THE

BANNER OF ISRAEL.

A Weekly Journal,

ADVOCATING THE

IDENTITY OF THE BRITISH NATION

WITH THE

LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

VOLUME III. 1879.

London:
W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK LANE, PATERNOSTER ROW, E.C.

Digitized by Google

THE NEW YORK PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASTOR, LENOX AND TILDEN FOUNDATIONS
1903

INDEX.

PAGE

Leading Articles by the Editor.

Our Third Year 5
Annexation of Afghanistan... 405
Address to British Seamen 94
Africa 149
Asia Minor Looking for Help 461
British Constitution, The ... 477, 493, 501
Britannia Rules the Waves... 245
Battle of Rorke's Drift 133
British Workmen 373
Cabul 389
Cetywayo's Capture 413
Checkmate to Russia Again 53
Confederation 117
Cost of the Armies of Continental Nations 253
Defence, Not Dominion 453
Distress, The 37
Egypt and its Affairs 293
European Preparations for Great Earthquake 429
Federation of Israel's Company of Nations 421
Gates of India 285
Gift of the Gates, The 217
Hard Times for Israel 21
Israel's Protestantism and Prosperity ... 197
Imperialism and Cosmopolitanism... ... 157
Israel's Asiatic Watch Tower 381
"It Must be in the Air" 125
Israel's Navy 469
Israel Confronts Cetywayo 77
Low Exit Passage of Great Pyramid ... 29
Manasseh and Our Manufactures 301
M. Littré Gives Blind Testimony 221
Next Election... 365
Peace and Safety 509
People Selected to Fill the World with Gospel Fruit 173
Premonitory Symptoms 349
Political Aspects of Our Identity 477, 493, 501
Perplexity and Suspense 165
Prince Imperial's Death 277
Policy of Annexing the Gates in Afghanistan... 45
Present Aspect of Affairs, The 213
Relief of Col. Pearson 173
Review of Israel's Campaign in Afghanistan 93
Ruling Race, The 261
Recent Battles of Israel 437
Some Recent Battles of Israel 181
Vial Poured Out, The 205
Words of Warning and Comfort 69
Victories at Cabul 421
Zulu Disaster and the First Lord of the Admiralty 85
1879 517

General Articles.

Acquisition of Jacob's Stone 89
Activity in Hastings and St. Leonards ... 510
Address to British Soldiers... 78
Address to Parishioners, by Rev. C. W. Hickson 18, 192
Afghanistan Protected by Israel 370
Afghanistan, The Future of... 454
American Commerce Compared with Israel's 141
An Anglo-Saxon Saying 242
Anglo-Israel Truth 232, 265
Armageddon, It Looks Like 390
Assyria to Britain. From 16, 96, 110, 288, 297, 302
Ashes Over Glowing Embers 400
Battle of Israel, A 382
Beaconsfield, The Earl of, and His Works 59, 143, 153, 162, 169
Billington's Lectures, The Rev. 456
Bishop Wilkinson, late of Zululand, on the British Empire 521
Blessings on Israel, The 278
Blue Mountains, The—Where are They?... 520
Brownrigg's, Canon, Opinion of the BANNER 162
Bristol and Clifton Association 161
Britannia Rules the Waves... 90
British Home Missions 257
British Protectorate and the Return of the Jews... 26
Butterworth, J., on Hosea. xiv. 8 490
Caiaphas' Prophecy 268
Card of Membership, Sheffield ... 55, 88
Canaanites, The, Shall be Scourges, &c. ... 147
Census of 1881 14
Chosen People, The 207, 215, 219, 240, 249, 254, 271, 281
Circulation of the Bible 258
Cities of the Nations Fell, The 9
Coincidence or Verification... 153
Commentary on Hosea 175
Company of Spearmen, The... 390
Condition of Russia To-day—a Sign of the Coming Woe 519
Confederation in South African Colonies 105
Confirmations from Allahabad 269
Confirmations from the Cape 357
Corroborations by the Way... 270
Cui Bono? 167
"Cursed be Canaan" 248
Danes and French—Are They Gentiles? ... 48
Dean Bagot on the Jews 286
Debate on Identity 182
Do Two Lights Create Darkness? 497
End of the Day of Grace, &c. 178
England—The Blest... 107
England—The Worm 70
England and the Jews (Canon Hoare) ... 209
England and the Second Exodus 294
England's Divine Mission ... 74, 80, 87, 103
Ephraim Distinct from Judah 248
Epidemics and the Stars 155
Eternal Purposes of God in Israel... ... 355
Evolution and Identity 287
Family Herald, The Editor of ... 408, 524
Federation of Israel's Nations 385
Federation of the Empire, The 504
Flint Knives 442
Form of Prayer for Our Armies, A ... 201
Former and Latter Days, The 267
Future of English, The 434
Gentile Dogs 225
German Protestantism 394
Good Deal Mixed, A... 422
Good Gifts for God's Glory... 446
Good News from the Antipodes ... 63, 81
God's Covenant with David 126
Grace in the Desolate Heritages 46
Great Earthquake Anticipated 13
Great Sign, The 254
He Shall Grow as the Lily 361
Hebrew Symbology 55
Heir of the World, The 463
Hickson, The Rev., and the Rock 121
Hickson's, The Rev., Lecture in Bristol ... 449
Hine, Mr., and Identity Literature 270, 283
Hine-Robert's Discussion, The 226
How the Kaffirs of South Africa Regard Israel 146
How the Stone Empire Grows 525
Identity Difficulties Answered, 161, 167, 176, 200, 316, 455
Identity Truth from the Stony Rock 166, 177
Imminence of Our Lord's Coming ... 170
"Imperium et Libertas" 487
Increase of Population in France, Germany, and Great Britain... 193
India Contented and Loyal... 521
Isaiah's Call to England 363
Israelitish Reflections 65
Italy, Progress in 265
Israel Shall Blossom and Bud, &c. ... 8
Israel as a War Power 158
Jehovah's Interposition in Israel's Favour 54
Jehovah's Witnesses... 443
Jehovah's "Witnesses" at Work 18
Jewish Council at Ageda 483
Jews of Great Britain 497
Joint Heirs, The 438
Jottings for the BANNER OF ISRAEL ... 159
Judy and the Lion of Israel 430
Judy on the Afghan Gates 263
Justice for the Jews... 484
Key to Sheffield Card of Membership ... 100
Kings, The, from the Rising of the Sun ... 104
Late Princess Alice, The 49
Land and the Bible, The 416, 423
Lily, The 516
Links—Philological and Historical ... 384
Lintel and the Two Side Posts, The ... 402
Little Cloud Like a Man's Hand, The ... 174
Literal or Spiritual Israel 56
"Lo! the People Shall Dwell Alone" 95, 114
Lord Carnarvon on the Great Earthquake 15
Lost Israel Found in the British 430
Maitland, Dr., on Romans. xi. 25 and Genesis xlviii. 19 231
Manasseh's Greeting to Ephraim 66
Manasseh Occupying Her "Desolations" 106
Manasseh on the Chief of the Nations, &c. 115
Maories 378
Marriott, H., v. The Rev. R. Cornall ... 161
Means and the Place, The 219

Digitized by Google

PAGE

Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association 25, 26, 60, 130, 219, 223, 368, 397
Modern Craze, A 176
Missionary Operations in Zululand ... 414
Misleading Head Lines of the Old Testament 105
Misquotation Corrected, A 356
Monstrous Fable, The 505
Name He Was Called By, A 138
Napoleon's House Doomed 485
New Covenant Outpouring of the Holy Spirit 71
News from Natal 118
Northern Echo on the Fijis and Cyprus ... 193
Nothing New... 129
No Grain, Only Chaff 382
Opinion of the Pope Regarding the British Nation 258
Our Earliest Ancestors 98
Our Fathers 299
Our Second India 100, 111
Parable of the Two Sons 79
People, Ye Are Not My 262
Philalethes and the Gates 43
Preparation of the Way of the Kings of the East... ... ... 32, 55
Preparation for the Coming Woe 481
Prince Imperial's Death 277
Prodigal's Return, The 50
Progress in Brooklyn... 488
" Kimberley, South Africa ... 440
" Lincoln 489
" Perth 458, 500
" Sheffield 195, 527
" St. Ann's, Barbadoes 357
" Tasmania 448
" Toronto 370
" United States 439
Promised Land, The... ... 415, 425, 525
Promises and Blessings, The ... 433, 445
Psalm ii. 8, Dr. Clarke on 375
Psalm ii. 8, J. Butterworth's Suggestion ... 407
Punch and the Lion of Israel 407
Queen's Accession to the Throne, The ... 506
"Remnant" 410
Restoration of the Jews 199
Return of the Jews 370
Revival of the Hope of Israel 283
Roberts, Mr., Answered 272
Rock v. BANNER 216
Rock and Kings of the East 371
Rock Silenced, The 462
Rorke's Drift 467
Rich, The 22
Rifts and Remnants 369
Russia, France, and Italy 399
Russian Diplomacy Despondeth 350
Sabbath Day of Gentile Europe, The ... 426
Sabbath Days, The 139
Sabbath Sign, The 440
Sabbath Sign in Austria, The 526
Savile's New Pamphlet, The Rev. 371
Scattered of Israel, The 247, 256
Security of the People of God 11, 24, 32, 38
Shepherds, The 16
Signs of the Times 426
Solomon's Petition 66
Spiritualising Dilemma, A 417
St. Paul Distinguishes Between Israel and Judah 361
Stanley, Mr., on Lost Israel 369
Stars Fought Against Sisera, The 137, 383, 488
Straws... 377
Stanley, H. M., on Africa as Israel's Future Inheritance... 146
Stone Growing in Central and South Africa 136
Stone Kingdom, The... 102
Stranger Doth Not Intermeddle, A ... 511
Supposed Obscurity of Jeremiah xxxi. 22 219
Syria Desireth Good Government 494
"This is Not Your Rest" 307
Thin End of the Wedge, The 523
Thoughts on Our Identity ... 352, 367, 498
"Thy Kingdom Come," &c... 512
Unanswered Prayer 526
Unseen Hosts... 57
Upon Earth Distress, &c. 525

PAGE

"Vicar, A," on the Jews 498
View of "the Gate," Wilson and Salisbury's 480
Vision of Dry Bones... 265
Voice from Sydney, A 98
Wainwright, Dr., on the Reformation ... 350
Was Abraham a Jew? 126, 145
Watchmen, What of the Night? 128
Weights and Measures, On 393
Were Moses' Seventy Elders an Hereditary Nobility? 523
What Do the Jews Say About the Lost Tribes? 495
What the Russians Say of Cyprus 49
When Did Israel Become "Obedient?" ... 34
When the Lord Roars Like a Lion, &c. ... 572
Which Is It? 150
Who Are These That Fly as Doves, &c.? ... 186
Why is the Kaffir Race Increasing? ... 130
Wilkinson, John, and the Editor Sunderland Post 353
Wilson's View of the Gate, The Late J. ... 480
Wimbledon Association 370
Word of Warning, A 199, 510
Word of Warning 495
Work On 424
World-Wide Empire, The 95
Worm, The, England 70, 143
"Ye Shall Not Have Gone Over," &c. (Matt. x. 23) 408

The Head and Not the Tail in

Cavalry Horses 506
Machinery 88
Manufacture 75
Natural Scenery and Sylvan Culture ... 354
Painting 34
Photography 179
Post Office 391
Science and Education 486

Papers on the Great Pyramid.

Attention in New South Wales 402
Chronology 47, 464, 474
Chronology of the Ante-Chamber 446
Crucial Test of Great Pyramid Chronology 163, 177
Date of the Deluge Recorded in the Great Pyramid 15
Declares the Revelation of Our Saviour to be Near 39
Earth's Mean Density 30
Freemasonry in the Great Pyramid ... 504
Imminence of Our Lord's Coming... ... 118
Near Revelation of Our Lord, The ... 183
Noah's Ark and Solomon's Temple ... 6
Note on Some Recent Suggestions Touching Certain Features in the Great Pyramid 514
Pillar of Witness, The 290
Problem of the Great Pyramid, The ... 406
Regarding the Dates Indicating the Coming of Our Lord, &c. 189
Sacred Cubit 496
The Times Against the Great Pyramid 456, 491
Time Indications of the Grand Gallery 119, 135, 152, 225
Ventilators, Its 418

Testimony to Our Identity by

An Old Disciple 362
Author of the "Kings of the East" ... 49
Benjamin Disraeli (Tancred) 9, 59, 65, 143, 153, 162, 169
Canadian Clergyman 396
Canon Brownrigg 463, 473
Carnarvon, Lord 471
Church of England 209
Clifford, Rev. J. B. 50
Cunynghame, Major-General Sir A. ... 171
Dr. Bonar on Gentile England 296
Dr. Newman... 291
Dr. Parker on Cyprus 266
Dutch Boers of the Transvaal 144
Editor in Bombay 489
Editor of Family Herald 524
Editor in Griqualand West, South Africa, An 409
French Radical Newspaper... 395

PAGE

Frere, Sir B. 303
Good Done to Man's Soul 106, 146, 159, 179, 255, 258, 305, 352, 371, 466, 490
Jewish Testimony 481
Jews at Ageda 483
Lord Dufferin... 49
Mr. Le Geyt, Jersey 360
Montreal Star 492
Raleigh, Sir W. 299
Roebuck, The Late Mr. 471
Sunderland Daily Post 432
The Times on the May Meetings 289
Vicar of St. Giles, Durham 12
Vicar of St. Barnabas, Hull... 62
Wesleyan Missionary 473

Our Identity

At Madras 17
At St. Leonards 26
Affirmative Note, by J. P. Holdsworth 99, 113, 122
Discussed by the Church Synod of British Guiana 246
Historically Viewed 8
How it Grows... 82
In Adelaide 359
John Bunyan on Our Identity 214
Judah's Testimony 187
New Way of Opening Our Identity to Beginners 259
New South Wales, In 229
New Testament Evidence 234
Power, A 216
Record and the 384
St. Paul on Our Identity ... 140, 151, 214, 386
Sunderland, In (J. Greig) 230
Tasmania, In (Canon Brownrigg) 206
Vatican, and the 359
Ventilated by the Newcastle Chronicle ... 360
Vicar of St. Barnabas, Hull, on 185
With the Lost Ten Tribes, by J. Green ... 503

Israel's

Battles, Nile 13
" Trafalgar 58
" Talavera 273
" Albuera 313
" Vitoria 449
Birth, Marriage, and Death Rate 154
Blessings: Are They Millennial? 403
Empire and Church 50
Great African Empire 109
Great Gate, Constantinople... 441
Identity Association, Plymouth 426
National Sins... 139
Navy 494
Progress in Asiatic Turkey 144
Queen Victoria's Accession to Israel's Throne 506
Revenue for 1879 170
Russian Subjects in Canada 447
Sabbath Keeping ... 31, 59, 67, 90, 359, 482
Sabbath Keeping, French Testimony ... 142
Stone Kingdom, A Zulu on... 394
Trade in Coals 502
Treatment of the Moribund Races... ... 366
Volunteers 99
Work for the Lord in Belgium 23

Our Opponents.

An Argument Derived from the Names of Israel 102
Clifford's Theory Refuted, The Rev., by the Rev. B. W. Savile 201
Clifford's Pamphlet, The Rev. J. B. ... 242
" " By L. P. 267
" " and Bishop Titcomb ... 279
" " & Rev. H. Marriott 279, 289
Farrar, The Rev. T., Demerara 392
How It Can Best be Published 96
How the Opposition Works... 10
Judah's Superiority Above Joseph Tested 131
McClellan J. C. v. J. M. Grant, M.D. ... 188
New Zealand, In 304
Paper by W. W. Mellor 444, 457
Roberts, Mr. R. 239

Digitized by Google

PAGE

Rock, The, on God's Israel and Man's Israel 120
White, The Rev. F. H. 465

Geography of the Gates.

Brisbane and Queensland 25
Cyprus... 470
Falkland Islands, The 238
Great Gate, The 29
Herat 522
Hobart Town, Tasmania 42
Jamaica 306
Labuan 397
New Zealand 168
Open Gates 401
Sarawak 376

Correspondence.

Anti-Christ 211
Blind Witness, The 387
British Constitution, The 507
Cetywayo Captured 382
Chronological Chart... 499
Chronology of the Great Pyramid 83, 147, 155
Clifford's Second Pamphlet, The Rev. ... 467
Daniel's Dates 27
Daniel's 1290 and 1335 Days 507
England, Russia, and Israel 219
Four Years' Error 35
Freemasons 403
Galatians iii. 16 475
Good Done by the Identity... 179
John Wilson and the Gates 515
Khyber Pass 19
Literal Israel 163

PAGE

Matthews, A. T. 19
Marriott, The Rev., on Gen. xlvii. 19 ... 459
Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association ... 499
Omri 211
Panegyric, A 171
Prayer for Israel 67
Possibility, A 91
Prophet Elijah, The 451
Record, The 275
Sherman's Tribute to the Queen, General... 411
Spiritual Israel and the Church of God ... 515
Times Against the Great Pyramid, The ... 491
Tribe of Benjamin 435
Voice from the Cape, A 410
Why Should Englishmen Assist in the Conversion of the Jew? 191

Blind Testimony by

Bales T., Paper by 505
Childers, Mr., M.P. 179
Creasy, Sir Edward 190
Gladstone, The Right Hon.... 518
Jeremiah xxx. 11, by L. G. R. 498
Josephus 188
Prophetical Conference at Wimbledon, The 251
Psalm ii. 8 (D. A. Onslow) 259
Rev. Savile to the Rev. Clifford 379
Rock, The 27, 61
Savile, The Rev. W. B., on Psalm ii. 8 ... 291
Sheriff of Bristol, The 454
Sir M. Hicks-Beach 33
Spiritualism 131
Spurgeon, The Rev. C. H. 395
Standard, The 298
Tadmor in the Desert 163

PAGE

Times, The 75
Wylie, Dr. 487

Reviews.

Ammi 403
Anglo-Israel Almanac 507
Anglo-Saxons and the Israelites 203, 210, 217, 227, 233, 243
Annual Report of the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association 291
Appeal from the Pew to the Pulpit ... 498
Are We Israelites? 363
Are We the Lost Ten Tribes? 82
British Nation Proved to be Israel ... 163
British Nation Proved to be the Remnant of Israel 515
Cavill's, Mr., Pamphlet 274
Christianity and a Personal Devil 72
Coming Collision Between England and Russia 234, 450
Common Sense and the Crisis 91
Defence of the Anglo-Israel Christians, A 147
Horæ Propheticæ 434, 459, 490
Japhetic or Semitic? 419
Manasseh and the United States 195
Nebuchadnezzar's Dream 274
New Identity Newspaper 418
Origin of the British Nation 291
Rectification of Our Frontiers 107
Sisters of Harrowdale Rectory, The ... 466
Times of the Gentiles 274
We Are a Shemitic Race 251
Wild's, Dr., Lost Ten Tribes 410
ERRATA ... 18, 39, 55, 122, 202, 206, 222, 238

LONDON: PRINTED BY ROBERT BANKS, RACQUET COURT, FLEET STREET.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. III. No. 105. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 1, 1879. [DOUBLE NUMBER, TWOPENCE.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
Our Third Year	5
The Connection Between the Ark of Noah and the Temple of Solomon. By Major H. A. Tracey, R.A.	6
"Israel Shall Blossom and Bud, and Fill the Face of the World with Fruit"	8
Our Identity Historically Viewed. By B.	8
Benjamin Disraeli's Testimony to Our Identity in "Tancred."	9
"The Cities of the Nations Fell"	9
How the Opposition Works. By L. G. R.	10
Security of the People of God. By Rev. J. L. V. Cachemaille.—Part I.	11
The Vicar of St. Giles, Durham, Gives Blind Testimony to Our Identity	12
Israel's Battles. No. XVII.—The Battle of the Nile	13
The Great Earthquake Anticipated in the "Earth;" But Peace for Israel	13
The Census of 1881. By A Watcher	14
The Date of the Deluge as Recorded in the Great Pyramid	15
Lord Carnarvon on the Great Earthquake-woe Impending, and its Terrors	15
Two Prophecies.—I.—The Shepherds. By L. P.	16
The Identity at Madras	17
Jehovah's "Witnesses" at Work	18
The Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A., of Bristol	18
Correspondence	19

OUR THIRD YEAR.

WITH the present number we enter on our third volume and our third year of existence. For the mercies of the past, and for the anticipations, we entertain for the future, we nationally look, in gratitude and in expectation, to Him "who, in keeping Israel, never slumbereth, never sleepeth."

During the past year we have, as a journal, made steady progress. Our friends have rallied round us with much valuable literary help; and for the year now opening we have abundant promises on all sides, which leave us perfectly at ease in regard to the character of the aid in store for us. God has indeed prospered us with able coadjutors—godly, careful, painstaking writers—men and women, well read in the Word of God, to help us, before whom our opponents have had to yield on all sides, since they have withstood the testimony of the living God, as declared in the Scriptures of truth, and opposed the teachings of Moses and the prophets which we have brought forward to support our contention at every turn. While we notice this fact, we do so in no vain-glorious spirit. We are striving not for ourselves, not for our own profit or reputation, but simply for the glory of our God, knowing that His whole heart and His whole soul is set upon the discovery and restoration of His people Israel. With this spirit and these supports we begin our work afresh. We look in 1879 for the realisation of many of those expectations we have been so long entertaining, as our readers are well aware, ever since our work began.

The Eastern Question, early in 1879, will, we are assured by Great Pyramid teaching—as interpreted by the Rev. C. W. Hickson (page 222, vol. ii.)—enter on a critical stage in reference to a new treaty or covenant yet to be concluded between Israel and her "enemies." In 1879 we hope the period may arrive which the Lord has fixed, at least for the commencement of those glorious showers of heavenly blessing on Israel's seed, which we term "The Great Outpouring of the Holy Spirit" and the "New Covenant" promised to that House. With these blessings in view, we anticipate for our cause a period of great advance in the twelvemonth begun to-day. We look to see the Identity established in power—not only in every town, but in every hamlet and village of our Empire. We expect to find America, from one end of that land to the other, moved, as by some powerful influence, with the grand truths of the Identity as they affect the "great" Manassite nation. What will be the result of such a movement among our brethren across the water, no man can tell. But, judging from the promises in God's Word contained, we look for movements to be thereby generated, drawing the two sister nations into closer union, to end, perhaps, in "federation." We look, too, for union in commerce, in coinage, and in all that disunites and separates us to-day. The company of nations, of which the Empire is now composed, we hope, during 1879, will be united in bonds still more close, still more loving than those which bind them together now. In short, we know we are living in times which are on the very verge and threshold of periods of national prosperity and blessing, of which no tongue may tell the extent. For they embrace the blessings that lie at the right hand of the covenant God of the Hebrews, which He has promised shall be given with no stinting measure, but with magnificent profusion, at the crisis of the Identity, to His then discovered people. Such hopes as these, which fill our hearts with joy, nerve us for our work. They enable us to make light indeed of the harass, of the toil, of the anxiety, and of the disappointment and vexation, too, which oftentimes attend such operations as those in which we are engaged as conductors of this journal. For we know these trials and inconveniences will soon give place to a glorious consummation, in which our nation, recognised by the Lord Himself as His people Israel, will come forth the righteous nation, the people of His choice—His heritage, His inheritance, His elect, His saints. This will be to confer such nobility upon the race that, as the prophets have foretold, "He, the Lord, will get them praise and fame in every land where they have been put to shame. He will make them a name and a praise among all the people of the earth" (Zeph. iii. 19, 20). We shall want no more than this. Possessed of this great glory, known as the Christian nation, living by faith on the blood-bought merits of the Son of God, ours will be the most favoured nation, the chief of all, to whom will righteously be entrusted the kingdom and the dominion under the whole heaven, to have and to hold for Christ, the glorious King of Israel, for ever and for evermore. Of all this we desire to see, and expect to discern, the beginning during 1879. That God may allow us to witness it, that He may spare us to labour for His glory during this year also, that our readers may during this period be greatly multiplied in numbers, and be prospered in all ways as "the Israel of God," is our hearty wish and prayer.

Digitized by Google

The reader will see that the present is the first of a series of double numbers, to be issued in the first week of each month henceforth. These signs of our BANNER'S progress, and of its steady growth in the estimation of the thoughtful public, are very grateful to us.

While we thank God for His manifest blessing on our cause, also on our humble efforts to promote it in the past, we beg our readers to intercede at the throne of grace for the hand that pens these lines, that nothing may appear in future in the pages of this publication but what is consistent with the truth, as that truth is in Jesus, and that all may be done by us as regards our Identity, and everything we publish during 1879, be simply and solely, for

GOD'S GLORY.

THE CONNECTION BETWEEN THE ARK OF NOAH AND THE TEMPLE OF SOLOMON.

BY MAJOR H. A. TRACEY, R.A.

SECTION I.

OUR studies in the Temple of Solomon, as detailed in previous numbers, seemed of sufficient interest to induce us to extend our researches in the same reverently inquiring spirit to the first great inspired work executed by man of which any exact account is recorded.

We believe that we have found distinctly symbolised a clear connection between the Ark of Noah and the Temple of Solomon; and, more, we propose to lay the whole argument seriatim before our readers, and to do so the more thoroughly we purpose to inquire, first, how a Mesopotamian clan, no matter how powerful, could have constructed a barge of the size of the Ark of Noah?

We have already, to the best of our ability, discussed the probable length of the sacred cubit; we were led to believe, for reasons already detailed, that the sacred cubit of the Bible equals the geometrical cubit of Herschel of 25 geometrical inches, or otherwise 25·025 British inches. This cubit of 25 geometrical inches we shall use in our present inquiry.

SECTION II.

THE CONSTRUCTION OF THE ARK OF NOAH.

These are the instructions given to Noah, as handed down to us in Gen. vi. 14—16:

"Make thee an ark of gopher wood; rooms shalt thou make in the ark, and shalt pitch it within and without with pitch. And this is the fashion which thou shalt make it of:

"The length of the ark shall be . 300 cubits.
The breadth of it . . . . . 50 „
And the height of it . . . . 30 „

"A window shalt thou make to the ark, and in a cubit shalt thou finish it above; and the door of the ark shalt thou set in the side thereof; with lower, second, and third stories shalt thou make it."

And we further learn (chap. viii. 13) that some kind of roof was constructed to cover the ark. The size of the ark is therefore, in British measure—

625·6 feet long
104·2 „ wide . . . ($\frac{1}{6}$th of length).
62·5 „ high . . . ($\frac{1}{10}$th of length).

We thus get the outlines of an immense flat-bottomed barge, whose size is greater than that of the largest ships of the British navy of the present day. Its tonnage, calculated by the formula used by shipbuilders ("builders' measurement"), amounting to more than 32,000 tons.

It has "lower, second, and third stories." It is, then, a "three-decker," and has, compared with modern ships, great height between the decks.

We will now consider how a barge of such unprecedented size could have been constructed by men who were not skilled shipwrights.

In Col. Chesney's valuable book on the "Tigris and Euphrates" we learn how at "Hitt," a town on the latter river, there has been carried on from times that must be more legendary than historic, the manufacture of large barges of even 1,000 tons, by a simple and curious method, which he thus describes (not having the book at hand, we are unable to give the account verbatim):—A space of ground equal in size to the bottom of the intended barge is levelled, and upright stakes, or beams, proportioned to the size of the intended barge, are ranged along its edges; these eventually form the ribs of the barge. The bottom is covered in the same manner with beams laid across the breadth of the vessel, between the ribs, and slightly raised above the ground by brushwood. The angles where the sides and bottom join are strengthened by knee-pieces, and the interstices between the beams are filled in by interwoven brushwood. Any partitions or decks required are formed roughly in the same way by beams, strengthened when necessary by cross-pieces, and the intervals filled by rough hurdles of brushwood. The barge having been thus roughly shaped out, the next stage of the manufacture commences. The whole country round "Hitt" is dotted with innumerable springs of bitumen—more commonly known in England as asphalte—which is only bitumen mixed with various proportions of earth, clay, &c. Traditional experience has taught the inhabitants of Hitt the exact proportions of earthy material to mix with their fluid bitumen. A fluid plastic mixture is poured over the beams and wattled work, and solidifies. More asphalte is added and smoothed inside and out with stone rollers; the result is a perfectly waterproof construction, which is strong enough to be moved on rollers a short distance to the river, and bear its cargo safely. Col. Chesney adds, that long experience has made the villagers about Hitt so expert in their business that a boat to carry 20 tons can be built and floated in a single day.

Now here, I think, we have an intelligible solution of the method of the construction of the ark by Noah. (No launching was necessary in his case.)

It quite answers the description given in the sacred record. The frame is of wood, it is pitched within and without with pitch, and yet, as long as the beams are fairly proportioned to the size of the barge, no skill in shaping or fitting them is required; the asphalte binds all into its place, and the rougher the beams, the firmer they are held.

The "upper deck" (or third story), to have been of any use, must have been roofed over (and in a later chapter we read of Noah's removing the "covering of the ark").

A light framework covered with asphalte would have answered the purpose, being supported on uprights carried round the bulwarks of the upper deck. And that mode of construction is exactly what is followed to the present day in covering the flat roofs of the houses in mountain villages near Hitt—among which mountains, it is not improbable, the immense supply of timber necessary for the ark may have been felled.

Digitized by Google

The second volume of Col. Chesney's work already referred to, gives a sketch of one of these houses surmounted, as it were, by a shed; and though only a space of two or three feet exists between the top of the parapet and eave of the roof, it is sufficient to enable the inmates to obtain light and air, and take exercise, none of which can be had in their lower rooms, crowded as they are with cattle and poultry during the long and inclement winter.

Now comes the meaning of the word window. Its general acceptation—at least, such as I was taught as a boy—is that of a small square window a cubit each way. I do not think we need tie ourselves to so narrow a reading. In the same account the "windows" of heaven are spoken of, and no one thinks of placing a cramped construction on the word there.

In the direction "to finish it in a cubit above" I read no restriction except as to its height, and see nothing contrary to the Divine instructions given to Noah, in supposing an opening of that height running completely round the ark, beneath the eaves of the roof that sheltered the upper deck.

I regret I cannot turn to the original Hebrew word translated "window," but I should be surprised if it might not be fairly rendered "opening;" and then many difficulties vanish with regard to air, light, removal of manure, &c., that otherwise are hard to account for.

This opening I imagine to have been screened by light grass mats stretched on reeds, such as are in use to this day all over the East for the purpose of protecting open doorways and window-places during storms, while a sufficiency of air and light is admitted into the interior.

I gather from Gen. viii. 13 that the inmates of the ark could not see out of it, as it was not till Noah removed the covering of the ark that they saw the earth was dry. The bulwarks, then, of the upper deck must have been sufficiently lofty to hide effectually the awful punishment incurred by the "corrupt" and "violent" dwellers upon earth.

This great ark, we must remember, was not made for sailing or towing, nor anything but floating; and it did float long, low, and steady, and weathered the awful storms that wrecked a world.

It was on New Year's-day that Noah took off the covering of the ark, and he and his wife and children looked out on the green slopes of Ararat, fast drying and fitting themselves as the second nursery of mankind, and cattle, and creeping thing under the hand of "Him that doeth great wonders."

Since writing the above, I have found the following passage in Josephus that bears on my view of the construction of the ark ("Antiquities," bk. i., chap. 3, sec. 6; Whiston):

"Now all writers of barbaric histories make mention of this flood and of this ark, among whom is Berosus, the Chaldean; for, when describing the circumstances of the flood, he goes on thus: "It is said there is still some part of this ship in Armenia, at the mountain of the Cordyeans, and that some people carry off pieces of the bitumen, which they take away, and use chiefly as amulets for the averting of mischiefs.'"

SECTION III.

THE CONNECTION BETWEEN THE ARK OF NOAH AND THE TEMPLE OF SOLOMON.

In our previous paper touching on the numerical proportions of the Temple of Solomon, we had occasion to record that the very remarkable "porch" thereof was 10 × 20 cubits in plan, and 120 cubits high. We, in our own note-book, had recorded the various diagonals of the porch, but as they did not bear apparently on the question then in hand, no reference was made to them. But study of the proportions of the Ark of Noah has enabled us to learn some part of their value. David, in his solemn official charge to Solomon, lays much stress on the proportions of this porch, though no reason is assigned.

We will lay before our readers what we venture to think may be one of these reasons.

The imposing Eastern front of the Temple, covered, as both sacred and profane historians assert, with plates of beaten gold, reached a height of 120 cubits, with a breadth of 20 cubits. Its diagonal lines measured a number that in no way appears remarkable; but we recorded it, and reduced it to inches, and the diagonals also of the side front of the porch, and of its whole cubical mass.

$$\sqrt[2]{120^2 + 20^2} \text{ cubits} = 121{\cdot}655 \text{ cubits};$$

This by the way.

In calculating the diagonals of the plan of the Ark of Noah, we found them equal to

$$\sqrt[2]{300^2 + 50^2} = 304{\cdot}13 \text{ cubits};$$

but the diagonals of the front of the Temple of Solomon = 121·655 cubits, or 3041·3 inches, or an equivalent of a span of 10 inches to each cubit—so minutely exact that I could not believe the figures without careful verification. But, besides this, the diagonals of the side elevation of the porch approximate in a surprising manner to the diagonals of the side of the ark. That of the ark

$$= \sqrt[2]{300^2 + 30^2} = 301{\cdot}49 \text{ cubits};$$

while that of the side of the porch

$$= \sqrt[2]{120^2 + 150^2} = 120{\cdot}416 \text{ cubits} = 3010{\cdot}4 \text{ inches}.$$

For the greatest diagonals—i.e. (supposing the ark to be lying East and West), from the lowest S.W. corner to the highest N.E. one, and the porch measured likewise across its solid content, we get for the ark diagonal

$$= \sqrt[2]{304{\cdot}13^2 + 30^2} = 305{\cdot}6 \text{ cubits};$$

while that of the porch

$$= \sqrt[2]{121{\cdot}65^2 + 10^2} = 122{\cdot}065 \text{ cubits} = 3051{\cdot}2 \text{ inches}.$$

The first of these three pairs of numbers being exact, the other two remarkably close approximations.

But on approximations, however interesting, we venture to build no argument, using them only as guide-posts on our way. But they lead us to believe that, in the porch of the Temple of Solomon, we have the Ark of Noah symbolised with a remarkable degree of minuteness.

So that beneath, or through, that ark—fit type of baptism—all must enter the temple of God.

SECTION IV.

CONNECTION BETWEEN THE TEMPLE OF SOLOMON AND CHRISTIANITY.

Readers who have followed us thus far without being able (we hope) to impugn the correctness of our figures, will bear with us while we recapitulate one of the facts that simple arithmetic, applied to some of the most mechanically simple parts of Holy Writ, has elicited.

We believe that we have been able to prove that the porch of the Temple of Solomon distinctly symbolises the Ark of Noah.

Is the ark of Noah a fair type of baptism? We have the best authority for saying it is. But through, or under, this type of baptism, all who entered the house of God, as built by Solomon, must pass. It formed, indeed, the only entrance to the Temple.

How is it, let us ask, that in our Christian places of worship, our "font"—our symbol of baptism—is placed near the main entrance beneath the tower?

We venture, in reply, to quote part of the heart-stirring prayer (would that we could read it in the original tongue!) with which Solomon dedicated his Temple to the God of Israel (1 Kings viii. 41 et seq.):

Digitized by Google

"Moreover concerning a stranger that is not of Thy people Israel, but cometh out of a far country for Thy name's sake; . . . . when he shall come and pray toward this house; hear Thou in heaven Thy dwelling-place, and do according to all that the stranger calleth to Thee for: that all the people of the earth may know Thy name to fear Thee, as do Thy people Israel," &c., &c.

It is, of course, self-evident that our temples—i.e., cathedrals and churches—have their towers and main entrances at the Western end. But can our readers picture to themselves a nation far from its parent home and ancient place of worship, with their temples built with some kind of lofty tower over the main entrance; the font for baptism being near thereto; it and its attendant rites having to be passed ere a member can be received into the congregation of worshippers—this congregation again facing Eastward during their devotions as much as the peculiarities of each particular building will allow?

The axioms of their belief being repeated, both priests and people turn toward the East—the main source of light—the principal windows of their temples receiving illumination from that direction—then, should we know of such a people, we venture to think that, though law, and even tradition, are silent on the subject, we can here trace custom, dating far back beyond the historic time of that nation, and pointing Eastward certainly, and probably, to some great temple built for the worship of their God, when that nation formed part of a united whole at one of the great epochs of their history.

Nov. 29, 1878.

"ISRAEL SHALL BLOSSOM AND BUD, AND FILL THE FACE OF THE WORLD WITH FRUIT."

THE following testimony to Israel's "budding and blossoming" functions, is taken from the Times of the 27th November, 1878, and, being the results of Canon Scott Robertson's careful compilation, may, we believe, be relied upon as authentic. The total collected from Israel for foreign missionary work alone, without including the vast sums contributed for home evangelisation, works of general beneficence, and Christian education, or charity, amounted, for the year 1877-8, to no less than £1,100,793, of which, be it observed, the propaganda of the Roman Catholic Church in England, only subscribed £7,633, being in the ratio of seven-tenths (or 14 shillings) per cent. sterling to the gifts of Protestants. These facts speak for themselves, and ought to make us regard Popish aggression with less dismay than we (some of us) do—perhaps happily do. Our quotation is as follows :—

FOREIGN MISSIONS.—The annual summary of British contributions to 67 societies for foreign mission work during the financial year 1877-8, prepared by Canon Scott Robertson, of Sittingbourne, shows an increase of more than £52,000 upon the total for the previous year. Of this increase the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel received £9,818, and the London Missionary Society £11,588 ; while the Church Missionary Society received £32,931 more in 1877 than in 1876. The contributions are summarised as follows :—Church of England Missions, £466,073 ; Joint Societies of Churchmen and Nonconformists, £163,845 ; English Nonconformist Societies, £324,231 ; Scotch and Irish Presbyterian Societies, £139,011 ; Propaganda of the Roman Catholic Church in England, £7,633 ;—total of British contributions, £1,100,793.

EXTRACT FROM HAMERTON'S "MODERN FRENCHMEN."—Page 100 : "The great fabric of the British power" (in India, in 1831) "commanded Jacquemont's admiration. 'The more I know of this fabric,' he wrote in our own language, 'the more extraordinary it appears to me ; no guess can be made at its durability ; it may last centuries, and may be swept away in a few months. However, this I will foretell : the British power in India will not perish by foreign aggression.'"

OUR IDENTITY HISTORICALLY VIEWED.

BY B.

I HAVE been told by some that they admit that, as a nation, we have enjoyed peculiar blessings and privileges, and so far appear to have fulfilled the conditions necessary to be found in Lost Israel ; but for all that, it is quite possible that, at some future period, a nation may arise who will fulfil the conditions more closely than ourselves. But they err, not knowing the Scriptures, for the prophet Hosea tells us of the time in which Israel was to become a prominent nation.

In chap. vi. 1—3, speaking of Ephraim's recovery, he says: "After two days will He revive us." Taking those days to be millennial days, or each day 1,000 years—which they are evidently meant to represent—we should immediately, after the expiration of 2,000 years from the breaking up of the kingdom of Israel, expect to see a revival of their political power as a nation, although not as Israel, for it must be observed that it will not be under their own name. If we read the verse through, we find that "After two days will He revive us: in the third day He will raise us up, and we shall live in His sight," by which we must understand that some time will elapse between the revival of His people and their restoration to the Promised Land, in which they will be raised to a height of glory far above the most splendid Empires of the past.

Before we look into the events which occurred in the history of our people, immediately after the termination of the 2,000 years, during which Israel had ceased to be known as a nation, I will direct your attention to the date of the year in which the prophet Hosea pronounced God's sentence against His disobedient people. We have reason to believe it was as shewn in our marginal Bible—viz., B.C. 785. Now let us go forward 2,000 years from that time, and it brings us to A.D. 1215. Surely this is no mere coincidence! It is the year in which the Great Charter, the bulwark of our liberties, was signed! True, the provisions had to be enforced by the sword, and although our brave ancestors did not enjoy the benefits themselves, the ground was prepared and the seed sown, which afterwards produced good fruit to be enjoyed by their children; and, moved by a love of freedom, they bravely resisted the power of their unworthy King John, and also that of his successor Henry III.; and however dark it appeared at that time, it was near daybreak.

We must remember we have been reckoning from the time when sentence was first pronounced, but that sentence was not completely carried out until sixty-four years had passed away. Let us, therefore, look at the date when Israel was utterly carried away, and we find it to be B.C. 721, and reckoning on 2,000 years, it brings us to A.D. 1279. Recalling to our minds the events which took place immediately after the year A.D. 1279, we find it to be the very time when the English nation was properly formed.

Edward I., a brave, strong-minded prince, having just before ascended the throne, proved himself to be quite different from his father and grandfather, for he not only voluntarily signed the Great Charter, but, having called members from the various Boroughs to sit in Parliament, he consented to their adding a clause by which the king could not levy taxes or raise any money without the consent of Parliament. From this time forth, great progress was made by the English nation, for very soon the races which, since the conquest had been objects of dislike and even hatred to each other, became united, and a common language was spoken. From the latter part of the thirteenth century to the middle of the fourteenth century, England had risen to be the most prominent nation in Europe. It was during this period that John Wycliffe arose and gave the Scriptures to the people in their own language.

And now allow me to quote Lord Macaulay, the eminent historian. He says: "The sources of the noblest rivers which spread fertility over continents, and bear richly-laden fleets to the sea, are to be sought in wild and barren mountain tracts, incorrectly laid down in maps, and rarely explored by travellers. To such a tract the history of our country, during the thirteenth century, may not unaptly be compared. Sterile and obscure as is that portion of our annals, it is there that we must seek for the origin of our freedom, our prosperity, and our glory. Then it was that the great English people were formed, that the national character began to exhibit those peculiarities which it has ever since retained, and that our fathers became emphatically Islanders—Islanders not merely in geographical position, but in their politics, their feelings, and their manners. Then first appeared with distinctness that constitution which has ever since, through all changes, preserved its identity; that constitution of which all the other free constitutions of the world are copies, and which, in spite of some defects, deserves to be regarded as the best under which any great society has ever yet existed during many ages. Then it was that the House of Commons held its first sitting; then it was that the common laws rose to the dignity of a science; then it was that the courage of those sailors who manned the rude barks of the Cinque Ports first made the flag of England terrible on the seas; then it was that the most ancient colleges, which still exist at both the great national seats of learning, were founded; then was formed that language, less musical, indeed, than the langnages of the South, but in force, in richness, in aptitude for all the highest purposes of the poet, the philosopher, and the orator, inferior to the tongue of Greece alone; then, too, appeared the first dawn of that noble literature, the most splendid and the most durable of the many glories of England.

Digitized by Google

"Early in the fourteenth century the amalgamation of the races was all but complete, and it was soon made manifest, by signs not to be mistaken, that a people inferior to none existing in the world had been formed by the mixture of three branches of the great Teutonic family with each other and with the aboriginal Britons.

"Every Yeoman from Kent to Northumberland valued himself as one of a race born for victory and dominion." After describing the position to which the English people were then raised, he says: "The same age which produced the Black Prince and Derby, Chandos and Hawkwood produced Geoffry Chaucer and John Wycliffe." In so splendid and imperial a manner did the English people properly so-called first take their place among the nations of the world. In plain terms, then it was that the words spoken by the prophet Hosea were fulfilled, and Israel was revived and stood erect.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI'S TESTIMONY TO OUR IDENTITY IN "TANCRED."

"THE life and property of England are protected by the laws of Sinai. The hard-working people of England are secured in every seven days a day of rest by the laws of Sinai And when that labouring multitude cease for a while from a toil which equals almost Egyptian bondage, and demands that exponent of the mysteries of the heart, that soother of the troubled spirit, which poetry alone can afford—to whose harp do the people of England fly for sympathy and solace? Who is the most popular poet in this country? Is he to be found among the Mr. Wordsworths and the Lord Bryons, amid sauntering reveries or monologues of sublime satiety? Shall we seek him among the wits of Queen Anne? Even to the myriad-minded Shakespeare can we award the palm? No; the most popular poet in England is the sweet singer of Israel. Since the days of the heritage when every man dwelt safely under his vine and under his fig tree, there never was a race who sang so often the odes of David as the people of Great Britain.

"Vast as the obligations of the whole human family are to the Hebrew race, there is no portion of the modern populations so much indebted to them as the British people. It was 'the sword of the Lord and of Gideon' that won the boasted liberties of England; chanting the same canticles that cheered the heart of Judah amid their glens, the Scotch, upon their hill-sides, achieved their religious freedom."—Tancred; or, the New Crusade, p. 187. R. L.

"THE CITIES OF THE NATIONS FELL."

[THE GERMAN PROTESTANT CHURCH.]

OUR readers are aware of the views we have expressed in regard to the meaning of the above Apocalyptic utterance. It occurs in Rev. xvi. 19, in connection with the tripartite division of Israel's Church-city in our own land, with the condemnation and punishment of the Great Babylonian false Church-city which at that crisis comes into remembrance "before God, to give unto her the cup of the wine of the fierceness of His wrath," and also with the incidence of "the great earthquake, such as was not since men were upon the earth, so mighty an earthquake, so great." In point of time, as Great Pyramid teaching proves, it is, we believe, close to our own days. The fall of the cities or "Churches of the nations" or Gentiles, we presume, must be the downfall and decadence of the true Protestant light-bearing "candlesticks" of the continental Churches of Christendom, and, if we are right in our interpretation, those Churches must now be exhibiting symptoms that their light is vanishing and themselves tottering to their fall. Israel's Protestant Church is, as we all know, divided into three parts—High Church, Low Church, and Broad Church—each violently opposed to the other and striving for the mastery, neither able, from a variety of causes, to effect the expulsion of the other two. The whole presents the wonderful aspect of a house divided against itself, yet not falling—nay, a house which, though so divided, is now stronger and more firmly rooted in the hearts of the people, for the very reason in some degree that those divisions exist. We ask, then, if Israel's Church at home is so divided, and portents abroad show us, as they do, that Rome's doom cannot be delayed beyond A.D. 1881, as most men from other data have already decided, have we ground for thinking that the Protestantism of the Churches abroad is dead, and the Churches themselves ready to fall? Let the following true statement of a correspondent of the Times, writing from Antwerp on the occasion of the late Rubens' fête there, tell us what is the condition of Protestantism at Leipsic, the stronghold of Protestant orthodoxy, and as a contrast that of Roman Catholicism, its deadly enemy, in its head-quarters—the cathedral at Antwerp. The comparison is ominous for the condition of the true faith and of those Churches of the Gentiles which have hitherto held it on the continent. The account, which is as follows, is copied from the Times, published some months since. The correspondent says:—

The Salle Leys having become crowded to suffocation I went to hear high mass in the cathedral. This being the Festival of the Virgin, the church is at present decorated with a resplendent figure of the virgin placed in the nave of the cathedral, and along the aisles are hung the banners exhibited at the recent procession. The cathedral, like the town hall, has in recent times been very much improved by the removal of altars and decorations in the classical style, and the introduction in their place of mural decorations in keeping with the architecture of the fifteenth century. The best artists have done the work. Thus a long line of fine pictures runs along the right wall just under the windows representing the stations of the cross in a way which seems to touch the feelings of many worshippers. Yesterday the building was filled in every part, and the congregation did not consist, as may be supposed, of loungers or people who merely came to hear the music. I do not think I am far wrong in saying that 99 out of 100 of those present knelt, made the sign of the cross, had prayer-books, and with apparent fervour took part generally in the services. The majority of them were men, and belonged to the working classes. A few weeks ago, also on a Sunday forenoon, I went to hear the services in one of the largest churches in Leipsic, and although the clergyman was able and popular, he preached to galleries in which there was not one hearer, and to pews empty everywhere but just in front of the pulpit. The congregation might roughly be said to have consisted of a few elderly people of all ranks, but chiefly women. The contrast between what I saw in the two cities, one the stronghold of Catholicism and the other that of Protestant orthodoxy in modern Germany, seemed striking, and I have therefore recorded it as a mere fact.

Digitized by Google

This comparison, making so fatally against the value set on Protestantism by the German people, agrees accurately with the dictum of the Times itself recorded on Dec. 3, 1875, when it said that "the Protestant Church of Prussia was going down the stream with ever-diminishing buoyancy, form, and bulk, till it is like to sink altogether." In other words, the city Church of that hitherto (politically) Protestant nation is tottering to its fall, and is about to disappear finally. If we find not a living Protestantism in the "Church-city" of Germany, where else, we ask, can we discover it on the whole continent of Europe? Alas! not in Spain, or Portugal, or France, or Italy, or Austria, or—may we add?—in Sweden or Denmark.

The cities of the "nations"—i.e., of the Gentiles—are falling or have fallen, and all is ready for the great catastrophe, the earthquake, which, it will be seen, is described as occurring with the terrible convulsions, which accompany the "fiery deluge" of God's wrath—in darkness—the warfare being conducted (as we saw it was lately in Bulgaria) without mitigating Christian light—warfare without quarter—warfare where protection for sick, wounded, and prisoners is ignored by the whole of the belligerents, and no one is or will be willing to intervene or interfere, on the side of mercy or of Christian mitigation. Such is the terror of the picture, and such the reality presented to us in the passage by the words, "and the cities of the nations fell."

We conclude our notice of the subject for the present by referring our readers to a quotation from the memoir of the late Rev. Norman Macleod, vol. i., p. 49, relevant to the point under notice. We think it right thus to fortify our position in regard to this and all similar facts whereby indications are given us that we are chronologically in the "last times" described in Rev. xvi. 18—21; not only because of the inexpressibly great importance of these matters to our race and Church, but because these things, while they are regarded as of secondary importance by the thoughtless and careless among us, are in fact silent witnesses to the truth of God's Word, which we feel it to be the vocation of all us Israelites, and ourselves especially, to make vocal and far-resounding. The late lamented editor of Good Words said, writing from Weimar, in Germany, so far back as the 30th May, 1834 (things have not, we know, mended since):—

> Would to God there was a second Luther! Germany is in a most extraordinary state. The clergyman here (Rühr) is the head of the Rationalist school; of religion there is none, and most of the clergy merely follow it as a power in the hands of the State. I am credibly informed by competent judges that ninety-nine out of a hundred are infidels. If you but heard a Rationalist talk on religion! I had a talk with one yesterday. He believed in "Hume on Miracles," and, moreover, said that he thought it of no consequence to our faith in Scripture whether miracles were true or not; in short, he believed in the Scriptures, and yet said they were "pious frauds." Devils and all are to be saved at last. . . . . If you wish to adore your own Church, country, and profession, come abroad.

The following is the testimony of a German baroness regarding the religious life of her own countrymen, as lately published in one of our monthly serials. It is a melancholy confirmation of what has gone before:—

> The Germans and English (she says) although springing mainly from one stock, and having many outward features in common, are widely diverse in thought, manners, and character.
>
> A long residence in Germany has strengthened me in the belief that no two nations in the world are more utterly at variance, in all that constitutes the inner life of a nation, than the English and their Teuton cousins.
>
> Among the Germans, the Bible is only a lesson-book, and is shelved with other lesson-books as soon as the rite of confirmation has marked the close of childhood, and the lad or girl enters upon the great battle of life. It is very rarely their daily companion, the guide and comfort of their souls; it is little read in their churches, nor is it used in family prayer, a rite which is almost unknown in German households.
>
> Irreligious feeling for years has been spreading among all ranks of Germans. The results of the law for civil marriages and civil baptisms, and the recent revelations at the funeral of a Berlin Socialist, all point in the same direction. Dark as the horizon of Europe is at the present hour, to me the saddest and most hopeless problem of our nineteenth century is the future of the German Empire. We all acknowledge its intellectual and its military supremacy; but what can we expect from a people which prides itself on casting aside the trammels of what it calls an out-worn faith, and trusting only in its boasted intellect, and in the strength of its own very strong right arm, chooses, with open eyes, to tread the downward path in which want of faith and want of truth walk hand in hand?

Verily we may add that God's Word is true, and that, as regards Germany—a Gentile nation—"The cities of the nations fell!"

HOW THE OPPOSITION WORKS.

By L. G. R.

OUR friends will be surprised to hear that neither David nor even our blessed Lord were Israelites, and, therefore, their descent from Judah goes for nothing, and the Bible might as well be put behind the fire. This train of thought is brought about by hearing an eminent preacher, and truly Evangelical opponent, state to his audience in church that the moment the descendant of Abraham ceased to practise the rite of circumcision, he lost his claim to being an Israelite, having renounced the covenant. No doubt our friend, who has publicly appeared in the pages of the BANNER as an opponent, intended this as a set off against our views, knowing there are many believers in our Identity amongst his hearers. We feel confident he is not aware of the consequences of this line of argument. From Gen. xvii. 9—14, we find that the rite of circumcision was not the covenant itself, but only the sign thereof, and that the covenant is contained in the previous verses of the chapter; for if circumcision be the covenant, then it stands to reason that the rite must be performed whilst the child is eight days old, and if not during the childhood, "that soul shall be cut off from his people."

If we are to take the letter of the law, which we must do according to our opponent's argument, then, according to the passage of Scripture contained in Joshua v. 2—5, 7, there can be no true Israelite except he be a descendant of Joshua, Caleb, or Eleazar; for none of the Israelites were circumcised according to the law. We thank God that of His mercy, even at that time He showed His people that He was a God that keepeth covenant, although we had rebelled against Him and admitted us again into relationship with Himself and gave us again the sign of the covenant the rite of circumcision; but now this sign is done away by the Word of the living God Himself set forth by St. Paul (Gal. vi. 13—15; 1 Cor. vii. 19; Gal. v. 1—6).

Divorced Israel (Jer. iii. 8) is not to come again under the law of circumcision according to the letter in the flesh, but to return in faith (Hosea. ii. 19, 20), having the circumcision which is in the heart; and though Judah is under the law, and will be saved by God's own mighty power (Ezek. xx. 33—38; Zech. xii. 5, 8, 10), the Ten Tribes are under grace, free from the law (Jer. xxxi.), in Christ, and to be blessed with the new covenant.

To return to our opponent's logic, if he is right, then it stands to reason there are only portions of Two Tribes in existence who may partake of the covenant promises—viz., Ephraim from Joshua's seed and Levi from Eleazar, therefore Judah is no where, and in Christ there can be no covenant blessings. Are we right, or is the reasoning of the opposition? We leave our readers to judge for themselves.

Digitized by Google

SECURITY OF THE PEOPLE OF GOD.

INTRODUCTION BY THE EDITOR.

PART I.

THE REV. ALFRED J. J. CACHEMAILLE, the vicar of St. Mary, Oldham, has favoured us with a copy of the translation of a French tract, issued by his late father, the Rev. J. L. V. Cachemaille, vicar of Sark, in the Channel Islands, written in 1853, but published in 1868 in English. It is necessary to state that the rev. author of this very extraordinary pamphlet, had not, when he wrote it in French, probably so much as heard of the Identity of the British with Lost Israel. After its publication, it appears he read John Wilson's first work, which was issued in 1844. The teaching of this pamphlet appears to us, under the circumstances, perfectly marvellous; and we really wonder how a divine, holding the views he did, missed the glorious discovery that the British race, regarding whom he wrote so feelingly, was, in fact, the true "Israel of God"—the flesh and blood "remnant" of God's people—long "lost," now found! We desire to republish the English translation of this pamphlet in the pages of the BANNER, at the present crisis, because we deem it throws much useful light upon the meaning of the Lord's proposed dealings with our race, in reference to the low passage leading from the South end of the grand gallery of the Great Pyramid into the ante-chamber; and also, to those who carefully ponder the matter, as to the symbolism of the "first hollow of construction" above the king's chamber, leading from the South end of the grand gallery ceiling.

The rev. author seems to point to the mode of Israel's journeyings through all the trials and difficulties of the coming times of "the great tribulation," protected all the time in the hollow of Jehovah's hand, shielded by His loving power, and protected by His might, what time the Gentile nations of the "earth," essaying to follow them in that course, meet their doom as by a great earthquake, and as by the fiery deluge of God's wrath and indignation, just for lack of the sustaining help He grants to us, His chosen ones. We only request our readers to substitute "the British Israelites" for the "true Christians" of our author, as they peruse his work, and they will find his pamphlet wonderfully suggestive and edifying. If they reflect, that when the time of the great affliction shall have arrived, Israel will, by the outpouring of the Holy Spirit, and by the new covenant blessing, have herself become the truly "Christian," "righteous nation," our author's words will not seem far wrong, even without any substitution of terms, though, in fact, he was, as all must admit, when he wrote, one of those of whom it might be justly said, "Who is blind, but My servant? or deaf, as My messenger that I sent? who is blind as he that is perfect? and blind as the Lord's servant?" (Isa. xlii. 19). With these words of introduction, we leave our author to address the readers of the BANNER for himself:—

"THE SECURITY OF THE PEOPLE OF GOD.

"The Apostle Paul, when speaking of what had happened to the Israelites under the guidance of Moses, says: 'All these things happened unto them for ensamples (or typically); and they are written for our admonition, upon whom the ends of of the world are come' (1 Cor. x. 11). He enumerates many things which had happened to the Israelites; he does not mention them all, for they would occupy too large a space, but he selects the most striking, and those which relate more especially to the object he had in view. As to those which he passes over in silence, they are still, no doubt, applicable to the same purpose, being still written and reported with the same object as those indicated by St. Paul. And in considering with attention the expressions of the apostle, it is impossible not to perceive that all that has been written concerning the children of Israel, and all that happened to them, is what he has in mind, and declares to have been typical. Thus all that happened to this nation was a type, or happened typically; and if this is written and the remembrance of it preserved, it is that the warning may be heard, and the instruction thus afforded may be received. Moreover, it is not to every succeeding generation that the lesson is given, but as St. Paul expresses it, to those on whom the end of the world has come, or those who should live in the last ages—that is to say, under the dispensation of the Gospel, and especially in the last moments of that dispensation—consequently it is written for us who live in these latter days.

"Hence the history of the Israelites should be exceedingly interesting to us, as being almost the record of our own, since what happened to them was typical of what should happen to us. In reading this history we may deduce practical instruction, seeing that it affords admonition as to the regulation of our own conduct. It is from this point of view that we wish authorised by the language of St. Paul, to examine some of the types which are to be found in the history of the Israelites. The part selected relates to the plagues inflicted upon Egypt and the Egyptians, till the moment when after the passage of the Red Sea, Israel sung the song of praise for his deliverance.

"What occurred to the Israelites during this period is what will interest us particularly; not what happened to Egypt or the Egyptians. The Egyptians are not types for the believer, nor for the Church of Christ. The Israelites alone are such. Moses relates that God inflicted upon Egypt and its inhabitants ten severe and destructive plagues (Exod. vii.—xii.), and in chap. xiv. he relates that Pharaoh and all his army were drowned in the Red Sea, not one escaped. We must remember that during the infliction of the plagues, the Israelites remained in Egypt, but in a remote part of the land which had been assigned to them by Pharaoh, on their first arrival in that country.

"The land of Goshen formed a part of Egypt not very distant from the residence of the king, so that it may be said that the Israelites were really dwelling amongst the Egyptians, and not beyond the limits of their country. They were thus on the frontiers of the country subjected to these plagues. What, however, happened to the Israelites during these judgments? When God denounced the fourth plague, He declared that He would put a difference between His people and those of Pharaoh, and that He would so sever the land of Goshen where His people dwelt, that the swarm of insects should not come nigh them—and 'The Lord did so' (Exod. viii. 22, 23). The same distinction was made as to the fifth plague (Exod. ix. 4, 7) and as to the seventh (verse 26), and as to the ninth (Exod. x. 23). We know that it was the same as to the tenth, for none of the first-born of Israel were killed by the destroying angel, and consequently God commanded Moses to sanctify them—that is to say, to consecrate them to Himself (Exod. xiii. 2). If it be not expressly stated with respect to the other plagues, the three first, the sixth, and the eighth, that the Israelites were exempt, we have good reason to infer that it was the case as well as respecting the tenth, for there it is not directly, though clearly proved that none of the first-born of Israel perished (see Heb. xi. 28). The plagues were pronounced against Pharaoh, his people, and his country, and not in any way against the children of Israel. So that it may be positively asserted that they were absolutely exempt. The same distinction existed at the passage of the Red Sea. The children of Israel went into the midst of the sea upon dry ground, and the waters were a wall unto them, on their right and on their left: 'Thus the Lord saved Israel that day from the hands of the Egyptians, and Israel saw the great work which the Lord did upon the Egyptians' (Exod. xiv. 29, 31). The song which Moses and the children of Israel sang after the passage, is a song of praise and thanksgiving for the miraculous and perfect deliverance which God had thus afforded. They did not sing this song till after this last deliverance, the greatest and the most wonderful; for not only is it, so to speak, the crowning one, but now Pharaoh and his host are utterly destroyed. The last enemy they had to dread, after having escaped the hard bondage of Egypt, this enemy is destroyed—drowned, sunk in the depths of the sea, nothing remaining but powerless, lifeless corpses. In Egypt, during the infliction of these plagues, Israel certainly enjoyed their exemption from them, and each succeeding must have added to their enjoyment, deliverance, and have produced a strong assurance. They thanked God for each deliverance, but were not free from uneasiness or anxiety, whilst the ruler of the land, its tyrant, still lived, and became more and more hardened and unwilling to let them go. We may therefore imagine why it is not till after the death of Pharaoh that the people sing loudly this song of deliverance. Now Israel is utterly free from all fear. We have been considering the enemies of Israel, the subjects of terrible plagues, which crushed and ruined them, their country and their possession. And when they make a last effort, expressed thus by Moses: 'The enemy said, I will pursue;' 'My hand shall destroy them' (Exod. xv. 9), when Israel seems to be in their power without the possibility of escape, then it is that God destroys them utterly, and takes signal vengeance of them. We have also seen Israel, the people of God, perfectly exempt from every plague, and every evil, the objects of a stupendous and wonderful preservation. And, at last, when all his enemies are destroyed, he sings a song of praise, of adoration, of thankfulness, and of freedom. What a dreadful and ignominous fate for his enemies! How glorious for Israel! We propose now making some remarks upon a verse of the song of Moses and Israel: 'Thou in Thy mercy hast led forth the people which Thou hast redeemed; Thou hast guided them in Thy strength unto Thy holy habitation" (Exod. xv. 13). It tells us that the children of Israel have been the objects of the mercy of God, during all the season of judgments, and till the moment that they were placed in perfect safety from their enemies. This mercy was manifest in their preservation and exemption from every evil from the beginning to the end. It was moreover declared most evidently, it is said: 'Thou hast led forth'—that is, Thou hast brought him out of Egypt; Thou hast delivered him from Pharaoh and his people: 'By Thy mercy and strength' in the infliction of dreadful plagues, and in the display of miraculous power, which has ruined, crushed, and destroyed the enemy. Thus the mercy of God is manifest—first, by the exemption of the children of Israel from all evil, and secondly, by the judgments displayed upon Pharaoh and his subjects. What is mercy towards Israel, is a dreadful calamity to Egypt. The power which preserves Israel, which sustains him and hinders the plagues from molesting him, which guides him through the Red Sea and brings him into the holy habitation of God, is the same power which destroys, ruins, overthrows, and swallows up Pharaoh and his army. It is impossible to contemplate a more complete contrast than is here afforded and produced by the same cause. But this is not a solitary instance in the Holy Scriptures. The same Christ is Himself a sweet savour, which becomes a savour of life to some, and a savour of death unto others (2 Cor. ii. 14, 16).

Digitized by Google

"The same day (or the same light) is for some like a fiery oven, to consume utterly—and for others a sun, whose rays bring life and health (Mal. iv. 1, 2). If God will 'avenge His own elect'—that is to say, deliver them (Luke xviii. 7)—He comes with flaming fire taking vengeance against the wicked, but He comes also to be glorified in His saints (2 Thes. i. 6, 10). Many similar passages might be named, but these are sufficient for the end in view, and clearly warrant such an interpretation of the verse of the song as has been given. St. Paul tells us that these things happened as types or typically, and that they were written for our instruction, that we may take heed of them because we have an interest in them. We have reached the latter days in which such things may be expected to happen, as may be called anti-types, or the reality of what happened in Egypt and in the Red Sea. We should then learn, that as God did in times past to His people and to His enemies, He will do again and in the same manner. Therefore, 'All that was written aforetime was written for our admonition, that through patience and comfort of the Scriptures we might have hope' (Rom. xv. 4)." (To be continued.)

THE VICAR OF ST. GILES, DURHAM, GIVES BLIND TESTIMONY TO OUR IDENTITY.

A FRIEND to our cause in Durham, under the name of "Zeta," has been pointing in the pages of the Durham Chronicle to the utterances of the vicar of St. Giles, on the occasion of the St. Giles Harvest Festival, regarding the British nation. We conclude the reverend vicar is not a friend to our Identity. But when he speaks as he does of our "peculiar" national blessings, of the peace, civil and religious liberty, security for life and property, we British enjoy; of our dwelling alone, free from invasion, with the best laws, the best education for our young, the purest Church of any of the nations of the world, he certainly, whether he knows it or not, speaks in the language of us Israelites, and he speaks, also, the truth. But he is, we fear, quite unaware, like so many of his brethren in the ministry, that, claiming all this for the British, he is endowing them with all the blessings and all the favours their Lord Jehovah promised only to "Israel obedient;" and the preacher, and those who think with him, therefore, are on the horns of this dilemma—that they must either come to the unavoidable conclusion, the Bible being true, that we British are positively the remnant of Lost Israel, or that our God, forgetful of His promises to His friend and our forefather "Abraham and his seed for ever," has placed the stock of Israel entirely aside, and, either permanently or temporarily (both suppositions being blasphemous, and, therefore, incredible), endowed the purely Gentile races called the British with every one of the temporal and spiritual blessings and benefits He swore by Himself should be "Abraham's and his seed's after him" for ever (Gen. xxii. 17, xvii. 19; Luke i. 55). With this introduction, we ask our friends to attend to "Zeta" addressing the editor of the Durham Chronicle:—

SIR,—Perhaps you will allow me to rescue from oblivion a few remarks of the vicar of St. Giles, which deserve to be recorded. They stand out like an oasis in the midst of a desert of clerical platitudes. He said, "We ought to be thankful also for the peculiar national blessings we (the English people) enjoyed. Many people had striven for peace and prosperity, but they had not gained it in the measure this nation had. Other nations had known the horrors of war, and the still greater curse of civil war; but we have dwelt in peace, surrounded by the streak of silver sea, quite alone and free from invasion. We have, also, in this land, personal liberty, such as never has been enjoyed in any other land; and, not only liberty, but security of property and life. We have the fairest laws that any nation ever possessed. We have the purest, most learned, and devoted Church that ever was the glory of any nation. We have, also, very cheap religious and secular education within the reach of the poorest beggar. The poor man can have his child well educated and well trained." The rev. gentleman observes, we see, that England is in possession of the following blessings, for which we should be thankful:—(1) "Profound peace." But this was Israel's lot: "Lord, Thou wilt ordain peace for us" (Isa. xxvi. 12). (2) "Comparative prosperity." Also Israel's promise (Deut. xxviii 1—13). (3) "We dwell alone." Also Israel's: "So the people shall dwell alone, and not be reckoned among the nations" (Num. xxiii. 9, 10). (4) "Free from invasion." Also Israel's: "Thy Gates (i.e., ports) shall be open continually" (Isa. lx. 11). (5) "Unexampled personal liberty." Also Israel's: "Thou shalt be far from oppression" (Isa. liv. 14). (6) "Education within the reach of everyone." Also Israel's. "And all thy children shall be taught of the Lord" (Isa. liv. 13). If the British are that long-lost people, there is really no fear of famine while Deut. xxviii. 5, 6, 11, stand on record. ZETA.

Digitized by Google

ISRAEL'S BATTLES.

"BECAUSE THERE IS NONE OTHER THAT FIGHTETH FOR US BUT ONLY THOU, O GOD!"

(Continued from page 291.)

NO. XVII.—THE BATTLE OF THE NILE.

WE have detained our readers for a long period over the stirring narratives of the wars in which Israel was engaged for many a year, at one period of her history, in the great heathen Empire which those operations and battles served to consolidate and build up there. It is now fitting we should change the scene, and we purpose for some time to occupy the space at our disposal by bringing before our readers the battles fought by our fleets and armies during the perilous times of Nelson, and of the Peninsular War—the times, in fact, of the great Napoleon and the terrible crisis of our nation's history when it was "Israel against the world," when, in sober, literal truth, our standing motto which appears above, was exactly true: "There was none other that fought for US but only Thou, O God!"

British isolation was complete in those days; but Israel was all-powerful, for on her side was the Lord Jehovah, the GOD of Israel, who gave her the victory in instances without number, but scarcely ever so decisively and in so marked a manner as at the battle of the Nile, on the night of August 1, 1798.

The great Napoleon, on the last day of June of that year, had safely reached the shores of Alexandria with his army and fleet distined for the conquest of Egypt. On the road there, he had, by help of the same force, surprised and captured the citadel-stronghold Malta, destined afterwards to be a British "Gate."

During these operations, the French were closely followed by the British fleet, then under the command of Nelson. But the latter having no frigates to bring him correct news of the enemy's movements, was too late to prevent the French occupation of Malta, too late to hinder the landing of their forces in Alexandria, too late to stay the march of Napoleon and his army to Cairo. But he was not too late in the providence of God to find his long-sought foe, the French line-of-battle ships, drawn up in Abukir Bay, detained there by a singular error of Napoleon's, from July 1, when the French landed, till August 1, when Nelson discovered his enemy and forced him into action. The French were under Admiral Brueys, and the fleet consisted of thirteen ships of the line, and four frigates, carrying 1,196 guns, and 11,230 men; Nelson's force also was thirteen ships of the line, but he had only one fifty-gun frigate, carrying in all 1,012 guns, and 8,068 men. The British ships were all seventy-fours; the French had three eighty-gun ships, and one three-decker of 120 guns. The preponderance of force therefore, it will be seen, was greatly on the side of the French, and they had the immense advantage of being anchored close to a shoal in shore, moored in a strong and compact line of battle, in the open roadstead it is true, but so placed that it was scarcely possible to turn the line from the South-west.

Once the enemy was in sight, Nelson resolved on his plan of attack. He decided to close with the French ships, keeping on the outer side of their line; but Captain Foley, in the Goliath, led his ship between the enemy's line and the shore, fastened on the Conquérant as his enemy, and shot away her mast in ten minutes. The battle began a little after 6 p.m., and during all that fearful night the shores of Abukir Bay, and the Egyptian sands for many a mile, were reddened with the glare of terrific broadsides given and returned as the British ships, one after the other, came slowly on, and, fixing on their anchored adversaries, seized them in a deadly grip, which was only loosened when the Frenchman surrendered and struck his colours, or sunk at his anchors.

Thus, Hood in the Zealous, Nelson in the Vanguard, Louis in the Minotaur, Darby in the Bellerophon, and all but poor Trowbridge in the Culloden, who was stuck fast on a mud bank all night and could not reach his foe, each was engaged with a colossal French line-of-battle ship with unvarying success. The first two ships of the French line were dismasted within a quarter of an hour after the action began. At half-past eight, p.m., the third, fourth, and fifth Frenchmen surrendered to the British; others had suffered so heavily they were certain to succumb, when, at 9 p.m., an event occurred which was the crisis and decisive point of this great battle. The French flag ship Orient, which carried the flag of Admiral Brueys, was found to be on fire. The French admiral was ere then dead, killed in the action—cut in two. The flag ship was soon one sheet of flames from stem to stern, and at last the fire reaching the powder magazine, the immense 120-gun flag ship blew up with a prodigious noise, and stopped the din of the battle by its yet greater horror. Only about seventy of the French crew were saved, many hundreds of the remainder were drowned or killed in the explosion, and with the vessel there went down to the bottom of the sea no less than £600,000 sterling, which was the plunder Napoleon had secured at Malta, while he was there as its treacherous conqueror. When morning dawned on August 2, 1798, the Battle of the Nile had been fought and won. The French fleet was no more. Its only relics were two ships of the line and two frigates, which had escaped much disabled. The flag ship was destroyed, eight ships struck and were captured by the British squadron, two were wrecked on the shore of Abukir Bay, and two of the frigates were destroyed, sunk, and burnt. Thus ended not the victory, but, as Nelson called it, "the conquest" of the Nile.

The event left Napoleon landed in Egypt without the means of returning to Europe with his army; the Mediterranean was a British lake, and Malta at the mercy of the British to starve it into surrender, which they forthwith did.

Thus God destroyed Israel's foes before them, fought for them, and gave them victory when the odds were strongly against them—the enemy's power in men, and guns, and weight of metal being, as we have seen, all in their favour. Then, in truth, Jehovah came forth for His people Israel and "maintained their cause." He, and He alone, appeared for them then, when of earthly allies they had none. He showed them that "there was none other that fighteth for them and giveth them the victory" but Himself.

Reader, let us thank God for our origin. It was the cause of our nation's conquest at the Nile, of Napoleon's crushing defeat and humiliation in Egypt, and afterwards at Acre, when he was beaten by Sir Sydney Smith, an Englishman. It raised our nation at once to the pinnacle of earthly glory, as the chief maritime nation of the earth—a position we have occupied ever since by the grace of our God, the God of Israel.

(To be continued.)

THE GREAT EARTHQUAKE ANTICIPATED IN THE "EARTH;" BUT PEACE FOR ISRAEL.

WE proceed to give a few extracts from the papers of the day to show that the continental nations are now beginning to realise that war for them is imminent, and that the lull which has been granted them for a time is likely soon to have an abrupt but very terrible termination. The following is from the Paris correspondent of the Pall Mall Gazette, dated some weeks since:—

The present position of Eastern affairs is exciting a great deal of apprehension here, for another and more general conflict is feared, into which this country may find itself dragged. The Temps reminds its readers of the intention which England had at one time of seizing on Gallipoli, adding that should the Russians refuse to recross the Balkans, the British Government will, in all probability, sequestrate Constantinople. The République Française says :—"In reality the orders of the Congress are paralysed; and this regrettable state of affairs is contrary to the legitimate expectations of Europe. The Treaty of Berlin appears more and more to have been but a temporary arrangement, hurriedly knocked together, with the object of PUTTING OFF THAT GENERAL WAR which alone among all the Powers France sincerely desired to avoid, but which in a short time threatens to become inevitable."

Digitized by Google

The Russian paper the Ruski Mir speaks in plain terms of the intention of that nation to "set the world in a blaze" again, and to tear up the Berlin Treaty with all the obligations it imposed on Russia.

English attention is engrossed by Afghanistan. Austria is taken up with unfortunate Bosnia, and has, besides, struggles with her many domestic difficulties. Germany has her hands full with Socialist and Ultramontane troubles. So there is no power left in Europe to oppose Russian action. For any resistance to be rendered to Russia, Europe has ceased to exist. We may settle Balkan affairs as we think best, having the interest of Russia and Slavdom alone in view, and ignoring entirely all Lord Beaconsfield's and Count Andrassy's sayings and doings. It cannot enter into our view to restore the country South of the Balkans to the Anglo-Turks and allow their influence thence to extend even to the Bulgarian Principality. We have to think of the future, and secure a firm and enduring peace instead of the truce marked by the Berlin Treaty. Time and circumstances are in our favour. Let us profit by our opportunities and antagonists.

What Russia's aims are, regarding God's "gift" to Israel—viz., the heathen Empire of India—let the following choice morsel from the Vedomosti of St. Petersburg tell us:—

England once possessed of Afghanistan (this writer says) would be impregnable. With that mountain fortress in English hands Russia would not only have to abandon all hope of ever driving the English out of India, but might actually find her Eastern flank threatened by those who are her worst enemies in the West. Russia's future depends upon the Afghan-English war being turned to account in more quarters than one by her statesmen.

Reader, let us thank God that being Israel we are saved from all these troubles and afflictions now coming on the "earth." We have had in India to face a short, sharp, and decisive struggle for the great Gates of Afghanistan, because we see that, for the most part there, when God has desired to place a portion of the heathen heritage in our hands, He has made us seize it by violence, thus breaking the heathen kings and potentates into pieces like a potter's vessel (Psa. ii. 9); and it may be His will that we should teach Mahommedan Afghanistan also a lesson that they must "kiss the Son lest He be angry, and they perish from the way." But the Powers of the European "earth" stand on a different footing. Their battle-axe and destined destroyer we believe to be just now not Israel, but the Russian Empire, and with that quarrel and these wars God tells us not to meddle (Isa. xxvi. 20, 21). For us He has, in all these commotions and this great earthquake, ordained European peace (verse 12). While for the Powers of the Roman earth it will, we believe, in the forthcoming fiery deluge, be "two (Powers) against three, and three (Powers) against two," the foes of the Gentile nations being those of their own households (Matt. x. 36; Luke xii. 52, 53), for us (Israel) we see reason to conclude there will be "peace, rest, and quietness, and none to make us troubled or afraid" (Jer. xxx. 10; Luke xxi. 9, 28). This unutterable mercy and blessing we must, however, recollect comes to us not for our deservings, not for our excellence as a nation, but simply and solely because of the blood-bought love, mercy, and compassion of our covenant God in Christ Jesus, our Redeemer, who died that He might restore us to the land and to the favour of His Father, giving us the promised new covenant and outpouring of His Spirit, that He might make us "the righteous nation," "a praise, and an honour, and a name of joy" before all the nations of the earth" (Isa. xxvi. 2, lx. 21; Jer. xxxiii. 9).

THE CENSUS OF 1881.

By A. WATCHER.

No point yet discovered in Pyramid coincidences is more suggestive of new and practical ideas than the one just announced by Mr. C. Horner, in the BANNER, Nov. 13th. If a revision of the measurements of the grand gallery, and a fresh calculation thereon, should bring down the cubical capacity to the figures given by his calculation, it will be strangely near to the probable census of 1881. This leads us to several useful considerations.

1. Many who would not be induced to believe in the inspiration of the ancient architect, from his knowledge of the size of the earth, or the distance of the sun, or the time it takes one to go round the other, and would agree that the wisdom of the Egyptians was equal to all this, will be struck with astonishment if it can be proved that a whole inch of that vast building was designed, 4,000 years ago, to represent his own individual person.

2. It proves beyond dispute that the grand gallery is Christian Anglo-Israel alone, and that Gentile and anti-Christian Powers can only appear there as the enemies of Christ and His people. This will be more fatal than anything else to any attempt at fitting what is called "The Historical Theory," in the interpretation of the Apocalypse, into the Pyramid. I heartily wish some one would try to do this, for I am convinced that one main object of the Pyramid was to unlock that book, and to be fitted and filled by its visions. I have failed to make the historical theory fit it, but have found Bishop Wordsworth's scheme perfectly consistent with it up to this time, though he has not ventured to grapple with the future, which the Pyramid alone can declare.

3. It works well with the theory which I have tried to set forth in "Modern Hieroglyphics of the Apocalypse and Great Pyramid," that the seven-fold roof of the gallery represents the true Church of Christ in Israel, the peaceable multitude of Esdras, the woman in the wilderness of St. John. But, as I presume, the cubical capacity includes the space between the ramps (?), which I had given to the "earth earthy," supposing it to include the world, I must somewhat modify this idea.

4. It gives a distinct answer to the much-vexed question of "Who form the visible Church?" Clearly the capacity of the Church of Christ must be equal to that of Great Britain, of the field in which the Lord has sown His wheat, and in which the enemy has sown tares also. Not only all who appear to be, but all who ought to be, members of the Established Church of Anglo-Israel. Our Lord said the wheat and tares were to grow together till the harvest. They have grown together all up the gallery. How admirably the section of its upper end from the top of the step symbolises the same idea as the section of a field of tares and wheat in May and June. From 1820 the roof and floor cease to run parallel. So the wheat runs up into ear, and gradually leaves the tares as it ripens its grain. The tares cease to run upwards, get into a tangled mass, and throw out purple blossoms like plague spots of sin. As they ripen, they fall and grovel on the earth. The time is at hand, the wheat is almost ready to be garnered in the escape passage, and the tares to be burned in the low one beneath.

This idea of the Church will be a shock to many, as it was to me. But I think it is our Lord's own idea, shown in this parable. And can any of us show a better definition? High Church people say, "Only members of the Catholic Church." Broad Church people say, "Only members of the Established Church." Low Church and Dissenters say, "Only converted Christian people." Calvinists say, "Only the elect, of whom I am one." But which of all these will dare to say that they can produce a Church, or even a congregation, in which no tares can be found? Then why not mix them all together in the cubical capacity of the Anglo-Israel gallery, and leave the angelic reapers to sever the wheat from the tares?

Digitized by Google

My own belief is, that the angel with the "seal of the living God" is told out for that express purpose.

5. Comes the important question—"Who are to be burned or tormented in the low passage?" Clearly, if the grand gallery is all Anglo-Israel, the low passage must be Anglo-Israel also.

The only possible light that we have as to the future condition of those who escape in 1881-2 is thrown on it by the promises of a future restoration of Israel and Judah to Jerusalem. If this is to be, it seems probable that it is represented by the exaltation of a few at the end of the gallery that they will have the privilege of preparing the Holy Land for the heaven upon earth, so well described by L. P. in the BANNER, Dec. 8th. They will draw all true Christians, of all nations, into their fold, and occupy the whole Promised Land, already under the protection of the lion of Judah (Gen. xv. 18; Numb. xxxiv. 2—16). But the floor-line must carry Anglo-Israel still—the scum, the leavings, but Israel all the same, for they will have been numbered as such. How could it be otherwise? Three years hence there must be millions of people in these realms who could not be admitted to a Holy Land, or they would make a hell of heaven. If they are to be tormented by the four angels (Rev. vii. 1—3), still bound in the river Euphrates, until the carcase is buried, and the elect sealed for their exodus, it must be war with the European Powers that will torment them. This makes an urgent question for all watchers—"Shall we be sealed or unsealed three years hence?

6. It gives us one more small insight into futurity. There will be no exodus, great or small, till after the census of 1881 has been taken. Every member of the woman in the wilderness must stand in the "place prepared of God'" (Rev. xii. 6, 14) for her when her "one thousand two hundred and threescore days" comes to its end, that he may be numbered amongst the "remnant of her seed."

BY THE EDITOR.—We do not, of course, adopt our correspondent's conclusions by publishing them.

THE DATE OF THE DELUGE AS RECORDED IN THE GREAT PYRAMID.

BY THE REV. A. J. J. CACHEMAILLE.

IT is very important that we should secure accurate dates, when possible, for our starting and pivot points; and as the date of the deluge is one which is often referred to, I venture to suggest the following as probably the most accurate that can well be reached.

The Great Pyramid has a definite purpose to fulfil, and, in carrying it out, accuracy seems to have been very wonderfully secured in every part. It seems reasonable, therefore, to expect that some definite and clearly given epoch would be taken as the starting point from which to record the history of this "generation" of the human race. That epoch could not well be other than that when man once more stepped out from the ark on to the earth just newly come from the baptismal waters of the flood. Accordingly the outer edge of the entrance passage of the Great Pyramid has been taken to record the date of the deluge, and, following the measurement of the floor-line backwards from the North wall of the grand gallery, we obtain 2528, or perhaps more accurately 2527, as the required date. This date, however, does not seem to accord with any given date of that event except one given by W. Osburn in his "Monumental History of Egypt," and that only as nearly as 2527 approaches 2500. I venture to suggest the following as being more probably the true date, as intended to be recorded in the Great Pyramid.

It will be seen by reference to vol. ii., p. 36, plate 3, of C. Piazzi Smyth's "Life and Work at the Great Pyramid," that the masonry at the North end of the entrance passage all consists of a double course, whereas the rest of the passage is a single course. Nothing in the Great Pyramid is done without design; this, therefore, must have a purpose. That purpose will have a reasonable explanation if we consider that the double course of masonry represents the continuous floor line doubled back, because it would otherwise be too long to be contained within the required size of the Pyramid for all other purposes. But when the length which is folded back is opened out, we obtain the full length of years reaching up to the date when man began a fresh history upon the world.

It will be seen that on p. 493 of vol. iii. of C. P. Smyth's "Life and Work at the Great Pyramid," the Astronomer-Royal for Scotland has shown that the Pyramid's indicated date of the deluge, by astronomy and masonry, was, roughly, in round numbers, B.C. 2800. And on page 489 of the same book, he shows that the Scriptural dates which we have now in the world, vary between B.C. 3246 and 2327, and give, on the mean of their discordance being allowed for, B.C. 2741. If now we take the method suggested by the doubled course of masonry and add to the date 2527 the number of inches contained in the portion which is folded back—viz., 216 inches (see "Life and Work," vol. ii., pp. 21—26), we obtain as the date recorded by the Pyramid, B.C. 2743, a date which is very near the mean quoted above and within sight of the astronomically-recorded date B.C. 2800, and we are thus furnished with a good, solid, accurate date from which to calculate subsequent events.

Oldham, Dec. 5, 1878.

LORD CARNARVON ON THE GREAT EARTHQUAKE-WOE IMPENDING, AND ITS TERRORS.

LORD CARNARNON delivered his inaugural address on November 5, 1878, in connection with the Edinburgh Philosophical Institution, and took for his subject, "Imperialism." We quote what he said on the subject of "the great tempest which is to come," and his own "apprehensions" connected therewith, from the Chorley Standard of November 8. Our readers will be able to draw their own conclusions without aid from us. His Lordship said,—

You cannot divorce our system of politics from your system of morals (cheers). There are no two sides to that shield, no two sides to be observed. I have seen it of late more or less denied. I was reading a few days since in a periodical, which enjoys deservedly a great circulation and reputation—I read to my amusement that, speaking of a man's character, it was said that he could not be a statesman because he gave obedience to the laws of morality. I abhor, and repudiate, and detest such a doctrine as that (cheers). I believe there is no safety for a nation the moment it departs from those principles of right and wrong which, in our case, have carried us through storms, trials, and triumphs (cheers). I have but one more word to say, and then I shall have exhausted my subject, and that is as to the foreign Imperialism. Thank God we have nothing to get there. Foreign Imperialism means great standing armies. At this moment we have the picture before our eyes of the nations of Europe divided into hostile camps. The three hundred and fifty thousand men, who in the earlier time of the Roman Empire were sufficient to guarantee the peace of the world, are now converted into something like six millions of armed men. It is the day of great Empires, casting their colossal shadow over the smaller States, and, through the gloom of that shadow, those small States look up, and as they may well do, tremble. It is the day of restless intrigue and of reckless expenditure (loud cheers). It is the day of violence, and, depend upon it, as certain as we are assembled in this room, it is a day which will be followed by certain re-action (cheers). So sometimes we have heard the hollow moan of the wind, or seen the sullen break of the wave upon the shore, all presaging the great tempest which is to come; and so when I look round upon the horizon of Europe and see how heavily these thunder clouds are piled up, I cannot resist the feeling of deep apprehension for the future, and my earnest hope that this country, at least, will not be tempted by anything short of the most paramount duty from joining in this madness of waste of money and human blood (cheers).

Digitized by Google

TWO PROPHECIES.

I.—THE SHEPHERDS.

FROM the Christian, of Nov. 14th, 1878, we copy the following paragraph:—

A SECESSION TO THE PAPACY.

It is not often, says the Sunday Magazine, that we have to notice a more painful event in connection with missionary work, than one which has recently occurred in Western India, and which has been the subject of comment in several of the Indian newspapers. Under the influence of the sacerdotal teaching, which unfortunately prevails in a large and important section of the Anglican Church, an entire congregation of Hindoos has passed over to the Papal fold. The number is said to be not much under 500 persons. The congregation was that of the Rev. Mr. Barker, whose conduct was so extraordinary that he was removed. His flock being left without a shepherd, advanced a single step, and entered the Romish field. The Roman Catholic bishop was eagerly waiting for them, and beckoning to them to advance. Mr. Barker then re-appeared. He asked the Romish bishop the reason of the conversion of the people, and ended by declaring his satisfaction that they had not fallen into the hands of the Americans, but had joined the Roman branch of the Church Catholic.*

After reading the above, with the burning indignation which we think such a transaction is calculated to excite, we were the more ready to peruse, with thankful hearts, the record of work performed by the Evangelisation Society in this land during the past few years, together with the address which was given to its workers to aid and guide them in the carrying on of their Christian labours—labours, let us note, undertaken by laymen for the love of Christ, and in pity for dark minds and dead souls, in order to carry life, and light, and joy to those who had been intrusted to the care and teaching of ordained shepherds. How is it that such laymen are needed? Are the pastures of Israel, which are white with their flocks, unshepherded? Are there none appointed to look after the hungry, the wandering, and the careless? By no means is it so. We confess we frequently feel wrathfully inclined, while we admire and sympathise with the generous givers, when we read lists of donors to many societies whose object is to supplement the work the shepherds of Israel are appointed to do—nay, to do even more: to suggest, to start, to carry out, from beginning to end, Christian efforts, that would, we see reason to believe, never even have been commenced had it been left to ministers, Established or otherwise, to originate them, and which, when successful, may or may not obtain their tardy patronage, or be feebly copied.

Where would have been the London City Mission, opposed in its beginning by a very influential bishop, had laymen not set the wheel in motion, till a work has been done which must have often caused joy in heaven, by bringing many sinners to repentance from out the masses of our great cities' heathenism?

Why is there a necessity for an Army Scripture Readers' Society, as the country pays for chaplains and Church-appointed teachers for our soldiers? Because, forsooth, laymen must be found to do the work left undone by Israel's army shepherds.

Who has done and, we believe, is doing, a noble work of evangelisation in one of our camps? A Christian woman, who wins officers to fight for Christ, and the soldier, in his leisure hours, to exchange his weapon of war for his Bible, and to go forth to seek the ignorant and the vicious, to try and win them to better things.

Who is it that, sick and suffering, spares no effort to rescue soldiers, both regular and volunteer, from the degradations and miseries of sin, to provide bodily comforts for them, as well as mental and spiritual advantages, and a just provision for their families? A shepherd? No, another woman.

When hardy sons of toil covered our land with a network of railways, working bravely and skilfully, though often brutalised by ignorance and debasing habits of drink, and recklessly, in their quarrels, risking their own and their companions' lives, with "no man caring for their souls"—who sought them out, showed the world they had often as large warm hearts as they had brawny arms and big fists, and could be led to love the Lord Jesus, and to believe He died for them? Not a mitred lordship, nor a priest-like curate, but an earnest Christian woman.

Again, we hear of the daughter of a gentleman of science, whose life is spent in promoting the well-being of our noble sailors, till her name shall surely be written in bright characters in the modern annals of our navy. It was no shepherd, but a very noble nobleman, who rescued children from the slavery of brickfields and factories, who lifted women out of mines, where their work was a degradation, and taking by the hand the neglected, starving street Arab, led him to be warmed, sheltered, fed, and taught in schools.

Laymen, not clergy or ministers, have fought for years the battle of the despised cause of temperance, while the names of any of the latter, till lately, have been absent or vastly few in number, as giving any heed to the question; while drunkenness, we fully believe, has had many a forward push given it by the shepherd's pleadings, for the plausible but dangerous, nay, treacherous, claims of the "moderate drinking" school.

We wonder whether these watchmen—"shepherds who cannot understand" (Isa. lvi. 11), whose business it is to stand and cry out words of warning to their flocks against pitfalls, and snares, and rocks ahead—ever study the 12th verse of this same chapter, and if the cap seems to suit them, whether they consider it befits the head of such as can wear it.

We think, in our lay simplicity, that it would be seemly in the shepherds of Christ's flock not only to teach obedience to their country's laws, but also to set the example of doing so. But, lo! we perceive or hear rumours of clerical rebellion on many sides, of contempt for the advice or orders of ecclesiastical superiors, of defiance of established law, of a haughty sitting in judgment on those appointed to judge them, and of resolutions to follow their own course.

There has been a distinct undertaking, as unto God, at the time of ordination, to uphold the teaching and reformed principles of their Church, with too often a subsequent treacherous, dishonest, dishonourable hanging on to an Establishment whose teaching they contemn, and whose principles they ignore, undermine, or defy, till a chief shepherd with despairing suggestiveness, announces an intention of having recourse to a species of ecclesiastical "sending to Coventry" to endeavour to reduce the rebellious to a state of submissiveness.

When we hear—as we have heard—of a social meeting at the house of a minor Church dignitary of the Broad School, of some of his fellow-labourers, and that, after the retirement of the usually supposed indiscreet element of the gathering—we mean the female—the gentlemen expressed a belief that they were safe, and might speak openly, and then gave vent to opinions, to which one present listened, we believe, with little less surprise than dismay. When, we say, we hear this, and know that in all probability the gathering consisted of men of intellect and position—likely to swing them to the higher branches of our Church—we do not wonder, as we read Ezek. xxxiv. 10, that "Thus said the Lord God: Behold, I am against the shepherds, and I will require My flock at their hand, and cause them to cease from feeding the flock; neither shall the shepherds feed themselves any more; for I will deliver My flock from their mouth, that they may not be meat for them.

We know that many faithful ministers, Established and otherwise, have fought battles to the very death with the sin and evils rampant among their flocks. They have wrestled, nay, agonised, in their closets in prayer to God for their people, and they have laboured and struggled in sickness and in poverty,

* A statement has since appeared in the Christian to the effect that the above account was exaggerated, and that "only a small proportion of the five hundred" joined the Romish Church. The conduct of the shepherd remains uncontradicted.

Digitized by Google

with hearts wrung with horror for sin, grief at suffering they could not alleviate, and disappointment at the small result of all their efforts. How joyfully, doubtless, many will sit lowly at their feet in the kingdom of heaven, who on this present earth may have for long thought lightly of their labours, and helped to increase their burdens by their opposition, till their own hearts have been changed—possibly when the sower has been no longer living to see the harvest of good in these awakened souls! But we do not write of these—we are desirous of drawing attention to Ezek. xxxiv., and we see there that our King and Lord does not speak of the exceptions, but addresses the shepherds en masse, and declares them wanting.

We ask ourselves if we may believe the shepherds are remarkable for their disinterestedness, or their indifference to the high positions, or the possessions which most men covet; but we cannot reply in the affirmative. We do not deny that there are doubtless many beautiful, humble, and little known exceptions, as there may be also many magnificent ones, but we speak of the main body of shepherds, Established and Nonconformist, not of the grand particular stars which shed a clear light far and wide, or of those whose rays as bright, though far less spreading, can cover a smaller space, yet whose glorious reward will not fail to reach them and be theirs for ever. But we know, or think we have reason to know, that the so-called prizes of the Church are eagerly sought for by needy, or shall we say, by greedy shepherds, that a clerical or an ecclesiastical "job"—a word of varying significance—is not an unknown thing in quarters where such may be attended by certain earthly advantages.

We have heard of the clinking of money where beneficial changes of incumbency were contemplated—beneficial, we mean, to the incumbents or their families, or supposed to be so, not, perhaps, for the flocks to be left or to be adopted! We notice strong, apparently mutual, ties of affection between shepherds and their flocks broken very lightly on the part of the former, though the latter may be left bleating long and painfully after their late pastor, and be quite powerless to influence the election of his successor, or to prevent themselves being handed over to the keeping of one whose teaching they shrink from. We know, on the other hand, when an unworthy or an incompetent pastor is a burden and weight on his people, they cannot rid themselves of him, however lightly he may cast them off, but must be folded in by him, or left to wander about seeking other pastures, or to sink into heathenish darkness and indifference. These are plain truths, we are aware. But we do not think truths are to be concealed because they are ugly to look at.

If anybody takes the trouble to read thus far, possibly they may inquire, Whither does all this tend? What has all this to do with Israel's Identification? This much: we believe that as our shepherds, the shepherds of Israel, have been self-seeking, feeding themselves (Ezek. xxxiv. 1, 2—8), heedless and careless of what has become of God's lost sheep of the House of Israel, He has given it to the laity to discover them and to some to proclaim the joyful tidings, and He is punishing the faithless watchmen by closing their eyes, so that they cannot see the truth which our writers put before them; nay, more, their hearts seem hardened, so that they do not care for the matter, nor wish to see. In vain the Bible is opened out before them, and fingers point to passage after passage. What is all this to us? they cry. They laugh, they turn away. Show us where we are mistaken, we say. We have no time, they reply. Hear us then, we exclaim. Nay, nay, and they clap their hands over their ears. We have our Bibles (are they always studied?). We have our learned professors, our canons, we cannot heed you; and they hurry on impatiently, content to be blind. But what does God say? "I will cause them to cease from feeding the flock" (Ezek. xxxiv. 10). Aye! there it is: they shall cease to be shepherds, and their place and their work shall be taken by the Lord Himself. Verse 12: "As a shepherd seeketh out his flock in the day that he is among his sheep that are scattered, so will I seek out My sheep;" and again (ver. 15): "I will feed My flock, and I will cause them to lie down, saith the Lord God."

None on earth can tell how this shall be; but, surely in this chapter we read the sentence they shall pass away. As shepherds, their place shall know them no more. Prelates and deans, canons (full and minor), ministers who can exercise Christian despotism on crowds that hang admiringly on their words of eloquence, and sway their minds hither and thither, shall melt away as a power in God's pasture, and the sheep shall be folded, fed, and pastured by the Great Shepherd Himself!

L. P.

(A Member of the Church of England.)

November 23rd, 1878.

NOTE.—After the above was written, we met with the following remark in the Christian (Nov. 21)—a paper which opposes our Anglo-Israel views: "This seems to be the day when God is doing most of His beneficent works through the instrumentality of holy women. He gives us mothers in Israel, like Deborah, and continually He sells into the hands of a woman the Sisera who oppresses us as with chariots of iron. The men of Israel, at least, must not abide among the sheepfolds like Reuben, like Dan in his ships, and like Asher in his creeks, but, like Zebulun and Naphtali, must jeopard their lives unto the death in the high places of the field, lest the curse of Meroz come upon them."

THE IDENTITY AT MADRAS.

THE Editor of the Indian Jurist (a legal paper published at Madras) being now in England, has, we are glad to know, accepted our Identity as a fact, and is desirous (as all Israelites should be) to "publish" this good news (Jer. xxxi. 7). He has accordingly, not only volunteered to advertise the BANNER OF ISRAEL in his journal, at nominal rates of charge, but has invited us also to introduce the subject in the body of his journal in such wise that the raison d'etre of our communication, in a publication of the kind, may be self-evident to his legal readers in the East. We have acquitted ourselves of the task in a manner regarding which our readers must be pleased to judge, for they will find it republished below. We are glad to be informed also by the editor that with his issue, to appear in Madras on the 15th December, 1878, he proposes to publish a supplement on "The Afghan Question," the first paper in which will be entitled, "The Religious Aspect, as Viewed by the Editor of the BANNER OF ISRAEL;" the same being a reprint of our leader in the BANNER of the 30th October, 1878, No. 96, on "The Khyber Pass — The Gate of Afghanistan, and Present Complications." We are thankful to notice this extension of influence in an unexpected quarter, and are rejoiced to know and to announce the fact to our opponents, that the whole has arisen from our poor efforts to "publish" the truths of our Identity in Ryde (Isle of Wight), in August last, where the editor of the Indian Jurist happened then to be. A cultivated mind, accustomed during many years of Indian life to judicial investigations, prepared also by previous submission to Gospel truth to receive with reverence the teachings of God's Word, enabled the Editor of the Indian Jurist to accept at once the evidence which the story of our Identity presented to his investigation. The result, as our readers know, is that he willingly does all he can to "publish" these Bible truths; and he boldly introduces them to an audience in India, to whom he has hitherto presented merely what most of our friends would call the dry bones of judicial and juridical investigations. Now, however, he will ask them to look into the glorious proofs of our Hebrew origin, which is established by evidence documentary, oral, and real, which surely never was found in such profusion, or in such irresistible strength before, in support of any previous case whatsoever? Our letter, to appear in the Indian Jurist in December, is as follows :—

Digitized by Google

To the Editor of the "Indian Jurist."

SIR,—Permit me as an old judicial officer (a magistrate and district judge of South India for nigh twenty years), to address you and your readers on a subject of exceeding interest, which has occupied my attention since my return to my fatherland ;—I mean the question (one purely of evidence) of the Identity of the British races with the Lost Ten Tribes of the House of Israel. All questions of Identity, judicially considered, have a fascination for the mind, and, as a fact, engross public attention. The late trial of "The Claimant," who personated the deceased Roger Tichborne, was a case in point. Men's minds, even now, are not satisfied in many quarters that justice was done in that case, or that the right man having appeared, he was not unjustly punished by the British Courts of Law!

The Identity of a leading nation of Europe with one long since unknown to history—lost to all secular knowledge—untraced, and apparently untraceable, for fourteen centuries of time—this is indeed a matter of serious importance, especially when it is known what vast consequences depend on the right appreciation of the evidence which is presented to us on the subject. In what does this evidence consist? It is that of ancient writings and witnesses of the most unimpeachable authenticity and excellence ; of facts patent to all men ; and such as "he who runs may read." The writings are the self-proved records of God's Word written, inspired by the Spirit of the living God ; and the men whose evidence we offer to the British nation are the prophets and apostles of the Hebrews—men who died to seal with their blood the truth of their testimony—men who witnessed to the identity of the Carpenter of Nazareth and of the crucified of Calvary with the only begotten Son of the Most High God, the Great Jehovah of the Hebrews!

The facts of the day, such as we see recorded in our secular journals and leading organs of opinion of our times, all certify that the only nation which bears all the prescribed marks of that lost, but now forthcoming race, the House of Israel of the prophecies, is the British Nation—that nation which is now "a nation and a company of nations," which is mistress of the seas, which has the "Gate of its enemies" the world-wide over ; which possesses "the power to get wealth ;" which owns the great Empire over the heathen world in India and throughout the globe ; which possesses, in fact, not one, but ALL the marks the prophets and witnesses of Jehovah declared should appertain to "Lost Israel," "found" in these our latter days.

The British Empire in India is one of the very chief of these glorious "signs" and proofs of our Identity. It was "given" to our race, to have and to hold, not for selfish purposes of aggrandisement, not to add to national wealth and power, though these results have doubtless been attained, but in order that Christ's Gospel may be offered to Israel's subjects in the far-off Empire of the Empress of India ; that judgment and equal justice may be administered by Israel's sons to the native races God has placed in their charge and keeping at "the ends of the earth ;" that the depressed and long down-trodden nationalities of British India, may, under Israel's benign rule, rise in the scale of nations, till at last, accepting Christ as their Divine Lord and Master, they may "cast their idols of silver and their idols of gold which they have made, each one for himself to worship, to the moles and to the bats" (Isa. ii. 20). This glorious rôle and function, sir, is reserved for our race as God's chosen and selected people ; and I hope I have said enough to show your readers, employed and interested in the administration of public justice in India, that the glorious subject of British Identity with God's Lost Nation, the Tribes of the House of Israel, is one which nearly concerns them as His agents and "servants" in carrying out His gracious purposes in the heathen Empire of our Queen and Empress ; and that, therefore, the matter is one which, for judicial investigation, is of the deepest interest and importance, requiring their attention and prayerful consideration as reasonable men.

I am, Sir, yours truly,
E. W. B.

("Philo-Israel," Editor of the "Banner of Israel.")
Bristol, Nov. 2nd, 1878.

ERRATUM.—At page 413, No. 102, first column, 37th line, the words, "If, up to the end of that time, they still continued in unbelief," should come in the 35th line (after A.D. 33) as the conclusion of that sentence.

JEHOVAH'S "WITNESSES" AT WORK.

WE have before us a little leaflet of the Monthly Tract Society's operations at the Paris Exhibition, 1878, giving a detail of their labours. The reader will notice it was British work—the society was a British society; it was supported by British funds, and was doing Israel's duty. It was seeking to benefit "all the families of the earth," whose representatives were congregated at the world's fair in Paris lately. Hear what its agent says:—

Much united prayer is made that the blessing of the Holy Spirit may accompany the reading of tracts now distributed from the windows of the Kiosk at the Paris Exhibition. Five hundred thousand of these messengers of the truth have already been put into circulation since May 1st, among Frenchmen, Italians, Austrians, Germans, Dutchmen, Spaniards, Portuguese, Americans, Englishmen, Poles, and other nationalities. The sole aim and object in view is to obey the Divine command: "Preach the Gospel to every creature," and truly a wonderful opening exists, such as may not occur for many years, if ever again, to proclaim the good news of "eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." It is universally held by believers that we live in times of momentous importance to the Church, and to the world, and that it behoves those who look for the glorious appearing of the Judge of all flesh to labour while it is yet day. Only such as have witnessed our tract distribution can in any measure estimate the magnitude of the work. Thousands and tens of thousands flock to receive that truth, which, with the Lord's blessing, is able to make them wise unto salvation, and, in a few short years, every recipient, with the donors at home, and those whose humble duty it is to distribute, will meet face to face, when life or death will be the just award.

Here spoke the voice of one of God's people Israel, one of the blossoming and budding ones of the Protestant witnesses, one who seeks to be a blessing to all the families of the earth, whom barely to see is to recognise as one of "the seed which the Lord hath blessed" (Isa. lxi. 9). He is doing, with others, the work which thousands of British Christians have associated themselves to do, and this duty, as he faithfully records, is looked on by foreigners "as a national indication of the interest Christians in happy Britain entertain on behalf of the spiritual welfare of those of other lands." Let our opponents take this fact to heart, and tell us why no other nation upon earth performs this world-wide function of Christian beneficence but the British and their American brethren? There can be no response except on our principles, and those are, that, being Israel, we British act as God said the Hebrews—the seed of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob—should, when He promised the latter: "In thee (that is, in Israel) and in thy seed (which is Christ) shall ALL the families of the earth be blessed" (Gen. xxviii. 14).

THE REV. C. W. HICKSON, M.A., OF BRISTOL.

ALL honour again to the rev. pastor of the parish of St. Bartholomew, Bristol! We drew attention to one of our friend's previous addresses to his parishioners in our issue, No. 82, of the 24th July, 1878 (p. 242), and now have the pleasure to republish his recent resumé of four of the principal marks God's Word puts on Israel of the Lost House, which Mr. Hickson shows are possessed by the British nation alone. We commend the whole address to the attention of the clergy and ministers of our land as an epitome of a truth now rapidly spreading, and Mr. Hickson's proceedings as an example they would do well to follow. Our reverend friend and coadjutor has, we are glad to say, given several lectures in various parts of England, and would doubtless be ready to give others also if occasion required. He has lectured before large audiences in Weymouth, in the Midland Counties, in Liverpool, also in Bristol, and always with acceptance. He is popular as a speaker both on the subject of the Identity and of the Great Pyramid, regarding which latter his knowledge as a good mathematician gives him great advantages. His address to his parishioners on his "localised" journal, Living Waters, is as follows:—

Digitized by Google

TO THE PARISHIONERS & CONGREGATION OF ST. BARTHOLOMEW'S, BRISTOL.

DEAR FRIENDS,—I now draw your attention to the inquiry, In what condition is Israel to be found at the time of his Identification?

1. They shall be found a multitudinous people (Hosea i. 10, Zech. x. 8, and Gen. xlviii. 19).

2. They shall be found also a Christian people, "sons of the living God" (Hosea i. 10. Compare Gal. iii. 26).

3. They shall be found also as a powerful nation (Zech. x. 7). And let it be observed that, however much these blessings may be developed after the restoration of Israel to their own land, it is before that restoration that these things are to begin to be realised. It is "in the place where it was said unto them, Ye are not My people" (Hosea i. 10)—that is, the place of non-recognition as God's special nation; it is in a land "out of" which they, with Judah, must "come up" in order to return to Palestine—it is in "the wilderness" (Hosea ii. 14)—that is, wherever they may be other than in Palestine itself—"there" (ver. 15)—that God will begin to reveal those tokens of His favour, and Identifications of His long unrecognised people.

4. They shall be found also as a maritime Power, "terrible from their beginning hitherto, that meteth out and treadeth down," by whom the Jews are to be brought as an "offering" or "present" to the Lord of hosts. Compare carefully Isa. xviii. 1, 2, and 7, with Zeph. iii. 10. The people to be brought are unquestionably the Jews. But the people to bring them are a branch of the same people, "terrible," &c., and expressly said to be God's dispersed people—i.e., the Lost Ten Tribes.

These four Identifications, then, are distinctly connected with Israel, and not Judah. They are to be found a multitudinous, mighty, maritime, Christian Power. And where are they? Jer. iii. 18 says, they shall come "from the land of the North." They are to be found a Northern Power. Hosea xi. 10 says, that they, "the children"—i.e., the children of Ephraim spoken of in ver. 9—"shall tremble," or anxiously hasten, like birds scared by a noise, "from the West." When the Jews' land and city are laid waste and desolated (Isa. xxiv. 1—13), then a gleaning of the same Hebrew race are found glorifying the Lord God of Israel in the Isles of the Sea (ver. 13—15). But, as these cannot be the Jews, it must be the Lost Ten Tribes that are referred to. Israel, then, must be found with each of these marks—multitudinous, mighty, maritime, Christian, a Western Power, a Northern Power, an island-inhabiting people. There is but one people combining these seven marks. They are the British nation.

Your friend and pastor,
C. W. HICKSON.

Correspondence.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—Since I became a reader of the BANNER, I have many times felt inclined to send you reports of little things bearing upon the Identity Question, but have forborne doing so, thinking you must be flooded with such. I have now just returned from a journey in the North of England, where I found people far more alive to this great subject than they are in the Midlands. Most of them had heard of it, some were believers in the truth of the matter, and nearly all with whom I had an opportunity of speaking on the subject showed the keenest interest in it. However, I should not have troubled you with my experiences amongst the Cumbrians had I not chanced to hear a most remarkable sermon preached at Crossthwaite Church, Keswick, on Sunday morning, Sept. 22nd, by Dr. McDougall, Canon of Winchester, and late Bishop of Labuan. The text was from Jer. xvi. 19—21, and the sermon was preached on behalf of foreign missions.

I cannot pretend to furnish you with a detailed report, but I made careful notes, and will do my best to give you the heads of the address.

The doctor began by assuring us that no one with his experience amongst the heathen for the last thirty years could avoid being struck by the remarkable changes now taking place amongst them, and confidently predicted a great accession to the Church from their ranks in the near future.

Dilating next on the wonderful position of England, and her power over the "dark places of the earth," he asserted that the "heritages of the heathen" are completely "hemmed in" by her, and that she always engages the confidence and respect of the native races far more than any other Power, while she supplants other civilised nations in their influence over them—notably the Spaniards and Portuguese. Why should this be, except that God had selected us as His Gospel messengers? And, if this be so, unless we accept and duly perform our mission, we fail to carry out our part of God's covenant with us, and therefore cannot expect a continuation of national and individual prosperity.

Regarding the present numerical position of Christ's Church relatively to the heathen world, 30 per cent. would represent the Brahmins, Buddhists 15, Jews and other religions 25, leaving only 30 for all denominations of Christians. This, he said, had been called a failure of Gospel teaching, but we must remember that it was not until the beginning of the last century that the English Church, having at length settled down after the struggles of the Reformation, began, by means of her two great associations, to spread abroad her great principles.

There was no need to despair at the small results attained up to this time. Looking Eastward to India and China, we must remember how few were the workers in the missionary cause, that great things were already accomplished in proportion to the efforts made. Lately, in India, no fewer than 20,000 natives had come forward in a body for baptism, apparently actuated by the famine relief and other causes. In short, the time had come for a great ingathering of the Gentiles, who are now pressing into the fold.

Christ was to be "a light to lighten the Gentiles, and to be the glory of"—what?—"Thy people Israel," that people who are now represented by ourselves. We are now God's covenanted people, His people Israel, so long as we faithfully propagate the Gospel message—and no longer.

Some very strange notions had lately been indulged in about our being the Lost Tribes of Israel. He had heard that such an extraordinary idea had even penetrated to that neighbourhood; but, while we felt great interest in and pity for the Jews (!) as the ancient race who were once the chosen people highly favoured by God, we must remember that they forfeited their privileges by sin, and were now scattered and cast out.

In conclusion, he repeated once more that we, the Church, are now God's Israel, and, in order to retain our position, must stretch out our hands to help those who are sitting in darkness and the shadow of death."

It was, I can assure you, very trying to be obliged to sit and hear the above from one who ought to know better. The manner in which the allusion was made partook very strongly of the contemptuous, but this I would have forgiven if the reverend doctor had only condescended to explain and argue the matter a little. As it was, the ignorance displayed in such a high quarter was a matter of astonishment even to such an obscure and unlettered individual as

Your grateful reader,
A. T. MATTHEWS.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—In connection with your remarks on page 349 of the BANNER, in reference to the Kyber Pass, permit me to call your attention to the sketch-map published in the Times of the 7th inst. You will observe that our troops had to occupy and pass through the Durwaza Pass before getting to the Peiwar Pass. Now, the word "Durwaza" means door or "Gate," and is the word in common use in India to express door or "Gate."

Yours faifthfully, E. J. L.

St. Helier's, Jersey, 13th Dec., 1878.

[BY THE EDITOR.—We beg our readers carefully to note the above. We were aware of the Durwaza Pass being near the Peiwar, but did not know it was in General Roberts's route. It is remarkable that our very word occurs in the path to Israel's destiny!]

MISS LAWRENCE, Spencer-hill, will be glad to receive the name of any one believing in the Identity, with a view, ultimately, of forming an association. [By the Editor.—We beg to call attention to this notice by a lady residing at Wimbledon, and recommend the plan to others, who, feeling they ought to publish the good news of our Identity, know not if there are persons in their neighbourhood like-minded. Miss Lawrence is acting judiciously in distributing printed notices in her vicinity to the above effect, and we wish her every success in forming an association for Wimbledon.]

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements
(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O O payable at Ludgate-circus.

BOOKS, ETC.

HANDSOME CHRISTMAS PRESENT or NEW YEAR'S GIFT.

Now ready price 7s., post free 6d. extra.

THE SECOND VOLUME OF THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

This volume contains a large number of articles on our Identity with Lost Israel, by the best and most learned writers on the subject. Also many interesting papers on the Great Pyramid by Professor Piazzi Smyth, F.R.S.E., Astronomer-Royal for Scotland, Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A., Major H. A. Tracey, R.A., Charles Horner, Esq., and others. London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

NEW WORK BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Will be published shortly.

AN ELEMENTARY DIGEST or SKETCH OF THE CHIEF FACTS and TEACHINGS of the GREAT PYRAMID of EGYPT; adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific. By PHILO-ISRAEL; together with Original Papers by the following leading Pyramidists, republished mostly from the BANNER OF ISRAEL (by kind permission of the proprietor)—viz., Professor Piazzi Smyth, the Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A., Charles Horner, Esq., and Major H. A. Tracey, R.A. Being a pamphlet by five authors (a Pyramid number).

Opinion of Mr. Charles Horner, regarding the above work, after perusal of the same:—"I think your design of the Pyramid pamphlet excellent. I know well that it is a book urgently needed, since, under God's blessing, it will, I feel convinced, convert many to Christ. Your part (Philo-Israel's) I deem unexceptionable. It is both terse and understandable to the many, which is the great object you have had in view. I should like to see thousands circulated amongst our intelligent artisans, and hope God will raise some to do this."—C. HORNER, Dec. 12, 1878.

Now ready, price 6d., post free 7d

THE ANSWER to the EASTERN QUESTION as shewn in the IDENTITY of the BRITISH with ISRAEL. By the Author of the "New Old Story."

"The author has well managed her topic; her style of writing is clear and vigorous, and well calculated to do good service to the cause."—PIAZZI SMYTH.

London: S. W. Partridge & Co., 9, Paternoster-row.

HEALTH, DIET, AND DEAFNESS.
NOISES IN THE EARS.
Books on these Subjects sent free.

SEND for the REV. E. J. SILVERTON'S BOOKS on DEAFNESS, showing how the disease may be at once relieved and ultimately cured. Thousands are hearing the Gospel to-day who had been shut out from the Good News for years, and would still have been deaf to all around them but for the help they obtained from Mr. Silverton. Mr. S. not only preaches the Gospel to a very large congregation, but has literally given hearing to a vast number. The Remedies are indeed great blessings, as many can bear testimony. The Book on Deafness gives several interesting accounts of persons now using the Trumpet, and others who have been cured of their deafness altogether. When a remedy is so successful, ought not every deaf person to try it, if it be in his or her power? The remedy is safe even for a child. The books also show how important it is that deaf people should be in a good state of health. Deafness is generally worse when the party is out of health.

Mr. Silverton, as a minister, has had great experience among the sick, and for twenty years has in many ways helped to restore health. His Medical Energizer and Cough Curer, with the Nutrient Food of Food, has been greatly blessed. They are fine Medicines. A month under our treatment, either for ear disease or general weakness, often works wonders for the patient. These things are truly good, or we could not offer them to the public. The Rev. E. J. Silverton is the Pastor of the Baptist Church meeting in Exeter Hall, Nottingham. One of the books, which will be sent free, bears an engraving of the new and beautiful building, and one of Mr. Silverton's printed Sermons is enclosed. Any person not in health, or any person deaf, should send to the Rev. E. J. SILVERTON, Albert house, Park-street, Nottingham.

SERMONS WHICH HAVE REACHED THE MASSES, by REV. E. J. SILVERTON. Over 400 Pages Crown 8vo. Price 6s. Order of any Bookseller, or ALABASTER & PASSMORE, 4, Paternoster-buildings, London. The Sermons are quaint and humorous, containing many droll sayings and unusual illustrations. Must read them!! No one slept while they were delivered!! An Engraving of the Preacher's Place of Worship, Exeter Hall, Nottingham, will be found within. These Sermons are unlike all others. Sent post free from the Author.

MISCELLANEOUS.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

DOUBLE NUMBERS DURING 1879.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT.

Owing to the increasing interest taken in the Identity movement, it is found necessary to occasionally enlarge our space to make room for the important papers constantly reaching the Editor. It has, therefore, been determined to issue Twelve Double Numbers during 1879, for which Twopence will be charged. The first of these series of Double Numbers will be issued the first week in January, and one on each succeeding first week in the month during the year.

	£	s.	d.
Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free	0	7	6
Two copies (including Double Numbers) ...	0	12	4
Three " " " " ...	0	18	8
Four " " " " ...	1	6	2
Six " " " " ...	1	17	4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-Grand, London, to W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

N.B.—Send an extra stamp if an acknowledgment is required.

CARD OF MEMBERSHIP.

THE SHEFFIELD ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION are in a position to supply their Card to all associations requiring the same. Prices with Key—in quantities, 4d. each; single cards, 7½d., post free.

These Cards are copyright; and will be supplied with the description or title of any association.

The design of the card is pronounced by Mr. Hine to be "almost perfect."

By PHILO-ISRAEL —"A model of excellence."—See BANNER OF ISRAEL, Nov. 27, 1878, p. 398.

Apply to Geo. W. Staniland, Castle-street, Sheffield.

LECTURE.

REV. H. MARRIOTT, M.A., has prepared a LECTURE on ROMANS XI., illustrated by diagrams, and establishing, in a convincing manner, the Identity of the English with the House of Ephraim—that is, Israel.

For terms, apply to Amberley Rectory, Stroud.

THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL.

ALL who are interested in this great Identity Question are respectfully solicited to send CONTRIBUTIONS to the undersigned, to defray the expenses of providing Halls for a Course of LECTURES in the metropolis, by Mr. E. HINE, in order to bring this most important subject before the notice of the great bulk of the people.

Mr. T. LOVELAND, Shoreham, Sevenoaks, Kent.
Mr. A. J. STEPHENSON, 123, Newgate-street, London.

BOOKS.

MODERN HIEROGLYPHICS OF THE APOCALYPSE AND GREAT PYRAMID, illustrated by ten plates, with explanations, by A WATCHER. To which is prefixed an introduction, showing how recent events in the Eastern Question and the Church have worked towards a fulfilment of the theory suggested in the book.—October, 1878.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Price 6d.; or with illustrative map, 8d.

BRITAIN (OR ISRAEL) THE FIFTH AND LAST, AND THE UNCONQUERABLE EMPIRE. By JOHN GILDER SHAW.

Price 3d.; post free, 3½d.

CHRONOLOGICAL CHART OF BRITISH VICTORIES OVER THE CONTINENTAL POWERS, ranging from the battle of Cressy (1346), to our last victory, the taking of Sebastopol, Sept. 8, 1855. Arranged by J. G. SHAW, of Leeds.

"We trust Mr. Shaw's labour in preparing this paper may be appreciated by the public and be largely sold."—Banner of Israel.

Price 1d.; post free, 1½d.

GOD'S LOVE FOR ISRAEL, A GUARANTEE THAT HE WILL FULFIL HIS PROMISES TO ISRAEL.

Shortly will be published, price 6d.

RESULTS OF ISRAEL'S OBEDIENCE. A review of the successive steps which have led to the present condition of Britain (or Israel), the Fifth and Last Empire.

London: Published by Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; and may be had of the Author, 20 Park-row, Leeds, and of all booksellers.

Price 15s. A few copies coloured by the Author £1 1s.

10th Thousand. Price 6d., post free 7d.

CUI BONO? or, The Political, Social, and Religious Uses of the British being Identical with Israel. A Lecture by Edward Hine

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

BOOKS, ETC.

THE ANGLO-ISRAEL POST BAG.

BY THE RIGHT REV. BISHOP TITCOMB.

WITH AN APPENDIX, embodying the Gates of Israel, as enumerated by Philo-Israel in the "Inquiry."

IN order to meet the repeatedly expressed wish of a large number of friends interested in the Identity Question, to have a cheap edition of the "Anglo-Israel Post Bag," by Bishop Titcomb, the Publisher has pleasure in announcing that he is now issuing an edition in paper covers at the low price of One Shilling and Sixpence per copy; post free 1s. 8d. It is hoped this arrangement will meet the wishes of those persons who have signified their intention of gratuitously circulating the Bishop's work. Identity friends wishing for quantities of the work should communicate direct with the Publisher, who will allow a discount according to the number taken.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

THE EASTERN QUESTION.

Now ready, price One penny, post free 1½d. One dozen copies, post free 1s. 100 copies 6s., post free 7s.

THE IDENTITY OF THE BRITISH NATION WITH THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. THE CLUE TO THE EASTERN QUESTION. By C. W. E.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

Second edition, sixth thousand.

Fancy paper covers, 6d.; cloth, gilt lettered, flush, 1s.

THE HISTORY OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL: How They Were Lost, and How They Were Found. Told for the children. By PHILO-ISRAEL. Adapted for use by parents, Sunday School and other teachers, with questions on the chapters added.

"The History of the House of Israel—told for the children—is a very valuable addition to our children's libraries. It gives a clear account of all the chief points of interest, in language suited to the comprehension of children, and ought to be in the hands of every mother and teacher who believes in our Identity with Israel. It supplies a want I have long felt as the mother of a large family."

For favourable notices of this work by Professor Piazzi Smyth, John T. Gott, Esq., and others, see handbills. W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

ARE THE ENGLISH PEOPLE THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL? By PHILO-ISRAEL Price 1d.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

OUR IDENTITY WITH THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. By PHILO-ISRAEL. Price 4d. Third Thousand (reprinted from the Clifton Chronicle).

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

A RESUME OF THE SCRIPTURAL ARGUMENT, Proving the Identity of the British Race with the Lost Ten Tribes. By PHILO-ISRAEL. Price One Penny.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

BRISTOL LEAFLETS ON THE IDENTIFICATION. 1 to 6; 1s. per 100.

SOME of PHILO-ISRAEL'S papers, as they have appeared in THE BANNER, will be separately published from time to time in the form of Letters, for distribution.

No. 1. "The Identity of the British with Lost Israel."
No. 2. "The Glory of God."

Others will follow. Price One and Sixpence per 100; less quantities in proportion; postage extra.

Apply to R. Banks, 5 Racquet-court, Fleet-street. Also all Booksellers and Publishers.

Now ready.—Price 2s. 6d., cloth, gilt edges. Paper covers 1s. 6d. Post free for 33 or 20 stamps.

THE PILLAR OF WITNESS. A Scriptural View of the GREAT PYRAMID. By the late Commander R. W. TRACEY, R.N.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; W. H Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

PHILO-ISRAEL'S PHOTOGRAPHS (Copyright). Cabinet size 2s. each; Carte-de-visites 1s. To be had on receipt of 24 or 12 stamps from Robert Banks, Racquet-court, London, E.C., or of Allen, Photographer, Clifton, Bristol. N.B.—Supplied in not less than half-dozens at trade price to agents for sale of the BANNER, who will find they have a ready sale when placed before its readers.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed:—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, 5, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 1, 1879.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. III. No. 106. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 8, 1879. [ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
Hard Times for Israel	21
Two Prophecies. II.—The Rich. By L. P.	22
Israel's Work for the Lord in Belgium	23
Security of the People of God. By Rev. J. L. V. Cachemaille.—Part II.	24
The Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association	25
The Geography of the Gates. No. XXVI.—Brisbane, Queensland	25
Progress at St. Leonards	26
The British Protectorate and the Return of the Jews to Palestine. By Robert Lamb	26
THE BANNER OF ISRAEL Free Circulation Fund	27
The Rock Blindly Testifies that the British are Israel	27
Correspondence	27

HARD TIMES FOR ISRAEL.

DOUBTLESS these are hard times. Wherever we go, whatever the business may be, the complaint is the same: "the times are hard," "trade is dull;" people are beginning to feel the pinch of want, and money seems scarce, for the spending inclination is gone. The whole of this is true. But do the complainants, if Israelites, reflect where we stand nationally in the stream of time? Are we not now at the very point where Great Pyramid teaching tells us we have reached the last days—"the time of the end" of Dan. xii. 9—just where the Lord predicted there should be "distress of nations" upon the earth, with perplexity; "hard times," in fact, when "there is no hire for man, nor any hire for beast," when work is slack, wages short, trade excessively dull, and men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the "earth?" (Luke xxi. 25, 26; Zech. viii. 10, 11).

These are the times of famines, of pestilences, of great earthquakes, of wars and rumours of wars, of seditions, infidelities, sorceries, superstitions, and ungodlinesses, which the three frogs—those three unclean spirits now abroad among not only the kings of the "earth," but of the whole world too, and, therefore, also among Israel—are predicted to produce in these our days. We should, consequently, be unwise to expect just now halcyon roseate seasons of prosperity; but knowing it is darkest night before the dawn, we must act as God-taught men of Israel should, looking forward soberly into the future, regarding the present troubles as mere transient trials for ourselves, but as the joyous harbingers of a day soon to break full of glory, peace, and prosperity for our race in the very near horizon.

Such sober, calm, and re-assuring views as these, we are glad to see that Mr. Shaw Lefevre, an ex-President of the Board of Trade, has lately been enunciating. Regarding him we beg to quote for our readers' benefit, an admirable résumé of his speech we have seen recorded in the Bristol Times and Mirror of Nov. 22, 1878.

Mr. Lefevre speaks throughout with knowledge and authority, and we do well to take heed to his blind testimony to our national prosperity, though it be now somewhat under a sobering cloud, like that of all the world beside. We shall act wisely, while we act cautiously in the matter of expenditure in these critical times if we abstain from foolish fears as to the ultimate result of all these troubles, knowing, as we do, that, being Israel, our God "who keepeth Israel never slumbereth or sleepeth," but will with our present trials bring us soon such prosperity, that it "shall be to Him a name of joy, a praise and an honour before all the nations of the earth, which shall hear of all the good He will do unto us; and they shall fear and tremble for all the goodness and for all the prosperity that He procures unto our nation" (Jer. xxxiii. 9).

Our extract is as follows:—

If we are to believe an ex-President of the Board of Trade, we have been crying out about bad trade without a cause. Mr. Shaw Lefevre has been taking a review of the last ten years of British trade, and his review, if not rosy, is certainly far from depressing. He admits, to begin with, that some of the most important branches of trade are in a very depressed condition, that large numbers of merchants and manufacturers are making no profit, that wages in these trades have fallen to a very low point, that large bodies of men in the manufacturing districts are working short time; but if we are to believe many authorities, the prospects of the future were never more gloomy, our foreign trade is deserting us, we are feeding on our resources and gradually reducing them, and the balance of trade against us grows larger every year. There were, he says, the same complaints in 1868. There was general stagnation of trade, large numbers of men were out of work, pauperism increased, manufacturing capital was fearfully depreciated, and there were demands for reciprocity. In 1870 trade enormously improved, and in the following years was unprecedentedly great and profitable. Thus a country may be near a period of unexampled prosperity without, apparently, anyone being aware of what is coming. Mr. Lefevre did not say so, but the inference is that we may be now equally near a period of prosperity, and not know it.

Mr. Lefevre's object, however, was not so much to deal with the future as with the past, and he quoted statistics to show that during the last decade the country has made more advance than ever before—an unprecedented advance, whether we look at the bulk of trade, the accumulated wealth, or the condition of our labouring people. The income-tax returns show for the decade an increase of income of 44 per cent., as compared with 26 per cent. in the previous decade. The income of trade under schedule D shows an increase of 60 per cent., and property assessed to legacy duty an increase of nearly 40 per cent. The realised wealth of the country has increased in the decade by £2,400,000,000 or £240,000,000 a year. The production of coal has increased 28 per cent., iron 40 per cent., and shipbuilding 32 per cent. The capital invested in railways has increased 34 per cent.; the import trade has increased 43 per cent., and the export trade 29 per cent. The increase of imports has been continuous; exports increased rapidly till 1872, and since then have decreased somewhat; but taking decreased values into account, the bulk has remained the same. During the same period the population of the country has increased by 3,465,000 persons, or nearly 700,000 families. We have found it possible, therefore, to feed, clothe, and employ a fresh population equal to that of Scotland, and also to employ many who at the commencement of the decade were idle, for pauperism has been greatly reduced. The savings banks show an increase of deposits of 52 per cent., spread evenly over the whole period, and wages have increased, in trades unaffected by the great profits, by 25 per cent. True, the difference between the value of our exports and imports has assumed enormous proportions in the last three years; but the explanation is to be found in our great investments abroad. There is no cause for alarm in the discrepancy, and there is equally no fear for our foreign trade from the competition of others. The depression has been aggravated by three bad harvests in England, by famines in India, and war and the fear of war. The first two are removed; and the peace in Turkey has opened again the Black Sea. Trade is still depressed, but it is a depression marked by plenty and low prices rather than by want. There never has been a period when all the main products of the soil and wants of mankind were so plentiful and cheap. These low prices are of inestimable benefit to the great mass of consumers; but we hear far more of the complaints of producers and importers than of the rejoicing of consumers.

Digitized by Google

Here we see Mr. Shaw Lefevre confirms and rather exceeds our previous statements to be found on page 104, No. 65 of the BANNER. For—

1. He estimates our realised capital at 240 millions sterling a year—not 200 millions—or 2,400 millions for the past decade. This is indeed an Israelite qualification—a proof the Lord hath given us the power to get wealth (Deut. viii. 18).

2. He next points to our vast increase in population during the last decade, and says it amounts to 700,000 families, or 3,465,000 persons—a rate of increase (for England alone, we presume) to which, if the emigration to the colonies and to the American Republic be added, must be accounted vast indeed, and quite like Israel's (Gen. xxii. 17).

On the whole, we think Mr. Shaw Lefevre's opinions, which we are sure are correct and well-founded, are re-assuring and comforting to our faithless "trembling" "children of Ephraim in the West," who are always, if not "murmuring" like their ancestors without cause, are terrified and troubled where no cause for fear exists, and to such we commend the wise words of the ex-President of the British Board of Trade, merely adding what he also suggests, that we are certainly now very near a period of unexampled prosperity, say in 1882 (as we were in 1868), and yet may not, do not, know it. Reader, there is a good time coming. "Praise YE the Lord."

NOTICE.—The editor acknowledges with sincere thanks the receipt of £3 from Beni-Ephraim to be expended "at his discretion for the advancement of the cause of the Identity." Philo-Israel begs to inform the generous donor that he means to expend this money as follows:—£1 will be remitted to Dr. H. H. Rugg, Treasurer of "The Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association," to aid its general funds; £1 to Mr. R. Banks, to enable him to circulate copies of No. 105 of the BANNER, by post, to 100 members of the House of Lords; and £1 will be spent by Philo-Israel himself in circulating his "History of the House of Israel for children," "Our Identity," &c., "The Inquiry," and the new Pyramid "Digest" (when published), in Shrewsbury, Stirling, Bristol, London, our sea ports, &c., &c.

THE EDITOR regrets he inadvertently omitted to acknowledge, last August, the sum of ten shillings, received from Mrs. L. F., of London, W., and paid by him, at the time, into the National Provincial Bank of England at Bristol, for the "China Famine Relief Fund."

TWO PROPHECIES.

II.—THE RICH.

IN reading the prophecy of St. James, at the commencement of chapter v. of his Epistle, we particularly note two things. One is, that it can scarcely be addressed to the "Twelve Tribes" (chap. i. 1) as applicable to them, at the time the epistle was written, as when a people are wandering, "scattered and peeled" (Isa. xviii. 2—7), and pushing their way through every kind of obstacle in order to reach a destined resting-place, feeling no claim on any country or city, beyond that of endurance and forbearance, it is scarcely likely that many among them would hold prominent places as rich men. But if chaps. i. and ii. would seem to militate against this view, the fact that St. James refers to "the last days" (v. 3) sufficiently indicates that the prophecy in that chapter alludes to the present rather than to the past. The other point that strikes us is, that never since that time have we any reason for supposing the warning to have been followed by the threatened evil; for though in past centuries our wealthy ancestors, after being settled in this land, had, doubtless, to endure much, and were often severely handled in foreign as in home wars; yet their sufferings were not comparatively greater than those of their poorer brothers, and instead of their possessions melting away, they have in many cases increased and descended through long lines of inheritors.

It is difficult for us to know who are, on the whole, to be exactly considered as the rich, though some are undoubtedly so. Wealth is a relative term, and we cannot draw a distinct line and say, all above this are rich, all below are poor, or set a distinct mark of wealth or poverty on some—whether we speak of him who earns largely by the sweat of his brow, or the skilled use of his hands, is able to provide every comfort for his home, may live in his kitchen if he pleases without shocking "the proprieties," and can leave an inheritance to his children—or whether we speak of the successful trader, or the large landowner. We cannot suppose St. James alluded especially to any form or source of riches, though, doubtless, as we may perceive in ver. 4, he associated them with the ownership of rich pastures, flowing streams, and many flocks and herds, such as David had tended in his youth, and such as enabled Nabal to live in luxury. We cannot but suppose that the apostle's prophecy is yet to be fulfilled in Israel's Tribes in some manner, and that it points distinctly to those of that nation, who commanding by their possessions the power of serving others much by their help and by their example, instead of so doing, spend their wealth on themselves, and, alas! in too many instances, in fostering evil around them by their careless indifference to their influence. We know that having much does not prevent many from desiring more, and it cannot be denied that, to gratify this wish, tenderness of conscience and scrupulousness of dealing, do not make themselves conspicuous in our day. We do not, perhaps, see wages fraudently withheld by those whose fields are reaped; but what shall we say about noble names and high positions, stained with the public shame of wanton extravagance that indulges every whim, buys and uses the goods of others, while debts accumulate, and the spendthrifts know they can never be rightly and fully discharged? How about money that is due to others being lost at the gambling table, or risked on the race course?

A rich man, we repeat, is not always one who owns broad acres, or an ancient title. A duke may have a large rent roll, yet may possibly have but a few thousands to spend annually, and with a great name and a large family he may be a much poorer man in reality than the tradesman who retires with a discreet helpmeet on a few hundreds per annum, and has no "appearances to keep up."

There are landowners whose unquestionably great wealth is spent largely in the endeavours to elevate all connected with the soil they have inherited, and in making the humblest a sharer of the earthly good things they possess ; but there are others who seem to believe that rioting, profligacy, and contemptible self-indulgence, are what their riches entitle them to indulge in, and that the talent they possess, which might be powerful for good, may lawfully be scattered abroad like ill seed, that shall raise a future harvest of wrong and ruin to many.

Digitized by Google

What shall we say of those whose wealth in this our day is ever increasing and ever becoming more and more deeply dyed with the stains of the sins and sorrows it must necessarily, if unintentionally, create ? Though these may possess no lordly names, nor lordly acres, we think the curse is on their riches, and that they are yet to find it so to their cost.

Again, there are others who would, doubtless, fain hide themselves behind their more conspicuous brothers, and decline the dangerous distinction of being called rich, yet to whom the epithet and its attendant threatened consequences must be supposed to apply, as compared with the poor, the undoubtedly poor, for whose wants they provide, and who they rob with false weights and short measures, that they may add to their own store.

We do not of course suppose that St. James could teach that the possession of riches is a sin in God's sight, any more than that poverty is a claim of itself to His favour. It is the use or abuse of them that must cause them to be a blessing or a curse to the owners.

We do not see that the accusation contained in verse 6, applies to these days, but surely we have not to look back many years to find proofs of harsh opposition and even cruel persecution on the part of the powerful towards those in humbler positions in this land, who dared to lift up their voices, or use their pens, against wrong and injustice ; and glancing still farther back, what heart-rending cases we meet of imprisonment and suffering imposed on those who ventured to prefer the teaching of God's Word to those of an ambitious priesthood, or to the will of a godless, yet Church-upholding aristocracy.

If we are right in our accusation of many, while acknowledging there were grand and glorious exceptions, we think surely such doings were not calculated to bring a blessing on the wealth and the dignities that were to descend to the heirs of such men. We see in this fifth chapter of St. James what are to be the consequences to the rich whose possessions are not blessed. We do not read that they are to be swept away or set aside, but "miseries are to come upon them;" "their riches are corrupted, their garments moth-eaten, their gold and silver are cankered," and their "rust shall witness against them" (v. 2, 3). We know what a moth-eaten garment is like; fair to view, but lift it and it falls into holes, dust, and useless strips. It exists, but it is worthless; it is an unprofitable burden. Such like is to be misused or buried and rusted wealth, burning into the flesh as the hand clutches it, and loosening the grasp by pangs as of fire.

Let it not be supposed we write with the pen of a despiser of wealth, with a communistic or socialistic pen; very far, indeed, from that. We incline to believe in all humility and deep sense of our ignorance, that when God's kingdom shall come, and His will be done on earth as it is in heaven, there will still be different grades and varieties of position, yet all be content, each one satisfied; though "many that are first" now may be "last" then, and those "last" now may be "first" hereafter.

Wealth, if it is accompanied by the generous hand, a Christian faith, and a just and noble mind, is a power for good, which may well be stamped as an especial earthly blessing; but when it is made to gild vice, to encourage or conceal iniquity, to uphold wrong, and to paint sin with alluring colours, then is it a wonder if we see an inspired writer bid us expect to behold it crumble into dust, and turn into rottenness and corruption?

We have been shewn by Mr. Gott (BANNER 100, p. 392), that possibly Israel's Identification is as the voice of one in the wilderness crying, "Make straight the way of the Lord," thus "preparing the way before Him." May that cry penetrate to those who are yet living "careless" and "at their ease,"* with no law unto themselves but that of their appetites, and no thought but for their pleasures; and may the voice lead them to make ready for "the last days" which surely are at hand, and to be sure that, besides being Israelites, they are first of all believing Christians, or their being sons of Abraham will not save them from the wrath of God.

November 29. L. P.

* The following passage is copied from an article, signed Josephine E. Butler, which appeared in the Christian of Dec. 12, 1878 :—"There are men among us, of education and rank, candidates too sometimes for the posts of legislators, who can only be truly described as 'lewd fellows of the baser sort,' even though 'the best blood of the aristocracy' flows in their veins. But of the vices of the rich and great it is scarcely permitted to speak. We may denounce the immorality of the poor, but we have few Knoxes among us who dare to warn the great, whose ignoble example is ruining thousands."

ISRAEL'S WORK FOR THE LORD IN BELGIUM.

THE following is an extract from the fortieth report of the Belgian Evangelisation Society, established for the preaching of the Gospel, the building of churches, the working of schools, the printing and circulating of evangelical literature in Belgium. The donations and subscriptions from the 1st July, 1877, to the 30th June, 1878, were as under:—

	FRANCS.	CENTS.
Germany	690	25
America	2,940	89
Belgium	41,562	70
France	3,251	—
Great Britain	35,297	48
Holland	15,570	44
Switzerland	545	—

It will be seen from the above that Belgium gave towards this society for the spread of the Word of God amongst its own people the sum of 41,562fr., while the foreigner supported it to the extent of 58,295fr.! Of the latter sum the British Israelites contributed 35,297fr., being a third of the whole amount collected, or a sum nearly equal to that subscribed in Belgium itself! Here, then, is proof positive that the love of souls felt in favoured Britain for their Gentile neighbours compares favourably with that evinced by the latter for their own people. The question arises—since the case of Belgium is by no means a special or peculiar one—why the British are always thus foremost in propagating the Gospel in foreign parts? and why those for whom these efforts are made in happy Britain are themselves so apathetic in working for the Lord? There can be only one reply. This our nation being Israel is, on that very account, blessed with the will to extend the kingdom of God. Theirs it is "to blossom and bud, and to fill the face of the world with fruit;" theirs it is to prove "a blessing to all the families of the earth." The Belgians, and other nations, for whom it is our privilege to labour or expend our means, not being Israel, feel under no constraining motive, therefore, to carry the Gospel to those of their fellow-countrymen who are lying in darkness without the light of life to cheer them. Germany—which some of our friends suppose to represent, under the so-called "Teutonic theory," one of the Tribes of Israel—certainly shows no sign of the Israelitish origin of its inhabitants in the case of the Belgian Evangelisation Society! For, whereas the British contribution was 35,297fr., the German nation (nominally Protestant too!) could only gather a fiftieth part of that sum, and sent not more than 690fr. (about £27) to the help of the Lord! We ask our Teutonic friends how they reconcile this fact with their views which recognise the Germans as Israelites, but not Gentile Teutons as they are? We would add that, on the committee of the Belgian Evangelisation Society in Brussels, not a single English name appears, and that, therefore, the large subscriptions realised in Great Britain for the association (nearly £1,400) cannot be accounted for by the supposition that the British are working on the spot, and by such effort are exciting an interest at home which accounts for the large amounts remitted abroad.

Digitized by Google

SECURITY OF THE PEOPLE OF GOD.

By the Rev. J. L. V. Cachemaille.

(Continued from p. 12.)

PART II.

We know from Scripture that the present dispensation will terminate nearly in the same manner as did the bondage of Israel in Egypt, or as is expressed in the book of Rev. xi. 18: "Thy wrath is come" and "The time is come," "That Thou shouldest give reward to Thy servants." "And shouldest destroy them which destroy the earth." When this time is come, John sees seven angels, to whom are given seven vials filled with the wrath of God. These are seven plagues, by which the wrath of God shall be finished (Rev. xv. 1, 7, 16). These plagues are the effect of the wrath of God—that is, they are judgments of anger, and of destruction, and consequently they can only be put upon the enemies of God. God sends them to the sinners who have outraged His majesty, and irritated Him by their sins; but they are also vials of wrath to those same enemies who have persecuted, hated, and murdered the servants of God, or who have figurately kept them in hard bondage, as the Egyptians kept the children of Israel. Those who are designated as destroying the earth, and whom God will destroy, are represented in Rev. xvii. 4—6. It is only on enemies that the vials will be poured out, as may be seen in Rev. xvi. 2, 5, 6, 9, 11, 15, 21. The Great Babylon which is destroyed under the seventh vial, is well designated as a prostitute whose sins have reached up unto heaven (Rev. xviii. 3, 5). And the great and final battle will be fought against the same enemies (Rev. xix. 15—21). It is then evident that the plagues foretold in the Revelation, as well as those of Egypt, fall exclusively on the Egyptians spiritually, and on the enemies of the people of God.

The time of the manifestation of the wrath of God is that of the deliverance of His people, when He comes to bring them to the mountain of His holiness, or into His kingdom; and this liberation then can only be effected by the destruction of the wicked. This has already been asserted, and will be confirmed by an attentive perusal of 2 Thess. i. 6—10. St. John expresses this also most distinctly (Rev. xviii. 20): "Rejoice over her, thou heaven, and ye holy apostles and prophets, for God hath avenged you on her." Thus these two series of events are, therefore, similar—the one the type of the other. The locality, the country, the individuals, and the times, are not the same; but the latter are traced upon the other, from which we should consequently derive instruction. Moreover, there is a great resemblance between the vials of the Apocalypse and the plagues of Egypt. Witness the noisome and grievous sores. The waters changed into blood. The darkness of the kingdom of the beast. The hail. The three unclean spirits like frogs (Rev. xvi. 2, 4, 10, 13, 21). Then the great city upon which these vials are poured out is spiritually called Egypt (Rev. xi. 8). Finally, the great assembly of all the kings of the prophetic earth for the battle of the great day of the Lord God Almighty, described in Rev. xix. 11, 12, corresponds perfectly with the army of Pharaoh, with his chariots and horses, and with their destruction in the Red Sea, seeing that the last enemies are drowned, as it were, in their own blood (Rev. xiv. 19, 20). We have seen, then, that God has revealed in the Apocalypse that there will be times and events perfectly similar to those of Egypt—that there will be the outpouring of vials which are also called plagues, poured out upon a country which is called, in the Revelation, the great city, spiritually called Egypt, and upon the inhabitants of that country, inasmuch as they have been partakers of her sins, and that her chief men and the beast, the false prophet and the kings under him, are themselves utterly destroyed, as was Pharaoh and his army. Seeing that God sends these judgments to avenge His people—His servants whom He describes as "the called, the elect, and the faithful"—and that this vengeance and this deliverance will take place towards the end of this present dispensation, this consideration, added to what St. Paul has said as to the end for which the history of the Israelites has been transmitted to us, ought to lead us to understand that in these latter days there will be found on earth in this spiritual Egypt, on its frontiers, as was the land of Goshen, not in its centre, a nation or people who are the antitype of Israel. The types referring to Israel cannot be applied to the believers who have already been gathered to the Lord. It is not written for the departed who have no need of instruction, of patience, or of consolation; for they are sheltered from every evil, from all the assaults of the enemy, and they rest from all their labours. They are already, it may be said, in the heavenly Canaan; but our concern at present is with the earth and with its inhabitants, who may be living during the pouring out of the vials. For a long time spiritual Egypt (Rome) has put a heavy yoke upon the people of God. Multitudes have, humanly speaking, led very miserable lives. Many have fallen. What torrents of blood have been shed! How many have perished! How many have been beaten with rods, spoiled of their goods, afflicted and tormented! And, as in the case of Israel, their cry has mounted up unto heaven. God has heard it; He has come down to deliver this portion which are still on earth, which Pharaoh spiritually will not let free; he will not allow them to go out and serve God; rather would he make them serve with a harder bondage, as was the case with the Israelites when Moses asked for some mitigation to their labours. This people still on earth may, for its instruction, for encouragement, for patience, and consolation, observe the typical events which happened to Israel in Egypt; for as God did then He will do again. Already He has said, "Come out of Babylon, My people, that ye be not partakers of her plagues" (Rev. xviii. 4). And as Israel remained in Goshen, where they found perfect exemption, so the people of God in our day having taken refuge in the modern Goshen will find the same security—the same deliverance. It is generally admitted that the seven vials of the Apocalypse began to be poured out in the year 1786, and that we are now under the seventh, the effects of which have now been felt for some years. The plagues contained in these vials have been poured out upon what is called in Revelation the great city with its ten kingdoms, or that portion of Europe which formed the Roman Empire in the West. It is not the intention of this work to speak of these plagues generally, or in detail, neither as to what they may be in themselves or what were the effects produced and still being produced. Others have done this, and have related the misfortunes, the calamities and the tortures, by which Europe has been desolated typically, intellectually, and morally, for the last half century. We shall only here briefly advert to the events which happened to the people of God, whilst the wrath of God was poured out upon Egypt and the Egyptians spiritually. When God came down to deliver His people, that He might bring them to His holy mountain, and place them for ever in His holy tabernacle, and for that purpose He began to pour out His judgments upon Europe, true believers, few in number, felt a beginning of liberty and they understood that they were about to escape from their tyrant. There was a remarkable religious movement in the British Islands, and a striking spiritual revival, which has been maintained to the present moment. Whilst successive vials have been poured out upon the continent of Europe, England enjoyed a special exemption and protection. No plagues were felt in her; on the contrary, she grew and prospered in a most extraordinary manner—her internal resources were multiplied—her manufactures and commerce grew and expanded rapidly—her armies and fleets prospered in all parts of the globe, and extended her empire prodigiously throughout the earth—her riches multiplied—and, it might be said, she spoiled the Egyptians.

It is an historical fact, that during all the wars and convul-

Digitized by Google

sions which have agitated the continent for the last half century no foreign enemy has put his foot in England, and that during this whole time she has prospered wonderfully, and has become the queen of all the empires of the world. No foreign Power has been able to hurt her; and, notwithstanding all the extraordinary, prodigious and powerful efforts of a modern empire, she has enjoyed the most perfect exemption. God has thus wonderfully distinguished her in the eyes of the whole world. In this point of view England affords an admirable antitype to the land of Goshen, which was given to the Israelites. She formed a part of the Roman Empire in the West, and has been for many centuries one of the ten kingdoms of the beast, or of the city which is spiritually called Egypt; but she is on the borders of that Empire, separated by an arm of the sea, as was Goshen on the frontiers of Egypt separated by a branch of the Nile. At the Reformation in the sixteenth century she was absolutely separated from the great city. God took her to Himself as the tenth part, or tithe, and gave her to the Protestant Church as the best part of the country. Is there, in fact, a richer country in the world than England? It is there especially that God distinguished to the eyes of the modern Pharaoh and the Egyptians His people and His country, and proved by the exemption He afforded them that the plagues and judgments of these later days come from Him, and are the effects of His wrath, because of the iniquities and abominations of Popery. Moreover, during this period the religious movement has been strengthened and struck firmer root, and England is the country where most piety has been found, and the greatest number of pious persons. Her protest against the abominations of the modern Egyptians was universally known; the whole of Europe knew her to be a religious country worshipping the true God and not the Pope. Thousands of witnesses have been forced to come from the continent to bear this testimony. Witness the records of the emigrants and refugees from all the kingdoms of the beast, come as the modern Egyptians to seek a refuge in this Goshen, many of whom have become Protestants—another similarity to the Egyptians who came out of Egypt with Moses and the children of Israel.

(To be continued.)

THE METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

We are glad to announce that on the 20th December, 1878, a preliminary meeting of friends resident in London and its vicinity met at 29, New Bridge-street, Blackfriars, under the presidency of Philo-Israel, and (we trust with the blessing of God) then and there established an Anglo-Israel Association, whose sphere of usefulness will be the metropolis; whose objects, as the founders defined and stereotyped them themselves, will be "To spread the knowledge of the Identity of the Anglo-Saxons with the Lost Tribes of the House of Israel."

The meeting was attended by the Rev. F. R. A. Glover, Capt. G. Bayley, R.N., Messrs. Chas. Horner, Douglas A. Onslow, R. Banks, W. H. Guest, J. T. Fletcher, Hodson Rugg, H. H. Pain, and others. The treasurership of the association was accepted by Dr. H. Hodson Rugg, of 1, Grove-road, St. John's-wood, London, N.W., to whom all subscriptions and donations should be sent; and the pro. tem. secretary appointed was the Rev. James Billington, who will attend at the office of the association for certain hours daily, such office being for the present at 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row—a room not included in Mr. Guest's premises.

The association proposes to carry out the objects self-imposed, by holding public and private meetings in various parts of the metropolis, by issuing leaflets, by holding Bible classes and readings, by seizing on opportunities for the discussion of our Identity with opponents in the public press, and by adopting such other methods as may present themselves for propagating our views, using at the same time every lawful means in their power to effect the object.

It was decided to limit the subscription for members to half-a-crown a year, and it is hoped that all metropolitan believers, and many in the provinces, may aid the association by enrolling themselves as paying members, and, so doing, enable the committee to carry out their programme, which need not be expensive or burdensome.

The meeting, having transacted a large amount of business, separated with the full assurance that God's blessing would follow an effort which had already been successful in Leeds, in Sheffield, in Bristol, and in other places, and which, founded on correct principles, ought, it was felt, to succeed equally well in London.

We wish the new association God-speed! We trust it may do good work for the Lord in London! Also that, by its instrumentality, the Identity may take such hold of the masses in the metropolis that the numbers of those who are the "publishers," the "praisers," and the "praying" ones for Israel may be infinitely increased (Jer. xxxi. 7), and thus the outpouring of the Holy Spirit be granted to the nation—from the least of them to the greatest of the House of Israel.

We refer our readers to our advertising columns for the full particulars as to the meeting, as to the rules of the institution now existing, and as to the objects it has set before itself to accomplish.

THE GEOGRAPHY OF THE GATES.

(Continued from page 427, Vol. II.)

No. XXVI.—BRISBANE, QUEENSLAND.

We lately saw a notice, taken from the Brisbane Courier, to the effect that the colony of Queensland had this year entered on her nineteenth birthday, and was, therefore, "a nation yet in her teens."

This, in one aspect, may be very true, since it is, indeed, only nineteen years ago that, on June 3, 1859, the colony was named anew, and proclaimed in honour of Her Majesty Queen Victoria, by a title selected by herself—"Queensland." It is, however, equally true that this colony, instead of being a young, is one of the very oldest Australian settlements. It was once known as "Moreton Bay," attached to New South Wales. In 1825, when Sir Thomas Brisbane was Governor of New South Wales, the Northern settlement on the river Brisbane was named after him, and constituted a penal station. It was then established a British Gate, and, by that door of entry, the land from the twenty-ninth parallel of latitude to the Gulf of Carpentaria and Cape York, is now by proclamation a British-Israelite colony, and by virtue of its responsible government and independence, one of the great company of nations promised by God to our forefather Abraham and his seed Jacob for ever, when He said: "A nation (the central link in the Western islands) and a company of nations (the British Colonial Empire, including Queensland) shall be of thee" (Genesis xvii. 6, xxxv. 11).

The Gate we are now considering is situated on the East coast of Australia, 500 miles to the North of Sydney, in lat. 27° 30′ South, and East longitude 153° 15′. Although four degrees removed out of the Southern tropic, its climate is, nevertheless, decidedly tropical. Wheat and other European cereals will not, as a general rule, grow there. Maize, therefore, is used as its substitute. Sugar planting and vine cultivation have now developed into important and permanent industries. The acreage under crop is stated to be 90,000 to 100,000, though pasturage was originally, and now also, the employment of a large portion of the settlers. The district was first occupied from New South Wales as a convict settlement; but the foundation of its prosperity lay in the extensive pasture lands of the interior, where countless herds of cattle (not sheep, for which the grass to the East of the main range of hills is not fit) were speedily raised.

Digitized by Google

After 1859 the colony made rapid progress under the energetic administration of the then Governor, Sir George F. Bowen. The gold discoveries of 1851 did not do much for the colony, as not much gold was then found within it. Its population by immigration, however, rapidly increased. In 1846 it was 2,257. In 1851, the year of the discovery of gold, it was 8,575. In 1856 it rose to 17,082. In 1860, after the colony was declared independent, it was 28,056. At the end of December, 1861, it was 34,367. In 1862, 45,077. In 1864 there was a rise to 74,036 souls; but on December 31, 1875, when the last census available for reference was taken, the population of this country was 181,288; to-day, probably not less than 200,000.

It will thus be seen that in thirty years about 180,000 souls have been added to the population, and the "Gate" by which the Israelite colonist advanced to occupy this land, was and is Brisbane. The area of this magnificent colony is 678,600 square miles, being nearly twice as large as Canada proper, and equal to six times the size of the United Kingdom! To the pastoral and agricultural industries of the colony, mining has lately been added, and now gold, copper, tin, and other metals are largely exported. Coal is found extensively, and the yield of gold alone is said to be worth considerably more than one million sterling. Most of the productions, of both temperate and tropical countries, can be cultivated with success in Queensland. Cotton is grown easily, being indigenous and perennial. Its quality is said to be very superior.

Besides that, the country exports largely sugar, tobacco, wool, quicksilver, antimony, timber. The land being rich in splendid pasturage, large numbers of horses and cattle are bred in the country, the number of the former in 1875 being 121,497, and of the latter, 1,812,576. The estimated number of sheep in the colony was then 7,500,000, and these, from excess in number, can only be utilised for their tallow and skins. Should the art of preserving the meat for the European market be discovered, there will then be a new opening found for Queensland as for all the other colonies of this most-favoured country.

Brisbane is the seat of government as well as the See of a bishopric. The interests of religion in this flourishing Gate are fully provided for. The places of worship, including several handsome churches, are many in proportion to the inhabitants. The aborigines of Queensland have been kindly treated by the Europeans, and are well cared for. They are lazy, however, and inert, though far superior to the others of their race in the more Southern latitudes of the remaining colonies. Their fate, we may be sure, as the country fills up with the pushing and aggressive Anglo-Saxon, is to "die out." When we have said that the total exports and imports of this noble daughter of Israel amount to seven millions sterling per annum, we have furnished our readers with much food for reflection, and with reasons to thank God for the gift of "the Gates," whereby such a colony as Queensland has been secured for our nation—a colony yet in its infancy, and one the prospects of which demonstrate that "we of this generation are only on the threshold of its future greatness" and of its magnificent prosperity.

(To be followed by a paper on Hobart Town.)

THE METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

SEVERAL gentlemen deeply interested in extending the knowledge of the fact that the Lost Tribes of the House of Israel are now identified with the Anglo-Saxon races, have for some time past felt the need of a metropolitan organisation to bring them into closer union, and to form a centre or bond of strength which might, by its influence and operation, make known far and wide the glorious tidings of the Divine light, which has so plainly revealed the various tokens of British Identification with God's favoured people Israel.

By the exertion of two or three friends—notably among them "Philo-Israel"—these earnest advocates met on Friday afternoon, the 20th ult., at 29, New Bridge-street, Blackfriars, London, E.C.—the use of the large Board room of these offices being most kindly granted by C. Woodroffe, Esq. "Philo-Israel" was unanimously voted to the chair. The meeting was opened with prayer offered by the Rev. J. Billington, after which the Chairman pointed out the advantages and benefits to be expected from an association grounded on correct principles, thoroughly organised and earnestly worked, to publish the fact of Israel's Identification. He concluded by proposing that a Metropolitan Association for this purpose should be at once formed. The motion was seconded by Douglas A. Onslow, Esq., and most enthusiastically adopted and carried.

Several rules were then taken into consideration, and unanimously agreed upon, as the basis on which the Association should be worked; for particulars of these we must refer our readers to the Advertisement to be found on page 28.

The meeting, which was most encouraging, then terminated with the usual votes of thanks, and the benediction by the Chairman.

(Official Report).

PROGRESS AT ST. LEONARD'S.

WE take the following from the Hastings and St. Leonard's Advertiser of the early part of November, 1878, and are glad to give it BANNER room, as it tells our readers that one of the local clergy there, who not long since scoffed at "our Identity," is now a believer! So we progress all along the line; and the recent capture of Ali Musjid, on the morning of Friday, the 22nd November, 1878, must satisfy most men that the Power to whom the Lord gives so easily "the Gate of its" Afghan "enemies" must in truth be Israel! We merely wish, in passing, to protest against Dean Bagot's idea that the Jews are to be restored to Jerusalem. Ezek. xlviii. ought to teach him (a divine learned in God's Word) that Judah's portion in "the return" will be many miles North of Jerusalem, and that that city will fall to the portion, not of Judah, the Jews, but to Benjamin of the Ten Tribes, now one with Israel. The newspaper extract is as follows:—

"Dean Bagot, speaking at a missionary meeting at St. Leonard's, on Monday afternoon, said he believed 'the return of the Jews to Jerusalem was at hand.' This statement will be received with satisfaction by the little crowd of Biblical students who recently brought down a lecturer to convince the people of Hastings and St. Leonard's that the British are really the descendants of the Lost Tribes of Israel. Not long since we heard of a local clergyman who was inclined to scoff at this notion. He is now a believer!"

THE BRITISH PROTECTORATE AND THE RETURN OF THE JEWS TO PALESTINE.

BY ROBERT LAMB, DURHAM.

I HAVE lately seen an interesting extract from the Christian Signal on the above subject. It is headed, "The Return of the Jews to Palestine under the British Protectorate." We are told, however, in the Scriptures that the Jews, or House of Judah, will return to Palestine under the protection of the "House of Israel." "In those days the House of Judah shall walk with (or to—see margin) the House of Israel, and they shall come together out of the land of the North, to the land that I have given for an inheritance unto your fathers" (Jer. iii. 18). We are told also that while the Jews may return in a body, the House of Israel will, on account of their multitudinous numbers, be only allowed to return representatively by a remnant (Jer. iii. 14; Isa. x. 21, 22). The writer of the article mentioned above states:—"Professor Marks, the eminent Jewish Rabbi, in a lecture he once delivered, stated that he did not hesitate to say the nationality of Judaism is a memory; and taking the word nationality in its ordinary material sense, to the majority of Jews in Western Europe it is no longer a hope." In Jer. xxxiii. 24—26, and xxxi. 35—37, we are told the two Houses of Judah and Israel should never cease from being a nation, with a descendant of David ruling over them. If the House of Judah or the Jews, then, are not a nation, the House of Israel must be one. Where is it? We all know where the House of Judah or the Jews are. Where is the sister people—the descendants of the House of Israel? Has England been put in the place of Israel, or is she Israel herself under another name? (Isa. lxv. 15). The correct answer to the above query would solve more than one complex political problem.

Digitized by Google

"THE BANNER OF ISRAEL" FREE CIRCULATION FUND.

"THE PRESS" has been the great power that has brought the "Identity" subject to its present important position. If proof were needed of this fact, we should point to the unparalleled circulation of some of the earliest publications on the subject—one work alone reaching the extraordinary sale of 180,000 copies; and this without a single advertisement; besides immense editions having been printed and published in the colonies and America. It is proposed to create a special fund for the FREE CIRCULATION of the THE BANNER OF ISRAEL. We have already sent many copies to Members of the House of Commons, and also to the Lords. As funds enable, we shall send by post to clergymen and ministers of all denominations, and to others. We ask our friends to help us in this important branch of our work.

Donations will be received by the Editor, E. W. Bird, Esq. ("Philo-Israel"), Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol, or by Mr. Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street. All subscriptions will be duly acknowledged in THE BANNER. Persons desirous of distributing copies themselves, would be supplied on wholesale terms.

Beni-Ephraim, per "Philo-Israel"	£1	0	0
Mr. R. Banks	1	1	0

THE "ROCK" BLINDLY TESTIFIES THAT THE BRITISH ARE ISRAEL.

WE take the following from the Rock of Nov. 8th, 1878. Our readers will observe what a splendid testimony the Rock unwittingly bears that the Anglo-Saxons alone, of all the nations of the earth, kept the Sabbath-day holy at the Paris Exhibition. The cause of the phenomenon the Rock knows not, and cares not to ascertain or to explain. To do so would be to share in "the craze" and "baseless delusion" of "our Identity" with Israel! But for all that, accepting the Rock's testimony to the facts as true testimony, we know no reason whatever forthcoming to explain what follows, but God's Word regarding Israel's observance of the Sabbath, as contained in Exod. xxxi. 13—17, and Ezek. xx. 12—20. With that clue, we see in the faithful proceedings of our race—including the British, American, and Colonial exhibitors at the world's great show—a great, glorious, unique, and undeniable proof of our Identity with Israel which nothing but God's promises to the nation can in any way explain.

The idea that all the exposants at the Exhibition were actuated at the time by godly motives no one can believe; but that the unanimous resolve of all those taking part in the Anglo-Saxon portion of the building to keep the Lord's-day holy, arose from a God-implanted instinct tied to the race because it is Israel, explains why the British, American, and Colonial annexes were always silent as the grave on the Sabbath, but the French and other Gentile portions of the building were a scene of "bustle, sight-seeing, buying, and selling" dishonouring to the day, but natural to the people who so dishonoured it, because they are Gentiles who have not the Sabbath law binding on them by God's command, given only to Israel. The extract we allude to is as follows:—

ENGLISH RESPECT FOR THE LORD'S-DAY AT THE PARIS EXHIBITION.

The Rev. John Gritton, writing from Paris on Oct. 28th, says: Yesterday was the last Sunday but one on which the Exposition will be open. The crowds were immense. The bustle of sight-seeing, of buying and selling, of inspection and display in the foreign sections was amazing. The noise of moving machinery incessant, and the babble of tongues endless. I passed through some of the foreign sections that I might realise the actual extent of French disregard of Sunday as a day of repose. One fact was everywhere patent. English visitors were very few. I did not detect fifty in all, and I made careful observation, looking earnestly, and listening attentively. When I passed into the sections devoted to exhibits from Great Britain, Ireland, Canada, the United States, and the Colonies of England, a marked quiet was everywhere evident. The immense ranges of machinery were still; many hundreds of exhibits were covered up; attendants were absent, and the stillness seemed to affect the streams of people passing by, for they, too, moved along quietly, and mostly in silence. Standing at the entrance to the machinery annexe, I listened attentively to the remarks of those passing in. I saw marks of displeasure in two or three instances, and some shrugged their shoulders, as only French people can, in evident pity for English eccentricities; but the very general tone of remark was not antagonistic to the protest made for Sabbath rest. I was specially interested in hearing several parents reply to the inquiries of their children that the English people thought it right to pay strict religious regard to the Sunday.

We add, reader, "Praise YE the Lord!"

DANIEL'S DATES.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—Is "Oswyn" aware that Daniel's 1335, reckoned from the Hegira, comes exactly to the most mystic spot in all the Pyramid, where the granite floor begins, under the granite leaf, with the standards of sacred inch and cubit? Prof. P. Smyth showed this when he first produced the Hegira Gallery Problem. Dan. xi. 41 looks like Mahomet, as Edom, taking away the Holy Land from the Roman Empire, but the rest of the chapter is much more like Rome, which had palaces in Jerusalem and Constantinople as well as the Sultan.

The 12th chap. seems to pass on at once to the end of the age and the coming of troubles. We are all agreed about the time, times, and half time being 1882. But the prophecy says that then "all these things shall be finished." Ver. 10 speaks of the pure and wise, as distinguished from the wicked, and then gives a key to another date after Mahomet is done with.

The beast with seven crowned heads, Imperial Rome, set up the abomination of desolation in Jerusalem, and removed the daily sacrifice of the Jewish Church, at the end of the seventy years. But afterwards the seven crowns are transferred to ten horns, a woman "full of abominations" rides upon him, and she has to be made desolate by the ten kings who did worship, but will hate her. There is another earthy beast who exerciseth all the power of the first beast (Rome Imperial), and causeth the earth, and them that dwell therein, to worship the first beast (Rome). Who can this be but the Papacy, which took away the pure daily sacrifice of prayers and praises of the seven-starred Churches of St. Paul and St. John? And his number is a typical date, "six hundred threescore and six," but we are not told his duration.

No. of Papacy .	666	Hegira . . .	622
Daniel's 2nd date .	1290	Daniel's 3rd date .	1335
	1956		1957

This brings the end of the Papacy to the year preceding the blessed date of the Millennium in Daniel and the Pyramid, and gives him a full share in the troubles of the low passage, which the signs of the times indicate so clearly he is to have. There is no point in the Pyramid to fit 1944. A WATCHER.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—When talking to a friend a few days ago upon the correspondence which had appeared in the BANNER on Mr. Gladstone's views as to the ultimate supremacy of America over Great Britain, I was reminded that Mr. Savile, in his Letter of Oct. 24th, BANNER 98, finds a difficulty because, as he says, "according to all analogy, the daughter (America) must be younger than the mother (Great Britain)." No doubt this would constitute a difficulty if we were in the habit of alluding to America as our daughter, but this is not the case (as my friend pointed out to me), we invariably speak of America as "Brother Jonathan." This is very remarkable and very significant, too much so to be lost sight of, hence my reason for troubling you again upon this subject. Canada, and some of our other colonies, we call our daughters, but America is always Brother Jonathan. For proof of this see the cartoons in Punch, and other illustrated papers, where America is typified in caricature. D. A. O.

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements
(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O O payable at Ludgate-circus.

BOOKS, ETC.

Now ready price 7s., post free 6d. extra.

THE SECOND VOLUME OF THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

This volume contains a large number of articles on our Identity with Lost Israel, by the best and most learned writers on the subject. Also many interesting papers on the Great Pyramid by Professor Piazzi Smyth, F.R.S.E., Astronomer-Royal for Scotland, Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A., Major H. A. Tracey, R.A., Charles Horner, Esq., and others. London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

NEW WORK BY PHILO-ISRAEL.
Will be published shortly.

AN ELEMENTARY DIGEST or SKETCH OF THE CHIEF FACTS and TEACHINGS of the GREAT PYRAMID of EGYPT; adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific. By PHILO-ISRAEL; together with Original Papers by the following leading Pyramidists, republished mostly from the BANNER OF ISRAEL (by kind permission of the proprietor)—viz., Professor Piazzi Smyth, the Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A., Charles Horner, Esq., and Major H. A. Tracey, R.A. Being a pamphlet by five authors (a Pyramid number).

Opinion of Mr. Charles Horner, regarding the above work, after perusal of the same:—"I think your design of the Pyramid pamphlet excellent. I know well that it is a book urgently needed, since, under God's blessing, it will, I feel convinced, convert many to Christ. Your part Philo-Israel's) I deem unexceptionable. It is both terse and understandable to the many, which is the great object you have had in view. I should like to see thousands circulated amongst our intelligent artisans, and hope God will raise some to do this."—C. HORNER, Dec. 12, 1878.

Now ready, price 6d., post free 7d

THE ANSWER to the EASTERN QUESTION as shewn in the IDENTITY of the BRITISH with ISRAEL. By the Author of the "New Old Story."

"The author has well managed her topic; her style of writing is clear and vigorous, and well calculated to do good service to the cause."—PIAZZI SMYTH.

London: S. W. Partridge & Co., 9, Paternoster-row.

ARE THE ENGLISH PEOPLE THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL? By PHILO-ISRAEL Price 4 d.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

"He that hath ears to hear, let him hear."

HEALTH, DIET, AND DEAFNESS.
NOISES IN THE EARS.

THE REV. E. J. SILVERTON will send his Health Advocate, giving important advice and particulars on the above subjects, free to any person, showing how Deafness may be at once relieved and ultimately cured. Many most interesting cases are set forth. Thousands of people are hearing Sermons and Lectures today who would have remained deaf had they not applied to Mr. Silverton. When a remedy is so successful, ought not every deaf person in the kingdom to try it, if it be in his or her power? It is a pleasing thing to a minister to make the deaf to hear, not only in a religious sense, but literally. Mr. Silverton may truly say to the deaf, "He that hath ears to hear, let him hear."

The Health Advocate also gives an account of several invaluable remedies which are producing the greatest possible good. The Medical Energiser is giving health to vast numbers. The Nutrient Food of Food is a splendid assistant to all kinds of medicine. The Great Lung Remedy is a marvellous Medicine for the cure of consumption, asthma, and all kinds of coughs. These, and other proved and tested Medicines which go under the title of "The Rev. E. J. Silverton's Ready Relief Remedies," may be ordered through any Chemist. London Wholesale Houses:—Sanger, Oxford-street; Barclay, Farringdon-street; Edwards, Queen Victoria-street; Thompson, New North-road; or of Rev. E. J. Silverton, Albert House, Park-street, Nottingham.

SERMONS WHICH HAVE REACHED THE MASSES, by REV. E. J. SILVERTON. Over 400 Pages Crown 8vo. Price 6s. Order of any Bookseller, or ALABASTER & PASSMORE, 4, Paternoster-buildings, London. The Sermons are quaint and humorous, containing many droll sayings and unusual illustrations. Must read them!! No one slept while they were delivered!! An Engraving of the Preacher's Place of Worship, Exeter Hall, Nottingham, will be found within. These Sermons are unlike all others. Sent post free from the Author.

MISCELLANEOUS.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

DOUBLE NUMBERS DURING 1879.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT.

Owing to the increasing interest taken in the Identity movement, it is found necessary to occasionally enlarge our space to make room for the important papers constantly reaching the Editor. It has, therefore, been determined to issue Twelve Double Numbers during 1879, for which Twopence will be charged. The first of these series of Double Numbers will be issued the first week in January, and one on each succeeding first week in the month during the year.

	£	s.	d.
Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free	0	7	6
Two copies (including Double Numbers) ...	0	12	4
Three " " " " ...	0	18	8
Four " " " " ...	1	6	2
Six " " " " ...	1	17	4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-Grand, London, to W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

N.B.—Send an extra stamp if an acknowledgment is required.

CARD OF MEMBERSHIP.

THE SHEFFIELD ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION are in a position to supply their Card to all associations requiring the same. Prices with Key—in quantities, 4d. each; single cards, 7½d., post free.

These Cards are copyright; and will be supplied with the description or title of any association.

The design of the card is pronounced by Mr. Hine to be "almost perfect."

By PHILO-ISRAEL.—"A model of excellence."—See BANNER OF ISRAEL, Nov. 27, 1878, p. 398.

Apply to Geo. W. Staniland, Castle-street, Sheffield.

LECTURE.

REV. H. MARRIOTT, M.A., has prepared a LECTURE on ROMANS XI., illustrated by diagrams, and establishing, in a convincing manner, the Identity of the English with the House of Ephraim—that is, Israel.

For terms, apply to Amberley Rectory, Stroud.

THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL.

ALL who are interested in this great Identity Question are respectfully solicited to send CONTRIBUTIONS to the undersigned, to defray the expenses of providing Halls for a Course of LECTURES in the the metropolis, by Mr. E. HINE, in order to bring this most important subject before the notice of the great bulk of the people.

Mr. T. LOVELAND, Shoreham, Sevenoaks, Kent.
Mr. A. J. STEPHENSON, 123, Newgate-street, London.

BOOKS.

MODERN HIEROGLYPHICS OF THE APOCALYPSE AND GREAT PYRAMID, illustrated by ten plates, with explanations, by A WATCHER. To which is prefixed an introduction, showing how recent events in the Eastern Question and the Church have worked towards a fulfilment of the theory suggested in the book.—October, 1878.

Price 15s. A few copies coloured by the Author £1 1s.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Price 6d.; or with illustrative map, 8d.

BRITAIN (OR ISRAEL) THE FIFTH AND LAST, AND THE UNCONQUERABLE EMPIRE. By JOHN GILDER SHAW.

Price 3d.; post free, 3½d.

CHRONOLOGICAL CHART OF BRITISH VICTORIES OVER THE CONTINENTAL POWERS, ranging from the battle of Cressy (1346), to our last victory, the taking of Sebastopol, Sept. 8, 1855. Arranged by J. G. SHAW, of Leeds.

"We trust Mr. Shaw's labour in preparing this paper may be appreciated by the public and be largely sold."—Banner of Israel.

Price 1d.; post free, 1½d.

GOD'S LOVE FOR ISRAEL, A GUARANTEE THAT HE WILL FULFIL HIS PROMISES TO ISRAEL.

Shortly will pe published, price 6d.

RESULTS OF ISRAEL'S OBEDIENCE. A review of the successive steps which have led to the present condition of Britain (or Israel), the Fifth and Last Empire.

London: Published by Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; and may be had of the Author, 20 Park-row, Leeds, and of all booksellers.

10th Thousand. Price 6d., post free 7d.

CUI BONO? or, The Political, Social, and Religious Uses of the British being Identical with Israel. A Lecture by Edward Hine.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

ASSOCIATIONS, ETC.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

Temporary Office:—
20, WARWICK LANE, LONDON, E.C.

Chairman of Committee:—
E. W. BIRD, Esq. (Philo-Israel), Bristol.

Committee:—
LE COMTE BENTINCK, Grosvenor-square, W.
CAPTAIN BAYLEY, R.N., Streatham, S.W.
JOHN S. ANDERSON, Esq., Upper Norwood, S.E.
ROBERT BANKS, Esq., London, E.C.
JOHN T. FLETCHER, Esq., Upper Norwood, S.E.
REV. F. R. A. GLOVER, M.A., St. James, W.
H. L. GUERRIER, Esq., Tooting, S.W.
W. H. GUEST, Esq., London, E.C.
CHARLES HORNER, Esq., Mortlake, S.W.
DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, Esq., St. John's-wood, N.W.
H. H. PAIN, Esq., Bromley, Kent, S.E.
DR. H. HODSON RUGG, St. John's-wood, N.W.
(With power to add to their number.)

Treasurer:—
DR. H. HODSON RUGG, 1, Grove-rd, St. John's-wood, N.W.

Hon. Secretary:—
REV. JAMES BILLINGTON.

