeth in ordering the shipment and discharge of seamen Hawkins' account of money expended were far from exact enough to satisfy the Queen. No one suspected Hawkins of peculation, but he was obliged to spend most of the fortune acquired in his old expeditions in making up alleged deficiencies, and in a petition in which he described himself as a ruined man he begged for a year or two of grace to set matters in order. Thus did Elizabeth treat those who had spent and risked so much for her and their country. And if she treated the commanders in this scurvy manner certain it is that the common sailors fared even worse. Even during the week of fighting and when within sight of their own shores they were half starved; the wages of the men were even left unpaid for weeks, until every penny of the accounts had been duly passed. Drake and Howard did all they could to relieve the necessities of their poor but brave comrades who had with them borne the burden and heat of the fight. But the Queen neither rewarded her brave defenders, nor willingly paid the costs of the defence. But whatever the effect these events had upon Elizabeth as regarded those who fought for her, certain it is that the imminence of the peril through which she had passed forced Elizabeth from her wavering Continental policy. The blow to Spain in the destruction of the Armada, though severe, by no means broke the power of Philip, for five years later the Lord Keeper announced to Parliament, "The King of Spain keepeth a navy armed to impeach all trade of merchandise from England to Gascoigne and Guinere, so as he is now become as a frontier enemy to all the west of England." Elizabeth was at last convinced that in open and vigorous war with Philip lay her only safety. Her enemies were thenceforth her allies: assistance was sent to the Netherlands, and also to Henry of Navarre until the united provinces were freed from the dominion of Spain, and a Huguenot prince wore the crown of France. Slow as was the Queen to acknowledge the services of her brave captains, she nevertheless, in the most public and solemn manner, acknowledged her gratitude to Almighty God for the signal victory she had won. She directed a thanksgiving to be made at St. Paul's, to which all the trophies taken from the enemy were carried in procession; and, though somewhat tardily, she applied herself to the distribution of rewards to the Lord High Admiral, and to the officers and seamen of the fleet for their gallant behaviour. England everywhere resounded with acclamations of joy, and in that joy all Protestant nations of Europe participated. Poets and painters employed their respective talents in giving celebrity to the glorious issue of the great contest.

Mr. Wright concluded his lecture with a practical application of his subject. Next year, he said, the three hundredth anniversary of the rout of the Spanish Armada occurred. Englishmen the world over ought to mark the event in some way, so that its influence might not be lessened or lost sight of. But Plymouth had strong reasons for taking the initiative in the celebration. The port was so closely identified with the navy of England at that time, and with the man who compassed the overthrow of the Spanish fleet, that it seemed but fitting that Plymouth men should take the lead in promoting a demonstration afloat and on shore worthy of the great event, and in placing on record the gratitude the nineteenth century felt towards the brave defenders of Old England's liberties and independence in the sixteenth century. Those heroes in the face of desperate odds, with that cool, daring, and dogged determination which still characterises British sailors and soldiers, placed upon impregnable firmness our national rights and liberties. Let Plymothians then rise equal to the occasion, and show their appreciation of what was done for the country three hundred years ago. He would refrain from going fully into the details of the proposed celebration, especially as shortly an opportunity would be given at a public meeting called by the Mayor, to hear all that could be said for and against the project. He would only say that it was in no spirit of antagonism with the Spain or Spaniards of to-day, and with no desire to arouse national antipathies that were supposed to be buried, that the celebration was conceived, but simply because it was felt that England should never forget the great debt of gratitude it owes to the actors in that great chain of events which led to that Providential deliverance, the incidents of which he had just narrated.

Much interest was manifested in the lecture, which was illustrated by a large painting by Admiral Beechey (Mr. Wright announced that it was not finished) and several engravings. A cordial vote of thanks was accorded the lecturer, to which he responded, and the audience separated.

Did Shakspere serve on board one of the ships which went out to attack the Spanish Armada? That is the interesting question which Mr. Wright suggested in his admirable lecture at the Plymouth Mechanics' Institute on Tuesday. In 1588 the author of "Hamlet" was about 24 years of age, and it is about that period of his life that there is no reliable evidence available. His dramas certainly contain what may fairly be regarded as internal evidence that he spent a part of his life at sea. In "The Tempest," "The Winter's Tale," and other of his dramas references to the sea and sailors abound. But if Shakspere were no sailor he was among the sturdiest of patriots and had no love for the Dons. If actual participation in the event did not, certainly the recollection of the defeat of the Armada, inspired him to write in "King John" these spirited lines—

> "This England never did, nor never shall,
> Lie at the proud foot of a conqueror,
> But when it first did help to wound itself.
> Come the three corners of the world in arms,
> And we shall shock them: nought shall make us rue,
> If England to itself do rest but true."

[Reprinted from the "Western Morning News" of November 31, 1887.]

HOW INDIA HAS GROWN SINCE THE EMPRESS'S ACCESSION.

A SERIES of letters are being published by the Times on "The Expansion of India," and "The India of the Queen," which are deserving of attention, since they show how wonderfully God has blessed our nation, and what great things He is doing for us. During the Queen's reign, says a correspondent of the Times eight great wars have been waged in India, besides minor military operations. Ten territories have been conquered or annexed, with a population of about forty-five millions of people, and an area exceeding 400,000 square miles. Sir Richard Temple states the latter figure at 528,700, including certain tracts brought less directly under British administration. Broadly speaking, therefore, Queen Victoria's reign has witnessed the acquisition of nearly one-fourth of the present population, and about one-half of the present area of British India. The first fact to be grasped is, that when Her Majesty ascended the Throne, the Indian territories under

Digitized by Google

English rule were little more than a half of the British India of to-day." The great development occurred during the Viceroyalty of the Marquis of Dalhousie, who came out to India to inaugurate an everlasting peace, but found himself plunged in wars which invariably ended in the acquisition of fresh territory for the East India Company. Yet Lord Dalhousie did great things for the Civil Government of the country. Here is the list of his achievements recorded by the Times:—

He opened the Ganges Canal. He founded the modern Department of Public Works. He gave the great impulse from the Indian side to the overland route and to steam communication, viâ the Red Sea, with England. He cut the first sod of an Indian Railway. Under his orders the first line of electric telegraph posts across India was set up. His engineers metalled a longer mileage of roads than had been constructed by the four preceding Governor-Generals. His Revenue officers settled the assessment of the soil, and recorded the land-rights of the people throughout a large area. He introduced cheap postage into India. On the system of Public Instruction inaugurated during his rule the education of India still rests.

In regard to certain native States at the commencement of the Queen's reign, and their condition now, the picture drawn by the Times correspondent is vivid and graphic. He wrote that at the Queen's accession,

Four States, or groups of States, severely taxed the resources and tried the patience of Indian diplomatists. The luxurious Mahommedan Court of Oude, a Sodom of profligacy and misrule, oppressed the northern valley of the Ganges. The religious and military confederation of the Sikhs ruled the Punjab beyond our furthest frontier on the north-west. A warlike aristocracy held Scinde in the extreme west. The powerful Mahratta State of Nagpore occupied the heart of India. Oude is now a British province, Scinde is a British province, Nagpore is a British province, the Punjab is now a British province.

The case of Burmah is more remarkable still. It is thus described by this facile writer:—

The three wars which, in 1824-26, 1852, and 1885, led to the annexation of this province, tell their own story of the increased weight of resources which the Indian Government now brings to bear at every point of its empire. The first Burmese war in 1824 lasted over two costly and bloody years; and five more years were spent in guerilla fighting before order could be finally evolved. The second Burmese war in 1852 was of less, but still of serious difficulty. The actual military operations proved incomplete. Standing camps of banditti maintained their positions during two years, and eight years elapsed before a completely successful administration was established. The third Burmese war in 1885 was not so much a campaign as a military progress. The country has been flooded with troops and armed police, recruited from the distant northern races who, 40 years ago, were our most formidable enemies. There is every reason to hope that within two years and a half of the landing of the force in 1885, Upper Burmah will have peacefully settled down under civil rule. Yet the territories now annexed exceed the acquisitions of 1826 and 1852 put together; and their geographical position presented difficulties which the East India Company might well have hesitated to face. On all the three occasions the provocation was equally persistent, and the necessity for war equally imperative. But the history of the past two years in Burmah forms a significant contrast to the wars of 1824 and 1852 for completenesss of design, for swiftness of execution, and for that truest humanity which, by the employment of all available means, shortens the pangs of the new birth.

Besides the above God-given successes and triumphs of Government, we have nationally protected India during Her Majesty's reign from foreign invasion and the horrors of war. We have almost abolished famines, and so saved the frightful loss of human life to which India was subject in the times before our conquests. We have given India railways, telegraphs, commerce, roads, education, the Bible and the teaching of the missionary of the Gospel, besides unbounded liberty. We have raised India high in the social scale, and made her indispensable to our own countrymen. In 1837 India was a retail dealer in luxuries, exporting ten millions sterling a year of articles consumed by the rich. In 1887 she is a wholesale exporter of ninety millions worth of goods needed by the poor, for she is "a cotton spinner, a cheap grain merchant on an enormous scale, supplying food to the English labourer in keen competition with the Norfolk wheat-grower and the Lancashire mill-hand."

Such is the land God has given us, and such the results of the fifty years' stewardship wherewith we have been entrusted during the Queen's reign. India has been a splendid gift to our race, and faithfully we have as a nation been enabled to carry out our duties towards the inhabitants of that our heritage. "He hath shewed His people the power of His works in giving them the heritage of the nations" (or Heathen) (Psa. cxi. 6, R.V.). That gift is one made to Israel, and our possession of India, and the facts and history of that wondrous land during the last fifty years (being the years of our Sovereign's reign), testify that we are God's people, His heritage, and inheritance. To Him be all the praise!

THE TESTIMONY OF SOUTH AMERICA.

We hear much in these days of the decline of British energy and perseverance in trade, and of the rapid strides which the merchants of foreign nations (especially the Germans) are making to dispossess our own, and acquire for themselves the markets of the world. In South America especially, it is asserted the decline of British commerce and initiation is most apparent, and there it is declared the Germans are beating us by patient attention to business details, and by thrift in their manner of life.

The Scotsman of Dec. 28th, publishes a very different story. It appears that Dr. R. Jannash is the President of the Society for promoting German Interests abroad. A German trader in the Argentine Republic, has written to him complaining of the want of enterprise of German merchants in South America. Much of the land there, and most of the financial business of the Republic, he complains, is in the hands of the British! "Everywhere the Germans are acting as the managers of great commercial undertakings, but the capital is British capital!" In the Argentine Republic it appears that the British are rapidly advancing to a position of commercial supremacy. The best paying factories have passed into British hands there! "The Argentine Republic has negociated a loan with British capitalists for the construction of their great railways, and the rails needed, as well as the materials for construction, have all been supplied by British manufacturers." British capitalists have bought up the land alongside the railways, and so left German and Italian immigrants the option merely of cultivating the soil for the benefit of British native land owners. The foreigners from the Continent of Europe, thus are, and always have been at a disadvantage for lack of capital, or "the power to get wealth," and consequently cannot but take a subordinate position to their more wealthy and equally resolute British rivals. Dr. Jannash says that Men of enterprise, such as the writer of the letter referred to, are forced to have recourse to Great Britain. There they can obtain the money which is needed for the development of their plans, and profitable investments are lost to German capital and German industry. British gold by means of British agents buys the German worker. British steamers carry passengers and cargoes across the seas. British gold hires the German to build railways, to clear the primeval forest, and to open up new mines. In short the German is made the economic peon of the foreign capitalist, instead of becoming the enricher of the fatherland by employing German capital under the protection of a provident and benevolent emigration law. But in the meantime the writer of the letter referred to, and all such as he, must have recourse to England, where he will find "a good understanding, enterprise, and the wherewithal."

Digitized by Google

So far the German. The possession of the "wherewithal" is (humanly speaking) the chief point. And in the Divine economy too, it is of the greatest moment, because on Israel's possession of the "wherewithal" depends the ability of the Lord God of Israel (with reverence be it said) to carry out His purposes, His oath and counsel towards "Abraham and his seed for ever." For in Deut. viii. 18, R.V., the well-known passage occurs, "But thou shalt remember the Lord thy God; for it is He that giveth thee power to get wealth; that He may establish His covenant which He sware unto thy fathers as it is this day." By the wealth entrusted to Israel the Lord means to work out the performance of His covenant sworn to the fathers, and without it He does not mean to put it in execution. Israel is "to inherit the earth," but it is through the possession of capital, acquired by "the power to get wealth," that she assumes a dominant position everywhere! South America is a case in point; and shows us that there, as everywhere else, the wandering race is settling down in vast numbers, foremost in capital, and in manufacturing energy; employing the labour of Germans and Italians, but in the position of command even there, and that wholly and entirely, because being Israel, God has made them "the head and not the tail, above only and not beneath" in the acquisition and employment of wealth, which is capital. The numerical increase of British-Israel as a people also contributes to the result, for not only do our countrymen flock out to South America in large numbers, but they also settle down in communities round the coasts of the Continent, just as the Scriptures declared Israel should do, and promise to become a very powerful and influential body in the country. They are already 300,000 strong, dotted about the littoral of South America. Backed by the capital of their old Mother in the West these masses of energetic settlers are sure to leave their mark upon the country, and prepare it at last to bend like the rest of the world to the widespread power of the Lord's inheritance, Israel.

ISRAEL'S SCARE RESPECTING DELAGOA BAY.

THERE is a veritable panic regarding Delagoa Bay. It has arisen in consequence of the completion of the Portuguese section of the Delagoa Bay Railway, and of the sudden apparition of Germany on the scene, posing as the protector of the Transvaal and Amatongaland, as well as of Swatziland. She will thus become virtually the master of the new railway, with preponderating power at the Gate, Delagoa Bay. The facts that give such vast importance to this bay as a first-class maritime Gate, we have noted before in vol. xi., pp. 357, 358. In the first place it is the only coaling station on the entire coast of South-east Africa. It commands the Transvaal, being its only outlet to the sea. It commands also the road to the new British gold mines in and near the Transvaal, and is the outlet for a vast trade in coal and other commodities which the Cape and Natal require, but which, if Germany is to sit astride the road to Delagoa Bay, will be diverted into foreign channels to the lasting injury of Israel and her South African interests. But are the Germans desirous of acquiring this commanding position in South Africa, so detrimental to our own? The answer is conveyed in a statement by the Berlin correspondent of the Morning Post, of Dec. 13, giving the following "startling information." The Financial News has published the words in italics, thus:—

I hear on the best authority, that a new colonial society will be formed to trade to the Amatonga territories, and will receive the protection of the Government. The Germans seem to be determined to control to a great extent the trade in South-east Africa, and for this purpose a treaty with the Queen of Amatonga is to be negotiated, as well as a convention with the Boers, which will drive out many foreign manufactures that may be supplied by the German trade. The German element is already largely represented in Amatonga, and, according to good authority, with considerable success.

It is the policy of President Krüger, of the Transvaal, in his hatred of the British gold-mining invasion his country is suffering, to encourage this German protectorate without regard to what its results will be for his own territory if successful. The Germans, they think, will balance the British element, and so prevent the latter becoming possessors of the land. Accordingly the plan has been adopted of giving the construction of the Transvaal Railway (250 miles) from Pretoria to the terminus of the Portuguese section (54 miles) just finished, into the hands of a Dutch-German syndicate, and so securing German influence over five-sixths of the line between Pretoria and Delagoa Bay. It is hoped by intrigue to obtain German predominance over the remaining one-fifth belonging to Portugal, and so make Germany supreme in South Africa, to the great detriment of the trade, valued at £10,000,000 per annum, belonging to the Cape. The provoking part of the matter is that Delagoa Bay was once claimed by Britain, and that the dispute being referred to the arbitration of Marshal MacMahon, the French President, in 1875, he (as usual in such cases) decided against Great Britain and in favour of Portugal. Soon after that we could have purchased this Gate for a trifle. But now that the enormous value of it is ascertained there will be no hope of securing it without a large sacrifice of money. The Government of our country meanwhile seems passive and indifferent regarding the proceedings of Germany, the Boers, and Portugal in the matter, though the Cape and Natal colonists are greatly excited lest the golden opportunity should be lost, and Delagoa Bay and its advantages be allowed to lapse into the rival hands of Germany for want of energetic action at this most critical moment. Regarding this subject the Morning Post wrote the following:—

Do English merchants, do the traders with South Africa, know what this means? South-east Africa, from Port Elizabeth to St. Lucia Bay, is English. Just beyond the latter we come upon Amatongaland and Delagoa Bay. The control of Amatongaland will not only give to the Boers that access to the sea which would be ruinous to British commercial interests; it would give to the German protectorate a claim to Delagoa Bay itself. If this be permitted, England might as well renounce at once her interests in South Africa—might give up as impracticable the alternative sea route to India. The Queen of Amatonga has implored, and vainly implored, a British protectorate. If she is turning now to the Germans, she turns in despair. Meanwhile, Sir Henry Holland sits still, and wags not a finger to prevent the perpetration of an act which would be fatal to British supremacy.

Mr. H. Rider Haggard, the novelist, in his letter to the Times, of Dec. 17, fully endorses the alarmist views of a correspondent in the same paper. He declares Delagoa Bay is the "finest harbour in South Africa—nay, the finest in the world!" He regards the situation as very black indeed, and though he admits that the gold miners will so increase our British influence as to cause "the Transvaal to drop once more into the lap of the British Empire," he seems quite prepared to see Germany sweep us all into the sea and come off the victor in the race for South African Empire and commerce. He wrote thus:—

The Germans, we can scarcely doubt, will wisely avail themselves of their great opportunity, should it be opened to them by the Transvaal Government. And then we shall draw near to the final catastrophe. The long record of costly imbecility which distinguishes the history of our rule in South Africa, will close in the loss of our authority and of a vast and growing trade. The surrender of the Transvaal was a shock which shook our power to its foundations; the completion of the Delagoa Bay Railway under hostile auspices and the establishment of a German protectorate across the Vaal would probably complete its ruin.

"Probably"! Yes, if the British were not Israel and the

Digitized by Google

Germans were not Gentiles, non-Israelites, by race. To Israel was promised the Gates. The Gate in question, Delagoa Bay, is a "Gate of Gates," "the finest in the world," according to Rider Haggard. Why then should God prove faithless, and allow the Germans to command there, when it is vital to Israel that she should possess it? The idea is preposterous! We are prepared on the issue of this one question to lean the whole weight of our controversy with the Rev. R. Douglas, and to admit that he is right regarding the Teutonic theory, if it be found that the British are finally ousted, and the Germans, Dutch, or Portuguese, are allowed at last to dominate at the spot! We are also willing to stake our whole general contention on this one issue. For if Delagoa Bay, being a commanding "Gate," be not given at last to Britain as Israel, but lapses finally to some other race, not Israel at all, then we shall freely admit that the doctrine of the Gates is false, that Israel does not exist, and that we and all Anglo-Israelites are mistaken in toto. We beg our readers, then, to watch these results, and never to let our opponents hear the last of it, when, as we fully expect will be the case, Israel is ensconced at Delagoa Bay as the mistress thereof, or dominating it at least, to the praise of the faithfulness of the Lord God of Israel, our glorious Promiser.

Let our friends also note the fact that just as Germany is struggling to defeat us in the matter of world-wide colonies, commerce, wealth, and influence, at that very time the quarrel between Russia, on the one side, and of Germany and Austria united on the other, is waxing hot, leading probably and very possibly to the great earthquake woe, during the terrors of which German dreams of world-wide possessions and commerce will, we believe, collapse and utterly disappear.

"THE FOUNDER OF NATIONS."

IN the Montreal Gazette of Nov. 25 last, we have the report of a speech by Mr. George William Curtis, an American, in response to the toast, "The English-speaking Race," given at a dinner of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce at Montreal. Some sentences of his address we are glad to quote, because though he spoke in high praise of his own country, the United States, he attributed its grandeur to its derivation from "The Founder of Nations," the British, or English people. He said:

The sentiment which you have read, Mr. Chairman, describes in a few comprehensive words the historic characteristics of the English-speaking race. That it is the founder of commonwealths let the miracles of empire which they have wrought upon the Western Continent attest. It has advanced from the seaboard with the rifle and the axe, the plough and the shuttle, a teapot and the Bible, a rocking chair and a spelling book, a bath tub and a free constitution, sweeping across the Alleghanies, over-spreading the prairies, and pushing on until the dash of the Atlantic in their ears dies in the murmur of the Pacific, and as whenever the goddess of the old mythology touched the earth flowers and fruits answered her footfall, so in the long trail of this advancing race it has left clusters of happy States teeming with a population, man by man, more intelligent and prosperous than ever before the sun shone upon—and each remoter camp of that triumphal march is but a further outpost of English-speaking civilisation. That it is the pioneer of progress is written all over the globe to the utmost isles of the sea, and upon every page of the history of civil and religious and commercial freedom. Every factory that hums with marvellous machinery, every railway and steamer, every telegraph and telephone, the changed systems of agriculture, the endless and universal throb and heat of magical invention, are in their larger part but the expression of the genius of the race that with Watts drew from the airiest vapour the mightiest of motive powers; with Franklin leashed the lightning, and with Morse outfabled fairy lore. The race that extorted from kings the charter of its political rights has won from the princes and powers of the air, the earth, and the water the secret of supreme dominion, the illimitable franchise of beneficent material progress. That it is the stubborn defender of liberty let our own annals answer, for America sprang from the defence of English liberty in English colonies by men of English blood, who still proudly speak the English language, cherish English traditions, and share of right, and as their own, the ancient glory of England.

Such is the panegyric of an American, expressed in rather stilted language, it must be confessed, regarding the great and wonderful race, which, in spite of "The Messenger's" protest, he will insist on calling "the English," and "England"! This race, however, whatever its designation may be, is "the founder of commonwealths," or nations, and the originator of empires, according to Mr. Curtis. We suppose he does not know much about the prophetic destiny of Israel, as pictured in the Holy Scriptures. But if he will consult its pages he will find that the only nation named therein to which the description he gives of our own people accurately applies is the Israelitish. To that alone the promise is made by God Himself, that they should develop into "a nation and a company of nations," a "multitude," and "a fulness of nations" (Gen. xvii. 4, 5, xxxv. 11, xlviii. 19). Turning then to history he will find that never since the world began has a nation developed into "a nation and company of nations," living side by side under a single throne, until the present hour. The founder of commonwealths and nations is now at last before the world, and the nations she has begotten are content to live under her guardianship and flag, perfectly loyal to the common sovereign, and steadfastly resolved never to achieve their own independence or pursue an independent course like the United States, separated from their "old mother in the West."

Mr. Curtis unwittingly drew Israel's portrait when he so eloquently described the grandeur of the British races. He tells us that the English-speaking British race is "the pioneer of progress all over the globe, to the utmost isles of the sea," religious and commercial freedom being her great characteristic. But these are the lineaments of Israel; who, after taking root, are destined to "blossom and bud, and fill the face of the world with fruit." The isles are her British home, and in the isles, the coasts and ends of the earth, the triumphs of British civil and religious liberty and commerce are recorded largely. To Israel was given the privilege, in Isa. lviii. 6, "of loosing the bonds of wickedness, of undoing the bands of the yoke, and letting the oppressed go free, breaking every yoke." To what Power do these words apply, in their world-wide significance, but the British, who are the emancipators of the slave, the guardians of weaker nations, and the national police of the ocean highways of the world? Mr. Curtis sees not all this, but misses the very point which gives such significance to the facts he records. Ours have been in truth "miracles of empire," but they are miracles or wonders only because they relate to a miraculous people—sons of the living God, whose manifestation, according to the prophecies, is accompanied by just such wonders as Mr. Curtis notices, because they are fulfilments of prophecies and the outcome of a history which God Himself, the God of Israel, has foreseen and foretold.

These miracles of history have, besides, a great and glorious purpose. They have to stand as testimonies to the fact, which the world is inclined to forget, "that God exists," and that His hand has guided the career of this His miraculous people, who are formed, made, created, and fashioned that they might show forth His praise (Isa. xliii. 1, 7, 21). A people so honoured by the glorious Creator of the worlds, has indeed suffered His people "to win from the princes and powers of the air, the earth, and the water, the secret of supreme dominion;" but He has done this because they are in truth "the heirs of the world," and destined as the subjects of His own kingdom to rule all kingdoms and dominions under the whole heaven, guided by His glorious sceptre, whose dominion will be an everlasting dominion, claiming and receiving the service, homage, and obedience of all the rulers of the earth (Rom. iv. 13; Dan. vii. 22, 27). Knowing this, how can our "English" folk fail to praise the Lord for His unmerited goodness to their so unworthy race?

Digitized by Google

A BLESSING IN THE MIDST OF THE LAND OF EGYPT.

On November 2, p. 441 of the BANNER, No. 566, we drew attention to one phase of our nation's work in Egypt, and proved that therein we had become a blessing to that country according to the prophecies (Isa. xix. 24, R.V.). We had, by God's blessing, abolished slavery in the land, and that we showed was "good fruit," since the curse of the slave trade had been the ruin of Egypt, and its abolition was a boon to its inhabitants, of a value which is simply incalculable. We have now to point out another aspect of the case. We can show, by reference to the yearly report of Sir Colin Scott Moncrieff, the Under Secretary of State for the Egyptian Public Works' Department, that a great work has been carried on by him in one department, to which alone we can now allude. We quote from a letter published in the Times on November 16, by "A Twenty Years' Resident in Egypt," wherein, commenting on Sir Colin's report, he wrote as follows:—

"In 1886 the sum spent in corvée relief was £E265,066, and the numbers were reduced to 95,093." Now, what does this mean? No one has ever yet been able to estimate what the corvée system has cost to Egypt. There is, first, the number of men employed, and we may estimate the value of their labour lost to the country; there is the feeding of these men, for which the Government was charged, but the food in exchange for which the unhappy labourer seldom received; there is the cost of the food which he had to buy instead; there is the labour of the men's wives and families employed in bringing that food, frequently from long distances. I wish to err on the safe side, to avoid a semblance of exaggeration, and will estimate the cost of each man's labour and all incidental charges to himself and the Government at two shillings per head diem. And with this explanation let the following tabular statement of the last four years speak for itself:—

Year.	Number of men employed.	Period of Work.	Cost per day.	Cost of Corvee.	Spent in paid labour.	Total cost.
1883...	202,650	100 days	2s.	£2,026,500	Nothing	£2,026,500
1884...	165,105	100 days	2s.	1,651,050	Nothing	1,651,050
1885...	125,936	100 days	2s.	1,259,360	£116,535	1,375,895
1886...	95,093	100 days	2s.	950,930	265,066	1,215,999

—a saving, that is, as between 1883 and 1886 of £840,534 per annum. If time and space allowed I might multiply such instances in this and other departments, but at present I am only concerned to show the fallacy of deductions based on an imperfect knowledge of figures unaccompanied by facts. The work we have done in Egypt in five years will compare favourably with the far longer record of our Empire in India.

The same writer summed up the benefits we had conferred upon Egypt during our five years' administration of its affairs; and this is how he does it. He said, referring to our nation's undoubted unpopularity with the late ruling classes in Egypt:—

The objects which we set before ourselves have been—the destruction of all unjust inequalities, the fair adjustment of taxation, the equal distribution of water, the abolition of forced labour, of corruption, of sinecure offices, and of illegal transactions. We have instituted an inquiry into the origin of pensions. By a better arrangement of the fiscal year we have enabled the fellah to pay when his crop came in instead of borrowing in advance. By better financial management we have reduced the current rate of interest from 18 to 6 per cent. In every single reform we have vitally injured one or other of the interests of all that class who rule public opinion in Egypt. Is our unpopularity to be wondered at? Is it to be deplored? Would the philanthropists who regret our unpopularity wish to purchase a cheap popularity by a continuation of all the old abuses? Nothing would be easier. We have only to return to the ways of Mehemet Ali and of Ismail, to hand over the country to the 300,000 brigands and bazouks, to let them bring the fellah again to that starvation-point at which a man has not got courage to grumble, to reinstitute the kourbash, and to silence effectually the murmurs. We have only, I say, to do this and the golden days of Ismail will return. There will be no more grumbling or insurrection then than there was 20 years ago, when one Bedraoni Bey was thrashed to death for his taxes; no more revolt of the fellaheen than there was after Ismail had destroyed a village because a dahabeah was robbed; no more intolerance of Europeans than there was the day after the French Consul had caused a native to be hanged for insulting him. We shall return to "the sweet simplicity of the twenty per cents."

There is no difficulty about this method of government. The fellah is easily ruled by the kourbash; 300,000 potential voices shall arise and call us blessed; 6,500,000 will silently acquiesce!

But, if we say that we will not do this thing, if we hold that we have a higher duty to this people than that of purchasing their cheap applause, we must disregard this clamour for popularity, we must cease to look for gratitude as a reward, and then, perhaps, in time to come we may deserve and receive it; but meanwhile our unpopularity is the measure of our success.

So far "The Resident in Egypt." With a million sterling spent on the public works of that land, Sir Colin S. Moncrieff has effected wonders there. He has given liberty and hope to the miserable fellaheen of Egypt, and he has removed from their neck the grasp of their oppressors. The latter therefore, hate us for our interference; but by our beneficent administration we have saved the down-trodden population, and delivered them from a terrible thraldom (Isa. xix. 20). Surely this work and labour of love will never be allowed to die away, and the British Protectorate, which has done such wonders for the land, can never be superseded by the government of any other Power, none of whom have ever shown the least mercy towards the peasantry of Egypt, or tried to save them from those who have ground them down into the dust. Let Israel, therefore, praise the Lord!

ANTIPODEAN NEWS.

WE have just received a newspaper from New Zealand entitled "The Lyttletown Times." On 21st Oct. last, the following paragraph appeared therein, showing that Our Identity has its believers, and its association at Christchurch, New Zealand, publishing the good news and discussing its chief features as well as its difficulties.

Our opponents are bound to face the fact of the very wide and free diffusion of our subject, and the world-wide character of the circulation of the BANNER. Recognising this, the question arises and demands an answer, how does the fact of this wide diffusion of the literature of "Our Identity" tally with the supposition that its subject is founded on a baseless craze, the work of designing and unscrupulous fanatics? We appeal to the Scriptures and to patent historical and current facts, regarding which there can be no mistake. We present these to reasonable men and ask them to exercise their judgments on them, reasonably. The Scriptures literally interpreted, and current facts intelligently viewed, suffice as our arguments, and we are content to abide by the result. In Lyttletown, Christchurch, the association is evidently adopting a prudent and wise course. They discuss foundation truths, and obvious difficulties and objections, the result, no doubt, being an increase of interest in their proceedings and objects, with God's blessing accompanying. The report is as follows:—

BRITISH-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION, SYDENHAM.—This Association held its usual meeting on Tuesday evening. The subject for the evening was brought forward by the President. He gave a brief outline of the history of the Houses of Judah and Israel—the former to the destruction of Jerusalem by Titus in A.D. 70, and the latter to the Assyrian captivity in B.C. 721. He then went on to state the basis on which the belief that the British are Israel is founded. He also noticed some errors that were entertained by some in connection with that belief, showing that though all Jews are Israelites, all Israelites are not Jews; that, so far from this belief tending to form a sect, its universal reception would do away with all sects; and that belief in British-Israelism is not necessary to salvation. In the course of his address, he pointed out the peculiar position of Dan, as the pioneer of the Israelites to their place of rest till the return; and that of Benjamin, which tribe was lent to Judah for a time, to be a light-bearer, namely to be with that House till Christ's coming, and then to carry the gospel to the rest of the tribes of Israel. After an animated discussion, Mr Parker promised to speak next meeting on the "Travels of Jacob," and of the position of Britain and Russia towards each other.

Digitized by Google

A COUPLE OF DIFFICULTIES SUGGESTED FROM TASMANIA.

MR. E. L. DWYER, one of the local treasurers and agents of the Anglo-Israel Free Distribution Fund, a resident in Launceston, Tasmania, has sent us the letter of an inquirer in that city suggesting the following as two of the difficulties in his way to accepting the Identity of "The British with Lost Israel" which he cannot get over. He begs our solution of these knotty points, on which he desires light to be thrown. They are these: 1st. If Christian Britain be "Lost Israel" of the Ten Tribes, how are the last chapters of Ezekiel to be explained? There all the Twelve Tribes are represented as located in their own land surrounding the new temple, offering the daily sacrifices and carrying out the Jewish Ritual, which has been done away with, once for all, by the New Covenant.

2nd. What evidence is there that the Apostles were all Benjamites, as our writers assert? How can this be proved? St. Paul clearly was of Benjamin. But our Lord's brothers must have been Jews? And Luke—was he not a Levite?

The inquirer professes to be alive to the importance of the general question, but desires light on these two points first.

In regard to the first question—viz., Ezekiel's prophecies as to the future, we suggest to our distant friend that since these particular prophecies relate to the future we had better leave them alone till the future shows us the true meaning of this scripture! None of us are prophets; and it is not our function "to prophesy from prophecy;" what we have to do is to wait till prophecy has been fulfilled; and then to proclaim to mankind that fact, pointing out also the bearing of the facts, as we all can see them. What Ezekiel's prophecies may mean we cannot yet tell; and it seems idle to guess? Some shrewd guesses have been made, which may or may not be correct. No one can say they are! But we may be quite sure of one thing. These sacrifices and observances will be quite consistent with Christian belief and Christian reliance on the antitypical sacrifice of Jesus Christ, the Son of God. Thus it is suggested that as the Mosaic sacrifice, and the blood of animals, typified the then future sacrifice of Calvary, so now "the bread and wine" are unbloody memorials of the past sacrifice of Jesus, which we, as Christians, celebrate according to His command, "till He come." But after the Second Advent how is the memorial to be continued? "Just as Ezekiel declares," is the guess of many. The Lord then prescribes a return to the bloody sacrifices of beasts, to bring back to mind and to memorialise the past sacrifice of Calvary. Whether this guess be right or wrong, none may say; but we must leave it till the event shall show. In regard to the second question our authority for supposing that all the original twelve apostles were of Benjamin, save Judas Iscariot, is Archdeacon Farrar, who supposes that only Judas the traitor was of Jewish origin. Our Lord's brethren and Luke were not of the twelve. Here again we must remind our distant inquirers that the nationality of the twelve apostles is a very subordinate point, and one quite irrelevant to the main issue in judging the truth of our contention that the British are the Ten Tribes of the House of Joseph. Even if our writers have erred in the matter, how does that affect, or how can it affect, the great point that the British Empire is "The Remnant of Israel?" Surely, if our friend in Tasmania had lost his favourite horse or dog, and had discovered an animal exactly corresponding in every particular to the one which had strayed, he would not, in solving the question of identity, worry himself by asking what the future of the lost animal was likely to be, or try to discover the name and nationalities of those by whom in time past the animal had once been owned? His only business would be to discover if the strayed dog just found answered in all respects to the one he once had and then lost, and whether any existing fact negatived the presumption that the dog or horse then present was his own? Let him decide this question of our nation's Identity by the evidence before him; and then, when he is satisfied, (as he will be, if reasonable), that the British are Israel, he may safely leave all such inquiries as those he has sent us for time to decide, or for the determination of those to whom it may be interesting to know if the original twelve apostles were Israelites, as surmised, or Jews, or both. The question is irrelevant to the issue, and its decision as far as we are aware must be uncertain, since there are really no data on which we may decide, saving a violent presumption that Farrar was perfectly correct.

We hope our Tasmanian objector will now throw doubts to the winds, and heart and soul cling to the belief that he is an Israelite. He will then include in his daily prayers such an one for this nation as Jer. xxxi. 33, 34, and Heb. viii. 10—12, will suggest to him!

BRITISH CONTRIBUTIONS TO FOREIGN MISSION WORK.

CANON SCOTT ROBERTSON has completed his Annual Summary, and finds that, for the year 1886, the British Isles contributed less by £33,237 to foreign missionary work than they did for 1885. The total for 1886 was £1,195,714. Of this amount £486,082 was contributed through Church of England societies; £193,617 through unsectarian or joint societies; £330,128 through Nonconformist societies; and £177,184 through Scotch and Irish Presbyterian societies; and £8,703 through Roman Catholic societies.

The above, taken from the Times, of November 28, tells its own tale. Israel's work for the Lord in foreign missions has fallen off a little during the last year, which was one of exceptional distress and difficulty to large masses of our people. The total of British contributions to foreign missions by Protestants was still large, and contrasts wonderfully with the wretched pittance of £8,703 which Roman Catholic Societies contributed to the cause. What the sum contributed by Protestants might and ought to be has been well shown by the Rev. James Johnston, F.S.S., in his little pamphlet, "A Century of Protestant missions." One of his conclusions singularly illustrates our favourite text from Deut. viii. 18, where it is promised, "Thou shalt remember the Lord thy God. For it is He that giveth thee power to get wealth; that He may establish His covenant which He sware unto thy fathers as it is this day." Mr. Johnston says in regard to this point: "That by greatly multiplying the wealth of Christians, and by raising up a spiritual agency all over the world, God now gives His people the means, and calls upon them to multiply missionary work ten-fold." One of Mr. Johnston's great points is that "although three millions of converts have been added to the Church, there are now 200 millions more heathen in the world than there were when Protestant missions began 100 years ago." He urges therefore that Christians ought, by the consecration of their talents and wealth, with faith and prayer, to show their loyalty to their Lord's last command; or they will, like the rich man in the parable, go on "heaping up treasure for the last day."

In regard to these and other like reproaches which men level at our Christian Churches and nation generally, respecting want of liberality to the cause of mission, all we have to say is, that if the object of the Lord were to convert every man and woman of the heathen and merely professing Christian worlds, there ought to be manifestly no limit to the gifts of Christ's people Israel for this object. But is that His purpose? On the contrary is it not limited to the preaching of the Gospel to all nations, as a witness, before the end come, as He Himself very distinctly told us in Matt. xxiv. 14? The object, then, was and is to preach the Gospel among all people "for a witness," not that all may be converted and live. The probability, then, is that enough money is subscribed at the present day to enable the Lord to carry out this His purpose, and that if more were required He would call upon and move His people to supply it, since "the silver and the gold are His," and we cannot hold it back when He demands it to carry out His work (Haggai ii. 8). We believe, then, that the question is not now the number of the converts we can win from heathenism, but whether the Gospel has yet been preached "among all nations," and whether they have as nations been warned "to flee from the wrath to come" (Luke iii. 7). If that work has been so far effectively performed, then we do not see by what right or for what reason the Rev. J. Johnston reproaches the Lord's anointed? They are doing His work according to His will, and He is blessing them in every possible imaginable way. Why should Mr. Johnston call them to do more than God Himself demands at present, since confessedly the British and American peoples are taking the Gospel to "all nations, families, and kindreds of the earth" according to the prophecies and the commands of the Lord Jesus Christ? Apart from this point, Mr. Johnston publishes some very curious statistics, which will be interesting to our readers. He states that

Digitized by Google

The total annual income of all classes in the United Kingdom to-day is ...	£1,000,000,000
The total annual income of Government is ...	90,000,000
„ expenditure for Army and Navy is	30,000,000
„ „ „ Education is ...	5,000,000
„ Cost of Collection	10,000,000
„ income of all Missionary Societies ...	1,250,000

Then follows a list which Mr. Johnston declares ought to make us blush at the thought of the tribunal of God.

To protect our Empire this nation has spent:—

In the war with France ...	1793—1815	...	£831,446,000
„ Russian war ...	1854—1856	...	69,277,000
„ China war ...	1856—1861	...	6,640,000
„ Abyssinian Expedition	1866	...	8,600,000
„ Zulu and Transvaal	1879—1880	...	4,821,720
„ Egyptian Expedition	1882—1885	...	9,418,965

The savings of this nation amount to between 230 and 240 millions sterling a year. The Rev. Mr. Johnston wants to know why one-fourth or one-sixth of this enormous sum could not be given to strengthen our missionary societies and improve their methods of work? He puts the subject also in another way, a very common and very taking way, proving (if the comparison be true and just) that British-Israel as a nation is the most ungrateful, recreant race upon the face of the earth, and deserving of God's curse instead of His blessing, showered upon us in every possible way, as it is this day.

"Let our country," says Mr. Johnston, look at the following:—

Spent annually on beer, spirits, and wine ...		£124,000,000
„ „ tobaccos and snuff ...		13,000,000
„ „ amusements		12,500,000
„ „ missions to heathen ...		1,250,000

"Why cannot Christian men," he asks, "spend a few millions on the extension of the kingdom of the Christ of God and the benefit of the heathen who know not the Saviour of men?" But what if the Saviour of men knows well what He wants, and is providing accordingly with His own? Did He not delay the proclamation of the message practically to the beginning of this century, or the end of the last? Was it Israel's fault that the world was not evangelised before the Lord's time came for the glorious news to begin to circulate? The messengers were in existence, but the Spirit of God had not moved; and did He hold Israel responsible because the work of evangelisation had not advanced appreciably before 1799? In the present year great advances have been made, and there hardly remains a nation, family, or kindred of mankind where the Israel of God has not taken the good news. The Gospel has been preached to all nations, and we wait "the end" according to the word of the Lord. But are we blameable and obnoxious to His wrath because we have not spent twelve, twenty, forty, or sixty millions a year instead of one and a quarter, in order that we might (as we vainly suppose we should) convert the world by a larger money expense, and by a greater body of labourers, than those the Lord has called forth? The Lord does not want the world converted now! He wants the Gospel to be preached everywhere throughout the world "for a witness" against the world, and that He might in every nation gather in His witnesses. "He is visiting the Gentiles to take out of them a people for His name" (Acts xv. 14, R. V.). But He nowhere tells us that He requires us His people to put out efforts commensurate with the conversion of the entire heathen Mahommedan and infidel world! Their conversion will take place further on, when "the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord" as the waters cover the sea (Hab. ii. 14). But that we suppose is to be looked for, not in this dispensation, but in the next! Matt. xxiv. 14, seems to support us in this view. Then we may be sure the money will be forthcoming (if the Lord requires it) in as large a volume as we now spend it on our drink-curse, and the men will stand forth to preach the Gospel throughout the earth, so that with God's blessing that same earth will be converted to Christ by the operation of the Spirit of our God. To Him, then, will be all the praise!

HOW ANGLO-ISRAELITES DEAL WITH THE SUBJECT OF OUR IDENTITY IN NEW ZEALAND.

We take the following capital letter from The New Zealand Methodist of September 2, 1887, published at Christchurch; and commend it to our readers' attention. It is as follows:—

ISRAEL'S EXISTENCE AS A GREAT NATION.

To the Editor of the "New Zealand Methodist."

Sir,—May I crave a little space in your well-filled columns to reply to Mrs. Rigg's observations on my last letter?

It is pleasant to notice that, unlike too many opponents, she does condescend to clearly state her objections, thus enabling one to fairly weigh their worth. But first, allow me to state that it is now nearly thirty years since I became thoroughly convinced that the British nation was of Israelitish origin. At that time "Hine's Identifications," Wild's "Lost Ten Tribes," and "Our Inheritance in the Great Pyramid," were unwritten and unthought of. I am, therefore, not bound to justify any opinions therein contained. My light on the subject came solely from the Word of God. On reading the predictions concerning the seed of Abraham, Israel, Joseph and his two sons, Ephraim and Manasseh, I felt sure that they must have had, in some place or other, their fulfilment. On comparing these promises with all I could learn of the British Empire, with its present and former colonies, all I could learn from history, and such works as Rev. Wm. Arthur's "British Empire," and Montgomery Martin's History of the "British Colonies," I found it impossible for me to doubt that the inhabitants of the British Isles are, for the most part, descendants of the above-named servants of God, and inheritors of the promises made by Him to them. Every year since then, the growth of the vast Empire, its increase in material, moral, and spiritual power, the manifest interpositions of divine providence in its behalf in critical times—thus fulfilling the promise, "No weapon that is formed against thee shall prosper;" and the continued neglect of other nations to do the work which Israel was appointed to do, and which Britain and her offspring States are now zealously doing, namely, labouring to evangelise and in various ways to bless the whole world, have served to deepen, ay, securely rivet the conviction then produced.

Now, I ask, shall I throw away my conviction, as Mrs. Rigg would have me, because some members of this "sect everywhere spoken against," have made very foolish statements, or very presumptuous predictions? Will Mrs. Rigg permit me to say that she, just as rationally, might refuse any longer to believe in the existence of the sea of Tiberias because Dr. Talmage has, in her opinion, perhaps, drawn on his imagination in describing it and its surroundings (see his sermon on the tempest). Or she might as reasonably reject the Gospel—as many have done; James Mill and John Stuart Mill for instance—because some of its adherents have made it quite "another Gospel" by not building on one foundation, "gold, silver, and precious stones," but instead thereof buried it out of sight under a mass of "wood, hay and stubble," or something infinitely worse!

Digitized by Google

I would, from this, respectfully suggest to this lady, and to all searchers after truth, to learn a lesson from her experience, namely, how very necessary it is that we be very, very careful, "that our faith should not stand in the wisdom of men, but in the power of God," and in the inviolable truth of His Word,

In conclusion, I would remark, there are other reasons for seeking and spreading knowledge on this subject which are wide of those low and unworthy ones which Mrs. Rigg, by implication, imputes to myself and others—"seeking after doubtful genealogies, and visionary greatness." Why, bless the dear woman! I never thought such a thing. I judge not the motives of other advocates of these views, but I believe that my sole object and aim runs on the following lines:—

To defend the veracity of Jehovah which is now daily impugned.

To exhibit beyond dispute the inspiration of the sacred Scriptures.

To display the firm and reliable character of those ancient promises—and consequently all other of God's promises—relating to the condition of His people.

To show a sceptical world that the universe is not under the dominion of some evil genius, not left to be the sport of blind chance, not possibly drifting to some awfully fatal doom, not ruled by some blind, vague, inevitable "law," but by a wise and gracious Providence.

To prove by indubitable evidence, by the grand logic of immutable fact, the existence of a personal God, the God of Abraham, Jehovah of Hosts.

To make manifest to all mankind that that Great and Glorious Being is actuated by wisdom, by impartial goodness, by general benevolence towards our whole race, in His dealing with the seed of Abraham—placing them first in Palestine, at the very heart of the ancient acceptable world; and then, in these latter days, in the British Isles, the very centre of the modern world, the very choicest spot in all creation, from whence—favoured by its insular situation, peculiar advantages, and world-wide commerce—they might do what they and their cousins in America are now—and every year with more and more earnestness—attempting, viz, to bring the whole world to the feet of Jesus; thus fulfilling Jehovah's commission to Abraham, "In thee and in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed."

And now, Sir, I would finally ask, Is not the Christian bound to obey that word, "Prove All Things?' And is not this a thing which, at this stage of the world's history, and in this Jubilee Year of our good Queen's reign over her marvellous Empire, has some of the weightiest possible claims to a full, fair, and unprejudiced investigation? As I have mentioned my opponent's name so often, I will not withhold my own.

I am, etc.,

Mahurangi, New Zealand. J. S. HUDSON.

LECTURES AT CHRISTCHURCH, NEW ZEALAND.

FROM the New Zealand Star of July 1 and 8, we take the following reports of two lectures delivered there by Mr. R. Bell on Our Identity. The reports speak for themselves, and show us that we have zealous friends at the Antipodes who will not let the matter rest, but insist upon the public giving it their careful attention. The reports were to the following effect:—

On Wednesday evening Mr. R. Bell delivered a lecture on "The Israelitish Origin of the British nation," in the Baptist Chapel, Sydenham, Mr. T. M. Gee in the chair. The Chairman, in introducing the lecturer, dwelt upon the importance of the subject and the growing interest in it, notwithstanding great opposition. He hoped the audience would listen impartially to the lecture, and like the Bereans, search the Scriptures for themselves to see whether the opinions advanced were not substantiated by them. Mr. Bell then pointed out the purpose of God from the beginning to choose out a people who should be educated to be His witnesses to all the other peoples of the world. He then gave a sketch of the history of the Israelites to the year A.D. 70. dwelling upon and proving from Scripture the distinction between Judah and Israel. and showed that the career prophesied for Israel exactly coincided with the present state of the British. But as time did not permit him to go fully into this then. he would be happy to give another lecture The Chairman made a few remarks on the light British-Israelism throws upon the Bible—the error of spiritualising—and begged the audience to satisfy themselves from the Scriptures (1) of the distinction between Judah and Israel; (2) the career marked out for Israel, and then look around and see what nation answered to it. A few remarks were made by one or two gentlemen, and a general wish was expressed that another lecture should be given, with which wish the lecturer promised to comply at an early date.

On Tuesday evening, July 5, Mr. R. Bell delivered a second lecture on "The Israelitish Origin of the British Nation," in the Baptist Chapel, Sydenham, Mr. T. M. Gee in the chair. Mr. Bell proved by indisputable references to Scripture, that Israel was to be a multitudinous people beyond all others, a nation and a Company of Nations; to be a nation to the North-west of Palestine, not reckoned among the nations, but insular. He then showed how the British, and no other nation, answer to this. She. with her Colonies, with their independent Governments, is a nation and a company of nations, such as the world never saw before. Especial notice was taken of the fact that while Russia and Germany double their populations in 100 years, France in 140, Italy in 125, Spain 112, Egypt in 150, and Turkey in 550, the Anglo-Saxon race doubles itself in 40 years. At this rate of progress they would soon dominate the whole earth. The lecture was attentively listened to, and a general wish expressed to hear more of the subject, as there yet remained many proofs of the British Identity with Israel, Mr. Bell promised to deliver another lecture on Monday week.

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"A CONSTANT SUBSCRIBER" from Manchester desires to know "why we speak of the United States as the Tribe of Manasseh?" "Whether the Americans are not rather a mixture of the descendants of each of the Ten Tribes?" and finally what grounds there are for our statement that "the Normans were the tribe of Benjamin?" Two further questions are asked—viz., "whether the tribe of Judah consists now of Judah and Benjamin, or of Judah and Levi?" and "whether Levi belonged to the Ten Tribes"?

Our reply to these queries is that they have been answered at various times in the BANNER and other Anglo-Israelite publications. and it seems a waste of time and space to go over this elementary ground. A full explanation of the questions respecting Manasseh and the United States, as well as regarding the Normans and Benjamin, appears in chap. xxv. of "The History of the House of Israel, Told for the Children," which the Constant Subscriber should consult. This nation being Ten-Tribed Ephraim, we are bound to seek a fulfilment of Gen. xlviii. 19 by finding a nation which has its origin in our own, being almost as great as our own, but only deficient in one respect—viz., that she has no colonies, while British-Ephraim has them in abundance. Never since the world began has this phenomenon been noticed till now. The United States answer in every iota to the portrait of Manasseh, as Britain does to every lineament of the House of Ephraim.

The tribe of Benjamin belonged to the House of Joseph, as 2 Sam. xix. 16, 20 tells us. It was lent for a time and for a purpose to the House of Judah (1 Kings xi. 13, 32, 34—36). and when that purpose was accomplished "the brotherhood between Judah and Israel was broken," just before the Crucifixion (Zech. xi. 14). We suppose the Christians who were warned by Our Lord to escape from Jerusalem before the siege of Titus were the Jews, who Josephus narrates did actually flee when permitted by the Roman General to do so. There is reason to believe that the Normans, who a thousand years afterwards invaded England under the insignia of a ravening wolf, were these very sons of Benjamin seeking the body politic of Israel there in the "Isles," according to the prophecies of Gen. xlix. 27 and Micah. v. 3. Benjamin's arrival completed the tale of eleven tribes in Britain, reduced to ten when Manasseh's pioneers left in the Mayflower two hundred years ago.

At present the Jews consist, we suppose, of the tribe of Judah, with some admixture of Levi. The latter tribe was certainly never counted with the Ten Tribes. Let the "Constant Reader" consult 2 Sam. ii. 8, 9, Ezra and Nehemiah, and he will find that all Israel belonged to the House of Joseph or Israel, but that the Levites were of the House of Judah.

Digitized by Google

ISRAEL'S SCRIPTURE AND PRAYER UNION.

FOUR new members have been added to the list since the last report, making the total number 1,444. Three cards have also been given out by our agent in Malta.

New members are requested, when writing for cards, to kindly state whether their names are to be entered as Mr., Mrs., or Miss, etc.

The following donations received towards the expenses of the Union are thankfully acknowledged:—Mr. D., Chatham, 1s.; Mrs. K., Wandsworth, 1s.

For the convenience of those members who wish to continue the daily reading, the following list of chapters for February is printed:—

1st ...	Ezekiel	xxxvii.	11th ...	Ezekiel	xlvii.	21st ...	Daniel	ix.
2nd...	,,	xxxviii.	12th ...	,,	xlviii.	22nd ...	,,	x.
3rd ...	,,	xxxix.	13th ...	Daniel	i.	23rd ...	,,	xi.
4th ...	,,	xl.	14th ...	,,	ii.	24th ...	,,	xii.
5th ...	,,	xli.	15th ...	,,	iii.	25th ...	Hosea	i.
6th ...	,,	xlii.	16th ...	,,	iv.	26th ...	,,	ii.
7th ...	,,	xliii.	17th ...	,,	v.	27th ...	,,	iii.
8th ...	,,	xliv.	18th ...	,,	vi.	28th ...	,,	iv.
9th ...	,,	xlv.	19th ...	,,	vii.	29th ...	,,	v.
10th ...	,,	xlvi.	20th ...	,,	viii.

The card of membership will be sent on receipt of three stamps.

The first and second series of Monthly Comments on the whole Bible, by Philo-Israel, may be obtained in volume form. Price in paper cover, 1s. 2d. each, post free; in cloth, 2s. each, post free. The "Prayers for Daily Use," being a prayer for each day of the week, by Philo-Israel, are 1d., or 9d. per dozen, postage extra. The prayer of the Union, as on the Card of Membership, may be obtained printed in larger type, price 1d. for three copies, post free, or 1s. per 100 for distribution. Address, Miss E. Sibbald, 3, Townshend-villas, Richmond, Surrey.

STATEMENT OF ACCOUNTS, FROM JAN. 1ST TO DEC. 31ST, 1887.

Receipts.	£	s.	d.	Payments.	£	s.	d.
Balance in hand Jan. 1st, 1887	0	10	3	Binding vols. of Monthly Comments	2	16	6
Members' donations ...	3	14	10½	Printing Circulars... ...	1	9	6
Cards of membership ...	0	10	6	Postage and carriage ...	1	8	2½
Prayers	0	2	6	Honorarium to Secretary	2	15	0
Bound vols. of Monthly Comments	1	15	6	Balance in hand	2	16	7
Ditto, Sold by Messrs. Banks & Son	4	12	2
	£11	5	9½		£11	5	9½

Examined and found correct. Jan. 14th, 1888. CHARLES HORNER.

ANGLO-ISRAEL FREE DISTRIBUTION FUND.

FIFTIETH MONTHLY REPORT.

THE following donations and subscriptions are very thankfully acknowledged:—

By the Treasurer: Sheffield Anglo-Israel Association, in return for loan of five Great Pyramid Slides by the Treasurer, 5s.; H. G., Tooting, 4s.; Miss C. (per Philo-Israel), for BANNERS, 5s.; Mrs. H., Lincoln, 5s.; The Lady J. E., £1 10s. (10s. for literature for United States); Mrs. M., Carshalton, 10s.; Mrs. H., East Charleton, 2s. 6d.; "M.," Liverpool, 10s.; F. A. R. W., British Guiana, 10s.; Miss K., Wandsworth, 2s.; Miss W., Salisbury, 1s.; M. T., Gawcott, 2s. 6d.; H. E. T., Dorking, £1; Ephraim, Great Yarmouth, £1; per Miss E. M. Rush, for BANNERS: E. L., 10s.; L. L., 10s.; Mrs. M., 5s.; J. C. H. M., 5s.

By Mr. C. Horner: E. W., Hastings, 1s.; Mrs. T., Sheffield, 1s.; Mrs. M. C., Tenby (monthly subscription), 2s. 6d.; Miss A. M., Richmond, 5s.; Mrs. C. B., Weston-Super-Mare (two months' subscriptions), 10s.; J. M., Malta, 1s; Miss S., Tunbridge Wells, 5s.

Total, £9 2s. 6d.

J. LAWRENCE, Hon. Treasurer.

We most cordially thank our friends for their kind promptitude in responding to our appeal for funds. Before our reports are in print we have usually expended what we have received, the Treasurer settling all accounts at the end of each month. Also it is important to note that when the amounts fall to £3 or £4, the period is one of anxiety, since a general curtailment of literature and BANNER distribution becomes imperative. If, however, the receipts reached £10 monthly, with regularity, the operations of the Fund would then go on unintermittingly.

Large parcels of old BANNERS have been presented to the Fund, for which we tender our best thanks to the donors. They are from C. M., Melrose; Mrs. H.,, Florence; W. T. W., Crewe. They have been sent to, and thankfully received by, Sowers at Sheffield, Tywyn, and Malta. From John T. Crosthwait, Esq., Dublin, we also acknowledge, with many thanks, 200 of his No. 1 Leaflet, 100 to be set apart for our next United States parcel, and 100 for our general use.

LITERATURE DISTRIBUTION.—Twenty-four parcels were despatched during the past month to the following places: Richmond, Upper Teddington, Eltham, Manchester, Sheffield, Weston-Super-Mare, Godalming, East Charleton, Crewe, London, Tunbridge Wells, Hastings, Woodford, Birkenhead, Barnsley, Stokes-road, Ludlow, West Coker, Longborough, Wandsworth, Eastbourne, Westminster, Malta, Auckland (New Zealand).

BANNER DISTRIBUTION.—Ninety-six copies weekly, to the same places enumerated in our last report.

The lecture on the Great Pyramid, at Sheffield, came off with success. Some magic-lantern slides, giving different views of the structure, were kindly lent by our Hon. Treasurer, which added greatly to the interest manifested by the audience.

HOME PROGRESS.—Our Sower at Crewe writes:—"I am glad to say the cause has found good soil in Crewe, and several are enquiring for literature, and searching the Bible to see if these things are so. It would no doubt prove helpful if every reader of the BANNER would, after reading his BANNER, forward it to some minister or intelligent layman, so that in the course of a few months very many would at least become acquainted with the fact of the BANNER'S existence, and when the time of Israel's manifestation draws near many will more readily accept the truth by having heard of it in days gone by." We are very glad to note progress in Crewe, because when our correspondent wrote to us at the beginning of last year he hardly knew of a believer there!

DISTRIBUTION TO THE UNITED STATES.—In our January report we introduced this as a new and important feature in the Fund's experience. In response to the request of the Superintendent of the American Sunday School Union, we sent a preliminary parcel of literature, and a letter asking for information concerning the Society's method of work. No time has been lost, and just before making up our report we received the following interesting communication from Rev. Dr. Paxson, dated Springfield, Mo., Dec. 31st, 1887:—

"Dear Sir,—Yours, with package of tracts on the Identity, received. Accept hearty thanks. I have not as yet had the time to examine them all, but am very much impressed with what I have examined, especially the 'Résumé' and the 'Fifty Reasons.' I will try and give you an idea of the work in which I am engaged. The American Sunday School Union is one of the three great undenominational societies of this country. Its object is to gather into Union Sunday-schools all the neglected and destitute children in the rural districts of this country. For this purpose it employs missionaries, whose sole duty it is to go to these neighbourhoods and organise Sunday-schools. The missionaries belong to different Churches, or denominations, gather in all the children, and put what religious element may be there to work teaching these children Scripture truths. We also publish a literature, but being a Union organization, we cannot circulate anything but what teaches the fundamental principles on which all Evangelical Churches agree (that is as missionaries). For instance, while I as, say, a Presbyterian, can preach the Gospel as I understand it in Scriptural language, I cannot meddle in my Sunday-school work with the controverted points, such as the mode of baptism, forms of Church government, etc. But there is nothing in the way of my expressing my sentiments at suitable times and in suitable places on any subject of a Scriptural character, always supposing I am 'Evangelical:' this is not 'sceptical.' So you see there is a wide door open for good in a quiet way. Our headquarters are at Philadelphia, Pa., and my department comprises the South-West, Missouri, Arkansas, Texas, Louisiana, and the Indian Territory. In the Indian Territory there are five civilised tribes—viz., the Cherokees, Creeks, Seminoles, Choctaws, and Chickasaws, all well advanced in civilisation. I have sixteen men at work, and we gather in on an average 15,000 children per annum. I enclose you some circulars as to the work, and send you by mail a copy of 'Fruitful Life,' published by our Society. It is a record of the life of my father, who was one of the pioneers in this work. My field, as you will see, is a large one, one State having an area of 274,000 square miles. I travel from 15,000 to 20,000 miles a year, and come in contact with all kinds, characters, and conditions of men, especially ministers of all denominations. Most of them are poor missionaries who are labouring for a bare support, and it was to supply this class that I made the application for the tracts for free distribution. I find among them quite an interest in the question of Our Identity. I began studying it in reference to the Indian tribes, but was soon convinced that the prophecies and promises contained in the 'covenants' would have but a very limited application to them. When I came across an Englishman in the Choctaw nation, I. T., who gave me a copy of the BANNER OF ISRAEL, which gave me more light than I had ever had, the way then was easy. All I had to do then was 'to look at the photograph, and then at the subject,' and all was clear. Of course there are many difficulties—they may not be made clear—such as the historical, the ethnological, etc. But I am loyal to the Word, believe in its inspiration, and it does seem to me that the Identity makes the hitherto obscure passages very plain.

Digitized by Google

"Pardon me for asking a question. Who is Philo-Israel? I am very much interested in his writings, and if I could get quite a lot of such works as you have so kindly sent, I believe I could do great good with them. I am not a man of means, spending all my income each year. I have little means to spend in this work, but am willing to do the distributing as far as I can consistent with my position. Can't Ephraim aid Manasseh? Manasseh is only 'thousands,' while Ephraim is 'tens of thousands.' Hoping I have not wearied you, and with many thanks for your kindness, I am, cordially yours,

"W. P. PAXSON."

CHARLES HORNER, Secretary.

Contributions to the Fund will be thankfully received and acknowledged by the Hon. Treasurer, Miss J. Lawrence, Rosslyn, Hampton-road, Upper Teddington, Middlesex; or by Mr. Chas. Horner, 34, Sheen-park, Richmond-on-Thames. Cheques may be crossed, "London and Provincial Bank, Teddington Branch." Grants of literature will be made, as far as funds allow, on application to the Secretary.

Review.

The Great Pyramid and Freemasonry. A Lecture by John Chapman, P.P.G.D, Devonshire, delivered in the Grand Lodge Room Masonic Temple, Philadelphia, U.S., America. Price 6d. George Kenning, 16 and 16A, Great Queen-street, W.C., and Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

THIS beautifully printed lecture is dedicated to Professor Piazzi Smyth, F.R.S.E. and F.R.A.S., and thus has his imprimatur. Its details we must presume, therefore, are correct, and such as the Professor approves. The object of the lecture was to instruct the masonic brethren of Philadelphia in the mysteries of the Great Pyramid. The link which connects Freemasonry with the building in question the lecturer described as follows: "The Great Pyramid and Freemasonry are alike illustrated by symbol. While in Freemasonry we recognize a peculiar system of morality, veiled in allegory and illustrated by symbol, so the Great Pyramid is to be regarded as a standard of cosmic and ethical truths," delineated by the same characteristics.

The lecturer touched ably on the various points and questions involved in the subject under consideration, and supplied answers and information on the following points:—

1. Who built the Great Pyramid?
2. The geographical position of it.
3. Its construction.
4. Its scientific lessons, and
5. Its historical answer to the question, "How it witnesses to the Lord of Hosts"?

The Lecturer admitted that the British Yard and the sacred cubit united were clearly developed in the Great Pyramid, and pointed out that the measurement of the Grand Gallery from the north end to the foot of the Great Step indicated A.D. 1813 as a year of note. "If," he asked, "the Identity of the Anglo-Saxon people with Ephraim-Israel be admitted, what does this 36-inch step point to?" "One answer," he replied, "to this question is that in that year (A.D. 1813) the British Government passed an Act of Parliament, brought forward by Wilberforce, which opened "the Gates of India" for the spread of the Gospel, so that from that date is marked the great missionary enterprise of this country. Doubtless this was a great step towards the final termination of the Gospel dispensation, but it would not be a very difficult matter to prove, in addition to this fact, that the national policy of Great Britain was at this period being placed on a higher platform, both in the sight of heaven and the various nations of the world, thereby duplicating the testimony of this important step, if such should be its teaching."

We have said enough to recommend Mr. Chapman's lecture to our friends. We trust it will make its way among Freemasons in Great Britain, and do something to attract attention, not only to the Great Pyramid itself, but to the cognate subject of the Israelitish origin of the British people—a matter of much moment at the present time.

Correspondence.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

SIR,—As no one has replied to your correspondent, Mr. James Wright, Plymouth, who, in the BANNER of 19th ult., propounded the hypothesis of Knighthood being an Identity, will you allow me to do so, excusing me for a little detail, as in this case it would scarcely answer the purpose of reply to say to Mr. Wright in regard to his "Is not Knighthood an Identity?"—"No, sir, certainly not!"

The Knighthood of the present day, in its various aspects and applications and Orders, as variously exemplified on the continent of Europe and in other portions of the globe, is only a relic of the beneficent mediæval Institution of Chivalry, which, in a time of weakly exercised law, rose like an angel of destruction against the strong oppressors of the weak. Chivalry was nursed in France, and the technique of its system is still French in language. Chivalry was popular in Germany, but was injured by a rule which obtained in German Courts of Chivalry that the candidate for Knighthood (Ritterschaft) must have a certain number of quarterings on his shield, and be as they would say "noble," or, as we speak, of gentle birth. In France, the man of obscure origin could rise through the degrees—gradations—of chivalry to its highest honour, the Chevalier. In England, Chivalry was corrupted by the sovereign making himself the dispenser of its honours.

The knight of the pure chivalric type, besides being forward to defend and to protect, had to be devout towards God, gentle and wise or discreet ("douce et sage") in manward relations, &c., &c.; in short, an epitome of all the virtues, under the risk of having the knightly spurs struck from his heels. The rules of one of the last formed Orders of the real chivalric times were almost strained in their severe delicacy of injunction.

David, the King of Israel's band of "mighty men," is, I think, the nearest approach to the Institution of Chivalry to be found in the Bible, but, in a number of respects, is not synonymous with it.

Modern Knighthood is but the robings of the ancient European Chivalry, yea, often it is but the rags of the garment; but that shreds of those rags should still flutter on the breast of our great ones, and that princes and kings—from the "Young Chevalier" to the beloved Prince of Wales, the Heir to Israel's Kingdom—are proud to add Knight to their titles, evidence that those rags were made of imperishable stuff, and that the title still holds within it solid honour.

Yes, Mr. Editor, Chivalry, even at present, is good, but is not an Identity. But we can afford to leave it with its owners.

I am, with respect, yours,

J. R.

Edinburgh. Nov. 16th, 188..

Digitized by Google

NOTICES.

All communications intended for the Editor, to be addressed: "Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Clifton, Bristol.

SUBSCRIPTIONS. £ s. d.

Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free 0 7 6
Two Copies (including Double Numbers) 0 13 6
Three Copies " " " 1 0 4
Four Copies " " " 1 5 6
Six Copies " " " 1 16 4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-grand, London, to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C., or F. W. PARRY & Co., 29, Paternoster-row, London.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

Contents Bills and Show Cards may be obtained on application to the Publishers.

Advertisements should be sent to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

Prepaid Advertisements are inserted at the rate of thirty words for 1s. 4d.

A LADY (Anglo-Israelite), accustomed to Indian Children, wishes to take charge of one or two boys to educate with her own, aged five. Highest References. Terms moderate. Companionship chief object.—H. T., Mr. Tamplyn, 8, Ladbroke Grove-road, Notting Hill.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

BIBLE READINGS every Tuesday, commencing at 3.30.

A LECTURE will be Delivered in the ASSOCIATION ROOMS, 14, King William-street, Charing Cross, W.C., on THURSDAY AFTERNOON NEXT, February 2, 1888, at 3.30 o'clock, by General Beresford. Subject: "The Two Captivities." Admission free. Strangers will be made welcome.

JAMES BILLINGTON, Sec.

WORKS BY JAMES KEITH.

Price 9d, by post 10d.

THE EASTERN QUESTION OF TO-DAY.

As unfolded by the Prophet Isaiah, in a Panoramic View of the Great Wars to befall the Earth prior to the Second Advent of Christ Jesus, beginning with Great Britain.

"See, I have this day set thee over the nations and over the kingdoms, to root out, and to pull down, and to destroy, and to throw down, to build, and to plant" (Jer. i. 10).

Price 1s., post free.

THE IMPENDING JUDGMENT of GREAT BRITAIN.

An Exposition of Chapter xxviii. of the Book of the Prophet Isaiah.

"And the Lord answered me and said, Write the vision, and make it plain upon tables, that he may run that readeth it" (Hab. ii. 2).

Price 4d., by post 5d.

LIGHT SHED BY THE GREAT PYRAMID of EGYPT

On the Last Days of this Dispensation, from A.D. 1814 to A.D. 1922.

Professor Piazzi Smyth says:—"I have read through every word of your Pamphlet, 'Light Shed by the Great Pyramid of Egypt.' I am both charmed and instructed by it. In all your allusions to the architecture, the measures, or the history of the Great Pyramid, you are to the extent of my knowledge, perfectly correct."

London: Robert Banks and Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; or of the Author, Dingwall, N.B.

The Anglo-Israel Theory.

Every believer in it should read the Sermons of the REV. JOSEPH WILD, D.D., of Toronto, Canada, who is the leading exponent of the theory in America, and whose Sermons and Books have a world-wide circulation, which are reported weekly in

"THE CANADIAN ADVANCE,"

A Religious, Literary, and Fireside Weekly. Remit a P.O.O. for 4s. 6d. to the publishers for a year's subscription.—Address: YEIGH & Co., Toronto, Canada.

Ready at Advent. Price 6d., by post 6½d.

Old Dogmas From New Aspects.

By Vox Feminæ Auriculæ Hominis.

Contents: 1. The Apostolic Succession. 2. The Apostle Peter. 3. The Successor of Judas Iscariot. 4. The Athanasian Creed. 5. The Trinity. 6. Eternal Punishment. 7. The Great Tribulation. 8. The Great White Throne. 9. The Atonement of Jesus Christ.

H. E. Hill, 60, Nevill-road, Stoke-Newington, London N.

HUMAN LIFE.—FIFTY YEARS' Record of Facts, Principles, and Discoveries (just published, complete) Relating to the Improvement and Preservation of Human Life on Earth. Origin and true treatment of diseases. A series of articles by DR. SAMUEL BIRLEY, M.D., Ph.D. Book form, 50 pages. SENT FREE to every applicant by the publishers, GORDON B. MURRAY & CO., 50, Theobald's-road, Holborn, E.C. Write to-day.

Price 3d.; Interleaved with Ruled Paper, 5d.; CLOTH bound, gilt lettered, marbled edges, 1s.; by post 4d., 6d., and 1s.

THE

ANGLO-ISRAEL ALMANACK

AND DIARY FOR 1888.

CONTENTS:

FRONTISPIECE—VIEW OF NAZARETH.

CALENDAR AND DIARY FOR THE YEAR, January: Christ's Commands. February: Commands. March: Promises. April: Promises. May: Prayers. June: Prayers. July: Christ's Promises. August: Promises. September: Proverbs. October: Proverbs. November: Invitations. December: Prophecies. Church Lessons for each Sunday of the Year. Notes for the Month. Moon's Changes. Moveable Feasts. Measures of Length. Bank Holidays. Length in a Mile in Different Countries. Letters Patent for Inventions. Notes for 1889. Meteoric Showers. Legal Tender of Money. Legacy and Succession Duty. Income Tax. Postal Regulations, Money Orders, etc. General Information. The Royal Family. The Church. Public Exhibitions. The Ministry.

The Testimony of History that the British are Israel! By Philo-Israel.

The Foundation of Anglo-Israel Truth. By V. M. Cox.

"The Fulness of the Gentiles." By the Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A.

Fulfilling Prophecy. By Douglas A. Onslow.

The Clue to the World's Future. By the Rev. Denis Hanan, D.D.

The Principles of a Divine System; and Israel's Place In It. By Ernest P. Dix.

Rule Britannia! By H. R. Shaw.

God's Israel. By Rev. Hibbert Newton.

A Christmas Carol.

List of Anglo-Israel Associations in Various Parts of the World.

LONDON: ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet Court, Fleet Street, and all Booksellers.

THE MESSENGER, 1888.

NOTICE.—In the January number of this Magazine is commenced

A NEW AND IMPORTANT WORK

bearing on the Identity of the British People with Lost Israel, and entitled

"RUSSIA JAPHET,"

Treating of the History, Geography, and Destiny of the Peoples subject to the Czar.

By "OXONIAN,"

Author of "Israel's Wanderings," &c.

Price 6d., post free 7d.

London: F. W. Parry & Co., 29, Paternoster-row.

Fifteenth Thousand.

BY REV. HENRY ROE.

Israel's World. Origin and Destiny of British Race, Colonies, and Empire. 2d., post free 2½d. Fifty post free from H. Roe for 4s. 9d

Philo-Israel says: "I am perfectly delighted with your pamphlet."

C. E. Priestly, Esq., says: "For its size I never read a better work. I have given away two lots of fifty each, and enclose money for fifty more. I have sent it to clergymen, bishops, and archbishops"

Rev. Thomas Lowe says: "What the works of Mr. Hine failed to do in my enlightenment, 'Israel's World' has accomplished. I now read the Scriptures in a new and vivid light."

Going to Africa. 1s., post free 1s. 1d.

Fernando Po Mission. 1s., post free 1s. 1d.

West African Scenes. 2s., post free 2s. 2d.

Consecration. 2d., post free 2½d.

50 post free from H. Roe for 4s. 9d.

Robert Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.; and Rev. H. Roe Dawley, Salop.

PIANOFORTES, Harmoniums, American Organs. Why buy at shops inferior made instruments, and pay large profits, when you can buy direct from the Maker High-class Instruments, and save 50 per cent. by so doing! Full value allowed for old Instrument in exchange as part payment. Write for Price Lists and Testimonials to G. LINSTEAD, 2, Osceney Crescent, Camden Road, London. Established 1874.

WORKS BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

The Geography of the Gates. With Map and six full page, and one double-page, Illustrations, printed on plate paper. 208 pages, in handsome cloth, gilt. Price 3s. 6d., post free 3s. 10d.

The History of the House of Israel. How They Were Lost and How They Were Found. Told for the children. Price 6d., cloth 1s.; post free 7d. and 1s. 1d. Fifth edition.

A Resume of the Scriptural Argument, Proving the Identity of the British Race with the Lost Ten Tribes. Price 1d.; 6s. per hundred, postage 6d.

Our Identity: What it is Not; What it is; and Our Obligations To-day in Respect to it Being a Lecture recently delivered in London by Philo-Israel, and published by special request. Price 2d., a reduction for quantities.

Our Identity with the House of Israel. Price 4d., Reprinted from "Clifton Chronicle Letters"

An Elementary Digest or Sketch of the Chief Facts and Teachings of the Great Pyramid of Egypt. Adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific 56 pages, Illustrated with Diagrams, price 4d., post free 5d. 10th Thousand.

Are the English People the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel? An Inquiry Establishing the Identity of the British Nation with the Lost Ten Tribes. 4d.

Robert Banks & Son, Racquet Court, Fleet Street, E.C.

THE ANNUAL VOLUME

OF THE

BANNER OF ISRAEL

IS NOW READY.

Price, in Handsome Blue Cloth, Gilt, 8s., Post Free for Postal Order.

Forms a handsome present. Useful for presentation to Working Men's Institutes, Libraries, etc., etc.

Robert Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

LUNG SAVE YOUR LIVES BY TAKING TONIC
LUNG OWBRIDGE'S TONIC
LUNG LUNG TONIC TONIC
LUNG THE MIGHTY HEALER. TONIC
LUNG It has a power over disease hitherto unknown in Medicine. TONIC
LUNG Are you at all Weak-chested or inclined to be Consumptive, with just a touch of Cough now and then? TONIC
LUNG "Try this Wonderful Medicine." The Cough and Weakness will disappear as if by magic, and you will feel a strength and power you never had before. TONIC
LUNG HAVE YOU A COUGH? TONIC
LUNG A DOSE WILL RELIEVE IT! TONIC
LUNG HAVE YOU A COLD? TONIC
LUNG A DOSE AT BEDTIME WILL TONIC
LUNG REMOVE IT. TONIC
LUNG Bronchitis & Asthma it relieves instantly TONIC
LUNG The Spasms of Coughing so dreadful in Whooping Cough become less with each dose of the medicine. TONIC
LUNG Prepared by W. T OWBRIDGE, Chemist, Hull TONIC
LUNG Sold in Bottles 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d. and 11s. by all Chemists and Patent Medicine Vendors. Wholesale all London and Provincial Houses. TONIC

TORPID LIVER,

CONSTIPATION AND INDIGESTION.

Mrs. M. ANDERSON, Mortimer Street, Herne Bay, Kent, writes:—"I was suffering from a torpid, inactive liver, accompanied by constipation and indigestion. After wearing Harness' Electropathic Belt I am much better in every way; the functions are regular, my appetite has improved, and the wretched, depressed feeling I used constantly to have has completely passed away."

HARNESS'

ELECTROPATHIC BELT,

Price 21/-, post-free. When ordering send size of waist (next skin). Thousands of Testimonials. Pamphlet and Advice free. Sufferers from any disorder of the Nerves, Stomach, Liver, and Kidneys, should call to-day, if possible, or write at once to

Mr. C. H. HARNESS, Consulting Electrician, The MEDICAL BATTERY COMPANY, Limited (only address),

52, OXFORD STREET, LONDON, W.

(Corner of Bolthone Place.)

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED FOR the PROPRIETOR BY ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. F. W. PARRY (late GUEST & Co.), 29 PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, FEB. 1, 1888. [All rights reserved.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."

(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. XII., No. 580. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 8, 1888. [PRICE ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

PAGE

We do not Know How Great We Are! 61
Israel's Righteousness 62
A Fresh Clerical Opponent 63
How Some Native Christians in the East View Our Identity 64
Israel's Steamships 64
In the Latter Days ye Shall Understand It 65
Israel's Existence 66
Review 67
British-Israel 67

"WE DO NOT KNOW HOW GREAT WE ARE!"

IT was the decision of the Times, founded on the remarkable series of letters on India, and especially on "India of the Queen," which appeared lately in that paper, "that as a nation we are greater than we know!" The writer in the Times dilated in his four papers (monographs of the subject) on the expansion, the consolidation, the conciliation of our Indian Empire, and the new leaven and impalpable influences which have been at work making India what it is—"the India of the Queen!" Amid all disappointments and mistakes which have attended our administration of affairs in the mighty Eastern Empire, Englishmen may turn, says the leading journal, "to their work in India for refreshment, for encouragement, and for proof that they are greater than they know." Our career there, he declares, has been distinguished "by the disinterested beneficence of the work done by the English in India. These words remind us of the Scriptural promise to Israel: "Thou shalt be a blessing;" "In thee and in thy seed shall all the nations, all the families, all the kindreds of the earth be blessed;" "Israel shall blossom and bud, and fill the face of the world (including India) with fruit" (Gen. xii. 2, xxii. 18, xxviii. 14; Isa. xxvii. 6; Acts iii. 25, R.V.).

Our material triumphs (says the journalist) are in the sight of all men. Railways, roads, telegraphs, irrigation works, and navigable canals have changed not only the physical conditions of vast provinces, but also the moral attitude of their populations. But beyond all these things is the invisible operation of the modern spirit to which they owe their being, widening the outlook and transforming the spiritual life of vast multitudes of men who may have barely so much as seen a British official. Under its influence ancient creeds are being revised, idolatries yet more ancient are dying out, a social system of extraordinary rigidity is regaining the elasticity which we may reasonably suppose it to have possessed in its prime, and the most advanced representatives of the Indian people are displaying an eager receptiveness for European ideas.

"Under our rule India is becoming, not exactly unified, as we use the word in Europe, but rather united in the prosecution of locally diverse, but substantially similar aims, and in the presentation of parallel claims. The only political unity that can yet be discovered in India, or that can become possible even generations hence, is the unity that depends on the universality of British rule." These are true and noble sentiments, and the journalist, in coming to this conclusion, proves that he has grasped the whole situation. India's advancement and greatness depends upon the continuance and vigour of Israel's hold upon the country. Let that be relaxed, or disappear, and at once the component elements of Indian civilization and political coherence, such as it is to-day, would fall asunder, and chaos take the place of the orderly government and prosperity which now is so significant a characteristic of our rule in the distant Heathen Empire of Queen-Empress Victoria the Good. All these benefits and blessings we have conferred on India because we are Israel; and because, having been placed by God Himself in charge of that mighty Empire, to benefit and bless it according to the prophecy, "Thou shalt be a blessing," or, "Be thou a blessing," we cannot but give it those stupendous advantages which the Times notices with such approval, though the writer ignores their source!

It is true, indeed, in respect to India, that "we do not know how great we are!" The nation's greatness is our Israelitish origin, and from the latter we derive all those good things we hand on to the "heritage of the heathen" which God has given to our nation (being Israel) in illustration of "the power of His works" (Psa. cxi. 6, R.V.). But men are ignorant of Our Identity with Israel; and, therefore, literally, "do not know" or realise "how great we are." The mere fact that God has entrusted to our government 250 to 300 millions of human beings in the East should overwhelm us with the greatness of our position, and put us upon inquiry, "who we are," and "why God has given us so overwhelming a responsibility!" Yet He means daily to enlarge it! He purposes to give us "the kingdom and dominion and greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven," because we are "the people of the saints of the Most High," even "the children of Israel" (Dan. vii. 27; Psa. cxlviii. 14). Therefore India, with its nigh 300,000,000 of humanity, is but a drop in the bucket. All kingdoms and dominions are eventually to be ours: first because we are Israel; and next in order that we may prepare

Digitized by Google

"the kingdom of the world to become the kingdom of our Lord and of His Christ" (Rev. xi. 15, R.V.). India has to be made ready for the coming Saviour-King, and is it no "greatness" that we should be the selected agency to bring the nations of the universe into conformity to the law of Christ, and ready to become the subjects of such a divine and glorious Prince? Men may now despise the British because they fail to see how great, and glorious, and blessed, they are as a people; but the days are also near at hand when such a text as Isaiah lxi. 9 will become a literal fulfilment before us. "Their seed (that is, Israel's) shall be known among the Gentiles, or nations, and their offspring among the peoples; all that see them shall acknowledge them, that they are the seed which the Lord hath blessed." These words seem to show that the last to perceive their glorious nobility and their Israelitish origin will be "Lo-Ammi" Israel herself; for the Gentiles shall know them, and those who see them shall acknowledge them that they are the seed which Jehovah hath blessed, that is, Israel. For in truth Israel does not know herself, nor recognise her greatness and her grandeur, "as the chosen of the Lord," as those in whom Jehovah Himself hath never beheld, and will never behold, "iniquity" or "perverseness," by reason of the sprinkling of the precious, precious blood, the blood of Jehovah-Jesus Himself, by which He hath redeemed and cleansed His people, even Israel, the British (Isa. lxi. 9; Hosea ii. 6; Numb. xxiii. 20, 21; Heb. ix. 11—14; Psa. cxxx. 8, all R.V.).

ISRAEL'S RIGHTEOUSNESS.

It is absolutely needful that the nation represented by Ephraim, the Ten-Tribed House of Israel, should have some righteousness wherein to appear before God. It is now a nation before Him, and will be so for ever (Jer. xxxi. 36). The Lord dwells in and amongst this race as His chosen ones; and Father, Son, and Holy Spirit are all by special and distinct promises dwelling among them. The Lord Jehovah promised it in Exod. xxix. 45, 46, R.V., when He said regarding Israel, "I will dwell among the children of Israel and will be their God." The Lord Jesus Christ, in Matt. xxviii. 20, R.V., faithfully engaged to be always present with His people when He said, "Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world. Amen."

The Holy Spirit made the same covenant with the chosen nation when (in Haggai ii. 5, R.V.) He declared, "I am with you, saith the Lord of Hosts, according to the word that I covenanted with you when ye came out of Egypt, and My spirit abode among you; fear ye not." A people so blessed must be covered with a righteousness which the Lord Jehovah can regard with complacency, and that righteousness it is perfectly certain cannot be their own. Nationally Israel of the House of Joseph was corrupt and wicked to the heart's core. Moses' testimony in Deut. ix. 7, R.V., is decisive on that point as to their doings up to his day:—"From the day that thou wentest forth out of the land of Egypt until ye came to this place (the plains of Moab) ye have been rebellious against the Lord." Throughout their subsequent career the House of Joseph did evil, and that continually, till at last they were for idolatry and provocation against the Lord, "removed out of His sight," outcasted to Assyria and Media, and there left to mingle with the heathen and learn their ways (2 Kings xvii. 20). Israel never had, and never will have, any righteousness of their own. Their merits in the sight of God are intrinsically nothing. How then can the British people, being Israel, appear in the presence of a Holy God and claim His blessing? In what righteousnesss can they present themselves before Him? Job's famous question, "How can man be just with (or before) God?" applies just as much to a nation, to-day, such as is Ephraim-Israel, as to a man (Job ix. 2, R.V.). The reply is of vast importance to us as a nation, and of great moment to us as individual members of that corporate body! Our nation's righteousness is Jehovah's! Our own, like Israel's, is as "filthy rags" (Isa. lxiv. 6). "This is the heritage of the servants of the Lord Jehovah, and their righteousness is of Me, saith Jehovah!" (Isa. liv. 17). "When Judah shall be saved and Israel shall dwell safely, this is the name whereby He, the king, shall be called, The Lord our righteousness" (Jer. xxiii. 25).

But how is God's righteousness to become our own, in a national sense? It is applied through the God-man, Jesus Christ, who is God the Son. "For God hath made Him to be sin on our behalf, who knew no sin, that we might become the righteousness of God in Him" (2 Cor. v. 21, R.V.). In this righteousness (the purchase of the precious blood of Jesus poured out upon the Cross of Calvary), the Lord hath clothed His people Israel, therefore our British nation, which is Israel. Hence we have the Church of Israel praising the Lord in Isa. lxi. 10, R.V., and saying, "I will greatly rejoice in Jehovah: my soul shall be joyful in my God. For He hath clothed me with the garments of salvation: He hath covered me with the robe of righteousness." In short "Jesus Christ was made unto us wisdom from God, and righteousness, and sanctification and redemption" (1 Cor. i. 30). The law was once Israel's righteousness in her own eyes. But now "the righteousness of God" is revealed, and it is "by faith of Jesus Christ unto all, and upon all them that believe" (Rom. iii. 22). This righteousness of God is not that of the Law. The House of Judah relies upon that! But it is "the righteousness of faith," "the Faith of Christ." This "righteousness which is of God," is not at all of man, but "wholly by faith" (Phil. iii. 9).

But Israel was to be established by means of this faith which is declared so necessary for salvation. "I will even betroth thee unto Me in faithfulness," is the promise, "and thou shalt know the Lord" (Hosea ii. 20, R.V.). These promises however are, as far as the Old Testament is concerned, promises to the nation of Israel of the Ten Tribes, as the context in each case will prove. In the New Testament, the spiritual promises, which were national in the Old Testament, are made applicable both nationally and individually. They are Israel's as a race, and they are Israel's as regards not only each person who is a member of that family, but of each believer of all nations, families and kindreds of the earth, who, becoming a believer in the Atonement of Israel's Redeemer and Saviour, becomes thus an Israelite himself by faith, and so a partaker of all the spiritual benefits and blessings which God's Word has tied up to Abraham and his seed for ever, literal and spiritual in Christ, to the end of time. There is thus established a duality in the promises of God which the clergy generally, and our opponents as a body, fail to recognise. These promises apply first to the literal seed according to the flesh, as the purchase of the Cross; and through Israel they are passed on and disseminated throughout the world to all who, being aliens, will receive them, and so become themselves Israelites by adoption, God's people, sons of the living God, according to the word of promise in Isa. lvi. 6, 7, and according to the New Testament, passim. But for Israel and all Gentile believers who rejoice "with God's people" (Rom. xv. 10; Deut. xxxii. 43), the righteousness they need to enable them to appear before, and be "just with," God, is the finished righteousness of Him who was once "offered to bear the sins of many, and shall appear a second time, apart from sin, to them that wait for Him, unto salvation" (Heb. ix. 28, R.V.). This great Saviour was the Son over His own (i.e., God's) House Israel, "whose house are we" (Heb. iii. 6). And our perseverance is guaranteed by Psa. cxlvii. 19, 20. To Him be all the praise for such undeserved, inexpressible blessings.

RETURN OF MR. HINE TO ENGLAND.—We understand that Mr. Hine, who for nearly three years has been lecturing in America, is about to return to England, and is expected to arrive about the middle of Feb. Some of his friends desire to give him a welcome home. The arrangements are in the hands of Mr. Isaac Loveland, of Sevenoaks.

Digitized by Google

A FRESH CLERICAL OPPONENT.

"THE cry is still they come!" The opposition is always from the clergy, and in this case not because our views regarding "the Identity" are supported and pressed home by the laity, but because a Bishop of the Church, the late deeply lamented Bishop Titcomb, has made statements in his last work, "A Message to the Church from the Nineteenth Century," which our clerical opponent believes to be entirely unscriptural. Our nameless objector quite agrees with the Bishop "that there is a grand future for Israel and Judah, and that his description of the coming glory is perfectly scriptural." He differs from the Bishop, however, as he thinks that the glory promised is not existing now. "I regard it," he says, "as the glory of the future millennial state, after the return of the Messiah to the earth, and after the establishment of His universal kingdom." Our clergyman, therefore, believes ours is only an interregnum, a sort of parenthetical dispensation in which Israel, being ousted, the Gentiles have somehow got hold of all God's sworn promises made to Israel exclusively.

But our clerical opponent has some special faults to find with the late Bishop. He is "astonished," he declares, "at the Bishops misquotations. It looks as if the writer had taken up his ideas from some other source, and then went to the Bible to prove them, and by this process (adds our cleric) it is easy to prove anything." Is it? Let us try. A man starts, like our clergyman, with the idea that God's promises sworn to Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and Israel, were of a parenthetical description, to cease when the Saviour came, to be handed over to the Gentiles during these latter or last days, and then to become vital in the millennium. Now suppose him, suppose our opponent to go to the Bible to prove that assertion, in the face of such texts as Luke i. 55; Rom. xv. 8, could he succeed? "Oh, yes," declares our clergyman. "Anything" can be so proved! Let him try! We tell him the monstrous doctrine cannot be so proved without falsifying scripture and making such a chapter as Gen. xlix., relating to the events of our "last days" (ver. 1), false from first to last! But our opponent gives chapter and verse for his charge against the late Bishop. This is what he says:—"On page 33 the Bishop says that the word Goyim (nations) always refers to a nation outside of Palestine." This is declared to be absolutely without foundation, as will be seen by referring to the Hebrew text of Levit. xviii. 24; Exod. xxxiv. 24; Numbers xxiv. 9; Deut. vii. 1; ix. 1; see also Deut. iv. 34 (Goy) and 2 Kings xvii. 26, where "the nation" represents "the Ten Tribes" (sic!)

This is charge No 1. Surely one so ready to find fault ought to have been more careful himself regarding his own last reference to God's words! In 2 Kings xvii. 26 the word Goyim refers not to the Ten Tribes but to the heathen nations of Central Asia brought by the king of Assyria into Samaria to replace the deported Israelites of the Ten Tribes! The objector ought not to have quoted Deut. iv. 34 where the singular "Goi" is applied to Israel; because such use of the singular number was admitted by the Bishop in his footnote at p. 33 of his work. There remain, then, the five cases in which the heathen nations then occupying Palestine or Canaan were described in Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers and Deuteronomy as Goyim, contrary to the rule which the Bishop laid down on p. 33. But admitting that the Bishop's words are liable to misconstruction, what does it amount to? Only this: that prior to the invasion of Palestine by the tribes the word of God describes as "Goyim," or foreigners, invaders and unlawful intruders, certain "nations" who had no right to His inheritance Palestine, and belonged, as "barbarians," to outside territories! The Bishop's note at foot of p. 33 quite carries this construction, and we do not see that our objector can make much out of his charge as against the late Author. Our cleric goes on again thus:—"In quoting Gen. xlviii. 16, 'a multitude in the midst of the earth;' the Bishop takes 'earth' to mean the whole globe, whereas there seems to be nothing more meant, at least not necessarily, than 'the land' (of Canaan)."

Our opponent does well to write doubtfully, for he is wrong and the Bishop right, as we shall show. For if the Bishop were wrong in deeming "erets," "earth," to mean the whole globe in Gen. xlviii. 16, then Gen. xviii. 18, xxii. 18, and many another text, must be held to refer to Canaan only, but not to lands outside Canaan, which is absurd! But the cleric has more objections to urge, and here is a general one in which the Bishop was involved, with others. "It is the common one," he writes, "which supposes that all the Ten Tribes were removed, in B.C. 721, whereas it would seem that only influential persons were removed. The poor were left in the land. See 2 Chron. xxx. 5 referring to "Dan and Beersheba" (v. 6, 7, 9, 10, 11—18). A 'multitude,' 'Ephraim, Manasseh, Issachar, Zebulon'—i.e., the Ten Tribes."

In considering this objection we wonder that a clergyman can have been so rash as our opponent has been here! The chapter in question (2 Chron. xxx.) related to events of Hezekiah's reign (B.C. 726), before the Ten Tribes were wholly carried away, and therefore the force of the opponent's argument is shattered! (See also Isa. vii. 8, pointing to B.C. 678 as the completion of Israel's deportation). The depth of the following objection we find it hard to gauge, since Hosea as a prophet, in chapter iv. 17, was predicting a coming declension of the Ten Tribes which was never fulfilled till after the Assyrian captivity. The clergyman, however, writes as follows: "Here is another blunder which the Bishop has made. On p. 40 he says:—'It can only refer to the Assyrian captivity, and quotes Hosea iv. 17; whereas from Hosea i. 4 this prophet wrote before the punishment of the House of Jehu, which took place B.C. 772, or fifty years before the Assyrian captivity in B.C. 721."

We suppose our cleric did not believe that a prophet of God could anticipate events by fifty years? With such an argument we are unable to cope. But our opponent proceeds: "Again, on p. 45 the Bishop says, 'Amos exclusively prophesied to Ephraim.' Now Amos was of Tekoah in Judah, and prophesied of Zion and Jerusalem as well as of Ephraim, see ch. i. 2, ii. 4, iii. 1. Again, he quotes Hosea ii. 23: 'Ammi or My people, instead of Lo-Ammi, not My people,' as referring to Ephraim, whereas St. Paul quoted the same words (Rom. ix. 24, 55) in reference to 'us whom He hath called, not of the Jews only, but also of the Gentiles.'" Taking the last objection first we have here our argument illustrated that Ephraim came to be Gentilized during her captivity, and was a Gentile people (God's Lo-Ammi) in St. Paul's day. The scripture cannot be broken. And therefore, since Hosea certainly wrote of Ephraim in chap. ii. 23, St. Paul must in Rom. ix. have referred to the same Ephraim-Israelites as Gentiles. The burden of Amos' prophecy was certainly directed to Israel, and that we believe is what the Bishop meant.

We now come to our last clerical objection and we confess we do not see much in it. The opponent wrote thus: "Once more, in order to prove that Ephraim came from Britain, the Bishop quotes Isa. xi. 14, 'towards the West,' or from seawards, as he translates it,—i.e., 'from the west,' whereas verse 12 says they shall come from 'the four quarters of the earth,' which quite upsets the Bishop's theory." We are surprised again at our clergyman's inaccuracy. Let him read p. 53 of the Bishop's book again, and he will find that he describes the landing of Israel at the return and says it will be on the seaward frontiers of Palestine, that is, on the frontiers of Philistia. Their point of departure to get there might be West or East. But they will all converge, is the Bishop's gloss, on the seaward frontier of the Holy land, that is, its West. The Bishop no doubt connected this passage with Hosea xi. 10, and therefore it may be presumed that he assigned to Israel a Western home. But this does not and cannot negative the idea that detachments may also come from the East and land on the Western frontiers of Philistia! In fact, when the British return with Judah, they will travel "from the West" as from their head-quarters, but detachments will also come from the four quarters of the globe, because we are there! The clerical objector adds that in quoting Isa. lix. 19 both Mr. Hine and the Bishop culpably omit to notice that those "who fear the Lord from the West" (meaning, as they contend, Britain) are represented as fearing His glory from the rising of the sun, that is the East, which is not Britain. But will the clergyman point out any other Power belonging to the West having a mighty glory (God given) also in the East, excepting Great Britain? If we prove the contested point that in the last days Israel is to be found mainly established in the West, the text in question is not attenuated, but its application to the British vastly strengthened when it is added that the same Power exhibits God's glory also in British India, British Burmah, North-east Borneo, China, New Guinea, and the Eastern and Indian Oceans. Our clergyman assures us the Bishop's book "has many similar errors" but that these must suffice. We find nothing in these objections which can be held to touch the vital facts our opponent does not allude to. These are, that "The British possess to-day exclusively all those blessings which God sware to Abraham and his seed for ever to reserve exclusively for them;" and that geographically we are in precisely the position God's Word declares Israel should be found to occupy, in "the last days," which are our Christian dispensational times (vide Heb. i. 1; Acts ii. 17; Gen. xlix. 1). We shall be glad to hear from our clerical opponent again; because we understand he is a man of parts. He will excuse us for saying, that, really, as yet, he has not exhibited to us his full strength! Surely he could do something better?

Digitized by Google

HOW SOME NATIVE CHRISTIANS IN THE EAST VIEW "OUR IDENTITY."

A Missionary clergyman (an Englishman) now in the distant field in the East, writes thus:—

"I might, if I had time, fill several sheets, telling you of the many English in this country to whom I have conveyed the glad tidings. Some have smiled and doubted; others deeply interested and anxious to go more into the evidence. I have given several lectures to intelligent, educated, native Christians who have been deeply interested, and testify to the wonderful light it throws upon the Scriptures, and the powerful way in which it manifests God's faithfulness. I expect many of them will accept the glorious truth even before many of our own people will 'see' it. 'Blindness' clings to them. Oh, that the Lord would open their eyes! . . .

"June 28 was the day we here celebrated our Queen's Jubilee. I preached in the native language from 2 Chron. ix. 8, and showed the position of God's Viceroy. It was a grand text!"

So far our missionary to the heathen in our Eastern Empire. He is a faithful, earnest, Anglo-Israelite, and one who is a brilliant exception to the rule of clerical indifference. Two bishops lately out of five, appealed to by another earnest Anglo-Israelite (to give this subject a hearing), alone responded to his letters. The other three took no notice of his communications. Of the two one replied "that he regretted the sender of it had taken the trouble to write, as he (the bishop) was very busy and knew nothing at all of the matter alluded to (Our Identity)." The second bishop, equally civilly, replied that he had closely studied the subject, but was "utterly unable to see the validity of the writer's views." "You may think me," added this bishop, "very ignorant if you please, but I cannot receive what I do not believe." Two bishops of the Anglican Church at home, both learned and excellent men, have thus refused the light, but educated native Christians of the far-off Eastern land hear the good news, and are disposed to receive it, because of its powerful testimony to the faithfulness of God! Verily Isa. xlii. 19 is true, and God's true servants and messengers are "blind," having eyes, and cannot "see"!

ISRAEL'S STEAMSHIPS.

A friend at Tunbridge Wells, who delights to send us all that he notices in the public journals of the day, which tends to show that the British are God's favoured people Israel, has forwarded to us an extract from the Pall Mall Gazette of October 1st, 1887, which is to the following effect:—

THE STEAMERS OF THE WORLD.

Recent statistics show that the number of steamers existing in the world in 1886 was estimated at 9,969, of an aggregate burden of 10,531,843 tons. In the previous year the number was stated at 9,642, of an aggregate burden of 10,291,241 tons. The world's steam-shipping in 1886 was thus distributed:—Iron steamers, 8,198, of an aggregate burden of 8,911,406 tons; steel steamers, 770, of an aggregate burden of 32,820 tons; and wooden steamers, 822, of an aggregate burden of 380,655 tons. Of the steamers afloat in 1885, 5,792 were owned by the United Kingdom and its colonies, their aggregate burden being 6,595,871 tons. The other countries of the world owned steamers in the following order:—Germany, 579; France, 509; Spain, 401; The United States, 400; Norway, 287; Russia, 212; Denmark, 200; Italy, 173; Holland, 152; Brazil, 141; Japan, 105; Greece, 82; Turkey, 82; Belgium, 68; Chili, 43; Argentine Republic, 43; China, 27; Portugal, 27; Hawaii, 21; Mexico, 15; Miscellaneous, 50; total, 3,617.

Compared with Israel, therefore, the proportion of steamers was 3,617 to 5,792—that is, the British-Israelites owned in 1885, more steamers than all the other sea-faring nations of the world put together, by 2,175 vessels! Verily, God's people are the "head and not the tail, above only and not beneath, all the other nations of the earth," even in steamships! We see, then, why we are supreme at sea; and we see, too, why and how God has given us "the power to get wealth," since our supremacy in steam-power on the ocean brings commerce, and commerce affluence, to the glory of God. For He tells us, in Deut. viii. 18, that He gives Israel this "power to get wealth," "that He may establish His covenant which He sware unto their fathers as it is this day." God works by the instrumentality of His people; and He therefore gives them wealth, that by it they may, as the agents He deigns to use to evangelize the world, have the means to pay for their ships, steamers and sailing vessels, that they may subdue their enemies, and secure the means safely to visit the heathen nations of the earth with the Word of God, the Gospel of Christ, and the means of grace. He gives them this supremacy and wealth, too, that thereby they may have the power to conquer their enemies at "the ends," and "coasts," and "uttermost parts of the earth," that they may thus bring them to Christ, and may also prepare for the time when "The kingdom of the world shall become the kingdom of the Lord and of His Christ, and He shall reign for ever and ever" (Rev. xi. 15, R.V.). How our opponents (the clergy especially, as the chief of them), account for this persistent growth and increase of British power and might, we cannot imagine. Can it be they are so absorbed in their ministerial functions, that they have not a single moment to spare to contemplate one of the most striking and momentous phenomena the world has ever seen, bearing directly, too, on the problem of the world's evangelization, regarding which they profess to be so deeply interested?

How do they account for "the expansion of England," and the spread of the Church to all the countries of the world? Surely this is a point within their purview, as the ministers of religion in the foremost nation of the earth? Our Archbishops and Bishops are ready enough to recognize the fact of the expansion of the National Church and State. Why cannot they pause for a single moment, to enquire the cause? The Bishop of Durham, in his sermon before the Church Congress at Wolverhampton, reported in the Times, drew marked attention to the wonderful growth of the Empire Church, but he failed to ask or answer the question why the thing was so! We can tell him! It is because this people is Israel. To her the Lord has given the heirship of the world; and where the State goes, there must go the Church. The Bishop's words were these, regarding the past isolation of the Church of England. What her present condition is, he thus described:—

Digitized by Google

But this charge of isolation, if it had any appearance of truth 70 years ago, has lost its force now. The English Church is no longer insular, as the English race is no longer insular. The English Sovereign reigns over one-fifth of the whole human race. Of what monarch or what Power since the world began can the same be said? The great American Republic too—the most rapid development on a grand scale in the history of the world—is bone of our bone and flesh of our flesh. Nor is it only within the limits of English and American dominions that the influence of the English race is felt. British vessels alone absorb more than three-fourths of the carrying traffic of the world, and America claims a large share of the remainder. Every continent, almost every sea and island, swarms with English and American tourists and travellers. Everywhere, for business or for pleasure, English-speaking people are found. Corresponding to this progress of the English race is the spread of the English Church. Next year, if it please God, will witness another meeting of the Lambeth Conference. The number of the Anglican Episcopate, from which its members are drawn, is fast mounting up to 200. This year is the centenary of the first colonial bishopric. We have seized the occasion to take an audit of the progress during this period. I need not trouble you with the statistics of the increase. It is sufficient to say that during the present reign alone the number of our colonial and missionary sees has been multiplied nine or ten fold, and that the rate of increase has been greater in the later decades of this period than in the earlier. The Anglican Communion now comprises within her embrace Churches established, unestablished, and disestablished. She has flourishing branches in every continent of the globe. She acknowledges as her sons converts from the highly developed and immemorial religions of the East and converts from the rude idol-worship of Africa and the Pacific Islands. The successor of St. Augustine is coming to be regarded as the patriarch in substance, if not in name, of the Anglican Churches throughout the world. The proud title, papa alterius orbis, has a more real meaning now than when it was conferred many centuries ago. Nor is this all. With the ancient Churches of the East our relations are becoming every day more intimate. With the greater and more flourishing communities we are exchanging friendly intercourse, while the feebler Churches, in Syria, in Armenia, in Egypt, are looking to us for instruction and for help. The premature movement of Archbishop Wake in Queen Anne's reign is taking effect under his successors in Queen Victoria's. Archbishop Tait in his later charges gave a prominent place to the duties attaching to his office through these wider relations of the English Church, and they have been largely developed under his successor. What, then, shall we say? The catholicity has been restored to the English Church in a surprising way. Catholic indeed she was potentially before in her doctrine and polity; but now she is catholic in fact, catholic in her interests and sympathies, catholic in her responsibilities and duties. Yet these world-wide relations are almost wholly the growth of the present reign, the growth of our own life-time. What may we not hope in the future, if we respond to God's call? If we respond! The appeal lies, not to the clergy alone, though to them chiefly, but to every loyal son of our Church. Here is my reason for selecting this theme at such a gathering as the present. Let this vision of a glorious future be to every devout Anglican Churchman to-day an inspiration, as a similar vision was to every devout Israelite of old. What, then, shall be our attitude towards this great work which lies before us? How shall we consecrate ourselves for the task? We shall not relax our efforts for the evangelization of the masses at home. We shall feel that any weakness at the heart must impede the circulation and endanger the whole mechanism of the body. We shall not forget that we have special duties towards other Christian communities living side by side with us. We shall cultivate friendly relations where no principle is sacrificed. We shall avoid irritating language, for we shall remember with shame how largely their defection has been due to our fault. We shall be prompt to amend defects in our organization, and to establish effective tribunals of discipline. We shall approach the settlement of these questions in the spirit of concession, knowing that this spirit of concession—this epieikeia—is Christ's own attribute. Above all, we shall beware of exalting methods into principles. We shall redouble our efforts to evangelize the heathen world. We shall recognize the duty of the Church, as a Church, to take a direct part in missionary work, while yet we shall respect the voluntary agencies which have borne the burden and heat of the day. We shall not lay the yoke of a rigid uniformity on the necks of our converts. We shall lay down for ourselves as an aim not the multiplication of English churches on a foreign soil, but the creation of native churches. We shall allow great latitude of development in non-essentials, such as the form of worship. We shall not impose our Articles, or even our Prayer-book, as a necessity, on native peoples. We shall act throughout in the faith that they too, like the races converted to Christ in the ages past, have some treasure of their own, some special gift or endowment, to contribute to the House of God. We shall draw closer our intercourse with the enfeebled Churches in the East, not too carefully scanning their faults, whether in doctrine or in practice, but striving by education and by sympathy to raise them to a higher level. Thus will the catholicity of our Church be at length realized—a true inspiration to ourselves and an untold blessing to mankind. "All ye inhabitants of the world, and ye dwellers of the earth, see ye, when He lifteth up an ensign on the mountains."

"IN THE LATTER DAYS YE SHALL UNDERSTAND IT."

THE words at the head of this paper occur in Jer. xxx. 24, R.V. They amount to a new and unsuspected identification of the British nation as the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel. The passage refers to the restoration of the Two Houses of Israel to the land of their inheritance. The Lord promised in these verses to turn again the captivity of Jacob's tents, to cause their city to be built upon its own heap. The condition of the city was to be such then, that thanksgiving, and the voice of them that make merry were to proceed out of it. The people were to be multiplied and their polity glorified. Those that oppress them were to be punished. Their prince was to be no alien but one of themselves, and the Lord would cause him to draw near to Him. The people were to become God's people and He their God. In the midst of these special blessings promised to His people, which are continued also in chap. xxxi., to the end of it, there occur, interposed in a sudden, abrupt, and remarkable manner, the two last verses of chap. xxx., which declare, as so many other Scriptures do, that Israel's restoration must be preceded or accompanied by the terrible punishments of the non-Israelite Gentile world. It is described here in the words and language we now quote. "Behold the tempest of the Lord, even His fury, is gone forth, a sweeping tempest. It shall burst upon the head of the wicked. The fierce anger of the Lord shall not return until He has executed the intents of His heart. In the latter days ye shall understand it." The "intents" of the Lord's heart, are merely "His determination" described in the parallel passage in Zeph. iii. 8, R.V., where that determination is said to be to assemble the kingdoms, to pour upon them His indignation, even all "His fierce anger: for all the earth shall be devoured with the fire of His jealousy."

In Isa. xxvi. 21 we have another similar intimation (in connection with Israel's safety and preservation,) of God's resolve to punish and pour out the vials of His wrath upon the nations of the "earth." Israel is directed to hide herself for a little moment until the Lord's indignation be overpast. "For behold, the Lord cometh forth out of His place to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity; the earth also shall disclose her blood and shall no more cover her slain." The terrors of this earth-woe under the figure of the coming unparalleled "Great Earthquake, such as there has not been since men were upon the earth," appears in Rev. xvi. 18. With these many, terrible, texts before them, how is it that men have not, since the Reformation at least, realised how awful is the coming time "of the day of the LORD'S vengeance—the year of recompence in the controversy of Zion"? (Isa. xxxiv. 8, R.V.). Yet such is the case!

Digitized by Google

Up to the Reformation era the restoration of Israel in conjunction with God's awful and sudden judgments upon the Gentile non-Israelite nations, was not so much as thought of. Since the Reformation, the Christian world has dreamt of the speedy evangelisation of all mankind, the universal reign of Christ, the God of love and peace, among the nations. It is only in these latter days, in the times just before the second coming of Christ, that men who are aware that Israel of the Ten Tribes are found, are discovering that before the restoration of the tribes there must be a terrible overthrow of the nations, a cataclysm which will be a veritable "earthquake such as there was not since men were upon the earth, so mighty an earthquake, so great" (Rev. xvi. 18). The fathers and grandfathers of the men living on the earth to-day understood none of these things. They cared not for the Identity of the British with Lost Israel, for they knew nothing of the matter. They did not realise that the restoration of Israel and Judah was approaching; and that when that took place the destruction of the nations of Europe would occur at about the same period.

But now, when we are living in the dregs of the last days of the Christian dispensation, things have developed in an extraordinary manner, our forefathers' future has become our past; and we are enabled to view prophecies from a very different standpoint. We begin now "to understand" the purposes of the Lord to see how He is about to recall His people Israel, Judah, and Manasseh to His favour and to give them their land again; but in order to facilitate that political and national operation, He is about to cast the nations of Europe into the most horrible vortex of internecine war, for which they are all, as anyone can see, making the most gigantic preparations, unparalleled in the history of man! How the one series of events, respecting Israel, bears upon the other regarding the nations, we can only yet very dimly comprehend. But the Identity unlocks the puzzle, and reveals the secret; for we begin to "understand" that the last is the complement of the first; and that before the chosen seed can return, the opposing nations must be clean destroyed, and Israel's triumph be made easy by the annihilation of the enemies of the Lord and of His Christ. In the latter days, in our Christian Dispensation, we, the children of Israel only, not Judah nor the Gentiles, are beginning to "understand" these purposes of the Lord, and are awaking to the discovery that the mighty preparations for the coming "war of Titans" on the continent, is only the fulfilment of such prophecies as those we have already mentioned above, to make way for the glorious restoration of Israel to their inheritance and the Advent of our coming King, even the Lord Jesus, in proof of the faithfulnes of the Lord to His promises, and to certify to the world that what He has covenanted to perform, that He will bring to pass, to the jot and to the tittle, according to the prophecies. For our own nation, then, the prospects of the future are bright, comforting, and splendid. A time of sifting we are doubtless to pass through. Ezek. xx. 38, and Jer. xxx. 11 lead us to expect that! But the sifting will be accompanied by the outpouring of the Spirit of God on all flesh (Joel ii. 28) and by the bestowal of the new covenant of grace upon the House of Israel, first outside the land (Jer. xxxi. 33—34; Heb. viii. 10; Ezek. xxx. vii. 14), and then upon Judah when in it (Ezek. xxxvi. 25, 26). We may regard the fact then with which we are dealing as a new identification of the British nation with Israel. What other nation and race but ours at the present hour concerns itself with the discovery of Israel and with God's judgments on the nations non-Israelite by descent? We know not one! The only nations which ponder these matters and look for Israel to-day, are the British and Anglo-Saxon American nations. To them alone both these subjects are becoming burning questions full of interest and concern. But God's Word says that Israel shall, in "the latter days," that is in our times, between the two advents, "understand" the matter. We are as a nation beginning to understand it. We must then be Israel, God's first-born Ephraim, as He is true! Let us then as Israel rejoice in our glorious birthright inheritance, and praise the Lord for His undeserved mercies to our most sinful and sinning race!

ISRAEL'S EXISTENCE.

To the Editor of the "New Zealand Methodist."

SIR,—Mrs. Rigg refers me to Jer. xxxi. 31, to end; and says I "cannot fail to notice that the promise that Israel should not cease to be a nation before Him for ever is applied to both Israel and Judah when restored to Palestine, for Jerusalem is then to be re-built, and not thrown down any more for ever."

Accordingly, I turned to the passage, and this is what I found:—Verses 31 to 34 promise the new Covenant to Israel and Judah, and clearly describe what that Covenant is—it is evidently the Christian Covenant in place of the Mosaic; and is quoted by the writer to the Hebrews (viii. 8—12). Verses 35 to 37 form a distinct paragraph, and give the promise of a never-ceasing kingdom to Israel only. Why is Judah not mentioned here, as in v. 31?

Verses 30—40 refer to the city of Jerusalem as re-built, and not to be cast down any more. Are we to infer, from the position which the passage referring to the never-ceasing kingdom holds, that Israel shall not be a nation until the return? more especially as Israel only is mentioned, and because such an inference would disagree with other parts of Scripture. For instance—Ephraim was to be a nation and a company of nations (Gen. xlviii. 19). Can this be said to have been fulfilled in Canaan? How can it be fulfilled at the return, since Israel and Judah will then form one nation? It could only be fulfilled out of Canaan, and before the return.

Again—God promised to David (2 Sam. vii. 16), "And thine house and thy kingdom shall be established for ever before thee; thy throne shall be established for ever." This kingdom was transferred to Solomon (1 Kings i. 35; 1 Kings ii. 12), and God said, "I will establish the throne of his (Solomon's) kingdom over Israel for ever" (1 Chron. xxii. 10). Afterwards God said (1 Kings xi. 11), "Forasmuch as this is done of thee, and thou hast not kept My covenant and My statutes, which I have commanded thee, I will surely rend the kingdom from thee, and will give it to thy servant. Notwithstanding, in thy days I will not do it, for David thy father's sake; but I will rend it out of the hand of thy son," &c. 1 Kings xi. 31,—"And He said to Jeroboam, Take thee ten pieces; for thus saith the Lord, the God of Israel, Behold, I will rend the kingdom out of the hand of Solomon, and will give Ten Tribes to thee." See also verse 35.

Thus the kingdom was transferred to Israel of the Ten Tribes. Now, read in this connection Jer. xxxi. 35, 37, already quoted; and xxxiii. 19—22; also 2 Sam. vii. 14—16; 2 Chron. xiii. 4—5; Psalm lxxxiv. 3—4, 28—37. Can anyone, after reading the above passages, doubt that the throne and kingdom were to have a continuous existence?

I will put the argument in another form:—

1. A great number of promises are made to Israel, not only distinct from, but in opposition to those of Judah.
2. At the return, Judah and Israel will be one, and their blessings in common.
3. Therefore, concerning Judah as such, and those to Israel as such, must be fulfilled before the return.

With regard to Israel's not having any advantage over Judah, I will merely refer to Jer. iii. 9—11, which our Lord appears to allude to in the Parable of the Two Sons addressed to the Jews. (Matt. xxi. 28—31).

Mrs. Rigg refers to Zech. x. as a prophecy to both Houses; but it will be seen that from verse seven to the end only Ephraim is intended. I am, &c., T. M. GEE.

Willowbank, Sydenham, July 11, 1887.

We take the above from the New Zealand Methodist of July 30 last. The letter is interesting because it shows us how the contest is being waged in the Antipodes, and how ladies there are throwing themselves into the arena, and bearing testimony to "Lo-Ammi" according to prophecy in Hosea i. 10. The testimony is an ignoble one and also false, as that Scripture proves; yet Mrs. Rigg is ready to give it her support! Mr. Gee is doing battle gallantly for the truth, and we wish him every success. It is a satisfaction to know that The New Zealand Methodist is willing to make room in its columns for so important a subject, and candidly allows the argument for and against to appear. Such liberality is not always apparent in the members of the press on this side the water, and we are accordingly thankful.

Digitized by Google

Review.

Are Foreign Missions Doing Any Good? Fifth thousand. London: Kegan Paul, Trench & Co., 1, Paternoster-square. 1887. Price One Shilling.

THIS is an anonymous volume, whose authorship, however, seems to be an open secret. It is dedicated to the Right Hon. A. W. Peel, Speaker of the House of Commons, who is known to be a friend of missions, the object of the writer being "to inquire into the social effects of missions." The reverend writer of this capital little brochure views the question of Foreign Missions not in its spiritual aspect as regards conversions, but simply and solely in its general aspect, seen from the standpoint of the social effects which the missionary enterprise produces upon the heathen nations brought under the influence of this work. The author's object, then, has been to compile from public sources, but not from missionaries' reports, statements showing what effect, socially, Christian Missions have had upon heathen nations, and whether they have done any good quite apart from conversion or spiritual effects upon such communities. To do this our author has quoted largely from the records of the House of Commons, from a resolution proposed there by William Wilberforce, from speeches of Lord Palmerston, Sir Charles Wood, when Secretary of State for India, from statements publicly made regarding Christian Missions by Lord Lawrence, Sir Herbert Edwardes, the Earl of Northbrook, the Duke of Buckingham, Sir Bartle Frere, Lord Napier of Ettrick, Sir William Muir, Sir Richard Temple; and from the testimony of public journals, such as the Saturday Review, the Nineteenth Century, the Standard, the Times, the Daily Telegraph, and many other quarterly reviews and papers. The testimony of all these is uniform, and entirely in favour of Foreign Missions as agencies for good to the heathen nations where they are at work. Our author notices the fact that it is no longer a question whether heathen nations shall be brought into contact with Christians or not. The thing is settled. Nothing can prevent the contact. The testimony of the public press on the effects of that contact is that "Christianity in the abstract is a good thing," as China has found, and India, the Fiji Islands, and other countries have also learnt. The probabilities of the case as to whether our holy religion is likely to do good to heathen nations are in favour of the affirmative proposition. For the foremost nations of the world to-day are Christian by profession. England is a proof of this, and has shown that Christianity has proved itself to be "wonderfully calculated to promote social progress and national development." What has proved so great a blessing to us is likely to be equally beneficial to the heathen. Our author finds that uncivilised and savage races are yielding to Christian teaching. The testimony of Mr. Charles Darwin, Sir Bartle Frere, and others is cited to prove that fact. Miss Gordon Cumming's verdict regarding Fiji is decisive. "Only forty years ago the missionaries landed," she writes, "and already they have won over to the new religion of peace and love upwards of 100,000 ferocious canibals!" Sir A. Gordon declared, as Governor of the Fijis in 1879, that the statement was true. "Out of a population of 120,000 more than 100,000 are now," he said, "regular worshippers in churches. There are 800 of these. Over 42,000 children are in attendance at the 1,500 Christian schools!" Similar testimony is given by our author respecting the Loyalty Islands, and Madagascar, and the case of Africa is dwelt upon to prove the same point. Deeply interesting details are also furnished regarding the advance of civilisation in Sierra Leone, and in British India in general. Here our travelled author (an English Church Missionary Society missionary) declares that the chief of the non-missionary agencies which have effected social good in India has been the general justice and righteousness of the British rule.

The example of the Christian lives of many of our foremost Anglo-Indian officials the author reckons as another potent factor and means of good to India. The lives of the Lawrences, of Herbert Edwardes, of Bartle Frere, and of a host of others have indirectly benefited India by their Christian influence on the native masses. He points to the abolition of Suttee (or Widow-burning), of Infanticide, of the Swinging Festival, of Jugganath's Car, of the exposure of the sick and aged to die on the banks of the Ganges, of human sacrifices, and other inhuman rites in India, as the indirect results of Christianity, and the outcome of the Christian principle among British-Indian legislators and rulers at various times. In respect to native education, male and female, in India, as regards Zenana work too, the writer of this little book points to the undoubted fact that both have been largely brought about by the influence of Christian missionaries. The fact is certified by the report of the Indian Education Commission of 1883, by the Government Report of the Madras Census for 1874, and other public records, plainly proving the inestimable benefit Christian Foreign Missions have conferred on the Indian Peninsula. These and many other subjects are treated in this valuable work in a masterly way, and we urge, as a matter of great moment, that our readers should each obtain a copy, and use it as a means of interesting others in Foreign Missions and spreading the glorious work. It is one which Anglo-Israelites must make their own. God made, formed, and created Israel to show forth His glory, and that glory is seen in the blessing and benefits which Christ's blood has purchased for the whole world, but disseminates among all nations, families, and kindreds thereof by the instrumentality of His people in these islands. The rev. writer of this volume, of course, does not recognise the House of Israel in the true portrait he has drawn of the British labouring for the heathen in the various methods he portrays. Yet he ought to have known that a people blossoming and budding and filling the face of the heathen world with such good fruit as he describes, can be no other than "Israel obedient." He urges, by every argument at his command, our national duty to carry out the Lord's command by communicating the Gospel to all mankind. If that be our duty, then we beg leave to tell the author that we British must be Israel, since to no other race but Israel has God in His holy Word committed the sacred duty of international beneficence, through the teaching of Christianity by Foreign Missions. "Go ye," He said to His Hebrew disciples, "to all the world, and preach the Gospel to the whole creation" (Mark xvi. 15, R.V.). That commission was never afterwards widened so as to include among the preachers the other non-Israelite, Gentile nations of the earth! For He who said these words came to fulfil the law and the prophets, jot by jot, and tittle by tittle (Matt. v. 17, 18, R.V.). In them the House of Israel, being the afterseed of Abraham, are designated the agents by whom all nations, families, and kindreds of the earth were to be blessed, and them alone He has endowed with power to carry out His purposes, since He promised to them that, "He showeth His words unto Jacob, His statutes and His judgments unto Israel; but (that) He hath not dealt so with any nation, and as for His judgments, they have not known them" (Gen. xxii. 18, xxviii. 14; Acts iii. 25; Psa. cxlvii. 19, 20, R.V.). Israel, therefore, praise ye the Lord!

BRITISH-ISRAEL.

FELLOW COUNTRYMEN,—On Sunday (Christmas Day) we celebrated the birth of our Saviour. In our Churches and chapels, throughout the length and breadth of the British Empire and America, we chanted and sung these words on that day, "Blessed be the Lord God of Israel, for He hath visited and redeemed His people, and hath raised an horn of salvation for us in the House of His servant David. The oath which He sware unto our father Abraham, that He would grant unto us, that we, being delivered out of the hands of our enemies, might serve Him, without fear, in holiness and righteousness all the days of our life." Pause, my brothers, can the Jews sing this? No! They have been persecuted in every country. Can any of the Continental nations? Not one! Every country in Europe has been over-run by invading armies. Only Israel of the British Isles has braved for more than a thousand years the battle and the breeze, because there is none other that fighteth for them, but only Thou, O God! Therefore, Israel, praise ye the Lord!

JAMES WRIGHT.

Plymouth, Dec. 27, 1887.

NOTE BY THE EDITOR,—The sum of 2s. 6d., forwarded to us by Mr. Wright with the above, for the BANNER Free Distribution Fund, was forwarded by us to Miss E. M. Rush.

BIDFORD.—MR. LILWALL'S JUBILEE ODE.—Mr. G. Lilwall, who signs himself "An Anglo-Israelite," forwarded to Her Majesty a copy of his Jubilee Ode, and has received the following reply:—"The Private Secretary has received the Queen's commands to thank Mr. George Lilwall for the kind and loyal expressions conveyed in his communication. Privy Purse Office, Buckingham Palace, S.W."—Stratford-on-Avon Herald.

Digitized by Google

NOTICES.

All communications intended for the Editor, to be addressed: "Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Clifton, Bristol.

SUBSCRIPTIONS.

	£	s.	d.
Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free	0	7	6
Two Copies (including Double Numbers)	0	13	6
Three Copies " " "	1	0	4
Four Copies " " "	1	5	6
Six Copies " " "	1	16	4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-grand, London, to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C., or F. W. PARRY & Co., 29, Paternoster-row, London.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

Contents Bills and Show Cards may be obtained on application to the Publishers.

Advertisements should be sent to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

Prepaid Advertisements are inserted at the rate of thirty words for 1s. 4d.

BRITISH-ISRAEL CONFERENCE ASSOCIATION.

A Conference

On the Subject of OUR IDENTITY will be held in the EXCHANGE, WOLVERHAMPTON,

ON

TUESDAY & WEDNESDAY, FEB. 21 & 22, at 11 a.m., 3 p.m., and 7.30 p.m.

The Revs. R. Douglas, S. C. Adam, F. Aston, H. Marriott, C. W. Hickson, E. J. W. Whittaker, T. Lowe, J. Idrisyn Jones, etc.; Surgeon-General Grant, D. A. Onslow, Esq., J.P., Dr. Alder Smith, Commander Roberts, R.N., and others will address the Meetings.

The Secretary, the Rev. F. Aston, Vicar of Bushbury, Wolverhampton, will provide hospitality, as far as possible, for friends coming from a distance, application being made to him before Feb. 14.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

A LECTURE will be Delivered in the ASSOCIATION ROOMS, 14, King William-street, Charing Cross, W.C., on THURSDAY EVENING NEXT, February 9, 1888, at 7.30 o'clock, by Mr. James E. Nelson. Subject: "Naphtali and his Companions." Admission free. Strangers will be made welcome. JAMES BILLINGTON, Sec.

WORKS BY JAMES KEITH.

Price 9d., by post 10d.

THE EASTERN QUESTION OF TO-DAY.

As unfolded by the Prophet Isaiah, in a Panoramic View of the Great Woes to befall the Earth prior to the Second Advent of Christ Jesus, beginning with Great Britain.

"See, I have this day set thee over the nations and over the kingdoms, to root out, and to pull down, and to destroy, and to throw down, to build, and to plant" (Jer. i. 10).

Price 1s., post free.

THE IMPENDING JUDGMENT of GREAT BRITAIN.

An Exposition of Chapter xxviii. of the Book of the Prophet Isaiah.

"And the Lord answered me and said, Write the vision, and make it plain upon tables, that he may run that readeth it" (Hab. ii. 2).

Price 4d., by post 5d.

LIGHT SHED BY THE GREAT PYRAMID of EGYPT

On the Last Days of this Dispensation, from A.D. 1814 to A.D. 1922.

Professor Piazzi Smyth says:—"I have read through every word of your Pamphlet, 'Light Shed by the Great Pyramid of Egypt.' I am both charmed and instructed by it. In all your allusions to the architecture, the measures, or the history of the Great Pyramid, you are to the extent of my knowledge, perfectly correct."

London: Robert Banks and Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; or of the Author, Dingwall, N.B.

Ready at Advent. Price 6d., by post 6½d.

Old Dogmas From New Aspects.

By Vox Feminæ Auriculæ Hominis.

Contents: 1. The Apostolic Succession. 2. The Apostle Peter. 3. The Successor of Judas Iscariot. 4. The Athanasian Creed. 5. The Trinity. 6. Eternal Punishment. 7. The Great Tribulation. 8. The Great White Throne. 9. The Atonement of Jesus Christ.

H. E. Hill, 60, Nevill-road, Stoke-Newington, London N.

THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL. By the Rev. Joseph Wild, D.D., Pastor of Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, New York. Price 3s., post free 3s. 3d.

THE FUTURE OF ISRAEL AND JUDAH Companion volume to above. By the Rev. Joseph Wild D.D. With Portrait of the Author. Cloth, gilt lettered bevelled boards. Price 2s., post free 2s. 3d.

London: Robert Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Price 6d., post free 7d.

"THE TEN TRIBES."

Where, and in What Condition are the Ten Tribes at the Present Time; and What will be Their Place in the Millennium?

A PAPER read before "The Prophecy Investigation Society" on April 9, 1887,

By ALDER SMITH, M.B., F.R.C.S.

THE LANCET says,—"The paper is worthy of perusal by all who take an interest in ethnological questions as connected with the historical and prophetical portions of holy writ."

LONDON:

R. BANKS & SON, RACQUET-COURT, FLEET-ST

Price 2s. 6d., Cheap Edition, 1/-

BIBLE LESSONS AND REFLECTIONS.

By ROBERT GAIRDNER, of Kilmarnock, N.B.

"Mr. Gairdner has given us in his book a series of Bible lessons, with his own reflections added thereto, and though he has been very cautious in the latter, and has not committed himself too broadly, he has plainly let it be seen that he is an Anglo-Israelite by conviction, and that the Scriptures which he quotes at length and extensively throughout his book, are meant to teach Our Identity and God's faithfulness, from first to last, to His promises to Abraham and His seed for ever."—Banner of Israel.

ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-st.

THE MESSENGER, 1888.

NOTICE.—In the January number of this Magazine is commenced

A NEW AND IMPORTANT WORK

bearing on the Identity of the British People with Lost Israel, and entitled

"RUSSIA JAPHET,"

Treating of the History, Geography, and Destiny of the Peoples subject to the Czar.

By "OXONIAN,"

Author of "Israel's Wanderings," &c.

Price 6d., post free 7d.

London: F. W. Parry & Co., 29, Paternoster-row.

Fifteenth Thousand.

BY REV. HENRY ROE

Israel's World. Origin and Destiny of British Race, Colonies, and Empire. 2d., post free 2½d. Fifty post free from H. Roe for 4s. 9d.

Philo-Israel says: "I am perfectly delighted with your pamphlet."

C. E. Priestly, Esq., says: "For its size I never read a better work. I have given away two lots of fifty each, and enclose money for fifty more. I have sent it to clergymen, bishops, and archbishops."

Rev. Thomas Lowe says: "What the works of Mr. Hine failed to do in my enlightenment, 'Israel's World' has accomplished. I now read the Scriptures in a new and vivid light."

Going to Africa. 1s., post free 1s. 1d.

Fernando Po Mission. 1s., post free 1s. 1d.

West African Scenes. 2s., post free 2s. 2d.

Consecration. 2d., post free 2½d.

50 post free from H. Roe for 4s. 9d.

Robert Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.; and Rev. H. Roe, Dawley, Salop.

PIANOFORTES, Harmoniums, American Organs. Why buy at shops inferior made instruments, and pay large profits, when you can buy direct from the Maker High-class Instruments, and save 50 per cent. by so doing? Full value allowed for old Instruments in exchange as part payment. Write for Price Lists and Testimonials to G. LINSTEAD, 2, Oseney Crescent, Camden Road, London. Established 1874.

HUMAN LIFE.—FIFTY YEARS' Record of Facts, Principles, and Discoveries (just published, complete) Relating to the Improvement and Preservation of Human Life on Earth. Origin and true treatment of diseases. A series of articles by DR. SAMUEL BIRLEY, M.D., Ph.D. Book form, 50 pages. SENT FREE to every applicant by the publishers, GORDON B. MURRAY & CO., 50, Theobald's-road, Holborn, E.C. Write to-day.

WORKS BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

The Geography of the Gates. With Map and six full page, and one double-page, Illustrations, printed on plate paper. 208 pages, in handsome cloth, gilt. Price 3s. 6d., post free 3s. 10d.

The History of the House of Israel. How They Were Lost and How They Were Found. Told for the children. Price 6d., cloth 1s.; post free 7d. and 1s. 1d. Fifth edition.

A Resume of the Scriptural Argument, Proving the Identity of the British Race with the Lost Ten Tribes. Price 1d.; 6s. per hundred, postage 6d.

Our Identity: What it is Not; What it is; and Our Obligations To-day in Respect to it Being a Lecture recently delivered in London by Philo-Israel, and published by special request. Price 2d., a reduction for quantities.

Our Identity with the House of Israel. Price 4d., Reprinted from "Clifton Chronicle Letters"

An Elementary Digest or Sketch of the Chief Facts and Teachings of the Great Pyramid of Egypt. Adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific 56 pages, Illustrated with Diagrams, price 4d., post free 5d. 10th Thousand.

Are the English People the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel? An Inquiry Establishing the Identity of the British Nation with the Lost Ten Tribes. 4d.

Robert Banks & Son, Racquet Court, Fleet Street, E.C.

THE ANNUAL VOLUME

OF THE

BANNER OF ISRAEL

IS NOW READY.

Price, in Handsome Blue Cloth, Gilt, 8s., Post Free for Postal Order.

Forms a handsome present. Useful for presentation to Working Men's Institutes, Libraries, etc., etc.

Robert Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

LUNG SAVE YOUR LIVES BY TAKING TONIC

OWBRIDGE'S LUNG TONIC

THE MIGHTY HEALER.

It has a power over disease hitherto unknown in Medicine.

Are you at all Weak-chested or inclined to be Consumptive, with just a touch of Cough now and then?

"Try this Wonderful Medicine." The Cough and Weakness will disappear as if by magic, and you will feel a strength and power you never had before.

HAVE YOU A COUGH?
A DOSE WILL RELIEVE IT!
HAVE YOU A COLD?
A DOSE AT BEDTIME WILL REMOVE IT.

Bronchitis & Asthma it relieves instantly

The Spasms of Coughing so dreadful in Whooping Cough become less with each dose of the medicine.

Prepared by W. T. OWBRIDGE, Chemist, Hull

Sold in Bottles 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d. and 11s. by all Chemists and Patent Medicine Vendors. Wholesale all London and Provincial Houses.

BRONCHITIS, ASTHMA,

COUGHS, COLDS,

CONSUMPTION,

and all Pulmonary Affections can be immediately relieved and rapidly

CURED

by simply using the

AMMONIAPHONE

FOR THE Voice, Throat, Chest, and Lungs.

21s. post free.

WILL LAST FOR YEARS.

Used and recommended by the Royal Family, and principal Physicians, Clergymen, Vocalists, and Public Speakers throughout the country. New illustrated Pamphlet with copies of Thousands of Testimonials FREE OF CHARGE may be had on application to Medical Battery Co. Ltd.

52, OXFORD STREET, LONDON, W.

Corner of Rathbone Place.

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. F. W. PARRY (late GURST & Co.), 29 PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, FEB. 8, 1888. [All rights reserved.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."

(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. XII., No. 581. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 15, 1888. [PRICE ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
The Pearl of the Indian Ocean	69
Sikkim	70
Shut Thy Doors About Thee	71
Where is He that is Born King of the Jews? (Matt. ii. 2). By Surgeon-General J. M. Grant, M.D.	72
Egypt's Saviour, Defender and Deliverer	72
Israel's Sanctification	73
India's Advance Under Israel's Guidance	74
The Enemy Coming in Like a Flood	75
Correspondence	75

"THE PEARL OF THE INDIAN OCEAN."

THE Weekly Bulletin, a journal of finance and investment, published an article on January 21 in which Delagoa Bay is described as "The Pearl of the Indian Ocean." The writer, who holds strong opinions on the subject, considers it our paramount duty to effect an exchange with Portugal and give her some of our Colonial possessions in exchange for Delagoa Bay, which is sure to become invaluable to us ere long. The reason why this hitherto neglected spot is now found to be beyond all price to us as a nation is the Israelitish one that God has seen fit to show our race that South Africa generally, and the Transvaal in particular, are gold-bearing districts second to none in the world. Already there is a vast rush of British settlers employed in digging for gold, who pay to the Boers for the privilege no less than £30,000 a month in "claims" and quit rents. Pretoria is the Boer capital, as we all know, with about 4,000 inhabitants, a mere village. But since the Witwatersrand goldfields have been discovered, a town of Englishmen or Britons has sprung up thirty-five miles south of Pretoria containing 5,000 inhabitants and 1,500 houses. Barberton, on another goldfield in the Transvaal, is also a second British town, of 6,000 inhabitants and 2,000 houses. It is situated at 200 miles' distance from Pretoria and only 150 miles from Delagoa Bay. Supposing the goldfields hitherto discovered to be only the fringe of the gold-bearing districts, the Bulletin believes we are merely at the beginning of a mighty rush of gold-seeking settlers, who are sure to be in the majority Britishers, and these will overwhelm the small body of Boers who are likely ere long to be in a very small minority. The writer in the Bulletin, however, fears our own government will let the golden opportunity slip, and will fail at once to accept the offered protectorate of Amatongaland. The Boers, are anxious to get rid of our influence there. If we refuse the protectorate the Germans are ready to take it up, and with Boer help to extinguish our rising power in that part of the world. "If Germany," says the writer, "once gets her foot into the country on the East coast, the issue is hardly doubtful."

We shall have one of the most powerful and enterprising nations of Europe to compete with for supremacy, instead of, as at present, a few Boers, who hardly number ten thousand able-bodied males—less than half the number of the new English settlers already on the spot. Is it possible to calculate what the English element will number even three years hence? By taking no steps to support its new colonists in the gold regions of South Africa, the government is morally provoking civil war between them and the Boers. Already they are paying in claims and quit-rents £30,000 a month to the Transvaal Exchequer, and are denied any voice at all in the Volksraad. Will not the most likely result be that Cape Colony and Natal will make common cause with the English settlers scattered over the Boer and native States, and a South African Republic, independent of Queen Victoria, be the result? The British Colonies all over the world are loyal just so far and so long as it is to their interest to be loyal. The digger is a cosmopolitan, and the only mistress he owns is gold. The old colonies of South Africa will be carried along with the rush of gold-seekers, and probably the richest country in the world south of the Zambesi—with infinitely greater possibilities, perhaps, than Canada or even Australia—will become the new and powerful Republic of the southern hemisphere.

Here then is a "bug-bear" which a writer raises up to frighten himself and his readers withal; simply because he has no acquaintance with Our Identity, and has no faith in or knowledge of prophecy bearing on the subject. He sees and duly chronicles the fact (but blindly) that God's promises to the House of Joseph are in active operation. The British race, he finds, is abnormally increasing in South Africa, and "like a mighty tide" is sure to sweep over that region as it has done over North America. God's promises of the gift of the precious things of the everlasting hills, and of the gold mines of the most valuable gold-fields in the world, are being fulfilled to this race, who are rushing to possess them in incalculable numbers in the Transvaal. Under those circumstances is it likely that a wretched and feeble folk like the 10,000 Boers will be able to reduce this multitude to "serfdom," and prevent the British-Israelites enjoying their own, or eject them from the land now they are upon it in possession?

The fear expressed that the Germans will obtain the seaport at Kosi or the one at Delagoa Bay would be well founded were not the promise of the Gate reserved in the Holy Scriptures not for the German Gentiles, but for the Israelitish British! The latter are "the Gate-holders" of the world, as everybody knows: and why should the Gate at Delagoa Bay or that which opens Amatongaland be any exception? The Portuguese have had the former Gate since the French Marshal's decision on the arbitration referred to him in 1875 put it in their charge. Portugal "has buried her talent in a napkin" during these 13 years, and thus plainly proved that hers is not the hand God means to use whereby to make the Transvaal "blossom and bud and fill the face of it with fruit." Israel only can do that, as Isa. xxvii. 6, R.V., plainly proves. On us, then, being Israel, that duty will devolve, and therefore we need be under no apprehension that God will forget His promises, or will, contrary to them, give to Germany, or the Boers, or any other race at all, what He solemnly swore on oath that He would reserve for the afterseed of Abraham only for ever. The terror some men are expressing of Germany and the Germans as our possible rivals in Africa, seems to us utterly absurd. They are not a colonising nation. They are poor and unable to carry out large projects, especially such as the construction of extensive railways at the ends of the earth, without guarantees and against the interests of "the Mistress of the Seas." She has, with us British, certain large territorial possessions near Zanzibar on the mainland. The following appeared in the Times on January 23 in respect to the Germans' ability to utilize these acquisitions. It is admitted they are too poor to do it! If that be the case nearer home, how will German companies carry out a most difficult operation in the Transvaal in the face of the active opposition of the British Colonies to the South, of the British settlers within the Transvaal itself, and of the great army of Israel, ready to pour into the country in search of gold from the four quarters of the earth? The extract from the Times reads thus:—

Digitized by Google

GERMAN EAST AFRICA.—With reference to the recent concession by the Sultan of Zanzibar to the British East African Association, the German colonial papers are naturally much agitated. One of the leading colonial organs treats the matter very sensibly, although the idea seems to be that England has rather stolen a march on Germany. It is admitted that Germany cannot at all compete with England so far as private enterprise is concerned, so that if the German sphere of influence in Africa is to be adequately developed it can only be by Imperial aid. Thus, while the British company is evidently quite prepared to lay down a railway into the interior of its region, it would be difficult in Germany to raise funds for a similar enterprise, though the journal strongly urges that it should be done, on condition that the Imperial Government should guarantee a certain amount of interest. Supposing that it would take 10,000,0000 marks to construct a railway into the Usagara territory, surely the government might guarantee 2 per cent on this, 200,000 marks yearly, considering the interests that are at stake. We sincerely hope that Prince Bismark may see it in this light. To the tone of the writers on the subject in German colonial organs we cannot object. They recognise that something higher than mere pounds, shillings, and pence should be the aim of those who have the interests of East Africa in their power, and that England and Germany should work in a friendly rivalry to open up the continent to commerce and civilization.

No doubt German help will be needed to open up Africa rapidly. German enterprise is required to stimulate Israel's tardy action by means of the jealousy she excites in the latter's mind. But in the end which Empire will acquire Africa? Israel, which has the Gates, the multitudes, the affluence, the Gospel and the commission to preach it from on High? Or Gentile Germany, which has not the Gates, nor the multitudes, nor the wealth, nor the Gospel message to proclaim? Let Israel praise the Lord for His goodness to His people!

WHAT folks think of The Anglo-Israel Almanack for 1888.—"Thanks for the Almanack. The Editor's paper is interesting, and I much like Miss Cox's, it gives such short and satisfactory answers to objectors; but those who really object and argue, are the minority. The real foes of the Identity are the members who are utterly indifferent, seeming to think it may be so, but it is of no interest to them. Many, too, laugh and say, they don't want to be Jews; and some, who really seem interested for a time, cool down to utter indifference, and forget it all."

SIKKIM.

IT is needful that readers of the BANNER should know where and what "Sikkim" is, and why notice should be taken of it in these pages. Sikkim is a native Indian State claimed by the government of India as a "feudatory State of the Indian Empire." The Rajah of Sikkim, however, being a Buddhist, and having lately returned from Lhasa, the capital of Tibet, at the North of the Himalayah Mountains, is inclined to believe that he is now strong enough to resist the British treaty-claim to make a road for Indian commerce through his country into Tibet and China beyond, although treaties exist and are in force which give us that very right. He has accordingly obtained some Tibetan troops, and has for some months past blocked the road and refused access, under the impression that he can carry his point. The Viceroy, however, is not of that opinion, and means to force the Rajah of Sikkim to respect the treaty. Accordingly it was announced from Calcutta on Jan. 25th, that the 32nd regiment of Bengal Infantry (the Pioneers) were to start immediately with two guns for Sikkim with orders to force the road, and repair that leading into Tibet through the Jelapla Pass. It is supposed there will be no resistance on the part of the Tibetan troops who are armed merely with matchlocks, bows and arrows, but with no more formidable weapons. Such are the facts concerning this apparently simple affair. Yet large trade prospects for India, with Nepaul, Tibet, and even China, are contingent on the movement now in progress regarding the insignificant little native State Sikkim.

The geographical position of this small country is remarkable. It lies due north of Calcutta, at 400 miles distance, and is embedded between Nepaul on the West and Bhotan on the East. This little country, being a feudatory State belonging to the Indian Empire, as the Viceroy declares it is, forms a true gate of entry into Tibet from India, and is the only road of access we have as it were towards China on our own territories in the neighbourhood of Calcutta. Sikkim is 1,550 square miles in extent, with a population of about 7,000, and possesses several passes into Tibet from 13,000 to 16,000 feet high! It is cleft by deep valleys through which swift rivers run. It is covered with jungle, full of wild animals. The Indian government have always maintained treaties with the Sikkim Rajahs, and in 1814 gave one some territory in return for his help during our war with Nepaul. In 1824 the Rajah surrendered to us the district of Darjeeling for an annual rent of £300 a year, and that has in late years become a most important tea-planting district, to which a railway now runs from Calcutta. Darjeeling is a veritable Gate of Sikkim, as Sikkim is the Gate of larger dimensions towards Tibet. In 1849 the Sikkim people, who have an evil reputation for kidnapping, seized Dr. (now Sir Joseph) Hooker and imprisoned him. A military expedition followed from India, and of course released him. But the result to Sikkim was that "a considerable slice of territory was taken from the Rajah." Further similar trouble on the part of the Rajah's subjects led to a fresh expedition against him in 1860. The Rajah was then "compelled to sign a treaty which granted free trade, protection for foreigners, and the right of road-making for the Indian authorities." The breach of this treaty and the folly of the Rajah in procuring Tibetan military aid to close the Gate of the road into Tibet against British trade, is the cause of the order just made, whereby a single native regiment and a couple of guns are ordered "to clear the road" for Israel! The Times of January 25, sums up the probable future course of procedure of the military operation now in progress. The Indian government is resolved to dislodge the Tibetan troops. That is the first step. The next will be to insure the safety of the trade route, which we suppose will be by some measure short of annexation of Sikkim to the empire. The object the government of India have is merely "to open up Tibet and Nepaul to European and Indian trade." If that be thoroughly done, as no doubt it will, then we can understand that Calcutta will greatly benefit. For some years past she has suffered sadly from the tendency of Bombay (by reason of its position) to monopolise the trade of India and of the countries beyond. The Bombay Press, consequently, has been strongly adverse to the opening of the Sikkim Passes, incited thereto we fear by jealousy of Calcutta obtaining any sort of advantage over the Western Presidency and its capital. However that may be, the trade of Tibet and perhaps of China must find its way to India and the nearest Ocean Gate therein, which happens to be Calcutta. The Sikkim Passes are the only ones near the Eastern parts of India which pierce the Himalaya range, and Sikkim consequently is of vast importance to the great Gate-holders of the world. The dread of the Bombay Press is that the present movement will lead to the annexation of Sikkim by the Indian Government and thus bring upon us the hatred and hostility of Nepaul, Tibet, and the petty tribes around. We dread no such result. God gives Israel "the power to get wealth," for purposes of His own, and lawful commerce on a grand scale is the means commonly used by Him to bring us wealth. The Gate of Sikkim must by treaty rights be left open by the Rajah, and his insane act must be set aside. His territories will certainly never be annexed, but they must be watched, so that at no time shall he be able to repeat what he has just done to injure us. We regard the Sikkim episode, and what it is likely to result in, as distinctly Israelitish. The Sikkim Rajah has experienced Israel's power before, and each time has lost territory. He wants yet another lesson; and this time he will probably lose his independence, but we shall win a Gate according to the prophecies. To God will be all the glory.

Digitized by Google

"SHUT THY DOORS ABOUT THEE."

THE London Chamber of Commerce held a large meeting on January 25, at the Cannon Street Hotel, to hear an address from Lord Brassey on the subject of the "Defences of the Empire and the Protection of Trade." The object of Lord Brassey was to inform the city magnates and the public in general of the results of his late cruise of 36,000 miles, and what he saw during it of the progress made in completing the defences of H. M. coaling stations, or "Gates," scattered throughout the world. It appears that his lordship visited Gibraltar, Malta, Aden, Bombay, Kurrachie, Trincomalee in Ceylon, Colombo, Singapore, North Borneo, King George's Sound in Western Australia, Adelaide, Melbourne, Sydney, Brisbane, Thursday Island, Port Darwin, Mauritius, Cape Town, including Table Bay and Simon's Bay, St. Helena, Sierra Leone, Ascension—twenty-two "Gates" in all! The report is very satisfactory on the whole, though it appears guns are wanted everywhere of a size commensurate with the weapons most nations now arm their cruisers with. Men also to work the guns and to defend the Gates seem absolutely unprovided all but everywhere! These deficiencies are summarised thus by Lord Brassey. He said:—

Having now made the circuit of the important points on which the security of our commerce with Australia and with the East depends, I proceed to sum up the various omissions which have been pointed out in the great scheme of defence which is now in course of execution. They are as follows:—(1) At Aden, dredging operations; (2) at Bombay, additional monitors and the organization of crews for the harbour-defence flotilla; (3) at King George's Sound, Thursday Island, and Port Darwin, armaments of sufficient power to deny the harbour and the coal supply to hostile cruisers; (4) at the Cape, additional heavy breechloading guns and a light military railway some six miles in length; (5) at Colombo, Singapore, Mauritius, St. Helena, and Sierra Leone, a local artillery militia; (6) at Ascension, if retained as a naval establishment, some armament is necessary. This enumeration will scarcely alarm the most jealous guardian of the public purse. A very moderate expenditure, fairly apportioned and judiciously applied, would fill up all the gaps in our armour to which your attention has been directed.

Our readers will notice that whereas God's Word, in Isa. xxvi. 20, 21, R.V., directs His people Israel, just prior to the Great Earthquake Woe of the Gentile nations, "to shut their doors about them" (that is, we suppose, "to fortify their Gates"), the great burning question of the day whereon our very existence as a nation really and absolutely depends, is, "whether our Gates are adequately defended or not?" Lord Brassey, in the very spirit of prophecy, went out himself to see with his own eyes, while travelling in his own yacht, whether the defences are being properly carried out or not. On January 25, he gave an account of the whole to a deeply-interested audience, including the Duke of Cambridge, the patriotic Commander in-Chief of the British Army. Some of the Duke's observations on the lecture we think must be reported in our pages, because they prove what a burning question this one has become which relates to the adequate defence and fortification of our nation's coaling stations or Gates. The Duke, inter alia, said:—

I might be asked why I am here at all. I have nothing to do with the Navy or with the mercantile marine; but I come here as an Englishman. (Cheers.) Englishmen must feel that this is a great naval and commercial Empire, and that therefore it is the interest of every man, if he has power and influence, to see that he does everything he can to instil that into the mind of the people at large. There is, however, I admit, another reason that I have in coming here. Though I concede and contend, as Lord Brassey has put it, that naval interests are first to be considered, yet I maintain that our naval interests would be of no avail unless there were a military element to back them. If your vessels are to be kept at different stations simply to protect your coaling stations, they cannot be at sea, and if they cannot be at sea, what is the use of them? (Laughter.) Why, they are of no use. What enables them to go to sea? The military armament and the military element that protect those stations. Therefore, it is such a combination that I contend one portion cannot exist without the other. . . . . You want proper coaling stations. Without those stations you cannot carry on your commerce in a safe and satisfactory manner. Without our defending those coaling stations you cannot maintain them as they ought to be maintained. I think, therefore, I am justified in appealing to you, who have influence and power in your relative positions, and to the public at large, to support the views which Lord Brassey has so admirably laid before you, and which, in a few words, I have endeavoured to support to the best of my ability. (Cheers.)

The Duke, in short, wanted our Gates to be properly defended, and did all he could to second Lord Brassey in his very moderate recommendations.

We are glad to know that in the Indian Seas, the Viceroy has seen to the defences of the Eastern Gates in a very satisfactory and efficient manner. The big guns only are wanted; the men to man and work them all will be forthcoming in the hour of danger! How Australasia is doing its duty by "shutting its doors" is well told by Lord Brassey, and we quote his words for our readers' encouragement:—

Passing on through the Straits of Macassar and across the Southern Indian Ocean, we arrive at King George's Sound. The harbour offers perfect shelter to ships of deep draught from every wind. Strategically the position is most important, both from the great distance which divides it from the nearest harbours available for vessels of large size and because all the trade between Australia and Europe by the Suez Canal, except that from Queensland, passes to and fro in the offing. Western Australia had undertaken the works, but the Conference was unable to devise a plan for raising the amount required to provide an armament for breechloading guns, estimated to cost some £19,000. I need not refer in any detail to the land defence of the great ports of Adelaide, Melbourne, Sydney, and Brisbane. The combined expenditure of the several Governments may literally be reckoned by millions, and the supervision of such officers as Sir William Jervois and the late Sir Peter Scratchley is a sufficent guarantee that the patriotic efforts of the colonists have been skilfully directed. For the manning of the works and the general defence of the colonies by land an army has been raised of more than 30,000 Volunteers—artillery, cavalry, and infantry, of splendid physique, well-equipped, and provided with a small staff of officers from the Imperial service. To raise the colonial Volunteer force to the highest standard of efficiency more officers are required who have seen service in the Army. The desire has been expressed in influential quarters that an Imperial officer should be placed in command of each regiment. At the Colonial Conference the appointment of an Imperial officer of rank as Inspector-General of the Land Forces was strongly advocated. An occasional inspection by an officer at the Horse Guards is highly desirable. A visit from the distinguished officer under whose command the first contingent sent from the colonies into the field had the privilege to serve would, I am confident, be highly appreciated. The preparation for such an inspection would do much to promote the efficiency. Turning to the floating defences, a considerable flotilla for harbour defence, including a turret ship, gun vessels, and torpedo boats, has been created at Melbourne; Adelaide has one powerful coast-defence vessel; and Brisbane has two efficient gunboats. When the ironclads of older date are replaced in our European squadrons by ships of the latest type, I would urge upon the Admiralty that some three or four ships which would otherwise pass into the reserve at home should be dispatched to the colonies. They would be valuable as a reinforcement of the floating defences and as drill ships for the naval brigades which have been organized in all the Australasian colonies. Under such good officers as Captain Fullerton, at Melbourne, Captain Hixon, at Sydney, the colonial Naval Reserves have reached a high degree of efficiency.

Digitized by Google

So far Lord Brassey. We see, by what has been done, and what remains to be done (but is sure to be carried out), that our nation, under the stress of Isaiah's prophecy, is "blindly obeying the Lord's command" to "shut her doors about her." She herein proves her Identity in a remarkable manner, since there are no other nations with doors to shut in their possession, and there are no nations but our own engaged in the operation of fortifying their distant outlying coaling stations, because they are occupied in the much more terrible work of preparing to defend their home frontiers, and providing weapons of offence, troops, guns, and war-horses, whereby to invade and destroy each other. Of foreign Gates they have few or none, and they exhibit no anxiety to fortify such as they possess, knowing their real anxieties lie much nearer home. In short, we have our Gates, or coaling stations, because we are Israel, and we are looking to their security and strongly fortifying them at this moment in obedience to the precept of our God, conveyed in Isa. xxvi. 20, to His people Israel—facts that prove Our Identity with the Lost Ten Tribes, and call for our heartfelt praise to the Lord, who is the God of Israel!

WHERE IS HE THAT IS BORN KING OF THE JEWS? (MATT. II. 2).

BY SURGEON-GENERAL J. M. GRANT, M.D.

To the above question of the Magi we might add the further question, How was He born King of the Jews? for I think that no part of Scripture is more misunderstood than that which refers to our Lord's right to the kingdom of Israel—a right which He Himself solemnly affirmed before Pilate. It is customary for theologians to trace His sovereignty to His descent from David through His reputed father Joseph, or from His mother, whose genealogy they suppose, and I think with strong probability, is recorded in Luke iii. 23—31, through her father and his grandfather according to the flesh, Heli. Both are agreed in thinking that His right to reign was derived by succession from David; but according to the light that "Our Identity" throws upon the Bible, the reigning family of the House of David had been removed from Palestine for centuries before His birth, and the sceptre had gone with it, and been established in another land.

The idea that Christ inherited the throne of Israel from David has long appeared to me rather irreverent, as well as unscriptural, because He distinctly repudiates the relationship of a son of David in Matt. xxii. 45, in the sense of inferiority or dependence. We have already seen that He had no right of inheritance from either His reputed, or actual earthly parent: and He declares that His kingdom is not of this world, that is, as I understand it, not derived from any of the kings of this world: and so, not interfering with the right of Cæsar or any earthly potentate.

How, then, did He derive it? The oath of God to David that his throne would be established like the stars for ever must evidently extend throughout the millennium; and to keep that oath inviolate, and verify the prophets whom Christ came to fulfil, it was necessary that He should come of the tribe of Judah, that He should have been born a Jew, because otherwise He could not have been born "KING OF THE JEWS;" and also that He should have been incarnate in the House of David, although not necessarily in the reigning family of that House. This brings us again to our question: "How was He born king of the Jews? and the scriptural answer appears to be, By having been incarnate by the power of God the Father, the King of Israel (1 Sam. xii. 12), operating through the Holy Spirit, and born of a Jewish maiden, of the lineage of David. We read in Luke i. 23 that at His second coming the Lord will give Him the throne of His father David, which shows that it is not His by hereditary descent, because we cannot give a person what is his already; and therefore, I think that the proper interpretation of that passage is that God the Father will give Him, as the Son of man, the throne of Israel, which has been His as the SON OF GOD from all eternity; and so, when I read that at the end He will deliver up the kingdom to the Father, I understand that the kingdom of Israel is intended, which will then include all nations, the whole ransomed human family, which He will present sinless and obedient as before the fall, to the Father, to whom He will be subject as the second Adam, although He will remain Lord of the creation as the first Adam was, and "of the increase of His government there shall be no end, sitting on the throne of David to order it . . . . and to establish it . . . . from henceforth even forever" (Isa. ix. 7).

EGYPT'S SAVIOUR, DEFENDER, AND DELIVERER.

IT is a remarkable thing that at the present hour British-Israel as a nation is exhibiting to the world a character in Egypt which is an exact parallel to, and fulfilment of, Israel's, in respect to Egypt, in Isaiah's prophecy in chap. xix. 20, R.V. There we find there was to be raised a cry unto the Lord Jehovah (the Hebrews' God), because of the oppressors, and He declared He would send them a saviour—a defender, and a deliverer, who would undoubtedly deliver them. The cry of the Egyptian fellahîn has been going up to heaven against their oppressors for ages, and the set time to deliver them came about in 1882, when the land was put in charge of the British, after the victory of Tel-el-Kebir. Since their administration of the land we should expect, because the British are Israel, that they would appear in their prophetic character of Egypt's saviour from her enemies, her defender from her internal oppressors, and her deliverer from her domestic miseries and disabilities. Facts are speaking loudly in favour of our contention that the British are Israel, and are proving, in a way none can overlook, that we have become indeed the saviours, defenders, and deliverers of the Egyptian people and country.

The Times has lately published a series of papers on the subject of Egyptian finance, railways, and public works. The general result, says the Times, "is alike favourable to the fellahîn and creditable to this country." We have done our duty by the land, and shown to the world that "what is done and undone in Egypt in different departments abundantly proves the administrators of India to have unrivalled capacity for the organisation of such a country as Egypt." Our Indian Empire has furnished the materials wherewith we have effected the salvation, defence, and deliverance of the country, and it is no small credit to our race that with God's blessing we have not only ruled India so as to be the admiration of all surrounding nations, but have supplied to Egypt Indian officers, who have done wonders there, by God's help, to restore blessing and happiness to a miserable population, whose country, if properly administered, is capable of enriching the world, and immensely benefiting the Empire of Israel-Britain.

Digitized by Google

The report of the Ministry of Public Works of Egypt, published in the Times of Dec. 28, gives a glowing picture of steady advance in the prosperity and irrigation works of the country. For "everything in Egypt begins and ends with the Nile," and the country itself owes its existence to that river. The Nile is Egypt, and Egypt is the Nile. Therefore successful efforts "to distribute the fertilizing waters of 'the river of Egypt' is the chief aim and central problem for all administrators" who desire to save, defend, and deliver that down-trodden land!

Sir Colin Scott Moncrieff, the head of the Public Works Department in Egypt, is a British Engineer Officer. Every sort of opposition to progress has been encountered and overcome by the officers of the Ministry of Public Works. The result is that Sir Colin Moncrieff is able to report that "there is not a district of any province of Egypt, from Esneh to the sea, in which some improvement has not been introduced to the irrigation or drainage." The report published in the Times gives proof that this is no idle boast, but the record of real solid improvement and progress. Egypt has found in her British administrators saviours of her people, defenders from her enemies, and deliverers from her internal corruptions. Useful work is being done by the native engineers, under honest captains; new tracts are being brought under irrigation, and therefore cultivation. Extortion and corruption are being gradually abolished.

The Egyptian railway system, it seems, is still bad and imperfect, and requires complete reformation. In time no doubt this will be done. It is satisfactory, at any rate, to be told that the Suez Canal Convention has removed some of the grounds of foreign irritation, and that we hear little or nothing now of complaints against our administration from continental critics. The condition of Egypt is improving all round, and God's blessing is following our efforts to restore prosperity to the land. Israel was to be a blessing in the midst of the earth, "the third with Egypt and Assyria, for that the Lord of Hosts hath blessed them, saying, Blessed be Egypt My people, and Assyria the work of My hands, and Israel Mine inheritance" (Isa. xix. 24, 25, R.V.). Our hold on Egypt thus is seen to be tightening. We are restoring her to prosperity and wealth, and in proportion as we do that we shall prove to the world that we have God's blessing accompanying our occupation of the land, and that no good purpose can be served by our relinquishing what God has so manifestly given to us, and blessed us in retaining.

We think to an unbiassed mind the history of Egypt since 1882, and British connection with it, is a speaking proof of the Israelitish origin of our race. Our occupation of the land was mysterious and providential. Our continued stay there, contrary to our own inclinations, and in opposition to the violently declared will of the French, as well as God's manifest blessing on our efforts to benefit the land, are all proofs that we are the people of God's choice, acting out our prophetic destiny in respect to Egypt, and therefore blessed of Him as He promised to bless Israel in connection with the land of Ham. To Him be all the praise!

ISRAEL'S SANCTIFICATION.

THE sanctification of an individual, as well as that of a nation, is closely connected with the righteousness thereof. The righteousness of Israel is of the Lord Jehovah, as Isa. liv. 17 teaches us. Her sanctification also must be of God, in Christ Jesus, who is made unto her wisdom and righteousness, as well as sanctification and redemption (1 Cor. i. 30). The sanctification of the nation, as well as of the members of it, is not inherent in either. In themselves, neither the nation of Israel nor the Israelites have any "sanctification," or "separation" to God and His Christ in any degree at all. It must be provided for the nation, as well as for the individual, ab extrâ. It is derived, we see, from God, and is stored up in Christ. That mankind, and therefore the Israelites, have no worthiness or sanctification of their own, is manifest from the whole testimony of Scripture on the subject. After the Flood God's verdict was that "the imagination of man's heart was evil from his youth" (Gen. viii. 21). Moses, in Deut. ix. 6, 7, pronounced Israel's character to be constantly "rebellious against the Lord," the people being "stiff-necked." In Isa. vi. 5 the prophet confessed his own and his people's sins when he declared he "was a man of unclean lips, and that he dwelt in the midst of a people of unclean lips." David, in Psa. li. 5, admitted that he, the King of Israel, was "shapen in iniquity, and in sin did his mother conceive him." The prophet Jeremiah, in chapter xvii. 9, records the fact that the human "heart is deceitful above all things and desperately wicked." In the New Testament the same wretched witness is borne to man's depravity. St. Paul, in Rom. iii. 10, quoting the Psalms, declares "there is none righteous; no, not one. . . there is none that seeketh after God, none that doeth good; no, not one." Of himself the apostle writes as the "wretched man, seeking deliverance from the body of this death" (Rom. vii. 24). The case, then, against Israel is desperate. She has no worthiness of her own, no sanctification before God, no separation from the world to constitute her title to God's favour; but from the sole of her foot, even unto the head, there is no soundness in her, but wounds, and bruises, and putrifying sores" (Isa. i. 6).

Such being the fact the question arises, How can Israel without worthiness in God's sight appear before Him and be accepted? Her righteousness, which is Christ's robe, is her justification, her title to His favour. But her "sanctification" is another thing, and without that how can she delight herself in the Lord, or find satisfaction in the King's presence? This is the question Job asked in chapter xiv. 4: "Who can bring a clean thing out of an unclean? Not one." She must be re-created, transformed, and born again of the Holy Spirit before she can be fit to enjoy His presence or work acceptably for Him. Hence God creates, forms, makes, and by His Spirit renews Israel's heart, putting His law in it, and writing it on her mind, and making her what she was not before—namely, "His people." This "sanctification" is really that separation from the people of the world which Moses described of Israel in Exod. xxxiii. 16, R.V., in these words: "Wherein now shall it be known that I have found grace in Thy sight, I and Thy people? Is it not in that Thou goest with us, so that we be separated, I and Thy people, from all the people that are upon the face of the earth?" While Israel's justification or title is procured by the Lord Jesus Christ once for all, fully and perfectly by a single act, the sanctification of Israel is gradual and progressive, yet effected by the Lord Jesus Christ through the Spirit of God, which is the Spirit of Christ, by the operation of God the Father.

The ecclesiastical history of our country proves that this sanctification of our nation has been a gradual progressive work. When the Tribes were collected here they came in a semi-heathen state. They were converted to Christ, and after many declensions and falls we find them to-day confessedly the Christian nation par excellence, not perfect yet, but reaching forth to perfection, waiting the Lord's time for fresh baptisms of His Holy Spirit, when the "refreshing" shall come from the presence of the Lord, when, too, they shall as a people all know Him, from the least of them to the greatest of them, their sins and their iniquities being forgiven them for Jesu's sake (Joel ii. 28; Acts iii. 19; Jer. xxxi. 33, 34; Heb. viii. 10, 12). To them is committed, as all allow, the custody of the Word of God. They disseminate it to the ends of the earth, and publish the Gospel among all nations, families, and kindreds of the world. The Sabbath is their cherished blessing—the day kept holy to the Lord, because of the commandment. Their Church is the purest in Christendom, and theirs is the only European National Church which obeys the Scriptural prescription in regard to the institution of the Lord's Supper. Israel's sanctification is a glorious truth which results from the union of the nation with their Lord, who is their Husband. "For I am married to you," is His declaration! (Jer. iii. 14).