This Association has been established to bind in closer union the many friends who rejoice in having a portion with the long Lost Tribes of the House of Israel; also to extend the knowledge of the truth that the Anglo-Saxon races are now identified with those Lost Tribes of the House of Israel. These objects, it is thought, will be best accomplished by means of Drawing Room and Public Meetings, by Sermons, Lectures, Bible Readings, by the diffusion of Literature upon the subject, and by such other ways and means as the Committee may from time to time determine.

The Honorary Secretary or the Treasurer will be glad to receive the names of friends wishing to join the Association or to subscribe to its Funds.

Members' Annual Subscriptions to be not less than 2s. 6d. per annum.

Donations and Subscriptions are urgently needed to carry on the work.

Friends who will arrange for, or assist in, the arrangements for Lectures in their respective localities, under the auspices of the Association, are requested to address the Hon. Secretary at the office of the Association, from whom all particulars, and every assistance for the effective carrying out of the same, may be obtained.

J. BILLINGTON, Hon. Sec.

SHEFFIELD ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

JOHN T. GOTT, Esq., will LECTURE in the ALBERT HALL, WEDNESDAY, the 15th inst., at 8 o'clock. Subject:—"The Chosen People" Members please notice alteration of day in this instance. Wednesday instead of the second Monday.

THE EASTERN QUESTION.

Now ready, price One penny, post free 1½d. One dozen copies, post free 1s. 100 copies 6s., post free 7s.

THE IDENTITY OF THE BRITISH NATION WITH THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. THE CLUE TO THE EASTERN QUESTION. By C. W. E.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row

Second edition, sixth thousand.

Fancy paper covers, 6d.; cloth, gilt lettered, flush, 1s.

THE HISTORY OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL: How They Were Lost, and How They Were Found. Told for the children. By PHILO-ISRAEL. Adapted for use by parents, Sunday School and other teachers, with questions on the chapters added.

"The History of the House of Israel—told for the children—is a very valuable addition to our children's libraries. It gives a clear account of all the chief points of interest, in language suited to the comprehension of children, and ought to be in the hands of every mother and teacher who believes in our Identity with Israel. It supplies a want I have long felt as the mother of a large family."

For favourable notices of this work by Professor Piazzi Smyth, John T. Gott, Esq., and others, see handbills. W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

Now ready.—Price 2s. 6d., cloth, gilt edges. Paper covers 1s. 6d. Post free for 33 or 20 stamps.

THE PILLAR OF WITNESS. A Scriptural View of the GREAT PYRAMID. By the late Commander B. W. TRACEY, R.N.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; W. H Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed:—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, 5, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 8, 1879.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. III. No. 107. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 15, 1879. [ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

PAGE
The Great Pyramid Grand Gallery's Low Exit Passage as Bearing on the Great Gate, Israel's Possession in Peace 29
Great Pyramid Science Again; The Earth's Mean Destiny. By Piazzi Smyth 30
Israel Keepeth the Sabbath 31
The Preparation of "The Way of the Kings of the East" (Rev. xvi. 12) 32
Security of the People of God. By Rev. J. L. V. Cachemaille.—Part III. 32
Sir Michael Hicks-Beach Gives Blind Evidence 33
When Did Israel Become "Obedient" To Observe and Do" God's Will 34
The Head, and Not the Tail; Above Only, and Not Beneath—Even in Respect to Painting 34
Correspondence 35

THE GREAT PYRAMID GRAND GALLERY'S LOW EXIT PASSAGE AS BEARING ON THE GREAT GATE, ISRAEL'S POSSESSION IN PEACE.

OUR readers, no doubt, recollect our leading article, headed "Russian Tactics," in No. 100, of the 27th November, 1878. We then, quoting a German official newspaper, said that there were rumours in the air of projects for the transfer of the protectorate of Constantinople to the British, with the full consent of Russia, the quid pro quo being the permission of the Powers, including our own nation, to Russia, to retain Eastern Roumelia with Bulgaria, in direct contravention of the terms of the Berlin Treaty. The report seemed incredible, and we gave it with some reflections arising therefrom, for what they were worth, to our readers. In the Standard newspaper, however, of the 12th December, 1878, we have the same reports repeated, coming this time from St. Petersburg, as the statement of the Berlin correspondent of the Novoe Vremja, and the reiteration is accompanied by details of facts, time, and place, which appear to give it an air of verisimilitude which it seems difficult to put aside. The extract is as follows :—

THE EASTERN QUESTION.

St. Petersburg, Dec. 11.

The Berlin correspondent of the Novoe Vremja states that the communication made by Count Münster, the German Ambassador in London, to Lord Salisbury, referred to by Mr. Bourke in the House of Commons on Monday last, consisted of a proposal that, in consideration of England permitting the unification of Eastern Roumelia with Bulgaria, the British Government should assume the protectorate of Constantinople and occupy certain neighbouring positions. The correspondent adds that negotiations on this subject still continue.

We do not imagine, however, that the above can be regarded yet as authentic, and in the face of the constant assertions by Lord Beaconsfield and others of the Ministry that the stipulations of the Berlin Treaty must and certainly shall be carried into effect, it is difficult to imagine that the British Government could be even entertaining proposals now which will utterly subvert and annul the Berlin decisions, and substitute for them arrangements which have not certainly yet obtained the sanction of the Powers. What we want our readers to observe, however, is this: that first from Berlin, and now from St. Petersburg, come rumours of impending events, the chief of which is the transfer of "the Gate of all the Gates" to the protectorate of Great Britain IN PEACE; and that arrangements are spoken of connected therewith, which will bring Russian territory so close to Constantinople that the latter would become thereby the very "Gate" of the possessions of the enemies of Great Britain! We who have long contemplated the "Scriptural future of Israel," are aware that to us, as God's people, Constantinople must be transferred ere long, and that in peace. We know also that "the peerless Porte" is to be, when possessed by Israel, "the Gate of her enemies;" and the enemies of the British Israelites to-day, as the whole world knows, are located, not only in the mountains of Afghanistan, but also near the Bosphorus, being the Russian Northern King—the Gog of Scripture. He recognises himself, already, judging from the statements of Russian journalists, as the enemy of the Empress of India—the King of the South. The facts, therefore, are exactly parallel with those the Scripture record, and point distinctly and surely to the near fulfilment of God's Word written regarding the destinies (how different!) of these two great Powers.

Some of our friends, we see, are beginning to anticipate, from reflections connected with the low passage of exit from the Southern end of the Great Pyramid grand gallery, that the passage in question, being meant for the march of the British Israelites alone, there is in store for our race in 1882, and thereafter, wars and troubles, punishments and chastisements—which that very low passage, they believe, indicates as Israel's portion—for such of that race as shall then be among those who are the unfaithful sons—the sleeping virgins—the openly wicked, ungodly, and rebellious sons of Jacob. We are quite well aware that Piazzi Smyth, at p. 513 of his work on "Our Inheritance" (3rd edit.), considers the low passage in question to symbolise "the unutterable anguishes of those most exceptionable days to come," described in Mark xiii. 19. We have always, we must submit with deference, been accustomed to ascribe that entire portion of Scripture, from ver. 14 to 23, to the period of the destruction of Jerusalem by Titus—and the troubles of the yet future time to our Lord's prophecy as contained in ver. 24 to 37. The internal evidence of ver. 24 ("after that tribulation") seems to us to support our view. We urge it the rather because, to expect wars and the horrors thereon attendant, for Israel, or for any portion of our race in 1881-82, is surely to run counter to our Lord's own assurances in Luke xxi. 9—28; Mark xiii. 7; Isa. xxvi. 20, 21, and other portions of God's Word. These would become utterly falsified and void if, when the Gentile afflictions take place, Israel is to suffer too. What the low passage Southward of the grand gallery may signify, we cannot yet anticipate. The Lord has not revealed it. While, therefore, we fully admit, with our present light, that Israel must pass through that low and "excruciating" passage, we do not see that war need any more be symbolised by that narrow lane than war was particularly the result of Israel's journeying through the 1542 inches of the entry passage into the grand gallery from the North (war certainly followed Israel all through the grand gallery epoch as a fact!). That it may mean the cessation of all Israelitish means to benefit the world by Gospel effort, we believe. That it will be the signal for wars, bloodshed, and the awful terrors which these scourges bring in their train, we do not believe; and with God's Word in our hand to lead us to more joyous anticipations for our country, we intend to hold to our belief till events show us we are wrong. We believe, rather, that that narrow and difficult passage may symbolise the troubles which the whole earth awaits now in terror. But when Israel passes through it, they will find, as the Twelve Tribes did in Egypt while the avenging angel passed over Goshen, and when they journeyed through the Red Sea by the narrow lane of the water-bounded terrific road which led them into safety, that the passage, if fearful to contemplate beforehand, is lighted by the glory of Israel's God, is defended by the chariots of Israel, also by the horsemen thereof, and is for them as safe and secure a road as the Red Sea proved to their forefathers sheltered in the hollow of Jehovah's hand!

Digitized by Google

This view we recommend to our readers for their adoption. We see that, for that portion of our race who are now doubtless unworthy to stand before the Son of Man at His appearing, "the new covenant" and the outpouring of the Holy Spirit promised to Israel just at the very crisis when "the enemy cometh in like a flood," will amply suffice to meet their case. But will not this lead to unclean living now, and embolden men to trust to the mercy so soon to appear, to live the while in open sin? Nay! who can secure such an one life for a single hour? Who can guarantee to that bold sinner that he shall see to-morrow's dawn? The prospects we anticipate cannot, therefore, justify any one continuing in sin; but they are a call, on the contrary, to repentance, because obdurate continuance in violation of God's law, in the near prospect of such mercies as are in store for this nation, is likely to call down God's vengeance on the individual, whose case is surely depicted, with his justly-deserved doom, in Matt. xxiv. 48—51!

GREAT PYRAMID SCIENCE AGAIN;

THE EARTH'S MEAN DENSITY.

By Piazzi Smyth, Astronomer-Royal for Scotland.

During the last four years our readers have probably heard enough, though by no means the last, of what modern science has been doing through means of numerous expeditions to all parts of the world at overwhelming national expense, to improve its determination of the sun's mean distance from the earth. The reputed quantity some twenty years ago was so faulty that the Great Pyramid theory could not then be worked out; but the results now being procured from the latest observations are coming so very close to the ancient and primeval stone record that we may safely leave the scientists of all countries during the few remaining years of this Dispensation to improve their own determinations, if they can, a little further, and not shake the Great Pyramid's sun-distance at all.

Another question, however, of a related kind has now cropped up, equally connected with the science and very foundation of all earth commensurable weights and measures. This new, and yet not altogether unknown, question, is that of "The Earth's Mean Density," and is something still more refined and difficult than even the sun-distance for modern science to measure accurately, and therefore quite out of the question for anyone, unaided by Divine inspiration, to have succeeded in at the date of the building of the primeval Great Pyramid.

In fact, this "Mean Density," which, taken in conjunction with the already accomplished ascertainment of the size and shape of the earth, gives its weight or mass absolutely, is something so abstruse, so profound, that even at the beginning of the present century the Savants of Paris, in making up their metrical system of weights and measures, and intending it to be appropriately and harmoniously earth-commensurable in everything, yet shirked the awful scientific difficulty with regard to earth-weight; and thereby left an enormous hiatus in their system, to become more and more an eye-sore with every successive year of the growth of true science, and every successive approach that civilised man makes to the true numerical expression (in terms of pure water) for the mean-density, or specific gravity, of the earth. Not of a bit of mere soil, or even mountain rock, such as France, Germany, Spain, or any other French-metrical country is superficially composed of, but of the earth-ball as a whole; or of all the wondrous internal contents of this planet-globe we live on, from its surface down to its very centre, which no man hath seen, but only God alone, who Himself made it in the beginning.

Wildly various have been hitherto the results of all the grandest and most costly series of experiments which have been made of late years by men and nations to obtain some idea of the numerical expression for this grand quantity deep in the secrets of nature. Up to last year, the latest experiment in date was, I believe, the attempt by the best officers and men of the Ordnance Survey Corps to obtain the long-desired cynosure, through means of a long series of astronomical observations whereby they determined first of all the attraction of the Edinburgh hill, Arthur's Seat, on the plumb-line; and then, when they had waded through all the further intricate calculations required, they brought out as their earth-density result, or even if a little more, was certainly not so great as 5·71; but at either of these quantities it was much ridiculed in some circles of London society for being far too great. Within the past few weeks, however, a new determination by a supposed new and improved method of modern science has been published by the very Royal Society, the hot-bed of anti-national leanings towards the French Metrical System, in the midst of London itself; and this new determination is given out as being 5·69.

5·316.

The Great Pyramid's expression was

5·70,

Could anything well have been more encouraging for Pyramid students—viz., to see modern science, after indulging in sneering contempt for several years, at last come so very close, though not yet quite up to, the anciently monumentalised quantity? Hardly! Though it must still be remembered that this 5·69, though printed and published in a book, is not a final and fixed quantity, nor even very surely arrived at; for the separate measurements, of which it is the mean, exhibit considerable variations among themselves, while further apparatus is proposed to be constructed, and more measures made.

I had not, therefore, intended to take any immediate notice

Digitized by Google

of this 5·69 affair. But while I, perhaps too quietly, passed it by, a scientific and most upright friend in the Society thought the matter exceedingly important; and not knowing that I had already seen the printed account, he very kindly copied out all the crucial part of the memoir with neatness and perspicuity, and sent it to me in the form of a letter: which, having duly received, I can no longer think of holding back such enforced news from the public gaze in the BANNER, and give it verbatim, as below:—

"MEAN DENSITY OF THE EARTH.

"Proceedings of the Royal Society (London). Vol. xxviii., No. 190. Meeting, November 21st, 1878. On a method of using the balance with great delicacy, and on its employment to determine the mean density of the earth. By J. H. Poynting, B.A., Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge, Demonstrator in the Physical Laboratory, Owen's College, Manchester.

"After describing the apparatus and modus operandi, the author gives the results of eleven observations to determine the mean density of the earth, as follows :—

1.	... ...	May 20	5·393.
2.	... ...	„ 23	5·570.
3.	... ...	„ 24	4·415.
4.	.. ...	„ 28	7·172.
5.	... ...	„ 29	5·109.
6.	... ...	„ 29	6·075.
7.	... ...	„ 30	5·882.
8.	... ...	„ 30	6·336.
9.	... ..	June 5	5·977.
10.	... ...	„ 5	5·580.
11.	... ...	„ 6	5·100.

"The resulting mean density of the earth is

"5.69.

"If the eleven determinations be supposed to have equal weight, the probable error of their value is 0·15.

"The various determinations differ very much among themselves, but they seem to me (J. H. Poynting) sufficiently close to justify the hope that, with a large balance and a large weight—which will not be so easily affected by air currents, and with greater precautions to prevent those air currents—a good determination of the mean density of the earth may ultimately be obtained by this method."

To the above, which is so eminently a testimony from without, I merely add the following paragraph, extracted from page 162 of the third edition of "Our Inheritance in the Great Pyramid," 1877:—

"EARTH'S DENSITY NUMBER IN THE GREAT PYRAMID.

"Now the Pyramid's earth-mean density comes out, if at all, most simply and to an accuracy at once of three places of figures certain; from the cubic contents of the coffer in Pyramid inches, divided by the tenth part of fifty inches cubed. Whence, trusting to my measures, it is: 71,250 divided by 12,500, the quotient being 5·70—a number which modern science may confirm at some future day, and does meanwhile include near the very centre of its best results thus far; while the grand 5·7 of the seven stones forming the fifth and topmost course of the walls of this king's chamber (containing the coffer), crown the conclusion on every side."

NOTICE.—We have received from Mr. Charles Horner a very remarkable and startling paper in three parts, entitled "The Great Pyramid Declares the Revelation of the Lord Jesus Christ to be Close at Hand." We hope to publish this paper in a single number of the BANNER. We deem it far too important to divide it over three weeks.—ED.

ISRAEL KEEPETH SABBATH.

WE do not now enter on the vexed question of the correct God-appointed Sabbath-day, but accepting the fact that this nation, being Christian Israel, nationally and by law, holds the first day of the week in sacred reverence as "the Lord's-day," in obedience to the command, we desire to submit to our readers how fully and clearly the Times newspaper, as a secular journal, bears testimony to the fact that this nation alone of all the people of the earth "keepeth Sabbath."

The subject was Mr. Peter Taylor's motion, in the House of Commons, for the opening of the national museums and galleries on Sundays. Mr. Taylor was unable to understand why the British, unlike the continental nations, should, on the Sunday, be deprived of the instruction and pleasure which open museums and such like places of amusements must bring, he considers, in their train, to those who have access to them on Sundays. But what says the Times on June 9, 1878, as the reply of the British public to this demand? It is simply this. The British practice has been always, and at all times, to keep holy the Sabbath or Sunday. The journal goes on to quote the public opinion of the nation on the subject in the following terms :—

Our present mode of Sabbath observance is our standing tradition, and one of the most characteristic practices of English society. Our theatres and other places of private amusement are closed by law, and every public institution is either at rest or reduces its work to the smallest amount possible. In London we have no letters on Sundays. Our railways run, indeed, excursion trains at certain times in the year to enable people to have a taste of the country or the sea who could hardly get it otherwise; but the general service of trains is reduced as much as possible. The streets of London on a Sunday are a strong contrast to those of a great continental town, and bespeak a population who are taking a day's respite from business of all kinds. The closing of our national museums and art galleries is simply an incident of this general rule, which we believe to be eminently conducive to the health, the good order, and the mental and moral balance of our population. Consequently, as a mere matter of national habit and practice, the burden of proof lies upon any one who proposes to interfere with the existing rule. The presumption is, that museums and galleries, like other public institutions and places of amusement, should be closed on Sundays. It is presumptively best for all concerned—for the people at large no less than for those who have charge of them—if only as maintaining the general principle. There ought, therefore, to be some proved case of public interest, something amounting to a practical necessity, before the rule is infringed. To open these institutions on Sunday by a formal Parliamentary vote must of necessity have an extensive reflex effect. Where is the line to be drawn between public and private exhibitions—between galleries and theatres, for instance? In point of fact, in the parallel cases abroad, to which Mr. Peter Taylor points, the line is not drawn, and we may be quite sure that, if drawn in this country, it could not be maintained. We should make a complete breach in the defences which now protect the Sunday as a day of rest, and should have definitely abandoned our general rule. Hampton Court and Kew are wholly exceptional cases. They are like the parks, and are opened as a bit of the very air of heaven itself. Above all, so long as they are exceptions the rule is maintained. But once throw open by resolution of the House of Commons all national museums and picture galleries on Sundays, and it is hard to see what institutions, public or private, we could insist on closing.

Here, then, is the purely secular mind, quite irrespective of our status as Israel, and unaware of the obligations God Himself has placed on us as that people (to keep the Sabbath-day as a sign of our Identity and for our own good), declaring,—

1. That the British practice is Sunday observance.

2. That in this matter we are in a marked way separated and severed from continental nations.

3. That if we opened museums by Act of Parliament—i.e., by law—our distinctive character as a Sunday-observing people must vanish, and determine.

4. That in foreign parts the line of distinction between museums and theatres is not drawn.

Digitized by Google

5. That once Parliament and the laws of our land desecrate the day by opening the one, all kinds of other places would be opened too, just as they are abroad.

6. That, as a matter of fact, the streets of London on a Sunday are a strong contrast to those of a great continental town, and prove we are a people who "rest" one day in seven.

The proof, then, is complete. Israel (or the British) keepeth Sabbath, and hence one of our most glorious Identities.

THE PREPARATION OF "THE WAY OF THE KINGS OF THE EAST."—Rev. xvi. 12.

We take the following from The Colonies and India, of Nov. 16, 1878, a weekly newspaper as full in every issue of Identity evidence as any journal can be. It is devoted, we mean, to the record of the progress of the whole British Empire of "the nation and company of nations," as well as of the heathen Empire of the "Empress of India." It is a paper we strongly recommend to our readers as being full of interest to them as Israelites. Since it is decidedly a "blind witness," the testimony the paper affords to our origin is very valuable. It is to be had at threepence per number weekly, at all the railway bookstalls. Regarding "The Way of the Kings of the East," it speaks as follows:—

An Alternative Route to India.

The importance which, under existing circumstances, attaches to the commercial development of the Turkish Empire in Asia lends considerable interest to all the reports of our consular agents in that part of the world, and this is more especially the case with that from Consul-General Nixon, which the Foreign Office have just made public, on the trade and commerce of Bagdad for the year 1877-8. Having stated that trade is in a much healthier condition than previously, though he considers that, until the edict of the Shah of Persia, prohibiting his subjects from visiting the shrines in the neighbourhood of Bagdad, be rescinded, the full prosperity of that city will not be assured, Mr. Nixon proceeds to remark that the country is capable of unlimited development, and that one of the first steps to that end would be the construction of railways between Bagdad and the foot of the Persian hills, and another from Bagdad to Alexandretta, via Mosul. This would give an alternative route to India, which is much required, and would be more expeditious than that via the Suez Canal. Now that Kurrachee is being linked with the railway system of India, swift steamers from that port would reach Busreh (1,547 miles) in six days; from Busreh to Bagdad river steamers would run with ease in seventy-two hours—the passage now made by the Euphrates Steam Navigation Company's steamers—and, at the outside, another sixty hours by rail from Bagdad to Alexandretta would land passengers on the shore of the Mediterranean in eleven-and-a-half days; and this time, no doubt, might be shortened. So sure is Mr. Nixon of the necessity of adopting some such scheme as this that he goes so far as to say that it is a mere matter of expense, which we shall one day have to incur if we wish to keep pace with other great Powers. The railway from Busreh to Bagdad might, he thinks, be an after consideration, when the line from the latter place to Alexandretta was completed; as the River Tigris affords a highway which, if traversed by steamers of higher power than those now used, would immensely decrease the time occupied in transit. It may here be incidentally mentioned that the most powerful steamer now on the Tigris is only of 100-horse power. Mr. Nixon considers that, if the railway were constructed from Bagdad to Alexandretta, it would pay exceedingly well, and British commerce would be greatly benefited, as its construction would cause Bagdad to become the great mart, and drive Russian goods out of the markets of Persia and Southern Asia, as they could not compete in prices with our goods, owing to their having such an expensive land-carriage to defray. The non-construction of this railway to Alexandretta is, according to Mr. Nixon, a mere consideration of expense; but in his opinion there can be little doubt that by means of its traffic in light goods and passengers it would pay a handsome dividend. The cost of a railway from Busreh, at the head of the Persian Gulf, to Alexandretta on the Mediterranean Sea, has been estimated at £7,225,000, being at the rate of £8,500 per mile; but deducting from this the distance between Busreh and Bagdad, which is 250 miles as the crow flies, it would be necessary to expend in the first instance the sum of £5,100,000 on the 600 miles from Bagdad to Alexandretta. As an additional reason for the construction of such a line, Mr. Nixon urges that the cost of any future war in Asia would be much reduced if this scheme could be carried out.

With regard to the nature of the country to be traversed, the region between Bagdad and Mosul is a dead level; the expenditure on bridges would be inconsiderable. There is a stone ridge across the Tigris, near Mosul, by means of which a bridge could be built; and, indeed, there are other points between Bagdad and Mosul which offer good facilities for bridging the Tigris, if a shorter line were considered desirable; but Mr. Nixon points out that the bridge over the Tigris might be entirely set aside, if the terminus were located on the right bank of the river at Bagdad, and the line run thence direct to Aleppo. The advantage of this particular route would be, that the line would be flanked on one side by the Tigris and on the other by the Euphrates. The harmonising and civilising influences that a railway through Arabia would initiate are considerable; and the development of this country, with its vast resources and its enormous ancient system of canal irrigation, is, according to our authority, well worthy of the attention of our statesmen. The cost of construction of a railway line as given above (£8,500 per mile), seems to Mr. Nixon to be unusually high, as nearly the whole route from Bagdad to Aleppo is a flat between the rivers; and he is persuaded that it could be made for much less, especially as there is water-carriage from London to Bagdad for railway material.

It may be hoped that the explorations and surveys which Commander Cameron is now about to commence in the part of the world referred to in the preceding remarks will throw such additional light on this subject as may facilitate the forming of an alternative route to India at an early date.

SECURITY OF THE PEOPLE OF GOD.

By the late Rev. J. L. V. Cachemaille.

(Continued from page 25.)

PART III.

From the period of the Reformation, many religious societies have been established in England—not only for the benefit of the land, but for the purpose of spreading the knowledge of the Gospel throughout the world. All these societies have prospered, and are at this day in full operation, bearing throughout the globe the testimony of Jesus Christ. It is to these societies and their agents that may be ascribed the religious movement and the revival which, even to this moment, is taking place throughout Europe. It is in England that the source and cause is to be found; and, however extended and deep-rooted it may seem to be on the continent, it would no longer exist if England were wanting in her assistance. The eyes of all the Christians in Europe are still turned towards England as towards a parent. To her they make all their wants known—their object being the spiritual good of their people. The pecuniary help furnished by England is, humanly speaking, the chief instrument in evangelising Europe and a great part of the world. In adverting to what God has permitted England to do, and to what she has done, on the continent, we see that, notwithstanding the plagues by which these countries have been visited, God has still distinguished His own people, and vouchsafed to them a remarkable protection. In fact, it is from the beginning of the pouring out of the vials that the extraordinary religious revival in Europe already mentioned may be dated. Wars and convulsions, civil and political, diverted the general attention from religion; then the calamities which befel Rome, her Pope, her clergy, and her Church, gave full and entire liberty to the sincere Christians to meet together, and to attend to their common spiritual concerns, to form associations, Churches, societies, to distribute religious tracts and Bibles, and to teach the pure Gospel; thus to protest against Rome, and to testify to the true God, and to His Son

Digitized by Google

Jesus Christ, whom Rome had denied. It is a well-attested historical fact that, up to the year 1852, not only Protestantism, but also the pure Gospel of Christ, have made a wonderful progress, which nothing has been able to arrest; that the plagues inflicted upon the worshippers of the beast, however grievous, have helped to develop, to spread, and to fortify this progress; that there has been a magnificent revival upon the continent of Europe, and that, with few exceptions, those who have been the object of this revival have enjoyed great rest and liberty, and that even many modern Egyptians have joined themselves to them, and have been inspired with admiration for the God of the Protestants, as the Egyptians formerly had held Moses in admiration, considering him a great man, joining themselves to the Israelites, and separating from their own countrymen. So that a multitude accompanied the children of Israel when they came out of Egypt. Who does not know the number of Papists who have forsaken their abominable idolatries, and have joined the Protestants and Evangelical Church throughout Europe? So that the Protestant population has more than doubled, prospering, instead of diminishing—thus admirably corresponding to the type in Egypt. The more Pharaoh sought to diminish the number of Israelites, the more they multiplied. The more the Pope and his agents have tried to diminish the number of Protestants in multiplying priests and Popish missions, the more have Protestants increased and become a powerful Church. We can no longer pursue the parallel between the two peoples of God, not having yet arrived at the final pouring out of the vials, the seventh having just begun. Moreover, it is in the future that some of the most solemn and dreadful scenes must be expected. We have still to wait for the antitype of the destroying angel when he slew all the first-born in the land of Egypt, and when there was a dreadful cry throughout the country; there is still the overthrowing of Pharaoh and his army in the Red Sea, the final victory over the enemies of Israel, and their total overthrow, so that from that moment they would cease to molest them.

These events seem to be prefigured and indicated by the fall and burning of the great city (Rev. xviii.). By the harvest and the vintage of the earth (Rev. xiv. 16—20). And by the destruction of the great army (Rev. xix. 11—21). The cry that was heard in Egypt upon the death of the first-born seems to find its antitype in the cries and lamentations of the kings, the merchants, and the seafaring men at the destruction of the great Babylon (Rev. xviii. 9—19). It does not appear that, as yet, there has been any indication of the beginning of these judgments, therefore nothing can be said about them. But, on the other hand, what happened to Israel is a type for us: we may foresee what will happen to believers when these dreadful events shall take place. When the destroying angel passes over and kills the first-born of Egypt, Israel is unmolested, according to the word of God: "But against any of the children of Israel shall not a dog move his tongue against man nor beast: that ye may know how that the Lord doth put a difference between the Egyptians and Israel" (Exod. xi. 7). When the angel passes over, all the Israelites in the land of Goshen shut themselves up in their houses, according to the commandment of God. Under the antitype, God gives the same commandment: "Come out of her, My people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues" (Rev. xviii. 4). "And come, My people, enter thou into thy chambers, and shut thy doors about thee; hide thyself as it were for a little moment, until the indignation be overpast. For, behold, the Lord cometh out of His place to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity" (Isa. xxvi. 20, 21). It is, then, probable that all true Christians will have fled out of the kingdom of the beast, and that the greatest number will have taken refuge in England, if she be the antitype of the land of Goshen. This does not mean that all the inhabitants of England shall then be true disciples of Christ, no more than that all the Israelites who dwelt in the land of Goshen were all true Israelites. For we read in the book of the prophet Ezekiel (xx. 5—9) what was the state of Israel when God came to deliver him, and to grant him such glorious protection: "In the day that I chose Israel, and that I made Myself known to them in the land of Egypt, when I lifted up My hand unto them, saying, I am the Lord your God. In the day that I lifted up Mine hands unto them to bring them forth of the land of Egypt into a land that I had espied for them: flowing with milk and honey which is the glory of all lands. Then said I unto them, Cast ye away every man the abominations of his eyes, and defile not yourselves with the idols of Egypt; I am the Lord your God. But they rebelled against Me, and would not hearken to Me; they did not every man cast away the abominations of their eyes, neither did they forsake the idols of Egypt; then I said, I will pour out My fury upon them, to accomplish My anger against them in the midst of the land of Egypt. But I wrought for My name's sake, that it should not be polluted before the heathen among whom they were, in whose sight I made Myself known to them in bringing them forth of the land of Egypt." We see by these verses that God made Himself known to Israel, and told them that He had come to deliver them out of Egypt. Therefore, He tells them to separate themselves from all idolatry—a proof that Israel was then idolatrous and defiled by the idols of Egypt, therefore he was not a faithful worshipper of the true God.

(To be continued.)

SIR MICHAEL HICKS-BEACH GIVES BLIND EVIDENCE.

"Thou shalt reign over many nations, but they shall not reign over thee."—Deut. xv. 6.

SIR MICHAEL HICKS-BEACH must be added to the list of the "blind witnesses." Very pointed and clear is his testimony that we are Israel. In a Parliamentary Paper, issued from the Colonial Office, on the 14th August, 1878, containing a truculent protest made by Messrs. Krüger and Joubert, delegates from the Transvaal, renewing the objections of some unruly spirits of that territory to the late annexation of their land to the British Empire, Sir Michael Hicks-Beach administered to these gentlemen a sharp rebuke. As easily might such a step as the annexation be undone, as the inflowing of the tide into some mighty estuary be stayed by word of command. The Colonial Secretary said to these threatening emissaries from what is now British territory, "The experience of this Empire, which comprises among the Queen's most loyal subjects, not only great numbers of Dutch, but also French, and Germans, and persons of almost every nationality, forbids me to entertain any such idea" as resistance by force to the British Government now established in the Transvaal, but threatened by these gentlemen! We hope our readers see in these words a grand and perfectly irresistible Identity of our race with Israel, predicted in Deut. xv. 6, and which Sir Michael Hicks-Beach very properly adduces as a fact beyond all controversy true of the British Sovereign now representing this mighty nation. "Her Majesty," he says, "reigns over loyal subjects, many in number, who are of almost every nationality — Dutch, Germans, French." Hindus (also he might have added), Arabs, Jews, Italians, Spaniards, Caffres, Chinese, Dyaks, Maories, &c.; but nowhere, the wide world over, can any one find a community of the British race resigned to exist as willing subjects of any alien prince or potentate whatsoever! Surely this fact, unique and unparalleled anywhere, must satisfy the most sceptical that we British are Israel—Sir Michael Hicks-Beach being now our "blind witness" of the facts.

Digitized by Google

WHEN DID ISRAEL BECOME "OBEDIENT" "TO OBSERVE AND DO" GOD'S WILL?

We are often asked at what period we, as a nation, became "obedient" to God's commands, and, as Israel, "diligently hearkened unto the voice of the Lord our God to observe and do all His commandments" (Deut. xv. 5, xxviii. 1—13). We reply, that during the blessed Reformation of religion in the sixteenth century, this great national change in our attitude towards God undoubtedly took place. From that time the rise of the British in the scale of nations has been steady, continuous, and sure. From that epoch our God has conferred on us blessing upon blessing, till now there is not one of the magnificent cluster of benedictions enumerated in Deut. xxviii. 1—14, or xv. 6, which we do not possess in a national sense, more or less, with a promise of great increase in the time to come.

On such a point as this, which, if historically untrue, any one can at once denounce and deny, we prefer to rely upon the testimony of one of our blind witnesses, and, therefore, we shall call the writings of the late Dean Goode into our court, and see what it was he embodied in a useful tract some time ago, in regard to the anniversary of the accession of Queen Elizabeth, on November 17, 1558. If we mistake not, the Dean then gave us clear evidence of the repentance and turning to the Lord of this nation, nationally, at a certain very defined date—the day of the accession of the great Protestant Queen of England, and that date we claim to be the one from which the British nation, having "turned to the Lord," became, in a national sense, "Israel obedient," henceforth "diligently hearkening to the voice of the Lord, to observe and to do all the commandments of the Lord their God."

The Dean said on this point as follows :—

> Among all the blessings which the Divine goodness can bestow upon a nation, what is there which can be compared with deliverance from the chains of a baneful superstition, accompanied by the enjoyment of the pure light of the Gospel, and the unrestricted use of God's Holy Word? Whatever may remain to be accomplished for its welfare, these are the seeds from which, if nurtured, its welfare will spring. They need only to be developed to bring happiness and prosperity to those to whom they have been given. Now, let me ask those who believe the Reformation to have brought these blessings to this land to look back and ask themselves the question whether they cannot fix upon the very day when, by God's mercy, Rome ceased to have dominion in this country—ceased so as never yet to have been able to resume it—and God's Word became the sole publicly recognised supreme rule of faith and practice. When Mary died, and Elizabeth ascended the throne, Rome's power in this country died, and to this day, so far as the law is concerned, remains dead; and in the place of it, the Word of God obtained its rightful supremacy, "had free course and was glorified." Was this a blessing? Our forefathers thought so, and under this feeling were in the habit, not merely during the reign of Elizabeth, when it might be said that other motives might have influenced them, but for more than a century after, of observing the day of the accession of Queen Elizabeth by having a service in the churches, and other manifestations of thanksgiving.

Since the date of Queen Elizabeth's accession, what are the benefits which have nationally accrued to Israel in the land of her wilderness sojourn, her little sanctuary in the West? The Papacy was nationally abolished, the falsehoods of the Roman Catholic Church were banished from the State Church and formularies, civil and religious liberty have thereby been secured for the whole realm. God's Word has been unlocked, and is the property for free and unrestricted study by every subject of this monarchy. From that date the foundations of the prosperity of Great Britain nationally and commercially were laid, in such wise, that, advancing with uninterrupted success, she is now "the chief of nations," with the greatest Empire subservient to the Crown which the world has ever seen.

In Elizabeth's reign, the heathen Empire of Great Britain was originated by the delivery of the first charter to the East India Company in 1600. Then it was that the destruction of the Spanish Armada (in 1588) taught our fathers that God had entrusted the supremacy of the seas to their hands, and that Jehovah fought for Israel by His tempests.

The era of ocean navigation and of scientific discovery in foreign lands and seas, had its commencement in Elizabeth's reign, when Francis Drake, in 1577, began his notable voyage round the world, and succeeded in performing it. The voyages of Sir Humphrey Gilbert, of John Davis, of Thomas Cavendish, of Merrick, and of Richard Hawkins, all acted and re-acted on British maritime adventure and discovery, and contributed largely to the undisputed supremacy our nation enjoys now at sea, where "Britannia rules the waves."

Since Elizabeth's days, Israel has obtained possession of the "Gates of her enemies," the world-wide over; her population and her wealth have grown alike by enormous abnormal strides, till no other nation can compare with her in either qualification, which goes to make up a nation's greatness.

We are right, then, in saying that the date of Queen Elizabeth's accession was the turning point in Israel's history, when she yielded obedience to Jehovah as a nation. Therefore, from that date God has given her what He promised her in Deut. xxviii. 1—14—namely, "all the blessings which lie at His right hand."

THE HEAD, AND NOT THE TAIL—ABOVE ONLY, AND NOT BENEATH—EVEN IN RESPECT OF PAINTING.

We lately showed that the British were found to excel even in music, though it was little suspected that the nation would be found in that department of artistic science to be not only on a par with the Gentile races of the continent, but far in advance of them, as the competition at the French Exhibition this year amply proved. In regard to the British school of painting, it was not thought, before 1855, that we were in that respect likely to compete with the artists of the continent. "The English contribution of paintings at the Exhibition of 1855," says M. Duranty in one of the French fine art reviews, "was second in numbers only to the French, and came upon continental visitors to the Exhibition as a surprise—nay, it was a revelation—a revelation of a school whose existence was not even suspected, and English painters—but little esteemed till then—obtained a very great success." The great success of 1855 was not repeated at the great Exhibition held in Paris in 1867, for, whereas, in 1855, thirty-four awards were made to British painters, in 1867 there were but four such to them. In 1878 the English or British painters have largely contributed to the competition. Let us hear what the French critic, M. Duranty, has to tell us as to the results. We quote from the Times report of Oct. 30, 1878, which says:—

> With the usual French readiness to generalise, M. Duranty sums up the characters of the various continental and insular schools in two paragraphs. German painting, he says, is sober, restrained, reflective, grave, sometimes profound, sometimes smiling; but it seems to bear the weight of a gray sky and to reflect the cares of a laborious life on a hard and ungrateful soil. Russian art has a bizarre and local flavour. Denmark is provincial. Sweden is French. Norway is German. Holland is English, without English distinction. Belgian art is material. Southern Germany bursts forth into an explosion of colour which has the tone of copper, a noisy fanfare sounded to attract attention. In Switzerland and in Greece, as in the small States of the North, art draws its inspiration either from France or Germany. Italy ferments, but from the confusion will flow a clear and pleasant stream. Spain and Italy are alike. Above all towers English art, original, delicate, scrupulously true, expressive, full of a lofty intellectual "dandyism," full of sensitiveness, grace, and refined tenderness, full of historical sentiment which joins modern things to the lofty accents and strong attractions of the past; an art of penetration, elegance, and poetry, absolutely bound up with the genius of the nation; an art in which melancholy is joined to pleasure, and singularity to precise reality. Throughout Europe there is one tendency stronger than the rest. The modern world is painted. We turn our backs upon nymphs and fauns, and we march with that powerful movement which draws the spirit of our times to precision, observation, science, to the study of nature and of actual life, and which thinks that this modern world is worthy of celebrating itself and of transmitting to posterity its own exact likeness. Though the followers of tradition go into mourning and have many legitimate regrets, they must nevertheless become resigned to facts. The movement is not in their hands, and if France attempted with them to struggle against the current, it might very well happen that she would awake one of these days and find that she was weak and behind the time.

Digitized by Google

We need add no remarks of our own to point the application of the above to our race, God's people Israel. The Lord promised that His chosen nation, if obedient, should be "the head, and not the tail—above only, and not beneath"—and, lo! we find that not only in music, but in painting too, our Gentile foreign critics are obliged to admit, both in 1855 and again in 1878, that "above all towers English art," which is almost a paraphrase of Deut. xxviii. 13; and the French reviewer of the condition of continental art in the present year gives the palm to British painters as "towering above all" others, and distinctly excellent in all points where excellence is discernible.

Reader, let us thank God for our blind witnesses, foreign as well as British, for they all testify that God's Word is true, verbally and literally, when it declares that Israel, being "obedient," shall be "above only," never "beneath"—"the head only, never the tail"—and therefore as in music, so in painting too, towering above all competitors. Israel, praise ye the Lord! "Not for your sakes do I this."

Correspondence.

THE FOUR YEARS' ERROR.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—Some remarks in Canon Farrar's "Life of Christ" (Part i., pages 21—26) give useful hints on the difficulties suggested by "An Enquirer and New Subscriber," and discussed by Mr. Galloway.

He states that "Magi" meant originally "a sect of Median and Persian scholars," and was "subsequently applied to pretended astrologers." He goes on to argue that these astrologers probably came to Jerusalem on the appearance of some "strange sidereal phenomenon . . . . interpreted as the signal of a coming King." That an unusual evanescent star and a combination of planets did occur within a few years of Christ's birth, and this "first led to the discovery that His birth took place three or four years before our received era." A similar combination occurred in 1604, and "by calculating backwards, Kepler discovered that the same conjunction of Jupiter and Saturn, in Pisces, had happened no less than three times in the year A.U.C. 747, and that Mars had joined them in the spring of 748." Canon Farrar does not exactly state his own belief that these stars can be substituted for that star which "went before them till it came and stood over where the young Child was," but he states the facts as worthy of consideration, carefully avoids giving arguments against their acceptance, and distinctly states that it caused the discovery of the supposed error. He also says in a note, "Our era was invented by Dionysius Exiquus, an abbot at Rome, who died in 556." Scant courtesy to a man who lived in the seat of learning of those days, and had ample opportunity of making correct calculations, and to a system which has, by Divine Providence, held its place for 1300 years.

And how about these Median scholars? Why may not "Ollams," of hidden, cast-out Israel, have been the supposed Gentiles to whom the Messiah was thus early manifested? They would seem more likely to flock to the "brightness of His rising" than heathen astrologers. The Gospel was to be first preached to God's own people, and it seems strange that Gentiles should have sought Christ so soon.

A WATCHER.

THE IDENTITY QUESTION.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—I do not know whether it has been observed, in connection with the Identity Question, the somewhat remarkable coincidence of a Jewish Premier named Benjamin D'Israeli being contemporaneous with the Identity revelation. He has also had a prominent part in extending our influence in the East.

If we are not to be identified with the Lost Tribes, where are they? and where shall we find a race or nation more exactly filling the position promised to Israel? Surely no reasonable man would search for Israel amongst the obscure and degraded nations of Central Asia? And is it not reasonable to suppose that a nation such as ours, which is the corner-stone of the earth, should be alluded to in prophecy as conspicuously and unmistakably as is the Church of Rome? How is England alluded to in Scripture if not under the designation of Israel? If an object has been lost sight of for ages, and its locality entirely unknown, surely when that turns up which exactly answers to its description, it is reasonable to conclude that the lost is found?

Yours faithfully,
SPENCER GEO. PERCEVAL.

Henbury, Bristol, Dec. 18, 1878.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—I venture to call the serious attention of Israelite believers to a subject that has been much on my heart lately. I am encouraged so to do from sympathy with the lament of your able correspondent John T. Gott. It runs as follows (BANNER OF ISRAEL, p. 415):—"We have deep sympathy with all who have written on the subject of united prayer, have written thereon ourselves, and have had cause, with others, to despond at our want of success." Again, p. 416: "In the past we have failed, as Identity believers, to band ourselves together for united prayer."

Prayer, I suspect, is too often pointless, too general; it certainly should be decidedly special, under the present state of affairs in our land, but I confess with grief I have not yet found the speciality, I am about to bring before your readers, laid on the hearts of any, who generally are pretty keen to discern the signs of the times.

Let us turn to Jer. iv. and viii., calmly and attentively peruse them, and then fix our attention on iv. 1, and more particularly on viii. 4—6, 9, 11, 14, 15, 18, 22. Our present state appears in these verses to be clearly delineated. The hand of the Lord in chastisement is heavy upon us. Our sins as a nation are upon us, but "no man repented of his wickedness, saying, What have I done?" The hand of God appears to be singularly ignored! In vain may we expect "success" to our prayers while sin is chargeable upon us (Prov. xxviii. 13). Now mark, we have set up "the image of jealousy which provoketh to jealousy" (Ezek. viii. 3); we have "rejected the Word of the Lord" (Jer. viii. 9); our commercial frauds are terrific, committed by men from whom we never expected such atrocities, plunging hundreds of families into sudden desolation; our working classes are sottishly blinded to their hurt by their mischievous leaders—witness the ruinous strikes in Wales, and lately in Sheffield. "No man repented of his wickedness, saying, What have I done?" All are anxious to get out of their scrapes; but as for their sin, and the hand of the Lord, they are utterly ignored—no confession, no contrition of heart! Under such a state of things, how can there be healing, or "success" to prayer? Who, then, but Identity believers, can be the intercessors on behalf of the land? I know of no other body who can, in harmony with their limited views, take up this matter; this subject has a peculiar aptness for the earnest prayers of believing Israelites; for our encouragement I refer to Ezek. ix. 4, Malachi iii. 16, and especially to Dan. ix. I therefore earnestly suggest that, in our household worship, the present state of things in the land be brought before the Lord by honest confession, sincere contrition, and earnest supplication (Dan. ix. 19), and I feel assured that healing will be vouchsafed, and the desired "balm" administered by the great and good Physician!

Let our special prayer then be, that the Lord, in His sovereign mercy, will be pleased to visit the land with the Holy Spirit of light, conviction, confession, humiliation, and supplication!

Yours very truly,
SAMUEL SAMPSON.

Elm-grove, Brighton, Dec. 14th, 1878.

THE GREAT PYRAMID.—Philo-Israel's new pamphlet, entitled "An Elementary Digest or Sketch of the Chief Facts and Teachings of the Great Pyramid," is now ready. [See advt.]

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements
(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O O payable at Ludgate-circus.

BOOKS, ETC.

BANNER OF ISRAEL, VOLUME II. Now ready. May be had, by ordering, of all booksellers, price 7s., beautifully bound in blue cloth, gilt.

Now ready price 7s., post free 6d. extra.

THE SECOND VOLUME OF THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

This volume contains a large number of articles on our Identity with Lost Israel, by the best and most learned writers on the subject. Also many interesting papers on the Great Pyramid by Professor Piazzi Smyth, F.R.S.E., Astronomer-Royal for Scotland, Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A., Major H. A. Tracey, R.A., Charles Horner, Esq., and others. London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

BANNER FREE CIRCULATION FUND.

Philo-Israel £0 10 0
W. H. Peters, Esq. 1 0 0

THE ANGLO-ISRAEL POST BAG.

BY THE RIGHT REV. BISHOP TITCOMB.

WITH AN APPENDIX, embodying the Gates of Israel, as enumerated by Philo-Israel in the "Inquiry."

IN order to meet the repeatedly expressed wish of a large number of friends interested in the Identity Question, to have a cheap edition of the "Anglo-Israel Post Bag," by Bishop Titcomb, the Publisher has pleasure in announcing that he is now issuing an edition in paper covers at the low price of One Shilling and Sixpence per copy; post free 1s. 8d. It is hoped this arrangement will meet the wishes of those persons who have signified their intention of gratuitously circulating the Bishop's work. Identity friends wishing for quantities of the work should communicate direct with the Publisher, who will allow a discount according to the number taken.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

10th Thousand. Price 6d., post free 7d.

CUI BONO? or, The Political, Social, and Religious Uses of the British being Identical with Israel. A Lecture by Edward Hine.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

"He that hath ears to hear, let him hear."

HEALTH, DIET, AND DEAFNESS.
NOISES IN THE EARS.

THE REV. E. J. SILVERTON will send his Health Advocate, giving important advice and particulars on the above subjects, free to any person, showing how Deafness may be at once relieved and ultimately cured. Many most interesting cases are set forth. Thousands of people are hearing Sermons and Lectures today who would have remained deaf had they not applied to Mr. Silverton. When a remedy is so successful, ought not every deaf person in the kingdom to try it, if it be in his or her power? It is a pleasing thing to a minister to make the deaf to hear, not only in a religious sense, but literally. Mr. Silverton may truly say to the deaf, "He that hath ears to hear, let him hear."

The Health Advocate also gives an account of several invaluable remedies which are producing the greatest possible good. The Medical Energiser is giving health to vast numbers. The Nutrient Food of Food is a splendid assistant to all kinds of medicine. The Great Lung Remedy is a marvellous Medicine for the cure of consumption, asthma, and all kinds of coughs. These, and other proved and tested Medicines which go under the title of "The Rev. E. J. Silverton's Ready Relief Remedies," may be ordered through any Chemist. London Wholesale Houses:—Sanger, Oxford-street; Barclay, Farringdon-street; Edwards, Queen Victoria-street; Thompson, New North-road; or of Rev. E. J. Silverton, Albert House, Park-street, Nottingham.

SERMONS WHICH HAVE REACHED THE MASSES, by REV. E. J. SILVERTON. Over 400 Pages Crown 8vo. Price 6s. Order of any Bookseller, or ALABASTER & PASSMORE, 4, Paternoster-buildings, London. The Sermons are quaint and humorous, containing many droll sayings and unusual illustrations. Must read them!! No one slept while they were delivered!! An Engraving of the Preacher's Place of Worship, Exeter Hall, Nottingham, will be found within. These Sermons are unlike all others. Sent post free from the Author.

MISCELLANEOUS.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

DOUBLE NUMBERS DURING 1879.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT.

Owing to the increasing interest taken in the Identity movement, it is found necessary to occasionally enlarge our space to make room for the important papers constantly reaching the Editor. It has, therefore, been determined to issue Twelve Double Numbers during 1879, for which Twopence will be charged. The first of these series of Double Numbers will be issued the first week in January, and one on each succeeding first week in the month during the year.

	£	s.	d.
Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free	0	7	6
Two copies (including Double Numbers) ...	0	12	4
Three " " " " ...	0	18	8
Four " " " " ...	1	6	2
Six " " " " ...	1	17	4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-Grand, London, to W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

N.B.—Send an extra stamp if an acknowledgment is required.

CARD OF MEMBERSHIP.

THE SHEFFIELD ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION are in a position to supply their Card to all associations requiring the same. Prices with Key—in quantities, 4d each; single cards 7½d., post free.

These Cards are copyright; and will be supplied with the description or title of any association.

The design of the card is pronounced by Mr. Hine to be "almost perfect."

By PHILO-ISRAEL—"A model of excellence."—See BANNER OF ISRAEL, Nov. 27, 1878, p. 398.

Apply to Geo. W. Staniland, Castle-street, Sheffield.

THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL.

ALL who are interested in this great Identity Question are respectfully solicited to send CONTRIBUTIONS to the undersigned, to defray the expenses of providing Halls for a Course of LECTURES in the the metropolis, by Mr. E. HINE, in order to bring this most important subject before the notice of the great bulk of the people.

Mr. T. LOVELAND, Shoreham, Sevenoaks, Kent.
Mr. A. J. STEPHENSON, 123, Newgate-street, London.

ROBERT BANKS,
PRINTER, STEREOTYPER, AND PUBLISHER,
RACQUET-COURT, FLEET-STREET, LONDON, E.C.

BOOKS.

MODERN HIEROGLYPHICS OF THE APOCALYPSE AND GREAT PYRAMID, illustrated by ten plates, with explanations, by A WATCHER. To which is prefixed an introduction, showing how recent events in the Eastern Question and the Church have worked towards a fulfilment of the theory suggested in the book.—October, 1878.

Price 15s. A few copies coloured by the Author £1 1s.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Price 6d.; or with illustrative map, 8d.

BRITAIN (OR ISRAEL) THE FIFTH AND LAST, AND THE UNCONQUERABLE EMPIRE. By JOHN GILDER SHAW.

Price 3d.; post free, 3½d.

CHRONOLOGICAL CHART OF BRITISH VICTORIES OVER THE CONTINENTAL POWERS, ranging from the battle of Cressy (1346), to our last victory, the taking of Sebastopol, Sept. 8, 1855. Arranged by J. G. SHAW, of Leeds.

"We trust Mr. Shaw's labour in preparing this paper may be appreciated by the public and be largely sold."—Banner of Israel.

Price 1d.; post free, 1½d.

GOD'S LOVE FOR ISRAEL, A GUARANTEE THAT HE WILL FULFIL HIS PROMISES TO ISRAEL.

Shortly will pe published, price 6d.

RESULTS OF ISRAEL'S OBEDIENCE. A review of the successive steps which have led to the present condition of Britain (or Israel), the Fifth and Last Empire.

London: Published by Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; and may be had of the Author, 20 Park-row, Leeds, and of all booksellers.

Subscription 5s. a year, post paid. Payable in advance. Back numbers of the present volume can be supplied if desired.

OUR REST. A Periodical bearing on the Questions of Christ's Second Coming and the Preparation of the Church (Christ's Bride) for that event. In each number are discussed the Scientific and Religious Discoveries in the Great Pyramid of Egypt.

Orders for the above will be received by W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick Lane, E.C.; or by THOMAS WILSON, Publisher, 188, E. Monroe Street, Chicago, Ill., U.S.

BOOKS, ETC.

THE GREAT PYRAMID. NOW READY, PHILO-ISRAEL'S NEW WORK. 56 pages, Illustrated with Diagrams, price 4d, post free 5d.

AN ELEMENTARY DIGEST or SKETCH OF THE CHIEF FACTS and TEACHINGS of the GREAT PYRAMID of EGYPT; adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific. By PHILO-ISRAEL; together with Original Papers by the following leading Pyramidists, republished mostly from the BANNER OF ISRAEL (by kind permission of the proprietor)—viz., Professor Piazzi Smyth, the Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A., Charles Horner, Esq., and Major H. A. Tracey, R.A. Being a pamphlet by five authors (a Pyramid number).

Opinion of Mr. Charles Horner, regarding the above work, after perusal of the same:—"I think your design of the Pyramid pamphlet excellent. I know well that it is a book urgently needed, since, under God's blessing, it will, I feel convinced, convert many to Christ. Your part Philo-Israel's) I deem unexceptionable. It is both terse and understandable to the many, which is the great object you have had in view. I should like to see thousands circulated amongst our intelligent artisans, and hope God will raise some to do this."—C. HORNER. Dec. 12, 1878.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

Second edition, sixth thousand.

Fancy paper covers, 6d.; cloth, gilt lettered, flush, 1s.

THE HISTORY OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL: How They Were Lost, and How They Were Found. Told for the children. By PHILO-ISRAEL. Adapted for use by parents, Sunday School and other teachers, with questions on the chapters added.

"The History of the House of Israel—told for the children—is a very valuable addition to our children's libraries. It gives a clear account of all the chief points of interest, in language suited to the comprehension of children, and ought to be in the hands of every mother and teacher who believes in our Identity with Israel. It supplies a want I have long felt as the mother of a large family."

For favourable notices of this work by Professor Piazzi Smyth, John T. Gott, Esq., and others, see handbills. W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

ARE THE ENGLISH PEOPLE THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL? By PHILO-ISRAEL. Price 4d.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

OUR IDENTITY WITH THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. By PHILO-ISRAEL. Price 4d. Third Thousand (reprinted from the Clifton Chronicle).

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

A RESUMÉ OF THE SCRIPTURAL ARGUMENT, Proving the Identity of the British Race with the Lost Ten Tribes. By PHILO-ISRAEL. Price One Penny.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

BRISTOL LEAFLETS ON THE IDENTIFICATION. 1 to 6; 1s. per 100.

Now ready.—Price 2s. 6d., cloth, gilt edges. Paper covers 1s. 6d. Post free for 33 or 20 stamps.

THE PILLAR OF WITNESS. A Scriptural View of the GREAT PYRAMID. By the late Commander B. W. TRACEY, R.N.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; W. H Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

THE EASTERN QUESTION.

Now ready, price One penny, post free 1½d. One dozen copies, post free 1s. 100 copies 6s., post free 7s.

THE IDENTITY OF THE BRITISH NATION WITH THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. THE CLUE TO THE EASTERN QUESTION. By C. W. E.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row

Now ready, price 6d., post free 7d

THE ANSWER to the EASTERN QUESTION as shewn in the IDENTITY of the BRITISH with ISRAEL. By the Author of the "New Old Story."

"The author has well managed her topic; her style of writing is clear and vigorous, and well calculated to do good service to the cause."—PIAZZI SMYTH.

London: S. W. Partridge & Co., 9, Paternoster-row.

EDWARD HINE'S LEAFLETS.

NO. 1.—MISSIONARY SUCCESS and the True Vitality of the Christian Church Depend upon Israel's Identification and Restoration. Price 1s. per 100

NO. 2.—ABRAHAM'S SEED a Literal, Legitimate, and National, Not a Spiritual Seed. By the Word of God. Four-page Leaflet. Price 2s. per 100.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed:—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, 5, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 15, 1879.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. III. No. 108. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 22, 1879. [ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
The "Distress"	37
Security of the People of God. By Rev. J. L. V. Cachemaille.—Part IV.	38
The Great Pyramid Declares the Revelation of the Lord Jesus Christ to be Close at Hand. By Charles Horner	39
The Geography of the Gates. No. XXVII.—Hobart Town, Tasmania	42
Correspondence	43

THE "DISTRESS."

THE only word to describe the trouble Israel is now passing through is the Scriptural term "distress" (Luke xxi. 25). Our newspapers are full of it. Her Majesty writes feelingly about it to her subjects. Miss Florence Nightingale sends touching words to Sheffield regarding it.

It prevails largely in Denbighshire and Flintshire, in the coal and iron country; Manchester suffers from it; Burnley's pauper list is fed by it. In Leeds the cry is raised that the "distress" is on the increase. Two thousand cases of it are reported at Bolton. The Cornish miners are suffering grievously from it. Dublin is not untouched by it. Newcastle-upon-Tyne, South Shields, the Black Country in the Midlands, all are terribly pinched by it, and the poor-houses and unions are full. In Edinburgh, as well as in Glasgow, the poor are being largely fed and employed, and relief committees are being organised to help the destitute and distressed. Wherever we look, in fact, "distress," "distress," "distress," meets us, and "the hands hang down and the knees become feeble," for we do not understand the visitation, and know not the end thereof.

We have already, on a previous occasion, pointed out in another connection that God's "corrections in measure" must, and are sure to, be experienced by our race as Israel, because He has told us expressly in Jer. xxx. 11, that though when the time of Israel's return arrives, "Jacob shall be in rest, and be quiet, and none shall make him afraid;" but yet, for all that, "they shall not go unpunished," but shall be corrected for their sins "in measure." Hence, we pointed out on Oct. 2, 1878, in our leader in No. 92, vol. ii., Israel had her trials in the matter of the loss of the Eurydice; of the Princess Alice steamer; in the horrors of the Ebbw Vale Colliery explosion; of the Sittingbourne railway accident; more recently in the death of the beloved Grand Duchess of Hesse Darmstadt—our Princess Alice; and last of all, in the bank failures and dire "distress" now so general over the whole land and its inhabitants. Perhaps some one carefully reading Luke xxi. 25, and our article on "The Earth of Prophecy" (BANNER, No. 99), may be startled at finding that the "distress" of the "Gentiles," or "nations," predicted by our Lord in the passage above quoted, is the lot also of Israel at "the times of the end," on which we are, as most men agree, now entered. How can this be? Is Israel then, after all, to sup deep of the horrors of "the affliction" in which the Gentiles are to wallow, what time the Lord's "indignation" and "all His fierce anger" is poured out upon them? (Zeph. iii. 8). Is Israel, too, to be "devoured with the fire of His jealousy," as He says the Gentile "earth" shall be? And is the "Watcher's" picture of some of Israel's "burnings" and "torments" to be a literal fact, when the Ten Tribes stoop to their sad march along the Pyramid's low passage, when the "tares," he says, are to be burnt up?

We urge our readers not to allow such unfaithful thoughts to disturb their peace. Not in vain our Lord said to Israel, knowing that our present "distress" would come on us now, "when these things," He said—our distress, our bank failures, our shipwrecks, the national commotions abroad, the fightings and bloodshed of the Eastern Question, with its Afghan episode, and the Caffre war—"When these things (He said) begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads; for your (national) redemption draweth nigh" (Luke xxi. 28). It is true we have the sprinklings of the judgments, short of European war, to warn and correct us; but while these we suffer from, are "the corrections in measure," the condition, in fact, of not being "altogether unpunished," we see by contrast what the hapless, horrible fate is, in store for the Gentiles on whom the Lord is about to pour out "all HIS fierce anger," to devour them with the "FIRE of His jealousy," to make them suffer "the INDIGNATION" which is to overwhelm them for the "little moment" of the Divine computation; but what the low passage from the grand gallery shows, we fear, may last fifty-two long human years. These are the "terrors of the Lord" from which we are to be protected as the Tribes were in Goshen, and again in the narrow passage of the Red Sea by the Lord Himself, only because of our Identity, and solely because of our Hebrew origin. No burnings, no tares, and no destruction are reserved for the Israel of God, we believe; and we are anxious others should see with us that these are not in store for us as Israel.

Such are the Gentiles' portion. Our opponents, who glory in what should be their shame, are anxious and earliest to make good their claim that the British are Gentiles pure. But, alas! they think not and care not as to what God says is His "determination" in regard to their fate as Gentiles. These—the "nations," "the kingdoms"—He tells us, it is His "determination" to gather, to assemble—and why? "To pour upon them Mine indignation, even ALL My fierce anger: for all the 'earth' shall be devoured with the FIRE of My jealousy. For then I will turn to the people a pure language, that they may ALL call upon the name of the Lord, to serve Him with one consent" (Zeph. iii. 8, 9).

Digitized by Google

Here we see, alas! terrible burnings, bindings up of tares, destruction and devourings, jealous fires of Divine wrath, and that in infinite, because Divine, magnitude all "poured" out, without measure, upon the assembled Gentile nations and kingdoms, what time Israel "waits" upon the Lord Jehovah (Zeph. iii. 8; Isa. xlii. 4, li. 5, lx. 9). Then He turns to "the people," His Israel, "a pure language." Why? "In order that (mark this!) the new covenant, having now been granted, and the outpouring promised having had its full and blessed effect, Israel, "all," may "call upon Jehovah's name, to serve Him with one consent." Thus they become "the righteous nation" (Isa. xxvi. 2, lx. 21), and fully satisfy the glorious, splendid exigency of the new covenant promises in Jeremiah xxxi. 33, and Hebrews viii. 10.

This, then, is our reading of the Great Pyramid low passage, and we believe we have God's Word on our side in our interpretation. We are sure we can in this view take the most precious comfort, which is wholly absent in "A Watcher's" dismal forebodings of the "tares," the "burnings," the "fiery torments," and the "war" wastings of poor afflicted Israel, whom, in truth, on the contrary, our God having blessed, shall be blessed indeed after her "corrections in measure" have done their needful work. Then the Spirit poured out, will have rendered the nation such, that they "all shall know the Lord from the least of them to the greatest of them," and not one man, not one woman, not one child of British Israel shall be left unregenerate, unsaved, or out of Christ. May the Lord our Redeemer hasten that good day and speed its coming, for His own great name's sake. Amen.

Bristol, December 30, 1878.

SECURITY OF THE PEOPLE OF GOD.

BY THE REV. J. L. V. CACHEMAILLE.

(Concluded from page 33).

PART IV.

BUT perhaps at the word of God Israel became converted? No! they rebelled and did not forsake their idolatry. So that God declares Israel to be the object of His anger and His fury, and not of His goodness. Still He delivered them and preserved them miraculously. Why? For His name's sake, because He had pledged Himself in the promise made to Abraham that He would deliver his soul and give them the land of Canaan. It was not therefore for the merits of the children of Israel, nor because they were a holy people and faithful servants of the true God, that they were delivered and protected. Evidently not, for God declares that it is other motives—motives which relate to the Almighty and to the glory of His name. It may be objected that, with respect to England, she cannot be the antitype of Goshen, or of a people favoured by God, for nationally she does not faithfully serve Christ, and many sins and abominations are to be found in her. She gives freedom to Popery and even favours it, and hardly deserves to be called nominally a Protestant nation. All this, and even more than this, may be granted. But is England worse than Israel was in Egypt? As far as any judgment can be formed, the answer is in the negative. Is she not the country where most apparent religion is to be found, and where there is the greatest number of real Christians? Is she not, humanly speaking, the source of all the religion that is disseminated throughout the world? Call to mind her societies for the spiritual good of the nation and of the world at large—the enormous sums devoted every year to the circulation of the Bible and other religious books, and for sending missionaries and teachers all over the world. Remember that she is everywhere the protectress of the true liberty, of such laws and institutions as are calculated to promote the welfare of man. So that wherever she goes she is the benefactress of society. Observe too the reputation she has throughout the world, of being a Protestant and religious nation and the friend of humanity. But again: Is it for these qualities that God has thus granted her protection and exemption, and that we still hope He will grant her these blessings? Certainly not; God keeps her because of His own elect; He will not suffer any one to "touch His anointed," and those who have made a covenant with Him by sacrifice, "for He will glorify His name in them and by them as He did of old, and He will preserve a Gospel testimony to Christ on earth, till the time appointed. At the time of the end, that will happen with regard to England which happened to Israel. The name of Almighty God, and not that of England, will be glorified, for, as we have seen, she will sing the song of Moses and of the Lamb, and as it is said of the passage of the Red Sea, "Thus the Lord saved Israel that day out of the hands of the Egyptians, and Israel saw the Egyptians dead on the sea shore" (Exod. xiv. 30). Let us remark upon this type. When this passage through the sea takes place, God puts a cloud between Israel and the Egyptians. For the latter this is a cloud of darkness, so that they can neither see where they are, nor whither they are going, and find themselves unexpectedly in the bed of the Red Sea. Their eyes are opened but too late, and they perish. Thus will it do with the antitype, for we are told that the enemies of Christ shall be in darkness, in ignorance, so that the day of Christ shall overtake them. Here, too, the light will come too late—as with the foolish virgins who lighted their lamps too late.

Again it must be remarked on the subject of these two last events. If we consider an antitype which is yet to take place, we shall find that the rapture of saints will not have been effected before the burning of the great city. When the Egyptians are drowned (an event corresponding with the great battle round about Jerusalem), Israel is on the other side of the sea, but only a few moments before the destruction. Probably, therefore, this event will take place only a short time before the great battle. It was after the destruction of the last enemy that Moses and Israel sung the song of deliverance. We find in Rev. xv. 2, 4, a company (it is not said whether large or small), composed of those who had vanquished the beast, and his image, and his mark, and the number of his name who stood upon a sea of glass mingled with fire, having the harps of God. They sang a song. What song? That of Moses. And what is the song of Moses? Very possibly the same that was sung on the banks of the other sea, the Red Sea, of which the sea of glass mingled with fire is the antitype. The song of the Lamb is added, which is probably analogous, a song of victory, of deliverance, of salvation, of rejoicing; perhaps a song like that described in Rev. xix. 1—7. The song sung by the company is a short epitome of that of Moses and Israel, but it celebrates a similar deliverance. That the antitype may be real, it must apply to those who may be still on the earth. In fact, it is sung by those who see the execution of the judgments of God; for they say, "Thy judgments are manifest"—that is to say, seen, known, and they admire them, saying, "Thy works are (not were) great, and wonderful." Moreover, it is sung by those who are living during the pouring out of the vials, otherwise they would not correspond to the type; for Israel does not wait till he shall have entered the Promised Land, but he sings on the shores of the Red Sea, in the midst of the corpses of the Egyptians who are before his eyes. The new song is not sung by the people of God, after the death, or resurrection, or entrance into the heavenly Canaan, but on the borders of the sea of glass mingled with fire, figuring the burning of the great city. In fine, it is only after this song that mention is made of the seven angels with the seven vials who come to pour them out, which seems to imply that this song is calculated to encourage the people of God during the time of the pouring out of the vials; but it may be well imagined that the great chorus to which the song of the Lamb is added, is sung only after the destruction of the great city. It may be added that the beast and the false prophet fitly represent Pharaoh and Egypt. Whilst they lived, they remained hardened, and would not allow freedom to true Christians to serve God as they wished, thus keeping them in restraint and uneasiness. Seeing and feeling themselves, however, exempt from the vials of the wrath of God which are poured out upon their enemies, they are full of joy and gratitude. But, whilst their tyrant lives, their hearts cannot feel fulness of joy; it is after his destruction that their fulness of thankfulness can be expressed. Then they take their harps, and their songs are loudly heard, for their noise is compared to many waters and to the voice of mighty thunderings.

Digitized by Google

In conclusion, we must add that the narrative of Moses which has served a type ends with a song of deliverance when Israel is totally freed from those who had kept him in hard bondage, and who had embittered his life by innumerable torments. They sang this song when their enemies were utterly ruined and destroyed. Arrived at this point, Israel is in perfect safety, having nothing more to fear on the part of his enemies. Then he gives full vent to his joy and happiness. But Israel has not yet reached the holy mountain—nor the land of rest, flowing with milk and honey; he may in a few days reach it, if all be well. We shall not accompany him thither. We have followed him to the moment of his perfect deliverance from the Egyptians, and here we leave him rejoicing in his happiness. If this narrative be a type for us, if what happened to Israel be written for our learning, and we draw from it instruction, consolation, and hope, it seems quite evident that we have all reason to believe that God will do the same things for the disciples of Christ that He did for the children of Israel; that they will be the constant objects of His mercy, but that He will sustain and guide them by His strength to the end of their pilgrimage; that He will equally keep His people from the last judgments as well as from those they have already escaped: that the last plagues will touch them no more than the first had done, and that they will behold with their eyes from a place of perfect security the destruction of their enemies.

Israel escaped from Pharaoh not only with life, but with an immense booty from the wealth of the Egyptians. Thus the flock of Christ will escape not in giving up all but life, but with all their possessions which they have beyond the sea of glass mingled with fire, beyond the limits of the great city. Not that the people of God will be free during the last terrible scenes from all perplexity and anxiety. Israel was afraid of Pharaoh and his army, but only for a moment, and that fear increased his subsequent joy. The same will probably be the result at the end. To the disciples of Christ it will be according as they have believed, or as they do believe.

At page 11, volume ii., first column, it should be understood the Rev. Mr. Cachemaille read the second edition of John Wilson's work, re-published in 1844. Every one knows that the work came out first in 1840.

Dr. Rugg requests us to state that all P.O. Orders sent to him on account of "The Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association," should be made payable at Church-street, St. Marylebone, London.

THE GREAT PYRAMID DECLARES THE REVELATION OF THE LORD JESUS CHRIST TO BE CLOSE AT HAND.

By Charles Horner.

SECTION I.

"Behold, I come as a Thief."

"Now, upon the first day of the week, very early in the morning, they came unto the sepulchre . . . , and they found the stone rolled away from the sepulchre. And they entered in, and found not the body of the Lord Jesus."

This fact is monumentally symbolised near the commencement of the grand gallery, by a portion of the once continued ramp, or stone bench, being absent, the appearance there affording evidence of it having been blown away with excessive force, thus disclosing a hole and a small horizontal passage, shown in section drawing at H, leading to a shaft having a square aperture, the shaft proceeding downwards until it reaches the lower end of descending passage, the latter ultimately passing on to the subterranean chamber—the distance from well's mouth being altogether some 180 feet.

From the North end of gallery opposite to centre of well's mouth, the distance is 33 inches with a small fraction, which, at an inch to a year, is 33 years and a few months, the date of our Lord's death and resurrection. Thus the Great Pyramid demonstrates the truth of that miraculous event recorded in God's written Word, and which the present day too highly-overrated philosophy is unwilling to entertain—a philosophy in itself absolutely destitute of affording any satisfaction to the immortal souls of men.

Digitized by Google

But here let me not be misunderstood. I am not speaking of those noble achievements of our latter-day science which is lifting the veil, and allowing us to gaze upon the marvels of this glorious universe, but of that spurious Germano-French-created philosophy which blasphemes the name of God. And whether it take the form of a rank materialistic, or morbid necromantic philosophy, the outlook for those who advocate it—unless they speedily repent—is most serious to contemplate. For it comes most surely to this: that any who have either by book, lecture, or otherwise endeavoured to shake men's convictions in the accepted Christian verities, or led some to cast aside that faith they were once taught both to love and reverence in their early childhood, will certainly have to render an account before the judgment-seat of Christ.

The resurrection morn, therefore, was the revelation of the Lord Christ from the tomb.

Now, touching the symbolic import of the over-head passage to lowest chamber of construction beginning at grand gallery's South wall, the entrance whereof is shown in wood-cut at $A_{,}$, two ideas have been suggested regarding its signification:—

1. The safe-guarding of Britain (Israel) during the impending troubles.

2. That proposed and published by Professor Smyth, which in pages 513-4, of "Our Inheritance," third edition, is given as follows:—

"This escape is by a doorway of exit into the small passage, at the upper South-east corner of the grand gallery, and is no less than 28 feet above the history-recording floor; only, therefore, accessible to something approaching more to winged and flying, rather than walking, beings; and leading to a sort of retreat, more than apartment for earthly life, immediately over the grand and final granite hall, the so-called king's chamber .... Why it was so furnished there is nothing either in the scientific or Egyptologic theories to show, though in the sacred and historic symbology it immediately reminds of what the evangelists in the New Testament promise—viz., of the angels being sent to gather up the elect before the dread period of wars and tribulations on earth begins; and also, of those elect, thus saved, meeting the Lord in the air, and being retained with Him in heaven for awhile before His second coming to establish His kingdom on earth .... to rule for ever in truth, righteousness, and universal extent, by grandly supernatural means, of which the world of the present dispensation knows absolutely nothing practically."

SECTION II.

It is not to be wondered that as the terminus of the dispensation is approached, a few faithful-hearted men who inflexibly believe the Great Pyramid is the Lord's latter-day witness to His people Israel, should be gazing up anxiously and inquiringly as to what that passage truly means. During the present year I often pondered over this question, trusting the matter would be made perfectly clear to someone, as to which of the two events the symbolic passage referred, and that sufficient light would be forthcoming to remove any existing element of uncertainty.

Late in the autumn I was specially studying certain specific features in the grand gallery, and could not satisfactorily continue my investigations without additional measurements, unrecorded in the Official Codex. Whereupon I communicated my needs to Professor Smyth, who most kindly introduced me to his friend in Egypt, Dr. Grant. I then furnished this gentleman with some points on which I desired information, to supplement the knowledge in my possession, and amongst these was one asking him to favour me with the height and width of $A_{,}$, believing, as I had previously informed the Professor, the measures there would be symbolic only. On receipt of my letter, Dr. Grant proceeded to the Great Pyramid, and with painstaking assiduity took the measures I required.

The Christian world, therefore, are indebted to Professor Smyth and Dr. Grant for the inestimably solemn disclosures which it is my privilege to reverently place before mankind.

The result, then, of a thoughtful and prayerful examination of the measures at $A_{,}$ enables me to submit independent testimony, positively corroborating Professor's Smyth's conclusions already adverted to, for I have been led to discover and since the latter is emblematic of the Lord's revelation from the tomb—a supernatural fact—and because the measures at A closely correspond with $A_{,}$, it follows the event symbolised by the upper passage is also supernatural. Moreover, the measures not having a scientific application, they must be taken as represented in the wood-cut. Let us, then, examine those at the well's mouth. To begin with the aperture at A, you notice it is square, 28 in. by 28 in., then I take the sum thereof, which is 56 units, and I do so because the floor length of horizontal passage from Eastern end leading to well, is exactly 56 inches; in short, this length may be considered as a pointer, designedly intimating that we are to double the measures of aperture. or 28 + 28=56. And here I may notice an independent confirmatory test as to the accuracy of this mode of reckoning, supplied by the grand gallery ramp holes; for on either bench are 28 equi-distant holes, their sum giving 56.* Next, the height of passage H being 27 units, we have two numbers, 27 and 56; but since there is no length of masonry corresponding to their sum, I take them as two factors, whence we have 56 × 27=1,512. But how are we to interpret this aggregate of units?

That the Secret of the Upper Passage is Disclosed by the Measures at the Well's Mouth;

It is well known that in the Hebrew and Greek alphabets each letter possesses a special numerical value, and words being respectively composed of letters, it is obvious that given any word in either of these languages, and the respective letters translated into their corresponding numbers, the sum of those units will express the value, so to speak, of that word, in terms of our common digits. Bearing this in mind we are in a position to advance another step towards understanding the marvellous foreknowledge of our God. As the measures clearly refer to religious symbology, we must necessarily turn to God's written Word for further light to enable us to fully comprehend their meaning. Now, the event at the well's mouth may be designated by a single word—revelation; and since the New Testament writings were originally in the Greek language, I find this word is numerically derivable from the measures placed in that solitary spot 4,000 years ago, and were, I firmly believe, destined to be understood in after ages, as the single word ΑΠΟΚΑΛΥΨΙΣ, or with the values of the letters restored,

1 + 80 + 70 + 20 + 1 + 30 + 400 + 700 + 10 + 200=1,512. †

The two sets of numbers being therefore identical, we are compelled to admit the extraordinary fact—viz., that the word "revelation" may now be read, in the Greek tongue, at the well's mouth.

Now glance upwards at the opening $A_{,}$, and with an understanding heart behold the mystery there! Those measures, too, shall even be dealt with in like manner, though you must remember that in these days, as was foretold by the prophet of

* I have already suggested their probable religious symbology in No. 61 of the Banner, as emblematic of the earliest series of sevens enumerated in Rev. i.—v., for the reason that their sum is coincident.

7 stars	7 angels
7 candlesticks	7 Churches
7 lamps of fire	7 spirits of God
7 horns of the Lamb	7 eyes of the Lamb
28	28

† Apocalypsis=Revelation. For this new and wonderful application of numerals to Great Pyramid research, we are indebted to that esteemed Pyramidist, Mr. H. A. Powers, of America. In this unique manner is the Great Pyramid now beginning to evolve many startling secrets.

Digitized by Google

the Lord God long ago, that with "another tongue" would He speak to His people Israel—not in Hebrew, but in English.

As before, I double the measures—viz., 28·2 + 28·0 = 56·2, and lo, we have the same word we found recorded at the well's mouth, only now in English, for the numerals in REVELATION = 56. And if there is in the first decimal place the figure 2, it is surely to remind us of the Second Person of the glorious Trinity.*

Thus I interpret the event symbolised by the upper passage to be no other than

THE REVELATION OF THE LORD JESUS CHRIST IN THE AIR.

SECTION III.

BUT when shall this event come to pass? The grand gallery along the floor ends in 1881 A.D., say some; in 1882 A.D., say others; but this margin of uncertainty represented by a few months ought not to be of primary importance to any, seeing the Holy Spirit has so graciously permitted us to know a little while before, so that the day might not come upon us unawares. But besides this visible monumental evidence, our Lord gave certain other indications, which we were to regard as special forerunners of that event. These signs are now being manifested with accentuated power, and may be grouped together thus: astronomical, false doctrines, political troubles, famines, &c. The signs in the heavenly bodies, or discoveries in the sun, moon, and stars.

Since 1866 the advances in physical astronomy have been marvellous — unparalleled. In the hands of the patient astronomer, the spectroscope applied to the sun and stars has told some wondrous tales about their chemical composition, motion, and disturbances, whilst recent telescopic observation has noted changes in the moon. Wherefore, whatever remarkable celestial phenomena that are yet to surprise mankind, the "signs" already given cannot be denied or explained away.

The ascendancy of famines and pestilences of late is too vivid to escape even the most ordinary observer. Then the "distress of nations with perplexity, and men's hearts failing them for fear," is being fulfilled by political and social troubles, together with an almost unexampled universal commercial depression. Men in their "perplexity" are at their wits' end "to account" for this state of things. Some attribute the cause to one set of circumstances and some to another, yet nearly all ignoring the true reason, simply because they refuse to read the signs as symptoms of a rapidly advancing crisis in the world's history, recorded in God's Word. Nevertheless, when the Son of man cometh, shall He find faith on the earth?

Take yet another sign. It was predicted by the apostle that "scoffers" should abound in the last days, and a sufficient answer is afforded in the affirmative by the very existence of a Christian Evidence Society in our midst, whilst the spirit of unbelief is everywhere rampant, touching the sacred tenets of our faith. On the other hand, we witness the reception and development, in sections of society, of demoniacal doctrines found in a morbid "spiritualism," working, or pretending to work, signs and wonders, to deceive and seduce, if it were posssible, the very elect. Lastly, we have the revival of sacerdotalism in its most repulsive form—the attempt to substitute man in the place of Christ—thus giving rise to a form of godliness, though intensely lacking its power.

Now the antidote for this state of things is for the men of Israel to speedily go forth, resolutely determined to make the Identity known, for in so doing, under God, short work will be made of all these pernicious systems. Alas! the majority of our shepherds are not sufficiently observing the signs of the times, or otherwise they would be found studying and proclaiming the cause of Israel! They do not yet seem to realise the intense force of a movement which is upheaving society, and ripening fast in all directions. Indeed, the Anglo-Israel fact claims the serious attention of the devout philosopher and sociologist, for it contains the germ of the mightiest revolution which this world has yet seen, vitally affecting every man for good.

I will now endeavour to show more exactly what the Scriptures have to say regarding the event now under consideration. Studying our position by the light of our Identity with Israel, and the complex Eastern Question, we shall, I think, presently see how marvellously clear the political sign of that event becomes; for I perceive Luke xvii. 23—37 forms a lucid and cogent exposition of the final stage of

THE SIXTH VIAL.

THE REVELTION OF THE LORD.

"Behold I COME" (Rev. xvi. 15).	"The Son of Man shall be REVEALED" (Luke xvii. 30).

SIGN—POLITICAL.

"And they gathered them together to the place called in Hebrew Armageddon" (Rev. xvi. 16).	"Where, Lord? Where the body is, there will the eagles be gathered together" (Luke xvii. 37).

When the Sultan's authority finally collapses, Britain (Israel) immediately occupies Constantinople and waterway—"the street of the great city"—also Egypt and Palestine; thus guarding, right and left, the highway to India (Rev. xi. 8). But when these things are done, Satan energises the "beast," the French-restored Empire—Anti-Christ—and France is mad with jealousy; for does she not hold certain traditions concerning the Holy places, the Lebanon, and Egypt? It does not need very much further action on our part in Syria to set in flames the old passions that prevailed under Napoleon I.—teste recent despatches between Lord Salisbury and M. Waddington. Where the "body" (Greek) of the witnesses lie, there will the French "eagles be gathered together."

The Gospel testimony ceases, the "beast" has made war and paralysed Israel's power—for three and a half years. Her power distributed in so many places, and the unexpected—to those who do not read the signs of the times—opposition of France, results in Britain's (Israels') political death for the above-appointed period. Sometime during the gathering together of the "beast's" armies in juxtaposition to Israel's, will the supernatural event take place—viz., the appearance of the Lord in the air (1 Thess. iv. 17); then happens the removal of a certain number of the people—a sudden disappearance, in fact, of a few of our acquaintances and friends. So that some are now living who will not taste of death * (Luke xvii. 34, 35).

"Watch ye, therefore, praying always, that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of Man; for as a snare shall it come on all them that dwell on the face of the whole earth."

"This generation"—age, or grand gallery epoch—"shall not pass away till all be fulfilled." The idea of escape is vividly given in Dr. Grant's brief description of the upper passage: "This passage," he writes, "is so incompletely executed, that it immediately strikes the observer as having been excavated simply to allow of a passage through the original solid masonry to some object farther on that the excavator had in his mind."

Now, it is very remarkable the coming of the Lord, and removal of certain of His people from the four winds of heaven, is thus shown to occur at the close of the sixth vial, under which the world is now living, and that not until after that event does the air receive the contents of the seventh vial. Then does the chronological entry into the low passage begin.

* The measure as taken by Dr. Grant in the most regular part of the passage opening is 28·25 + 28·0. He intended paying a second visit to check the dimensions, but was prevented by unavoidable circumstances. A second measure, however, would not essentially modify the first.

* The Anglo-Israel movement, now progressing so rapidly, will then have greatly extended; and this miraculous event will re-act upon the community like an electric shock, the result being a national admission in Britain, that this people is indeed God's ancient Israel (Ezek. xxxvii. 10; Rev. xi. 11).

Digitized by Google

The storm bursts forth in awful force. The "voices" of blasphemy mingle with the lurid "lightnings" of petroleum fires, whilst the "thunders" of exploding dynamite are heard in the European capitals, shaking the earth.

But as it was in the days of Sodom, Lot went out in safety; and as in the days of the flood, Noah entered into the ark prepared for him, so Israel, still on the sea of glass mingled with fire (Rev. xv. 2), enters into her chambers and shuts her doors about her. Amid the weltering ruins of an effete and corrupt civilisation, the tabernacle of David is raised up in these islands under God-inspired men. The temple of God at TARA is now opened (Rev. xi. 19), under Divine sanction, and in it is seen

THE ARK OF HIS COVENANT.

The many in Judah who have accepted the French Anti-Christ as their Messiah, relieved of that awful woe, at length walk to the House of Israel to return together from the land of the North (Jer. iii. 18).

Thus I have briefly indicated in general outline the probable events shortly to come to pass. As to the details, further light may be vouchsafed to some as time and events develop. Meanwhile, our duty, as watchmen in Israel, is to keep His "charge" (Zech iii. 7) by proclaiming the Identity, having our loins girded, our garments about us, with our lamps burning. Such ought to be our attitude or state of preparedness amid the coming changes, patiently "waiting for the revelation of our Lord Jesus Christ" (1 Cor. vii.); and "blessed are those servants whom the Lord, when He cometh, shall find watching" (Luke xii. 37).

Advent, 1878.

THE GEOGRAPHY OF THE GATES.

(Continued from page 26.)

NO. XXVII.—HOBART TOWN, TASMANIA.

IN lat. 42° 53′ South, long. 147° 21′ East, there is situated, on the banks of the Derwent, a veritable "Gate," Hobart Town, which, acquired in peace, was the means whereby Israel obtained possession of the magnificent island to the South-east of Australia, called Tasmania.

It came about in this wise: A Dutchman, named Abel Jansen Tasman, discovered this fine antipodean desolation (for so it was then) in December, 1642. He called it Van Dieman's Land, after the then Dutch Governor-General of the Dutch East Indies. A British naval surgeon named Bass found out it was an island—a fact Tasman failed to ascertain. In honour of the Dutch discoverer the name assigned to the island by the owners, the British, has been, since 1852, Tasmania. In consequence of some petty attempts of the French to appropriate to themselves the fruits of the labours of Lieut. Flinders, of H.M.S. Reliance, who surveyed the coasts of the island, the British Government, in 1802, decided to occupy this fine territory themselves, and thus forestall the suspected designs of our then enemies. In June, 1803, accordingly, a British expedition, headed by Captain J. Bowen, R.N., accompanied by some marines and convicts (to clear the ground, &c.), arrived in the Derwent River, to the South-east of the island, and there, far up the estuary and river, which forms a noble harbour, fixed on Risdon as the future station. Colonel Collins, who succeeded Bowen in the command, subsequently removed the new settlement to the opposite side of the river, and just under the shadow of Mount Wellington he laid the foundation, in April, 1804, of Hobart Town, so named after Lord Hobart, then a member of the British Ministry, and thus constituted, without war or opposition, but in profound peace, a most valuable Gate—now a city of 20,000 inhabitants—which led to our acquisition of the entire island.

This grand appanage of the British Empire is a mountainous country, very well watered, exceedingly healthy, with a climate like that of Northern Europe, splendidly furnished with harbours, large enough to accommodate all the navies of the world—"in the 60 miles of South-eastern coast whose jagged edge is cut by the waters of the Derwent." From Hobart Town, which, when first occupied, offered but little prospect of successful settlement, the first colonists penetrated far inland, and found fertile valleys and noble plains suited for pasture as well as for cultivation. These, under the operation of equitable land laws, were gradually occupied. Colonists from Australia, retired officers of H.M.'s army and navy, Indian officials whose work in the tropics was completed, soon took up the land as it was discovered and claimed. Stock of sheep and cattle was imported from New South Wales, and even from Europe, and gradually the island became known in the markets for its wool, its sheep, cattle and horses. Ere long its whole available pasturage was occupied. The island has passed through some difficulties in its gradual rise to its present condition of prosperity. The native aboriginal difficulty was solved by the disappearance, in time, of the entire race. They were but 5,000 or 6,000 in all when the British first appeared upon the scene. They were at first treated with shocking cruelty and barbarity by the settlers. They were fired on and slain. A war of extermination succeeded, and, at last, when kindness took the place of barbarity, and the authorities commenced a system of conciliation instead of violence, the race steadily died out, and from various causes became utterly extinct! In 1864, the last man died; and only a few months ago, the death of the last woman of this hapless race testified that, as Jeremiah prophesied in chap. xxx. 11, the Lord had made a "full end" of this nation of savages, among whom He had scattered His people Israel. Another difficulty, arising from the British convict system, which discharged annually a large number of the vilest characters on the shores of Tasmania, was obviated by the abolition of transportation to the island in 1853.

The gold discoveries in New South Wales, in 1851, caused a large exodus from Tasmania, which has operated adversely on the growth of its population, though beneficially, in purging the community of its criminal element. "A more peaceful and better behaved community does not exist in the Australian Colonies" than that now located in Tasmania. This fine British colony has become one of the nations attached to the central link in the West, by the acquisition of responsible government. Its two houses of legislature, its representative system, its popular suffrage, its vote by ballot, with the power of self-taxation, and entire independence of the mother country, in all respects but the single tie of the viceroy, constitute it all but an independent nation. The rapid advance made by this colony in population, exports and imports, may be judged by the following facts, which speak loudly of wonderful progress. In 1863, the colony imported goods to the value of £902,940, and exported to the extent of £999,511. In 1876, the total exports were £1,130,983. The tonnage employed then inwards, was 117,681; outwards, 116,143. The stock of sheep, in 1863, was 1,800,811, and the land under cultivation, 267,173 acres. The population then was 91,519, now, 104,573. When it is considered that the colony was founded only in 1802, these figures prove wonderful progress in 60 years; and in the results since that date, in all the particulars we have named, we see evidence of more decided progress still. "If Tasmania has made a less rapid advance than its sister colonies in Australia, it may look forward to a happy and prosperous future;" for it is, in truth, one of the "company" of Israelite nations attached to the old mother in the far-off "Isles of the West," and, with the giant sisters growing up on the island continent hard by, promises, ere long, to be as prosperous and as great as any of them. All this prosperity and all this greatness has God conferred upon this island, in its connection with the parent State in the West, in consequence of the original acquisition by the British of the "Gate"

Digitized by Google

Hobart Town, in 1802; for "the Gate" being secured, the country was conquered and occupied, and so it has come to pass that, as God gave "the Gates" to Israel, He has, by the possession of Hobart Town, transferred the entire island of Tasmania to our favoured race—a possession and a gift which shall last for ever; for the gifts and the calling of our God are without repentance (Rom. xi. 29).

(To be followed by a paper on New Zealand.)

PHILALETHES AND "THE GATES."

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—I have only just noticed J. B. R.'s "answer to Philalethes," in your issue of November 20.

Will you allow me to respond to his request that I would "explain explicitly the position I have taken up?"

I must first remark, that the phrase "spiritual Gates" is not mine, but has been put into my mouth.

My position is simply this: that these prophecies respecting Israel have (as apostolic interpretations have shewn us) a double meaning—a higher and spiritual, as well as an earthly and literal one.

The particular prophecy in question ("Thy seed shall possess the Gate of his enemies") I conceive to have been literally fulfilled (as J. B. R. will see by reference to the "Israel of God," p. 71), but to have a further spiritual meaning. Its phraseology is that of the time and country; the meaning being, unquestionably, victory and dominion over enemies.

Spiritually, therefore, it is similar in import to numerous other promises throughout the Old Testament—e.g., that in Psalm xci., "Thou shalt tread upon the lion and the adder; the young lion and the dragon shalt thou trample under feet," where a different figure is employed (compare this with Rom. xvi. 20).

J. B. R. asks, "Who are our spiritual enemies?" He is, I suppose, unacquainted with the "Church Catechism," or the phrase "ghostly enemy" would be familiar to him. But may I ask him to look at Eph. vi. 12, and 1 Pet. v. 8?—"We wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities and powers . . . . Your adversary the devil," &c.

That "spiritual" means "consubstantial" or unreal seems a frequent mistake, which leads to misconception of our views by Anglo-Israelites. "Spiritual" surely means dealing with eternal realities, the substance, rather than the shadow, in contrast to the passing and vanishing affairs of earth.

The enemies of the "Israel of God" are indeed intensely real, and there is nothing "shadowy" about the Christian conflict, as those engaged in it can testify, nor is it an "unsubstantial" victory which shall crown that conflict—the great triumph of the powers of good over those of evil—foretold of old in the words, "Thy seed"—which is Christ and His Church (Gal. iii. 16; Rom. iv. 11—16)—"shall possess the Gate of his enemies;" and later on, in the promise of our Lord, "The Gates of hell shall not prevail against My Church"—a victory surely more "worthy of being the subject of Divine revelation," than the possession of Constantinople by the English!

The distinction J. B. R. draws between "My enemies" (God's), and "his enemies" (Israel's), I cannot see; for God's enemies are ours, if we are fighting under the banner of Christ as His "faithful soldiers."

PHILALETHES.

Dec. 11th, 1878.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

SIR,—When I asked Philalethes, in the BANNER, who were his spiritual enemies, I had an idea he might include among them the Emperor of Russia, or the Pope and his clergy, or Mohammed and his representatives, or you, or me, or any one who might have the misfortune to differ from his views on religious subjects. He, however, explains he means only the devil and his angels; and concludes that I had never heard of these ghostly enemies. He could scarcely be serious in stating that conclusion; so, probably he was not in earnest, and I may let it pass, as well as the lecture he favours me with about the Christian conflict, the substance of which no one will contradict, though I observe that Philalethes, in his book, says that Anglo-Israelites ignore these things. He says, at page 110, it is vain for us to deny it, and I will not take up your valuable space with a useless reply to so wild an assertion.

Philalethes explains his position by declaring that the promises concerning Israel have both a literal and a spiritual meaning. Now, any one who will read Gen. xiii. 14—16, xvii. 8, xv. 18, and many others, will see that some are not capable of any spiritual interpretation at all. Other promises, which I need not cite, bear a spiritual interpretation only when dissociated from their context. Those of the promises again, which can best be drawn into Philalethes's views, can only be so drawn if spiritual Israel be considered to be a great body of people, fulfilling as a body, and not otherwise, all the conditions by which that body should be identified if it is to be held to have quite supplanted literal Israel in the promises. This it does not do. Any one who runs may read; and I see no use in going over all the ground, so often gone over already by yourself and other writers.

Almost any meaning can be put upon texts read separately, and without reference to the circumstances to which in their proper place they refer; and many can be even made to appear to contradict each other, when so read by persons of opposing views, who have an interest that way. Philalethes should, therefore, read the promises under discussion, with their context, and not chiefly in connection with St. Paul's PARALLEL OF ILLUSTRATION, when he was arguing on a purely spiritual subject, which he found it hard to explain to his readers without referring to a temporal matter they were familiar with.

Philalethes, in virtue of his figurative explanation of the term Gate, claims power and dominion over his spiritual enemies on their own ground. Refer to his book, page 71, and there you will find it so stated, and the words "their own ground," in italics too. That he may eventually, by the grace of God, conquer in the Christian conflict, is, of course, quite possible; but that he, or any other live spiritual Israelite, has dominion over the devil on his own ground is rather too much for him to claim. Rather, I should say, it is more than any man can do to boast complete dominion over himself. The devil often gets the better of the best of us. Philalethes must have more spiritual pride than is good for him, if he really thinks he has power and dominion over the powers of evil on their own ground. I fear one of his spiritual enemies interferes to prevent his being able to accept God's plain promises in their plainest sense. Cannot Philalethes see that, if he had the dominion he claims, the Christian conflict he boasts of would have no longer any existence for him? and yet he says, it is a terrible reality and continues. Where then his dominion over Satan on Satan's own ground?

Philalethes admits a literal meaning (see p. 71 of his book) for the promise of the Gate, but says it had its fulfilment in the conquest of the land under Joshua, and more fully in the time of the Empire of Solomon. Now the promises as given to Abraham and quoted above are truly magnificent in their conception; but the fulfilment of them, with which Philalethes is content, is a very small thing. God was to give for an everlasting possession to Abraham and his seed all the land from the Nile to the Euphrates; but Philalethes is content with the land between the Peninsula of Suez and Tyre—a piece of country which may be compared with the Principality of Wales. Solomon received tribute from a few petty kings on his borders; but I am not aware that he possessed any of their Gates. The fact is, the people of Israel, during their tenure of Palestine, were rarely masters of their own Gates, to say nothing of those of their enemies. Philalethes, however, says the promises were conditional. I say they were not. The promises as given to Abraham were the reward of what he HAD DONE, and carried no conditions. They were repeated in the same strain to Isaac and Jacob. We hear nothing of conditions until the time of Moses; but the promises, as he repeated them to his followers, cannot be held to cancel the very positive assurances God had given the patriarchs. These very positive assurances still remain to be fulfilled. This matter cannot be glossed over. When Israel and Judah shall again return fully to their allegiance to their God, the promises will again be found realities, and not figures of speech. Can Philalethes, or anyone else, show me a single text which might lead one to expect that more than three-fourths of the seed of the friend of God were to be utterly lost and disinherited? No, certainly not; but there are very many which promise final reconciliation with God to both the great divisions of the Hebrew people. The literal fulfilment then has not yet taken place.

Philalethes says he cannot see the distinction I draw between the words "his enemies" (Israel's) and "My enemies" (God's); but the distinction remains. In Eastern languages the superior speaking to the inferior does not go out of his way to be over polite. There was no reason why God should be made to appear to speak in a complimentary strain to a mere mortal. The reason why Philalethes does not see the distinction, is, as he explains it, very weak.

In conclusion, I wish to call the attention of Philalethes and his fellows to the advice given by Gamaliel, at verses 38 and 39 of the 5th chapter of the Acts of the Apostles, lest haply they be found to fight even against God.

J. B. R.

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements

(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O O payable at Ludgate-circus.

BOOKS, ETC.

BANNER OF ISRAEL, VOLUME II. Now ready. May be had, by ordering, of all booksellers, price 7s., beautifully bound in blue cloth, gilt.

Now ready price 7s., post free 6d. extra.

THE SECOND VOLUME OF THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

This volume contains a large number of articles on our Identity with Lost Israel, by the best and most learned writers on the subject. Also many interesting papers on the Great Pyramid by Professor Piazzi Smyth, F.R.S.E., Astronomer-Royal for Scotland, Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A., Major H. A. Tracey, R.A., Charles Horner, Esq., and others. London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

"BANNER OF ISRAEL" FREE CIRCULATION FUND.

Persons interested in "Our Identity," who have the opportunity of judiciously circulating copies of the BANNER OF ISRAEL, and are willing to assist in the work, can be supplied with any number of copies they can use, gratuitously. They will be sent to such persons free of all cost. Application is to be made to the Secretary of the "Banner of Israel Free Circulation Fund," Mr. R. Fergusson Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C., to whom all remittances for this object should also be made, but NOT to the Editor of the BANNER—Philo-Israel.

	£	s.	d.
A Friend at Portsea	5	0	0
Miss J. Lawrence, Spencer-hill, Wimbledon	1	0	0

MODERN HIEROGLYPHICS OF THE APOCALYPSE AND GREAT PYRAMID, illustrated by ten plates, with explanations, by A WATCHER. To which is prefixed an introduction, showing how recent events in the Eastern Question and the Church have worked towards a fulfilment of the theory suggested in the book.—October, 1878.

Price 15s. A few copies coloured by the Author £1 1s.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

THE ANGLO-ISRAEL POST BAG.

BY THE RIGHT REV. BISHOP TITCOMB.

WITH AN APPENDIX, embodying the Gates of Israel, as enumerated by Philo-Israel in the "Inquiry."

"He that hath ears to hear, let him hear."

HEALTH, DIET, AND DEAFNESS.

NOISES IN THE EARS.

THE REV. E. J. SILVERTON will send his Health Advocate, giving important advice and particulars on the above subjects, free to any person, showing how Deafness may be at once relieved and ultimately cured. Many most interesting cases are set forth. Thousands of people are hearing Sermons and Lectures to-day who would have remained deaf had they not applied to Mr. Silverton. When a remedy is so successful, ought not every deaf person in the kingdom to try it, if it be in his or her power? It is a pleasing thing to a minister to make the deaf to hear, not only in a religious sense, but literally. Mr. Silverton may truly say to the deaf, "He that hath ears to hear, let him hear."

The Health Advocate also gives an account of several invaluable remedies which are producing the greatest possible good. The Medical Energiser is giving health to vast numbers. The Nutrient Food of Food is a splendid assistant to all kinds of medicine. The Great Lung Remedy is a marvellous Medicine for the cure of consumption, asthma, and all kinds of coughs. These, and other proved and tested Medicines which go under the title of "The Rev. E. J. Silverton's Ready Relief Remedies," may be ordered through any Chemist. London Wholesale Houses:—Sanger, Oxford-street; Barclay, Farringdon-street; Edwards, Queen Victoria-street; Thompson, New North-road; or of Rev. E. J. Silverton, Albert House, Park-street, Nottingham.

SERMONS WHICH HAVE REACHED THE MASSES, by REV. E. J. SILVERTON. Over 400 Pages Crown 8vo. Price 6s. Order of any Bookseller, or ALABASTER & PASSMORE, 4, Paternoster-buildings, London. The Sermons are quaint and humorous, containing many droll sayings and unusual illustrations. Must read them!! No one slept while they were delivered!! An Engraving of the Preacher's Place of Worship, Exeter Hall, Nottingham, will be found within. These Sermons are unlike all others. Sent post free from the Author.

MISCELLANEOUS.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

DOUBLE NUMBERS DURING 1879.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT.

Owing to the increasing interest taken in the Identity movement, it is found necessary to occasionally enlarge our space to make room for the important papers constantly reaching the Editor. It has, therefore, been determined to issue Twelve Double Numbers during 1879, for which Twopence will be charged. The first of these series of Double Numbers will be issued the first week in January, and one on each succeeding first week in the month during the year.

	£	s.	d.
Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free	0	7	6
Two copies (including Double Numbers) ...	0	12	4
Three " " " " ...	0	18	8
Four " " " " ...	1	6	2
Six " " " " ...	1	17	4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-Grand, London, to W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

N.B.—Send an extra stamp if an acknowledgment is required.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

Temporary Office:—

20, WARWICK LANE, LONDON, E.C.

Chairman of Committee:—

E. W. BIRD, Esq. (Philo-Israel), Bristol.

Committee:—

LE COMTE BENTINCK, Grosvenor-square, W.
CAPTAIN BAYLEY, R.N., Streatham, S.W.
JOHN S. ANDERSON, Esq., Upper Norwood, S.E.
ROBERT BANKS, Esq., London, E.C.
JOHN T. FLETCHER, Esq., Upper Norwood, S.E.
REV. F. R. A. GLOVER, M.A., St. James, W.
H. L. GUERRIER, Esq., Tooting, S.W.
W. H. GUEST, Esq., London, E.C.
CHARLES HORNER, Esq., Mortlake, S.W.
DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, Esq., St. John's-wood, N.W.
H. H. PAIN, Esq., Bromley, Kent, S.E.
DR. H. HODSON RUGG, St. John's-wood, N.W.
(With power to add to their number.)

Treasurer:—

DR. H. HODSON RUGG, 1, Grove-rd., St. John's-wood, N.W.

Hon. Secretary:—

REV. JAMES BILLINGTON.

This Association has been established to bind in closer union the many friends who rejoice in having a portion with the long Lost Tribes of the House of Israel; also to extend the knowledge of the truth that the Anglo-Saxon races are now identified with those Lost Tribes of the House of Israel. These objects, it is thought, will be best accomplished by means of Drawing Room and Public Meetings, by Sermons, Lectures, Bible Readings, by the diffusion of Literature upon the subject, and by such other ways and means as the Committee may from time to time determine.

The Honorary Secretary or the Treasurer will be glad to receive the names of friends wishing to join the Association or to subscribe to its Funds.

Members' Annual Subscriptions to be not less than 2s. 6d. per annum.

Donations and Subscriptions are urgently needed to carry on the work.

Friends who will arrange for, or assist in, the arrangements for Lectures in their respective localities, under the auspices of the Association, are requested to address the Hon. Secretary at the office of the Association, from whom all particulars, and every assistance for the effective carrying out of the same, may be obtained.

J. BILLINGTON, Hon. Sec.

CARD OF MEMBERSHIP.

THE SHEFFIELD ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION are in a position to supply their Card to all associations requiring the same. Prices with Key—in quantities, 4d. each: single cards, 7½d., post free.

These Cards are copyright: and will be supplied with the description or title of any association.

The design of the card is pronounced by Mr. Hine to be "almost perfect."

By PHILO-ISRAEL.—"A model of excellence."—See BANNER OF ISRAEL, Nov. 27, 1878, p. 398.

Apply to Geo. W. Staniland, Castle-street, Sheffield.

THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL.

ALL who are interested in this great Identity Question are respectfully solicited to send CONTRIBUTIONS to the undersigned, to defray the expenses of providing Halls for a Course of LECTURES in the the metropolis, by Mr. E. HINE, in order to bring this most important subject before the notice of the great bulk of the people.

Mr. T. LOVELAND, Shoreham, Sevenoaks, Kent.
Mr. A. J. STEPHENSON, 123, Newgate-street, London.

BOOKS, ETC.

THE GREAT PYRAMID. NOW READY, PHILO-ISRAEL'S NEW WORK, 56 pages, Illustrated with Diagrams, price 4d., post free 5d.

AN ELEMENTARY DIGEST or SKETCH OF THE CHIEF FACTS and TEACHINGS of the GREAT PYRAMID of EGYPT; adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific. By PHILO-ISRAEL; together with Original Papers by the following leading Pyramidists, republished mostly from the BANNER OF ISRAEL (by kind permission of the proprietor)—viz., Professor Piazzi Smyth, the Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A., Charles Horner, Esq., and Major H. A. Tracey, R.A. Being a pamphlet by five authors (a Pyramid number).

Opinion of Mr. Charles Horner, regarding the above work, after perusal of the same:—"I think your design of the Pyramid pamphlet excellent. I know well that it is a book urgently needed, since, under God's blessing, it will, I feel convinced, convert many to Christ. Your part Philo-Israel's) I deem unexceptionable. It is both terse and understandable to the many, which is the great object you have had in view. I should like to see thousands circulated amongst our intelligent artisans, and hope God will raise some to do this."—C. HORNER. Dec. 12, 1878.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

Second edition, sixth thousand.

Fancy paper covers, 6d.; cloth, gilt lettered, flush, 1s.

THE HISTORY OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL: How They Were Lost, and How They Were Found. Told for the children. By PHILO-ISRAEL. Adapted for use by parents, Sunday School and other teachers, with questions on the chapters added.

"The History of the House of Israel—told for the children—is a very valuable addition to our children's libraries. It gives a clear account of all the chief points of interest, in language suited to the comprehension of children, and ought to be in the hands of every mother and teacher who believes in our Identity with Israel. It supplies a want I have long felt as the mother of a large family."

For favourable notices of this work by Professor Piazzi Smyth, John T. Gott, Esq., and others, see handbills. W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

ARE THE ENGLISH PEOPLE THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL? By PHILO-ISRAEL Price 4d.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

OUR IDENTITY WITH THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. By PHILO-ISRAEL. Price 4d. Third Thousand (reprinted from the Clifton Chronicle).

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

A RESUMÉ OF THE SCRIPTURAL ARGUMENT, Proving the Identity of the British Race with the Lost Ten Tribes. By PHILO-ISRAEL. Price One Penny.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

BRISTOL LEAFLETS ON THE IDENTIFICATION. 1 to 6; 1s. per 100.

Now ready.—Price 2s. 6d., cloth, gilt edges. Paper covers 1s. 6d. Post free for 33 or 20 stamps.

THE PILLAR OF WITNESS. A Scriptural View of the GREAT PYRAMID. By the late Commander B. W. TRACEY, R.N.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; W. H Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

THE EASTERN QUESTION.

Now ready, price One penny, post free 1½d. One dozen copies, post free 1s. 100 copies 6s., post free 7s.

THE IDENTITY OF THE BRITISH NATION WITH THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. THE CLUE TO THE EASTERN QUESTION. By C. W. E.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row

Now ready, price 6d., post free 7d

THE ANSWER to the EASTERN QUESTION as shewn in the IDENTITY of the BRITISH with ISRAEL. By the Author of the "New Old Story."

"The author has well managed her topic; her style of writing is clear and vigorous, and well calculated to do good service to the cause."—PIAZZI SMYTH.

London: S. W. Partridge & Co., 9, Paternoster-row.

EDWARD HINE'S LEAFLETS.

NO. 1.—MISSIONARY SUCCESS and the True Vitality of the Christian Church Depend upon Israel's Identification and Restoration. Price 1s. per 100

NO. 2.—ABRAHAM'S SEED a Literal, Legitimate, and National, Not a Spiritual Seed. By the Word of God. Four-page Leaflet. Price 2s. per 100.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed:—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, 5, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 22, 1879.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. III. No. 109. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 29, 1879. [ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
The Policy of Annexation in Afghanistan, and the Gates	45
Grace in the Desolate Heritages. By Piazzi Smyth	46
Great Pyramid Chronology Records its own A.M. Date and the 6,000 Years of Earth's Duration as Man's Home. By Thomas Clark Westfield	47
Are the Danes and the French, Gentiles? An Objection Answered	48
Testimony from the Author of the "Kings of the East"	49
What the Russians Say of the New Gate	49
The Late Princess Alice.—Letter from the Queen	49
Lord Dufferin on Israel's Company of Nations	49
Israel's Empire and Israel's Church	50
Poem—The Prodigal's Return; or, Lost Israel Found	50
Correspondence	50

THE POLICY OF ANNEXATION IN AFGHANISTAN, AND THE GATES.

IT is pretty clear now what Israel's Government means to do in the newly-occupied territory in Afghanistan. The orders have gone forth, and General Roberts, as the representative of the nation, has told the Turi chiefs, in and near the Kuram Valley, what Israel demands, and what the Afghan Tribes have now to expect there. She means, he said, permanently to occupy the Gates, also, of course, the country conquered from Jellalabad to the Shutar-gurdan Pass. Beyond that again, up to the Pisheen Valley, if not to the town of Candahar itself, the country is to be, no doubt, included in British territory. The thin red line of annexation has thus already been drawn through the new provinces to mark the change of ownership. General Roberts' words, as telegraphed by the correspondent of the Standard, on Dec. 30, 1878, plainly prove that the former spoke at the durbar as the mouthpiece of the British Government. His words were reported as follows:—

Addressing the Khans, General Roberts impressed upon them emphatically that the Ameer's rule had for ever passed away in that part of the country. He warned the chiefs, therefore, that they must henceforth look to England as their Sovereign Power, and must give a loyal adhesion to the British Government, which was strong to punish mischief-makers and peace-breakers, and generous in its rewards to those who loyally aided in the work of reconstruction. Henceforth they must look to the Government of the Empress, and not to that of the Ameer. Under her they might rely upon protection from all enemies, and upon being able to live peaceably and without that oppression to which they had long been accustomed. The exact form which our administration would assume in the Kuram Valley was not yet definitely settled. In conclusion, General Roberts presented to them Captain Rennick as their political officer. He would give them every assistance in their relations with the new Government. To him they must address themselves, and any complaints which they might have to make would be carefully investigated by him.

These words are clear and without any ambiguity at all. The conquered territory is British. "The Lion" has "gone through; he has both trodden down and torn in pieces, and none"—no Russian, no Afghan—"has been able to deliver." And why? Because the British are the "remnant of Jacob" living "among the Gentiles," and the Lord in Micah v. 8 allotted this particular rôle to the House of Israel. Therefore perforce she must accomplish it. Hence Ali Musjid fell, hence General Roberts stormed the Peiwar Pass, and caused the enemy to flee like deer, though they far outnumbered their British assailants. Hence, too, the Quetta Field force under General Stewart has met with no opposition, and it is reported those troops have already occupied Candahar itself without serious conflict with the enemy, or apparently with anything but the goodwill and consent of the population of those parts. But there has been another reason to account for the successful policy of annexation followed in this case. The country occupied and conquered includes the great Gates of North-west India within its bounds. Those Gates were destined to be Israel's possession under the primeval gift of God Himself to "our forefather Abraham and his seed for ever." In the fulness of time, therefore, God gave them all four into our keeping, and with them we must hold that moderate amount of adjacent country, which will enable us to arrange for "the scientific frontier" in place of "the haphazard" one hitherto in our possession, dividing us from our treacherous neighbours North-west of the Panjab.

A corroboration of our constant contention, that these four passes are the true Gates of India, lately appeared as blind testimony in the leading article of the Liverpool Daily Courier, Dec. 28, 1878. Discoursing on the probabilities of Yakoob Khan coming forward now his father is a fugitive from the throne, the editor went on to say:—

The Viceroy of India, who is entrusted with the responsibility, will not repel any amicable advances that Yakoob Khan may make. He will rather facilitate reconciliation and smooth the way for friendly relations. There never has been any desire on the part of the British Government to press Afghanistan to extremes. The sole purpose has been to terminate the mischievous league into which its Sovereign had entered with England's enemies, and to obtain material guarantees against danger to the North-west frontier of India. Practically these ends have already been attained. The Muscovite emissaries have been driven out of Cabul, and the potentate who with suicidal perversity encouraged them is a fugitive from his capital. The military peril of an exposed and indefensible frontier has also been removed by the mountain chain having fallen into the possession of the British forces. The latter advantage, once secured, cannot again be sacrificed. It cannot be permitted that India should be exposed to the jeopardy of Northern hordes pouring into the plains through the Kyber, the Bolan, and the Kuram passes. These Gates of the Hindu Koosh—the outer doors of North-west India—ought to be in the keeping of England for the safety of her own territory, and no doubt this condition will be a sine quâ non in the negotiations for peace. Nor is it probable, after past experience of the hollowness of treaties, that England will be content with mere verbal assurances of future good behaviour on the part of Afghanistan. Such guarantees must take a more tangible and material form, and no doubt the new Ameer will be predisposed to concessions of this nature. England has no desire to undertake the protectorate or internal administration of Afghanistan, but she must have accredited representatives at the court of Cabul to watch that no policy inimical to British interests is being pursued. This adverse policy was the real motive for Shere Ali's refusal to receive the British Envoy. He was in secret conspiracy with Russia against England, and the heavy penalties which have ensued upon this blunder ought to serve as a warning to Yakoob Khan. Certainly it will operate in this way in guiding England's future relations with Afghanistan, and therefore the new Ameer will be well advised to bow to the inevitable, that of looking to London rather than St. Petersburg as the source of safety and permanence for his dynasty.

Digitized by Google

The reader observes, of course, that the worthy editor—adopting all unwittingly Bible phraseology—

1. Describes Israel's new possessions as the Gates or outer doors of North-west India (Gen. xxii. 17).

2. That the Gates, once secured, must be retained by England—i.e., by Israel—for ever. The gifts and calling of God are without repentance (Rom. xi. 29).

3. That the Russians are the enemies of the British (Israelites), which was God's prediction directly in Ezek. xxxviii. 2, and xxxix. 1, and constructively in Gen. xxii. 17, xxiv. 60.

In regard to the general question of the international rectitude of our conduct originally in interfering at all in Afghan affairs and compelling the late Ameer to receive our embassy, we have heard many assert that our conduct was utterly indefensible, since we had no right to demand that the Afghan ruler should, if he were unwilling, accept our envoy and embassy, still less to fasten a war on him by reason of his refusal. We rather put it by way of illustration thus:—A sees B, his neighbour, gradually assuming a hostile attitude towards himself, and at last detects him in the very act of introducing barrels of gunpowder into his (B's) house, and hears him distinctly arranging them against the party walls in view to blow up A's premises. What is A to do? He is the stronger of the two, and self-preservation demands of him that he should take some step needful to secure himself, there being (we must suppose) no local municipal authority to whom the aggrieved party may appeal. That step is to enter A's house, to see for himself the preparations made for his detriment, and, if possible, to remove them. It would be needful also for A to watch B's "Gates," possibly also to take "possession" of them, in order that no more barrels of powder should be conveyed inside for whatever purpose. If A takes these steps as against B, who can blame him? The law of self-preservation overrides every other, and as in A's case, so in Israel's, the latter had clear right on their side, when seeing the cordial reception given by the Ameer to their deadly enemies—the Russians—they demanded that British agents ought and must have access to the interior of Afghan territories in order that they might see for themselves and report to their Government what the Russians were doing on their frontiers. Failing that, the British had the right, as A would have had in B's case, to post guards at B's "Gates," the matter being one of life and death to A, and taking possession of them by force, compel the Afghans to keep the peace in future, and give material guarantees or securities besides, that they would ever conduct themselves as faithful neighbours. Such is our view of the political aspect of this question. Being Israel, we have no doubt that "the Gates" have now been given us as promised by our God, and the result of further operations, we think, will be to place Afghanistan under British influence entirely, and wholly to exclude the Russian. "There is no room in Afghanistan," as Mr. Goschen and the Liberal party admitted in the late debates on the Vote of Censure, "for Russia and Great Britain together." One or the other must be supreme, and God means Israel to have the mastery, as we know, because He promised that "the kingdom and dominion and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven (therefore in Afghanistan) shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High"—that is, "to the children of Israel," the British (Dan vii. 27; Psa. cxlviii. 14).

The drama of God's dealings with the "earth" being about to be closed with the Eastern Question, we believe the Lord is settling His people Israel, East and West, into their final allotments before the last concluding overthrow of the Gentile nations takes place, and therefore we look on Israel's late policy in Afghanistan as a sound, God-honoured, God-guided policy—one which will stand in spite of all that Lord Beaconsfield's bitter enemies can say or do against it. Wherefore, brethren of the House of Israel, we call on you again to praise the Lord for all His mercies to our undeserving race, and for bringing our "blind" nation along the thorny path He is causing us to travel now so safely, as it is this day. Again we say, Praise ye the Lord.

GRACE IN THE DESOLATE HERITAGES.

By Piazzi Smyth, Astronomer-Royal for Scotland.

If "one touch of nature can make the whole world kin," what should not a series of evidences of reality of faith in God's Word, and promises, and approaching performance of some of His grandest intentions towards man; what indeed should they not do, accomplish, and bring about with much love and charity too, between Christian and Christian? At the least it might induce them to confer still more frankly and trustingly together on the hope that is in them; to compare their interpretations of difficult passages; and take courage from the preponderance of points whereon they agree perfectly, though the world sees nothing in them yet.

Amongst other sources of information, I must confess to having some pre-disposition to listen to opinions from over the sea; from those of our countrymen whose mission it has been to plant and people the desolate heritages destined of old for Israel. Those hardy pioneers have crossed a wider than earthly Jordan, have in a manner finished a life, perhaps full of troubles, on this side of the ocean; and, in many cases, after multitudinous wanderings in the very shadow of death and instant destruction, have risen, by the grace of God, to a new life in distant regions on the other side of the world.

Such men must have been schooled into thinking seriously, originally too; and though they may have wandered far from the sound of church-going bells, they have with them the Book which is diviner than any church tower or painted-glass window in the old land;—a land still so extensively burdened with relics of ancient superstitions, as well as mediæval edifices of a priesthood we are all now heartily ashamed of,—that the Book hardly fills so large a part of our horizon as it ought.

To some of us, the absence of the machinery of a State religion in a new country, might suggest the idea that there would be a forgetting there of God, accompanied by a growth of violence, Atheism, and all unrighteousness; and perhaps it would be so with most colonists of Gentile origin, prone, if not predestinated, to such disastrous courses.

But thanks be to the God of Israel, who, if He required

Digitized by Google

Israelites to go forth in order to prepare the distant scenes of His promises of old, against the time when the old country should have become too strait for the teeming multitudes there, yet He not only gave His Book to go with the expatriated, but imparted to them an understanding head and loving heart for its continued study and daily perusal. And now behold the gracious result! For equally in our newer colonies of Australia, and what were our older "plantations" in North America, a people is growing up who appreciate the Bible as a rule of faith, and a Divine history of the world, past, present, and future, fully as much as the best amongst ourselves; perhaps even more so.

At all events there is a directness about these students of the Book, and little but the Book, in the wilderness, which is refreshing, almost re-animating to those moving in an atmosphere of long-established social expediences and polite diplomacies. But, more than all the rest, is it encouraging to find up to what a saving extent the simple study of the Word has enabled men, so widely separated on the earth's surface, yet to arrive at nearly similar conclusions as to the time, the full time, for the performance and realisation of some of the greater prophecies, being now almost close at hand.

The Pilgrim Fathers knew nothing of these chronological features, and did not require to know them. But they faithfully kept the lamp of the Gospel message alive, that Gospel which must first be preached to all creatures; and insisted on the indispensable foundation of personal Christianity, and the individual confession of salvation by Christ's atonement alone. Thus they performed their part in their day; and now, a Wiser than any Pilgrim Father is causing the pure faith they so long nourished and brought up, to bud forth simultaneously in far distant regions, with an understanding of new promises, but exactly in the manner appointed of old for this time in which we live, or are approaching to, and for this time only of all the ages.

I am myself the unworthy recipient of such frequently grand letters from wholly unknown writers across the seas, that I hardly think myself justified in keeping them all locked up in a drawer. They must have been intended for wider usefulness than merely my own edification and strengthening in the faith; and as one example, specially to show Bible Christians here the equable progress and simultaneous advance now making by both Manasseh and Ephraim in learning, and believing too, from the Bible, what is to come upon the earth, I venture to contribute the following letter, in all its naive feeling and unstudied manner, to the instructive columns of the BANNER:—

Ocheltree, Johnson Co., Kansas, U.S.,
November 28th, 1878.

BROTHER SMYTH,—For many years I have been a believer in the soon and personal coming of our Lord and Saviour, and have carefully examined all the proofs on that subject that have been brought to my notice, and am now fully convinced that the close of this dispensation is at hand.

It has been but a short time since my attention has been called to the testimony of the Great Pyramid, and the Identity of the Anglo-Saxons with the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel. At first these things appeared to be very frivolous and of little importance; but it seems to me of late that the Lord has opened my eyes, and given me a broader, grander view of His mighty plan. I am now anxious to know the whole truth concerning the two subjects named—that is, the Great Pyramid and the Identity.

I am not acquainted with anyone in this part of the United States (Kansas) who takes any particular interest in these subjects; and not being very well supplied with this world's riches, it is not easy for me to obtain just what I want. Nevertheless, through the columns of some of our periodicals (The Rest, &c.) I have obtained much valuable information, for which I am very thankful.

I sometimes lecture on the fulfilment of prophecy, signs of the times, &c.; and as I intend to make an extended tour this winter, I wish to get all the information upon these new subjects that may be possible. The great masses here have not even heard of these things. The professed Christians of the orthodox Churches are just as ignorant of these facts as the non-professors. True, there are some in all Churches who have been awakened to the great fact, that some mighty change is about to take place in this world's affairs; but even their ideas seem to be vague and uncertain. You will see by reading the results of their deliberations that they are beginning to study now just where the Adventists did over thirty years ago.

Many of those who accept the doctrine of the personal coming, ridicule the idea that the Great Pyramid could have been designed by any other than an Egyptian king; and look upon a man who advocates the restoration of Israel as bordering on idiotcy or insanity; and I regret to say that many of our Adventist brethren scout these ideas as ridiculous and absurd.

So far as these grand truths are concerned, the people have not fairly begun to get their eyes open; and knowing this to be the case, I have long felt a desire to do whatever was in my power to remove the blindness from my fellow-men. I wish to learn from you to what extent the great truths, so loved by us, are believed in your own country (Great Britain). Do these doctrines obtain among many of the nobility? Are the members of the Royal Family in the least impressed by these views?

There is much discord among the different expositors of prophecy, and signs of the times, in this country. I often wonder that the Lord would allow so many to be in darkness who seem to be diligently seeking the light. But we know that He will do all things well, so we bide His time. What is your opinion concerning the period of time to intervene between the coming of Christ to translate His saints and the full establishment of His glorious kingdom? Do you think that the "seven vials" (Rev. xv. 7) contain the seven last plagues; and that they will all be poured out in the interval of time mentioned?

I have long believed that nearly all prophecy has a two or threefold fulfilment; that many things which were looked upon as fulfilments, were only types, pointing to something yet to come. I think that, during the interval, earth's grand drama will be enacted; by the side of which all other acts have been mere rehearsals. I think the image must stand on its feet, complete in all its parts, ere Christ smites it to the dust.

In conclusion, I will say, I am striving to learn the whole truth, ever open to conviction; prepared to believe "all things" until God's words prove them false. As regards the nature of the kingdom, I believe very nearly with N. H. Barbour, publisher of the Herald of the Morning. I believe also that God will bring all Israel up out of their graves, and permit them to be instructed in the way of truth. If you can send me any tracts, I will distribute them, and whatever truths I may find therein, to the best of my ability, and repay you so far as may be in my power.

Your brother, in the hope of eternal life,
F. G. W.

GREAT PYRAMID CHRONOLOGY

RECORDS ITS OWN A.M. DATE AND THE 6,000 YEARS OF EARTH'S DURATION AS MAN'S HOME.

BY THOMAS CLARK WESTFIELD.

AFTER a careful perusal of the last edition of Professor Piazzi Smyth's most excellent work, "Our Inheritance in the Great Pyramid," it struck me as being very remarkable that the date assigned for the construction of the Great Pyramid should be given as B.C. 2170. It appeared to me that to reckon the years antecedent to a long distant event was a most unusual way of signifying the date of erection of a building, and the difficulty is not altogether got rid of by its undoubted prophetical character. The thought therefore suggested was, to endeavour to ascertain if anything very prominent about its construction would indicate the date of the world (A.M.) in which it was founded. Well, the result of this investigation is, that I believe we are face to face with this date on approaching the entrance passage, which is given by the number of square Pyramid units contained therein. Who has not been struck by the dimensions of this passage? It is the first feature that obtrudes itself upon the notice, and it appears that no satisfactory reason has, as yet, been assigned for it. Nor do I think what is now suggested, by any means, embraces the whole of the significance, although it may perhaps be considered of some importance. Referring to the table of measurements of the entrance passage given at p. 332 of the above work, and taking the minimum measures for the reasons stated in the preceding paragraph—viz., the abrading and exfoliating influences—I found on reducing them to Pyramid units, and multiplying the height by the breadth, it gave me the sum of 1948·5270 square units. Therefore, say—

Digitized by Google

Date of building of Pyramid . { A.M. 1949 / B.C. 2170 } = 6,000.
Length of Grand Gallery indicating A.D. 1881

Thus showing the termination of the 6,000 years of the world's history at the close of the present dispensation about the year 1881. There appears to be a peculiar fitness in this proposition. Time past being represented by a square compacted mass. Time passing and future, by a long continuing floor line.

ARE THE DANES AND THE FRENCH, GENTILES? AN OBJECTION ANSWERED.

A DOUBTING friend, to whom the above is a difficult puzzle, has sent it to us for solution, and we have accordingly endeavoured, to the best of our ability, to return a satisfactory answer, of which our readers shall have the benefit; and they must judge whether it be a sufficient one or not. The question was put to us in the following form: "It is stated by Mr. Edward Hine, and also by you in your works, that 'the Normans are the Tribe of Benjamin, and the so-called Norman Invasion was only the Tribeship rejoining the others in Britain.' Now Mr. E. Hine says authoritatively that Britain contains the whole of the Ten Tribes, and that the nations North-west of Europe —viz., Norway, Sweden, and Denmark—are not parts of Israel, and must therefore be Gentiles. It is well known that the Normans arrived (in that part of France from which they took their name) from Norway, and were mostly younger sons of various families. I therefore think," added our questioner, "that if the Normans are Benjamites, and therefore parts of Israel, the Norwegians must necessarily be Israelites too, and the present inhabitants of Norway being descended from these people must have a claim to be the children of Abraham as well as the Anglo-Saxon race. Similarly, if the Danes, whose piratical attacks on England caused such trouble to the people of this land, were Israelites, what must the Danes of the present day be? Israelites or Gentiles?"

Such was the inquiry—an interesting one, no doubt—but one exhibiting a weak point or two in the armour of the objector, of which he probably had no suspicion.

For 1st. How did he know that the Northmen who left Norway for Normandy, and eventually landed in England, were all younger sons of various families? or,

2nd. If they were such, that the elder branches did not in course of time follow their younger branches? or,

3rd. Die out where they had their domicile?

The inquirer, too, jumped to the conclusion, for which he has no proof, that the Norwegians and Danes of the present day are the lineal descendants of the families whose younger scions landed and plundered the East coasts of England, or landing after the battle of Hastings in A.D. 1066, conquered the Saxons and fell upon their spoil. The answer that we sent to our friend was to the following effect:—

Allowing that the Normans were clans forming a portion of the Northmen and Danes of Norway and Denmark, there is no evidence to show that the younger sons alone left their homes, or that those they left behind them were of the same race as the emigrants who settled in Great Britain. Because certain clans or Tribes of Northmen leaving their homes in Norway and Denmark invaded England, and landed on the North and Southern coasts (some viâ Normandy in France), that fact cannot prove per se that the people out of whom the invaders came were of the same race? For instance:—Every year there arrive now shiploads of Germans, Danes, Swedes, and other foreigners at New York, all having left for that spot from (let us suppose) Liverpool in England. Does this fact prove that all the residents of Liverpool are Germans, Danes, and Swedes? Surely not! It is merely evidence that some Germans, some Danes, and some Swedes have, in some way or other, found their way to Liverpool, and have thence passed over by ship to America. Again, it is a common sight to see landing every week at Southampton ship-loads of English—i.e., British—men, women, and children who have come from Calcutta, Madras, and Ceylon. Does this fact prove that Calcutta, Madras, and Ceylon are peopled by British subjects, and all the inhabitants these shiploads of British passengers left behind them, are British-born subjects too? It is well known that is not the case! The only proper inference we can draw from the facts witnessed at Southampton is that somehow or other, by perfectly natural arrangements, British-born subjects have found their way to Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, and Ceylon, and that periodically they arrive in shiploads from those parts, and land in Great Britain, just as the ancient Danes and Northmen landed in the North, East, and Southern coasts centuries ago.

Taking another case, there seems no more reason to conclude that the Danish pirates, who plundered and then settled on the English coasts, being Israelites left behind them as the masses of their late fellow-countrymen more Tribes of the same Hebrew people, than there is to decide that when the Twelve Tribes left Egypt in triumph in the old days, those they left behind them were of the same race as themselves. While they were together living in Egypt, there was clearly nothing to distinguish the Israelites from their task-masters and hosts, the Egyptians, for when they went out, a great mixed company, to bury Joseph in the land of Canaan, God's Word tells us the people of that land (the Canaanites) "seeing the mourning in the floor of Atad, said, This is a grievous mourning to the Egyptians—wherefore the name of it is called Abel-Mizraim (the mourning of the Egyptians), which is beyond Jordan" (Exod. l. 11). The fact was, however, the Canaanites were in error as to the ethnic character of the proceedings, for the mourners were not Egyptians chiefly, but Hebrews, and a mistake arising from the contact of the two races was made between them by the foreign spectators. The Lord God of Israel, however, though man could not distinguish, did eventually separate the Hebrews from the Egyptians, and brought them out "by a high hand and by a stretched out arm" from the land of bondage, and the same God, by the same power, separated "the wanderers" from among the Gentiles whither He had scattered them, when He planted our Israelite Danish and Norman ancestors in this land, as He distinctly promised He would in Ezek. xi. 16, 17, and Amos ix. 9.

While we argue in this way, however, we hold (as our readers are aware), and have always maintained, that it is very possible, nay, very probable, that all along the route by which Israel came to this land there may be "rifts and remnants" of that race left behind, unknown to us now, whose existence cannot be proved, but whom the Lord knows. These, when "the great trumpet shall be blown," shall come forth with those which are "ready to perish in the land of Assyria," with the "outcasts in the land of Egypt" (meaning perhaps in Germany and in France, if H. R. be correct), and shall, with Israel of the isles, the great Ten-Tribed nation, "worship the Lord in the holy mount of Jerusalem" (Isa. xxvii. 13). May He hasten that day, and give us all, nationally, the meetness to stand in His sight, and to become as "the righteous Nation"—"a name of joy, a praise, and an honour, before all the Gentiles of the earth," to the glory of His great name (Jer. xxxiii. 9).

Digitized by Google

TESTIMONY FROM THE AUTHOR OF THE "KINGS OF THE EAST."

By L. G. R.

In the preface of his second edition, our author commences by saying that "Reflection and research have enabled him confidently to state, from a close comparison of history with the prophecies, that the Empire of Britain is the Empire of the stone," and though this conclusion may be novel, he trusts that inquiry will only prove that it is well founded.

To prove that Britain is addressed as the "Kings of the East," he says :—

The question asked of the islands is the next subject for consideration. The words are, "Who raised up the righteous man from the East, called him to his foot, gave the nations before him, and made him rule over kings? He gave them as dust to his sword and as driven stubble to his bow. He pursued them and passed safely; even by the way that he had not gone with his feet (Isa. xli. 2, 3). By referring to the Bible, it will be observed that the word "man" is not in the original, and the whole passage shows that the rendering ought to have been, "Who raised up the righteous Power from the East?" and that no mistake should be made in understanding what Power is meant, a peculiar mark is fixed upon it by the prophet, which none other Eastern Empire has ever borne. In tracing the rise and progress of the Mohammedan conquerors Eastward, it was stated that they entered India by way of Cabul and the Indus across the Western or North-western frontier. Timur also went to India by the same route. But the Power under consideration it is said, "He pursued them (the princes of the East) and passed safely; even by the way that he had not gone with his feet." Where all other conquerors went by land and pursued their conquests on land, it was reserved for the British East India Company to go there by sea and pursue the princes of India on land, or by the way which in going to India they did not tread with their feet.

It is now evident why the question is put to the islands, for who is so well able to answer it as Britain? To the inhabitants of these islands every circumstance which is connected with the history of the Company ought to be familiar, and the particulars are in their possession, whilst other nations have to gain their information from them. The singular constitution of the Anglo-Indian army presents a feature well worthy of regard.

In the government administered by the Company, the most striking feature is that military force by which their extensive dominion was originally acquired and is still held in submission. Its composition is perhaps more remarkable than that of any army ever levied. India is subjected to a foreign yoke by her own troops, paid with her own money. So that, in fact, India is preserved to us by her own people and the cost of government paid by her own treasure. In every way that the Anglo-Indian Empire can be regarded it is "given" to this country. The more history is studied, the more clearly will it become manifest that the words of the prophecy are strictly fulfilled—that in the history of British India they meet their complete accomplishment, and were constrained to acknowledge that the nations have been "given" before us.

The proof of the British being a righteous Power rests upon the testimony of the natives of India themselves, whose arguments are advanced by our author to substantiate his views. They are very telling and true.

WHAT THE RUSSIANS SAY OF THE NEW GATE.

The Russian Exchange Gazette said in July, 1878, "Cyprus lies along the great naval route through the Suez Canal to India, and is much nearer the Dardanelles and Bosphorus than Malta. It becomes for England a third station on the naval route from the Atlantic to the Indian Ocean. Since, in 1864, the Palmerston-Russell Cabinet gave the Ionian Islands to Greece, England, on this route, has only had two stations, Gibraltar and Malta. When Lord Beaconsfield purchased, two or three years ago, on account of the English Government, the greater portion of the Suez shares, England acquired in that Canal Company a preponderating influence. But between Malta and Suez there remained for the English a considerable open space, which is now broken by Cyprus. This island, from its proximity to Anatolia and Syria, is of great importance to England in connection with her protectorate over Asia Minor. And England has gained all this at the small cost of the £6,000,000."

THE LATE PRINCESS ALICE.—LETTER FROM THE QUEEN.

To Philo-Israel,—I trust you may find space for Her Majesty's gracious letter. It shows the real nature of the ties that bind the nation to their beloved Sovereign, and should be recorded in the columns of the Banner of Israel.

Yours faithfully,
J. S. Anderson.

Upper Norwood.

(From the Supplement to the London Gazette.)

Whitehall, December 27, 1878.

The following letter from the Queen has this day been received by the Right Honourable the Secretary of State for the Home Department :—

"Osborne, Dec. 26, 1878.

"The Queen is anxious to take the earliest opportunity of expressing publicly her heartfelt thanks for the universal and most touching sympathy shown to her by all classes of her loyal and faithful subjects on the present occasion, when it has pleased God to call away from this world her dearly-beloved daughter, the Princess Alice, Grand Duchess of Hesse.

"Overwhelmed with grief at the loss of a dear child, who was a bright example of loving tenderness, courageous devotion, and self-sacrifice to duty, it is most soothing to the Queen's feelings to see how entirely her grief is shared by her people. The Queen's deeply-afflicted son-in-law, the Grand Duke of Hesse, is also anxious to make known his sincere gratitude for the kind feelings expressed towards himself and his dear children in their terrible bereavement, and his gratification at the appreciation shown by the people of England of the noble and endearing qualities of her whom all now mourn.

"Seventeen years ago, at this very time, when a similar bereavement crushed the Queen's happiness, and this beloved and lamented daughter was her great comfort and support, the nation evinced the same touching sympathy, as well as when, in December, 1871, the Prince of Wales was at the point of death.

"Such an exhibition of true and tender feeling will ever remain engraved on the Queen's heart, and is more to be valued at this moment of great distress in the country, which no one more deeply deplores than the Queen herself."

LORD DUFFERIN ON ISRAEL'S COMPANY OF NATIONS.

At a banquet given to Lord Dufferin at Belfast, on Tuesday evening, November 26, 1878 (the mayor presiding), his lordship made an excellent speech, from which we quote a few noble sentences because they illustrate in a remarkable manner, in the language of a blind witness, our own often-repeated words regarding Israel's glorious company of nations, linked with the great mother in the West by ties of loving loyalty and esteem, destined, as God is true, never to be ruptured. His lordship said, "From his very earliest days he had always been a believer in our colonial future, and his official experience had convinced him that if only England would be true to herself and to those noble children whom she had sent forth to plant the laws, liberty, language, domestic peace, and manliness of England upon the earth; if she would only encourage them to cling to their birthright as her sons; if she would only treat them in a tender, sympathetic, generous spirit, then this famous Empire of ours, which was daily asserting itself with ever-increasing power and vitality, in every hemisphere, and under every sun, instead of showing signs of disruption, would find its associated realms daily becoming prouder and prouder of their common origin, daily looking more fondly back upon their common antecedents, drawing more closely and closely together those bonds which united them to each other, and to the mother country."

A Russian Newspaper on Cyprus and the Protectorate.—The St. Petersburg News says, "England establishes a protectorate over the whole of Asiatic Turkey, besides acquiring the Island of Cyprus—a splendid position in the South-east of the Mediterranean Sea, close to the shores of Asia Minor, Syria, Egypt, and the Suez Canal. Here England will establish strong outposts, and may easily station an army of one hundred thousand men ready to act either in European or in Asiatic Turkey. Cyprus, taken in connection with Malta and Gibraltar, will complete, in a very advantageous manner for England, her line of Mediterranean stations."

Digitized by Google

ISRAEL'S EMPIRE AND ISRAEL'S CHURCH.

(Taken from the Supplement to "Church and State," Sept. 9, 1878.)

THE British Empire extends over 9,000,000 square miles, or more than a seventh part of the earth's surface, and the number of British subjects is estimated at a sixth part of the world's population. Our colonists, scattered all over the world, number about 3,000,000; this is being increased every year by 200,000. The heathen committed to England's care and stewardship, whom it is, therefore, her duty, as a State, to evangelise, may be reckoned at 150,000,000 souls. Here, then, is a mighty work for England to do; the preservation of the faith in her own colonists, and the conversion of the heathen. If, then, the State has duties to discharge in promoting the education and religion of its citizens at home, who shall say that she may neglect the educational or spiritual necessities of her children in foreign parts?

Nor can we fail to notice the same over-ruling Providence in preparing and calling England to this mighty work, which we see in times immediately before the incarnation of Christ. Rome had been the conqueror of the world; her fleets and armies had opened up the most distant countries; her ships sailed everywhere; her policy interpenetrated all kindreds, nations, and tongues; her roads brought together the most distant provinces; her institutions stamped their character on the conquered races; her language changed and moulded all others; the commerce of the world flowed to her centre; a tide of human beings rolled incessantly to this mistress of the world, and flowed back, bearing forth her tastes, civilisation, and ideas to her furthest dependencies. Thus, the whole known world was knit as one man. Interchange of thought and communion of feeling could ramify into every artery of the Empire. That such a state of things was peculiarly favourable to, and instrumental (under God) in advancing the fortunes of Christianity, the page of every historian, whether friend or foe, bears ample evidence.

Thus has it been with England. Side by side with her Church, cradled in independence, sustained by the invisible Presence, and reformed on primitive principles, has grown up a race with singular powers and destined to fill the world. Long centuries had educated its energies and pointed out its glorious future. Indomitable energy and zeal, untiring perseverance, never-failing self-reliance had always characterised this race. And now in progress of time, all other races having had their turn, the time came for the trial of the Anglo-Saxon. England's children have founded colonies in all lands. Her dependencies are manifold. Colossal Empires have sprung out of desolate wastes. Thus the Saxon is everywhere; his commerce fills every port; his flag flies on every sea; and there is no land or region where the Saxon has not set his foot. And with him is gone not only those material marks of progress, but his language, customs, and institutions. With the power and influence, too, of a dominant race, these have been and are still leavening all masses of society to which they come.

Such a mighty influence is incalculable; such a mighty power cannot remain neutral. Her opportunities for good or evil are fearful to contemplate. For from the mother country would spring towns, cities, countries, Empires, full of evil or full of good. How, then, has England met the crisis? Let those untiring exertions to spread the truth make answer. Her material progress has but opened up the path of the evangelist. Wherever the English language has been spoken, there, too, has been planted England's Church. Her ministers have penetrated to the most distant lands and fastnesses of heathendom. Her priests lift up holy hands in all climes. Her Bible and Prayer Book are read in every zone. Her Episcopate has reproduced itself, till it encircles the whole world, for upon England's Church, as upon England's Empire, the sun never sets. Wherever the emigrant sets his foot, there he finds planted the Church of his fathers in all its integrity and purity.

Here we have Identities of the British with Israel sufficient to cause dismay to our opponents one and all, and alleged, be it remembered, by a perfectly "blind" witness, who probably would be scandalised beyond measure if told he had written an article full of evidence that the British are Lost Israel. Yet, so it is. The article alleges:—

1. The vast extent in territory of the British Empire—God's promise to Israel (Dan. vii. 27).

2. Their enormous colonial Empire—God's provision for Israel (Isa. xlix. 8).

3. Their immense heathen Empire—God's special "gift" to Israel (Psa. ii. 8).

4. That the Saxons are everywhere—scattered like Israel, West, East, North, and South (Gen. xxviii. 14).

5. That their colossal Empires have sprung out of "desolate wastes"—the description of Israel's possessions (Isa. lxi. 4).

6. That their commerce fills every port—Balaam's prediction regarding Israel's traffic (Num. xxiv. 7).

7. That their flag flies on every sea—which includes the promise to Israel of the power of "The Gate" (Gen. xxii. 17).

8. That theirs is the dominant race destined to fill the world—the very description of multitudinous Israel—"above only, not beneath; the head, and not the tail;" "ruling only," and never in subjection—"the chief of nations" (Deut. xxviii. 13, xv. 6; Amos vi. 1; Hosea i. 10; Gen. xxiv. 60).

9. That theirs is the evangelising missionary Power for all the world—God's promise to Israel, and a description of her world-wide functions (Gen. xxii. 18, xxviii. 14; Isa. xxvii. 6, xliii. 21, lxi. 9, lxvi. 19).

10. That theirs is the world-encircling Empire and Church—God's own providential arrangement regarding the children of Israel (Deut. xxxii. 8, 9).

We thank God for our blind witnesses, and the one we have now dealt with, is indeed a valuable one.

THE PRODIGAL'S RETURN; OR, LOST ISRAEL FOUND.

A PSALM OF ISRAEL FOR A.D. 1879.

T he Lord doth reign, let earth His praise resound;
H is word is truth, the long-lost Israel's found;
E phraim bemoans, the prodigal returns,

B ritain her Abrahamic line discerns,
R eceived again—'tis life "as from the dead;"
I srael reclaimed, from idol-gods hath fled;
T he Father's pitying love doth now embrace
I srael, His wayward child, in grace by grace.
S ing, O ye isles; ye seas, your voices raise,
H eaven join the chorus, give Jehovah praise;

N ations and people now their tribute bring,
A nd Judah, long dismayed, owns Jesus King.
T he earth full as the waters o'er the sea,
I n knowledge of His glory soon shall be;
O ur God shall bless, the earth her increase give,
N ow Israel lost is found—was dead, doth live.

Rodboro'. S. L. G.

Correspondence.

THE REV. J. B. CLIFFORD, OF BRISTOL, AGAIN.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—I have before me a letter written by the Rev. Mr. Clifford, on the 6th instant, being the Epiphany, but not at all answering to the sacred day in its tone or light-bearing nature.

He is personal in his attacks upon us. He says, "Although I know a good many Anglo-Israelites, I have been struck with the fact that not one of them possesses what I should call a 'great mind,' but remarkably the reverse."

After quoting some of the passages in Bishop Titcomb's "Anglo-Israel Postbag," and attempting their refutation, he adds, "I could give many other instances of such treatment of God's Word—treatment which shows ignorance, irreverence, and blasphemy—and, O it is a dreadful thing to think that God's people should lend their influence to such wickedness. Again, I say, that although I have been studying and praying over the Bible for more than fifty-five years, and have been engaged in controversy for nearly that term, I have never met in the writings of Socinians, Papists, and Infidels anything worse than in the writings of the Anglo-Israelites; and the painful part of the subject is that they do not see the wickedness of such treatment of the Word of God."

My own father was also a minister of the Gospel fifty-six years, or thereabout, but I do not remember on any occasion hearing him utter, much less did I ever know him write, such a torrent of invective against anyone.

Digitized by Google

But let us not be grieved at the above aspersions, although they are unjust, but quietly examine the grounds on which they are founded. I propose to take one of the passages which Mr. Clifford has quoted, and examine it carefully, in order that your readers may judge for themselves, and perhaps some who do not hold with us also, whether we altogether deserve quite such anathemas as the above, and I would add, ex uno disce omnes.

He bases his anathemas on some passages of Bishop Titcomb's book, one of which is to be found at p. 101, in reference to which passage Mr. Clifford writes thus, "Titcomb says, p. 101, Israel was to mix among the Gentiles—this was to be their destiny. Hosea vii. 8—whom he is quoting—says, 'Ephraim hath mixed himself among the people; Ephraim is a cake not turned.'"

Why, one would really think that Mr. Clifford had never read the prophets at all, in lieu of being an able exponent of them. Does not our prophet Isaiah write, "He was oppressed, and He was afflicted," and so on, 700 years and more before this great event occurred? Yet it does not offend Mr. Clifford to assert, with us, that it "was to be His destiny." I wish men would learn Hebrew, or at least read the translation and notes of those who have fulfilled this duty! The Hebrew word in this case, which Bishop Titcomb has considered points out the destiny of the people, is in the future tense!!! so where is the wrong "treatment of God's Word?" Where is the "wickedness?" Where is the "ignorance, irreverence, and blasphemy" of a literal, accurate translation of a future verb in a future sense?

I know that every scholar in England, who considers this particular charge, will at once acknowledge that the ignorance of Hebrew lies at Mr. Clifford's own door; and as to the "irreverence and blasphemy," as I cannot see in what they consist, I must leave them to the God who alone can know our hearts; and at the same time express my opinion strongly against the use of violent language. It does very well for the Popes and Priests of Rome, but it proves nothing.

From three of Mr. Clifford's letters which I have now before me, written to a brother minister's wife, I extract, in order, the following words, and cannot but wonder what can be the use of employing such words. Can it be because we do not see the evidence for Mr. Clifford's own Persian theory?

"People embrace error and strive to propagate it. I regard the Anglo-Israel theory as one of the worst heresies I know." . . . . "Shocked with his blasphemies." . . . "I entreat you to examine your own heart, and to abandon a system so dishonouring to our Lord and Master." . . . "I regard it as an awful sin." . . . Irvingism, Ritualism, and every other bad system." . . . "Not one of them possesses what I should call a great mind, but remarkably the reverse." . . . "The Anglo-Israelites pervert the Word of God by adding to it or taking from it."

Speaking of Bishop Titcomb,—

"People who can write such ignorant nonsense are certainly splendid authorities on any subject." . . . "I regard the passage as blasphemous." . . . "What a system that must be which requires such a treatment of the words of inspiration." . . . "Look at the trash on page 105, another gross interpretation. Well, what says this Anglo-Israelite, just as if he did not understand English or common sense."

Why all this animus and invective? Why not consent to shelve bad words and calmly debate the matter with me in a Christian spirit and temper, in the Victoria Rooms, in Clifton? I am ready to forgive his language, and to meet him in humility, meekness, and brotherly love. I remain, yours very truly,

HERBERT MARRIOTT.

11th Jan., 1879. (Curate of Amberley.)

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—From my early youth I have been an enthusiastic Bible student. My experience will, doubtless, be the same as that of many others. I was attracted by the histories of the patriarchs, and enchanted by the grand descriptions of the prophets; but while the stories of the former pleased my youthful imagination and the mysteries of the latter exercised my speculative faculties, as I attained manhood I felt how poor and meagre were all the attempts which I could meet with to unravel the enigmas which were therein presented, or the questions which arose in my mind. I admitted the ordinary theory of interpretation of Daniel's four beasts, and image of gold, but I did not relish the idea of our native land being reckoned one of the toes—the ten kingdoms—which were to be destroyed; while the Lost Ten Tribes were, to me, a puzzle and a mystery which I could not comprehend, though I had read all that came in my way regarding them. Such being the unsatisfactory result of my Biblical studies, I laid aside for a length of time all inquiry into the prophecies, believing, that as time rolled on, light would be thrown upon every dark passage, as the needs of God's Church, and the unfoldings of His plan required, even as it had been in the past with the questions relative to slavery, toleration, civil and religious liberty, missions, and similar lessons which we have learnt from a more careful study of the "good old Book."

It was in the year 1870 I first came across a pamphlet entitled "Twenty-Seven Identifications of the British Nation with the House of Israel—i.e., the Lost Ten Tribes." When I saw the title, light flashed upon my mind. Why not? I asked myself. Here we have been looking all over the world for the Lost Ten Tribes, and never thought of looking among ourselves, and comparing our present position with what the Bible tells us one day is to be the position of the Ten Tribes, so called Lost. Why not look for them nearer home, seeing that in Afghanistan, Japan, and the Indians of North America, and many other races have all been pitched upon, and as often rejected, while the English race are, certainly at present, the most highly-favoured race upon earth. Why is this? There must be a reason, and a Scriptural one too, if, as we believe, there is a God that ruleth in the earth, and righteously judgeth the nations. To this question I have, as yet, met no sensible reply, apart from the Identity. It is not because we deserve it, because we are such a Protestant, Bible-loving, God-fearing, nation, that we so enjoy the Divine favour, for then it would be a result of our righteousness; but it is of God's sovereign will and good pleasure, and because He would perform the word which He spake unto our fathers, because He would keep His oath to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob.

I did not immediately after reading the "Twenty-Seven Identifications" fall in entirely with all therein written. I thought at the time there were too many, more than were really needed, seeing that half a dozen were quite sufficient for any reasonable person; but I felt satisfied that there was more in the Identity than could be laughed down, or pooh-poohed away, and rejoiced that I had got a key which unlocked many of the prophecies, and threw a flood of light upon numerous passages (though not removing every difficulty) which no other theory could near so well do. I have watched political events since, and noted, as they have appeared in current prints, various discoveries in the East, and all seem to be pointing in the same direction—the stream of Empire is turning again to the East. This year past I have been engaged in looking up the mass of Identity literature already published, and after examining all the evidence I have so far been able to do, I cannot but conclude that it is not only possible, but in the highest degree probable, that the Anglo-Saxon race is the remnant of Jacob, Ephraim, the Lost Ten Tribes, and that for very few facts which are universally received in history, can there be one-fourth of the evidence produced which can be brought forward in favour of the Identity.

I have read the BANNER OF ISRAEL, and been much pleased with it; not the least valuable, in my opinion, are the series of articles on Identity evidence by "blind" witnesses—very aptly, sometimes, so named. In the course of my reading I have met with many, and I should like to send you an extract from Dr. Porter's "Giant Cities of Bashan," which I think may please some of your readers. An account of the Kirghiz Calendar, taken from Mr. Eugene Schuyler's Turkestan, may also prove interesting, if you have room.

I remain, dear sir, yours truly,

JOSEPH THOMSON.

5, Market-avenue, Ashton-under-Lyne,
Dec. 6, 1878.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—Thinking that by re-working the calculations on page 7 of the BANNER for the 1st inst., it might be found that the figures would fall in more closely, I obtained the following results—viz.:—

A $\sqrt{120^2 + 20^2} = 121{\cdot}6552506059 +$

$\sqrt{300^2 + 50^2} = 304{\cdot}13812651 +$

121·655 cubits + as above = 3041·3812651 + inches.

$\sqrt{120^2 + 20^2}$ as above (A), not as stated in second case, as 120·416 cubits. And 3041·38, &c., inches as above; not 3010·4 inches.

$\sqrt{121{\cdot}65 + 10^2} = 122{\cdot}0603$ cubits; not 122·065. And 3051·5075 inches; not 3051·2 inches.

Yours truly, L. BIDEN.

21, Sion-terrace, Portsea, January 6, 1879.

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements
(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O O payable at Ludgate-circus.

BOOKS, ETC.

BANNER OF ISRAEL, VOLUME II. Now ready. May be had, by ordering, of all booksellers, price 7s., beautifully bound in blue cloth, gilt.

Now ready price 7s., post free 6d. extra.

THE SECOND VOLUME OF THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

This volume contains a large number of articles on our Identity with Lost Israel by the best and most learned writers on the subject. Also many interesting papers on the Great Pyramid by Professor Piazzi Smyth, F.R.S.E., Astronomer-Royal for Scotland, Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A., Major H. A. Tracey, R.A., Charles Horner, Esq., and others. London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

"BANNER OF ISRAEL" FREE CIRCULATION FUND.

Persons interested in "Our Identity," who have the opportunity of judiciously circulating copies of the BANNER OF ISRAEL, and are willing to assist in the work, can be supplied with any number of copies they can use, gratuitously. They will be sent to such persons free of all cost. Application is to be made to the Secretary of the "Banner of Israel Free Circulation Fund," Mr. R. Fergusson Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C., to whom all remittances for this object should also be made, but NOT to the Editor of the BANNER—Philo-Israel.

	£	s.	d.
A Friend at Clifton	2	0	0

MODERN HIEROGLYPHICS OF THE APOCALYPSE AND GREAT PYRAMID, illustrated by ten plates, with explanations, by A WATCHER. To which is prefixed an introduction, showing how recent events in the Eastern Question and the Church have worked towards a fulfilment of the theory suggested in the book.—October, 1878.

Price 16s. A few copies coloured by the Author £1 1s.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

THE ANGLO-ISRAEL POST BAG.

BY THE RIGHT REV. BISHOP TITCOMB.

WITH AN APPENDIX, embodying the Gates of Israel, as enumerated by Philo-Israel in the "Inquiry."

"He that hath ears to hear, let him hear."

HEALTH, DIET, AND DEAFNESS.

NOISES IN THE EARS.

THE REV. E. J. SILVERTON will send his Health Advocate, giving important advice and particulars on the above subjects, free to any person, showing how Deafness may be at once relieved and ultimately cured. Many most interesting cases are set forth. Thousands of people are hearing Sermons and Lectures to-day who would have remained deaf had they not applied to Mr. Silverton. When a remedy is so successful, ought not every deaf person in the kingdom to try it, if it be in his or her power? It is a pleasing thing to a minister to make the deaf to hear, not only in a religious sense, but literally. Mr. Silverton may truly say to the deaf, "He that hath ears to hear, let him hear."

The Health Advocate also gives an account of several invaluable remedies which are producing the greatest possible good. The Medical Energiser is giving health to vast numbers. The Nutrient Food of Food is a splendid assistant to all kinds of medicine. The Great Lung Remedy is a marvellous Medicine for the cure of consumption, asthma, and all kinds of coughs. These, and other proved and tested Medicines which go under the title of "The Rev. E. J. Silverton's Ready Relief Remedies," may be ordered through any Chemist. London Wholesale Houses:—Sanger, Oxford-street; Barclay, Farringdon-street; Edwards, Queen Victoria-street; Thompson, New North-road; or of Rev. E. J. Silverton, Albert House, Park-street, Nottingham.

SERMONS WHICH HAVE REACHED THE MASSES, by REV. E. J. SILVERTON. Over 400 Pages Crown 8vo. Price 6s. Order of any Bookseller, or ALABASTER & PASSMORE, 4, Paternoster-buildings, London. The Sermons are quaint and humorous, containing many droll sayings and unusual illustrations. Must read them!! No one slept while they were delivered!! An Engraving of the Preacher's Place of Worship, Exeter Hall, Nottingham, will be found within. These Sermons are unlike all others. Sent post free from the Author.

MISCELLANEOUS.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

DOUBLE NUMBERS DURING 1879.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT.

Owing to the increasing interest taken in the Identity movement, it is found necessary to occasionally enlarge our space to make room for the important papers constantly reaching the Editor. It has, therefore, been determined to issue Twelve Double Numbers during 1879, for which Twopence will be charged. The first of these series of Double Numbers will be issued the first week in January, and one on each succeeding first week in the month during the year.

	£	s.	d.
Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free	0	7	6
Two copies (including Double Numbers) ...	0	12	4
Three " " " " ...	0	18	8
Four " " " " ...	1	6	2
Six " " " " ...	1	17	4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-Grand, London, to W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

N.B.—Send an extra stamp if an acknowledgment is required.

THE TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL FOUND AND IDENTIFIED IN THE BRITISH NATION.

EDWARD HINE

(The well-known writer on this subject) will deliver his

POPULAR LECTURE

In the following halls:—

1879.
February 6th, Clapham Drill Hall.
" 11th, Westbourne Hall, near Royal Oak.
" 19th, MEMORIAL HALL, Farringdon-street.
" 25th, Myddelton Hall, Islington.
March 5th, New Cross Hall, Lewisham High-road.
" 11th, Hawkston Hall (Newman Hall's Church), Westminster Bridge-road.
" 25th, St. JAMES'S HALL, Regent-street.

Doors open at 7; Chair taken at 7.30.

Subscriptions will be thankfully received by MR. LOVELAND, Shoreham, Sevenoaks; MR. STEPHENSON, 123, Newgate-street, London. Funds are needed to defray the heavy expenses, as admission to all the Lectures is free.

ORDNANCE SURVEY OF THE HOLY LAND. The undersigned having been appointed Agents at Bristol for the sale of the MAPS, PLANS, PHOTOGRAPHS, and other PUBLICATIONS connected with the SURVEY OF JERUSALEM, SINAI, &c., beg to notify that the same can be obtained of them.

The Maps and other Publications connected with the Ordnance Survey of the United Kingdom can also be obtained of them. Prices and Catalogues supplied on application. P. MUNRO & SON, Surveyors, &c., Bank chambers, Corn-street, Bristol.

Now Ready. Price 6d.

COMMON SENSE AND THE CRISIS. The Way Out of all the National Difficulties, and the Right Course to Pursue under the very Trying Circumstances, clearly shown through the Identification of the Lost Tribes of the House of Israel with the British Nation. By C. W. E.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.
Norwich: Philip Soman, Argus Office.

CARD OF MEMBERSHIP.

THE SHEFFIELD ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION are in a position to supply their Card to all associations requiring the same. Prices with Key—In quantities, 4d. each; single cards, 7½d., post free.

These Cards are copyright; and will be supplied with the description or title of any association.

The design of the card is pronounced by Mr. Hine to be "almost perfect."

By PHILO-ISRAEL.—"A model of excellence."—See BANNER OF ISRAEL, Nov. 27, 1878, p. 398.

Apply to Geo. W. Staniland, Castle-street, Sheffield.

SUBSCRIPTIONS RECEIVED for all WEEKLY and MONTHLY PERIODICALS, and duly forwarded, per book post, as soon as published. Orders for Standard Works and all Class of Literature collected and duly forwarded, as soon as ready, by W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

Subscription 5s. a year, post paid. Payable in advance. Back numbers of the present volume can be supplied if desired.

OUR REST. A Periodical bearing on the Questions of Christ's Second Coming and the Preparation of the Church (Christ's Bride) for that event. In each number are discussed the Scientific and Religious Discoveries in the Great Pyramid of Egypt.

Orders for the above will be received by W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick Lane, E.C.; or by THOMAS WILSON, Publisher, 188, E. Monroe Street, Chicago, Ill., U.S.

BOOKS, ETC.

THE GREAT PYRAMID. NOW READY, PHILO-ISRAEL'S NEW WORK, 56 pages, Illustrated with Diagrams, price 4d., post free 5d.

AN ELEMENTARY DIGEST or SKETCH OF THE CHIEF FACTS and TEACHINGS of the GREAT PYRAMID of EGYPT; adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific. By PHILO-ISRAEL; together with Original Papers by the following leading Pyramidists, republished mostly from the BANNER OF ISRAEL (by kind permission of the proprietor)—viz., Professor Piazzi Smyth, the Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A., Charles Horner, Esq., and Major H. A. Tracey, R.A. Being a pamphlet by five authors (a Pyramid number).

Opinion of Mr. Charles Horner, regarding the above work, after perusal of the same:—"I think your design of the Pyramid pamphlet excellent. I know well that it is a book urgently needed, since, under God's blessing, it will, I feel convinced, convert many to Christ. Your part Philo-Israel's) I deem unexceptionable. It is both terse and understandable to the many, which is the great object you have had in view. I should like to see thousands circulated amongst our intelligent artisans, and hope God will raise some to do this."—C. HORNER, Dec. 12, 1878.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

Second edition, sixth thousand.

Fancy paper covers, 6d.; cloth, gilt lettered, flush, 1s.

THE HISTORY OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL: How They Were Lost, and How They Were Found. Told for the children. By PHILO-ISRAEL. Adapted for use by parents, Sunday School and other teachers, with questions on the chapters added.

"The History of the House of Israel—told for the children—is a very valuable addition to our children's libraries. It gives a clear account of all the chief points of interest, in language suited to the comprehension of children, and ought to be in the hands of every mother and teacher who believes in our Identity with Israel. It supplies a want I have long felt as the mother of a large family."

For favourable notices of this work by Professor Piazzi Smyth, John T. Gott, Esq., and others, see handbills. W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

ARE THE ENGLISH PEOPLE THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL? By PHILO-ISRAEL Price 4d.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

OUR IDENTITY WITH THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. By PHILO-ISRAEL. Price 4d. Third Thousand (reprinted from the Clifton Chronicle).

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

A RÉSUMÉ OF THE SCRIPTURAL ARGUMENT, Proving the Identity of the British Race with the Lost Ten Tribes. By PHILO-ISRAEL. Price One Penny.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

BRISTOL LEAFLETS ON THE IDENTIFICATION. 1 to 6; 1s. per 100.

Now ready.—Price 2s. 6d., cloth, gilt edges. Paper covers 1s. 6d. Post free for 33 or 20 stamps.

THE PILLAR OF WITNESS. A Scriptural View of the GREAT PYRAMID. By the late Commander B. W. TRACEY, R.N.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

THE EASTERN QUESTION.

Now ready, price One penny, post free 1½d. One dozen copies, post free 1s. 100 copies 6s., post free 7s.

THE IDENTITY OF THE BRITISH NATION WITH THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. THE CLUE TO THE EASTERN QUESTION. By C. W. E.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row

Now ready, price 6d., post free 7d

THE ANSWER to the EASTERN QUESTION as shewn in the IDENTITY of the BRITISH with ISRAEL. By the Author of the "New Old Story."

"The author has well managed her topic; her style of writing is clear and vigorous, and well calculated to do good service to the cause."—PIAZZI SMYTH.

London: S. W. Partridge & Co., 9, Paternoster-row.

EDWARD HINE'S LEAFLETS.

NO. 1.—MISSIONARY SUCCESS and the True Vitality of the Christian Church Depend upon Israel's Identification and Restoration. Price 1s. per 100

NO. 2.—ABRAHAM'S SEED a Literal, Legitimate, and National, Not a Spiritual Seed. By the Word of God. Four-page Leaflet. Price 2s. per 100.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed:—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, 5, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 29, 1879.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. III. No. 110. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 5, 1879. [DOUBLE NUMBER, TWOPENCE.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
Checkmate to Russia Again	53
Our God's Manifest Interposition in Israel's Favour in Afghanistan, as Proved by the Times Military Correspondence	54
Blind Testimony Given in A.D. 1778	54
"The Way of the Kings of the East"	55
The Sheffield Card of Membership	55
Hebrew Symbology	55
Literal or Spiritual Israel? By Douglas A. Onslow	56
Unseen Hosts	57
Israel's Battles.—No. XVIII.—The Battle of Trafalgar	58
The Earl of Beconsfield and His Works. By John S. Anderson	59
Israel Keepeth Sabbath	59
The Progress of "The Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association"	60
The Rock Gives Blind Testimony to Our Identity	61
The Vicar of St. Barnabas, Hull, a Christian Jew, Gives Splendid Blind Testimony to Our Identity	62
Good News from the Antipodes.—Part I.	63
Israelitish Reflections. By Major R. W. D. Nickle	65
Benjamin Disraeli on the Last New Gate and the Empress of India, in "Tancred"	65
Solomon's Petition. By L. P.	66
Manasseh's Loving Greeting to Ephraim!	66
Correspondence	67

CHECKMATE TO RUSSIA AGAIN.

OUR friend, Mr. Gott, in his able little memorandum on the Black Pawn, published in No. 102, vol. ii., pointed out how certain it was that "a Knight would take the Black Pawn—Shere Ali—and it would remain checkmate (for Russia) still." This is exactly what has happened—a Knight of the Star of India—Sir Samuel Browne—has captured the Gate of our enemy, under God's blessing on his operations, and the Black Pawn being taken in his own trap, and removed off the board by flight, the mover of the whole game against Israel and her heathen Empire remains in this, as in every other part of the great chess tournament of the world, a defeated, disappointed Power again.

It would appear that the Russian General Kaufman—who commands the Russian forces beyond Afghanistan, in Central Asia—informed his "august master" at St. Petersburg that the permanent occupation of the Khyber Pass by the British would prove dangerous to the security of the Russian frontier of Turkestan—a standing menace to the Southern frontier of Russia in Central Asia. The result proposed was, we presume, that Russia should seek "serious guarantees that no changes shall be made in the territorial possessions of independent Afghanistan." This, if true, means, if it meant anything, that Russia wished to check the British advances beyond the Khyber, and to limit her annexations of territory in rectification of "her haphazard frontier," to suit Russia's future purposes and designs on India. But how is Russia to carry out this her wish? By overt aid to the Ameer? Such aid cannot be granted in force without the appearance of a British fleet off the Neva, and the awkward result of the blockade of the Russian ports in the Black Sea—interfering in rather a serious way with the victualling of the Russian forces in the Thracian Peninsula. The Muscovite will think twice regarding these consequences before he renders such open aid as that. For private individual assistance—"unofficial war," such as Russia waged in Servia's behalf when she fought against her Turkish Suzerain—we must be prepared. And to British troops the help will make no difference in the result. At the Khyber Pass and Ali Musjid, there were, it is said, Russian soldiers and officers assisting our Afghan foes. At the Peiwar Kotal, too, it is affirmed white faces were detected helping our opponents to hold that Gate against God's people. But did their aid avail? Not in the very least. Russians in their masses quailed before the onset of the Highland phalanx of Lord Raglan at the Alma; and to those same stalwart Scots it made little odds, at the Peiwar or the Khyber, that a Muscovite or two swelled the ranks of the flying Afghan soldiery, who ran like deer from the pursuit of Israel's forces, only to be stopped, and stripped, and robbed by their own Afreedi fellow-subjects.

We have been lately rather surprised to read the comments of the South Durham Herald of November 30, 1878, on General Kaufman's suggestion to the Emperor of Russia above alluded to, because that paper, as our readers may recollect, was the one which some time since so severely criticised Mr. E. Hine as a public lecturer and writer; and now we see this journal unwittingly adopting our Israelite arguments, conclusions, and even our very phraseology, and hurling its defiance against Russia and her machinations, like the most determined Israelite of us all. Speaking of the hopes and aspirations of the Russians as to the result of the late operations, the editor says:—

A disaster or a defeat in the fearful Khyber would have suited these combinations, and the expectations built on them, much better. But it has not so happened. Almost like Jericho, Ali Musjid has fallen to the sound of our bugles, and the fearful march of Macpherson's brigade—safely accomplished—has, in securing a junction with General Browne's command, placed disaster beyond possibility. We are now in garrison on Afghan territory; the passes are in our possession; from them, and the positions upon which they debouch in the Afghan plain, we have the Ameer's country at our mercy. Russia sees this, and, exasperated and terror-stricken at finding all her calculations of reverses upset, all her combinations dispelled, she seeks to arrest our triumphant march on Jellalabad—perhaps on Cabul itself—by her empty vapour about exacting guarantees. Let us see how she is prepared to exact them. It will take something more to effect this object than the Kaufman "memorandum," and a series of diplomatic panic screams. We have the Passes, and we shall keep them! Their "permanent occupation"—whatever menace or insecurity they provide for Russia, whatever barrier they set up against her treacherous, assassin-like policy—will be maintained by this country with all the resources it commands. There, at the foot of the Hindoo-Koosh—if Russia can whip up sufficient temerity for the encounter—will her power be overwhelmed with the destruction that smote the "brazen image," with "the feet of clay," that Nebuchadnezzar saw in his dream! The permanent occupation of the Passes—and a large slice of Afghan tableland to boot—furnish that indispensable "scientific" frontier, which we require to set up, against the intrigues, conspiracies, and designs that Russia, for years, has had on foot against our Indian possessions and our supremacy on the Asiatic Continent. In possession of that frontier now, we exclaim with Bismarck, "Beati possidentes," and let us see who will take it from us!

Digitized by Google

We do not wonder that a reader of this article exclaimed on its perusal, "Has this writer been studying the BANNER OF ISRAEL lately, and obtained his inspiration from the leading article—'Beati Possidentes'—of March 20th, 1878, No. 64?" At any rate, the editor of the South Durham Herald sees with us—1st.—That the only Beati possidentes are the British (Israelites we should term them). 2nd.—That Ali Musjid has fallen, like Jericho, to the sound of Israel's bugles. 3rd.—That the fearful Khyber Gate is now ours, and that for all time (God's gifts to His people being without repentance). 4th.—That Russia's power is destined to be overwhelmed at the foot of the Hindoo-Koosh—those "mountains of (Beni-) Israel" yet to be, "which have been always waste" (Ezek. xxxviii. 8). 5th.—And that the destroying Power will be that which smites the metallic image of Daniel on the feet of clay—even the stone kingdom of British Israel!

OUR GOD'S MANIFEST INTERPOSITION IN ISRAEL'S FAVOUR IN AFGHANISTAN,

AS PROVED BY THE "TIMES" MILITARY CORRESPONDENCE.

WE propose to prove the above assertion by the very words of the military writer on "Afghanistan," whose admirable sketches on the progress of the war appear so frequently in the Times.

We quote from his paper, published on December 16, 1878. They prove our case quite, without comment from ourselves. He says:—

There appears no obstacle in the way of a speedy advance on Jellalabad, and in the course of the next few days we may expect to hear that Sir Samuel Browne has entered it unopposed. The fact that the notables of that city have tendered their allegiance to the British General is gratifying. With their co-operation there will be little difficulty in collecting grain, forage, fuel, and live stock from the fertile vale of the Cabul River for the use of the Jellalabad garrison during the ensuing winter, thus relieving the commissariat and transport trains of a great portion of the burden now falling upon them, which it appears they as yet are scarcely equal to.

Here are innumerable mercies sent us by our God, and all unexpected as they are undeserved. He continues—

General Roberts, after having reconnoitred the Shutar-gardan Pass, has returned to Ali-khel, and is now en route to the Kuram Valley, leaving strong detachments to guard the Peiwar Pass. It must have been an extreme source of satisfaction to the gallant General to learn that the enemy had fled in the utmost disorder over their second line of defence, leaving gun carriages and limbers on the crest of the pass.

Here was the Shutar-gardan Pass left undefended, and the Lord put on the Afghans the fear of Israel, which left us masters of their lands.

The Ghilzais (says the Times) who in the last war were our bitterest foes, are actually offering assistance to General Roberts. This is the more satisfactory as it is quite unexpected. They are one of the most powerful tribes in Afghanistan, numbering nearly half a million souls, and occupying a tract of land averaging 300 miles in length and 50 in breadth. Both the Khyber and the Kuram columns will have to march for some considerable distance through the Ghilzai country, so the fact of their declaring in our favour is a matter for earnest congratulation.

The reason for the friendliness of the Ghilzais and other tribes along our route we can discern—God hath caused "our terror to fall upon all the inhabitants of the land, who faint because of us" (Joshua ii. 9). He has caused the Afghans not to love us—far from that!—but "to be afraid of us" (Deut. xxviii. 10; Prov. xvi. 7). He adds—

Thus, all along the line, not only have our troops been successful, which was to have been expected, but the border tribes, whose hostility we anticipated, have in the majority of instances declared for us, and are offering their services freely to our Generals.

The tribes, lately our dreaded foes, are now our active friends, and if our Israelite readers do not see in these facts the good hand of our God upon us as a nation, we must hold them to be ungrateful indeed. The Times historian concludes an admirable resumé in the following excellent words, which we quote with satisfaction, which would have been unalloyed had we seen that in these mercies he recognised, even in the faintest degree, the good hand of a guiding Providence leading His people to their destined position as the holders of the Gates of their Afghan enemies:—

As will be gathered from the various telegrams we publish, the news from the seat of war is favourable throughout. The native contingents are loyally pressing up to the front in a far different spirit from that in which their predecessors marched under Ranjit Singh's direction to aid Sir Claude Wade in the forcing of the Khyber. The border tribes, about whose conduct so much doubt was felt, from the men of Jellalabad on the North to those of the Gwaja on the South, are cordially aiding our Generals. Our columns have met with scarcely any opposition, have cleared the most impregnable positions with consummate ease and scarcely any loss. Thus the first phase of the war may be said to have closed without a single failure.

We must add to the above one word—our usual word of thanks—Israel, praise YE the Lord, from whom all these great and unmerited blessings and mercies have been given us—His people Israel. The very last advices as we go to press increase our gratitude, for not only is Sir Samuel Browne settled at Jellalabad, General Roberts at the Kuram Valley and Khost country, but General Stewart also in the South has entered and occupied Candahar in peace, and all with the consent, full and cordial, of the people of the land. Again we say to Israel, Praise YE the Lord!

BLIND TESTIMONY GIVEN IN A.D. 1778.

WE have received the following as authentic, and pass it on accordingly to our readers. The friend who sent it to us remarked that Isa. xviii. 7 speaks of the Power "from" whom the "present" "shall be brought to the Lord of hosts," as "a people terrible from their beginning and hitherto." That people we know to be the British, or "House of Israel," "God's suppliants," "the daughter of His dispersed," His "Christian" nation (Zeph. iii. 10; Hosea i. 10). But in 1778, exactly a century ago, a Newcastle paper, as may be seen below, designated the British as just that people—a race already known to be "the terror of the world"—which, of course, is a mere paraphrase of the Scriptural description "a people terrible from their beginning and hitherto" (Isa. xviii. 7). Our extract is as follows:

"A HUNDRED YEARS AGO.—A RUMOURED ROYAL MARRIAGE.—The Newcastle Chronicle of Oct. 17th, 1778, gave publicity to the following:—'A treaty of marriage is now confidently reported to be on the tapis between his Majesty of Sweden and the present amiable Princess Royal of Britain. If, as the voice of fame further affirms, the bishop of Osnaburgh be the destined husband of a daughter of the Stadtholder, England may yet be able, by connubial connections alone, to form alliances sufficient to render her, what heretofore the bitterest of her enemies acknowledged her to be—the terror of the world.'"

Digitized by Google

"THE WAY OF THE KINGS OF THE EAST."

We have been placed in possession of authentic information that "the preparation of the way of the kings of the East" is actually begun! We believed it would shortly be commenced, but we were not prepared to learn from our informant—once an officer employed on the Ordnance Survey of England—that it was actually about to be undertaken and soon to be in progress. Our correspondent tells us "that a company is now being formed in London, under the management of a noble duke whose name is in this country a household word, for the purpose of making the survey of the Valley of the Euphrates for a railway to the Persian Gulf."

Our friend had the very best means of knowing the truth of what we learn from him, for he says he was himself offered lucrative employment on the survey in question, but was, for private reasons, unable to accept it. Our readers will be greatly interested in becoming acquainted with these facts. They are a pledge to us that God's purposes are ripening fast, and that the water of the great river Euphrates being rapidly dried up, "the preparation of the way of the kings—those from the rising of the sun"—will next be very shortly undertaken.

Israel's rising into national splendour, under God's gracious favour and spiritual blessing, is involved in the facts we now make known; for "the preparation of the way" being meant for the journey of the "kings from the East," the hour of the manifestation of these kings, as God's people Israel, is obviously at hand, and in that knowledge we rejoice, and may rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory, because "our redemption"—our rising again as Israel in His sight—"draweth nigh!" Israel! praise ye the Lord!

THE SHEFFIELD CARD OF MEMBERSHIP.

We regret to find that a critical examination of the measurements recorded on this card, has resulted in the discovery of many errors. A hyper-critical examiner finds seven serious blots. For instance, instead of being, as stated, five Pyramid inches by seven as to "the drawing," it is only 4·95 by 6·92. The artist, therefore, has fallen into the monstrous error in an etching on cardboard of $\frac{5}{100}$ of an inch in one case, and $\frac{8}{100}$ in another. Not only so, other measurements are also defective by $\frac{7}{100}$ and $\frac{8}{100}$ respectively, and this microscopic difference, the critic declares, makes the work "false," "diverse from the measure given to Israel by the God of Israel," and we are told to read "Deut. xxv. 14—16, and Prov. xx. 10," to see the enormity of the offence perpetrated. The recipient of the card is a "deceived" man, and "the efforts making to propagate true and righteous measure are so much thwarted." The name of this critic has been sent us, but we decline to publish it for reasons of our own.

We have to add that the Sheffield Committee, being anxious to make their work as perfect as possible, have resolved to prepare a new plate, and will endeavour in it to rectify all defects as far as human ability will enable them to do it. This is as honourable to the association as it is creditable to their public spirit. We hope the new plate will be not only "almost perfect," as Mr. Hine pronounced it, but "perfection itself;" and not only apparently a "model of excellency," as we termed it, but "excellence" in reality, and worthy of the cause of Israel.

ERRATA.—Readers are kindly requested to make the following corrections in No. 108 BANNER. On page 41, second column, at lines 36 and 37 from top, omit dashes. Insert comma after "ceases;" for "has made," read "makes;" for "paralysed," read "paralyses."—C. HORNER.

HEBREW SYMBOLOGY.

THE Hebrews being an Eastern people, were like the rest of the nations of the old world, fond of symbols.

We find that they used them in all manners and on all occasions; ecclesiastical and civil, public and private concerns were illustrated and defined by devices, objects, signs, and symbols which set forth some truth, or some characteristic connected with them.

These symbols were in course of generations and ages subject to various modifications, and in the times of national apostacy or civil convulsion and extinction, to corruption. The Hebrews were, however, the most conservative nation of antiquity, in the proper sense of the term.

And it is rather remarkable how seldom their national symbols were lost or changed, than that some have been corrupted, and others totally lost to sight.

It is still more remarkable how many have descended intact, through all the convulsions of empires, the centuries of history, and the incomparable wanderings of Israel, to the possession of their descendants in these Isles of the West, and are used by us, unconsciously for the most part, even to the present day.

It may be interesting to notice in detail some of these, both in their present and past connection with Israel.

HEBREW AND BRITISH SYMBOLS.—I. LILY.

The lily belongs to the hexandria monogynia class of Linnæus, and the Lilaceæ of Jussien; it is a six-leaved flower, containing within it seven apices or chives (six stamens, one pistil).

The lily was an emblem of Israel, and these thirteen parts composing the flower may beautifully represent the thirteen Tribes composing the Hebrew nation, while its whiteness denoted what she should be in the purity of her allegiance to her Divine Sovereign, and its beauty aptly symbolised both the beautiful garments of righteousness in which the true Israel shall at last be found, and the outward splendour of her national existence as long as she submitted to the culture of the Good Husbandman, who thus speaks of this emblem: "Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow, they toil not, neither do they spin; and yet I say unto you, that Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these" (Matt. vi. 28, 29). The fragility of the lily forcibly might teach Israel the necessity of an entire dependence, not on the reed of Egypt, but on the true Vine. We find the lily first symbolically used by Solomon (B.C. 1005) in the ornamentation of the temple. But as the temple was an enlarged facsimile of the tabernacle, in lasting materials, this ornament was very likely used by Moses also for the sacred vessels. As also all the details of both tabernacle (Exod. xxv. 40) and temple were made after Divinely given patterns, we may conclude that the lily was a Divinely chosen emblem of Israel.

Solomon made two magnificent brazen columns, Jachin and Boaz (Israel and Judah) to stand in the entrance porch; the chapiters of these were in the form of lilies (1 Kings vii. 19—22)—i.e., the top or capital of each pillar expanded and was worked into the form of a lily (Parkhurst, "Lexicon," p. 658). Each chapiter would show six leaves, which would thus again set forth the number of the Twelve Tribes of Israel, for the internal parts of the flower would not be made of the Egyptian lotus capitals. One of the sacred vessels made by Solomon was the huge molten sea of brass; it was fifty times the size of the ark (in capacity) and harmonised with the earth. The brim of this huge basin was adorned with flowers of lilies (1 Kings vii. 26) and the edge was like a lily flower (2 Chron. iv. 5). This molten sea was girdled with lilies, even as Israel was destined to engirdle the earth with a chain of colonies and fortresses, for Israel is the measuring line of His inheritance (Smyth, "Our Inheritance in the Great Pyramid," p. 340).

Digitized by Google

In his wondrously beautiful poem, the peerless queen of all poems, Solomon compares the bride, Israel, to the lily of the valleys (Canticles ii. 1, 2—16), and when among enemies, to the lily among thorns; and as dwelling safely among his people, he pictures that he feedeth among the lilies, and as quietly as roes which feed among the lilies (Canticles iv. 5). From the last passages we may learn that it is expected that the lips of Israel should keep truth, for his lips are like lilies (v. 13), scented with pure perfume as of lilies; that he is gone down into his garden to gather lilies, and that he feedeth among the lilies (vi. 2, 3), and compares his beauty to wheat set about with lilies (vii. 2). In connection with this constant use of the lily as an emblem by the wise king of Israel, in the sacred vessels of the sanctuary, and in the inspired work of his pen, it is interesting and significant to notice that in one of the only two allusions made by our Saviour to Solomon, He links his name with that of this symbol of Israel, in the words already quoted. There are four which may be called the lily Psalms—viz., xlv., lx., lxix., lxxx. In the title of each is found the expression "upon the lilies." It appears that there was among the Hebrews a musical instrument which bore a resemblance to Israel's emblem of a lily, as the harp occasionally has the emblem of Judah, the lion, upon it (Paragraph Bible, R. T. S. ii. 592). Ancient painters placed a lily in the hand of the Virgin Mother of the true King of Israel (Jamieson, Legendary Art.)—a custom still followed. The last application of the lily to Israel in the Old Testament is in Hosea (xiv. 5), who, though he lived to see the captivity of Israel, could yet predict that Israel shall blossom as the lily (B.C. 725).

From Solomon to Hosea, for 300 years, we thus find the lily as a national symbol, with the promise, thus should it be in Israel's still greater future.

As Israel in Palestine possessed the lily as a civil and ecclesiastical symbol, so does Israel now, as found in the British Isles.

The Saxon kings bore lilies on their seals. Edward III. was the first since the Norman kings that bore lilies on his coat armour (1343), and the Sovereigns of England continued to bear them up to George III. (1760).

At first they were borne semée, sowed, scattered upon the field of the coat of arms without regard to number, but later the number was reduced to three (Berry, "Encyclopædia of Heraldry").

The lilies were borne in the first and fourth quarterings, and the lions in the second and third, on the shield.

The sceptre of Edward VI. bears a lily on its apex, while the royal crown of Great Britain is adorned with the lily, alternately with the cross; and the orb of Richard I. supports the stalk with lily flower.

The cloth covers of the communion tables of the State Church, and their damask covers, are ornamented with lilies either embroidered on or woven into the material.

The Saxon princesses wore State dresses sprinkled with lilies.

The chancel pavements of our State Churches were, and some still are, paved with encaustic tiles, bearing each a lily.

The palace of Westminster is outwardly ornamented with a vast number of lilies on shields, corbels, brackets, niches, canopies, &c., and its inside State apartments are adorned similarly, worked into tapestry, carving, wainscot, roofs, and walls, &c.

As the thirteen parts of the lily may represent the thirteen Tribes of Israel, so the pistil in the centre (one of the thirteen parts) may symbolise Levi in its being different from all the others, having a central position, as set apart for a peculiar work, and receiving (pollen) from the others standing round, as Levi did tithes, &c.

Shakespeare calls Queen Elizabeth "a most unspotted lily" (Henry VIII., act v., scene 5, line 62).

As an architectural device the lily is constantly found carved in our cathedrals and palaces, as in King's College Chapel, Cambridge, the enormous stone key bosses in the roof are alternately cut as lilies. In heraldry, as the fleur de lis, it is the label of the sixth son, and in the French Bible the chapiters of Solomon are said to be adorned with the fleur de lis.

A. B. G.

LITERAL OR SPIRITUAL ISRAEL?

By Douglas A. Onslow.

Many of our clerical objectors to the Anglo-Israel truths and others tell us that we utterly mistake Scripture in assuming that because this nation is enjoying all the blessings, which they cannot deny were promised to Abraham and his descendants, and are fulfilling literally the prophecies made of Ephraim of the Ten Tribes, that therefore we are literal Israelites. They insist upon it that our error consists in our not seeing that we possess these blessings, and occupy our peculiar and unique position amongst the nations, because we, as Gentile Christians, have become the spiritual Israel of God (see Philalethes), therefore it is that we obtain the blessings and inherit the promises. The spiritual Israel in fact, with these objectors to our views, form "the nation" to whom "the kingdom of God" was to be "given," because they bring forth the fruits thereof, and which our Saviour told the Jews would be taken away from them for their unbelief. We are also told that the Israel so often alluded to in our Church Liturgy is, though a British Israel, also the same spiritual Israel. A sort of British branch I suppose! These views involve the propounders of them in a very awkward dilemma, because assuming their argument to be correct, that true Christian Gentile believers are all to be included in the spiritual Israel they speak of, it follows that wherever these are to be found, of whatever nation or language (and I presume our clerical opponents will admit that there must be numbers of such earnest believers in Christ throughout the world, or else all missionary effort has been in vain), they must all participate in these blessings, for they are clearly one and all entitled to them. We therefore ought to see these blessings distributed widely throughout the world, and possessed by the individual believers in Christ, the true spiritual Israel of these gentlemen. But what are the facts? We find these blessings centred exclusively in the Anglo-Saxon peoples, and the nation of Great Britain in particular. They are unmistakably obtaining these wonderful blessings as a nation and a company of nations. Therefore, either the spiritual Israel (if the clerics are right) alone exists amongst the Anglo-Saxon peoples, which I do not think even the boldest of those who put forth the spiritual Israel view are prepared to maintain, or else the spiritual Israelites distributed throughout the rest of the world are defrauded of their rights. On which of the horns do our clerical friends prefer being impaled?

St. John's Wood.

The Rev. D. Bruce Payne, of Deal, admits the Claims of the Identity to a Respectful Hearing.—"I for my part, though a sympathiser, am only an inquirer. There is no inherent impossibility in the theory and there are very strong probabilities for its truth. The linguistic and racial difficulties are really no difficulties at all to any one candidly examining the matter, and it certainly helps Bible interpretation in a marvellous degree. Mr. Hine or some other admirers will, I hope, be here again before long, when those who are simply anxious to know the truth will have an opportunity of hearing the arguments for which 'Undecided' asks. —Yours, D. Bruce Payne."—Deal Telegram, January 4, 1879.

Notice.—We are asked to draw attention to the fact that on the 13th February next our friend, Mr. Douglas A. Onslow, will lecture at the Town Hall, Bromley, Kent, on "Our Identity." We hope he will have a large attendance, and that all who can, will be present, taking their friends with them.

Digitized by Google

UNSEEN HOSTS.

HARK! What is that strange cry which bursts from the follower of Elijah, and the heir to his miraculous powers, as he beholds his master carried away from the sight and ken of man in a chariot of fire with horses of the same? "My father, my father, the chariot of Israel, and the horsemen thereof" (2 Kings ii. 12). We say to ourselves, these terms could not apply to the prophet himself, for if it were possible to suppose that the "chariot of Israel" could metaphorically represent this servant of God, the "horsemen thereof" could scarcely in any manner be made reasonably to do so. We, therefore, are led to conceive that there burst upon the sight of the younger man, as his master and so-called "father" rose in his equipage of fire, a vision of hitherto invisible hosts, filling the space above the earth, and whose mission apparently was in some way, according to the judgment of Elisha, to tend and protect the chosen people of God, His elect, the children of Israel.

This view, to our mind, receives confirmation from 2 Kings vi. 17, where Elisha appears to be perfectly aware that he was surrounded by invisible chariots and horses of fire, for in order to encourage and comfort his dismayed attendant, he simply asks God not to send protectors to guard Israel, but to open his servant's eyes, that he might perceive the protection that was actually being accorded to them. We are not on this occasion told of horsemen appearing, but possibly it was not considered necessary to reveal to the fearful attendant as much as was shown to Elisha himself, when Elijah rose up in a chariot of glory, bequeathing to his follower his miraculous gifts with his mantle of power.

It is remarkable that when Joash, King of Israel, came down to visit the dying prophet (2 Kings xiii. 14), he uses the same expression, as he bends weeping over the man of God, as Elisha himself uttered on the occasion of Elijah's translation, and it has occurred to us that possibly the sentence had become proverbial, as applicable to an Israelitish prophet of eminence, in like manner as the expression, "Is Saul also among the prophets?" had grown into a common saying (1 Sam. x. 12). We know that fifty men of the sons of the prophets stood on one side of the Jordan to watch the anticipated and predicted disappearance of Elijah (2 Kings ii. 3, 5, 7). When the whirlwind and chariot caught him up, may not the outburst of Elisha's feelings and his cry have been borne on the wind, and carried his words of combined wonder, grief, and rapture, to the ears of the onlookers at a distance, who, not seeing all that was doubtless revealed to Elisha, may have caught up the cry, as applicable to a great prophet at an important crisis, and thus led to Joash uttering it as a homage to the dying Elisha, whose favour and instruction he probably came to seek, as well as to show his interest in one eminently gifted of God?

If the conjecture we have hazarded in the foregoing remarks is justified, we think we may gather from it that possibly, though invisible to man, there are beings whose office may be at all times, or on marked occasions, especially to watch over, protect, or guide God's people Israel. If this should be considered a presumptuous thought, we would refer those who think it so to Heb. i. 13, 14, and ask if we may not gather from these verses that angels are employed—we know not how constantly, possibly without ceasing—to "minister to the heirs of salvation;" and who are such heirs but Israel? Christians of every nation on earth can obtain everlasting life by faith in the Lord Jesus, but we would remark that the descendants of Abraham alone are the heirs of salvation, let those descendants be whom they may, British or Red Indians. Any to whom a gracious God may please to give light, may share the spiritual privileges of "the heirs," but the word means those who can claim a privilege, or possession by inheritance; and that this term of "heirs" was here applied alone to the Hebrews—all the Tribes—we think is borne out by the three first verses of the following chapter (Heb. ii.).

In 1 Chron. xvi. 35, 36, we gain, we think, added strength to our opinion, for David addresses God as the "God of our salvation" and "the Lord God of Israel," not as the God of the world's salvation; and, indeed, in verse 35 he marks the separation between themselves who claim God as "the God of their salvation" and the heathen. Should it be suggested that the salvation of which the Hebrews were the heirs was salvation from earthly destruction, and pointed to their restoration to temporal favour, rather than to everlasting salvation from eternal condemnation, this objection still fails to prove that angels are ministering spirits, sent forth to minister to any but Hebrew "heirs."

We do not recall inspired records of angelic ministrations vouchsafed to any but those whose history and future after the prophecies concerning the Saviour of mankind and the portions relating to His life and work on earth, form the principal theme of the Bible. We fear that by this latter remark, we may offend and alarm our brethren who are less strong than ourselves in the belief concerning Israel's high mission, early prominence, and promised position on earth; but we ask such to prove us mistaken. It is true that an angel appeared to Cornelius the centurion, but it was to open the door for light, spiritual freedom, true religion, and everlasting life to burst upon the heathen nations through Israel's instrumentality, after a vision had revealed the fact to that same Israel, that no nation was to be deemed unclean and unfit, if enlightened by God's Spirit, to share henceforth the privileges of Christianity, the "glory of Israel." Warning and protecting angels appeared to God-serving Lot, but none can doubt that this especial favour and his faith were the result of his near relationship to Abraham, the friend of God. Also, a heavenly messenger met Balaam as he rode on his ass, but the fact is so intimately connected with one of the most important circumstances in the early history of Israel, that we cannot believe it would be reckoned an exception to the rule we have suggested as bearing on "angels' visits."

Can we not, may we not believe, that now, as ever, our Lord and Master's unseen hosts are about our people, perhaps blinding and misleading our enemies, and overruling events for our good, even when they appear adverse? Our sins are indeed allowed to bring on us punishments, the natural consequences of such sins, whether of scepticism, boastfulness, love of money, or drunkenness, but as we read Philo-Israel's record of Israel's battles and successes, and of the passing of our enemies' Gates into our hands, we almost seem to see the fiery chariots of Israel and the horsemen thereof aiding and shielding us in obedience to God's will, and in spite of our undeservings. And again, as history tells us, of Spain's magnificent preparations for our destruction being baffled by the storm and tempest, and of a powerful imperial rival vainly seeking to gratify his jealous hatred of us, and becoming instead a helpless prisoner in our hands. When we glance at our marvellous dominion in the East, and try to realise the miraculousness—for it is miraculous—of our power in that distant land, then we can well believe that invisible and celestial hosts are employed by the "God of our salvation" to protect, lead us on, guard us from destruction, and cause our enemies to flee before us. It is thus, possibly, that we are enabled, feeble mortals that we are, to carry out nationally the purposes of God, whose promises, however vast, must be fulfilled, and whose plans neither mountains nor seas, waste lands, arid deserts, nor fierce foes, can ever frustrate, or render abortive.

L. P.

Dec. 9, 1878.

THE Second Volume of the BANNER OF ISRAEL may still be had, by order, of any Bookseller, bound in handsome blue cloth, gilt, price 7s.; post free 7s 6d.

Digitized by Google

ISRAEL'S BATTLES.

"BECAUSE THERE IS NONE OTHER THAT FIGHTETH FOR US BUT ONLY THOU, O GOD."

(Continued from page 13).

No. XVIII.—THE BATTLE OF TRAFALGAR.

THE year 1805 was remarkable in British history for one great event, and that a turning point in the nation's life. It was the year of the battle of Trafalgar, of the destruction of the French fleet, and of Napoleon's hopes connected therewith, in respect to the desired subjugation of this island-home of God's people Israel. It witnessed also the death of Nelson. Pitt was then at the head of affairs. Intent on destroying Napoleon's power in Europe by a coalition of Russia, Sweden, and Austria on the land, he relied, to defend his native shores and to oppose the growing naval might of France, upon the "wooden walls" of "Old England," then under the able command of the nation's darling admiral—Lord Nelson. But this was just the time too when Napoleon had matured his plans for the humiliation of his old enemy. His projects contemplated nothing less than the invasion of these islands during the temporary absence from our shores of the dreaded British fleet; also the destruction, if not the conquest, of the proud islanders, provided only, with his invincible legions landed, he could meet, and, as he imagined, annihilate their forces on their own soil. Vain hopes! He thought to touch "the Lord's anointed," His people Israel, to touch whom, on their God-protected "little sanctuary," was just as feasible as to touch the "apple of the great Jehovah's eye."

With what ease the Lord defeated Napoleon's consummate craft! How soon all his plans were defeated, and he was left in despair and rage to feel his own impotence to carry out those puny plans which the God of His people Israel had laughed to scorn.* Villeneuve, the French Admiral, was ordered by Napoleon to slip out of Toulon, to join the Spanish fleet under Admiral Gravina, to threaten the West Indies with the united navies, and while the British were drawn away from the Channel to those distant seas, to double back again, and by his presence enable the French troops to land on Kentish ground, and thus conquer England.

Everything turned out exactly as the enemy of God's people desired it. The French got out of Toulon, went off to the West Indies, were chased by Nelson there, returned to European waters without the latter knowing where they had gone, and thus gave Napoleon his desired chance. One little part of the plan was wanting, and failing that, the whole scheme ended, as God meant it to end, in disastrous failure, nay, in defeat, death, and utter destruction, not only of Napoleon's hopes, but to the French fleets as well.

Villeneuve lost his head, or his nerves, just in the very crisis of the operations, and, after a brush with Sir Robert Calders' ships off Cape Finisterre, on July 22, 1805, he skulked into Cadiz, instead of flying to the Channel to enable his master in the few precious weeks available to land his troops and conquer (as he hoped) the Lord's inheritance in their appointed God-defended islands (2 Sam. vii. 10). This fatal move was seen and instantly appreciated by Nelson, then back again in England.

On Sept. 14, he made sail once more to meet his enemies—the combined fleets of France and Spain—and found them still in Cadiz harbour, watched, as "a cat watches the mice," by Collingwood. For some weeks Nelson had to wait till Villeneuve dared to move from his hiding place. On Oct. 19, 1805, the French Admiral thought he might venture, his object being to slip through the Straits and thus make for Toulon; but God did not mean him to get so far or to escape. The day of vengeance had arrived, and on Monday, Oct. 21, it had fully come. Off the low headland of Trafalgar, between Cadiz and the Straits of Gibraltar, towards Tarifa, the combined fleets were descried on the morning of that day in a mighty semi-circle prepared for battle.

The combined French and Spanish fleets numbered 33 sail of the line, 5 frigates, and 2 brigs; the British, under Nelson, consisted of 27 sail of the line, 4 frigates, a schooner, and a cutter. The disparity was thus in favour of the combined fleets, and the attacking Power, Israel, was again in the serious minority. The British approached in two grand columns of attack. One led by Nelson in the Victory, the other by Collingwood in the Royal Sovereign. Just before the beginning of the action, about noon, Nelson made that signal which no British man or woman can ever forget—one truly Israelitish in its sentiment:—"England expects every man to do his duty!" In ten minutes the war of giants had begun. Nelson engaged the Santissima Trinidad, Bucentaure, and Redoutable. The Bucentaure in two minutes was reduced to a mere log on the water by the crushing fire of the Victory's 100 guns. Collingwood, in the Royal Sovereign, meanwhile had been in action with five of the combined ships. Then the action becoming general, the God of battles fought for His people, and gave them such a victory as was hardly imagined possible—it was not a victory, it was a glorious conquest. Ere the battle ended, nineteen of the combined fleets, two being first-rates and none under seventy-four guns, struck their flags.

Three flag officers of the enemy—namely, Admiral Villeneuve, the Commander-in-Chief, and the Spanish Admirals d'Aliva, and Cisueros—were captured.

At forty minutes after four all firing ceased, and a complete victory was reported to Lord Nelson just as his spirit was about to take its flight from the scence of combat, in consequence of the mortal wound he had received from a shot from the poop of the Bucentaure early in the action.

In this combat, the reader will observe the combined fleets had a superiority of 6 sail of the line, "were fresh from port, and were in a perfect state of equipment." The escape from capture of 10 ships of the line, under the Spanish Admiral, at three o'clock in the afternoon, was accounted for by the fact that the wind had dropt to a calm, and prevented the rearmost of the British fleet coming up in proper time to take part in the action. In this wonderful victory or conquest, the episode of the Temeraire, Capt. Harvey, should be noted by the instructed Israelite. She was boarded by a French as well as by a Spanish line of battle ship; yet the Temeraire fought both single handed and forced them both to haul down their flags to her alone. Capt. Fremantle, of the Neptune, also performed the same wondrous feat, and was given by God two ships to his own single one. The loss of the enemy in this action was frightful. In some of the Spanish ships it was as much as 400, in others 350 men in each. The total losses of the combined Powers is represented thus:—

There were captured at Trafalgar and carried into Gibraltar	4
Subsequently in an action by Sir R. Strachan with a part of the fleet which escaped from Trafalgar	4
Do. do. by Sir E. Calder	2
Burnt, sunk, and wrecked during the succeeding tempest .	15
Escaped during the storm as mere wrecks into Cadiz .	7
Do. do. in a serviceable condition	3
Original combined fleet	35

It will thus be seen that only three ships escaped of all the power of France and Spain, and the victory of Trafalgar, therefore, was a crushing, tremendous blow, administered by the "little stone" of Daniel, on the feet of the image, which utterly demolished its power, and had a vast influence on the

* The threat of the invasion stirred Israel of 1802-3-4 and 1805 to the very depths. Immense preparations were made to meet and repel the hated invaders. Three hundred thousand volunteers were raised and armed. "Money, sailors, soldiers, ships, and guns were got ready, and kept posted opposite to France, and gunboats clustered in sharp-toothed rows along the line of the Cinque Ports, ancient enemies of the French." "Flavit, Jehovah, et dissipati sunt." future fate of the great enemy of Europe—Napoleon I. In this great action it will be seen God fought for His people, and gave them a glorious victory. He defeated the counsels of their great antagonist by the simplest of methods, and when the two fleets met He gave up those of the combined enemies of Israel, "as a prey," into the hands of the great sea captain of the nation.

Digitized by Google

While He afflicted the British by removing their beloved Admiral from among them, He gave them at the same time, nationally, so glorious a conquest over their boasting enemies, that the world has never ceased to recollect as connected with one of the decisive battles of the world, the name of the battle of Trafalgar. Israelites, praise YE the Lord.

THE EARL OF BEACONSFIELD AND HIS WORKS.

By JOHN S. ANDERSON.

CONSIDERING the vast importance of the subject and the tremendous issues at stake, it may seem out of place to allude to minor points, but I think a few remarks on our great Prime Minister's literary works will be read with interest and be considered worthy of record in the pages of the BANNER OF ISRAEL.

It is rather more than fifty years since "Vivian Grey" appeared, and although the author deprecated its reproduction, in it are to be found the same sound constitutional principles with regard to Church and State and the general welfare of the people, which are more fully developed in his later productions. The first thing to strike a reader of the present day in "Vivian Grey" is the introduction of the title of Beaconsfield as one of the characters in the early chapters of the work, but it is to his later books that the chief interest attaches. In the general preface, which appeared in 1870, he says that he had been in Parliament seven years when the triology was published—viz., "Coningsby, or the New Generation;" "Sybil, or the Two Nations;" and "Tancred, or the New Crusade"—and during that period he had not written anything. But in 1837, when he entered the House of Commons, he had published two works, "Henrietta Temple" and "Venetia." The triology was therefore published about thirty-four years ago. To take "Tancred" as most applicable at present, it may not probably be remembered by many who have not opened it for some years that in several instances events of great magnitude were therein foreshadowed. Tancred, feeling he was born in an age and in a country divided between infidelity on the one side, and an anarchy of creeds on the other, with none competent to guide him, wished to do that which six centuries ago was done by his ancestor, and visit the holy sepulchre.

The crusades were of vast advantage to Europe, and renovated the spiritual hold which Asia has always had upon the North. It seemed to wane at the time he was writing, but, he continues, it is only the decrease that precedes the new development.

Here is a sentiment and a prophecy:

THE NEW DEVELOPMENT!

It is, as we believe, just coming on, even at our very doors. About twenty-five pages further on, in a conversation with Tancred, a Jewish notoriety remarks that England flourishes. "Is it what you call civilisation that makes England flourish? Is it the unusual development of the faculties of man that has rendered an island, almost unknown to the ancients, the arbiter of the world? Clearly not. It is her inhabitants that have done this, it is an affair of race. A Saxon race protected by an insular position has stamped its diligent and methodic character on the century."

The Island of Cyprus is brought in more than once. The first time when Tancred is gazing on the moonlit mudbanks of the barbarous Thames with the Isle of Dogs before him.

The Isle of Dogs! writes Disraeli. It should at least be Cyprus. And again, when it was supposed he had been murdered in the desert. "If he were killed accidentally, there will be negotiations, but the business will be compromised. The English want Cyprus, and they will take it as compensation."

During Tancred's conversation with the lady of Bethany, he said the fate of the Ten Tribes is a deeply-interesting question, but involved in, I fear, inexplicable obscurity.

"In England there are many who hold them to be represented by the Afghans, who state that their ancestors follow the laws of Moses. But perhaps they ceased to exist, and were blended with their conquerors." From what follows it would appear that the author had not at that time any idea that the nation of which he was to be the Premier was so favoured as we have since ascertained it to be.

Whether "light" has come to him since may be a matter of speculation to many, perchance a known fact to some; at any rate, whether or no, this volume speaks for itself, and read now by the light of history, is actually prophetic. A young Prince of the Lebanon declared if the English would only understand their own interests, with his co-operation Syria might be theirs.

Has this "education" been of no use? Surely it has, or the nation would not have approved so highly of all that has been done. At the end of the third chapter a very remarkable sentence occurs, spoken by the same Prince. He says, "let the Queen of the English collect a great fleet, let her stow away all her treasures, bullion, gold plate, and precious arms; be accompanied by all her court and chief people, and transfer the seat of her empire from London to Delhi. There she will find an immense empire ready made, a first-rate army, and a large revenue. In the meantime he would arrange with Mehemet Ali. He shall have Bagdad and Mesopotamia, and pour the Bedoueen cavalry into Persia. He himself would take care of Syria and Asia Minor. The only way to manage the Afghans is by Persia and by the Arabs. We will acknowledge the Empress of India as our suzerain, and secure for her the Levantine coast." Is not this remarkable, when, be it remembered, it was all written about thirty-four years ago?

(To be continued.)

ISRAEL KEEPETH SABBATH.

WE are anxious in all ways to promote the proper, Scriptural, and Biblical observance of the Lord's-day. We know it is God's sign given to our nation—Israel—whereby He engages to know them, and they (He says) shall come to know Him (Exod. xxxi. 13—17; Ezek. xx. 12—20). We hail, therefore, every effort made and making to protest against Sunday labour, as thoroughly opposed to God's law for Israel, and welcome every movement to further Sunday observance. We draw attention to a report of a meeting held lately for the benefit of omnibus men in London, whereat about 300 drivers were assembled under the presidency of our honoured "blind promoter," that true Israelite noble, Lord Shaftesbury. The meeting was held in the Bayswater Assembly Rooms, Queen's-road, when various addresses, mostly on the Sunday rest question, were given.

"We do not know," says the report, "the exact intention of the gathering, but it chiefly resolved itself into a strong protest, reiterated by all the speakers, and very emphatically by the chairman, against Sunday labour. These expressions were vehemently cheered by the men, which seemed to show that they would greatly appreciate the boon of Sunday rest if it were granted. Dr. Manning pertinently asked what they would do with it if they got it, and his implied hint that they might devote a portion of it to the public-house was met with loud denials.

Digitized by Google

"The attempt that is being made to secure the opening of museums and picture-galleries on the Lord's-day was strongly deprecated, inasmuch as it would increase the omnibus traffic, and the meeting was altogether enthusiastic on the subject. We should have liked the occasion to have been taken advantage of by more direct presentation of the Gospel to a body of men who, on the whole, were evidently strangers to church and chapel. At the same time, the subsidiary object of securing a weekly day of rest is well worth striving for, and we should hail its attainment with no ordinary satisfaction.

"The men were brought together through the agency of the City Mission, which has lately appointed a special missionary to labour among them."

The very reason our readers see from Exod. xxxi., and Ezek. xx., why the Sabbath rest was given to man is "that Israel may know that it is Jehovah that doth sanctify them," that He is their God." The day, therefore, is for "rest from labour, and that rest for sanctification of time to study God's character, goodness, redeeming love, and mercy. For, unless these be seen and known, wherein is the "rest" beneficial or the purpose answered that "Israel may know He is their God?" Unsanctified rest all may see will not satisfy the conditions. Thus, again, arguments drawn from correct views of "our Identity" lead to due and Scriptural observance of the Lord's-day. Properly treated this subject supports all godly effort, whether in the missionary and Jewish cause, in the Sabbath question, or in the noble aspirations of the advocates of temperance, if not of total abstinence, and we do trust that all candid minds will be led to study, and finally to embrace, truths which are, in fact, founded on God's Word, and absorb "His whole heart and His whole soul" (Jer. xxxii. 41). What is so dear to Him must surely be vitally important to us, and if we neglect it, let us be certain we do so at our own peril. But confidence in our origin leads us to the certainty that God will, in His own way, always provide means by which He will prevent our nation falling into continental habits in regard to His holy day. He has many means at His command, and one of the most potent is to put into the hearts of the people the resolution that nothing shall induce them to be led into Sabbath desecration, or into supporting those who rely on the alleged desire of the "working classes" to give way to the seduction of the anti-Sabbatarians. We have seen how the omnibus drivers met the friends of the Lord's-day rest. Now let us examine the case as it respects the desire (alleged to be great) of the artisans of the East of London to desecrate the Sabbath by visiting the museum opened there by her Majesty about four years ago.

We take the following from the "London City Mission Magazine," of Oct. 1, 1878, in relation to the Report from the Committee of the House of Lords on intemperance :—

"The witness, Mr. Weylland, who had been missionary to the public-houses in the parish of Marylebone, from 1852 to 1869, and since then has been secretary of the London City Mission Society, in answer to a question by Viscount Gordon, relative to the opening of museums on Sunday (page 209), stated that 'about four years ago her Majesty was graciously pleased to open a museum in the East of London, and some of the people there convened a meeting in order to get an expression of opinion from the working classes in favour of that museum being opened on Sunday, in fact two meetings were convened and attended by working men exclusively; but by a very large majority they passed resolutions against opening that museum on the Lord's-day. I remember that the rectors of Bow and Stratford said, "We are rather astonished at this, and will test the popular feeling in our parishes," and so meetings were called of working men to decide the question. I think thirteen meetings were called together, and at the whole thirteen meetings resolutions were carried by vast majorities against opening the museum.'

"Again, at pages 210 and 211, in answer to a question by the chairman (the Duke of Westminster), asking if he thought the fact of these institutions being open would tend to elevate a number of these men and prevent them taking to drink, he answered, 'I do not see how it could, because men would never attend every Sunday; but only on a few Sundays in the year. The effect upon them to some extent would be beneficial but great mischief might result. Amongst the great body of the people there is a strong undercurrent of feeling that the Divine law is the basis of all English law, and they say the Church of England teaches us to follow the fourth commandment, and to ask to be helped to keep "this law," and more damage would be done by destroying their reverential feelings for one day in seven than could possibly be repaired by the sight of pictures, however beautiful, or works of art, however lovely.'

"And again, at the bottom of page 211 and page 212, in answer to the latter part of a question put by Lord Hartismere, 'Surely, if museums were opened they would be very glad to go to them?' He answered, 'There would be comparatively few who would go to them; but as I said to his Grace, the destroying of reverence for a Divine ordinance could not be compensated by anything. I am in communication with large bodies of Christians of every denomination, and, speaking for them, I would observe that we do not regard this as simply a working man's question, it is a question for the whole nation, and if any one class of men more than another have a right to consider this question of Sunday opening, it is clergymen, and I may add lawyers—lawyers, because the law of England, from the time of King Alfred down to the present time, has recognised the observance of the Christian Sabbath as being a Divine law."

We think the above speaks for itself and shows better than any words of ours can, that "verily Israel keepeth Sabbath." "Praise YE the Lord."

THE PROGRESS OF "THE METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION."

WE think it right from time to time to report for the information of the public what the newly-established Metropolitan Israelite Association is attempting, or has carried into actual operation. It was only on December 20, 1878, that the Society was first organised and entered on its course. Little over a month, therefore, as we write (January 24, 1879), has elapsed, and yet we think we have reason to congratulate the working committee on the result of its labours.

It has a body of fifteen working members, a secretary, and treasurer; an office has been opened in the city; two meetings of the committee have already been held; a capital prospectus has been issued, and the practical work of "publishing" the Identity, for which the Association exists, begun. What is that practical work? Let the public judge. No less than twelve lectures have been arranged, and the lecturers detailed for their duties. Mr. Douglas A. Onslow undertakes six in the East end of London; three will be given by Mr. Charles Stubbs, B.A., and the Hon. Secretary, the Rev. J. Billington, takes also three. The latter selects "The Distinction between Israel and Judah," as his subject; and Mr. Onslow, we believe, will traverse the whole ground occupied by the Identity in consecutive lectures to be delivered at a week's interval each; Mr. Stubbs, we conclude, may take the Pyramid as his subject, but of this we are not certain.

This is decidedly profitable action, and if nothing else came of our efforts to set on foot the Metropolitan Association they were not in vain, and these results would have completely justified our action. But is this all? Certainly not. Out of the original meeting held on December 20 last, there has sprung up a perfectly independent branch Association at Lewisham and Blackheath, since set on foot by a member of the Metropolitan Committee. This Association has been affiliated with the London central body, and will work with it in all ways. So the cause increases and acquires strength as it progresses.

Digitized by Google

Meanwhile, we are glad, as an honorary—but we must add too highly-honoured—chairman of the committee, to report that the members generally are not neglecting the opportunities which the public press affords them of "publishing" our Identity. We are ourselves engaged in a hot controversy with two opponents at once in the Brighouse News, a Yorkshire paper. The fight has now lasted ten weeks, and there seems no sign of its abatement. It is a good token that the editor allows the controversy to take up two or three columns of his paper every week, but permits it to proceed. His readers must approve of it. In Deal the fight also waxes hot. Israelites and clerical opponents are dealing heavy blows at each other in the Mercury (the editor being friendly to our cause)—a contest not altogether ignorant of the presence of him who writes these lines. Then, again, the Herts and Essex Observer has opened its columns to Identity matters, and the result has been that two opponents have rushed in to proclaim their ignorance of God's Word and His promises to Israel, the assault being met by local friends and also by a member of the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association. We think we have said enough. The London Association is thoroughly wide awake, doing good loyal service to the cause of God, and He is evidently blessing them.

We point to these results and ask our London and the suburban friends to enrol themselves at once as "paying" members, and to sustain the hands which are not sparing their strength to carry on this glorious God-honoured work.

We may remark in passing, that a letter has just reached us, dated January 23, 1879, from Mr. Charles Johnson, secretary of the Portsmouth Israel Association, stating that that branch was newly-organised in Portsmouth, with twenty-eight members to begin with, on January 2, and that meetings are held every alternate Thursday, at 7.30 p.m., in Mr. Bayne's schoolroom. The rules are those adopted at Sheffield, and it is hoped this notice will induce others at Portsmouth who believe in our Identity, but are not aware of the existence of the new organisation, at once to join that body by addressing the secretary at 59, Fleet-street, Southsea.

We conclude by repeating the words adopted by the Metropolitan Association as their motto: "Publish YE, praise YE, and say, O Lord, save Thy people, the remnant of Israel" (Jer. xxxi. 7).

N.B.—One who is friendly to our cause suggests that henceforth the word "Anglo" is a misnomer, and redundant in connection with our Associations throughout the land, and that our "Anglo-Israel Associations" may henceforth be more properly termed our "Israel Associations"—one "calling himself by the name of Jacob; another subscribing his hand unto the Lord, and surnaming himself by the name of Israel" (Isa. xliv. 5).

ISRAEL'S CUSTOMS DUTIES.—Good news for our teetotal friends! The Custom-house annual return, dated the 6th inst., states the gross amount produced by Customs duties in the year 1878 at £20,191,526, being more by £351,205 than in the preceding year. Tobacco, the largest item, is returned as producing £8,470,650, showing £389,869 increase; spirits brought in £5,414,049, a decrease of £96,089; tea, £3,942,315, an increase of £160,424; wine, £1,525,231, a decrease of £134,926; dried fruits, £510,414, an increase of £31,461; coffee, £208,789, an increase of £3,517. The net produce of the year's Custom duties, after deducting drawbacks and allowances for damage, &c., was £20,087,561, and the increase £351,350. — Times, January 11, 1879.

THE "ROCK" GIVES BLIND TESTIMONY TO OUR IDENTITY.

IN the Rock newspaper of January 3, 1879, two remarkable articles appeared—one ridiculing "our Anglo-Israelitish origin," but evincing more than readiness to accept the monstrous absurdity that the Afghans are the Lost Tribes; the other, the leading article on the position of the British nation at the present hour, which teems with Identity evidence, and which we shall, with satisfaction, reproduce for our readers' benefit. It is, indeed, a strange thing that God thus allows a worthy, able organ of public opinion, doing good service to the cause of evangelical truth, thus to ridicule a subject which involuntarily it serves—a subject which is intimately connected with the work the Rock is trying to do, without knowing how to attain its end, or the mode by which God means it to be effected.

The first article has reference to Major Raverty's opinion published in the Times (of December 26, 1878), asserting that the Afghans are Beni-Israel of the Ten Tribes, but not of Judah; and the Rock, delighted at the idea, begins his comments by saying the editor is "weary of the nonsense that is talked about our own Anglo-Israelitish origin, but the Israelitish origin of the Afghans has become a deeply interesting problem." He ends his notice by observing: "Without ourselves being of Israelitish descent, we should, by occupying the country of the Afghans, thus become associated with Israel."

We would ask the Rock, in all seriousness, if the Bible is a true book or a book of fables? Let us take the Rock at its word, and suppose the Lost Tribes are the Afghans. What follows?

1. Their land is South-east of Palestine. But God's Word said the House of Israel, or Ephraim, will, in the last days, be found in "the North country," and in "the isles of the West." God's Word, therefore, is really false (Jer. iii. 18; Hosea xi. 11; Isa. xxiv. 15).

2. The Afghans are Mahommedans, and do not and never have served Christ. They do not prove a blessing to "all" or to any of "the families of the earth." But God's Word said Israel should be found, in the last days, "the sons of the living God;" "a blessing to all nations;" "known as a seed the LORD hath blessed." God's message to mankind, therefore, again is a simple tissue of falsehoods from first to last (Hosea i. 10; Gen. xxii. 18; Isa. lxi. 9).

3. The Afghans do not hold "the Gates of their enemies." We have just robbed them, indeed, of almost all the Gates they ever held, and they lie at our mercy, at this moment, as a war power! But God's Word says Israel "shall possess the Gate of their enemies," shall never be subdued by the Gentiles, and the "place appointed" for their habitation shall be ever inviolate, undefiled by the foot of the foreign foe (Gen. xxii. 17; 2 Sam. vii. 10; Isa. liv. 15—17). God's Word, therefore, turns out to be unreliable, and we need no more regard it as the truth.

4. The Afghans have no wealth, no trade, no commerce, no foreign possessions. But God gave Israel "the power to get wealth," a great heathen and a mighty colonial Empire, "the ends" and "coasts of the earth," and trade in all "its waters." The prediction is, therefore, falsified, and the credit of God's Word is thus gone for ever (Deut. viii. 18; Psa. ii. 8; Isaiah xlix. 8, xxvi. 15; Deut. xxxiii. 17; Num. xxiv. 7).

So we might go on pointing out in sixty or eighty instances the absurd contrariety between "Afghan facts," on the supposition they are Lost Israel, and God's true promises to the latter nation.

We argue, therefore, that the Rock and Major Raverty together, are utterly, hopelessly in the wrong; that God's Word must be absolutely in the right, and that we must look further a-field than Afghanistan for the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel.

Digitized by Google

But we need not go far to find out where Israel really is. The same issue of the Rock, to which we have just referred, in the leading article, tells us, and that in no indistinct terms, where Israel is. Let us hear what the editor says of the British nation. They are words we are proud to repeat, and we thank the editor for using them. They are cogent proof of our origin, and run quite on our BANNER lines. He said:—

We can scarcely be charged with presumption if we consider England at the present time as standing among the nations of the earth in a position analogous to that of the Jews in their best days. God chose and ruled that people of old in order that they might become an instrument for maintaining on earth a knowledge of the true Jehovah, and for teaching all kingdoms and peoples their responsibility to Him. The great truth that the nation which honours Him He will honour, is not only inculcated by Scripture, but is illustrated by the secular history of mankind. Hence, looking at the high and peculiar position which the Almighty has been pleased to assign us among the nations of the earth, it behoves us to study the principal events of the past twelve months in the light of Holy Writ, and, at the same time, in a spirit of profound humiliation.

Since the cessation of hostilities between Russia and Turkey, our country, in the providence of God, has assumed a new position of international responsibility. Egypt being now largely under her control, and the whole of India being more closely allied to the Queen as Empress of our Eastern dominion—these circumstances, together with the possession of Cyprus, all tend to bring English rule into supreme prominence. Let us, however, not forget that the rock on which all this mighty power rests is Protestantism. France, in her struggles against priestly domination, is striving to ally herself more thoroughly with England. The spread of vital religion, and the waning of Rationalism in Germany, the progress of civil freedom in Italy, the cordial feelings of sympathy entertained towards us by the Protestants of America, the continued enlargement of our colonial territory, the success of our arms in India, the security for life and property in Palestine by virtue of our lately-acquired authority in Cyprus—all these things should stir us up to renewed prayer and effort towards the fulfilment of God's gracious promises in respect to the return of His ancient people to their own land, and for hastening the time for the overthrow of anti-Christ in all his forms, and the dawning of the long-expected day when the "kingdoms of this world shall become the kingdoms of our Lord and of His Christ."

Do our readers notice what it is the editor of the Rock alleges in the above? He says:—

1. That the British occupy now the position of God's "chosen nation" (the Jews he calls them) in their "best days." Just so. Being Israel, they are God's chosen people, and they would not be, as the Rock allows, "in the position of the Tribes" without being chosen people (Isa. xli. 8—10, &c., lxiii. 17—19).

2. That the Almighty has assigned to us the high and peculiar position we hold—one which brings "English rule" into "supreme prominence." But God gave to Israel the position of "supreme prominence" among the nations "if obedient," making them "the chief of nations;" "the head and not the tail—above only and not beneath;" the wonder of all the Gentiles (Deut. xxviii. 13; Jer. xxxiii. 9; Amos vi. 1; Jer. xxxi. 7; Isa. xli. 9).

3. That the greatness of the British rests on their Protestantism, which is another mode of saying they are God's "witnesses." But He said Himself that Israel were "His witnesses," and we, consequently, must be Israel, as we are established—teste the Rock—in our witnessing function or "Protestantism" (Isa. xliii. 12, xliv. 8).

4. That our duty as the chief Protestants of the world is to pray and strive to fulfil God's purposes in respect to the return of "His ancient people to their own land." Of course the Rock means the return of the Jews. But we, being Israel, are Jezreel, and in the return (we being also God's ancient people) our return will be the great object and purpose God will have in view, for "great," He said Himself, describing the return, "shall be the day of Jezreel;" and Jezreel is Israel, not Judah (Hosea i. 11).

We congratulate the Rock on showing us clearly that the Afghans are certainly not Israelites of the Ten Tribes, but that we British most decidedly are. The Rock thus proves to be our brightest, clearest, and best "blind witness" we have met with for months.

THE VICAR OF ST. BARNABAS, HULL, A CHRISTIAN JEW, GIVES SPLENDID BLIND TESTIMONY TO OUR IDENTITY.

THE Rev. J. C. S. Kroenig, A.K.C., vicar of St. Barnabas, Hull, has been preaching a most remarkable sermon, which, at the request of the Church Council, has been published by S. W. Partridge & Co., 9, Paternoster-row (price sixpence.) We propose to re-issue it in consecutive numbers of the BANNER, as we consider this by far the most wonderful testimony we have yet had that our nation is Israel. Let the reader consider that the witness in this case is — (1) A beneficed clergyman of the Church of England. (2) A converted Jew. (3) That his object, as stated in his printed sermon, is to show that—

"ENGLAND'S IDENTITY WITH ISRAEL IS PROVED."

(4) That to establish that fact he quotes a fair number of texts to which we always refer; and that (5), yet in spite of all that, he denies we are Hebrews, but asserts we are only a Gentile nation, set up by God as "the facsimile of Israel in her palmy days"—"a perfect parallel to what the inspired Word reveals in connection with the Jewish people!" Our clerical witness, therefore, is, it seems, while giving full and complete testimony to our Identity—both blind and deaf—blind, to see that What is a "facsimile" and a "perfect parallel" must be the same as the lost nation compared with it; and deaf, because without assigning any valid reason he declares there is not a "shadow of Scripture evidence by which our lineal descent from the Lost Ten Tribes can be proved!"

We beg the reader to peruse this pamphlet carefully, and he will agree with us that nothing but total blindness, and racial prejudice, which is stone deaf besides, can prevent one who maintains that this, our nation, is the "modern Israel," "the appropriator of the blessings once promised to Israel in Mal. i. 11; Deut. xv. 6, xxxiii. 29; Levit. xxvi. 5," from owning the absolute Identity of the British with the Ten Tribes, who he does not deny are lost, and yet to be somewhere some day found! Our preacher makes a fine point when he says that our Lord designated "England" (as he terms the British) in Matt. xxi. 43, for then he declared the privileges of the Jews should be transferred (εθνει) to A NATION—ostensibly, therefore, to one of the Gentile races. For the British being Israel, as he admits, are in truth God's Lo-ammi Israel, or the Goi Nabal (the foolish Gentiles) of Moses and of St. Paul (Deut. xxxii. 21; Rom. x. 19). The rev. preacher little thought as he wrote these words that he was thus forging the chains that bind Great Britain to Israel's chariot, since God declaring Lost Israel was to be Lo-ammi" or "NOT His people," added that they should "yet," in spite of that, be discovered to be "the North country," "Western Islanders," the "Christian nation," "Sons of the living God," "His people," "He their God!" (Jer. iii. 18; Isa. xxiv. 15; Hosea i. 10, ii. 23).

With regard to the fallacy that underlies and accounts for Mr. Kroenig's "blindness" and "deafness," we ask our readers to reflect—

1. That God never said He would put Israel aside, even for a day, and temporarily adopt as the recipients of all His blessings entailed on the Hebrews, any purely Gentile nation whatsoever. Let Mr. K. try and prove that statement from Scripture! He will utterly fail! To assert it, is to dishonour

Digitized by Google

God's faithfulness, and to proclaim that He is false to His own solemn oath in Gen. xxii. 17, 18; and that God forbid!

2. That the Jews being destined to be taken back as the Lord's "present" by "the Isles," or "Tarshish," or the ships thereof, or "the English," the latter by Isa. xviii. are necessarily "a people terrible from their beginning and hitherto" (ver. 7), therefore of the same race precisely as the "present" itself (ver. 1)—ergo, Hebrews!

3. That Zeph. iii. 10 proves the "offering of the Lord" is to be brought by precisely the same people as are geographically described by Isa. xviii. 1, with this addition, that they are the Lord's "suppliants" (therefore Christians) and "the daughter of His dispersed" (therefore the Ten Tribes, or the diasphora of 1 Peter i. 1).

The British being then these destined restorers of the House of Judah, must thus be the Hebrews mentioned by Isaiah and Zephaniah—leste the converted Jewish vicar of St. Barnabas, at Hull—and we need therefore no longer doubt our origin since a Jew testifies it, an English vicar vouches for it, and God's Word most distinctly and clearly proves it, beyond all cavil! Reader, while we thank God for this new and wondrous "blind testimony," let us take courage and redouble our efforts to prove to others what is so clear to the Rev. J. C. S. Kroenig!

We ask our readers now to listen to this wondrous sermon, which is entitled,

"ENGLAND'S DIVINE MISSION IN THE EAST; OR, ENGLAND'S IDENTITY WITH ISRAEL PROVED."

PART I.

"In that time shall the PRESENT be brought unto the Lord of hosts of a people scattered and peeled, and from a people terrible from their beginning hitherto; a nation meted out and trodden under foot, whose land the rivers have spoiled, to the place of the name of the Lord of hosts, the mount Zion."—Isa. xviii. 7.

"Therefore say I unto you, the kingdom of God shall be taken from you, and given to a NATION bringing forth the fruits thereof."—Matt. xxi. 43.

"My Christian hearers,—I approach the subject for our consideration this evening—viz., 'England's Divine Mission in the East'—with very great solemnity, and trust it may not by some be misconstrued and regarded as having reference to the views of some political faction. The subject is one of momentous importance, and concerns no particular religious or political section of the community, but every individual believer in this favoured island. It concerns every one to whom the Holy Scriptures are no longer a sealed book or an unfathomable mystery, but a Divine revelation and guide, to lead him safely and happily on his pilgrimage through the intricate labyrinths of this timely existence, unto the haven of the rest 'which remaineth to the children of God.'

"England's Divine mission in the East is inscribed in the great roll of prophecy with indelible clearness, with matchless perspicuity, by the unerring hand of Him whose purposes will and must ripen, in defiance of every obstacle or stumbling-block that either vain philosophy on the one side, or stern infidelity on the other, may strive to cast in its way.

"I have selected two passages of Scripture for our consideration—one from the Old Testament, and one from the New Testament. The former is a declaration, the other a confirmation of the Divine appointment concerning England's great mission. May the Holy Spirit aid us to be rightly impressed by His hallowed teaching.

"In order to elucidate the subject more fully, let us consider it under the following three points:

"1. England's position in the Divine plan. 2. England's duty. And 3. England's opportunities."

(To be continued.)

GOOD NEWS FROM THE ANTIPODES.

PART I.

WE wonder what our opponents will say when they read what we now proceed to quote from the Cornwall Chronicle, published in Launceston, Tasmania, on Aug. 31, and to hand here on Oct. 29, 1878. It is a most satisfactory report of the first public meeting held at Launceston, of the Anglo-Israel Association of that place, at which the Rev. Canon Brownrigg presided, in St. John's schoolroom, belonging, we presume, to the Rev. Canon's parish. The president's address will be read with great interest by all our friends throughout the Empire, and as a specimen of the best way to organise an association, and to conduct its meetings, we commend Canon Brownrigg's to the notice of our home, colonial, and American Associations in posse and beg them to follow this example. We hope our opponents notice the singular unison between the views we are constantly enunciating in the BANNER, and those the Rev. Canon at Launceston set forth in his address to his hearers at the first open Israelite meeting ever held in that island. Whence did the unanimity arise? Not from slavish imitation and adoption of our opinions by the Canon; he is not a man to descend to such a course as that. We did not obtain ours from him, for we were proclaiming them long before we ever heard of Canon Blake Brownrigg, or knew that Launceston, Tasmania, had in it a cluster of inquiring Israelites. It was, no doubt, from the same source both Canon Brownrigg and we ourselves derived our inspiration—the Word of the living God. To us the hint first came, as we are always ready to admit, from the wonderful work by Mr. Edward Hine, "The Forty-Seven Identifications," and perhaps the Rev. Canon Brownrigg was indebted to the same pages under God for the light that has been shed on his path as a minister of the Gospel of Christ; however that may be, we rejoice in the results, and hail with joy the formation of our new Launceston Israelite Association, and wish them "God-speed" in the name of the Lord. Our readers note, doubtless, with satisfaction how spot after spot is being lighted up all over the world with this glorious radiation. Adelaide, in South Australia; Auckland and Wellington, in New Zealand; Launceston, in Tasmania; Natal and Panmure, in South Africa; Montreal, in Canada; Brooklyn and other spots in the United States, have their societies of Israelites all earnestly engaged in the prayerful study of these truths to which the BANNER OF ISRAEL is devoted, and it is our pleasant duty from time to time to record their progress and send loving greetings to them from their great Israelite mother in "the isles of the West."

With this introduction we ask our readers to attend to Canon Brownrigg, and to listen to him as he addresses his Tasmanian flock at "the ends of the earth," with words of wisdom explaining to them, if they reflect, how it comes to pass that they are a flourishing happy community of all-Israelites in the far off land of Tasmania at our antipodes.

ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

A meeting of this Association was held last evening in St. John's schoolroom. The Rev. Canon Brownrigg presided. The proceedings were commenced with prayer, and the secretary read the minutes of the previous meeting, which were confirmed.

The Chairman then delivered the following address:—

The present occasion being our first public meeting, I think it desirable to make a brief statement concerning the object of the Anglo-Israel Association, and the means by which it is hoped that object may be effected. I will speak—

1. Of the object of the Anglo-Israel Association. To make this intelligible, it will be necessary in the first place to notice the circumstances out of which the Association has arisen.

In that sacred Book—the Bible—the infallible Word of God—the history of God's dealings with one remarkable nation in particular—the Hebrew nation—has been handed down to our times.

That history tells us that that nation descended from Abraham, through Isaac and Jacob. That Jacob begat the twelve patriarchs, each of whom became the head of, and gave his name respectively to, a Tribe, and these Twelve Tribes in their national character were then called "the children of Israel," after Jacob, whose surname was Israel.

Digitized by Google

The history further tells us, that in process of time the Twelve Tribes (thirteen when Manasseh is included) became divided into Two Kingdoms, called respectively, the Kingdom of Judah and the Kingdom of Israel. The former, the Kingdom of Judah, consisting of the Tribes of Judah and Levi, with, for a while, the Tribe of Benjamin, and the latter, the Kingdom of Israel, consisting of the Tribes of Reuben, Simeon, Issachar, Zebulun, Joseph, Dan, Naphtali, Gad, Asher, and Manasseh. And here let it be remembered that the name of Ephraim is sometimes used for Joseph, so that in the several lists of the Ten Tribes, when the name of Ephraim occurs, that of "Joseph" is omitted, and when "Joseph" is named, "Ephraim" is not, so that the names of "Ephraim" and "Joseph" are used interchangeably.

Now these Kingdoms of Judah and Israel are distinct from each other, the people of the former being called Jews, while the people of the latter being called the Kingdom of Israel, or the Ten Tribes, Israelites. Each Kingdom has a separate history. Each has been guilty of grievous idolatry, for which it has been punished, the Kingdom of Judah (Jews) being carried into captivity by the Babylonian Power, from which, after seventy years, it returned (with some exceptions) to its own land, but not as an independent people—and the Kingdom of Israel (the Ten Tribes) being wholly carried away by the Assyrian Power, and uncovenanted, as we learn from the prophet Hosea.

But further, while that Hebrew nation, consisting of the two Kingdoms of Judah and Israel, has a history, deeply interesting and important, we find in the sacred volume that it is also the subject of certain prophecies, equally interesting and important—prophecies which, in the case of Judah (the Jews), are being so obviously fulfilled, that to deny it, were to deny what every sensible person unhesitatingly admits; and the logical conclusion is, that the prophecies concerning the other branch of that nation, the Kingdom of Israel (the Ten Tribes), are as surely in course of fulfilment, even though to many minds such fulfilment is not so immediately obvious.

It would, however, be quite beside my present purpose to enter upon a full statement of the prophecies as they relate to either Judah or Israel. It will be enough to notice that it has been predicted concerning Judah (the Jews) that they should be a marked people in the world; that they should be scattered abroad among the nations; that they should observe the rites of the Mosaic law, and that they will not turn unto the Lord as a converted people, until the time arrives when their brethren of the House of Israel shall be discovered, and nationally acknowledge themselves as the long lost Kingdom of Israel. Concerning Israel (the Ten Tribes), it has been predicted that being cast off for iniquity, they were not to be known as Israel until God's times be fulfilled. That they should lose the knowledge of their ancestry. That they should be given up to idolatry, and as a consequence should renounce the Mosaic rites and observances; that they should be "sifted" among the nations, yet, while lost to the world as Israel, they shall be gathered again by the mysterious providence of God; and to these two following prophecies—the one relating to Israel and the other to Judah and Israel together, I beg your special attention, as intimately connected with the object of our Anglo-Israel Association. The first of these prophecies—the one which relates particularly to Israel (the Ten Tribes) is stated in these terms:—"Thus saith the Lord, which giveth the sun for a light by day, and the ordinances of the moon and of the stars for a light by night, which divideth the sea when the waves thereof roar, the Lord of hosts is His name, if those ordinances depart from Me, saith the Lord, then the seed of Israel also shall cease from being a nation before Me for ever" (Jer. xxxi. 35, 36). In whatever sense it may be possible to understand the word "nation," it is unquestionably the case, from what is said in that passage, that there must be some sense, in which it is true that the "seed of Israel" shall not "cease from being a nation before Me"—i.e., in God's sight; otherwise language has no meaning whatever. But this pledge of continual existence is absolutely involved in the other prophecy I would notice—namely, that relating to the future re-union of the two Kingdoms, when, and not before then, the distinction between them shall for ever cease. That such a union is to take place, Ezekiel tells us when he says: "The word of the Lord came again to me, saying, Moreover, thou son of man, take thee one stick and write upon it, For Judah and for the children of Israel his companions (that is, such portions of the Ten Tribes as may have linked themselves to Judah). Then take another stick and write upon it, For Joseph, the stick of Ephraim, and for all the House of Israel—i.e., the great bulk of the Ten Tribes—his companions, and join them one to another into one stick, and they shall become one in thine hand" (Ezek. xxxvii. 15—17). This proceeding, Ezekiel is to explain to the people, denotes the future union between Judah and Israel, and then he is to further say unto them, "Thus saith the Lord God, Behold, I will take the children of Israel from among the heathen, whither they be gone, and I will gather them on every side, and bring them into their land, and I will make them one nation in the land upon the mountains of Israel; and one king shall be king to them all" (Ezek. xxxvii. 21, 22).

From these prophecies, then, these conclusions are forced upon us:—

1st. That the so-called Lost Kingdom of Israel has somewhere a national existence, and no amount of sophistry or dogmatic assertion to the contrary can dispose of that fact.

2nd. That the Kingdoms of Israel and Judah are at some time to be re-united, another fact that cannot be justly denied; and—

3rd. That, therefore, the Kingdom of Israel must be discoverable, and so recognisable, that these prophecies may in their season be acknowledged as literally fulfilled.

Now a view which is obtaining in England, and in the Colonies, a steadily increasing acceptance, connects our British nation with the Kingdom of Israel—not with the Kingdom of Judah or the Jews: and I beg that this difference may be clearly borne in mind, for a fruitful source of objections, among the opponents of the Anglo-Israel question, is traceable to this fact, that they either fail to perceive, or else do not rightly value the distinction between those Kingdoms, which distinction is, nevertheless, one of the most apparent, important, and indisputable facts in the history of the Twelve Tribes. I repeat, then, that it is the Identity of the British nation with the Kingdom of Israel that is maintained; and it is the object of our Anglo-Israel Association to study and make known, as widely as we can, the claims of our nation to that honour.

I come now to speak—

II. Of the means by which it is hoped our object may be attained:—

1. As one of the means, the Association proposes to hold a meeting fortnightly, when the Anglo-Israel question will be considered in detail. For this purpose it is desirable that members or others attending the meetings should bring their Bibles with them. At these meetings opportunity will be given for inquiries—for stating and answering objections—for imparting information upon the question in its several bearings, and for conversation and discussion thereupon.

2. As another of the means, the Association proposes to issue occasional leaflets or papers on Anglo-Israelism, and to promote the circulation of Anglo-Israel literature in general; and—

3. As yet another of the means, the Association purposes to open its meetings to persons desirous of attending without enrolling as members. Persons who wish to enrol as members can enrol on payment of a joining fee of 1s. and a contribution of 6d. payable monthly, in advance, to meet the incidental expenses of the Association.

By these means, and any other that from time to time may appear to be advisable, the Association hopes that its object may be attained.

In conclusion, there are three points upon which I desire to say a word, so that none, unless wilfully, can misunderstand our position. I remark—

1st. That our Anglo-Israel Association does not attempt or desire to make "Anglo-Israelism" a substitute for the Gospel of Christ. "Anglo-Israelism" is simply the title under which the view that the British nation is identical with the Kingdom of Israel, is concisely and conveniently expressed. It is not "another Gospel," as some "slanderously affirm" that we hold it is. We do not teach that to belong to the Kingdom of Israel is the same thing as to belong to Christ. We abide by the teaching of God's Word, and declare that no national destination, however glorious, can save the soul, and, therefore, that personal dependence upon Christ, and the indwelling of the Holy Spirit is necessary to salvation.

2nd. That our Anglo-Israel Association does not attempt or desire in any way to hinder the cause of missions among the Jews. On the contrary, we claim the support of all those who are interested in such missions on the ground that the conversion of the Kingdom of Judah cannot take place until the Kingdom of Israel shall be discovered and nationally acknowledged:—"In those days the House of Judah shall walk with (margin, TO) the House of Israel, and they shall come together out of the land of the North, to the land that I have given for an inheritance unto your fathers" (Jeremiah iii. 18). If, therefore, the Identity of the British nation with the kingdom of Israel be a fact, as we hold it to be, then the national acknowledgment of that fact will prepare the way for the turning of Judah unto the Lord.

Digitized by Google

3rd and lastly. That under the full conviction that the claims of the British to Identity with the Kingdom of Israel are strongly established, our Anglo-Israel Association invites the fullest and freest inquiry into the whole Anglo-Israel question. To imagine that the question can be disposed of by banter, or by the affectation of pity for those who entertain it, or by mere assertions to the contrary, is utterly useless. The most dogmatic objectors are, as a rule, found among those who, through indifference, or prejudice, or contempt, have not studied the subject, and therefore such objectors must not complain if their objections fail to command any respect, or carry the slightest weight. Intelligent people will inquire more and more, as the Anglo-Israel question becomes known, and if the views it propounds are not refuted by strong and earnest argument, the logical conclusion to be drawn must assuredly be this, that "Anglo-Israelism is unanswerable, and is worthy of the widest acceptance."

A conversational interchange of ideas was then carried on for about an hour, during which it was determined that the subscription to the society should consist of one shilling entrance, and sixpence per month afterwards; the meetings should be held fortnightly, the first to take place on the next Friday week, at the school-room; all members should be requested to bring their own Bibles, and that the meeting should be open to the public generally, in order that the views of the society might be thoroughly disseminated. To begin with, they might take for discussion the earlier chapters of Genesis. On the suggestion of Mr. G. P. Hudson, it was arranged that two or three suggestive books and pamphlets should be obtained by the first opportunity from England. And after the benediction had been pronounced, the meeting separated.

ISRAELITISH REFLECTIONS.

By Major R. W. D. Nickle.

As I sat musing over the last gallant exploit of our soldiers in the Peiwar Kotal Pass, a succession of thoughts presented themselves, each one pointing to the Holy Book for confirmation.

My attention was first of all attracted to the following passage:—"But the people that do know their God shall be strong, and do exploits. And they that understand among the people shall instruct many" (Dan. xi. 32, 33). So the question occurred, Have we not fought our enemies in all quarters of the earth on their own soil, very often against overwhelming numbers, and gained a long list of brilliant victories for the last thousand years by land and by sea, that have astonished ourselves as well as all nations?

The Lord of hosts has evidently been on our side and protected the nation. He has given us strength and enabled us to do exploits. Now, it appears certain that these people mentioned by Daniel who understand and instruct many, must, therefore, be missionaries of the Word of God. This statement evidently refers to Ephraim and Manasseh, for they are the only two great missionary powers on the face of the earth at the present time, and signified in the grand gallery of the Pyramid, "in the midst of the land of Egypt" (Isaiah xix. 19). "The shield of His mighty men is made red, the valiant men are in scarlet" (Nahum ii. 3). This is the national colour of the distinguished British army. "I AM thy shield" (Genesis xv. 1). "The Lord is my strength and my shield" (Psalm xxviii. 7). "Wherefore art Thou red in Thine apparel?" (Isaiah lxiii. 2). Here I reflected that in our present state of knowledge regarding inherent colours, we have not as yet attained a perfect red; there are always more or less of the yellow rays of light affecting it: inherent scarlet being of a bright red appearance, nearly approaches to the primary colour red; it is our national colour and distinguishes our soldiers from those of other nations; our "valiant men are in scarlet." The thin red line, as it was called, of our own valiant Highland brigade, stood the charge of the Russian cavalry at Balaclava, and drove back the soldiers of Rosh, our spiritual and bitter enemy, the chief prince of Meshech and Tubal, these being the ancient names for Moscow and Tobolsk (vide Ezekiel xxxviii., xxxix.). Regarding this brilliant colour, it is very remarkable that there are many instances when blind people have been asked to describe their idea of scarlet, their answer has been that scarlet is to them as the sensation of the sound or blast of a trumpet.

Now, there are many passages in the Scriptures referring to the sound of a trumpet, but one passage especially attracts our attention from the clearness of the sound conveyed to us by the written Word: "The Lord shall blow the trumpet" (Zechariah ix. 14); and in connection with this sound proceeding from the breath and mouth of the Lord, it is written, "Blessed is the people that know the joyful sound: they shall walk, O Lord, in the light of Thy countenance" (Psalm lxxxix. 15); "And His face did shine as the sun, and His raiment was white as the light" (Matthew xvii. 2; Rev. iii. 4, 5). To those who have discovered their Israelitish origin from the inquiries they have made according to the direction of the Word of prophecy, "Thus saith the Lord, I will yet for this be inquired of by the House of Israel" (Ezekiel xxxvi. 37), and finding that their numerous Identifications correspond exactly to all the prophetical statements regarding the House of Israel up to the present time, the warning sound of the prophetical trumpet is consequently a very joyful sound to them; for it is a signal to our nation that gives life and animation. It is a signal that the remarkable vision mentioned in Ezekiel xxxvii., is beginning to be fulfilled in these eventful days. The trumpet of Israel has sounded in Great Britain, and we hear the joyful echoes of it from all our colonies, as well as from the land of Manasseh; God's chosen people are now awaking from their long sleep of forgetfulness, wondering at the position in which they find themselves—"Wherefore He saith, Awake, thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light" (Eph. v. 14; Rom. xi. 15); "For the testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy" (Rev. xix. 10).

Leamington, January 2, 1879.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI ON THE LAST NEW GATE AND THE EMPRESS OF INDIA, IN "TANCRED."

At page 237 of the new edition of "Tancred, or the New Crusade," we read these words—written thirty years ago it must be remembered. Has Lord Beaconsfield foreseen recent events and quietly prepared for them as the time for the accomplishment drew on? Burizy, of the Tower, was speaking regarding the supposed murder of Tancred, and he said, "If he was accidently killed, there will be negotiations, but the business will be compromised; the English want Cyprus, and they will take it as compensation." What made the then Mr. Disraeli think the English wanted Cyprus thirty years ago? and that they would take it "as compensation," which is just what they did in July, 1878?

At page 263 of the same edition, the author puts into the Emir's mouth these remarkable words:—"Let the Queen of the English collect a great fleet, stow away all her treasure, bullion, gold plate, and precious arms, be accompanied by all her court and chief people, and transfer the seat of her Empire from London to Delhi. There she will find an immense Empire ready made, a first-rate army, and a large revenue. . . . . We will acknowledge the Empress of India as our Suzerain and secure for her the Levantine coast. If she like, she shall have Alexandria as she now has Malta. It could be arranged. Your Queen is young. She has an avenir. . . . . But you see the greatest Empire that ever existed, besides which she gets rid of the embarrassment of her chambers. And quite practicable; for the only difficult part, the conquest of India, which baffled Alexander, is done." All we ask is how did Mr. Disraeli, in those days "when our beloved Queen was young," ever dream of her being one day the Empress of India, with the Levantine coast secured for her, and the reversion of Alexandria as her possession "if she liked?"

Digitized by Google

Of these three things one is done. The Queen is now Empress of India, and she rules at Delhi in place of the Great Mogul, whose seat was there. The second is virtually attained, for the possession of the Gate Cyprus, which "the English have not only wanted," but secured, gives the "Queen of England" the power over the whole Levantine coast; and as to Alexandria —well, it is not yet a British Gate, but it may be so one day, soon, perhaps—who knows? Benjamin Disraeli foresaw it thirty or forty years ago as a matter of course, and we Israelites know it will take place, and that—say, in 1882.

SOLOMON'S PETITION.

By L. P.

We find in 1 Kings viii., that in the midst of his magnificent prayer on Israel's behalf, in connection with the newly-finished temple in Jerusalem, Solomon, suddenly turning from God's people Israel, pleads for the stranger who shall "come out of a far country" for God's name sake (viii. 41, 42).. The King asks, that coming and praying toward this house, the stranger, like the chosen people, may be heard, and his petition granted, "that (verse 43) all people of the earth may know Thy name, and fear Thee as do Thy people Israel."

May we not see here the type, as it were, of that missionary spirit which was to be poured out in the Christian dispensation on God's elect, that they might spread the knowledge of saving truth to all the ends of the earth, and call upon all strangers to look to Him who shall reign gloriously in Zion? We do not remember any other instance in the Old Testament of supplication for a blessing on aliens and foreigners, and for their being allowed to share in one of the greatest privileges of Israel, if they will shew their faith in Israel's God, and come up to His temple with their requests. We think this prayer of Solomon's points to the yet future time when strangers shall come from afar, and at Jerusalem worship the King of kings, when He shall reign gloriously over His people.

Stay! possibly cry out our opponents, you seem to forget that our Lord Jesus told the woman of Samaria that she should "neither in this mountain, nor yet at Jerusalem, worship the Father" (John iv. 21); and now, the whole world is His temple, where Christians may pray, and be heard, and answered. True, we reply, Jerusalem ceased to be a privileged place of prayer, both as concerns the bodily presence of the worshipper, or his looking towards it, as he supplicates; but our Lord Jesus did not say it should never become again such an exceptional spot; and we must remember the Lord God of the New Testament is the Lord God of the Old, and in Zech. xiv. 16, He says, "Every one that is left of all the nations which came against Jerusalem, shall even go up from year to year to worship the King, the Lord of hosts."

This passage in 1 Kings viii. appears to us to be an answer to all who, in these days, are heard to say, It does not matter if people are Mahommedans, or Roman Catholics, or Buddhists, or Hindoos, &c., if they are sincere in their belief, we need ask no more; they are right if they think themselves to be so, why disturb them? We seem to remember that a "noble lord," an M.P., delivered himself this year, in the House of Commons, of some such sentiments as these. Judging from his prayer, we think Solomon, the wise king, would not have considered that the idolatrous sincerity of the "stranger" was all that was required to give efficacy to his prayer, and to bring answering blessings on his head.

It is not for us to pronounce how far an erring faith may be accepted by the Reader of all hearts; but as Solomon's prayer implies that the entreaty of the stranger could only be attended to, in so far as he looked towards Jerusalem and its heavenly King, so may we believe that even yet the prayer of a pure faith is the only one that can claim a hearing and an answer from on high.

We do not forget our Lord's words (John iv. 24): "God is a Spirit, and they that worship Him, must worship Him in spirit and in truth;" but, we ask, do the Mahommedans, the Buddhists, the Roman Catholics, the Hindoos, and heathen idolaters, worship Him, the one true, pure, holy God, and the Son one with Him, in spirit and in truth? No—we say emphatically, No—they do not. Then what right have we to expect their worship to be acknowledged and blessed?

We need not remind the readers of the Banner that the people who plead in the spirit which animated Solomon in his intercessory petition for "the Jews, Turks, infidels, and heretics," and who add to their prayers their money and their missionary labours, are the Anglo-Saxons, who, being Christian Israelites, would fain lead all nations to turn unto the Lord God Almighty, the Creator and Redeemer, and teach them to claim answers to the prayers of faith by offering them up in the name of Jesus Christ.

MANASSEH'S LOVING GREETING TO EPHRAIM!

"One touch of Israel makes the whole world kin."

We beg our readers to peruse the annexed most interesting letter just to hand from our New York Israelites. Our opponents must see with grief how our cause is spreading! But they ought, as Christian men, to rejoice that its first effect is to kindle Christian love, to foster brotherly feeling between two now separated "brethren," and that the subject seems to afford a means by which the sad separation may, ere long, be healed by loving "federation." We have seldom received a letter which has given us greater joy! Hoping our friends in Brooklyn will pardon us for publishing it (if such was not desired), we assure them of our hearty sympathy in their good work for Israel, and of our confidence that that work will be rewarded by Ephraim's love and gratitude. The time is not far distant, we may be sure, when Ephraim and Manasseh—Manasseh and Ephraim—will be one, and in their glorious union become dictators to the whole earth!

The Lost Israel Identification Society of Brooklyn.

My dear Sir,—At a meeting of the Lost Israel Identification Society of Brooklyn, December 18th, 1878, it was unanimously resolved that the Secretary be instructed to write to and thank "Philo-Israel" for the interest he has taken in the Society and for the pamphlets and leaflets so kindly given to it by himself, and through him to thank the Bristol and Clifton Society for their donation of papers, &c. The Secretary cannot let this opportunity pass without saying that the Society feels that thanks very inadequately express our feelings.

We send you our love; and prayers are offered up to Israel's God for you.

We also think that our appreciation of your love and kindness can be best shown by our works. We are working heart and hand to spread this belief, and it is spreading very rapidly here. Sister Societies are springing up, and we receive letters from all parts of the country asking for information.

I believe we shall be able to show a good record at the end of the year

Manasseh will not be far behind his brother Ephraim if he can help it.

May the Lord bless thee, and keep thee! The Lord lift up His countenance upon thee and give thee peace!

William Furguson, Secretary.

615, Warren-street, Brooklyn, New York, America,
Jan. 9, 1879.

Digitized by Google

Correspondence.

PRAYER FOR ISRAEL'S BLESSING WANTED.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—I believe we Israelites are agreed that a great outpouring of the Holy Spirit is promised for the latter days—our days—but are we sufficiently earnest in seeking that greatest of all "good gifts?" And is not this one of the things for which the Lord will be "inquired of by the House of Israel to do it for them?

Our opponents charge us with losing sight of spiritual blessings, in our desire for national greatness. We do not think the charge could be substantiated. We feel sure, on the contrary, that the study of this subject (the Identity) has been a great spiritual benefit to all who have pursued it earnestly and prayerfully. It has shed a light on God's Word, and wonderfully elucidated the workings of Divine providence and "justified the ways of God to men."

Though there are wheels within wheels, and the rings of them are "so high that they are dreadful," yet are they "full of eyes," and, however complicated their movements, they go "straight forward," for the Spirit of life is in them.

Would it not be pleasing to the God of Israel if His people were to set apart a special time (say an early week in the new year) for earnest and united prayer for the outpouring of the Holy Spirit? Mr. Gott reminds us that in the past times, "Israel's richest blessings were the outcome of the prayer of one man;" and he encourages us to expect in "the Elijah which is to come," "one powerful in prayer;" but we are sure that Mr. Gott believes also in the efficacy of united prayer, and would be the last to say, Let us wait till Elijah shall appear among us. When the Holy Spirit was first given, it was in answer to united prayer. The disciples were all with one accord in one place.

Our national sins are many and great. Not yet do the "drunkards of Ephraim" see the impending "woe." Not yet have our merchants and tradesmen entirely put away the "balances of deceit," and made their merchandise "holiness to the Lord." Violence, oppression, rebellion against lawful authority, and other sins perhaps even more heinous, are still found among us, and above all, our young people—our "respectable young men"—who cannot be charged with open sin, do not "frame their doings to turn unto their God."

Hence our national calamities, which have been so numerous and so terrible, as to obtain for the year now closed the title of "The Year of Disasters."

Shall we not take with us words and say, "Take away all iniquity and receive us graciously?" More favoured than our fathers of old, we can plead our Saviour's promise, "Whatsoever ye shall ask in My name, that will I do, that the Father may be glorified in the Son." Let us, therefore, come boldly to the throne of grace, and plead earnestly until we obtain the promised gift.

"Father, if justly still we claim
To us and ours the promise made,
To us be graciously the same,
And crown with living fire our head.

Our claim admit, and from above
Of holiness the Spirit shower,
Of wise discernment, humble love,
And zeal, and unity, and power.

The Spirit of faith, in this, thy day,
To break the power of cancell'd sin,
Tread down its strength, o'erturn its sway,
And still the conquest more than win.

Grant this, O holy God, and true!
The ancient seers Thou didst inspire;
To us perform the promise due,
Descend, and crown us now with fire."

December, 1878. M. B.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—I have watched the career of your valuable paper from its outset, and though occasionally articles appear in it of which I cannot approve, and possibly you may not, as I note you advertise you do "not hold yourself responsible," &c., for all that correspondents advance, you are doing through your pages an incalculable amount of good in Israel's cause.

I am aware I also am one of those whose opinions you do not coincide with, but that is not the point. Both you and I are working, I believe, to the same end—viz., the opening the eyes of the blind that they may know who and what they are. My views are excluded from the pages of the BANNER, yet there are things I should like some of your contributors or yourself would notice.

Much has been said respecting "the Gates," but in everything I have yet read the standpoint is taken from Great Britan, as if these "Gates" were our Gates in England. Change that centre to Jerusalem, the Holy Land, and see how much more nearly they affect Israel restored, than Israel under sentence, as we are while still in our prison house. Are not Gibraltar, Suez, Cyprus, Dardanelles, Afghanistan Passes, "Gates," and many others much more the Gates of Israel's own inheritance when restored, than Israel's abode whither they have been sent?

Another matter I wish particularly to call attention to—i.e., Rev. xi., especially ver. 10, about "sending gifts one to another." Was there ever a time in previous history where such an interchange of gifts occurred as now? What do the millions and millions of the exquisitely beautiful Christmas cards mean? to say nothing of the abundant interchange of more substantial gifts. In Mr. Hine's phraseology, are not these also "Identifications," allusively contrasted with those mentioned in Rev. xi. 10?

I am glad to see L. P.'s article (p. 16), "Two Prophecies—The Shepherds;" I have, in "Israel's Jubilee," drawn attention to the same (p. 17). Your own letter, "The Identity at Madras," will prove a great power with many in that distant land, and will reach a judicial and influential body, who probably will be induced to notice a subject so ably advanced by one of themselves.

Yours truly, REUBEN.

Roppynden, Burwash, Essex,
3rd January, 1879.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—I send you the following extract without comment:—

"We were treated with great hospitality and attention, under the impression that we should have influence with the Pacha, and also from an extravagant idea which had spread through almost every part of the country* where we had been, that we were come to take possession of it, and thus accomplish their tradition, that the Turks shall be subdued by a European Power, and the whole country become Christian. This expectation is entertained by Turks as well as Christians. The Turks believe it to be so decreed and are content. The Christians hope for it, and anxiously look to every event they can construe into a sign of the coming change. Our arrival in this country had excited these long-cherished desires, and to it we were indebted, I believe, for some of the overstrained attention we received."

H. H. GILLETT.

Compton Rectory, Guildford.

[From "Narrative of the Euphrates Expedition, carried on by order of the British Government during the years 1835-6-7." By Gen. F. Rawdon Chesney, Colonel Commanding 14th Brigade Royal Artillery. Longmans, Green & Co., 1868. The extract occurs at page 425 of the above work, being part of the account of Major-General Estconet's second journey (1835). He served in the Euphrates Expedition, and was afterwards Adjutant-General of H.M.'s Forces in the Crimea.]

ISRAEL KEEPTH SABBATH.—Sabbath Atmosphere.—To those who toil all the week long the Lord's-day seems fairer and fresher than any other day. A person at Newcastle who had a house to let took an applicant for it to the top of his house, spoke of the distant prospect, and added, "We can see Durham Cathedral on a Sunday." "On a Sunday," said the listener, "and pray why not on a Monday?" "Why," said he, "because on the week-days great furnaces and pits are pouring forth their smoke, and we cannot see so far; indeed we can scarcely see at all; but when the fires are out, our view is wide." Is not this a true symbol of our Sabbath days when we are in the spirit? The smoke of the world no more beclouds the heavens, and we see almost up to the golden gates.—MR. SPURGEON.—Leisure Hour, January, 1879.

JEWISH POPULATION OF EUROPE.—According to Hubner's "Statistical Tables of All the Countries of the Earth," there are in the German Empire, 512,000 Jews; in Austria-Hungary, 1,375,000; in France, 118,000; in Great Britain and Ireland, 46,000; in Italy, 36,000; in European Russia, 2,700,000; in Belgium, 2,000; in the Netherlands, 64,000; and in Sweden and Norway, 2,000. Total, 4,855,000.—The Jewish World, Dec. 20th, 1878.

* Near River Tigris, &c.

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements

(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O.O payable at Ludgate-circus.

BOOKS, ETC.

BANNER OF ISRAEL, VOLUME II. Now ready. May be had, by ordering, of all booksellers, price 7s, beautifully bound in blue cloth, gilt.

Now ready price 7s., post free 6d. extra.

THE SECOND VOLUME OF THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

This volume contains a large number of articles on our Identity with Lost Israel, by the best and most learned writers on the subject. Also many interesting papers on the Great Pyramid by Professor Piazzi Smyth, F.R.S.E., Astronomer-Royal for Scotland, Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A., Major H. A. Tracey, R.A., Charles Horner, Esq., and others. London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

"BANNER OF ISRAEL" FREE CIRCULATION FUND.

Persons interested in "Our Identity," who have the opportunity of judiciously circulating copies of the BANNER OF ISRAEL, and are willing to assist in the work, can be supplied with any number of copies they can use, gratuitously. They will be sent to such persons free of all cost. Application is to be made to the Secretary of the "Banner of Israel Free Circulation Fund," Mr. R. Fergusson Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C., to whom all remittances for this object should also be made, but NOT to the Editor of the BANNER—Philo-Israel.

MODERN HIEROGLYPHICS OF THE APOCALYPSE AND GREAT PYRAMID, illustrated by ten plates, with explanations, by A WATCHER. To which is prefixed an introduction, showing how recent events in the Eastern Question and the Church have worked towards a fulfilment of the theory suggested in the book.—October, 1878.

Price 15s. A few copies coloured by the Author £1 1s.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Now ready, price 6d., post free 7d

THE ANSWER to the EASTERN QUESTION as shewn in the IDENTITY of the BRITISH with ISRAEL. By the Author of the "New Old Story."

"The author has well managed her topic; her style of writing is clear and vigorous, and well calculated to do good service to the cause."—PIAZZI SMYTH.

London: S. W. Partridge & Co., 9, Paternoster-row.

"He that hath ears to hear, let him hear."

HEALTH, DIET, AND DEAFNESS.

NOISES IN THE EARS.

THE REV. E. J. SILVERTON will send his Health Advocate, giving important advice and particulars on the above subjects, free to any person, showing how Deafness may be at once relieved and ultimately cured. Many most interesting cases are set forth. Thousands of people are hearing Sermons and Lectures to-day who would have remained deaf had they not applied to Mr. Silverton. When a remedy is so successful, ought not every deaf person in the kingdom to try it, if it be in his or her power? It is a pleasing thing to a minister to make the deaf to hear, not only in a religious sense, but literally. Mr. Silverton may truly say to the deaf, "He that hath ears to hear, let him hear."

The Health Advocate also gives an account of several invaluable remedies which are producing the greatest possible good. The Medical Energiser is giving health to vast numbers. The Nutrient Food of Food is a splendid assistant to all kinds of medicine. The Great Lung Remedy is a marvellous Medicine for the cure of consumption, asthma, and all kinds of coughs. These, and other proved and tested Medicines which go under the title of "The Rev. E. J. Silverton's Ready Relief Remedies," may be ordered through any Chemist. London Wholesale Houses:—Sanger, Oxford-street; Barclay, Farringdon-street; Edwards, Queen Victoria-street; Thompson, New North-road; or of Rev. E. J. Silverton, Albert House, Park-street, Nottingham.

SERMONS WHICH HAVE REACHED THE MASSES, by REV. E. J. SILVERTON. Over 400 Pages Crown 8vo. Price 6s. Order of any Bookseller, or ALABASTER & PASSMORE, 4, Paternoster-buildings, London. The Sermons are quaint and humorous, containing many droll sayings and unusual illustrations. Must read them!! No one slept while they were delivered!! An Engraving of the Preacher's Place of Worship, Exeter Hall, Nottingham, will be found within. These Sermons are unlike all others. Sent post free from the Author.

MISCELLANEOUS.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

DOUBLE NUMBERS DURING 1879.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT.

Owing to the increasing interest taken in the Identity movement, it is found necessary to occasionally enlarge our space to make room for the important papers constantly reaching the Editor. It has, therefore, been determined to issue Twelve Double Numbers during 1879, for which Twopence will be charged. The first of these series of Double Numbers will be issued the first week in January, and one on each succeeding first week in the month during the year.

	£	s.	d.
Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free	0	7	6
Two copies (including Double Numbers) ...	0	12	4
Three " " " " ...	0	18	8
Four " " " " ...	1	6	2
Six " " " " ...	1	17	4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-Grand, London, to W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

N.B.—Send an extra stamp if an acknowledgment is required.

THE TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL FOUND AND IDENTIFIED IN THE BRITISH NATION.

EDWARD HINE

(The well-known writer on this subject) will deliver his

POPULAR LECTURE

In the following halls:—

1879.
February 6th, Clapham Drill Hall.
" 11th, Westbourne Hall, near Royal Oak.
" 19th, MEMORIAL HALL, Farringdon-street.
" 25th, Myddelton Hall, Islington.
March 5th, New Cross Hall, Lewisham High-road.
" 11th, Hawkston Hall (Newman Hall's Church), Westminster Bridge-road.
" 25th, St. JAMES'S HALL, Regent-street.

Doors open at 7; Chair taken at 7.30.

Subscriptions will be thankfully received by MR. LOVELAND, Shoreham, Sevenoaks; MR. STEPHENSON, 123, Newgate-street, London. Funds are needed to defray the heavy expenses, as admission to all the Lectures is free.

IDENTITY OF THE BRITISH RACE WITH THE LOST TRIBES OF ISRAEL.

A LECTURE

On the above Subject will be given on THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 13, at the

TOWN HALL, BROMLEY, KENT,

BY DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, ESQ.

ADMISSION FREE.

ORDNANCE SURVEY OF THE HOLY LAND. The undersigned having been appointed Agents at Bristol for the sale of the MAPS, PLANS, PHOTOGRAPHS, and other PUBLICATIONS connected with the SURVEY OF JERUSALEM, SINAI, &c., beg to notify that the same can be obtained of them.

The Maps and other Publications connected with the Ordnance Survey of the United Kingdom can also be obtained of them. Prices and Catalogues supplied on application. P. MUNRO & SON, Surveyors, &c., Bank chambers, Corn-street, Bristol.

Now Ready. Price 6d.

COMMON SENSE AND THE CRISIS. The Way Out of all the National Difficulties, and the Right Course to Pursue under the very Trying Circumstances, clearly shown through the Identification of the Lost Tribes of the House of Israel with the British Nation. By C. W. E.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.
Norwich: Philip Soman, Argus Office.

CARD OF MEMBERSHIP.

THE SHEFFIELD ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION are in a position to supply their Card to all associations requiring the same. Prices with Key—in quantities 4d. each; single cards, 7½d., post free.

These Cards are copyright; and will be supplied with the description or title of any association.

The design of the card is pronounced by Mr. Hine to be "almost perfect."

By PHILO-ISRAEL—"A model of excellence."—See BANNER OF ISRAEL, Nov. 27, 1878, p. 398.

Apply to Geo. W. Staniland, Castle-street, Sheffield.

THE EASTERN QUESTION.

Now ready, price One penny, post free 1½d. One dozen copies, post free 1s. 100 copies 6s., post free 7s.

THE IDENTITY OF THE BRITISH NATION WITH THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. THE CLUE TO THE EASTERN QUESTION. By C. W. E.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row

BOOKS, ETC.

THE GREAT PYRAMID. NOW READY, PHILO-ISRAEL'S NEW WORK, 56 pages, Illustrated with Diagrams, price 4d, post free 5d.

AN ELEMENTARY DIGEST or SKETCH OF THE CHIEF FACTS and TEACHINGS of the GREAT PYRAMID of EGYPT; adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific. By PHILO-ISRAEL; together with Original Papers by the following leading Pyramidists, republished mostly from the BANNER OF ISRAEL (by kind permission of the proprietor)—viz., Professor Piazzi Smyth, the Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A., Charles Horner, Esq., and Major H. A. Tracey, R.A. Being a pamphlet by five authors (a Pyramid number).

Opinion of Mr. Charles Horner, regarding the above work, after perusal of the same:—"I think your design of the Pyramid pamphlet excellent. I know well that it is a book urgently needed, since, under God's blessing, it will, I feel convinced, convert many to Christ. Your part (Philo-Israel's) I deem unexceptionable. It is both terse and understandable to the many, which is the great object you have had in view. I should like to see thousands circulated amongst our intelligent artisans, and hope God will raise some to do this."—C. HORNER. Dec. 12, 1878.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

Second edition, sixth thousand.

Fancy paper covers, 6d.; cloth, gilt lettered, flush, 1s.

THE HISTORY OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL: How They Were Lost, and How They Were Found. Told for the children. By PHILO-ISRAEL. Adapted for use by parents, Sunday School and other teachers, with questions on the chapters added.

For favourable notices of this work by Professor Piazzi Smyth, John T. Gott, Esq., and others, see handbills. W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

Temporary Office:—
20, WARWICK LANE, LONDON, E.C.

President:—

Vice-Presidents:—
CAPTAIN E. WEBSTER, Stirling.
REV. A. J. J. CACHEMAILLE, Vicar of S. Mary's, Oldham.

Chairman of Committee:—
E. W. BIRD, Esq. (Philo-Israel), Bristol.

Committee:—
COLONEL BENTINCK, Grosvenor-square, W.
CAPTAIN BAYLEY, R.N., Streatham, S.W.
JOHN S. ANDERSON, Esq., Upper Norwood, S.E.
ROBERT BANKS, Esq., London, E.C.
JOHN T. FLETCHER, Esq., Upper Norwood, S.E.
REV. F. R. A. GLOVER, M.A., St. James, W.
H. L. GUERRIER, Esq., Tooting, S.W.
W. H. GUEST, Esq., London, E.C.
CHARLES HORNER, Esq., Mortlake, S.W.
DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, Esq., St. John's-wood, N.W.
H. H. PAIN, Esq., Bromley, Kent, S.E.
DR. H. HODSON RUGG, St. John's-wood, N.W.
W. H. PETERS, Esq., J.P., Exeter.
BENTINCK CANNEY, Esq., Lewisham, S.E.
FREDERIC CLIFT, Esq., F.A., Upper Norwood, S.E.
J. L. WOOD, Esq., New Southgate, N.
(With power to add to their number.)

Treasurer:—
DR. H. HODSON RUGG, 1, Grove-road, St. John's-wood, N.W.

Hon. Secretary:—
REV. JAMES BILLINGTON.

This Association has been established to bind in closer union the many friends who rejoice in having a portion with the long Lost Tribes of the House of Israel; also to extend the knowledge of the truth that the Anglo-Saxon races are now identified with those Lost Tribes of the House of Israel. These objects, it is thought, will be best accomplished by means of Drawing Room and Public Meetings, by Sermons, Lectures, Bible Readings, by the diffusion of Literature upon the subject, and by such other ways and means as the Committee may from time to time determine.

The Honorary Secretary or the Treasurer will be glad to receive the names of friends wishing to join the Association or to subscribe to its Funds.

Members' Annual Subscriptions to be not less than 2s. 6d. per annum.

Donations and Subscriptions are urgently needed to carry on the work.

Contributions are much needed for the Free Circulation Fund of the Association, which disseminates works by VARIOUS WRITERS on the Identity Question.

Friends who will arrange for, or assist in, the arrangements for Lectures in their respective localities, under the auspices of the Association, are requested to address the Hon. Secretary at the office of the Association, from whom all particulars, and every assistance for the effective carrying out of the same, may be obtained.

J. BILLINGTON, Hon. Sec.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed:—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, 5, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 5, 1879.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. III. No. 111. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 12, 1879. [ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
Words of Warning and Words of Comfort	69
The Worm—England	70
The New Covenant Outpouring of the Holy Spirit	71
"Christianity and a Personal Devil." By Professor Piazzi Smyth	72
The Vicar of St. Barnabas, Hull, on "England's Divine Mission." Part II.	74
The Times Gives Blind Witness That We Are Israel	75
The Anglo-Saxon, Being Israel, is "Above Only, Not Beneath; the Head, and Not the Tail, in Manufacture"	75
"Ho to the Land Shadowing with Wings"	75
Correspondence	75

WORDS OF WARNING AND WORDS OF COMFORT.

DOES THE IDENTITY DO SPIRITUAL GOOD AT ALL, TO ANYONE?

THIS is a question which our opponents would answer with acclamation in the negative. The Rev. J. B. Clifford, for instance, deems ours "a wicked heresy, in which its advocates glory more than they do in Christ." To such, of course, Christ can only be "a savour of death unto death." Philalethes and those who think with him declare our views of Christian truth, as embodied in Israelite teaching, "Unscriptural, uncharitable, narrow, exclusive, unspiritual, fostering spiritual pride, and national pride," consequently "dangerous" and "pernicious," contrary to "the spirit of Christianity," and akin to "that sin of national pride which caused the Jews to fall" (pages 111, et seq. Israel of God). These are heavy charges, and, if true, they utterly condemn Anglo-Israelite teachings, root and branch, and warn us that, as Christian men and women, we must see where we are going, and while there is time retrace our steps.

In one respect we have always hitherto, and continue now to sound our "words of warning." Those who trust to their Israelite origin and to their national and personal Identity with Lost Israel for salvation, instead of unto Christ the Lord, will perish as they deserve to do! For "there is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved," than the name of Jesus Christ; "neither is there salvation in any other" (Acts iv. 12). This being conceded, and we think fully admitted by all except our opponents, whom it seems nothing will satisfy, we ask the plain question we have placed at the head of this article, "Does the Identity do spiritual good at all, to any one?" To ourselves this question will be superfluous! We all acknowledge that it does. That it has benefitted us in numberless ways; that our grasp on the faithfulness and truth of our God and Saviour Jesus Christ is something that it was not before; that we better realise His love, His tender pity, and His affection for the people of His choice; and that we see, as we never saw or REALISED it before, that He is a covenant-keeping God—who "is not a man that He should lie, or the son of man that He should repent" (Num. xxiii. 19). This we all are forward to avow. But can we point to spiritual good done to any man or woman, who, having accepted the Identity, and believed it with all his or her heart, is by God's grace and mercy distinctly blessed thereby in spiritual matters, so that he or she is happier, holier, more contented—more faithful—i.e., "believing"—a greater lover of his Saviour, his Bible, and his fellow-man than before? We know we can point to decisive proofs of such benefits accruing directly from the acceptance of the Identity, and indirectly from all that such acceptance brings with it in its train. Let us take a case with which our readers are familiar, and in which the deponent has come forward with manly boldness to tell us in print what God has done for his soul by means of his belief in the Identity. Let the reader turn to J. B. R.'s testimony to be found at page 387 of BANNER No. 99, vol. ii. The writer there states that "six or seven years ago he was much inclined to be sceptical as to the truth of the Bible and its revelation, but since he had fallen in with the views which are called those of the Identity, he had seen enough to convince him thoroughly." Now, has the Identity done J. B. R. spiritual good or spiritual harm? Here was a man in high official position, of intellectual ability, placed in a responsible social station, yet on the verge of falling into the depths of sceptical delusion! The Identity met him at this critical juncture, and he who once was in danger of following Tom Paine, and from his good position in society might have led scores of younger men after him into the horrors of a hateful infidelity, dishonouring alike to God and perilous to the souls of men, was rescued, under God, by the doctrines of the Identity, and now rejoices in God's Word, and defends its truths most ably!

Writing to us lately, J. B. R. said, very justly, "If Philalethes could succeed in convincing me, I am afraid he would himself become my spiritual enemy." "We do not attack his faith in a vital point, why should he try to deprive me of those arguments which are those precisely that tell most forcibly on my mind as to the truth of revealed Scripture?" Here, then, is a grave point for our opponents. The Identity to some minds is a truth which, meeting one who is almost an infidel, arrests him and brings him to Christ. Can such teaching be "heresy? unspiritual? unscriptural? contrary to the spirit of Christ?" and the rest of it, as alleged by our detractors? We trow not! and our readers will join us in our verdict we know!

Digitized by Google

Now let us take another case—a typical one also. Our witness here is a man of humble degree, apparently an honest British workman in a Welsh town; and what he told us in writing on the 1st January, 1879, in greeting us as editor of the BANNER, on New Year's Day, was this: "Having been a constant reader of your paper for about seven months, I must thank you for the great relief of mind that I have experienced through its pages. I had loved my Bible for years; but the prophecies were always a source of great trouble to me, and, contrary to my own wishes, they have driven me to the border of scepticism again and again. But, my dear sir, these doubts are now far removed. I see a beauty, a fulness, a sublimity, in the Scriptures that I had never dreamt of, emblazoned on every page, by self-evident inspiration, worthy the God of Abraham! I can now literally feast on passages that have given me so much trouble! Let one example suffice, as I have no desire to waste your time. The following was such a passage, once dark, now my delight: 'And He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest; and the Lord God shall give unto Him the throne of His father David. And He shall reign over the House of Jacob for ever. And of His kingdom there shall be no end' (Luke i. 32). I heartily wish you, sir, God speed! What you are doing is for His glory!"

So far our humble friend! Will Mr. Clifford, will "Philalethes," will Mr. Cornall, and the other opponents of our Identity, put their finger on the dark spot in the above, and tell us where the danger, the heresy, and the sinful abomination of Israelite teaching is to be found in it? Here is a son of toil, well read in God's Word, intelligent, conscientious too, but almost forced "again and again" into the arms of Satan's emissaries by horrid doubts of the inspiration of God's Word in consequence of the teachings regarding prophecy which the modern pulpit and the commentators gave him! "Again and again" he was almost lost! But the Identity met him, taught him the better way, and what is the result? "He literally feasts on passages of God's Word which once gave him such trouble," but now are the joy of his soul! We think our opponents would not, if Christian men, be glad to undo this man's new belief, and send him back, by their dry orthodoxy, to the cold shades of a deadly scepticism, ready to destroy the soul and body in hell!

We appeal now to a third case. This third, like the other two, was a stranger to us. All three write to us, as editor of this journal, and permit us, we believe, a licence to publish their cases, but in one case alone desire the name, and rank, and station in life may be withheld. Our third witness is one who is proud to call himself "An Israelitish Seaman"—a British sailor. He is a man who has been in Australia, China, and elsewhere. He has, since 1873, when he accepted the Identity, made it his business, he says, to spread these truths, and has done it with success.

"Before I accepted the Identity, dear sir," he writes, "I thought the Old Testament a very dry book, and the doctrine of election a very meagre affair. But, in the light of the Identity, all things are changed! Christian seamen have now a double work before them, for they must preach Christ, and Him crucified, and also spread the Identity of Lost Israel. I gained many converts in Sydney, Australia, simply by holding to what I believed to be true. In China, while in hospital, six months ago, when I was very ill, I was surrounded by Roman Catholics. I was the humble means there of spreading the Identity, and of proving to some Roman Catholics by it that their Church was false, and their Pope not a descendant of St. Peter, as they say he is. I won, at the same time, a Dean of the Church of England, and I thought at the time it was a fine prize to win for the Identity by such a man as me! I thank God for it. I know I gained others in the navy. These are the men who can spread it if they only have the will."

We think our seafaring Israelite, as he describes himself, is as fine a specimen of a true Christian worker for the Lord as any godly man can want! Would our opponents spoil such by taking from him the motive-force which impels him now to work for his dear Redeemer, "to preach Christ," as he says, "and Him crucified, and also to spread the Identity of the British with Lost Israel?" Would they willingly convert the Old Testament, which our Lord told us "to search," into a "dry book" again, by taking from him the glorious light that makes its pages radiant and its verses vocal with the praises of Jehovah? If so, we would not! and we pity the men whose tendencies are to fly in the face of our great Redeemer's will; who would quench the glorious light which He has kindled, and which, therefore, brings with it comfort and power, and love of souls, and burning zeal, and delight, such as was never felt before, in the Word of the living God!

We think we have proved our case! We can, therefore, confidently answer the question we asked at first by asserting That the Identity does real spiritual good, pleasing to the Lord, and blessed to the souls of men, in a multitude of cases; and that, consequently, this thing is not a 'heresy,' or from beneath, but is a truth revealed straight from heaven, and is of God!

NOTE.—Since the above was written, we have received a letter, dated January 14, 1879, from an honest Durham miner at a colliery there, who states that the BANNER has, under God, "been the means of bringing one there from the brink of infidelity to be a believer in the Word of God;" adding, "there are upwards of twenty in the place who are believers in our Identity through reading the pages of the BANNER." These instances support our arguments, and lead us to ascribe all the glory and all the praise to the Redeemer of His people Israel.

THE WORM—ENGLAND.

IN our article, published at p. 280, vol. ii., No. 87 of the BANNER, we drew attention to the fact that the Lord's Firstborn was the Lord Jesus Christ, as well as "Ephraim," the Ten-Tribed House of Israel—the British. We remarked then, that the Lord and His people being one, they were known to the Father by the same honourable designation—"His Firstborn;" and we found that while Psalm lxxxix. 27, and Luke ii. 7, direct attention to the fact that the Redeemer of Israel is the antitypical "First-born of God," Exod iv. 22, and Jer. xxxi. 9, clearly point out that God Himself declared that the Twelve Tribes first, and after the separation, the Ten-Tribed kingdom of Israel, or "Ephraim," were constituted His "Firstborn," as the type of the greater antitype to come. We found also that "what is alleged of the Head or King," or "Firstborn" of God in heaven, is now most rightly alleged (within proper limits) of the first-born upon the earth—the people united to Him by the bonds of tender love; for that people (Israel) is His honoured married wife—His spouse—His body, His own Church! (Jer. iii. 14; Hosea ii. 16; Isa. liv. 5; Eph. i. 22, 23; Rev. xxi. 9). These considerations, we said, put such honour on our (British) race that it surpasses man's imagination even to conceive the future glories and happiness in store for us as a nation. But (we were careful to add) these blessings are wholly undeserved by this sin-stained, headstrong, and stubborn people; that had it not been for the blood-shedding of our blessed Redeemer, Head, King, Husband, and Divine Friend, not one of them had been ours! But these parallelisms, and this equality in honour and blessedness we have described as existing between the Lord Jesus and His people, Ten-Tribed Israel—His future bride—are instances of

Digitized by Google

His electing love which God's Word proves to us are His people's glorious privilege and honour even now. There being community in these, we ask whether, in reproach and disrespect as well, there is anything to connect the Lord Jesus—Jacob (His people), and the British nation? Wonderful to say, there is!

At page 26 of vol. ii., No. 55, of the BANNER, Captain W. E. Webster drew our attention to the fact that the Russian Press in general, and the Sovremenoi Isvesti in particular, applied to the British nation the disrespectful, derogatory epithet, "the worm England!" "The possession of Mesopotamia" by Russia, it said, "will kill the worm England which destroys the communications Russia could possess in the East." The word "worm" here is clearly a contemptuous expression, used, and intended to be used, in derogation of Great Britain's title to respect as the antagonist of the Muscovite in the East. It is a term of peculiar character, very expressive of loathing disgust: and it invests the object described as "the worm" with the crawling, weak, disgusting attributes of a creature below contempt, unworthy of respect, and fit only to be crushed to death by the foot of the passer-by. Such, then, was the dishonour done to the British nation by the Press of Russia, only a short year ago; and such the term used by the latter to describe this royal race.

Now, being Israel, and answering to Israel in dishonour, as well as in honour, do we find this term of "the worm" applied in God's Word as a description of His people, Ten-Tribed Israel? We certainly do! If we turn to Isa. xli. 14, we find the Lord addressing the chosen "island" race—the Eastern Kings—"the chief of nations," and therefore not Judah, but Ten-Tribed Israel—thus: "Fear not, THOU WORM Jacob; and ye (few) men of Israel, I will help thee, saith the Lord, and thy Redeemer, the Holy One of Israel!" Here "help" was promised to Israel in the face of her enemies—enemies whom the Lord is evidently quoting as describing her by the opprobrious epithet, "Thou worm Jacob!" and a handful of men compared with Russian multitudes. How wonderful and how strange that the very "enemies" designated—the Russian nation—should, in their hate, have called the British Israelites in this our day by the precise name God Almighty put into their mouths as a designation of Israel five and twenty centuries ago—"thou worm!" Verily, the Bible is the Word of God, and its inspiration is Divine! But we must advance one step further. The British have been called "the worm" by their Russian enemies to-day; and "the worm" was the name God said Jacob's enemies should apply to him in the prophecy of Isaiah.

Is there evidence that our Lord Jesus, the Head of His Church, the Bridegroom, the King, the heavenly First-born of His bride, His people, and of His earthly first-born, Ephraim, condescended to share their degradation, and allowed Himself also to be called—nay, called Himself—"a worm?" There is! Let the reader turn to the Messianic twenty-second Psalm, and there, at the 6th verse, he will find it thus written by God's Spirit of the Son of Man—Israel's Redeemer: "But I am A WORM, and no man—a reproach of men—and despised of the people." He compared His state, at the scene of Calvary, with the condition of His people. "Our fathers," He said, "trusted in Thee—they trusted, and Thou didst deliver them—they trusted in Thee and were not confounded. But I—I am a worm, and no man!" so abject was His state!—so "despised and rejected of men" was His hapless condition, for us! Here, then, is the parallel perfect! The great antitype is a "Worm" and no "Man," for us! He tells us afterwards Jacob is "thou worm," quoting the language of their enemies; and we, in our own day, find the Russian enemies of the British openly declaring us to be that very people "Jacob" one with the glorious Redeemer, our Jehovah-Jesus, by speaking of us and taunting us with being "the worm England!" Reader, let these things sink into your heart! and while you rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory, when you think of your origin and of your union with the Lord from heaven, remember if you are His by faith, that all this blessing, and all this greatness, all this happiness and honour, is yours only at the price of the priceless precious blood of the God-Man, who agonised that you might live, and died that He might redeem His people Israel! Therefore, praise YE the Lord!

THE NEW COVENANT OUTPOURING OF THE HOLY SPIRIT.

OUR readers know that the expectation of the speedy outpouring of God's Holy Spirit on the whole of this great Empire, as the chosen race or the House of Israel of the Ten Tribes, is our earnest expectation and our hope. Beside, and in comparison with this, there seems to us, personally, very little benefit to be derived from all that is involved in "Our Identity." Doubtless it is most important nationally that we should be the chief of nations, the nation and the company of nations, the owners of the colonial and the heathen Empires both, the grandest, the wealthiest, and the most magnificent Empire the world has ever seen! What then? Granted all this, if the masses are ungodly, unholy, debased, selfish, wretched, sensual, drunken, what avail were all the splendid privileges, honours, glories, and prosperity attached to our position as the Israel of God? None whatever! nay, worse than none! for thus, our guilt, as the most ungrateful and most sinful nation under the sun, would be beyond comparison greater than that of the Gentile races who have not our privileges, Gospel light, or hopes; and therefore will not be held so heavily responsible as we shall be at the Great Assize with our greater responsibilities.

Our anxious expectation then is for any signs that may tell us that the blessing we have looked for so long, and nationally have so persistently supplicated at the throne of grace, is at hand. For in truth this great nation, instigated thereto by its State Church, has for the last 326 years been putting up to the Father in heaven through the merits of the Divine Redeemer of Israel, this most glorious petition, "Lord, have mercy upon US, and write all these Thy laws (the ten commandments) in our hearts, we beseech Thee!" This unique petition, offered only by the British nation and nationally adopted by no other people upon earth, is in effect a prayer for the new covenant and outpouring of the Holy Spirit on the masses, which was promised by the Lord to the one nation of His choice, even to Israel of the Ten Tribes (Jer. xxxi. 36; Heb. viii. 10; Joel ii. 28, &c.).

All other promises of our God to Israel have been fulfilled at least in embryo. Not one of these have been given in answer to prayer. The nation which has inherited them (our own) has stupidly received them, not knowing them to be their entailed estate because of their origin and pedigree. They are their own because they are Israel, and the recipients know that they have somehow jumped into the perquisites, privileges, honours, and blessings due and promised only to Israel by God Himself, and yet, so besotted and so crass is the blindness of the race that even their divines, who know the facts, deny the birthright in virtue of which alone, this people have received these Israelitish blessings! But the best of all the boons promised to Israel, the splendid spiritual gifts which are involved in the new covenant benedictions, which are God's benisons to His chosen sons, these the British nation and the Church of England have been supplicating the Father to give them on their knees for nigh 330 years! And will He who never puts such a prayer as this into His children's hearts to pray without intending to grant it to the full, forget to answer it? Nay! He calls this indeed "His good gift," and tells us to notice that "if we, being evil, know how to give good gifts to our children, how much more shall He, the Father in heaven, give the Holy Spirit to them that ask Him" (Luke xi. 13). The nation's prayer, that the laws of God may be written in the national heart, is the direct request for the covenanted blessing promised in Heb. viii. 10, when the whole race—from the least of them to the greatest of them—shall know Him—shall be baptized with the Holy Spirit's grace, and their sins and iniquities being remembered no more, the Lord will be their God, and they His people.

Digitized by Google

The anxious question, therefore, we ask ourselves, is this: Is that gracious God who has given us all the temporal blessings appertaining to Israel, deaf to Israel's earnest national prayer which has gone up for 300 years? or are there signs around us that even in this spiritual blessing we have much already that we desired, and that the showers of blessing we expect are about to be poured upon us without stint or measure? We think the signals are already abundant of the outpouring's imminence, and it has been our inveterate blindness, and deafness too, which has failed to let us see and hear the signs. Let us quote some of the tokens which are noticed by our public journals on this subject. Here is an extract from The Christian of the 2nd January, 1879, which is apposite regarding the Manassite nation America:—

Revivals were needed, and revivals were secured, in the days of Joshua, and Samuel, and Asa, and Hezekiah, and Josiah, and John the Baptist, and John Wyclif, and Martin Luther, and John Knox, and John Wesley, and so all the way down to the present time. Who shall say that a revival, or a reviving, is not needed now; or that, being needed, it may not be prayed for expectantly and in faith?

At the present time there are signs of a strong desire for a general revival throughout the country; and the existence of such a desire is an earnest of its satisfying; for when God's children unitedly turn to Him in longing for spiritual blessings, He is prompt to give according to their need and their faith. In the city of Philadelphia, the Presbyterian ministers and elders have united in a day of prayer and special services, in recognition of the need and hope of a revival; and a series of similar special services is now in progress. The Synod of Philadelphia has issued an address to its Churches on this subject. Four other synods of that denomination in Pennsylvania and Ohio have been in earnest and prayerful conference on the same important theme. At the West similar conferences have been held. And, as we mentioned last week, the ministers of seventeen Christian denominations in Baltimore have, in conjunction with Mr. Moody, issued an appeal to the ministers and Churches of the United States to devote the entire month of January to prayer and work for the reviving of Christian faith, and Christian consecration and zeal, throughout the land; and this appeal is already responded to with heartiness by the ministers and Churches in New York City and elsewhere.

It behoves those who would have a share in the blessings of a God-given reviving to recognise these signs of the times, and to join in the prayers and the labours of Christ's people for the promotion of His cause. What is your part in this movement? Are you looking or praying for a reviving?

But is praying Ephraim left without signs of God's favour in this matter of revival in religion after so long a period of faithful intercession? Not so! Let the supplement of The Christian of the 16th January, 1879, be again our witness. There we have the report, signed by well-known names such as S. A. Blackwood, Samuel Morley, Jas. E. Matheson, Robert Paton, and others, testifying that a wondrous work is in progress in our midst, a work of conversion, a baptism of the masses with God's Holy Spirit, which is the commencement of the outpouring, and the answer to the long-continued prayer. The circular inter alia states concerning "Mr. Booth's Christian Mission," and "The Salvation Army":—

In more than fifty additional towns, within twelve months, there have been raised up from amongst the utterly irreligious classes who attend no place of worship, bands of men and women who are now (Christmas, 1878), amidst the wintry cold, to be seen and heard preaching Jesus in the streets to their own former associates, and getting great congregations to hear them.

The congregations gathered have mainly consisted of the roughest classes of the community. For instance, in Lancashire hundreds of THE VERY MEN who early in the year were rioting, burning mills, and wrecking houses, meet night after night to hear the Gospel of the grace of God.

Of the amount of work done during the twelve months the figures above show that 792 religious services are held weekly indoors and 645 out of doors, making a gross total per week of 1,437 outside the halls and in, reaching with the glad tidings of mercy 200,000 out of doors and 60,000 indoors, or an aggregate of more than A QUARTER OF A MILLION EVERY WEEK. To those who believe the Gospel spoken in the power of the Holy Ghost to be the Divinely approved means for the spiritual regeneration of the perishing people, this is a fact worthy of earnest consideration, and calling for daily thanksgiving.

Well may The Christian say in its issue of the 16th January, 1879, regarding these and similar signs for good—

If we think of England as the land of Bibles, of missions, of tracts, of agencies of every kind for evangelising the world, and for ameliorating the sorrows of the oppressed in all nations, it is the holy nation of His peculiar people that constitutes the royal priesthood through whom all these streams of mercy flow. It is at the mercy-seat God meets with His priests, and only there. If, therefore, we come not to the throne of grace to obtain mercy and find grace to help in time of need, the stream of blessing will run dry as the brooks in summer.

Blessed be God, this is a land of prayer! God has here many thousands of His praying people! In spite of our friend Mr. Samuel Sampson's forebodings and fears, we know the Lord's ears are open to these our supplications, and we are certain that the showers of mercy which we see already beginning to fall will come down soon in such astounding storms and hurricanes of spiritual blessing that we shall look back, when we are "the righteous nation," at our present utter want of faith, and our unjust sinful doubts of our God's most certain promises, with shame, contrition, and sorrow, grieving that we have pained Him by our faithless, groundless fears.

"CHRISTIANITY AND A PERSONAL DEVIL."*

A REVIEW BY PIAZZI SMYTH,

Astronomer-Royal for Scotland.

THOSE are two always encouraging words for a reader, desirous of finding something worth reading, to meet with on the title-page of any new book, "Second Edition."

And they carry all the more force with them if the subject itself is not one of frequent discussion, nor an established favourite, nor set forth with an attractive title—while, certainly, never was any superscription chosen more abrupt, unexpected—at first sight almost hideous—than the one above quoted; and never did an author of standing, merit, ability, with much and varied experience too, both in writing and publishing, announce himself in less of the authority or prestige he might have, long before this time, fairly assumed, than has the author of the said work writing himself down thereupon baldly as "Patrick Scott."

Yet the book has begun to win its upward way with the public, in spite of the ungainliness of its simple front; and we shall have no great difficulty in showing, not only that the public at large has been on this occasion perfectly right, but that the readers of the BANNER may with good cause claim to be more interested still.

Let the title, if you will, be softened off into "Christianity and its Views as to the Impersonation of Evil;" or explained as "The Teachings of the Bible Touching the Real Existence of

* "Chrisitianity and a Personal Devil." An essay by Patrick Scott. Second Edition, enlarged and re-arranged. London, Pickering & Co., 198, Piccadilly, W. 1878.

Digitized by Google

Satan as a Personal and Active Being," and those who are much experienced in religious discussions, will immediately see that a mighty truth—extending from the very beginning to the actual ending of the Scripture record, though much passed over in the middle portions—is here involved. A most special, and, indeed, actually vital question does this subject raise, whereon believers should be very strong, and able to hold their own with logical power against all the rationalistic and pantheistic theorisers of the present day; for a personal Satan is a corollary to, almost an accompaniment of, the very idea of a personal God. Deny the one, and the arguments for the other dwindle immediately. But prove the one, even the bad one, and you are not only arming and forewarning your fellow-men against his manifold devices, but strengthening them in the faith touching the true God and His Christ according to every word of Scripture.

No true Christian, therefore, will object to the inner argument of this little book with the rather repulsive, though expressive, outside title. While those who, like believers in the Identity, are advanced in prophetical study, must also necessarily be most assured both of the grandly absolute personality of God, and the close approach of an epoch devoted to His remanifestation, in a manner that will astonish all, and convict many, nations of the world—all such Identity readers, we contend, cannot but be further extra-well instructed by Scripture, that before such a truly devoutly-to-be-desired consummation can take place, there must be a revelation first, even in our midst, of him who is called by apostolic authority, "that Wicked." In fact, Satan himself must appear in the flesh, acting as Christ's untiring enemy; but, before men, the appearance will be with such plausibility and lying wonders as almost to deceive the very elect.

So exceedingly close, in all good truth and according to the prophecies of old, do we at this moment seem to be to the appearance of the final anti-Christ—the last, the greatest, and the worst of all the anti-Christs of history; and so exceeding all merely human ideas are the dangerous temptation, and deception powers which the personal Satan is still armed with—that even the best among us cannot be too much on their guard in every way and at every point. Now, precisely, here is the merit, the scope, and are the limits of Mr. Scott's little book—viz., it deals well with, but with little more than, the logical theory of the above tremendous subject. But that theory is a necessary beginning and essential foundation for all who would thoroughly arm themselves on the right side; and who, in preparation for the spiritual, as well as real, campaignings yet to come, desire to be able to apply such theory to the dangerous and three times difficult practice they may speedily be called to enter into.

But in such case, who is this who is to be our and their teacher; by name, simply Patrick Scott? Reading men in literary circles have, of course, heard that mere name again and again; but may yet be uncertain as to whom, among several similarly named, to identify it with on the present occasion; for the little book tells them nothing whatever further of its author's present, or his past. Be it our own agreeable duty, therefore, to explain that this Patrick Scott is a British poet of mature age and no mean order—the author of no less than eight distinct and separate poetical works,* published at intervals in London, between 1847 and 1878. Ranging from shortest odes to the grandest historic themes, and occasionally rising to religious topics as well, all these productions are marked above everything else by as perfect harmony of numbers as extensive knowledge of the resources of the English tongue in its most classical guise. And if the peculiar vigour with which poets can express themselves in prose is almost proverbially famous, as witness Byron's prose notes to his own poems, let us also direct attention, not merely to the unvarying faultless diction, but the frequently concentrated energy of a phrase, or terseness of a short sentence expressing as much as half a page of ordinary writing, in this prose work of Patrick Scott's, his latest, and sternest, born after so long a series of poetical productions.

So far the recommendation, if accepted at all, is general to the whole community. But now, to the, as yet, narrower circle of Philo-Israel's personal admirers, let us further state, how like that faultless editor, Patrick Scott is a retired Indian (Bombay) judge—a man accustomed for half his life to weigh evidence, and, therefore, whose opinion is well worth having in any knotty case. While next, to all students of the Great Pyramid subject, let us explain that Patrick Scott was the most intimate friend of the late John Taylor, to whom it was given to be the first among mortal men to perceive that there was something of a work inspired by the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and not sprung from Egyptian idolatry, in that unique monument standing so long unappreciated in the land of the Nile.

To John Taylor's ever-memorable work, "The Great Pyramid: Why Was It Built, and Who Built It?" Patrick Scott contributed a fine poem in 1859; and he subsequently became the friendly medium of introducing us to that grand old man. Only just in time, too; for after a few weeks' active correspondence, during which he insisted on committing the Great Pyramid subject to our unworthy hands, John Taylor was called by his Master in heaven; thus closing an eminently kindly and useful life throughout, of more than eighty-five years.

But Patrick Scott still lives with mental vigour unabated: in further proof whereof we find towards the end of his present prose work, the following poem characteristic of it and him :—

"Soldier of Christ! Why idle stand?
Go, seek thy armour now;
I see no spear-shaft in thy hand,
No helmet on thy brow.
'I wear a helmet hidden from view,
Who wears will surely win;
I grasp a spear which pierces through
The harden'd breast of sin.'

Soldier! Thou art not on thy guard,
What are thy weapons like?
Thou hast no brazen shield to ward,
No temper'd sword to strike.
'The weapons lent me by my Lord,
Heav'n forged, are those I wield;
His Word in me becomes a sword,
My trust in Him a shield.'

Thou hast no breast-plate for the war,
Thy feet are naked too;
I scent the battle from afar,
Fight? Fly? What wilt thou do?
'Truth is my breast-plate, firmly set,
God's truth and human right;
My feet are shod with peace, and yet
I will abide the fight.'

Where is the flag thou bear'st? Reveal
His title whose thou art—
The foe is on thee! dost thou feel
No searchings of thy heart?
'I see my banner in the sky,
Where Christ my Leader lives;
My courage comes from Him, and I
Will use the gift He gives.'

Soldier! Where is thy foeman? Where
The object of thy fear?
I look around to earth and air,
And see no danger near.
'God's foe is mine. This e'er hath been
The danger I still find—
Lest, while my enemy's unseen,
I also should be blind.'

The soldier, weary with the day
That doth no rest allow,
Drinks of the brooklet by the way
Rejoicing; What dost thou?

* 1. "Lælio, a Vision of Reality;" Chapman & Hall.—2. "Love in the Moon;" Walton & Maberly.—3. "Athelstan;" Moxon.—4. "Footpaths between Two Worlds. An Account of the Principle Religions Prevalent in These Days;" Bell & Daldy.—5. "Thomas-à-Becket, and Other Poems;" Longman & Co.—6. "A Poet's Children;" Longman & Co.—7. "The Dream and the Deed;" King & Co.—8. "Legends of a State Prison;" Bentley.

Digitized by Google

'There is a strength that lifts me up,
It floweth from above;
And when my spirit droops, the cup
Of which I drink is Love.'

With arms like thine no victory
Is won by man o'er men;
But when thou shalt have laid them by,
What wilt thou hope for then?
'To hear the King cry, Blest is he
On whom My face doth shine;
As thou hast borne the war for Me,
Now shall My peace be thine.'"

THE VICAR OF ST. BARNABAS, HULL, ON "ENGLAND'S DIVINE MISSION."

(Continued from page 63.)

PART II.

"1. ENGLAND'S POSITION IN THE DIVINE PLAN.—To determine England's position in the Divine economy we must carefully consult the chart of prophecy—for in that alone is the charter of her privileges to be found. But in so doing it behoves us to determine what prophecy is, and in what light Biblical teaching is to be regarded.

"Biblical teaching must ever be regarded as the record of a system of religious truth which is of a strictly historical character, embodied in the life of a historical people, and connected and bound up with the events of their career and the institutes of their polity, in a manner witnessed in the case of no other nation.

"That system of religious truth is of a strictly progressive character, unfolded by the guidance of God from one degree of fulness to another, and developed in the course of the Divine dealings with the people in successive ages, from the blade to the ear, until it reaches at length the full corn in the ear, in that Gospel of the New Testament to which the Old ever looked, and for which it was sustained as an ever-maturing preparation.

"Hence we see that the Old and New Testaments are joined together of God—they front each other, they look into each other's face—the Old Testament glancing forward to the New, and the New glancing backward to the Old—the former moving steadily onwards to the latter as its goal, and the latter confirming the Divine right of the former. We thus behold a oneness of purpose, an inseparable aim at one grand object, the restoration of fallen humanity, though conveyed by various channels, yet emanating from the one source of all truth.

"The most instructive channel by which Biblical instruction is conveyed to us is prophecy, and if we ask what is prophecy, the answer is at once obvious—viz., prophecy is history anticipated.

"The history of the world at large has been anticipated in the mind of God, as the prophet Isaiah says, 'Declaring the end from the beginning, and from ancient times the things that are not yet done' (Isaiah xlvi. 10); and, as St. James says, 'Known unto God are all His works, from the beginning of the world' (Acts xv. 18). Thus we find that nations whose existence had not commenced are already exhibited in God's plans either in the grandeur of their successes and victories, or in the miseries of their ruin and desolation. Thus we behold, in the Book of Deuteronomy, Moses describing as it were the weal and woe of two nations, the Jewish and the Roman, whose political existence had not commenced.

"Who can read the twenty-eighth chapter of Deuteronomy without a solemn feeling of awe when finding depicted in it the most minute details of the destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans, and the unparalleled sufferings of the conquered Jewish nation?

"Who can read the glowing descriptions of Babylon's greatness and splendour as described by the eloquent strains of the Evangelical prophet, and identify it with the fulfilment of the graphic predictions of its becoming a howling wilderness, a resort of the beasts of prey?"

"The most wonderful feature in prophecy is not the mere simple prediction or fulfilment of a certain circumstance or fact; but that it involves in the evolution the concurrence of a great number of contingent events in respect of time and place, which no human foresight could possibly anticipate.

"Take, for instance, the prophecy of Micah: 'But thou, Bethlehem Ephratah, though thou be little among the thousands of Judah, yet out of thee shall He come forth unto Me that is to be ruler in Israel, whose goings forth have been from of old, from everlasting' (Micah v. 2). Here we have the declaration that the Messiah shall be a Prince from the royal House of David, and shall be born in the ancient city of David.

"Now we should naturally have looked for her who was to give birth to this illustrious personage to be residing in or near the Royal City; but, no! The Virgin takes up her abode at Nazareth, about 100 miles away. An unforeseen sudden and remarkable occurrence, the taxing by Augustus Cæsar, renders the presence of Mary and Joseph incumbent at Bethlehem, and thus, in spite of all human calculation or forethought, the Saviour is born at Bethlehem, and the Word of God, which cannot be broken, is marvellously fulfilled.

"Had any one reviewed all the attenuating circumstances of the case, they would have doubted the issue.

"And, brethren, in our text (Isa. xviii. 7) we have a similar case in reference to the position which England is to occupy in the Divine economy. Isaiah, in the Old Testament text under our consideration, describes England as it now is in her elevated privileges, character, and prestige—as a land that spreads its wings of protection on many—that sends ambassadors by sea, letters by swift messengers, &c. According to the most learned authorities and translators (see Note A, end of Part V.) the description is a most graphic one of the great British Empire, with her numerous dependencies—yea, more, all that the ingenuity of the opponents of that view could invent, has hitherto failed to disprove the accuracy of that description.

"In reviewing the prophetic declaration in detail, we have pointed out to us the following particulars, to distinguish the Nation or Power that the Divine mission is given to—viz.:—

"1. It is to be one outside of the limits of those nations which have up to the prophet's time menaced Israel—a land which should essay to protect the long-oppressed Jew and that land beyond those rivers which characterised the Great Powers which hitherto were best known to, and had most interfered with, Israel.

"2. It is to be a great maritime Power, noted specially for having to send many ambassadors by sea, having many dependencies.

"3. It is to be a Power noted for its peculiar character of protecting the oppressed; and—

"4. A Power noted for giving heed to the claims of the Divine Word as plainly stated in the text: 'They shall bring a present (or as the original has it, mincha [See Note B—'Mincha, the present,' Part V.]—i.e., a thank-offering) to the Lord of hosts.'

"Add to this what is declared in Isaiah lx. 9, 'Surely the Isles shall wait for Me, and the ships of Tarshish first, to bring thy sons from far, their silver and their gold with them, unto the name of the Lord thy God, and to the Holy One of Israel, because He hath glorified thee.'

"That by Tarshish England is meant, there are numerous Scriptural and also historical proofs (See Note C in Part V.).

"Thus, my Christian friends, the Word of God in the Old Testament clearly points out that England is chosen as a

Digitized by Google

'vessel of honour,' and is to occupy a prominent position in that great event of the restoration of His ancient people Israel."

(To be continued.)

THE "TIMES" GIVES BLIND WITNESS THAT WE ARE ISRAEL.

In its leader of December 14, 1878, the Times had the following statement with reference to the intention of our Government (since abandoned) to propose a grant-in-aid of the sufferers in the Rhodope district.

A resolution to that effect will be moved next week, and the Government will, no doubt, explain why they have taken this step. Some reasons, however, lie on the surface, and they are quite sufficient to cast doubt on the propriety of the opposition of which Mr. Anderson gave notice. Of course, it would seem fairer and more reasonable that the money should come out of the pockets of those who are responsible for the sufferings than out of those of the English taxpayer, to whom every one with a tale of woe comes. But the humanity of the English people is too large and their sympathies are too quick to dwell exclusively upon such a view. This country has to pay the penalties incident to wealth. No disaster can occur in any clime or to any race without an appeal being made to the resources and generosity of England. The frequency of entreaties for assistance is, to be sure, a little monotonous. It would be agreeable to Englishmen if foreign countries were to help the sufferers within their borders a little oftener than they do. But misery and poverty combined are eloquent pleaders. There come occasions on which it is morally certain that, unless England is ready to give aid to the distressed, and aid by the hands of the State, they will receive none. That fact generally suffices to silence objections, and it will probably do so with reference to the proposed relief to the sufferers of the Rhodope districts.

What says the Times?

1. No clime, no race can witness or be subject to disaster but the appeal for help comes to "Old England" the wealthy, and to her only of all the nations. Why so? Clearly because, being Israel, "she is to blossom and bud, and to fill the face of the world with fruit" (Isa. xxvii. 7); "she is to be the one nation bringing forth the fruits of the kingdom of God" (Matt. xxi. 43); the seed, "whom all that see them shall acknowledge them that they are the race the Lord hath blessed" (Isa. lxi. 9).

2. That foreign nations seldom or never succour the sufferers even within their own borders. But this, being Gentiles and not Israel, they cannot do, and will not do, because the function of international beneficence is confined by God's Word to one race, and that race (being Israel) is now represented—the Times witnessing the fact—by the British alone.

Hence the British, as the Times shows, desire to assist the Rhodope mountaineers, as they have helped the Chinese, the Hindoos, the Persians, the Brazilians, the French, the Turks, the Moroccoes, and many another race suffering under the afflictions flesh is heir to. Their God-appointed helper is Israel, alias the British; for they actually perform the work allotted to Israel.

THE ANGLO-SAXON, BEING ISRAEL, IS "ABOVE ONLY, NOT BENEATH; THE HEAD, AND NOT THE TAIL," IN MANUFACTURE.

We find the following in the Times and Mirror of Bristol of Dec. 4, 1878, and give our readers the benefit of the facts as in duty bound. They can deduce the moral for themselves. It cannot fail to be satisfactory as further blind evidence of facts that this nation is Israel.

"While we are waiting for the publication of the reports made by the Bristol artisans who were sent to the Paris Exhibition, those written by the Liverpool artisans have been issued. Ten men went, each representing a distinct trade; and they all agree, with one accord, that we have nothing to fear, and very little to learn, from the French, or any other Continental rivals in the trades they represented, such as boot and shoe making, cabinet making, gilding, &c. The only really formidable competitor we have is the United States. Mr. Garvey, for example, writes of the boot and shoe department that the French are superior in the knowledge of art and general artistic ability, and in mere matters of display—that is to say, in trimming and embroidery; but that the English workman excels in durability and usefulness, and in adapting the boot to the ease and comfort of the wearer. He adds, that, if the French artistic trimming and embroidery were stripped off, their work would be acknowledged to be second-rate. Outside France there is nothing upon the Continent worthy of attention. Russian execution is barbarous; one would think Belgium on the borders of Russia, not of France; and, as regards Italy, the wonder is that such ill-made and ill-shaped boots come from a country able to design the feet of its statues. The only work deserving of comparison with the English is the American. Then as to cabinet making: the reporter affirms that this country is able to maintain its position at present both as regards taste and utility. The French goods 'looked' equal to the generality of the English exhibits, but he thinks they are badly finished inside. Austria, Italy, and Belgium are also said to have shown some very good specimens, but the United States had nothing deserving of attention. In his visits to the workshops the reporter was given every facility to inspect and scrutinise, and he is compelled to bear testimony to the goodness of the workmanship The tools and machinery employed he found antiquated and insufficient; but the skill of the artisans made up for the deficiency. Upon the whole, the inference to be drawn from these reports is that our workmanship in the trades inquired into is equal to the best foreign, and that our skilled workpeople are much better paid; but that in France, at least, there is greater temperance, more thrift, more unwearied assiduity, and higher artistic ability."

"HO TO THE LAND SHADOWING WITH WINGS" (Isa. xviii. 1).

Our Coasting Trade.

The amount of shipping employed in the coasting trade of the United Kingdom continues to increase. In the year 1878 the entries inwards (with cargoes) reached 25,125,444 tons, and the clearances 22,520,845 tons, the increases over the preceding year being 339,628 tons and 292,290 tons respectively. Of these totals there were employed in the intercourse between Great Britain and Ireland 9,832,833 tons entered inwards and 8,997,004 tons cleared, showing increases of 195,351 tons and 130,046 tons respectively. Scarcely any of all this shipping is of foreign nationality.

Let the reader carefully note these stupendous figures, and ask himself if any of the Gentile neighbours of Israel come up to this in the number of "the shadows of the sails of ships"—i.e., wings. We can answer for it—None!

Correspondence.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

Dear Sir,—The following has struck me as a very positive proof of our Identity. An acquaintance of mine, a very able Pyramidist, advised me to send it to "Philo-Israel." I have not met with the statement from any of our friends, so if you think it noticeable you will perhaps find a corner in the Banner for insertion.

Yours very truly,
Samuel Sampson.

Highland Villa, Elm Grove, Brighton,
20th January, 1879.

Another Identity.—No other people on earth besides ourselves can interpret the Great Pyramid, seeing they have no measurement commensurate with the British inch.

Notice.—The date of Mr. Douglas A. Onslow's lecture at the Town-hall, Bromley, has been altered from Thursday, 13th inst., to Wednesday, 12th inst.

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements
(PREPAID).

	£ s. d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0 1 0
Each additional line	0 0 4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0 2 0
Each additional line	0 0 6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0 2 6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O O payable at Ludgate-circus.

BOOKS, ETC.

BANNER OF ISRAEL, VOLUME II. Now ready. May be had, by ordering, of all booksellers, price 7s., beautifully bound in blue cloth, gilt.

Now ready price 7s., post free 6d. extra.

THE SECOND VOLUME OF THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

This volume contains a large number of articles on our Identity with Lost Israel, by the best and most learned writers on the subject. Also many interesting papers on the Great Pyramid by Professor Piazzi Smyth, F.R.S.E., Astronomer-Royal for Scotland, Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A., Major H. A. Tracey, R.A., Charles Horner, Esq., and others.
London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row

"BANNER OF ISRAEL" FREE CIRCULATION FUND.

Persons interested in "Our Identity," who have the opportunity of judiciously circulating copies of the BANNER OF ISRAEL, and are willing to assist in the work, can be supplied with any number of copies they can use, gratuitously. They will be sent to such persons free of all cost. Application is to be made to the Secretary of the "Banner of Israel Free Circulation Fund," Mr. R. Fergusson Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C., to whom all remittances for this object should also be made, but NOT to the Editor of the BANNER—Philo-Israel.

	£ s. d.
A Friend at Thornford, Devon... ...	0 5 0

MODERN HIEROGLYPHICS OF THE APOCALYPSE AND GREAT PYRAMID, illustrated by ten plates, with explanations, by A WATCHER. To which is prefixed an introduction, showing how recent events in the Eastern Question and the Church have worked towards a fulfilment of the theory suggested in the book.—October, 1878.
Price 15s. A few copies coloured by the Author £1 1s.
London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Now ready, price 6d., post free 7d

THE ANSWER to the EASTERN QUESTION as shown in the IDENTITY of the BRITISH with ISRAEL. By the Author of the "New Old Story."
"The author has well managed her topic; her style of writing is clear and vigorous, and well calculated to do good service to the cause."—PIAZZI SMYTH.
London: S. W. Partridge & Co., 9, Paternoster-row.

"He that hath ears to hear, let him hear."
HEALTH, DIET, AND DEAFNESS.
NOISES IN THE EARS.

THE REV. E. J. SILVERTON will send his Health Advocate, giving important advice and particulars on the above subjects, free to any person, showing how Deafness may be at once relieved and ultimately cured. Many most interesting cases are set forth. Thousands of people are hearing Sermons and Lectures today who would have remained deaf had they not applied to Mr. Silverton. When a remedy is so successful, ought not every deaf person in the kingdom to try it, if it be in his or her power? It is a pleasing thing to a minister to make the deaf to hear, not only in a religious sense, but literally. Mr. Silverton may truly say to the deaf, "He that hath ears to hear, let him hear."
The Health Advocate also gives an account of several invaluable remedies which are producing the greatest possible good. The Medical Energiser is giving health to vast numbers. The Nutrient Food of Food is a splendid assistant to all kinds of medicine. The Great Lung Remedy is a marvellous Medicine for the cure of consumption, asthma, and all kinds of coughs. These, and other proved and tested Medicines which go under the title of "The Rev. E. J. Silverton's Ready Relief Remedies," may be ordered through any Chemist. London Wholesale Houses:—Sanger, Oxford-street; Barclay, Farringdon-street; Edwards, Queen Victoria-street; Thompson, New North-road; or of Rev. E. J. Silverton, Albert House, Park-street, Nottingham.

SERMONS WHICH HAVE REACHED THE MASSES, by REV. E. J. SILVERTON. Over 400 Pages Crown 8vo. Price 6s. Order of any Bookseller, or ALABASTER & PASSMORE, 4, Paternoster-buildings, London. The Sermons are quaint and humorous, containing many droll sayings and unusual illustrations. Must read them!! No one slept while they were delivered!! An Engraving of the Preacher's Place of Worship, Exeter Hall, Nottingham, will be found within. These Sermons are unlike all others. Sent post free from the Author.

MISCELLANEOUS.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

DOUBLE NUMBERS DURING 1879.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT.

Owing to the increasing interest taken in the Identity movement, it is found necessary to occasionally enlarge our space to make room for the important papers constantly reaching the Editor. It has, therefore, been determined to issue Twelve Double Numbers during 1879, for which Twopence will be charged. The first of these series of Double Numbers will be issued the first week in January, and one on each succeeding first week in the month during the year.

	£ s. d.
Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free	0 7 6
Two copies (including Double Numbers) ...	0 12 4
Three " " " " ...	0 18 8
Four " " " " ...	1 6 2
Six " " " " ...	1 17 4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-Grand, London, to W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.
N.B.—Send an extra stamp if an acknowledgment is required.

THE TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL FOUND AND IDENTIFIED IN THE BRITISH NATION.

EDWARD HINE

(The well-known writer on this subject) will deliver his

POPULAR LECTURE

In the following halls:—

1879.
February 11th, Westbourne Hall, near Royal Oak.
" 19th, MEMORIAL HALL, Farringdon-street.
" 25th, Myddelton Hall, Islington.
March 5th, New Cross Hall, Lewisham High-road.
" 11th, Hawkston Hall (Newman Hall's Church), Westminster Bridge-road.
" 25th, St. JAMES'S HALL, Regent-street.

Doors open at 7; Chair taken at 7.30.

Subscriptions will be thankfully received by MR. LOVELAND, Shoreham, Sevenoaks; MR. STEPHENSON, 123, Newgate-street, London. Funds are needed to defray the heavy expenses, as admission to all the Lectures is free.

IDENTITY OF THE BRITISH RACE WITH THE LOST TRIBES OF ISRAEL.

A LECTURE

On the above Subject will be given on WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 12, at the

TOWN HALL, BROMLEY, KENT,

BY DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, ESQ.

ADMISSION FREE.

P.S.—Free Tickets for reserved seats to be had of E. Strong & Sons, Market-square.

WALTER KEAST'S Old Established BOOT AND SHOE WAREHOUSE, 102, KENNINGTON PARK ROAD, LONDON.

Gentlemen's Boots & Shoes for	Ladies' Boots and Shoes for
Winter and Summer, House and Garden, Walking, Riding, Rowing, Fishing, Shooting, &c.	Winter and Summer, Walking and Riding, House, Garden, or Dancing, &c., &c.

Children's Boots for School, Walking, Garden, or Sea-side. Slippers in great variety at moderate prices.
Schools and Public Institutions supplied at wholesale prices.
Note the address—WALTER KEAST, 102, Kennington-park-road, S.E.

CARD OF MEMBERSHIP.

THE SHEFFIELD ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION are in a position to supply their Card to all associations requiring the same. Prices with Key—in quantities, 4d. each; single cards, 7½d., post free.
These Cards are copyright; and will be supplied with the description or title of any association.
The design of the card is pronounced by Mr. Hine to be "almost perfect."
By PHILO-ISRAEL.—"A model of excellence."—See BANNER OF ISRAEL, Nov. 27, 1878, p. 398.
Apply to Geo. W. Staniland, Castle-street, Sheffield.

ARE THE ENGLISH PEOPLE THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL? By PHILO-ISRAEL Price 4d.
London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

SOME of PHILO-ISRAEL'S papers, as they have appeared in THE BANNER, will be separately published from time to time in the form of Letters, for distribution.
No. 1. "The Identity of the British with Lost Israel."
No. 2. "The Glory of God."
Others will follow. Price One and Sixpence per 100; less quantities in proportion; postage extra.
Apply to R. Banks, 5 Racquet-court, Fleet-street. Also all Booksellers and Publishers.

BOOKS, ETC.

THE GREAT PYRAMID: NOW READY, PHILO-ISRAEL'S NEW WORK, 56 pages, Illustrated with Diagrams, price 4d., post free 5d.

AN ELEMENTARY DIGEST or SKETCH OF THE CHIEF FACTS and TEACHINGS of the GREAT PYRAMID of EGYPT; adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific. By PHILO-ISRAEL; together with Original Papers by the following leading Pyramidists, republished mostly from the BANNER OF ISRAEL (by kind permission of the proprietor)—viz., Professor Piazzi Smyth, the Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A., Charles Horner, Esq., and Major H. A. Tracey, R.A. Being a pamphlet by five authors (a Pyramid number).
Opinion of Mr. Charles Horner, regarding the above work, after perusal of the same:—"I think your design of the Pyramid pamphlet excellent. I know well that it is a book urgently needed, since, under God's blessing, it will, I feel convinced, convert many to Christ. Your part Philo-Israel's) I deem unexceptionable. It is both terse and understandable to the many, which is the great object you have had in view. I should like to see thousands circulated amongst our intelligent artisans, and hope God will raise some to do this."—C. HORNER, Dec. 12, 1878.
London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

Second edition, sixth thousand.
Fancy paper covers, 6d.; cloth, gilt lettered, flush, 1s.

THE HISTORY OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL: How They Were Lost, and How They Were Found. Told for the children. By PHILO-ISRAEL. Adapted for use by parents, Sunday School and other teachers, with questions on the chapters added.
For favourable notices of this work by Professor Piazzi Smyth, John T. Gott, Esq., and others, see handbills. W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.
"The History of the House of Israel—told for the children—is a very valuable addition to our children's libraries. It gives a clear account of all the chief points of interest, in language suited to the comprehension of children, and ought to be in the hands of every mother and teacher who believes in our Identity with Israel. It supplies a want I have long felt as the mother of a large family."

Price 6d.; or with illustrative map, 8d.

BRITAIN (OR ISRAEL) THE FIFTH AND LAST, AND THE UNCONQUERABLE EMPIRE. By JOHN GILDER SHAW.
Price 6d.; post free, 3½d.

CHRONOLOGICAL CHART OF BRITISH VICTORIES OVER THE CONTINENTAL POWERS, ranging from the battle of Cressy (1346), to our last victory, the taking of Sebastopol, Sept. 8, 1855. Arranged by J. G. SHAW, of Leeds.
"We trust Mr. Shaw's labour in preparing this paper may be appreciated by the public and be largely sold."—Banner of Israel.
Price 1d.; post free, 1½d.

GOD'S LOVE FOR ISRAEL, A GUARANTEE THAT HE WILL FULFIL HIS PROMISES TO ISRAEL.
Shortly will be published, price 6d.

RESULTS OF ISRAEL'S OBEDIENCE. A review of the successive steps which have led to the present condition of Britain (or Israel), the Fifth and Last Empire.
London: Published by Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; and may be had of the Author, 20 Park-row, Leeds, and of all booksellers.

ORDNANCE SURVEY OF THE HOLY LAND. The undersigned having been appointed Agents at Bristol for the sale of the MAPS, PLANS, PHOTOGRAPHS, and other PUBLICATIONS connected with the SURVEY OF JERUSALEM, SINAI, &c., beg to notify that the same can be obtained of them.
The Maps and other Publications connected with the Ordnance Survey of the United Kingdom can also be obtained of them. Prices and Catalogues supplied on application. P. MUNRO & SON, Surveyors, &c., Bank chambers, Corn-street, Bristol.

Now Ready. Price 6d.

COMMON SENSE AND THE CRISIS. The Way Out of all the National Difficulties, and the Right Course to Pursue under the very Trying Circumstances, clearly shown through the Identification of the Lost Tribes of the House of Israel with the British Nation. By C. W. E.
London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.
Norwich: Philip Soman, Argus Office.

Now ready, price One penny, post free 1½d. One dozen copies, post free 1s. 100 copies 6s., post free 7s.

THE IDENTITY OF THE BRITISH NATION WITH THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. THE CLUE TO THE EASTERN QUESTION. By C. W. E.
London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed:—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, 5, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW.
WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 12, 1879.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. III. No. 112. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 19, 1879. [ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

PAGE
Israel Confronts Cetywayo in Zulu Land 77
An Address to British Soldiers 78
The Parable of the Two Sons. By the Rev. George Albert Rogers, M.A. 79
The Vicar of St. Barnabas, Hull, on "England's Divine Mission." Part III. 80
Good News from the Antipodes. Part II. 81
How the Identity Grows 82
Review 82
Correspondence 83

ISRAEL CONFRONTS CETYWAYO IN ZULU LAND.

THE last great contest is at hand for the sovereignty of the South African States. Shall it be Israel, the destined heritor? or shall the enemies of God's people, represented there by Cetywayo, the king of the disciplined Zulu army of 50,000 men, prevail? What says God's Word? Let us hear, and let us note too, that as the promise was fulfilled in Afghanistan just now, and in India all through the past century, so it shall be again in Zulu Land. "The remnant of Jacob shall be in the midst of many people, as a LION among the beasts of the forests, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and NONE can deliver" (Micah v. 8).

We saw this result in Afghanistan, as all must perceive, literally fulfilled. No Afghan, no Russian force prevailed to stay the proud march of the lion and the young lion of God's chosen race; and again it shall be so in the case of the savage Zulu chief, who has dared to defy the armies of the living God. We see the discomfiture of this proud native already prepared by his own foolish cunning. Some months ago, he was really in sufficient force, while we were weak, to do us serious injury by invading Natal or by advancing upon the then helpless British subjects occupying the Transvaal. He did not venture, however, to come forward, but temporised and wasted precious time "in worrying the colonies with stealthy and indirect blows, instead of staking everything upon open war." What was the result? Let the Times newspaper, in its leader of January 27, 1879, tell us:—

While Cetywayo was thus accumulating a heavy score against him, the British Government was gradually extricating itself from the difficulties which at first impeded its action. The peace of the Cape Colony was restored; Lord Chelmsford was able to bring all the Imperial forces in South Africa to the Natal frontier, and to make preparation for either an offensive or a defensive campaign. The Home Government sent out large reinforcements, the militia were drilled in considerable numbers as Volunteers; native levies were enrolled; and the result is that Lord Chelmsford has now some 15,000 men under his command, of whom nearly half are Europeans. This force, however, must be diminished by about 1,200 men, represented by the 88th Foot and a battalion of the 24th, who are necessarily detained at Maritzburg and King William's Town, in order to overawe the large Zulu population in our own South African provinces.

At length all preparations have been completed, and Cetywayo will find that he has to deal with the great Power he has ignorantly provoked, and which is now ready to strike a heavy blow. But if the results of war can be attained without war, it is needless to say there is no disposition either at home or in the colonies to push Cetywayo to the extreme. We have still less, if that be possible, to gain in Zulu Land than we have in Afghanistan. Neither valuable territory nor military reputation is to be achieved in a conflict with a barbarous enemy. But it is manifest that we cannot allow an aggressive military State—such as the official report we publish elsewhere represents Zulu Land to be—to continue multiplying its soldiery on our borders.

And what is the expected result? Our readers will see that the Times, as well as ourselves (but on totally different grounds), looks for a final and decisive success, to be followed for the very reason, we think, this war is forced on us by our God—namely, by the confederation of the South African States, by which alone the territory will be constituted one of "Israel's company of nations." The editor concludes his remarks on the military position by saying:—

We trust that Lord Chelmsford will soon be in a position to insist on the disruption of the military system by which the Zulus have so long imposed themselves upon South Africa as a dominant race. When this has been accomplished, it will be necessary to return to the important subject of CONFEDERATION. Until the scattered colonies of South Africa are united under one government, the mother country will not be relieved from the onerous duty of levying war in defence of local interests and on behalf of prosperous communities which, if they would only combine for their common defence, would need no assistance from home.

This, then, is the great secret of all these complications. Let confederation take place, and the troubles of South Africa will cease, for then God's blessing will rest upon one of the great company of Israel's nations. Once that occurs, the native races, we are convinced, will—as they have done in New Zealand and in Canada—subside into the position of loyal, contented subjects of an irresistible Power, which it will be madness to oppose. One after another the difficulties of the British have ceased, and now we approach the last organised opposition that remains in South Africa. We believe we shall, in this as in other instances lately, see the manifest interposition of Almighty God in His people's favour, and the sudden discomfiture and disappearance of a danger which seems ominous, but which really, like that in Afghanistan, has only to be faced by the advancing LION, suddenly to disappear.

Digitized by Google

People ask us, Of what real benefit to us is our Israelite origin? We point to Ali Musjid and the Khyber Pass, and reply it is shown there. To the Peiwar Kotal and the Khost Valley, and say, Behold it there. To the advance in peace on Candahar, and the friendly, almost miraculous, adherence of the people to our cause, and we say, There the "benefit" appears again. So once more we ask our readers attentively to watch the approaching contest with the Zulu savage and his 50,000 disciplined warriors, and when the 15,000 British and native troops have "gone through, trodden down, torn in pieces, and found NONE to deliver from their hands," we shall urge them, and our opponents, too, to remember that this and all the other successes have come only in consequence of our Hebrew origin and of our Identity with God's people Israel. Knowing that, we call on all to join us in the "Hallelujah" shout, "Praise ye the Lord!" for in truth, being Israel, there is none other that fighteth for US but the Lord God of His people Israel, even the Great Jehovah.

February 4, 1879.

The above was in type before we knew of the terrible disaster the Lord has sent to His people. The massacre of 500 British troops and thirty officers, the loss of guns, colours, stores, of arms, and ammunition, renders this a terrible chastisement indeed. The Lord's controversy with Israel is very severe! He demands national sorrow for our past sins, and obedience to His commands in respect to "confederation" in South Africa. Both matters must now have our instant attention, and till then we expect the heavy hand of our chastening Father will be upon us, giving us "correction" on correction ("in measure"), and not letting us go "altogether unpunished" (Jer. xxx. 11). May God give our rulers wisdom, power, and grace to guide our suffering nation in this time of rebuke and sorrow.

AN ADDRESS TO BRITISH SOLDIERS.

SOLDIERS of Israel! Let me bring before you the important subject of our Israelitish origin in a few words. Having had brothers in the British Indian army, being the brother of that gallant officer who died in the field in Her Majesty's service, just after the massacre of the Jugduluk Pass in Afghanistan, in 1842, I have always myself felt the deepest interest in the welfare of British soldiers, and desire to express that interest now.

2. I have not space here to bring out the whole of the evidence of our Identity (not with the Jews, but) with the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel. Let me beg you to read those many works already published in which these facts are proved. I wish now to urge on your attention one or two of the chief arguments which, as soldiers serving in the four quarters of the globe in Her Majesty's world-wide dominions, you are sure to appreciate.

3. How is it, I ask, that in all the wars of the British people with the Gentile nations of the earth, our troops are invariably victorious? Why has God always turned the battle at last in our favour? It is because, BEING ISRAEL, God promised to us, and to us alone, that "those that war against thee shall be as nothing, and as a thing of nought" (Isa. xli. 12, 13, &c.). He has guaranteed to us alone that "no weapon that is formed against us shall prosper" (Isa. liv. 17); hence, being Israel, our nation has never been successfully invaded in our island home. We have never been defeated in fair battle by the Gentiles. Our race here in Great Britain possesses the best iron on the spot for the manufacture of swords, of rifles, of cannon, of ironclads, and of the best means of offence and defence of any people on the face of the whole earth. Again I ask,

4. Why do we hold India, Ceylon, the Cape, Australia, New Zealand, Tasmania, the Fijis, and all with such small forces? How is it that the dominions of our Queen (God bless her!) are in all zones? and the sound of her morning drum never ceases for a single instant throughout the world for the four and twenty hours of the day and night? It is because, BEING ISRAEL, God has "given" India to us as His free gift (Psa. ii. 8); has bestowed on us, as promised, "the desolate heritages" of the earth as our possessions (Isa. xlix. 8); has placed our foreign settlements as a girdle round the Gentiles (Deut. xxxii. 8, 9), and has so put the fear of us on the latter, that "they come out against us one way, but flee before us seven ways" (Deut. ii. 25, xxviii. 7); that they "hear the report of us, and trembling are in anguish because of us."

5. Why have we such possessions all through the earth as Gibraltar, Malta, Cyprus, the Suez Canal, Perim, Aden, Bombay, Colombo, Galle, Madras, Calcutta, Rangoon, Malacca, Penang, Singapore, Lebuan, Hong Kong, Sydney, Melbourne, New Zealand, the Cape of Good Hope, St. Helena, Jamaica, the Mauritius, and the Falklands? Why are these strategic positions in our grasp, and no other nations in the world have anything at all like them? Because, BEING ISRAEL, God promised to us "THE GATE of our enemies" (Gen. xxii. 17, xxiv. 60). We, therefore, hold these commanding positions, and are acquiring more and more such Gates daily. Thus the Khyber, the Kuram Valley, the Peiwar and the Bolan Passes, those four great Gates of Afghanistan, have lately fallen into our hands. They have only done so because of our Hebrew origin as the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel, and because of God's promise to us, as His chosen people, that we should have them.

6. Why, I ask again, are our own ports or home "Gates," the harbours and coast arsenals of dear old England, "always open, day and night continually," and no Spanish Armada, no Boulogne Flotilla, no foreign foe, no man-of-war, has ever dared to intercept Great Britain's sea-borne foreign trade for a single hour since Alfred the Great was the king of the British —a thousand years ago? I answer, because, being Israel, God promised to us, and to us alone of all the nations, that this great blessing should be ours (Isa. lx. 11).

7. Soldiers of Israel! Seeing these things are so, what manner of men ought you to be? The Great Jehovah is your God. He fights for you. His angel shields you and defends you in the day of battle. The Lord rides with your foremost squadrons in the furious charge. He heads your batteries. The banner of Israel is the one under which you go out to war; and the God of Israel, the living God, is the Captain under whom you fight! Your very uniform—the scarlet—is noted in the Word of God, and carefully described (Nahum ii. 3: "The valiant men are in scarlet"). What ought your character and your conduct, then, to be, as soldiers and servants of the great God of the House of Israel? For sobriety, for discipline, for valour, for steadiness, for courage, for loyalty to your Queen and colours, you ought to be, and I am proud to know you are, distinguished above all the soldiery of the Gentile nations of the earth.

8. Knowing this, I write to urge you to learn why you are so distinguished. It is because you are the soldiers of the armies of the living God; the Israelite defenders of your Queen and country; the God-protected, world-renowned British soldiers. Oh, learn from God's Word your nobility! See that you are "valiant men," indeed, of the Lost House of Israel; God's own soldiers and servants; military sons of the blessed Jesus, who, as distinguished members of the community, have to set an example to the rest of your fellow-subjects, as the worthy "sons of the living God" (Hosea i. 10).

9. One word more. Being satisfied yourselves of your Israelitish origin, and that verily you are Hebrew soldiers of the living God, I warn you, then, that it is your duty to propagate that glorious truth. The Lord demands of you soldiers that you should disseminate this good news. He gives you directions how to do it in Jer. xxxi. 7. Let every regiment, and every battery, and every squadron, and every messroom, have its Israelites, its praying, praising, Bible-loving, God-fearing, Christian Hebrew soldiers. Let the "good news" fly far and wide, that "Ephraim" who was dead and was buried 678 years before Christ (2 Kings xvii. 23; Isa. vii. 8), was, "after two Millenial days, revived" (A.D. 1322), and now, "in the third day of a thousand years (A.D. 1879), is rising up," and "WE shall live in HIS sight" again as Israel, His chosen nation (Hosea vi. 1, 2).

Digitized by Google

PHILO-ISRAEL.

Bristol, February, 1879.

THE PARABLE OF THE TWO SONS.

BY THE REV. GEORGE ALBERT ROGERS, M.A.,
Vicar of Christ Church, Dover.

"Son, go work to-day in my vineyard."—Matt. xxi. 28.

THE scope or full meaning of the parable of the two sons, in Matthew xxi., has been, I think, hidden under a veil from the Church until the present time. God has wise purposes in withholding the clear perception of prophecy until the time of its fulfilment. It was so in the days of our Lord. Who would have supposed that the apparently incidental intimation—"Out of Egypt have I called My Son"—could have had any reference to the exile of the promised Messiah, until the time of its fulfilment, after the Lord had appeared to Joseph in a dream, saying, "Arise, and take the young child and His mother, and flee into Egypt?"

Now, it is by the light which past and present events have thrown upon this remarkable parabolic prophecy, that we are enabled to unfold its true meaning.

We must not be surprised that to none of the old commentators was it given to unravel its meaning.

The "two sons" are usually regarded by them as representing either Jews or Gentiles—or two classes of the Jews—the one accepting Christ, and the other rejecting Him.

But, if I mistake not, the parable had a far deeper meaning than this, and has a very remarkable bearing upon ourselves in the present day.

Look at the words of our Lord.

"But what think ye?" We ought to "think," and well weigh the meaning of every word of this parable.

"A certain man had two sons; and he came to the first"—i.e., to the elder one—the first-born—"and said, Son, go work to-day in my vineyard. And he answered and said, I will not; but afterwards he repented and went."

It is generally supposed that the first or elder son represented the Jews; and that our Lord is here describing their conduct in rejecting Him.

But this interpretation would completely overturn the application which our Lord Himself gives to it in ver. 31, when He demanded of the Jews "Whether of them twain did the will of his father? They say unto him, The first. Jesus said unto them, Verily I say unto you, That the publicans and harlots go into the kingdom of heaven before you."

The elder son, then, did not represent the Jewish nation. It was the second or younger son who represented them, and whose conduct was a counterpart of theirs. His conduct was that of a hypocrite, and so, too, was theirs. For, observe:

"And he came to the second, and said likewise. And he answered, and said, I go, sir; and went not."

This second or younger son was a true picture of the hypocrisy of the Jewish nation. They promised to serve God—they professed the greatest reverence for His name—they were for ever calling Him their Lord and Master—they were always saying, "I go, sir; but they went not."

But in addition to all this our Lord's parable is true as regards historical facts.

The "two sons" are the sons of one father, they spring from one stock, and cannot therefore represent Jews and Gentiles, whose parentage was widely different.

But if the younger son was a figure of the Jewish nation—the descendants of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob—what nation was represented by the elder son? He, too, was the son of the same progenitors.

That a distinct nation—not the Jewish—was intended by the first of the two sons, is apparent from the next parable which our Lord uttered in explanation of this one. He opened the next parable, that of the husbandmen in the vineyard, by addressing the same hearers, and saying to them in the 33rd ver.—"Hear another parable," as though He had said, "Hear one further about these two sons. I will put it before you in another light."

And then, in winding up the application of this other explanatory parable, He said to these Jews in the 43rd ver.—"Therefore say I unto you, The kingdom of God"—i.e., the kingdom of the Gospel dispensation—"shall be taken from you, and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof."

Here, then, we have the two sons prefiguring two nations. The younger son manifestly representing the Jewish nation. Again, I ask, what nation of the same parentage—not the Gentiles—does the elder son represent?

Can we find this elder son? Can we discover this nation which "brings forth the fruits" of the kingdom of the Gospel?

Now, if we turn to 1 Chron. v. 1, 2, we shall meet with one of the most remarkable passages in the whole Bible, and which is a golden key to unlock a large portion of the prophecies. In this passage we see that the right and title of first-born was taken away from one of the sons of Jacob, and given to another.

"Now, the sons of Reuben the first-born of Israel (for he was the first-born: but, forasmuch as he defiled his father's bed, his birthright was given unto the sons of Joseph the son of Israel; and the genealogy is not to be reckoned after the birthright. For Judah prevailed above his brethren, and of him came the chief ruler; but the birthright was Joseph's").

Here we have it stated both negatively and positively that the birthright was transferred from Reuben to Joseph.

Of Judah was to spring "the chief ruler"—even our Lord Jesus Christ. But Judah never possessed the birthright, Judah was never the elder son.

The birthright was given to Joseph, and from him it was given, by direct inspiration, not to his first-born Manasseh, but to his second son Ephraim.

Hence the deep and emphatic meaning which ought to be attached to the word of promise in Jer. xxxi. 9: "For I am a Father to Israel, and Ephraim is My first-born."

Hence we may conclude that "the nation bringing forth the fruits of the kingdom," which is represented as the elder son, who after his refusal to obey his father's command, "repented and went," is none other than the House of Israel, of which Ephraim is the head.

But it may be asked, How can this be the case when our Lord draws the contrast between the unbelieving Jews and "the publicans and harlots." Do not these terms simply designate some of the worst and lowest characters among the Jews themselves?

I think not. The publicans and harlots among the Jews never formed a nation to whom our Lord promised to give the kingdom, and who, He declared, would bring forth the fruits thereof, as "a nation."

But if we look at these two opprobrious terms we shall see how exactly they designated the House of Israel at the time when our Lord was speaking.

Digitized by Google

The publicans were not necessarily Jews. Perhaps very few of them were Jews. They were of two classes—one, the chief—or farmers-general of the taxes, who were usually Roman knights; the other, the collectors of taxes under them. Zaccheus, belonged to the first class, and though a son of Abraham, he was probably not a Jew, but an Israelite. Matthew, who belonged to the inferior order, was a Levite.

Both classes were hated and despised by the Jews, and considered beyond the pale of salvation.

The other term, "harlot," has, I believe, a far deeper and wider meaning than that which the casual reader generally gives to it. If the two sons represent two distinct nations, one in nominal covenant with God, as was the nation of Judah, the other as having for centuries broken that covenant, and become, as a nation, worshippers of Baal, no expression could be more descriptive of their apostasy from God than this term, which is so often employed in the Old Testament to designate idolatry.

Take only two passages in proof of this. Speaking to this very House of Israel, the Lord says in Hosea iv. 15: "Though thou, Israel, play the harlot, yet let not Judah offend." And again, in Jer. iii. 6: "The Lord said unto me, Hast thou seen that which backsliding Israel hath done? She hath gone up upon every high mountain, and there hath played the harlot." See also Hosea vi. 10.

However revolting and offensive the epithet may be to our ears, no word in the whole vocabulary of language can possibly be too strong, nor more expressive, to declare God's abhorrence of the idolatry of the nation.

Now it is this once abhorred and rejected idolatrous nation to which, in preference to the hypocritical, and self-righteous Jewish nation, that the kingdom of the Gospel was to be given, and we believe has been given. The self-complacent, and professedly respectful younger son, who said, "I go, sir, and went not," has been cast out for 1800 years, whereas the elder son, who has "repented," and gone into the vineyard, and done his father's will, is now "bringing forth the fruits of the kingdom."

January 1st, 1879.

THE VICAR OF ST. BARNABAS, HULL, ON "ENGLAND'S DIVINE MISSION."

(Continued from page 75).

PART III.

"If we turn to the New Testament, England's privileges are stated with equal clearness. I have for that purpose selected the second passage for our consideration from the Gospel of St. Matthew xxi. 43: 'Therefore say I unto you, The kingdom of God shall be taken from you, and given to a NATION bringing forth the fruits thereof.'

"These words from the lips of our blessed Lord and Saviour are remarkable, and certainly a most weighty matter and most solemn prophecy. The whole chapter in which the words occur is full as it were of a chain of parables spoken by Jesus to the Jews. Our Saviour's design in all these parables seems to be to convict them out of their own mouth, as the rejecters of His truth and of Himself, and to prepare the way of bringing before them that mystery which the great apostle to the Gentiles having apprehended, afterwards fully declares in Romans xi. 25, and Ephesians iii. 1—6—viz., the temporary rejection of the Jewish people, and the calling of the Gentiles in their room.

"Now when our Lord propounds the parable of the wicked husbandmen, He asks the Jews the doom of those husbandmen, and after their reply, in verse 41, our Lord rejoins and utters the words in the passage under our consideration—viz., verse 43: 'Therefore say I unto you, The kingdom of God shall be taken from you, and given to a NATION bringing forth the fruits thereof.'

"Again, in the Acts of the Apostles, we have the remarkable declaration of St. James, who, recapitulating the words of St. Peter, says, 'Simon hath declared unto us how God at the first did visit the Gentiles, to take out of them a PEOPLE for His name' (chap. xv. 14).

"Now, it is a well-known fact that the New Testament use of the term (τα εθνη), the nations in the plural number, is to confine its application to the Gentile nations, as distinguished from the Jewish people and nation; the word εθνος—i.e., nation—is found in several instances applied to that people as a distinct one. This use will be found in St. John's Gospel, chap. xi. 48, 50, 51, and 52, and in our Lord's words in our text to denote that NATION which He has in His providence destined to succeed for a time to the exclusive dispensation of His nation of the Old Testament. Our Lord using the word εθνος in the singular is most striking.

"The language of Scripture is very guarded, and ought to be read with great care. Our Lord's exhortation is, 'Search the Scriptures,' not merely read them. 'How readest thou?' was not a meaningless phrase from the lips of our Divine Master. I was much struck with a remark by a newspaper correspondent the other day, when speaking about the British ultimatum sent to the Ameer of Afghanistan, proposed that the Ameer's reply should be printed in the language written—i.e., the Persian—in order that it may come under the notice of those conversant with that language, so that no misapprehension may occur.

"Surely then, brethren, it ought to be a subject of greater moment for all who have an interest in God's Word to read carefully and prayerfully the declaration of the King of kings and Lord of lords, and more especially when those declarations concern the WEAL OR WOE of this great nation.

"Now we know it has ever been God's purpose to select one nation above all others to make it the channel of communicating His Divine will to the world at large. Israel of old was chosen, but, through their rejection of the Son of God, they have for a time been displaced from that high position, and the dignity of that position, with all its privileges, has thus been conferred, in accordance with our Lord's prediction in the text, to another nation; we therefore ask:

"Who is that favoured nation under the new dispensation?

"How is that nation to be recognised as having succeeded to that dignified rank?

"These are important questions, and can only be answered by comparing Israel of old with that nation who is divinely pointed out as its successor—it is only in the analogy of the two nations where the corroborative evidence is found that it is England which holds that glorious position.

"If we compare the two nations, we find among other Identities the following most striking—viz.:—

"1. The form of Government, civil and ecclesiastical, for ages maintained by the Anglo-Saxon race presents the nearest approach to the Jewish form of government of any other.

"2. The connection between Church and State has ever been an integral part of England's constitution, thus affording a field for the development of God's gracious and providential purposes which no other nation has to the same extent.

"3. The English nation in earlier times even, and pre-eminently in these latter days, has ever been the great depository of God's revealed truth, and as such His great means for the promulgation of the same, and for a testimony among all nations. Where in the world's history can a parallel be found to the British and Foreign Bible Society?

"4. With all national drawbacks and shortcomings, the English nation has ever been foremost 'in bringing forth the fruits' of the Gospel. From the shores of England the heralds of the message of salvation go forth into all lands, and thus fulfil the marvellous prediction in Malachi, 'From the rising of the sun even unto the going down of the same, My name shall be great among the Gentiles,' &c. (chap. i. 11).

Digitized by Google

"5. All national institutions in England — hospitals, asylums, &c.—are so constituted that the name of the Lord is honoured.

"6. The prestige and prosperity of the English nation is a very fac-simile of Israel in her palmy days. What nation but England can appropriate the blessing once owned by Israel?—'Happy art thou, O Israel: who is like unto thee, O people saved by the Lord, the shield of thy help, and who is the sword of thy excellency! and thine enemies shall be found liars unto thee; and thou shalt tread upon their high places' (Deut. xxxiii. 29). Or what nation can more appropriately feel this promise their own than England?—'For the Lord thy God blesseth thee, as He promised thee: and thou shalt lend unto many nations, but thou shalt not borrow; and thou shalt reign over many nations, but they shall not reign over thee' (Deut. xv. 6), or the promise, 'Ye shall dwell in your land in safety' (Levit. xxvi. 5).

"In short, the history of God's dealings with the English nation and Church presents a perfect parallel to that which the inspired Word reveals in connection with the Jewish people, so long as they stand in national and covenant relation with Him.

"Much has been said and written of late on the Identity of the English people with Israel—yea, and many go even so far as to conclude that the Anglo-Saxons are lineal descendants of the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel. Many passages of Scripture have been misquoted, and, if I may so say, distorted, to prove this favourite theory. But there is not a shadow of Scripture evidence by which the lineal descent of the English from the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel can be vindicated—but so far as the Identity of the English nation with Israel is concerned, and that they are the nation to whom our Lord refers in our text, as having the kingdom which was taken from Israel for a time given to them, Scripture proofs are incontrovertibly supported by historical evidence and events. We thus see the high position assigned to England in the Divine plan."

(To be continued).

GOOD NEWS FROM THE ANTIPODES.

PART II.

(Concluded from page 65.)

WE now proceed to give our readers the report of the second meeting of the Launceston Anglo-Israel Association in Tasmania, with a notice of the President, Canon B. Brownrigg's admirable address on the occasion, the subject being "The Semitic, not Japhetic, Origin of the Anglo-Saxon Nation." The meeting was held on September 14, 1878, and we have reason to think that the newspaper we quote from is the Cornwall Chronicle, dated September 16, 1878:—

ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

Another meeting of this Association was held last evening in St. John's school-room. The Rev. Canon Brownrigg presided. After prayer, the minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. The general business of the Association being disposed of, the chairman read the portions of Scripture for consideration, after which he delivered the following address:

IS THE ANGLO-SAXON NATION JAPHETIC OR SEMITIC?

I place this inquiry at the forefront of the Anglo-Israel question for the obvious reason that if the Anglo-Saxon nation is Japhetic, and not Semitic, it cannot be the embodiment of Ten-Tribed Israel, for that kingdom is necessarily of Semitic descent.

Now the starting point of the inquiry must doubtless be that declaration in Gen. ix. 18, 19: "And the sons of Noah that went forth of the ark, were Shem, and Ham, and Japheth. These are the three sons of Noah, and of these was the whole earth overspread." Concerning this overspreading the earth, the general view is that Shem peopled Asia; Japheth, Europe; and Ham, Africa, and accordingly a Japhetic descent for the Anglo-Saxon nation has been claimed, but it will be my present effort to show that the Japhetic descent of the Anglo-Saxon nation rests upon mere assumption, while its Semitic descent may be fairly concluded upon certain physiological grounds.

"It is very true," as a certain writer observes, "that Scripture states that the Isles of the Gentiles, by which must be understood the seaboard of Europe, was first peopled by the Japhetic race. But we are not obliged to believe as a consequence that they remained there. We find that very early in the history of our race, the Semitic portion in Asia drove the children of Ham from their patrimony and dwelt in their lands, and, in like manner, if we patiently and diligently follow the footprints of bygone ages, we shall see that the races from Asia, the children of Shem, drove the race of Japheth into 'holes and corners,' as Professor Rawlinson has expressed it, and took their place in the vanguard of civilisation."

Now, in support of the Japhetic descent of the Anglo-Saxon nation, an argument has been drawn from the etymology or derivation of the word Japheth, and also from the statement, "God shall enlarge Japheth, and he shall dwell in the tents of Shem" (Gen. ix. 27). I will notice each of these points.

With regard to the derivation of the word Japheth, the argument from this source is valueless for the purpose for which it is adduced, inasmuch as etymologists themselves are divided as to its true derivation. By some it is derived from "Yaphah," to be fair, from (it is assumed) the fair complexion of Japheth and his descendants, while by others it is derived from "Patha," to extend, as having (supposed) reference to the blessing, "God shall enlarge Japheth."

Concerning the argument from this source, it may be remarked that a difference of opinion affords at best, in any case, a very unsatisfactory foundation upon which to reason, and in this case most certainly proves nothing, but that for anything that yet appears to the contrary, the Anglo-Saxon nation may be Semitic, and not Japhetic in its descent.

But with regard to the promise, "God shall enlarge Japheth, and he shall dwell in the tents of Shem," it has been concluded that Japheth should have the largest portion of the world for his inheritance, and should rule over the descendants of Shem—a prophecy which, it is said, is being fulfilled at the present day, as in India British Government is established, and the Anglo-Saxon being in the ascendant from Europe to India, from India over the American continent.