Digitized by Google

INDIA'S ADVANCE UNDER ISRAEL'S GUIDANCE.

MR. O'CONOR'S Annual Review of Indian trade for 1886—7, has just been published, and is, as usual, a very interesting statement of progress. When we first acquired the country, and became the paramount authority there, India neither bought nor sold in the markets of the world. Under the fostering care of British-Israel she has become one of the first in rank among buyers and sellers! Her capacity, for instance, to supply the whole of the wheat required to feed the British folk from one end of the country to the other, is undoubted. She is a formidable rival to the United States, whose wheat fields were thought to be sufficient to render the growth of corn in our land unprofitable. India has "infinite corn-producing capacities, and could fill up the gap with ease if the United States were suddenly to cease being a corn-growing land." India, moreover, is quite able to supply other European countries besides our own. She accordingly, in 1886—7, exported five or six per cent. more wheat than she did in 1885—6, because France became her customer—and the Italians have just discovered that the "hard wheats" of India are more to their liking than the Russian corn. These two countries, therefore, imported largely from India last year, and our own importations consequently fell off twenty per cent., though, as we have seen, India exported more than ever.

The Italians, indeed, find that India is so exuberant a corn producer, and that she can sell it so cheap, that it is no longer worth raising as a home product. Like ourselves, our wheat growers are likely to be ruined by the prosperity of India in the direction of this one staple alone! But this is not all. India finds that she can supply Japan and China with Indian cotton-yarn cheaper than the Lancashire manufacturers can do. For India pays less wages to her workmen, and she saves freight rates over 7,000 miles in getting at the Chinese and Japanese markets. She sold therefore last year 80,000,000 lbs. of cotton yarn to those countries, and so cut out Lancashire from the profits! Australia would prove a magnificent market for India, if only the tariffs of the Colonies were lowered. At present India cannot compete there.

Our own country here absorbed only 39 per cent. of the total exports of India last year, because India is busy serving France, Italy, China, and Japan. But, per contra, we retain 80 per cent. of all Indian imports. These imports from our shores into India are steadily increasing, and India is one of our best importing customers. But the fact proves that Indian art-fabrics are being destroyed by our cheaper and inferior machine-made goods, in which aniline dyes are used.

India, in fact, with its 250 to 300 millions of people, emerging into civilized life, and abounding in new wants, is a trading country with capacities for profitable commerce which are practically boundless. The railway system of India astonishes by its "leaps and bounds." During 1886—7, there were added to the system 1,025 miles open for traffic, making in all 13,390 now available. Railway construction in India only commenced in 1853; and now we have vast systems in all parts, built and worked by various companies for profit; other lines, constructed by Government for warlike purposes, being strategic lines like those on the frontiers; and there are besides the famine lines, built to make disastrous famines for the future impossible in the Peninsula. These lines have for the most part been created by a system of Government guarantees of interest, and £180,000,000 of capital have been laid down on the soil on those terms. But in 1886 the large capital in question earned close on six per cent. interest—showing that the traffic is vast, especially in goods—and that the natives of India have taken to the new mode of locomotion, making it pay very satisfactorily.

Such is the epitome of the Indian trade report as we saw it in the Times, of Dec. 3rd—a wonderful result of only a comparatively short period of British administration, showing in every item that God has enabled us to become "a blessing" to India, as He promised Israel should to the world at large (Gen. xii. 2; xxii. 18; Isa. xxvii. 6). "The mighty progress of India is bound up with the railway development of India," and the railway development must advance with 'leaps and bounds,' since in its very infancy it is found to be capable of yielding such results as six per cent., on a paid up-capital of 180 millions sterling of British money.

God has given us the heritage of the heathen in India, and by doing so He has shown all mankind the power of His works (Psa. cxi. 6). On our part He has put into our hearts the desire to benefit and bless the land He has so wonderfully confided to our charge. We have consequently given it peace, and wealth, and commerce, and safety—and at the same time provided for India's instruction in the Gospel of Christ, and in His Holy Word, giving it besides the Sabbath and the ten true laws of God, as far as India can yet receive them. We are, in respect to India, the stewards of the gifts and graces of God, and though doubtless our stewardship is marred by shortcomings many, and national sins not a few, yet, on the whole, India is happier for British-Israelite rule, and the world is the gainer by reason of the beneficence and kindness with which we have treated our mighty Indian Empire; making it now a factor in the civilised life of the whole world, and a blessing to mankind.

To illustrate the facts we have been dealing with we reprint a few lines from the St. James's Gazette of December 13th, which will be found to the point. The testimony in favour of British rule seems genuine, and it certainly agrees with the cry of the Fellahîn in Egypt, Syria, and Palestine, "When are the English coming to rule here as they do in India?" The St. James's Gazette wrote thus of

THE ENGLISH RULE IN INDIA.

A correspondent sends us the following note:—The rule of the British Government in India has lately been subject to much adverse criticism. It is therefore of some interest to hear in what manner it is looked upon by neighbouring peoples. During last summer an English traveller was in Kashgar; and writing from that place he says: "I never was so proud of my country as on this journey. Afghans, Turks, Arabs whom I met have all declaimed loudly in praise of English rule in India: not to me only, but to the surrounding crowd. They say the English are the only people who know how to govern a country. The English make roads, railways, canals, build schools and hospitals, and look after the welfare of the people. Every one does what he likes, and goes where he likes without restriction; oppression is unknown. The Arab pilgrims are the loudest in their praise." Amongst the friends the traveller made at Kashgar were two Afghan gentlemen from Candahar. Nothing could exceed their kindness and attention. They talked freely of the war in Afghanistan, and were enthusiastic in their praises of the generalship displayed by Sir Frederick Roberts. One of them remarked that during the war he had gone to Cabul, "but met Roberts on the way." It subsequently transpired that the Afghan gentleman had been three times engaged against British troops.

Digitized by Google

"THE ENEMY COMING IN LIKE A FLOOD."

A FLOOD, which in its disastrous, appalling consequences, can only be compared to the Deluge itself, has just occurred in China. The scene of the disaster was the basin of the great Hoang Ho, or Yellow River, which, rising in the mountains of Tibet, rushes, half-way towards the sea, in the middle of its course, from the Mongolian Plateau, through hundreds of miles of the loose yellow earth of China, before it enters on the Eastern plain of the continent. Till 1852, this dangerous river emptied itself into the Yellow Sea, but the yellow sand it brings down with it in masses is perpetually settling down in the river-bed, and causing it to silt up. The result is that the river, whose volume is enormous, is always in danger of breaking its banks and seeking for itself a newer and lower bed. That disaster occurred in 1852, and it recurred in October last. On the last occasion the Southern banks gave way above the city of Kai Feng. The river instantly burst its banks, and rushed Southwards instead of Northwards, till it found its old bed debouching into the Yellow Sea, the two mouths—the old and the new—being as far apart as Newcastle from Exeter. But in tearing its way to the sea, Southward of the promontory of the Province of Shangtung, the flood burst over a vast tract of country, densely populated, in a sheet of raging water 10 to 20 feet deep, destroying all before it. It is estimated the loss of life alone was between one and two millions of souls, though one authority in Pekin, an Englishman, declares it must be set down at not less than seven millions! The numbers are diluvian indeed, and so appalling a catastrophe from water has never been approached in history since the days of Noah! "The enemy came in like a flood," but alas! for China, there was no remedy provided! The Spirit of the Lord did not intervene to save life, and consequently millions have perished from the raging floods, and many millions more are homeless, houseless, ruined, with no hope of succour in this world. The Chinese Government have granted large sums for the amelioration of the distress, and are going to spend £500,000 on the restoration of the river banks as soon as the floods shall have ceased, and the operations have become feasible.

Two thoughts arise in one's mind in contemplating the terrible disaster which has just occurred in distant China. The first is that such a terrific cataclysm could never possibly occur to the British people, because they are Israel. To them the promise is certain that they shall dwell in safety, the fountain of "Jacob alone" (Deut. xxxiii. 18, R.V.). In Psa. xci. 5, 6, 7, R.V., we have a Messianic Psalm, applicable also, we believe, to the Lord's people, where the promise to them is: "Thou shall not be afraid for the destruction that wasteth at noonday. A thousand shall fall at thy side, and ten thousand at thy right hand; but it shall not come nigh thee." In Ezek. xxxix. 6 we have the inhabitants of the isles described as "them that dwell securely in the isles." This is "the Appointed Place" selected by the Lord Himself as Israel's domicile of safety, where He has engaged to plant them as a place of their own, to be moved no more. The isles are so small besides, and so covered with hills, that such a catastrophe as that China has now experienced is impossible.

The second thought that occurs to us in reference to the Chinese flood is, that our Lord the God of Israel likens the spiritual condition of His people, before He comes, to a country visited by a flood; and the remedy He provides for His people's recovery is His own appearing. In Isa. lix. 19, R.V., we have two readings of this passage, that in the margin being in accord with the Authorised Version, thus: "When the adversary shall come in like a flood, the Spirit of the Lord shall lift up a standard against him." The Revised Version in the text reads: "For he shall come as a rushing stream, which the breath of the Lord driveth." In either case the idea of a roaring, raging flood like that of the Hoang Ho in China, is suggested, and the remedy for the spiritual inroad of evil we are to expect in Israel's body politic, in Church and State as well, is the Spirit of the Lord Jehovah-Jesus, driving the enemy before Him in order to expel him. The terrors of the Chinese flood, carrying before it millions of helpless, drowning creatures, suggests a time of anguish coming upon Israel's Church and people, which it would be dreadful to contemplate and expect, unless we had the promised Deliverer, even the Spirit of the Lord, to look for, to help us, nationally. For after this enemy's last effort to destroy the Lord's chosen ones, even British-Israel, shall have been frustrated, we have the glorious promise which Isa. lix. 20—26 discloses: "A Redeemer shall come to Zion, and unto them that turn from transgression in Jacob, saith the Lord. And as for Me, this is My covenant with them, saith the Lord, My spirit that is upon thee, and My words which I have put in thy mouth, shall not depart out of thy mouth, nor out of the mouth of thy seed, nor out of the mouth of thy seed's seed, saith the Lord, from henceforth, for ever and ever. Arise, shine; for thy light is come, and the glory of the Lord is risen upon thee!" These precious promises suffice. They are our own national property, being Israel; and they furnish a good answer to those who ask, "What good is there in this thing?" and lead, besides, to our proper Israelite attitude of praise to the Lord our God for all His unmerited mercies to our most ungrateful race!

Correspondence.

THE REVISED VERSION AS BEARING ON THE IDENTITY.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—I do not know if any of your contributors have noticed the important change of translation which the revisers have made in Isa. ix. 1, where for "Nevertheless the dimness shall not be such as was in her vexation, when at first He lightly afflicted the land of Zebulun and the land of Naphtali, and afterward did more grievously afflict her by the way of the sea, beyond Jordan, in Galilee of the nations;" they have substituted the following:—"But there shall be no gloom for her that was in anguish. In the former time He brought into contempt the land of Zebulun, and the land of Naphtali, but in the latter time hath He made it glorious by the way of the sea, beyond Jordan, Galilee of the nations. The people that walked in darkness have seen a great light," &c.

It seems almost impossible that any person can read this chapter so revised in connection with chap. viii. 21, 22, and fail to perceive that Samaria is contrasted with Judæa, and that the coming of Christ is predicted as a glory and blessing to Israel, but the occasion of gloom and anguish to Judah.

Yours very truly,
J. M. GRANT, M.D.,
Surgeon-General.

Cheltenham, Jan. 17.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—The "forbearance and long-suffering" of our Government, and the orderly portion of our people, of late, have been characterised as at once remarkable and Christian, evidencing our national Identity with, I will not say ISRAEL, but the nation to which Christ promised the kingdom of God "when it should be taken from the Jews"!—a nation which was to bring forth the fruits thereof, or "the fruits of the Spirit." There is not a nation under heaven besides ourselves (as the press admits) which would have been so tolerant, and borne with the lawless followers of misguided men; sparing, with the utmost forbearance, the lawless and defiant, lest any really in want, and ill-advised, should suffer with the openly bad and wicked disturbers of the peace. Surely these, and other such works, mark us out as the kingdom and nation which "serves God," and which will not be destroyed, or her Church which was given her of God. And may He defend her right!

Yours truly,
C. J. HADFIELD.

Digitized by Google

NOTICES.

All communications intended for the Editor, to be addressed: "Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Clifton, Bristol.

SUBSCRIPTIONS. £ s. d.

Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free 0 7 6
Two Copies (including Double Numbers) 0 13 6
Three Copies " " " 1 0 4
Four Copies " " " 1 5 6
Six Copies " " " 1 16 4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-grand, London, to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C., or F. W. PARRY & Co., 29, Paternoster-row, London.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

Contents Bills and Show Cards may be obtained on application to the Publishers.

Advertisements should be sent to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

Prepaid Advertisements are inserted at the rate of thirty words for 1s. 4d.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

A LECTURE will be Delivered in the ASSOCIATION ROOMS, 14, King William-street, Charing Cross, W.C., on THURSDAY AFTERNOON NEXT, February 16, 1888, at 3.30 o'clock, by Mr. John S. Lowe. Subject: "The Holy Land" (Part 2). Admission free. Strangers will be made welcome.

JAMES BILLINGTON, Sec.

WORKS BY JAMES KEITH.

Price 9d., by post 10d.

THE EASTERN QUESTION OF TO-DAY.

As unfolded by the Prophet Isaiah, in a Panoramic View of the Great Woes to befall the Earth prior to the Second Advent of Christ Jesus, beginning with Great Britain.

"See, I have this day set thee over the nations and over the kingdoms, to root out, and to pull down, and to destroy, and to throw down, to build, and to plant" (Jer. i. 10).

Price 1s., post free.

THE IMPENDING JUDGMENT of GREAT BRITAIN.

An Exposition of Chapter xxviii. of the Book of the Prophet Isaiah.

"And the Lord answered me and said, Write the vision, and make it plain upon tables, that he may run that readeth it" (Hab. ii. 2).

Price 4d., by post 5d.

LIGHT SHED BY THE GREAT PYRAMID of EGYPT

On the Last Days of this Dispensation, from A.D. 1814 to A.D. 1922.

Professor Piazzi Smyth says:—"I have read through every word of your Pamphlet, 'Light Shed by the Great Pyramid of Egypt.' I am both charmed and instructed by it. In all your allusions to the architecture, the measures, or the history of the Great Pyramid, you are to the extent of my knowledge, perfectly correct."

London: Robert Banks and Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; or of the Author, Dingwall, N.B.

Ready at Advent. Price 6d., by post 6½d.

Old Dogmas From New Aspects.

By Vox Feminæ Auriculæ Hominis.

Contents: 1. The Apostolic Succession. 2. The Apostle Peter. 3. The Successor of Judas Iscariot. 4. The Athanasian Creed. 5. The Trinity. 6. Eternal Punishment. 7. The Great Tribulation. 8. The Great White Throne. 9. The Atonement of Jesus Christ.

H. E. Hill, 60, Norvill-road, Stoke-Newington, London N.

JEHOVAH TRIUMPHANT. The New and Complete Theology and Electric Light of the Bible, containing the History of British-Israel, Compiled from the Sacred Scriptures. Cloth gilt, price 10s. 6d., post free for Postal Order or Cheque.

THE GEOGRAPHY OF THE GATES. By PHILO-ISRAEL. With Map, and six full page, and one double-page, Illustrations, printed on plate paper. 208 pages, in handsome cloth, gilt. Price 3s. 6d.; post free.

THE WORD: THE WORLD: THE BRANCH. By J. LEYLAND FIELDEN, Esq. Price 12s., post free.

EPHRAIM-ENGLAND. The Nineteenth Century Revelation of the Fruits of History. By Rev. R. DOUGLAS, Vicar of Kidsgrove. Cloth gilt, lettered, 4s., gilt edges 5s., free by post.

FIFTY REASONS WHY THE ANGLO-SAXONS ARE ISRAELITES of the Lost Tribes of the House of Israel. By Rev. W. H. POOLE, D.D. Price 6d., post free 7d.

BIBLE LESSONS AND REFLECTIONS. By the late ROBERT GAIRDNER, of Kilmarnock, N.B. Price 2s. 6d., by post 2s. 9d.; cheap edition, limp cloth, 1s., by post, 1s. 2d.

London: Robert Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

MR. ED. HINE is expected to return from his lecturing tour in America about February. Friends wishing to arrange for him to lecture can communicate with Isaac Loveland, Shoreham, near Sevenoaks, Kent, at present fixing no dates. Mr. Hine's publications have had a large circulation, and can be obtained of F. W. Parry & Co, 29, Paternoster Row, London, E.C.

Forty-Seven Identifications, 6d., post free 7d.

Cui Bono? 6d., post free, 7d.

Lost Israel Found, 3s. 6d., post free, 3s. 9d.

Also The Nation Warned by the Scripture Teachings of the Great Pyramid, 6d., post, 7d.

Price 6d., post free 7d.

"THE TEN TRIBES."

Where, and in What Condition are the Ten Tribes at the Present Time; and What will be Their Place in the Millennium?

A PAPER read before "The Prophecy Investigation Society" on April 9. 1887,

By ALDER SMITH, M.B., F.R.C.S.

THE LANCET says,—"The paper is worthy of perusal by all who take an interest in ethnological questions as connected with the historical and prophetical portions of holy writ."

LONDON:
R. BANKS & SON, RACQUET-COURT, FLEET-ST

Price 2s. 6d., Cheap Edition, 1/-

BIBLE LESSONS AND REFLECTIONS.

By ROBERT GAIRDNER, of Kilmarnock, N.B.

"Mr. Gairdner has given us in his book a series of Bible lessons, with his own reflections added thereto, and though he has been very cautious in the latter, and has not committed himself too broadly, he has plainly let it be seen that he is an Anglo-Israelite by conviction, and that the Scriptures which he quotes at length and extensively throughout his book, are meant to teach Our Identity and God's faithfulness, from first to last, to His promises to Abraham and His seed for ever."—Banner of Israel.

ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-st.

THE MESSENGER, 1888.

NOTICE.—In the January number of this Magazine is commenced

A NEW AND IMPORTANT WORK

bearing on the Identity of the British People with Lost Israel, and entitled

"RUSSIA JAPHET,"

Treating of the History, Geography, and Destiny of the Peoples subject to the Czar.

By "OXONIAN,"

Author of "Israel's Wanderings," &c.

Price 6d., post free 7d.

London: F. W. Parry & Co., 29, Paternoster-row.

Fifteenth Thousand.

BY REV. HENRY ROE

Israel's World. Origin and Destiny of British Race, Colonies, and Empire. 2d., post free 2½d. Fifty post free from H. Roe for 4s. 9d

Philo-Israel says: "I am perfectly delighted with your pamphlet."

C. E. Priestly, Esq., says: "For its size I never read a better work. I have given away two lots of fifty each, and enclose money for fifty more. I have sent it to clergymen, bishops, and archbishops."

Rev. Thomas Lowe says: "What the works of Mr. Hine failed to do in my enlightenment, 'Israel's World' has accomplished. I now read the Scriptures in a new and vivid light."

Going to Africa. 1s., post free 1s. 1d.

Fernando Po Mission. 1s., post free 1s. 1d.

West African Scenes. 2s., post free 2s. 2d.

Consecration. 2d., post free 2½d.

50 post free from H. Roe for 4s. 9d.

Robert Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.; and Rev. H. Roe, Dawley, Salop.

PIANOFORTES, Harmoniums, American Organs. Why buy at shops inferior made instruments, and pay large profits, when you can buy direct from the Maker High-class Instruments, and save 50 per cent. by so doing? Full value allowed for old Instruments in exchange as part payment. Write for Price Lists and Testimonials to G. LINSTEAD, 2, Osney Crescent, Camden Road, London. Established 1874.

HUMAN LIFE.—FIFTY YEARS' Record of Facts, Principles, and Discoveries (just published, complete) Relating to the Improvement and Preservation of Human Life on Earth. Origin and true treatment of diseases. A series of articles by DR. SAMUEL BIRLEY, M.D., Ph.D. Book form, 50 pages. SENT FREE to every applicant by the publishers, GORDON B. MURRAY & CO., 50, Theobald's-road, Holborn, E.C. Write to-day.

WORKS BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

The Geography of the Gates. With Map and six full page, and one double-page, Illustrations, printed on plate paper. 208 pages, in handsome cloth, gilt. Price 3s. 6d., post free 3s. 10d.

The History of the House of Israel. How They Were Lost and How They Were Found. Told for the children. Price 6d., cloth 1s.; post free 7d. and 1s. 1d. Fifth edition.

A Resume of the Scriptural Argument, Proving the Identity of the British Race with the Lost Ten Tribes. Price 1d.; 6s. per hundred, postage 6d.

Our Identity: What it is Not; What it is: and Our Obligations To-day in Respect to it Being a Lecture recently delivered in London by Philo-Israel, and published by special request. Price 2d., a reduction for quantities.

Our Identity with the House of Israel. Price 4d., Reprinted from "Clifton Chronicle Letters"

An Elementary Digest or Sketch of the Chief Facts and Teachings of the Great Pyramid of Egypt. Adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific 56 pages, Illustrated with Diagrams, price 4d., post free 5d. 10th Thousand.

Are the English People the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel? An Inquiry Establishing the Identity of the British Nation with the Lost Ten Tribes. 4d.

Robert Banks & Son, Racquet Court, Fleet Street, E.C.

THE ANNUAL VOLUME

OF THE

BANNER OF ISRAEL

IS NOW READY.

Price, in Handsome Blue Cloth, Gilt, 8s.,
Post Free for Postal Order.

Forms a handsome present. Useful for presentation to Working Men's Institutes, Libraries, etc., etc.

Robert Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

LUNG SAVE YOUR LIVES BY TAKING TONIC

OWBRIDGE'S LUNG TONIC

THE MIGHTY HEALER.

It has a power over disease hitherto unknown in Medicine.

Are you at all Weak-chested or inclined to be Consumptive, with just a touch of Cough now and then?

"Try this Wonderful Medicine." The Cough and Weakness will disappear as if by magic, and you will feel a strength and power you never had before.

HAVE YOU A COUGH?
A DOSE WILL RELIEVE IT!
HAVE YOU A COLD?
A DOSE AT BEDTIME WILL REMOVE IT.

Bronchitis & Asthma it relieves instantly

The Spasms of Coughing so dreadful in Whooping Cough become less with each dose of the medicine.

Prepared by W. T. OWBRIDGE, Chemist, Hull

Sold in Bottles 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d. and 11s. by all Chemists and Patent Medicine Vendors. Wholesale all London and Provincial Houses.

TORPID LIVER,

CONSTIPATION AND INDIGESTION.

Mrs. M. ANDERSON, Mortimer Street, Herne Bay, Kent, writes:—"I was suffering from a torpid, inactive liver, accompanied by constipation and indigestion. After wearing Harness' Electropathic Belt I am much better in every way; the functions are regular, my appetite has improved, and the wretched, depressed feeling I used constantly to have has completely passed away."

HARNESS'
ELECTROPATHIC BELT,

Price 21/-, post-free. When ordering send size of waist (next skin). Thousands of Testimonials. Pamphlet and Advice free. Sufferers from any disorder of the Nerves, Stomach, Liver, and Kidneys, should call to-day, if possible, or write at once to

Mr. C. H. HARNESS, Consulting Electrician, The MEDICAL BATTERY COMPANY, Limited (only address),

52, OXFORD STREET, LONDON, W.
(Corner of Bathbone Place.)

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. F. W. PARRY (late GUEST & Co.), 29 PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, FEB. 15, 1888. [All rights reserved.]

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."

(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. XII., No. 582. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 22, 1888. [PRICE ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
Preparations for the Coming War-woe, and "Poor" Germany's Sacrifices to Avoid It	77
What Men are Thinking and Saying	78
Why the Gospel Must now be Offered to the Jews	79
Israel's Redemption	80
Our New Zealand Advocate	81
Jacob, the Supplanter	82
The Argument in a Nutshell	83

PREPARATIONS FOR THE COMING WAR-WOE; AND "POOR" GERMANY'S SACRIFICES TO AVOID IT.

IF there are not wars yet, there are "rumours of wars" in abundance, and men's hearts on the continent are "failing them (fainting or expiring) for fear, and for expectation of the things which are coming on the world," or inhabited earth (Matt. xxiv. 6, R.V.; Luke xxi. 26, R.V.). But what is causing all this disturbance? and who is responsible for this terrible scare? Russian Gog is at the bottom of it all! She means to have Constantinople, and to acquire that spot Bulgaria must first be secured. To obtain a grasp of Bulgaria the Czar must deal with the Austro-Hungarian army, which, with that of the German Empire, withstands the autocrat! Consequently the Russian eagles are massing on the frontiers of Austro-Hungary in such enormous numbers that Austria has had to put her house in order, and make counter preparations for defence. Germany, not to be behind, has put before her Parliament a proposal which the Times correspondent declares will be passed by a large majority, to make an addition to the already vast German army, of 700,000 men, to be called out as soon as war is declared. It has been stated, too, by the responsible statesmen of "poor Germany," that the sum the nation must pay for this monstrous addition to its forces will not be less than £14,000,000! Now when it is remembered that the mere addition to the German army about to be proposed is itself three times as large as the whole of the British army put together, and that the cost of this addition is to be about what we British pay for our military forces, it will be seen how vast, how unparalleled, the preparations are which the continental nations are making for the Great Earthquake War-woe which evidently is about to engulf them all! "It must be confessed," writes a provincial journalist, on the general aspect of affairs, under date January 28, 1888, "that this prospect of a European war, which some of the experts say is to come in the spring, affects us (British) but little! That sure barometer in these matters, the Stock Exchange, has scarcely shown a flutter to-day, and there seems to be a sort of general impression that Russia, Austria, and Germany may fight it out if they like; for ourselves, we can be nothing but spectators." Here are sentiments repeated, which the BANNER has very often enunciated, and we hope our readers feel that, if under the awful circumstances which induce "poor Germany," who can ill afford it, to tax itself £14,000,000 in addition in order to keep a reinforcement of 700,000 men in the field, we must be in an enviable position; "living," in short, like Israel (because we are Israel), "confidently and carelessly in the isles," not afraid of invasion, not afraid of war, because "the Lord hath ordained peace for us," and prescribed our position and conduct in the coming dreadful conflagration (Isa. xxvi. 12, 20, 21, R.V.).

We have used the expression, "poor Germany," twice already, and we have in doing so only quoted the Times correspondent's words used in his report to that paper on January 27. He said:—

> Next to Turkey, there is perhaps none of the Great Powers that can afford so ill to spend an extra sum of £14,000,000 on the improvement of its defensive armour as poor Germany; and yet this is what Germany is about to do, with a cheerfulness which springs from her very seriousness of heart. Nor would the War Minister to-day, in answer to the inquisitive Dr. Windthorst, pledge his word, his personal word at least, that this was the last which the Reichstag was likely to hear of special outlay on the army. The 280,000,000m. now demanded were required, he said, for arming, equipping, and providing with barracks, artillery, munitions, ambulance service, &c., the 700,000 combatants, or more, whom the new Army Reorganization Bill would add to the fighting force of the Empire. In time of peace this addition would exist on paper only, and cost little or nothing; but during war it would become flesh and blood.

Poor Germany! Then Germany cannot be Israel! but must be a non-Israelite Gentile nation! For God gave Israel "the power to get wealth," which Germany so conspicuously lacks, that men are fain to call her "poor Germany." God "ordains peace" for Israel at the present crisis, but Germany, we see, being poor as well as needy, is exposed to so terrific a danger from the ambition of her reckless neighbours, that she is forced to add over half a million of men to her first line of defence, and to spend a huge sum that even we could not bear without irritation, to complete what she imagines will be her defence.

Thus, by two distinct and unmistakeable signs, Germany confesses before the world that she is not what the Rev. R.

Digitized by Google

Douglas says she is, namely, a part of the Lord's chosen ones, Ten-Tribed Ephraim-Israel.

The Times has some solemn words on the subject of "Germany's splendid, almost sublime, effort for the maintenance of peace," and these we must ask our readers to peruse. They came from the Berlin correspondent, Jan. 26, who said:—

Not a little side-light was thrown on the European situation in to-day's sitting of the Select Committee now considering in detail the new Army Bill, which, when passed, as it is quite sure to be, will add about 700,000 men (not merely half a million, as at first calculated) to the fighting strength of the Empire in time of war. To-day, before the Committee began the second reading of the measure, the War Minister, General Bronsart von Schellendorff, volunteered the statement that the initial cost of the change (apart from the annual expense of maintaining it) would be no less than about 280,000,000m., or £14,000,000. This is an enormous sum, and if the demand had been sprung upon the nation suddenly it would have taken away everybody's breath. But the country was led up gradually to this stupefying financial climax, first by vague hints at the likely magnitude of the sacrifice to be imposed upon it, and then by the conjectural mention of positive figures, beginning with 100,000,000m. and ending now with nearly thrice that huge amount. This sum is to be provided for by a separate Money Bill (not yet before the Reichstag), and will in all probability be raised by a 3½ per cent. Imperial loan.

There is not the slightest doubt that, immense as is the sacrifice, the Reichstag will vote the money by a large majority, of which the backbone will consist of the united Conservatives and National Liberals, who last winter renewed the Septennate, and increased the peace establishment of the army by 50,000 men.

So far the Times. It is clear from all this that the "hearts of men abroad are fainting for fear and for expectation of the things coming on the world." They are making desperate efforts to avoid them by saving the German and Austrian Empires from a disastrous war, and showing such a front to Russia and to France that they may deter them from attempting to bring on the universal conflict "through the exercise of a reckless or revengeful spirit."

Meanwhile we British pursue our own unruffled way! We are not troubled by wars or rumours of wars, we fear nothing for Russian or French scares, but we "live carelessly and confidently in our isles," certain that no one will hurt us in them; and leisurely proceeding to fortify our distant Gates, as if confident that even there, no one could dare to insult or molest us, because we "dwell alone," separated from the other nations by the fact that the Lord God of Israel is our Guardian and Defence, our Saviour, Redeemer, and national Protector. To Him be all the praise!

Since the above was written, Germany and Austria have published their secret treaty of offence and defence, aimed against Russia and France. It remains to be seen what the effect of that decided step will be. It is quite possible that it may precipitate the Great Earthquake War-Woe, which so weighs upon all our spirits.

WHAT MEN ARE THINKING AND SAYING.

An Irish Churchman says:—"Our Irish Church prospects are anything but bright here. Rome is deep and far-seeing. As Disestablishment did not overthrow the Irish Church, she stirred up the attack upon the landed interest—the landowners being our main supporters. They are now unable to pay as heretofore. Our incomes will be greatly reduced next year. This to some men, indeed to the greater number, will be a great blow! The knowledge that the Empire, and this little part of it, is under Israel's covenant, and that, therefore, our God will surely not permit us to fall under Rome's foreign rule and tyranny, is to me the cause of peace and hope."

An Englishman writes:—"On the continent they try and proclaim peace. They still continue arming in feverish haste, 'men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things that are coming on the earth.'"

Do our opponents ever think of these things? They have but to cast their eyes about them, and examine the signs of the times! Abroad, all is hurry and alarm, and earnestly watching where the blow will first be struck. Here all is peace, and, alas! indifference. Never were we less prepared for war than we are at this moment! A splendid scheme of mobilisation is being prepared "on paper," and there it will end. Each regiment of militia and volunteers will be told where they are to assemble in the event of an invasion; but not a gun or horse is added to the strength! The home ports are left defenceless. The Gates, our coaling stations, are still unarmed! Even Gibraltar's guns are mostly of the old smooth-bore type, perfectly useless in the event of war. Yet not a voice is raised in protest; not a word of alarm is heard in our island home! Let those who scoff at our belief in the truth and faithfulness of our God answer the question, "How is this?" if they can!

Two subjects on which much is being written and said are, our increase of population in these Israelitish isles of the West, and emigration. Regarding these two subjects, The Financial News has some words of wisdom, which it will be well if we quote for the information of our readers. It wrote thus on December 22, 1887:—

Whilst, however, attention is thus directed to the importance of preserving life, the no less vital considerations which attend a redundancy of the population apparently fail of attracting that notice which the subject demands. Every year we are treated to exhaustive percentages of pauperism, crime, and death; but with a daily addition of about a thousand on the average to the entire population of our country it is thought unnecessary to tabulate the latter details more often than once in ten years. Thus, we are aware that between 1801 and 1881 the inhabitants of the United Kingdom were more than doubled, being increased from 16,345,000 to 35,241,000, and it is probable that at present they are not far short of 37,400,000. These figures have in recent years been affected in opposite directions by the exodus of Irish and by the influx of the foreign element, which now engages so much attention. Including the congested centres of London and other large towns, each acre of the United Kingdom which in 1801 held 0·21 of inhabitants now contains the proportion of 0·48, whilst in the same time London has increased its population to the acre from 75 to 87—a proportion, of course, much exceeded if regard be had to the parks and other vacant spaces. There is unfortunately no need to insist upon this point, as we are all too well acquainted with the fact of the terrible overcrowding that is the prevalent feature of metropolitan life, with all the attendant evils of excessive competition for the means of existence, emphasised by pauperisation and disease, and further complicated by immigrants, not only from the agricultural districts, but from abroad. Under these circumstances, it might be expected that a country which possesses a large number of colonies, favoured by healthy climate, fertile soil, prosperous trade, and beneficent rule, would experience no difficulty in dealing with its redundant or suffering population. The State has, indeed, done much, and private benevolence something, in facilitating and encouraging emigration; but in the last 25 years the number of emigrants—even including the United States, whither more than 60 per cent. of the number were bound in 1885—barely averaged 200,000 in a year, or not much more than half the annual increase of population. This circumstance, viewed in connection with the growing difficulty of supporting existence under the adverse conditions now prevalent amongst us, is really surprising, and quite as much of an anomaly as any one of those imposed upon us by imperfect government.

The hand of God, we think, is clearly apparent in all that is taking place in reference to these two subjects—viz., our over-population and the emigration of our surplus people to our own colonies. The blessing of God "to Abraham and his seed for ever," included an abnormal increase of Israel's numbers, which was to be like the astounding multitudes of "the stars of heaven and the sands of the sea-shore." The provision for the absorption of these vast numbers, is made by the gift of God to our race, of many rich and splendid colonies at the ends of the earth, whither some hundreds of thousands of our race depart every year, and may be expected to go in yet vastly increasing bodies, as the pressure at home becomes more and more acute. We complain of the suffering which meanwhile is felt by our masses. But without these sufferings the masses would never emigrate, and the Government would never devise plans by which they might relieve starvation in their too strait home to find plenty in the Colonial Empire that God has given us. That the thing will be done whether we are willing or not is clear from the Word of God. The prophecy of Isa. xxvi. 15, R.V., where the two subjects in question are dealt with, gives assurance to us all that the Lord has the matter in hand, and will dispose of it. There it is stated: "Thou hast increased the nation, O Jehovah; Thou hast increased the nation. Thou art glorified. Thou hast enlarged all the borders of the land"—or, as the margin has it:—"Thou hadst removed it far unto the ends of the earth." The same great truth appears in Zech. x. 9, R.V., where God Himself declares He will "sow" Joseph, or Ephraim, among the peoples, and "they shall remember Him in far countries, and they shall live with their children, and shall return."

Digitized by Google

The thing, then, is one which God Himself means to carry out. Emigration, as far as it concerns Israel and her sons and daughters, is a matter whereby the Lord Jehovah means to be glorified. Their emigration is under His direction and control, and the expansion of the race what He Himself directs. We need, then, give way to no pessimist or mournful reflections! The Financial News may rest satisfied that though our population is growing faster than our emigration just at the present hour, God is working in the matter, and that when He opens the door wide He will make our action easy and prosperous. What is lacking among our public writers and statesmen, is patience. They cannot wait the Lord's time in anything. If the emigration is only 200,000 a year or under, and the increase of population about 365,000, men are discontented, and want an emigration rate in excess of the increasing one to relieve the population. But why does it not occur to these persons that God may have a purpose in all this? and that He who provides for the emigration of about 1,000 British souls every day, as is, we believe, the case now, can double that rate whenever He shall see fit? It is the same with British evangelization of the heathen. Because at this hour the amount spent by Great Britain is barely one million and a quarter sterling, the souls of our godly ones is greatly exercised; for they argue that if we save 230 millions a year as a nation, and spend 125 millions on our liquors alone, it is shameful to give God only one and a quarter million, and so starve the cause of Foreign Missions! But these malcontents never reflect that God owns all the silver and the gold we have, and will call for it when and how He pleases. That He does not require the vast sums our advocates desire to see spent is evident from the fact, that the Gospel is to be preached during the present dispensation not in order to convert the nations en masse, but that the good news "of the kingdom" may be made known for a witness or a testimony, in the whole "inhabited earth" unto all the nations, and "then shall the end come" (Matt. xxiv. 14, R.V.). Our objecting friends do not approve of these dilatory proceedings as described in the Scriptures. They want the Gospel to be preached in all the world unto all nations, so as to convert them all at once, but not at all "for a witness" or "for a testimony unto all the nations." They are impatient of the delay which such slow operations imply, and would hasten the Lord God Almighty's plans! In vain! His will and His purposes will be carried out, come what may; and no doubt it is by His wise determinations that Israel, instead of spending one hundred millions or so on Foreign Missions per annum, is spending only one and a half million, in order to do a work which is commensurate with the designs and objects of the Lord of missions. To Him be all the glory; and may we, His people, be willing in the day of His power, offering ourselves and our substance willingly to the Lord when He graciously calls for our puny help! (Psa. cx. 3, R.V.).

WHY THE GOSPEL MUST NOW BE OFFERED TO THE JEWS.

SURGEON-GENERAL J. M. GRANT, on perusing our remarks in reply to Mr. Geo. Dimbleby, of Hull, in reference to the need there is that the Gospel should be offered during the present dispensation to the Jews (p. 39, No. 578), has sent us an argument in support of our contention which we find to be quite unanswerable, and therefore give it all the publicity we can. The Gospel, he remarks, was offered to the Jews first, after the Crucifixion, by St. Peter. His audience on the day of Pentecost were all Jews (Acts ii. 5). When the Jews, as such, had refused to hear St. Paul, then, but not before, he turned to the Gentiles, who were the "Lo-Ammi" Israelites of the Ten-Tribed Dispersion. In Acts xiii. 46, the apostle announced the fact. "Seeing," he said to the Jews, "you put the word of God from you, and judge yourselves unworthy of everlasting life, lo, we turn to the Gentiles." "They will hear it," he said, in Rome, to the Jewish opponents there. The facts of history show that, saving the Anglo-Saxon race (the British), no other race, as a race, have listened to the preached word or accepted the salvation of God as offered at Calvary.

Now St. Paul's teaching to those self-same Gentiles, in Rom. xi. 30, 31, R.V., was this. That "they had obtained mercy through the disobedience of the Jews in order that, by the mercy shown to them, the Jews might in turn now obtain mercy." The time thus specified by "now" is the Christian Dispensation, when St. Paul wrote; and this scripture thus plainly teaches that Israel was to become the instrument employed to bring the Jews as a people to Christ; while for the present her commission is to go into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature, which certainly includes the Jews (Matt. xxiv. 14, R.V.; Mark xvi. 15, R.V.).

So far our friend. His view of the instrumentality to be employed for the restoration of Judah to the Lord Jehovah, agrees accurately with the prophetic functions described as Israel's, in the restoration of Judah to His favour. In Isa. xviii. 1, 7, R.V., also in Zeph. iii. 9, 10, R.V., we have the prediction that the daughter of the Lord's dispersed, who live beyond the Rivers of Cush, or Ethiopia, God's suppliants (therefore Christians), shall bring to Him to Mount Zion, "to the place of the name of the Lord of Hosts, the present of a people terrible from their beginning onward," being a people of the same character and description. The conversion of Judah by the instrumentality of Christian Israel seems here clearly pictured; and the work of the latter during this period of preparation is to "blossom and bud and fill the face of the world with fruit," neglecting no race benighted; least of all their brethren, destined soon, by their help and God's blessing, to acknowledge Jesus as their Redeemer, Saviour and God, according to the words of His sworn covenants contained in Jer. xxxi. 31—34, and Heb. viii. 8—12.

Here, then, is a fresh answer to Mr. Dimbleby's allegation that Judah at present is not in need of the Christian consolation, and that the blood of the New Testament is not required now to make them clean! So far from that, it is Israel's duty to preach the Gospel to the Jews to-day as to a portion of "the creation of the Lord," in preparation for the coming yet greater event, when, by the help of their brethren of Ephraim-Israel, they shall be brought as a "present to the Lord in Mount Zion and Jerusalem," converts to Christ, penitents washed by the blood, deeply mourning and bewailing their past deafness, and blindness to the Gospel message, which having continually heard, according to the Lord's command, they as constantly have been rejecting, to their grievous loss and misery.

The point of the whole matter is this: that British Christians, being Israel, will have yet to bring the Jews to the knowledge of their Lord as His honoured instruments, and that, pending that glorious consummation, they cannot, must not, dare not neglect in season and out of season to preach the Gospel to them, leaving all results with Him who prayed for the Jews even on His Cross, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do!" (Luke xxiii. 34, R.V.).

Digitized by Google

Finally we learn from Acts xiii. 42, 43, and generally throughout the record of their ministry, that Barnabas and Paul were most earnest in their exhortations to the Jews, and we must have no scruple about following their examples, feeling assured that "the hardness of heart" and "blindness" which unhappily are not confined to Judah, are, in all cases, self-imposed, and not the work of Him who "would have all men to be saved, and to come to the knowledge of the Truth" (1Tim. ii. 4).

In short, the Lord Jesus Christ, our Example, came to the Jews, and taught them the way of salvation. St. Paul, Barnabas, and the apostles generally, followed His example. The Church of Christ having long neglected the duty, has for the last eighty years at least arisen to its responsibilities. We cannot now go back or fail to compassionate the miseries of Judah. We must give her the knowledge of Christ, since we know from Acts iv. 12, R.V., that "there is none other name under Heaven that is given among men, whereby we must be saved," but His! In none other is there salvation! The results are, however, His.

ISRAEL'S REDEMPTION.

THE Lord Jesus Christ is made of God to Israel, not only wisdom, but righteousness, sanctification, and redemption; these belong to the individual believer in Christ, and also to churches in Christ, as well as to Israel, Christian Israel, in a very special degree. The redemption which is found for all these in Christ includes all the rest of the splendid gifts described in 1 Cor. i. 30. Wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification, are all found in the redemption Christ wrought for Israel at Calvary. The nation or individual needing redemption is in slavery, in bondage and corruption, described in Scripture as "the bondage of corruption" (Rom.viii. 21,) and needs a powerful deliverer, because utterly unable to deliver itself. The idea of redemption according to the ordinary modern pulpit teaching is connected with the salvation of the lost sinner who being in Christ finds Him made of God to him redemption. This is true. There is redemption in Him for all sinners saved by grace. For all such, by the very act of faith which brings salvation, there is effected also union with Israel. Through Israel comes redemption and the other blessings and privileges of God's chosen people. This redemption, which is Israel's also, is through the precious blood of Jesus, and confers forgiveness of sins (Colos. i. 14; Eph. i. 7). The pardoned sinner as well as the forgiven, chosen nation, are equally redeemed by the precious blood; but in order of time Israel's redemption was first because of the sonship, and because in sacred things as well as in earthly "the children must first be filled" (Mark vii. 27). This priority of the chosen nation in the benefits and blessings of redemption through the blood is strangely ignored by the preachers of the day. And yet the Scriptures are full of the redemption of Israel, and not a word is said in the Scriptures of the redemption of any nation, quâ nation, but Israel. Thus in Isa. xli. 14, Jehovah is described as Israel's Redeemer, "the Holy One of Israel." In Isa. xliii. 1, Jacob and Israel are told that the Lord Jehovah had redeemed them. "The Creator of Israel," their King, their Holy One (v. 15), is He who in Isa. xliv. 6, describes Himself as "Jehovah the King of Israel, their Redeemer, the Lord of Hosts." In Isa. lxiii. 16, outcast Lo-Ammi Israel, repudiated by Abraham and Judah-Israel, still cries to Jehovah as their Redeemer whose "name is from everlasting." In Isa. liv. 5, R.V., the selection of Israel by the Lord to be His spouse and redeemed one is very remarkable. The Lord speaks and says, "For thy Maker is thine Husband. The Lord of Hosts is His name! And the Holy One of Israel is thy Redeemer, the God of the whole earth shall He be called." That these redeemed ones are the Hebrews and not Gentile believers of all nations appears from Isa. li. 11, where the redeemed of the Lord are described as "returning and coming with singing unto Zion." In Isa. lix. 20, there is the promise of the Redeemer coming to Zion, and unto them that turn from transgression in Jacob, saith the Lord. In the New Testament there is the same reference to Israel as the objects of redemption, and the same silence as to all alien nations, as nations. In Luke i. 68, R.V., the Lord God of Israel is blessed by Zacharias because He had in Jesus' person, "visited and wrought redemption for His people." In Luke xxiv. 21, R.V., we have the disciples on the road to Emmaus saying to the Lord, "We hoped that it was He which should redeem Israel." "The redemption of the body" was the future anticipation of St. Paul as an Israelite addressing Israelites at Rome, and telling them that the "creation with earnest expectation," "waiteth for the revealing of the sons of God," that is, of Ten-Tribed Israel. (Comp. Hos. i. 10, and Rom. viii. 19). In Rev. v. 9, 10, R.V., we have the Israelitish four beasts and twenty-four elders, "singing the new song" of Moses and the Lamb, saying, regarding the latter, as to a Lamb slain, "Thou didst purchase unto God by Thy blood men of every tribe, and tongue, and people, and nation, and madest them to be unto our God a kingdom and priests, and they reign upon the earth." These last must be the people of Israel, for to them as to the people of the saints of the Most High the Lord promised, in Dan. vii. 27, the kingdom and the dominion under the whole heaven as their inheritance, the Lord Jesus Christ being their glorious King.

The Bible, in short, teems with intimations that God the Lord is the Redeemer of His people Israel and Judah, His inheritance (Psa. lxxiv. 2, &c). It seems, then, improper and misleading, when dealing with the great subject of the redemption in Christ wrought for His people at Calvary, to limit its operation to believers only, and not to allude, as one of the chief aspects of the subject, that He is first and foremost, now and always, in times past and times to come, the Redeemer, par excellence, of His people Israel. From the benefits of that redemption the Jews are at the present moment, by reason of their unbelief, outside the covenant, but the House of Israel, the sister House, is sought and found by their Redeemer-King, who has said to them, "Behold Me, behold Me," as to "a nation not called by His name" of Israel at present (Isa. lxv. 1 and 16, R.V.), but "called by another name," the covenant, British, Lo-Ammi, Christian sons of the living God (Hosea i. 10). To them He has given now all the gifts and blessings included in His blood-bought redemption; namely, national wisdom, national righteousness, national sanctification, and national blessings of both temporal and spiritual kinds, according to the prophecies (Deut. iv. 6, R.V.; Isa. liv. 17; Jer. xxxi. 33, 34, R.V.; Heb. viii. 10—12, R.V.; Gen. xxii. 17, 18, R.V.; Isa. xxvii. 6, R.V., &c.).

Without, then, denying the personal and spiritual application of 1 Cor. i. 30, in the least degree, we are bound to insist, as Anglo-Israelites, on the fact that both in the Old and New Testaments there is reserved for Israel, God's chosen ones, wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification, and redemption, but all in Christ Jesus, the God-man, their King.

PROGRESS IN WOLVERHAMPTON.—We are glad to hear from the Rev. Thos. Lowe, of Stratford-on-Avon, that he has been able to secure another ministerial convert, one whose residence is Wolverhampton. The new adherent to our belief, he tells us, is able to do good service to the ause. It is a good augury for the success of the approaching Conference to be held there on the 21st and 22nd Feb. that a minister of religion, living on the spot, has already decided to accept Our Identity, and, we trust, to teach it to his congregation. We hope the Conference will prove to be a great success, and lead to the wider dissemination of our glorious truths.

Digitized by Google

OUR NEW ZEALAND ADVOCATE.

In the supplement to the The Evening Bell, of Auckland, New Zealand, dated Saturday, August 6, 1887, we find a capital résumé of our subject, penned by one who has been writing a series of letters for the editor there on the subject of "Anglo-Israelism." We are much indebted to our unknown, but hearty friend, for his very warm eulogy and recommendation of THE BANNER OF ISRAEL. We do our best in regard to the conduct of this journal, and are thankful that in Auckland, New Zealand, it is appreciated by at least one person. We believe he is right when he declares that the BANNER'S circulation, though not as large as some, is "more extended than that of any other paper written in the English language!" It is our privilege to know that the BANNER goes regularly 1,000 miles East of Sydney, in Australia, and also 1,000 miles West of Toronto, in Canada. We believe that is hardly the case with any other journal existing in the language. Our quotation is as follows:—

"ANGLO-ISRAELISM.

"And I heard, but I understood not. Then said I, O, my Lord, what shall be the end of these things? And he said, Go thy way, Daniel; for the words are closed up and sealed until the time of the end. . . . None of the wicked shall understand, but the wise shall understand" (Daniel xii. 8, 11).

"This paper will conclude the present series of articles on Anglo-Israelism, as the writer, this week, terminates his connection with the paper in which they have appeared.

"The writer desires to express his grateful thanks to the editor of the Bell for permitting this politico-religious subject to be so fully ventilated in the columns of his paper. It is, to a certain extent, a new departure in journalism, and in all probability there is not another paper in New Zealand of sufficiently broad and liberal views to have allowed a like permission.

"It has been said that he who makes a blade of grass grow where before there was no grass is a public benefactor, and by a parity of reasoning he who induces a new train of thought in a man's mind has also done good work. The writer has been greatly cheered since these papers were commenced by hearing from two or three readers who came across the subject for the first time in these columns, of the great pleasure the study of it, and the entirely new and noble line of thought which the study carried with it had given them. Doubtless amongst the numerous readers of the Bell there are many more, of whom the writer knows nothing, who have also benefited in a similar manner.

"The writer has more than once been asked if he really and sincerely believes in the truth of the views he has from week to week been thus promulgating, or whether he has only written for the sake of bringing forward fanciful arguments that appear on the face of them difficult of refutation.

"He therefore begs to state here, most distinctly and emphatically, that he is in his own mind as firmly convinced of the great truth that the English and American nations are the literal people of Israel, i.e., lineal descendants of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob according to the flesh, and the heirs through them to the covenant promises, as he is of his own existence.

"And, moreover, the knowledge of this grand truth gives the key to unlock the Holy Scriptures, and the whole mystery of God's dealing with mankind; it enables the possessor of this key to understand current events, and to plainly foresee what is to be the future of our race, what will be the political complications and ultimate destiny of other nations, and also what will be the attitude and future political action of Britain and America as regards one another and towards other nations. The possessor of this key knows that the British Empire must for ever remain a monarchy, so republican and anarchistic theories do not disturb him; and he knows also that that Empire must remain a united Empire, and that there is no possibility of any single one of the young colonial nations breaking away from the old mother and starting on an independent career of its own. He knows that the Federation of the Empire must take place, and that shortly, to be followed by the Federation of the whole English-speaking people, and he knows that the destiny of that glorious Federation is to have the supremacy of the world for the great and everlasting benefit of the whole human race. He knows all this because that is Israel's clear and distinct destiny as mapped out in the Bible, and the English and American people are Israel.

"It is all very well for disbelievers and sceptics to sneer and say that anyone can argue and apparently prove anything he pleases out of the Bible, but facts are stubborn things; the events now taking place in Europe, and all the political complications that have taken place there during the last twelve years, were foreseen, published and commented on by Anglo-Israel writers in their printed journals long before they took place.

"The present writer, while the Russo-Turkish war was being carried on, and when nearly the whole press of England and the colonies was convinced that Britain would have to take an active part in that struggle, contributed to a Wellington paper his views as to what would be the result of that conflict. What he said was, that Russia would be victorious, that she would never enter Constantinople, but that Britain would prevent her, and this she would accomplish in all probability without firing a shot.

"This seemed so highly improbable, more especially when, after the battle of Plevna, the victorious Russians hastened by forced marches to take possession of their coveted prize, Constantinople, that the letters above referred to were laughed at and treated as the effusions of a lunatic.

"Then came the telegram saying that all Europe was aghast, and the nations were wondering what was going to happen next, as none of them were prepared to check Russia's triumphant march. Then came a telegram which was posted up in large letters at the newspaper offices, 'Triumphant Entry of the Russians into Constantinople.'

"Notwithstanding these telegrams, the present writer never once hauled down his colours, and subsequent events proved that he was right and everybody else wrong. But after the event no one was the least surprised. 'Of course,' they said, 'Britain wasn't going to allow Russia to enter Constantinople.' And why should she not? What right had she to interfere? Britain was not at war with Russia, she was not even in alliance with Turkey, and positively the British Admiral fully expected the Turkish forts to fire on him when he entered the Dardanelles, and he had his ships all ready cleared for action in case they did so.

"But what was Britain, and why should she interfere between Russia and her vanquished foe? According to all national precedents, Russia was perfectly justified in dictating her own terms in her vanquished enemy's capital. The great Napoleon invariably did this: England herself does it; and Germany pursued the same course at the close of the late war with France. But just at the critical moment the British fleet steamed up the Bosphorus, anchored off Constantinople, and 'peace with honour' was secured without a shot being fired or a life being lost.

"The reason Anglo-Israelites knew that all this would certainly take place was because Constantinople is the Gate of Russia, and to Israel (England) belong all the 'Gates of her enemies.' She has them nearly all but Constantinople—she has a complete chain of them all round both hemispheres, giving her the control of all countries, such, for instance, as Gibraltar, Malta, Cyprus, Aden, Hong-kong, &c., &c.; therefore when Turkey steps out of Constantinople, England, being Israel, will most certainly step in.

"Again, when men-of-war belonging to all nations were drawn up in battle array before Alexandria, prior to the bombardment of that city, the present writer placed on record his views that every nation would withdraw, France included, and that Britain would enter on the settlement of the Egyptian question alone. This seemed so improbable at the time that it was not until the very day we got the news that the bombardment had commenced, that we also heard that at the very last moment France had withdrawn also, and bitterly that Power has ever since regretted having done so. However, after this event, everybody knew that the European nations would not assist England in an attack on Egypt.

Digitized by Google

"Again, during the war scare, two years ago, when all the Colonial papers were convinced that Russia and England were going to war over the Afghan Frontier question, the present writer wrote article after article arguing exactly the contrary. One distinguished journalist showed the writer a telegram stating that war was as good as declared between the two Powers; a conversation ensued; the distinguished journalist pooh-poohed the idea of the Anglo-Israel theory being able to give anyone correct notions of political possibilities, and said, 'It is pure imbecility to talk like that when war is, so to speak, actually declared.' Subsequently he said, 'If you turn out to be right this time I shall really begin to think there is some method in your madness, and I will give you every credit for sticking to your colours.' The Anglo-Israel view was again proved right, but when the writer went to receive his congratulations from the distinguished journalist he was met with this damper: 'Oh, anyone could see that it isn't Russia's game to go to war with England.'

"The passage of Scripture that heads this paper distinctly says that in 'the time of the end' there shall be some people who shall understand these things. They are called 'the wise.'

"What is Bible wisdom? It certainly does not necessarily imply a college and university education with high academical honours. A man may have his head crammed full of all the accumulated wisdom of the ages, if such were possible, and yet not be 'wise' according to the Bible acceptance of the word.

"The Bible, however, tells us where to find wisdom. 'The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom.' The fear of the Lord and the knowledge of the Lord can only be found by studying the Bible. If the Bible is accepted the wisdom will be acquired, if the Bible is rejected there is no fear of God, and therefore not even the beginning of wisdom can be attained.

"There is no section of the Christian community who are more firmly convinced of the truth of the whole Bible than are the Anglo-Israelites; there are none who study it more closely; and they alone with the Jews accept in perfect faith the promises and prophecies in the Old Testament. They of all people may be said to have 'the fear of the Lord which is the beginning of wisdom,' and they understand these things. The knowledge that they possess derived from Bible study is ever present with them, and not a telegram is received from Europe but is carefully scanned to see what bearing it has on the main question. Not a move takes place in home politics but is measured also by the same standard. So far everything has transpired precisely as they had been led to expect, and the future to them is as clear as noonday.

"There is not a statesman in Europe could say as much unless he has, as Disraeli had, the same key as they have, and which is equally accessible to all who may choose to avail themselves of it.

"The writer in conclusion will only add that anyone desirous of following up this subject, and watching its gradual development, cannot do better than subscribe to the BANNER OF ISRAEL, a weekly journal published in London, price one penny, and which can be ordered and procured from any of the local booksellers. That journal is most ably edited and conducted, and is now in its twelfth year of existence, with a circulation, not as large, but more extended than any other paper written in the English language."

JACOB, THE SUPPLANTER.

IN the Morning Post published in London on January 16, 1888, there appeared a correspondent's paper on "Amatongaland and Delagoa Bay," which strikes us as furnishing a remarkable illustration of the way in which "Jacob the supplanter" acquired his unenviable notoriety as a "land-grabber" and "supplanter" of other folk's property in territory. The paper gave a very clear and full detail of the dispute between our country and the Portuguese respecting our respective claims to Delagoa Bay, and showed that when, in August, 1875, Marshal MacMahon, President of the French Republic, gave his decision against us, and in favour of the Portuguese, no notice was taken of the real owner's rights, namely, those of the Amatongans, who then, as now, declared that no one has or ever had an atom of claim to the Bay or the surrounding country but themselves! The President's award gave to the Portuguese the Southern shore of Delagoa Bay, Inyack Peninsula, Inyack Island, and Elephant Island. These were all claimed by the Amatongans, who were not represented before the Marshal; and ever since, the Portuguese have never dared to occupy Inyack Peninsula or Inyack Island. The Amatongans have always torn down the Portuguese flags of demarcation when they have erected them, and have refused to be bound by a decision which did not take their claims into consideration.

These are the facts of the case. But now comes a development of the matter which surely shows the finger of God working for His people, and preparing for "Jacob the supplanter" a triumph which has been contemplated by few indeed. It is this. The Queen-Regent and nobles of Amatongaland have sent to this country a deputation in order to press upon our Government their earnest desire that we should assume the Protectorate of the whole of Amatongaland. This will include the Protectorate of the Inyack Peninsula, and the Inyack and Elephant Islands. These would, in that case, have to be occupied and defended by British troops and ships, and thus would constitute a "Gate" in Delagoa Bay, which may be left to take care of itself, with all British interests in the neighbourhood besides, after the usual manner of Israel's Gates.

By what arguments the writer in the Morning Post presents the case to his readers, is well shown in the following words, which puts the matter in a nutshell. Logically, they are conclusive; but if the action desired be taken by the British Government, the result will be one of the most wonderful interpositions of the God of Israel in favour of His people in order to give them back what ought never to have been submitted to the Frenchman's arbitration. The writer argued thus:—

The papers submitted to the arbitration of Marshal MacMahon embraced only the case for Great Britain and the case for Portugal. The territories to be arbitrated upon were portions of the territories of the Swazis and the Amatongans, and yet neither of these tribes was represented either by Case or in any other way. Consequently, as against them, the decision of the French Marshal had no binding power whatever. As against the Amatongans, it has had, we have seen, no practical effect. They have not recognised it, and they will never recognise it. If the decision were valid as against them, and valid by reason of the ground on which it was based—viz., that Portugal has always possessed sovereign rights over Maputa (Amatongaland), how is it that now, without a protest from Portugal, that country is imploring the protection of Great Britain? The point is too absurd for argument. No country which has not been conquered can be deprived of a portion of its territories by an award given on a dispute between two other nations; at the conference at which the rival claims were discussed, it was not even invited to attend. Despite, then, the decision of Marshal MacMahon, Amatongaland still remains as a territory accurately defined as the country bounded to the east by the Indian Ocean; to the south by Zululand; to the north by the shores of Delagoa Bay and the waters within legal distance of Inyack Island and Peninsula and Elephant Island; to the west by the Maputa River. And if Great Britain, yielding to the earnest entreaties of the Amatongans, assume the Protectorate of the country, she will be forced to fulfil the trust reposed in her by assuring all the rights against Portugal of the Amatongans. As we have pointed out in the first portion of this paper, Germany would do so, if the Protectorate were to devolve on Germany. And, we repeat, if Germany, then why not Great Britain? The control of Delagoa is necessary to the interests of Great Britain, alike to the preservation of Cape Colony and Natal and for the maintenance of a safe alternative route to India. At all risks that control must be secured. Fortunately, a mode to secure it without violating the law of nations is offered to us. If we assume the Protectorate of Amatongaland and maintain the rights of the Amatongans, Delagoa Bay is practically ours.

Digitized by Google

So far the journalist. Whether the British Government will accept the Protectorate of Amatongaland is a matter not yet decided. Apparently, the opportunity thus offered of securing a British Gate in the best portion of Delagoa Bay will not so easily occur again. But under any circumstances, we feel confident that in some way or other God will give us such a foothold in the Bay that the supremacy of the British flag will be acknowledged, there, as elsewhere, by all the claimants to power in that now much-coveted spot. We feel ourselves no anxiety respecting the matter. God has the whole difficulty in hand. Whether it will be overcome by direct purchase from the Portuguese, by way of compensation for what they have never enjoyed, or by the assumption of the Protectorate over Amatongaland, calling for the assertion of the Amatongans' rights over the Bay, on our own part, for selfish purposes, it is obvious to us that our interests in South Africa depend upon our supremacy in Delagoa Bay, regarded as a Gate.

We are confident, then, that as the Gates were given by the God of Israel "to Abraham and his seed for ever," the one in question will sooner or later be added to our ever-lengthening list of these wondrous spots. The present complications seem to present a favourable opportunity for our acquisition of the Bay, or the commanding portion of it, and we look therefore speedily for some public announcement on the subject which will set this important matter at rest. It is remarkable that in all our nation's expansion throughout the world a Gate always plays a leading part and is a prominent feature in the advancement of our power. India was acquired by our occupation of three spots—Madras, Bombay, and Calcutta; South Africa by our occupation of Cape Town. We seized Botany Bay, and Australia followed. We have long occupied Mombassa on the East coast of Africa. It is pointing to our occupation of 50,000 square miles of territory leading into Central Africa! Delagoa Bay is the natural Gate of the Transvaal, of Swatzieland and Amatongaland. We doubt not that it will ere long be constituted a Gate to extend Israel's influence and power in South Africa and the Transvaal, where already thousands of British miners and others are at work digging for gold and diamonds, and those "chief things of the ancient mountains, and for the precious things of the lasting hills." To God, the faithful Giver, be all the praise! (Deut. xxxiii. 15).

THE ARGUMENT IN A NUTSHELL.

IT is the commonest thing in the world to hear clerics and others speak of "God's ancient people Israel," meaning thereby, only the Jews. Now if we ask such why they speak of one nation (now a scattered people) as "Israel," when God's Word plainly declares in Ezek. xxxvii. 22, that He had, and has still, two nations, once two kingdoms, both known as Israel, we never get any satisfactory reply to our question. It stands to reason, however, that there must be two Israelite nations or people separately existing now, or Ezek. xxxvii. 22 must be regarded as fulfilled prophecy. There is scarcely one who will venture on such a statement, and declare that Ezek. xxxvii. 22, has already been fulfilled. If that be so, and who can deny it, then must Ezek. xxxvii. 22, be unfulfilled prophecy, and Israel and Judah must be existing now in separation somewhere in the world—Israel awaiting the command to come forth out of their graves, to receive the Spirit of God, and to return to their own land in triumph. This is the plain teaching of Hosea, of Isaiah, and of Ezekiel; and in order to carry out this prophetic programme, we see Judah everywhere extant before our eyes, at present under curse and disability, waiting in agony for the times of refreshing to come from the presence of the Lord. Judah being in our midst, the question then arises, where is the other of "the two families which the Lord did choose"? (Jer. xxxiii. 24, R.V.). He has not cast that member off! For the passage just quoted stamps such a statement as gross insult to the great Jehovah! Because thus saying, they despise those whom He calls "My people," "that they should be no more a nation before them." To guard against such profanity, God immediately, in the next verse, bound Himself by a covenant which He cannot break, never to fail to place on David's throne, over the seed of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, a dynasty of rulers of David's race, to govern them for ever. The words are these: "Thus saith Jehovah, if My covenant of day and night stand not, if I have not appointed the ordinances of heaven and earth, then will I also cast away the seed of Jacob and of David My servant, so that I will not take of his seed to be RULERS over the seed of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob: for I will cause their captivity to return, and will have mercy on them" (ver. 26, R.V.). The precision of this language is almost legal. We may place upon it the greatest weight. The Jews or Judah family have not now a king at all, and have not had one of the Davidic race ruling over them since B.C. 588, when Zedekiah was deposed, and his heirs male to David's throne were destroyed (2 Kings xxv. 7). The other branch of the Israelitish family must therefore be now fulfilling Jer. xxxiii. 26; and it is of the greatest importance and moment to discover where that nation is; for God Almighty's faithfulness and honour depend upon it. The signs by which it may be known and detected have often been stated in these pages, and need not now be particularly described. We have, however, to find her as a strong, powerful, insular, maritime, modern nation; wealthy to a degree; Christian in character; missionary in enterprise and practice; wonderfully numerous; with two empires, if not three, appertaining to them, namely, a vast Heathen Eastern Empire, a unique Colonial Dominion, rapidly becoming "a company of confederated nations," and finally, the Empire of the Ocean. She is to be recognised as the only modern Power which gives promise of dominating the world; and possesses a language rapidly becoming cosmopolitan. A Northern, Western, Island race, holding their enemies' Gates, their own being secure the while; and this comprises a word-picture which none may mistake, for it is God's own description of His people Israel in the latter days, and it exhibits to us the very image of the British nation.

We are blessed with all the blessings God Almighty bestowed upon His people Israel, His chosen; and as God cannot promise to one nation and confer the blessings promised to quite another, we assert confidently, that the British must be the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel, as God is true! Here we have, then, "the argument in a nutshell;" and we invite our clergy, our ministers of religion, and our opposing laymen, calmly to take all we have put before them in a reasonable, reasoning spirit, and decide for themselves, once for all, whether the Identity be true; or whether, in teaching, believing, and relying upon it, we Anglo-Israelites are the crazy fanatics that some of our opponents strive to make us out.

WE hope to be able to furnish in an early number a report of the Conference to be held at Wolverhampton on the 21st and 22nd instant.

Digitized by Google

NOTICES.

All communications intended for the Editor, to be addressed: "Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Clifton, Bristol.

SUBSCRIPTIONS. £ s. d.

Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free 0 7 6
Two Copies (including Double Numbers) 0 13 6
Three Copies " " " 1 0 4
Four Copies " " " 1 5 6
Six Copies " " " 1 16 4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-grand, London, to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C., or F. W. PARRY & Co., 29, Paternoster-row, London.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

Contents Bills and Show Cards may be obtained on application to the Publishers.

Advertisements should be sent to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

Prepaid Advertisements are inserted at the rate of thirty words for 1s. 4d.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

A LECTURE will be Delivered in the ASSOCIATION ROOMS, 14, King William-street, Charing Cross, W.C., on THURSDAY EVENING NEXT, February 23, 1888, at 7.30 o'clock, by Mr. F. Joseph Spencer. Subject: "The Ark." Admission free. Strangers will be made welcome.

JAMES BILLINGTON, Sec.

Ready at Advent. Price 6d., by post 6½d.

Old Dogmas From New Aspects.

By Vox Feminæ Auriculæ Hominis.

Contents: 1. The Apostolic Succession. 2. The Apostle Peter. 3. The Successor of Judas Iscariot. 4. The Athanasian Creed. 5. The Trinity. 6. Eternal Punishment. 7. The Great Tribulation. 8. The Great White Throne. 9. The Atonement of Jesus Christ.

H. E. Hill, 60, Nevill-road, Stoke-Newington, London N.

WORKS BY ROBERT BANKS & SON, RACQUET COURT, FLEET ST.

PRESENT-DAY PROBLEMS, and How Anglo-Israel Truth Explains and Solves Them. By V. M. COX. 3d., by post 4 stamps.

LIGHT SHED BY THE GREAT PYRAMID OF EGYPT on the Last Days of this Dispensation, from A.D. 1814 to A.D. 1922. By JAMES KEITH. Price 4d., by post 5 stamps.

NEW TESTAMENT TRUTH on the Anglo-Israel Controversy. By J. G. TAYLOR. Price 3d., by post 4 stamps.

A NEW LIGHT. An Elementary Pamphlet for General Distribution. By A E I. Price 2d., by post 2½d. in stamps.

EPHRAIM-ISRAEL, the Pivot Nation of Prophecy and History. By V. M. COX. Price 1d., one dozen free for 1s.

AMMI; OR, THE CHOSEN PEOPLE. By Miss BIRD. Tracing the Descent of the British People from Abraham as "friend of God," and showing that true science, history, philology, and ethnology, are on the side of the Identity of the Anglo-Saxon Race with the Ten Lost Tribes. Price 2d., post free 2½d.; 12s. 6d. per 100 for distribution.

IS NOT QUEEN VICTORIA the Royal Seed to King David's Throne, and Are Not Her Subjects, the British People, the Ten Lost Tribes? By W. HOPTON. Price 2d.; 12s. 6d. per 100.

A Complete Catalogue Free on Application.

Dr. JOSEPH WILD'S WORKS

NEW EDITION JUST PUBLISHED.

THE LOST TEN TRIBES

Price 3s., post free 3s. 3d.

"We have much pleasure in directing attention to this handsome volume. . . We promise our readers that if they procure this work, and will peruse it, they will find 'Our Identity' discussed in a clear, novel, racy, and from an American point of view, which is sure to interest."—Banner of Israel.

THE FUTURE OF ISRAEL AND JUDAH.

Price 2s., post free 2s. 3d.

LONDON: ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet Court, Fleet Street, and all book-sellers.

MR. ED. HINE is expected to return from his lecturing tour in America about February. Friends wishing to arrange for him to lecture can communicate with Isaac Loveland, Shoreham, near Sevenoaks, Kent, at present fixing no dates. Mr. Hine's publications have had a large circulation, and can be obtained of F. W. Parry & Co., 29, Paternoster Row, London, E.C.

Forty-Seven Identifications, 6d., post free 7d.
Cui Bono? 6d., post free, 7d.
Lost Israel Found, 3s. 6d., post free, 3s. 9d.
Also The Nation Warned by the Scripture Teachings of the Great Pyramid, 6d., post, 7d.

Price 2s. 6d., Cheap Edition, 1/-

BIBLE LESSONS AND REFLECTIONS.

By ROBERT GAIRDNER, of Kilmarnock, N.B.

"Mr. Gairdner has given us in his book a series of Bible lessons, with his own reflections added thereto, and though he has been very cautious in the latter, and has not committed himself too broadly, he has plainly let it be seen that he is an Anglo-Israelite by conviction, and that the Scriptures which he quotes at length and extensively throughout his book, are meant to teach Our Identity and God's faithfulness, from first to last, to His promises to Abraham and His seed for ever."—Banner of Israel.

ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-st.

Price 6d., post free 7d.

THE MESSENGER,

A Monthly Expositor of the Fulfilment of the Scriptures in the Anglo-Saxon Folk, the Israel of God.

Each number contains contributions from high-class writers on Identity Subjects, selections from the Discourses of Rev. Dr. Wild, and a chapter of an Important new work, entitled—

"RUSSIA JAPHET," by "OXONIAN,"

Author of "Israel's Wanderings," &c.

London: F. W. Parry & Co., 29, Paternoster-row.

Fifteenth Thousand.

BY REV. HENRY ROE

Israel's World. Origin and Destiny of British Race, Colonies, and Empire. 2d., post free 2½d. Fifty post free from H. Roe for 4s. 9d.

Philo-Israel says: "I am perfectly delighted with your pamphlet."

C. E. Priestly, Esq., says: "For its size I never read a better work. I have given away two lots of fifty each, and enclose money for fifty more. I have sent it to clergymen, bishops, and archbishops."

Rev. Thomas Lowe says: "What the works of Mr. Hine failed to do in my enlightenment, 'Israel's World' has accomplished. I now read the Scriptures in a new and vivid light."

Going to Africa. 1s., post free 1s. 1d.

Fernando Po Mission. 1s., post free 1s. 1d.

West African Scenes. 2s., post free 2s. 2d.

Consecration. 2d., post free 2½d.

50 post free from H. Roe for 4s. 9d.

Robert Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.; and Rev. H. Roe Dawley, Salop.

WHO ARE WE & WHAT IS OUR MISSION? By J. Thornhill Harrison. With seven Maps. Hand some cloth, gilt, price 5s. Free for P.O.

Anglo-Israelism. True, Not False. Being Philo-Israel's Reply to the Rev. Canon Bell's pamphlet, "Anglo-Israelism: True or False?" Price 1d., 6s. 6d. per 100. 16 pages, crown 8vo.

London: Robert Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

PIANOFORTES, Harmoniums, American Organs. Why buy at shops inferior made instruments, and pay large profits, when you can buy direct from the Maker High-class Instruments, and save 50 per cent. by so doing? Full value allowed for old Instruments, in exchange as part payment. Write for Price Lists and Testimonials to G. LINSTEAD, 2, Oseney Crescent, Camden Road, London. Established 1874.

HUMAN LIFE.—FIFTY YEARS' Record of Facts, Principles, and Discoveries (just published, complete) Relating to the Improvement and Preservation of Human Life on Earth. Origin and true treatment of diseases. A series of articles by DR. SAMUEL BIRLEY, M.D., Ph.D. Book form, 50 pages. SENT FREE to every applicant by the publishers, GORDON B. MURRAY & CO., 50, Theobald's-road, Holborn, E.C. Write to-day.

FITS! FITS!! FITS!!!

ALL PERSONS SUFFERING FROM EPILEPSY should send name and address to JAMES OSBORNE, Medical Pharmacy, Ashbourne, Derbyshire who will forward, free of charge, full particulars, with Testimonials, of the most successful remedy ever discovered for this distressing malady. Sent to all parts of the world. Reference permitted to Rev. J. BAKER, M.A., 80, Bolton Road, Pendleton, Manchester.

WORKS BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

The Geography of the Gates. With Map and six full page, and one double-page, Illustrations, printed on plate paper. 208 pages, in handsome cloth, gilt. Price 3s. 6d., post free 3s. 10d.

The History of the House of Israel. How They Were Lost and How They Were Found. Told for the children. Price 6d., cloth 1s.; post free 7d. and 1s. 1d. Fifth edition.

A Resume of the Scriptural Argument, Proving the Identity of the British Race with the Lost Ten Tribes. Price 1d.; 6s. per hundred, postage 6d.

Our Identity: What it is Not; What it is; and Our Obligations To-day in Respect to it Being a Lecture recently delivered in London by Philo-Israel, and published by special request. Price 2d., a reduction for quantities.

Our Identity with the House of Israel. Price 4d., Reprinted from "Clifton Chronicle Letters'

An Elementary Digest or Sketch of the Chief Facts and Teachings of the Great Pyramid of Egypt. Adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific 56 pages, Illustrated with Diagrams, price 4d., post free 5d. 10th Thousand.

Are the English People the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel? An Inquiry Establishing the Identity of the British Nation with the Lost Ten Tribes. 4d.

Robert Banks & Son, Racquet Court, Fleet Street, E.C.

THE ANNUAL VOLUME

OF THE

BANNER OF ISRAEL

IS NOW READY.

Price, in Handsome Blue Cloth, Gilt, 8s., Post Free for Postal Order.

Forms a handsome present. Useful for presentation to Working Men's Institutes, Libraries, etc., etc.

Robert Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

LUNG SAVE YOUR LIVES BY TAKING TONIC
LUNG OWBRIDGE'S TONIC
LUNG LUNG TONIC TONIC
LUNG THE MIGHTY HEALER. TONIC
LUNG It has a power over disease hitherto unknown in Medicine. TONIC
LUNG Are you at all Weak-chested or inclined to be Consumptive, with just a touch of Cough now and then? TONIC
LUNG "Try this Wonderful Medicine." The Cough and Weakness will disappear as if by magic, and you will feel a strength and power you never had before. TONIC
LUNG HAVE YOU A COUGH? TONIC
LUNG A DOSE WILL RELIEVE IT! TONIC
LUNG HAVE YOU A COLD? TONIC
LUNG A DOSE AT BEDTIME WILL REMOVE IT. TONIC
LUNG Bronchitis & Asthma it relieves instantly TONIC
LUNG The Spasms of Coughing so dreadful in Whooping Cough become less with each dose of the medicine. TONIC
LUNG TONIC
LUNG Prepared by W. T. OWBRIDGE, Chemist, Hull TONIC
LUNG Sold in Bottles 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d. and 11s. by all Chemists and Patent Medicine Vendors. Wholesale all London and Provincial Houses. TONIC

RHEUMATISM

Positively exterminated from the system without shock or discomfort by mild, continuous currents of electricity, generated by wearing

Price 21/-, HARNESS' ELECTROPATHIC BELT Post free.

It is also invaluable for giving prompt relief in all disorders of the Nerves, Stomach, Liver and Kidneys. Thousands of Testimonials. Pamphlet and Advice free on application to Mr. C. B. HARNESS, Consulting Medical Electrician, The Medical Battery Company, Limited,

52, OXFORD STREET, LONDON, W.

(Corner of Rathbone Place).

Call to-day, if possible, or write at once

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. F. W. PARRY (late GUEST & Co.), 29 PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, FEB. 22, 1888. [All rights reserved.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."

(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. XII., No. 583. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 29, 1888. [PRICE ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
The Austro-German Treaty	85
The Jew First	86
The Gate of Palestine	87
The Book of the Lord Jehovah	88
The Centenary of Australia	89
The Restoration of Israel and Judah	90
"The Head and Not the Tail," even in Cycling	91
A New Application of an Old Identity Text	91
Lectures	91

THE AUSTRO-GERMAN TREATY.

THE simultaneous publication by the Austrian and German Governments of their hitherto secret treaty of offensive and defensive alliance, on February 3, at Berlin and Hungary, is an event of grave and far-reaching importance. It is the declaration of two great Continental non-Israelite nations that a state of war is imminent, and that it is expected to arise from "the rowdy of Europe," the Russian people. This treaty points to the Republic of France as a fourth Power from which danger of attack may arise, and provides for the contingency of that nameless attacking Power receiving the support and military co-operation of Russia. In that case Germany and Austria agree to unite their forces, and conquer a peace from both. Here, then, are disclosed four belligerent Powers of the first class—two against two—between whom, if "war to the knife" arise, it may be certainly declared that the contending Powers will summon millions of armed men into the field, and so bring on a war the like of which the world has never seen before.

But this is not all. The Scriptures lead us to expect that there will be engaged in the coming awful conflagration five first-class Powers. There will be two against three—three against two, embattled. Where is the fifth? The fifth is Italy, which it is notorious has thrown in her lot with Germany and Austria in opposition to France and Russia, and has since the date of it (1879) joined this treaty. The Austrian Neue Freie Presse publishes some information about the German-Italian Alliance which the Times correspondent, writing from Vienna, thinks requires confirmation. The journalist says that the two contracting Powers have not undertaken to support each other with their full military strength; and that the treaty only binds Italy, in case Germany is attacked by France, to mass an army of 300,000 men near the Alpine Passes, while Germany will concentrate a similar force on the French frontier if Italy should be attacked by France. If France joins a hostile Power (meaning Russia, of course), then it seems the attitude of Italy will cease to be that of a friendly neutral, but become that of an active belligerent. The late speech of Signor Crispi in the Italian Parliament, quoted in the London papers of Feb. 6, seems to hint that the German Powers, backed by Italy, mean to insist on the Russian's cessation from military menace on the frontier. If all this be true, then indeed we have the sides formed, and the dreadful Earthquake War-Woe is at the doors! Italy seems ready to recall her troops, now ready to wage a vain and useless war against the Abyssinian army, near Massowah on the Red Sea; another symptom that she has joined the Powers about to commence the last dread conflict of Europe against herself, "two against three, and three against two"!

The Austro-German treaty contains but three short articles, which it may be well to summarise in these columns for future reference. The Treaty was made at Vienna on Oct. 7, 1879, between the German and Austrian Plenipotentiaries, to the effect following:—

In Article I.: It is stipulated that if Russia ever should attack either Germany or Austria, the other Power will aid the one attacked with all the military force at its command, and only conclude peace by common consent.

Article II.: If either Germany or Austria be attacked by another Power than Russia, then the former engages to observe an attitude of benevolent neutrality to its co-party. But if Russia comes to the aid of such attacking party, then the two contracting Powers agree to carry out, as against the two assailants, the stipulations of Article No. I.

Article III.: Asserts the hope that the preparations of Russia are not hostile to the contracting Powers, and they agree to keep this treaty secret until Russia's hostile intentions be apparent; and then, out of respect to the late Emperor Alexander, to communicate its contents to him.

Such is this treaty which now is engaging such universal attention. Prince Bismarck, in his speech in the Reichstag on Feb. 6, on the subject of the treaty, made somewhat light of the Russian preparations, leading thoughtful people to ask whether, if Russia does not really contemplate a war of aggression, what need exists for an addition to the German army of 700,000 men? Taken to mean what his speech said, it proved distinctly that the enormous addition to the army, and the new loan required to pay for it, were not needed at all. Yet he wanted and obtained fresh means to oppose Russia and France, the addition enabling him at will to place one million of soldiers on each frontier—Russia's and France's! In short, there is, in Prince Bismarck's opinion, a concrete Russia in whom he has the greatest confidence, and there is an abstract Russia against whom no precautions are too great. Bismarck is afraid of this abstract Russia, and is taking precautions accordingly! But why is Russia provoking all this suspicion, and leading. Germany and Austria into such ruinous measures of self-defence? The German Chancellor gave the hint—probably the true reason. The Eastern Question is ripening for decision, and Russia desiring to profit by the disruption of Turkey, when it comes, wishes to become as strong as possible meanwhile. In short, the question is coming up for decision, Who shall possess Constantinople? To secure it, Russia must force the Balkans. She will there be resisted by Austria-Hungary. The treaty just published will bring Germany and her armies on the scene, with Italy to follow, and France to join the affray as Russia's ally. This seems to us the true order of the coming events. We are concerned to know that the Times, on Feb. 7, made precisely this very same forecast of the conclusion of the present complications, and therefore anticipates a dreadful war. It is sure to come, for God says it, and when it comes it will be unparalleled for terror. It will resemble nothing so much as a great earthquake, such as there has not been since men were upon the earth, so mighty so great! God's word points to the advent of such a time of horror in Rev. xvi. 18, R.V., and it is one of the answers to the Cui bono? question that we shall as a nation be saved out of it. God directs His people Israel at this very crisis to hide herself in her chambers, and shut her doors about her, for a little moment, while the divine vengeance is poured out upon the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity, and until God's indignation be overpast. "For behold, the Lord cometh out of His place to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity; the earth also shall disclose her blood, and shall no more cover her slain" (Isa. xxvi. 20, 21). Israel is, then, under the protection of His love and pity; while upon their non-Israelite Gentile enemies and oppressors there is indignation, all God's fierce anger, and the devouring fire of His jealousy (Zeph. iii. 8, R.V.). Well may Israel, therefore, praise the Lord for His blood-bought blessings to our unworthy race!

Digitized by Google

THE JEW FIRST.

DEAR SIR,—I shall take for granted that you will favour me with the insertion of a few remarks upon the above subject, in reply to your criticism of my paper in Hope and Destiny of this month. I am placed in a somewhat strange position (and perhaps in the eyes of many of your readers might appear a weak one), for of those that have read your rigid denunciation of my paper, not one in ten have seen the article itself. I think the better plan would have been to have reproduced it, so that your many readers might have seen for themselves and judged accordingly. In the first place I might say that my "inspiration" did not come from Edward Hine, for I did not know he held these views until after I had written my first paper. I am not anxious to enter upon a controversy, that to you or myself might not be either a pleasure or profit, but I cannot remain quite silent.

Before the subject can be more fully discussed, there are one or two matters that you have imported into the case that must be referred to—viz., the difference between redemption and salvation. You say, "He made them the offer of redemption and salvation, but they (the Jews) spurned it." Now how could a people be redeemed who were never in bondage. The term redemption has no meaning, to either Jew or Gentile. "He visited and redeemed His people;" nothing could be plainer. Salvation embraces every son of Adam, even the Jew, but the Jew cannot or will not receive it yet, for they have a work to do, which only a Jew can perform.

At this stage I must point out another error, and I think you will acknowledge it as one. You say, "And does he (myself) not know what the same Omniscient One said in Matt. v. 20 speaking to the Jews," etc. Allow me to say the Jews were not present at that time; to avoid the multitude He went upon the mountain, the disciples went to Him and He addressed them, etc. Perhaps you will say, Prove it; certainly I will. First He said they were the light of the world and the salt of the earth; now could He possibly say this to a people who had just before been addressed as a "generation of vipers?" Besides, the Jews have never been the light of the world, but the disciples became so. So if it was addressed to Jews it was not true. But, sir, we know it was true. The address was to the disciples, and knowing they were brought up in the "Jews' Religion," He recalls parts of their old creed; see ver. 17 about the law; and next the verse you quote (20) about the righteousness of the Scribes, etc.; ver. 27 of another Law; in verse 33 about oaths; in verse 39 revenge etc.; nothing can be clearer than the fact that it was not addressed to Jews. Another error; you allude to Paul as a Jew: he says he was a Benjamite, if so he could not be a son of Judah. Until you are more clear upon these matters you cannot see my argument, but do not speak of it as a "monstrous assertion;" that is just what you condemn in others, and I am thoroughly convinced my argument is correct. The rock upon which my impregnable fortress stands, you have passed over very lightly, viz., Isa. vi. 9, 10, "Make their ears heavy and shut their eyes," etc., Why? Lest they (the Jews) be converted and healed, and you quote Acts xxviii. 25 etc., which simply confirms my argument, for we read in the next verse the Jews departed. If you think it is essential to the argument that a passage should be cited that plainly states the Jew is not yet to be converted to Christianity, then I say there is not one, neither is there one to say that the Lost Ten Tribes are to be found in the English people, but while there is not one to make the plain simple statement, there are thousands to prove it.

Now suppose for a moment the good intentions of these good people were accomplished, and to-morrow's sun shone upon a world without a Jew, what would be the effect upon the irreligious and worldly people? They would say (and say truly), "your scriptures cannot be of Divine origin, for they do not speak truth; they say the Jew is to be a living witness of its truth, and he is gone; it says Judah and Israel some day will return to their land together, but there are no Jews left; Ezekiel says they shall rebuild the temple at Jerusalem, which is to become the "praise of the whole earth," but its a mistake, for the Jews are all turned into Christians." In such a case the Rock of truth would be shaken to its very foundation; but you say you do not expect to convert them all; if not all, why some?

You are rather severe as to my belief, but I would say, "I know in whom I have believed, and am persuaded that He is able to keep that which I have committed to Him until that day."

GEO. DIMBLEBY.

Hull, Feb. 2, 1888.

NOTE BY THE EDITOR.—On the principle of audi alteram partem, we willingly give Mr. Dimbleby a place in the BANNER for the expression of his views. We cannot approve of them, and have said so distinctly.

We have no desire to argue the point whether the Jews required "Redemption" as well as "Salvation." We are convinced they did, and that the Lord Jesus effected it for them. Reference to the very passage Mr. Dimbleby alludes to, Luke i. 68, R.V. teaches us that. The argument is this: The Jews were the Lord's people, because they were Israelites, and of Israel. Matt. i. 21, R.V., declares (what Mr. Dimbleby admits) that He came to save the Jews. He came, says that text, to save "His people," and the Jews were the only ostensible Israelites at that date. Such texts as Exod iii. 7, 10, vi. 7; Lament. ii. 11; iii. 48; iv. 3, 6, 10, and others in the Old and

Digitized by Google

New Testaments, prove that the Jews, to whom they also refer without doubt, were "God's people." Luke i. 68, R.V., declares that the Lord Jesus "wrought redemption for His people," therefore for the Jews, unless there be Scriptural references we know not of to show, that for some particular reason they were excluded from its benefits. Mr Dimbleby declares we are in error in saying the Lord addressed "the Jews" in Matt. v. (the Sermon on the Mount). They were the disciples, not Jews, he says. But who were the disciples? Who was Paul? Israelites of Benjamin, no doubt, of the House of Joseph or Israel; but they were all called "Jews" in common parlance. St. Paul called himself one in Gal. ii. 15, R.V., and distinctly told Peter He was one too in v. 14! The Lord's discourse on the Mount was addressed to those who had been under the Law, were acquainted with it, and were still bound to obey its spiritual requirements. These were "Jews" by common parlance, like Paul and Peter, but doubtless in fact Israelites of the tribe of Benjamin, then in political union with the Jews, and so designated universally then, by themselves and others.

In regard to Isa. vi. 9, 10, and Acts xxviii. 25, we think Mr. Dimbleby is labouring under a mistake. He imagines, we believe, that these texts prove that God Himself blinded, and hardened the hearts, ears, and eyes of the Jews lest He should heal them. The passage in Isaiah, repeated in the Acts, declares a prophecy respecting that people's own obduracy but for which mercy would have reached them. It is a prophecy of future hardness on the Jew's part, self induced, and this the New Testament tells us occurred. The people "closed their own eyes" (Acts xxviii. 27, R.V.). Their ears were "dull of hearing." Their hearts became "gross" of themselves. Had it not been so, God would have healed them. Mr. Dimbleby seems to think God was the author of their blindness, deafness, hardness of heart and general obduracy, and that this was a blessed state for the people to be in, since He was going to accept them in it! We cannot so read the Scriptures! Let our readers judge of this matter by the light of God's own truth, and decide between Mr. Dimbleby and ourselves!

Again, we repeat, we do not preach the Gospel to Jews or Gentiles in the expectation that the nation or people of Judah, or of the Gentile non-Israelites, will be saved, quâ nations en masse. Nothing of the sort! We preach to them, because the Lord has bidden us to go and teach them, "for a witness." The results are in His hands, not in ours! We have to obey, not to cavil or reason against Him!

THE GATE OF PALESTINE.

In our work on "The Geography of the Gates," we mentioned on p. 173 that St. Jean D'Acre, or Acre, was a Gate of Palestine. It ought more properly to be described as "The Gate of Palestine." Whoever holds it, holds the key of that land. So said Charles Mills in his "History of the Crusades," Vol. ii., p. 27. "Behind this strategic port (or Gate) there extends a great plain all the way to the river Jordan, dividing Palestine into two halves. In this plain have been fought most of those decisive battles which have caused this country to change its masters" (vide Judges iv.; 1 Sam. xxxi.; 2 Kings xxiii. 29). At the centre of this plain, called the Plain of Jezreel (or Israel), there is situated the town of Megiddo. The war that will decide the fate of the world and declare whether it shall be British-Israelite, or a possession of Russian Gog will be waged there, and be called the war of Ar-Megiddon (Rev. xvi. 16). Napoleon I. called Acre "The Key of Palestine," and we are right in declaring it is "The Gate of the Holy Land."

In Vol. iii. of a beautifully illustrated work, entitled, "Picturesque Palestine, Sinai and Egypt" edited by Col. Sir Chas. Warren, we have a chapter (p. 73) headed, "Acre, The Key of Palestine." In 1798, Napoleon I. tried hard to capture this spot on account of its strategic value. He besieged it, says the account, for sixty days, but in vain! Admiral Sir Sydney Smith was too much for the great French General, and held this city Gate in spite of him! The Crusaders knew the value of this place, and clung to it for a hundred years. In 1832 the Egyptians, under Ibrahim Pasha, step son of Muhammed Ali, Viceroy of Egypt, took the place by assault from the Turks under Abdullah Pasha, under circumstances of great cruelty and barbarity. But after a few years, in November, 1840, retribution came, and the Egyptians were driven out by the united fleets of England, Austria and Turkey.

The account which appears on p. 79 of "Picturesque Palestine" is remarkably graphic, and tells of the splendid success God gave to Admiral Stopford, Commodore Napier, and Captain Collin on that occasion. We captured the place, drove out the Egyptian, and restored the spot to the "unspeakable Turk," who has held possession ever since. Acre has always been a coveted place from the most ancient times, because it is the Gate of Palestine. It is first mentioned in Judges i. 31, 32 as the habitation of the Canaanites, whom the tribe of Asher failed to drive out of it. Alexander the Great seized it in B.C. 333. His successor, as regards Egypt, was Ptolemy, and he acquired Akka in B.C. 320. Finally, the Romans saw the value of the spot, and calling it Ptolemais, made it an important place in St. Paul's day (Acts xxi. 7). In A.D. 638, the Saracen Mahommedans took possession of Ptolemais, and at once gave it back its name, Akka, which it retains to-day. The Crusaders, in A.D. 1191, made Acre their chief stronghold and landing place (i.e. their Gate). In A.D. 1291 the Turkish Sultan took the city by storm, after a month's siege. Its subsequent vicissitudes we have already noticed.

It is apparent, therefore, that the place is a veritable Gate, and is, in fact, the Gate of Palestine, which must necessarily come into possession of the House of Israel before the Restoration of Israel and Judah can take place. Here, then, is a sign for our readers to note. Being Israel, we must accompany the Jews and the Americans back to "The Land." Prior to that event taking place, the acquisition of Acre as a British Gate must occur. When it falls into our possession, surely our opponents must reflect on the facts as they bear on Our Identity, and be satisfied that the British are the Lost Tribes? When this strategic city falls to our nation's possession then will the end be close at hand!

At present, of course, no one has the least idea that our power will ever be represented at Acre. But events take place rapidly in these "rapid" times! Cyprus was suddenly added to the Empire. The purchase of the Suez Canal shares was done in a moment, and came upon the nation on the morning of Friday, November 26, 1875, with something like a shock, when the Times that day made the announcement at the instance of the then Mr. Disraeli.

The battle or war of "Ar-Mageddo" will require the base of British power to be at Acre, and preparations for that stupendous series of events will, of course, require that Acre should be ours for a considerable time beforehand. We look, then, for the occupation of Acre by the British before long: and, in fact, the least complication in the East, endangering our interests in the Holy Land, will necessitate our occupation of this first-class Gate. We do not, however, desire to assume the rôle of a prophet, and therefore desist from further speculations as to the future, merely reiterating what Napoleon I. was well aware of, namely, that Acre is the Key or Gate of Palestine, and that to Israel God gave the good gift of all the Gates! The British are Israel; therefore it follows that the heir of Acre is our own thrice-blessed nation. To the King of Israel be all the praise for this glorious truth!

The Canadian Advance. Messrs. Banks & Son will be pleased to receive subscriptions for this paper.

Digitized by Google

THE BOOK OF THE LORD JEHOVAH.

Is it true that there is a book of which it may be said that the Lord Jehovah has written it, and published it? It is true! This book is the "Word of Truth" (2 Tim. ii. 15), called also in the sacred volume "The Holy Scriptures" (2 Tim. iii. 15), "The Word of God" (1 Thess. ii. 13), "The Word of the living God" (Jer. xxiii. 36), "the Word of the Truth of the Gospel" (Col. i. 5), "The Scripture of Truth" (Dan. x. 21). "The Book of the Lord" (Isa. xxxiv. 16) and the like. In the latter passage immense honour is placed upon the Scriptures, since they are described as the book of the Triune Jehovah, and the Lord Jesus speaking declares, "My mouth it hath commanded," and regarding the Holy Spirit's share in the book, "His spirit it hath gathered them." This testimony to the unutterable value and worth of the Bible appears just between two portions of a wonderful consecutive prophecy. The first portion, contained in Isa. xxxiv. 1—15, relates to God's judgments on the Goim or Gentile non-Israelite nations outside Palestine, and ch. xxxv. contrasts their awful fate with the salvation and blessed privileges destined to attend the Lord's people Israel, represented by their name Zion, as used in ch. xxxiv. 8, and xxxv. 10. The latter are the redeemed of the Lord, His ransomed ones who return and come to Zion, a Christian, rejoicing, singing nation, having everlasting joy upon their heads, walking in the way of holiness. That these two chapters refer to one single prophecy contrasting God's judgment on the Goyim, with His blessings on the people or church of God, is the opinion of Bishop Lowth. "This prophecy," he says, "has a view to events still future, to some great revolutions to be effected in later times, antecedent to that more perfect state of the kingdom of God upon earth, which the Holy Scriptures warrant us to expect, and serving to introduce it." We see thus the immense importance of this book of Jehovah! It points to the time of coming judgment on the Gentiles and the coming blessings of Israel. The prophecy in question tells us that these events relate to the day of the Lord Jehovah's vengeance, being the year of recompences for the controversy of Zion (ch. xxxiv. 8). This is to be the sign to Israel, for ch. xxxv. 4 tells them when they see these things, "Be strong and fear not, behold your God will come with vengeance with the recompense of God. He will come and save you." If our Lord's own words in Luke xxi. 25—28, R.V., are compared with these it will be found that they relate to the same events. To the earthly nations will come distress for them, and "perplexity for the roaring of the sea and of the waves, men fainting for fear and for expectation of the things which are coming on the world, for the powers of heaven shall be shaken." But as for Israel, what will be their portion then? "When these things begin to come to pass, look up, lift up your heads, because your redemption draweth nigh." Parallel passages in Isa. xxvi. 20, 21; and Zeph. iii. 8, 9, speak in the same tones of terror to the non-Hebrew nations, but of comfort and salvation to the believing House of Ephraim.

Such being the Lord's mind and purposes as to the future respecting both the non-Hebrew nations and His people of the Ten Tribes, Ephraim, what does the Lord command His people, and therefore their pastors, to do? Isa. xxxiv. 16 tells us! "Seek ye," He commands, "out of the book of Jehovah and read!" How many obey this command? They are few indeed who do so, or teach the people out of the book of the Lord the connection He has laboured to show us exists between the coming punishments of the nations, outside Israel's fold, and the saved, redeemed, ransomed House of Israel, who, allured into the wilderness as the Lord's Lo-Ammi Ephraim, are converted there to Jesus their Redeemer, and so cause these desert-like habitations to blossom abundantly, because "they see the glory of Jehovah their Lord, the excellency of our God" (ch. xxxv. 12).

This book of the Lord which men so strangely neglect, and which they will not study or consult, is the guide to future events which God has given and revealed to men. Where else could we learn of the coming judgment of the earthly nations and the approaching blessings of Israel? This book and this alone gives us the information. Its teachings are absolutely the truth, and can be relied upon. They have proved in numberless other instances that God's judgments are certain and His mercies also sure. He foretold the destruction of the world by the flood. Did it not come suddenly and awfully? The submergence of Sodom and Gomorrah was threatened, and did it not take place in a moment, when men least expected it? The destruction of Jerusalem and of the polity of the Jews was predicted; and did they not occur just as God said they would come to pass? The crucifixion of the Lord, did it not take place in the fulness of time, when God "spared not His own Son, but delivered Him up for us all"? (Rom. viii. 32). So, too, the mercies and blessings God promised in the Book were literally and exactly bestowed as predicted.

If the world was destroyed by the flood, Noah and his family were saved. If Sodom was uprooted, Lot and his daughters were kept alive and protected. If the Jews were banished from their land, they are preserved in their dispersion as God engaged they should be, and our Lord, though He made His soul a sacrifice and offering for sin, yet rose from the dead and saw of the travail of His soul and was satisfied, according to the prophecy of Isa. liii. 11. So in regard to the judgments and blessings yet to come upon "the nations" and on Israel respectively, they will both be literally and synchronously fulfilled, and God tells us in Isa. xxxiv. 16, to "seek in the book of the Lord and read" about them for our own comfort and for the glory of His name.

There are facts, however, in respect to this "Book of the Lord" which we must never pass over, though our pastors and teachers seldom or never refer to them. In the first place the book was written by the Lord, by Hebrew amanuenses chiefly. It was published among and addressed to Hebrews. It related almost entirely to Hebrews, and in two remarkable passages we find that God gave it for the benefit primarily of the House of Ephraim or of Israel of the Ten Tribes, intending them to communicate the revelation as God's messengers to the world. The first passage is Hosea viii. 12, R.V., and the second Psa. cxlvii. 19, 20. The first declares, "Though I write for him" (Ephraim), or marginally, "I wrote for him the ten thousand things of My law, they are counted a strange thing." The law was written by the Lord for Ephraim-Israel, and like the entire book was sent to them as God's instruments for the blessing of the world. In Psalm cxlvii. 19, 20, we have as clear a statement in the words, "He showeth His words unto Jacob, His statutes and His judgments unto Israel. He hath not so dealt with any nation, and as for His judgments they have not known them. Hallelujah!" Ephraim-Israel then is the nation to whom God has written and sent this book. To them the kingdom of God has been transferred from the keeping of the Jews, as our Lord Himself told the latter in Matt. xxi. 43, and they are that nation and people which the Lord God of Israel created, formed, and made for Himself, that they might, being Israel, show forth His praise (Isa. xliii. 1, 7, 21). Let our clergy, then, obey God's word! Let them "seek out of the book of Jehovah and read." Let them ascertain where the Ten-Tribed House of Ephraim-Israel is to day, and realise that the promised blessings are to be theirs, when the nations of the Gentiles, non-Israelite by origin, are suffering from the long-restrained wrath of God, destined, as we have seen, to be poured out upon them, what time Israel's Restoration to their land takes place to God's glory.

THE Bill for introducing the Bible into the schools of New Zealand has been defeated in the Colonial Parliament by 18 votes.

Digitized by Google

THE CENTENARY OF AUSTRALIA.

We quote the following article from The News of the World of January 29, believing it will be interesting to our readers. Our remarks on the sentiments expressed, we reserve:—

Our Australian cousins have celebrated the centenary of New South Wales, and as the Governors of all the Australasian colonies were present it may perhaps be accurate to say that the centenary of Australia was celebrated rather than that of the mother colony. When we look at the magnificent totals in acres, population, pastural resources, and live stock, we have reason to be proud of the energy of the men who founded and directed the establishment of the colonies. New South Wales had an unpromising beginning. It was better known to our grandfathers as Botany Bay, in connection with transportation as one of the penalties of the criminal law. It is a fact which perhaps the colonists would like now to forget, but it is not the less true that the involuntary servitude of those "who left their country for their country's good" had much to do in the earliest stages of the development of the colony. In Australia, as elsewhere, the energies of free men very soon surpassed the industry of those held to labour, and as the colony advanced under the enterprise of energetic squatters, the "old hands" had to acknowledge the existence of a superior force in civilization. On Thursday last New South Wales attained its majority, or came of age, if majorities are to be counted in centuries, and we suppose it must be so accepted, after the fashion set by the United States some years ago. The date is somewhat open to dispute, because Capt. Phillip sailed into Botany Bay on the 21st of January, and took possession in the name of George III. Captain Phillip, however, did not like Botany Bay, and so he pushed on to Sydney Cove, hoisted the Royal Ensign, and landed the 750 persons under his charge. Captain Phillip must have had a keen eye to the beauties of nature; for Sydney Cove is admitted to be one of the loveliest bays in all the world, and naturally a fitting site for the city that was destined to become the colonial capital. Captain Cook had given the whole east coast the name of New South Wales; but it was not until the 26th of January, 1788, that the British race took possession as settlers and pioneers. Their progress for the first four years showed that they had 23 head of cattle, 11 horses, 105 sheep, and 43 pigs, as the total census of the live stock of the colony. The number of sheep now amounts to 35 millions, with proportionate totals of horses, cattle, and pigs, which need not alarm us, for there is plenty of room and to spare yet, inasmuch as New South Wales is still six times the size of England, and is even then only a section of the continent of Australia. The one colony now represents Victoria and Queensland, which are still to be regarded as her daughters; while South Australia and Western Australia, on the other side, have also set up for themselves and have separated for no better reason than that Sydney was too distant for the capital of Government; but now as the means of communication by land and sea are being increased by the multiplication of railways and the multiplication of steamers, a tendency has grown up in the political thought of the colonies towards a more perfect union, which is sometimes called Federation by the Australians, and sometimes expands itself into the larger thought of a Federation that shall include the mother country and all the colonies and dependencies of the British Crown.

When once the material success and the great industrial and commercial future of Australia was ascertained, the colonists naturally turned their attention to the great question of their self-government. A very wise Governor, Sir Richard Bourke, may be said to have fixed the political future of New South Wales. He saw the capacities of the colonies, and by his very large and statesmanlike views he impressed the colonists with the idea that it was their duty to lay the foundation of a Constitutional Government. The task was not an easy one, but the practical colonists imported the principles of the British Constitution and the common law, which were "taken as read," and then proceeded in a Parliament of their own to make such addition to the Statute Book as their local circumstances required. Not unnaturally, the people of what we now know as the colony of Victoria complained of the difficulties of representation at Sydney, and were perhaps, also inspired by the notion that Hobson's Bay, if not equal in beauty to Sydney Cove, was more than its equal as a harbour for commerce, and so Victoria, South Australia, and Queensland separated from New South Wales, and set up Parliaments and Governments on their own account. In the same way Tasmania and New Zealand received Constitutional powers to govern themselves, although the Governor of New South Wales still retained the nominal title of Governor-in-Chief. It is not too much to say that on the whole the colonies have been governed well, and if occasionally there is an ebullition of eccentric rhetoric in colonial assemblies, it has at least the extenuation supplied by very bad examples at home. The social and intellectual life of the colony has not been less conspicuous than its material prosperity and its Constitutional Parliamentary freedom. Sydney led the way by the establishment of a university, and its example has been imitated by Victoria, in Melbourne, and by New Zealand, in Christchurch. Our literature has no safer market than that of the colonies, and both in literature and art native-born colonists have made contributions to the common stock of British genius. On the whole there is no more wonderful story to tell than that of the century between the landing of Captain Phillip and the celebration of Thursday. At least two great cities, Sydney and Melbourne, and a dozen considerable towns, as well as an innumerable number of smaller communities, have been added to the resources of civilization. The Aborigines have almost disappeared before the invasion of the white man, and there seems to be every probability that in the next hundred years Australia will simply increase and multiply until each of the colonies will represent the strength of estate that will not unworthily compare with the strength of the mother country. The most noteworthy fact is that while the colonies have many differences with each other, and many conflicting interests existing among themselves, they are yet determined to stand by each other for the purposes of mutual defence and support against aggression, while they all emulate each other in their attachment to the mother country, New South Wales sent a regiment of 800 men to fight by the side of our soldiers in the Soudan, while Victoria led the way in the establishment of a fleet with the sanction of the Crown. In dealing with our Australian fellow-subjects we avoided the errors committed in our government of the colonies of North America, and if we have no reason to regret the establishment of the United States, we have also reason to rejoice that not long after we acknowledged their Independence we laid the foundation of another community in an even newer world which bids fair to give another English-speaking Power to the civilization of the future.

So far the London journalist—a "Sunday" one we regret to know! The story of the discovery and progress of the Australian Colonies is, indeed, wonderful, and the summary of it as told by The News of the World is in many respects an unwitting testimony ("blind evidence," in fact) that the British are Israel. The giant daughters of the "old mother in the West" are admitted to be "daughters" of New South Wales, which is "six times the size of England and even then only a section of the great Continent." The Federation of these mighty States being recognised as imminent, we are irresistibly led to realize the Scriptural idea of Israel's "nation and company of nations" (Gen. xxxv. 11), as seen in that "grandest Federation of States the world has ever known," which was the subject of one of the Times' articles not long ago.

The journalist describes the Australian Colonies as virtually nations, which indeed they are. The "dying out" of the Aborigines is noted, whereas it is a sign of Our Identity with Israel, as Jer. xxx. 11 affirms. The loyalty of the Colonies to the Mother Country, and their resolve to hold by each other are alluded to as facts in strange contrast with the conduct of the United States of America, who were goaded into rebellion by mismanagement at home. In the last sentence of the remarks we quote, we find a singular parallelism with the prophecy in Isa. xlix. 21. There Israel is represented as regretting her "lost children," and rejoicing over the new ones given her elsewhere by the Lord. The history of the Australasian Colonies is as near a miraculous one as we can conceive, and points distinctly to our Israelitish origin. Those who first settled there were convicts sent out to form a penal establishment at the ends of the earth, but God used those miserable beginnings to give His people the most magnificent Island-Continent the world contains, and reserved it all for them! To it He added, in due course, New Zealand, Tasmania, the best part of New Guinea, and sundry surrounding islands and groups of islands, which united are forming rapidly "a Greater Britain" at the Antipodes—another English-speaking 'Power' (that is, a nation) to the civilization of the future!"

Digitized by Google

The stately daughters of Israel in Canada, Australia, New Zealand, and South Africa, are "English-speaking Powers" already, nations by name, and their united force, added to that which India confers, must in the end govern the world, what time the United States of America—modern Manasseh—becomes united again to his younger brother, preparatory to the glorious Return to Palestine, under the protection and blessing of the Lord Jesus Christ, who is God the Son, the Redeemer and Saviour of Israel, and, through them, of the nations of the whole world.

THE RESTORATION OF ISRAEL AND JUDAH.

To the Editor of the "Christian Commonwealth."

DEAR SIR,—I notice in your issue of September 1st, another letter from E. Breach upon the non-restoration of the Jews, in which he expresses a desire to arrive at the truth. In order to do this it will be necessary to begin where the promise of the land was first given. Gen. xii. 7, contains the first record of the promise, "Unto thy seed will I give this land." This promise is renewed in Gen. xiii. 14—17, and given "for ever." The first mention of the covenant which God made with Abraham and his seed is found in Gen. xvii. Abraham is here commanded to walk before God and be perfect or upright, and every male child is to be circumcised. It is not necessary to review the early history of Israel, but, as Mr. Breach, though he does not say it, appears to be under the impression that the Jews are the whole of Israel, it would be well to notice briefly what took place after the death of Solomon. Ten Tribes revolted from Rehoboam, thus the Twelve Tribes became two distinct Houses; the House of Judah (the Jews) under Rehoboam, and the House of Israel under Jeroboam.

Israel was taken captive by Shalmaneser in the ninth year of Hoshea's reign, 721 B.C., (See 2 Kings xvii. 6).

Judah was not taken into captivity until the reign of Jehoiachin, more than 100 years after the captivity of Israel. The Jews returned from their Babylonish captivity, and were dispersed after the days of Christ; but we have no record of the House of Israel returning from their captivity in Assyria. The manner in which God put Israel away was by a "Bill of divorcement" (see Jer. iii.), but that this putting away was not intended to be for ever is clear from verse 12, where God calls upon back-sliding Israel to return, and that they will return is also clearly declared in verses 17 and 18. That the return of Israel and Judah which is here declared has not yet taken place cannot be disputed, for it will come to pass at a time when Jerusalem shall be called the "throne of the Lord," and all nations shall be gathered unto it. If Mr. Breach will read Ezek. xxxvii. 15 to the end, he will find that the two Houses are to be united into one nation, and one king shall be king to them all; moreover, God will make a covenant of peace with them; it shall be an everlasting covenant with them; and God will place them and multiply them and will set His sanctuary in the midst of them for evermore. These promises have not been fulfilled, therefore, as our God is a covenant keeping God they have yet to be fulfilled. J. TOWNHILL.
140, Houndsditch, E.C.

We take the foregoing letter from the "Christian Commonwealth," of Sep. 15, 1887, and present it to our readers as a good sign, when journals like the one in question, will give space to such a subject as the scriptural and historical distinction between the Houses of Israel and Judah. The ignorance and misapprehension in regard to this elementary point in scriptural history is perfectly marvellous, and especially in the minds of the clergy ,who ought to be our teachers. If only the pulpit can be brought to see the present existing difference between Ephraim-Israel and Judah-Israel, it will not be long before the promises to the two Houses will be seen to be distinct and separate. Then will come the discovery that Israel must be somewhere to-day enjoying her blessings as promised, just as Judah is present everywhere now under the curses predicted, because of their sin against the Messiah, Jehovah-Jesus, God the Son, at Calvary. When we have got our clergy and opposing laity to this point a very interesting case for investigation will arise, namely, "Where are the Ten Tribes now?" To resolve that difficulty a search of the sacred record will be needed; and the clergy will be under the necessity of discovering where God declares Israel shall be found hidden by Himself, and what their characteristics, status, and employment will be during the Christian Dispensation. It will then be certainly found that the people for whom they are searching are here in these British Isles, in "the Isles of the West," "the Isles afar off," rapidly becoming "the heir of the world" in process of entering into enjoyment of their possessions. It will be seen, too, that they are "the head of the nations, not the tail," above them all, but not beneath; wealthy to a degree; powerful by land and by sea; holding "the Gates of their enemies," their own being secure and safe the while, supreme at sea by reason of the Gates; with a Heathen Empire in possession, such as the world never saw before; and colonies in the four quarters of the globe, rapidly developing into "stately nations," and showing a tendency to Federate with their old "mother" in the North, so as to constitute "a nation and a company of nations" like that promised to Jacob of old, by the Lord God of Israel. The clergy would soon discover all this, and find besides that there is a spiritual aspect of the question, pointing to the same conclusion, and showing that the British are the Lost Ten Tribes from this point of view as well. For they will find that whereas Israel was promised the knowledge and custody of the word of the Lord, the British are now in that position of privilege (Psa. cxlvii. 19, 20); also that they alone of all the settled nations of Europe, Asia and Africa, keep sacred God's Holy Day according to the commandment; that they alone honour His ten true laws, and their race alone, fired with the love of souls for Jesus' sake, have become the evangelists of the world as solemnly promised to Israel exclusively in Gen. xxii. 18; xxviii. 14; Acts iii. 25; Isa. xxvii. 6; Matt. xxviii. 19, 20 and many another text. These considerations would lead, we think, to the conclusion on the part of our pastors that the British must be the "remnant of Israel" or the Lost Tribes.

That matter being decided the next doubt to be cleared up would suggest itself to the clerical mind thus:—"If true, what use is this thing to me?" Rather we should say, "If this be truth, how is God's glory served thereby?" To this somewhat irreverent question the answer surely ought to be, "If this thing be of God, and if it be a clearly recorded scriptural truth it must be accepted and acted upon, although we may not in our blindness see the use of it to the church just now, nor how, exactly, God's glory is promoted thereby. But the fact is, the Cui bono? inquiry is very satisfactorily answered. Our Identity being true, God's faithfulness, truth, and adherence to His promises and covenants become thereby manifest to the most sceptical minds. The history of our nation responds to the history of God's people, the Ten Tribes, and so becomes a living testimony to the fact that God exists, knowing the beginning from the end, and foreseeing their career from first to last. The atheist seing that, can no longer deny the authenticity or the genuineness of the Holy Scriptures. He consequently is obliged to admit that the testimony of the Bible, true in one grand respect, may be true in all.

He sees that he is therefore a sinner in God's sight, and sees, too, the remedy provided for the cure of sin, namely, the atonement of Christ, and the value of the precious blood as the God-appointed means for the restoration of "the world lying in the wicked one," to His love and favour. Then there is that view of the "use" of this subject which our patriotic opponents may be presumed to appreciate whether clergy or laymen. It promises to our race, because they are Israel, perpetuity as a nation, universal dominion for good, unbounded wealth, the never-ending privilege of the enjoyment of the means of grace, God's holy word, His sabbaths, His laws, and the right to serve as His almoners of the grace of God, to "all nations, families and kindreds of the earth." The scriptural authority for this wondrous statement can be seen by any one who will refer to such passages as the following: 2 Sam. vii. 23, 24; Jer. xxxi. 36; Dan. vii. 22, 27; Psa. cxlvii. 19, 20; Exod. xxxi. 13, 17; Ezek. xx. 20; Gen. xxii. 18; xxviii. 14; Acts. iii. 25; Deut. vi. 4—9; Deut. xv. 6; xxviii. 1, 13, etc.

Digitized by Google

These considerations should suffice (if they can see the force of them) to convince our opposing clergy and others that the view we advocate for their adoption is full of comfort to this our Church and nation; also that, putting aside the temporal blessings which accompany what is called "Our Identity," the one spiritual benefit promised to us as a nation, because we are Israel, namely, God's continual presence with us, guiding, guarding, and comforting us, as Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, amply answers the really blasphemous inquiry, Cui bono? The passages of Scripture which guarantee this splendid bonum to our race because we are Israel are these. Exod. xxix. 45, 46; xxxiii. 16; Haggai ii. 5; Neh. ix. 20; Matt. xxviii. 20; Josh. i. 5; Deut. xxxi. 6, 8; and Heb. xiii. 5. These thoughts must suffice. They arise out of the fundamental difficulty respecting the distinction between Israel and Judah. We trust they will enable some doubting opponent to see his way clear to relinquish his opposition, and so to receive a truth which will bring great comfort to his mind in these troublous times, and shed a light upon the pages of the Scripture which will make the book almost new.

"THE HEAD AND NOT THE TAIL" EVEN IN CYCLING.

We hope our readers will not think we are trifling with a great subject when we say that our countrymen are proved to be "the head and not the tail, above only and not beneath," even in the use of the bicycle and the tricycle? When our public journalists publish the facts, and comment on them after the fashion of the Standard's leader of September 2, we may be permitted to notice the matter too, and draw a moral which is somewhat different to that to which our secular journalists point. An International Competition of Bicyclists has just been held in Norway, and on that occasion the "record" has been "beaten," and "the ten thousand metre record of the world, for bicycles," has been exceeded by a Briton—Mr. Fenlon. The supremacy of England in bicycling has been recognised by America, France, and Belgium, who, in challenging our British competitors, invariably exclude "Howell," as one who is admitted to be invincible. The rest of the British world are held to have no advantage over their foreign antagonists, and therefore, when we find Mr. Fenlon "beating the record," we can point with satisfaction to a new proof, in a new quarter, of the truth of God's unconditional promise to Israel, that she should be "the head and not the tail of nations," even in this kind of athletic exercise. The Standard puts the matter very clearly, when it said, on September 2,—"There are very few sports in which we are able to measure our strength with other nationalities. With our Australian brethren we stand virtually alone in regard to cricket . . . and football does not appear to have been thoroughly acclimatised anywhere outside the United Kingdom." In other words, there are no sports in which other nations dare compete with us, saving cricket. In that noble game we have but one competitor—our own sons in Australia—whereas, in the national game of football, we have absolutely none. Now cycling is being added to the list, and though we have a large number of competitors, the champion cyclist, Howell, is already acknowledged to be facile princeps, and Mr. Fenlon has added to the list of cyclist honours, by carrying off, in Norway, "the International Cycling Championship." We make these remarks in no boastful spirit, but simply to prove to our friends that God is faithful and true, that what He has promised to His people Israel He has performed to the jot and to the tittle, proving to those who will, and can see, that the British are Israel. It may be easily realised how important these apparently little matters are. For if we can imagine a state of things in which the British were beaten in all or most public and national sports, and if we could not in all, or nearly all, other respects, declare the nation excelled—being "above only and not beneath all other races of the world"—how could we show that the British are the chosen ones of God?

A NEW APPLICATION OF AN OLD IDENTITY TEXT.

We lately heard a moving, earnest missionary sermon, during the peroration of which, the preacher, urging his congregation to the necessity of more liberal response, generally, to the call for foreign missionary help, fortified his argument thus:—"Our nation," he said, "is one over the dominions of which the sun never sets. It is gigantic in size, and blessed with all the blessings which we see in its possession to-day. God seems to have granted to it the unique opportunity of carrying the Gospel to all regions of the earth, and placed upon it a responsibility which we cannot adequately realise. Let us beware lest, if we fail to fulfil our plain duties under the circumstances of our priceless opportunities, and our boundless wealth, which God has also endowed us with, He say to us, 'The kingdom of God shall be taken from you, and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof!'"

So far the preacher. He puts an interpretation here upon our Lord's words addressed to the Jews of His day, and recorded in Matt. xxi. 43, which surely never can be applicable to the British people, whether they be Israel or no, and which surely nothing can justify? Where does it appear that a prophecy, which the Lord Jesus Himself uttered against the House of Judah, can be applicable 1858 years afterwards, to a separate modern nation, with whom the Jews have, in his view, no ethnic connection at all? It is presumable, from the preacher's words, that this nation, which thus inherited the blessings of Judah, and "brought forth the fruits of the kingdom of God," were and are the British people. If so, what Scripture justifies the inference from our Lord's words, that the nation He designated, as the heir of Judah's privileges, would, in its turn, make way for yet another heir? We certainly could not inherit the blessing, without also bringing forth the fruits of the kingdom? How can it be Scripturally maintained, that a nation the Lord Himself thus designated and so endowed, would, in its turn, fall away? and yet another nation, with no better guarantees of continuance in the right path, be found to carry on the work of foreign missions? To Israel of the Ten Tribes, the Lord has given in His Word the privilege of world-wide missionary duty. Israel was "to blossom and bud, and fill the face of the world with fruit" (Isa. xxvii. 6). The preacher admitted, in his sermon, that we, as a nation, were doing this very thing! The inference must be (God being true), that we are therefore Israel—"the nation bringing forth the fruits of the kingdom of God." How can anyone venture to say that Israel, so prophetically endowed and employed, and so carrying out God's purposes, can be swept summarily aside, and a fresh nation (which cannot be Israel) appointed in its place, contrary to the prophecies, and directly in the teeth of the recorded will of God Almighty? We leave these considerations to our evangelical preachers, when they undertake next to stir up the missionary zeal of their perplexed congregations!

LECTURES.

"The Lost Ten Tribes Found."—A series of lectures, on the above interesting subject, was given during the month of December, 1887, by Dr. Evans (The Surgery, Beaufort), at the Beaufort Church Mission Room. The vicar of the parish (the Rev. Ll. M. Williams) being in the chair, delivered very appropriate addresses, and congratulated the doctor on having chosen so interesting a subject to exercise his mind during his leisure hours. Among other remarks, he said that he welcomed any movement which tended, as this subject did, to prove the reality and truthfulness of the Bible; which is a very important factor in these days.

The lecturer treated his subject memoriter, and took great pains to qualify all his statements by frequent reference to the Bible—which he did, by the help of the Rev. H. R. Roberts, Curate of Beaufort, who read all the verses mentioned by the doctor. The lecturer divided his subject into different headings, which he carefully treated, one by one. He traced "Lost Israel" all through the Old Testament and New Testament periods, all through the Dark Ages, and the Reformation period, and finally, identified "Lost Israel" with the inhabitants of the British Isles. The remarks concerning "Jacob's Stone," "the Ensign of Our Nation," "a Sabbath-Keeping Nation," and "a Nation Full of Missionary Spirit," met with great applause.

There was a very good attendance at all the meetings. Thanks were accorded the chairman and lecturer. The proceeds were given towards the Church Fund. Rhyd-yr-Ebwy.

Digitized by Google

NOTICES.

All communications intended for the Editor, to be addressed: "Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Clifton, Bristol.

SUBSCRIPTIONS. £ s. d.

Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free 0 7 6
Two Copies (including Double Numbers) 0 13 6
Three Copies ,, ,, ,, ... 1 0 4
Four Copies ,, ,, ,, ... 1 5 6
Six Copies ,, ,, ,, ... 1 16 4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-grand, London, to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C., or F. W. PARRY & Co., 29, Paternoster-row, London.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

Contents Bills and Show Cards may be obtained on application to the Publishers.

Advertisements should be sent to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

Prepaid Advertisements are inserted at the rate of thirty words for 1s. 4d.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

A LECTURE will be Delivered in the ASSOCIATION ROOMS, 14, King William-street, Charing Cross, W.C., on THURSDAY AFTERNOON NEXT, March 1, 1888, at 3.30 o'clock, by Mr. Thomas Holland. Subject: "More about the Pyramid." Admission free. Strangers will be made welcome.

JAMES BILLINGTON, Sec.

WORKS BY ROBERT BANKS & SON, RACQUET COURT, FLEET ST.

PRESENT-DAY PROBLEMS, and How Anglo-Israel Truth Explains and Solves Them. By V. M. COX. 3d., by post 4 stamps.

LIGHT SHED BY THE GREAT PYRAMID OF EGYPT on the Last Days of this Dispensation, from A.D. 1814 to A.D. 1922. By JAMES KEITH. Price 4d., by post 5 stamps.

NEW TESTAMENT TRUTH on the Anglo-Israel Controversy. By J. G. TAYLOR. Price 3d., by post 4 stamps.

A NEW LIGHT. An Elementary Pamphlet for General Distribution. By A E I. Price 2d., by post 2½d. in stamps.

EPHRAIM-ISRAEL, the Pivot Nation of Prophecy and History. By V. M. COX. Price 1d., one dozen free for 1s.

THE ANGLO-ISRAEL POST-BAG; or, How Arthur Came to See It. By the Right Rev. BISHOP TITCOMB. Price 2s. 6d. in cloth gilt; paper cover, 1s. 6d., by post 1d. extra.

THE ISRAELITES FOUND IN THE ANGLO-SAXONS. The Ten Tribes supposed to have been Lost, traced from the land of their captivity to their occupation of the Isles of the Sea. By WILLIAM CARPENTER. Price 2s. 6d., by post 2s. 8d.

THE ANSWER TO THE EASTERN QUESTION, With Some Facts Concerning the Identity of the British With Israel. By the Author of "The New Old Story," enlarged. Price 3d.; for distribution, 50 copies, 11s., post free.

CARDINAL PROOFS THAT THE BRITISH Are the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel — the Abrahamic Covenant. By F. W. PHILLIPS. With two chapters by PHILO-ISRAEL. Price 6d., post free 7d.

THE NEW OLD STORY. By "A E I." Price 6d., post free; in cloth, 1s., post free.

THE BIBLE ATLAS. To Illustrate the Old and New Testaments. Price 1s.; post free 1s. 1d.

ANGLO-ISRAEL TRACTS. 8 pp. Royal 16mo., on toned paper. Adapted to enclose in letters, and for general distribution. No. 1—12. Half-penny each, 12 copies post free 6d. Specimen packet for 6 stamps.

Dr. JOSEPH WILD'S WORKS

NEW EDITION JUST PUBLISHED.

THE LOST TEN TRIBES

Price 3s., post free 3s. 3d.

"We have much pleasure in directing attention to this handsome volume. . . We promise our readers that if they procure this work, and will peruse it, they will find 'Our Identity' discussed in a clear, novel, racy, and from an American point of view, which is sure to interest."—anner of Israel.

THE FUTURE OF ISRAEL AND JUDAH.

Price 2s., post free 2s. 3d.

LONDON: ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet Court, Fleet Street, and all book-sellers.

PIANOFORTES, Harmoniums, American Organs. Why buy at shops inferior made instruments, and pay large profits, when you can buy direct from the Maker High-class Instruments, and save 50 per cent. by so doing? Full value allowed for old Instruments in exchange as part payment. Write for Price Lists and Testimonials to G. LINSTEAD, 2, Oseney Crescent, Camden Road, London. Established 1874.

THE ANNUAL VOLUME

OF THE

BANNER OF ISRAEL

IS NOW READY.

Price, in Handsome Blue Cloth, Gilt, 8s., Post Free for Postal Order.

Forms a handsome present. Useful for presentation to Working Men's Institutes, Libraries, etc., etc.

Reading Cases for holding the weekly numbers, 2s. Binding Cases, 1s. 6d.

Robert Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

Price 6d., post free 7d.

THE MESSENGER,

A Monthly Expositor of the Fulfilment of the Scriptures in the Anglo-Saxon Folk, the Israel of God.

Each number contains contributions from high-class writers on Identity Subjects, selections from the Discourses of Rev. Dr. Wild, and a chapter of an Important New Work, entitled—

"RUSSIA JAPHET," by "OXONIAN,"

Author of "Israel's Wanderings," &c.

London: F. W. Parry & Co., 29, Paternoster-row.

Fifteenth Thousand.

BY REV. HENRY ROE

Israel's World. Origin and Destiny of British Race, Colonies, and Empire. 2d., post free 2½d. Fifty post free from H. Roe for 4s. 9d.

Philo-Israel says: "I am perfectly delighted with your pamphlet."

C. E. Priestly, Esq., says: "For its size I never read a better work. I have given away two lots of fifty each, and enclose money for fifty more. I have sent it to clergymen, bishops, and archbishops."

Rev. Thomas Lowe says: "What the works of Mr. Hine failed to do in my enlightenment, 'Israel's World' has accomplished. I now read the Scriptures in a new and vivid light."

Going to Africa. 1s., post free 1s. 1d.

Fernando Po Mission. 1s., post free 1s. 1d.

West African Scenes. 2s., post free 2s. 2d.

Consecration. 2d., post free 2½d.

50 post free from H. Roe for 4s. 9d.

Robert Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.; and Rev. H. Roe, Dawley, Salop.

MR. ED. HINE is expected to return from his lecturing tour in America about February. Friends wishing to arrange for him to lecture can communicate with Isaac Loveland, Shoreham, near Sevenoaks, Kent, at present fixing no dates. Mr. Hine's publications have had a large circulation, and can be obtained of F. W. Parry & Co., 29, Paternoster Row, London, E.C.

Forty-Seven Identifications, 6d., post free 7d.
Cui Bono? 6d., post free, 7d.
Lost Israel Found, 3s. 6d., post free, 3s. 9d.
Also The Nation Warned by the Scripture Teachings of the Great Pyramid. 6d., post, 7d.

HUMAN LIFE.—FIFTY YEARS' Record of Facts, Principles, and Discoveries (just published, complete) Relating to the Improvement and Preservation of Human Life on Earth. Origin and true treatment of diseases. A series of articles by DR. SAMUEL BIRLEY, M.D., Ph.D. Book form, 50 pages. SENT FREE to every applicant by the publishers, GORDON B. MURRAY & CO., 50, Theobald's-road, Holborn, E.C. Write to-day.

FITS! FITS!! FITS!!!

ALL PERSONS SUFFERING FROM EPILEPSY should send name and address to JAMES OSBORNE, Medical Pharmacy, Ashbourne, Derbyshire who will forward, free of charge, full particulars, with Testimonials, of the most successful remedy ever discovered for this distressing malady. Sent to all parts of the world. Reference permitted to Rev. J. BAKER, M.A., 80, Bolton Road, Pendleton, Manchester.

WORKS BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

The Geography of the Gates. With Map and six full page, and one double-page, Illustrations, printed on plate paper. 208 pages, in handsome cloth, gilt. Price 3s. 6d., post free 3s. 10d.

The History of the House of Israel. How They Were Lost and How They Were Found. Told for the children. Price 6d., cloth 1s.; post free 7d. and 1s. 1d. Fifth edition.

A Resume of the Scriptural Argument, Proving the Identity of the British Race with the Lost Ten Tribes. Price 1d.; 6s. per hundred, postage 6d.

Our Identity: What it is Not; What it is; and Our Obligations To-day in Respect to it Being a Lecture recently delivered in London by Philo-Israel, and published by special request. Price 2d., a reduction for quantities.

Our Identity with the House of Israel. Price 4d., Reprinted from "Clifton Chronicle Letters"

An Elementary Digest or Sketch of the Chief Facts and Teachings of the Great Pyramid of Egypt. Adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific 56 pages, Illustrated with Diagrams, price 4d., post free 5d. 10th Thousand.

Are the English People the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel? An Inquiry Establishing the Identity of the British Nation with the Lost Ten Tribes. 4d.

Anglo-Israelism. True, Not False. Being Philo-Israel's Reply to the Rev. Canon Bell's pamphlet, "Anglo-Israelism: True or False?" Price 1d., 6s. 6d. per 100. 16 pages, crown 8vo.

London: Robert Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL. By the Rev. Joseph Wild, D.D., Pastor of Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, New York. Price 3s., post free 3s. 3d.

WHO ARE WE & WHAT IS OUR MISSION? By J. Thornhill Harrison. With seven Maps. Handsome cloth, gilt, price 5s. Free for P.O.

Robert Banks & Son, Racquet Court, Fleet Street, E.C.

LUNG SAVE YOUR LIVES BY TAKING TONIC
LUNG OWBRIDGE'S TONIC
LUNG LUNG TONIC TONIC
LUNG THE MIGHTY HEALER. TONIC
LUNG It has a power over disease hitherto unknown in Medicine. TONIC
LUNG Are you at all Weak-chested or inclined to be Consumptive, with just a touch of Cough now and then? TONIC
LUNG "Try this Wonderful Medicine." The Cough and Weakness will disappear as if by magic, and you will feel a strength and power you never had before. TONIC
LUNG HAVE YOU A COUGH? TONIC
LUNG A DOSE WILL RELIEVE IT! TONIC
LUNG HAVE YOU A COLD? TONIC
LUNG A DOSE AT BEDTIME WILL REMOVE IT. TONIC
LUNG Bronchitis & Asthma it relieves instantly TONIC
LUNG The Spasms of Coughing so dreadful in Whooping Cough become less with each dose of the medicine. TONIC
LUNG Prepared by W. T OWBRIDGE, Chemist, Hull TONIC
LUNG Sold in Bottles 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d. and 11s. by all Chemists and Patent Medicine Vendors. Wholesale all London and Provincial Houses. TONIC

NERVOUS DEPRESSION

Debility, Rheumatism, Gout, Sciatica, Torpid Liver, Kidney Disorders, and every form of weakness may be speedily cured by wearing

HARNESS' ELECTROPATHIC BELT

(Price 21s., post free).

No Shock or Discomfort whatever.

Thousands of Testimonials. Pamphlet and Advice free. Call TO-DAY, if possible, or write at once to

Mr. C. B. HARNESS, Consulting Electrician
THE MEDICAL BATTERY CO., Limited,
52, OXFORD ST., LONDON, W.
(Corner of Rathbone Place).

NOTE, ONLY ADDRESS. [1609

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. F. W. PARRY (late GURST & Co.), 29 PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, FEB. 29, 1888. [All rights reserved.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."

(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. XII., No. 584. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, MARCH 7, 1888. [DOUBLE NUMBER, TWOPENCE.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
The Military Strength of the Powers	93
Iceland, and the Power to get Wealth	94
Volapuk and English	95
"They Shall not Hurt nor Destroy in all My Holy Mountain" (Isa. xi.). By Rev. Denis Hanan, B.D.	96
British Responsibility for Drunkenness in India	96
Israel Blossoms and Buds and Fills the Face of the World with Fruit	97
Ephraim—The Silly Dove (Hosea vii. 11). (A Lecture Condensed). By John T. Gott	98
More Evidence Connecting the Ancient Inhabitants of Ireland with the Phœnicians and Hebrews. Part VII. By Joseph Thomson	101
Overcrowded London	102
Some Common Objections Answered. By Arthur B. Prowse, M.D., F.R.C.S.	103
Our Identity in New Zealand	104
Israelitish Features in the Prayer Book	106
Israel's Scripture and Prayer Union	106
Anglo-Israel Free Distribution Fund..	107

THE MILITARY STRENGTH OF THE POWERS.

THE extreme attention now being directed to the state of affairs on the Continent makes a consideration of the military strength of the Powers chiefly concerned of great interest at the present juncture. In case of hostilities breaking out between Germany and Austria on the one hand, and Russia on the other, the number of men whom the War Ministries of the respective Governments assert that they are able to set in the field by putting their armies on a war footing reaches the immense total of about 5,500,000, exclusive of any additions which may be made by the concurrent project the German Government has now in hand of largely augmenting its available forces. As things now stand, the Germans and Austrians claim to have ready 2,500,000, leaving Russia with rather more than the totals of the two other Powers put together; but there is no doubt that, of this host of nearly 3,000,000 assumed to be at the disposal of the Czar, a very large proportion have gone very little further, if any further, in the direction of military organisation than being inscribed on the the regimental rolls of their districts. On the other hand, the war strength of Germany and Austria—and especially of Germany—represents men thoroughly trained for military duty, and ready for the field at very short notice. Were a war also to engage the forces of France and Italy, the former claims to be able to bring forward nearly 1,500,000 fighting men, and Italy considerably over 2,000,000, so that the total of armed men asserted to be at the call of these five great military Powers is not far short of 9,000,000. This enormous total, however, is quite independent of the grand final call upon the last reserve, which the nations concerned might make under the different names of Landsturm and levée en masse, and which goes into sums which are scarcely calculable.

The above, quoted by one of the provincial papers of Feb. 8, cannot fail to be deeply interesting to our readers. If the present war strength of Germany and Austria amounts to two and half millions of men prepared for war, Russia represents at least on paper nearly three millions of men. France and Italy pitted against each other will bring three and a half millions more troops into action, and thus the frightful, bewildering, number of nine millions will be embattled ready to do the Lord's bidding. Then indeed the rush to arms of such hosts, wielding weapons of precision more powerful than any the world has ever known before, will bring on a cataclysm which God's word well describes in that awful sentence, recorded in Rev. xvi. 18, R.V.:—"There was a great earthquake such as was not since there were men upon the earth, so great an earthquake, so mighty." Unparalleled as the result will be in the history of mankind, it cannot be denied that the preparations going on at the present hour are adequate to the result intended! If nine millions of armed combatants, provided with arms of precision the like of which the world has never seen before, join in deadly conflict with the object of conquering a Peace by the utter annihilation of their enemies, they must, and surely will, destroy the Europe of to-day! This we believe to be before us in the near future; and the means by which such dire results may easily be brought about, we have now before our eyes. Germany, we have just seen, has with feverish haste voted as merely an addition to her military strength a force of 700,000 men, to cost £14,000,000! How the nation can bear such a fearful strain upon its manhood and its purse, we cannot imagine! But it has been done by the unanimous vote of the Reichstag, and thus the fighting strength of the German and Austrian empires united will henceforth stand at 3,200,000 giving a million of men on each frontier facing East and West, with 1,200,000 besides to spare to support the first lines of defence against Russia and France, respectively! We see in all this how God's hand has been carefully preparing for the fulfilment of His own prophetic word, and how the Franco-German war of 1869—70 laid the seeds for the coming outbreak, by providing "burning questions" and jealousies between those two gigantic Powers; besides the Eastern Question in the background to embroil Austria-Hungary with Russia, in the determination of the final or last word therein, namely, "Who shall have Constantinople, and who shall finally possess the Holy Places, Jerusalem and the land of the Inheritance?" Russia desires to have both; Constantinople as "the Gate of the world" to make sure finally of Palestine; and Palestine as the central spot commanding Britain's trade route to the East, to enable her to dominate the whole earth. In vain! in vain! The Gate of all the Gates God promised to His people Israel, the British, and they must and will possess it, as He is true!

Digitized by Google

"The Holy Places" God gave to Israel, Judah and Manasseh, to have and to hold for ever; and no earthly power will ever prevent their restoration to their own borders in God's own due time, or defeat His blessed will! Russia's dreams of world-wide power will no doubt bring on the great earthquake war-woe we see gathering in the East of Europe, to dissipate which we see Germany making such desperate efforts. When that frightful woe shall have fallen upon Europe, then we shall see, and astonished Europe will see too, that God exists, and has foreseen for the last 4,000 years the events of the day now before us. In the days of Zephaniah the prophet, 630 years before Christ, or 2,518 years ago, He told the world what He purposed to do. "My determination is," He declared, "to gather the nations, that I may assemble the kingdoms, to pour upon them Mine indignation, even all My fierce anger: for all the earth shall be devoured with the fire of My jealousy" (Zeph. iii. 8, R.V.). It is almost a new identification of the British nation with Israel to compare the military strength of this our own race with the gigantic armies of the Continent. Our puny 200,000 British bayonets and cavalry are really beyond comparison feeble in strength compared with Germany's 2,500,000, Austria's 1,000,000, Italy's 2,000,000, France's 1,500,000, and Russia's 2,800,000. And yet we are far stronger than them all combined, because, being Israel, the Lord dwells with and amongst us, and His presence puts us in a position high above all the nations of the earth, being the head and not the tail, above only and not beneath them, according to the prophecies. He has separated us besides from all the burning questions which are about to bring on the destruction of the European Polities. Our rights respecting Constantinople will be defended not by ourselves but by Germany, Austria, and Italy, and in the last resort we believe these Powers, unable to retain and hold the Gate themselves, will rejoice that we should hold it for the good of Europe, as we now hold Egypt, with the consent of the majority of the nations as the trustee of them all. With the quarrel that divides Germany and France we have not the smallest sympathy, and as to the jealousies that embitter the national lives of Italy and France we feel no interest in them at all, since we do not covet Tripoli or Tunis, and only want a right of way in safety to India.

There is no reason then why we should concern ourselves about the impending Earthquake Woe about to fall upon Europe. Our national interest will not be imperilled thereby in the least, and as to ourselves, God's precept to us governs the case. "Come, My people," He says, "enter thou into thy chambers, and shut thy doors about thee, and hide thyself for a little moment" (Isa. xxvi. 20, R.V.). When God prescribes our hiding place and keeps watch and ward over us for good who can hurt or harm us? Therefore let us, O brethren of the House of Israel, praise the Lord for this great and unspeakable mercy, the direct result of Our Identity with the Lost Ten Tribes.

ICELAND, AND THE "POWER TO GET WEALTH."

A FRIEND at Manchester has forwarded to us an extract from the Manchester Guardian of Sept. 9, 1887, to illustrate the fact that "the power to get wealth" is reserved for the British folks, but that the Gentile French, when the opportunity is presented to them, refrain from embracing it, and so fail to acquire the wealth from commerce when apparently it is in their power. Prophetically, the promise of "wealth and the ability to obtain it," are granted to one people only, namely, to the children of Israel, as reference to Deut. viii. 18 will show. The object of the gift is not that the chosen people may become purse proud, arrogant, or even prosperous, but that the Lord their God may by means of that same wealth (so using human instrumentality) "establish His covenant which He sware unto their fathers as it is this day." Wealth, then, and the power to obtain it, are very sacred, solemn things, appertaining to the Lord Himself, and used by Himself to promote His own glory. He refuses to give that glory to another; and He deigns to use one family of all the nations of the earth to carry out His purposes of grace towards mankind. "You only have I known of all the families of the earth," is His declaration in Amos iii. 1, 2, R.V. "Israel shall blossom and bud and fill the face of the world with fruit" (Isa. xxvii. 6, R.V.). To none but Israel is the promise given that they should lend to many nations but not borrow (Deut. xv. 6, R.V.). The testimony we quote is from French sources, and is furnished by the correspondent of the Temps, and should therefore be impartial. He complains that the French neglect their own commercial interests, but that the ubiquitous British are more active in reaping the fruits of successful trade. He wrote thus:—

A correspondent of the Temps who has been visiting Iceland sends to that journal some notes which are not without points of interest. As readers of Pierre Loti's wonderful last book will have gathered from those fascinating pages, the Icelandic waters are much frequented by French fishermen, and the writer states that while he was at Reykjavik two corvettes of the French navy were stationed in the harbour, with the mission of assisting and if need be protecting the 3,000 or 4,000 French fishermen on the coast. "Assuredly," he says, "the despatch of these vessels by the War Office is a good and excellent thing; but why do the 72,000 inhabitants of Iceland know France only by warships and never by merchant steamers?" He believes that there is a very profitable trade to be done with Iceland ponies. In the island an animal can be bought at the end of the season—that is, about the middle of September—for £2 10s. or £4, which will command a ready sale anywhere in Europe at £12. "For any French shipowner who has the inclination there is an immense deal to be done here," is his fixed opinion. He waxes enthusiastic as to the merits of the Icelandic pony, which he found very strong, very hardy, contented with the roughest provender, admirably sagacious, and miraculously sure-footed. "I should never stop if I wished to put on record all the accomplishments of these wonderful little creatures; let me only add that they cross the widest rivers swimming, while their riders follow in boats. What services would they not render to the army in case of war in a mountain country!" There is something also to be done with the Icelandic sheep, which only cost 16s. a head in the country, and bear a fine fleece. But all these good things are neglected by the French, who leave a profitable monopoly to the English. "England," he says, "which more and more—this cannot be too often repeated in France—imposes on the whole world her flag, her commerce, her language, and her coinage, does not send ships of war here, it is true; but instead, a Leith steamer makes several voyages to the island every year, and brings back to Scotland thousands of Icelandic sheep and ponies and quantities of wool." That "more and more" is encouraging in these days of croaking about the present, and real or affected despondency about the future.

This testimony is not confined to Iceland. The same story of British supremacy in commerce comes from all sides. In South America the cry is that the British merchants have a mine of wealth at their backs, and that therefore they are taking up all the remunerative investments in which that land abounds, although the Germans are trying hard to obtain them, but cannot succeed, by reason of their want of capital. The possession of capital by our countrymen enables them to build new railways abroad and at home, and so to secure an influence which nothing else would give them. Such is the course in regard to the new Portugese railway connecting Delagoa Bay and the Lobombo Mountains on the borders of the Transvaal, to the slopes of which it has been constructed by British gold. British capital is covering India and now Burmah with a network of railways (13,000 miles finished, 10,000 under construction) which will give us a military hold upon those countries better and stronger than a vast army of European troops. It has connected the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans by an "Empire railway route," which has quadrupled British power and commercial strength on the shores of the North Pacific. British capital finally will at last lay Africa at the feet of Israel's teeming millions. The gold and silver mines, the ruby and the diamond mines of the world, have one after another been given by the God of Israel into the favoured hands of His chosen ones, first in Australia, now in South Africa, in the Western States of North America, in Burmah, and in the diamond mines of Cape Colony.

Digitized by Google

These have furnished the mighty power to get wealth in this one particular race "in order that the Lord might establish His covenant which He sware unto our Hebrew fathers as it is this day" (Deut. viii. 18). By means of this wealth, the race itself multiplies; its commerce and its power expands; it acquires thereby territorial increase and the supremacy of the sea; by means of this vast wealth, so obtained, the Gates are acquired and retained, and these causes acting and reacting on each other, the Gospel, the Missionary, the Bible, the Sabbath, and the Decalogue soon follow by the grace of God, and being despatched to the ends of the earth, cause "the blossoming, budding, and fruitful" results which God throughout is working to effect, in accordance with His promises, covenants, and oath "to Abraham and his seed for ever." The Board of Trade returns issued in January, 1888, show that a marked improvement has taken place in British commerce, and that during the unfavourable year 1887 the total imports of these islands stood at the stupendous value of about £1,000,000 per diem, Sunday included, the exact amount being £361,935,000! The exports of the United Kingdom for 1887 amounted to over half a million sterling a day, or £221,398,440 for the year. These figures indicate, no doubt, a depressed condition of trade; though the tendency to revival seems established. But if "depressed" trade is represented by a million sterling a day in imports, and £600,000 a day in exports, we may say in truth that God has indeed given this nation, being Israel, "the power to get wealth," to His own glory. To Him shall be, therefore all the praise!

VOLAPUK AND ENGLISH.

We return to the subject of the English language as the one destined to be the universal vernacular of the globe, in order to quote the words of a foreigner, E. Savory d'Odiardi, which appeared in the Globe newspaper of Jan. 3, 1888. After pointing out that Volapük could never become the language of commerce or travel, the writer adds that "a universal language, to become universal and be worthy of the name, must be universal, and in course of time must replace all other tongues." He then added these remarkable words, which we commend to our opponents, and ask them how English can become the universal tongue and yet fail to be Israel's language, by which God proposes to turn "to the peoples a pure language, that they may all call upon the name of the Lord and serve Him with one consent" (Zeph. iii. 9, R.V.). The "Foreigner" said:—

What are the reasons which ought to militate in favour of one language in preference to all others? I would mention them as follows:—A universal language ought to be such as to allow gradually all roots to be embodied in the future process of evolution of languages. Its construction ought to be simple, concise in its forms, flexible in its combinations. Its prefixes and suffixes ought to be few, and of easy employment; the inflections of words ought to be restricted to a minimum. Its literary and technical vocabulary ought to be as complete as possible, and the existing works on all known matters should offer the most complete literary and scientific cycle extant. It ought to be the language spoken by the majority of intellectual and active populations in the possession of perfect liberty, moral and political; by settled communities, not likely to carry abroad the seeds of discords and of social revolutions, in the possession of the best means of international communications—that is to say, of maritime intercourse, and possessing large territories in every part of the globe. Having detailed all those essential conditions, I will conclude that the English language is the only tongue which unites them all. It is the only one which can do the work proposed. And, whatever may be the resistance opposed to its development, there is little doubt that it will be as impossible to prevent English from being one day the universal language as it will prove impossible to get the world to become a Volapük land.—I am, Sir, yours obediently,

Jan. 2. E. Savory d'Odiardi.

So far the writer in the Globe. A friend who sent us the extract comments on it thus:—"Is it not monstrous to suppose that if the Anglo-Saxons are not Israel, when the real Israel comes to the front to take the dominion of the world, they will have to adopt the language of the conquered people, or the subject race, as the medium of intercommunication throughout the world, and give up their own language, whatever it may be? What moles our opponents are, grubbing about in the dark of the earth, instead of walking in the glorious light of heaven! Let us thank God with all our hearts for the light He has given us, and make the best use we can of it, that His name may be exalted."

The universality of the language presupposes the world-wide diffusion of the race in a position of dominancy. To only one race has such a position been promised in God's Word, and that race is Israel. They are designated "the heir of the world," such heirship being by covenant the portion of "Abraham and his seed for ever" (Luke i. 55; Rom. iv. 13, R.V.). To them is promised "the kingdom and dominion under the whole heaven" (Dan. vii. 27, R.V.). The British are rapidly assuming that place in the world, as testified by the signs that language and geography afford. Who can venture, then, to assert that the British are not Israel? On the asserters of this denial rests the onus probandi, and the negative allegation is the point which by them has to be established. This is notoriously the difficult part, the labouring oar.

Our opponents, however, are equal to the occasion, and are able to throw off our arguments in such style as this. The writer is a clergyman, to whom the Oldham leaflet was sent, entitled, "Thoughts for thinking men," and signed "A Searcher for Truth." The cleric, having perused it, replied, "I return the leaflet, but of such a mass of bosh (!) it is difficult to choose. But permit me to make a single remark on the one sentence lined with red, 'Where is the indestructible throne of David according to God's promise?'"

"Would the 'Searcher for Truth' have ever asked such a blasphemously unchristian question if he had ever read Luke i. 32, 33, and Heb. i. 8?" Such are the amenities of a clerical foe! Why our subject inflames the ire of the clergy in this way, so that they forget even the courtesy due to an infidel or schismatic, we cannot understand. So it, however, is. The argument founded on Luke i. 32, 33, and Heb. i. 8 we do not comprehend. The Rev. Vicar of Oldham, who gives the authority of his position to the leaflet in question, is not unacquainted with these two texts, and does not find they militate against his belief in Our Identity! He does not consider the reasoning of the leaflet "bosh," but on the contrary considers these views so reasonable and Scriptural that he teaches them in his classes, preaches them in his pulpit, and publishes them in every way he can.

To our clergyman we commend the subject of the English language, as pointed out by the Foreigner we quote; and we ask him to explain how it is we British have all the Abrahamic blessings in possession, and are manifestly preparing the world for the blessed Saviour's reign, when He shall be the Ruler over all the kingdoms of the world, His people Israel (the British) being the earthly agency He deigns to employ to carry out His will!

Digitized by Google

"THEY SHALL NOT HURT NOR DESTROY IN ALL MY HOLY MOUNTAIN" (ISA. XI.).

By Rev. Denis Hanan, B.D.

The literal fulfilment of the prophecy concerning the Branch, the Messias, who was a "sprout from the stem or root of Jesse," who was filled with the Spirit, and to whom all spiritual graces now bear witness, is the pledge to us of the literal fulfilment of the yet unaccomplished part of the prediction; nay, it is more than a pledge, for the existence of the Spirit of Christ in those who yield themselves to the influences of the life that is in them, is the manifestation of the very energy whereby the kingdom shall ultimately be established. The power whereby the King of kings will subdue all things is present and potent to-day. But the reign of peace is far off at present. Weapons of destruction are being made wholesale; the swords are not being turned into plowshares. Nevertheless faith and hope may legitimately ask, How is the peace predicted in the words, "They shall not hurt nor destroy in all My holy mountain," to be brought about?

The prophet states that the animal kingdom will be subjugated—this is repeated in chap. lxv. 25—; that Ephraim and Judah will cease to envy and vex one another; that Jerusalem will be a rejoicing, her citizens will be long-lived "as the days of tree." The nations will obey; God's glory will be proclaimed among the Gentiles, and the earth will be filled with the glory of the Lord as the waters cover the sea.

This state of peace and blessedness is to be brought about by the power of Messiah's sway. How is it to be exercised? Is it by producing a change of nature, a certain indefinite goodness in the mass, animal and human? or is it to be by the pressure, the restraining and transforming power of a benign government? Are harmless lions to be met with promiscuously in and around the most highly civilised capital city? Are serpents to escape destruction or to thrive amid its luxurious suburbs? Are men to be deprived of all those passions through which sin now entices, or are the energies of a true Christian civilisation to work universally even as they do now work partially?

A closer study of the prophetic Word will cause us to know that the conditions of that coming kingdom will be far more like our own than poetic imagery might lead us to fancy. They will be human, practical, civilising, real, and as civilisation affects men and animals now, so it will then. Even the railways of modern civilisation will bring their quota of those to be gathered (chap. lxv. 20, "litters" are literally "shining coaches"). The national life of Ephraim, Judah, Egypt, &c., is to continue. The conditions even of weather and climate are to be the same (e.g., Zech. xiv. 18). Therefore it is but reasonable to conclude that as civilisation affects fierce animals in London, so it will affect them in the future metropolis of the universe. They do not hurt or destroy. The very conditions of their life are changed by the absolute subjugation in which they are held.

But the subjugation of man is a far more difficult matter. How is peace and its resulting prosperity, how is the kingdom of God to be brought to all the nations of the earth? Here also history and present-day facts enable us to give an answer. The world was at peace when the Lord Jesus was born, the temple of Janus closed, because the pressure of authority and law and power produced the Pax Romanorum. So it is in India to-day. The country is at peace and prosperous, because the benign pressure of authority produces there the peace of Britain. Such might be the peace which an Anglo-Saxon confederation could, if it existed even now, impose upon the world. Thus, unless we have any direct revelation to the contrary, the lessons of the past and of the present teach that the future peace and blessedness under Messiah's sway will be brought about by the pressure of His benign government. As the peace under Augustus was produced by a governing nation trained to rule; as the peace under Victoria is produced by the innate ruling power of the dominant race; so we are justified in expecting that Messiah's peace will be produced and maintained through the instrumentality of a people loyally subject to Him and capable of dealing with men. And is not such an executive foretold in the people not called by His name, but who have found Him, gathered from all places of their dispersion, the people foretold by Daniel, whose power was to be set up in the days of the Gentile monarchies, and whose might was to increase as a stone growing into a mountain and filling the earth? Zion's children called by another name, rebetrothed in the Christian covenant, and suddenly manifested in the day of her travail. Christian Israel (Hosea i. 10), mighty in the possession of the inheritance of the firstborn, and trained to rule by centuries of constitutional liberty.

If this very practical forecast removes the visionary, poetic, unreal, or indefinite idea of the future of the world which sometimes satisfies us, we must ask, Where is Christian Israel, able and ready to bless the world by imposing upon it the Messianic peace? Within a few years the full cycle of Gentile domination (bisected as it is by the date of the Mahomedan conquest of Jerusalem) will have run its course. Under whom is the city to become a rejoicing, and her people a joy? Where are the sons of Zion, the needed executive, not alone nationally fitted to rule, but willingly bound to serve their King by the bonds of a love that is stronger than death, because they have known that He died for them, the people made ready for the day of His power?

Oh! a useless, speculative question, say the many. We know not. What is the use of enquiry? What would be gained by knowing? And so it is that we drift onwards blindly towards the consummation, nationally and ecclesiastically disregarding the prophetic teachings, refusing to read the lessons of history and of present-day facts; and yet now, as ever, fulfilling our foretold destiny. Led by the unseen hand of the covenant-keeping God of Abraham, we shall probably remain ignorant until the "nation be born at once," and the astonished world, ourselves included, shall say, "Who hath heard such a thing? who hath seen such things?" Then, and probably not until then, will the evidence of Our Identity, which is so plain and convincing to the few, produce the universal acknowledgment, "The Lord God Omnipotent reigneth."

The effect of this conviction and acknowledgment upon heathen or "lawless" nations would be a willingness to submit to Israel's authority, and to receive the knowledge of God in Christ. May we not hope that then many will be grafted into the body of Christ, and be made partakers of the life that is in Him?

BRITISH RESPONSIBILITY FOR DRUNKENNESS IN INDIA.

We are glad to notice that an official contradiction has at last been given to Archdeacon Farrar's accusation against the government of India that it had always been the effort of those in authority to spread drunkennesss far and wide among the natives in order to add to the Government Revenue of that land. This has been generally asserted without contradiction till at last people have begun to believe that the Indian authorities are monsters of wickedness and cruelty. All this has now to be given up, and more just ideas must be entertained since the publication of an important Blue Book entitled "Dispatches from the Government of India dated June 25, 1887, relating to the system of licenses for the distillation and sale of spirituous liquors in force in the various Provinces of India." This document, it seems, was signed by Lord Dufferin, the Viceroy, by Sir F. S. Roberts, the Commander-in-Chief, and by five other members of the Supreme Council, a soldier, a barrister and three members of the covenanted Civil Services of the different Presidencies. The eight Provinces into which British India is divided each made its own report. The result of the whole is that Archdeacon Farrar's statements are completely contradicted; and that so far from the Indian Government's action tending to increase native drunkenness, they have consistently set their faces against it, and done their best to prevent the growth of intemperance among our native fellow-subjects. Before the government of the country fell into British hands, there was no limit assigned to the manufacture of intoxicating liquors. As soon as the British assumed charge of the Government their first anxiety was whether they should continue to allow free trade in intoxicants, or endeavour to restrain it. "As a matter of fact India is a country which naturally abounds in the materials for making intoxicating liquors and drugs, such as sugar, barley, rice, hemp, poppy, the leaf of the Bassia Latifolia, the palm tree," etc.

Digitized by Google

The manufacture is very simple, and prior to British supremacy quite uncontrolled. What was the result? "Those tribes and races which have been least accessible to British rule are to-day most given to intoxicating drinks and drugs." Drunkenness among the natives is not a thing of to-day. It existed before the British became the rulers of the land, just as the African races are now drunken and given to intoxicants before our rule has reached them. It is true that the sacred books of the Hindus and Mahommedans strictly prohibit the use of strong drink. So do the British Scriptures, but that does not prove that there is no drunkenness amongst us? It proves that the vice existed before the interdiction became necessary. The statutory prohibition shows that the mischief was there, and required repression. The Indian Governments have one and all striven to check intoxication among the people, and have succeeded, by heavy taxation on the liqour, in eradicating the sale of "unwholesome and maddening drinks:" allowing the sale of what is wholesome, though burdened by heavy taxes, to continue. In regard to the quantity consumed under what is alleged by Archdeacon Farrar to be the fostering care of the Indian Government, it appears that "the taxable spirit drunk in the whole of India amounts to one and a half bottles per head of the population, per annum." As this includes the Europeans who, as individuals, consume the largest amounts comparatively, the quantity does not appear to be unduly large as regards the natives. The charge brought that the British found India sober, and made it drunken, is entirely upset by the Blue Book in question, and ought to lead Archdeacon Farrar and those who follow him to retract their heavy accusations against a noble government in the Heathen Empire of Queen Victoria. It is quite true that Europeans in India have often set the natives a bad example in respect to sobriety and temperance. Yet the conduct of individuals is one thing, but the attitude of a government on whom the eyes of the world are fixed, is quite another; and the Government of India is entitled to praise, but not blame, in regard to the matter at issue. We are anxious that the truth should be realised in this matter by our readers, because Israel is represented in the Scriptures to be "a righteous nation," "sons of the living God," blessed with the presence of the Spirit of God and of the Son of God Himself, being "Jehovah-Jesus," and we cannot think those facts can be consistent with a policy such as that described by Archdeacon Farrar in reference to the treatment of the natives by the rulers of India. The Government there has manifestly the blessing of God, and our righteous rule in Hindostan is so proverbial that the report of it goes far and wide throughout Asia, Africa, and the East, leading the native races everywhere on both Continents to desire to experience it themselves. This could not be if the Indian Government were systematically striving to degrade and ruin the inhabitants of India by strong drink, in order thereby to raise the revenue and replenish an exhausted Exchequer. That were not "to rule righteously" or to show an example of good government which the nations of the world would desire for themselves! Yet the testimony from all parts of Africa and the East, where the British Flag is not flying, is, "when are the English coming?" Note the silent testimony of Egypt recorded in the Times of Sep. 22nd and 23rd, in regard to the increase of postal communication and therefore the growth of wealth and trade. "After deductions for the military post bag, the correspondence since 1880 between Egypt and foreign lands has increased 87 per cent! The rise tells of augmented commerce with the outside world." The home correspondence of Egypt tells the same tale. Though the charge for postage is almost prohibitive, viz., 2½d a letter, the number carried in 1886 was 3,283,000 against 2,250,000 in 1880. The nett profit of the Egyptian post office in 1886 was £23,379, against only £10,691 in 1880. There is plenty of life and animation in Egypt under the British protectorate, and this certainly betokens good government, like India's, and serves to spread the fame throughout the East of the British Râj. May that fame increase perpetually to God's glory!

"ISRAEL BLOSSOMS AND BUDS AND FILLS THE FACE OF THE WORLD WITH FRUIT."

THE GREAT TANK REGION OF CEYLON.—The United States Consul in Colombo, in the course of a report on the condition of Ceylon, refers to the vast irrigation works in progress during the administrations of Sir James Longden and Sir Arthur Gordon. The ancient and elaborate system of tanks for irrigation had fallen into decay, "and their very neighbourhoods, once the homes of vast populations, the sites of grand cities, the seats of art and science, and the scene of a prosperous agriculture, had become, from abandonment and the naturally rapid progress of tropical growth on the one hand and decay on the other, comparatively uninhabited and pestilential localities." The policy of the two governors already mentioned has been to restore these great works so that the tanks and canals may retain and distribute water sufficient to irrigate the many thousand acres of rich park-like land in the districts of Nuwara, Kalawiya, and Tamankanda. This wise and humane scheme, says Mr. Morey, has been opposed by the mass of Englishmen in Ceylon; but this broad statement would appear to require some modification, for one of the oldest and best-known residents of Ceylon, the editor of the leading paper in the colony, Mr. A. M. Fergusson, on two prominent occasions lately described the policy of repairing and restoring the ancient Singhalese irrigation system in terms quite as warm as those employed by Mr. Morey himself, and probably with a much more intimate knowledge of the facts. Mr. Morey goes on:—"Probably the ultimate result of the re-opening of this beautiful and historic locality will prove the crowning glory of Britain's—upon the whole—beneficent rule in Ceylon; and it may one day be the boast and pride of her sons that a region found desolate by them . . . was restored to something like its former grandeur and usefulness." Already abundance begins to prevail where 12 years ago the greatest scarcity existed, and population is being rapidly drawn towards these once neglected districts. Paddy (unhulled rice), the favourite food of all Eastern people, which was hardly to be got there prior to 1880, is now so abundant that it may be purchased at Anuradapura, in crop time, for 5d. per bushel, while it sells at Colombo for never less than 1s. 8d., and generally for 2s. per bushel—a difference due to the cost of transport.

We take the above from the Times, of Jan. 9, 1888, as a good specimen of Israel's beneficent work in one of the countries God has committed to her charge. The human benefactors He has used in respect to Ceylon are Sir James Longden and Sir Arthur Gordon, the British Governors of the island. In India there have been many wise and renowned men who have proved blessings to the land. General Sir Arthur Cotton, of the Madras Royal Engineers (now retired) is one such. Within our own recollection he was the means in God's hands of doing for the Kristna and Godaveri districts of the Madras Presidency a work similar to that being effected in the Tank Districts of Ceylon. Sir Arthur's work has, however, been somewhat different in kind to that being carried out in the great Indian island. He conceived the idea of throwing a weir or dam, four miles wide, right across the mighty river Godaveri, at Dowlaishweram, in the Rajamundri District, and so storing an immense body of fresh water, 4 miles wide, by 13 to 16 feet deep, all through the long and parched-up months of the Indian hot season. This water so retained behind the weir, and suffered no longer to run away to waste into the sea, he has tapped by navigable canals of fresh water 50 and 100 miles long, and thus brought the blessing of cultivation and plenty to hundreds of thousands of Telugu Ryots, and raised the condition of vast numbers of our fellow-subjects who once were exposed to awful famines, but now are for ever freed from even the fear of such a dire calamity. The example of Sir Arthur Cotton set at the river Godaveri has now been followed at the equally grand river Kristna, and at other rivers which used to run to waste on the Coromandel Coast of Hindostan, but now, like the Cauvery River in South India, are detained to irrigate the soil, to bless the people, and to give cause to unborn generations in the future to bless God for British rule, which not only has covered India with 13,000 miles of railway (soon to become 20,000 miles), but has mitigated famines and made them impossible, save in those disastrous times when the South-west Monsoons have utterly failed for a succession of years.

Digitized by Google

General Sir Henry Ramsay, of the Bengal Army, lately Commissioner in Kumaon, in the North-west provinces, is another Anglo-Israelite benefactor of the native races under his jurisdiction. He has converted the utterly waste and barren tracts, called the Bhubur, lying between the deadly Terai and the plains, into smiling garden lands, by conducting the previously wasted waters of the mountain slopes into numberless trout streams (for such is their aspect), producing fertility wherever their waters flow, and sugar cane, Indian corn, dhall, and other Indian grain everywhere, transforming the immemorial wastes, over hundreds of square miles, into gardens, blossoming as the rose, and fruitful as the garden of Eden.