In reference to this, I would remark that the promise does not necessarily denote a supremacy for Japheth over Shem. It does not necessarily amount to more than a promise of a numerous progeny; certainly greater in respect of Ham, or Canaan, but for anything here taught, not certainly greater in respect of Shem. And this, in contradistinction from Canaan, has been amply fulfilled in the teeming millions of China, and other portions of the globe, in which the undoubted descendants of Japheth dwell, without the Anglo-Saxon nation being necessarily included among those descendants. And far from its being necessarily taught that Japheth was to rule over Shem (as the interpretation of the words, "He shall dwell in the tents of Shem"), assuredly no more is intended than is expressed in Jonathan's paraphrase of the passage—"The sons of Japheth shall be proselyted, and dwell in the schools of Shem," or, as has been well said in the "Speaker's Commentary" on this verse, "The descendants of Shem should preserve the knowledge of the true God, and be specially chosen to be His inheritance, and His chosen people—and the descendants of Japheth should ultimately dwell in the tents of Shem—that is, according to Jewish interpretation, should learn from the descendants of Shem the knowledge of the true God."

How truly this is the signification may be gathered from the fact further noticed in the Commentary, that "nearly all those nations whose history and language show them to be Japhetic, have been converted to a belief in the religion of the God of Shem, which has long been the religion of Europe, and is now making its way even among the Aryan races of Asia."

But though I have approvingly quoted these words of Dr. Harold Browne, Lord Bishop of Ely, it is only in so far as they relate to nations, known and not merely assumed to be of Japhetic descent, for in determining this point, not much stress can be laid upon language as any infallible guide to the origin of a people. William Dwight Whitney, Professor of Sanscrit and Comparative Philology in Yale College, the greatest living authority on philology, in his work, "The Life and Growth of Language," remarks, "As a general conclusion, the incompetence of linguistic science to pass any decisive judgment as to the unity or diversity of the human race, or even as to that of human speech, appears to be completely and irrevocably demonstrated." "Another highly important anthropological question connected with, and suggested by our classification of language, concerns its relation to the ethnologists' classification of races; and here we have to make, at the outset, the unreserved confession that the two do not by any means correspond and agree. Wholly discordant languages are spoken by communities whom the ethnologist would not separate in race from one another, and related languages are spoken by men of apparently different race; and the view we have taken of language is entirely consistent with this. We have seen that there is no necessary tie between race and language; that every man speaks the language he has learned, being born into the possession of no one rather than another; and that, as any individual may learn a language different from that of his parents or of his remoter ancestors, so a community (which is only an aggregate of individuals) may do the same thing, not retaining the slightest trace of its ancestral speech" (pp. 270, 271).

Digitized by Google

Thus, Whitney lays it down, "that there is no necessary tie between race and language," so that no argument for the Japhetic origin of the Anglo-Saxon nation can be certainly founded upon the language of that people. Moreover, Professor Huxley ("Critiques and Addresses," page 175) observes that "community of language testifies to close contact between the people who speak the language, but to nothing else; philology has absolutely nothing to do with ethnology, except so far as it suggests the existence or the absence of such contact. The contrary assumption, that language is a test of race, has introduced the utmost confusion into ethnological speculation, and has nowhere worked greater scientific mischief than in the ethnology of the British Islands."

If then, we regard this blessing upon Japheth, as denoting a numerous posterity (fulfilled in the undoubtable descendants of Japheth), and their being taught the knowledge of the true God by the descendants of Shem, to some extent fulfilled, but to be fulfilled, in a very much larger degree, the nature of the promise, will, I think, be very fairly expressed.

Thus no conclusive argument for the Japhetic descent of the Anglo-Saxon nation can be established either upon the derivation of the name Japheth, or upon the blessing promised to Japheth, but now upon physiological grounds the Semitic descent of the Anglo-Saxon nation may be fairly and reasonably maintained.

It has been already noticed that the three sons of Noah were Shem, Ham, and Japheth, and that "of these was the whole earth overspread," and it is now important to observe that mankind is physiologically divided into three classes, distinguishable from each other by the form of the skull.

Dr. Pritchard, a most able physiologist, remarks in his great work, "The Physical History of Mankind," that all the varieties in the form of the human skull may be referred on a general comparison to three principal forms, which are the following:—

1. The symmetrical or oval form, which is that of the European and Western Asiatic nations.

2. The narrow and elongated skull, of which the most strongly marked specimen is perhaps the cranium of the negro of the Gold Coast.

3. The broad and square-faced skull, which is that particularly of the Tauranian nation. The Mongols afford a good specimen of this form, and the Esquimaux an exaggerated one.

Now these divisions, which are recognised by all physiologists, are generally spoken of as the Caucasian, the Mongolian, and the Ethiopic or Negro, and concerning these Cuvier remarks, "The Caucasian, to which we belong, is distinguished by the beauty of the oval form of the head; to this variety the most civilised nations, and those who have generally held all others in subjection, are undoubtedly to be classed. The Mongolian is known by his high cheek-bones, flat visage, narrow and oblique eyes, straight black hair, and olive complexion. Great empires have been established by this race in China and Japan. In civilisation, however, it has hitherto always remained stationary. The Negro race is marked by a black complexion, crisped or woolly hair, compressed cranium, and a flat nose. It has always remained in the same state of utter barbarism."

Looking now to the fact that of the three sons of Noah the whole earth was overspread, and to this remarkable fact also, that the human family is divisable into three classes, is not the inference reasonable that there must be some connection between these two facts, for example, that these three divisions represent Shem, Ham, and Japheth? In the servile condition of the Ethiopic or Negro race we find the counterpart of the curse pronounced upon Canaan—"A servant of servants shall he be." In the "great empires" established by the Mongolian or Tauranian people we have the counterpart to the blessing, "God shall enlarge Japheth," and as these divisions of the human race are distinguished from each other, and from the Semitic by the form of the skull, the conclusion is inevitable that, as the Anglo-Saxon nation cannot be classed with the Tauranian, or Ethiopic, it is Semitic and not Japhetic in its descent. And very remarkably does this conclusion fall in with the blessing apportioned to Shem, and by which Japheth was also to be benefitted, and most strikingly fulfilled in the Anglo-Saxon nation, for, as predicted of the descendants of Shem, the Anglo-Saxon nation preserves the knowledge of the true God. In its national service it speaks of itself as God's "inheritance," and His "chosen people," and has been the means of bringing the knowledge of the true God to Japhetic and Ethiopic families, and ere long the "great empires" in Eastern Asia and elsewhere shall be taught the knowledge of the true God, shall hear of the mission of the living Saviour and of the Holy Spirit, and thus Japheth proselyted, will "dwell in the tents of Shem."

Upon a review of these several considerations, I draw the conclusion that the Anglo-Saxon nation is Semitic in its descent—a very important and essential circumstance in its bearing upon the Anglo-Israel Question.

This was followed by a paper by Capt. Urquhart, contending that the prediction concerning Japheth finds a fulfilment in the occupation of the territory of Shem by the Turks. In the discussion which followed, various members took part. A very agreeable evening was passed, and the next meeting fixed for Friday, 27th prox., to commence at eight p.m.

HOW THE IDENTITY GROWS.

WE take the following from the Belfast Evening Telegraph of Jan. 21, 1879, as proof of the progress of the truth in little-suspected quarters. The wild parts of the Highlands, we are told by returning travellers, are hearing of our Identity. From Bangalore in South India comes a capital pamphlet by a major in the Madras army, who holds meetings to further the cause; and from Auckland in New Zealand there is good news indeed, which we publish in our next. The Lurgan Church of Ireland Young Men's Society, we see, is interested in the glorious truth; and they have rightly decided that the proof preponderates in favour of our contention.

Our extract is as follows:—

"LURGAN CHURCH OF IRELAND YOUNG MEN'S SOCIETY.—The usual weekly meeting of this society was held in the Free School, Lurgan, yesterday evening, Rev. Arthur J. Moore in the chair. The meeting was open to the public, and many availed themselves of the opportunity. The business of the evening was the continuation of a debate on the subject, 'Are the British Identical with the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel?' The speakers for the affirmative being Messrs. Dickson and Moffet, and for the negative Mr. Johnston. The opening speakers (Messrs. Thompson, affirmative, and Bray, negative) having replied, the chairman summed up the arguments of both sides, after which a vote was taken, the result of which was the majority of twenty-one for the affirmative. The meeting was brought to a close in the usual manner."

Review.

Are We the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel? By J. C. Gooding, M.D., Cheltenham. Price fourpence.

DR. GOODING, in a lecture delivered at Cheltenham, in April, 1878, and afterwards published in pamphlet form, gave a clear, concise, rapid sketch of the separated kingdoms of Judah and Israel—a separation which we cannot but think many who, nevertheless, possess and read their Bibles, do not realise at all, and certainly not in its full significance, or historical and spiritual importance. The pamphlet called, "Are We the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel?" contains also a summary of some of the many reasons that exist for the belief in our Israelitish origin, and which are grounded on proofs which we should have called undeniable, had we not known of the force of opposition which has lately led a man of apparent knowledge and intelligence to deny such a fact as that we nationally keep the Sabbath, or its representative one day in seven, the Sunday. That it is frightfully desecrated is a proof of national wickedness, but not that the law does not exist amongst us and is still held in honour by our Christians; an example of which we lately read in an account stating that an effort was made in Southampton to keep open a coffee-room on Sunday to counteract the temptations of the "publics;" but it was urged that it is no reason for coffee-house keepers to break God's commands because publicans do so, and the point of closing on the Sunday was carried against the Rector of Southampton.

Digitized by Google

We think Dr. Gooding's pamphlet one to be recommended to all who are beginning the study of our Identification, and especially to any who might prefer a lecture addressed to adults, rather than a work professedly written on the subject for children, though of great interest to readers of all ages, by Philo-Israel, called "How Israel was Lost, and How It was Found."

We regret that Dr. Gooding did not add to his lecture a list of the works from which, we imagine, he derived much of his Identification knowledge, and did not name the periodical which publishes this notice, whose two first vols. contain much valuable matter for those who are not content with a mere smattering of the subject, and with having a selection of fruit culled for them, as by Dr. Gooding, instead of searching and gathering for themselves.

We trust that Cheltenham will hasten to distinguish itself by zeal in spreading the belief of the Israelitish origin of the Anglo-Saxons, and thus boldly defy the ignorance and incredulity of scoffers, and rouse the attention of the indifferent. L. P.

Correspondence.

THE CHRONOLOGY OF THE GREAT PYRAMID.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—I am much interested in Mr. Westfield's note in your issue of January 29th, 1879, showing that the product of the heighth and breadth of the entrance passage (taken in Pyramid inches) of the Great Pyramid is 1948·5270, which he thinks gives the year of the world corresponding to B.C. 2170, the date of its erection. As the latter is really B.C. 2170·45, according to P. Smyth's careful measurements, he need not have taken off the odd decimals: 6000—(2170·45 + 1948·5270) = 6000—4118·9770 = 1881·023: and we all know that the grand gallery is more than 1881 Pyramid inches long, though what the exact decimal fraction over is seems uncertain.

I have before strongly expressed my belief, not derived from Pyramid data, that 1881·888 is the true number of years in the present dispensation. My idea is that a tithe of a "time" ($\frac{36.0}{10}$ years=36 years) is an analogous period to a week; and that the captivity of the whole Hebrew nation [taking the two separate captivities as dating from B.C. 678 and 606 respectively, and taking no account of the temporary and very imperfect restoration of the Jews from B.C. 536 to A.D. 70] may be put as dating from 641 + something, and continuing 70 times 36 years—i.e., 2520 years ("After two days"—two millenniums—"He will revive us, and in the third day"—in the third millennium—"He will raise us up" (Hosea vi. 2). Now, 2520—(641 + something) = 1878 + something, which brings us into the present year.

Then the Christian dispensation is called "the acceptable year of the Lord." A year is 365·2422 weeks divided by 7. Now 36 years × 365·2422 ÷ 7 = 1878·388. Further, there are well-known texts from which many deduce that there will be 3½ years at the end, of a very special character. Add 3·5 to 1878·388 and you get 1881·888. Now for Mr. Westfield's idea of getting year-of-the-world dates, from products of Pyramid numbers. He intimates his opinion that there is more in it than he has put forth. So think I. If my ideas are right, the 6000th annus mundi ends A.D. 1881·888. If so, our Lord's Nativity was at A.M. 4118·112; the Mosaic period, according to Pyramid B.C. 1542·4 (p. 398), began A.M. 2575·712, and the Pyramid's own date was (B.C. 2170·45, see bottom of p. 401, "Our Inheritance") A.M. 1947·662. I do not know from what figures Mr. Westfield gets his product 1948·5270. But this I find, and it is remarkable, 47·24 transverse height of entrance passage (see p. 312 "Our Inheritance") × 41·229 outside height of coffer (p. 138) = 1947·65796. Not very different from 1947·662, eh? It should be noted also that the above factor 41·229 is not only the outside height of coffer, but very nearly one-tenth of the length of the king's (or coffer) chamber, 412·1317, as well as evidently a close approximation to what Mr. Westfield takes as his entrance passage breadth, which, however, I make out from p. 311, second edition, to have been 41·6 Pyramid inches. But this is not all.

Look at this:

1947·662 ÷ 51·5165 = 37·8.
2575·712 ÷ 51·5165 = 49·999, practically 50.
4118·112 ÷ 51·5165 = 79·93.
6000·000 ÷ 51·5165 = 116·467.

Now the above 51·5165 is one-tenth of the solid diagonal of the king's chamber, or half Mr. Simpson's grand unit of division by which he works out his wonderful sums of the squares (pp. 179, 180, "Our Inheritance"). 37·8 is very nearly the mean between the outside and inside heights of the coffer: thus, 41·23 + 34·31 = 75·54 ÷ 2 = 37·77, which may mean that the Pyramid's erection began A.M. 51·5165 × 34·31, and was finished A.M. 51·5165 × 41·23, the date A.M. 1947·662 being thus the mean date of its erection.

The next quotient, 49·999 is, as I observe above, practically 50, a downright Pyramid number. The next 79·93, besides being very closely the double of the Scripture number 40 (Israel were 40 years in the wilderness, and Moses was twice in the mount for 40 days); but is also EXACTLY three times the inside breadth of the coffer as measured near its top, and ·6 Pyramid inches above the bottom: and also but little different from the united lengths of the diagonals of the coffer inside its North end. It is also equal to the coffer's outside breadth and depth together nearly.

The last quotient, 116·467 will strike all familiar with Pyramid facts as being an approximation to the length of the ante-chamber, even as our divisor 51·5165 is half the length of the granite portion of its floor. The actual product of these two measurements as given by P. Smyth—viz., 116·26 × 103·17, is 11994·5442; the half of which, 5997·2721, differs from a round 6000 by only 2·7279, which a very minute correction of the factors would clear off. The quotient 116·467 is also three times the outside breadth of the coffer, very nearly; still more nearly, outside length + inside breadth; and exactly the inside length + outside breadth. These results are to my mind marvellous, and should have a very solemnizing effect upon our minds. You may depend upon it, dear sir, that some great event will occur May 22nd, 1879 (1878·388), and that 6000 years of the world's history will close November 20th or 21st, 1882. How solemn a thought! How blessed for the Lord's people! C. W. HICKSON, (Vicar of St. Bartholomew, Bristol).

THE SHEFFIELD CARD OF MEMBERSHIP.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—Your readers will be pleased to learn that the Sheffield Committee, in harmony with your kind remarks on page 55 of your issue of the 5th instant, have adopted a design for an improved card of membership, and have given instructions for its immediate preparation. It will not only be free from the objections raised against the first card, but it will incorporate new features of importance to those interested in the Identity movement, so that we hope to have a continuation of your esteemed approval and that of Mr. Hine, and also of that of all the Associations throughout the country whose wishes and tastes we have striven to consider. It will be registered and ready for issue in the course of a week or two, with a key which may be regarded as a delineation of its several parts. Yours truly,

JOHN CHAPMAN.

110, Weston-street, Sheffield,
Feb. 7, 1879.

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements
(PREPAID).

	£ s. d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0 1 0
Each additional line	0 0 4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0 2 0
Each additional line	0 0 6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0 2 6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O.O payable at Ludgate-circus.

BOOKS, ETC.

Now ready price 7s., post free 6d. extra.

THE SECOND VOLUME OF THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.
EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

This volume contains a large number of articles on our Identity with Lost Israel, by the best and most learned writers on the subject. Also many interesting papers on the Great Pyramid by Professor Piazzi Smyth, F.R.S.E., Astronomer-Royal for Scotland, Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A., Major H. A. Tracey, R.A., Charles Horner, Esq., and others. London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row

"BANNER OF ISRAEL" FREE CIRCULATION FUND.

Persons interested in "Our Identity," who have the opportunity of judiciously circulating copies of the BANNER OF ISRAEL, and are willing to assist in the work, can be supplied with any number of copies they can use, gratuitously. They will be sent to such persons free of all cost. Application is to be made to the Secretary of the "Banner of Israel Free Circulation Fund," Mr. R. Fergusson Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C., to whom all remittances for this object should also be made, but NOT to the Editor of the BANNER—Philo-Israel.

	£ s. d.
"Richmond"	0 2 0

Now ready, price 6d., post free 7d

THE ANSWER to the EASTERN QUESTION as shewn in the IDENTITY of the BRITISH with ISRAEL. By the Author of the "New Old Story."

"The author has well managed her topic; her style of writing is clear and vigorous and well calculated to do good service to the cause."—PIAZZI SMYTH.

London: S. W. Partridge & Co., 9, Paternoster-row.

WALTER KEAST'S Old Established BOOT AND SHOE WAREHOUSE, 102, KENNINGTON PARK ROAD, LONDON.

Gentlemen's Boots & Shoes for	Ladies' Boots and Shoes for
Winter and Summer, House and Garden, Walking, Riding, Rowing, Fishing, Shooting, &c.	Winter and Summer, Walking and Riding, House, Garden, or Dancing, &c., &c.

Children's Boots for School, Walking, Garden, or Sea-side. Slippers in great variety at moderate prices.

Schools and Public Institutions supplied at wholesale prices.

Note the address—WALTER KEAST, 102, Kennington-park-road, S.E.

"He that hath ears to hear, let him hear."
HEALTH, DIET, AND DEAFNESS.
NOISES IN THE EARS.

THE REV. E. J. SILVERTON will send his Health Advocate, giving important advice and particulars on the above subjects, free to any person, showing how Deafness may be at once relieved and ultimately cured. Many most interesting cases are set forth. Thousands of people are hearing Sermons and Lectures today who would have remained deaf had they not applied to Mr. Silverton. When a remedy is so successful, ought not every deaf person in the kingdom to try it, if it be in his or her power? It is a pleasing thing to a minister to make the deaf to hear, not only in a religious sense, but literally. Mr. Silverton may truly say to the deaf, "He that hath ears to hear, let him hear."

The Health Advocate also gives an account of several invaluable remedies which are producing the greatest possible good. The Medical Energiser is giving health to vast numbers. The Nutrient Food of Food is a splendid assistant to all kinds of medicine. The Great Lung Remedy is a marvellous Medicine for the cure of consumption, asthma, and all kinds of coughs. These, and other proved and tested Medicines which go under the title of "The Rev. E. J. Silverton's Ready Relief Remedies," may be ordered through any Chemist. London Wholesale Houses:—Sanger, Oxford-street; Barclay, Farringdon-street; Edwards, Queen Victoria-street; Thompson, New North-road; or of Rev. E. J. Silverton, Albert House, Park-street, Nottingham.

SERMONS WHICH HAVE REACHED THE MASSES, by REV. E. J. SILVERTON. Over 400 Pages Crown 8vo. Price 6s. Order of any Bookseller, or ALABASTER & PASSMORE, 4, Paternoster-buildings, London. The Sermons are quaint and humorous, containing many droll sayings and unusual illustrations. Must read them!! No one slept while they were delivered!! An Engraving of the Preacher's Place of Worship, Exeter Hall, Nottingham, will be found within. These Sermons are unlike all others. Sent post free from the Author.

MISCELLANEOUS.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

DOUBLE NUMBERS DURING 1879.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT.

Owing to the increasing interest taken in the Identity movement, it is found necessary to occasionally enlarge our space to make room for the important papers constantly reaching the Editor. It has, therefore, been determined to issue Twelve Double Numbers during 1879, for which Twopence will be charged. The first of these series of Double Numbers was issued the first week in January, and one on each succeeding first week in the month during the year.

	£ s. d.
Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free	0 7 6
Two copies (including Double Numbers)	0 12 4
Three " " " " ...	0 18 8
Four " " " " ...	1 6 2
Six " " " " ...	1 17 4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-Grand, London, to W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

TO BE LET, BOURNEMOUTH. A well-furnished, comfortable house, on most reasonable terms, near church and sea.—Apply DUNCAN, Chemist, Lansdown.

THE TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL FOUND AND IDENTIFIED IN THE BRITISH NATION.
EDWARD HINE
(The well-known writer on this subject) will deliver his
POPULAR LECTURE
In the following halls:—

1879.
February 19th, MEMORIAL HALL, Farringdon-street.
" 25th, Myddelton Hall, Islington.
March 5th, New Cross Hall, Lewisham High-road.
" 11th, Hawkston Hall (Newman Hall's Church), Westminster Bridge-road.
" 25th, St. JAMES'S HALL, Regent-street.
Doors open at 7; Chair taken at 7.30.

Subscriptions will be thankfully received by MR. LOVELAND, Shoreham, Sevenoaks; MR. STEPHENSON, 123, Newgate-street, London. Funds are needed to defray the heavy expenses, as admission to all the Lectures is free.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

Temporary Office:—
20, WARWICK LANE, LONDON, E.C.
President:—
Vice-Presidents:—
CAPTAIN E. WEBSTER, Stirling.
REV. A. J. J. CACHEMAILLE, Vicar of S. Mary's, Oldham.
Chairman of Committee:—
Mr. E. W. BIRD, (Philo-Israel), Bristol.
Committee:—
COLONEL BENTINCK, Grosvenor-square, W.
CAPTAIN BAYLEY, R.N., Streatham, S.W.
Mr. JOHN S. ANDERSON, Upper Norwood, S.E.
Mr. ROBERT BANKS, London, E.C.
Mr. JOHN T. FLETCHER, Upper Norwood, S.E.
REV. F. R. A. GLOVER, M.A., St. James, W.
Mr. H. L. GUERRIER, Tooting, S.W.
Mr. W. H. GUEST, London, E.C.
Mr. CHARLES HORNER, Mortlake, S.W.
Mr. DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, St. John's-wood, N.W.
Mr. H. H. PAIN, Bromley, Kent, S.E.
DR. H. HODSON RUGG, St. John's-wood, N.W.
Mr. W. H. PETERS, J.P., Exeter.
Mr. BENTINCK CANNEY, Lewisham, S.E.
Mr. FREDERIC CLIFT, B.A., Upper Norwood, S.E.
Mr. J. L. WOOD, New Southgate, N.
(With power to add to their number.)
Treasurer:—
DR. H. HODSON RUGG, 1, Grove-road, St. John's-wood, N.W.
Hon. Secretary:—
REV. JAMES BILLINGTON.

This Association has been established to bind in closer union the many friends who rejoice in having a portion with the long Lost Tribes of the House of Israel; also to extend the knowledge of the truth that the Anglo-Saxon races are now identified with those Lost Tribes of the House of Israel. These objects, it is thought, will be best accomplished by means of Drawing Room and Public Meetings, by Sermons, Lectures, Bible Readings, by the diffusion of Literature upon the subject, and by such other ways and means as the Committee may from time to time determine.

The Honorary Secretary or the Treasurer will be glad to receive the names of friends wishing to join the Association or to subscribe to its Funds.

Members' Annual Subscriptions to be not less than 2s. 6d. per annum.

Donations and Subscriptions are urgently needed to carry on the work.

Contributions are much needed for the Free Circulation Fund of the Association, which disseminates works by VARIOUS WRITERS on the Identity Question.

Friends who will arrange for, or assist in, the arrangements for Lectures in their respective localities, under the auspices of the Association, are requested to address the Hon. Secretary at the office of the Association, from whom all particulars, and every assistance for the effective carrying out of the same, may be obtained.

J. BILLINGTON, Hon. Sec.

BOOKS, ETC.

THE GREAT PYRAMID. NOW READY, PHILO-ISRAEL'S NEW WORK, 56 pages, Illustrated with Diagrams, price 4d., post free 5d.

AN ELEMENTARY DIGEST or SKETCH OF THE CHIEF FACTS and TEACHINGS of the GREAT PYRAMID of EGYPT; adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific. By PHILO-ISRAEL; together with Original Papers by the following leading Pyramidists, republished mostly from the BANNER OF ISRAEL (by kind permission of the proprietor)—viz., Professor Piazzi Smyth, the Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A., Charles Horner, Esq., and Major H. A. Tracey, R.A. Being a pamphlet by five authors (a Pyramid number).

Opinion of Mr. Charles Horner, regarding the above work, after perusal of the same:—"I think your design of the Pyramid pamphlet excellent. I know well that it is a book urgently needed, since, under God's blessing, it will, I feel convinced, convert many to Christ. Your part (Philo-Israel's) I deem unexceptionable. It is both terse and understandable to the many, which is the great object you have had in view. I should like to see thousands circulated amongst our intelligent artisans, and hope God will raise some to do this."—C. HORNER. Dec. 12, 1878.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

Second edition, sixth thousand.
Fancy paper covers, 6d.; cloth, gilt lettered, flush, 1s.

THE HISTORY OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL: How They Were Lost, and How They Were Found. Told for the children. By PHILO-ISRAEL. Adapted for use by parents, Sunday School and other teachers, with questions on the chapters added.

For favourable notices of this work by Professor Piazzi Smyth, John T. Gott, Esq., and others, see handbills. W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

"The History of the House of Israel—told for the children—is a very valuable addition to our children's libraries. It gives a clear account of all the chief points of interest, in language suited to the comprehension of children, and ought to be in the hands of every mother and teacher who believes in our Identity with Israel. It supplies a want I have long felt as the mother of a large family."

ARE THE ENGLISH PEOPLE THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL? By PHILO-ISRAEL Price 4d.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

Price 6d.; or with illustrative map, 8d.

BRITAIN (OR ISRAEL) THE FIFTH AND LAST, AND THE UNCONQUERABLE EMPIRE. By JOHN GILDER SHAW.

Price 3d.; post free, 3½d.

CHRONOLOGICAL CHART OF BRITISH VICTORIES OVER THE CONTINENTAL POWERS, ranging from the battle of Cressy (1346), to our last victory, the taking of Sebastopol, Sept. 8, 1855. Arranged by J. G. SHAW, of Leeds.

"We trust Mr. Shaw's labour in preparing this paper may be appreciated by the public and be largely sold."—Banner of Israel.

Shortly will be published, price 6d.

RESULTS OF ISRAEL'S OBEDIENCE. A review of the successive steps which have led to the present condition of Britain (or Israel), the Fifth and Last Empire.

London: Published by Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; and may be had of the Author, 20 Park-row, Leeds, and of all booksellers.

ORDNANCE SURVEY OF THE HOLY LAND. The undersigned having been appointed Agents at Bristol for the sale of the MAPS, PLANS, PHOTOGRAPHS, and other PUBLICATIONS connected with the SURVEY OF JERUSALEM, SINAI, &c., beg to notify that the same can be obtained of them.

The Maps and other Publications connected with the Ordnance Survey of the United Kingdom can also be obtained of them. Prices and Catalogues supplied on application. P. MUNRO & SON, Surveyors, &c., Bank chambers, Corn-street, Bristol.

Now Ready. Price 6d.

COMMON SENSE AND THE CRISIS. The Way Out of all the National Difficulties, and the Right Course to Pursue under the very Trying Circumstances, clearly shown through the Identification of the Lost Tribes of the House of Israel with the British Nation. By C. W. E.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.
Norwich: Philip Soman, Argus Office.

Now ready, price One penny, post free 1½d. One dozen copies, post free 1s. 100 copies 6s., post free 7s.

THE IDENTITY OF THE BRITISH NATION WITH THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. THE CLUE TO THE EASTERN QUESTION. By C. W. E.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed:—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, 6, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 19, 1879.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. III. No. 113. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 26, 1879. [ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
The First Lord of the Admiralty, Mr. W. H. Smith, on the Zulu Disaster, on the Distress, and on the Future Prospects of Israel	85
From Assyria to Britain: A Bird's-eye View of Hebrew History. Part I. By William Burnett Coates	86
The Vicar of St. Barnabas, Hull, on "England's Divine Mission." Part IV.	87
Israel—the Head and Not the Tail, Above Only and Not Beneath—in Machinery	88
The Acquisition of Jacob's Stone. By Rev. A. B. Grimaldi, M.A.	89
Britannia Rules the Waves	90
Israel Keepeth Sabbath	90
Review	91
Correspondence	91

THE FIRST LORD OF THE ADMIRALTY, MR. W. H. SMITH, ON THE ZULU DISASTER, ON THE DISTRESS, AND ON THE FUTURE PROSPECTS OF ISRAEL.

IN the great gloom which has settled down on our suffering nation at the present moment (February 12th, 1879), it is a satisfaction to read the noble speech, full of hope and comfort, just delivered by Mr. W. H. Smith, when addressing his constituents on the 11th of February, at the Westminster Palace Hotel, on the all-absorbing theme of the Zulu massacre. He told his hearers, and the country, that no sooner had the disaster on the banks of the Tugela been reported in England, than the Government had taken instant measures to send reinforcements to Lord Chelmsford, so as to put an end to the miserable struggle with the Zulu savage, who has dared to trample on the British lion. The editor of the Times, in his issue of the 12th of February, has some well-merited words of bitter censure directed against the South African colonists. He says:—

Possibly the shock of the British defeat may be felt even in the Cape Colony, and may rouse the colonial population from their selfish and short-sighted apathy. If the Connaught Rangers had not been occupied with keeping the Queen's peace in Caffraria, that famous regiment might have strengthened Lord Chelmsford's army, and the colonists of the Cape might have been left to bear for themselves the burden which, even in their neighbours' extremity, they will not touch with one of their fingers.

"The colonists of Africa," he adds, "must make up their minds to accept their reasonable share of responsibilities, which at present they seem determined to cast altogether upon the weary and heavy-laden mother country." The question of the confederation of the South African Colonies is thus the one which our God has forced upon the nation by this unparalleled chastisement at the present time. It demands instant attention, and instant adoption! Confederation would enable a united South African nation to defy Cetywayo, and all his savage warriors; and the sooner the British Government and nation intimate to the colonists, after the present contest has been brought to a successful issue, that military aid no longer will be given to put down the native races, the sooner shall we see a great Israelite nationality organised at the Cape, and native wars will then be things of the past.

We are happy to see from Mr. Smith's speech that he takes a hopeful view of the present grievous distress among the people of this land. Admitting its incidence in an aggravated form in many directions, he points out that the distress is not universal. All through the period of depression the people have been saving their money, and adding to their stores in the Government Savings Banks. On this subject he said:—

If there was universal distress, there would be some disposition to avoid putting money in the savings-banks. People would be withdrawing their money from the savings-banks. I wrote to my friend at the savings-bank and asked him to give me a statement of figures and found this: that on the 11th of January, 1877, the deposits in the savings-banks were £70,963,555; in January, 1878, £73,534,000—that is to say in the year 1878 an additional £2,600,000 had been deposited in the savings-banks. Well, on January 11, 1879, after a year of very great depression, the working classes had managed to increase these deposits by £1,300,000—that is to say, the deposits which were in 1878 £73,534,000, were in January, 1879, £74,837,000. I think that is a very significant fact. It shows that after all, though there is great distress, there is also a considerable amount of what I call local wealth. Seventy-four millions represent the savings of the working classes. The increase of £1,300,000 represents the amount which they could afford to put by after having spent all that was necessary for their own comfort, after having withdrawn all that was necessary to keep them alive. That was going on this year since the 11th of January in a very remarkable manner. I have tables from the Post Office which form only a portion of these figures, showing that on the 18th of January the deposits were £266,000 for the week against withdrawals of £178,000, being a balance in favour of an increase of deposits of upwards of £88,000. On the 25th of January the deposits were £276,000 against withdrawals £174,000; so that the difference in favour of deposits was £93,000; and on the first of February the deposits were £312,000 against £136,000 withdrawals, so that the deposits were more than double the amount of the withdrawals. (Cheers.) Now, I think that fact should show you that, after all, although there is distress, there are some people who are not very much distressed. There is a very considerable number of persons who are fairly well off in this country, belonging to the working classes, and the times are not universally so bad as they are said to be.

Digitized by Google

These are words of comfort and encouragement to distressed, troubled, and sorrowing Israel. The disaster in Zululand will, God helping us, be put down. The savage Zulu king will pay dearly for his daring, and peace will be restored. The distress at home will in time pass off, and joyous days of such prosperity, as God alone can prepare for His people, are certain soon to follow. Mr. Smith speaks in a tone of confidence of the future of his race. He declares :—

The people of this country are desirous that this country should become again a great Power in Europe as it had been heretofore. England is not an aggressive Power ; England is not an offensive Power, nor one desirous of lording it over its equals, much less over its inferiors. It is a Power conscious of the great responsibilities which the name of England inspires, and conscious of the duties which she owes to the world, and desirous of discharging them. (Cheers.)

These are proud words, and worthy of a people who are the Israel of God. The Lord is indeed just now "roaring like a lion" (Hosea xi. 10); and hearing the dreadful sound, poor "Ephraim" is "trembling from the West!" God is correcting His people in measure, and not leaving them "altogether unpunished" (Jer. xxx. 11). But the lesson they must learn in these terrible events is to repent them of their sins, to forsake them, to trust Him even though He slay them ; for He has said in reference to all this complication of trials now poured upon this nation, "Fear not, O Jacob, My servant, and thou Jeshurun, whom I have chosen;" "They shall surely gather together, but not by Me: whosoever shall gather together against thee (be he Afghan or Zulu), shall fall for thy sake" (Isa. xliv. 2, liv. 15). Reader, let all these thoughts sustain your faith. There is no hope for us save in our Identity with Israel. If we be Gentiles, then we are in hapless case indeed, for the Zulu trouble and the other distresses we are undergoing, would then prove to be only "the beginning of the sorrows" (Matt. xxiv. 8), the first sprinklings only of "the indignation," of "all the fierce anger," and "of the fire of the jealousy" ready to be poured out as God's "determination" on the Gentile nations (Zeph. iii. 8). But, blessed be God, we know who we are; and that ere long the loving hand of our Jehovah-Jesus, who is leading our nation through these thorny paths, will bring us into the glorious times when He will lift up the standard against the enemy's inroads, and say to us those glorious, gracious words, "Arise! shine, for thy light has come ; and the glory of the LORD is risen upon thee!" (Isa. lx. 1).

FROM ASSYRIA TO BRITAIN.

A BIRD'S-EYE VIEW OF HEBREW HISTORY.

By WILLIAM BURNETT COATES, HOME OFFICE, C.D.

PART I.

AT the outset of this paper I am haply warned by a Scotch proverb that "It is a far cry to Loch Awe," and that Celto-Israel legend reminds me that the cry from Assyria's outlying provinces of ages ago, to the heart of the great Hebrew-built British Empire of to-day, is somewhat farther off. But, as it is to-day, so it was in the days of our nomad fathers, perhaps, mere "distance only lent enchantment" to their marvellous march.

It will, I trust, be seen in the course of my bird's-eye view, that there was no difficulty, charged with dangers so deterrent, as to prevent the home-squelched Hebrews from gradually budding and blossoming into the unique British Empire as it is A.D. 1879 ; although many a weary mile, much battle-toil, and stress of strife beset the rugged route on which, perforce, by some inmate instinct, or combined circumstances, they were compelled to enter. "Instinct," we may call it; but rightly and reverently spoken, it was, in truth, the guiding and good hand of the God who led their fathers through the desert, that placed them on the track to the islands of the West, where, as yet, they are only known "by another name," which the mouth of the Holy One did name in after days at Antioch (see "Heir of the World," p. 19, Introduction).

Distance will not be found so difficult upon examination as the scope that is needed to add anything, or, at least, much that is new, save in a kaleidoscopic point of view, to the vast amount of knowledge adduced, and its able application by Philo-Israel and his diligent co-labourers. Yet, even lacking scope and novelty, there is encouragement to proceed. We should not, I fear, be true Israelites after the fathers' type if we did not need the continual urging of "Line upon line, line upon line, precept upon precept, precept upon precept ; here a little and there a little." Comforting myself with this fairly-assumed consideration, and premising that we are "Chips off the old block," I now invite the reader to a pleasure trip, distant enough and interesting enough, too, to awake the spring-instinctive energies of a "Cook & Son."

The first glimpse I can catch of certain "nomad Tribes," known as Cimmerii, or Cimmerians, in very distant ages, is given at p. 130 in "The History of Assyria from the Monuments," by Mr. George Smith, as an unsettled people who hovered, or, perhaps, oscillated from border to border of the Assyrian Empire and the Scythian Kingdom, and who are stated by the historian (tempus Esarhaddon) to have crossed the Caucasus, and to have been powerful and bold enough to attract the serious attention of the warlike Assyrian monarch. His military instinct discovered in this unsettled people—predatory it may be—the germs of danger to his ill-consolidated empire—only held together, as it was in all times of its history, by the determination and warlike proclivities of its reigning despot. Whoever reigned, there must have been, to preserve his throne, a warrior of no mean reputation.

The restless migrations of those formidable and bravely-reckless wanderers, proceeding due Southward from the Caucasus, entered Asia Minor and Armenia about B.C. 680 to 670, which they occupied for some time. A band of this people —perhaps an advanced guard or body—proceeded as far as the land of Hupuskia, led by a chief named Teuspa. This band was now trenching on the Assyrian realm proper, whether with a view to continue their route Southward in front of their main body, or to settle there—which, doubtless, Esarhaddon feared—history declines to say. However, Esarhaddon advanced against them. He defeated them, and slew Teuspa their chief, when they turned towards the West and overran part of Western Asia Minor.

Although this division of the Cimmerians is called by the writer quoted "a band," their numbers must have been formidable enough to gender uneasiness in the mind of an Assyrian Emperor ; and even, after defeat by his renowned legions, they must have been powerful indeed to be in a position to overrun another part of Asia Minor, which they did successfully.

In the reign of Cyrus of Persia, B.C. 560, in his history of Persia, Mr. W. S. W. Vaux, M.A., F.R.S., gives us a flying glimpse of the Cimmerians ; of whom he says, at p. 20, that, "owing to the invasion and ultimate repression of a horde of Cimmerian nomads from the North, a war of considerable dimensions had taken place a few years before between Asia Minor and Media." This is but a casual mention of the Cimmerians by the Persian historian ; but we may, I think, fairly infer that the people of our bird's-eye view were, on the occasion of the war spoken of, detaching themselves as the first "hordes" alluded to had done, from the "cities of the Medes and Persians."

At p. 36, Ibid, reference is again made to this circumstance in the reign of Darius, B.C. 531. Speaking of his expedition against Thrace, the author says, "Besides this we may fairly suppose that Darius had clearly in his memory the Cimmerian inroad of a century before." This was written with regard to an expedition to Scythia, "as far North," Professor Rawlinson thinks, "as the fiftieth parallel." Thus we may very fairly conclude that those Cimmerians were a multitudinous and warlike floating population then, and that they had surely broken away from some place or other, to carve out a home upon the world's surface for themselves. Certain it is they were numerous, warlike, and adventuresome, and must have had a beginning, a rapid rise, and a culmination in might somewhere.

Digitized by Google

Writers in reference to ancient history must account for peoples to whom they refer and whom they cannot trace; they act pretty much in the same way that puzzled philologists do, whose difficulties drive them into the Turanian or Arian fogs for a refuge; they rush into "the Asiatic hordes," and hide their heads in a cloud of Asiatic dust to escape the task of the tangled skein of pedigree. Still, with the approaching day, light seems to steal on apace, as gradually glides the dawn into noon, and the sifting of an obscure past begins to present us with sparklets from the explorations of its developing mines, to be fully revealed in the splendour of the morning at hand—"the night is far spent."

There is a remarkable confirmatory paragraph at p. 150, Idem, of the foregoing notice of the historian's refuge, and which is worth reproducing here as a coupling between the Cimmerians and the Scythians, with whom the former are so mixed up by writers as to cause much doubt as to whether the Cimmerians were Scyths or the Scyths Cimmerians. It runs thus:—"The Scythians, who had previously been in some measure allied to the Parthians (at least so far as their wandering habits permitted), were a portion of the great nomad hordes of Central Asia, who, like the Cimmerians to whom we have alluded before historic times and often since, have swept down," &c. To quote what can be known only from history and call it prehistoric, is certainly as strange as the Asiatic horde refuge so much in vogue with our historians; yet the remark can only have proceeded from historical knowledge, written or unwritten, and gives support to what, perhaps, I shall have to notice as this paper extends—namely, the early connection of Scyth and Cimmerii.

We left our friends fighting a mazy way throughout the regions of Asia Minor, somewhat after the fashion of their collateral cousins the Ishmaelites, "their hand against every man, and every man's hand against them." In the early part of the fifth century B.C., we saw them hovering on the confines of the Scythian Kingdom and the Assyrian Empire in the reign of Esarhaddon; 100 years after, when the Assyrian Empire declined and the Persian Empire was uprising, we again see them looming on the horizon as threatening shadows upon the path of Darius the Mede who ruled in Persia, and who must have known that these people were the revolted descendants of a captive race.

But to leave the shadow for the substance, I turn to see what became of the section of the Cimmerians who shaped their course to the West of Asia Minor when defeated by Esarhaddon. "In the S.W. of Asia Minor," says the quoted Assyrian historian, p. 146—148, "Gyges, king of Lydia (671-8 B.C.), was successful in war against the Cimmerians, and sent two of their chiefs as a present to Assur-banipal, son and successor to Esarhaddon." Shortly afterwards the vigorous Cimmerians began to spread over the highlands above Assyria, and in process of time attacked, and having slain, Gyges in battle, overran Lydia, possessing themselves of it, excepting the citadel of Sardes the capital. Some time later Ardys, the son of Gyges, expelled them from Lydia. Beeton, in his "Dictionary of Information," sets this date 610 B.C., when he intimates that "they, the Cimmerians, disappear from history;" yet, curiously enough, in B.C. 109, he introduces them as confederate with the Teutons in a war against the Romans; and, again, engaged single-handed in a similarly serious pastime in Italy with the home forces of Rome. Finally, he defines them as "a barbarous people of the East of Europe," who for a time inhabited the neighbourhood of the Sea of Azoff, and "from whom, perhaps, the Crimea takes its name." "Driven out of Asia by the Scythians, they spread themselves along the East coast of the Black Sea, and then turned to the West and South-west."

In another paragraph, under the head of "Cimbri, a Teuton race" (?), it is stated they originally inhabited Jutland and a part of Denmark, and to have belonged to the same family of the Cimmerians of the Greeks and the Cymri of the Gauls. In all this confusion there seems to be very decided evidence that the Cimmerians we saw oscillating upon the confines of the Assyrian possessions and the Scythian Kingdom in 630 or so B.C., in Lydia 521 B.C., in the Roman provinces 109 B.C., and in Italy 102 B.C., are the Cimbri and Cymiri of the Gauls; that they are but component parts of a mighty human stream in its savage grandeur, dividing, subdividing, and still cutting its way through centuries, countries, peoples, difficulties, and opposing forces, to find a reservoir for its vast and increasing volume in the North-western isles, from whence, by a sort of prophetic instinct ingrained in its organisation, it could spread its huge arms, like a monster octopus, over the world's shores to gather to itself "the riches of the Gentiles;" ay, and in after days, to issue its accumulated living torrents with precious seed to make the desolate places glow with bloom and beauty.

(To be continued.)

THE VICAR OF ST. BARNABAS, HULL, ON "ENGLAND'S DIVINE MISSION."

(Continued from page 81.)

PART IV.

We now proceed to our second point:—

II.—England's Duty.

Our Lord, in conferring the glorious privilege of being the chosen nation, connects it with a solemn duty—viz., "bringing forth the fruits thereof."

This is England's duty, to bring forth the fruits of the kingdom of God.

Israel of old had mighty privileges—but privileges even in social life entail responsibilities. Israel had a mission to fulfil. Israel had in all her ways to declare the truth of God. Israel was a prophet of light and judgment, of comfort and proscription, of the burnings of love and wrath, everywhere the witness of the fulfilment of the Divine Word. In social life, in their festive gatherings, in their daily vocation, in peace and in war, Israel had to magnify the name of Jehovah. Church and State alike had to testify their allegiance to the Divine command.

But Israel failed in its duty. When elevated to the pinnacle of earthly grandeur and prosperity, Israel neglected his mission, forgot his calling; "But Jeshurun waxed fat, and kicked . . . . then he forsook God which made him, and lightly esteemed the Rock of his salvation" (Deut. xxxii. 15).

How solemn and pathetic is God's plea with Israel! How brief is the summing up of their neglect of duty! "Ye have profaned My name among the Gentiles" (Mal. i. 12).

God placed His light in their midst, but when they refused to walk in it, He removed their candlestick, and the people who were once honoured and feared became a proverb and a byword. Oh, how solemn a warning is this to England!

Ought not every individual Christian believer in this happy Island—this modern Israel—to feel it an honour to have the sacred treasure of God's Word entrusted to him whereby he may become an instrument of declaring God's name? Ought not every English Christian to look with pride on England's numerous societies and associations for the propagation of the blessed Gospel of Christ?

Digitized by Google

The splendour of England's crown does not consist in the number or value of the jewels of which it is composed, but the glory of England's crown consists of the thousands and tens of thousands of spires and towers where, by her wealth and instrumentality, she has planted the cross of Christ, the sign of death in victory. That glorious crown no one can snatch from her. The glory of England's sceptre does not consist merely in its sway over numerous tribes and various climes, but that she owns her allegiance to Him whose kingdom is everlasting, and "whose sceptre is a sceptre of righteousness." England's strength is not in her army and navy, however gallant, and noble, and loyal; but in her God and in His Word—and every league, every association which assails the bulwark of her strength—viz., England's Divine mission—is a traitor to her happiness, a disturber of her peace—he who puts any obstruction in the way of modern Israel in her duty, seeks but to undermine her strength, to weaken her prestige, and to poison the very source from whence all her life-spring and happiness flows.

And now we come to the third point of our subject:—

III.—England's Opportunities.

Israel's opportunities were immense. They had the light of God whilst nations around them groped in darkness. To them the Saviour made His first appeal. In their midst the sanctuary of Jehovah was planted, and to their custody His oracles were committed; but what is Israel now? A vessel of wrath hardened and burned in the furnace of affliction. How solemn is the contemplation of their lost opportunities, and how awful is the sound of the apostle's warning to England: "If God spared not the natural branches, take heed lest He also spare not thee" (Rom. xi. 21).

England's opportunities, however many and great they were in times past, God has in a marvellous way increased them of late. God has opened for England a new door of usefulness. The East, in which England's great and final prerogative centres, has been brought under her sway as by a magic wand. The recent acquisition of the Island of Cyprus may appear to many insignificant, but to the Christian who values his privileges, and who can discern in it the most wonderful signs of the times, that acquisition is a testimony that "the time to favour Zion" is at hand—that it is the prelude of a great movement in which England is to take a prominent part, in accordance with the declaration of God in our text, "They shall bring the present of a remnant of God's people to Him."

It will repay the lover of God's Word to read all the Scripture tells us of Cyprus (Cyprus as Chittim, see Note D in Part V.)—the ancient Chittim of the Old Testament. Cyprus is not an unknown place in the history of Christianity; it has furnished some prominent personages for the mission field in the first century.

Brethren, it is not by the human wisdom or ability of our rulers or statesmen, but by virtue of the fulfilment of the Divine Word that England has her Mizpah, or watchtower, fixed in the East. She has to guard her Eastern borders in order to be able to do the glorious work allotted to her. She has been put in possession of a sacred trust, not by the power or wisdom of man, but by Him "who hath put down the mighty from their seat, and hath exalted the humble and meek" (Luke i. 52). England's power in the East must and will increase. Neither Russian intrigue, nor French jealousy, nor Austrian strategy can arrest England in the acquisition of Eastern power, if England remains but faithful and mindful of her Divine mission.

Brethren, it is impossible to attach too much importance to the fulfilment of such prophecies as we have considered this evening.

We are passing through a crisis of events which the most striking circumstances, and the most stirring signs of the times concur to increase.

And does not the aspect of the political horizon of Europe forebode great changes?

The times we live in are such that no thoughtful believer in God's Word, yea, more, even the thoughtful worldling, can deny their portent of a future, to which each day, as it were, seems to minister an age. A great inquiry seems to agitate the mind of both Jew and Gentile, and stirs the hearts of many in high quarters, as to what will be the final issue of all the revolutionary movements and complications which are now taking place, while at the same time, the opposite principles of Faith and Infidelity, Superstition and Science, combine to multiply daily changes in our moral and social life.

The disciple of Christ alone is able to comprehend the issue of all this, if, in singleness of heart, he examines and ponders over the prophetic words of his Lord and Master.

Let us, therefore, combine to pray for this beloved Island, that she may value her position.

It is not solely for her commercial interests that she has acquired so much power, and has to protect her Eastern position, but for the Divine purpose of carrying the Word of Life and Glory to that territory, which by her instrumentality is to become the centre of resuscitation of light.

Let us also pray for our rulers, and all in authority, that they may be mindful of the great future marked out for England, and may God grant that rulers and people alike may value England's position in the Divine plan, and that we may do our duty and use all our glorious opportunities to make the name of England identical with Christ's glory, and His kingdom on earth, and thus fulfil the requirement of the prophecy of our text:—

"The kingdom shall be given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof." Amen.

(To be continued.)

ISRAEL—THE HEAD AND NOT THE TAIL, ABOVE ONLY AND NOT BENEATH—IN MACHINERY.

Mr. Robert Charles Ransome and the Paris Exhibition.

(From the East Anglian Daily Times, Nov. 30, 1878.)

It will be a source of extreme gratification to all our readers, as it certainly is to us, to hear that Messrs. Ransomes, Sims, and Head have received a reward which the high merit of the articles which are manufactured, on such an enormous scale, at the Orwell Works, Ipswich, has long deserved. The collection of machinery sent to the Universal Exhibition at Paris this year was a credit to England, supreme as she is in the engineer's art, and the exhibit earned for the firm at the hands of the jurors three gold medals, one silver medal, and one bronze medal. Not only did the International Jury thus acknowledge the deserts of the firm, but Marshal MacMahon has selected Mr. Robert Charles Ransome as worthy of special honour in connection with the Exhibition, and has conferred on him the Cross of Chevalier of the Legion of Honour. It was accompanied by a letter from M. Waddington, of which the following is a translation:—

Ministry of Foreign Affairs.
(Protocol.)

Paris, October 21, 1878.

Sir,—I have the honour to inform you that M. the Marshal, President of the Republic, having appreciated the merit of the works which you have sent to the Universal Exhibition, has desired, on my suggestion, and on the recommendation of my colleague, M. the Minister of Agriculture and Commerce, to give you a particular evidence of his good-will by conferring on you the Cross of Chevalier of the National Order of the Legion of Honour. I hasten to send you the insignia which are prepared for you, and I shall be careful to send you shortly the diploma of the Order.

Receive, sir, the assurance of my most distinguished consideration.

The Minister of Foreign Affairs,
(Signed) Waddington.

Mr. Charles Ransome, Exhibitor, Class 51.

Digitized by Google

THE ACQUISITION OF JACOB'S STONE.

By the Rev. A. B. Grimaldi, M.A.

If we look upon Jacob's Stone, now so securely resting in Westminster Abbey, as "the primeval link which binds together the past and present of this mighty Empire," and which foreshadows its still greater future, it becomes a matter of some moment to ascertain the character of those who were instrumental in the obtaining and retaining of it for us.

This is important, because the worthiness of the instrument employed is an additional though indirect evidence of the truth of its pretensions to be the very pillar of witness of our father Israel. The life and character of the holy patriarch Jacob, who obtained the Stone in Palestine, are well known, and fully portrayed in Holy Writ (Gen. xxviii., xxxv.).

The holiness of life and sanctity of character of the prophet Jeremiah, who (as Mr. Glover sets forth) brought the Stone to Ireland, is plainly manifested in Scripture (Jer. vii. 5). The custodian of the Stone in its next resting-place in Iona's sacred isle, was no other than the sainted Columba, one of the great instruments for the bringing back Israel from its Lo-ammi, cast off, heathen state, to the full consolation of Israel under the new, the better covenant, the Christian dispensation. All the accounts we have of Columba shew him to have been a great student of Scripture, an eloquent preacher, a successful evangelist, and a man of deep personal piety.

Such, then, were the characters of those who were the obtainers or introducers of Jacob's Stone respectively into Palestine, Ireland, and Scotland—worthy instruments, indeed, for such a purpose. We now come to notice its last journey—viz., from Scotland to England. Was he who obtained for us the pillar of witness, a fit instrument for such work? Was he worthy to be associated with his forerunners in the removal and placing of the Stone? We answer unhesitatingly, that he was so worthy. As his character, however, has long and often been grievously misrepresented (for party purposes), and is by most quite misunderstood even now, it will be well to inquire more minutely into it.

Edward I. brought Jacob's Stone from Scotland to England. He removed it from Scone Abbey to Westminster Abbey, where it has since remained. Thoroughly to realise his character, it will be best to notice it first in its private, and second in its public, capacity. (See "The Greatest of the Plantagenets.")

Edward I. was born in 1239, ascended the throne in 1272, removed the Stone in 1296, and died in 1307. He was named after the pious Edward the Confessor, one of the best and wisest of the Saxon kings. Edward was associated intimately with Westminster by the most important events in his life, in whose glorious fane he was afterwards to enshrine the jewel of his kingdom. He was the first Sovereign born at Westminster, in the Abbey of which he was crowned, 1274. He was the first English Sovereign born in Westminster Palace, at that time standing between the river and the Abbey.

It was in Westminster-hall that Baliol pleaded in 1293 before Edward, and in consequence of his breaking his oath and fealty, Edward obtained Scotland.

It was in Rufus' great hall at Westminster, likewise, that Wallace, after committing fearful cruelties and wholesale slaughter of defenceless people, was arraigned by Edward's order; and, after an impartial trial, justly condemned as a robber, murderer, and traitor, to suffer death, which, at Westminster, he underwent.

Edward I., in his private and personal character, was one of the most remarkable instances of piety united to royalty. As a son, his love and respect for his father were remarkable, and this was fully reciprocated by Henry III. A loving, true, and most affectionate husband, he lived in unbroken harmony with his royal spouse, Eleanor, for eighteen years, and, at her deeply-lamented death, bestowed on her remains most unusual honours, erecting twelve highly-wrought stone crosses where the cortege rested in conveying her body to Westminster Abbey. Though naturally of a high mettled temper and imperious soul, no one could be more easily or quickly appeased, and the first show of submission on the offender's part was sufficient to obtain his pardon, grace, and favour.

His clemency as a Sovereign was equally remarkable as his kindness of heart and generosity of spirit as a man. During the first thirty years of his reign, there were actually but three political executions. David, of Wales, who had betrayed his brother Llewellyn, his country, and Edward; Wallace, of Scotland, who for two years had pillaged and murdered hundreds of helpless men, women, and children in England; and Turbeville, an English traitor in the French pay.

One of Edward's noblest characteristics was his unflinching integrity; his word was his bond, in the most literal sense; his most often quoted motto, Pactum serva, was his unfailing rule, and, often to his own disadvantage, from early years, this rule, Keep your covenant, was ever present in his heart, and on it he acted to the last, ordering it to be placed on his tomb, whereon we may now read in Westminster Abbey, Pactum serva, a reminder of his unvarying truthfulness and honesty. Full evidence remains of his piety, generosity, humanity, and charity, while his personal economy, frugality, and sobriety of life was well contrasted with his regal munificence when discharging the high functions of his exalted office.

Edward early shewed his personal valour and utter fearlessness at the battle of Lewis, when he defeated the Barons—a quality which he retained to the last, to the terror of all his foes. His far higher mental and moral qualities made him the very soul of honour whose shield was of unblemished purity, so that all Europe readily acknowledged him as the very prince of chivalry, and the acme of knightly glory in Christendom. But these noble qualities of person, mind, and heart, were far outstripped by others of much rarer quality and far higher range.

As a great historian remarks, Edward I. had a "legislative mind." His knowledge and understanding of his country's laws, of England's wants, and of the best legislative remedies to be applied, was both comprehensive and profound, and, indeed, excites continual astonishment by its depth of penetration, grasp of details, and ability to put into practical form the exact remedy suited to each want. Well has he earned the title of the English Justinian. Edward's political sagacity, wisdom, and love of justice, were as conspicuous as his legislative ability. The high character of his ability as a general, and his engineering capacity, were fully shewn in his various successful wars in Scotland, France, and Wales.

Such, in brief, was the character of Edward I. He may be ranked as the greatest of English Sovereigns. As he brought Jacob's Stone to what was destined to be the capital of the British Empire, so he was ambitious of being the benefactor of the whole island.

The great object of his life and reign was to accomplish what his prescient genius saw absolutely necessary to the solidarity and lasting grandeur of the (then future) British Empire. This was the consolidation into one compact kingdom of England, Scotland, Ireland, and Wales. This great work, however, was not destined to be accomplished until David's heir had followed Jacob's Stone from Scotland to England, and was then—viz., in 1603.

The character of this reign was as remarkable as that of its Sovereign. Under Edward, the English people commenced their real national existence, no longer Saxon, Norman, or Dane. For the first time appeared the English Constitution as we have it now. The House of Commons dates its rise from 1275, when the first English Parliament of bishops, earls, barons, knights, and burgesses, met unitedly for legislation.

The common law rose to a science; the English language sprang into existence; the statute of Westminster (a code more than an act); the statutes of Gloucester, 1278; the charter of liberties, and the charter of forests, all acts of the most beneficial nature, were passed in this reign. A still more remarkable one was the statute of Mortmain, by which "dying hands" could no longer will away the land of the kingdom to support dissolute monks and nuns, or to build cathedrals and churches, as huge as they were useless. Such was some of the work performed in England under the guidance of the greatest king that had appeared since Alfred the Great; and, like the earlier legislator and warrior, he acquired from his contemporaries the same title, and was known as Edward the Great. Thus did he prove himself worthy to remove the Stone of Israel from its long resting place to its next and last, till it returns in triumph to the land whence it came, worthy of being the last of the remarkable line of great and good who were appointed guardians of the Stone of destiny, which included such names as Jacob, B.C. 1705; Moses, 1490; Joshua, 1450; David, 1050; Jeremiah, 588; Columba, A.D. 590; Kenneth, 780; and lastly, Edward I. 1296.

Digitized by Google

BRITANNIA RULES THE WAVES!

In the Evening Standard of the 13th of August, 1878, we noticed the following morçeau, which we marked down at the time as a fit quotation to appear in the Banner, in order thereon to hang a few reflections acceptable to our readers. Apropos of the naval inspection of her iron-clad fleet, by Her Majesty the Queen, at Spithead, which we all remember took place that day, the editor remarked:—

One of the baffled enemies of this country has been dramatically represented as asking, with fretful vexation, why, when the waters and the earth were originally divided, so large a space was allotted to the water. "It only provided for the predominance of England." One of the more candid courtiers of Napoleon the First, when impatiently questioned what was the real extent of the British Empire, replied, "The British Empire, your Majesty, extends wherever a frigate has water to swim." The answer is as true now as it was then. We have a good deal to say to what happens upon dry land. We could absolutely forbid anything to happen on sea, by man's doing at least, of which we disapproved. Fortunately, if we have a giant's strength on the ocean, we do not use it tyrannically. There is hardly any temptation to do so. We might safely defy any Power to name one single respect in which it is injured by our supremacy at sea; and there are few, if any, who could not be shown to be directly or indirectly benefitted by it. It has been said that we have annexed the ocean. But whose territory have we appropriated in doing so? The furrows of the sea are barren, and its countless ridges promise no one a harvest. It is a highway any one may traverse without tax or toll, and it needs no repairing. We are the great travellers by it; that is all. The main traffic is supplied by the energy and enterprise of Englishmen; and therefore we are, in a sense, its masters. But there is room on its broad bosom for an indefinite number of explorers as adventurous as ourselves. But in order to turn this open pathway to account a nation must possess two things. It must have wealth and it must have colonies. Perhaps we ought to add a third order of possession. It must have naval stations dotted about the world. Hence such places as Gibraltar, Malta, and now Cyprus. But these are points, so to speak, at which the great traveller baits. His bourne is England at one end, and almost every point of the world at the other.

It will be seen here that the Standard newspaper admits the possession by the British nation of several qualifications and advantages which clearly identify her with the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel. For he alleges—

1. That to Great Britain has been assigned the command of the ocean, or the dominion of the sea. But God's Word granted this to Israel (Psa. cvii. 23, lxxxix. 25; Isa. xlii. 10—12; Num. xxiv. 7; Deut. xxxiii. 13; Gen. xxii. 17—the Gates.)

2. That we have not only the ships to dominate the ocean, but we have the money or wealth to enable us to create and maintain our navies that do the work. And what is this but that great Israelite blessing entailed strictly on the Hebrew race, and never once even so much as named in God's Word as the perquisite of any Gentile nation—namely, "the power to get wealth," which the Lord gave Israel, in order "that He might establish His covenant that He sware unto their fathers, as it is this day?" (Deut. viii. 18).

3. And not only this, but the Standard avers that we have also those naval stations "dotted about the world" which he names (like Philo-Israel) in the usual Identity sequence—that is, as "Gibraltar, Malta, Cyprus," "where," he says, "the British traveller baits." But these points thus "dotted round the earth," Captain Colomb, R.N., as a scientific naval essayist, calls the "Gates" (see Banner, No. 78, p. 206); and God's Word, also calling them "the Gate of the enemies," promised them all to Israel, the seed of Abraham, His friend, nigh 4,000 years ago (Gen. xxii. 17).

Saying these remarkable things of the British nation, our readers see the Standard at once constituted itself a blind witness of the Identity of his fellow-countrymen with Lost Israel. He says, in the words of the popular song, of the British—

"We have got the men, we have got the ships,
We have the money too!"

Now God said of His people that the three great signs by which we should know them, in these last days, would be not only the multitudinous seed, but also the possession of abnormal wealth, of maritime supremacy, and of "the Gate" of our nation's enemies!

The whole of these signs are peculiar to the British, and therefore we say, and we say correctly, that reason, logic, Scripture, and common sense, all justify the conclusion that the British, who have the promised signs, must be the hidden race.

Reader, let these glorious truths cheer your spirits in the midst of the gloom which seems settling on the nations of the "earth," and of the whole world. These are the thoughts which, binding us to the faithfulness of our Lord Jehovah, must enable us nationally to lift up our heads and to rejoice amidst the wreck and destruction of empires, since they permit us to remember the promises of Him who told us not to fear, "for I am with thee. Be not dismayed! for I am thy God! I will strengthen thee; yea, I will help thee; yea, I will uphold thee with the right hand of My righteousness" (Isa. xli. 10).

ISRAEL KEEPETH SABBATH.

From the Times of August 14, 1878, we extract three letters proving that the British, her company of federated nations, and the United States of America as well, all being of Israelite origin, lately gave a noble lesson to the French at the Paris Exhibition. Mr. C. Hill, the Secretary of the Working Men's Lord's-day Rest Association, does not know why the representatives of the Anglo-Saxon races all keep holy the Sabbath day. But we can tell him. It is because, being Israel, God has put this sign on us by which He may know us and we Him (Exod. xxxi. 13; Ezek. xx. 20). Not being Israel, the French fail to keep Sabbath as Mr. Hill states, and our Sabbath-keeping ways, natural and proper to us, were matters for curious investigatian to the Gentiles gathered at that world's fair. We are glad to see the good example of Ephraim and Manasseh combined, have worked some good, and that Protestant Switzerland also ceased to work her engines on the Sunday, that Roman Catholic Belgium was inclined to follow the good example, and even French machines, it is said, were only partially at work on Israel's Sabbath-day of God-given rest. Our extracts are as follows:—

Sunday at the Paris Exhibition.

To the Editor of the "Times."

Sir,—One of the greatest evils under which the French nation exists is the absence of a weekly day of rest. Every kind of labour and every kind of amusement goes on seven days a week. A portion of the people get a half holiday on the Sunday; but few cease from labour on the whole of the Sunday. Many of their greatest men have deplored the ceaseless toil. It has, without doubt, injured the people from a national, physical, and moral point of view. The superior vigour and the greater physical strength and morality of the English are largely due to the quiet and religious observance of the Sunday. Therefore, the conduct of the English exhibitors at the Paris Exhibition in closing their stalls on Sundays is most important as setting the French nation an example which, if they would follow it, would be greatly to their interests.

Digitized by Google

We are known abroad as a Sunday-observing nation, and if our exhibitors opened their stalls on Sundays, and fell in with the Sunday customs of the "gay capital," we should justly merit the contempt and the sneers which such a breach of our Sunday observance principle would call forth.

Many Frenchmen would doubtless like our stalls to be all open on Sundays; but they will respect the religious character of the country which firmly adheres to a great and blessed principle.

I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

CHARLES HILL, Sec.

Working Men's Lord's-day Rest Association,
13, Bedford-row, W.C., Aug. 13, 1878.

SIR,—On the preceding Sunday I also observed that "unusual crowd" described by your correspondent "F." and their "wonder, curiosity, and delight" seemed to me concentrated in admiration of our observance of the Sabbath, when passing from the din of machinery in motion to the still, immoveable monsters in the English section. The only "drawback" was, to my mind, that our well-known educational placard close by—"Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy"—had not been translated into every tongue. If only as a day of rest "our kindly hosts" seem to envy us.

The Times of to-day contains on the same page a statement that our future king and his royal consort "are united in an earnest desire to promote any object tending to advance the happiness and prosperity of the community;" but deeds are above words, and we even in this remote district, rejoice that one who has seen so much of other "civilized nations in the world" as our royal president in Paris, should not find it necessary to lower our standard, or let pass by such an opportuniry of "giving a lesson in religion to the assembled thousands at the Champ-de-Mars."

I am, &c.,

East Ham, Essex, Aug. 13, 1878. J. W. D.

SIR,—"F." is incorrect in saying that England alone refused to allow her exhibitions to be seen on Sunday.

On Sunday last the whole of the machinery on the British side was at rest, not one engine being at work, and this was the case in the sections of the United States, the Canadas, Australia, and Switzerland. There is a growing disinclination to show the Belgian machinery, and it may be said that, as a rule, even the French machines are only partially at work.

Paris, Aug. 13, 1878. C. R.

Review.

Common Sense and the Crisis. By C. W. E. London: W. H. Guest. Price sixpence.

WE recommend this sensibly-written pamphlet to Identity and other readers. It deals first with the present critical state of European affairs; the rumours of wars, and preparations for a mighty conflict are then noticed; the unique position of Great Britain is pointed out; and, finally, the terrible crisis approaching is described. The Identity of the British with Lost Israel is thereupon introduced as a newly-discovered glorious fact, and the writer (who is clearly a full believer in our Identity) expatiates in glowing language on the splendid blessings in store for our nation. He concludes, using nervous vigorous words, which we should like to see adopted by some who seem almost ashamed to own their glorious origin, to the following effect:—"The Identity," he says, "is clearly and emphatically GOD'S WORK, and the whole tone or drift of it is—manly, godly, elevating, dignified, and of vigorous common sense." We thank C. W. E. for his inspiriting message to Israel, and wish him much success and many editions."

Correspondence.

A POSSIBILITY.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—Having regard to the very obscure nature of some of the prophecies, I venture to throw out the following interpretation of the prophecy concerning the latter days of Dan's career, which may account for his omission from the list of those who were ingrafted into the true Church at the period of Christian extension in the days of Constantine the Great, as symbolised in Rev. vii. The Hebrew runs: "Dan shall judge his people as the first of the sceptres of Israel. Dan is a serpent in the way, an adder in the path, which biteth the heels of the horse so that his rider falls"—which words, I believe, may possibly be thus shown as representative of historical events. Dan will become the supreme judge, as was once Judah the chief ruler. The sceptre shall depart from Judah at the Babylonish captivity, and return to him no more until Shiloh comes to reign; meanwhile a lawgiver shall conduct him through the latter end of his political career. Dan's ruler will be united to a tender branch of the House of David, and will gradually rise to the throne of all Israel, from which Judah has been rejected. Also, through subtlety and astute counsel, towards the latter end (the heels) of the Roman Pagan Empire, the descendants of Dan will molest and drive before them the Emperor of the world, and cause his dominion over them in their island home to cease. I lay myself open to criticism of every fair kind, and shall be glad to meet it with a desire to establish only the truth.

I am, yours faithfully,

Vicarage, Amberley, Stroud. HERBERT MARRIOTT.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—I received a letter this morning from Rome, in which my correspondent says:—"Yesterday I was talking to an ecclesiastic of high position, and he said his attention had lately been called to a subject very interesting to us English. A clever and holy priest had been led by his studies in the Hebrew and Greek Scriptures (which he is translating into Syriac and Chaldaic) to believe that the English are descendants of the Ten Tribes. I told him a great friend of ours, a layman, had for a long time held that idea, and had written several articles on the subject. My companion said he should be very greatly obliged and gratified if you would have the kindness to send him what you have written, as it was quite new to him, and he wished much to see what could be said about it. I do not think he had heard about the table of weights and measures of the Great Pyramid being similar to ours, but he told me what I do not remember seeing in your tracts—that the 14th of February is the day on which the Jews were delivered through the intercession of Queen Esther, and that the Jews had the custom of writing to each other on that day to congratulate each other, and he asked me what was the origin of our observing Valentine's day in that manner, as it had evidently no connection with St. Valentine Martyr. He regards it as a relic of the Jewish custom."

As bearing on the question of our Israelitish origin, I thought this extract would interest you, if not the readers of the BANNER OF ISRAEL.

Believe me, yours very truly,

PROTHEROE SMITH.

42, Park-street, Grosvenor-square, W.,
February 7, 1879.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

SIR,—I think you will be interested in the following short extract from a letter received from a friend in New Zealand:—

"The chief Rabbi here (Auckland) is a firm Anglo-Israelite, and has joined that association formed here."

The greatest interest is felt on the subject in New Zealand, especially by the young men.

I remain, yours truly,

E. L. S. J.

Churchill, near Bristol, Jan. 27, 1879.

DEAR MR. EDITOR,—May I ask you to insert the following Erratum:—

P. 7, line 26, for $\sqrt[2]{120^2 + 20^2}$ = &c., read $\sqrt[2]{120^2 + 10^2}$ = &c.

I am, yours obediently,

H. A. TRACEY, Major, R.A.

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements
(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O O payable at Ludgate-circus.

BOOKS, ETC.

Now ready price 7s., post free 6d. extra.

THE SECOND VOLUME OF THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.
EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

This volume contains a large number of articles on our Identity with Lost Israel, by the best and most learned writers on the subject. Also many interesting papers on the Great Pyramid by Professor Piazzi Smyth, F.R.S.E., Astronomer-Royal for Scotland, Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A., Major H. A. Tracey, R.A., Charles Horner, Esq., and others. London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row

Just Published, price 4d.

EPISCOPACY, NOT ESTABLISHMENT, THE BANE OF THE NATIONAL CHURCH.
BY A LAY MEMBER OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND.
W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row; and the Protestant Tract Society, 7, Buckingham-st., Strand.

SOME of PHILO-ISRAEL'S papers, as they have appeared in THE BANNER, will be separately published from time to time in the form of Letters, for distribution.
No. 1. "The Identity of the British with Lost Israel."
No. 2. "The Glory of God."
No. 3. "An Address to British Soldiers."
No. 4. "An Address to British Sailors." (In the Press).
Others will follow. Price One and Sixpence per 100; less quantities in proportion: postage extra.
Apply to R. Banks, 5 Racquet-court, Fleet-street. Also all Booksellers and Publishers.

Subscription 5s. a year, post paid. Payable in advance. Back numbers of the present volume can be supplied if desired.

OUR REST. A Periodical bearing on the Questions of Christ's Second Coming and the Preparation of the Church (Christ's Bride) for that event. In each number are discussed the Scientific and Religious Discoveries in the Great Pyramid of Egypt.
Orders for the above will be received by W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick Lane, E C; or by THOMAS WILSON, Publisher, 188, E. Monroe Street, Chicago, Ill., U.S.

Now ready, price 6d., post free 7d

THE ANSWER to the EASTERN QUESTION as shewn in the IDENTITY of the BRITISH with ISRAEL. By the Author of the "New Old Story."
"The author has well managed her topic; her style of writing is clear and vigorous and well calculated to do good service to the cause."—PIAZZI SMYTH.
London: S. W. Partridge & Co., 9, Paternoster-row.

"He that hath ears to hear, let him hear."
HEALTH, DIET, AND DEAFNESS.
NOISES IN THE EARS.

THE REV. E. J. SILVERTON will send his Health Advocate, giving important advice and particulars on the above subjects, free to any person, showing how Deafness may be at once relieved and ultimately cured. Many most interesting cases are set forth. Thousands of people are hearing Sermons and Lectures today who would have remained deaf had they not applied to Mr. Silverton. When a remedy is so successful, ought not every deaf person in the kingdom to try it, if it be in his or her power? It is a pleasing thing to a minister to make the deaf to hear, not only in a religious sense, but literally. Mr. Silverton may truly say to the deaf, "He that hath ears to hear, let him hear."
The Health Advocate also gives an account of several invaluable remedies which are producing the greatest possible good. The Medical Energiser is giving health to vast numbers. The Nutrient Food of Food is a splendid assistant to all kinds of medicine. The Great Lung Remedy is a marvellous Medicine for the cure of consumption, asthma, and all kinds of coughs. These, and other proved and tested Medicines which go under the title of "The Rev. E. J. Silverton's Ready Relief Remedies," may be ordered through any Chemist. London Wholesale Houses:—Sanger, Oxford-street; Barclay, Farringdon-street; Edwards, Queen Victoria-street; Thompson, New North-road; or of Rev. E. J. Silverton, Albert House, Park-street, Nottingham.

SERMONS WHICH HAVE REACHED THE MASSES, by REV. E. J. SILVERTON. Over 400 Pages Crown 8vo. Price 6s. Order of any Bookseller, or ALABASTER & PASSMORE, 4, Paternoster-buildings, London. The Sermons are quaint and humorous, containing many droll sayings and unusual illustrations. Must read them!! No one slept while they were delivered!! An Engraving of the Preacher's Place of Worship, Exeter Hall, Nottingham, will be found within. These Sermons are unlike all others. Sent post free from the Author.

MISCELLANEOUS.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

DOUBLE NUMBERS DURING 1879.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT.

Owing to the increasing interest taken in the Identity movement, it is found necessary to occasionally enlarge our space to make room for the important papers constantly reaching the Editor. It has, therefore, been determined to issue Twelve Double Numbers during 1879, for which Twopence will be charged. The first of these series of Double Numbers was issued the first week in January, and one on each succeeding first week in the month during the year.

	£	s.	d.
Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free	0	7	6
Two copies (including Double Numbers) ...	0	12	4
Three " " " " ...	0	18	8
Four " " " " ...	1	6	2
Six " " " " ...	1	17	4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-Grand, London, to W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

"BANNER OF ISRAEL" FREE CIRCULATION FUND.

The following are a few extracts from letters received, and will give some idea of the mode of distribution:

"I am very anxious to indoctrinate the 'Identity' amongst our Sunday Schools, and the Teachers are willing to listen to me on the subject. If I may venture to say so, I can circulate some hundreds.—E. T., Siddal, Halifax." [200 copies sent.]

"Anglo-Israel Association, Sheffield.

"I shall be glad to receive a parcel of 'Banners' for free circulation, to give away at our meetings.—G. W. S., Hon. Sec." [200 copies sent.]

"I venture to write and ask if you will kindly supply me with about 100. I am sorry that I am not in a position to pay for them, but seeing that a Free Circulation Fund has been opened, I shall only be too glad if I can render the cause any assistance by distributing to the best of my ability what you may send me.—J. F. W., Darnley, near Yorkshire." [150 copies sent.]

"DEAR SIR,—Many thanks for 50 'Banners' you sent me; you will be glad to hear that I had the opportunity of addressing a drawing-room meeting on the subject on Thursday, and in the evening of conducting a Bible reading on the same subject; we spent two hours over the subject, and those who were present at the both meetings want to hear something more about the glorious subject.—J. F. T., 8, Market-street, Torquay."

Mrs. T., South Hackney, received 50 copies for distribution amongst the members of a Wesleyan Bible Class, with which she was connected.

FUNDS URGENTLY NEEDED to carry on this work.

Communications to be addressed to the Secretary of the "Banner of Israel Free Circulation Fund," Mr. R. Fergusson Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-st., London, E.C., to whom all remittances for this object should also be made, but NOT to the Editor of the BANNER—Philo-Israel.

THE TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL FOUND AND IDENTIFIED IN THE BRITISH NATION.

EDWARD HINE

(The well-known writer on this subject) will deliver his POPULAR LECTURE In the following halls:—

1879.
February 25th, Myddelton Hall, Islington.
March 5th, New Cross Hall, Lewisham High-road.
" 11th, Hawkston Hall (Newman Hall's Church), Westminster Bridge-road.
" 25th, St. JAMES'S HALL, Regent-street.
Doors open at 7; Chair taken at 7.30.

Subscriptions will be thankfully received by MR. LOVELAND, Shoreham, Sevenoaks; MR. STEPHENSON, 123, Newgate-street, London. Funds are needed to defray the heavy expenses, as admission to all the Lectures is free.

NICE COUNTRY HOME for CHILDREN, ORPHANS, or others. Studies continued if desired; Music, French Or a Gentleman or Lady could be received. Moderate Terms. Address, care of Mrs. Hoult, Ryton Fields, Dorrington, Salop.

TO BE LET, BOURNEMOUTH. A well-furnished, comfortable house, on most reasonable terms, near church and sea.—Apply DUNCAN, Chemist, Lansdown.

WALTER KEAST'S Old Established BOOT AND SHOE WAREHOUSE, 102, KENNINGTON PARK ROAD, LONDON.

Gentlemen's Boots & Shoes for Winter and Summer, House and Garden, Walking, Riding, Rowing, Fishing, Shooting, &c.

Ladies' Boots and Shoes for Winter and Summer, Walking and Riding, House, Garden, or Dancing, &c., &c.

Children's Boots for School, Walking, Garden, or Sea-side. Slippers in great variety at moderate prices.
Schools and Public Institutions supplied at wholesale prices.
Note the address—WALTER KEAST, 102, Kennington-park-road, S.E.

BOOKS, ETC.

THE GREAT PYRAMID. NOW READY, PHILO-ISRAEL'S NEW WORK, 56 pages, Illustrated with Diagrams, price 4d., post free 5d.

AN ELEMENTARY DIGEST or SKETCH OF THE CHIEF FACTS and TEACHINGS of the GREAT PYRAMID of EGYPT; adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific. By PHILO-ISRAEL; together with Original Papers by the following leading Pyramidists, republished mostly from the BANNER OF ISRAEL (by kind permission of the proprietor)—viz., Professor Piazzi Smyth, the Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A., Charles Horner, Esq., and Major H. A. Tracey, R.A. Being a pamphlet by five authors (a Pyramid number).

Opinion of Mr. Charles Horner, regarding the above work, after perusal of the same:—"I think your design of the Pyramid pamphlet excellent. I know well that it is a book urgently needed, since, under God's blessing, it will, I feel convinced, convert many to Christ. Your part (Philo-Israel's) I deem unexceptionable. It is both terse and understandable to the many, which is the great object you have had in view. I should like to see thousands circulated amongst our intelligent artisans, and hope God will raise some to do this."—C. HORNER, Dec. 12, 1878.
London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

Second edition, sixth thousand.
Fancy paper covers, 6d.; cloth, gilt lettered, flush, 1s.

THE HISTORY OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL: How They Were Lost, and How They Were Found. Told for the children. By PHILO-ISRAEL. Adapted for use by parents, Sunday School and other teachers, with questions on the chapters added.
For favourable notices of this work by Professor Piazzi Smyth, John T. Gott, Esq., and others, see handbills. W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.
"The History of the House of Israel—told for the children—is a very valuable addition to our children's libraries. It gives a clear account of all the chief points of interest, in language suited to the comprehension of children, and ought to be in the hands of every mother and teacher who believes in our Identity with Israel. It supplies a want I have long felt as the mother of a large family."

ARE THE ENGLISH PEOPLE THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL? By PHILO-ISRAEL Price 4d.
London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

Price 6d.; or with illustrative map, 8d.

BRITAIN (OR ISRAEL) THE FIFTH AND LAST, AND THE UNCONQUERABLE EMPIRE. By JOHN GILDER SHAW.
Price 3d.; post free, 3½d.

CHRONOLOGICAL CHART OF BRITISH VICTORIES OVER THE CONTINENTAL POWERS, ranging from the battle of Cressy (1346), to our last victory, the taking of Sebastopol, Sept. 8, 1855. Arranged by J. G. SHAW, of Leeds.
"We trust Mr. Shaw's labour in preparing this paper may be appreciated by the public and be largely sold."—Banner of Israel.
Shortly will pe published, price 6d.

RESULTS OF ISRAEL'S OBEDIENCE. A review of the successive steps which have led to the present condition of Britain (or Israel), the Fifth and Last Empire.
London: Published by Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; and may be had of the Author, 20 Park-row, Leeds, and of all booksellers.

ORDNANCE SURVEY OF THE HOLY LAND. The undersigned having been appointed Agents at Bristol for the sale of the MAPS, PLANS, PHOTOGRAPHS, and other PUBLICATIONS connected with the SURVEY OF JERUSALEM, SINAI, &c., beg to notify that the same can be obtained of them.
The Maps and other Publications connected with the Ordnance Survey of the United Kingdom can also be obtained of them. Prices and Catalogues supplied on application. P. MUNRO & SON, Surveyors, &c., Bank chambers, Corn-street, Bristol.

Now Ready. Price 6d.

COMMON SENSE AND THE CRISIS. The Way Out of all the National Difficulties, and the Right Course to Pursue under the very Trying Circumstances, clearly shown through the Identification of the Lost Tribes of the House of Israel with the British Nation. By C. W. E.
London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row
Norwich: Philip Soman, Argus Office.

Now ready, price One penny, post free 1½d. One dozen copies, post free 1s. 100 copies 6s., post free 7s.

THE IDENTITY OF THE BRITISH NATION WITH THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. THE CLUE TO THE EASTERN QUESTION. By C. W. E.
London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed:—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, 5, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW.
WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 26, 1879.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. III. No. 114. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, MARCH 5, 1879. [DOUBLE NUMBER, TWOPENCE.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
A Review of Israel's Campaign in Afghanistan	93
An Address to British Seamen	94
"Lo, the People Shall Dwell Alone, and Shall Not be Reckoned Among the Nations." Part I.	95
The World-Wide Empire	95
How the Identity Can Best Be Published. By L. G. R.	96
From Assyria to Britain: A Bird's-eye View of Hebrew History. Part II. By William Burnett Coates	96
Our Earliest Ancestors. Part I. By J. Thomson	98
A Voice From Far-Off Sydney	98
Is the British Nation Descended from the Lost Ten Tribes? An Affirmative Note. Part I. By P. J. Holdsworth	99
Israel's Volunteers	99
"Key to the New Sheffield Card of Membership"	100
Our Second India	100
An Opponent on the Argument Derived from the Names of Israel Used in the Church of England Formularies	102
The Stone Kingdom, and Why It Grows. By Edward Dicey	102
The Vicar of St. Barnabas, Hull, on "England's Divine Mission." Part V.	103
The First Appearance of the Kings, Those From the Rising of the Sun	104
The False and Misleading Headlines of our Old Testament Chapters	105
The Times on "Confederation" in the South African Colonies	105
Manasseh Occupying her "Desolations," and Israel her "Heritages."	106
Another Testimony to the Good Done to a Man's Soul by the Identity Believed	106
Review, Correspondence, &c.	107
Poetry—England the Blest	107

A REVIEW OF ISRAEL'S CAMPAIGN IN AFGHANISTAN.

WE are glad to find the Times and other newspapers again and again calling attention to the wonderful results achieved with small means in the conquest of the territories held by our troops in Afghanistan. On the 20th of November, 1878, our invasion of the hostile country began, and on the 9th of January, 1879—that is, within seven weeks after the operations actually commenced—the British troops have quietly occupied Jellalabad, the Kuram Valley and Peiwar Passes, Candahar, and Khilat-i-Ghilzi, to the South, and that with little or no loss. The people have received our generals and our slender columns with outward marks of friendship, and the only resistance which was attempted was at Ali Musjid and the Peiwar Kotal. There disastrous failure attended the Afghan arms, and God delivered the enemy into our hands, as we have previously shown, in so striking and remarkable a manner that those events of themselves are Identities of our race with Israel—wonderful fulfilments of Micah's prophecy, when he said that "Jacob should be as a lion among the beasts of the forest; as a young lion among the flocks of sheep; who, if he go through (as in Afghanistan), both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and there is none to deliver,"—no Russian, no Afghan, no Power at all to snatch the prey from Israel's grasp! These things are no surprise to us. But to the unthinking world—to the Times, and other journalists of the day—they must be, as doubtless they are, matters for wonder and astonishment.

We regret to find that in the comments of the leading journal, on the 13th of January, and 4th of February, 1879, no hint appears that God's hand is at work in all these events, or that the results are to be attributed to anything but the skill of our generals, the prowess of the troops, the consummate strategy, sense of duty, power of endurance, and valour of the officers and men who compose the little force, which, in three small columns, achieved those wonders that are the admiration of the European nations, and of the Asiatic races in Central and British India as well. And yet our instructed Israelites must see, as clearly as we do, that our God has given us these magnificent successes simply and solely because of our Identity, and in order that His promises to His people Israel may be literally fulfilled. In the coming times of trouble, when Russia is to be the Lord's battle-axe, to destroy the doomed polities of Europe, it was needful that all temptation to the Muscovite to lay his hand on British India should be taken away. To do this effectually we needed the protection of the Afghan "Gates," and the security which a "scientific frontier," in place of a "haphazard one," affords. God gave us this when the dreaded Khyber fell before us so easily on the 22nd November, 1878, when General Roberts, on the 2nd of December following, stormed and took the Peiwar Kotal, and when General Stewart, quite recently, in the last days of January, 1879, entered and occupied Candahar, with the goodwill and welcome of the inhabitants. Henceforth, the acquiescence of the Afghan nation being apparently secured by the moderation of our generals, and by the insensate folly and tyranny of their own Ameer, and his equally unwise son, Israel will, in India, be "in rest, and be quiet, and none shall make him afraid." Not long since it was seriously felt that a danger from her own subjects was growing up in India, in consequence of the rising prestige and power of Russia in Central Asia, and in the Ameer's territories. But these great and glorious God-sent successes "have changed all that!" Let us hear what the Times said on this subject on the 4th of February, 1879—words which would have had our entire adhesion had only there been a recognition of God's overruling providence, and the reason for His so distinguishing our race by giving them thus easily such mastery over their enemies, that with a minimum of effort they robbed them of their Gates, and struck terror into the hearts of the neighbouring nations, when they saw the lion and the young lion going through, treading down, and tearing in pieces, none resisting, and none delivering! Our quotation from the Times is as follows:—

Digitized by Google

The character and the achievements of the army have nowhere produced so great an impression as in India itself. The natives of that country had fancied, there can be no doubt, that Russia was the advancing and England the receding Power. They had heard of successive annexations in Central Asia, and they must have believed that the troops of the Czar were creeping up to the Gates of India. That conviction must have been deepened when they learned that Shere Ali had preferred the friendship of the Governor-General of Turkestan to the protection of the Viceroy of India, and had practically defied England to do her worst. Asiatics are even more alert than most other people to worship the rising sun. But it is easy to see that the campaign in Afghanistan has made an immense change in the opinion of our Indian fellow-subjects. Their ordinary vehicles of opinion show that they find England to be still the same country as she was when she conquered India. They have learned that she is as little inclined as ever to let any Power dispute the mastery of those portions of Asia which are necessary for the safety of the Empire. They see that Russia is not to reach Cabul, and that Shere Ali leaned on a broken reed when he trusted to the commander of her troops in Central Asia. To the Afghans, the failure of Russia to give them any help must have been a rude awakening, and the shock of their disappointment will vibrate through India. Hence, we repeat, the country is indebted to the skill and the valour of the little army in Afghanistan for a political no less than a military success.

We see here, the Times being our witness, that "the Gates of India" were, in fact, the chief feature in the hostilities, the points towards which the enemies of Israel were stealthily creeping to destroy them.

2. That the natives of India are satisfied, by the results of the operations, that the lion which trod them down, when there was none to deliver, has not grown decrepit, but is the young lion still, tearing and treading down in the strength of Jehovah, there being a total failure of Russian help to Afghan enemies, and therefore no deliverance for them; and—

3. That our army has been, as Israel's always is, "a little army;" but has achieved great results, politically and in a military sense—all these being verily Israelitish promises and Israelite fulfilments (Gen. xxii. 17; Micah v. 8; Levit. xxvi. 8).

AN ADDRESS TO BRITISH SEAMEN.

SEAFARING MEN OF ISRAEL!—I am very anxious to say a word to you regarding the Hebrew origin of our nation. As men who "go down to the sea in ships, that do business in great waters," who "see the works of the Lord, and His wonders in the deep" (Psa. cvii. 23, 24), you are just those who can understand the evidence of our Identity with the Lost Tribes of Israel, for you have personal knowledge of the facts on which we rely.

2. British seamen! You have seen the Gates! The Lord God of Abraham said of old to him, "Thy seed shall possess the Gate of his enemies" (Gen. xxii. 17). You know our nation possesses "the Gates," for they are everywhere, the world-wide over. You have visited them all! Gibraltar is, as you know well, the Gate of the Mediterranean; Malta that of the Levant; Cyprus that of Palestine; and the Suez Canal, with Perim, those of the Red Sea; Aden is the Gate of the Arabian Sea. India was secured to us by the grasp our nation got of Bombay, Madras, Calcutta, Peshawur, and Rangoon. The mid-ocean Gates, St. Helena, Ascension, the Falklands, Mauritius, the Seychelles, Jamaica, the South African, the West African, and the East African Gates, you have often visited, and you know all these ports by sight, as I do by name. Why did we get all these and so many, many others? Why have not the French, or the Germans, or the Spaniards, or the Italians, secured them? It is because we are Israel and they are Gentiles; and GOD promised them only to US!

3. As seamen fighting her Majesty's ships of war, you know that our guns, our torpedoes, our ironclads, our fleets are the best, the fastest, the most powerful the world contains; and that no Gentile nation can beat any of them. Why is all this? Because, being the Lost Tribes of Israel, we are inheriting the blessings of Joseph our forefather—"the chief things of the ancient mountains, the precious things of the lasting hills" (Deut. xxxiii. 15)—that is, the iron, and coal, and tin, we want to make them, and each the best of their kinds. With these, and the God-given skill in our manufactures (Deut. xxviii. 8, 12), we are able to turn out better guns, and rifles, and cutlasses, and ships, and torpedoes, and ironclads, and powder, and shot, than any other of the nations on the face of the earth. When they want them, they come to us to buy them, and when they want to use them, they borrow our engineers and our workmen to handle them. All this we get because of our Israelite origin, and because of our GOD'S blessing on us as His chosen people for Christ's sake.

4. As mariners engaged in the world-wide commerce of Great Britain, you know well that our national wealth is enormous. It amounts to a million pounds value sterling every day, Sunday included, for imports alone! Why are we British supreme in this? Because we are GOD'S people Israel, and we inherit the blessing He promised to His chosen nation when He told them that He gave them "power to get wealth" (Deut. viii. 18).

5. Have you ever thought, Israelite seamen, why our British ports, our own home Gates, London, Portsmouth, Plymouth, Bristol, Liverpool, Glasgow, Leith, Hull, Dover, Dublin, Belfast, and the rest, are, and have been always, so secure and so free from foreign invasion for a thousand years? It is because God promised Israel, by the mouth of His prophet Isaiah, saying, "Therefore thy Gates shall be open continually—they shall not be shut day nor night; that men may bring unto thee the forces" (margin, wealth—i.e., the imports) "of the Gentiles" (Isa. lx. 11). Here, then, is a promise made only to Israel, and which we only of all the nations have had fulfilled in us. As seafaring men, you will see the glory of these facts, and must learn to rejoice in the knowledge that our freedom from invasion, in this our dear old England, shall last for ever (2 Sam. vii. 10).

6. Again, I would ask you to reflect how it comes to pass that that Greater Britain which you have seen and often visited in Canada, in the Cape Colonies, in Australia, in New Zealand, in Tasmania, in the great colonial Empire in short, of our nation, has fallen to us, but has eluded the grasp of the other European nations who have earnestly desired to have their share in these lands, but have been denied it by Providence? Our Identity with Israel gives you the only answer, and nothing else can or will. It is because God promised Israel the desolate heritages of the earth as their possessions, and in fulfilment of these promises "the desolations" in Australia, New Zealand, and Tasmania—beside those in Canada and the Cape Colonies—are now beginning, as God's Word said they should begin, when Israel occupied them, to "blossom as the rose" (Isa. xxxv. 1) (see Isa. xli. 8, lxi. 4).

7. British seamen! As a man connected with British naval men, as one who greatly loves the British sailor, let me speak a word of friendly advice to you. The God of the Hebrews, the God of Israel, is your covenant God. He has kept our nation as the apple of His eye, and He is about to do yet greater things for us. He is about to pour out upon us nationally, because of our origin, His Holy Spirit (Jer. xxxi. 33; Heb. viii. 10). As His servants and seamen, He calls on you to repent and believe on the Redeemer of His people Israel, the Lord Jesus Christ. Lose not your share in this great redemption! You see His wonders in the deep! To you He looks to live for Him. Seamen! Give yourselves to Jesus! Love Him; serve Him; tell others of His great love to sinful men, and proclaim to them, besides, that great truth He has now revealed to us—namely, that Lost Israel, His first-born Ephraim (Jer. xxxi. 9), is found, and that the prodigal "that was dead, is alive again"

Digitized by Google

(Luke xv. 11—32). He calls on you, Christian sailors, "to publish" these good tidings; "to praise" the great Jehovah while you so proclaim this news; and "publishing" and "praising," to do yet one thing more which He also demands of you; and that is, "to pray" to the God of your salvation, using these His own words, "O Lord! save Thy people—the remnant of Israel" (Jer. xxxi. 7).

PHILO-ISRAEL.

Bristol, Feb., 1879.

"LO, THE PEOPLE SHALL DWELL ALONE, AND SHALL NOT BE RECKONED AMONG THE NATIONS."—NUMBERS XXIII. 9.

PART I.

IT has been stated to us that the prophecy of Balaam, above quoted, which is constantly used by our opponents as a strong point against our Identity, has never been exhaustively dealt with in the BANNER, and that it would be desirable to bring into one focus all the arguments, pro and con, founded on this remarkable prediction of the Gentile prophet.

We observe, in opening our subject, that the words in question have been repeatedly adverted to in the pages of the BANNER. Almost every opponent has used the argument against us, and every champion of Israel has replied, more or less fully, to the point. Thus at page 7, vol. ii., we ourselves alluded cursorily to the objection. The Rev. Mr. Hickson, in his Liverpool lecture, page 155, vol. i., noticed it. D. J., in replying to J. H., adduced some powerful arguments against our opponent then regarding it. In short, the subject is never lost sight of, but it has never been separately brought forward and discussed, and no monograph has been attempted on the topic, in the Israelite sense.

The opponent, whose objection to our Identity on the score of our failure to answer to Balaam's prediction, which we shall select for the typical representative of the opposition, is the Rev. Canon Hoare. At pages 10 and 11 of his work, "Palestine and Russia," the objection is stated thus: "The Jews," he says, "are ready. God has preserved them as a separate people for the last 1800 years. They have been dispersed over the whole world, but kept distinct and separate. They have not been fused with the nations amongst whom they have been dwelling. They have lived among us, and never lost their nationality. There has been an accurate fulfilment of Balaam's prophecy, 'The people shall dwell alone, and shall not be reckoned among the nations.' Some people have lately entertained the idea we English are the Lost Tribes of Israel; but that prophecy by Balaam is decisive against any such opinion. We do not dwell 'alone'—we are reckoned among the nations, and there is no people in the world in whom there is a greater fusion of races than there is among ourselves. But as for Israel, they are at hand, because they are preserved as a distinct people, waiting for the summons of God.

So far the Canon. We now quote the words of a son of Judah, who rejects with scorn British Identity with the Hebrews, chiefly on the same ground as thus expressed: "I would ask, Did Balaam bless all Israel by God's special command? And if he did, what do you make of his statement, 'The people shall dwell alone, and not be reckoned among the nations?' And if the English people are the children of Israel, why do they not dwell alone, and are at this moment reckoned among the nations, and have ever been so reckoned? Do they fulfil Moses' declaration addressed to the Twelve Tribes, that if they disobeyed they should be scattered among the nations of the earth, and 'become a by-word?'"

These two lines of argument may be fairly taken to be representative, and we shall adopt them with safety, as all that can be urged fairly against our contention in regard to the words of Balaam. In reply, we urge, in the first place, that the prophet's words evidently, on the face of them, had no reference particularly to the last or our days. If true in the sense claimed by our opponents at the present hour, it is a fortiori necessary they should have been true in David's and Solomon's reigns, when Israel and Judah, the Twelve Tribes, were in the zenith of their power, glory, and prosperity, in their own land—blessed of God, and in all ways recognised by Him as His own people (2 Chron. ix. 1—24; 1 Kings iii. 13).

We ask, then, of Canon Hoare, and of our Jewish objector, Was it true, in the sense they now put on Balaam's prophecy, that "the House of Israel" (with Judah) dwelt in Palestine alone? Was the nationality NOT then reckoned among the then nations, as the British is now, with those at present extant? The Books of Kings and Chronicles answer the first question in the negative, and give the denial to the opponents' argument point blank! Israel then lived in the midst of the Hittites, the Amorites, the Perrizites, the Hivites, the Jebusites, "which were not of Israel" (2 Chron. viii. 7); and the subjects of Hiram, King of Tyre, were mixed up greatly with Solomon's people in operations connected with commerce, and in ship and other building (2 Chron. ix. 10, ii. 3—18). Israel, therefore, did not dwell alone, but in the midst of many nations, with whom, further, they made many unlawful marriages, and idolatrous affinities, forbidden of God (1 Kings xi. 1—10; 2 Kings xvii. 15). The people went after the "heathen (or Gentiles) that were round about them," says the record—not even separated, as the British are to-day from the Continentals by the silver streak, but actually living with, in, and among them in the same land! There was no such state of things then as our opponents demand of us now; for Israel of those palmy days in Palestine did not dwell "alone," in the sense now required, but were distinctly living in close connection politically with the Gentiles.

To confound those, further, who declare Israel of old was "not reckoned among the nations," and who demand that the British must fail to be Israel because we are so reckoned, we point to Jer. xxv. 17—33, wherein it will be seen God Himself reckoned Israel (of Judah) among the nations when they were yet in their land, and allotted to them also the bitter cup of wrath, equally with the other nations, with whom He distinctly "catalogued" them!

We see, then, that the sense which our opponents desire to force on us as the meaning of Balaam's words, will not stand the test of critical, historical examination; for if they are not true of us British, they were not true of Israel of the Twelve Tribes when in their own territory! It is thus demonstrated that fallacy lies at the root of the opponents' arguments, and we must look for the true meaning of the prophecy in some other direction. What is that direction? We must enter on that in our next issue.

(To be continued).

THE WORLD-WIDE EMPIRE.

IN its issue of the 8th February, 1879, the Times has the following, which is too good to be lost, and must be recorded in the BANNER as a piece of unique blind testimony. The editor said:—

> The British army is not a nation in arms; but it manages to permeate the habitable globe. From Canada to Fiji, from Alderney to the Cape, no part of either hemisphere is free from the ubiquitous British soldier. Two or three thousands, besides the marines, who are no concern of the Horse Guards, are commonly on the sea passing to their several destinations. Though an entire population does not filter through the army, as in the great military States of Europe, a constant ebb and flow is maintained by the agency of various causes.

Here is testimony to the following facts:—

1. That the British army permeates the habitable globe;

Digitized by Google

but as the British army only goes to British territory, it follows the habitable globe is in parts at least British territory. But this is Israel's destiny, as Dan. vii. 22 and 27 show.

2. That the ubiquitous British soldier is found—from the West in Canada to the extreme East in Fiji, from the far North in Alderney to the ends of the Southern earth at the Cape—in both hemispheres. But this was Israel's final territorial position, after they have spread to the West (first), then to the East, and to the North, and to the South (Gen. xxviii. 14).

3. That some two or three thousand of the troops of Great Britain, besides the marines, are always at sea passing to their destinations. But this is what Balaam said in Num. xxiv. 7, when he prophesied of Israel that "His seed shall be in many waters;" and what God promised Abraham when He allotted to his seed "the Gate of his enemies"—in other words, the supremacy of the sea (Gen. xxii. 17).

4. Besides the above points on which the Times thus confirms our position as the Israel of God, the instructed reader will observe that the leading journal points clearly to the British possession of her Colonial Empire at "the ends," "the coasts," and "the uttermost parts of the earth"—a world-wide Empire, greater than any which has preceded it, and which clearly identifies this with the "stone" of Dan. ii. 34—44. That stone is destined to fill the whole earth, holding also the dominion of the sea. Britannia, in short—"the chief of nations"—and, as "possessor of the Gate," the ruler of the waves!

HOW THE IDENTITY CAN BEST BE PUBLISHED.

By L. G. R.

It may assist others more able than myself to come forward in the Lord's work if I were to describe my experience of the reception I received when advocating the cause we have so much at heart, near London.

Being on a visit for a week, in the middle of January, at Belvedere, I thought I might profitably employ my time in proclaiming that "the Lord hath redeemed Jacob." Consequently I applied to the vicar asking him to allow me the schoolroom. After several questions as to the end we have in view, he kindly consented, and suggested I should ask the curate to take the chair, also that I might address those assembled at a prayer meeting on the Friday evening. This, at the request of the curate, I did for about half-an-hour, principally dwelling upon the spiritual aspect. The curate afterwards announced that I would lecture upon the Identity of the British with the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel on Tuesday evening; the vicar and the curate also gave notice to that effect on the Sunday in the church.

On Tuesday, though it was a wet evening, the schoolroom was tolerably well filled, the curate in the chair, and the lecture was listened to with the greatest attention for an hour and a half. I naturally thought my hearers had then had enough and so was concluding, when I was requested on all sides to "go on." The meeting did not break up until ten o'clock, when, not to tire out a most attentive audience, the lecture was brought to a close. I met with the greatest kindness and willingness all round to hear more, so much so that I could not get away until half-past ten, having for two hours and nearly a half been enlightening the good people of Belvedere and the neighbourhood on the matter.

On the afternoon before, through the kindness of Captain Tribe of the Royal Albert Institution, I lectured to about eighty old seamen on the same glorious truths, and met there also with a most hearty reception. The old men afterwards told me, "the wonder is we hadn't seen it afore."

I met with invitations all round to lecture again when I came to that place, but the next time in the Town Hall. In London, also, I was asked to tell some friends when I could come and lecture at a Workman's Hall and a Mission room, which were offered me.

Our friends will see how ready people are in all quarters to hear, and let us hope many may be prompted to answer to this call.

FROM ASSYRIA TO BRITAIN.

A BIRD'S-EYE VIEW OF HEBREW HISTORY.

By William Burnett Coates, Home Office, C.D.

(Continued from page 87).

PART II.

That the Cimmerian people must have been, at some period prior to the time they are noticed in the first part of this paper, at its opening, a united people, can scarcely admit of a doubt; and that, as they multiplied, during a century or more, after their denationalisation in their native land, and their compulsory detention in the heathen cities of Media and Persia (B.C. 740 to B.C. 721—some of them from B.C. 771 to the latter date), they lost the attraction and the cohesion of a nation's centre, and became centrifugal hordes; each Tribe, or it may have been group of Tribes, gravitating, as circumstances influenced them, to the verging bounds of their captivity. Assyria, which uprose as Palestine decayed, after the times of David and Solomon, was continually at war with the neighbouring nations until they rendered them tributary, or absorbed them in its Empire.

During those wars the King of Assyria, in the years named, carried the Ten Tribes of Israel across the Euphrates from their country, and placed them in the cities of Media and Persia, then a part of the Assyrian Empire; replacing them in Palestine with people from these cities and other places—a policy often pursued with infamous insults to the conquered, by effecting an interchange of the females belonging to the different people whom they forcibly removed from their countries. It does not appear that the Israelites were so treated; yet they could not endure the heathen yoke, as we are told by Esdras in his 2nd Book xiii. 40—43. He says, "They journeyed to a land called Arsareth, a year and a-half's journey."

In addition to this testimony we have that of Herodotus, who flourished in the 4th century B.C., and of Josephus of a later date; both of whom assert that they were, in the localities indicated, a great multitude, when they wrote. Although the testimony of these writers is somewhat vague, it is perfectly reliable, and shows that then, even in Herodotus' day, they were a great multitude—about three centuries after their reduction to captivity. The testimony of Esdras and Josephus does not by any means clash with the validity of earlier migrations of this people from amongst the captive Tribes, especially when opportunities to break from a hated thrall occurred in every succeeding spring.

In the spring of each year, at this time of its history, the Assyrian rulers were usually on "the war-trail;" and we know that, from this time until the last of the Tribes (at least, before the Roman occupation of Britain, and doubtless after their departure) had landed on these shores as Khumri and Celt, their habits were to move in spring, and to follow those who had gone before, as wave succeeds wave, flowing from the N.E. of Europe to its N.W. by different routes; and at intervals often of considerable duration, as well as under different denominations.

That the Cimmerians, first discovered in the country to where the captive Israelites were transferred from Palestine, till none remained, should be thought to be the same people as those captive Hebrews, can, under the circumstances, excite little surprise; and that, in the course of time, they broke into centrifugal hordes, flying towards the void spaces of the earth, from an artificial centre with no power of attraction for them, will excite less wonder still; but to assert with effect that the race has been planted in our islands, requires at least a colourable support from history, or circumstances akin to reasonable evidence, such as reasonable minds desire; this must be the writer's endeavour to supply.

The geographical history of the countries through which the Cimmerians, Cimri, Cimbri, or Cimiry, known from Asia Minor to Gaul, and in Britain as Cimri or Khumry, bears testimony to their presence in successive waves, as a people who left their mark upon peninsulas, cliffs, creeks, rivers, streams, and strongholds, by transferring to them their names and diminutives; so that they have, up to our day, made those names ineffaceable; and this wherever they came, until we find even our own country rivers, counties, divisions, hills, and dales resonant with Celtic and Cymric nomenclature. Many, many years have passed, but whilst our islands stand above water, time cannot efface it from the land.

Digitized by Google

Now, how are we to connect Israel's Lost Tribes with the Cimmerians? Well, as before stated, the Cimmerians are admitted to be the same people as the Cimbri of the Greeks and the Cymri of the Gauls; but we have also the legends of a people—almost a "peculiar people"—whose traditions assert them to be Cymri (pronounced "Kumry"), who, after a long and wearying journey, landed in Britain, where they found no inhabitant, save beavers, bears, and bisons. And we have, from time immemorial, recorded in the Welsh Triads, the people of Wales calling themselves "Cymri."

Many writers bear testimony to this; and also that they were but a branch of a multitudinous people who sprang up in Asia as Cimmerians, streamed into the North-east of Europe in the course of time, followed by—or were a wing of—a mighty host of the people called "Celtes;" who gave their name to a large part of Europe, which Ptolemy tells us was called "Celtica."

At p. 33 of "The Pedigree of the English People" (a book every Englishman should possess, study, and prize) Dr. Nicholas says, "The researches of modern historians favour the opinion that, called by the names of Gauls, Gaels, Celts, Cimmerii, Cimbri, Cymry, Scots, Picts, and others, only one race, divided into different tribes or clans, &c., is spoken of." The author of "The Heir of the World" tells us, at p. 32, that Sharon Turner uses the words Kymri and Kimmerians interchangeably, and that he adds "that the Keltæ were Kimmerians is expressly affirmed by Arrian in two passages, and with equal clearness by Plutarch." "This being so, it is fair to conclude that the Keltic branch called 'Kymry' must be the Kimmerians here referred to." Again, Pinkerton sums up (Ibid), "The Celts, from the Euxine to the Baltic, were called 'Cimmerii'—a name noted in Grecian history and fable. From the ancients we learn to a certainty that they were the same people with the Cimbri, and that they extended from the Bosphorus Cimmerius on the Euxine to the Cimbric Chersonese of Denmark, and to the Rhine."

I have now shewn the indisputable connection and oneness between Celt, Cimmerii, and Cymry, and might find proof for a volume of such evidence instead of a mere bird's-eye sketch, did space admit of it, or the case demand it; for the historical voice so far proclaims it plainly.

I have dwelt much upon the Cymri, because they are a living and tolerably lively race in our Hebrew-home of the isles to-day, and because it was necessary to show that the various Tribes who followed them into Britain were Celts and Cymri. This, I think, clearly appears from the quotations adduced; and from the fact that their language was one, not in all identical because of dialectic differences; at least the language spoken rendered the various Tribes intelligible to each other, and showed itself to be derived from a common tongue.

In Dr. Ledwick's "Antiquities of Ireland," at p. 27, I find the following. After noting that the original inhabitants of Ireland came from Britain, and that they were Celts, he says: "This system of Northern colonisation has been supported by domestic and other writers, and though these various Tribes spoke a language radically the same, yet they had different dialects, which are distinctly noticed. Thus the Belgae used the Belgaid, or Teutonic; the Fene the Bhear-na-Fene; the Gaile the Gaioleag; the Saxons the Sagsbhearla; the Scots the Scotsbhearla; and there seems to have been a common language made up of all, like the lingua Franca; and named Bearla-na-Teibidh."

There is but little room to doubt now that the Cimmerii, in all their nominal forms, and the Celts were derived from a common stock—the Cimmerians of the Assyrian provinces, who some five or six centuries B.C. troubled the Assyrian monarch, Esarhaddon; and who subsequently troubled that part of the Persian Empire that extended to Asia Minor; that troubled Asia Minor itself; and that left, during years of many wanderings and disturbed sojournings, their names and their marks on European Empires also; and upon its sea-skirts of the North-east; until, at length, their foremost bands found a resting place in the isles of the West, and that they were one family.

There is still a link to be supplied in the historical chain: happily not a missing one. Probably some will say the last should have been the first link. Not so in my view. We know where we are now and where we were at starting; and I prefer to look back to view "the rock from which we have been hewn."

Shortly after the decadence of the Hebrew kingdom, which commenced at the death of Solomon, the Assyrian kingdom began to grow into importance, and continued to develop in wealth and power, until it assumed the dimensions of Empire. If Empire does not expand, Empire will decay. So thought the Assyrian rulers of that day. They felt a necessity—perhaps an earth-hunger—to render the surrounding petty sovereignties tributary. Therefore they carried their wars and conquests, yearly, from State to State, even as far Southward as Egypt, as history informs us. Their route to Egypt lay through the borders of Palestine—a country then divided into two kingdoms—Hebrew, those of Israel and Judah; each of which they frequently harassed, especially the former, warring against it, and carrying away its people from time to time—from 741 to 721 B.C.—until, in the latter year, they subdued Samaria, and made a clean sweep of its inhabitants, carrying off every one, and placing them in certain cities of the Medes, &c., beyond the Euphrates.

The last siege of Samaria was commenced by Shalmanezer IV., who died during the operation, and Sargon, his successor, completed the task. When the Assyrian Kings warred and won, they were wont to record their prowess and fame on clay tablets, and frequently on the imperishable rocks, on which they engraved a record of their deeds, and the names of the subdued Kings.

Accordingly we find, as stated by an author alluded to already, in "The Heir of the World," p. 55, "that the names of the Kings who paid tribute to the King of Assyria is duly recorded on an obelisk now in the British Museum." Amongst these subdued Kings is one whose name reads Jehu, the son of Khumri (Omri), who has been identified by Dr. Hincks and Colonel Rawlinson with Jehu, King of Israel. In the same book and page, it is also stated that Val Tush, the Assyrian Prince, left "a pavement slab" recording the nations whom he carried captive, and from whom he received tribute, and amongst others the country of Khumri (Samaria) is graven there.

Thus we find the Israelites called Khumri, from Omri, King of Israel, by their Assyrian captors; that their names, in after times, derived from this Assyrian-given distinctive, was Cimmerians; and subsequently had its variations, of Cymri, Cimmeri, &c., and Kelts or Celtes; and also that a period in their wanderings found them settled in the "Ultima Thule" of the West. Such is the bird's-eye view from Samaria to Assyria, and from Assyria to Britain, long before the Roman descent to feed her ravenous eagles upon the wealth and industry of the Ancient Britons, alias the British Hebrews, whose promised blessings and renown have found the first place in the annals of the wondering world.

(To be continued.)

Digitized by Google

OUR EARLIEST ANCESTORS.

By. J. Thomson.

PART I.

Appended from the Ashton and Staleybridge Reporter of Dec. 14th, 1878, is a brief report of a lecture delivered at Staleybridge, on the 12th of December; subject, "Our Remotest Ancestors," and which may perhaps interest some of the readers of the Banner.

From the published report of the lecture, and which is very interesting, as far as it goes, it will be seen that a question was afterwards put as to the date of the so-called "bronze" age, but of which the learned professor pleaded ignorance, though admitting that "the civilsation of Egypt was in full swing, in all probability, when the bronze age was in progress on the borders of the Mediterranean."

It strikes me that the Identity can furnish what the professor pleaded ignorance of, while, in return, he himself has furnished evidence for the Identity.

1. Writers on the Identity have already amply shown (and, so far, they have not been successfully refuted, to my knowledge) that the Tribe of Dan (or, rather, a large portion thereof), at an early date, left the Land of Promise, and became a maritime or trading people. Along with the other Tribes, they left Egypt when civilsation had there attained a great height, 1491 B.C. (Usher's Chronology), and were also, doubtless, possessed, in some degree, of that civilisation, seeing that their leader "was learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians." Within fifty years after arriving in Canaan, they found their coast, or borders, "too little for them," and they began to spread themselves, 1406 B.C. (Josh. xix. 40—47; Jud. xviii.). A little over a century afterwards, they were upbraided for remaining in their ships (Jud. v. 17) at a critical period of the national history. There is also evidence to show that they were soon settled as colonists in Greece, and were known to the ancient historians as "Danai." They are traced to Carthage, and probably to several other places on the coasts of the Mediterranean; issuing thence through the "Pillars of Hercules" (doubtless so-called in honour of their hero, Samson—the original of the Greek mythological Hercules), they founded Tartessus, in Spain, near the mouth of the Guadalquiver, and appear also to have settled at an early date in Ireland and the South of England, coming here, as the lecturer says, from Iberia—i.e., Spain. They were known in this country for a long time as Danmonii, though these early settlers themselves probably called this island Barat-anac (Hebrew, "the land of tin"), whence its name, Britannia. For this tin they traded backwards and forwards between this country and the coasts of the Mediterranean, forming colonies when it suited them to do so: and this was doubtless at the time when, as the professor says, "the civilisation of Egypt was in full swing." This also agrees with the Biblical account of the Exodus: for we may fairly suppose that, in the course of a century or two, Egypt would, in a large measure, have recovered from the effects of the plagues, and the removal of so large a population out of its midst. Now, it may do very well for scientific men to imagine a vast period as being necessary to explain everything connected with their so-called stone, bronze, or iron "ages;" but imagination is not evidence. We know a little of what men can do now-a-days; but very few of us can imagine the changes that not only may, but do happen in the course of one hundred years: much less can we imagine what may be done in a thousand years. We have no evidence to show that three or four thousand years ago men were not as energetic and as ingenious as they are now. The days and years were as long then as now; the seasons succeeded each other then as regularly as they do now, for ought we know; and necessity being then, as now, the mother of invention, when they were put to their shifts for living room, the Danites, and any of their brethren who joined them, would be quite able to give a good account of themselves. Seeing that within fifty years they found their coast "too little for them," it would not be too much to suppose that five times that period, or 250 years, would suffice for their gradual migration, viâ the coasts of the Mediterranean and Spain, towards this country, where they would then arrive about 1150 B.C., or more than three thousand years ago. This date, we venture to think, would also allow ample time for the subsequent invasion of the Celts, at a period, say, of at least 500 years before the appearance of the Romans.

2. The lecturer also gives Identity evidence. Thus, he says, that this race, the most ancient civilised inhabitants of Britain, was a "small, black-haired people." Now, one of the objections often brought against the Identity, is, that the English are so unlike the Jews—as though we claimed to be Jews. Every one with a fair knowledge of Identity literature, knows that the so-called "facial" difficulty is really non-existent. No Identity writer has ever yet attached much importance to this difficulty. Indeed, we have no reason to suppose that Joseph's descendants would necessarily bear any resemblance to those of Judah because of their common father. For Rachel, the mother of Joseph and Benjamin, "was beautiful and well favoured" (Gen. xxix. 17); and Joseph was "a goodly person and well favoured" (Gen. xxxix. 6). He married an Egyptian princess, so that his children would naturally be expected to show very little resemblance, if they did not show great difference, to those of Judah, whose wife was a Canaanite, and whose daughter-in-law, Tamar, also, was one, for anything that appears to the contrary. But Dan was the son of Jacob by Bilhah (Gen. xxx. 6), and, as we have no account of her personal appearance, nor of that of Leah, the mother of Judah, we may very reasonably suppose that there would be a much greater resemblance between Judah and Dan, and their descendants, than between the children of Joseph and Judah. And this, indeed, is what our learned professor testifies, when he tells us that the most ancient civilised inhabitants of Britain were a "small, black-haired people," which are very marked characteristics of the Jews, as we may see and compare them among us at the present day.

Without noticing the "long heads" and "oval faces" of this ancient race (and which are also marked characteristics of a high physical organization), or further referring to their high degree of civilisation, and which was the foundation of our present, few will fail to agree with me in thinking that this is no despicable testimony, as coming from a professor of Owen's College, Manchester, aspirant to be "The Northern University."

Ashton-under-Lyne, Dec. 21st, 1878.

(To be continued.)

A VOICE FROM FAR-OFF SYDNEY.

We have published in this issue a cheering letter from a constant reader, "A Bent Oar," at Montreal, giving us some valuable Identity information only accessible to a Canadian; and now we have almost by the same post a letter of kindly greeting from the Antipodes—Sydney, in New South Wales, in Australia! We are unfortunately not permitted to publish this last communication, but we gladly pass through our columns a scholarly essay which accompanied it, issued in Sydney by Mr. P. J. Holdsworth, our correspondent. It will satisfy our friends on this side the globe that our well-read and highly-educated fellow-subject in far-off Australia sees the full force of our arguments adduced in the Banner in proof of our Identity, and is capable, as they perceive, of setting them forth in original and striking terms—terms which are interesting to ourselves as well as suggestive of further research. Although Mr. Holdsworth does not permit us to publish his letter, which reached us with his "affirmative note" (a fact we regret), we feel at liberty to give our readers one or two pieces of intelligence he sends us of a very cheering character.

Digitized by Google

He tells us what is news to us—namely, that in Sydney, a city of 200,000 souls, an association of Israelites has been formed. It is, though young, a growing body. Some "good men and true" had joined it, but that, our friend writes, is not their strength! "God," he adds, "is on their side, and, as Frederick Douglas said, 'God and one are always a majority.'" We are glad to learn from Mr. Holdsworth that he is a reader of the BANNER OF ISRAEL, which regularly reaches him; and that he approves of it, as does our friend in Montreal. Such approval nerves us for our work, and leads us to ask His help, whose hand we hope guides us in all we write. To Him be all the glory for the good or the comfort which the BANNER brings with it to our distant fellow-believers.

We find, and are glad to find, that our views bring forward opponents in Australia as they do here. We are sure opposition and the controversy it elicits assist the cause of truth. We recognise their value when we read the good service Mr. Holdsworth has done to the cause, in his capital little essay, as a controversialist in support of our Identity. With this introduction, we leave our readers to the attentive study of our Australian instructor's words, which we think will please them, as they have done ourselves.

IS THE BRITISH NATION DESCENDED FROM THE LOST TEN TRIBES?

AN AFFIRMATIVE NOTE, BY P. J. HOLDSWORTH.

Reprinted (by request) from "Social Reformer," of Nov. 16th, 1878.

PART I.

THIS is tritely termed a marvellous age. Man's material triumphs have transcended the wildest dreams of ancient visionaries, and the penetrating mind with which he has been gifted, learns, day by day, something new of Nature's latent powers and possibilities.

And it is not surprising that, kindled by such material achievements, his intellect as ably grapples with speculative subjects. Hence, in many regions of higher knowledge, including (as Max Müller terms it) the "Science of Religion," his theories embody truths which have rested, undiscovered, in the bosom of Deity for six thousand years.

Among these modern hypotheses, perhaps the most fascinating, and certainly the most censured, is the Anglo-Israel Theory. I say the most censured, because, to many of our local polemics, the subject is as wrath-provoking as the crimson cloak of the Spanish matadore to the bull he battles with. Most of these hostile critics persistently misunderstand the subject; and others profess to examine, but too evidently, predetermine to reject.

For the sake, therefore, of those who have been prejudiced by such unfair criticisms, I propose to state, succinctly, what this startling Theory really asserts.

The Theory, then, briefly put, affirms that the British nation, composite as it appears to be, is descended from the Israelitish Ten Tribes who were deported (B.C. 721) by the Assyrian monarch, Shalmanezer, beyond the Euphrates and Tigris.

The proofs advanced in support of this conclusion traverse three distinct planes of evidence. The first argument is the historical one. It deals with facts drawn from sacred and profane history, whether with respect to the records of the past, or the location and migrations of certain ancient and modern races. The second argument is based upon strange and striking coincidences between old Israelitish customs, and the habits and manners of our remote acknowledged ancestors. The third argument is the prophetic one, and deals wholly with Scriptural assertions. The various prophets predicted fully two hundred national marks which should distinguish the mighty resuscitated Israel of "the latter days," and this portion of the main argument proves that, while the British respond to every feature, no other existing nation answers to half a dozen.

I now proceed to adduce some of the proofs by which the first of these positions is maintained. This is the line of argument which most impresses the general public, because it deals, for the main part, with precise historic statements which not even a freethinker can gainsay.

Every tyro in ancient Hebrew history knows that the old Hebrew Monarchy, after reaching its brilliant zenith under David and Solomon, was rent, under Rehoboam (B.C. 975), into the two kingdoms of Judah and Israel. And equally well known is the fact that these kingdoms, after the great disruption, had different destinies and careers. This distinction should be italicised, and not forgotten, as it lies at the root of the present Theory.

Let us review the first of these kingdoms. Judah comprised the Tribes of Judah and Benjamin, together with certain incorporated fragments of the other Ten Tribes, who left Jeroboam when that idolater set up the two golden calves. When the tribal break occurred under Rehoboam, Judah remained faithful to David's House, and, despite centuries of the most crushing national calamities, continued more or less connected with Palestine till after the Christian era. The term Jew (corrupted from Yehudim) dates only from the seventy years' Babylonian captivity, when Nebuchadnezzar (B.C. 588) stormed Jerusalem, and deported the principal members of the Judean Monarchy to Babylon. In A.D. 70, Titus destroyed Jerusalem, and terminated the kingdom; and the partial dispersion which then occurred was followed by a final expatriation in A.D. 135, the year of Bar Cochba's ill-fated insurrection. Judea was then utterly desolated:—its people were utterly dispersed, and the modern Jew is, in the main, the existing representative of the old Judean kingdom.

The second Monarchy, that of Israel, comprised the remaining Ten Tribes. Ephraim was its recognised head. Its career was one of melancholy vicissitude, and was suddenly closed when the Assyrian Shalmanezer, after a resistless campaign, captured Samaria—carried (B.C. 721) the great mass of the people beyond the Tigris and Euphrates, and located them in Media. From this captivity, according to the unanimous testimony of Josephus, and all accredited historians, they never returned. They became "lost." Josephus, who, in his "Antiquities," constantly demarcates Israel from Judah, is most emphatic upon this point (vide book ii., chapter 5). And his statement, echoing as it does the universal affirmation of antiquity, may sufficiently refute the few shallow objectors who affirm that the Ten and the Two Tribes have been again amalgamated.

(To be continued.)

ISRAEL'S VOLUNTEERS.

A LOCAL contemporary, the Bristol Times and Mirror, had the following in its issue of January 21, 1879, as part of its editorial notice of current events. Our readers, we hope, will be interested in the details, and, the political allusions apart, will be thankful to know, what indeed is patent to all men, that Lord Beaconsfield's foreign policy is thoroughly approved by, and satisfactory to, the great mass of the nation at large. Such satisfaction shows itself in the constitution and rise in the numbers of "The British Volunteers"—a thoroughly Israelite institution, as Ezekiel xxxviii. 21 fully proves. The extract is as follows:—

If the foreign policy of the Government, which on several occasions has led up to the very brink of a necessary war, had been so strongly disapproved by the country as the Opposition declare, should we have witnessed such a rapid and gratifying increase in the number and efficiency of our Volunteers? Englishmen do not like to have to fight in an unrighteous cause, and yet during the time the present Government has been in power—and we have had to threaten Russia, first in Europe and then in Asia—the hands of the Ministry have been strengthened by an ever-increasing force of volunteers. The experience of the former Government was exactly the reverse. In 1868 the number of men enrolled was 199,194. From that time they kept on shrinking in numbers, by as many as from five, and even seven thousand a year, until in 1873 the total was only 171,937, almost as low as it was ten years before. In 1874 the present Government came in, and by the following year the force numbered 181,080—an increase of 10,000 men in two years. In another twelve months the total had grown to 185,501; by 1877 it was 193,028, and last year our "citizen army" reached the highest figure it has yet attained—viz., 203,213. And that they are not mere paper soldiers is proved by the percentage of the efficients to the enrolled, which also is now higher than it has ever been. Even the efficiency fell off during the Liberal régime, for in 1873 the per centage was only 89·11, against 90·16 the previous year. Since 1874 it has gone on improving, until now the non-efficient element is less then ever. Against 194,191 efficients last year, there were only 9,022 non-efficients, the former, therefore, being 95·55 of the whole—the most satisfactory return yet published. These figures tell a most eloquent tale, not only of satisfaction with the foreign policy which might have called the defensive powers of this large army into action, but also with the details of its management under the present Government.

Digitized by Google

"KEY TO THE NEW SHEFFIELD CARD OF MEMBERSHIP."

THE centre of the design is after the British coat of arms. The lion, with its Eastern crown, representing the House of Judah, and the unicorn, the House of Israel (Deut. xxxiii. 17, xlix. 9). Between the lion and the unicorn is the circle, representing eternity, in which is inserted the foundation of our belief (our reliance the Word of God), and embracing the sacred triangle, an emblem of the Divine Trinity. On the triangle is inscribed, in Hebrew characters, the name Jehovah. Surmounting the circle is the Imperial crown of the British Empire: the background being formed by the thirteen standards, or cognizances, of the Tribes of Israel, setting forth their distinguishing characteristics (Gen. xlix.).

Beneath the centre device are the brazen pillars, placed at the porch of King Solomon's Temple, surmounted by the celestial and terrestrial spheres.

In the left hand bottom corner is a portion of the royal coronation chair in Westminster Abbey, which contains the "Lia Phail," or "Precious Stone," on which Jacob rested (Gen. xxviii. 11), and upon which have been crowned the successive Sovereigns of Ireland, Scotland, and united Britain. Immediately over this are two tables of stone, on which were inscribed the law, surmounted by a dove, the symbol of the Holy Spirit, shedding its Divine rays on the Decalogue.

In the right hand bottom corner is a sketch of the Great Pyramid, spoken of by Isaiah (xix. 19, 20). Above this sketch is a sectional view of the Great Pyramid, with its passages and chambers, and over this again is an open Bible, in confirmation of whose truth was set up this "witness to the Lord of hosts."

In the left hand top corner is a representation of the ark of the covenant, with the cherubim covering the mercy-seat.

In the right hand top corner is the breast-plate of the high priest, containing the Urim and Thummim. Between the ark and the breast-plate is placed the motto of the Association ("Speak unto the children of Israel that they go forward").

The sight size of the drawing is five Great Pyramid inches by seven, the former being one-fifth of the sacred cubit, and the latter setting forth the Divine institution of the Sabbath (Gen. ii. 2, 3).

Within the bottom border are given five of the Great Pyramid inches, being one-fifth of the sacred cubit, which forms the basis of measurement throughout the construction of the Great Pyramid.

The card size is seven Great Pyramid inches by ten, being in harmony with the sacred cubit, and also with the Sabbatic number.

N.B.—The above measurements on the card may be regarded as approximately correct, taking into account unavoidable deviation caused by expansion or contraction of the card.

OUR SECOND INDIA.

ON the outer sheet of the Times, of Jan. 9, 1879, were two remarkable papers; one, a correspondent's résumé of the condition of the English cotton trade as compared with that of America, the other the report of a lecture delivered in Manchester on Jan. 7, 1879, by Mr. J. Bradshaw, on the subject of Central Africa, and the importance of taking steps to open it up to British industry—meaning especially the cotton industries of Lancashire.

The former paper took a gloomy view indeed of our condition as manufacturers of cotton goods. It is clear from the writer's deductions (if correct) that Ephraim's days as the head and not the tail, in respect to this industry, are ended, and that Manasseh is about to beat us "as in a canter." The five points the writer of this gloomy paper lays down, and his conclusions thereon, are as follows:—

"1. That our shipment of cotton cloths to America, already comparatively insignificant, will continue to dwindle until it becomes altogether extinct, or is limited to a few unimportant articles of the finest grades.

"2. That the export of cotton cloths from America is sufficiently remunerative to secure the continuance and extension of the trade.

"3. That for some time the American manufacturers have brought to bear upon their processes of manufacture an eager spirit of improvement and economy, combined with a remarkable affluence of mechanical invention, and that in consequence they are now relatively in a better position than ever before to produce cheaply; that, indeed, it is probable they are now able to produce many grades of goods at a cost absolutely lower than ours.

"4. That our manufacturers, resting over-confidently upon the great achievements of the past, have not been adequately solicitous to keep their place in the van of mechanical improvement.

"5. That the English cotton operative is inferior to the American in intelligence, and therefore in effectiveness as a producer.

"The near future of our cotton trade gives occasion for much anxious concern; but in the distant future there is abundant hope. The field is still enormously large. The power-looms of the world produce annually 10,000,000,000 yards of cotton cloth. The average consumption of China is said to be 20 yards for each person; of England it is nearly 30 yards; of America it is 40 yards. Even at the Chinese average the cotton machinery of the world would have to be greatly more than doubled before a full supply of power-loom cloth could be given. But this splendid vision will not be easily or soon converted into sober reality. There must, first, be wise and sustained national effort to open new outlets. The intelligence of our operatives must be raised, and some measure of technical instruction must be diffused. And our employers must give deeper thought to the improvement of all their processes and a warmer welcome to suggestions which point in that direction."

It thus will be seen that, even allowing the facts to be true, and that Manasseh is carrying off in triumph the trade in cotton cloths, which once was the sole property of the British, the distant future has its compensations for us poor Israelites. What is wanted is, it seems, "new outlets." Then operatives in Great Britain must have "better technical instruction," processes of manufacture must be improved, and we would beg to add, "strikes must be less often resorted to by the workmen," besides some improvement effected in that terrible blot in the national character for steadiness, the love of drink—Ephraim's woe.

Our concern just now is with the "new outlets." Are there any such outlets opening up for poor ruined Israel? Surely! There is Africa; Africa with its 400,000,000, all wanting cloth clothing, and there are Lancashire operatives, and Yorkshire, Birmingham, Sheffield, all longing to supply them. We shall quote Mr. Bradshaw's speech as reported in the Times, above mentioned (Jan. 9), and our readers then can judge for themselves what our prospects for the future are likely to be. Let them, however, remember in so doing who we British really are, and what our God-promised future is certain to be. We are Israel of the Ten Tribes, and "to the people of the saints of the Most High," "even to the children of Israel," God has provided that there shall come "the kingdom, and the dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven;" therefore the dominion in Africa from North to South, from East to West. The present "distress" and apparent departure of our cotton cloth trade is destined, we believe, to drive us to seek just those very outlets for commerce which will force us to open out Africa, and to take possession of it for commercial purposes. And when the "good times" coming have actually arrived, we shall find, we believe, that these "troubles" have been, after all, only "blessings in disguise."

Digitized by Google

Forsan, et haec olim meminisse juvabit!

We may yet live to praise the Lord even for the distress, the cotton famine, the loss of the cotton cloth trade, the strikes as well, what time we enter on our "inheritance" as owners of the whole earth, and assume our rightful position as the possessors and protectors of the whole of Africa, "our second grander heathen Empire" in the land of Ham. Mr. Bradshaw's statement was as follows:—

"He referred at the outset of his remarks to the geographical extent, population, and natural wealth of Africa. It was, he said, one-sixth less than the great American continent, but had five times the area of India. With respect to the population of the country, Mr. H. M. Stanley, than whom he knew no better authority, put it at from 350,000,000 to 400,000,000 people. This had been questioned, but seeing that the country was five times the size of India, which contained about 300,000,000 people, it was not, in his judgment, at all improbable that Mr. Stanley's calculation was correct. Mr. Stanley told him that he thought he himself saw at least 800,000 people on the narrow line of route he traversed on his last journey, and he assumed there were 6,000,000 people resident on the shores of Lake Nyanza. As to natural wealth, everything that was found in other continents was found there. It had been estimated that 2,400,000,000 yards of calico were sent annually from this country to India, and there was no reason why we should not send a similar quantity each year to Africa. If this were done, it would afford occupation to 200,000 Lancashire operatives, besides giving a tremendous impetus to the trades of Sheffield, Birmingham, and Yorkshire. In order to utilise this great continent it was essential to get to the large centres of population in the interior. Opinions differed as to the best means of reaching these places. His own opinion was that they might be approached from several points, but the point to which they should turn their attention, energies, and capital was the development of the lake regions, which could be well done from the East coast. Mr. Stanley strongly advocated the construction of a railway of about 500 miles in length from a point on the East coast to the Southern end of the Victoria Nyanza. A reference to the map would show how other lakes were linked with the Nyanza, and assuming that we were successful in trading operations on the shores of the Victoria, into which there were many rivers flowing, a railway 150 miles long would reach Lake Tanganyika, which had a waterway of about 330 miles, and when they had become masters of that, another railway of 200 miles would bring them to Nyassa, which gave them another waterway. Another short railway would then reach to the navigable waters of the Shira and Zambesi, which flowed into the sea—in other words, a link line of railway of 400 miles would afford about 1,300 miles of splendid navigable water. There was another reason why they should go to Victoria Nyanza, which was that the river Nile flowed into that lake. (Hear, hear.) There was no doubt that the Khedive of Egypt was ambitious to form a great Egyptian Empire and was rapidly coming down to this region, his ultimate aim being the Nyanza. If they wanted to push their way to the West coast, there was the wonderful river which Mr. Stanley had re-christened the "Livingstone," and which had its source very near to the Tanganyika. They would ultimately be able to complete the chain of trading posts right across the continent, and they could then open out North and South as circumstances permitted. (Cheers.) There was another reason why they should proceed to the lake district, and that was that it would result in the death of the slave traffic which exists there. To revert to the railway, Mr. Stanley said it could easily be constructed. The foundation was good the whole way, and the distance about 500 miles, the cost being about a million sterling. On the route there was abundance of timber, and no engineering difficulties worth speaking of. Labour could be had very cheap, and the railway would at once introduce them to a population of about 30,000,000. What a difference it would make on the Manchester exchange if they had 30,000,000 additional customers, who had plenty of things to give in exchange for our calicoes! (Hear, hear.) Mr. Bradshaw further suggested that the undertaking should be carried out by a company, and that it might be necessary to raise 10,000,000 sterling. He deprecated the proposal that the Government should undertake it.

"A discussion followed, after which resolutions were passed appointing a committee and expressing the view that a conference should be held at an early date in Free Trade Hall, Manchester, to which the leading men of the country and Mr. H. M. Stanley might be invited, and that the outcome of such a meeting might result in the promotion of a trading corporation, which would adopt most effectual means for opening out the interior of Africa to trade. A further resolution was adopted expressing the opinion that the opening of the interior of Africa by means of cheap English capital would be the most effectual means of putting an end to the iniquitous slave traffic."

Our readers see, we hope, the path by which our God is about to lead us? To give us Africa He threatens us with loss of our cotton cloth trade. He starves our multitudinous operatives by distress and hard times, and He forces us to recognise the glorious outlet in Africa, which Mr. Stanley and others see clearly only waits for us to blossom as the rose. While blossoming it is ready itself to return wealth and prosperity, inconceivably boundless, into our own lap. The end of all will be, we anticipate, that the power, the wealth, the influence, and the commerce of Great Britain will be hereafter more magnificent than ever; and if Manasseh is destined now to be "great" in this respect, Ephraim in the future, we may be sure, and we can see, will be "greater" than he. For then Ephraim's woe, the alcoholic deluge, which now mars so much, will have been subdued under the only real remedy—the power of "the standard of the Lord," even the outpoured Spirit of our God upon the British masses. The nation, as "the righteous" one, then only openly blessed of the Father, will be the dominant ruler of the whole earth, and with its "company of nations" in friendly—not in fierce, commercial rivalry—will enter on ages of such prosperity that it will become "a praise and an honour before all the nations of the earth, who shall fear and tremble for all the GOODNESS and for all the PROSPERITY that the Lord Himself procures unto it" (Jer. xxxiii. 9).

Readers, we shall nationally want no more than this. Praise YE the LORD!

A PAPER from our friend Mr. J. T. Gott, on "Watchman, What of the Night?" is to hand, and will soon be published.—ED.

Digitized by Google

AN OPPONENT ON THE ARGUMENT DERIVED FROM THE NAMES OF ISRAEL USED IN THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND FORMULARIES.

WE are glad to report that a recent notice issued at Wimbledon by an ardent Israelite lady there, has resulted in the discovery "of over twenty believers at the place;" enough, we presume, to commence an association for the town. At Bristol we began with two only, and now there are over eighty paying members, and a large following besides of "unattached" sympathisers and secret believers.

Our friend at Wimbledon has paid the penalty for taking a prominent bold position in favour of God's work regarding our Identity. She has brought an opponent sharply down on her, to rebuke her for largely circulating "The Inquiry" in the place. This is what the anonymous assailant, attacking not only Philo-Israel, but Mr. Hine, asserts :—

"If the note on p. 13 of the pamphlet, 'Are the English people?' &c., of which Miss L. has sent out a shower on Wimbledon, is to be deemed a sample of the author's work, it is impossible to conceive of a larger amount of error being crammed into a small space. So far from the compilers of the English formularies having appropriated to English Christians the names reserved by God for His chosen people Israel, these names are of most common occurrence in the offices of every branch of the Catholic Church."

Then follow a number of quotations, in Latin, of the passages named, taken from the Roman Breviary, Missal, &c., &c. He goes on to say:—

"Now in the English Church these expressions are not, as a rule, used more than twice or thrice a day: in the Roman Church they are used at least six times. It is hard to calculate how often they are used daily in the Greek Church—for every office bristles with them. That expression, 'Fulfil the desires and petitions of Thy servants,' is as composed by St. Chrysostom, and is used by the Roman, Greek, and English Churches. It is hard to conceive of any English Churchman as so utterly ignorant as not to know that the Benedictus, Magnificat, and Nunc Dimittis, are used daily in the Roman Church.

"So that all Europe and a large part of Asia use all these expressions which Mr. Hine prominently brings forward as appropriated to English Christians. Either he knew this, or he knew it not. In each case he is equally culpable. To make such a startling assertion without examination is a sin, especially as the information is so easily attained. If he knew this, and wilfully kept back the fact, no words are sufficient to describe the baseness of the act. But, if Mr. Hine is so grievously in error here, may not his other statements be suspected? May they not be the outpourings of a superficial reader, and not the well-weighed cautious utterances of a man who has read the Scriptures in the original language? This prominent fact of the note would include all Europe and a great part of Asia in the Lost Tribes."

As the author of the pamphlet whom the writer of the above assails, we beg to take the whole responsibility for the words complained of, on ourselves. Mr. Hine's expressions in regard to the subject, to be found at p. 54 of the "Forty-seven Identifications," are quite unobjectionable in our opponent's point of view, as he will find when he obtains the book and reads them. For ourselves, we maintain that the note at the foot of p. 13 of "The Inquiry," or "Are the English people?" &c., is accurately correct. To "appropriate" to English Christians God's names for Israel, as the Reformers did when they purged the ancient formularies of Roman Catholic errors and Popish mummeries, is just the word to describe what they did. The dictionary explains the word "appropriate" to mean "to take to one's self, as one's own property—to set apart for a purpose." The Reformers, with the corrupt Latin Roman Breviary and Missal before them, cast away the dross and "appropriated" the gems. Among these last were "the names of Israel" which they applied to the British, and henceforth we have unconsciously used them in our solemn services in the house of our Lord Jehovah-Jesus. By such "appropriation" we did not assert nor imply that these terms and formularies were not, some of them, in the Roman Catholic "use" before we purged them of their gross errors!

The fact that the Roman Catholic and Greek Churches permit the names of Israel to be still applied in their formularies to the Continental and Russian races, who we know are not Israel, is no argument against our contention! For these prayers are for the most part in Latin—in a language "not understanded by the common people"—and therefore not nationally prayed at all. Besides they are intruded before God, even if comprehended by the worshippers, in the names of poor sinful creatures like those who use them—such as those of Mary, the mother of the Lord Jesus, of the apostles, and of the saints. Whereas we know such prayers cannot be heard, being not acceptable to the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ; for He says that there "is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved but the name of Jesus;" and He Himself bids us "Come unto Me;" but never so much as mentions His mother or the saints as the substituted mediators.

We reply, therefore, to our opponent, that the "note" objected to, does not and cannot "include all Europe and the greater part of Asia in the Lost Tribes," since their prayers are for the most part offered in a tongue they do not comprehend at all, and are offered not by themselves, but by their priests for them. Further, they are not acceptable to the Divine Being invoked, since they are not offered as He prescribes. Their "appropriation" by our blessed Reformers to the British Church and British nation, is a striking confirmation of our Identity. For our people use these prayers and appropriate these names—lately with unconsciousness, now with knowledge of their exact application to themselves as Israel—and they are heard in so praying to their God, since they draw nigh to Him in the only way He declares He will ever permit any suppliants to approach Him. And finally, He has manifestly blessed them in the use of these names since their glorious Reformation in 1558 (et seq.), by giving them, as Israel (whom they claim to be), every one of the blessings He promised only to His chosen ones, if obedient, in the Word of God (Deut. xxviii. 1—14, xv. 6).

THE STONE KINGDOM, AND WHY IT GROWS.

From the "Nineteenth Century Magazine" for September, 1877.

BY EDWARD DICEY.

"ENGLISHMEN who live out their lives in these small islands, who give the best of their labour to the questions and issues of our insular existence, are apt to forget what England is in truth. Take up any gazetteer and you will find there what every schoolboy is supposed to know, but what to scores of Englishmen out of every hundred will read like a new discovery, the dimensions of the Empire of Great Britain.

"The United Kingdom, with an area of 120,000 square miles, and a population of thirty-three millions, rules over eight million square miles of the globe's surface, and two hundred millions of the world's inhabitants. The existence of the British Empire is a fact—wherever the Union Jack floats, there the English race rules, English laws prevail, English ideas are dominant, English speech holds the upper hand. England is the corner-stone of an Imperial fabric such as it has fallen to the lot of no other country to erect or uphold when erected.

Digitized by Google

People, I think, are too apt to forget how this Empire has come into being. In the strict sense of the word, we never have been a conquering nation. We have had no monarchs whose aim and ambition it has been to add fresh possessions to the Crown, in order simply and solely to extend the area of their dominions. The definition which Topsy, in 'Uncle Tom's Cabin,' gave of her being, would be about the best that could be given of the origin of our Empire. 'Spects it growed,' is the sum of what can be said on the matter." (Here we are reminded, says our correspondent, of the words of the prophet Daniel, "The stone that smote the image became a great mountain and filled the whole earth"—chap. ii. 35).

The author goes on to say that "Our Empire is due, not to the ambition of kings, not to the genius of generals, not even to the prevalence of one of those phases of military ardour through which most nations have to pass, but to the silent constant operation of the instincts, laudable or otherwise, which have filled the world with the English tongue. We owe the fact that we are one of the great Powers of the world, not to the natural resources of our country, not to the military character of our people, not even to the advantages of our position, but to the circumstance of our having got the trade of the world into our hands, and thereby secured the pre-eminence due to the command of wealth; and the reasons why we have got the trade of the world into our hands are threefold :—First and foremost, the possession of certain national qualities which lead us to devote more energy, to run more risk, to undergo more inconvenience in the pursuit of wealth abroad than other nations are prepared to do. The second is the extent to which we are able to protect our commerce by our naval supremacy. And the third is the ownership of ports and stations all over the world in which our vessels can rest secure under our own flag.

"The energies of our race, the qualities which have made these islands what they are, find their scope, nutriment, and development in the work of colonising new lands, administering foreign governments, and ruling over less masterful races. Greater Britain serves as a safety valve to Great Britain."

THE VICAR OF ST. BARNABAS, HULL, ON "ENGLAND'S DIVINE MISSION."

(Concluded from page 88.)

PART V.—APPENDIX.

NOTE A.

ISAIAH xviii. 1: "Woe to the land shadowing with wings, which is beyond the rivers of Ethiopia."

There is no doubt at all that the first word in this chapter ought to be translated Ho instead of woe, for it is a call to attention, and not a denunciation of sorrow, which the whole tenor of the chapter, and especially verse 7, will bear out. Compare Zechariah ii. 6, where the same Hebrew word is rendered "Ho." "The land overshadowing with wings," &c. The root צלצל is duplicate, and therefore intensive. כנפים means also with extremities. Wings, in the dual form, is a well-known Scripture emblem of the power and protection with which God overshadows the multitude of His people. It may, therefore, with every sense of propriety, be here taken in a subordinate sense as revealing the power and protection with which a great commercial State like England should overshadow the unprecedented multitude of its colonies and dependencies.

England's power extends to both hemispheres, their Eastern reach over the Indus and Ganges (rivers of Cush), is the special object of attention here, and perhaps many of the people scattered and peeled may there be found.

This prophecy ought to be considered in connection with another in Isaiah lx. 9, where England is referred to as Tarshish. (See Note C.)

NOTE B.

Isaiah xviii. 7: "In that time shall the present be brought unto the Lord of hosts of a people scattered and peeled, and from a people terrible from their beginning hitherto; a nation meted out and trodden under foot, whose land the rivers have spoiled, to the place of the name of the Lord of hosts, the mount Zion."

The Hebrew word here translated "present," is מנחה—i.e., a meat offering. The word Mincha signifies originally a gift of any kind—a votive or voluntary offering from an inferior to a superior (see Gen. xliii. 11, xxxii. 13; 2 Sam. viii. 2—6). The law of the Mincha, or meat offering, is described in Lev. ii. and vi. It was composed of fine flour, seasoned with salt, mixed with oil and frankincense, but without leaven. Its true meaning may best be gathered from the three particular public occasions on which it was presented—viz.: 1. The omer or sheaf of firstfruits, waved before the Lord. 2. The two loaves offered on the day of Pentecost. 3. The loaves on the golden table, called the shewbread; and from the words of David in 1 Chron. xxix. 10—14: "All that is in the heavens and in the earth is Thine . . . . all things come of Thee, and of Thine own have we given Thee."

Viewing the word Mincha, therefore, in this sense, we see that England, by bringing its present, acknowledges thereby that all their greatness consists in the Gospel which they gratefully impart to that nation which, by their instrumentality alone, is to be brought to the light of Christ.

NOTE C.

Isaiah lx. 9: "Surely the isles shall wait for Me, and the ships of Tarshish first, to bring thy sons from far, their silver and their gold with them, unto the name of the Lord thy God, and to the Holy One of Israel, because He hath glorified thee."

Surely Tarshish cannot mean a city in the South of Spain that is to be so honoured to be at all likely to be the leading auxiliary in Israel's restoration. In Isaiah xxiii. 1—14, Tarshish is called "the isle" by way of eminence.

In Ezekiel's famous enumeration of the commercial riches of the crowning city of Tyre, Tarshish is described as yielding to her markets "silver, iron, tin, and lead." Now all these metals are British products, but one of them, tin, is peculiarly so. No fact of antiquity is clearer than that the Tyrians traded regularly to Cornwall for tin (Strabo, iii., 175). They considered the trade so important that in somewhat later times a Phœnician shipmaster outside the Straits chose rather to run his ships ashore than betray the secret of his destination to a Roman galley that chased him. The ancient Phœnician shafts and the mountains of slag that were the residue of their smeltings are still pointed out in Cornwall as prior to all historic record.

Again we read in Ezekiel xxxviii. 13 that in the struggle with Gog (or Russia), Tarshish, "a nation of merchants," "a nation of lions," raise their protest against the rapacity of the invader.

Many other passages also clearly prove that Tarshish means England.

NOTE D.—CYPRUS THE CHITTIM OF THE OLD TESTAMENT.

This island was in close connection with Phœnicia, and is referred to in many passages in the Old Testament under the name of Chittim. Jeremiah speaks of the isles of Chittim. Jews settled there at a very early period, even before the time of Alexander. The first book of Maccabees xv. 23, confirms this view distinctly. In the New Testament we have Cyprus mentioned several times. It was the birth-place of Barnabas, and furnished several disciples who preached the Gospel to Gentiles at Antioch. St. Paul, on his first missionary journey with Barnabas, made Cyprus the first scene of their labours (see Acts iv., xi., xiii., xv., &c.), and the conversion of Sergius Paulus, and the judgment which befell Elymas the sorcerer, are some of the early reminiscences of Christianity at Cyprus. Its political history has almost always been associated with Asia and Africa. Cyprus was a rich and productive island. Its fruits and flowers were famous. The Talmud mentions various spices which were brought from that island for the use of incense at the Temple service. The mountains also produced metals, especially copper. After Egyptian, it became subject to Persian and Greek influence, and then became Roman in B.C. 58.

Digitized by Google

Milman, in his history of the Jews, mentions a terrible insurrection at Cyprus, of the Jews under Trajan, which led to a massacre of the Greek inhabitants, and then of the insurgents themselves. It then fell into the hands of the Saracens in the ninth century; then into the hands of the Crusaders under Richard I. of England. By him it was sold to the Templars, whose great oppression caused a revolt. It was then possessed by the Venetians, and for a hundred years prospered under their rule. But the Turks invaded the island, and cruelly put as many as 20,000 of the inhabitants to death. Since then it remained in Turkish possession until Providence brought it under British rule, and, let us hope, also under England's Gospel influence.

THE FIRST APPEARANCE OF THE KINGS, THOSE FROM THE RISING OF THE SUN.

"THE kings, those from the rising of the sun," must, in Apocalyptic—that is, the highly symbolic language of Rev. xvi. 12—represent an Eastern Power whose appearance is fixed for a definite epoch of history, the one just following the "drying up" of the Euphratian, or Turkish, Empire. All commentators are unanimous—at least nearly all—that the process of the drying up of the waters of the Euphrates commenced in A.D. 1820, is now far advanced, and that the moribund condition of the Turkish Empire is a fact of to-day. We ought, then, if our interpretation of the Apocalyptic language be correct, be just now on the point of identifying and recognising "the kings, those from the rising of the sun," or that Eastern Power which "represents" the many kings of Eastern lands united in one and yet still existing in a condition of quasi independence.

Is there such an one now cognisable on the scene? Surely there is! The great Power which towers over the whole orient is Great Britain! Possessed of Hindostan from the Himalayas to Cape Cormorin; from Jaffna to Dondra Head, in Ceylon; from Bombay to Calcutta; and from the Peiwar and Khyber Gates in the far North-west, to Chittagong and Burmah in the North-east, and to Tinnevelly in the South, there is no other nation, European or Asiatic, to dispute her sway throughout the East. Hers is the dominion from Perim and Aden, her Western Gates, to Singapore, Labuan, and Sarawak in the Cochin-Chinese Eastern Seas. From Kurrachee in the North-west; from the Soonderbunds in the North-east of the Peninsula, right down to the mid-ocean Gates at Mauritius and the Seychelles, what Power can withstand her? What combatant can dare to fire a gun but her war-vessels will swarm in to know the reason of the disturbance, and put it down? The British, therefore, is the great colossal Power in the East which dominates over all.

But does the Anglo-Indian Government in any sense represent the kings, those from the rising sun? Certainly, and that in a very marked sense. The British is the paramount Power. But under her protection there exist a vast number of independent, or semi-independent, rajahs, or Eastern kings, who recognise the British raj as its suzerain, and yet live side by side with it as kings, or separate States, independent in everything but the power to disturb the public peace. Such are Holkar of Indore, Scindia of Gwalior, the rajahs of Mysore, Travancore, Bhopal, Nepaul, Rewah, Sikim, Cashmere, Patiala, Kapurthala, the Gaicowar, the Nizam of Hyderabad, and very many more who may fairly be designated "kings of the East," but all of whom recognise the British Government as the great paramount representative of the whole of the vast agglomeration of potentates who go to make up the kings of the Eastern lands.

To mark further the correctness of our surmise as to the identity of the kings, those from the rising sun, we find now that the question of the railway of those very kings—the "way" which their commercial and other, military as well as naval, interests render absolutely indispensable—is the question of the day. This "way" is needed very urgently to enable these Eastern kings to carry out their convention with the Turks, by which they have undertaken to safeguard the Asiatic territories of that Power from the encroachments of the threatening Russians—and they want that "way," too, to facilitate the passage of their troops from India to Asia Minor for purposes of defence, as well as to enable them to carry their enormous and ever-increasing volume of trade between the Eastern Empire and the far-off islands of the West.

If our views are right and correct, we must expect that to the secular mind, apart from prophecy, the event must have a marked significance, and that men from the worldly standpoint have noted that the British have assumed quite recently the position of the great Asiatic Eastern Power representative of "the kings from the rising sun." We find the fact is exactly so! The Times of the 1st of January, 1879, contained in its leading article the following remarkable sentences, which, we think, exactly respond to the views we have been enunciating. The editor said, referring to the results of the Berlin Treaty and its outcome, the Afghan war:—

> That result is of a character which, as we have said, must render 1879 essentially a New Year, and a fresh starting-point in the history of the British Empire. Nothing, indeed, can be really new, and all that we now contemplate lay, in reality, before our vision during the last few years, if we could but have discerned it. But our eyes had not been opened, and we had but a dim perception of some of the most momentous circumstances in our political relations. But we at length contemplate, with all the sense of novelty, the fact that it is our destiny and our duty to accept the position of a great Asiatic Power, dividing with Russia the responsibility for the gradual introduction throughout the East of the principles and the methods of European civilisation.

In other words, the King of the South and the King of the North of Daniel's prophecies are now face to face for the first time to fight out the last great Armageddon war of the world for the dominion of the globe. On the 1st of January, 1879, the chief secular journal of the day made the discovery, long suspected by the students of prophecy and by them in vain proclaimed to the world, that the British as the Kings of the East, are indeed represented by the Empress of India in the prophetic character of the King of the South coming this year into close contiguity, in Afghanistan and elsewhere nearer home, with Russia, the doomed King of the North. What the result of that antagonism is to be we need not doubt, for God's Word, in Ezek. xxxix., plainly tells us. We know that, seated supreme in the mistress city of the world—Constantinople—we shall, as Napoleon I. predicted of its owner, rule the whole earth! For God has promised to the children of Israel that "the kingdom and the dominion and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High" (Dan. vii. 27; Psa. cxlviii. 14).

WE have received the first of a series of papers from Mr. James Simpson, of Edinburgh, on the "Time Indications in the Great Pyramid." Also one from Mr. Westfield, on the "Imminence of Our Lord's Advent." These will be published together in an early issue.

Digitized by Google

THE FALSE AND MISLEADING HEADLINES OF OUR OLD TESTAMENT CHAPTERS.

THE subject above indicated has long occupied our attention, and a friend some time since, pointing to the erroneous and misleading character of the headlines at the commencement of our Biblical chapters, urged us to write upon the topic. Other more important matters and contracted space always forbad it. Now, however, we have the Rock newspaper in its issue of January 24, 1879, giving us so admirable a résumé of all the objections we have to make on this score, and the arguments coinciding as they do with much that we Israelites hold, we feel constrained to quote the Rock's remarks with almost entire adhesion. The Rock, speaking of Israel, means, we presume, the Jews only, and abhors the idea of the British being the Ten-Tribed nation Israel.

Indeed, in the same issue, we have in the Notice to Correspondents, a characteristic denunciation of the Israelite "delusion" as "unprofitable discussion." Yet, a few short years hence, we shall see the Rock, if it survives so long, admitting with sorrow its long rejection of a glorious truth without whose light all the troubles in Church and State which afflict it so greatly now, are necessarily dark as midnight.

If the editor would only look at Ritualism and Romanism by the light of the Identity which we Israelites habitually use, it would find that these are conquered foes of the Son of God, rampant just now, it is true, before the glorious dawn, because the Lord has said, "the enemy should," just at this crisis, "come in like a flood" ere the standard of the Lord be lifted up against him, and then down he must go. We can join, therefore, with the Rock in all lawful efforts to put down this foe of our Church, of our Lord, and of our liberties; but we fight in hope, and not in despair—with the certainty of British victory, of which the editor of the Rock has none—and with the joyous anticipation of which he knows nothing, that in 1882, or soon thereafter, the Lord will put down all these errors and restore to Israel's city Church, the then true Church of the British nation, peace, and purity, reformation, evangelical truth, and unity.

In regard to the headings of our Bible chapters, the Rock (whose Protestantism we respect, but whose prejudices against our views we abhor) says, in reference to the now nearly concluded labours of the revision committees of the Old and New Testaments, as follows:—

> Another important branch of their onerous duties was "To revise the headings of chapters and pages, paragraphs and punctuation." Here, all must admit, there lies a vast field for beneficial change. To those whose reading of Scripture does not extend beyond the "Daily Lessons" severance renders many chapters comparatively obscure, while a much larger number are robbed of their true meaning by the headings which they bear. Of this fact the book of the prophet Isaiah affords a notable illustration. Besides finding in his pages the clearest of predictions of the two advents of Messiah, we have repeated references to the future glory of Jerusalem as "the city of the great King," and to Israel and Judah as His subjects; yet all these expressions are (in the headings) continually appropriated by that mysterious abstraction "The Church." Thus, in the eighteenth chapter, where we have a prophecy of the bringing back to Mount Zion of a portion of the "scattered nation" (obviously the Jews) by means of the ships of a certain maritime Power (England most probably) situate "beyond the rivers of Ethiopia," the heading sees nothing but the "destruction of the Ethiopians and access thereby to the Church!" In chap. xxvii. the sounding of the "great (or seventh) trumpet" is announced, and at its blast the (Jewish) "outcasts" from "Egypt" and the (Ten Tribes of Israel) "about to perish in the land of Assyria" immediately flock to the "worship of the Lord in the holy mount at Jerusalem," but (in the heading) these supreme events are slurred over as simply "The Church of Jews and Gentiles." Then, again, in the heading to chapter xxix., we read of "God's heavy judgment upon Jerusalem" on account of the "deep hypocrisy of the Jews," and yet in chap. xxx., where the same subject is continued, and God's gracious purpose of ultimate mercy declared to all the people that dwell at Jerusalem, the "Church" steps in and claims these blessed promises for herself; the whole, according to the heading, being merely an intimation of "God's mercy towards His Church." In chapter xxxiii. we have a fearful account of the destruction of the anti-Christian hosts which come up against Jerusalem in the last days; but these (in the heading) are "God's judgments against the enemies of His Church." In chapter xxxiv. what in the text is "the year of the Lord's vengeance for the controversy of Zion" is headed "God's judgments against the enemies of His Church." In chap. xli. the Gentile nations are summoned to witness some striking manifestation of Divine power in behalf of "the seed of Abraham" (ver. 8); but this, according to the heading, is "God's expostulation with His people about His mercies to the Church." In chapter xliii.—which is really addressed (v. 1) to Jacob and Israel—the heading says, "God comforteth the Church." In chap. xlv. Cyrus is summoned (ver. 1—4) for the sake of Jacob and Israel to subdue the hostile nations, but the heading claims him "for the Church's sake." Chap. xlix.—one of the clearest predictions of the restoration of power and prosperity to Zion—is treated as "The ample restoration of the Church." In the next chapter, where the subject is continued, certain evils are referred to in the heading; but these, as a matter of course, are treated as "the derelictions"—not of the Church, but—"of the Jews." In chap. lx. there is a magnificent prophecy of the future occupation by restored Israel of the Land of Promise when all nations shall "come to the city of the Lord" (ver. 14); but this is metamorphosed into "the glory of the Church in the abundant access of the Gentiles." And so in the headings of the remaining chapters. Israel and Judah are repeatedly robbed of their covenant rights in order to aggrandise the Church. In short—and the remark applies to all the prophets—the judgments as a rule are handed over to Israel, while the blessings are claimed by the Church. It is quite time to put an end to all this misrepresentation and confusion.

Readers of the BANNER, we all say to most of the above, "Well spoken!" It is time, indeed, that God's Word of truth should be literally interpreted as written. The blessings promised to the House of Israel, and to that of Judah also, ought to be received as our God offers them in His most Holy Word literally, but (and here we differ from the Rock) we demand in the first instance that effort be made to find and to identify the House of Israel; and since we have found, and proclaim we have found, her, we boldly ask the Rock, and its friends as well, to examine our evidences, and not to take refuge in bad names, not the worst of which names are that we are "crazy, deluded" ones, men occupied in "unprofitable speculations."

THE "TIMES" ON "CONFEDERATION" IN THE SOUTH AFRICAN COLONIES

THE Times reverts to the subject of the necessity for immediate confederation among the loosely-joined colonies of South Africa. The editor remarked on February 13, 1879, that last year, > Confederation was proposed with the object of establishing a kind of partnership among the colonists of South Africa, so that they could undertake the defence of common interests against the permanent dangers of native wars. But sectional jealousies and ambitions defeated this policy. To this, nevertheless, or to something like it, we must come back in one form or another when the Zulu power has been overthrown. When the colonists are compelled to recognise the obligation of self-defence, native wars in South Africa will cease, as they ceased in New Zealand when the Imperial Government abandoned the task of hunting down a few thousands of Maori outlaws in the bush.

We allude to the subject again because its importance cannot be overrated. Confederation is demanded by the God of Israel in order to constitute the South African States a nation. While it is delayed, the native difficulty cannot be dealt with, and will for ever grow. Confederation deferred, means perpetual wars for Great Britain to put down African risings, which the colonists united could easily deal with. Till it takes place, there will be no peace for Israel, and the income-tax will, by its incidence, tell us plainly enough that the remedy must be applied, and that forthwith.

Digitized by Google

MANASSEH OCCUPYING HER "DESOLATIONS" AND ISRAEL HER "HERITAGES."

We take the following from the Pall Mall Gazette, of December 11, 1878. It aptly illustrates the way in which God has arranged that the Anglo-Saxon races shall occupy the desolations of the earth. It is Manasseh who is so engaged in the instance in question. The extract is as follows:—

"The stream of immigration Westward in the United States which has lately set in, is by all accounts constantly gathering strength. Vast multitudes of men and women are making homes in the far West. A correspondent of the Chicago Advance writes that during a residence of twenty years in Kansas, he has never seen anything to compare with the rush of new-comers. Long trains crowded with immigrants pass every day, carrying unceasing numbers to the 'empty continent,' where they hope to find, if not prosperity, at least means of sustenance. The immigrants are mostly people of the better class—farmers, mechanics, and the superior grade of labourers. They are people who have been 'well-to-do,' but who have suffered in the revulsions of the past, and come West to begin again. Thousands of these from all parts of the country, who have been accustomed to comforts and luxuries and refined surroundings, are going to the woods of Michigan and out on to the Western prairies. Many of them will be disappointed, and return from whence they came; but the great mass come to stay, and will become founders of new homes. There are many reasons for this increased flow Westward. One is the financial disasters which have thrown large numbers out of employ. Another is the increased facilities of travel afforded by the railroads. Emigrating to the West is no longer a dreary pilgrimage of weeks; an easy railroad journey of a few days sets the immigrant down at his destination. Moreover, he no longer waits half a generation before neighbours thicken around him; for the process of settlement is so rapid that a nation is born in a day, and schools, and Churches, and other institutions of civilisation spring up at once. The railroads, again, in their own interests, have scattered papers, handbooks, and maps, setting forth the attractions and capacities of these Western lands as no bureau of immigration could ever do: and last, but not least, farming has never been more prosperous in the United States than during these years of general disaster.

Our next extract is from the Times of Dec. 16, 1878, telling the story of the annexation of Walfisch Bay and surrounding territory in South Africa in March last (1878). We quote as follows:—

"Annexation.—Papers relating to South Africa, recently laid before Parliament, contain a proclamation, dated the 12th of March, by Staff Commander Dyer, of her Majesty's ship Industry, declaring that he has taken possession of Walfisch Bay and certain surrounding territory in the name of her Majesty. The coast line thus obtained for the Cape Colony, with the sanction of the Secretary of State, extends from the Orange river to the Cunene river, and this was the only territory defined in the arrangements for the cession made by Mr. Palgrave, the Special Commissioner, with the Damara chiefs, the extent inland being left for after arrangement. Commander Dyer, finding there was no fresh water at Walfisch Bay, deemed it indispensable to provide for a supply of water and good pasturage, and accordingly he extended the settlement Eastwards from thirteen to eighteen miles inland, describing and including this territory in the proclamation. He writes:—'The Union Jack was hoisted and saluted with 21 guns and a feu de joie in the presence of all the white people, of the Bay, and some of the neighbouring Tribes of Hottentots and Damaras. The wishes of the Governor of the Cape to give as much publicity to the proclamation as possible were carried out with every ceremony, and in accordance with the custom of the adjacent Tribes. The natives specially invited by me from a distance to witness it were entertained in honour of the occasion, and apparently were much pleased and satisfied with the annexation, which I caused to be explained to them through an interpreter.' In a letter of the 5th of July the Secretary of State, Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, approves the proceedings of Staff-Commander Dyer in annexing Walfisch Bay to the British Crown."

Taken together these are remarkable instances of the growth of the world-wide Empire of the Anglo-Saxons, the Houses of Ephraim and Manasseh, who, ere long, we believe, will be united, and, in junction with Judah, will rule the whole earth.

ANOTHER TESTIMONY TO THE GOOD DONE TO A MAN'S SOUL BY THE IDENTITY BELIEVED.

Our witness is now a Yorkshire working man, a resident in Hull. He tells us he has been finally persuaded of the truth of the new doctrine by a late number of the Banner of Israel; but that God used Mr. E. Hine's "Forty-Seven Identifications" to bring him back from rank Infidelity to the feet of Jesus a saved man. "I was taught," he says, "by a Non-conforming father the way of truth. I did not depart from this good way till I was twenty-six years of age. Then, by coming in contact with a man who did not believe in Christianity, but who admired Mr. Bradlaugh, Mrs. Besant, and was a reader of the National Reformer, I soon, consequently, lost my hold of my faith, and sought for a true and a great light to lighten my path, but none came. The doings of the world (so to speak) seemed to agree with unbelief. I was lost—that is, I could not find my way. I walked in darkness. My intellect became clouded. How I longed for books to enlighten me! I read the Bible again; but its apparently contradictory teaching, and what I thought its unseemly language, disgusted me. I resolved to cast the Book into the fire; but I hesitated to do that. Most marvellously, I may say providentially, there was sent then to my aid a little book, the "Forty-Seven Identifications," by Mr. Edward Hine. I read it. I may say I devoured that book. Thank God, I am what I am! not now an Atheist. No! but a believer in all things appertaining to Israel's holy God. I assure you I now take every opportunity of introducing the Banner and the whole question everywhere, and I freely distribute my own papers after I have myself read them."

Our readers will agree with us this is remarkable additional evidence of the spiritual blessing our subject has been to this new witness of its truth. He has written to us evidently under the mistaken impression that the author of the "Forty-seven Identifications" and the editor of the Banner of Israel are one and the same person. We gladly publish the letter because we rejoice at the extended usefulness of Mr. Hine's wonderful work, which, indeed, opened our own eyes; and we are glad to record and publish every true case of spiritual good to the souls of men by belief in our Identity, bringing them "from darkness into light, from the power of Satan unto God, that they may receive forgiveness of sins, and inheritance among them which are sanctified by faith that is in the Lord Jesus Christ" (Acts xxvi. 18).

Afghanistan.—"A Woman" writes:—"The following extract from 'Maurice's Indian Antiquities,' vol. i., who in his turn quotes from the 'Ayeen Akbory' by Abul Fazil, the learned secretary of Akbar, in the 16th century, may contain some interest, as showing the importance which was attached to the possession of Cabul as early as that period:—'It (Cabul) is the gate of Hindostan towards Tartary, as Kandahar is towards Persia, and if both places be properly guarded, that extensive empire is safe from the irruption of foreigners.' Similar to this observation, which is taken from the 'Ayeen Akbory,' is a remark in the short description of Asia (p. 7), 'that according to the Indians no man can be called the ruler of India who has not taken possession of Cabul.'"—Times, November 15, 1878.

Digitized by Google

Review.

A Rectification of Our Frontiers; or, the Divine Challenge Accepted. By the Rev. G. A. Rogers, M.A., Trin. Col., Camb., Vicar of Christ Church, Dover. Jas. Nisbet & Co., Berners-street, W. Price sixpence.

WE have much pleasure in drawing the attention of "all-Israelite" readers to the above capital and clever pamphlet by our friend and supporter, the Vicar of Christ Church, Dover. We hail this little work because it gives us a new and "Identity" reading of Mal. iii., and throws some striking ethnological and historical proofs of our Identity into the foreground of the argument, from which our readers will derive instruction. Chapters v. and vii., with their foot-notes, are especially valuable at the present time. The object of the little volume is to put before the House of Israel (our own nation) the duty, privilege, and need of giving to the Lord really according to our means, and on a scale which the Lord Himself demands distinctly of us British folk. Mr. Rogers performs his task in a clear, lucid, clever, and thoroughly masterly style, quite in the lines of the teaching of the BANNER, and we are confident that if all our friends will read this little work, they will not grudge their money or their time. We thank our rev. friend for the clear and outspoken way in which he has, in this pamphlet, proclaimed his own belief in our Identity with Lost Israel.

Correspondence.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—Permit me, as a constant reader of the BANNER, to correct your reiteration of an assertion made some time ago by Mr. Hine, that Queen Victoria reigns over representatives of every nation on the globe except Russia.

The Mennonites have emigrated largely from that country to this and the United States, and before venturing this letter I applied to the Minister of the Interior, who kindly procured for me the following information from the Department of Agriculture. "The first Mennonites entered Canada in 1874, to the number of 1562. They have since continued to come, and the number at present, in Manitoba, is about 8,000." The number in the United States is, I believe, about 25,000, and more are expected both there and here in the spring. A large tract of land has been granted them in the province of Manitoba, and they are generally spoken of highly as sober and desirable immigrants, as are the Icelanders, who are also pouring in.

Yours faithfully,

Montreal, January 28, 1879. A BENT OAR.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—If the interpretation referred to at page 371 of the BANNER, No. 98, of Nov. 13, 1878, on "And the great city was divided into three parts" (Rev. xvi. 19), be correct, it can only apply to England and not to Great Britain, as the Church of England, or Episcopacy, is not the established religion of Scotland—Presbyterianism taking its rise at the Reformation in the latter, as Episcopacy did in England. If, however, it be said the Protestant religion was founded in both kingdoms at the Reformation, then the interpretation will hold good and logically apply as well to the one as to the other, because it is very peculiar, and favourable to your idea, that the Presbyterian Church of Scotland, is more strongly or plainly "divided into three parts" than is the Church of England, for she is split up into the Established, the Free, and United Presbyterian Churches; and each of these sections of the original Church are subdivided into three schools of thought and practice, like the Church of England—viz., Evangelical or Low Church, Broad Church or Rationalistic, and High Church or Ritualism. These sad results in both lands are the evil fruits of coming into too close contact with Popery, "the mystery of iniquity," and the Rationalism of infidel Germany. And sadder still, the really good Evangelicals are powerless from inertion, or being overpowered by majorities of those who are heterodox; so that evil progresses, and decay is visible on every hand. It is, therefore, to be feared that the mention of the "great Babylon" being visited with the wrath of God in the same reference you quote (Rev. xvi. 19) that "the great city was divided into three parts," betokens that "a house divided against itself cannot stand." And such a fall is all the more likely should evil influences be carried again into power upon the top of the rising flood of Disestablishment, or destruction of the national Churches, without the great Head of the Church arises in mercy, as it is to be fervently hoped—"When the enemy comes in as a flood, the Spirit of the Lord shall lift up a standard against him"—and saves His Church.

Yours truly,

Stirling, February 5, 1879. W. E. WEBSTER, Captain.

NOTICE.

WE draw attention to what is going on in Launceston, Tasmania, as published below, with the greatest satisfaction. The Rev. Canon B. Brownrigg is determined "to publish" the glorious truths he sees so clearly, and may God bless and prosper his efforts!

"THE STANDARD OF EPHRAIM."

Under the above title it is intended to publish a bi-monthly Serial, advocating the Identity of the British nation with the kingdom of Israel.

The Anglo-Israel question will be fully discussed, objections and queries answered, pamphlets for and against the Identity will be reviewed, and selections given from English Identity Serials.

The Serial will consist of eight pages, demy quarto, and be published on the 1st and 15th of each month. Subscription, 4s. a year, paid in advance. Editor, the Rev. Canon Brownrigg, Launceston, Tasmania.

The first number will be published (D.V.) on the 1st of January, 1879, provided the full number of subscribers is obtained before the end of the third week in this month. Country subscribers may remit their subscriptions by stamps to either the editor or to Messrs. Hudson and Hopwood, Launceston. The subscriptions will be acknowledged in the Serial.

ENGLAND THE BLEST!

(From the Durham Advertiser, December 6, 1878.)

"A little one shall become a thousand, and a small one a strong nation."

ENGLAND beloved! for thee we claim
A blessing in Victoria's name—
A blessing as the royal heir,
Favoured with Heaven's exalting care.

A little one thou wert and small,
A cypher on this earthly ball,
Till He whose word fulfilled must be,
Enthroned thee monarch of the sea.

A small one—till a hand Divine
Dominion gave thy sceptred line—
Thine heritage the wastes to tread,
The desolate build, the earth to spread.

Forth springing from thine island source,
"As willows from the water course,"
Preserved to multiply and root,
To blossom o'er the world with fruit.

A nation strong—established o'er
The plains of many a distant shore,
Not as a taunt, nor alien guest—
To people nations thy behest.

"The Gates of enemies" by thee
Possess'd, the Empire of the free—
Before thee kings and princes bow,
Turn to thy light, thy sway avow.

Land of mercy! land of light!
Fair deeds adorn thy regal might—
To loose the captives, and assuage
The griefs that dim life's mortal page.

England the blest! thy horn hath been
Exalted by a Power unseen,
Who destined thee the earth to store,
And harvest fruits for Zion's shore.

England the blest! look forth and see
The wonders He hath wrought for thee—
Long promised gifts have been thy dower,
Possessions, riches, fame, and power.

England the blest! thy greatness read
In covenant sealed to Israel's seed—
Thy feelings pledged, a witness light,
To keep the truth, maintain the right.

Isles of the North! exalt His praise!
His glory sound through earth's highways!
He sheltered, blest thee—and 'tis meet,
To lay thy triumphs at His feet!

Send out thy light! for "as the sun"
Thy throne before Him stands—and none
Can stay His purpose, nor His smile—
His dew upon blest England's Isle!

Durham, November 30, 1878.

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements
(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O O payable at Ludgate-circus.

BOOKS, ETC.

Now ready price 7s., post free 6d. extra.

THE SECOND VOLUME OF THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

This volume contains a large number of articles on our Identity with Lost Israel, by the best and most learned writers on the subject. Also many interesting papers on the Great Pyramid by Professor Piazzi Smyth, F.R.S.E., Astronomer-Royal for Scotland, Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A., Major H. A. Tracey, R.A., Charles Horner, Esq., and others. London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

Temporary Office:—
20, WARWICK LANE, LONDON, E.C.

President:—

Vice-Presidents:—
ADMIRAL DUNN, Weston-Super-Mare.
CAPTAIN E. WEBSTER, Stirling.
Rev. A. J. J. CACHEMAILLE, M.A., Vicar of S. Mary's, Oldham.
Dr. J. M. GRANT, Surgeon-General, Camp, Aldershot.