We have lately shown (p. 72) how Egypt is dealt with by our race, and the instrumentality of water, the emblem of God's Holy Spirit, is used there to benefit and bless parched-up sandy Egypt, by bringing on it the fertilising waters of the Nile. Sir Colin Scott Moncrieff, R.E., an Indian officer, has done wonders for the land of Egypt, with meagre means indeed; but it is his proud boast that there is not a district in any province of Egypt, from Esneh to the sea, in which some improvement has not been introduced to the irrigation or the drainage. Other departments at work are gradually abolishing extortion and corruption, which have been the curses of the land. So we might go on till we had traversed the whole world, and shown that not only in India and Ceylon, but in Egypt, South America, Canada, Australia, the Fiji Islands, and the Cape Colonies, too, Israel has been labouring, "blossoming and budding and filling the face of the world with fruit." God's promises, however, were only to one race, and that race Israel, the House of Ephraim, who are our modern British. They only were to bless and benefit the whole world, and the one people we find so engaged to-day are our own most favoured race, the Anglo-Saxon British. Nor is this supremacy confined to secular benefits and blessings. British-Israel is distinguished among the nations for international beneficence and temporal gifts. But she does more than this. She dispenses spiritual help to all the nations, to all the families, and to all the kindreds of the earth. She sends the Gospel by an army of her missionaries, male and female, European and native, to the whole world. She aims at the conversion of the whole of its inhabitants, and is grievously disappointed when she finds her efforts result in the Christianisation of only the few. Her Bibles are taken by her British and Foreign Bible Society "to all the people that on earth do dwell," and her ambition is to present a copy to every man and woman on the face of the globe. Her tracts and religious publications are circulated by millions, ostensibly that all who have eyes to see may read, and all who have ears to hear may listen to their glorious Gospel message. However we may regard the British folk, on one point there can be no mistake. While she is the most numerous people on the face of the earth—multiplying faster than any; she is the richest, and the one that uses her riches the best for the glory of God. "She blossoms and buds and fills the face of the world with fruit;" and as that work can only be done by Israel, the people of God's appointment, we are tied up to the conclusion that the British Anglo-Saxons must be they, as He is true! And, therefore, let Israel praise the Lord!

EPHRAIM—THE SILLY DOVE. (Hosea vii. 11).

(A Lecture—Condensed.)

By John T. Gott.

From the earliest times, the dove seems to have been the special favourite of the human race. Its beautiful appearance, gentle nature and cleanly habits, have made it a universal friend and companion. Just as man, in the early ages, selected from the birds of the air, the sweetest, prettiest, and most harmless of all, to be an object of special care and thought, so God chose Abraham from among all the families of the earth, to be "His Friend."

The world has produced vulture-like men, and dove-like men: Napoleons and Howards. Abraham was a dove-like man. He was as striking in his personnel as the dove. So calm, reverend and dignified was his demeanour, that the children of Heth said unto him, "Thou art a mighty prince of God among us" (Gen. xxiii. 6). From his history, we may learn that he was equally as gentle as the dove, as simple, as confiding, and as timid. God chose Abraham, and promised to raise up from his seed a people who should be His "special," "peculiar" and "chosen" people. In the course of time the promise was fulfilled, and Abraham's seed became a great nation. Then we find this nation divided into two factions—the smaller known as Judah, or the Jews; the larger as Ephraim, or the Ten Tribes of Israel. The prophet Hosea was one of two* who most certainly belonged to the Ten Tribes, and his predictions were specially concerning them. He says, "Ephraim is like a silly dove, without heart." The dove is proverbial for its simplicity. It is silly, i.e., open, simple, easily deceived and easily persuaded to good or bad. Also, the dove is "without heart," i.e., without understanding. Let us consider how far history and the Scripture of Truth agree. The prophet says, "They call to Egypt, they go to Assyria" (Ib. v. 11). Nowhere in the Bible is the House of Judah represented as a dove. The term is applied solely to the Ten Tribes. The Jews never went to Assyria, but Ephraim-Israel did, and their call to Egypt for help, is a terse, prophetical piece of history. The prophet refers to the reign of Hoshea, against whom came Shalmaneser, king of Assyria, to whom the king of Israel rendered tribute. But the Bible record says that the king of Assyria found conspiracy in Hoshea, for he had sent messengers to So, the king of Egypt, and brought no present to the king of Assyria, as he had done year by year. History proclaims this to be truth. Hoshea, king of Israel, of the Ten Tribes, formed an alliance with So, or Sobacho II., king of Egypt. Then came the king of Assyria up to Samaria, and carried Israel away into captivity (2 Kings xvii. 1—7). Herein Ephraim acted the part of a "silly dove." "They call to Egypt, they go to Assyria. When they shall go, I will spread My net upon them, I will bring them down as the fowls of heaven. I will chastise them as their congregation hath heard" (v. 12).

The dove displays its silliness by fleeing in alarm from its (* Jonah was the other. These tribes produced also Elijah and Elisha Dr. Payne Smyth).

Digitized by Google

nest. The Ten Tribes were warned by the prophets that foreign alliances would be a snare unto them. They sought to ally themselves with So, and were snared in the Assyrian net. The prophet follows up, by predicting a terrible time of trouble for them. "Woe unto them, for they have fled from Me." The dove is safe only by keeping to her nest. Ephraim was safe as long as he remained in God's appointed rest for him, the land of Promise. The silly dove, frightened out of its nest, flies into greater evils and dangers. Ephraim-Israel, frightened from his home, fled into equally as great trouble and disaster. "Destruction unto them, because they have transgressed against Me" (v. 13). Destruction here does not mean annihilation, because throughout the prophetical books we read that a remnant of the Ten Tribes was ever to be preserved.

Again, the dove is too silly to defend itself! Most creatures stand by their offspring and defend them to the utmost; but it is said of the doves, that they care little about them, and allow them to be captured without resistance. It is too silly to feel its loss. The dove will lose its nest, and not feel it. The trees of the forest are as attractive to it, without its nest, as with it. And it is too silly to escape danger. Of all birds, it seems to be the dullest, and never seems to know when it is in danger. As the wise man said, "It hasteneth to the snare, and knoweth not it is for her life." It has not courage to stay in the dove-house when frightened. There it is safe, but it flutters and hovers about, seeking rest first in one place, and then in another, and ever exposing itself to new and greater dangers.

How true is all this when viewed in reference to the entrapment and abasement of Ephraim-Israel. The silliness of Ephraim was the silliness of sin. Jeroboam, the first king over the Ten Tribes, was the man who made Israel to sin. The record of their national history in the Holy Land is the most lamentable extant, and their punishment was one of retribution. Ephraim's sin lay in looking to Egypt for help, instead of to the Lord their God who had borne so long and patiently with them. And Ephraim's silliness lay in not being able to see that the Assyrian bird-catcher was on the alert. Doves frequent the valleys, but when in fear of the bird-catcher, they flee to the mountains and the clefts of the rocks. The prophet Ezekiel, speaking of the captivity of the Ten Tribes, says, "They that escape of them shall escape, and shall be on the mountains, like doves of the valleys, all of them mourning, every one for his iniquity" (vii. 16). Thus was Israel snared and caged. The Arabs call the dove the daughter of mourning, because it utters a very plaintive note. Fausset brings this idea forward very forcibly in his comment on this passage. "So Israel, once dwelling in his peaceful valleys, shall flee from the fce to the mountains, which, as being the scene of his idolatries, were justly to be made the scene of his flight and shame." The plaintive note of the dove is symbolical of softened penitents. This was the condition of Ephraim-Israel, mourning in Assyrian captivity for a period of nearly one hundred years. Then a mighty foe came up against Assyria, and conquered it. Dean Stanley says, "The Assyrian Empire suddenly vanished from the earth." In the confusion, the cage was burst open, and Ephraim, the silly dove, escaped. With the disappearance of the Assyrian Empire, also disappeared from the ken of man, the captive tribes of Israel. Then was fulfilled the prediction of Hosea:—"They shall be as the morning cloud, and as the early dew that passeth away; as the chaff that is driven with the whirlwind out of the floor, and the smoke out of the chimney" (xiii. 3). The spoiler that came up against Assyria came from the East, and Ephraim the silly dove fled to the west, to the north, to the Isles of the sea, the place God had appointed for them in which to rest, dwell safely, and renew their strength.

* * * * * *

The dove is migratory. This was to be a characteristic of God's chosen people, of whom it is predicted that they should spread abroad and inherit the desolate heritages (Isa. xlix. 8). When Ephraim-Israel escaped out of Assyria, they would doubtless go in flocks or tribes. We are plainly taught that there shall ever be a literal remnant of Israel, though they may not be known or recognised. The remnant was the portion who were the worshippers of the true God. Hence wherever they wandered they would be "light-bearers," carrying with them the knowledge of Jehovah. It is not difficult to apprehend this. Gideon raised an army of 32,000 men. The Divine muster-roll numbered 300, all the men who had not bowed the knee to Baal (Judges vii.). The prophet Elijah had the boldness to declare before the hosts of Israel, on Mount Carmel, and in the presence of Ahab and the priests of Baal, that he alone remained a prophet of the Lord. But even he did not know that there were 7,000 in Israel as worthy as he: "All the knees which have not bowed to Baal, and every mouth which hath not kissed him." These were the men who preserved the worship of the true God, and wherever the idolatrous tribes of Israel wandered, those light-bearers were among them, whether they were regarded or not. The world has ever had men who have kept the truth, fought for it, and died for it. These men were men of Israel, whether you can trace their genealogy or not, for to the chosen people only were the oracles of God committed for safe keeping. Thus Isaiah speaks of the righteous nation (only one) that "keepeth the truth," and our Saviour, when reproving the Jews for their unbelief, said, "The kingdom of God shall be taken from you (Jews) and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof." Identify such a nation to-day, and you have the modern representative of the Lost Ten Tribes.

* * * * * *

It may be profitable to take a brief survey of those twinkling lights that lightened up the abiding gloom of heathen times. About the year 400, a captive youth named Succat, is said to have evangelised Ireland. This was no other than the celebrated St. Patrick, a true Christian. Two centuries later, there arose in Ireland a pious man of royal blood, named Columba. He set out, with twelve companions, on a missionary tour to Scotland. They landed in Iona, and there Columba established, on the old Bible principles, a school of the prophets, and Iona became known as the "Missionary isle," "The light of the Western world." "Precious manuscripts were conveyed to Iona: the Word of God was studied there, and many received, through faith, the salvation which is in Christ Jesus." "Iona and Bangor," says D'Aubigné, 'possessed a more lively faith than Rome, the city of the Cæsars: and Britain in the sixth century was faithful in planting the standard of Christ in the heart of Europe." Is it only a coincidence, that this man, by whose piety, labour, and influence, Christianity was so firmly established in Britain and felt in Europe, should bear the strange name Columba, the Latin name for a dove? Remember whither Ephraim, the silly dove was to flee—to the west, to the north, to the isles of the sea, and say if history demonstrates the British people to be a nation keeping the truth. The earliest translation of the New Testament into the language of the common people, was made by the Venerable Bede. Alfred the Great was not only a Christian, and a king, but a translator of the Scriptures. Through that long period, known as the "dark ages," we catch glimpses of light here and there. "From Iona, the beacon-light of true Christianity passed into Scotland, and then into England. There it was caught up by Alfred the Great, ably assisted by Asser, a man of piety, and the first scholar in Wales. Thus the light passed on to Europe, kept alive by such men as Charlemagne, the poor men of Lyons, the weavers of France, and the Waldenses of the Vaudois valleys." Thus Iona became a missionary centre, and from "this nest of Columba," these sacred doves winged their way to all quarters, bearing with them learning and true religion, and "seem to have done much towards the revival of both, when at the lowest ebb" (Vide "The Book and its Story"). National and world-renowned facts proclaim to-day that the British people are still the leading Protestant or witnessing people: that their land is still the centre of all great missionary enterprise: that they are enacting the rôle of the Sower in the Parable, and sowing the "seed," which is the "Word of God," the wide world over, to the tune of a million copies a year. Thus this nation is "keeping the truth," and is the modern representative of that rebellious son (Ephraim) of the parable, who flatly refused to go and work in his father's vineyard (the world), but who afterwards repented and went.

811960

Digitized by Google

* * * * * *

"Though ye have lien among the pots, yet shall ye be as the wings of a dove covered with silver, and her feathers with yellow gold" (Ps. lxviii. 13). The dove lying among the pots (or caldrons, which are set over the fire), and blackened beyond all recognition by soot and smoke, is an image used to express Ephraim's degradation, while the promise, "yet shall ye be as the wings," etc., symbolises her restoration—the silly dove is to be cleansed, and eventually recognised. "The dove is a beautiful bird. Its golden appearance, and silver wings, depict its appearance just as the sunshine is seen to fall upon it during flight." The national cleansing of Ephraim-Israel began at the Reformation; their recognition by all peoples of the earth will be made manifest when the rays of the Sun of Righteousness * are shed abroad.

* * * * * *

The dove is migratory in its character, and is known to wander far away from its home. How applicable this is to Ephraim-Israel, who in their outcast condition became wanderers, until they, under Divine guidance, reached the place appointed for them to "rest," and "renew their strength." After this had been accomplished, the doves of Ephraim found their nest too small for them, and again their migratory instincts † are observable, in the flocks ‡ that flit away year by year to other nests § prepared for them.

* * * * * *

It is utterly impossible for the dove to cast off, entirely, the instinct of fear natural to it. Fear is contagious in the human family. Numerous illustrations may be found in the history of the Israelites, of the whole camp being affected. The Egyptions experienced this fear when they cried out, "We be all dead men." The prophets declare that there are still times of trembling in store for the timid doves of Ephraim. But those who will, may hear and understand the bugle-note of prophecy. "Fear not, thou worm Jacob, and ye (few) men of Israel. Fear thou not; for I am with thee: be not dismayed: for I am thy God" (Isa. xli.).

We are face to face with the much dreaded European Earthquake woe. And the men of Israel-Britain are few in number in comparison with the millions of armed men in Europe, who, in a few weeks, could be placed in battle array. Remembering that "The thing that hath been, it is that which shall be, and that which is done, is that which shall be done: and there is no new thing under the sun" (Ecc. i. 9), we naturally look back in the world's history for some similar period. We find it in the flood. Noah made long and careful preparation for the salvation of his own house, and was divinely guided in the work. He spent his time in forecasting the coming woe, but none seemed to heed, save those of his own household. There were clever cynics in the world then, who knew everything, and yet knew nothing respecting the most important matters of life and time: their descendants are well represented to-day.

Noah's ark was made of gopher wood, which is indestructible. The kingdom of God, the stone kingdom, predicted by the prophet Daniel, is to be indestructible, an everlasting kingdom. This kingdom was to be set up by Israel, and is represented in these latter days by Israel-Britain. Noah was to make rooms in his ark of salvation, and in this stone kingdom, the God of Israel has led His "blind people" to establish them, for they have rooms, or chambers, or colonies, the world over. It was to be an ark of salvation for birds and beasts, clean and unclean. So the poor slave, the wandering, persecuted Jew, dethroned monarchs and exiled Queens, seek rest and refuge in Israel-Britain's chambers or colonies. Of the many rooms in Noah's ark of salvation, Scripture mentions but one door: "and the Lord shut him in" (Gen. vii. 16). A most important door: one that Noah, with all his knowledge did not know how to bar securely against the coming storm: so the Lord God "shut him in." Noah had done all he could. The last act was God's work.

If our readers will reflect, they will notice that Israel-Britain is doing nationally precisely what Noah did individually, viz., gathering in, or rather, keeping a door open for all who need shelter and refuge: and preparing (i.e., safe-guarding) all her rooms, or colonies. The door is the last consideration. Some time ago, it seemed as if this latter-day woe was about to burst forth, and Israel-Britain's fleet went up to shut the door of the Golden Gate—Constantinople. That was a God-given sign to a sceptical, cynical world of unbelievers. The time had not come, for the "chambers," "rooms," or "colonies" were not complete. The same thing will be done again, and it will then be seen that the acquisition of the Gate to the promised land has not been acquired by "might or strength," but that it will be the acme of the "marvellous work" Jehovah has accomplished in the midst of His "blind people." Closely allied with this time of fear and trembling, are given comforting words of advice and consolation, to the timid doves of Ephraim:—"Come, My people, enter thou into thy chambers, and shut thy doors about thee: hide thyself as it were for a little moment, until the indignation be overpast. For behold, the Lord cometh out of His place to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity," etc. (Isa. xxvi. 20, 21). The great question of the century, Who is to have the Gate of the World's Empire? will be settled on that day when the artillery of heaven * (Is. xlii. 13) and earth shall burst forth, while the timid doves of Ephraim are safely shielded and guarded in their nests of Divine construction.

* * * * * *

A time of blessing followed the flood: "God blessed Noah and his sons" (Gen. ix. 1), and made a new "covenant" with him (Ib. v. 9). So, after this terrible European Earthquake woe, which men dread to think about, the ultimate effects of which they cannot realise, God has promised to bless His people Israel (All-Israel), and to establish with them an "everlasting covenant of peace" (Jer. xxxi. 31—34). There is every reason for us to watch, carefully and vigilantly, the signs of the times, and to eschew those who cry, Peace! Peace! when there is no peace.

* * * * * *

It should be observed, that when Noah was "shut in," he was utterly oblivious of what was going on in the world. So we opine, will it be with Israel-Britain when this European war breaks out. The artillery of heaven and earth, combined, will be of such a devastating character, that telegraphic and railway communication will become a sheer impossibility, and Israel-Britain and her many colonies may remain, for many days, in utter ignorance of the stupendous results of this tremendous war.

* * * * * *

"Who are these that fly as a cloud, and as the doves to their windows" (Isa. lx. 8). What a beautiful view of restoration times! First comes the "light" of the Sun of Righteousness,

* The outpouring of the Holy Spirit.
† Emigration. ‡ British People. § Our Colonies.

* "The Lord shall go forth as a mighty man, He shall stir up jealousy like a man of war; He shall cry, yea, roar."

Digitized by Google

dispersing the black clouds of ignorance and unbelief, and then the manifestation of God's chosen people, Lost Israel. They come as a cloud, with the glory of God shining on them. All the blessings of the "New Covenant" will then be showered upon the chosen people (Ib.).

* * * * * *

You ask, what about the Jews? They will be gathered in, for it is written, "The House of Judah shall walk (not run) to the House of Israel," etc. That they have been doing now for a considerable time.

* * * * * *

Thus we may learn the value of prophetic utterances. In one brief sentence:—"Ephraim is like a silly dove, without heart," the prophet Hosea has embodied the entire history of God's long lost, chosen people, the Ten Tribes of Israel.

MORE EVIDENCE CONNECTING THE ANCIENT INHABITANTS OF IRELAND WITH THE PHŒNICIANS AND HEBREWS.

By Joseph Thomson.

PART VII.

(Continued from page 472, Vol. xi.)

XIV.—THE VENICINII.

Coterminous with the Erdinii were the Venicinii, or Benicinii, noticed by Ptolemy, on the promontory of Venicnium on the Western coast of County Donegal—the Ergal of the ancients. Some think they derived their name from that of the promontory, which Camden thinks signifies ram's head; Venictium being degenerated from Vendne-cniu (according to Baxter), which in the old dialect of the Brigantes means the head of a young ram; cniu, to a British ear conveying the idea of the young of almost any animal, in the plural number.

But it is more probable that they did not take their name from the promontory, but that the promontory was so called from them: as Cape Finisterre on the Cantabrian coast was called Scythic and Celtic from those respective nations; and that which the Arabians in after times called Taraf-al-garr, i.e., a perilous extremity or point (whence Trafalgar), was called by the Greeks, the promontory of Juno, their favourite deity; and as Cabo de Gata was called by the Phœnician settlers on the Mediterranean coast of Spain, the Cape of Gora; gor in the Syriac meaning a foreigner or stranger living in another place than that where he was born, i.e., a sojourner; whence the Greek georos, a neighbour, a tiller.

The Venicinii, or Benicnii, Dr. Villanueva says, appear to have been a Phœnician tribe, and to have got their name from kini, which imports of a Cinnæan stock, or from the land of Canaan: benikini implying a tribe from such a stock. An additional motive for this name may have been suggested by their frankness, and the purity of their moral character; for in this language, beni-enin means upright and righteous dwellers, whether of town or country, from kian, or kina, i.e., just and true; in which sense it is used in the Syriac of St. Matthew's gospel,—"And Joseph, her husband, was (kina) a just man." (i. 19). Beni is a term meaning sons, and also the residents of any particular place, which by a very natural accommodation, may be considered as their mother, they being there born or educated. In Ezek. xvi. 28 the Assyrians are called beni, or the sons of Assur; and in Jer ii. 10, the Memphians are called Veni, or the sons of Noph. The word is also referred to the condition or morals of the persons alluded to, as in Acts iii. 25, the Israelites, with whom God had made a covenant by the seed of circumcision, are called the sons of the prophets and of the testament (or covenant); while in other passages throughout the sacred volume and elsewhere, the wicked are designated as the sons of wickedness; the unjust, as the sons of injustice; and warriors, sons of strength, or hearts of oak.

XV.—THE CAUCII.

Ptolemy mentions another ancient people of Ireland, the Caucii, and whom he places east of Cape Robogdium; though Cirencester places them in the County Dublin between the Liffey and the northern parts of County Wicklow. Others say they settled in the mountainous districts between the rivers Barrow and Nore, in the old Irish called Hy-Breoghain Gabhran, i.e., an elevated country between forks.

Among the ancient Germans there were two distinct people of this name, distinguished as the greater and the lesser; the former, Ptolemy says, inhabited the country between the Elbe and the Wesser; the latter from the Wesser to the Emse. The ancient Spaniards also had their Caucii, in the district of the Vaccei, whose chief city was Cauca, and by Antoninus placed as sixteen days' journey, or on the sixteenth station on the road from Emerita to Cæsar Augusta.

Some think the Caucii were so called from their great stature; cauc in the old British, coc in the Brigantine, and hauch or hoch, in the German, all meaning lofty, or high. Hence, Baxter conjectures, was borrowed the inscription found among the ancient Cumbri (the Ceangi of the Brigantes), "To the god Cocis," and which is supposed to have relation to the fulfilment of a vow to the genius of the river Coque in the country of the Otonidæ.

But it is possible that these Caucii may have been Celts, cau in their language meaning a river. Vallancey says, "the name of geilt, ceilt, or keilt, signifies terror—a wild man, or woman; a sylvestrous person; and hence the name, Celt." But Dr. Villanueva does not agree with this, as he thinks it more likely that they were one of the Phœnician tribes who had landed in Ireland from Spain, and whose name, like that of the Spanish city Cauca, was borrowed from the temperature of the climate in which they had settled: "cauzz," or "coz," in the Phœnician signifying the summer season; cauzzi a summer residence; and with this corresponds cauc, or coc, old age, infirmity, or a country adapted by its climate to renovate the energies, or, at least allay the irritation of the aged and enfeebled.

XVI.—THE MANAPII.

The Manapii, or Menapii were also an ancient people of Ireland, on its eastern coast, a portion of the Brigantes Coriondi, in the city of Manapia or Waterford, as Camden and Baxter think. Others make them the inhabitants of the county Wicklow, the chief town of which, the Enobenum of Probus they assert was the ancient Manapia. They further state that they had settled between the mountains and the sea, in that district now called Coulan, Cuolan, or Ciroch-Cuolan, which means, says Seward, a close and confined tract; others a corn country. Another derivation of the name is from the old British words, Mene-ui-pou, i.e., a narrow region, corresponding with Coulan just noticed. Others think they took their name from the city Manapia, which they get from the British words Mant-ab, i.e., the mouth of the water.

Dr. Villanueva however thinks that their name sounds the certainty of their Phœnician descent. At first he thought it was from Mana-pip, i.e., a double portion or part of some tribe or nation: but from the Syriac custom of naming themselves from their idols, or their worship of them, he was afterwards more disposed to think they were so called from Mani-apiin, i.e., adorning with branches or flowers a multitude of idols; or, singly, that of Mercury, which Mani also signifies, and which the Phœnicians worshipped as the god of calculation.

That this custom prevailed also among the ancient Greeks and Romans, there is abundant evidence in the names of places in Spain: thus from Afrodite, the Greek name for Venus, and Afrodisios, i.e., belonging to Venus, the name of Afrodisia was given to the ancient city of Gades in Bœtica, which was adjacent to the site of the modern city of Cadiz. From her also the Romans gave the name of Portus Veneris, i.e., the harbour of Venus, to that maritime city of the Ilergetes, which has been corrupted to Porvendres. From Artemiis, i.e., Diana, the Greeks gave the name of Artemisian, i.e., temple of Diana to that city of the Contestani which the Romans afterwards adapted to their own language as Dianium; now degenerated to Denia.

Digitized by Google

The Monapia of Pliny, called Menavia by Orosius, to Dr. Villanueva seemed to have been inhabited by the people called Manapii; i.e., the island in the Irish sea called by Ptolemy, Monæoida—now the Isle of Man. This, and another island lying more to the south, in the bay of the Ordovices, from whom it is separated only by a narrow strait, were both designated by the appellation Monœ. This more southern one was inhabited by a hardy population who strengthened themselves by affording an asylum to all deserters, without regarding the cause. After its capture by the Angli, it was named Anglesey i.e., the isle of the Angli, or English. Mona is a word expressive of Phœnician superstition, from mon, an idol or image, Moneoida is compounded of mon, and oid, a festival, i.e., a festival held in honour of an idol. Monoceda of mon, and chedad, i.e., bent or stooping, the attitude of reverence. Evolenum, which is supposed to have been the city of Menapia, Dr. Villanueva derives from hebelin, i.e., idols: and Coulan, from coulin, i.e., sounds, thunders; elsewhere called Beth-col, i.e., the daughter of a voice, meaning not a real, or solid voice, but the echo thereof, more particularly the representation of the reverberated voice in the heathen oracles.

XVII.—THE AUTERI.

The Auteri, by some said to be the real native ancient Irish, were situate at the mouth of the river Erin, in the extremity of Munster. Ptolemy calls them Auteiroi, and Auteroi, and places them in certain parts then known by the name of Naquatia or Connatia. Others think they inhabited the districts corresponding with the modern counties of Galway, Mayo, and Roscommon, being that old and extensive tract often called Muriah, or Hy-Moruisge, which they interpret as the region of sea-water, and which is still preserved in Morisk, the name of a barony and of a little town in Mayo; and in Murrach a village in the barony of Carbery, in the county Cork. Muriahh seems naturally derived from the Phœnician Moriaga, i.e., habitations or houses arranged in order; probably from this is the Irish word, Murighin, i.e., families, and the Spanish Amoraga, a gentile (!) appellative.

Baxter thinks that the Auteri were so called by the Brygantes after they and the Belgæ had occupied the greater part of Ireland, that they were the Eregenæ, or real offspring of the Irish soil, and that they were driven at first by the Brygantes from Britain, who eventually followed them up, and made them take shelter in its remotest extremity; and desirous of accounting for the origin of their name, adds, "Er in British is land, from the Greek era; from this the native Irish were named Erion, or Erii, by the Brygantes, and the island itself, Iris—i.e., the isle of the Erii, by the Greeks. And seeing that ot or aut, means to the Britons a coast or shore, what should hinder our considering aut erion being so called as the coast of the Erii, or the ancient autokthonos, or land of the natives." He also notices that the Cantabri, the Vascones, and the Irish in a great measure used the language of the aborigines, along with many terms from the Phœnician, Celtic, and Brygantine languages; and that this may be accounted for by the fact, which some assert, of the Frigones and Brygantes having had possession of Spain long before the days of the Punic wars. O'Flaherty, on the contrary, asserts that the name of Auteri was forcibly twisted out of the term, ath-en-ria, or ath-na-rig, i.e., the king's ford. But Ptolemy having said that Autera (an ancient city in Ireland) was the capital of the Auteri living there, many have been induced to interpret the word as meaning a village or state by the waters of the west, from the Celtic words aubh, or ailh, i.e., water, and eiregh, i.e., a western people: for the Auteri lived near the sea coast.

But Villanueva ventures to guess that the Auteri, or ancient Irish, were the primitive Phœnicians who discovered Ireland, and that they received their name from that spirit of enterprise which, as elsewhere, was here so signally rewarded; deriving it from thar, i.e., he explored; or from aatarin, adventurers, deserters, people departing—as they from Spain to settle here. It may also have borne reference to a number of families of this colony; for aatharin, in Syriac, denotes a great muster of nations, also the wealthy; and who can say but that thus they would indicate the treasures acquired from the mines of the country, or the exportation of its products to the most remote parts of the then known world? Or what if they chose this name from autereh, or aature, i.e., a crown? This was applied of old to Tyre, the capital of Phœnicia, as in Isa. xxiii. 8, "Tyre formerly crowned," (the crowning city, A.V., i.e., the chief city), as it may have been well called from the splendour of its buildings, the strength of its fortifications and abundant riches, "whose merchants were princes, and whose traffickers were the honourable (renowned) of the earth." With the Hebrews as also Syrians, autereh, or crown, was equivalent with honour or delight; as "the crown of old men," for their children's children; "the crown of glory in the hand of the Lord," etc., which perhaps originated the custom among some ancient states to wear a crown on either their head, neck, or right hand. That the Christians of the primitive ages wore crowns on their hands, is evident from Tertullian's book "on the soldier's crown."

These Auteri may have been a tribe of the Auterani, or Autetani of Spain, mentioned by Ptolemy, and now called the Ausetani. But to Dr. Villanueva it was "beyond question that the Spanish Autrigones, who had settled adjacent to the Cantabri and the Barduli, were a part and parcel of the same Phœnician colony; for the name Autrigones, is obviously perverted from Auterigones, including in its formation the two Phœnician terms Autereh-goin, i.e., crowned nations; or atharin-goin, i.e., exploring nations—goin in the Syriac, as goim in the Hebrew, meaning tribes, families, or nations."

(To be continued).

"OVERCROWDED LONDON."

"NINETEENTH CENTURY" gives us the following details respecting the overcrowding of London, which must prove interesting to all BANNER readers:—

The population of Great Britain is, at the present moment, being added to at the rate of at least 1,000 persons a day, or, in the words of the Registrar-General, "it receives, every ten years, an accession equal to the whole population of London." In connection with this enormous growth, two points deserve to be noted. The disproportion of the sexes, in itself a serious evil, is slowly but steadily increasing. The distribution of the population is undergoing a sensible change. The towns (except where some special cause is at work) are everywhere growing. The rural population is either standing still or actually diminishing. The metropolis alone receives every week an addition of more than 1,000 persons, and the cry is, "Still they come!" In the case of London and of other large cities the "natural increment" is swelled by the crowds who pour into them from every part of the world. Most of these immigrants are unskilled workpeople, or bring what craft they possess to an enormously overstocked market. It does not require the harrowing realism of Mr. George Sims or the picturesque pen of Mr. Walter Besant to prove that where, as in the East-end of London, the supply of workers is constantly overtaking the supply of work, wages will be driven down to starvation point. When we hear of women working all day and half the night in order to earn 3d. or 4d. by making a pair of trousers, and second, by making a pair of full-sized sheets and having to find the "extras" for themselves—when we are told that a 1d. is considered a handsome remuneration for filling

Digitized by Google

144 boxes of lucifer matches—we are tempted to ask, Is this life? Is it the kind of existence into which any reasonable being would, if he or she were given any choice in the matter, desire to be born? Yet there are myriads of our countrymen and countrywomen whose only prospect of escape from such an existence is the workhouse or the grave. I am not speaking now of that destitution which springs from temporary depression of trade or of that which is perhaps inseparable from every state of human society, but that which is directly due to the fact that 50,000 persons are huddled together in a locality where there is not work or room for half that number.

So far the journalist. It is a fact which should be noted that Great Britain increases as to population at the rate of 1,000 souls per diem, and that London adds to itself 1,000 persons every week! In regard to London, we believe this computation to be quite under the mark, since the addition really is somewhere about 87,000 per annum! The fact is that matters are coming to a climax in regard to our country, and that some large and efficient remedy must soon be applied if we are to escape a terrible danger. Our rapidly-increasing people must be shifted from these islands where "the place has, indeed, become too strait for them," and men are again crying, "Give place to us that we may dwell!" (Isa. xlix. 20). Verily prophecy is being remarkably and literally fulfilled in our race, and it is quite true of us, as recorded in Isa. xlix. 19, that "the land of our destruction (or the land that hath been destroyed, R.V.), is too strait for the inhabitants, and they are crying out for fresh colonies and new localities, where at least they may be able to exist. This desire, we may be sure, will be fully satisfied. The blessing of great and extreme multitudinousness is one which God Himself has given to His people, as Isa. xlix. 20—22 testifies; and if at the present moment the gift is causing pain and sorrow to some sections of our people, we see that prophecy also confirms the fact, and shows that the distress to be experienced was part of the plan.

The cry is an exceeding bitter one. "The place is too strait for me; give place to me that I may dwell." But it is one which we hear to-day, and "Nineteenth Century" has given it publicity in the Press. But what was, and shall yet be, the answer of the Lord to His people's cry of distress? We have it stated in verses 22—26, R.V.: "Thus saith the Lord God, behold, I will lift up My hand to the nations, and set up My ensign to the peoples, and they shall bring thy sons in their bosom, and thy daughters shall be carried on their shoulders, and kings shall be thy nursing fathers, and their queens thy nursing mothers; they shall bow down to thee with their faces to the earth and lick the dust of thy feet, and thou shalt know that I am the Lord, and they that wait for me shall not be ashamed. . . . I will save thy children. . . and all flesh shall know that I the Lord am thy Saviour and thy Redeemer, the Mighty One of Jacob." The Lord thus promises Israel, the British, that their overcrowded places where the bitter cry is even now arising shall be relieved by the aid of the non-Israelite Gentile nations. They shall help Israel to domiciles in their territories, and their brawny arms shall assist the sons and daughters of God to break forth or spread abroad on the right hand and on the left, and so to inherit or possess the nations and make the desolate heritages to be inhabited (Isa. liv. 3, R.V.). New Colonies, perhaps in South and Central Africa, in South America, in fresh islands of the Sea, will be opened up for His peoples' reception and domicile according to the prophecies, and so the Lord will add to them power, and influence, and wealth, with the means as well of taking Christ and His Gospel, His Word and His Sabbaths, to fresh regions where these were never heard of before. The writer in the "Nineteenth Century," therefore, need be under no alarm. The trouble he foresees from Israel's abnormal increase of population has all been foreseen and provided for by their gracious God and Saviour, and out of this apparent evil and danger He means to bring safety, blessing, and wealth to His now suffering people and to the world at large as well.

SOME COMMON OBJECTIONS ANSWERED.

By Arthur B. Prowse, M.D., F.R.C.S.

The following is an abstract of a paper read at Clifton, Jan., 1888, by Arthur B. Prowse, M.D., F.R.C.S., which considered briefly some objections raised by a medical man, and by a Church of England minister, with whom he had been in correspondence on the Identity question. The former believes in a "Gentile Parenthesis"; especially following Mr. Pember's teaching in a book entitled "The Great Prophecies." It was shown how the author, by ignoring the existence of the Revised Version of the Bible, had fallen into a serious error with regard to the accounts, given in 1 Kings vi. and Acts xiii., of the interval of the time from the Exodus to the building of Solomon's temple. Upon a supposed (but non-existing) discrepancy he founds the idea of a "mystic chronology," which he says "unquestionably demonstrates" the occurrence of "parenthetical dispensations." Evidence was then quoted from many Scriptures in reference to Israel's privileges and functions during this dispensation; and some of Mr. Pember's other teachings were combated as being in opposition to the plain and literal teaching of God's Word.

With regard to the clerical opponent:—In March, 1885, his views were thus expressd—"As to the Anglo-Israel question I am as yet undecided. I see much in its favour, but also many difficulties. Why however any should oppose it as if it were a deadly heresy I cannot see." In January this year he says, "I am no nearer acceptance of this theory, and have no time to study it. Till you can show me that the prophecies about the whole seed of Abraham, prior to the division of the kingdoms, have a fulfilment in us, I cannot accept Identity:—e.g. how is the prediction in Deut. xxviii. 37, or that 'Lo, the people shall dwell alone,' &c., fulfilled in us?" The reply to this was (with slight verbal alteration) the following:—"I trouble you chiefly because I am convinced the subject is of very great importance in arresting the attention, and in convincing numbers of mere professing Christians, as well as open unbelievers, of the faithfulness of God, and the truth of the Bible. Once let this be really grasped, and then the earnest study of Holy Scripture, to which it leads, cannot but bring them to their Saviour's feet. I have, myself, personal knowledge of such conversions, and I feel sure there are few believers in the Identity who have not met with similar cases. It is a terrible weapon in the hands of the active opponents of the inspiration of Holy Scripture if they are able to say to ministers, or others,—'You teach that the unconditional promises given by God to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and their descendants for ever, are now being fulfilled to a Gentile, non-Israelite people. If such is the case, where is the faithfulness of your God; and of what value can be your confidence in the other promises contained in the Bible?'

"I am quite sure that an intelligent reading of the Bible teachings about Israel, combined with watchful observance of the 'signs of the times,' is quite sufficient to convince any mind, open to conviction, that the unconditional promises to Israel, as well as those conditional ones promised to Israel obedient, are now being fulfilled in the British race; who must, therefore, be Israel. Evidence drawn from Ancient History, Ethnology, Philology, the Great Pyramid, &c., is valuable and most interesting, but is unnecessary for the proof; so that there is no need to spend much time in study apart from the daily reading of the Bible. The latest teaching of these sciences is not adverse to our belief." (Instances were here given in support of this).

"With regard to the two objections you cite, I will answer the second one first:—Num. xxiii. 9. 'Lo, the people shall dwell alone, and shall not be reckoned among the nations'—a prophecy to which no condition is attached. Of the two ways of interpreting this passage, you apparently hold the one which refers to a national isolation by physical and natural barriers. This, however, never took place while Israel dwelt in Palestine; nor, in the case of the Jews, since their expatriation. Do we not read that Israel was reproved and punished for allowing the other nations to remain among them in the land, and for intermarrying with these nations? Did not Israel also have commercial dealings with Tyre, Sidon, and other neighbouring States? Why, therefore, do you urge that this sort of isolation should now be a sign of Ten-Tribed Israel—the British people? Can you tell me, also, how it would be possible for Israel, if in such isolation, to fulfil her duties as God's messenger and witness to all nations, and to 'possess the Gate of her enemies,' &c., &c.

Digitized by Google

"For these reasons I cannot accept your interpretation. The one I believe to be correct is contained in God's own Word:—Exodus xxxiii. 16. 'For wherein shall it be known here that I and Thy people have found grace in Thy sight? is it not in that Thou goest with us? So shall we be separated, I and Thy people, from all the people that are upon the face of the earth.' See also 1 Kings viii. 53, Ps. cxlvii. 19, 20, &c. Again, God says in Exodus xxxi. 17, that the keeping of the Sabbath—the one day in every seven—'is a sign between Him and the children of Israel for ever.' See also Ezek. xx 12, 20.

What people on the earth, saving the British and their brethren of America, keep nationally, by law, the Sabbath day. The other Protestant nations do not. The Jews, however, though dispersed among all nations, and without national cohesion, also keep a whole Sabbath day, from sunset to sunset. Are not these facts very significant? The Jews and the British race are the only peoples of the earth possessing a sign which God said should be Israel's for ever. If the British be not Ephraim-Israel, why have they the infallible sign?

"With regard to your other objection, Deut. xxviii. 37, I think you will agree that some of the promises to the fathers, and subsequently to Israel, were unconditional; while others had conditions attached. Of the latter prophecies those in Deut. xxviii. 1—14, refer to Israel obedient; and verses 15—69 to Israel disobedient. Israel cannot be under the blessings and the curses at the same time. Well, you have publicly acknowledged your belief that nationally (1) we are now more highly blessed than any other nation, (2) that our blessings are identical with those promised to Israel, and (3) that we are doing Israel's work as the world's missionaries: how can you, therefore, demand that the curse in Deut. xxviii. 37, should be applicable to us now? If God is blessing us so richly, it must be because we are doing His work, and, as a 'nation,' 'bringing forth the fruits' of the kingdom of God, even though imperfectly. It is inconsistent, therefore, to expect the curse referred to, and others also, to apply to us at this time. It is applicable to the Jews still; and was doubtless applicable to us in our 'outcast' condition, while wandering among the peoples (Amos ix. 9, and Hosea ix. 17), until we reached these islands.

"But when, before the end of the first century A.D., those of the tribes who had reached this appointed place (2 Sam. vii. 10, and Hosea i. 10), seem to have almost universally embraced Christianity, did they not become 'Israel obedient'? D'Aubigne, in his 'History of the Reformation,' speaks enthusiastically of the intense missionary zeal of the early British Christians, and calls them 'a new Israel;' speaking of Iona as having 'inherited the virtues of Zion.' Does it not seem very probable that this is the 'nation bringing forth the fruits' of the kingdom, to which our Lord said the 'kingdom of God' should be given, when it was taken from the Jews?

"Again, I believe you are of opinion that these are the 'last days,' and that the Second Advent is not far distant. Our Lord says (Matt. xxiv. 14), 'This gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness to all nations; and then shall the end come.' Not the final judgment day, as the context shows, but the end of this dispensation, and the inauguration of the millennial reign of Christ. We know that almost the whole habitable world has been explored, and there are few nations to whom the gospel has not been preached, more or less fully, by British and American efforts almost exclusively. Is there in the world another nation in the least corresponding to Israel in her glorious destiny, except the British people?—multitudinous, increasing more rapidly than any other people, a nation and a company of nations, inheriting the 'desolate heritages' and making them 'blossom and bud as the rose,' year by year increasing largely the extent of the empire, possessing the Gate of their enemies, the missionaries of the world, etc. This is Israel's destiny, as God is true; and, I believe, before the second coming of our Lord: and if this event be near at hand, and we are not Israel, we must in a very brief space of time make way for a literal Israel, possessing all the signs. But God, in these days, works by human agencies, and by means of the natural laws He has impressed on His creation. Can an innumerable people, a nation and a company of nations of the same race, arise in a day?

"Oh, how true are the inspired words of Isaiah about Israel nationally, and to a great extent individually—viz., 'Who is blind but My servant? or deaf as My messenger that I sent?' (Isa. xlii. 19, 20; Isa. xliii. 8, 9, 10). May God soon open the eyes, and unstop the ears of 'His people,' that they may see His wonderful works, and fully understand their duties to Him. He has mercifully vouchsafed to us plenty of signs by which to recognise Israel of the Eleven Tribes in these "last days," abundant proofs if we will but enquire; and even if there are still some little difficulties present to some of His servants, He will clear them away, if they ask Him. We must, in many things, be content to 'walk by faith.' The time is not far distant when the manifestation of Israel will be so plain that the eyes of all will be opened; but we should remember that 'blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed.' I cannot think it is wrong to apply these words of our Lord secondarily in this connection; for does not God say (Jer. xxxii. 41), that 'His whole heart and His whole soul' is set upon the restoration of 'His people:' and the return to Palestine of Israel and Judah in union, must necessarily be preceded by the recognition of Israel. We must not dare to set aside, as of little account, what is so dear to Him."

OUR IDENTITY IN NEW ZEALAND.

WE take the following letters from The New Zealand Methodist, published in Christchurch, New Zealand, on June 18 last, by the Rev. W. J. Williams, its Editor. We are glad to see that there is inquiry and discussion on the subject at the Antipodes, and that able men are ready there to give "a reason for the hope which is in them," besides others desirous of asking for an answer to inquiries regarding it. The letters speak for themselves, and bring out many points on which there is the densest ignorance here among both clergy and laity.

ISRAEL'S EXISTENCE.

To the Editor of the "New Zealand Methodist."

SIR,—Mr. Rigg, in his letter re "Israel's Existence," says, "The Ten Tribes of Israel will not again be a nation until they and their brethren, the Jews, are gathered together again in Palestine;" up to the present time a period of, at least, 2608 years (B.C. 721—A.D. 1887) from their ceasing to be a nation in Palestine, and refers to Hosea i. 11. God says Israel shall not cease to be a nation while the sun, &c., exist (Jer. xxxi. 35—37). Our Lord says not one jot or tittle of what God has said shall pass away till all be fulfilled (Matt. v. 17, 18). This reference to Hosea i. 11 is not to the point, as it concerns the Return, and says nothing, one way or the other, about Israel's being a nation. Israel was to be a nation and a company of nations (Gen. xlviii. 19; Deut. xxxiii. 17.) Hebrew scholars tell us that the word "goyim," in Genesis translated "nations," always means nations outside Palestine. The Ten Tribes were to be Lo-Ammi, or Gen-tilized (Hosea i., compare Romans ix. 24—26,) This cannot be said to have been fulfilled to Ephraim when in Palestine: it must therefore be fulfilled outside of it. When Israel and Judah return, they will form one nation under David their King (Ezek. xxxvii. 22—24.) Read all the chapter.

Digitized by Google

NOTE.—1. The birthright, i.e., temporal blessing, was transferred from Reuben, the eldest son, to Joseph; and therefore to his sons Ephraim and Manasseh (1 Chron. v. 1, 2). Compare Psa. cxiv. 2.

2. That the term "Ephraim" is often applied to the Ten Tribes (Ezek. xxxvii. 19; Jer. vii. 12—15; Isa. vii; ix. 9; xi. 13; xxviii. 1; Jer. xxxi; Hos. v; xiv; Zech. ix. 10; x. 7.)

More than this, the whole tenor of prophecy goes to show that Israel was to be a mighty, multitudinous nation; a wealthy, colonising, missionary people, before their union with Judah. The two careers are entirely distinct; but space will not allow me to point them out here. What Mr Rigg says regarding the attack of the Russians on Israel after their return and their deliverance by Christ, I believe to be fully borne out by Scripture; and the texts he refers to, apposite: but when he speaks of their recognising Christ as their Messiah, he is confounding the House of Judah with that of Israel, a thing often done, to the utter confusion of all explanation of God's word. It was the Jews who rejected (as they do now) and crucified Christ. The House of Israel had no part in that.

As I am afraid I have already taken up too much of your space, I will, with your permission, reserve what I intended to say regarding the Beni-Israel, referred to by Mr. Rigg for another letter. I am, &c.

T. M. GEE.

Willowbank, Sydenham

THE TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL.

To the Editor of the "New Zealand Methodist."

SIR,—Your correspondent, "Enquirer," asks some of your numerous readers to throw a little light upon the question:—"Are the Ten Tribes, which were taken into captivity by the Assyrian kings, now in existence as a nation, as undoubtedly the promises and prophecies of the Bible appear to indicate?" In reply to your "Enquirer," will you permit me to make a few brief observations? The dictionary definition of a nation is, "A people inhabiting the same country, or united under the same government." Whether the Ten Tribes are, according to this definition, "now" in existence as a nation, we will not dispute; but that they will be so at the time of the restoration of the Jews to their own land is very evident. On this point the scriptures do "throw a little light;" and not a little, either. Nor is it dim, but strong and clear. For instance, in the third chapter of Jeremiah, where the Lord animadverts upon the conduct of both nations, or Houses, Judah and Israel, condemning the conduct of the former rather than the latter (verse 1) He predicts the earlier call to God's favour of Israel, in some place "towards the north" (v. 12), and their conversion (v. 13, 14); and then follows this prediction (v. 18): "In those days, the House of Judah shall walk to (as it reads in margin of Authorised and Revised Versions) the House of Israel, and they shall come together out of the land of the North, to the land that I have given for an inheritance unto your fathers." Now, it is very evident from this latter verse that the Jews, or Judah, are to go to that land wherein the House of Israel were to be called and converted - a land which, therefore, they possessed somewhere "towards the North," and they were (some of them, at least—"one of a city, two of a family:" verse 14) to go together to Zion. All this implies that they were to be "in existence as a nation." And that Israel was to be a very great nation at the time of the return to Palestine appears very distinctly from another passage, in which their great numbers, their heathen condition, their conversion to God, and their return with Judah, are all placed clearly before us (Hosea i. 10, 11); thus:—

"Yet the number of the children of Israel shall be as the sand of the sea, which cannot be measured nor numbered and it shall come to pass that in the place where it was said unto them, 'Ye are not My people,' there it shall be said unto them, 'Ye are the sons of the living God,' Then shall the children of Judah and the children of Israel be gathered together, and shall appoint themselves one head, and they shall come up out of the land, for great shall be the day of Jezreel"—note, Jezreel was once the capital of the Ten Tribes; it is, therefore, put for the House of Israel.

Then again, in Ezekiel, God explains to the prophet His intentions, thus: He was to take a stick, and write on it, "For Judah and the children of Israel (Levi, etc.), his companions," then to take another stick, and on it he was to write, "For Joseph, the stick of Ephraim, and all the House of Israel, his companions;" and on joining them together they were to become one stick in his hand. What the ear hears is ofttimes forgotten. But that which the eye sees and the ear hears of at the same time makes a deeper, a double impression. Therefore this scenic transaction. God willed that the truth should be well remembered. And the great gist of the matter He thus declares: "I will make them one nation in the land upon the mountains of Israel, and one king shall be king to them all; and they shall be no more two nations, neither shall they be divided into two kingdoms any more at all" (Ezekiel xxxvii. 22). So we see that until their future final reunion they were to be, and doubtless are now, "two nations;" one to be a nation "scattered and peeled" (Isaiah xviii. 2): the other to be "her that was cast far off, a strong nation; (but, being united, it is added) and the Lord shall reign over them in Mount Zion from henceforth, even for ever" (Micah iv. 7); yea, "The nations shall see and be confounded at all their might; they shall lay their hand upon their mouth, their ears shall be deaf" (Micah vii. 16).

Now these prophecies are quite consistent with the promises made to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, concerning their seed. Until they are fulfilled, the promises in their fulness will not be performed. But when will the complete fulfilment take place? The answer is, when the Jews return to the Holy Land. This seems now not very far off. If the "House of Judah is to walk to the House of Israel," we know where to find the former; but the latter, to whom, or with whom, they are "to walk and go together out of the land of the north," where are we to find them?

To behold the Jews, as they are, is alone proof of the divine origion of the scriptures: to find the Ten Tribes of Israel, to watch the approaching conjunction of both "Houses," and to behold their promised restoration, an event on which God has, or will, set "His whole heart and His whole soul" (Jer. xxxii. 41), will furnish great joy to all believers, and afford a powerful demonstration of the existence of a great personal God—Jehovah Elohim—to silence infidelity and establish truth. Where the Ten Tribes now are, I will, with your permission, endeavour to show in my next. I am, &c.,

OMICRON.

So far our two New Zealand Anglo-Israelites. The last argument adduced by "Omicron" is one of great force, but to our surprise it generally falls dead on our cavilling doubting clergy here. Many of them profess to regard the standing miracle of the preservation of the Jews, in spite of their persecutions and wanderings among the nations, as an unanswerable proof of the truth of the Word of God, and of His faithfulness to His promises and threats. But admitting that herein the clergy are correct, how is it that with the Bible in their hands they cannot perceive that God's testimony requires two witnesses to prove its Divine origin, and that in His wisdom He has provided the two? The Jew is one; Israel is the other. That these were and must be these two nations or people of the same stock existing side by side in the world is certain, because Ezek. xxxvii. 22 intimates such to be the fact, and Jer. iii. 18, which Omicron quotes, confirms it. Why, then, when the House of Judah is recognised by our clergy as one proof of God's truth and faithfulness, do they not diligently seek for and find the House of Israel to which Judah is "to walk" before the Restoration of the "Two Houses" or "sticks" can become an accomplished fact? No reasonable answer is ever given to this inquiry; and until it has been answered, the position of our teachers will continue to be unsatisfactory and questionable.

The clergy are quite ready to admit that the British have all Israel's blessings. What they refuse to face is the fact that if such be the case, and God is a faithful God, then the British must be Israel, "lost, but now found" by her signs.

SIR W. W. HUNTER, Editor of the "Gazetteer of India," in a recent lecture upon the religions of India, said that Christianity was growing more rapidly than any other creed in the Peninsula.

Digitized by Google

ISRAELITISH FEATURES IN THE PRAYER BOOK.

At the monthly meeting of the Bristol and Clifton Israel's Identification Association, the Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A., Vicar of St. Bartholomew's, Bristol, gave a short address on the remarkable expressions which are scattered throughout the Prayer Book of the Church of England bearing strongly on Our Identity with the Ten Tribes. These, he remarked, may not amount to evidence proving the fact of our Israelitish origin, but they are words which exactly fit in with the idea that the British nation is "the remnant of Israel," and these words cannot really apply to any other people but them. The speaker said he had lately been preaching on Jer. xxxi. 15 and 21, and could not but be struck with the fact that that chapter refers to the incarnation of our blessed Lord, and in connection with it, to the discovery and restoration of the Ten Tribes of Israel. In verse 15 we have Rachel, the mother of Joseph, weeping for her children, Ephraim and Benjamin representing the whole of the Twelve Tribes of Israel, and in the following verses there are the promises of the return of the Tribes with repentance, and with seeking after the Lord on the part of Ephraim. Restoration to God's favour, preceded by repentance, is the burden of this whole chapter. The statements in 1 Kings viii. 47—49, being Solomon's prayer to Israel, point in the same direction. Then the captivity of the Tribes, their repentance in the land of their outcasting, their return to God with prayer, and their restoration to His favour, are all plainly taught there.

Now "the Book of Common Prayer" of the British people corresponds with the supposition, that that nation is God's people, lost Israel, in exile, waiting on Him with repentance and contrition in their national approaches to Him. Thus the Service opens with the expression of the repentance of the people, and the exhortation to confess their sins to God Almighty, their heavenly Father. In the General Confession the words the nation uses are these: "We have erred, and strayed from Thy ways, like lost sheep," a plain reference to Isa. liii. 6, an Israelitish prophecy, where it is stated: "All we, like sheep, have gone astray; we have turned every one to his own way." The Sacred Songs of our Church Service also suit the supposition that we are Israelites. In the "Venite" (Psa. xcv.), a Song having direct reference to the children of Israel, we have the British folk instructed to sing, "He is the Lord our God, and we are the people of His pasture, and the sheep of His hand." Here, too, we recall the events of Israel's wilderness career, and apply them to ourselves. Why should we do this, nationally, unless we approached our God as His chosen ones, Israel? In the "Jubilate" (Psa. c.) we have our congregations again confessing that they are "God's people," and "the sheep of His pasture." In the Versicles we have our nation's cry for salvation, the prayer for our Queen ("O Lord, save the Queen"), and then the prayer for her people, in their national aspect, styling them "God's chosen people" ("Make Thy chosen people joyful!" "O Lord, save Thy people"); and finally, that God would deign to "bless His inheritance," a name copyright to Israel in the Scriptures.

In the Litany we have the distinction clearly made between the British and all other nations in the Petitions—"that it may please Thee to bless and keep all Thy people;" followed by, "that it may please Thee to give all nations unity, peace, and concord." We call ourselves, here, "the people of God," and separate ourselves, in the very next sentence, from "all other nations." In the prayer at the end of the same service, wherein we appeal to God, as to Him whose "noble works" were done in the days of our fathers, and in the "old times" before them, we have reference, surely, not to the "old time" before our Saxon forefathers, but to the "old time" before our Israelitish fathers. In the Communion Service we have the Ten Commandments recited by the minister before the people, the first of them being remarkable for an omission (supplied in the Catechism) respecting the land of Egypt, and the triumphant withdrawal of Israel from it, by the Lord their God. The Commandment, as it is read by the minister, and as it should be read, is as follows: "God spake these words and said, I am the Lord thy God (who brought thee out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage), thou shalt have none other gods but (or before, or besides) Me" (Exod. xx. 1, 2, R.V.). Why the omission occurs in the Service of the Church is doubtful. Perhaps, as Mr. Hine states, lest the British should have learnt their origin before the time. However that may be, the fact remains, that the reason why God desires Israel to keep and obey these Commandments is, because He brought them out of the land of Egypt from their house of bondage there. Of all the nations we, the Jews and the Americans, observe these Commandments and obey them nationally. We write them on the posts of our churches, and teach them to our children as none of the other nations do. They are God's covenant or sign to us that we are His people, and He our God, even as Israel were. He has not two people chosen for this grace, and therefore we are Israel. A sign is a thing which indicates the occupation or use of any object or person. Thus a pawnbroker has a particular sign, and seeing that over a shop door, we know that the occupant is a pawnbroker. But if a pawnbroker's "sign" be exhibited over the door of one who is not a pawnbroker, the sign becomes misleading, and its object defeated. Now God gave the Ten Commandments to Israel exclusively as a sign (Deut. vi. 8; Exod. xxxi. 13—17). If, therefore, the British, who possess it, be not Israel, then has the sign failed which the Lord instituted—and that, may God forbid!

The Response of the congregation at the end of each Commandment, in the Communion Service, as it is recited in their hearing by the minister, is a wonderful response to Jer. xxxi. 33, where God promised the House of Israel, as distinguished from the Jews, that He would write His laws upon Israel's mind, and put them in their hearts, and so convert them to Himself.

The Speaker then briefly alluded to the Form for the Solemnization of Matrimony, prescribed in the Prayer Book, as one full of Israelitish allusions, and glanced at the Collect, Epistle, and Gospel for Pre-Advent Sunday, and said it was a portion of the service which seemed to force upon the nation the consideration of Israel's restoration to Palestine, in preference to such a spiritual subject as that of the Collect, Epistle, and Gospel which precedes those appointed for the 25th Sunday after Trinity.

ISRAEL'S SCRIPTURE AND PRAYER UNION.

One new member has been placed on the list since the last report, making a total of 1,445. Also an additional card has been given out by our agent in Malta.

New members are requested, when writing for cards, to kindly state whether their names are to be entered as Mr., Mrs., or Miss, etc.

For the convenience of those members who wish to continue the daily reading, the following list of chapters for March is appended:—

1st ...	Hosea	vi.	12th ...	Joel	iii.	23rd ...	Jonah	i.
2nd...	,,	vii.	13th ...	Amos	i.	24th ...	,,	ii.
3rd ...	,,	viii.	14th ...	,,	ii.	25th ...	,,	iii.
4th ...	,,	ix.	15th ...	,,	iii.	26th ...	,,	iv.
5th ...	,,	x.	16th ...	,,	iv.	27th ...	Micah	i.
6th ...	,,	xi.	17th ...	,,	v.	28th ...	,,	ii.
7th ...	,,	xii.	18th ...	,,	vi.	29th ...	,,	iii.
8th ...	,,	xiii.	19th ...	,,	vii.	30th ...	,,	iv.
9th ...	,,	xiv.	20th ...	,,	viii.	31st ...	,,	v.
10th ...	Joel	i.	21st ...	,,	ix.
11th ...	,,	ii.	22nd...	Obadiah

The card of membership will be sent on receipt of three stamps.

The first and second series of Monthly Comments on the whole Bible, by Philo-Israel, may be obtained in volume form.

Digitized by Google

Price in paper cover, 1s. 2d. each, post free; in cloth, 2s. each, post free. The "Prayers for Daily Use," being a prayer for each day of the week, by Philo-Israel, are 1d., or 9d. per dozen, postage extra. The prayer of the Union, as on the Card of Membership, may be obtained printed in larger type, price 1d. for three copies, post free, or 1s. per 100 for distribution. Address, Miss E. Sibbald, 3, Townshend-villas, Richmond, Surrey.

ANGLO-ISRAEL FREE DISTRIBUTION FUND.

Fifty-first Monthly Report.

The following donations and subscriptions, from Jan. 14th to Feb. 17th, are very gratefully acknowledged:—

By the Treasurer: P. E. T., 3s.; J. W., Plymouth (per Philo-Israel), 2s. 6d.; Captain B., Streatham, £1 1s. (10s. 6d. for literature for U.S.A.); Mrs. S., New Hampton, 2s.; For Israel's Hope and Destiny, 5s.; Miss B., New Hampton, 2s.; E. S. B., Bury St. Edmunds, 4s., J. H., Ripon, 10s.; J. A., Ripon, 10s.; A Friend (per Mr. May, Malta), £1; "Anonymous, for the benefit of the Banner" (per Philo-Israel), 4s.; Mrs. C., Edinburgh, 10s.; Major P., Brixton, 5s.; Mrs. B., Plaistow, 2s. 6d.; Mrs. B., Ripon, 2s. 6d.; H. G., Tooting (monthly subscription), 1s.; per Miss E. M. Rush: Mrs. S., Sandown, £3 (£1 for literature for U.S.A.); Liverpool Marine Engineer (for Banners), £1.

By Mr. C. Horner: W. E. W., Bath, 10s.; F. A. R. W., British Guiana, 10s.; Miss S. S. (per Philo-Israel, for literature for U.S.A.), 10s.; Mrs. M. C., Tenby (6d., and 2s. 6d. monthly subscription), 3s.; Mrs. T., Bath, 2s. 6d.; W. D., Devonport, 10s.; A. C., Port Nolloth (for Banners), 10s.; W. W. (Feb. Banners), 3s. 6d.; W. W. P., Market Weighton, 5s.

Total, £12 8s. 6d.

J. Lawrence, Hon. Treasurer.

Donations of Literature.—We acknowledge, with best thanks to our friends, the following gifts: Parcels of Banners from London, Canonbury, Salisbury, Earl's Court, and Crewkerne; one packet of leaflets from Guildford; 200 leaflets, "Who are you?" from Mrs. T., Bath, for United States parcels; and thirteen copies of "Bible Reflections," from Mrs. G. Moffat, N.B.

The Accounts of the Free Distribution Fund for 1887, having been audited, are published below. The Annual Report will be forwarded through the post to subscribers, as usual. Anonymous donors can have the same upon application to the Secretary.

Literature Distribution.—Nineteen parcels were despatched during the past month to the following places: Bath, Commercial-road, E., Eastbourne, Manchester, Harpenden, Tenby, Edinburgh, Barrow, Lee, Sheffield (two), Alvaston, Farnworth, Devonport, Birkenhead, Tunbridge Wells, Market Weighton, Malta, British Guiana, and one large parcel, per s.s. "Celtic," to Springfield, Mo., United States.

Banner Distribution.—Through the liberality of various friends, we are glad to report the resumption of the usual Banner distribution, 127 weekly, to the places enumerated in our January statement.

One large packet went to Portsmouth, and two to Leighton Buzzard.

Home Progress.—From Carlisle: "I beg to thank you very much for your kindness in sending me a parcel of your valuable readings. I am always glad to have a few by me, for I am continually getting a new believer, and I am thankful to say I have just secured a very interesting one. My wants are few; if you can see your way to sending me a parcel now and then of what you have, it will be sufficient. I am an Army Scripture Reader, and every now and then place a good supply among the men, and I often get a believer outside of my work. I am so thankful to say our cause is fast spreading. May God in His rich mercy give us faith to go on sowing the seed, looking alone to Him to give the blessing, and we shall not be disappointed."

From Birkenhead: "I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your parcel. I am distributing the pamphlets, etc., as judiciously as possible. In two instances they have made a very apparent impression; one the second officer of the 'City of Cambridge' s.s., who had heard some little of the Identity; the other, the marine superintendent of the Anchor Line, who is, I believe, a Norwegian. His attention was called to the leaflet, 'The Asylum for the Foreign Refugee.' Since then he tells me each Sunday he gets his Bible and picks out the texts given. So I have good hopes of soon having him on our side."

A subscriber at Bath writes: "I enclose a small contribution, and wish it were more, as I feel convinced you are doing a good work. I am glad to see frequently the accounts of the progress of the truth concerning Israel, and cannot but think that the more it is brought before the people in all parts of this country, and others, by means of competent lecturers, the more it will prosper."

Mr. Rogers gave his second lecture at Harpenden on the 9th ult., where his first was so successful, and aroused considerable interest. A goodly supply of pamphlets had been sent to distribute beforehand, and at the meeting. Mr. Rogers also gave a discourse at Leighton Buzzard on the 7th ult.

Charles Horner, Secretary.

STATEMENT OF ACCOUNTS FROM JANUARY 1, TO DECEMBER 31, 1887.

Receipts.	£	s.	d.
Balance in hand Jan. 1	5	11	11
Subscriptions and Donations	108	16	7
	£114	8	6

Expenditure.	£	s.	d.
Books, Pamphlets, and Leaflets...	39	3	3¾
The Banner of Israel (including payment for parcels from Publishers)	26	14	8¼
Report for 1886	2	10	0
500 Circulars	0	10	0
"A Call for Prayer and Praise"...	1	15	6
Cheque Book	0	2	0
Honorarium to Secretary	15	0	0
Postage, carriage, etc. (including payment for parcels — Literature — from Publishers, and postage of Banners, weekly, from Jan. to July	20	17	9½
Postage of Banners, weekly, from July to December	6	6	4
Balance in hand	1	8	10½
	£114	8	6

Jessie Lawrence, Hon Treasurer.

Upper Teddington, January 6, 1888.

Examined and found correct,

Thomas Clark Westfield.

9th January, 1888.

Contributions to the Fund will be thankfully received and acknowledged by the Hon. Treasurer, Miss J. Lawrence, Rosslyn, Hampton-road, Upper Teddington, Middlesex; or by Mr. Charles Horner, 34, Sheen-park, Richmond-on-Thames. Cheques may be crossed, "London and Provincial Bank, Teddington Branch." Grants of literature will be made, as far as funds allow, on application to the Secretary.

A full report of the two days' Conference at Wolverhampton will appear in our next issue. Persons desirous of obtaining extra copies should at once order them of their booksellers.

Digitized by Google

NOTICES.

All communications intended for the Editor, to be addressed: "Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Clifton, Bristol.

SUBSCRIPTIONS. £ s. d.

Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free 0 7 6
Two Copies (including Double Numbers) 0 13 6
Three Copies ,, ,, ,, ... 1 0 4
Four Copies ,, ,, ,, ... 1 5 6
Six Copies ,, ,, ,, ... 1 16 4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-grand, London, to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C., or F. W. PARRY & Co., 29, Paternoster-row, London.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

Contents Bills and Show Cards may be obtained on application to the Publishers.

Advertisements should be sent to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

Prepaid Advertisements are inserted at the rate of thirty words for 1s. 4d.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

A LECTURE will be Delivered in the ASSOCIATION ROOMS, 14, King William-street, Charing Cross, W.C., on THURSDAY EVENING NEXT, March 8, 1888, at 7.30 o'clock, by Gen. Beresford. Subject: "Scriptural Points not Generally Known." Admission free. Strangers will be made welcome.

JAMES BILLINGTON, Sec.

BADGES.

THE SILVER ANGLO-ISRAELITE BADGES can be obtained from Miss L. Hope, 7, Ovington-gardens, S.W., on payment of 5s. 6d.; postage 3d. extra.

WORKS BY ROBERT BANKS & SON, RACQUET COURT, FLEET ST.

PRESENT-DAY PROBLEMS, and How Anglo-Israel Truth Explains and Solves Them. By V. M. COX. 3d., by post 4 stamps.

LIGHT SHED BY THE GREAT PYRAMID OF EGYPT on the Last Days of this Dispensation, from A.D. 1814 to A.D. 1922. By JAMES KEITH. Price 4d., by post 5 stamps.

NEW TESTAMENT TRUTH on the Anglo-Israel Controversy. By J. G. TAYLOR. Price 3d., by post 4 stamps.

A NEW LIGHT. An Elementary Pamphlet for General Distribution. By A E I. Price 2d., by post 2½d. in stamps.

EPHRAIM-ISRAEL, the Pivot Nation of Prophecy and History. By V. M. COX. Price 1d., one dozen free for 1s.

THE ANGLO-ISRAEL POST-BAG; or, How Arthur Came to See It. By the Right Rev. BISHOP TITCOMB. Price 2s. 6d. in cloth gilt; paper cover, 1s. 6d., by post 1d. extra.

THE ISRAELITES FOUND IN THE ANGLO-SAXONS. The Ten Tribes supposed to have been Lost, traced from the land of their captivity to their occupation of the Isles of the Sea. By WILLIAM CARPENTER. Price 2s. 6d., by post 2s. 8d.

THE ANSWER TO THE EASTERN QUESTION, With Some Facts Concerning the Identity of the British With Israel. By the Author of "The New Old Story." enlarged. Price 3d.; for distribution, 50 copies, 11s., post free.

CARDINAL PROOFS THAT THE BRITISH Are the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel—the Abrahamic Covenant. By F. W. PHILLIPS. With two chapters by PHILO-ISRAEL. Price 6d., post free 7d.

THE NEW OLD STORY. By "A E I." Price 6d., post free; in cloth, 1s., post free.

THE BIBLE ATLAS. To Illustrate the Old and New Testaments. Price 1s.; post free 1s. 1d.

ANGLO-ISRAEL TRACTS. 8 pp. Royal 16mo., on toned paper. Adapted to enclose in letters, and for general distribution. No. 1—12. Half-penny each, 12 copies, post free. 6d. Specimen packet for 6 stamps.

NEW EDITION JUST PUBLISHED.

THE LOST TEN TRIBES

Price 3s., post free 3s. 3d.

"We have much pleasure in directing attention to this handsome volume. . . We promise our readers that if they procure this work and will peruse it, they will find 'Our Identity' discussed in a clear, novel, racy, and from an American point of view, which is sure to interest."—Banner of Israel.

LONDON: ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet Court, Fleet Street, and all booksellers.

PIANOFORTES, Harmoniums, American Organs. Why buy at shops inferior made instruments, and pay large profits, when you can buy direct from the Maker High-class Instruments, and save 50 per cent. by so doing? Full value allowed for old Instruments in exchange as part payment. Write for Price Lists and Testimonials to G. LINSTEAD, 2, Oseney Crescent, Camden Road, London. Established 1874.

THE ANGLO-ISRAEL ALMANACK for 1888, paper covers, 3d. Stiff paper covers, interleaved with ruled paper 5d. Cloth binding, 1s. By post 4d., 6d., and 1s. ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet Court, Fleet Street, E.C.

The Anglo-Israel Theory.

Every believer in it should read the Sermons of the REV. JOSEPH WILD, D.D., of Toronto, Canada, who is the leading exponent of the theory in America, and whose Sermons and Books have a world-wide circulation, which are reported weekly in

"THE CANADIAN ADVANCE,"

A Religious, Literary, and Fireside Weekly. Remit a P.O.O. for 4s. 6d. to the publishers for a year's subscription.—Address: YEIGH & Co., Toronto, Canada,

Price 6d., post free 7d.

THE MESSENGER,

A Monthly Expositor of the Fulfilment of the Scriptures in the Anglo-Saxon Folk, the Israel of God.

Each number contains contributions from high-class writers on Identity Subjects, selections from the Discourses of Rev. Dr. Wild, and a chapter of an Important New Work, entitled—

"RUSSIA JAPHET," by "OXONIAN,"

Author of "Israel's Wanderings," &c.

London: F. W. Parry & Co., 29, Paternoster-row.

Fifteenth Thousand.

BY REV. HENRY ROE.

Israel's World. Origin and Destiny of British Race, Colonies, and Empire. 2d., post free 2½d. Fifty post free from H. Roe for 4s. 9d.

Philo-Israel says: "I am perfectly delighted with your pamphlet."

C. E. Priestly, Esq., says: "For its size I never read a better work. I have given away two lots of fifty each, and enclose money for fifty more. I have sent it to clergymen, bishops, and archbishops."

Rev. Thomas Lowe says: "What the works of Mr. Hine failed to do in my enlightenment, 'Israel's World' has accomplished. I now read the Scriptures in a new and vivid light."

Going to Africa. 1s., post free 1s. 1d.

Fernando Po Mission. 1s., post free 1s. 1d.

West African Scenes. 2s., post free 2s. 2d.

Consecration. 2d., post free 2½d.

50 post free from H. Roe for 4s. 9d.

Robert Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.; and Rev. H. Roe, Dawley, Salop.

MR. EDWARD HINE has returned from his lecturing tour in America. Friends wishing to arrange for him to lecture can communicate with Isaac Loveland, Shoreham, near Sevenoaks, Kent, at present fixing no dates. Mr. Hine's publications have had a large circulation, and can be obtained of F. W. Parry & Co., 29, Paternoster Row, London, E.C.

Forty-Seven Identifications, 6d., post free 7d.

Cui Bono? 6d., post free, 7d.

Lost Israel Found, 3s. 6d., post free, 3s. 9d.

Also The Nation Warned by the Scripture Teachings of the Great Pyramid, 6d., post, 7d.

HUMAN LIFE.—FIFTY YEARS' Record of Facts, Principles, and Discoveries (just published, complete) Relating to the Improvement and Preservation of Human Life on Earth. Origin and true treatment of diseases. A series of articles by DR. SAMUEL BIRLEY, M.D., Ph.D. Book form, 50 pages. SENT FREE to every applicant by the publishers, GORDON B. MURRAY & CO., 50, Theobald's-road, Holborn, E.C. Write to-day.

FITS! FITS!! FITS!!!

ALL PERSONS SUFFERING FROM EPILEPSY should send name and address to JAMES OSBORNE, Medical Pharmacy, Ashbourne, Derbyshire who will forward, free of charge, full particulars, with Testimonials, of the most successful remedy ever discovered for this distressing malady. Sent to all parts of the world. Reference permitted to Rev. J. BAKER, M.A., 80, Bolton Road, Pendleton, Manchester.

WORKS BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

The Geography of the Gates. With Map and six full page, and one double-page, Illustrations, printed on plate paper. 208 pages, in handsome cloth, gilt. Price 3s. 6d., post free 3s. 10d.

The History of the House of Israel. How They Were Lost and How They Were Found. Told for the children. Price 6d., cloth 1s.; post free 7d. and 1s. 1d. Fifth edition.

A Resume of the Scriptural Argument, Proving the Identity of the British Race with the Lost Ten Tribes. Price 1d.; 6s. per hundred, postage 6d.

Our Identity: What it is Not; What it is; and Our Obligations To-day in Respect to it Being a Lecture recently delivered in London by Philo-Israel, and published by special request. Price 2d., a reduction for quantities.

Our Identity with the House of Israel. Price 4d., Reprinted from "Clifton Chronicle Letters'

An Elementary Digest or Sketch of the Chief Facts and Teachings of the Great Pyramid of Egypt. Adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific 56 pages, Illustrated with Diagrams, price 4d., post free 5d. 10th Thousand.

Are the English People the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel? An Inquiry Establishing the Identity of the British Nation with the Lost Ten Tribes. 4d.

Anglo-Israelism. True, Not False. Being Philo-Israel's Reply to the Rev. Canon Bell's pamphlet, "Anglo-Israelism: True or False?" Price 1d., 6s. 6d. per 100. 16 pages, crown 8vo.

London: Robert Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

WHO ARE WE & WHAT IS OUR MISSION? By J. Thornhill Harrison. With seven Maps. Hand some cloth, gilt, price 5s. Free for P.).

Robert Banks & Son, Racquet Court, Fleet Street, E.C.

LUNG SAVE YOUR LIVES BY TAKING TONIC
LUNG OWBRIDGE'S TONIC
LUNG LUNG TONIC TONIC
LUNG TONIC
LUNG THE MIGHTY HEALER. TONIC
LUNG It has a power over disease hitherto TONIC
LUNG unknown in Medicine. TONIC
LUNG Are you at all Weak-chested or inclined TONIC
LUNG to be Consumptive, with just a touch of TONIC
LUNG Cough now and then? TONIC
LUNG "Try this Wonderful Medicine." The TONIC
LUNG Cough and Weakness will disappear as TONIC
LUNG if by magic, and you will feel a strength TONIC
LUNG and power you never had before. TONIC
LUNG HAVE YOU A COUGH? TONIC
LUNG A DOSE WILL RELIEVE IT! TONIC
LUNG HAVE YOU A COLD? TONIC
LUNG A DOSE AT BEDTIME WILL TONIC
LUNG REMOVE IT. TONIC
LUNG Bronchitis & Asthma it relieves instantly TONIC
LUNG The Spasms of Coughing so dreadful in TONIC
LUNG Whooping Cough become less with each TONIC
LUNG dose of the medicine. TONIC
LUNG TONIC
LUNG Prepared by W. T. OWBRIDGE, Chemist, Hull TONIC
LUNG Sold in Bottles 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d. TONIC
LUNG and 11s. by all Chemists and Patent TONIC
LUNG Medicine Vendors. Wholesale all London TONIC
LUNG and Provincial Houses. TONIC

Price 4d., by post 5d.

LIGHT SHED BY THE GREAT PYRAMID of EGYPT On the Last Days of this Dispensation, from A.D. 1814 to A.D. 1922.

London: Robert Banks and Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; or of the Author, Dingwall, N.B.

RHEUMATISM

Positively exterminated from the system without shock or discomfort by mild, continuous currents of electricity, generated by wearing

Price 21/-, HARNESS' Post free.

ELECTROPATHIC BELT

It is also invaluable for giving prompt relief in all disorders of the Nerves, Stomach, Liver and Kidneys. Thousands of Testimonials. Pamphlet and Advice free on application to Mr. C. B. HARNESS, Consulting Medical Electrician, The Medical Battery Company, Limited,

52, OXFORD STREET, LONDON, W.

(Corner of Rathbone Place).

Call to-day, if possible, or write at once.

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. F. W. PARRY (late GUEST & Co.), 29 PATERNOSTER-ROW WEDNESDAY, MAR 7. 1888 [All rights reserved

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."

(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. XII., No. 585. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, MARCH 14, 1888. [PRICE ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

PAGE

The Mother of Nations... 109
British Identity with Israel.—Conference at Wolverhampton... 110
Financial Statement of the Bristol and Clifton Israel's Identification Association .. 114
The Jewish Nation—A Miracle According to the Rev. M. Wolkenberg 115

THE MOTHER OF NATIONS.

IN Gen. xvii. 15, R.V., we find recorded the blessing God pronounced on Sarai, Abraham's wife. "And God said unto Abraham, As for Sarai thy wife, thou shalt not call her name Sarai, but Sarah (Princess, margin) shall her name be. And I will bless her, and moreover I will give thee a son of her, yea, I will bless her, and she shall be a mother of nations. Kings of peoples shall be of her." The offspring of Sarah, the Princess, which secured God's blessing, was reckoned in the line of Isaac, Jacob, and the 12 Patriarchs, of whom the chief in blessing were Judah and Joseph, or Ephraim, with Manasseh, and "the Ten Tribes." This being so, it is remarkable that the British people have come to be regarded in the very same light as Abraham's wife Sarah, and are spoken of continually in these our modern times as "The Mother of Nations." In a Canadian paper called the Anglo-Saxon, we find in its first number, p. 4, Sept. 1887, the following suggestive sentences, in an article headed "England the Mother of nations":—

England is the mother of nations. The great peoples of this continent are children of hers, and the greatest power in the East is wielded by her sons; while in the South there live and grow splendid States which must o'ershadow that hemisphere, and give the English law and the English tongue to men no wilder than Highlanders were a century or so ago, and equally capable of being made good members of a civilized community.

English-speaking people govern two-thirds of the globe, and influence the remaining third with a force that dare not be underrated. These people all emanate mediately or immediately from

> "This fortress built by Nature for herself,
> Against infection and the hand of war;
> This happy breed of men, this little world,
> This precious stone set in the silver sea."
> (King Richard II., Act ii., Sc. 1.).

We need not go to Canada, however, in order to find recognition of the wondrous fact that "England is the Mother of Nations." The idea is patent to us here on this side of the water, and we well know that Canada for instance is a nation already to all intents and purposes, and that she is one of Britain's stateliest daughters. Victoria, New South Wales, South Australia, New Zealand and Tasmania are five more sturdy ones, rapidly growing up into womanhood, and able even now to take rank by the side of the Dominion as Britain's outland offspring.

South Africa is not so far advanced in consolidation, but the day is clearly not far off when those colonies, too, will assert their right to crystallise into a mighty Dominion Empire, to embrace perhaps at last all Africa in its enormous British boundaries! "The nation and the company of British Israelite nations" are already existing. It needs but the right moment to arrive, when these loving British daughters of the parent State will unite into a magnificent "Federation of States such as the world never saw before," according to the prophecies. How this matter stands to-day is clearly shown in the following extract from some metropolitan journal, and is entitled,

TO-DAY IN TASMANIA.

This day the Australasian Federal Council meet at Hobart Town, with the view of further discussing the great question of Australian Federation. The prospects can hardly be called bright. Counting New Guinea and Fiji, there are nine colonies in the Australian group. Leaving out these two colonies, there are four for Federation, and three against. The four are Victoria, Queensland, Western Australia, and Tasmania. The three dissentients are New South Wales, New Zealand, and South Australia. Roughly speaking, these three Colonies contain very nearly one-half of the total population of Australasia, which total may be placed at about three-and-a-half millions. This is unpleasant for the Federationists. However, the Federal idea has been making progress among the Australians—sure though slow progress.

There is something impressive even in the prospect of these far-distant offshoots of the Anglo-Saxon race jointly starting business on their own account as the United States of the Southern Seas. How will they solve the social problem—into which all "political" questions, as politics were understood until the day before yesterday, are in process of absorption?

The Weekly Times and Echo, whose writings we have already, on p. 521 of Vol. xi., quoted as pointing directly to the Israelitish origin of our nation, follows on with a New Year's article which is remarkable indeed. The friend who sent it to us remarks, that this paper is "likely to become an Anglo-Israelite advocate before long, though at present the Editor would doubtless exclaim, if charged with Identity views, "What! is thy servant a dog that he should do this thing?" The writer's words were these, respecting

Digitized by Google

ONE EMPIRE, ONE PARLIAMENT, ONE CROWN, ONE LANGUAGE.

What makes the English language so interesting is that it bids fair, in the far future, to be the universal language of mankind. This is saying a great deal, but not more than we are justified in predicting. The language in itself is important. It enshrines a splendid literature, and it is indissolubly linked with one of the most eventful histories in human annals. Were the British Isles by some great catastrophe of nature, which geologists consider possible, to be submerged by the ocean, the English language would remain an imperishable legacy to mankind. It is the language of a great people, who have built up through successive ages a free Parliament, founded colonies, fostered science, and created a world-embracing commerce. The language of such a race would be treasured with care by all the generations which are to come. But it is also the language of other races and other nations in every quarter of the world. It is talked by nearly sixty millions of people in North America; and the probabilities are—in fact, the certainties are—that in due time four or five hundred millions of human beings will talk this language on the North American Continent. How prodigious, how amazing, will be the power of the United States with Canada absorbed, or with Canada itself a great nation, then! But it is not in America where the English language is achieving its greatest triumphs, but in Hindostan. There hundreds of millions of people are gradually, year after year, getting more and more to talk our language. English laws are being instituted, English customs imitated, and English civilisation utilised. Whatever we may do for the people of India, we are conferring on them one boon of inestimable value—we are uniting them in the bonds of one language. Who can tell what influence during the teeming centuries which are to come, this language will have on the intellectual life of Asia? As it is, and is likely to be, in Asia, so it is, and is likely to be, in Africa. The English language is the chief language spoken in South Africa, and largely so all around the borders of the African Continent. As it is in South Africa, so it is with those rising nationalities in Australasia, and in Borneo, and other islands washed by the Indian Ocean. The English language is now being taught alike in schools in Japan, in Siam, and in China; and it must be talked more and more, because English ideas are taking root more and more. British commerce is growing more and more, and British influence is extending more and more. If the French language is the language of diplomacy, the English language is the language of commerce. And the probabilities are, that Great Britain and the United States are destined to maintain the commercial ascendency for many, many ages. If the language were a dead language, it would be a mighty thing in the world; but it is living and abounding with life, and is the chief medium for the interchange of human thought. If our contention be correct, two things are desirable. The language should be purified, as, no doubt, it will be purified as time passes, and, the more it is purified, the more rapidly it will extend. The next thing desirable is that the unity of the Empire be maintained. One Empire, one Parliament, one Crown, one language! This shall be our motto for the New Year.

So far the journalist. The Empire no doubt will be maintained, for it is Israel's, and is to rule the earth. The Parliament will continne, for it is the form of Government God chose for Israel in the wilderness. The Crown will survive, for it is David's, confirmed to him and his heirs for ever by a covenant of salt, and the language of the earth will be one, since God has promised Israel a pure language, one already spoken by over 100 millions of the Anglo-Saxon race, and is being acquired by countless subject and other races (Dan. vii. 27; Rom. iv. 13: Exod. xviii. 25, 26; 2 Sam. vii. 16; 2 Chron. xiii. 4, 5; Zeph. iii. 9).

THE WOLVERHAMPTON CONFERENCE.—The report we publish was furnished us by the Rev. F. Aston, by whom we learn "a large price was paid for it." As far as possible we sent a "proof" of each address to the person by whom it was delivered. Dr. Grant, however, considers the report of his speech very unsatisfactory. It would, of course, be impossible to give a verbatim report of the two days' proceedings in one number of our journal.

BRITISH IDENTITY WITH ISRAEL.

CONFERENCE AT WOLVERHAMPTON.

A TWO days' Conference on the above subject, which has been promoted by a number of the clergy of the Church of England, and laymen, in conjunction with several Nonconformists, was opened on Tuesday in the Exchange Hall, Wolverhampton. The objects of the Conference were to consider the prophecies bearing upon the future of Israel and their apparent fulfilment in the history of Great Britain.

INAUGURAL SERVICE.

In connection with the Conference an Inaugural Service, with Holy Communion, was held in St. Jude's Church, Tettenhall-road, last (Monday) evening. The sermon was preached by the Rev. R. Douglas, M.A., from Luke i. 68, "Blessed be the Lord, the God of Israel, for He hath visited and wrought redemption for His people." At the outset, the preacher sought to show that our great Christian festivals, Easter, Pentecost, and Christmas corresponded with the great Jewish feasts, and that the blessings which were covenanted for by God with Abraham were being fulfilled to-day. God, the rev. gentleman said, had sworn it, and His word was undoubtedly being kept. He then proceeded to enforce four points, first that Christianity in its original design and in its actual outcome, was intended to be a spiritual and national revival of the House of Israel; secondly, that the changes which the Christian dispensation was intended to effect in the condition of the House of Israel had been or were being wrought; thirdly, the particular race in which those changes historically had taken, or were taking place, was the British nation; and fourthly, that this should be kept in mind when the doxology, "Blessed be the Lord, the God of Israel, for He hath visited and wrought redemption for His people," was being sung. The rev. gentleman then went on to prove from the Scriptures that the promises made to Abraham by God were intended to be literally fulfilled, and were being fulfilled. These promises not only included spiritual blessings but national blessings, not only eternal but temporal welfare. The British race was descended from the Lost Tribes of Israel, and Christ said that He had come to seek the lost sheep of the House of Israel. These lost sheep were scattered in all lands, and so was the British race to-day. Abraham's seed was to be as the sand—as the dust of the earth—and as the stars in heaven. That prophecy could only be applied to the British race, which to-day was winning its way all the world over. Again, the promise, "Thy seed shall possess the Gate of his enemies," was true of the Anglo-Saxon people alone, and Palestine, "the Holy Land," was virtually in possession of the British race to-day. In the expression, "Declare it to the isles afar off, say He that scattered Israel will gather him," the isles, the preacher said, were the British isles, and he asserted that it could be historically proved that Christianity was preached in Great Britain before the destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans, and that it was probable St. Paul had himself visited these islands before the fall of Jerusalem. The decisive victory over the Romans in the 9th century was a great culminating point, and could have been nothing less than a divine interposition. But for the conquest which for ever drove the Romans beyond the Rhine, our ancestors—the ancestors of the great British race—would have been exterminated on the banks of the Elbe. This was the view taken by such eminent historians as Freeman and Arnold; but for that decisive conquest the imperial race now ruling the world would have been cut off. To-day they saw tnat Britons, Normans, Saxons, Danes, and Swedes were coming together to form one great nation and people, which should rule the world and possess the Gate of its enemies. The preacher, in conclusion, asserted that we (the British people) were literally, as well as spiritually, the Israel of God. A collection in aid of expenses was taken up at the close. There was but a small congregation.

TUESDAY'S PROCEEDINGS.

The Conference was opened on Tuesday morning in the Exchange Hall. Major-General Rainey, in the absence of Mr. W. Edwards, who was called unexpectedly to London on urgent business, presiding. There was only a very small attendance, and among others present, were the Revs. F. C. Adam, F. Aston (Bushbury), C. W. Hickson, E. J. W. Whittaker, Milner, R. Douglas, Vaughan, H. Marriott, and Dr. Alder Smith, Colonel

Digitized by Google

Senior, Commander Roberts, R.N., Surgeon-General Grant, and Colonel Weldon.

"FIRST PRINCIPLES OF PROPHETIC INTERPRETATION."

The Rev. R. DOUGLAS, M.A., read the first paper on the "First Principles of Prophetic Interpretation," insisting on the literal as well as the spiritual fulfilment of prophecy. After speaking of the historical scheme of Bible revelation and its dealing with men and things, he went on to say that professing Christians generally, and those also who were earnest, treated the study of prophecy with indifference. The main subject, the "first-born" nation, the ordained channel of teaching, must be distinctly apprehended and constantly kept in view. We must get hold of the right end of the story. Unless that were done it was impossible to see the drift of numberless passages of Scripture. It was the key of the position. This chosen nation was the sun in the political firmament; it was the head and the heart of nations. Nor ought there to be the least doubt or difficulty in identifying it. In each succeeding stage of the progressive Bible revelation it came out with equal clearness and prominence. The very first words of Jehovah to Abraham after He called him westward across the Euphrates were, "I will make of thee a great nation." It was obvious, therefore, that to recognise the place of Ephraim in prophecy, was an essential pre-requisite to the right understanding and application of its foreshadowings. The second principle of prophetic interpretation was, the epoch or era of prophetic fulfilment of the promises, properly commenced with the Christian dispensation, and thence proceeded, according to the times and seasons appointed by the Father. The notion, commonly entertained, that Israel's national glory was to be manifested under the law, was thoroughly unscriptural. The promise which secured world-empire to Ephraim-Israel "was confirmed before God in Christ 430 years before the law." It was absolute and unconditional, as it was based on Jehovah alone. One of the principles on which he was insisting was that all through the Old Testament, from Genesis downward, the promises to Israel were emphatically assigned for their accomplishment to "the latter days," which, beyond all controversy, were the days of the Christian dispensation in which we were now living. It was nothing less than a virtual denial of Christ's atonement and of the New Testament Scriptures, to ignore Ephraim-Israel's necessary realisation of her temporal and spiritual promises in the present Christian age. Unless we were prepared to prove that progressive stages of revival had marked and were marking this present Christian dispensation, we could not intelligently or satisfactorily maintain the truth of the Bible and of Christianity. Prophecies relating to the histories of nations must be interpreted uniformly, and in a plain literal sense. It had been hitherto taken for granted that all the promises given by God so expressly to the House of Israel might be legitimately applied to the Christian Church. That was all very well if by the Church were meant the literal as well as the spiritual Israel of God. For if anything were clearly revealed in Scripture it was that God's one true, holy, witnessing, or Protestant Church must always be essentially Israelite in its constituent members. Prophecy must be studied in a prayerful spirit. Also extraordinary providential events, coinciding with similar extraordinary predictions in the history of a people, must be accepted as their true accomplishment. Britain, he asserted, was Ephraim, notwithstanding all antecedent ignorance, or improbability in regard to it. The gradual fulfilment in British history of Israel's promises afforded an instance of how history repeated itself. Hence it was that our manifest Divine identification with the House of Israel in these days by the fulfilment of prophecy constituted an equally Divine and authoritative republication of the Gospel to us a nation.

The Rev. S. C. ADAM read a paper on the same subject. He said the first principles of prophetic interpretation rightly occupied the first place in the Conference. Their principles as Anglo-Israelites were sound and Scriptural. Their principle of interpretation of prophecy was that they insisted upon and maintained the literal fulfilment of prophecy—(applause)—according to the ordinary grammatical construction of the Scriptural expressions in which prophecy was couched. Tradition had kept up a custom introduced into the Church in the third century, of spiritualizing the prophecies, and ignoring their primary and pre-eminent application to the literal seed of Abraham. That was an error of early origin in the Christian Church. Their principle was simple and sure. All they asked was that Bible students should take prophecy as to people and places as it was, and to mean what it did just as if they were reading the annals of history. The further prophecy was turned away from the literal interpretation the worse, the more misleading, and false it became (applause). The prophecies with reference to Judah and Israel in the Old Testament were far too much neglected. Pious persons were accustomed to spiritualise the terms of prophecy and then take them for their own, and so at first sight it seemed like calling upon them to abandon a treasure in which they took delight, to ask them to accept the prophecy of the Old Testament in its literal sense. But, when, on Anglo-Israel principles, they discovered that the prophecy applied to them specially, and that it was theirs both in its literal and spiritual meaning and application, then the promise was not lost to them; they were entitled to it, and the treasure was vastly enhanced. They, as Anglo-Israelites, were confirmed in their first principles by prophecies already fulfilled—literally fulfilled in the case of Jerusalem, Babylon, Edom, &c. These prophecies of Scripture, applied in their literal sense, furnished so accurate and correct a description of historical occurrences in their smallest details that spiritualizing was out of the question. Prophecy was merely history by anticipation. It was altogether wrong to regard the Jews as the sole representatives of the Twelve Tribes. The restoration of the Israelitish nation as a whole was the goal of the Church, the fountain head of innumerable blessings to the whole world (applause). Prebendary Dulton, whose name was well remembered in Wolverhampton, had described as narrow, vicious, and in its very nature calculated to undermine all solid views of the Bible, the view that the Jerusalem of prophecy was to be identified with the Christian Church, and that Psa. cii. 13—16, did not mean the restoration of Israel! Prophecy was only spiritual in so far as it served to confirm faith in the Divine promises, illustrates the harmony and glory of the Divine attributes, and magnifies the truth and preciousness of God's Holy Word. The rev. gentleman, in conclusion, quoted Scripture and other authorities in support of the theory of literal interpretation.

OLD TESTAMENT COVENANTS.

Surgeon-General GRANT, M.D., then spoke upon "Old Testament Covenants." He said that the subject was one of importance, because upon those covenants depended our Christianity. If we were to study the Holy Scriptures intelligently we must study them as a continuous record, the different parts of which we could no more separate than we could the second volume of any other book from the first. He proceeded to relate Bible covenants.

The Conference then adjourned.

At the opening of the afternoon sitting of the Conference, a paper, on the same subject as that discussed in the morning, was read by the Rev. F. ASTON (Bushbury), who addressed his observations especially to the question of God's covenant with the House of Israel. As showing the continuity of God's purpose, he pointed out the first covenant made by God with Noah, where it was specifically set forth that God should dwell in the tents of Shem. So, if God was true and unchangeable, He must be found to-day dwelling in the tents of Shem, not in a general but a special manner, for He was the Lord God of Shem; and again God said, "As for Me, My covenant is with thee"—that was, with Shem. That covenant made with Abraham was to be an everlasting covenant. He further said to Abraham, "Sarah, thy wife, shall bear thee a son, and I will establish My covenant with him." And again, "In blessing I will bless thee, and in multiplying I will multiply thy seed as the stars of heaven," &c. The covenant was renewed to Jacob, and from Jacob it descended to Joseph, and from Joseph to his youngest son, Ephraim—not to Manasseh. That it descended to Ephraim, was plain from the way in which Jacob placed his hands on the head of the younger son, and in doing so, "guided his hands wittingly," notwithstanding Joseph's objection. When Joseph sought to have the blessing given to Manasseh, his aged father said, "Not so, my son," and thus the blessing of the birthright descended to Ephraim. When blessing his own sons Jacob gave the sceptre to Judah, but while Judah had rule given to him, power and greatness were bestowed on Ephraim. Hence, afterwards, there was a sort of rivalry between the Tribe of Judah and the Tribe of Ephraim. With the birthright descended to Ephraim the blessings which were its attributes. Those blessings were, that the descendants of Ephraim should be as the stars of heaven, that they should rule nations, and that they should possess the Gate of their enemies. How far that was applicable to Great Britain they could easily find out for themselves. They could easily see if they looked to India, to South Africa, to Aden, to Singapore, to Malta, to Gibraltar, to America, how far the British people possessed the Gate of their enemies. The other aspects of the blessings were easily discernable as wealth, commerce, and sovereignty. With the English people of to-day rested the functions of the ministry throughout the world, and thus the covenant was being kept, and as the writer of the Epistle to the Hebrews said, "Christ was the Mediator of the new covenant." The rev. gentleman quoted several passages of Scripture in support of the theory that the covenant was being fulfilled to-day with the British people. What other nation possessed the attributes of the birthright, sovereignty, dominion, Empire, widespread multiplicity? None. These blessings were given to the English races in order that God might fulfil His promise to Abraham. The covenant was, "in thee, and in thy seed, shall all the peoples of the earth be blessed." He, the speaker, held that the promise had been literally fulfilled in Christ's Church and in our own nation, for no other nation was there to whom God was so nigh, and who possessed statutes and judgments so righteous, or with whom God's dealings were so wonderful.

Digitized by Google

THE CONNECTION BETWEEN DRUIDICAL AND HEBREW WORSHIP.

Commander ROBERTS, R.N., read the next paper on "The Old Testament Idolatries, and the Connection Between Druidical and Hebrew Worship." He said he had devoted much study to finding out the truths contained in the Bible, and had found there were wonderful proofs of them. There was not a single science that he had looked into but what he found went to prove the fact that the Word of God stated that God's people Israel were the people, par excellence, that He had formed for His praise, and no other. Speaking upon idolatries, he first treated of the more popular theory concerning the Israelites, who were punished by God for their idolatry, and carried to Assyria in captivity. Coming to speak of Christianity v. Druidism, the speaker said that the Ancient Britons were Christians, and had given abundant proof of their sincerity to the Gospel. Although pushed to the West by the Saxons, they retained their religion, and for fifty years after the settlement of the Saxons in Britain, the Britons withstood the presumptive arrogance of the monks, and declared they would never submit to the supremacy of the Pope of Rome. (Applause.) Our ancestors had been preserved by the grace of God from worshipping idols. After speaking upon the worship of the Etruscans, as copied by the Romans, and their building of circular temples, he went on to say that it was the custom of the Druids, when they had experienced any signal favour, to erect a stone in remembrance of the blessing, and the ground upon which that stone stood was supposed to be hallowed. In the British Islands pillars of this kind were very frequent. One of the Druidical creeds contained the following article concerning places of worship:—"That it is unlawful to build temples to God, or to worship Him within walls or roofs." He asked them to compare this with the 66th chapter of Isaiah, verse 1. Turning again to the erection of stones, how exactly, he said, they corresponded to those erected by Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, who poured oil on the top of them, and called God's house. That the Hebrews and the Druids worshipped the same God there could be no doubt. The ancient names of Stonehenge and Abury were Hebrew. These must have comprised, in their pristine glory, the most magnificent temples the world had ever seen. The address concluded by further copious comparisons of the Hebrew and Druidical celebrations of feast days, and especially dwelt upon the strict adherence of the Druids to their forms of worship and their piety.

ISRAEL AS JEW AND GENTILE.

The Rev. C. W. HICKSON next read a paper on "Israel in circumcision and uncircumcision, or as Jew and Gentile." He prefaced his remarks by saying that the word Gentile had no existence in either the Hebrew or the Greek languages. The Hebrew word translated "Gentile" simply meant "people," or "nation." When the Tribes were carried away captive, Judah, it was prophesied, should return; but the other tribes did not return, but, becoming affiliated with Assyrians, Chaldeans, and other Eastern nations, became heathen. These lost Tribes then became Gentiles, or "nations," a term descriptive of all the peoples of the world, exclusive of that particular section—the Tribe of Judah—the Jews, or those who practised circumcision. The descendants of Judah were known as Jehovah's people, while the lost tribes became Gentile. Since then the two sections had not become united. That union was to take place in the future. The Jews were one nation, the lost tribes were another. "Judah" and "Jews" were never used in Scripture as generic terms to describe the whole race. The Jews of to-day were the descendants of Judah, so that there must be elsewhere another great branch of the Hebrew race.

Mr. J. O. Lee occupied the chair at the evening session.

The Rev. E. J. W. WHITTAKER spoke upon the subject introduced in the afternoon, dealing with the frivolous objections raised on the question of the identity of our people with ancient Israel. Where, he asked, was this wonderful people who should have the power that should push the nations of the world on all sides and convey the Gospel truths to the world? The Word of God would tell shortly, and distinctly. Those people inhabited the earth to-day as great and full and abounding in the promises which God made to Israel. We should not have to study it long before we found where was the real Israel.

CHRISTIANITY A CONFIRMATION OF THE ABRAHAMIC COVENANT.

Mr. D. A. ONSLOW followed with a paper on "Christianity, a confirmation of the Abrahamic covenant." He divided his subject into two parts—first, "What constitutes the Abrahamic covenant?" second, "How can Christianity be shown to be a confirmation of that covenant?" In the first place he spoke of God's promise to Abraham to make of him a nation, and his seed after him fruitful for generations in an everlasting covenant. The seed of Abraham were supposed to be put aside, and the Gentiles to have been taken in their place. Scriptural passages were quoted in refutation of this supposition. For Christianity to be a confirmation of the covenant made with Abraham we must prove fulfilment. Could Christians, apart from the belief that they advocate, prove that the promises made to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and his twelve sons, were in course of rapid development and fulfilment? He unhesitatingly answered they could not possibly do so apart from their beliefs. All that Christians could point to was that Jesus Christ was indeed the Messiah who was promised to Israel, and that he had fulfilled the various prophecies made in the Old Testament. In Abraham and his seed (which was Christ) all the nations of the earth had been blessed.

Dr. ALDER SMITH, in a paper on the A B C of the Scripture proof that the House of Israel is now a vast number, fulfilling Isaiah liv., said every Jew was an Israelite, yet it by no means followed that an Israelite was of the House of Judah, or a Jew (applause).

ISRAEL'S HISTORIC DEVELOPMENT.

The Rev. R. DOUGLAS spoke upon "Israel's Historic Development in the 19th century." The question, "Where was Israel?" was not the only one which modern historians and the modern Church could not solve. There was this, "Where did the Anglo-Saxons come from?" We saw here a race—he was appealing to common-sense—which, according to the first secular notices of them extended, existed as a progressive nation five or six centuries before Christ, in Asia, and they then emigrated westward, and finally settled down in N.W. Europe and the British Islands. They were a people who subserved to the laws of religion, who held a purer faith, and practised a purer morality than the rulers of the world. What was the real genesis of a race so exceptional? To the searching eye of reason there must be discovered in their earliest origin and history the roots and potential principle of their present condition. England, he contended, was Israel's son.

The first day's sitting then closed.

WEDNESDAY.

THE ORIGIN OF THE RUSSIAN AND THE BRITISH PEOPLE.

At the morning sitting of the Conference on Wednesday, there was again a small attendance. Major-General Rainey presided. The Conference was opened by an address on the "Origin of the Russian and the British people," by a rev. gentleman described on the syllabus as "Oxonian," but whose name is believed to be Milner. He referred his auditors at the outset to the 10th chap. of Genesis, where allusion is made to the sons of Japhet, and then proceeded to prove that the Russian peoples were descended from Japhet's sons—Gomer, and Magog, and Madai, and Javan, and Tubal, and Meshech, and Tiras. Illustrating his remarks by reference to a map, the rev. gentleman said that the Russian Empire contained a great number of peoples, but all kindred races. In one part there was the Muscovite people who inhabited the country around Moscow. These Muscovites, prior to the Christian Era, were dwelling near the Black Sea, and were then known by an almost identical name. In Central Asia, or the present debateable land between England and Russia, were a number of places with names of the same construction. Turning to Siberia they found that the capital of that vast district was Tobolsk, a name derived from Tubal, Japhet's son. In the far east of Siberia was a district known as Mongolia, so-called from the Mongolians or Mongols, a name again related to our Indian Mogul. The Mongols were the same people who, under the title of the Huns, overran the northern parts of Europe and Asia 1,500 years ago, and the greater part of European-Russia to-day was peopled by Siberian Mongols. At the time when the conquest took place the then Emperor or Czar of the Russias paid homage to the Chief of the Huns or Mongols. The Mongols represented a Japhetic people. Referring to the Cossacks, whom the rev. gentleman described as the mainstay of the Russian army, he said they were divided into three main divisions, the Cossacks, who occupied the Polish parts of Europe, those who dwelt between the Black Sea and the Caspian Sea, and those who lived in the region beyond the Caspian Sea. These he contended were descendants of Japhet, as were also the Uralian people, known to-day as Turkomans. He mentioned these things because he wanted to show the British were not as some considered a Japhetic people. He asked his hearers to carefully study the 38th and 39th chapters of Ezekiel, and they would find a very curious account relating to the Russian people who were descended from Japhet. The rev. gentleman then referred to another map, for the purpose of showing how the British people were descended from the captive Israelites. He stated that all historical evidence, as well as scriptural evidence, pointed out the seat of the captivity of Israel as a place to the south-west of the Caspian Sea, called Scythia. The early Greek writer, Herodotus, sometimes called the "father of history," and a writer generally to be relied on, especially when he stated facts on his own authority, said that in the middle of the seventh century, B.C., that country to the south-west of the Caspian Sea, or between it and the Black Sea, was occupied by a strange people. That was the period about which Israel was carried into captivity, and it was also the period at which according to Sharon Turner, the Anglo-Saxon historian, the Teuton races came to Europe, and that historian was also of opinion that they came from there. Apart from historical evidence there was independent scriptural proof. That proof was to be found in one of the books of the Apocrypha, namely, the second book of Esdras. When this latter account was compared side by side with the record of Herodotus it was found to be remarkably confirmatory of it. Thus it was clear that the ancestors of the Saxons came from the region of the Black Sea to the region of the German ocean in the seventh century, B.C. That day was Wednesday, so called from Woden, whom some people considered a myth. He was not a myth, but a great chief, concerning whom many mythical stories were told. He was a great hero, and was the leader of the ancestors of the Saxons when they came from the country of their captivity—Scythia. They were then, and subsequently known as Scythians, Scothians, Scoths, Visigoths, or Scots, and they invaded under Woden, the land of the Angles, Saxons, Jutes, Danes, and Normans. And so it was a great mistake for people to speak of the British race as a mixed race, for in reality there was not a more homogeneous race in the world, as the so-called mixed races were one family or tribe, who invaded the lands of other peoples, having under their chief left the land of their captivity on the shores of the Caspian Sea in the middle of the seventh century. (Loud applause).

Digitized by Google

HISTORY OF THE ANCIENT BRITISH PEOPLE.

"The History of the Ancient British People," formed the subject of the paper by Commander Roberts, R.N. There were one or two historians quoted by Sir Isaac Newton, who told us that the Ten Tribes went into that very region out of which Oxonian had brought them, and in that region they gave the name to the district of Albania and Iberia. Trace the Albanis and the Iberians through Europe, and the name would be found wherever they went until they came to Britain—(applause)—and Britain was called Albion, and Ireland was called Hibernia. The same district into which the Israelites went was called in ancient times Peucela, and wherever these Israelites went they left the name Peuce, which became changed into Picts. We had other names in the history of the people, and we find them keeping that name throughout their wanderings in Europe. Dr. Stukeley says, the Ancient Britons came from Phœnicia, Arabia, and Egypt. The same rule as to primogeniture prevailed in Etruria as with the Hebrews and in Britain, whereby the eldest son took a double portion of his father's property. The Etruscans were the first people who landed in Italy. Proceeding, the lecturer said it was interesting to mark the strong brotherly resemblance between the Britons and the Hebrews. The Jews recognised the likeness when they became acquainted with the Etruscans, and declared them to be the offspring of their brethren in Asia. Then, when the Etruscans landed on the coast of Wexford, they gave names to the district which still remain. The first record we had in the Grecian history of the ancient British race was traceable to Egypt, and it must be remembered that the Biblical record would allow of what he said. The Grecians' ancient historians, he said, were intimately connected with the British Islands. In conclusion, the lecturer said he could trace the British from Palestine through Greece, into Britain, and also the Briton into Etruria, and from Etruria back into Sidon, thus coming to the conclusion that we are descended from Israel.

The Rev. H. MARRIOTT, having delivered an address having reference to his travels in the Holy Land, the Conference adjourned.

FULFILLED PROPHECIES REGARDING ISRAEL.

At the afternoon sitting there was a fair number present. Major-General Rainey again took the chair. The first paper was read by Surgeon-General Grant upon "Prophecies regarding Israel Fulfilled in the New Testament." At the outset he said that it was a habit to make Scripture say more than it was intended to say of one thing, and less of another. This applied to the idea of some people respecting Israel. In Genesis xlix., Jacob called his sons together and told them that they should be fruitful in "the latter days," which clearly indicated the Christian dispensation. St. Peter and St. Paul both spoke of their own times as the "latter days." We know that the Jews did not preach the Gospel, and therefore it followed, from the repeated reference to the other House of Israel, that Christ's prophecy was in course of fulfilment in the time of St. Paul. Passing on, the speaker asked how materially the efforts of Christians to convert the Jews would be strengthened if they could convince them that they, too, were Israel, and that they enjoyed the privilege of direct revelation from God. It had been frequently affirmed that Benjamin formed an identical part of the kingdom of Judah, but there was no ground for such an assertion. The plain teaching of the Bible was that God made Israel a nation before Him for ever. He called Abraham alone, and blessed him. It was universally admitted that God's promises to Abraham pointed to Christ, and that they were destined to have their accomplishment in Him. He concluded by pointing out that Old Testament prophecies were fulfilled in the removal of Joseph into Egypt, the slaughter of the innocents by Herod, and in other ways, and urged that Israel must now be in possession of the blessing promised to Joseph as his birthright.

A KEY TO PROPHECY.

The next paper was read by the Rev. J. IDRISYN JONES, on "Anglo-Israelism; the key which unlocks the Prophecies." He said Anglo-Israelism furnished a key to the Scripture prophecies. No book was so dark as the Bible. There was no riddle so profound unless they possessed a key to the solution. Necessarily and designedly the Bible was in part a mystery. The key to Bible prophecy was to be found outside the Bible. The first discovery of Anglo-Israelism must have been made by some one who sought in current history a state of things analogous to the statements of prophecy. The key was simple. Apply the doctrine of post-millennial to prophecy, all was confusion and chaos. Apply in the same way the doctrine of pre-millennial, and chaos became order, and all was in clear and beautiful harmony. The points of prophecy which were to be gathered from the Bible, and were to be solved, were—(1) The Ten Tribes were to be lost; (2) they were to repair to the isles of the West; (3) they should be again re-united; (4) that re-united they should be the largest nation in the world; (5) that they should be an unconquerable people; (6) that they should be possessed of the Gates of their enemies; (7) that they should push on in their expansion to the ends of the world; (8) that they were to become a company of nations; (9) they were to be a Christian people, observing the Sabbath institution; (10) they were to be missionary and philanthropic in their spirit; (11) they were to lend, not to borrow from other nations; (12) they were to be blessed with the blessings of Providence above all other nations; (13) there was to be a re-union with the House of David; (14) they were to return to their own land; the land of the covenant is a fifth kingdom; and lastly, they were, as the people of the Messiah, to have dominion from sea to sea, to the ends of the world, and were to reign for ever and ever. Surely it was worth while to search for a key which would unlock the door to such a mystery as that. There must be some great nation which was destined to enjoy all those privileges. What nation was it? Not Russia. It did not meet the case. Not China. It did not possess the attributes. No single nation of Europe answered the description. Were they to spiritualise the prophecy, and take it as meaning the Christian Church? ("No, no," and laughter.) That would be confusion worse confounded. But suppose they took the British nation? Yes, there was the key. They had got it—(applause)—and from their lips might arise the cry, "It is the Lord's doing, and it is marvellous in our eyes." The British nation answered the description. In it the scattered Tribes were being re-united, were in the forefront of the nations of the earth, had never been conquered, and never could be conquered—(applause)—and were possessed of the Gates of the nations of the earth. Moreover, they were a Christian people, observing the Sabbath, given to philanthropic and missionary work, were lenders to every nation, and borrowers of none, and were blest with the blessings of Providence above all peoples of the earth. (Applause.) Here, then, was the key. The re-union with Judah and the other promises would come in their appointed time. So far everything was clear and consistent throughout. Bunyan, two hundred years ago, had a suspicion that he was one of the people with whom God made His covenant, and felt nothing more was needed to make his soul happy. But the light was denied him which now they were trying to spread. The more they examined this great question the more they felt the force of the words,—

Digitized by Google

"The nations not so blest as thee
Must in their turn by tyrants fall.
Whilst thou shalt flourish great and free,
The pride and envy of them all."

(Cheers.)

AN ANSWER TO POPULAR INFIDELITY.

At the evening sitting on Wednesday, the attendance was larger than at previous meetings. Major-Gen. Rainey again presided.

The first paper was read by the Rev. S. C. ADAM, on "British-Israel Truth; a complete answer to Popular Infidelity." The rev. gentleman said the prophecies of the Bible were always the parts which the infidel fastened on to taunt the Christian. He said God had not kept His promise to Israel; but if it could be shown as they had shown that Israel was the British people, then the Bible was shown to be literally true. In concluding he pointed out at some length the correspondence between the England of to-day and the Israel of prophecy.

ROMANISM REFUTED.

The Rev. R. DOUGLAS, in a paper on "British-Israel Truth a Logical Refutation of Romanism," said that everyone must believe that Romanism as it presented itself to us to-day was an enemy with which the Protestant Churches and Protestant nations yet have to deal. The look of contemporaneous Papacy was very puzzling. We must feel that Romanism had power in the world; and although he believed that the great fight of Israel as a Protestant power—not merely the Church of England, but all Protestant Churches amongst us—must prosper, though the fight of the future with Apostasy would not be in exactly the same form it which it was in the 16th century, he thought Protestants would be very foolish if they did not soon awake to the terrible, secret and silent it might be, but none the less terrible advances, that this enemy was making in various quarters. If we looked at Romanism as a Church or religious system, then we knew how we had had the influence, and had it still, to contend with; and if we valued the Bible, which was secured to us at the Reformation, we must feel that Romanism must be met. He had been astonished in various parts of the country to see with what boldness Romanists would come out now, which they would not a few years ago, and argue in defence of their system. There was, for instance, that champion of Romanism, Bishop Vaughan, of Manchester, who was never tired of telling us that we ought to insure the restoration of what he called the civil princedom of the Pope on religious grounds. We knew how since the Reformation we had had to fight with Rome politically. We also saw how, for a long time, Ireland had been the great battlefield of political papacy. We gave them emancipation, and we disestablished the Irish Church, and £365,000 of spoil went to the College of Maynooth, but they were not satisfied—they wanted what they called Home Rule. The point he was insisting upon was merely this, that Rome was carrying on a regular propaganda, a political agitation, and under whatever pretext that agitation might be carried forward, she would never rest satisfied until she had regained political ascendency in this country. Speaking with all loyalty, he was very sorry to see the part taken in connection with what was called the Papal Jubilee by this country, and that a gold vessel presented by Her Majesty was used in the sacrifice of the Mass. It was not properly a Papal Jubilee. That title was altogether a misnomer, for the Pope had reigned only a few years. We had a real Jubilee; not, as Mr. Champion said at the Wolverhampton Church Congress, because a lady had reigned fifty years. What kindled and sustained the enthusiasm of the British people throughout the world was the British-Israel revelation of the last fifty years. That was the marvellous work of God, the power of God's mercy which could be seen in a vastly increased population and the spreading of that Empire upon which the sun never sets, which kindled the enthusiasm of the British people, and because God had spared our Queen to see during this period such great advances in Christianity, civilization, in the spread of truth, and of everything that could purify and bless the world through British instrumentality (hear, hear.) And so the Pope must have a counterfeit, for Romanism was a system of counterfeits (hear, hear). Therefore they got up this Papal Jubilee, and he was only sorry that we did not act in the same way as the President of the United States so wisely acted when he sent, as his jubilee present to the Pope, a copy of the constitution of the Protestant American States engrossed on vellum (loud applause). The question came—which was a very important one—on what ground was our battle with Romanism to be fought? The argument that Romanists presented to educated minds, which, more than any other perhaps, influenced such men as Newman, Manning, and others—was "once a Church, always a Church." "It is impossible and inconceivable," said the Roman Catholic controversialist, "that however deeply a Church might fall into error after God had once for all ordained and called that Church, and given to it His Holy Spirit, it was against all our notions of the faithfulness of God and the immutability of His counsels, it was against all reason to suppose that He should finally withdraw His Holy Spirit from that Church." British-Israelism uprooted that argument of the Romanist (hear, hear). He entirely agreed with the major premise; he entirely allowed and steadfastly maintained that once a Church always a Church. But was there not a Church before the Church of Rome? What about the Church in the wilderness? (hear, hear). He denied that Britain was indebted to Rome for Christianity.

A brief address on the "Call to National Repentance," was next delivered by the Rev. H. MARRIOTT, M.A. This concluded the official programme of the Conference.

At the close, the Rev. C. L. WILLIAMS proposed a vote of thanks to Major-General Rainey for presiding. This was seconded by the Rev. R. DOUGLAS, and carried. Similar compliments were also accorded to the readers and speakers, and to those who had so kindly and hospitably entertained those who came to address the Conference.

The SECRETARY (the Rev. F. Aston) announced that it was intended to form in Wolverhampton a branch of the "Anglo-Israel Conference Association," and that the Association "further intended to hold Conferences in all the principal towns of the kingdom."—The Rev. C. L. WILLIAMS observed that he could not yet declare himself a convert, but he intended to inquire carefully into the whole question.

The Benediction brought the proceedings to a close.

FINANCIAL STATEMENT OF THE BRISTOL & CLIFTON ISRAEL'S IDENTIFICATION ASSOCIATION

For the Year ending December 31, 1887.

RECEIPTS.	£	s.	d.
Balance from Last Year...	2	11	7
Collections at Lectures ...	9	17	9
Subscriptions	10	1	0
Ditto for 1886 and 1888	0	7	6
Donations	2	17	6
	£25	15	4

EXPENDITURE.	£	s.	d.
Expenses of Deputations	1	19	0
Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Associtn. Affiliation Fee	1	1	0
Hire of Rooms for Mtngs.	8	15	0
Printing ... 7 15 1
Advertising ... 0 14 8
Postages, &c. ... 0 3 6
	8	13	3
Balance for New Account	5	7	1
	£25	15	4

Examined with Vouchers and found correct.

C. GODFREY ASHWIN, M.A.

January 1, 1888. ONSLOW ANDREWS, M.D., Hon. Treasurer.

Digitized by Google

THE JEWISH NATION—A MIRACLE ACCORDING TO THE REV. M. WOLKENBERG.

A REPORT of a sermon preached by the Rev. M. Wolkenberg, a Christian missionary to the Jews, was published in the Irish Times of Feb. 22nd, 1888. We ask our readers' perusal of the same, because in the statements of the rev. preacher we recognise all those stereotyped errors regarding Judah-Israel which are at the bottom of the opposition our Anglo-Israel views meet with at the hands of the clergy, and of many of the laity who refuse to recognise as Israel or Israelites any but the family of Judah. In Mr. Wolkenberg's opinion, "the Jewish people" are not only "Israel," which no doubt they are, but they are the only Israel the world contains, and here, of course, he is wrong. For "while all Jews are 'Israelites,' or 'Israel,' not all the Israelites are Jews." The preacher, a converted Jew, has not advanced beyond the mistaken point denounced in Jer. xxxiii. 24, R.V., where the prophet rebuked Mr. Wolkenberg's ancestors for the very fault he is guilty of himself. "Considerest thou not what this people have spoken, saying, 'The two families which the Lord did choose, He hath cast them off? Thus do they despise My people, that they should be no more a nation before them.'" Israel of the House of Joseph, or Ephraim, is "cast off" in Mr. Wolkenberg's estimation, and he does not seem to recognise them at all. His own people, the Jews, who are in fact only a scattered remnant—one of the two families of God—dispersed among all nations, he dignifies by the name of "a nation," miraculously preserved. He considers they have been kept separate from other nations "by divine grace," forgetting that their separation is a curse—the punishment of sin! He states that the Jews to-day "are probably as numerous as they were in the days of David and Solomon"—that is to say, he admits that the Jews have not increased in the least degree since B.C. 1010, or, during nearly 3,000 years; and, therefore, have not the blessing of multitudinousness promised by the Lord to the afterseed of Abraham. Not having this blessing, they are without the rest of the national mercies which were tied up with it in Gen. xxii. 17, 18, by the providence of God, and are, therefore, in the position of "Israel-disobedient," obnoxious to all the sorrows, disabilities, and curses which are proclaimed in the Scriptures against the children of Israel—that is, against the family of Judah, on whom, for the rejection and murder of their Lord, the Prince of Life, the Divine wrath has come to the uttermost (2 Thess. ii. 15, 16, R.V.). The preacher believed that the Jews were kept now a separate and distinct people by divine grace, and would continue to remain such until their mission shall have been accomplished fully.

Their mission, it seems to us, is to stand forth as the example and token of God's displeasure against disobedience and rebellion, as one, in short, of God's "two witnesses." They suffer His wrath and displeasure for the rejection of their King, but of the existence of the other, Christian, Israelite, House of Ephraim-Israel, the recipient of all God's love, blessing, and favour, purchased for them by their accepted Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ, Mr. Wolkenberg takes no account at all! He deprives God thus of one of His own selected "two witnesses," and expresses no contrition and no sorrow for the daring—we may add, almost impious act. But God will not dispense with His second witness, Ephraim-Israel, if the preacher persists in so doing. God's witnesses are two, not one, family—nation, and people. "Judah is His sanctuary, but Israel is His dominion." Judah for disobedience has had "the kingdom of God" taken from him, and it has been transferred by a divine decree which knows no appeal and no change, to "a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof." That nation is God's favoured, chosen family and messenger, Ephraim, whom "He hath betrothed to Himself for ever" by espousals which have no termination and no bitter separation (Hos. ii. 19, R.V.). By righteousness, judgment, lovingkindness, mercy, and faith, the ties never to be severed, and which are destined to be everlasting, the Lord has resolved to bind Ephraim-Israel to Himself, as Hos. ii. 20, R.V., affirms. Why, then, should preachers like Mr. Wolkenberg ignore them all, and tell us that the disobedient family, the one on whom God's displeasure and "wrath to the uttermost" at present rests, is the one which "divine grace" protects to be a blessing to the world, saves amid the wreck of nations, and comforts with the mercies promised exclusively to the House of Israel in the passage he chose as the text in Jer. xxxi. 34—40! With this portion the preacher joined Jer. xxx. 11, thus claiming for "Israel-disobedient," or the Jews, what God reserves for "Israel-obedient," Jacob, and Israel of that prophecy. Our quotation is as follows:—

A special sermon to Jews and Christians was preached in St. Peter's Church on Sunday evening last by the Rev. M. Wolkenberg, upon the above subject. There was a large Christian congregation, including some fifty Jews, who came in response to the invitation of the rector, the Rev. Canon Jellett. His Grace the Lord Archbishop of Dublin was attracted by the novelty of the occasion, and he gave the benediction at the close of the service. The preacher—himself a Christian Israelite—basing his discourse on Jer. xxx. 11, xxxi. 34—40, said:—Miracles and prophecy were the two indispensable credentials of revealed religion, and these were designed by God for the purpose of preparing men to receive the message delivered in His name. Mosaism as well as Christianity were ushered into the world with signs and wonders, which ceased only when they had taken such deep roots as to admit of a spontaneous growth and expansion. Miracles and prophecy were such signs, yet with this difference, that while the former having lost their evidential force in process of time, are now only objects of faith or of dispute: the latter are becoming more and more confirmatory as the events announced are being accomplished. Nowhere is this more strikingly illustrated than in the continued national existence of the Jewish people. Though not possessing at the time of the prophet Jeremiah those ties by which a nation is held together, they were still to remain a distinct and separate people. Whilst the Babylonians, the Assyrians, the Persians, the Greeks, and the Romans, who each in turn swayed the destinies of mankind, have passed away and nothing but ruins remain to tell of their former glory and magnificence, Israel alone has survived the wreck of the ancient world. Oppressed and ground down by each in turn, he has seen them rise one after the other like so many bubbles on the stream of time, and vanish to appear no more. In spite of the universal conspiracy formed against them in all ages, the Jews are probably as numerous and as full of vital energy to-day as they were in the days of David and Solomon: and it is because he has yet a mission to fulfil, that by divine grace they had been kept a separate and distinct people until now, and, according to the text, shall remain as such until his mission shall have been accomplished fully.—From the Irish Times, Feb. 22nd, 1888.

So far the Christian Jewish preacher. If he is satisfied in his own mind, as no doubt he is, that the Jews to-day represent all that there exists on earth of God's ancient people, the sons of Abraham, and that all the promises of God to the patriarchs are theirs, where we would ask him is the great and mighty nation, endowed with vast numbers, wealth, power, Empire, and Christian privileges, which Israel was to become in the latter day? Certainly the Jews have none of these! They are, as a body, the enemies of Christ; and as such, are dispersed to the four corners of the earth, suffering the wrath of God, without one of the mercies and gifts God promised to Israel-obedient in Deut. xxviii. 1—15, and xv. 6. Where is "the House of Joseph" in enjoyment of Reuben's birthright in these our latter days? (Gen. xlix. 1, 22—26; 1 Chron. v. 1, 2). Mr. Wolkenberg may shut his eyes to these verities in his pardonable partiality for his own kith and kin. But he must ever entertain a distorted view of God's revealed plans and purposes, if he can imagine, as he does, that God can cast away the House of Ephraim and constitute the disobedient, rebellious, House of Judah, as his missionaries, servants, and messengers, whereas the fruitful Ephraim is His honoured delegate to the nations—the sought-out and found ones, to whom the Lord Jesus Himself has said, "Behold Me! behold Me! as to a nation not called by His name" (Isa. lxv. 1, 2, R.V.).

Digitized by Google

NOTICES.

All communications intended for the Editor, to be addressed: "Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Clifton, Bristol.

SUBSCRIPTIONS. £ s. d.

Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free 0 7 6
Two Copies (including Double Numbers) 0 13 6
Three Copies " " " 1 0 4
Four Copies " " " 1 5 6
Six Copies " " " 1 16 4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-grand, London, to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C., or F. W. PARRY & Co., 29, Paternoster-row, London.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

Contents Bills and Show Cards may be obtained on application to the Publishers.

Advertisements should be sent to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

Prepaid Advertisements are inserted at the rate of thirty words for 1s. 4d.

New Work on the Identity of Lost Israel
By the late BISHOP TITCOMB.

Now ready, in Cloth Gilt, Bevelled Boards, Imperial 8vo. Price 3s.; sent Post Free for Postal Order or Stamps.

A MESSAGE TO THE CHURCH
FROM
THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.
BY THE LATE
RT. REV. BISHOP TITCOMB, D.D.

The Kentish Mercury, April 21st, says:—"This book derives a peculiar and pathetic interest from the circumstances that the proofs of its concluding pages were revised by the author during the last few days of his life, and that its publication took place simultaneously with his death. One feels, in noticing a book under such circumstances, a special responsibility, when the author is removed beyond the reach of human criticism of whatever kind. But in truth it is impossible to glance at these pages without being struck by the deep and reverent research into the prophetic Scriptures which it manifests by the tone of piety that pervades it, as well as the lucidity and eloquence of its style. Nor is it necessary to express concurrence with the views of the gifted and pious author in his prophetic theories to give this praise. Of course with regard to Dr. Titcomb's prophetic interpretations there will be much difference of opinion, but there can be none in the mind of any impartial person who reads this work, either as to the diligence with which the testimony of the prophets has been studied, or the earnestness of the expositor in stating his conclusions. Bishop Titcomb, it is well-known to those who have studied his works, was one of the school of prophetic interpreters who believe that the British Empire, or perhaps, more accurately speaking, the English-speaking race, are identified with those whom we have been in the habit of calling the 'Lost Tribes of Israel.'" (Then follow several extracts).

ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet Court, Fleet Street.
F. W. PARRY & Co., 29, Paternoster Row, E.C.

Just Published, Price Threepence.
WHAT IS OUR HOPE FOR THE CHURCH IN ISRAEL?
By E. M. RUSH ("A E I").
(Author to "The Answer to the Eastern Question," etc.).
London: H. BURNSIDE, Bookseller, Blackheath, S.E.

Dr. JOSEPH WILD'S WORKS
The most useful works on the subject.
NEW EDITION JUST PUBLISHED.
THE LOST TEN TRIBES
Price 3s., post free 3s. 3d.
'We have much pleasure in directing attention to this handsome volume. . . We promise our readers that if they procure this work, and will peruse it, they will find 'Our Identity' discussed in a clear, novel, racy, and from an American point of view, which is sure to interest."—Banner of Israel.
THE FUTURE OF ISRAEL AND JUDAH.
Price 2s., post free 2s. 3d.
R. BANKS & SON, RACQUET-COURT, FLEET-ST.

PIANOFORTES, Harmoniums, American Organs. Why buy at shops inferior made instruments, and pay large profits, when you can buy direct from the Maker High-class Instruments, and save 50 per cent. by so doing? Full value allowed for old Instruments in exchange as part payment. Write for Price Lists and Testimonials to G. LINSTEAD, 2, Oseney Crescent, Camden Road, London. Established 1874.

ROYAL BLIND PENSION SOCIETY OF THE UNITED KINGDOM.—Patron: HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN. President: THE DUKE OF GRAFTON, K.G.—This Society, founded in 1863, pays life pensions to the Blind Poor at their own Homes, in all parts of the United Kingdom, in sums ranging from 10s. to 25s. per month. There are 540 of these afflicted people now on the Funds, and 203 others awaiting election. Only the want of funds prevents the Committee assisting all these necessitous cases. Help is most urgently needed. No costly Establishment and Administrative Expenses are incurred. Subscriptions and Donations will be gratefully received by the Officers, or may be paid to the Bank of England, or London and Westminster Bank (Southwark Branch). Treasurer, John O. Bumsted, Esq., 36, King William Street, E.C. Hon. Secs., Messrs. Thomas Pocock and A. S. Dodson. Secretary, W. Elliott Terry. Office, 235, Southwark Bridge Road, London.

Price 6d., post free 7d.
THE MESSENGER,
A Monthly Expositor of the Fulfilment of the Scriptures in the Anglo-Saxon Folk, the Israel of God.

Each number contains contributions from high-class writers on Identity Subjects, selections from the Discourses of Rev. Dr. Wild, and a chapter of an Important New Work, entitled—
"RUSSIA JAPHET," by "OXONIAN,"
Author of "Israel's Wanderings," &c.

London: F. W. Parry & Co., 29, Paternoster-row.

Fifteenth Thousand.
BY REV. HENRY ROE.
Israel's World. Origin and Destiny of British Race, Colonies, and Empire. 2d., post free 2½d. Fifty post free from H. Roe for 4s. 9d.
Philo-Israel says: "I am perfectly delighted with your pamphlet."
C. E. Priestly, Esq., says: "For its size I never read a better work. I have given away two lots of fifty each, and enclose money for fifty more. I have sent it to clergymen, bishops, and archbishops."
Rev. Thomas Lowe says: "What the works of Mr. Hine failed to do in my enlightenment, 'Israel's World' has accomplished. I now read the Scriptures in a new and vivid light."
Going to Africa. 1s., post free 1s. 1d.
Fernando Po Mission. 1s., post free 1s. 1d.
West African Scenes. 2s., post free 2s. 2d.
Consecration. 2d., post free 2½d.
50 post free from H. Roe for 4s. 9d.
Robert Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.; and Rev. H. Roe, Dawley, Salop.

MR. EDWARD HINE has returned from his lecturing tour in America. Friends wishing to arrange for him to lecture can communicate with Isaac Loveland, Shoreham, near Sevenoaks, Kent, at present fixing no dates. Mr. Hine's publications have had a large circulation, and can be obtained of F. W. Parry & Co., 29, Paternoster Row, London, E.C.
Forty-Seven Identifications, 6d., post free 7d.
Cui Bono? 6d., post free, 7d.
Lost Israel Found. 3s. 6d., post free. 3s. 9d.
Also The Nation Warned by the Scripture Teachings of the Great Pyramid. 6d., post, 7d.

HUMAN LIFE.—FIFTY YEARS' Record of Facts, Principles, and Discoveries (just published, complete) Relating to the Improvement and Preservation of Human Life on Earth. Origin and true treatment of diseases. A series of articles by DR. SAMUEL BIRLEY, M.D., Ph.D. Book form, 50 pages. SENT FREE to every applicant by the publishers, GORDON B. MURRAY & CO., 50, Theobald's-road, Holborn, E.C. Write to-day.

FITS! FITS!! FITS!!!
ALL PERSONS SUFFERING FROM EPILEPSY should send name and address to JAMES OSBORNE, Medical Pharmacy, Ashbourne, Derbyshire who will forward, free of charge, full particulars, with Testimonials, of the most successful remedy ever discovered for this distressing malady. Sent to all parts of the world. Reference permitted to Rev. J. BAKER, M.A., 80, Bolton Road, Pendleton, Manchester.

WORKS BY PHILO-ISRAEL.
The Geography of the Gates. With Map and six full page, and one double-page, Illustrations, printed on plate paper. 208 pages, in handsome cloth, gilt Price 3s. 6d., post free 3s. 10d.
The History of the House of Israel. How They Were Lost and How They Were Found. Told for the children. Price 6d., cloth 1s.; post free 7d. and 1s. 1d. Fifth edition.
A Resume of the Scriptural Argument, Proving the Identity of the British Race with the Lost Ten Tribes. Price 1d.; 6s. per hundred, postage 6d.
Our Identity: What it is Not; What it is; and Our Obligations To-day in Respect to it Being a Lecture recently delivered in London by Philo-Israel, and published by special request. Price 2d., a reduction for quantities.
Our Identity with the House of Israel. Price 4d., Reprinted from "Clifton Chronicle Letters'
An Elementary Digest or Sketch of the Chief Facts and Teachings of the Great Pyramid of Egypt. Adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific 56 pages, Illustrated with Diagrams, price 4d., post free 5d. 10th Thousand.
Are the English People the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel? An Inquiry Establishing the Identity of the British Nation with the Lost Ten Tribes. 4d.
Anglo-Israelism. True, Not False. Being Philo-Israel's Reply to the Rev. Canon Bell's pamphlet, "Anglo-Israelism: True or False?" Price 1d., 6s. 6d. per 100. 16 pages, crown 8vo.
London: Robert Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

WHO ARE WE & WHAT IS OUR MISSION?
By J. Thornhill Harrison. With seven Maps. Hand some cloth, gilt, price 5s. Free for P.O.
Robert Banks & Son, Racquet Court, Fleet Street, E.C.

Price 4d., by post 5d.
LIGHT SHED BY THE GREAT PYRAMID of EGYPT On the Last Days of this Dispensation, from A.D. 1814 to A.D. 1922.
London: Robert Banks and Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; or of the Author, Dingwall, N.B.

LUNG SAVE YOUR LIVES BY TAKING TONIC
LUNG OWBRIDGE'S TONIC
LUNG LUNG TONIC TONIC
LUNG THE MIGHTY HEALER. TONIC
LUNG It has a power over disease hitherto TONIC
LUNG unknown in Medicine. TONIC
LUNG Are you at all Weak-chested or inclined TONIC
LUNG to be Consumptive, with just a touch of TONIC
LUNG Cough now and then? TONIC
LUNG "Try this Wonderful Medicine." The TONIC
LUNG Cough and Weakness will disappear as TONIC
LUNG if by magic, and you will feel a strength TONIC
LUNG and power you never had before. TONIC
LUNG HAVE YOU A COUGH? TONIC
LUNG A DOSE WILL RELIEVE IT! TONIC
LUNG HAVE YOU A COLD? TONIC
LUNG A DOSE AT BEDTIME WILL TONIC
LUNG REMOVE IT. TONIC
LUNG Bronchitis & Asthma it relieves instantly TONIC
LUNG The Spasms of Coughing so dreadful in TONIC
LUNG Whooping Cough become less with each TONIC
LUNG dose of the medicine. TONIC
LUNG Prepared by W. T. OWBRIDGE, Chemist, Hull TONIC
LUNG Sold in Bottles 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d. TONIC
LUNG and 11s. by all Chemists and Patent TONIC
LUNG Medicine Vendors. Wholesale all London TONIC
LUNG and Provincial Houses. TONIC

Certain 'HARNESS' Cure.
ELECTROPATHIC BELT
FOR RHEUMATISM
Major PAKENHAM, Longstone House, Armagh, writes:—"The Electropathic Belt has completely cured me of rheumatic gout. I suffered intense agony for two years. I now feel strong and active."
Guaranteed to generate a mild continuous current of Electricity, which speedily cures all Disorders of the Nerves, Stomach, Liver and Kidneys. Thousands of Testimonials. Pamphlet & Advice free on application to Mr. C. B. Harness, Consulting Electrician, the Medical Battery Co. Ltd.
Only Address, LONDON, W.
52, OXFORD ST. (Corner of Rathbone Place.)
Call to-day, if possible, or write at once

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. F. W. PARRY (late GUEST & Co.), 29 PATERNOSTER-ROW WEDNESDAY, MAR 14, 1888. [All rights reserve

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."

(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. XII., No. 586. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, MARCH 21, 1888. [PRICE ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
The Death of the Emperor of Germany	117
Russian Extension South and West	117
More Evidence Connecting the Ancient Inhabitants of Ireland with the Phœnicians and Hebrews. Part VIII. By Joseph Thomson	118
The Kingdom of God given to a Nation other than Israel	120
The Rev. Dr. Wild on the Coming of Shiloh	121
The English Language	122
The Omnivorous Race	123

THE DEATH OF THE EMPEROR OF GERMANY.

ON March 9th, 1888, at 8.30 a.m., the aged Emperor of Germany peacefully passed away in Berlin, leaving a sorrowing nation to mourn the irreparable loss United Germany has sustained at this crisis in the history of the newly-cemented Empire. The Crown Prince, now Emperor and King, Frederick III., is labouring under what till recently men thought was a mortal disease. He is, happily, recovering, and may live to reign in prosperity, if that be the will of God. The death of the aged monarch, in the 92nd year of his age, is an event which probably will be the turning-point in the history of the world. While he remained, peace, it was always said, would be maintained; but after him would come the Deluge! We refrain from anticipations of the future, since we have not the prophetic function, and because we know that God works by agencies quite beyond men's knowledge and anticipation. But it seems likely that the removal of the aged Kaiser will liberate passions and ambitions which were restrained by his mere presence. The uncertainties that now surround the Powers of the Continent will, we may be sure, compel them all to greater watchfulness, and induce a state of preparation for war, which will intensify the existing crisis. None dare now disarm! Germany cannot afford to do it while Russia is hastening to threaten her Eastern frontier and foments fresh disturbances in Bulgaria. France will not do it, while Alsace and Lorraine, Metz, and Strasbourg remain German property. The state of armed truce, therefore, will continue, and with bated breath we must remain watching the outcome of an occurrence which doubtless will issue in far-reaching consequences. It will hasten in some way, known only to God, but not yet to us, the restoration of Israel, Judah, and Manasseh to their land, with the return of "The mighty God of Jacob," Jehovah-Jesus, to reign over His own people and over the nations of the world according to the prophecies.

RUSSIAN EXTENSION SOUTH AND WEST.

THE state of affairs on the German and Austrian frontier towards Russia is becoming exceedingly critical. The whole complication has arisen in consequence of the restlessness of Russia, which judges that this is the proper time to begin to work her way southwards towards Constantinople and the Holy Land, and westward to curb the power of Austria which bars her way. To enable her to prosecute these designs it is needful for Russia to keep Bulgaria in a continual ferment, and prevent a settled Government being established there, because the result of that would be the consolidation of several small States into powerful opponents to her progress southwards. Meanwhile Russia is massing her troops over against the Austrian frontier, and the latter Power, to protect herself, is making preparations for a vigorous defence. Great Britain and Italy as friends of the parties have asked Russia her intentions, and the only answer they can obtain to their enquiries is that Russia cannot endure a Roman Catholic as Prince of Bulgaria, and she means, no doubt, on such pretexts as this to get rid of him and establish a Russian prince there in order to be within striking distance of her true quarry, "The Gate." Russia regards the present Prince of Bulgaria with "implacable hostility," and will get rid of him if she can. What the end will be of this armed truce no one can say; but England and Italy are determined to put off war as long as they can, for they agree with Prince Bismarck "that if war must come, it had better come late than early." What the European Powers—Germany, Austria, and Italy, mean by the disposition of their forces we see taking place is this (the Times states it with almost brutal frankness)—"that the extension of Russian power South and West must be stopped somehow, and the alternative to that tranquil consolidation of Free States which Russia detests, and which England, Austria, and Italy are endeavouring to promote, is a great war!" Here, then, is a state of things which is clearly prophetic. Three of the chief nations of Europe are labouring for peace, and doing all they can to promote it. They are arming meanwhile as if they had no hope of ultimately securing it. The cause of all the trouble is a Power, restlessly ambitious, resolved to secure possession of a city and a land which God has sworn to give to His people Israel, and constantly scheming to acquire that which the British, being Israel, must in the last resort prevent her ever even so much as touching. Our battles meanwhile must be fought by the German and Italian Powers, since they must bear the brunt of Russia's first attack. Whether Bulgaria and its affairs will be the ostensible cause of the outbreak of war no one can yet say; but that it is coming no one can doubt. Russia has her part to play in the coming desolations of Europe; she is the "Gog" of prophecy, and she has her destiny, as she believes, to work out. The Gate of her house is Constantinople, and why should she not possess it? If Austria and Germany oppose they must be destroyed. If Britain objects she can be punished in India and made powerless in Europe. If she seize the Holy Land and attempt to hold it against Russia, so much the worse for those foolish English! Russia holds the Gates of Palestine to the North and West, and nothing will be easier by-and-bye than to come down upon that tiny land "like a storm" and annex it to the holy Russian Empire, after Armenia and Persia are absorbed, and India torn from these Islanders' grasp by a resolute attack upon her Afghan frontier.

Digitized by Google

These, no doubt, are Russia's hopes and aspirations. For a hundred years and more she has been steadily working for the time now at hand, when the Sultan's power being overthrown, some master must be found for Constantinople and the Dardanelles. No one has a better right to the reversion of that inheritance than the nation whose Gate the Peerless Port most surely is; and therefore Russia, arguing thus, is not likely to desist until she meets the fate which God has provided for her in His wrath (Ezek. xxxviii. and xxxix.). We are now watching the devolution of events closely connected with the restoration of Israel, Judah and Manasseh to the land of their inheritance.

The world and the statesmen thereof little heed the hidden causes of all the complications taking place around them among the nations; but the pivot round which all are revolving is the Houses of Israel and Judah. They are to be restored; but their restoration must be accompanied by the destruction of the national Polities, which have always been their enemies. "The day of the Lord's vengeance" is synchronous with "the year of recompenses for the controversy of Zion" (Isa. xxxiv. 8.) The controversy of Zion governs the whole issue. Russian "Gog," the enemy of the Lord and of His people, is first to be used, we believe, as the Lord's battle axe to punish the nations. She turns then to destroy her last and most persistent foe, British-Israel, and is met and annihilated by the Lord Himself on the mountains of Israel, as Ezekiel describes in chapters xxxviii. and xxxix.

What the details of these events may be, or the dates of their occurrence, we stop not to inquire, and we have indeed no means of exactly knowing; but the general outlines we may be certain of. How events small and great are leading up to the magnificent issues before us, even our secular writers are quite able to perceive. The Times, on Feb. 28th, wrote as follows on the subject of the "great war" which now threatens the world, as the alternative to "the tranquil consolidation of the Bulgarian and other free States" at present forming. The writer expresses himself cautiously, but it is quite easy to read between the lines, in order to see how momentous, nay, solemn, are the times in which we live; also how critical are the events immediately before us. He said:—

> In which way the question (of peace or war) is to be decided in the immediate future depends upon some very large causes whose operation if uncomplicated it would be easy to foretell, and upon some comparatively small and trivial circumstances the exact effect of which is difficult to measure. Foremost among these is the exceedingly precarious condition of the German Crown Prince combined with the great age of the German Emperor. Although the acute apprehensions which agitated the German people a few days ago have been to some extent allayed, that is rather because human nature cannot remain indefinitely at high tension than because there is any real improvement in the condition of the heir to the throne. It needs no great medical knowledge to read between the lines of the bulletins from San Remo sufficient to indicate that the case is one of extreme gravity. From day to day we hear of new symptoms, or of old symptoms under a new description, but, however lightly or dexterously they may be treated, we have the patent facts that the patient is making no general progress towards health, and that a distinguished London physician, with abundance of work awaiting him at home, finds it necessary to take up his abode at San Remo. In all the circumstances it is impossible not to feel that the tenure of supreme authority in the German Empire is at present exceedingly precarious, and that a very wide field is opened for speculation by the contingencies which suggest themselves to the most careless observer. It is probable that these contingencies are the subject of anxious thought at St. Petersburg no less than in Berlin, and that a good deal depends at this moment upon a calculation of chances involving many very delicate and painful considerations.

MORE EVIDENCE CONNECTING THE ANCIENT INHABITANTS OF IRELAND WITH THE PHŒNICIANS AND HEBREWS.

By Joseph Thomson.

PART VIII. (Continued from page 102.)

XVIII.—THE DANANNÆ, OR DANANNI.

The Danannæ, or Dananni, were also an ancient people of Ireland, who, according to some writers, had settled in the northern parts of the island. Tradition says that they originally inhabited the cities of Falia, Goria, Finnia, and Muria in North Germany, and spoke the language of that country: but, as O'Flaherty observes, an immense number of Irish antiquarians have asserted that they were inhabitants of the northern parts of Britain, particularly of those places which went then by names of Dobar, and Indobar. Camden says in this part of Britain is the river Dee, which makes O'Flaherty suspect that the name of Tuath-Dee, i.e., a people residing by that river—was thereby occasioned. He does not, however, dare to trace any affinity between the name Danann and that of the Danes, it being notorious that it was not until after the introduction of Christianity that this scourge of humanity, and of the Latin nations particularly, had emerged from their previous obscurity, bringing desolation and death in their train by ravaging the homes of sanctity and religion, and obliterating all previous civilization.

Dr. Villanueva will not positively claim the Dananns as of Phœnician birth, though he admits such a claim is not altogether groundless, when it is known that in that language are to be found the words "danihain," i.e., illustrious, generous, noble: and "Danni" for Danani or Danita, the inhabitants of the city of Dan, (afterwards called by the Greeks, Paneas, Cæsarea Paneæ, and Cæsarea Philippi, but by the barbarians Belina), at the foot of Mount Lebanon, the northern boundary of the ten Israelitish tribes, and still more celebrated as the spot where the Phœnicians worshipped the graven image given them by Micah, and where Jeroboam erected the golden calf. These considerations, however, Dr. Villanueva waves (needlessly we think) on the probability that the Aradians, or natives of the island of Arad, and who were friends and allies of the Phœnicians, had given their names (as the sound implies) to those towns in Ireland, called Ard, Ardes, Arde, etc.; and on the probability that the Aramæans, i.e., natives of Aramœ, gave rise to the name of the Irish Aremorice, as will more fully appear in the sequel.

With respect to the Dananns it may be remarked that O'Brien asserts that they were neither German nor British; and notwithstanding the opinion of many Irish antiquarians, backed up by O'Flaherty, says it is egregiously erroneous. Mac Geoghegan writes, "The colony of the Tuatha de Danains (thus called from three of their chiefs, named Brien, Inchor and Jacorba— who were High Magi, or diviners, as the word Tuatha signifies, brothers and children of Danan, daughter of Dealboith, of the race of Nemedius), was in possession of Ireland, according to the Psalter of Cashel, for 197 years governed by seven kings successively—viz., Nuagha Airgiodlamh, Breas, Lugha-Lamh-Fada (in Latin "Longimanus"), Dagha, Delvioth, Fiagha, and the three sons of Kearmada—viz, Eathur, Teahur, and Keahur, who reigned alternately, a year each, for thirty years. These three brothers were married to three sisters, and they took surnames from the different idols which they worshipped. Eathur who had married Banba, was called Maccuill, from a certain kind of wood which he adored. Teahur espoused Fodhla, and worshipped the plough; he was called Mac-Keaght. Keahur, husband of Eire, displayed better taste than his brothers, as he took the sun for his divinity, and was thence named Mac-Greine, that is to say, the son of the sun."

Digitized by Google

XIX.—THE DAMNII.

The Damnii, an ancient people of Ireland mentioned by Ptolemy, settled in the present county Down, province of Ulster. Some think they had this name from the Brigantine term Davon, or Daun, i.e., a bay or river: Daunii, Dunin, etc., derived thence signify the country of lakes and rivers. In this meaning it corresponds to the Irish Magh Gennuisg, i.e., a track, or part of a country. In some copies of Ptolemy they are called Damnonioi, which makes some suspect that the Damnii, whom he mentions, were so called from Dunum, now Downpatrick. In Celtic dun is precisely the same thing as berga, i.e., a place of abode, and the Teutonic berg, i.e., a fortress upon a hill, or a hill surrounded by a fortress. These words come from the Arabic and old Phœnician, in which are found barg, i.e., a tower, and barga, a villa. Hence comes Barca, the name of a town among the Vetones, in Spain: Barceo another town among the Vaccei; Barch, among the Edetani; Bargos, a town of the Carpetani; Barjas, Bergua, Berga, Berge, Begos, Borge, Burgas, and similar names to be met with throughout Spain. Bergio was an ancient fortified town of the Lacetani, by Livy designated as "the long town," which it afterwards changed for Celsona; its modern name is Solsona.

Dr. Villanueva supposes that the Irish "Damnii were a tribe of Spanish Phœnicians, descended from the Damnii, or Damniani who built the ancient city of the Edetani, called Damiana," by which name Ptolemy notices it. Some Spanish writers derive the term from the Celtic da-min, i.e., a habitation beside a mountain or river; but Villanueva thinks it "more probable" that it was so called by its Phœnician inhabitants from the worship which they paid to their idols, damain, or damon signifying, in their language, idols or images. Or, perhaps the name is geographical, from the word dumain, i.e., the descendants of Dumah, a city of Syria, or Dimona, which was one of the lot of Judah (Joshua xv. 22); or from a city of Arabia of the same name, and called after Dumah, a son of Ishmael (Gen. xxv. 14); of which latter it is said in Isaiah, "the burden of Dumah" (Isa. xxi. 11), in the LXX rendered Idumea; and the Phœnicians, it is to be noticed, never forgot the Arabian cities from whence they had emigrated into Syria.

To the same origin may be referred the name of the Damnonii, or Damhnonii, who according to ancient writers occupied the districts of Cornwall and Devonshire, and who afterwards took possession of the ancient Hy-Moruisge, or Morisk, an extensive district in the west of Ireland, now the county Mayo. Others, however, think this name comes from the Celtic, or Cambrico-Britannic word Dyvneint, or Duvnon, i.e., depth of water; Duvnonii, Dabhnonii, or Damhnonii, would, therefore signify a people settled beside the deep water, i.e., the sea. O'Flaherty says that they were called Fir-Domnan, i.e., the men, or clan of Domnan; and that several places in Ireland have been named from them, as Inver-Domnan, where they first landed from Britain, afterwards called Inver-mor, [Ion-ver, or In-ver, (Gaelic) "worthy of tillage;" from ion, "deserving of," and ar, "to till." The word generally indicates a fertile spot], now Arklow, a river and seaport town in Wicklow, and capital of a barony of the same name. "Avonmore, i.e., the great winding stream, corresponds with its character, the banks continually forming the finest waiving lines, either covered with close coppice woods, or with scattered oak and ash of considerable growth, the ground in some places smooth meadow, and in others rising in romantic cliffs and craggy precipices. At Avondale the Avonmore meeting with the Avon beg, i.e., little Avon, the united streams assume the name of Ovoca, and passing by Shelton it empties itself, through a bridge of nineteen arches, into the sea at Arklow, whence it keeps its stream distinctly marked from the sea for near half a mile from the shore."—Fraser.

XX.—THE CORIONDI.

The Coriondi or Curiondi, a tribe of the Irish Brigantes were celebrated sailors, and lived almost constantly upon the water. Ptolemy mentions them, and it is generally admitted that their settlements lay in the present county of Wexford. A tradition of the inhabitants is that their chiefs were the Mac-Mooroghs, or O'Moroghs, who in the old Irish Annals are called the Leinster Kings. Certain families of them had separated from the general body, and settled in the adjoining county of Carlow in a place then called Hy-Cabha-nagh, a district of the barony of Idrone.

The generally received opinion is that this name, Coriondi, is composed of the Irish words corcach, i.e., vessels, and ondiu, i.e., a wave, and thus it may be equivalent to navigators. They were also called Corthagh i.e., "the rowers," and their place of settlement Hy-Moragh, i.e., the maritime country. On the authority of Camden, however, some maintain that they were inhabitants of Corcagia, or Cork, and the founders of that city in Irish called Corcugh, and which was the capital of Munster and the wealthiest and largest city in the whole country, next to Dublin. Seeing also that the small vessels or canoes of the ancient British were called curucæ (modern coracle, and still in use in some rivers in Wales), they think it very probable that the town of Cork was so called; as we should say "the dock-yard," or naval store; and its inhabitants coriondi, i.e., navigators, from those small vessels or boats, curucæ. In shape, as a little boat, the coracle was something like a flat half-walnut shell, the frame was made of sticks or laths forming a sort of lattice work, and this was covered with hides: for a seat there was a cross plank and it was propelled by a paddle, and was so light that it could easily be carried on the back. In the days of Herodotus similar boats were used on the Tigris; and Pliny tells us on the authority of an old historian, that the Britons even made six day's voyages in such boats. Not very long since they were still quite common on the coast of Ireland, though the appearance of them was such as only the most venturesome or experienced in handling such wicker-work, canvas-covered, cockle-shell boats would trust himself in, when, in calm weather, in ten fathom water, every particle might be seen through her bottom on that of the sea almost as clearly as an object through a window: instances have been known where, accidentally putting a foot down between two ribs, it went through, and the person was obliged to keep the leg in that position until land was made.

"Where in leathern hairy boat,
O'er threatening waves bold mortals float."

Some again derive the name Coriondi from corion-diu, which Dr. Villanueva says, for aught he knows, may signify a sea-hide. Certainly the Britons to this very day, call hides by the name of cruyn, from the Greek krous, to which the Latin corum also has reference. Dr. Villanueva, however, goes on to say that in the name itself there is the clearest evidence that this was a Phœnician people, and the accounts given of them by the Irish historians, if carefully read, will confirm this conclusion. For, from their skill in building vessels, the great number and variety of them, from a trading vessel and the man of war to the cumbrous lugger and the light skiff, and their facility in handling them, they were appropriately, though metaphorically characterised as curin, i.e., fishes, which is still applied to the Britons at the present day.

Nor may it be altogether improbable that they were Phœnicians who had left Caurium, an ancient city in Spain, now called Coria; or from a city of Boetica, Cauria Siarum, now called Coria del Rio; for the Phœnicians lived in both, and both names are from cauria, or coria, which in Phœnician means a city, a villa, or a camp. Hence also the name of many cities in the lot of Judah; Cariathiarim (A.V., Kirjath-jearim) i.e., the city of woods; Cariath-sepher, the city of letters; Cariath Arbe, that of the Patriarch Enoch (Josh. xv. 9, 13, 15, marg.), as well as of several towns in Spain, as Corias, Coristancas, Lacoriana, etc. Thus Coriondi, or Curiondi, quasi Corin, would mean the descendants of the above mentioned cities of Caura, or Caurium, or quasi Caurionin, the robust and substantial people of those places; on implying strength, fortitude, and wealth.

Digitized by Google

(To be continued).

"THE KINGDOM OF GOD" GIVEN TO "A NATION" OTHER THAN ISRAEL.

We have lately seen that our Lord's threat that "The kingdom of God taken from the Jews would be given to a nation bringing forth the fruit thereof," was applied by a certain reverend preacher to the British nation, and the loss of the kingdom announced as their doom, if they failed to act up to their duty as missionaries to the Mahommedan races of the East, by failing to supply the funds required to send the Gospel to their perishing millions in India, Africa, Arabia, and elsewhere. We have again heard an application of the Lord's words in a new direction, and a fresh denunciation of the British Church and nation made by reason of the latter's too close resemblance to the falling Church and people of Sardis (Rev. iii. 1—3.) The Lord knew Sardis' works, and found that that Church had "a name that it lived, but it was dead." He therefore admonished the Church, saying, "Be thou watchful and establish the things that remain, which are ready to die, for I have found no works of thine fulfilled before God." Then followed the threat—"Remember, therefore, how thou hast received, and didst hear, and keep it, and repent. If, therefore, thou shalt not watch, I will come as a thief; and thou shalt not know what hour I will come upon thee." As Sardis was destroyed as a Church, and nothing remains now of Church or State but a few miserable ruins, so, said the preacher, might our British Church and State be levelled to the ground and disappear, if we too fail to take heed nationally, repent, watch, and remember how we have received the Gospel, and how grievously we have in our works shown that we have "a name that we are alive, but in truth are in God's sight—dead." Beware, he repeated, lest in that case "the kingdom of God be taken away from you, and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof" (Mat. xxi. 43, R.V.). Here, then, are two cases in which nationally we are, according to the clerical mind, liable to the terrible reproof the Lord Jesus administered to the Jews distinctly, for the coming sin of crucifying the Saviour of the world. If we nationally fail to supply means sufficient to open large missions to Mahommedans, we shall incur this particular punishment. And next, if our national religion is of no better and more real a character than that of the people of Sardis, we shall be equally obnoxious to the divine chastisement He indicated, and suffer the loss of "the kingdom of God," now admitted to be in our keeping.

When we hear such statements from the pulpit, and know that they proceed from earnest, godly ministers of the Word, we are at a loss to know on what principles the Word of God is to be interpreted. The national punishment described in Matt. xxi. 43, was directed, undoubtedly, against the Jews alone, and we find no authority in Scripture for the declaration that a modern nation failing to come up to the standard man may erect as to the amount of pecuniary aid the people should give to some missionary cause, must necessarily be visited by the same terrible penalty as the Jews suffered. Nor do we find that a Christian nation exhibiting symptoms of religious or spiritual declension is to be certainly visited with the fate of Sardis, losing the "kingdom of God" once given to it, in order that it may be transferred to another people bringing forth the fruits thereof. Such nation, we suppose, would succumb, in turn (because of sin) to some third, fourth, fifth, or twentieth nation, to be all tried and then all cast away, one after the other, by the Lord. We do not so read Scripture! nor do we find that the God of Israel is represented there as so variable and fickle a Being as our preachers declare He is! He says of Israel, in Mal. iii. 6, "I, the Lord, change not; therefore ye sons of Jacob are not consumed." The "nation" to which the Lord Jesus Christ told the Jews, "The kingdom of God" should be transferred, must needs be the nation of Ephraim-Israel; since that branch of the Israelite family was specially named "the kingdom" in 1 Kings xi. 35. It was designated "the kingdom of Jehovah" in 1 Chron. xxviii. 5, being the kingdom of David's throne over Israel (1 Kings viii. 25). That House was destined to bring forth the fruits of "the kingdom of God," as Isa. xxvii. 6, shows; for God created, made, and fashioned Israel, to show forth this His praise. Such being the case, will any one venture to say that "the kingdom of God," which has once been given by the Lord to the British nation, as Israel, can ever under any circumstances whatever be removed from its enjoyment and given to another people? It were insult to the Lord God of Israel to say so! What if the Missions to the Mahommedan races have been hitherto somewhat neglected? Perhaps the Lord's time to bless them had not come. Missions to the heathen on a large scale are only a hundred years old, and the British have not been deprived at all of "the kingdom," because of the neglect and delay.

There may be a wave of declension passing over Israel, as there was long ago, prior to the Reformation, during the 18th century, and since that again quite recently. Cannot God give more grace? Has He not promised to His people Israel that He will show them His Word, His statutes, and His judgments exclusively, and that He will never so deal with the non-Israelite heathen races? Does this mean that to punish a temporary lapse, or one for a long period of time, He means to disinherit them? and after promising them the world for their inheritance, that He will at last take "the kingdom" from them and bestow it upon a nation with whom He has made no covenant at all? Is that nation one whose retention of the blessings appertaining to the kingdom will be as transitory and illusory as British-Israel's was? We can believe none of these things! This is not the Gospel which the clergy preach to us when it refers to the individual sinner! In his case safety and the enjoyment of the promises do not depend on the poor, powerless, miserably weak sinner's efforts, but upon the faithfulness of God the Son, their Almighty Redeemer and Saviour.

When the chosen nation is in question, we know that God's promises will be inviolable in their favour, and that what He promised He will surely perform! The nation's worthiness is nil, but Jehovah is its righteousness. The nation's sanctification and meetness for reward is nil, but Jesus Christ, the King of Israel, the Righteous, is its sanctification and its redemption. We thank God for our nation's security, founded as it is on the promises of God. We are, however, sorry that our accredited teachers in spiritual things, forgetting the faithfulness of the Lord, declare to His Inheritance that they are in danger of being cast out of His remembrance; also that there is a possibility of an alien nation not related to the afterseed of Abraham being endowed with all their blessings, contrary to God's solemn promises, oaths, and covenants made with the Hebrew race, and with their seed for ever. May God forbid it!

A paper-maché dome has been erected at the Greenwich Observatory. The dome is said to be as strong as though constructed of wood and iron, and so light that it can be turned without machinery.

Digitized by Google

THE REV. DR. WILD ON THE COMING OF SHILOH.

THE sermon of the Rev. Dr. Wild, preached in Bond-street Church, Toronto, and reported in "The Canadian Advance" of December 20, 1887, puts a new light on Jacob's prophecy regarding Judah, recorded in Gen. xlix. 10: "The sceptre shall not depart from Judah, nor a lawgiver from between his feet, until Shiloh come. And unto Him shall the gathering of the people be." Dr. Wild holds with us that "the Shiloh" here mentioned is the Lord Jesus Christ yet to come, not the Lord Jesus at His first Advent 1,888 years ago, also that "The Sceptre" or kingly power on earth over Israel, God's chosen people, is now wielded by one of the tribe of Judah of the House of David. This the Doctor rightly tells us must be so, because the Lord as a Jew according to the flesh is seated on the Throne of His Father in heaven, waiting till He shall come down on earth to claim the throne which He always maintains is His own. Thus the throne of Solomon, the son of David, was the one He called Jehovah's in 1 Chron. xxix. 23. That throne is David's for ever by a covenant of salt, and as it is now typical of the throne of the Son of God in heaven (Himself sprung from Judah), it stands to reason that the typical ruler on earth, ruling over Israel till Shiloh come, must be of the House of David of the tribe of Judah, according to the promises and prophecies. The Doctor's argument, as he stated it himself, is as follows. We ask for it our readers' careful attention.

According to the flesh, our Saviour came of the tribe of Judah; He is one of those despised Jews, and you cannot help it. The genealogical tables of Matthew and Luke mark this out as certain, and we can read in Heb. vii. 14, "For it is evident that our Lord sprang out of Judah, of which tribe Moses spake nothing concerning priesthood." Our Saviour according to the flesh is a Jew. Shiloh, the Prince of Peace, the true King and Lawgiver, came on His first incarnation into this world through the tribe of Judah; they were honoured by this above all other tribes. Christ being of this tribe, His kingly representative, or vicegerent on earth—mark what I say—must always be of this tribe. In other words, if God has a typical throne on earth, representing His heavenly one, and if He shall have a kingly representative on such a throne, that representative must be of Jewish blood. The throne and sceptre are given into the hands of Judah until Shiloh shall come again to sit on one and sway the other. Until near the time of Joshua's death, the commonwealth of the Hebrews was ruled over by judges for about 450 years. The first of these judges was Othniel, of the tribe of Judah, and the last of the fifteen was Samuel. The Hebrew nation almost up to the time of the death of Samuel was a theocracy, and the only theocracy we ever had in this world. God was their king, the judge or governor in civic affairs, and the high priest in spiritual matters; and the prophet, head over all, was the human voice for God to speak correction to king, judge or people. He could go forth and say, "Thus saith the Lord." The judge could get instruction and directions through the high priest, the high priest could get instruction and direction from the Divine King by some particular use of those strange instruments, the Urim and Thummim.

Near the death of Samuel, the people murmured and wanted a change in the order of government; so we read in 1 Sam. viii. 5 that a deputation waited on the old judge, Samuel, and said unto him, "Behold, thou art old, and thy sons walk not in thy ways; now, make us a king to judge us like the nations." God permitted this change, granted their request, and Saul was the first king elected. We find, however, in King David's reign, that the Lord pledged two things concerning this form of government and throne. He made a covenant with David and his seed like the one He made with Noah after the flood, that He would no more drown the world, and He has kept His oath up to to-night any way—so He made a covenant with David that He should forbid any other change until Shiloh should come. He stated to David that his throne should stand until then, and that some one of his seed or descendant should always be seated thereon. This you will read 2 Sam. vii.

These two guaranteed conditions are very important points, for the simple and literal meaning and teaching is that David's throne is now somewhere in this world in existence, and wherever it is David's seed is on it, as sure as the sun is in the heavens. The Lord called this throne His own, the only one He ever claimed, and there is no other throne that you can claim as a type on earth of this throne. There is one High Priest yonder, Christ, and you can only have one High Priest at a time. You cannot multiply thrones and call them God's. In 1 Chron. xxix. 23 we read, "Then Solomon sat on the throne of the Lord as king instead of David, his father." An important point like this wants the law and testimony to seal it. I could give you any amount of testimony, but I will give you only a few passages: "Thy kingdom shall be established for ever before Me, thy throne shall be established for ever." Among the Orients they had a peculiar way of ratifying an oath, and the most sacred oath was what is called the "salt oath," when they interchanged a little bit of salt with each other. That is described as the most sacred oath, hence you read in 2 Chron. xiii. 5, "Ought ye not to know that the Lord God of Israel gave the kingdom over Israel to David for ever, even to him and to his sons by a covenant of salt."

Wherever that throne is to-day on God's earth it will survive all the revolutions and changes that are coming; it never can disappear. Let me add the following also, from Psa. lxxxix. 34—36: "My covenant will I not break, nor alter the thing that is gone out of My lips. Once have I sworn by My holiness that I will not lie unto David. His seed shall endure for ever, and his throne as the sun before Me." People object to what I say about the Ten Lost Tribes' theory, and the British throne being David's throne. Now, where is it? It is somewhere on God's earth, for it is to last as long as the sun, and I think the sun is yet with us, though I did not see much of it these last few days. The throne and seed are in existence. I may make a wrong choice, but you must make a more correct one; it will not do for you to rise up and say that what I say is all nonsense, for such a statement as that simply turns back upon you, and says you are unwise. In my humble opinion, these plain and emphatic words have their fulfilment and embodiment in the British Throne and Britain's Queen, and come what may that throne is secure, come what may, no alien can ever succeed Her Majesty, if this throne is the throne of David, and she be the seed of David. The British Davidic monarch can and will only yield to Shiloh when He comes. To Him the sceptre will be handed, and He will take His place on the throne.

So far the Rev. preacher in Toronto. The problem is fairly stated by him. "The kingdom," and the throne over Israel, exist somewhere to-day. The only thing to do is to find that "kingdom," which by 1 Kings xi. 35, and Acts ii. 6 is clearly no other than the Ten-Tribed kingdom of the House of Israel. We have by every variety of evidence shown, times out of number, that the British nation and Empire constitute the "kingdom of the House of Israel." It follows therefore that the throne and kingdom we seek to find are the British throne and people, and that these are destined to abide in union, till Shiloh come, "whose right it is" to reign and rule over Israel for ever. This kingdom appertained once to the House of Judah. But the King Himself, in Matt. xxi. 43, pronounced on that House the sentence of deposition and deprivation. He declared that the honour of constituting "His kingdom" would be transferred to "a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof."

Scripture itself must interpret Scripture. If we turn then to Dan. vii. 27 we find the king's decree set out in regard to the race to whom "the kingdom" is to be transferred. He said "the kingdom and dominion and greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven shall be given (compare Matt. xxi. 43) to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom shall be an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey Him." "The saints of the Most High" are "the children of Israel, a people near to Jehovah," as Psa. cxlviii. 14, R.V. teaches us. "The kingdom" appertaining to that people, is "the Ten Tribes," as 1 Kings xi. 35 declares. The nation "bringing forth the fruits of the kingdom of God" must necessarily be the people or kingdom described in God's Word as destined to do that very thing. In Isa. xxvii. 6, R.V. accordingly, we find the people we seek named thus:—"In days to come shall JACOB take root. ISRAEL shall blossom and bud and fill the face of the world with fruit." It appears then that the nation our blessed Lord designated as the "fruitful" one was the "fruit-bearing" House of Israel, the rooted stem of Jacob—who therefore must be "Ephraim," the "fruitful" one of Gen. xli. 52, R.V.; or the Ten Tribes of Hosea's prophecy. The British are they. And the British throne therefore is Jehovah's throne; occupied just now by a descendant of the House of Judah, through the line of David according to the prophecies. Let Israel therefore praise the Lord, and learn that "their nobility obliges them" to act out their character, and become the fruit-bearing people in respect to the whole outlying, non-Israelite, Gentile, world!

Digitized by Google

THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE.

WE take the following from the Christian Million newspaper of January 5, 1888:—

In Shakespeare's day the English language was confined to the British Isles. It was here spoken by five millions of people. It is now the native and dominant language in Great Britain, Ireland, the United States of America, British America, Jamaica and other West India islands, South Africa nearly to the Zambesi river, Australia, Tasmania, New Zealand, and many other islands and colonies. These English-speaking countries have an area of more than ten million square miles, or more than one-fifth of the habitable globe.

Beyond this, English is the official language, and is being rapidly taught to the two hundred and sixty millions that inhabit the British East Indies. It is the international language of commerce in China and Japan. It is the language of the high seas, spoken in every maritime port. It has the greatest literature in the world, and fully one-half of the entire newspaper press of the world is English to-day.

So far the journalist. But though he writes for the Christian Million, he forgets to say that English is the language of a church which has its daughters in the four quarters of the world, and that by means of its English Bible, multiplied inconceivably by the agency of the British and Foreign Bible Society and other similar British Associations, the language is becoming the language of Christianity, in its protesting, witnessing aspect amongst all the nations, families, and kindreds of the earth. Geographically it will be seen that where the language has gone in its wondrous expansion from these two small Islands of the West, there the British Anglo-Saxon race has also gone in advance, and has assumed in such localities a dominant position. The language merely follows the race. It cannot precede it. Thus in the enumeration of lands where the language now predominates it is seen that we do not travel out of the British Empire, or out of the domain of the Anglo-Saxon race. Thus the whole North American Continent is English-speaking, and inhabited by the Anglo-Saxon race. They occupy in force British America, the West Indian Islands, the colonies of South Africa, the great continent of Australia, Tasmania, New Zealand, the Mauritius, and St. Helena; and therefore in all these parts we find the language assuming a dominant position. At sea this race is supreme. "Britannia rules the waves." Therefore, we expect to find accordingly that English is the language of commerce, is spoken in every port, in every Custom House, and is likely to be adopted by India, China, and Japan as the Lingua Franca of their millions, a second vernacular. In a newly started Canadian journal, called the "Anglo-Saxon," published at Ottawa in Nov. 1887, we have a valuable treatise on the subject of the English language, from which we take the following as really blind evidence in proof of Our Identity. In regard to the coming universality of our tongue the writer quotes the North British Review thus:—

"Let it be known also that English bids fair one day to become the language of the civilized world. This is not saying too much. It speeds from land to land, from sea to sea; they talk it in India and America, the furthest East and the utmost West; at Gibraltar too, and at Capetown, the rounding points of Europe and Africa;

> And who in time knows whither we may vent
> The treasures of our tongue? To what strange shores
> This gain of our best glory shall be sent,
> To enrich the unknowing nations with our stores?

The only languages which can now pretend to compete with it in this walk are the German and the French; and English is by nature more adapted than either for becoming the speech of vast multitudes, being more simple than the one, more expressive than the other, and more musical than either. Again, turning to the literature of this country, we may see another reason for arriving at a similar conclusion. The very general expectation of a golden age is a remarkable feature of the present times (1850). Some fish for it in political changes, but all whose opinion is worth having, look for it in the world's becoming more Christian in the spread of the church, and thus also in the spread both of those ghostly blessings of which itself is the bearer, and of that social happiness of which it was meant to be the harbinger. Now without forgetting that the powerful are not always the messengers of the Almighty, (a lesson so common as to be taught in every fairy tale) but calmly and unvauntingly judging from the works in English alone on religion, in poetry, and philosophy, we must see that it is the tongue best fitted for going on this errand, of fulfilling the behests of Christian kindliness; its religion being deeply practical and of the best, as in Leighton, and Taylor, and Bunyan; its philosophy coming home to men's bosoms and businesses, as in Bacon, and Locke, and Butler; and its poetry as in Milton and Shakespeare, being loftier, and wiser and better than any other. This is no dream, and if not, how weighty must become every decision as to the language."

As to the powers of the English language, listen to the weighty opinion of Jakob Ludwig Grimm, the celebrated philologist and archæologist:—

"The English language has a veritable power of expression, such as, perhaps, never stood at the command of any other language of men. Its highly spiritual genius and wonderfully happy development and condition have been the result of a surprisingly intimate union of the two noblest languages in modern Europe, the Teutonic and the Romaic. It is well known in what relation these two stand to one another in the English tongue; the former supplying in far larger proportions, the material groundwork; the latter, the spiritual conceptions. In truth the English language may, with all right, be called a world language, and, like the English people, appears destined hereafter to prevail with a sway more extensive even than its present, over all portions of the globe. For in wealth, good sense, and closeness of structure, no other language at this day spoken deserves to be compared with it, not even our German, which is torn, even as we are torn, and must first rid itself of many defects before it can enter boldly into the lists as a competitor with the English."

Emerson, in his English Traits, also claims for the Saxon the strength bringer to the English language:—

"It is a tacit rule of the language to make the frame or skeleton of Saxon words, and when elevation or ornament is sought, to interweave Roman, but sparingly; nor is a sentence made of Roman words alone without loss of strength."

These, we think, are sufficient answers to the cry of continentals that our English is not a pure well, undefiled—but is a hotch-pot or stew made of words culled from every clime by rough sailors, commercial travellers, and brainless milords, then pitched into the cauldron of the public press and ladled out to school teachers, and dictionary makers, and thus incorporated and appropriated without acknowledgment by John Bull and his island and his

Digitized by Google

"English ban dogs." Listen to this ye believers in English opera:—

"Our speech can hardly become more polished than it is; hardly also may its tones be improved, for though it has not the prevailing mellowness of the Italian, or the sustained dignity of the Spanish, it has, like the pianoforte, such a happy blendingof both, that any change would only take away from what is great beauty, variety in the compass of sound; and as for more words and phrases, the English tongue is already so fully equipped, and so powerful that (take it for all in all) it stands at the head of living languages."—North British Review, 1850.

So far the Canadian journalist. If the German philologist Grimm be correct, and we cannot doubt his verdict, then is our language destined to all appearance to prevail "over all portions of the globe." That is, the English-speaking British race must be there, and so give its vernacular to the world. But "all portions of the globe," are just the parts where God means His people Israel to rule and reign; for He declares that the seed of Abraham is "heir of the world," and that race as "the people of the saints of the Most High" (that is "the children of Israel") are endowed from their Maker, Creator, and Former, with "the kingdom and dominion and greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven." Just where Grimm then finds that the English language must finally prevail, there God's word declares that Israel will reign supreme, as the vicegerents of the Lord God of Israel, Jehovah-Jesus, Himself, "whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom and all dominions shall serve and obey Him" (Rom. iv. 13, R.V.; Dan. vii. 27, R.V.). We may conclude then, reasoning from this and other data, that the British English-speaking folk are Israel, the future universal rulers of the planet, under God's own unalterable appointment, and knowing this we may rejoice with joy unspeakable, and praise the Lord who has assigned to us nationally so glorious a destiny, miserably ungrateful, unworthy ones though we be!

THE OMNIVOROUS RACE.

A GOOD many years ago we drew attention to the fact, that the Anglo-Saxon race attracted to itself all others, and that it had the faculty, peculiar to itself, of assimilating all Europeans of whatever nationality, and in a short space of time changing them also into Anglo-Saxons in language, religion, physique, manners, and customs. Thus, when Germans become naturalised subjects of the Queen, or citizens of the United States, one or two generations suffice to see them transformed into Englishmen or Americans, undistinguishable from the rest of their fellow-subjects. So the Huguenots, who immigrated into England only two hundred years ago, are now absorbed by the surrounding population, and cannot be identified among Londoners as French. The fact, also, is recognised in America, and was alluded to by the Times, in an article which appeared as a leader, on August 29, wherein the wealth and future prospects of the States were the subject of discussion. The writer said:—

It must be remembered that, though every nation pours its emigrants into America, it is the English race which is dominant there. A single generation is enough to turn a German or a Swedish settler into a thoroughbred American, assimilated to his native-born neighbours. The Irish-American is a more difficult individual altogether, but even he, after two generations of lobbying and political intriguing, usually settles down into an ordinary citizen, and becomes a hardworking man of business, with a proper contempt for political "bosses." It is this extraordinary power of moulding all incoming races into their own likeness which is, perhaps, the most remarkable feature of the Anglo-American people, and, as it seems to grow stronger instead of weaker as times goes on, it is an augury of peace for the future.

Dr. Wild, of Toronto, has a very characteristic passage on this same subject in one of his recent sermons, published in the Parkdale News for August 11, 1887, having reference to Manasseh or the United States, and inquiring whether they will be "Foreignised" or "Americanised"? He said:—

Providence began the country in New England with the tether very close. If it had not been for the early settlers starting as they did where would Manasseh have been to-day? They would not have had any Sabbath at all. I can see the reason of God beginning such a discipline that He might continue on His Sabbaths. Foreigners have a right to come, as we read in Isa. lvi., and just as my stomach and the laws of digestion convert mutton, beef, and pork into Dr. Wild, so Manasseh will convert Negroes, Chinese, and everybody into Americans. You do not need that a cucumber should grow on the top of my nose because I eat one. So those people will learn Manasseh's ways, his ideas, his customs. He has plenty to eat for years to come. We are not to keep out the stranger; anybody can come in as laid down in Isa. lvi., provided he accept the covenant, Keep the Sabbath-day. You say, "I won't"; then you must stay out, Sir! All the world is invited into this circle on the same conditions. It is not selfish, you see. You may read Israel's work and destiny as portrayed by the prophets, and you will see how swiftly Providence is putting into their hands the balance of power in this world. He has the land to start with, and by this very means have room and resource to carry out any enterprise. He is also blessed with a natural increase, greater than any other race or people, and consequently they will rule themselves, and make their land a place for Christians to dwell in. God is giving them the surplus millions of the Gentile nations, and so increasing Israel's power to fulfil his God-appointed mission. Had we time we might touch upon the territory of Ephraim. It is marvellous that this country of Canada, in which we live, is still larger than that of Manasseh. Why did God keep these broad acres for years? He knew of what was to come in years after. Let us be faithful, and as Manasseh and Ephraim march on hand in hand to the millennium day in peace and good will. The Lord bless us all. Amen.

So far Dr. Wild. We see by our own home experience, as well as from his evidence in reference to America, that ours is an omnivorous race. The alien folk, who take refuge on our shores and "naturalise," are, in process of time, transformed into Britons or Anglo-Americans, and become so to all intents and purposes. Our race being the strongest, absorbs them as soon as they settle among us. But how does it come to pass that our nation has the power to absorb individuals of all other races when brought into contact with them, and why do not other nations, such as the French, Germans, Austrians, absorb the British element when the latter lives among them? The reason is plain and simple. The Anglo-Saxon or British races are the remnant of Israel, and as a people chosen of God, and blessed by Him as none others are, have the promise of a continual existence under the divine favour. To no other people is there the same privilege accorded; and as Israel is destined to be the heir of the world, and the possessor of the kingdom, and dominion, and greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, this race is bound to grow, and gradually to embrace within its folds all nations, families, and kindreds of the earth, in order that by so doing it may administer to them the blessings which lie at God's right hand reserved for them. These, however, can only be had in connection with Israel, and under her protection. Hence it is unutterably important that more and more of the earth should be joined to Israel, and that constant additions should be made to the British and American nations in order that those who thus join these Polities may become thereby partakers in Israel's blessings, by developing into Israelites themselves. It is better for the world to be united to Israel, and thus partake of her blessings and privileges, rather than, being separated from her, to suffer the vengeance of the divine wrath which is about to be poured out on all the Gentiles who refuse to recognise the divine precepts, laws, and statutes.

AUSTRALIA TO ENGLAND IN ONE MONTH.—The Orient liner, Orizaba, has arrived at Plymouth from Australia. The passage occupied thirty-two days three hours, and is the fastest on record.

Digitized by Google

NOTICES.

All communications intended for the Editor, to be addressed: "Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Clifton, Bristol.

SUBSCRIPTIONS. £ s. d.

Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free 0 7 6
Two Copies (including Double Numbers) 0 13 6
Three Copies " " " 1 0 4
Four Copies " " " 1 5 6
Six Copies " " " 1 16 4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-grand, London, to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C., or F. W. PARRY & Co., 29, Paternoster-row, London.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

Contents Bills and Show Cards may be obtained on application to the Publishers.

Advertisements should be sent to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

Prepaid Advertisements are inserted at the rate of thirty words for 1s. 4d.

New Work on the Identity of Lost Israel

By the late BISHOP TITCOMB.

Now ready, in Cloth Gilt, Bevelled Boards, Imperial 8vo. Price 3s.; sent Post Free for Postal Order or Stamps.

A MESSAGE TO THE CHURCH FROM THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.

BY THE LATE

RT. REV. BISHOP TITCOMB, D.D.

ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet Court, Fleet Street. F. W. PARRY & Co., 29, Paternoster Row, E.C.

Price 1d. One doz. post free 1s.; 100 post free, 6s. net.

WORK:

A THOUGHT OF THE PAST, PRESENT, AND FUTURE.

BY E. M. RUSH (A E I),

Author of "The New Old Story." "The Answer to the Eastern Question," "A New Light," "The Emblem of the Empire," etc., etc.

ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-st., E.C.

Price 2d., by post 2½d. Second Edition, Revised.

A SUMMARY OF ANGLO-ISRAELITE TEACHING,

And of the Scripture Proofs on which it rests.

By SURGEON-GEN. J. M. GRANT, M.D.,

President of the Cheltenham Association, and Vice-President of the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association.

LONDON: ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet Court, Fleet Street, and all Booksellers.

Just Published, Price Threepence.

WHAT IS OUR HOPE FOR THE CHURCH IN ISRAEL?

By E. M. RUSH ("A E I").

(Author to "The Answer to the Eastern Question," etc.).

London: H. BURNSIDE, Bookseller, Blackheath, S.E.

Dr. JOSEPH WILD'S WORKS

The most useful works on the subject.

NEW EDITION JUST PUBLISHED.

THE LOST TEN TRIBES

Price 3s., post free 3s. 3d.

'We have much pleasure in directing attention to this handsome volume. . . We promise our readers that if they procure this work, and will peruse it, they will find 'Our Identity' discussed in a clear, novel, racy, and from an American point of view, which is sure to interest."—Banner of Israel.

THE FUTURE OF ISRAEL AND JUDAH.

Price 2s., post free 2s. 3d.

R. BANKS & SON, RACQUET-COURT, FLEET-ST.

PIANOFORTES, Harmoniums, American Organs. Why buy at shops inferior made instruments, and pay large profits, when you can buy direct from the Maker High-class Instruments, and save 50 per cent. by so doing? Full value allowed for old Instruments in exchange as part payment. Write for Price Lists and Testimonials to G. LINSTEAD, 2, Oseney Crescent, Camden Road, London. Established 1874.

Price 6d., post free 7d.

THE MESSENGER,

A Monthly Expositor of the Fulfilment of the Scriptures in the Anglo-Saxon Folk, the Israel of God.

Each number contains contributions from high-class writers on Identity Subjects, selections from the Discourses of Rev. Dr. Wild, and a chapter of an Important New Work, entitled—

"RUSSIA JAPHET," by "OXONIAN,"

Author of "Israel's Wanderings," &c.

London: F. W. Parry & Co., 29, Paternoster-row.

Fifteenth Thousand.

BY REV. HENRY ROE.

Israel's World. Origin and Destiny of British Race, Colonies, and Empire. 2d., post free 2½d. Fifty post free from H. Roe for 4s. 9d

Philo-Israel says: "I am perfectly delighted with your pamphlet."

C. E. Priestly, Esq., says: "For its size I never read a better work. I have given away two lots of fifty each, and enclose money for fifty more. I have sent it to clergymen, bishops, and archbishops"

Rev. Thomas Lowe says: "What the works of Mr. Hine failed to do in my enlightenment, 'Israel's World' has accomplished. I now read the Scriptures in a new and vivid light."

Going to Africa. 1s., post free 1s. 1d.

Fernando Po Mission. 1s., post free 1s. 1d.

West African Scenes. 2s., post free 2s. 2d.

Consecration. 2d., post free 2½d.

50 post free from H. Roe for 4s. 9d.

Robert Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.; and Rev. H. Roe, Dawley, Salop.

MR. EDWARD HINE has returned from his lecturing tour in America. Friends wishing to arrange for him to lecture can communicate with Isaac Loveland, Shoreham, near Sevenoaks, Kent, at present fixing no dates. Mr. Hine's publications have had a large circulation, and can be obtained of F. W. Parry & Co., 29, Paternoster Row, London, E.C.

Forty-Seven Identifications, 6d., post free 7d.

Cui Bono? 6d., post free, 7d.

Lost Israel Found, 3s. 6d., post free, 3s. 9d.

Also The Nation Warned by the Scripture Teachings of the Great Pyramid. 6d., post, 7d.

LADIES!! Our New Spring and Summer Patterns of Dress Materials are now ready, and we invite every reader of this paper to write for them. Patterns will be sent post free to any address. All wool Cashmeres, Merinos, Serges, Beiges, Lace Cloths, Costume Tweeds, Suitings, Checks, Stripes, and every description of Woollen Dress Materials in Black and all the newest and most stylish colours for the coming season; and in prices to suit all purses. Any length cut, and all parcels are sent carriage paid to any address, either by parcels post or rail. Write at once for patterns, and you will be astonished when you see them.

AN AMAZING OFFER!!—We shall give a very handsome Brocaded Silk Handkerchief with each dress-length ordered from us during this season.

LUTAS C. LEATHLEY, Armley, near Leeds.

HUMAN LIFE.—FIFTY YEARS' Record of Facts, Principles, and Discoveries (just published, complete) Relating to the Improvement and Preservation of Human Life on Earth. Origin and true treatment of diseases. A series of articles by DR. SAMUEL BIRLEY, M.D., Ph.D. Book form, 50 pages. SENT FREE to every applicant by the publishers, GORDON B. MURRAY & CO., 50, Theobald's-road, Holborn, E.C. Write to-day.

FITS! FITS!! FITS!!!

ALL PERSONS SUFFERING FROM EPILEPSY should send name and address to JAMES OSBORNE, Medical Pharmacy, Ashbourne, Derbyshire who will forward, free of charge, full particulars, with Testimonials, of the most successful remedy ever discovered for this distressing malady. Sent to all parts of the world. Reference permitted to Rev. J. BAKER, M.A., 80, Bolton Road, Pendleton, Manchester.

WORKS BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

The Geography of the Gates. With Map and six full page, and one double-page, Illustrations, printed on plate paper. 208 pages, in handsome cloth, gilt Price 3s. 6d., post free 3s. 10d.

The History of the House of Israel. How They Were Lost and How They Were Found. Told for the children. Price 6d., cloth 1s.; post free 7d. and 1s. 1d. Fifth edition.

A Resume of the Scriptural Argument, Proving the Identity of the British Race with the Lost Ten Tribes. Price 1d.; 6s. per hundred, postage 6d.

Our Identity: What it is Not; What it is; and Our Obligations To-day in Respect to it Being a Lecture recently delivered in London by Philo-Israel, and published by special request. Price 2d., a reduction for quantities.

Our Identity with the House of Israel. Price 4d., Reprinted from "Clifton Chronicle Letters'

An Elementary Digest or Sketch of the Chief Facts and Teachings of the Great Pyramid of Egypt. Adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific 56 pages, Illustrated with Diagrams, price 4d., post free 5d. 10th Thousand.

Are the English People the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel? An Inquiry Establishing the Identity of the British Nation with the Lost Ten Tribes. 4d.

Anglo-Israelism. True, Not False. Being Philo-Israel's Reply to the Rev. Canon Bell's pamphlet, "Anglo-Israelism: True or False?" Price 1d., 6s. 6d. per 100. 16 pages, crown 8vo.

London: Robert Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

WHO ARE WE & WHAT IS OUR MISSION?

By J. Thornhill Harrison. With seven Maps. Hand some cloth, gilt, price 5s. Free for P. O.

Robert Banks & Son, Racquet Court, Fleet Street, E.C.

Price 4d., by post 5d.

LIGHT SHED BY THE GREAT PYRAMID of EGYPT On the Last Days of this Dispensation, from A.D. 1814 to A.D. 1922.

London: Robert Banks and Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; or of the Author, Dingwall, N.B.

LUNG SAVE YOUR LIVES BY TAKING TONIC
LUNG OWBRIDGE'S TONIC
LUNG LUNG TONIC TONIC
LUNG TONIC
LUNG THE MIGHTY HEALER. TONIC
LUNG It has a power over disease hitherto TONIC
LUNG unknown in Medicine. TONIC
LUNG Are you at all Weak-chested or inclined TONIC
LUNG to be Consumptive, with just a touch of TONIC
LUNG Cough now and then? TONIC
LUNG "Try this Wonderful Medicine." The TONIC
LUNG Cough and Weakness will disappear as TONIC
LUNG if by magic, and you will feel a strength TONIC
LUNG and power you never had before. TONIC
LUNG HAVE YOU A COUGH? TONIC
LUNG A DOSE WILL RELIEVE IT! TONIC
LUNG HAVE YOU A COLD? TONIC
LUNG A DOSE AT BEDTIME WILL TONIC
LUNG REMOVE IT. TONIC
LUNG Bronchitis & Asthma it relieves instantly TONIC
LUNG The Spasms of Coughing so dreadful in TONIC
LUNG Whooping Cough become less with each TONIC
LUNG dose of the medicine. TONIC
LUNG TONIC
LUNG Prepared by W. T OWBRIDGE, Chemist, Hull TONIC
LUNG Sold in Bottles 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d. TONIC
LUNG and 11s. by all Chemists and Patent TONIC
LUNG Medicine Vendors. Wholesale all London TONIC
LUNG and Provincial Houses. TONIC

RHEUMATISM

Positively exterminated from the system without shock or discomfort by mild, continuous currents of electricity, generated by wearing

Price 21/-, HARNESS' Post free.

ELECTROPATHIC BELT

It is also invaluable for giving prompt relief in all disorders of the Nerves, Stomach, Liver and Kidneys. Thousands of Testimonials. Pamphlet and Advice free on application to Mr. C. B. HARNESS, Consulting Medical Electrician, The Medical Battery Company, Limited,

52, OXFORD STREET, LONDON, W.

(Corner of Rathbone Place).

Call to-day, if possible, or write at once.

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. F. W. PARRY (late GUEST & Co.), 29 PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, MAR. 21, 1888. (All rights reserved

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."

(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. XII., No. 587. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, MARCH 28, 1888. [PRICE ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
Israel's Property in Western Australia	125
The Enemies' Gate	126
More Evidence Connecting the Ancient Inhabitants of Ireland with the Phœnicians and Hebrews. Part IX. By Joseph Thomson	127
Emigration in 1887	128
Hadrach: The Stronghold. By E. Wilmshurst, Retford	128
An American Opponent who Declares that Englishmen are not Jews	129
Queen Victoria's Epiphany Offering of Gold, Frankincense, and Myrrh. By J. T. Gott	130
Correspondence	131

ISRAEL'S PROPERTY IN WESTERN AUSTRALIA.

IT appears that our race has an immense inheritance in Western Australia,—a gigantic colonizing ground which there is great danger that we may lose, if we do not stand up for our rights. The case is this:—Western Australia is a Crown colony of Great Britain, and is not yet vested with the full autonomous representative government which the other colonies enjoy. The country is administered by a Governor and Executive Council appointed by Her Majesty. "Its laws are made by a Legislative Council of 24 members, eight of whom are Crown nominees and the rest elective." This body has just now decided by thirteen votes to four to petition the Queen for responsible government with the other colonies; and by a second unanimous vote, that when they were constituted a responsible government with a new constitution, the colony should remain one and undivided.

These resolutions have now come home to be laid before Her Majesty's Government, since the Governor, Sir Frederick Broome, has approved of them "subject to two reservations." He stipulates that due protection must be given to the aborigines to the North of the colony, and that the Queen should hereafter have the right, if needful, of forming a new colony out of the territory at present belonging to Western Australia. The objection to the proposal thus backed by the British Governor is that, whereas the colony is in size just about one-third of the whole continent, that is 1,250 miles long and 800 broad, the colonists who inhabit it and now demand autonomy and the fee simple of the whole territory, are only about 35,000 in number! There are there about 1,000,000 square miles of land, which is truly Britain's inheritance, and these 35,000 people demand to deal with it as they like, even to the prohibition of the immigration of a single soul in addition to the present population. The handful of colonists desire to become trustees of the whole enormous inheritance, and to exclude the home Government from having any voice in the matter as to how the same shall be appropriated for the benefit of the 35,000,000 at home! It is as yet only a question of numbers. The colonists just now are too few to receive the boon they demand, but doubtless when their numbers show that they have arrived at maturity, and are becoming entitled to be regarded as a nation, the autonomy they desire must be given them just as the other colonies have been endowed by their old mother in the West. The question is whether the colony is yet fit from its numbers to run alone, and to have the disposal of such an enormous patrimony as it appears they have lying at their hands. We do not suppose that the Western Australians will obtain just yet what they want to have; but what should prevent our surplus population, who are struggling at home with poverty and insufficient room, from proceeding at once to Western Australia. and establishing there, by their numbers and influence, a right to the autonomy the colonists are clamouring for to-day?

A correspondent of the Times, on October 18th, put the matter thus:—"There are 975,000 square miles in Western Australia, and there were there as its occupants on December 31st, 1884, some 32,958 persons only. That is, a country as large as Europe to the West of Russia, has for its occupants as many souls as there are in the single town of Oxford in England! Great Britain has 300 inhabitants for each square mile of its extent; but Western Australia has only one inhabitant for 30 of its square miles! In other words, Great Britain is occupied by a population 100,000 times as dense as that which, occupying Western Australia, is now demanding self-government, and the denial of the right of occupancy or colonization to the British people! Of the million square miles in the colony, only 3,000 have been permanently alienated from the Crown as yet. Of the residue, only a fourth has been occupied even on pastoral leases. . . . Western Australia is so large that it could absorb the surplus population of all Europe for centuries to come, and is therefore far too valuable a possession to be given away to a mere handful of people whose numbers do not yet entitle them to demand self-government."

In regard to the coming prosperity of this fine country, the Times declares that it is likely to turn out to be exceptionally rich and prosperous. Though immense tracts are hopeless wastes, which consists of "hungry sand," without a drop of water, yet "the climate is dry and exhilarating and most congenial to the English constitution." But where the ground is sterile the atmosphere is enjoyable. In such spots, though crops cannot be reared, nature covers the land with blooming flower gardens! Many millions of acres, however, are fitted for cultivation and pasture, being bordered by numerous rivers, "The Jarrow forests are a treasury of natural wealth. There are inexhaustible mines of lead and copper in the land."

Digitized by Google

So far the Times and its correspondent's interesting communication. We point to the subject because it proves many facts in Our Identity case. It shows that we are the "remnant of Israel." For here we have a region in the temperate zone, belonging to the House of Israel, which, once a "desolation," is now beginning to blossom as the rose. It is sparsely inhabited by British subjects; yet these colonists already aspire to the status of a nation, and clearly will soon make good that claim! Their land abounds with the wealth, and what gives power to produce wealth, promised to Israel. Its mines, and forests, and boundless territories, show that its wealth is enormous; and clearly it only wants time and people to become what it is sure to do some day, namely, one of Israel's "stately daughters," wealthy and powerful, like the rest! What other nation has a territory like the one in question, nearly 1,000,000 of square miles in extent, capable of swallowing up the surplus population of Europe for centuries? There is not one other such as we describe! To the British exclusively has God given this, the birthright inheritance of Joseph, described in Deut. xxxiii. 13—17, and Gen. xlix. 22—26.

Western Australia, even in her condition of an infant nation, is evidencing a giant's strength. Her present demand of the whole inheritance for herself is a sign of her consciousness of exuberant power—a token of her coming greatness. While we admire her forwardness, we cannot hope that she will succeed in her request until, at least, she have incorporated into her body politic many millions of our own suffering people, and planted in her bosom the teeming population of a brawny Anglo-Saxon community, destined to become the powerful Western-Australian nation, in federation with her old mother in the West.

THE ENEMIES' GATE.

A CORRESPONDENT, writing from Marazion, Cornwall, says, apropos of "The Gate," that a rule from Lindley Murray comes to mind in reference to the often repeated notice of the subject in the BANNER, and it is this:—

"A Substantive without an Article to limit it, is always taken in its widest sense; as 'a candid temper is proper for man'—that is 'for all mankind.'"—Now may not "the enemies' Gate," or "the Gate of Israel's enemies," mean definitely "all the Gates"?

So far our Marazion friend, S. A. M. In reply, we think that the words quoted from Gen. xxii. 17, relating as they do to one of God's choicest blessings which He swore to grant to "Abraham and his seed for ever," meant this:—Israel would have enemies innumerable during the subsequent course of their history; whenever and wherever such enemies turned up, God engaged that the tide of battle and the success in the contentions between His people and their foes, should always be in favour of His chosen nation by reason of the gift of "their enemies' Gate." This meant therefore "all the Gates" throughout time which were calculated to place the enemies of Israel at the mercy of the latter. All such Gates were to be seized and held by Israel, who would thus dominate over their foes.

The British being Israel, we find that according to this prophecy God has given them the Gate of their enemies everywhere. When the Spaniards were our enemies in 1704, A.D., God put their chief Gate Gibraltar in our possession by a sudden assault. When we were at war with France for supremacy in the Mediterranean, Malta was given to us in A.D. 1800, as the Gate of the Levant and of the mid-Mediterranean. When the Arabs shewed signs of hostility in 1839, Aden was captured by us. When Arabi Pacha made himself and Egypt obnoxious to us in 1882, then God gave us Egypt itself as a Gate of Central Africa and the Red Sea. When the French with malice prepense purposed to seize and occupy Perim Island, the Southern Gate of the Red Sea, God allowed us to anticipate them and occupy it in 1865. When the Afghans foolishly helped the Sikh nation in their second fight with us, God enabled us to defeat them both, and gave us Peshawar the Gate of the Khyber Pass in 1849, when the Punjaub was annexed. When China fought us, God gave us Hong Kong as a Chinese Gate, in 1841. In 1806, when we were at war with the French and Dutch, we were enabled to capture Cape Town, the Gate of South Africa, and from that small beginning our South African Empire has grown, to be followed by mid-Africa and Egypt too! Our one small Gate Madras, first acquired in A.D. 1639, helped us to seize the whole of Southern India, while the possession of Bombay in 1662, and of Calcutta in A.D. 1700, completed the machinery by which in time, the whole Peninsula, after hard fighting with Israel's enemies, lapsed to the people of God.

So we might go round the globe, and tell of Gate after Gate, given to us by the Lord of the whole earth, in order that by these means we might dominate and subdue the earth to Christ, being His "battle-axe, and weapons of war" to effect that very purpose, and finally to bring them all to Christ—their King. A people who are thus constituted "the possessors of their enemies' Gate" by the Lord Himself, must perforce be free from dread of insult in respect to their own home "Gates" or Ports; and accordingly we find a very special promise to that effect made by the Spirit of God to Israel in Isa. lx. 11, R.V., where the following words may be read:—"Thy Gates also shall be open continually; they shall not be shut day nor night, that men may bring unto thee the wealth of the nations, and their kings led (with them)." British history affirms that this thing is true! since the earliest time during a thousand years, British Ports as a whole have never been blockaded day or night by any foe or confederacy of enemies! Our ports have been ever "open, day and night," that the imports of the world (which bring us wealth) may be poured into British laps; foreign kings and potentates, too, from time to time, have been led to visit us in our home, through these our hospitable and open Gates; but never for a thousand years, that is, for a millennium of time, have they been closed by force, by the enemies of Israel, in fulfilment thus of the prophecy which gave to Israel as God's good gift, the possession of the Gates of all their enemies abroad, and protection from invasion, as to the Gates of their own home perpetually.

The twofold evidence which "the Gates" afford as proof of Our Identity with the Lost Ten Tribes is very valuable; it is of a kind which the man of the world can thoroughly appreciate, and which all travelled men, soldiers, sailors, merchants, and the like, can grasp intuitively. The spots we name are veritable "Gates," doors of entry to foreign lands and to distant oceans; strategic places which dominate them both, and so curb the power of those who "hate" our race, and are, or incline to be, our "enemies." Such localities, whether they be islands, towns, cities, promontories or strategic countries, are largely in our possession to-day; and foreign nations, though they hanker for them, are not able to acquire possession of even one! We naturally conclude that we are the heirs of God's sworn promises "to Abraham and his seed for ever;" and are therefore satisfied, that, whereas the British are not Jews, they must be the House of Israel, the long lost, Ten-Tribed House of Ephraim. That fact established we joy and rejoice exceedingly for the comfort it brings us; and we praise the Lord for His mercies to His so unworthy people!

TORONTO.—Considerable interest is now taken in this city on the subject of the Identity of the Lost Ten Tribes with Israel. Dr. Wild, who is a firm supporter, preaches every Sunday to large audiences. A goodly number of copies of the BANNER OF ISRAEL are now sent regularly to Toronto to two agents—viz., Mr. Claxton and Messrs. Grafton & Sons.

Digitized by Google

MORE EVIDENCE CONNECTING THE ANCIENT INHABITANTS OF IRELAND WITH THE PHŒNICIANS AND HEBREWS.

By Joseph Thomson.

PART IX. (Continued from page 120.)

XXI.—THE FOMHORAICE.

In his life of Sertorius, Plutarch tells us that that commander determined to make the Atlantic Isle (i.e., Ireland) a place of retreat from his enemies. In another work he describes this "Atlantic Isle" as opposite the Celtae, and only four days' sail from Britain. The Irish legions in Gaul were called Fine Gall: those in Albany, Fine Alban. "We may very well suppose," says O'Hallaran, "that the Fine Fomharaigh, or African legions, so often met with in the old Irish MSS, meant no other than the Irish cohorts in that service."

The Fomhoraice, or Formaragh, mentioned by the old Irish poets, were sea robbers who plundered the southern coast of Ireland as long as the Nemethæ held possession of it. They were probably a roving band of Phœnician traders who visited the British Isles about 400 B.C., and got so named from their habits as sea robbers, "fomhor" and "fomhorac," in Irish meaning a pirate, as also a giant. The root of these words, however, is found in Phœnician, where we find "fom-horac" means fugitives, and disturbers, which agrees well with the description by ancient writers of these rapacious intruders into the British Isles. "Perhaps," Dr. Villanueva says, "they were some of the first Phœnicians, who, flying before the face of the children of Israel, transported themselves from Syria, and whose footsteps are still preserved in the names of those towns of the Gallaici Lucani in Spain, Formarigo, and Formaran; in that of Famorca, amongst the Edetani, and that of Formanes amongst the Astures." (Phœ.-Ired. p. 194).

XXII.—THE FORCRABII.

The Forcrabii, or Fir-na-crabii, were ancient settlers in Ireland, in the part called Hy-magh-neigh, now the county of Monaghan with a part of what was anciently called Oirgail, and under the command of the Mahonies or Mac-Mahons. The name may have been of some superstitious suggestion, as it seems composed of the Irish words fire crabhath, i.e., true religion: or from the Phœnician words frin, i.e., fruit; or farin, bullocks; and crabin, i.e., oblations or sacrifices, this last word is itself from corban, i.e., anything offered to God or idols (See Mark. vii. 11). The name of Oirgael, or Orgiel, which some call Oircael, and explain by the eastern cael—being an extensive district comprising the present counties of Louth, Monaghan, and Armagh—also savours of Phœnician superstition. For or, Phœnician, is fire; and gael, or gail, is delight, from the root ghil, which expresses that gladness of the mind which shows itself in gestures; thus the combined import of the words would refer to the joy of that nation in the days sacred to the worship of fire.

XXIII.—THE VELLABORI.

The Vellabori, also an ancient Irish tribe mentioned by Ptolemy, were settled in Munster, beside the promontory of Notium. Some derive this name from the British words, vel-aber, or bel-aber, i.e., the source of a frith. But it may be of Phœnician descent, and compounded from bali-bira, i.e., an ancient temple: but Dr. Villanueva is more strongly inclined to suppose it had reference to the victims offered in sacrifice to Baal, whether as actually burned, or only dragged through; and is from bel-aborin, i.e., dragging across before Baal, from abar, the verb, which expresses this ceremony, the nature of which was to conduct or drag the victim, a human being, and generally a boy, between two pyres or series of fires until he was burned to death. In this way we are to understand the passage in 2 Kings xvi. 3; and 2 Chron. xxviii. 3. The promontory of Notium seems to have been so called from the woods and forests with which it was clothed; for Notium in the Phœnician, signifies plants, or plantations.

The Vellabori seem to have left their traces in Ballibur, a town in the county of Kilkenny; and in Ballyburris, a village in the county of Carlow. In Spain, too, from whence this people may have emigrated, we find Ballobar, a town in Celtiberia, and Belabarce a river in the district of the Cantabrians; v and b being often interchangeable among the ancients.

XXIV.—THE UTERNI.

Ptolemy also mentions the Uterni as living on the borders of the Irish Brigantes, in what is now the southern part of the county Kerry, and the adjoining western part of the county Cork, province of Munster. Their chief city was Uverni on the sea coast, and called by the natives Insovenach, though Cirencester has it Rufina, which it is supposed is corrupted from ruadh eanagh, i.e., the habitation of the progeny of the waters. Its exact site is unknown, though some think it was either that of the present town of Bantry, or Kenmare. Many identify the Uterni with the Ibernii of Cirencester; others deduce the name from the Irish Ubh-ernii, i.e., a more western people. But the Phœnician utrin, or atrin, i.e., explorers, (called also thirin) perhaps best accords with the high ground on which they settled. It also signifies leaders; or persons discharging convoy. Whence too they may have been called Ibernii, from the Spanish Iberi, who were their conductors; unless we may suppose that they got their name from their physical strength, for iberin in Phœnician, means brave, or valiant. This idea seems supported by the name of their chief city Rufina, from rufiin, i.e., giants; as also that of Insovernach, which is from izzab-anac, i.e., the post where the giants stood together—viz., the race of Anac the son of Arba (see Josh. xv. 13; xiv. 15), from whom the flower of the Phœnicians, both in birth and prowess, boasted of having descended. Uverni, by which in common with the two names just noticed this city was also called, would seem to be merely a geographical term; uberin signifies boundaries, extremities or sides, in the Phœnician language.

XXV.—SEVERAL ANCIENT CITIES, AND THE ARRAN ISLES.

The great Alexandrian geographer, Ptolemy, who is our chief ancient authority, lived about A.D. 130. He enumerates some dozen illustrious cities as existing in Ireland in his time: whence it is evident that they must have existed a long time previously or he would not have heard of them; for he himself never visited Ireland. He mentions Nagnata, as an illustrious maritime city on the western coast; Menapia, and Eblana, also maritime cities on the eastern side; and Rhigia, Baiba, Laberos, Makolikon, Dounon, Iuernis, and a second Rhigia, as inland cities.

Of Nagnata no traces now remain, but some think it was in the vicinity of the modern Sligo. It must have been a flourishing place once, as, with the prefix "Cuon," i.e., (Irish) a port or harbour, it gave a name to the whole province of Con-naught. The Nagnatæ are called by Ptolemy, in some of his writings, Nagantæ. Baxter and Camden both agree in thinking that their settlement was in this district. The name of Connaught is thought to be abbreviated from "Cuanna-guactic," i.e., the port of the little islands—viz., those which, from the natives Firion, or Erii, are called Arran for Ierion. Cuan, Baxter says, means a harbour in Irish, as in the French coin means a corner, and congl in the British the same. Vict, or vact, or guact, as it is otherwise expressed, is a little island; na is the mark of the genitive case in the old Brigantes' language as well as that of the Irish.

Others derive Nagnatæ from the Irish Na-gae-taegh, i.e, an abode near the sea, and say that the old historians called them Slioght gae, i.e., a race or progeny settled beside the sea: from these words we have the modern name Sligo.

Dr. Villanueva, however, thinks that the name of this people was Phœnician, and derived from that of the leader of their body: thus nagud, i.e., a prince or chieftain, in the plural is nagudin. But they may have so called themselves from the character of the locality in which they settled, nagad meaning a wide country, a generous soil; while nagab-natah means the same, with the addition of dryness, or aridity; which agrees well with the nature of the district in which these people settled. Nacha-natah means the inhabitants of such a country.

Digitized by Google

These islands of Arran or Aran (off the coast of County Clare) appear to have been so named by the Phœnicians (as also many of the Irish mountains) from their abounding in trees, which they call Aran, and to which sonobar in Arabic, i.e., a pine tree, or pinaster, exactly answers. We may, however, if we please, accept the exposition of the Spaniards, who are well known for their accuracy in these points, and who think that the valley of Aran, in the county of Urgellum, and anciently in possession of the Ilergetes, being watered with rivers and many fountains, was so called by the Phœnicians from its likeness to Mesopotamia, which they called Haran. The valley of the Arana, among the Cantabrians, and the names of other tracts in Spain, as Aranaz, Aranacoe, Aranda, Aranga, etc., may have the same origin.

(To be continued).

EMIGRATION IN 1887.

During 1887 there was a large increase in the number of emigrants from the United Kingdom as compared with the year before. Of British-born persons, there left these shores during the past twelve months 282,000 individuals! Besides this huge host, 108,000 foreigners came over to our ports, and embarked thence to proceed to distant places as emigrants. An emigration of 390,000 souls then from our own home is a portentous, wondrous fact, only exceeded by that other more remarkable one, that although nearly 1,000 persons are leaving us daily from among the British-born subjects of the Queen, her people are increasing in spite of it all at the rate of 1,000 souls a day!

Most of our home emigrants go, it appears, to the United States in preference to the Colonies. Every two out of three go there! Of the rest, Canada is most favoured, Australia the least! Why this should be, and why the United States are attracting so large a proportion of our departing surplus population is a puzzle no one can solve. It is a fact, and must be accepted as such. The whole subject of our national emigration is under God's direction, and He tells us plainly in His prophetic Word that He has it in hand. That passage in Isaiah xxvi. 15, R.V., we have often quoted, indicates that, thus:—"Thou hast increased the nation, O Jehovah; Thou hast increased the nation; Thou art glorified; Thou hast enlarged all the borders of the land;" or, as the margin reads—"Thou hast removed it far unto the ends of the earth." The explanation of this appears in another Scripture (Zech. x. 8, 9, R.V.), where God says, respecting Ephraim of the House of Joseph—"They shall increase as they have increased; and I will sow them among the peoples; and they shall remember Me in far countries; and they shall live with their children, and shall return." We have here a clear scriptural intimation that God Himself has directed our national increase (since we are Israel), and that He has taken our surplus population and sown it in blessing among the peoples of the earth, in far off, alien countries, at the ends of the earth. The emigration of Israel is, therefore, divinely directed. Its settlement in foreign lands is under His regulation. That which is a mystery to us in regard to the preference for the United States is brought about by His all-wise providence and superintendence. We need consequently to be under no sort of alarm or uncertainty as to the ultimate issue of all that we see going on around us, but may calmly contemplate it all, assured that God's glory is being served by both Israel's abnormal increase and by the disposal of her surplus population in the waste places of the earth by the hand of God Himself.

HADRACH: THE STRONGHOLD.

By E. Wilmshurst, Retford.

The acquisition of Cyprus (Chittim) by Britain was the last and most important link of the chain of events which are slowly but surely bringing us into close contact with the land given "to Abraham and his seed for ever," and the prescience of Benjamin D'Israeli (in the Berlin Treaty) has provided (in the clause for the Protectorate of Britain over Asia Minor, under certain circumstances) a raison d'etre for eventual military and political interference, when the "sick man" is in extremis.

An able article in the Banner, of Feb. 29, points out the value of Acre, called by Napoleon the "key of Palestine," as affording access to the centre of the ancient "kingdom of Israel," and to that celebrated plain where the fate of Israel and Judah has so often been decided (Judges iv., 1 Samuel xxxi., 2 Kings xxiii.), and where at Megeddo the great and for ever decisive battle of Armageddon will take place.

That ripe scholar and military strategist, the late Colonel Gawler, of the Tower of London, in a paper posthumously published (and printed in Israel's Hope and Destiny, January, 1887), calls attention to the prophecy in Zech. ix., which foretells a military occupation of a strategic point by returning Israel in the latter days, which, effected by a Power having command of the sea, with base of operations at Cyprus, would sentinel the approach of a hostile force approaching the promised land from the North and North-east; and especially from the descent of a Russian force from Armenia, vid Erzroum or Kars (see map).

Colonel Gawler points out that the word "Hadrach" translated means "enclosed chamber" or "stronghold," and that, omitting incidental prophecies against Tyre, Ashkelon, Ashdod, &c., the thread of the prophecy is contained in verses 1, 2, 8, 12—16, and foretells a military position or "Quadrilateral," reaching from the North coast of Syria as far South as Tyre and Acre, 210 miles long, with eight harbours—Alexandretta, Arvad, Tripoli, Beyrout, the Orontes River mouth, Baseyt, Minats el Kaban, and Latakia; in fact, that wonderful strip of land, Ancient Phœnicia, whence came (with "Dan in ships" from Joppa in company) the first emigrants to these Isles of the West, in quest of tin and for purposes of commerce, to Cornwall, Daanshire, or Devonia, to Wales and Anglesea, and to fair Ierne or Erin; and to which isles successive streams of Hebrew emigrants, from the troublous days of Nebuchadnezzar to the arrival of the Benjamite Normans, have found a sure refuge, "a little sanctuary," in which to recover their strength.

This "Hadrach," stronghold, or strategical position, is impregnable from the sea, protected by the desert from the East, and would flank a hostile army from Armenia, invading, or marching on, the holy places, and would influence and command Mosul, Bagdad, Euphrates, Tigris, and the Persian Gulph, as well as secure the East flank of the Suez Canal and route to India. "And Damascus shall be the rest thereof" (ver. 1), or the "pivot" of communications, the furthest advanced post inland, East. "Antioch shall be the border thereof" (Hamath in Syriac)—i.e., the outpost on the North, including the lake of Antioch and harbour of Alexandretta. "Tyre and Sidon shall border thereby," to the South, and the Western side, washed by the waters of the great (Mediterranean) sea, will be safe in the hands of Britannia, and will complete the defence of the quadrilateral, or "Hadrach." "And I will encamp about my house because of him that passeth by, and because of him that returneth, and no oppressor shall pass through them any more; for now have I seen with mine eye" (ver. 8). "Turn ye to the stronghold, ye prisoners of hope" (or expectant emigrants), is the command, as in Isaiah xxvi. 20, to enter into their chamber (where the same word is used, Hadrach).

From verse 13 it would seem that a return of Jews to Judah's country had already colonized that land, and that the

Digitized by Google

"strong nation" with ships, who are in military occupation of Hadrach are impelled to protect the emigrants and returning Jews: "When I have bent Judah for Me, filled the bow of Ephraim (British-Israel), and raised up the sons of Zion against thy sons, O Ivan, and made thee as the sword of a mighty man." In the Authorised Version, Ivan is translated "Greece"; but the true representative of Ivan and head of the Greek Church is Russia, the land of Ivan the Terrible.

"And the Lord shall be seen over them, and His arrow (Ephraim) shall go forth as lightning (as modern artillery), and the Lord God shall blow the trumpet, and shall go with whirlwinds of the South" (verse 14).

"The Lord shall defend them; . . . and they shall devour and subdue with sling stones," which, as the word "sling" in the original is literally "the bottom of a hollow thing," may mean stones of metal, or bullets. Also verse 16: "The Lord their God shall save them in that day." And this magnificent promise is thus concluded by the inspired prophet: "How great is His goodness, and how great is His beauty! corn shall make the young men cheerful, and new wine the maids."

If this is carefully read in connection with the numerous other graphic prophecies of the return of Judah under the protection of Israel, "as a present to the Lord," to the now deserted land, and especially with regard to the campaigns of Gog, or Russia, against the holy places, and the destruction of Gog's confederation of armies in the mountain passes of Lebanon, as given in Ezekiel, an idea may be obtained of the relation of passing events with unfulfilled prophecy, and the learner be prepared for those physical manifestations of divine power (e.g., Habak. iii.) which will as surely accompany the return of Israel and Judah to their promised land, as when He led them before out of Egypt; a great physical change by earthquake power will so alter the countries at the Eastern end of the Mediterranean Sea that an overwhelming superiority will accrue to the nation that "rules the waves." Those who have mastered the elemental facts of the Anglo, or rather "British-Israelite" facts, will be able to read between the lines endless passages in the greater and lesser prophets, which, without such light, are utterly incomprehensible. "Surely wisdom is strength," and "The wise shall understand."

AN AMERICAN OPPONENT WHO DECLARES THAT "ENGLISHMEN ARE NOT JEWS."

A LITTLE Magazine entitled "The Truth or Testimony for Christ" (Editor, James H. Brookes), published in St. Louis, Mo. U.S., had an article in its February number on "Englishmen not Jews." The worthy American Editor finds that Satan is particularly active just now in trying to obscure the truth of our Lord's personal and pre-millennial return, by all sorts of figments and "irrelevant issues," such as "soul-sleeping," "annihilation of the wicked," the "seventh day Sabbath" (!) "or some other heresy or vagary." He goes on then, involving himself in all sorts of difficulties by declaring that we allege, "Englishmen to be Jews," as well as "the Ten Lost Tribes of Israel; that there is no conceivable good in the thing even if true (our old "Cui bono?" friend); that "the Bible never says that Englishmen are Jews"; that the British people are a cosmopolitan people, and not an unmixed race "like the Jews" (!) It is when Mr. Brookes points to Scripture as against us that he becomes serious, and on this point he argues thus:—

It seems strange that the English should be pitched upon as Jews, unless it can be shown that not only the ancient Britons, but the Romans, the Picts and Scots, the Angles, the Saxons, the Danes, the Normans, and nearly every other nation in Europe are also Jewish. No people on earth, unless it be their descendants in the United States, can boast, if they consider it ground for boasting, of such commingled blood in their veins. It would be absolutely impossible for Englishmen to trace their lineage back generation by generation, as the Jews can do, to a pure and unmixed Jewish origin or Jewish descent. There has been an infusion into their individual life and nationality of something from almost every tribe and principality and kingdom that could reach them during the last eighteen hundred years; and hence the claim that they continue to be Jews is absurd.

But the theory is contrary to the word of God, notwithstanding the forty or more proofs that are given to identify the English as Jews. For example that word put into the mouth of Balaam by Jehovah Himself says, "Lo, the people shall dwell alone, and shall not be reckoned among the nations" (Num. xxiii. 9). In what sense can this be understood of Englishmen? They do not dwell alone, but are found all over the earth, mingled with other people; and surely no one can say, England "shall not be reckoned among the nations." It is, and has been for centuries, one of the leading nations; and the utmost stretch of imagination cannot make it correspond with the description there given of Israel, but which is and has always been literally true of the Jews. Even in their dispersion they have never been confounded with their conquerors, as the Saxons were with the Normans.

If however it is urged that these words apply to Israel only when in covenant relation to God, it is sufficient to answer that the predictions of the Holy Ghost concerning the Jews in exile, driven from their land for their sins, cannot at all be made to fit the history and condition of the English. Thus we read, "They that hate you shall reign over you; and ye shall flee when none pursueth. . . . I will break the pride of your power; and I will make your heaven as iron, and your earth as brass: and your strength shall be spent in vain: for your land shall not yield her increase, neither shall the trees of the land yield their fruits. . . . I will also send wild beasts among you, which shall rob you of your children, and destroy your cattle, and make you few in number" (Lev. xxvi. 26). "Thou shalt become an astonishment, a proverb, and a by-word among all nations whither the Lord shall lead thee. . . . The stranger that is within thee shall get up above thee very high; and thou shalt come down very low. He shall lend to thee, and thou shalt not lend to him: he shall be the head, and thou shalt be the tail" (Deut. xxviii.).

Much more of the same sort might be quoted, and it is obvious that it cannot refer to England. Are Englishmen few in number? Are they despised and oppressed and ridiculed? In the race for national power and renown, have they become the tail? For generations they have been the head of political influence, and the arbiters of the destiny of Europe, and of much of the world beside. With the exception of one of their numerous offspring, the United States, they are the wealthiest people on earth; and the threatenings of God against Israel surely are not fulfilled in the singularly successful and powerful career of Great Britain.

"The Lord shall scatter you among the nations, and ye shall be left few in number among the heathen, whither the Lord shall lead you" (Deut. iv. 27). "Ye shall be left few in number, whereas ye were as the stars of heaven for multitude; because thou wouldest not obey the voice of the Lord thy God. . . . and among these nations shalt thou find no ease, neither shall the sole of thy foot have rest: but the Lord shall give thee there a trembling heart, and failing of eyes, and sorrow of mind" (Deut. xxviii. 62, 66). "And they shall know that I am the Lord, when I shall scatter them among the nations, and disperse them in the countries. But I will leave a few men of them from the sword, from the famine, and from the pestilence" (Ezek. xii. 15, 16). The predictions, of which these verses are samples, are now fulfilled before the eyes of the world in the strange history of the Jews; but they are unmeaning if written of England.

One would think that the Anglo-Israel brethren must be silent in the light of the following testimony: "The children of Israel shall abide many days without a king and without a prince: . . . afterward shall the children of Israel return, and seek the Lord their God, and David their king [or as the Targum renders it, 'they shall obey the Messiah the son of David, their King']; and shall fear the Lord and His goodness in the latter days" (Hos. iii. 4, 5), When did England abide many days without a king, and without a prince, except during the brief Protectorate of Oliver Cromwell, who is sorely needed again, not only in England but in many Kingdoms, and Republics?

The Anglo-Saxon-Danish-Norman nation, being uncircumcised, is positively excluded from the national covenant, as God Himself declares (Gen. xvii. 10—14). Hence even if Jews they cannot receive the promised national blessing, but must stand upon Gentile ground. They are either believers in Christ or unbelievers. If the former, they are part of the church, in which "there is neither Jew nor Gentile, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male or female," (Gal. iii. 28). If the latter they are under the curse, and until redeemed with the precious blood shed on the cross, they are "aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope and without God in the world" (Eph. ii. 12).

Digitized by Google

So far our American antagonist. Not one of his objections is original, they are all quoted from that "Friend of Israel," the Rev. John Wilkinson, and others like him. They have all received exhaustive replies in our pages. In the first place we have never claimed to be "Jews," but Israelites; and we make that claim not because of the purity of our Hebrew blood, but because we possess all the blessings God, who cannot lie, sware to give to "the after seed of Abraham" exclusively. The Jews are not of pure origin: there was a large "mixture" of Egyptian blood with theirs, as Exod. xii. 38 shews; and Josephus tells that the Edomites were largely mingled with the Jews. In regard to the objection that Baalam's prophecy (Numbers xxiii. 9) bars our claim, since Englishmen do not "dwell alone," we repeat that neither did the Israelites or the Jews of old "dwell alone" in this sense in Palestine! Were they not therefore the children of Israel? The British now as well as the Israelites of old, are, and were a "people of separation," separated from all other nations by reason of the unique fact that God has ever dwelt with us and "goes with us" (Exod. xxxiii. 16). The British are "reckoned among the nations" to-day, just as Israel and Judah were "reckoned among the nations" by God Himself in Ezek. xxxvii. 22, but it is when the true rendering of the words "shall not be reckoned" is recognised, that we see its application to modern British history. Israel-Britain "does not reckon itself among the nations," but regards itself as God made her, "high above them all." We victoriously look down on all foreign races.

Mr. Brookes quotes Lev. xxvi. and Deut. xxviii. 37, 43, 44, as applicable to our case as Israel, forgetting that all these threats were directed against "Israel disobedient," i.e., against the Jews. His reference to Hosea iii. 4, 5, has been so often answered in these columns, that further reference to this alleged difficulty is not needed now. The argument that our nation being uncircumcised is deprived of the national covenant under Gen. xvii. 10—14, "and stands on Gentile ground," is singularly near the truth. The Ten Tribes were "cut off" from Israel and the Mosaic law, were outcasted by their God; became His "Lo-Ruhamah" and His "Lo-Ammi," as Hosea i. 8, 9 tells us. They became in short, "Gentilized Israelites" and "stand to-day on Gentile ground." What then? Has not Mr. Brookes read Jer. iii. 12—18, Zech. x. 6, Ezek. xxxvii. 11—28, Hosea i. 10, and such like texts, wherein he can see that God has followed Israel of the Ten Tribes even into their Gentile state, and given them there the unconditional mercies of the Abrahamic covenant? They are believers in Christ and Israelites as well, because Hosea i. 10 declares the fact to be so; and Gal. iii. 28 cannot deny it. The latter text, if it means as Mr. Brookes declares, that there are no Jews, or Gentiles in Christ, but a tertium quid, asserts also that no man or woman will be found in Christ, and no slaves or bondmen, and no freemen either, like the Anglo-Saxon people! Is the Editor of "The Truth" prepared for that terrible consequence of his interpretation of a really simple text? If the Ten Tribes or part of them remain unbelievers they are Israelites "lost," but Israelites enjoying all the temporal blessings of the national covenants still, while they remain on earth. The writer in "The Truth" must distinguish between the unconditional covenant which God gave on oath "to Abraham and his seed for ever," and the covenant made at Sinai which Israel and Judah both broke, and thus were cast out of the blessings it promised till the Lord Jesus came to restore them to the new covenant benedictions, which, in this nation's case, carry with them all that God promised to our forefathers because Abraham obeyed His voice (Gen. xxii. 18).

QUEEN VICTORIA'S EPIPHANY OFFERING OF "GOLD, FRANKINCENSE, AND MYRRH."

By John T. Gott.

For some years we have endeavoured to obtain some reliable information respecting the above, but with very little success. These were the gifts presented by the Magi to the infant Jesus, in the humble house in Bethlehem, and according to the best authorities, we must look upon them as "a religious offering." There seems to be a symbolical meaning attached to these gifts. It was customary in Eastern lands in those days to present gifts to kings, and others in high rank. The gifts invariably had some symbolical meaning which was perfectly understood. Thus, the world at that time was cognisant of some mighty event which was about to take place, and the Magi determined to do honour to the king, or warrior whose birth the star in the East seemed to indicate. They evidently entertained the idea that the child would develop into one whose influence would be of world-wide extent, and the appearance of this mysterious light in the sky deepened their conviction of the divine mission of the new-born king. The offering of gold is very suggestive, for as gold is the most precious of all metals, and possesses properties peculiar to itself, so it symbolised the Royal character of the babe born in a manger.

The Frankincense was an aromatic used in sacrificial offerings, and could not have been the same as that used in the Tabernacle under the Mosaic ritual, which was forbidden to be used for any private purpose (Exod. xxx. 38). The latter had a sweet, agreeable odour, and the dense cloud of smoke that arose from it formed a covering over the tabernacle, thus symbolising the acceptance of the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world, and the covering thus afforded for the sins of His people. Myrrh means bitterness, and symbolises the sufferings the infant babe would have to undergo, and, if we think, we shall see that there is every reason to believe that Mary would understand these symbols, for, although presented in another form, they corresponded to the communications that had already been made to her (Luke i. 31—33; ii. 35). Thus the gold indicates His royalty: the Frankincense, His divinity: and the Myrrh, His sufferings. The offering of gold may have been of intrinsic value to Joseph, who was a poor man, and whose immediate flight into Egypt became a matter of great urgency.

We read that when the Magi came to the house and saw the young child, with His mother Mary, they opened their treasures (boxes [Barnes]) and presented to Him gifts, etc. (Matt. ii. 11). Queen Victoria's Epiphany offering is purely national, a mere matter of form, but the memento of this important event. So far as we can ascertain it is not now observed in any Protestant country in Europe. Many curious customs are observed in cathedrals and churches, but in this busy world, they attract but passing notice. Few know why they are observed, and fewer still inquire into their origin. We are indebted to the Editor of the Church Times for the following, which is brief but suggestive:—

> The Epiphany offerings of gold, frankincense, and myrrh in the Chapel Royal on the part of the Sovereign go back to Edward the Confessor's time, or earlier, and were an ancient custom in the time of Edward the First. A similar custom prevailed in France under the Valois kings, and we think down to the Revolution. The actual oblation, as made at the Chapel Royal, is not over lavish. A very small book of gold-leaf, and two little bags of coarse net gauze, containing about half an ounce each of myrrh and frankincense, are enclosed in a cheap wooden box, covered with imitation red morocco leather; the total value being about five or six shillings. The box becomes the perquisite of the Dean of the Chapel Royal.

Let it be clearly understood that we are not endeavouring to establish another identity. Far from it. The signs of the times are sufficient for us, and they are very momentous. All we desire to do, is to draw the attention of our readers to this annual Epiphany offering, and if any of them can render more information on the subject, let them not hesitate to do so.

Digitized by Google

P.S. A friend has just handed us a copy of this week's issue of the Church Times, which contains a little more information on the above subject.

Feb. 18, 1888.

THE ROYAL EPIPHANY OFFERING.

Sir,—As your correspondent "J. T. G." asks for information as to the above, perhaps what I have to say may interest him.

Twenty-five or thirty years ago, the offering (there is one of that time before me), was a handsome box of red silk, with the Star of Bethlehem on top; it was lined with white silk. It contained three bags of red silk, lined with white, with gold tassels and cords, one containing gold leaf, a second frankincense, and a third myrrh.

Shortly after that I was told by those who were in a position to have some knowledge of the facts, that it had become the custom to pay a tradesman a very unreasonable sum (£25 I was told) for supplying the box; that it was proposed to abolish the custom, and that the then Dean of the Chapel, Bishop Tait, suggested that, instead of abolishing it, a less costly box should be used, and the difference in value should, in the shape of sovereigns, take the place of the gold leaf in the bag. Whether this was done or not I do not know. Perhaps some of your readers can say what the offering is like now.—Church Times, 17, 1888.

GASPAR-MELCHIOR-BALTHASAR.

Quinquagesima, 1888.

Correspondence.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

MY DEAR PHILO-ISRAEL,—Since I last sent you a line, I have had to move from Peshawur to Rawul Pindi. Such is life in this transitory world: we are only pilgrims and strangers here. Still we are journeying on to Zion, the city of God. The glorious inheritance that awaits our nation, when united to the House of Judah, I may not live to see enjoyed, and still it looks as if it were near, yea, even at our doors! Time, however, is nothing with the Almighty. I sometimes doubt if we are ready to receive this inheritance! Unbelief kept our forefathers in the wilderness for forty years, and may it not now be the very thing that is keeping us out of this glorious inheritance? Jerusalem has been trodden down by the Gentile such a long time! Has not the time arrived for God to have mercy upon Zion, to set up her gates and her walls once more, so that the seed of Abraham, His friend, may inherit it according to His promises? It is true the English nation are reaping the blessings promised to Abraham in more ways than one. This I am fully satisfied about. Any one who will look into God's blessed Word and search that, cannot help seeing the truth of these facts. But let them search without prejudice, and without pre-arranged matter. Then the truth will speak for itself. "A nation and a company of nations" undoubtedly we are, and we also possess the Gates of our enemies. Surely these are the promises that were made to Abraham? Again; his seed was to be as the stars of heaven for multitude, and surely we answer to this figure, for go to what part of the world you will, you find English and American citizens there; and I see we are increasing so rapidly at home that the children are plainly saying, "Give place that I may dwell." What mean the great mobs we read of at home clamouring for work? I only wish all would believe the blessed truth. I am sure we should soon see all fulfilled, and Judah and Israel joined together—the dead bones made to live, and Palestine inhabited not by the sluggish Turk, but by the thrifty Houses of Israel and Judah, whose inheritance the land is. But the Lord will fulfil His promise to His own chosen people; though the blind veil of unbelief hanging over the eyes of our nation regarding Our Identity with the Lost Tribes of Israel is great. I was talking with an American the other day. I believe, he said, that all the true believers in Jesus are the spiritual seed of Abraham, but not the natural seed. "But what," I said, "do you mean"? "I mean," he replied, "that Christ was the promised seed" in which all the earth was to be blessed, and that, as we believe in Him for salvation, we become His children. "But," I said, "this theory of yours ignores a nationality, and brings in a party of individuals as believers." These cannot be the promises to Abraham, for he was to be "a nation and a company of nations," and the seed could not be this, if they were to be composed as you say of believers in Jesus only, seeing that these are drawn from all nationalities, and are not combined into a nationality at all. We must find them as "a nation with a monarchy, and also obedient to God's laws." As they were once disobedient, and therefore called "not His people," so now they are obedient, and called "His children." Can we find individual Christians thus situated? He admitted we could not, but still he believed all the promises to this great man Abraham were spiritual only. "Well," I said, "Was not the occupying of the land of Canaan literal in the first instance? Was not the promise to Abraham that Sarah should have a son literal? And was not that child literally born to Abraham? All this has happened literally. Why, then, should you say now that the promises are to be spiritually interpreted regarding Abraham's seed, if you would actually thereby rob the Jews of their brightest hopes, for they believe truly that they will yet return to Palestine, and the Word of God bears him out that both the Jew and the Israelite shall return together, and become one nation upon the mountains of Israel (Ezek. xxxvii.), and especially from verse 16. This does not mean, I said, spiritual, but temporal, blessing, does it not? The only answer I got was, "I cannot alter my opinion." Preconceived notions and prejudice had more weight with him than God's Word. But another, who must be nameless here, believed the truths, and accepted them as soon it was pointed out to him. He was like myself—had been searching for the truth.

I gave him some BANNERS, and I send him one a week. Now he reads and searches the Word of God, and finds out the truth. These are the students I like. There is not a soldier but likes the BANNER: I distribute them in the hospital and barrack-rooms, and I am often asked for them when I have none to give the applicant. The Identity literature is being read in India more than any other. One made the remark, after I had been speaking for some time upon Our Identity, "I never knew so much of the Word of God before, and how plain and simple you can make it; but I can't see it like that when I am alone. I wish I could." I trust the knowledge of Our Identity may lead me to see more clearly. Surely the glorious light shining from Our Identity will throw such a glorious light on the written Word of God that all who will may read the Word by the light thus given!

Thanking you, dear Sir, for the continuation of the BANNER OF ISRAEL, and for the BANNERS and other literature I receive through the Free Distribution Society, and praying God to bless every effort put forth to make known abroad Our Identity.

I remain, yours sincerely,

Rawul Pindi, January 23rd, 1888. L. HILL.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

MY DEAR PHILO-ISRAEL,—I send you an extract from "All the Year Round" of January 21st, 1888, which may not have come under your notice. I do not believe it is very generally known, and you may think it worthy of reproduction in the BANNER. It is only a further confirmation of the faithful fulfilment of the promised blessings to Israel, "If she will hearken diligently unto the voice of the Lord her God" (Deut. xxviii. 7). "The Lord shall cause thine enemies that rise up against thee to be smitten before thy face: they shall come out against thee one way, and flee before thee seven ways."

In the extract which I send you, there is, I think, a printer's error, as on referring to Whittaker's Almanack on French Dynasties and Sovereigns, I find there no mention of Charles V.; but there is a Charles IV.—"The Handsome"—who reigned in 1322. It most probably, therefore, occurred in his reign. His attempt to land an army in England was foiled by a storm, which scattered his fleet, and adds one more, or, rather, is the first of the now known three occasions, when God's protecting power was made manifest in the defence of His chosen people.

EXTRACT FROM "ALL THE YEAR ROUND," JAN. 21ST, 1888.

"The French Navy is a somewhat modern creation. Ours dates like other good things from Alfred; but though Louis IX. tried hard to take his troops to the crusades in French bottoms, even he had to hire from Italy. Charles V., however, had a decent fleet, Norman, Briton, and Castilian, which won a great victory over us at Rochelle. Under his successor, this fleet was to have landed a large army in England; but storms, which helped us so notably against the Armada, and afterwards against Hoche's armament, almost wholly destroyed it."

H. ST. GEORGE PRIAULX.

Digitized by Google

NOTICES.

All communications intended for the Editor, to be addressed: "Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Clifton, Bristol.

SUBSCRIPTIONS. £ s. d.

Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free 0 7 6
Two Copies (including Double Numbers) 0 13 6
Three Copies ,, ,, ,, ... 1 0 4
Four Copies ,, ,, ,, ... 1 5 6
Six Copies ,, ,, ,, ... 1 16 4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-grand, London, to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C., or F. W. PARRY & Co., 29, Paternoster-row, London.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

Contents Bills and Show Cards may be obtained on application to the Publishers.

Advertisements should be sent to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

Prepaid Advertisements are inserted at the rate of thirty words for 1s. 4d.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

A LECTURE will be Delivered in the ASSOCIATION ROOMS, 14, King William-street, Charing Cross, W.C., on THURSDAY AFTERNOON NEXT, March 29, 1888, at 3.30 o'clock, by the Rev. James S. Forsyth. Subject: "Ancient Babylon." Admission free. Strangers will be made welcome.

JAMES BILLINGTON, Sec.

New Work on the Identity of Lost Israel
By the late BISHOP TITCOMB.

Now ready, in Cloth Gilt, Bevelled Boards, Imperial 8vo. Price 3s.; sent Post Free for Postal Order or Stamps.

A MESSAGE TO THE CHURCH
FROM
THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.
BY THE LATE
RT. REV. BISHOP TITCOMB,. D.D.

ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet Court. Fleet Street.
F. W. PARRY & Co., 29, Paternoster Row, E.C.

Price 2d., by post 2½d. Second Edition, Revised.

A SUMMARY OF ANGLO-ISRAELITE TEACHING,

And of the Scripture Proofs on which it rests.

By SURGEON-GEN. J. M. GRANT, M.D.,

President of the Cheltenham Association, and Vice-President of the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association.

LONDON: ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet Court, Fleet Street, and all Booksellers.

Just Published, Price Threepence.

WHAT IS OUR HOPE FOR THE CHURCH IN ISRAEL?

By E. M. RUSH ("A E I").

(Author to "The Answer to the Eastern Question," etc.).

ondon: H. BURNSIDE, Bookseller, Blackheath, S.E.

Dr. JOSEPH WILD'S WORKS

The most useful works on the subject.

NEW EDITION JUST PUBLISHED.

THE LOST TEN TRIBES

Price 3s., post free 3s. 3d.

'We have much pleasure in directing attention to this handsome volume. . . . We promise our readers that if they procure this work, and will peruse it, they will find 'Our Identity' discussed in a clear, novel, racy, and from an American point of view, which is sure to interest."—Banner of Israel.

THE FUTURE OF ISRAEL AND JUDAH,

Price 2s., post free 2s. 3d.

R. BANKS & SON, RACQUET-COURT, FLEET-ST.

PIANOFORTES, Harmoniums, American Organs. Why buy at shops inferior made instruments, and pay large profits, when you can buy direct from the Maker High-class Instruments, and save 50 per cent. by so doing? Full value allowed for old Instruments in exchange as part payment. Write for Price Lists and Testimonials to G. LINSTEAD, 2, Oseney Crescent, Camden Road, London. Established 1874.

Price 6d., post free 7d.

THE MESSENGER,

A Monthly Expositor of the Fulfilment of the Scriptures in the Anglo-Saxon Folk, the Israel of God.

Each number contains contributions from high-class writers on Identity Subjects, selections from the Discourses of Rev. Dr. Wild, and a chapter of an Important New Work, entitled—

"RUSSIA JAPHET," by "OXONIAN,"

Author of "Israel's Wanderings," &c.

London: F. W. Parry & Co., 29, Paternoster-row.

Fifteenth Thousand.

BY REV. HENRY ROE.

Israel's World. Origin and Destiny of British Race, Colonies, and Empire. 2d., post free 2½d. Fifty post free from H. Roe for 4s. 9d.

Philo-Israel says: "I am perfectly delighted with your pamphlet."

C. E. Priestly, Esq., says: "For its size I never read a better work. I have given away two lots of fifty each, and enclose money for fifty more. I have sent it to clergymen, bishops, and archbishops."

Rev. Thomas Lowe says: "What the works of Mr. Hine failed to do in my enlightenment, 'Israel's World' has accomplished. I now read the Scriptures in a new and vivid light."

Going to Africa. 1s., post free 1s. 1d.

Fernando Po Mission. 1s., post free 1s. 1d.

West African Scenes. 2s., post free 2s. 2d.

Consecration. 2d., post free 2½d.

50 post free from H. Roe for 4s. 9d.

Robert Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.; and Rev. H. Roe, Dawley, Salop.

MR. EDWARD HINE has returned from his lecturing tour in America. Friends wishing to arrange for him to lecture can communicate with Isaac Loveland, Shoreham, near Sevenoaks, Kent, at present fixing no dates. Mr. Hine's publications have had a large circulation, and can be obtained of F. W. Parry & Co., 29, Paternoster Row, London, E.C.

Forty-Seven Identifications, 6d., post free 7d.
Cui Bono? 6d., post free, 7d.
Lost Israel Found, 3s 6d., post free, 3s. 9d.
Also The Nation Warned by the Scripture Teachings of the Great Pyramid. 6d., post, 7d.

"BUSY BEE" SEWING MACHINE

The Crowning Triumph of Mechanical Ingenuity.

This wonderful machine is constructed upon an entirely new principle. It will sew thick or thin material, and the mechanism is so simple that any person or child can quickly learn to use it. The Sewing Machine is one of the greatest labour-saving inventions of the age, and no lady can well afford to be without one. The price of this machine is so low that it pays for itself in a few hours. It is the simplest and cheapest practical Sewing Machine in the world, and is a perfect success. It is handsomely decorated in black and gold, and all light parts nickle-plated. Inspection invited. Illustrated prospectus, and copies of testimonials post free. Every machine warranted, and sent with full instructions, carriage paid for 6s. Polished Stained Wood Box, specially adapted for machine, and fitted with nickle-plated handle, 1s. 6d. extra.

W. B. FOOT & SON, 44, Camden Rd., London.

HUMAN LIFE.—FIFTY YEARS' Record of Facts, Principles, and Discoveries (just published, complete) Relating to the Improvement and Preservation of Human Life on Earth. Origin and true treatment of diseases. A series of articles by DR. SAMUEL BIRLEY, M.D., Ph.D. Book form, 50 pages. SENT FREE to every applicant by the publishers, GORDON B. MURRAY & CO., 50, Theobald's-road, Holborn, E.C. Write to-day.

FITS! FITS!! FITS!!!

ALL PERSONS SUFFERING FROM EPILEPSY should send name and address to JAMES OSBORNE, Medical Pharmacy, Ashbourne, Derbyshire who will forward, free of charge, full particulars, with Testimonials, of the most successful remedy ever discovered for this distressing malady. Sent to all parts of the world. Reference permitted to Rev. J. BAKER, M.A. 80, Bolton Road, Pendleton, Manchester.

WORKS BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

The Geography of the Gates. With Map and six full page, and one double-page, Illustrations, printed on plate paper. 208 pages, in handsome cloth, gilt Price 3s. 6d., post free 3s. 10d.

The History of the House of Israel. How They Were Lost and How They Were Found. Told for the children. Price 6d., cloth 1s.; post free 7d. and 1s. 1d. Fifth edition.

A Resume of the Scriptural Argument, Proving the Identity of the British Race with the Lost Ten Tribes. Price 1d.; 6s. per hundred, postage 6d.

Our Identity: What it is Not; What it is; and Our Obligations To-day in Respect to it. Being a Lecture recently delivered in London by Philo-Israel, and published by special request. Price 2d., a reduction for quantities.

Our Identity with the House of Israel. Price 4d., Reprinted from "Clifton Chronicle Letters'

An Elementary Digest or Sketch of the Chief Facts and Teachings of the Great Pyramid of Egypt. Adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific 56 pages, Illustrated with Diagrams, price 4d., post free 5d. 10th Thousand.

Are the English People the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel? An Inquiry Establishing the Identity of the British Nation with the Lost Ten Tribes. 4d.

Anglo-Israelism. True, Not False. Being Philo-Israel's Reply to the Rev. Canon Bell's pamphlet, "Anglo-Israelism: True or False?" Price 1d., 6s. 6d. per 100. 16 pages, crown 8vo.

London: Robert Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

WHO ARE WE & WHAT IS OUR MISSION?

By J. Thornhill Harrison. With seven Maps. Hand some cloth, gilt, price 5s. Free for P.O.

Robert Banks & Son, Racquet Court, Fleet Street, E.C.

LUNG TONIC

SAVE YOUR LIVES BY TAKING

OWBRIDGE'S
LUNG TONIC

THE MIGHTY HEALER.

It has a power over disease hitherto unknown in Medicine.

Are you at all Weak-chested or inclined to be Consumptive, with just a touch of Cough now and then?

"Try this Wonderful Medicine." The Cough and Weakness will disappear as if by magic, and you will feel a strength and power you never had before.

HAVE YOU A COUGH?
A DOSE WILL RELIEVE IT!
HAVE YOU A COLD?
A DOSE AT BEDTIME WILL REMOVE IT.

Bronchitis & Asthma it relieves instantly

The Spasms of Coughing so dreadful in Whooping Cough become less with each dose of the medicine.

Prepared by W. T. OWBRIDGE, Chemist, Hull

Sold in Bottles 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d. and 11s. by all Chemists and Patent Medicine Vendors. Wholesale all London and Provincial Houses.

CHOICE EGGS for Sitting, from Prize Strains; Wyandotte, 12 eggs 6s., 24, 11s.; Plymouth Rock, Light Brahma, Black Minorca, 12, 4s.; 24, 7s.—J. R. Horne, West Farm, Allington, Salisbury.

Certain HARNESS' Cure.
ELECTROPATHIC BELT
FOR RHEUMATISM

Major PAKENHAM, Longstone House, Armagh, writes:—"The Electropathic Belt has completely cured me of rheumatic gout. I suffered intense agony for two years. I now feel strong and active."

Guaranteed to generate a mild continuous current of Electricity, which speedily cures all Disorders of the Nerves, Stomach, Liver and Kidneys. Thousands of Testimonials. Pamphlet & Advice free on application to Mr. C. B. Harness, Consulting Electrician, the Medical Battery Co. Ltd.

On y Address,
52, OXFORD ST. LONDON, W.
(Corner of Rathbone Place.)
Call to-day, if possible, or write at once

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. F. W. PARRY (late GURST & Co.), 29 PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, MAR. 28, 1888 [All rights reserved

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."

(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. XII., No. 588. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, APRIL 4, 1888. [DOUBLE NUMBER, TWOPENCE.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
The Closing of Israel's "Doors"	133
The "A B C" of the Scripture Proofs that "The House of Israel" is Now "A Multitude in the Midst of the Earth," Fulfilling Isaiah liv. By Dr. Alder Smith, F.R.C.S. Part I.	135
Population and Emigration	136
Western Australia	137
Israel's Supremacy in Shipping	138
Jubilee Letter to the Queen, concerning Her World-wide and Imperishable Empire, and Her Immovable Throne. From one of Her Antipodean Loyal Subjects. Part I.	139
A Review	141
"To Our Race Belongs the Future of the World." By E. Reep	142
Progress in Yorkshire	143
A Quotation	143
The Teutonic Theory in Connection with the Review of "My Jewels." By Sarah Sharp	143
What Christianity Has Done in Fiji. Forwarded by G. Wells, Junr.	144
The Edinburgh Scotsman on Our Identity	145
Anglo-Israel Free Distribution Fund	145
Israel's Scripture and Prayer Union	146
Reviews	146
Correspondence	147

THE CLOSING OF ISRAEL'S "DOORS."

THE reports of the committee appointed by the Secretary of State for War to consider with him the plans proposed for the fortification and armament of our military and home mercantile ports; also the Secretary of State's report regarding the fortification of our great military ports and our coaling stations as well, were published in the Times of March 1, 1888, and require notice in the pages of the BANNER. While God calls on us "to shut our doors about us" and "to enter into our chambers," the response comes from the British Government, in the shape of the reports now before us, which tell us how the nation is carrying out God's commands, and how exactly we are fulfilling His prophetic Word (that is His will) concerning His people Israel. We quote these important paragraphs that our readers may judge for themselves how perfectly we are fulfilling prophecy, being Israel, and may recognise the fact, that no other nation on the face of the earth is doing the work we are, closing our doors or Gates, and securing our home chambers, or such of them as seem most important, to make sure that no intruders shall enter therein or interfere with our secure and careless dwelling in the Isles" (Ezek. xxxix. 6, R.V.). The report speaks thus:—

Since their report was presented which in its original form took place in the Autumn, Her Majesty's Government have considered the whole question of the defences of our ports and coaling stations from the point of view of what is necessary, and of what it is possible to do without loss of time; and the conclusions to which they have come may be stated generally as follows:—

(1.) That the works and armaments which are vitally necessary for the protection of our arsenals and our commerce should be at once undertaken, and prosecuted with the least possible delay.

(2.) That any scheme for this purpose should be submitted to Parliament as a whole, in order that the consent of Parliament having been once obtained, the necessary works may proceed without any hindrance.

(3.) That the whole of the expense of the lighter armaments, of ammunition, and other more perishable material, should be borne upon the annual Estimates, while that of the works and buildings and of the heavier armaments is of a sufficiently permanent character to render it right to follow the general lines of the precedent of the Military Forces' Localization Act, 1872, and, by placing the expenditure under statutory authority, keep it outside the ordinary Estimates.

The scheme which we now, therefore, submit to Parliament is based upon a programme which, we have every reason to hope, can be completed within three years. The time necessary for building and for the construction of heavy guns makes it improbable that any less period will suffice; but, on other hand, we trust that the time named will not be exceeded, and every effort will be used to finish them as speedily as possible.

First, we propose to complete, as quickly as possible, the works and armaments at the coaling stations within the accepted programme; and, in addition, to provide the armament for King George's Sound and Thursday Island, which was asked for by the colonial representatives at the recent Colonial Conference. In addition, the submarine mining defences will be perfected, and the absolutely necessary barrack accommodation provided.

We propose to undertake the most urgent requirements of our great military ports, in accordance with the general lines laid down by my committee, and to complete the submarine mining defences.

And, lastly, we propose to finish the submarine mining defences of our principle mercantile ports, and to supply the light armament necessary to protect them.

The details of this scheme have been submitted to me by my military advisers. If it is to be completed within three years, it is absolutely necessary to commence operations as soon as possible. Indeed, in the case of one, and that the most important defect of all, we have not felt justified in delaying the attempt at a remedy, and the necessary works for this purpose are already in a very forward state.

The subjoined table shows the general character of the works which it is proposed to carry out:—

Digitized by Google

	Estimated cost of works and buildings.		Estimated cost at present prices, heavy guns.	Estimat'd cost at present price of machine & quick-firing guns, torpedoes, and ammunition.	Total.
	Defence works and buildings.	Barracks
1. Military Ports:—	£	£	£	£	£
Portsmouth	78,410	—	106,370	167,965	352,745
Plymouth	103,590	—	78,940	51,500	234,030
The Thames } The Medway }	119,276	—	60,380	44,910	224,566
Harwich	21,630	—	23,440	22,440	67,510
Malta	46,340	—	76,730	93,720	216,790
Gibraltar	26,300	—	51,635	29,935	107,870
Bermuda	16,193	—	—	6,120	22,313
Halifax	70,600	—	17,290	12,450	100,340
Minor Ports	33,701	—	17,390	30,050	81,141
Strengthening magazines	95,000	—	—	—	95,000
Position-finding stations	50,000	—	—	15,000	65,000
Minor services at various stations	85,000	—	—	57,000	142,000
Total	746,040	—	432,175	531,090	1,709,305
2. Coaling stations	139,006	350,000	220,265	126,455	835,725
3. Mercantile ports	92,405	—	—	141,885	234,290
4. For incidental works and armaments	220,110	—	—	—	220,110
Grand total	1,197,560	350,000	652,440	799,430	2,999,430

The total sum to be provided will be seen to be £2,999,430, of which £799,430 is required for ammunition, submarine mining stores, and lighter armaments. This latter sum must be provided in the Estimates of the next two or three years. In the year 1888—9, £305,000 is included for this purpose; but the precise amount to be taken in each year depends upon the progress made with the manufacture of the necessary guns, which must be sent out with all necessary equipments. Proposals as to the means of providing the remaining sum of £2,200,000 will shortly be laid before Parliament.

It only remains for me to explain what we hope to accomplish during the coming year.

We hope that all the guns required for the defence of the coaling stations, with the exception of two, where the work is only just undertaken, will be ready to send out. The works, whose progress depends upon the Imperial Government, will be pushed forward with every endeavour that they may all be ready for the guns when received. The programme for the coaling stations ought, therefore, to be very nearly completed. The remaining expenditure of the year will be mainly devoted to improving the defences of Portsmouth and the Thames.

So far the official reports, which closely touch our arguments, and plainly point to the fact that the British are Israel. These reports admit that the defence of the Home Ports has not been adequately secured by the fortresses already erected, or by the guns that have already been mounted there. It is found that nearly three million sterling must be spent to give adequate security to some of the more important of our Home and Foreign Gates, and that sum will accordingly be raised to enable the Government within the next three years "to shut our doors about us," and provide a safe home for Israel during the coming war-woe about to desolate yonder ill-consolidated Europe. We are glad to see that armaments for King George's Sound in Australia are ordered; and Thursday Island, lately visited by Lord Brassey, will also be fortified and raised to the dignity of a Gate (see p. 71, BANNER). The programme as regards the coaling stations abroad will it is hoped be concluded this very year; and India, as we are well assured by competent authority, is ready now, prepared for all contingencies. The defence of Portsmouth and the Thames, will call for the larger part of the remaining expenditure. The great want experienced everywhere seems to be the heavy guns, which take a long time to manufacture. They will now be taken in hand, and in time the doors of Israel's foreign possessions or Gates will be shut about us, and we may await in security, in our God-prescribed defences, the outburst of the terrible cataclysm which is to be the undoing of the nations.

We reflect upon these events which are taking place before our eyes and marvel that our opponents can pass them by without noting that in acting as we are doing we are carrying out to the jot and to the tittle the action which God's Word commands Israel to perform. Isa. xxvi. 20, 21 is a passage addressed by God Almighty Himself to His people Israel, and the context shows that the counsel He there gives, amounting to an imperative command, is closely connected with His determination to punish the nations for their iniquity, and with the Restoration of Israel to their land, now closely impending. "Come, My people," He says, "enter thou into thy chambers and shut thy doors about thee, hide thyself for a little moment until the indignation be overpast. For behold the Lord cometh out of His place to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquities. The earth also shall disclose her blood, and shall no more cover her slain." The statements of Zeph. iii. 8, and Rev. xvi. 18, agree with this prophecy of Isaiah, and indicate that while destruction awaits the non-Israelite Gentile nations, there is security now for Israel hidden in the hollow of the Lord's hand (Psa. lxxxiii. 3, R.V.). The feverish anxiety of the nation and present Government to fortify our foreign Gates, and to make Portsmouth, Plymouth, London, and Liverpool, safe from invasion and insult by the alien is very remarkable when it is remembered that for years and years the British people have laughed at precautions of this kind and have been content to remain perfectly defenceless, their foreign and home Gates being simply a prey, inviting the attack of any passing, powerful, hostile, cruiser, having the time and opportunity to make a dash at the inviting quarry. What makes this our people so anxious now to be really secure? Who is going to attack them, or what nation shows signs of even a faint wish to molest or harm their possessions or them? Not one! France is too intent on robbing Germany to wish to injure Britain. Russia could not do it if she tried; for she has not the number or kind of ships of war to give her the chance. Germany, Austria, Italy, and the minor Powers are our fast friends, and would not injure us if they could. Yet here is the Government, at the dictation of the British people, intent on making the foreign Gates secure and the home ports safe against any possible invader. It seems to us that the only explanation of this extraordinary fact, is, that the British are Israel, and that therefore, these being the last days just prior to the great earthquake war-woe, they are under divine constraint to do God's will, and to prepare for contingencies which He foresees, but of which we know yet nothing. So when Noah was building his ark for 120 years and preaching to the ungodly world around him, he probably was quite unaware of the exact way in which the Deluge was to come, and how the huge structure he was preparing was to save him and those dear to him, as well as the animal world around him. But he built on in faith! and at last he profited by his obedience and faith! So now; we know not what good the fortification of our foreign Gates is to do for us; nor what profit there can possibly be in making London, Portsmouth, and Liverpool safe against all possible attacks! But obey we must! and shall. The results are in God's hands. When the time of crisis and of terror for the world arrives, we then shall see that God has worked for our benefit all along, because we are His people; and that obeying Him, we have only given another proof that we are the Lost Ten Tribes, His people, Ephraim-Israel. To Him shall then be all the praise! while ours will be then all the benefit and blessing!

AN Irish Exhibition is to be held at Olympia, Kensington, from June 4 to October 27, in order to place before the English public a clear view of the predominant industries of Ireland. There will be a representation of an Irish village, with the peasants at work on the dyeing of yarn, lace making, and knitting. The list of patrons includes about 700 names, representing every phase of political, social, and religious life.

Digitized by Google

THE "A B C" OF THE SCRIPTURE PROOFS THAT "THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL" IS NOW "A MULTITUDE IN THE MIDST OF THE EARTH," FULFILLING ISAIAH LIV.

By Dr. Alder Smith, F.R.C.S.

(Read at the Wolverhampton Conference, Feb. 21st, 1888.)

PART I.

Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen,—Some may wonder why a busy London medical man troubles his head about the Anglo-Israel theory; but it is for the following reasons. The last twelve years prophetic study has been my chief pleasure and profit; and for some years I argued against this view. This naturally led me to read most that had been written, both for and against it. I even tried to convince some, who believed in it, that they were hopelessly in the wrong. In this I signally failed. By degrees I found my pet arguments against "this foolish craze"—as it is often called—vanishing into thin air. And now, I trust, I may be able to convince you that we are right; by giving you a concise and logical summary, i.e., an A B C of the texts and reasons which have induced me to believe that the House of Israel (often called the Lost Ten Tribes) must at the present time be a mighty host, "as the sand of the sea" for number; having grown "into a multitude in the midst of the earth," and become "the fulness of the Gentiles." I take as my foundation stone a fact that all Christians will admit—viz., that the Bible is the word of God, and that God means what He says in it by the mouths of His holy prophets. The next point is equally clear—God chose Abraham and made an unconditional covenant with him, and his literal seed after him (Genesis xvii. 7), "And I will establish My covenant between Me and thee, and thy seed after thee, throughout their generations, for an everlasting covenant." The Abrahamic covenant—which, of course, included MULTIPLICITY OF SEED—was carried down to Isaac. Genesis xvii. 19:—"And God said, nay, but Sarah thy wife shall bear thee a son; and thou shalt call his name Isaac; and I will establish My covenant with him for an everlasting covenant for his seed after him." Isaac had two sons, but Esau lost his birthright. Thus we read in Genesis xxv. 32: "And Joseph said, swear to me this day; and he sware unto him, and he sold his birthright unto Jacob." God confirmed the birthright unto Jacob; for Genesis. xxxv. 10, tells us—"And He called his name Israel. And God said unto him, I am God Almighty; be fruitful and multiply; a nation and a company of nations shall be of thee, and kings shall come out of thy loins." By the Hebrew, "of thee," all spiritual paternity is excluded. But, at the death of Jacob, we find the covenant was divided amongst the sons.

The birthright to the Messiah was given to Judah; and the full occupation—still future—of the Holy Land was promised to the Twelve Tribes; but the special promise of multiplicity of seed was given to Joseph's House. Most Biblical students forget this most important fact. Hence, though all believers in Christ have the sonship of Abraham; yet this does not undo the fact that the literal seed of Jacob and of Joseph had the promise of multitudinousness given to them unalterable and absolute.

Jacob was on his death-bed when Joseph took his two sons to receive the patriarchal blessing, and we read the following in the 48th chapter—"And Jacob said unto Joseph, God Almighty" . . . . "said unto me, behold I will make thee fruitful, and multiply thee, and I will make of thee a company of peoples" . . . . "And Israel beheld Joseph's sons" . . . . "and he said; Bring them, I pray thee, unto me, and I will bless them" . . . . "And Israel stretched out his right hand, and laid it upon Ephraim's head, who was the younger" . . . . "guiding his hand wittingly, for Manasseh was the first-born. And he blessed Joseph and said" . . "Let my name (viz., Israel) be named on them, and the name of my fathers Abraham and Isaac; and let them grow into a multitude in the midst of the earth."

The Hebrew means to increase "as fishes do increase," by sending out shoals. Then we find it stated that Ephraim's seed, in particular, were to become "A multitude of nations," or, as the margin says, "a fulness of nations."

The Hebrew word used here is "Goyim," and this means Gentile nations, or nations outside Palestine, as you will easily see if you look at page vii. of the preface of the revised Bible. The importance of the fact, that the multitudinous seed were to become Gentilised, cannot be overrated; because it is the key to the interpretation of the prophecies concerning Joseph's House. Then we find in the 49th chapter that the special blessing of multitudinousness was to be given to Joseph's House in "the latter days." I cannot read the passage, but it is well known.

Joseph was to become fruitful, and his bow was to abide in strength in "the latter days." Moses did not forget to give the chief blessings to Joseph's House when blessing the tribes in Deut. xxxiii.; and he says—"And his horns are the horns of the wild-ox (unicorn); with them he shall push the people, all of them, even to the ends of the earth."

Such then was Joseph's birthright—the extending, conquering branch of Israel. What does this pushing the people to the ends of the earth mean, unless it will be attained by constant encroachment upon distant nations, and gradual acquirement of their settlements? There can be no possible doubt the birthright was given to Joseph's House and not to the House of Judah, for we read in 1 Chronicles v. 3:—"And the sons of Reuben, the firstborn of Israel, for he was the firstborn; but, forasmuch as he defiled his father's couch, his birthright was given unto the sons of Joseph, the son of Israel." Again in Jeremiah xxxi. 9.—"Ephraim is My firstborn," and lastly St. Paul says—"By faith Jacob, when he was a dying, blessed each of the sons of Joseph" (Heb. xi.). We are told it included "multitudinousness" when God said unto Jacob, "I will make of thee a company of peoples"; and we have very nearly the same words when Jacob blessed Ephraim, and said: "He shall become a multitude, or fulness of nations."

The greatest question before us is, when is this birthright blessing of multiplicity to be fulfilled to Joseph's House? I need not remind you of the division of the Twelve Tribes of Israel into the House of Israel and Judah, respectively, in the days of Jeroboam; and that while every Jew is of necessity of Israel or an Israelite, yet it by no means follows that every Israelite is of the House of Judah, or a Jew.

Now we all know that the House of Israel was taken captive by the kings of Assyria about 721 B.C.; and from that time the history of this House, as a political power, ceases in Scripture. Where then are the Ten Tribes—this cast-off House of Israel? Some think they returned with Ezra and the Jews after the Babylonian captivity. This, as regards the main body of the House of Israel, is easily proved to be incorrect.

First.—The exiles who returned with Ezra were of the Babylonian captivity only (see Ezra ii. 1); and there is no mention of any of the Assyrian captivity.

Secondly.—Josephus says:—"The Ten Tribes did not return to Palestine." . . . . "The entire body of the people of Israel remained in that country (viz., Assyria) wherefore there are but two tribes in Asia and Europe subject to the Romans, while the Ten Tribes are beyond the Euphrates till now, and are an immense multitude."

Thirdly.—The Prophets speak of the two Houses as distinct, and the House of Israel wandering among the nations, long after the return from Babylon. One quotation from Zechariah settles this. He lived and prophesied eighteen years after the return under Ezra; and yet he says:—"I will save the House of Joseph" . . . . and they shall be (future) as though I had not cast them off". . . . "I will hiss for them and gather them; for I have redeemed them: they shall increase as they have increased. And I will sow them among the peoples; and they shall remember me in far countries." (Zech. x. 6-9.)

Digitized by Google

Lastly.—The prophecies in Ezekiel xxxvii., and elsewhere, concerning the return of the two Houses—the union of the two sticks—are so very clear and explicit, that it is simply impossible that the return there described has taken place. Is it likely that Ezekiel would speak of the return of two distinct Houses, if they were mingled as the Jews are now? Besides we are told by Jeremiah—third chapter—that at the final return—"The House of Judah shall walk TO (the Hebrew means in dependence upon) the House of Israel." In Hebrews viii. you will also find the two Houses mentioned; and finally, if you ask any learned Jew if the Ten Tribes are with them, you will get a very decided answer in the negative. Thus we may take the following points as certain—First, that the Israelites were divided, by the will of God, into two distinct Houses, and that they are to remain separate till the reunion described in the prophets, which is still future.

Now, were the birthright promises given to Joseph's House to be fulfilled to them before the captivity? Most assuredly not, and for the following reasons. First.—Because they were to happen to them in "the latter," or "the last days." Now this phrase undoubtedly refers to the Christian Dispensation. The following passages settle this: Hebrew i. 2.—"Hath in these last days spoken unto us by His Son." 1 Peter i. 20—"Christ was manifested in these last times for you." 1 Tim. iv. 1—"Now the Spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith." 2 Tim. iii. 1—"This know also that in the last days perilous times shall come." Again, Daniel refers this period to the times of the Gentiles—the well known period of the image; and he says:—"God . . . . hath made known to the king Nebuchadnezzar what shall be in the latter days."

This alone settles the question that the birthright blessings were not to be fulfilled before the captivity.

Secondly,—It is evident Ephraim never grew into "a fulness of nations"—Gentile nations, or nations outside Palestine—in Old Testament times.

Thirdly,—Hosea tells us the increase of the Children of Israel, "as the sand of the sea" for number, was to be after the captivity (Hosea i. 10).

Thus it is certain that the promises have been fulfilled during their exile from the land, or that they still await their fulfilment. Which is it?—or in the words of the late Bishop Titcomb—"The inspiration of Scripture must stand or fall by the Church's discovery of Ephraim either now or hereafter, as a multitude or fulness of non-Palestine nations, restored to the covenant of God during the last days. And this prophecy either has been already fulfilled in some manner not generally recognised and understood; or it still awaits its fulfilment. One or other of such alternations is unmistakable; and the very least, therefore, which can be said upon the subject is that it deserves the most careful consideration." *

(To be continued.)

* "A Message to the Church from the Nineteenth Century."

POPULATION AND EMIGRATION.

THE subject of our redundant population, and the need that exists of soon finding some outlet for our teeming masses abroad, is being taken up far and wide, and is exercising men's minds accordingly. The Financial News of December 22, has an article on it, and everywhere there is uneasiness on the subject. How are we to provide for our surplus population is the cry of the hour. The way the matter is working is this:—In 1801 our islands were the home of only 16,345,000 souls. In 1881, or 81 years afterwards, the numbers grew to 35,241,000, being nearly three millions over the doubling rate. To-day, in 1888, the census, if taken, would certainly show that we had increased to 37,400,000. What is to be done with a people who, after making all allowances, persist in increasing at the rate of 1,000 souls per diem, or 365,000 every year? The Financial News remarks on the phenomena in this fashion:—

> Truth to say, without touching on the thorny questions of Protection or Free Trade, any more than on the vicissitudes of certain branches of commerce, one fact stands out of the midst of all such subjects that cannot be gainsaid, or even conjured away by specious argument. This country has largely outgrown, in every groove of existence, the resources available for distribution on the ancient lines: to employ the old metaphor, there are too many pigs to milk the sow. The numbers of those who have been engaged in certain trades or professions have been economised, and sometimes those very branches of employment themselves superseded, by change of custom, method, fashion, or otherwise, and still candidates to fill the vanished places too often present themselves, recruited from an ever-increasing population; and except to those who possess exceptional opportunities of ability or resource, or an aptitude for accommodating themselves to altered circumstances, the way to competence, much more to wealth, is too often barred.

There is then but one way of affording relief. Our surplus numbers must somehow be induced to leave these inhospitable shores, and find space and means to live in one or other of our Colonies, or if they choose, as the majority have hitherto done, in Manasseh's broad domains. We have as a nation, however, been striving to do this very thing for 25 years past, but the effect has been small, because the results of our efforts have been so poor. There have been but barely 200,000 souls annually found willing to leave their homes here on an average. The population has therefore grown continually and enormously, in spite of all efforts to reduce the number at home, by causing some to emigrate to lands which seem to invite their occupation of the waste and desolate places existing there in abundance, waiting for them to come. The result is the sufferings of our home masses, and the blame freely cast upon our Government for their alleged neglect to provide for our surplus population by emigration. But the truth is, the blame does not lie with them. They are but instruments in the hand of God, who has the direction of these great social problems, that are the puzzle of our statesmen and of our people. The two matters—British Population and Emigration—are the very backbone of Our Identity. Our overwhelming population is the blessing which God promised "to Abraham and his seed for ever," whereby to work out His other purposes of grace in Israel's favour. By population comes empire, also Colonial possessions, wealth, military and naval supremacy, the possession of the heathen empire, and of the Gates. When that population has been spiritually blessed by the Holy Spirit of the Lord, then the promise will also be fulfilled that Abraham's seed shall bless all nations, families, and kindreds of the earth, "blossoming and budding, filling the face of the world with fruit" (Gen. xxii. 18; Isa. xxvii. 6, R.V.) But population alone can do none of these things. Redundant population in two such small islands as ours must be an unmitigated curse, but no blessing at all, if unaccompanied by ability to imitate the "fruitful boughs" or "branches" of Joseph's house, as described in Gen. xlix. 22, and "run over the wall." Colonial outlets for surplus population must be found for the increased numbers if the blessing originally pronounced on Joseph be not meant to be a dead letter. How is this to be secured for the people of the Lord? God's word tells us, and that in language which cannot be mistaken. A reference to Isa. xxvi. 12, R.V., will show what we mean. The whole chapter relates to the House of Israel. It opens with the song that shall be sung "in that day," even now future, in the land of Judah, not where the Jews or House of Judah will dwell, but where Israel and her tribes are to be located. It speaks of the "righteous nation," which keepeth the truth, which possesses salvation, and is God's own people. These are "the sons of the living God," those "taught in His words, His statutes, and His judgments," even the Ten-Tribed House of Ephraim-Israel (Hosea i. 10; Isa. xxvi. 1—21). In Isa. xxvii. 15, it is thus written:—"Thou hast increased the nation, O Jehovah, Thou hast increased the nation, Thou art glorified, Thou hast enlarged all the borders of it," or as the margin reads for the last clause, "Thou hast removed it far unto all the ends of the earth." Here we have several British facts explicitly stated, and shown thus to be Israelite facts, and therefore identifications of our race, derived from an unexpected, unlooked for quarter. Here we have the increase of "the nation" twice repeated, its increase noted as the work of God Himself—the Lord Jehovah. The glory of the Lord is stated to be bound up with this fact of the nation's abnormal increase. Having increased the nation as the British are increased, and been glorified by the fact, then the emigration of the wandering race is also provided for by the Lord's own providence and arrangement. The nation so increased, and glorifying God by its increase (because proving His faithfulness to His promises in Genesis xxii. 17; xlix. 22—26; Hosea i. 10), it is then to be "enlarged in all the borders thereof, the borders of its empire being removed unto all the ends of the earth." Our British borders are now enlarged in all directions, and they all but embrace "all the ends of the earth," such as Hindostan, South Africa, Gibraltar, and the like. God's faithfulness and glory thus are engaged not only in increasing the British people numerically, but in providing for them by enlarging them and giving them fresh colonies and territories at the ends of the earth. There is no reason then why our statesmen and politicians should feel anxious respecting the abnormal increase of our British folk, or as to the emigration they must needs seek in view to relieve the pressure in that "strait place" where God has fixed their permanent abode (2 Sam. vii. 10; Isa. xlix. 20). We may cast all our care upon the Lord, the God of Israel, in respect to both these and all other matters that concern us, for they touch His honour, faithfulness, and glory, knowing that we may continually and without ceasing praise His holy name! (Zech. x. 7—10, may be profitably compared with Isa. xxvi. 15).

Digitized by Google

WESTERN AUSTRALIA.

THE Diocese of Perth, over which Dr. Parry presides as Bishop, is a vast See indeed. It is co-extensive with the colony of Western Australia, with a nominal area of over a million square miles. The coast line is some 3,000 miles in length, and the settlements extend inland at intervals all along the coast from 100 to 300 miles. How this great tract of country is being opened up and utilised for the benefit of our colonists, is well told by the bishop in an appeal for help he published in this country before his return to his distant See a year ago. A million square miles of territory suited to the British constitution in regard to climate, is indeed a wonderful gift to our nation from the Lord, and should make those who doubt Our Identity with Israel ask how it is, and why we are so manifestly blessed by our God in the matter. The bishop wrote thus:—

Until a few years ago, and long after the foundation of the See, the colony and the Diocese were considered to be practically limited to a tract of country some 500 miles in extent, reaching from Champion Bay on the Western coast to King George's Sound on the Southern, comprising an area of some 50,000 square miles. Recently, however, large new districts, equal if not superior in pastural and mineral resources to those previously settled, have been opened up, and are being rapidly occupied by fresh settlers. The valuable timbers of our Southern districts are, moreover, coming largely into request, and the vast forests of these districts being occupied by the works and employés of timber companies. Extensive lines of railway are also being commenced on the land-grant system, and arrangements made in connection with them for a large assisted immigration: whilst the discovery during the last six months of a large gold-field in the most Northern of our newly-settled districts is already attracting to our side of the continent a large number of new comers from the other Australian colonies and elsewhere. Thus in more ways than one, and in many different directions, new demands are being made on our present small Diocesan resources.

At present our European population is a very small one, numbering some 35,000 persons, of whom a little more than one half are members of the Church of England. Perth and Fremantle, our two largest towns, have, respectively, a population of 6,000 and 4,000; the remainder being scattered at wide distances over our vast territory, and occupied mainly in pastoral and agricultural pursuits, each district having its small central town or village.

A good deal has already been done towards the regular organization of the Diocese, and the supply, thus far, of its religious needs. Our number of parishes is eighteen, each under the charge of a resident clergyman. In each we have one or more churches, and in most a good parsonage house. The constitution of our parishes, and all matters connected with the economy of the Diocese, are regulated by statutes passed by our Diocesan Synod, which meets once a year in Perth. We have a Diocesan Church Fund, to which are paid the contributions of the several parishes towards the stipends of their respective ministers; and have done something, too, with the liberal aid of the S.P.G. and S.P.C.K. and the legislature of the colony, towards establishing a Diocesan Endowment Fund, and securing glebe-lands as parochial endowments. A good Church High School for girls has been established in Perth, and a Church Grammar and Commercial School for boys in Fremantle. But with all our efforts we have failed to keep pace with our growing requirements; our parishes are still in many cases as large as English counties. Many of the more sparsely-settled out-lying districts are practically unprovided for. And now that settlement is so rapidly extending over large new areas, and to distant parts of the colony, we find ourselves altogether unable to meet the fresh demands thus made upon us, without some considerable additional help from outside.

The objects for which we chiefly need such help are: (1) The completion of the Endowment of the See, towards which I am already promised £1,000 by the Council of the Colonial Bishoprics' Fund, and £500 by the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge, to meet £2,000 to be raised from other sources. (2) The large increase of our Church Sustentation and Endowment Funds; with a view at once to meeting our present growing need of more clergy, and to securing at least a partial endowment of our parishes in the future. (3) The prosecution of missionary work among the aborigines of the colony, of whom there are a large number in our newly-settled districts both in the North and towards our South-Eastern frontier, many of them already in the employ of the settlers and pearlers, but the great majority still in their wild, natural state.

As yet, during my stay in England, I have obtained contributions amounting to little more than £300 towards these different objects. I need nearer ten times this amount to meet the present growing demands of my Dioeese. Our successful occupation of the large field of missionary work in particular, now opened to us amongst the aboriginal natives of our Northern and Eastern districts, depends altogether upon our obtaining real outside help. I would earnestly appeal, therefore, to those members of the Church at home who recognise the importance of the work to which our Church is so plainly called in God's providence in the present day in our colonial possessions, or who have themselves any special family or business connections with our Australian colonies in particular, to aid me in more fully raising the funds which I so greatly need at the present juncture, either by present donations, or by contributions spread over a given term of years. Any such donations or contributions will be received and thankfully acknowledged by the Rev. Mr. Freeman, or to either of my Commissaries in England, the Rev. G. P. Pownall (the Vicarage, Murray Street, Hoxton, N.) or the Rev R. St. John Parry (Trinity College, Cambridge).—H. H. PERTH.

We publish the good Bishop's appeal nearly in extenso, in order that our readers may see how literally the Scriptures regarding the dispersion and settlement of Christian Israel are being fulfilled in the case of Western Australia. The people of God's choice are being "sown," as the bishop describes, "among the peoples," and they are remembering the Lord in far countries such as Western Australia. There they are living with their children, and are returning to the Lord in their desire for the ministrations of the Church, and their wish to serve Him in their newly adopted land (Zech. x. 9, R.V.) The rapid increase of the population by immigration is twice noticed by the good bishop as a sign of the times in Western Australia at this moment. We have here proof that Zechariah's prophecy in the same passage, regarding the increase of Israel, is also under fulfilment at this hour—"They shall increase," said the Lord, "as they have increased;" and colonization is sowing the surplus population rapidly throughout the presently "desolate heritages" of the earth, in order that ere long they may blossom as the rose, and be like the Garden of Eden, which was the garden of the Lord (Isa. li. 3; xxxv. 1, 2, R.V.). Meanwhile the pressure at home is rapidly increasing. The unemployed at all our great centres are crying for relief. The poor and struggling are looking for help whence it appears no help can come. The multitudes who are starving in our large towns are being ground down by a competition of labour, not of home growth alone, but by the struggle to live of men and women in Ireland, Germany, Switzerland, and Italy, who, being able to exist on less than our own artizans, are importing their ready-made linen goods into our markets, and so taking the bread out of the mouths of our own pauperised masses! It is a terrible fact that numbers of our poorer women can only earn elevenpence half-penny by ordinary needlework, in a day of more than twelve hours' duration, in fact, for a working day, however long it may be made. The remedy for this awful state of things is in our Father's hands; we may leave Him to open the way, assured that He cares for His people, and will see them through these dark and troublous times.

Digitized by Google

State-aided emigration has its difficulties and expenses; but it seems to us that a well-considered plan for the removal of the children who, as "street-arabs," are ready to perish among us, must be a safe and feasible operation; and that if families of deserving and able-bodied poor were assisted by the State to emigrate to Western Australia, Canada, and South Africa, it would be beneficial to our struggling multitudes at home, and advantageous to the desolate heritages waiting for Israel's advent abroad.

ISRAEL'S SUPREMACY IN SHIPPING.

In the Times of Dec. 30, there was published a perfect monograph of the condition of British shipping, proving our supremacy in this respect, among the nations of Europe, in a manner which cannot be rebutted. The British have been distinguished, said the writer, in past times as possessing the granary of the world, and then the workshop of the world, now she bids fair to become ere long, if she be not already, the carrier of the world's produce. The shipping trade of Great Britain is about the most important one we have. Its gross receipts are 45 to 50 millions a year, which is almost as much as the present agricultural rent of the country as a whole, and more than the total net receipts of our railway working, and more a good deal than the annual value of our coal produce. The summary of the St. James's Gazette of the figures published by the Times is to the following effect:—

In spite of German, French, and Italian bounties and subsidies; in spite, too, of the alleged supineness of English merchants and the alleged deterioration of British seamen, we are not only far ahead of all the rest of the world put together, but actually farther ahead of it than ever. Within ten years—which, however, ends with 1886, when there was a decline—the proportion of English trade carried in foreign bottoms has decreased from 33 to 27 per cent. Germany in the same period has only increased its share of its own shipping trade from 38 to 42 per cent., and France from 33 to 35. The only country that ten years ago carried anything like as large a proportion of its own trade as England did was Norway, and since then the Norwegian proportion shows a sharp decline—not, however, equal to that which appears in the case of the United States. Ten years ago that country carried nearly a third of its own commodities. The figures (if they are quite accurate) are reassuring.

Whether the figures of the Times correspondent be perfectly correct we cannot say. But assuming that they are generally accurate they certainly prove what has already from other sources been demonstrated in these pages over and over again; namely, that the British being Israel, respond to God's promises to them and that they are in this respect "the head and not the tail, above only and not beneath all other nations of the world." We are unable of course to transfer all the tables of figures which appear in the Times in illustration of the writer's position. But we may refer to the following as important. It is a Statement showing the Tonnage in Steamships only of the Principal Merchant Navies of the World in each of the Years 1875 and 1885:—

Country.	1875. Tonnage. 1 equals 1000.	Per cent. of total.	1885. Tonnage. 1 equals 1,000.	Per cent. of total.
Europe:—
United Kingdom	1,943	65·0	3,970	67·0
France	205	6·9	492	8·3
Germany	183	6·1	420	7·2
Sweden	83	2·8	114	1·9
Russia	71	2·4	105	1·7
Holland	60	2·0	108	1·8
Italy	57	1·9	125	2·1
Austria-Hungary	56	1·8	82	1·4
Norway...	46	1·6	110	1·8
Denmark	39	1·3	90	1·5
Belgium	35	1·2	80	1·3
Greece	8	0·3	37	0·6
Finland...	7	0·2	12	0·2
Totals	2,793	—	5,745	—
United States ...	192	6·4	186	3·1
Grand total ...	2,985	99·9	5,931	99·9

The foregoing statement shows more clearly than the other the vast superiority of England at sea. We have only 44·4 per cent. of the total tonnage, but we have 67 per cent. of the steam tonnage of the 14 principal maritime countries, and in the last ten years we have improved this relative position.

It appears on comparing the maritime external trade of the 11 chief nations of the world, that they have all failed to keep their place in relation to the carrying of their own external trade as between 1875 and 1886. They have in fact lost ground, which we have gained. We have not only enormously increased our own shipping trade in those ten years, but we have besides gained in carrying the home trade of our neighbours! The bounties paid by foreign Governments to their own shippers have not improved their condition or injured ours. On the contrary "the shipping supremacy of England," says the Times, remains to-day greater and more manifest than it has ever been before. The reason for this is thus explained. We possess a vast commerce which compels the maintenance of a larger and more efficient merchant marine than is owned by any other country. The mechanical improvements and economical conditions of working that we have introduced, enable us as a people to carry on the business of navigation more cheaply than any other country; and finally our shipping business is conducted on the principles that are now generally applied in every well managed business, namely, "small profits on the largest possible turnover."

In other words, we have prospered at sea, and have maintained our shipping supremacy, because, being Israel, we have God's blessing following us. He has given us the "power to get wealth," chiefly by our shipping trade; and He has made us accordingly, the richest of all the nations of the earth! We are "the head and not the tail, above only and not beneath all the other nations" in this, as in every respect, according to the prophecies. It is true that the French mercantile steam navy has rapidly increased during the last six years. In 1881 it consisted of 387 steamers of 270,717 tons and 3,143 sailing vessels of 606,141 tons. But by 1884 the steamers were 394 in number, with tonnage of 490,559, and the sailing vessels decreased to 2,343, with tonnage 431,495. "The mercantile steam navy of France is next in magnitude to that of Britain, but we possess ten times more steamers, and eight times more tonnage than the French." The increase is supposed to be due to the French Government-Bounties to the French shipping, a system which it appears is soon to be abolished. In spite of commercial depressions and of shipping bounties paid to our foreign rivals, God's blessing and promises carry the day and leave us still far ahead. To Him be all the praise!

Digitized by Google

A JUBILEE LETTER TO THE QUEEN, CONCERNING HER WORLD-WIDE AND IMPERISHABLE EMPIRE, AND HER IMMOVABLE THRONE.

FROM ONE OF HER ANTIPODEAN LOYAL SUBJECTS.

PART I.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR MAJESTY, Two great prophets have announced the coming of a grand Empire which in the future of our world is to assume a dominion of an entirely universal character.

Some two hundred years ago the latter of these prophets arose in the person of "Peter the Great," the Czar of Russia. He virtually predicted the sovereignty over all mankind of the Emperor of "Holy Russia"; and by his famous will plainly pointed out the mode and the nefarious means by which that grand object must be inevitably achieved—unless there be a God in heaven and a providence ruling upon earth to prevent it. Some two thousand years ago or more, an earlier and a greater prophet arose in the person of Daniel, the interpreter of dreams and the seer of wondrous visions. He also announced or rather, God by him predicted the future advent of a grand Universal Empire in these words, "And the kingdom and dominion and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High." These two prophets concur in proclaiming the same truth. The voice of greedy ambition and the voice of Divine Revelation agree in thrusting before our eyes the startling vision of one great mountain kingdom which shall fill the whole earth in the last days (Dan. ii 44). Since the time of this latter-day seer, Peter the Great, two great nations have been running their career in apparent rivalry to reach the goal and win the prize of Universal Empire. One of these, urged onward by the ceaseless efforts of its rulers has made marvellous advances on the road. The other, aiming mainly to secure its own and improve its possessions has, nevertheless, by the irresistible impulsion of surrounding circumstances been compelled, in most cases reluctantly, in all cases tardily, to advance. These two Empires are together the political phenomenon of the age, a sign, a portent, a spectacle to be noted and wondered at by the whole earth!

The one Empire, solid, massive, compact, like a grand estate within a ring fence, the other disjointed, scattered, separated by wide portions of alien territory, and only, but effectually, united by the grand highway that she calls her own, and of which she possesses all the chief Gates, the sea. The one made up of masses of semi-barbarous peoples, ruled by the ruthless will and iron hand of the direst despotism now existing. The other composed of many nationalities, but all enjoying freedom of person, freedom of speech, freedom of the press, freedom of thought and action, such as was never yet excelled, such as has scarcely ever yet been equalled.

The one threatening to overrun Europe and entomb its liberty; watching to wrest from the Turk the fairest portions of the ancient world and flood them with its semi-barbarous hordes, and to dominate the world with ultra-despotic sway from the eastern capital of the Cæsars. The other, labouring to people the wild regions of North America; to subdue the savage wildernesses of Africa; to fill with a free, intelligent, and righteous population, the continent and islands of Australasia; to cheer, illuminate and bless India and the whole world with peace, truth and righteousness.

At the head of the latter Empire your Majesty has, by the kind, wise, and all disposing power of Divine Providence, been auspiciously placed, and in that high position firmly maintained during the fifty eventful years which have just now passed away. To the wisdom and firmness of your Majesty and your much lamented Royal Consort in times of danger, and to your wise moderation in times of success, and indeed at all times, much of the present stability, much of the peace, prosperity, and grandeur of the British Empire, may, under God be attributed.

My object in this letter, Most August Lady, is to bring before your Majesty's close attention the ancient standing, the sacred origin, and future duties and prospects of the nation and kingdom over which you reign; and also and chiefly to the statements of Holy Scripture and the records of far off times which trace the hand of Providence, the very finger of God in bringing your Majesty to reign over His chosen people, and in securing to yourself and your Royal Dynasty the possession of a throne which cannot be overturned, a dynasty that cannot be superseded, a kingdom that cannot pass away. Concerning

THE BRITISH NATION.

I will not trespass with one sentence from my own pen, but, aware of your Majesty's large acquaintance with the literature of the age, will from numerous passages of a like nature, both British and foreign, cull one or two, by way of reminder.

Here is a sketch from the brain of one of the deep thinkers of our era. "If there is a people which has been busy making history, on the great scale, for the last three hundred years—and the most profoundly interesting history—history, which if it had happened to be that of Greece or Rome we should have studied with avidity—it is the English (or British). If there be a people which, during the same time has developed a remarkable literature, it is our own. England (or Britain) can show, as she has been able to show, in every generation, since civilization spread over the west, individual men who hold their own against the world and keep alive the old tradition of intellectual eminence: but in the majority of cases are what they are in virtue of their native intellectual force, and of a strength of character, that will not recognize impediments. They are not trained in courts of the Temple of Science, but (thus shewing their inherited power) storm the walls of that edifice, in all sorts of irregular ways, and with much loss of time and power, in order to obtain their legitimate position."—Huxley.

Here also are a few words from a famous Frenchman, so that we may thus be able to see ourselves, your Majesty, as others see us. "There exists in modern Europe, at seven leagues distance from France, within sight of our northern coasts, a people whose empire is more vast than that of Alexander or the Cæsars, who are at once the freest, and the mightiest, the richest and most manful, the most undaunted, and the most orderly, that the world has known. No study is more instructive than the character of this people; none present so original an aspect or such strange contrasts."—M. de Montalembert.

What a marvellous good character is here; and from the pen too of a well qualified judge and a truly impartial witness!

Your Majesty's attention I would first call to the note that the French philosopher makes of the vast extent of the British Empire. For it is this—its unprecedented vastness, its constant tendency to increase, notwithstanding all the efforts of friends and foes to restrict its growth—that identifies most assuredly your Majesty's grand empire and throne as that one of whose greatness and perpetual endurance prophets wrote and spoke—and of which Jehovah—in His message to

Digitized by Google

David, Himself said, "And thine house, and thy kingdom shall be established for ever before thee; thy throne shall be established for ever" (2 Sam. vii. 16). It is very evident, your Majesty—and "let no man deceive you with vain words" to the contrary—evident from the whole tenor of prophecy that this does not refer to the spiritual Empire of David's son and Lord—"of the increase of which," also, "there shall be no end"—but as the context shows, to the earthly dominion of the House of Israel, the mighty nation of the latter days, so graphically described in the sublime language of that unwilling witness—the Prophet Balaam:—"How goodly are thy tents, O Jacob, and thy tabernacles, O Israel! As the valleys are they spread forth, as gardens by the river side, as the trees of lign aloes that the Lord hath planted, and as cedar trees beside the waters. He shall pour the water out of his buckets and his seed shall be in many waters. And his king shall be higher than Agag, and his kingdom shall be exalted. God brought them forth out of Egypt; he hath as it were the strength of a unicorn; he shall eat up the nations, his enemies, and shall break their bones and pierce them through with his arrows. He crouched, he lay down as a lion, and as a great lion; who shall stir him up? Blessed is he who blesses thee, and cursed is he that curseth thee" (Num. xxiv. 5. 9).

When, your Majesty, was this sublime language ever verified in the ancient history of God's people? But is it not a life-like picture of the grandeur and expansivenes of the British Empire? So striking is the likeness that, as I am informed, Lord Beaconsfield himself, of the tribe of Judah, quoted it in Parliament as specially appropriate to our national history.

QUEEN VICTORIA, believest thou the prophets? I know that thou believest. Hear then what another Jew, the Rev. Ben-Oliel, has just now said of the prophetic testimony concerning Britain:—"The prophets foretold the leading events and destinies of the empires and kingdoms of the earth. Egypt, Assyria, Babylon, Persia, Media, Greece and Rome—not to mention other smaller States and nations, all occupy adequate places in the visions of the prophets. And will anyone venture to assert, that the mighty empire of Britain, mightier than any of its predecesssors, and the wonderfully growing United States of America, have no place assigned in the prophetic vista? It cannot be; it is impossible; for the Bible, as I say in the quotation from one of my lectures in Rome, in narrating the history of the Jews, of Israel, includes and embraces also the history of the human race to the end of time. If the Anglo-Saxons are not Israel where is their page in prophecy? If they are, then how full is the Bible of them! If they are not, how can we account for the unprecedented omission? It cannot be that it is wholly silent regarding them. And if they are not of the Ten Tribes of Israel, who are they?"

Your Majesty, as a devout reader of God's Holy Word, will see at once the perfect soundness and irresistible force of this argument, and knowing well, that in addition to these precedents which are the basis of Ben-Oliel's arguments we have our heavenly Father's statement;—"Among the Tribes of Israel have I made known that which shall surely be" (Hos. v. 9).

And again:—"Surely the Lord will do nothing (that intensely effects the good of human kind; as the planting an Empire like that of Britain does) but He revealeth His secret to His servants the prophets" (Amos. iii. 7). There is happily no cause to fear that your Majesty, with your well known regard to words and things of importance—however small to others they may seem—will as a sovereign power overlook the significance of that word "surely" which in both of the above quotations guarantees the certainty of a previous proclamation from the great Governor of the Universe, ere He proceeds to raise such a wonder in the world as the marvellous Empire over which your Majesty has by the grace of God so long reigned. "Ere He proceeds," is our word; for He only can with truth employ the language which we read in the prophecy of Jeremiah, "Behold: as the clay is in the potter's hand, so are ye in Mine hand, O House of Israel; and at what instant I shall speak concerning a nation and concerning a kingdom, to build and to plant it," &c.

Though your Majesty knows these things well, yet you will pardon me if I "stir up your pure mind by way of remembrance," for the simple but grand reason, that from these statements of Holy Writ it is manifest that the two following things are utterly impossible—First, that an Empire that is of such unprecedented extent, and in many respects of such an unparalleled character, could have ever risen up, unless God had both planted and builded it. Second—It is equally impossible that the God of the Bible could ever consistently with His word have done this great thing—i.e., built the British Empire, without revealing it to His servants the prophets.

Now it follows as an inevitable corollary to these propositions—That as only one nation of this characteristic power, and of this world-wide influence, and of this ceaseless growth, has been predicted in God's book, and that nation, under the cognomen of the "people of the saints," otherwise the people of Israel, who were sanctified, or set apart to do His work; Israel must therefore be Britain; the British people must in the main be of Israelitish origin, and from the loins of him who had the "promise that he should be the heir of the world" (Rom. iv. 13). Such great might, as Britain has ofttimes exhibited in these latter days, was aforetime predicted thus:—"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people, as a lion among the beasts of the forest, as a young lion among the flocks of sheep; who if he go through both treadeth down and teareth to pieces, and none can deliver" (Micah v. 8).

Such a blessing among heathen nations—in dispensing the Word of Life, and other great benefits—as British Christians are now earnestly endeavouring to do, has been foretold of one people alone, in the following words:—"And the remnant of Jacob shall be in the midst of many people, as a dew from the Lord, as the shower upon the grass, that tarrieth not for man, nor waiteth for the sons of men." On this latter proof—for proof it is—that Israel and Britain, are one, the Times did on one occasion—speaking of the May Meetings in London—thus elaborately comment:—"The whole nation is contented to think that such things are going on in their midst. They stand for just everything the English nation loves best and approves most deliberately. Philanthropy and religious zeal at home and abroad, displayed alike to friends, and enemies, and strangers, undertaken at no light expense, and started and directed all through by strictly voluntary agencies, all this is what the May Meetings represent in its most concrete shape, and assist very materially. There seems hardly any form of good work which is left out. Their field of action is literally world-wide in its extent. It reaches as far as there exist heathens to be converted, or Jews, or Mahometans or Roman Catholics, to be brought to a sense of their partial errors. Wherever, in short, there is ignorance, or vice, or suffering of any kind, which human care or effort can hope to mitigate: in whatever part of the world it may be, there will a counter-agency be set to work from this country, and it will generally be found duly reporting itself at home in the course of the present month. In whatever direction the tide of human affairs is flowing, the forces which are represented at May Meetings will find their opportunity or make it. The sight is an extraordinary one, on every account. It is by strong benevolence and by national feeling, as well as by gregarious tastes, that these large companies are drawn together. Numerous as they are, they represent no more than a part of the whole movement for which they stand."

Devotedness under a religious impulse extends in this country far too widely to be measured. It is the clue to no small part of our national life. No wonder that an observant and intelligent Frenchman, like the Pasteur Duchemin (at a meeting held in support of the Foreign Aid Society on June 19th, 1884), should say:—"He could compare England to nothing but a vast society for promoting Christianity among the nations." "It is the clue," says the journalist, and it is indeed the very evident clue, not merely to a part of our national life but—what is more to our present purpose—to the fount and origin of our national existence and character. It is a proof that we inherit somewhat of the sturdy nature, stability of character, and adherence to principle, which distinguished our great forefather, Abraham, and which caused God to say, "I know him that he will command his children after him." A proof also that the blood of the great administrator, and good and wise man, Joseph, and of his son Ephraim, runs in the arteries of the Anglo-Saxon race.

Digitized by Google

To Abraham God said, "I will bless thee, and thou shalt be a blessing, and in thee shall all the families of the earth be blessed" (Gen. xii 2, 3). "Abraham . . . all the nations of the earth shall be blessed in him" (Gen. xviii. 18, &c.). Again and again, to Isaac and Jacob, was this promise renewed, and from Jacob it descended to all his sons, but peculiarly to Joseph, (Gen. xlix. 26). All the blessings of Jacob and his progenitors were to be "on the head of Joseph; and on the crown of the head of him that was separated from his brethren." Speaking of Joseph, too, he has this remarkable expression, "From thence is the Shepherd, the Stone of Israel" (ver. 24).

Now if your Majesty will weigh those facts set forth by the Times in such clear light, and follow "the clue" they give through these promises made to the patriarchs, your Majesty's unprejudiced mind will not fail to conclude that the people who were appointed by Jehovah to do so great a work and the people who are, by "strong benevolence, and by national feeling," and by a "devotedness under religious impulse" actually doing—far beyond all others—that appointed work, must be to all intents and purpose absolutely one. We are the people that the great Potter rejected for a time as "clay" that could not be worked, that was not plastic in His hands.

We are the clay which He turned off from the potter's frame that it might be "meted out and trodden down," as Isaiah says, so that it might have all its refractoriness broken, its impurities removed, all its unfitness destroyed, and be rendered suitable clay wherewith the Divine Potter might work and build up a "vessel unto honour, fitted and prepared for the Master's use."

Your Majesty knows that all this the prophets foretold, all this Jehovah foresaw. He foresaw the sin and the repentance of Ephraim and his return. "I have surely heard Ephraim bemoaning himself thus: Thou hast chastened me and I was chastised—turn Thou me and I shall be turned, for Thou art My Lord and God; I repented after that I was instructed, I was ashamed, yea even confounded" (Jer. xxxi, 18). And Jehovah also foretold his full restoration thus:—"Ephraim My dear son—a pleasant child!—for since I spake against him I do earnestly remember him still, therefore My bowels are troubled for him; I will surely have mercy upon him, saith Jehovah" (ver 20.)

And doubtless the Lord Jesus foretold the present exaltation of Ephraim when He uttered those weighty words of His which were intended both for the Jews on the one side, and for Joseph, the House of Israel, his companions, on the other.

For when the Jews rightly viewed His parable of the Lord of the vineyard and the faithless husbandmen as intended for themselves (Matt. xxi. 45), He endorsed the statement which they made to Him; and when they said, "He will miserably destroy those wicked men and let out his vineyard unto other husbandmen, who shall render unto him the fruits in their season." "Jesus saith unto them, Did ye never read in the Scriptures:—the Stone which the builders rejected the same is become the head of the corner; this is the Lord's doing and it is marvellous in our eyes; Therefore I say unto you (what? I the Messiah am that Stone! No; He is speaking here not of Himself, the One Foundation Stone, but of a nation) the kingdom of God shall be taken from you (rebellious husbandmen) and given to a nation (the "stone of Israel"—Gen xlix. 24). bringing forth the fruits thereof. And whosoever shall fall upon this Stone shall be broken; but on whomsoever it shall fall it will grind him to powder." Does your Majesty ask, whence came this stone? The answer is given by the inspired dying patriarch, who when speaking of Joseph said, "from thence is the Shepherd, the Stone of Israel," words which at once refer to the spiritual work which Joseph and his companions are now doing, and to the mighty kingdom, firm and unbroken as a rock of adamant, of which the Saviour speaks; even the nation which He calls "this stone."

This is the nation over which a benign Providence has called your Majesty to reign; over which for fifty eventful years it has been my privilege to observe with almost unmingled joy and high satisfaction, the wisdom, the justice and the benevolence of your rule. How exalted is the dignity, how heavy the responsibility, how arduous and solemn the duties of your Majesty's position, what mind can conceive, what tongue or pen describe? May He who chose and sustained your great ancestor Abraham ever whisper to your heart the kindly message He addressed to him, "I am Jehovah all sufficient, walk before Me and be thou perfect." AMEN.

(To be continued.)

A REVIEW.

THE Christian Globe, on Feb. 23rd last, noticed our New Year's Number in the following terms:—

"We have also received the first monthly number of the twelfth year of the BANNER OF ISRAEL (London: R. Banks & Son). The BANNER is, as some of our readers are already aware, a journal advocating 'The Identity of the British Nation with the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel.' We do not profess to enter into this controversy, and if we did, the monthly number now before us would not be much of a guide, as the main question is therein but casually alluded to. This, we presume, is owing to the fact that the BANNER OF ISRAEL has just entered upon the twelfth year of its existence, and that, therefore, the main argument has been pretty well threshed out in its volumes during that period. Nevertheless, the BANNER contains some excellent contributions from clergymen and scientific men whose articles indirectly support the thesis put forward by the BANNER."

"The main question" is one which can hardly be repeated in every number of our journal. It is vast in its proportions, and cannot be expounded in a few sentences. The proposition to be proved is that "The British Anglo-Saxon races are the modern flesh and blood descendants of the Lost Ten Tribes," called in Scripture the House of Israel or Ephraim. Our main argument in proof of the fact is, that the British enjoy, exclusively, all the blessings that God promised on oath to bestow, exclusively, "on Abraham and his seed for ever." Therefore, we contend, God being true, the British must be Israel or Ephraim—that is, the Lost Ten Tribes. But the whole argument bristles with contested points, and these require space for discussion. Such are the following:—"Were the Ten Tribes ever lost?" "What are the blessings that the British enjoy? Do they enjoy these exclusively?" "Where is it stated in the Bible that these very blessings were to be Israel's portion? and that exclusively?" "In what sense is scriptural prophecy to be taken? Is not the spiritual sense the correct and proper sense?" "The Jews are Israelites. How can it be shown that there are any Israelites who are not Jews?"

These, and a thousand other questions, arise out of the first main question, and these cannot all be satisfactorily answered in a single issue of the BANNER! After twelve years of existence, the main arguments have indeed been "pretty well thrashed out," and we purposely fail, therefore, in our weekly issue, to reproduce the too often repeated tale.

We thank the Christian Globe, however, for its kind words, and only wish we could enlist its help in support of Our Identity.

Digitized by Google

"TO OUR RACE BELONGS THE FUTURE OF THE WORLD."

By E. Reep.

Day by day, week after week, month after month, our newspapers, magazines, etc., bear wonderful testimony to our Israelite origin, depicting as they do, though all unknowingly, the British Empire enjoying all the blessings and covenants properly belonging to the kingdom of Israel. When Jacob was told that of him should spring a nation and a company of nations, we naturally conclude that God intended to fulfil His word. In the same faith and belief in the carrying out of Divine promises Abraham had not doubted that he was to become the founder of a great and mighty nation (Gen. xviii. 18), a nation in which all other nations were to be blessed. Joseph, too, without doubt, pondered in faith the prophetic vision of the future glory of his descendants (Gen. xxxvii. 7—10), even though rebuked by his father Jacob, for what he apparently considered presumptuous conceit on Joseph's part. That it was no dreamer's dream, we now know by the light thrown on prophetic history by the Identity.

To those who look for the fulfilment of God's word to Israel, and who love to trace His hand working out the everlasting covenants He saw fit to make with Abraham and his seed after him, all things become intelligible. In the vision of the sheaves we have the sheaves of Joseph's brethren making obeisance to his sheaf; and in yet another dream, we have the sun and the moon with eleven stars rendering homage to him, which being interpreted signifies the supremacy of Joseph's House above that of his brethren.

How literally this vision has been fulfilled is plain enough to him who has been led to recognise in the English people the veritable seed of the House of Israel. Thus accepting this marvellous (almost too marvellous for men to believe) revelation, we are not astonished to read of such men as Canon Farrar asserting that by the end of the present century we (whom we know to be the descendants of the House of Joseph and now representing the Ten Tribes) shall by that time form a third of the whole race of men, and that to our race belongs predominantly the future of the world.*

Another authority may be here cited as to the future supremacy of the Anglo-Saxon race:—"How long a time it required," says Lyell in his "Principles of Geology," "for one race to obtain supremacy over a large part of Asia we know not, but we may look forward to the time when the Europeans, especially the Anglo-Saxon race, will in like manner spread over still larger areas, displacing the aboriginal Tribes of America so that one race, and perhaps one language may eventually prevail."

Could 19th century English more literally confirm the vision which nearly four thousand years ago divulged to Joseph that his seed should in the far future hold the place of the highest nation in the whole earth? God be praised for having in these latter days enabled us to understand the prophetic meaning of the obeisance of sun, moon and stars to Joseph. The power to multiply, and to get wealth was another of God's promises to Israel, a promise we see faithfully fulfilled in the English people as attested by the article before quoted. "In the United Kingdom" says Canon Farrar, "the Queen has ten million more subjects than she had at her accession. In 1837 she reigned over nearly 130,000,000 subjects; she has now 309,000,000. In 1837 she reigned over 2,000,000 square miles; she now reigns over 8,000,000 square miles. "Nor has the accumulation of wealth been less startling. If our population has increased in this reign by a greater increment than in the six hundred years after the Conquest, riches have increased more than in all the days since Julius Cæsar. Wealth indeed is not necessarily weal; but in the hands of a wise and generous nation it may be an element of weal. And it has been so."

When Anglo-Israelites point out that prophecy designates Israel as the heir of special blessings, by which the chosen people were and are to inherit the heritage of the heathen, to possess superabundant wealth, and to hold the first place in the scale of nations as England does at this day, they are regarded by their opponents as ecstatic enthusiasts, whose minds are more or less deranged by chimerical nonsense.

And yet if there be any truth in such accusations then must many of our journalists and secular writers be also mad; for as Anglo-Israelites describe, what they understand from Scripture to be the destiny of Israel as a nation, so in very much the same language do writers of the day depict England in her national glory; in a word, they conclusively prove that England answers to the letter to the latter-day history of the House of Israel as we find it written in our Bibles.

What says the Psalmist?—"He hath shewn His people the power of His Works, that He may give them the heritage of the heathen." To understand the works of God (to what wonderful knowledge of physical science have we not come?), to possess heathen countries and other good gifts of national blessing, would go far to make a nation great. That Israel was to be the heir to these blessings cannot be disputed, because Scripture cannot be disputed, and as Israel did not enjoy such knowledge and full national power as above set forth before the days of her captivity, it is no wonder that believers in the faithful fulfilment of God's word should look about them in these latter days for a nation answering to the one nation which God chose to be a special instrument of blessing in the midst of the earth, and that despite the punishment of exile and captivity.

In a work entitled, "England, its People, Polity and Pursuits" we have a narration of what England is, and what Englishmen are, which narration entirely agrees with what Israel was to be as a redeemed nation. First we are told that we (Englishmen) hold enlarged conceptions of our place amongst the nations of the earth. Secondly, that the wonderful development of machinery and various sciences has imbued Englishmen with a sense of boundless power, and a conviction that they have the command of resource and the fertility of invention which mark them out as all creation's heirs. England too is a country whose population is perpetually overflowing her narrow geographical boundaries. Her cry is—"The place is too strait for me" (Isa. xlix. 20).

Our author does not say why we continually overflow our borders; probably to him it is a problem why we do so. Identify our nation as Israel, and Scripture solves the mystery by telling us how God bid Abraham look toward heaven and tell the stars; for so should his seed be. And that there should be no uncertainty on this matter, we may from the prophetic hills after the manner of Balaam behold God's elect people, set apart as a separate nation, whose numbers cannot be counted—for says the sacred narrative, "Who can count the dust of Jacob and the number of the fourth part of Israel? Let me die the death of the righteous, and let my last end be like his."

To return for a moment to our author, who says:—"It is not necessary to thread the maze of causes that have contributed to place England at the centre of the finance and commerce of the world. . . . And we are likely to keep that position for a long time to come, because our great Empire, our vast accumulations of wealth, make us the largest lending and tribute-receiving people on the face of the earth.

"The very fact that every nation under the sun able to even scrape a semblance of stable government together is in our debt, gives us a power of controlling the trade of all nations that no country ever had."

Such pictures of our colossal empire, freshly drawn almost every day, cannot fail eventually to wake Englishmen's minds

* See "Sunday Magazine" for Dec., 1887.

Digitized by Google

to the fact that their progress and prosperity, mean something more than mere good fortune. They will, we are sure, in God's own time, realise that they are a people whom God has formed for Himself to shew forth His praise ; for this is the end and aim of their being favoured with their countless national blessings, inasmuch as to Israel belongs the future of the world.

"Abinger," Sylvan Road, Upper Norwood,
Feb. 16th, 1888.

PROGRESS IN YORKSHIRE.

We have received a letter from Market Weighton, Yorkshire, informing us of the formation of a new British-Israel Association there, with Mr. W. Wade Parker for secretary, Mr. Joseph Thomas as president, and a membership of about 30. Mr. Wade Parker, in reporting progress to us, says, "We are doing a good work here, and have formed a British-Israel Association. It is very small as yet, but it is a start. We have taken a house, and placed a believer in Our Identity in it, as caretaker. When I came here from Hull, four years ago, there were only two believers in the place, now there are about 30! On Thursday night last, one with whom I have had several arguments, and who could never 'see' it, till now, gave us an essay on the subject at our friendly society's meeting. The press notice of the gathering was to the following effect:—

"Market Weighton.—The Young Men's Friendly Society held the usual meeting on Thursday night, in the Girls' Schoolroom, when there was a good attendance. The Rev. R. D. French (vicar) presided. Mr. Sherwood read a most interesting paper, which created a good deal of discussion; the subject being, 'What are Britons?' in which he contended that the British were descended from the Lost Tribes of Israel."

The vicar, Mr. French, it appears, said he had been reading Dr. Wild's "Ten Tribes," and "was much interested in the volume." He admitted that some of Dr. Wild's arguments were "very strong," and he advised his audience to study the book.

Mr. Wade Parker concluded by requesting of us some literature to circulate in Market Weighton, as there was much wish to inquire into the subject, and "scores of people want to study it." It appears they have Mr. Hine's, Colonel Gawler's, Colonel Senior's, Messrs. Wright's, Grimaldi's, Hopkins', and Philo-Israel's writings; but they want more. We hope the Free Distribution Fund may help the new Association, and that friends who have leaflets, Banners, and general literature on the Identity to spare, will send some to Mr. Wm. Wade Parker, 1, Railway-cottages, Market Weighton, Yorkshire.

A QUOTATION.

[From Dr. Joseph A. Seiss' work, entitled, "A Miracle in Stone; or, The Great Pyramid of Egypt." Ninth edition, enlarged, page 136. Robert Banks & Son.]

"Nor should we forget that it is a very old and familiar thing for people petulantly to brand as silliness and lunacy whatever unpleasantly cuts into their old round of thinking, or unwelcomely disturbs their pleasant ease. It is a cheap way of getting over what would otherwise be inconvenient. . . . It was after this fashion that the Jews set aside Jesus of Nazareth, and that many of Paul's hearers spoke of him. And so the early Christians, as a class, stand registered in the annals of Pagan Rome. But were these fanatics? Was their cause that crazy thing which so many were pleased to regard it? Were the people who disposed of it the just, sober, and wise ones in acting thus? Do not all believers, who have since lived, unite in holding them very blameworthy and unreasonable? A thing is not a wild, fanatical conceit, because some may treat it as such. When a serious subject presents itself, it argues very unfavourably for people, without examination, to pooh-pooh it as nonsense. True philosophers and candid inquirers for the truth never proceed after this fashion; this is not the way to gain attention to a great subject."

THE TEUTONIC THEORY IN CONNECTION WITH THE REVIEW OF "MY JEWELS."

By Sarah Sharp.

The Banner of Israel kindly inserted an article of mine in last year's Banner of the 6th of April, entitled "Germany's Sundays in the light of the Teutonic Theory." Now, as one of the advocates of this theory, in his review of my book, advises me in a future edition to alter the statements I have made on one or two identity points, I feel bound, in defence of my opinions, which remain unchanged, to explain fully my reasons for not altering those passages in my book; and I must ask the Banner's Editor kindly to find space in his journal for these remarks.

It may seem tedious to go over the old ground, but at the same time a recapitulation of what we have already learnt may refresh our memories, and possibly a new light or two may dawn on what I purpose writing. But first of all I should like to remark, that it is earnestly to be desired that each and all of our writers and lecturers on Anglo-Israelism should strictly adhere to Scriptural revelation in elucidating and teaching (or dealing with) Identity Truth. Innumerable evidences of the fulfilment of Scriptural prophecies and promises to us, in these latter days, point, beyond all controversy, to our Nation and Colonies, as comprising with America, the whole of the Ten-Tribed House of Israel, in opposition to any other theory. Teutonic advocates of Anglo-Israel agree in assigning a secondary and subordinate place to their views on this subject; would it not tend much more to the success of the great cause they so ardently advocate, if they relinquished all these minor points, and spent the whole of their zeal and splendid powers in trying to convince our people alone of the one grand truth concerning Great Britain's position? It puzzles and confuses most of us to be told first, that we are "the nation in whom all the promises named are centred; and then on the other hand, that perhaps we may include a few other Protestant peoples who seem to resemble us. Surely such teaching greatly injures our cause, and cuts up our own identity root and branch! for if other nations be Israel, then assuredly we are not Israel, on ethnic grounds, and that settles the matter!

The Bible, however, gives us unmistakable information, which on all points decides this question, as we shall presently endeavour to prove. Meanwhile it is with (or in) no Pharisaical spirit that we would claim for our nation alone, the undeserved and glorious promises ordained for God's chosen people, for does He not say, when promising to restore Israel to His favour, "Thus saith the Lord God, I do not this for your sakes, O House of Israel, but for My holy name's sake," . . . . that "the heathen shall know that I am the Lord God, when I shall be sanctified in you before their eyes" (Ezek. xxxvi.). We do not ignore the great work of other Protestant countries, nor of Luther and the many good men, non-Israelites, together with the noble army of martyrs, and also in the present day the valuable works of foreign Christian writers. But though all these claim our sincere admiration and love, yet their work for God does not in the least constitute their being the "convenant people Israel," as the Teutonic theorists maintain. In these saints and martyrs we recognize lights sent by God to awaken those Gentile countries out of Papal darkness, and to take out of them a saved people to Himself. Many such bright lights are still shining amidst almost "Paganized Christian Europe!" Let us bear in mind that these saved Gentiles may some day put to shame many merely nominal Israelites amongst ourselves, just as in our Lord's time when He said of the Centurion, "I have not found so great faith, no, not in Israel" (Luke vii. 9). Another reason given by the advocates for German fellowship is the help they gave us against Continental enemies in war times; but this again does not make them Israel. They were appointed by God to minister to His people's needs, just as of old God declared of Cyrus, king of Persia, "He is My shepherd, and shall perform all My pleasure" (Isa. xliv. 28; 2 Chron. xxxvi. 23); and His pleasure was that Cyrus should help His people to build their temple in Jerusalem.

Now let us take Scriptural evidence concerning our claims. First, we, and we alone, possess every sign by which Israel was to be recognized. No other nation possesses one of these signs. It is needless to enumerate them here, as every reader of the Banner has them constantly brought to mind. Some of the chief are the Law of the Holy Sabbath Rest, and the teaching of the Decalogue, and the Old Testament Scriptures in our Churches, as it is written, "He showeth His Word unto Jacob, His statutes and His judgments unto Israel. He hath not dealt so with any nation," &c. (Psa. clvii. 19). He declares them to be a people "near unto Him" (Psa. cxlviii. 14). No Continental nation fulfils this sign, so they are not and cannot be Israel.

Digitized by Google

Ten-Tribed Israel must be one nation to develop into "a company" or federation of "nations," and "a fulness of nations" under one sceptre (David's). This again puts Germany out of the question: there cannot be two Israels. Then "the people shall dwell alone, and not be reckoned among the nations" (Num. xxiii. 9). "Israel then (when settled in her island home) is to dwell safely and alone" (Deut. xxxii. 28). What Continental nation has dwelt, does dwell, or has the prospect of dwelling safely and alone (unmolested)? But Britain has done so since the blessing of the God of Jacob has been upon her. "Look unto Abraham your father. . . . . I called him alone" (Isa. li. 2). "Thou didst separate them from among all the peoples of the earth to be Thine inheritance" (1 Kings viii. 53). Thus we were separated from among all the different and numerous European peoples when our ancestors left the land of their captivity, Assyria, and were led through the different countries (just as the angels led Lot and his family out of danger) till they arrived in different tribal detachments to their little Zoar, these peaceful islands, for their rest, as God had promised. "Then, lo, I will sift," &c. (Amos ix. 9). But this sifting process was not at once completed. The Ten Tribes wandered for many centuries, and it was not until the 12th century, A.D., that the last band of them joined their brethren, when the proud and cultivated Normans, the tribe of Benjamin, arrived on our shores.

As regards our "dwelling alone," the celebrated French author, M. Guil. Guizo, gives an interesting piece of blind evidence in his book, "Alfred le Grand." Speaking of our ancestors' resistance to the Roman yoke, he says:—"L'amour de l'indépendance nationale avait péri dans leurs âmes sous la domination des empéreurs;" but he adds, this spirit revived (again) as soon as their persecutors left these shores, which they were compelled to do on account of their own country being invaded, and requiring their return. Afterwards the Britons again became "un peuple vraiment separé de tout l'univers, comme l'avait dit Virgile (B.C. 70). . . . . "Toto divisos orbe Britannos!"

Again, the Germans are a military nation. Their citizens, tradespeople, and professions, must all be ready at the cry of war, to leave work, and family, and home, to serve as soldiers. This is not freedom! "Their rulers multiply horses;" Israel is commanded not to. "He shall not multiply horses to himself" (Deut. xvii. 16). "Woe to them that . . . . stay on horses, and trust in chariots, because they are many, and in horsemen, because they are very strong" (Isa. xxxi. 1); "and I . . . . will not save them by bow, nor by sword, nor by battle, nor by horses, nor by horsemen" (Hos. i. 7), &c. What are all Continental nations now trusting to, Prussia especially?

Now, before closing this first portion of my subject, let me observe that our late lamented friend (Bishop Titcomb) was at one time inclined to view Germany in the same light as our other friends, but his close observation of foreign countries in his office as Continental Bishop soon drew the veil from his eyes, and he frankly confessed his error. Might we not beg others to follow his noble example? They could scarcely be too proud of their opinions to refuse to reconsider in a new light these questions.

On page 81 of "The Message to the Nineteenth Century," Bishop Titcomb remarks:—"The German Empire. This grand nation, it is true, spreads out by emigration and commerce through the world. But where is her foreign empire? Is she, in any legitimate sense, to be called "the mother of nations?" What colonies does she possess, in which she has built up the "waste places of the earth," and is "remembering God in far countries?" What special honour does she pay to Israel's covenant of the Sabbath?" Her Sabbaths, like those of France, are given up to fêtes, racing, concerts, and theatres.

Again, what does she do in the great work of sending out the Scriptures of Truth to "all the nations"? Germany, with her mighty host of soldiers, &c., might be blotted out of existence to-morrow, yet the heathen nations would lose few, if any, of the Scriptures in their own vernacular languages.

Again, how can we speak of Germany as a maritime people, having "ships of Tarshish," and being a "messenger people, conspicuous for its life on the seas? Or, once more, is Germany the nation of Europe to which Judah would be likely to walk for an alliance, when seeking restoration to his ancient inheritance?" In addition to Bishop Titcomb's valuable testimony that Britain was exclusively the one chosen Israel of God, he was so anxious clearly to make known his change of opinion respecting Germany, that one of his last acts was to cut out all passages in the "Anglo-Israel Post Bag," which seemed to favour Teutonic views, so as to leave his belief clear in this important matter.

I hope to send some interesting gleanings on the other remaining questions in my next.

WHAT CHRISTIANITY HAS DONE IN FIJI.

FORWARDED BY G. WELLS, JUN.

ONLY fourteen years have elapsed since the Fiji group was annexed to the British Crown. Prior to that time, during the preceding ten years, the influence of mission effort had worked a mighty change in the condition of the islands; so that when Sir Arthur Hamilton Gordon, the first governor, landed, in June, 1875, cannibalism and tribal wars had almost disappeared.

Miss Gordon Cumming, writing in her interesting work, "At Home in Fiji," in that year, thus describes the former character and condition of the people;—

"Recall the Fiji of ten years ago, when every man's hand was against his neighbour, and the land had no rest from inter-tribal wars, in which the foe, without respect of age or sex, were looked upon only in the light of so much beef; the prisoners deliberately fattened forthe slaughter; limbs cut off from living men and women, and cooked and eaten in the presence of the victim, who had previously been compelled to dig the oven and cut the fire-wood for the purpose; and this not only in time of war, when such atrocity might be deemed less inexcusable, but in time of peace, to gratify the caprice or appetite of the moment. Think of the sick buried alive; the array of widows who were deliberately strangled on the death of any great man; the living victims who were buried beside every post of a chief's new house, while the earth was gradually heaped over their devoted heads, or those who were bound hand and foot and laid on the ground to act as rollers when a chief launched a new canoe, and thus doomed to a death of excruciating agony—a time when there was not the slightest security for life or property, and no man knew how quickly his own hour of doom might come."

The progress, religious, social, and moral, since the annexation of the islands, may be gathered from the reports of Administrator W. McGregor, who made a tour of the colony in 1885. He says:—"The people are, speaking generally, well governed, are contented, in comfortable circumstances, using in their houses unusually large amount of the comforts and conveniences of civilised life." On Vanua Levu, the smaller of the two chief islands, there is a native industrial school, almost self-supporting in the matter of food. On the larger island, Viti Levu, the houses are good and well furnished, besides being stocked with native property. As the people are industrious, food is very abundant. The Sabbath is so strictly observed in the interior of Viti Levu that no travelling can be done on that day. The sense of humanity has been so far developed that the Native Regulation Board has passed a resolution forbidding the carrying of excessive burdens by women: any woman offending, shall be sentenced to plait mats, or make masi or nets, or to make any other kind of property suitable to her ordinary occupation, to an amount not exceeding one month's labour." Another regulation compels every able-bodied man to do a certain amount of planting, and not to sell any of the produce that may be needed for himself and his household; while a third prohibits the indiscriminate or immoderate drinking of yagona, a native liquor which, if consumed in excess, impairs the intellectual faculties and unfits the person for the discharge of active or responsible duties. Administrator J. B. Thurston, also writing in 1885, contrasts from personal knowledge the condition of the people then with their condition in 1865. In 1865 he had penetrated to the town of Beimana, a place of considerable importance; but was compelled to retreat in consequence of the hostility of the natives. Revisiting the town in 1885, he was remembered by many of the elder natives; and considerable surprise and interest were manifested when, after the usual ceremonies of meeting were over, he handed back to one of the chiefs two whale's teeth with which his predecessor had presented him twenty years before.

During the day or two I spent with them in 1865, war, intrigue, and general insecurity was their chronic condition. Beimana and every other town was fortified by strong fences, moats and outer earthworks. No man stirred beyond his war fence after sunset. The quiet of night was broken by the sounds of the 'derna' a peculiar beat of the native wooden drum when some slaughtered enemy was brought in front of the heathen temple; and in Beimana itself three human bodies were eaten during my stay, and the forks used for the occasion were presented to me. It was possible for me, therefore, to dwell with force upon the altered condition of the country, and to contrast, with effect, the peace of the present with the horrors and ceaseless anxieties of the past. Upon leaving Beimana the next morning the chief and elders brought me one of the whale's teeth returned to them the night before, and begged me to take it back again. Their wish was that one of these teeth should remain with me and one with them, and that whenever I visited Beimana the teeth were to be exchanged in token of our long friendship and of their loyalty.

Digitized by Google

Mr. Thurston saw nearly two hundred children examined in reading, writing, and arithmetic, and they "acquitted themselves with much credit." During his tour he came across a noted warrior—one Drika—who had killed no fewer than twenty-five Bau men in the war which had followed the murder of Mr. Baker, the Wesleyan missionary. The Buli (or local governor) "gave me a good account of his district and people, the state of his towns, schools, churches, roads, plantations, etc." As evidence of commercial progress the following figures are remarkable. The population in 1875 consisted of 1,500 whites, and 150,000 natives (including Polynesians). It now consists of 3,513 whites and 123,930 natives; the diminution of "natives" being largely accounted for, however, by the emigration of foreign South Sea Islanders, whose departure has been greatly to the benefit of the really native Fijians. The public revenue, which in 1875 was £16,000 has been raised to £76,000, the expenditure has been increased from £70,000 to £92,000. But this does not imply a condition of insolvency, for Great Britain has made a grant in aid of the debt amounting to £115,000, and a large part of the expenditure takes the form of the repayment of a loan for reproductive public works. The exports amounted in 1874 to £73,126, ten years later they amounted to £434,522, or just six times as much.

THE EDINBURGH "SCOTSMAN" ON OUR IDENTITY.

We take the following from the Scotsman of Feb. 25, 1888:—

Israel's Identification Association.—Last night in 14, South St. Andrew Street, Surgeon-General Grant, M.D., of Cheltenham, delivered a lecture on "The prophecies regarding Israel fulfilled in New Testament times." Major-General J. P. Morgan occupied the chair. The lecturer stated that his object was to prove the continuity and unchangeable purpose of God in regarding the Israelites as His chosen people by showing that the New Testament was the historical fulfilment of the Old. After analysing and comparing many passages in the Bible, he remarked that the Israelites were the only people that had carried or been commissioned to carry the gospel over all the world. It should not be difficult to determine which nation was now in the enjoyment of the blessings promised to Joseph as his birthright and inheritance. We were constantly hearing that Great Britain was the most highly favoured of all nations, and that a serious responsibility therefore rested upon her. If the gentlemen who talked in that strain searched for themselves, they would see that the nation blessed above all others, and held responsible by God for the use it made of its privileges, could be no other than Israel.

ANGLO-ISRAEL FREE DISTRIBUTION FUND.

Fifty-second Monthly Report.

The following donations and subscriptions, from Feb. 18th to March 16th, are very gratefully acknowledged:—

By the Treasurer: Mrs. K., Worcester, 10s.; Mrs. C., Chippenham, £1 1s.; Miss L., Upper Teddington, £1; A. M. B., Bath, 5s.; J. D., Chatham (per Miss E. M. Rush), 2s. 6d. Per Philo-Israel: Miss P., Topsham, 5s.; Mrs. H., Bridge of Allan, 5s.

By Mr. C. Horner: Mrs. M. C., Tenby (monthly subscription), 2s. 6d.; Mrs. C. B., Weston-Super-Mare (monthly subscription), 5s.; Mrs. A., Hammersmith, 3s.; Miss H. and Mr. W., Moreton-in-Marsh, 3s. 6d.; W. W. (for Banners), 3s. 6d.

Total, £4 6s. 0d.

J. Lawrence, Hon. Treasurer.

Donations of Literature.—The following gifts are very thankfully acknowledged: Parcels of Banners from Sunderland, Weston-Super-Mare, Teddington, and literature from Bath. Also from Miss E. M. Rush, fifty copies "What is our Hope for the Church in Israel?" Two copies "Canadian Advance," from Messrs. Yeigh and Co., Montreal.

Literature Distribution. — Fourteen parcels have been despatched to the under-mentioned places: Manchester, Harpenden, Crewe, Market Weighton, Hammersmith, Lewes, Chippenham, Sheffield, Quernerford. To Malta; Ambala, Secunderabad, Rawul Pindi, and Nellore (India).

Banner Distribution.—127 copies have been despatched weekly to the places detailed in January report.

Correspondence.—We have received some most interesting, as well as important communications, showing the effects of the teaching of Israel to the many. One, an Army Scripture Reader, says:—"In returning you my thanks for the free distribution of the Banner, I take great pleasure in informing you that I believe, from the testimony of several men in the barracks in Sheffield, that the Banner is doing a good work in convincing them that there is a reality in the Identity of our nation with Israel, and in opening their heart to the revelation of God's will concerning His chosen people. Several cases might be quoted of men avowing themselves believers in Our Identity from reading and discussing the subject with me. . . . I am glad to be able to state that the literature has greatly helped me in my work in the barracks, especially among the sceptics and atheists."

One of our Manchester Sowers writes:—"It gives me great pleasure to state that one of the teachers in our Sunday-school, who a few months ago doubted the truth of Our Identity with the Lost Ten Tribes, told me to-day that the more he reads of the literature you so kindly send me the more he is convinced that Britain is Israel. A fortnight ago I gave him a small pamphlet touching upon 'The Stone Kingdom,' by the Rev. Baxter, which he seems to have compared with our views and the Scriptures, and is fully persuaded that the rev. gentleman's interpretation of Daniel's prophetic image does not harmonise with God's faithful covenants to His people Israel. There are now three teachers who fully believe that Lost Israel is found in the British nation, and I trust ere long, with God's blessing, that many more will be added to the list. I am anxious that these converts should teach it to their classes. This, I think, would be the means of rapidly spreading the glorious truths. When once the question is well and fully taught in our Sunday-schools, then, and not till then, may we expect a sweeping downfall of infidelity. Well does God in His wisdom describe this nation as the 'Stone Kingdom,' not altogether on account of its durability, although it is our Creator's declaration that it should stand for ever, but because the stone denotes weight, a crushing, grinding power that will break in pieces and consume. May God in His love hasten the day when every Briton in these Isles of the West will confess that Lost Israel is found. . . . I had almost forgotten to say that a library has been opened in connection with the Men's Bible-class. The teacher is a believer, and would be glad to introduce any literature for the purpose of forwarding the work. He is about to commence a course of lessons on this all-important subject."

A new Sower at Market Weighton, writes:—"I am at a good place for distributing literature, being at a signal cabin, and I have given some of the papers to engine drivers as they pass. One man who came past asked me for some more, and said the one I had given him ('Israel's World') was very good. A fresh driver comes every day from Selby, so you see there is a wide field. One of our men is head keeper for Lord Londesboro', and spreads the news to the neighbouring villages. There are believers in our Israelitish origin at Holme, Shipton, Selby, Londesboro', and Sanston, who have heard the news from us at Weighton."

Charles Horner, Secretary.

Contributions to the Fund will be thankfully received and acknowledged by the Hon. Treasurer, Miss J. Lawrence, Rosslyn, Hampton-road, Upper Teddington, Middlesex; or by Mr. Charles Horner, 34, Sheen-park, Richmond-on-Thames. Cheques may be crossed, "London and Provincial Bank, Teddington Branch." Grants of literature will be made, as far as funds allow, on application to the Secretary.

Digitized by Google

ISRAEL'S SCRIPTURE AND PRAYER UNION.

Two new members having joined since the last report, make the total number now 1,447.

New members are requested, when writing for cards, to kindly state whether their names are to be entered as Mr., Mrs., or Miss, etc.

A donation, received towards the expenses of the Union, of 2s. 6d., from member 1,422, is most thankfully acknowledged.

For the convenience of those members who wish to continue the daily reading, the following list of chapters for April is appended:—

1st ...	Micah	vi.	12th ...	Haggai	i.	23rd ...	Zech.	x.
2nd...	„	vii.	13th ...	„	ii.	24th ...	„	xi.
3rd ...	Nahum	i.	14th ...	Zech.	i.	25th ...	„	xii.
4th ...	„	ii.	15th ...	„	ii.	26th ...	„	xiii.
5th ...	„	iii.	16th ...	„	iii.	27th ...	„	xiv.
6th ...	Hab.	i.	17th ...	„	iv.	28th ...	Malachi	i.
7th ...	„	ii.	18th ...	„	v.	29th ...	„	ii.
8th ...	„	iii.	19th ...	„	vi.	30th ...	„	iii.
9th ...	Zeph.	i.	20th ...	„	vii.
10th ...	„	ii.	21st ...	„	viii.
11th ...	„	iii.	22nd ...	„	ix.

The card of membership will be sent on receipt of three stamps.

The first and second series of Monthly Comments on the whole Bible, by Philo-Israel, may be obtained in volume form. Price in paper cover, 1s. 2d. each, post free; in cloth, 2s. each, post free. The "Prayers for Daily Use," being a prayer for each day of the week, by Philo-Israel, are 1d., or 9d. per dozen, postage extra. The prayer of the Union, as on the Card of Membership, may be obtained printed in larger type, price 1d. for three copies, post free, or 1s. per 100 for distribution. Address, Miss E. Sibbald, 3, Townshend-villas, Richmond, Surrey.

Reviews.

What is our Hope for the Church in Israel? By E. M. Rush (A E I). Price 3d. Henry Burnside, Montpelier-vale, Blackheath, S.E. 1888.

The object of this little pamphlet is to remove errors held by some Anglo-Israelites respecting Ezek. xxxiv., and concerning the so-called shepherds of Israel; also to teach the real truth in regard to the Church of England as the Church in Israel, contrasted with the Church of Rome and its pretensions. The authoress believes that a large number of Anglo-Israelites are in error in supposing that the shepherds of Israel denounced in Ezek. xxxiv. are the clergy of the Church of England, but that the degenerate shepherds there denounced were only the Levitical priesthood of the House of Judah, who misled their people the Jews, as Jer. v. 30, 31 terribly describes. The Levite shepherds, the authoress declares, have never sought that which was lost, as Ezek. xxxiv. 6 states, either in the early days of the prophets, or in the more modern times of the Christian dispensation, when the priests of Judah rejected the Gospel, leaving the preaching of the latter to the apostles, who were of Benjamin, of the House of Israel. Ezek. xliv. 10—15 is referred to further as evidence that the Levites, who departed from God when Israel went astray, and are therefore denounced for their sin, must be the shepherds of Israel described in chap. xxxiv. as obnoxious to the wrath of God.