Chairman of Committee:—
Mr. E. W. BIRD (Philo-Israel), Bristol.

Committee:—
MAJOR-GENERAL WM. HILL, Bath.
COLONEL BENTINCK, Grosvenor-square, W.
CAPTAIN BAYLY, R.N., Streatham, S.W.
Mr. JOHN S. ANDERSON, Upper Norwood, S.E.
Mr. W. BRAIKENBRIDGE, South Norwood, S.
Mr. ROBERT BANKS, London, E.C.
Mr. BENTINCK CANNEY, Lewisham, S.E.
Mr. FREDERICK CLIFT, B.A., Upper Norwood, S.E.
Mr. JOHN T. FLETCHER, Upper Norwood, S.E.
Rev. F. B. A. GLOVER, M.A., St. James, W.
Mr. H. L. GUERRIER, Tooting, S.W
Mr. W. H. GUEST, London, E.C.
Mr. CHARLES HORNER, Mortlake, S.W.
Mr. W. W. INCE, Douglas, Isle of Man.
Mr. DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, J.P., St. John's-wood, N.W.
Mr. H. H. PAIN, Bromley, Kent, S.E.
Mr. W. H. PETERS, J.P., Exeter.
Dr. H. HODSON RUGG, St. John's-wood, N.W.
Mr. J. L. WOOD, New Southgate, N.
(With power to add to their number.)

Treasurer:—
Dr. H. HODSON RUGG, 1, Grove-road, St. John's-wood, N.W.

Hon. Secretary:—
REV. JAMES BILLINGTON.

This Association has been established to bind in closer union the many friends who rejoice in having a portion with the long Lost Tribes of the House of Israel; also to extend the knowledge of the truth that the Anglo-Saxon races are now identified with those Lost Tribes of the House of Israel. These objects, it is thought, will be best accomplished by means of Drawing Room and Public Meetings, by Sermons, Lectures, Bible Readings, by the diffusion of Literature upon the subject, and by such other ways and means as the Committee may from time to time determine.

The Honorary Secretary or the Treasurer will be glad to receive the names of friends wishing to join the ASSOCIATION or to subscribe to its Funds.

Members' Annual Subscriptions to be not less than 2s. 6d. per annum.

Donations and Subscriptions are urgently needed to carry on the work.

Contributions are much needed for the Free Circulation Fund of the Association, which disseminates works by VARIOUS WRITERS on the Identity Question.

Friends who will arrange for, or assist in, the arrangements for Lectures in their respective localities, under the auspices of the Association, are requested to address the Hon. Secretary at the office of the Association, from whom all particulars, and every assistance for the effective carrying out of the same, may be obtained.

J. BILLINGTON, Hon. Sec.

SOME of PHILO-ISRAEL'S papers, as they have appeared in THE BANNER, will be separately published from time to time in the form of Letters, for distribution.

No. 1. "The Identity of the British with Lost Israel."
No. 2. "The Glory of God."
No. 3. "An Address to British Soldiers."
No. 4. "An Address to British Sailors." (In the Press).

Others will follow. Price One and Sixpence per 100; less quantities in proportion: postage extra.

Apply to R. Banks, 5 Racquet-court, Fleet-street. Also all Booksellers and Publishers.

MISCELLANEOUS.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

DOUBLE NUMBERS DURING 1879.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT.

Owing to the increasing interest taken in the Identity movement, it is found necessary to occasionally enlarge our space to make room for the important papers constantly reaching the Editor. It has, therefore, been determined to issue Twelve Double Numbers during 1879, for which Twopence will be charged. The first of these series of Double Numbers was issued the first week in January, and one on each succeeding first week in the month during the year.

	£	s.	d.
Annual Subscription for one copy, weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free	0	7	6
Two copies (including Double Numbers) ...	0	12	4
Three " " " " ...	0	18	8
Four " " " " ...	1	6	2
Six " " " " ...	1	17	4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-Grand, London, to W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

"BANNER OF ISRAEL" FREE CIRCULATION FUND.

	£	s.	d.
Major Maxwell Reeve...	0	15	0
Philo-Israel, Bristol	4	0	0
A Friend at Leeds	3	0	0
A Friend..	0	0	6

The following are a few extracts from letters received, and will give some idea of the mode of distribution:

"I am very anxious to indoctrinate the 'Identity' amongst our Sunday Schools, and the Teachers are willing to listen to me on the subject. If I may venture to say so, I can circulate some hundreds.—E. T., Siddal, Halifax." [200 copies sent.]

"Anglo-Israel Association, Sheffield.

"I shall be glad to receive a parcel of 'Banners' for free circulation, to give away at our meetings.—G. W. S., Hon. Sec." [200 copies sent.]

"I venture to write and ask if you will kindly supply me with about 100. I am sorry that I am not in a position to pay for them, but seeing that a Free Circulation Fund has been opened, I shall only be too glad if I can render the cause any assistance by distributing to the best of my ability what you may send me.—J. F. W., Darnley, near Yorkshire." [150 copies sent.]

FUNDS URGENTLY NEEDED to carry on this work.

Communications to be addressed to the Secretary of the "Banner of Israel Free Circulation Fund," Mr. R. Fergusson Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-st., London. E.C., to whom all remittances for this object should also be made, but NOT to the Editor of the BANNER—Philo-Israel.

THE TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL FOUND AND IDENTIFIED IN THE BRITISH NATION.

EDWARD HINE

(The well-known writer on this subject) will deliver his POPULAR LECTURE In the following halls:—

1879.
March 5th, New Cross Hall, Lewisham High-road.
" 11th, Hawkston Hall (Newman Hall's Church), Westminster Bridge-road.
" 25th. St. JAMES'S HALL, Regent-street.

Doors open at 7; Chair taken at 7.30.

Subscriptions will be thankfully received by MR. LOVELAND, Shoreham, Sevenoaks; MR. STEPHENSON, 123, Newgate-street, London. Funds are needed to defray the heavy expenses, as admission to all the Lectures is free.

Just Published, price 3d.

EPISCOPACY, NOT ESTABLISHMENT, THE BANE OF THE NATIONAL CHURCH.

BY A LAY MEMBER OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND.

W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row; and the Protestant Tract Society, 17, Buckingham-st., Strand.

Now ready, price 6d., post free 7d

THE ANSWER to the EASTERN QUESTION as shewn in the IDENTITY of the BRITISH with ISRAEL. By the Author of the "New Old Story."

"The author has well managed her topic; her style of writing is clear and vigorous, and well calculated to do good service to the cause."—PIAZZI SMYTH.

London: S. W. Partridge & Co., 9, Paternoster-row.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION. A course of FIVE LECTURES will be delivered in Devonport-street Chapel, Commercial-road, E. (opposite Arbour-square), on the following evenings:—

Tuesday, March 4th, by the Rev. J. BILLINGTON. Subject: "Judah and Israel: Their Distinction and Difference."

Tuesday, March 11th, by DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, Esq., J.P. Subject: "Historical Evidences of Identity."

Tuesday, March 18th, by CHARLES STUBBS, Esq., B.A. Subject: "Scriptural Evidences of Identity."

Tuesday, March 25th, by DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, Esq., J.P. Subject: "Britain Fifth and Last Monarchy."

Tuesday, April 1st, by the Rev. J. BILLINGTON. Subject: "Objections to Anglo-Israel Theory Considered."

Chair to be taken at 8 o'clock each evening.

ADMISSION FREE. COLLECTIONS.

BOOKS, ETC.

THE GREAT PYRAMID. NOW READY, PHILO-ISRAEL'S NEW WORK, 56 pages, Illustrated with Diagrams, price 4d., post free 5d.

AN ELEMENTARY DIGEST or SKETCH OF THE CHIEF FACTS and TEACHINGS of the GREAT PYRAMID of EGYPT; adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific. By PHILO-ISRAEL; together with Original Papers by the following leading Pyramidists, republished mostly from the BANNER OF ISRAEL (by kind permission of the proprietor)—viz., Professor Piazzi Smyth, the Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A., Charles Horner, Esq., and Major H. A. Tracey, R.A. Being a pamphlet by five authors (a Pyramid number).

Opinion of Mr. Charles Horner, regarding the above work, after perusal of the same:—"I think your design of the Pyramid pamphlet excellent. I know well that it is a book urgently needed, since, under God's blessing, it will, I feel convinced, convert many to Christ. Your part (Philo-Israel's) I deem unexceptionable. It is both terse and understandable to the many, which is the great object you have had in view. I should like to see thousands circulated amongst our intelligent artisans, and hope God will raise some to do this."—C. HORNER, Dec. 12, 1878.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

Second edition, sixth thousand.

Fancy paper covers, 6d.; cloth, gilt lettered, flush, 1s.

THE HISTORY OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL: How They Were Lost, and How They Were Found. Told for the children. By PHILO-ISRAEL. Adapted for use by parents, Sunday School and other teachers, with questions on the chapters added.

For favourable notices of this work by Professor Piazzi Smyth, John T. Gott, Esq., and others, see handbills. W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

"The History of the House of Israel—told for the children—is a very valuable addition to our children's libraries. It gives a clear account of all the chief points of interest, in language suited to the comprehension of children, and ought to be in the hands of every mother and teacher who believes in our Identity with Israel. It supplies a want I have long felt as the mother of a large family."

ARE THE ENGLISH PEOPLE THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL? By PHILO-ISRAEL Price 4d.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

Price 6d.; or with illustrative map, 8d.

BRITAIN (OR ISRAEL) THE FIFTH AND LAST, AND THE UNCONQUERABLE EMPIRE. By JOHN GILDER SHAW.

Price 3d.; post free, 3½d.

CHRONOLOGICAL CHART OF BRITISH VICTORIES OVER THE CONTINENTAL POWERS, ranging from the battle of Cressy (1346), to our last victory, the taking of Sebastopol, Sept. 8, 1855. Arranged by J. G. SHAW, of Leeds.

"We trust Mr. Shaw's labour in preparing this paper may be appreciated by the public and be largely sold."—Banner of Israel.

Shortly will pe published, price 6d.

RESULTS OF ISRAEL'S OBEDIENCE. A review of the successive steps which have led to the present condition of Britain (or Israel), the Fifth and Last Empire.

London: Published by Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; and may be had of the Author, 20 Park-row, Leeds, and of all booksellers.

Now Ready. Price 6d.

COMMON SENSE AND THE CRISIS. The Way Out of all the National Difficulties, and the Right Course to Pursue under the very Trying Circumstances, clearly shown through the Identification of the Lost Tribes of the House of Israel with the British Nation. By C. W. E.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row
Norwich: Philip Soman, Argus Office.

Now ready, price One penny, post free 1½d. One dozen copies, post free 1s. 100 copies 6s., post free 7s.

THE IDENTITY OF THE BRITISH NATION WITH THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. THE CLUE TO THE EASTERN QUESTION. By C. W. E.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

Subscription 5s. a year, post paid. Payable in advance Back numbers of the present volume can be supplied if desired.

OUR REST. A Periodical bearing on the Questions of Christ's Second Coming and the Preparation of the Church (Christ's Bride) for that event. In each number are discussed the Scientific and Religious Discoveries in the Great Pyramid of Egypt.

Orders for the above will be received by W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick Lane, E.C.; or by THOMAS WILSON, Publisher, 188, E. Monroe Street, Chicago, Ill., U.S.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed:—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, 5, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, MARCH 5, 1879.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. III. No. 115. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, MARCH 12, 1879. [ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
Israel's Great African Empire	109
Israel's Identification Association, Bristol and Clifton	110
From Assyria to Britain: A Bird's-eye View of Hebrew History. Part III. By William Burnett Coates	110
Our Earliest Ancestors. Part II. By J. Thomson	111
Is the British Nation Descended from the Lost Ten Tribes? An Affirmative Note. Part II. By P. J. Holdsworth	113
"Lo, the People Shall Dwell Alone, and Shall Not be Reckoned Among the Nations." Part II.	114
"Manasseh" on the Chief of Nations, and the Mistress of the Seas	115

ISRAEL'S GREAT AFRICAN EMPIRE.

IT has come to that! A statesman of repute, held high in honour by our rulers, and so held deservedly, has decided in his own mind that the whole of Central Africa, from Gardafui in the far North-east right down to the Cape of Storms, at the very ends of the South African Continent, is marked off and destined to form a great dominion under "the Crown of England"—such a dominion, too, as shall be greater and more progressive than either Australia or America! What will Mr. Gladstone say to this? How he will reject with horror even the very idea of such a future prospect for his country! Yet, being Israel, we know that God has destined her for even a grander position than that of the owner of such a "dominion" as Africa would make from Gardafui to the Cape of Good Hope! Hers is to be "the kingdom, and dominion, and the GREATNESS of the kingdom under the whole heaven, as the people of the saints of the Most High" (Dan. vii. 27).

Why, then, should we wonder because Sir Bartle Frere, more far-seeing than his fellows, looks out upon the immense Continent where his lot is at present cast as an honoured pro-consul of his Queen, and claims the land in the name of God for his countrymen as their destined heritage? Yet so it is! Let our readers judge for themselves, and, reading what appeared in the Pall Mall Gazette of the 17th December, 1878, let them thank God that our Identity with Israel is testified by the blind witnessing of such facts as Sir Bartle sees to be likely soon to come to pass. His forecast relates to no trifling matter. It will be no "fortuitous coincidence!" The creation of a "dominion" in connection with our Crown, which shall be coterminous with the whole of Central and Southern Africa when it takes place, will be a "sign" to the world at large which no man can fail to note and lay to heart to prove we are verily God's people Israel—"His dominion!"—the possessors of the whole earth! The extract from the Pall Mall Gazette to which we desire to draw attention is as follows:—

In a letter to a friend, dated Pietermaritzburg, Natal, November 4, 1878, Sir Bartle Frere writes:—"There can be no doubt that there is a great Empire in the future between the Cape of Storms and Gardafui. . . . I wish you could have come on here and seen what part the Southern provinces of such an Empire promise to play hereafter. It is not easy to make a great fortune here in a few years, as in Australia or America; but a bare subsistence is so easily got, and one so comfortable, that the less ambitious are soon content, and cease to work energetically. Hence the danger of a large proportion of the white population falling into a state of easy-going lotus-eating epicureanism. But the Northern races thrive here as well as the Kaffirs, who are quite the finest race physically on this East Coast of Africa. But they require ruling; an Arab conquest would be a great help, and, still better, a Scotch immigration. But even now there are, I hope, the elements of a great dominion which, under the Crown of England, may be greater and more progressive than either Australia or America. We have here many things that are wanting there. The Dutch are naturally Conservatives; the natives may become an excellent labour class, and there is little of the rowdy or Communist element. There are plenty of good public men, quite equal to all the requirements of self-government. The unsettled native questions, the vast distances, the scattered population, and the local prejudices are the obstacles to progress; and if I have done something to remove them I shall not regret my dreary seven months in barracks at King William's Town last year, or my equally unexpected detention here this year."

Our readers will doubtless note with satisfaction Sir Bartle Frere's confident prediction. Even now, when war has not ceased, and the Zulus, lately so restless, have inflicted a grievous injury against our too slender forces on the frontier, he looks forward to the time when a great dominion under the Crown of Britain shall be added to Israel's heritages, and a giant Empire be born to be one of Israel's company of nations, in loving union and concord with "the Great Mother in the Isles of the West"—the central link of the already "mighty federation of States, the greatest the world has ever seen."

The present, no doubt, is a period of great suspense and severe crisis in the South African States subject to our Crown. The confederation of the scattered colonies which make up the present South African pro-consulate of Sir Bartle Frere has not yet taken place, and till it does we see no prospect of any lasting peace for that land. We are at present no longer at war with the Kaffirs, but another trouble with Cetywayo, the Zulu chief, has broken out, and such, we opine, will continue to be the case till the colonies, having resolved to follow the only course possible to them—namely, to confederate, the (at present) loosely-joined settlements—will be born in a day, and, becoming a "nation," will, under Israel's rule, develop into one of the nation colonies of our race, as God intends and has promised they shall all become in His good time.

Digitized by Google

The nature of the trouble, then likely to befall us with Cetywayo was so graphically stated in the extract from the Pall Mall Gazette, that we reprint it for the benefit of our readers who have not seen it before, and who have as yet failed to appreciate the exact connection between "Israel-obedient" and Israel's company of nations living in peace with one another. Our extract is as follows:—

Sir Michael Hicks-Beach's answer to Mr. Courtney's question in the House of Commons last night shows that an ultimatum has in effect been sent to Cetywayo. That the demand to the Zulu chief to "summon his counsellors and send proper persons to receive the award about the disputed territory"—territory which certainly does not belong to Cetywayo—"and further communication regarding our future relations," may lead to a peaceful settlement is quite possible. But it is impossible not to be struck with the similarity between this message to Cetywayo and that sent by Lord Lytton to Shere Ali. Cetywayo has been played with much in the same way as the Afghan ruler, and the result is that he has acquired an overweening impression of his own power and importance. It is therefore far from improbable that he will treat Sir Bartle Frere's despatch with contempt. In that case immediate hostilities are unavoidable. We have been brought to our present position by the persistent confidence expressed by our most trusted agents in both Cetywayo and his subordinate Secocoeni; and we foolishly allowed both to acquire arms to an extent far in excess of any peaceful needs. Now we find that a very grave miscalculation has been made; and we fear it is too much to expect that a savage ruler, who has no idea of our real power, will give way at the first summons. To leave him time, however, to do what he pleases on the frontier, without any power of making reprisals as a favourable opportunity might offer, would be the height of folly. Dangerous as the position may seem, therefore, it is impossible to regret that Sir Bartle Frere has decided to bring matters to a crisis.

That war is the result of the late complications we now know to our terrible cost; but God is overruling all events for His people Israel, and we are satisfied that the unsettled state of matters at the Cape will (so we believe) pass away as soon as the colonists, by obedience to the Lord's will in the matter of confederation, shall bring down His blessing on their land, and enable them by their united strength to present a bold front to their native enemies, and make Kaffir and Zulu wars as impossible at the Cape as Maori wars are out of date and things of the past in New Zealand.

We say, therefore, again to our countrymen what God means us, even in this dark hour of humiliation, trial, and disaster, to remember: that He is our God and we His people; that He has us by our right hand, holding us by the right hand of His righteousness; and knowing that, we can, though sorrowing and trembling, yea, through blinding tears, look up in His loving face, and believe Him when He says to us even now: "Fear not . . . . Fear not . . . . I will help thee, saith the Lord, and thy Redeemer, the Holy One of Israel" (Isa. xli. 13, 14; liv. 9).

February 12, 1879.

ISRAEL'S IDENTIFICATION ASSOCIATION, BRISTOL AND CLIFTON.

SINCE the formation of this association, on the 6th April, 1875, £94 odd have been expended by it in the publication and dissemination of Identity truth. There have been circulated over 60,000 leaflets, 500 pamphlets, 2,100 BANNERS, 110 copies of the children's "History of Israel," and these have found their way to many distant and different parts of the world.

Besides this, the association has held public meetings once a month at least, since its organisation, and these meetings have been well attended.

The balance in hand on January 1st, 1879, was £4 19s. 6½d.

N.B.—There is a good library of Identity literature in connection with the association in Bristol.

FROM ASSYRIA TO BRITAIN.

A BIRD'S-EYE VIEW OF HEBREW HISTORY.

BY WILLIAM BURNETT COATES, HOME OFFICE, C.D.

(Concluded from page 97).

PART III.

IT may be thought, possibly asserted, that the Cimmerians—from their Palestine cradle to their prophetic graves—were so mixed up with the Scythians and other Asiatic races, for some two thousand and odd years, as to render recognition of the promise-marked race, even if they were Abraham's seed, an impossibility, and to fix the finger of history upon the doubt so as to impart to it the semblance of truth. Doubts may arise, but there seems no foundation firm enough to rest them on; no history to hint, much less to proclaim, that the restless Nomad Hebrews were linked in any way, save in idolatry, to other nations. On the contrary, sword in hand and a rugged road before them, like the divisions of an army on different routes—whether there was unity of plans, systematically arranged, or not; or whether or not they were guided by mere impulsive instinct, as are the feathered creatures that seek a genial clime—they seemed, when they would strike the tent and go, to move towards a common point. If this be so, we may fairly conclude it was the guiding eye that watches over Israel without slumbering, that led them on.

In his "Physical Geography of the Sea," at p. 36, &c., the late Captain Maury, of the U. S. Navy, affords what I conceive to be a beautiful illustration of Israel's passage through the lands of many people, without intermingling with them racially. He there tells us the Gulf Stream first poured from the Carribean Sea into the Gulf of Mexico, continues its course through the vast Atlantic to the British Isles without mingling with its waters; that the immense volumed stream cuts a channel for itself towards its British destination; and when it crosses the 40° of North latitude spreads itself over the surrounding waters, to diffuse a summer heat on the shores of our Northern regions, ere it bifurcates upon the British Isles, when one arm flows to the Spitzbergen Polar basin, the other into the Bay of Biscay.

Here, then, is a mighty power manifested by the sovereign hand that "led Israel as a flock" through the wilderness. For 3,000 miles He directs the warm waters of the Mexican Gulf on a mission of mercy and love, to mitigate the regions of winter that must otherwise bind us in manacles of intense frosts; whilst He so constitutes it as to forbid its commingling with the colder and less salt waters through which it forces its way, at a speed of four knots an hour, to diffuse its genial heat on Europe's frigid shores.

Could not the same Almighty power have directed the continuous stream of His people through the surging and opposing waves of various peoples, as they passed through them from Assyria to the North-west Isles of Europe; there to bifurcate as bifurcates the Gulf Stream—one portion of the people to find its goal in Britain, the other its home in "the Isle of Destiny?"

Mark, too, this Gulf Stream, upon crossing the 40° of North latitude, spreads over the surface of the colder waters before its bifurcation. To do this it must rise above the colder and less salt water above it, in order to command the surface. Just so the disguised Hebrew Tribes, when they cut their way out of Assyrian Media, rushed through Asia Minor, and, when across the Nor-east bounds of Europe, spread themselves over its surface, until a large portion of it was known as "Celtica."

As the Gulf waters expand, the benign influence of their heat is felt; so we find now the influences of our British-Hebrews, nèe Celts, Khumri, and Gael, like the reviving warmth of the Gulf Stream, diffusing themselves over many lands to bring spiritual and moral warmth to their inhabitants.

Blest above all other people, and blessing above all others,

Digitized by Google

as still flows the God-given Gulf Stream to exert its influence upon many climes, clothing our Isles with verdure, so the sons of our land stream forth to the uttermost parts of the earth, to bear the "glad tidings" committed most largely to their charge; so their presence soon corrects the tainted atmosphere of earthy-breathing; and so their moral influence prevails, until the heretofore arid wilderness of the human mind and thought begins to blossom, and bud, and bear new fruit: just as a tree upon which a different shoot has been grafted bears new fruit.

We are further told by Captain Maury—p. 29—that "the quantity of heat daily carried off by the Gulf Stream from its parent regions, and discharged over the Atlantic, is sufficient to raise mountains of iron from zero to the melting point, and to keep in flow from them a molten stream of metal greater in volume than the waters daily discharged from the Mississippi River!" We know not what the effect of "sowing beside all waters" may have been, or whether the moral warmth of Christian love, daily diffused by British Israel over earth's hardened face, is sufficiently hot to raise the temperature of cold and rigid ungodliness from the zero of unbelief to the heart's melting point; or to soften heathen idolatry, in its petrified state, until rivers of living waters flow, like a spiritual Mississippi, from the grace-dissolved hearts of those who constitute the world's mountains of wickedness; from whence hitherto upas-bed influences only went forth to destroy.

However, we do know that our Israel is not unmindful of the duty devolved upon it through the promises made to the fathers, and that exertive energy finds many a sphere for the love-laden missionary and the hardy pioneer.

Continually flows the Gulf Stream on its destined mission; continually issue "the living waters" our God has set within these Islands, as in an inexhaustible fountain, to bear their genial streams to many lands; there to overflow them, as with wine and milk, for soul-sustenance, "without money and without price." Freely we have received, freely we give; and joyfully we speed the "glad tidings of great joy" given to us for the behoof of those "who sit in the valley of the shadow of death."

Good news for Beni-Israel is a world-wide joy; for in this seed shall all its nations be blest. Israel's promise-gifts are all people's blessing. "Come with us and we will do thee good" is the spirit of Israel's advance. It breathes in his approach; it lives in his intercourse; and it is the soul of the civilising power he wields. It is not "of the earth earthy;" it is the offspring of the Divine Spirit, who works in him to will and to do of His good pleasure. It is the influence He imparts, honouring us by making us co-workers with Himself.

Hence He has given to Israel the Gates of his enemies; who are also "the Great King's" enemies, according to the promises; because we are permitted to be one with Him in God; and to enjoy such fruits in possessions, power, wealth, and honour as no other people or Empire ever enjoyed.

We know that "righteousness exalteth a nation," and that wickedness will destroy any people, as it brought destruction on the world before the flood, and afterwards upon "the cities of the plain," and upon successive Empires. We cannot boast of spotlessness; we are not much better than they were, although our Israel bears a different name; yet it has pleased our God to cherish us, and to make us to be in large measure "the salt of the earth;" not for our righteousness, but for the Father's sake—for His promises' sake, which He has been fulfilling to us, since, at our ever-memorable and glorious Reformation, we burst the bonds of idolatry that bound us to a counterfeit Christianity—a spurious admixture of truth and fable, of men and myths—and declared ourselves to be joined to the Lord in the new covenant, the covenant of "Grace and truth that came by Jesus Christ."

So far developed in His own good time as His people, we are under the "new name" that the mouth of the Lord did name; and since then, still more developed year by year, and now more rapidly—day by day; yea, it may be said, "hour by hour;" and so quickly does event after event occur, to ripen—may we say?—the outcome of our latter times, that the observer who takes the "Word of God" and His promises to His people for his standpoint, cannot but see the suggestive alternating phases as they arise, to place in position their attendant circumstances, preparative to the grand denouement of Israel's revelation to, it may be, the astounded world.

That the time is quickly approaching the events alluded to leave little doubt on the minds of the students of prophecy; but of the day and hour it is not for man to predicate. "The things that are revealed belong to us and to our children," and only these will bear the touch of human hand. However, we may, without presumption, reverentially study the "signs of the times," and compare them with the prophetic revelations the Lord has given to us for our learning and comfort. I venture to assert here that no unbiassed Christian can read the promises made by Him who sware to their future fulfilment, when He gave them to Abraham, and the successive promises given to Isaac and Jacob, unconditionally—distinguished from those afterwards conditionally enunciated by Moses—and who compares their details with the position, power, wealth, religion, possessions, enemies' gates, a company of nations, and other remarkable Identifications, only applicable to the British Empire, but must be constrained, in his search after the Lost Tribes, with his eye on it, to cry "Eureka, Eureka!"

In the Great Old Book a God-chosen people are set forth as the possessors of promises to be developed in after ages. Look at those promises, assuredly fulfilled and fulfilling somewhere; yet where are the recipients? Lost in a perfect ocean of heathenism! Dead, as foretold. "Resurgam" has been written when they entered the tomb of oblivion, without a trace of their Hebrew descent above them! Where are they? Read the book of Britain, and the dealings of God with her, as just alluded to, and as face answers to face in a glass, so will the features discovered in British history answer to the features of the promises recorded in God's Holy Book. Therefore, again we may conclude that, as God would not cast the children's bread unto dogs, so He would not rend His oath-confirmed promises from the people He foreknew, and lavish them upon mere Celtic Gentiles, uncovenanted and aliens from the commonwealth of His chosen inheritance.

I cannot, in the space of a short paper, enter into a résumé of the promises, so well and so frequently expounded by writers who have preceded me, and their evident fulfilment to the British people; but I would earnestly counsel the interested inquirer in this great and grand field of Biblical and historical eminence to procure and read the books and periodical information now continually appearing on this subject, in which will be found a marvellous fund of research and of pleasant instruction.

"OUR EARLIEST ANCESTORS."

LECTURE AT STALEYBRIDGE MECHANICS' INSTITUTE.

BY J. THOMSON.

(Concluded from page 98.)

PART II.

THE second lecture of the present series was delivered on Thursday evening at the Staleybridge Mechanics' Institution, by Professor W. Boyd Dawkins, of Owen's College, Manchester.

The subject was, "Our Earliest Ancestors." The lecture was illustrated with numerous diagrams. The chair was occupied by Dr. Hopwood, who introduced Professor Dawkins.

The Lecturer said he did not intend to go into the question of the antiquity of man, but into a general consideration relating to the earliest races of men represented in this country at the present time. In the present day, as could be seen even from the newspapers, the claims of races were coming more to the front. As an instance, they might look to Russia. The idea she had advanced within the past few years was that all who belonged to her in blood--the Slavs—were to be united under one rule, which was to be the rule of Russia. It was the same with other nations. And coming nearer home, that sort of idea had been put forward that the English race was a race one and indestructible. Under these circumstances he would put before them in broad outline the race which had occupied this country, and which was represented in the country at the present time. There were two distinct peoples living in this country. On the one hand, there was the Anglo-Saxon race, which arrived in this country in comparatively modern times. The Angles and Saxons began to arrive about the middle of the fourth century; but at the beginning of the seventh century they found the limits of England were represented by the Eastern half of Scotland and England. They came from the Continent, because Great Britain was a better land than their own. They followed the best centres of industry; and so he thought that if the industry declined now, and centred in lands still further West, the people would follow it. He mentioned this by way of parenthesis, because it was important to bear in mind that Englishmen were not called after England, but that was the name of the place called after Englishmen. The English people were like the snail which carried its habitation on its back, and were not named after the country where they were found. There were two distinct sets of Britons in this country. One was represented by a large stoutly-built race of people, possessed of blue eyes, fair hair, and of a skin which might be termed blonde. These were the CELTS. The other was a small black-haired people, and different altogether from the men who were ordinarily called Irish, Welsh, and Highland Scotch. He wished to call their special attention to that small dark element in the British population. Immediately before the time the Romans conquered this country its civilisation was comparatively high. There was a very elaborate form of government, a very elaborate system of domestic manners and customs, and also a civilisation which was essentially typified and exemplified by the use and the knowledge of iron. But long before that civilisation existed, there was a long period of civilisation known as the age of bronze; and long prior to that again there was the civilisation known as the polished stone age in which the people had no knowledge of any metal except perhaps gold, but they made all their instruments and implements of stone. It was of this last age that he intended to speak.

Digitized by Google

Many depressions in the ground could be seen in this country, and when these were opened out, they were found to be pit habitations, in and around which they found ample proofs of the character of the people who inhabited them. They found the remains of the animals they lived upon, such as the short-horned ox, the horned sheep, the goat, and the horse. It might be noted in passing that the horse was regularly used for food in this country up till the ninth century. They also found the remains of various breeds of pigs, and of a large breed of dogs. Many of their flint weapons, and knives, axes, and saws had been found. These people also engaged in the art of pottery; and they had also corn, as was proved by the discovery of many hand-mill stones for the grinding of corn. They had also tailors and dressmakers, as was proved by the various bone needles, and other articles showed that they were acquainted with the art of spinning and weaving. They were also given to personal adornment with shells, necklaces, ear-rings, &c., and they were also in the habit of painting their faces—a habit which was not altogether extinct at the present day—but at that time they did not use rouge, but a very inferior material, which they knew by the name of red raddle. The people had warlike proclivities, and used spears, axes, arrows, and the sling; and their fortified camps, such as that at Cissbury, in the South of England, showed that they had great military skill. The position of these camps in various parts of the country showed that the whole people lived in tribes, and lived in a state of continual raiding and warfare. At that time they had no newspapers, no amusements, nor anything to engage the attention of the people, and they were obliged to find excitement in some way. In fact, he believed that if we at the present day had not our reading and amusements we should take to fighting and stealing exactly in the same way as these people in the olden time. The social condition of the people of that time could most accurately be described by the old nursery rhyme—

> "Taffy was a Welshman, Taffy was a thief,
> Taffy came to my house and stole a piece of beef.
> I went to Taffy's house, Taffy was not at home,
> Taffy came to my house, and stole a marrow bone."

The lecturer next described the burial places of this ancient people, showing that they had what might be called family vaults in stone chambers. He then said they found that the continent of Europe passed through the same state of civilisation, from Scandinavia in the North, to Greece in the South, and as far West as the regions of Gibraltar. In Switzerland they constructed lake dwellings—built on piles near to the shore. The question then came, who were the people who introduced this civilisation into Britain and on the Continent? The examination of a large number of skulls and skeletons found in Wales first of all, and in other places afterwards, had resulted in this important conclusion—first of all that the people were small in size—5ft. 4in. in height, possessed of very well-developed heads, and all of them long from front to back. They also possessed very oval faces, without prominent cheek-bones, and the lower part of the face well back as compared with the prominent foreheads. It had been demonstrated that the representatives of this people now living were known by the name of the Basques, or as he preferred to call them, the Iberian people, found in the Western Pyrenees. They were driven out of the vast territory they occupied by the Celtic invasion—the Celts being tall, had light blue eyes and light hair, and who had this characteristic of round skulls, with the lower part of the face struggling to get in advance of their foreheads. There was complete evidence that the Celtic invasion in France took place during the polished stone age, and when the knowledge of bronze was being introduced. When this country was conquered by the Romans, and when Agricola was invading Wales, he wrote to his friend Tacitus, mentioning the small dark people having all the characteristics of the Iberians. They had been driven by the Celts to the most Northern parts of Scotland, the South-west of Ireland, and to the Welsh retreats; and even now on a market day in St. Asaph or Denbigh this distinct race of people could easily be detected, as well as in many other parts of the country. This was the race to which we owed the foundation of that civilization which we now possessed, who introduced our domestic cattle, the arts of agriculture and gardening, spinning and mining, and a great many other things which were directly traceable to this small dark people who formerly possessed the whole of that area of Britain and the Continent, and who were still represented among us.

Mr. J. F. Cheetham, in moving a vote of thanks to the lecturer, asked if he could give them any idea as to the time or period in history of the stone and bronze ages.

The Rev. R. G. Bulkeley seconded the resolution, and remarked that though he was not descended from the small dark race, but was a Welshman of Celtic origin, he took great interest in that question. He had been in every county in England; and in the Fen lands of Cambridge, where he had spent a good deal of his life, he had observed a number of those little dark people, and no doubt when they were driven out of other parts of England, the Fens in those times were almost unapproachable, except to those who knew them well.

The resolution having been put and carried,

Digitized by Google

Professor Dawkins thanked them, and said that in reply to the question put by his friend Mr. Cheetham, he feared he was unable to answer it; and he should adopt the simple one, and say that he did not know. The evidence brought forward as to the time that had elapsed in the stone and bronze ages was worthless, and they could not be summed up in any term of years, though the civilisation of Egypt was in full swing in all probability when the bronze age was in progress on the borders of the Mediterranean. But he need hardly tell them that this question of age was absolutely impossible to settle outside the limits of written records. As to the Fen lands he should not be surprised to find some of those small dark people in Cambridgeshire, since the Fens would offer the same refuge to them as they did at the time of the Norman conquest.

IS THE BRITISH NATION DESCENDED FROM THE LOST TEN TRIBES?

AN AFFIRMATIVE NOTE, BY P. J. HOLDSWORTH.

Reprinted (by request) from "Social Reformer," of Nov. 16th, 1878.

(Continued from page 99.)

PART II.

So much, then, is undeniably clear. The Hebrew kingdoms, once separated, had diverse histories. The career of one is traceable from the time of Moses, down to the nineteenth century. The career of the other closed, 2600 years ago, in Media. We shall now see how the Anglo-Israel theory starts from these plain, precise, incontestible, historical facts.

Sharon Turner, and a host of able historians, proceeding entirely on ethnic and secular principles, and writing years before this matter was mooted, assert positively that the birthplace of the great Anglo-Saxon Tribes was Media. Precisely, therefore, from that place in Asia to which, twenty-six centuries ago, a vast, restless, vigorous, indomitable people were deported, the Anglo-Saxon and its kindred races, some centuries later, came. Israel's grave was, in point of fact, the birthplace of the most resolute, energetic, and invincible of modern nations—the British.

And what does the name Saxons signify? This theory affirms that the term is simply "Isaac's sons,"—with the prefix eliminated; and claims that the title is manifestly a fulfilment of the Biblical statement:—"In Isaac shall thy seed be called." This, however I remark parenthetically.

That the Saxons moved Westward from their original seat is undeniable. No one doubts the fact. Their appearance in Western Europe proves that they shared in that immense Asiatic migration termed by Rask, the Sarmatic invasion. And that a large contingent of the Ten Tribes also moved Westward is equally certain. They had, doubtless, become gradually heathenised in their place of exile. For it was the recognised habit of Assyrian conquerors to impose upon subjugated races the dominant religion—a practice which, centuries after, was seen again in full vigour among the Mahommedans.

Now, in Esdras II., written according to Lucke and others about B.C. 44, occurs that well-known passage which circumstantially narrates the Westward movements of the captive Tribes, or a large contingent from them. Their pilgrimage, according to the writer of this book, occupied a year and a half, and terminated in a region called Ar-Sareth.

Have we, therefore, any secular hint of such a journey or such a place? Ample evidence is available on both points.

Let us analyse the statement of Esdras. The wanderers, migrating West, resolved to reach a land "where never man dwelt." In their journey they would, therefore, naturally take the unfrequented and unpopulous route to the North of the Caucasus, as the only other available way skirted the Southern shores of the Black Sea, and was peopled by turbulent tribes. And here the Identification is complete, for ancient Israelitish tombs abound along the Caucasus route. Rule, in his "Oriental Records," remarks, "Within the regions indicated as those of the Assyrian Captivity, under Tiglath Pileser II. or Sargon, or known by subsequent history, to have been occupied by Israelites in dispersion, are the Crimea and Tartary. In the Crimea there is perhaps the largest Necropolis the Hebrews possess in the whole world." And it contains graves of great antiquity, dating, in many cases, from the commencement of the Christian era.

But Esdras also tells us that they settled in Ar-Sareth. Now Ar-Sareth, like Ar-Moab, is a compound term. It means the "city of Sareth." And, by tracing the course of the emigrants, and allowing for the time specified, it is rather remarkable that we meet in Moldavia with the river Sereth, upon the banks of which is situated the "city of Sereth." A glance at the modern map of European Turkey proves this. The region indicated by Esdras retains its name to this day.

"Here," says Esdras, "they dwelt." Now what secular fact have we to correspond with his statement?

Simply this. Classic historians, speaking of a century or two before the Christian era, report that the Moldavian and Wallachian regions alluded to, were occupied by a brave race termed Getae or Deci. The former was the Greek, the latter the Roman name. This almost untameable nation, which gave the Romans prodigious trouble, was composed of various tribes. Its laws were said to have been imposed by one Zalmoxes, its earliest legislator. Now, analyse the names, and what do we find? Deci is evidently from the same root as the Latin decem, and Greek deka, signifying ten. And the names Zalmoxes is simply Za-el-Moxes—the God of Moses. In other words, this was a ten-tribed contingent, worshipping an ancient deified legislator under the name of the "God of Moses." Thus far the Deci or Getae, who, moving still further West, and splitting into sections, became the progenitors of those Low-Dutch branches of the Gothic or Teutonic family which were afterwards better known by their own names of Saxons, Angles, Danes, Jutes, and Normans.

Does the theory of "fortuitous coincidences" account for the perfect manner in which these facts fit one into the other?

I should, perhaps, at this juncture, anticipate an objection which may be raised upon the basis of the composite character of the British race.

I have already alluded to the fact of the Saxon, Norman, and Dane being different branches of one primitive stock. On this point there is positively no controversy. But, in order that I may show how fortified my position is, let me quote Thierry and Pritchard. The former ("History of the Norman Conquest"—book ii.) says:—"Such was the first appearance in England of the Northern pirates called Danes or Normans, according as they came from the islands in the Baltic, or from the coast of Norway. They descended from the same primitive race as the Anglo-Saxons." And the erudite Pritchard, in the third volume of his great work, testifies to the same effect.

But, perhaps, the further assertion may be made that there is Kymric or Welsh blood in the modern Briton. To this I reply that the Kymri are also Israelitish. Rawlinson—than whom no authority is greater—identifies the Kymri of Wales with the Kymbri of the Romans; and these latter are acknowledged by all scholars to be identical with the Kimmerians of the Palus Mœotis, or modern Sea of Azof, referred to by Homer, Herodotus, and others. Migrating Westward—the Kymri moved by way of the Cimmerian Bosphorus and Sea of Azof; and it was here that the classic writers first remarked the race.

Now, what is this name "Kymri?"

Within the last few years, certain cuneiform inscriptions which had long baffled the scholarship of the world, have yielded to the labours of men like Sayce, George Smith, Hincks, Rawlinson, and Talbot. The results of such Assyriological research materially elucidate this interesting subject. Dr. Hincks, for example, has quite recently deciphered the characters upon the

Digitized by Google

Black Basalt obelisk which was discovered at Nineveh by Layard. The inscription dates back to the ninth century B.C., and Hincks proves positively that the racial title Kymri or Khumree describes the land of Samaria or kingdom of Israel. Jehu, King of Israel, becomes, on the Assyrian obelisk, "Yahua-abil-Khumree."

Here, then, is the origin of the term "Kymri;" and, by the help of the classic historians, this migrating body of Israelites can be traced from the Assyrian kingdom to the extreme West of Europe, where they gave their name to the Kymbric Chersonese, modernly called Jutland. In B.C. 101, the Romans, under Marius, almost exterminated them, and the survivors crossed over to England. The modern Welsh, who call themselves Kymri, are the descendants of this race.

Before leaving this subject it is, perhaps, worth noting that, so late as the sixth century A.D., the learned language of the Welsh Bards was Hebrew, just as the Roman clergy use Latin, and the lettered Hindoos, Sanscrit. For Taliesin, the illustrious Druidical bard, declares in his poem,—Angar Cyryndawd, —"My lore has been declared in Hebrew, in the Hebraic tongue" (vide Davies' Mythology of the British Druids, page 573). Are these facts merely "fortuitous coincidences?"

(To be continued.)

"LO, THE PEOPLE SHALL DWELL ALONE, AND SHALL NOT BE RECKONED AMONG THE NATIONS."—NUMBERS XXIII. 9.

(Concluded from page 95.)

PART II.

WE have now to inquire in what sense we are to understand Balaam's prophetic words, and how we are to discover a people belonging to this world, busily connected with all the nations round them, as Twelve-Tribed Israel of old, and the Jews of today also are, and yet "dwelling alone," "not reckoned among the nations."

We observe in the first place that God's Word itself supplies the right meaning: "To the law and to the testimony." In Lev. xx. 24, 26, we have the clue. Israel was "a people of separation to the Lord from other people;" they were to be "holy," or set apart to Him; "for He is holy." Therefore, to exhibit that principle, He severed the Twelve Tribes from other people, "that they should be His." To the same effect are the following descriptions of Israel: "Ye shall be a peculiar treasure to Me above all people; a kingdom of priests, an holy nation" (Exod. xix. 5, 6). "For thou art a holy people unto the Lord thy God; the Lord thy God hath chosen thee to be a special people to Himself above all people that are on the face of the earth" (Deut. vii. 6). "Thou hast confirmed to Thyself Thy people Israel, to be a people unto Thee for ever; and Thou, Lord, art become their God" (2 Sam. vii. 24). "For Thou didst separate them (Israel) from among all the people of the earth to be Thine inheritance" (1 Kings viii. 51, 53). "Thy people Israel didst Thou make Thine own people for ever, and Thou, Lord, becamest their God" (1 Chron. xvii. 22). It is evident, then, that the fact that Israel is a people of separation to God's favour in a pre-eminent degree, is the sense in which Balaam saw they "dwelt alone" among the nations. And surely this selection was enough so to constitute them a people sui generis—a people pre-eminent always among the other nations, "dwelling alone" in privilege, "alone" in God's favour, "alone" in blessing.

Further, we find by reference to the Hebrew text of Numbers xxiii. 9, our present subject, that our view is fully borne out. What does the Rev. Herbert Marriott, at p. 423, vol. ii. of the BANNER OF ISRAEL, tell us is the exact true rendering of the passage? He says it is as follows: "Lo, a people to separation. It shall colonise. And in the Gentiles it shall not be reckoned (or reckon itself) as an equal." Here, he says, verbal Hebrew criticism demands that the Hebrews shall be the superior, and the Gentiles the inferior, race. Our opponents' arguments thus fall to the ground. The position of Israel is "alone" among the nations, because it is a position of separation from them, conferred not by territorial position, not by political greatness, not by any earthly qualification whatever, but simply and solely because they have been blessed of their God who selected them to be His people, and because He has gifted them during all time with the blessings, in embryo in ancient days, in full fruition now, granting them all the blessings grandly enumerated in Gen. xxii. 17, 18, and in many another passage of God's Word with which our readers are quite familiar.

In regard to the clause which declares Israel shall not be "reckoned" among the nations of the Gentiles, the Hebrew verb Ghah-sheb is found in this place, it is observed by one competent to speak, only in a reflexive form, and the passage should be read, "Israel shall not reckon itself as on an equality with, or among, the nations." This sense of superiority was felt by the Tribes when they were in Palestine, and God's Word says it shall be always the characteristic of Israel while under blessing. It cannot refer to Judah or the Jews, now under curse, because they do not, and cannot, reckon themselves as "separated for good" by God's blessings from the Gentiles. They are in, among, the Gentiles everywhere as "a byword and a hissing," depressed, down-trodden, and an inferior people.

Such, then, being the true meaning and application of the passage, let us see if the British answer to the prediction. Is this nation one pre-eminently set apart by the Lord Himself as a people of separation; a colonising race; and one which reckons itself as not on a par, but far above the Gentile nations around? We certainly answer in all respects to this description. "It is a matter of notoriety and observation from many standpoints, that we British occupy a position of ISOLATION with reference to the Gentile nations of Europe. In the first place, we are islanders geographically, cut off by the sea from the continentals. This fact has rendered us, no doubt, to a great extent, a separated, peculiar, isolated race. In many continental cities, in their English quarters, the British "dwell alone," as we all know. In the matter of language it is the same. Severed from the European nations, the bulk of our people refuse to learn the vernaculars of their neighbours, and proverbially disdain to acquire them. If they try to speak them, they fail, as a rule, most disastrously. Our Protestantism —so different from that of our (ostensibly) nearest of kin, the German races—is another barrier, and constitutes us a "people of separation."

Ours is a faith founded on spiritual religion, which appears, doubtless, to a politically protesting nation, as strange and unaccountable. It serves to "sever" us materially from the Teutonic, while Latin nations cannot disguise their wonder and contempt at the religious habits and Sabbath keeping, church-going ways to which a respectable minority of our people certainly do incline. The hauteur of the English character, its coldness, reserve, and distance, act always as repellants to continental visitors who come to see us in our island home, and most of them, we know, return to their fatherlands with strange and wondrous tales of the inexplicable, uncouth, cold, frigid, John-Bullism of our national temperament, which they can neither understand nor afford to treat with contemptuous indifference.

Our national customs, habits, amusements, tastes, prejudices —all these are enigmas to the continentals as a mass, and serve each, to a certain extent, to strengthen the impression that we British are a wonderful, incomprehensible nation, wholly diverse from the continental mould—"a people," in fact, "of separation," because we are "the Israel of God."

Digitized by Google

Then, again, do the British reckon themselves as on a par with the Gentiles surrounding them? Is it not a fact that we have always despised the French as combatants, and even now reckon with confidence that, as in times past so now, an Englishman or Briton is more than a match for any man against whom he may be pitted, the wide world over? Putting another sense on the words (we do not say it is the correct one), we would remark that Balaam declared the time would come when Israel as a nation would not be "reckoned up," or "reckon itself" among the nations. That time is now. Judah or the Jews are not a nation, and cannot so be reckoned. And as to the "Lo-ammi Israelites," they are not now known by the name, or reckoned up among the nations as Israelites, but by "another name," even by the name of the British.

Finally, in what other respects are we British especially a "people of separation to the Lord," and thus "dwell alone" as compared with our Gentile neighbours? We reply that—

(1) We are blessed with abnormal fecundity; (2) with boundless wealth; (3) with "a place of our own" where foot of foreign foe can never come, as God is true; (4) with "the Gate of our enemies;" (5) with home Gates ever free; (6) with a magnificent colonial Empire composed of a company of nations always at peace with us; (7) with a heathen Empire of universal extent and grandeur; (8) with the love of Sabbath observance; (9) with a national wish to honour the holy Decalogue; (10) with the evangelising spirit which would carry the Gospel "to ALL the families of the earth;" (11) with the promised "new covenant" and national outpouring of the Holy Spirit; and, lastly, with the prospect of immediate peace when all the people of the "earth" outside the Empire of Israel are plunged in war.

Verily the British in all this are, indeed, "a people of separation," so constituted by their God; they "dwell alone," and reckon not themselves among the nations. Brethren, for all this we call on you all as God's people Israel, saying, "Praise YE the Lord!" "Publish YE" the glad tidings that Israel is found; and while ye publish and while ye praise, forget not also to pray, saying, "O Lord Jehovah! save Thy people, the remnant of Israel!" (Jer. xxxi. 7).

"MANASSEH" ON THE CHIEF OF NATIONS, AND THE MISTRESS OF THE SEAS.

OUR friend Sir Walter Elliot, K.C.S.I., has kindly forwarded us the Hawick Advertiser for the 18th of January, 1879, from which we take the following most remarkable article on "England the Triumphant," published in the Merrimac Journal, at Amesbury, Massachusetts, U.S. We have seldom read a more striking confirmation of all our views regarding our Israelite origin from any source, and, as blind testimony, it is perfect. So exact is it that we feel our readers will say the sentiments are, nay, the very words, those of Philo-Israel! Yet it is the composition of an American; and Manasseh sees at last that Ephraim is greater than he! We thank God for this glorious admission: and we know that if Ephraim be the greater, there is no nation worthy to take the second place in comparison with the mother of the nations but the giant brother in the far West, Manasseh of the States! Let the reader well note all this writer admits. He says that Great Britain is—

1. Mistress of Southern Asia, ruler over the realms of ancient Babylon and Assyria—the destiny of Daniel's stone!

2. That henceforth it is not the Dominion will be annexed by the States, but the States by the Dominion—the foreshadowing of federation!

3. That already this Empire surpasses every other on the earth, —and ancient Rome's world-wide rule were as nothing to this modern Rome called England (Dan. vii. 27).

4. That she is mistress of the seas (Israel's destiny).

5. That she is the most powerful land Power upon earth, which is what God promised Israel should become (Isa. liv. 17, xli. 11).

6. That, as mother of the Anglo-Saxon nations, she is THE CIVILISER OF THE GLOBE—which is simply God's description of Israel—the central link which binds "the company of nations" that are joined to her (Gen. xxxv. 11; Isa. xxvii. 6)—the blossoming and budding one which "fills the face of the world" with civilizing Gospel "fruit" (Matt. xxi. 43).

With these words we ask Manasseh to address us in his most welcome monograph, on

ENGLAND THE TRIUMPHANT.

The triumph of Earl Beaconsfield in the British Parliament, each House supporting him by more than a party vote, makes him the foremost man of the nations. Bismarck is eclipsed, and his influence is crippled by a strong opposition. But the vote of Parliament is more important as it is an endorsement of a new colonial policy, which will make England more closely related to, and more powerful in, every quarter of the globe. First, Beaconsfield's hand was felt at the Suez canal, firm and decided, touching Egypt and following up to Abyssinia; then at South Africa in the annexation of territory, which a century will develop as the last century has North America. Next, India, by the establishment of a new Empire, and Victoria as Empress, made a closer union than had ever been anticipated. It merged the destinies of Great Britain and Hindostan. The acquisition of Cyprus and the protectorate of Turkey in Asia planted English power more firmly in the Orient. Now she comes up with Afghanistan, nor will she relax till the Northern boundaries of the Indian Empire are rectified and she is virtually mistress of Southern Asia from the Mediterranean to the Ganges, covering the ancient Babylonian and Assyrian Empires, and everything valuable in the territory over which Alexander the Great ruled. On this continent she is immoveable. If there was ever a time when Canada gravitated to our union, that day has passed, and now, if annexation is to take place, it will be the United States to the Dominion, and not that to the Republic. The viceregal rule has commenced; and Canada is nearer the heart of the monarchy than ever before.

It is seldom that people see the full extent of great action in the age when it is performed; but even now one cannot mistake that the British Empire in territory, high civilization, intense activity, varied manufactures, trade, commerce, power—in all that constitutes greatness on the earth, surpasses every kingdom, empire, and nation that this world has ever seen. The possessions of Russia are insignificant compared to it; the German Empire, great in many directions, is small by the side of Great Britain, which winds her coils about the globe; Rome, which boasted of being mistress of the world, was nothing by this modern Rome called England.

The British Empire has not alone expansion, but power on sea and land, and unity in that very expansion. On the seas her commerce is equal to all other nations combined; and when once her Indian Empire is consolidated, and the people have time to realise the benefits of the new government, there will be no end to her ability to raise soldiers. Russia felt the great shadow of the coming event in the Berlin Congress, when she proposed to prohibit the use of the Asiatic soldiers in European wars. That she could not do; and hereafter England may rely upon the loyalty of two hundred millions of people to support the crown in arms.

It is noticeable, too, that the present reign, extending over forty years, and apparently good for a quarter of a century more—for Victoria is only sixty, and of a family of marked longevity—thus far is most illustrious in English annals. No man ever ruled England who fills so great a place in English history as will this woman. The internal questions settled have been the greatest; and the extension of dominion—of freedom and English power—abroad, has been the most important: nor was there ever a time when her growth was more rapid than now. We are glad this is so. Great Britain, the representative of the Anglo-Saxons, and the mother of all peoples speaking that tongue, is the civilizer of the globe. Her law, and her religion sprung from, and are suited to, free men; and where she puts her foot on sea or land, the world is better therefor. She lifts her head proudly, and the accidents to races and the misfortunes to peoples flee away. The oppressed cry, and she is their helper—their emancipator from oppression. Not perfect is England; but it is only because no nation is perfect. Not right always, but only because the absolute right is not with man, and absolute good is from God alone.

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements
(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O O payable at Ludgate-circus.

BOOKS, ETC.

Now ready price 7s., post free 6d. extra.

THE SECOND VOLUME OF THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.
EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

This volume contains a large number of articles on our Identity with Lost Israel, by the best and most learned writers on the subject. Also many interesting papers on the Great Pyramid by Professor Piazzi Smyth, F.R.S.E., Astronomer-Royal for Scotland, Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A., Major H. A. Tracey, R.A., Charles Horner, Esq., and others.
London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row

SOME of PHILO-ISRAEL'S papers, as they have appeared in THE BANNER, will be separately published from time to time in the form of Letters, for distribution.

No. 1. "The Identity of the British with Lost Israel."
No. 2. "The Glory of God."
No. 3. "An Address to British Soldiers." (Now ready.)
No. 4. "An Address to British Sailors." (Now ready.)

Others will follow. Price One and Sixpence per 100; less quantities in proportion; postage extra.

Apply to R. Banks, 5 Racquet-court, Fleet-street. Also all Booksellers and Publishers.

187th Thousand Price 6d., post free 7d.

FORTY-SEVEN IDENTIFICATIONS OF THE BRITISH NATION WITH THE LOST HOUSE OF ISRAEL, founded upon 500 Scriptural Proofs. Shewing the Tribe of Dan to have settled in North Ireland; the Welsh to be a Tribe of Israel; the people of South Ireland to be the Canaanites; America to be Identical with the Nation of Manasseh; Queen Victoria to be Descended from David; and our Coronation Stone in Westminster Abbey to be Jacob's Stone.
London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

34th Thousand. Price 4d., post free 5d.

OXFORD WRONG in Objecting to the ENGLISH BEING IDENTICAL WITH ISRAEL. Edward Hine's Reply to Canon Rawlinson, the British Association, &c., showing that the English entirely agree with the Scripture accounts of Israel in language, physical type, religious opinions, manners, and customs, that Israel was wholly carried away captive, and could never amalgamate with the Gentiles. This pamphlet is said to be the most important and useful Mr. Hine has yet written, and is essential to an intelligent view of the whole subject.
London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

30th Thousand. Price 6d., post free 7d.

ENGLAND'S COMING GLORIES.—Being the Fourth Part of the "Forty-Seven Identifications of the English Nation with the Lost House of Israel." Containing the glory of the Pyramid, by C. Piazzi Smyth, Astronomer-Royal for Scotland. Also an Article by Charles Casey, Esq., Author of "Nemesis," &c., showing the Only Way to Secure National Righteousness, Christian Union, the Destruction of Infidelity, Disestablishment, the Restoration of the Jews, God being glorified among the heathen, and the verification of the prayers of the Church, &c., &c.
London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Price 2s. 6d, cloth, gilt, postage 2d. extra.

LINKS IN THE CHAIN OF EVIDENCE CONNECTING ISRAEL WITH ENGLAND. By J. LEYLAND FEILDEN, author of "Israel's Jubilee; or, 1882."
London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

WALTER KEAST'S Old Established BOOT AND SHOE WAREHOUSE, 102, KENNINGTON PARK ROAD, LONDON.

Gentlemen's Boots & Shoes for	Ladies' Boots and Shoes for
Winter and Summer, House and Garden, Walking, Riding, Rowing, Fishing, Shooting, &c.	Winter and Summer, Walking and Riding, House, Garden, or Dancing, &c., &c.

Children's Boots for School, Walking, Garden, or Sea-side. Slippers in great variety at moderate prices.
Schools and Public Institutions supplied at wholesale prices.
Note the address—WALTER KEAST, 102, Kennington-park-road, S.E.

MISCELLANEOUS.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

DOUBLE NUMBERS DURING 1879.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT.

Owing to the increasing interest taken in the Identity movement, it is found necessary to occasionally enlarge our space to make room for the important papers constantly reaching the Editor. It has, therefore, been determined to issue Twelve Double Numbers during 1879, for which Twopence will be charged. The first of these series of Double Numbers was issued the first week in January, and one on each succeeding first week in the month during the year.

	£	s.	d.
Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free	0	7	6
Two copies (including Double Numbers) ...	0	12	4
Three " " " " ...	0	18	8
Four " " " " ...	1	6	2
Six " " " " ...	1	17	4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-Grand, London, to W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

"BANNER OF ISRAEL" FREE CIRCULATION FUND.

	£	s.	d.
Philo-Israel, Bristol	1	0	0

The following are extracts from letters received, and will give some idea of the mode of distribution:

Hightields, Langham, Colchester, Essex.
March 5th, 1879.

DEAR SIR,—Many thanks for 100 BANNERS to hand this morning. As a lay preacher once a month at Stratford-St.-Mary's, Suffolk, I have brought the subject of our Identity with Lost Israel many times to the notice of my hearers. I am glad to have the BANNERS to distribute among them, as also among some labouring men we meet with on Friday evenings in Langham, to read the Bible and Identity works, and pray that our gracious God may bless us as a Nation, by pouring upon us all those rich blessings which He has promised (Jer. xxxi. 31: Heb. viii. 8). I hope and pray that the men and women of Israel will respond freely to your call for funds for the Free Circulation of the BANNER OF ISRAEL, that you may be able to sow it broadcast over the length and breadth of our land, that under the influence of the Divine Spirit, Britain's sons and daughters may awake to the knowledge of their high destiny and glorious privileges as the sons of the living God, the long-lost son, but now found; was dead, but alive again.

Allow me again to thank you for myself and daughters,
And remain, yours truly,
Mr. R. F. Banks. J. F. G.

I venture to write and ask if you will kindly supply me with about 100. I am sorry that I am not in a position to pay for them, but seeing that a Free Circulation Fund has been opened, I shall only be too glad if I can render the cause any assistance by distributing to the best of my ability what you may send me.—J. F. W., Darnley, near Yorkshire. [150 copies sent]

FUNDS URGENTLY NEEDED to carry on this work.

Communications to be addressed to the Secretary of the "Banner of Israel Free Circulation Fund," Mr. R. Fergusson Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-st., London, E.C., to whom all remittances for this object should also be made, but NOT to the Editor of the BANNER—Philo-Israel.

THE TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL FOUND AND IDENTIFIED IN THE BRITISH NATION.
EDWARD HINE
(The well-known writer on this subject) will deliver his
POPULAR LECTURE
In St. JAMES'S HALL, Regent-street, on March 25th, 1879.
Doors open at 7; Chair taken at 7.30.

MR. BURKINSHAW will deliver A LECTURE on the IDENTITY OF THE BRITISH PEOPLE WITH THE LOST TEN TRIBES,
At St. Augustine's School, Salisbury Street, Liverpool, ON FRIDAY, MARCH 14TH.
Chair will be taken at 8, by the Rev. C. E. Bishop.

Just Published, price 3d.

EPISCOPACY, NOT ESTABLISHMENT, THE BANE OF THE NATIONAL CHURCH.
BY A LAY MEMBER OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND.
W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row; and the Protestant Tract Society, 17, Buckingham-st., Strand.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION. A course of FIVE LECTURES will be delivered in Devonport-street Chapel, Commercial-road, E. (opposite Arbour-square), on the following evenings:—

Tuesday, March 11th, by DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, Esq., J.P. Subject: "Historical Evidences of Identity."
Tuesday, March 18th, by CHARLES STUBBS, Esq., B.A. Subject: "Scriptural Evidences of Identity."
Tuesday, March 25th, by DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, Esq., J.P. Subject: "Britain Fifth and Last Monarchy."
Tuesday, April 1st by the Rev. J. BILLINGTON. Subject: "Objections to Anglo-Israel Theory Considered."
Chair to be taken at 8 o'clock each evening.
ADMISSION FREE. COLLECTIONS.

BOOKS, ETC.

THE GREAT PYRAMID. NOW READY, PHILO-ISRAEL'S NEW WORK, 56 pages, Illustrated with Diagrams, price 4d., post free 5d.

AN ELEMENTARY DIGEST or SKETCH OF THE CHIEF FACTS and TEACHINGS of the GREAT PYRAMID of EGYPT; adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific. By PHILO-ISRAEL; together with Original Papers by the following leading Pyramidists, republished mostly from the BANNER OF ISRAEL (by kind permission of the proprietor)—viz., Professor Piazzi Smyth, the Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A., Charles Horner, Esq., and Major H. A. Tracey, R.A. Being a pamphlet by five authors (a Pyramid number).

Opinion of Mr. Charles Horner, regarding the above work, after perusal of the same:—"I think your design of the Pyramid pamphlet excellent. I know well that it is a book urgently needed, since, under God's blessing, it will, I feel convinced, convert many to Christ. Your part (Philo-Israel's) I deem unexceptionable. It is both terse and understandable to the many, which is the great object you have had in view. I should like to see thousands circulated amongst our intelligent artisans, and hope God will raise some to do this."—C. HORNER. Dec. 12, 1878.
London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

Second edition, sixth thousand.
Fancy paper covers, 6d.; cloth, gilt lettered, flush, 1s.

THE HISTORY OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL: How They Were Lost, and How They Were Found. Told for the children. By PHILO-ISRAEL. Adapted for use by parents, Sunday School and other teachers, with questions on the chapters added.

For favourable notices of this work by Professor Piazzi Smyth, John T. Gott, Esq., and others, see handbills. W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

"The History of the House of Israel—told for the children—is a very valuable addition to our children's libraries. It gives a clear account of all the chief points of interest, in language suited to the comprehension of children, and ought to be in the hands of every mother and teacher who believes in our Identity with Israel. It supplies a want I have long felt as the mother of a large family."

ARE THE ENGLISH PEOPLE THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL? By PHILO-ISRAEL Price 4d.
London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

OUR IDENTITY WITH THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. By PHILO-ISRAEL. Price 4d. Third Thousand (reprinted from the Clifton Chronicle).
London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

BRISTOL LEAFLETS ON THE IDENTIFICATION. 1 to 6; 1s. per 100.

Price 6d.; or with illustrative map, 8d.

BRITAIN (OR ISRAEL) THE FIFTH AND LAST, AND THE UNCONQUERABLE EMPIRE. By JOHN GILDER SHAW.

Price 3d.; post free, 3½d.

CHRONOLOGICAL CHART OF BRITISH VICTORIES OVER THE CONTINENTAL POWERS, ranging from the battle of Cressy (1346), to our last victory, the taking of Sebastopol, Sept. 8, 1855. Arranged by J. G. SHAW, of Leeds.

"We trust Mr. Shaw's labour in preparing this paper may be appreciated by the public and be largely sold."—Banner of Israel.

Shortly will pe published, price 6d.

RESULTS OF ISRAEL'S OBEDIENCE. A review of the successive steps which have led to the present condition of Britain (or Israel), the Fifth and Last Empire.
London: Published by Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; and may be had of the Author, 20 Park-row, Leeds, and of all booksellers.

Now ready, price One penny, post free 1½d. One dozen copies, post free 1s. 100 copies 6s., post free 7s.

THE IDENTITY OF THE BRITISH NATION WITH THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. THE CLUE TO THE EASTERN QUESTION. By C. W. E.
London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

Subscription 5s. a year, post paid. Payable in advance Back numbers of the present volume can be supplied if desired.

OUR REST. A Periodical bearing on the Questions of Christ's Second Coming and the Preparation of the Church (Christ's Bride) for that event. In each number are discussed the Scientific and Religious Discoveries in the Great Pyramid of Egypt.
Orders for the above will be received by W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick Lane, E.C.; or by THOMAS WILSON, Publisher, 188, E. Monroe Street, Chicago, Ill., U.S.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed:—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, 5, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, MARCH 12, 1879.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. III. No. 116. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, MARCH 19, 1879. [ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
"Confederation"	117
News from Maritzburg, Natal	118
The Imminence of the Lord's Coming, as Indicated in the Great Pyramid by the Grand Gallery's Southern Wall. By Thomas Clark Westfield	118
Time Indications of the Grand Gallery. By James Simpson	119
The Rock on "God's Israel and Man's Israel"	120
The Rev. C. W. Hickson Writes to the Rock Regarding the Return of Israel and Judah	121
Is the British Nation Descended from the Lost Ten Tribes? An Affirmative Note. Part III. By P. J. Holdsworth	122

"CONFEDERATION."

THIS is the topic which agitates the whole country, and which almost daily engages the attention of our leading journals. So far back as November 3rd, 1875, we ourselves, in an article headed "Israel and Her Company of Nations," published at page 317, No. 39 of the Glory Leader, vol. i., drew attention to the subject in reference to the then recently-effected Confederation of the New Zealand Colonies. We anticipated then that the Confederation of the South African States was only a question of time, and must shortly be a fact. We said that "the process of 'consolidating' the South African States into a NATION is actually proceeding under our eyes at this moment. Lord Carnarvon's scheme for the conference of all the South African States, with a view to ultimate Confederation, is at this instant the chief topic of political agitation in those Colonies themselves." "The danger which menaces the settlers there is the alarming multiplication of the Caffres going on in the neighbourhood of the Cape, and beyond the Cape territory." "The Confederation or bund is therefore a mere matter of self-defence and protection certain to be carried out by the South African States at an early date—'the sooner,' as the Times says, 'the better.' When that event occurs, another of Great Britain's grand colonial possessions will have become a nation. Then, like New Zealand, the South African States, as a nation, will be born in a day." Looking back through the vista of the three years and a quarter which have elapsed since the above was penned, we see, nationally, deep cause for regret that the Confederation then urged by our rulers was foolishly delayed by the Colonists, and that need has arisen for God's rod to be brought into play to force our race to submit to His decrees by constituting South Africa a nation. Let our readers ask themselves what event short of such a disaster as the massacre of Isandula, or the splendid defence of Rorke's Drift, would have forced this nation, and the wayward, headstrong Colonists at the Cape to take measures for self-defence? A lesson is now taught us at home, which the sharp incisive action of an addition of a penny or more to the Income Tax will abundantly bring home to Israel's comprehension, demanding that the question be once and for ever decided now, and set at rest.

Come what may, never again will the British submit to such enormous sacrifices in men and money, merely because the Cape Colonists are too penurious to spend treasure to defend their own persons and their property. To themselves the question arises in the form that, if they refuse to confederate and raise forces to protect themselves, they must perish; for "the weary and heavy-laden mother in the West" will never again help those who decline to help themselves! The result will surely be, as it has been in Canada, in New Zealand, and elsewhere, that the South African States will now, on any terms, confederate, and, raising forces for their own self-defence, put down all native powers for ever, by the same process that we secure ourselves (a handful amid hostile millions) in India—namely, by disarming the natives, by holding the fortresses and all ordnance in our own hands, and by governing the aboriginal races with strict justice and perfect equity. God has largely helped our race in the case in question, for He has provided us, as He promised us in Isaiah xli. 15, with arms of precision, which enables us to "thresh the mountains, and beat them small." As the Times said recently (Feb. 27, 1879):—

> The large forces we have sent out cannot fail to inflict such a blow upon the Zulu King as will overpower the natives for a considerable time to come. We shall not leave until we have secured ourselves, as well as the colonists, against any speedy repetition of such a calamity or emergency. The natives, it may even be hoped, will learn once for all that the white men, of whom they are jealous, are but the advanced guard of an inexhaustible force, and that armed resistance to us must be futile. It is already made abundantly clear that the Zulus stand no chance against our weapons of precision. The fresh accounts we publish this morning of the disaster at Isandula tend to show that it was due to some accidental error on our part; and, in every other encounter, no matter what the odds, our superiority in arms will be seen to have insured us unquestioned superiority. The enemy lose by scores or hundreds while we lose by single men, and it is inconceivable that they can stand against this scientific predominance. In all probability no very elaborate arrangements are requisite in order to insure the Cape Colonies perfect security against their savage foes. If the danger against which they have to guard were in its very nature overwhelming, there might be occasion to call on the Home Government for aid on a large scale. But there is nothing to show that it is of this character; and while we shall make the colonies perfectly secure for the present, we may reasonably hope that it will be a long time before we see another Parliamentary paper demanding heavy votes of credit to support a war in South Africa.

Digitized by Google

We beg our readers to note the above, and to remember that the cause of the late calamity was not God's angry chastisement of our race for our sins, as some declare is the case ; since Isaiah liv. 9 positively forbids such a supposition, and favouring events in Afghanistan give it a denial. When the nation and its wayward children in South Africa conform to God's will, the heavy hand of correction will, we believe, be (locally) removed, and we shall learn that

"Behind a frowning Providence
He hides a smiling face."

His face to Israel is always now a smiling one ; for the nation is covered by the Redeemer's blood ! We may rejoice in knowledge of that fact ; and, while we do not presume upon it, we may redouble our petitions at the throne of mercy that He will speedily fulfil His solemn promise to His people Israel, by baptizing the nation with His Holy Spirit, universally, what time we, for our part, as He bids us, cry to Him as one man : "O Lord ! save Thy people, the remnant of Israel" (Jer. xxxi. 7).

NEWS FROM MARITZBURG, NATAL.

We publish the following letter, just to hand, from the neighbourhood of the late awful disaster in Zululand, for two reasons; to give our readers, first, the latest news from one on the spot regarding the facts of the late butchery ; and in the second place, to show them that our Identity has its supporters, as the Banner has its readers, even at Pietermaritzburg, in Natal. Our consolation in the presence of such a catastrophe as has happened at Isandula is, that the old Israelite spirit is discernible in the brave band who faced death, and worse than death, for Queen and country ; and that while Byron vainly invoked from Greece in these our own degenerate days—

"Of the three hundred grant but THREE,
To form a new Thermopylæ"—

the British force, done to death by demon hands, on the 22nd January, 1879, gave 900 brave souls to die in Zululand for their native country ! The glorious "One hundred" at Rorke's Drift further proved to the world that the race which could do the splendid deed they did that awful night is an imperial race to whom the dominion of the world is the rightful destiny. We are glad to see, by our Natal friend's letter, that even in the midst of such frightful scenes and such sorrow he can think of our glorious Identity. We hope he derives his comfort also from the thoughts the subject furnishes him from the Word of God, where we read, "Behold, they shall surely gather together, but not by Me : whosoever shall gather together against THEE shall fall for thy sake" (Isa. liv. 15). So Cetywayo shall fall for Israel's sake ! and Zululand shall soon be added to Israel's dominion for the Gospel's sake, and that sad "desolation" and moral "wilderness" shall ere long, flooded by the Spirit's life-giving streams of grace, "blossom and bud" as Israel's territory, to the glory and the praise of our Jehovah-Jesus.

Our readers will peruse with interest Mr. Slatter's letter which follows :—

Dear Sir,—I take the liberty of sending you the Times of Natal, containing accounts of our recent disasters in Zululand. What makes this so dreadful is the knowledge of what our poor wounded and dying had to suffer after the field was lost, at the hands of those inhuman monsters. Every one with life in his body was subject to the most fiendish torture and mutilations, their women taking part. The writer had a son, but he was with the general at the time, and escaped, but many friends are among the slain or butchered.

I am a regular reader of your Banner of Israel, and get six copies through our London agents, every mail, which I distribute to friends who are in favour of our Israelitish origin, and did what I could to publish the subject last year.

Wishing you every success, and long life and strength to carry forward the work you are engaged in, is the heart-felt desire of

Yours very truly,
D. Slatter.

Maritzburg, February 3, 1879.

THE IMMINENCE OF THE LORD'S COMING, AS INDICATED IN THE GREAT PYRAMID BY THE GRAND GALLERY'S SOUTHERN WALL.

By Thomas Clark Westfield.

If there is one admonition more than another which our blessed Lord has given to us, it is the necessity at all times for the most diligent watchfulness respecting His coming. In connection with this most vital subject, I have been much impressed of late by the assertions made by some writers as to the necessary previous occurrence of some one or other specific event. Thus, even in the able critique on Patrick Scott's essay, entitled "Christianity and a Personal Devil," by Piazzi Smyth, in the Banner of February 12, he makes certain remarks respecting the Lord's manifestation as calculated to mislead unwary readers. He asserts "that before such a truly devoutly-to-be-desired consummation can take place, there must be a revelation first, even in our midst (the italics are mine), of him who is called by apostolic authority 'that Wicked.' In fact, Satan himself must appear in the flesh acting as Christ's untiring enemy." Now if by the Lord's manifestation (re-manifestation the learned astronomer has it) is meant His visible appearance on the earth after the great tribulation, all is plain and intelligible. But if it be taken to mean, as I apprehend it, His manifestation to those of His people who are to be gathered together unto Him, then I cannot help expressing my conviction that what is asserted contains a dangerous error. If it were true, we should of necessity be looking forward eagerly, if not fearfully, for the coming, not of our Lord, but of the anti-Christ—in which case our Lord's warnings to His people are made of none effect. Clearly, it is not anti-Christ we are looking for, but our glorious Redeemer. Of this fact there should not be the slightest shadow of a doubt. If any exist in the mind of the reader, I trust, ere I close, to be able to dispel it. And, first of all, what saith the Lord ? Perhaps the most pertinent passage as to the period immediately preceding His coming is to be found in the parable of the ten virgins (Matt. xxv.) : "Then shall the kingdom of heaven be likened unto ten virgins, which took their lamps, and went forth to meet the bridegroom. And five of them were wise, and five were foolish. They that were foolish took their lamps, and took no oil with them ; but the wise took oil in their vessels with their lamps. While the bridegroom tarried, they all slumbered and slept."

How aptly is this present time here represented ! How mournfully true if we do but except a few faithful watchmen ! But is it conceivable that any should be found sleeping when the terrible man of sin appears upon the scene ? Surely not; and, therefore, it is expressly declared that at this time men shall be saying, "All things continue as they were" (2 Peter iii. 4). But suddenly the Lord comes, and the sleepers are awakened.

How sad the condition of those represented by the foolish virgins, who, although unquestionably Christian men, miss, by their disregard of the Lord's repeated warnings, the splendid distinction conferred upon the wise, and who awake only to have the door closed against them. How distressing their appeal, "Lord, Lord, open to us," and the stern rebuke of their Lord, "I know you not !" It is to be observed here, that although the rebuke is very severe, it is not accompanied by any curse, so that there is no question of ultimate salvation.

Digitized by Google

But their sorrow will be great in the extreme, not only from their, even although temporary, exclusion from the Lord's presence, but from the severing of family ties and separation from those dear to them, as well as having to encounter the terrible temptations and persecutions arising out of the dark days of the "great tribulation." Oh! Christian brethren, is it not "high time to awaken out of sleep?

The imminence of our Lord's coming is a matter of such superlative importance, that any statement calculated to suggest a doubt of it, or any alleged fact to be represented as indicating His coming at a time more or less distant, even although it be in the comparatively near future, should be received with the utmost caution. Take, for example, the length of the Great Pyramid's grand gallery floor-line, which is 1881·4 Pyramid units. This gives us the beginning of the year 1882 as the extreme length of the present dispensation. But does it, therefore, by any means follow that the Lord's coming will not take place before that date? Assuredly not. And why? Because the wisdom of the Lord has in the most wondrous manner provided against the assumption by having caused the terminating wall to be constructed in such a manner as to lean inwards, and is, therefore, impending over the floor line several units.

Now, I know not how this fact may be regarded by others, but to me it appears the grandest expression of Divine wisdom therein to be found. Oh! cry aloud and give glory to God for the excellency of the knowledge He is granting to us. Let us look into this matter a little more closely, and we shall have profound cause to acknowledge with wonder and awe the inscrutable wisdom which has sealed up this knowledge as to the duration of the present age, until having arrived at the time of the end, we stand, as it were, beneath that frowning wall with the way of escape immediately above us; so that it may still be said, "But of that day and that hour knoweth no man, no, not the angels which are in heaven, neither the Son, but the Father" (Mark xiii. 32). There is, I believe, a deeper meaning here than at first appears. Depend upon it, Satan will endeavour to oppose the passage through the air of those raised and changed saints; and that this secrecy as to time is in some way necessary that he may be taken unawares. This is strikingly obvious from our Lord's somewhat extraordinary antithesis, in which He compares Himself to a thief, and Satan to the good man of the house: "But know this, that if the good man of the house had known in what watch the thief would come, he would have watched and would not have suffered his house to be broken up" (Matt. xxiv. 43).

It is equally evident that war in heaven is the immediate consequence of the translation of this distinguished portion, the Lord's people, and, subsequently, the casting down of Satan to "the earth." "Therefore rejoice, ye heavens, and ye that dwell in them. Woe to the inhabiters of 'the earth' and of the sea! for the devil is come down unto you, having great wrath, because he knoweth that he hath but a short time" (Rev. xii. 12). And it is at this juncture, in my opinion, that he energises the man of sin, and so, in a sense, becomes incarnate. Oh! that we may be accounted worthy to escape what follows, and to stand before the Son of Man. Is it difficult to conceive Satan gazing upwards with perplexity at the impending wall, and although knowing it tells of impending doom to him, the utmost he can know as to time is all that we know—viz., that sometime within the next two or three years the Lord will come to spoil his (Satan's) possession, by taking His redeemed ones to Himself? Yes, such is the position to-day, and what may not happen to-morrow? But why was all this not known a century ago, or even ten years since? The Great Pyramid was equally open then as now, but it had only begun to stammer in its speech after forty centuries of silence. And why not before, if not because the knowledge would have destroyed that incentive to watchfulness, which had been so strangely enjoined by the Lord whenever discoursing on this subject? And so He graciously withholds it from us until He knows that so far from preventing our watchfulness it will increase it; and in the midst of the trying times in which we find ourselves, it will be a witness of the sublime things we love so much, and will enable us, amidst the scoffs and ridicule of an effete Christianity, to "look up and lift up our heads," knowing that "our redemption draweth nigh."

"Watch ye, therefore; for ye know not when the Master of the house cometh, at even, or at midnight, or at the cockcrowing, or in the morning: lest coming suddenly He find you sleeping. And what I say unto you I say unto all, WATCH" (Mark xiii. 35).

TIME INDICATIONS OF THE GRAND GALLERY.

FOURTEEN years ago, in February, 1865, a young Leith shipbuilder addressed a remarkable letter to Professor Piazzi Smyth (then at work at the Great Pyramid), in which, for the first time, and as it were by a sudden inspiration, the prophetic record of time embodied in the passage-system of the Pyramid was grandly opened out and explained. This of itself would have formed an era in the unveiling of the "witness," apart from the great work of measuring then going on. Yet seven whole years elapsed before this important discovery was demonstrated to be true, and the ground thus made firm for further advance. For it was only in 1872 that Professor Smyth, acting on the happy suggestion of Mr. Charles Casey, and with the ready assistance of Mr. Waynman Dixon, C.E., and Dr. Grant, of Cairo, was enabled to shew that the "ruled lines" in the entrance passage, which had been a seven years' wonder and baffling puzzle, were simply the builder's mark of the date of his work, in inch-years preceding the epoch of the birth of Christ, which is shewn at the commencement of the grand gallery floor. The absolute agreement of this date (2170 years B.C.) with that published by Professor Smyth years before on purely astronomical, or astronomico-mathematical grounds, furnished as striking a proof as could be desired of the truth of the time-passage "theory." And now, after the same author had further shewn that 1260 years from the era of the Mohammedans and the 1881 years (or so) of the grand gallery dispensation run out at one and the same time in the very near future, it is not surprising that others should begin to look into a matter of such momentous interest to all. And hence most excellent suggestions have come from Mr. Hartwell A. Powers, of Cincinnati, leading to more accurate views both as to the length and signification of this passage; while, more recently, Mr. Charles Horner has brought powerfully before the readers of the BANNER the exceeding solemnity of the events which appear to him to be clearly set forth as ready to be revealed to an (alas!) unready, unheeding world.

Be those events what they may, we are now less than three and a half years from the complete and sudden ending of the dispensation or age symbolised by the grand gallery with all its lofty proportions and curious "septiform" architectural features—speaking, no doubt, of the superior privileges and blessedness of this Christian age or dispensation of grace, over all that preceded, as well as emphatically over that time of judgment which is immediately to follow. For the greatest, or floor, length of the gallery, as we hope to shew, does not exceed 1881·6 Pyramid inches; and when that number of tropical years is measured from the beginning of the Christian era—the latest date which can with probability be assigned for the nativity of our Lord—we do not get beyond the 6th August, 1882 (less than three and a half years from this time) as an outside limit for the termination of the gallery. And it is evident that even this limit must be reduced by whatever amount we place the nativity of our Lord before the 1st January, A.D. 1.

Digitized by Google

The length of the gallery, indeed, which we are considering, is stated in "Life and Work" (vol. ii., p. 78), as only—

On Eastern side = 1882·6 British inches.
„ Western „ = 1883·0 „ „
Mean = 1882·8 „ „
= 1880·919 Pyramid inches.

But this is the ramp length, 23 inches vertically above the floor, and requires, on the shewing of Mr. H. A. Powers, the addition of ·4 inch, more fully ·444, on account of the impending of South wall, in order to give the real length at floor; which thus becomes 1881·363.

To this correction I would add another, required to reduce the inches of the measuring-rod used on this occasion by Professor Smyth to true British inches, according to his own very full explanation and table in the introduction to vol. ii. above cited. The rod in question, "100 A," which should have measured 100 inches only, was found to have measured, when in Egypt, 100·016. Hence—

$$\frac{1881{\cdot}363 \times 100{\cdot}016}{100} = 1881{\cdot}664$$

This last number, then, is what the measures yield us for this most desirable-to-be-known floor-length (subject only to a small minus correction for inevitable error, and which may reduce it to 1881·6).

Now it is a remarkable fact that the precise length of this floor-line is shewn by the Pyramid geometrically as—

$$\frac{365{\cdot}2422 \times 51{\cdot}51646}{10} = 1881{\cdot}5985 \text{ Pyramid inches.}$$

Two well-known and fundamental Great Pyramid numbers (numbers of inches too) are to be multiplied together; and their product, when divided by the Pyramid's arithmetical base-number 10, is the precise length of the gallery at its floor-line. How simple, and yet profound! Can a number so obtained have any conceivable relation to mundane chronology? It would seem that it has; yet it is difficult to understand what that relation can be precisely. The number 51·51646, so well-known as unlocking many geometrical beauties in the coffer, besides connecting that vessel with the king's chamber and with the Pyramid as a whole, is itself derived from 365·2422 by the application of the quantity π in one of its forms; and hence the gallery's length may be stated more shortly, though not so simply, as—

$$\frac{365{\cdot}2422^2}{40\sqrt{\pi}} = 1881{\cdot}5985.$$

But a preferable form of the equation is as follows:—

$$\frac{206{\cdot}06585 \times 91{\cdot}31055}{10} = 1881{\cdot}5985.$$

In this case, the first number will be recognised as the breadth of the king's chamber; and the second number is $\frac{1}{\pi^{10}}$ of the Pyramid's base-side. And such, moreover, is the relation of these two numbers to each other and to the particular angle at which the grand gallery's floor ascends from the horizon (26° 17′ 37″ by measure, but believed to indicate 26° 18′ 10″), that when 206·06585 inches are measured along that sloping floor upwards, the perpendicular height attained is exactly 91·31055.

And here we may well pause to reflect, first, upon the extraordinary skill and accuracy with which the theoretic length of about 1881·6 Pyramid inches has been built into the heart of this witness of the desert, so as to last unimpaired through four millenniums; and, secondly, upon the scarcely less wonderful skill and accuracy of the measurer, who, at the end of those ages of stony silence, has been permitted to recover, record, and publish to the world these now amazingly vocal measures.

I have said "about 1881·6 Pyramid inches," because 1881·5985 is derived from a length of year = 365·2422 days; and while that may be its true present length, it is not necessarily the length embodied in the Great Pyramid. Now 1881·6 implies a length of year about twelve seconds greater, or the length which it is generally supposed to have had about the beginning of our era—a good mean length, therefore, for all Great Pyramid time.

What follows on the adoption of this minute correction? A very curious result. Our Saviour's earthly life is indicated at the beginning of the gallery by a space of 33 and a fraction inches preceding the symbolic representation of His death and resurrection. These inches denote years; and if we call them 33·6, we shall be in near accordance with many Biblical expositors, and in exact agreement with Mr. Grattan Guinness, who, in his work, "On the Approaching End of the Age," gives weighty reasons historical, astronomical, and prophetic, for the acceptance of this very period.

Now 33·6 × 56 = 1881·6, the exact length of the gallery as above, and 56 (the product of the 7 of the old creation by the 8 of the new), is the very number which Mr. Charles Horner has lately found to be set up at either end of the gallery as if to tell of the two appearings or revelations of our Lord; of His first appearing from the grave in resurrection glory; and of His second appearing from heaven in the glory of His Father and of the holy angels.

JAMES SIMPSON.

Edinburgh, February 21, 1879.

(To be continued).

"THE ROCK" ON "GOD'S ISRAEL AND MAN'S ISRAEL."

WE hope our readers have all carefully read and noted the Rock's last and final explosion of wrath and indignation regarding the ever-growing, ever-expanding views held by those who believe in our glorious Identity. A leading article of two columns, and a paper of four-and-a-half columns besides, the work of another nameless pen in the journal of March 7, 1879, testify (to our great satisfaction)—first, that the growth of our opinions (being God's truth) is great, in spite of enormous obstacles; and, second, to the extreme feebleness and crass ignorance which the editor of the Rock and his contributor alike display regarding one of the simplest Biblical questions lying on the very surface of the Old and New Testaments, one which even a child, we know, can appreciate without any difficulty. The error that underlies the two articles in question is the old inveterate one—the inability of these two writers to "see" that there are any other representatives of God's people, the Hebrews, now extant in the globe, besides the Jews. Hence the editor tells us that we must identify "the race known as the Jews in every country under heaven, with the descendants of the TWELVE SONS OF JACOB." Let our readers mark that. The Twelve Tribes are the Jews. Can any ignorance be more dense than this? Why, the Jews themselves deny the fact. They wait for the discovery and restoration of the Ten Tribes; and it is left only for the editor of the Rock, and his equally "blind" correspondent, to inform us that Ephraim, Benjamin, and Manasseh, the whole of the House of Joseph besides, whom Ezek. xxxvii. 16—22, tells us are yet to be joined by God Himself (now being two sticks) into one stick—are at this instant represented by the one, scattered, despised, and afflicted race, the Jews. It is no use arguing with infatuation like this. It sins against light, against God's Word, against God's truth, against God's people, and, we may be sure, is most displeasing in His sight, whose "whole heart and whose whole soul" are set upon the restoration of the TWO Houses (Jer. xxxii. 41). We can afford to smile at the petty feeling of the editor, who sees with anguish the rapid growth of our views, when he speaks of "a Mr. John Wilson," "a Mr. Hine," "a colonial bishop," "a public scientific lecturer," and "a retired Indian judge, who, as Philo-Israel, has started a weekly journal, the BANNER OF ISRAEL." These poor and unknown agents in a work which is destined to upset all existing systems, and introduce us to the glorious days of the returning Saviour, are those whom the Lord has chosen. The editor of the Rock can no more cry down their efforts than the persecutions, and bitter words, and cruel deeds of the Jewish Rabbis, Scribes, and Pharisees availed to destroy the work of the fishermen and lowly-born agents the Son of David Himself selected to confound the wise and the prudent in the early days of the Christian era.

Digitized by Google

Not a single argument does the editor of the Rock or his coadjutor bring forward to oppose us. But, throughout, they both use reckless, nay, we must characterise them as false assertions, which prove nothing but the wilful ignorance of those who make them—assertions which, to candid minds, cannot carry weight. The editorial is the writing of a man who has read nothing, and knows nothing, of Identity literature; and the paper of his friend is the reiteration of the fallacies many times refuted by Identity writers; of one who maintains that the Scriptures know nothing of the distinction between Judah and Israel; that when one sees a Jew, one sees an Israelite; and when one sees an Israelite, one sees a Jew. The latter paper indulges in the following fallacies to bolster up the views of the writer and to demolish ours, imagining that his arguments are novel and quite original, instead of being the stale and often answered arguments of Messrs. Cornall and Clifford, with those used by their last female coadjutor against God's truth, Philalethes. These are :—

1. That after the two captivities, the two Houses, Israel and Judah, became amalgamated, were included in Cyrus's invitation and returned to Palestine together.

2. That henceforth the Jews were the only Israelites, the Ten Tribes having become merged in them, and disappeared.

3. That the Jews, as Israelites, are to be restored to favour when "the fulness of the Gentiles" has come in.

4. That these Jews, as Israelites, are now under curse, and show all the marks of the only people God hath chosen as His own—thus being one of the most effective answers to the Infidel, that God's Word is true.

5. That the Jews stand now as a solemn warning to all of God's wrath against sin, while the "elect people of God"—whether Jews or Gentiles, believers in Christ—are "in the position of blessedness and dignity far superior to any promised to Israel."

We do not propose to answer any of these propositions of our new adversary! They have been answered over and over again, and our readers are now quite as capable as we are of detecting their gross fallacy, and, therefore, of rejecting them.

We only observe that by treating God's Word after this fashion the prophecy of Ezekiel xxxvii. 16—28, already alluded to, becomes a tissue of falsehood and absurdity; Hosea i. 10, 11, has no force or meaning; Jer. iii. 14 and 18 were words written to deceive; and Jer. xxxi. 33, Heb. viii. 8—12, are sheer downright teachings of folly, whose tendency is to mislead! The paper ends by ten conclusions, some of which are false as to facts—the offspring of a wilful refusal to read and learn what our tenets really are; and the rest spring from the old error so ingrained into the minds of divines and commentators of the past and present—namely, that the whole of God's Word must be spiritualised, that there is no distinction now between Israel and Judah in the Scriptures, and that while the Jews have all the curses, the Christian Church is reaping all the blessings promised to national Israel of the Ten Tribes in God's Word.

The absolutely false (so-called) facts put forward are :—

1st. The assertion "that we revive the Judaizing heresy by which acceptance with God was made to rest—not on the finished work of Christ, but—on Identity with the family of Israel." All who know the writings of Israelites know the above to be a sad perversion of truth; and the man who wrote these words (we hope he is not a Bristol incumbent?) either perversely refused to read, in which case he ought not to have written about our views at all; or, knowing what those views were, deliberately misrepresented them!

2nd. That in teaching that God has chosen the British race (being Israel) "and not cast them off," we lay another foundation for acceptance with God (obviously for the soul's salvation) "beside that which He has laid, even Jesus Christ." Here, again, we repudiate the unjust allegation with absolute horror; and we charge our accuser with unfair dealing, or with such complete unacquaintance with our writings and teachings as should have shut him out from coming forward as our accuser in the public prints of the day. Here are two horns of a dilemma on which this opponent is placed, and he must choose that whereon he desires to be impaled.

We publish beneath a letter addressed to the Rock by our friend, the Rev. C. W. Hickson, which was forwarded to that journal some time ago. The editor has not had the candour either to notice or to publish it. We do so now, as an act of justice, not only to the writer, but to God's cause, which we both defend.

THE REV. C. W. HICKSON WRITES TO THE "ROCK" REGARDING THE RETURN OF ISRAEL AND JUDAH.

DEAR SIR,—As a thorough believer in, and lecturer upon, the "Anglo-Israel Craze" (!), I cannot refrain from writing to thank you most heartily for your occasional note on the revision of the Scriptures. I only hope the Revision Committee may act on your hint. I have long held Isaiah xviii. to be one of the strongest passages in favour of the view, which you so vainly oppose, that the British nation are the modern representatives of the Ten Tribes; and I am almost put out of breath with surprise to find that your view of that chapter is, as far as it goes, identical with my own. According to you, the Jews, rightly described as "a portion," not the whole, of the scattered nation, are to be brought back to Mount Zion by England. Exactly; so far, so good. But the chapter itself, and the strictly parallel passage in Zeph. iii. 10, show that these same bringers back are themselves another portion of the "scattered race." The only two main portions of the race I know of (not taking account of fragments here and there in the world, such as the Afghans) are, teste yourself, the Jewish outcasts, and the Ten Tribes of Israel. The people to be brought back are the former, therefore those who bring them must be the latter.

If, then, you agree with me that the bringers are England, you are almost mathematically compelled to accept that England is the Ten Tribes of Israel. You may ask why I assert that the bringers back are another portion of the same scattered race. Because, I take it, Isaiah xviii. and Zeph. iii. are unintelligible on any other supposition. Alexander thus translates the latter part of Isaiah xviii. 2: "Go, ye light (or swift) messengers, to a nation drawn and shorn, to a people terrible since it existed and onwards; a nation of double strength and trampling, whose land the streams divide."

On this I remark that the phrase—"a nation drawn and shorn"—is clearly descriptive of the Jews at the time of the mission here predicted. But the remainder of the quoted words are rather descriptive of their past glory and power, and, as such, might be employed of the whole Hebrew nation in their palmiest days, or of the other branch of the race—the Lost Ten Tribes. And in verse 7 they are, to my mind unquestionably, so used. Alexander thus translates verse 7: "At that time shall be brought a gift to Jehovah of hosts, a people drawn out and shorn, AND FROM a people terrible since it has been and onward (or still more terrible and still farther off); a nation of double power and trampling, whose land streams divide, to the place of the name of Jehovah of hosts, Mount Zion."

No careful student can overlook the fact that the one undivided description in verse 2, the whole of which there applies to the Jews, is here most markedly divided into two parts. In verse 2, messengers are to go "TO a nation drawn and shorn, to" (there is no "and" before this "to;" the one אֶל is parallel to the other אֶל, and the second has no ו prefixed) "a people terrible," &c.; but in verse 7 the people brought are, as before, described as עַם מִמְשָׁךְ

Digitized by Google

וּמוֹרָט. But instead of going on to say עַם נוֹרָא, it says וּמֵעַם, &c., dividing the previously undivided description by the insertion of the preposition "FROM," and prefixing also the conjunction AND.

Alexander (no mean authority) says: "The most natural construction of the words would seem to be that the gift to Jehovah should consist of one people offered by another." Exactly so; but if the words, "a people terrible," &c., in verse 2, mean Hebrews, they must mean Hebrews in verse 7. I would, therefore, slightly alter Alexander, and say, "The most natural interpretation of the words is that the gift to Jehovah should consist of one Hebrew people offered by another Hebrew people; Jewish Israel offered by Gentile Israel of the Lost (apparently Japhetic, therefore symbolised by Gomer—Hos. i. 3) Ten Tribes. The same is asserted in plainer words by Zephaniah iii. 10: "From beyond the rivers of Cush, My suppliants, the daughter of My dispersed, shall bring Mine offering."

The accents positively forbid your making בַּת־פּוּצַי the object of יוֹבִלוּן, and in apposition with מִנְחָתִי. (Note the Zaqeph qaton over פּוּצַי. בַּת־פּוּצַי is in apposition with עֲתָרַי.) But "My dispersed daughter" must mean some portion of the Hebrew race. If, then, the "offering" of Zeph. iii. 10 be the same as the "gift" of Isaiah xviii. 7 (which there is no reasonable ground to doubt), then Lost Israel, and that, too, as worshippers of Jehovah, or a Christian nation, are to bring their brethren of Judah an offering to the Lord; and this perfectly harmonises with Isaiah lxvi. 19, 20; Jer. iii. 18 ("walk TO the House of Israel"); Hosea i. 10, 11, and other passages. The argument then concisely stands thus:—

One portion of the Hebrew race is to bring the other to the Lord. The brought portion is the Jews, or House of Judah, and the bringers are allowed to be England; therefore England is a portion of the Hebrew race, other than the Jews—i.e., the Lost Ten Tribes. Q.E.D.

In conclusion, I only wish you and others, whose knowledge of the Anglo-Israel theory I gather from your own writings to be most superficial, would carefully, HUMBLY, and PRAYERFULLY, with conscientious pains, study the subject with such a handbook as the last (1s. 6d.) edition of Bishop Titcomb's Anglo-Israel Post Bag, and then I feel confident you would soon cease to sin (in your ignorance) against the Lord by sneering at, as a "craze," what is an undoubted truth, becoming every day more manifest to unprejudiced and docile minds. You yourself, but a few days since, said England occupied a position like that of old enjoyed by Israel; but where do you find in God's Word an intimation that God would ever give to any nation (as a nation), other than a Hebrew one, such a position in the world? The whole Bible is dead against such an idea. When our Lord said the kingdom of God should be taken from the Jews and given to another nation, He must, consistently with all God's promises to the patriarchs, have meant another Hebrew nation—in other words, the Ten Tribes, after the "two days" (2,000 years) of their death (Hosea vi. 2) should have terminated. Now the "third day" has advanced to its middle and more, and our "being raised up and living in His sight," is, I believe, an imminent event. Who can "τὰ τέκνα τοῦ θεοῦ τὰ διεσκορπισμένα" (John xi. 52) be but the בְּנֵי אֵל־חָי of Hosea i. 10, which are distinctly the Ten Tribes, and not the Jews, from whom they are distinguished in the following verse? The quotation of these words in Rom. ix. 26, shows that these Lost Tribes were so to become lost amongst, and, to all appearance, form part of, the Gentiles (compare Gen. xlviii. 19 מְלֹא הַגּוֹיִם with Rom. xi. 25 το πληρωμα των εθνων, the latter being an exact translation of the former, and the two passages the only ones where this singular expression occurs), as that there must be a Gospel preached to Gentiles as such, in order for God's promise in Hosea i. 10 to be capable of fulfilment; but certainly that promise primarily and mainly concerns the literal Lost Ten Tribes.

I have run on to much greater length than I meant. My love for what I believe to be a glorious truth, against which I was once as much prejudiced as yourself, must be my excuse.

C. W. HICKSON,
January 24, 7879. Vicar of St. Bartholomew's, Bristol.

ERRATA.—"From Assyria to Britain," Part I., BANNER Feb. 26, for "inmate" instinct, read "innate" instinct; in the fifteenth line from commencement. In fourth paragraph, last sentence, read for "whoever reigned, there," &c., "whoever reigned there," &c.

IS THE BRITISH NATION DESCENDED FROM THE LOST TEN TRIBES?

AN AFFIRMATIVE NOTE, BY P. J. HOLDSWORTH, OF SYDNEY.

(Concluded from page 114.)

PART III.

I NOW desire briefly to allude to our Danish forefathers, who, according to this theory, were the main body of the Tribe of Dan.

Dan was Israel's great maritime Tribe. It had two locations—one to the North, the other to the South of Palestine. The Northern Danites had many characteristics, and among them was this—they were extremely fond of linking their tribal names to particular localities. Thus the main river of Palestine, rising in their territory, was termed the "river of Dan"—the Jor-dan. And when the Tribe captured Laish, they called the town "after the name of their father, Dan."

The Southern Dan contained Joppa, perhaps the best-known sea-port of Palestine. The sea-faring proclivities of this tribal portion early manifested themselves. Deborah, for example, in that magnificent pæan, sung at the destruction of the Canaanitish Jabin and Sisera, exclaims, "Why did Dan remain in ships?" a query which evidently points to one of two conclusions. Either Dan remained in ships, indifferent to the national crisis; or, more probably, a tribal contingent, forewarned against national disaster, had placed themselves in readiness to escape Westward, for Dan's habits were free and adventurous. Its maritime prowess is continually referred to by contemporary prophets; and, with respect to its early tendency to migrate, the opinion of the eminent Latham may be adduced. He has no hesitation in identifying Dan with the Danai who so momentously figured in early Greek history. And it is quite undoubted that the Tuatha de Danaan, or Tribe of Dan, who partially colonised Ireland, and left many Hebrew traces therein, some centuries before the Christian era, were a maritime contingent of this Tribe. For Dan's intimate sea-faring connection with the tin-trafficing Phœnicians must have familiarised him with the British Islands. Jewish tradition, also, strongly affirms that Dan migrated. A tradition mentioned by Ortellius and Eldad declares that Dan left Palestine to avoid Civil War in the time of Jeroboam; and the appearance of the body who took refuge in Ulster, Ireland, from whence they spread to Scotland, as nearly as possible synchronises with the Assyrian deportation of the Ten Tribes.

But the Northern Danite body, being the most exposed of all the Tribes, were doubtless among the first to bear the brunt of the overwhelming Assyrian. They were conquered; and went, with the other nine Tribes, into exile; and when, in obedience to that great law of Asiatic migration which forced the other masses, at different times, Westward, Dan also migrated, the Tribe followed the practice which was to be expected from its idiosyncracy. The Danites, in short, are traceable by the names they gave.

Starting from Media, and moving Westward along the Caucasian route, what hints do we inquirers meet? First, we encounter the river U*don*, then the Don, then the *Don*etz, then the Dnieper (*Dan*ieper); then the Dniester, (*Dan*iester); and then the *Dan*ube. And still more Westwardly, we meet the Eri*dan* (modern Po); and the Rho*dan* (modern Rhone). And finally, striking North, we reach (as Dan reached) Denmark (*Dan*mörk), the limit or border of Dan. And, from the vantage-ground of this peninsula—through which, some centuries before, another body of their brethren, the Kymri had passed—what do we see? Simply the resting-place and recruiting-ground of the Danish rovers—those terrible, piratical sea-kings—those terrors of the ancient world. From this point they again renewed their old, fearless, free-booting sallies, and it was the inheritance of their unconquerable spirit which fired the blood of the dauntless men that won Trafalgar.

Are these again mere "fortuitous coincidences?"

Digitized by Google

And now a brief remark or two anent the second branch of the argument. To anyone willing to investigate, this subject offers a large, a fascinating, and a curious field. A voluminous pamphlet might be written upon the correspondences between the manners and customs of the Anglo-Saxons and the ancient Israelites. A few may be here noted. Woman, in Anglo-Saxon communities, occupied the same exalted position as in ancient Israel. The marriage ceremonies of the Anglo-Saxons strongly resembled those of Israel. In each nation, laws provided for the avenger of blood, and for places of refuge. The division into tythings and hundreds was, in each, very similar. The division of time was the same. The weights and measures were identical. The weeks were of seven days, and were reckoned in each from evening to evening. Our word "fortnight" is a remnant of this practice. Their great feasts correspond. Easter synchronised with the Passover time; Whitsuntide with Pentecost; and the convocation of the great Witenagemot with the feast of the Tabernacles. Each race was marvellously skilled in poetry and music. The peculiar relations of parent and child were in each the same. And thus the list might be extended a hundredfold.

Nor can it be said that Christianity caused the introduction of these resemblances. The similarites are visible when we inspect the Saxon records penned before the race was Christianised. For example, the names of the week-days are all of Pagan origin. They speak for themselves.

Are such facts also "mere fortuitous coincidences?"

The third argument is the prophetic. This is a vast subject, and I must allude to it most cursorily.

In their predictions, the prophets sharply demarcate Judah from Israel. Judah rejected the Messiah; but Israel, being in captivity at the time, had nothing to do with the rejection. Judah, consequently, was prophetically condemned to be for a time, a wanderer—restless, ubiquitous, denationalised. Israel, on the contrary, was to "blossom and bud, and to fill the face of the world with fruit." Its place of resuscitation is marked, prophetically. By Isaiah and Jeremiah it is declared to be in the North-west. There Israel was to "renew her strength;" and see her sons blindly gather to a centre, Tribe by Tribe through long centuries. And finally, she was to develop into the mightiest Power the world ever saw. The prophets declare that she was to grow into "a multitude of nations;" that she was to "break forth on the right hand and the left, and cause the desolate heritages to be inhabited." In other words, she was to be a nation with mighty colonies. These were to "encircle the coasts" of the globe; and Israel, in fulfilling her colonising destiny, was "to push the peoples to the end of the earth." It is impossible, in a limited space, to dilate upon this topic. The prophetic eye expands, as it contemplates the future grandeur of the one marvellous world-power—Israel; and the prophetic diction soars to sublimest heights in depicting the favoured future of Judah and Israel, long alienated, but finally reconciled.

To all these exalted prophetic requirements, Great Britain alone responds. She, with her colonies, is "a veritable company of nations." Her vigorous offshoots fill the world's "desolate heritages." They girdle the globe. The indigenous races are "dying out," face to face with her encroaching colonisation; they succumb to the fatal facility with which she founds empires. She possesses, and she alone, "the gates of her enemies:" bear witness Gibraltar, Suez, Malta, Cyprus, Aden, Perim, Singapore, Penang, Peshawur, and a hundred others. She has produced a "multitudinous seed." The race now aggregates nearly a hundred millions, and threatens or promises beneficently to overwhelm the world. Her empire is larger and mightier than the greatest of her extinct predecessors; and yet, twice at least in every decade, she creates a colony or annexes a territory. She "lends to all" and "borrows from none." A glance at the British "Stock List" proves the first position; and for the second, it is enough to remember that her huge National Debt was entirely subscribed at home, and constitutes the nation's loan to herself.

In all these, and innumerable other respects, the British fulfil the prophecies of the gifted seers of old. Viewing, then, the completeness and coherence of the evidence, of which the preceding is but the slightest hint, is it surprising that many should triumphantly ask, "Are these merely fortuitous similarities—mere coincidences?"

As I review my remarks, I am reminded of the pedant in Hierocles who, having a house for sale, exhibited a brick as a specimen of its quality. Comparing the said with the unsaid, my arguments are but as a leaf to an available forest. The exigencies of space are, however, imperative; and if I have simply touched the skirts, the suburbs, of the subject, it was because my only other alternative was silence.

The Anglo-Israel Theory is, no doubt, new. It comes wholly unheralded by the charm of high ecclesiastical endorsement. But can its mere novelty make it antecedently incredible? Who will affirm so?

Most theological schools hate all innovations. Loose a new religious theory in the world, and many keen scents speedily sniff heresy in the wind. And, not infrequently, the bold battler with traditional conclusions, is crushed and stifled by the fatal Conservatism of the wrong-headed many—an evil Conservatism which, fettering man's thought, produces mental death instead of life.

Now, the current army of Scriptural expositors, has, in common with us, a volume which abounds in prophetic statements touching Judah and Israel. But these "learned Thebans" teach, unfortunately, that all prophecies relating to Judah are to meet with literal, and all referring to Israel with figurative, fulfilment—a most absurd and unscriptural distinction. They dare not deny a literal Judah, because those predictions, indubitably, are literally fulfilling day by day. But Israel was a different thing. They were unaware of Israel's whereabouts; and so they "spiritualised these passages by applying them to the Christian Church—a most lame and impotent conclusion, whereby the Bible has been made to limp most undivinely. Judah was to be dispersed and distressed literally, but Israel was to inherit her grand destiny figuratively! Alas for the prophets! By such a pitiful exegesis most of their sayings became enigmas—became pure rhapsodies—strong, sublime, and majestical, it is true—but still, mere sonorous jargonings. The Anglo-Israel Theory was effectual to save, and rehabilitate them. By that theory, their prophecies are taken in the ordinary common-sense application, and the prophetic page, formerly so obscure, has become clear, irradiated, plain to all.

And now, a concluding word as to the novelty of this hypothesis. For two thousand years, thinkers, Bible in hand, have scoured the world in pursuit of the illusive Ten Tribes. They have failed most utterly. The truth was too near them. The thief reposed safely in the magistrate's hayloft. The time for discovery had not arrived.

Revelation in one respect resembles Science: each must wait its appointed period; each, like Nature (a periphrasis for God) is "unhasting, yet unresting." Man, for example, has, like a patient pleading Edipus, been standing for six thousand years at the feet of that semi-inscrutable Sphinx, the Forces of Nature; but not until the nineteenth century have the Telegraph, and Telephone, and Locomotive been evolved from the brain of the inventor.

So it is with this Theory. Recent though it be, every month adds to the immense mass of evidence already accumulated, for, as a mere Theory, it thoroughly exemplifies Sir John Herschel's admirable definition of a true hypothesis:—"The surest and best characteristic" (he remarks in Nat. Phil., page 170) "of a well-founded and extensive induction is when verifications of it spring up, as it were, spontaneously, into notice, from quarters where they might be least expected, or from among instances of that very kind which were, at first, considered hostile. Evidence of this kind is irresistible, and compels assent with weight which no other possesses."

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements
(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O O payable at Ludgate-circus.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

DOUBLE NUMBERS DURING 1879.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT.

Owing to the increasing interest taken in the Identity movement, it is found necessary to occasionally enlarge our space to make room for the important papers constantly reaching the Editor. It has, therefore, been determined to issue Twelve Double Numbers during 1879, for which Twopence will be charged. The first of these series of Double Numbers was issued the first week in January, and one on each succeeding first week in the month during the year.

	£	s.	d.
Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free	0	7	6
Two copies (including Double Numbers) ...	0	12	4
Three " " " " ...	0	18	8
Four " " " " ...	1	6	2
Six " " " " ...	1	17	4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-Grand, London, to W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

NOTICE.—We have in type the following articles, which we hope to publish in our next:—Was Abraham a Jew? By Abraham Storey.—"Nothing New." By L. P.—God's Covenant with David. By A. M.—Mr. H M. Stanley on Africa as Israel's Future Inheritance.—Watchman, What of the Night?—Mr. Clifford's Proof of the Superiority of Judah above Joseph, Tested.—Letters from a Railway Man.—B. T. S., &c., &c.

"BANNER OF ISRAEL" FREE CIRCULATION FUND.

	£	s.	d.
South Hackney	0	3	0
An Israelite	0	1	0
H. R....	0	0	6

The following are extracts from letters received, and will give some idea of the mode of distribution:

Highfields, Langham, Colchester, Essex.
March 5th, 1879.

DEAR SIR,—Many thanks for 100 BANNERS to hand this morning. As a lay preacher once a month at Stratford-St.-Mary's, Suffolk, I have brought the subject of our Identity with Lost Israel many times to the notice of my hearers. I am glad to have the BANNERS to distribute among them, as also among some labouring men we meet with on Friday evenings in Langham, to read the Bible and Identity works, and pray that our gracious God may bless us as a Nation, by pouring upon us all those rich blessings which He has promised (Jer. xxxi. 31; Heb. viii. 8). I hope and pray that the men and women of Israel will respond freely to your call for funds for the Free Circulation of the BANNER OF ISRAEL, that you may be able to sow it broadcast over the length and breadth of our land, that under the influence of the Divine Spirit, Britain's sons and daughters may awake to the knowledge of their high destiny and glorious privileges as the sons of the living God, the long-lost son, but now found; was dead, but alive again.

Allow me again to thank you for myself and daughters,
And remain, yours truly,
Mr. R. F. Banks. J. F. G.

I venture to write and ask if you will kindly supply me with about 100. I am sorry that I am not in a position to pay for them, but seeing that a Free Circulation Fund has been opened, I shall only be too glad if I can render the cause any assistance by distributing to the best of my ability what you may send me.—J. F. W., Darnley, near Yorkshire. [150 copies sent]

FUNDS URGENTLY NEEDED to carry on this work.

Communications to be addressed to the Secretary of the "Banner of Israel Free Circulation Fund," Mr. R. Fergusson Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-st., London, E.C., to whom all remittances for this object should also be made, but NOT to the Editor of the BANNER—Philo-Israel.

Now ready price 7s., post free 6d. extra.

THE SECOND VOLUME OF THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

This volume contains a large number of articles on our Identity with Lost Israel, by the best and most learned writers on the subject. Also many interesting papers on the Great Pyramid by Professor Piazzi Smyth, F.R.S.E., Astronomer-Royal for Scotland, Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A., Major H. A. Tracey, R.A., Charles Horner, Esq., and others. London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SHEFFIELD ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

FIRST ANNUAL SOIREE, March 24, 1879.

Tea at 5.30; after meeting 7 p.m. Addresses on "Our National Past and Present," and "Our National Future," with selections of music and singing, will be given during the Evening.

Tickets for Tea 1s. each; Admission after Tea 6d.

BELIEVERS IN THE IDENTITY are requested to meet at St. Bartholomew's School, Little James' Back, Broadmead, BRISTOL, on Thursday, the 20th instant, at half-past seven, to form a BRISTOL Israel's Identification Association, in affiliation with the existing Local Association, the meetings of which are usually held in Clifton.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

Temporary Office:—
20, WARWICK LANE, LONDON, E.C.
President:—
Vice-Presidents:—
ADMIRAL DUNN, Weston-Super-Mare.
CAPTAIN E. WEBSTER, Stirling.
Rev. A. J. J. CACHEMAILLE, M.A., Vicar of S. Mary's, Oldham.
Dr. J. M. GRANT, Surgeon-General, Camp, Aldershot.
Chairman of Committee:—
Mr. E. W. BIRD (Philo-Israel), Bristol.
Committee:—
MAJOR-GENERAL WM. HILL, Bath.
COLONEL BENTINCK, Grosvenor-square, W.
CAPTAIN BAYLY, R.N., Streatham, S.W.
Mr. JOHN S. ANDERSON, Upper Norwood, S.E.
Mr. W. BRAIKENBRIDGE, South Norwood, S.
Mr. ROBERT BANKS, London, E.C.
Mr. BENTINCK CANNEY, Lewisham, S.E.
Mr. FREDERICK CLIFT, B.A., Upper Norwood, S.E.
Mr. JOHN T. FLETCHER, Upper Norwood, S.E.
Rev. F. R. A. GLOVER, M.A., St. James, W.
Mr. H. L. GUERRIER, Tooting, S.W
Mr. W. H. GUEST, London, E.C.
Mr. CHARLES HORNER, Mortlake, S.W.
Mr. W. W. INCE, Douglas, Isle of Man.
Mr. DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, J.P., St. John's-wood, N.W.
Mr. H. H. PAIN, Bromley, Kent, S.E.
Mr. W. H. PETERS, J.P., Exeter.
Dr. H. HODSON RUGG, St. John's-wood, N.W.
Mr. J. L. WOOD, New Southgate, N.
(With power to add to their number.)
Treasurer:—
Dr. H. HODSON RUGG, 1, Grove-road, St. John's-wood, N.W.
Hon. Secretary:—
REV. JAMES BILLINGTON.

This Association has been established to bind in closer union the many friends who rejoice in having a portion with the long Lost Tribes of the House of Israel; also to extend the knowledge of the truth that the Anglo-Saxon races are now identified with those Lost Tribes of the House of Israel. These objects, it is thought, will be best accomplished by means of Drawing Room and Public Meetings, by Sermons, Lectures, Bible Readings, by the diffusion of Literature upon the subject, and by such other ways and means as the Committee may from time to time determine.

The Honorary Secretary or the Treasurer will be glad to receive the names of friends wishing to join the Association or to subscribe to its Funds.

Members' Annual Subscriptions to be not less than 2s. 6d. per annum.

Donations and Subscriptions are urgently needed to carry on the work.

Contributions are much needed for the Free Circulation Fund of the Association, which disseminates works by VARIOUS WRITERS on the Identity Question.

Friends who will arrange for, or assist in, the arrangements for Lectures in their respective localities, under the auspices of the Association, are requested to address the Hon. Secretary at the office of the Association, from whom all particulars, and every assistance for the effective carrying out of the same, may be obtained.

J. BILLINGTON, Hon. Sec.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION. A course of FIVE LECTURES will be delivered in Devonport-street Chapel, Commercial-road, E. (opposite Arbour-square), on the following evenings:—

Tuesday, March 18th, by CHARLES STUBBS, Esq., B.A. Subject: "Scriptural Evidences of Identity."

Tuesday, March 25th, by DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, Esq., J.P. Subject: "Britain Fifth and Last Monarchy."

Tuesday, April 1st, by the Rev. J. BILLINGTON. Subject: "Objections to Anglo-Israel Theory Considered."

Chair to be taken at 8 o'clock each evening.

ADMISSION FREE. COLLECTIONS.

THE TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL FOUND AND IDENTIFIED IN THE BRITISH NATION.

EDWARD HINE

(The well-known writer on this subject) will deliver his POPULAR LECTURE

In St. JAMES'S HALL, Regent-street, on March 25th, 1879. Doors open at 7; Chair taken at 7.30.

BOOKS, ETC.

THE GREAT PYRAMID. NOW READY, PHILO-ISRAEL'S NEW WORK, 56 pages, Illustrated with Diagrams, price 4d., post free 5d.

AN ELEMENTARY DIGEST or SKETCH OF THE CHIEF FACTS and TEACHINGS of the GREAT PYRAMID of EGYPT; adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific. By PHILO-ISRAEL; together with Original Papers by the following leading Pyramidists, republished mostly from the BANNER OF ISRAEL (by kind permission of the proprietor)—viz., Professor Piazzi Smyth, the Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A., Charles Horner, Esq., and Major H. A. Tracey, R.A. Being a pamphlet by five authors (a Pyramid number).

Opinion of Mr. Charles Horner, regarding the above work, after perusal of the same:—"I think your design of the Pyramid pamphlet excellent. I know well that it is a book urgently needed, since, under God's blessing, it will, I feel convinced, convert many to Christ. Your part Philo-Israel's) I deem unexceptionable. It is both terse and understandable to the many, which is the great object you have had in view. I should like to see thousands circulated amongst our intelligent artisans, and hope God will raise some to do this."—C. HORNER, Dec. 12, 1878.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

Second edition, sixth thousand.

Fancy paper covers, 6d.; cloth, gilt lettered, flush, 1s.

THE HISTORY OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL: How They Were Lost, and How They Were Found. Told for the children. By PHILO-ISRAEL. Adapted for use by parents, Sunday School and other teachers, with questions on the chapters added.

For favourable notices of this work by Professor Piazzi Smyth, John T. Gott, Esq., and others, see handbills. W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

"The History of the House of Israel—told for the children—is a very valuable addition to our children's libraries. It gives a clear account of all the chief points of interest, in language suited to the comprehension of children, and ought to be in the hands of every mother and teacher who believes in our Identity with Israel. It supplies a want I have long felt as the mother of a large family."

ARE THE ENGLISH PEOPLE THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL? By PHILO-ISRAEL Price 4d.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

OUR IDENTITY WITH THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. By PHILO-ISRAEL. Price 4d. Third Thousand (reprinted from the Clifton Chronicle).

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

BRISTOL LEAFLETS ON THE IDENTIFICATION. 1 to 6; 1s. per 100.

Price 6d.; or with illustrative map, 8d.

BRITAIN (OR ISRAEL) THE FIFTH AND LAST, AND THE UNCONQUERABLE EMPIRE. By JOHN GILDER SHAW.

Price 3d.; post free, 3½d.

CHRONOLOGICAL CHART OF BRITISH VICTORIES OVER THE CONTINENTAL POWERS, ranging from the battle of Cressy (1346), to our last victory, the taking of Sebastopol, Sept. 8, 1855. Arranged by J. G. SHAW, of Leeds.

"We trust Mr. Shaw's labour in preparing this paper may be appreciated by the public and be largely sold."—Banner of Israel.

Shortly will be published, price 6d.

RESULTS OF ISRAEL'S OBEDIENCE. A review of the successive steps which have led to the present condition of Britain (or Israel), the Fifth and Last Empire.

London: Published by Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; and may be had of the Author, 20 Park-row, Leeds, and of all booksellers.

Now ready, price One penny, post free 1½d. One dozen copies, post free 1s. 100 copies 6s., post free 7s.

THE IDENTITY OF THE BRITISH NATION WITH THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. THE CLUE TO THE EASTERN QUESTION. By C. W. E.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row

Just Published, price 3d.

EPISCOPACY, NOT ESTABLISHMENT, THE BANE OF THE NATIONAL CHURCH. By A LAY MEMBER OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND.

W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row; and the Protestant Tract Society, 17, Buckingham-st., Strand.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed:—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, 5, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, MARCH 19, 1879.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. III. No. 117. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, MARCH 26, 1879. [ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
"It Must be in the Air"	125
Was Abraham a Jew? By Abraham Storey	126
God's Covenant with David. By A. M.	128
Watchmen, What of the Night? By John T. Gott	128
Nothing New. By L. P.	129
Why is the Kaffir Race Increasing?	130
Progress of the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association	130
Correspondence	131

"IT MUST BE IN THE AIR."

THE above was the remark of a secular paper published in Bristol on the 5th March, 1879. What is in the air? The seventh angel in the Apocalypse (xvi. 17) poured out his vial into the air, and what was the result? "There came a great voice out of the temple of heaven, saying, It is done! and there were voices, and thunders, and lightnings; and" after that "a great earthquake, such as was not since men were upon the earth, so mighty an earthquake, SO GREAT." We have for some time past raised our voice in warning that this great and terrible catastrophe is at hand. Nothing that has happened during the last few months of apparent European calm and peace has tended to render us doubtful of the imminence of the coming woe, which shall ere long devastate and ruin "yonder ill-consolidated Europe." In June last the Nineteenth Century had the following, which pretty fully corroborates our views as we then held them, and hold them still. Our quotation is as follows, taken from page 1132 :—

Finally, we may say that the present state of Europe in general carries with it a pessimistic tendency; for dark clouds are overhead, spreading twilight over the earth—the light that favours pessimism. They are clouds which threaten trouble, storms, change in religions, change in social institutions all over the earth, so that the "earth spirit," should he sleep a hundred years, and then awake, would not recognise his earth, so altered will be its face.

And as before a storm, when heavy clouds hide the sun, the cattle hide their heads, and men fly to their gloomy dwellings, and a dim, frightened feeling creeps over their hearts, beating with void fear, so do nations now feel the voidness in their hearts, the indistinct fear which is itself a form of pessimism."

From the Pall Mall Gazette of the 7th of March, 1879, we take the following startling sentences to the like effect, from an article headed, "The Confusions of Europe: "—

Looking back upon the course traversed by events during the past few months, we perceive no sign of improvement in any European country, but, on the contrary, an aggravation of disorder wherever it has previously existed, and its appearance in communities which up till lately have been free from it. For the present France must still be reckoned as an element on the side of uncertainty and anxiety, and a contributory to the general fund of European confusion. Elsewhere on the Continent the disturbing agencies which have so long been at work have become more active and more menacing than ever. The position of Russia, hiding her plague-spots with one hand and holding down her Nihilists with the other, appears to an on-looker well-nigh desperate. To him it seems that the efforts of both hands are failing, and that she is finding Nihilism as irrepressible as truth. In Russia, no doubt, the phenomenon we are considering is more strikingly displayed than elsewhere; there the disease of Europe is acute, just as in Turkey it lies for the present in its old chronic condition, marked by its well-known symptoms of financial embarrassment and administrative weakness, deepening, indeed, in intensity day by day; but not, probably, destined to pass into the paroxysmal phase until the month of May. But everything is preparing for a renewal of the "acute" attack at that early date; and the bulletins, as we may call them, of this morning, are full of premonitory symptoms. Count Andrassy's answer to a question in the Austrian Reichsrath abounds in instruction on this point; and in particular his remark upon the question of the Balkan fortresses. The confusions which we witness in Eastern Europe, and in a milder form in the West, will be found, if we so far extend the survey, throughout nearly the whole of the civilised world. In no important country save our own can the political situation be contemplated without grave anxiety; but bad as our position is in many respects; gloomy as is our commercial outlook, and clouded as is the distant horizon of our empire in more quarters than one, the domestic prospect is comparatively calm.

These are remarkable, solemn words, and they point with no indistinctness to the same dread collapse for the prophetic "earth," actually so named by these secular writers, who saw and see the frightful storm now rising, but fail to see the true direction of its incidence, and why it will come to pass at all. Without placing too much stress upon the indications of the disturbing elements now abroad, we have only to note what are the facts on which the Bristol journal was forced to exclaim, "It must be in the air!" "First," it said, "there is the crisis in Egypt, another in Russia, growing more acute daily; then the Spanish ministry has resigned without apparent reason. The American Congress has sat all night, being unable to agree upon a report which, if adopted, will, in effect, impeach the President, because of the electoral frauds in the South, and if defeated, will let off all defrauders without punishment. In the German Parliament the Government is meeting with such opposition to the Gagging Bill as is likely to result in its defeat. In St. Petersburg the authorities have their hands full of Nihilism ;" while in France an event has occurred which may have the gravest results when, in May next, the crisis of the arrangements for carrying the Berlin Treaty into effect will take place. This occurrence is regarded by the Times and other journals with the gravest alarm. It is the resignation of M. de Marcère, the Minister of the Interior, who, attacked by the Extreme Left, led by the rising communist, M. Clemenceau, and abandoned by the Cabinet, yielded to what is, in fact, a vote of censure, and retired. The Times says of this event, and its probable far-reaching consequences, that it is, under the circumstances, "much to be lamented :"—

Digitized by Google

> The consequence may be, not merely the fall of a Ministry, but the revival of a confusion and weakness which must tend to paralyse the French Government and to lower the influence of France abroad. To this country such a result would be a matter for the gravest regret. We rely on the co-operation of France not merely in Egypt, but in the whole course of Eastern affairs. It was the comparative withdrawal of France from her legitimate position which rendered the revival of the Eastern question practicable ; and her influence is indispensable to the sound condition of the European commonwealth. It is therefore earnestly to be hoped that the danger now threatening her may be averted or speedily surmounted.

What the difficulties are which are before us, during which the countenance and support of a strong and united French nation will needs be invaluable, are patent to all men, and they point to the month of May, 1879, as the time when the crisis will be upon us. Then it is that the Russian forces, under the Treaty of Berlin, must evacuate Eastern Roumelia ; then Bulgaria and Eastern Roumelia North and South of the Balkans must be constituted under their autonomous form of government, and the passes of the Balkans finally left in the keeping of the armies of the Turks. Not one of these prescribed treaty conditions seems likely to be carried out by May next. Russia seems in no haste to evacuate Eastern Roumelia. The Constitution for Bulgaria is making the very slowest progress. Not only is it likely that the Turkish occupation of the Balkan Passes will be strenuously opposed by the Bulgarians (incited thereto, who can doubt, by the Russians) ; but the Times hints that the Passes are already fortified, and guns and war stores transported thither" by the Bulgarians! Here, then, we see the smouldering embers of a volcano ready to burst into violent eruption at the God-appointed time, and to lead to a succession of explosions which we verily believe will end in that convulsion in 1882, which God's Word calls the "great," unparalleled "earthquake," the "fiery deluge" destined to burn up the prophetic earth, and utterly to destroy its polities. Already in Germany the anticipation is rife that, should President Grévy's Government be overturned, as seemed for the moment likely, M. Gambetta will take possession of the Elysée, and will be forced to involve France in a war of revenge against Germany to maintain himself at the head of the Republic. For ourselves we do not anticipate this result till such time as Russia is thoroughly embroiled with the German and Austrian Empires by reason of her interference with the navigation of the Danube, brought on by the success of the policy regarding Bulgaria, North and South of the Balkans. Then, but not before, we think, matters will be ripe for the alliance between France and Russia, which will place the great German Empire at frightful disadvantage, and possibly lead to the great cataclysm, the expected prophetic outcome of the Eastern question. Then will be the time of Israel's return, and finally, of their occupation of Constantinople, to safeguard the empire and to secure not only the flank of the British march to India, but also the land of the inheritance with its future British capital, "the Gate of My people, even Jerusalem" (Micah i. 9). In May next, however, as our friend the Rev. C. W. Hickson lately pointed out, some great event is likely to happen which will usher in all the rest.

Reader, these are solemn, awful times, and we are on the threshold of occurrences which are to precede the Lord's coming. Will you not watch and be sober ? for "ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake YOU as a thief. YE are all the children of light, and the children of the day. We are not of the night, nor of darkness." "Let us not sleep, as do others ; but let US watch, and be sober" (1 Thess. v. 4—6).

WAS ABRAHAM A JEW?

By ABRAHAM STOREY.

PART I.

As believers in the Identity, it most nearly concerns us to be acquainted with all that can be known about the federal head of our race, especially as to what Abraham was at the time when all the promises concerning the covenant blessings were made. The clearer knowledge we have of what Abraham was both by race and religion, under these circumstances, the clearer apprehension we shall have of what character his children, "the inheritors of the promises," should have. An imperfect knowledge of what Abraham was, will prevent us from seeing the full force and intention of those portions of New Testament teaching where his character is placed more prominently forward than that of any other Old Testament saint.

As Christians and Bible students, searching to learn what is the mind of the Spirit respecting our Identification blessings and privileges, it is very needful that on such points we should "understand what we read."

But is it not a surprising fact that on this question of what Abraham was, so little is definitely known ? If the reader have considered this question, and come to the knowledge of the truth respecting it, and will, as the writer has frequently done, put to his Bible-reading friends, the question, "What was Abraham ?" he will be astonished to find how many erroneous views exist respecting it.

Some will give an answer that is true respecting his race, but false respecting his religion ; many will honestly reply "that they have not considered the subject, and are not prepared to answer the question ;" but a large majority, aye, even among our Identity friends, will give the answer that "Abraham was, by race and religion, a Jew !"

The effect of this impression, that he was a Jew, creates a prejudicial barrier in the minds of many to their seeing that character of perfection in him worthy of a Christian's example, and which the Scriptures so constantly uphold. While they admit that he was a very good man, and a man of great faith, yet, as they think he was a Jew, they also think that he was therefore, after all, something inferior to a Christisn.

Before specially considering this question, the writer could never understand how it was that other Old Testament worthies seemed always to be quoted in preference to Abraham, unless it was that the stigma which the world has put upon the name of a Jew has also attached itself, in some degree, to Abraham, because he was their forefather.

A notable instance of this groundless prejudice took place a few weeks since, at a Sabbath afternoon Bible class, in Liverpool, which the writer attends. This class has an average attendance of about eighty persons, gentlemen belonging to various denominations of Christians : not a few of them of good education and well instructed in the Word of God, as well as faithful followers of the Lord Jesus Christ.

The subject of the afternoon turned on "Christian Perfection." The class, being a conversational one, and free to all comers, gave expression to many opinions. Shortly before the close, a gentleman remarked that "he did not think it possible for a man to attain what could be called perfection in this life; or so to please God as to obey his laws and receive the Divine approval that he was perfect in His sight."

In reply, several members quoted the testimony of the Word of God respecting Enoch, Noah, Job, Daniel, and some others. I could not but think it singular that Abraham should either have been overlooked, or ignored ; and this moved me to make some remarks to the following effect :—" It is somewhat strange that one character which our Lord and the apostle Paul, when speaking or writing on this and kindred subjects, made use of more than that of any other, should have been omitted this afternoon. The Bible speaks more fully and more definitely about Abraham's perfection than they do about that of any other man. If the Scriptures say that 'Enoch walked with God,' and that Job and Noah were 'perfect,' they declare that both these characteristics were combined in Abraham when, in Gen. xvii. 1, the Divine command was given, 'Walk before Me, and be thou perfect.' Further, that this perfection was such as fulfilled all God's commands, and fully met with Divine approval, and was perfect in His sight, was expressly declared by the Almighty Himself, when, after Abraham's decease, He said to Isaac, 'Abraham obeyed My voice, and kept My charge, My commandments, My statutes, and My laws' (Gen. xxvi. 5). That this obedience was something more than the observance of a ceremonial law, was evident from what our Lord said about Abraham in His controversy with the Jews, as recorded in John viii. : and which was furthermore confirmed by the declaration of Paul in Rom. iv. 13, where he says that 'the promise that he should be the heir of the world was not to Abraham, or to his seed, through the law, but through the righteousness of faith.' We are therefore warranted, on Scripture authority, to conclude that Abraham's character was perfect in the sight of God, 'through the righteousness of faith;' and as such he is pre-eminently set forth as the character, next to our Lord, worthy of our imitation."

Digitized by Google

The momentary silence which followed these remarks was broken by a gentleman saying, " Mr. Chairman, I do not think it right or proper that the character of a Jew should be held up before a company of Christians as a worthy example to follow."

Although the chairman had risen to his feet, to occupy the remaining five minutes to make the usual summing up, and closing remarks, I was constrained to reply, " Abraham was not a Jew ; and I challenge proof from either sacred or profane history that he was by race, or religion, a Jew."

Had a magnetic current run through the assembly, the effect could not have been more startling. Nearly every gaze was turned towards me, lit up with amazement. The chairman prevented any further general remarks by proceeding with his summary ; and I took my accustomed place at the instrument, to prepare for the closing hymn. While thus occupied, a gentleman quietly left his seat, and stealing up to the instrument, leaned over it, and said, in an undertone, " Do you mean to say Abraham was not a Jew ? " I as quietly replied, " Not only Abraham, but Isaac and Jacob were neither Jews by race or religion." He wished for an explanation as to " what they were if not Jews," when I reminded him that " I could not interrupt the chairman by replying to him then, but should be happy to converse with him after the close of the meeting."

Our space need not be here taken up by following, verbatim, all that took place after that meeting, or the many times the assertion " that I was trying to prove that we are Jews, and that Jews are Christians," has had to be met and refuted. My point is here to show how great a wall of separation is built and supported between the truths of the Old and New Testaments by such opinions as these, and that by those who cry out loudest against the Identity advocates for their efforts to throw this wall of separation down. We repeat, in other words, what we mean ; and that is, that the same error which falsely palms upon Abraham the race and character of a Jew, is the same error which falsely charges the Identity advocates with trying to prove that, as Lost Israel, the British nation are Jews. This error is not on our side, but in the minds of our opponents; and so long as its remains there, it will necessarily be a wall of separation between us. It can only be thrown down in their minds by the same process as that by which the wall of separation which prevents Abraham and Christians coming together in the " unity of the faith," must be thrown down ; and that is by a close and careful study of the real facts upon which the truth of the case rests.

The truth of the Gospel, as understood by Abraham, is one and the same truth as understood by us. Judaism, the great wall of separation between the patriarchal and Christian dispensations, was not known to the patriarchs ; therefore, all opinions which view the patriarchs as Jews, are erroneous, and must cause confusion in the minds of those who hold them, as well as lead to a total misunderstanding of the nature and application of the " promises made to our forefather Abraham."

This question as to " what Abraham was both by race and religion," is worth solving, as the analysis must, we think, be a matter, not only of deep interest, but of great importance in the investigation of Identity truths ; for it is an investigation of the cause for which the promises made to Israel of universal blessings were given.

" I will perform the oath which I sware unto Abraham thy father,"—" BECAUSE that Abraham obeyed My voice, and kept My charge, My commandments, My statutes, and My laws."

Those who say Abraham was a Jew, offer the two following reasons for their opinion :—1. That he was the federal head, or, as the phrase is more commonly expressed, " the father of the Jews ;" therefore, say they, he must have been a Jew by race; and

2. " That he observed the ordinance of circumcision ; " and, therefore, must have been a Jew both by race and religion.

Now a little consideration will demonstrate the fallacy of both these opinions.

If it follow that a man must be of the same race as his descendants, then some men will be a most complex compounding of hybridity. This is notably the case with Abraham, for instance, who was the lineal head or " father of many nations."

Thus we have to be begin with, Ishmael his first son, and his descendants : " And these are the names of the sons of Ishmael, by their names, according to their generations :— Nebajoth, Kedar, Abdeel, Mibsam, Mishma, Dumah, Massa, Hadar, Tema, Jetur, Naphish, and Kedmah : these are the sons of Ishmael, and these are their names, by their towns and by their castles; twelve princes according to their nations (Gen. xxv. 12—16).

Then again, Abraham took a wife, and her name was Keturah. And she bare him Zimran, Jokshan, Medan, Midian " (who was the head of a large race, whose territory lay to the East and South-east of that of the Moabites), " Ishbak and Shuah." Here are, with Ishmael and Isaac, eight sons in all of Abraham.

We must again add to these Abraham's grandchildren, or the children of Isaac—viz., Jacob and Esau—with each of their descendants, the twelve sons of Jacob, or the Israelites, and the descendants of Esau, or the Edomites. In Gen. xxxvi. we read that the Edomites were a great people, governed by dukes and kings—a nation and a kingdom constituted before anything of the kind was known in Israel.

(To be continued.)

NOTICE.—A correspondent signing W. L. R., from Sunderland, under date March 8, calls upon me to announce, in the next number of the BANNER OF ISRAEL, whether I have, or have not, received from him a long letter during the past week. I do, therefore, acknowledge that the letter came safely to me, but, being anonymous, was immediately put away unread, in accordance with my usual rule.—PIAZZI SMYTH, 15, Royal-terrace, Edinburgh, March 10, 1879.

NOTICE.—We are glad to learn that Colonel Gawler's valuable little work, " Our Scythian Ancestors Identified with Israel," price twopence, is to be immediately republished by Mr. W. H. Guest. It has long been out of print, to the great disappointment of many inquiring believers in our Identity, and cannot too soon re-appear.

Digitized by Google

GOD'S COVENANT WITH DAVID.

"Thus saith the Lord, David shall never want a man to sit upon the throne of Israel."—Jer. xxxiii. 17.

In considering this subject it would be well to examine what promises were conditional and what were unconditional. If we look closely, we will find that those the Lord made to David were made without conditions. To find conditions we must refer to David and Solomon's repetition of the Lord's promise when recalling to mind the Lord's goodness and mercy to them. This, with one exception. When the Lord appeared to Solomon after the temple was built, He said, "If thou wilt walk before Me as David thy father walked, and do according to all that I have commanded thee, and shalt observe My statutes and My judgments, then will I establish the throne of thy kingdom, as I covenanted with David thy father, saying, There shall not fail thee a man to be RULER IN ISRAEL" (2 Chron. vii. 17, 18). Here we see that though Solomon's line must fail if disobedient, there was no revoking of the Lord's promise to David. To him it was said, "Thine house and thy kingdom shall be established for ever before thee. Thy throne shall be established for ever" (2 Sam. vii. 16). That Solomon's line did fail we know, and also that the Lord Jesus Christ, the true Heir of David, did not come in Solomon's line, but by another son of David, even Nathan (Luke iii. 31). Though Solomon failed, the throne remained still the Lord's throne to exalt whom He willed upon it. In it was established for ever "the throne of the kingdom of the Lord over Israel" (1 Chron. xxii. 10, xxviii. 5, xxix. 23; Psa. xlv. 6.)

Glancing over the unconditional promises we find it written, "Thy seed will I establish for ever, and build up thy house to all generations. . . . . Once have I sworn in My holiness, that I will not lie unto David; his seed shall endure for ever, and his throne as the sun for ever," &c., &c. (Psa. lxxxix. 4). Again, "I will raise thy seed after thee, which shall be of thy sons. . . . . I will establish his throne for ever; I will settle him in Mine house, and My kingdom for ever, and his throne shall be established for evermore" (1 Chron. xvii. 14). In 1 Kings ix. 5—9, we find that failure of a king not alluded to, but other blessings forfeited by disobedience. Again, "I will establish the throne of his kingdom over Israel for ever" (1 Chron. xxii. 10).

When the Lord was angry with Solomon, he said to him, "I will surely rend the kingdom from thee, and will give it to thy servant. . . . . Howbeit, I will not rend away all the kingdom; but I will give one Tribe to thy son for My servant David's sake." . . . . (And to Jeroboam He said), "I will rend the kingdom out of the hand of Solomon, and will give Ten Tribes unto thee. But he shall have one Tribe for My servant David's sake." . . . . I will take the kingdom out of his son's hand, and will give it unto thee, even Ten Tribes, and unto his son will I give one Tribe, that David My servant may have a light alway before Me in Jerusalem" (1 Kings xi.). Of Abijam, the king over Judah, it is said, "For David's sake did the Lord his God give him a lamp in Jerusalem, to set up his son after him," &c. (1 Kings xv. 4).

Again, "Howbeit the Lord would not destroy the House of David, because of the covenant that He made with David, and as He promised to give a light to him, and to his sons for ever" (2 Chron. xxi. 7.)

"Yet the Lord would not destroy Judah for David His servant's sake, as He promised him, to give him always a light and to his children" (2 Kings viii. 19).

"Ought ye not to know that the Lord God gave the kingdom over Israel to David for ever, even to him and to his sons for ever by a covenant of salt?" (2 Chron. xiii. 5). In all these we have no conditions attached. And from these verses we learn that the kingdom went with the Ten Tribes, or Israel; but rulership was to be found in David's line, while one Tribe was given out of the thirteen, that David might always have a light and "his children." Thus far we have the promise as given to David unconditionally.

Those with conditions will be found among the words of David and Solomon, when recalling the goodness and mercy of the Lord to them. (See 2 Chron. vi. 16; 1 Chron. xxviii. 5; 1 Kings ii. 12, viii. 13; Psa. cxxxii. 11, 12).

That a time is coming (and very near) when "Jerusalem shall be called The Throne of the Lord" (Jer. iii. 17); that the Lord Christ shall be raised to sit on that throne (Acts ii. 30), and that a "Sceptre shall rise out of Israel," is most certain. (See Jer. xxiii. 5; Ezek. xxi. 27, xxxvii. 22; Isa. xxiv. 23, ix. 7; Luke i. 69; Num. xxiv. 17; Mic. iv. 7; Zeph. iii. 17; Dan. ii. 44, vii. 4—27.)

But while we doubt not that Christ will reign on the "Throne of the kingdom of the Lord over Israel," may we not reverently ask, What of the time from Zedekiah's death in Babylon, till Christ comes?

If the Lord did not make a full end of the nation of Israel as He said, "I will make a full end of all the nations whither I have driven thee; but I will not make a full end of thee, but correct thee in measure," may we not also be assured that He did not make a full end of David's seed? "For thus saith the Lord, If My covenant be not with day and night, and if I have not appointed the ordinances of heaven and earth, then will I cast away the seed of Jacob, and David My servant, so that I will not take any of his seed to be RULERS over the seed of ABRAHAM, Isaac, and Jacob, for I will cause their captivity to return and have mercy on them" (Jer. xxxiii. 25, 26).

Ought not we who believe in the Word of our covenant-keeping, faithful God, make it our study to find out how this promise has been kept, instead of thinking, speaking, and writing as if it had been broken?

I commend this subject to the prayerful consideration of the readers of THE BANNER.

A. M.

Leamington.

WATCHMEN, WHAT OF THE NIGHT?

By JOHN T. GOTT.

THE night is far spent, and the gathering clouds have assumed an inky blackness in the recent Zulu calamity. Seventy-eight was a year of trouble, distress, and calamity, unequalled in the present century, and the infant seventy-nine bids fair to outrival its predecessor. With her Majesty, we all trust that this may be the last calamity that may ever befall our troops. Cetywayo, "the man of blood," has yet to learn the never-yielding foe with which he has to deal, and while it is a foregone conclusion to say that Zululand must be annexed, or come under the protectorate of Britain, even as the Transvaal and East and West Griqua Land, let us hope that it may all be accomplished without the shedding of blood.

We may see in all this, events ripening, and the nations of of the world being prepared, for the mighty things the God of Israel is baring His mighty arm to do for His "chosen people."

The eyes of the whole world are at this moment centred upon one people—the British. Their deliberations and actions are keenly criticised, not only in European countries, but also in India, China, Japan, Africa, America, Australia, and New Zealand. This great nation and company of nations, existing in these latter days, is occupying now the position assigned to Israel of the Ten Tribes. But in these latter days Israel was to have a foe, only one—viz., Gog, and all his bands; and Anglo-Israel has now, in the relentless, voracious, and doggedly-determined Russian bear, that one foe—a foe hitherto checkmated on every side by the British Lion, and one whose power is yet to be utterly destroyed by the Lion of the Tribe of Judah.

Digitized by Google

But if this is external evidence, have we any internal evidence that we are Israel of the Ten Tribes?

God has said in His Word that, though He made an end of all the nations on earth, He would not make an end of them; but mark, they should not be "altogether unpunished," but punished "in measure."

Now, of what nature is this punishment? Like all punishment, it is the immediate result of sin. This punishment also partakes of a national character. As a nation, the British have been the recipients of the richest of Heaven's blessings, and, at the same time, the perpetrators of the grossest sins against the Giver of all good. Well may the clarion notes of the prophet rouse us out of our slumbers: "Not for your sakes do I this, O House of Israel, be it known unto you; but for Mine holy name's sake, which ye have profaned among the heathen whither ye went."

Before the outpouring of the Holy Spirit and the restoration can take place, God has said: "I will yet for this be inquired of by the House of Israel, to do it for them." After much consideration, I have come to the conclusion, and it is confirmed in Israel's past history, that such circumstances must take place in our midst, that there will be brought about a national day of humiliation before Almighty God for national sins, when the "cry of affliction," the "cry" of the children of Israel shall ascend up to their Father, their Shepherd, their God, and their King; and He will speedily send them a "deliverer," even as He did in Egypt, when He said He had "seen" their affliction, had "heard" their cry, and had "come down" to deliver them by the instrument of His own chosen servant Moses. Even as He did also at the Red Sea. And in the time of the Judges we find that every time the Israelites lapsed into idolatry, and, for their sins, involved themselves in serious national calamities, when they cried unto God in the day of affliction, He heard their cry, and the "deliverer" was at hand.

So must it be again. We being Israel, and the dawn of day being near, are now being righteously chastised for our sins, and shall eventually be brought to our "right mind," and humbly bow in penitence before our God and King.

Disasters round our shores and in our rivers, explosions in our collieries and ironclads, and accidents on our railways, have been the fruitful cause of many a "cry" ascending to heaven from the lips of the bereaved and afflicted.

Have we not nationally been making too much haste to grow rich? And with what results? Masters contending with their men, and men resisting their masters, resulting in general discontent and dissatisfaction, and ending in such a depression of trade, the like of which is not within the memory of living man. Then the sudden collapse of several large firms has been the ruin of many small ones, and so the depression has spread, until all, more or less, have been made to feel it, to retrench, and to look carefully to the future.

Then, again, have we not recently been taught the rottenness of some of those institutions of which we have nationally been so proud? and have we not come to the time when we have learned that we can hardly place any confidence in man?

Last of all, the hearts of sensitive British people almost ceased to beat for a moment when the sad news of the calamity which had befallen our brave soldiers in Zululand arrived. That was a bitter blast on British arrogance! Then went up many a "cry" from mourning hearts, blended with the prayer of our beloved Queen that it "may be the last."

Verily we are eating the "bread of adversity," and drinking the "water of affliction." But what saith the Scripture respecting Israel's condition immediately preceding the good times coming? The darkness is intense, the depression is great, and not yet has appeared the silver lining stimulating the watchmen with hope. But the promises of God are sure.

He has "waited to be gracious," and thus will He be "exalted." The people shall dwell in Zion, at Jerusalem. He will be very gracious unto thee at the voice of thy "cry." When He shall "hear" it, He will "answer" it. And then we read: "Though the Lord give you the bread of adversity,* and the water of affliction, yet shall not thy teachers be removed into a corner any more; but thine eyes shall see thy teachers, and thine ears shall hear a word behind thee, saying: This is the way, walk ye in it; when ye turn to the right hand, and when ye turn to the left" (vide Isaiah xxx. 18—26).

In the past, the "teachers" of the chosen people have often been compelled to hide themselves from persecution. But they were then to do their duty, and they did it. The promise is extended to the chosen people till the time of the restoration of Israel. Therefore Israel of the Ten Tribes must now have their teachers—not one, but many; not one, single-handed, in one place, but many, all the world over. Is it not so? Wherever Anglo-Israel is to be found, has not the Almighty raised up "teachers" for His chosen people, in every land and in every clime? These "teachers" are of many kinds, but all are engaged in pointing out "the way," illustrating the fulfilment of Scripture, and demonstrating the truth of God's Word. And this work they are morally bound to carry on, and will carry on, consoling and sustaining the faithful among the "chosen people" in these dark times of commercial depression, insecurity, famines, wars, and rumours of war. Yes, they will carry it on, until Anglo-Israel, the Prodigal Son, is brought to his right mind, and then will the Father send the "deliverer" He hath promised, and shower down upon His "chosen people" the long-promised outpouring of the Holy Spirit.

February 23, 1879.

NOTHING NEW.

THEN why repeat it? For the first reason, because though what is here written may be but stale to many, to some it may come as fresh light, and if brought forward some time ago in various publications, yet it may be buried beneath a superstructure of more advanced thought, and so be lost to the sight of those who are only beginning the study of Israel's Identification; but who turn from the early numbers of the BANNER, etc., with the modern craving for the last thing said.

A second reason we would give is, that some thoughts need very frequent repetition before they can be made to enter certain minds, which are opposed to them by prejudice, old ideas, needless alarms, and often, we think, by mental indolence, which shrinks from opening up a subject which, if not at once rejected, must be carefully examined, and looked at from many sides.

A third reason we may give for harping on an old string is, that we imagine others, like ourselves, must meet with the sort of passive resistance to our belief, which often brings us up unpleasantly, as it were, against a dead wall, and the knowledge of not being singular in such disagreeable experience, may encourage or comfort those called upon to endure it.

We are grieved by and for the Christian "don't carers!" whose apathy is a frequent mortification to us. "Why should they care to be Israel," they ask, "and inheritors of the promises we point to? They are sure of salvation by faith in the merits and death of our Lord Jesus: they care for nothing else!" Don't they? Do they not care for health, and strength, and wealth, or at any rate, means that shall place them and those they love above want? Do they not care for liberty for themselves and for their children? Are they indifferent to the fact of their country being free from the rod of the oppressor, or the chains of a triumphant conquering foreign foe? The Christian who says he does not care, and does not wish to care for the earthly privileges promised by God to Israel through

* The "though" is not in the original. The Lord will give you bread and water, attended with trials for a time, as the preliminary discipline needed for ultimately bestowing the fullest blessings, temporal and spiritual, upon you.

Digitized by Google

Abraham, and Jacob, Moses and the prophets, is as false, we believe, to his true feelings as he is ungrateful to his Maker and his Redeemer. Let him imagine his country deprived of some of the blessings he "don't care about," over-run by enemies, few in number, without any colonies or foreign possessions, too poor and too oppressed to be witnesses for God throughout the world, and without a Sunday set apart as a day to be kept holy. Will he still say, "I am a Christian, and a saved sinner, I am indifferent to all this?" If he be so, we do not envy him his feelings and his indifference to the temporal welfare of his country and his countrymen, which we should say smacks of unpatriotism, and of a somewhat self-engrossed narrowness.

We do not now refer to a higher blessing in store for Israel, that of the nation's righteousness, as the fruit of an outpouring of God's Holy Spirit; for since our opponents will not believe we are Israel, and do not care to know it, of course they ignore all these promised especial spiritual privileges as awaiting us.

There are opposers of our view who think the promises of the Old Testament are all fulfilled as regards special favour to Israel. Now we hold that when our heavenly Father condescends to promise His children aught, the carrying out of such promise is likely to be so wondrous that our feeble imaginations cannot grasp the probable magnificence of their fulfilment; and we believe by this conception we honour our Lord and King: and that we equally dishonour Him when we point to small results, and say, that was all that had been intended by the God-spoken or Heaven-inspired words.

It has been suggested to us that 1 Kings iii. 8 proves that the multitudinous seed was granted in Palestine. We wonder if the writer of this remark has ever looked at an ancient map of Palestine, comparing it with its huge Persian neighbour, and yet can venture to say that the former country could have contained a people whose multitude would have fulfilled God's promise, and whether the supposition does not "pour contempt" on His covenant? It has been attempted to be shown that this multitudinous seed means a seed spiritual, but certainly, hitherto, the sentence of our blessed Lord has but too truly and mournfully contradicted such a view (Matt. vii. 14)—"Straight is the gate, and narrow is the way"—"and few there be that find it."

Let those who say the promises of earthly blessings have been fulfilled, run their thoughts through the Bible history of Abraham's descendants, from the beginning to the end. What a miserable outcome—surely we may be allowed to call it so—it seems of the glorious expectations that must have been raised by the words of the great God Himself to His faithful servant by the predictions of Jacob and of Balaam! Israel, ceasing to be a nation 700 years before Christ, disappearing, captives, wanderers, and even now, according to some of our opponents, unknown and unimportant. If, as others suggest, Israel is yet with Judah, having in some mysterious manner been rejoined to them after or at the return from Babylon, what then? Why, in that case they shared in the crucifixion of our Saviour, and since then have for 1800 years endured the severest trials and deepest anguish. We think, perhaps, many of us scarcely realize at all the agonies of the Jews during these long bitter years, when they have been persecuted, despised, tortured, robbed, and denied the ordinary rights of home life; yet this is what some say is the lot of all God's chosen people, His elect, His "first-born Ephraim!" And what do they expect is to follow? A return to Palestine: and then? Oh! then Jacob will be converted, if it has not happened before, and he will be allowed to share in the Christian privileges that are offered to every Gentile who will accept them in Jesus' name, and no more need be wished for—the miserable past forgotten, the future an universal and equal glory for all nations.

Is this all that springs from the promises poured out upon Israel in the Old Testament, while the earthly benefits and blessings spoken of are poured out upon another nation (the British), whose origin is unknown, and to whom no promises were made? Is not the thought an insult to Jehovah?

It may be urged that if it be an insult it is one that has been offered ever since Israel's disappearance, alike by the godly and the ungodly, the Jew and Israel, the reputed Gentile nation, and yet that in spite of this faithless error, according to the Anglo-Israelites, they have been receiving the promised blessings. That is true; but we erred in this matter innocently, for we were kept supernaturally, we believe, in the dark as to our origin. We deem that it was by a prolonged miracle our eyes were kept closed to the fact that has now been made clear to them: and as fresh and fresh evidence springs forth, showing us who we are, we only reverently admire the more the greatness of that power, that while fulfilling its mighty undertaking on our behalf, for the promises' sake of Him who wields that power, yet kept us blind to the bearing and the significance of His dealings with our country. L. P.

Feb. 6, 1879.

WHY IS THE KAFFIR RACE INCREASING?

It is one of the greatest problems that has ever arisen in our British colonial rule, how to put an end to the barbarous, sanguinary raids, so ruinous to life and property in South Africa, and how to educate and to elevate the Kaffir, so that he may be fitted to enjoy ultimately all the benefits of self-government. The Boers, indeed, cut the Gordian knot by enslaving or exterminating the aborigines; but this is a solution which England will not adopt, first, because it is opposed to that humane policy which has been nowhere more conspicuous than in our past relations with South Africa, and also because the Kaffir is not, like the Maori of New Zealand, or the American Indian, so readily to be extinguished. On the contrary, the black population, not only Kaffir, but Hottentot, is growing. In Natal there has been, indeed, an astonishing increase, far exceeding that of the European colonists, not only by natural growth, but by an immense black immigration into its territories. What are we to do with this growing population of semi-savage tribes? It is a question most hard to answer. It has been supposed by some that the Kaffirs are of Shemitic origin, and there are certain of their usages which seem remarkably to favour the idea: as, for instance, circumcision, the law of marriage and the widow, the distinction of clean and unclean animals; and one of their tribes towards the North, the Makalakas, seems still to hold sacred a seventh day. The structure of the Kaffir language does not, however, support this idea, which is now abandoned. It is probable, at the same time, that in their Southern wanderings there may have been added a considerable mixture of Shemitic blood, as Arab rule long prevailed on the East coasts of Africa; and this may in part account for these usages. It is a question of greater difficulty how far the Kaffirs are a Hamitic race. (The Kaffir or Bantu Tribes of South Africa.)

We think that if the Kaffirs are largely mixed with Arabs of the Shemitic blood, Gen. xvii. 18—20 gives us the true answer to the question, "Why they fail to 'die out' before Israel?" Ishmael's seed "dwells in the presence of all his brethren" (Gen. xvi. 12).

PROGRESS OF THE METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

We are glad to report further important aggressive action on part of the "Anglo-Israel Association" in London. On March 19, it appears the Rev. Jas. Billington, our hon. secretary, lectured at East Grinstead, in Sussex; on the 20th, an afternoon and an evening meeting were arranged to take place at St. Leonard's-on-Sea and at Hastings respectively, when our rev. secretary, and Mr. Onslow also, jointly opened the campaign there, as deputations from the society. At Taunton, friends are working, and we expect to hear shortly of a course of lectures with a conversazione for the discussion of the Identity in connection with the London association. A course of five lectures, in the East of London, has been organised, and we hope ere long that the pages of the Charing Cross Magazine may be occupied by some writer belonging to the committee, and therefore favourable to our cause, bringing it before the public through that medium. The Lewisham auxiliary, affiliated with our metropolitan friends, is, we hear, working very satisfactorily. On the whole, the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association has begun well, and is continuing very well. May the Lord prosper its future operations.

Digitized by Google

Correspondence.

MR. CLIFFORD'S PROOF OF THE SUPERIORITY OF JUDAH ABOVE JOSEPH, TESTED.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—In a letter lying before me, Mr. Clifford thus tries to establish his view, and it is well that his arguments whenever they are forthcoming should be carefully and critically considered. He writes thus: "Quoting Ezek. xxxvii. 15, you say, 'Israel is described by the figure of a stick.' The Bible says two sticks—one for Judah and the children of Israel his companions (ver. 16—19). Why is Judah to be ignored? Ezekiel mentions him as the chief, and in ver. 19 the stick of Israel is to be put with the stick of Judah, implying the superiority of the latter."

I rather question this far-fetched mode of proof, even allowing the English version to be accurate, which, however, it is not.

Applying Mr. Hickson's well-known and invaluable test, of "all the words fitting when we have the right key," I rather think we shall find that Mr. Clifford cannot unlock this passage as yet, but I will help him to do so. The Hebrew runs thus: "I will take the stick of Joseph which is in the hand of Ephraim, and the Tribes of Israel his fellows, and I have given to them upon it the stick of Judah." There are in this verse two proofs of the precedence of Ephraim. 1. God takes his stick first, and this is historically true; we were brought into union with God by the faith of Christ before our treacherous sister Judah. 2. The stick of Judah is placed upon the mighty power or rod of Ephraim, and in perfect agreement with Jer. iii. 18, on this influence is enabled to return to the land. For the benefit of those who do not read Hebrew, I add Jer. iii. 18: "the House of Judah shall walk upon the House of Israel." The outcast Jew will return on the political and religious might of the eldest son of the beloved wife of Israel. Yours truly,

H. MARRIOTT.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR PHILO-ISRAEL,—In your "Address to British Soldiers," which appeared in the BANNER of Wednesday, 19th instant, you say: "Your very uniform—the scarlet—is noted in the Word of God, and carefully described: 'The valiant men are in scarlet' (Nahum ii. 3)." The context is full of prophetic truths also strikingly applicable to Israel in the last days, as the founders, by the grace of God, of railway locomotion. Nahum ii. 3, 4, undoubtedly refer to railway trains as a means of transport for "the valiant men in scarlet," in these last days, "the day of His preparation."

"The chariots shall be with flaming torches . . . . and the fir trees terribly shaken." This is very descriptive: "The chariots," or carriages, shall be propelled with "flaming torches." The ordinary railway engine when running and ejecting vapour and sparks can easily be recognised under the symbol of a "flaming torch." The "sleepers" on which the chairs and rails of a railway are placed are principally of pine wood. In this way we may say: "the fir trees shall be terribly shaken." Or this may even be taken more literally, by remembering how the trees of woods or forests through which a railway is made are shaken by passing trains.

"The chariots (vehicles) shall rage (rattle) in the streets (on the railroads), they shall jostle one against another in the broadways." Have we, in this latter clause, a passing allusion to railway accidents which generally occur at junctions, or where there are a multiplicity of lines, which is well expressed by the term "broadways?"

"They shall seem like torches, they shall run like the lightning." How wonderfully descriptive of the speed of our fast trains!

O how much railways have done for us in the way of fulfilling Dan. xii. 4: "Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased!" And may we not also say, in a literal fulfilment of Isa. xl. 4: "Every valley shall be exalted, and every mountain and hill shall be made low: and the crooked shall be made straight, and the rough places plain?" Let us remember that Nahum speaks of "the chariots running like the lightning, with flaming torches," "IN THE DAY OF HIS PREPARATION," of which time Isaiah speaks in chap. xl. 3, wherein he says: "Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make straight in the desert a highway for our God." All this is to closely precede the "Revelation of the glory of our Lord" (Isa. xl. 5), when our blessed Lord Jesus shall again stand on Mount Olivet. (Compare Acts i. 11, 12 with Zech. xiv. 1—4.) This latter prophecy undoubtedly refers to "the last war," for the destruction of anti-Christ and his hosts. Railways and steamships (Isa. xviii. 2) will be needed in that "dark day" (Joel ii.) for the transport of the Lord's "valiant men in scarlet," when He shall indeed come as "Captain of the Lord's host" (Josh. v. 13—15; 2 Kings ii. 12), to fulfil Rev. xix. 11—21. It is to the coming anti-Christ that Nahum refers as the "Assyrians" (chap. iii. 18).

May the Lord help us to live "looking unto Jesus" (Heb. xii. 2), and "looking for Him" (Titus ii. 13) "that loved us, and washed us from our sins in His own blood" (Rev. i. 5); in whom we are "complete" (Col. ii. 10), "perfected for EVER" (Heb. x. 14). Wishing you and "all Israel" 1 Thess. v. 23; Jude 24, 25,

I am, yours in Israel's hope,

A RAILWAY MAN, C. S.

SPIRITUALISM.

NOTE.—We beg our readers' particular attention to the following letter, and to the danger it indicates. Satan, with his usual cunning, having failed in his first device to put down the Identity by the denial of its truth by good men such as Messrs. Cornall Clifford, Walker, and others, now changes his tactics, assumes the truth of our Hebrew origin, and, with bold effrontery, claims his lying impostures as the Holy Spirit's promised outpouring. Let us "resist the devil, and he will flee from us."—ED.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—I have been much struck with your statement published in the BANNER of the anticipated outpouring of the Spirit upon the people of this nation; and also with your remarks upon "Christianity and the Devil" in last week's number, wherein you allude to the personal efforts of the devil to thwart the Divine scheme, and to alienate, "if it were possible, even the very elect."

Now, the reason I trouble you is because I have unfortunately had some experience in what is called spiritualism, and the conclusion I have come to is that this is a form of the direct interference and appearance of Satan on the earth. Do you think I am right in my conclusion? And is it possible the Divine gift of the Spirit may come to us in such a form also? or will those outward manifestations be restricted to the evil powers, and the Spirit of God work upon our hearts and minds in a more truly spiritual manner, than by such means as spiritualists would teach us they are the recipients of it?

At one séance, some time ago, what purported to be a Jewish "control," spoke some very remarkable things through the mouth of the medium. These things gave rise to much reflection and comment, and some people may take those utterances as being from a spirit of truth, and from that may find confirmation of the Identity theory; but my experience is that these so-called spirit utterances are delusive. They are remarkable and extraordinary it is true; but I should like, if my view is correct, to put people on their guard. The devil is finding that the Identity is becoming established, and is artfully using it as a material to seduce souls by making them think the diabolical manifestations called spiritualism are in fact the advent of the Spirit we are awaiting. Pardon my crude suggestion, and if you agree with me, perhaps you will notice the subject some time in your BANNER. Yours faithfully,

Leeds, Feb. 20, 1879. ABNER COATES.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—May I be allowed to add a word of explanation in reference to my letter in the BANNER of Feb. 19, p. 83? The dates there given are named on the assumption that our Lord was born on the first of January of the year 1 of the commonly received reckoning. However many days, weeks, months, or years, that may differ from the actual fact, so far my dates, even if my opinions are well founded, will be out. I have not myself gone sufficiently into the question of the exact date of our Lord's birth to be able to speak decidedly on the matter. I do not, however, believe that our commonly received reckoning is more than a small fraction of a year out. However that may be, all I wished to do in the letter above referred to was to give my opinion, accompanied by the simple reasons on which it was founded, and without any pretensions to being a prophet, that the 142nd day of the 1879th year, and the 325th day of the 1882nd year of our Lord's human existence would be remarkable dates, and that the latter would terminate the 6,000th year from Adam's creation. I do not consider that in thus giving my opinion, however decidedly, that I am deserving of the sneering, unkind, and unchristian remarks of the editor of the Rock in his last issue. Of the two articles in that issue on Anglo-Israelism, which I have long looked for, one can only quote Parturiunt montes, nascetur ridiculus mus. I sent the editor a copy of Bishop Titcomb's "Post-Bag," but he has evidently never looked at it, though I begged him to do so prayerfully and thoughtfully. May the Lord open the eyes of the blind. Yours very truly,

C. W. HICKSON.

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements
(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O O payable at Ludgate-circus.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

DOUBLE NUMBERS DURING 1879.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT.

Owing to the increasing interest taken in the Identity movement, it is found necessary to occasionally enlarge our space to make room for the important papers constantly reaching the Editor. It has, therefore, been determined to issue Twelve Double Numbers during 1879, for which Twopence will be charged. The first of these series of Double Numbers was issued the first week in January, and one on each succeeding first week in the month during the year.

	£	s.	d.
Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free	0	7	6
Two copies (including Double Numbers) ...	0	12	4
Three " " " " ...	0	18	8
Four " " " " ...	1	6	2
Six " " " " ...	1	17	4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-Grand, London, to W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

"BANNER OF ISRAEL" FREE CIRCULATION FUND.

	£	s.	d.
M. A. E.	1	0	0
Mary M. James	0	5	0

The following are extracts from letters received, and will give some idea of the mode of distribution:

Highfields, Langham, Colchester, Essex.
March 5th, 1879.

DEAR SIR,—Many thanks for 100 BANNERS to hand this morning. As a lay preacher once a month at Stratford-St.-Mary's, Suffolk, I have brought the subject of our Identity with Lost Israel many times to the notice of my hearers. I am glad to have the BANNERS to distribute among them, as also among some labouring men we meet with on Friday evenings in Langham, to read the Bible and Identity works, and pray that our gracious God may bless us as a Nation, by pouring upon us all those rich blessings which He has promised (Jer. xxxi. 31: Heb. viii. 8). I hope and pray that the men and women of Israel will respond freely to your call for funds for the Free Circulation of the BANNER OF ISRAEL, that you may be able to sow it broadcast over the length and breadth of our land, that under the influence of the Divine Spirit, Britain's sons and daughters may awake to the knowledge of their high destiny and glorious privileges as the sons of the living God, the long-lost son, but now found; was dead, but alive again.

Allow me again to thank you for myself and daughters,
And remain, yours truly,
Mr R. F. Banks. J. F. G.

I venture to write and ask if you will kindly supply me with about 100. I am sorry that I am not in a position to pay for them, but seeing that a Free Circulation Fund has been opened, I shall only be too glad if I can render the cause any assistance by distributing to the best of my ability what you may send me.—J. F. W., Darnley, near Yorkshire. [150 copies sent]

FUNDS URGENTLY NEEDED to carry on this work. Communications to be addressed to the Secretary of the "Banner of Israel Free Circulation Fund," Mr. R. Fergusson Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-st., London, E.C., to whom all remittances for this object should also be made, but NOT to the Editor of the BANNER—Philo-Israel.

Now ready price 7s., post free 6d. extra.

THE SECOND VOLUME OF THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

This volume contains a large number of articles on our Identity with Lost Israel, by the best and most learned writers on the subject. Also many interesting papers on the Great Pyramid by Professor Piazzi Smyth, F.R.S.E., Astronomer-Royal for Scotland, Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A., Major H. A. Tracey, R.A., Charles Horner, Esq., and others. London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

Subscription 5s. a year, post paid. Payable in advance. Back numbers of the present volume can be supplied if desired.

OUR REST. A Periodical bearing on the Questions of Christ's Second Coming and the Preparation of the Church (Christ's Bride) for that event. In each number are discussed the Scientific and Religious Discoveries in the Great Pyramid of Egypt.

BOOKS, ETC.

Just out.

NOTES ON THE VISIONS OF ZECHARIAH VIEWED IN THE LIGHT OF THE IDENTITY OF THE TEN LOST TRIBES. By J. A. H. Price 1s. paper covers; 1s 6d. cloth.
W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick Lane, E.C.

Now ready.

THE GENTILES AND THE TIMES OF THE GENTILES. By J. LEYLAND FEILDEN, Author of "Links in the Chain of Evidence Connecting Israel and England," and "Israel's Jubilee; or, 1882." Price 6d., by post 7d.
W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick Lane, E.C.

SOME of PHILO-ISRAEL'S papers, as they have appeared in THE BANNER, will be separately published from time to time in the form of Letters, for distribution.

No. 1. "The Identity of the British with Lost Israel."
No. 2. "The Glory of God."
No. 3. "An Address to British Soldiers.' (Now ready.)
No. 4. "An Address to British Sailors." (Now ready.)

Others will follow. Price One and Sixpence per 100; less quantities in proportion: postage extra.

Apply to R. Banks, 5 Racquet-court, Fleet-street. Also all Booksellers and Publishers.

187th Thousand. Price 6d., post free 7d.

FORTY-SEVEN IDENTIFICATIONS OF THE BRITISH NATION WITH THE LOST HOUSE OF ISRAEL, founded upon 500 Scriptural Proofs. Shewing the Tribe of Dan to have settled in North Ireland; the Welsh to be a Tribe of Israel; the people of South Ireland to be the Canaanites; America to be Identical with the Nation of Manasseh; Queen Victoria to be Descended from David; and our Coronation Stone in Westminster Abbey to be Jacob's Stone.
London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

MISCELLANEOUS.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION. A course of FIVE LECTURES will be delivered in Devonport-street Chapel, Commercial-road, E. (opposite Arbour-square), on the following evenings:—

Tuesday, March 25th, by DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, Esq., J.P. Subject: "Britain Fifth and Last Monarchy."
Tuesday, April 1st, by the Rev. J. BILLINGTON. Subject: "Objections to Anglo-Israel Theory Considered."
Chair to be taken at 8 o'clock each evening.
ADMISSION FREE. COLLECTIONS.

THE TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL FOUND AND IDENTIFIED IN THE BRITISH NATION.
EDWARD HINE
(The well-known writer on this subject) will deliver his POPULAR LECTURE
In St. JAMES'S HALL, Regent-street, on March 25th, 1879.
Doors open at 7; Chair taken at 7.30.

DEAFNESS CURED, NOISES IN THE EARS, &c.
SPECIAL OFFER TO THE DEAF.

THE REV. E. J. SILVERTON having discovered that there are tens of thousands who are unable to obtain his 11s. Box of Aurial Remedy which has cured so many persons of Deafness and Noises in the Ears, &c., begs now to offer a 2s. 6d. Box of the Medicine, so as to put it within the reach of all. This arrangement is specially made to meet the deaf world. With every box of medicine will be presented the Rev. E. J. Silverton's "Health Advocate," containing valuable advice and information that everyone ought to know. Post Office Orders for 2s. 6d. to E. J. SILVERTON, Minister of Exeter Hall Church, Nottingham, or stamps, 2s. 8d.

WOOLS! WOOLS! WOOLS! Cheapest and Best. White and Black Berlin, Single and Double, 3s. 6d. per pound. Best quality Ice Wools, all Colours, 5½. per ounce ball. All other Wools at proportionate prices. Shetland, Andalusian, Fleecy, and Bonne Mere Wools. Welsh, Scotch, Peacock Victoria, and other Yarns. Crewel Filoselle Silk.
M. WIELLENS, Wholesale and Retail Wool Warehouse, 3, 5, and 6, QUEEN'S TERRACE, CAMDEN ROAD, LONDON, N.
Send for Price List forwarded post free.

WALTER KEAST'S Old Established BOOT AND SHOE WAREHOUSE, 102, KENNINGTON PARK ROAD, LONDON.

Gentlemen's Boots & Shoes for	Ladies' Boots and Shoes for
Winter and Summer, House and Garden, Walking, Riding, Rowing, Fishing, Shooting, &c.	Winter and Summer, Walking and Riding, House, Garden, or Dancing, &c., &c.

Children's Boots for School, Walking, Garden, or Sea-side. Slippers in great variety at moderate prices.
Schools and Public Institutions supplied at wholesale prices.
Note the address—WALTER KEAST, 102, Kennington-park-road, S.E.

BOOKS, ETC.

THE GREAT PYRAMID. NOW READY, PHILO-ISRAEL'S NEW WORK. 56 pages, Illustrated with Diagrams, price 4d., post free 5d.

AN ELEMENTARY DIGEST or SKETCH OF THE CHIEF FACTS and TEACHINGS of the GREAT PYRAMID of EGYPT; adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific. By PHILO-ISRAEL; together with Original Papers by the following leading Pyramidists, republished mostly from the BANNER OF ISRAEL (by kind permission of the proprietor)—viz., Professor Piazzi Smyth, the Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A., Charles Horner, Esq., and Major H. A. Tracey, R.A. Being a pamphlet by five authors (a Pyramid number).

Opinion of Mr. Charles Horner, regarding the above work, after perusal of the same:—"I think your design of the Pyramid pamphlet excellent. I know well that it is a book urgently needed, since, under God's blessing, it will, I feel convinced, convert many to Christ. Your part Philo-Israel's) I deem unexceptionable. It is both terse and understandable to the many, which is the great object you have had in view. I should like to see thousands circulated amongst our intelligent artisans, and hope God will raise some to do this."—C. HORNER. Dec. 12, 1878.
London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

Second edition, sixth thousand.
Fancy paper covers, 6d.; cloth, gilt lettered, flush, 1s.

THE HISTORY OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL: How They Were Lost, and How They Were Found. Told for the children. By PHILO-ISRAEL. Adapted for use by parents, Sunday School and other teachers, with questions on the chapters added.

For favourable notices of this work by Professor Piazzi Smyth, John T. Gott, Esq., and others, see handbills. W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

"The History of the House of Israel—told for the children—is a very valuable addition to our children's libraries. It gives a clear account of all the chief points of interest, in language suited to the comprehension of children, and ought to be in the hands of every mother and teacher who believes in our Identity with Israel. It supplies a want I have long felt as the mother of a large family."

ARE THE ENGLISH PEOPLE THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL? By PHILO-ISRAEL. Price 4d.
London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

OUR IDENTITY WITH THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. By PHILO-ISRAEL. Price 4d. Third Thousand (reprinted from the Clifton Chronicle).
London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

BRISTOL LEAFLETS ON THE IDENTIFICATION. 1 to 9; 1s. per 100.

Price 6d.; or with illustrative map, 8d.

BRITAIN (OR ISRAEL) THE FIFTH AND LAST, AND THE UNCONQUERABLE EMPIRE. By JOHN GILDER SHAW.

Price 3d.; post free, 3½d.

CHRONOLOGICAL CHART OF BRITISH VICTORIES OVER THE CONTINENTAL POWERS, ranging from the battle of Cressy (1346), to our last victory, the taking of Sebastopol, Sept. 8, 1855. Arranged by J. G. SHAW, of Leeds.

"We trust Mr. Shaw's labour in preparing this paper may be appreciated by the public and be largely sold."—Banner of Israel.

Shortly will be published, price 6d.

RESULTS OF ISRAEL'S OBEDIENCE. A review of the successive steps which have led to the present condition of Britain (or Israel), the Fifth and Last Empire.
London: Published by Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; and may be had of the Author, 20 Park-row, Leeds, and of all booksellers.

Now ready, price One penny, post free 1½d. One dozen copies, post free 1s. 100 copies 6s., post free 7s.

THE IDENTITY OF THE BRITISH NATION WITH THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. THE CLUE TO THE EASTERN QUESTION. By C. W. E.
London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row

Just Published, price 3d.

EPISCOPACY, NOT ESTABLISHMENT, THE BANE OF THE NATIONAL CHURCH.
By A LAY MEMBER OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND.
W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row; and the Protestant Tract Society, 17, Buckingham-st., Strand.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed:—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, 5, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, MARCH 26, 1879.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. III. No. 118. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, APRIL 2, 1879. [DOUBLE NUMBER, TWOPENCE.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
A Recent Battle of Israel.—Rorke's Drift	133
Time Indications of the Grand Gallery. By James Simpson.	134
The Stone Growing in Central and South Africa	136
"The Stars in Their Courses Fought Against Sisera."—Judges v. 20. By J. Thomson	137
A Name He Was Called By	138
Wallace	138
Israel's National Sins	139
The Sabbath Days	139
Forty Years and John Wilson	140
St. Paul on Our Identity with Israel. Part I.	140
American Commerce Compared with Israel's	141
French Testimony that Israel (the British), Keeping Sabbath, Is a Nation Blessed of God	142
"The Worm"—England—Encircles the Whole Earth.—Dan. vii. 27.	142
Is There Nothing in a Name?	143
The Earl of Beaconsfield and His Works.—Part II.	143
The Dutch Boers of the Transvaal Give Identity Evidence	144
Israel's Progress in Asiatic Turkey, as Seen by Gentile Eyes in Italy. By F.	144
Was Abraham a Jew? By Abraham Storey.—Part II.	145
Fresh Evidence of Spiritual Good Effected by the Belief in Our Identity	146
How the Kaffirs or Bantu Tribes of South Africa regard Israel	146
Mr. H. M. Stanley on Africa as Israel's Future Inheritance	146
"The Canaanites . . . . Shall be Scourges in Your Sides—Thorns in Your Eyes—and Snares Unto You."	147
Review	147
Correspondence	147

A RECENT BATTLE OF ISRAEL.—RORKE'S DRIFT.

How are we to account for the fact that the God of Israel, who has fought times out of number for His people, permitted them to be overpowered and slaughtered by hundreds at Insandula on January 22, 1879, and did not then deliver them as He has so often done before? This question has been repeatedly asked us, and it has also been present in our own minds not seldom of late. The answer which satisfies us is that our God has frequently sent disaster to our arms at the commencement of our military operations. He did so after the battle of Alma, during the fearful winter of 1854, when the British force was almost destroyed before Sebastopol in consequence of open neglect of the most ordinary precautions. God seems never to shield even Israel from the consequences of her own want of foresight and preparation. We could give numberless instances of that fact. So again in the matter of our late fearful disaster at Insandula. The enemy was known to be near; his mode of fighting was no secret; the vast numerical superiority of the savage foe was fully anticipated; the way in which that superiority might be more than met—namely, by entrenchments—was distinctly enunciated by the Commander-in-Chief himself in his written instructions to his captains; and yet what happened? Lord Chelmsford, knowing the enemy had been "felt" near him, left the small column with half its force withdrawn to accompany himself on a reconnaissance ten miles away that very morning; he left without seeing that his own rules as to entrenchments were enforced, or even begun to be carried out, after giving needful orders on the subject; all precautions by which he might by videttes have been placed en rapport, with his most precious convoy left only ten miles behind, seem to have been neglected; and when the sound of heavy firing and cannon was heard in the afternoon, unhappily he doubted the true evidence of his own ears, and was fatally deceived by the false testimony of the eyes. God worked no miracle to save a force thus left by what seems man's neglect to die! The officers in command with the doomed detachment neglected in their turn, it would appear, all the ordinary precautions which the rules of South African warfare demanded. The tents were never struck; the waggons were never "laagered" in the usual prescribed manner, to serve as an entrenchment; the few troops in hand were not concentrated to defend their priceless convoy of provisions, stores, and ammunition as ordered, but were sent to a distance from their charge to fight in isolated bodies, and were some of them never heard of again. The camp, of course, fell into the enemy's hands, and then? Why, then came the end! Without a miracle nothing would or could have saved our troops; and as they sowed, so alas they reaped! But even their deaths were glorious! The noble stand of those devoted men more than redeemed the terrible errors of judgment of their gallant noble leaders. It saved a colony—it struck terror into their foes! For the savage, but brave and fearless, enemies of that slender body found, to their terrible cost, that though they slew 1,500 British and Native troops, they did it at a cost of 3,000 of the flower of their young athletes—the best of their own soldiery. But what was the next episode? How was Insandula succeeded? By a noble feat of arms—where one young British hero, Lieut. John R. M. Chard of the Royal Engineers, by following the ordinary rules of Native wars in South Africa, was enabled, by God's help and by His blessing, to do a splendid deed, which stemmed the tide of Native success and sent the victorious murderous hordes of Insandula back to their own homes, reeling under a blow which deprived them of one-tenth of the attacking force in dead alone, and showed that, properly entrenched, a little band of only 100 resolute men could hold their own against 3,000 savage foes for over twelve hours of a dreadful night, when every moment must have passed to the brave heroes verily like a weary hour. The secret, then, of the late sad reverse we hold to be, that while Israel's errors must be paid for by Israel's punishment, the Lord does not allow even those errors to end in fatal destruction to His people, but oftentimes works out good from the evil, and brings to Israel's arms a final victory which compensates for and wipes out the previous disgrace.

Digitized by Google

We approach now the story of Rorke's Drift—a true tale of one of Israel's God-defended battles which will live while the language lives. How can we describe it better than in the hero's own simple words—Lieut. Chard's own soldierly report to his Commander-in-Chief? After describing how he had only that day been left in sole command at the Drift; how the news of the disaster reached him and his noble comrade, Lieut. Bromhead, of H.M. 24th Regiment, at 3.15 p.m.; how he struck his tents at once, "laagered" his wagons, improvised entrenchments with "mealie bags and wagons," biscuit boxes (!) and loopholed walls and barricades; he goes on to say—

At 4.20 p.m. the sound of firing was heard behind the hill to the South. The officer of Durnford's Horse returned, reporting that the enemy was now close upon us. His men, he told me, would not obey orders, but were going off towards Helpmakaar, and I myself saw them in retreat, numbering apparently about 100, going in that direction. About the same time Captain Stephenson's detachment of the Natal Native Contingent left us—as did that officer himself. I saw that our line of defence was too extended for the small number of men now left, and at once commenced an inner entrenchment of biscuit-boxes, out of which we had soon completed a wall two boxes high, when, about 4.20 p.m., five hundred or six hundred of the enemy came suddenly in sight around the hill to the South. They advanced at a run against our South wall, but were met by a well-sustained fire; yet, notwithstanding heavy loss, they continued to advance till within fifty yards of the wall, when their leading men encountered such a hot fire from our front, with a cross one from the Store, that they were checked. Taking advantage, however, of the cover afforded by the cook-house and the ovens, they kept up thence heavy musketry volleys; the greater number, however, without stopping at all, moved on towards the left round our hospital, and thence made a rush upon the North-west wall and our breastwork of mealie bags. After a short but desperate struggle those assailants were driven back with heavy loss into the bush around our works. The main body of the enemy close behind had meantime lined the ledge of rocks and filled some caves overlooking us at a distance of 100 yards to South, from whence they kept up a constant fire. Another body, advancing somewhat more to the left than those who first attacked us, occupied a garden in the hollow of the road and also the bush beyond it in great force, taking special advantage of the bush, which we had not had time to cut down. The enemy was thus able to advance close to our works, and in this part soon held one whole side of wall, while we on the other kept back a series of desperate assaults which were made on a line extending from the hospital all along the wall as far as the bush. But each attack was most splendidly met and repulsed by our men with the bayonet, Corporal Schiess, of the Natal Native Contingent, greatly distinguishing himself by conspicuous gallantry. The fire from the rock behind our post, though badly directed, took us completely in reverse, and was so heavy that we suffered very severely, and at six p.m were finally forced to retire behind the entrenchment of biscuit boxes. . . . . Darkness then came on. We were completely surrounded, and, after several furious attempts had been gallantly repulsed, we were eventually forced to retire to the middle and then to the inner wall of our kraal on the East of the position we first had. We were sustaining throughout all this a desultory fire, kept up all night, and several assaults were attempted, but always repulsed with vigour, the attacks continuing until after midnight, our men firing with the greatest coolness, not wasting a single shot. The light afforded by the burning hospital proved a great advantage. At four a.m. on the 23rd January firing ceased; and at daybreak the enemy were passing out of sight over the hill to the South-west. We then patrolled the ground, collecting arms from the dead bodies of the Zulus, and strengthened the position as much as possible. We were still removing thatch from the roof of the store, when about seven a.m. a large body of the enemy once more appeared upon the hills to the South-west. I now sent a friendly Kaffir, who had come in shortly before, with a note to the officer commanding at Helpmakaar, asking help. About eight a.m., however, the British Third Column appeared, and at sight of this the enemy, who had been gradually advancing towards us, commenced falling back as our troops approached.

I consider the enemy which attacked us to have numbered about 3,000; we killed about 350. Of the steadiness and gallant behaviour of my whole garrison I cannot speak too highly.

Such, then, is the account of this wondrous deed of arms. It had every ingredient of one of "Israel's battles," when the Lord, as He promised, "maintained their cause" (1 Kings viii. 45). Let the reader judge what tremendous issues depended on the Lord's help to Lieut. Chard at Rorke's Drift that fearful night. Had he and his handful of men been overpowered, what then? Then, no doubt, Lord Chelmsford and his footsore, starving, helpless troops must have fallen an easy prey to the victorious, exulting savages, in large force at Rorke's Drift and all along that road from the wretched bivouac at Insandula of the night before! Then, too, there would have been no hope nor help for Helpmakaar, Maritzburg, and the whole colony of Natal! Then the position of Pearson's column had been greatly imperilled, and the dreaded insurrection of all the native races throughout the whole of South Africa had been an accomplished fact. But the Lord remembered mercy in the midst of "measured" punishment! He turned in compassion towards His people, and "maintained their cause." The gallant stand of Chard and Bromhead—both destined (who can doubt?) for the highest honours Great Britain's grateful Queen can bestow for such noble deeds—saved Lord Chelmsford from a frightful death, his small force from utter destruction, and the whole of the colonies from massacre, murder, rapine, and possibly annihilation.

We thank God then for "Rorke's Drift," and the faithfulness of our God towards His people Israel. Let us see, reader, in those signal punishments and mercies to our race, the Lord's hand guiding Israel towards the accomplishment of His will; being sure that disaster and victory are alike His mode of working out His wise purposes, and that even now we have ample reason to "praise the Lord," while we also turn in penitence to Him and say—"O Lord, save Thy people, the remnant of Israel!"

TIME INDICATIONS OF THE GRAND GALLERY.

(Continued from page 120.)

PART II.

HAVING found that the Great Pyramid fixes for us, with exactness, the extreme length of the grand gallery—its true length, we may suppose (though this is not quite certain), for chronological purposes—the use we propose to make of this knowledge, is not to endeavour to interpret—a difficult task—what shall take place at its rapidly approaching end. Much less do we venture on the impossible and unlawful task of attempting to fix a date for the arrival of the King—the revelation of the Lord from heaven. That is an event to which all Christians, whether of the stock of Israel or of the Gentile graft, should be ever looking forward with intelligent and loving expectation; knowing from the multiplied signs around that it cannot now be far distant, and may be "even at the doors." "But of that day, and that hour, knoweth no man," nor shall know till it arrive; for "as a thief," and "as a snare," "shall it come on all them that dwell on the face of the whole earth." Therefore, though this gallery, now so near a close, may well warn us to "be ready" for that great day, it cannot reveal to us at what precise time it shall come. Yet it may throw much light upon the general subject of the times and seasons which it has pleased God to appoint for the accomplishment of His grand and gracious purposes towards our fallen race, and particularly towards the seed of Abraham. And this is an inquiry both legitimate and commendable, and one which may help us the better to apprehend the depth of the riches both of His power and wisdom.

We have seen that in the 1881·6 inches, or years, of the gallery, the 33·6 inches or years of our Lord's humiliation are contained exactly 56 (7 × 8) times. Why did we fix upon 33·6 years for the latter period? In the first place, as may appear from what follows, the Nativity probably took place not in winter, as the Church Calendar is held to represent, but about the time of the autumn equinox; and it is certain the crucifixion took place at the season of the full moon next following the spring equinox. Hence, between these dates, there is an interval of six, or it may be seven, months falling to be added to the generally received and well-authenticated term of 33 whole years; bringing the entire period up to about 33 years and seven months, or 33·6. (We shall afterwards see that this interval probably embraces the 40 days after the resurrection.) Secondly, 33·6 years is a soli-lunar-cycle, in which the annual deficiency between 12 lunar months and 1 solar tropical year ($10\frac{7}{8}$ days nearly) accumulates to a whole year ($10\frac{7}{8} \times 33{\cdot}6 = 365{\cdot}4$ days). And, in the third place, 33·6 years is in complete harmony and continuity with the various periods of years indicated in the prophetic Scriptures; and, we may add, with the principal periods of Bible history, so far as these are accurately known. Upon the cyclical character of human (especially sacred) history, and the astronomical as well as septiform and Sabbatic structure of its cycles, Mr. Guinness has some instructive chapters.* Two of his important conclusions are as follows:—First, that human history, antecedent to the Millennium, is comprehended in a great week, of which each day is 840 years, plus an additional 120 years, making in all 6000 years; or, since each day of 840 years contains 7 times 120 years, the whole may be regarded as a Pentecostal or jubilee period of 7×7 days of 120 years, plus 1 day of 120 years, = 6000 as before. Leaving out this last complemental 120 years, the period is 5880 years; and that again is embraced in three great weeks of 2520 years each (the "seven times" of Leviticus xxvi. and Daniel iv.). These weeks, Mr. Guinness considers, overlap each other to the extent of one-third or 840 years; so that the total is not nine, but only seven, times 840. These three great weeks, comprising the Patriarchal age, the "Jewish" dispensation, and the times of the Gentiles, were accompanied by three distinct stages of the revelation of God's character to man. Nature, the Law, and the Gospel reign successively in three great periods of probation which are given to man to try him before the Lord Himself comes, in the person of His Son, to execute judgment and to reign.

Digitized by Google

2. Beyond and including these 6000 years a still larger period of 12,096 years is to be traced—an "Immanuel year," consisting of 360 Immanuel days of 33·6 natural years. Into the first seven months of this enormous period human history fits, as did the sacred feasts of Israel, which typified it, into the first seven months of their sacred year. As a month of the Immanuel year is 1008 years, 7 months will be 7056 years; which thus measures the interval from Adam down to the close of the Millennium.

The above brief reference to Mr. Guinness' views is merely for the purpose of showing that between the 33·6 years which have been assigned to the life of Christ on earth, and the prophetic times, there is a distinct analogy and connection; they belong to the same universal scheme of Sabbatic chronology which governs every operation of nature, from the development of the minutest insect or lowliest plant to the mighty secular revolutions of suns and systems.

Before passing from this it may be added that each period of 7 times above alluded to commences, not at the close of the preceding one, but after two-thirds of it has run its course. Two-thirds of 7 times = 1680 years, and 1680 years = 50 Immanuel days; therefore a jubilee period. According to the author we have quoted (who accepts the Hebrew numbers as against the Septuagint, or the Samaritan, from Adam to Abraham) this is about the interval from the creation to the flood. And it is worthy of note that the 1656 years, which Genesis v. yields for this interval, if tropical years, are equal, within six weeks, to 1680 prophetic years of 360 days.

Let us now inquire from what date, according to our era and calendar, the 1881·6 years of the gallery and the 33·6 years of the life of Christ simultaneously commence; in other words, What is the true date of our Saviour's birth? Upon this date depends the chronology, not of the grand gallery alone, but also of the other dispensational passages both preceding and following it.

The familiar calendar date of 25th December appears, from the researches of the Rev. W. B. Galloway, in Egypt's Record of Time, to have a true foundation in ancient tradition; but to be connected rather with the event of the Annunciation, than with that of the Nativity nine months later.* The latter event this author places in the night between September 29 and 30, new style, in the year B.C. 1; a variety of circumstances conspiring to render this conclusion probably correct, at least within one day. Some of these are interesting, as that September 29 is the traditional feast of Saint Michael and All Angels (Luke ii. 13), and that September 30 in this year was the day of full moon and the first day (Tisri 15) of the Jewish feast of Tabernacles; realising the Scripture, "The Word was made flesh, and dwelt (pitched His tabernacle) among us." As the difference between the actual September 29—30 of the Julian-Augustan calendar current in B.C. 1, and the same date new style, is only one day,† it seems preferable to adopt the former, and to assume for the present that the nativity of our Lord took place about midnight between Wednesday and Thursday, September 29 and 30, in the then existing Roman calendar (= September 28 and 29, new style) in the year immediately preceding our common era. Reckoning back by average lunations from the full moon of September 30, 1879, it would appear that full moon occurred on the same day, September 30, B.C. 1, about 2.20 p.m., mean time at Jerusalem; and this day may hence have coincided with Tisri 15 in that year, as above supposed. A substantial confirmation of this date is afforded by the fact that from December 25, B.C. 2, to September 30, B.C. 1, inclusive, there elapsed exactly 40 weeks;‡ showing that, as Mr Galloway believes, the traditional date of "Christmas" is really that of the Incarnation, the absolute beginning of our Lord's human existence. It may be added that the new moon of December B.C. 2 fell, at Jerusalem, on the 24th day, at about 2h. 28m. morning—i.e., on the day after the winter solstice.

From midnight of September 29—30, B.C. 1, to May 8, A.D. 34, at 3.25 a.m., is an interval of 33·6 tropical years (see note ante). This year 34 is that in which Sir Isaac Newton preferred to place the events of the Passion. Now the vernal

* "Approaching End of the Age," Sections 2 and 3 of Part IV.

* On this point Mr. Galloway quotes an interesting passage from Clement of Alexandria, which is somewhat as follows:—"There are those among the Gnostics who have taken superfluous pains to set the month and day of Christ's incarnation (γενεσις, generation), which, they say, took place on 25th Pachons in the 28th year of Augustus, and that John came preaching in the 15th year of Tiberius, on the 15th day of the month Tubi." The names of the two Egyptian months, Pachons and Tubi, have, Mr. Galloway remarks, been evidently transposed, for in A.D. 87 (77?) 25th Tubi = 25th December, and 15th Pachons = 15th April. This very ancient tradition or computation places the incarnation—i.e., the Annunciation, not the Nativity—on 25th December of the Roman calendar, in the 28th year after Augustus' entry into Alexandria, 29th August, B.C. 29. This 28th year therefore includes the 25th December, B.C. 2, which we shall find is the probable date of the Annunciation. As to the date of John Baptist's ministry, the 15th year of Tiberius began on 19th (or 29th) August, A.D. 28, and in April of that 15th year John would have just entered his 30th year. Jesus may have been baptized at the same age in the autumn following—i.e., A.D. 29, or in the spring of A.D. 30; and the 3½ years of His public ministry may date from His appearance in the synagogue of Nazareth in September, A.D. 30.

† From B.C. 45, when the Julian reformation took effect, to B.C. 9 inclusive, 13 leap years were erroneously observed instead of 10. Augustus rectified this error by making the succeeding 12 years consist of 365 days each. Thus all actual dates between B.C. 42 and A.D. 5, differ by either one or two days from "Old Style," which assumes the Julian reformation to have been carried out in its integrity.

‡ See "Approaching End of the Age," page 273.

Digitized by Google

full moon of A.D. 34 fell on Wednesday, March 24, about 3.17 a.m. at Jerusalem, and the Passover Feast-day (Nisan 15) should have coincided therewith. But if we suppose the Jews, after the return from Babylon cir. B.C. 536, to have used a soli-lunar-cycle of 19 years, and a year equal to the Julian one of 365¼ days, such a method would have involved an error of one whole day in 304 years, with the effect of throwing the beginning of the Jewish year forward by either one or two days (according to the time of day of the vernal new moon) in the interval to the date of the Crucifixion. Hence there is reason to believe that in A.D. 34, the 15th Nisan, the Feast of the Passover, fell on Friday, March 26; on which day, therefore, our Lord was crucified. From the morning of Sunday, March 28, the day of the resurrection, 40 days, or the 40th day, brings us to Thursday, May 6, as the day of Ascension, differing by only two days from the date above arrived at. JAMES SIMPSON.

Edinburgh, March 8, 1879.

(To be continued.)

THE STONE GROWING IN CENTRAL AND SOUTH AFRICA.

WE ask our readers to contemplate the two following "possibilities" pointing not indistinctly to the growth of the great British Empire in the Continent of Africa, as foretold by events now in actual progress there. The first extract is from the Bristol Times and Mirror of March 14, 1879, and is to the following effect:—

Of the various expeditions that are trying to throw the rays of civilisation across the Dark Continent, the French one appears so far to have been the most successful. The Abbé Debaize, who is in charge of it, has written home to describe the entry of his caravan into the capital of Unyanyembe, a town rejoicing in the euphonious name of Kouikourou. Thousands of negroes gathered around them as they entered with flags flying and music playing, and gave them the most enthusiastic reception. The Sultan and the Governor went out to receive them at the entrance of the capital, and conducted them to the vast building used by Cameron when he passed through. The other expeditions—Belgian and Italian—do not appear to get on so well; and as to ourselves, wherever these expeditions go, they find us there before them. "The English," we are told, occupy Mpuapona—a place unknown to the great majority of the people, but described as a strategical position of the first order, for all the routes which lead to Unyanuezi pass by it. The Abbé adds that the English have founded another station in the Ukereone, a third in the Uganda, and a fourth at Ujiji. The power of the Arabs in these parts is decreasing daily. The ivory trade no longer satisfies their wants, and, as the slave trade is prohibited, they will soon be forced to leave the colonies which they have founded in the interior of Africa; and the English will take their place. One would think, after reading of these numerous colonies of Englishmen, that a quiet emigration of our country people had been going on to Central Africa since the Livingstone and Stanley expeditions. But the Abbé adds of the English colony at Mpuapona that "a clergyman, a mason, and a carpenter compose all the personnel of the station," and after this there will be a general agreement with the Abbé that "they are eminently practical men," seeing that it is not six months that they have been there, and already four handsome stone houses have been built. The Daily News is afraid that a couple of English regiments are going to annex Upper Burmah, a country perhaps as big as France; but here three Englishmen have taken possession of a strategical position which gives them control over a big slice of the African Continent. As the Abbé says, the English are "eminently practical men."

The writer of the above points out that the three British subjects have possessed themselves of a Central African GATE, being a "strategical position which gives them control over a big slice of the African Continent." We do not wish for a better description of a "Gate," and we beg our opponents to remark that to Israel the new Gate is granted, not to the French explorers, not to the Belgians, not to the Italians. These same islanders have further got possession of three other stations, and are, like Jacob, "supplanting" the Arabs in their ivory trade. When the Arabs give up, the writer observes, "the English will take their place," which is as neat a way of saying they will act the part of "Jacob the supplanter" as we have yet observed.

Our next quotation is from a letter from the Times of March 15, 1879, signed "One who Lived Several Years in Zululand." Speaking of the Portuguese possession, Delagoa Bay, North of the Transvaal, and urging the necessity of our purchasing it at once from the Portuguese, he said:—

It is a matter that we must take up sooner or later, and the sooner the better. We have already suffered enough from our neglect in not laying a cable long since to our South African Colonies, and are now repenting—when it is too late—that we would not listen to Lord Carnarvon's advice several years ago. Let us endeavour to be beforehand with this difficulty, for difficulty it will be, and come it must before long. Zululand must be annexed; upon that point we are now, I suppose, all agreed. We shall then be in this position:—We shall possess in Zululand a country considerably larger than England, and the Transvaal behind it considerably larger than France, with no other port through which to pass all our exports and imports than Durban. Port Natal, or Durban, lies about 500 miles from the Northern portions of the Transvaal and about 300 from the Northern districts of Zululand. But actual distance is by no means the gravest impossibility in this question. Through half the year—during the dry season—dwellers in the Transvaal are practically cut off from Durban by lack of grass for horses and cattle upon the high Veldt, while in Zululand it is not too much to say that dozens of unbridged and exceedingly dangerous rivers make the journey during the rainy season almost impracticable.

Here our colonist points out what is an exceedingly probable termination of the present Zulu troubles—namely, the annexation of Zululand to the already immense African Empire of Israel, and the acquisition of a first-class Gate. In acquiring this territory, it will be, he tells us, a country much larger than England. Seeing that the Transvaal is as large as France, and situated beyond Zululand, our friend asks in despair by what Gate the imports and exports of the Transvaal are to be sent; and how, while the weak hand of Portugal grasps the only seaport—Delagoa Bay, the British colonists are to put down the enormous trade in guns and ammunition which is now keeping our countrymen in terror, and has led to the uprising of Cetywayo against our power? On this point the writer says:—

No money could now be better or more wisely spent than in the purchase of Delagoa Bay, and this we shall find to our cost one day if we allow this most important step to be neglected any longer. Delagoa Bay, it must be remembered, is the harbour through which almost all the guns and ammunition now to be found in Zululand, Amaswaziland, and Amatongaland, have passed. Northwards from Delagoa Bay, we still have hundreds of thousands of natives stretching up tribe by tribe to the Zambesi, who love nothing, not even their wives, so much as guns. However well intentioned the Portuguese Government may be towards us, it is incapable of suppressing this trade, which has been of late years, and still is, so enormously on the increase. If we are to hold South-east Africa firmly and peaceably, we must also hold the KEY of South-east Africa, and that KEY is Delagoa Bay.

Here we have the demand made for a Gate or key for one of the last of British acquisitions, to enable her to cope with her numerous, powerful, but savage enemies, and the only remedy proposed is the purchase of Delagoa Bay—a spot absolutely without value to the Portuguese, which they acquired from us by Marshal MacMahon's adverse award in arbitration, but which has become to-day indispensable to the British South African Empire as the only port available for the Transvaal and Zululand from Durban to Aden. Verily these two "possibilities" are extremely like "probabilities," and we can see thus faintly foreshadowed for us how Israel is yet to acquire the preponderance in North, Central, and South Africa. The intelligent reader will observe that in all three cases the Gates form a conspicuous feature in the matter, and that by the Gates Israel's power is to be enlarged, in Central as well as in South Africa, and by the operation of Delagoa Bay (a Gate), consolidated.

Digitized by Google

"THE STARS IN THEIR COURSES FOUGHT AGAINST SISERA."—JUDGES v. 20.

BY J. THOMSON.

IN this bold poetic language does Deborah record in her song how the elements in her time once fought against the enemies of ancient Israel. It is surprising what vague ideas many people have of what they read in the Bible. Few readers of the above passage, if asked, would at first sight be able to give an intelligent explanation thereof; though none but the most ignorant would for a moment imagine that the stars literally fought with the hosts of Sisera. But the passage will be quite clear if we remember the highly poetic character of the whole chapter in which it is found, and the ideas entertained by the ancients of the (supposed) influence of the stars or planets—i.e., wanderers, in mundane matters. "'The stars in their courses,' according to the order and direction of Him who is the great Lord of their hosts," says good Matthew Henry, favouring this view, "'fought against Sisera' by their malignant influences, or by causing the storms of hail and thunder, which contributed so much to the rout of Sisera's army. . . . Some way or other, the heavenly bodies, not arrested, as when the sun stood still at Joshua's word, but going on in their courses, fought against Sisera. . . . Perhaps the flashes of lightning by which the stars fought, was that which frightened the horses, so that they pranced until their very hoofs were broken (v. 22), and probably overturned the chariots of iron which they drew, or turned them back upon their owners" (Matt. Henry's Com. on Jud. v. 20). But we need not imagine that anything more is intended by the poet, than that the weather was unfavourable to Sisera, who attacked Israel, and the result was to Israel's advantage in aiding in his overthrow. One agent in effecting this was a flood in the brook Kishon (v. 21), an unexpected, and perhaps unseasonable flood, in a stream which was usually inconsiderable, that "swept away the host of Sisera in attempting to force a passage" (see Kitto). Some may object to this view, that it dispenses with miraculous agency. To this we would reply, first, that the word "miracle" is not in the chapter, and why should we suppose one where none is mentioned? Then, again, much will depend upon our ideas of what constitutes a miracle. What we ignorantly term the "laws of nature" are really the uniform way in which men have learnt from observation that God is constantly working. A miracle, therefore, is no infringement, though it may be a suspension, or accelerating of those laws, or even only the slightest modification thereof, so far as our observation goes. Thus, there may be miracles constantly going on around us, but we, from our obtuseness, or blind unbelief, may not be able to see them. When Deborah, therefore, said in her song that "The stars in their courses fought against Sisera," we see that she thus acknowledged the hand of God, who rules among their hosts; though at the same time we admit that there is also an apparent reference to, but not necessarily approval of, the astrological notions of the age. Thus she sang:—

"Praise ye the Lord for the avenging of Israel,
When the people willingly offered themselves.
Hear, O ye kings;
Give ear, O ye princes;
I, even I, will sing unto the Lord;
I will sing praise to the Lord God of Israel.
* * * * * * * *
My heart is toward the governors of Israel,
That offered themselves willingly among the people.
Bless ye the Lord."—(verses 2, 3, and 9).

Often since Deborah's days has God, in like manner, fought for His people, as may be seen throughout the historical books of the Old Testament; while it is also the frequent theme of the Psalmist, who, recording the wonders of God's providence, exclaims:—

"Oh that men would praise the Lord for His goodness,
And for His wonderful works to the children of men!
For He hath broken the gates of brass,
And cut the bars of iron in sunder."
(Psa. cvii.).

And if we will only look back upon the history of Britain, we, too, shall find many instances of providential deliverance from imminent danger. Notably is this seen in the ever-memorable instance of the so-called "Invincible" Spanish Armada, which was intended to invade and subjugate this country to the yoke of a bigoted foreign Power, but which encountered the storms of the God of heaven, and perished miserably.

In our own times, too, if we will but open our eyes, and remember that a sparrow falleth not to the ground without our Father, we cannot fail to see the hand of God in the wonderful experience of our British Israel. Quite recently, we have all been astonished at the surprising progress of the British army in Afghanistan. But not the least remarkable feature of that campaign is the favourable weather our troops have met. On this point we may quote the words of the special correspondent of the Daily Telegraph of Feb. 4th. Writing on the 25th December last, from Quetta, of the march towards that place, the correspondent said:—

"At other times of the year, or even at this, had not nature fought for us in the way she has done, the road would have been evil, for a single fall of rain suffices to flood the Lehri ravine, or nullah, and from it a score of water-courses wander across the country, brawling out a brief existence. But this year has been exceptional altogether, and in favour of the British army. Just as at Peshawur, the customary rains held off, allowing us a free pass across the Jamrood plain and up the Khyber Pass; just as at Thal, the Khurum river withheld its wonted flood; so here, neither rain nor snow has fallen to harass our advance. The Indus, it is true, rose in flood, and deluged half a province; but that was one mishap only, and cannot be cited against the wondrous good luck in weather we have enjoyed."

Such is the testimony of a "blind witness," who can see nothing but "wondrous good luck" in all that he notes. But we read nothing about "luck" in the Bible. There, all is traced up to God; and, indeed, correctly speaking, there are no such things as we term "accidents" in the universe, but everything falls out as He fore-ordained it, who saw the end from the beginning.

The London Standard of the same date (Feb. 4th) contained a paragraph from Ibrahim Zail to this effect:—"Raining here; snow at Peiwar and Khurum. Winter appears to be coming at last; but it is likely to last but a short time." Was there nothing more than an "accident"—a "remarkable coincidence"—here, that the same day, Feb. 4th, 1879, which saw a severe frost that had for three months bound in its icy chains nearly the whole of Britain, witnessed also the beginning of winter in Afghanistan? The campaign commenced on the 21st of November, so that for more than two months the weather had evidently "fought" on the side of the British. It is terrible to think of what might have been the sufferings of our valiant soldiers had they met with such weather as we have had the past three months. But it has been ordered differently, in that the winter, being generally much severer in Afghanistan than in this country, and a mild winter could not have been calculated on last November—indeed, only a month's open weather was then looked for—the severity has been exchanged with us. In this respect alone, not to mention others, we are nationally placed under a deep debt of gratitude and thankfulness to Almighty God, the abundant Bestower of all good, for His many great mercies unto us.

"If it had not been the Lord who was on our side,
Now may Israel say:
If it had not been the Lord who was on our side,
When men rose up against us:

Digitized by Google

Then they had swallowed us up quick,
When their wrath was kindled against us.
Then the waters had overwhelmed us,
The stream had gone over our soul:
Then the proud waters had gone over our soul.
Blessed be the Lord,
Who hath not given us a prey to their teeth.
* * * * * * *
Our help is in the name of the Lord,
Who made heaven and earth."
(Psa. cxxiv.).

"Except the Lord build the house,
They labour in vain that build it;
Except the Lord keep the city,
The watchman waketh but in vain."
(Psa. cxxvii. 1).

"Behold He that keepeth Israel shall neither slumber nor sleep."
(Psa. cxxi. 4).

"Some trust in chariots, and some in horses:
But we will remember the name of the Lord our God."
(Psa. xx. 7).

Ashton-on-Lyne, Feb. 22nd, 1879.

A NAME HE WAS CALLED BY.

A CORRESPONDENT of a contemporary periodical lately asked "why the term 'Son of Man' is used by our Lord Himself in the Gospels, in relation to His second coming; and 'Lord,' 'Christ,' 'Lord Jesus,' 'Lord Jesus Christ,' 'Chief Shepherd,' etc., in the Epistles?" We presume that one answer to be given is, that while the apostles, filled with a sense of the greatness of the Lord Jesus, speak of Him by His titles of dignity, He Himself wished to impress on His followers that as He took His manhood into heaven, so He would return to earth as very man—the "Son of Man."

But if this shows, as we think it does, the importance to be attached to the name and title given, or assumed by God in the New Testament, we hold that no less significance can be ascribed to the terms applied to the Ruler and Creator of all things to Himself in the Old Testament. In that portion of the Bible we find Him continually called the "God of Israel," as if to show the special link that bound Him and His chosen people together. He is God, the King of all the earth (Psa. xlvii. 7), and He "reigneth over the heathen" (v. 8); nevertheless we do not find that God calls Himself the God of the heathen, nor selecting any particular Gentile nation does He call Himself the God of Edom, or of Ishmael, etc., but He does entitle Himself the God of Israel (Isa. xlv. 3, xlviii. 1).

All things were created by Him, and are under His control and government, yet Joshua, addressing the people (Josh. xxiv. 2) begins, "Thus saith the Lord God of Israel," not the Lord God of all the world; and in Ezra vii. we find Artaxerxes, when speaking unto this Jewish leader, calls God "Thy God" (v. 14), "The God of Israel whose habitation is in Jerusalem" (v. 15), "their God" (v. 16), "your God" (v. 17, 18); and Ezra (viii. 17) calls Him "our God," as if possessing a special claim on Him, not shared in by those amongst whom he and the Jews had been held captive.

This term, God of Israel, can scarcely be supposed to mean only that He was their God, in the sense of their being the only people who worshipped Him, without addition of false gods, for we know that an idol was in very early days after their release from Egyptian bondage adored by rebellious Israel, and that after Israel's separation from Judah, the former plunged deeply into the sin of idolatry, instead of worshipping only Him of whom the sons of Levi cried with a loud voice (Neh. ix. 6), "Thou, even Thou, art Lord alone."

Neither can God be styled the "God of Israel" simply because none but Israel acknowledged Him; for in Ezra vii. 21, we find Artaxerxes calling Him the God of heaven; and in Dan. ii. 47, Nebuchadnezzar declares that Daniel's God "is a God of gods," etc., and in iii. 26, the same king calls Him the "Most High God," and proclaims His supereminent power in v. 29. In Isa. xliv. 8, xlvi. 9, God speaks of His solitary pre-eminence, and His unshared glory [let none forget that God the Father and God the Son are one]: yet He assumes, or permits, again and again, the title of God of Israel. Can we need any greater proofs of the surpassing love and tenderness with which He, our Lord, looks upon His people Israel than by His thus glorifying them, and identifying Himself with them by name, in spite of their ingratitude, endless rebellions, and other fearful sins.

We do not know that the Ishmaelites or Edomites became idolaters, setting up images, stocks and stones, and putting them on an equality, or placing them above the King of kings, and Lord of lords. Indeed, their ready acceptance of Mahommedanism, with its abhorrence of idols, and acknowledgment of the one God, would seem to strengthen the belief of their having been purer in this matter than backsliding Israel. Nevertheless, as we observed before, God does not call Himself the God of Ishmael or of Edom, but the God of Israel. Yet, in spite of this, there are many who think that Israel became God-abandoned, was turned adrift, deprived of the fulfilment of all the God-given promises to it, and doomed to sink into utter insignificance, and barbarism! They believe that the cord that bound the God of Israel to His people grew slacker and slacker, till at last the strands parted asunder for ever, with a scarcely noticeable severance, and that not a trace of the old tie remained, save its past history, in the pages of the Old Testament. Rather do we believe that the snapping of such a cord, however loosely it hung round an ungrateful and rebellious people, would have shaken the foundations of the earth, and caused the very heavens to tremble. What a low, wretched, miserable idea must those who hold the first have of the unwearied, boundless love of the King of heaven! Surely our hearts should leap for joy at believing we are Israel, that He called Himself the God of Israel, setting thus His seal on that close union that bound Him to His elect, and His elect to Him: and that though His people were cast off for a time, in fulfilment of His threats, they are to hear the overpoweringly glorious words, "Ye are the sons of the living God."

Far from us is the thought of any being in the wide world, wherever or whoever they may be, coming to the great God, in the name of the Lord Jesus, and not being welcomed, as sons, by a loving, gracious, forgiving Father; but we believe in the deep significance of the name He honoured us by adopting, and when we find the title of God of Israel oft repeated, we feel God would surely thereby point with noticeable emphasis to an exceptional tie between Himself and Israel: and that none should dare to assert that such tie, existing once, would be broken for ever, or that all Christians of every nation, when obtaining salvation through faith in Christ Jesus, thereby become "the Israel of God," or as princes that have power with God and with men (Gen. xxxii. 28). L. P.

Feb. 20, 1879.

WALLACE.

WE regret to find that the Rev. A. B. Grimaldi's remarks on Wallace, published at page 89 of the BANNER, No. 113, in his article on the "Acquisition of Jacob's Stone," have given great umbrage to some of our friends in Scotland. Without ourselves hazarding any opinion on the justice or otherwise of Mr. Grimaldi's appreciation of a long past historic character, we think some latitude must be allowed to a valued writer in expressing his views on such a subject as that treated in the paper in question. Mr. Grimaldi's opinion of Wallace is unfavourable. He may be right or wrong in that. We in no way uphold his ideas on that collateral issue; and while we always endeavour, and shall in future continue so to do, to avoid giving needless offence by what appears in this journal, we cannot always avoid it, and in this case sincerely regret that our Scots friends are some of them much pained that Wallace, in Mr. Grimaldi's regard, is not the spotless hero they have been accustomed to regard him. We are quite unable to open our columns to an angry controversy as to his merits.

Digitized by Google

ISRAEL'S NATIONAL SINS.

OUR attention lately has been especially called to the question how far our late disasters in Zululand may be attributed to the Lord's controversy with Israel for her national sins? Of these last there are enough, God knows, to sink us down to the lowest hell! Our friends in some quarters, seeing these things, and noticing our late fearful disasters in the Cape Colonies, have not been slow to remind us that there is a close connection between them as cause and effect. On hearing of the late catastrophe, our readers noticed that we ourselves wrote the words that "The Lord's controversy with Israel is very severe, and that He demanded national sorrow for past sins." On further consideration we see reason to re-state our views. God forbid that we should deprecate national humiliation for national sins. Such humiliation must be pleasing to God, who sees in us, we may depend on it, ten thousand sins and offences we, in our blindness, cannot discern! All we doubt is this, whether the late visitations were sent us, as some assert, in anger and rebuke? We rather believe, taking our light from God's Word and from His oath to Israel, that He is not now wroth with us, nor means to rebuke us; but that what He has lately done to us has been done in love. If not, can we account for the fact that while there have been (apparently) meted out to us anger and rebuke in Zululand, yet, in Afghanistan, and more recently even in Zululand itself, the same God has treated us —the same people—with distinguished mercy and extreme lovingkindness? We believe that God's controversy with us is connected only with the Cape; and that there, what He wills, and what we, and our fellow-subjects in the South African Colonies, have as yet nationally refused to do, is the Confederation of the latter. Nothing but this late disaster would have forced our Government to despatch eight thousand fresh troops to that distant land, at a vast expense and enormous risk. Having sent them, let our readers ask themselves this question, Will our nation here, ever after consent to do this thing again? We can answer for it, "No!" Henceforth the Cape Colonies must, by Confederation, consolidate into a united nation, and so, by union and by the power thus conferred, easily disarm and keep down the native races there, as they have been kept down in New Zealand and elsewhere by the same means.

To those who, on religious grounds, look for an explanation of this last reverse by reference to "Israel's National Sins," we would ask that God's promises to His chosen people should be referred to. Let such read Isaiah liv. 9—a passage which forms part of a message from God to Israel of the Ten Tribes, the desolate wife of youth, forsaken and grieved in spirit, destined to be unconquerable in war, the favoured of God, the inheritor of the Gentiles' possessions, but she whose righteousness is of the LORD! To her God said, and the passage relates to our days, and not to the times of the affliction, now past and gone: "In a little wrath I hid My face from thee for a moment; but with everlasting kindness will I have mercy on thee, saith the LORD, thy Redeemer. For this is as the waters of Noah unto Me; for as I have sworn that the waters of Noah should no more go over the earth, so have I sworn that I would not be wroth with thee, nor rebuke thee."

Here, then, is an unqualified, unconditional promise—a promise confirmed by an oath of their Almighty Jehovah to the House of Israel! That oath cannot in any way be set aside or broken! If the waters of Noah cannot ever drown and destroy this earth again, because GOD hath sworn that that shall never come to pass, just for the same reason we may certainly conclude, this people being Israel, that God never has since Israel's gathering after the Reformation (and is not now) "wroth" with us, and has not once "rebuked" us. "Punished" us and "corrected" us, He has—in measure; but never in anger, nor as a "rebuke." It has always been, and always will be, in deep, unutterable, unfathomable LOVE; love which knows no abating, which will never "leave us, and never, no never, never forsake us" (Deut. xxxi. 6; Heb. xiii. 5). Away, then, with the fears which look on these strokes as God's severe and angry frowns; as His wroth for Israel's sins, for Ritualism, and Romanism, and the rest, which must be repented of at once, or Divine justice will again sweep His people from their present position of national grandeur, and reduce them again to "outcast" misery! Nothing of this sort can possibly happen, for GOD'S solemn oath just quoted, forbids it! What then? Is God pleased to see us wayward, sinful, idolatrous, drunken, evil, vile? God forbid! He means to remedy this mischief Himself, but not now by punishment; that has been tried long enough, and—failed! We are no better for it! But by giving us of His own most Holy Spirit; by granting us the New Covenant especially promised us in Jer. xxxi. 33, when "we shall ALL know Him, from the least of us, to the greatest of us," "and our sins and our iniquities He will remember no more!" Then shall we be "the people who are all righteous" (Isa. lx. 21), "the righteous nation" (Isa. xxvi. 2), "the seed whom the LORD hath blessed" (Isa. lxi. 9), the nation "that keepeth the truth;" the race, all whose "children," "taught of the LORD," shall enjoy that "peace" which our God Himself calls "great" (Isa. liv. 13). And under our present distress is there a word of comfort for us in the chapter of Isaiah to which we have chiefly referred—the fifty-fourth? Surely there is! Let the reader peruse the fifteenth most remarkable verse: God says there to us, "Behold!" as though to call our attention. "Behold! they shall surely gather together;"—the Zulus, the Afghans, perhaps the Russians—"but NOT by Me!" God, our own God, has not authorised these gatherings! He has permitted them to show His power, but they have not His approval! "Whosoever," He adds, "shall gather together against thee"—be he Shere Ali, Cetywayo, or any other—"shall fall for thy sake!" Just exactly, then, as Shere Ali fell, and as all opposition in Afghanistan has miraculously collapsed, so it shall be in Zululand! Cetywayo shall "fall for our sake!" Zululand shall become British territory for our sakes and the Gospel's!

Reader! let these things sustain your faith! Be not an Israelite in vain! God says to you, and to us all, "Fear not!" and let us answer to Him, "O Lord, we believe! help Thou our unbelief!" (Mark ix. 24).

THE SABBATH DAYS.

IT was refreshing to see in the article "Israel Keepeth Sabbath," in the BANNER, Jan. 15, a passing allusion made to "the vexed question of the correct God-appointed Sabbath day." Now I quite agree with the writer that the British, and those of British origin, do keep Sunday nationally as a day of rest; but I cannot see, with him, that the conclusion is proved completely that Israel (or the British) keepeth Sabbath, as long as so much doubt remains whether it be the Sabbath that Israel (or the British) keepeth.

In Israel's Identity Standard, Dec., 1876, I called attention to a suspicion long ago entertained by some that our Sunday may be truly the Sabbath, because the seventh day according to God's reckoning in patriarchal times, though not the seventh, but the first, according to another mode of reckoning likewise appointed by God. For more than three years have I been endeavouring to obtain a sight of Dr. Jennings' Jewish Antiquities, where this view of the subject was said to be fully treated; I have only just succeeded, and find it to be a two volume work, bearing the date of 1766. The third chapter of the third book is on the Sabbath. The author believes the Sabbath was observed nationally by all people from the creation to the Exodus; that the seventh day of the heathen, which was considered sacred, and often dedicated to the sun, was the ancient Sabbath, held by custom, after the true religion was lost.

Digitized by Google

I shall conclude by giving the Doctor's own words concerning what he pleases to call the Jewish Sabbath, meaning that established after the Exodus by God through Moses, vol. ii., page 146 :—

As to the institution of the Jewish Sabbath, the first account we have of it is in Exod. xix., where the day God appointed to be kept by the Jews for their Sabbath, was marked out by its not raining manna, which it had done for six days before. The observation of a Sabbath was probably not wholly new to the Jews, it is not likely they had entirely omitted this weekly day of rest and devotion. Nevertheless, the manner of keeping the Sabbath by a total cessation from labour, and the particular day on which it was to be kept by the Jews seems to have been a new institution—otherwise as to the day there would have been no occasion for its being so particularly marked out by Moses, as the reason of there being a double quantity of manna on the sixth day, for it must have immediately occurred to the people that it was intended for their provision on the Sabbath, if the next day had been the Sabbath in course. And the expression Moses useth is remarkable : "See, or take notice, for that the Lord hath given you the Sabbath (as if this day were then first appointed to them), therefore He giveth you on the sixth day the bread of two days." And it seems to have been too trivial a circumstance to be recorded in the sacred history, that the people "rested on the seventh day," if this had been merely what they and their fathers had always done.

It moreover appears that that day week, before the day which was thus marked out for a Sabbath by its not raining manna, was not observed as a Sabbath. On the fifteenth day of the second month they journeyed from Elim, and came at night into the wilderness of Sin, where, on their murmuring for want of provisions, the Lord that night sent them quails ; and the next morning, which was the sixteenth day, it rained manna, and so for six days successively ; on the seventh, which was the twenty-second, it rained none, and that day they were commanded to keep for their Sabbath ; and if this had been the Sabbath in course, according to the paradisaical computation, the fifteenth must have been so too, and would have been doubtless kept as a Sabbath, and not have been any part of it spent in marching from Elim to Sin.

Again, the Jewish Sabbath was on a different day from the paradisaical is probable from its being appointed as a sign between God and the people of Israel, by observing which they were to know or acknowledge Jehovah as their God. Agreeable to which is the opinion of the Jewish doctors, that the Sabbath was given to the Israelites, and none else were bound to observe it ; but how could it be a sign between God and the people of Israel, more than any other people, if it had been merely the old paradisaical Sabbath which had been given to all mankind?

The Jewish Sabbath being declared to be instituted as a memorial of their deliverance out of the land of Egypt, and this being superadded to the reason for keeping the ancient paradisaical Sabbath, makes it highly probable it was appointed to be on a different day ; otherwise how could it be a memorial of a new event, or with what propriety could it be said, as it is, that because God "had brought them out of the land of Egypt, therefore He commanded them to keep the Sabbath day?" Some learned men have endeavoured to compute that the Jewish Sabbath was appointed on the same day of the week on which they left Egypt, or rather on which their deliverance was completed by the overthrow of Pharaoh in the Red Sea ; but whether that computation can be clearly made out or not, this new reason assigned for keeping the Sabbath makes it very likely that it was so.

A Country Parson.

FORTY YEARS AND JOHN WILSON.

We have received the following curious speculation, which we pass on to our readers for their consideration. It may strike some minds as remarkable, and lead to further thought.

"I find (says Mr. L. Biden, of Portsea) that Mr. John Wilson commenced to publish the proofs of our Identity in A.D. 1840. Does the forty years' wilderness journeying of our ancestors from Egypt correspond with the journey of our contemporaries from the mystical explanations of the Bible to the grand national understanding of the same blessed Book in or about the year 1840 + 40 = A.D. 1880? Also, is the revised edition of our Holy Scriptures likely to be a great improvement, or as perfect as if sanctioned by, or brought about through, the direct providence of God?"

ST. PAUL ON OUR IDENTITY WITH ISRAEL.

PART I.

We are often told by our opponents that the New Testament is opposed to any distinction between Jew and Israelite, and that St. Paul, especially being the apostle of the Gentiles, distinctly repudiated any such pre-eminence of Israel which we claim over Judah. We propose now to show that in these statements our opponents are not supported by the Scriptures. The latter, in fact, carefully considered, not only prove that the great apostle drew the distinction sharply, but further that he pointed to our own, the British nation, as the future outcome, remnant, or descendants of the then Lost House—in other words, of the outcasted and (then) soon-to-disappear kingdom of Israel.

We ask our readers to turn with us to two portions of God's Word, the epistles of St. Paul to the Romans iv. 9—25, and to the Galatians iv. 22—31. What we put before them now is the substance of an able address by the Rev. C. W. Hickson, delivered at a meeting of the Bristol and Clifton Israel's Identification Association. It will be found to contain much that is striking, forcible, and to the point. In Rom. iv., Abraham's blessedness is described as coming to him "by faith," and not under the Mosaic ritual of the law. He obtained the righteousness which cometh by faith when in uncircumcision, and not under circumcision ; which last represents, of course, the law and Judaism (verse 10). Now, having the righteousness of the faith before circumcision, he became the father of all them that believe, though they be not circumcised—that is, are not of Judah, or the Mosaic law (verse 11). This points, therefore, to certain sons of Abraham—faithful ones and righteous—who are not of circumcised Judah. Verse 13 directs our attention more clearly to the British nation as this very righteous nation. It speaks of "the promise" given to Abraham that he should be "heir of the world"—a reference here being obviously to Gen. xvii. 4, wherein God promised him that he should be called Abraham—the "father of many nations." But Rom. iv. 13 proves that this promise was not to Abraham alone, but to Abraham's seed or posterity as well, that they should become also "heir of the world." Do the Jews aim at such a destiny? Certainly not. What people, then, in these our last days, do? The question has only to be asked to be answered. The British are clearly the people destined, by their vast numbers—by their universal possessions—by their colonial and heathen empires—by their possession of the Gates—by their wealth, and by the supremacy of the seas, to dominate the earth. They, then, are those most distinctly pointed out as aiming to be "heirs of the world"—the seed of Abraham, according to St. Paul.

But do these "heirs" seek the promise through the Mosaic law? Are these sons of Abraham Jews, as our opponents would find "Lost Israel?" Nay ; St. Paul knew better than that. They are to be "heirs through the righteousness of faith," or by reason of their Christian reliance on their Redeemer, the Lord Jesus Christ. That this seed so blessed is a veritable flesh and blood offspring of the patriarch, and not a spiritual nondescript progeny composed of "the Church" of all nations, as some say, is apparent by the apostle's next words. The promise, he says, in the 16th verse, is to be sure "to all the seed ;" not only indeed to Judah (which is of the law) ; "but to that also which is of the faith of Abraham, who is the father of us all." These two facts appear clear :—First, that the seed, other than that under the law (or the Jews), is a Christian seed according to faith ; and, second, that the two seeds are brethren according to the flesh, both owning Abraham to be their human father. For, just as the Jews are indeed Abraham's lineal seed, so the other seed is also, on the testimony of St. Paul, the flesh and blood offspring of Abraham, "the father of us all," of those addressed by St. Paul, and of St. Paul himself.

Digitized by Google

But verse 17 settles the matter, and that decisively, for the Holy Spirit, inditing this epistle by the hand of St. Paul, quotes Genesis xvii. 5, and includes the two seeds—the Jews and the Christian sons of Abraham—as belonging to the category of the offspring of the patriarch, "As it is written, I have made thee a father of many nations." Here we have Judah as one of the seeds, and "the nation and company of Christian nations" as the other, and both included in the catalogue of "the many nations." The rest of the chapter alludes to the strength of Abraham's faith, who regarded not the deadness of his own body, nor that of Sarah's womb; but believed Him who sware to him that his seed should yet be like the stars of heaven for multitude, saying, "So shall thy seed be." This referred not to the seed according to Judaism, as we know, for that seed is "few;" but the seed found in faith, which is obviously destined to fill the whole earth as the Christian Anglo-Saxon nations. This deadness of the patriarch and his wife is an apt type of the condition of Lost Israel, dead and buried, lo! these 2,500 years, and yet their resurrection and discovery to the world as the vast multitudinous Israelite progeny of Abraham is as certain as God is true. As the promise to Abraham was fulfilled, so the Anglo-Saxons, being Israel, are already showing that development in numbers which will fill the earth, and are to-day what God promised our forefather they should become—namely, "a nation and a company of nations," not under the law (that would, if they were so found, testify at once they are not Israel of the Lost House); but under grace, through the righteousness which is according to faith.

We reserve what we have to say on the other passage of Scripture for our next, asking our readers' careful consideration of the words now commented on, being sure there are many rays of fresh light brought to bear on our subject by the Identity. For such gleams we are all indebted, as we have said, to our friend the Rev. Vicar of St Bartholomew's, Bristol.

(To be continued.)

AMERICAN COMMERCE COMPARED WITH ISRAEL'S.

Our readers recollect the discussion which took place last year (in which we had our part) in reference to Mr. Gladstone's anticipations, that, in process of time, "the daughter," as he called her, but "brother Jonathan," as we must insist on terming him, would be stronger than the "mother" located in these islands of the West. He prophesied that our race would soon be beaten "as in a canter" by the increasing, multiplying, prospering nation rising in the far West, and he apostrophised the nascent giantess as

O matre forti filia fortior.

At the time, we strongly combatted the views Mr. Gladstone put forward as unscriptural and untrue, because this nation being Israel of the Ten Tribes, the descendants of Ephraim, the integrity of Scripture demanded that "the fulness of nations," the Melo'-hag-goim, prophetically promised to his seed by the Patriarch Jacob, must in the latter day be found greater than Manasseh, with whom, as a separate and "great people," the comparison must be made. Mr. Gladstone cited the matter of wealth, and consequently commerce, as one of the bases of his comparison. In that aspect, while allowing our own prodigious bounds towards the attainment of national wealth, he pronounced that the Americans were progressing faster still, passing us by "as in a canter."

We have quite recently seen a notice of these very remarks which come to us from the far-distant "Times correspondent" of that journal at Shanghai, in China. Writing on December 14, 1878, as reported in the issue of January 31, 1879, we find a comparison instituted by the writer as to the commercial positions of the two countries—Great Britain and America—in the China seaports, which places Mr. Gladstone's anticipations in a very ludicrous light. This report proves that, after all, God's Word is true; that in China, at least, great as Manasseh is, Ephraim is "greater than he," as regards the carrying trade and the coast commerce of the two nations. We quote the whole passage from the correspondent's letter, inasmuch as it is a species of evidence valuable of its kind, strongly supporting our Identity with Israel, and proving that God's Word is literally exact as to the jot and to the tittle—Mr. Gladstone being, of course, exactly in the same respects, wrong and misled by his failure to appreciate the true character and Identity of his fellow-countrymen as the Israel of God. Our quotation is as follows:—

The discussion in England as to whether the decay of our Empire, commercial and otherwise, has not begun, and the confident assertion of the future supremacy of America by an eminent statesman, have caused some amusement here, as well they might. So far as regards China, the decay is quite the other way; the position and trade of American firms here seem yearly to decrease, their local carrying trade is extinct, and their import of cotton piece-goods small, unprofitable, and much less significant than certain rhetorical statisticians would have us believe. In order that the commercial position of our country, so far as regards China at least, may be removed from the sphere of argument and lifted into that of fact, I have extracted the following telling figures from the valuable reports on foreign trade for the year 1877, published by the Imperial maritime customs. Of the percentages of the imports and exports carried in British and American bottoms, the fluctuation of late years has been as follows:—

Per cent. of whole.

	1872.	1873.	1874.	1875.	1876.	1877.
Great Britain	77·96	76·71	76·30	73·93	71·25	74·39
U.S. of America	6·45	5·10	4·55	4·54	2·42	1·49

The share taken by the two nationalities in the coast trade during the same years, as represented by the percentage of the values of the goods conveyed under the various foreign flags, is thus shown:—

Per cent.

	1872.	1873.	1874.	1875.	1876.	1877.
Great Britain	33·58	37·29	40·25	46·39	40·65	45·72
U.S. of America	56·81	52·76	45·02	34·49	33·64	5.80

The decline in the local carrying trade in American bottoms in 1877 as compared with 1876, was caused by the transfer of the steamers of the Shanghai Steam Navigation Company to the Chinese flag. That there are other causes at work is shown by the fact that of the old-established world-famous American hongs in China, only one remains. Of the transit trade up country, the British percentage had gone from 50·57 per cent. in 1876 to 62·11 per cent. of the whole in 1877; the American, from 25·04 per cent. in 1876 to 11·38 per cent. in 1877. With regard to the imports of piece goods into China from Great Britain and America, it should be generally known that the total importation was, in 1877, 11,570,000 pieces, valued at Tls19,000,000, of which 612,000 pieces, valued at Tls1,600,000, came from the United States. As the whole of the balance came from England, it is idle as yet to speak of competition in this market with America. Experience up to the present time goes to show that, without exception, the efforts made to supplant the English sized light-weight manufactures with pure goods from American mills has resulted in a serious loss to the importers. The present state of the English cotton trade and cotton manufacture is, of course, bad, perhaps about as bad as it possibly can be, but from among the causes which have brought about the present state of things, the competition of America in Eastern markets may safely be eliminated. So far at least the problem is simplified.

It will be seen by the above that the trade of America is on the Chinese coasts a dwindling, vanishing trade, while the British—not famed at present for its fair dealing or for its excellence as to the article of cotton and cotton manufactures—is one that is incessantly rising in volume and importance. It is idle, therefore, to talk of the superiority of America in that portion of the world, certainly; and in China, at any rate, Ephraim more than holds his own. As compared with Manasseh, the younger brother there is, as God Himself promised, "Greater than he!"

Digitized by Google

FRENCH TESTIMONY THAT ISRAEL (THE BRITISH), KEEPING SABBATH, IS A NATION BLESSED OF GOD.

WE commend the annexed extract from the Times newspaper of December 20, 1876, on the subject of "The Influence of the Sunday on Health and National Prosperity," to the reader's notice. The letter of Barthelémy St. Hilaire is a magnificent testimony to the blessings God has poured out on this favoured nation—blessings which are, we know, but the earnest of greater and more glorious benefits about to be granted us, not for our deservings or merits, but because, being Israel, this nation has been redeemed with the precious blood of Jesus, and, being redeemed and saved, is to be restored to the land of their inheritance, baptized with the new covenant nationally —"a name of joy, a praise and an honour before all the nations of the earth (i.e., the Gentiles), which shall hear of all the good that He doeth them" (Jer. xxxiii. 9).

The extract is as follows:—

SUNDAY REST.—A short time ago a copy of the French edition of Mr. C. Hill's prize essay, entitled, "Sunday, Its Influence on Health and National Prosperity," was sent by the Working Men's Lord's-day Rest Association, 13, Bedford-row, W.C., with a letter signed by Lord Shaftesbury (President) and Mr. C. Hill (Secretary), commending the subject of Sunday rest to each of the 832 French Senators and Deputies. Among other friendly replies, a letter, of which the following is a translation, has been received by Lord Shaftesbury, and permission to publish it has been given by the writer :—

MY LORD,—I thank you, and am very grateful to you indeed, for the communication which you have been kind enough to make to me ; and I congratulate Mr. Charles Hill, the secretary of your society, for the excellent publication which the Geneva Committee has so highly and honourably mentioned. I am entirely of your opinion, and I believe that one day of rest out of seven may exercise the most salutary influence on the health, moral and material, of individuals, and on the prosperity of nations. In France the reform is making some progress ; and I feel sure that the question would be almost solved at the present day if those who have taken it in hand had known how to direct their efforts better. Mr. Charles Hill's arguments are the true ones, and they are irresistible for all sensible men. I hope that we shall not remain deaf to reason, and that with us, as elsewhere, will be felt the immense advantages of a custom so beneficent and so clearly imposed by the nature of man such as God has made it. I am also anxious, my lord, to thank you very cordially for your earnest and noble sympathy for France. We transmit to you wishes as sincere for the happiness of England, which, in my opinion, is the freest, the most civilising, and the wisest of all the Powers. She offers to the world the most admirable examples that are to be found on the entire surface of the globe.

"Accept, my lord, &c.,

"BARTHELEMY ST. HILAIRE,

"Member of the Institute Senator.

"Paris, Rue d'Asdorg 29 Bis, 29 Nov."

The reader will notice that in the Frenchman's view Great Britain, or England as he calls her, is—(1) The freest; (2) the most civilising; (3) the wisest of all the Powers; (4) that she offers the world the most admirable examples that are to be found on the entire surface of the globe! This is impartial testimony, and confirms our claim that the British, being Israel, are the chief of nations; are blessed of Jehovah, that they blossom, and bud, and fill the face of the world with what God calls fruit (Isa. xxvii. 6); and we are not wrong in adding to all our other tokens, by which we recognise this people, that they have the Sabbath sign—the mark God Himself put upon them to show them they are His people, and He their GOD. The French, alas! admit, in the writer's pathetic language, that this sign is not visible in France, and wanting it, she is not Israel, therefore not free, nor civilising, nor wise, nor admirable as an example to the other nations of the earth in the same degree as England.

"THE WORM"—ENGLAND—ENCIRCLES THE WHOLE EARTH.—DAN. VII. 27.

A HUMOROUS political journal, edited and printed in Bologna, devoted the greater part of its space, on Dec. 15, to a coloured print of the globe, with a gigantic serpent coiling round it. The boa-constrictor is intended to represent the British Empire, and is so placed as to cover, by its enormous breadth and length, all Britain's possessions and "Gates." Celebrated Italian "shades," such as Cavour, Victor Emmanuel, Mazzini, Dante, Tasso, Virgil, and M. Thiers, are represented as wandering round our globe and remarking as they glide,

"Many think that England is but a little snake; but we know very well that she is a mighty serpent." Progress, represented as the devil, is at one corner giving the globe a poke to send it on more rapidly, and modern civilisation at the other is assisting him.

I cannot do better than translate for you the article which accompanies the print, leaving you to make what remarks you think best.

The secretary of this humorous paper, which by-the-bye bears the name of the Parrot, is a lady. Her remarks upon this new emblem of our Empire are the following :—

"My office as secretary gives me the right to offer a few comments upon the extraordinary development and windings of the British serpent. Its enormous head rests on Ireland, ready to devour all who rebel. Note this very convenient method for getting rid of all associations troublesome to the State. The neck lies on Scotland ; but the beginning of its body is on England. From thence it stretches down the Atlantic till it rests on Gibraltar, as well as on the opposite coast of Africa. Look how, by its influence and the cunning of its arms, it covers all the African coast—Morocco, Tripoli, and Fez—monopolising their traffic. Tunis it excites at pleasure, and it has stretched its unwieldy bulk across the treasury and ministry of Egypt. Then again in the Ionian Sea it turns upon Malta, upon the Islands of the Archipelago, crushing Cyprus, and by a cunning curve covers Turkey, where it makes itself master. From European it passes to Asiatic Turkey, to the Isthmus of Suez, and again through Egypt to Abyssinia, where with one stroke of its tail it crushed the kingdom of Theodore Negus, who, not successful in defeating the English, put an end to himself.

"Down the coasts of the Red Sea and the Persian Gulf the serpent crawls, till upon the Indian Ocean it makes a sharp curve, knotting its folds in great strength upon India. There it holds in subjection 180,000,000 ; but, not satisfied, seeks to crush as well in its awful coils Afghanistan. It now crosses the Indian Ocean, resting on many islands, and then coiling round the immense continent of Australia, where no other animal dares dispute possession. Winding up the celestial ocean, and across various islands, it at length bruises with its ponderous weight the coasts of China, where from Hong Kong it obliges the inhabitants by force of arms to smoke opium, and in the same manner Japan. Here you lose sight of the serpent ; but follow it with the eyes of your imagination, and whither does it conduct you? Across the Pacific Ocean to America, over which twisting many a coil and crushing Canada, we again catch sight of it crossing the Atlantic to Sierra Leone, and Ascension Island ; with another curve it rests again upon British Guiana in South America, returning to South Africa by St. Helena, where finally its tail twists and coils itself round the Cape Colony, the Transvaal, and the Island of Madagascar."

You will agree with me that the illustrious shades are not mistaken in their conclusions regarding the British snake. F.

Florence, Feb. 17, 1879.

NOTE BY THE EDITOR.—We wish we could present our readers with a fac simile of the wonderful coloured picture described by our gifted friend in Florence. By a singular coincidence, on the very day when the foregoing reached us from that city, our correspondent, the Rev. A. B. Grimaldi, from Isola di Capri, Italy, also forwarded to us by post the paper itself containing the cartoon, which in truth tells us at a glance its own Israelite story as seen by Gentile and hostile eyes. And what is that story? It is this :—1. That "the worm" or small adder—"England"—(una piccola biscia) is a monstrous serpent (un serpentone), Israel, in short, who, "if he go through, both treadeth down and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver" (Micah v. 8). 2. That the British possess the Gates—Israel's allotment as by God promised only to her (Gen. xxii. 17) ; and 3. Being the Power that girdles the Gentile earth (Deut. xxxii. 8,9), the British (who are Israel) are to have, as the gift of God, "the kingdom, and the dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, as the people of the saints of the Most High" (Dan. vii. 27).

Digitized by Google

IS THERE NOTHING IN A NAME?

(Extract from the "Times of India," September 16, 1876.)

SIR,—We regret to see the following words in the Times of India, Sept. 7, 1876:—"He has effaced himself; deliberately wiped the name of Disraeli out of the book of the future," &c. The question is naturally asked, Why did he do it? Would it not have been in every way more dignified to have lived and died as the "Great Commoner," and have preserved from absorption, in a meaningless title (Earl of Beaconsfield), the name which he has made famous in politics and literature? Had Benjamin Disraeli been an Englishman, we should possibly say Yes; but he is not, except as a nationalised subject. He, Benjamin Disraeli, is a Jew by birth; hence the secret of his not being particularly anxious to die the "Great Commoner."

Whether the noble earl has taken the title with any particular view as to its meaning is beyond our ken; but this we hope to show, that, as an English word, it is not so meaningless as our own correspondent would have us believe, and trust some day it may prove to the wearer the acme of applicability. Earl is supposed to have been derived from elder, and if so signifies an elder, head, or first man. Beaconsfield, in English, is translatable as a, or the, beacon of, or in, the field. A beacon is a mark, post, or other object set up either in the sea or on the land as a sign for passers by. In the same way standards or ensigns are military words, signifying the same thing, so that Beaconsfield may be translated as a beacon, post, mark, standard, or ensign set up in a field as a sign or warning to all passers by.

Such being the case, Is there anything in this day—A.D. 1876—to enlighten or show us cause to believe that this title can be used as the forerunner or shadow of future events? We think so.

By searching the Old Testament of Scripture—a Book our nation is so proud of as to print and cast abroad in all languages of the world—we find the following texts:—namely, Isa. v. 26, xi. 12, xviii. 3, xxx. 17, xxxi. 9; Zechariah ix. 16; Jeremiah xvii. 3, in which the foregoing terms are referred to a nation or people, persons or individuals. Isaiah prophesied, about 760 B.C., concerning the Israelites, and if there is any truth in the Bible, we must expect his prophecies to be fulfilled. Not only did he use this term beacon, but he said it should be put up or set up in a field or mountain, and directs "all inhabitants of the world and dwellers on the earth" to look—"see ye," when this is done, and if so, there must be a reason for the admonition. Isaiah also gives the key: "In that time shall the present be brought to the Lord of hosts by a people scattered and peeled, and from a people terrible from their beginning hitherto; a nation meted out and trodden under foot, whose land the rivers have spoiled, to the place of the Lord of hosts, the Mount Zion."

These are the prophet's words, and if they have any meaning, it is that the Jew with his brethren of Israel are to be restored to their land in that day when the standard is set up. As a beacon in former days applied to men or individuals, so it may now; and we have this grand coincidence, that Benjamin Disraeli, a Jew by birth, became Prime Minister of the British Empire, and has been raised to the peerage under this said meaningless title—"Earl of Beaconsfield." Surely every Jew throughout the world, in these days when the Turkish Empire is on the point of breaking up from inside and outside foes, is looking to see what "this adventurer" of former days, this man with a "meaningless title" will now do for his own people; and if so, surely he to them is a beacon in the field, and the first part of Isaiah's prophecy is fulfilled. The next will be the blowing of the trumpet when the proclamation is made throughout the world, that the once despised Jewish race may dwell in their own land again, and become a great nation under the protection of the British flag; then will the standard be set up. This must be, for we dare not allow any other nation, on the destruction of the Ottoman Empire, to occupy Palestine and the line of the Euphrates Valley.

That this will really happen is as sure as the Bible has been printed, and we recommend every Jew, as also every member of the British Empire, to consider this well together with its corollary, that such being the case, the kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland will prove to be the true representatives of the Ten Lost Tribes of Israel. Amen.

(Communicated to the "Banner" by a Colonel of H. M.'s R. Artillery.)

Sept. 11, 1876.

THE EARL OF BEACONSFIELD AND HIS WORKS.

(Continued from page 59.)

PART II.

AT the conclusion of a conversation with the young prince of the Lebanon, wherein he had suggested a removal of the court of St. James to Delhi, with her Majesty as Empress of India, thirty-four years ago, Tancred is left to soliloquise. Amongst the thoughts that crowded his brain, were the questions, "Why was he there? why was he, the child of a Northern isle, in the heart of the stony Arabia, far from the scene of his birth, and of his duties? What had drawn him to these wilds? What wilds? Had he no connection with them? Had he not from his infancy repeated, in the congregation of his people, the laws which, from the awful summit of these surrounding mountains, the Father of all had Himself delivered for the government of mankind? These Arabian laws regulated his life, and the wanderings of an Arabian tribe in this 'great and terrible wilderness,' under the immediate direction of the Creator, sanctified by His miracles, governed by His counsels, illumined by His presence, had been the first and guiding history that had been entrusted to his young intelligence, from which it had drawn its first pregnant examples of human conduct and Divine interposition, and formed its first dim conceptions of the relations between man and God. Why, then, he had a right to be here! He had a connection with these regions: they had a hold upon him. He was not here like an Indian Brahmin, who visits Europe from a principle of curiosity, the land he visits is not his, nor his fathers' land, and the faith which fills its temples is not the revelation that floats upon his sacred Ganges. But for this English youth, words have been uttered and things done, more than thirty centuries ago, in this stony wilderness, which influenced his opinion and regulated his conduct every day of his life, in that distant and seagirt home, which, at the time of their occurrence, was not as advanced in civilisation as the Polynesian groups, or the islanders of New Zealand. The life and property of England are protected by the laws of Sinai. The hard-working people of England are secured in every seven days a day of rest by the laws of Sinai. And yet they persecute the Jews and hold up to odium the race to whom they are indebted for the sublime legislation which alleviates the inevitable lot of the labouring multitude!

"Vast as the obligations of the whole human family are to the Hebrew race, there is no portion of the modern populations so much indebted to them as the British people. It was 'the sword of the Lord and of Gideon' that won the boasted liberties of England; chanting the same canticles that cheered the heart of Judah amid their glens, the Scotch upon their hill-sides achieved their religious freedom.

"Then why do these Saxon and Celtic societies persecute an Arabian race, from whom they have adopted laws of sublime benevolence, and in the pages of whose literature they have found perpetual delight, instruction, and consolation? That is a great question, which, in an enlightened age, may be fairly asked, but to which even the self-complacent nineteenth century would find some difficulty in contributing a reply.

Digitized by Google

"Does it stand thus? Independently of their admirable laws, which have elevated our condition, and of their exquisite poetry, which has charmed it: independently of their heroic history, which has animated us; in the pursuit of public liberty we are indebted to the Hebrew people for our knowledge of the true God, and for the redemption from our sins. Then 'I have a right to be here,' said Tancred. . . . . 'I come to the land whose laws I obey, whose religion I profess, and I seek, upon its sacred soil, those sanctions which for ages men abundantly accorded. The angels who visited the patriarchs, and announced the advent of the judges, who guided the pens of prophets, and bore tidings to the apostles, spoke also to the shepherds in the field. I look upon the host of heaven: do they no longer stand before the Lord? Where are the cherubim? where the seraphs? Where is Michael the Destroyer? Gabriel of a thousand missions?'"

This suggests a reply to sceptics when they allege great presumption on the part of Anglo-Israelites in "pretending" to interpret prophecy. Why should passages in the prophets be less applicable to our times than they were to those that have passed? Is prophecy to be a sealed book? and are we, who have been especially enjoined to search the Scriptures, to fall short of our duty in this respect, because there seems a difficulty attending their right interpretation? We have much evidence to the contrary in your columns, as well as from our own experience, which only acts as an incentive to further search.

Very little is required in Tancred's reverie to make it thoroughly accord with our Identity with Israel. It possesses all the arguments, but does not actually bring out the point. The time had not then come. Still the gifted writer must have had some sort of intuition that he was writing for some purpose, and may have designedly left his readers to form their own conclusions.

(To be continued.)

THE DUTCH BOERS OF THE TRANSVAAL GIVE IDENTITY EVIDENCE.

We were not prepared for this! Yet it is a fact that the Dutch malcontents of the Transvaal, in lately sending home to the British Government their protest against the annexation, gave most clear and unreserved testimony that the British are the chief of nations, the sole mistress of the seas, the nation righteous in judgment and justice, the refuge for the oppressed, and the redressers of the wrongs of others. Let the reader mark what the appeal sets out, as recorded in the Times last year. It is as follows:—

Allied to England during a century (1678-1780), for the maintenance of the religious liberty and political equilibrium on the Continent, Holland remembers with pride the glorious epoch of that community of interests and intente cordiale. She recalls, not without some sadness, the sacrifices by which the Stadtholder of the Republic became the great liberator of England, and how the immortal William III. laid the foundations of the British power based on the principles of the Constitutional Monarchy. Holland has not forgotten that the most illustrious statesmen and warriors, Marlborough, Heinsius, Walpole, Slingelandt, whether in pursuing war, or in diplomatic action for the maintenance of the general peace, by their cordial union, obtained signal and durable successes. Before all, and in the front line, Holland deems it an honour to have, in concert with Great Britain, taken in hand and sustained with constancy and by the most noble efforts the sacred cause of the feeble and oppressed by land and sea in Europe. Never did suffering humanity invoke in vain the protection of the inseparable powers of the sea. In France, in Italy, in Germany, and in Hungary, as in the question of the East, their indissoluble and close alliance shone again and again with brilliant lustre, and caused their name to be blessed by minorities in arms covered with their ægis. Those times are far from ours, it is true; and Holland no longer counts, as did the United Provinces of the Netherlands, in the rank of the preponderant States of our age. Great Britain alone has succeeded to the heritage of the beneficent Protectorate, for which our ancestors, too, once lavished their blood and their treasure. In our days England alone has remained in the lists, and her powerful and generous intervention has, in the words of Lord Brougham, earned for the British Parliament the magnificent eulogy of being recognised and honoured as the supreme tribunal, to which all the oppressed nations of the universe had so often recourse without ever imploring in vain its justice.

In these few lines are several remarkable statements, which the reader should note as the utterance of foreigners by no means well pleased with our country, and smarting from the effects of an act of state which must needs have deeply wounded their national pride. Their testimony is thoroughly impartial, and amounts to this:—

1. That the united sovereignty of the seas, which they claim for the Dutch with the British in days now long gone by, is not now held in union since the power of Holland has retreated, and "Britannia" alone "rules the waves!" The reason, we submit, for this is, that the Dutch, though Protestants, were never Israel; that their maritime power therefore speedily departed, and proved that the British, who alone have always retained it, are the true heritors of Israel's blessing—the owners of "the Gates."

2. That Great Britain has now alone "succeeded to the heritage of the beneficent protectorate as the preponderant State of our age." This, we submit, is a clear admission that Great Britain is the chief of nations, which is Israel's prerogative by the distinct promise of the living God (Deut. xxviii. 1—13, xxvi. 19; Isa. xli. 8, 9).

3. That the Parliament, or governing assembly of the British nation has been "recognised and honoured as the supreme tribunal, to which all oppressed nations of the universe have always resorted, not in vain, for help and justice." This too, we remark, and ask our readers to note, is God's description of what Israel obedient should become—"A nation high above all nations of the earth—the head, and not the tail—above only, and not beneath;" "so great that all the nations of the earth (i.e., the Gentiles) shall see that they are called by the name of Jehovah (in other words, Israel—the prince of God); and seeing, they shall be afraid of them;" blessed with such good laws and statutes that "the Gentiles shall say 'Surely this great nation is a wise and understanding people'" (Deut. iv. 6, xxviii. 1, 10—13).

ISRAEL'S PROGRESS IN ASIATIC TURKEY, AS SEEN BY GENTILE EYES IN ITALY.

The following appeared in the columns of the Nazione of Jan. 27, 1879, perhaps the most widely read of the Italian secular papers:—

"In Asia English agents are received with rapidly increasing favour. Secretaries belonging to the English Embassy at Constantinople, officers commissioned with power, and secret agents from Cyprus spread themselves over Asia Minor, inquire into the real wants of the population, investigate into the misrule of Turkish functionaries, and forward to the Ambassador at Constantinople a full account of the real state of affairs. The ambassador on his side demands explanations from the Porte, insists on full examination, and proposes the necessary arrangements and changes.

"The Asiatic population, who already experience the beneficial effects of British protection, incline less and less to recognise and obey the authority of the Porte, and at times despise and rebel against it altogether, of which we have an instance in the late troubles at Zeitun in the village of Aleppo."

Our correspondent adds:—"I foresee that by these measures England in a few years will be mistress of Asia Minor without war or treaties." F.

Florence, Feb. 17, 1879.

Digitized by Google

WAS ABRAHAM A JEW?

By Abraham Storey.

(Concluded from page 127.)

PART II.

See, therefore, what a great variety of races, and multitude of nations, are sprung from Abraham! If, therefore, he must be a Jew, because he was their forefather, then he was also an Edomite, because he was as much the father of Esau as of Jacob; he was a Midianite, because Midian was his own son; and he was an Arab, because he was the father of Ishmael, the progenitor of the Arabians. Thus Abraham was a Jew, an Edomite, a Midianite, an Ishmaelite or Arab, and as many other races and nationalities besides as belonged to his descendants!

But this fallacious absurdity is increased by the use of the term Jew; for, in Abraham's days, the race of Jews was not in existence! The man from whom the Jews lineally descended was Abraham's great grandson Judah, the fourth of Jacob's twelve sons. The family, or Tribe, descended from Judah were called Judahites, or Jews, to distinguish them from the families of the other eleven sons. And so, also, the other families took the family, or tribal, name of that son of Jacob from whom they descended. Thus the Reubenites came from Reuben, the Levites from Levi, the Benjamites from Benjamin, and so on right through the twelve families. Now, racially considered, there was only one family out of the twelve that were Jews, because they were descended from that son whose name, Judah, originated that of Jews. Thus, so to speak, out of Jacob's twelve sons one only was a Jew, and that was Judah; and so only one family, or Tribe, out of the Twelve Tribes of Israel were Jews, and that was the Tribe of Judah. Therefore, racially considered, we cannot trace the race of Jews further back than to their father Judah; and to step back beyond this boundary, which is the real fountain head of the Jews, is as manifestly absurd as to say that Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, were Reubenites, Levites, Benjamites, or to call them by the name of any other of the Tribes of Israel; by doing which we would act as reasonably as we do when we say these patriarchs were Jews, because they were the forefathers of the Jews!

As, therefore, Judah, the only father of the Jews, was not born until long after Abraham's decease, it necessarily follows that the very name and existence of a Jew was not known in Abraham's day, and consequently Abraham could not be by race a Jew. Neither was Abraham a Jew "by religion."

Before the time of Moses, who was the lawgiver, the children of Israel knew nothing of that ecclesiastical system known as Judaism, and from which the term Jew, in a religious sense, was derived. The sons of Jacob, the heads of the several Tribes, were dead; Jacob and Isaac also; and Abraham was dead 430 years before the law was given; so that in no sense whatever was Judaism known to any of "the fathers."

It is questionable whether the term Judaism, or Jews, as a name for religion, was known or used by the Israelites until after the dedication of the temple by Solomon, when, in accordance with Jacob's prophecy (Gen. xlix. 8—10), and the achievements of David, the Tribe of Judah had established itself over all the others as the Tribe of royalty. This royal dedication, therefore, was a fitting occasion on which to give the name of this Tribe to that economy which had hitherto been known simply as "the law," or the "law of Moses," and to recognise that change in the constitution which the addition of a regal head over the Church and State had introduced by calling the constitution one of Judaism. Thus the name of Judah, which before was confined to one tribe, and was in no sense used by any of the others, being now used as a name applied to that "law," which was the law unto all the Tribes, became the universal name of religion in Israel.

Thus the term Judaism was substituted for that of "the law;" and so, instead of the term Jew being confined, as hitherto, in a tribal sense, only to one Tribe, it now, in addition, spread, in a religious sense, as far as the influence of the law; and that was over every Tribe. Thus while each Tribe, as a Tribe, retained its own tribal name, the religious name, that of Jew, was the only name by which all who were under the law now became known.

If Reuben, the first-born, had not been disinherited, in all probability his name, as a religious one, and not that of Judah, would have established itself over all the Tribes; and instead of the term Jews and Judaism being applied to the civil and ecclesiastical economy of the children of Israel, we should have known the people now called Jews as Reubenites, and that which we now call Judaism would have been known as Reubenism.

Now as in a tribal sense Abraham could not be a Jew, because in his days no people as Jews existed, so the law of Moses, not being given until within the fifth century after Abraham's time, and the term Jew, in relation to Judaism, not being established until within the ninth century, Abraham could not have been a Jew either in doctrine or name, and, therefore, was not a Jew by religion.

We now come, lastly, to show that "Abraham was not constituted a Jew by the Divine ordinance of circumcision."

Modern ethnologists and travellers tell us that at the present time, for sanitary reasons, some African and North American tribes, the Papuans, and some of the South Sea Islanders, circumcise. Will anyone, therefore, believe that these people are thereby constituted, by race or religion, Jews?

Dr. A. Clarke tells us that Herodotus says, "The Colchians, Egyptians, and Ethiopians have practised circumcision from the remotest period; and the Phœnicians and Syrians who inhabit Palestine also practise it." Are we to conclude, therefore, that these people are Jews?

It may be replied that these people only circumcise for sanitary reasons, and not as the observance of a Divine ordinance, and therefore they are not Jews.

But this objection is fully met by the case of Ishmael, who was circumcised when he was 13 years old, on the day that Abraham with his household were; and this was submitted to as a Divine ordinance. And Bishop Newton, and Dr. A. Clarke tell us that "not only do the Jews practise circumcision as a Divine ordinance, but the Arabians, who claim descent from Ishmael, do the same," and as a religious rite circumcise when they are 13 years old.

Would any Jew on these considerations accept these statements as sufficient evidence that the Arabians are Jews, and one with him in faith? Assuredly not.

The bare act of circumcision can no more make a man by faith a Jew, than the ceremony of baptism can of itself make a man in spirit a Christian.

Circumcision was a Divine institution, established nearly 500 years before Judaism, therefore Judaism, the "law of Moses," did not originate it. It passed down from the fathers and was incorporated in Judaism, just as baptism did not originate with the Christian dispensation, but passed down from the Jewish Church into the Christian. As the ordinance of baptism does not introduce a Christian into the Jewish Church because that Church used to baptize, so circumcision does not carry Judaism back to the fathers, simply because the Jews, as well as the fathers, circumcised. Our Lord, in John vii. 22, was very clear on this point, by separating that which was given by Moses, from that which belonged to, and had descended from, the fathers. "Moses gave unto you circumcision (not because it is of Moses, but of the fathers)."

It is therefore clearly demonstrable, that as neither Jews nor Judaism were known in Abraham's days, and that circumcision did not originate with either one or the other, that circumcision was not in the days of the patriarchs accepted or established as the sign of a Jew.

Digitized by Google

However much, therefore, appearances may lead us astray, it is very evident that if we act on our Lord's advice (John vii. 24), "Judge not according to the appearance, but judge righteous judgment," we shall clearly see that in no sense was Abraham a Jew.

FRESH EVIDENCE OF SPIRITUAL GOOD EFFECTED BY THE BELIEF IN OUR IDENTITY.

We are satisfied that the proof of the good our views have already done to the souls of men and women is everywhere abundant, and has only to be stated to silence our opponents. Those who may furnish us confidentially with cases, well authenticated, for publication, will be doing good service to God's truth. Such publication, of course, will respect the natural desire of those concerned, that their names, addresses, and condition in life should not be divulged.

One such case has just been sent to us, and a valuable one it is. Our informant writes in reference to the Rev. J. B. Clifford's letter to the Rev. Herbert Marriott, and the latter's comment thereon, published at pp. 50, 51, of No. 109 of our present volume. What he says is this:—"I wish your doubting Bristol clergyman had been with me the other day at this place, when a well-to-do man of our city told me with joyful tears that the Identity had brought his near relative from being a secular leader and lecturer, to the feet of Jesus. I would respectfully ask, Has the Rev. Mr. Clifford any fruit of this kind to show us?" We would repeat that question! How many secular leaders and lecturers has Mr. Clifford reclaimed and brought to the feet of Jesus?" We can produce one! and here is testimony that teaching which he calls "wickedness," which he publicly affirms leads to "ignorant, irreverent, and blasphemous treatment of God's Word," is nevertheless blessed by the Divine Author of that Word to bring a leader and a lecturer on the system called "Secularism" to love that Saviour whom hitherto this individual dishonoured and rejected! Such instances as these enable us to receive the strictures of opponents like the Rev. J. B. Clifford with great composure, knowing that God is blessing us in our endeavours to spread this great and glorious truth—the cause indeed of our Lord Jehovah-Jesus Himself! And no power in earth or hell shall or will be able to oppose us effectually, we are assured, for a single instant!

HOW THE KAFFIRS OR BANTU TRIBES OF SOUTH AFRICA REGARD ISRAEL.

Forwarded by L. P.

Many suppose the Kaffirs detest all Europeans, and will submit to no foreign masters.

"This language is inaccurate as regards their feelings towards British rule. It is just as regards, perhaps, many of their brutal chiefs, but not the tribes generally, who have learned to appreciate the rectitude and mildness of our rule. Even as regards the heads of the tribes, we have Moshesh, the great and sagacious Basuto chief, placing himself under British protection. Perhaps a still more decided proof of this native feeling may be gathered from the words of Moselekatze, the rude yet able chief of the Matabeles. 'These,' he said of the English, 'are the masters of the world. When the great men in the white man's country send their traders for the ivory, do you think they give me beautiful things in exchange because they could not take my ivory by force? They could come and take them by force and all my cattle also; and yet look at them, they are humble, and quiet, and easily pleased. The Englishmen are the friends of Moselekatze, and they are the masters of the world!'"* We believe that such impressions of our colonial policy are largely held among the Kaffir tribes, especially among those under our direct rule. It is by cultivating such feelings that our hold on Africa can alone be made secure and honourable, alike to the natives and ourselves.

* Mackenzie's "Three Years North of the Orange River."

MR. H. M. STANLEY ON AFRICA AS ISRAEL'S FUTURE INHERITANCE.

We re-publish the following letter of the great American traveller in Africa addressed to Mr. Jas. Bradshaw, of Manchester, as it appeared in the Manchester Courier some time since. If we mistake not, there is much Identity reference in it of a blind character of course, which it behoves us none the less to note and ponder on our way. The letter is as follows:—

Edinburgh, Nov. 17, 1878.

Dear Sir,—I have just received your letter, and have read your very interesting letter in the Courier. I am extremely glad to find that there is one man in England who does not only regard Africa with the eyes of a far-seeing political-economist, and a true patriot, but who also strives with his noblest energies to kindle interest among his countrymen in the sad and neglected continent. It is inspiring to see that the spirit of the old founders of England's colonies has not died in the mother country, and that the same vigour which animated the heroes of the Elizabethan age still exists. I wish others with means and energies would trouble themselves to cast up a little sum in arithmetic and try to calculate what the population of Great Britain will be, at the rate it has been increasing lately, in 1888, and how many factories for the manufacture of cotton will have been built in the same period in America and India, and how many markets which Great Britain now possesses will have been closed to it by the increasing prosperity and enterprise of Europe, America, Asia, and Australia. Remember that I am not one of those who think there is any fear of England's decadence. She is greater, better, and nobler than she ever was; but the fear is that this small world will be flooded with the fabrics of many other nations, and that England's millions of mechanics and artisans will have to compete under great disadvantages with the mechanics and artisans of many other ever-improving nations. Great Britain has taken a high stand with her free trade. Out of a magnanimous feeling due to her wealth and enterprise, culture and high civilisation, she preferred to be a pattern to the world of what a high-spirited country ought to be. Other nations accepted without thanks this magnanimity, prepared under the ægis of protection to take advantage without reciprocating the benefits granted to them. The consequence is that England has fostered in other nations the spirit of rivalry until it has become so great and ardent that it threatens to become a real danger. If you cast your eyes round the world, you will find that almost all the markets are the resorts of enterprising nations who are determined to underbid England. Circumstances are now very different from the period when England declared herself resolved to permit free trade. Peoples that she could then look down upon compassionately cannot be so regarded now. They must be regarded as rivals in every branch of trade which made England's name so great.

But there is one chance still left to this great mother and nurse of nations, and if she only bestirs herself in time, she may avert the evil which threatens her own sons, for hundreds of years yet. The over-production of which her people now complain, which causes so many hives of industry to be lying idle, will be removed, and the energies of all re-stimulated to regain the lost vantage ground she so grandly and so disinterestedly dispossessed herself. I mean that she should look to Africa—that "second India," which you have so aptly called it, but which I believe would before many years, so far as trade is concerned, be regarded as greater than India.

Therefore I urge you with a friendly advice to persevere in your efforts. Be not daunted by the coolness of thoughtless people. Think, as you write, of the growing millions and British sturdy sons, fields for whose energies, sinews, and brains should be sought and occupied before the despairing cry comes, "Too late, too late!"—Very truly yours,

Henry M. Stanley.

James Bradshaw, Esq.

In the great traveller's forecast of the future he errs, obviously from not knowing the coming destiny of those European nations whose rivalry he considers will be so fatal to our world-wide commerce. Had he known that these are to be cast into the vortex of the great Gentile earthquake for fifty years, while Israel and her company of nations with Manasseh (we trust, then, in confederation too) will be "in peace and be quiet, none making her afraid," he would not have anticipated for us a falling off in trade, which then in fact will be monopolised by Anglo-Saxon friendly hands.

Digitized by Google

It will be seen that Mr. Stanley calls Great Britain "the great mother and nurse of nations," reminding us of God's promise to Jacob—"A nation and a 'company' of nations shall be of thee"—and of that Magna Virum Mater she has so happily been termed. And he points also to the great Continent of Africa as a "Second India" to the British people. He sees therefore, as we have always done, that God has from the first designed that the down-trodden races of the sons of Ham should fall finally to the dominion of British Israel—an inheritance from the Lord, to have, to hold, to govern, and to enjoy for Christ. He sees we have to give the Africans the Gospel, to bring them to the true light, and by commerce with the vast masses of their uncivilised races to enrich our own people, and thus acquire, by the unlimited space Central Africa presents, a broad outlet for the countless multitudes of our own spawning population, who are looking anxiously for fresh localities as colonies, to relieve the terrible pressure which our increase makes at home.

We thank Mr. Stanley for his blind testimony; and, while we urge with him that our people should anticipate the early acquisition of Central Africa as part of their inheritance as Israel, we know quite well it never can be with us as he hints it may be—"Too late, too late!" Being Israel, God's chosen ones, we are under His guiding hand. He holds us by the right hand of His righteousness, and He holds us by ours as He condescends to assure us (Isa. xli. 10, 13). It never, therefore, can be too late or too early for us, His chosen nation! But "our times" in respect to Africa, as to all matters in which we are concerned and interested, are with Him who "keepeth Israel;" with OUR GOD, "who never slumbereth—never sleepeth!" (Ps. cxxi. 4).

"THE CANAANITES . . . . SHALL BE SCOURGES IN YOUR SIDES—THORNS IN YOUR EYES—AND SNARES UNTO YOU."

(JOSH. XXIII. 13; JUDGES II. 3).

LORD DUFFERIN'S remarks at Toronto on the "unaccountable exacerbation and recrudescence of party feuds and religious animosities" which have lately become so unpleasantly prominent in Canada were, like most of his observations, both well-timed and judicious. His earnest adjurations to both sides to eradicate this sort of bitterness from among them were indeed most necessary. Nothing is more extraordinary than the manner in which these old Irish quarrels, which, as Lord Dufferin so truly says, have more than once turned the flourishing city of Belfast into a battle-field, are perpetuated in America. There, where Germans of both creeds live harmoniously together and men of all races combine in a manner unknown elsewhere, the Irish alone seem to keep aloof for at least a generation from the general religious pacification. Evidently race has more to do with this than religion. A fight between Irishmen and men of Saxon blood is almost certain whenever a number of both are brought together, whether at home, in North America, or in our colonies in the Southern hemisphere. Only this morning we read that a most serious affray is reported between English and Irish navvies at Roydwood. The Irish, as usual, seem to have been the aggressors, and their weapons were of the customary miscellaneous assortment. Bludgeons, pokers (some red hot), and all kinds of heavy weapons, we read, were freely used. Many navvies were seriously injured, and when eleven of the Irishmen were arrested by a police force brought from Pontefract, their countrymen commenced firing.—Pall Mall Gazette, Oct. 8th, 1878.

We commend the above "blind testimony" of facts to our Identity to the attention of our opponents! Given the Irish Canaanite, what causes his virulent hatred and fierce pugnacity against his Anglo-Saxon brethren alone? "Race has more than religion to do with this," says the Pall Mall Gazette, and it is right; for the Anglo-Saxons being Israel, the Canaanite Irishman is constrained by God's prophetically declared will to be "a scourge in their sides, pricks in their eyes, and a snare to them," to vex them in the land wherein they dwell (Num. xxxiii. 55).

Review.

A Defence of the Anglo-Israel Christians from the Denunciations of the Rev. J. B. Clifford, Perpetual Curate of St. Matthew's, Bristol. By the Rev. H. Marriott, M.A., Curate of Amberley. Price fourpence. Plymouth: Mole, Printer, 27, Saltash-street.

THE above has been called for by the determined opposition of the Rev. J. B. Clifford to our views. Each one of the charges brought against us by the latter has been temperately and scholarly answered by our champion. To our mind the vindication is complete and crushing. We recommend this little pamphlet favourably to our readers' notice.

Correspondence.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

MY DEAR SIR,—In BANNER, No. 112, February 19th instant, there appears a communication from Rev. C. W. Hickson, bearing on the chronology of the Great Pyramid.

He concludes his letter with the words: "You may depend upon it, dear sir, that some great event will occur May 22nd, 1879 (1878·388), and that 6000 years of the world's history will close November 21st or 22nd, 1882. How solemn a thought! How blessed for the Lord's people!"

Now I was simply thunderstruck at his references to the present year, in that and preceding parts of his letter, inasmuch as I have been much troubled in my mind to find some other reference to it besides the one given in "Our Inheritance," p. 516, 3rd edit., as the length of the grand gallery at the longitudinal grooves in the fifth sides' overlapping. That length is given as 1878·4, whereas Mr. Hickson's calculations give 1878·388, or practically the same! Having now found other evidence pointing to the same date, I can no longer remain silent, but hasten to lay the fact before you and the readers of the BANNER.

1878·4 brings us to Monday, the 26th May next, and on that day, if I mistake not, Russia is to have completed her evacuation of the Turkish provinces! This fact is most astounding, and yet most comforting to the Lord's people. To any who may doubt, I would wish to say that the date 1878·4 must necessarily be a marked epoch. (1) Because the Great Pyramid distinctly draws attention to it, and that most unmistakably is it desired that our measurements should be accurate, for are not the grooves there to direct and check them? (2) Because that date is three and a half years anterior to the date 1881·9, another Pyramid date, or approximately such; and (3) Because the date already agrees with an occurrence of the highest importance to the peaceable settlement of the Eastern Question, to say nothing of any other (as yet) unforeseen occurrence it might point to. These points, I may say, settle the value and import of the date 1878·4 in my own mind. It has been said that we live in an age of surprises, but what can be said of this discovery? "Surprising" is scarcely the correct term to use. You and I have seen and learned too much of our God's all-wise providence for His people to be "surprised" at anything in connection with Him. But is not such a discovery intensely comforting to us in this our day? One's heart throbs with delight as one thing after another comes to the surface of our understandings, and our feelings overflow with our praises and shouts of joy at every fresh evidence of the near approach of the day of the Lord.

O Lord, hasten the day of Thy glory! Amen!

Yours most sincerely,
B. T. S.

Oldham, February 22, 1879.

A NEW ISRAELITE ASSOCIATION.

WE were glad to see the following in the Sunderland Daily Post, of February 27, 1879:—

THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL.—Mr. John Greig delivered a second lecture on this subject on Monday evening, to a large congregation in the Bible Christian chapel at New Herrington, Mr. Scott, Newbottle, presiding. The audience were very attentive, and evidently much interested. At the close, some questions were asked and answered. It is intended to form an association for the continuous study of the subject.

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements

(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O.O payable at Ludgate-circus.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed :—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

BANNER OF ISRAEL. VOL. II. Now ready, price 7s., of all Booksellers.

Now ready price 7s., post free 6d. extra.

THE SECOND VOLUME OF THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

This volume contains a large number of articles on our Identity with Lost Israel, by the best and most learned writers on the subject. Also many interesting papers on the Great Pyramid by Professor Piazzi Smyth, F.R.S.E., Astronomer-Royal for Scotland, Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A., Major H. A. Tracey, R.A., Charles Horner, Esq., and others. London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

DOUBLE NUMBERS DURING 1879.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT.

Owing to the increasing interest taken in the Identity movement, it is found necessary to occasionally enlarge our space to make room for the important papers constantly reaching the Editor. It has, therefore, been determined to issue Twelve Double Numbers during 1879, for which Twopence will be charged. The first of these series of Double Numbers was issued the first week in January, and one on each succeeding first week in the month during the year.

	£	s.	d.
Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free	0	7	6
Two copies (including Double Numbers) ...	0	12	4
Three " " " " ...	0	18	8
Four " " " " ...	1	6	2
Six " " " " ...	1	17	4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-Grand, London, to W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

"BANNER OF ISRAEL" FREE CIRCULATION FUND.

	£	s.	d.
M. A. E.	1	0	0
Mary M. James	0	5	0

The following are extracts from letters received, and will give some idea of the mode of distribution:

Highfields, Langham, Colchester, Essex.
March 5th, 1879.

DEAR SIR,—Many thanks for 100 BANNERS to hand this morning. As a lay preacher once a month at Stratford-St.-Mary's, Suffolk, I have brought the subject of our Identity with Lost Israel many times to the notice of my hearers. I am glad to have the BANNERS to distribute among them, as also among some labouring men we meet with on Friday evenings in Langham, to read the Bible and Identity works, and pray that our gracious God may bless us as a Nation, by pouring upon us all those rich blessings which He has promised (Jer. xxxi. 31; Heb. viii. 8). I hope and pray that the men and women of Israel will respond freely to your call for funds for the Free Circulation of the BANNER OF ISRAEL, that you may be able to sow it broadcast over the length and breadth of our land, that under the influence of the Divine Spirit, Britain's sons and daughters may awake to the knowledge of their high destiny and glorious privileges as the sons of the living God, the long-lost son, but now found; was dead, but alive again.

Allow me again to thank you for myself and daughters,
And remain, yours truly,
Mr. R. F. Banks. J. F. G.

FUNDS URGENTLY NEEDED to carry on this work.

Communications to be addressed to the Secretary of the "Banner of Israel Free Circulation Fund," Mr. R. Fergusson Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-st., London, E.C., to whom all remittances for this object should also be made, but NOT to the Editor of the BANNER—Philo-Israel.

Now ready, price One penny, post free 1½d. One dozen copies, post free 1s. 100 copies 6s., post free 7s.

THE IDENTITY OF THE BRITISH NATION WITH THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. THE CLUE TO THE EASTERN QUESTION. By C. W. E.
London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row

BOOKS, ETC.

THE GREAT PYRAMID. NOW READY, PHILO-ISRAEL'S NEW WORK, 56 pages, Illustrated with Diagrams, price 4d., post free 5d.

AN ELEMENTARY DIGEST or SKETCH OF THE CHIEF FACTS and TEACHINGS of the GREAT PYRAMID of EGYPT; adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific. By PHILO-ISRAEL; together with Original Papers by the following leading Pyramidists, republished mostly from the BANNER OF ISRAEL (by kind permission of the proprietor)—viz., Professor Piazzi Smyth, the Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A., Charles Horner, Esq., and Major H. A. Tracey, R.A. Being a pamphlet by five authors (a Pyramid number).

Opinion of Mr. Charles Horner, regarding the above work, after perusal of the same:—"I think your design of the Pyramid pamphlet excellent. I know well that it is a book urgently needed, since, under God's blessing, it will, I feel convinced, convert many to Christ. Your part Philo-Israel's) I deem unexceptionable. It is both terse and understandable to the many, which is the great object you have had in view. I should like to see thousands circulated amongst our intelligent artisans, and hope God will raise some to do this."—C. HORNER. Dec. 12, 1878.
London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

Second edition, sixth thousand.
Fancy paper covers, 6d.; cloth, gilt lettered, flush, 1s.

THE HISTORY OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL: How They Were Lost, and How They Were Found. Told for the children. By PHILO-ISRAEL. Adapted for use by parents, Sunday School and other teachers, with questions on the chapters added.

For favourable notices of this work by Professor Piazzi Smyth, John T. Gott, Esq., and others, see handbills. W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

"The History of the House of Israel—told for the children—is a very valuable addition to our children's libraries. It gives a clear account of all the chief points of interest, in language suited to the comprehension of children, and ought to be in the hands of every mother and teacher who believes in our Identity with Israel. It supplies a want I have long felt as the mother of a large family."

NOW READY, Price 1d.; post free, 1½d.

GOD'S LOVE FOR ISRAEL, A GUARANTEE THAT HE WILL FULFIL HIS PROMISES TO ISRAEL. By JOHN GILDER SHAW.

Price 6d.; or with illustrative map, 8d.

BRITAIN (OR ISRAEL) THE FIFTH AND LAST, AND THE UNCONQUERABLE EMPIRE. By JOHN GILDER SHAW.

Price 3d.; post free, 3½d.

CHRONOLOGICAL CHART OF BRITISH VICTORIES OVER THE CONTINENTAL POWERS, ranging from the battle of Cressy (1346), to our last victory, the taking of Sebastopol, Sept. 8, 1855. Arranged by J. G. SHAW, of Leeds.

"We trust Mr. Shaw's labour in preparing this paper may be appreciated by the public and be largely sold."—Banner of Israel.

Shortly will pe published, price 6d.

RESULTS OF ISRAEL'S OBEDIENCE. A review of the successive steps which have led to the present condition of Britain (or Israel), the Fifth and Last Empire.

London: Published by Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; and may be had of the Author, 20 Park-row, Leeds, and of all booksellers.

Just Published, price 3d.

EPISCOPACY, NOT ESTABLISHMENT, THE BANE OF THE NATIONAL CHURCH. By A LAY MEMBER OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND. W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row; and the Protestant Tract Society, 17, Buckingham-st., Strand.

DEAFNESS CURED, NOISES IN THE EARS, &c.
SPECIAL OFFER TO THE DEAF.

THE REV. E. J. SILVERTON having discovered that there are tens of thousands who are unable to obtain his 11s. Box of Aurial Remedy which has cured so many persons of Deafness and Noises in the Ears, &c., begs now to offer a 2s. 6d. Box of the Medicine, so as to put it within the reach of all. This arrangement is specially made to meet the deaf world. With every box of medicine will be presented the Rev. E. J. Silverton's "Health Advocate," containing valuable advice and information that everyone ought to know. Post Office Orders for 2s. 6d. to E. J. SILVERTON, Minister of Exeter Hall Church, Nottingham, or stamps, 2s. 8d.

WOOLS! WOOLS! WOOLS! Cheapest and Best. White and Black Berlin, Single and Double, 3s. 6d. per pound. Best quality Ice Wools, all Colours, 5½. per ounce ball. All other Wools at proportionate prices. Shetland, Andalusian, Fleecy, and Bonne Mere Wools. Welsh, Scotch, Peacock Victoria, and other Yarns. Crewel Filoselle Silk.
M. WHELLENS, Wholesale and Retail Wool Warehouse, 3, 5, and 6, QUEEN'S TERRACE, CAMDEN ROAD, LONDON, N.

Send for Price List, forwarded post free.

MISCELLANEOUS.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

Temporary Office:—
20, WARWICK LANE, LONDON, E.C.
President:—
Vice-Presidents:—
ADMIRAL DUNN, Weston-Super-Mare.
CAPTAIN E. WEBSTER, Stirling.
Rev. A. J. J. CACHEMAILLE, M.A., Vicar of S. Mary's, Oldham.
Dr. J. M. GRANT, Surgeon-General, Camp, Aldershot.
Chairman of Committee:—
Mr. E. W. BIRD (Philo-Israel), Bristol.
Committee:—
MAJOR-GENERAL WM. HILL, Bath.
COLONEL BENTINCK, Grosvenor-square, W.
CAPTAIN BAYLY, R.N., Streatham, S.W.
Mr. JOHN S. ANDERSON, Upper Norwood, S.E.
Mr. W. BRAIKENBRIDGE, South Norwood, S.
Mr. ROBERT BANKS, London, E.C.
Mr. BENTINCK CANNEY, Lewisham, S.E.
Mr. FREDERICK CLIFT, B.A., Upper Norwood, S.E.
Mr. JOHN T. FLETCHER, Upper Norwood, S.E.
Rev. F. R. A. GLOVER, M.A., St. James, W.
Mr. H. L. GUERRIER, Tooting, S.W
Mr. W. H. GUEST, London, E.C.
Mr. CHARLES HORNER, Mortlake, S.W.
Mr. W. W. INCE, Douglas, Isle of Man.
Mr. DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, J.P., St. John's-wood, N.W.
Mr. H. H. PAIN, Bromley, Kent, S.E.
Mr. W. H. PETERS, J.P., Exeter.
Dr. H. HODSON RUGG, St. John's-wood, N.W.
Mr. J. L. WOOD, New Southgate, N.
(With power to add to their number.)
Treasurer:—
Dr. H. HODSON RUGG, 1, Grove-road, St. John's-wood, N.W.
Hon. Secretary:—
REV. JAMES BILLINGTON.

This Association has been established to bind in closer union the many friends who rejoice in having a portion with the long Lost Tribes of the House of Israel; also to extend the knowledge of the truth that the Anglo-Saxon races are now identified with those Lost Tribes of the House of Israel. These objects, it is thought, will be best accomplished by means of Drawing Room and Public Meetings, by Sermons, Lectures, Bible Readings, by the diffusion of Literature upon the subject, and by such other ways and means as the Committee may from time to time determine.

The Honorary Secretary or the Treasurer will be glad to receive the names of friends wishing to join the Association or to subscribe to its Funds.

Members' Annual Subscriptions to be not less than 2s. 6d. per annum.

Donations and Subscriptions are urgently needed to carry on the work.

Contributions are much needed for the Free Circulation Fund of the Association, which disseminates works by VARIOUS WRITERS on the Identity Question.

Friends who will arrange for, or assist in, the arrangements for Lectures in their respective localities, under the auspices of the Association, are requested to address the Hon. Secretary at the office of the Association, from whom all particulars, and every assistance for the effective carrying out of the same, may be obtained.

J. BILLINGTON, Hon. Sec.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION. The last of a course of FIVE LECTURES will be delivered in Devonport-street Chapel, Commercial-road, E. (opposite Arbour-squ are), on Tuesday, April 1st, by the Rev. J. BILLINGTON. Subject: "Objections to Anglo-Israel Theory Considered." Chair to be taken at 8 o'clock each evening.
ADMISSION FREE. COLLECTIONS.

LEWISHAM ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION: Auxiliary to the METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

President:—
BENTINCK CANNEY, George-lane, Lewisham.
Vice-President:—
S. A. TUCKER, Esq., "Pettaugh," Lee Park
Treasurer:—
Mr. H. SMITH, George-lane, Lewisham.
Hon. Secretary:—
Mr. F. Marriott, George-lane, Lewisham.
Committee:—
Mr. H. H. VAIN, Bromley, Kent.
Mr. J. BURROWS, Beckenham, Kent.
Mr. W. EVANS, Plumstead, Kent.
Mr. H. STEPHENSON, Woolwich, Kent.

The Committee, at the request of friends, have published, at considerable expense, the inaugural lecture delivered by Mr. E. Hine, in the Hall, Hither Green-lane, Lewisham. The first edition is now ready, and a speedy sale is anticipated. Price 4d., postage, ½d.
London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

ARE THE ENGLISH PEOPLE THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL? By PHILO-ISRAEL. Price 4d.
London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, 5, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, APRIL 2, 1879.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. III. No. 119. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, APRIL 9, 1879. [ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
Africa	149
Which Is It? By William Burnett Coates, Home Office, C.D.	150
St. Paul on Our Identity with Israel. Part II	151
Time Indications of the Grand Gallery. Part III. By James Simpson	152
Coincidence Only, or Verification?	153
The Earl of Beaconsfield and His Works.—Part III.	153
Israel's Birth, Marriage, and Death Rate Compared with other Gentile Nations	154
An Italian Newspaper Honours Her Majesty Queen Victoria	155
Epidemics and the Stars	155
Correspondence	155

AFRICA.

To whom will fall the possession of the mighty Continent of Africa? To whom but to the House of Israel—the British—as we lately showed? The kingdom of the Lord, with which the British Empire, as His people Israel of the Ten Tribes is indissolubly connected, is destined to be coterminous with whatsoever is "under the whole heaven" (Dan. vii. 18, 22, 27). As Africa is placed geographically within the locality so described, it follows that it is included in the territorial boundaries of Israel, or the British Empire, and must, in the final settlement, be ours. Do not facts even now point that way? What nation has the African "Gates" which we have passed in review in our series of articles on their "Geography?" Who "possesses" the Cape of Good Hope, Natal, the Transvaal, Cape Coast Castle, Sierra Leone, St. Helena, Ascension, Malta, Aden, Perim, Mombasa, Mauritius, and Seychelles? What Power has a gigantic empire in the extreme South of Africa, and is advancing its boundaries North, East, and West continually? The British! These wondrous islanders of the far West have been gifted by their God with the supremacy of the sea, and, by virtue of that gift, hold Malta, Perim, Aden, Socotra (all African Gates), and dominate the whole Eastern seaboard of the mighty Continent by reason of their possession of India and Ceylon. Their hand is already heavy on the land of Egypt, and when the Turkish Empire has ceased to be, the suzerainty of the land of the Khedive must fall—who can doubt it?—to these same British Israelites, with the Great Gate as well. There remains the question—rather a large one—regarding Central Africa, which Stanley has just explored, thus following in the steps of Livingstone. His report of the capabilities of the country is worth reading, and we extract what follows from the Bristol Times and Mirror of some months ago. It remarks:—

The large map published in yesterday's Telegraph shows plainly the great importance of Stanley's discoveries in Central Africa. Dr. Livingstone had followed up the rivers from Lake Bangwealo, or Lake Bemba, to the Luapula River, this to Lake Mweru, and from this the Lualaba River, as far as Nyangwe. Taking up the doctor's task at this point, Stanley has followed the watercourse for eight or ten times the distance that Livingstone did. From the coast to Nyangwe, Stanley estimates the navigable waterway at 1,000 miles, and the available channels of the large affluents leading North and South at another 1,200 miles, while the head waters of the river from Lake Bangwealo to Manyema will no doubt give 800 or 900 miles of additional waterway. Altogether here are about 3,000 miles of nature-made road suddenly opened into the heart of Africa, interrupted only by two main breaks of rapid and cataract, where, however, the portages will not be difficult when once trading stations are established, and steam vessels have been placed on the upper and lower reaches. A vast new country, rich in all tropical wealth, will then be brought into the family of mankind. Mr. Stanley in his last letter warns us that we must expect to find the mighty waterway now discovered become a political question in time. As yet no one seems to have put forth the right of control. Portugal claims it because she discovered its mouth; but England, America, and France refuse to recognise her right, and express their determination, in plain terms, to dispute her assuming possession of the river. As "the Livingstone" is, and will be, the grand highway of commerce to West Central Africa, and the possessor of it, despite the cataracts, would absorb to himself the trade of the whole of the enormous basin behind, which extends across 13 degrees of longitude and over 14 degrees of latitude, it would be politic to settle the question immediately. If our Colonial Office should look after the grand waterway discovered by its own intrepid travellers, we suppose the Gladstones, and Lowes, and Freemans, who object to any increase of our empire, would raise a storm about it.

A most admirable work on Central Africa (lately published) by R. D. Young, R.N., on "Nyassa: a Journal of Adventures while Exploring Lake Nyassa," &c. is very apposite to our present train of thought. The gallant explorer says of our countrymen and their work for Central Africa in the suppression of the accursed slave trade that:—

The natives were always delighted to hire themselves out as carriers, and to trade with their best friends, "the Ingerèzè." The cause of this strong attachment to "the Ingerèzè" is, as is here pointed out, the contrast drawn in the minds of the natives between their experience of the English and their experience of the Arabs and the Portuguese, whose legitimate trading with them has not only been marked by cheating, trickery, and treachery of all kinds and degrees, but because the Arabs and Portuguese have made merchandise of their wives and children, and have been the principal slave merchants of Central Africa. These Mr. Young found actively plying their infamous and shameless traffic on the waters of the Lake Nyassa. The honesty and kindliness, and, above all, the anti-slavery proclivities of Mr. Young's predecessors towards the natives, is rapidly bearing the best of fruit, in producing the most friendly relations between "the Ingerèzè" and the inhabitants of Central Africa :—

Digitized by Google

"There is (writes our author) a young generation growing up which will yet hand down to others the tale told by their fathers of the men who wrenched the slave-sticks from their necks, who set their mothers free from the cruel thongs of the Portuguese slave-drivers, who stood out the hard days of famine and destruction with them, and who, when the time came, laid down their lives amongst them. No wonder that my companions found a hearty welcome, a host of willing allies, and, if needs be, ten thousand to rally round them ; but may they ever be spared the experiences of those who paved the way for them, and past whose resting-places they were now sailing!"

Mr. Young bears witness "to the affection and honour with which the British are welcomed in the heart of Africa. Every spot of Central African soil where English men and English women have found a grave is most sacredly cherished by the natives, and preserved with the most religious care." Do not our readers see that this gratitude for British kindness in suppressing the slave trade is binding the poor Central African in respect and love to our country, and this is the means the LORD is using for the transfer to our keeping of Central, Western, and Eastern Africa as well, with the love, affection, and consent of all its inhabitants, when the time shall have arrived for the declaration of "Our Identity," and the investiture of our race (as Israel) with the promised "Kingdom"-glories yet in store for us, as the people of the LORD Jehovah? "Central Africa is one of the most fertile countries in the world," and its productiveness is unbounded. As the British have been the great discoverers of this hitherto-unknown land, it is desirable our race should continue to "act as pioneers in the development of the mighty resources of the Continent."

We, as Israel, have to furnish to its perishing inhabitants the precious Word of life. As owners of a large portion of the South, and likely soon to have a deep interest in the government of Egypt too, we cannot afford to let the position we have already gained in the heart of Africa be ceded to other nations. It is ours by God's gift already ; and ere long we expect to see British supremacy as decided in Central as it is in Southern Africa ; in Egypt as it is in the Gate of Egypt—namely, the Suez Canal. We conclude our notice of the subject by quoting the words of a local contemporary on the possibilities in store for us in regard to British occupation of Egypt—words which seem to us remarkable, and as true as striking. The writer said, speaking some time since of our hold of the Canal, and the need of our power and authority being felt in Egypt to enable us to maintain that hold :—

Supposing the thing said and done, then, and that the successes of unscrupulous Russia had obliged us not to be particularly "squeamish," but to strike surely and swiftly for our own safety, what a new and interesting field would Egypt offer for British enterprise and British interests—the interests, by the way, to which, according to Mr. Gladstone, we ought not to give a second thought. "Had Acre fallen, I should have changed the face of the world," said Napoleon in his conversations at St. Helena, and, with the instincts of a born statesman as well as warrior, he doubtless saw the paramount political as well as strategical importance of HAVING THE KEY OF THE GREAT GATE OF THE EAST, and we cannot think that the head of the English Cabinet is less alive to the value of the situation than the wonderful Frenchman. It is a situation so manifestly advantageous from an imperial point of view, that we can imagine it suggesting the idea of universal dominion to Sesostris, if the story of that great monarch be more than a historical myth. Not only, too, in a political and strategical, but in a material sense, what a marvellous appanage would the fruitful land of the Pharaohs be for Englishmen. What a field for improvement, for commerce, for energy, for capital, and for high scientific farming is presented by those eleven thousand square miles of cultivable land which lie at each side of the mighty Nile, between the Nubian and Arabian Deserts! "Egypt," says the Father of History, "is the gift of the Nile." But how immeasurably beyond all that Herodotus could dream of, would Englishmen in possession add to the value of that gift! English capacity and English capital both crowding to a scene for their employment, so convenient, so accessible, and so easily at hand, would, in a few years, raise it in industry, in wealth, and in arts beyond what was known at any period of its past history.

A curious comment is afforded on these words by the crisis through which Egypt has lately, and is now, passing. The state of things there will never mend, we believe, till Egypt has "a Saviour and a Great One" sent to deliver them (Isa. xix. 20). That Saviour and Deliverer, we think, can only be God's honoured instrument for the material and spiritual regeneration of the land of Ham, His chosen people Israel—the British ; for "Israel shall blossom and bud, and fill the face of the world"—therefore Egypt too—"with fruit"—true Gospel, saving fruit (Isa. xxvii. 6).

WHICH IS IT?

BY WILLIAM BURNETT COATES, HOME OFFICE, C.D.

THE Rock, a very excellent "weekly," whose services to the nation at this eventful juncture in its history are most important, save in its peculiar craze of Hades, will have it that the unequalled position in prosperity, power, possessions, wealth, dominion over many countries, accorded to Great Britain (herself a company of nations) are blessings bestowed by "The Great King," because of her glorious and grand protest at her memorable Reformation, when she became a new nation, "born in a day," and shook off (D.V.), never to wear again, the trammels of "the man of sin," taking the precious Word of God for her guide, to the exclusion of traditionary fables inimical to it.

On the other hand, THE BANNER OF ISRAEL, also a worthy "weekly," which is winning its editorial spurs bravely, holds that Great Britain is Protestant, possessing all, and much more than here enumerated, especially in being a manifest blessing to other nations, because her people, although, as yet, for the most part, blind to the fact of their Israelitish origin, are the veritable descendants of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and, therefore, heirs of the promises recorded in the Book of Genesis. In other words, that they are the Lost Tribes of Israel, in reference to whom our blessed Lord said : "I am not sent but unto the lost sheep of the House of Israel."

This two-phased problem, fairly stated, would give rise to a pertinent question—viz., If Britain is crowned with special blessings above all empires ever known because she is Reformed and Protestant, nationally eschewing the teachings and principles of "the man of sin," why is it that the German Empire, "the cradle of the Reformation," and of Protestantism, which gave martyrs many to satiate the sanguinary principles of the Papacy—why is it that it is not also an empire of world-wide dominion, &c. ? Why are not Denmark, Switzerland, and Holland equally favoured ? Surely they protested, and protesting, Reformed; "resisted unto blood" nationally! yet Great Britain is "the head and not the tail of the nations!"

It is true Germany is a great and a noble empire ; the first amongst military Powers ; but her borders are bounded by the frontiers of "Fatherland." True her sword was instrumental to retake the lifted prey from Papal France ; and, as solemnly, and faithfully acknowledged by its venerable Kaiser, it was a restitution of right at the hand of the God whom he loves. Nevertheless, neither Germany, nor the other protesting countries, have the palpable God-gifts of possessions, wealth and power of our loved land—all so marvellously in accord with the oath-confirmed promises of Israel's God to His chosen people; and all of which, in their historical fulfilment, are so plainly developed in the annals of the British people.

Digitized by Google

The details of Great Britain's unique position, derived from the Royal favours of "The Great King," her possessions, wealth, power, rule, and their continuing enlargement and preservation, render her remarkable in the records of mankind. "A company of nations," simply spreading over the surface of the globe; and gradually, but surely, possessing the earth; and enjoying the riches of the Gentiles; the mistress of the seas—the sea queen—whose flag is everywhere, even flying above the gates of her enemies, whose rôle never flags, and on whose dependencies "the red-sun" never sets; borrowing from no nation, lending to all; her children subject to no rule but her own, and her power daily issuing from the Divine fountain of love; is she not in everything, especially in her missionary efforts, and diffusion of the Holy Scriptures, evidently supremely honoured, and unmistakably made a blessing to all nations?

These distinctive marks of the Divine favour are the very gist of the unconditional promises, in connection with other apparent Identifications, given to Abraham and his seed; and are foreshadowed in the tribal characteristics, as declared by Israel to his sons when upon his death-bed; the declarations notably regarding Ephraim's portion, pointedly put forth, may be clearly traced in the veri-similitude existing between the historic rôle of Great Britain and the sage's forecast of his grandson's tribal career.

The facts that may be gleaned from the pages of the prophets, from Isaiah to Malachi, give full assurance that Israel, as distinguished by them from the Two Jewish Tribes, should be lost as a nation in name, religion, records, characteristics, knowledge of origin, then be called "no people!" and should afterwards be called by a new name which "the mouth of the Lord should name." This new name was revealed at Antioch, when the followers of the Crucified One were called "Christians;" and it is the highly prized name of the British people to-day—a new name, named by the mouth of the Lord, Christian, and protesting Christians, despite the new-fangled fawners on the revealed "man of sin."

All these considerations connected with the similitude existing between the Abrahamic promises and the unfoldings of British history, tend strongly to lead to the inevitable conclusion that the British are Hebrews; and that they are Christians, and protesters against that which dishonours the Lord their God, because they are the children of promise—the seed of Abraham—and not because they are simply protesters; the latter is but the complement of the former.

Britain's time-honoured, world-known, and cherished Protestant principles are but an outcome, the sure signs of the new covenant which the Lord has made with Israel in "the grace and truth that came by Jesus Christ," to signify a holy allegiance that ranges her protesting people on His side, to oppose beneath its ample banner the onslaughts of Antichrist against the beloved Messiah.

If this is not so, perhaps this cursory view of the subject implied in "Which is it?" will induce some riper and closer thinker than the writer to examine and elucidate more fully the important question, and thereby confer a benefit on the readers of the two "worthy weeklies."

Feb. 9, 1879.

NOTICE.—We are requested to intimate to our friends that the first Annual Meeting of the METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION will, God willing, be held on Monday Evening, May 19th, 1879, at 7 p.m., in Exeter Hall (Lower Hall).—ED.

MR. BANKS has just published, in neat pamphlet form, the Rev. Joseph Wild's Essay on "Manasseh and the United States." The price is 2d.; or, post free, 2½d.

ST. PAUL ON OUR IDENTITY WITH ISRAEL.

(Continued from page 141.)

PART II.

IN our last paper we put on record the substance of the Rev. C. W. Hickson's comment on Romans iv. 9—25, as viewed in the light of the Identity. We found that in that passage St. Paul clearly drew the distinction between the two Houses of Israel—those of his own day under the law and Judaism, and those of the other House, the uncircumcised ones, sons of Abraham, the destined heirs of the world, through the righteousness of faith (and therefore, through Christianity)—that is, the multitudinous Anglo-Saxon Israelites of these latter days. We now turn to another passage by the same inspired apostle (expounded also by our rev. brother) writing to a true remnant of scattered Israel of the Ten Tribes, termed in the Epistle itself "The Israel of God" (Galatians vi. 16), as distinguished from those who, not being of that race, yet "walk according to the rule of Jesus Christ." The portion of God's Word we allude to, is Galatians iv. 21—31; the apostle here appealed to the "backsliding Israel" he was addressing, of whom, for their Ritualistic practices, "he stood in doubt." The Galatians wanted to be under the law, and St. Paul, almost in despair, asked them, since they had that inclination, "whether they knew what the law really was?" "Do ye not hear the law?" he asked. To point his teaching, the great apostle then propounded to the wilful Galatian Christians an allegory. The whole of what followed was meant to be, and was in fact, a parable, or illustration of a great hidden truth, thinly veiled by the word-picture he employed to teach.

"Abraham," he said, "had two sons." These two sons, therefore, were living flesh and blood literal brethren, the offspring of one literal man. One of these sons was the bondwoman's child, the other the heir of the free woman. The bondwoman's son was born after the flesh, representing, in the allegory, Mount Sinai, gendering to bondage; and that was Abraham's bondslave Agar. But, added St. Paul (so that no one could possibly mistake his meaning), this Agar is in the same category with, or "answers to, Jerusalem that now is," the Jerusalem of St. Paul's days (A.D. 58), where the Jews, the Mosaic ritual and their form of religion were at that time found. These Jews, represented by Agar, Mount Sinai, and the then Jerusalem, were, St. Paul said, in "bondage" with the system he was depicting to them under the figure he employed. And with what other race of men was the apostle thus comparing them? Men of the Hebrew stock, these last must have been, for they were the antitype of the second son of Abraham; they were men of such a character and description, that they were "free," and antitypes of the Jerusalem which is from above, "the mother of us all." The mother—that is, of those Galatians—St. Paul was addressing—not Jews, but nomade, outcast Israelites; and mother too of St. Paul himself, "an Israelite," "a man of the Tribe of Benjamin" of the Ten Tribes! What race was that which answered this description? They must have been Hebrews, flesh and blood brethren of the Jews then in bondage, yet belonging not to Jerusalem, and the Mosaic ritual in vogue in St. Paul's days in Jerusalem, but men apparently Gentiles, free in Christ, whose aspirations were from above. These could be none other than Christianised Israelites of the outcasted Ten-Tribed Gentilized Lo-Ammi House, then mingled with the Gentiles, freed from the trammels of the Mosaic ritual, Christ's freed-men and servants henceforth (1 Corinthians vii. 21, 22). Does St. Paul in his next words give any confirmation of this new view? Certainly he does! For what said he? This: "FOR it is written, Rejoice, thou barren that bearest not; break forth and cry, thou that travailest not, for the desolate hath many more children than she which hath an husband" (verse 27). This was, as our readers know, a quotation from Isaiah liv. 1—a chapter which, without a shadow of a doubt, relates to the Ten Tribes of Israel in their Lo-Ammi desolate condition, the cast-off wife, yet re-married to the Lord (verse 5), inheriting the Gentiles; afflicted, yet splendidly comforted by the Lord; a war-power of the first rank, protected by the God of Israel; His servants, whose is the righteousness of faith, since He declares Himself its Author: "Their righteousness is of ME, saith the LORD" (verse 17). The argument of St. Paul therefore in Galatians iv. 26, 27, concludes the matter beyond cavil, and proves decisively that the second "free" son of Abraham of his parable, was the outcast Ephraim of the prophets, the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel, the people we now know to be the British nation. These are the children of "the promise," as Isaac was (Galatians iv. 28). St. Paul ranks himself as one of them, and those he was addressing he declares are of the same race. They are those, he adds, who are "Children of the free woman," as contra-distinguished from the Jews, whom he already, in his allegory, points out to be Jerusalem that then was "in bondage with her children." The Galatian free men are, he shows, of another branch of the Abrahamic stock, the seed of Isaac—those of whom it was said, "In Isaac shall thy seed be called,"—the "Isaac-Sûna" or Saxons. And finally, ver. 30 proves that their's is the heirship, that "of the world" (Rom. iv. 13), as well as that which is "with Christ," as His "joint-heir," nay, the heirs of God (Romans viii. 17), are the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel—the British. These are Isaac's sons, who are Christ's freemen, the spiritual Christian nation, the children of the promise, whose it will be to be baptized with the Spirit, to have the new covenant blessing, and be recognised as the "righteous nation which keepeth the truths" (Isaiah xxvi. 2). Here, then, is a second instance of St. Paul's careful discrimination between "Israel" the blessed, and Judah now, for a time, under curse. And we are satisfied that other portions of the great apostle's writings, if as carefully examined, will be found to yield the like results.

Digitized by Google

(To be continued.)

TIME INDICATIONS OF THE GRAND GALLERY.

(Continued from page 136.)

PART III.

UPON the whole, the evidence seems strongly in favour of the dates we have assumed; and it may now be added, that the terminal date of the grand gallery—1881·6 years from the Nativity, or 1848 years exactly from the Ascension—comes out May 6th, 1882.

It will be observed, that from the Ascension to the era of the Hegira, July 16, A.D. 622, are just 588 years (12 jubilees of 49 years); and that from the Ascension to 1882, or, equally, from the Nativity to the revolutionary and Papally disastrous year, A.D. 1848, the interval is also a Sabbatic one = 22 periods of 84 years, or 11 of 168 years (24 × 7). These multiples of 7 years, and especially of 7 times 12 years, have a profound meaning: they are interwoven with the history of Israel; and the duration of the kings of Judah, and of Solomon's Temple are especially marked by them.

The Great Pyramid has not yet been proved to mark definitely any epoch of sacred history between the Exodus from Egypt and the birth of Christ; but the former of these two events it does mark, or is believed to do so, in a very definite way indeed—namely, by the breaking away, sharply and suddenly, of the upward or ascending system of passages from the downward course of the entrance shaft, which latter proceeds onward, at the same descending angle, for upwards of 3,000 inches beyond, and finally loses itself in the unhewn rock of the "bottomless" subterranean vault. What date, then, does this point of departure give for the Exodus? Apparently B.C. 1543; and thus—

The full floor-length of this first ascending passage, from the mean of four measures by Piazzi Smyth, will be found to be 1543·9 British inches; and when due correction is made for the error of the measuring-rod employed (which we assume to have been throughout rod "100A"), becomes 1544·1470 British = 1542·6044 Pyramid inches.

The difficulties in the way of measuring this passage were, however, greatly complicated by the presence of the portcullis blocks which fill up its lower parts; and if we therefore assume 1542½ inches as the safest approximation to the true length, it will be seen that the Exodus, according to the testimony of this passage, must have happened in the year B.C. 1543, and about the spring equinox of that year, which is just 1542½ years antecedent to the date already fixed for our Lord's Nativity.

How is this date supported or otherwise by Scripture? In the margin of our Bibles we find the dedication of Solomon's Temple placed in the year 1004, or perhaps 1005, B.C.—i.e., 1000 years before the date there assumed for the Nativity. If we retain the 1000 years, but date them from September, B.C. 1, instead of B.C. 4 or 5, we shall differ less from our marginal chronologists than they do from other equally respectable authorities; and shall find further, that from the founding of the Temple to the birth of Christ, there are 1008 years = 30 Immanuel days = 12 × 12 × 7, or 144 Sabbatisms of years; the 144th Sabbatism (counting backwards) being that which the Temple occupied in building.

Now, the foundation of the Temple was laid in the 4th year of Solomon's reign, in the 2nd day of the second month—i.e., in spring. Adding together, therefore, 3½ years of Solomon, 40½ of David, and 40 of Saul, we place the beginning of Saul's reign in the spring or early summer (1 Sam. xii. 17) of B.C. 1093. It is interesting to note that from the setting up of the monarchy over Judah, to its destruction by Nebuchadnezzar, B.C. 589, was exactly 6, and to Christ exactly 13, periods of 84 years; and that the first Temple lasted just 5 similar periods = 420 years.

In 1 Kings vi. 1, we are told that Solomon began to build the Temple "in the 480th year after the children of Israel were come out of the land of Egypt." This is generally supposed to mean "from the date of the Exodus;" but the expression "were come" may with more propriety refer to the date of their settlement in Canaan. This settlement, or the division of the land, was begun in the 7th year after the passage of Jordan, but may well have taken 7 years to accomplish; so that we may reckon the 480 years to commence about 54 years after the Exodus from Egypt. Hence 480 + 54 years added to B.C. 1009, in the spring of which year the Temple was founded, bring us to the spring of B.C. 1543, the Pyramid date for the Exodus.

Again, in Acts xiii. 20, it is written, "And after that (the division of Canaan) He gave unto them judges by the space of 450 years, until Samuel the prophet." There seems no obstacle to dating these 450 years from the Exodus, as well as the 40 years of verse 18. In that case, 450 years added to the date of Saul's accession, B.C. 1093, bring us, as before, to B.C. 1543. And thus the Pyramid and the Bible are found in perfect harmony, as indeed they must be if they are the creation of the same Divine mind to whom all things were known from the beginning.

The numbers in the Book of Judges are in no way opposed to this reasoning. After the death of Joshua and of the elders that outlived him, and "who had seen all the great works that the Lord did for Israel," the people fell into idolatry and served Baalim. "And the Lord sold them into the hand of Chushan-rishathaim . . . . eight years." The "elders" referred to here must have been under, but not much under, 20 years at the time of the Exodus, since all above that age died in the wilderness; and their lives might extend to 95 or 100 years, or to 40 years after the entrance into Canaan; from which time the first servitude of 8 years may be dated. Thus we have:—

Digitized by Google

From Exodus to Passage of Jordan	40	years
Thence to first servitude . . .	40	„
Duration of first servitude . . .	8	„	(Judges iii. 8)
The land had rest	40	„	(Judges iii. 11)
Second servitude	18	„	(Judges iii. 14)
The land had rest (till 4th servitude*)	80	„	(Judges iii. 30)
Fourth servitude	7	„	(Judges vi. 1)
The land rested	40	„	(Judges viii. 28)
Abimelech reigned	3	„	(Judges ix. 22)
Tola judged Israel	23	„	(Judges x. 2)
Jair judged Israel	22	„	(Judges x. 3)
Fifth servitude	18	„	(Judges x. 8)
Jephthah judged Israel	6	„	(Judges xii. 7)
Ibzan judged Israel	7	„	(Judges xii. 9)
Elon judged Israel.	10	„	(Judges xii. 11)
Abdon judged Israel	8	„	(Judges xii. 14)
Sixth servitude, & judgeship of Eli	40	„	(Judges xiii. 1) (1 Sam. iv. 18)
Samuel judged Israel (estimated)	40	„
Total to Saul	450	years as before.

Again, the "300 years" mentioned in Judges xi. 26, date from the arrival of Israel in the Plains of Moab 39 years after the Exodus. Hence we have 39 + 300 + interval from Jephthah to Saul, 111 years ; total = 450.

JAS. SIMPSON.

Edinburgh, March 14th, 1879.

(To be continued.)

COINCIDENCE ONLY, OR VERIFICATION?

ANGLO-ISRAEL truth, though derided in some quarters, receives many wonderful confirmations. On every hand there is concurrent testimony as to its Scriptural basis. As there was in the minds of men, just before the Saviour's birth, a general impression that some great event was about to happen, so now there is a wide-spread belief that events of mighty import are close at hand. Not only is this belief manifested in the writings of those calling themselves by the name of Israel, but in the writings of astrologers, and men of different schools of thought. Assuredly, we are on the threshold of revelation. God grant that we may be found faithful, bending low in prayer, watching for the dawning of His purposes. The Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A., continuing his investigations of the Pyramid's teachings, announced, in your last number, his expectation of some notable event, May 22nd, 1879.

This view is corroborated in a very striking manner by Mr. William Hutton, in a paper contributed to Zadkiel's almanack. Many deem astrology quackery, and we mention it nevertheless, TRUTH being acceptable, and to be desired, in whatsoever guise presented. This paper, "The Star of Bethlehem," is worthy of serious consideration by all students of the Identity earnestly scanning the future. It emanates from an independent source, and does not trench upon the Identity. Its testimony, therefore, is all the more valuable. Its object is to show that about June, 1879, the Evangelist's "coming troubles" (Matt. xxiv. 30) will commence.

In connection with these words of the Evangelist, mark the "SIGN of the Son of Man in heaven." This, says Mr. Hutton, is the Star of Bethlehem, that star which shone so brightly at His birth. Its re-appearance he expects in the midst of the troubles, and he fixes a date. He calculates, from the chronology of prophetical interpreters, that this "Sign" will appear in the heaven in the latter part of 1887 ; but he admits he is five years in advance of their dates. (They fix A.D. 622 as the date of the temporal power of the Papacy ; he fixes A.D. 627 as its date.) Mr. Hickson, from the Fount of Prophecy, calculates that the 6,000 years of the world's history will close in November, 1882. Is this a mere coincidence, and nothing more? Or is it a marvellous verification of Scriptural testimony and Pyramid teaching? That prophecy is hastening fast, none will deny but the mentally blind. Hence the strong impression of speedy manifestations of Divine power. Happy they to whom such manifestations shall be fraught with joy! Unhappy they who, offered light, prefer darkness. To such these manifestations will afford no joy, no hope. Refusing to be called His now, He will reject them then. May God enable us more and more to proclaim that we are His, to rouse the nation to a sense of its responsibility, so that when He Himself shall appear in the clouds of heaven, in all His might and majesty, we may, one and all, meet Him with glad acclaims and hail Him as our King. THOMAS BALES.

* As the marginal dates appear to assume.

THE EARL OF BEACONSFIELD AND HIS WORKS.

BY J. S. ANDERSON.

(Continued from page 144).

PART III.

OUR author continues the subject in a conversation between Tancred, an Arab Sheikh, and the young Prince of the Lebanon, which must not be passed over without a few gleanings :—

"Sheikh of Sheikhs, there is but one God ; now, is it Allah or Jehovah? The palm-tree is sometimes called a date-tree, but there is only one tree Good ; but you do not pray to Allah!" "I pray as my fathers prayed, and you pray to Jehovah!"

The conversation then turned upon Moses, who, the Sheikh said, was, without doubt, the prophet of God, for all believe in him ; and you, too, Prince, brother of queens, married into our family and taught us to pray to Jehovah. There may be other prophets, but the children of Jethro would indeed ride on asses were they not content with Moses.

"And you have his five books?" inquired Tancred.

"We had them from the beginning, and we shall keep them to the end."

"And you learnt in them that Moses married the daughter of Jethro?"

"Did I learn in them that I have wells and camels? We want no books to tell us who married our daughters."

"And yet it is not yesterday that Moses fled from Egypt into Midian."

"It is not yesterday for those who live in cities, when they say at one gate that it is morning, and at another it is night. . . . . In the desert nothing changes ; neither the acts of a man's life, nor the words of a man's lips. We drink of the same well where Moses helped Zipporah, we tend the same flocks, we live under the same tents : our words have changed as little as our waters, our habits, or our dwellings. What my father learnt from those before him, he delivered to me, and I have told it to my son. What is time, and what is truth, that I should forget that a prophet of Jehovah married into my house? . . . . Since the Hegira nothing has happened in Arabia, and before that was Moses, and before him the giants."

"Let truth always be spoken," said the Sheikh ; "your words are a flowing stream. And the children of Rechab and the tribes of the Senites never joined him of Mecca, for they had the five books, and they said, 'Is not that enough?' They withdrew to the Syrian wilderness, and they multiplied."

* * * * *

"And perhaps," said the young Emir, "if you had not been children of Jethro, you might have acknowledged him of Mecca, Sheikh of Sheikhs."

"There is but one God," said the Sheikh in reply ; "but there may be many prophets. It becomes not a son of Jethro to seek other than Moses. But I will not say that the Koran comes not from God, since it was written by one who was of the tribe of Koreith, and the Tribe of Koreith are the lineal descendants of Ibrahim."

Digitized by Google

"And you believe that the Word of God could come only to the seed of Abraham?" asked Tancred eagerly.

"I and my fathers have watered our flocks in the wilderness since time was," replied Amalek; "we have seen the Pharaohs, and Nebuchadnezzar, and Iskander, and the Romans, and the Sultan of the French: they conquered everything except us; and where are they? They are sand. Let men doubt of unicorns; but of one thing there can be no doubt, that God never spoke except to an Arab."

Tancred covered his face with his hands. Then, after a few moments' pause, looking up, he said: "Sheikh of Sheikhs, I am your prisoner, and was, when you captured me, a pilgrim to Mount Sinai, a spot which, in your belief, is not less sacred than in mine."

* * * * *

Tancred re-entered his tent, and, reclining, fell into a reverie of distracting thoughts. The history of his life and mind seemed, with a whirling power, to pass before him; his birth in a clime unknown to the patriarchs; his education, unconsciously to himself, in an Arabian literature; his imbibing, from his tender infancy, Oriental ideas and Oriental creeds; the contrast that the occidental society in which he had been reared presented to them; his dissatisfaction with that social system; his conviction of the growing melancholy of enlightened Europe, veiled, as it may be, with sometimes a conceited bubble, sometimes a desperate shipwreck gaiety, sometimes with all the exciting empiricism of science; his perplexity that, between the Asian revelation and the European practice, there should be so little conformity, and why the relations between them should be so limited and imperfect; above all, his passionate desire to penetrate the mystery of the elder world, and share its celestial privileges and Divine prerogative.

The young Emir wishing him to take advantage of permission granted to visit Sinai and escape,

"Were I alone," said Tancred, "without a single guard, I must return. Why? Because I have pledged the word of a Christian noble to a man who does not believe in Christ."

"Faugh! Is it not itself a sin to keep faith with heretics?"

"But is he one?" said Tancred. "He believes in Moses; he disbelieves in none of the seed of Abraham. He is of that seed himself! Would I were such a heretic as Sheikh Amalek!"

In an interesting conversation with Baroni, Tancred remarks that "the most favoured part of the globe is at this moment entirely defenceless; there is not a soldier worth firing at in Asia, except the Sepoys. The Persian, Assyrian, and Babylonian monarchies might be gained in a morning with faith and the flourish of a sabre."

"You would have the great Powers interfering," said Baroni.

"What should I care for the great Powers, if the Lord of hosts were on my side?"

May not this be taken as an index to the successful diplomacy of our Government during the late and present trying times? All we can do is to breathe a fervent prayer that it may be continued in the same spirit.

(To be continued.)

ISRAEL'S BIRTH, MARRIAGE, AND DEATH RATE AS CONTRASTED WITH GENTILE NATIONS.

OUR friends are rather surprised and alarmed at the appearance of certain statistics comparing the birth, death, and marriage rates in Germany, Austria, France, and Great Britain, as published in the Börsen Zeitung, a Berlin paper. The figures, with some of the comments of the German editor, are as follows. It will be seen the Germans gloat over the fact of the rapid increase of their population in Fatherland, as compared with that in France; the object in view, being one our instructed readers can easily comprehend, with reference to the coming collision between those two great nations. He says:—

Germany has now about 43,000,000 of inhabitants, with only 32,000,000 of hectares of land under cultivation; while France possesses 44,000,000 of hectares of productive land, supporting a population of only about 40,000,000. Besides this—and herein lies hidden the great problem of German statecraft—the population of Germany increases at a significantly more rapid rate than that of France. Upon what forces we advert, to what extent they have developed, and how these factors contrast with similar figures in other States, the following comparative tables, taken from the "Volkswirthschaftl. Corr." will demonstrate:—

	Germany.	Austria.	England.	France.	Italy.
Births, per 10,000 persons	406	402	346	267	360
Deaths do.	292	352	220	231	306
Marriages do.	90	88	77	86	80
Elementary scholars do.	1,540	890	800	990	708

Some of the figures in this table show well for Germany. The number of marriages and births per 10,000 persons is the largest in all Europe. The proportion of deaths, too, is favourable, if not quite so much so as that of England. Gratifying is the number of our elementary scholars. On the other hand, the area of cultivated land is limited, and cannot be increased at the expense of the forests without incurring serious climatic risks. All other States of Europe can extend this area, to furnish shelter and food for growing populations. England and Russia have already provided themselves largely in this manner. France possesses, besides her 9,608 square miles in Europe, some 12,000 square miles in Algiers. In addition to this, too, there are at her disposal 2,000 square miles in Tunis and 16,000 more in Tripoli, leaving out altogether Egypt with 11,000 square miles, and her adjacent territories with further 30,000 square miles. Italy can resume its ancient traditions, and avail itself of its maritime position for the purposes of colonisation. Austria is the legitimate heir of Turkey, leaving out the fact that the fruitfulness of her present domains will amply suffice to maintain the increase of her inhabitants for a long time. All these possibilities are denied to Germany. Our capability of expansion has now reached its utmost boundary, as also the enhancement of the land's power of support is confined within very narrow limits. We have not yet attained the extreme of the latter, but there is no promise of food for an increasing population. The consolatory remedy of free trade, to equalise the deficiency of corn by an excess of industrial products, is more than ordinarily deceptive, as all other countries are establishing or enlarging their own industrial and manufacturing capabilities. Under all circumstances such a possibility is not to be firmly depended upon. Germany has not the power to sell much to foreign countries; but to purchase less from abroad is rather within the sphere of her ability. But even this has its limits; we depend just now on extraneous sources for grain, raw stuff, and colonial produce. How will this appear forty years hence? Germany will then have sixty millions of inhabitants or more, while foreign countries in which industries are now but little developed will, without doubt, have obtained a manufacturing power of their own, owing to which our export possibilities will have dwindled down considerably.

In dealing with the figures above quoted, we beg to remind our readers that, even if they be perfectly reliable and authentic, they still leave the British at the head of the world as a prolific race, filling the face of the earth with their surplus swarms of emigrants. Comparing the numbers per 10,000, who are born and die in each country, it will be found that—

In Germany, there is an excess of 114 of births over deaths.

In Austria this excess dwindles to 50.

In Italy it is only 54.

In France it is just 36.

But in Great Britian it is largest of all—namely, 126.

Taking the average of the German and Austrian, or the two German-speaking Empires, the average excess of births over deaths, per 10,000 of population, is only 82—a rate of increase far less than that of the British.

Digitized by Google

There is further another consideration which must be taken into account. The German statistics we quote admit that the German nation has no outlet for its surplus population, like France, Great Britain, or Italy. Its emigrants, therefore, betake themselves, when their own soil cannot longer maintain them, either to British or American territories, and there, losing their nationality, they become, in two or three generations, British or American subjects, changed in language, manners, customs, and in religion, wholly undistinguishable from the stronger race which (being Israel) has absorbed and assimilated them. The British emigrants, on the other hand, carry their fatherland with them everywhere, remain British still at the very ends of the earth, and develop at once an increasing power which makes them double their populations in the colonies once in only 25 years, while at home we occupy 60 years to reach that same end.

It may well be, we would add, that the German races are increasing fast at the present time. Their prospects without colonies, as the German editor allows, are gloomy in the extreme, and we can see that that rapid increase, noticed at the present time, may be a providential arrangement to enable the nation ere long to meet the coalition of the Russian and French Empires, what time the great earthquake of the Gentile races is upon them, to their mutual destruction. It is to meet that very conflict, which they all well know is at hand, that the German nation is now intent on their birth rate, and congratulating themselves that, as compared with the French, their own population is very rapidly rising in numbers.

The rates reported for France are simply disastrous: for the death rate of 231 is barely fed by the births of 267 per 10,000, giving only 36, as we have already noted, to compare with the 114 increase which the German numbers record.

Whether the British marriage rate is only 77 per 10,000 of population, while those of the other nations named is 90, 88, 86, and 80 respectively, we cannot say. All we can affirm is, that the figures seem very surprising, and, as a friend observes, "Although the death rate is smallest in Great Britain, and therefore, the residual population is greater, still the actual birth rate is considerably lower than in either Germany or Austria." We shall be glad if our readers, better skilled in these matters than we are, can tell us if the statistics are really supported by the true British returns: and, if so, how it comes to pass that the British marry less than the German-speaking races, and why the births are also fewer?

AN ITALIAN NEWSPAPER HONOURS HER MAJESTY QUEEN VICTORIA.

THE Opinione last month said, "Although Queen Victoria comes to Italy in strict incognita, nevertheless, while respecting her august will, Italy, by her respectful bearing, will know how to manifest her delight and the honour she will feel at the presence of the illustrious Sovereign of the United Kingdom. England has reached that degree of power and greatness that the name of her Queen will live in history as one of the most glorious. We Italians must not forget the sympathy England showed us during the most difficult period of our national resurrection. The reverence we feel for Queen Victoria is not less than the consideration and affection we entertain towards England, for she has ever been the example of all the private and public virtues which should adorn thrones."

We think our readers will be pleased with the above testimony from Italy to our beloved Queen's popularity; also with the blind testimony the editor gives to the fact that "England" is the "Chief of nations."

EPIDEMICS AND THE STARS.

FROM the Pall Mall Gazette, March 7, 1879.

"I have, sir, occupied so much of your space that I will not go into other curious points, especially some relating to the atmospheric change which produces plague, and a possible remedy. In conclusion, I would say that within the next seven years there will happen that which has not happened for hundreds of years: all the planets at or near their nearest point to the sun about the same time. It is true of the earth that its magnetic intensity is greatest about the time when it is near the sun; the same is probably true of all the planets; therefore we may expect extraordinary magnetic phenomena during the next seven years, and great plagues, which will manifest themselves in all their intensity when Jupiter is about three years from his perihelion—that is, in 1883.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

B. G. JENKINS, F.R.A.S.

Dulwich, March 6, 1879.

The Lord Jesus Christ spoke concerning, we believe, our own times, and said "Nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom, and there shall be famines, and pestilences, and earthquakes in divers places. All these are the beginning of sorrows" (Matt. xxiv. 7, 8.)

Correspondence.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—I beg to report the delivery of a lecture by the Rev. G. H. Marriott, M.A., at Witney on the 6th instant. Amongst the audience were several clergymen of the Church of England, and a good sprinkling of the Wesleyan body. Our great subject being almost unknown in this neighbourhood, the general opinion expressed was "A very clever lecture, but beyond my comprehension."

I suppose Mr. Marriott thought if he could influence the minds of his brother clergymen, that would be the best way of ultimately spreading the good news. However, although I fear the effort will not result in much visible and immediate progress, I feel quite repaid by the two valuable admissions drawn from the rector of Witney, whose opinion carries considerable weight with those around him. The first was that we may be a Shemitic and not a Japhetic race; and the second that he repudiates the old notion of a "spiritual Israel" supplanting the literal descendants of Jacob. Surely, sir, these two points are very important ones! and a clergyman who sees thus much, will, before long, be no longer blind to the solemn, but glorious fact of our Israelitish origin.

I have great pleasure in telling you that the gentleman who occupied the chair (Dr. Payne) is also investigating the subject with great candour and interest, and that the editor of the Witney Express kindly offers his columns for discussing the Identity. Thinking you may regard these facts as being in some degree encouraging,

I remain, dear sir,

Yours very faithfully,

A. T. MATTHEWS.

Church Hanborough, near Eynshaw,
Feb. 18, 1879.

GREAT PYRAMID CHRONOLOGY.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—In your issue for January 29, 1879, Mr. Thomas Clark Westfield gave us an interesting paper on the supposed age of the world at the date of the erection of the Great Pyramid, which he calculates at A.M. 1949, or, in other words, that the actual date of the creation of man should be B.C. 4119, and not B.C. 4004 as at present recorded in our Bible. It may interest your readers to learn that this date is brought forward by the so-called prophet, Richard Brothers, who issued a pamphlet A.D. 1794, in which he stated that he was Divinely instructed by God to prophesy events to come, and to correct the chronological dates then accepted. He says: "When I was commanded to write the Chronology of the World I was immediately instructed by revelation how, without which I could not. After it was done the Lord God said to me in a vision at night, That is the true age of the world, and the general computed one is erroneous." He then proceeds to fix certain dates, from which I select a few:—

B.C. 4119 The creation of Man.
B.C. 2171 The birth of Abraham.
B.C. 1881 Jacob in Egypt.

The birth of Moses he does not state, but it cannot be far from 1542. The above coincidences with the Pyramid measurements are certainly curious.

W. L. MORCOM.

Manchester, March 15, 1879.

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements

(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O O payable at Ludgate-circus.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed :—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

BANNER OF ISRAEL. VOL. II.
Now ready, price 7s., of all Booksellers.

Now ready price 7s., post free 6d. extra.

THE SECOND VOLUME
OF
THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.
EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

This volume contains a large number of articles on our Identity with Lost Israel, by the best and most learned writers on the subject. Also many interesting papers on the Great Pyramid by Professor Piazzi Smyth, F.R.S.E., Astronomer-Royal for Scotland, Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A., Major H. A. Tracey, R.A., Charles Horner, Esq., and others. London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

DOUBLE NUMBERS DURING 1879.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT.

Owing to the increasing interest taken in the Identity movement, it is found necessary to occasionally enlarge our space to make room for the important papers constantly reaching the Editor. It has, therefore, been determined to issue Twelve Double Numbers during 1879, for which Twopence will be charged. The first of these series of Double Numbers was issued the first week in January, and one on each succeeding first week in the month during the year.

	£	s.	d.
Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free	0	7	6
Two copies (including Double Numbers) ...	0	12	4
Three " " " " ...	0	18	8
Four " " " " ...	1	6	2
Six " " " " ...	1	17	4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-Grand, London, to W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

"BANNER OF ISRAEL" FREE CIRCULATION FUND.

	£	s.	d.
Miss T. S.	0	2	0
M. E. V.	1	0	0
Miss Butler...	0	2	6

The following are extracts from letters received, and will give some idea of the mode of distribution:

Highfields, Langham, Colchester, Essex.
March 5th, 1879.

DEAR SIR,—Many thanks for 100 BANNERS to hand this morning. As a lay preacher once a month at Stratford-St.-Mary's, Suffolk, I have brought the subject of our Identity with Lost Israel many times to the notice of my hearers. I am glad to have the BANNERS to distribute among them, as also among some labouring men we meet with on Friday evenings in Langham, to read the Bible and Identity works, and pray that our gracious God may bless us as a Nation, by pouring upon us all those rich blessings which He has promised (Jer. xxxi. 31; Heb. viii. 8). I hope and pray that the men and women of Israel will respond freely to your call for funds for the Free Circulation of the BANNER OF ISRAEL, that you may be able to sow it broadcast over the length and breadth of our land, that under the influence of the Divine Spirit, Britain's sons and daughters may awake to the knowledge of their high destiny and glorious privileges as the sons of the living God, the long-lost son, but now found; was dead, but alive again.

Allow me again to thank you for myself and daughters,
And remain, yours truly,
Mr. R. F. Banks. J. F. G.

FUNDS URGENTLY NEEDED to carry on this work.

Communications to be addressed to the Secretary of the "Banner of Israel Free Circulation Fund," Mr. R. Fergusson Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-st., London, E.C., to whom all remittances for this object should also be made, but NOT to the Editor of the BANNER—Philo-Israel.

Now ready, price One penny, post free 1½d. One dozen copies, post free 1s. 100 copies 6s., post free 7s.

THE IDENTITY OF THE BRITISH NATION WITH THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. THE CLUE TO THE EASTERN QUESTION. By C. W. E.
London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row

BOOKS, ETC.

This day. Price 2d. Post free 2½d.

MANASSEH AND THE UNITED STATES. An important Essay delivered before the "Lost Israel Identification Society," by the Rev. Joseph Wild, D.D., at Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, New York.

THE WILL of JACOB MADE to EPHRAIM and MANASSEH.—See "Manasseh and the United States," by Dr. Wild.—Price 2d.

OUT of SIXTY CONQUERED COLONIES the ONLY ONE ENGLAND EVER LOST was that of MANASSEH.—See "Manasseh and the United States," by Dr. Wild.—Price 2d.

MANASSEH IS A PEOPLE, and a GREAT PEOPLE.—See "Manasseh and the United States," by Dr. Wild.—Price 2d.

THE FOOTSTEPS of EPHRAIM and MANASSEH.—See "Manasseh and the United States," by Dr. Wild.—Price 2d.; post free 2½d.

MANASSEH BROUGHT UP at the FOOT of the PYRAMID.—See "Manasseh and the United States," by Dr. Wild.—Price 2d.; post free 2½d. London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; and W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

TO AUTHORS. Authors desirous of issuing Works or Pamphlets on the great and increasingly interesting Question of the Identity of the Lost Ten Tribes with the British Nation, should first communicate with Robert Banks, of Racquet-court, Fleet-street, who has already been honoured by issuing, amongst others, the following works on the subject:

The Banner of Israel. Weekly 1d.; monthly 7d.

The Nation's Glory Leader. Weekly 1d.; quarterly 10d. 4d.

The Pillar of Witness. By late Captain Tracey. Cloth 2s. 6d.; paper 1s. 6d. (second edition).

The Anglo-Israel Post Bag. By Bishop Titcomb. Cloth 2s. 6d.; paper 1s. 6d. (second edition).

The History of the House of Israel. By Philo-Israel. Cloth 1s.; paper 6d. (sixth thousand).

The Great Pyramid of Egypt. Fifty-two pages, with three illustrations. Price 4d. (10,000).

The New Old Story. By A E I. Cloth 1s.

NOW READY, Price 1d.; post free, 1½d.

GOD'S LOVE FOR ISRAEL, A GUARANTEE THAT HE WILL FULFIL HIS PROMISES TO ISRAEL. By JOHN GILDER SHAW.

Price 6d.; or with illustrative map, 8d.

BRITAIN (OR ISRAEL) THE FIFTH AND LAST, AND THE UNCONQUERABLE EMPIRE. By JOHN GILDER SHAW.

Price 3d.; post free, 3½d.

CHRONOLOGICAL CHART OF BRITISH VICTORIES OVER THE CONTINENTAL POWERS, ranging from the battle of Cressy (1346), to our last victory, the taking of Sebastopol, Sept. 8, 1855. Arranged by J. G. SHAW, of Leeds.

"We trust Mr. Shaw's labour in preparing this paper may be appreciated by the public and be largely sold."—Banner of Israel.

Shortly will pe published, price 6d.

RESULTS OF ISRAEL'S OBEDIENCE. A review of the successive steps which have led to the present condition of Britain (or Israel), the Fifth and Last Empire.

London: Published by Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; and may be had of the Author, 20 Park-row, Leeds, and of all booksellers.

DEAFNESS CURED, NOISES IN THE EARS, &c.
SPECIAL OFFER TO THE DEAF.

THE REV. E. J. SILVERTON having discovered that there are tens of thousands who are unable to obtain his 11s. Box of Aurial Remedy which has cured so many persons of Deafness and Noises in the Ears, &c., begs now to offer a 2s. 6d. Box of the Medicine, so as to put it within the reach of all. This arrangement is specially made to meet the deaf world. With every box of medicine will be presented the Rev. E. J. Silverton's "Health Advocate," containing valuable advice and information that everyone ought to know. Post Office Orders for 2s. 6d. to E. J. SILVERTON, Minister of Exeter Hall Church, Nottingham, or stamps, 2s. 8d.

WOOLS! WOOLS! WOOLS! Cheapest and Best. White and Black Berlin, Single and Double, 3s. 6d. per pound. Best quality Ice Wools, all Colours, 5½. per ounce ball. All other Wools at proportionate prices. Shetland, Andalusian, Fleecy, and Bonne Mere Wools. Welsh, Scotch, Peacock Victoria, and other Yarns. Crewel Filoselle Silk.
M. WHELLENS, Wholesale and Retail Wool Warehouse, 3, 5, and 6, QUEEN'S TERRACE, CAMDEN ROAD, LONDON, N.
Send for Price List, forwarded post free.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SHEFFIELD ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

JOHN T. GOTT, Esq., will LECTURE in the ALBERT HALL, Sheffield, on Easter Monday. Subject: "The Chosen People." Chair will be taken by C. Wardlow, Esq., at 8 p.m. Admission free. Collection to defray expenses.

LEWISHAM ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION; Auxiliary to the METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

President:—
BENTINCK CANNEY, George-lane, Lewisham.
Vice-President:—
S. A. TUCKER, Esq., "Pettaugh," Lee Park
Treasurer:—
Mr. H. SMITH, George-lane, Lewisham.
Hon. Secretary:—
Mr. F. Marriott, George-lane, Lewisham.
Committee:—
Mr. H. H. VAIN, Bromley, Kent.
Mr. J. BURROWS, Beckenham, Kent.
Mr. W. EVANS, Plumstead, Kent.
Mr. H. STEPHENSON, Woolwich, Kent.

The Committee, at the request of friends, have published, at considerable expense, the inaugural lecture delivered by Mr. E. Hine, in the Hall, Hither Green-lane, Lewisham. The first edition is now ready, and a speedy sale is anticipated. Price 4d., postage, ½d.
London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

THE GREAT PYRAMID. NOW READY, PHILO-ISRAEL'S NEW WORK, 56 pages, Illustrated with Diagrams, price 4d., post free 5d.

AN ELEMENTARY DIGEST or SKETCH OF THE CHIEF FACTS and TEACHINGS of the GREAT PYRAMID of EGYPT; adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific. By PHILO-ISRAEL; together with Original Papers by the following leading Pyramidists, republished mostly from the BANNER OF ISRAEL (by kind permission of the proprietor)—viz., Professor Piazzi Smyth, the Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A., Charles Horner, Esq., and Major H. A. Tracey, R.A. Being a pamphlet by five authors (a Pyramid number).

Opinion of Mr. Charles Horner, regarding the above work, after perusal of the same:—"I think your design of the Pyramid pamphlet excellent. I know well that it is a book urgently needed, since, under God's blessing, it will, I feel convinced, convert many to Christ. Your part Philo-Israel's) I deem unexceptionable. It is both terse and understandable to the many, which is the great object you have had in view. I should like to see thousands circulated amongst our intelligent artisans, and hope God will raise some to do this."—C. HORNER, Dec. 12, 1878.
London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

SOME of PHILO-ISRAEL'S papers, as they have appeared in THE BANNER, will be separately published from time to time in the form of Letters, for distribution.

No. 1. "The Identity of the British with Lost Israel."
No. 2. "The Glory of God."
No. 3. "An Address to British Soldiers.' (Now ready.)
No. 4. "An Address to British Sailors." (Now ready.)

Others will follow. Price One and Sixpence per 100; less quantities in proportion: postage extra.

Apply to R. Banks, 5 Racquet-court, Fleet-street. Also all Booksellers and Publishers.

Second edition, sixth thousand.

Fancy paper covers, 6d.; cloth, gilt lettered, flush, 1s.

THE HISTORY OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL: How They Were Lost, and How They Were Found. Told for the children. By PHILO-ISRAEL. Adapted for use by parents, Sunday School and other teachers, with questions on the chapters added.

For favourable notices of this work by Professor Piazzi Smyth, John T. Gott, Esq., and others, see handbills. W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

"The History of the House of Israel—told for the children—is a very valuable addition to our children's libraries. It gives a clear account of all the chief points of interest, in language suited to the comprehension of children, and ought to be in the hands of every mother and teacher who believes in our Identity with Israel. It supplies a want I have long felt as the mother of a large family."

Just Published, price 3d.

EPISCOPACY, NOT ESTABLISHMENT, THE BANE OF THE NATIONAL CHURCH. By A LAY MEMBER OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND.
W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row; and the Protestant Tract Society, 17, Buckingham-st., Strand.

Just out.

NOTES ON THE VISIONS OF ZECHARIAH VIEWED IN THE LIGHT OF THE IDENTITY OF THE TEN LOST TRIBES. By J. A. H. Price 1s. paper covers; 1s 6d. cloth.
W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick Lane, E.C.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, 5, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, APRIL 9, 1879.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. III. No. 120. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, APRIL 16, 1879. [ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
Imperialism and Cosmopolitanism	157
Israel as a War Power	158
Fresh Evidence (from India) of Spiritual Good to a Man's Soul by Belief in Our Identity	159
Jottings for the BANNER OF ISRAEL. By L. T. D.	159
The Editor of the Rock Again, and Ourselves.—Which Spoke the Truth?	160
Our Champion versus the Rev. R. Cornall, of Bristol	161
Progress of the Bristol and Clifton and Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Associations	161
Identity Difficulties Answered.—Part I.	161
The Earl of Beaconsfield and His Works.—Part IV.	162
The Rev. Canon M. Blake Brownrigg Records his Opinion of the BANNER	162
A Crucial Test of the Great Pyramid Chronology	163
Extract from Schliemann's Mycena	163
Literal Israel	163
Review, Correspondence	163

IMPERIALISM AND COSMOPOLITANISM.

WE have lately heard it remarked, and wisely remarked, by Mr. Edwin W. Cox, of Bristol, that there are gradually growing up two opposing schools of thought among our leading politicians and statesmen, which are in truth, ere long, destined to come into violent collision and to divide the nation. These views are connected with the foreign policy of our present Government, represented by Lord Beaconsfield; and that may be properly termed "Imperialism." The opposing party, whose opinions are those of Mr. John Bright and Mr. Gladstone, are diametrically antagonistic to his Lordship; and instead of "Imperialism," their views may be described as "Cosmopolitanism." What principles divide these two great leading sections of our statesmen? What is "Imperialism" as held by Lord Beaconsfield's Government, and what is "Cosmopolitanism" which has Mr. Bright's chief regard? We conceive the difference between these views to be simply this—that the school of politics which Mr. Bright affects desires that the British nation should strictly attend to its own affairs, should let other nations manage their own matters in their own way, should live and let live, and never acquire another rood of land in foreign countries, but take every fair opportunity at the earliest moment of relinquishing what we already have as burdensome and dangerous responsibilities which the British are better without, and had best speedily give up. The Imperialism, on the contrary, which we conceive Lord Beaconsfield's Government and the nation prefer to the selfish parochial policy thus sketched out, recognises that ours is an Imperial race, formed by Providence to rule, fitted by a superior constitution, by better laws, by higher institutions, by civil and religious liberty, by a Protestant faith, and by a hatred of oppression, to take the lead in whatever part of the earth their destiny may conduct them. That rôle necessitates the interference for the good of mankind of this Imperial race in every part and portion of the earth where the superior commanding qualifications the British possess, call for their lawful interposition for the benefit of the inferior races who surround them, and this, so regarded, is a true Cosmopolitanism. Such views in fact, whether we like them or not, are those which have regulated our national conduct for centuries past, and do so now more than ever. This Imperialism, combined with Cosmopolitanism of the true sort, has given us India, has placed us in possession of South Africa, has gifted us with the paramount power in Australia, New Zealand, the Fijis, and wherever else the strong, pushing, energetic, superior genius of the Anglo-Saxon has been confronted with the weaker nations with whom our world-wide commerce has always brought us into contact. Such are these two principles. But at the root of one of them—Imperialism—there lies the Identity as the cause of all. Apart from the Identity, which gives the Anglo-Saxon his nobility, his power, his energy, and his God-given destiny, the argument clearly is against "Imperialism" alone, but is in favour of Mr. Bright's "Cosmopolitan" doctrines. If we be not Israel, why should our nation be entitled to the foremost rank and chief position in the world? Why should we interfere with other nations any more than they should with us? Why, if not Israel, are the Anglo-Saxons masters of heathen India? of Australia? of New Zealand? of North America? of Canada? of East and West Africa? and of all the ocean highways of the whole globe? Apart from the Identity, we see no reason whatsoever justifying our present position! Apart from the Identity, Mr. Gladstone is right, Mr. Bright is right, and Lord Beaconsfield is morally and positively wrong! The Identity, however, gives an entirely new aspect to the whole matter! We are, as Israel, God's chosen people, His "dominion," that Divinely-educated people to whom is destined "the kingdom, and the dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven," to confer temporal and spiritual blessings on the nations, and to bring them to Christ.

Ours is, therefore, naturally the policy of modified "Imperialism," and that policy is high statecraft, God-blessed and God-destined Cosmopolitanism, which woe be to us if we do not follow, if we do not fully carry out! With these glorious facts as the foundation of our own foreign policy, we have to follow where God leads us, to govern those weaker races whom He leaves to our charge to govern; to rule them, not for ourselves, but to bring them to Christ; to give them the highest, the noblest, and the purest and the best governments, laws, and constitutions we can elaborate for them; above all that Gospel, which it is our own special destiny as "the seed of Abraham" to take "to ALL the families and to ALL the nations of the earth" (Genesis xxviii. 14, xxii. 18).

Digitized by Google

We pronounce therefore for Imperialism, rightly understood. Not for that which selfishly desires to add possession to possession, and land to land, for merely earthly glory—like Spain, and Portugal in Peru, or France in Algeria—but for the universal dominion of a God-constituted "righteous nation," destined to rule the earth for Him, in accordance with His righteous laws, for His righteous purposes, even to bring the Gentile nations to Christ. Our's we believe to be that nation, so qualified! Not yet perfectly so, but gradually ripening for the task. Not yet are we the "righteous nation," because not yet are we baptized with God's Holy Spirit, nationally, universally. But we believe the day is coming, and soon will be, when we Anglo-Saxons, the world-wide over, shall have "the laws of our God put in our inward parts, written in our hearts, when He will be our God, we His people; when we shall no more teach every man his neighbour, and every man his brother" (as now we do), "saying, Know the Lord, for we shall ALL know Him, from the least of us to the greatest of us, saith the Lord" (Jeremiah xxxi. 33, 34). If such be the facts (and who can doubt it?), the only race on God's earth so qualified must be the only one fitted or destined for universal rule as the "righteous nation!" It is our happiness to know we British are that destined race, and such being the case, we pronounce for Imperialism, with Cosmopolitanism combined, and believe it will have in our case God's blessing, and will conduce also to GOD'S GLORY.

ISRAEL AS A WAR POWER.

A FRIEND in Sunderland has sent us a copy of the Daily Post of that city, dated February 27th, 1879, from which we take the following rather remarkable article, which we think will interest the reader and give us some thoughts acceptable to Identity believers. What we quote is headed

SOME LONDON TALK.

It is coming to be a common remark in London, and I dare say in the provinces as well, that "England has her hands pretty full of work just at present." By the end of next month we shall have 35,000 men in Afghanistan, and, probably, 15,000 at the Cape. The numbers may appear trifling in comparison with the "bloated armaments" which we have been accustomed to see engaged on the Continent, but there is an important difference between the two cases. What Power except England ever wages war at a distance of some thousands of miles from her base of reinforcements? What other country could, for instance, send off 8,000 or 9,000 men, with all fighting matériel complete, to South Africa within about a fortnight from the call for their services? Moreover, it is well worthy of note that even this amount of delay was not due to any unreadiness on the part of the troops, but to the impossibility of getting the transports ready in less time. As a proof of this, take the fact, that the 3rd Battalion 60th Rifles and the 91st Highlanders embarked and actually sailed on the eighth day after the sad news of our reverse in Zululand became known. And they would have been ready and willing to start some days sooner had it been possible to prepare the Dublin Castle and Pretoria for their reception with greater expedition.

The glory of having an empire like ours is immense, the material advantages not slight, as witness the enormous wealth and general high measure of prosperity which render England the envy of other nations. But the responsibilities of the position are not less onerous, and we cannot ignore them without sacrificing their attendant benefits. The practical question is whether the country receives a good return for its trouble, risks, and outlay. That can easily be answered by each person's own judgment. How many people are there in the United Kingdom who feel envious of the prosperity of, say, France or Germany, Italy or Austria? How many are there, I wonder, who do not secretly pride themselves on the greatness of their land? How many are there, finally, who would be willing to exchange the magnificent responsibilities of Imperial Britain for the prosaic safety of such a country as Holland? England has, truly, a good deal of work on her hands just now; I doubt greatly whether one in a hundred of her population would like to have it less, or would wish to see the Government turn away from Imperial duties merely because their discharge may involve heavy expenses.

We see by the above—1. That the British have gone out to battle against their enemy, Cetywayo of Zululand, at the very ends of the earth, with an alacrity and willingness which is perfectly unparalleled among the Gentiles, and thus we are reminded that this was the predicted conduct of God's praying people Israel, when, with God's blessing, they issue out to fight according to His will, and He "maintains their cause" (1 Kings viii. 44, 45).

2. That we have been able to despatch beyond sea over 8,000 men of all three arms, fully equipped, with guns, horses, and material, in the short space of two weeks of time only, because we possess "enormous wealth and general high prosperity." But this was God's promise to Israel, which we British thus inherit (Deut. viii. 18; Jer. xxxiii. 9).

3. That though the burdens of universal empire are great, there is no British subject who would exchange the position of the empire to-day, with the consequences, for "the prosaic safety" and less pecuniary liability of such countries as Holland, Belgium, or Switzerland. In this, we see the back fitted to the burden; and the people destined to rule "the kingdom, and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven," being gradually prepared for their high destiny, and accepting empire even now, with all the risks, with entire satisfaction, because they are Israel (Daniel vii. 22—27).

We think, then, that even the scenes we have lately read so eagerly about, regarding the departure of our brave troops to the seat of war in Zululand, are proofs of our origin of a very remarkable and convincing character, which our instructed minds must grasp and profit by. What we would observe about these events is this, that if the risks of empire at "the ends of the earth" among the natives of India, of Afghanistan, of South Africa, and of Zululand especially, are now so great, the Identity, when declared and acknowledged, may be expected to have a sudden and marked effect in lessening those dangers attaching to our present dominion over the Pagan, cruel, bloodthirsty races who "hate" us for ruling them, and are our enemies, doubtless, because of our hold of their Gates (Gen. xxiv. 60). We argue thus because of such texts as Zechariah viii. 22, where God has promised us after our Identity is published, and our return effected, that "many people and strong nations shall come to seek the Lord of hosts in Jerusalem, and to pray before the Lord." These nations, who are clearly not all the nations of the earth, are those we believe now held down by Israel's legions in a somewhat precarious dangerous fashion, both in Hindostan and in South Africa—held down much more by force of arms and by the terrors of our prestige, than by the love they bear to our rule and race. Such will then "turn to the Lord" of themselves, and they will thus, we presume, become the willing, contented subjects of the Lord's people, that God they go to Jerusalem voluntarily to worship! Then will naturally, easily, and literally come to pass the promise that "Jacob" (of the Ten Tribes) shall return, and shall be in "rest, and be quiet, and NONE" (no Hindoos, no Afghans, no Chinese, no Kaffirs, no Zulus) "shall make him afraid" (Jeremiah xxx. 10). These, reader, are thoughts of comfort and confidence, in which, on account of our origin, we are entitled humbly to indulge, knowing that we are wholly unworthy of these so great mercies, but that our distinguishing national favours are not our self-earned dues, but that our God grants them to us for the Father's sake, and because He loved us of His own free grace. "Not for your sakes do I this, O House of Israel! but for Mine holy name's sake, which YE have profaned among the heathen whither ye went!" (Ezek. xxxvi. 22; Deut. ix. 5, 6; iv. 20 and 37). Israel! Praise YE the Lord!

Digitized by Google

FRESH EVIDENCE (FROM INDIA) OF SPIRITUAL GOOD TO A MAN'S SOUL BY BELIEF IN OUR IDENTITY.

By the mail which reached us from India, on March 29, 1879, we received a letter from an Indian official, a perfect stranger to ourselves—one who is the son of a clergyman in England, but, who serving in India, became "almost an infidel!"

Our readers now know as much of the history of this interesting correspondent as we know ourselves. We urge our opponents particularly to attend to this instance of what the Lord is doing, we believe, in countless other cases, by the application of the truths which the Identity enforces for the good of souls. Here was one almost an infidel—arrested—self-urged to search the Scriptures, to see if the teaching of the BANNER was supported by the Word of God; and during that search brought face to face with the Son of God, the Redeemer of His people Israel! He was thus converted, saw himself to be the sinner for whom He died, and now desires our opponents to be told that our doctrines are NOT opposed to Christianity, as they most unfairly, unjustly, and ignorantly affirm.