The authoress bravely and loyally defends the clergy of the Church of England, and considers they cannot in any way be open to the charges this chapter brings against the false shepherds of Israel, since they are in the main a laborious, zealous, God-fearing body of men, whose time is so greatly taken up that they can hardly be held responsible for not seeing the force of the arguments in favour of Our Identity. They have, the authoress declares, little or no opportunity for real study! All sorts of old errors, the varying forms of "Modern Thought," new systems of religion, in support of which the originators claim Bible warrant for their profound and subtle arguments, are pressed upon the attention of our clergy. "Must there not be absolute difficulty in meeting and disposing of all? Can we then be really surprised," Miss Rush asks, "when a disinclination is shown towards commencing a new study, and one which at the outset appears to most minds, both lay and clerical, but to offer vague and shadowy promises and conclusions?" Such are the excuses our authoress makes for our busy clergy, who are occupied with the thousand and one concerns of a active parish life, but never can find time to look into God's plans and purposes for His people, and so disdain a subject which occupies His whole heart and His whole soul (Jer. xxxii. 41, 42).

We do not propose to contest our authoress's argument regarding the bearing of Ezek. xxxiv. and its alleged reference to the clergy of the Church and the nonconforming ministers of our own day and country. We hope most heartily that the idol shepherds and false teachers of our times are not those referred to in this solemn chapter. But we take leave to make the following observations in respect to Miss Rush's view of the matter. Ezek. xxxiv., to begin with, refers distinctly to the time of the restoration of the Tribes to their own land, not to the old days of the prophets and the Levitical priesthood. Verse 13 distinctly says so, and declares what all Scripture corroborates, that God Himself will effect that, His mighty purpose. Reference to Ezek. xxxvii. 1—28 proves that! God will Himself bring Israel out of their graves, and will restore them to the land and to the mountains of Israel. Their shepherds shall not have that honour (Ezek. xxxiv. 10—13). In the next place, the prophecy relates to a lost people, and to the shepherds' disinclination to search and look for and find them. The Jews, or Judah, were never lost. No one had ever any need to seek for them. Their shepherds do not require to find them. The British shepherds alone are blind in this respect, faithful as they are to Christ and to the Gospel (Isa. xlii. 19).

Again, we would demur to Miss Rush's conclusion that Ezek. xxxiv. condemns either Israel's shepherds as a whole, or the people themselves, because of the sins of some of their spiritual guides. Those only are denounced, we take it, who feed themselves but not the flock, who have driven away their congregations by false doctrines, who have ruled them by force and cruelty, and have refused to seek and to search for the lost sheep of the House of Israel, whom the Lord Jesus commended to the charge of His apostles. The sentence passed on those (it may be the small minority of the whole body) does not condemn the whole body, still less the people of Israel their charge, who are evidently under God's own protecting care, and will be preserved in spite of the false and cruel conduct of some of their pastors. We see that our authoress admits, on pp. 7, 10—13, that we have some sleepy, erring, neglectful shepherds, who are reviving old errors, preaching bad doctrine, or no doctrine, even free-thought and Atheism! Why should it be deemed impossible that Ezek. xxxiv. arraigns and condemns those false shepherds of God's own flock?

Miss Rush's third chapter, on "The Church in Israel v. the Church of Rome," has our full sympathy and concurrence. On one or two points, perhaps, we may be allowed to suggest a doubt. While allowing that St. Peter was the "Petros," or stone, of the Lord's description in Matt. xvi. 18, we are unable to see how in the very same sentence the Lord could designate him the "Petra," or living rock, on which He Himself purposed to build His Church. His Church was Israel's Church, the British Establishment. But that Peter had any part or lot in erecting it there is not the faintest shadow of a shade of proof. Our authoress suggests a possibility that Peter was one of the selected ones, saying on p. 18, "May it not also be considered possible that Christ intended to convey that the disciple who had been singled out to receive of the Father a special revelation was selected by Him as the human founder and organizer of His Church upon earth? And is it beyond belief that this should be the Church to which reference has been made as established now in Israel?" It is not a question of belief or possibility. It is one of evidence. Is there any evidence at all to show that Peter helped to establish the British Churches in A.D. 61? We reply, not the smallest. There is some to lead one to suppose that St. Paul was in Britain once. Clement and Theodoret, in A.D. 423, directly asserted that Paul was here. But regarding St. Peter there is only the statement of Simeon Metaphrastes, a writer of the 10th century A.D., whom the Roman Catholic author Baronius pronounces "is no authority in these matters," and Dr. Linyard calls "a treacherous authority" (Anglo-Saxon Church, Vol. i., p. 3). Where Rome has failed to find a shred of evidence, is it wise in an Anglo-Israelite to play Rome's game, and suggest that it is not impossible and not beyond belief that St. Peter founded the British Church?

Our authoress seems to regret the existence of dissent among us. We rejoice in it, because dissent was a prophetic mark of Israel, and without it we should lack to-day one vital feature of Our Identity, which, absent, would have been fatal to our claim to be Israel. We refer to such passages as the following in support of our position, one that Mr. Hine long since established—viz., Isa. lii. 8, lx. 5; Jer. xxxii. 39, xxxi. 34; Zeph. iii. 9; Ezek. xi. 17—20.

Digitized by Google

On the whole Miss Rush's pamphlet is a thoughtful production which will interest many of our readers. We are unable to agree with much of its contents, and have considered it our duty to say so. But we hope, in spite of this, that our readers will peruse it for themselves, and arrive at their own conclusions respecting the points on which we and our respected fellow-believer unfortunately differ.

The Drunkards of Ephraim: Where they are, and Who they are. By ROBERT LAMB, President Middlesbrough British-Israel Association, &c., "With some Observations on Home Rule in the Light of Anglo-Israelism."

THIS is a pamphlet of 40 pages' length on the subject of Our Identity, being the heads, we suppose, of some lectures on the matter given by the author in the spring of 1887. Mr. Lamb's object has been to furnish to the enquirer the outlines of the evidence on which our contention rests, wherein the Scriptural argument has the chief place, and historical and ethnical lines of proof are glanced at in corroboration of the main argument. We are glad to see Mr. Lamb regards the BANNER OF ISRAEL as "the best organ he knows for further information on the question" he has discussed in his pamphlet. He commences his argument by asking who Ephraim was. Then, describing the latter's captivity, he tells us what his historian Hosea says about him. Mr. Lamb holds that the Gimiri, or descendants of Gomer, were to be the people with whom lost Israel were destined to wander and become paganised. When dealing with the appointed place of Israel in the British Islands, our author makes a good point regarding the distinction between Israel and Judah. "Jehovah," he says, "chose two Israels to be His peculiar peoples. This choice was unique. He hath not dealt so with any nation. Two distinct destinies were laid down by Moses (Deut. xxviii.); one a blessed destiny depending on obedience; the other a cursed destiny, the result of disobedience. Judah-Israel, or the Jews, confessedly inherit the latter, being disobedient in rejecting the Messiah. Ephraim, by accepting Christ, would become obedient, and consequently in a re-covenanted condition. . . . As Judah-Israel, or the Jews, are confessedly under the curse of disobedience, so the British are confessedly in possession of the blessings under the Abrahamic covenant. Therefore as they are admitted not to be Jews, they must be Ephraim-Israel, the son who defiantly said, 'I will not,' but afterwards repented and went. By his conversion," he adds, "Ephraim became obedient, and in a condition (through Christ) to enter into the blessings of the temporal as well as the spiritual part of the Abrahamic covenant."

Under the head of Ephraim's portrait our author sets out 61 marks of likeness between Israel and the British. We are not quite satisfied with these; for we find that under sec. xi. this nation is deservedly described as a drunken nation, and is also under secs. lvi., lvii., and lviii. convicted three times more of the same national vice, because they mingle strong drink, love flagons of wine, and are notorious for drunkenness. It seems rather hard on our people to give them four distinct bad marks when one only would describe the whole case! Mr. Lamb evidently is a strong advocate for the temperance or teetotal cause, and therefore has a separate chapter besides on "Ephraim's Drink Curse" (pp. 32—34). We are rather alarmed to find that he advocates also Home Rule for Ireland (p. 38, 39), though evidently he would not give her the kind of Home Rule which would please Messrs. Gladstone and Parnell. It is to be Home Rule which will never divide Ireland from Great Britain, and will finally be enjoyed by England, Scotland, and the Colonies as well as by Ireland. He believes that Isa. i. 26 supports his view, and terms it "Home Rule all round." Regarding this prediction we venture to say nothing. But if it should turn out as Mr. Lamb tells us it will, we shall be quite prepared then to corroborate his view, and declare that Scripture says so. Meanwhile we suspend our judgment in the matter, and wait with patience for what God may have in store for us in reference to the Home Rule which is according to the Scriptures.

MONTHLY PARTS of the BANNER OF ISRAEL are now ready (price 7d.), and may be had, by ordering, of any bookseller.

Correspondence.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—I enclose a cutting from the Civil and Military Gazette, of August 29th, 1887. This paper is published at Lahore, and the article is by Nicholas Notovitch, special correspondent of the Nova Vremya. It is interesting as showing his opinion that the great war-woe is imminent, and what part England may be expected to play in it. Whether the usual policy of England is "setting other people by the ears" or not, at all events, she generally gets what she rightly desires to get, or what it is intended by God that she should occupy for His glory. On the other hand, France and Russia depend entirely on themselves and trust to the strength of their own true right arm to deliver them from their adversaries. If Israel-England trusted to her own arm for deliverance, there would indeed be little hope for her, and the forebodings of the pessimists would be soon fulfilled; as it is she is defended by the Lord God of Sabaoth: "Because there is none other that fighteth for us, but only Thou, O God, to whom be all the praise." Yours faithfully, Amballa, Jan. 15. C. P. BIRD.

"RUSSIA AND EUROPE.

(Specially written for the "Civil and Military Gazette," August 29, 1887.)

"BY M. NICOLAS NOTOVITCH.

(Special Correspondent of the "Nova Vremya.")

"The telegrams received during the last few days show that the war clouds are lowering over Eastern Europe, and may at any moment burst with a fury that the world has not known since the days of the First Napoleon. Again will the thunder of cannon roll over Europe, and our fair earth be deluged with the blood of brave men. But why should this be so? Why should the civilisation of the nineteenth century—why should the highest ingenuity of man search after the quickest and most effective modes of destroying human life, of crippling and maiming God's creatures, of swelling at one fell stroke the already too large numbers of mourning widows and helpless orphans? We no longer require another Crusade to free Europe from the chains of darkness and ignorance. With Italy and Germany united and independent, we no longer require another war of 1859 or 1870 to re-establish great nationalities, which their faults or their misfortunes have doomed to live under the conqueror's yoke, or to be split up into small principalities separated from one another by petty rivalries and jealousies. There remain but two great national quarrels to settle, that between France and Germany, and that between Russia and the latter perfidious Power. The national aspirations of all the great peoples of Europe are now all but fulfilled, and, save in the case of the two national quarrels which I have just referred to, the only justification that can be found for the countries of Europe being armed to the teeth, is their desire to live and to extend their commerce. It is the trader and the merchant that must in future guide the national policy, not our present would-be statesmen and so-called diplomatists.

"Perhaps at the very moment that I am writing, decisive movements are already taking place in Europe, and the crisis has already arrived. For years statesmen like Lords Beaconsfield and Salisbury, Princes Bismarck and Gortschakoff, have done their best to postpone inevitable results; but, like the forces of a mighty earthquake, these are already rising to the surface and displaying their activity at various points of Eastern Europe. When the catastrophe is past, and we have time to examine the condition of the political terrain after the upheaval, we shall then see who are the survivors. What will be the relative position of the different nations, not even that arch-plotter and political gambler, Prince Bismarck, can possibly have any idea. Of course every nation believes that it will come out of the crisis very much a gainer. Germany, indeed, nurses herself with the delusive hope that her hordes which crushed all resistance against her by mere weight of numbers in 1864, in 1866, and in 1870, will again prevail. Austria depends on Germany as on a crutch; Turkey looks for aid to the numerous rivals and enemies of Russia; Italy, the jackal of Europe, follows in the wake of the other Powers, ready to come in when the prey is down, and they have each had their slice out of it; while England pursues her usual policy of setting other people by the ears and seizing on what it covets when they are too tired or too well occupied with themselves to attend to her. On the other hand, France and Russia, surrounded by enemies and ill-wishers have to depend entirely on themselves, and they trust to the strength of their own true right arm to deliver them from their adversaries."

Digitized by Google

NOTICES.

All communications intended for the Editor, to be addressed: "Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Clifton, Bristol.

SUBSCRIPTIONS. £ s. d.

Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free 0 7 6
Two Copies (including Double Numbers) 0 13 6
Three Copies ,, ,, ,, ... 1 0 4
Four Copies ,, ,, ,, ... 1 5 6
Six Copies ,, ,, ,, ... 1 16 4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-grand, London, to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C., or F. W. PARRY & Co., 29, Paternoster-row, London.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

Contents Bills and Show Cards may be obtained on application to the Publishers.

Advertisements should be sent to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

Prepaid Advertisements are inserted at the rate of thirty words for 1s. 4d.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

A LECTURE will be Delivered in the ASSOCIATION ROOMS, 14, King William-street, Charing Cross, W.C., on THURSDAY AFTERNOON NEXT, April 5, 1888, at 3.30 o'clock, by the Rev. James Billington, F.R.H.S. (Secretary. Subject: "The Coronation Stone." Admission free. Strangers will be made welcome. JAMES BILLINGTON, Sec.

New Work on the Identity of Lost Israel

By the late BISHOP TITCOMB.

Now ready, in Cloth Gilt, Bevelled Boards, Imperial 8vo. Price 3s.; sent Post Free for Postal Order or Stamps.

A MESSAGE TO THE CHURCH

FROM

THE NINETEENTH CENTURY,

BY THE LATE

RT. REV. BISHOP TITCOMB, D.D.

ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet Court, Fleet Street.
F. W. PARRY & Co., 29, Paternoster Row, E.C.

WORKS BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

The Geography of the Gates. With Map and six full page, and one double-page, Illustrations, printed on plate paper. 208 pages, in handsome cloth, gilt Price 3s. 6d., post free 3s. 10d.

The History of the House of Israel. How They Were Lost and How They Were Found. Told for the children. Price 6d., cloth 1s.; post free 7d. and 1s. 1d. Fifth edition.

A Resume of the Scriptural Argument, Proving the Identity of the British Race with the Lost Ten Tribes. Price 1d.; 6s. per hundred, postage 6d.

Our Identity: What it is Not; What it is; and Our Obligations To-day in Respect to it Being a Lecture recently delivered in London by Philo-Israel, and published by special request. Price 2d., a reduction for quantities.

Price 6d., post free 7d.

THE MESSENGER,

A Monthly Expositor of the Fulfilment of the Scriptures in the Anglo-Saxon Folk, the Israel of God.

Each number contains contributions from high-class writers on Identity Subjects, selections from the Discourses of Rev. Dr. Wild, and a chapter of an Important New Work, entitled—

"RUSSIA JAPHET," by "OXONIAN,"

Author of "Israel's Wanderings," &c.

London: F. W. Parry & Co., 29, Paternoster-row.

PIANOFORTES, Harmoniums, American Organs. Why buy at shops inferior made instruments, and pay large profits, when you can buy direct from the Maker High-class Instruments, and save 50 per cent. by so doing! Full value allowed for old Instruments in exchange as part payment. Write for Price Lists and Testimonials to G. LINSTEAD, 2, Oseney Crescent, Camden Road, London. Established 1874.

Dr. JOSEPH WILD'S WORKS

The most useful works on the subject.

NEW EDITION JUST PUBLISHED.

THE LOST TEN TRIBES

Price 3s., post free 3s. 3d.

'We have much pleasure in directing attention to this handsome volume. . . We promise our readers that if they procure this work, and will peruse it, they will find 'Our Identity' discussed in a clear, novel, racy, and from an American point of view, which is sure to interest."—Banner of Israel.

THE FUTURE OF ISRAEL AND JUDAH,

Price 2s., post free 2s. 3d.

R. BANKS & SON, RACQUET-COURT, FLEET-ST.

The Anglo-Israel Theory.

Every believer in it should read the Sermons of the REV. JOSEPH WILD, D.D., of Toronto, Canada, who is the leading exponent of the theory in America, and whose Sermons and Books have a world-wide circulation, which are reported weekly in

"THE CANADIAN ADVANCE,"

A Religious, Literary, and Fireside Weekly. Remit a P.O.O. for 4s. 6d. to the publishers for a year's subscription.—Address: YEIGH & Co., Toronto, Canada, London Agents: ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet Court, Fleet Street, E.C.

Fifteenth Thousand.

BY REV. HENRY ROE.

Israel's World. Origin and Destiny of British Race, Colonies, and Empire. 2d., post free 2½d. Fifty post free from H. Roe for 4s. 9d.

Philo-Israel says: "I am perfectly delighted with your pamphlet."

C. E. Priestly, Esq., says: "For its size I never read a better work. I have given away two lots of fifty each, and enclose money for fifty more. I have sent it to clergymen, bishops, and archbishops."

Rev. Thomas Lowe says: "What the works of Mr. Hine failed to do in my enlightenment, 'Israel's World' has accomplished. I now read the Scriptures in a new and vivid light."

Going to Africa. 1s., post free 1s. 1d.

Fernando Po Mission. 1s., post free 1s. 1d.

West African Scenes. 2s., post free 2s. 2d.

Consecration. 2d., post free 2½d.

50 post free from H. Roe for 4s. 9d.

Robert Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.; and Rev. H. Roe, Dawley, Salop.

MR. EDWARD HINE has returned from his lecturing tour in America. Friends wishing to arrange for him to lecture can communicate with Isaac Loveland, Shoreham, near Sevenoaks, Kent, at present fixing no dates. Mr. Hine's publications have had a large circulation, and can be obtained of F. W. Parry & Co., 29, Paternoster Row, London, E.C.

Forty-Seven Identifications, 6d., post free 7d

Cui Bono? 6d., post free, 7d.

Lost Israel Found, 3s 6d., post free, 3s. 9d.

Also The Nation Warned by the Scripture Teachings of the Great Pyramid. 6d., post, 7d.

LADIES!! Our New Spring and Summer Patterns of Dress Materials are now ready, and we invite every reader of this paper to write for them. Patterns will be sent post free to any address. All wool Cashmeres, Merinos, Serges, Beiges, Lace Cloths, Costume Tweeds, Suitings, Checks, Stripes, and every description of Woollen Dress Materials in Black and all the newest and most stylish colours for the coming season; and in prices to suit all purses. Any length cut, and all parcels are sent carriage paid to any address, either by parcels post or rail. Write at once for patterns, and you will be astonished when you see them.

AN AMAZING OFFER!!—We shall give a very handsome Brocaded Silk Handkerchief with each dress-length ordered from us during this season.

LUTUS C. LEATHLEY, Armley, near Leeds.

FITS! FITS!! FITS!!!

ALL PERSONS SUFFERING FROM EPILEPSY should send name and address to JAMES OSBORNE, Medical Pharmacy, Ashbourne, Derbyshire who will forward, free of charge, full particulars, with Testimonials, of the most successful remedy ever discovered for this distressing malady. Sent to all parts of the world. Reference permitted to Rev. J. BAKER, M.A. 80, Bolton Road, Pendleton, Manchester.

Price 2d., by post 2½d. Second Edition, Revised.

A SUMMARY OF ANGLO-ISRAELITE TEACHING,

And of the Scripture Proofs on which it rests.

By SURGEON-GEN. J. M. GRANT, M.D.,

President of the Cheltenham Association, and Vice-President of the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association.

LONDON: ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet Court, Fleet Street, and all Booksellers.

SOUND, PURE, WHITE TEETH!

Those who value these will try

CARBOLINE

(The Great Sanitary Tooth Paste).

1/6 & 2/6 per Pot.

Through Chemists, or post free from the Makers,

GEORGE & WELCH

WORCESTER.

Lancet writes:—"To save the teeth use a good carbolic daily."

LUNG SAVE YOUR LIVES BY TAKING TONIC
LUNG OWBRIDGE'S TONIC
LUNG LUNG TONIC TONIC
LUNG TONIC
LUNG TONIC
LUNG TONIC
LUNG TONIC
LUNG THE MIGHTY HEALER. TONIC
LUNG It has a power over disease hitherto TONIC
LUNG unknown in Medicine. TONIC
LUNG Are you at all Weak-chested or inclined TONIC
LUNG to be Consumptive, with just a touch of TONIC
LUNG Cough now and then? TONIC
LUNG "Try this Wonderful Medicine." The TONIC
LUNG Cough and Weakness will disappear as TONIC
LUNG if by magic, and you will feel a strength TONIC
LUNG and power you never had before. TONIC
LUNG HAVE YOU A COUGH? TONIC
LUNG A DOSE WILL RELIEVE IT! TONIC
LUNG HAVE YOU A COLD? TONIC
LUNG A DOSE AT BEDTIME WILL TONIC
LUNG REMOVE IT. TONIC
LUNG Bronchitis & Asthma it relieves instantly TONIC
LUNG The Spasms of Coughing so dreadful in TONIC
LUNG Whooping Cough become less with each TONIC
LUNG dose of the medicine. TONIC
LUNG TONIC
LUNG Prepared by W. T. OWBRIDGE, Chemist, Hull TONIC
LUNG Sold in Bottles 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d. TONIC
LUNG and 11s. by all Chemists and Patent TONIC
LUNG Medicine Vendors. Wholesale all London TONIC
LUNG and Provincial Houses. TONIC

HUMAN LIFE.—FIFTY YEARS' Record of Facts, Principles, and Discoveries (just published, complete) Relating to the Improvement and Preservation of Human Life on Earth. Origin and true treatment of diseases. A series of articles by DR. SAMUEL BIRLEY, M.D., Ph.D. Book form, 50 pages. SENT FREE to every applicant by the publishers, GORDON B. MURRAY & CO., 50, Theobald's-road, Holborn, E.C. Write to-day.

CORPULENCE.

All persons suffering from this burdensome and dangerous state of the body, and even those developing tendencies thereto, should call to-day if possible, or write at once, for a treatise on the subject, just issued by

Mr. C. B. Harness, Consulting Medical Electrician. The book contains valuable ADVICE HOW, in a simple, rational and effective manner, without resorting either to drastic medicines, quack prescriptions, poisonous preparations, or starvation dietary, OBESITY IS CURED, and will be sent gratis & post-free on application to the MEDICAL BATTERY CO. Limited,

52, OXFORD STREET, LONDON, W.

Corner of Rathbone Place

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. F. W. PARRY (late GUEST & Co.), 29 PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, APRIL 4, 1888. [All rights reserved

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. XII., No. 589. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, APRIL 11, 1888. [PRICE ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

PAGE
The Discovery of the British Empire 149
Jews and Gentiles. By W. H. Larkins, Lieut.-Colonel..... 150
The "A B C" of the Scripture Proofs that "The House of Israel" is Now "A Multitude in the Midst of the Earth," Fulfilling Isaiah liv. By Dr. Alder Smith, F.R.C.S. Part II. 151
Are the Germans Taking our Trade from us? 152
Jubilee Letter to the Queen, concerning Her World-wide and Imperishable Empire, and Her Immovable Throne. From one of Her Antipodean Loyal Subjects. Part II. 153
The Security of Great Britain and Ireland..... 155
Correspondence 155

THE DISCOVERY OF "THE BRITISH EMPIRE."

IT was one of the quaint sayings of the Earl of Rosebery, when he spoke at the farewell banquet to Mr. Service, of Melbourne, Victoria, on December 7, that "the British Empire" was discovered only thirty or forty years ago by the people of these islands, and that this constituted the great discovery of the 19th century. These words fix the date when this great Israelite Empire of ours was so fully above the horizon that men not absolutely blind were forced to see the grandeur of the object presented to their gaze, and what it meant. The Earl of Rosebery admitted that the fact only dawned on British citizens within the last forty years, and that they were not the first to discover it. Our colonial fellow subjects were always aware that they constituted a great and mighty Empire. They were always aware of "the British Empire," and what they were going to do and to become. The only blind ones were the British islanders! the Ten Tribes of Israel, in short, in their isles of the West. When the secret was divulged to Europe, the British people were not the first to find out the glorious fact! It was reserved to an Austrian Baron, named Hübner, to make a tour of the British Colonies, and so discover what a big, glorious, world-wide thing it is. He saw it was an Empire of enormous capacity, and when his book came out our purblind, careless, foolish, people, rubbed their eyes and saw in some measure that they had grown and grown, like Alice in Wonderland, till they were a vast Imperial Power, scattered everywhere, and only weak and powerless because not yet confederated and united into one Empire. Sir Henry Holland, at the same banquet, said that in his opinion no one could enter on the study of the colonial question without realizing to the full the importance of welding together this great Empire, and of strengthening in every way possible the links that unite the mother country and the colonies. Unity is strength, and the tighter we can bind the bundle of Imperial sticks, the more easy will it be to resist pressure from without; to separate is perhaps even ruin to us. Lord Rosebery's words, showing how it was that we have lately come to take an interest in the colonies, and to see that they are so vitally important to our nation's greatness, are worth reproducing here, and we quote them accordingly. He said:—

I do not mean to pretend that the world was not aware previously to this century of the existence of the United Kingdom and of certain fortified places in Europe which belong to that kingdom. They were aware, moreover, of that place which occupies a sort of separate shelf in their minds—the Empire of India. They knew of it as governed by a private company, as a land of mythical wealth, which sent home occasionally nabobs, and sometimes a statesman or a conqueror. (Laughter and cheers). In another category they placed the colonies as regions in no particular connexion with the United Kingdom, but as regions of unbounded territory which gratified the national vanity on the map, which supplied comfortable places for some politicians, not perhaps in their first prime (laughter), and which afforded facilities for trying social experiments in that seclusion which is so desirable. (Laughter). That was the condition of things not many years ago. In those days false prophets in sheep's clothing went about preaching up and down the country, first, that it would be well for the country to be rid of its colonies; and, secondly, as far as their voice could be heard by the colonists, that it would be well for the colonists to be rid of the mother country. But about forty years ago—less than that—a new and awakened sense of Imperial responsibility dawned upon the people of this country. A bloody mutiny called the attention of the Government of the Empire to the responsibility that it had in India. It assumed this responsibility and annexed India directly to the British Crown; and since then we have had in the colonies a new sense of our responsibility too. No one can deny that the teachings of those false prophets to whom I have alluded have entirely failed to produce their effect. There have been various causes for this, but there is one which is perfectly clear. In the first place, steam and electricity have done their work. The news of London to-day is the news of Toronto or of Melbourne the same day. (Hear, hear). But the communication by rail has been of much greater importance still. The roving spirit of the British race has found development for itself in wandering through its own Empire. Our countrymen have learnt to appreciate the charm of a Canadian winter, of an Australian summer, as well as the cool season of India. They have gone out often to hunt, but they have invariably returned having received large and important impressions, having made friends in the regions they have visited, and they have returned to form not unimportant links in the chain which binds the Empire together. (Cheers).

While men talk and think thus of one of the most remarkable facts in the history of the world, they do not stop, it seems, to inquire why the unique spectacle should have presented itself so suddenly just thirty or forty years ago, of a nation surrounded by what is palpably a company of nations, not in New Zealand and Australia only, but in Canada, in South Africa, and in Tasmania also, all enjoying representative government, each all but wholly independent of the mother country, and yet all actuated by the most extraordinary love, loyalty and attachment to their old home, the old mother of nations, as men delight to call her, in these British islands of the west. Mr. Service, at the banquet in question, made much of this fact. He declared, the people of Australia are intensely loyal. They love England with all their heart, and they want England to love them as cordially. They felt that the old folks at home ought to feel some pride in their children. Such is the testimony of men well acquainted with the colonies, and aware of the feeling now rising regarding them in the hearts of the people of this country. Surely these things have a prophetic origin, since they concern God's people Israel, in reference to whom it was promised to Abraham and then to Jacob that there should come of them a multitude of peoples, a company of nations, in short, such as are now extant in the world, but were never seen or heard of before, loyal and loving to the parent stock but unlike the United States, rebellious never! (Gen. xvii. 4, 5, xlviii. 19). The British Empire which has only just lately been discovered, is found to be a grand Federation of States such as the world never saw before, in exact accordance with the picture the Scriptures draw of the afterseed of Abraham and Jacob, a nation and a company of nations, a fulness of Gentiles, since the Ten Tribes have been Gentilized and so declare themselves to be, in Isa. lxiii. 17—19, R.V.:—"O Lord why dost thou make us to err from Thy ways, and hardenest our heart from Thy fear? Return for Thy servants sake, the tribes of Thine inheritance. Thy holy people possessed it but a little while, our adversaries have trodden down Thy sanctuary. We are become as they over whom Thou never bearest rule: as they that were not called by Thy name." These last words express as plainly as language can, that Israel of the Ten Tribes became as those over whom God does not bear rule; therefore as the Gentiles who know Him not, and like those not called by His name, therefore non-Israelite Gentiles (vide Rev. C. W. Hickson's paper, p. 112, and compare Isa. lxv. 1, R.V.). Those not called by the Lord Jehovah's name were those who inquired for and found Jesus their King and Saviour when He bade them "behold Him." The discovery of the British Empire in these our modern times is tantamount to the discovery of the Lost Ten Tribes, though Lord Rosebery had no idea of the fact when he spoke at the Hôtel Métropole on Dec. 7, because the British Empire, as his Lordship and modern observers see and describe it, differs in not one jot or tittle from the Lost Tribes of Israel now Gentilized, but living for the Lord Jesus as "the sons of the Living God" (Hosea i. 10). Hallelujah!

Digitized by Google

JEWS AND GENTILES.

By W. H. Larkins, Lieut.-Col.

"To the Jew first and also to the Greek" (Rom. i. 16, ii. 9, 10, R.V.). On what grounds do our Clergy maintain that we are Gentiles? Is it that, not being Jews, we must therefore be Gentiles? If so, who is the Greek spoken of by St. Paul in the passages quoted above, and whom he places on an equality with the Jew? That he is not a Gentile is clear, as the Greek word for Gentile does not occur in either of the passages referred to, but quite a different word is made use of, which means a Greek. Now, as the Gentiles are supposed to embrace all the nations and people of the earth, with the exception of the children of Israel, it is evident that the Greek is an Israelite, but not of necessity a Jew; the latter representing merely the remnant of the Two-Tribed House of Judah, whilst the Greek would represent the other portion of the children of Israel—viz, the Lo-Ammi Gentilised Ephraim-Israelites of the Ten-Tribed House of Israel or Joseph. It is with the latter, and not with the Jews, that we identify ourselves; for the Jews have never been lost sight of. They are at the present moment fulfilling the conditions predicted of them—viz., scattered among the nations; unbelievers still under the bondage of the law; living proofs of the sure fulfilment of prophecy, and of all the judgments denounced against them by our blessed Lord Himself for their disobedience and unbelief.

The Gentile nations had each of them laws of their own, framed by their rulers for the government of their subjects; but Israel was under a divine law, written by the finger of God Himself on two tables of stone, and handed over to Moses, the law-giver of the people, for the guidance of the children of Israel. This is the law of the Ten Commandments dispensed at Mount Sinai; and this very same identical law will be found engraven on wood or stone in all our Churches and chapels throughout the United Kingdom and its Colonies. It forms a portion of our Liturgy, and in our responses we not only ask that "our hearts may be inclined to keep these laws," but that they may be written in our hearts. These laws are taught in the Sunday-schools to our children, and are equally binding upon us, nationally, as upon Israel of old. If we are a Gentile nation, how is it that we are in possession of, and governed by, laws framed by God for His chosen people Israel, and for them alone? They form the very basis of our national code, and if to these we add the observance of the Sabbath and our missionary work, what stronger proofs can we wish for, than these of Our Identity with Lost Israel?

Why then should we be led into the belief that we are Gentiles? Where is the proof that we are Gentiles? and of what advantage would it be to us? The preponderance of evidence is most assuredly in favour of our being Israelites, and the advantages are altogether on our side, for no promises were made to the Gentiles, from which God's chosen people were excluded; whilst, on the other hand, to the Israelites pertain certain special promises of blessings, as the seed of Abraham, to whom the promises were made; and inasmuch as they were unconditional, and confirmed by an oath, they could never be alienated from the descendants of those to whom they were made, and the Gentiles could have no possible claim, as an inheritance, to them. The promises and privileges pertaining to the Israelites are fully set forth by St. Paul in Rom. ix. 4, 5; and oh! what a glorious thought that we should be heirs to these promises!—that we should be a people Gŏd formed for Himself, a peculiar people, the purchase of whose redemption was paid upon the cross at Calvary, that we might show forth the praises of Him who hath called us out of darkness into His marvellous light, which in times past were not a people, but are now the people of God; which had not obtained mercy, but now have obtained mercy" (1 Pet. ii. 9, 10); and "As sheep, going astray, are now returning to the Shepherd and Bishop of our souls" (ver. 25). Is not this sufficient to account for our favoured position as a nation, not owing to any inherent good qualities of our own, but because we are Israel, and beloved for the Father's sake, and in remembrance of God's holy covenant and the oath which He sware unto Abraham? Well might we conclude with the words of the Psalmist: "O, let Israel now confess that He is gracious, and that His mercy endureth for ever."

The Italians are showing every courtesy to our Queen. Amongst the bouquets forwarded to Her Majesty was one composed exclusively of flowers grown in the open air in various parts of her dominions, the Himalayas, the Plains of India, Burmah, the Cape, and Australia being all represented.

Queen Victoria's Epiphany Offering.—Surgeon-General J. M. Grant writes as follows:—"An important question regarding the Royal offering of gold, frankincense, and myrrh is whether a similar custom is observed by any other nation. If Mr. Gott can obtain a satisfactory, that is, reliable answer, to that question, I think he would be doing great service to our cause, because a negative answer would go far to establish another identity."

Digitized by Google

THE "A B C" OF THE SCRIPTURE PROOFS THAT "THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL" IS NOW "A MULTITUDE IN THE MIDST OF THE EARTH," FULFILLING ISAIAH LIV.

By Dr. Alder Smith, F.R.C.S.

(Read at the Wolverhampton Conference, Feb. 21st, 1888.)

(Concluded from page 136.)

PART II.

Are these birthright blessings, especially of "multitudinousness," to come upon Ephrain-Israel only during the millennium? Assuredly not, and for the following reasons:—

First, they are to be enjoyed by Joseph's House during the "latter days"; and we have seen that this term refers to the Christian Dispensation. St. Peter, in Acts ii. 17, calls the then present time "the last days"; and Hosea also tells us that the "Children of Israel" are to "come with fear unto the Lord, and to His goodness in the latter days."

Secondly, many of the predictions given of the House of Joseph are inconsistent with millennial times, when all war is to cease. Joseph's bow was to abide in strength, by the hands of God. Again, "His horns are the horns of the wild ox, with them he shall push the peoples (margin, 'Gore the peoples') all of them, even the ends of the earth" (Deut. xxxiii. 17).

Isaiah also says of the House of Israel, "I will uphold thee" . . . . "they that war against thee shall be as nothing" (Isa. xli. 12). Then again in chapter liv. 17:—"No weapon that is formed against thee shall prosper." We shall see further on that these chapters refer to the cast-off or divorced wife of God, which is undoubtedly the exiled House of Israel.

Then Micah, in the fifth chapter, says, "The remnant of Jacob shall be among the nations, in the midst of many peoples, as a lion among the beasts of the forest; as a young lion among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, treadeth down and teareth in pieces, and there is none to deliver." Such language cannot apply to millennial times, when there is to be no more war!

Thirdly, Hosea tells us (i. 10), this multiplicity of the House of Israel is to happen to them before the reunion and the return to the Holy Land—"As the sand of the sea, which cannot be measured nor numbered."—The actual return is stated to be after this (in verse 11), when the two Houses are joined together under one head. Then Jeremiah (xxxi. 7) says: "For thus saith the Lord, sing with gladness for Jacob, and shout for the chief of the nations: publish ye, praise ye, and say, O, Lord, save Thy people, the remnant of Israel: Behold I will bring them from the north country, and gather them from the uttermost parts of the earth" . . . . "a great company shall they return hither" . . . . "for I am a Father to Israel, and Ephraim is My first-born." It is very evident from the prophecies that the return and the reunion is before the millennium, and therefore this multitudinousness, which is to take place before the reunion and the return, must also happen before the millennium.

Fourthly, the covenant promise made to Ephraim that his seed should become "a fulness of Goyim"—Gentile nations, or nations outside the land of Palestine—must be fulfilled to them before the return to Palestine, after which the two Houses are to be one nation for evermore. St. Paul tells us that "A hardening in part hath befallen Israel," i.e., the Jews, or the covenant people of those days—until "the fulness of the Gentiles" be come in! There is no other fulness of Gentiles mentioned in the Bible but Ephraim's "fulness of Gentiles" —Goyim—and thus this birthright blessing of fulness must take place before the Jews, as a nation, turn to Christ, which is before the millennial reign (Rom. xi. 25).

Fifthly, if the special blessings promised to Joseph's House, were not to happen to them when separate,—and thus before the reunion with Judah,—but to the whole Twelve Tribes, would the Bible, over and over again state the fact that the birthright was Joseph's, and that Ephraim was God's firstborn? In the millennium all the Twelve Tribes will be one nation under Christ their king, and thus the special blessings promised to the House of Joseph, to happen to them in "the latter days" must first have been fulfilled. There can be no doubt these covenant blessings were renewed by God to Joseph's House long after the Captivity, for Zechariah—who prophesied two hundred years after the Assyrian captivity—in speaking of the two divisions or Houses, says:—"I will strengthen the House of Judah, and I will save the House of Joseph". . . . "and they shall be as though I had not cast them off". . . . "And they of Ephraim shall be like a mighty man" . . . . "I will hiss for them, and gather them; for I have redeemed them: and they shall increase as they have increased. And I will sow them among the peoples; and they shall remember Me in far countries" . . . . "and (they) shall return" . . . . "and place shall not be found for them." This sowing and increase must mean redundant population, and it is to be specially noted that Ephraim-Israel is at that time out of Palestine—"In lands remote from Judea," says the Speaker's Commentary. This passage in Zechariah predicts an uprising of Joseph's House during this Christian Dispensation, and thus confirms the view that it was to "grow into a multitude in the midst of the earth," to swarm as fishes do, and to become "the fulness of the nations," and to extend by encroaching movements to the ends of the earth, in these "latter days." The signs of such a mighty people are wanting if we look at the Afghans or the Nestorians. They are all too utterly insignificant and localised to correspond with Joseph's prophetic future. Which of these is likely to push the people to the ends of the earth before the second coming of Christ? All prophetic students are agreed that the return of the Israelites is at hand; and that there are not left now some hundreds of years for the future fulfilment of prophecies, which undoubtedly refer to the House of Israel during their exile from the land. Thus it is evident, to those who believe in the prophetic word, that somewhere a mighty host must be existing who have already pushed the peoples to the ends of the earth, and are now enjoying (at any rate in part) the promised birthright blessings. Therefore the House of Israel must be sought for, at the present time, as an apparently Gentile nation, or nations—"as the sand of the sea" for number. For, long ago, they were divorced from God, and the Mosaic law, and became "cast-off" —"Lo-Ammi," or not God's people—and became wanderers among the nations; but—as predicted by Hosea—they were to be gathered into a wilderness, or unformed land, spoken comfortably to, and brought into the bond of the covenant again; which, of course,—as Heb. viii. 10 tells us,—must be the new covenant in Christ.

The chief subject of Hosea's prophecy is the recovery of Ephraim-Israel, and he finishes with these words:—"I will heal their backsliding, I will love them freely: for Mine anger is turned away from him. I will be as the dew unto Israel; he shall blossom as the lily, and cast forth his roots as Lebanon." Is not this like the promises given elsewhere of Joseph's birthright blessings—which were predicted to happen to them in "the latter days," or the Christian Dispensation?

Finally, what says Isaiah to this question of multidinousness of the House of Israel before the return? The term "Israel" is sometimes used in Isaiah for the whole nation, the Twelve Tribes; but almost always for the "House of Israel," in contrast with the "House of Judah," called "Judah" by Isaiah. In the seventh chapter we read the "king of Israel, went up to Jerusalem to war against it." This was undoubtedly the king of the Ten-Tribed House. Again: "Syria is confederate with Ephraim."

In the eighth chapter it is written—"The Lord sent a word into Jacob, and it hath lighted upon Israel. And all the people shall know, even Ephraim." Then it speaks of "Israel" being devoured by the Syrians; and the other House is spoken of as "Judah." Then again in the 10th—"For though thy people Israel be as the sand of the sea, *only a remnant of them shall return."

Digitized by Google

The Speaker's Commentary has a remarkable annotation upon this, showing that I am right in applying "Israel" in this passage to the House of Joseph; and also that the multiplicity, spoken of elsewhere, is to happen to them before the return. It is as follows:—"Ephraim was soon to be cut off from being a people. It should lose its name, and be scattered across the Gentile world—not, however, to perish, but (in accordance with that mysterious oracle in Gen. xlviii. 16—19) to MULTIPLY LIKE FISH IN THE MIDST OF THE EARTH, and TO BECOME THE FULNESS OF THE NATIONS." What the learned writer in the Speaker's Commentary says was to happen, is only what I am contending must have happened, as we are so near the close of this dispensation.

In the 50th chapter we find the divorced wife mentioned. "Thus saith the Lord, where is the bill of your mother's divorcement, wherewith I have put her away?" This undoubtedly refers to the cast-off or divorced House of Israel: for Jer. iii. tells us the divorced wife was "Israel" and not "Judah:"—"I saw, when, for this very cause that backsliding Israel had committed adultery, I had put her away and given her a bill of divorcement: yet treacherous JUDAH her sister feared not" (8). Hosea also says of the House of Israel, "She is not my wife, neither am I her husband" (ii. 1). Thus it is evident the divorced wife refers to the House of Israel, called "Israel" by Jeremiah, and also "Israel" by Isaiah!

Then we come to the 53rd chapter, concerning our Lord. But the following (54th) cannot be explained—as far as I can see—unless the House of Israel (the divorced or desolate wife) is to be multiplied—as predicted by the prophets—redeemed, remarried to God, and thus brought into the bond of the new covenant during this Christian dispensation.

"Sing, O barren, thou that didst not bear; break forth into singing, and cry aloud, thou that didst not travail with child; for more are the children of the desolate than the children of the married wife, saith the Lord. Enlarge the place of thy tent, and let them stretch forth the curtains of thine habitations: spare not: lengthen thy cords, and strengthen thy stakes. For thou shalt spread abroad on the right hand and on the left; and thy seed shall possess the nations, and make the desolate cities to be inhabited. Fear not." . . "for thou shalt forget the shame of thy youth, and the reproach of thy widowhood shalt thou remember no more. For thy Maker is thine husband; the Lord of Hosts is His name; and the Holy one of Israel is thy Redeemer;" . . . "For the Lord hath called thee as a wife forsaken and grieved in spirit, even a wife of youth, when she is cast off, saith thy God. For a small moment have I forsaken thee; but with great mercies will I gather thee."

Who are the two wives? Why, undoubtedly the two Houses; and the married wife must be Judah, and the desolate, barren, or divorced wife can only be Israel. Ezekiel describes the two Houses as two women; and Hosea says of the Ten-Tribed House, "Plead with your mother, plead, for she is not My wife, neither am I her husband."

We thus come to a most significant fact; that, directly after the coming of Christ is foretold by Isaiah, and it is said, "for the transgression of My people was He stricken:" then immediately afterwards follows this chapter speaking of the great increase, "as the sand of the sea," of the cast-off or desolate wife—viz., the House of Israel; that they are "to spread abroad on the right hand and on the left," and "possess the nations." Ephraim-Israel is told she shall forget the shame of her youth, and shall not remember the reproach of her widowhood any longer.

This language cannot refer to pure Gentiles; for they were never married to God and divorced, but only to the "House of Israel." Here you get the same language as in Hosea ii., when the cast-off wife of youth—the House of Israel—is to call the Lord "Ishi" again—that is, "my husband." Here, then, before the millennium, while the two Houses are distinct, is the time of the re-marriage. Then this divorced, but now remarried wife in Christ, is to have more children than the married wife, or Judah; and thus to fulfil the promise of becoming "the fulness of the Gentiles." Therefore we find St. Peter saying of the "sojourners of the dispersion," or the "House of Israel," "Ye are an elect race" . . . "which in time past were no people (viz., Lo-Ammi) but NOW are the people of God: which had not obtained mercy, but NOW have obtained mercy."

I have no time to clear up some texts which may appear, at first sight, to be against the view that Ephraim-Israel MUST be a mighty host before the return. I know them well, and relied upon them, until I more carefully examined the subject. But I contend I have proved from Scripture that "Joseph's House," "Ephraim," "the House of Israel," "the Children of Israel," or "Israel,"—in contrast with the House of Judah—was prophesied to "grow into a multitude in the midst of the earth," before the return to the Holy Land; even during these "latter days;" and that they must be found now, "as the sand of the sea, which cannot be measured nor numbered," BEFORE the reunion with the House of Judah, or the Jews: also that they are the "fulness of the Gentiles"—promised to Ephraim the head tribe—having already pushed the peoples to the ends of the earth: and inhabiting the "Isles of the sea," in the "north" and in the "west" from Palestine.

Thus, Joseph's House, or Israel, when recognised by their brethren, will be found THE HEAD—not of a single nation, as their founder was discovered—but "the chief of the nations" (Jer. xxxi. 7). Do remember that Christ came to confirm the Abrahamic covenant, or as Romans xv. tells us, "that He might confirm the promises given unto the fathers;" and that Heb. viii. informs us that the "new covenant" with the "House of Israel," came into operation 1,800 years ago! Have these eighteen centuries passed by, and are these promises given to the fathers still unfulfilled?

Christ also said, "The kingdom of God shall be taken away from you"—that is the Jews—"and shall be given to a NATION bringing forth the fruits thereof" (Matt. xxi. 43). Referring to the "other husbandmen, which shall render Him the fruits in their seasons," I ask you where is this "NATION bringing forth the fruits thereof?" For the solution of this nineteenth century mystery you must look around to see what GREAT NATION in the WEST, "as the sand of the sea" for number, has already fulfilled most of the prophecies spoken of old concerning Israel.

Yes! You will find a nation with her colonies that is now "a nation and a company of nations," even in these "latter days," or the Christian Dispensation.

* The word "only," which is in italics, is not in the Hebrew! "A remnant shall return."—"Speaker's Commentary."

ARE THE GERMANS TAKING OUR TRADE FROM US?

THERE seems a belief gaining ground that the British are losing their foremost position in regard to foreign trade, and that the Germans are beating us at many points. This, of course, is a serious matter for the nation, if true, and it will become for us quite an alarming downfall if it be found to be the fact that trade is leaving our hands at last, and that the Germans, our most enterprising rivals, are beating us along the whole line. An answer to all these fears comes from Mr. Giffen, the statistician, who has been contributing an article on "Competition with English Foreign Trade," in the Board of Trade Journal. The inquiry was officially made by Mr. Giffen, at the request of the Board of Trade, to ascertain whether, as alleged by some lately, certain foreign countries, Germany to wit, have made greater relative progress in their imports and exports than we have as a nation. The conclusion at which Mr. Giffen has arrived is this: The trade of Germany has certainly advanced; but our own has not diminished. There is nothing to show that German trade has "enormously developed in comparison with the development of our own in the United Kingdom. Our British imports in 1875-7 and 1884-5 were valued at £381,000,000 at both periods, and the exports at £207,000,000 in 1875-7, and £223,000,000 in 1884-5. German imports at the two periods were £241,000,000 and £229,000,000 respectively; and the exports £130,000,000 and £151,000,000 for the same periods. It is thus clear that German trade has increased as to exports only, and that our export trade has increased, but not so fast as that of Germany. There is nothing to show here that the export trade of the latter has been gained at our expense. The fact of the matter is, that German trade with countries near to themselves has increased, as it was likely to do, faster than ours, with those countries; but in regard to markets where the two countries compete on equal terms as to distance, the trade of Germany is far inferior to that of Britain."

Digitized by Google

Thus Italy imports 50 millions sterling, of which 20 per cent. goes to this country and only 8 per cent. to Germany.

Egypt imports 7¼ millions, of which we get 47 per cent. and Germany 1 per cent.

China has 22 millions, of which our share is 28 per cent., Germany's none!

Japan 6 millions, we take 43 per cent., Germany 7.

British India's import trade is 67 millions; our share of it 75 per cent, Germany's only 0·2 per cent!

Australia's import trade is 61½ millions, giving us 52 per cent., and to Germany 0·3 per cent.

Outside Europe, says Mr. Giffen, "ours is the great preponderance of trade profits. But as respects the British possessions, the preponderance of the United Kingdom in the profits of their import trade is overwhelming." The largest traders in the world are the countries in whose imports we have the largest share. In comparing the trade exports of this country with Germany, France, and the United States, our chief competitors, Mr. Giffen found that the exports of the United Kingdom to each of these three, either exceed, or are equal, or are nearly equal, to the exports of any two of the three rivals put together to the third. The imports of France, Germany, and the United States, put together, amount to 455 millions in all, and the great bulk of this vast sum is made up by the value of the exports of the British nation to these three countries. In short, as regards the general trade of the world, Mr. Giffen finds that the "proportion of the business of the United Kingdom has in no important case diminished, while the amount of the business owing to the general increase of the imports of those countries named, must have largely increased.

In many important markets for the United Kingdom, Germany hardly appears at all. To European countries the trade of Germany has increased 17 millions odd, while that of Britain has increased only 6½ millions. To American countries it is the other way. Britain's increase is 12½ millions, Germany's nearly 9. For British possessions beyond sea the increase of exports from the United Kingdom is 20½ millions sterling; Germany's only a little over half-a-million! the great totals being 39 millions increase for Britain, and 26¾ millions only for Germany. As to France and the United States, the former shows no increase at all of trade in exports, but a decrease of £909,000, and the United States shows an increase of only £12,967,000.

The result then is that though Germany is succeeding in increasing her trade in some directions, there is no proof she is robbing us of ours. "Our predominance in the great common markets remains substantially what it was ten years ago; but we are not increasing (says Mr. Giffen) our emporium trade." "The great currents of trade are changing, and English merchants will do well not to allow such a change to overtake them unawares."

Such is the state of the facts, as statistics prove it to us. This nation is Israel, and we have the promise regarding wealth and the commerce that it brings with it, which Germany (that does not belong to Israel) has not. God gives us power to get wealth in order that by means of our wealth He may be able to establish His covenant which He sware to our fathers as it is this day" (Deut. viii. 18). The facts and figures we have quoted prove, we believe, that "the power to get wealth" resides in the British people in a manner and extent denied to other races of the earth (not excluding even American Manasseh), and we rejoice therefore to show our readers that our fears as to the curtailment of our commerce, which some have been mournfully anticipating, are not well grounded. God is faithful yet to His promises to His people, and blessed be His name He will be faithful to the end. Let Israel, therefore, praise His holy name!

A JUBILEE LETTER TO THE QUEEN, CONCERNING HER WORLD-WIDE AND IMPERISHABLE EMPIRE, AND HER IMMOVABLE THRONE.

FROM ONE OF HER ANTIPODEAN LOYAL SUBJECTS.

(Continued from page 141.)

PART II.

AND now, may it please your Majesty, we come to that portion of the subject which claims your more particular attention, for it is one in which yourself and the royal family are peculiarly interested. Sceptics and unbelievers in the sacred Scriptures have often asked, "Do not the Scriptures represent God as saying, 'I have made a covenant with My chosen, I have sworn unto David My servant; thy seed will I establish for ever, and build up thy throne to all generations'"? "How many generations," they ask, "have passed away since any successor to David has been found seated on his throne, or ruling the people of Israel? What can we think of the Bible if it contains these unfulfilled words and oaths of God?" Now, your Majesty will readily perceive that if there were no satisfactory answer to the first of these questions, it would prove to be a very formidable stumbling-block in the path of one who, though tempted to scepticism, desired to accept the Bible from a clear conviction of its truth. But happily, in this instance (as in others, when taken up with prayer, pains, and perseverance), the scriptural difficulty yields to the earnest study of the light with which Scripture and history illuminate the case. For, when Zedekiah, the last of David's successors at Jerusalem, was about to be dethroned, God remembered His promise to David, and pronounced this decree of two parts; "Thus saith the Lord God, remove the diadem, take off the crown; this shall not be the same (there shall be a change of persons, and of place), exalt the low and abase the high" (Ezek. xxi. 26). Who the "high one" was we readily perceive, for he was clearly mentioned in the preceding verse as "the profane, wicked prince of Israel." But it may be asked who was intended by the "low"? If we turn to the 17th chapter of the same prophecy, we shall find the question answered. Look at it, your Majesty, and see there the work, in the experience of one of your Majesty's progenitors of > "A divinity that shapes our ends, > Rough hew them as we will,"

or, however others may rough hew them for us. There God says to the prophet, "Son of man, put forth a riddle, and speak a parable unto the House of Israel (ver. 12). And in this riddle of a parable, the Great Manager, by whose permission or arrangement alone every scene in each grand tragedy or other drama is on this stage of mundane affairs enacted, displays for our information His whole scheme of operations, and the reasons for them at this climax of Israelitish trouble. The parable and explanation, the latter given at verse twelve, are to this effect:—"A great eagle (the king of Babylon); came to Lebanon (Syria) and took the highest branch of cedar (king Jeconiah) and carried it into a land of traffic (Babylon); he took also of the seed of the land (Zedekiah) and planted it; and it became a spreading vine of low stature (i.e., an inferior king). There was another great eagle (the king of Egypt): this vine did bend her roots towards him (by sending ambassadors into Egypt). Say thou, Thus saith the Lord, shall it prosper, shall he not pull up the roots thereof, that it wither? It shall wither in the furrows where it grew." This threat was fulfilled. His sons were slain in the sight of Nebuchadnezzar, who then put out his eyes, and put him in chains to carry him to Babylon. This was done because he despised the oath and broke the covenant of the Lord. It was thus that God "abased the high;" but how did he "exalt the low"? God next explains His plan (ver. 22). "I will also take of the highest branch of the high cedar (the eldest daughter of the king Zedekiah) and will set it (referring to her marriage, perhaps); I will crop off from the top of his young twigs a tender one, (a female) and will plant it upon a high mountain and eminent; in the mountain of the height of Israel (some place that is in the possession of Israel); and it shall bring forth boughs (colonies) and be a goodly cedar (or monarchy); and under it shall dwell all fowl of every wing (that is, in plain language, shall become a mighty monarchy, embracing all sorts and conditions, all tribes and families of men; a supremely dominating and protecting Power); in the shadow of the branches thereof shall they dwell."

Digitized by Google

What a revelation is here, your Majesty! a revelation of the planning, the ruling, the mighty working of the Lord of Hosts our personal God; the glorious BEING whom we devoutly and reverently worship. But was this purpose of Jehovah ever accomplished? Undoubtedly it was. Hidden from the eyes of men in general, for many generations, it has been treated as a poet's or a prophet's dream. Yet let us say what the prophet said to the Babylonian king, "But there is a God in heaven who revealeth secrets." And God has said, "Seek ye out of the book of the Lord and read; no one of these (revelations) shall fail, none shall want her mate (i.e., prophecy and fulfilment are as inseparable, finally, as husband and wife) for My mouth it hath commanded" (Isa. xxxiv. 16). And with regard to this particular purpose of His will He has with royal, imperial emphasis announced His pleasure thus:—"And all the trees of the field (kings, kingdoms or nations of the earth) shall know, that I, Jehovah, have brought down the high tree, have exalted the low tree, have dried up the green tree, and have made the dry tree to flourish; I, Jehovah, have spoken and have done it" (ver. 24). Do they all know it? Not yet; but in due time they shall, your Majesty. But the question now arises, where did the Lord plant this young and tender twig of royalty? Not in Judea, or we should have heard of it. Not in Palestine or Egypt, or we should have seen it and have known it. Where then? Is there not another land to which the words, "The mountain of the height of Israel" can apply? Of course there is. Where is it, then? Where is it? is the question. Now will your Majesty be graciously pleased to command, for it touches your Majesty's honour and interests, to call for your wise men, your sooth-sayers and philosophers, to reveal to you the position of this high and eminent mount? Where, we want to know, where was this low tree, this tender twig of royalty planted? Somewhere Jehovah "did set it." Somewhere He did "plant it" and make it grow and "flourish." Will not your Majesty say, "Come, ye learned commentators; come, ye deep-searching antiquarians, ye far-travelled geographers, ye wise men of all degrees, masters of arts, bachelors of arts, and all ye men of science, and tell me, your inquiring sovereign, where is this royal plant flourishing and growing? for I should, I ought to know, if any one on earth can tell me." Awaiting their tardy replies, for hitherto the most famous ones have been mute, and only some obscure ones have ventured to speak, would it not be well to "seek out of the Book of the Lord and read"? peradventure we may find light on this dark subject, a clue to guide us on the track. And we have not far to look before we find another link in the chain of obscurely revealed truths, truths only revealed darkly for obvious reasons. At the very same moment that God promised to David that his dynasty, unlike that of Saul, should never be superseded by another, but perpetuated for ever, He, foreseeing the apostacy of Israel and their consequent national banishment, together with the repentance of both Houses of Israel, resolved ultimately to have mercy upon them, and therefore "ordained a place" whither He might gather and protect the House of Israel, and afterwards bring Judah to join them. Thus the great King spake, "Moreover I will appoint a place for My people Israel, and will plant them that they may dwell in a place of their own, and move no more; neither shall the children of wickedness afflict them any more as before time" (2 Sam. vii. 10). Now what do these words, "I will appoint a place," mean? One very popular commentator, a good man, and a fair specimen of the rest, thus speaks of it, "I will appoint a place for My people," it was appointed long ago, yet they were disappointed, but now that appointment should be made good; Canaan should be made clearly their own without any ejection or molestation. This explanation is, as everyone must see at a glance, utterly inadequate. Thus, "I will appoint a place." Why, had they not a place already appointed? "I will plant them." But were they not then planted? Nothing could be more firmly planted than Israel in those latter days of David's reign. Had God spoken of Canaan, surely He would have used language different to this; surely He would have said, "I have appointed this place for My people. I have planted them." But He did not and He could not say this. For Jehovah was not yet able to add, as applying to Canaan those words which form the closing part of His prediction, "That they may move no more, neither shall the children of wickedness afflict them any more, as before time." For He foresaw their "frowardness," and the necessity of casting Israel, this "clay" of His, into the trough of adversity, that it might be trodden down by the feet of the heathen, and mellowed, and softened in the deep waters of tribulation, and then by the "living waters," purified and made fit for the divine Potter's operations. (Jer. xviii). Your Majesty knows well that, from the days of the good king Josiah, until the present time, those words of God have not been fulfilled in the peaceable possession by the Israelites of Canaan, from which "place" they have been ignominiously excluded for eighteen hundred years.

To offer such an explanation of our text as that quoted above to an anxious inquirer is the very way to turn him into a sceptic, and the stoutly, persistently maintaining it, is to run the risk of making him an infidel. Far better to do, as the old Scotch divine is said to have done, when he came to a hard knot, which he could not untie, thus, "Now brethren and sisters, here is a difficulty, and we must not pass it by, ye see; nor slur it over, but look at it brawly; look at it plainly in the face. That is what we do, look it plainly in the face, brethren. Now, let us pass to the next head of discourse." In other words, it would be better for the commentator to shelve the difficulty, for the present, and give no explanation at all rather than one that is incorrect on the face of it. "I will appoint a place" (2 Sam. vii 10), "I will ordain a place for My people" (1 Chr. xvii. 9), are words which so manifestly refer to some place, other than that of their present position, and to a deed of gift, at some time in the future of the ages, that it is hard to understand how a person of any thought can, for a moment, entertain a doubt of it. The words refer, your Majesty, to a place, a land in which the God of Israel would gather His people of the lost tribes together; in which they might find rest in God and multiply, that to them, "the House of Israel," their brethren the "House of Judah" might "walk" (Jer. iii. 18), and from hence "come together out of the (or that) land of the north to the land that I (said Jehovah) have given for an inheritance to your fathers" (Ibid); or, as it is expressed in Hosea (i. 11), "Then shall the children of Judah and the children of Israel be gathered together, and appoint themselves one head, and shall (that is, a vast company of them) come up out of the land (what land ?), and great shall be the day of Jezreel" (or Ephraim).

Digitized by Google

(To be continued.)

THE SECURITY OF GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND.

A CURIOUS confirmation of our often-repeated assertion that the British people being Israel are to be safe and secure in the hiding of their "shut-up doors," what time God's indignation and fiery jealousy is destroying the enemies of His people, comes to us from Dublin, where on the 6th Feb., the London correspondent of one of the papers of the Irish capital sent to it the following "Money Telegram." The sentence we have italicised was marked by our friend in sending us the extract, and his observation was the significant one, "the doors shut!" Our readers will judge whether the words are applicable or not to the present condition or crisis in which we find our nation to-day. Verily, Europe is "a cockpit" where a duel of a sanguinary nature is about to be fought out, and our country (the blessed "Isles of the West") is on the "very verge" of it—outside its dangers and terrors—"perfectly sheltered," safe and secure within their "chambers" and their "shut" doors, waiting till the Lord will give them leave to issue forth on their glorious work of evangelizing the nations of the earth. The correspondent wrote as follows :—

LONDON CORRESPONDENCE.

Special Telegram, 6th Feb., 1888.

There was a state of much anxiety in the City to-day. Money was not to be had on any terms for foreign ventures. There seemed to be a strong conviction that Russia will rush into war. She has been preparing steadily for over two years. She was affronted originally by the Bulgarian victories over her neighbour. These would been a source of joy to the Panslavists but for the astute diplomacy of Western Europe. She recoiled, and fell back on Germanic counsels. This was a desperate, if not fatal, move. Our Foreign Office, under the cool and unimpassioned control of Lord Salisbury, recognised the situation. There then was open a delicate question between England and Russia. With a keen perception of what was coming in the far distance, the Foreign Secretary hastened to settle all Central Asia disputes. The result is, to-day, with all the great empires of Europe buckling on their armour, her Majesty in her speech from the Throne, will be able to announce that her foreign relations are, as they were twelve months ago, of the most friendly description. This of itself is a greater triumph for the diplomacy of Lord Salisbury than ever his critics on the Address will give him credit for, and these critics will include no doubt, Lord Granville. The fact is that Great Britain and Ireland now stand perfectly sheltered at the very verge of the cockpit of Europe. On one side will be ranged their traditional enemies, Russia and France. On the other will be, if not their traditional friends, at all events Powers which have never done them any harm.

So wonderfully has God hidden His chosen people in the hollow of His hand and protected them on the verge of the "cockpit of Europe," while their traditional enemies and her constant friends are fighting out a duel such as the world never witnessed before, so awful in its circumstances and likely to be so tremendous in its consequences to the European world. Is it not a matter for the deepest thankfulness, that being Israel, our God should have placed us on the verge of the conflagration, "perfectly sheltered," instead of being inside the area of the convulsion? A fresh answer is supplied here to the Cui bono? querist, which one would think would be satisfactory to the most incredulous of our opponents! If war (and such a war!) is a sign of God's displeasure and national judgments against a sinning people; surely the marked and predestined protection of the British and Irish people from the most awful calamity (now impending) which has ever afflicted mankind, must be regarded as a sign of God's favour to His people, extended to them, not because of their deserts, but because of His faithfulness to His oath to our forefather Abraham, and because of the precious, precious, blood of Jesus, our nation's Redeemer, who has washed us, and covered us as a nation from the wrath to come, "by reason of the anointing" (Isa. x. 27, R.V.). We do not pretend to explain why God is so gracious and merciful to us as Israel: but the fact is so; and our secular writers chronicle the same, pointing to our national distinguishing mercies without, for a moment, attempting to account for them. We Anglo-Israelites are able to give a reason, but it is one we find ready to hand in the word of God. There we see that God has loved His people, the after seed of Abraham, not for any merits of their own, but for two distinct reasons, which He has deigned to give us in Deut. vii. 7—9, R.V., and they were these :—1st, "The Lord loved Israel;" and 2nd, "He desires to keep the oath that He sware unto our fathers." The whole passage addressed to Israel is so full of comfort and instruction to us nationally, that we quote the verses for our readers' satisfaction:—"The Lord did not set His love upon you nor choose you because ye were more in number than any people; for ye were the fewest of all people, but because the Lord loveth you, and because He would keep the oath which He sware unto your fathers hath the Lord brought you out with a mighty hand, and redeemed you out of the house of bondage, from the hand of Pharaoh, king of Egypt." The reason for God's favour and mercy thus shown, is next explained in the following verses, and it is startling to find that God's pity and love to His people is esteemed by Him to be evidence conclusive and distinct of His own Divinity!—"Know, therefore," says verse 9, "that the Lord thy God, He IS GOD, the faithful God, which keepeth covenant and mercy with them that love Him and keep His commandments, to a thousand generations, and repayeth them that hate Him to their face, to destroy them."

If the deliverance from Egypt was proof of the fact that our Lord is God, His mercy to us now in the present crisis is proof of the same fact, and thus Our Identity becomes valuable evidence to confound the infidel, and to build up believers in their most holy faith. God cannot change; what He was to Israel in Moses' days, he was to them in Isaiah's time and Malachi's epoch; in our own days too. For reasons the secular writer cannot explain He spares us now as the apple of His eye, and gives us deliverance from destruction; because we are His "firstborn Ephraim" (Jer. xxxi. 9). The Cui bono? question receives its answer from the current history of the hour, and he must be a degenerate Briton, who, knowing God's love and favour to his nation, fails to lift up his voice in praise and thanksgiving for the undeserved blessings He bestows upon us now! Let Israel praise the Lord for all His mercies, and for present and coming safety in the hour of the unparalleled suffering and misery rapidly approaching!

Correspondence.

DEAR PHILO-ISRAEL,—In the report of the Free Distribution Fund for January, BANNER, p. 20, the words, "A communication has come to hand from the influential society entitled the American Sunday-School Union," should be cancelled, since it might lead readers to think the "Union" had identified itself in propagating the subject of "Israel," which is certainly not the purpose of its mission.

It will, therefore, be more correct to understand that communication as coming from the Rev. W. P. Paxson, quite unconnected with the society, who, with his friends, are feeling so much interest in the "Identity." The remaining portion may stand as printed.

Yours truly, CHARLES HORNER.

February 29.

Digitized by Google

NOTICES.

All communications intended for the Editor, to be addressed: "Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Clifton, Bristol.

SUBSCRIPTIONS. £ s. d.

Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free 0 7 6
Two Copies (including Double Numbers) 0 13 6
Three Copies ,, ,, ,, ... 1 0 4
Four Copies ,, ,, ,, ... 1 5 6
Six Copies ,, ,, ,, ... 1 16 4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-grand, London, to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C., or F. W. PARRY & Co., 29, Paternoster-row, London.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

Contents Bills and Show Cards may be obtained on application to the Publishers.

Advertisements should be sent to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

Prepaid Advertisements are inserted at the rate of thirty words for 1s. 4d.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

THE LAST LECTURE of the Season will be delivered in the ASSOCIATION ROOMS, 14, King William-street, Charing Cross, W.C., on THURSDAY AFTERNOON NEXT, April 12, 1888, at 3.30 o'clock, by the Rev. JAMES S. FORSYTH. Subject: "Ancient Babylon." Admission free. Strangers will be made welcome. JAMES BILLINGTON, Sec.

New Work on the Identity of Lost Israel By the late BISHOP TITCOMB.

Now ready, in Cloth Gilt, Bevelled Boards, Imperial 8vo. Price 3s.; sent Post Free for Postal Order or Stamps.

A MESSAGE TO THE CHURCH FROM THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.

BY THE LATE

RT. REV. BISHOP TITCOMB, D.D.

ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet Court, Fleet Street.
F. W. PARRY & Co., 29, Paternoster Row, E.C.

WORKS BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

The Geography of the Gates. With Map and six full page, and one double-page, Illustrations, printed on plate paper. 208 pages, in handsome cloth, gilt Price 3s. 6d., post free 3s. 10d.

The History of the House of Israel. How They Were Lost and How They Were Found. Told for the children. Price 6d., cloth 1s.; post free 7d. and 1s. 1d. Fifth edition.

A Resume of the Scriptural Argument, Proving the Identity of the British Race with the Lost Ten Tribes. Price 1d.; 6s. per hundred, postage 6d.

Our Identity: What it is Not; What it is; and Our Obligations To-day in Respect to it Being a Lecture recently delivered in London by Philo-Israel, and published by special request. Price 2d., a reduction for quantities.

Price 6d., post free 7d.

THE MESSENGER,

A Monthly Expositor of the Fulfilment of the Scriptures in the Anglo-Saxon Folk, the Israel of God.

Each number contains contributions from high-class writers on Identity Subjects, selections from the Discourses of Rev. Dr. Wild, and a chapter of an Important New Work, entitled—

"RUSSIA JAPHET," by "OXONIAN,"

Author of "Israel's Wanderings," &c.

London: F. W. Parry & Co., 29, Paternoster-row.

PIANOFORTES, Harmoniums, American Organs. Why buy at shops inferior made instruments, and pay large profits, when you can buy direct from the Maker High-class Instruments, and save 50 per cent. by so doing? Full value allowed for old Instruments in exchange as part payment. Write for Price Lists and Testimonials to G. LINSTEAD, 2, Oseney Crescent, Camden Road, London. Established 1874.

ALL PUBLICATIONS ON THE IDENTITY OF THE LOST TRIBES OF ISRAEL

May be obtained at the Office of ROBERT BANKS & SON, RACQUET COURT, FLEET STREET.

The Banner of Israel (Weekly No. and Monthly Part). The Messenger, Two Witnesses, etc., forwarded immediately on publication at office rates. The Canadian Advance, post free for one year for 4s. 6d.

Catalogues post free on application.

Dr. JOSEPH WILD'S WORKS

The most useful works on the subject.

NEW EDITION JUST PUBLISHED.

THE LOST TEN TRIBES

Price 3s., post free 3s. 3d.

'We have much pleasure in directing attention to this handsome volume. . . We promise our readers that if they procure this work, and will peruse it, they will find 'Our Identity' discussed in a clear, novel, racy, and from an American point of view, which is sure to interest."—Banner of Israel.

THE FUTURE OF ISRAEL AND JUDAH,

Price 2s., post free 2s. 3d.

R. BANKS & SON, RACQUET-COURT, FLEET-ST.

Fifteenth Thousand.

BY REV. HENRY ROE.

Israel's World. Origin and Destiny of British Race, Colonies, and Empire. 2d., post free 2½d. Fifty post free from H. Roe for 4s. 9d.

Philo-Israel says: "I am perfectly delighted with your pamphlet."

C. E. Priestly, Esq., says: "For its size I never read a better work. I have given away two lots of fifty each, and enclose money for fifty more. I have sent it to clergymen, bishops, and archbishops."

Rev. Thomas Lowe says: "What the works of Mr. Hine failed to do in my enlightenment, 'Israel's World' has accomplished. I now read the Scriptures in a new and vivid light."

Going to Africa. 1s., post free 1s. 1d.

Fernando Po Mission. 1s., post free 1s. 1d.

West African Scenes. 2s., post free 2s. 2d.

Consecration. 2d., post free 2½d.

50 post free from H. Roe for 4s. 9d.

Robert Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.; and Rev. H. Roe, Dawley, Salop.

MR. EDWARD HINE has returned from his lecturing tour in America. Friends wishing to arrange for him to lecture can communicate with Isaac Loveland, Shoreham, near Sevenoaks, Kent, at present fixing no dates. Mr. Hine's publications have had a large circulation, and can be obtained of F. W. Parry & Co., 29, Paternoster Row, London, E.C.

Forty-Seven Identifications, 6d., post free 7d

Cui Bono? 6d., post free, 7d.

Lost Israel Found, 3s 6d., post free, 3s. 9d!

Also The Nation Warned by the Scripture Teachings of the Great Pyramid. 6d., post, 7d.

LADIES!! Our New Spring and Summer Patterns of Dress Materials are now ready, and we invite every reader of this paper to write for them. Patterns will be sent post free to any address. All wool Cashmeres, Merinos, Serges, Beiges, Lace Cloths, Costume Tweeds, Suitings, Checks, Stripes, and every description of Woollen Dress Materials in Black and all the newest and most stylish colours for the coming season; and in prices to suit all purses. Any length cut, and all parcels are sent carriage paid to any address, either by parcels post or rail. Write at once for patterns, and you will be astonished when you see them.

AN AMAZING OFFER!!—We shall give a very handsome Brocaded Silk Handkerchief with each dress-length ordered from us during this season.

LUTUS C. LEATHLEY, Armley, near Leeds.

FITS! FITS!! FITS!!!

ALL PERSONS SUFFERING FROM EPILEPSY should send name and address to JAMES OSBORNE, Medical Pharmacy, Ashbourne, Derbyshire who will forward, free of charge, full particulars, with Testimonials, of the most successful remedy ever discovered for this distressing malady. Sent to all parts of the world. Reference permitted to Rev. J. BAKER, M.A. 80, Bolton Road, Pendleton, Manchester.

Now ready, 40 pp., Price 4d., post free, 13, Baxter-street, Middlesboro'.

"HOME RULE"

IN THE LIGHT OF ANGLO-ISRAELISM.

Neither Party in the State hold all the truth. What the Bible says of Home Rule, and the kind of settlement which will take place. Our national duty to Ireland; whether as a question of policy or right.

HOME RULE ALL ROUND.

SOUND, PURE, WHITE TEETH!

Those who value these will try

CARBOLINE

(The Great Sanitary Tooth Paste).

1/6 & 2/6 per Pot.

Through Chemists, or post free from the Makers,

GEORGE & WELCH

WORCESTER.

Lancet writes:—"To save the teeth use a good carbolic daily."

LUNG TONIC

SAVE YOUR LIVES BY TAKING

OWBRIDGE'S LUNG TONIC

THE MIGHTY HEALER.

It has a power over disease hitherto unknown in Medicine.

Are you at all Weak-chested or inclined to be Consumptive, with just a touch of Cough now and then?

"Try this Wonderful Medicine." The Cough and Weakness will disappear as if by magic, and you will feel a strength and power you never had before.

HAVE YOU A COUGH?
A DOSE WILL RELIEVE IT!
HAVE YOU A COLD?
A DOSE AT BEDTIME WILL REMOVE IT.

Bronchitis & Asthma it relieves instantly

The Spasms of Coughing so dreadful in Whooping Cough become less with each dose of the medicine.

Prepared by W. T. OWBRIDGE, Chemist, Hull

Sold in Bottles 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d. and 11s. by all Chemists and Patent Medicine Vendors. Wholesale all London and Provincial Houses.

HUMAN LIFE.—FIFTY YEARS' Record of Facts, Principles, and Discoveries (just published, complete) Relating to the Improvement and Preservation of Human Life on Earth. Origin and true treatment of diseases. A series of articles by DR. SAMUEL BIRLEY, M.D., Ph.D. Book form, 50 pages. SENT FREE to every applicant by the publishers, GORDON B. MURRAY & CO., 50, Theobald's-road, Holborn, E.C. Write to-day.

RHEUMATISM, GOUT, SCIATICA, LUMBAGO, INDIGESTION, CONSTIPATION, LIVER & KIDNEY COMPLAINTS, NERVOUS DISORDERS, LADIES' AILMENTS, ETC. Promptly Relieved and CURED BY

HARNESS' ELECTROPATHIC BELT

ALL sufferers should read "Harness' Guide to Health," free by post, containing copies of Thousands of Testimonials. Every man and woman in search of Health, Strength, and Energy, should at once send a 21s. postal order to the Medical Battery Co. Ltd. 52, OXFORD ST. LONDON, W. and procure one of these famous Belts, and they may rely upon being CURED

Corner of Rathbone Place

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. F. W. PARRY (late GUEST & Co.), 29 PATERNOSTER-ROW WEDNESDAY, APRIL 11, 1888. [All rights reserved.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."

(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. XII., No. 590. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, APRIL 18, 1888. [PRICE ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
Lord Brassey on the Federation of the Empire	157
"The Dispersion Among the Greeks." By J. C. H. Mehl	158
The Testimony of Israel, and the Testimony of Judah, that God Is—and Is Faithful and True	160
Jubilee Letter to the Queen, concerning Her World-wide and Imperishable Empire, and Her Immovable Throne. From one of Her Antipodean Loyal Subjects. Part III.	161
Review	163

LORD BRASSEY ON THE FEDERATION OF THE EMPIRE.

LORD BRASSEY lately gave an address before the Cambridge University branch of the Imperial Federation League, when some of his utterances were so important from a BANNER point of view that they ought to find a place in these pages. Professor Seeley presided, and cordial was the welcome that the audience gave to his lordship, the Treasurer of the League. Speaking of the loyal manner in which the Australian colonists regard the Queen and Mother Country, and how cordially they celebrated the Jubilee last year in Melbourne, he went on to notice the immense advances this nation had made during Her Majesty's reign. He thought we should be proud of the greatness of the country because "she was the Mother land of many nations, in a high and advancing stage of civilization." Here Lord Brassey inadvertently admitted ours was already "a nation and a company of nations," and as everybody knows that "the company of nations," our own colonies, are loyal at the heart to our Queen and her throne, the unique fact hitherto unknown in history is realised in such wise that we British have developed into that "nation and fulness of nations" which God promised to the afterseed of Jacob, Joseph, and Ephraim, but to no other race on the face of the globe. The conclusion therefore is that the British are Ephraim-Israel, "the Ten-Tribed kingdom" of the chosen nation, and no one has proved it with greater clearness than Lord Brassey! He went on then thus:—

What were the conclusions which an intelligent traveller from the old country might draw with reference to the ties which bound the colonies to the mother country? If he looked at their society and family life he would find the same manners, the same habits, the same ways of viewing circumstances and things. Their English tastes were shown in the houses they built, the clothes they wore, the food they ate, and the goods they bought. The national character of the Anglo-Saxon race was shown as strongly as in the mother country in the spirited devotion of the people to manly sports and pastimes. They also had a common faith, a common literature, and the same dear mother tongue, the only conclusion therefore to be drawn seemed to be that the ties which bound the colonies to the mother country were stronger than those which any legislature or statesmanship could contrive, and were inherent in the innermost life and character of the people. (Cheers.) The speaker proceeded to refer to the feelings expressed by public men at the Cape of Good Hope, men not of our own race or speaking our language. Mr. Hofmeyer, the head of the Dutch party in the Cape Parliament, had told them how satisfied his people were to live under British rule. There was a party at the Cape which regarded with disfavour the dependence of the present Premier, Sir Gordon Sprigg, on the Dutch vote or Africander Bund, but from another point of view they might hail with the greatest satisfaction the success which an Englishman had achieved in winning the confidence of the Dutch. While conducting the Government to their satisfaction, he was thoroughly loyal to his own nationality. It was true Baron Hubner spoke in discouraging terms of our position at the Cape; but a much more cheerful impression was conveyed by Sir Hercules Robinson and other eminent men with whom he had conversed. The railways had become a factor of union. They would lead to closer relations between the Free State, the Transvaal, and the seaboard colonies. Unity in feeling and action on the part of the true English-speaking and Dutch-speaking races was the true keynote of future policy in that part of the Empire. As to the feeling in this country with regard to the question of Federation, Lord Brassey referred to the Colonial Exhibition as an important event in the history of the question. Who would have deemed it possible twenty years ago? Then there was the Colonial Institute about which there had, no doubt, been a good deal of discussion; but where doubts were expressed they referred rather to the details than to the merits of the question itself. Practically the objections had been overcome, and the Institute had been accepted as one of the proposals which should be carried to completion. Then there were the establishment of the Imperial Federation League and the altered tone of the Press and of society towards colonial relations. (Hear, hear.) Let them cultivate these kindly sentiments, for nothing would more tend to keep the people of the colonies with us than that the mother country should show a warm sympathy for those brave sons who had gone forth to convert the wildernesses of the colonies into gardens, and form happy and prosperous homes in those waste places. (Cheers.) But, apart from a sentiment, there were advantages to be gained by the mother country and colonies alike in closer relations. The vitality, growth, and expansion of trade between them served to show that the federal union was worth something from a British point of view. One of the difficulties of the hour was to find employment for our capital. The colonies formed a valuable and inexhaustible field for it. The Australian loans were expended largely upon concerns which were of direct benefit to the mother country who supplied the materials. Indeed but for the openings in these directions the difficulty of our surplus capital would have been much intensified. With regard to the military aspect of the question, it was true we had no fixed plan whereby on a great occasion of necessity we could call on the colonies to come to our assistance; but we had seen by recent experience how ready they were to stand shoulder to shoulder with us to resist the enemies of the United Empire. (Cheers.) His lordship proceeded to point out that the high efficiency required in the modern navy was unattainable, except in a force maintained on a large scale, in consequence of there being so many distinct specialities; and, after touching upon diplomacy, submitted that he had abundantly proved Federation to be a thing to be desired. He passed on to consider whether it was desirable at the present stage to propose a plan for the purpose and, after pointing out some of the difficulties which confronted them, he came to the conclusion that it was wise at the present time to refrain from proposing any specific plan of Federation.

Digitized by Google

So far Lord Brassey. His testimony confirms the universal opinion that the nation colonies of Australasia, as well as the rising nation in the South of Africa, are well content to abide under the shadow of their old Mother in the West, and that they have no desire, like the United States, to set up on their own account. The Federation of "the nation and company of Israelite nations" is not indeed yet an accomplished fact, and it is too early of course to guess how it is to be brought about politically. But we, who know who the British are, and what is to be their ultimate destiny in the world, can well afford to wait with patience for the Lord's time, and watch the action of His Providence in bringing Federation to pass. Meanwhile many causes are at work, as Lord Brassey said, to lead to the glorious result at last, and we must with patience remove, meanwhile, all obstacles in the way, and adopt all needful measures to bring about the longed-for Federation. An attempt has been made we are aware by those who hold the Teutonic Theory, to show a distinction between the promises in Gen. xxxv. 11 and Gen. xlviii. 19. Admitting the latter verse to apply to the colonial nations of Britain as the multitude or "fulness of nations" promised, they declare that "the nation and company of nations" mentioned in Gen. xxxv. 11 represent Britain and the company of Protestant Continental nations (Germany, Norway, Sweden and Denmark, with America we suppose), which answer in their view to the "Ten Tribes." We cannot see the matter in that light. "Goyi, ookhal Goyim," in Gen. xxxv. 11 certainly means "a company of nations" and such our colonies have become. There is no need to travel beyond the British colonies, which do respond to every test of an Israelitish origin, or to search on the continent for "nations" which have not a point in common with Israel, for "a company of nations of the Israelite stock."

The so-called Protestant nations of the Continent admit no sort of connection with the British Empire; and have none of the Abrahamic promises. We cannot then find in them any fulfilment of Jacob's blessings. The Federation of the British Colonial nations is close at hand, and all men see it to be so. But of all the impossible things to contemplate there is none so outrageously impossible in the future as the union in any way or sense of the British with the German (or Prussian), the Scandinavian and the Danish peoples of Europe. The Federation of the British nation and her many colonies as nations is a thing to be desired, and it is predicted in Scripture. But the companionship with Britain of certain continental nations as "a nation and company of nations" would not be a Scriptural idea at all, for it would join a nation (Britain) possessed of all the Abrahamic blessings, with several others not enjoying even one of them, each living under alien sovereigns, each repudiating the Israelitish Sabbath, and the Decalogue, and all without sympathy for the great heathen world lying in the wicked one, since they refuse to carry the Gospel to all nations, families and kindreds of the world, by reason of lack of means to do it, power to carry it out, and love of souls to desire the holy work.

"THE DISPERSION AMONG THE GREEKS."

(JOHN VII. 35, R.V.)

A STUDY.

By J. C. H. MEHL.

PART I.

IT might be profitable to inquire into the meaning which the Jews who uttered these words must have attached to them. First let us realise the occasion, the dramatis personae surrounding our Lord Jesus Christ, in this seventh chapter of St. John's Gospel. It was at a time when the waves of conflicting currents of public opinion as to who Jesus of Nazareth was were running high. The multitude were disposed to believe him to be the Messiah, for they reasoned and said: "When Christ shall come will He do more signs than those which this man hath done?" The Pharisees having heard that the multitude murmured such things, and the chief priests had sent officers to take Him, it was in their presence and to them and to the Jews (who must not be altogether confounded with the multitude of whom the Pharisees said: "this multitude which knoweth not the law is accursed"), that Christ had spoken these warning words, "Yet a little while I am with you and I go unto Him that sent Me. Ye shall seek Me and shall not find Me, and where I am ye cannot come." Upon this the Jews, the regular inhabitants of Jerusalem and Judæa, familiar with the law and traditions of their people, said among themselves, "Whither will this man go that we shall not find Him? Will He go unto the Dispersion among (margin Gr. of) the Greeks, and teach the Greeks?"

Now, perhaps, owing to the less correct rendering in the A.V., where we read "the dispersed among the Gentiles, and teach the Gentiles," this dispersion here spoken of has always been supposed to be identical with that referred to in James i. 1, and 1 Pet. i. 1, according to A.V., respectively, "the Twelve Tribes which are scattered abroad" and "the strangers scattered throughout Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia and Bithynia," but rendered more correctly, according to R.V., "the Twelve Tribes which are of the Dispersion" and "the sojourners of the Dispersion." At any rate the sentence has always been understood to express the supposition on the part of the Jews, that Jesus was implying His intention to go to the dispersed people of Israel, known and spoken of all over the Roman world as Jews, still owning the Mosaic law and sending annually their contingents of worshippers to the feasts at Jerusalem. That these used to congregate there from every part of the civilised or Roman world, from North, South, East and West, and speaking various languages, the copious list of names of nationality given in Acts ii. 9, 10, 11, amply proves; not a few of the regions from which these strangers came being again alluded to in the introductory verse in 1 Pet. 1 stated above. They were truly sojourners outside their own land, yet recognised everywhere, and also by their brethren who were still enjoying a semblance of national existence in Judæa under the Roman empire. They still sent or brought to the temple worship in Jerusalem the tribute of treasure which their faith or patriotism or superstition prompted them to deposit there; they were, in fact in communion with their kinsmen at Jerusalem, and then as now, had little or no intercourse with the Gentiles around them, except for the purposes of traffic. Doubtless the majority of them were, strictly speaking, Jews, that is descendants of the tribe of Judah, whether of those who had not returned from the Babylonish Captivity or of others who had again scattered abroad, especially after the disastrous termination of their nation's struggle for freedom from a foreign yoke under the Maccabees. But amongst them, not to speak of the tribe of Benjamin, which at the time of the secession of All-Israel from the House of David was left with king Rehoboam, nor of "the priests and Levites that were in All-Israel" and who "resorted to him," we learn further on in the same chapter (2 Chron. xi. 17) that "after them out of all the tribes of Israel . . . . many came to Jerusalem to sacrifice unto the Lord, the God of their fathers;" and although we are led to gather that the sojourn of these Israelites amidst their brethren of Judah did not prove permanent for the greater number of them, neither on this nor on the following occasion (see chapters xv. 9 and xxx. 11) yet is it impossible to suppose that in process of time an admixture from Israel should not have become incorporated with Judah; as we also find it casually mentioned in Luke ii. that Anna the prophetess was of the tribe of Asher. Besides, so far back as 2 Kings x. 32, we hear of Israel being "cut short" by the Syrians under Hazael, and from that time on until a full end was made by the final carrying away of them by Shalmaneser, King of Assyria, 721 B.C., it is easy to conceive how many out of All-Israel must have scattered inland, Eastward; some of them to lose their nationality, others to mingle again with their kindred of Judah. Consequently in his day, St. James could thus address the "Twelve Tribes of the dispersion," and St. Paul, before King Agrippa, allude to them as at that time in a body worshipping God, and clinging to the "hope of Israel." He calls himself a Jew, although when occasion offers he is not slow to assert his descent from Benjamin.

Digitized by Google

Having then established to whom the expressions, "sojourners of the dispersion" and "the Twelve Tribes of the dispersion" must have applied, it remains to be proved whether or not the "Dispersion among the Greeks" is a synonymous term. But before proceeding further let us once more take a glance at a map of Palestine and the regions Westward. Is it not still more evident that, while in terror of the Assyrian yoke, many out of Israel would escape by sea, as in point of fact it has been proved they did, finding their way even to the isles afar off, the British Isles; others no doubt would settle nearer home; For there was the West coast of Asia Minor safe enough from the swoop of the Assyrian; there were favoured islands in the Ægæan sea; and beyond these again there lay the coast of Greece—Greece at that time with her history scarce begun.

Of the bulk of the Ten-Tribed House of Israel whose fate it was to be carried away as captives from B.C., 750-720, "into Halah and Habor and by the river Gozan and into the cities of the Medes," we cannot speak now: suffice it to say that they never returned to join their brethren of Judah, and that Josephus, the Jewish historian, writing after the destruction of Jerusalem by Titus, witnesses of them at that period that they still existed, an "immense multitude beyond the Euphrates," out of sight—"Judah and the children of Israel his companions" were in evidence and well known; but "Ephraim and the children of Israel his companions" were far removed and becoming lost to human ken (see Ez. xxxvii. 16).

But to return to our main subject. It is clear from the context that whatever was meant by the expression "dispersion among the Greeks," in the eyes of the reasoning and perplexed Jews, the Lord's going thither would practically amount to His being completely lost sight of. They say: "Whither will this man go that we shall not find Him?" and then they arrive at what seems to them the only conclusion. Now, as ordinarily understood, the Jews were here giving expression to a supposition entirely foreign to their habit of thought, namely, that this great Rabbi there before them, was about not only to seek out their kindred known as Jews, and sojourning in all parts of the Roman Empire, but also to instruct the Gentiles there; and, let it be repeated, this twofold action of His they must, according to this interpretation, have supposed to lead to His being entirely and for ever lost sight of! Why so, when it was no new thing for them to see in their midst from time to time every year, men of their own race coming from those regions and returning thither again? Some twenty-eight years afterwards the answer of the chief of the Jews in Rome, whom St. Paul had summoned (Acts xxviii. 20), clearly shews that even at so great a distance from Jerusalem they still looked upon that city as the centre of their religious interests, and that as regards any occurrences affecting these, there was no difficulty of intercommunication. But can this saying of the Jews really bear such an explanation? The "sojourners of the Dispersion" were not only scattered among the Greeks. The very fact of their speaking divers tongues (Acts ii.) proves this. There were, for instance, Jews from Parthia, Media and Mesopotamia, the most outlying provinces of the Roman Empire Eastward, who were not living among a Greek population, but who had to be addressed in the languages of those countries. The Twelve Tribes of the Dispersion, as this term was understood by St. James and St. Paul, could by no means be viewed as dwelling to so great an extent or so exclusively among people of Greek nationality as to make the expression under discussion applicable; far less could the Jews have added "and teach the Greeks," as in many parts there were no Greeks; neither can it in reason be maintained that in their minds the term Greek was tantamount to Gentile: for their countrymen inviting them from these distant climes proved by the languages they had adopted that in many cases the Greek element was more foreign to them than to the inhabitants of Jerusalem itself.

True, these perplexed Jews might have been under some misconception or expressed themselves ignorantly. It would be well to inquire further and see if we can trace the existence among them of a notion or tradition of a dispersion of some of their kindred having taken place in their earlier history, and of such a nature as to cause these to be so absorbed among the people of Greek nationality and speech, as to make them indistinguishable; and, having made such a discovery, to search still further whether there are any inspired statements in the New Testament corroborating such a fact.

Now there is a remarkable passage in the Apocrypha in 1 Macc. xii., the general historical reliability of which book is not disputed. Jonathan, the high Priest and brother of Judas Maccabeus, having been able to follow up the successes of his brother, yet thought it wise to strengthen himself by forming alliances with the Romans and the Lacedemonians, the inhabitants of the southern portion of Greece, now called Morea. The letter sent to these latter is given in full, and also a copy of a letter therein alluded to, addressed on a former occasion by one Areus, king of the Lacedemonians, to Onias the high Priest at Jerusalem. This latter runs thus: "It is found in writing that the Lacedemonians and Jews are brethren, and that they are of the stock of Abraham. Now, therefore, since this is come to our knowledge, you shall do well to write unto us of your prosperity. We do write back again to you, that your cattle and goods are ours, and ours are yours. We do command therefore our ambassadors to make a report unto you in this wise." On the strength of this relationship, the message of Jonathan, the commencement of which need not be quoted, continues: "Therefore we also, albeit we need none of these things, for that we have the holy books of scripture in our hands to comfort us, have nevertheless attempted to send unto you for the renewing of brotherhood and friendship, lest we should become strangers unto you altogether . . . . We therefore at all times without ceasing, both in our feasts and other convenient days, do remember you in the sacrifices we offer, and in our prayers, as reason is, and as it becometh us to think upon our brethren; and we are right glad of your honour . . . . For this cause we chose Numenius and Antipater. We commanded them also to go unto you, and to deliver you our letters concerning the renewing of our brotherhood. Wherefore now ye shall do well to give us an answer of peace." Of Sparta it is said in Dymock's "Classical Dictionary" that "at one period this city might be considered the metropolis of Greece;" thus giving prominence to Lacedemonia, of which it was the capital. So that the probability is (it being also added in Macc. xii. that the message was sent to other places as well) that the kinship recognised on both sides was supposed to extend also to the rest of the Greek nation. Now it was but cir. 155 B.C., when this brotherhood was thus acknowledged, and in fact made use of by Jonathan and Simon Maccabeus (under which latter the league was subsequently confirmed) in order to induce this very representative portion of the Greek people to enter into an alliance of amity with the Jews of Judæa; consequently the consciousness of this affinity of race was not likely to have been lost in the course of the few generations that led up to the time when Pharisees, priests, Jews, and the multitude surrounding our Saviour, were thus contending and wondering. Moreover Josephus, later on, distinctly refers to this transaction (see Josephus, Antiquities, book xiii. chap. v.). May we not therefore, suppose that the great Apostle Paul, the sphere of whose labours was so evidently marked out for him, as leading him ever and again by providences and visions to preach the Gospel among the Greeks (as we shall prove presently) who had also sat at the feet of Gamaliel, learned assuredly in all matters concerning the history of the chosen people, must have been well acquainted with this persuasion indisputably prevailing among the Jews in his day? Probably, highly educated as he was, he had cognisance of links in the chain of evidence which are missing now; neither can the writer of this paper suppose for a moment that some of the learned and able contributors to the BANNER or the Editor himself could not, if they took up this subject, throw more satisfactory light upon it. Meanwhile the reader's patience is invited in considering a few further suggestions.

Digitized by Google

In searching into the early history of Greece,* going back to the limits where fact is found inextricably mixed with fable, we read of migrations into the country of various tribes from the East, who in time subdued the more original inhabitants. These tribes first appear under the general name of Achæans (supposed to mean nobles); thus they are spoken of in Homer. But subsequently this appellation had a more limited application while the rest of the Hellenic peoples went by the name of Dorians, Ionians and Æolians (i.e., mixed). According to the fable the forefather of the Ionians and Achæans was Xuthos (i.e., rejected, outcast). Dating from a later period, but still belonging to the mythical age, we hear of Cadmos from Phœnicia, Danaus from Egypt, Pelops from Phrygia, founding colonies and cities. It must be left to the reader to make as much or as little of these data as they may suggest. They cannot be dealt with on the lines of strict historical criticism; yet they indicate that the current of migration proceeded from a region which must have brought these wanderers into contact, at least, with Israel in Palestine, if not in Egypt and in the wilderness. The earliest authentic dates do not go so far back by six or seven centuries as the conquest of Canaan; and it will be conceded that the story of the mythical hero of the Greeks, Hercules, reads much like an adaptation with fanciful additions of that of Samson the Danite, to their own mythology. All this can go no further, however, than point to some degree of contact; yet in the absence of further information such indistinct traces have their value, followed as they are by the direct historical proof that both the Lacedemonians (as representative of the Greek nation) and the Jews were convinced of the kinship subsisting between them.

(To be continued).

THE King of Norway and Sweden is said to be the only crowned head in Europe who refused to send congratulations to the Pope on his sacerdotal jubilee. According to the census of 1880, there were only 810 Catholics in Sweden, and a proportionately small number in Norway.

* For the following histo rical statements the writer consulted Dr. G. Weber's Weltgeschichte.

THE TESTIMONY OF ISRAEL, AND THE TESTIMONY OF JUDAH, THAT GOD IS—AND IS FAITHFUL AND TRUE.

THE subject now before us is deeply interesting to us as a nation, and as Christians. It is the testimony or evidence afforded by the Two Houses of Israel that the Lord, He is the God, and that to His promises and His denunciations and threatenings He is faithful and true. But is it true that God requires man's evidence to certify that He exists? and that, existing, He is true to His word? The statement to man's judgment seems incredible; yet on the evidence of God's word we know that this thing is true! God does look for man's testimony to both facts, and He has declared that He will prove both propositions by the feeble instrumentality of fallen beings like ourselves! But we are now dealing with a legal subject; we are to speak of legal evidence of matters to which God Almighty is a party, and we must be bound by the laws of evidence which God prescribes in such things. As in earthly tribunals, we find in some cases (such as perjury and breaches of promise), that the evidence of a single witness is deemed legally inadmissable to establish a fact, however credible that one witness may be; so, in the Courts of God, He has prescribed in what matters the evidence of one witness is insufficient to convict or to establish a grave point in issue. Thus, in Num. xxx. 30; Deut. xvii. 6, and xix. 15, we have it clearly laid down, that in capital cases no conviction can take place if the accused person be implicated by one witness only. "One witness shall not testify against any person that he die." Here is a law of God that, under Moses, admitted of no deviation—"At the mouth of two witnesses or three witnesses, shall he that is to die be put to death."

But this law had a wider scope. It included questions of Identity under Moses' law. Hear what the Pharisees said to the Lord Jesus in regard to His claim to be the Messiah—"Thou bearest witness of Thyself; Thy witness is not true" (John viii. 13-18.) The Lord admitted the cogency of the appeal to Moses' law in regard to a single witness, for He said in reply, "Even if I bear witness of Myself, My witness is true, for I know whence I came and whither I go." "I am not alone, but I and My Father that sent Me" (ver. 14.) "Yea, and in your law it is written, that the witness of two men is true; I am He that beareth witness of Myself, and the Father that sent Me beareth witness of Me;" thus constituting a valid dual testimony to the fact of Christ's divinity. In Heb. x. 28, St. Paul applies this rule of evidence to Moses' law in his day, and thus it appears that the Hebrew law, being God's law, requires in all weighty cases, and in the case even of the identity of the Son of God as well, that the matter at issue must have a dual testimony, or two witnesses at least, to support it. Such being the case, we now come to the fact that God has decided that His own Being must be certified and established by human evidence. He determines, too, that besides the fact that He is, He will prove by human evidence that He is a God who keepeth covenant and truth. In Isa. xliii. 10-12, we have God's declaration that, to prove that He is God, He has set apart His witnesses. "Ye are My witnesses," He declares in that passage; and again in Isa. xliv. 8, "that I am God." But who are these "witnesses of God"? They are two manner of peoples and both of one race! They are the blind people that have eyes, and also they are the deaf people that have ears (Isa. xliii. 8). These are the characteristics of two races or nations. Surely not of one only! Who are "the blind people that have eyes"? Let Scripture inform us. Isa. xlii 19, tells us. There it is declared, "Who is blind but My servant"—the Lord's servant; he that is at peace with Him; therefore the converted ones, Jesus' bought and redeemed ones, whose eyes are holden that they cannot see their origin. These also are the deaf ones, who being the Lord's messengers, refuse to listen to the message, but, repenting, go out to deliver it.

Digitized by Google

The House of Israel, in short, and the House of Judah are here depicted. The former the Lord's obedient ones, proclaiming His Gospel, but blind and deaf the while to one part of His designs regarding them. The latter, also (the House of Judah), are deaf and blind, as Isa. vi. 9, also proves; but these, being the Lord's messengers, have refused to deliver His Message and are still disobedient to His call. Israel proves that God exists, because they first refused obedience, but at last obeyed His calls, as predicted in Isa. lxv. 1. But Judah proves the same fact, because being called they rebelled, and finally refused to carry out the Lord's will in regard to the publication of the Gospel (see Isa. lxv. 2, and Matt. xxvii. 25). Our Lord Jesus Christ declares this fact regarding the Two Houses in the parable of the two sons in Matt. xxi, 28, et seq. There, in figure, He taught this same truth when He said to the Jews, "What think ye? A man had two sons; and he came to the first (the firstborn Ephraim) and said, Son, go work to-day in the vineyard. And he answered and said, I will not; but afterwards he repented himself and went. And he came to the second (Judah) and said likewise. And he answered and said, I go, sir, and went not. Whether of the twain did the will of the father? They say, The first (Ephraim)." The next parable (ver. 33, et seq.) follows up the teaching, and declares that the Jews, or Judah, were the disobedient, rebellious House in possession of the vineyard, who would at last kill the Son of God. Then, when violently cast out of possession by the Father, God, it declared, would give the vineyard to other husbandmen (ver. 41.) These would (as Israel) yield the fruits of the kingdom of God to Him, and they would be, as a nation, the blessed recipients of all that is meant by "the kingdom."

These predictions thus are recorded in the Old as well in the New Testament, and they point by a double line of proof to the Two Houses of Israel as "God's witnesses"—witnesses to His divinity, and to His faithfulness to His promises and His threatenings. Judah stands to-day in rebellion as Israel "disobedient." Israel "obedient," as the British, shine forth now as His blessed ones! Judah refuses to believe in the Son of God, and is rejected. Israel, "disobedient" once, now accepts Christ, and therefore "blossoms and buds, and fills the face of the world with fruit," "obedient" at last.

But let this be noted. Both these sets of facts must be brought out and proved by the same race of men, and at the same time. Accordingly, the Two Houses of Israel, not any Gentile, non-Israelite race at all are selected. The Lord knows only the children of Israel (Amos iii. 1, 2.) Therefore for rebellion He punishes them; when obedient, He blesses them—but never, never any Gentile race whatever. "He showeth His words, His statutes, and His judgments unto Israel and Jacob. He hath not dealt so with any nation" (Psa. cxlvii. 19, 20.) The testimony of Deut. xxviii. 1—14, and 15 to the end of that chapter, is to the like effect as to the two or dual witnesses. Israel obedient (i.e., Ephraim) receives mercy and favour (ver. 1—15.) Israel disobedient (i. e., Judah) receives God's anger and punishment (ver. 15 to end.) The children of Israel, however, being thus under Divine blessing and cursing at one and the same time, must needs have been divided into two families, having parallel histories. We find, accordingly, that early in the nations' history, God recognised their dual aspect. Psa. cxiv. 2, proves this; also 2 Sam. ii. 4—11, v. 5, xix. 41—43; 1 Kings xi. xii.; Jerem. iii. 18; Hos. i. 11, &c.

The one House was for disobedience set apart for terrible punishment, which they are undergoing at this hour. The other are enjoying mercies and blessings inconceivable for "obedience" to God's will and acceptation of the sacrifice by blood of the Lord Jesus Christ, God's Son. To Ephraim-Israel was given the birthright (1 Chron. v. 1, 2,) and all that appertains thereto, namely: 1, wonderful multitudinousness; 2, vast colonies, as one of its results; 3, abnormal wealth, as arising from the nation's expansion; 4, the Gates of their foreign enemies, therefore the sea power; 5, the Heathen Empire. Besides these, the Lord gave Israel the following spiritual gifts, to make which effectual the temporal gifts were needed, namely—

1. His Word.
2. His Sabbaths.
3. The evangelizing function embracing all nations.
4. The love of souls.
5. The Decalogue.
6. The outpouring of His Holy Spirit in revivals of religion.

In short, God has His two witnesses whom He made, formed, and created for His own glory, to show forth His praise. They are His people whom while obedient He blesses, and while disobedient He punishes; not vindictively, but paternally. These two witnesses afford a valid legal testimony to prove two points; 1st, that God who made them, and foresaw the end from the beginning and predicted it, exists; and 2nd, that He is faithful and true to all His promises and all His threats.

In conclusion, let none say henceforth that the single evidence of "the Jewish people" (that is, of the Jews only), suffices to prove the existence and truth of God, and of His blessed Word. That view is erroneous! God requires two witnesses to establish these facts, not one of the Jews only; and blessed be His name, He has them both. To Him be all the praise!

A JUBILEE LETTER TO THE QUEEN, CONCERNING HER WORLD-WIDE AND IMPERISHABLE EMPIRE, AND HER IMMOVABLE THRONE.

FROM ONE OF HER ANTIPODEAN LOYAL SUBJECTS.

(Concluded from page 155.)

PART III.

HERE another question naturally arises; it is this, Is there a land to which either Scripture or history points as that of which the House of Israel, or any portion of it, had in the "youth of the world" taken possession? And to this we may ask in reply, Do they not point to the British Isles, and especially to Ireland? The ancient historians of Ireland tell of a people called the Tuatha de Danaan, or the family or tribe of Dan. Now we ask, How came they there? It is not easy to answer. But nearly thirteen hundred years before our Lord's advent, Dan was reproached, in the song of Deborah, for remaining in the ships, while his brethren were contending for life and liberty against the common foe (Judges v. 17) Is there not reason to conclude that during the many hundred years that elapsed between that time and the capture of Zedekiah, they had extended their commerce, as the Phœnicians had done, far to the west, and to those western isles which yielded tin and other metals? What mean those words, "Dan and Javan going to and fro occupied in the fairs of Tyrus with bright iron" (query, tin among other things). Cornwall, Wales, and the north of Ireland were all indebted, it is more than probable, for a portion of their population to the ships of Dan and Phœnicia. Nor can we wonder that when the kings of Assyria were carrying the tribes of Israel to Media and Assyria a large portion of the tribe of Dan should flee away in their ships and, among other places, to Ireland especially, as being more capable, from its remoteness and sparseness of population, to receive them. Then it would follow, that those who, during the repeated invasions of the Assyrians, failed to secure a passage in the ships, would be well aware of the position of the emigrants, and would be eager to find their way to the northern parts, and isles of Europe; halting here and there, and marking rivers and other biding places with the name of their tribe. For instance, the Danube, the Dnieper, and the whole land of Denmark. Hence, when in the time of Constantine, large numbers of all the other tribes of Israel were found within the limits of the Roman Empire, there were but few of the tribe of Dan. The revelation of St. John points to this. It describes (by anticipation) the conversion or "sealing" in baptism of thousands (twelve at least) of every tribe excepting that of Dan (Rev. vii. 5—8). Why was Dan excepted? He was far away. In the north of Ireland, and in Scandinavia, for the most part, he had taken up his abode. We cannot suppose that the Omniscient omitted him by mistake. Nor can we believe that "God had forgotten to be gracious." No, it was all divinely arranged. And so it came to pass that Dan was not there, and therefore was not named. Among much other evidence, we may note that the Vetus Chronicon Holsatiæ, page 54, tells us that "the Danes and Jutes are Jews (Israelites) of the tribe of Dan." And as we have seen, ancient Irish writers tell us also of the same tribe who, while some of them had landed in Cornwall and Wales, were found in Ireland. Thus, the British Isles, by possession and God's gift, had doubtless become in Ezekiel's days, the "mountain of the height of Israel" (Ezek. xvii. 23).

Digitized by Google

This, your Majesty, is the only feasible explanation yet offered of these two most important and clearly expressed predictions; this of "the ordained place" and this of the "high and eminent mount," whereon was to be placed or "planted"—"the tender twig of cedar." And these prophecies are of such a peculiar nature, and involve such grand and tangible results that they in their fulfilment could never have been so long unobserved unless God had willed it to be so; nor now so widely noticed unless He, speaking on this very subject to His people had said, "In the latter days ye shall consider it" (Jer. xxx. 24). Now observe, Ezekiel was employed to predict the "planting," but Jeremiah was commissioned to do the work; See, said Jehovah to him, "I have set thee over the nations, to root out, &c., to build and to plant" (Jer. i. 10). Your Majesty knows what kingdoms were, according to his prophecies, rooted out or destroyed; but where did he build and plant? Where did Jeremiah plant any monarchy? Where did he build any kingdom? That he did, faithful man, fulfil both branches of his commission we cannot but think. That God, who gave him the commission, gave him also opportunity to fulfil, is beyond a doubt. Then where did he, or God by his agency, accomplish the latter? "The tender twig" that God promised to plant was last seen in his company in Egypt, with Baruch, the prophet's scribe. Then we lose sight of them, as far as Scripture is concerned, for ever. But dim scraps of history from the north of Ireland reveal the advent there of such a party, and at just that time,—an ancient sage, with his friend and secretary Baruch, with a royal maiden, Tia-Tephi. It also tells that the Heremon or supreme King, embracing the religion of this party, was married to the royal maiden, and she became the mother of the race of sovereigns who ruled Ireland in ages gone by—from whom, through the Mores, the Malcoms, and the Bruces, have descended your Majesty's royal ancestors and person, and your right and title to the throne and crown of the British Empire, the Empire which alone perfectly and absolutely fulfils, or is at all likely to fulfil, the purpose of Jehovah, when concerning "the tender twig of the high cedar" He said, "In the mountain of the height of Israel will I plant it; and it shall bring forth boughs, and bear fruit, and be a goodly cedar; and under it shall dwell all fowl of every wing; in the shadow of the branches thereof shall they dwell" (Ezek. xvii. 23). Lia-Fail, or the "stone of destiny," is a solemn, silent, yet most eloquent witness of all God's holy will and doing in this matter. It has been placed and retained by providential care under the Coronation Throne of your Gracious Majesty. Its testimony has been variously rendered, but the substance of it appears to be:—

"Where'er this stone shall rest, the ground
Is bless'd; for there the conquering race is found."

Whatever may be the reliability or otherwise of the records and traditions concerning Lia-Fail, or the stone of destiny, it is something for your Majesty to know that the mighty and majestic march of great events—events forming epochs in the grandest portion of the world's history—fully confirm its most remarkable reported testimony. And now, may it not displease your Majesty to look at this great subject in another aspect, which is not quite so agreeable to contemplate. It is this. Whilst the ultimate security of your Majesty's dynasty is firmly guaranteed by the voice of Jehovah, yet a partial change in the line of descent, and a temporary suspension of that dynasty, are by no means excluded from His programme. History confirms this. From Zedekiah to the enthronement of Tia Tephi there was probably an interval of nearly one generation, and from the reign of Charles the First until the restoration of the monarchy under Charles the Second, there was a considerable interregnum. Should the deep plottings of the Papists, and the undermining schemes of the perverted Ritualist, so far succeed in the future in captivating the imagination of the nobility and royalty of the land, as to lead them into the general practice of the idolatries of Rome, the worship of Mary and the saints, a time of trouble and terror would certainly arise. In such a time of conflict and awful convulsion, it is impossible to predict the things that might happen. May your Majesty never see such a day as that!

And now, your Majesty, may I draw this letter to a close by saying, surely the consideration of the statements herein advanced brings this important question to the front. What will your Majesty do? The truth is strong and must prevail. And it will not hurt, but bless the world to know as early as possible the truth, and the whole truth. Nothing but the truth should we desire to cherish and maintain. Should learned, sagacious and impartial men, pursuing their diligent enquiries at your Majesty's command, succeed in manifestly proving the grand positions maintained in this letter; should they prevail in demonstrating that the objections advanced against these positions are worthless, and groundless, and frivolous, as there is good reason to conclude they would, then the political results would be numerous and immense. To mention only one, who but your Majesty's subjects and their confreres throughout the world could lay any claim to our ancient fatherland, the whole of Palestine, when its possession drops from the feeble hands of the Turk? Or who but yourself, Royal Lady, could present any just claim to the right of erecting once more the throne of David your ancestor on the sacred hill of Zion, in Jerusalem?

Your Majesty has, with your Royal Consort, often studied, and is well able to read "The signs of the times," to be ignorant of which our Saviour regarded as a reproach. Your Majesty is well aware of the "ill-consolidated state" of Continental Europe; of the serious causes of soreness and disquiet existing there; of the millions of men standing ready-armed with terrible weapons of destruction for the fearful carnage of a modern war, a war which men of profound political insight have pronounced to be inevitable, a war at which they tremble, as of one involving unparalleled slaughter misery and ruin; and which they have declared cannot be long delayed.

This fearful conflict is by even modest and moderate interpreters of prophecy regarded as the chief act in that great final "controversy" of Jehovah foretold in Holy Writ, the drama of retribution on those nations which still believe not in in God, but reject "the truth as it is in Jesus," and cling to their gross idolatry, even that of praying to and worshipping the departed Mary and other dead women and men, with their pictures and images also.

Now, if this coming struggle be even only one campaign of the final conflict, it will, apparently, prove to be that war which with marked distinctness Isaiah has pointed out to precede the restoration of the House of Judah to their own land.

This is graphically referred to, in the latter part of the 17th

Digitized by Google

chapter of his prophecy, as "The roaring and rushing of nations," as though bent on grasping some prize. "The nations shall rush," it is appropriately said: for they will then rush with their mighty steam locomotive power on sea and land, as they never rushed to and fro, to battle, at any time before. This war is described (v. 13, 14) as very brief and very disastrous to the enemies of God's nation.

But why connect this war (your Majesty may well ask) with the return of Judah to Palestine? The answer is, we have only to follow on consecutively the strain or course of the prophecy to the end of the next brief chapter, in order to see that such connection is not only natural but unavoidable. (In doing this it is wise to cull the most suitable words we can find in either "The Authorised," "The Revised," or the "Marginal" readings). To proceed:—

The next verses of the prophecy (which are 1 and 2 of chap. 18,) are a kind of parenthesis in the narration, and in them a call is made upon an insular nation to "Go with swift messengers on the waters" to the help of another, plainly a kindred, nation.

In the third verse all mankind are called upon to behold a great sight; to "see when He lifteth up an ensign" of conflict "on the mountains," and to hear "when He bloweth the trumpet" of war. As though it were said, See ye, hear ye, all ye dwellers upon the earth: for a great thing is now to be done by the Lord of Hosts.

In the fourth verse it is stated what this great thing is; for Jehovah says, "I will take My rest," or resting place [that is, Jerusalem, "the Throne of the Lord." See Ezek. xliii. 7 and Jer. iii. 19], "I will regard My set dwelling place" (marg.) with fervour, "as a clear heat upon herbs," and with nourishing protection, "as a cloud of dew in the heat of the harvest."

In the fifth verse is declared the timeliness and the summary character of God's avenging work. "For, afore the harvest (or the expected gains, are husbanded) when the bud of anticipation is perfectly blown into a flower, and in it, even the sour grape of ambition is ripening, then He shall cut off the sprigs with pruning hooks, and the spreading branches (or new territorial possessions?) shall He cut off and take away."

The sixth verse shows the utter destruction and desolation that will to all the combatants result. "They shall be left together," as the prey of ravenous birds and beasts.

The seventh, or closing verse of the chapter and of the prophecy also, declares:—"In that time" (not at, that is, the end of it, but in, or during that era of tribulation) "shall the present be brought the Lord of Hosts, to the place of His Name, the Mount Zion, of a people scattered and peeled" (and terrible from their beginning hitherto—v. 2). This present is from a similar people. (Compare v. 2). Hence, and from other portions of the "Word," and from the evil omens abroad now, we infer, your Majesty, that there are three important duties which Britain, as the House of Israel, will be called upon to discharge, for or with the House of Judah; namely:—

First, to "send swift messengers" to help and rescue the victims of Jew-hunting" (v. 2).

Second, to convey those hapless victims of Gentile hatred, with others of the House of Judah, as a "present to Jehovah" to Palestine (v. 7).

Third, to join with many of the House of Judah in a grand return, under a chosen head, from the "land of the north" to Zion (Hos. i. 11 and Jer. iii. 18).

But why, your Majesty may ask, why conclude that Britain is the insular nation thus called upon to aid the House of Judah? To this it may be replied:—What great nation exists beyond the rivers of Ethiopia, from Judea, and has its land, or coasts, rustling or shadowing with wings, or sails of ships? What nation sends all "its ambassadors by sea" as Britain does? being compelled thereto, the Channel Tunnel not yet having been built—and sends them "even in vessels of bulrushes (or water-living vessels, as the original word signifies, that is, steamers) on the waters." What great nation cares, as Britain does, for the dispersed sons and daughters of Judah, or offers them such refuge, help, and even honours, as they find upon her shores? To what nation but the British do all these signs point? Your Empire, August and Royal Lady, kept by providential care from continental strife, will, I trust, be found obedient to the sacred Word which requires us to "wait upon Jehovah until the day that He rises up to the prey, gathers the nations, assembles the kingdoms, and pours upon them His indignation, even all His fierce anger," when all the earth (saith He) shall be devoured by the fire of My jealousy (Zeph. iii. 8). Yet "in wrath He will remember mercy," for He adds, "Then will I turn to the people a pure language, that they may all call upon the Name of the Lord, to serve Him with one consent" (v. 9). Then will your Majesty and your people be ready to fulfil the Master's Word:—"From beyond the rivers of Ethiopia, My suppliants (waiting people—v. 8), even the daughter of My dispersed, shall bring Mine offering" (v. 9).

And now, for the present time, if the "vision" were made plain, so that he who runs may read, the moral results would be equally great and glorious. The finger of God in history would be plainly seen, and trust in God through all our domestic and foreign difficulties, be greatly strengthened. The hand of Jehovah, in His righteous ruling of the nations; in rooting up and casting down some; in planting and building up others, according to His word, would manifestly appear. All men might then be satisfied by an examination of the record that Jehovah, the personal God, lives and governs the world. To all candid persons the result would be as glorious as though your Majesty had succeeded in the impossible task of writing with colossal characters, in letters of living light, across the whole firmament of Heaven, these glorious words:—

"Alleluia! for the Lord God Omnipotent reigneth, let us be glad and rejoice, and give glory to Him."

I am, with all possible respect and deep devotion, your Majesty's loyal, loving, Antipodean subject,

J. S. H.

(My eightieth birthday).

Auckland, September 2nd, 1887.

Review.

A Motto for Missionaries. A sermon by the Rev. C. J. Machin, Incumbent of Port Arthur, Ontario, Canada. Montreal: J. Theo. Robinson.

The sermon described above, a copy of which has been obligingly sent to us by the preacher, was delivered in St. Paul's Church, Parry Sound, Diocese of Algoma, at an Ordination held during the First General Clerical Conference of the Diocese. We notice the sermon because it is clear from its purport that the Rev. Mr. Machin is an Anglo-Israelite. He spoke of the Twelve Tribes as "the sacred race," and incidentally remarked that "it is a matter of intense interest to inquire what had become of the ten-thirteenths of the Hebrew race." The preacher was perfectly well aware of the Scriptural distinction between Israel and Judah, and intimated as much in his sermon. "The Motto for Missionaries" was the preacher's text, the word spoken by Nehemiah in chap. vi. 11: "Should such a man as I flee?"

Although China has been a hard field for missionary work yet the results are most encouraging. No less than thirty-eight societies, having over 1,000 missionaries, are now labouring there. The net increase for 1887 was 4,260, and the net increase for the last six years over 1,300.

Digitized by Google

NOTICES.

All communications intended for the Editor, to be addressed: "Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Clifton, Bristol.

SUBSCRIPTIONS. £ s. d.

Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free 0 7 6
Two Copies (including Double Numbers) 0 13 6
Three Copies ,, ,, ,, ... 1 0 4
Four Copies ,, ,, ,, ... 1 5 6
Six Copies ,, ,, ,, ... 1 16 4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-grand, London, to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C., or F. W. PARRY & Co., 29, Paternoster-row, London.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

Contents Bills and Show Cards may be obtained on application to the Publishers.

Advertisements should be sent to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

Prepaid Advertisements are inserted at the rate of thirty words for 1s. 4d.

New Work on the Identity of Lost Israel
By the late BISHOP TITCOMB.

Now ready, in Cloth Gilt, Bevelled Boards, Imperial 8vo. Price 3s.; sent Post Free for Postal Order or Stamps.

A MESSAGE TO THE CHURCH
FROM
THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.
BY THE LATE
RT. REV. BISHOP TITCOMB, D.D.
ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet Court, Fleet Street.
F. W. PARRY & Co., 29, Paternoster Row, E.C.

Just published, demy 8vo., 66 pp., in tinted wrapper, price 6d., by post 7d.

THE BRITISH NATION
PROVED TO BE THE REMNANT OF ISRAEL,
AND THE
REPRESENTATIVES OF THE LOST TRIBES.
BY J. H. WELDON, J.P.
Robert Banks & Son, Racquet Court, Fleet Street, E.C

WORKS BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

The Geography of the Gates. With Map and six full page, and one double-page, Illustrations, printed on plate paper. 208 pages, in handsome cloth, gilt Price 3s. 6d., post free 3s. 10d.

The History of the House of Israel. How They Were Lost and How They Were Found. Told for the children. Price 6d., cloth 1s.; post free 7d. and 1s. 1d. Fifth edition.

A Resume of the Scriptural Argument, Proving the Identity of the British Race with the Lost Ten Tribes. Price 1d.; 6s. per hundred, postage 6d.

Our Identity: What it is Not; What it is; and Our Obligations To-day in Respect to it Being a Lecture recently delivered in London by Philo-Israel, and published by special request. Price 2d., a reduction for quantities.

"FRIENDS IN COUNSEL."
SPECIAL CONFERENCE NUMBER.
THE MESSENGER,
APRIL, 1888.

Containing Reports, revised by the Authors, of the various Papers and Addresses given at the British-Israel Conference, Wolverhampton.
Rev. R. Douglas, Vicar of Kidsgrove; Rev. S. C. Adam, Vicar of St. Jude's, Wolverhampton; Surgeon-General Grant, Cheltenham; Rev. F. Aston, Vicar of Bushbury, Wolverhampton; Commander Roberts, Bristol; Rev. C. W. Hickson, Vicar of St. Bartholomew's, Bristol; Rev. E. Whitaker, Vicar of St. Mark's, Lyncombe, Bath; D. A. Onslow, Esq., J.P.; Dr. Alder Smith, F.R.C.S., London; Oxonian; Rev. H. H. Marriott, Plymouth; Rev. J. Idrisyn Jones, Birkenhead. Including also contributions by Oxonian, the Rector of Ardkeen, Mrs. Haskard and D. E. Olivier, B.A.

Price 6d., post free 7d., to be obtained of
F. W. Parry & Co., 29, Paternoster-row, London.

FITS! FITS!! FITS!!!

ALL PERSONS SUFFERING FROM EPILEPSY should send name and address to JAMES OSBORNE, Medical Pharmacy, Ashbourne, Derbyshire who will forward, free of charge, full particulars, with Testimonials, of the most successful remedy ever discovered for this distressing malady. Sent to all parts of the world. Reference permitted to Rev. J. BAKER, M.A. 80, Bolton Road, Pendleton, Manchester.

NEW BOOK BY DR. WILD.
Just Published, Price 3s., Cloth, Bevelled Boards, Gilt Lettered. Sent by Post on receipt of Published Price.

TALKS
FOR
THE TIMES.
BY JOSEPH WILD, M.A., D.D.,
Pastor of the Bond-st. Congregational Church, Toronto.

CONTENTS.—Chapter 1. A Gift of One Hundred and Ninety-Two Million Acres of Land. 2. The Return of the Jews to Palestine. 3. Folks that won't be Somebody. 4. The Four Prophecies of Egypt. 5. The Stone Kingdom and Dynamite; and the Orange Bill. 6. "144!" 7. "666!" 8. The Transit of Venus. 9. The Miracles of Antichrist; and the High Rock Image of Massachusetts, U.S. 10. The Man who could not sleep, and what came of it. 11. The Rainbow. 12. London Destroyed, and Jerusalem a Seaport. 13. Liberalism. 14. A Graft without a Stock. 15. Mouldy Bread and an Oath. 16. A Tombstone Inscription. 17. Dog Lappers. 18. How to get Rich.

ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-st., E.C.

Dr. JOSEPH WILD'S WORKS
The most useful works on the subject.
NEW EDITION JUST PUBLISHED.
THE LOST TEN TRIBES
Price 3s., post free 3s. 3d.

'We have much pleasure in directing attention to this handsome volume. . . We promise our readers that if they procure this work, and will peruse it, they will find 'Our Identity' discussed in a clear, novel, racy, and from an American point of view, which is sure to interest."—Banner of Israel.

THE FUTURE OF ISRAEL AND JUDAH.
Price 2s., post free 2s. 3d.
R. BANKS & SON, RACQUET-COURT, FLEET-ST.

ALL PUBLICATIONS ON
THE IDENTITY OF THE LOST TRIBES OF ISRAEL
May be obtained at the Office of
ROBERT BANKS & SON, RACQUET COURT, FLEET STREET.

The Banner of Israel (Weekly No. and Monthly Part). The Messenger, Two Witnesses, etc., forwarded immediately on publication at office rates. The Canadian Advance, post free for one year for 4s. 6d.
Catalogues post free on application.

MR. EDWARD HINE has returned from his lecturing tour in America. Friends wishing to arrange for him to lecture can communicate with Isaac Loveland, Shoreham, near Sevenoaks, Kent, at present fixing no dates. Mr. Hine's publications have had a large circulation, and can be obtained of F. W. Parry & Co., 29, Paternoster Row, London, E.C.

Forty-Seven Identifications, 6d., post free 7d
Cui Bono? 6d., post free, 7d.
Lost Israel Found, 3s 6d., post free, 3s. 9d
Also The Nation Warned by the Scripture Teachings of the Great Pyramid. 6d., post, 7d.

1,000 Valuable Recipes.
COMPRISING MEDICAL, HOUSEHOLD, and Toilet Secrets invaluable to every person. Also Rare and Valuable Trade Secrets that cannot be obtained elsewhere, and are indispensable to every Artisan, Mechanic, Business Man, Manufacturer, Farmer, etc., etc. An investment of 1s. in this book will save pounds in a year. Post free, 15 stamps—W. B. FOOT & SON, 44, Camden Road, London, N.W.

THE "BUSY BEE"
5/6 SEWING MACHINE. 5/6
This Wonderful Machine will sew thick or thin material, and is so simple that a child can work it. Every machine is warranted, and sent carriage paid for 6s. Polished Stained Wood Box, 1s. 6d. extra.
W. B. FOOT & SON, 44, CAMDEN RD., LONDON, N.W.

PIANOFORTES, Harmoniums, American Organs. Why buy at shops inferior made instruments, and pay large profits, when you can buy direct from the Maker High-class Instruments, and save 50 per cent. by so doing? Full value allowed for old Instruments in exchange as part payment. Write for Price Lists and Testimonials to G. LINSTEAD, 2, Oseney Crescent, Camden Road, London. Established 1874.

Published by ROBERT BANKS & SON,
RACQUET COURT, FLEET STREET, E.C.

Postal Orders may be obtained at any Post Office in the United Kingdom for the following amounts: 1s., 1s. 6d., ½d. each; 2s., 2s. 6d., 3s., 3s 6d., 4s., 4s. 6d., 5s., 7s. 6d., 10s., 10s. 6d., 1d. each; 15s., 20s., 1½d. each. They should be "crossed" City Bank, Ludgate Hill, E.C. Stamps received.

JEHOVAH TRIUMPHANT. The New and Complete Theology and Electric Light of the Bible, containing the History of British-Israel, Compiled from the Sacred Scriptures. Cloth gilt, price 10s. 6d., post free for Postal Order or Cheque.

THE GEOGRAPHY OF THE GATES. By PHILO-ISRAEL. With Map, and six full page, and one double-page, Illustrations, printed on plate paper. 208 pages, in handsome cloth, gilt. Price 3s. 6d.; post free.

THE WORD: THE WORLD: THE BRANCH. By J. LEYLAND FIELDEN, Esq. Price 12s., post free.

EPHRAIM - ENGLAND. The Nineteenth Century Revelation of the Fruits of History. By Rev. R. DOUGLAS, Vicar of Kidsgrove. Cloth gilt, lettered, 4s., gilt edges 5s., free by post.

FIFTY REASONS WHY THE ANGLO-SAXONS ARE ISRAELITES of the Lost Tribes of the House of Israel. By Rev. W. H. POOLE, D.D. Price 6d., post free 7d.

BIBLE LESSONS AND REFLECTIONS. By the late ROBERT GAIRDNER, of Kilmarnock, N.B. Price 2s. 6d., by post 2s. 9d.; cheap edition, limp cloth, 1s., by post, 1s. 2d.

SOUND, PURE, WHITE
TEETH!
Those who value these will try
CARBOLINE
(The Great Sanitary Tooth Paste).
1/6 & 2/6 per Pot.
Through Chemists, or post free from the Makers,
GEORGE & WELCH
WORCESTER.

Lancet writes:—"To save the teeth use a good carbolic daily."

LADIES!! Our New Spring and Summer Patterns of Dress Materials are now ready, and we invite every reader of this paper to write for them. Patterns will be sent post free to any address. All wool Cashmeres, Merinos, Serges, Beiges, Lace Cloths, Costume Tweeds, Suitings, Checks, Stripes, and every description of Woollen Dress Materials in Black and all the newest and most stylish colours for the coming season; and in prices to suit all purses. Any length cut, and all parcels are sent carriage paid to any address, either by parcels post or rail. Write at once for patterns, and you will be astonished when you see them.
AN AMAZING OFFER!!—We shall give a very handsome Brocaded Silk Handkerchief with each dress-length ordered from us during this season.
LUTUS C. LEATHLEY, Armley, near Leeds.

HUMAN LIFE.—FIFTY YEARS' Record of Facts, Principles, and Discoveries (just published, complete) Relating to the Improvement and Preservation of Human Life on Earth. Origin and true treatment of diseases. A series of articles by DR. SAMUEL BIRLEY, M.D., Ph.D. Book form, 50 pages. SENT FREE to every applicant by the publishers, GORDON B. MURRAY & CO., 50, Theobald's-road, Holborn, E.C. Write to-day.

WEAK NERVES.
Nature's Remedy, "Electricity," never fails to strengthen the Nerves and vitalise the whole system when scientifically applied, in the form of mild "continuous currents" (without shock) generated by wearing
HARNESS'
ELECTROPATHIC BELT,
Price 21s., post free.
When ordering please send size round waist (next skin). Thousands of Testimonials. Pamphlet and Advice free Note only address, and call to-day if possible, or write at once to
Mr. C. B. HARNESS, Consulting Electrician,
The MEDICAL BATTERY Co., Limtd.,
52, OXFORD ST., LONDON, W.
(Corner of Rathbon Place).

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. F. W. PARRY (late GUEST & Co.), 29 PATERNOSTER-ROW WEDNESDAY, APRIL 18, 1888. [All rights reserved.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."

(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. XII., No. 591. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, APRIL 25, 1888. [PRICE ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
The Unstable Condition of French Politics	165
Lieut.-General Beresford's Recent Lecture at Clifton	166
Britannia the Daughter of Zion:—Inviolable Security. By Rev. T. Lowe, M.B.A.S.	167
"The Dispersion Among the Greeks." By J. C. H. Mehl. Part II	167
Some Fresh Doubts and Objections Answered	169
The Shepherds of Israel. By Surgeon-General J. M. Grant, M.D.	170
National Progress in Egypt	170
Correspondence	171

THE UNSTABLE CONDITION OF FRENCH POLITICS.

ANOTHER Ministry has been overthrown in France, and the question of the continuance of the Republic is coming on for decision. The ministry of M. Tirard has been upset, as those of his predecessors have been, because the French are as unstable as water and will never long endure any Government but that of the sword. God has given France no guarantee of strong, continuous Government, and therefore, not being Israel, they have no rulers who can win the confidence of the people for long. M. Tirard's Government "was appointed for no apparent reason, and they have been overthrown for no apparent reason." "They have appeared and disappeared, and that is all that can be said of them." French politics are thus evanescent because God never promised them endurance. There looms in the future a Military Dictatorship in the hands of General Boulanger, who is at present the idol of the fickle French. That Dictatorship may end in a fresh French Empire, and in foreign war, to give the aspirant for power the only means by which he may retain it, namely, by a successful effort to punish Germany, and wrest from her the French Provinces, as France still deems them to be, and by an effort to reduce the power of Italy in the Mediterranean. The writers in the Secular Press of the day account for this extraordinary state of things in France on various grounds, but cannot, to their own satisfaction, tell us positively why the French should be so deficient in the staying power that upholds our own monarchy. The Times, for instance, declares that "the French people are wanting in some moral quality, in virtue of which other nations have worked Parliamentary institutions with continued success." But it admits that the Empire in France has made way for the Republic, and the Republic has given no satisfaction to the masses in France, who now experience a dangerous longing for a Government which shall be strong, even if it draw its strength from the negation of everything that Republicanism affirms. Here then is a danger to European peace which may at any moment precipitate the great Earthquake War-woe that seems so imminent. Meanwhile there is a political crisis also in Roumania, where the Minister, M. Bratiano, so firm an opponent of Russia, has just resigned, and taken thus one obstacle out of that Power's way in its efforts to subdue Bulgaria. Russia must first overrun Roumania before it can subdue Bulgaria; and Bulgaria is the first step Russia means to take in order to secure the Gate of Gates, Constantinople. France on one side, and Roumania on the other, therefore, are showing those signs of instability that may lead to that conflict of the nations which all the earth so greatly dreads, but which must needs occur, ere the last word in the Eastern Question may or can be spoken, namely, "Who shall have Constantinople?"

Meanwhile at home in these Islands we rest in peace! Conflicts there are in Ireland, and in the Houses of Parliament at Westminster. But these never touch the foundations of the Empire or of the Throne! No combination of States bent on destroying our very existence threatens us as Germany is threatened by France on the one side to avenge Sedan, and by Russia on the other, to enable her to march upon the capital of the Sultan. Between Russia and Germany, besides, there is "a great score" growing up which will one day have to be settled. A fresh item has just been added to it to increase the enmity between the two nations, which events are somehow rapidly creating. The Russian Courts of Law have decided that Prince Hohenlohe, a German, shall not inherit, under certain testamentary bequests, an estate in Lithuania, almost 1000 square miles in extent. His foreign extraction and other legal obstacles were pleaded against the Prince, and the decision went against him, declaring that foreigners can hold no land in Russia! The estates in question, large as an English county, are "to be parcelled out among Russian proprietors, and the thousands of German labourers, workmen, and farmers who have been engaged there are to be turned adrift." The comments of the Times of April 3, on these events, are as follows, pointing to this, among other causes, which will infallibly lead by-and-bye to the fatal outbreak. The writer said:—

We need make no further comment upon this transaction, except to say that it is but one out of many which serve to account for the growing animosity towards Russia which exists in Germany, and which no considerations of high policy can restrain. Taken together with the steady anti-German measures now being adopted by the authorities in the Baltic provinces of

Digitized by Google

Russia, such a step as the Ukase of March, 1887, can be interpreted in no other way than as an act of hostility directed against the German neighbours of the Russian Empire.

Here then we have the grave and serious statement of a responsible journalist to the effect that seeds of enmity are sown broadcast, and growing apace between Russia and Germany. That France is in a condition of unstable equilibrium is manifest to the whole world. Russia, it is obvious, is scheming to seize on political power in Bulgaria in order to secure her "Gate." In doing that, she is making ready to crush Roumania, Austria, and even Germany, with the aid of France! Italy hopes to bring her little war with Abyssinia to a close ere long, to enable her to safeguard her own frontiers, on the West, where they abut on those of restless, unstable, unhappy France. Verily Europe is wretched, and "ill-consolidated" too! Amid the din of preparations for war, British-Israel alone pursues her solitary way, dwelling confidently, carelessly and safely in her isles, protected and safeguarded by the promises of God, which cannot fail. None will ever molest her in her "appointed place" of rest (2 Sam. vii. 10); and she "dwells alone" because the Lord God of Israel, who has a vested right in her throne, supports it, upholds it and keeps it as the apple of His eye (2 Sam. vii. 16, 23, 24; 1 Chron. xxix. 23). To Him be all the praise!

LIEUT.-GENERAL BERESFORD'S RECENT LECTURE AT CLIFTON.

At the usual Monthly Meeting of the Clifton and Bristol Israel's Identification Association, held on April 4th, 1888, Lieut.-General Beresford lectured before the members on the subject of "Joseph's Birthright." After stating the object of all our Anglo-Israelite meetings, and proving the Scriptural distinction between Israel of the Ten Tribes and Judah, the lecturer spoke of their separate captivities, and he quoted from Josephus, Antiq. xi. v. 7, to show when and how the Jews were first called by that name. "This is the name," said the historian of the Jews, "they were called by from the day that they came up from Babylon, and which name is taken from the Tribe of Judah which came first to those places, and thence both they and the country gain their appellation."

History, said General Beresford, is prophecy fulfilled, and prophecy history foretold. Prophecy describes Israel as destined to be "the chief of the nations." That phrase settles the question. We must look, then, for Israel, not as a minor Power, but as one of half-a-dozen nations at most who are great as a matter of fact. To which of these do the prophecies as a whole best apply? Science lends its aid to our inquiry, but we depend mainly upon the Scriptures of Truth. The Jews have never been lost sight of since their captivity. The Ten Tribes have since theirs, and men call them, therefore, "the lost Ten Tribes." To this Ten-Tribed nation the Scriptures give the "national birthright," and as "God's inheritance" they should be discovered by the fact of their enjoyment of it. What are the blessings that go to constitute Israel's birthright? and are we right or wrong in saying that the British nation enjoys them all? The promises were given to Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, and the children of Israel, the twelve sons of Jacob. Gen. xlix. tells us that the sceptre and the Messiah were given to Judah, but the birthright was Joseph's and his two sons. This included all national temporal promises. Esau despised it, as most of our clergy do now. But God's verdict on such conduct is recorded in Heb. xii. 16. Esau's repentance and tears were undoubtedly sincere, and had they been for spiritual lapse and sin on his part, respecting the rejection of a spiritual blessing, can anyone say such repentance would not have been accepted? But the birthright he rejected was not a spiritual but a temporal earthly good, and his rejection of that was final, and incurable by tears and sorrow. The blessing that Esau's contrition and prayers did at last secure from Isaac was a temporal one, similar in kind but less in value to that which Jacob had robbed him of. The birthright, then, which descended from Abraham to Isaac devolved on Jacob, and then on Ephraim, Joseph's son. That choice God confirmed centuries afterwards in Jer. xxxi. 9, "Ephraim is My firstborn. He declared this birthright was always connected with multitudinousness, as Gen. xlviii. 19, and xxxv. 11, will show; and it was inalienable. Israel's sins could not abrogate the promise, since God confirmed it when the Ten Tribes were in idolatry and exile, during Jeremiah's days.

The Ten Tribes, "God's firstborn," must be now existing as a nation somewhere, because Jer. xxxi. 36 declares the fact as one of constant existence. The seed of Israel must be a nation before the Lord "for ever"—therefore to-day! Jer. xxxiii. 24, and Mal. iii. 6, support this argument. The latter text is remarkably strong; but a clergyman once, in the lecturer's hearing, quoting this passage, was so struck with the context as to Israel, that he read the text, not as God spoke it, but as he would read it, "Therefore ye sons of men are not consumed." The lecturer then showed that the birthright blessings were all reserved for Israel's enjoyment during the latter days, or the Christian Dispensation, as Gen. xlix. 1, Heb. i. 1, Acts ii. 17, and other passages prove. The inheritance could not have been enjoyed, and was not enjoyed, during the time included in the Old Testament canon of the Scriptures; and the wording of the promise shows it was reserved for a period when Israel, or Ephraim, should increase in numbers vastly, and become a mighty, pushing, encroaching nation in other and foreign lands; being a colonizing people, occupying the ends, coasts, and Gates of the earth; having stupendous wealth and commerce. Now, then, but not before, must we find Israel as holding the birthright, and the blessings therewith connected! What is the fact? We find, to-day, one nation, and one only, developed into "a nation and a company of nations" in covenant with God by acceptance of Christianity, and therefore reconciled nationally to Him.

The Reformation was such an epoch in our history, and from A.D. 1550, all our greatness and blessings have been nationally and increasingly realised.

The birthright of Ephraim-Israel cannot be separately enjoyed by that House after Judah has joined her, according to the prophecies, and therefore we can only look for the enjoyment of the promise during the present times. The lecturer then showed how exactly the British people respond to the prophecies respecting the enjoyment by Israel of the birthright. He showed that we are increasing more rapidly than all other existing nations; the result being, that we have "a company of nations" united to us. The wealth of our nation, he showed, was abnormal; we lend, consequently, to many nations, but never borrow. We reign over many nations, but submit to none. Never before did any nation fulfil this destiny, nor were national loans known till now. Given numbers and wealth, the command of the sea has followed, with the Gates, or coaling stations, to secure it, according to Israel's birthright. Isa. xxvii. 6, was quoted to show that God provided for a distant age, wherein Israel was to prosper and carry out her world-wide office of Gospel blessing as His messenger; and Our Lord, in Matt. xxi. 43, confirmed that promise by declaring that "the kingdom of God," then in the grasp of the Jews, would be removed from them and given to "a nation"—the "fruitful one," which could be none other than Ephraim (Gen. xli. 52).

The Chairman, Philo-Israel, followed the lecturer, and Col. Senior and others continued a discussion which was declared to be, and was, exceedingly interesting. A vote of thanks to General Beresford concluded the meeting.

The Annual Meeting of the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association will be held at Exeter Hall on Thursday, May 24.

Digitized by Google

BRITANNIA THE DAUGHTER OF ZION:— INVIOLABLE SECURITY.

By Rev. T. Lowe, M.B.A.S., Stratford-on-Avon.

"God of supreme dominion,
From whom all power has birth,
Whose praise on eagle pinion
O'ersweeps Thine heaven and earth.
We lift one voice before Thee,
From many a land and race;
And with one heart adore Thee
For these fair years of grace."

Whence the Titanic might of Britain? Whence this perfect security amid the battle-throes of the nations? The sword of the conqueror has not flashed defiantly in our midst. There are more than mere great political and military reasons, for such proud supremacy and invulnerable security. "And He will thrust out the enemy from before thee; and will say, Destroy them. Israel shall then dwell in safety alone. The eye of Jacob shall be on a land of corn and wine; also his heavens shall drop down dew. Happy art thou, O Israel; who is like unto thee, O people saved by Jehovah, the shield of thy help" (Deut. xxxiii. 27—29). No words can better describe our insular position, our prosperity, and unassailable security, hurling defiance at the despot and the invader, foremost in the van of free nations, leading the march of the monarchs of time, ruling the waves, our merchant marine vessels, and our thunder-breathing ships of war securely and resistlessly breasting every sea, freighted with Britannia's glory, and heralding God's truths to the wide world.

The Bible is our safeguard, and is the mightiest conservative force among the nations. We have seen "the stable tyranny of thrones broken" like a potter's vessel. The unknown treasures of Greece perished in the sack of Constantinople. Tyre, the city of merchant princes, and the emporium of the ancient world, was burned by Alexander the Great, and sacked by the Mamelukes. Poussin gathered a handful of dust from the ground, and declared it to be ancient Rome.

The empire of the Napoleons went down in a circle of fire and steel at Waterloo and Sedan. "Then was the iron, the pottery, the copper, the silver, and the gold, broken to pieces together, and became like the chaff of the summer threshing-floors; and the wind carried them away, so that no trace of them was found; and the stone that smote the image became a great mountain or rock, and it filled the whole earth" (Dan. ii. 35, 36). "The stone of Israel." "And his seed shall be on many waters: and his kingdom shall be exalted, he shall eat up the nations, his enemies, and shall break their bones, and shall pierce them through with his arrows. He stooped down he lay down as a lion, and as a lioness, who shall rouse him up?" (Num. xxiv. 7—9.)*

Thus amid the crash of thrones, and wreck of states, we have been safe. We are ramparted by far more than ravelin, bastion battery, fort and fosse. "All Israel shall be saved." "The glory of Thy people Israel." When the might of the Invincible Armada was collected in one huge fleet of 150 vessels against our shores, in 1573, the Holy one of Israel "blew upon them and they were scattered!" More of the enemy perished by the storms that lashed the sea into fury, than by the broadsides of the British cannon. The wild west wind came down upon them, and gallant ship and galleon were driven away to leeward amidst driving squalls and rain, on the vast rollers of the Atlantic, "thundering on the reef." Out of that vast naval armament, only 52 shattered ships escaped, leaking through every seam. Not a single man was allowed to plant a willing foot upon our shores. "For Jehovah fought for Israel." "Great is the Holy One of Israel, in the midst of thee."

Esto Perpetuo!

* Vide "The Hebrew Scriptures," translated by Samuel Sharpe.

"THE DISPERSION AMONG THE GREEKS."

(John vii. 35, R.V.)

A STUDY.

By J. C. H. Mehl.

(Concluded from page 160.)

PART II.

But before proceeding to the examination of the New Testament with a view to seeking inspired corroboration of this fact, (viz., the kinship subsisting between the Jews and the Greeks) it may be of use to step aside for a moment and point to a few characteristics of the Greek nation, and gain an idea of the influence and geographical position they attained in antiquity; although this will be but what can be gathered from any elementary history. How this remarkable people, never really united under one head, nevertheless developed in time a national life of such force and moral power as to affect all the countries around, even for many centuries after their independence as a nation had been forfeited. Their conquerors, the proud Romans, were fain to sit at the feet of Greek philosophers, to copy the Greek artist, or better, to carry off his inimitable works, often with hands all too rude, in order to adorn therewith the Imperial city. Greek oratory came to be the model for the educated Roman with his grand but blunter speech; he adopted Greek mythology, and before he could boast of a commencement of letters Greek literature was already matured. An inborn delight in beauty of form led the Greek to cultivate symmetry and vigour in his bodily frame; and his energy and spirit of enterprise are thus described: "The impulse to migrate to distant parts of the earth was the most indelible feature in the Hellenic nature. It led their earlier generations to form settlements of commerce and culture all along the coast-lands of the Barbarians (i.e., the shores of the Mediterranean), but subsequently, after the age of Alexander the Great, when the national glory had departed, this degenerated into an ill-directed spirit of adventure, leading them as it were purposeless, to the remotest confines of the known world."

A glance at an historical atlas will shew how in time their own country, in outline much the same as modern Greece, must have become too small for them; for by degrees they spread beyond its borders along the coast of Thrace, occupying the isles of the Ægæan Sea, the coast of Asia Minor, Cyprus, Crete, Sicily, the South of Italy (Græcia Magna), with such cities as Syracuse, the luxurious Sybaris, Croton (the dwelling-place of Pythogoras, born in the island of Samos) Cumæ, Tarentum and others. Perhaps none of these colonies attained to so great an eminence, surpassing the mother-country in commercial enterprise and wealth, as those along the West coast of Asia-Minor (chiefly the province called Asia), including the islands. There it was that the Ionians especially, ever the most energetic and advanced portion of the Greek nation, were flourishing and had founded cities of great importance, and of lasting interest to to the devout student of the Scriptures; for their names are familiar and sacred to him through the allusions to them in the book of Acts (such as Ephesus and Miletus), and above all, through the enumeration of seven of them, those typical seven churches in Rev. ii. and iii. This Greek element in Asia had, however, gradually spread further inland, and in the Acts we can constantly trace it side by side with the Jewish, and distinct also from the multitude or rabble.

Now, not only do we find all the epistles of St. Paul (with the exception of that to the Hebrews, if he be the writer of it) addressed to churches and individuals where this Greek element abounded, but we find all the books of the New Testament to have been originally written in that language, with perhaps the single exception of the Gospel of St. Matthew; and as preparing the way for all this, the Old Testament had been translated into Greek in the third century B.C., and was more generally known thus than in the original text.

Digitized by Google

In turning to the epistle to the Galatians, chap. ii., we find St. Paul explaining how fourteen years after his visit to St. Peter at Jerusalem, which occured three years after his conversion, he went up again to that city by revelation and "laid before them," i.e., Cephas, James, and John, the Gospel which he preached among the Gentiles, and which further down (v. 7) he calls the Gospel of the uncircumcision, in contrast to St. Peter's, who was recognised as having been entrusted with the Gospel of the circumcision. True to their respective commissions, we find the one addressing in his two epistles the Christianised sojourners of the Dispersion, the observers of the Mosaic law and of the rite of circumcision; the other exclusively churches and individuals of Gentile, chiefly Greek origin. But more than this: we find this mission of the Apostle Paul emphasised in a marked way by special Divine guidance. His first great missionary tour, unto which he and Barnabas had been separated by direction of the Holy Ghost, had led him through Cyprus, and the Southern and inner provinces of Asia Minor, viz., Pisidia, Pamphylia and most important of all Galatia. On their return from these labours he and Barnabas rehearsed before the assembled brethren at Antioch in Syria "all things that God had done with them, and how that He had opened a door of faith unto the Gentiles."* It is, however, the second great missionary journey which St. Paul engaged in, having Timothy for his companion, which bears more directly upon the subject of this paper. It is evident from his proposal to Barnabas (Acts xv. 36), that his intention had been to cover again the same ground as before, with a view to seeing after these infant churches; but this desire he was to fulfil only very partially. In Acts xvi. 6 we read, "They (Paul and Timothy) went through the region of Phrygia and Galatia, having been forbidden to speak the word in Asia." We have already stated that in that province, the Greek (Ionian) element prevailed, and that it contained the cities of the seven churches of Rev. ii. and iii., to two of which (Ephesus and Laodicea) and one other (Colossæ) the Apostle subsequently wrote epistles. Yet on this occasion, perhaps because he was not to "build on another man's foundation," we find the Holy Ghost forbidding his going into these regions, and when he turns off Eastward into Bythinia, again, "the Spirit of Jesus suffered him not;" and thus pressed they came to Troas. There he has this mysterious vision of a man of Macedonia, the northern region of Greece, beseeching him: "Come over and help us!" Now what meaning was there to the apostle in this us? Surely his mind had been prepared to understand it, and to know whom he was called to help! Thus embarking at Troas with a "straight course" he sails for the Macedonian shore beginning there, and breaking fresh ground for the Gospel all along the Grecian coast, at Philippi, Thessalonica, Beræa, Athens, Corinth, everywhere opposed by the Jews, but finding an entrance among the Greeks, it would seem, of the higher class, "devout Greeks," "chief women," "honourable women." At Corinth he is in a second vision instructed, "Be not afraid, but speak, hold not thy peace, for I have much people in this city;" and he abode there a year and six months. Subsequently (see Acts xx. 31) we read of the Apostle spending in all, three years at Ephesus so that "all they that dwelt in (the province of) Asia heard the word of the Lord, both Jews and Greeks." After a second missionary tour through Macedonia and Greece, he stops once more on his return journey to Jerusalem in Asia at Miletus, whither he convenes the elders of Ephesus, to whom he addresses his weighty parting words, knowing that they would see his face no more. In Jerusalem he is made a prisoner, and from henceforth to the end of the Acts we only see him as such, having specially roused the anger of the Jews by declaring this mission to be "far hence unto the Gentiles." We behold him no more as a free agent; and whether after attaining his liberty he carried out his purpose of going into Spain, cannot be decided with certainty; there is stronger presumptive evidence that his mandate "far hence" carried him even into Britain.

But it is a significant fact, as marking a purpose of the Holy Ghost, that the account of his labours should be limited to the regions where the Greek element had its home, and that his epistles should also be confined to that sphere.

It remains yet to be proved whether in these epistles we can discover any indications that the inspired writer admitted this ancient claim of the Greeks to be of the stock of Abraham.

In his first letter to the Corinthians (ix. 5), we read: "Moreover, brethren, I would not that ye should be ignorant how that all our fathers (surely both theirs and his) were under the cloud, and all passed through the sea; and were all baptized unto Moses in the cloud and in the sea, and did all eat the same spiritual meat, and did all drink the same spiritual drink; for they drank of that rock which followed them, and that rock was Christ." It is obvious that to the Apostle's knowledge these Corinthians must have been Israelites by descent, however they had become Gentilised. Now Corinth was one of the leading cities in Greece, and, next to Ephesus in Asia, the one in which the apostle spent the longest time. Again, in Eph. ii. (as Surgeon-General Grant shows in his pamphlet, "Israel in the New Testament") the description of the previous condition of the Ephesian Christians as having been "dead in trespasses and sins" could not be applicable to non-Israelite Gentiles, as where there was no law there could have been no transgression: neither could there be any force in the further statement that at one time they had been aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, for where there had never been union alienation cannot be spoken of. So also in Col. i. 21: "You that were once alienated and enemies by wicked works, yet now hath He reconciled." As the above quoted writer observes:—"Here we have an alienation or separation from covenant with God, and subsequent reconciliation, which can apply to Israel only,"—and further—"you being dead in your sins, and the uncircumcision of your flesh hath He quickened together with Him, having forgiven you all trespasses; blotting out the handwriting of ordinances that was against us, that was contrary to us, and took it out of the way, nailing it to His cross." Their being reminded of "the sin of their having neglected the rite of circumcision and the ordinance of the Mosaic law to which they had been subject, proves conclusively that the Colossians were Israelites" (see again "Israel in the New Testament.") Now, both Colossæ and Ephesus were of those (Ionian) Greek cities in the province of Asia, to which we have already referred. Timothy, while left in charge of the church at Ephesus, is instructed to warn some not to give heed to "endless genealogies"—if we admit this prevailing conviction of an Israelitish origin, we can easily conceive how those not spiritually minded would endeavour to trace their pedigrees down to the patriarchs, thus encouraging their confidence in the flesh. But these proofs must suffice, although a more careful examination of other passages would yield further evidence that there existed in Apostolic times a section of that particular people, viz., Israel, hidden under the name of Greeks, and forming the highest element among those claiming that nationality. They were of that seed that was to be sifted among all nations, and through whom the Almighty would accomplish His purposes of grace, both toward the chosen people and the world; and meanwhile, as the great body of Ten-Tribed Israel was still lost to human ken, as they were wandering through the wilds of Europe westward, or settled, some of them already in the British Isles, Gentilised and worshippers of Baal, early Church history proves that not the Christianised Jews, the sojourners of the dispersion, but these Christianised Greeks became the chief light-bearers during the first centuries of our era. In the second and third centuries, the most eminent martyrs and fathers, the successors of the Apostles, many of them pupils of St. John, and coming from the region of the Seven Churches,

* N.B.—It is of importance to notice here that some of those spoken of as Gentiles, namely the Galatians, have been proved to be undoubtedly of Israelitish origin.

Digitized by Google

were men of Greek origin and tongue.* Were these Churches typical of the functions and responsibilities of the race of men upon whom, for a time, the great mission of carrying the Gospel-message seems to have mainly devolved, while that nation was preparing, to whom this kingdom of God would be given, and who would bring forth the fruits thereof, even Ephraim-Israel, who should blossom and bud and fill the face of the world with fruit? (see Matt. xxi. 43, Isa. xxvii. 6). It was not theirs to be the progenitors of that mighty nation; their minds were directed to the "hope laid up for them in the heavens" and to their "inheritance" there (see Col. i. 5, and Eph, i. 14). Remarkable is it that, as the flood of Mahomedanism was beginning in the seventh and eighth centuries to overflow those Eastern countries and a corrupt Christianity, sweeping away churches which at one time had shed so brilliant a light amid the fires of persecution, there was being welded together and consolidated in the British isles a nation from whose furthest shores, even then, missionaries again set out eastward, to bear the seeds of a purer Christianity into the heart of France, Germany and Switzerland. The candlesticks in the east were being removed ("he that hath an ear let him hear!"), but from the far-off isles of the west the Gospel light was from henceforth to shine forth. The nation was forming which from that time onward would ever more consciously take hold of the cup of salvation,—so different from Oholah's cup both "deep and large," (see Ezek. xxiii. 32), she was once made to drink—which in the course of centuries would develop into a mighty people and a "company of nations" (Gen. xlviii. 4), in whom "all the families of the earth should be blessed" (Gen. xxviii. 14), which now sends out her sons and daughters in ever increasing numbers into every country and region to offer the life-giving draught to all who will drink.

Thus have we endeavoured to add one more proof to the great fact, so insisted upon by the believers in the Identity of the British people with the Lost Tribes of Israel, to wit:—that as in the ages of antiquity, from Abraham downward, his descendants were in a limited measure the appointed witnesses before all the world of the existence of the one holy Lord, God Almighty, Jehovah; so in a fuller and larger measure has it been the mission of the same favoured race, since the foundation of the Christian Church, to be the leading witnesses, and that without a break of Gentile intervention, of the message of God the Father who "so loved the world," to all the families and kindreds and peoples of the earth, and to proclaim the unspeakable blessings of the gospel of the grace of God.

As to the Greece of modern times: How unsuccessful have been that little kingdom's strivings after a national rejuvenescence! Has the people shrunk to such moral impotence because long ago that precious grain was sifted out of it? (Rom. xi. 33—36.)

March, 1888.

SOME FRESH DOUBTS AND OBJECTIONS ANSWERED.

We are requested by an ardent Anglo-Israelite, on behalf of a friend (who she thinks is open to conviction), to answer a few objections he entertains to Our Identity with the Ten Tribes, as a clergyman. It appears the latter has heard a good deal about the subject from one, now no more, who wrote and spoke much regarding it; but he is not satisfied. The objections the clergyman feels are these: "No doubt," he writes, "we must look for the fulfilment of the promises to Joseph in the latter days (if these are the latter days?), and in the Jewish people. Where else we are to look for that fulfilment except among them, it is hard to see. It may come of a rapid development of that 'short work' which God designs to make upon the earth. But, supposing such promises made exclusively to Joseph, and supposing it possible that his descendants found their way to the regions of the North-west, where is there any direct and positive proof of this? It seems to me an interesting speculation, but nothing more as yet. Whether however, or not, the Anglo-Saxon race can thus trace their descent, it is evident that God has given that race great destinies and responsibilities which it behoves them to fulfil."

So far our doubter. He is hardly an opponent! What we wish to say to him in reply is this:—What are the Anglo-Saxons' "great destinies" and "responsibilities"? No doubt he would answer, he is bound to spread the Gospel among all nations, families, and kindreds of the earth, and make known God's holy word to every child of Adam. That is true! But that was to be Israel's "destiny" and "responsibility," as declared in God's word in Gen. xii. 2; xviii. 18; xxii. 18; xxvi. 4; xxviii. 14; Acts iii. 25; Isa. xxvii. 6, and in many another like text. Can God give to Israel (Abraham's afterseed) a certain fixed and unique destiny, and very peculiar responsibilities, exclusively, and by oath, but nevertheless forget His promises and oaths by bestowing the very same on a non-Israelite Gentile people called the British or Anglo-Saxons? Surely not! To that we must all say, "God forbid!" Now our race and none other fulfils, to the jot, to the tittle, and exclusively, every promise God gave exclusively to the children of Israel of the House of Joseph. We, therefore, must be that very chosen race, as God is true, and we see no way to escape this perfectly logical conclusion! But our doubting friend wants "direct and positive proof" that the Israelites found their way to these British Islands from the East. We think we can supply him with what he wants. The component elements of the British folk being Celts and Teutons, that is Celtic Britons, and Picts, Scots, Angles, Saxons, Frisians, Danes, Normans, were, as our ethnological authorities declare, one race under various names. They tell us too they came originally from Central Asia (just where the Ten Tribes were carried away into captivity by the Assyrians); and they left those parts to come Westwards about a hundred years or so after that captivity was complete. One portion of those wanderers now in Wales, the Khumri by designation, bears to-day the very name which in the Assyrian Inscriptions we find bestowed upon the House of Israel or "Beth-Khumri." But how do we know that these British immigrants were the very "seed of Israel" who resided where the British ancestors once resided, and who are not now there, but travelled we know towards the West? Because the modern British possess exclusively every blessing God, who cannot lie, promised to bestow exclusively on Israel! Is not this a chain of evidence historical, ethnographical, chronological and Scriptural, as well as prophetic, which no man can break? We believe it is, and we therefore recommend our doubting friend to study this aspect of the matter to induce conviction. He should procure and read Oxonian's "Wanderings of Israel," Philo-Israel's "Arguments in Proof," and other such treatises, that he may see that our views are honouring to God's faithfulness and truth, and comforting to our nation in these times of trouble, distress, wars and rumours of wars.

That these are the "latter days" is certain. St. Paul affirmed it in Heb. i. 2; St. Peter asserted it in Acts ii. 17. Jacob, inspired by God, avowed that the fulfilments of Judah's promises, and those to Joseph, too, should be witnessed in "the latter days," or our times. Accordingly in the Christian Dispensation we have witnessed the First Advent of the Lord, and the enjoyment by the British of every blessing promised to Joseph and Ephraim in Gen. xlix. 10, 22, 26; Deut. xxxiii. 13—17; Gen. xlviii. 15—19. The "Jewish people," or the Jews, we know obtained their promise when Messiah came in

* May not, from this point of view, a peculiar significance attach to Christ's words when His disciples apprised Him that "certain Greeks' wante l to see Him? Is there not exultation in the words: "The hour is come that the Son of Man should be glorified?" (John xii. 23). May there not be a foreshadowing of the nature of the testimony that early Church was called to bear, if faithful, in v. 26, 27? Does not the "voice from Heaven" attest the importance of that moment?

Digitized by Google

humility in A.D. 1. "Joseph" too must obtain his in the Israelitish People (not the Jewish) under whatever name or disguise they may now be hidden.

"THE SHEPHERDS OF ISRAEL."

By Surgeon-General J. M. Grant, M.D.

The question, who are the Shepherds of Israel referred to in Ezek. xxxiv. is important as affecting the recognition of our views by the clergy who are not likely to accept complacently the application of the prophecy to themselves.

I think it is quite evident that the denunciation of the prophet applies to the time, then present, as well as to a time beyond it and that the cause of God's anger was that the shepherds had neglected their duty, not that they would do so in the future, and it is important that we should remember this, as well as the general bearing of Scripture, in suggesting an interpretation of this particular passage.

In Jer. xxiii. 1, 7, we find exactly the same denunciation of the shepherds who had scattered the flocks, coupled with a prophecy that God would raise up other shepherds to Israel, after He had gathered them from all countries whither He had scattered them, who would feed the flock and keep it so that none should be lacking; and as the appointment of these shepherds is associated with the raising up of a righteous branch to David, the natural inference appears to be that they are represented by the Christian ministry—if by the ministers of religion at all.

The general scope of both prophecies, that of Ezekiel and Jeremiah, if applied to the teachers of religion, appears to be to express the displeasure of God against the whole body of the Levitical priesthood, and to tell them that their functions were about to cease; but we gather from Ezek. xliv. 9, 15, that one portion of them was particularly obnoxious, "the Levites who had gone away from Him, when the priests, the Levites, the sons of Zadoc, kept the charge of His sanctuary;" and following the succession of the priesthood, its separation into those two classes appears to have arisen in this way:—

After the death of the two eldest sons of Aaron, the succession devolved upon Eleazar, and remained in his family till the time of Eli, in whom it was transferred into the line of Ithamar, Aaron's fourth son. No reason is given for this transfer, but it was not destined to be of long continuance—God having made known to Eli, through the child Samuel, that He would "judge his house for ever," for the iniquity of his sons, which he had not restrained. This judgment commenced with the defeat of Israel by the Philistines; the capture of the ark and the death of Eli's two sons; and culminated in the slaughter of the high priest, Ahimelech, and eighty-five priests with their wives and families by Saul (1 Sam. xxii. 11, 18). From this slaughter, Abiathar, the son of Ahimelech, escaped, and fled to David, who promised him protection, and on his succession to the throne of Judah, made him high priest along with Zadoc, who already held the office. Abiathar joined in the conspiracy of Adonijah, David's son, who aspired to the throne shortly before his father's death, while Zadoc was active in securing the succession of Solomon, whom he anointed king over Israel; and on the accession of Solomon, Abiathar was degraded from the office of high priest, which was held by Zadoc alone. This appears to be the event referred to in Ezek. xliv. 15, which permanently degraded the House of Eli from the priestly office, and in fulfilment of the sentence, that it should be "judged for ever," assigned to his posterity the most menial office in the ministrations of the sanctuary during the next dispensation, while the establishment of Zadoc confirmed the promise of "an everlasting priesthood," made to his ancestor, Phineas, in Numb. xxv. 11—13.

It thus appears that the prophecy of Ezekiel may refer to the time of the restoration of Israel to their own land, and to the House of Eli only, or to the past conduct of the whole body of priests and their impending suspension from their office; for although the suspension of their functions, when, "in the fulness of time," Christ should appear, had been long before appointed in the counsels of God, they did not understand that it was so, and it is quite legitimate to suppose that the "fulness of time" was determined by the abounding wickedness of the priests and people; indeed we have Scriptural warrant for saying that it was, from such passages as Jer. lix. 1—16.

I have proceeded thus far on the assumption that priests, or ministers of religion, are indicated by the term shepherds; but I think it very improbable, because throughout the Old Testament, the kings, not the priests, are held responsible for the idolatry and sins of the people. Besides, in Jer. xxiii., the prophets and priests are spoken of separately, while in Ezekiel, the shepherds are described as ruling the flock with cruelty and violence, which, it is certain, the priests of Israel had no power to do. The term "shepherds," is constantly applied to kings and rulers in the Old Testament, and I think the evidence that it is so used here is preponderating,—for example, the shepherds to be raised up in the room of those found unfaithful, according to Jeremiah's prophecy, are to keep the flock which has been gathered, so that none shall be lacking, a condition which is inapplicable to priestly or any other form of spiritual rule, but exactly describes a well-governed and consolidated nationality. According to this view, the shepherds being the Kings of Judah, the denunciation against them would be the overthrow of the polity of Judah; that of Israel having been already overthrown, and the shepherds to be raised up to succeed them would be kings in the female instead of the male line of succession.

At all events, our clergy have not yet got to the length of ruling with cruelty and violence, and we may rest assured they never will; and while we have a fulfilment of the prophetic denunciations of the shepherds, supposing them to be priests, in the Old Testament dispensation; and a very clear prediction that there will be a further accomplishment of them in the millennium, we have no sufficient grounds for the belief that they refer to our own times, but very conclusive evidence against it, because it is impossible to conceive that a people can be under the special blessing of God, which we all hold Great Britain as Israel to be, and at the same time under the heaviest curse that can be laid upon a nation—that of an unfaithful ministry.