We refrain from divulging our correspondent's name or station in life, but we do ask our readers to note this case—to make it known far and wide—to let it bear its own silent testimony for the truth of our glorious Identity, and to put to shame thereby those who say our views lead to infidelity, ungodliness, Judaism, dishonour to the dear Redeemer of His chosen people Israel, and the like. Our correspondent says:—

"I remember when I was about nine years old attending a lecture, given by a missionary, who had spent some years in Asia Minor. While referring geographically to the district to which it is generally believed the Ten Tribes of Israel were carried away captive, he chanced to make some casual remarks about the probable fate of those Tribes. Among other things he said that some people believed them to exist among modern nations under the name of 'Anglo-Saxons.' New theories always captivate young minds, and of course what is to me now a glorious truth, appeared then only as a theory—but it made a lasting impression on me—although I still continued to regard the 'Identity' as a mere theory only, until a very few months ago. Then, in the month of November last, I happened to come across several numbers of the BANNER OF ISRAEL; I read them eagerly, and after reading them I believed, and blessed God who will yet fulfil His promise to our forefather Abraham.

"Though an excellent Bible scholar, I must confess that till then I was almost an infidel, but through searching the Scriptures for passages relating to the Identity, I was led to the knowledge of still grander truths, EVEN THE LOVE OF CHRIST FOR THE SINNER. Let this be an answer to those who affirm that our doctrines are opposed to Christianity."

We are sure our readers will rejoice at this glorious testimony to the spiritual good our subject has effected for the soul of our dear Israelite brother now in India. It has brought him as a sinner to the feet of Jesus, and rejoicing in His personal redemption, he glories also in, and works hard for the publication of, the Identity, as the rest of his letter we quote fully proves.

"I have several times," he says, "seen notices in your pages of the receipt of letters announcing some further spread of belief in our glorious Identity in various distant parts of the world occupied by British settlers, but have never seen anything yet calculated to induce me to believe that you were aware that you had brother Israelites in the faith in Bombay. I therefore thought you might be glad to learn that there are one or two even here working for this cause. I have now double numbers of the BANNER sent out to me from home weekly, and I hope I have already done a little good."

We are heartily glad to hear the good news our friend sends us from Bombay. We knew there were Israelites in Madras, in Bangalore, in the North-west Provinces, and in Central India, but we were, as our new friend suspected, quite unaware that there was a single mind in Bombay in unison with our own. We shall be heartily glad to receive further notices from him from time to time, reporting progress in the Western presidency—and meanwhile we urge him, as we do all our colonial and absent brethren, never to forget the Lord's injunction to us all—"Publish YE, Praise YE, and say, O Lord, save Thy people, the remnant of Israel" (Jer. xxxi. 7.)

JOTTINGS FOR THE "BANNER OF ISRAEL."

By L. T. D.

THE twentieth chapter of Deuteronomy lays down rules for Israel when going to war; they excuse the men from serving under certain conditions, and we admit the same principle in asking for volunteers to make up the full strength of our regiments when going upon foreign service. We also observe the rule expressed in verses 10, 11, and 12, in declaring war by sending an ultimatum: "When thou comest nigh unto a city, to fight against it, then proclaim peace unto it; and it shall be if it make thee an answer of peace, and open unto thee, then it shall be that all the people that is found therein shall be tributaries unto thee, and they shall serve thee. And if it will make no peace with thee, but will make war against thee, then thou shalt besiege it." We, as Christians, are not bound by the command to "slay every male," but we certainly observe the rule of taking the spoil thereof unto thyself, "and thou shalt eat the spoil of thine enemies, which the Lord thy God hath given thee. Thus shalt thou do unto all the cities which are very far off from thee, which are not of the cities of these nations." Exactly the course we pursue, and have pursued, in Ashantee and Africa, Abyssinia and Afghanistan. Isa. xl. 3: "The voice of him that crieth in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make straight in the desert a highway for our God; every valley shall be exalted, and every mountain and hill shall be made low; and the crooked shall be made straight, and the rough places plain." Surely this is a literal description of the manner in which railways are made, and it describes the "iron way" itself. Wherever the locomotive comes, the Bible follows; "the way of the Lord" is thus prepared. And we are told "the glory of the Lord shall be revealed, and all flesh shall see it together, for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it."

Why do we, the British nation, go to Palestine for our patron saint, St. George? We picked him up at Beyrout in the first crusade, took him home, and "St. George for Merrie England" became the battle-cry, and he treads down the dragon ever since! He is associated with St. Michael the Archangel for war, in the order of St. Michael and St. George. Those crusades were a prophetic instinct which made us wish to acquire the Holy Land. Richard, the Lion-hearted, took Cyprus, and made it a rendezvous for vessels and troops previous to landing on the shores of Syria. The English king was the acknowledged head of that war with Saladin.

Well do I remember my brave old father, who fought under Nelson, pointing out to me, on the anniversary of the battle of the Nile, the 124th Psalm, and dwelling upon the emotions with which the survivors heard it read in every ship of our fleet when that tremendous conflict was over: "If the Lord Himself had not been on our side, now may Israel say," &c., &c. It is the thanksgiving Psalm appointed to be read after "a victory, or deliverance from an enemy at sea." But I think it such a pity that, in the prayer-book service, the word "Israel" should have been changed to "we"—"now may we say"—however, the words, happily, are synonymous.

Digitized by Google

THE EDITOR OF THE "ROCK" AGAIN, AND OURSELVES.

Which Spoke the Truth?

At page 265 of the Rock, of April 4th, 1879, the editor expresses his surprise at our allegation that certain "fallacies" we enumerated at page 121 of Banner, No. 116, were contained in his correspondent's article of the 7th March last, page 176. He asks, "Where Philo-Israel found these views?" and adds, "certainly not in the Rock." We answer, "certainly in the 'Rock';" and in regard to the "where," he shall be gratified at once! His readers and ours must be the judges whether his is disingenuous conduct, in this matter, or not?

Our first assertion was, that the Rock's correspondent had stated "that after the two captivities the Two Houses, Israel and Judah, became amalgamated, were included in Cyrus's invitation, and returned to Palestine together." In the 2nd col., page 176 of Rock, March 7, the very statement now denied, occurs! It is in the middle of the second paragraph. The writer says, "In the days of Darius and Cyrus, all the dispersed Israelites, both of Israel and Judah, found themselves reunited under one earthly head, so that when Cyrus published his proclamation, in the first year of his reign, at Babylon, to 'all the people of God,' &c., &c., 'it extended, not only to the Tribes of Judah and Benjamin, but also to all the people of Israel, dispersed" (the italics are our's). "This," he adds lower down, "accounts for the fact, that in the Book of Ezra, which records the return of the Jews from their captivity in Babylon, we have the terms 'Jews' and 'children of Israel' indiscriminately employed to represent those who had returned from the captivity." Indeed, it is said "all Israel dwell in their cities."

We are fully justified here in our assertion as to point No. 1; and we are sure also our readers will so decide accordingly.

2. We next quoted the Rock as holding that "henceforth the Jews were the only Israelites, the Ten Tribes having become merged in them, and disappeared." The Rock denies having expressed this idea, and now denies even holding it! What, then, is the meaning of the first sentence in the third paragraph in the second column of the passage quoted above? "From henceforth it would appear" (i.e., after the Babylonian return) "that God's ancient people were historically known as Jews or Israelites" . . . . "These were the people," he goes on to say, "whether called Jews or Israelites, who are brought so prominently before us, alike in the Old and New Testament, simply because God had need of them to reveal and carry out His purposes, for which He will preserve them as a distinct and peculiar people, as long as the world endures." Our quotation, surely, is here further fully sustained by the writer's statements at the end of the third column of his page 176, or language has no meaning?

As our 3rd point, we quoted the writer's statement (now denied), that "the Jews, as Israelites, are to be restored to favour when the fulness of the Gentiles has come in." This is, however, the very gist of the second paragraph of the third column, page 176 of the Rock! The writer, speaking of the Jews as Israel, quotes Rom. xi., and declares, "Blindness, in part, is happened unto Israel, until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in;" "and that, till the Deliverer comes, the veil of spiritual blindness shall remain on their hearts, as a nation." Not a word is said of Israel as distinct from Judah, and the Jews are held to be Israel, and Israel Judah, throughout!

Our 4th allegation, which is denied now, was, that the Rock's correspondent stated "that these Jews, as Israelites, are now under curse, and show all the marks of the only people God hath chosen as His own: thus being one of the most effective answers to the infidel that God's Word is true." We wonder what part of the above sentence the editor of the Rock alleges to be incorrectly represented by us? Every word has its counterpart in his friend's paper! On page 176, he said the Jews were "all Israel," "children of Israel," "the House of Israel," "Israelites." In the third column of that page (at the end), he detailed the very curses under which they (the Jews) now suffer, with great apparent satisfaction, and put them under 10 heads. He pointed then to these as the way "God had taken care to preserve the identity of His ancient people (calling them All the Tribes of Israel), from age to age," "wherever scattered." On page 177, in columns 1 and 2, he points to their fate and condition as proofs of "the sad consequences of mistaking the letter for the spirit," &c.; and our views as destroying this testimony "by taking out of the hands of God's believing people one of the most effective weapons against the infidel, in the dispersion, preservation, and continuous separation of a people known to have sprung from one head, thousands of years ago." Here the whole argument related to the Jews, as Israelites, and to the Jews, as the only Israelites. They were the only Israelites the Rock's friend knew, being under curse: and a standing proof of the truth of God's Word. Of any other Israelites but the Jews he had not a word to say, and knows nothing! If the Rock disavows all this, and repudiates his own language, his readers, with eyes and senses still existing, can comprehend the value of such repudiation; for they can read, and they can understand what they read!

We regret to see the Protestant editor of the Rock driven, in a bad cause, to such a line as that he now adopts. His conduct throughout, in this matter, has been inconsistent and vacillating. We protest further against the language his correspondent used as his ninth proposition in page 177 of the Rock's March 7th's issue —namely, that we (being Christian men) "handle the Word of of God deceitfully, by compelling it to witness to a daring human invention!" We are then alleged to use "misrepresentation," and, in short, the whole paper is conceived in outrageous breach of all Christian charity, and in language of which we should have been glad had the Rock written in repudiation, instead of in a spirit which we do not care now to characterise.

In conclusion we denounce with strong indignation, as uncharitable and most distinctly false, the malignity which dictated the notice to correspondents (C. R., Finchley) in the second column of page 266, of the Rock, of April 4. The public writer who, on bare hearsay, could venture to allege, as the Rock's editor did, as a fact, that "we proposed to issue a new Anglo-Israel Bible," is beneath contempt! In regard to the other allegation, that our views "practically revive the Judaizing heresy, by which acceptance with God was made to rest, not on the finished work of Christ, but on Identity with the family of Israel," what we have to say is this—we thought the Rev. Incumbent of a certain Bristol parish was the only man in England whose mental capacity was of such a kind, that with print before him, he could make so absurd an assertion. Now we find the editor of the Rock is with him particeps ejus ignorantiae. This surprises us. We only ask in silent wonder that we may be furnished with chapter and page where we, or any one else holding our views, has made this statement? Till then we deny the Rock's puerile charge with indignation, and defy him to prove it! We hope this challenge will be accepted! If it be not, we solemnly call on all our readers, and those of the Rock as well, to witness that a writer calling himself a leader of Christian public opinion, has ventured to traduce a body of fellow-believers in our blessed Lord Jesus Christ, without cause and without a shadow of justice or of reason, and that when brought to task for it, he shrinks away from his own position without venturing to defend it.

As a Protest against the Rock, Philo-Israel (being a Treasurer of the Jews' Society) urges All-Israelites everywhere to subscribe to one or other of the Associations carrying the Gospel to Judah.—Ed.

Digitized by Google

OUR CHAMPION VERSUS THE REV. R. CORNALL, OF BRISTOL.

IN BANNER No. 103, vol. ii., page 423, of December 18, 1878, our readers recollect that the Rev. Herbert Marriott, of Amberley, Stroud, challenged the Rev. J. B. Clifford, of St. Matthew's, Bristol, to discuss the Identity with him in public, "in friendly debate." That challenge Mr. Clifford declined on the valid ground of advancing years disqualifying him for public controversy.

Our champion now has turned to the Rev. R. Cornall, of St. Emmanuel's, Bristol (who, we hear, fully endorses the Rock's late attack on our cause), and has sent him the invitation to be found below, with the result which also appears.

We regret that Mr. Cornall declines to meet his adversary; age, in his case, is not the cause assigned. He will only have public discussion if he can attain the impossible! He demands the pages of the BANNER OF ISRAEL or the Glory Leader to be at his service for the full report, or that Mr. Marriott shall be at the expense of publishing a pamphlet, the contents of which he partly prescribes as the condition precedent of his thus meeting him!

The controversy, therefore, will not take place since the vivâ voce discussion is declined; and the pages of the BANNER certainly will not be available to Mr. Cornall to propagate therein his strictures on the views dear to readers of our much-valued journal.

We regret that we are unable to give our friends the whole of Mr. Cornall's letter to Mr. Marriott. The latter tells us that the part he has suppressed is "irrelevant" and is further objectionable on other grounds. Probably Mr. Cornall, thus challenged, will publish his reply himself, that his readers may judge of the character of his communication, which, we trust, is not like that we declined to notice in the BANNER for reasons stated on page 179, 3rd col., No. 21, vol. i., so far back as May 23rd, 1877. The correspondence is as follows :—

DEAR SIR,—I shall be very glad to enter upon an amicable public discussion with you and some of your well-qualified friends, on the Israelitish Origin of our Race, in the Victoria Rooms, in Clifton.

Yours truly,
H. MARRIOTT,
(Curate of Amberley).

Amberley Rectory, Stroud, March 17, 1879.

[EXTRACT.]

DEAR SIR,—. . . . . Believing that a discussion through the Press would be, for care, accuracy, and completeness, far the best, I accept your offer at once on the understanding that either

1. You will obtain permission from the editor for the discussion of the Anglo-Israel Theory in the BANNER or Glory Leader, and that articles on the two sides appear in extenso without editorial trimming or comment; or that

2. You will reply, in a separate pamphlet, to the pamphlet which I have published, a copy of which I now send you; and that, in the same pamphlet, you set forth an outline of the Anglo-Israel creed, together with the most conclusive proofs you may be able to furnish in its defence, and you shall then (D.V.) be properly and sufficiently answered. . . . . I claim the right to publish any correspondence between us.

Faithfully yours,
R. CORNALL.

18, Arley Hill, Cotham, Bristol, March 18, 1879.

DEAR SIR,—I cannot appreciate the morale of a man who states that his fellow-man is a heretic, and yet declines, as you and Mr. Clifford do, an open discussion of his bases for the charge.

I have looked at your pamphlet, and see that throughout, both Scripturally and historically, you are labouring under a delusion, which only "an honest and good heart" will ever enable you to dispel. I hope that you will attain it.

Yours truly,
H. MARRIOTT.

Amberley Rectory, Stroud, March 19, 1879.

P.S.—Of course you may publish my words! Imagine a successor of the Apostles not speaking and writing for eternity!

PROGRESS.

THE Bristol and Clifton Israel's Identification Association during the last four years—that is, since April 6, 1875—have published and circulated over 100,000 of their nine leaflets. Of these no less than 42,000 have been issued from the press between Feb. 5 and March 25, 1879. The Association, in respect to the last large issue, acted in faith, before they had the funds in hand to cover the outlay fully. But the money was immediately refunded to them by the rapid sales of leaflets Nos. 7, 8, and 9. The last number has gone very rapidly, we ourselves having accounted alone for over 6,000.

These efforts, we believe, cannot be matched by any other Identity Association at work in these Islands, and they must with God's blessing "tell." We are glad to report that "The Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association" has arranged for seven extra lectures for April (current), and that Mr. Henry Leslie, the distinguished musician in London, has joined it as a "vice-president." He is, we hear, a staunch believer in our Identity, and will doubtless propagate the belief where our own influence cannot easily reach.

We rejoice to know that the Metropolitan Association is doing real service to the cause of God, and is spreading the knowledge of our great truth in and near London far and wide. We anticipate that the annual meeting in Lower Exeter Hall, on Monday, May 19 next (7 p.m.), will be a great success, and will receive God's full blessing. We trust it may be so, and bespeak for it and for the operations of all our Associations everywhere the prayers of "God's people" ISRAEL.

IDENTITY DIFFICULTIES ANSWERED.

THE DISTINCTION BETWEEN ISRAEL AND JUDAH SCRIPTURALLY ESTABLISHED.

PART I.

WE have received a communication from one who, knowing all that has been written on the subject of "our origin," still stumbles, like the Rock newspaper, at the threshold, and on account of early teaching, Bible-class, and Sunday-school prejudices, cannot rid himself of the idea that "when he sees a Jew he sees an Israelite, and when he sees an Israelite he sees a Jew again." To such an one we must administer once more the children's food, and we would do it in this wise :—

1. Jacob's sons were twelve, whence were derived God's chosen people, the Twelve Tribes of Israel.

2. Under Moses, God Himself distinguished Israel from Judah, even when they were making the passage of the Red Sea (Psa. cxiv. 2).

3. In Saul's days, long before the disruption, the two portions of the Hebrew race were quite distinct, and so described in 1 Sam. xi. 8. In the census then made (B.C. 1005), Israel were ten times as numerous as Judah.

4. In David's time, the distinction was even more marked still. (See 2 Sam. ii. 4, 8, 9, 10, and 11; v. 5; xii. 8; xix. 41—43.)

5. In Solomon's days, when the nation of Israel (the Twelve Tribes) reached the zenith of its united glory, God's Word still records the distinction. (See 1 Kings iv. 20—25.)

6. In Rehoboam's reign, after Solomon died, the great disruption occurred (1 Kings xii. 19—24)—"This thing being from the Lord."

7. Then followed the long separate continuance of the two Houses, the captivity of the House or "kingdom of Israel" to Media, but never its return to Palestine to this hour.

8. But the "Lost" House of Israel—"Lost" in the sense of no one, till now, knowing where to find it (like the "lost" prodigal, only gone to the "far country")—is to return to "the land" with Judah (Jer. iii. 18; Hosea i. 10; Ezek. xxxvii. 16—28).

Digitized by Google

9. And God's Word tells us that when the "two sticks" are joined in the hands of Jehovah, who holds them, then, probably for the first time in their eventful history, they really will become "one nation and one kingdom upon the mountains of Israel" (Ezek. xxxvii. 22).

10. Prior to that state of things, all who expect, as our unpersuaded friend does, to find "all Israelites to be Jews. as all Jews certainly are Israelites," must first reconcile such a Scripture as Zech. xi. 14 (recorded B.C. 487, long after the Babylonian captivity of Judah returned) with their assumed fancies, since that text assures us that after our Lord's betrayal (verse 13), and thenceforth, "the brotherhood between Judah and Israel was to be broken by God Himself."

11. Hence Scripture proves that Israel is now (A.D. 1879) separately existing somewhere away from Judah.

12. That while "all Jews are really Israelites," since they belong to Israel, there are Israelites (by the many millions, we are certain) who never were, are not now, and can never be, Jews.

Come! unbelieving brother, exercise your reason, believe, rejoice in your Israelitish origin, and praise the Lord.

(To be continued.)

THE EARL OF BEACONSFIELD AND HIS WORKS.

BY J. S. ANDERSON.

(Continued from page 154).

PART IV.

THE difficulty which presents itself in this attempt to honour our Premier, and to show that he has been guided by a Power greater than that of man, is the selection of quotations, within reasonable bounds, from the mass of valuable matter bearing on our subject in this remarkable book "Tancred."

In reply to the Queen of the Ansarey's words of welcome, Tancred, amongst other remarks, said:

"The world, that since its creation, has owned the spiritual supremacy of Asia, which is but natural, since Asia is the only portion of the world which the Creator of that world has deigned to visit, and in which He has ever conferred with man, is unhappily losing faith in those ideas and convictions that hitherto have governed the human race. We think, therefore, the time has arrived when Asia should make one of its periodical and appointed efforts to re-assert that supremacy. But though we are acting, as we believe, under a Divine impulse, it is our duty to select the most fitting human agents to accomplish a celestial Mission. We have thought, therefore, that it should devolve on Syria and Arabia, countries in which our God has even dwelt, and with which He has been, from the earliest days, in direct and regular communication, to undertake the solemn task. Two races of men, alike free, one inhabiting the desert, the other the mountains, untainted by any of the vices of the plains and the virgin vigour of their intelligence not dwarfed by the conventional superstitions of towns and cities, one prepared at once to supply an unrivalled cavalry, the other an army ready equipped of intrepid foot-soldiers, appear to us to be indicated as the natural and united conquerors of the world. We wish to conquer that world, with angels at our head, in order that we may establish the happiness of man, by a Divine dominion and crushing the political Atheism that is now desolating existence, utterly extinguish the grovelling tyranny of self-government."

In a subsequent conversation between the young Emir and Tancred, the former said:

"But truth had descended from heaven before Jesus, since, as you tell me, God spoke to Moses on Mount Sinai, and since then to many of the prophets and the princes of Israel."

"Of whom Jesus was one," said Tancred, "the descendant of King David, as well as the Son of God. But through this last and greatest of their princes it was ordained that the inspired Hebrew mind should mould and govern the world."

"Through Jesus God spoke to the Gentiles, and not to the Tribes of Israel only. This is the great worldly difference between Jesus and His inspired predecessors. Christianity is Judaism for the multitude, but still it is Judaism, and its development was the death-blow of the Pagan idolatry."

"Gentiles," murmured Fakredeen, "Gentiles! you are a Gentile, Tancred?"

"Alas! I am," he answered, "sprung from a horde of Baltic pirates who never were heard of during the greater annals of the world—a descent which I have been educated to believe was the greatest of honours. What we should have become, had not the Syro-Arabian creeds formed our minds, I dare not contemplate. Probably we should have perished in mutual destruction. However, though rude and modern Gentiles, unknown to the apostles, we also were in time touched with the sacred symbol, and originally endowed with an organisation of a high class, for our ancestors wandered from Caucasus; we have become kings and princes."

(To be continued).

THE REV. CANON M. BLAKE BROWNRIGG,

Vicar of St. John's, Launceston, Tasmania,

RECORDS HIS OPINION OF THE "BANNER OF ISRAEL."

WE are much gratified to find that the Rev. Canon Blake Brownrigg, the President of the Anglo-Israel Association at Launceston, Tasmania, is about to edit a fortnightly serial for the antipodes, to be entitled The Standard of Ephraim. In doing so, he writes to us to say, that he means to make the BANNER OF ISRAEL his model! His words, which are most gratifying to ourselves (and we feel highly honoured and flattered by such distinction), are as follows:—

"I have been so pleased with the general appearance of your own very interesting journal (whose arrival I always pleasurably await), that I have made it the model for the new one here, which I have named The Standard of Ephraim.

"There is one thing for which I especially admire your paper, and that is its courteous and temperate tone. It has done 'The Identity' good service, and my obligations to it have been 'very great.'

We have taken leave to extract these few sentences from our fellow-labourer's letter to us at "the ends of the earth,' and we hope he will excuse us the liberty we assume in so doing, while we heartily thank him for his kind words. We have published these most highly-valued expressions for two reasons—First, to prove to those yet unacquainted with our journal, that it is conducted in a manner which calls for unqualified approbation from such a man as the Rev. Canon Brownrigg, in far-off Tasmania; and second, that its interest has been fully sustained for these two years and a half, in such wise, that not only at Montreal, also at Sydney, in America too, and now we see in Tasmania as well, its "arrival is always pleasurably awaited." We thank God for this record, and for this great success! To Him be all the praise! To us is the heart-felt joy, that God has used us as His humble instrument to publish His most cheering, glorious message to the British, of their Identity with His lost, now found, chosen nation! We wish The Standard of Ephraim (two copies of which are now to hand) very much success in Australasia, and many readers in dear "OLD ENGLAND" too!

Digitized by Google

A CRUCIAL TEST OF GREAT PYRAMID CHRONOLOGY.

A DATE of some extraordinary importance appears to be registered on either side of the Grand Gallery's walls by a longitudinal groove of 1878·4 units in length. (See Piazzi Smyth's work, "Our Inheritance in the Great Pyramid," 3rd edition, p. 516.) If this measure is absolutely to be relied upon, and of this there is little doubt, the date indicated by it is close upon us, and will terminate sometime previous to the close of the ensuing May. It must not, however, be forgotten that a difference of one only in the decimal figure would represent considerably over a month of time—one tenth of a year, in fact.

With this proviso, and assuming that the year begins approximately at the date of our Lord's birth, I think we have before us an opportunity for practically testing the value of the Great Pyramid's indications of prophetic chronology. As to the nature or the significance of the event, it is not easy to offer an opinion. It may have a double significance, from the fact of its appearing on both walls. It should certainly be an event which would signally affect all Christendom, as the groove extends throughout the entire length of the Grand Gallery at that point! To any further assertion respecting it, I should hesitate to commit myself. But, at the same time, I think it is of the very highest importance that the fact should be noted some time previous to the date indicated.

Twice during the past few months has the Rev. C.W. Hickson endeavoured to show, from altogether different data, that an "important epoch" is reached on or about May 22nd next, qualifying his statement only with the assumption "that our Lord was born on the first of January of the year 1 of the commonly received reckoning." Such independent testimony is of great value, and is a singular corroboration of the significance of the date indicated by these grooves in the walls of the Grand Gallery, and should have the effect of materially increasing our vigilance, for the time is at hand.

THOS. CLARK WESTFIELD.

March 29, 1879.

EXTRACT FROM SCHLIEMANN'S MYCENA. (PAGE 147.)

"THE Northern peak of Mount Euboa, now called Hagios Elias, is crowned by an open chapel of the prophet Elias, surrounded by Cyclopean walls. . . . . The question now arises, for what purpose all these fortifications have been built? The mountain being so high and steep, and the summit so exceedingly small and encumbered by protruding rocks, it can never have served as a fortress. Therefore, the only explanation I can give of the origin of these Cyclopean walls is that there must have existed on the summit a small temple of great sanctity and immense importance, and, by a curious coincidence, we may even find in the present cultus on the summit the name of the deity who was worshipped there in antiquity. In times of great drought the inhabitants of the surrounding villages are in the habit of going thither on a pilgrimage in large crowds, the priest leading, to invoke the prophet Elias to give rain, and it appears likely that the very site of the present open shrine of the prophet Elias was in ancient times occupied by a sanctuary of the Sun-god, who had a celebrated cultus there, and who has given way to the Prophet Elias, with hardly any change in the orthography or pronunciation of the name—the Sun-god having been originally called Ἥλιος, pronounced Eëlios. This is a wonderful coincidence, because, as the name of the prophet is purely Hebrew (אֵלִיָּה—meaning, 'Jehovah is God'), it can have had no affinity with the Homeric name of the Sun-god (Ἥλιος), which is purely Greek."

They who believe that the Tribe of Dan early colonised Greece, and that the Lacedemonians were descended from them (vide Josephus' Antiquities, book xii., chap. iv., and book xiii., chap. v.), will think it not impossible that the Danites should have deified their prophet Elias and worshipped him as the Sun-god Ἥλιος, and that, instead of the Sun-god Ἥλιος giving place to a later cultus of the prophet Elias, it was in fact the worship of the prophet Elias from the first, thus accounting for the coincidence between the Hebrew and Greek names.

L. D. R

LITERAL ISRAEL.

HAVE you noticed, asks L. P., the anti-spiritualistic sense of St. Paul's words (Rom. ix. 3, 4), in speaking of Israel: "To whom are the glory, and the covenant, and the giving of the law, and the service of God, and the promises," and who were St. Paul's "Kinsmen according to the flesh?" We see distinctly the view that our old translators took of the meaning of verse 4, for they insert the word "pertaineth," thereby strengthening the assertion of the ownership of Israel in the after-named possessions. Mark to whom the promises were made—to Israel, St. Paul's "kinsmen according to the flesh."

How can we see in these verses any suggestion that Israel, St.Paul's kinsmen, "whose are the promises," were to become a spiritual Israel, embracing all Christian converts of every nation of the earth? It seems as if St. Paul was desirous of preventing the possibility of a mistake in this matter, for, though those he was addressing must have known well who he meant by Israel, he thus adds distinctly that he referred to his own kinsmen in the flesh who could alone claim to be Israel.

Review.

The British Nation Proved to be the Remnant of Israel, &c. A Lecture by J. H. WELDON, J.P., delivered at Ash Hill Towers, Kilmallock, Ireland. Price Fourpence. Purcell & Co., Cork.

WE can recommend the above excellent lecture as a clear statement of the Israelite evidence and argument. Mr. Weldon has done wisely to publish his lecture, and we believe a series he has delivered on the same topic in Ireland will be issued from the press in due course. We refrain from quoting passages from this pamphlet (one of 26 pages), but we are glad to notice a new light cast on the vexed question of Israel being a "Lost" nation, which appears at page 6 of Mr. Weldon's work. He refers to 2 Kings xvii. 23 as evidence that the Ten Tribes were to be "lost" as a people. A perusal of the passage will show the reader that when God said: "He would remove Israel out of His sight," it was tantamount to losing them, and causing them to become "Lost" in every sense. Cast out of "God's sight," national ruin and denationalisation, as His people Israel, followed as a matter of course.

Mr. Weldon does not make as much of the Gates as he might have done, though he mentions Gibraltar as one dominating the Mediterranean. Taken as a whole, we are much pleased with the lecture, and are delighted that a Justice of the Peace in Ireland should have joined our ranks as a lecturer on the Identity there. He has done his work in a scholarly, efficient manner, and we welcome him to the ranks of those engaged in "publishing" the "good news" (Jer. xxxi. 7).

Correspondence.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—I beg to enclose to you an extract from Lady Anne Blunt's "Bedouins of the Euphrates," in which she gives an account of an impression amongst that people, of which I have never seen any mention before, but which you may deem remarkable enough to be considered as another blind testimony to our Identity.

JOHN J. FLETCHER.

The Birches, Upper Norwood,

"TADMOR IN THE DESERT, VOL. II., P. 44.

"Some of the blocks of stone are prodigious enough to move to admiration even the Tadmores, who will have it that they were put there by Suliman ibn Davud.

"Others, on the contrary, affirm that the English once had possession of the country long before the days of Solomon, and were the real builders of the city.

"We have constantly been asked about this latter point of history, both here and in Mesopotamia, but are quite unable to account for the belief, which is certainly prevalent, of England's claim to all this part of Arabia. The belief would be strong enough to prepare the way for any new occupation or annexation, if such were ever projected."

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements
(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O O payable at Ludgate-circus.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed :—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

BANNER OF ISRAEL. VOL. II. Now ready, price 7s., of all Booksellers.

Now ready price 7s., post free 6d. extra.

THE SECOND VOLUME OF THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.
EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

This volume contains a large number of articles on our Identity ith Lost Israel, by the best and most learned writers on the subject. Also many interesting papers on the Great Pyramid by Professor Piazzi Smyth, F R.S.E., Astronomer-Royal for Scotland, Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A., Major H. A. Tracey, R.A., Charles Horner, Esq., and others. London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

DOUBLE NUMBERS DURING 1879.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT.

Owing to the increasing interest taken in the Identity movement, it is found necessary to occasionally enlarge our space to make room for the important papers constantly reaching the Editor. It has, therefore, been determined to issue Twelve Double Numbers during 1879, for which Twopence will be charged. The first of these series of Double Numbers was issued the first week in January, and one on each succeeding first week in the month during the year.

	£	s.	d.
Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free	0	7	6
Two copies (including Double Numbers)	0	12	4
Three " " " "	0	18	8
Four " " " "	1	6	2
Six " " " "	1	17	4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-Grand, London, to W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

"BANNER OF ISRAEL" FREE CIRCULATION FUND.

DISTRIBUTION of the BANNER OF ISRAEL at the MAY MEETINGS. It is intended to distribute several thousand copies of the BANNER OF ISRAEL at the great meetings which will be held in London during the months of April, May, and June. Contributions towards this object will be received by R. FERGUSSON BANKS, Hon. Secretary to the Free Circulation Fund.

Highfields, Langham, Colchester, Essex.
March 5th, 1879.

DEAR SIR,—Many thanks for 100 BANNERS to hand this morning. As a lay preacher once a month at Stratford-St.-Mary's, Suffolk, I have brought the subject of our Identity with Lost Israel many times to the notice of my hearers. I am glad to have the BANNERS to distribute among them, as also among some labouring men we meet with on Friday evenings in Langham, to read the Bible and Identity works, and pray that our gracious God may bless us as a Nation, by pouring upon us all those rich blessings which He has promised (Jer. xxxi. 31: Heb. viii. 8). I hope and pray that the men and women of Israel will respond freely to your call for funds for the Free Circulation of the BANNER OF ISRAEL, that you may be able to sow it broadcast over the length and breadth of our land, that under the influence of the Divine Spirit, Britain's sons and daughters may awake to the knowledge of their high destiny and glorious privileges as the sons of the living God, the long-lost son, but now found; was dead, but alive again.

Allow me again to thank you for myself and daughters, And remain, yours truly,
Mr. R. F. Banks. J. F. G.

FUNDS URGENTLY NEEDED to carry on this work. Communications to be addressed to the Secretary of the "Banner of Israel Free Circulation Fund," Mr. R. Fergusson Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-st., London, E.C., to whom all remittances for this object should also be made, but NOT to the Editor of the BANNER—Philo-Israel.

Now ready, price One penny, post free 1½d. One dozen copies, post free 1s. 100 copies 6s., post free 7s.

THE IDENTITY OF THE BRITISH NATION WITH THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. THE CLUE TO THE EASTERN QUESTION. By C. W. E.
London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row

BOOKS, ETC.

This day. Price 2d. Post free 2½d.

MANASSEH AND THE UNITED STATES. An important Essay delivered before the "Lost Israel Identification Society," by the Rev. Joseph Wild, D.D., at Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, New York.

THE WILL of JACOB MADE to EPHRAIM and MANASSEH.—See "Manasseh and the United States," by Dr. Wild.—Price 2d.

OUT of SIXTY CONQUERED COLONIES the ONLY ONE ENGLAND EVER LOST was that of MANASSEH.—See "Manasseh and the United States," by Dr. Wild.—Price 2d.

MANASSEH IS A PEOPLE, and a GREAT PEOPLE.—See "Manasseh and the United States," by Dr. Wild.—Price 2d.

THE FOOTSTEPS of EPHRAIM and MANASSEH.—See "Manasseh and the United States," by Dr. Wild.—Price 2d.; post free 2½d.

MANASSEH BROUGHT UP at the FOOT of the PYRAMID.—See "Manasseh and the United States," by Dr. Wild.—Price 2d.; post free 2½d. London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; and W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

TO AUTHORS. Authors desirous of issuing Works or Pamphlets on the great and increasingly interesting Question of the Identity of the Lost Ten Tribes with the British Nation, should first communicate with Robert Banks, of Racquet-court, Fleet-street, who has already been honoured by issuing, amongst others, the following works on the subject:

The Banner of Israel. Weekly 1d.; monthly 7d.

The Nation's Glory Leader. Weekly 1d.; quarterly 10d. 4d.

The Pillar of Witness. By late Captain Tracey. Cloth 2s. 6d.; paper 1s 6d (second edition).

The Anglo-Israel Post Bag. By Bishop Titcomb. Cloth 2s. 6d.; paper 1s. 6d. (second edition).

The History of the House of Israel. By Philo-Israel. Cloth 1s.; paper 6d (sixth thousand)

The Great Pyramid of Egypt. Fifty-two pages, with three illustrations. Price 4d. (10,000).

The New Old Story. By A E I. Cloth 1s.

NOW READY, Price 1d.; post free, 1½d.

GOD'S LOVE FOR ISRAEL. A GUARANTEE THAT HE WILL FULFIL HIS PROMISES TO ISRAEL. By JOHN GILDER SHAW.

Price 6d.; or with illustrative map, 8d.

BRITAIN (OR ISRAEL) THE FIFTH AND LAST, AND THE UNCONQUERABLE EMPIRE. By JOHN GILDER SHAW.

Price 3d.; post free, 3½d.

CHRONOLOGICAL CHART OF BRITISH VICTORIES OVER THE CONTINENTAL POWERS, ranging from the battle of Cressy (1346), to our last victory, the taking of Sebastopol, Sept. 8, 1855. Arranged by J. G. SHAW, of Leeds.

"We trust Mr. Shaw's labour in preparing this paper may be appreciated by the public and be largely sold."—Banner of Israel.

Shortly will pe published, price 6d.

RESULTS OF ISRAEL'S OBEDIENCE. A review of the successive steps which have led to the present condition of Britain (or Israel), the Fifth and Last Empire.

London: Published by Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; and may be had of the Author, 20 Park-row, Leeds, and of all booksellers.

DEAFNESS CURED, NOISES IN THE EARS, &c.
SPECIAL OFFER TO THE DEAF.

THE REV. E. J. SILVERTON having discovered that there are tens of thousands who are unable to obtain his 11s Box of Aurial Remedy which has cured so many persons of Deafness and Noises in the Ears, &c., begs now to offer a 2s. 6d. Box of the Medicine, so as to put it within the reach of all. This arrangement is specially made to meet the deaf world. With every box of medicine will be presented the Rev. E J. Silverton's "Health Advocate," containing valuable advice and information that everyone ought to know. Post Office Orders for 2s. 6d. to E. J SILVERTON, Minister of Exeter Hall Church, Nottingham, or stamps, 2s. 8d.

WOOLS! WOOLS! WOOLS! Cheapest and Best. White and Black Berlin, Single and Double, 3s. 6d. per pound. Best quality Ice Wools, all Colours, 5½. per ounce ball. All other Wools at proportionate prices. Shetland, Andalusian, Fleecy, and Bonne Mere Wools. Welsh, Scotch, Peacock Victoria, and other Yarns. Crewel Filoselle Silk.
M. WHELLENS, Wholesale and Retail Wool Warehouse, 3, 5, and 6, QUEEN'S TERRACE, CAMDEN ROAD, LONDON, N.
Send for Price List, forwarded post free.

MISCELLANEOUS.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

TWO LECTURES will be delivered (D.V.) in the MASONIC HALL, WOOD GREEN, as follows:—

Tuesday, April 15th, CHARLES STUBBS, Esq., B.A. Subject: "Our Inheritance in the Pyramid."

Tuesday, April 22nd, DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, Esq., J.P. Subject: "The Stone Kingdom of Daniel—Britain, the Fifth Monarchy."

The chair will be taken at 8 o'clock each evening. Admission Free. Inquirers are cordially invited. Tickets for Reserved Seats may be had on application at Messrs. WOOD & SON'S Office, Wood-green; Mr. EDWARDS, Post Office, Wood-green; Mr. OMBLER, Chemist, New Southgate; and at the Office of the Association, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C. At the close of each Lecture a Collection will be taken in aid of the Funds of the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association.

Shortly will be issued.

HISTORICAL AND ETHNOLOGICAL ARGUMENTS in support of OUR IDENTITY, simply and clearly stated.
BY PHILO-ISRAEL.
The Price will be 2d. or 3d.

Now ready.

THE GENTILES AND THE TIMES OF THE GENTILES. By J. LEYLAND FEILDEN, Author of "Links in the Chain of Evidence Connecting Israel and England," and "Israel's Jubilee; or, 1882." Price 6d., by post 7d.
W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick Lane, E.C.

THE GREAT PYRAMID. NOW READY, PHILO-ISRAEL'S NEW WORK. 56 pages, Illustrated with Diagrams, price 4d., post free 5d.

AN ELEMENTARY DIGEST or SKETCH OF THE CHIEF FACTS and TEACHINGS of the GREAT PYRAMID of EGYPT: adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific. By PHILO-ISRAEL; together with Original Papers by the following leading Pyramidists, republished mostly from the BANNER OF ISRAEL (by kind permission of the proprietor)—viz., Professor Piazzi Smyth, the Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A., Charles Horner Esq., and Major H. A. Tracey, R.A. Being a pamphlet by five authors (a Pyramid number).

Opinion of Mr. Charles Horner, regarding the above work, after perusal of the same:—"I think your design of the Pyramid pamphlet excellent. I know well that it is a book urgently needed, since, under God's blessing, it will, I feel convinced, convert many to Christ. Your part Philo-Israel's) I deem unexceptionable. It is both terse and understandable to the many, which is the great object you have had in view. I should like to see thousands circulated amongst our intelligent artisans, and hope God will raise some to do this."—C. HORNER, Dec. 12, 1878.
London: W. H Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

SOME of PHILO-ISRAEL'S papers, as they have appeared in THE BANNER, will be separately published from time to time in the form of Letters, for distribution.

No. 1. "The Identity of the British with Lost Israel."
No. 2. "The Glory of God."
No. 3. "An Address to British Soldiers." (Now ready.)
No. 4. "An Address to British Sailors." (Now ready.)

Others will follow. Price One and Sixpence per 100; less quantities in proportion: postage extra.

Apply to R. Banks, 5 Racquet-court, Fleet-street. Also all Booksellers and Publishers.

Second edition, sixth thousand.

Fancy paper covers, 6d.; cloth, gilt lettered, flush, 1s.

THE HISTORY OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL: How They Were Lost, and How They Were Found. Told for the children. By PHILO-ISRAEL. Adapted for use by parents, Sunday School and other teachers, with questions on the chapters added.

For favourable notices of this work by Professor Piazzi Smyth, John T. Gott, Esq., and others, see handbills. W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

"The History of the House of Israel—told for the children—is a very valuable addition to our children's libraries. It gives a clear account of all the chief points of interest, in language suited to the comprehension of children, and ought to be in the hands of every mother and teacher who believes in our Identity with Israel. It supplies a want I have long felt as the mother of a large family."

Just Published, price 3d.

EPISCOPACY, NOT ESTABLISHMENT, THE BANE OF THE NATIONAL CHURCH.
BY A LAY MEMBER OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND.
W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row; and the Protestant Tract Society, 17, Buckingham-st., Strand.

Just out.

NOTES ON THE VISIONS OF ZECHARIAH VIEWED IN THE LIGHT OF THE IDENTITY OF THE TEN LOST TRIBES. By J. A. H. Price 1s. paper covers; 1s 6d. cloth.
W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick Lane, E.C.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, 5, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, APRIL 16, 1879.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. III. No. 121. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, APRIL 23, 1879. [ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
"Perplexity" and "Suspense"	165
Identity Truth from the Stony Rock. By Thomas Bales. Part I.	166
A French Newspaper Calls the British "Israel"	166
Identity Difficulties Answered. Cui Bono? Part II.	167
Cui Bono? A Reply to those whose Argument is "We have Salvation in Christ, What do we Want More?" By H. S.	167
The Geography of the Gates. No. XXVIII.—New Zealand	168
The Earl of Beaconsfield and His Works.—Part V.	169
"The Imminence of the Lord's Coming. An Objection to Mr. Horner's and Mr. Westfield's Views thereon Considered. By Douglas A. Onslow	170
Israel's Revenue for the Year ended April, 1879	170
Major-General Sir Arthur Cunynghame on Confederation in South Africa	171
Correspondence	171

"PERPLEXITY" AND "SUSPENSE."

IF we were asked to describe the condition of public opinion at the present moment as it relates to the affairs of the world about us, we should use as the most appropriate the two words at the head of this article. There is "perplexity" everywhere, and men are "in suspense," waiting with bated breath for the next news from the four quarters of the earth, in all of which there are troubles, wars, rumours of wars, distresses, and political disturbances going on! From Zululand early in April we received very distressing tidings of a fresh disaster; more slaughter of brave British troops overpowered by an equally brave and daring foe, whom we allow to surprise our fifties by his thousands, and pay accordingly the penalty of precious lives, with valuable convoys worth almost their weight in gold! This leads us here to "perplexity." In "the earth" there is "distress of nations," and everywhere, including "Israel in the West," there is dire "perplexity," (Luke xxi. 25). But are we not also in "suspense?" "men's hearts are in truth failing them for fear, looking after those things which are coming on 'the earth.'" The Lord described men's minds as in suspense, waiting for events seen to be approaching which appear of evil omen, and surely that is our attitude to-day? Will Col. Pearson's gallant band be relieved at Ekowe in time? Was the effort to relieve him, which was to have been made by the British reinforcements on the 26th March last, successful, or did it end, as all these Zulu matters lately have, in fresh disasters?

As to Afghanistan, we are in the same position! There are not wanting from that distant quarter elements of "perplexity," and matters to cause us to be in "suspense." Yakoob Khan has made no sign! Peace or further war, both seem as yet quite possible, and all is unsettled as to the future! The robber tribes in our rear, and all around our advanced posts, seem ever ready to rise and contest the position with us. Repeated defeats have not yet taught them the lessons of submission.

Then there is Burmah and its murderous drunken despot. What do his preparations mean? Does he purpose to make Mandalay the scene of an atrocious crime by the murder of our Chief Commissioner there, and so precipitate matters that we shall be forced to depose him and annex the little that remains of his dominions? There is "perplexity" about that, and we are in suspense, too, looking after those things that are coming on the Burmese earth! Looking nearer home, what are we to say to the state of things now in Egypt! Has the Khedive gone mad? Why has he defied the British and the French Governments, his best friends, by suddenly dismissing both their representatives from his Council? Will the crisis end in violent measures by the combined Powers? and the Viceroy—will he be permitted to retain his throne? There is perplexity about Egypt, and some men's hearts who hold Egyptian Bonds are failing them for fear of the things that are coming on the dominions of the Khedive! And then there is the old sore—the Eastern Question—now coming to a head again as the month of May approaches; the interest all centering on the future of Eastern Roumelia and Bulgaria—whether the mixed occupation will be acceptable to the Porte, whether the Russian Government will act honourably in the matter, and whether the "mixed occupation," if carried out, can end in peace or will precipitate matters and terminate in a fresh outbreak of war? There is great perplexity about these things in men's minds, and men's hearts are all on the Continent failing them, in very fact, for fear, looking for those things—things of war and bloodshed, and horrors unmitigated—which certainly are coming upon "the earth."

At home, besides the anxieties above enumerated, we have trials of our own, which cause us all to look grave, to feel perplexed beyond measure, and to look with alarm on those things which seem to be coming even on our own beloved land! The strikes of labourers in the North of England continue, distress in trade is not yet past, there is depression still of a grievous kind in many centres of commercial activity, and how these things are to end is what we are many of us asking ourselves, even in Israel's comparatively happy home! In reply, we beg our readers to recollect where we are in the stream of time. We are standing just opposite to the narrow entrance of the passage leading from the Southern end of the Great Pyramid's Grand Gallery towards the ante-chamber, and up against the impending Southern wall! It is the darkest hour for us, just before the day-dawn, ere the Master comes to pour out His Holy Spirit upon the nation, and to take up His chosen few to be with Him "in the air," what time the judgments are being poured out upon "the earth," and upon His enemies therein (Isa. xxvi. 20, 21; Zeph. iii. 8; Isa. xlii. 13, 14; 1 Thess. iv. 16, 18, v. 1—5). We would have our readers then fix their eye upon their coming Lord, and on the blessings He is about to shower down on us, rather than on the troubles and difficulties that surround us. Our Identity brings us all the comfort we require. The "fear nots" of the Old Testament warn us by their re-iteration, that the scenes we have now to pass through as a nation are very terrible in their character, but He tells us that He means to bring us safely through them all. Let us not then be Israelites in vain! Let us recollect that to us He spoke when He said, "Fear not THOU, for I am with thee; be not dismayed, for I am THY God; I will strengthen thee, yea, I will help thee: yea, I will uphold thee with the right hand of My righteousness. Behold, all they that were incensed against thee shall be ashamed and confounded, they shall be as nothing, and they that strive with thee shall perish" (Isa. xli. 10, 11). Let us recollect finally, that just when we see these dark clouds gathering about us, when the "perplexity" has arrived and men's hearts with good cause "are failing them for fear," and because of the anxiety and suspense of the look-out, then it is our blessed Lord's injunction to us British Israelites becomes clear and express—"When these things," He said, "BEGIN to come to pass, then look up and lift up your heads, for YOUR redemption draweth nigh" (Luke xxi. 28).

Digitized by Google

April 14th, 1879.

IDENTITY TRUTH FROM THE STONY "ROCK."

BY THOMAS BALES.

PART I.

THE Rock of March 7th contained, in addition to the articles disparaging the Identity, others blindly confirmatory of it. A theory is established by its facts. Acknowledged facts prove the Identity; but the editor of the Rock, accepting them, rejects it. This momentous subject—the sublimest that ever engrossed the attention of man—is advancing, and will advance, in spite of all opposition, abuse, and ridicule. It needs not the Rock's aid; God Himself is its strength. It will stand for ever, based upon the Rock of Ages.

Some follow religion when it walks abroad in silver slippers, who rejected it when it exposed them to scorn. Many believe the Identity, but dread to avow it openly. To bear insult and contumely requires the courage of Christian men; but those who have felt in their hearts the beneficial effects of the Identity will patiently bear the heat and burden of the day, conscious that they are labouring in the Lord's vineyard. Others will aid their labours at the eleventh hour. Ere long the Identity will be regarded as a saving faith; conviction will be brought home to the Rock, and from it will gush living water.

One of its articles, "Our Prayer Union," reflecting on the national vain-gloriousness, speaks of it as being "without any due acknowledgment to Him who has made us what we are, and who, in past times, has gone forth with our fleets and armies, 'giving us the victory over all our enemies.' Indeed, the absence of all national recognition of the Lord's hand in our present protracted financial depression is worthy of solemn inquiry." Thus far the Rock.

The former part proves the editor has the Identity truth within him, for what is this but its teaching? And with what conscience can he use harsh and disrespectful language to fellow-Christians ardently striving to promote this national recognition? Did he read the BANNER he would be edified. In the same article he records with joy the increase of prayer, and augurs therefrom "great and blessed results," and uses the following Identity words:—

We have still many national, political, and other mercies for which we should not omit to thank Him. For example—
Peace and security within our borders.
The blessed Book, and its wide circulation at home and abroad.
A Gospel ministry—though in reduced numbers—still preserved amongst us.
Afghan successes, and the prospects of peace in that quarter, &c., &c.

These to us are but an oft-told tale. They seem to have been culled from the writings of men strongly impressed with the truth of the Identity; men who not only praise the Lord for His love to His people, but seek to proclaim His name the wide world o'er. And these are but a few of His tender mercies! But to proceed. The Rock next states:—

There are numerous topics for prayer, such as—
The revival of true religion at home and abroad.
Speedy return of peace in India and Africa.
Repentance for sin and restoration of our temporal mercies.
Deliverance from "plague, pestilence, and famine," now visiting the earth, and constituting solemn "signs of the times."
The future of Israel apparently involved in the Eastern Question (and of Judah likewise, we add).

Week after week all these are strongly enforced in the BANNER, and by all Identity workers. Advocating the same great and noble truths as the editor of the Rock, it follows that, if our teachings are wrong, his cannot be right; and, if we pervert Scripture and dishonour God, he must also.

Again:—

The speedy termination of the Cape war, and the safety of her Majesty's possessions there.
The exercise of God's restraining power in South Africa to control the action of the Zulus and other native tribes.
Above all, that God the Holy Ghost would enlighten us all, rulers and people, on the subject of our obligation to Him, on the responsibilities arising from our Christian privileges, and on the dangers threatening our Reformation principles, our free institutions, and our national prosperity, and give us His grace to offer to the Triune Jehovah a service more and more consistent with the religion we profess.

The editor of the Rock must be a believer in the Identity. It is difficult to conceive that an opponent of the Identity should ever be publishing Identity truths and exhortations. He may rail at us; but we rejoice in him. Some unwittingly have trod on holy ground. To one of old it was said: "Thou art not far from the kingdom of God;" to the editor of the Rock we say: Thou staunch supporter of Protestant principles, we have hope of thee: thy eyes shall see the glorious truth of the Identity, and the Bible enthroned in the hearts of all.

(To be continued).

A FRENCH NEWSPAPER CALLS THE BRITISH "ISRAEL."

WE take the following from the London papers of February 15, 1879:—

"PARIS, Friday night.

"The République Française, returning to-day to the subject of the Zulu War, notices what it calls the pernicious habit of the Liberal press in England, of charging Lord Beaconsfield WITH ALL THE SINS OF ISRAEL. A railway accident, a collision at sea, is each the fault of the Cabinet of St. James's. It would not, continues the République, have been surprising if Lord Beaconsfield had been made an accomplice of King Cetewayo!" We would add, for the benefit of the Rock,

"O wad the powers some giftie gie us
To see OURSELS as ithers see us!
It wad frae monie a blunder free us,
And foolish notion!"—Burns.

Digitized by Google

IDENTITY DIFFICULTIES ANSWERED.

Cui Bono?

(Continued from page 162).

PART II.

There have been many answers to this difficulty, and it was an argument which was once oftener in our opponents' mouths than now. We meet with it, however, now and again, and think it expedient to collect into one paper, or focus, all that is to be said regarding it of an important character to guide the inquirer and instruct the searcher after truth, who is often discouraged by the bold, and, we may say, impious question: "Cui bono?" "Suppose we are Israel, what good will it do us?"

We publish below a very excellent paper by an inquiring friend, H. S., who is "almost persuaded" that we be Israel. He answers, from his point of view, the question "Cui bono?" Let our readers study this reply, and we think, if candid, they must see they have a cogent answer. For ourselves, we recorded, some time since, a strong reason for the hope that is in us, showing why we should embrace the views we advocate, even because they make for

"God's Glory."

Our article on this topic, which has been published separately as one of Philo-Israel's "Letters" to the public, will be found at page 223, vol. i., Banner of Israel, No. 27. The reasons assigned there seem to us the best of all grounds for regarding the Israelite origin of the British as of vast importance, for it affects "God's glory," His oath, His honour, His faithfulness, His truth, His redeeming love; and surely these things are of moment to us, His servants, His chosen people? If we love Him, His honour cannot be indifferent to us! Regarding that as our chief concern, we can reply to the Cui bono inquiry, that what satisfies "the whole heart and the whole soul" of the great Jehovah, is our great object (Jer. xxxii. 41).

A very good paper on the subject of Cui bono, regarded from the stand-point of "God's Glory," was published at page 242, vol. ii., Life from the Dead, by S. A. T., a "Solicitor;" we urge our readers to refer to it again, and note its contents.

The discovery and restoration of Israel to God's favour, as well as to their land with His afflicted ones, the Jews, will be the means of silencing the infidel. Such results have already been attained; for the unbeliever in God's Word, seeing that His promises specially given to Israel in that Word are fulfilled —not to a purely Gentile race, the British, as he imagined, but to the outcast, Gentilised, Lo-Ammi Israelites of the banished, but truly blessed House of Joseph, the Ten Tribes, he admits the Scriptures, after all, are literally true, the God of those Scriptures a God of truth and faithfulness and "right" (Hosea xiv. 9). Thus, again, God's glory is served, and this is another answer to the question, Cui bono?

Further, to find Israel is "to hasten on the coming" of our dear Lord Jesus Christ (2 Peter iii. 12). He comes to complete the national redemption of His people (Luke xxi. 28). He returns to the earth to save them from their enemies, and to reign over His ancients gloriously (Isa. xxiv. 23; Zech. xiv. 4, xii. 10). This furnishes a glorious answer to the inquiry, Cui bono?

Again, what hope is there for Judah, save in the discovery and restoration of Israel of the Ten-Tribed House? Not till "the stick of Joseph, which is in the hand of Ephraim, and the Tribes of Israel his fellows," is found, can the stick of Judah "be given to them upon it" (Banner, No. 117, page 131, 1st column). Finding Israel, Judah walks to Israel's House, the two Houses become one nation, under one King, and the reign of glory of their Prince of David can only then commence. Our subject, therefore, is a true answer to the Cui bono question, for only after Israel be found can the disabilities and curses of the Jews be removed. He is an enemy of God's ancient people, the Jews, who sets his face against the Israelitish origin of the British, now proved to be the Lost Tribes of the House of Israel.

Once more, what Christian man of our race but longs for the conversion of the Gentiles? But can we look for their national repentance and profession of Christ's religion in their masses now as the result of missionary operations? Nay, do we not know that we merely preach "this Gospel of the kingdom in all the world 'for a witness' unto all nations, and then shall the end come?" (Matt. xxiv. 14). But after "the end," when, Israel being found, and the two sticks, Israel and Judah, are united, then, God's Word says, "Many people and strong nations shall come to seek the Lord of hosts in Jerusalem, and to pray before the Lord" (Zech. viii. 22).

The Identity, then, leads direct to the conversion of "many people" (not all) "and of strong nations," and he surely is no lover of the souls of Gentile nations in the mass, who desires to discourage the discovery of God's lost nation, seeing that only after such discovery can Gentiles, as nations, be won for Christ.

We have said enough. Our friend H. S. deals with the spiritual blessings to come of our national acceptance of, and belief in, our Identity; and those blessings are of such stupendous and magnificent proportions, that we do not envy the condition of that Christian's mind who, knowing what those blessings really are, would interfere in the very least degree with the effort to find Lost Israel; nay, who, when the announcement is made that the House of Israel is really found, fails to feel the bounding joy, the glorious hope, full of immortality, which is connected with the salvation of the whole Anglo-Saxon race; which embraces in its blessed scope, not only each believer's children, his servants, his neighbours, his fellow-townsmen, his fellow-countrymen, his fellow-subjects, too, but all the component elements of the whole Anglo-Saxon races here in the British Empire, in Manasseh's land as well, and will also lead to the salvation of Gentiles pure as nations. We merely note, in passing, also as fresh answers to the now stupid Cui bono query, that, by the Identity, there accrue to us the following benefits:—

1. Our national existence is guaranteed for ever under God's oath to Abraham (Gen. xvii. 7, 8, xxii. 17, 18).
2. Our Sabbaths and our religious privileges are ours, and our children's, and our children's children's, for ever (Exod. xxxi. 13—17).
3. Our hereditary Monarchy and stable Government for ever are the outcome of the Identity, and these are worth having (2 Sam. vii. 13—16).
4. Civil and religious liberty are secured to our nation by it, as part of the exceeding prosperity promised to us (Jer. xxxiii. 9).

These benefits may be indefinitely multiplied, but our space warns us to desist. We beg now, therefore, to introduce our friend H. S. to our readers, and hope this may not be the last of his excellent contributions to our pages.

CUI BONO?

A reply to those whose argument is "We have salvation in Christ, what do we want more?"

By H. S.

In considering this argument the question is forced upon us, Can it be right to hold that the "blessings" promised to Abraham are no blessings at all compared with those which Gentiles possess in Christ? What would you think of a poor benighted heathen if, when offered all the advantage that riches, civilisation, education, and good government could give, he contemned them all? You would naturally pity his want of appreciation of these blessings. Or, knowing all that is involved in the proud saying, "Civis Romanus Sum," what would you think of the Roman slave who, when offered his liberty, said "No, I have found Christ, I will remain a slave?" You might think it very noble, but your mind would be different to that of Paul, who said, "if thou mayest be free, use it rather" (1 Cor. vii. 21). God in His sovereign dealings with the world has promised great national blessings to one nation, and shall we venture to say "We do not care for them? we do not want them?" Surely this is not right. If God considers them so pre-eminently valuable as to enter into a binding covenant to give them unconditionally to a nation—and that a sinful nation—surely we should not despise them? Let us fear the example of Esau who held his birthright so lightly (Gen. xxv. 34).

Digitized by Google

But let us look at the "promises," and I think we—even those amongst us who value our present spiritual privileges most highly—will find they are promises we ought to value. Passing by the promises which are already fulfilled, or are being fulfilled before our eyes, and which I think strongly tend to identify the Anglo-Saxon race with long-Lost Israel, such as the multitudinous seed promised to Abraham (Gen. xxviii. 14), or the becoming a multitude of nations promised to Ephraim's seed (Gen. xlviii. 19), let us look at unfulfilled promises (Ezek. xxxvii. 21—26).

Observe here that, in a time yet future, Israel and Judah shall be united in one kingdom in their own land, and then God will establish a "new—"an everlasting" (ver. 26)—covenant" with them. Now let us see what that covenant is. It is described in Jer. xxxi. 31—34; and Heb. viii. 10, 11.

Here, then, is a glorious promise to literal Israel. Is this of no value? Probably you will say, "It is most precious, but I enjoy this by faith in Christ." True, but do you care for no one but yourself? Observe the word "all"—"all shall know Me"—all Israel shall know Me. Here is a promise of unspeakable value to the literal House of Israel, to ALL of them, and to them only. Where do we find such a promise to Gentiles? God is calling out of them "a people for His name." "By faith" these become children of Abraham and heirs of the promise, and are then grafted into the stock of Israel; and in this matter of personal salvation there is "no difference between Jew and Gentile," both being "saved by faith;" but there is a time coming when Israel shall have this blessing of "knowing the Lord" in all its fulness as the covenant gift of God.

Here, then, is something for us who have children or friends and relations for whom we are anxious. If we are Israel, we can wait in hope for the promise, and pray God to hasten the time when "all" shall indeed "know" Him. If we are Israel, what a happy prospect! If we are Israel, what an interest have we in the prophetical Scriptures! If we are Israel, we shall delight in "the signs of the times," which seem to foreshadow that "our (national) redemption draweth nigh." If we are Israel, the more we realise the fact, the more will our hopes rise that we shall yet see temporal and spiritual blessings more and more richly enjoyed by our country and by all who are dear to us. And lastly, if we are Israel, we can with adoring wonder comprehend God's gracious dealings with us as a nation, in having committed to us the oracles of God, in giving us to enjoy the privileges of the Sabbath, and the ordinances of His house, in giving us righteous national laws founded on the laws of God, and in thus granting to us pre-eminently above all the other nations of the earth those blessings which He has promised to Abraham and his seed for ever. It cannot be said we enjoy these blessings for "our righteousness," for, as it was said of Israel of old, we are a "stiff-necked people;" but God of His goodness having given them to us, surely we should acknowledge that they are blessings worth desiring, worth valuing. Such is my answer to "Cui bono?"

(To be continued.)

THE GEOGRAPHY OF THE GATES.

(Continued from page 43).

No. XXVIII.—NEW ZEALAND.

WE have always regarded the antipodean colony of Great Britain, New Zealand, as a veritable Gate of the Pacific Ocean, and of all Australasia besides. Lying at the very confines of the Southern and Western habitable world, this "possession" faces, Westward, an immense archipelago, comprising innumerable clusters of islands of the South Pacific, lying in the direct course of trade with America and Europe. To this island-studded ocean, New Zealand operates, we conceive, as a "Gate." It points with no uncertain signs to the eventual absorption by the owners of New Zealand, of all those important groups of islets of the South Pacific, which the paramount Australasian Power (Israel again!) may deem needful to possess in order to establish her world-wide commerce, and her maritime supremacy in the Pacific as in the other ocean highways of the world. Thus acting, the Great Gate of the Antipodes has necessitated our recent acquisition of the Fijis. Ere long we anticipate the Samoan Group will be incorporated, and, sooner or later, the whole of the other islands of the South Pacific Ocean, lying in the track of European trade, must fall, we deem, into Israel's hands, as the possessors of the Continent of Australia, of the magnificent islands, Tasmania, New Zealand, and the Fijis.

New Zealand consists of three islands—two large, and one very small; the two former, divided by a narrow strait, bearing Cook's name, are in united length 1,200 miles. New Ulster, New Munster, and New Leinster, as the three are named, are situated at the very antipodes of the British Islands, and form "the New Zealand Group." This grand British "Gate" was discovered in 1642, by a Dutch sailor, Abel Jansen Tasman, who first set eyes on Tasmania. He called the group Staaten Land in honour of the Dutch States General. Next year, however, it received its present name of "New Zealand." Cook, the famous voyager, visited the group three times between A.D. 1769 and 1777. It first attracted British attention when, in 1814, the Church Missionary Society established a station in the Bay of Islands. The Wesleyans followed; then settlers from New South Wales.

In 1832 a Frenchman made some efforts to secure a footing in the islands for his own countrymen; but the prompt measures taken by a British Resident, sent from New South Wales, averted the danger. The latter induced some of the Maori chiefs of the Northern Islands to petition for British protection. This was granted in 1839, when, with a resident population of 2,000 British subjects in the islands, a British Consul was appointed for New Zealand. From that moment the destiny of the islands was fixed. Jacob had grasped "the possession," and forthwith he began to play the rôle of the "supplanter;" "to push the people together to the ends of the earth" (Deut. xxxiii. 17), and to acquire what he obtained for himself. The natives resisted these encroachments; and wars broke out in 1845, and again in 1860, which were not put down by the British without the expenditure of much blood and treasure. The red men proved themselves "foemen worthy of our steel"—brave, skilful; and, behind their stockaded pahs, no mean or contemptible enemies. At last, the Imperial Government, weary of the strife, entered on a new colonial policy, and, abandoning the struggling colonists to their own efforts against their native enemies, withdrew the whole of the British regiments which had, till then, fought their battles for them in New Zealand. The result was most beneficial for all concerned. The colonists of the North and middle islands set themselves henceforth to effect two objects:—(1) to increase the population, by emigration from the mother country; and (2) to employ natives to help in opening up the North island, by making roads and railways, instead of unprofitably slaying them in war.

Digitized by Google

The effect of the new policy has been that 80,000 assisted emigrants have been poured into the colony within the last seven years, and about 1,000 miles of railways, besides roads, have been made! Peace and prosperity have been the consequence. The products of the colony since that period—animal, vegetable, and mineral—have increased in a marvellous manner, and native wars are, it is hoped, things of the past; since the Maori is still steadily "dying out" before the "pushing" overwhelming influence of the Anglo-Saxon.

"At the present day the colony of New Zealand, with a population of 399,075 Anglo-Saxons, besides 45,470 Maoris, has as many sheep as the large colony of Victoria, and about half the number of the enormous colony of New South Wales." Its acreage under cultivation compares very favourably with that of the Australian States; and its coal-fields are abundant, easily worked, and yield coal of an excellent quality.

The reader thus sees that the capabilities of this rising daughter of the Western-island parent are wonderful indeed. New Zealand promises to become one of the most powerful of "the Company of Nations" which are destined yet to belong to Israel, as the central link. The colony has, in fact, confederated its component parts, and is therefore a "nation" born already. It enjoys Parliamentary representative government (European and native), and is tied to the mother country by the single slender thread of the British Governor, or Viceroy, an officer nominated by the Crown. And yet there is not one of the colonial possessions of this Israelitish British nation which excels it in loyalty and love towards the mother country; for both animate the colony of New Zealand in a marked degree.

It is hardly necessary to say that this growing colony enjoys a superb climate, well suited to the European, but especially to the British, constitution. The vast majority of its European occupants come from the United Kingdom, and, therefore, are of the pure Israelitish stock.

A word here as to the rapid increase of the population of the purely British colonies will be instructive, and give the reader an idea what an enormous power these offshoots of our empire already represent, even in their young infancy. The Parliamentary return estimated the population, in 1871, of British North America as about 3,750,000; Australia, including New Zealand, about 2,000,000; the Cape and Natal about 850,000; or, in round numbers, a total of 6,600,000. The same return shows the numbers in 1850 to have been less than 3,500,000, being, for British North America, about 2,500,000; Australia and New Zealand together, about 550,000; the Cape and Natal about 400,000. This shows a total increase in twenty-one years only, of more than 88 per cent.

"What will be the future increase" (asked Mr. W. E. Forster, M.P., in Edinburgh, in November, 1875), "who can tell?" He estimated that these colonies alone, in the beginning of the twentieth century, will start with a population of at least 15,000,000; that of the United Kingdom in 1955 being 63,000,000. He thinks then that, in that year, the colonies of Great Britain will contain a population of more than 82,000,000; their proportion to that of the United Kingdom being as 82 is to 63. These are wonderful results, and prove to us, by undeniable statistics, that the future of this empire is magnificent indeed, and that "the nation and company of nations" (including Manasseh America) must, by force of mere numbers, position, character, and power, rule the whole world. New Zealand lies between the parallels of South latitude 34° 23′, and 47° 19′, and East longitude 167° and 178°, its area being equal to a fifth part more than the superficial dimensions of Great Britain.

The North island is chiefly volcanic in formation. It possesses numerous rivers abundantly fed by the snows of the mountain regions, and by the plentiful rains of the interior. The climate nearly resembles that of England as to temperature. It is moister, however, the rainfall, and the number of days on which rain occurs, being in excess of that of England. The winds blow with great violence, especially during early summer; and this contributes to the salubrity of the climate. The provinces of the Northern island are Wellington, Hawke Bay, Auckland, Taranaki; those of the South island, Nelson, Marlborough, Canterbury, Otago, Southland.

Taken as a whole, this Southern Antipodean Gate, with imports, in 1876, of £7,000,000, and exports of £5,678,000 sterling, is a glorious "possession" of Israel, and is worthy to rank as a first-class heritage, advancing the power and influence of the "chosen race" Southward and Eastward, across the broad South Pacific Ocean; and extending, in an efficient way, the commanding position Israel has been assigned, in the neighbouring Island of Tasmania, and in the colossal Island-Continent, Australia.

(To be followed by a paper on the Falklands).

THE EARL OF BEACONSFIELD AND HIS WORKS.

By John S. Anderson.

(Concluded from page 162.)

PART V.

"What a droll thing is history," said Fakredeen. "Ah! if I were only acquainted with it, my education would be complete. Should you call me a Gentile?"

"I have great doubts whether such an appellation could be extended to the descendants of Ishmael. I always look upon you as a member of the sacred race. It is a great thing for any man; for you it may tend to empire."

"Was Julius Cæsar a Gentile?"

"Unquestionably."

"And Iskander?" (Alexander, of Macedon.)

"No doubt; the two most illustrious Gentiles that ever existed, and representing the two great races on the shores of the Mediterranean, to which the apostolic views were first directed."

"Well, their blood, though Gentile, led to empire," said Fakredeen.

"But what are their conquests to those of Jesus Christ?" said Tancred, with great animation. "Where are their dynasties? where their subjects? They were both deified; who burns incense to them now? Their descendants, both Greek and Romans, bow before the altars of the House of David. The House of David is worshipped at Rome itself; at every seat of great and growing empire in the world; at London, at St. Petersburg, at New York. Asia alone is faithless to the Asian; but Asia has been overrun by Turks and Tartars. For nearly five hundred years the true Oriental mind has been enthralled. Arabia alone has remained free and faithful to the Divine tradition. From its bosom we shall go forth and sweep away the mouldering remnants of the Tartaric system; and then, when the East has resumed its indigenous intelligence, when angels and prophets again mingle with humanity, the sacred quarter of the globe will recover its primeval and Divine supremacy; it will act upon the modern empires, and the faint-hearted faith of Europe, which is but the shadow of a shade, will become as vigorous as befits men who are in sustained communication with the Creator! . . . . Sons of Israel, when you recollect that you created Christendom, you may pardon the Christians even their autos-de-fé!"

At the close of his last interview with Astarte, the Queen of the Ansarey, Tancred said:

"I have been the unconscious agent in petty machinations; I must return to the Desert to recover the purity of my mind. It is Arabia alone that can regenerate the world."

Very near the conclusion of the book the following will be found:—

Digitized by Google

"This is a curious story," said Barizy; "the regular troops beaten by the Kurds.

"They were not Kurds," said the Consul Pasqualigo. "They were Russians in disguise. Some cannon have been taken that were cast at St. Petersburgh; and, besides, there is a portfolio of State papers found on a Cossack, habited as a Turkoman, which betrays all. The documents are to be published in numbers, with explanatory commentaries. Consul-General Lourella writes from Damascus that the Eastern Question is more alive than ever. We are on the eve of great events."

"You don't say so?" said Barizy of the Tower, losing his presence of mind from this overwhelming superiority of information.

"I always thought so; Palmerston will never rest till he gets Jerusalem."

"The English must have markets," said the Consul Pasqualigo.

"Very just," said Barizy of the Tower; "there will be a great opening here."

* * * * *

When Tancred returned to Jerusalem with Baroni, after his wanderings in the desert and exploits amongst the Ansarey,

"Ah! there is nothing like action," said Baroni, unscrewing his pistols.

"But what action is there in this world?" said Tancred. "The most energetic men in Europe are mere busybodies. Empires are now governed like parishes, and a great statesman is only a select vestryman. And they are right. Unless we bring man nearer to heaven, unless government become again Divine, the insignificance of the human scheme must paralyse all effort."

These are simply abstracts from the original without alterations or any emphasis on particular passages, which all "speak" for themselves; and Lord Beaconsfield has the supreme satisfaction of knowing that he has fearlessly and faithfully, with the aid of his colleagues, to whom all praise be also awarded, carried out the designs of the Almighty with so much success, under considerable pressure, &c., &c.

"Lothair" gave Romanism a blow from which it never has recovered. A sequel to the Triology, based upon Tancred—or another "hero;" one being educated, or educating his or her friends up to the belief we hold in our origin, connecting the discovery of the Lost Tribes, not only with Eastern events, but with our world-wide empire and continued increase—with the Stone Kingdom, in fact—such a work would raise the standard of our cause like a beacon on a hill; or, to make the simile more complete, like a beacon in a field, to which would flock the whole nation. If God so wills, so will it be done!

Upper Norwood.

"THE IMMINENCE OF THE LORD'S COMING.

AN OBJECTION TO MR. HORNER'S AND MR. WESTFIELD'S VIEWS THEREON CONSIDERED."

By Douglas A. Onslow.

The articles which have lately appeared in the Banner by Mr. Horner and Mr. Westfield, upon the date of our Lord's revelation, or manifestation of Himself to His saints, and their consequent rapture to be with Him for ever, have given offence in certain quarters, because they venture to give a close approximate date when that stupendous event will take place. It is argued that this cannot possibly be known, because our Lord distinctly tells us, "But of that day and hour knoweth no man, no, not the angels of heaven, but My Father only" (Matt. xxiv. 36); and again, "Watch therefore, for ye know neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of Man cometh" (xxv. 13); and again, "But of that day and that hour knoweth no man, no, not the angels which are in heaven, neither the Son, but the Father" (Mark xiii. 32). The great secret being thus with the Father alone, how can presumptuous man dare to announce that he can tell "about" the time when the Redeemer will manifest Himself to His watchers, and remove them from the troubles that are to come upon the careless and indifferent ones to be left behind? The objection is unquestionably a serious one, but I would humbly venture to suggest the following explanation.

If the three verses quoted above be carefully considered, it will at once be observed that "the hour" is mentioned as well as "the day!" Now why is this? I believe it to be in order to indicate that what is unknown to all but the Father is actually the very day alone, and hence the use of the word "hour." Had the expression been simply "Of that day knoweth no man," it might have been understood as meaning something more indefinite as to time, and might have even led to the idea that the year, or even the particular epoch, was not to be known. We know that "day" is used in this indefinite sense in several places in Scripture. But had this been intended, I cannot think the word "hour" would have been introduced on each occasion as we find it was, except for the purpose of showing that it was the particular day only that was not to be known. Now, from the Great Pyramid's teaching (if Mr. Horner's interpretation be correct), the year, and almost the month, is indicated when we are to expect and look for the rapture of the saints, but beyond that we are quite unable to go. All the ingenuity and perfection of calculation that can be brought to bear upon this matter fail to elucidate for us any nearer date for this event than "about" A.D. 1881·6. This view seems to be strengthened by the following: "Watch ye, therefore: for ye know not when the Master of the house cometh, at even, or at midnight, or at the cock-crowing, or in the morning" (Mark xiii. 35)—very clearly showing, it appears to me, that it is the very day that is not known. We see the same again in Matt. xxiv. 42, 44, and 50

If the time, in the indefinite way that this is usually interpreted as meaning, were not known, and we were unable to give any sort of approximation to the date of the Saviour's manifestation of Himself to His elect, the watchers would be likely to get weary and faint with the extreme uncertainty attending the event. But the exceeding great mercy of the Father has provided against that danger by revealing to His anxious expectants that they are to look for Him about a certain date, and the date, though closely known, being still uncertain, will enable them to be on the look-out, and at the same time oblige them to be incessantly watchful as the time approaches, lest haply they be found sleeping, or taken unprepared.

ISRAEL'S REVENUE FOR THE YEAR ENDED APRIL, 1879.

We have, as all know, passed through a year of great commercial depression. Trade in all parts has been as bad as it could be. Banks have broken in several quarters. Incomes at home and incomes abroad have fallen off. The great class of Indian officials, the widows, and pensioners have all grievously suffered from adverse Indian exchanges—as none know so well as we ourselves do—and the whole distress has been aggravated by two of Israel's foreign wars—those "little wars" which bring no glory, many hard knocks, possible loss of prestige, of men, and of treasure (as Isandula has taught us to our cost)—and which are certain to present us with "bills to pay" to swell the taxation, and aggravate the distress. What has been the result upon the past year's income of this nation? How have the Revenue returns borne the test? The

Digitized by Google

Chancellor of the Exchequer estimated the Budget last year at £83,230,000—an enormous sum, which it was confidently predicted by the pessimists and haters of Lord Beaconsfield's policy would not be met by at least three to four millions sterling. But the fact is, the deficit, for there is one of course, is the mere flea bite £114,028. No less than £82,115,972 have been raised as revenue from the country during a year of unprecedented complication of distresses, and that without any friction, or violent commotion, or outrages, agrarian or otherwise, nay with apparent ease and certainty, from a people who, though suffering from bad trade, are neither pinched nor starving, nor at the present moment in distress of any sort or kind whatever as a mass. How are we to account for this? How is it that the income tax, expected to yield only £8,750,000 has produced £8,990,000? the post office, the telegraph service, the land tax and house duty all yielded substantial surpluses over the Budget estimates? It is true that the customs, excise, and stamps showed deficits of £184,000, £200,000, and £260,000 respectively as compared with last year's results; but these shortcomings were anticipated as the necessary results of bad trade, and of shorter incomes caused thereby; but, after all, they only proved an aggregate deficiency of £640,000 on an estimated total receipt of nearly 60,000,000 sterling. The results are wonderful considering the times, and call for joyful praise from all grateful Israelites.

But one question recurs. How are we to account for these most favourable gratifying returns? By "our Identity." Nothing else explains them. To Israel God gave "the power to get wealth." This power He conferred on that race, and on that alone (Deut. viii. 18). The "silver and the gold" are His (Haggai. ii. 8) as He distinctly declares, and the same Book in which the claim is made to the ownership of the wealth tells us to whom He freely gives it, as His good gift for a special purpose. The donees are Israel. The object of the gift that "He (the Lord) may establish His covenant that He sware to our fathers, as it is this day." The fulfilment, then, finds its response in the revenue returns of the worst year for trade, and the most depressed times in the memory of man. The property and income tax rises in its volume. Calculated to yield, at fivepence in the pound, £8,750,000, as before noted, it gave the nation £240,000 more. Other indices of the latent wealth of the nation are equally vocal as to its real plethora, and the reason for the fact is obvious. THIS NATION IS ISRAEL! Being Israel of the Ten Tribes, the Lord hath gifted us with "the power to get wealth" even in the most adverse circumstances; and, thank God, the nation does not forget (Divinely impelled), with its wealth, to give a handsome sum year by year to the propagation of the Gospel the wide-world over—"to the Jew first, and also to the Gentiles," thus carrying out God's sworn purpose to our forefather Abraham and his seed for ever.

The dry details of the revenue returns thus yield precious proofs of "our Identity," rightly viewed; and we urge our readers to rejoice even in this, that God has given us in the nation's income statistics of 1879, satisfactory evidence, which even the world must admit, that we are Israel.

MAJOR-GENERAL SIR ARTHUR CUNYNGHAME ON CONFEDERATION IN SOUTH AFRICA.

GENERAL SIR A. CUNYNGHAME, in his new work on "My Command in South Africa, 1874—1878," has published some wise sentiments regarding the need of federation in the South African Colonies, which his reviewer in the Times of February 19, 1879, thus repeats :—

Sir Arthur Cunynghame sees in federation the proper and the only effectual means of meeting the dangers which threaten the South African colonies ; but he gives a lamentable account of the jealousies and the selfish interests which impede it. The people of Cape Colony are impressed with the consideration that Natal, if federated with them, would involve them in constant danger. Not only does it possess a black population of 300,000 as against 20,000 whites, but it has dangerous neighbours against whom the Cape Colony would be bound to assist in case of war or of rebellion. The people of the Transvaal dreaded loss of individual independence and increased taxation ; the Orange Free State feared that federation would deprive them of the market they found for their products at the diamond fields, and so on. Each looked solely to the immediate advantage of their own part of the country, instead of to the welfare of the whole. They have as yet been unable to see not only that the colonies would be greatly invigorated by federation, but that the native question might be permanently settled by vigorous and unanimous action. General Cunynghame is of opinion that a good system of federation "would enable the colony to maintain a military force which would be far more effective in proportion to its cost than isolated bands of police or militia can possibly be."

In spite of all these difficulties, federation must now be immediately realised as a fact ; for so only will South Africa become one of Israel's company of "nations." God wills it, and, we may depend on it, it will soon be done !

Correspondence.

A PANEGYRIC.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—I find it impossible to keep still silence after reading the God-given production of Mr. Hickson, at p. 121 of the BANNER for March 19th, this year. Truly Daniel's prophecy is being fulfilled to our nation, or rather to our section of it who give implicit faith to God's Word.

Mr. Hickson has here produced another DEMONSTRATION of our Identity. Let every reader of the BANNER study it until they understand it. It is a rock against which all the Cliffords and all the Cornalls in the world beat vainly like the swelling empty froth. Yes! Daniel's prophecy is fulfilled, and the wise do understand.

I commend to Mr. Hickson, and to the readers of his article, the alteration of one word, which will be more consistent with his own view, and the only faithful translation. If in Jer. iii. 18, he reads "upon" instead of "to," it is thereby established that the power, prosperity, and return of Judah will be founded on Ephraim. Ezek. xxxvii. 19 gives exactly the same sense, for there the literal translation is, "Behold, I take the stick of Joseph which is in Ephraim's hand and the Tribes of Israel his fellows, and I give (to be) with them [compare Gen. iii. 12, "thou gavest (to be) with me"] (or, "I put with them") upon it" (i.e., on Ephraim's stick) "the stick of Judah." I contend that "'al" never signifies "the same level," but "a higher level." It is perfectly true that in such passages as "the word of the Lord came to me," it is translated "to," but only through the genius of the translators of James I. "The word of the Lord came upon me," is better sense and better Hebrew ; it came from a higher level upon a lower for instruction. In the passages before us Judah comes or walks upon Ephraim for a foundation political and otherwise. Apologising for the occupation of your valued pages,

I am, yours faithfully,
HERBERT MARRIOTT.

Amberley Rectory, Stroud,
April 4, 1879.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

SIR,—In BANNER of February 19, p. 82, you remark, re our national keeping of the Sabbath, that though it is desecrated it is undoubtedly nationally kept. Anyone who doubts it can at once answer the question for himself if he will take the trouble to walk through, say Paris one Sunday, Mayence another, Brussels another, which will give him the important cities of the three most important continental countries, and then the following Sunday walk through London. I fancy he will have it forcibly answered for him.

I am, Sir,
ONE OF ENGLAND'S SABBATH KEEPERS.

Penstone, S. Lancing, Shoreham,
March 1, 1879.

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements

(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O O payable at Ludgate-circus.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed :—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

BANNER OF ISRAEL. VOL. II. Now ready, price 7s., of all Booksellers.

Now ready price 7s., post free 6d. extra.

THE SECOND VOLUME OF THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

This volume contains a large number of articles on our Identity with Lost Israel, by the best and most learned writers on the subject. Also many interesting papers on the Great Pyramid by Professor Piazzi Smyth, F.R.S.E., Astronomer-Royal for Scotland, Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A., Major H. A. Tracey, R.A., Charles Horner, Esq., and others. London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

DOUBLE NUMBERS DURING 1879.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT.

Owing to the increasing interest taken in the Identity movement, it is found necessary to occasionally enlarge our space to make room for the important papers constantly reaching the Editor. It has, therefore, been determined to issue Twelve Double Numbers during 1879, for which Twopence will be charged. The first of these series of Double Numbers was issued the first week in January, and one on each succeeding first week in the month during the year.

	£	s.	d.
Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free	0	7	6
Two copies (including Double Numbers) ...	0	12	4
Three " " " " ...	0	18	8
Four " " " " ...	1	6	2
Six " " " " ...	1	17	4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-Grand, London, to W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

"BANNER OF ISRAEL" FREE CIRCULATION FUND.

DISTRIBUTION of the BANNER OF ISRAEL at the MAY MEETINGS. It is intended to distribute several thousand copies of the BANNER OF ISRAEL at the great meetings which will be held in London during the months of April, May, and June. Contributions towards this object will be received by R. FERGUSSON BANKS, Hon. Secretary to the Free Circulation Fund.

	£	s.	d.
A. J....	0	7	0
A Lady, per Philo-Israel	1	1	0

New and Revised Edition.

THE "NEW OLD STORY," an Introduction to a Marvellous Puzzle, expressly written for children, with a Short and Simple Account of the Great Pyramid, explaining the measurements, &c., so as to be easily understood by the young. By A E I. W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane.

Now ready, price One penny, post free 1½d. One dozen copies, post free 1s. 100 copies 6s., post free 7s.

THE IDENTITY OF THE BRITISH NATION WITH THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. THE CLUE TO THE EASTERN QUESTION. By C. W. E.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row

SOME of PHILO-ISRAEL'S papers, as they have appeared in THE BANNER, will be separately published from time to time in the form of Letters, for distribution.

No. 1. "The Identity of the British with Lost Israel."
No. 2. "The Glory of God."
No. 3. "An Address to British Soldiers.' (Now ready.)
No. 4. "An Address to British Sailors." (Now ready.)

Others will follow. Price One and Sixpence per 100; less quantities in proportion; postage extra.

Apply to R. Banks, 5 Racquet-court, Fleet-street. Also all Booksellers and Publishers.

BOOKS, ETC.

This day. Price 2d. Post free 2½d.

MANASSEH AND THE UNITED STATES. An important Essay delivered before the "Lost Israel Identification Society," by the Rev. Joseph Wild, D.D., at Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, New York.

THE WILL of JACOB MADE to EPHRAIM and MANASSEH.—See "Manasseh and the United States," by Dr. Wild.—Price 2d.

OUT of SIXTY CONQUERED COLONIES the ONLY ONE ENGLAND EVER LOST was that of MANASSEH.—See "Manasseh and the United States," by Dr. Wild.—Price 2d.

MANASSEH IS A PEOPLE, and a GREAT PEOPLE.—See "Manasseh and the United States," by Dr. Wild.—Price 2d.

THE FOOTSTEPS of EPHRAIM and MANASSEH.—See "Manasseh and the United States," by Dr. Wild.—Price 2d.; post free 2½d.

MANASSEH BROUGHT UP at the FOOT of the PYRAMID.—See "Manasseh and the United States," by Dr. Wild.—Price 2d.; post free 2½d. London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; and W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

TO AUTHORS. Authors desirous of issuing Works or Pamphlets on the great and increasingly interesting Question of the Identity of the Lost Ten Tribes with the British Nation, should first communicate with Robert Banks, of Racquet-court, Fleet-street, who has already been honoured by issuing, amongst others, the following works on the subject:

The Banner of Israel. Weekly 1d.; monthly 7d.

The Nation's Glory Leader. Weekly 1d.; quarterly 1s 4d.

The Pillar of Witness. By late Captain Tracey. Cloth 2s. 6d.; paper 1s 6d (second edition).

The Anglo-Israel Post Bag. By Bishop Titcomb. Cloth 2s. 6d.; paper 1s. 6d. (second edition).

The History of the House of Israel. By Philo-Israel. Cloth 1s.; paper 6d. (sixth thousand).

The Great Pyramid of Egypt. Fifty-two pages, with three illustrations. Price 4d. (10,000).

The New Old Story. By A E I. Cloth 1s.

Price 1d.; post free, 1½d.

GOD'S LOVE FOR ISRAEL. A GUARANTEE THAT HE WILL FULFIL HIS PROMISES TO ISRAEL. By JOHN GILDER SHAW.

Price 6d.; or with illustrative map, 8d.

BRITAIN (OR ISRAEL) THE FIFTH AND LAST, AND THE UNCONQUERABLE EMPIRE. By JOHN GILDER SHAW.

Price 3d.; post free, 3½d.

CHRONOLOGICAL CHART OF BRITISH VICTORIES OVER THE CONTINENTAL POWERS, ranging from the battle of Cressy (1346), to our last victory, the taking of Sebastopol, Sept. 8, 1855. Arranged by J. G. SHAW, of Leeds.

"We trust Mr. Shaw's labour in preparing this paper may be appreciated by the public and be largely sold."—Banner of Israel.

Shortly will be published, price 6d.

RESULTS OF ISRAEL'S OBEDIENCE. A review of the successive steps which have led to the present condition of Britain (or Israel), the Fifth and Last Empire.

London: Published by Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; and may be had of the Author, 20 Park-row, Leeds, and of all booksellers.

DEAFNESS CURED, NOISES IN THE EARS, &c. SPECIAL OFFER TO THE DEAF.

THE REV. E. J. SILVERTON having discovered that there are tens of thousands who are unable to obtain his 11s. Box of Aurial Remedy which has cured so many persons of Deafness and Noises in the Ears, &c., begs now to offer a 2s. 6d. Box of the Medicine, so as to put it within the reach of all. This arrangement is specially made to meet the deaf world. With every box of medicine will be presented the Rev. E. J. Silverton's "Health Advocate," containing valuable advice and information that everyone ought to know. Post Office Orders for 2s. 6d. to E. J. SILVERTON, Minister of Exeter Hall Church, Nottingham, or stamps, 2s. 8d.

WOOLS! WOOLS! WOOLS! Cheapest and Best. White and Black Berlin, Single and Double, 3s. 6d. per pound. Best quality Ice Wools, all Colours, 5½. per ounce ball. All other Wools at proportionate prices. Shetland, Andalusian, Fleecy, and Bonne Mere Wools. Welsh, Scotch, Peacock Victoria, and other Yarns. Crewel Filoselle Silk.

M. WHELLENS, Wholesale and Retail Wool Warehouse, 3, 5, and 6, QUEEN'S TERRACE, CAMDEN ROAD, LONDON, N.

Send for Price List, forwarded post free.

MISCELLANEOUS.

ARE ENGLISHMEN ISRAELITES?

EXETER HALL.—GREAT DEBATE for three nights, April 21st, 22nd, 23rd, in the above HALL, between Mr. EDWARD HINE (of London) and Mr. ROBERT ROBERTS (of Birmingham). LORD WILLIAM LENNOX will take the chair at 7.30 p.m. Admission each evening, 2s., 1s., and 6d. Proceeds, after defraying expenses, to be handed to the Hospital Sunday Fund. Tickets (for which early application is advisable) and programmes to be had of F. Pitman, 20, Paternoster-row, or R. Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

LOST ISRAEL FOUND IN THE BRITISH NATION. A Lecture will be delivered on the above subject at the METHODIST FREE CHURCH, GRAYS, ESSEX, on Wednesday Evening, April 23, by the REV. J. BILLINGTON. The Chair will be taken at half-past Seven o'clock by Douglas A. Onslow, Esq., J.P. Admission Free. A Collection will be taken at the close in aid of the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association.

WIMBLEDON VILLAGE CLUB AND LECTURE HALL. Monday, April 28, a Lecture will be delivered by the REV. C. W. HICKSON, M.A., Vicar of St. Bartholomew's, Bristol. Subject: "Jewish Israel and Gentile Israel, and the British Nation's Connection with the Latter." The chair will be taken at Eight o'clock, by the Rev. J. Billington, Secretary of the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association. Admission Free.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

A LECTURE will be delivered (D.V.) in the MASONIC HALL, WOOD GREEN, on Tuesday, April 22nd, by DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, Esq., J.P. Subject: "The Stone Kingdom of Daniel—Britain, the Fifth Monarchy."

The chair will be taken at 8 o'clock in the evening. Admission Free. Inquirers are cordially invited. Tickets for Reserved Seats may be had on application at Messrs. WOOD & SON'S Office, Wood-green; Mr. EDWARDS, Post Office, Wood-green; Mr. OMBLER, Chemist, New Southgate; and at the Office of the Association, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C. At the close of the Lecture a Collection will be taken in aid of the Funds of the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association.

New pamphlet by Philo-Israel.
Will shortly be published, price 2d.

THE HISTORICAL, ETHNIC, AND PHILOLOGICAL ARGUMENTS in PROOF of BRITISH IDENTITY with the TEN LOST TRIBES OF ISRAEL, clearly and simply stated.

BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane; and Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Now ready.

THE GENTILES AND THE TIMES OF THE GENTILES. By J. LEYLAND FEILDEN, Author of "Links in the Chain of Evidence Connecting Israel and England," and "Israel's Jubilee; or, 1882." Price 6d., by post 7d.

W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick Lane, E.C.

THE GREAT PYRAMID. NOW READY, PHILO-ISRAEL'S NEW WORK, 56 pages, Illustrated with Diagrams, price 4d, post free 5d.

AN ELEMENTARY DIGEST or SKETCH OF THE CHIEF FACTS and TEACHINGS of the GREAT PYRAMID of EGYPT; adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific. By PHILO-ISRAEL; together with Original Papers by the following leading Pyramidists, republished mostly from the BANNER OF ISRAEL (by kind permission of the proprietor)—viz., Professor Piazzi Smyth, the Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A., Charles Horner, Esq., and Major H. A. Tracey, R.A. Being a pamphlet by five authors (a Pyramid number).

Opinion of Mr. Charles Horner, regarding the above work, after perusal of the same:—"I think your design of the Pyramid pamphlet excellent. I know well that it is a book urgently needed, since, under God's blessing, it will, I feel convinced, convert many to Christ. Your part Philo-Israel's) I deem unexceptionable. It is both terse and understandable to the many, which is the great object you have had in view. I should like to see thousands circulated amongst our intelligent artisans, and hope God will raise some to do this."—C. HORNER. Dec. 12, 1878.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

Just Published, price 3d.

EPISCOPACY, NOT ESTABLISHMENT, THE BANE OF THE NATIONAL CHURCH.

BY A LAY MEMBER OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND

W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row; and the Protestant Tract Society, 17, Buckingham-st., Strand.

Just out.

NOTES ON THE VISIONS OF ZECHARIAH VIEWED IN THE LIGHT OF THE IDENTITY OF THE TEN LOST TRIBES. By J. A. H. Price 1s. paper covers; 1s 6d. cloth.

W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick Lane, E.C.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, 5, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 23, 1879.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. III. No. 122. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, APRIL 30, 1879. [ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
The Relief of Col. Pearson	173
The People Selected to Fill the Face of the World with Gospel Fruit	173
The Little Cloud Like a Man's Hand	174
A Commentary on Hosea xiv. By L. G. A. R.	175
A Modern "Craze." By the Rev. John Huyshe, M.A., J.P.	176
Identity Difficulties Answered. Israel's Return the "Second Time."—Part III.	176
A Crucial Test of Great Pyramid Chronology	177
Identity Truth From the Stony Rock.—Part II. By Thomas Bales	177
The End of the Day of Grace, and What is to Follow	178
Mr. Childers, M.P., as a Blind Promoter	179
Israel—"The Head, and Not the Tail, Above Only, and Not Beneath," Even in Respect to Photography	179
Correspondence	179

THE RELIEF OF COLONEL PEARSON.

WE desire to record, with thankfulness to the God of Israel, that He has granted to our armies in Zululand a substantial victory; also that Col. Pearson and his gallant band were relieved by Lord Chelmsford and his brave army on the 3rd April, 1879. There has been severe fighting; also terrible bloodshed; but no fresh disasters. We have full confidence in the result; and know that He who promised Israel the victory (Isa. liv. 15) "is not a man that He should lie, nor the son of man that He should repent. Hath He said, and shall He not do it? or hath He spoken, and shall He not make it good?" (Num xxiii. 19).

THE PEOPLE SELECTED TO FILL THE FACE OF THE WORLD WITH GOSPEL FRUIT.

WE know who those are! They are God's people Israel. Not the Two-Tribed scattered race, the Jews, because they have no capacity, or heart, to undertake this task; they love not the Lord Jesus Christ, nor the work He gave His disciples to do in preaching the Gospel "to every creature." It is "the nation," the Gentile Lo-Ammi people, who are destined to be the "fruitful ones"—"Ephraim." Now, we ask our opponents why we should be deemed wrong, if, pointing out a people who are actually "filling the face of the world" with Gospel "fruit," and endeavouring to preach the good news of salvation by the precious blood of Jesus, the Son of God, to all the families of the earth, we claim thereby to have found the Lost Tribes of Israel? Wherein is our logic faulty, if we thus assert we have discovered the "lost sheep?" Is any other nation in the world beside the British (with the Americans) even so much as attempting this blessed work? Not one! Is any likely to be so engaged? Not one! Then this test-mark alone ought to suffice, and we are thereby justified in proclaiming that the Anglo-Saxon races are Israel. But we now point to a distinctly British effort, or, at least, a proposal which is made by a British Christian, to evangelise the whole world! Let our opponents show us a single man of any other race than the Anglo-Saxon who ever practically attempted this task before, or conceived this thought! They cannot! Our Lord said that "the Gospel of the kingdom should be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations, and then shall the end come" (Matt. xxiv. 14). The end is nearly come now; and behold one of that very race, the House of Israel, whom God's Word destined "to blossom and bud, and to fill the face of the world with fruit," dissatisfied with the tardy progress of the Gospel, makes the proposal to which we refer, asking his Christian fellow-countrymen to join him in the enterprise of evangelising the whole face of the known world!

The extract is taken from The Christian, and is to the effect following:—

THE EVANGELISATION OF THE WORLD.

Mr. Thos. D. Marshall (192, Oxford-street, W.) has issued a short paper with a view to show that the evangelisation of the whole world would be quite possible in the present generation if the Church of Christ were fully alive to her privileges and powers. He suggests a "Special Evangelisation Mission to the whole heathen world—say a three years' mission."

"Travelling," he says, "being now so greatly facilitated, it would certainly be possible to visit almost every tribe in the earth, and, if the Christians throughout the world were appealed to, a sufficient number of voluntary agents might be found to give, without salary, either one, two, or three years' labour. Some might also be able to pay their own expenses; but as many could not, a fund might be raised to defray travelling expenses, purchase Scriptures for circulation, medicines, etc. Such a mission, preaching Christ only, and interfering with no ecclesiastical questions, would help the work of all our missionary organisations, whose co-operation it would seek, and whose further progress it would pioneer, and might expect the goodwill and countenance of Christians of all denominations, and of the best men of every nation."

The writer says it would be of absolute importance that the messengers who went forth should be those who are able from their own personal experience to bear unequivocal testimony to Christ's saving power. The possession of medical knowledge would also be of great advantage. He entreats prayer that Christians everywhere may place themselves, their talents, and their wealth at the disposal of God, saying, "Lord, what wilt Thou have me to do?"

Digitized by Google

This singular proposition, coming at the present crisis, is, we venture to say, pregnant proof of our origin as the proposal of a British Israelite having for its object the fulfilment of Genesis xxviii. 14, also of Isaiah xxvii. 6. It is a wonderful sign that the end of the dispensation is at hand, since the aim of Israel is thus at this time "to preach the Gospel to all nations as a witness" that God is true!

As a statement apposite to our present remarks we quote from the speech of the Rev. Dr. Cooke at the missionary meetings held in Ashton-under-Lyne, in October last, which a friend forwarded to us as "Blind testimony." He said:

Five hundred years ago one-half of the world was undiscovered, but now the whole world had been mapped out by a gracious Providence that they might go and carry the Gospel to its uttermost parts. Then look at the institutions which God had raised up. If they went back 200 years, they scarcely found a missionary society in existence; now they were scattered throughout the world, sending their agents to the most distant places. Seventy-five years ago there was no Bible Society; now that noble institution was sending forth daily not less than 9,450 copies of God's Word in 303 languages. The Tract Society, which had no existence 80 years ago, was now pouring forth religious publications at the rate of 200,000 tracts and volumes daily. (Cheers.) It was less than 140 years ago since John Wesley exclaimed "all the world is my parish"—when he had been excluded from his ministry—and now there were 3,000,000 persons enrolled as Methodists in America alone, 2,000,000 in Great Britain and elsewhere, and in all there were about 20,000,000 of persons now under Methodist influences as the result of that glorious exclamation. (Applause.)

The Rev. H. J. Marshall, however, on the same occasion, gave the most direct and wonderful testimony that the British, as the universal Gospel messengers "filling the face of the world with fruit," are Israel. He said:—

That in the progress of the Gospel, the great centres—the great palpitating heart of Gospel life sending forth the life-blood TO THE ENDS OF THE WORLD—had age after age shifted from place to place. The first great centre from which missionaries set out was Jerusalem. Shortly afterwards they found it moved to Antioch, thence to Asia Minor, and afterwards to North Africa, and, EVER MOVING WESTWARD, it had at length reached our own little island, which had become the focus of Gospel light, streaming it forth TO ALL THE WORLD. God had intended England to be the great Christianising power of the age. Our language was favourable to this end. Think of how many lands there were to which our countrymen might go without having to overcome the difficulties of language—of the marvellous coincidence of a language that bids fair to become cosmopolitan, and of a Bible translated into that language so far back as the 6th century. Think, then, of our magnificent English literature, which had grown with the nation's growth, and of the printing press compared with which statecraft, and priestcraft, and diplomacy were nothing. Our commerce was another power for the spread of the Gospel, as was the spirit of colonisation with which we as a nation were distinguished. It was a noticeable fact that English emigrants always carried England with them in their hearts, and, instead of losing their individuality amongst the nations with which they were surrounded, perpetuated the English race everywhere, and FILLED THE WORLD WITH THE SOUND OF THE ENGLISH TONGUE. Power was given to England for this work by the fact that on her soil had been fought the greatest and grandest battles for civil and religious liberty. Could they think that those facilities had been given by God merely for the spread of what was called Anglo-Saxondom? No; they believed that He intended that they should become the regenerators of the race, and THE BEARERS OF THE GOSPEL TO THE WORLD. (Applause.) The speaker referred to incidents in which the Government had discouraged missionary work in China and elsewhere, and concluded by impressing upon all present that as Christians they had each a part in the glorious work of spreading the Gospel.

Readers! we Israelites all respond to that—do we not?—a hearty Amen! and we rejoice in testimony which, while it admits the British are a Protestant Christian nation, proves also we are Israel, because we are "bearers of the Gospel to the whole world."

THE LITTLE CLOUD LIKE A MAN'S HAND.

Do our readers notice the trouble that is gathering in Burmah, the little cloud out of the sea like a man's hand? (1 Kings xviii. 44).

Some time ago, speaking to a Canon of the Church of England on the subject of our Identity, he told us he was much struck with the bearing of "the Gates" on the question, and instanced Rangoon as palpably "the Gate" of Burmah, destined finally to shut out the kingdom still left to the ruler of that land further and further from the sea and coast, till at last the whole would probably, by the operation of our hold on Rangoon "as the Gate," disappear as an independent country and be merged in the "thin" red line of British territory." We have lately heard, to our surprise, that this Reverend Canon who made the above pertinent observation has now quite gone back in his convictions, and does not regard "the Gates" any more than the other test-marks we British bear to witness that we are God's people Israel. He has, in fact, become indifferent to the question, though more light is blazing from on high upon the whole matter and on our nation! We wonder—but reflecting on the meaning of Ezek. xxxiv. and its description of Israel's shepherds, our wonder ceases! Whatever may be the present state of mind of our rev. friend, we find that Rangoon being "the Gate" of the kingdom of Burmah, is so situated on the only water-way, from the capital (Mandalay) to the Indian Ocean, that it bars the access of the Burmese from their chief city to the ocean, and that in every way it dominates as "a Gate" over the small remnant we have left as the independent domain of the King of Burmah. In the latter territory, so dominated, "a little cloud like a man's hand" has just arisen, which will lead, or we much mistake, to the inevitable remedy, God's plan for the growth of the stone kingdom—namely, annexation! The Times correspondent telegraphed to that paper from Calcutta, on the 9th March, 1879, the following ominous words, regarding the horrible massacre perpetrated at Mandalay by the king's orders on no less than 40 to 80 of his own royal family!

It is difficult to predict (he says) the upshot of all this, depending as it does on the caprice of a barbarian, mad with jealousy and drink; but it may safely be said that the Indian Government has its hands too full at present to take active steps, unless forced to do so for the protection of its subjects or territory from irresponsible despotism. Upper Burmah has long been a standing menace to the British provinces beyond the Bay of Bengal. Sooner or later a day of reckoning must come and his golden-footed Majesty must submit to become our feudatory or see his kingdom annexed. The massacre seems to have been attended with every possible atrocity. The Mandalay correspondent of the Calcutta Englishman thus describes it:—

"A council was held by the King and his young advisers, and the conclusion come to was that extermination was the only means whereby he could obtain safety. The immediate execution was, therefore, ordered of every one in prison. Executioners were easily obtained, and with darkness commenced the scene of slaughter. It being, however, found inconvenient to get through the job in one night, a division was made, and some 20 were chosen. These were severely beaten and kicked, the women being shamefully treated. When lifeless, they were hurled into a large well in the garden. Children were torn to pieces before their parents' eyes, and the parents then put to death, their last look being fixed on the quivering and mangled remains of their little ones. The Meckra Prince was made a witness of the most atrocious conduct towards his wife and children, and saw his aged mother beaten senseless to the ground and then dragged to the well and tumbled in. Thongya's family fared the same, as also the two Menghees, the Myodawlaw, his two sons, and the Phawoon. The Princes, instead of being put in along with their families, were killed last and thrown into the river."

The above dreadful occurrences, it will be seen, will compel the British Government to act. A blood-thirsty monster like the new King of Burmah is not a safe neighbour, and accordingly we find already from the same correspondent's telegraphic advice that "the King is making extensive military preparations and surrounding himself with advisers known to be hostile to the British Government. "Quem Deus vult perdere, prius dementat." So in this case, we believe, God has permitted this savage and mad Prince to break out into unpardonable crimes with ostentatious threats against the British Lion, only that the latter, being Israel, may deprive him of his last remnant of power, and acquire themselves, in the interests of his subjects, a territory he is not worthy to rule. There are, it is well known, a large number of British residents and Europeans in Mandalay. These are at the mercy of this mad and drunken despot. To obviate all danger to our own territories, the Viceroy, we are thankful to say, has already sent a wing of H.M. 54th Foot and some Madras regiments to Rangoon and its out-posts, thus doubling their usual garrisons. Whatever the result may be, we know the Lord is working for His people Israel; and whether this trouble may lead to it, or it may prepare for future ones which shall effect the purpose, of this we are sure, that sooner or later, by the Great Burmese "Gate" Rangoon, the whole remaining territories of the King will become Israel's "possessions," to have and to hold for Christ!

Digitized by Google

A COMMENTARY ON HOSEA XIV.

By L. G. A. R.

THE sin of Israel is described in Hosea xiii. 6—8, and their chastisement threatened. "They were filled, and their heart was exalted: therefore have they forgotten Me. Therefore, I will be unto them as a lion: as a leopard by the way will I observe them; I will meet them as a bear that is bereaved of her whelps, and will rend the caul of their heart, and there will I devour them like a lion, the wild beast (or the beast of the field) shall tear them."

Thus God speaks of being to Israel like a lion, like a leopard, like a bear, and like a wild beast. Daniel also has a vision in his seventh chapter, wherein is enumerated the same catalogue of beasts; but the object of the vision is "the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven," which kingdom belongs to the saints of the Most High, which people is called Ephraim or Israel in Hosea xiii., also in Daniel ii. 44. This people is spoken of indirectly, perhaps, but nevertheless, as Daniel's own people, the stone which cometh not with observation (verse 34), but which, on smiting the image (maybe at Waterloo), became a great mountain, and filled the whole earth.

Israel having been placed amongst the Gentiles, and made to be wanderers in their midst, were scattered for their good (Hosea i.), for thus saith the Lord (Amos ix. 8), "Behold, the eyes of the Lord God are upon the sinful kingdom, and I will destroy it from off the face of the earth; saving that I will not utterly destroy the House of Jacob, saith the Lord. For, lo, I will command, and I will sift the House of Israel among all nations (the lion, the leopard, the bear, and the wild beast), like as corn is sifted in a sieve, yet shall not the least grain (stone in Heb.) fall upon the earth. All the sinners of My people shall die by the sword, which say, The evil shall not overtake nor prevent us."

Here we have the House of Israel cast out of their own land because of their unprofitableness, scattered and sown, as the name of Gomer's first son, "Jezreel," implies (Hosea i. 4). The seed is to lie hid until the Sun of Righteousness should arise: then Israel is addressed in those touching words of Hosea xiv., which it is requested each reader will consider: "Be converted, O Israel, to Jehovah, thy God, for thou hast fallen by thine own iniquity. Take with you words, and be converted to Jehovah. Say unto Him, All (our) iniquity forgive, and receive (us), O gracious One. And we will repay (as) heifers, our lips (i.e., we will bring Thee offerings of penitence and prayer, like sacrifices, to the altar). Asshur shall not save us; on horses we will not ride, and we will not say any more, O our gods, to the work of our hands; because by Thee pitied shall be the orphan." יִרְחָם is from the same verb as the name Lo-Ruhamah, the female infant of Gomer, by which the utter feebleness and helplessness of Israel was portrayed (chap. i. 6): but now the time was come when the change of that name from Lo-Ruhamah to Ruhamah (chap. ii. 3, vi. 1—3) had arrived, so we read here that the orphan race of Israel finds mercy in the Lord. It must not be omitted that the husband of Gomer, and the father of the children, was Hosea—i.e., "Saviour." His name changes not, His purposes have "no shadow of turning." He has addressed this His seed (Isa. liii. 10) with those gracious words contained in Isaiah liv., and bids them remember "Thy Maker is thy Husband, and thy Redeemer the Holy One of Israel." "I will heal their revolting: I will love them gratuitously; for turned aside is My anger from him. I will be like the dew to Israel; he shall blossom like the lily, and shall strike his roots like (those of) Lebanon. Spring up shall his suckers, and like the olive tree shall be his beauty, and his fragrance like (that of) Lebanon." The manner of their growth is likened to the mountain itself in strength; the roots, the being grounded in faith; the branches, the confession of faith, and the producing good works; the olive tree, sanctification; and the fragrance, holy influence on all around. The lily supplies an emblem for beauty, but it is fragile; the lack of the lily is supplemented therefore by the cedar, and the fruitless nature of the king of the forest is counteracted by the olive, the symbol of fertility. Thus each combines with the rest to give expression to the manifold graces derived from Christ their Saviour. "They shall be converted who sit under his shade," alluding to the nations gathered to Israel, or, as our Lord explained the kingdom of heaven, like the mustard seed, which, when grown and become a tree, the fowls of the air come and lodge in the branches thereof—a glorious fulfilment of Psa. ii. 8, also Isa. xxvii. 6. "They shall revive like corn:" this probably furnishes the basis of our Lord's parable respecting Himself (John xii. 24), and is brought out in Ezek. xxxvii. 11—14 as referring to Christ's chosen ones. The Targum paraphrase has it thus: "They shall be gathered together from the midst of their captivity; they shall dwell under the shadow of His Christ; and the dead shall live, and good shall increase on the earth" "and blossom like the vine," for, abiding in Christ, they shall bring forth much fruit, which characteristic it was impossible to attain until their Redeemer had come. Compare Gen. xlviii. 14—16; 1 Chron. v. 1, 2; Ezek. xv.; John xv. 1—5; Micah v. 2, 3, 7, 8, in which passages we notice the birthright blessing of Jacob was given through the cross, or, in other words, the death of Christ should be an accomplished fact ere the blessing should come to Ephraim; that until then, for a wise purpose, Judah prevailed above his brethren; that those Israelites who trusted in their own righteousness were to be like the branch of the fruitless vine, and they who were trusting to their Saviour, and felt their need of Him, should be established; that Judah should be given up for crucifying the Lord of glory until the birthright promises to Ephraim had been fully realised, whereas the latter should be a means of blessing to all the Gentiles. "His memorial (shall be) like the wine of Lebanon." (Saith) Ephraim, "What have I to do any more with idols?" God says, "I have heard and regarded him." Saith Ephraim, "I am like a green cypress. God says, "From Me thy fruit is found." The cypress is supposed to be a tree with a hard grain, producing no edible or useful fruit.

For the repenting of Ephraim let the reader turn to Jer. xxxi. 18—20, and also the first three verses of the same chapter especially, but the whole chapter should be deeply impressed on all our minds. The prophet Hosea ends with these memorable words, and may the wisdom which unlocks the mysteries of the kingdom, and the grace which leads the just along the path of light and life, be vouchsafed abundantly to all our readers. "Who is wise, then shall he understand these things? (Who is) understanding, then shall he know them? For righteous are the ways of Jehovah, and the just shall walk in them, but transgressors shall fall in them." The Lord that speaketh "is the Rock, His work is perfect: for all His ways are judgment: a God of truth and without iniquity, just and right is He" (Deut. xxxii. 4).

Digitized by Google

A MODERN "CRAZE."

By the Rev. John Huyshe, M.A., J.P.,
Rector of Clyst-Hydon, Exeter.

Nearly 1900 years since a strange "craze" affected some of the Eastern nations. It appeared to their wild fancies that the seventy weeks of the prophet Daniel being near their close, the Lion of the Tribe of Judah, the bright Morning Star, the Virgin's Son, must be on the eve of His nativity.

Shortly afterwards, when a humble babe was born in a stable at Bethlehem—shepherds, warned by a vision of angels, and wise men guided from the East of Judea by a wonderful star, came to worship Him, who, they believed, fulfilled the words of prophecy. Simeon and Anna, infected by the same "craze," burst into words of praise and thanksgiving when the babe was brought into the temple.

Scribes, Pharisees, and their disciples regarded those people with scorn and hatred who became followers of the lowly Jesus, scoffed at their mad credulity, and ended by crucifying the Nazarene. Strange to say, the very doom they invoked has ever since been theirs. The blood shed on Calvary has, indeed, been visited on them, and all their descendants. The Jews (not the Ten Tribes, who never were Jews) are a standing miracle to this day, so they will remain till the second advent of Him they slew, when, with the now lost, but then found, Ten Tribes of Israel they will be gathered together, one fold under one Shepherd. To-day another "craze" has broken out, and is gradually affecting the minds of many thoughtful students of prophecy; they see that these inspired writings tell of very different destinies for Judah and Israel; though often mentioned in the same sentence, they are wholly distinct; Judah, as descended from the Lord's murderers, are scattered over all the world, and are small in number and without power, yet recognized everywhere by their peculiar countenances; the Israelites to be as the sand of the sea for multitude, ever requiring fresh room for their marvellously increasing population. Though unknown for ages, they are to be especially blessed for their father Abraham's sake by his covenant God. The isles of the sea are to form a portion of their inheritance, whence they are to spread the Gospel tidings over all the world. They alone, of all nations, are to keep Sabbath. No other people are to be so kind to their blind brethren—the Jews. So say the believers in the modern "craze;" they cannot be convinced that all the blessings promised to Ephraim (the head of the Lost Tribes) are null and void, or have lain dormant through so many ages. Where can those who, like the Scribes and Pharisees of old, deride and scoff at them, point out any Gentile nation whose history fulfils any portion of these wonderful predictions? Do they believe that God can break His promise, and leave His Word unaccomplished? "Hath He said, and shall He not do it? Hath He spoken, and shall He not make it good?" "God is not a man that He should lie, neither the son of man that He should repent."

Let every one read the prophecies prayerfully, and with unbiassed minds, and mark the portions addressed to Judah, and those to Israel. They will find a wonderful light thrown upon the words of the Almighty. Some, who could not comprehend their bearing before they thus carefully studied them, are now struck by the marvellous difference clearly visible between the destinies of the two peoples. What was dark, mysterious, and seemingly contradictory, becomes distinctly perceptible and easy of comprehension. The great error consists in calling all the descendants of Jacob by the name of Jews, which, of right, only belongs to the Two Tribes of Judah and Levi, and the Tribe of Benjamin. The Lost Ten Tribes are Israelites, and never were Jews.

I have been grieved to read in the Rock (a paper which I value so highly that I take several copies regularly for distribution) the violent abuse launched therein against this latter "craze." It is, however, only a fulfilment of the words of St. Paul (Rom. xi. 25): "Blindness in part has happened to Israel."

Far from a belief in this Identity "craze" leading us to carelessness and presumption, it must humble us to the dust when we see how undeserving we (like our forefathers) are of God's long-suffering mercies; how, with our manifold blessings and privileges, we continue to be a stiff-necked and rebellious people—even now turning aside to worship idols, and to substitute formal for spiritual service, or casting off all semblance of religion, and openly avowing our disbelief of God's revealed Word.

IDENTITY DIFFICULTIES ANSWERED.

Israel's Return the "Second Time."

(Continued from page 168).

PART III.

We have often been met by the objection that Israel having "returned" with Judah from the Babylonian captivity, that was the fulfilment of the "return" promised in the Scriptures to Israel and Judah combined, as their "second return." But there is another class of opponents who differ from the above. Our opponents, it seems to us, unite in only one respect—namely, in their bitter opposition to the literal interpretation of God's Word as written, being accepted by the reader as its real meaning. Such opponents tell us that, granting the second return is future, there is no doubt the "first" was under Ezra and Zerubbabel, since there is no record in God's Word that there was any previous "return" of the Twelve Tribes to Canaan, properly so called.

We will reply to the last objection first. We shall show that there was just such a "return" or "going back" of the whole Twelve Tribes to Canaan, which can be compared as the type, with the far more glorious anti-type yet to come.

If the reader will turn to Gen. xv. 13—18, he will see that God made a covenant with Abraham in B.C. 1913, and then and there "gave" the fee simple of the whole Promised Land to him and to his seed for ever. In verse 18 the words used are these: "In the same day" (B.C. 1913) "the Lord made a covenant with Abram, saying, Unto thy seed HAVE I given this land from the river of Egypt unto the great river, the river Euphrates," &c. In verse 16 the Lord prophetically told Abram the future history of his "seed." After saying to him that for 400 years they should be strangers in a "land not theirs," where they should "serve and be afflicted," but come out at last "with great substance," He added, "But in the fourth generation THEY SHALL COME HITHER AGAIN." Here, then, is the prophetic announcement of "the first return" of the Twelve Tribes to their inheritance under Joshua. Jacob and his twelve sons went down to Egypt from the land of Canaan (Gen. xlvi. 1—7), served, were afflicted there 400 years, and afterwards "coming out" with "great substance," re-entered (by coming hither again) the Promised Land for the "first" time under Joshua as conquerors.

The second return is to be "like" it, and is compared with the first return in several passages. Jer. xvi. 14, 15, xxiii. 7,

Digitized by Google

8; Isa. xi. 16, are such. In the latter verse "the second time return" is declared to be accompanied by several physical portents connected with Egypt and the East, "like as it was to Israel in the day that he came up out of the land of Egypt." The second return must be then like the first in character, but incomparably grander. The "seven streams" of the Nile are then to be "dried up so that men may go over dry-shod" (verse 15). "The tongue of the Egyptian Sea," probably the Gulf of Suez with the Suez Canal, "shall be utterly destroyed," and a terrific cyclone will be the accompanying sign. Such events were unknown at the date of the Babylonian return, and have manifestly yet to take place.

The return of Judah alone under Ezra and Zerubbabel was of a vastly different character. It was so unimportant that it is not so much as once named in comparison with the final or second return of the Twelve Tribes in triumph. Their return for the "second time" will be everlasting (Ezek. xxxvii. 22—26). Their "pulling up again" will be never (Amos ix. 15). When they return for the second time, it will be in peace with Judah (Hosea i. 11). Judah's return occurred when Israel was in rebellion (2 Chron. x. 19). When they return "again," it will be with one king over Israel and Judah (Hosea i. 11). Judah's return under Ezra was without a king.

When the Tribes "return" finally, it will be with singing unto Zion (Isa. li. 11); with dancing (Jer. xxxi. 13); to enable the Ten Tribes to plant the mountains of Samaria with vineyards (Jer. xxxi. 5); as a prosperous, honourable, joyous nation, the envy of all the Gentiles (Jer. xxxiii. 9). But when Judah returned under Ezra, they mourned, and "wept very sore" (Ezra x. 1); they had no king, were a base nation (Hosea iii.), had no planting of the mountains of Samaria, for their enemies held them, and they were neither prosperous, honourable, nor the envy of the other nations.

Thus our two classes of opponents not only destroy one another, but are opposed by the Word of God. We find as a final consequence that the following are the only solutions of the difficulties raised—namely:—

1. That the Twelve Tribes first returned together to the Promised Land under Joshua, when God brought the people up out of the land of Egypt.

2. That the return of Judah, under Ezra and Zerubbabel, was unaccompanied by the Ten Tribes of Israel, and therefore was not the second time return; and—

3. That the final return of the Twelve, or rather thirteen, Tribes is an event yet to come, one of the most gigantic importance, which will throw all other events into the shade, and cause even the return out of Egypt to be forgotten and to lapse into oblivion as an unimportant trivial matter unworthy of comparison with that which is to come (Jer. xxiii. 7, 8).

Reader, let us join heartily in the prayer that the Lord will be pleased to prepare His people for this their glorious future; that He will baptize them nationally with His most Holy Spirit; and in the words of Jer. xxxi. 7, as well as of our beautiful Liturgy, let us ask Him, saying, "O Lord, save Thy people, and bless Thine inheritance, even the remnant of Israel."

(To be continued.)

A CRUCIAL TEST OF GREAT PYRAMID CHRONOLOGY.

A FRIEND writes to us his regret that Mr. Westfield's article on the above appeared at page 163, No. 120, April 16 last—1. Because the purpose of the grooves of 1878·4 units' length is not by any means clearly understood. 2. As the date of the Pyramid foundation is settled astronomically as being the autumnal Equinox B.C. 2170, all the Pyramid dates should (apparently) commence from that point, and not from our present mode of January 1, especially as it seems very probable that the birth of the Lord accords more closely with the autumnal Equinox than with December 25; under these circumstances it will be seen that we have already passed 1878·4. 3. Where are we to look for the interpretation of the groove? It is at any rate up in the air, as far as man is concerned, being not a mark on the floor-line, but far above our heads. We publish our friend's remarks in order that expectations raised regarding the date in question—viz., 1878·4—may be modified for the reasons now given, repeated to us by other friends also, as what follows will prove.

A CRUCIAL TEST OF GREAT PYRAMID CHRONOLOGY.

Whatever "important epoch" may be reached on May 22 next, such date is not deducible from the measurements of the Grand Gallery.

The writer of the little article with the above heading, in your issue of 16th instant, has been led into the mistake by not fully recognising the structural features of the Grand Gallery.

I do not gather from page 516 of "Our Inheritance" that Prof. Piazzi Smyth gives the length in question as his own, but that he gives such length as Mr. H. A. Powers' deduction in reference to a communication made to him by that gentleman, and that the whole paragraph is a quotation.

There is no doubt but that if the end walls of the Grand Gallery were free from any overlappings, the length at or about the level of the grooves would be that of the Grand Gallery, less the amount due to the one degree of impending of the South wall at the height of said grooves, and that such length would then be about 1878·48.

But the facts of the case are otherwise. The grooves are found above the level of the third overlapping on the side walls, and as these coincide with these on the end walls, it follows that from the length thus arrived at must be deducted the two overlappings on North wall 5·5 and 4·5, and the three overlappings on South wall 2·9, 3·0 and 3·0 (see "Life and Work," vol. ii., p. 89), total 18·9 inches. Therefore 1878·48 minus 18·9 gives 1859·58 as about the length of the grooves, instead of 1878·48 as claimed.

If, therefore, any "epoch" were designed to be intimated by these grooves, such must have already passed away. Had this error not affected a "great question"—the reliability of the Great Pyramid's teachings—I should not have thought it worth while to have called attention to the same, as all who are conversant with the structural details of the Grand Gallery would at once perceive its fallacy, but as the BANNER OF ISRAEL has a circulation far beyond that of the limited number of such special Pyramidists, and when the deduction arising out of the error is put forward as a "Crucial Test of Great Pyramid Teaching," it behoves any one who is jealous for this witness of the Lord of hosts to endeavour to rectify the matter, before the mischief which such a mistaken "test" is liable to occasion has time to spread further.

SYDNEY HALL.

London, April 17, 1879.

IDENTITY TRUTH FROM THE STONY "ROCK."

BY THOMAS BALES.

(Concluded from page 166.)

PART II.

IN the same number of the Rock appeared a remarkable article, the "Decay of Evangelicalism." The author sorrowfully alluded to the continuous attempts to degrade the Bible. He says, and says truly, "there are thousands of men in our day who have been brought up in habits of church-going—and who still continue to attend their church—but who have come to believe with Mr. Jowett, of Balliol, that the Bible is 'like any other book,' and as worthy of belief as Homer, or Virgil, or Tacitus, and no more!" Again, "Such is the present condition of the great mass of the middle and upper classes. They continue in a loose sort of way to attend church, but a belief in the Bible as the Word of God, they have long since abandoned." He traces the evidences of infidelity on every side, the fearful preponderance of Rationalism in the press, and the weakening of a loyal and an honest adherence to the Bible. Now, this is not exaggerated. Practical infidelity is rampant. And the reason is not far to seek, and, thank God, the remedy is close at hand. The Bible is relegated to a dusty shelf; the enlightenment of this age rejects with scornful impatience its far-fetched allegories, for such, spiritual commentators have rendered its precious verses. A mass of contradictions, incoherent, and incredible, no wonder it is shelved and scepticism prevails! But read it with Identity truth irradiating its pages; see the doubts remove; see God's power, glory, and love glowing in every line; read the prophecies; how simple and how clear the whole Book is! With what irresistible power it speaks to each and all! The infidel reads it, and he is no longer an infidel. The careless man reads it, and he can no more be careless, for the oracles of God are his. The Christian reads it, and dear before, it is doubly so now. The Bible of scholars, divines, and commentators, is not God's Bible, and never will be, never can be, the people's Bible. We are accustomed to sneers—aye! and untruths—because of our earnest endeavours to make God's Bible the people's Bible, and from the Rock, too, that journal which regrets the decadence of the Bible. The very first consequence of investigating the Identity is the searching of the Scriptures, and the results thereof are a sense of its truth, and its personal application to ourselves. Here is the antidote to scepticism. The Bible is not generally read, because it is an obscure riddle; it is neglected, because it cannot be taken to ourselves. It applies to one people, one nation—ISRAEL; and it proclaims WE are Israel. Read thus, it cannot decay. Read thus, no one can gainsay its truth, for its apparent contradictions are no contradictions. Read thus, it is rescued from neglect, and made the crowning ornament and chief delight of many a home. The Identity is a wonderful subject viewed any way, but patriotism and temporal blessings are as naught compared with its spiritual blessings. Christianity at this moment is a sham; its falseness is palpable; the people know not Christ. The Rock is aware of this, and regrets it. The cure is within reach, but the Rock will not use it. "Are not Abana and Pharpar, rivers of Damascus, better than all the waters of Israel?" Dying spiritualism, fast hasting to the grave, will not purify corrupt society, nor bring salvation to all. The Rock is a champion of the Protestant faith, and we pray for its conversion. It will then be able to labour for Christ effectively, and instead of waiting for the decline of the Bible and the faith, it will joyously tell of a Bible universally read, and a faith universally held.

Digitized by Google

THE END OF THE DAY OF GRACE, AND WHAT IS TO FOLLOW.

THE Great Pyramid seems to point distinctly to the year 1881·6 as the termination of the period of time represented by the Grand Gallery length, which we are accustomed to regard as the "acceptable year of the Lord" (Isa. lxi. 2). How will the expiration of this time affect the work of Israel in the foreign mission-field of the world?

Mr. C. Horner has shown us that the period which was inaugurated by the three years' rise of the grand step at the 1813th Pyramid inch of the Gallery's length symbolises the commencement of the period "replete with missionary activity." That period, extending along the level distance of sixty-one Pyramid inches, comes to an abrupt termination at the Southern impending wall of the Grand Gallery. It seems, therefore, to betoken that, at that epoch—viz., in A.D. 1881·6—there will be a marked and very sudden cessation of foreign missionary work abroad, hitherto undertaken by the Lord's witnessing people Israel—the British—and that, with the commencement of the new era (the seventh millennium of the world's history), changes will take place in the Gospel dispensation of grace towards the foreign heathen world, and British effort in furtherance thereof, which will be sudden, startling, and, to our present ideas, terrible.

Let us look into the matter a little. Are there any symptoms abroad at the present time showing us that the Lord is closing certain hitherto open doors of missionary operation by removing the means by which the British Churches can occupy them? We think there are. We find this a time of general declension in the incomes of our various foreign missionary bodies. The Church Missionary Society records this year an unprecedented decline in its revenues, amounting to between twenty and thirty thousand pounds sterling! The Bible Society, the Tract Society, the Society for the Promotion of Christianity among the Jews, are all mysteriously falling back in respect to funds. The power to give, among Christian men and women, is apparently reduced with the prevailing depression, and Christian missionary enterprise languishes for the want of the needful supplies. We have noticed, too, what cannot have escaped attention, that, for some months past, there is a growing luke-warmness in reference to the subject of missions to the heathen; meetings are not so well attended as they used to be, publications are not so valued as they were, upon this subject. Collections are falling off seriously in amount, and the great societies in London must, perforce, close some of their foreign operations, curtail their general usefulness, and that just as new openings seemed to be calling them to further advances.

What is the meaning of it all? Does God's Word give us any hint? and is "Our Identity" able to throw any light on this new perplexity? We think they do and can! In the first place, what is to happen in 1881·6? We think that then our God will address to us British Israelites the words we see recorded in Isa. xxvi. 20, 21: "Come, My people, enter thou into thy chambers, and shut thy doors about thee; hide thyself as it were for a little moment, until the indignation be overpast. For behold! the LORD cometh out of His place to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity; the earth, also, shall disclose her blood, and shall no more cover her slain." Then we believe Israel's foreign missionary operations will cease and determine for the "little moment," what time she is "shut in," like Noah, by God Himself into her ark of safety, the British Empire, during the fifty-two inch-years of fiery-deluge-indignation about then to be poured out upon the Gentile inhabitants of "the earth." Then Israel's really foreign missions to the heathen (not those to her own heathen subjects) will, we believe, cease, and her "witnessing" functions for the LORD at "the ends of the earth" will terminate. Her work of sowing the Gospel seed allotted to her during these 1882 years of the "acceptable year of the Lord" will have passed away, and her time of rest in her hidden chambers, "for a little moment," will have intervened.

But will the missions she has planted, and which God has so greatly blessed hitherto, die out in consequence? Nay! how can that be? Does not God's Word declare that after the Identity is proclaimed, and Israel with Judah have returned to their land together, "many people"—not all—"and strong nations shall COME to seek the Lord of hosts in Jerusalem, and to pray before the LORD" (Zech. viii. 22).

Christian knowledge must, therefore, by that time, have largely permeated those "many people" and those "strong nations!" But how? By means of the native Churches planted originally by British agents, and carried on and extended by the native agencies after Israel's efforts had ceased, by God's over-ruling providence! We see the process begun already! Sierra Leone is already independent of the Church Missionary Society, and carried on by native agents and native money. Lagos, on the West coast of Africa, is already in part self-supporting, and the native Church has become a missionary Church to the native heathen beyond them!

Eleven thousand heathen in Tinnevelly have quite recently asked for Christian instruction, and three hundred of these have already, of their own accord, commenced a work as catechists, to teach their still heathen countrymen the truth of Christ's Gospel they have only just themselves learned to prize! In the Punjab a native council has been formed to carry on an aggressive work, by native agents alone, and with native means only, quite independently of the missionaries from England, to take the Gospel to their heathen neighbours, and even into the districts bordering on foreign Afghanistan! The native Churches thus are becoming distinctly missionary to their adjacent fellow-countrymen, Asiatic and African!

Digitized by Google

The result will be—who can doubt it?—what it was in Madagascar when persecution and war drove the European missionaries out of the island for twenty-five long years; the providence of God will use the native Churches and native agents as the appointed effective propaganda; and, as among the Malagashes, the outcome will be, at the destined time, that "many people and strong nations" will be found converted to Christ, self-instructed in the way of the Lord; ready and anxious "to seek the Lord of hosts in Jerusalem, and to pray before the LORD."

May the LORD hasten that day! and may we not despair, or be sorrowful, when we hear that British missions are declining and doors now open are closing, from whatever causes; for these are the signs that the LORD is at hand; the time of Israel's hiding is come; and, the restoration of Israel with Judah being effected, that missionary work we all love so well will be consummated in a way we cannot picture now!

At present all our efforts end, we know, in the gathering only of a few here, and of a few there, "as a witness" to testify that the Gospel of Christ is true. But then! "Many people and strong nations," among whom we once sowed the seeds, will have expanded into "strong" native Churches, and, by the Spirit's blessing on the Word self-preached, will draw whole "nations" into the Gospel net, and bring "many people," repentant and believing, as our fellow-subjects of the Redeemer of Israel, to join us, their Israelite protectors and rulers, to the throne of the Lord, to pray to Him at Jerusalem!

We urge these thoughts on our readers as what strongly commend themselves to us, in reference to passing events and the prospects before us. May they lead us all to study, to reflection, and to prayer; for the LORD is verily at hand! Therefore, Israel, praise YE the Lord!

MR. CHILDERS, M.P., AS A BLIND PROMOTER.

MR. CHILDERS speaking at Pontefract, on Wednesday, Nov. 27, 1878, regarding the disastrous policy of Lord Beaconsfield, which was, he said, ruining the country, destroying the freedom of Parliament, upsetting the nation, &c., &c., was obliged to make the following rather inconsistent admission, which, for BANNER purposes, is all we care to quote:—

"There is, gentlemen (he said), a right Imperialism which remembers that we are already in territory, in population, and in wealth, the greatest Empire in the world, or that the world has ever seen; which seeks to consolidate that Empire through the agency of free institutions, and would, step by step, extend liberty and self-government to every part of the Queen's dominions (Cheers). Of that policy the type is to be found in the history of Lord Chatham."

ISRAEL—"THE HEAD, AND NOT THE TAIL, ABOVE ONLY, AND NOT BENEATH," EVEN IN RESPECT TO PHOTOGRAPHY.

WE had always understood that the photographic art was pre-eminently the gift of our "Great" Brother Manasseh, in America: and that British efforts in this line were eclipsed even by the Austrian artists. The following notice, however, seems to imply that, supposing the Americans and Austrians put in a claim to honours at the Paris Exhibition, the palm was, after all, awarded to Israel, in fulfilment of God's promise to our forefathers, that the nation should be the "Head only, and not the tail, above only, and not beneath," provided only they were not disobedient, in failing "to hearken to the commandments of the Lord."

FRENCH HONOURS TO ENGLISH ART.

(From the Tunbridge Wells Courier, September 13th, 1878.

"One of the much coveted gold medals of the French Universal Exhibition is to come to Tunbridge Wells. This is an honour to the town as well as to the fortunate recipient. This great prize has been awarded to Mr. H. P. Robinson, the well-known photographer of the Great Hall Studio. This is, we believe, the only medal of the kind awarded to photographers. The gold medals, we hear, have been very sparingly distributed, and only for exceptional merit. The other awards of gold medals to English artists are to Mr. G. F. Watts, R.A., and Mr. Alma-Tedema, A.R.A. Mr. Robinson has taken his honours in good company."

Correspondence.

FRESH EVIDENCE OF SPIRITUAL GOOD DONE TO A MAN BY ACCEPTANCE OF THE IDENTITY.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—I have this day had the following words addressed to me by a friend to whom I had introduced the Anglo-Israel question, and by giving him "The Anglo-Israel Post Bag" had induced him to study the matter still further for himself.

"The Anglo-Israel theory is true, and it renders many things plain to me which I never understood before, and has brought home the truth of the Bible to me in a manner I never experienced before. You know that I was much inclined to laugh at the Bible and treat it with indifference" (which is perfectly true), "but I can do so no longer; let me keep that book, I must circulate it further."

And yet, sir, the Rock says that we encourage infidelity. It is not very long ago that my own eyes were opened to the glorious truth; since then, I am glad to say that I have been the means of opening the eyes of half-a-dozen of my friends to such an extent as to thoroughly accept the theory, and, in many other cases, have changed their views in the matter, so that instead of ridiculing it, they are now more than half inclined to believe in its truth, and I believe will accept it entirely ere long.

If this letter can be any encouragement to others to follow the same course, you are quite at liberty to make any use you please of it.

Yours very respectfully,
C. R.

7, Newcowen-road, Finchley, London,
April 3, 1879.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—Although I have many times pronounced the Hebrew word "beni," it never struck me until to-day that there was anything remarkable to be drawn from it. This is the train of my thought. "Beni" means "my son," and it forms part of the name Benjamin. Benjamin is a Hebrew name introduced into our language, and the shortened form of this name, in English, is "Benny," pronounced just like the Hebrew "beni," "my son." Well, it is remarkable, and that is all.

But here is the chief resulting thought flashing into my mind. Why is it a habit among English people to make all the shortened forms of names end in "y," or "i," such as "Johnny," "Willy," "Carry," "Rosy?" When we are not very familiar with persons, we say "John," "William," "Caroline," or "Rosa," but as soon as we get more familiar, especially with those younger than ourselves, we shorten the names, and put on this little strange ending "y," or "ie." Now, what is the difference between the two? One is simply the name, and the other ending in "y" seems to me to mean "my John," or "my Rosa," used affectionately in the same way as the Hebrew ending of "beni," "my son,"—"i" being the inseparable pronoun "my."

This seems to be an inherent custom, for we use it in speaking to animals also, "doggie," "pussy." Has this habit clung to the English throughout all their wanderings, from the time of their captivity, or do other nations use this same ending with the same meaning?

Yours, etc.,
GAMALIEL.

Rolleston, March 22.

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements

(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O O payable at Ludgate-circus.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed :—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

BANNER OF ISRAEL. VOL. II.
Now ready, price 7s., of all Booksellers.

Now ready price 7s., post free 6d. extra.

THE SECOND VOLUME OF THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.
EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

This volume contains a large number of articles on our Identity with Lost Israel, by the best and most learned writers on the subject. Also many interesting papers on the Great Pyramid by Professor Piazzi Smyth, F.R.S.E., Astronomer-Royal for Scotland, Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A., Major H. A. Tracey, R.A., Charles Horner, Esq., and others. London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

Owing to the increasing interest taken in the Identity movement, it is found necessary to occasionally enlarge our space to make room for the important papers constantly reaching the Editor. It has, therefore, been determined to issue Twelve Double Numbers during 1879, for which Twopence will be charged. The first of these series of Double Numbers was issued the first week in January, and one on each succeeding first week in the month during the year.

	£	s.	d.
Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free	0	7	6
Two copies (including Double Numbers) ...	0	12	4
Three " " " " ...	0	18	8
Four " " " " ...	1	6	2
Six " " " " ...	1	17	4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-Grand, London, to W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

"BANNER OF ISRAEL" FREE CIRCULATION FUND.

DISTRIBUTION of the BANNER OF ISRAEL at the MAY MEETINGS. It is intended to distribute several thousand copies of the BANNER OF ISRAEL at the great meetings which will be held in London during the months of April, May, and June. Contributions towards this object will be received by R. FERGUSSON BANKS, Hon. Secretary to the Free Circulation Fund.

	£	s.	d.
H. S....	0	4	0

Now ready, price One penny, post free 1½d. One dozen copies, post free 1s. 100 copies 6s., post free 7s.

THE IDENTITY OF THE BRITISH NATION WITH THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. THE CLUE TO THE EASTERN QUESTION. By C. W. E.
London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row

SOME of PHILO-ISRAEL'S papers, as they have appeared in THE BANNER, will be separately published from time to time in the form of Letters, for distribution.

No. 1. "The Identity of the British with Lost Israel."
No. 2. "The Glory of God."
No. 3. "An Address to British Soldiers.' (Now ready.)
No. 4. "An Address to British Sailors." (Now ready.)

Others will follow. Price One and Sixpence per 100; less quantities in proportion: postage extra.

Apply to R. Banks, 5 Racquet-court, Fleet-street. Also all Booksellers and Publishers.

187th Thousand. Price 6d., post free 7d.

FORTY-SEVEN IDENTIFICATIONS OF THE BRITISH NATION WITH THE LOST HOUSE OF ISRAEL, founded upon 500 Scriptural Proofs. Shewing the Tribe of Dan to have settled in North Ireland; the Welsh to be a Tribe of Israel; the people of South Ireland to be the Canaanites; America to be Identical with the Nation of Manasseh; Queen Victoria to be Descended from David; and our Coronation Stone in Westminster Abbey to be Jacob's Stone.
London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

BOOKS, ETC.

This day. Price 2d. Post free 2½d.

MANASSEH AND THE UNITED STATES. An important Essay delivered before the "Lost Israel Identification Society," by the Rev. Joseph Wild, D.D., at Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, New York.

THE WILL of JACOB MADE to EPHRAIM and MANASSEH.—See "Manasseh and the United States," by Dr. Wild.—Price 2d.

OUT of SIXTY CONQUERED COLONIES the ONLY ONE ENGLAND EVER LOST was that of MANASSEH.—See "Manasseh and the United States," by Dr. Wild.—Price 2d.

MANASSEH IS A PEOPLE, and a GREAT PEOPLE.—See "Manasseh and the United States," by Dr. Wild.—Price 2d.

THE FOOTSTEPS of EPHRAIM and MANASSEH.—See "Manasseh and the United States," by Dr. Wild.—Price 2d.; post free 2½d.

TO AUTHORS. Authors desirous of issuing Works or Pamphlets on the great and increasingly interesting Question of the Identity of the Lost Ten Tribes with the British Nation, should first communicate with Robert Banks, of Racquet-court, Fleet-street, who has already been honoured by issuing, amongst others, the following works on the subject:

The Banner of Israel. Weekly 1d.; monthly 7d.
The Nation's Glory Leader. Weekly 1d.; quarterly 1s. 4d.
The Pillar of Witness. By late Captain Tracey. Cloth 2s. 6d.; paper 1s. 6d. (second edition).
The Anglo-Israel Post Bag. By Bishop Titcomb. Cloth 2s. 6d.; paper 1s. 6d. (second edition).
The History of the House of Israel. By Philo-Israel. Cloth 1s.; paper 6d. (sixth thousand).
The Great Pyramid of Egypt. Fifty-two pages, with three illustrations. Price 4d. (10,000).
The New Old Story. By A E I. Cloth 1s.

Price 1d.; post free, 1½d.

GOD'S LOVE FOR ISRAEL, A GUARANTEE THAT HE WILL FULFIL HIS PROMISES TO ISRAEL. By JOHN GILDER SHAW.

Price 6d.; or with illustrative map, 8d.

BRITAIN (OR ISRAEL) THE FIFTH AND LAST, AND THE UNCONQUERABLE EMPIRE. By JOHN GILDER SHAW.

Price 3d.; post free, 3½d.

CHRONOLOGICAL CHART OF BRITISH VICTORIES OVER THE CONTINENTAL POWERS, ranging from the battle of Cressy (1346), to our last victory, the taking of Sebastopol, Sept. 8, 1855. Arranged by J. G. SHAW, of Leeds.

"We trust Mr. Shaw's labour in preparing this paper may be appreciated by the public and be largely sold."—Banner of Israel.

Shortly will pe published, price 6d.

RESULTS OF ISRAEL'S OBEDIENCE. A review of the successive steps which have led to the present condition of Britain (or Israel), the Fifth and Last Empire.

London: Published by Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; and may be had of the Author, 20 Park-row, Leeds, and of all booksellers.

DEAFNESS CURED, NOISES IN THE EARS, &c.
SPECIAL OFFER TO THE DEAF.

THE REV. E. J. SILVERTON having discovered that there are tens of thousands who are unable to obtain his 11s. Box of Aurial Remedy which has cured so many persons of Deafness and Noises in the Ears, &c., begs now to offer a 2s. 6d. Box of the Medicine, so as to put it within the reach of all. This arrangement is specially made to meet the deaf world. With every box of medicine will be presented the Rev. E. J. Silverton's "Health Advocate," containing valuable advice and information that everyone ought to know. Post Office Orders for 2s. 6d. to E. J. SILVERTON, Minister of Exeter Hall Church, Nottingham, or stamps, 2s. 8d.

WOOLS! WOOLS! WOOLS! Cheapest and Best. White and Black Berlin, Single and Double, 3s. 6d. per pound. Best quality Ice Wools, all Colours, 5½. per ounce ball. All other Wools at proportionate prices. Shetland, Andalusian, Fleecy, and Bonne Mere Wools. Welsh, Scotch, Peacock Victoria, and other Yarns. Crewel Filoselle Silk.

M. WHELLENS, Wholesale and Retail Wool Warehouse, 3, 5, and 6, QUEEN'S TERRACE, CAMDEN ROAD, LONDON, N.

Send for Price List, forwarded post free.

LADIES' SILK SCARVES, price 1s. The choicest Silk Scarf ever offered. All Colours; richly brocaded ends. Send stamps for a sample.

M. WHELLENS, 5 & 6, Queen's-terrace, Camden-road, London, N.

BOOKS.

New and Revised Edition.

THE "NEW OLD STORY," an Introduction to a Marvellous Puzzle, expressly written for children, with a Short and Simple Account of the Great Pyramid, explaining the measurements, &c., so as to be easily understood by the young. By A E I. W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane.

Just published.

THE COMING COLLISION BETWEEN ENGLAND AND RUSSIA PREDICTED BY EZEKIEL; forming a Proof of England with the Israel of Prophecy. Price 1s., post free 1s. 1d.

W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C. List of works on the Identity forwarded post free upon application.

New pamphlet by Philo-Israel.
Will shortly be published, price 2d.

THE HISTORICAL, ETHNIC, AND PHILOLOGICAL ARGUMENTS in PROOF of BRITISH IDENTITY with the TEN LOST TRIBES OF ISRAEL, clearly and simply stated.

BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane; and Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Now ready.

THE GENTILES AND THE TIMES OF THE GENTILES. By J. LEYLAND FEILDEN, Author of "Links in the Chain of Evidence Connecting Israel and England," and "Israel's Jubilee; or, 1882." Price 6d., by post 7d.

W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick Lane, E.C.

THE GREAT PYRAMID. NOW READY, PHILO-ISRAEL'S NEW WORK, 56 pages, Illustrated with Diagrams, price 4d., post free 5d.

AN ELEMENTARY DIGEST or SKETCH OF THE CHIEF FACTS and TEACHINGS of the GREAT PYRAMID of EGYPT; adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific. By PHILO-ISRAEL; together with Original Papers by the following leading Pyramidists, republished mostly from the BANNER OF ISRAEL (by kind permission of the proprietor)—viz., Professor Piazzi Smyth, the Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A., Charles Horner, Esq., and Major H. A. Tracey, R.A. Being a pamphlet by five authors (a Pyramid number).

Opinion of Mr. Charles Horner, regarding the above work, after perusal of the same:—"I think your design of the Pyramid pamphlet excellent. I know well that it is a book urgently needed, since, under God's blessing, it will, I feel convinced, convert many to Christ. Your part Philo-Israel's) I deem unexceptionable. It is both terse and understandable to the many, which is the great object you have had in view. I should like to see thousands circulated amongst our intelligent artisans, and hope God will raise some to do this."—C. HORNER. Dec. 12, 1878.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

Second edition, just published. Price 1s. 6d.; Cloth, gilt edges, 2s. 6d. Post free for 20 or 33 stamps.

THE PILLAR OF WITNESS. A Scriptural View of the GREAT PYRAMID. By the late Commander B. W. TRACEY, R.N.

W. H Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

Just Published, price 3d.

EPISCOPACY, NOT ESTABLISHMENT, THE BANE OF THE NATIONAL CHURCH. BY A LAY MEMBER OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND

W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row; and the Protestant Tract Society, 17, Buckingham-st., Strand.

Just out.

NOTES ON THE VISIONS OF ZECHARIAH VIEWED IN THE LIGHT OF THE IDENTITY OF THE TEN LOST TRIBES. By J. A. H. Price 1s. paper covers; 1s 6d. cloth.

W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick Lane, E.C.

ARE THE ENGLISH PEOPLE THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL? By PHILO-ISRAEL Price 4d.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

WALTER KEAST'S Old Established BOOT AND SHOE WAREHOUSE, 102, KENNINGTON PARK ROAD, LONDON.

Gentlemen's Boots & Shoes for	Ladies' Boots and Shoes for
Winter and Summer, House and Garden, Walking, Riding, Rowing, Fishing, Shooting, &c.	Winter and Summer, Walking and Riding, House, Garden, or Dancing, &c., &c.

Children's Boots for School, Walking, Garden, or Sea-side. Slippers in great variety at moderate prices.

Schools and Public Institutions supplied at wholesale prices.

Note the address—WALTER KEAST, 102, Kennington-park-road, S.E.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, 5, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, APRIL 30, 1879.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. III. No. 123. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, MAY 7, 1879. [DOUBLE NUMBER, TWOPENCE.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
Some Recent Battles of Israel.—The Relief of Ekowe	181
The Debate on the Identity	182
The Great Pyramid and the Near Revelation of our Lord. A Sequel Containing Further Discoveries and Some Incidental Confirmations. By Charles Horner.—Part I.—The Further Discoveries	183
The Vicar of St. Barnabas, Hull, and the Identity	185
"Who are These that Fly as a Cloud, and as the Doves to their Windows?" (Isa. lx. 8)	186
Judah's Testimony to Our Identity	187
Our Opponent, Mr. J. C. McClellan, and Our Champion, Surgeon-General J. M. Grant, H.M.Service, Aldershot	188
Flavius Josephus, the Jewish Historian, Gives Blind Historical Testimony to British Identity with Israel	188
Regarding the Dates Indicating the Near Approach of the Coming of the Lord and of Israel's Restoration	189
Sir Edward Creasy's Blind Evidence in "The Fifteen Decisive Battles of the World." By D. S. Skinner	190
Why Englishmen Should Specially Assist in the Conversion of the Jew	191
The Rev. C. W. Hickson's Pastoral Addresses to His Flock	192
The Northern Echo on the Fijis, and Regarding Cyprus	193
The Rate of Increase of Population in France, Germany, and Great Britain	193
Report of Progress in Sheffield	195
Review	195
Correspondence	195

SOME RECENT BATTLES OF ISRAEL.

THE RELIEF OF EKOWE.

WE trust from many an Israelite's home there has lately risen the voice of praise to the Lord for grateful relief from the cruel suspense we have so long suffered regarding the future of the Zulu War, and the possible, because horrible, fate of Pearson and his brave band beleaguered in Ekowe since January 22nd, 1879. That was a day of evil omen when Insandhlana brought dismay and horror to so many British hearts! The 22nd April, 1879, was, on the other hand, a date much to be remembered in these islands! For it told us the good news of the relief of Ekowe; of the defeat and rout of the Zulu forces, not only at Ginglelova, where the relief column put its assailants to flight, but also (200 miles North-west of it) at Kambula Kop as well, when Colonel Wood's column—attacked by 20,000 picked men of Cetywayo's Kraal and of the Swazi Chief, Umbelini—utterly defeated them with frightful loss. We have seen with regret that no public journalist, recording these triumphs of our arms, has had the gratitude to return thanks to Almighty God for His help to us in our time of need! The praise is given to our men, to our generals, to our arms of precision, but never, we fear, to the God who, being Israel's covenant Jehovah, has now, as He said He would when Solomon's prayer was heard, maintained His people Israel's cause as the matter required (1 Kings viii. 59). Be it ours, as an Israelite journalist, to acknowledge the good hand of our God in these glorious results, which so rejoice us now, and to thank Him in the name of our whole body with heartfelt gratitude for inspiring our soldiery with courage, for the gifts of the arms of precision they used so well, for the success that has attended all the recent operations, and for the restoration of our prestige, as well as for the safety of our imprisoned soldiers in Ekowe, and of the gallant bands that fought at Ginglelova and Kambula Kop to effect their release. Cetywayo, the Zulu King, despising God's people as those of old did, when they called them "Thou worm Jacob," said, "Those rats would never get out of that trap!" But "the rats" marched out in triumph safe and sound for all that, what time Cetywayo, himself defeated and dismayed, sorely stricken by Colonel Wood's column at Kambula Kop, was chased like a stricken deer for seven miles, his braves cut down, when utterly exhausted, by Colonel Buller's horsemen in the pursuit; arms, ammunition, and assegais all thrown away in their pell mell flight! The tables were indeed handsomely turned then, and here we see God's returning mercy to His people Israel, when after the "punishment-in-measure" dealt out to them at Insandhlana, "He maintained their cause as the matter required," not only at Ekowe, but at Ginglelova and at Kambula Kop besides. Israel! Praise ye the Lord for these most undeserved mercies!

We now proceed to give a sketch of the operations which led to the release of Colonel Pearson and his 1,300 brave garrison shut up for twelve long weeks in the heart of the Zulu country, like rats, as Cetywayo said, "in a trap." The column to relieve him left the Tugela River by the coast road on the 28th March and reached Ginglelova, 15 miles from their destination, only on the 1st April, 1879. The enemy were present in formidable numbers all around, and were said to be from 15,000 to 35,000 in number! That was a busy evening and a painful night after that day's march! The troops were at once put into laager, and entrenchments made to serve as rifle pits. The night proved one of heavy rain; but the men were not molested by the enemy till the early dawn, though Colonel Pearson had given timely warning on the previous day of the enemy's presence in vast numbers as being on the march to the attack. At 6 a.m. on the 2nd April, the now safe British forces were assaulted; but they were fully prepared! The first attack, directed on the entrenchments, where the 60th Rifles were stationed, was boldly made. One who saw the daring of the enemy, was struck with the gallantry of the race, who going to certain destruction, pressed on with devotion, to come to close quarters with their foes! In vain! A rain of lead poured incessantly on the advancing Zulus; the Gatling guns discharged their continuous hail of death; the Martini-Henry —that "new sharp thrashing instrument having mouths," which God hath given to His people Israel (Isa. xli. 15)—let nothing live which approached within twenty yards of the shelter trench. As a matter of fact, the Zulus never came nearer the laagered camp or the trenches than twenty or thirty yards. They withered, stricken under that fearful fire; halted, and retreated; but only to return again, and again, and again, with matchless devotion. Their task was hopeless. Failing on the one side, where the 60th Rifles were their opponents, they tried the other face of the laager; but this time they had the 91st Highlanders and 57th Foot to meet them. Ten minutes sufficed to bring their attack on these noble regiments to utter discomfiture. And then came the moment of vengeance. After terrific losses, the Zulus, hesitating, betook themselves to flight, followed on the instant by Barrow's mounted Infantry and Barton's and Nettleton's regiment of the Natal Contingent. The carnage among the Zulus from the Martini-Henry rifles and Gatling guns was terrible. Four hundred and seventy-one corpses were found dead round the trenches. The sabres of the mounted infantry in the pursuit did greater execution still; and it is calculated that the Zulus lost 1,200 in dead alone near and on the field; in wounded, as many again. Colonel Pearson witnessed the fight, (which was over in ninety minutes by 7.30 a.m.), and flashed his congratulations by the heliograph. The result of this victory (God bestowed) was the relief of Ekowe on the 3rd April, and the evacuation of the place (found to be unhealthy) next day. Col. Pearson and his gallant forces were in safety at the Tugela on the 8th April, saved by the good hand of our God on the admirable arrangements made by Lord Chelmsford for his relief.

Digitized by Google

The great and splendid victory achieved by Col. Wood at Kambula Kop, when, on the 29th March, 1879, he was attacked by Umbelini and Cetywayo with 20,000 men, was an operation which had a powerful effect on the relief of Ekowe. It drew off from the attack on the relieving column 10,000 men or more. The enemy were emboldened by a success they had achieved against the native levies and colonial horse of Colonel Roberts' columns on the previous day. On the 29th March, therefore, at 1.30 p.m., they attacked the laagered and entrenched camp of the British. Bravely they came on, and bravely they continued the assault for four hours. So fierce were their onsets that, their vast numbers telling, they actually got into the cattle laager, and into the camp itself. British prowess, however, prevailed by God's blessing, and the end was that, the final assault having failed at 5.30 p.m., the enemy retreated in despair. But the retreat was turned into headlong rout (as at Ginglelova) when the mounted troops, issuing from the laager, pursued them and cut them up for seven miles. The road was strewed with arms; 300 Martini-Henry's and other firearms were picked up in the pursuit. Five hundred Zulu corpses were buried close to the camp. Three thousand is the estimate of the Zulu and Swazi total losses in that one fight. These two battles were not victories so much as conquests, and they possibly may end the war. We may hope they will. What are the lessons, then, these events teach us? Are they not that "He who keepeth Israel neither slumbereth nor sleepeth?"—that "there is none other that fighteth for us, but only God"—the God of Israel? When all seemed perplexity and suspense in Zululand, He, in His mercy, suddenly changed the whole aspect of affairs, and restored to us the sense of safety and that prestige whereon our very existence as a nation in South Africa, India, Burmah, and elsewhere, must, at least for the present, rest. These battles were in all respects typical battles of Israel. The enemies were many; we were few. They came against us in multitudes; we waited for their assault, trusting in the Lord, and crying to Him as a nation for His help. He therefore gave us the victory, and sent the foes who approached us one way, fleeing seven ways (Deut. xxviii. 7), a beaten and a discomfited, humbled enemy (Isa. liv. 15). Reader! Praise ye the Lord for all His mercies; and especially for those we nationally have just experienced at Ekowe, at Ginglelova, and at Kambula Kop!

THE DEBATE ON THE IDENTITY.

Our readers will have learned by advertisements that a three nights' discussion of the question, "Are Englishmen Israelites?" was fixed for April 21st, 22nd, and 23rd, in Exeter Hall, to be conducted by Mr. Edward Hine, author of the "Forty-seven Identifications," and Mr. Robert Roberts, author of "Coming Events in the East;" the former to affirm, the latter to deny. A wide-spread interest was taken in the subject, and some little solicitude was felt, both parties being desirous to prevent any appearance of failure. The utmost assurance and confidence was felt by both the speakers; but as the debate originated entirely with the negative party, with whom there was an evident under-current of purpose beyond that of the Identity of Lost Israel, it was feared that point might turn out to be a rock of offence.

The discussion has been held, and the rules laid down for its proper management by the negative party were accepted tacitly by Mr. Hine, although he has himself been little more than a passive agent, from a conviction that his duty lay more in attending to his periodical literature and lectures; yet, when challenged to the combat, he has now twice met the "Goliath of the Gentiles" in open discussion in the metropolis, and if Mr. Hine is not convinced, many of his friends are, that these discussions have no good design, and will have no good end. It is now plainly manifest that the negative party has been seeking to ventilate some peculiar religious notions, held by a very select and very small section of the community; hence, the popularity of Mr. Hine's name, coupled with the equally popular subject of the Identity question, have together been used as a means to try and ventilate opinions which may be best described by a term used by Mr. Roberts himself—namely, "theological quackery."

Lord William Lennox, much of whose life has been spent in the army, kindly consented to preside during each evening. Two and a half hours were to be occupied each day, first by a speech from Mr. Hine of half an hour, and Mr. Roberts to follow in the next half-hour. This was followed by each asking questions of the other for fifteen minutes; the next half-hour to be divided equally in questioning or speaking, leaving to each ten minutes for reply at the end.

Mr. Hine, in his several speeches during the three evenings, presented to the audience, which numbered about 1,500 each day, a careful statement of the circumstances which led to, and which followed, the going into captivity of the Ten Tribes of Israel. He pointed out, at considerable length, and very lucidly, the distinctions made in the prophetical and apostolical writings—between the Jews as the Two-Tribed people—namely, Judah and Levi—and the Ten-Tribed people, consisting of the other Tribes separated from the Jews after the death of Solomon. He gave many forms of Scriptural evidence that God, by the prophets, used different language in speaking of the Jews and the Israelites, and also that the promises and prophecies recorded very distinctly point out the difference between the Jews and Israelites. He made it plain that the exiled Israelites had never returned to their own land; and then, at considerable length, he explained the condition, locality, occupation, and other circumstances which should distinguish Lost Israel when they should be found. All these conditions, he stated, were the inheritance of the people of Great Britain and their dependencies. Our colonies, the gates we hold to protect ourselves against our enemies, the fact of having five thousand Hebrew words in our language, our great increase of population, and other remarkable facts were adduced as evidence that we were Lost Israel dwelling in the Isles of the West, according to prophecy. These are some of the leading Identifications, but not all, presented to the audience, and explained by Mr. Hine in support of his affirmation that the people of Great Britain really are Lost Israel found. The numerous passages of Scripture to support these statements Mr. Hine had all at hand in a remarkable marked copy of the Bible, in which every verse was coloured so as to indicate to the reader the portions relating respectively to Jews, Israelites, and Gentiles throughout the book. These passages Mr. Hine has given so repeatedly in his lectures in all parts of the country, that he had not time to go over the same ground again merely to gratify his antagonist. It was a wonder to most persons the freedom and accuracy with which passages of Scripture were quoted and referred to by both speakers.

Digitized by Google

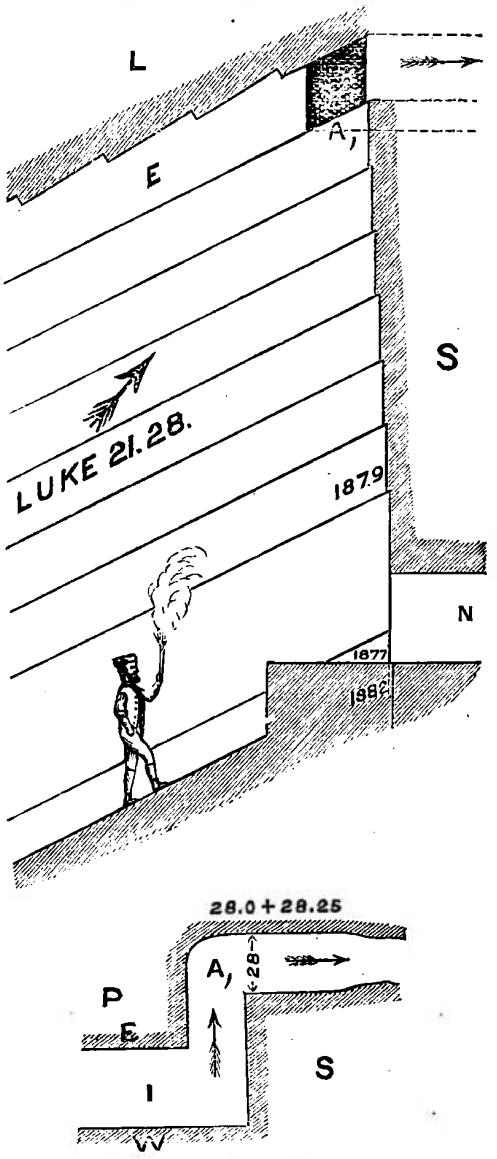
Mr. Roberts, in his speeches, complained that Mr. Hine indulged in a perpetual stream of assertions, and gave him no facts or arguments which he could critically examine. He said that Mr. Hine had published a work called the "Forty-seven Identifications" that Englishmen were Lost Israel, based on 300 passages of Scripture; but he denied that there was even one passage in the Bible in support of such a theory. Mr. Roberts will have to convince more than a hundred thousand Englishmen, followers of Mr. Hine, as capable of judging as Mr. Roberts, before they believe what he then asserted. He went back to the times of Noah to show, as he said, that we had our origin from a son of Noah, different from him who was the father of the Israelites. At great length he read passages from the works of Josephus, and in a petulant manner he asked, "Do you know who Josephus was?" and he told them they were not aware of the value of the authority they were laughing at. Those extracts were to prove that in the mind of Josephus, Jews and Israelites were all one, that they were identical and interchangeable terms used indiscriminately to apply to both. With much vehemence he maintained that point, and tried to persuade his audience to believe as he did, implying thereby that the Jews scattered all the world over included also the Ten Tribes of Israel, as well as the Two Tribes of Judah and Levi. Much of the time thus occupied was felt by many in the audience to be no better than beating the air.



The period devoted to questioning was a crucial one in several senses. Mr. Hine preferred to speak rather than use the Bible in the rough and pompous manner in which it was used by his antagonist. Some of the questions asked were so manifestly absurd and unanswerable that it was a time of punishment, rather than of pleasure, to the audience. Who, for example, could answer the questions, "When are the latter days?" "Why are not the promises fulfilled?" This was another kind of question asked:—"Do you consider England to be a Christian nation?" By this question he evidently meant that because they did not observe "the seventh day" as the Sabbath, as do the Jews, they could not be a Christian nation. There was also a harsh severity in the manner in which the questions were asked, which was in extreme contrast to that of Mr. Hine, and which induced the latter to remark several times, "Keep your temper, Mr. Roberts." The questioning portion of the discussion we could not but think a very profitless proceeding, and something worse.

Opinions were very much divided as to the results of the debate, and as no vote was taken, there was really nothing to show as a satisfactory result of three evenings' discussion. Mr. Roberts had his ambition gratified, Mr. Hine made good all his opportunities in explaining some of the leading Identities: and a large number of books were sold setting forth the particular opinions of both the disputants. Some intelligent persons bought books on the Identity to study the question. The proceedings terminated with votes of thanks to the noble chairman and the two speakers.

THE GREAT PYRAMID AND THE NEAR REVELATION OF OUR LORD.

A Sequel Containing Further Discoveries and some Incidental Confirmations.

By Charles Horner.

REFERENCES.

L Elevation of Portion of Grand Gallery's East Wall, South end. P Plan of Gallery near Roof, showing Passage to Lower Chamber of Construction over King's Chamber. E East Wall. W West Wall. I Interior of Grand Gallery. S South Wall. N Entrance Passage to Millennial Chamber.

PART I.—THE FURTHER DISCOVERIES.

In a late number of the Banner I endeavoured to trace the matchless harmony prevailing between two specifically unique portions of God's mighty monumental witness in the land of Egypt; and how that parallelism, too, obtained with past historic fact and future Divine predictions touching the first and second revelations of our Lord Jesus Christ. It also appeared manifest, on prayerfully comparing those predictions with variant present day "signs," that the greater part of them were in rapid course of fulfilment, leading us to the conclusion that the revelation of our Lord from heaven was a supernatural event to be anticipated in the course of a short time, judging from the very few years of this epoch which remain. Soon after the publication of that communication I received a letter from a much-esteemed correspondent, and because he has both visited and since made a notable discovery in the Great Pyramid, I do not hesitate presenting his valuable testimony on this most solemn theme for all mankind with which he has been pleased to favour me: "The view you propose is very striking, and seems to me to be inevitably true; the very positions of these passages adds the greatest force to it—viz., the revelation of Christ from the grave—i.e., below, and His revelation from above, and both these passages are inaccessible to man unassisted in some way."

Digitized by Google

Now, although I regard the evidence already adduced as most powerfully demonstrating the interpretation there submitted, yet I am devoutly anxious not for a moment to withhold any jot or tittle of gathered knowledge bearing upon this stupendous event, but that such acquired items should be published as speedily as possible.

There is no greater internal evidence of the Great Pyramid being a Divinely-constructed monument than that afforded by the marvellous systems of check which prevail, I may say, throughout this mighty structure. It matters not whether the interpretation concern cosmical, chronological, or religious symbology, but, sooner or later, there emanates from some quarter a demonstration establishing the truth of a previous deduction. A most remarkable example is now before the world in the case of Mr. James Simpson's grand and mathematically-determined length of the grand gallery. If there were some small uncertainty hitherto, in its totality amounting to merely a few months, that element has for ever vanished; for he conclusively proves the floor's length to be neither more nor less than 1881·6 Pyramid inches, which, translated chronologically, will end about the first or second week in August, 1882, though the day and the hour is not to be revealed to man. But now this happy result is achieved, further teaching may yet be discerned underlying this arrived-at fact of a very significant character.

Since in the microscopic examination of natural objects an increment of magnifying power enlarges the area of discovery, disclosing fresh beauties demanding our unfeigned admiration, so a devout and more attentive scrutiny of the measures pertaining to the WITNESS OF THE LORD OF HOSTS, reveals new marvels for wonderment. Now it is evident to even a casual student of the Scriptures that throughout the Old and New Testaments there exists a designed association of facts and ideas with number. Such have been noticed long since by many eminent writers, though more notably in Dr. Milo Mahan's admirable little work published in 1864. It will suffice for my present purpose to introduce a few of his most prominent and simple numbers, attaching thereto such significations only as are warranted by Scripture.

We have, then, in one, the emblem of unity—one God. In two, that of the incarnation—the second Divine Person. In three, the symbol of the Holy Trinity. In four, we note the order of the cosmos—"the four quarters of the earth," "the four winds of heaven." Five denotes that of sacred order, manifested especially when the Israelites departed from Egypt (Exod. xiii. 18), margin, "five in a rank;" the number likewise recurring throughout the temple and tabernacle mensuration. In six we have the symbol of secular perfection, as in the 6 acts of creation. Seven is emblematic of the Spirit and rest, the "seven spirits before the throne," and the Sabbath-day. Eight designates resurrection, new life, renewal. In the eighth year Israel was commanded to sow; the eighth was the great day of the feast of tabernacles, a type of the incarnation; the day of the Lord's resurrection; the eighth, or resurrection dynasty (Rev. xvii. 11); and we meet with it in a concentrated form in the Greek for "Jesus," Ἰησοῦς = 10 + 8 + 200 + 70 + 400 + 200 = 888. Nine he regards as the emblem of the Father, paternity, fulness or completeness, and judgment. The Israelites were to eat the fruits until the ninth year; it was about the ninth hour when Jesus cried, "IT IS FINISHED;" the ninth year of King Zedekiah, when "Nebuchadnezzar came up with all his army to besiege Jerusalem," and it was on the "ninth day of the fourth month in the eleventh year that the city was broken up." Moreover, in the final address to the Churches, our Lord adopts the title "Amen," in the Greek, Ἀμήν = 1 + 40 + 8 + 50 = 99, a concentrated form of nine. And in the last full year of the present dispensation, A.D. 1881, we have 19 times 99 as the most significant factors. Lastly, "in the number 31," says Dr. Mahan, "we have in the word אל = EL, a common Hebrew abbreviation of the name of God = 30 + 1, viz., three, the sacred triad, multiplied by 10, the sign of infinity, with one the type of unity. Hence we have 9 and 7 plus 7 and 8. as the full arithmetical expression of the doctrine of the Triuity; for 9 being the symbol of the FATHER, 8 of the SON, with 7 of the SPIRIT, proceeding from both the FATHER and the SON."

In giving these conclusions, published by the learned author, I must ask you to remember that he knew nothing whatever touching the sacred and scientific character of the Great Pyramid now indissolubly bound up with the Identity movement, and being accepted with such wonderful rapidity throughout the length and breadth of Great Britain, the Colonies, and America. Indeed, as you may be aware, that monument was not even measured until 1865, and then some time elapsed before the said mensuration facts were published to the world. So that the design of applying his numbers to the interpretation of the then future Great Pyramid measures, would be about the last idea that could have ever entered the good man's mind. Nevertheless, I believe his work was of God, and not until last year did Mr. Hartwell A. Powers begin to show how the key had been prepared to enable him, with wisdom from above, to unlock some of the exquisite secrets of this precious monument of Our inheritance.

Let us proceed with this beautiful subject and gather up the teachings of the Scriptures, and reverently apply them to the vocal elucidation of the Lord's monumental witness. Consider, then, more especially, the import of the numbers 7 and 8 derived from a closer study of the Scriptures.

Begin with the book of Genesis, where we have an exceedingly prominent 7 in Enoch, the 7th from Adam (Jude 14); and an 8 in Noah, the 8th person (2 Peter ii. 5). Observe here what light flashes out from the New Testament upon the Old by the method of comparing Scripture with Scripture, which is, indeed, the safest canon of interpretation to follow. Enoch was an example of high spirituality, because he "walked with God." Therefore he is essentially a type of the Lord Christ, who was filled with the Spirit, and whom no man could convince of sin. In the case of Noah the resemblance to Christ is, perhaps, even more striking, for the following analogies are at once obvious. "Noah," it is written, "found grace in the eyes of the Lord;" for the Lord said unto him, "Thee have I seen righteous in this generation." So of Christ the Father said, "This is My beloved Son in whom I am well pleased: hear ye Him." Noah was a "preacher of righteousness," and Christ came to preach "the acceptable year of the Lord." Noah built an ark, and was instrumental in saving those appointed unto life. Christ offered Himself up, that whosoever believeth on Him shall have ETERNAL LIFE.

But now in that beatific vision of John, in chap. i. 13, and following verses, he describes the glorious person of our Redeemer, adding the words afterwards addressed to him, which are exceedingly noteworthy, "Write the things which thou HAST SEEN." Obeying His command, the beloved disciple has specifically delineated the features presented by his Lord and Master. Examine the portrait well, and you will perceive 8 particular characteristics. After giving a general description in verse 13, the apostle descends to a minuter observation of His glorious presence:—

Digitized by Google

1. His HEAD and
2. His HAIRS } were white like wool, as white as snow.
3. His EYES were as a flame of fire.
4. His FEET like unto fine brass, as if they burned in a furnace.
5. His VOICE as the sound of many waters.
6. In His RIGHT HAND seven stars.
7. Out of His MOUTH went a sharp two-edged sword.
8. His COUNTENANCE was as the sun shineth in his strength.

Awe-striking in His Majesty John saw these 8 prominent details in his risen Lord, which, after beholding, he "fell at His feet as dead." But, He said, "Fear not; I am the First and the Last. I am He that liveth and was dead; and behold I am alive for evermore." Now, the 7th feature is most remarkable, for out of His mouth proceedeth the SWORD of the SPIRIT, which is the Word of God. But the 7 of the Spirit is again markedly accentuated in chap. iii. 1, as a separate 7, where we read, "These things saith He that hath the 7 spirits of God," and thus does the 7 of the Spirit proceed from the everlasting Son. Consequently these facts add the greatest force to Dr. Mahan's deductions touching the numerical symbolism of the sacred EL.

Wherefore I reverently assign $8 \times 7 = 56$ as our Lord's peculiar NUMBER in His attributes of the RESURRECTION and the LIFE, strengthened by the 56 emblems enumerated in Rev. i.—v.

Now the SIGN AND WITNESS to the Lord is an ALTAR as well as a pillar (Isa. xix. 19). The word מַצֵּבָת = Matstsêbah, denotes a "pile of stones," or "monumental pillar," and the Great Pyramid is such a building of piled up rectangular stone blocks. But when the time had arrived for this "temple of God" to be measured (Rev. xi. 1), the ALTAR is expressly ordered to be measured also. An ALTAR is universally designated a place of sacrifice, and the ALTAR was inside the first temple of Jerusalem. Now, since the "well" is symbolic of the Lord's death and resurrection, we have at once a typical ALTAR inside the Great Pyramid, the dimensions of which were carefully taken by the chosen measurer in 1865. In this manner are the predictions contained in God's Holy Word accurately fulfilled.

Come now with an understanding heart, and once more accompany me to the well's mouth, and there reverently read the measures recorded by Jehovah our Righteousness. First, examine the aperture A at page 39, and notice the 28 + 28 inches. In the 2 I ask you to see the emblem of the second person of the glorious Trinity, which multiplied by the 10 of infinity = 20, with plus 8, the Lord's resurrection number. But the number 28 by itself, I find, is the power of the word ghattāh-yāh, חַטָּאָה is = 8 + 9 + 10 + 1 = 28, which in English, means A "SIN-OFFERING" (Ezra vi. 17). On the day of atonement the goat which fell by "lot" to the Lord (Lev. xvi. 8), had the words "for Jehovah," ליהוה inscribed on it by the high priest (Smith's Dict. Bible). Now the power of this word is exactly 56, the length and breadth of well's aperture, therefore the Lord's number is again shown.

Moreover the aperture is "four-square," therefore $28 \times 4 =$ 112, which is the power of the Hebrew words "LORD God," this sublime name first occurring in Gen. ii. 5. Further, when measuring the aperture, the actual sign of the Cross was necessarily made there in 1865; and again at the aperture A,, by Dr. Grant in 1878, thus pointing to the CRUCIFIED ONE.

The masonry furnishing a roof to the peculiar little horizontal passage (H) and the deep shaft page 39, is exactly 57 in. long; and it seemed to me that that dimension was a specific feature, and whatever vocal testimony it might afford would only reinforce the idea of expiation already conveyed with such awful and striking solemnity. Giving this matter my earnest, prayerful attention, I at last thought this particular measure might correspond with the word ALTAR in Hebrew; and it does remarkably enough, for miz-bēh'ăgh מִזְבֵּחַ = 40 + 7 + 2 + 8 = 57, the very measure itself!