NATIONAL PROGRESS IN EGYPT.

A friend of the Banner and its subject, living in the West of England, sends us the following, which we have much pleasure in repeating in our pages for the benefit of our widely scattered readers.

"I have a relation employed in engineering work on the Nile, to whom Banners are regularly sent. He reports, that it is wonderful how the knowledge of Our Identity with Israel is spreading (meaning it is supposed in Egypt). The people, he adds, hold as most precious the tradition of Joseph, the great saviour of their nation from the miseries of famine; and his name here is greatly revered. Now the gratitude they express for what the English are doing for them is scarcely less! What will it be when they recognise Joseph's descendants through the son of an Egyptian mother! The natives here are very Conservative, and do not change much in a thousand years or so. One sees at every step, the force, the truth and accuracy of the Bible narratives; as here are the women going to the well with pitchers on their heads; dressed as they were a thousand years ago, and speaking the same language! It is a grand thing (continues our engineer) to be an Englishman. We are always feared, generally respected, and often loved. In the East, if a man wishes to speak of the height of honour and fair dealing, he talks of English truth! It is a proverb here! I thank God ve have a Government which will keep up the old traditions of honour and faith, and make us respected everywhere. I think the end of our dealings with Egypt will be its annexation to the Empire. There are many bands of brigands about now, and one must carry a revolver at night; but they rarely dare to attack an Englishman. The whole of the population is most friendly towards us. A Government engineer can go anywhere, Bush Mahendi (chief engineer) is quite a talisman; for the Arabs, though little above the brutes, quite comprehend the immense value of proper irrigation! Some of the BANNERS sent to me are going to Messina in Asia Minor! to a friend of a person here, who is much interested in the Identity question. The BANNER'S views on prophecy it certainly appears are correct."

Digitized by Google

So far the Egyptian official, who is of British origin. Our friend who sent us these quotations adds on his own account this remarkable sentiment:—"I must give you an Anglo-Israel point which may be new to you. It is this. It is an observed fact that Englishmen, or Britons if you will, are bad linguists in regard to European languages, and rarely speak them well. But these same men nevertheless acquire oriental languages with remarkable facility." Such are our friend's words. We are not sure we can endorse this last idea. Our own Indian experience rather contradicts it! Passing this by, however, we concur most fully with our correspondent when he says that Israel is evidently doing in Egypt the blessed work which our God sent them there to do. Being Israel, whom God made, created, and formed, to show forth His praise (Isa. xliii. 1, 7, 21, R.V.), it is clear the British are performing the work, as saviours of Egypt, which God gave them to carry out. They are consequently assiduously, earnestly, and in a painstaking way, working for the benefit of the fellaheen of Egypt; steadily raising the condition of the peasantry far above its hitherto normal, wretched, condition.

Correspondence.

BRITAIN'S UPPER HOUSE.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR PHILO-ISRAEL,—May I ask for a little space to call the attention of your readers to a remarkable passage bearing upon the changes proposed in our time-honoured House of Lords? It occurs in an article by the Hon. George Curzon, M.P., entitled, "A Purified British Senate," (see National Review for March). At a moment when ruthless hands are eagerly outstretched to pull down the Upper House, it will be read with interest by Anglo-Israelites in general, and by those who have made Britain's place in history their study in particular. The extract runs as follows:—

"Like the Church, like the British Monarchy, like the House of Commons itself, like every great and noble institution that we possess, the House of Lords, in its existing shape, is an accident, evolved out of heterogeneous elements by that providential dispensation which has ever seemed to watch over the destinies of the Anglo-Saxon race, converting their errors into blessings, extracting salvation even from their sins, investing the freaks of chance with the stately consequences of design, and by mild and merciful processes of change, averting the tempestuous throes of Revolution."

It is just the recognition of this extraordinary fact, coupled with a spiritual perception as to the cause thereof, which gives us confidence in this crisis. We know ourselves to be "a peculiar people," and we thankfully lay claim to the promise, "This people have I formed for Myself: they shall show forth My praise." We know that ours is the Throne of the House of Israel under "another name." We know that the Constitution of our House of Lords—whether or not in its wisdom it may see cause to modify some of its rules, or to remove abuses which may possibly have crept in—is of Divine origin, and as such cannot be abrogated. It is of older date than some men deem. Mr. Curzon says:—

"The historical aspect of the enquiry will not afford us much help. . . . We should find that the House of Lords has developed quite imperceptibly and unconsciously, by no act of statesmanship or effort of volition, into its present shape; that as originally composed it was never meant to be hereditary, or to play the part of a Second Chamber at all. . . . That the Statute Book may be searched in vain for its legislative enactment; that during the greater part of its history the hereditary element was not in the ascendant in its composition; and that the functions which in process of time it has acquired, no more correspond with any preconceived plan than they do with the precise postulates of abstract reason."

A footnote reminds us that "down to the dissolution of the Monasteries by Henry VIII., the Peers Spiritual greatly outnumbered the Peers Temporal;" and this fact, readily to be understood by all who are acquainted with Rome's pretensions, explains why, during the period that England submitted more or less to her thraldom,—"the hereditary element was not in the ascendant." When, however, Mr. Curzon tells us that "it is useless to inquire whether the House of Lords corresponds to its historical design, because no such design exists," and argues therefrom, that "there can be the less hesitation in constructing for ourselves a theoretical standard, &c.," we venture to join issue with him. We think we can supply the date by which to discover its "historical design." What is the date of its creation? Who framed its Constitution? are questions which may indeed perplex the secular historian; but the student of British-Israel's history can give both date and origin.

The creation of our House of Lords is recorded in Exodus xxiv., and the received date is 1491 B.C., making its antiquity about 3,380 years. If this can be proved—and it can be proven to the satisfaction of all who will examine the proofs that link Israel with Britain throughout the ages—it follows that "no weapon that is formed against it shall prosper." The nobles of the children of Israel (ver. 11.) under the Theocracy were not, as we see, an elective body chosen of the people; and as the Law of Primogeniture is clearly a Divine ordinance, and never allowed to be set aside, save by God Himself, we gather that the nobles, thus solemnly set apart, were destined to form an Hereditary Chamber. Israel's polity and Israel's Church alike date from the wilderness. Their earliest records have been given by the authorized historian of our earth's earliest ages, and they have been preserved and handed down to us on reliable and well-sifted evidence. This is our Statute Book, and in it we must search for any required records of the origin of either. When Israel was brought up out of Egypt—the cradle of the infancy of the nation—with a high hand and a stretched-out arm, God bestowed upon the newly formed and separated people a Constitution of His own framing. With the State was linked the divinely appointed Church, and "what God hath joined together, let not man put asunder." We may not here enter upon the vicissitudes of the House of Israel. When exiled from the Land of Promise by reason of her idolatries, first as captive, then as wanderer, we cannot look for copious records of her polity. But scanty as is our knowledge of early Saxon history, we find that they possessed an hereditary Upper House, and that the Bishops, as such, sat therein. Therefore, without endorsing the view of the British House of Lords being "an accident, evolved out of heterogeneous elements," we do believe that the marked providential guidance "which has ever seemed to watch over the destinies of the Anglo-Saxon (i.e. British-Israel) race," will overrule for good even the present onslaught on our House of "the nobles of Israel."

I am, dear Philo-Israel, faithfully yours,

ELLEN M. ROGERS,

Author of "Britain in History, Ancient and Modern; or, Proofs linking Israel with Britain throughout the Ages."

Glenwood, Weston-Super-Mare, April 9, 1888.

HIGHBRIDGE BAPTIST CHAPEL.—A sermon was preached on Sunday morning by the Rev. James Billington, F.R.H.S., of London, to a good congregation, and on Friday he gave a lecture in the same place on "Who are the Israelites, and where are they to be found?" The chair was occupied by the pastor, Rev. G. H. Lemon. The lecturer argued that the British race are no other than the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel, the ancient Israelites. He was much applauded by the audience during the delivery of his most interesting and instructive lecture. Mr. Billington also lectured at Burnham, Paignton, Dawlish, and Tiverton, Bath.—Local Paper.

Digitized by Google

NOTICES.

All communications intended for the Editor, to be addressed: "Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Clifton, Bristol.

SUBSCRIPTIONS. £ s. d.

Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free 0 7 6
Two Copies (including Double Numbers) 0 13 6
Three Copies ,, ,, ,, ... 1 0 4
Four Copies ,, ,, ,, ... 1 5 6
Six Copies ,, ,, ,, ... 1 16 4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-grand, London, to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C., or F. W. PARRY & Co., 29, Paternoster-row, London.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

Contents Bills and Show Cards may be obtained on application to the Publishers.

Advertisements should be sent to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

Prepaid Advertisements are inserted at the rate of thirty words for 1s. 4d.

MANCHESTER AND SALFORD BRITISH-ISRAEL AND BIBLICAL EVIDENCE ASSOCIATION.

(Late Anglo-Israel Association).

ANNUAL TEA MEETING on Tuesday, May 1, 1888, at St. James's School, Major-street, off Portland-street, Manchester. Tea on tables at 6.30. Tickets ninepence each.

Hon. Secretary, F. S. GANDY, 27, Phelan Street, Collyhurst, Manchester.

Just Published, price 2d., post free 3d.

THE A B C CHURCH AND CHAPEL DIRECTORY AND MAY MEETING HAND-BOOK, containing names and addresses of London and Suburban Clergymen and Ministers of all Protestant Denominations, and the name and situation of Church, also the most complete May Meeting List. The Daily News says—"A very useful little hand-book."
Robert Banks & Son, Racquet Court, Fleet Street, E.C.

Just published—Cloth, 2s. 6d.—a re-issue of

The Origin of Masonic Ritual and Tradition:

A Lecture on the Three Degrees, by BRO. WM. ROWBOTTOM, P.M., 1028, with facsimile of a very rare Masonic engraving published in 1789.

"Exquisitely clear and singularly correct in everything wherein I may be any authority or guide."—Professor PIAZZI SMYTH. "Will be found of considerable interest to many besides Masons."—Church Bells.

Oxford: S. Rowbottom and Son; London: R. Banks and Son, Racquet Court, Fleet Street, E.C.; and F. W. Parry and Co., 29, Paternoster Row, E.C.

Price Five Shillings.—"Substantially and attractively got up, and profusely illustrated."—Oldham Chronicle.

Eildon Grange: A Tale.

By ANDREW CLARK, M.A., Vicar of St. Michael's, Oxford. "One of the most charming books. . . . The illustrations are full of playful humour."—Scotsman. "The book is undoubtedly a happy one."—The Oxford Magazine. "Both entertaining and bracing."—Dundee Advertiser.

Oxford: S. Rowbottom and Son; London: Hamilton, Adams and Co., 32, Paternoster Row, E.C.

☞ Ask for this Book at the Libraries.

WORKS BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

The History of the House of Israel. How They Were Lost and How They Were Found. Told for the children. Price 6d., cloth 1s.; post free 7d. and 1s. 1d. Fifth edition.

A Resume of the Scriptural Argument, Proving the Identity of the British Race with the Lost Ten Tribes. Price 1d.; 6s. per hundred, postage 6d.

Our Identity: What it is Not; What it is; and Our Obligations To-day in Respect to it. Being a Lecture recently delivered in London by Philo-Israel, and published by special request. Price 2d., a reduction for quantities.

FITS! FITS!! FITS!!!

ALL PERSONS SUFFERING FROM EPILEPSY should send name and address to JAMES OSBORNE, Medical Pharmacy, Ashbourne, Derbyshire who will forward, free of charge, full particulars, with Testimonials, of the most successful remedy ever discovered for this distressing malady. Sent to all parts of the world. Reference permitted to Rev. J. BAKER, M.A. 80, Bolton Road, Pendleton, Manchester.

HUMAN LIFE.—FIFTY YEARS' Record of Facts, Principles, and Discoveries (just published, complete) Relating to the Improvement and Preservation of Human Life on Earth. Origin and true treatment of diseases. A series of articles by DR. SAMUEL BIRLEY, M.D., Ph.D. Book form, 50 pages. SENT FREE to every applicant by the publishers, GORDON B. MURRAY & CO., 50, Theobald's-road, Holborn, E.C. Write to-day

NEW BOOK BY DR. WILD.

Just Published, Price 3s., Cloth, Bevelled Boards, Gilt Lettered. Sent by Post on receipt of Published Price.

TALKS

FOR

THE TIMES.

BY JOSEPH WILD, M.A., D.D.,

Pastor of the Bond-st. Congregational Church, Toronto.

CONTENTS.—Chapter 1. A Gift of One Hundred and Ninety-Two Million Acres of Land. 2. The Return of the Jews to Palestine. 3. Folks that won't be Somebody. 4. The Four Prophecies of Egypt. 5. The Stone Kingdom and Dynamite; and the Orange Bill. 6. "144!" 7. "666!" 8. The Transit of Venus. 9. The Miracles of Antichrist; and the High Rock Image of Massachusetts, U.S. 10. The Man who could not sleep, and what came of it. 11. The Rainbow. 12. London Destroyed, and Jerusalem a Seaport. 13. Liberalism. 14. A Graft without a Stock. 15. Mouldy Bread and an Oath. 16. A Tombstone Inscription. 17. Dog Lappers. 18. How to get Rich.

ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-st., E.C.

Dr. JOSEPH WILD'S WORKS

The most useful works on the subject.

NEW EDITION JUST PUBLISHED.

THE LOST TEN TRIBES

Price 3s., post free 3s. 3d.

'We have much pleasure in directing attention to this handsome volume. . . . We promise our readers that if they procure this work, and will peruse it, they will find 'Our Identity' discussed in a clear, novel, racy, and from an American point of view, which is sure to interest."—Banner of Israel.

THE FUTURE OF ISRAEL AND JUDAH.

Price 2s., post free 2s. 3d.

R. BANKS & SON, RACQUET-COURT, FLEET-ST.

ALL PUBLICATIONS ON THE IDENTITY OF THE LOST TRIBES OF ISRAEL

May be obtained at the Office of

ROBERT BANKS & SON, RACQUET COURT, FLEET STREET.

The Banner of Israel (Weekly No. and Monthly Part). The Messenger, Two Witnesses, etc., forwarded immediately on publication at office rates. The Canadian Advance, post free for one year for 4s. 6d.

Catalogues post free on application.

MR. EDWARD HINE has returned from his lecturing tour in America. Friends wishing to arrange for him to lecture can communicate with Isaac Loveland, Shoreham, near Sevenoaks, Kent, at present fixing no dates. Mr. Hine's publications have had a large circulation, and can be obtained of F. W. Parry & Co., 29, Paternoster Row, London, E.C.

Forty-Seven Identifications, 6d., post free 7d

Cui Bono? 6d., post free, 7d.

Lost Israel Found, 3s 6d., post free, 3s. 9d!

Also The Nation Warned by the Scripture Teachings of the Great Pyramid. 6d., post, 7d.

1,000 Valuable Recipes.

COMPRISING MEDICAL, HOUSEHOLD, and Toilet Secrets invaluable to every person. Also Rare and Valuable Trade Secrets that cannot be obtained elsewhere, and are indispensable to every Artisan, Mechanic, Business Man, Manufacturer, Farmer, etc., etc. An investment of 1s. in this book will save pounds in a year. Post free, 15 stamps—W. B. FOOT & SON, 44, Camden Road, London, N.W.

THE "BUSY BEE" 5/6 SEWING MACHINE. 5/6

This Wonderful Machine will sew thick or thin material, and is so simple that a child can work it. Every machine is warranted, and sent carriage paid for 6s. Polished Stained Wood Box, 1s. 6d. extra.

W. B. FOOT & SON, 44, CAMDEN RD., LONDON, N.W.

PIANOFORTES, Harmoniums, American Organs. Why buy at shops inferior made instruments, and pay large profits, when you can buy direct from the Maker High-class Instruments, and save 50 per cent. by so doing? Full value allowed for old Instruments in exchange as part payment. Write for Price Lists and Testimonials to G. LINSTEAD, 2, Oseney Crescent, Camden Road, London. Established 1874.

Published by ROBERT BANKS & SON,

RACQUET COURT, FLEET STREET, E.C.

Postal Orders may be obtained at any Post Office in the United Kingdom for the following amounts: 1s., 1s. 6d., ½d. each; 2s., 2s. 6d., 3s., 3s 6d. 4s., 4s. 6d., 5s., 7s. 6d., 10s., 10s. 6d., 1d each; 15s., 20s., 1½d. each. They should be "crossed" City Bank, Ludgate Hill, E.C. Stamps received.

JEHOVAH TRIUMPHANT. The New and Complete Theology and Electric Light of the Bible, containing the History of British-Israel, Compiled from the Sacred Scriptures. Cloth gilt, price 10s. 6d., post free for Postal Order or Cheque.

THE GEOGRAPHY OF THE GATES. By PHILO-ISRAEL. With Map, and six full page, and one double-page, Illustrations, printed on plate paper. 208 pages, in handsome cloth, gilt. Price 3s. 6d.; post free.

THE WORD: THE WORLD: THE BRANCH. By J. LEYLAND FIELDEN, Esq. Price 12s., post free.

EPHRAIM-ENGLAND. The Nineteenth Century Revelation of the Fruits of History. By Rev. R. DOUGLAS, Vicar of Kidsgrove. Cloth gilt, lettered, 4s., gilt edges 5s., free by post.

FIFTY REASONS WHY THE ANGLO-SAXONS ARE ISRAELITES of the Lost Tribes of the House of Israel. By Rev. W. H. POOLE, D.D. Price 6d., post free 7d.

BIBLE LESSONS AND REFLECTIONS. By the late ROBERT GAIRDNER, of Kilmarnock, N.B. Price 2s. 6d., by post 2s. 9d.; cheap edition, limp cloth, 1s., by post, 1s. 2d.

"FRIENDS IN COUNSEL."

SPECIAL CONFERENCE NUMBER.

THE MESSENGER,

APRIL, 1888.

Containing Reports, revised by the Authors, of the various Papers and Addresses given at the British-Israel Conference, Wolverhampton.

Rev. R. Douglas, Vicar of Kidsgrove; Rev. S. C. Adam, Vicar of St. Jude's, Wolverhampton; Surgeon-General Grant, Cheltenham; Rev. F. Aston, Vicar of Bushbury, Wolverhampton; Commander Roberts, Bristol; Rev. C. W. Hickson, Vicar of St. Bartholomew's, Bristol; Rev. E. Whittaker, Vicar of St, Mark's, Lyncombe, Bath; D. A. Onslow, Esq., J.P.; Dr. Alder Smith, F.R.C.S., London; Oxonian; Rev. H. H. Marriott, Plymouth; Rev. J. Idrisyn Jones, Birkenhead. Including also contributions by Oxonian, the Rector of Ardkeen, Mrs. Haskard and D. E. Olivier, B.A.

Price 6d., post free 7d., to be obtained of F. W. Parry & Co., 29, Paternoster-row, London.

SOUND, PURE, WHITE

TEETH!

Those who value these will try

CARBOLINE

(The Great Sanitary Tooth Paste).

1/6 & 2/6 per Pot.

Through Chemists, or post free from the Makers,

GEORGE & WELCH

WORCESTER.

Lancet writes:—"To save the teeth use a good carbolic daily."

Certain HARNESS' Cure.

ELECTROPATHIC BELT

FOR

SCIATICA

R. J. WATSON, Esq., 13, Market Street, Harwich, writes:—"Harness' Electropathic Belt has completely cured me of sciatica. After wearing it for a week I got better, and am now quite free from pain."

Guaranteed to generate a mild continuous current of Electricity, which speedily cures all Disorders of the Nerves, Stomach, Liver and Kidneys. Thousands of Testimonials. Pamphlet & Advice free on application to Mr. C. B. Harness, Consulting Electrician, the Medical Battery Co. Ltd. Only Address,

52, OXFORD ST., LONDON, W. (Corner of Rathbone Place.)

Call to-day, if possible, or write at once

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. F. W. PARRY (late GUEST & Co.), 29 PATERNOSTER-ROW WEDNESDAY, APRIL 25, 1888 [All rights reserved.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."

(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. XII., No. 592. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, MAY 2, 1888. [DOUBLE NUMBER, TWOPENCE.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
Our Ships, and Guns, and Men	173
"What think ye of Christ? Whose Son is He" (Matt. xxii. 42)	174
More Evidence Connecting the Ancient Inhabitants of Ireland with the Phœnicians and Hebrews. Part X. By Joseph Thomson	175
The Crisis in France. By John T. Gott	176
England, the Modern Israel	1 7
Sabbath Desecration by Israel's "Upper Classes"	178
The Company of Nations and the Fulness of Nations	179
How the Roman Catholic Enemy of Israel is Coming in like a Flood upon us	180
An American Explains why the Anglo-Saxon Race is "The Head and Not the Tail"	181
The Objections of a Vicar's Daughter	181
The Key of the Indian Ocean	182
The Teutonic Theory in Connection with the Review of "My Jewels." By Sarah Sharp	184
Divine World-Regenerating Force	185
Christian Opponents Please Reply	185
Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association. Special Appeal	186
Anglo-Israel Free Distribution Fund	186
Israel's Scripture and Prayer Union	187
Correspondence	187

"OUR SHIPS, AND GUNS, AND MEN."

LORD GEORGE HAMILTON, as First Lord of the Admiralty, has just issued a statement in explanation of the Naval Estimates for 1888-9, which, for the first time, does duty for the usual exposition of the case on the floor of the House of Commons as heretofore. The result is declared by the Press to be highly satisfactory, and to the lay reader of the document it seems, as regards the navy, to be all that can be wished. We have, according to the First Lord, the three main component elements of a fleet; we have the ships, we have the guns, and we have the men as well. We may add that we have two more needful things, and the last the most indispensable of all: we have the money to pay for our fleets, and we have our God's blessing with our nation, making us "the head and not the tail, above only and not beneath" all other nations, because we are Israel! The concluding remarks of Lord George Hamilton's statement are so excellent and to the point, that we feel compelled to ask our friends' attention to them. They are as follows:—

The experience gained since last year, and the opportunities afforded during that time of making close and minute comparison between the strength of the navy of this country and that of foreign nations, confirms my previous statement that our relative superiority is undoubted, and that we shall, if the present expenditure be maintained, each year increase that superiority. Our organization for war has much improved during the last year, and satisfactory progress has been made in working out and fitting together the complementary parts of a scheme for the full utilization in times of emergency of the naval resources of the country. Looking, however, at the three main component parts of a fleet, ships, guns, and men, we have no reason to be dissatisfied with what we have got, if we take not an ideal standard, but that common to the fleets of our neighbours. The ships recently completed and commissioned have fulfilled on the whole the undertaking of their designers, and although one or two casualties have occurred in the past in the manufacture of our larger guns out of the great number issued during the last 18 months for service, none have in any sense failed.

The determination of the Government to effectively arm the coaling stations abroad and the home ports must largely increase our offensive naval power, for the bases of operation from which our fleet can issue will require little or no naval defence.

But if it is permissible to speak with confidence of our superiority so far as actual fighting power is concerned, when we consider the defence and protection which our commerce may require, extreme caution and reserve must be exercised. The conditions of naval warfare have so changed and are so changing from day to day, that nothing but actual experience could justify any confident prediction as to how a thoroughly effective protection can be given by any fleet to a commerce whose sea-going steam tonnage is double that of the rest of the world.

Here we have some sentences of the First Lord which are clearly Israelitish in their character, and point distinctly to our nation as "the Israel of God." He declares, for instance, that our navy as compared with foreign navies is "the head and not the tail, above only and not beneath" them all in respect to superiority relatively. We have the ships, the guns, and the men we want, to make efficient fleets as compared with our foreign neighbours. Our ships have been a success; our guns recently manufactured have all turned out well. The foreign coaling stations, or Gates, are being effectively armed, that is, our "Doors are being shut about us," and our home ports are being put into a state of defence, that is, our "chambers" are being secured so as to afford a safe asylum when we shall have to enter into them according to the prophecies (Isa. xxvi. 20). Our steam tonnage for purposes of commerce is admitted to be "double that of the rest of the world," and therefore the problem how the empire and this vast commerce is to be defended by our fleets is a question of the first importance, requiring "extreme caution and reserve" in considering how best it is to be solved. We know that the Lord works principally by human means and human intelligence, but without His blessing and control we know that our fleets, and ships, and guns, and men, and money too, all will go for nought; since He can bring the best councils to confusion if it please Him, and He can give the victory to His people against the largest odds. But, being Israel, we have the largest promises; we have the promise of God's continual presence with us as a nation. We find it in Exod. xxix. 45, 46 (R.V.), "I will dwell among the children of Israel" is the promise, "and will be their God." He represents Himself as having brought them out of the land of Egypt that He might dwell among them. We have the standing promise to us as "Israel obedient" that we shall be superior to all our foes. Deut. xxviii. 7 (R.V.) records it: "The Lord Jehovah shall cause thine enemies that rise up against thee to be smitten before thee; they shall come out against thee one way and shall flee before thee seven ways." Immunity from attack is not promised; but victory when we are attacked is guaranteed!

Digitized by Google

Our Identity, then, is full of promise to us as a people, because the Lord is faithful to His oath and to His promise, and because He loves His people, and will do for them what He said He would from the beginning. With these assurances and promises before us, it is a satisfaction to us as believers in God's protecting care, to know that He is providing for our national safety by giving us the means to secure it. Thus it is comforting to learn that we have two new first-class cruisers now under construction by the Admiralty, to be called "The Blake" and "The Blenheim," which are intended "to surpass in speed, in coal endurance, protection and armament, anything hitherto attempted."

These vessels are to be of 9,000 tons displacement each, their speed 22 knots in the measured mile, and 20 knots in continuous steaming at sea. Their armament will be 40 guns of various descriptions, besides four torpedo tubes; two guns will be 22-ton, bow and stern chasers, and a broadside of ten 6-in. 5-ton guns of the new quick-firing type. The armour of these new ships will be only a steel deck of a thickness of six inches maximum to three inches minimum.

These and other preparations that our Ministers of State are making to safeguard Israel, her interests, and her possessions, we accept as God's good gifts to His people. We do not rely upon them, but we rely upon the living God alone who uses these means to effect His purposes for His heritage and inheritance. It is at least allowable to us to be deeply thankful that our nation's interests are safe in the hands of our invincible, Almighty King, and we therefore call upon all our readers to praise the Lord for the satisfactory condition of our naval defences, assured that He is superintending them, and therefore will see that they are adequate to the purposes He has at heart for us His chosen ones.

'WHAT THINK YE OF CHRIST? WHOSE SON IS HE?"—(MATT. XXII. 42).

THE question that the Lord Jesus Christ asked the Pharisees, is one that must suggest itself to Anglo-Israelites, for it concerns their Redeemer and their King. "What think they of Christ?" Was He merely a man like themselves? or was He a Being unique among the sons of men, supernatural, and miraculous in His conception, birth, life, teaching, death, and resurrection? If, like the Socinians, we remove from the life of Christ all that men call "miraculous," then we have nothing which we can call Christian in our belief! We have then but a Being like ourselves to look to; powerless to save, impotent to offer a sacrifice worthy of acceptance by the offended Lawgiver; and unable to redeem. But thanks be to God, the Redeemer of Israel is Jehovah-Jesus, "the MAN that is God's fellow" (Zech. xiii. 7), the equal of the Lord of Hosts; He whose righteousness, which He gives us to appear in before God, is the righteousness of the Holy One Himself. "This is the heritage of the servants of the Lord, and their righteousness which is of Me, saith the Lord Jehovah" (Isa. liv. 17, R.V.), "Him who knew no sin" (therefore unlike sinful men), He made to be SIN on our behalf; that we might become the righteousness of God in Him" (2 Cor. v. 21, R.V.). Anglo-Israelites, then, are bound above all men to have very decided views of Christ, and be able to declare at once whose Son He is. He is the God-Man—the "Son of God," who is yet God the Son. He was, we know, "in the form of God," and yet counted it not a prize, (or a thing to be grasped, for it was His own)—to be on an equality with God—but emptied Himself, taking the form of a servant, being made in the likeness of men; and being formed in fashion as a man, He humbled Himself, becoming obedient unto death, yea, the death of the cross" (Phil. ii. 6, 7, R.V.). Our King, the Lord Jesus, is the ruler of the whole earth, for one of our promises (Dan. vii. 27), tells us that being "the Most High, His kingdom (that commensurate with the kingdom under the whole heaven), is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey Him." He is then "the King of Kings and Lord of Lords," the Alpha and Omega, "the first and the last, and which is, and was, and is to come, the Almighty!" These are the views of Israelites respecting the "King of Israel," who is also "King of the Jews" (John i. 49, xii. 13; Matt. ii. 6, R.V.). He is the great, and good, and chief Shepherd of His people (John x. 2; Heb. xiii. 20; 1 Peter v. 4, R.V.). They cannot therefore fail to love and worship Him as their God and Saviour; their Creator, King, and Husband; their Guide, Preserver, and Brother; for Anglo-Israelites know from the Scriptures that being nationally the people of God, the Lord Jesus died for them (Isa. liii. 8, R.V.); that He created, made, and formed them for His own glory (Isa. xliii. 1, 7, 21); that He is their own Saviour (Isa. xlv. 15—17, xlix. 26, lx. 16; Matt. i. 21; Acts xiii. 23, v. 30, 31), that He is their Husband and Guide (Isa. liv. 5; Jer. iii. 14; Isa. xlii. 16; Exod. xxxiii. 16), and has redeemed them (Psa. cxxx. 7, ciii. 3, 4; Luke xxiv. 21). He is with them now, during this dispensation, for He said to His early Israelite Church, (therefore to us to-day), "Lo! I am with you always, even to the end of the world" (Matt. xxviii. 20). The Lord Jesus Christ is "the Chief among ten thousand, and altogether lovely" to those who believe in the identity of the British with Israel; for, without Him, their hopes would be vain indeed! The promises they rely upon were the promises of Jesus the Son of God, "to Abraham and his seed for ever;"—Abraham rejoiced to see His day. He saw it and was glad (John viii. 56, R.V.). Anglo-Israelites know that the Lord Jesus, their coming king, was "made a minister of the circumcision for the truth of God that He might confirm the promises made unto the fathers" (Rom. xv. 8, R.V.). They regard Him therefore as their only hope, and look to His Divine Power as their only guarantee that what He hath promised to our forefathers, He will fulfil to us, their Hebrew children, since on Calvary He shed His precious blood, that as the purchase of His cross He might receive gifts for men (the men of His good pleasure) even for Israel, and so make good His oath (Psa. lxviii. 18; Eph. iv. 8; Gen. xxii. 17, 18, R.V.). But the gifts the Lord has bestowed upon His people He requires that they shall pass on to the heathen races, who are outside the circle of His "chosen ones." "For God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten Son that whosoever believeth in Him, should not perish, but have everlasting life." British-Israelites thus, are only God's stewards,—His almoners, and messengers;—prepared, formed, created, and endowed for this very purpose; to receive His good gifts, the purchase of His cross, and after partaking of them first themselves (for the children must first be filled Mark vii. 27), to distribute them to all nations, families, and kindreds of the earth, according to the promises and prophecies. We praise and bless God, then, for Christ; and what we think of Him is this, that He is our Life, our Light, our Hope, our Rock, our Castle, our Fortress, our Deliverer, our Divine Saviour, and our Redeemer, our King,—nay, our God, Jehovah-Jesus, the Son of the Highest, our Emmanuel, God with US!

THE A B C Church and Chapel Directory, and May Meeting Hand-Book will be found a most useful little hand-book for persons visiting the metropolis during April, May and June.

Digitized by Google

MORE EVIDENCE CONNECTING THE ANCIENT INHABITANTS OF IRELAND WITH THE PHŒNICIANS AND HEBREWS.

By Joseph Thomson.

(Continued from page 128.)

PART X.

XXVI.—THE ROBODGHII.

The promontory of Robogh, some suppose, gave its name to the Robogdi, an ancient people of Ireland, inhabiting parts of the counties of Antrim, Londonderry and Tyrone. Camden thinks Robogd is synonymous with Fair-fore-land. It is a showy and imposing cape, and on the water furnishes ever varying and peculiar novelties of view: its modern name is Benmore, or Fair Head. In the old dialects of the Brigantes, re, ri, and ro, are used indifferently for rae, or ragh, i.e., before; and vog-diu, means a wave; so Robogd would express the local position—before the waves of the sea. But it is more probable that the promontory was named after the people living near it, and not the people after the promontory; from the Phœnician rabh-gad, i.e., a number of associates, or rob-gad, tumultuous allies, plunderers, invaders.

XXVII.—THE HEREMONII.

The Heremonii, or Hermonii (classified as the Elii, Falgii, Caelenii, and the Morii tribes), occupied the whole of the modern province of Leinster. The tradition is that they descended from Heremon, son of Milesius, from Spain. Another belief is that they were so called from residing in the west; the name it is supposed signifying a western tract. But if it be of Irish origin it were better to derive it from armuinn, i.e., exiles; but this even Dr. Villanueva does not approve of. He would rather deduce it from the Phœnician ermin, i.e., naked, unclothed; or ermon, a chestnut tree, in which the hills of that district abounded. "But what," Dr. Villanueva asks, "if I should assert that they were Phœnicians from the vicinity of Mount Hermon, which projects over Paneas" (Dan)? This famous mountain was so high and cold that it was capped with snow in summer; this repelled the natives to the more congenial air of Tyre. Or they may have been so called from Hermonin, a hill between Tabor and Hermon on the other side Jordan, and whose inhabitants are called by geographers Hermonii, or Hermonitæ.

But Dr. Villanueva adds, "the Irish Heremonii may have been so called as being essentially a tribe of the Phœnicians. The Syrians were called Aramæi or Aremin, from Aram, a region of Asia Minor, whose maritime inhabitants were Phœnicians, and their chief cities Tyre and Sidon." This district was not named from Aram, the son of Kemuel, son of Nahor (Gen. xxii. 20—23), but from Aram, the fifth son of Shem (Gen. x. 22), from whom the inhabitants of the coast always boasted themselves as being descended. Hence Shur—i.e., minus a letter Ashur, or Assyria—and Syria itself, which was confounded with the latter, was called by them Aram. Hence, also, the Syrians of Canaan, and the Phœnicians of the sea coast, affected the distinctive designation of Arameans. The Greeks called them Syrians, but they used to call themselves Aramæans, as is affirmed by Josephus and Strabo. In the Old Testament also, we find Aram put for Syria, and Arami for Syrian—Arami and Armai, also, to the ancients meant idolaters, because the first worshippers of idols recorded in Scripture were Syrians; as Terah, the father of Abraham, and Laban; also later Nahaman. The gods of Syria (Jud. x. 6) were called Elhei Aram, i.e., emphatically the goddess of Syria, by which name Juno was worshipped in the East, and had a temple dedicated to her in Hierapolis, a Syrian city. The Syriac language itself was also called Arimith, as in Ezra iv. 7, and 2 Kings xviii. 26, "Speak to us in the Syriac tongue (arimith), and not speak to us in the Jewish (Ihudaith)."

Ireland, perhaps, retains some vestiges of this people in the name of Armoy, a small town in Antrim; in Arman, or Ardman, a village in the county of Wexford. In Spain also we find Armian, a town of the Astures, and Armona, the name of a mountain in the district of the Arragonians.

That the Heremonii were Aremin, or Syrians, will be the more readily admitted when we consider that the names of their tribes were Phœnician. Thus Falgii, from falg or flag, signifies a division; Elii from elin, ie., strangers, also eminent, surpassing; or from aeli, i.e., a sacrificing priest, from ela a holocaust, or whole burnt offerings: elil in the Syriac and Chaldaic signifies idols as it does also, illustrious; Caelenii the ancient inhabitants of a district called Cælan, county Wicklow, conveyed to the Phœnicians the idea of cloked, from calaen, i.e., a cloak or outer garment. Nor is it at all improbable that these were a tribe of Babylonians, consisting of those who after the captivity were mixed with the Syrians, for Caleneh was a name given to Babylon. The Morii were so called from being professionally masters and instructors of others, this being the literal and exact meaning of Mori, or its plural Morin. A family in Ireland still retains this name.

XXVIII.—THE FORMORII.

Some think that the Fomorii, or Famoriani, were the aborigines of Ireland. They were celebrated for their predatory attacks upon other settlers, and all agree that with the assistance of the Dannani they succeeded in its conquest, though there is much dispute about the time of their arrival. Some think that they became settled in Ireland before the second arrival of the Belgæ, and were Punic, or Iberic (i.e., from Spain) merchants who had from very ancient times visited the coasts: accordingly they explain their name as meaning "sea-farers," or "mariners," from the Irish word "fomhor," or "fomhorac," a pirate. But Dr. Villanueva rather thinks it is from the Phœnician "fom-or," i.e., a foot shaking the earth before fire; i.e., dancers in honour, and revellers in honour of fire. The sacrificial feasts of the Phœnicians, as well as of many other ancient heathen nations, generally terminated in drunkenness, with lascivious plays and dances. But if the Fomorii be also the Fomhoraice or Formoragh mentioned in Irish minstrelsy, and who are said to have been pirates; and it being known that these latter were a colony of the Pœni, or Phœnicians, Dr. Villanueva considers the name originated from "frima-arac," i.e., a scissure of fugitives: whence Formariz, a town in Spain, and Formiche, the name of two small towns among the Celtiberians. A vestige of these people may also be preserved in Fermoy, the name of a town in the county of Cork; which some think is an abbreviation of Fear-magh, or Fear-magh-feine, i.e., a man living in a sacred level.

XXIX.—THE FIRBOLGS.

The Firbolgs, Bolgæ, or Belgians, numbering about 5,000 men, under five chiefs, either by the defeat or desertion of the Fomorians, got possession of Ireland. The leaders' names were Slaingey, Rughuighe, or Rory, Gann, Gannan, and Sengan, brothers and children of Dela, of the race of the Nemedians. They divided the island into five parts, which originated the Pentarchy, lasting with little interruption until the twelfth century. Slaingey, governor of Leinster, was also chief of the Pentarchy, or monarch of the whole island. These people were known by three different names—viz., Gallenians, Damnonians and Belgians; this last being their general name. Their dominion lasted about 80 years, under nine kings, viz., Slaingey, Rory, Gann, Geanan, Sengan, Fiacha, Rionall, Fiobgin, and Eogha, who married Tailta, daughter of a Spanish prince, and who gave name to the place of her burial, Tailton, in Meath.* The Firbolgs established themselves first in the vicinity of Wexford and Arklow, on the east coast of Ireland. They are often mentioned in the ancient poems and annals of Ireland.

* Mac Geoghegan.

Digitized by Google

and it is generally supposed that they came from Britain. They are also called Siol m Bolgæ, and Slioght m Bealidh, and were distinguished into three nations, Firbolgæ, Firdomnan and Firgalion, i.e., Clan Bolus. Clan Domnan, and clan Galion.*

The learned do not agree about the origin of the name Bolgæ. Some think that Clan Bolus points out the Belgæ of Britain, who, having come from Belgium, or Lower Germany, spread through the present counties of Somerset and Wilts, and that the British language which they spoke in Ireland was expressively designated Belgaid, i.e., a Belgic idiom. Others think they were called Bolgæ from "bolg," i.e., a quiver, as excelling in archery; and others from the Irish "bolg," i.e., a poet, or sage, as being eminent in these characters. But more probably those are nearer the truth who consider the name to have some connection with their religion, as being derived from the worship paid to their gods. In the language of the Celts, Germans, and all the northern nations, Bel stood for Sol, or Apollo, the sun; and was variously termed Bal, Beal and Sol, intimating his dominion as lord of the world. This originated from the Phœnicians, who scrupled not at offering human sacrifices to their Baal, as well as the immolation of brute beasts. Hence in Irish the first of May is called La Beal teine, i.e., the day of the fire of Beal. Several Irish mountains are also called Cnocgreine, i.e., the mountain of the sun; and on many of them are discernable the framework of the altars, and dilapidated ruins of the temples of these Gentile idolaters. The old Irish name for the year was Beal-aine, now Bliad-hain, i.e., literally the circle of Baal, the period of the sun's annual revolution. All these terms came from the religious rites and teachings of the Phœnicians. From their bal, too, which means power or wisdom, is derived the Irish "balc," of the same meaning, and "balg," i.e., a man of letters. To the worship paid by these tribes to Sol or Beal may also be traced the names Siol m Bolgæ, and Slioght m Bealidh, "slil" in the Phœnician meaning a cymbal, or timbrel; and "shiol" fire.

XXX.—THE GALLIONII.

The Gallionii or Gallænii, or clan Gallion, a tribe of the Fir-Belgæ or Bolgæ, are thought to be so named from Gallena, a city of the Attrebatii, who bordered upon the Belgæ in Britain, occupying the present county of Gloucester. From them Lagenia, which was formerly reckoned the fifth province of Ireland, was called Coiged-Galian. Villanueva thinks it evident that they received their name from the Phœnician word "gallein," which means departing, or transported to another country; more properly applied to voluntary emigrants, unless it was derived from their idolatrous ritual: for the Phœnicians used to term the heaps of stones huddled up together, on which they sacrificed their victims, "gaelin." Hence many Spanish towns appear to have been named; as Galinda, Galindo, Galinday, Galindush, Galinsoga, Gallinar, Galliner, Galinera, etc. In Ireland also there would seem to be some vestiges of the clan Gallion, or Gallionii; in Gallian the name of that tract of country comprising the greatest part of Kildare, Carlow and Queen's counties; in Gallen, the name of a barony in the county Mayo; in Gallen Hills, the name of a town in Tyrone; and in Gallion Point, the southern point of the harbour of Castle-haven in the county Cork.

(To be continued).

* Dr. Villanueva. It will be noticed that these two writers virtually agree respecting the threefold division of the Irish Belgæ.

THE ARK, PARADISE STREET, ROTHERHITHE.—Identity conference is arranged to be held at the Ark, Paradise-street, Rotherhithe, on Whit Monday, May 21, afternoon at 3, evening at 7. Tea will be provided for those coming from a distance. Several well-known writers and advocates of the Identity will be present. Afternoon Subject: "How best to promote the cause."

THE CRISIS IN FRANCE.

By JOHN T. GOTT.

THE French have ever been a fickle people, and they are decidedly addicted to hero-worship. Whether their leader be Emperor, President, or Dictator, he must in their eyes be a hero. The French nation has been a fire-brand among European Powers, more than once, and now that the revolutionary fan is at work again, we are called upon to watch the result of this important sign of the times.

When the Emperor Napoleon III. failed as a hero, in their eyes, by the surrender at Sedan, they demanded and obtained a republic. Now, their self-elected presidents have been so incompetent, and have fallen into such disfavour, that the nation demands a change of government, and somebody to worship. There is every prospect of another dictatorship, and General Boulanger is pointed out as the coming man.

And who is Boulanger? That is a question which many will find difficult to answer, especially when we peruse and consider the number of favourable and adverse criticisms which have recently appeared respecting his character and career.

M. Zola says, "Boulanger is a fetish, as Gambetta was, and may raise himself to the Dictatorship." A fetish is one who fills, in the mind of the French public, the place which has been vacant ever since Gambetta's death, the place of the ideal hero: the object of admiration little short of worship. "Whatever faiths Paris has abandoned, she retains her belief in a fetish. She has had a good many fetishes in her time, and has discarded them one after another, with as much fickleness as that shown by a Gold Coast negro when he burns to-morrow what he adores to-day. But a fetish of some kind is necessary as ballast, for however brief a time for the unstable Parisian mind, and it is General Boulanger who has now been promoted to that pinnacle of dubious honour and precarious security." Yorkshire Post, March 31.

M. Zola's opinion of Boulanger is not very flattering, but he knows his country and his kindred, and his opinion is worth noting. Boulanger, he continues, "may heap blunder upon blunder, but that will not damage his popularity. In the eyes of the multitude he represents the abstract idea of a Saviour. The present Government may persecute him, disgrace him, tear off his uniform, knock off his plumed shako, break his sword—but Boulanger will remain as he is—the personality of an abstract idea."

The French lost faith in Napoleon III., and the monarchy ended. They have now lost faith in their presidents, and the Democratic Republic is waning fast. One has well written, "France longs for the dawn of the star which shall presage better things: and who fills the eye to-day so much as General Boulanger? Withdrawn from Paris, he exercised at Claremont a power, none the less feared because it was ridiculed. General Boulanger, is, to-day, the cynosure of every eye, and that in a country where notoriety is the shortest road to supremacy."

There is, therefore, every probability that France is about to be delivered into the hands of a "dictator," and if so, we may look for military projects of a startling nature, ere long.

One newspaper correspondent says that Boulanger "rides about on a black horse,"* and the mob acclaim him "a saviour," "a god." The horse, in scripture, is symbolical of swiftness, and the colour, black, symbolical of calamity, fear, famine, and death. We know not what truth there may be in this report, or

* "When he had opened the third seal, I heard the third beast say, Come and see. And I beheld, and lo! a black horse: and he that sat on him had a pair of balances in his hand, etc." (Rev. vi.) Plague, pestilence, and famine generally follow every great war. This chapter in Revelation intimates that wheat will be dear, while the reports in the press, at the present time, state that it will be remarkably cheap this year, provided war does not break out. The Holy One of Israel is thus vouchsafing signs to us that we may touch the fringe of the dark prophecies of Daniel, and St John in Revelation, though we are far from being able to handle the garment of prophecy as a whole.

Digitized by Google

whether, if true, it portends anything or not. One thing is certain, viz., this European military strain cannot be maintained very long. The sparks of conflagration must burst out somewhere, and the French revolutionary fan is not an unlikely spot on which to turn one's eyes. We know not when nor where it will break out, but we do know that it will be "sudden" and quickly executed. So much the more need is there for more vigilance in noting the signs of the times.

Every newspaper we take up points to a change in France as almost certain, and a sweeping change too. Some censure the French Government for making Boulanger such a "peril to France." Another writer says that "he has the cunning which is seldom found in great men, but which is largely developed in the tiger-monkey class which has often furnished pinchbeck heroes to France."

The above quotations have been culled, during the last three days, from the editorials and letters of men of every shade of political opinion. When we find men so actively engaged in viewing the condition of prospects of France, with the natural eye, and guided only by human experience, how much more vigilant should we be, who may read the signs of the times between the lines of prophecy.

This, in conclusion, is the opinion of a well known Radical leader-writer:—"General Boulanger is piping a tune to which the French people, martial to the marrow, are all too prone to dance. His subtle appeals to the military passions of his countrymen, associated as they are with fervent professions of fidelity to the Republic, may be found to be more serious factors in the great question than many people suppose."

April 4, 1888.

"ENGLAND," THE MODERN ISRAEL.

We have often heard it stated, even by our opponents, that the British people are "the modern Israel," actually enjoying their blessings and literally fulfilling their destiny. The Revd. J. C. S. Kröenig, vicar of Hull, in his sermon on "England's Divine Mission in the East" openly declared that this nation was the modern Israel, identified with the Israel of the Scriptures, being the nation described by our Lord as the one to whom the kingdom of God should be given, because bringing forth the fruits thereof (Matt. xxi. 43). We have now before us the copy of The English Churchman and St. James's Chronicle of some months since, in which the following remarkable sentences occur. They corroborate our opinion blindly, while they repudiate, of course, the identity of the British with the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel. The journalist said:—

When Moses bid the Israelites farewell he told them how they might expect to win victories, or incur defeats, in their ceaseless struggles with their idolatrous neighbours:—"When the host goeth forth against thine enemies, then keep thee from every wicked thing!" (Deut. xxiii. 9.) Afterwards this encouragement is given:—"If thou hearken diligently to the voice of the Lord thy God . . . . the Lord will set thee on high above all nations of the earth" (xxviii. 1); but "thou shalt not go aside from any of the words that I command thee this day, to the right hand or to the left, to go after other gods to serve them" (v. 14). In the history of Israel, as every reader of his Bible knows full well, these words are repeatedly illustrated and confirmed. And England's case is exactly parallel. Like Israel we have been "set on high among the nations" as the chief "witness" for the truth of God in these latter times; prosperous and victorious when we have walked in Protestant ways, but chastised with scorpions whenever we have relapsed into Romish idolatry, or allowed the blasphemous sacrifice of the Mass to be again offered in our reformed churches. These are fundamental verities which a nation rescued as England has been from the trammels of Popery can never forget or despise, save at the most imminent risk of its own irretrievable ruin. What is England's predicament at the present hour? Europe is armed to the teeth.

A hasty word or a random shot may light up a universal conflagration. We ourselves have many enemies and few friends. Even the fleet in which we have hitherto trusted to repel agression is now pronounced inadequate. Then, if to the dangers that threaten us from abroad we add agricultural depression at home, and the existence of what is practically civil war in Ireland, it can scarcely be denied that we stand in jeopardy every hour! Nevertheless, were God on our side we need not fear.

So far the journalist. A true pessimist, never thankful for God's mercies, but always looking for divine vengeance for the nation's sins, and giving no weight to the glorious fact that God has never dealt with Israel according to her sins, nor rewarded her after her iniquities. She has not been left unpunished, but has, even as the writer admits, been wonderfully blessed, even in the midst of our national declensions and backslidings. If our case however is "exactly parallel" with Israel's, and like her God has "set us high among the nations" as His "chief witness for the truth of God in these latter times," then it is clear, the Bible being true, that either we are the true "remnant of Israel," the flesh and blood descendants of the Ten Tribes, or God has two nations whom He has "set high above the nations," and "made His chief witness for the truth;" one an Israelitish nation, the other a non-Israelitish Gentile people called the British. But God's word never speaks of two "chief witnesses" or "two nations set high above all the rest," but of only one. "You only have I known," He said in Amos iii. 1, 2, R.V., "of all the nations of the earth." He hath not dealt so with any nation as He hath dealt with Israel in respect to the imparted knowledge of His words, His statutes, and His judgments (Psa. cxlvii. 19, 20, R.V.). We cannot therefore accept the English Churchman's teaching on the subject, and are bound to come to the reasonable conclusion that the British are literal not spiritual Israel, inheriting God's promises in A.D. 1888, just as He said we should in B.C. 1872. God's faithfulness would be utterly destroyed if we were to adopt the idea that having given to Israel the rich promises contained in the word we are to expect in these last days that they would be transferred to a people non-Israelitish in origin, Gentile by nature, to whom no such promises were ever made. By the English Churchman's admission we British are in enjoyment now of the temporal as well as the spiritual blessings promised to Israel exclusively. We are, the journalist says, blessed with all temporal blessings, seeing we are "set high among the nations." This of course must include military and naval supremacy, commerce, and the resultant wealth, increase of population, which is Empire, and all that Empire involves. But the spiritual blessings of Israel are also admitted to be ours, for it is alleged we are "the chief witness for the truth of God in these our latter days," victorious and prosperous as we have witnessed faithfully for Jesus; but not destroyed, though heavily chastised, when we have proved unfaithful to our God. Blessed with Israel's temporalities, as well as with her spiritual gifts, what doubt can there be with reference to God's faithfulness that this nation is Israel according to the flesh? If that be sure and certain, as we cannot for a moment doubt, then God's promises to Israel (backsliding though she be, and obnoxious to His wrath as she has been from her earliest years), provide the remedy her case requires. The New Covenant described in Jer. xxxi. 33, 34; Heb. viii. 10, 12 (R.V.), is all she wants to recover her from her declining and relapsing state. God's law written in the nation's heart and mind will correct all her evil tendencies and backslidings. She will become then God's people, He their God. They will then all know the Lord, from the least of them to the greatest of them, and best of all, their sins and their iniquities He will remember no more! Will not the English Churchman be satisfied with this? Is not that the cure for all British-Israel's spiritual disorders, and will not this constitute the Lord's standard against His people's enemy, when he comes in like a flood against her? To Him be all the praise, for the rich provision He has made for His people's recovery, and for their escape from sorrows and troubles they richly deserve, but which He has put aside by His Atonement made at Calvary.

Digitized by Google

SABBATH DESECRATION BY ISRAEL'S "UPPER CLASSES."

THE Resolution passed by the Upper House of Convocation, on March 2, 1888, moved by the Bishop of Lincoln and seconded by the Bishop of London, was to the following effect:—

"The attention of the Upper House of Convocation having been directed to the relaxation of Sunday observation, which appears to have increased of late years, even among those who have fullest leisure on other days, and to the great increase of Sunday labour, the House deems it to be its duty to appeal to the clergy, to all instructors of the young, and to all who exercise influence over their fellow men, not to suffer this Church and country to lose the priceless benefits of the rest and sanctity of the Lord's Day. Its reasonable and religious observation is for the moral, physical, and spiritual health of all ranks of the population, and to it our national well-being has been largely due."

In moving this, his Lordship remarked that there was a great deal of inconsiderate employment of labour, which, he trusted, might be obviated. He hoped the young would be taught by those responsible for their training that it was wrong to enter into undue pleasures on the Holy Day, and that the momentary enjoyment of the lower pleasures would deprive them of the higher pleasures which awaited them both in this world and the next.

The Bishop of London seconded the motion, and trusted that it would have a great effect, particularly upon those who had hitherto, perhaps, allowed themselves a great deal of self-indulgence on Sunday without sufficiently considering what must be the general effect of such indulgence on the Church and on the people.

The motion was put and carried unanimously.

How far the desecration of the national Sunday had gone in London was shown during the debate by the Bishop of Exeter, who quoted from a newspaper the following rather serious statement:—

"How many coaches went out of London this very last Sunday? As many almost as are built. There are still a few sticklers for puritanical propriety, who assemble their guests in obscure mews and leave London by depressingly low neighbourhoods, in which they are not likely to encounter their friends; but, as a rule, the coaches make a bold show in Piccadilly on their way to Hampton Court and Richmond. There is now a club formed for the express purpose of driving to Richmond every Sunday. Its members are miscellaneous, may be, though two-thirds are to be found without much trouble in Burke or Debrett, and the tedium of the old Sunday is utterly lost on them. And, above all, London has the river, only of recent years opened to it on the Sunday any more than the Serpentine was till this summer, 'Sunday up the river' being as much a recognised phrase now as the five o'clock tea. Paddington is crammed with those intent on catching the early train to Maidenhead; Waterloo is packed with those content to take the smaller and the later journeys; and the river from Moulsey to Pangbourne is thronged. There once was a time when this would have been thought wrong, as even now there are those who would oppose the letting out of boats on the Serpentine to men who have no other chance of a holiday. The race of congenital idiots will, in all probability, never die out. A pull in a boat, a run through glorious scenery in a steam launch, are not likely to do anyone harm. And, returning, one need not be bored of an evening, as was wont to be the fashion. At the New Club one can see plays; at the Pelican Club one can see boxing, and hear the pick of the music-hall talent. Sunday dances are now freely given. Some of the best little hops of this year have been given on the Sabbath, to say nothing of the charming entertainment at the Gaiety Theatre. For the present, at least, there is no need of spending the day indoors in a discontented frame of mind, and retiring to bed early, morose and melancholy that there should have been such a day in the week as the old-fashioned Sunday." His lordship urged that a public statement of this character justified some expression of the opinion of the House on this subject.

The Bishop of London's speech seemed rather vacillating. But even he felt that the evil had got to such a pitch in his Diocese that "something" ought to be done, and that if a "protest" would have any effect, a public protest ought to be made by their lordships. He said:—

I think that the allegation in the Petition, "That there has of late been a very marked increase of the afternoon and evening of the Lord's Day for amusements of various kinds in the upper and fashionable classes of society" is true, and I do not think that we can say it is very much exaggerated. I think that the practices complained of have been quietly increasing for a considerable number of years. I do not think that those who indulge in amusements of this kind, and who spend Sunday in this way, do more here than they do in other dioceses. They are, generally speaking, people who come to London for the season, and they very often employ themselves on Sunday in the same way when they are at their own homes in the conntry (hear, hear), and what calls special attention to it in this diocese is not that there is any difference of practice here from what takes place elsewhere, but here it is, as it were, concentrated. You get a very large number of them together, and this mode of desecrating the Sunday is made much more conspicuous by the very large number of people who join together in doing it. I think that the same people will be found to be doing precisely the same things in other parts of England when they are there, but that they do not there attract so much notice. Where some rich man employs his Sunday in this way it is a scandal, and people complain of it, and it is talked of in his own immediate neighbourhood, but there is no special notice of it in the newspapers, and it is not, in the same sense, a public offence; whereas here in London there are papers which make it their particular business to publish everything that is done by the members of the upper classes of society. Here in London that is a very conspicuous and marked thing. There is, of course, one further reason why it is more seen in London than elsewhere, and that is that the London season occupies a time of the year in which these amusements are most easily pursued and enjoyed, and we have therefore more of it here than elsewhere. I think it is very greatly to be regretted; I think that it does a very great deal of mischief—of very serious mischief; and I think that it is particularly to be regretted that the upper classes should use the Sunday, which ought to be to them, more than to any others, especially a day for public worship and for doing honour to God, in such a manner as this. It is, in my judgment, much more excusable in the lower classes of society, where there is unremitting toil through the week, and where the other aspect of the Sunday—that it is a day of rest from toil—must necessarily take up a very much larger space in their thoughts than the aspect and character of it as a day of worship. It is not good in any class of society. I think that the proposal with which the memorial concludes, that we should join in a public protest against Sunday amusements and entertainments, is rather a doubtful one. I doubt very much whether such a protest would have any very considerable effect, but I am not prepared to say that there is not a great deal to be urged on behalf of something of that kind. Your lordships all know very well that protests of this kind, if they are allowed to be issued and fall flat, as it were, are likely to do rather more harm than good, and I am therefore a little doubtful about the expediency of joining in any such public declaration. But, on the other hand, it is quite true that the evil is very serious, and that if we could make a serious difference in it by a public protest, a public protest would be well worth the while. I do not know, your Grace, that I have any other suggestion to offer. I have not heard the discussion of the subject, and I do not know, therefore, how it may have been regarded by others.

So far their lordships in the Convocation of the Upper House. Their resolution was very straightforward and correct, but it lacked that ingredient of Scriptural truth which would have given comfort to their lordships, and made us, as God's people Israel, feel that the Lord had not ceased to guide us, but that He was working with us, and for us, and would never allow us nationally to lapse from the due observance of the Lord's-day, by giving to us, His chosen ones, the sign by which He would know us and we Him (Exod. xxxi. 13—17, Ezek. xx. 20). It seems to be true that among certain sections of our people there is a determined effort being made to get rid of the Lord's-day, and to make it a day for man's recreation and amusement, without any reference whatever to Him who claims us as His own. How is this evil to be cured? Surely by teaching those who wish to dethrone the Lord, that He is our God, and we His people Israel, and that He has given us the day in order that we might be blessed, and realise that He is our Father, and we the sons of the living God (Isa. lxiii. 10,

Digitized by Google

Hosea i. 10). The protest and the debate of the Bench of the Archbishops and Bishops on the subject will be no doubt useful in their way. They will, we hope, induce many of the Sabbath breakers to pause in their career, repent and be converted. But how is the heart of this nation, which secretly at present, we fear, is not on the side of the Sabbath, nationally to be brought to see the need there is to keep holy the seventh day, honour God, and obey Him, by keeping all its hours holy and separated from the world? Nothing short we fear of a complete national change of heart will do any good. The action of the Upper House of Convocation will have no lasting effect or influence on the upper ten thousand, who are set upon shaking off the hold of God's day upon themselves. What then remains? That which God Himself provides;—the new covenant blessing which is directed to the very point where the danger lurks. The nation's heart is diseased, the nation's mind is out of order, and contrary to God's word and will. The new covenant looks to both these seats of mischief, and proposes the true remedies for both. These are set forth in the words, to be found in both Jer. xxxi. 33 and Heb. viii. 10, thus: "But this is the covenant I will make with the House of Israel after those days, saith the Lord:—I will put My law in their inward parts, and in their hearts will I write it, and I will be their God, and they shall be My people; and they shall teach no more every man his neighbour, and every man his brother, saying, Know the Lord, for they shall all know Me, from the least of them unto the greatest of them, saith the Lord; for I will forgive their iniquity, and their sin will I remember no more." The Law of God includes His Sabbath Law. If, then, that law be put in the inward parts and in the heart of this nation, being Israel, we have God's word for it that the nation will be His people, acquainted with God and His will, a pardoned and a blessed race, from the least of them to the greatest of them. Then the enforcement of the Sabbath laws will not be required, for none will dream of breaking them; God's gracious purposes in giving us the Sabbath will be fully answered, for we shall all be eager and anxious to obey Him and to keep His day holy, since His pardoning grace will be experienced by the nation, when their sins and their iniquities He will remember no more. May that day soon be here, and then shall the praise, and all the thanks, and all the glory be His, who even now, in our disobedience and our sin, deigns to call Himself the God of Israel.

"THE COMPANY OF NATIONS," AND "THE FULNESS OF NATIONS."

OUR friends who hold the Teutonic theory declare we are wrong in saying that "the nation and company (or assembly) of nations" promised to Jacob by the Lord in Gen. xxviii. 3, xxxv. 11, and xlviii. 4, is the same thing as "the fulness, or completeness, or multitude, of nations promised to Ephraim only in exclusion even of Manasseh, in Gen. xlviii. 19. In the former case they urge that the promise is that "Goi ookhal Goyim" should be of Jacob; and in the latter a different expression is used as to Ephraim, whose m'lo-hag-Goyim, or "filling up of the nations," was to be the portion, or blessing, his descendants should receive.

How they make this alleged difference of expression work into the Teutonic or Gothic theory, and to what extent they allow a reference here to the British colonies, and the national position many of them have achieved, appears from the following, from the pen of A. S., the authoress of "The Heir of the World," a volume well and favourably known to all Anglo-Israelites. She remarked, in one of the early numbers of "The Standard of Israel" (No. 3, September, 1875), as follows:—

Perhaps it is a question whether the expressions, "company of nations" (kahal goyim), and "fulness of nations" (melo-hag goyim), are yet fully apprehended with reference to this subject. The one may be claimed by the whole House of Isaac, while the other most clearly belongs, and belongs alone, to Ephraim; none other tribe can claim participation in that fulness of nations; even Manasseh, Ephraim's own brother, is most pointedly set aside as a non-participator in this fulness. Surely this is not without deep meaning, especially when it is noted that two different words are used to express these predictions, which those who have accustomed themselves to study the Sacred Volume will not be slow to appreciate. In the event, therefore, we are to look for the Lost Ten Tribes collectively as many nations, an assembly, a company, in fact, of nations; while Ephraim, and Ephraim alone, is to be found, not as a collection of many nations, but as an overflowing fulness of one people, forming Goyim, or nations of that fulness, yet all of the same stock, the same tongue, and the same nationality.

We must leave it to the judgment of the reader to determine whether this is a correct rendering of the promise; but if so, the fulfilment is before us in our very midst. The Anglo-Saxon race, as has repeatedly been shown by writers on the subject, sends out its teeming population to every quarter of the globe, forming nations everywhere, and thus can lay claim to the appropriation of the term, as no other nations can do, the fulness of nations to come of Ephraim. While many of the nations of Europe who are of the same original as the English—that is to say, the Teutonic and Scandinavian races (Norway, Sweden, Denmark, or the Tribe of Dan), with all the German-speaking population—form a collection or company of nations which looks wondrously like the description given by the sacred penman of the descendants of Isaac, specially when we find that the old annals of some of those nations claim for them a descent from one they term Isaicon. —A. S.

So far a Teutonic theorist as she viewed the subject in 1875. We have reason to know that those who entertain this view, follow A. S. to-day, and regard the Gothic "nations" named as the Israelitish fulfilment of Gen. xxxv. 11; but the British colonial "nations," as the outcome of the promise to Ephraim only, in Gen. xlviii. 19. But the matter is not only a philological puzzle to be determined by the Hebraists, but a Scriptural one which can be brought to the test of God's Word, and determined at once. The blessing promised to Ephraim in Gen. xlviii. 19, it may be conceded, was tied up to him, and therefore wherever we find British colonies developing into nations, as we do now in the four quarters of the world, then we know Ephraim and his descendants are blessed with "multitudinousness," as God said He would bless Joseph's younger son. But in the last days, or our times of the Christian Dispensation, is it a fact, or is it not a fact, that God has provided that wherever Ephraim is, the other nine tribes of the House of Joseph shall be found to be "his fellows"? It is a fact; for Ezek. xxxvii. 16 and 19 (R.V.), assert it! In ver. 16, Ephraim is declared to be accompanied by "all the House of Israel as his companions;" and in ver. 19, Ephraim is described as having for his companions (or fellows—A.V.) "the tribes of Israel." What Ephraim enjoys, then, the tribes of Israel, or "all the House of Israel," enjoy with him, but not otherwise! There is no idea here of the tribes being in separation from Ephraim, and failing to be identified with the colonial grandeur of Ephraim. The whole House enjoys them in common with the head of the House, and the idea of separate nationalities broached by A. S. is absolutely negatived by the Prophet Ezekiel in the passage in question! But this is not all. Hosea is equally explicit. He attributes the multitudinousness which was given to Ephraim as the origin of his "fulness of nations," to the children of Israel in common, who were God's "Lo-Ammi" people, yet "the sons of the living God," and these, the context tells us, were not Ephraim only (the tribe), but "the House and kingdom of Israel," the Ten Tribes.

Bishop Titcomb once held this pernicious Gothic or Teutonic theory, but his official continental travels dissipated the delusion, and taught him that nations on the continent who have no respect for the Sabbath or God's laws, who have no colonies and have no company of nations belonging to them, cannot by any possibility belong to Israel.

Digitized by Google

A full and complete compendium of the reasons why we feel bound, as a matter of conscience, to reject the Teutonic theory, is contained in our Leaflet (Philo-Israel's Series), entitled, "The Teutonic Theory." We hope our readers will consult it, and learn how vastly important this matter is; for it may safely be affirmed that if the Teutonic or Gothic nations are Israel, then on ethnic grounds, as well as on philological, the British are not of that race at all!

We thought it would be satisfactory to our readers if we obtained for them the opinion of the Jewish Rabbi, now a Christian minister, Eliezer Bassin, and we annex his reply upon the point at issue between us and our Teutonic or Gothic theorists. He said, under date March 26th, 1888:—

There is no difference between God's promise of a "multitude of nations" to Jacob, in Gen. xxviii. 3, xxxv. 11. and xlviii. 4; and "the fulness of nations" of Gen. xlviii. 19. The latter is as much as to say, "His seed shall replenish the nations." That which replenishes the earth is called "the fulness of the earth" (see Psalm xxiv. 1), and that which replenishes the sea, the fulness of the sea (compare Psa. xcvi. 11, and Isa. xlii. 10). The promise was given to Ephraim, that his seed should "replenish the nations."—E. Bassin, 63, South Clerk Street, Edinburgh.

HOW THE ROMAN CATHOLIC ENEMY OF ISRAEL IS COMING IN LIKE A FLOOD UPON US.

The Protestant Churchman is a monthly periodical, published by the Protestant Reformation Society of Berners-street, Oxford-street, London. In its January, 1888, No., we have a leading article on "England's danger from the spread of Romanism," which demands our careful attention. The writer is in great terror at the manifest advance of Popery in our midst; and having no hope in him arising from the fact of Our Identity, as a nation, with Israel, and by reason of all the glorious promises we nationally inherit from that position, he is ready to deem all to be lost. He seems to have but one point of comfort and consolation in the dark and dismal horizon he pictures. He believes the "bulk of the great middle class of this country, and especially the working classes, to be thoroughly Protestant." In truth the writer has, in this article, made out a tremendous case in favour of the idea that Romanism is rapidly gaining power, and that the people of this land, once Protestants universally, are falling backward and yielding to the enticements of the Romish Sorceress. He proves it by such figures as these. Since the Emancipation Bill of 1829 was passed, the spread of Romanism has been most visibly manifested:

From 1831 to 1841 the British population increased 14 per cent.
During the same time the number of the Romish priests increased 25 per cent.
From 1841 to 1851 the population increased 13 per cent.; the number of priests 45 per cent.
From 1851 to 1861 the population advanced 12 per cent.; the number of priests 37·67.

The late Dr. Wiseman quoted this, and a great deal more besides, to prove how bright the Roman Catholic outlook now is. The following puts the facts of the case very clearly:—

STATEMENT SHOWING THE ADVANCE OF ROMANISM IN

	1830.	1864.	1888.
Roman Catholic Priests	434	1,242	2,648
R. C. Chapels and Cathedrals	410	900	1,631
R. C. Convents	16	162	425
R. C. Monasteries	—	53	229
Perverts to Rome	—	—	4,000
Church of England clergymen who have become perverts	—	—	300

The above is a sad and discouraging list, showing the portentous advance of Rome in Britain during modern times. The advance, in these recent years, among our own people and country, is remarkable, because Rome desires to recover her hold here. She knows that Protestantism, conquered here, is conquered everywhere; since this is "an Imperial race," which, once subdued and broken under Rome, will bring back the world once more to the obedience of the Papacy. Such are Rome's aspirations, and such, clearly, are Cardinal Manning's hopes, as the following shows:—

The Church of Rome is now bending all her energies upon England to regain her long-lost power, and, humanly speaking, there seems a fair chance of her doing so. With her most zealous and active agency of priests, Jesuits, monks, and sisters of mercy, backed up by thirty-two Roman Catholic peers and eighty members in the Imperial Parliament, all ready to obey the word of command from Cardinal Manning, who says, "Surely a soldier's eye and a soldier's heart would choose by intuition this field of England. No ampler or nobler could be found. What Nice was to Arianism, and Ephesus to the heresy of Nestorius, and Africa to the schism which withered before the presence of St. Augustine, such is England to the vaster heresy of these latter days. It is the head of Protestantism, the centre of its movements, and the stronghold of its powers. Weakened in England, it is paralyzed everywhere; conquered in England, it is conquered throughout the world; once overthrown here all is but a warfare of detail. All the roads of the whole world meet in one point, and this point reached, the whole lies open to the Church's will. It is the key of the whole position of modern error. England once restored to the faith becomes the evangelist of the world."

Such are the Cardinal's avowed objects and expectations! He believes God's "witnesses" will be subdued under the man of sin! and that the false Sorceress, the enemy of Jehovah-Jesus, will prevail to wrest the Kingdom from His Almighty hand! In vain! "When the enemy shall come in like a flood, the Spirit of the Lord shall lift up a standard against him." Rome has been "cut off" by Israel once, at the time of the blessed Reformation, according to St. Paul's prophecy in Rom. xi. 22 ("since thou also shalt be cut off"); and there is no provision in the prophetic Scriptures for the restoration of Israel's Church to the dominion and blighting influence of Rome, which is the enemy of God, of His people, of light, of freedom, of civil liberty, and of religious liberty too, and finally, of God's Holy Word. The only provision we see in that Word is for the recrudescence of evil, once more, in Israel's body politic, and doubtless we are now witnessing, accordingly, the uprising of Israel's Romish enemy in her midst, who vainly imagines that the time has come for her to recover the position she once held (but lost) in these our favoured lands. In vain! The edict has gone forth! "The enemy shall come in like a flood," but "the Spirit of the Lord" will rebuke him, and "will lift up the standard of the Word against him," and down he must consequently fall! This Roman Catholic enemy is a conquered foe! He has been judged by the Lord once, and is being gradually consumed now, till the end will come. The temporal power is gone, and that was the beginning of the end in 1870. His spiritual power, which is that he is using to terrify us now, is opposed by the spiritual power of Him who met and crushed him at Calvary, and will destroy him at last by the brightness of His coming. Meanwhile, the forces of the enemy are being collected in Israel's stronghold, that here they may be united to be destroyed at once. So Napoleon's armies converged on Waterloo, that there they might be overwhelmed at once by the power of Israel, and of Israel's God. We have nothing to fear when we see Rome's spiritual cohorts gathering to the decisive battle, any more than we had reason to fear because Napoleon gathered his armies on the field of Waterloo, or his ships, and those of his allies, in the Bay of Trafalgar. The gathering must precede both the fight and the concluding victory. So God's word itself declares in Isa. liv. 15, R.V.: "Behold, they may gather together (or stir up strife), but not by Me; whosoever shall gather together against thee, shall fall because of thee." Let us, then, praise the Lord, because of the consolation this promise gives.

Digitized by Google

AN AMERICAN EXPLAINS WHY THE ANGLO-SAXON RACE IS "THE HEAD AND NOT THE TAIL."

A QUOTATION from "The New York Sun," which appeared in the Daily Telegraph of Launceston, Tasmania, has been forwarded to us from the Antipodes that we may read, mark, learn, and inwardly digest, the remarkable reasons assigned by an American for phenomena which we explain on very different grounds. He declares that the Anglo-Saxon race is younger in its career than any other European race. It lacked for centuries the territorial advantages of other races, and still lacks their advantages in population; yet it has done more for civilization than they all have combined! It has given a language and literature to 100,000,000 of people, and the beauty and power of that language is greater than that of all the Continental nations! In regard to wealth, says the American, that of the Anglo-Saxon equals, if it does not exceed, that of all the world united.

It is, in short, he says, "the Anglo-Saxon race against the world, and in most practical things it is the Anglo-Saxon race alone; and there is no competitor!" "But why is this?" asks the New York correspondent of "The Sun." The answer shall be given in the very words of the American. He says:—

"If we trace the growth of Anglo-Saxon civilization we find the answer to this question. The race advances more rapidly than other races, because it makes use of better agencies for promoting the interests of society than its rivals, and cultivates a more stolid spirit of self-dependence. From the reign of the earlier English kings down to the American revolution, and following through all the earlier and later years of our own republic, there has been a persistent and an almost unintermittent contest in favour of personal independence and the right to inaugurate, carry forward and control personal affairs without let or hindrance from superior authority. The traits implied in this contest have not found their most adequate expression in England. The emancipation of Englishmen, struggling to obtain a firm foothold among the continually crumbling debris of feudal institutions, has been a slow process. But it has been continuous, and in all Anglo-Saxon communities the individual and society have long been the first objects of consideration, the government being held only as their dependent and servant. The former lead, and the latter, through its official representatives, whether hereditary or chosen, is only expected to follow and sustain.

So far the correspondent of "The New York Sun." But it is suggested to one's mind, that if the Anglo-Saxon race predominates over other races only because it makes use of better agencies than they for promoting the interests of society, and cultivates a more stolid spirit of self-dependence, how did they acquire these two remarkable qualifications? God is the God of the nations, and He cannot be deposed from His throne in His own dominions! He made the Anglo-Saxons what they are, and gave them the peculiar endowments they possess for the objects achieved. These are just those He promised to the people of His choice, even Israel, whom "He made, created, and formed for Himself that they might show forth His praise" (Isa. xliii. 1, 7, 21, R.V.).

The nation whom God "made, created, and formed" is bound to have been so fashioned as to excel all others, since it was intended they should dominate over them" (Dan. vii. 27; Rom. iv. 13). It was sure, then, to have been endowed with these qualities, which the American sees to have been essential to that result. The Anglo-Saxons have these qualities, and the consequence is what God designed for Israel—namely, the chieftainship among the nations. She is "the head and not the tail, above only and not beneath" them in all respects. But surely the American writer has not hit upon the whole truth? The qualities he names might exist among a petty nation, like the Swiss or the Dutch, without leading in any way to their superiority over their neighbours as a nation? There are, in fact, national blessings to be secured before those qualities named in the "Sun" can be of much avail. The nation, for instance, to excel must be "a great and mighty nation," blessed with multitudinousness to enable it to colonize and to settle its infant States in the four quarters of the world. It must be a rich nation, possessing, therefore, the commerce of the globe. To do that, it must be supreme at sea—in possession of the Gates of the world as its coaling stations, and as its ocean fortresses, to protect its vast marine. It must be a nation, too (and this is chief of all), blessed of God, with the custody of His Holy Word, with His Sabbaths and His laws, confessing Christ as their "chiefest among ten thousand" and "altogether lovely," their King, Redeemer, Husband, Saviour, Friend, and so filled with the love of souls for His sake, as to be ready to spend and be spent that they may make known the Gospel of His grace to all nations, families, and kindreds of the earth, whom God so loved that He sent His only begotten Son, in order that "whosoever believeth on Him should not perish but have everlasting life" (Gen. xii. 2, 3, xviii. 18, xxxv. 11; Hosea i. 10; Numb. xxiv. 7; Deut. viii. 18; Gen. xxii. 17, 18; Psa. cxlvii. 19, 20; Exod. xxxi. 13, 17; John iii. 16, all R.V.).

These are the gifts promised of God to His people Israel as their birthright, and these very blessings the British portion of the Anglo-Saxons have in a very marked, and the American section of the race in a less, degree. Having these, the other two qualifications for mastery among the nations specified complete the picture, and reveal to us a race which is supreme and dominant in the world, simply and solely because they are Israel, and because God has given to them all those endowments which He promised "to Abraham and his seed for ever," in order to make them fit to fulfil their world-wide destiny, as His messengers and ministers to the nations of the earth, and thus to show forth His praise (Isa. xliii. 21, R.V.).

It must never be forgotten, in dealing with this subject, that God has given supremacy and dominion to the Anglo-Saxon race because they are Israel, and because, as His chosen ones, He demands their willing, spiritual service as His missionaries to the whole world. Foreign missions are thus the "end all and be all" of their existence; for this He "made, created, and formed" them. To enable them to do this service, dominion, power, wealth, spiritual strength, faith in their Lord Jesus Christ, all were needed as essential. Without them it could not be performed. Therefore, God grants them as Israel's endowment for their work, and He expects them as His stewards to perform His will. Psalm lxvii. is the explanation of the whole matter. "God's mercy, blessing, and shining face" are first needed for Israel, in order that His ways may be known upon earth, "His saving health among all nations." "God blesses us," and the result is that "all the ends of the earth fear Him." The American writer in "The Sun" probably does not see his way to admit all this? But it is, nevertheless, true. For the Word of God declares it, and facts respond to Israel's prophecies and history.

THE OBJECTIONS OF A VICAR'S DAUGHTER.

ONE who seems greatly interested in Our Identity, and does all he can to make known this truth, lent a certain Vicar's daughter, a pious lady, several of our books. Among the rest was a copy of "Poole's Fifty Reasons."

In regard to these, the fair reader has submitted some doubts and queries, which are forwarded to us to answer:—

The first of importance is that, according to "the wisest and most learned commentators," the last 27 chapters of Isaiah refer to "the call of the Gentiles," and that the people so "called," were "not My people," destined to be "betrothed for ever." We reply, that the best and wisest of the commentators have never seen the scriptural distinction of Israel from Judah, or the fact that while Judah exists to-day to testify that God is true, Israel, too, must be somewhere to give evidence that He exists, and is faithful to His promises to that House. The last 27 chapters of Isaiah relate, we are told, to God's "not a people." These must be His "Lo-Ammi" ones, which is just our own contention. They are His "Gentilized Israelites," "not His people," as Hosea i. 9, 10, affirms, and yet the Ten Tribes of Ephraim after all! Besides, in Isa. xxvii. 6, Israel is "to blossom, and bud, and fill the face of the world with fruit;" it is not the Gentiles who are to do this at all! Surely, then, the former must be the people described in Isa. xliii. 1, 7, 21, who, named as Israel, are declared to be "the people of the Lord," made, and created, and formed for Himself, to show forth His praise.

Digitized by Google

The "servant" of the Lord, as described in Isaiah, is declared, by our Vicar's daughter, to be the Lord Jesus Christ only. We demur to this statement in part. No doubt He was "the Lord's servant" (Isa. xlii. 1, seems to prove that). But "the Lord's servant" was also His "witness" as Isa. xliii. 10, R.V., declares; and "His servants" were the "tribes of His inheritance"—the Ten Tribes whom Judah hath failed to recognize (see Isa. lxiii. 16, 17, R.V.). Another objection made to "Poole's Fifty Reasons," p. 22, is that St. Paul was the apostle of the Gentiles; while St. Peter and St. James went to "the Jews and to the dispersed," but that, now, there is no difference between Jews and Gentiles at all, as Gal. iii. 7, 9, 14, 26—29, show, for all are in Christ under the new dispensation. In reply we have to ask our lady opponent, why, if these texts are to abolish "Jews and Gentiles," and cause the Israelites to vanish away, there yet remain "male and female" in the world—bond and free? all are one in Christ. Why, then, are there ladies and gentlemen remaining? prisoners and captives, as well as free-born Britons? Surely, if these are with us, and our Vicar's daughter cannot deny the fact, her array of texts cannot do away with the equally undeniable fact that Jews are extant still; also Gentiles; and that, therefore, very probably, and very presumably, Israelites too, of the House of Ephraim, remain upon the earth.

Our lady objector enters into some reflections as to the probabilities of the future happy condition of the Israelites in "everlasting joy." These we cannot deal with, as they are future events, which will explain themselves. But when she speaks of "the image of lost Israel, returning to Zion, as a picture of the joyful gathering of all the Redeemed in the heavenly Jerusalem," then we ask in amazement if the splendid prophecy of the two sticks of Ezek. xxxvii., respecting the nations of Ephraim with Judah and with the Tribes of Israel, "the fellows" of the former, mean also nothing in particular? If we are to read Scripture in that "fast and loose" manner, no wonder the infidel is able to upset the faith of our weak ones, and turn the word of God into mere senseless folly.

Our lady opponent concludes with the old objection that our race cannot be Israel, because we are cosmopolitan in origin, made up of "mixed races" and "different peoples." This is an error often exploded, and need not be refuted again. We have shown over and over again, that the Celts, the Saxons, the Angles, the Jutes, the Danes, and the Normans were all of one race—all Asiatics from the region of Central Asia, Media, and Assyria, and that they converged to these islands—as God said they would in Ezek. xi. 16, 17,—soon after the Ten Tribes were expatriated. But the final stroke by which our good Vicar's daughter demolishes our claim to an Israelitish origin is too good to be missed, and it shall be given in her own words, without note or comment; saving that we hardly think she is a patriotic British lady, or one well read in current literature! She says, "It must strike every student of history that the day of England's glory is over! She is no longer supreme by land or sea! In Egypt, in the Transvaal, and elsewhere, our armies are now constantly (?) defeated; our navy is rotten (?); our trade is leaving us (?); we are the laughing-stock of all Europe—as a glance at the leading papers of other countries shows us daily." So far the lady! And yet this miserable country is daily extending her influence and adding to her territories. Her trade is gigantic; and her wealth stupendous! Her work for Christ is twelve times as great as that of all other nations put together, and we have all the blessings God promised to Abraham and his seed for ever! Our Vicar's daughter is not quite correct in her facts.

THE KEY OF THE INDIAN OCEAN.

WE find in the Times newspaper of March 3, 1888, what may be deemed a monograph of "Ceylon under British Rule," wherein the island is styled "The Key of the Indian Ocean." It is verily its Gate. It became a British possession in order that it might serve to safe-guard British India, and it does that duty excellently. We think we shall do well to transfer the whole article to the BANNER, although it is somewhat long, because we have here the outlines of a history very little known, and we see how our countrymen, being Israel, have taken hold of Ceylon, and are there "blossoming and budding and filling that land with fruit." There is yet, no doubt, much work to be done in the island; but good progress is being made, and more is sure to follow. The article speaks for itself, and requires no comment from us. It illustrates Isa. xxvii. 6, and furnishes another proof that the British are Israel, to whom God has shown "the power of His works by giving them the heritage of the heathen," as promised in Psa. cxi. 6 and ii. 8; also in Rev. ii. 26, 27. That Israel has blessed Ceylon in consequence, is, we think, apparent from the account which we annex.

CEYLON UNDER BRITISH RULE.

(From a Bombay Correspondent.)

PART I.

I have just returned from my third visit to Ceylon. On each previous occasion I left the island in a state of great depression. The people were suffering as people must suffer when they put all their eggs in one basket and the basket is upset. Everybody had put their faith and their money in coffee, and the coffee fungus had spread ruin throughout the island. But tea has now taken the place of coffee; cacao and cinchona and other cultures have been superadded, and prosperity is returning. But while my impression is one of returning prosperity I do not feel sure the prosperity is universal. The progressive spirit of the West has certainly taken hold of the island, but I am not sure whether it continues to take sufficient thought of the Eastern races and Eastern immobility it found there. The tendency of late has been rather to pass the natives by in the schemes of development, and to regard the island too exclusively as a field for European capital and enterprise. I propose to illustrate my meaning by a description of the island as it is with the various reforms and improvements that have been carried out and that are proposed in the future. I may add that I not only in the course of the last visit saw much with my own eyes, but I gathered information from those who were best informed, natives as well as English, officials as well as non-officials.

To make my picture complete I must go back a little in time. England took over the island permanently from the Batavian Republic at the Peace of Amiens. We had already dispossessed the Dutch in 1796, and in the general redistribution in 1802 we preferred to retain Ceylon rather than Java, on account of the proximity of the former island to India. In the one harbour of Trincomalee the whole British fleet could ride with safety, and in British hands the island would be a permanent safeguard to our Eastern possessions It was hoped, too, that the natural wealth of the island, its gems, its pearls, its spices, would enrich the British Exchequer, while finally, the island was to serve as a sort of nursery garden for political and administrative experiments in the government of Eastern races.

As yet no experiment in Ceylon has been utilized for the benefit of the natives of India, and that country has only profited by the security it derives from our possession of an island which from its geographical position is THE KEY OF THE INDIAN OCEAN. At first, the island, financially speaking, did not pay. The natural wealth was more or less of a traveller's tale. The gems never added a sixpence to the Exchequer, and their value as an export is only a few thousands a year. The pearl fishery merely gave an intermittent revenue of some £60,000 every few years, the cinnamon was of little value until the government abandoned its monopoly and threw open the trade. Coffee was treated as a mere ornamental shrub whose flowers made a pretty temple offering to Buddha or Vishnu, and whose tender leaves formed one of the many ingredients of a Ceylon curry. Tea, cinchona, cacao, cardamons, and indiarubber were unknown in the island. Cocoanut palms were the only commercial success. Even the supply of rice, the staple product, was not enough for the needs of the people. The vast artificial lakes which formerly studded the northern provinces as centres of cultivation had become mere malarious swamps, the jungle had smothered the great cities of the past, and the population had fallen from numbers variously estimated at five and ten millions of people to less than a million souls.

Digitized by Google

In short, an uphill task lay before the English rulers of Ceylon at the beginning of the century. But they put their shoulders to the wheel as only Englishmen can. They first established the Pax Britannica throughout the island. Previous conquerors—Dutch, Portuguese, Arab, Tamil, Chinese, had been content to rule over the plains. They had often defeated but never conquered the hardy dwellers in the mountain zone, and the Kings of Kandy still ruled supreme on the heights. An ancient Kandyan proverb declared their rule eternal unless a stranger pierced their mountain rocks. This was literally done by the English. In 1815 they took the town of Kandy, and in 1820 a road was built from Colombo to Kandy, which climbed the passes and tunnelled the rocks, and thus fulfilled the ancient prophecy. Field guns and trained soldiers henceforth made short work of any resistance, and the whole island settled down quietly under English rule, until even 1,000 troops are now found more than sufficient for the service of the island, and it might be left wholly to the care of the police and volunteers.

The work of development and civilization followed the work of the conquest. The Kandyan King was deposed, but the chiefs were left in possession of their lands, and the Buddhist priests were undisturbed in their temples and temple lands. But the oppression of the lower classes, who were held in bondage as adscripti glebæ, was ended in 1833 by the abolition of the whole system of forced labour, and slavery itself was abolished in 1844. The island was rapidly opened out by a perfect network of roads, made and maintained partly by a local cess and by tolls, partly by a poll-tax of about 3s. a head, which can be paid in kind by the performance of six days' labour. At the present day there are in Ceylon, an island one-sixth less than Ireland, 2,200 miles of made roads, which cross the numberless streams by excellent bridges.

In 1830 the present system of government was established. The Governor is at the head, with an Executive Council composed of the four leading officials, the Home Government, of course, retaining a controlling and vetoing power. Legislation, subject to the same control, is in the hands of a Legislative Council, composed of the Governor and eight officials, with six unofficial but nominated members. A hint might be taken by India from this unofficial minority, which is composed of a Cingalese, to represent the real natives of the island, who number 1,850,000; a Tamil, to represent the immigrants from Southern India, who number 800,000; and a Burgher, to represent those of mixed European and Asiatic blood, who number 18,000; and three Europeans, representing the planting, the commercial, and the general European interests respectively. As the Europeans of Ceylon number altogether only 5,000 in a population which has nearly reached 3,000,000, this proportion seems scarcely fair. The scales of justice would be held more evenly if the eight provinces of the island were each given a native member, Cingalese or Tamil, in addition to the three who already represent those interests.

In other ways also this Council might be improved. At present all the unofficial members are nominated for life. The work would be done under a greater sense of responsibility if the post were held for a five-year period. Then, again, education, has so much advanced under the influence of schools and a free Press that the principle of representation might be tried for a fixed period, with due checks and limitations. A moderate property qualification—say Rs.100 a year or Rs.1,000 freehold—as a condition of the franchise, would secure an intelligent electorate. The change would give great satisfaction. The island is loyal to a degree, and free from all dangerous political agitation. Broad versus narrow railway gauge is the only burning question in the country. The experiment would be a useful one in view of the agitation for a similar reform in India.

Local self-government has been for some time in operation. The towns have municipal councils, while village councils, with petty judicial as well as larger administrative powers, are established throughout the country. The natives are thus being trained to public work. But the Covenanted Civil Service of Ceylon as at present constituted is almost entirely English. There are only five native civil servants out of a body of 80, in whose hands is placed the main executive and judicial administration.

The examination for the service may be passed up to the age of 23; but the place of examination is London, and this almost excludes the native element. The present number of civilians seems much too large. In the Presidency of Madras, with its 31 millions of people, 157 civilians suffice, while Ceylon, with its three millions, is given 80. The civil servants have not enough genuine public work to fill their time, and the pension list has become an intolerable burden. The careful amalgamation of some of the higher posts, and the delegation of all subordinate work to native agency, is a much needed reform. As long ago as 1841 the Governor of Ceylon laid it down as a principle of government "to recognize no distinction of caste or colour, the only ground of promotion being talents and qualification." That declaration should be always borne in mind in the selection of public officers.

To pass on to another subject, it seems strange that in a land where Buddhism prevails the distinction of caste should be retained. True Buddhism is as democratic as true Christianity, and Buddha himself declared the virtuous man was the only true Brahman, and the vicious man the only out-caste. But true Buddhism is rarely to be found. That austere faith which teaches goodness without a God, existence without a soul, happiness without a Heaven, redemption without a Redeemer, and a cessation of existence as a final end, hardly exists outside the ranks of the priesthood. The Buddhism that obtains in the islands has largely borrowed from Hindooism, and is best exemplified by the Great Temple at Kelanega, near Colombo, where I saw the statues of Buddha and Vishnu side by side, the figure of Siva on the opposite wall, and the votaries praying and offering their fragrant champak and jessamine flowers to all three without distinction. Moreover, the Tamil population, a powerful and energetic minority in the island, have inoculated the Cingalese with the caste prejudices of Southern India. There are now, according to the latest authorities, four pure Cingalese castes, but the Vellalas of various gradations are the highest and best known. They will neither eat nor intermarry with the lower castes, to which the mass of the people belong. Fortunately for the morals and physique of the country, the Indian system of infant marriage and enforced widowhood does not prevail with either Cingalese or Tamils. But just at present there is a mischievous revival of caste pretensions in other social matters, which goes so far as to revive even distinctions of dress. Thus, to wear a particular kind of comb in the back hair and to cover both shoulders with their garments is claimed as an exclusive privilege of a man of high caste. Of course such pretensions are laughed out of court. But it would be well if the authorities would steadily set their face against the movement in more serious matters, such as public appointments. Though there is this caste feeling, there is no race feeling, and Cingalese, Tamils, Burghers all live in harmony. If, therefore, the Government would adopt the Indian rule laid down by Lord Lytton, that one-sixth of the higher public posts should, if possible, be given to Cingalese, Tamils, or Burghers, together with most of the subordinate posts, and if at the same time all other native claims save that of merit were ignored, this caste revival would speedily die a natural death, and all inhabitants, under the influence of trade, education, and railways, would ultimately become one people. Strangely enough, the English are not included in the ostracism which the higher Cingalese castes impose on their countrymen. An Englishman, as one of the governing class, is considered a sort of rajah, a member of the warrior or Kshattriah caste, and a Vellala, who will refuse to eat with his countrymen, will sit down to dinner with an Englishman without demur.

(To be continued).

MEN are unconsciously making history, unconsciously fulfilling prophecy, and unconsciously working out the Divine intention.—Dr. Wild.

Digitized by Google

THE TEUTONIC THEORY IN CONNECTION WITH THE REVIEW OF "MY JEWELS."

By Sarah Sharp.

(Concluded from page 144).

Manasseh.—Gen. xlviii. 19: "He also shall become a people, and he also shall be great; howbeit his younger brother shall be greater than he, and his seed shall become a multitude of nations." Through these two sons of Joseph, God's covenant birthright blessings were to descend, and Israel is commanded to bless in these words, "God make thee as Ephraim and Manasseh." Also Heb. xi., R.V., "By faith Jacob . . . blessed each of the sons of Joseph." In my former article I briefly traced the fulfilment of God's promise to Ephraim as witnessed in our nation. Let us now consider His dealings concerning Manasseh, whom we believe can be recognized in the great American people.

It is often declared in Scripture that these brothers were to grow into a multitude in the midst of the earth. In Deut. xxxii. 8, 9 we read: "When the Most High divided to the nations their inheritance, when He separated the sons of Adam, He set the bounds of the peoples according to the number of the children of Israel. For the Lord's portion is His people; Jacob is the lot of His inheritance." Thus we see that the posterity of Jacob were inalienably the people of God's choice, and that they were to possess and occupy the utmost parts of the earth, the waste places, coasts, Gates, &c., until they formed a complete circle of the globe, as they now do, and to become the greatest nation the world has ever seen.

Old Testament prophecies do not leave us in ignorance of the period when this nation was to be developed and recognised. Bible history announces that all is to take place in the latter days, when the Ten-Tribed House of Israel, re-covenanted with God through faith in Jesus Christ, was to receive all the promised blessings. And the nation that answers to the above description, and is recognised as the greatest nation the world has ever seen, is Great Britain, her empire and her colonies, which, together with the United States of America, make up the House of Israel, the Lord's portion, the lot of His inheritance.

When Jacob pronounced the above-named blessings on Joseph's sons, the position in which he placed his hands seemed to indicate that it was under the cross they were to be fulfilled. History fully confirms this, for gradually, after their conversion to Christianity, the promises became realised; but after the glorious Reformation, when England, by God's especial grace, threw off the yoke of the idolatrous Church of Rome, the pent-up blessings, both spiritual and temporal, descended in showers on this favoured nation. "There failed not aught of any good thing which the Lord had spoken to the House of Israel" (Josh. xxi. 45; 1 Kings viii. 56).

When our country became too narrow for its multitudinous population, the time seemed to have arrived for the fulfilment of the promise to Manasseh. Israel must now mourn over the loss of one tribe, to form the great American nation. Of all our more than 50 colonies, America is the only one that has passed from under our absolute rule, this being in accordance with God's will that Manasseh should become a great and independent people. England struggled to avert this loss, but there was consolation from God in store. He says, "The children thou shalt have, after thou hast lost the other (Manasseh), shall again say in their ears, The place is too strait for me; give place to me that I may dwell." Thus did God make up for the loss, by again increasing our numbers, and more than making up to us the loss of America.

History states: "The secession of the United States of America caused a great diminution of the extent of our possessions, but the loss has since been more than made up by the acquisition of Guiana, Cape Colony, Malta, vast possessions in India, the West Indies, the formation of settlements in Australia, &c., which now number more inhabitants than the United States contained when they shook off their dependence on the mother country" (Life of Longfellow). Manasseh also shall become a people, &c. Thus he commences his promised career.

In A.D. 1612, "Under the signal interposition of Divine Providence, the grand old Pilgrim Fathers set out in the 'Mayflower' to become the founders of a great nation, taking with them the Book of sacred laws, dearer to them than life itself, little foreseeing the wonderful course of events to follow on that great American shore, when Mary Chilton tremblingly leapt from the Mayflower's pinnace at Cape Cod, and fluttered on to America's rocks, like a dove from a new ark. John Alder, who rowed her to shore, allowed this daughter of Manasseh to be the first to land in their new world." No doubt the damsel had some of the spirit of her kinswomen of old, the daughters of Zelophehad who did not forget their claim to an inheritance in Manasseh (Joshua xvii.). From that period to the Declaration of Independence, 1776, America, being God's Manasseh, has been blest in the fulfilment of the promises made by Jacob to him, her population at that date, including slaves and emigrants, numbered 2,614,300. Strangers and foreigners were all welcomed, and allowed, after five (or seven) years to become citizens, but subject to American laws, &c.

On the occasion of the declaration of their independence, the Americans caused a beautiful seal to be engraved, on the reverse side of which the Great Pyramid is represented in an unfinished state, surmounted by the headstone of the corner forming a triangle, in which the All-seeing Eye is represented giving forth rays of light or glory. This is raised at a distance from the unfinished flat surface, so that the original height of the pyramid may be discovered. On the top of the seal is the motto, "Annuit Cœptis" (He has been favourable to our undertakings). Surely we may read between these lines, and hear Manasseh exclaim, "Yea, I (too) have a goodly heritage" (Psa. xvi. 6). Below are the words, "Novus Ordo Seclorum" (the new order of centuries). In this seal seems wonderfully recalled to Manasseh's mind the days of his sojourn in the land of his birth, under the shadow of the Great Pyramid, which is still testifying to our being the Israel of God (Isa. xix. 19). On the obverse side of the seal appear, in a circle with rays of light, 13 stars—(the stars of the heaven for multitude?)—indicating the 13 States, significant of the 13th Tribe. On a ribbon of blue the words, "Pluribus Unum." Below is an eagle, whose right claw holds a branch, and the left 13 arrows, no doubt alluding to the noted skill of this tribe also in the use of the bow and arrow. In the centre, on the breast of the bird, appears a shield with even perpendicular lines. These lines are also seen on the gem on the high priest's breastplate which has Manasseh's name, again suggesting the Psalmist's words, "The lines are fallen to me in pleasant places," perhaps meaning the strangers who have fallen to him. Population in 1881, all free, 50,152,886.

Having now briefly traced the marvellous dealings of a faithful God with His chosen, yet unworthy nation, we cannot omit to say a few words in reply to the still oft-repeated remark, "Cui bono?" People say, We have the Gospel, and are secure by our faith. You all seem to put the Identity in the place of the Saviour, and say, however wicked our nation may be, God is bound to save us, being Israel. But this is untrue. None know or value more than Anglo-Israelites the testimony that "There is none other name given under heaven whereby we must be saved," &c. (Acts iv. 12). Scripture admonishes us to declare the whole counsel of God (Acts xx. 27). Our Lord declares many precious truths, and among them that He was sent to the lost sheep of the House of Israel, who were in exile in far countries, what time the Jews, the House of Judah, crucified Him. Moreover, He declared to them that the House of Israel would receive His salvation, which Judah had rejected and despised. We therefore teach that the lost sheep are found in our nation.

Also we must notice that in these days, the time of the end, the long shut up mysteries were to be unsealed, when "the wise shall understand" (Dan. xii.). Here is wisdom, to recognise God's glorious promises historically fulfilled in our race, who are the Lord's portion, the lot of His inheritance. Again, God declares that the manifestation of His people is an event on which He has set His whole heart and His whole soul (Jer. xxxii. 39, &c.). Moreover, He says, "For this will I be enquired of by the House of Israel to do it for them." But how shall people inquire for a matter they are utterly indifferent about? Once more, infidels, who object to the Bible because, they say, the great prophecies in favour of God's people, He has failed to fulfil. When shown, however, that all has literally come to pass in these last days, they, by God's help, see and believe. Lastly—this is a powerful weapon to grapple with Ritualism and its head, the idolatrous Church of Rome. This old heresy has again revived in our midst. Priests, unfaithful to their vows, point out for admiration the ritual of the so-called "Ancient Church." We can show in the Anglo-Israel Church a far more ancient one, even that founded by God in the wilderness under Moses, and preserved until its union under the apostles as a Christian Church.

Digitized by Google

Here in these Islands this British Christian Church flourished long before Augustine came on his Popish mission in A.D. 597, whom the Britons, holding a purer faith, withstood. For Rome had corrupted and paganised the ancient faith once delivered to the saints, before the close of the second century after Christ. Augustine slaughtered 1,200 British monks for remaining true to their faith. This faith, now the true Protestant faith of our Church, should satisfy our nation, who came in full possession of her birthright privileges on throwing off Romish idolatry. Let us therefore praise the Holy Trinity for this and all the mercies we have been considering, and for performing His gracious promises.

"DIVINE WORLD-REGENERATING FORCE."

THIS was the title of an interesting and instructive lecture delivered at the Guildhall on Friday evening by the Rev. R. Douglas, Vicar of Kidsgrove, in connection with the Bath branch of the Anglo-Israel Association. The Rev. E. J. Wemyss-Whittaker, an active and earnest supporter of this doctrine, presided, and there was a very good attendance. After a hymn had been sung and the Rev. F. M. Caulfeild had read a portion of the Bible, the Rev. T. P. Williams offered prayer.

The Chairman then said, in standing up as he did always on that subject, he felt he was standing on holy ground, because they trusted and strove in all their teaching without regard merely to this doctrine, to lead those they were speaking to, to the feet of Jesus and the word of God. They did not try to bring out and prove their theory only from things outside the word of God, for although there were various ways of proving their assertions, it was the word of God that they went to, and it was on the word of God that they advised all who were desirous to learn the truth of that subject to cast their eyes. They had the feeling that they had never yet been met by opinions, or by any arguments that were too strong for them, because their chief arguments were from God's word, which could never lie or change, and, however they might like to interpret it, would be carried out in the fulness of His knowledge and in the way He devised. He then called upon the Rev. R. Douglas, who said, he wanted them to remember they put forward this Israelite teaching as a Providential relation. It was not that it rested on any human pillars—he should be sorry if in any degree it rested on him—it was, if they were at all right in their conclusions, making bare of the Almighty Arm in our history, and in the history of this world, he would say, in a manner almost absolutely unique and unparalleled in the whole history of the universe. The Lecturer then dwelt on the scriptural meaning of the word "regeneration," and spoke of the perilous times they were now passing through, remarking that no earnest Christian could look abroad and in the light of scripture carefully study the signs of these times, without feeling that they needed something that should revive in all its fulness and in all its energy the testimony of God's holy word, and it was on this that the lecturer based his subject. They had all kinds of evils in these days, and they believed that God had brought this doctrine they believed in before them by His acts, fulfilling His word by Providence, accomplishing prophecy by history, manifesting the truth of the old covenants promised, and had brought this truth and was bringing daily more and more to light, not only that they might admire the everlasting fact of His love, but that they might see that, because He was the Lord that changed not, He had put into their hands a mighty weapon, whereby to overthrow and destroy all the evils that threatened the world and society, and the church, until the glorious coming of the kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. British-Israelism, he argued, annihilated infidelity. The rev. gentleman spoke of the great amount of practical unbelief that existed. They had besides political infidelity. He well remembered the time, more than thirty years ago, when he heard a discussion between a clergyman and Mr. Bradlaugh in Liverpool, and he well remembered how he felt bound by the preaching of the Lord, and if any one had said to him, "You will live to see that man a leading member of Parliament and possibly a member of a British Cabinet," he could not possibly have believed it. Mr. Bradlaugh was, of course, the representative of a great body, which proved to them that their old boast that all their legislation was based upon the Word of God was certainly weakened in the present day. He contended that these revelations were a complete vindication of the truth of scripture, and he most firmly believed that the whole of the Old Testament and its covenant promised to Abraham were rendered marvellously real and strictly and literally true at the present day. He argued that the British nation were fulfilling prophecy in such a way as to show they were God's chosen people, and that this nineteenth century had seen the fulfilment of the promises of the covenant made nineteen hundred years before Christ. But, the lecturer said, they had reason to desire spiritual forces with regard to the preservation of true evangelical religion amongst them. They all knew the prevalence, not only of direct infidelity, but what Mr. Spurgeon called "down grade theology." Did British-Israel truth tend to stop this "down grade tendency"? and he answered with the utmost confidence, it did. The lecturer dealt with other evils which threatened them, and asked his hearers, in conclusion, to carefully consider the question.

We take the above report of what was clearly an interesting and instructive lecture from the issue of the Bath and Cheltenham Gazette of December 7th. We are glad to see from the report that the Rev. Mr. Douglas considers "the British nation are God's chosen people," but he did not say whether they alone in his opinion represent them, or if they constitute one or two only of the Ten Tribes, the rest being elsewhere in Europe. Knowing Mr. Douglas' views as expressed in "Ephraim-England," the report of the lecture at Bath seems to put aside the Teutonic Theory altogether, and to give only the British aspect of the question, which is hardly fair to the lecturer or to those who read the lecture as published by the local journalist.

CHRISTIAN OPPONENTS, PLEASE REPLY.

IT is now generally admitted that the day for ridiculing British Israelites has passed, and that the question must be seriously faced by every section of the Church of Christ; our attitude must be aggressive, not simply defensive; we therefore place the following important enquiries before every Christian, without respect to denomination or creed, and confidently await their replies.

Why should the British be the people to begin an agitation to free the slaves?

Why should the British be the people to send forth Missionaries all over the world?

How comes it that the British are the most Christian people in the world?

How is it that they are above all nations in ALL things, socially, morally, intellectually, commercially, and spiritually?

Why have not other people the blessings that the Anglo-Saxons enjoy?

Why are the Anglo-Saxon race the most prosperous, the most courageous, the most energetic of all people?

Why are they the head and not the tail in all things?

Why are they successful in war, against all odds?

Why does Britannia rule the waves?

Why does Britain's fleet—naval and commercial combined—outnumber the naval and commercial fleets of all other nations put together?

Why are the British folk the wealthiest of all people?

Why is London the capital of the world?

Why have the British folk greater freedom, and more just and humane laws than other nations?

Why is the English language fast becoming universal?

Why is the Empire continually extending, until it now owns about a fifth of the habitable globe?

Why are Britain's sons—(including the United States)—free from the conscriptions to which other nationalities are subject?

Why does the Anglo-Saxon race increase in numbers much faster than any other people?

Why is Britain the Asylum for all refugees?

Why is the Anglo-Saxon race (the Jews included) the only Sabbath-keeping people?

Israel must be a nation.

Israel must be a monarchy.

Israel must be the greatest, the wealthiest, the most successful in battle, a Sabbath-keeping nation—must be a multitudinous nation—a nation and a company of nations—possessing the Gates of the world, the blessed nation. "You only, saith the Lord, have I known of all the peoples of the earth. Ye shall show forth My praise."

Digitized by Google

"Israel shall blossom and bud, and fill the face of the world with fruit."

The Anglo-Saxon race only is fulfilling all the promises made to Israel.

If the Anglo-Saxon race be not Israel, where is Israel? And who are the British?

JOHN WISHART.

—The British-Israelite and Prophetic Messenger, March, 1888.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

SPECIAL APPEAL.

DEAR SIR,—It will be remembered by Members of the Association, that, last Spring, with the view of extending their operations in the diffusion of Anglo-Israel truths, and for the better accommodation of their Members, the Council determined to remove into their present commodious premises, where are provided a lecture room, reading room, library, Secretary's office, and other conveniences.

The Council were aware that, in taking this step, they were incurring extra expenditure; but this was done for the benefit of the Members, the good of the cause, and with a view to making the Association more generally attractive. They are thankful to state that the necessary means for furnishing the new rooms were generously subscribed by Members of the Association, by whom a special fund was raised for the purpose. The extra annual expenditure, for the maintenance of these premises, is due almost entirely to the increased rent payable for the same, and this can only be met by additional subscriptions from existing Members, and an increase in the number of subscribers.

The very reasonable expectations of the Council, that this result would naturally follow the steps they had taken, have, they regret to say, not been realised; and they consequently find themselves under the necessity now of appealing to the liberality of the Members of the Association, and to other friends of the cause, for the sum of £80, to enable them to meet their accrued liabilities. If the Association is to continue to exist—which all sincere Anglo-Israelites must desire—and to continue to perform the important functions in the future that it has, so far as its means have permitted, carried on during the last ten years, it is absolutely necessary that those who have the truths it advocates and promulgates at heart, should rally round the Council, and enable them to place the Association in a position of increased usefulness and efficiency, BY LIBERAL DONATIONS AND INCREASED ANNUAL SUBSCRIPTIONS, BOTH IN NUMBER AND AMOUNT; and it will be necessary that their reliable income should, to this end, be increased by at least £100 per annum. A list of donations and increased subscriptions already promised is appended.

With regard to the past, it may be here stated that this Association inaugurated an Anglo-Israel Free Distribution Fund, for the gratuitous distribution of Anglo-Israel literature, at its second Council Meeting in January, 1879; in April following, it commenced the formation of a Reference Library of Anglo-Israel Literature, and it now possesses a large number of valuable works; in June of the same year, it organised a Conference of the Clergy at Wimbledon. In May, 1880, it commenced Anglo-Israel Bible Readings; in August following it succeeded in obtaining permission to advocate its principles from the pulpits of certain Churches in the Metropolis, and the late Right Rev. Bishop Titcomb preached two sermons for the Association. Since then many other important works, such as hundreds of lectures; meetings, and drawing-room addresses, have been carried out under its auspices in various parts of the United Kingdom, forming a record at once honourable to the Association, and such as can be claimed by no other Anglo-Israel Association.

The Council believe that all this has only to be brought to the recollection of the Members, and to be made known to outside sympathisers, to call forth from them an increased support, sufficient to carry on the Association without anxiety to the Council.

It is well known that the belief in Anglo-Israelism is rapidly on the increase, but the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association, as the Central representative of that belief, has hitherto been supported by but a small proportion of its adherents. The importance of such a Central Association, for the diffusion of any truth, is a too-well recognised fact to need any demonstration, and the Council cannot but feel that to allow this Association to collapse for want of support, or to struggle on without the proper means to enable it efficiently to fulfil its functions, would seriously prejudice the cause it advocates, and indefinitely retard the fulfilment of its hopes and desires.

In thus strongly recommending the claims of this Association to your earnest consideration, the Council can but express a hope that you will with kind liberality respond to their appeal, and also induce your friends to come forward for the support of the cause.—I am, dear Sir, yours faithfully,

(By order of the Council), E. W. BIRD (Philo-Israel), 14, King William Street, Chairman.
Charing Cross, London, W.C.

LIST OF DONATIONS AND SUBSCRIPTIONS ALREADY PAID OR PROMISED.

	Donations. £ s. d.		Increased annual Subscriptions. £ s. d.
W. H. Peters, Esq.	5 0 0	—	2 10 0
Anonymous	5 0 0	—
D. A. Onslow, Esq.	1 1 0	—	1 11 6
H. H. Pain, Esq.	1 1 0	—	1 1 0
Admiral Bedingfeld		—	1 1 0
F. C. Danvers, Esq.	0 10 6	—	0 10 6
Miss E. M. Babington		—	0 17 6
E. W. Bird, Esq. (Philo-Israel)	1 1 0	—
Miss E. Docker	4 10 0	—
Miss J. Docker	0 10 0	—
George Simon, Esq.	1 1 0	—

ANGLO-ISRAEL FREE DISTRIBUTION FUND.

FIFTY-THIRD MONTHLY REPORT.

THE following donations and subscriptions, from Mar. 17th to April 13th, are very gratefully acknowledged:—

By the Treasurer: A reader of "Words of Help and Wisdom," 5s.; Mrs. H., Derby, 10s.; A Sower, Bridge of Allan, £2; Mr. and Mrs. H., Cheshunt, 10s.; Mrs. P., Leamington, 5s.; Miss H., Lymington, 5s.; J. F. (per Mr. May), Malta, 5s.; C. R., Southsea, £1 1s.; Mrs. S. T., Lymington, £5. Per Miss E. M. Rush: Mrs. A., Weston, 2s. 6d.; Israel's Identification Association, Norton Woodseats, 5s.

By Mr. C. Horner: G. W., Barnsley, 1s.; W. T. W., Crewe, 2s. 6d.; Mrs. M. C., Tenby (monthly subscription), 2s. 6d.; B. W. H., Richmond, 2s. 6d.; Mrs. T., Sheffield, 2s.; J. R. D., Sunderland, 5d.; Mrs. C. B., Weston-Super-Mare (monthly subscription), 5s.; W. W. (monthly subscription, for BANNERS), 3s. 6d.

Total, £11 7s. 11d.

J. LAWRENCE, Hon. Treasurer.

DONATIONS OF LITERATURE.—The following gifts are thankfully acknowledged: Thirty-five copies "Canadian Advance," from Messrs. Yeigh and Co., which have been circulated amongst our Sowers, Sundry parcels of BANNERS, etc., from Streatham, Bristol, Maida Hill, Stretford, Workington, and W. W., have been forwarded to Thames Church Mission, Mission to Deep Sea Fishermen, Market Weighton, and Dover.

LITERATURE DISTRIBUTION. — Twenty-two parcels of various pamphlets, leaflets, etc., have been forwarded during the past month as under: Glasgow, Edinburgh. Great Yarmouth, Carlisle, Alvaston, Farnworth, Devonport, Canterbury, Westminster, Sheffield, Lydling, Birkenhead, Gravesend, Tenby, Weston-Super-Mare, Barnsley, Wigan, New South Wales, Tasmania, Auckland, New Zealand, British Guiana.

BANNER DISTRIBUTION.—The distribution has varied during the month from 100 to 147 weekly. Canterbury may now be included in the list published in January report.

It is particularly desired by the Secretary that when any Sowers are in serious need of literature they will kindly communicate with him at once. Owing to the large staff, it is impossible to send out supplies to each every month, but as far as funds permit as frequently as may be.

CORRESPONDENCE.—The chief of our Sheffield Sowers reports very gratifying progress on all sides. A case is cited that, through reading the Bible in the light of Israel, "the man who had never attended a place of worship, has now become a consistent Christian." And another speaks of having received spiritual good through reading the Bible in the new light revealed.

Digitized by Google

From Manchester we hear of advances. "Out of a class of 15 boys in a Sunday-school," writes our Sower, "a short time ago I put the question—after six months' teaching—'How many of you now believe that the British are Israel of the House of Joseph?' All hands were put up without dissent. This, I think, shows very great progress, for which we need to praise the Lord."

Our correspondent at Malta finds a large field for spreading the "Revelation of Israel." Constant changes occurring in the garrison, with unintermittent arrivals and departures of ships, allows of much distribution being done. The consequence is that much literature is judiciously expended by our indefatigable agent there.

From Barbadoes we have the following: "I very thankfully acknowledge the receipt per mail of a well-filled parcel of pamphlets and miscellaneous papers. We in Barbadoes are becoming more alive to this very interesting question, which, however it may still be ignored by many, is, I believe, destined ere long to be the absorbing subject of the day. I shall be very glad to receive from you, for distribution, as much of this valuable literature as you can spare, and especially any plain Gospel tracts, which I find very handy in scattering among the soldiers." CHARLES HORNER, Secretary.

Contributions to the Fund will be thankfully received and acknowledged by the Hon. Treasurer, Miss J. Lawrence, Rosslyn, Hampton-road, Upper Teddington, Middlesex; or by Mr. Charles Horner, 34, Sheen-park, Richmond-on-Thames. Cheques may be crossed, "London and Provincial Bank, Teddington Branch." Grants of literature will be made, as far as funds allow, on application to the Secretary.

ISRAEL'S SCRIPTURE AND PRAYER UNION.

THE number of cards now issued, including those in the hands of the local secretaries, is 1,450, three new members having joined since our last report.

New members are requested, when writing for cards, to kindly state whether their names are to be entered as Mr., Mrs., or Miss, etc.

A donation, received towards the expenses of the Union, of 7s. from Mrs. H. C., Guernsey, is most thankfully acknowledged.

For the convenience of those members who wish to continue the daily reading, the following list of chapters for May is appended:—

1st ...	Malachi	iv.	12th ...	Matthew	xi.	23rd ...	Matthew	xxii.
2nd...	Matthew	i.	13th ...	„	xii.	24th ...	„	xxiii.
3rd ...	„	ii.	14th ...	„	xiii.	25th ...	„	xxiv.
4th ...	„	iii.	15th ...	„	xiv.	26th ...	„	xxv.
5th ...	„	iv.	16th ...	„	xv.	27th ...	„	xxvi.
6th ...	„	v.	17th ...	„	xvi.	28th ...	„	xxvii.
7th ...	„	vi.	18th ...	„	xvii.	29th ...	„	xxviii.
8th ...	„	vii.	19th ...	„	xviii.	30th ...	Mark	i.
9th ...	„	viii.	20th ...	„	xix.	31st ...	„	ii.
10th ...	„	ix.	21st ...	„	xx.
11th ...	„	x.	22nd ...	„	xxi.

The card of membership will be sent on receipt of three stamps.

The first and second series of Monthly Comments on the whole Bible, by Philo-Israel, may be obtained in volume form. Price in paper cover, 1s. 2d. each, post free; in cloth, 2s. each, post free. The "Prayers for Daily Use," being a prayer for each day of the week, by Philo-Israel, are 1d., or 9d. per dozen, postage extra. The prayer of the Union, as on the Card of Membership, may be obtained printed in larger type, price 1d. for three copies, post free, or 1s. per 100 for distribution. Address, Miss E. Sibbald, 3, Townshend-villas, Richmond, Surrey.

Correspondence.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

MY DEAR PHILO-ISRAEL,—I send you with this an interesting account of an assembly of Jewish Rabbis held some years ago, to decide as to the advisability of endeavouring to purchase the Holy Land from the Turk, and how the meeting ended. The faith of one of them on the promises of God saved them from carrying out what was the intention of the gathering. The story was related to a clerical friend of mine, who has very kindly given me his notes on the subject, and which I have copied for you, thinking the subject might be interesting to you and to many BANNER readers, if you will find room for it in the columns of your valuable paper.

With kind regards, yours very truly,

ST. GEORGE PRIAULX.

The Avenue, Brixton Rise, S.W., March 27, 1888.

"About a year ago I had some conversation with a Jew, who attended a service on board ship which I conducted. It was after this service that he spoke to me, and said it was the first Church of England service he had attended, and that he saw in it nothing to object to from his point of view. This led me to speak of the Jews, and of their return to the Holy Land. I think I suggested to him, Why not buy it from the Turk, for at such a time as the present the Turk would be only too happy to let them have it for a reasonable sum. He said this was no new idea, for a number of years ago it was in contemplation, and the wealthy Jewish community, headed, I think, by Baron Rothschild, had had the question submitted for consideration to an assembly of Rabbis. The prevailing sentiment at this meeting was, that the project was feasible, and numbers of them expressed themselves as favourable to its being done. One very aged Rabbi, however, was observed to remain silent, not availing himself of any opportunity of making even a remark. When all had spoken on the subject except him, some one remarked, just as the question was to be put to the vote, that Rabbi —— had not yet given his opinion, whereupon he was requested to state what he thought of the subject. His reply was something to this effect: That he felt great reluctance in expressing his opinion, since the rest of his brethren were favourable to the proposal, and therefore he would willingly have continued silent; but now that he had been requested to speak, he felt bound to express his opinion, although it was opposed to the views entertained by the others. 'I base my opinion,' he said, 'on faith in God. He has promised to restore us to the land of Canaan. He has told us that that land would be the possession of the children of Abraham. It is ours,' he said, 'without money and without price, and it would be a mistrusting of His Providence if we should agree to purchase it. I believe,' he said, 'in the promises of God, and am assured that He will in His own good time restore His people to their own land.'

"This opinion so influenced the rest of his brethren that they were won over to his views, and came unanimously to the conclusion that the purchase of the Holy Land was contrary to the Divine promises."

DAWLEY DISTRICT.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR PHILO-ISRAEL,—My work amongst the distressed poor during the past four months has been greatly aided by the following friends, most of whom mentioned your BANNER or their love to Israel as a cause of their offerings:—An offering for the poor from a Young Reader of the BANNER OF ISRAEL, 5s.; A Constant Reader of the BANNER 4s.; Sheffield, £1; Mrs. T., Bath, 5s.; Miss Jessie Lawrence, 5s.; E. C. B., Leicester, in appreciation of your Israel's World, 4s.; Mrs. J. Cosserat, 10s,; Mr. J., Dudley, 5s.; For the Poor, 5s.; C. P., 4s; Miss E. Remington, 10s. and 5s; Alice Powis, a parcel of clothes for the poor. With these gifts I have helped to feed fourteen families—some of them pious, Christian members, who have been compelled to beg from door to door for daily bread. As there is no prospect of the Public Works being re-opened, I am assisting a family this week to go to their relatives in America.

Next July the scene of my ministry changes from here to Wellingborough, Northamptonshire, whence I hope you may never hear from me on distress, as the subject has been very depressing to my spirit. I trust that all the ministering human angels who have so fed my poor people and encouraged my work are receiving, and will ever receive, the fulfilment of this beautiful promise of our Father to Israel: "If thou draw out thy soul to the hungry, and satisfy the afflicted soul, then shall thy light rise in obscurity, and thy darkness be as the noonday. And the Lord shall satisfy thy soul." I do not wish however that any of my letters should be regarded as "begging."

Yours in the trials and glories of Israel,

HENRY ROE, Minister.

Dawley, Salop, April 11, 1888.

Digitized by Google

NOTICES.

All communications intended for the Editor, to be addressed: "Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Clifton, Bristol.

SUBSCRIPTIONS.

	£	s.	d.
Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free	0	7	6
Two Copies (including Double Numbers)	0	13	6
Three Copies " " "	1	0	4
Four Copies " " "	1	5	6
Six Copies " " "	1	16	4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-grand, London, to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C., or F. W. PARRY & Co., 29, Paternoster-row, London.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

Contents Bills and Show Cards may be obtained on application to the Publishers.

Advertisements should be sent to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

Prepaid Advertisements are inserted at the rate of thirty words for 1s. 4d.

Just Published, price 2d., post free 3d.

THE A B C CHURCH AND CHAPEL DIRECTORY AND MAY MEETING HAND-BOOK, containing names and addresses of London and Suburban Clergymen and Ministers of all Protestant Denominations, and the name and situation of Church, also the most complete May Meeting List. The Daily News says—"A very useful little hand-book."
Robert Banks & Son, Racquet Court, Fleet Street, E.C.

Just published—Cloth, 2s. 6d.—a re-issue of

The Origin of Masonic Ritual and Tradition:

A Lecture on the Three Degrees, by BRO. WM. ROWBOTTOM, P.M., 1028, with facsimile of a very rare Masonic engraving published in 1789.
"Exquisitely clear and singularly correct in everything wherein I may be any authority or guide."—Professor PIAZZI SMYTH. "Will be found of considerable interest to many besides Masons."—Church Bells.
Oxford: S. Rowbottom and Son; London: R. Banks and Son, Racquet Court, Fleet Street, E.C.; and F. W. Parry and Co., 29, Paternoster Row, E.C.

Price Five Shillings.—"Substantially and attractively got up, and profusely illustrated."—Oldham Chronicle.

Eildon Grange: A Tale.

By ANDREW CLARK, M.A., Vicar of St. Michael's, Oxford.
"One of the most charming books. . . . The illustrations are full of playful humour."—Scotsman. "The book is undoubtedly a happy one."—The Oxford Magazine. "Both entertaining and bracing."—Dundee Advertiser.
Oxford: S. Rowbottom and Son; London: Hamilton, Adams and Co., 32, Paternoster Row, E.C.

☞ Ask for this Book at the Libraries.

WORKS BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

The History of the House of Israel. How They Were Lost and How They Were Found. Told for the children. Price 6d., cloth 1s.; post free 7d. and 1s. 1d. Fifth edition.

A Resume of the Scriptural Argument, Proving the Identity of the British Race with the Lost Ten Tribes. Price 1d.; 6s. per hundred, postage 6d.

Our Identity: What it is Not; What it is; and Our Obligations To-day in Respect to it. Being a Lecture recently delivered in London by Philo-Israel, and published by special request. Price 2d., a reduction for quantities.

LADIES!! Our New Spring and Summer Patterns of Dress Materials are now ready, and we invite every reader of this paper to write for them. Patterns will be sent post free to any address. All wool Cashmeres, Merinos, Serges, Beiges, Lace Cloths, Costume Tweeds, Suitings, Checks, Stripes, and every description of Woollen Dress Materials in Black and all the newest and most stylish colours for the coming season; and in prices to suit all purses. Any length cut, and all parcels are sent carriage paid to any address, either by parcels post or rail. Write at once for patterns, and you will be astonished when you see them.
AN AMAZING OFFER!!—We shall give a very handsome Brocaded Silk Handkerchief with each dress-length ordered from us during this season.
LUTUS C. LEATHLEY, Armley, near Leeds.

FITS! FITS!! FITS!!!

ALL PERSONS SUFFERING FROM EPILEPSY should send name and address to JAMES OSBORNE, Medical Pharmacy, Ashbourne, Derbyshire who will forward, free of charge, full particulars, with Testimonials, of the most successful remedy ever discovered for this distressing malady. Sent to all parts of the world. Reference permitted to Rev. J. BAKER, M.A. 80, Bolton Road, Pendleton, Manchester.

HUMAN LIFE.—FIFTY YEARS' Record of Facts, Principles, and Discoveries (just published, complete) Relating to the Improvement and Preservation of Human Life on Earth. Origin and true treatment of diseases. A series of articles by DR. SAMUEL BIRLEY, M.D., Ph.D. Book form, 50 pages. SENT FREE to every applicant by the publishers, GORDON B. MURRAY & CO., 50, Theobald's-road, Holborn, E.C. Write to-day

Just Published, Crown 8vo., Cloth, price 3s. 6d.

BRITAIN IN HISTORY, ANCIENT AND MODERN;

Or, Proofs Linking Israel with Britain Throughout the Ages.

By Mrs. G. A. ROGERS,
Author of "The Coronation Stone," etc., etc.
"The Book possesses a national interest, and ought to be widely read."—The Fireside News.
"The most useful addition to Identity literature that has been made for a long time past."
Israel's Hope and Destiny.
"Well worthy of perusal for the rare and curious information conveyed."—Christian Age.
"This remarkable volume. . . We welcome this addition to the literature of Israel."—Banner of Israel.
"Interesting and suggestive."—English Churchman.

THE CORONATION STONE; And England's Interest in It.

4th Thousand, Crown 8vo., Cloth, price 1s. 6d.
"A reverent and graceful little book."—Life and Work.
"An excellent account of the history and wanderings of the Stone. . . will be read and re-read."
Banner of Israel.
LONDON: J. NISBET & Co., Berners Street, nd to be had of all Booksellers.

Price 6d., post free 7d.

THE MESSENGER,

A Monthly Expositor of the Fulfilment of the Scriptures in the Anglo-Saxon Folk, the Israel of God.

Each number contains contributions from high-class writers on Identity Subjects, selections from the Discourses of Rev. Dr. Wild, and a chapter of an Important New Work, entitled—

"RUSSIA JAPHET," by "OXONIAN,"

Author of "Israel's Wanderings," &c.

F. W. Parry & Co., 29, Paternoster-row, London.

Dr. JOSEPH WILD'S WORKS

The most useful works on the subject.
NEW EDITION JUST PUBLISHED.

THE LOST TEN TRIBES

Price 3s., post free 3s. 3d.

'We have much pleasure in directing attention to this handsome volume. . . We promise our readers that if they procure this work, and will peruse it, they will find 'Our Identity' discussed in a clear, novel, racy, and from an American point of view, which is sure to interest."—Banner of Israel.

THE FUTURE OF ISRAEL AND JUDAH.

Price 2s., post free 2s. 3d.
R. BANKS & SON, RACQUET-COURT, FLEET-ST.

1,000 Valuable Recipes.

COMPRISING MEDICAL, HOUSEHOLD, and Toilet Secrets invaluable to every person. Also Rare and Valuable Trade Secrets that cannot be obtained elsewhere, and are indispensable to every Artisan, Mechanic, Business Man, Manufacturer, Farmer, etc., etc. An investment of 1s. in this book will save pounds in a year. Post free, 15 stamps—W. B. FOOT & SON, 44, Camden Road, London, N.W.

THE "BUSY BEE" 5/6 SEWING MACHINE. 5/6

This Wonderful Machine will sew thick or thin material, and is so simple that a child can work it. Every machine is warranted, and sent carriage paid for 6s. Polished Stained Wood Box, 1s. 6d. extra.
W. B. FOOT & SON, 44, CAMDEN RD., LONDON, N.W.

PIANOFORTES, Harmoniums, American Organs. Why buy at shops inferior made instruments, and pay large profits, when you can buy direct from the Maker High-class Instruments, and save 50 per cent. by so doing? Full value allowed for old Instruments in exchange as part payment. Write for Price Lists and Testimonials to G. LINSTEAD, 2, Oseney Crescent, Camden Road, London. Established 1874.

Published by ROBERT BANKS & SON,

RACQUET COURT, FLEET STREET, E.C.

Postal Orders may be obtained at any Post Office in the United Kingdom for the following amounts: 1s., 1s. 6d., ½d. each; 2s., 2s. 6d., 3s., 3s. 6d., 4s., 4s. 6d., 5s., 7s. 6d., 10s., 10s. 6d., 1d each: 15s., 20s., 1½d. each. They should be "crossed" City Bank, Ludgate Hill, E.C. Stamps received.

PRESENT-DAY PROBLEMS, and How Anglo-Israel Truth Explains and Solves Them. By V. M. COX. 3d., by post 4 stamps.

LIGHT SHED BY THE GREAT PYRAMID OF EGYPT on the Last Days of this Dispensation. from A.D. 1814 to A.D. 1922. By JAMES KEITH. Price 4d., by post 5 stamps.

NEW TESTAMENT TRUTH on the Anglo-Israel Controversy. By J. G. TAYLOR. Price 3d., by post 4 stamps.

A NEW LIGHT. An Elementary Pamphlet for General Distribution. By A E L. Price 2d., by post 2½d. in stamps.

EPHRAIM-ISRAEL, the Pivot Nation of Prophecy and History. By V. M. COX. Price 1d., one dozen free for 1s.

ALL PUBLICATIONS ON
THE IDENTITY OF THE LOST TRIBES OF ISRAEL
May be obtained at the Office of
ROBERT BANKS & SON, RACQUET COURT, FLEET STREET.

The Banner of Israel (Weekly No. and Monthly Part). The Messenger, Two Witnesses, etc., forwarded immediately on publication at office rates. The Canadian Advance, post free for one year for 4s. 6d.
Catalogues post free on application.

MR. EDWARD HINE has returned from his lecturing tour in America. Friends wishing to arrange for him to lecture can communicate with Isaac Loveland, Shoreham, near Sevenoaks, Kent, at present fixing no dates. Mr. Hine's publications have had a large circulation, and can be obtained of F. W. Parry & Co., 29, Paternoster Row, London, E.C.

Forty-Seven Identifications, 6d., post free 7d

Cui Bono? 6d., post free, 7d.

Lost Israel Found, 3s 6d., post free, 3s. 9d!

Also The Nation Warned by the Scripture Teachings of the Great Pyramid. 6d., post, 7d.

SOUND, PURE, WHITE

TEETH!

Those who value these will try

CARBOLINE

(The Great Sanitary Tooth Paste).

1/6 & 2/6 per Pot.

Through Chemists, or post free from the Makers,

GEORGE & WELCH

WORCESTER.

Lancet writes:—"To save the teeth use a good carbolic daily."

Certain HARNESS' Cure.
ELECTROPATHIC BELT
FOR PARALYSIS

J. FULLER, Jun., Esq., Whiteparish, Salisbury, Wilts, writes:—"Since wearing your Electropathic Belt I am decidedly better and stronger. I have more confidence in myself, and the pain in my back is completely gone. Your Belt is truly wonderful."

Guaranteed to generate a mild continuous current of Electricity, which speedily cures all Disorders of the Nerves, Stomach, Liver and Kidneys. Thousands of Testimonials. Pamphlet & Advice free on application to Mr. C. B. Harness, Consulting Electrician, the Medical Battery Co. Ltd.
Only Address,
52, OXFORD ST. LONDON, W. (Corner of Rathbone Place.)
Call to-day, if possible, or write at once

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. F. W. PARRY (late GUEST & Co.), 29 PATERNOSTER-ROW WEDNESDAY, MAY 2, 1888 [All rights reserved

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."

(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. XII., No. 593. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, MAY 9, 1888. [PRICE ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
The Alarming News from France, from Berlin, and from Roumania	189
More Evidence Connecting the Ancient Inhabitants of Ireland with the Phœnicians and Hebrews. Part XI. By Joseph Thomson	190
The Nation and the Company of Nations	191
Old Testament Idolatries, and the Connection Between Druidical and Hebrew Worship. By Rev. T. Lowe, M.B.A.S.	192
"The Land Which the Lord thy God Careth for." By E. Reep	192
The London Echo Gives Evidence	193
The Testimony of P. Virgilius Maro	194
Correspondence	195

THE ALARMING NEWS FROM FRANCE, FROM BERLIN, AND FROM ROUMANIA.

APRIL 17, 1888, will be remembered as a day of alarming tidings. From France we got then the information of the rapid success of General Boulanger in the French elections, even the sober Nord returning him at the head of the lists with 172,000 votes, as compared with 76,000 and 9,000, obtained by the other two candidates. Boulanger's success as Dictator of France after a revolution, would be a severe blow to the European peace, and end probably in the trial of strength between Germany and France for which events are doubtless preparing.

From Berlin grave and distressing tidings reached us, for the Emperor Frederick was publicly reported by his physicians to be in a very critical condition, bronchitis having supervened "with high fever and quickened breathing," which led to painful apprehension that his life was in danger. From Eastern Europe there came the same day news of a movement of Russian troops towards the Austrian frontier, which may or may not be meant as aggressive, and an outbreak of what looks like the beginning of a revolution in Roumania, fomented probably by Russian agents in order to keep alive that unrest of the Eastern States which can so easily be kindled into war. A provincial paper, commenting on the tidings of the day, justly remarked, "all the signs of the times point to the approach of a deadly struggle among the nations, such as the world has never yet seen." Here we have the secular response to the prophetic declaration of Rev. xvi. 18, R.V:—"And there was a great earthquake such as there was not since there were men upon the earth, so great an earthquake, so mighty." What are the nations to do? Disarmament is out of the question! While Metz, Alsace and Lorraine, Sedan and Strasbourg, remain rankling in French memories, the German nation never can relax their precautions. They must add to, rather than reduce their armies. Russia sees her opportunities approaching respecting the coveted Gate, and therefore will not allow affairs to settle in Bulgaria, or Austrian Poland to be at peace. She adds to the turmoil by fomenting revolution in Roumania, and so prepares the way by-and-bye for the occupation of that province as a step in advance towards Bulgaria. In Germany the Emperor's condition leads to serious apprehensions. In the case of his removal we have in the Crown Prince William a man of strong will, ready implicitly to follow the policy of the iron Chancellor, Prince Bismarck, in the matter of French threats. The Crown Prince is not credited with over much respect or deference for France!

The whole aspect of affairs leads to the conclusion that we are near "the beginning of the end." Not far off seems to be the great earthquake War-woe, when in Europe two Powers will be arrayed against three, and three against two. The questions which await decision by the stern arbitrament of war are such as no compromise can settle. They are simply whether France shall recover her provinces by conquering Germany, or fail to do so, and therefore be vanquished by the Teuton, never to rise again. In the Eastern Question Russia will attempt to drive out the Sultan from "The Gate" and take his place therein. This is "the last word in the Eastern Question," but the Western question is one of death or life to France or Germany. How Italy will interpose and fare in this mighty shock of nations, we may not yet surmise. But it seems sure she will be drawn into the mêlée, and take her part gallantly in the defence of Israel's Gate, giving Germany the while some help in her unequal contest with her two mighty enemies, to the East as well as to the West.

Whether recent complications will bring on the cataclysm early, or whether, as is probable, a longer period will be requisite to complete the purposes of God before the outbreak of war, none may certainly declare. It is ours to watch and wait, and note how God fulfils His purposes towards His people, according to the prophecies. Humanly speaking there seeems no reason why the troubles on the continent should not be pacified for the time being. The conspiracy of General Boulanger would not seem to be very fordmidable if he has failed to secure the support of the army. The condition of the Emperor of Germany, even if it should terminate as no one desires it should, will make no alteration in the policy of the Fatherland. She must arm and keep armed, to resist her enemies whenever they may spring forward to carry out their projects of revenge. Russia's plots in the direction of Constantinople are sure to be opposed by three first-class European Powers: Austria-Hungary, Germany and Italy; and this is a coalition which, backed as it would be by the Turkish armies, and those of the Balkan States, will make Russia pause before she decides upon an onward step.

Digitized by Google

It is remarkable that in the face of occurrences and probable events on the Continent which are filling the nations abroad with consternation and perplexity, our own people in the British Isles are calmly pursuing their own aims and objects, mending their own constitution, and attending to the pacification of Ireland, without the slightest fear of foreign foes, or terrors lest the French should turn their arms against our shores, and attempt an invasion which has often enough been threatened by boastful French colonels, but has never yet been accomplished by our vivacious neighbours. This nation is Israel, and that explains the enigma as it explains so many more. Israel was promised a safe refuge from her enemies in "a place of her own," "appointed" for her domicile in security. There she 'dwells alone" "carelessly and confidently in her isles," glorifying God and presenting a picture which the nations of the world cannot but envy.

Here then is another answer to the Cui bono? querist, and another reason why Israel should praise the Lord! (2 Sam. vii. 10; Numb. xxiii. 9; Exod, xxxiii. 16; Ezek. xxxix. 6; Isa. xxiv. 15; Jer. xxxiii. 9, R.V.)

MORE EVIDENCE CONNECTING THE ANCIENT INHABITANTS OF IRELAND WITH THE PHŒNICIANS AND HEBREWS.

By Joseph Thomson.

(Continued from page 176.)

PART XI.

XXXI.—THE MILEDH.

There is a people called Miledh frequently mentioned in ancient Irish poetry, and who are supposed by more modern antiquarians to have been the same as (or connected with) the Milesians. These latter are also supposed to have been the descendants of some Carthagenians who sailed from Spain, led by Heber and Heremon, the two sons of Milesius, king of Spain, and settled in Ireland with all their followers. MacGeoghegan writes that Heber, after having gained a footing in the island and "refreshed his troops, advanced into the country to make further discoveries, in hopes of meeting some of the colony that had been scattered by a storm some time before; after a long and fatiguing march he arrived at Invear-Colpa, where he found Heremon with his division, by whom he was informed of the disasters which had befallen his brothers Aireagh and Colpa, who had perished on that coast. The brothers now uniting their forces, formed their plans for a campaign. He decided to go in quest of the enemy, who, according to the reports of their scouts, were not far off. They began their march, and after a few days came up with the three princes of the Tuatha de Danains, in the plains of Tailton, with a formidable army ready to meet them. The action began; and this battle, which was to decide the fate of both parties, was for a long time doubtful, both sides making extraordinary efforts: the latter to defend their patrimony from the invaders, who wished to wrest it from them; the former, less to revenge the death of their countrymen, than to obtain possession of an island which had been destined for them, according to the prophecy of the Druids. At length the three princes of the Tuatha de Danains, together with their principal officers, having fallen, the army was thrown into disorder, and the rout became so general, that more were killed in the pursuit than on the field of battle. That day, so fatal to the Tuatha de Danains, decided the empire of the island in favour of the Milesians."

In the poetical histories of the Druids, it is said that Ireland was inhabited by the Miledh Slioght Fene, and the Miledh Espaine; which names have been supposed by later writers as equivalent to Milesius the Phœnician. Other learned moderns, however, think that Miledh is an abbreviation from Mbealedh, i.e., the worshippers of Baal, and figuratively, the noble Druids. Fene, they also say, means wise, so that to them Miledh Fene would represent the wise and noble Druids; and Miledh Slioght Fene, a wise and generous offspring. Similarly some make Miledh Espaine, the son of Golam, under whom the Iberi arrived and settled in the south of Ireland, to mean Milesius the Spaniard: though others assert that easpainne, espaine, or hespin, in the old Celtic meant a bare, arid, and barren country, and so understood the words, "miledh espainne mac golam, noble, from the barren mountain country of the Cael."

But it being an accepted fact that the Miledh, or Milesians were a Phœnician race who arrived in Ireland from the coast of Spain, their name may have been derived, not from Milesius King of Spain, whose only existence is in the realms of poetry and imagination, but from one of the Phœnicians who had arrived in Spain from Miletum, in Ionia, which was an early Phœnician colony. Greek history tells us that Miletum was first colonised by Phœnicians from Crete; and that it was attacked by the Persians, who transplanted its inhabitants into Persia: and that the Phœnicians and Milesians joined with the Persians against the Ionians at the battle of Mycale, and that they were made slaves by the Persians, but kindly treated by Alexander; and that in the time of Psamiticus a colony of Milesians settled in Greece. The Sacæ joined the Persians at the battle of Marathon, and broke the centre of the Athenians. The "Liber Lucanes," an ancient Irish MS., tells us that one colony of the Milesians arrived in Ireland in the last year of Camboath (Cambyses) son of Ciras (Cyrus). It then describes the division of Alexander's empire among his generals and says another colony arrived in that year wherein Alexander defeated Daire, i.e., Darius. (See Vallancey). The Phœnicians, after gaining Miletum, disseminated themselves as tribes in every direction. They pursued the Thessalonians from Caria, and took up their residence, in the first place, on the coast of Anatolia, founding the cities of Trebizon, Heraclea or Penderaclea, Sinope, etc., afterwards landing in the Crimea, and founding the cities of Theodosia, or Kaffa, Chersonesus, and Oliera on the Dnieper; and besides other cities, built Odessus, or Barna, on the western coast of the Black Sea. Their principal city seems to have been Appollonia or Sizeapolis, which was strongly fortified, and built partly in the peninsula and partly on the little island of Pontus, where the famous statue of Apollo, brought afterwards to Rome by Lucullus—was worshipped with all solemnity. Money coined at Appollonia by the Milesians, had an impression of Apollo's head, with the motto, "Dorionos," i.e., the bountiful.

Thus we see that Miledh is not the name of a particular race, but of the city of Miletum: and Milesian is not a proper name, but a national one; as the Milesii were the inhabitants of Miletum, and anything belonging thereto was called Milesian; as Thales the Milesian; Anaximander, Anaximenes, and Hecateus the Milesians: also Milesiourgos signified anything done by Milesian art, as Milesian tapestry, and Milesian wool, which was celebrated throughout the known world.

But the name of the city itself may have been coined by the Phœnicians from milet, to escape, or be liberated; which accords with the history of the first tribes of the Canaanites, who fled before the face of Joshua and the Israelites. It should also be noticed that Miletum was otherwise called Anactoria, from Anach, a descendant of Anak, whom many of the Phœnicians used to boast of as the founder of their family. In Ireland there seems some traces of the name Miledh in that of Malahide a town in the county of Dublin, and in that of Malahidert, a village in the same county.

XXXII.—ESPAINE, OR SPAIN.

Espaine, Hespin, or Spania, is a word not of Celtic, but of Hebraic and Syriac origin, from "Span," or "Sapan," i.e., a rabbit. Hence Spania, a country abounding in them; and this is the epithet by which Catullus distinguished that part of Spain now called Celtiberia. But the Phœnicians applied the name to the country at large, from the number of these animals being so immense, that they seemed almost as though they would dispute its possession with man himself: not only did trees, plants, roots, and vegetables give way before their dense and desolating myriads, but castles were not safe from their attack, and whole towns were undermined by them.* Many ancient writers, impressed with these facts, speak of the rabbit as if it were an animal peculiar to Spain. Hence we see how slight is the probability attaching to the derivation of Spain from Pan, the Arcadian, one of Bacchus's associates, as Lusitania was so named from lusus, i.e., play. For Hispania, (Lat. i.e. Spain) some of the ancients wrote Espaine, and now frequently Spania, which Vossius and Bochart confirm by the testimony of St. Paul, Theophilus, Eusebius, Epiphanius and others. Eulogius has written Ecclesia Spaniœ (i.e., the church of Spain), which Ambrosius Morus erroneously transcribed into Ecclesia Hispaniæ. The colour black, is called "spanus" by Nonus; and "Spanicum argentum," for Hispanicum (i.e., Spanish silver) occurs in Athanasius Bibliotheca in his Lives of the Pontiffs.

Digitized by Google

XXXIII.—THE FEINE, OR FENIANS.

Frequent mention in ancient Irish chronicles and ballads occurs of the Fene, or Feine, Fane, Fine, or Fion, an ancient Irish clan. Some derive the etymology of these names from the Irish word fine, i.e., a tribe or nation; others from feine, the celebrated ancient Irish militia; while others from feine, i.e., a steward or husbandman. Some also think the words denote a standard or ensign, or whatever is erected in a high and conspicuous position; when connected with sacred matters the high priest or sacrificer; a learned man; a Druidical temple, as the Romans gave the name of fana to the shrines where they worshipped their idols.

But it is more probable that by these names is indicated some one of the ancient Phœnician colonies in Ireland. It is an admitted and established opinion that the Phœnician name was invented by the Greek in imitation of the Hebrew form of expression, phene-anak, i.e., the sons of Anak, or Anaceans. Anak was a giant, and the son of Arba; whence (plu) Anakim, i.e., giants: and being the founder of that race, the Greeks thought that the inhabitants of all Syria had sprung from him. It is indeed more correct to say Bene-anak, but the Greeks always soften the Heb. B in this way, as Josephus writes Sopho instead of Soba, a region of Syria. It is therefore no wonder that Bene-anak, Phœnices, and Punici, or Pœni, should all designate the same people, the Phœnicians. Beanak, or Phianak was anciently used as an abbreviation of Ben anak; from the name thus shortened the African Phœnicians were called Pœni, and those of Iberia, Fene; retaining in either case only the first member of the name, Fene-anak.

That the Phœnicians claimed the name of Bene-anak, i.e., sons of the Anaceans, and desired to be so designated, is inferred from their calling Carthage, built by them, Chadre Anak, i.e., the seat of the Anaceans (see the Pœnulus of Plautus); and from their calling Miletum, a colony of theirs, Anactoria (see above), from Anacte, i.e. a descendant of the great Anak. For although but few of the Phœnicians really owed their origin to the family of the Anaceans, (as Bochart observed), yet the celebrity of the race had such charms, that many wished to claim it as their parent stock. In all nations it is handed down as a presumptive usage that they select their name from the elite of their nobility; and among the Canaanites no family could compete with that of Anak, either in personal valour, or the influence of a splendid name. They were superhuman in strength, and so gigantic in stature that the Israelites appeared like so many locusts in comparison (Numb. xiii. 28, 33).

* Rabbits have similarly increased in New Zealand, until they are such a plague that men and dogs are now employed in their extermination, 1883.

XXXIV.—THE CLAN CUILEAN.

Another ancient people of Ireland were called Clan Cuilean, and lived in a part of the county Clare, by the Shannon, comprising the tract formerly known by the name of Thomond. "Clain" in Irish meaning sprung from, or genitive, the name of this people is by some supposed to indicate the growth or harvest of wheat near the water. They were also called Hy na mor, which sounds to the natives as the maritime region. But Dr. Villanueva thinks that Clan Cuilean is compounded from the Phœnician clain culain, i.e., the summoned together from different, or mixed nations, thus intimating their motley composition. Or from Clann Culain, i.e., the summoned Babylonians; for the Chaldeans who accompanied the Jews on their return from the captivity, attached themselves afterwards to the Phœnicians in their maritime expeditions, as well as in transplanting their colonies; and in the Chaldee language Clann, and Calnah meant Babylon. Hy na mor is also a Phœnician name, from inamor, i.e., a variegated or party-coloured people in a sea-girt province.

(To be continued.)

"THE NATION" AND "THE COMPANY OF NATIONS."

In response to an inquiry addressed to the Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A., in reference to his view of the probable connection between the Company of nations of Gen. xxxv. 11, and the Fulness or multitude of nations of Gen. xlviii. 19, we have received from him the following original and remarkable observations which have occurred to him as probable, but which, of course, future consideration may lead him to modify. He writes distinctly that the promise in Gen. xxxv. and that in chapter xlviii. relate to the same Company or Assembly of nations, and there is not the faintest idea in the writer's mind favouring the Teutonic or Gothic theory. He said what follows:—

"Just looking at Gen. xxxv. 11; as the promise there is earlier than the blessing in Gen. xlviii. 19, it must be taken as limited as to the channel of its fulfilment by the later passage. Gen. xii. 3 is limited by Gen. xvii. 19; Gen. xxvi. 4 is limited by Gen. xxvii. 33; so Gen. xxxv. 11 is limited by Gen. xlviii. 13—21. Not only does the latter passage show in what particular channel the blessing promised in the former was to flow, but it distinctly specifies the channels respectively of fulfilment of (a) 'a nation,' and (b) 'a company of nations'; for 'a nation' was to come of Manasseh (Gen. xlviii. 19), but a 'fulness of Gentiles,' or a 'company of nations' from Ephraim (Gen. xlix. 19).

	Manasseh.	Ephraim.
Gen. xxxv. 11,	'a nation;	and a company of nations.'
Gen. xlviii. 19,	'a people,' 'great';	'a fulness of nations,' 'greater.'

"This has suggested itself to me as probable; the parallel seems so complete; but it it does not agree with our usually given explanations of 'a nation' in Gen. xxxv. 11. The fact of the matter seems to be this:—The past and future occupation of the land belongs to all the Twelve Tribes alike. The spiritual seed (Messiah) and the throne of David are Judah's distinctive blessings. 'A great nation' or 'people' were to come of Manasseh, and 'a fulness' or 'company of nations' of Ephraim. The other tribes seem to me to have nothing more very distinctive, and to come in for what they enjoy in conjunction with Ephraim (Ezek. xxxvii. 16, 19). 'Ephraim,' in Hosea, Ezekiel, and Zechariah means all the Ten Tribes collectively, and they are never that I remember, contemplated since their captivity until the reunion with Judah as anything but one undivided stick."

ERRATA.—Page 167, column 1, last paragraph, for 1573, read 1588; and page 179, column 2, line 42, for "then" read "there."

Digitized by Google

OLD TESTAMENT IDOLATRIES, AND THE CONNECTION BETWEEN DRUIDICAL AND HEBREW WORSHIP.

By Rev. T. Lowe, M.B.A.S., Stratford-on-Avon.

With reference to the idolatries of Egypt, Moses solemnly warned the Israelites (vide Deut. iv. 16—20). From the final exhortation of Joshua, we find that the Tribes of Israel still retained some relics of idolatry; but what sort of gods were they which they worshipped? The gods of the Chaldeans, fire, light, the sun; and those of the Egyptians, Apis, Anubis, reptiles, vegetables; and those of the Amorites, Moabites, Canaanites, and Baal-peor, Astarte, &c. (Josh. xxiv. 14, 15).

These early idolatries lacked the mystic grandeur, and the mythic and classical beauty and charm, which characterises the mythology of the lands of Homer and Virgil with reference to the divinities of the Pantheon, celestial, terrestrial, and infernal.

In the ruins of Druidical Temples, we have "sermons in stones"; and what manner of stones are here? Other mighty piles of antiquity fall piece-meal; but here, a single stone is a ruin, prostrate like the giant carcase of Goliath. "The smoke rests on the altar stone; the image of the god is gone."

It has been well said by a distinguished antiquarian, of Offa's Dyke, King of Marcia, of Welsh renown, that "it hangs like a precious jewel round the neck of Time." Druidical ruins possess a far richer historical interest, wherever found, from Stonehenge to Mona or Anglesey, where the priests bravely perished by the Romans, under General Suetonius, 55 A.D. "A tale hangs thereby."

It is, to say the least, not at all improbable that with the Phœnicians came the Druidical religion to our shores, and with them came some of the Lost Tribes of Israel.

The Druids were a very mysterious and ancient people. Some of their religious ceremonies certainly remind us very much of early patriarchial times, and of after epochs of Israel's reign. In their social life and in their worship, we find ideas and customs coincident with the ceremonial rites of the Israelites, and of their national life.

Weaver, in his "Monumenta Antiqua," remarks: "In the course of his readings, he has noticed such and such monuments of antiquity; in his course of scripture reading, it has repeatedly occurred to him that certain historic facts, there recorded, would account for their erection." One Scriptural fact is sufficient. By the direction of Samuel, "the people went to Gilgal, and there made Saul king, before the Lord in Gilgal" (1 Sam. x.; Jos. iv. 20—22). It was at Gilgal that the twelve stones, that had been taken out of the Jordan, had been set up.

Now what is all this intended to prove? Why, from this historical and antiquarian stand-point alone, the great fact—for fact it is to us,—the British-Israel Identity Theory, the fact of the Israelitish origin of our ancient British ancestors. Many of the dispersed, exiled Tribes of Israel came and settled in the Isles of the West—"the Isles afar off."

Nearly 1,000 years, B.C., when the merchants of Tyrus came over to our shores to look for minerals, Ezekiel spoke of them as bringing from the isles of the sea, iron, tin, and lead. (Ezek. xxvii. 12).

On every hand proofs, from both sacred and profane history, ancient and modern history, proofs clear and cogent, accumulate for our proud and supreme position as the "Israel of God." The seal of the Holy One of Israel is manifestly upon us. We have ample proof, direct and collateral, in support of our sublime theory.

In the Celtic nations, the meteors known as shooting stars, are called "the death of a Druid," implying that their souls ascended in fiery chariots. That is most probably an Israelitish idea (vide 2 Kings ii. 11, vi. 17).

Collaterally, there is another fact in the history of the ancient Britons in the time of the Druids, worthy of note. Mitford says, "That it is surprising how the distant Britons should arrive at such perfection in the use of chariots, which they possessed when the Roman legions first invaded this island, especially as that mode of fighting was little, if at all, practised by the Gauls and Germans."

Cæsar says that the British chariot forces possessed the celerity of the horse. In the light of our theory, this fact presents no difficulty (vide Isa. ii. 7; 1 Kings x. 26.)

Britain is the "stone of Israel,"—Shakespeare, with a true prophetic gleam, well says of our invincible insular position,

> "This happy breed of men; this little world;
> This precious stone, set in the silver sea;
> Which serves it in the office of a wall,
> Or as a moat, defensive to a house,
> Against the enemy of less happier lands."

"THE LAND WHICH THE LORD THY GOD CARETH FOR."

By E. Reep.

"Babylon, Troy, Tyre, Palestine and early Rome have passed or are passing into fiction," wrote Emerson in his essay on history, a statement we may accept or not as we please, provided we strike out of the list Palestine. It is no uncommon error to regard the Land of Promise as a land accursed; a land upon which no good thing can spring forth in this dispensation. A totally different story is told by travellers and explorers well acquainted with the resources of the country. It is, they say, as fruitful where cultivated as in the days of the patriarchs.

Mr. Finn, in his "Byeways in Palestine," speaks of fields and vast wheat plains that would do credit to English farming; and he saw barley reaped of superb quality. The modern practice, he states, is to sow wheat very thinly, and from such sowing every seed is expected to produce thirty to fifty stalks, and every stalk to give forty seeds. Most astonishing, he affirms, will be the amount of produce, and its rapidity also, when the obstacles now existing against proper cultivation are removed.

Dr. Porter was much struck by the fertility of the land wherever cultivated, even in a slight degree.

From another traveller we gather that it is a "mere superstition to suppose that the soil of Jerusalem is cursed and can produce nothing; all who know Palestine unite in saying that the husbandman's reward might be a hundredfold." Everything relating to the coming restoration of the Holy Land is of absorbing interest, and ought to engage our attention. In the study of the Bible we read much of the debasement of the children of Israel in the great and goodly cities given them as a heritage from the Lord their God; much also of what was to befall that splendid inheritance in the event of disobedience to the statutes of their God, as set before them by His servant Moses. But we must not dwell too much upon Israel's violation of all that was holy and just, for we must bear in mind that there was to be a limit to their punishment and exile, which we know was to culminate in their return to God's favour, and that in the latter days (Hosea iii. 5). A sign of this return being nearer than we think, may be read in the interest which of late years has been taken in the scientific exploration of Jerusalem and the mountains and valleys round about, stretching from the river of Egypt to the river Euphrates, this being the extent of Israel's possessions as given in Gen. xv. 18. That a general interest in the land may be taken as symbolising its restoration receives confirmation from the words of the Psalmist, who ever kept in sight the future glory of the city of the great King:—"Thou shalt arise and have mercy upon Zion: for it is time that Thou have mercy upon her, yea, the time is come, and why? Thy servants think upon her stones and it pitieth them to see her in the dust." These words speak volumes to those who have considered the work of research in

Digitized by Google

Palestine of the last twenty or thirty years. Some curious details are given in the records of discovery published by various writers upon Syrian exploration. Mr. Finn mentions a district in the coasts of Tyre and Sidon which has been called the Stonehenge of Syria, from which he thinks we may derive data useful in enabling us to understand the Celtic remains still found in Europe. Near Geba, the Gibeah of the Bible, are some strange stone parallelograms of great antiquity, and around Soof, though Mr. Finn saw none of the Druidical remains mentioned by Irby and Mangles, there are several rude erections resembling Celtic cromlechs, and which it is said are plentiful all over the hills.

In the Peninsula of Sinai the Rev. F. W. Holland was fortunate enough to come across many traces of ancient inhabitants, and ruins of houses similar in form to the "botham" or beehive houses in Scotland, built of rough and massive stones. These houses are generally found in groups, and near them are often seen ruins of tombs, similar to those which in England and Scotland are called Druid circles. They are of the oldest form of architecture known to us, and they evidently were made by a large and powerful people who inhabited the Peninsula at a very early period. Mr. Holland is of opinion that possibly some of the circles may mark the spots where the children of Israel buried their dead. (See Captain Wilson's "Recovery of Jerusalem"). Further information about these extraordinary dwellings may be found in a work entitled "Our Work in Palestine," in which we are told they exactly resemble the shielings of the Shetland Islands, and the chambers discovered in the large caverns at Clava, near Inverness.

Palestine, from Dan to Beersheba, is no larger than the Principality of Wales; it is 140 miles long and 40 in average breadth. Within such narrow limits it would not be possible for the chosen people to return in a body, more especially as they were bidden to enlarge their tent, to stretch forth the curtains of their habitation. That they will not do so seems to be plain enough from a passage in Jeremiah, wherein we are told that the Lord will call His people to return representatively, one of a city and two of a family (Jer. iii. 14). In an age when men are searching out the phenomena of nature with intense zeal, it would be a shame on the intelligence of the present day did Biblical phenomena stir up no less enthusiasm in men's minds, by which they may be urged to pick up the broken threads of Hebrew history, and to read their Bibles with more careful criticism. With full life infused into the dry bones of their theology, we should hear no more of Palestine passing into the realms of fiction.

It is conjectured that there may yet be discovered long-hidden treasures which will throw light on the ancient history of this country of countries; for if the empire of Rome comprehended the fairest parts of the earth, Palestine was, as it has been said, the theatre of the most stupendous drama in the world's history. That drama is not yet played out. Christ came to redeem the whole world; He came specially to save the Ten-Tribed House of Israel, which was to be found in His day beyond the Euphrates, out of the bounds of the Roman empire, an immense multitude, as Josephus tells us, not to be estimated by numbers. Professor Sayce doubts the entire deportation of the House of Israel into Media and Persia; however that may be Captain Conder* states that there was a Jewish belief, about the Christian Era, that the Ten Tribes had wandered East under a great leader, crossing over some river in the direction of Central Asia. And it is remarkable, he says, that a similar story of migration is preserved in Persian legends. One fact is prominent in these stories of migration, and that is, that the Ten Tribes were in early times a migratory people. Curiously enough there is another legend of a migratory people contained in Scandinavian lore; who strange to say found their way North from Asia under a great leader.

* See "Syrian Stone-Lore."

The goal to which the Scandinavians were pushing is no mystery; they had the British Isles in view. The migrating Israelites may also have had an island home as the end and aim of their migrations; and this is the more likely from the frequent mention of islands in Scripture in connection with Israel. In the forty-first chapter of Isaiah the people of Israel are exhorted to renew their strength in the islands, to fear not, for God had chosen them, and not cast them away.

It is to be regretted that so many people calmly disclaim an interest in the vital history of the House of Joseph; they are fully persuaded that in no manner are they affected by it. And yet if Palestine were to finally fall into other hands than those who have an historic right to it, and have it also by Divine promise, serious consequences would result to the whole world, consequences which must have been patent to Mr. Finn (for twenty-five years British Consul at Jerusalem) when he wrote that the future possession of Jerusalem would be the key to universal dominion. Palestine is and will continue to be the wonder of the world so long as the world lasts. Under the dominion successively of Roman, Saracen and Turk, it will in due course pass under the dominion of its rightful heirs, when its warfare will be accomplished, and the glory of the Lord revealed before the eyes of all flesh. Before drawing this article to a close a curious circumstance may be mentioned as related in "Byeways in Palestine." The Armenian church in Palestine still follows the ancient custom of summoning the congregation by the use of the Nakoos, a sort of resonant board or plank; a similar custom prevailed amongst the ancient Britons, who called their people to service by means of "sacra ligna," and Mr. Finn asks if it be not likely that these were the same as the above, seeing the Celtic nations were derived from the East.

Englishmen have made it their business to carry the Bible to the uttermost parts of the earth. How long will it be before they realise that they are actually the chosen witnesses of its truth? In whatever time that revelation may come to them, Palestine at least will keep her place in history.

THE LONDON ECHO GIVES EVIDENCE.

A REMARKABLE article appeared in the London Echo of March 5th, 1888, on the subject of the condition of the world at the present time, and the contrast which the Anglo-Saxon races present to the other alien nations in respect to the prospects of peace or war in the world. It is remarkable how the writer, quite regardless, if he be not ignorant of Our Identity, yet nevertheless forecasts the future as confidently as the Anglo-Israelites are wont to do. In fact he may be accounted a "blind witness" of the truth of our Israelitish origin, as his words will convince our readers. Discussing the unsatisfactory condition of Europe, where the nations seem to be bent on perfecting the arms of precision wherewith to destroy each other, as well as on acquiring an enormous store of the same against the time of trial, he goes on to say:—

All acknowledge the unbounded magnitude of the evil, but comparatively few are agreed as to the most efficient way to remove it. Say what we may, Russian ambition, fed by Sclavic aspirations, will contemplate and promote aggressive designs on weaker neighbours; Austria will look with longing eyes towards the waters of the Mediterranean; France will prepare for emergencies to regain her footing on the Rhine; and Germany will remain armed from top to toe to maintain her territory intact. Even Italy, divided and decimated by war for twenty centuries, must bend under crushing taxation to keep an army and a navy for appearances at home and for iniquitous raids in Africa. It is almost as well to whistle to the wind as to ask the nations of Europe to obey the behests of common sense, and settle differences by arbitration instead of war. What, then, is to be the condition of the future of mankind? Are expensive armaments, which are provocative of war, to exist for ever? Is the great army of working men to be ever weighed down, and for ever to writhe in poverty, in order that militarism may flourish? We think not. We believe the Anglo-Saxon race is destined, gradually through the ages, to teach mankind a more fruitful lesson than history has yet recorded. That race is increasing in numbers, in prosperity, in power, and in freedom at home; and what is far better, it is increasing still more rapidly in numbers, in prosperity, in power, and in freedom in lands where it has more room for expansion. That race is increasing all over the world at the rate of about 3,000,000 annually, and fortunately between the different members of the family of the British race the war spirit diminishes in force. This fact is full of significance. There is no fear of war, and no even remote prospect of a war between England and her Colonies. These Colonies are daily developing, and must, by virtue of their respective geographical positions and the productive capacity of their various soils, continue to develop for ages. Fortunately for them they will not have to contend with war, and all its blasting realities, as the mother has had to encounter. But the most significant fact of all is that the United States, with their present prosperity and their magnificent future, are going to war with us no more. The Fisheries dispute, which carried with it seeds of bitterness, seeds which might have germinated into troubles, is likely to be settled. Mr. Joseph Chamberlain has deserved well of his country in the part he has played in domestic politics during the last ten years.

Digitized by Google

The Echo's anticipations for the future of the European non-Israelite nations we see is as gloomy as it well can be. Russia, Austria, France, Germany, and Italy, the fatal five Powers destined to take sides against each other, three against two, and two against three, are painted as armed to the teeth, fretting under the ambitions which impel them against each other, weighed down by expensive armaments, which point to desolating wars close at hand, filling them with fears, and perplexities, and sorrows. The Anglo-Saxon race, which the Echo does not know to be Israel, is described in colours that correspond exactly with God's picture of the chosen heritage and inheritance of the Lord. They increase, he says, abnormally, their wealth, and power, and freedom, advancing as those of no other people do. They prosper and increase, he affirms, in their Colonies as they do at home, and their total increase in population is about 3,000,000 per annum, an abnormal ratio indeed, for it implies a doubling rate of a little over once in 30 or 35 years! Peace, too, it is declared will certainly prevail between the members of the Anglo-Saxon Confederacy, even the United States being resolved never to go to war with us at all in future. What other nation, or company of nations, are there in existence at all to compare to the increasing, powerful, prospering, peaceful nation, and company of British-Israelite nations, who respond to every lineament of the Echo's picture, and to dozens more of such-like grand points and marks, that God's word puts upon lost Israel, to which our nation, and ours alone, exclusively responds? On the one side we see the nations of Europe, including the Germans and Scandinavian races (that some among us declare are Israel like ourselves), about to be engulfed in an awful war such as there has not been since there were nations upon the earth, and on the other a powerful increasing confederation of homogeneous nations, who differ in no respect from God's picture of Israel, bringing forth the fruits of righteousness to God's glory, and to the benefit and blessing of the other nations, willing and ready to receive the gospel of the grace of God, as seen in the face of the Lord Jesus Christ, the Son of God. Men fail to notice the likeness which God has so obviously stamped upon the British folk, proving their Identity with the children of Israel, His chosen ones, because they are wedded to the idea that the Jews are Israelites, which no doubt they are. They do not realise that there are Israelites who are not Jews, and that as the latter are only two Tribes and the former ten, the Israelites must be a people five times as numerous as the modern Jews, or a solid nation of at least 35,000,000 of souls! They must be further found in "the North Country," in "the Isles of the West," "afar off" from Palestine—a maritime nation, supreme at sea, holding their enemies' Gate everywhere, with their own safe and secure from every foe, a people numerous as the Echo declares we are, developing into a company of nations in the four quarters of the globe, having a Heathen Empire, which is the envy of the world, a commerce whose volume is inconceivable, yielding wealth abnormal and unique in the history of the nations. These all are marks of Israel described in the texts noted below, and they one and all are exclusively the possession of our British nation, but of no other on the face of the globe. The texts referring to the above, in the order of notice, are these:—Jer. iii. 18; xxiii. 8; Isa. xxiv. 15; Jer. xxxi. 10; Gen. xxii. 17; Num. xxiv. 7; Isa. lx. 11; Gen. xlviii. 15—19; Hosea i. 10; Gen. xxxv. 11; Deut. viii. 18; xv. 6. Our opponents reading these, and then comparing with them the obvious characteristics of our own nation and of the empire attached to it, cannot surely err in coming to the conclusion we have arrived at, namely, that the British people are Israel of the Lost Ten Tribes. To God be all the praise for this discovery.

THE TESTIMONY OF P. VIRGILIUS MARO.

VIRGIL, the talented Roman poet, B.C. 70, in the first eclogue of his pastoral poem (Bucolica), addressed to Tityrus, makes one of his characters, Melibœus, thus address Tityrus:—

> "At nos hinc alii sitientes ibimus Afros,
> Pars Scythiam, et rapidum Cretæ veniemus Oäxem,
> Et penitus, toto divisos orbe, Britannos."

This, freely translated, means this:—

"But we will go hence, some of us to the parched-up Africans, others to Scythia, and the rapidly flowing river Oäxes of Crete; also to the far-off Britons, who are totally separated from the whole world." Where did Virgil get his Scriptural knowledge? How did he repeat the prophecy of Balaam respecting Israel's "dwelling alone," and where did he get his knowledge of Jeremiah's prophecy describing "the Isles afar off," as the abode of the House of Israel? (Num. xxiii. 9; Jer. xxxi. 10, R.V.). Men taunt us with what they believe to be a fact—namely, that whereas Israel was to "dwell alone," that is, be "cut off" from all the world beside, the British at any rate do not "dwell alone," so "cut off" since they are "the chief of nations," surrounded by the many nations of Europe. But here is Virgil, who lived when Britain was well known to the Romans, was then about to become a Roman province, and to feel the weight of the power of Pagan-Rome, telling the world that the Britons were then what Balaam declared Israel was to be—namely, "divided, or separated, from the whole world" beside, living, in short, "alone."

The Islands where the Britons dwelt, too, he properly described in the very language of Scripture (Jer. xxxi. 10) as "afar off." Those Islands, "afar off" as they are from the spot whence Virgil as well as Jeremiah viewed them, are cut off and separated from the whole world by their insular situation, by their position geographically at the north-west extremity of Europe, at "the very ends of the earth." To the ancients the British Islands were the "terminus," or "ends of the earth," and so Clement, of Rome (says the late Rev. T. C. Price), described Britain when declaring that St. Paul visited these Islands. "He taught righteousness to the whole world," and in so doing "travelled to the utmost bounds of the West." Epi to terma tes duseos, those "Isles of the utmost far-off West," then so described and known.

This was the spot which was "the wilderness" of Hosea's prophecy (chap. ii. 14, R.V.), "the appointed place" of 2 Sam. vii. 10, R.V., the spot which was to be Israel's own, where, separated from the rest of the world, and distinguished by God's constant directing and blessed presence, they were to "dwell alone," separated physically, morally, and religiously, from all the other nations by reason of Jehovah's constant direction, blessing, guidance, and supervision in their midst (Exod. xxxiii. 16, R.V.). Tertullian, in his book against the Jews, A.D. 209 (says Mr. Price), declared that the prediction in Psa. xix. 4, "Their words have gone out to the end of the world," was fulfilled by "the wide preaching of the Gospel," and he instances, "districts of Britain, which, unsubdued by the Romans, had been subjugated to Christ" (chap. vii.).

Digitized by Google

The early fathers of our Christian Church, then, saw the truth regarding Britain, and recognised it as "the ends of the earth" and "the utmost bound of the West;" but a heathen Roman poet placed upon the Islands the very description which Scripture attaches to Israel's habitation, according to Balaam's prophecy—namely, the "far-off," separated country of the Britanni, divided off totally from the whole of the rest of the world; therefore, "dwellers alone." To some, the Western habitation of Israel, an Eastern people, is a stumbling-block; but it need not be so. In Hosea xi. 10, R.V., we have a distinct intimation that the children of Ephraim-Israel "shall come trembling from the West," what time they shall hear the roar of the Lord like the roaring of a lion just prior to the restoration of the Tribes to their own land (ver. 11). In Isa. xlix. 12, R.V., we have a corroboration as to the Western home of some of the House of Israel, since it is stated that "some shall come from the North, and from the West," and some from the land of the bushes, or "bush lands"—that is, from Australia and South Africa (Sin-im). The connection of "scattered Israel" with "the Islands" and "Isles of the West" is well established by such passages as Isa. xxiv. 15, xlii. 4, li. 1, xlix. 1, and Jer. xxxi. 10, R.V., etc.

Correspondence.

THE TIMES OF THE GENTILES.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

SIR,—It is written in Luke xxi. 24: "And Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled." It is generally agreed that Russia's ultimate aim is the possession of Constantinople and Jerusalem; it is also generally agreed that England will never permit such possession; but it does not seem observed, even by Anglo-Israelites, that the fact of the English taking possession of Jerusalem, must, necessarily, bring about "the end of the times of the Gentiles." England being Israel, and not a Gentile nation, Jerusalem would, consequently, no longer be in the possession of the Gentiles. How very near this may be, is obvious to all.

Yours truly, A. W. FYFE.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—The following is from the Fireside News for Feb. 3, 1888:—"If to be prepared for war indicates a wish for peace, there never was a Government that so earnestly desires peace as that of Germany."

Such are the words of a contemporary on the warlike attitude of the German Fatherland. Armed to the teeth already, with a conscription so searching as that few can escape its demands, and with a standing army so colossal in its extent, it would seem as though the German nation had got to the end of their tether, both as to money and men, for the behests of military service. And yet we are now reading of another and a greater draught on the national strength as to the larger supply of men, and of a deeper plunge into the national pocket as to the supply of money. The War Minister has asked his Parliament for leave to add seven hundred thousand men to the Imperial Army, and for an outlay, to begin with, of fourteen millions sterling to equip and maintain them. And the War Minister has not appealed in vain, for his request has been granted.

There must be a very unmistakable feeling of loyalty in the German people, and a very implicit faith in their rulers, that these demands should have been so ungrudgingly acceded to by an Empire already pledged to the hilt to maintain its position in Europe. The strain upon the industries of the country will be seriously felt by the drafting of so vast a number of new men into barracks and camps. And, as to the additional war-tax, it is estimated that the fourteen millions of money mean as much to Germany as five times that amount would mean to England if the Chancellor of the Exchequer were to include such a sum in his budget as an addition to the present war estimates. But when we come to realise all that is intended, and what it all means, it almost takes one's breath away. It means, that if Germany is to hold her own against the threatened ambition of one neighbour, and the ever-threatening envy of another, she must have a standing army of efficient men, two million strong! These vast forces are to face in opposite directions—one million turned to the East, to watch the action of Russia, and the other million toward the West, to be ready for France; and these two gigantic contingents are to act independently the one of the other. We must also make room for another million or two for Austria, Hungary, and Italy. How many men, and how much money, is England to contribute? And what contingent will Turkey, the most interested of all, send to the battle-field?

No wonder, when people say, "The very figures are appalling." In truth, we must ask, "Where is there an Armageddon to be found that will answer the demands of this vast duplicate armament and its allies, together with its counterparts, on the French and Russian frontiers?" All Europe must assuredly become a field of blood: and if this old world's history is to wind up with some great "boom" of sorrow and some great tale of woe, then it can hardly be said that the end is for very long to be delayed. But what a terrible contradiction it is to say that everybody earnestly longs for peace, and therefore most energetically prepares for war!

Dear Sir,—how terrible it would be for us, as a nation, if we are not Israel; let those who say we are Gentiles, deny it if they can. I remain, yours in hope of Israel,

G. WELLS, JUNR.

38, Dudley-road, Tunbridge Wells, March 5, 1888.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—It may be interesting to you to know what progress is being made in the glorious truths contained in God's Word respecting the Identity of the British with the "Lost Ten Tribes." I have, for the last two years, taught a class of youths, who are well convinced (though they had not heard of it before) that long "Lost Israel" is now found in Britain; indeed, many of them speak in rapture to others of the wonderful story; and from a private source, I have been told how some of the youths have carried home the news, and their parents have taken the Bible to see if the thing were so. But it has not only been confined to my Sunday-school class, for, by the aid of Literature, so kindly sent me by the Secretary from time to time, I have spread the news with good result. A young man, member of a Wesleyan Bible-class, to whom I made it known some few weeks ago, was so much interested in the subject, that he also spoke of it in their class, with a desire that it might be taught them. But as there was some objection offered by their teacher and secretary, I engaged to give them a short address in their school on some Sunday afternoon. This was not accepted. But being determined that they should not be longer kept in the dark, I invited as many as would come, to my house. Eight men came a fortnight ago, and after speaking for two hours to them, they left, all believing that "Lost Israel" was found in the "isles of the West." They requested that I would again address them, and as I promised to do so, they came again, bringing five others (thirteen in all). The whole, I believe, were fully persuaded, and rejoiced, one present declaring, "It was wonderful." One of the men I saw to-day told me that it had caused him to read his Bible. Every half hour he had to spare he had it in his hands. Another of the party told me, that as they were passing a public house together, after leaving my place, one of their number remarked: "They are not having as pleasant a time in there (the public house) as we have had to-night!" Surely this thing is of the Lord, if it will cause men to exclaim "what pleasure they found in the subject." Above that of the gin palace! If it causes men to do the Lord's bidding, "Search the Scriptures," can it be a farce? Ah, no! I can now rejoice and give thanks to God, Almighty God, that He has opened my eyes to see the glorious fulfilment of all His covenant promises to Abraham and his seed, the "Ten Lost Tribes," now found in the British people. The men are coming again, and have promised to bring others who have not heard or know anything of the matter. But I fear my house will soon get too small for them!

Yours truly,

Manchester, March 19, 1888. JOHN LEVER.

Digitized by Google

NOTICES.

All communications intended for the Editor, to be addressed: "Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Clifton, Bristol.

SUBSCRIPTIONS. £ s. d.

Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free 0 7 6
Two Copies (including Double Numbers) 0 13 6
Three Copies ,, ,, ,, ... 1 0 4
Four Copies ,, ,, ,, ... 1 5 6
Six Copies ,, ,, ,, ... 1 16 4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-grand, London, to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C., or F. W. PARRY & Co., 29, Paternoster-row, London.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

Contents Bills and Show Cards may be obtained on application to the Publishers.

Advertisements should be sent to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

Prepaid Advertisements are inserted at the rate of thirty words for 1s. 4d.

BLACKPOOL.— Anglo-Israelites will find COMFORTABLE APARTMENTS, Public or Private, near Sea or Gardens, at Mrs. Breakells, 39, Adelaide Street.

Just Published, price 2d., post free 3d.

THE A B C CHURCH AND CHAPEL DIRECTORY AND MAY MEETING HAND-BOOK, containing names and addresses of London and Suburban Clergymen and Ministers of all Protestant Denominations, and the name and situation of Church, also the most complete May Meeting List. The Daily News says—"A very useful little hand-book."
Robert Banks & Son, Racquet Court, Fleet Street, E.C.

Just published—Cloth, 2s. 6d.—a re-issue of

The Origin of Masonic Ritual and Tradition:

A Lecture on the Three Degrees, by BRO. WM. ROWBOTTOM, P.M., 1028, with facsimile of a very rare Masonic engraving published in 1789.
"Exquisitely clear and singularly correct in everything wherein I may be any authority or guide."—Professor PIAZZI SMYTH. "Will be found of considerable interest to many besides Masons."—Church Bells.
Oxford: S. Rowbottom and Son; London: R. Banks and Son, Racquet Court, Fleet Street, E.C.; and F. W. Parry and Co., 29, Paternoster Row, E.C.

Price Five Shillings.—"Substantially and attractively got up, and profusely illustrated."—Oldham Chronicle.

Eildon Grange: A Tale.

By ANDREW CLARK, M.A., Vicar of St. Michael's, Oxford.
"One of the most charming books. . . . The illustrations are full of playful humour."—Scotsman. "The book is undoubtedly a happy one."—The Oxford Magazine. "Both entertaining and bracing."—Dundee Advertiser.
Oxford: S. Rowbottom and Son; London: Hamilton, Adams and Co., 32, Paternoster Row, E.C.

☞ Ask for this Book at the Libraries.

WORKS BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

The History of the House of Israel. How They Were Lost and How They Were Found. Told for the children. Price 6d., cloth 1s.; post free 7d. and 1s. 1d. Fifth edition.

A Resume of the Scriptural Argument, Proving the Identity of the British Race with the Lost Ten Tribes. Price 1d.; 6s. per hundred, postage 6d.

Our Identity: What it is Not; What it is; and Our Obligations To-day in Respect to it Being a Lecture recently delivered in London by Philo-Israel, and published by special request. Price 2d., a reduction for quantities.

Are the English People the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel? An Inquiry Establishing the Identity of the British Nation with the Lost Ten Tribes. 4d.

London: Robert Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Price Threepence, by Post 3½d.

British & Jewish Fraternity.

The Outline of the Reasons which Convinced a Jew that the British People are of the Tribe of Israel.

By the REV. ELIEZER BASSIN, M.S.

London: Robert Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

PIANOFORTES, Harmoniums, American Organs. Why buy at shops inferior made instruments, and pay large profits, when you can buy direct from the Maker High-class Instruments, and save 50 per cent. by so doing? Full value allowed for old Instruments in exchange as part payment. Write for Price Lists and Testimonials to G. LINSTEAD, 2, Osenev Crescent, Camden Road, London. Established 1874.

HUMAN LIFE.—FIFTY YEARS' Record of Facts, Principles, and Discoveries (just published, complete) Relating to the Improvement and Preservation of Human Life on Earth. Origin and true treatment of diseases. A series of articles by DR. SAMUEL BIRLEY, M.D., Ph.D. Book form, 50 pages. SENT FREE to every applicant by the publishers, GORDON B. MURRAY & CO., 50, Theobald's-road, Holborn, E.C. Write to-day

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

THE TENTH ANNUAL MEETING

WILL BE HELD (D.V.) IN

EXETER HALL, STRAND, ON THURSDAY EVENING, MAY 24, 1888,

COL. THE HON. OLIVER LAMBART in the Chair,

AT SEVEN O'CLOCK PRECISELY. Addresses will be delivered on the following subjects:—

The Rev. H. JOHN HATCH, M.A., Vicar of Linford, Beds., "The Things which are Beginning to Come to Pass, and Our Consequent Duty."

The Rev. ROBERT DOUGLAS, M.A., Vicar of Kidsgrove, "Which is It, a New Heresy, or the Truth of God"?

E. W. BIRD, Esq. (Philo-Israel), of Bristol, "Our Facts, and What They Teach Us."

The Rev. J. IDRISYN JONES, M.A., of Birkenhead, "Why I Accept Anglo-Israelism."

The Rev. JAMES P. BRITTON, Vicar of Chapple, Essex, "Misguided Zeal in the Cause of Anglo-Israelism."

W. H. PETERS, Esq., J.P., and DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, Esq., J.P., will also speak.

The ANNUAL MEETING of Members and Subscribers, in the Association Rooms, 14, King William-street, Charing Cross, London, W.C., on WEDNESDAY EVENING, MAY 23, to receive the Report, and elect Officers for the ensuing year. Chair to be taken at 7 o'clock.

E. W. BIRD, Esq. (Philo-Israel) is expected to preside. JAMES BILLINGTON, Sec.

Just Published, Crown 8vo., Cloth, price 3s. 6d.

BRITAIN IN HISTORY, ANCIENT AND MODERN;

Or, Proofs Linking Israel with Britain Throughout the Ages.

By Mrs. G. A. ROGERS,

Author of "The Coronation Stone," etc., etc.

"The Book possesses a national interest, and ought to be widely read."—The Fireside News.
"The most useful addition to Identity literature that has been made for a long time past."
Israel's Hope and Destiny.
"Well worthy of perusal for the rare and curious information conveyed."—Christian Age.
"This remarkable volume. . . We welcome this addition to the literature of Israel."—Banner of Israel.
"Interesting and suggestive."—English Churchman.

THE CORONATION STONE;

And England's Interest in It.

4th Thousand, Crown 8vo., Cloth, price 1s. 6d.

"A reverent and graceful little book."—Life and Work.
"An excellent account of the history and wanderings of the Stone. . . will be read and re-read."
Banner of Israel.

LONDON: J. NISBET & Co., Berners Street, and to be had of all Booksellers.

Price 6d., post free 7d.

THE MESSENGER,

A Monthly Expositor of the Fulfilment of the Scriptures in the Anglo-Saxon Folk, the Israel of God.

Each number contains contributions from high-class writers on Identity Subjects, selections from the Discourses of Rev. Dr. Wild, and a chapter of an Important New Work, entitled—

"RUSSIA JAPHET," by "OXONIAN,"

Author of "Israel's Wanderings," &c.

F. W. Parry & Co., 29, Paternoster-row, London.

Dr. JOSEPH WILD'S WORKS

The most useful works on the subject.

NEW EDITION JUST PUBLISHED.

THE LOST TEN TRIBES

Price 3s., post free 3s. 3d.

'We have much pleasure in directing attention to this handsome volume. . . We promise our readers that if they procure this work, and will peruse it, they will find 'Our Identity' discussed in a clear, novel, racy, and from an American point of view, which is sure to interest."—Banner of Israel.

THE FUTURE OF ISRAEL AND JUDAH.

Price 2s., post free 2s. 3d.

R. BANKS & SON, RACQUET-COURT, FLEET-ST.

MR. EDWARD HINE has returned from his lecturing tour in America. Friends wishing to arrange for him to lecture can communicate with Isaac Loveland, Shoreham, near Sevenoaks, Kent, at present fixing no dates. Mr. Hine's publications have had a large circulation, and can be obtained of F. W Parry & Co., 29, Paternoster Row, London, E.C.

Forty-Seven Identifications, 6d., post free 7d
Cui Bono? 6d., post free, 7d.
Lost Israel Found, 3s 6d., post free, 3s. 9d.,
Also The Nation Warned by the Scripture Teachings of the Great Pyramid. 6d., post, 7d.

SOUND, PURE, WHITE

TEETH!

Those who value these will try

CARBOLINE

(The Great Sanitary Tooth Paste).

1/6 & 2/6 per Pot.

Through Chemists, or post free from the Makers,

GEORGE & WELCH

WORCESTER.

Lancet writes:—"To save the teeth use a good carbolic daily."

Certain HARNESS' Cure.

ELECTROPATHIC BELT

FOR

SCIATICA

R. J. WATSON, Esq., 13, Market Street, Harwich, writes:—"Harness' Electropathic Belt has completely cured me of sciatica. After wearing it for a week I got better, and am now quite free from pain."

Guaranteed to generate a mild continuous current of Electricity, which speedily cures all Disorders of the Nerves, Stomach, Liver and Kidneys. Thousands of Testimonials. Pamphlet & Advice free on application to Mr. C. B. Harness, Consulting Electrician, the Medical Battery Co. Ltd.

Only Address,
52, OXFORD ST. LONDON, W. (Corner of Rathbone Place.)
Call to-day, if possible, or write at once

FITS! FITS!! FITS!!!

ALL PERSONS SUFFERING FROM EPILEPSY should send name and address to JAMES OSBORNE, Medical Pharmacy, Ashbourne, Derbyshire who will forward, free of charge, full particulars, with Testimonials, of the most successful remedy ever discovered for this distressing malady. Sent to all parts of the world. Reference permitted to Rev. J. BAKER, M.A. 80, Bolton Road, Pendleton, Manchester.

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. F. W. PARRY (late GUEST & Co.), 29 PATERNOSTER-ROW WEDNESDAY, MAY 9, 1888 [All rights reserved

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. XII., No. 594. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, MAY 16, 1888. [PRICE ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
A Fresh African Protectorate	197
Coals	198
Doubling the Absurdity. By J. G. Taylor	199
More Evidence Connecting the Ancient Inhabitants of Ireland with the Phœnicians and Hebrews. Part XII. By Joseph Thomson	200
The Company of Nations By S. Sharp	202
The Key of the Indian Ocean. Part II.	202
Correspondence—Letter from Sir Arthur Cotton, etc	203

A FRESH AFRICAN PROTECTORATE.

IT may be news to our readers, as it was to us on April 24, 1888, to learn from the Times article on "Recent Events in East Africa," that our present government had made another addition to the British Empire, and one too in a highly strategic portion of the globe. It is in fact the horn of Africa which has now become British. This territory, just opposite to Aden, forms the southern shore of the gulf of that name, and extends from the neighbourhood of Perim Island (a British Gate) Eastward to Cape Guardafui forming "the Horn" of Africa. It terminates at Ras Hafun to the South, and is the new "Coastland" added to the jurisdiction of Great Britain. The new British province, if it may be so called, is about 500 miles in extent West to East, and extends from Perim in the Red Sea, to the neighbourhood of Socotra, also a part of the Empress of India's territory. British influence thus stretches from Berbera and Tajurah Bay East and South, right round, past Cape Guardafui, to Ras Hafun, about 100 miles to the south of "the Horn." This coast-line includes "of course" a certain section of the interior of the country. The government thus is making the access to India and the East from the Red Sea more and more difficult to the navies of the European Powers. For not only have we as a nation placed ourselves at the southern outlet of the Red Sea, but we have made Aden a fortress to support Perim; and the Island of Socotra close at hand as a further buttress to make surety sure. But even this has not seemed enough! The opposite Somali coast and the frowning Cape at Guardafui might be used by the enemies of the Empire, and therefore now a Protectorate has been established there, adding an important strategic position to the same, which is sure to lead to increased influence inland as "time rolls on." The magnitude of British possessions on the coasts of the Black Continent is hardly realised by our readers, and therefore we shall endeavour in a few sentences to place before them a short statement of the facts. We have in the first place the virtual Protectorate of Egypt. The coast appertaining to that country on the Mediterranean and Red Sea are under British supervision. At Suakim and the neighbouring shores of the Red Sea, we have a British Governor exercising jurisdiction. From Berbera, near Perim, round the Horn of Africa, we have just added 600 miles of African coast-line to our Empire.

Then, as explained on pp. 38 and 39 of this year's BANNER, the land leased to a British Company on the East coast about Mombassa, and extending far into the interior, confers for 50 years at least, a large dominion, 50,000 square miles in extent, on our country. Proceeding southwards at about 27° S. Lat. we have British territory again confronting us, and extending through the coasts of Zululand, Natal, Kafirland, Cape Colony, Namaqualand, and Port Nolloth as far as the Orange River on the West Coast under the 28° S. Lat., giving a coast line there only, of about 1,500 miles at the very least! The West African settlements at Sierra Leone, Bathurst, the Gold Coast, and the slave coast, add largely to the ends and coasts of the African Continent which the British (being Israel) have already secured. Just as settlements on the coasts, forming Gates, have at last given us the whole of India, though we were opposed by the Portuguese, the Dutch, the French, and the native princes of the land in succession, so the British power, now securely seated in Egypt, in the Gulf of Aden, and at the entire "end" or "uttermost parts" of South Africa, will, we may be sure, end by our acquisition of the entire Black Continent, to the exclusion of the Portuguese, the Germans, the Belgians, the Boers, the Arabs, and the other races, native and foreign, who seem to be ready to oppose us, but will be unable to stop our march, because of Our Identity.

At the present moment a singular incident is taking place on the Eastern coast at the mouth of the Zambesi, by reason of the sudden assertion on the part of the Portuguese of a claim to sovereignty over that river, which is the only mode of access to the Lake country in the interior. This is clearly the attempt of a non-Israelite Gentile Power to usurp "the coasts and ends of the earth" wherewith God has invested Israel exclusively. The effort shall prove abortive, as God is true! And Portugal in Africa, as in India, will have to yield to the owners of the world, and therefore of Africa. The country about Lake Nyassa and Tanganyika was discovered by our British-Israelite apostle, David Livingstone. He urged the British missionaries who have been working there 28 years to go out to the spot. They did so under the protection of the British Government, and now the Portuguese authorities, fancying we have lost our power, have refused to allow any but Portuguese vessels to navigate the river, though regularly established British lines of steamers and boats are plying on it now at British cost. The Portuguese have further shown their animus by placing a duty of 10 per cent. on all goods belonging to the commerce of foreign nations plying on that river! Portugal is a thoroughly degraded Power, which destroys commerce, ruins trade, debases all native races with whom it deals, corrupts religion, and places impediments in the way of all civilizing influences. Indignation meetings are being held in London and Scotland to protest against this action of Portugal, and the result will be, we conclude, the establishment of a better state of things for British missionary and commercial interests, so that a curb may thus be placed on the overbearing claims of the Portuguese to a monopoly of Central Africa. The difficulty with which our Government is hampered in dealing with the Portuguese is that which concerns Delagoa Bay. It is highly desirable to persuade Portugal to make over the Bay to our possession, that we may acquire the railway route that is to do so much for us in South Africa. But Portugal will not yield up that prize, the true Gate of the Cape Colonies to the North-east, without a large and valuable compensation. Where and how she will require it, is the problem diplomacy has to settle; and meanwhile, we may depend upon it, God has this matter, like all our other matters, in His own hands, and will see His people safely through their difficulties. We cannot remedy them ourselves, and therefore must wait His time, and His mode of freeing us from our troubles. But of one thing we may be quite sure. The Gospel must go to Central Africa, and the Portuguese will not take it there. For 28 years our own race has been spending men and treasure on the African lakes to bring the races inhabiting their shores to Christ. He will see that their cause shall be maintained, and that "His word shall have free course and be glorified." To Him thus will be all the praise!

Digitized by Google

COALS.

In Deut. xxxiii. 15, 16, R.V., we find among the blessings allotted to Joseph, the owner of Israel's birthright, the following remarkable gifts, which, we suppose, are quite beyond the powers of our opponents to spiritualise:—"Of Joseph he said,

"Blessed of the Lord be his land. . . .

"For the chief things of the ancient mountains.

"For the precious things of the everlasting hills.

"For the precious things of the earth, and the fulness thereof."

These blessings, which include all that the labour and the skill of men succeed in drawing from the bowels of the earth, must embrace those valuable treasures of coal fuel which God has so marvellously given to our own race in these Islands of the West, and wherever our people are domiciled throughout the earth. Being Israel, we have this gift, which may almost be said to be the foundation of all the rest, far in excess of the supplies given to other nations. As to coals and the mines where they are found, we are, as a nation, decidedly "the head and not the tail, above only and not beneath" all other peoples on the face of the earth. This disposition in our favour amounts to an Identity, and affords additional proof, if such were required, that we are Israel.

It has often been feared that the enormous consumption of this precious fuel going on in our midst must end in time in the exhaustion of our coalfields. The result of the Coal Commission in 1871 went to prove that "there was no reason to apprehend a proximate exhaustion of our coalfields, and at the present rate of working that is a contingency very remote indeed." This is indeed a comforting fact to know, since the consumption of 160 million tons a year now taking place seems enormous. There is reason, however, to know that the demand for coal will hardly increase in the future, but is likely to diminish, both in the shipping trade and in manufactures in general. For domestic purposes our consumption yearly is a constant amount not likely to diminish, but at sea economy in the consumption of coal has enabled us to effect a reduction of 50 per cent. This is also the case as to the iron trade. Besides which substitutes for coal are being constantly found which naturally restrict the demand. Thus petroleum is being used in India and elsewhere to drive engines where good coal is expensive; electricity is used in place of gas, also to drive light tramcars.

In the Times of January 4th much useful and interesting information was collected regarding our coal industries, which it will be well for us to consider in connection with our national promises given by the Lord to our forefathers Joseph and Ephraim. The following is noteworthy to begin with:—

The extent of the obligation of the people of the United Kingdom to the coal industry is not probably so well understood as it deserves to be. Coal not only affords direct employment and a fair rate of wages to over half a million employés in and about the mines, but it supplies our chief ports with a large part of their export trade, provides the merchant marine with the chief source of its power, and a very important source of its economy, sustains the pre-eminence of the English iron and steel industries, is the largest factor in the traffic of our railway system, provides the means of carrying on under successful competitive conditions the myriad other industries of the country, finds employment for a large fleet of steamers and sailing vessels in transporting the coal from the ports nearest the collieries to the ports that are remote therefrom, alike at home and abroad, constitutes the basis of a number of other industries, of which the manufacture of coke, the production of gas, and the preparation of coal-tar colours are the most important, and, finally, lies at the root of our industrial and economic fabric.

No other nation, it appears, has ever eclipsed ours in the coal industry, either in respect to the quality of the product or the range of its price. We produce "the cheapest fuel in the world that is produced on a large scale. In quantity of production our nation stands far at the head of the list, and in average price per ton we bear away the palm. One American State, Illinois only, produces more cheaply than we do. But ours is far in advance as a nation in respect to the incomparable steam coal of Northumberland and South Wales, the fine coking coal of South Durham, and gas coal, including Cannel, produced in different collieries."

The following returns show the production for different countries, the official and the average value per ton, during the year before last, as well as the average number of hands employed and average output per man. It will be seen that in most of these particulars the British are far ahead of all nations:—

Statement showing the Production of Coal, the Official Value of the same, and the Average Value per Ton in 1886:—

	Production.	Value.	Average per Ton.
	Tons.	£	s. d.
United Kingdom ...	157,518,482	38,145,930	4 10½
United States	96,055,000	29,422,400	6 1½
Illinois only	10,279,000	2,230,000	4 4
Germany	58,056,598	15,036,384	5 2
France	19,527,120	9,605,900	9 10
Belgium	17,285,533	5,701,680	6 7

Statement showing the Quantities of Coal raised in different Countries or States, the number of Employés engaged therein, and the Average Quantity of Coal raised per employé per annum.

	Tons raised.	Hands employed.	Average out-put per employe per annum.
United Kingdom ...	157,518,482	519,970	302
United States	96,055,000	No returns.	—
Illinois	10,278,890	26,804	383
Germany	58,056,598	217,581	266
France	19,527,000	109,426	178
Belgium	18,041,000	105,182	171

It will be seen that our production of coal is nearly double

Digitized by Google

that of the United States, nearly three times that of Germany, our most dangerous rival, seven times that of France, and nine times that of Belgium. The reason why our coal is cheaper than that of other nations, and especially that of the Germans, is explained by the Times correspondent thus:—

The main cause of the greater cheapness of the cost of producing British coals is, of course, the excellent system of working generally adopted, allied to the thickness of the seams and the facility with which they may be operated on. But a good deal is also due to the superior efficiency or intensity of British labour. The cost of British labour is generally supposed to be considerably higher than that of Continental countries. It is not, however, materially higher in South Wales and in Scotland than in France and Germany, and these two districts unitedly produce some 46 millions of tons of coal per annum, or, in round figures, nearly one-third of the whole produce of the United Kingdom. It is unquestionable that the hours on the Continent are longer—perhaps on an average from 25 to 30 per cent. more. But, in spite of this fact, the miners on the Continent are unable to produce the same average annual output as in England, which is evident from the returns.

In short, the system here is better, the British workman is a better working-man than his continental rival; and God has given to our favoured land larger and better seams of coal than He has to the non-Israelite Gentile nations, making us and our brethren of Manasseh in respect also of coal "the head and not the tail, above only and not beneath." He has not dealt so with our foreign rivals, and hence we retain our superiority according to the prophecies. We pause to ask our opponents how they account for all these facts. How is it that in every jot and tittle our case is perfectly parallel to Israel's as portrayed in the promises? In respect to the coal mines, the diamond, silver, and gold mines, as regards the lead and tin mines, the treasures "of the ancient mountains, the precious things of the everlasting hills, and the precious things of the earth, and the fulness thereof," are all found in our nation's possession, but not at all in that of our Gentile neighbours; and so God has provided for our retention of "the power to get wealth," according to the prophecies, because we are His people Israel. To Him be all the praise!

DOUBLING THE ABSURDITY.

By J. G. Taylor.

One of the most distinguished characteristics of a lunatic is that he imagines other people are mad, and considers that he himself is the only sane person in the vicinity. Something of this fundamental error prevails extensively in the domain of polemics, and it certainly flourishes with rank luxuriance amongst the critics of the Identity. They are profoundly alive to the apparent but fictitious impediments which stand in the way of the Anglo-Israel case, and stone-blind to the remarkable follies which their contest with it compels them to sanction. A short while ago we wrote an article (Banner, Jan. 18th) in which the ignorance of the nation as to its Israelitish origin was the particular theme touched upon. This utter forgetfulness on the part of our race is deemed a very extraordinary circumstance, and, as we then implied, the rejectors of it may be placed in two divisions,—those who deride it as inconceivable, and those who, admitting the ability and the right of God to bring it to pass, can perceive no practical reason why He should have done so. The latter were in a manner answered, and the former will perhaps be the better of an answer as well. Of course an answer in the proper signification of the word is impossible, just as it is impossible to fight the air or slay a shadow. Ridicule is not argument, and, until it has been clearly demonstrated that no community ever did or can become oblivious of its remote ancestry, candid inquirers will continue to look upon the objection raised against us on this score as a mere subterfuge for the prejudiced and the shallow.

But let us see whether the subterfuge is more secure than the alternative from which they fly, or less deserving of contempt. We are told that the English, Scotch, Irish and Welsh have always claimed to be Gentile and Japhetic. They have no recollection of Abraham or Palestine, and not the trace of a link exists in their traditions to connect them with the Israelitish stock. It is reckoned farcical to think that every Hebrew reminiscence could have been so effectually obliterated from our memory, and many is the smile indulged in at the expense of the poor deluded creatures who can entertain the thought; but our learned enemies do not seem to grasp the fact that their view of the matter involves an infinitely grander farce. For, if the Ten Tribes are extant at all, they must be either unconscious of their lineage, or conscious of it. There appears to be no third proposition at our service. If they are unconscious, we have in this a simple and satisfactory explanation of the enormous difficulty which has been experienced in detecting them, since if Israel has actually forgotten her own genealogy it is scarcely natural to expect that foreigners would remember it. And, further, if the ravages of time have obscured her primitive traits to such a degree that they are unrecognized by Israel herself, it is not surprising that they should have escaped the notice of aliens. But if, on the contrary, Israel is quite cognisant of her Hebrew descent, we must then suppose that she has entered into a solemn conspiracy to conceal it from the eyes and ears of humanity. We have to believe that, among the nations we are in the habit of styling Gentile nations, there is a people who, from some unknown but no doubt dreadful motive, are jealously and successfully suppressing the valuable and coveted information that they are the veritable Israelites wanted for ages. It is a dead secret. They never mention it in their conversation—not even with the breath called bated; never teach it in their seminaries; never allude to it in their books. But in spite of this they manage by some peculiar process to preserve the knowledge of it, and are laughing in their sleeves (if they wear the same) at all the strenuous efforts to unmask them. Our opponents will probably say that this is an extremely silly idea, and we agree with them. Its eminent stupidity would be hard to surpass, but we would observe that the idea is their own, not ours. Anglo-Israelism does decidedly demand an open mind, and a liberal exercise of the logical faculties, but it does not exact that total abandonment of common sense required of those who are given to attacking it with whatever weapons they can construct.

In order to account for the prolonged absence of Israel, it is usual for the "refuters" of the Identity to profess, with pious resignation, that God has hidden her away for a season, and it is evident that if her recovery depends on any exertion of theirs, the season will be an excessively lengthy one. If, however, they are really anxious to throw a little light on the question, they could narrow it substantially through revealing to us what is meant by "hidden away." Have we to understand that the missing tribes are below the ground, beneath the waves, or beyond the skies? Or is it suggested that they are roaming in a yet unexamined region of the globe? If so they ought, like Alexander, to weep, instead of mock, for it is now a good deal too late to rely on this fancy. That mysterious and unapproachable land, on which so many hopes have been built, has vanished as a mirage before the advance of the explorer. It cannot be in Europe or Asia, as every cranny of these continents has been ransacked. Nor can it be in Australia or America, which are already drawn and quartered by the pale face. Even Africa has been crossed and recrossed without the slightest sign of a population bearing Hebre marks. It is true that the immediate neighbourhood of North Pole has hitherto baffled close investigation, but has it that only a solitary individual is on the spot.

Digitized by Google

granting that the precincts of the Pole were packed with Israelites, there would still remain an awkward problem to grapple with, because it is pretty safely established that when the Esquimaux and his fellows are torn from their bracing clime and unstinted supplies of raw whale, they droop and die; which is a serious obstacle to the restoration.

As this completes the survey of the universe, we are forced back upon our previous contention that the Ten Tribes are sojourning within the range of vision, and that, obviously, they are either aware of their Hebrew extraction, or unaware of it,—the former notion bringing in its train a catalogue of absurdities which no rational being would have the courage to put on paper. Far from meriting the satire it often receives, the opinion that Israel has lost sight of her paternity is the only sensible solution of the puzzle. It may be stigmatized as craziness from morning till night, but, on the other hand, the theory that she could retain familiarity with her pedigree and screen it from the world for a single year, not to speak of centuries, is pure imbecility. Our opponents have therefore to choose between two evils. They must allow that the "strange blank" in the memory of the British people is at least admissible, or bury their heads in embarrassments which are vastly stranger. If the public would take the trouble to fathom the charges levelled at us so freely; if they would consent to sift both sides of this dilemma, and sundry equally interesting involvements flowing from a similar source, the confidence they repose in plausibilities would be severely shaken, and their estimate of the Identity acutely changed. But this is precisely what the public will not do. We are accustomed to associate the term of rabble with the lowest grades of society, swayed by demagogues, and deaf to wisdom. But, unfortunately, this definition is incorrect, for there is a scientific rabble, and also a religious rabble, who are guided not so much by the dictates of independent judgment as by the ruling spirits in their respective schools. With these docile masses, one barren sentence delivered by a Man in Authority is of more weight than a folio of sound logic. Argument is indeed almost waste material, for, with lamb-like penetration, they discern the voice of their shepherd, and follow. All else are robbers.

MORE EVIDENCE CONNECTING THE ANCIENT INHABITANTS OF IRELAND WITH THE PHŒNICIANS AND HEBREWS.

By Joseph Thomson.

PART XII.

(Continued from page 191.)

XXXV.—THE DEASSII.

The Deassii, or Decies, formerly Deassies, an ancient people of Ireland, inhabited the south of what is now county Meath, and the northern banks of the rivers Liffey and Rye, and which whole country was known as the country of Ean, or Magh Ean, i.e., the region of waters. Their chief is said to have been named Magean, or Ean-gus, afterwards shortened to Œngus, i.e., a prince of the region of Ean. A tribe of this people afterwards settled in the county of Waterford. This region is now divided into two baronies, viz., Decies within Drum, bounded on the east and south by the Atlantic, and on the West by the Blackwater; and Decies without Drum, which bounds the former on the north, and is itself the other part of this track.

Their name Deassies, or Deassii, is thought to be from the Irish word deas, i.e., southern, and hence indicates a southern people, which may not be improbable; though on the other hand they may have been a Phœnician tribe; in which case they were so called from deassin, or deassain, or rather deazzin, exulting; from daiz, which means exalted with joy; to which daizz, i.e., joy, corresponds. Everyone knows something of dancing and rioting indulged in by idolators at their sacrificial feasts. As Hurd remarks, "Although it is difficult to discover any relation between religion and dancing, among the Pagans it was constantly part of their worship. It was usual to dance round the altars and statues; at Rome there was an order of priests called Salii dedicated to the service of Mars; they danced through the streets on particular days in honour of their god, and were called from that ceremony. Religious dancing was so congenial to the Pagans that their poets made the gods dance with the Graces, the Muses, and the Virtues. When the Israelites worshipped the golden calf, they sat down to eat and drink, and rose up to play, i.e., to dance, and undoubtedly they learnt this in Egypt. Arnobius, an ancient Christian writer, asked the Pagans if their gods were pleased with the tinkling of brass and rattling of cymbals, or with the sound of drums and musical instruments? Even to the present time idolators in other parts of the world observe this custom, the greatest part of their worship consisting of dancing. Probably dancing was first practised by the heathen as part of their religious worship in their temples, indicating their gratitude to the gods for particular or general favours. Christians have not been altogether free from this custom. The Christians of St. Thomas honour that saint by dancing, before which they cross themselves and sing a hymn: the men dance in one room and the women in another, both observing the greatest propriety. At present there are but few Roman Catholics who regard this ceremony much, and as it is fast falling into disrespect, it may soon cease to be practised." The barony of Deece, in the county Meath, formerly called Decies, or Desies, and another barony Decies, or Desies, in county Waterford, are vestiges of the Deessii. In Spain also the Phœnicians seem to have had a tribe of this name from that of the old Cantabrian city of Decium, surrounded by the river Aturia.

XXXVI.—THE DARENI.

Baxter thinks that the Darenii, or Darnii, the ancient inhabitants of Voluntia noticed by Ptolemy, gave the city Derry its name; as also Dairmach, i.e., the oaken city, also called Armach, i.e., the lofty city, now Armagh. He thinks these people were so denominated as if descendants of the oak, as Ptolemy calls them Darinoi, or Darnii; for, in the British, "dar," is an oak, and "eni," or "geni," is to be born. But Villanueva thinks the name may be Phœnician, from "darin," i.e., foreigners, sojourners; or villas, habitations. From the Dareni, or Darnii, the island of Darinis, in the Blackwater, near Youghall, county Cork, was named. After the Christian era, it was re-named Molana, from St. Molanfid, who founded a convent in the sixth century there. Similarly another island near Wexford was named, where St. Nemham erected a monastery in the seventh century.

In Spain there is an old town called Dapnius, on the river Muga, whose inhabitants in the ancient Spanish chronicles are called Darnii, like these Irish.

XXXVII.—THE GADELIANI.

The Gadeliani, an old Irish tribe, are generally thought to have been so named from Gadelas, a progenitor of the Milesians. But whether this Gadelas be a real historical character of Ireland, or like Milesius, the reputed Prince of Spain, only an imaginary fiction of the poets, must be "left to the decision of more competent judges" than himself, Villanueva says. He also entirely "disregards" what Giraldus says of the Irish Gaidheli being so called from some grandson of Phenius who was distinguished as a linguist: and this notwithstanding the support given to Giraldus by Nennius, Malmura, Eochodius, and other writers of the ninth century, and approved of by O'Connor in modern days.

But may not Gadelas, or Gadhelus, have been some conspicuous and honourable person belonging to a Phœnician tribe, whose descendants were called Gadeliani after him? Gadel, in the Phœnician language means great, illustrious; and gadelin, eminent, superior men. Hence the inhabitants of two ancient cities, but now only small towns, of the name of Gadella in the country of the Astures and Edetani, in Spain, were called Gadelin, or Godelani. Dr. Villanueva is satisfied that these cities obtained this name "as expressive of their magnitude and magnificence."

Digitized by Google

XXXVIII.—THE DEGADES.

The Degades, another ancient people of Ireland, some suppose were a colony of the Leinster Scoti who settled in the west of county Kerry some years before the birth of Christ. The name is thought by some to be made up of the Irish words de ga deas, i.e., a situation at the south of the sea. But Villanueva thinks it intimates a colony of Phœnician fishermen, for degah in Phœnician means fish, collectively; deg, to fish; dughioth, fishing cots, or wherries made of rushes; deg, a fisherman, and adesa profit; so that Degades may be a name for deg-adesa, as intimating fishermen who lived by the profits of that calling. The people of Leinster fought with an axe, or spear, termed leighan; hence the country was called Leinster from leighan, and ter a territory.

XXXIX.—THE TUATHA-DE-DANAAN.

The Tuatha-de-Danaan, or Danans, usually rendered the northern race, were an ancient colony in Ireland, situated behind the Fir-Bolgœ; they are supposed to have come from Britain, and as a tribe of the Caledonians, to have emigrated from Cantire, or the Mull of Galloway, full 100 years B.C. The old Irish poets seem to know nothing of the chieftains of the first colony of the Caledonians, or the Danani, as they term them; but they are diffuse on the subject of their arrival, which Villanueva says "happened only a few years B.C." O'Brien, on the contrary, in his work on the "Round Towers of Ireland," says that the Tuath-de-Danaan were the head tribe of the Indo-Scythæ, or Chaldean Magi, and that they effected an establishment in Ireland peaceably, where they studied their peculiar religious rites so ardently as to obtain for the island the epithet of "sacred" ("Roundtowers," p. 58). Also in a note to Villanueva's "Phœnician Ireland" (p. 231), he asserts that the Tuatha-de-Danaan had nothing to do with Britain, and arrived in Ireland under the leadership of three brothers, about 1200 B.C.* They immediately gave battle to the Firbolgs on the plains of Moytura, county Mayo, whom they defeated. The Danaan chieftain Nuaga lost a hand in the battle, and had one made of silver, whence he was called Airgiodlamh, i.e., silver hand. This tale had long been thought a day-dream of fiction; but O'Brien says the hour at last "arrived for the restoration of truth," and he rejoiced in being the first to announce to his countrymen that this relic, or silver hand, was still extant. It was exhibited to the "Society of Antiquaries" (Ireland), a short time before he wrote; but they knew nothing of it. When O'Brien saw it, he at once said to the gentleman (T. Crofton Croker, Esq.), who had gained him access to their museum, that it was the long missing arm of Nuagha Airgiodlamh. On a plate in Villanueva's "Phœnician Ireland" (p. 233), he gives the inscription on the relic, in old Irish characters, and for which he acknowledges his indebtedness to Mr. T. Crofton Croker.

Villanueva goes on to say that the Danai styled themselves Ulleigh, which some understand as meaning worshippers of the sun; "ull" in the Celtic being the same as sol, or beal, i. e., the sun. Hence their country was called Ulladh, or Ullin, now the province of Ulster. The tract of country immediately comprising the county Down, was called Ulla in ancient times. Other relics of this name are found in Ullard, a village in the county Kilkenny; and in Ulloe, a little town in the county Limerick.

But as some will have Ulleigh, and Ulladh, to be Celtic names derived from their worship of the sun, so perhaps the name Tuath de Doinan may also have arisen from the form of that worship, which the Phœnicians offered to their idols, prostrate and silent before their banquets. In that language tuath donian means those who meditate in silence and in fasting. In this connection the fact of tuath being an Irish geographical term, signifying the due north, also should not be forgotten.

* See above, pp. 61 and 62.

XL.—THE CALEDONIANS.

The Caledonians were so called from Caledonia, now Scotland, after the Scoto-Brigantine Irish, and formerly Valentia by the Romans after their Emperor Valentinian. The Caledonians were of Brigantine origin, and their allies or vassals in their several wars. Their name is supposed to have been derived from the woods which they inhabited, in the British being called Kelydhon, or Colydhon, and the woods themselves coit kelydohn. Indeed the foreign Brigantines called Keloi were so named for no other reason than their living in the woods (which the ancients generally did), as also were the Caletes, a people of the Attrebates, so denominated for no other reason.

In the Scoto-Brigantine dialect coil means a wood. In the Greek kalon means the same; as also cala in the ancient Roman: hence come caliga, i.e. a wooden shoe, and calones, i.e. hewers of wood.

Dr. Villanueva, however, suspects that the Caledonians were Phœnicians, expert in astronomy, if not Chaldeans associated with Phœnicians, for Chaledain or Chaldein has this signification; and Caledonia would therefore be named after them, and not them after the country.

XLI.—THE GANGANII.

The Cngaani, or Ganganii mentioned by Ptolemy as an ancient people of Ireland, were settled in the west of the present county Clare, on the south of Galway Bay. Baxter thinks they were descendants of the Ceangi, or shepherds of the Damnii, who dwelt in a district from its southern exposure, and the habitual recumbency of shepherds, called Somersæten, or æstival sitters; Tacitus calls them Cangi. But as from the singular, "cang," is formed the Latin ceangus; so from the plural, "ceangon," they also form canganus. Many think that each state had its own Ceangi, who were a colony of youthful shepherds passing their time in mountains, villages, marshes, or fens, as suited their pastoral interests. Trogus Justinus says, "They transfer their flocks now to summer, now to winter lawns. As formerly, the ancient Romans had amongst the Calabrians and Lucanians, so now have the Spaniards also amongst the Cantabrians and other states, distinct pastures for their flocks, as well in summer as in winter." Those who think thus, derive the word ceangus from the British ceang, or cang, i.e., a branch, as with the same figurative license "youths" in Greek, are styled "branches of Mars." Others think it compounded of cean gan, and interpret it the external promontory. Hence Canganii, to them, means a people living on such promontory. Others conceive that they can discover the etymology of this word in the Hebrew chanoc, or chanic, i.e., vernal; while some get the word ceangi from the god Ceangus, the tutelary genius of the Cumbri. Dr. Villanueva, however, ventures to guess in this perplexed and undecided matter that the Canganii, or Cangani, were a people of the Cantabrians in Hespania Tarraconensis, who were a colony of the Massagetæ, or else a tribe of Phœnician agriculturalists; and that their name is from the words cangannin, i.e. a society of gardeners: from gan, a garden, applicable to both trees and herbs; or from gan-ganin, i.e., the Gangani, who excelled in that profession.

(To be continued.)

NATIONS have their crises, when revolution and anarchy threaten their very existence. It was a good thing for us, as Britons, that in the time of our agonising struggles for the maintenance of liberty and freedom of conscience that Prince William of Orange ventured to espouse our cause; and led the hosts of Britain in defence of all that is sacred and good.—Dr. Wild.

Digitized by Google

THE COMPANY OF NATIONS.

By S. Sharp.

I believe it was first suggested by Mr. Wilson that "a Company of Nations" seemed to indicate the Protestant countries of Europe. He gave a course of lectures on Anglo-Israelism some forty or fifty years ago; and Bishop Titcomb fell into that error, but latterly distinctly avowed his altered opinions. Mr. Wilson, however, had not the light that we now have, viz., the fulfilment of Scripture promises to our nation and in our nation alone, and we hope, as time more fully develops this truth, that our friends of opposite views will also discover and acknowledge, or see, their mistake.

It seems clear that "Company of Nations" and "Fulness of Nations" (Gen. xxxv. 11, xlviii. 19), are the promises to the one heir of Jacob, Ephraim of the Ten Tribes. Both these promises are fulfilling in the British race, and Mr. Wilson could foresee but little of what has now come to pass; for it is only within the last twenty years that we have seen the rapid and gigantic increase of our possessions in all the world; so that we are on the eve of being declared to be a "Nation and Company (or Federation) of Nations." We have India, the colonies, and parts of every quarter of the globe, with the coasts and Gates, and the dominion of the oceans. Is not this a company and fulness of nations?

Then another point named is, "Kings shall be of thee." This we can also claim from the first King of Israel down to the present time, and we need not seek for them amongst our neighbours. The early and later tribes, as they settled in these isles, had their races of kings; England, Wales, Ireland and Scotland, all had their lines of kings, until Britain became united under one monarch. Our Saxon and other ancestors, as before-mentioned, were "sifted out" of continental countries (Amos ix. 9). The Hebrew element from among the native Saxon was driven hither, as M. Guizot says:—"Des côtes de la Saxe, arrivèrent trois, viasseaux (449 A.D.) qui portaient des étrangers, chassés de leur patrie et conduits par deux vaillants frères, Hengist et Horsa;" and in a similar manner in the course of many centuries all the tribes came over.

Other passages of Scripture referred to as applying to the Protestant Teutonic nations are, 1st, Isa. xxxii. 15, "So shall He sprinkle many nations," but these are not meant to be Israel. Again, "The nations of them that are saved shall walk in the light of it," &c. (Rev. xxi. 24-26.) Here Israel is in possession, and this does not refer to her. Again, the 2nd verse of the following chapter indicates what nations are meant—"the leaves of the tree were for the HEALING of the nations." Israel is then a spotless bride, and needs no healing. But the Pagan and other heathen nations, such as China, Japan, parts of India, Africa, &c., do need healing, and Israel is to be the favoured instrument to do this glorious missionary work. The united Twelve Tribes will be employed to bring these nations to their Saviour (see also Ezek. xlvii. 12.) Add to all this our Lord's words, "The kingdom of God shall be taken from you and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof" (Matt. xxi. 43.) And these fruits we may humbly acknowledge we are endeavouring, though imperfectly, to bring forth. We are the people formed by God Himself to show forth His praise, and most of all this is manifest in our declaring His Name and His Salvation in all the world.

THE KEY OF THE INDIAN OCEAN.

(Concluded from page 183.)

PART II.

Passing over the introduction of railways, cheap postage, telegraphs, gas, and many other minor material improvements, I come to the fiscal system. Ceylon is almost free from public debt. Two and a half millions sterling is all the country owes, and that has been spent on works of a reproductive character, which will soon clear themselves of debt. Most of the railway debt has been already paid off. There only remains unpaid the cost of a small portion of the line, and the expense of the Colombo Breakwater and Waterworks make up the rest of the public debt. The people are lightly taxed; they pay only a few shillings a head. But the system of taxation is by no means perfect. The Customs duties, the railway receipts, a tax on rice lands, an import duty on foreign rice, a salt monopoly, and the sale of Crown lands are main sources of revenue, which amount to a million and a quarter sterling. There is no land tax beyond the tithe taken from the rice fields. There is no income-tax. There is no tax on the cocoanut or other palm tree cultivation. Salt and pearls are the only monopolies. The richest people in the island escape almost scot free. The wealthy native pays nothing for his cocoanut palms and his fruit trees. The English owners of all the coffee, tea, cacao, and cinchona estates, covering an area of 360,000 acres, do not pay a cent of direct taxation. Yet I was shown over a tea plantation the other day which returned a net profit of £26 per acre last year. Of course, the planters constitute the powerful interests of the island, and they would probably resist to a man any readjustment of taxation which would cast a burden on their land. They would argue that when they bought the land from the Crown they bought the fee simple. They would have the aid and sympathy of all the native landowners. An attempt to tax fruit-bearing trees caused a rebellion in 1798.

But something will have to be done. The Government has used as revenue all the proceeds of the land sales, and that source of annual income must dry up before long; yet more, not less revenue is required. The railways have paid so well that the State might leave their extension to private enterprise. But what is wanted more urgently than railways is the steady development of the irrigation schemes which the present Governor has so much at heart. The vast ruins of ancient cities reveal a former prosperity which might in his opinion be revived by the restoration of the old artificial lakes. The monsoons which supply the rest of the island so abundantly with rain leave the northern provinces almost dry, and these great reservoirs were constructed over a thousand years ago to supply the deficiency. A whole valley into which poured a river would be dammed at its lower end by a huge masonry wall miles in length. Repeated invasions and the consequent insecurity and disturbance led to neglect of the dams, all these tanks fell into ruin, and their districts became mere jungle. It is these inland lakes that are now to be restored if money can be found for the work. Sir Arthur Gordon has already restored one which covers 5,000 acres with a depth of 17ft. of water, and feeds a district of many square miles. His predecessor, Sir William Gregory, by another restoration, recalled a still wider district to cultivation. But this work of irrigation is only begun, and money is wanted for its progress. No public works do more for the purely native population. They are agriculturalists and nothing else. Give them land where they can cultivate their rice or other grain and plant their palm or their jak tree, and they are content, however small their gain; but ask them to work in the tea plantations for hire, and nine out of ten will rather starve. Tamil coolies do the whole of the planters' hard work. About 70,000 Tamils come over every year from Southern India to swell the number of those who are already settled here. The Cingalese have a terrible character for laziness, and there is a grain of truth in the charge, but they will work hard enough at their own little plots of rice. Nobody who has watched their labour at the Kandyan terrace culture can call them incorrigibly lazy. They only want their own kind of work.

The proposed restoration of old lands to rice and dry grain culture by irrigation would enable the Government to revive the industry of the people as well as the richness of the soil. The English colony view this irrigation policy coldly. But it must be remembered that Ceylon, save in its mountain heights, is not a colony that offers a permanent home to the European. To English settlers it is a big forcing-house, full of heat and damp, where vegetation of all kinds runs riot, and the Englishman can only come as a sojourner, whose one object is to make his fortune and take it home before his health breaks down. He brings his capital, and enriches the people in many ways by his planting enterprise. But he does not open out the island for the natives, nor does he keep his savings in the island, and the Government must think of the natives as well as the planter.

The development of the island must be for native benefit. The planter has energy to bring the jungle and the forest into cultivation for himself, but the native waits till Government does it for him. This irrigation policy is, therefore, both benevolent and far-seeing, and either a light land assessment or a moderate income-tax should be imposed in order that the policy can be systematically carried out.

Development in another direction is equally necessary. The amount spent on education is barely £70,000, and perhaps more is done by missions than by Government. The various churches have reached the remotest villages. Twenty-eight per cent. of the children go to school. English is far more commonly talked than in India. But the teaching is very elementary, and too purely literary. What is wanted is more funds, which can be furnished by increasing taxation in the direction I have suggested, or still better by the utilization of the Buddhist temple lands, which were given originally in trust for the poor, but are now wasted by the priesthood. As education funds increase education must be made technical, so as to restore old industries and encourage new trades and new cultures. The character of the Cingalese themselves, with their caste contempt for all handicrafts, will gradually change. Schools, railways, more intercommunication, and perfect equality in the State will destroy caste distinction. In any case it is our duty to do more than what we are doing now for the natives. European industry should serve as an example to the natives, and everything should be done to increase their energy, to widen their agriculture enterprise, and to give them new occupations.

Digitized by Google

I do not mean in any way to disparage the planters of Ceylon. They are kindly and hospitable, full of pluck and ability and persevering energy. Since 1837, when planting first began, they have suffered blows that would nave prostrated men of any but Anglo-Saxon blood. I remember some years ago travelling through the island, and for miles together I saw nothing but the dead stumps of the coffee plant. Millions of pounds were irretrievably lost on those slopes. But the planters rallied after a time. They tried cinchona, they tried cocoa, they tried cardamoms, they tried tea, and every one of those new cultures turned out a trump card. In 1872 only a few pounds of tea were exported; in 1887 at least 10 million pounds of tea went to England. The island in the planting districts is now as busy and as flourishing as ever it was. The people look healthy and are fairly dressed; the houses are well built; there is a pervading air of prosperity. As one of many proofs of the good planting has done I may mention that in 1800 there was hardly a cart in the island, and now there are over 20,000. But there are districts where the planter does not go, where poverty and suffering still reign, and it is to these districts that our Goverment must turn its attention, and by the restitution of the old tanks bring plenty within reach of all the three millions that people the island.

I have completed my picture. Much, very much, no doubt, has been done since we came into the country. A few figures will show a striking degree of material progress. The population has trebled in the century. The revenue is five times, the imports are 20 times, and the shipping is fiftyfold what they were in 1800; 35 newspapers are published, 120,000 children go to school, and there are 16,000 depositors in the Government and Post Office Savings' Banks. But all this material progress co-exists with much poverty and backwardness in what I may call the non-planter provinces. Progress is not equal all along the line. The taxation is not just; the development is one-sided. Eastern passiveness and immobility have no chance with European civilization, unless the Government lends a hand and does all that is possible to develop the activity of the people, to raise their standard of enjoyment, and to give them a fair chance of becoming a free, industrious, and progressive people.

Correspondence.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—Several kind friends have responded to the appeal for literature, which appeared in the BANNER last week. We have received six packages, for which we return our thanks. We shall try to make the best use of them we possibly can. There was one mistake in the report, which said we had thirty-two members. I think I said there was thirty who believed in the subject, and that a small number had united to spread the news of Our Identity. We have made a little progress since I last wrote. We know about sixty now who believe in the Identity, among whom are two policemen. One of our men lent a policeman "The History of the House of Israel," and he said that he had learnt more from it than from any book he had ever read. One of our men went to Londesbro', and met a man from Shipton. They got talking, and the man from Shipton said, "Somebody at Shipton had been saying that we were descended from the Lost Ten Tribes;" the man from Weighton said, "So we are!" and then he explained the subject to him, and showed him clearly that there had not failed any good thing which the Lord God promised to Israel. He had met the right man! That is how Our Identity spreads. The news has spread hence to York, Selby, Milford Junction, Newbald, Holme, Shipton, Sancton, Londesbro', Hull, and Pochlington. I believe, if the ministers would only announce all this from their pulpits, all about those villages would receive it gladly.

W. WADE PARKER.

Market Weighton, April 12, 1888.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

SIR,—In the letter from Australia, addressed to Her Majesty, it seems a pity that the writer omitted to call attention to the fact mentioned in Jer. xli. 10, and again, Jer. xliii. 6, that the king's daughters were with Jeremiah, in Judæa and in Egypt, after the captivity of the rest of the royal family. It is most remarkable, first, that these daughters were not carried to Babylon, the reason of which we cannot imagine; and second, that this should be twice recorded. This record greatly supports the tradition in Ireland of the immigration of a royal maiden, who was married to the supreme king in the island. For my own part, I feel assured that our glorious Queen and Empress, now ruling the vast Empire that dominates the world, is directly descended from the Royal House of David.

Yours obediently,

ARTHUR COTTON.

Dorking, April 18, 1888.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—I am concerned about your "Special Appeal" in this week's BANNER OF ISRAEL. To me, as an English workman, if this Anglo-Israel theory is worth anything, it is worth everything in this world. What a glorious God is ours, "there hath not failed one of His good promises" to His people, unworthy as we are. Can you give a hint how to interest the clergy in this matter? They ought to know about it. The Church and Dissenting ministers seem to ignore it, and receive any communication on the subject with a polite smile of incredulity. One of our curates, to whom I gave Dr. Alder Smith's pamphlet on the "Ten Tribes," brought it back, with the remark, there was "something in it." Another says it is very interesting, and his wife believes in it. Another, who, in one of his sermons, made a sad muddle of Ephraim and Judah together, upon my venturing a remark about the distinction between the two Houses, cut the conversation short by declaring "he had no time for that," thinking them, I suppose, "vain and foolish questions." Still, he is a dear good fellow, who never preaches but what he holds up Christ as "the way, the truth, and the life." What shall we say to such? It is true, as a rule, our clergymen have no time to spare.

Pardon the length of my letter, and kindly receive postal order for 5s., as my mite towards expenses of the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association; I wish it were more, but hope to give the same next year. I remain, yours obliged,

JOHN P. B.

7, Bedford-row, Streatham, S.W., May 2, 1888.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—I think the following interesting piece of news is worth recording in your widely-circulated journal, as it goes to prove that the British administration of the affairs of Egypt is a blessing to its inhabitants. It is taken from the Manchester Courier, July 28, 1887:—

"A RESTORATION OF AN ANCIENT CULTURE.

"One of the regrets of the Israelites, when they, 'in their hearts, turned back again to Egypt,' was for the onions which they used to eat in the land of their bondage. It is to be noted that Egypt is again becoming a land of onion-culture. A consular report from Alexandria states that one of the most noticeable features in Egyptian exports is the rapid development of trade in that esculent. A very few years ago the trade hardly existed, while during two months of last year 14,000 tons were shipped to Liverpool." Yours truly,

F. S. GANDY.

27, Phelan-street, Collyhurst,
Manchester, April 30, 1888.

Digitized by Google

NOTICES.

All communications intended for the Editor, to be addressed: "Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Clifton, Bristol.

SUBSCRIPTIONS.

	£ s. d.
Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free	0 7 6
Two Copies (including Double Numbers)	0 13 6
Three Copies " " "	1 0 4
Four Copies " " "	1 5 6
Six Copies " " "	1 16 4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-grand, London, to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C., or F. W. PARRY & Co., 29, Paternoster-row, London.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

Contents Bills and Show Cards may be obtained on application to the Publishers.

Advertisements should be sent to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

Prepaid Advertisements are inserted at the rate of thirty words for 1s. 4d.

BLACKPOOL.— Anglo-Israelites will find COMFORTABLE APARTMENTS, Public or Private, near Sea or Gardens, at Mrs. Breakells, 39, Adelaide Street.

Just published—Cloth, 2s. 6d.—a re-issue of

The Origin of Masonic Ritual and Tradition:

A Lecture on the Three Degrees, by BRO. WM. ROWBOTTOM, P.M., 1028, with facsimile of a very rare Masonic engraving published in 1789.

"Exquisitely clear and singularly correct in everything wherein I may be any authority or guide."—Professor PIAZZI SMYTH. "Will be found of considerable interest to many besides Masons."—Church Bells.

Oxford: S. Rowbottom and Son; London: R. Banks and Son, Racquet Court, Fleet Street, E.C.; and F. W. Parry and Co., 29, Paternoster Row, E.C.

Price Five Shillings.—"Substantially and attractively got up, and profusely illustrated."—Oldham Chronicle.

Eildon Grange: A Tale.

By ANDREW CLARK, M.A., Vicar of St. Michael's, Oxford.

"One of the most charming books. . . . . The illustrations are full of playful humour."—Scotsman. "The book is undoubtedly a happy one."—The Oxford Magazine. "Both entertaining and bracing."—Dundee Advertiser.

Oxford: S. Rowbottom and Son; London: Hamilton, Adams and Co., 32, Paternoster Row, E.C.

☞ Ask for this Book at the Libraries.

WORKS BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

The History of the House of Israel. How They Were Lost and How They Were Found. Told for the children. Price 6d., cloth 1s.; post free 7d. and 1s. 1d. Fifth edition.

A Resume of the Scriptural Argument, Proving the Identity of the British Race with the Lost Ten Tribes. Price 1d.; 6s. per hundred, postage 6d.

Our Identity: What it is Not; What it is; and Our Obligations To-day in Respect to It. Being a Lecture recently delivered in London by Philo-Israel, and published by special request. Price 2d., a reduction for quantities.

Are the English People the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel? An Inquiry Establishing the Identity of the British Nation with the Lost Ten Tribes. 4d.

London: Robert Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Price Threepence, by Post 3½d.

British & Jewish Fraternity.

The Outline of the Reasons which Convinced a Jew that the British People are of the Tribe of Israel.

By the REV. ELIEZER BASSIN, M.S.

London: Robert Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Certain HARNESS' Cure.

ELECTROPATHIC BELT

FOR

PARALYSIS

J. FULLER, Jun., Esq., Whiteparish, Salisbury, Wilts, writes:—"Since wearing your Electropathic Belt I am decidedly better and stronger. I have more confidence in myself, and the pain in my back is completely gone. Your Belt is truly wonderful."

Guaranteed to generate a mild continuous current of Electricity, which speedily cures all Disorders of the Nerves, Stomach, Liver and Kidneys. Thousands of Testimonials. Pamphlet & Advice free on application to Mr. C. B. Harness, Consulting Electrician, the Medical Battery Co. Ltd.

On y Address,

52, OXFORD ST., LONDON, W. (Corner of Rathbone Place.)

Call to-day, if possible, or write at once

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. F. W. PARRY (late GUEST & Co.), 29 PATERNOSTER-ROW, WEDNESDAY, MAY 16, 1888. [All rights reserved

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

THE TENTH ANNUAL MEETING

WILL BE HELD (D.V.) IN

EXETER HALL, STRAND, ON THURSDAY EVENING, MAY 24, 1888,

COL. THE HON. OLIVER LAMBART in the Chair,

AT SEVEN O'CLOCK PRECISELY. Addresses will be delivered on the following subjects:—

The Rev. H. JOHN HATCH, M.A., Vicar of Linford, Beds., "The Things which are Beginning to Come to Pass, and Our Consequent Duty."

The Rev. ROBERT DOUGLAS, M.A., Vicar of Kidsgrove, "Which is It, a New Heresy, or the Truth of God"?

E. W. BIRD, Esq. (Philo-Israel), of Bristol, "Our Facts, and What They Teach Us."

The Rev. J. IDRISYN JONES, M.A., of Birkenhead, "Why I Accept Anglo-Israelism."

The Rev. JAMES P. BRITTON, Vicar of Chapple, Essex, "Misguided Zeal in the Cause of Anglo-Israelism."

W. H. PETERS, Esq., J.P., and DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, Esq., J.P., will also speak.

The ANNUAL MEETING of Members and Subscribers, in the Association Rooms, 14, King William-street, Charing Cross, London, W.C., on WEDNESDAY EVENING, MAY 23, to receive the Report, and elect Officers for the ensuing year. Chair to be taken at 7 o'clock.

E. W. BIRD, Esq. (Philo-Israel) is expected to preside. JAMES BILLINGTON, Sec.

MR. EDWARD HINE has returned from his lecturing tour in America. Friends wishing to arrange for him to lecture can communicate with Isaac Loveland, Shoreham, near Sevenoaks, Kent, at present fixing no dates. Mr. Hine's publications have had a large circulation, and can be obtained of F. W. Parry & Co., 29, Paternoster Row, London, E.C.

Forty-Seven Identifications, 6d., post free 7d

Cui Bono? 6d., post free, 7d.

Lost Israel Found. 3s 6d., post free, 3s. 9d

Also The Nation Warned by the Scripture Teachings of the Great Pyramid. 6d. post. 7d.

SOUND, PURE, WHITE

TEETH!

Those who value these will try

CARBOLINE

(The Great Sanitary Tooth Paste).

1/6 & 2/6 per Pot.

Through Chemists, or post free from the Makers,

GEORGE & WELCH

WORCESTER.

Lancet writes:—"To save the teeth use a good carbolic daily."

FITS! FITS!! FITS!!!

ALL PERSONS SUFFERING FROM EPILEPSY should send name and address to JAMES OSBORNE, Medical Pharmacy, Ashbourne, Derbyshire who will forward, free of charge, full particulars, with Testimonials, of the most successful remedy ever discovered for this distressing malady. Sent to all parts of the world. Reference permitted to Rev. J. BAKER, M.A. 80, Bolton Road, Pendleton, Manchester.

Just Published, Crown 8vo., Cloth, price 3s. 6d.

BRITAIN IN HISTORY, ANCIENT AND MODERN;

Or, Proofs Linking Israel with Britain Throughout the Ages.

By Mrs. G. A. ROGERS,

Author of "The Coronation Stone," etc., etc.

"The Book possesses a national interest, and ought to be widely read."—The Fireside News.

"The most useful addition to Identity literature that has been made for a long time past."

Israel's Hope and Destiny.

"Well worthy of perusal for the rare and curious information conveyed."—Christian Age.

"This remarkable volume. . . We welcome this addition to the literature of Israel."—Banner of Israel.

"Interesting and suggestive."—English Churchman.

THE CORONATION STONE; And England's Interest in It.

4th Thousand, Crown 8vo., Cloth, price 1s. 6d.

"A reverent and graceful little book."—Life and Work.

"An excellent account of the history and wanderings of the Stone. . . will be read and re-read."

Banner of Israel.

LONDON: J. NISBET & Co., Berners Street, and to be had of all Booksellers.

PIANOFORTES, Harmoniums, American Organs. Why buy at shops inferior made instruments, and pay large profits, when you can buy direct from the Maker High-class Instruments, and save 50 per cent. by so doing? Full value allowed for old Instruments in exchange as part payment. Write for Price Lists and Testimonials to G. LINSTEAD, 2, Oseney Crescent, Camden Road, London. Established 1874.

HUMAN LIFE.—FIFTY YEARS' Record of Facts, Principles, and Discoveries (just published, complete) Relating to the Improvement and Preservation of Human Life on Earth. Origin and true treatment of diseases. A series of articles by DR. SAMUEL BIRLEY, M.D., Ph.D. Book form, 50 pages. SENT FREE to every applicant by the publishers, GORDON B. MURRAY & CO., 50, Theobald's-road, Holborn, E.C. Write to-day

EXTRAORDINARY OFFER.

☞ 10,000 CARPETS. ☜

5/- Five Shillings each. 5/-

GUARANTEED GENUINE BARGAINS.

THE BRITISH CARPET-WEAVING COMPANY will forward direct from their Looms. to any address, on receipt of Postal Order for 5s., or 62 stamps, one of their GENUINE SEAMLESS WOVEN REVERSIBLE TRIUMPH CARPETS, with handsome border, and woven in six different Art Patterns to harmonise with surroundings in Drawing-room, Dining-room, Bed-room, Kitchen, Study, etc., and large enough to cover any ordinary-sized room. These Carpets will be sold as an advertisement for the Goods of the British Carpet Weaving Company, BELOW THE ACTUAL COST OF PRODUCTION, the price they have hitherto been sold at being 8s. each. A Rug will be sent with Carpets for 1s. 6d. extra.

SPECIAL OFFER.—Two Carpets and two Rugs for 10s. 6d. This extraordinary offer may not be repeated.

REMEMBER these Carpets and Rugs are woven, and are not merely printed on Canvas like the so-called Carpets some firms advertise. We guarantee these Carpets to give every satisfaction, or money will be returned in full.

Send at once. All orders are despatched same day as received.

Don't forget to send for Sample, or you may never have another chance of getting a Carpet at such a ridiculously low price. Cheques and Postal Orders should be crossed "Union Bank."

The British Carpet-Weaving Co., 31, Old St., Aldersgate, London, E.C.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. XII., No. 595. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, MAY 23, 1888. [PRICE ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
Our Irish Queen	205
The Coming Disaster	206
The Power of God Unto Salvation	207
More Evidence Connecting the Ancient Inhabitants of Ireland with the Phœnicians and Hebrews. Part XIII. By Joseph Thomson	208
Benjamin. By Sarah Sharp	209
Annual Report of the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association	210
Messrs. Chambers' Encyclopœdia	211
Which is the True Church?	211
Correspondence	211

OUR IRISH QUEEN.

THE Irish people of the South and West desire, it appears, to enjoy Home Rule for themselves. They wish for autonomy and for separation from the Government of Great Britain and the Monarchy which rules to-day over the two sister Islands. But why should the South and West Irish wish for such separation, when already the throne of Great Britain and Ireland is occupied by a Sovereign descended from an Irish race, and an Irish sovereign therefore in a sense rules over the United Kingdom? This can be easily shown to be a fact, and should satisfy any Irishman that his race already reigns over the hated Saxon! His separation from the Throne of Great Britain would be a separation from an Irish throne, and therefore should be repudiated and avoided.

It can be shown thus. Queen Victoria is in the direct descent from King James I. of England and VI. of Scotland. James's pedigree can be traced back to King Kenneth II. of Scotland (A.D., 854) and to King Feargus More of Argyleshire (A.D. 487). The latter came from Ireland, and his ancestors through a long line of Irish kings date back to B.C. 580, by a more or less ascertained chain of descent, till we arrive at Heremon, king of Ireland, who is said to have married Tea Tephi, an Eastern and Hebrew Princess, the daughter of a king of Judah. Placing the latter point on one side, there seems no reason to doubt that our Queen's pedigree carries us back to a long line of Irish kings, who 1,400 years ago inaugurated the Scottish and English chain of descent, and thus lead to the conclusion that the reigning dynasty to-day was Irish at one epoch of its existence. This enables us to affirm that the sovereign of these realms is Irish, as the result. The Irish, therefore, in the person of their Queen, now rule the Saxons of Great Britain, and not otherwise! Therefore, there should be no desire on the part of the Irish people to separate from their glorious Sovereign! Separation in fact is simply out of the question. The two islands are inseparably united physically, and no power on earth can disunite them, since they are placed by God Himself side by side in close contiguity. For our own safety's sake, we cannot afford to allow Ireland, hostile as she is or seems to be in respect to the majority of her inhabitants, to become independent. Any attempt at Home Rule and separation would be resisted by the Irish Queen of these realms, as well as by the Anglo-Saxon and Scottish fellow-subjects of the Irish. Home Rule, as explained by the Parnellites and those who sympathise with them, is a dream which never can be realised. It is opposed by the Identity of our race with the Lost Ten Tribes; for these islands are the habitation, God-appointed and provided, for the people of His choice. They never can be separated or sundered on any grounds whatever, as God is true. Those who entertain apprehensions on this score may abandon all their fears, because God's word has given both islands to His people, and has granted to the Irish race, in the Irish Queen, an assurance that they vainly strive to separate that which He has joined together. "The Isles," He says, "shall wait for Me" (Isa. lx. 9, R.V.), "the Isles afar off" from Palestine, where the word of the Lord Jehovah is to have its attentive audience (Jer. xxxi. 10, R.V.). Who then can interfere between God and His determinations? Who can sever a union which He has made for the benefit of His "chosen ones"? The political combinations of the day have resulted in that wondrous sight we behold now, namely, the grand majority of the nation standing as one man, under the designation of "Liberal Unionists," for the defence, by earthly means, of what God declares shall never be parted or put asunder. "Quis separabit?" is a motto well adapted as an answer to the "Home Rulers" of our times. For they look to separate Ireland from Great Britain in view to establish two hostile nations side by side in these "Isles of the West" (Isa. xxiv. 15). In vain! God's word forbids it! His declared purpose refuses to allow it! The majority of the British-Israelites will never listen to the proposition! The Liberal Unionists, the grand majority of the British nation, will never consent to it! And the Irish Queen, ruling the Ten Tribes of Israel in the British Empire, will never consent to allow her Irish subjects to reject her regal authority, which God has given her, over the British Islands, including Ireland itself!

The Irish believe that they are a conquered people serving an alien prince, and therefore strive for liberty. They are, in fact, the conquering race, whose Queen, of Irish descent, rules the British-Israelites to-day. Is this not honour enough to keep them loyal? Loyalty to the Irish-British Israelite Throne now supreme in our Islands, will constitute the Irish partners with the British in all the Abrahamic blessings, which are neither few nor insignificant. Is this not worth retaining? "Home Rule" is suicide, war, and destruction! But union gives to Ireland, in common with the United Kingdom, all the blessings that lie at the right hand of the Lord God of Israel, our King! Let Ireland and the Irish therefore praise the Lord for their Irish Queen, and be content to serve her and prosper!

Digitized by Google

THE COMING DISASTER.

LORD WOLSELEY is in very low spirits regarding the state of the nation; and believes that our system of Government is so bad, from a naval and military point of view, that if we persist in it "it will sooner or later land this country in disaster." He uttered his sentiments on the occasion of the dinner given to Sir John Pender in April last, and some of his statements are alarming enough, regarded apart from Our Identity. He declares we are not as strong as we ought to be, considering the state of Europe, and that while all the great nations of the continent are "armed to the teeth, we British are the one exception"! Our Government by party, he declares, is responsible for the fact that we have too small an army, and too small a navy. Each ministry, as it comes in, tries to cut down the estimates and to pose as a saving Government, whereas the saving is at the expense of the State, which is left in peril at the hands of its foreign enemies. The distance to which his lordship's pessimism carried him on the occasion in question can be best judged by his own words; and these we quote. He said:—

It is really very curious that though John Bull goes to considerable expense in paying those whom he considers experts to advise him and the country both on the army and the navy—admirals and generals who advise him on naval and military matters—that the opinions of those experts which are so highly praised are never published, and John Bull, who pays for them, is never made acquainted with what those opinions are. We have from time to time long statements made as to the army and the navy by the gentlemen in power. I have to listen to them myself, and I often wonder how much those speeches are affected by the party exigencies of the moment, and how much they represent the real opinions of the first Lord of the Admiralty and Secretary of State for War. I confess myself that it is a system of which I cannot approve, and I do not believe that any admiral or general in office or who has been in office approves of it, because one and all of us believe that it is a system which sooner or later will land this country in disaster. We live in times when, I think, it behoves the people of England to not only know the truth, but the whole truth with respect to its army and navy. We see all the nations of Europe—certainly all the great nations of Europe—with the one exception of England, armed to the teeth. As you look around on the political horizon of Europe you can gather nothing promising from it; storms threaten, but certainly no good for this country. Those who, like myself have to study matters connected with the defences of this Empire, not only at home but abroad, put this question to ourselves—Is the army, and is the navy, as strong as it ought to be? I think very few who have studied this question would deny that it is not as strong as it ought to be. But why is it not so strong as it should be? Assuredly, as Lord Derby has said, the people of this country have never refused the Ministry for the time being any money they have asked for, either for the army or the navy; assuredly the taxpayers of this country never grudge any money they are asked to pay for the efficiency of those services. No; the answer to the question why the army and the navy is not as strong as it ought to be, is to be found in the system of our Government by party—that curse of modern England, which is sapping and undermining the foundations of our country, which is depriving our statesmen of the manly honesty which was once their characteristic. What do we see when any new administration comes into office? What directly takes place? It is the same with all parties. The first thing is the endeavour made by the Minister in office to obtain some clap-trap reputation by cutting down the expenses of the army and navy. If he is enabled to produce an army and navy estimate which in some degree represents a smaller sum than that of his predecessor, he plumes himself upon the victory he has gained, and he is proud that he has succeeded better than, perhaps, his opponent, who sits on the bench opposite him, and as he chuckles over this success he says, "See what a good boy am I!" (Laughter and cheers.) This is the result of what? The result of a low and vicious standard of morality which is now uppermost in men's minds. In speaking so lightheartedly of such a matter, he forgets, in his pride of having reduced the estimates, the fault he has committed, the crime he is guilty of against the country. (Cheers.)

It comes then to this, according to Lord Wolseley; that we have not enough officers or men in our army, and not enough ships in our navy! The Duke of Cambridge declared, in his evidence before the Select Committee on Army Estimates, that we required at least 11,000 men and more officers before the army could be deemed to be in an efficient state. He thought our fortifications were in an unsatisfactory condition, and their armaments and equipments also defective. Of course if our safety as a nation depends on the arm of flesh, and we are exposed to the dangers of the continental nations, who are not Israel, and have none of Israel's promises, then we are in considerable danger of a disaster some day, and may expect to incur one as time goes on. But Lord Wolseley puts God altogether aside in this matter, and as to Our Identity with Israel he never gave that a thought, even if he ever heard of such a trifling and wretched delusion as that view is held to be by the great ones of our land! He cries for the moon, like the proverbial infants of our time, and demands as the price of safety what is perfectly unattainable, namely, the abolition of party Government in our midst. Such being the case, and there being little or no chance of any great increase in our military or naval estimates, what are we to expect? Is disaster to come in the shape of an invasion by the French? or are the Russians and French, joined perhaps by the German armies, about to try a united descent upon our shores to subdue a proud race whose boast is that their Islands have never yet been successfully invaded by the foreign foe? Lord Wolseley has yet to learn that our God foresaw these dangers nearly three thousand years ago, and provided against them. This nation is Israel, and God gave assurance to David the king, that He would appoint a place for His people Israel, a place of their own wherein to dwell and be moved no more. There He promised him that the children of wickedness should afflict them no more as at the first. By Isaiah His prophet the Lord gave His promise to Israel that though their enemies might gather together against them it would not be by Him. "Whosoever shall gather together against thee (He said) shall fall because of thee" (Isa. liv. 15, R.V.). "He ordains peace for us" (Isa. xxvi. 12, R.V.), and in the coming times of trouble for the world, of the advent of which Lord Wolseley seems to be fully conscious, our God bids us, being Israel, "to enter into our chambers, shut our doors about us, hide ourselves for a little moment, until the indignation be overpast," in safety (ch. xxvi. 20, 21, R.V.). Why then should we fear and tremble with Lord Wolseley and his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, when God tells us we are safe under His own protection, and the Lord Jesus Christ declares, in Luke xxi. 28, R.V., that when the tribulation of the nations commences, we must "look up and lift our heads because our redemption draweth nigh," and we have absolutely nothing to fear? Under these circumstances, we do not feel inclined to indulge in panics and terror at the suggestion of our only General, but making all reasonable preparations for defence, think it wise to trust in the promises of the living God, and bid our pessimists go and study Our Identity for their own comfort and consolation. God has protected our islands from foreign invasion for a thousand years, and has never suffered our Home Gates to be closed once by day or by night, against the arrival of the peaceful imports of alien races. Why should we now begin to distrust Him who has never failed us at all during our whole history, and has declared He never will? (2 Sam. vii. 23, 24, R.V.).

Digitized by Google

We verily believe that our military authorities, when they speak and write as though a few thousand more men and a few more ships would save the country, would never be content with the men and ships they demand if their requests were acceded to. The 11,000 men and additional officers the Duke wants, would be found on trial utterly inadequate to oppose the French army, for instance, and therefore we should soon be told that the nation was in the greatest peril without a fresh 50,000 men and a dozen ships added to the list. We require men and ships in moderation to guard our colonies, India, and the Gates. God seems to require us to safeguard them. But He has bidden us have no anxiety about the defence of our appointed place, these islands of the west, since He has engaged to undertake that defence Himself. Lord Wolseley, of course, may say that our arguments proceed on the assumption that this nation is Israel, and that God has promised to extend His protection of them to these our latter days. Ours however is no assumption. We have demonstrated by many lines of proof and by unanswerable evidence that the British are the Lost Ten Tribes, the heirs of the promises made to the fathers; and we say that our military experts are wrong to dismiss this feature of our nation's case, without inquiry or consideration, since, so doing, they are fighting against God, and clamouring for what He will never grant them! He is the King and Guardian, Saviour and Redeemer of Israel, her Creator, Former, and Maker. He has fashioned Israel to show forth His praise and to glorify Him. He will protect His people and keep them as the apple of His eye, and will allow no harm to happen to them in their appointed home, since He is Almighty, omniscient and faithful to His word. Therefore, let Israel praise the Lord!

THE POWER OF GOD UNTO SALVATION.

THE Gospel is the power of God unto salvation, as Rom. i. 16 distinctly teaches us. This Gospel, or good news, is founded on material, literal facts, stupendous in their character and results—facts so real and so substantial that they cannot be spiritualised, or evaporised, or explained away. And yet the facts are doctrinal, and the doctrines they teach depend on the reality of the facts. These facts of this wonderful "good spell," or good news, are succinctly set out for us by St. Paul in ver. 3 and 4 of his Epistle to the Romans, chap. 1. Thus, the Gospel to which he was separated concerns (he tells us) Jesus Christ, our Lord, who is the Son of God. This Being was made or derived, in the supernatural course of prophetical events, from the seed of David, according to the flesh. His was a material body, born of a woman, therefore human and mortal, capable of death; and He was declared to be the Son of God with power, according to the Spirit of Holiness, by the literal resurrection of His dead body from the dead. By Him, through Him, and for Him, there came grace and apostleship, for obedience to the faith among the Gentile non-Israelite nations, on St. Paul, and on the Roman converts, for His name's sake. On these facts, divine in their character, the Gospel depends. These unique facts constitute this Gospel, "this power of God unto salvation," and it operates on every believer, independently of nationality, clime, or colour; with precedence, however, in regard to two races only, namely, the Jew and the Greek (ver. 16). The Jew is first but with him also ranks the Greek, then the rest of mankind. But these two are first! Who were, then, these two distinguished races? They were Hebrews both, the seed of Isaac both. The Jews were of Judah, one of the sons of Jacob. The Greeks were the representatives of Ephraim-Israel, civilised and cultivated, but outcast, Lo-Ammi. They were Dan, who joined Greece or Javan, traded in the fairs of Tyre in B.C. 588, as Ezek. xxvii. 19 tells us, in company with Javan or Greece (Zech. ix. 13, R.V., margin, Javan-Greece). Dan abode in ships, when he should have come to the help of the Lord with Deborah and Barak against Sisera, the Captain of Jabin, king of Canaan, in B.C. 1296 (Judges v. 17), and Dan early disappeared from the Scriptural history of the Tribes of Israel. The Lacedæmonian Greeks claimed relationship with Israel, as Josephus and the Apocrypha narrate. The High Priests at Jerusalem allowed the relationship, after careful reference to the sacred records (see Joseph. Antiq. xii. 4, 10; xiii. 5, 7; 1 Maccabees xii. 6, 7).

We see, then, why "the Gospel, the power of God unto salvation," came to the Jews first. It was because Jesus Christ sprang from Judah, and He came to His own first to bless them, but they would not. Next He turned to the other House, to Israel exiled under "another name," to Javan-Greeks, the Lo-Ammi race, in whose language, as the then polished nation of civilization, the New Testament was wholly written. These two, the Jews and Greeks, were the first to feel "the power of God unto salvation," as recipients of the Gospel, in order that by the latter it might be passed on to the other nations of the world. This Gospel St. Paul called in Rom. i. 1 (R.V.) "the Gospel of God," also in Rom. xv. 16 (R.V.); but in ver. 19 he described it as the Gospel of Christ. In Mark i. 1 (R.V.) it is mentioned as "the Gospel of Jesus Christ, the Son of God." This Gospel, then, must be that of the God-man, and constitutes a proof of the Divinity of our Lord. This Divine Gospel, or good news, is entrusted as "the Word of God" to His people Israel of the House of Joseph, to publish and promulgate it to the world. It becomes, in a sense, then, their Gospel, just as St. Paul called it "his Gospel"—"my Gospel" (Rom. ii. 16, xv. 25; 1 Tim. i. 11; 2 Tim. ii. 8); since to him its notification as the messenger of the Lord was entrusted (Acts xiii. 47; Isa. lii. 7, lxi. 6, R.V.). Ephraim-Israel, the British people, are also His ministers and messengers to all the nations, families, and kindreds of the earth; since God's promises to them are explicit in this respect: "In days to come shall Jacob take root, Israel shall blossom and bud, and they shall fill the face of the world with fruit" (Isa. xxvii. 6, R.V.) "He showeth His Word" (therefore His Gospel) "to Jacob, His statutes and His judgments unto Israel. He hath not dealt so with any nation; and as for His judgments, they have not known them. Praise ye the Lord" (Psa. cxlvii. 19, 20, R.V.) "All that see them" (God's covenanted people) "shall acknowledge them, that they are the seed which the Lord hath blessed" (Isa. lxi. 9, R.V.) What honour, then, rests on us as the House of Israel in reference to this Divine Gospel, which is God's and Christ's, and yet ours by delegation. The Jew has a vested right in it whether he will listen or forbear. His must be the first offer; and in the same rank of title to the good news our own people have the priority of claim over the other nations, since "the children must first be filled" (Mark vii. 27, R.V.) When these are filled, and the Spirit of the Lord begins to move them, theirs is the glorious privilege of going to all the world, to every creature, to all nations, families, and kindreds, telling them the good news, that "God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on Him should not perish, but have everlasting life!" (John iii. 16, R.V.).

A missionary clergyman to whom we recently suggested that Our Identity throws much comforting light upon the work on which he was engaged, was at first unable to comprehend what Our Identity was; but when the matter was explained to him, he promptly declared that the promulgation of the Gospel was of such vital importance that it dwarfed the considerations we brought before him as to our origin; and that this subject, therefore, did not appear to him sufficiently important for him to spend any time upon its investigation. Yet St. Paul's declaration in Rom. i. 16 ought to suggest to such an objector that if the Jews and Greeks in his day had a priority of claim to the Gospel, God's plans and purposes may involve to-day the existence of a chosen people especially blessed and endowed for His sacred use. To reject these, and yet to carry out the objects for which God chose His people, seems as outrageous a proceeding as a soldier's act would be, who would undertake to fight his Queen's enemies while he flouted her uniform, her standards, and her military arrangements and orders. It would be like our missionary's own conduct, who, spending his life preaching to the heathen, as the servant of the Church Missionary Society, should elect in so doing to ignore the Society's rules, commands, and precepts; denying the Society's existence, while enjoying its pay; doing virtually the work it commissioned him to do in his own, but not in their prescribed mode and manner, in grievous insult of his employers.

Digitized by Google

We must not be wiser than God; He arranges for the evangelisation of the whole world, and He has fixed on and appointed His agents to do the work. The agency, like the work, is God's own, and we cannot safely repudiate the one or neglect the other; we must respect both, and praise the Lord.

MORE EVIDENCE CONNECTING THE ANCIENT INHABITANTS OF IRELAND WITH THE PHŒNICIANS AND HEBREWS.

By Joseph Thomson.

PART XIII. (Concluded from page 201.)

XLII.—THE AREMORICI.

The Aremorici, in Irish Armhorac, or Armhoraice, some think were transmarine Britons, i.e., the ancient Belgae, or Alobrites, the remains of Belgic Britannia, who were driven by the Franks (or Sicambri) into Celtic Gaul. They are usually thought to be refugees of the Belgae, who settled in the British Isles, having come thence at the time of the Saxon wars. The Aremorican tract, or line of country which they inhabited, is by some termed the Saxon shore of the Gauls, otherwise called Celtic Gaul, Neustria, and Britannia in the Marshes. Cæsar and Pliny, however, call it Aquitania of the Vascens.

Baxter thinks they were named Aremorici from armor, or arvor, i.e., a shore; as the Morini were called from the Celtic mor-eni, as if marigenæ, i.e., sea-born. Villanueva, however, ventures to guess on the contrary, that this was one of the Phœnician tribes who first arrived in Ireland, and afterwards passed over from it into Belgium and Gaul. Probably from them the ancient city of Ardmore, county Waterford, had its name; also the promontory of Ardmore on the east of Youghal harbour; and Armoy, a town in the county Antrim: just as the Phœnicians of Aram, in Asia, were indifferently termed Aramæans, Syrians and Phœnicians, and by joining these two last, Syro-Phœnicians. Hence, in the Syriac version, the Syro-Phœnician woman (Mark vii. 26) is said to have been "from Phœnicia of Syria." Josephus says that the Aramæans were called Syrians by the Greeks, and Strabo also asserts that some take the Syrians for the Arimi, whom they now call Arami.

The Irish name Armorhac would thus seem to be from the Phœnician words Arami-arac, i.e., a people, or nation, from Aram, i.e., Syria, or Phœnicia. For arac means a state or nation, and Arami, an Aramæan, or Syrian, i.e., a native of Phœnicia. It also means an idolater; for the first worshippers of idols, as recorded in the Scriptures, were Syrians.

XLIII.—THE ALOBRITHII.

Alobrith may be an Irish name, meaning a portion of an ancient tribe; all, in Irish signifies extraction, or lineage; allod, antiquity; and brith, a part or fraction of anything. This is more rational than to assert with Baxter, that they were called Alobrites as intimating they were Galo-Britones. Another derivation makes it a Phœnician name indicating a tribe who had concluded a treaty by the solemnity of an oath; alah, in the Phœnician means an oath, and brith, a league or covenant. It is thus seen to be most probable that Alobrith is an abridgment from Baalbrith (or berith), i.e., the lord of the covenant, viz., "the idol with whom the children of Israel, after the manner of the Phœnicians, had made a treaty; and in whose honour the Phœnicians had erected a temple in Gebal,—a mountain and city at the foot of Libanus," and from which the surrounding country was named Gebalene. Dr. Villanueva says that this temple was restored in the time of Alexander the Great, and consecrated "by some despicable enthusiasts of the Pagan priesthood," to "Olympian Jove, the patron of hospitality." He goes on to say that, "Few things are better known than that the Alobrites, as well as the other nations of Gaul, of Belgae, and of Britannia, had embraced the idolatry and rites of the Phœnicians" ("Phœnician Ireland," page 240).

That many of the ancient inhabitants of Britain had come direct from the East, and brought their idolatrous worship with them, is also assuredly equally evident; and hardly less so is it that many of these emigrants from the East were Hebrews, as well as of other tribes of Palestine.

XLIV.—THE MORINI.

The Morini were probably those whom the ancient Irish called Morintinneach, i.e., high-spirited; or the Phœnicians, Marin, i.e., lords, or Morin, i.e., teachers. Though it is just possible that they may have been inhabitants of Jerusalem, and so called from Mount Moriah, which is situate close by Mount Zion. Like other ancient nations, the Phœnicians and Hebrews made it a practice that whenever they emigrated into foreign countries, through natural affection, and a desire to preserve the memory of the parent stock, to give their tribes and families the names of the cities, provinces, mountains or rivers, with which they were associated in childhood; and then again transfer these names to the new localities in which they eventually settled. This fact is provable by many examples both among the ancient Phœnicians, the Celts, the Greeks, the Romans and the Arabs in Spain, and more recently in the history of the Spaniards themselves in North and South America, and finally in very modern times by the British colonists throughout the world, until now on the North American Continent, a second Britain, as regards its names of places, is visibly in existence.

XLV.—THE ARADII.

The Aradii, ancient inhabitants of Ireland, who were associated with the Phœnicians in several maritime adventures, were originally inhabitants of the island of Arad, on the coast of Phenice, at the mouth of the river Eleutherus, and with part of the adjoining continent, as Antardus, Marathus, Laodicea, the principal city of the island, and which bore the same name (Arad), Strabo says was built by some Sidonian exiles, and that the Aradians did much to advance naval science. There is therefore nothing wonderful when, in allusion to this, we read in Ezek. (xxvii. 8) that rowers from Arad and Sidon had held possession of Tyre; and when in ver. 11 we find they had mounted their forces upon its walls and fought nobly in its defence. Pliny also tells us that not only Tyre, but Tripoli, the most illustrious city of Phœnice, was inhabited partly by Aradians, and partly by Tyrians and Sidonians. From this island the Aradians in company with some Phœnicians sailed into Spain, and there built the town of Arades, amongst the Astures; Aradilli amongst the Vaccei, and Araduenigа amongst the Carpetani. Also Ardisa, formerly a city, now a small town of Celtiberia; Ardisalsdo, and Ardesana, villages in the country of the Astures; Ardaiz amongst the Cantabrians, and others of similar name in various parts of Spain, it is highly probable were colonies of the Aradians. A learned man referred to by Villanueva says, that the river Araduey was called after them, although others derive the name from the Greek ardens, i.e., to moisten.

That from Spain, in company with the Phœnicians the Aradians crossed over to Ireland, and there established a permanent colony, may be considered proved by the names of the old districts of Ard and Arad Cliach, which comprise a large part of county Tipperary; the tract of Ardes, in county Down; the citadel of Ardea in county Kerry, and in the names of other towns beginning, like the Spanish, with the word Ard, and still used popularly in Irish geography.

Digitized by Google

XLVI.—ARMENIANS.

That a tribe of Armenians along with the Phœnicians, also arrived in Ireland, may be inferred from the names of Cany Roch, a town on the sea coast of county Dublin; of Knordoe, a town in the county Galway; of Cahirdonel, a village in county Kerry, where are the ruins of an old circular, and almost impregnable fortress constructed of wonderful sized stones; of Cahirdowgan and Cahirdriny, ancient camps or forts in county Cork; and of Cardangan, a small town in county Tipperary. For the Phœnicians called Armenia Cardu; and an Armenian, Cardanun; and hence Ptolemy calls the lofty mountains of that country Gordoi, and Quintus Curtius, Cordei.

That this Cardenian, or Armenian people, had, in conjunction with the Phœnicians, also settled in Spain there is clear proof in numerous names of places in that country. As Cardena, the name of a river of the Vaccei; Cardenu, or Cardenus, a river of the Ilergetes; Cardenas, a town of Cantabria; Cardenchosa, a little village of Bœtica; Cardona, a very ancient city of the Ilergetes; with the towns of Cardenosa, Cardenete, Cardena, Cardenueta, &c., in various parts of that kingdom.

XLVII.—THE ATTACOTI, OR CUTHEANS.

The Attacoti are mentioned by Jerome as ancient inhabitants of Ireland, and giving their name to the country or province of Attacottia, which the Emperor Constantine afterwards termed Flaira Cæsariensis. It is evident, however, as is noticed by O'Brien, that the Attacotti were not Irish at all, and their country a province of Britain. And as they are not met with in Ptolemy's commentaries, Baxter thought that the Silures, with their dependents the Demeti, the Cornavii, and the Congani obtained their designation at a later period of the Roman Empire. For what does Attacotti mean, he asks, but dwelling in the woods? At-a-coit, written loosely, means in the woods; which he confirms by some verse from Condelia, called Prydydh Maus, i.e., the great poet: whence he infers that the Irish Attacotti were named from the synonymous terms, Argoet, and Argoetnys, i.e., men beside woods; or as old Leomarchus would take it, Guyr Argoet. The condition of the country, which was woody and uncultivated, even so late as Norman times, agrees well with this conjecture; and Ammianus Marcellinus testifies that the Attacoti, assisted by the Saxons, the Picts, and the Scots had ravaged and laid waste the Roman province.

Villanueva, however, supposes that their nation was more ancient, and is disposed to refer their arrival in this country to the earlier times of the Phœnicians, who, it is more than probable, were accompanied by the Chutæi in their maritime enterprises. The Chutæi, or Chuti, were natives of the country of Persis called Cuth, who, after the deportation of the Ten Tribes were carried from Chuthah and the other cities of Assyria into Palestine by Shalmaneser king of Assyria; and they and their posterity, for the most part, were so called because the greater number of them were from the city of Chuthah. Being intermixed with the Phœnicians, they introduced among them the worship of the idol Nergel, supposed by some to have been tharingol, i.e., a dunghill cock, which they perched upon a pole as the herald of day. The word Attacotti, therefore, Villanueva argues, means the same as Atha-Chuthi did to the Phœnicians, i.e., the arrival of the Cutheans; or as Athar-Cuthi, i.e., a place or country where the Cutheans dwelt; or, as Chuthean scouts; which is in keeping with the character of the people who are designated by Sosimus as a warlike nation.

From this people may have come the name Annacotty, a town in county Limerick, for "anna" (in the Phœnician, hanna), means delightful, acceptable. Hence Hanna-Chutai means a place acceptable to the Phœnician Chutheans: or, if it is from Anakia-Chuti, it will then mean the offspring of the Phœnician Chutheans. It may, however, have reference to the idol Ana-Meloch, which the Phœnicians borrowed from the Chutheans and other Assyrians, when it may be rendered, the oracle of Moloch,—"aonah," or "onah," being an answer. These points, however, must be decided by each for himself; Villanueva volunteering his guesses chiefly to elicit those of others.

Other vestiges of the Cutheans may be traced in the name "Cots Rock," now Castlemary, county Cork, where is an immense stone altar. Inis Cathay, now Inis Saatery, an island at the mouth of the Shannon where there is still standing in fair preservation one of the round towers of Ireland; Cath, the name of a rock on the coast of county Cork; Cotton, an extensive district in county Down, and Cotland, a small town in the county of Kildare.

The important character of the evidence producible to prove the Hebrew-Phœnician origin of the early colonists of Ireland, is our only apology for the length of this article. A similar survey of the religion which anciently prevailed, not only in Ireland, but throughout the British Isles, would also clearly show its essentially Israelitish character, more or less corrupted tnrough Pagan practices. This must be left for the present; though, by kind permission of the Editor of the BANNER OF ISRAEL, we may take it up at some future time.

BENJAMIN.

By SARAH SHARP.

THIS is the third of the trio, represented on Ephraim's division, on the High Priest's breastplate. 1490 years B.C. God had caused Benjamin's name to be engraven on the beautiful amethyst gem, as prophetic of the divinely appointed mission he was to fulfil. This stone from its colour denotes Royalty and Redemption. The royal purple was taken from Judah and conferred on Benjamin, a token that this Tribe, at the prophetically appointed period, should receive and minister to Messiah, whom His own tribe (Judah) refused and rejected. How wonderfully throughout his career does Benjamin seem to realize the words of blessing God directed Moses to utter. "The beloved of the Lord shall dwell in safety by Him; and the Lord shall cover him all the day long, and he shall dwell between His shoulders." This Tribe was especially protected during the fearful calamities that overtook the Jews after they had sealed their own fate in the blood of their Messiah. For a long period the identity and career of this Tribe can be traced—as they remained by God's command with the Tribe of Judah—and did not go into the same captivity as the Ten Tribes, to whom they properly belonged, as Benjamin is part of the House of Joseph. At the time of the division of the two nations, when "all Israel of the Ten Tribes revolted against Rehoboam—Solomon's son—Benjamin was commanded by God not to rebel, as in His mercy He remembered His promise to David when He said, "Behold, I will rend the kingdom out of the hand of Solomon, and will give Ten Tribes to thee (Jeroboam). But he (Solomon) shall have one Tribe for My servant David's sake, and for Jerusalem's sake, the city which I have chosen out of all the Tribes of Israel" (1 Kings xi. 31, 32). Thus, by the special ordering of God's Providence, the two nations were completely severed, never again to be reunited, until the Twelve Tribes are restored to the land of their inheritance. So Benjamin, placed in Judah amidst an obstinate, rebellious people, was patiently to await and welcome the Saviour of the world, and to witness the awful treatment He received at their hands, often warning their Lord of the treachery of His own Tribe. "Master, the Jews of late sought to stone Thee" (John xi. 8). Wilt Thou again go up to Jerusalem; and again, "for fear of the Jews"? So that these disciples of our Lord, who were mostly Benjamites, had no sympathy with that people to whom they had been lent for "a light." When the long-predicted vengeance from God overtook the fated city, the beloved of the Lord called to mind the warning twice told, first by the prophet Jeremiah, in chap. vi. 1, "O ye children of Benjamin, gather yourselves to flee out of the midst of Jerusalem, . . . for evil appeareth out of the north and great destruction."

Digitized by Google

And again, the notice given to them by our Lord Himself, "Let them which are in Judæa flee to the mountains, . . . for these be the days of vengeance. . . . They shall fall by the edge of the sword. . . . Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled" (Luke xxi. 21, 22). Blessed word "until." Jesus is bringing that "until" to a speedy close, for He is as anxious as we are for the happy period of the "restitution of all things," and the manifestation of His people as "the sons of God!"

It may interest my readers if I give a short description of a celebrated picture I saw in the Munich gallery, called "The Destruction of Jerusalem." It shows how vividly the great artist grasped the prophecies concerning this terrible event. The canvas on which it is painted covers nearly the whole space of one side of a court. At the top of the picture the four prophets, who warned the Jews of God's anger, are depicted in life-size, with their open scrolls in their hands. Beneath these are four destroying angels hovering over the city. Here are depicted the awful scenes of misery, with each terrible circumstance foretold by Moses, taking place. Outside the city the armies of Titus are drawn up, waiting; and on the right hand, close to the gates, a little band of Christian Benjamites are collected, angels conducting them, and leading the children out of the city. The painting is by Kaulbach, a very eminent modern artist. Thus again the "beloved of the Lord" is safely brought out, and dispersed over all lands to work for His Master, and became a harbinger of the Gospel. Many of this tribe afterwards settled in Normandy; then they were divinely guided to these islands to join the other tribes, and form a united strong kingdom. Their brethren soon forgot that they had arrived as conquerors, in the advantage of many useful and cultivated arts which they brought with them. Thus "little Benjamin" became their ruler. He brought from Normandy our now accepted national standard or insignia, the Lion. William the Conqueror had two on his shield; in about the 12th century a third was added; later on the prophetic "young lions" were placed on the shield. All these emblems of our nation are mentioned as attached to Israel in Num. xxiii. 24, and xxiv. 9; also again in Ezek. xxxviii. 13, as England—"the merchant of Tarshish—with all the young lions thereof," our young colonies.

We have now briefly traced the history of our Ten-Tribed nation, under its heads Ephraim, Manasseh, and Benjamin, and shown how all these wonderful prophecies concerning the chosen people of God fit in exactly, both literally and spiritually, to our history and experience; and we hope that those who do not wilfully shut hearts, and ears, and eyes to all our conclusive evidence regarding these glorious truths, as the revelation of God in these "latter days," will give heed to the teaching of Scripture on this important subject, and be convinced of these things to the glory of God, whose name be blessed and praised for all His unmerited goodness to British-Israel, in our Lord Jesus Christ.

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

In presenting their Tenth Annual Report, the Council of the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association desire to recognise the continued help and blessing God has been pleased to accord them during another year's labours in one of the most important enterprises for the promulgation of Scripture truths. In common with all kindred institutions, the funds of the Association have been affected by the continued great depression in commerce all over the country, which has unfortunately increased the number of calls for help from every quarter. This has had its corresponding effect upon the ability of friends to assist this most important organisation as heretofore; nevertheless, the income of your Association is so far encouraging as to show the need for its existence and maintenance as an institution holding an important position in Christian work. The number of those friends who have laboured with us in the past, bearing the burden and heat of the day, but who have entered into rest since the last Annual Meeting, include the learned and scientific Joseph Baxendell, Chief of the Observatory at Southport, Lancashire, who joined your Association and became a Vice-President some seven years ago. Of his kindness of heart and simplicity of disposition, the local papers, when recording his decease, fully testified. He was one of those true friends to our cause who had the courage of his convictions—ever ready to acknowledge that the British are Israel. They have also to lament the decease of another member of the Council, the Rev. John Gore Tipper, M.A., Chaplain of H.M. Convict Prison at Dover. He was one of the speakers at the first annual meeting of your Association in Exeter Hall ten years ago, and was ever ready to help on the great work of making known the fact of "Our Israelitish Origin." These gaps in the ranks of our workers should be regarded as a call to the work by those whom God has fitted to become teachers among men, in order that the truth may be more widely disseminated that lost Israel is found in the British nation.

The premises occupied by your Association have proved of great advantage to many of its members, as well as for the carrying on of the general work of the Society. During the past year 24 meetings were held on Tuesday afternoons for Bible readings, conducted by various friends. In addition, 26 lectures have been delivered in the Association's Rooms since our last annual meeting, the lecturers including, among others, Miss E. M. Babington, Miss V. M. Cox, Mrs. Treverton, Gen. Beresford, Mr. Douglas A. Onslow, the Rev. Hibbert Newton, D.D., the Rev. James S. Forsyth, M.A., and the Secretary. Your Secretary has been privileged to give 26 other lectures in different parts of the country, extending from Banff and Inverness in the North, to the extreme West of Devonshire. Lectures have also been delivered in London and the Provinces by General Beresford and other friends. To each and all of these friends the Council tender their heartiest thanks. It is with satisfaction that the Council are able to point to 100 lectures and addresses given during the past year in connection with your Association, thus bringing the testimony of God's faithfulness to His covenant people before many thousands of persons who would not otherwise have heard, or thought, anything concerning these grand foundation truths of the Bible.

The occasion of Her Most Gracious Majesty's Jubilee was made a special opportunity for the Association to approach Her Majesty as British-Israelites. Accordingly, a dutiful Address was prepared, and most handsomely illuminated (the cost of which was defrayed by Mr. H. H. Pain, a member of the Council). This Address was forwarded to Her Majesty on June 19, who most graciously accepted and acknowledged it.

Several valuable gifts of books have been generously forwarded by members and friends for the Library. The Council take this opportunity of thanking, among others, Lady Jane Ellice, Miss L. H. Southcombe, Miss Marriott, Mrs. Rogers, Messrs. Isaac Loveland, and Rowland Mackworth, for the interest they have taken in the welfare of the Society in this direction. There is still room for other books, if friends will remember this department of the Association's work.

During the year forty-six new members have joined the Society, and several of the first members have renewed their Subscriptions.

The Free Distribution of Literature by your Society has been successfully carried on during the year, and some thousands of Leaflets, small Pamphlets, BANNERS' OF ISRAEL, &c., have been distributed all over the country. This department of the Association's work is only limited by the supply of funds for this purpose. All contributions for this special work should be sent direct to the Secretary, at the Offices of the Association, 14, King William-street, Charing Cross, London, W.C.

The total income of the Society, for the twelve months ending April 30, 1888, amounted to £239 10s. 7d., and the total expenditure for the same period amounted to £232 2s. 1d., leaving a balance in hand of £7 8s. 6d. It is clear to every thoughtful mind that a large amount of work has been accomplished for a little money, but the Income of the Association is far short of what it ought to be for carrying on the important work it has undertaken. Every year numbers of converts to our views of divine truth joyfully acknowledge God's faithfulness to the House of Israel; but how few of them contribute anything to sustain an organization such as your Association presents, although, possibly, through its agency they were led to understand this great truth.

Digitized by Google

Your Council therefore appeal to all true and steadfast Christians, engaged in the warfare against infidelity and sin, to all earnest Protestants battling against the insidious encroachments of the Roman Papacy, to all true and loyal citizens of a God-honouring and Bible-loving country, especially to all who recognise their connection with the House of Israel, to strengthen their hands by uniting themselves as members of the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association, contributing, as their means will allow, towards increasing the income of so useful and important an Institution.

By order of the Council,
JAMES BILLINGTON, Secretary.

MESSRS. CHAMBERS' NEW ENCYCLOPÆDIA.

MR. S. HARLEY KOUGH, Solicitor, of Church Stretton and Shrewsbury, finding an unfavourable notice published in Messrs. Chambers' new Encyclopædia, on the subject of Our Israelitish Origin, thought it his duty to send the proprietors of the work the following very straightforward letter. We quote it in justice to Mr. Harley Kough, whom we have known to be an ardent Anglo-Israelite for some years, and in hopes that the public protest, made to Messrs. Chambers, may be the means of drawing their attention to the matter, as well as that of others, to whom our own pages may be submitted. Mr. Kough wrote as follows:—

"Dear Sirs,—The following notes, upon the Anglo-Israelite theory, may prove useful (if pigeon-holed) to the writer in a third edition of your admirable Encyclopædia before this 'theory,' or as I call it, 'wondrous true story' of the Identity of the British race with Israel, is again written upon. May the demand for your work be so large that a new edition may be, ere long, called for.

"The origin of this our nation, a great, mighty, and innumerable one, was Asiatic, and Central Asiatic too; so God's people Israel were deported, before they were lost, to Central Asia, and thence journeyed Westward to fulfil the prophecies, by becoming there a great, mighty, and numerous nation (Gen. xii. 2, 3; xviii. 18; xxii. 17; xxxv. 11; Hosea i. 10; xi. 10; Isa. xxiv. 15). The splendid gifts God has given our race inhabiting these islands, all such being His special inalienable blessings conferred on the House of Israel, to the exclusion, as facts prove, even of the House of Judah, and of all the non-Israelite Gentile nations. Such gifts are, inter alia—The Heathen Empire (Psa. cxi. 6; ii. 8—11); multitudinousness (Gen. xxii. 17; xxxii. 12; xxxv. 11; Num. xxiii. 10; Hosea i. 10); domination over Gentile nations (Deut. xv. 6; Jer. xxxi. 7), but no subservience to them (Amos vi. 1); the ever continuing monarchy (1 Kings viii. 25; Jer. xxxiii. 17, 26); the secure home with open Gates (2 Sam. vii. 10; Isa. lx. 11); the Bible (Psa. cxlvii. 19, 20; Matt. xxi. 43); the Decalogue (Deut. vi. 7—9; xi. 20; Exod. xxxiv. 27, 28); the love of lost sinners' souls (Isa. xxvii. 6); the evangelising function (Gen. xxii. 18; xxviii. 14; Matt. xxviii. 19, 20; Luke xxiv. 47, 48; Acts xx. 28, 29; xiii. 47; iii. 25); Israel's Colonies must be in all zones (Psa. cxxi. 5, 6; Isa. xlix. 10); a nation and company of nations—Israel, of the House of Joseph: Ephraim, even to the exclusion of Manasseh, being destined to this high honour (Gen. xlviii. 9; xxxv. 11).

"Now—(1) God is not a man that He should lie; (2) God made certain promises to Abraham, to be enjoyed by his seed in the Christian dispensation; (3) we possess and enjoy all those blessings as far as time permits; (4) therefore, since we have the Hebrew blessings, we are Hebrews; (5) and being Hebrews, we must, since we are not the Jews, be the lost Tribes of Israel, or the House of Joseph; (6) this corollary follows, because God would not promise to one and give to another; He would not promise to Joseph, then cast his seed off, and give his birthright to the Gentiles.

"I do not think, that in a future edition of your Encyclopædia, this wondrous Identity story, no longer a mere theory, can be so unhesitatingly condemned, if the foregoing references are prayerfully and carefully considered. Yours truly

"S. HARLEY KOUGH.

"WHICH IS THE TRUE CHURCH?"

ON Monday evening, at a meeting of the West Hill Protestant Educational Society, a paper entitled "Which is the True Church?" was read by Mr. J. R. Mitchell. The chair was taken by the Rev. G. N. H. Tredennick. The paper, which was of a most interesting character, showed that, notwithstanding Christianity had been preached for 1,900 years, there were still great divisions amongst the believers of the Christian faith. The Church was national and not sectarian. It did not follow that the religion of Christ was confined to any particular body, but that the nation, as a whole, must worship Him, and have their laws founded upon a righteous foundation. Wherever was found a people having these requirements bearing upon them, there they also found the Kingdom of Israel and the one true Church. This fact cut the ground completely from under the feet of the Romish Church, and its claim to absolute supremacy. Passing on to review the different countries in the four quarters of the world, to find out if any would answer the description required, of being the one righteous nation, Russia, Spain, France, Italy, and others were named, but were found not to contain the sufficient requirements. Great Britain was tried, with better success, and Mr. Mitchell shewed that the Gospel was brought to England, not from Rome, but direct from Jerusalem, and that, instead of Britain being indebted to Rome for her Apostolic succession, Rome was indebted to Britain for her first Bishop. The English also corresponded with the promises of Abraham. They alone, of all peoples, had the great sign of the Sabbath. Their missionary labours spoke for themselves throughout the world. What other country had spent twenty millions of money to free the slaves and the oppressed?—and the amount of money spent in other charitable purposes was also enormous; their commerce, race, and language, together with their laws of the Bible, were increasing to such an extent, that the people and the language bid fair, before many more years, to fill the earth.

—Hastings and St. Leonard's Observer, February 4th, 1888.

Correspondence.

NOT RECKONED AMONGST THE NATIONS.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—I see that the old objection that England cannot be Israel because she is reckoned amongst the nations is coming to the front again. It is obviously impossible for a nation to exist and not to be reckoned in the sense of being known to exist by the nations around it, but it is quite possible for it to exist without being reckoned in the sense of being identified or recognised.

There is, however, another view of the matter which I do not remember to have seen noticed, although the whole scope of the prophecy seems to point to it. Israel was to be as a sleeping lion amongst the nations which they would fear to rouse, so that it was evidently not by them that she was not to be "reckoned;" and this being so, the only natural conclusion seems to be that in the sight of God she was to be a "separated" people (Exodus xxxiii. 16), not "reckoned amongst the nations" by Him who had "formed her for Himself, that she might show forth His praise" (Isa. xliii. 21).

The idea that England cannot be Israel because she is reckoned amongst the nations, is so palpably absurd that we might well distrust the future mental development of any child that we might hear expressing it, and it is certainly impossible, by any stretch of courtesy, to regard the objection as an argument, because argument pre-supposes the existence of reasoning power!

Yours truly,
J. M. GRANT, M.D., Surgeon-General.

Cheltenham, April 23, 1888.

P.S.—I notice that in answering the doubts of a clergyman in to-day's BANNER, as to whether these are the latter or last days, you omit what is, I think, the strongest evidence that the Bible supplies, that they are so as far as the future greatness of Israel is concerned; I mean Num. xxiv. 14—17, where Balaam, in summing up the long catalogue of blessings to be bestowed upon Israel in "the latter days," clearly indicates the time referred to as the Christian dispensation, by saying that there shall come a Star out of Jacob, and a Sceptre out of Israel, which shall smite the corners of Moab; and we do not expect Israel to be a smiting power in the millennium, which will be a reign of peace.—J. M. GRANT.

Digitized by Google

NOTICES.

All communications intended for the Editor, to be addressed: "Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Clifton, Bristol.

SUBSCRIPTIONS. £ s. d.

Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free 0 7 6
Two Copies (including Double Numbers) 0 13 6
Three Copies " " " 1 0 4
Four Copies " " " 1 5 6
Six Copies " " " 1 16 4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-grand, London, to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C., or F. W. PARRY & Co., 29, Paternoster-row, London.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

Contents Bills and Show Cards may be obtained on application to the Publishers.

Advertisements should be sent to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

Prepaid Advertisements are inserted at the rate of thirty words for 1s. 4d.

BLACKPOOL.— Anglo-Israelites will find COMFORTABLE APARTMENTS, Public or Private, near Sea or Gardens, at Mrs. Breakells, 39, Adelaide Street.

Just published—Cloth, 2s. 6d.—a re-issue of

The Origin of Masonic Ritual and Tradition:

A Lecture on the Three Degrees, by BRO. WM. ROWBOTTOM, P.M., 1028, with facsimile of a very rare Masonic engraving published in 1789.

"Exquisitely clear and singularly correct in everything wherein I may be any authority or guide."—Professor PIAZZI SMYTH. "Will be found of considerable interest to many besides Masons."—Church Bells.

Oxford: S. Rowbottom and Son; London: R. Banks and Son, Racquet Court, Fleet Street, E.C.; and F. W. Parry and Co., 29, Paternoster Row, E.C.

Price Five Shillings.—"Substantially and attractively got up, and profusely illustrated."—Oldham Chronicle.

Eildon Grange: A Tale.

By ANDREW CLARK, M.A., Vicar of St. Michael's, Oxford. "One of the most charming books. . . . The illustrations are full of playful humour."—Scotsman. "The book is undoubtedly a happy one."—The Oxford Magazine. "Both entertaining and bracing."—Dundee Advertiser.

Oxford: S. Rowbottom and Son; London: Hamilton, Adams and Co., 32, Paternoster Row, E.C.

☞ Ask for this Book at the Libraries.

WORKS BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

The History of the House of Israel. How They Were Lost and How They Were Found. Told for the children. Price 6d., cloth 1s.; post free 7d. and 1s. 1d. Fifth edition.

A Resume of the Scriptural Argument, Proving the Identity of the British Race with the Lost Ten Tribes. Price 1d.; 6s. per hundred, postage 6d.

Our Identity: What it is Not; What it is; and Our Obligations To-day in Respect to it Being a Lecture recently delivered in London by Philo-Israel, and published by special request. Price 2d., a reduction for quantities.

Are the English People the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel? An Inquiry Establishing the Identity of the British Nation with the Lost Ten Tribes. 4d.

London: Robert Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Price Threepence, by Post 3½d.

British & Jewish Fraternity.

The Outline of the Reasons which Convinced a Jew that the British People are of the Tribe of Israel.

By the REV. ELIEZER BASSIN, M.S.

London: Robert Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Certain HARNESS' Cure.

ELECTROPATHIC BELT

FOR

SCIATICA

R. J. WATSON, Esq., 13, Market Street, Harwich, writes:—"Harness' Electropathic Belt has completely cured me of sciatica. After wearing it for a week I got better, and am now quite free from pain."

Guaranteed to generate a mild continuous current of Electricity, which speedily cures all Disorders of the Nerves, Stomach, Liver and Kidneys. Thousands of Testimonials. Pamphlet & Advice free on application to Mr. C. B. Harness, Consulting Electrician, the Medical Battery Co. Ltd.

Only Address,

52, OXFORD ST. LONDON, W. (Corner of Rathbone Place.)

Call to-day, if possible, or write at once

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. W. PARRY (late GUEST & Co.), 29 PATERNOSTER-ROW WEDNESDAY, MAY 23, 1888, [All rights reserved

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

THE TENTH ANNUAL MEETING

WILL BE HELD (D.V.) IN

EXETER HALL, STRAND, ON THURSDAY EVENING, MAY 24, 1888,

COL. THE HON. OLIVER LAMBART in the Chair,

AT SEVEN O'CLOCK PRECISELY. Addresses will be delivered on the following subjects:—

The Rev. H. JOHN HATCH, M.A., Vicar of Linford, Beds., "The Things which are Beginning to Come to Pass, and Our Consequent Duty."

The Rev. ROBERT DOUGLAS, M.A., Vicar of Kidsgrove, "Which is It, a New Heresy, or the Truth of God"?

E. W. BIRD, Esq. (Philo-Israel), of Bristol, "Our Facts, and What They Teach Us."

The Rev. J. IDRISYN JONES, M.A., of Birkenhead, "Why I Accept Anglo-Israelism."

The Rev. JAMES P. BRITTON, Vicar of Chapple, Essex, "Misguided Zeal in the Cause of Anglo-Israelism."

W. H. PETERS, Esq., J.P., and DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, Esq., J.P., will also speak.

The ANNUAL MEETING of Members and Subscribers, in the Association Rooms, 14, King William-street, Charing Cross, London, W.C., on WEDNESDAY EVENING, MAY 23, to receive the Report, and elect Officers for the ensuing year. Chair to be taken at 7 o'clock.

E. W. BIRD, Esq. (Philo-Israel) is expected to preside. JAMES BILLINGTON, Sec.

MR. EDWARD HINE has returned from his lecturing tour in America. Friends wishing to arrange for him to lecture can communicate with Isaac Loveland, Shoreham, near Sevenoaks, Kent, at present fixing no dates. Mr. Hine's publications have had a large circulation, and can be obtained of F. W Parry & Co., 29, Paternoster Row, London, E.C.

Forty-Seven Identifications, 6d., post free 7d
Cui Bono? 6d., post free, 7d.
Lost Israel Found, 3s 6d., post free, 3s. 9d
Also The Nation Warned by the Scripture Teachings of the Great Pyramid, 6d., post, 7d.

New Work on the Identity of Lost Israel

By the late BISHOP TITCOMB.

Now ready, in Cloth Gilt, Bevelled Boards, Imperial 8vo. Price 3s.; sent Post Free for Postal Order or Stamps.

A MESSAGE TO THE CHURCH

FROM

THE NINETEETNH CENTURY

BY THE LATE

RT. REV. BISHOP TITCOMB, D.D.

ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet Court, Fleet Street.
F. W. PARRY & Co., 29, Paternoster Row, E.C.

Dr. JOSEPH WILD'S WORKS

The most useful works on the subject.

NEW EDITION JUST PUBLISHED.

THE LOST TEN TRIBES

Price 3s., post free 3s. 3d.

'We have much pleasure in directing attention to this handsome volume. . . . We promise our readers that if they procure this work, and will peruse it, they will find 'Our Identity' discussed in a clear, novel, racy, and from an American point of view, which is sure to interest."—Banner of Israel.

THE FUTURE OF ISRAEL AND JUDAH,

Price 2s., post free 2s. 3d.

R. BANKS & SON, RACQUET-COURT, FLEET-ST.

WORKS BY PASTOR CHINIQUY

Cloth, gilt lettered, 5s. Sent post free for P.O.

FIFTY YEARS IN THE CHURCH OF ROME.—Complete Revised Edition on good paper, well bound in Cloth, Gilt Lettered, nearly 600 pages. With New Portrait and Autograph of the Author. "No history like it since the time of Luther."—New York Witness. Be particular to order the Complete Edition published by Banks.

Price 6d. in paper covers; on toned paper, in cloth boards, gilt lettered, 1s., post free for stamps.

PAPAL IDOLATRY. An Exposure of the Dogma of Transubstantiation and Mariolatry, to which is added "My Reasons Why I will Never Go Back to the Church of Rome." The Bible Christian Magazine says:—"Unanswerable! The most powerful argument against Transubstantiation, in the same space, that we have read."

R. BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

PIANOFORTES, Harmoniums, American Organs. Why buy at shops inferior made instruments, and pay large profits, when you can buy direct from the Maker High-class Instruments, and save 50 per cent. by so doing? Full value allowed for old Instruments in exchange as part payment. Write for Price Lists and Testimonials to G. LINSTEAD, 2, Oseney Crescent, Camden Road, London. Established 1874.

Just Published, Crown 8vo., Cloth, price 3s. 6d.

BRITAIN IN HISTORY, ANCIENT AND MODERN;

Or, Proofs Linking Israel with Britain Throughout the Ages.

By Mrs. G. A. ROGERS,

Author of "The Coronation Stone," etc., etc.

"The Book possesses a national interest, and ought to be widely read."—The Fireside News.

"The most useful addition to Identity literature that has been made for a long time past."

Israel's Hope and Destiny.

"Well worthy of perusal for the rare and curious information conveyed."—Christian Age.

"This remarkable volume. . . We welcome this addition to the literature of Israel."—Banner of Israel.

"Interesting and suggestive."—English Churchman.

THE CORONATION STONE;

And England's Interest in It

4th Thousand, Crown 8vo., Cloth, price 1s. 6d.

"A reverent and graceful little book."—Life and Work.

"An excellent account of the history and wanderings of the Stone. . . will be read and re-read."

Banner of Israel.

LONDON: J. NISBET & Co., Berners Street, and to be had of all Booksellers.

Price 2s. 6d., Cheap Edition, 1/-

BIBLE LESSONS AND REFLECTIONS.

By ROBERT GAIRDNOR, of Kilmarnock, N.B.

"Mr. Gairdner has given us in his book a series of Bible lessons, with his own reflections added thereto, and though he has been very cautious in the latter, and has not committed himself too broadly, he has plainly let it be seen that he is an Anglo-Israelite by conviction, and that the Scriptures which he quotes at length and extensively throughout his book, are meant to teach Our Identity and God's faithfulness, from first to last, to His promises to Abraham and His seed for ever."—Banner of Israel.

ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-st.

SOUND, PURE, WHITE

TEETH!

Those who value these will try

CARBOLINE

(The Great Sanitary Tooth Paste).

1/6 & 2/6 per Pot.

Through Chemists, or post free from the Makers,

GEORGE & WELCH

WORCESTER.

Lancet writes:—"To save the teeth use a good carbolic daily."

HUMAN LIFE.—FIFTY YEARS' Record of Facts, Principles, and Discoveries (just published, complete) Relating to the Improvement and Preservation of Human Life on Earth. Origin and true treatment of diseases. A series of articles by DR. SAMUEL BIRLEY, M.D., Ph.D. Book form, 50 pages. SENT FREE to every applicant by the publishers, GORDON B. MURRAY & CO., 50, Theobald's-road, Holborn, E.C. Write to-day

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."

(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. XII., No. 596. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, MAY 30, 1888. [PRICE ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
The Defence of London	213
The Papal Decree Regarding the Irish Conspiracy	214
The Might and Grandeur of a United Empire	215
The Pastoral Offices of the Lord Jesus Christ	216
A Criticism of a Sermon. Being a Paper Read Before the Cashel Clerical Union. By the Rev. Denis Hanan, B.D.	217
A Barmouth Israelite's Way of Proclaiming His Belief	218
East-Central Africa	219

THE DEFENCE OF LONDON.

THE military experts are in a panic, as usual, in regard to the "defenceless condition of London." In the May number of the Nineteenth Century, an article appears from the gifted pen of Gen. Sir Edward Hamley respecting this subject; in which he declares that the metropolis is in a bad case, and requires an organised scheme for its defence by land, since the sea defence is now found, in these days of steam, to be not impregnable. It might be made so in Sir Edward Hamley's view; but the naval administration of this country cannot be made to see it in a proper light, and therefore there is nothing to be done, but make the safety of the heart of the Empire what it should be, and safeguard it once for all, by human means.

The means which the military expert would use are simple. He would not fortify London as Paris is fortified; but he would defend it by the use of three agencies. First, the Metropolitan volunteers, augmented by 25,000 riflemen who should be employed; secondly, by troops resident in and near London, specially trained for this work; and thirdly, by permanent works around London, to be occupied at the time of crisis, where the volunteers and troops designated for the purpose, might be carefully trained. These guards of London, the writer thinks, would be sufficient to make an enemy pause before he landed in the neighbourhood to attack the City. The Times, which reviews the general's project, approves of it generally and supports it, but inclines to the idea that, after all, the sea is our first line, and indeed, our only line of real defence for the metropolis and the country. It calls on its readers to recognise that they must not depend on London's land defences, but that they must, rather, make the navy so strong that invasion shall be impossible. The words of the journalist are so remarkable, that we think our readers should study them, and notice how entirely the secular writers of the day lean upon the arm of flesh, denying to the God of Israel any place in His own dominions. "Look to your land defences," is Sir Edward Hamley's cry, "and you are safe." "Nay," says the Times, "Trust the navy entirely, and that alone will bring you the security you require!" The Times said:—

> The navy is and must be England's first line of defence. To consider how London may best be defended on land is to assume that its defence at sea has been neglected. For all practical purposes Sir Edward Hamley acknowledges this at the outset. He proposes to appeal to Londoners to recognise their defenceless position and to take effective measures for defending themselves. Would it not be quite as easy and far more effective to go to the root of the matter at once, and to urge upon Londoners and upon Englishmen generally that if they wish to be permanently safe against the dangers and consequences of invasion they must insist upon having a navy strong enough to make invasion impossible? A territorial force for the defence of London could only be a security, precarious at best, against the worst consequences of invasion. It would only indirectly protect us against the terrible confusion and loss which a hostile landing upon our shores would inevitably entail. Let us organize and train our volunteers with that object in view by all means. But let us recognise to the full, with Sir Edward Hamley himself, that "if the navy were augmented to the extent necessary for the full defence of our foreign possessions, our commerce, and our home waters, that would be all that we could desire."

But this is just the point where we fail, according to our alarmists. Our navy does not suffice to defend our foreign possessions, our commerce, and our home waters too; therefore we are in imminent peril of invasion, and the only thing to be done, is to have some powerful land defences, and the object is attained! The Times, more far-seeing than the military expert, insists upon it, that the sea alone can defend us, and if we lose our supremacy there, the game is up and our country is ruined! Nothing can or will save us if the navy fails; for the hour of trial will come, and the ships being conquered, the territorial defence of London will be "nowhere." The Times then recommends that the latter be taken as the second string to our bow, but that we rely entirely and wholly upon the navy, "strong and well administered," for our chief city's safety, and our national security. Such are the sad conclusions of the secular writers and scientists of the day! God is not in all their thoughts! They reject the Identity and all its teachings, and consequently are utterly dejected and miserable about their country's future, and as to the safety of its metropolis! They see the people of this land will not expend their money to create a vast and ruinously extravagant navy, and they therefore recommend what others on the same side are perfectly aware is no remedy at all! The sea defence on an adequate scale is unattainable, and the land project is vain and worthless!

Digitized by Google

Despair therefore ought to be the portion of both Sir Edward Hamley and of the editor of the Times! It will yet be seen, however, that the people of these Islands by no means share the terrors of their advisers and friends. They will not spend 100 millions or so to create a navy which shall be everywhere and defend everything; and they are not likely to follow Sir Edward Hamley in a project for territorial defence, which the Times sees will be vain and futile, if the fighting ships fail us in the last extremity! What then is to be done? We prefer to accept Our Identity and its teachings; resting satisfied that the British, being Israel, God has promised to keep them as the apple of His eye, and their land from the insult of the alien's intrusion! The promise in 2 Sam vii. 10 stands good still. These islands are the "place" appointed for Israel's safe domicile under the guarantee of God's own protection, and here they may and always will rest secure, as He is true! Their Gates are to be open continually, and never shut by day or night, that men may bring to them the wealth or imports from alien lands and nations. The Lord distinguishes them by every species of goodness and mercy, giving them wealth and commerce abnormal, riches phenomenal, and dominion and extension quite unprecedented. He has blessed them in their city, their stores, their armies and navies, making them the head and not the tail, above only and not beneath all the alien races of the earth.

With rich spiritual blessings, He has also endowed them, giving them the Word of God to enjoy, and then to disseminate throughout the world. He has granted them His Sabbaths, His ten true laws, the evangelising function, and almost universal respect for His holy precepts as contained in the Scriptures of truth, that they may live thereby according to His holy will. So favoured, is He likely to leave His people a prey to their enemies, and put them, after a thousand years of safety and protection such as no other people have enjoyed, to open shame in the sight of the whole world? Impossible! Therefore we counsel our readers to cling to their most comforting Israelitish belief which has for its support the experience of God's dealings with us for the past millennium, and those promises, for the whole future of the race, which are so abundantly recorded in the Word of God for our especial learning. We can get no true comfort from attending to either Sir Edward Hamley, or the Times newspaper. No extravagant preparations for defence will ever satisfy minds that refuse to recognise the God of His people Israel! Do what we will, the impossible will yet be demanded by minds which, deprived of the satisfaction God has provided for us, still require greater and yet greater sacrifices, to secure that which God Himself has promised us without money and without price. Besides, of whom are we to be afraid? There are but three great maritime Powers likely to attempt the invasion of England! There are France, Italy and Russia. Germany we can hardly yet describe as a "great naval Power." Of these, Italy is our friend! Russia has no chance of coping with the British navy, or sparing the 100,000 men needed to land a successful invading force in these islands. There remains, then, only France! But France has her quarrel to settle with Germany, and is she likely to provoke a powerful enemy like the British in her rear while she is fighting her duel with the Germans! The whole thing is absurd! Our security is from the Lord! He will keep us, His people, as the apple of His eye, and if He be for us, who can be against us? Therefore, let Israel praise the Lord, and taking all due precautions that are possible, leave her national safety in the hands of Him who truly cares for her, and loves her, because of the anointing!

THE ANNUAL MEETING of the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association was held at Exeter Hall, on Thursday, the 24th inst. The Hon. Oliver Lambart presided. Speeches were delivered by Rev. H. John Hatch, M.A.; Rev. Robert Douglas, M.A.; E. W. Bird, Esq.; Rev. J. Idrisyn Jones, M.A.; and Rev. James P. Britton. A full report of the speeches will be given in our next issue.

THE PAPAL DECREE REGARDING THE IRISH CONSPIRACY.

THE wonderful fact, that the Pope of Rome and the Holy Office have come forward as the guardians of public morality, and fulminated "a bolt from the blue," stamping out the iniquity of "Boycotting" and "the Plan of Campaign," deserves notice in our pages, and some explanation of the matter from the standpoint of Our Identity. The first thing that strikes the imagination is, that the Pope and his Holy Office have, in Catholic countries, and over his Catholic spiritual subjects, enormous power. What the British Government is laboriously trying to put down in a legal and constitutional way, the Pope effects by a single blow, as a spiritual Power. He promulgates a decree, and forthwith the Irish Bishops, the Irish Priests, and the Roman Catholic conspirators, banded in iniquity, receive a blow which fells them all to the ground, and obey they must, by abandoning "the Plan of Campaign," as well as the cruel device of Boycotting, under pain of the forfeiture of absolution at the hands of the priests! The force of the decree is well stated by a writer from Rome, corresponding with the Times, who, on May 12, thus described the effects of the Pope's fulmination in its pages:—

> If any Bishop refuses to publish the decree as ordered to his clergy he will be subject to the discipline of the Church; and if the clergy charged by the Bishop do not publish it to the people, they, in turn, are subject to the admonitions of the Bishop; and once the publication is made, no priest can give absolution to a member of his flock who persists in the practice of Boycotting or the Plan of Campaign; and any Bishop who opposes the decree will have a chance to explain his position to the Pope in person. There has been no question of Dr. Walsh resigning; he must undo the ill he has done; but if he refuses to conform, which is not regarded as a probability, he will be liable to removal, though any attempt to foresee what the Pope will do in any given case is futile and presumptuous.

So great and so imperious is the Roman Pontiff in matters wherein he has jurisdiction! Such would be his authority and power if British-Israel were ever, unhappily, to fall under his iron rule! The Roman Catholic Church, it appears, regards "the Plan of the Campaign," as well as "Boycotting," as "demoralising and incriminating," which, doubtless, they both are. But the Roman Catholic Bishops and the Romish Priests of Ireland have never discovered this during the past many months, while they have been urging the infatuated people of Ireland, their unhappy co-religionists, to put both in practice! They have, on the contrary, aided and abetted them in all sorts of violent and illegal practices—murder, robbery, and cruelty toward men and animals, being carried out as the secret and final sanctions to enforce the orders of the irresponsible tyrants of the people. The Irish Roman Catholic Bishops and Priests are, morally, responsible for all the crimes and miseries of the Irish in the disturbed districts; and now they stand condemned before the world by their own spiritual authorities, the Pope and his Holy Office! The veiled rebellion almost killed by steady Government, and the unflinching operation of the law put in force against all those who break it, receives its coup de grace from the Pope of Rome, who appears suddenly as the supporter of law and order, and the ally of those who are endeavouring to beat down the enemies of the Union. How do we account for this strange phenomenon? Does the Pope act simply from love of law and order, and hatred of the rebellion of his Irish, spiritual children against the good Protestant Government of Queen Victoria? We think that hardly likely! The fact remains, that for whatever cause and with whatever object, the congregation of the Holy Office has declared that "Roman Catholics, who are members of the League, are guilty of sin, and, eo ipso, rendered incapable of receiving absolution!" No Priest of Rome dares to resist this decree, confirmed and published as it is by the Pope, with his imprimatur. It follows, then, that Irish rebellion, as conducted heretofore, is cut in two, and must crumble into dust!

Digitized by Google

We see no reason to search for the cause of this sudden reinforcement to the cause of British law and order, in the direction of some promise of help to Rome, on the part of the British Government. No Government would dare, we think, to purchase victory in Ireland at such a price as that! We incline to the belief that the Pope's strange action, so long delayed, has been taken for very shame at the scandal brought upon the so-called Catholic religion, by the flagrant support of crime by his Bishops and Priests in Ireland; and a scandal, which should never have been winked at at all, has at last been visited with sudden condemnation, to the great advantage of our body politic, and of Irish happiness and well-being.

In the face of the coming European troubles, and the mighty convulsion so close at hand, it was needful that Israel should be in security in her isles. God has shown us, then, that all powers, even those wielded by His enemies, are available for Himself and for His people, when He calls them forth; and therefore, He has permitted the Papal Decree to issue to put down Irish rebellion, after the facts have proved the complicity of Irish Romanist Bishops and Priests in sickening crimes. The long acquiescence of the Papacy in their conduct, till further silence would have been discreditable in the eyes of other Roman Catholic subjects throughout the world (the large majority), shows, also, its long deferred interference does not now arise from the love of truth and justice, but because further silence would have been inconvenient and inopportune. The event brings us, as its result, a blessing, for which, as the good gift of God, we must be thankful. Ireland, with the Pope's assistance, we hope, will now be reduced to submission. Peace and prosperity restored, the Gospel will, we trust, "have free course" among the now rebellious Irish, "and be glorified." Then will Israel, in peace and safety, dwell "carelessly and confidently," according to the prophecies, in her island home, hidden in her chambers, and within her closed Gates and doors; what time the earthquake "war-woe" desolates "yonder ill-consolidated Europe," and spares her in her blessed abode, by the mercy of the Lord. To Him shall then be all the praise for the pacification of Ireland, by whatever means it may have pleased Him to effect it.

THE MIGHT AND GRANDEUR OF A UNITED EMPIRE.

"UNION is strength," and at the present moment the government of the day rules by virtue of that sentiment which declares that the political union of the kingdom is essential to the Empire's safety.

The watchword of the times we live in is Union—Unionists on the one side, and Separatists who would ruin the Empire, on the other, constitute the two political parties who are struggling for power in our midst. This question is the burden of most of our public political meetings, and it was undoubtedly the text on which most of Lord Salisbury's great speech at Carnarvon was based, on April 10th. The adhesion of the better portion of the Liberal party to the Conservative government, making it a strong and irresistible combination on Unionist lines is one of the most remarkable facts of our day. Had this section of the Liberals held aloof, and preferred their party to their country, no doubt Mr. Gladstone would have returned to power; the union between Great Britain and Ireland would then have been probably dissolved, and the end would have certainly been the disruption of the Empire, and the disappearance of the British nation from among the great and mighty Powers of the earth. Lord Salisbury, in the peroration of his speech, brought the fact before the country very forcibly, and declared the nation's duty to-day, in terms which cannot be mistaken. He said:—

It is futile to say that because the Irish can boast of a separate nationality, or, rather, as I should put it, can boast of two separate nationalities, that therefore they must have, whether for their prosperity or not, separate political institutions. If that doctrine is to be carried out, Ireland must be separated, Scotland also, and Wales, and probably Northumbria and East Anglia. Surely this is not the future to set before those who desire to raise their people and their country in the scale of human beings. We have difficulties enough to face and problems enough to settle. We have a population constantly growing in a limited island. We have all the difficulties of vicissitudes in prosperity and adversity, the increasing claims of the poor, the increasing difficulties of the rich. We have looming before us political questions such as never were presented to the world to settle before, the relations between capital and labour, and the like. All these things we have to do in the midst of other nations who are striving by our side, envying our Empire, occupying our markets, encroaching upon our sphere, and whose efforts, unless we are wideawake and united and enterprising, will end in diminishing still further our means of supporting our vast industrial population. (Hear, hear.) We have to perfect to the utmost the great industrial and political Empire which our forefathers have left us. Surely we may turn to you to join in saying this—that it is better we should, instead of wasting our time and resources and faculties in carrying out our own separate antagonisms and neutralizing mutually our forces thereby—it is better, far better, that we should teach the people that their inevitable and indissoluble fate is to be united together; that a great future lies before them; and that, together, they will carry forward to a splendid destiny the might and the grandeur of a United Empire. (Loud cheers, during which Lord Salisbury resumed his seat.)

Such are the means, and powerful they are, which God is using to defeat the enemies of His people, who would divide, and so destroy and reduce the power of the great and mighty nation (which God determined they should become), and bring them to the condition of one of the fifth or sixth rate races of the earth. Mr. Gladstone, seeking for political support, deems that the cry of "Separation" will bring it to him, and so votes for Irish "Home Rule." Those who use Mr. Gladstone as their willing servant, have aims and objects behind them which he conveniently does not profess to see. But the object is really "separation," disintegration and ruin; and God has defeated it by combination—Unionism—and common sense, But all this has taken place according to the prophecies. For the British are the Lost Ten Tribes, and to them as their "appointed place," of safety and of refuge, God has granted the Isles of the West, the Isles afar off from Palestine, described in Isa. xxiv. 15, xli. 1, xlii. 4, xlix. 1; Jer. xxxi. 10 (R.V.) These Isles are theirs unitedly; and no hint is contained in Scripture showing in the remotest degree that the time will ever come when these two sister Isles, appointed as Israel's own, shall be divided asunder politically, and form the abode of two hostile peoples, who have parted from each other in anger.

These islands are "the place of their own" mentioned in 2 Sam. vii. 10. These, Israel must enjoy as their domicile for ever, under a divine decree, which is therefore immutable, and safe from all the attacks such men are capable of making, as Mr. Charles Parnell and his Irish friends, even when reinforced by a political, but happily now, aged giant, like William Ewart Gladstone, ex-Prime Minister of England, and leader of Her Majesty's Opposition! Lord Salisbury, then, and the Liberal Unionists who help him, are fighting a winning battle! The victory is certain from the nature of things. Israel's empire is to be universal, and never divided at all! It is already a nation and a company of nations, according to the prophecies; and there can be no rift formed in the company of nations, which ever look to the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland for their inspiration, example and government. Lord Salisbury, in his speech at Carnarvon, told us that he looked for might and grandeur in the nation whose destinies he is at present guiding, as Her Majesty's chief servant or minister. But, so says the Word of God of Israel's race. "Seeing that Abraham shall surely become a great and mighty nation, and all the nations of the earth shall be blessed in him," is the testimony of God Himself in Gen. xviii. 18, (R.V.) The might and grandeur of Israel (therefore of Great Britain,) can only accompany a united empire—Lord Salisbury being our witness, and consequently we affirm that this empire, which is certain to be what God declared it should become, must remain united and consolidated, according to the prophecies,—to dominate and rule the world by beneficence, and love, and Christian, righteous government and rule. If the subject be carefully considered, it will be easily perceived that for the work the Lord created, made and formed Israel, it was necessary she should be, to qualify her for the work, a great, mighty, grand, as well as a united empire. Without these qualifications she had had no influence in the world, and the heathen could have had no necessity to listen to her counsels, or to obey her teachings. Without greatness she had had no wealth; and wealth, God declares, He requires in Israel, that He may establish His covenant which He sware unto their fathers as it is this day" (Deut. viii. 18, R.V.) We thank God that we answer in every respect to the Scriptural portrait of the long lost people, and that not one feature is missing or doubtful in the original. Let Israel therefore praise the Lord for her nation's might and grandeur; and see that the united empire bring the praise and glory that He demands to the King of Israel, the Lord Jehovah-Jesus.

Digitized by Google

THE PASTORAL OFFICES OF THE LORD JESUS CHRIST.

THE subject of the Clifton Conference during Oct. 4, 5, and 6, was "The Pastoral Offices of Christ"; and the subject was regarded from three points of view. These were, "Christ the Good Shepherd in His vicarious death" (John x. 11), being the leading text. Next, "Christ the Great Shepherd of the sheep, in His triumphant resurrection," referred to in Heb. xiii. 20; and lastly, "Christ the Chief Shepherd at His second appearing," described in 1 Peter v. 4. Many and beautiful were the ideas which the openers of these topics enunciated, and those who followed shed light upon the subjects proposed for discussion at the Conference. We are not prepared to raise any objection at all to the views of the various speakers, in reference to the functions, the glory, the majesty and power of the good, the great, the chief Shepherd of the flock, because we know that He is the King of Israel, the Lord of Lords, the King of Kings, the Redeemer of His chosen people Israel, by whom and through whom they are delivered from the power of darkness and translated into the kingdom of God's dear Son; having redemption through His blood, and forgiveness of sins (Col. i. 13, 14). What we do regret, however, is, that from first to last during this edifying and successful Conference, the sheep for whom the Good Shepherd died, for whom the Great Shepherd rose from the dead, and to glorify whom the Chief Shepherd will appear a second time in power, were described throughout as "the believers in the Lord Jesus Christ," represented chiefly by the members of the Conference, so far as they were His true disciples; but not a word was said recognising the Ten-Tribed House of Israel as His sheep, to redeem whom He died, rose again, and will come down the second time to raise them to glory as His subjects. We quite admit that the promises of the Lord to the whole House of Israel are applicable in all respects to each individual member of the flock, as if they were made only to each. Two instances by way of proof occur to us. The first is found in Psa. xxiii., where the Lord's office of Shepherd to Israel is claimed by the Spirit for each member of the House. "The Lord is my Shepherd, I shall not want; He maketh me to lie down in green pastures, He leadeth me beside the still waters. He restoreth my soul: He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake"; and so on. Here all the blessings are individualised and claimed by David for himself, and for each individual who can honestly use the words. Here is Christ—the full Christ—the Shepherd, good and great, of His people claimed and accepted for each separate soul or sheep of the flock.

The other instance is St. Paul's appropriation of the Christ of the New Testament as his own Redeemer, as though He had died and risen again for him alone. The words occur in Gal. ii. 20: "I am crucified with Christ; nevertheless I live. Yet not I, but Christ liveth in me, and the life which I now live I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me and gave Himself for me"! St. Paul appropriated the full Christ to himself, and declared, as though Christ had died for him alone, "He loved me, and gave Himself for me." While this is quite true, what we want to observe with reference to the Clifton Conference is, that while the individual sinner's needs and blessings were dwelt on with immense and proper emphasis, not a word was said of the other tremendous fact, that the Good Shepherd, the Lord Jesus, died for His people, the Tribes of Israel; that He rose again as the Great Shepherd in triumph to redeem them; and that as the Chief Shepherd He will come again to glorify them and to glorify Himself in them.

These facts can easily be proved from Scripture, from the New as well as from the Old Testament alike. Why did the speakers and offerers of prayer at the Clifton Conference utterly ignore these facts as irrelevant to their object? Let us glance at the proofs of these matters, taking the Scripture for our guide.

The Good Shepherd and His vicarious death were illustrated by John x. 11. What does the context teach us? In chap. ix. 40, 41, we find the Lord's audiences were the Pharisees, who objected to His doctrine, which pointed to the fact that they were "blind" and sinners. In chap. x. the Lord replied to them by a parable which they failed to understand (ver. 6). The parable asserted that there was a "fold" of sheep enclosed and secured by a door. The Shepherd, Jesus said, was He who entered by that door, who was no stranger to the enclosed sheep. "He came to His own," and for His own He had to lay down His life, thus proving that He was the Good Shepherd of that flock—no stranger, no hireling, no robber (ver. 5, 8, and 12). Do not these indications prove that the Lord spoke by parable then of the House of Judah—that flock folded in Judea, to whom He came, and who, rejecting Him, caused Him to die for them? Of Caiaphus, in chap. xi. 52 (R.V.), it is distinctly asserted that he prophesied that "Jesus should die for that nation, and not for that nation only, but that He might gather together into one 'the children of God' (comp. Hos. i. 10) that are (and once were) scattered abroad." This distinctly pointed to the other fold, whom the Lord said in chap. x. 16, "He must bring (or lead), and they SHALL hear My voice; and they shall become one flock, one Shepherd." Surely here is an indication of the call, not of the Gentiles, but of the Lo-Ammi Gentilized Israelites of Joseph or Ephraim. Isa. lxv. 1 proves that call was to be the call of "a nation" not called by Christ's name; a nation "who inquired for Him, but did not ask for Him;" who found, but did not seek for Him; to whom the Lord Himself said, "Behold Me! behold Me!" while Judah was in rebellion (ver. 2). Ezek. xxxvii. 15 to 28, tells us that the final result will be the union of the two flocks in one fold, with one Shepherd over them both; and Matt. xxi. 43, declares that after the Shepherd's vicarious sacrifice the kingdom of God was destined to be taken from the Jews and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof, therefore fulfilling Israel's rôle as described in Isa. xxvii. 6 (R.V.). The sheep, therefore, described in the first passage which furnished the key-note to the Clifton Conference, related to the Israelitish sheep of Israel and Judah, but not to Gentiles; including, no doubt, all who from the outside world should believe through their means, and so become "adopted sons" of Abraham themselves (Isa. lvi. 3 to 8).

Digitized by Google

The next text relied on was Heb. xiii. 20, to show that "the Great Shepherd of the sheep would prove the fact by His triumphant resurrection." The passage is contained in a book addressed to Hebrews converted to Christ. The Great Shepherd, the Lord Jesus, was a Hebrew of the House of Judah. The covenant referred to sealed by blood was made with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and Israel in Egypt and Sinai, but with no other race whatsoever; and our Lord Jesus was a minister of the circumcision for the truth of God, to confirm the promises made to the fathers, who were the Hebrew fathers, but not otherwise.

The last text relied upon to establish the third aspect of the question, namely, that the Lord Jesus is the Chief Shepherd at His second appearing, was quoted from 1 Peter v. 4, an epistle addressed to the Ten Tribes converted to Christ, as 1 Peter i. 1, 2 (R.V.) prove, and to them is addressed this comforting promise, "When the Chief Shepherd shall be manifested YE shall receive the crown of glory that fadeth not away." Here is a Ten-Tribed promise, and it was right, and just, and proper, that this view should have been put before the Conference as well as the one adopted, to the glory of the grace of Him who came to redeem Israel, to be their Governor and Shepherd, as stated in Matt. ii. 6, quoting Micah v. 2: "And thou, Bethlehem, land of Judah, art in no wise least among the princes of Judah; for out of thee shall come forth a Governor which shall be SHEPHERD of My people ISRAEL."

A CRITICISM OF A SERMON.

Being a paper read before the Cashel Clerical Union

BY THE REV. DENIS HANAN, B.D.

THE following is a cutting from the Daily Express newspaper, Dublin:—

THE JEWISH NATION: A MIRACLE.

A special sermon to Jews and Christians was preached in St. Peter's Church on Sunday evening last by the Rev. M. Wolkenberg upon the above subject. There was a large Christian congregation, including some 50 Jews, who came in response to the invitation of the rector, the Rev. Canon Jellet. His Grace the Lord Archbishop of Dublin was attracted by the novelty of the occasion, and he gave the benediction at the close of the service.

The preacher—himself a Christian Israelite—basing his discourse on Jer. xxx. 11, xxxi. 34—40, said—Miracles and prophecy were the two indispensable credentials and the bulwarks of revealed religion, and these were designed by God for the purpose of preparing men to receive the message delivered in His name. Mosaism, as well as Christianity, were ushered into the world with signs and wonders, which ceased only when they had taken such deep root as to admit of a spontaneous growth and expansion. Miracles and prophecy were such signs, yet with this difference, that while the former, having lost their evidential force in process of time, are now only objects of faith or dispute; the latter are becoming more and more confirmatory as the events announced are being accomplished. Where is this more strikingly illustrated than in the continued national existence of the Jewish people? Though not possessing at the time of the prophet Jeremiah those ties by which a nation is held together they were still to remain a distinct and separate people. Whilst the Babylonians, the Assyrians, the Persians, Greeks, and the Romans, who, each in turn, swayed the destinies of mankind, have passed away, and nothing but ruins remain to tell of their former glory and magnificence, Israel alone has survived the wreck of the ancient world. Oppressed and ground down by each in turn, He has seen them rise one after the other, like so many bubbles on the stream of time, and vanish, to appear no more. In spite of the universal conspiracy formed against them in all ages, the Jews are, probably, as numerous and as full of vital energy to-day as they were in the days of David and Solomon; and it is because he has yet a mission to fulfil, that, by Divine grace, they had been kept a separate and distinct people until now, and, according to the text, shall remain as such until his mission shall have been accomplished fully.

This report, although so condensed, may safely be taken as giving the exact views of the preacher, insomuch as that they are the views generally accepted, viz.,—That the Jews to-day, by their continued separate existence, manifest the truth of God, and fulfil the prophecies concerning Israel. To show this the preacher selected as his texts the statements of Jer. xxx. and xxxi. The special verses taken being inseparable from their context, was he justified in assuming that the Jew fulfils these prophecies, or that they were applicable to Judah as a separate nation?

I maintain that the predictions given in these wonderful chapters (xxx. to xxxiii.) do not refer to a Jewish nation, that Judah has a very secondary place in them: that the Jews are not now, and never will be, the alone instruments in their fulfilment, and that the present position of the tribe of Judah can never convince the infidel, or the unprejudiced believer, that these prophecies are fulfilled in that people.

Let us in the first place consider the present position of the Jews. By the preacher's statement they are about as numerous and as full of vital energy to-day as at the period of their greatest glory: thus, although the peoples of the world have increased enormously, they are at least stationary, and in comparison with modern nations they are no more remarkable than the present day representatives of the past glories of Egypt, Babylon, Assyria, Persia, Greece, or Rome.

Prophecy declared that these nations should be represented to the end, and they do exist; so also Judah has a destiny to fulfil, and she continues to exist. But wherein does this continuance of Judah in her low estate witness to the truth of prophecies concerning Israel's glory, or partake of a more "miraculous" character, than does the continued life of the other nations, or if her scattered and comparatively wandering state be mentioned, wherein—with reference to the texts quoted,—is she more remarkable than the gipsies, wanderers in all lands but not amalgamated? It is predicted in chapter xxx. that "their nobles shall be of themselves and their Governor shall proceed from the midst of them, i.e., that the people should be independent,—self-governed,—Judah is not a nation, has no autonomy, but is ruled by strangers in all lands, the race oppressed everywhere (except in England), has no fount of honour, no nobility, and no rulers of its own.* It is predicted that none shall make them afraid: this is not fulfilled in the Juden-hate and Juden-hunt of Germany and Russia. It is predicted in the special verses selected, that as surely as the sun and moon continue Israel should never cease to be a nation, and in chapter xxxiii. it is repeated, until sun and moon depart the house of David should rule over the nation, the seed of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. Judah is no more a nation than are the Zingri; she has no king, much less one of David's heirs. In fact, if the preacher's object was totally different, and had he desired to show that Judah's existence was not a miraculous fulfilment of prophecy, he could not have done better than select the chapters from which he has taken his texts.

The preacher may have meant to convey that the prophecies have yet to be fulfilled, and that Judah has been preserved in her subordinate position in order that she may yet become a self-governed and powerful nation. But the prophecies were to have a constant development, as constant as the shining of the sun and moon. The new covenant has been in operation for close on 19 centuries, and no mercy has been extended to Judah; it is all very well to say that it will be, but wherein is Judah's miraculous evidence to be discerned now? Nevertheless, these chapters are among some of the most wonderful in our wonderful Book. As they declare, "In the latter days ye shall consider it," and the literal fulfilment to-day to the people of whom the statements were made is a wonderful and miraculous

* The effort made in the Speaker's Commentary upon Jer. xxx. 21, to shew that this is solely a prophecy of Messiah, overlooks the fact that He did not spring from those of "the captivity of Jacob's tents:" and is manifestly a piece of special pleading caused by the supposed exigencies of the case.

Digitized by Google

testimony to the covenant faithfulness and overruling power of God, Who gives to His first-born the birthright blessing, and to the other tribes their allotted portion.

The prophecy was concerning Israel and concerning Judah. "The captivity of Jacob's tents" had taken place when Jeremiah wrote in Jerusalem in the midst of the yet undisturbed Jewish commonwealth. "The land of Judah" is distinct from the "mountains of Samaria." It was the captivity of Jacob's tents,—i.e., the captivity of Ephraim-Israel, that was to be overthrown; God then, B.C. 606, reminds Ephraim that he was "His firstborn," (i.e., about 140 years after the Assyrian captivity). It was Ephraim-Israel who was to become independent, self-ruled, their nobles and their governors being of themselves; it was this house of Jacob that was to be a nation forever, made afraid by none, and of whom it was said, "Sing with gladness for Jacob, and shout among the chief of the nations." Now, first, because it is expressly stated that Judah is to be blessed with Israel, and just because Israel's captivity is expressly mentioned, and Ephraim's birthright position reaffirmed: it is absolutely necessary that the two lines of prediction should be recognised, and that the notion that one house could represent the other, or receive the portion entailed upon the other, should be overthrown. The remnant of Judah, sprung from the 42,000 who returned from Babylon, can no more be the firstborn, Joseph, than can the descendants of Esau be the inheritors of Jacob's blessings.

It is only by a complete lethargy of the critical faculty that Bible readers can imagine that Judah is to fulfil Ephraim's destiny, and I think I have shown that such a notion would be compatible only with the non-fulfilment, and not with the fulfilment, of the promises to Israel.

It would be as reasonable to assert that because all greyhounds are dogs, therefore, all dogs are greyhounds, as to say that because all Jews are Israelites, therefore all Israelites are Jews; and yet this is the ludicrous, nay, rather, the deplorable error which by some mysterious obliquity of mental power is uttered and repeated again and again in pulpit and from platform, in books and papers, without awakening a sense of its ridiculousness, or an effort to correct it.

Those whom we now know as the Jews are the people mentioned in the prophecy as Judah: their history is well known from the time of their overthrow by Titus. Their future is plainly told: they are to remain separate from Israel until the fusion takes place which Ezekiel distinctly foretells, and which is also referred to in our chapters.

The history of the other house, Ephraim-Israel, God's firstborn, to whom belongs, "the blessings of heaven above, blessing of the deep that lieth under, blessings of the breasts and of the womb," blessings "unto the utmost bound of the everlasting hills," the becoming a multitude in the midst of the earth, a nation and a company of nations, of whom it shall be said, as the acme of blessing, "God make thee as Ephraim and as Manasseh," is not known. Since the Assyrian captivity Israel has been hidden, yet it must exist, for not a grain was to fall to the earth: and Judah cannot be restored until the other house be manifested (Jer. iii. 18). Because of redemption of the firstborn (xxxi. 11,) they shall come and sing in the height of Zion. And yet strange to say, Christian men who pray for the peace of Jerusalem, and make efforts for the evangelization of Judah, do not manifest any interest in the house of Joseph!

One explanation of this apathy I would mention. It is said, chapter xxxi. 31 and elsewhere, that God would make a new covenant with the House of Israel and with the House of Judah. The new covenant is the Christian. Because Judah has not accepted this covenant it is assumed that Israel is yet outside it. But this does not follow. Ephraim might have been evangelised centuries since. Ephraim was represented as bemoaning himself at the time that Jeremiah wrote, and Hosea distinctly tells that during her expulsion—her wilderness state—she was to be rebetrothed and greatly blessed, and Jeremiah says the people that were left of the sword found grace in the wilderness, even Israel when I went to cause him to rest. 2 Esdras xiii. 40 records that they did repent, and Heredotus incidentally confirms the statement.

Our blessed Lord, when predicting that the kingdom would be taken from Judah, said that it would be given to a nation; and so great was His well-known sympathy with the lost sheep of the House of Israel, that, when He said that He would go where the Jews could not find Him, they immediately conjectured, will He go to the dispersed among the Gentiles and teach them? Now supposing that these prophecies and predictions and divine sympathies led to the bringing of Ephraim-Israel into the new covenant, what would be the result? Israel would then be "obedient," and upon Israel obedient the fulness of blessing would be poured out (Deut. xxviii.). Numbers, Empire, wealth, power, the Gates of the world, the capacity to exercise the goel's duties, to free the captive, and to bless. Obedient she must become a nation and a company of nations, and the heathen become her inheritance, the blessings to come upon Joseph obedient, are unto the utmost bound of the everlasting hills, they "prevail above" all others, they are temporal and spiritual, material and religious, in a word, they are the inheritance of the firstborn nation of God.

But each and all of these great gifts have been made the inheritance of the Anglo-Saxon race. There is no room in this wide world for a reduplication of them. England reformed and obedient is in possession, and if England is the rightful and predestined owner, then the English nation is the miracle, and the witness to the truth of God.

Just as conspicuously as Judah fails to fulfil the portraiture, so perfectly our race fits it, and if God has so changed His purpose, as to give to a non-Abrahamic race the birthright position of Israel, then it is vain to expect that Judah will be more faithfully treated. Instead of shirking the question, and being content with regarding "the Jewish nation a miracle," it is the part of a wise man to look the inevitable in the face, viz., If Israel is not in existence, or if, though in existence, God has transferred her inheritance and her witness to a Gentile race, then any and every other covenant promise to Judah, to the Church, to us, may share the like fate, and the truth of God turned into a lie. But if (and as we shall one day acknowledge) each promise, prophecy, covenant and blessing has been bestowed upon us because of the covenant with our forefather Abraham, which covenant (note this well) was confirmed in Christ, then there is hope for Judah, comfort for the Church, continued blessing for our race, and peace upon the Israel of God.

A BARMOUTH ISRAELITE'S WAY OF PROCLAIMING HIS BELIEF.

ALL honour to Mr. Hugh Owen, of "Gomerian House," Barmouth! We have been favoured by some visitors to that spot, during the present summer, with the outside of one of his business paper-bags, showing how, as the head of a millinery and drapery establishment there, he has resolved that his customers shall learn something of the Identity, and see "the reason why" of the matter, as well as a few of the Scriptural proofs of the position he has taken upon the question. It is not given to us all to have the courage of our convictions in so bold a fashion as that exhibited by Mr. Hugh Owen. We may all imitate him, however, in our own degree, according to our opportunities, if only we take advantage of the opening God puts in our way, and make known "the Identity of the British with Israel," on such occasions, in such ways, as lie open to us. Mr. Owen's notice on his bags is this:—

Digitized by Google

HEAD, AND NOT THE TAIL.

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people, as a LION among the beasts of the forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep, who if he go through both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—Micah v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the horns of UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ends of the earth."—Deut. xxxiii. 17.

"Mine heritage is unto me as a LION in the forest." Jer. xii. 8.

THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL FOUND IN THE BRITISH NATIONS.

Reasons Why.	Scriptural Proofs.
Meaning of our Royal Arms.	Num. xxiv. 8, 9; Jer. xii. 8.
The Head Nation.	Gen. xxxv. 11; Deut. xxviii. 13.
The Company of Nations.	Gen. xlviii. 19; Rom. iv. 17, 18.
The Wealthy Nation.	Deut. xv. 6; xxviii. 11, 12.
The Nation great on Land and Sea.	Isa. xli. 15; Lev. xxvi. 8, 9.
The Nation of Missionaries.	Isa. xlix. 6; Acts xiii. 47.
The Keepers of the Sabbath.	Ex. xxxi. 13, 17; Ezek. xx. 12.
Successful Colonisers.	Isa. liv. 2, 3; xlix. 18, 22.

FROM HUGH OWEN'S Millinery and Drapery Establishment, GOMERIAN HOUSE, BARMOUTH.

Fancy Stationery and Repository. Wools and Fancy Work. Extensive Stock of Photo Views of North and South Wales, etc. Large Assortment of Articles with Welsh Local Views for Presents.

EAST-CENTRAL AFRICA.

YESTERDAY afternoon a meeting was held at the Westminster Palace Hotel to consider the question of the attacks and threatened attacks on mission stations in East Central Africa by slave-raiding Arabs and by the Portuguese.

The chair was taken by Lord Balfour of Burleigh, and among those present were Lord Roseberry, Lord Aberdeen, Sir Charles Dalrymple, M.P., Sir George Campbell, M.P., Sir Donald Currie, M.P., Mr. William Hunter, M.P., Mr. Allison, M.P., Professor Henry Drummond, Bishop Smythies (of the East Central African Universities' Mission), the Rev. J. M'Murtrie (Convener of the Church of Scotland's Foreign Mission Committee and of sub-Committee on Africa), the Rev. T. M. Lindsay (Convener of the Free Church of Scotland's Foreign Mission Committee), Dr. Geo. Smith (Secretary of the Free Church of Scotland's Foreign Mission Committee), and the Rev. Dr. Macleod.

The Chairman in opening the proceedings, said they were met to discuss the critical state of matters as regarded the apprehended extension of Portuguese interest over that portion of Africa in which they were all so much interested. It was not only in the interest of the missions, but of British trade and commerce that they wished to speak. The trade of that district was, so far as it had been developed, entirely in the hands of those who were friendly to the missions. Their apprehension was that the Portuguese might have their claims recognised by European countries over a large tract of territory. Their desire was that such steps as were possible should be taken to awaken the Government of this country, and the public opinion of this country, to a sense of the danger involved, and to endeavour to impress upon the Government the extreme inexpediency of giving any sanction to those claims. (Cheers.)

The Rev. J. M'Murtrie read letters of apology and regret at inability to be present from the following noblemen and gentlemen, among others:—The Duke of Argyll, Lord Watson, Mr. A. J. Balfour, M.P., Sir H. E. Maxwell, M.P., and Sir R. N. Fowler, M.P.

The Rev. Dr. Scott said the question was one of territory and limitation; they had been in possession of that land for 28 years, they had in actual possession in that territory 50 British representatives of the Scottish Churches, there were 18 British representatives of the Universities' Mission, and 25 at least of the African Lakes Company. They had the title deeds of their land; they had the treaties in existence, and the copies of those treaties were to be found in the Foreign Office to-day. With regard to the results of their occupation during that short period, they could show rivers and lakes navigated and roads constructed by British enterprise, and a company that was existing there and paying a dividend out of the legitimate profits of the undertaking. The natives had the utmost confidence in every British man, and the native chiefs sent their sons to the mission schools, and committed their daughters to the care of the missionaries' wives.

The Rev. Professor Lindsay, D.D., said that if they could not get a free inroad for British goods up the Zambesi or the Shire, their missionaries were separated from the world, and if that route was closed it was like taking the missionaries by the throat and strangling them. They asked for the recognition of that central district, altogether apart from German claims or Portuguese possession, as a sphere of British influence. They did not go into Lake Nyassa-land without encouragement from the British Government. Lord Clarendon's despatch made them go there. The missionaries were bound to take their lives in their hand, and they did so; but he thought that when Churches had been practically invited to go into a district to help the Government, following up the lines of that dispatch, the Government ought not, from questions of simple international policy, to abandon them there. They desired if possible to put down the slave trade which, since 1883, had increased enormously.

Professor Drummond said that question was one of the gravest political questions of the day. It was whether the Arab or the European was to rule in Africa. The Arabs were scattered everywhere, up and down the country. They were united; the Europeans were scattered and were not united. The Arabs were there only to prey upon the people; they had no homes, but settled down for a year or two, broke up a community, then disappeared. The Arabs had large sums of money supplied to them from Zanzibar, as well as weapons, and to put down the Arab invasion of the country pressure must be brought to bear upon the Sultan of Zanzibar. The Portuguese question was a different one to the Arab question. The Portuguese had never insisted that the country belonged to them when put to a really practical test. Nyassa-land had always been a kind of protégé of England. It was not enough for England to keep an eye upon the country, they wanted, at least, a protected Consul in the country. (Cheers.)

Bishop Smythies said that things on Lake Nyassa were in a very critical condition. There was no doubt that the English Government could help them if it would, but he thought great pressure would be necessary before it would do so. The reason why the position was so critical was that while there was a movement on the part of the Arabs there was also a movement on the part of the Portuguese on the Zambesi. After all the encouragement that had been given to British subjects to settle in the country and on Lake Nyassa, the Government should, at least, keep a free opening to the coast for them, and insist on a definite tariff at the mouth of the Zambesi. (Cheers.)

Mr. A. Silva White (of the Royal Scottish Geographical Society), Sir George Campbell, Sir Donald Currie, and other gentlemen having made some observations.

The Chairman moved the following resolution:—

"That this meeting having heard the statements made by the representatives of the Universities' Mission, of the Church of Scotland's Foreign Mission Committee, and of the Free Church of Scotland's Foreign Mission Committee, resolve to express their sympathy with the missionaries and other British subjects exposed to various dangers in East Central Africa, and to press upon the Government the necessity of considering the points brought before them in the statements submitted to the meeting—viz., (1) to secure free or favourable transit for British goods in British vessels from the coast into the interior; (2) to impress on the Government facts as to the increase in the slave trade, in connexion with the political changes at Zanzibar, and to take such action as may be required to check the slave trade; (3) to take what measures seem best to them to secure the safety of British subjects and British interests in Nyassa-land."

Mr. Buchanan seconded the resolution, which was thereupon agreed to.

Lord Aberdeen proposed a vote of thanks to the speakers, and the meeting concluded with a vote of thanks to the chairman.

—The Times, April 25, 1888.

THE ARMADA CELEBRATION.—The Committee of the Portsmouth Protestant Institute have unanimously passed the following Resolution: "That the Committee of the Portsmouth Protestant Institute learn with astonishment that the Committee appointed to make arrangements at Plymouth for celebrating the Defeat of the Spanish Armada in 1588, have asked the Duke of Norfolk to become President; they deeply regret that His Grace has been elected to this position on the specific understanding that religion should be ignored in the celebration, because His Grace cannot participate in anything tending to a triumph of Protestantism; and the Committee solemnly protest against the action of the Plymouth Committee, which they deem a dishonour to Him who blew with His wind and scattered an enemy which all history attests sought the destruction of Protestantism."

Digitized by Google

NOTICES.

All communications intended for the Editor, to be addressed: "Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Clifton, Bristol.

SUBSCRIPTIONS. £ s. d.

Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free 0 7 6
Two Copies (including Double Numbers) 0 13 6
Three Copies " " " 1 0 4
Four Copies " " " 1 5 6
Six Copies " " " 1 16 4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-grand, London, to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C., or F. W. PARRY & Co., 29, Paternoster-row, London.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

Contents Bills and Show Cards may be obtained on application to the Publishers.

Advertisements should be sent to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

Prepaid Advertisements are inserted at the rate of thirty words for 1s. 4d.

BLACKPOOL.— Anglo-Israelites will find COMFORTABLE APARTMENTS, Public or Private, near Sea or Gardens, at Mrs. Breakells, 39, Adelaide Street.

SPECIAL OFFER.

VOLUMES

II., III., IV., V., VI., VII. and VIII.

OF

ISRAEL'S HOPE

AND

DESTINY.

Edited by DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, Esq., J.P.

Bound in handsome cloth, gilt, are now offered, post free to any part of the World for 2s. 6d. per volume, or the Seven Volumes will be sent for 15s. Orders must be sent direct to the Publishers, ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet Court, Fleet Street, E.C., as they cannot be supplied through a Bookseller at this price.

Each Volume contains a large number of interesting and important articles on the Anglo-Israel Question Great Pyramid, and other Prophetical and Biblical Subjects.

Just published—Cloth, 2s. 6d.—a re-issue of

The Origin of Masonic Ritual and Tradition:

A Lecture on the Three Degrees, by BRO. WM. ROWBOTTOM, P.M., 1028, with facsimile of a very rare Masonic engraving published in 1789.

"Exquisitely clear and singularly correct in everything wherein I may be any authority or guide."—Professor PIAZZI SMYTH. "Will be found of considerable interest to many besides Masons."—Church Bells.

Oxford: S. Rowbottom and Son; London: R. Banks and Son, Racquet Court, Fleet Street, E.C.; and F. W. Parry and Co., 29, Paternoster Row, E.C.

Price Five Shillings.—"Substantially and attractively got up, and profusely illustrated."—Oldham Chronicle.

Eildon Grange: A Tale.

By ANDREW CLARK, M.A., Vicar of St. Michael's, Oxford. "One of the most charming books. . . . The illustrations are full of playful humour."—Scotsman. "The book is undoubtedly a happy one."—The Oxford Magazine. "Both entertaining and bracing."—Dundee Advertiser.

Oxford: S. Rowbottom and Son; London: Hamilton, Adams and Co., 32, Paternoster Row, E.C.

☞ Ask for this Book at the Libraries.

WORKS BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

The History of the House of Israel. How They Were Lost and How They Were Found. Told for the children. Price 6d., cloth 1s.; post free 7d. and 1s. 1d. Fifth edition.

A Resume of the Scriptural Argument Proving the Identity of the British Race with the Lost Ten Tribes. Price 1d.; 6s. per hundred, postage 6d.

Our Identity: What it is Not; What it is; and Our Obligations To-day in Respect to it Being a Lecture recently delivered in London by Philo-Israel, and published by special request. Price 2d., a reduction for quantities.

Are the English People the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel? An Inquiry Establishing the Identity of the British Nation with the Lost Ten Tribes. 4d.

London: Robert Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Post free 1s. 3d. per 100.

Cheap Leaflets Suitable for Free Distribution.

The British-Israel Identity Association, Liverpool, have on hand a quantity of that unanswerable four-page Leaflet, "The British Nation the Lost Ten Tribes—The Case Put Concisely," by the Right Rev. Bishop Titcomb, D.D. The Association Room having been given up as unsuitable, the address is—

E. LYON, 11, Magdala-street, Smithdown-road, Liverpool.

NEW BOOK BY DR. WILD.

Just Published, Price 3s., Cloth, Bevelled Boards, Gilt Lettered. Sent by Post on receipt of Published Price.

TALKS

FOR

THE TIMES.

BY JOSEPH WILD, M.A., D.D.,

Pastor of the Bond-st. Congregational Church, Toronto.

CONTENTS.—Chapter 1. A Gift of One Hundred and Ninety-Two Million Acres of Land. 2. The Return of the Jews to Palestine. 3. Folks that won't be Somebody. 4. The Four Prophecies of Egypt. 5. The Stone Kingdom and Dynamite; and the Orange Bill. 6. "144!" 7. "666!" 8. The Transit of Venus. 9. The Miracles of Antichrist; and the High Rock Image of Massachusetts, U.S. 10. The Man who could not sleep, and what came of it. 11. The Rainbow. 12. London Destroyed, and Jerusalem a Seaport. 13. Liberalism. 14. A Graft without a Stock. 15. Mouldy Bread and an Oath. 16. A Tombstone Inscription. 17. Dog Lappers. 18. How to get Rich.

MR. EDWARD HINE has returned from his lecturing tour in America. Friends wishing to arrange for him to lecture can communicate with Isaac Loveland, Shoreham, near Sevenoaks, Kent, at present fixing no dates. Mr. Hine's publications have had a large circulation, and can be obtained of F. W Parry & Co., 29, Paternoster Row, London, E.C.

Forty-Seven Identifications, 6d., post free 7d
Cui Bono? 6d., post free, 7d.
Lost Israel Found. 3s 6d., post free, 3s. 9d
Also The Nation Warned by the Scripture Teachings of the Great Pyramid. 6d., post, 7d.

Dr. JOSEPH WILD'S WORKS

The most useful works on the subject.

NEW EDITION JUST PUBLISHED.

THE LOST TEN TRIBES

Price 3s., post free 3s. 3d.

'We have much pleasure in directing attention to this handsome volume. . . We promise our readers that if they procure this work, and will peruse it, they will find 'Our Identity' discussed in a clear, novel, racy, and from an American point of view, which is sure to interest."—Banner of Israel.

THE FUTURE OF ISRAEL AND JUDAH.

Price 2s., post free 2s. 3d.

R. BANKS & SON, RACQUET-COURT, FLEET-ST.

WORKS BY PASTOR CHINIQUY.

Cloth, gilt lettered, 5s. Sent post free for P.O.

FIFTY YEARS IN THE CHURCH OF ROME.—Complete Revised Edition on good paper, well bound in Cloth, Gilt Lettered, nearly 600 pages. With New Portrait and Autograph of the Author. "No history like it since the time of Luther."—New York Witness. Be particular to order the Complete Edition published by Banks.

Price 6d. in paper covers; on toned paper, in cloth boards, gilt lettered, 1s., post free for stamps.

PAPAL IDOLATRY. An Exposure of the Dogma of Transubstantiation and Mariolatry, to which is added "My Reasons Why I will Never Go Back to the Church of Rome." The Bible Christian Magazine says:—"Unanswerable! The most powerful argument against Transubstantiation, in the same space, that we have read."

R. BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

Just Published, Crown 8vo., Cloth, price 3s. 6d.

BRITAIN IN HISTORY, ANCIENT AND MODERN;

Or, Proofs Linking Israel with Britain Throughout the Ages.

By Mrs. G. A. ROGERS,

Author of "The Coronation Stone," etc., etc.

"The Book possesses a national interest, and ought to be widely read."—The Fireside News.

"The most useful addition to Identity literature that has been made for a long time past."

Israel's Hope and Destiny.

"Well worthy of perusal for the rare and curious information conveyed."—Christian Age.

"This remarkable volume. . . We welcome this addition to the literature of Israel."—Banner of Israel.

"Interesting and suggestive."—English Churchman.

THE CORONATION STONE; And England's Interest in It

4th Thousand, Crown 8vo., Cloth, price 1s. 6d.

"A reverent and graceful little book."—Life and Work.

"An excellent account of the history and wanderings of the Stone. . . will be read and re-read."

Banner of Israel.

LONDON: J. NISBET & Co., Berners Street, and to be had of all Booksellers.

THE WATERS OF HERMON.

THE interesting circumstance of the re-production by modern science of these celebrated Waters of Antiquity, so famed in Biblical times, is one of the most important illustrations of the advance of the age. Differing from all other Waters they contain no mineral ingredients, so that the system, instead of being lowered by their use, is steadily built up, while the functions of life are restored to a healthy condition. And it is, therefore, with extreme gratification that this is now brought within the reach of the general public. The well-known curative properties of this famous medicine are promptly manifested in the following disorders:—Indigestion, Biliousness, Congestion of the Liver, Nausea and Vomiting, Disorders of the Stomach and Bowels and their consequences, Constipation, Piles, Flatulence, Repletion, Spasms, Discomfort or Pain after Meals, Pain Between the Shoulders, Pains in the Back and Loins, Cold in the Head, Coughs of various character, Difficulty of Breathing, Giddiness and Sick Headache, Effects of Alcohol, Overworked Brain, Affections of the Nerves, &c. Price 2s. 9d. per bottle, post free. THE WATERS OF HERMON DEPOT, 107, King Street, Hammersmith, London.

INVALUABLE REMEDY

New Work on the Identity of Lost Israel

By the late BISHOP TITCOMB.

Now ready, in Cloth Gilt, Bevelled Boards, Imperial 8vo. Price 3s.; sent Post Free for Postal Order or Stamps.

A MESSAGE TO THE CHURCH FROM THE NINETEENTH CENTURY

BY THE LATE

RT. REV. BISHOP TITCOMB, D.D.

ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet Court, Fleet Street.
F. W. PARRY & Co., 29, Paternoster Row, E.C.

SOUND, PURE, WHITE TEETH!

Those who value these will try

CARBOLINE

(The Great Sanitary Tooth Paste).

1/6 & 2/6 per Pot.

Through Chemists, or post free from the Makers,

GEORGE & WELCH

WORCESTER.

Lancet writes:—"To save the teeth use a good carbolic daily."

HUMAN LIFE.—FIFTY YEARS' Record of Facts, Principles, and Discoveries (just published, complete) Relating to the Improvement and Preservation of Human Life on Earth. Origin and true treatment of diseases. A series of articles by DR. SAMUEL BIRLEY, M.D., Ph.D. Book form, 50 pages. SENT FREE to every applicant by the publishers, GORDON B. MURRAY & CO., 50, Theobald's-road, Holborn, E.C. Write to-day

PIANOFORTES, Harmoniums, American Organs. Why buy at shops inferior made instruments, and pay large profits, when you can buy direct from the Maker High-class Instruments, and save 50 per cent. by so doing! Full value allowed for old Instruments in exchange as part payment. Write for Price Lists and Testimonials to G. LINSTEAD, 2, Oseney Crescent, Camden Road, London. Established 1874.

TORPID LIVER,

CONSTIPATION AND INDIGESTION.

Mrs. M. ANDERSON, Mortimer Street, Herne Bay, Kent, writes:—"I was suffering from a torpid, inactive liver, accompanied by constipation and indigestion. After wearing Harness' Electropathic Belt I am much better in every way; the functions are regular, my appetite has improved, and the wretched, depressed feeling I used constantly to have has completely passed away."

HARNESS'

ELECTROPATHIC BELT,

Price 21/-, post-free. When ordering send size of waist (next skin). Thousands of Testimonials. Pamphlet and Advice free. Sufferers from any disorder of the Nerves, Stomach, Liver, and Kidneys, should call to-day, if possible, or write at once to

Mr. C. H. HARNESS, Consulting Electrician, The MEDICAL BATTERY COMPANY, Limited (only address),

52, OXFORD STREET, LONDON, W.

(Corner of Rathbone Place.)

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED FOR THE PROPRIETOR BY ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. W. PARRY (late GUEST & Co.), 29 PATERNOSTER-ROW WEDNESDAY, MAY 30, 1888 [All rights reserved

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."

(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. XII., No. 597. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, JUNE 6, 1888. [DOUBLE NUMBER, TWOPENCE.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
The Sea is English Territory	221
The Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association	222
The Things which are Beginning to Come to Pass, and Our Consequent Duty	222
Which Is It?—A New Heresy, or the Truth of God? A Trinity of Evidences. By Rev. Robert Douglas, M.A., Vicar of Kidsgrove, Stoke-on-Trent	223
Our Facts, and What They Teach Us. By Philo-Israel	226
Why I Accept Anglo-Israelism. By Rev. J. Idrisyn Jones	228
The Church Missionary Society	229
An Attack on the Strongholds of Our Opponents. A Lecture by V. M. Cox. Part I.	229
Israel Blossoming and Budding and Filling the Face of the World with Fruit	231
God's Three Great Covenants with Man	232
There is None other that Fighteth for Us, but only Thou, O God	233
Israel's Wealth	234
Anglo-Israel Free Distribution Fund	235
Israel's Scripture and Prayer Union	235

"THE SEA IS ENGLISH TERRITORY."

THESE "burning words" are contained in a leading article of the London Standard newspaper, published on May 9th, 1888. The article had reference to the alleged defenceless condition of our British territories, the inadequacy of our Navy for the vast work it is called upon to carry out, and the danger which the Metropolis would incur in case of a great war, of successful invasion by some Continental maritime Power, meaning, we believe, France.

The fact is, the writer in the Standard, and many more besides, have, we suppose, been reading the French pamphlet, "Down with England!" and the Russian writer's brochure, "The Russia's Hope;" in both which it is demonstrated to perfection, to French and Russian readers, that the conquest of Britain will be a very easy task, and the transfer of her enormous Empire to those who mean to rob her of it, if they can, a work of small difficulty. The writers in our English newspapers, therefore, aided and abetted by Lord Wolseley, the Duke of Cambridge, Sir Edward Hamley and divers others, are becoming seriously alarmed, and desire to see the British Navy largely increased, and the Army here so re-organised that absolute safety may be assured to the nervous British folk. In regard to London, this is what our alarmist editorial in the Standard said:—

London, as the commercial centre of the world, is bound, by motives of the most patent self-interest, to take the lead in rousing the nation to a due sense of its obligations. Both as the Capital of the Realm, and the commercial Metropolis of the Empire, London would be the first to feel the deplorable effects of any weakness in our defensive armour. To capture London, as London now is, would be to capture the greatest prize ever seized by a victor in war. More than seventy years ago, the spectacle of its wealth extorted from Marshal Blucher his memorable and oft-quoted exclamation. Compared with the London of to-day, the London of that period was a poor and insignificant town. But London is not only itself stupendously rich in all that conquerors covet; it is the source of wealth, and even of existence to large portions of the British Empire. Lord Beaconsfield said, in one of his latest speeches, that India, to be securely defended, must be defended from London. It is certain that, London once prostrate at the feet of a victorious fleet and army, India could not be retained. Let the citizens of London, therefore, second with zeal and energy the movement now set on foot. When London speaks the country listens, and generally throbs in harmony; and when the country is moved, Governments, even the strongest, must obey. In face of the eloquent and reiterated sermons on "profligate expenditure" which politicians have from time to time pronounced in the House of Commons and on public platforms, apparently with the tacit approval of public opinion, Cabinets may well be forgiven for believing that there is something the tax-payer loves better than greatness, or even than security, and that is—economy.

So far the journalist. He gives, besides, in his article, an exellent reason why the nations of the Continent, like Marshal Blucher, would like to sack London, and subdue and appropriate the outlying portions of the Empire. "Our wealth is so enormous," he declares, "the area of our territory so vast, our position so conspicuously splendid, our commerce so widespread, that we are a tempting prey, if once it were imagined that we are too weak to defend our possessions." "The Navy," it is asserted, "is required for a double duty—to guard our own shores against the insults of every conceivable foe, and to sweep from the sea the prowling forces of every possible enemy." The nation, however, is doubtful, it seems, whether the Navy is big enough for the work, and people are beginning to be in a panic, lest "the colossal struggle" prophesied by the wisest and calmest of men will find us unprepared. The question is, will "England" be on the winning or losing side? The writer sees that the inevitable conflict will be between the five great Powers, France, Germany, Russia, Italy and Austria, "three of whom are our very good friends, whilst the other two" (France and Russia, of course) "regard us unquestionably with little love, and much envy."

It is admitted that our policy would be absolute neutrality in the coming wars, but this even, the Standard declares, cannot be, because the Powers would all hate us, if we acted as if we wanted "to grow rich on their losses, and strong on their enfeeblement," by a policy of selfish isolation. We ought not, therefore, to act as if we were sure not to be involved, but ought to spend our money, and multiply our ships and guns and soldiery, in order that we may frighten France and Russia into being at peace with us, and at any rate prepare for attacks which only those Powers, about to join in deadly conflict with Germany, Austria, and Italy, may possibly, in some remote contingency, force upon us.

Digitized by Google

We hardly see matters in the light the Standard puts it. The question arises, who is going to fight us, and why? Certainly not Russia. The ice blocks up her ships for half a year, and she could have no quarrel with us which can lead to war till after her attempts on Constantinople have been made and defeated by our fleets. France has her duel to fight with Germany and it is inconceivable that she will weaken herself by a war with us till that fatal quarrel has been fought out and decided in her own favour. Besides, all these plans and arrangements seem to put out of the question God Almighty and His people Israel—the British. This view of the matter sheds a wondrous light upon the whole case! The British Islands are Israel's appointed place, where God guaranteed them absolute safety for all times in 2 Sam. vii. 10. Why are we to distrust Him, and vainly squander our money on preparations for invasion that never can take place, and never can succeed? Of course, if these are means God is using in order to deter the alien from attempting the mad project which is the subject of "Down with England," we have nothing more to say. But we are sure of this, that anxiety on the subject is quite out of place in the minds of Anglo-Israelites, for the invasion of England is as impossible a feat for the French, or any other foreign nation as the attempt to dethrone the Lord Jehovah, or to pluck His sun from yonder firmament. With a portion of the editor's remarks, however, we are quite agreed. He has grand ideas regarding British supremacy at sea, and he is perfectly correct. "Britannia does rule the waves!" The sea is English territory! He wrote thus:—

But, if we are attacked, we ought to feel confident from the outset that we shall be able to compel the enemy to keep his own ports and to hug his own shores, while not our ironclads and our gunboats only, but our vessels of commerce likewise, ride the waves in safety. It is as indispensable that we should keep the highways of the Ocean open to ourselves and closed to our enemies, as it is to a Continental Power to keep its own territory intact, and to invade that of its hostile neighbour. The sea is English territory; open in times of peace to the whole of mankind, but in times of war to be traversed only by ourselves and our friends. If this should seem to some a high pretension, it is a pretension whose maintenance is absolutely necessary, not to our safety only, but to our very existence. It would, however, be worse than idle, it would be contemptible and fatal, to maintain the pretension in words, while not vindicating it by deeds. The vindication by deeds renders it imperative that our Navy should be stronger, very considerably stronger, than it is at the present moment. If other nations would relax their endeavours to possess powerful and efficient Navies, then we also might consent to slacken in our efforts. But we have no control over their ambition. All we can do is to outstrip it, at least, on the water; and this we can unquestionably do if we choose.

God commands us to shut our doors, or Gates, and He has given us the dominion of the seas, by giving us the possession of our enemies' Gates, and the assurance that our own shall be open for ever. This, humanly speaking, must be secured by a powerful Navy, larger than those of all the maritime nations beside. Let us, then, by all means increase our navy, and see to the defence of our coaling stations and ocean fortresses at once, before the hurricane is upon us. But let us beware of panic or alarm, for God has promised our absolute security in our island home, and our preponderance and dominion in the empire of the sea! To Him be all the praise!

To our Readers.—The present number of the Banner of Israel will be found particularly useful for distribution, as it contains the addresses delivered by two clergymen and two nonconformist ministers at the Annual Meeting of the Metropolitan Association. Will friends assist the circulation by distributing this number?

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

The tenth meeting of the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association was held at Exeter Hall, on Thursday evening, May 24th, 1888. The hymn, "We praise, we worship Thee, O God," was sung, after which prayer was offered by the Rev. James S. Forsyth, M.A., of the National Scottish Church, Holloway. The Secretary (the Rev. James Billington, F.R.H.S.) then gave an abstract of the report.

Col. the Hon. Oliver Lambart occupied the chair, and referred to the fact that the day on which they were celebrating their anniversary was also the birthday of our Sovereign, Queen Victoria, and that Her Majesty had no more loyal subjects than Anglo-Israelites. Reference was also made to Bishop Titcomb's last work, "The Message to the Church from the Nineteenth Century," and also to the influence of the late Mr. Glover's work on the mind of the speaker, who concluded his address by moving that the abstract of the report, as presented by the secretary, be adopted, which was seconded by E. W. Bird, Esq. (in the absence of Douglas A. Onslow, Esq., who was detained in the country). The officers for the ensuing year having been duly elected, the chairman called on

The Rev. H. John Hatch, M.A., Vicar of Linford, Beds., who said: Dear friends, ladies and gentlemen, children of the seed of Abraham, When our friend Mr. Billington wrote to me to ask me to do my part at this assembly I selected, as I suppose you all well know, the subject of

"THE THINGS WHICH ARE BEGINNING TO COME TO PASS, AND OUR CONSEQUENT DUTY."

Well now, when I gave that I did not, I confess, comprehend or think about the immense scope which this subject must naturally embrace. I must therefore ask your indulgence if I merely confine myself to some of those things which are beginning to come to pass which strike myself, and I trust possibly they may strike you. Now the prophet Isaiah distinctly tells us that the time is to come when God will remove the covering that is over all nations, and the veil that is over all people. Now I take it that that veil and that covering have been chiefly instrumental in God's way in keeping quiet, our keeping, if I can so say, in abeyance the knowledge of the distinctions, first of all between the kingdoms of Israel and Judah, and secondly the fact that Israel is still in existence, and has found a home in the British Isles. The veil has kept this from view. Now perhaps I may be pardoned if I venture to say it is almost impossible for people to understand these great truths unless they are taught. It is true that all will be able, or should be able, to read their Holy Bibles, but I take it that the great truths which spring out of the study of prophecy should be first brought before them by the ministers of our church. (Cheers.) The thing which is beginning to come to pass is, that the veil is being removed from their hearts, their eyes, are beginning to be opened, and that there are many more now than there were a few years ago who take up this subject with full and free belief in it. I trust in God that they may increase in number, because I cannot but think that such people—although, thank God, there are many who do take an interest in the subject—I cannot conceive that the people will really interest themselves in this sufficiently until they find that their ideas are supported by those to whom they are bound to look up and respect. Now, one of the other things which I think seems to be about to come to pass is, that of which our Saviour talked when He said: "There shall be earthquakes in all parts, and kingdoms rising against kingdoms, nations against nations;" and there can be no doubt, if we only cast our eyes over the state of the Continent, that the preaching of the great truth is now at hand. There can be little doubt, I think, that the end of all things is at hand; and one of the signs of the end of all things being at hand is, the great earthquake, which we know God has stated shall come upon the nations of the earth. I need not point out, brethren, that there has been, and may be still, something like a scare, something like a distrust, in the power of England. I look back to the time, brethren, when little Gideon, the smallest and youngest of his tribe, inspirited and inspired by God, gradually raised an army of 22,000, when the Amalekites and Midianites were against them, and like the grasshoppers for multitudes; and what did God say? "The people are too many for Me to give victory to them, lest the people vaunt themselves against Me, and say that it is Mine own hand that hath saved Me:" and what is the result? He reduced that mighty army to 300. Now, though we are told that enemies are to come against Israel like a flood, shall we fear? Certainly not. Defended by the Lord God, we know that He will take care of us, and we know that the world is to be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea. All are to see and acknowledge His glory. Can that be by all the missionary efforts which we may send out to the uttermost parts of the earth, when the enemy shall come in like a flood? Then will God raise up a standard, then will He give such abundant proof, and clear undeniable proof, that He is the God of Israel, and Israel are His people, that all the nations of the world shall be compelled to pass it no longer, but every one shall know the Lord, from the youngest to the oldest. This, brethren, seems to me to be one of those things which is now coming to pass.

Digitized by Google

Our Saviour told us that when these things came to pass our duty was to look up because our redemption draws nigh. Then look up, and lift up your heads, for your redemption draws nigh. I take it that He did not mean the redemption of the sins of the whole world which He was about to offer upon the cross. I take it that it had nothing whatever to do with that; but that the redemption to which He alluded was the second time when God shall call His people as He did of old from Egypt. He shall set His hand against it, and Israel and Judah shall walk together to Jerusalem, and take possession of the land which has been promised by Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, and promised by God to them. Then I take it that the redemption which we are to look forward to is the union of the two kingdoms, the removal of the blindness of those who ought to teach our people better. Then, brethren, I think, will the time come when we shall really and truly know the Lord God as we ought to do. At present Our Identity is almost hidden. At present whatever our efforts may be, and they are great, still, comparatively speaking, the numbers of those that entertain this doctrine are comparatively small, at any rate much smaller than they ought to be. When these latter times come—when the things to which I have alluded begin to come to pass, then we may look up to our heavenly Father, then we may feel that He will remove the veil which is over all nations, and the cover which is over all, and they shall see Him as He is. They shall one and all acknowledge that He is the God and we are His people. Then we may look forward to the time when the King of Israel shall be ruler over all the kingdoms of the world, and the kingdoms of the world shall be the kingdoms of God and His Christ. (Cheers.)

The Chairman then called on the Rev. Robert Douglas, M.A., who addressed the meeting on the following subject:—

WHICH IS IT—
A NEW HERESY, OR THE TRUTH OF GOD?
A TRINITY OF EVIDENCES.

By the Rev. Robert Douglas, M.A.,
Vicar of Kidsgrove, Stoke-on-Trent.

An esteemed Israelite friend informs us that a well-known Canon in a town in Kent, and a leader of the Evangelicals, has lately pronounced our doctrine, "A New Heresy." Tertullus applied the same term to the Christian revelation in the first instance (Acts xxiv. 25). To us, who value the pure gospel of God above all things, the charge is a grave one. And yet we are glad that our friend is beginning to look seriously into our views. Some years ago, when we met at a clerical dinner in Sheffield, he could only make sport of them. He said he had a lady in his congregation who held them, and who was also afflicted with rheumatism, and to whom his pastoral consolation was, that "it was because she was one of Ezekiel's dry bones." We prefer his solemn anathema to such unseemly levity. For if British-Israelism be not God's revealed truth, it is one of the most pernicious delusions these last days have produced. We deliberately accept this alternative, and on the strength of it challenge and demand from all sober-minded Christians the most ample investigation and most unhesitating decision. For mark well the following points,—

(1) The Providential Revelation we insist on, besides being an old treasure out of God's word, is also a new discovery, one that absolutely revolutionizes the accepted interpretations of Prophecy and History. As a consequence, it vitally affects our general views of the Bible Revelation and divine Providence. It involves another Reformation in Theology and the Church, and a re-writing, ab initio, of the world's history. It reduces at once nine-tenth's of the literature of popular Biblical exegesis, sermons, glosses, commentaries, &c., to little more than the value of waste paper. It is equally sweeping and unsparing of popular histories. If true, a great light has indeed sprung up. But just in proportion as it is of value if true, it is unspeakably mischievous and misleading if false.

(2) The claim we thence put forward, of being God's chosen Covenant Nation, and the rightful heirs of the promises, if it be unreal or fictitious, is an act of grievous pride and presumption—a kind of spiritual Tichbornism on a large scale; and one that justly exposes us to the condemnation of those who "say they are Jews and are not."

(3) British-Israelism cannot be regarded as a mere abstract theory, a barren or passive opinion. When believed, it must be acted upon. It presents to the Church and Nation a goal of glory, a destiny of untold excellency, and it bids us pray and strive incessantly after its realisation. It re-echoes with tenfold emphasis the divine command, "Speak unto the Children of Israel that they go forward." It is therefore evident that if false, it cannot be harmless. In that case it puts us religiously and politically on a wrong track. It misdirects the policy of the nation. It misconstrues the work of the church. The interests it deals with, or affects to dominate, are too solemn and important to be trifled with; and if, after all, we are deceivers or deceived, we are of all men most miserable. It is either the duty of all earnest Christians and patriotic Englishmen to espouse our cause with enthusiasm, or oppose us openly with all their might. To treat this slowly but surely advancing movement with indolent indifference, or sneering contempt, is irrational and inexcusable.

Such then is the great issue to be tried, in God's name, and which we are fearlessly prepared to face and fight out. We can here but briefly indicate the offensive and defensive strength of our position. We shall do so in three lines, or under cover of a Trinity of Evidences, by which the Truth of God as maintained by us, is infallibly ascertained and demonstrated.

Our first Evidence then is the Bible as a whole, and in each of the acts or stages of its progressive communication by God.

(A) British-Israelism is identical with Bible truth in its initial patriarchal stage. This has been so often shown that its repetition may weary some of our readers; but let the strong bear the infirmities of the weak. Israel, then, was the grand final cause or object in the mind of God from the Creation. "When He separated the sons of Adam, He set the bounds of the people according to the number of the children of Israel." (Deut. xxxii. 8.) After the flood, Israel, with God dwelling in the midst of it, is the promised blessing of the Semitic race

Digitized by Google

(Gen. ix. 26, 27.) The Abrahamic Covenant was the formal and final definition of this purpose.

(a) We have often proved before, and it is obvious on the face of it, that its object was to produce "A Great Nation," a "Seed as the dust or stars, or sand, for multitude," "Many Nations," and that these should become ordained channels of blessing to all other nations, and should occupy the Holy Land for ever.

(b) We have seen that the chosen representative of this covenant in the receipt of its promises was Joseph, through his two sons Ephraim and Manasseh. Joseph is the crown of the patriarchal covenant benediction. His typical life-story is the charm of Genesis. The 48th chapter fixes for ever his covenant primogeniture. In the birthright sense, Joseph is Israel. To him pertains the blessing of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. His is the fulness of GOYIM. From thence is the Shepherd, the Stone of Israel. Hebrews xi. 21, is an end of controversy on this point.

(c) These covenant blessings were not to accrue to Joseph-Israel till Christ came. They are relegated to the "last days," "the latter times," or the days of Messiah. The plain theological reason for this was that they required for their actual bestowal and enjoyment the Atonement of Christ, the ratification of the Covenant in His blood, and His High-Priestly Intercession. Hear again St. Paul's determination. "Christ redeemed us from the curse of the law, that upon the nations might come the blessing of Abraham in Christ Jesus." (Gal. iii. 13.) Consider the whole argument, as well as that in Rom. iv. The "nations" or "many nations" of these chapters, self-evidently correspond to those which were to come out of Abraham's loins, through Joseph, "the lost Sheep of the House of Israel," which Christ came to seek and to save. No other supposition is possible, consistently with the truth and harmony of Scripture.

Now these things being so, we ask, who maintain the truth of the sworn promises, seven times personally made by Jehovah to Abraham—we or our opponents? Unless they can produce or show Ephraim's Christian "fulness of Nations," as now visibly marked by these covenant blessings, they must deny the truth of that promise which God gave Abraham with its two immutable seals. And this virtually is what they do. According to them, the "many nations" have not proceeded from Abraham; Ephraim is nowhere; and Christ has not saved Israel's lost sheep. But on our principles and teachings, the truth of the promises given in the patriarchal stage of Divine Revelation is as evident as our own existence as a nation.

(B) We equally manifest, in contrast with our opponents, the truth of the Mosaic Covenant. Glance at its leading facts. God comes down to deliver Israel. He sends Moses and Aaron. He works stupendous miracles. He brings them out with a high hand, and divides the sea before them. He feeds them with manna, and preserves them forty years. He gives them His Law. He visibly tabernacles among them. Under Joshua of Ephraim, they possess Canaan. He rules them by Judges until Samuel's days. He gives them Saul, David, and Solomon, and also Jeroboam. Thus for 800 years, from Moses to Hoshea, he has them under special government and instruction. At one period, the nation in a political and military sense is conspicuous among the nations, as it always was morally and religiously their superior.

Now we have before proved that a nation like this, multitudinous, intelligent, enterprising, and possessed of a divine civilisation, must, by the barest philosophy of history, as well as by the plain words of Scripture, have been thus produced, guided, chastened, by God for some useful end. If the Law could have killed it outright, it would have done so at Mount Sinai, when it brake the covenant while it was being given. (See Exodus xxxii.) But mark what prevented this. The 13th and 14th verses show that Moses' all-prevailing plea was the Abrahamic Covenant. The Law itself was given a second time because of this. But the same "immutable" cause, or instrument operated equally in after ages to save the people from destruction. In neither case did it avert, but rather implied the correction or chastening of forty years, or of seven times, in "the wilderness;" for this was the very means of final preservation and recovery. The Mosaic stage of divine revelation, then, equally with the preceding patriarchal, necessitated Israel's Historical Continuity, and the persistent and unalterable carrying out in her and by her of God's declared purposes. The truth of God demands it. The truth of the recorded facts, in themselves, demands it, and, as just seen, the truth of the covenant with the fathers requires it.

But again, we ask our opponents, where, in accordance with this infallible deduction, is this divinely called, trained, preserved, and chastened nation, i.e., Ephraim-Israel. According to them, God brought it out of Egypt, and into Palestine, and then dispersed it, to annihilate it. This son of God became a miserable abortion. The magnificence of their opening miraculous history, ended in a cul de sac. Eight centuries lied unto them! In their case, the self-evident laws and axioms of racial evolution have contradicted themselves. We say Ephraim-Israel of the Mosaic, or Palestinian, period must be accounted for, and we can account for them. We say that under their still ever present divine Leader, as He promised, they became the Anglo-Saxon race. Our solution reconciles history. It asserts eternal providence and vindicates Jehovah's counsels. If this is "Heresy," may we live and die heretics. For "after the way which they call heresy, so worship we the God of our fathers, believing all things which are written in the law and in the prophets, and have hope toward God which they themselves also allow, that there shall be resurrection of the dead;" even of "the whole House of Israel."

(C) We only can show the truth of the Bible IN ITS PROPHETIC STAGE. When historical Israel failed and disappeared off the Bible platform, it reappeared as the subject of prophecy. When Ichabod was written on the historic page of the Old Testament, Israel's Covenant glories shone out on the prophetic. Ephraim was to repent and believe the Gospel. (Jeremiah xxxi., Hosea xiv., &c., &c.) It was to possess the multitudinous seed and inherit the nations. (Isaiah liv., Hosea i., Zechariah x., &c.) It was to inhabit the Holy Land, returning with Judah. (Jer. iii., Hosea i., Isaiah xviii., Zephaniah iii.) In one word, the prophets reiterated and reproclaimed every iota of the old covenant promises to Israel, as made sure to them in "the last days," after and in spite of their national disappearance under the Law, as the result of the first Advent, and prior to the second Advent of Messiah. The climax of the prophetic fulfilment of these promises to Ephraim-Israel, we have also, as in our last number,* shown, must mark this present century. In A.D. 1800, Israel's seven times of foretold chastisement from the Assyrian captivity (Leviticus xxvi.) began to run out. Synchronising exactly with this, is the Chronological prophecy of Israel's revival in Hosea vi., as we are now in the middle of the Lord's third day of 1,000 years from that date, when Israel's national resurrection should be consummated. And what Prophecy thus postulates by these extraordinary or miraculous predictions of Israel's nineteenth century history, we show to correspond exactly with the unique and equally extraordinary, aye, miraculous, contemporary phenomena of our British experience.

And thus, in the third place, while the truth we set forth fulfils and establishes all the prophets' spoke; our canonical opponents, by denying that truth, virtually deny the prophecies, and concede their failure to the infidel.

(D) British-Israelism is identical with the truth of Christianity. It would be waste of time to recapitulate in detail again, the passages wherein God, by angels and by Christ Himself, by evangelists and apostles, shows that Messiah took on Him the seed of Abraham, or became incarnate, died on the cross, rose from the dead, went up to the right hand of God, to "perform

* See the "Two Witnesses" for May.

Digitized by Google

the oath which He sware to Abraham;" "to fulfil the promises made to the fathers;" "to restore the Kingdom to Israel;" "to give it repentance and remission of sins;" "to bring the Twelve Tribes to their promised national resurrection;" "to save all Israel;" to make her a "holy nation," instead of Jezreel; as "having obtained mercy, instead of Lo-ruhamah;" "the people of God," instead of "Lo-Ammi;" to make "the Twelve Tribes," begotten by the word of the truth of the Gospel "a kind of first-fruits of His creatures;" to give the Hebrews "a kingdom which cannot be moved;" "to make Jerusalem to be no longer trodden down of the Gentiles," when "the times of the Gentiles should be fulfilled;" "to graft Israel again into their own olive tree, when the wild Roman graft was cut off from the true Church of God; to seal 12,000 out of each of the Twelve Tribes, and then to reveal Ephraim's fulness gathered out of all nations, as celebrating salvation to God and the Lamb;" to constitute the elect saints of the two chosen families or houses, His "two witnesses," or "two anointed ones;" and then to write on the gates of the New Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, "the names of the Twelve Tribes of the children of Israel."

The more our readers critically examine the texts put in evidence by these references, the more they will see how inevitable is the conclusion that Christ did not come to destroy the Law and the Prophets, but to fulfil them to every jot, from the date of, and in virtue of, His suffering and entering into His glory; and therefore, unless Christianity has failed of its object, Ephraim-Israel, as God's "First-born," "the Heir of the world," is, at this moment, to be recognised as the stars of the sky in number, as a fulness of nations, as pushing the nations to the ends of the earth, and, above all, as witnessing, or protesting, in the world for the pure worship of God, the depository of His living oracles, the observer of His Sabbaths, and the disseminator of His gospel throughout the world; and as evincing, in its historical development, the near approach of the destined setting up of its national sovereignty in the Holy Land, thence, when thoroughly purged, converted and sanctified, through its many nations, or company of nations, to rule all nations for God, in righteousness and peace.

In this way, British-Israelism is nothing more nor less than a Revelation of the truth and triumph of Christianity, as the manifestation of God's faithfulness, love and "zeal" on behalf of Israel. And apart from this grand latter-day evidence for the veracity of Scripture, all the "aids to faith," "Christian Evidence Societies," anti-infidel lectures, &c., are futile and vain.*

The second in this trinity of Evidences for the British-Israel Revelation as the truth of God, is THE ANALOGICAL CONSEQUENCES OF CHRISTIAN DOCTRINE, AS HELD ALWAYS, EVERYWHERE, AND BY ALL EVANGELICAL CHURCHES.

"If any man prophesy, let him prophesy according to the proportion of the faith;" is a sound and safe Apostolic rule. Now although we might give, as above, much direct testimony from all parts of Scripture, for the views we hold, yet if we found in these views anything essentially opposed to what the Scriptural Churches have professed as saving truth, we might have some cause to suspect our conclusions. But precisely the opposite of this is the fact. When therefore we are charged with "heresy" by the avowed champions of Evangelical orthodoxy, we may justly ask,—"On what point, or with respect to what admitted doctrine of the faith, are we heretical?" If Churchmen, we maintain as firmly as you do, and we believe more consistently, our Protestant Liturgy and Thirty-nine Articles. If Nonconformists, we are equally faithful to the Confessions of faith of our respective Churches. Will those who make this grave accusation against fellow clergy and ministers, be good enough to show in what respect our answer to the sinner's question, "What must I do to be saved?" differs from theirs.

But this is not all. Our argument goes a great deal farther. We affirm and prove, that British-Israelism is the logical deduction, and necessary corollary of the doctrines of the Reformed Churches, the natural offspring or outgrowth of the principles so gloriously vindicated and established in the sixteenth century.

Firstly, it follows directly from that cardinal doctrine of Protestantism, JUSTIFICATION BY FAITH, as taught in the Word of God. Our opponents fail to grasp the true and proper meaning and scope of this central Gospel truth. St. Paul puts it very plainly when he says to the representatives of circumcised Israel, "Be it known unto you that through this man . . . . all that believe are justified from all things, from which ye could not be justified by the law of Moses." Properly speaking, "Justification," here and everywhere, means Israel's spiritual and national justification from the curse entailed by the Law. The same is evident from the prophets. This is Isaiah's doctrine. "In the Lord shall ALL THE SEED OF ISRAEL be justified and shall glory." It is Jeremiah's doctrine. "This is the name whereby he shall be called, the Lord OUR Righteousness," i.e., as the whole passage demonstrates, Israel's Righteousness. Hence, in the very next verses, the regathering and restoration of the Children of Israel are set forth as the immediate historical inferences and sequences from this doctrine.

But where in our opponents' bodies of divinity, is the actual application of this Righteousness of Christ, flowing from His finished redemption, to Israel as a nation? It is nowhere. We never heard a hint of it from them, at least in any practical or historical sense. In our teaching, it comes out gloriously. It is carried forward to its legitimate goal. It is the grand basis of our national existence, preservation, progress and prospects. It is the ground of those special providences which have blessed us hitherto, and made us to differ from other nations. "Our land has been covered with a sin-offering," and therefore we are not consumed. Christ died for us as a covenant people, or an elect race, and therefore Britain lives and shall live for ever. We are the national trophy and triumph of "Jehovah-Tsidkenu." We say then that we are the living monuments and witnesses, and the only ones, of Israel's national Justification by faith as explicitly taught in the Scriptures. We are accordingly not down-grade but up-grade theologians, reaffirming with all the emphasis of our national life and Christianity the fundamental doctrine of Luther and Calvin, Ridley and Latimer; and thus bulwarking the whole system of evangelical truth; while this latter in its turn establishes the truth we hold.

Secondly, our thesis logically follows from our claim to be the true Church of God. As we have before so fully shown, the Bible knows nothing of any church but One, the truly semper eadem Israelite Church. In it alone, even when cast off, God dwelt (Ezekiel xi. 15, 16). By it alone, He would cause righteousness and praise to spring before all the nations, and fill the world with fruits of salvation (Isaiah lxi. and xxvii.). This is the only abiding Church St. Paul, at all events, knew anything about (Roman xi.). The Church of the Prophets is only Israel. "I will set My sanctuary in the midst of them for evermore. My tabernacle also shall be with them. The nations shall know that I Jehovah do sanctify Israel" (Ezekiel xxxvii.). "Jehovah-Shammah" is Israel's, or Jerusalem's, everlasting name. If then we ever were, or are, or shall continue to be God's church, enshrining His Spirit, His Word, His Doctrine, and doing His work in spreading salvation, these being the eternal and essential attributes of Israel, we are thereby proclaimed to be, and do virtually, nay, as in our Prayer Book services, avowedly claim to be the true Israel of God. The Bible doctrines of the Church and our own most

* A striking testimony has just come to hand showing the value of British-Israelism as an Evidence of Christianity. On May 3rd, our friend Mr. E. O. V. Lloyd, of Cheltenham, wrote,—"I have to inform you that Mr. Digby Dawson, Christian Evidence Lecturer, has read your book "Ephraim Israel" twice, which I sent him after hearing his lecture. He says the case is proved, and he is finding it of great assistance to him in his work."

Digitized by Google

solemn professions force us to be British-Israelites; and unless our opponents are incapable of logical deduction, they must recognise our conclusion as inevitable. And the position we thus take up is our only impregnable stronghold against the false and rival Church of Rome, and the only position from which spiritual and political popery, now so active and influential, can be finally overcome.

The crowning illustration of this Triune Evidence for British-Israelism as the Truth of God is that its general influence and effect harmonise and concide with those of the Truth.

We are sometimes told, as by a Cheltenham clergyman lately, that "Holy Ghost men and women" do not espouse our views. That, however, is a matter we must leave to a higher tribunal. Of one thing we are confident, viz., that the Holy Ghost's book and doctrine are with us. We are also sometimes pointed to some sad instances of inconsistency on the part of some who have propagated our views. If this disproved British-Israelism, however, it would equally discredit Christianity in the ordinarily accepted sense. We are reminded on the other hand of a remark lately made to us by a good and intelligent Israelite, that the perverters and perversions of British-Israelism, were to his mind the strongest evidences of its divine truth and origin; because if ever a doctrine could have been destroyed by the mistakes of its advocates, this would long ago have perished. Its survival, in spite of its friends, indirectly evinces its truth. But the question is not as to the conduct or opinions of certain individuals. It is what are the proper and legitimate tendencies of our principles? These we believe and affirm are under God designed to produce—

(1) National humiliation and repentance.
(2) National Faith and Religion.
(3) National Holiness and love of God.

(1) If we are Israel, the Bible is not only the Grand Charter of our Rights, and Bulwark of our Faith, but also our authoritative Code of national morality and spiritual obligation. We must fulfil Israel's duties, as well as inherit her privileges. The prophecies concerning Israel repenting and turning to the Lord, become our divinely prescribed course of conduct. We must fulfil Ezekiel's prophecy, "Ye shall remember your own evil ways, and your doings that were not good, and ye shall loathe yourselves in your own sight, for your iniquities and for your abominations" (xxxvi. 31). Jeremiah's description of latter-day Ephraim must also be realised in us. "They shall come with weeping, and with supplications will I lead them. . . . . I have heard Ephriam bemoaning himself . . . . Surely after that I was turned, I repented: and after I was instructed, I smote upon my thigh, I was ashamed, yea, even confounded, because I did bear the reproach of my youth" (xxxi.). Every Israelite indeed must have the spirit, and adopt the prayer, of Daniel in the ninth chapter. "O Lord, righteousness belongeth unto Thee, but unto us confusion of faces, as at this day; unto all Israel that are near and that are far off, through all countries whither Thou hast driven them, for their trespass that they have trespassed against Thee." Where are they who allege that we foster national pride and presumption? We verily believe that it is the profoundly humbling nature of our doctrine, when rightly understood, that prevents its spread in this age of universal pride. Nay, we must come down ere we can rise. We must take Joel ii. for our programme and pattern. "Sanctify a fast. Rend your hearts, and turn to the Lord your God. Let the priests, the ministers of the Lord, weep between the porch and the altar, and let them say, Spare Thy people, O Lord."

In another sense, too, our doctrine is plainly productive of self-abasing humility. One great damning sin of this generation is its over-weening conceit of its own wisdom, Its men of science, its theologians, its rulers, have, so to speak, quite got beyond the Bible. But look and list, says British-Israelism—"the Bible is ahead of you yet." Like wild asses' colts ye are ignorant (1) of the simplest facts of your origin; (2) of the simple philosophy of your exceptional condition and privileges; and you positively and absolutely owe everything to that covenant of your ancestors, of which you know nothing! You have been led on blindfold, and are what you are in superior attainments, not only not through, but in spite of yourselves! In fine, British-Israelism is the stone striking the Goliath forehead of nineteenth century presumption, and laying it, like Job, in the dust before God.

(2) As we are to abolish national pride, and bow in national penitence, we must also cut off its offspring, Unbelief. It is evident, that our successful maintenance, as above, of the historical verification of all Old Testament and New Testament prophecy, is the death blow of rationalism and infidelity in all their forms. But it is more. It generates and cherishes the "faith that works by love." It reveals the National Fatherhood of Jehovah. It unfolds His boundless grace to His Prodigal Son,—Ephraim. It kindles the faith of the heart, as well as that which enlightens the head. It produces perfect trust, confidence, rest in God's faithfulness. Hence it yields a new divine force in Religion, i.e., a Rebinding or Recovenanting with God, in the bonds of faith in Jesus. Its watchword is, "they which are of faith,"—and they alone,—"are blessed with faithful Abraham." "If Christ's, ye are Abraham's seed;" for he is only in truth, "the father of the faithful."

(3) The British-Israel Revelation, having achieved for us a more glorious deliverance than that from Egypt, brings us not indeed to Mount Sinai (Exodus xix.) but to Mount Zion, the city of the living God, and not with "ifs and ands," but in the sovereignty of effectual calling, says,—not "ye shall be unto Me a kingdom of priests and a holy nation,"—but, "ye are an elect race, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, a peculiar people, that ye should show forth the praises of Him who hath called you out of darkness with His marvellous light" (1 Peter ii.).

Such, then, are the real and necessary fruits of our teachings, and "by their fruits ye shall know them:" and let every one of us, by daily producing these fruits more abundantly in our lives, "put to silence," as St. Peter enjoins us, "the ignorance of foolish men." And let us remember that the truth brought to light in this Trinity of Evidences, is deeply practical and all-exacting. Convinced of it, we must publish and display it. Like all God's unfoldings of truth out of His word, it has come out now, because the needs of the times require it. It is the Gospel divinely adapted to the salvation of souls in this age. It is the voice of God to this redeemed nation, "Arise, shine, for thy light is come." The Lord is at hand. It demands our enthusiasm, our self-sacrifice, our personal devotion.

First, we must be Witnesses for what the Lord has done, is doing, and will do. The guilt of our opponents consists, like that of the old spies or the Jews, in not seeing or believing in, God's Acts fulfilling His Word, in the sign of the times. We, on the contrary, must manifest what God hath wrought.

Secondly, we must pray God without ceasing to continue His gracious work, and by the outpouring of His Holy Spirit, cause all His people to see "the fellowship of this Mystery of Christ among us, the hope of glory."

Thirdly, we are called to search the Scriptures with ever increasing diligence, and to maintain an attitude of spiritual vigilance and expectancy. The days are pregnant with dangers and alarms. We may well ask what next? and next? in human affairs, and still more in God's interposings. Watch, therefore!

The subject of the next address was—

OUR FACTS, AND WHAT THEY TEACH US.

By Philo-Israel.

Mr. Chairman, Ladies, and Gentlemen,—I have been dealing with facts all my life. As an Indian Magistrate, and then for years as an Indian Judge, I have had to do with facts as the foundation of the evidence of truth, and I assure you, I have a great respect for facts! But I am aware that facts alone, especially when there are too few of them, sometimes—nay, often—deceive. You must, therefore, carefully examine your facts; see how they hang together; and what credible, oral, or documentary evidence you may have to corroborate and explain them, before you come to any conclusion regarding them. When I speak, then, of "Our Facts," I mean, of course, "the facts" which go to establish "Our Identity" with the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel. Now the first point I must insist on is this:—That our facts would be nothing, and have no probative value at all, if we had no infallible Bible—no sure Word of prophecy on which to lay the foundation of our superstructure. We have that, blessed be God, and we lean the whole weight of our case upon it as "the Word of the living God," which cannot fail or deceive. But how is it to be interpreted? Just as it is written, and just as literally and simply as such messages as these, which no one thinks of evaporising and spiritualising away:—"God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on Him should not perish but have everlasting life:" and "there is none other name, under heaven, given among men, whereby we must be saved, but the name of Jesus Christ"—"in none other is there salvation."

Digitized by Google

Accepting, then, the Book, and the proper way to understand it, we may apply ourselves to the facts of our national position, and ask ourselves what they teach us? The facts are, themselves, stupendous, and they afford a kind of evidence which is "cumulative." Singly, each fact is of perhaps no great value, but in their united bearing these facts carry all before them! This is the character of all true evidence in support of questions of Identity. Apply the rule to the case of our Lord Jesus Christ's identity with the Messiah, and see how it corresponded. The apostles saw its power, and freely used it to convince the Jews, His opponents. Thus (I quote from St. Matthew's chapters): A virgin was with child; she brought forth a Son; His name was called Jesus, Immanuel, God with us; He was born in Bethlehem of Judæa; born a Governor of God's people Israel; He was taken to Egypt; was re-called thence; dwelt in Nazareth; hence, was called "a Nazarene." He was preceded by a forerunner; He preached in Galilee; showed great light there; and so on, right through His whole life; in His death, His burial, resurrection, and ascension; facts, each small in themselves, but mighty in their cumulative value, testified that Jesus Christ fulfilled, by the facts of His life, death, and resurrection, the whole body of prophecy concerning Himself, and therefore, proved that He was the Saviour of the world. Now our national facts are on "all fours" with this. With this difference, that the facts which go to make up the prophetic fulfilments of prophecy regarding our Lord, were what we should call, humanly speaking, a mass of small coincidences. They seem almost trivial, regarded separately. But united, they formed an adamantine chain of cogent proof, which the Jews were held guilty for rejecting, by God Himself.

Are our facts similar in kind to those held sufficient to prove our Lord's identity? Nay, are they not, again humanly speaking, of vastly greater magnitude? Taken separately, they seem almost sufficient, each of them, to found thereon the whole case! Their number is great, their importance is national in each instance, and they are of such a kind, that they are unique and decisive as to the identity they are adduced to prove. For instance, in the matter of "multitudinousness." See into what varieties of directions it leads you; each point yielding evidence to prove corroboration of prophecy, or capable of throwing the whole case completely over, by establishing irreconcilable divergence. On this predicted quality of increase there depends the formation of the Colonial Empire of British-Israel, the Federation of the States so formed, the power to occupy the earth, to rule over many nations, and to spread abroad, West, and East, and North, and South. Let the numerical increase of this people fail us as a fact, then this nation cannot be Israel, cannot have Colonies, or Colonial Empire, nor world-wide commerce, nor wealth, nor the Gates, nor the dominion of the sea! But the facts accord with Scripture, and testify, therefore, that we ARE Israel! So it is in respect to wealth, the lending power, the commercial greatness which wealth brings, and the use to which we put our wealth. So it is again in regard to our spiritual blessings; those given us to bless, therewith, other nations; which would be useless to us for this purpose, without the temporal blessings just enumerated, to make their exercise possible. Here, then, are a mass of "facts," all connected with our nation, all unique in their character, and exclusively experienced by our own people. Our vast increase in numbers leads just to the very results God promised Israel's increase should produce in them. It has given us nation-Colonies in the very throes, to-day, of Federation. It has enabled us to spread West, and East, and North, and South. It has given us a Heathen Empire too, such as the world never saw before. It has given us most of "the Gates" of the world, with more, obviously, to follow, and all this according to the prophecies in Israel's favour. These gifts have led to our acquisition of "wealth." For we have somehow got "the power to get it"—God-given—because we use it largely in such wise, that He thus "does establish His covenant which He sware unto our fathers, as it is this day."

Our spiritual blessings are testified, also, by facts, such as our possession of the Bible, and our dissemination of it to all nations, as Israel was directed to publish it; by our observance of the Sabbath, as God directed Israel to observe it; by our reverence of the Decalogue, as God commanded Israel to reverence it; and by our willing evangelisation of the world, as Israel was directed to perform that blessed work for Christ. These mighty, unique facts have all their foundations in the Word of God, and tell us that they are part and parcel of our current history, simply and solely, because we are Israel, and because God's Word declares that to Israel they would happen and belong.

What, then, is the upshot of this argument? Surely this, that these indisputable, magnificent facts of our own times, call on us to compare our national condition with God's declarations of His purposes towards Israel, His people, in these "the latter days," and, as the result of that comparison, to accept the evidence as conclusive, that we are the Lost Ten Tribes. Believing it, we are to praise the Lord for His great and undeserved goodness to our faithless race, praying Him to give us, as a nation, that, without which all the rest were vain—namely, that new covenant blessing described in Jer. xxxi. 33, 34, and Heb. viii. 10—12. Therein He promised to His people "to write His laws in their heart, and put them in their mind; to be to them a God, making them to Him a people, so that they shall no longer need every man to his neighbour, and every man to his brother, to say, 'Know the Lord,' because all shall know Him, from the least of them to the greatest of them; and their sins and iniquities He will remember them NO MORE!"

This, my friends, is the chief answer to our Cui bono? inquirers; and the facts of our case, rightly estimated and appreciated as evidence, will lead thus, by God's blessing, to national repentance towards God, and national faith towards our Lord Jesus Christ. Individually, "Our Facts" are a call to us to support Home and Foreign Missions (for the children must first be filled), the message we send being, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, and all thy household." For God's purpose in the whole plan, is to cause the earth to be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea. To effect that object, He uses human instrumentality—namely, the House of Israel—even ourselves, duly endowed. Therefore, let us live up to our high calling. This, then, is the lesson our facts teach us. First, God's glory, and then man's salvation.

Digitized by Google

The subject of the Rev. J. Idrisyn Jones' address was—

WHY I ACCEPT ANGLO-ISRAELISM.

Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen,—I think it is right to assume, that in a meeting of this kind there are some who are not believers in the particular theory that has been so ably and so fully advocated to-night. I would therefore just give, in the compass of the few minutes allotted to me, one reason how an unbeliever became a believer. While referring to myself as an unbeliever, I am happy to record the fact that I was not a bitter unbeliever. I always said: Well, I cannot quite see my way to accept it, but I have no objection to the theory if it is true, and I was always glad to hope that some day I might be willing to believe that I was an Israelite.

You referred, Mr. Chairman, to Her Majesty Queen Victoria. I do not know that there is a society in the kingdom which could pay her such a compliment as this Society: That she has the honour of presiding over the Empire of Israel (cheers). Now we are right, or we are wrong. Nobody will dispute that. If we are wrong, we are as well off as those on the other side after all, and if it is a delusion, I venture to say it is a very blessed delusion. There are no people to-day so happy in Her Majesty's Empire as the Anglo-Israelites. England in danger! The answer of this Society is, England in safety. John Bull has become very nervous of late. He has become very unsteady in his nerves. He is afraid that London is going to be captured. I can prescribe for the patient,—a dose three times a day of Anglo-Israelism (laughter), and I think he would soon recover his strength of nerve. The fact is this. The covenant forbids us to fear. It provides for everything—that remarkable covenant. It has the marine section—the abundance of the seas; the agricultural section—the fruit fields. There is the political section—the law to go forth from Jerusalem.

Well, then, just a word why I became a believer, and I will confine myself to one point, and that is this:—That Anglo-Israelism is the only theory that meets the broad dimensions of the covenant. Now what are the theories in regard to the covenant to the patriarchs? There are two theories. The popular one is this: that the covenant was to stretch from Abraham down to the coming Messiah; but then the people of Abraham were to march into what is called the Christian Church, and then there will be an end of Israelism, one Christian Church to spread throughout the whole world. So that to do this, their mind is in harmony with the conception of the great majority of Christian people. That is the covenant which has been fulfilled. Then there is a second theory that goes a little further. That Israel is now in banishment, and that at the coming again of the Lord, at the Second Advent, Israel shall return to the land to possess it as one nation under the Messiah. That is the second theory. Now both of those theories fall short of the broad dimensions of the covenant. In what way? In the fact that there was promised in the covenant many nations. Now it is on that point there is so much ignorance. There my eyes were blinded so long. There in the covenant you will find that many nations are promised to Abraham. Now take the very words of the covenant. God said, "Thou shalt be a father of many nations." The same covenant transmitted to Ephraim contains the same point. His seed shall become a multitude of nations. Now the other two theories do not meet that, because there is only one nation. You must have many nations, and you lessen the area of the covenant in anything else until you come to Anglo-Israelism, and the great fact is this:—That England, the great manufacturing Power of the world and the age, and the manufacturer of iron and cotton and all sorts of things, has become above all things to-day a manufacturer of nations. Now I know the answer which is given to that point: that Ephraim was to have a multitude of nations. I know the answer given by Christian ministers. Only a short time ago I had the pleasure of speaking to a Church of England minister, whose answer was this, "The spiritual seed of Abraham is meant there, and all believers spread over all the nations are the fulfilment of that item in the covenant."

Well, there are two fatal objections to that theory. The first is this—that the spiritual seed of Abraham, the Christian Church, the spiritual seed of all believers, are to-day the children of Israel; but the Christian Church is not national, it is a family. The national idea is obliterated in the Christian Church, for it is neither Jew nor Greek, nor Syrian, nor bond, nor free. All nationalities are obliterated in the Christian Church to-day, because it is a family—all brethren in the Lord. That is one objection. And the other is this:—That granting the unbelievers are the children of Israel, yet you must remember that the same promise of many nations was made to Sarah, who had no faith, and who cannot have spiritual seed therefore. And yet the promise to Sarah is as definite as it was to Abraham. These are the words in regard to Sarah, "and she shall be a mother of nations; kings of people shall be of her." Now, then, that cannot be the Christian Church, because she had no faith. She lived in her unbelief, and yet to Sarah is promised a great inheritance of nations; and, therefore, you must have a theory that meets these broad dimensions of the covenant. And because Anglo-Israelism is the only theory that meets the breadth of this covenant, I am compelled to accept it, and with this result to my mind—one of the grandest thoughts that we behold to-night, the integrity of the Bible. It is the grandest of works on earth. The hope of millions to-night is bound up in the Bible, and if you can show that the covenant with Abraham has failed, if that covenant has broken down, if it has collapsed, then the whole Bible has gone. One broken promise will blast the Bible. We are standing up for the integrity of the Bible. Supposing, then, an anxious soul should cry to-night, "What must I do to be saved?" you bring to that soul the gracious promise, "He that believeth on the Son of God hath everlasting life," and yet that sinner finds that the covenant with Abraham has broken down. Can he trust the other? The same God in both cases; the same Book in both cases. I tell you, you destroy the hope of the sinner if you destroy the covenant made with Abraham. There is this going out from Anglo-Israelism to-night, the Bible is true. How is it that Christianity must overlook this fact, that the covenant gone, has broken down the whole Bible? Infidels have not overlooked it. They have opened their eyes to see it, and they see the covenant is broken down; and we who are standing up thus for the entire Bible, compromise the truth of the Bible, and you see the hopes of Christianity withering. There is no virtue in the balm of Gilead. Where shall we go then? We have a splendid nail to put in the coffin of infidelity, and as the hope of Abraham holds true in its grand integrity, the promise to the sinner is quite safe and sound. God speed, then, this mission of ours. It is a stone in which we have an interest—a stone not cut with hands, filling the whole earth; so shall Anglo-Israelism. Do not, therefore, despise the day of small things. We are at the very door of the glorious time. The land of Israel is nearly ready. I believe that the nations are linking to-day in Federation to fill the earth with peace. God shall bless us, and that right early; and all the ends of the earth shall fear Him, because we are so near the time. I say to you to-night, Be up and doing! I am a thousand times sorry it came to me so late. The shadows of the evening are gathering on our path. Oh, brethren and sisters, Be up and doing! We are very near the glorious triumph, when we shall have a new creation, free from all the tumult and the strife. I hear the music ringing. It finds an echo in my soul. How can I keep from singing? (Loud cheers.)

The Rev. James P. Britton, Vicar of Chapple, Essex, gave an address on "Misguided Zeal." He referred to the grievous harm that might be done, unintentionally, to the cause of British-Israelite Faith by the writings of over-zealous, well-meaning, but misguided and incompetent persons issuing works on the subject, that would not stand the test of criticism.

Digitized by Google

Mr. W. H. PETERS, J.P., said: Friends, ladies, and gentlemen, both equally energetic in this God-like cause,—I am sorry to say that I am not able to address you, but I am able, before moving a vote of thanks to our excellent chairman, to say that I have known him for 30 years, and during the last 10 years he has been an energetic, earnest, and good advocate of the British-Israel cause. Mr. Oliver Lambart is brother to the late noble Earl of Cavan, who was with me for seven years in Her Majesty's 7th Dragoon Guards, and whom I valued very highly, having known him so long, more and more, that his loss will scarcely ever be filled as a Christian nobleman and missionary. I therefore propose a vote of thanks, which you will cordially agree with me is due to the late noble earl's excellent brother for coming forward so kindly and advocating this great, noble, national cause. (Cheers.)

The vote of thanks was seconded by Dr. Alder Smith, and carried unanimously and heartily. The benediction was pronounced, and a verse of the National Anthem sung, and the meeting terminated. (It was remarkably well attended; many men being present.)

THE CHURCH MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

IN the BANNER OF ISRAEL, of Aug. 3, 1887, No. 553, Vol. xi., p. 317, we drew attention to the fact that Anglo-Israelites as a body do not merit the foolish charge that some have brought against them to the effect that because they believe in their Hebrew origin they have therefore ceased to work for Christ.

We proved this by reference to a graceful act performed by the Committee of "The Society for Promoting Christianity Amongst the Jews," in appointing the editor of this journal, an "honorary life governor of the society," in recognition of the "good and valuable help he had rendered as treasurer of the most important auxiliary at Bristol for many years." We declared that that letter from the Rev. Secretary of the London Jews' Society was a full and complete answer to those who so untruly maintain that the profession of belief in Our Identity is tantamount to a cessation of work for Christ.

We are gratified and thankful to be able now to say that a second and perfectly independent testimony has reached our hands of the same glorious fact that adhesion to Identity belief does not induce supineness in direct work for the Lord in other directions. In the case we beg to bring to our readers' notice, the cause of Foreign Missions is the one in regard to which we have received acknowledgment of acceptable services rendered. We ask our readers to peruse this testimony not because it reflects favourably on our poor efforts, but simply as a fresh proof that a most ardent and zealous acceptation of Our Identity doctrines does not in the least damp ardour in Christian work for Foreign Missions, but on the contrary stimulates and enhances the love which all true Anglo-Israelites must and ought to feel for it. The letter in question is an official document addressed by the Rev. Fred. E. Wigram, Hon. Secretary of the Church Missionary Society, Salisbury Square, London, to Mr. E. W. Bird, Clifton, Bristol, and is dated May 7th, 1888. It reads thus :—

"MY DEAR SIR,—I have much pleasure in officially announcing to you that the Committee, in consideration of the very essential services which you have been enabled to render to this society, have added your name to the list of one hundred honorary governors for life. As Secretary of the very important Bristol Association, your labours must be very real, and we are thankful for the measure of success vouchsafed to that Association. May you be long spared to continue to co-operate in the great work, which the Lord has entrusted to this Society, and on which He is manifestly granting His blessing.

"I am, my dear sir,

"Yours very faithfully,

"FRED. E. WIGRAM.

"Hon. Sec. C. M. S."

We need not assure our readers that such a letter as the above filled us with gratitude, and with praise to the God of Israel for His signal blessing to our cause in enabling us thereby to furnish the crushing reply it gives to those who malign us. To the Church Missionary Society's Committee in London we have returned our heartfelt thanks; and to God we give all the praise for any approval our conduct in the service of the C. M. Society may merit. To our opponents we would present the thus publicly expressed approval of the Church Missionary Society and of "The venerable Society for the Promotion of Christianity amongst the Jews," as final and decisive answers to the charge that work for Christ is incompatible with a firm conviction that the British are the Lost Ten Tribes. So far from that, we know as a fact, that, therefore, Foreign and Jewish Missions are our special privilege and work for the Master's sake. We consequently glory in Our Identity and praise God for giving us a clear knowledge of the same founded on true and sufficient evidence. We desire, what all who share our belief should wish for, namely, that all possible hindrances to the acceptation of Our Identity may be removed, if possible: we should deeply regret it, if it were true that our principles in any way hindered work for Christ or interfered in the least degree with Missionary operations to the heathen or to the Jews. But how could they hinder them? Our teaching is that God created, made, and formed Israel, in order that they might show forth His praise and so prove to be a blessing "to all nations, families, and kindreds of the earth (Isa. xliii. 1, 7, 21; Gen. xvii 18; xxii. 18; Acts iii. 25). Israel's very function is "to blossom and bud and fill the face of the world with fruit" (Isa. xxvii. 6, R.V.).

It follows then that Our Identity is only another mode of expressing "Foreign Mission;" British-Israel being the active agents God deigns to employ to carry them out. He chose this people first; then educated and endowed them for their foreign Missionary work; and finally sent them to do it in these, "the last days," or the Christian Dispensation. We thank God they are doing it; and that the Society whose Committee has just now so highly honoured us (to God be the glory), is hard at work carrying out the nation's allotted destiny! Let Israel, therefore, praise the Lord!

AN ATTACK ON THE STRONGHOLDS OF OUR OPPONENTS.

A LECTURE BY V. M. COX.

INTRODUCTORY.

WHILE engaged in the preparation of this paper, a circumstance occurred which compelled me to admit that in the matter of a title for it I had not chosen wisely or well. A fellow-believer in Our Identity, who knew that I was occupied in writing an Anglo-Israel lecture, enquired, "What is your subject?" I informed him that I proposed to make "An attack on the strongholds of our opponents." "Indeed," he replied dubiously, "but have they any strong-holds?" This set me thinking, and the more I considered the question, the more powerfully I felt the force of his observation; for the "holds" of our opponents are weak! We think we Anglo-Israelites have proved that. Their arguments have a certain amount of superficial plausibility, but are not of a character to satisfy clear thinkers. We are not aware of one of their defences which has not been successfully stormed, nor of a single argument they have advanced which the champions of our cause have not wholly refuted. Briefly to review some of these flimsy objections, and to show how one and all have been proved valueless, is the design of this lecture; and, therefore, perhaps the title, even with the inappropriate word "stronghold," may be allowed (at all events temporarily) to stand.

Digitized by Google

PART I.

It is a statement which few will deny, that opposition to Anglo-Israelite teaching is considerably on the decrease. Whether this is altogether matter for rejoicing may be open to question. It is always easier to cope with downright, active opposition than to arouse men from the languor of easy indifference by which the majority of those whom we meet are characterized. Still, our opponents are not an extinct genus, and we are very glad of it. Where there is opposition there must be interest, even though it may be only exerted in order to effect our defeat and discomfiture. But of an honest opponent there is always hope. Some of our warmest advocates have been opponents formerly, and no defenders are more valuable to our cause than those who once strove to prove that cause a weak one, for they have examined its weakest points, and have also estimated the strength of the opposing forces; therefore, none are more qualified to become champions of our glorious truth than men who at one time were chiefly concerned in the effort to prove it a fallacy. But we never can understand why any should show such anxiety to overthrow a belief so consolatory. It would be strange, indeed, if a man should expend the best powers he had in the desperate attempt to prove that he was not the heir to a magnificent inheritance, despite the fact that there existed a mass of evidence to attest the legality of his title. By such an overwhelming accumulation of evidence is the title of the Anglo-Saxon races to the Israelite birthright supported, that we, for our part, can never understand how average opponents read their Bibles at all. Prejudice blinds them, otherwise, surely they could not fail to perceive that which stands out so prominently on well-nigh every page of the Holy Volume, God's eternal purpose regarding Israel, the nation of His choice—a purpose never changed, never modified, and which can no more undergo variation or alienation than the sun, moon, and stars can be for ever swept from the blue vault of heaven. We need not apologise for using so bold an illustration, since God Himself, by His prophet, has put it on record for all to read; and if He says it, we are surely guilty of unpardonable presumption if we dare deny it or call it in question.

But prejudice will so operate on men's minds that it is possible for them to read again and again the sublime declarations of the inspired writers, and yet to remain wholly in the dark as to their true signification. It has been thus, in reference to other truths beside that of Our Identity. In the Quiver for October, 1887, there appeared a capital paper on "Prejudice," by the Rev. R. H. Lovell, from which I will quote a short paragraph. The author says: "We get so enamoured, prejudiced in favour of one set of opinions, one pole of the magnet, that the other realm of truth lies practically closed to us. Then our minds lose the value and benefit of search; the still pendulum makes no progress on the face of the clock of destiny; repose has already shut the door of truth, has lost the key, and is too idle to look for it. Said Dr. Taylor, of Norwich (a stout Unitarian): 'I have been through every word of the Hebrew Scriptures seventeen times, and if the doctrine of the Atonement had been there I should have found it.' 'I do not think you would," replied John Newton, "for I once went to light my candle, and I could not, because the extinguisher was left on it."

This is, in point of fact, just the position of those persons who cannot see Our Identity in the Bible after it has been once clearly expounded to them. They do not wish to see it; they start with the idea that it is not there, and, therefore, it is scarcely to be wondered at if they fail to find it. For, though you should point out to me the sun in all its meridian glory, I might with perfect truth affirm my inability to perceive it, provided that I first closed my eyes and turned my face in an opposite direction. Nevertheless, the sun would still shine on none the less brilliantly, and my own egregious folly would be the only thing I should demonstrate. Thus it is with those who deny the existence of Anglo-Israel truth within the pages of the Bible. We were, a few months since, made the subject of animadversion by the Echo, which was pleased to designate our faith, "The Anglo-Israel superstition." Now what is superstition? Nuttall informs us it is "a belief in the existence of certain facts and phenomena, produced by supernatural agency, of which the existence is not proved by expeperience nor countenanced by revelation." Is that a correct definition of our Israelite teaching? Superstition is the offspring of ignorance and credulity, and we suppose that we Anglo-Israelites are commonly regarded as an exceptionally credulous set of people! If it be credulity to regard God's Word as a safer guide respecting Israel's destiny than the traditions of men; if it be credulity to believe God means ALL He has said, and will bring to pass all He has purposed; if it be credulity to trace in current events the realisation of what the prophets spoke and wrote about more than 2,000 years ago, then, indeed, we are credulous, and we are content to remain so; but we must yield our opponents the palm here, for such credulity as they in some cases display, we cannot essay to emulate. We certainly are not credulous enough to believe that Lost Israel will be found speaking Hebrew as a vernacular, after the lapse of 25 centuries. We cannot believe anything so grossly improbable as that some semi-barbarous oriental race, as yet sunk in ignorance and paganism, will suddenly develop into a great and powerful nation, and display all those characteristics by which alone Israel can be recognized, possessing the Gates, colonizing the earth, and evangelising the world; to the detriment and displacement of the present Gate-holders, colonizers, and evangelisers, who must perforce hide their diminished heads, and make way for the Israel of the future! We are not credulous enough to believe that such a stupendous event as the reunion of Israel and Judah is shown by Holy Writ to be, can have already taken place, secretly and silently, none having taken cognizance of it, no record of it having been inscribed on the pages of history. And as to ignorance! Well, while reverend divines fail to recognize the distinction between Israel and Judah; while ordained ministers are unable to answer the simple question, "Who was the heir of the Abrahamic birthright?" while Christian ladies continue to enquire, "Which is the lost tribe?" surely the less said about ignorance the better! But we venture to suggest a fair test as to the relative Scriptural knowledge of Anglo-Israelites and their detractors. Let our opponents select a dozen "trained scholars" from the ranks of clerics or laymen as they will, and let our Association likewise select a dozen persons from among Identity writers or lecturers. Then let each be set to answer a score of questions on the subject of Israel's mission and destiny, and we should see who would come off best. It is even conceivable that so profound a scholar as the writer in the Echo might find himself LESS able to supply satisfactory replies to such questions than some of those despised, ignorant, and credulous people who have embraced "the Anglo-Israel superstition," and who actually are not ashamed of it, but intend to avow and advocate that belief, in spite of anything the Echo scribe may say against it. Are we ignorant of our Bibles? Personally, I can testify that prior to accepting the Identity, I knew very little about the prophecies at all, never imagining they had any present-day bearings, or contained any matters of special interest for nineteenth century Gentiles. But within six months of the time I learnt that we were Israel, what a mine of treasure had opened up to me! Pages that had been devoid of interest now presented a fascinating field for study. Portions which till then had been a dead letter, suddenly became instinct with significance and beauty. We are constantly receiving such testimonies from those to whom our Identity comes as a new revelation. Again and again we read how one and another says "The Bible is a new book to me." Shall we not praise the Lord for the glorious light that has irradiated for us the pages of His sacred Word, and shall not we strive to diffuse its rays in such a manner that all with whom we are associated may share that light and rejoice in its rays, as we have ourselves been privileged to do?

Digitized by Google

(To be continued.)

ISRAEL BLOSSOMING AND BUDDING AND FILLING THE FACE OF THE WORLD WITH FRUIT.

WE often quote Isa. xxvii. 6, as a prophecy which is at the present day being fulfilled by the British people, who thus prove that they are Israel of modern times, the literal flesh and blood descendants or "remnant" of the seed of Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Joseph, and Ephraim. The following description of the work some of our leading societies are doing in the world illustrates our often repeated allegations very fully.

The Colonial and Continental Church Society, for instance, has issued the leaflet we annex as a summary of their proceedings. This paper grandly supports our contention that the British are Israel on many points which our well instructed readers will easily comprehend. To assist them in doing so we have here and there added a few texts of Scripture in brackets, which will, we hope, be useful:—

THE COLONIAL AND CONTINENTAL CHURCH SOCIETY.

Established 1823. Incorporated 1887.

endeavours to provide for the spiritual needs of

OUR OWN COUNTRYMEN

abroad and in the colonies (Isa. xxvii. 6; Gen. xxii. 18; xxviii. 14). "He first findeth his own brother * * * and brought him to Jesus." John i. 41, 42.

The following classes benefit by its operations.

Our Emigrants who are now leaving our shores at a rate fast approaching half-a-million a year (Gen. xxxv. 11; Hosea i. 10; Zech. x. 6).

Aboriginal and Coloured Races with whom our Emigrants come into close contact (Gen xxii. 18; xxviii. 14; Acts iii. 25).

Our Sailors at Foreign Ports, where they are exposed to many and terrible temptations (Numb. xxiv. 7; Psa. cvii. 23).

Our Invalids wintering on the Continent, who would often be uncared for in their loneliness but for the ministrations of the Society's Chaplains (Zech. x. 9).

Our Tourists on the Continent, during the Summer. This branch of its work is self-supporting (Zech. x. 9).

Our Artisans, Miners, &c., who have settled widely over the Continent, and are employed in Coal, Iron, Engineering, Silk and Railway Works. (About 300,000 being so engaged.—Deut. viii. 18; Zech. x. 9; Isa. xxvii. 6).

It has agents in 29 Colonial Dioceses.

Its total income last year was £38,697.

Its principles are those of the Evangelical Church of England, and great pains are taken to send forth only such agents as know and love the Gospel.

Its plan is to elicit and supplement Local Effort, by contributing towards the support of pioneer clergy in the Colonies, until the offerings of newly-gathered congregations render such aid no longer necessary. It helps our Emigrants to help themselves.

WILL YOU HELP ITS WORK?

9, Sergeant's Inn, Fleet Street, E.C.

If we turn to the Religious Tract Society and its doings we find its operations are world-wide, Christian and beneficent. They are decidedly Israelitish, and illustrate Isa. xxvii. 6. The following proves that:—

THE WORK OF THE RELIGIOUS TRACT SOCIETY.

The Religious Tract Society was founded 88 years ago; it proclaims the Gospel in 186 languages; it is supported by and aids Christians of all Evangelical denominations. Circulated nearly 82 millions of publications last year, of which 27 millions were tracts granted free or at a greatly reduced price. It does not expend one shilling of its subscriptions or donations on management or other expenses. Required each working day of last year for its missionary work, nearly £152 9s. or £917 per week. Uses all its missionary funds for the object for which they were subscribed, but pays all its expenses out of trade funds. Has aided in printing the "Pilgrim's Progress" in over 70 languages. Has published its New Testament Commentary in Ten languages—Chinese, Arabic, Syriac, Mahrati, Bengali, Tamil, Canarese, Urdu, Singhalese, and Karen. Distributes packets of healthy interesting literature to almost all the emigrant families leaving the ports of the United Kingdom. Provides for a very large distribution of books and tracts for sailors of all nationalities. Has issued more than forty thousand libraries, varying from 25 to 500 volumes, since 1832, either at very reduced rates, or for very poor districts free. Helps all the missionary societies in their work of providing Gospel literature in their fields of work, but it is able to do only a tithe of what is needed through want of funds. Maintains in all its publications a testimony to evangelical truth.

56, Paternoster Row, London, E.C.

Then we have the London Society for Promoting Christianity Amongst the Jews, which puts forth its claims to be a "blossoming and budding" institution in the following words:—

THE LONDON SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING CHRISTIANITY AMONGST THE JEWS.

Established 1809.

Constitution and Object. It is the only Church of England Society having the twofold object of the evangelization of the Jews at home and in foreign lands.

Means Employed. The combined agencies of a Bible Society, Prayer-book Society, Missionary Society, Tract Society, and School Society.

Agents and Stations. The Society employs 141 Agents, consisting of 24 ordained Missionaries, 25 Lay and Medical Missionaries, 45 School Teachers, 47 Scripture Readers, Colporteurs, and other Lay Agents. Of this number 89 are Christian Israelites. The number of stations 35, viz, 5 in England, 20 upon the Continent of Europe, 6 in Asia (of which 3 are in the Holy Land), and 4 in Africa.

The Society also makes grants for three Missionary Curates and two Lay Helpers to three Clergymen in London, whose parishes contain a large Jewish population.

Work Accomplished. Since 1823, 161,693 entire copies of the Old Testament, and 399,243 parts of the same, have been circulated; also, since 1817, 203,165 copies of the Hebrew Version of the New Testament, and portions thereof. Tracts and Treatises in various languages on Jewish controversy have been largely circulated, with which the Jews have been most favourably impressed. The Society has also published the Liturgy in Hebrew, and circulated, since 1837, 20,720 copies.

Tokens of Success. When the Society was formed, there were not fifty Christian Jews known in the United Kingdom. Now, in the Churches of England and Ireland, there are more than 100 ordained ministers of the seed of Abraham; and there are many converts.

In the Society's Chapel, Palestine Place, London, 1,644 Jews have been baptized, about half of whom were adults.

In the Society's Schools, at Palestine Place, London, more than 1,000 children have been educated in the Christian religion.

In the Society's Schools at home and abroad several hundreds are annually under instruction.

A marked change has taken place in the feelings of Jews towards Christ and Christianity.

The New Testament is increasingly read, and in many cases without fear or hindrance, and hence more enlightened views of Christianity prevail.

The Church Missionary Society and the Bible Society want no special notices to recommend them to the attention of the public. The first ministers to "Africa and the East;" while "The British and Foreign Bible Society" takes the globe as the scene of its operations, as its very title implies. The South American Missionary Society ministers to the South American continent, acting there as a Missionary, a Bible, a Colonial, Continental, and Tract Society all in one. It takes the Gospel to some 300,000 of our own countrymen settled on the extended coasts of the continent, to heathen races in the South and the North, to an immense Roman Catholic aboriginal people, and to sailors of many countries, but mostly to our own who "go down to the sea in ships and do business in great waters" (Psa. cvii. 23, R.V.).

Digitized by Google

Such are some of the chief instrumentalities which God is using to show the world that His people are "blossoming and budding ones, filling the face of the world with fruit," according to the prophecies respecting Israel. An apt illustration of our subject comes before us in the printed sermon of the Rev. E. A. Stuart, M.A., Vicar of St James's, Holloway, preached on Feb. 14, 1888, in St. Paul's Cathedral, London, on behalf of the Church Missionary Society, the text being Esther iv. 14. He said:—

In applying the text to missionary work to-night, I might address it first of all to England as a nation. Look abroad upon the nations of the world, and what nation is there that God has so marvellously raised up as this our own beloved land? When you think of the peace we enjoy in our island home, the wealth of our commerce, the multitude of our ships, the extent of our dominions, fifty years ago it was declared that wherever the sun set there might be heard the drum-beat of the British army, and our dominions have far extended since that day. India now lies beneath our feet. Burmah has been recently annexed by our troops. We have been sending out expeditions into the very centre of Africa. What nation is there under heaven that has such marvellous opportunities for the spread of the kingdom of Our Lord Jesus Christ?

Ah! brethren, and what nation is there in Europe that has the same Gospel to declare? France, alas! is now reaping the harvest of superstition in her infidelity. Germany! God has been dealing in His providence with that nation by laying His hand upon her beloved prince, and we have heard some noble utterances from high places during the past few weeks, but nevertheless Germany is honeycombed with her free thought. Spain, the land of the Inquisition, is still the enemy to the liberty of the cross of Christ. Italy has begun to raise itself from beneath the iron heel of Papal dominion. Russia! There are bright spots in that colossal empire, both among its Jewish inhabitants and the natives. But yet what nation is there that has been so blessed of God with an open Bible and with a pure faith as our own beloved land?

Thou art come, then, my brethren to a wondrous kingdom. You have your inheritance as an Englishman. You have your privileges as a Churchman. You have received temporal blessings from God. You have had spiritual blessings put within your grasp; thou art come to a marvellous kingdom, and thou art come to it at a most remarkable time—a remarkable time.

But, brethren, it is with regard to mission work that we apply our text to-day: "Who knoweth whether thou art come to the kingdom for such a time as this?"

Look at Africa. What a marvellous thing that a man like Stanley could trace out four different routes, and name his stopping places, fix his dates, right into the very centre of that Dark Continent, which was absolutely unknown when I was a boy.

Look at China. When you remember that only twenty years ago our missionaries could not reside outside the five treaty ports, and were obliged to buy their mission premises in the names of native converts: when you think of the proclamation made last year allowing the Christian missionaries to travel throughout the length and breadth of the celestial empire, and permitting any Chinaman to espouse the religion of Jesus Christ. My brethren, one hundred men in China to-day will, by the grace of God, do more than a thousand missionaries ten years hence.

When you look at Japan, opened up so marvellously to the gospel. When you look at India at our feet. We have heard much of the Mahommedan controversy of late years, but our beloved Queen reigns over more Mahommedans than the Sultan of Turkey. And any one of those in India may embrace the Gospel of Jesus Christ without any civil pains or penalties. Surely then we are come to the kingdom at a most remarkable time—a most remarkable time.

In another portion of his sermon Mr. Stuart said that if we British failed to preach the gospel to all the nations, "other nations may be raised up to take our place," that Japan might be raised up to be the evangelist of the future, unless this land is cleansed from her indifference." Not so! Not so! The Rev. Mr. Stuart should know two things. First, that in God's word the evangelization of the nations is exclusively reserved for Ephraim-Israel to do (Isa. xxvii. 6); and next that the British are that very race! Let him learn these two lessons, and then when next he preaches on Esther iv. 14, he will preach a very different sermon to the one we have just now read and commented on!

GOD'S THREE GREAT COVENANTS WITH MAN.

We are apt to forget that God made with man three great covenants; and that these were made, each and all of them, with one and the same race.

There was, to begin with, the covenant made with "Abraham and his seed for ever," not without an oath on God's part;—a covenant that was conditional, and executed with our federal head, because he had first performed his part of the contract. "God tempted Abraham, and he obeyed the voice of the Lord." Because he had done so, God made with him and his posterity for ever, a covenant (ratified by an oath), which was henceforth unconditional, and unhampered by any provisions whatsoever which could in any way prevent its execution for the benefit of the promisees. A reference to Genesis xvii. 1—9; xxii. 1—18; xxvi. 1—5; xxviii. 10—16; xxxv. 9—12, will show that the covenant therein described made by God Almighty with Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and their seed for ever (Luke i. 55, R.V.), was an entirely unconditional one, resting on the solemn oath, counsel, and promises of God Almighty, and therefore binding and current to-day in Israel's favour, exclusively.

This was not, however, the only covenant God made with the Abrahamic race. There was the one made with the fathers of Israel at Sinai, as described in Jer. xxxi. 31; and Heb. viii. 8—9, in the following words, "Behold the days come, saith the Lord, that I will make a new covenant with the House of Israel, and with the House of Judah—not according to the covenant I made with their fathers, in the day that I took them by the hand to bring them out of the land of Egypt, which My covenant they brake, although I was an husband unto them". . . . The prior covenant was the testimony of the two tables of stone, which was the work of God; and the writing of God (Exod. xxxii. 16). That covenant the people of Israel repeatedly adopted for themselves, undertaking for their part (when the words of the Lord were recited in their ears and explained to them), that "All the words which the Lord hath said, will we do and be obedient (Exod. xxiv. 3, 7, R.V.). Then followed the solemn ratification of the covenant, when Moses took the blood and sprinkled it on the people, and said, "Behold the blood of the covenant which the Lord Jehovah hath made with you concerning all these things" (ver. 8). This was the covenant made with the children of Israel, and which they engaged to keep, perform, and obey, but entirely failed therein. They fell into idolatry at once (Exod. xxxii). They drew down upon them the anger and judgment of God, and finally were cast out of the land for their disobedience to the commandments of the Lord their God. The "covenant of works" made with reciprocating covenants between God and Israel exclusively at Sinai, thus completely failed. The failure is recorded in Jer. xxxi. 31, in the passage already quoted, and in Heb. viii. 8—12 also, which repeats the fact in the New Testament. It is the burden of the whole Bible, that under the covenant of the Law, the people disastrously failed, and that "the commandment which was ordained to life, was found to be unto death" (Rom. vii. 10). "The law indeed was holy, and the commandments holy, and just, and good." But Israel was sold under sin, and the law, therefore, which was spiritual, and the reflex of the mind of God was made to be death to the chosen people of God, and slew them" (ver. 11). What was then the remedy? There was one provided from the first, and in fulness of time, the Son of God came and applied it. It was Israel's new covenant, made with both the Houses—Israel and Judah too—the people so blessed not being the Church of Christ, as some allege, but the very people of Israel and Judah, with whom the faulty old covenant of Sinai had been vainly made. That this third, or new covenant was made with the children of Israel, and with them exclusively, appears from Heb. viii. 9; and Jer. xxxi. 32; for these are the people whom the Lord took by the hand and brought out of Egypt—the people, in short, with whose fathers He had made the prior covenant, which had been broken by Israel, and therefore disregarded by the Lord, the other party thereto. In none of these three covenants are any of the nations of the earth interested with the exception of the people of God's choice, Judah and Israel—"His ancients." With the unconditional covenant made "with Abraham and his seed for ever," the non-Israelite ations have nothing in common. The covenant of Sinai was made avowedly with the children of Israel, and with them alone. The next, or new covenant, was made by name with the House of Israel, and with the House of Judah, and with them exclusively. Those Gentile non-Israelitish people who join themselves to Israel, whether by affinity or by faith, have a right to those blessings of Israel, which are spiritual in character, and to the material ones beside, if they become naturalized Israelites, or adopted sons (Isa. lvi. 6—8; Gal. iii. 7, 29). This last, or new covenant, is everlasting in its character, and can give place to no fourth, or newer covenant than itself (Heb. x. 16—18; Hos. ii. 19). It is faultless; and is connected with the "one sacrifice for sins for ever," which "perfects for ever" them that are sanctified or set apart by it (Heb. x. 12—14). This new covenant was the burden of the song of Zacharias, when he said, in Luke i. 68—79, R.V., regarding the first unconditional covenant God made with Abraham, that the oath of God granted unto us (Hebrews) that we being delivered out of the hand of our enemies, "might serve the Lord without fear." Earthly deliverance and the great nation were first in God's mind in this passage, and then holiness, spiritual blessings, and foreign missions to the heathen (ver. 75, 76, and 79); but the new covenant was Zacharias' theme. For it, he blessed the God of Israel, who had visited and wrought redemption for His people in Christ, and raised up a horn of salvation for us, in the House of His servant, David. To Him be all the praise!

Digitized by Google

"THERE IS NONE OTHER THAT FIGHTETH FOR US, BUT ONLY THOU, O GOD."

In the Form prescribed for Morning Prayer the following well-known sentences occur. The priest, or presbyter, says, "Give peace in our time, O, Lord," to which the people answer, "Because there is none other that fighteth for us, but only Thou, O God!" The blessing of peace is asked by the nation as the gift of God, and the people nationally admit that they have no allies in war, no help in battle, but the help which comes from on high from the God of Israel! The same sentiment is conveyed in Psa. cxxi. 1, 2, but the reference is to Israel, not to the British folk! There the words are these in the Revised Version:—

"I will lift up mine eyes unto the mountains;
From whence shall my help come?
My help cometh from Jehovah,
Which made Heaven and Earth."

Here we have the singular fact plainly stated, that while the Lord Jehovah is Israel's keeper, and that their help is only from Him, the British nation, in exact correspondence with the attitude of Israel, declares in her public Forms of Common Prayer that God alone fights for her, and that, therefore, having no human defence, He will grant her their needful defence against her earthly enemies. Psa. cxxiv. is more clearly in point, even than the above. For in that Psalm reference is directly made to Israel and her earthly enemies in the very spirit of the petitions in the Church service above quoted. It states,—

"If it had not been the Lord Jehovah who was on our side,
Let Israel now say,
If it had not been Jehovah, who was on our side
When men rose up against us,
Then they had swallowed us up alive."

* * * * * * * *

"The snare is broken, and we are escaped;
Our help is in the name of Jehovah, who made Heaven and Earth."

Such are the prayers and the responses which the Spirit of God put into Israel's mouth, both in the prophetic utterances of the "Sweet Psalmist of Israel," but also into the Common Prayer Book of the people of the Lord in these last days. It would be interesting to inquire whether, in point of fact, there is anything in the current history of our people to show that we answer to the prophecies, as well as to our confessions in our national prayers, as recorded in our State-directed worship? Let the following testify. In the Memories of Count Horace de Viel Castel, translated by Mr. Bousfield (published by Remington and Co.), we find some particulars respecting the really defenceless condition of our shores before the Crimean War, which illustrate the point under notice. They are as follows. The Count said:—

"General Montebello told me that he had been sent by the Emperor on a mission to England eight months before the Crimean War broke out. Having visited all the military establishments of the three kingdoms he told Lord Hardinge how surprised he was at the bad administration and wretched organisation of the English army generally. 'You have done everything, my lord,' he said, 'to prevent the possibility of a French invasion, and yet may I be allowed to tell you fifty thousand French troops landed on any point of your coast would meet with no very serious resistance, and would achieve the conquest of England.' Lord Hardinge replied, 'You are more generous than the Duke of Wellington, who has often said that twelve thousand Frenchmen would suffice for the task.' The Marquis d'Andiffret also told me that, after visiting all the Government offices in England, he could not help letting the officials know his astonishment at finding everything so badly conducted and the elementary principles of administration so little understood."

Here we have a French military expert openly declaring that the invasion and conquest of England, with only 50,000 French troops would be an easy task, and the corroboration of the Iron Duke, who admitted that not 50,000 would be needed, but only 12,000 to complete it! Well may our Church Service look to the Lord Jehovah for our national defence, and cry to Him, "Give peace in our time, for there is none other that fighteth for us, but only Thou, O God!"

It may be said that these boastings of a French General and Marquis related to times long gone by, over 30 years ago, and that the conquest of England could not now be effected at all. Let those who so think read Sir Charles Dilke's Essay in the June number of the "Fortnightly Review," and there he will find that the ex-Minister, once Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, knows what he is writing about, and that his view is that the invasion and capture of London under certain circumstances is a military possibility, which no one will deny who has the means of knowing the truth. He declares that "a landing, either on the East or the South coast, is practicable, as every student of military affairs knows;" and, further, that we have not 60,000 men to put into the field at a week's notice even to repel invasion, much less to go abroad and carry the war into the enemy's country. A Manchester paper, commenting on these things, makes the following grave remarks:—

Digitized by Google

"The facts put forward now are by no means new. The state of the army has been for years a source of the gravest uneasiness to all those of the superior officers in the service who take a deep interest in their profession. It is impossible that successive Governments can have been unaware of this. Report after report has been sent to the authorities. The best soldiers in the country have again and again, officially and unofficially, though perhaps not publicly, pointed out the nature of the defects and made suggestions for their remedy. Yet for years past all these remonstrances have been in vain. It seems as though at length the day of popular awakening were at hand. But it should be remembered in time by those in high places that the reform of the army by the popular will is likely to be sweeping and severe. There is still a respite left in which the War Office may reform itself. If the delay continues till the general indignation finds vent, the War Office will disappear in the storm—to be replaced by some more modern and perhaps more democratic institution."

Such are some of the alarmist statements which go the round of the papers now and again. No doubt there is truth at the bottom of all of them. Our army is a splendid one; but there is not much of it, and it is almost impossible to get it to take the field and keep it. Our possessions are so enormous and world-wide that our Navy, vast as it is, has its powers strained to the utmost to defend the Colonies and the trade routes as well as our home coasts and weak points, which it is vitally needful for us to safeguard and protect. Though the invasion of these Islands is under certain imaginable circumstances perfectly feasible, it would be, of course, a very difficult operation. The foreign troops might be landed on these shores, but the difficulty would be to take them away if unsuccessful, or to obtain reinforcements for the invading party once on shore. However that may be, what is patent to observation is that our home defences are perfectly inadequate, and that if we were not Israel we might be attacked, invaded, and possibly conquered by the earthly Powers who long to destroy the Lord's anointed, His chosen ones, and His heritage. But what saith the Scripture? By that testimony our case must stand or fall. In Isa. liv. 15, we have a promise, national in its character, which governs this issue. "Behold, they may gather together (margin, stir up strife), but not by Me. Whosoever shall gather (stir up strife) against thee shall fall (margin, away to thee), because of thee." "No weapon that is formed against thee shall prosper, and every tongue that shall rise against thee in judgment, thou shalt condemn. This is the heritage of the servants of Jehovah, and their righteousness, which is of Me, saith the Lord 'Jehovah.'" And in regard to the place where our lot is cast, here is the Lord's declaration: "I will appoint a place for My people Israel, and will plant them that they may dwell in their own place, and be moved no more; neither shall the children of wickedness afflict them any more as at the first, and as from the day that I commanded judges to be over My people Israel, and I will cause thee to rest from all thine enemies" (2 Sam. vii. 10, 11, R.V.). This suffices. The Lord keepeth His people. He neither slumbereth nor sleepeth" (Psa. cxxi. 1—8).

ISRAEL'S WEALTH.

THE Financial News of February 15th published an article on "The Wealth of England," which is a remarkable commentary on the Scriptural blessing which conferred on "Israel obedient" "the power to get wealth," and the ability to "lend to many nations;" but the necessity to borrow from none. The article showed that, referring to the income of the British people, the income-tax returns, which afford a good index in the matter, proved that in 1885—6 the taxable income of our people amounted to over 42 million pounds sterling, realized from Government funds, stocks, railway shares, and the like, and that from investments in public companies amounted to 111 million pounds—being a total of £153,090,000 derived from investments. As this represented an income obtained from investments which are paying not more than 4 per cent., the writer calculated that our nation had at the present hour actually invested, in addition to what is required for trades and professions, the huge capital of 4,000 million pounds sterling! This, it must be remembered, is an advance of 540 millions in excess of the investments of our people only 10 years ago. The writer in the Financial News goes on to comment on these figures thus:—

These figures show the enormous accumulations of wealth in Great Britain, but they also give point to the observations of Sir Edward Sullivan in the Morning Post of yesterday. While the owners of capital go on investing abroad and re-investing their growing savings, the interests of trade and of labour have not improved. There is, indeed, a change for the better now, and we may hope it will continue; but Sir Edward argues, with some force and with his usual eloquence, that the policy of free imports without free trade, checks the employment of capital and labour at home, and starves the many to enrich the few.

There is always some information to be desired which we do not get. For example, in 1884—5, we have a statement of the countries whose Government bonds we held in each four years from 1873 to 1885. Some of these items were interesting, such as the fact that the income derived from Government bonds of the Cape and New Zealand increased fourfold, while that from Russian and Turkish bonds was reduced by one-half; but there is no such table in the succeeding years, nor is there anything in any of the returns to show us the distribution of our investments in foreign and colonial railways and mines.

Four thousand million sterling! This sum represents more than our nation's huge national debt, five times repeated, and it is really only the savings of the richest nation in the world. Our annual savings, as we have noticed before, amount to 230 to 250 millions a year. The editor of an American Magazine, "The Truth," in an article on "Englishmen not Jews," makes it a strong point against Our Identity that "with the exception of one of their numerous offspring, the United States, the English are the wealthiest people on the earth." "The threatenings of God," he adds, "against Israel, surely are not fulfilled in the singularly successful and powerful career of Great Britain."

It is strange that this American writer overlooks the fact that God promised "Israel obedient" just the very gifts he sees we British possess; and that, with the "power to get wealth," He has granted us to be "the head and not the tail; above only and not beneath all the other nations of the earth." He has fallen into the very common mistake of confounding the Jews, or House of Judah, with the House of Israel, and thus fails to recognise that God must perform His promises to Israel in exile, as well as His threats against disobedient and rebellious Judah, who refused to serve the Son of God. The wealth God gave His people Israel, He has refused to the House of Judah, though doubtless there are exceptions among them, and there are many millionaires who are Jews. But it can be easily shown that the promise of the "power to get wealth" is reserved now, since Judah's rebellion, for the House of Israel, the possessor of the birthright, and of the "kingdom of God," which the Lord Jesus Himself gave to the fruit-bearing race in Matt. xxi. 43. "The power to get wealth" was given by the Lord to His people in order "that He might establish His covenant which He swear unto their fathers as it is this day" (Deut. viii. 18, R.V). The oath conferred on "Abraham and his seed for ever," the privilege of blessing all nations, families, and kindreds of the earth;" the privilege being that of taking Christ, His Gospel, His Word, His Sabbaths, and His Laws to them. The Jews are disqualified for this task, by reason of rebellious unbelief. Therefore, it devolves on Israel, the other House, to qualify them for which duties God gave them "the power to get wealth" to enable them to acquire thereby Empire, the Gates, the sea power, and the dominion over the heathen, in the four quarters of the globe. In the prosecution of their work for God the House of Israel is like the bush in the wilderness, at the back of Horeb; the little cactus bush,

Digitized by Google

"burning with fire, but not consumed." Why not consumed? Because the Lord God of Israel was in it! It was burning because God was there! Separated from other bushes because of the great marvel and wonder it exhibited because God was there! and "it was not consumed," because like Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego, cast into the burning fiery furnace, there was a fourth there with them to neutralise the power of the fire, one like the Son of God (or a Son of the Gods) who was in fact, Jehovah-Jesus, God the Son! (Dan. iii. 25, R.V.) So God is now in the midst of the British nation, causing us "to dwell alone," and in the midst of perils "to dwell in safety."

He gives us wealth and the power to get it; but by dwelling with and in us, He deprives that wealth of the power to debase and hurt us. He uses it Himself indeed, as He said He would, "that He may establish His covenant as He sware unto our fathers as it is this day" (Deut. viii. 18). To Him therefore, let us ascribe all the praise for the magnificent wealth He has bestowed upon us, according to the prophecies.

ANGLO-ISRAEL FREE DISTRIBUTION FUND.

Fifty-fourth Monthly Report.

The following donations and subscriptions, from April 13th to May 17th, are very gratefully acknowledged:—

By the Treasurer: Miss H., Wolverhampton (per Philo-Israel), 2s. 6d.; F. B., Teddington, £1; Mrs. M., Riding Mill, £1; E. J., Bayswater, 2s. 6d.; Miss B., Colchester, 10s. Per Miss E. M. Rush: Miss C., Bristol, 2s. 6d.; A few Sergeants and Police Constables of the R Division, 5s.; Mrs. W. F. L., 10s.

By Mr. C. Horner: G. Kerr (per Banks and Son), 3s. 11d.; Mrs. M. C. (monthly subscription), 2s. 6d.; F. H. G., Burmah, 6s.; Mrs. C. B. (monthly subscription), 5s.; Mrs. T., 2s. 6d.

Total, £4 12s. 5d.

J. Lawrence, Hon. Treasurer.

Donations of Literature.—The following gifts are thankfully acknowledged:—200 copies of "A B C," from Dr. Alder Smith, being a paper read before the Wolverhampton Conference; some leaflets from Miss F., Guildford; Banners from Miss J., Gunfield; Miss D., London; Miss S., Mortlake; "A Well-wisher," Leamington; Mrs. M., Riding Mill-on-Tyne. The Banners have been directed to go to Sheffield, Market Weighton, Hull, etc.

Literature Distribution.—Twenty parcels of literature have been forwarded to the following places:—Sheffield (2), Stirling, Edinburgh, Hound, Hamilton, Stockport, Moreton-in-Marsh, West Coker, Birkenhead, Liverpool, Brighton, Clapham, Devonport, Commercial-road, Manchester, Calne, Stokes-road, Malta, Moulmein, Burmah.

Banner Distribution continues at the rate of 147 weekly.

Correspondence.—We have the following interesting letter from Lewes, giving our friend's first attempts at introducing Israel, and its favourable reception by his audience:—"Dear Sir,—I promised to tell you how I succeeded in my first effort to introduce the subject of Our Identity. I must now tell you that the time originally fixed for it was unavoidably postponed for a week, and then when it did take place I had such a short time allotted to me after our Lodge business that I did not get half way through with my subject. However, you will be pleased to hear I had an intelligent audience, although a rather small one, and at the close of my remarks I was cordially thanked and requested to continue the subject on a future occasion. Well, this Thursday, 26th instant, the Lodge held another open meeting for the purpose, members of the Order being allowed to bring friends with them who are not members, when I had not only a larger audience, but more time to devote to my subject, and I have every reason to be satisfied with the result, for at the conclusion of the meeting I was again warmly thanked, and what is of a thousand times greater importance, I was again unanimously requested to continue the subject. So I have every hope that my humble effort will be blessed. God grant it! At the close of both meetings I distributed the leaflets you so kindly sent me, which were evidently gladly accepted. I purpose continuing the lectures as occasion serves under the auspices of our Lodge, and I indulge the hope that a little later on I may be able to undertake an entirely public meeting, if I can get some help to that end.—C. E."

From our local treasurer and agent at Malta we have the following letter:—"Please receive a P.O. for 5s. from Mr. J. F., an officer belonging to the A—— yacht. He informs me that he had heard of the Identity some years since, but had not taken up the subject to study for himself until within the last two years, and he told me he was so thoroughly pleased to know he belonged to the Lost Tribes that he should like to give a trifle to the Free Distribution Fund. He is already a subscriber to the Banner, and is working among the officers and men in the yacht, trying to prove from Scripture that we are verily the lost sheep of the House of Israel. He was very pleased to have a card and be enrolled amongst the members of Israel's Scripture and Prayer Union. I was enabled to supply him with leaflets and pamphlets, which he was pleased to accept, and quite realised his duty to spread the glorious news wherever he went."

A Sower, who travels by rail almost daily, writes how constantly he is engaged in the work of distribution, and mentions the scoffing is not so great as it was a few years ago, and that people seem more ready to accept this great Israelite revelation.

Charles Horner, Secretary.

Contributions to the Fund will be thankfully received and acknowledged by the Hon. Treasurer, Miss J. Lawrence, Rosslyn, Hampton-road, Upper Teddington, Middlesex; or by Mr. Charles Horner, 34, Sheen-park, Richmond-on-Thames. Cheques may be crossed, "London and Provincial Bank, Teddington Branch." Grants of literature will be made, as far as funds allow, on application to the Secretary.

ISRAEL'S SCRIPTURE AND PRAYER UNION.

The number of cards now issued, including those in the hands of the local secretaries, is 1,451, one new member having joined since our last report.

New members are requested, when writing for cards, to kindly state whether their names are to be entered as Mr., Mrs., or Miss, etc.

For the convenience of those members who wish to continue the daily reading, the following list of chapters for June is appended:—

1st ...	Mark	iii.	12th ...	Mark	xiv.	23rd ...	Luke	ix.
2nd...	,,	iv.	13th ...	,,	xv.	24th ...	,,	x.
3rd ...	,,	v.	14th ...	,,	xvi.	25th ...	,,	xi.
4th ...	,,	vi.	15th ...	Luke	i.	26th ...	,,	xii.
5th ...	,,	vii.	16th ...	,,	ii.	27th ...	,,	xiii.
6th ...	,,	viii.	17th ...	,,	iii.	28th ...	,,	xiv.
7th ...	,,	ix.	18th ...	,,	iv.	29th ...	,,	xv.
8th ...	,,	x.	19th ...	,,	v.	30th ...	,,	xvi.
9th ...	,,	xi.	20th ...	,,	vi.
10th ...	,,	xii.	21st ...	,,	vii.
11th ...	,,	xiii.	22nd ...	,,	viii.

The card of membership will be sent on receipt of three stamps.

The first and second series of Monthly Comments on the whole Bible, by Philo-Israel, may be obtained in volume form. Price in paper cover, 1s. 2d. each, post free; in cloth, 2s. each, post free. The "Prayers for Daily Use," being a prayer for each day of the week, by Philo-Israel, are 1d., or 9d. per dozen, postage extra. The prayer of the Union, as on the Card of Membership, may be obtained printed in larger type, price 1d. for three copies, post free, or 1s. per 100 for distribution. Address, Miss E. Sibbald, 3, Townshend-villas, Richmond, Surrey.

The remains recently discovered, enclosed in a stone coffin in the crypt of Canterbury Cathedral, and supposed to be the bones of Thomas à Becket, have been re-buried. They were placed in an elm shell, made to fit the stone coffin, and then re-interred in the exact spot where they were found, which is in the chapel of Thomas à Becket, and close to the spot where the murdered Archbishop was originally buried.

Errata.—On page 201, foot-note, for "pages 61 and 62," read pages 118, 119.

Digitized by Google

NOTICES.

All communications intended for the Editor, to be addressed: "Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Clifton, Bristol.

SUBSCRIPTIONS. £ s. d.

Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free 0 7 6
Two Copies (including Double Numbers) 0 13 6
Three Copies " " " 1 0 4
Four Copies " " " 1 5 6
Six Copies " " " 1 16 4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-grand, London, to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C., or F. W. PARRY & Co., 29, Paternoster-row, London.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

Contents Bills and Show Cards may be obtained on application to the Publishers.

Advertisements should be sent to ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

Prepaid Advertisements are inserted at the rate of thirty words for 1s. 4d.

BLACKPOOL.— Anglo-Israelites will find COMFORTABLE APARTMENTS, Public or Private, near Sea or Gardens, at Mrs. Breakells, 39, Adelaide Street.

SPECIAL OFFER.

VOLUMES

II., III., IV., V., VI., VII. and VIII.

OF

ISRAEL'S HOPE

AND DESTINY.

Edited by DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, Esq., J.P.

Bound in handsome cloth, gilt, are now offered, post free to any part of the World for 2s. 6d. per volume, or the Seven Volumes will be sent for 15s. Orders must be sent direct to the Publishers, ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet Court, Fleet Street, E.C., as they cannot be supplied through a Bookseller at this price.

Each Volume contains a large number of interesting and important articles on the Anglo-Israel Question, Great Pyramid, and other Prophetical and Biblical Subjects.

Just published—Cloth, 2s. 6d.—a re-issue of

The Origin of Masonic Ritual and Tradition:

A Lecture on the Three Degrees, by BRO. WM. ROWBOTTOM, P.M., 1028, with facsimile of a very rare Masonic engraving published in 1789.

"Exquisitely clear and singularly correct in everything wherein I may be any authority or guide."—Professor PIAZZI SMYTH. "Will be found of considerable interest to many besides Masons."—Church Bells.

Oxford: S. Rowbottom and Son; London: R. Banks and Son, Racquet Court, Fleet Street, E.C.; and F. W. Parry and Co., 29, Paternoster Row, E.C.

Price Five Shillings.—"Substantially and attractively got up, and profusely illustrated."—Oldham Chronicle.

Eildon Grange: A Tale.

By ANDREW CLARK, M.A., Vicar of St. Michael's, Oxford. "One of the most charming books. . . . The illustrations are full of playful humour."—Scotsman. "The book is undoubtedly a happy one."—The Oxford Magazine. "Both entertaining and bracing."—Dundee Advertiser.

Oxford: S. Rowbottom and Son; London: Hamilton, Adams and Co., 32, Paternoster Row, E.C.

☞ Ask for this Book at the Libraries.

WORKS BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

The History of the House of Israel. How They Were Lost and How They Were Found. Told for the children. Price 6d., cloth 1s.; post free 7d. and 1s. 1d. Fifth edition.

A Resume of the Scriptural Argument Proving the Identity of the British Race with the Lost Ten Tribes. Price 1d.; 6s. per hundred, postage 6d.

Anglo-Israelism. True, Not False. Being Philo-Israel's Reply to the Rev. Canon Bell's pamphlet, "Anglo-Israelism: True or False?" Price 1d., 6s. 6d. per 100. 16 pages, crown 8vo.

An Elementary Digest or Sketch of the Chief Facts and Teachings of the Great Pyramid of Egypt. Adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific 56 pages, Illustrated with Diagrams, price 4d., post free 5d. 10th Thousand.

Our Identity with the House of Israel. Price 4d., Reprinted from "Clifton Chronicle Letters'

Our Identity: What it is Not; What it is; and Our Obligations To-day in Respect to it Being a Lecture recently delivered in London by Philo-Israel, and published by special request. Price 2d., a reduction for quantities.

Are the English People the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel? An Inquiry Establishing the Identity of the British Nation with the Lost Ten Tribes. 4d.

London: Robert Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

NEW BOOK BY DR. WILD.

Just Published, Price 3s., Cloth, Bevelled Boards, Gilt Lettered. Sent by Post on receipt of Published Price.

TALKS

FOR

THE TIMES.

BY JOSEPH WILD, M.A., D.D.,

Pastor of the Bond-st. Congregational Church, Toronto.

CONTENTS.—Chapter 1. A Gift of One Hundred and Ninety-Two Million Acres of Land. 2. The Return of the Jews to Palestine. 3. Folks that won't be Somebody. 4. The Four Prophecies of Egypt. 5. The Stone Kingdom and Dynamite; and the Orange Bill. 6. "144!" 7. "666!" 8. The Transit of Venus. 9. The Miracles of Antichrist; and the High Rock Image of Massachusetts, U.S. 10. The Man who could not sleep, and what came of it. 11. The Rainbow. 12. London Destroyed, and Jerusalem a Seaport. 13. Liberalism. 14. A Graft without a Stock. 15. Mouldy Bread and an Oath. 16. A Tombstone Inscription. 17. Dog Lappers. 18. How to get Rich.

Dr. JOSEPH WILD'S WORKS

The most useful works on the subject.

NEW EDITION JUST PUBLISHED.

THE LOST TEN TRIBES

Price 3s., post free 3s. 3d.

'We have much pleasure in directing attention to this handsome volume. . . . We promise our readers that if they procure this work, and will peruse it, they will find 'Our Identity' discussed in a clear, novel, racy, and from an American point of view, which is sure to interest."—Banner of Israel.

THE FUTURE OF ISRAEL AND JUDAH,

Price 2s., post free 2s. 3d.

R. BANKS & SON, RACQUET-COURT, FLEET-ST.

WORKS BY PASTOR CHINIQUY.

Cloth, gilt lettered, 5s. Sent post free for P.O.

FIFTY YEARS IN THE CHURCH OF ROME.—Complete Revised Edition on good paper, well bound in Cloth, Gilt Lettered, nearly 600 pages. With New Portrait and Autograph of the Author. "No history like it since the time of Luther."—New York Witness. Be particular to order the Complete Edition published by Banks.

1s., post free 1s. 2d.

THE PRIEST, THE WOMAN, AND THE CONFESSIONAL.—"In its pages will be found ample evidence of the danger of the Confessional."—English Churchman.

Price 6d. in paper covers; on toned paper, in cloth boards, gilt lettered, 1s., post free for stamps.

PAPAL IDOLATRY. An Exposure of the Dogma of Transubstantiation and Mariolatry, to which is added "My Reasons Why I will Never Go Back to the Church of Rome." The Bible Christian Magazine says:—"Unanswerable! The most powerful argument against Transubstantiation, in the same space, that we have read."

R. BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

MR. EDWARD HINE has returned from his lecturing tour in America. Friends wishing to arrange for him to lecture can communicate with Isaac Loveland, Shoreham, near Sevenoaks, Kent, at present fixing no dates. Mr. Hine's publications have had a large circulation, and can be obtained of F. W Parry & Co., 29, Paternoster Row, London, E.C.

Forty-Seven Identifications, 6d., post free 7d
Cui Bono? 6d., post free, 7d.
Lost Israel Found. 3s 6d., post free, 3s. 9d
Also The Nation Warned by the Scripture Teachings of the Great Pyramid. 6d., post, 7d.

Price 2s. 6d., Cheap Edition, 1/-

BIBLE LESSONS AND REFLECTIONS.

By ROBERT GAIRDNER, of Kilmarnock, N.B.

"Mr. Gairdner has given us in his book a series of Bible lessons, with his own reflections added thereto, and though he has been very cautious in the latter, and has not committed himself too broadly, he has plainly let it be seen that he is an Anglo-Israelite by conviction, and that the Scriptures which he quotes at length and extensively throughout his book, are meant to teach Our Identity and God's faithfulness, from first to last, to His promises to Abraham and His seed for ever."—Banner of Israel.

ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-st.

BY THE REV. ROBERT DOUGLAS, M.A.

(Vicar of Kidsgrove, Stoke-on-Trent),

EPHRAIM - ENGLAND. The Nineteenth Century Revelation of the Fruits of History. Price 4s., post free.

THE TWO WITNESSES. A Monthly Identity Magazine. Price 6d., Annual Subscription, post free, 6s.

London: ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-st.

New Work on the Identity of Lost Israel

By the late BISHOP TITCOMB.

Now ready, in Cloth Gilt, Bevelled Boards, Imperial 8vo. Price 3s.; sent Post Free for Postal Order or Stamps.

A MESSAGE TO THE CHURCH

FROM

THE NINETEENTH CENTURY

BY THE LATE

RT. REV. BISHOP TITCOMB, D.D.

ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet Court, Fleet Street.

F. W. PARRY & Co., 29, Paternoster Row, E.C.

SOUND, PURE, WHITE

TEETH!

Those who value these will try

CARBOLINE

(The Great Sanitary Tooth Paste).

1/6 & 2/6 per Pot.

Through Chemists, or post free from the Makers,

GEORGE & WELCH

WORCESTER.

Lancet writes:—"To save the teeth use a good carbolic daily."

THE WATERS OF HERMON.

THE interesting circumstance of the re-production by modern science of these celebrated Waters of Antiquity, so famed in Biblical times, is one of the most important illustrations of the advance of the age. Differing from all other Waters they contain no mineral ingredients, so that the system, instead of being lowered by their use, is steadily built up, while the functions of life are restored to a healthy condition. And it is, therefore, with extreme gratification that this is now brought within the reach of the general public. The well-known curative properties of this famous medicine are promptly manifested in the following disorders:—Indigestion, Biliousness, Congestion of the Liver, Nausea and Vomiting, Disorders of the Stomach and Bowels and their consequences, Constipation, Piles, Flatulence, Repletion, Spasms, Discomfort or Pain after Meals, Pain Between the Shoulders, Pains in the Back and Loins, Cold in the Head, Coughs of various character, Difficulty of Breathing, Giddiness and Sick Headache, Effects of Alcohol, Overworked Brain, Affections of the Nerves, &c. Price 2s. 9d. per bottle, post free. THE WATERS OF HERMON DEPOT, 107, King Street, Hammersmith, London.

INVALUABLE REMEDY

HUMAN LIFE.—FIFTY YEARS' Record of Facts, Principles, and Discoveries (just published, complete) Relating to the Improvement and Preservation of Human Life on Earth. Origin and true treatment of diseases. A series of articles by DR. SAMUEL BIRLEY, M.D., Ph.D. Book form, 50 pages. SENT FREE to every applicant by the publishers, GORDON B. MURRAY & CO., 50, Theobald's-road, Holborn, E.C. Write to-day

PIANOFORTES, Harmoniums, American Organs. Why buy at shops inferior made instruments, and pay large profits, when you can buy direct from the Maker High-class Instruments, and save 50 per cent. by so doing? Full value allowed for old Instruments in exchange as part payment. Write for Price Lists and Testimonials to G. LINSTEAD, 2, Oseney Crescent, Camden Road, London. Established 1874.

Certain HARNESS' Cure.

ELECTROPATHIC BELT

FOR

CONSTIPATION

Rev. D. SUTCLIFFE, Vicar of Holme, Burnley, Lancashire, writes:—"My health has improved very satisfactorily, and I am now entirely free from the constipation I used to suffer from so severely."

Guaranteed to generate a mild continuous current of Electricity, which speedily cures all Disorders of the Nerves, Stomach, Liver and Kidneys. Thousands of Testimonials. Pamphlet & Advice free on application to Mr. C. B. Harness, Consulting Electrician, the Medical Battery Co. Ltd.

Only Address,

52, OXFORD ST. LONDON, W. (Corner of Rathbone Place.)

Call to-day, if possible, or write at once

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS & SON, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. W. PARRY (late GUEST & Co.), 29 PATERNOSTER-ROW WEDNESDAY, JUNE 6, 1888 [All rights reserved

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."

(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. XII., No. 598. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, JUNE 13, 1888. [PRICE ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
Imperial Expansion and its Advocate, the Right Hon. Joseph Chamberlain	237
The Saviour of Egypt.—The Great One	238
An Attack on the Strongholds of Our Opponents. A Lecture by V. M. Cox. Part II.	239
The Defence of the Isle of the West	240
The Epistle of St. Paul to the Romans	241
The Lost Ten Tribes of Israel	242
British-Israelite Belief.—The Reticence of Its Friends	243

IMPERIAL EXPANSION AND ITS ADVOCATE, THE RIGHT HON. JOSEPH CHAMBERLAIN.

Is Joseph Chamberlain also among the prophets? Does he, a radical of the radicals, also advocate the further increase of the already bloated British Empire, and tell us it must be enlarged? Something very like it he said, at the meeting of the London Chamber of Commerce on May 14, when an address was delivered by the Rev. John Mackenzie on South African matters. Mr. Chamberlain was chairman on that occasion, and spoke openly on the subject of the need of a bolder policy in that land. He freely admitted that when he had been in power with Mr. Gladstone, he was himself as much to blame for "the policy of shirking" followed all that time as anybody else. "There is no doubt about that," he said! The whole object of all Governments for long has been to get rid of the trouble of a costly possession, and burdensome responsibilities. This policy of shirking, he added, was paramount when self-government was conceded to the Cape Colony, when premature efforts were made to secure confederation, when war took place in the Transvaal, when we retired from that country, when we transferred the Basutos to the Cape Colony, and when we saw Germany seizing portions of the west coasts, and made no sign! We have tried to avoid wars, and yet had to wage six costly ones, involving a deplorable loss of human life and between seven and eight millions sterling.

Mr. Chamberlain has now shaken off his delusions and seen the folly of these ways. The policy of "shirking" has, he finds, been a disastrous failure. It has led to loss of life and treasure, and settled nothing. If we want to act consistently, and carry out the "shirking" programme in a consistent way, we ought to withdraw altogether, and leave Germany, which, is quite willing, to step in and annex Africa, with its gold and diamonds and treasures untold. But Mr. Chamberlain does not approve of all this. What he does recommend the nation to do, is stated in the following straightforward words, such as we have used, in meaning, for many years. He stated:—

Speaking for myself personally, I say reject a policy which will lead to such results. (Renewed cheers). Now, what is the alternative? There is only one alternative, and that is, that we should frankly accept our obligations and responsibilities. (Cheers). We should maintain firmly and resolutely our hold over the territories that we have already acquired, and we should offer freely our protectorate to those friendly chiefs and people that are stretching out their hands towards us and seeking our protection and our interference. (Cheers). I have no doubt that a policy of this kind would enable us with much less risk than has attended the policy we have hitherto pursued to prescribe the conditions under which in the future this necessary work of colonization and civilization shall go forward. I believe that by such a policy alone can we secure the interests of the great majority of the population and can we justify our position as a nation.

When considering what would be the result of abandoning our colonies and dependencies, Mr. Chamberlain made the following very sensible remarks, which are also quite in accord with BANNER opinions:—

We know how many of our fellow-subjects are even at this moment unemployed. Is there any man in his senses who believes that the crowded population of these islands would exist for a single day if we were to cut adrift from the great dependencies which now look to us for protection and assistance? (Cheers). The area of the United Kingdom is only 120,000 miles; the area of the British Empire is over 9,000,000 square miles, of which nearly 500,000 are to be found in the portion of Africa with which we have been dealing. If to-morrow it were possible, as some people apparently desire, to reduce by a stroke of the pen, the British Empire to the dimensions of the United Kingdom, half at least of our population would be starved (cheers), and at a time when a policy of disintegration is openly preached by high authorities (renewed cheers) it is well to look the consequences squarely in the face. No doubt the burden of this great Empire is tremendous, and the responsibilities and obligations which fall upon us are greater than those which have weighed upon any other nation in the history of the world. It is true, as was so well said by the poet whose loss we are all deploring, that "the weary Titan staggers under the too vast orb of his fate." But if we face our obligations, if we perform our duties well and faithfully, the honour and the credit will be proportioned to the sacrifices that we may make, and nothing is to be gained by an abandonment of those duties, for that will be as fatal to our material prosperity as it will be discreditable and derogatory to our national character and our national honour. (Cheers.)

The St. James's Gazette of May 16, remarking on these grand sentiments, expressed its appreciation of them in these terms:—

Digitized by Google

Mr. Chamberlain has been compelled to notice that the maintenance of our imperial responsibilities is a matter of life and death for us. The "shrinkage of empire" would mean the shrinkage of the means of providing for our swarming population, the curtailment of the area in which we can carry on our trade. The "weary Titan," as he says, may stagger under his burden; but he will perish of starvation if he drops it. As regards South Africa we have still time to build up a great dominion in that mismanaged quarter of the world. But the time is short, and if we make a few more mistakes the opportunity will be gone for ever.

Herein, of course, the writer in St. James's erred. We shall not lose our opportunity or forfeit Africa. We must wait God's good time, and Africa—the whole of it—will be ours soon enough to win it for Christ! It is His already, and He bought it with His precious, precious blood. He uses His instruments to bring it into subjection to Himself, and His agents there, as elsewhere, will, and must be Israel, the British race. So He has given us India, North America, Australasia, North Borneo, Egypt, and other spots, with promise of the planet at last to keep and to hold for Him. Mr. Chamberlain's conversion to views in full accordance with God's, are not to be wondered at. He is an honest man, sees his past mistakes and admits them. He sees now that our Empire must expand for the good of the world itself, and he would accept its expansion and encourage it by welcoming protectorates whenever and wherever native races who are clamouring for it everywhere in South Africa, offer it! He goes in now for an Imperial, but not a colonial or parochial policy, and doubtless judges right! God has given the world to Israel, and therefore Africa. Our nation is Israel, and we see how much of Africa we already hold. Under Mr. Chamberlain's present policy we can easily imagine that ere long the thin red line will pass round all the dark continent, and so include it in the kingdom of our Jehovah-Jesus. He has settled the question for us by permitting the discovery just at this juncture of rich mines of gold all over the Transvaal and its neighbourhood. These mines, added to the treasure, in diamonds, which He has also given to our race has practically brought the matter to an issue. They have brought the Anglo-Saxon into enjoyment of the promised heritage of Joseph (Deut. xxxiii. 15, 16), and so led to the coming occupation of the whole land by this "pushing," supplanting, energetic, noble race.

All along God's purposes have beckoned us on to take possession of the vast heritage He has reserved for us, but as Mr. Chamberlain has pointed out, he and all his companions in the late Government spurned the gift, tried to put it from them, and took refuge in the foolish policy of "shirk." It has cost us blood enough, and treasure enough, God knows! Now let us obey God, and receive His bounties in a better spirit! South and Central Africa will be ere long in the possession of some European Power! Either the Germans or ourselves must have it; and the former Power has neither the colonial ability, nor the gospel grace to respond to God's requirements in the nation destined to carry out His purposes of love towards the miserable African races. Besides, Israel is "to blossom and bud, and fill the face of the African world with fruit." But the German nation is not Israel, or part of Israel, and is therefore disqualified! Great Britain is Israel, and to her will therefore be confided this glorious work! Let her therefore praise the Lord!

THE SAVIOUR OF EGYPT.—THE GREAT ONE.

We hardly think that "the Saviour" promised to Egypt in her distress, by Isa. xix. 20, R.V., being a "Defender," a "great or mighty One," and "Deliverer," can be the Lord Jesus Christ. We believe these descriptions refer to some great and mighty earthly Power like Israel, which being entrusted with the government, care, and protection of Egypt, saves her from ruin and destruction, defends her from her political enemies, and delivers her from all her financial difficulties. If, however, our readers prefer to consider that the Lord Jesus is here described by the titles in question, we know that He acts by the instrumentality of man, and therefore it is clear that the human agency He must employ to save Egypt must be endowed with these very qualities, namely,—power to save a ruined country; greatness and mightiness as a people, and ability to deliver from troubles of all sorts and kinds. At the present moment the British are appearing in the very character delineated in Isaiah's prophecy, chapter xix. 20, since they are "a great and mighty nation," governing Egypt successfully; defending it from enemies at home and abroad; besides delivering it from financial and other difficulties.

In illustration of our remarks we find that the Daily News of February 16th, has published some figures from Sir E. Vincent's report on the present financial position of Egypt, showing that "an immense improvement has taken place in the general financial situation, since we have been in Egypt without oppressing the taxpayers. There is, for instance, a surplus, over expenditure, of revenue amounting to £E425,000; or £E85,000 nett, for 1887. The cash balances at the government departments in which they chiefly accrue, all show an increase over the sums in hand at the same date last year. The consolidated debt has been reduced in 1887 by £574,000. Of the domain debt £440,000 has been extinguished. All this shows good management and progress. But the Daily News' remarks are so much to the point that we must reproduce them for our readers' benefit. The writer said, in reference to the above facts and figures:—

If we look to the material position of the masses of the population we still find that the progress made is no less distinct. Only a few years ago the Egyptian peasantry were burdened with an enormous debt, estimated to amount in the aggregate to from £6,000,000 to £9,000,000. For this they were paying exorbitant interest to the village usurers. The Corvee was in full swing, and the unfortunate fellaheen were dragged away from their homes and farms, often at the most critical season, to do forced labour, many weary miles away, in cleaning out canals which watered distant provinces, and the benefit of which the poor fellah could not see. When he returned to his homestead he found often that while he had been toiling hard, naked, in the blazing sun, for the common good, his own lands were dried up and his crops destroyed, because some Pacha had turned off the precious flow of water to enrich his own fat pastures. Often, too, his sons had been carried off as conscripts, to fight, and die by the sword or of misery in that horrible Soudan, from which, it is a legend among the fellaheen, no soldier returns. But the worst was yet to come—the dreaded tax-gatherer appeared, perhaps even before the tax was due; and when the wretched farmer pointed to his parched acres and withered crops the only answer was the signal to hang him up by the heels and apply the "courbash" to his soles until the money was forthcoming. Sometimes the torture had the desired effect, and the amount demanded was procured from the Greek usurer in exchange for next year's crops, not yet in the ground; sometimes it was taken from the hidden recess where it had been laid up in times of fabulous cotton prices, when even Ismael's rapacity could not squeeze all the profit out of the landholders, who were treated as his serfs; but these hoards could not last long, and were soon exhausted. It was in these dark days for Egypt that England took up the onerous task of regenerating the country financially and materially. It would be rash to say that she has fully accomplished it; but no impartial inquirer who visits this country from end to end, and acquires his information at first hand from the peasant himself, and is acquainted with the state of affairs at the period to which I allude, can gainsay that the progress made under the most difficult circumstances is highly creditable to the English Government and to the high-minded and zealous officials to whom they entrusted the work of reform. As to the financial situation, the figures are before every one, and those who run may read that Egypt is rapidly emerging from embarrassment in that direction. Moreover the sharpest observers in the world and those most alive to their own interests, the members of the European Stock Exchanges, have recognised the improvement by buying Egyptian bonds, and not only by buying, but by keeping them.

Digitized by Google

In spite of low prices the debt of the fellaheen has been largely diminished, and this without ejectments, for on examining the lists of expropriation of land we find that they are only a mere fraction of the holdings. The Corvee has been partially abolished, and what is left of it so arranged as not to oppress the peasantry. The Courbash is gone for ever, the Conscription is assigned upon a just basis, and all those who wish can purchase their exemption from military service at a reasonable price. The supply of water is more plentiful and regular than ever. Sir Colin Moncrieff and his assistants are daily carrying out improvements in the irrigation system and bringing large tracts into cultivation which have been barren for centuries only because the engineering talent necessary to supply them with water was not forthcoming. That the Public Works Department has been doing immense service, and that its efforts will greatly develop the resources of Egypt is uncontested; but one must travel about among the peasantry to find out how real is the benefit conferred, and how thankful and appreciative the poor people are for the water which is to them their daily bread.

We see then the Egyptian fellah in 1888 getting rapidly out of debt; free from fear of the Courbash and Conscription, almost free from liability to forced labour; the taxes levied with even-handed justice, and the times of payment arranged to suit his convenience and coincide with his harvest; his lands plentifully supplied with water which no Pacha has power to cut off from him; and no fear before his eyes of exile or death for his sons in the Soudan. He is poor in this world's goods, indeed, for prices are low, but his wants are few, and they are supplied. England has certainly no reason to be ashamed of the work done in Egypt under her auspices. She can point with pride to the financial position of the Egyptian Government, and the material welfare of the Egyptian people, and ask the detractors of her policy what alternative plan they have to propose by which greater benefits can be achieved, and if feasible she will be most willing to act on it. She might add that, if she has not yet accomplished completely her task in Egypt, this is due in a great measure to the want of sympathy and co-operation of the very Powers who pretend that the interests of Egypt are very near their heart.

So far the Daily News. The picture thus drawn is a wonderful copy of the Scriptural portrait of Egypt's Saviour, Deliverer, great and mighty One, who was, according to Isaiah's prophecy, to deliver and free the oppressed Egyptians. They have done so; and the world stands by in wonder, surprised that when surrounded by such difficulties and hampered by such obstacles, these powerless Anglo-Indian and British officers have in so short a time been able to effect such wonders and do so much good financially and otherwise for the poor oppressed fellaheen of Egypt. The Saviour of Egypt was, according to Isaiah xix., to be no doubt "the great and mighty" nation of Israel, spoken of in Genesis xii. 1, 2, and xviii. 18, R.V. In Egypt she "blossoms and buds," and is filling the face of that portion of the "world with fruit" to God's glory, according to the Scriptures (Isa. xxvii. 6, R.V.). And she can do no otherwise, for she is God's handiwork; the people that He has formed, made, created, and fashioned for Himself, that they may show forth His praise" (Isa. xliii. 1, 7, 21, R.V.). Why will not men then look upon what is occurring in Egypt, as well as in India, Ceylon, Australia, Canada, and the Cape Colonies, in order that they may understand God's plans and purposes there, and recognise the instrumentality by which He is bringing to pass His wonderful projects of mercy for the world? He has told us that He will use Israel as His "Battle-axe and weapons of war," to beat down all opposition to His purposes of love to the world (Jer. li. 20., &c.), and He has assured us that by that same hand, "blossoming and budding," He will "cause the face of the world to be filled with fruit" (Isa. xxvii. 6, R.V.). When both these purposes are seen palpably to be effected by the instrumentality of our race only, the British people, what doubt can be entertained by reasonable minds, reasonably exercised, that the British are Israel, God's Dominion and chosen ones, His Heritage and Inheritance?

WHO does the best his circumstance allows, does well, acts nobly, angels could no more.—YOUNG.

AN ATTACK ON THE STRONGHOLDS OF OUR OPPONENTS.

A LECTURE BY V. M. COX.

PART II.

WE have one immense advantage over our opponents. It is this. Our case rests on one grand scriptural argument, and although we may differ on some minor matters, this remains unassailable. God promised certain blessings to the literal seed of Abraham exclusively. Our nation and race possesses, also exclusively, the whole of these same glorious gifts, without a single exception. Therefore, if indeed God be faithful to His covenant, we can only reach one conclusion; that which is embodied in our Identity teaching. We have been ridiculed, denounced, contemned, but the one central argument stands good in spite of all. Men have been trying for many years to prove our position untenable, and our belief an absurdity. They have presumably done their worst, and brought against it their strongest arguments; but they have not weakened our cause one iota; nay, they have strengthened it, for they have only shown how incapable of refutation is a creed which has God's Word and God's faithfulness for its foundation, and which can only fail when these fail; which is not a contingency to be apprehended; we think we are safe in maintaining that.

But if we are united and consistent, we cannot say as much for the opposition. How they contradict each other we do not need to be told. "Israel was never lost." "She is lost, but is never destined to a national restoration." "She is destined to be restored, but only in a future dispensation." She is mingled among the Jews, absorbed among the Gentiles; "dwelling alone" in some out-of-the-way corner of the planet, where she will at length be recognised, not by bearing the marks of fulfilled prophecy, but by the possession of a Semetic language, together with Jewish rites and features. "The prophecies," says one, "are all fulfilled." No," says another, "they are nearly all unfulfilled, and we must not look for their realization till the millennial age." "Nay," objects a third; "that is a carnally-minded view of the matter; not the fleshly, but the spiritual seed shall inherit the promises." These are a few of the grounds taken up by our objecting friends; while many more appear too indolent even to form a theory of their own on the subject. So they shrug their shoulders and lazily exclaim, "What, after all, does it signify?" and then settle comfortably down to the perusal of the last new novel or society journal! And then you may as reasonably expect to transport the Great Pyramid entire from the plains of Jizeh to the centre of Hyde Park, as to arouse them to the faintest semblance of interest in the Anglo-Israel Identity.

We need give but scant time to the consideration of the first objection alluded to. "Israel was never lost." Suppose we admit this, we shall of course expect to be informed as to their present location. But there is an ominous silence when this query is propounded. A gem of great value is missing from your jewel-case. You have not the least idea where it is; you have not seen it for months, but it is not lost; oh! dear no, nothing of the kind; only you cannot find it, which amounts to much the same thing in the long run! "But the captivity was only partial." Indeed! Then how comes the Bible to make the grave mistake of declaring it to be total? When God declared that He had wiped Samaria "as one wipeth a dish, wiping it and turning it upside down;" when the Word further asserts that "the Lord removed Israel out of His sight, and there was none left but the tribe of Judah only," we must either conclude that the captivity was total, or that the words of scripture are to be taken in a sense precisely opposed to the apparent meaning (a method somewhat suggestive of the children's game, "here we go round the rule of contrary;") but then we must be prepared to apply the same subversive method to all other portions of the sacred Book, not merely in those particular cases, where it suits our purpose to do so. So objection 1 is valueless.

Digitized by Google

We have heard Joshua xxiii. 14, quoted to show that all the promises given to Israel had been made good prior to the time when Joshua lived. But the passage cannot be fairly held to imply this. "Kings shall come out of thee," had been the divine word to Abraham, but not until nearly 350 years after this time did the first king of the Hebrew people receive anointing at the hand of Samuel. Not until 1,444 years after this, was born in Bethlehem the great Deliverer, whose mission was not alone to secure Israel's national redemption, but the greater boon of free salvation to the whole world through faith in His name. And where are the records of Israel's missionary labours prior to Joshua's time? She was indeed the instrument of vengeance against the idolatrous peoples of her day, but never the bearer of messages of mercy and peace. In what portion of her chronicles do we read of her Colonial Empire, or where do we see in her political history of that period, the realization of the prophetic forecast, "a nation and a company of nations shall be of thee"? Yet had it existed it must have been recorded. Strongest of all against this view is the reiterated assurance of ultimate restoration and enlargement given at the very time when things were at their worst; when Israel, apostate and exiled, was sifted among the nations as corn sifted in a sieve, and when her national destruction would have been inevitable had not the everlasting covenant secured her against it. So we may shelve objection 2 together with No. 1, and await what crushing argument No. 3 will bring to the fore, to annihilate us completely.

No. 3 is the representative of a large class of objectors. He ignores the line of severance the Bible draws between Israel and Judah; and includes the two portions of the divided family under the misleading, but popular phrase, the "Jewish people." If we had the opportunity of drawing up the examination paper lately hinted at, we might do well to commence with the inquiry and demand, "Where does the term Jew first occur in the scriptures? Explain its meaning and limitation." We think most Anglo-Israelites would supply the right answer without hesitation; but we are inclined to fear (if the sermons we hear and the teachings we get in the majority of cases be any indication) that very few of our opponents would be successful in formulating a correct reply. Whether in bondage in Egypt; during the long desert march; in occupation of Canaan; under the judges, or under a monarchy, we may safely conclude that it would be Jews whose history comprised the experiences just alluded to. Nay, we are very sure that many would go farther back still, and if asked to state the nationality of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, would inevitably class them as Jews also! How superficial must be the Bible study which leads to such a conclusion it is unnecessary to remark. Yet it is wonderful how widely the error has spread, and it is moreover certain that there is no greater hindrance to the acceptance of Identity truth. If people studied prophecy at all critically, they must see that the fortunes of the two Houses are so definitely contrasted, so utterly diverse, that the peoples cannot be other than separate in order to the effecting of the declared purposes of God. Judah, few in number, despised, scattered; and destined at last to seek protection beneath Israel's sheltering care; Israel wealthy, multitudinous, and dominant. Judah in unbelief till her return to the land; Israel, even in exile, Christian, Protestant, and missionary. Judah under the curse for the crime of the crucifixion; Israel, which never shared that crime, blest and a blessing to all the kindreds of the earth. So that when opponent No. 3 tells us the promises belong to the "Jewish people" we must send him back to learn what statements the Word of God makes about Israel and Judah respectively, and bid him harmonise the two sets of predictions, shewing how they can possibly apply to one and the same people. This will take him some time, and meanwhile we may turn our attention to the spiritualising interpreters, who also form a very numerous class, and, we may add, a class truly remarkable for their discrimination! I speak advisedly. For wonderful is the ingenuity they display in selecting all that is desirable in prophecy and repudiating what is undesirable, even in the predictions of the same writer concerning the same people. Let us note a few cases in point. "Speak ye comfortably to Jerusalem, and cry unto her that her warfare is accomplished, that her iniquity is pardoned, for she hath received at the Lord's hands, double for all her sins." That is a message of divine mercy to the Church of course.

"Jerusalem is ruined, and Judah is fallen, because their tongues and their doings are against the Lord to provoke the eyes of His glory." Is this spoken of the Church? "Oh! no," says our spiritualising friend, "that means the Jews;" but why in this case, more than in the other? In Hosea xiv. 4, we read, "I will heal their backsliding, and will love them freely, for Mine anger is turned away." That, of course, is God's gracious assurance to the returning sinner. Notwithstanding it is spoken of Ephraim and of none other; but in Hosea viii. 11, we read, "Because Ephraim hath made many altars to sin, altars shall be unto him to sin." Does this relate to the repenting sinner too? But once again. "The House of Israel will not hearken unto thee, for they will not hearken unto Me, for all the House of Israel are impudent and hard-hearted." We suppose our spiritualisers will scarcely apply this to God's believing people; yet we have been present at scores of prayer-meetings where the leaders of the devotional exercises have encouraged themselves with the assurance, "For this will I yet be inquired of by the House of Israel to do it for them." Now, at the risk of being stigmatised as hopelessly carnally-minded and unspiritual, I must maintain that so long as these unwarrantable liberties are taken with the plain language of scripture, the result will be "confusion worse confounded;" and it will be impossible to arrive at the true meaning of any passage. No other book has ever been treated so; no other could have survived such treatment; and we may take it as a signal proof of the divine origin of the Bible that the most violent wresting it has suffered at the hands of man has so little impaired its intrinsic worth and beauty.

(To be continued.)

THE DEFENCES OF THE ISLES OF THE WEST.

THE question of the hour is that the British Islands are not properly defended. "We want more men," is the cry of the Duke of Cambridge. "Our army and our navy are not what they ought to be, and government by party, interfering in the affairs of the army and navy, will be the ruin of the country," is the expressed opinion of Lord Wolseley, Lord Charles Beresford, R.N., and others. The opinion of the Commander-in-chief of the British army is consoling so far, that whereas we have an army of about 200,000 regulars, he only wants to add about 5 per cent to that number to enable us to attain absolute security. Give but 11,000 men, is his advice, and we shall be in a satisfactory efficient condition. Lord Wolseley wants army-government to be in military and naval hands. He wishes party and faction entirely excluded, by removing the two great departments (virtually) from the contests of Parliaments, by giving it over to military and naval men. Yet this cry for larger powers and stronger forces, and fortifications for the defence of our island home, is absolutely needless if the promises of God are to count for anything! This nation is Israel. To Israel God gave the solemn assurance in 2 Sam. vii. 10, that He would not allow "the sons of wickedness to molest them here in His own appointed place," —"the place which is Israel's own." That promise He must and will keep, as He is true. The question is, "Do we believe Him and trust to His faithfulness and truth in the matter"?

Digitized by Google

If we do not,—then of course there is nothing for it but to insult God to His face, to put our trust in horses, men, and ships, like Israel of old. Regarding these, the Lord said to faithless Judah in an hour of national adversity, "Woe to them that go down to Egypt for help and stay on horses, and trust in chariots, because they are many, and in horsemen because they are very strong; but they look not unto the Holy One of Israel, neither seek the Lord" (Isa. xxxi. 1, R.V.)! In our own case we see the nations of the Continent piling on their armour, adding to their men, their horses, their guns and ships. Having no God on whom to stay themselves, they have armed themselves as nations, and await the dread hour when God will hurl them on each other to destroy them. But what call is there for us to provide for the safety of our island home, when God Himself has guaranteed its safety to us! Since God uses means and acts by human agency, usually (but not always), to carry out His purposes, we have a large force of Regulars, Militia, Yeomanry and Volunteers to defend the soil, and a fine fleet to protect our shores. What further need then have we to add to our burdens, to create more ships, and to increase our regiments? Our opponents ask us, Cui bono? in reference to our teaching. We think the case in point furnishes a good answer! Our views accepted, would save our nation's purse to a large extent. The rejection of them will add mightily to our taxes, to pay for those utterly needless armies and fleets which the opponents desire to create! We hardly think it probable that the Duke of Cambridge, if he obtains his coveted 11,000 men, (which no doubt he will), will be satisfied! If 100,000 regulars in these islands only require 11,000 more men to make us perfectly safe, surely the Volunteers, Militia and Yeomanry, added to our present forces, would suffice without the burden of the eleven regiments the Duke desires, we suppose, to add to the line? However that may be, if they are absolutely needful to our security, doubtless we shall have the 11,000 men as an addition to the country's defenders. We hardly think they would be asked for if the whole nation, including the Duke, were believers in the Identity, and sure that God was pledged to safeguard us, and would do so accordingly, without fresh additions to our burdens. Before we act, a royal commission is to assemble, with Lord Hartington at its head, to inquire into the whole matter. Its decision we suppose will be final; and our army and navy will be increased or let alone according as it may recommend. The fact of the matter is, that God Himself is responsible for our nation's safety in these islands and He will see what means are needed for the purpose. He often acts with means apparently the most inadequate, or even with none apparent, at all. The spread of our views would increase the national confidence in our absolute safety, prevent panics, and needless spasmodic expenditure of public money. It would also promote a habit of trust in the living God, that nothing else can give, to an unbelieving, careless people, like ourselves, humanly speaking. For a thousand years the Lord has protected this land from all hostile invasion, and He has promised that the immunity shall last for ever. He has assured us our home Gates shall be open continually, not shut day nor night, that men may bring to us the wealth of the nations (Isa. lx. 11). With these promises in our hands why should the Duke of Cambridge fear, or tell us that the paltry 11,000 men he wants will make the difference between safety and destruction? The French expect to land with 100,000 men to conquer us outright! Will 11,000 more men upset the Frenchman's calculations, apart from God, who has all the power of omnipotence and infinity in His right arm, and has promised to exert its strength to defend us? Our Identity is a comforting, cheering, hopeful, view, which is doubtless fully established by sufficient evidence. We are glad to have discussed the subject of our national defences, and to find in the consideration of it fresh proof of the faithfulness and truth of the God of Israel! To Him let Israel give all the praise!

THE EPISTLE OF ST. PAUL TO THE ROMANS.

SOME kind friend in London has sent us a copy of a booklette issued by the Protestant Educational Institute, 38, Parliament Street, London, S.W., on the subject of "The Epistle to the Romans on Romish Supremacy, by a lay member of the Church of England." We deem this so useful a paper on the controversy, and one so exactly in accordance with what Anglo-Israelites hold in respect to the Apostle's teaching in Rom. ix. 4, 5; and xi. 15, 17, 18, 24, 26, that we urge our readers to possess themselves of copies of it, and circulate them in numbers. We quote the whole tract, because of its importance, and to show our friends that our religious societies are beginning to awake to the distinction between "the erring Tribes of Judah, and God's Lost Tribes of Israel!" The "note" which appears at foot of p. 6 on Rom. xi. 17, 18, is very important and very interesting.

THE EPISTLE TO THE ROMANS ON ROMISH SUPREMACY.

No one, who receives the Scripture at all, questions the authenticity of the Epistle to the Romans, as being a genuine letter, written by St. Paul, and sent to the early Christian Church at Rome.

No one, who believes the record of history, questions the fact that in spite of persecutions, wars and troubles, there has been a Christian Church at Rome without intermission from the days of St. Paul until now: and that the Christianity there existing at the present day has come down in an unbroken line from the days of the Apostles.

Seeing that this Church was destined in God's Providence for such long continuance and such prominent place, it is but reasonable to expect that in an inspired Epistle, addressed expressly to herself, some indication of the future should be given, and that some warnings should be addressed, connected with the errors and dangers which were more particularly to assail her.

At least, we may expect that where this Church makes high and peculiar claims, they will be supported by the Epistle, which is her own especial heritage; which she received direct from the Great Apostle; which she preserved, and bestowed upon the Universal Church for insertion into the Canon of Scripture.

Now, the Claims of Rome rest upon two foundation-stones; and if they were proved faulty, she would be left as one only among various Churches, instead of being Queen and Mistress of Christendom. These two foundation-stones are Pre-eminence and Infallibility, and it is by asserting these two that she makes converts—for be it remarked, people often join the Church of Rome not on account of her distinctive Doctrines, but because they submit to her distinctive claims of Pre-eminence and Infallibility.

Pre-eminence—namely, that she is the one authorized building of God: the one plant of God's planting, into which every branch must be grafted if it is to have union with Christ, and outside of which no assurance of salvation can be obtained.

St. Paul deals exhaustively with this very question in the Epistle to the Romans; only, he proudly claims this pre-eminence among churches for God's ancient people, Israel, and for them only, "to whom pertaineth the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law, and the service of God, and the promises, whose are the fathers, and of whom, as concerning the flesh, Christ came." (Rom. ix. 4, 5).

After this glowing enumeration of privileges and Pre-eminence, can the Roman Christians have been surprised when, two chapters later on, they are assured that they are a mere branch grafted on to the stock of Israel, and that they bear not the root, but the root (Israel) bears them.* (Rom. xi. 17, 18).

In the same chapter the Apostle renews the promise of which the Old Testament is full, that somewhere in the Dispensation of time, God will recover His erring Tribes of Judah and His lost Tribes of Israel, and graft them in on their own natural root; and so "All Israel shall be saved," (Rom. xi. 26) in the day when "the receiving of them shall be as life from the dead." (v. 15.) Then when the natural branches are grafted "into their own olive tree" (v. 24) will be fulfilled the promise that "Israel shall

* Anyone who carefully reads the context must see that in this passage it is Israel, and not Christ, who is spoken of under the image of a root.

Digitized by Google

blossom and bud, and fill the face of the earth with fruit." (Isa. xxvii. 6).

But this glorious pre-eminence being thus given by the God who cannot lie, to His people Israel, and the gifts and callings of God being without repentance, it follows that no Gentile Church can claim the position of being the root of God's planting, into which others must be grafted in order to partake of life: least of all, should this claim be advanced by the Roman Church, which in this chapter is expressly warned by the Apostle against any such presumption, being reminded in the 17th verse that it is itself only a graft taken from a wild olive tree, and growing contrary to nature (v. 24) upon the good olive tree of God's planting.

This seems plain from the passage before us, and disposes of the claim of the Church of Rome to supremacy and authority in the universal Church of Christ.

But the second foundation-claim of Rome is that she is not liable to err, possessing a promise from God of Infallibility, which possession she grounds, illogically enough, chiefly upon the promise, "Lo I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world." She claims, as a Church, an absolute immunity from error, and from the possibility of falling away, or being cast off.

Here again, in this passage, the Spirit of God did not leave the Church of Rome without warning. "Be not high-minded," says the Apostle, "but fear. For if God spared not the natural branches, take heed lest He also spare not thee."—Rom. xi 20, 21. Again, "Behold the severity and goodness of God . . . towards thee, goodness, if thou continue in His goodness, otherwise thou also shalt be cut off." Could words like these be addressed by an inspired Apostle to any Church possessing from God a promise of Infallibility?

Thus we see that God, who sees the end from the beginning, foreknew the two foundation claims of Pre-eminence and Infallibility, which the Church of haughty metropolitan Rome would, in the course of time, arrogate to herself.

He warned His people of the coming danger—and, in His marvellous Providence, made that very Church first the Recipient, then the Preserver and the Distributor of this weighty passage of Scripture; the arguments of which are enough to put these lofty pretensions of hers, once for all, out of court.

It would have been well for Christendom, and well for the Church of Rome herself, if, before taking up a position from which she cannot retreat, she had examined her own standing in the Church of Christ by the light of St. Paul's words, addressed to herself. She was a goodly branch of God's grafting, "a noble vine, wholly a right seed; how, then, is she turned into the degenerate plant of a strange vine?" (Jer. ii. 21).

Alas, that she should be found bringing forth fruit unto herself, and seeking her own glory and aggrandizement!

The foregoing remarks derive any weight they may possess from the importance of the subject under discussion, namely, the claims advanced by the Church of Rome. Anyone who is acquainted with the methods of Rome for making proselytes, is aware that she never makes any mention of her distinctive doctrines; nor does she attempt to prove them true. She puts them on one side, as not to be discussed, but hereafter to be imposed upon her converts, so soon as they are brought to admit her authority, which authority she rests entirely upon these two foundation claims of Pre-eminence and Infallibility. Once a mind is brought to admit these foundation points, the whole system of Rome follows as a matter of course—hence the necessity of clear views upon this subject.

Many, now within the pale of Rome, would never have left their own fold for hers, if, before taking that great step, they had examined whether her claims upon their allegiance rest on the sure basis of revealed truth, or whether they depend merely upon her own assertions, repeated and repeated, until many minds have an impression that such constant reiteration must be true.

We beg all such, into whose hands these lines may fall, to weigh carefully the arguments here brought forward, drawn from the Epistle of St. Paul to the Romans; and to ask themselves whether it is not plainly the duty of a wise man to examine the foundations upon which the Church of Rome builds her authority, before he exercises for the last time the greatest human right, that of private judgment; by judging her to be the one Infallible Church, and resigning himself passively into her hands, to be henceforth directed and moulded at her absolute will.

THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL.

WE take the following from The Southern Press and East Grinstead Times of September 2nd, 1887, being one of a series of papers appearing in that journal, written by Scoti, who is, we know, an advanced Anglo-Israelite, and one who follows generally the views enunciated in the BANNER OF ISRAEL. The papers, as a rule, are short and condensed representations of Identity truth, and therefore well calculated to carry weight with the readers of the journal in which they appear:—

THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL.

By a Local Contributor.

HOW TO FIND THE LOST TEN TRIBES.

PORTRAIT IV.

Another most important feature in the Portraits hitherto presented to us is the position of the people. As God hath been pleased, Himself to scatter His people Israel for their rebellion and idolatry, everywhere and anywhere, so, also, He has left on record some clear signs by which they could be identified. He has denoted in plain language the clear position in which they could be found, but he has shewn also how those people, from such a discovered position, should glorify Him. And herein lies the burden of proof against cavillers and infidels, and all other indifferent people—that the people who were to glorify God are not the people pointed out as "dwelling in the isles of the sea" (Isa. xi. 11). The word for sea in the Hebrew of the Old Testament signifies "west," and is intended to convey that construction. In the chapter and verse referred to we read that "The Lord will set His hand again the second time to recover the remnant of His people." With what object? Is it not to glorify Himself as well as to bless His people? And as these are from the "isles of the sea" (west) does it not necessarily follow that the people so situated must be schooled and trained in their own sea-girt isle to qualify them for such an honourable position as the joy and praise of the whole earth at their restoration conjointly with the House of Judah in the latter days (Isa. lxii. 7). From the islands of the sea (west) they are to declare His praise (Isa. xlii, 8. 10, 12). Isa. xxiv. 15 reads that Israel is to glorify the Lord in the fires (affliction and woe), even the name of the God of Israel in the isles of the sea (west). Read also, attentively, Isa. iv. 1; xlix. 1; Jer. iii. 12—18; xxiii 8; xxxi, 8—10. In Jeremiah we read of them as in the north country, and that is precisely the position that Britain occupies. That the British are the people referred to as Israel may be gathered from the fact that they have done precisely what they were to do—shewn forth His praise by missionary zeal, by public worship, by their influence at home, by Sabbath keeping (that is to say nationally, not individually, for there are thousands who do not scruple to break the Sabbath). But while our Statute Books are stamped with the seal that the Sabbath shall be respected, while our Gracious Queen herself sets a most noble example in the matter, we have a right to say that the Sabbath is nationally respected and carried out. We show forth His praise also by our kindness to foreigners, to those in distress and calamity, and in a host of other ways. Is not this the truth? What other nation in the "Isles of the sea" carry out His praise? Let the calm reader judge. When not only are the people referred to as being in the isles of the west, but these very people are to show forth His praise IN the isles of the west, we must see if these qualifications are in existence; and if they are so found then we must believe, by the Word of God, that they are the people to whom He refers and that we British people are they.

Question.—If the British do not answer to both these in geography and character will the reader venture to point out what nation does?

So far our friend Scoti. This is, indeed, as he suggests, a case wherein the doctrine of the "burden of proof" applies. God's word being true, and Israel being at the present moment in separation from Judah, and existing somewhere fulfilling the Scriptures recorded in reference to themselves, we have on our part shown by a vast mass of testimony that in a great variety of ways, the British, of all the nations, are fulfilling these prophecies to the very jot and to the tittle. In the things that they do, and in the things that they refrain from doing, it is just the same. God gave "to Abraham and his seed for ever" certain blessings and privileges exclusi

Digitized by Google

Those very blessings and privileges we British exclusively enjoy. We must then be Israel, or God's word has failed! The facts being so, the burden of proof now lies on those who deny that we are Israel. They must show cause why we cannot be of that race, and how our possession, exclusively, of the blessings we enjoy, is compatible with the fact which they allege, namely, that we are not Israel, but that some other race is—the chosen nation. It will not do for our opponents to tell us that they have no duty pressing on them to show where the Ten Tribes now are, and what modern nation represents them if the British do not. We reply that the duty does press on them, as it does on all Christian men; because the time has now come for the Restoration of Judah, and for the coming of the Lord; and neither of these glorious events can take place till Israel be found, and Israel and Judah, having been united in the north country, have both as one "stick" been restored under one king, to constitute on the mountains of Israel one nation and one kingdom, as "the kingdom of God" to the glory of the Lord (Ezek. xxxvii. 15—28; Hosea i. 11; Jer. iii. 18).

We have done our bounden duty in this respect. We have produced a body of evidence in support of our nation's Identity which has not yet been rebutted. If we be wrong in our appreciation of that evidence with which we have been dealing for the last 10 or 12 years, it must be within the competence of our opponents to tell us wherein we fail, and where the nation now is, which really represents the "lost House" of God's chosen people, the Christian portion of the race, in fact, which He calls His "nation" (Isa. li. 4). It must be existing now, and that just as our own is, precisely, in respect to temporal as well as spiritual qualifications, as God is true. Our opponents, therefore, are bound to tell us (the Bible being in their hands as in ours) where the home of that race is and what are its identifications, which, better than our own, serve to prove that they are the Lost Tribes, but that the British are therefore not. Our opponents have their task! It is a hopeless one! No one can, and no one has, within our recollection, succeeded in showing that the Ten Tribes are now existing outside the boundaries of the British Empire. Therefore the violent presumption existing in favour of our case, is now, for lack of rebutting evidence on the other side, sufficient to constitute proof which all reasonable minds must accept, that the British are Israel, entitled as such, to all the blessings, spiritual and temporal, promised to that House in the Word of God. Why the bulk of the clergy and the scientists of the day refuse to credit the "good news," which we thus bring to their notice, we can hardly explain; except on the supposition that God has so arranged it, lest the pulpit and the press, having given immediate adhesion to the discovery, the world at large should accept Our Identity before the time, and before these events shall have occurred, which are predestined to take place before Israel, Judah, and Manasseh can return together in triumph to their land. We rejoice to know that all events connected with our nation are in God's hands and that in respect to Our Identity and all that the fact involves "the Lord will provide"! (Gen, xxii. 14).

BRITISH-ISRAELITE BELIEF.—THE RETICENCE OF ITS FRIENDS.

[The following we quote from The British-Israelite Prophetic Messenger, of March, 1888. Page 97.]