Thus this discovery gloriously crowns all previous conclusions —viz., that the well and shaft are typical of the Lord's death and revelation, since may be read there in these words: "AN ALTAR." The "LORD GOD" "A SIN-OFFERING." Hence the ALTAR has been truly measured, and now vocally declares its signification, at one stroke confirming, with unequalled vividness, the Scriptures given to man by his God! And how has all this come to pass? "Not by might, nor by power, but by My Spirit, saith the Lord of hosts" (Zech. iv. 6).

"For every virtue we possess,
And every victory won,
And every thought of holiness,
Are His alone."

(To be continued.)

THE VICAR OF ST. BARNABAS, HULL, AND THE IDENTITY.

THE question of England's Identity with Israel is exciting increased attention in this town (Hull) and vicinity. The Committee of the Israel's Identity Association invited the Rev. J. C. S. Kroenig, whose pamphlet has recently been re-printed in the columns of the BANNER, to attend the monthly meeting on March 5th, when the subject for special consideration was "The Distinction between the Houses of Israel and Judah." After two hours and a half had been spent with unflagging interest, it was found necessary to adjourn until March 12th, when there was an equally long and interesting discussion. Time was too short to take up most of the points of Mr. Kroenig's many statements, and although this naturally tended to produce an impression on the minds of some that his arguments and assertions were unanswerable, it was thought best to afford him every opportunity of explaining his views, and then on future occasions, as opportunity offers, pass them under review.

The following are some of the results of the discussion:—

1. Mr. Kroenig admits that there were two kingdoms—viz., Israel and Judah—and that the captivity of the former did not return with that of the Jews from Babylon.

2. He asserts, that nevertheless, these two Houses are no longer distinct—all distinction between them having been lost from the advent of Christ.

3. He believes that the Jews, as now known, are the only lineal representatives of the children of the promise.

4. And that they will be restored to their own land by the instrumentality of England.

5. He says the blessings promised to Israel—meaning by Israel the whole nation (see Deut. xxviii.)—cannot be enjoyed by them until after that return.

6. And that some of the blessings promised to Israel have been temporarily transferred to England.

Pressed closely to produce Scripture warrant for this doctrine of transfer, and confronted with the admitted fact that his text from Matthew xxi. 43 has a spiritual application only, and that even God cannot do that which is inconsistent with His own declared, unchangeable purposes, by transferring to some other nation literal promises of greatness made to Israel alone, he said his pamphlet contained nothing about the transfer of temporalities, but that, of course, the temporalities followed the spiritualities, and he quoted Romans xi. 17, "Thou being a wild olive tree wert grafted in," &c., &c., as the transfer warrant! Then he asked whether the English could be said to answer to the prophecy that the children of Israel should abide many days without a Prince, and he made the assertion that the Jews are even now as the sand of the sea. Asked to explain from what date the English race began, how they could be called terrible from their beginning hitherto (Isa. xviii. 7) unless they were Israelites, and referred to the parallel passage in Zephaniah iii. 10, he explained that our version of the latter passage is a mistranslation and should read "From the other side of the river of Ethiopia a praying people shall bring a willing offering of the wounded daughter."

Digitized by Google

A statement having been made about the disciples being all drawn from the Tribe of Benjamin, Mr. Kroenig replied as follows: Matthew's proper name was Levi, which was a name never given to any man out of the Tribe of Levi: according to his name he was a Levite, but he had adopted a dishonourable calling, and was therefore known by the name of Matthew, signifying "Dead unto God." The references to the prophets, with which his Gospel abounds, shew that the writer was a man possessed of such knowledge of the Scriptures as only came within the reach of a Levite. As to Mark, we find from Acts xii. 12 that his name was John, which is also a name peculiar to the Tribe of Levi. Luke was a Gentile, a physician, for from Colossians iv. 11—14, you will find that he was not of the circumcision. Thus you see that at least three of the disciples were not of the Tribe of Benjamin.

W. H. BOWLER,
Hon. Sec. Hull I. I. Association.

NOTE BY THE EDITOR ON THE ABOVE.

In reference to the Rev. J. C. S. Kroenig's dictum as to the true meaning of Zephaniah iii. 10, we beg to give the rendering from the original, which is certified by the Rev. C. W. Hickson (a fair Hebraist) to be as literal as possible, and in the very order of the Hebrew words. It is as follows: "From the region beyond, with respect to the streams of Cush, My incense-burners, the daughter of My dispersed ones shall bring (or offer) Mine offering" (i.e., bloodless offering, gift or present). Mr. Hickson adds, this is the literal, word for word, translation, as the best Hebrew lexicons will testify (Gesenius, Boston, 1847). "The first three words are the same as the last three in Isaiah xviii. 1, "My incense-burners" of course means "My praying ones," "My suppliants." A critical examination of the passage satisfies Mr. Hickson, as it does Professor Kleinert (Berlin), that the Lord's "worshippers" must be connected with "the daughter of My dispersed ones" as the bringers of the Lord's "offering"—the Jews.

The Rev. Mr. Hickson maintains that the Hebrew accents "will not allow the separation of "My suppliants" from the daughter of My dispersed." "Either both," he says, "are subject, or both are object." The general opinion of critics is that Isaiah xviii. 7, lxvi. 20, and Zephaniah iii. 10, mean the same thing. "Isaiah xviii. 7 (considers our friend) cannot be made to mean anything else than that one Hebrew people brings another Hebrew people to the Lord; Zephaniah iii. 10 will admit of the same meaning when it is translated in the most simple and natural manner, as it is in our English version. Isaiah lxvi. 20 is a parallel passage, and means, I think, the same thing."

In regard to the vicar of Hull's opinion of the nationality of St. Matthew and St. John, it is certain Levi is a name occurring twice in our Lord's genealogy (Luke iii. 24—29), and therefore belongs as much to Judah as to Levi. The name of the father of a Tribe is not always confined to that Tribe as any student of the names recorded in the Bible will soon discover. As to John (the short for Jokhanan), 1 Chron. xii. 4 shows it was a Benjamite name. 1 Chron. xii. 12, a Gadite name. 1 Chron. iii. 15, a Judahite name; 1 Chron. iii. 24, the same; and Nehemiah vi. 18, an Ammonite name. We think we have said enough to expose the Rev. Mr. Kroenig's arguments against British Identity with the Lost Tribes; and while we thank him for his excellent sermon, we declare, and our readers will agree with us, that his arguments to show the Identity is not supported by the Word of God, are valueless, and without the least cogency, as against our views.

"WHO ARE THESE THAT FLY AS A CLOUD, AND AS THE DOVES TO THEIR WINDOWS?" (ISAIAH LX. 8).

THERE seems to be little attraction at present, beyond the prestige of ancient times, in the land of Palestine. Whilst the heel of the Turk is planted there, and rests upon this soil, the speculator, and even "the Hebrew financier," neglects it, or gives it a berth wide enough in his course to steer clear of its poverty-laden people, and the monetary overtures of its alien masters; yet it is a land beloved of the Lord, "whose eye is always upon it." It is a land—and has been for nearly nineteen centuries—of romantic aspiration to the Christian, and of heart-stricken desire to the Jew; it is a land of promise that can never fail; a land upon which the Sun of Righteousness will ere long assuredly arise, bursting forth with boundless brightness from the clouds now overarching the Gentile nations. Those clouds are gathering, cumulating over the Euphratean antitype—the Turk—and alarming the Gentile world with instinctive dread as it beholds the drying up of the antitypical river. The inevitable is quickly approaching. The man that was sick is dying. His Egyptian as well as his European limbs are paralysed, and his Asiatic body is fainting, moribund, almost in extremis. The last breath of the Turkish Empire may soon be drawn, and then comes the "beginning of the end," with a deluge of destruction on the Papal countries—the cataclysm before Israel's grand consummation of universal Empire. A fearful cataclysm it will be. It will be Europe fainting beneath the tremendous issues of travailing prophecy, even now casting its shadows in lengthening projections from an evening sun. It will be a time to try all men, perhaps to strain to its utmost tension the faith of the Lord's own people. True, they will enter their chambers, and hide them for a little season, yet "Jacob's trouble" will come, but Jacob's God will deliver him.

The "signs of the times" are truly vivid. History's page is quickly turning over its black-letter lines, so that he who runs may not fail to read aright. The distresses of the nations are forcing the face of dismay, however unwelcome be the guest, into the Cabinets of Europe. For us, in our Hebrew British home, Cabinet Councils, of almost daily occurrence, are as many similar, although silent, admonitions as their units number. Anxiety is the pressing burthen when formality sits in the council chamber. The fate of peoples, for weal or for woe, is under discussion. Trade pressure and popular surgings, and "the evil eye" of rival politicians, harass the ruler at home. The attitude of unrighteous and untruthful communities, in the restlessness of culminating iniquity, painfully oppress him abroad, and the defence of an unequalled Empire, seated on the bosom of every sea, form a burthen well nigh ponderous enough to crush the spirit of the bravest mortal that ever breathed. Yet, thanks be to our good and merciful God, up to the present, our veteran and plucky pilot, resting on His support, has weathered the fury of the all-point-storm, adversely blowing though it be from a politically boxed compass.

This train of troublous thought has been awakened by the perusal of the following editorial, cut from the Evening Standard, April 12, 1879, verbatim, as follows:—

It is instructive to notice the way in which the Jews scattered throughout the world are beginning to turn their eyes towards their own land. Palestine is not altogether a place to please a capitalist, but yet even such keen financiers as the Jews are buying it up. The Jewish Chronicle reckons that there are some eighteen thousand Jews in Jerusalem alone. It is said that these are not a desirable population to maintain there, but the mere fact that some sixty thousand pounds is every year sent to them from their brethren in other countries shows how far the idea of returning to their own country has made way among the "chosen people." With regard to economical suggestions that the subscriptions should be used for the purpose of sending the pauper Jews back to the countries from which they have gathered themselves, the Jewish Chronicle says that one "might as well attempt to stop the course of the Atlantic. The tide is irresistible." The possession of Palestine and a part of Syria by a people who have retained an indestructible nationality, while they have learnt a complete cosmopolitanism during some eighteen centuries—a nation at once European and Asiatic—Asiatic in origin and European in education—would not be by any means a bad arrangement. It might not be impolitic on the part of European Powers to assist in placing so influential a people in so important a position, so soon as the inevitable decay of the Turkish Power renders a change of Government necessary. All the difficulties and jealousies incident to any project of "joint occupation" would be avoided; for the Jew is, at once, of no nation and of all. No people could better solve what, before many years, must become the "Syrian difficulty."

Digitized by Google

Verily there seems to be, if not a shaking among the dry bones of Israel, at least to be "the sound of a going in the tops of the trees." "Westward ho!" was the advancing cry of British Israel some four or five and twenty centuries ago; "Eastward bound!" (although the term will not be relatively so to all comers until the House of Judah shall walk to the House of Israel, &c.) is now like the still small voice of a going commencing in its yet unthrilling accents in the outmost leaves of the tribal tree. Eastward! Eastward! the sun is nearing the orient at the darkest hour—the one before day.

The doves are flocking to their windows—teste the Evening Standard. "The Jews scattered throughout the whole world are beginning to turn their eyes towards their own land," and "although Palestine is not a place to please a capitalist," such "keen financiers as the Jews are buying it up." The Jewish Chronicle reckons that there are some 18,000 Jews in Jerusalem alone. They are said to be an undesirable community to maintain there because of their poverty, which necessitates a contribution of some £60,000 annually from their brethren in other lands. But, adds the Jewish Chronicle, when suggestion is made to utilise the £60,000 by re-sifting those home-sick Hebrews amongst the nations from whence they returned:—"One might as well attempt to stop the course of the Atlantic. The tide is irresistible."

Certainly "the tide is irresistible." If the movement, however weakly in present numbers, is the promptings of a Divine providence, "who can let it?" In such a case it must flow on as the outward edge of the full tide to set in, when in majesty and might the Hebrew and the Jew unite, and both shall shout "Eastward ho!" as they proceed to possess their God-given birthright from "the river of Egypt" to the farthest bounds of fair Syria's land—the Euphrates. The foot of the foul foe that has trodden down the land of their fathers will no more be oppressive there; no longer on the necks of its people; no longer a barrier to prosperity. The typical Euphrates shall dry up that Israel may pass dry-shod over its empty bed. The holy places their fathers knew will recognise the rightful seed, and the long-loved land will yield her increase in a hundredfold, when the early and the latter rain and heaven's gentle dews distil once more in blessing upon the sealed soil so long laid waste by an unprogressive people.

There is a side to this question of Hebrew re-habilitation which seems to perplex and trouble "the sick man's" friends and foes. It is perplexing only because of the dread generated by the covert looking for the advent of the swooping eagles who scent the prey from afar. It is the political side of the question: "Who shall inherit the already disrupting Turkish Empire?" True, it is an Empire of limbs and their extremities, capable of division and of parcelling amongst the claimants; but who is to preside at the division, and award the prey? The eagles, at least some, are hydra-headed and keenly vigilant. Some already claim with strong hand in gauntlet, some with hand in glove, and some bide their time to learn whether the gauntlet or glove policy will serve their purpose best. Each, however, sits with wakeful eye, pondering upon possession, and wondering much, it may be, who is to grasp the grand Gate, so stately seated on the Bosphorus, the coveted water-way of the Eastern world! Who, indeed! Great Britain may reply, Who? Let Europe and Asia answer.

In view of events so fast unfolding, the Evening Standard suggests the idea of a solution for the Asiatic part of the question, and thinks that it might be well if "the possession of Palestine and a part of Syria by a people who have retained an indestructible nationality, while they have learnt a complete cosmopolitanism during some eighteen centuries—a nation at once European and Asiatic—Asiatic in origin and European in education—would not be by any means a bad arrangement." Be this as it may, whether it would have the effect of pouring oil on the troubled waters of international politics or no, such an arrangement cannot muster concurrent circumstances for its consummation "until strikes the hour." Until then, and possibly afterwards for some years, the anguish of the perplexed nationalities must continue to increase; anxieties must be endured, and, worse still, if we read aright, the state of the Gentile peoples, in unison with Gog and Magog, will be to them almost intolerable. It will be, however, for those whose knowledge of Israel's destiny teaches them to look to the great Giver of prophecy for its unrolling and fulfilling, to be wise markers of events as they appear, and compare the outcome of the extraordinary history of these times with the unerring Word of God, and satisfy themselves that this history is but the precise fulfilment of the prophetic utterances.

WILLIAM BURNETT-COATES.

Home Office, C.D., April 17, 1879.

JUDAH'S TESTIMONY TO OUR IDENTITY.

WE have received the following from our friend at Portsea, Mr. L. Biden, and consider what he states as an encouraging indication that "Judah" is not at all averse to finding Israel in Britain—even where, as in one instance, the Jew is not fully persuaded that the British are the Lost Tribes. He writes as follows:—

"Some little time ago I called upon two Jews, and asked them (not concealing my own knowledge) their opinion as to the fact of the British being Israelites. The first, who is a Christianised Jew, said, 'Unquestionably the British are the Israelites, of which the Bible is full of proofs from one end to the other.' The second said, 'We do not know where or who are the Israelites, and do not consider that the British are. We believe they are quite lost at present, though the finding of them will not be much longer delayed. We shall be only very glad, all of us, if your idea is correct.'"

We consider both these opinions are most valuable at the present time, because many among us now openly declare that the Jews do not consider the Israelites are lost at all, and believe they themselves represent the whole Twelve Tribes. The two Jews whose opinions are reported deny these assertions and affirm that the lost ones are already found as the first declares; and that they are still "lost," but are likely soon to be discovered as the other thinks. This agrees accurately with the views published by the editor of the Jewish Chronicle, of Oct. 20, 1876, when he said, regarding the discovery of the Lost Tribes, "Let the believers in this discovery (the Identity) persuade a large section of our Christian countrymen that they are of our kith and kin. We can assure them we shall not spurn the relationship. . . . . Under the protection of our Israelitish kinsmen, the Anglo-Saxons, we should consider ourselves safe."

NOTICE.—We have received a valuable paper from John T. Gott, Esq., entitled "The Chosen People," which we propose to publish shortly. It will extend to about seven parts.

Digitized by Google

OUR OPPONENT, MR. J. C. McCLELLAN, AND OUR CHAMPION, SURGEON-GENERAL J. M. GRANT, M.D., H.M. SERVICE, ALDERSHOT.

WE give the annexed correspondence to our readers as it has been handed over to us. It speaks for itself. For ourselves, we find we are indeed in a very serious position! If we reply to opponents like Mr. McClellan, we "load all those who thus differ from us with abuse." If we fail to reply to them, "our pledged word is broken!" Mr. McClellan is a gentleman we cannot satisfy! We had better, therefore, we think, leave him alone? We do not remember when, where, or how, we "pledged our word to reply" to his second "pamphlet if published?" Not in the pages of the BANNER, we think? Certainly not in the Glory Leader, when we took leave of this antagonist on March 15, 1876? If, in some private letter we made the engagement, then we consider that promise was cancelled by the discourteous tone of Mr. McClellan's second pamphlet. It is downright literary discourtesy if a writer, refusing to recognise his opponent's nom de plume, drags him by name into print without his leave. Mr. McClellan offered us that discourtesy repeatedly in his second pamphlet, and we refused further to engage in literary combat with him. Besides, the arguments of the second pamphlet had, and have been repeatedly answered not only by ourselves in BANNER, but by hosts of other writers. We cannot for ever weary our readers by proving "the Scriptural distinction between Israel and Judah;" "our hold of the Gates;" "that the Scriptures have a literal as well as a spiritual signification in various parts of the Old as well as of the New Testaments;" that "Israel was really lost;" "scattered and dispersed;" that "our views are not subversive of the Christian faith," and that "we do not strive to Judaize the Church of Christ!" Mr. McClellan must be content to want our detailed notice of his second pamphlet! We shall not notice it. But one thing he may depend upon—namely, that we "have not now heard the last of the Anglo-Israel theory," as he boastfully stated to be his conviction on the last (23) page of his latest pamphlet! Our arguments will bear the "fullest examination" of really deep thinkers. We fail to see that descent from a "distinguished cavalry officer," or fraternal relationship to an officer of "H.M.'s Dragoon Guards," is any certificate or security that our would-be opponent is either a "deep thinker" or one qualified to oppose with success God's truth as contained in the teachings of our Identity.

11, Sandringham Terrace, York,
March 22, 1879.

SIR,—Seeing your name announced as one of the vice-presidents of the "Anglo-Israel Association," I take the liberty of sending you a copy of a pamphlet recently published in refutation of some of the arguments advanced by your chairman, Mr E. W. Bird. This gentleman pledged his word to reply to this work as soon as it appeared, but up to the present he has never once alluded to it! My former pamphlet is published by Messrs. Hodder and Stoughton, from whom it may still be had. I may, perhaps, mention that I am the son of an old and distinguished cavalry officer. I have also a brother in the army—3rd Dragoon Guards. I have studied the whole subject of "Anglo-Israelism" very carefully for now three years past, and the more I study it the more am I convinced of its unscriptural character. Allow me to draw your attention to a series of articles now appearing in the "Evangelical Magazine," by the Rev. E. R. Conder, M.A. The article in the March number thus concludes:—"From these facts we draw the following inferences: 1. That large numbers of Israelites of the Ten Tribes (and the whole Tribe of Simeon) were never carried away into captivity by the Assyrians, but remained in their own land. 2. That considerable numbers returned to Canaan after the proclamation of Cyrus. 3. That the name Jew after that time came to be applied to all Israel; and that the distinction drawn between Israel and the Jews, which is the main foundation of the imaginary Identity of the Lost Tribes with the English race, is simply a historical blunder."

It would be well if your chairman would endeavour to refute these statements, instead of loading all who differ from him with abuse.

Yours faithfully,
J. C. McCLELLAN.

To Surgeon-General Dr. J. M. Grant, M.D., &c., Aldershot.

Douglas, Isle of Man,
April 2, 1879.

DEAR SIR,—Your letter has been forwarded to me, and I will no doubt find your pamphlet when I return to Aldershot.

If by "unscriptural" you mean that the idea of our Israelitish origin is opposed to the Scripture narrative of events past and future, I differ from you because to those who accept it as a canon of interpretation that every expression in the Bible is to be rendered literally unless such a rendering be obviously opposed to common sense, there is much to show that the Houses of Israel and Judah have not been re-united since their disruption in the reign of King Rehoboam, and that they are to remain disunited until the second advent of our Lord; and this being so, it follows that if the Bible be true, the distinction between the two Houses, for which we contend as still existing, cannot be a historical blunder.

If by "unscriptural" you mean that the theory is opposed to the Divine teaching of the Bible, and that it leads those who entertain it to trust only to their belonging to God's chosen people Israel for their salvation, I meet you with a positive and decided NO, because this error is clearly indicated, and guarded against in all the writings on the subject with which I am acquainted; but supposing the error to exist, the fact of its existence amongst a few cannot be urged against our belief more reasonably than the fact that some men argue that because there is no merit in good works, therefore good works are unnecessary, can be urged against the doctrine of the atonement.

To my mind the rapid spread of the opinion affords a strong proof that it rests on a sound foundation. You may say that the same argument would apply equally to all religious vagaries, and that if Johanna Southcote were to re-appear, she would find followers; but I think the two cases are not parallel, because these outbursts of fanaticism have never been subjected to the calm judgment, and deliberate, and learned investigation of their authors, or to the equally searching and learned criticism of their opponents.

I will send this correspondence to our chairman, who will be able to meet your objections more fully than I can. If he has not noticed your pamphlet, it is probably because your arguments have already been answered by himself or others.

The subject is not one about which Christians should quarrel, and I confess that I have not observed in the pages of the BANNER OF ISRAEL any of the abuse of which you complain.

Yours very truly,
J. M. GRANT.

FLAVIUS JOSEPHUS, THE JEWISH HISTORIAN, GIVES BLIND HISTORICAL TESTIMONY TO BRITISH IDENTITY WITH ISRAEL.

Do our readers recollect a leading article from the pen of him who writes these lines, published on April 16, 1879, in BANNER, No. 120?

It was written after listening to an admirable speech at the last public meeting of the Bristol and Clifton Israel's Identification Association, delivered by Mr. Edwin W. Cox, whose words that article pretty accurately represented. His views so fully and perfectly reflected those of the writer that, full of his subject, he sat down and presented the readers of the BANNER with a precis of the speech. He is now gratified by a communication from Mr. Cox, stating that the article in question is a feat of "intellectual photography exactly reproducing the spoken thoughts." Our object, however, is not to give a laudatory notice either of the speech or of the article, but simply to ask the reader to note that the following sentiments, which will be found in the first column of the leader, were, in fact, the views of a strong believer in our Identity, and being accurately the reflex of those of the editor of this journal, were by him published as his own. The words were these:—"The Imperialism which we conceive Lord Beaconsfield's Government and the nation prefer to the selfish parochial policy thus sketched out, recognises that ours is an imperial race, formed by Providence to rule, fitted by a superior constitution, by better laws, by higher institutions, by civil and religious liberty, by a Protestant faith, and by a hatred of oppression, to take the lead in whatever part of the earth their destiny may conduct them. That rôle necessitates the interference for the good of mankind of this imperial race in every part and portion of the earth, where the superior commanding qualifications the British possess, call for their lawful interposition for the benefit of the inferior races who surround them, and this, so regarded, is true cosmopolitanism."

Digitized by Google

When we penned these lines, we had not the least idea that Flavius Josephus, the great military Jewish historian of A.D. 77, had written anything regarding the very race we were describing which could be considered as even a distant parallel to our words. Two correspondents at about the same time, however, more observant than we were, lately directed our attention to Josephus' "Antiquities of the Jews," book iv., chap. vi., sec. 4, and asked us to mark, the first, how exactly the Jewish historian described the British folk of to-day; and the second, how wonderfully our words in the leading article we have just quoted were a reflex of Josephus' description of Balaam's prophecy, to be found in that passage! We turned at once to the place, and, as our readers will be when they open the page of Josephus indicated, were perfectly astounded both at the blind testimony to our Identity which met us there from Josephus' History, and at the strange fact that, ignorant of Josephus's words, we had ourselves penned the lines we have now repeated (while Mr. Cox had spoken them) in exact conconformity with the historian's abstract of the prophet's words.

For the benefit of those who have no copy of Josephus, we quote the passage as it occurs in sec. iv., p. 91, Whiston's translation (edition Halifax, 1851):—"Happy is this people, on whom God bestows the possession of innumerable good things, and grants them His own providence to be their assistant and their guide, so that there is not any nation among mankind but you will be esteemed superior to them in virtue and in the earnest prosecution of the best rules of life and of such as are pure from wickedness; and will leave those rules to your excellent children; and this out of the regard that God bears to you; and the provision of such things for you as may render you happier than any other people under the sun. You shall retain that land to which He hath sent you, and it shall ever be under the command of your children, and both all the earth as well as the sea shall be filled with your glory, and you shall be sufficiently numerous to supply the world in general, and every region of it in particular, with inhabitants out of your stock. However, O blessed army! wonder that you are become so many from one father; and truly the land of Canaan can now hold you, as being yet comparatively few; but know ye that the whole world is proposed to be your place of habitation for ever. The multitude of your posterity also shall live as well in the islands as on the continent, and that more in number than are the stars of heaven. And when you are become so many, God will not relinquish the care of you, but will afford you an abundance of all good things in times of peace, with victory and dominion in times of war. May the children of your enemies have an inclination to fight against you, and may they be so hardy as to come to arms, and to assault you in battle, for they will not return with victory, nor will their return be agreeable to their children and wives. To so great a degree of valour will you be raised by the providence of God, who is able to diminish the affluence of some and to supply the wants of others."

The instructed reader will see that the historian's passage is full of blind testimony to our Identity, and his words almost an exact parallel to what we lately wrote. He stated as the substance of Balaam's words:—

1. That Israel should be the chiefest of all the nations, which is what we wrote of this, the leading nation of the world. It is God's testimony to the status of the Ten Tribes in the latter day (Amos vi. 1; Jer. xxxi. 7).

2. That they should occupy the islands as well as the continent of the earth, the whole world being the place of Israel's habitation for ever. This we also said was the destiny of our nation, as the true imperialism and the real cosmopolitanism combined—that God's Word clearly gives this universal domination to the Ten Tribes of Israel, the possessor of the "islands" and "the Gates" (Dan. vii. 22; Isa. xli. 1, xlii. 4; and Gen. xxii. 17).

3. That Israel should be ever victorious in war—a rôle we pointed out was necessarily ours, as a superior race with commanding qualifications. But God gave to Israel of the Ten Tribes only, the promise that they should never be a race conquered by the alien (Isa. liv. 15—17).

Our task is done. We have shown that Flavius Josephus is also a blind witness; and how wonderfully he has testified in the above to our national Identity with Israel, our readers will be able to judge when they have carefully studied what we have quoted for their information.

REGARDING THE DATES INDICATING THE NEAR APPROACH OF THE COMING OF THE LORD AND OF ISRAEL'S RESTORATION.

FELLOW-COUNTRYMEN! There is a very general belief among men that we have reached what are called "the latter days"—"the time of the end" (Dan. xii. 4). At this period great changes are expected to occur on the "earth," and the Lord we believe will come "in the air" to receive to Himself some of those He has selected to be with Him while the judgments are taking place on the Gentile world (1 Thess. iv. 17, v. 1—5; Isa. xlii. 13).

We calculate the approach of the time by the DATES given us by God Himself, both in His Holy Word, and also in the Great Pyramid, "His sign, witness, altar, and pillar, in the midst of the land of Egypt, and at the border thereof" (Isa. xix. 19, 20). Let me mention some of these dates; and in doing so ask you to note they all point to about the years A.D. 1880 to 1882 as the period of some stupendous occurrences. The following commends itself to some minds, though others are doubtful as to the application of the passage. In Daniel ix. 24 (a prophecy seemingly quite distinct from that in verse 25, et seq.) the angel told the prophet that seventy weeks were determined upon His people the Jews, "to make an end of sins." Seventy weeks are 490 days, and a "day" in prophetic language is a solar year (Ezek. iv. 6). The destruction of Jerusalem by Titus being (we suppose) indicated by the above, we must deduct seventy from 490 years, to arrive at the date of Christ's birth. This gives us 420 years as the period to run from the time the angel spoke, to the date of the Lord's nativity. In Daniel viii. 14, we have another message to this prophet in the same year, telling him that after 2300 years the sanctuary (Jerusalem) would be cleansed (or "justified") and no longer (as it is now by the Turks) "trodden under foot." Deducting 420 from 2300, there comes out the destined year A.D. 1880, after which "the cleansing" of Zion will occur. Whether the above be the correct application or not, the Great Pyramid agrees perfectly with the result.

The length of the grand gallery, symbolising the duration of the Christian dispensation, is exactly 1881·6 Pyramid inches. Reckoning inches for years we have the end of this dispensation (but not of the world) indicated as destined to occur about July or August, 1882. The IMPENDING South wall of the grand gallery shows the suddenness of the Lord's coming, "even as a thief in the night" (Rev. xvi. 15; 1 Thess. v. 2—4). My friends! are you ready to welcome Him?

Digitized by Google

Adopting other modes of reckoning, the result is the same. The rise of Mahommedanism was A.D. 622. Adding the forty-two months of Rev. xi. 2, which are the 1260 day years of Rev. xii. 6, or "the time, times, and half a time" (3½ years) of Daniel xii. 7, we are brought again to A.D. 1882 as the probable termination of the Mahommedan imposture. Again, the Romish heresy took its rise in A.D. 610. Adding the 1260 years, or three and a half times of Daniel vii. 25, to that date as the limit of the true Israelite Church's period of suffering from Rome's trouble, we arrive at A.D. 1870, when the Pope's temporal power was overthrown—only twelve years before the sudden collapse of those Gentile polities (predicted in the Great Pyramid) over which Rome has ruled so long. The return of Israel with Judah to her land we believe will take place about the time of the Lord's return to gather up some of His saints in "the air." Hosea vi. 1, 2, gives us the materials for calculating this date. The Ten Tribes were "dead" and "buried" B.C. 678 (2 Kings xvii. 23; Isa. vii. 8). After two Millennial days—each of 1000 years (2 Peter iii. 8), Israel was "revived" in "the Isles of the West." This brings us to A.D. 1322, about the era of Edward the First, "the English Justinian," by whom our British laws were founded, the fabric on which the British Empire rests to-day. That epoch, too, was the era of John Wycliffe, "the Morning Star of the English Reformation." In "the third day" of a 1000 years, the very time wherein our own lot is cast, A.D. 1879 to 1882, "the dead is alive again," the "lost" is "found" (Luke xv. 24—32); the British nation is "risen up," asserting its Israelite origin, and "we" British Israelites "shall live in His sight" (Hosea vi. 2).

Again, in Psalm cii. 13, 14, we have an indication that "the set time to favour Zion" will have "come" when the Lord's "servants" (Israel—Isaiah lxiii. 17) "take pleasure in her stones." Our nation just now has concluded the survey of the Holy Land, and is anxiously examining every stone and every mark in Jerusalem and its vicinity in literal fulfilment of a promise which shows that the time to favour Zion and to restore us to our land has "come."

In Ezek. xxxvi. 8, a "sign" is given us that when the mountains of Israel shall shoot forth their branches and yield their fruit to the Lord's people Israel, that people "are at hand to come!" The accounts of the condition of agriculture in Palestine show that the time specified is approaching, and the return of the people therefore is at the doors! Further, over Israel there were destined to pass, as punishment, "Seven times" (Lev. xxvi. 18, 21, 24, 28). Now, Daniel iv. 23, 25, 28—37; Rev. xii. 6, 14, shows us that a "time" in prophetic language is equal to a year of 360 days or years. "A time, times and half a time," therefore, is 360 + 720 + 180 = 1260 years and twice that period, or 7 "times"=2520 years—that is, over 2½ Millenniums. This period thus agrees with Hosea vi. 1, 2, and indicates that Israel's revival and restoration to their land may be looked for any time between the present year and A.D. 1881·6. That epoch, as I have shown already, is what God's Word, and the Great Pyramid as well, tell us will probably usher in "The coming of our blessed Lord," and the return also of "the Tribes" to their land.

Other calculations derived from the measurements of the Great Pyramid point also to A.D. 1881·6 as the close of the 6000 years of the world's history, and the beginning of the 7000th or Millennial reign of our Lord upon earth—ONLY 3½ YEARS HENCE! Again, I ask, are you prepared for His thus speedy coming? Are you living as Christian Israelites should at this time, in eager expectation of the King's return? Repent, I beseech you, if you are not, and turn to the Lord. He will receive and accept you! Let me ask you to dwell on the marvellous favour shown to us British—BEING ISRAEL—in that we are thus enabled to calculate the date of the Lord's return. The apostle Paul, in 1 Thess. v. 1—6, tells us this was to be the fact. As to the Great Pyramid, no other nation (of the Gentiles) possesses the "inch" unit of measure, commensurable with "the Pyramid inch." Lacking that key, no Gentile race is permitted to comprehend the mysteries confided only to US, regarding either the time of the Lord's revelation from heaven, or the mighty changes now approaching! Be warned in time—you who love not the thought of the Lord's appearing! you who have not made your peace with God! Seek, without delay, the Lord Jesus, in repentance, for He will in no wise cast out any who come to Him.

PHILO-ISRAEL.

Bristol, March, 1879.

SIR EDWARD CREASY'S BLIND EVIDENCE IN "THE FIFTEEN DECISIVE BATTLES OF THE WORLD."

BY D. S. SKINNER.

SOME time since, while considering the fifth kingdom of the Prophet Daniel, it occurred to me that, in the "Fifteen Decisive Battles of the World," Professor Creasy gave valuable testimony regarding this fifth empire in connection with Great Britain. The battle first particularly attracting my attention being the victory of Arminius over the Roman legions. The quotations I give are from the 13th edition of the work.

At page 178 he speaks of "those brave warriors, who long were the unconquered antagonists, and finally became the conquerors, of imperial Rome."

At page 179 he says: "The narrative of one of these great crises . . . that of A.D. 9 . . . has for us this special attraction, that it forms part of our national history."

Speculating on the supposition that Arminius might have been unsuccessful, he says: "This island would never have borne the name of England," and "We, this great English nation, whose race and language are now over-running the earth, from one end of it to the other, would have been utterly cut off from existence." *

I might quote the whole of the commencement of this chapter as essential to the subject, so interesting is it; but space will not permit of more than a few short extracts:—

"Arminius is far more truly one of our national heroes than Caractacus."

"It is a great fallacy to suppose that the foreign policy of Augustus was pacific. He certainly recommended such a course to his successors, either from timidity, or from jealousy of their fame outshining his own; but he himself, until Arminius broke his spirit, had followed a very different course."

I think the expression, "Arminius broke his spirit," a very remarkable and suggestive one.

On page 198 he says: "An Englishman is entitled to claim a closer degree of relationship with Arminius than can be claimed by any German of modern Germany."

The victory of Arminius, then, having been fought and gained by one of our ancestors, the fact is presented to us that, of those fifteen battles, we may claim to have been engaged in seven. It seems to me an important and interesting circumstance in the world's history that one empire is found engaged in fighting nearly half of its decisive battles. It would naturally appear as if that empire had an especial part to play in the world; more than any of the other empires whose battles are recorded.

The seven battles were as follows: Arminius, Hastings, Orleans, Armada, Blenheim, Saratoga, Waterloo. One was a defeat, two were confined to ourselves, four were victories.

The first battle recorded is that of Arminius.

The defeat was Joan of Arc's victory over the English at Orleans, A.D. 1429. The condition of the House of Israel was to be that they should dwell alone, and not mix themselves

* Arnold's Lectures on Modern History.

Digitized by Google

with other nations (Num. xxiii. 9); but, in the reign of Henry V., the English, instead of withdrawing to their own land after victories on the Continent, sought to take possession of a large portion of France; the result being a decisive defeat at the battle of Orleans. Our grasp on the country became weaker and weaker, till it finally relaxed altogether with the loss of Calais.

At the battle of Hastings it was brother against brother, and the two were re-united.

At Saratoga it was also brother against brother, and a nation was separated from us: the prophecy of Jacob concerning the sons of Joseph being fulfilled.

The Armada, Blenheim, Waterloo, were blows, crushing blows, on the feet of the image of Nebuchadnezzar's dream.

While first considering this subject, I had not seen the able pamphlet of Mr. J. G. Shaw, "Britain (or Israel) the Fifth and Last, and the Unconquerable Empire," and had taken rather a different view, or interpretation, of the stone than he has. I offer my view with considerable diffidence, feeling that his array of blows on the feet of the image is most convincing.

I had thought that the stone cut out without hands meant a small nation, formed and separated by God Himself; for in Deuteronomy vii. 6, 7, we read: "God hath chosen thee to be a chosen people unto Himself, above all people that are upon the face of the earth. The Lord did not set His love upon you, nor choose you because ye were more in number than any people, for ye were the fewest of all people."

God having chosen Israel long before the days of Nebuchadnezzar, it follows that Israel, as a nation, was in existence during the days of all the four empires; a nation that, in the days of Arminius, was without knowledge of itself, lost to its own Identity, cut out without hands, without any effort of its own; "whose race and language"—in the words of Arnold—"are now over-running the earth, from one end of it to the other;" and which, in fulfilment of the prophecy, has now grown into a mountain, and fills the whole earth.

The record of these battles appears to me most instructive.

We see, first, the Roman Emperor Augustus, when the empire was at the summit of its pride, with his spirit broken by a small band of warriors, and a blow given from which the empire never recovered.

We see in France that England was trying to do what Israel was expressly intended not to do, and the result was a defeat at Orleans.

Alison, in his life of Marlborough, quoted by Creasy in his account of the battle of Blenheim, has stated the effects which would have taken place if France had been successful in the war: "The colonial empire of England would have withered away and perished, as that of Spain has done in the grasp of the Inquisition. The Anglo-Saxon race would have been arrested in its mission to overspread the earth and subdue it." We can rejoice now with our brethren in America at the victory of Saratoga.

The consideration of the victory of Arminius in connection with our Identity with the Lost Tribes of Israel leads to the interesting incident that, while the Roman legions under Titus were destroying Jerusalem, and scattering the House of Judah, the House of Israel had already struck the first blow which was to bring that power to the dust.

I cannot better conclude than in the words of Bishop Berkeley:—

"Westward the course of empire takes its way;
The first four acts already past,
A fifth shall close the drama with the day,
Time's noblest offspring is its last."

March 31, 1879.

WHY ENGLISHMEN SHOULD SPECIALLY ASSIST IN THE CONVERSION OF THE JEW.

To the Editor of the "Jewish Intelligence."

Everyone is aware that Christianity is itself nothing but a development of Judaism, that the Jews were the people to whom were committed the oracles of God, that it is mainly to them we are indebted for the jealous care they entertained of the sacredness of Holy Writ even to the jots and tittles, that the Author and Finisher of our faith was Himself a Jew, and taught us that we should preach the Gospel to every creature beginning at Jerusalem, that the blessings appertaining to the reception of the truth are to the Jew first, that we are commanded to "pray for the peace of Jerusalem, they shall prosper that love thee," that God's "whole heart and His whole soul" is intent upon planting them again in their own land, and that he has told us, "Ye that make mention of the Lord, keep not silence and give Him no rest, till He establish, and till He make Jerusalem a praise in the earth." These and many other considerations should lead every true Christian to do what he can for the advancement of that people in whom God Himself is so deeply concerned.

My special object now is to address a very large and increasing body of our race all over the world through the medium of your journals as a fellow-believer with them regarding our close connection with this down-trodden, yet Heaven-blest race.

As a believer in the Israelitish origin of the whole of the Anglo-Saxon races, I would specially plead with all Englishmen, and ask if they would not like to see their country, in union with the Promised Land, saved for ever from war and famine, sorrow and sighing, and every other calamity which now tends to make our few short years here on earth a burden? Would they not wish to see the Lord Jesus Christ Himself at their head as King, and they themselves "All righteous," to be called the "Priests of the Lord," the "Ministers of our God," universally acknowledged as "a seed which the Lord hath blessed?"

We believe we are on the threshold of the most important epoch in the world's history; that the next few years will probably usher in the most glorious salvation to "All Israel," establishing them again "the second time" in their land, whence they shall never again be rooted out, when the Lord shall reign before His ancients gloriously; but there is something first to be done, and we ourselves are the happy instruments about to be employed by God to do it!

Ho! to the land of shadowing wings beyond the rivers of Cush, "My suppliants, the daughter of My dispersed," that sendeth ambassadors by the sea even in vessels drinking in and throwing out waters (steamships), GO, YE SWIFT MESSENGERS, to a nation scattered and peeled, "bring Mine offering." In that time shall the present be brought unto the Lord of hosts of a people scattered and peeled, and from a people terrible from their beginning hitherto (Isaiah xviii. 1, 2, 7, with Zeph. iii. 10).

This "present" must be of a holy people, or surely they could not constitute such a savoury offering; but "How shall they believe in Him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher? and how shall they preach except they be sent?" for "faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God." Our blessed Lord told the Jews, "Ye shall not henceforth see Me, till ye shall say, Blessed is He that cometh in the name of the Lord." From Hosea i. 11, and Jer. iii. 18, we find the children of Israel are two families, and that these two must be joined together in the land of the North, and will be made one nation and be no more two nations, neither be divided into two kingdoms any more at all (Ezek. xxxvii. 22, also following verses).

We are all agreed as to who the Jews are, and both believers in their Identity with the Ten-Tribed kingdom, and Christians alike, should work for the same end—viz., to establish a feeling of brotherly sympathy and Christian love between the Jews and themselves, that these Jews may be led to feel that we entertain towards them a heart full of earnestness and zeal to win their souls in such manner that they may in the day of the calamity about to come on the earth willingly fly to British protection for refuge from the impending storm.

As to ourselves, let us each feel secure and know that we are on the Rock, and sincerely desire to grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, each one doing his duty towards the hastening of the completion of the number of God's elect, and hasting the coming of our dear Master.

We must not forget that Micah v. 3 tells us God gave Judah up because "they smote the Judge of Israel with a rod upon the cheek," but this is only "until the time that she which travaileth hath brought forth; then the remnant of his brethren shall return unto the children of Israel." This travailing one is alluded to in Micah iv.: "the assembling of her that halteth, and the gathering of her that was driven out to be made a strong nation and have the dominion over which the Lord shall reign for ever" (see also Isaiah liv.).

Digitized by Google

"Hear, Lord, the voice of Judah and bring him again unto his people; let his hands be sufficient for him, and be Thou an help to him for his enemies" (Deut. xxxiii. 7).

"Thou shalt arise and have mercy upon Zion, for the time to favour her, yea, the set time is come; for Thy servants take pleasure in her stones and favour the dust thereof" (witness Palestine exploration). "So the heathen shall fear the name of the Lord, and all kings of the earth Thy glory. When the Lord shall build up Zion, He shall appear in glory."

L. G. R.

NOTE.—The above, forwarded to the secretary of the Society for Promoting Christianity among the Jews, for insertion in the Jewish Intelligence, was declined on the grounds stated below, and appears, therefore, in the BANNER. We are glad to say that the Bristol and Clifton Israel's Identification Association contributes as a society to the funds of the London Society in Lincoln's Inn Fields, and thus records its protest against those who on whatever grounds refuse to admit Judah's rights and plea for Gospel grace at the present time.—ED.

To Commander Roberts, R.N.

MY DEAR SIR,—We are obliged for your letter, and thankful for the proposed contributions towards our Society. It is a satisfaction to find that whilst holding the views you do as to "Israel's Identification," your sympathies are yet strong towards the Jewish nation in its more limited sense. I am sorry to say we have had some painful letters in strong contrast.

We thank you for your MS. article entitled, "Why Englishmen Should Specially Assist in the Conversion of the Jew," but as our space in the Jewish Intelligence is limited, it is not proposed to open its pages for discussing what is commonly understood by the "Anglo-Israelitish Theory." It is felt that your article, though not directly on the subject, would yet incidentally introduce it, and if taken up by some of our old friends, which would probably be the case, we should find ourselves launched in the controversy, to the publication of which we feel it necessary to abstain.

Under these circumstances we return your MS. with thanks for sending the same.

I am,
Very truly yours,
FREDERICK SMITH.

London Society for Promoting Christianity amongst the Jews,
16, Lincoln's Inn Fields, London, W.C.,
Feb. 5, 1879.

THE REV. C. W. HICKSON'S PASTORAL ADDRESSES TO HIS FLOCK.

WE have the pleasure to draw attention to the following additional communication made by the rev. vicar of St. Bartholomew's, Bristol, to his people. We have already published others from the same pen. We must not be held to endorse all our reverend friend says below, because, as our readers know, in the present state of our knowledge we cannot all be expected to see alike on all points. We heartily recommend the Rev. C. W. Hickson's plan of reaching his parishioners to other incumbents. His, as we have previously stated, is to utilise the pages of a periodical called Living Waters, and by "localising" it, enable matters relating to the Identity to be printed on its two first pages. The address is as follows:—

TO THE CONGREGATION AND PARISHIONERS OF ST. BARTHOLOMEW'S.

DEAR FRIENDS,—Continuing my remarks on the Identity of the British nation with the House of Israel, I wish now to produce arguments for the present existence somewhere of that House as a people, not forming any part of those we call the Jews.

1. There is no proof of any return of the House of Israel to Palestine with the House of Judah. Read Ezra and Nehemiah.

2. There is no statement anywhere in the Bible of any formal union having taken place between the House of Judah and Israel, at any period after the deportation of the latter to Assyria. Such a union, had it ever taken place, must have been as distinctly called attention to somewhere, as it is distinctly predicted in several prophecies. Please to read carefully Hosea i., ii.; Jer. iii. 18; Isa. xi. 12, 13 (note that Ephraim means the House of Israel, of which it was the leading Tribe); and especially Ezek. xxxvii. 15—22.

3. THESE PROPHECIES HAVE NEVER BEEN FULFILLED. It follows, therefore, that these two Houses are both still in existence. Now, the Jews are one of two—viz., the House of Judah. Therefore, the other, the House of Israel, cannot form any part of that well-known and easily recognisable people.

4. The world is populated by Jews and Gentiles only. It follows, therefore, from the last remark that the House of Israel, until the time comes for its Identification as such, must form part of the Gentile people of the earth. And this is what Hosea viii. 8, ix. 17; and Amos ix. 9 would lead us to expect.

5. God clearly announced His purpose to dissolve all union between Judah and Israel. Read Zech. xi. 14. Now, as this was written about 200 years after the House of Israel were carried away to Assyria, it cannot refer to any proper union between the whole House of Israel, as a whole, and the House of Judah. It must therefore refer to that partial union between the Two Houses which existed within the House of Judah itself, which, from its first establishment, contained representatives of all the Ten Tribes (2 Chron. xi. 13, 14, 16, 17, xv. 9, xxxiv. 9). After the captivity of Judah in Babylon, many of these in various countries kept up their religious brotherhood with Judah, and shared with the latter the common name of "Jews." Hence, the Jews are spoken of in the New Testament as "Twelve Tribes." But this Twelve-Tribed dispersed body was still the House of Judah, as distinct from the main bulk of the House of Israel, which was swallowed up among the Gentiles, but is yet destined to re-appear somewhere.

My present point, however, is that even this union, such as it was, between Judah and Israel, God said He would dissolve (Zech. xi. 14); and verse 13 suggests that the dissolution was to take place in some connection with our Lord's betrayal,

I believe it is a fact that the Jews now-a-days acknowledge that none of them can be proved to be of other Tribes than those of Judah and Levi. In whatever way the result has been brought about we cannot doubt but that God's Word has long since been fulfilled, and that therefore no "brotherhood between Judah and Israel" now exists; in other words, that the Jews are simply the House of Judah, and are quite distinct from the House of Israel, which must be therefore somewhere among the Gentiles awaiting its Identification.

Your friend and pastor,
C. W. HICKSON.

In corroboration of the views of our friend expressed above, in regard to the fact that the brotherhood between Israel and Judah must now be in a state of dissolution, and that therefore the two Houses before their final union must be found to be existing separately, we beg to point out a passage bearing on the subject in Ezek. xxxvii. 16, 19. The reader should carefully compare the two verses. In the prophet's own day the two sticks were constituted thus:—

1. Judah's stick including the children of Israel (Benjamin) his companions (Judah first then—mark!).

2. The one for Joseph, the stick of Ephraim, and for "all the House of Israel his companions" (outcast Israel last then).

But in the time of the final joinder how was it to be? Let verse 19 tell us. Now the sticks will be no longer held in Ezekiel's, but in JEHOVAH'S, hand, and they will be recognised then as—

1. The stick of Joseph (FIRST NOW, last before!)—that stick which is "in the hand of Ephraim, and the Tribes of Israel his FELLOWS" (showing the Ten Tribes are all then in union, and not in separation, as our Teutonic brethren maintain); and—

2. The stick of Judah, ALONE now, and with no companions. The latter, as the Rev. H. Marriott shows us, is to be placed then upon the chief stick of Israel (page 131, BANNER No. 117).

Digitized by Google

THE RATE OF INCREASE OF POPULATION IN FRANCE, GERMANY, AND GREAT BRITAIN.

We draw attention to the following quotations, the first from the Alfreton Journal of March 2, 1879, the second from the Pictorial World. These extracts give us some curious information on a subject relating to that we referred to at page 154, No. 119, of April 5 last. It shows us the rate at which Germany is producing men, and the money cost of the process; while on the other hand France is bent on amassing treasure and capital, the penalty being a deplorable birth-rate, as compared with its formidable rival. The comparison between France and the United Kingdom in the birth rate, as shown below, is seen at a glance by the following :—

	France.	United Kingdom.
Excess of births per annum. .	142,000	304,000
Population	42,727,260	31,857,338

The figures speak for themselves. When we refer to our previous paper (page 154), and reflect that the natality of the United Kingdom, as compared to that of Germany, is as 126 to 114, it will be seen that Great Britain is at the head of the civilised nations in the matter of population, and thus responds to God's blessing on Israel (Gen. xxviii. 14).

We have heard the objection raised to our Identity on the grounds that the redundancy of population is not monopolised by Israel (or Great Britain), but that the Chinese and the Germans both, as nations possess it in a remarkable degree. We answer, "It is not so!" These nations have not the increase of the kind God promised Israel, and which we British alone possess. Gen. xxviii. 14 and xxxv. 11 will illustrate what we mean. Israel was promised, and the British possess, what neither the Chinese nor the Germans have, or ever have had—namely, a redundancy of population, which has caused its multitudes to "break forth"—1, to the West ; 2, to the East ; 3, to the North ; 4, to the South ; 5, thereby to form a nation and a company of nations ; and 6, at the same time to become a "blessing to ALL the families of the earth." The points are the universality of the blessing Israel and British multitudes were to, and actually did, bestow, and the geographical direction in which their colonies should "break forth" from the parent land, after the Christian era (in thy seed, "which is Christ"). None of the nations answer to these six signs but the British—ergo, the British must be Israel. Do our readers or opponents see any flaw in our logic ? If so, we shall be glad to have it pointed out to us. Our quotations are as follows :—

On Natality in France and Germany.

In a recent interesting paper on this subject, M. Bertillon comments on the fact that all the effort of the French agricultural population, the thrifty bourgeoisie, is applied to forming and amassing capital. Germany, on the other hand, seems to have more aptitude for producing men, a race of warriors "apt to seize with strong hand capital already formed." The German Empire counts at present more than 40 million inhabitants, and has a general natality of 40 per annum per 1,000, giving annually 1,600,000 live births. But if she were limited to the French small natality of 26 instead of 40, she would count only 1,040,000 live births annually. Thus, compared with France, Germany rears an annual excess of 560,000 children over what French natality would give, and this excess produces annually, according to the tables of mortality, about 343,500 adults of 20 years of age. But, on the other hand, if we take as base what a man costs to bring up, it appears from various calculations that we must estimate at not less than 4,000f. the value of an adult of 20 years of age. Then 4,000f. × 343,500 = 1,376,000,000f. This is the annual sum which the excess of German natality over the French costs. A like calculation made for France shows that she would have to expend annually 1,240,000,000f. to bring up the 500,000 infants that are wanting to equal the German natality, which would become 310,000 young people of 20 years of age. Thus France capitalises a milliard and a quarter to the detriment of its posterity, and Germany pays more than a milliard and a third for its own multiplication.

Marriages and Births in France.

The excess of births over deaths in France is steadily increasing year by year, although the increase in population is not nearly so rapid as in other European countries. In 1875 the excess of births over deaths was 105,900 ; in 1876, 132,600 ; and in 1877, 142,600. So far the returns are satisfactory, but yet the number of marriages in France is decreasing. In 1872 the marriages numbered 352,700 ; in 1876 they had decreased to 291,900 ; and in 1877 to 279,000. To account for this diminution various causes are brought forward, amongst them being the extension of military service, the industrial distress, and the phylloxera. In the matter of increase of population France is far behind our somewhat overcrowded country. Thus France, with a population half as large again as that of England, returns an excess of 142,000 births, and England an excess of 304,000 births. The United Kingdom, with a population numbering 10,000,000 less than that of France, gives an excess of births amounting to 387,000, or not very much less than three times as great as that of France.

THE "NORTHERN ECHO" ON THE FIJIS, AND REGARDING CYPRUS.

Our friend and blind witness, the Northern Echo, has again been supplying us with matter which we find to be glorious blind testimony to our Identity with Israel. In one of his issues of last year, the editor, making a comparison between our two acquisitions, Cyprus and the Fijis, could not speak in too severe terms of the former addition to the Empire, or too highly of the latter. Cyprus is an acquisition of Lord Beaconsfield's ; it is therefore bad. Fiji came to us of itself, without Lord Beaconsfield's interference ; the annexation is therefore right and proper. "Cyprus was seized with the exultation with which a freebooter wrests a purse from the pocket of his victim," just to cover Lord Beaconsfield's "surrender at Berlin," (!) and therefore the transaction is likely, if not checked, "infallibly to overwhelm in common ruin the English constitution and the civilizing sovereignty of the English race." Such is the character of the Northern Echo's comments ! With these we have no concern, save to wonder if men using such language can really be in earnest, and whether they are not aware that by the violence of their expressions, as well as by the absurdity of their views, they are bringing ridicule on their party as well as on their own capacity as journalists to guide the public opinion of their countrymen ! The success of the annexation of the Fijis is now patent to all men, and the Northern Echo's editor, and such as he, are in raptures at the glorious addition to the British Empire ! But we recollect the time when this annexation was denounced by some among us as the act of brigands, and as the result of that "earth-hunger" of the insatiable British which never knows satiety. Cyprus will, we are sure, ere long be found to be as glorious a possession (being God-given to Israel) as ever the Fijis will prove ; and the curious fact is, that the same number of the journal in which is published the Northern Echo's "flout" at Lord Beaconsfield, in reference to the alleged failure of his position as to Cyprus, contains W. Hepworth Dixon's paneygric regarding that very same island, his admiration at the act which has made it ours, and his evidently roseate anticipations as to its destinies in the near future as one of Great Britain's colonies ! We propose to give the reader the blind testimony thus afforded us by the Northern Echo, and force him malgré lui to show to us that the Fijis have proved a most successful colony, and, from the words of W. Hepworth Dixon, that the Power which has made Cyprus her own, is the chief of nations, that seed of Abraham, who being "known among the Gentiles and their offspring among the people, all that see them acknowledge them that they are the seed which the Lord hath blessed" (Isa. lxi. 9).

First, let us hear the editor of the Northern Echo in regard to the Fijis, and what he says is worth noting and remembering.

Digitized by Google

The annexation of Fiji (he declares) has been justified by its results. The revenue has risen from £16,000 to £60,000. Peace and prosperity reign throughout the islands, which two years ago were scenes of lawless outrage and brutal violence. In spite of an insurrection of the hill tribes and a terrible outbreak of smallpox, the colony has made rapid progress. The land question has been peacefully and expeditiously settled. The modified slavery which disgraced the island has been abolished, and a modus vivendi has been established between the whites and the native population. It may fairly be expected that Fiji will pay its way and become in the future the centre of our Polynesian Empire. Sir ARTHUR GORDON, the Governor, who is now in this country on leave of absence, is a colonial administrator of the right stamp, and to him undoubtedly belongs much of the success which has attended the annexation of the Archipelago.

Nothing can be more satisfactory than the above. God has blessed Israel's acquisition of the desolate heritage, the Fijis, and the result is such a decided success as even the jaundiced eye of the prejudiced Northern Echo cannot but see and acknowledge. The Fijis in fact, as the editor sees, are destined to become the centre, or as we should say, "the Gate," of our Polynesian Empire." We always have given the rôle of that position to New Zealand, but are quite content that the Northern Echo should recognise as the "centre" our last new infant colony, and feel that in it God has given our nation (being Israel) a "Gate" which shall cause us to dominate over the whole of Polynesia.

We turn now to Mr. Hepworth Dixon's panegyric—almost a monograph—of Cyprus, and of the mistress of the sea who holds it. We regret we cannot re-produce his whole paper, but we have done our best to make the "choicest nugget" our own. He asks :—

Has Cyprus ceased to be the changeless East? The American Consulate has disappeared, the English consular power has seen ahead. Our consul, fortunately, was the representative of Queen Victoria, and something more ; he was the manager of a bank. In other days his management of the bank was in the nature of a sinecure. No bullion filled the coffers of that bank. As I remember but too well, you had to pay for gold at Larnaca, not as though it bore the effigy of Victoria or of Abdul Medjid, but as if it were a choice production of Italian art. Now merrier times have come ; the English in and out of Larnaca will soon be legion. They will all want bills, exchanges, coins of gold and silver, and I know not what besides. The consular duties may decline ; the manager's duties will augment. Victoria will not send a consul to herself ; but the Ottoman Bank, with offices in London and Stamboul, will need an agent on the spot, which henceforth is to be the living link between the East and West. A year ago, Cyprus belonged to Aphrodite ; now she belongs to Queen Victoria. A year ago, every one who came to Cyprus (with the exception of some Russian monks and French political agents) landed at Limasol or Larnaca, with thoughts directed to the Empress of the sky. Henceforth, another set of travellers will land, with minds intent on lower and more practical things. Preston White will come to build jetties, like his cheap and serviceable works in India. Then will follow steam ploughs, and water engines, and the tires for wagon wheels. These things are wanted first, with all the skill and capital for turning them to perfect use. But in the roadstead, one observes that people are not waiting for the English engineer and English capitalist to come. Yon swarthy immigrants from Alexandria have never heard of fame. They have read of Fatima, Amine, and the heroines of the Arabian Nights. They are a Moslem people, and they have no goddesses in their mythologies. But they know the name of Queen Victoria. They have heard of her as Empress of the Earth. They have a notion that the sea belongs to her. Where have they touched the waters and not found themselves in presence of her power? At Aden she is empress, at Perim she is empress, from Ismaila to Port Said the great canal is crossed by her flag, at Alexandria her vessels and the vessels of her people crowd the harbour. Men who stay at home give hardly any thought to the impression made by the old red cross of St. George on Oriental nations—everywhere a sign of power, of freedom, of commercial life. The Chinese Minister, eating at my table in Regent's Park, shortly after his arrival in London, told me that a Russian agent in Pekin had shown him a map of the world, in which England, in comparison with Russia, seemed no bigger than a leaf compared against a tree ; but on his journey from Canton to Southampton he had learned to understand that what the Muscovite showed him was the land-empire, not the sea-empire, and that the lesson of his map was altogether wrong. In fact, from Canton to London, he had never been out of the Queen's dominions, never beyond the sight of her flag, the cover of her guns. At Hong Kong, English ships and English troops ; at Singapore, English ships and troops ; at Penang, English ships and troops ; at Point de Galle, English ships and troops ; at Aden, English ships and troops ; at Port Said, English ships : at Malta and Gibraltar, English ships and troops ; and at Southampton, English ships and troops. In all his journey of 10,000 miles he had never once seen the Russian flag. The tree was nowhere ; and the leaf seemed to cover all the earth. By this ubiquity of the flag men's minds are thoroughly impressed. Ours is an Empire on which the flag never droops.

These swarthy immigrants from Egypt, Syria, and the Grecian islets know the Queen's name, and recognise her flag. They feel that where that flag is flung, from either mast or rampart, men will be treated justly, and that commerce will be secure. They come to labour and to live. Compared against their former homes—no matter whether those homes were in the Delta of Egypt, the plains of Shefalah and Esdraelon, the peaks of Candia, or the foreshores of Asia Minor—Cyprus is a healthy, wholesome place. The thought of health is not with them the first thing and the last. Men to whom rest and shade and quinine powders are not always handy, have to think a little of their health ; but they are mainly bent on finding food, and trying for the work that gives them food. Can work be sought, and is the labour sunk in the earth secure? These are the questions asked in every corner of the Orient, and the answers are that work may be sought, and that the fruits of labour are secure under the English flag. Hence they are swarming in these boats.

To them the ironclads are rocks of safety. Lord John Hay is a mighty satrap, and his flagship, the Minotaur, instead of representing a devouring monster, is a beneficent ruler of the deep. Sir Garnet Wolseley is a peaceful and enlightened Pasha, such as Haroun-al-Raschid might have chosen for his Minister. Under these lieutenants of the mighty Empress, the peasant knows that he is safe ; nay, more ; under that mighty Empress he is free. In other days, under the consular flag, the English were secure ; but under the Imperial flag, all persons are secure. To lie beneath that flag is to be free. To understand what feeling free and safe mean to an Oriental, a man must have known a Syrian fellah and a Muscovite serf. The news is flying far and fast, that on the coast of Asia Minor, only thirty hours' sail from Egypt, and in actual sight of Syria and Adana, there is a refuge for men of all condition and all opinion, in which the air and soil are absolutely free.

Our readers are too well instructed now to be told how many Identifications of our race with Israel Mr. Hepworth Dixon enumerates in the above ! He says :

1. That the Queen of England is Empress of the Earth, and that the Eastern nations who flock to her new possession in Cyprus have a notion that the sea also belongs to her. But these are descriptions of Israel, as reference to Isa. lx. 3, 4 ; Romans iv. 13 ; Psalm xxv. 13 ; Gen. xxii. 17 ; Psalm lxxxix. 25, will show.

2. That from Hong Kong to Southampton, viâ, the Suez Canal, the traveller sees nought but English ships and English troops occupying all "the Gates,"—an empire everywhere on which the Britisb flag never droops! Here, however, he described Israel's Gates and Israel's world-wide dominion (see Gen. xxii. 17 ; Dan. vii. 22—27).

3. That being the "righteous" nation, "free" and "able to protect" all her subjects, the British are attracting all Asiatics to her flag—a character which every Bible student knows is Israel's (Isa. lx. 21, xxvi. 2, liv. 13, 14). "Lift up thine eyes round about (at Cyprus) and see, all they gather themselves together, they come to THEE" (Isa. lx. 4).

4. That under the British in Cyprus, the surrounding nations are learning that there at least they can be free—a certain proof that the British are Israel ; for God describes the latter as the only liberators of the slave, and they must perforce to do that be free themselves (Isa. lviii. 6). We thank Mr. Hepworth Dixon for his blind testimony, and the proof he has given us that we are God's people, even Israel.

Digitized by Google

REPORT OF PROGRESS IN SHEFFIELD.

THE Sheffield Anglo-Israel Association held their first annual meeting on March 17, in the Cutlers' Hall, when Mr. Charles Wardlow, the president, remarked that he was pleased at the progress which the Association had made, and he was sure the members were not at all shaken in their belief, but were confirmed the more they read and studied the subject.

The Secretary's report stated that the Association was formed on March 25, 1878. Their receipts covered their expenditure, which was about £74 for the year. There had been forty-four meetings in connection with the Association, and they had enrolled a fair number of members, besides inducing a great many more to read up and study this great and important question.

Mr. Charles Wardlow was re-elected president, and the Rev. Robert Douglas, M.A., Messrs. H. W. Lofthouse, Thomas Chapman, W. H. Mason and C. F. Longden, as vice-presidents, with a committee of thirteen gentlemen.

A tea and soiree was also held on March 24 in the Banqueting-room, Cutlers' Hall, when Mr. Thomas Chapman read an interesting paper on our "National Past and Present," and Mr. W. H. Mason on our "National Future."

The entertainment was interspersed with selections of music and hymns specially composed for the occasion, and a very enjoyable evening was spent.

Its members look forward with confidence to a grand future, as they are convinced the majority of the Sheffield Christian public are becoming aroused to think there is more in the subject than they at present understand or comprehend, and which theory our opponents (both clergy and laity) can neither shake, nor refute, by sound argument, "Our basis being the sure Word of God."

THOMAS S. PEASEGOOD, Hon. Sec.

SHEFFIELD ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.—Last evening the first annual meeting of the Sheffield Anglo-Israel Association was held in the Cutlers' Hall. There was a moderate attendance. Mr. Charles Wardlow (the president) occupied the chair, and in opening the proceedings, said that looking upon the present condition of the Anglo-Israel question the members of that association had every reason to congratulate themselves at the measure of success they had attained. He was quite as deeply interested and as great a believer in the subject as ever he had been, and he had given more consideration and thought to it during the year than at any previous time. It was true he could not give much time to the subject, but what he had done had satisfied him more and more of the truth of their theory. In some respects there had been difficulties to contend with, and he did not find his friends so enthusiastic as he could wish, because the theory was a new one. He, however, had gone so far in some cases as to get the opinions of those who were against the question, and it had invariably resulted in his being the more satisfied with his views. He was also of opinion that those ministers who had the most to say against the subject were the most ignorant of it, and they had freely admitted that it was so. Some said it was very fascinating, and they should be very glad if it turned out true; but still they had not read upon the subject, and had only a very cursory idea of what it really was. He was pleased at the progress which the association had made, and that they still found themselves an organisation, and he was sure that the members were not at all shaken in their belief. (Applause).—Mr. G. W. Staniland, the secretary, read the report, which stated that the association was formed on March 25, 1878. The general account was—Receipts for the year, £29 9s. 10d., made up as follows:—Donations, £8 4s. 10d.; subscriptions, £9 5s. 6d.; sale of cards, £1 11s. 6d.; cards to the Bristol Association, £4 5s. 4d.; Huddersfield Association, £1 15s.; single cards posted to various places and collections, &c., £3 17s. 3d. In addition to that they had received from the various lectures during the year the sum of about £45, making a total of about £74, although the latter amount did not come in the general account. The expenditure was £30 17s. 2d., leaving a balance due to the treasurer of £1 7s. 4d. There had been forty-four meetings in connection with the association during the year.—Mr. Swingler moved and Mr. Barrow seconded the adoption of the report, and it was carried. The election of officers for the ensuing year was then proceeded with. Mr. C. Wardlow was re-elected president; Rev. R. Douglas, M.A., Messrs. H. W. Lofthouse, Thomas Chapman, W. H. Mason, and C. F. Longden, were re-elected vice-presidents, and a committee of thirteen gentlemen.

Review.

Manasseh and the United States. An Essay by the Rev. Joseph Wild, D.D., of Brooklyn, New York. Price twopence. Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; and W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

WE have received a copy of the above from our spirited publisher in London, as well as the American original, kindly forwarded to us by our Brooklyn friends, through the secretary of the "Lost Israel's Identification Association" of that city. Dr Wild's little work, under notice, was the basis of an address he delivered to the Society at Brooklyn some time ago, and it has been printed "by request." It is a very interesting lucid statement of the arguments as they commend themselves to an American divine, to prove that the American people are "of Israel;" of that portion of Israel represented by the Tribe of Manasseh. He goes over the ground very carefully, and divides his argument into the following heads:—

1. That America was by the Divine arrangement allotted to the Puritans and Pilgrim Fathers of the English race.
2. That that race, including the Americans, derived their origin from Jacob and Joseph, and thus through Ephraim and Manasseh.
3. That Jacob made a will in favour of his two grandsons.
4. That in virtue of that will Manasseh was to become in due time "A people," and a "Great people."
5. That at the set period Manasseh becoming "restless" as a part of the British nation, betook themselves to the American continent, and there became independent of the mother country.
6. That of sixty colonies the British Empire has only lost one—the thirteen United States.
7. That the Great Seal of the United States betrays their Hebrew Manassite origin, the reference to the Great Pyramid thereon being very remarkable; and—
8. That Manasseh was brought up at the foot of the Great Pyramid, and the great step of that building symbolises the final concord between the States and the mother country when peace was declared in 1814-15, a peace destined to last for ever.

We have intimated enough to urge our readers to obtain and read this last contribution to Identity literature; and as the cost will be only twopence, we are sure they will not grudge it.

Correspondence.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—Since I wrote to you a few days since on the subject of Richard Butler's prophecies, I have been reading the letter of Mr. H. Stevens, Appendix No. 5 to Professor P. Smyth's work, "Our Inheritance in the Great Pyramid," and find that he has exactly the same views that I share with regard to another passage existing at the oblique stones about the 2,170 inch measurement. His theory is that a passage should "diverge from the entrance at or about the date of the Abrahamic covenant." Now Richard Butler distinctly mentions 2,171 as the date of the birth of Abraham.

Mr. W. Rowbottom, Appendix No. 6, also gives his views as to the fiducial line representing the birth of Abraham; also the 1,542 measurement as the birth of Moses—not the Exodus. This again very nearly agrees with Richard Butler's probable date, though not specially given.

I am firmly of opinion that another passage does exist, and hope that someone may shortly take the matter in hand, and solve the point.

Yours truly,
W. L. MORCOM.

Manchester, March 21, 1879.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

SIR,—For the benefit of such of your readers as may have perused my pamphlet on the "Coming Collision between England and Russia," will you allow me to direct attention to the erratum on page 43, which seriously affects the sense of the passage in which it occurs?

"The Jews, the descendants of the Ten Tribes," should be read "of the Two Tribes"—meaning of course Judah and Benjamin.

Yours truly,
THE AUTHOR.

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements

(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O O payable at Ludgate-circus.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed :—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

PUBLIC ANNOUNCEMENTS.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

THE ANNUAL MEETING

Will be held in

EXETER HALL (LOWER ROOM),

ON MONDAY EVENING, MAY 19TH, 1879.

The following Gentlemen are expected to attend and take part in the Meeting:—

ADMIRAL DUNN,

COLONEL BENTINCK,

PHILO-ISRAEL (E. W. BIRD, Esq.),

REV. C. W. HICKSON, M.A., Vicar of S. Bartholomew's, Bristol.

REV. A. J. J. CACHEMAILLE, M.A., Vicar of St. Mary's, Oldham,

W. H. PETERS, Esq., J.P.

D. A. ONSLOW, Esq., J.P.

CHARLES STUBBS, Esq., B.A.

CHARLES HORNER, Esq.

The Chair will be taken at 7 o'clock.

The Members will meet in the Committee Room at Exeter Hall at 6 o'clock previous to the Public Meeting. To this Meeting Members only will be admitted by Ticket.

TICKETS for Reserved Seats to the Public Meeting can be obtained gratis upon application to the Secretary at the Office, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London, E.C.

JAMES BILLINGTON, Hon. Sec.

ON TUESDAY Evening next, May 13, 1879, a LECTURE will be delivered in the VICTORIA TEMPERANCE HALL, BUXTON ROAD, HUDDERSFIELD, by the Rev. C. W. HICKSON, M.A., Vicar of St. Bartholomew's, Bristol. Subject: "The Great Pyramid of Ghizeh, a Link in the Chain of Evidence of Our Hebrew Origin." Chair to be taken at 7.30. Admission: Reserved Seats, 1s., Second Seats, 6d., Back Seats and Gallery, 3d. Friends from neighbouring Towns, please help.

SHEFFIELD ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

THE REV. C. W. HICKSON, Vicar of St. Bartholomew's, Bristol, will (D.V.) LECTURE in the ALBERT HALL, SHEFFIELD, on May 12, 1879. Subject: "The Great Pyramid." Chair to be taken at 8 o'clock by Rev. H. Douglas. Admission, 1s. and 6d.

THE GREAT PYRAMID. NOW READY, PHILO-ISRAEL'S NEW WORK, 56 pages, Illustrated with Diagrams, price 4d., post free 5d.

AN ELEMENTARY DIGEST or SKETCH OF THE CHIEF FACTS and TEACHINGS of the GREAT PYRAMID of EGYPT; adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific. By PHILO-ISRAEL; together with Original Papers by the following leading Pyramidists, republished mostly from the BANNER OF ISRAEL (by kind permission of the proprietor)—viz., Professor Piazzi Smyth, the Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A., Charles Horner, Esq., and Major H. A. Tracey, R.A. Being a pamphlet by five authors (a Pyramid number).

LITERARY NOTICE.—The Great Pyramid of Egypt (52 pp.; Guest London: price 4d.).—This pamphlet is put forth as "A Digest of Great Pyramid Teaching Adapted to the Comprehension of the Unlearned and of the Unscientific," and is from the pen of the able editor of THE BANNER OF ISRAEL. To it papers by other writers, including Professor Piazzi Smyth, are appended. Of it we need only that it is well calculated to serve the end in view, and gives a clear summary of the chief facts of Pyramid lore. Over 5,000 copies have been sold in the course of three months, and this alone proves how interest in the subject is extending."—Alfreton Journal, April 25, 1879.

BOOKS, ETC.

18th Annual Issue, price 2d., post free 3d., 36 pages closely printed matter.

MAY MEETING VISITORS, be sure and get the A B C Church and Chapel Directory. The best and only correct guide to all London and Suburban Protestant Places of Worship, Ministers, Times of Service, &c., &c. A cheap and reliable Christian Guide Book to London.

The Record says: "A well-arranged List of all the London and Suburban Protestant Places of Worship, with the Clergy who officiate, services, &c. Exceedingly useful."

The Nonconformist says: "Very useful—containing a mass of useful information, which will be serviceable to visitors to London, not less than to permanent residents in the metropolis."

The Christian Times says: "We know of no work where so much information is gathered under one cover. It must command an extensive circulation."

The Morning Advertiser says: "One of the most useful Christian Hand-Books we have met with for a long time."

The Rock says: "It is a most excellent guide to all Protestant Places of Worship in London."

The English Independent says: "Contains a quantity of ecclesiastical information very useful to visitors as well as residents in London."

The Church Standard says: "Compiled with great care, and published at such a modest price as to bring it within the reach of all."

The Protestant says: "Neatly got up, and seems to have been carefully compiled."

London: ROBERT RANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

TO AUTHORS. Authors desirous of issuing Works or Pamphlets on the great and increasingly interesting Question of the Identity of the Lost Ten Tribes with the British Nation, should first communicate with Robert Banks, of Racquet-court, Fleet-street, who has already been honoured by issuing, amongst others, the following works on the subject:

The Banner of Israel. Weekly 1d.; monthly 7d.

The Nation's Glory Leader. Weekly 1d.; quarterly 1s 4d.

The Pillar of Witness. By late Captain Tracey. Cloth 2s. 6d.; paper 1s 6d (second edition).

The Anglo-Israel Post Bag. By Bishop Titcomb. Cloth 2s. 6d.; paper 1s. 6d. (second edition).

The History of the House of Israel. By Philo-Israel. Cloth 1s.; paper 6d. (sixth thousand).

The Great Pyramid of Egypt. Fifty-two pages, with three illustrations. Price 4d. (10,000).

The New Old Story. By A E I. Cloth 1s.

Price 1d.; post free, 1½d.

GOD'S LOVE FOR ISRAEL. A GUARANTEE THAT HE WILL FULFIL HIS PROMISES TO ISRAEL. By JOHN GILDER SHAW.

Price 6d.; or with illustrative map, 8d.

BRITAIN (OR ISRAEL) THE FIFTH AND LAST, AND THE UNCONQUERABLE EMPIRE. By JOHN GILDER SHAW.

Price 3d.; post free, 3½d.

CHRONOLOGICAL CHART OF BRITISH VICTORIES OVER THE CONTINENTAL POWERS, ranging from the battle of Cressy (1346), to our last victory, the taking of Sebastopol, Sept. 8, 1855. Arranged by J. G. SHAW, of Leeds.

"We trust Mr. Shaw's labour in preparing this paper may be appreciated by the public and be largely sold."—Banner of Israel.

London: Published by Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; and may be had of the Author, 20 Park-row, Leeds, and of all booksellers.

DEAFNESS CURED, NOISES IN THE EARS, &c. SPECIAL OFFER TO THE DEAF.

THE REV. E. J. SILVERTON having discovered that there are tens of thousands who are unable to obtain his 11s. Box of Aurial Remedy which has cured so many persons of Deafness and Noises in the Ears, &c., begs now to offer a 2s. 6d. Box of the Medicine, so as to put it within the reach of all. This arrangement is specially made to meet the deaf world. With every box of medicine will be presented the Rev. E. J. Silverton's "Health Advocate," containing valuable advice and information that everyone ought to know. Post Office Orders for 2s. 6d. to E. J. SILVERTON, Minister of Exeter Hall Church, Nottingham, or stamps, 2s. 8d.

WOOLS! WOOLS! WOOLS! Cheapest and Best. White and Black Berlin, Single and Double, 3s. 6d. per pound. Best quality Ice Wools, all Colours, 5½ per ounce ball. All other Wools at proportionate prices. Shetland, Andalusian, Fleecy, and Bonne Mere Wools. Welsh, Scotch, Peacock Victoria, and other Yarns. Crewel Filoselle Silk.

M. WHELLENS, Wholesale and Retail Wool Warehouse, 3, 5, and 6, QUEEN'S TERRACE, CAMDEN ROAD, LONDON, N.

Send for Price List, forwarded post free.

LADIES' SILK SCARVES, price 1s. The choicest Silk Scarf ever offered. All Colours; richly brocaded ends. Send stamps for a sample.

M. WHELLENS, 5 & 6, Queen's-terrace, Camden-road, London, N.

NEW BOOKS AND NEW EDITIONS.

Now Ready.

THE PROMISES TO ABRAHAM,

WITH

SELECT REFERENCES AND EXPLANATORY NOTES,

To which is added an article entitled,

"ISRAEL AMONG THE GENTILES."

BY W. S. CAVILL.

Reprinted from the pages of "Life from the Dead," with Emendations and Corrections.

Price Sixpence, or free by post, Sevenpence.

London: Published by ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, and may be had of all Booksellers.

This day. Price 2d. Post free 2½d.

MANASSEH AND THE UNITED STATES. An important Essay delivered before the "Lost Israel Identification Society," by the Rev. Joseph Wild, D.D., at Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, New York.

CONTENTS:—The Fulness of the Gentiles set in—For whom did God intend America—The Origin of the United States The Footsteps of Ephraim and Manasseh—The Will of Jacob made to Ephraim and Manasseh—Manasseh a People, and a Great People—Manasseh's Birthtime of Separation—Out of nearly Sixty Conquered Colonies the only one England ever Lost was that of Manasseh (America)—The Great Seal of the United States—Manasseh was brought up at the Door of the Pyramid, &c., &c.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.; and of any Bookseller.

New and Revised Edition.

THE "NEW OLD STORY," an Introduction to a Marvellous Puzzle, expressly written for children, with a Short and Simple Account of the Great Pyramid, explaining the measurements, &c., so as to be easily understood by the young. By A E I. W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane.

Second edition, just published. Price 1s. 6d.; Cloth, gilt edges, 2s. 6d. Post free for 20 or 33 stamps.

THE PILLAR OF WITNESS. A Scriptural View of the GREAT PYRAMID. By the late Commander B. W. TRACEY, R.N.

W. H Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

New pamphlet by Philo-Israel.

Will shortly be published, price 2d.

THE HISTORICAL, ETHNIC, AND PHILOLOGICAL ARGUMENTS in PROOF of BRITISH IDENTITY with the TEN LOST TRIBES OF ISRAEL, clearly and simply stated.

BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane; and Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Just published.

THE COMING COLLISION BETWEEN ENGLAND AND RUSSIA PREDICTED BY EZEKIEL; forming a Proof of England with the Israel of Prophecy. Price 1s., post free 1s. 1d.

W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C. List of works on the Identity forwarded post free upon application.

Just out.

NOTES ON THE VISIONS OF ZECHARIAH VIEWED IN THE LIGHT OF THE IDENTITY OF THE TEN LOST TRIBES. By J. A. H. Price 1s. paper covers; 1s 6d. cloth.

W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick Lane, E.C.

Just Published, price 2d.

EPISCOPACY, NOT ESTABLISHMENT, THE BANE OF THE NATIONAL CHURCH.

BY A LAY MEMBER OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND

W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row; and the Protestant Tract Society, 17, Buckingham-st., Strand.

PHOTOGRAPHIC PORTRAITS OF PHILO-ISRAEL, Editor of THE BANNER OF ISRAEL, Author of "The History of the House of Israel," &c., &c. Cabinet, 2s., post free; Carte-de-Visites, 1s., post free.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, 5, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, MAY 7, 1879.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. III. No. 124. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, MAY 14, 1879. [ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
Israel's Protestantism and Prosperity	197
The Restoration of the Jews	198
A Word of Warning Again	199
Identity Difficulties Answered. Was Benjamin a Tribe of "The House of Israel?"—Part IV.	200
A Form of Prayer for Our Armies gone forth in Zululand and Afghanistan, to Fight the Enemies of Israel	201
The Rev. B. Wrey Savile, M.A., Rector of Shillingford, Exeter, Refutes the Rev. J. B. Clifford's Theory of the Hamitic Origin of the Saxons	201
Review of the Rev. J. B. Clifford's Pamphlet. By the Editor	203
Correspondence	203

ISRAEL'S PROTESTANTISM AND PROSPERITY.

IN Nos. 45, 46, and 47 of Life from the Dead, vol. iv., of 1877, we published, by favour of its editor Mr. Hine, three articles on "The Invasions of England, Past and Future," combatting the views entertained by the Rock on Captain Hozier's work therein reviewed. Those views were that the immunity of these islands from foreign invasion depended wholly and solely upon our nation's Protestantism, but not otherwise. We maintained our ground, on the contrary, that our Identity with Israel was the sole reason why foreign Gentile nations could not, and would not ever invade us with success, and we relied for that view on God's promises to David, and through him to the House of Israel, as conveyed in 2 Sam. vii. 10, and also in Ezek. xi. 16; Zech. x. 6, &c.

We did not for a moment deny, or wish to deny, that our prosperity as a nation depends constantly on our Protestant light, brilliantly shining for the Lord. We are inclined to insist upon that always very strongly, because the testimony of our history as a nation is express, that while Protestantism has prevailed among us nationally, we have enjoyed God's blessing and His smile; but per contra when there have been uncertainty or hesitation in our "witnessing" against the harlot wiles of Rome, whether viewed as Popery or its counterfeit advanced-Ritualism, there have been dealt out to us national correction and national punishment in measure to recall us, as God's people, to a recollection of our high destiny.

We have two papers now lying before us written on these lines, and we much wish our space allowed our enriching our columns with the valuable matter contained in both. One is termed "The Papal Hierarchy," by the Rev. J. A. Wylie, LL.D., published in the Scottish Patriot, on February 8, 1879, the subject being, "England Rises and Falls with Protestantism;" the other, "Protestantism and Prosperity," by the Rev. Hely H. Smith, of Matlock, a paper issued by the "Protestant Alliance." We are heartily at one with the writers of both these papers in the main, and our views as believers in our Identity require of us that adhesion. For wherein is our "witness," as Israel, for our Lord God and His Christ, a valid and true "witnessing" except so far as we bear ourselves as opponents of His enemies,—faithful to those truths which, as a nation, we learnt and professed when He "reformed" us in the glorious time of the national "regeneration" in the 16th century? Then it was the British nation turned openly before the nations to her God, and since then she has been a "witnessing," and therefore a greatly prospering people. Herein there is a grand historical Identity binding our nation to Protestantism, as God's people Israel, because that is the true faith of the Israelite, as set forth in the British Bible. As a consequence, it has given this nation, at all times when it was professed, abounding prosperity both at home and abroad. But change the scene, and observe the effect of even a temporary declension back to Popery, such as history has often presented to our view in these realms, and the instant result has been disaster, affliction, trouble, and God's heavy hand on the people in loving—not angry—punishment, and in correction in measure, to bring His wayward children back to the right path. For let us observe, our sins, and often backslidings, have never, since the Reformation, obscured the protesting light which this nation sheds, permanently. Sooner or later, God has flogged us back into the paths of righteousness, and to Protestant conformity to His will again. Other nations, like Germany, Spain, France, and Italy, to whom the light once came, have quenched it by neglect, or blood, or persecution, and have been left in the outer darkness—that is, Papal or infidel misery. But the British-Israelite race, repeated as their declensions have been, have always returned to the light, and been allowed again and again to enjoy God's blessing as the "Protestants," or "witnessing" ones for Him. This, we repeat and enforce on our readers, is solely because of "Our Identity;" and because, being Israel, God would have His chosen ones act as "His witnesses" (Isa. xliii. 10—12, xliv. 8).

We ask our readers now to turn with us to Dr. Wylie's statements regarding the relation between Protestantism and the prosperity of our nation, viewed historically during Elizabeth's and her successors' reigns. After describing the state of our land when "bloody Mary" was on the throne, and when "England, like a felled ox, sunk down at once in paralysis and torpor," he goes on to say—

Digitized by Google

In a few years this portentous night passed. Elizabeth mounted the throne, and the Protestant faith returned once more to the altars and the hearths of England. A noon of prosperity and splendour now burst upon the country. The genius of the nation, long folded up in the chilly air of superstition, opened out into a breadth and richness of faculty, a robustness of reasoning power, and a splendour of imagination which surpassed the most brilliant intellectual eras of the world's history. To the heart and soul of the English people did Protestantism penetrate. Its power was attested by happy, because virtuous homes, and by numerous spectacles of patriotism and public worth. The successor of Elizabeth, James I., losing faith in the power of Protestantism, or rather becoming afraid of it, pursued a shifty, truckling, and semi-Popish course. In due time his unprincipled policy bore fruit in the decaying strength and vanishing prestige of England. His son, Charles I., carried to a yet greater length the example his father had set him, of retreat from the Reformation and advance towards Rome, and in the same proportion did the misfortunes of his house and the calamities of his kingdom increase. The nation was broken in two; war fell out between the Court and the Parliament; and the tragic sequel enacted on the scaffold at Whitehall, it needs not that we should relate. The times that followed were unsettled and stormy; nevertheless, under Cromwell, Protestantism became once more the guiding-star of England. With wonderful recuperative power, the country mounted up to almost what it had been under Elizabeth. From our little isle orders went forth which foreign nations heard and obeyed. The name of England again recovered its former prestige, and its flag was triumphant on the ocean. The reigns of the last two Stuarts, Charles II. and James II., were of all others since the Reformation, that of Mary excepted, the most Popish, and they were also the most calamitous; the country which under Elizabeth had defied the Armada, under James II. had its ships burned in its own harbours. Home suffering and foreign contempt culminated at last in the expulsion of the Stuarts from the throne, and in their flight from a land which they had brought to the brink of ruin.

If the country uprose, it was under the old flag. Across the sea came William of Orange, with the motto blazoned on his banner, "For the Protestant religion and liberties of England." With William III., Protestantism ascended the throne of England, to become the throne of Europe; and in due time, in a sense, the throne of the world. To this height of dominion, step by step, has Protestantism, in the course of five centuries, conducted Great Britain.

As in travelling in a foreign country we can distinguish between the Popish and the Protestant provinces by the signs of sloth and barbarism that disfigure the one, and the tokens of order and industry that enliven the other, so is it in surveying the annals of our nation. Simply by taking note of the state of England we can tell when the servile principles of Popery predominated, and when the ennobling truths of Protestantism bore sway. Does commerce enrich, letters illuminate, arts refine, and power ennoble Great Britain? is its flag feared on the ocean, and its voice listened to in the council-chamber of nations? its Protestantism is in the ascendant. Does calamity cloud it? how sure the conclusion that England has anew fallen under the spell of her evil genius, and is bowing the knee to her great enemy.

The principles of the Divine government do not change, and the union between England and Protestantism, seen to be indissoluble in the past, will, we may be sure, be as indissoluble in the future. A foreordination, which man cannot revoke, has linked together, in her case, Protestant declension and national decadence. If England would remain at the head of the world, and lead on the nations, and herself along with them, to a loftier pedestal of freedom and prosperity, she knows what star to follow! If it is the downward road that pleases her best, there are no lack of counsellors to show her the way, and urge her to take it; but let her be assured that if she listen to their advice, and forsake the "old paths," she will not have gone far before being startled by the crash of some terrible disaster.

We ask our readers' careful study of the above. It has a word of solemn warning even for the House of Israel! For though we know that we cannot permanently be cut off from our glorious calling, as the foremost "protesting" nation of the world, we may, nevertheless, by pandering to Popery, and by coquetting with its base imitation, the utter semi-Popery of the Ritualism to be found even in our Church of England of to-day, be subjected to chastisements, not trifling, nor few, nor light, which our loving Father in Christ may send us to bring us back to the work we have to do as God's "witnesses" par excellence, and therefore the chief Protestants of the world—His people Israel. There is a world of meaning, and of terrible responsibility to our God as well, in those tremendous words, applied to us to-day,—"Ye are My witnesses, saith Jehovah, that I am God!" (Isa. xliii. 12).

THE RESTORATION OF THE JEWS.

We want to know whether our clergy of the Church of England ever really study God's prophetic Word? or do they utterly ignore it? We find such wonderful ignorance on the subject generally, and regarding the restoration of the Jews in particular, that we are filled with dismay and consternation when every fresh instance comes before us of the phenomenon. We are now referring particularly to the utterances of the Rev. A. A. Rees, who, in a communication to the Sunderland Daily Echo, under date the 18th July, 1878, hazarded the opinion that the Jews, under Great Britain's escort, will now, from the stepping-stone of Cyprus, "flock to the Holy Land, populate its cities, especially Jerusalem, and restore them and the surrounding country to unexampled commercial and agricultural prosperity. Having become rich and influential" (he adds), "what is more likely than that they should seek and obtain their national independence? What a powerful ally they would become to England" (he goes on to say) "in stemming the tide of Russian invasion and annexation." In all this the Rev. Mr. Rees assumes erroneously that the Jews are now "a distinct nation among many nations," and that the prophecies encourage the notion (which is the truth) that the "ships of Tarshish and of Chittim mentioned in Isaiah lx. 9; Numbers xxiv. 24; and Daniel xi. 30, refer to Great Britain's ships," and her strong arm as the protecting convoy to the returning Jews.

We ask again, Does the Rev. Mr. Rees ever look into his Bible? Being a clerk, learned in God's Word written, he must know what is recorded on the subject of the restoration. Has he never read Jer. iii. 18, or Hosea i. 11, from which he might surely have gathered that the House of Judah (the Jews) "shall walk to the House of Israel"—that the two thus newly-joined Houses will then proceed to the election of a head—that they shall thereafter "come together out of the land of the North to the land that Jehovah hath given to their fathers for an inheritance?" Has he failed thus to recognise the fact that the Jews cannot be restored alone: but that, as Isaiah xviii. and Zeph. iii. 10 both teach him, the House of Judah will be taken as "a present" to the Lord by a people of the same race, who are "terrible from their beginning and hitherto"—who are the "Lord's suppliants" (therefore Christians), "the daughter of His dispersed," therefore (not being of the House of Judah) they must be "Ephraim," whose dwelling is, we know, "beyond the rivers of Ethiopia"—a Western, and yet an Eastern Power—who accompany the return of Judah, and yet are the great and chief ingredient of that restoration, "for great shall be the day of Jezreel," and Jezreel is Israel, not Judah, as Mr. Rees ought to know?

Then again, we would ask, Is he not aware that when the restoration of the Jews takes place, their assigned habitation, as Ezekiel xlviii. 7 would teach Mr. Rees, will not be the Land of Promise generally and Jerusalem in particular, as he erroneously supposes, but only one-thirteenth of the whole territory as "a portion for Judah." That share, a little care and calculation would have shown Mr. Rees, is not the capital Jerusalem at all, but a tract of land at least ten Pyramid miles North of it, the whole area of the Lord's portion, sanctuary, and holy oblation intervening between Judah's Southern boundary and the Holy City of the Great King, which is Ten-Tribed Israel's possession thenceforth, and not Judah's at all. Mr. Rees' letter, we are glad to find, was answered at once in the local press, by three friends of the Identity—Messrs. Jno. T. Gott,

Digitized by Google

J. Greig, and an anonymous writer "Harengus." Mr. Gott's is the most elaborate and finished answer; but we propose to reproduce for the reader's perusal that of Mr. Greig, as the most pointed and brief reply—one which traverses all the ground, and gives Mr. Rees a triumphant answer, to which we have looked in vain for a rejoinder. Mr. Greig wrote as follows:—

TO THE EDITOR.

SIR,—Will you kindly afford me an opportunity to say a few words on this subject, to which Mr. Rees has so opportunely drawn our attention? I believe with him that the Jews are about to be restored to their ancient home. Also that the ships of Tarshish and Chittim mentioned refer to "the naval force of these Western isles;" but that the Jews are now a nation, or are ever to become an independent and mighty race, I deny. My English Bible teaches me something different. Israel is now a great, independent, and mighty nation, the "chief of the nations" (Jer. xxxi. 7), and if Mr. Rees will read the context, he will find it refers to Israel, not the Jews—to the people left of the sword who found grace in the wilderness, who have been the objects of God's special love, who are yet to plant vines on the mountains of Samaria (the capital city of the Ten Tribes, not of the Jews). I cannot see that the condition of the Jews agrees with this description. They are under the curse—a proverb, a taunt, a by-word, and a reproach among the nations; servants in their enemies' land; a down-trodden, scattered people, without a king, without a country, without an image, &c. (Hosea iii. 4). Neither will they go back themselves to inherit the land; there is a prior claim to theirs in the land. Israel, of the Ten Tribes—the House of Ephraim—is the heir, the first-born. Scripture tells me so: "I am a Father to Israel, and Ephraim is My first-born," says Jehovah. Judah (the Jews), therefore, come in only in a secondary sense, dependent entirely upon the heir Ephraim. See Jer. iii. 18: "The House of Judah shall walk with (margin, 'to') the House of Israel, and they shall come together out of the land of the North to the land which I gave to their fathers," &c. Also see Ezekiel xxxvii. 15—26: "Take thee one stick and write upon it, For Judah, &c.; then take another stick and write upon it, For Joseph, the stick of Ephraim, &c. &c., and join them into one stick, and they shall be one in thine hand, &c. I will make them one nation in the land of Israel, no more two," &c. Mr. Rees evidently looks on us as a purely Gentile nation, and therefore to incur Gentile rejection and judgment. If so, then Mr. Rees, with all other of our ministers, must make the humbling confession (Jer. xvi. 19): "The Gentiles shall come unto thee from the end of the earth, and shall say, Surely our fathers have inherited lies, vanity, and things wherein there is no profit." Is Mr. Rees prepared to confess that he has been teaching lies, vanity, and things wherein is no profit, all his life? I hope not. Then let Mr. Rees consider and see if he has not made a mistake. I should be really glad to see Mr. Rees accept the fact of our national Identity with Israel, which is so plainly taught in Scripture. He would increase his power for good in Sunderland tenfold by reaching the hearts of the people, and confounding infidelity and scepticism. May God grant it in His own time.

I am, yours truly,

JOHN GREIG,
President of the Anglo-Israel Association in Sunderland.

The lesson which has been taught to the Rev. A. A. Rees by his three Sunderland mentors ought to suffice. We find his views are contradicted, as their's are supported, by the Word of the living God. We trust this divine, and those who now think with him respecting the future of Judah's restoration to their land, will "pause and inquire." We are sure that if they do, they will see as we see—that Judah's return cannot be independent of Israel's—that Israel will be the chief, grand factor, feature, and figure of that return—that Israel is identified with the British, whom Mr. Rees really, but from his argument foolishly, allows, are the appointed agents to bring about that restoration: and that, such being the case, the British Israelites, with the Jews their brethren, will ere long be restored in triumph to their inheritance in glorious union, for "the LORD will go before them, and the God of Israel will be their rereward;" for "the redeemed of the Lord will return, and come with singing unto Zion, and everlasting joy shall be upon their head: they shall obtain gladness and joy, and sorrow and mourning shall flee away" (Isa. li. 11, lii. 11). Brethren, let us praise the Lord that we are Israel, and that ours is to be so glorious a future. Hallelujah!

A WORD OF WARNING AGAIN.

WE have received two or three protests from our friends regarding the use by Mr. Thos. Bales of an alleged unguarded expression in his paper, published in the BANNER, at page 166, No. 121, on "Identity Truth from the Stony Rock." It occurs in the second paragraph, first column, and is contained in the words, "Ere long the Identity will be regarded as a saving faith. Conviction will be brought home to the Rock, and from it will gush living waters."

When we received the article in question, we hesitated to publish the words "saving faith," lest it should be imagined by the perverse that Mr. Bales meant, and we sanctioned, the monstrous idea that the Identity per se could save the soul. That, our readers know, is a doctrine we abhor. The Rock and his correspondent allege we hold it. We deny the charge with horror. Nothing but the blood of Jesus Christ, the Son of God, can save the guilty soul of man before his offended Maker; whether Jew, Israelite, or Gentile, there is no difference.

An Israelite (in our sense) may, separated from Christ, be a spiritually lost Israelite, a son of Belial, as was Judas Iscariot, as were Ahab, Jehu, Demas, or any other wicked unrepenting Israelite of the Ten Tribes, whose record God's Word tells us was that of an "enemy" of Jehovah. A man, we hold, and always teach, may intellectually be perfectly persuaded in his own mind, and be able to prove to others, Scripturally and scientifically, that the British are Hebrews of the House of Joseph or Israel, and yet be himself cut off from "the seed of Abraham," be unconverted, "an alien from the true commonwealth of Israel," a child of the devil, and finally a lost soul. What, then, did Mr. Bales mean? What was our intention in letting the words stand, that "ere long the Identity will be regarded as a saving faith?" We think page 167 of the BANNER, No. 121, the very next page, in fact, to the one where Mr. Bales's article occurs, will give the clue. He meant what we mean—namely, that the Identity will be shortly regarded as a subject which accompanies and introduces salvation. By belief in it men will be compelled to call upon their God and plead AS ISRAEL the promises contained in Jer. xxxi. 7. They will ask the Lord for that salvation which "His" praying "people," "the remnant of Israel," so sorely need when they say, "O Lord, SAVE Thy people, the remnant of Israel." They will inquire of the Lord, AS ISRAEL, for the spiritual blessings promised in Jer. xxxi. 33, which are promised only to the House of Israel, and which, when they acknowledge their origin, they must receive, as God is true, to their great and universal blessing. On the acknowledgment of the Identity, and the arrival of the time when it is admitted as a fact by this nation and by the world at large, Judah will succeed to her blessings and thus fulfil Hosea. i. 11; and Jer. iii. 18.

Then only will "strong people" and "many nations" of the Gentiles also receive salvation in their masses, and thus prove what Mr. Bales means and says—namely, that the Identity will in its operation prove a "saving faith," leading to salvation in countless numbers of the sons and daughters of men, through the blood of the Redeemer of Israel, through the Saviour of the souls of sinners. We think we need not enlarge on this matter. The views of the BANNER, and its staff of writers, are surely by this time clear and distinct—i.e., that in the matter of the personal salvation of British Israelites, of Jews, and Gentile nations too, there is no difference whatsoever, and all must be cleansed by the precious blood of Christ, or perish everlastingly, because there is in fact no other remedy. But the Identity declared, and pleaded, has the promise from the

Digitized by Google

God of truth that it shall produce a condition of things (things accompanying salvation—Heb. vi. 9) which shall end in the conversion of every man, woman, and child of the British Anglo-Saxon races, as the immediate result (Heb. viii. 10—12); the conversion finally in Palestine of every son and daughter of Judah (Ezek. xxxvi. 25—38), and the conversion and salvation also of "many nations and strong people" among purely Gentile races, such in kind and so many in number, as we have never seen before.

Well may Mr. Bales declare, and we repeat, that the Identity so viewed will be a "saving," or "salvation bringing," faith; but always through the blood and precious purchase of our great Redeemer.

IDENTITY DIFFICULTIES ANSWERED.

Was Benjamin a Tribe of "The House of Israel?"

(Continued from page 177).

PART IV.

We think it would be advantageous to go over again the ground long since ably traversed by Mr. Hine in reference to the position of Benjamin in the Tribes. The clerical mind is, for the most part, firmly persuaded "that Benjamin was from the very beginning united to Judah, and was never reckoned as belonging to Israel of the Ten Tribes." It is also asserted generally, by several of our opponents, clerical as well as lay, that the Tribe specially mentioned in 1 Kings xi. 13, 31, 32, and 36, was not the Tribe of Benjamin at all, but the Tribe of Judah, which Tribe then included (they say) Benjamin, the latter being "merged" in the "thousands of Judah." Such is the view also of Matthew Henry, the commentator. Lately, further, in controversy with a lay opponent, the latter made the following statement, which may express the opinions of vast numbers who have not particularly looked into this question. "The fact is," he wrote, "when the term Judah was applied in the Scriptures to the 'kingdom,' it always included Benjamin, and this cannot be denied. I defy my opponent to prove that Benjamin ever was of Israel—that is, of the Ten-Tribed House. The Tribe was, of course, of the children of Israel, as the Tribe of Judah was also equally so named." We propose now to look into this puzzling matter, and try, if possible, to make it clear to the ordinary reader.

The first question which requires to be settled is, What Tribes belonged to the House of "Israel," and what to "Judah," before the great rupture took place after Solomon's death in B.C. 975? It is, of course, conceded that there were two Houses, "The House of Israel," and "the House" or Tribe of "Judah." The distinction of the "Houses," indeed, is clear from 2 Sam. ii. 10, 11, xii. 8; Zech. viii. 13, where "the House of Israel" and "the House of Judah" are named separately, and clearly distinguished. It will also be conceded that "the House of Joseph," or "Ephraim," and "the House of Isaac" or "Israel," are generally, in Bible language, synonymous (Amos v. 4, 6, 15, 25; vii. 16; Obed. 18; Hosea passim).

Such being the case, we refer to 2 Sam. ii. 9 as evidence that when Saul died, Benjamin, as a Tribe, was grouped not with the "House of Judah," over which David ruled seven and a-half years, but with Jezreel, Ephraim, Gilead, the Ashurites, and ALL Israel;" in fact, with the then Ten Tribes, but not with Judah. Again, when Saul was alive, it is stated in 1 Sam. ix. 21, that he claimed a pedigree from Benjamin, saying it was "the smallest of the Tribes of Israel." That this had no connection with Judah is certain, because only in the next chapter but one—that is, in 1 Sam. xi. 8—"Israel" and "Judah" are expressly distinguished and contrasted, the census of Israel being recorded as ten times that of Judah, or as 300,000 was to 30,000. St. Paul also, in A.D. 60 (Rom. xi. 1—5), claimed the same honourable descent from Benjamin as did Saul the king, and declared at the same time that that Tribe was of Israel, the House to which "Elias," the prophet of Israel, belonged; that family of the race, to which further the 7,000 faithful ones appertained who had "not bowed the knee to the image of Baal" (see 1 Kings xix. 18). But we have a further and direct evidence that Benjamin, before the rebellion, which took place in Rehoboam's time, was of "the House of Joseph," or of the Ten Tribes, and not of "the House of Judah," the Two. In 2 Sam. xix. 16, we find "Shimei, son of Gera, a BENJAMITE, which was of Bahurim," went "down with the men of Judah to meet King David," and begged pardon of the king for having previously "cursed" him (2 Sam. xvi. 5, 6). What did Shimei say? 2 Sam. xix. 20 tells us: "Thy servant," he cried, "doth know I have sinned. Therefore, behold, I am come the FIRST this day of all the HOUSE of Joseph, to go down and meet my lord the king." Thus, on Shimei's testimony, confirmed by other parts of God's Word, we must conclude (we are shut up, indeed, to the conclusion) that Benjamin, before the disruption, was not of Judah at all, but was distinctly of "the House of Joseph," or "Ephraim," which was "the House of Isaac," or "Israel," of "the Ten Tribes."

But we can look at the matter in another light, and review the facts of the case which led up to the joinder of Benjamin to Judah, after the rebellion occurred in B.C. 975. To do this properly it will be needful to enumerate the Tribes composing the "kingdom," or "House of Israel"—"the Ten (plus one) Tribes" (Gen. xlviii. 22; 2 Sam. xix. 43; 1 Kings xi. 35).

These were—1, Reuben; 2, Simeon; 3, Dan; 4, Naphtali; 5, Gad; 6, Asher; 7, Issachar; 8, Zebulun; 9, Joseph, or Ephraim, with Manasseh; and 10, Benjamin.—Total eleven. We do not include Judah, for that Tribe, all allow, belonged to the other House; and Levi is also omitted from this list of the Ten or eleven Tribes, for a similar reason.

We are asked sometimes why we generally omit Manasseh from this catalogue? The fact is, Manasseh was really an eleventh Tribe, and belonged to the Ten, or "House of Joseph" (Gen. xlviii. 22; Joshua xvii. 17, 18). But as it is never enumerated in God's Word unless either Joseph be omitted (as in Ezek. xlviii.), or unless Dan is passed over (as in Rev. vii.), and as this Tribe was destined (see Gen. xlviii. 19) to become a "separate" and "great people," distinct from the other "Ten Tribes," we are right in generally omitting Manasseh from the original list of Tribes of which Joseph formed one-twelfth.

Referring again to the above list of the eleven Tribes of Israel, we ask our readers carefully to peruse 1 Kings xi. 11, 13, 32, 35, 36. From verses 11—13, it is clearly shown that while the kingdom (being Ten plus one Tribes, verse 35) is to be rent out of the hand of Solomon's son, a portion of that kingdom—i.e., of the eleven Tribes—was to be left to Rehoboam. The portion so left was to be ONE TRIBE (i.e., eleven minus one). Verse 32 is more explicit still. It states that this one Tribe is to be one "out of all the Tribes of Israel." There having been, as we have remarked, eleven Tribes of "the kingdom," and ONE being deducted from them, the remainder was to be "Ten Tribes," or "the kingdom" (verse 35). Now, let the reader judge which Tribe must be the one indicated in 1 Kings xi. 11—36, to fulfil the exigency of the narrative we have given us in 1 Kings xii. 21—24. The Israelite Tribe of "Joseph's House" selected was, of course, Benjamin. That Tribe being henceforth attached to "the kingdom of Judah," they were constantly called, and called themselves, "Jews," or "men of Judah." This obtained all through New Testament times, till during Titus's siege of Jerusalem they fled from the doomed city, as Jer. vi. 1 predicted and directed them to do, and thus caused the "Brotherhood between Judah and Israel" to be then and there broken finally (Zech. xii. 14). Benjamin was evidently joined to Judah temporarily, from B.C. 975 till A.D. 70, in order that the Lord Jesus Christ might have a "light," lamp, or candle always before Him, to reflect the Gospel light throughout the then known "earth," and that David's seed might always reign, or rule, over the Ten-Tribed House of Israel (wholly, or in part), as the Lord solemnly promised David should be the case (2 Sam. vii. 12; 1 Kings viii. 20; Jer. xxxiii. 17).

Digitized by Google

Escaped from the destruction of Jerusalem, the Tribe of Benjamin, in some way history does not disclose, made their way (we believe) across Europe to the Baltic, whence issuing, 1,000 years after the escape from Jerusalem, they entered England as the Normans, "fell upon the spoil" like the "ravening wolf" (Gen. xlix. 27), and are present to-day as a distinct people, whose origin, however, ethnographical writers tell us, was precisely the same as that of their brethren, the Anglo-Saxons, the Frisians, and the Danes—therefore, we conclude Israelitish.

(To be continued).

A FORM OF PRAYER FOR OUR ARMIES GONE FORTH IN ZULULAND AND AFGHANISTAN,

TO FIGHT THE ENEMIES OF ISRAEL.

In August, 1857, when the Indian Mutinies were at their height, the Bishop of London issued a circular to the clergy of his diocese pointing out the need of public and private prayer for "our distant fellow-countrymen in that their hour of extreme peril." He circulated with his letter a form of prayer suitable to that occasion, and recommended his clergy to use it throughout his diocese before the litany and the prayer for all conditions of men. Surely in these times, too, Israel ought to be as one man at God's throne of grace, imploring Him to give us timely help in this our day of need? Why have not our Archbishops and bishops done now for the brave soldiers and sailors fighting for their Queen and country in Zululand and Afghanistan what the good Bishop of London, in 1857, recommended then? We feel it ought to be done, and rather than that the occasion should go by without some effort to draw His people in supplication to the God of Israel to help them in this time of suspense, perplexity, and correction (in measure), we venture to copy below a portion of the form of prayer issued in 1857, omitting only such sentences as were specially applicable then to the circumstances of the Mutinies, and are not suited to the present distress. We trust all our friends will make use of the following, at least in part during family worship, and if it be possible that our clerical friends will also adopt, with consent of the bishops, this or some other form of words asking blessing from on high on our suffering fellow-countrymen now exposed to deadly peril in Zululand and elsewhere.

A PRAYER FOR OUR COUNTRYMEN AND SOLDIERY IN SOUTH AFRICA AND AFGHANISTAN, WHICH MAY BE USED IN PRIVATE OR FAMILY WORSHIP.

LET US PRAY.

O Lord of all power, who stillest the tumults of the people and the raging of the heathen, and in whose hands are the issues of life and death for all men, we beseech Thee at this time to look down with Fatherly compassion upon our countrymen in South Africa and in Afghanistan, now exposed to great and unforeseen dangers. Thou knowest, Lord, our secret as well as our open sins. Thou knowest how far by our neglect of privileges and of the duties we owe to those over whom Thou hast given us to exercise influence we have provoked Thy judgments. Have mercy, we beseech Thee, for Thy Son Jesus Christ's sake, upon us, and upon our distant armies, and visit us not according to our sins. Still the anxieties of us all, teaching us to wait on Thee in faith. O Lord, we beseech Thee to strengthen those whom Thou hast armed to defend our territories and our interests in South Africa and North-west India. Guide our rulers in these perilous days, enduing them with wisdom and with energy, and make those who have to execute their orders vigorous and brave in the discharge of their duties. Maintain, if it seem good to Thee, and restore the power and influence of our country over all the less civilised Tribes of the earth which Thou hast committed to our sway, and give us each, henceforward, both rulers and people, a deeper sense of our Christian responsibilities, as raised to a high and commanding place among the nations. We ask all for Thy dear Son Jesus Christ's sake, our Lord. Amen.

Our Father, &c. O Lord, arise, help us, and deliver us for Thy name's sake. O Lord, hear us. O Christ, hear us. God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Ghost, have mercy on us, and upon our distant fellow-countrymen, and save them and us, THE REMNANT OF ISRAEL, now and for evermore. Amen.

THE REV. B. WREY SAVILE, M.A., RECTOR OF SHILLINGFORD, EXETER, REFUTES THE REV. J. B. CLIFFORD'S THEORY OF THE HAMITIC ORIGIN OF THE SAXONS.

The Rev. J. B. Clifford, after declining the offer of the Rev. H. Marriott, Curate of Amberley, in Gloucestershire, to discuss "the Israelitish question in a friendly debate," evidently on the principle that discretion was the better part of valour, has at length fired his bolt, which was, doubtless, intended to demolish the Anglo-Israelites; and if our opponents have no better advocate, there is little fear of any injury having been done to their cause by his recent pamphlet, entitled the Anglo-Saxons and the Israelites. It is, however, a lamentable spectacle to see a professed Evangelical clergyman exposing himself in the way Mr. Clifford has done. We do not refer merely to the ignorance of the subject on which he writes (which is very great), or to the errors which abound throughout the work in question, but to the spirit which he displays. What can be a stronger proof of a tottering cause which he seeks to bolster up by writing of opponents in such terms as these: "I can only say this, that I never met, in all the records of infidelity or Popery, with more hideous blasphemy. If you are an Anglo-Israelite, and are not horrified, you must be in a most awful condition?" (p. 36). "The great apostle of the Anglo-Israelites vomits forth his venom against God's ancient chosen race" (the Jewish people), p. 40, &c., &c. Bearing in mind our Master's example, who, "when He was reviled, reviled not again," on this head we need say nothing more than quote the well-known anecdote current in Westminster-hall of a lawyer receiving his brief with the significant words added: "No case; abuse the defendant."

We do not propose, on the present occasion, to do more than show that Mr. Clifford has not even reached the elementary stage in the investigation of the Anglo-Israel question, whether viewed from the standpoint of prophecy or ethnology. If there be one point more clear than another in the whole range of Scripture prophecy, it is that which the patriarch Noah delivered respecting the descendants of his three sons, and is the one which we should the most readily adduce to convince the infidel of the error of his ways. It may be thus briefly expressed as foretelling the prosperity of Shem, the utter debasement of Ham, and the supremacy of Japheth. There is reason to believe that all the four monarchies, which were predicted by Daniel as bearing rule during "the times of the Gentiles," belonged to races sprung from Japheth, and it is no slight testimony to the truth of the "sure word of prophecy," that the words which the Roman historian, Livy, puts into the mouth of the great Carthagenian hero, Hannibal, at his final overthrow by the Romans—"Agnosco fortunam Carthaginis"—were fulfilled to their bitter end.

Digitized by Google

Relying on the late Stanley Faber, for whom we entertain a sincere respect as a learned and excellent Protestant, but who wrote at a time when ethnography was little studied, and when the archœology of Egypt and Assyria was entirely unknown, Mr. Clifford hastily adopts Faber's unlucky speculation, that "the Goths and Saxons of Europe, like the Pelasgic founders of the Greek and Roman States, were in reality not the children of Japheth, as many have erroneously supposed, but the posterity of Cush, the son of Ham!" (p. 16). Putting aside the Anglo-Israel question, we feel confident that had Faber lived to the present day, with our increased knowledge of the subject of race, he would never have committed himself to such an unscientific statement as this. It is only to be paralleled by a statement put forth by the Rev. R. Cornall, Mr. Clifford's colleague, both in hostility to the Anglo-Israel question, and in reviling those who accept it, that the Saxons have probably sprung from Shishak, King of Egypt, and, therefore, a descendant of Ham! a theory so repugnant to common sense that it may be safely left to refute itself, inasmuch as it resembles another wild theory put forth by Mr. John Hampden, and maintained with similar violence of language, that the Copernician system contradicts Revelation, and that the earth is as flat as a pancake!

We have only time to call attention to this astounding error of Mr. Clifford, that we Saxons are descendants of Ham! We write the term, "we Saxons," advisedly, because an erratic speculator, one Dr. T. Nicholas, had the temerity to tell the British Association, seven years ago, that "we were not Anglo-Saxons at all"—a saying which appears to justify the remark of the late Hugh Miller, that "Never yet was there a fancy so wild and extravagant, but there have been men bold enough to dignify it with the name of philosophy, and ingenious enough to find reasons for the propriety of the name."

Mr. Clifford, however, admits that we are Anglo-Saxons if he will not admit that we possess any Israelitish blood, and, therefore, we have only to point out to him the impossibility of accepting his theory that the Saxons are descended from Ham.

First, let us consider what the Saxons say themselves on the subject. It is just a thousand years ago that the greatest of our Anglo-Saxon monarchs, King Alfred, was laying the foundation of the greatest monarchy, in the true sense of the term, which the world has ever seen. Our Alfred, or "England's Darling," as he is sometimes called, has earned the epithet of "great" in more senses than one. He was great as a warrior, a statesman, of cultured intellect, and, better than all, a man of personal piety. In his time, the famous Saxon Chronicle was completed, copies of which, in their original form, still exist in the University Libraries and the British Museum. It is impossible to say how early the pedigree of the Saxon race was entered in writing, but the words of the late Sir Francis Palgrave, in his History of Normandy, are peculiarly pertinent to this subject. He observes that "Genealogies entrusted to memory and known by heart, are written in a living record, compared to which the herald's roll is chaff and straw. Flattery cannot interpolate a link in such pedigrees; ignorance cannot corrupt the manuscript; hostility cannot destroy the testimony, except by the total extirpation of the witnesses."

Such is the character of the pedigree of our Saxon King Alfred, as set forth in the Saxon Chronicle. It is traced up link by link, though many generations are omitted just as some are in the Evangelist's record of Christ's genealogy to the patriarch Shem the son of Noah. We thus have the best and clearest proof we can have on the subject, that the Saxons were not descended from Ham as Mr. Clifford asserts, but were clearly a Semitic race.

Mr. Clifford, in addition to asserting that the Saxons are descended from Ham and not from Shem, declares that "the unanimous testimony (of all the historians whom he had consulted) amounts to this, that the Sycæ (? Sacæ) or Saxons were a most ancient race of the Scythians, existing 2,000 years before the Christian era, long before the birth of Abraham, and ages before the Israelites had an existence" (p. 26). As Abraham's birth took place, according to Clinton, the prince of modern chronologers, before B.C. 2130, and the Saxons came into existence, according to Mr. Clifford, "long before" that event took place; assuming the epithet "long" to represent at least three or four centuries, we are driven to the conclusion that the Saxons came into existence about the time that Noah and his family were shut up in the ark; or perhaps Mr. Clifford's "long" may mean a still longer period, and thus the Saxons may be pronounced, as a learned scientist of Torquay, unrestrained by Biblical teaching, once assured us was the case with the Esquimaux, that they were an ante-diluvian race, as they came into existence before the Noachian Flood!

Now what does sober history say on this point? Herodotus, writing of Darius' invasion of Scythia, B.C. 520, says that the Scythians call themselves "the youngest of all nations, as from the time of their first leader to the invasion of their country by Darius, is a period of a thousand years neither more or less." Now it is rather a singular coincidence that in the year 1520 B.C., Joshua was ruling the children of Israel, who had then just obtained possession of the land of Canaan, according to the Hebrew chronology. Strabo relates how "the Sacæ got possession of the most fertile part of Armenia, and that, though a wandering colony of nomades, they were an eminently righteous people." Diodorus mentions also that "the Sacæ sprang from a very despicable origin, settled near the Araxes on the borders of Media, but that eventually they had obtained a vast and glorious Empire."

To the above testimony we may add that of Sir Henry Rawlinson, probably the first Semitic scholar of the day, and this testimony, as given in his brother's very valuable edition of Herodotus, is as follows:—

"The term Scyth or Sacan is probably not a real ethnic name, but merely a title given to all Nomades, like the Ilyat of modern Persia. From the mere term Scyth, therefore, we cannot conclude anything as to the ethnic character of a people. In the Babylonian transcripts of the Achœmenian inscriptions, the term which replaces the Saka of the Persian and Scythic columns is Gimiri—a term which elsewhere always means 'the Tribes.' . . . . The ethnic name of Gimiri first occurs in the Cuneiform records of the time of Darius Hystaspes, as the Semitic equivalent of the Arian name Saka. The nation spoken of contained at this time two divisions, the Eastern branch, named Humurga, and the Tigrakhuda or 'Archers,' who were conterminous with the Assyrians. The Babylonian title of Gimiri, as applied to the Sacæ, is not a vernacular, but a foreign title . . . . The Sacæ or Scythians, who were termed Gimiri by their Semitic neighbours, first appear in the Cuneiform inscriptions as a substantive people under Esarhaddon, about B.C. 684" (Rawlinson's Herodotus, i., 196; iii. 150; iv. 170).

We have said enough now to disprove Mr. Clifford's double contention that the Sacæ or Saxons were of the race of Ham, and in existence as a people "long before the birth of Abraham."

B. W. SAVILE.

ERRATUM.—The following line at the very top of the first column, page 194, of last week's BANNER, No. 123, having by accident been omitted in "the making up" of the issue, our readers are requested to supply it as follows:—"To the Fijis, and what he says is worth noting and remembering."

Digitized by Google

Review.

The Anglo-Saxons and the Israelites. By the Rev. J. B. Clifford, M.A., Vicar of St. Matthew's, Kingsdown, Bristol. Price fourpence. Hamilton, Adams & Co., 32, Paternoster-row; J. E. Chillcott, Bristol.

FIRST NOTICE. BY THE EDITOR.

THE Rev. J. B. Clifford, of Bristol, in the above pamphlet, takes up the gauntlet, and undertakes to expose, destroy, and utterly to annihilate the heretical belief in our Israelite origin, largely entertained by his own congregation and others. The booklette (one of 43 pages) is addressed to his "friends" (and we presume these are for the most part those in his own parish), who, he admits, "take an intense interest" in the subject. We do not propose, in this preliminary notice, to do more than glance at the spirit and tone of this attack. We shall, as we have opportunity later on, take up the ground Mr. Clifford traverses, and examine in detail, with the aid of our friends, the various points he makes against us, historically, ethnographically, Scripturally, chronologically.

For the present we must pass in review some points characteristic of the writer, which come out rather strongly in this the first public attempt of the Rev. Vicar of St. Matthew's, Kingsdown, to suppress a belief which is getting rather too rampant in his own Church under his very pulpit. After taking the Right Rev. Bishop of Rangoon roundly to task for various high offences in reference to the interpretation of Scripture to be found, he alleges, at pages 88, 141, and other parts of the Anglo-Israel Post Bag, he passes on to denounce the editor of this journal (though not by name) for the view he alone has from the first held and maintained against all comers, that Psa. ii. 8, rightly interpreted and translated exactly as it is expressed in Hebrew, is the record of God's "gift," at His Son's petition, "of the heathen to His inheritance" (Nakila)—that is, to the Twelve Tribes of Israel—and "of the uttermost parts of the earth to his possession" (his Akhuza)—a name applied to the same people.

We are not going now to vindicate our view from Mr. Clifford's animadversions. We shall do so hereafter. We may pro hac vice allow that we may be utterly wrong in our interpretation; we may be quite mistaken. If wrong, we have been misled by Ezek. xliv. 28, wherein the two words, Nakila and Akhuza, are applied by the Lord to the same object (Himself), and also by 1 Kings viii. 51—53; Deut. ix. 26—29, and other passages, wherein "Thy Nakila" is the copyright name applied constantly, and almost invariably given, to God's people Israel in the Word, never to Gentiles. But what does our rev. opponent say of us? Quoting the then Canon Titcomb, who appears to have written to Mr. Clifford some severe criticisms regarding the view we took of Psa. ii. 8 (though to ourselves the Bishop has never breathed, even to this moment, one single word of warning, or caution, or dissent regarding this passage), the author of the pamphlet under review, at pages 35 and 36, denounces us in the following violent terms:—

"Canon Titcomb says the application 'by his fellow-Anglo-Israelites for example of Psa. ii. 8 to Israel, always horrifies me. The words to which he refers are these, 'Ask of Me and I will give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession.' And so this glorious promise was made to Israel! Well, look at the two previous verses:—'I have set My king upon My holy hill of Zion. I will declare the decree: the Lord hath said unto Me, Thou art My Son; this day have I begotten thee. Ask of Me, and I shall give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession.' I can only say this, that I never met, in all the records of infidelity or Popery, with more hideous blasphemy. If you are an Anglo-Israelite, and are not horrified, you must be in a most awful condition. I urged Canon Titcomb openly to denounce this awful blasphemy. He took no notice of my entreaty, but still remained an Anglo-Israelite! And so do others, who, no doubt, would tell you they are jealous for the honour of the King who says, 'I will not give My glory to another.' And yet these people give the glory promised to 'the only begotten Son of God,' to Anglo-Israel—that is, to themselves!

"Tell me, Is not this 'an Anti-Christ?' Are not these men blasphemers? Are you not horrified when you read such dreadful things? And can you still read their awful books and be identified with them, by attending meetings, and so giving your countenance to this 'mystery of iniquity'—the most subtle which Satan has contrived in our day—for depriving Christ of His glory, and giving it to a company of miserable creatures 'who say they are Israelites and are not?' Oh, my friends, separate yourselves, I pray you from the tents of these men! If you do not, you are partakers of their sins, and are giving countenance to a system which exalts itself against Him whom the Father 'delights to honour.' These people tell me the system is spreading far and wide, and that soon the princes of this world will glory in it. Well, I can easily believe that it will be so, for it is written in the second Psalm, 'The kings of the earth set themselves, and the rulers take counsel together against the Lord and against His anointed.'"

So far our rev. opponent. We cannot trust ourselves to comment on the above. We must leave it to our readers' judgment. The writer is a minister of Christ, whose office is to set an example to the laity of moderation, of love, of charity, of Christian consideration, of tenderness, and of that lowly grace which "thinketh no evil."

The quotation appears to our view one vast invective, written with the malignant spirit of a Pope who would burn his adversary if he could, and who stays not to inquire if he may not himself be in error, but passes judgment at once with the authority of an autocrat. He calls the offender (ourselves) a blasphemer; anti-Christ; a writer of "more hideous error than he ever met with in all the records of infidelity or Popery (!);" our books awful books; their contents "dreadful things;" the very "mystery of iniquity;" "the most subtle device Satan" ever "contrived in our day (!);" and ourselves and fellow-believers no better than Korah, Dathan, and Abiram waiting for the earth to open and swallow us up, while, we suppose, he and the other holy ones escape our merited doom!

We gravely ask, Is this the style of argument—nay, Is this the kind of invective—which a Christian minister—one of over three-score years and ten (page 34, see note)—should use to Christian unoffending men? Can we or our views be put down by such weapons as these? The Rev. Mr. Clifford may be sure of this—that his violence against us personally (which we disdain to resent in kind, nay, we should be ashamed of such a course) will do more to spread our views, and to attract notice to them, than any other line of conduct he could possibly have pursued against us. We thank him, therefore, for the character of his present attack; and pointing to the unchristian, violent tone of the latter portion of his work, we ask our readers candidly, and his own parishioners and congregation in particular, if they will be led by one who so clearly is blinded by his own prejudices, or whether, rejecting his Popish tyranny, and worse than Popish invective, they will not, as Englishmen and Englishwomen, prefer to look into this glorious subject for themselves, and decide quietly, rationally, prayerfully, and as in God's sight, for themselves, if our Identity be a Scriptural truth or a man-invented lie?

(To be continued.)

Correspondence.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—In the BANNER for April 9, you have an interesting article upon the birth, death, and marriage rate in England, compared with the rate in Germany, Austria, France, and Italy. In the tables you quote, England comes out only fourth in the list, as far as the birth-rate is concerned; and although the residual population is greatest in England, still so great a disparity in the actual number of births looks badly, and will not be considered quite satisfactory, if we are to consider ourselves the most prolific race in the world. May we not, however, find a probable explanation of this disparity in the fact that the acts regulating the registration of births, in the kingdom, leave a large number of births untouched? The compulsory registration is, at present, more a name than a reality, which is evaded and neglected by many, and unknown to probably still more. Probably the death-rate is tolerably accurate, for many reasons will compel persons to declare a death—not the least of these reasons being their inability to bury without the certificate. But I venture to say that there are many births in our large towns which never find their record at the registrars. It is not unlikely that in Germany and Austria the surveillance is closer; hence the results in the tables which you have quoted. Some interesting discoveries and verifications might be made in this matter by comparing the results of the census of 1881 with the returns which had been declared at the various registrars. With the constantly over-flowing population of these islands, I cannot but think that our birth-rate, if accurately returned, would show us to be in advance both of Austria and of Germany.

Yours very faithfully,

A. J. J. CACHEMAILLE.

The Parsonage, Oldham, April 15, 1879.

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements

(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O.O payable at Ludgate-circus.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed :—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

NEW BOOKS AND NEW EDITIONS.

Now Ready.

THE PROMISES TO ABRAHAM,
WITH
SELECT REFERENCES AND EXPLANATORY NOTES,
To which is added an article entitled,
"ISRAEL AMONG THE GENTILES."

By W. S. CAVILL.

Reprinted from the pages of "Life from the Dead," with Emendations and Corrections.

Price Sixpence, or free by post, Sevenpence.

London: Published by ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, and may be had of all Booksellers.

New pamphlet by Philo-Israel.
Will shortly be published, price 2d.

THE HISTORICAL, ETHNIC, AND PHILOLOGICAL ARGUMENTS in PROOF of BRITISH IDENTITY with the TEN LOST TRIBES OF ISRAEL, clearly and simply stated.
By PHILO-ISRAEL.
London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane; and Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

This day. Price 2d. Post free 2½d.

MANASSEH AND THE UNITED STATES. An important Essay delivered before the "Lost Israel Identification Society," by the Rev. Joseph Wild, D.D., at Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, New York.

CONTENTS:—The Fulness of the Gentiles set in—For whom did God intend America—The Origin of the United States—The Footsteps of Ephraim and Manasseh—The Will of Jacob made to Ephraim and Manasseh—Manasseh a People, and a Great People—Manasseh's Birthtime of Separation—Out of nearly Sixty Conquered Colonies the only one England ever Lost was that of Manasseh (America)—The Great Seal of the United States—Manasseh was brought up at the Door of the Pyramid, &c., &c.
London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.; and of any Bookseller.

New and Revised Edition.

THE "NEW OLD STORY," an Introduction to a Marvellous Puzzle, expressly written for children, with a Short and Simple Account of the Great Pyramid, explaining the measurements, &c., so as to be easily understood by the young. By A E I. W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane.

Second edition, just published. Price 1s. 6d.; Cloth, gilt edges, 2s. 6d. Post free for 20 or 33 stamps.

THE PILLAR OF WITNESS. A Scriptural View of the GREAT PYRAMID. By the late Commander B. W. TRACEY, R.N.
W. H Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

DEAFNESS CURED, NOISES IN THE EARS, &c.
SPECIAL OFFER TO THE DEAF.

THE REV. E. J. SILVERTON having discovered that there are tens of thousands who are unable to obtain his 11s. Box of Aurial Remedy which has cured so many persons of Deafness and Noises in the Ears, &c., begs now to offer a 2s. 6d. Box of the Medicine, so as to put it within the reach of all. This arrangement is specially made to meet the deaf world. With every box of medicine will be presented the Rev. E. J. Silverton's "Health Advocate," containing valuable advice and information that everyone ought to know. Post Office Orders for 2s. 6d. to E. J. SILVERTON, Minister of Exeter Hall Church, Nottingham, or stamps, 2s. 8d.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

THE ANNUAL MEETING

WILL BE HELD IN

EXETER HALL (LOWER ROOM), STRAND,

ON

MONDAY EVENING, MAY 19th, 1879.

The following Gentlemen are expected to attend and take part in the Meeting :—

COLONEL BENTINCK. PHILO-ISRAEL (E. W. BIRD, ESQ.).
REV. C. W. HICKSON, M.A., Vicar of St. Bartholomew's, Bristol.
REV. A. J. J. CACHEMAILLE, M.A., Vicar of St. Mary's, Oldham.
W. H. PETERS, ESQ., J.P. D. A. ONSLOW, ESQ., J.P.
CHARLES STUBBS, ESQ., B.A. BENTINCK CANNEY, ESQ., C. HORNER, ESQ.

The Chair will be taken at Seven o'clock by

ADMIRAL DUNN.

The Members will meet in the Committee Room at Exeter Hall at 6 o'clock previous to the Public Meeting. To this Meeting Members only will be admitted by Ticket.

TICKETS for Reserved Seats to the Public Meeting can be obtained gratis upon application to the Secretary at the Office, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

JAMES BILLINGTON, Hon. Sec.

PUBLIC HALL, GRAVESEND.

A COURSE OF
THREE LECTURES
Will be delivered (D.V.) in the above Hall, as follows:—

Wednesday, May 14th—
REV. J. BILLINGTON.
Subject—
"ARE ENGLISHMEN ISRAELTIES?"

Wednesday, May 21st—
DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, Esq., J.P.
Subject—
"THE STONE KINGDOM OF DANIEL."

Wednesday, May 28th—
CHARLES STUBBS, Esq., B.A.
Subject—
"OUR INHERITANCE IN THE PYRAMID."

The Chair will be taken at 8 o'clock each evening.

Admission Free. Enquirers are cordially invited.

Tickets for Reserved Seats may be had gratis, of Mr. Marriner, Stationer, etc., 7, Milton-road, Gravesend.

At the close of each Lecture a Collection will be taken in aid of the Funds of the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association.

Office: 20, Warwick Lane, London, E.C.

Just published.

THE COMING COLLISION BETWEEN ENGLAND AND RUSSIA PREDICTED BY EZEKIEL; forming a Proof of England with the Israel of Prophecy. Price 1s., post free 1s. 1d.
W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C. List of works on the Identity forwarded post free upon application.

WOOLS! WOOLS! WOOLS! Cheapest and Best. White and Black Berlin, Single and Double, 3s. 6d. per pound. Best quality Ice Wools, all Colours, 5½. per ounce ball. All other Wools at proportionate prices. Shetland, Andalusian, Fleecy, and Bonne Mere Wools. Welsh, Scotch, Peacock Victoria, and other Yarns. Crewel Filoselle Silk. M. WHELLENS, Wholesale and Retail Wool Warehouse, 3, 5, & 6, QUEEN'S TERRACE, CAMDEN ROAD, LONDON.
Send for Price List and Sampler, which will be forwarded free on application.

LADIES' SILK SCARVES, price 1s. The choicest Silk Scarf ever offered. All Colours; richly brocaded ends. Send stamps for a sample.
M. WHELLENS, 5 & 6, Queen's-terrace, Camden-road, London, N.

LECTURE HALL, ST. AUBYN'S ROAD, UPPER NORWOOD.

A COURSE OF
THREE LECTURES
Will be delivered (D.V.) in the above Hall, as follows:—

Tuesday, May 13th,
REV. J. BILLINGTON.
Subject:—"ARE ENGLISHMEN ISRAELITES?"
Chairman: COLONEL BENTINCK.

Tuesday, May 20th,
CHARLES STUBBS, Esq., B.A.,
Subject:—"OUR INHERITANCE IN THE PYRAMID."
Chairman: BENTINCK CANNEY, Esq.

Thursday, May 29th,
DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, Esq., J.P.,
Subject:—"THE STONE KINGDOM OF DANIEL."
Chairman: DR. P. H. ROE.

The Chair will be taken at 7.30 each evening.

Admission Free. Enquirers are cordially invited.

At the close of each Lecture a Collection will be taken in aid of the Funds of the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association.

Office:—20, Warwick Lane, London, E.C.

HASTINGS AND ST. LEONARDS ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION. Auxiliary to the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association.

President:—
Lieut.-Col. W. H. LARKINS, Dymock, Ore.
Treasurer:—
Mr. COULTHWAITE, St. Andrew's Schools.
Hon. Secretaries:—
Mr. B. SARGENT, 37, London Road, St. Leonards.
Mr. J. R. MITCHELL, 52, St. Andrew's Road, Hastings.
Committee:—
Messrs. WHITEMAN, W. DUNGEY, KENT, PRYOR, R. GREEN

BANNER OF ISRAEL. VOL. II.
Now ready, price 7s., of all Booksellers.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, 5, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW WEDNESDAY, MAY 14, 1879. [All Rights Reserved.]

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. III. No. 125. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, MAY 21. 1879. [ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

PAGE
The Vial Poured Out In Russia 205
The Rev. Canon Blake Brownrigg, Incumbent of St. John's, Launceston, Tasmania, Does Battle for Israel 206
The Chosen People.—Part I. A Lecture by John T. Gott 207
The Evidence Given by the Services of the Church of England as to Identity. By Major H. A. Tracey, R.A 209
The Rev. Canon Hoare on England and "The Jews." 209
Review of the Rev. J. B. Clifford's Pamphlet.—Part II. By the Editor 210
Correspondence 211

THE VIAL POURED OUT IN RUSSIA.

IN our leading article of the 26th March, 1879, No. 117, we described the state of Europe, nay, of the whole world, as full of anxieties, disturbing elements, perplexities, pessimism, and all those "confusions" which betoken that state of things that the Apocalypse leads us to expect just at this crisis of the world's history before the coming of the "great God and our Saviour" Jesus Christ. The vial has been, or is about to be, poured out "into the air," and the resultant "voices, thunderings, and lightnings" are what we are hearing and seeing now. The state of Germany is bad; France is watching and waiting for the time when a war of revenge shall restore to her her departed provinces and military prestige; Egypt is in strong crisis; the British Empire in India and South Africa, as well as in Canada, is agitated. Strikes and trade disputes are paralysing our commerce and national prosperity at home; but all these miseries are as nothing to the mischief which has been brewing and is now come to a head in the Socialist conspiracy, called Nihilism, throughout the Russian Empire. The attempt on the life of the Czar, happily averted, was but the climax of a "long series of outrages," which was, if successful, to have inaugurated a revolution or reign of terror, whereby a down-trodden and suffering people hoped to achieve their political freedom like those who occupy the West of Europe. What has been the result? The Government of all the Russias has placed six of the most important districts of the Empire under martial law, which The Times describes as tantamount to placing them under no law at all! The districts of St. Petersburg, Charkoff, Odessa, Moscow, Kieff, and Warsaw, are declared subject to the powers of irresponsible military chiefs, or Governor-Generals, whose commissions enable them "to order the arrest of any persons whatever on their own judgment and responsibility, to suppress temporarily or permanently any newspapers or periodicals, should they appear to follow subversive tendencies, and generally to adopt such measures as they may consider necessary for the preservation of the public peace." This measure, in short, abolishes until further notice all civil rights in the districts to which it applies. Every man and woman who becomes open to the suspicion of "subversive tendencies" is liable to be brought instantly before a court-martial, and either shot or banished without appeal. The army is at one stroke made master of the life and property of Russian subjects, and a complete and unmitigated military despotism is established.

What has given rise to all these terrible engines for repression? Something "in the air!" something intangible! a conspiracy ramifying the whole Empire, "which stretches from the Baltic and the White Sea to the Black Sea and the Caspian; which counts 19,000 working members, besides numberless agents who have taken the oath of loyalty" to the secret organisation, in all grades and classes of the community! Anyone who has read the paper on "The Russian Revolutionists" taken from the Cologne Gazette, and published in the outer sheet of The Times of April 22nd, 1879 (also another on the 1st of May following), will see that over Russia the angel "has poured out his vial," and that the revolutionary "sore," which has its origin in "the unclean spirit like a frog from the mouth of the dragon," has burst out like a plague upon the whole Russian Empire. The objects of this conspiracy tell of its Satanic unclean origin! They are assassination, murder, violence, terrorism. It professes "to do evil that good may come." It is straight, therefore, from the armoury of the evil one, a curse permitted by our God, and one which His Word leads us to expect just at this crisis, when the drama of the world's history is about to conclude, when the restoration of Israel and Judah to their land draws near. It is worth while to read the Times' precis of this admirable résumé of the facts, and we present it to our readers, quoting from the leader of the 22nd April:

For twelve months, we are told, the Russian Socialists have been carrying on the most audacious agitation. A secret press has been set up, which has evaded all attempts at discovery; and by its means bills, placards, and pamphlets of the most revolutionary character have been circulated throughout Russian society, from the highest to the lowest. "The army was deluged with them; the labourer found them in his pocket in the morning." At length a journal has been published, called Land and Liberty, which assumes, apparently with good reason, the character of the official gazette of this revolutionary movement. It does not scruple to avow direct responsibility for the recent assassinations. It speaks as the organ of a "National Revolutionary Committee" which is resolved to suppress

Digitized by Google

"the Third Division," or the private Chancellery of the Emperor, and to sweep away the Court camarilla with which he is surrounded. As many as two hundred persons are thus marked out, and it is declared they must either be removed from their offices or be put to death. According to the writer, this paper and the committee for which it speaks, have allies in all the departments of the Government service, including the army. The Administration is unable to suppress the conspiracy, because unable to come face to face with it, and it has completely terrorized Russian society. It constitutes a secret confederacy which stretches over the greater part of Russia. It is well supplied with money, and it is as unscrupulous as it is determined in the measures it adopts

Such, then, are the facts! What will our opponents say to them? Why is our own land so completely shielded from these social democratic sores? and why are the nations of the Continent so constantly afflicted by them? First, France, in her terrible revolution at the end of the last century, was scourged with this trouble. Germany is suffering from a grievous outbreak of the same woe at the present moment; Spain is tied and bound with the chains of a vile Papal tyranny; Italy is infidel, ready to welcome the inroads of the unclean frog, destined like an evil spirit to pervade her masses, and drive them mad. Russia, we see already, is in the throes of a violent outbreak of this political Satanic disorder, which God's Word so graphically describes in Rev. xvi. 13—17. But what causes this difference? Our Identity with Israel is the only reason why our land is safe from the violent outbreaks of this national disease that is so afflicting our Gentile neighbours! The unclean spirits like frogs go out "unto the kings of the earth and of the whole world to gather them to the battle of that great day of God Almighty" (Rev. xvi. 13). What that "great gathering" is to be, and its exclusive Gentile composition, is plainly told us by Zeph. iii. 8 and Joel iii. 2. To bring the Gentile nations to judgment is the object of the whole visitation, and from that Israel is free as air (Zeph. iii. 9—20).

Reader! Learn from this to bless God for your Israelitish origin! It gives you, nationally, immunity from the terrible blasts of Satanic wrath such as that now permitted by the Lord in Russia; it exempts you from the inroads of a Socialistic infidelity; which has eaten out vital Protestant religion from the hearts of Spain, of France, of Germany, and of Italy, till nought remains but the dead corpse of the once pure and Gospel faith of these lands. Even our secular journalists and our statesmen, who only look to the maxims of the world and regard not God's Word as their rule, see the difference between our own happy condition as a nation, and that of the continental Gentiles. Lord Salisbury, in his speech on the political situation, at Willis's Rooms on the 30th April, 1879, said (and his words should be noted), "Look where we will, the constitution of this country does not suffer by comparison. Look where we will, we see experiments in politics being tried. We see extreme democracy in one direction and a most terrible autocracy in another, BUT AMONG THEM ALL THIS COUNTRY PURSUES HER STEADY AND UNDISTURBED WAY, OFTEN IMITATED, BUT ALWAYS UNAPPROACHABLE." Let the reader, then, thank God again and again for the Israelite origin of this happy country! Surely we are only doing our plain duty when we counsel all our fellow-countrymen everywhere, saying, "Praise YE the Lord!"

AN OBJECTION ANTICIPATED.—Is the Identity really a saving faith? Yes. A saving faith, in that it induces earnest study of God's Word, and, under God, rescues many from infidelity and indifference. A saving faith, in that it promotes holy living, and the bringing of souls to Christ. A saving faith, in that it exhorts us to watch, and pray, and cling to our covenant God, that so we may be preserved from the wrath to come. A saving faith, indeed, as the Rock will shortly own.—THOMAS BALES.

ERRATUM.—At page 200, second column, last paragraph, eighth line of it, for "eleven minus one," read "eleven minus ten."

THE REV. CANON BLAKE BROWNRIGG, INCUMBENT OF ST. JOHN'S, LAUNCESTON, TASMANIA, DOES BATTLE FOR ISRAEL.

OUR readers, we know, are always glad to hear how our glorious cause is prospering at the Antipodes. We are now able to republish part of a letter our clerical friend in Launceston, Tasmania, the Rev. Canon Blake Brownrigg, has sent to the Spectator, a Wesleyan paper published in Melbourne, where it appeared in that journal's issue of the 6th December, 1878. It seems that the Rev. F. W. Fitchell, at Melbourne, was the author of two rabid articles against our Identity and its advocates. He is, we presume, a sort of Australian Mr. Clifford, who, without much special knowledge of the subject, or any Hebrew attainments, has dashed his head against what he does not understand, and thus brought down on himself well-deserved punishment from that rather formidable antagonist, the Incumbent of St. John's, Launceston. When the letter (copy of a part of which we reproduce) had been published by the Spectator, after considerable delay, Mr. Fitchell replied in a manner described to us as "very disgraceful," but said "he surrendered" his position "sooner than enter into any argument!" The Rev. Canon rejoined, accepting his antagonist's surrender, but, "advised him, in future, to refrain from attacking questions he did not understand." This concluded the contest; and thus we see, in Australia, as in England, the opponents of our Identity are, after all, but very "poor creatures;" the vanquished champions, in fact, ab initio, of a losing game, unable to withstand our arguments, because God's truth is on our side, and powerless to resist what He so manifestly is blessing and supporting, wherever the Anglo-Saxon race is located. Speaking of the pamphlet which he has lately published, and with which, no doubt, some of our readers are acquainted, from its reprint in the pages of the Nation's Glory Leader, Canon Brownrigg wrote to his antagonist as follows:—

My pamphlet, permit me to say, is written in a calm and sober-minded strain. Its several positions are clearly and concisely stated, together with the grounds on which those positions rest; no intelligent person, therefore, can be at a loss to understand my meaning; hence no critic can excuse himself from being able to reply on the ground that my utterances are so clouded or confused that it is impossible and hopeless to follow my argument. I have laid down certain propositions, and have said to any reader who may deem them "false or unsound"—Will you undertake to prove—

1st. That there is some nation to which God has assigned in His Word a higher position than He has to the Hebrew nation?

2nd. That the distinction between Judah and Israel has absolutely ceased?

3rd. That the kingdoms of Judah and Israel have been re-united to the exclusion of any future re-union, so that they are now "one nation in the land upon the mountains of Israel?" and,

4th. That a series of promises to be inherited exclusively by one nation, or part of a nation, may be inherited by another nation without involving the identity of that nation with the nation, or part of the nation, by whom exclusively such series of promises is to be inherited? (Page 11).

In subsequent pages of my pamphlet I have called attention to certain promises made to Israel, and have given evidence that such promises are being now realised in the British nation; and in summing up these on page 40, I ask my readers, and I now ask you—

Firstly. Is it the fact, or is it not the fact, that it was promised to Israel that it should occupy the chief position among the nations; that it should be a great colonising Power; that it should possess an extensive heathen empire; that it should possess strongholds in the land of his enemies; that it should lend unto many nations, but borrow from none; that it should be the great missionary agency to the world; that it should have the Sabbath and the ten commandments as a sign distinguishing it from Gentile nations?

Secondly. Is there any other nation to whom such promises were made? and,

Thirdly. Is it the fact, or is it not the fact, that these promises are being fulfilled in the British nation?

I now place my pamphlet in your hands to give you the opportunity, if you are able to do so, to refute it. I invite you in no

Digitized by Google

hostile spirit, but in the interests of truth, to point out and to submit to the intelligence of your readers, before whom you have held us up to ridicule and contempt, the grounds on which my pamphlet is fallacious or illogical, and, therefore, that the subject of which it treats is really "a delusion;" for you must candidly admit that the real merits of a question ought not to be judged by any extravagant representations which may be made of that question by some of its advocates. If you succeed in this, you will satisfy your readers that your sweeping censures are well founded, and you will do more towards lessening the risk of "any great wave of doctrinal folly" arising to disturb the spiritual interests of this question, than you can ever hope to effect by a merely assertive condemnation of views held by many Christians who are probably quite as concerned for "undoubted truth," and quite as zealous in good works as the contributor to The Spectator. If, however, you fail in this, I trust you will do as I have done, yield honestly to the force of conviction founded upon fair reasoning, and publicly proclaim the Identity. With your permission I will conclude my remarks in your next, and remain,

M. Blake Brownrigg,
(Incumbent of St. John's Church, Launceston.)

October 14th, 1878.

We commend the above letter, and its calm, sound, logical, arguments, to the attention of the Rock, of Messrs. Cornall, Clifford, Benson, Philalethes, Clericus, Walker, and the other opponents on this side the water, who are for ever casting in our teeth the objection that ours is a "craze," a "delusion," a "heresy," and the like. Yonder, in Launceston, is evidently a sober-minded, very thoughtful, godly cleric, enjoying a good position as Canon and Incumbent in the Colonial Church of England, in Tasmania, who, "after much careful study, yielded to the conviction" of the truth of our Identity, and now (as he tells us in a part of his letter we have no room to reproduce) both "holds and teaches it." So earnest is he in this matter that he has published and edited a fortnightly paper called The Standard of Ephraim, which he tells us, as our readers know, is to our great satisfaction, and to our high honour, to have for its model, The Banner of Israel! What are we to think of these things? Are our angry opponents here, and in Melbourne, after all, wrong? or can they be in the right, and such men as this distant friend, Canon B. Brownrigg, Bishops Bond and Titcomb, the Rev. Messrs. Rogers, and Hickson, and Cachemaille, and Goodacre, and Savile, and Grimaldi, and Wrenford, and Morton, and Marriott, and such as they, be utterly, hopelessly, heretically, stupidly, fatally, perversely wrong? We refuse to believe it! We find that the Rev. Mr. Fitchell, of Melbourne, like the Rock newspaper, of London, has but one way of dealing with the glorious truths we teach (based as they are on the Word of God); and that is by invective, by hard names, and by "grievous words which stir up strife." If the Rev. Mr. Clifford, of Bristol, describes our views as "heresy," "ignorant nonsense," "blasphemous trash," "ignorant irreverence," and the like, Mr. Fitchell, of Melbourne, can match that manner of speech by telling the Antipodean Israelites that "they are utterly without sobriety or intelligence!" and also guilty of spreading "doctrinal folly!" We hope our readers perceive in all this what we know is the real truth—namely, that the clerical mind being, for the most part, a prejudiced, and in some cases, a very narrow mind, there is a determined effort in such men to put down what has not originated with their own body, a movement which the laity having initiated, are presuming to press upon the attention of the clergy most earnestly. The archbishops and bishops, of course, are quite above new-fangled ideas of any sort, much more above novel ideas on prophecy, with which subject the bishops cannot really be expected to find time, in the present ecclesiastical turmoil, to concern themselves much, or to trouble the Church under their pastoral charge. "The matter concerns the coming of the Lord" it is true, and that coming we laity reiterate to them is "very, very near at hand!" These statements are met with a pitying smile; and the Great Pyramid's Divine testimony to the fact is brushed aside at once with an impatience which soon descends to invective and "grievous words" that, in reality, are widening an existing breach between the clergy and the laity, a breach quite wide enough already! Under the present difficulties we have one bright hope before us! the great outpouring promised to outcast Israel is near at hand. Then these frictions between the pastors and the flock will disappear; pastors after the Lord's own heart will then tend and nourish the sheep; and peace and love will take the place of present growing alienation and discontent between the two great constituents of the Church; the clergy on the one hand, and the lay folk on the other, who are its main-stay after all!

THE CHOSEN PEOPLE.

A Lecture by John T. Gott.

PART I.

That we are living in the "latter days"—the latter days predicted by the prophets of old, is a fact which few care to deny. Scanning the history of the world as it is revealed in the Bible, we seem to be drawing near to the end of the third great epoch of time. The first ended with a startling event—the flood. It was a predicted event—its prediction was rejected by the people as an absurd idea—it became a positive fact. The second epoch ended after the first advent. That also was a startling event. Guided by a remarkable light in the heavens, familiarly known as the Star of Bethlehem, the wise men of the East undertook their long journey to present their offerings and do homage to the Prince of Peace, whom they found cradled in a manger. That was also a predicted event, rejected by the Jews with scorn; but Christianity has become a positive fact. The third great epoch to be looked for is the second advent. Some deem that day to be very near, others somewhat more remote, while the great bulk of humanity are living in a state of total indifference to it. This also is a predicted event; it must become, like the other two, a realised fact. "For as it was in the days of Noe, so will it be also in the days of the Son of man."

The first epoch witnessed the call of Noah, the preservation of his family during the flood, and the establishment of a new covenant with him and his seed.

The second epoch witnessed the call of Abraham, the renewal of many covenants to the patriarchs, the promise to raise up from them a "seed," who should make Jehovah's name a "praise in the earth." This epoch saw the captivity of backsliding Israel, of the Ten Tribes, and treacherous Judah of the Two Tribes scattered to the four corners of the earth, and Jerusalem destroyed.

Signs many are not wanting that we are drawing near the end of the third epoch. But none will be more wonderful than the identifying of the great bulk of that chosen people who have been lost to the knowledge of man for 2,600 years—none more remarkable than the gathering out of the remnant of Israel and the House of Judah, and their final restoration and resettlement in the Holy Land—none more blessed than the new covenant which Jehovah will make with the House of Israel, and with the House of Judah. These are some of the events which must precede the second advent—events which seem to be on the very eve of being accomplished.

The history of this chosen people is not only deeply interesting, but is pregnant with instruction.

The sons of Heth looked upon Abraham as "a mighty prince of God" among them.

Isaac lived in peace and quietude and in great prosperity, for when he sowed the land, he received "an hundred-fold"—fitting symbol of that time yet to come when Abraham's seed shall rest in peace, under their own vines and fig-trees, none daring to make them afraid.

Digitized by Google

Isaac's twin sons were Jacob and Esau. Esau sold his birthright and forfeited the blessing, which Jacob, the supplanter, craftily received. In haste and fear, Rebekah sent Jacob to Padan-aram to tarry with his uncle Laban a "few days," until Esau's fury should be turned away. Deceivers are ever deceived themselves. Wrong-doing always brings its own punishment. Rebekah's few days meant many long weary years for Jacob; for her, never, for she never again looked on the face of the son she loved too well. Here, for the first time, we meet with two things which may be observed throughout the whole of the history of the "chosen people" in a very marked manner—viz., separation and silence.

Supplanting Jacob had a hard time of it during those twenty years of exile. It was through much tribulation that the great reformation in his character was brought about. But his father's God was ever with him to help, sustain, and bless him. In secret he fled to his uncle: in secret he fled from him. But now we see in Jacob a different character—one who had learned by experience. Laban pursued Jacob in hot haste; but the restraining hand of Jehovah was laid upon him. Listen to Jacob's speech to Laban—one of the most eloquent bursts of burning indignation on record.

We can easily understand that Laban would feel the keen severity of those well-founded reproaches, and are thus prepared for his desire to come to some mutual understanding. "Laban answered and said unto Jacob, These daughters are my daughters, and these children are my children, and these cattle are my cattle, and all that thou seest is mine: and what can I do this day unto these my daughters, or unto their children which they have born? Now therefore come thou, let us make a covenant, I and thou; and let it be for a witness between me and thee."

Clear of this trial, Jacob has now to face another. Esau cometh to meet him, and four hundred men with him. Here we see again the change in Jacob's character. Now He is a man of prayer. He prayed to the Almighty to be delivered from the hand of his brother Esau. This is the first recorded example of prayer in the Bible. It is an excellent specimen of what prayer really is, being "short, earnest, and bearing directly on the occasion." One portion of this prayer I wish to draw your attention to and wish you to remember, with the one already pointed out, separation and silence. The clause I refer to is, "With my staff I passed over this Jordan, and now I am become two bands. The two bands I shall prove to be the two Houses, Israel and Judah, separate and distinctly apart to this day. Notice, Jacob went out poor, with his staff; but he returns rich.

The present that Jacob prepared for his brother Esau was one designed to appease him, or, as some render the original, "to cover his face" with it. It is described as having been "skilfully arranged," a "most magnificent present," and of "immense value."

The meeting of the two brothers was of the most affectionate nature. Esau ran and fell on his brother's neck, and kissed him. During these long years of silence and separation Esau's revengeful spirit had been considerably subdued. The description of this meeting is exactly in accordance with the customs of the East at the present day. This friendly re-union between the two brothers was of a permanent character, and is proved by the Biblical statement, that when Isaac died, being old and full of days, his sons Esau and Jacob buried him. This is another point I wish to be remembered. In endeavouring to prove what very many deny, the harmonious character of the Bible, it is necessary to point out certain points, from time to time, in order that the harmony we speak of may be perceived as we proceed with this subject.

Before, however, what we have already described (merely for the sake of convenience) actually took place, Jacob had arranged his present, and sent them on in companies. Then came the handmaids of Leah and their children foremost; then Leah and her children after, and Rachel and Joseph hindermost, furthest removed from danger, should any attack be made upon them. There is a partiality manifested here, which is easily perceived. How great was the love Jacob had for Rachel and Joseph; but in their after history how diverse was the lot of the descendants of these two mothers of the House of Israel.

It is recorded that Jacob, having sent all these over the brook Jabbok, "was left alone, and there wrestled a Man with him until the breaking of the day." Who does not know the story of wrestling Jacob? But who understands the full purport and meaning of it? Did Jacob actually wrestle with a man—an unknown stranger who suddenly appeared to oppose his entrance into the Land of Promise—or did he wrestle by prayer in a vision? In actual wrestling every muscle of the body is called into exercise. The strength of well-matched men is generally exerted to its fullest extent. But a protracted wrestle is one of a most exhausting character. Now throughout the Bible you read of many prophets of God that had visions, and were powerful in prayer; but of none do you read that while they had the vision, and exercised the importunity of prayer, that they dislocated a limb, or went away with a shrunken sinew. Wrestling in prayer is a spiritual exercise pure and simple. But Jacob's thigh was out of joint—a bodily injury received in actual wrestling, and not an unlikely one. "When Jacob passed over Penuel, as the sun rose, he halted on his thigh." Therefore, we may fairly conclude that he did actually wrestle with the Messenger of the covenant, who changed his name into Israel—i.e., a warrior, or soldier of God.

"My ways are not your ways" is the fiat of the Almighty, and in the history of Jacob we have a profound illustration placed before us for our meditation. Jacob's life hitherto, we see, has been full of trouble, now we find it full of sorrow. Ten years after he had crossed the brook Jabbok, halting on his thigh, Rachel died. There can be no doubt that Jacob idolised Rachel; and how often since then has it been noted that objects of special admiration—sinful adoration—have been taken away! Within a year after Rachel's death Joseph was sold by his brethren; and his father, viewing the blood-stained coat of many colours, "rent his clothes, and put sackcloth upon his loins, and mourned for his son, as dead, many days."

Sorrow is sent for good. Supplanting Jacob is certainly now a very different character from that which was displayed in his youth; but he has yet to go through the fire to be refined as silver. If Jacob had troubles in early life, so had Joseph. If Jacob was unjustly dealt with, so was his son. If Jacob became rich and powerful while in exile, so did Joseph. For a period of about twenty-two years Joseph was alienated from his father's house. Here, again, observe the long separation and silence in the history of the chosen people. We all have trials and troubles to contend against. Let us take a lesson from Jacob's history, and learn that our God doeth all things wisely and well, although we, while enduring the trial, cannot conceive the ultimate benefit to ourselves; yet we can rejoice in believing that there is a day coming when we shall understand and know why it pleased the Almighty to give many of us an empty crib, or a vacant chair by the fireside. After twenty-two years of resigned sorrow for the loss of Rachel and the supposed death of his idolised son Joseph, the quiet placitude of his old age was extremely disturbed by his sons' declaring, after their last return from Egypt, "Joseph is yet alive." What! The long-mourned dead Joseph alive! Joseph is governor over all the land of Egypt, the then most powerful nation in the world. Joseph wears the ring of Pharaoh—the insignia of office. Joseph is arrayed in a vesture of fine linen, "only worn by the highest personages on being admitted into the sacred order." Pharaoh adorned Joseph with a gold chain about his neck—the badge of nobility. To Joseph universal submission was accorded, for Egypt was the granary and the storehouse of the world, and Joseph was governor of the land. History repeats itself, and this is a prominent fact in the history of the chosen people, to be hereafter referred to.

Digitized by Google

We now find Israel going down to Egypt to find his long-lost son—to see the princely position he has attained in the land, and the favour displayed towards him by Pharaoh the king. And you will observe Israel sent Judah before him to direct his face into Goshen. Joseph's brethren went down in wagons: he rode to meet them in his chariot. Here they dwelt in peace under the protection which Joseph's position commanded. Here they were sustained and their wants supplied by Joseph during the last five year of distressing famine. During this happy family re-union we see Joseph gathering from the people all the money in the land in exchange for corn, then all the cattle, then all the land, and the people to be servants unto Pharaoh the king. Kindly remember this significant fact also, as we must investigate its meaning later on.

Time rolls on, and we find it accompanied with the patriarchal blessing of a multitudinous seed. Then arose another king which knew not Joseph, and then arose also a serious time of trouble for the now united seed of Jacob. This king said unto his people, "Behold the people of the children of Israel are more and mightier than we." The children of Israel had filled the verdant plains with their immense flocks. Multitudes "were scattered through the great cities as artisans or tradesmen; and by their energy, wealth, and extensive influence, wielded almost the whole powers of the country. The chief policy of this king was to overreach the Israelites, if possible." "Having first obliged them to pay a ruinous rent for the pasture land they occupied, which soon involved them in difficulties, in pursuance of the oppressive and despotic policy of his government, multitudes among the lower classes of the Hebrews or Israelites were reduced to the condition of slaves." They built for Pharaoh treasure cities—Pithom and Raamses. But the more the taskmasters afflicted them, the more they multiplied and grew. The children of Israel were made to serve with rigour; their lives were made bitter with hard bondage, in mortar, in brick, and in all manner of service in the field.

Having unsuccessfully tried cruelty and oppression, this despotic tyrant conceived the diabolical idea of killing all the male children that were born! What was the result? The children of Israel "multiplied and waxed very mighty."

(To be continued.)

THE EVIDENCE GIVEN BY THE SERVICES OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND AS TO IDENTITY.

By Major H. A. Tracey, R.A.

In an article in the Banner of Israel (No. 105) 1st Jan., 1879, on the "Connection between the Ark of Noah and the Temple of Solomon," the last two paragraphs were in the form of an allegory that, perhaps, was sufficiently clear to show that the author of the paper, at least, had in his mind's eye such a people as were there described.

The Anglo-Saxons of the Episcopal Protestant Church throughout the world fulfil the requirements sought.

Physiologists have taught us how among the most enduring, and in some ways instructive, customs of any nation, are those connected with their religious ceremonies. We shall venture, therefore, reverently to study our own, both with regard to some of their actual, we may almost say mechanical, bearings, and some of the verbal peculiarities in our daily services that seem to bear upon our argument.

We have already recognised in our main entrances beneath the Tower and the adjacent font, some connection with the towering porch of Solomon's temple, and again its connection with the great baptism of the human race as typified by the ark of Noah. We know how, from the reception of the infant as a member of the congregation, to the day he first kneels at the altar-rails, his religious progress is actually (and we think symbolically) Eastwards; and when he is gathered to his fathers, and lies beneath the sods, his feet still tend in the same Eastward direction he has been moving in, or looking towards during the most important religious ceremonies of his life, such as baptism, confirmation, and his first holy communion, and marriage.

Let us turn now to the words of the beautiful daily service of that revered Church whose ceremonies we have ventured to examine, and see if there, too, we cannot learn something that may bear upon our past unwritten history.

How much of that familiar service is but a verbatim translation from the Hebrew we often forget.

By what process of evolution can we account for Anglo-Saxons officially and religiously reading each year through the whole of the sacred books of Israel and Judah?

How is it the poems of the "Sweet Singer of Israel" touch them so specially that hearing them read twelve times in the year is but sufficient to satisfy some unexpressed, but real want?

So deep do those verses seem to ring in Anglo-Saxon breasts, that, unlike the law and the prophets, read only by the priest, when these Psalms are read, the "people" take an equal share in so doing.

There is no chance in this. This service has been shaped under the friction of generations, and by a Guiding Hand.

Again, how comes it that the exclamatory prayer, "And make Thy chosen people joyful," is at once followed by the priestly, "O Lord, save Thy people," evoking a further prayerful response, "And bless Thine inheritance?" Who are we praying for? Ourselves. What do we claim that we are? "Thy chosen people;" "Thine inheritance." And so natural and instinctive do the words seem, and so familiar are they, we are apt to forget that we could, as a people, hardly recognise our Identity more plainly.

Easter Sunday, 1879.

THE REV. CANON HOARE ON ENGLAND AND "THE JEWS."

The Rev. Canon Hoare, of Tunbridge Wells, is, as all our readers know, an opponent, and yet he is one who is so incautious as to avow his belief that to "England," as he terms the British race, is destined the rôle of conducting Judah, or the Jews, back to the land of their forefathers, as prescribed in the Holy Scriptures! What he actually said on this subject at a meeting held for the Jews Society, in Hope Hall, Liverpool, we quote from the Daily Courier of that town, of the 1st of April, 1879. It was as follows:—

The Rev. Canon Hoare (Tunbridge Wells) delivered an address of some length in reference to the Jews and their prospects, and the work of the society amongst them. He regarded the Ottoman Empire as the oppressors of the Jews. It was that Empire which was treading down Jerusalem. The Ottoman Porte was, however, fast losing its power, and the events of the past two or three years, including, as they did, the Anglo-Turkish Convention, showed that England was occupying a prominent position in directing the Asiatic policy of the Porte. He thought our own Cabinet were more interested in Jerusalem than in Constantinople, for whoever held Jerusalem commanded the Suez Canal, and also the Euphrates valley line, along which it was proposed to construct a railway to India. Our occupation of Cyprus and our operations in Afghanistan formed in his mind part of a careful and well-thought-out plan for the preservation of our two main roads to India—viz., the Suez Canal and the Euphrates valley route. His impression was that within the next few years something would be done by this country to secure good order and tranquillity to the people of Palestine, and that as soon as this were done British capital and British enterprise would be carried to the country. If capital had to be found, who were to find it? What people in the world had more capital or more enterprise than the Jewish race? He believed that the ships of Tarshish spoken of in the Scriptures were the ocean-going steamers of England, and that these steamers would be employed in carrying precious cargoes of the Jewish race back to the land of their forefathers. When this happened, he was prepared to look forward for something else—viz., the coming of our blessed Lord. (Applause).

Digitized by Google

Now, in stating his expectation that "the ocean-going steamers of England would be engaged in carrying cargoes of the Jewish race back to Palestine," the Rev. Canon is only asserting, in other words, that the British are Israel; for God's Word in Isa. xviii. 1—7, assigns to "a nation terrible from their beginning hitherto" the task of bringing to the Lord of hosts a "present" "of a people scattered and peeled," described in the first verse as also "terrible from their beginning hitherto." The bringers of the present, therefore, as well as the present brought, itself, are clearly of the same race, both Hebrews consequently, since the Jews are Hebrews; Zeph. iii. 10 is to the same effect. "From beyond the rivers of Ethiopia" (see Isa. xviii. 1) "My suppliants" (therefore a Christian people), "even the daughter of My dispersed" (therefore Hebrews of the diaspora, or dispersion"—or the Lost Ten Tribes), "shall bring Mine offering" (see Isa. xviii. 7—"the present unto the Lord of hosts"). The Canon, therefore, holding the views he does about "England's sea-going steamers taking back the Jews to their land," is tied up Scripturally to the conclusion that the nation which takes the Jews "as a present to the Lord" must be Hebrews of the Ten Tribes! The Rev. C. W. Hickson in his letter to the Rock, of the 24th January, 1879, published in BANNER No. 116, page 121, March 19th, 1879, puts the matter in an unanswerable light. The Rev. Canon is earnestly requested to peruse that letter, as the able argument of one of his own cloth, whose logical mind and linguistic powers are probably equal to his own. Having done so, we invite him to accept our views, or to come manfully forward and tell us all wherein we err. We notice in passing, that the Rev. Canon in his speech argued that the "Jewish race" was the wealthiest in capital and in enterprise extant in the world. We doubt the fact. We believe their Hebrew cousins, the British, have, nationally, infinitely more wealth than the scattered, down-trodden Jews possess, who are "few" in number; and that the latter do not vie successfully, and have not done so for a thousand years, with the matchless energy and enterprise the British Israelites exhibit, chiefly, and especially, since their glorious reformation and blessing in the sixteenth century. We feel Canon Hoare is not far from the truth; but his fatal aversion to admit the national existence, in strength, of the House of Israel to-day is his stumbling-block.

We have to add that the following paper was addressed to the Rev. Canon just before he made the speech we have passed in review; but we fear from what he said on that occasion that he paid but little attention to the wise admonitions of our friend, who now shall speak for himself, vainly urging our reverend opponent to open his eyes and see "the Scriptural distinction" between ISRAEL and JUDAH.

[COPY OF LETTER TO REVEREND CANON HOARE.]

DEAR SIR,—I see by the posters about the town that you are to speak at a meeting of the London Society for the promotion of Christianity amongst the Jews, on Monday evening, at Hope Hall. May I earnestly ask that you will distinguish in your remarks between "All-Israel" and "Judah" as emphatically as God does in His Holy Word.

To declare, or to leave it to be inferred, that every other Tribe of Israel is Jewish with that of Judah is to be anti-scriptural, just as much so as it is to be absurd, if not worse, for anyone to claim that Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob were Jews.

Jews are Israelites forasmuch as they are of the Tribe of Judah, one of Israel's sons, but all Israelites are not Jews, any more than all Britons are Englishmen; the distinction on this point in the mind of the Eternal is abundantly evidenced in the Scriptures, and should be carefully kept in view by everyone speaking on the subject you are advertised to speak upon.

I know it is taught that Anglo-Saxons are Israelites (not Jews), and in the ranks of these teachers are a bishop (colonial 'tis true) and several beneficed clergymen of the Church of England, besides professional gentlemen, and others apparently more or less erudite; however I am not committed to this doctrine, though I am interested in observing carefully the evidence pro and con. But by it my attention has been aroused to the fact that in the Word of God there is a well-defined and sustained distinction between the Jews of Judah on the one hand, and all-Israel on the other; and it is only fair such a distinction should be acknowledged by speakers for the society above named. In many cases it would appear as if they were ignorant of such a distinction (for I would not willingly believe any one of the society's advocates could wilfully ignore it), and so in a confusing manner they lump the Tribes together under the misappellation of Jews. What if the "Lost" Tribes of Israel are found in the predominant Anglo-Saxons of to-day, as believed and taught by the Right Rev. Bishop Titcomb, Revs. C. W. Hickson, H. Marriott, W. B. Wrey Savile, F. R. Glover, and other clergymen of the Church of England; it would then be all the more incumbent on us to Gospelize our Jewish brethren—viz., those of the House of Judah, forasmuch as we of Ephraim, the federal head of "all-Israel," know by blessed experience something of the saving and sanctifying power of the Gospel of Christ.

I am, dear Sir,
Yours very respectfully,
HORATIO A. PEARSON.

17, Gibson-street, Liverpool.

Review.

The Anglo-Saxons and the Israelites. By the Rev. J. B. Clifford, M.A., Vicar of St. Matthew's, Kingsdown, Bristol. Price fourpence. Hamilton, Adams & Co., 32, Paternoster-row; J. E. Chillcott, Bristol.

SECOND NOTICE. BY THE EDITOR.

(Continued from page 203.)

WE have noticed how our opponent, finding "that he was constrained by the love of Christ" (see page 3) to write in the words and in the spirit we have quoted in our last notice of his pamphlet, poured out his anathemas, in no measured style, on the devoted heads, not only of the Right Rev. Bishop Titcomb, now absent from England, but of all and sundry the writers of the much-despised Anglo-Israelite way of thinking. We have ourselves, as we noticed, received our fair share of the vials of clerical wrath, the odium theologicum, which we verily believe would burn our bodies for the good of our souls, or at least excommunicate us personally from the Church's sacraments, lest others joining themselves to "the tents of us men," they become "partakers of our sins," and the earth swallow us all up quick like Korah, Dathan, and Abiram (see spirit of page 36).

We are not careful to follow the Rev. J. B. Clifford in these exercitations. We do not envy him his spirit. We know he is not of the same mind (in this pamphlet) as his lowly Master, for His precepts he has not yet learned to make his own (Matt. xi. 29; Luke ix. 55, 56). We do not propose now to enter on a general defence of Bishop Titcomb and his views, as set forth not only in the Post-Bag, but in certain private letters which seem to have passed between him and our rev. opponent. To these, of course, we have had no access. We have, however, by the mail which left these shores on May 2, 1879, sent the Right Rev. Bishop a copy of the pamphlet, pointed out those passages which seem to reflect upon him, and asked also an explanation of certain remarks he seems to have made regarding our views on Psa. ii. 8.

The then canon never hinted to us he did not approve of these, though we were on terms of pretty constant communication, as editor and correspondent, up to the very time of the departure of his lordship to his distant diocese. As a matter of pure justice to an absent man, we request our readers to suspend their judgment till the good bishop has had time to reply, on the principle that every one must be held innocent till proved to be in fault; and that regarding the absent and those unable to defend themselves, it is not the manner of the British to condemn any person unheard.

Digitized by Google

We wish, on the present occasion, pending a more elaborate review of the novel historical opinions entertained by Mr. Clifford, which the Rev. B. Wrey Savile has undertaken to rebut, to say a word or two regarding the discovery made by our opponent (following Faber), that "the Goths and Saxons are the descendants of Cush, the son of Ham (page 16); also that "the Scythians (following Pinkerton's guidance) were known fifteen centuries before Christ; the Sacæ or Saxons being well-known above 2,200 years before the Christian era" (page 17).

Mr. Clifford, in adopting these views of the vast antiquity of the Scythian and Saxon Tribes, does not inform us on what grounds and from what historians the two writers he names—Pinkerton and Faber—derived their knowledge. He admits, however, the authority of Sharon Turner, and, indeed, accepts him justly as a writer in whom we may well place reliance (page 18). Has Mr. Clifford, then, really studied Sharon Turner on such a point, for instance, as the antiquity of the Scythians and of those Sacæ, who, he declares, are the ancestors of some of the British folk? We doubt it. Why did he not, we ask, notice the following statements which are vital to our case, unless he conveniently omitted them to suit his purpose? We hope he is incapable of such conduct; but the matter is too serious for banter, and we ask again, why Mr. Clifford failed to quote what we now present to our readers?

At page 57, vol. i., Hist. Anglo-Saxons (sixth edition, 1840), note 3, on Herod. Melp. c. 5, 7, 6, 11, Turner writes, "The wars of the Scythians before this period (seventh century B.C.) must have been with their Asiatic neighbours; but I think there is NO credit to be given to a system of an ancient, great, or universal Scythic Empire. The passage in Justin which seems to warrant it, and for which I have no respect, does not appear to me to be a sufficient foundation for it. His period of 1,500 years I believe to be fabulous, and am much inclined to the supposition that XV. has been confounded in the MS. of Justin for XV^{c}., and that, in consequence, fifteen hundred has been read instead of fifteen. The supposition of one, great, and early Scythian Empire, seems to me to have no foundation. See Coxes' Vindic. of the Celts, p. 14." (The italics are ours.)

Here we see Sharon Turner knew nothing of a Scythic antiquity of 1,500 years; nay, he had looked into the matter, and believed it fabulous. We have no doubt both Pinkerton and Faber were deceived by what S. Turner rejected, and hence their error. In regard to the Saxons, S. Turner found that Tacitus never mentioned them at all, being, he supposes, then "an obscure and inconsiderable people" (page 55). The Saxon ancestors of the Teutonic section of the British, S. Turner found to be a part of the Scythian nation, and as a part cannot usually be older than its whole, we may safely say the Saxon Tribes of the Scythian nation had not an antiquity of even 1,500, much less one of above 2,200 years which Pinkerton and Mr. Clifford assign to them. Mr. Clifford's belief resting on Faber, that the Saxons or Sacæ were the same race as the "Chasas or Sacas," whose ancestor, he says, was Cush (Hamitic), is directly opposed to that of Herodotus, who assigns to the Scythian nation (of whom it is admitted our Saxon ancestors were a portion) a recent origin in his day.

Herod., in book iv., cap. 5—7, states that the Scythians declared they were "the most recent of all nations." One thousand years was all they reckoned from their first beginning, from King Targetaus to the time Darius crossed over against them. The latter date, Col. Gawler states, was B.C. 500, and that of Targetaus, their original king, or chief in another land, would bring us to B.C. 1,500—the time of Moses, with whom the traditions regarding the name connect him. ("Our Scythian Ancestors," p. 5.)

Sharon Turner tells us the scenes of the exploits of these people, the Sacæ, was East of the Caspian, near which they seized Bactriana and Armenia, and called them Sakasina. We see no hint in Sharon Turner of the alleged Hamitic or Cushite origin of this people, for which we fail to find a shadow of a trace of evidence. We observe with surprise that Mr. Clifford was so misinformed of the views of the Anglo-Israelites (now long before the world) as to imagine we appealed to Sharon Turner as evidence that he connected our ancestors with Israel. We cannot understand how our opponent can have fallen into so singular and monstrous an error, except on the supposition that he really has read little, and nothing to any purpose, of our literature. We appeal to Turner to show that our Teutonic ancestors, the Saxons, sprung from the very spot where Israel was cast away by the Lord (in Media), and that they, the Saxons, were first heard of there, just about the time Israel was carried captive into that very region. Thus we obtain from this standard writer a connecting historical link between some of the British folk and Lost Israel, which other evidence supplies, but, wanting which link, our ethnographical argument would have been baseless indeed.

We cannot but conclude from Mr. Clifford's wonderful expectations as to what he was led to believe would be discovered in Sharon Turner's pages, either that he was a very perfunctory reader of the literature of Israel, which, he tells us, he "read carefully" (see page 3), or, that forgetting all about its contents, he allowed himself to be misled by some too enthusiastic Israelite, who, pressing Turner's history on him, led him hastily to fancy that therein he would find Israel directly connected with the ancestors of the British Saxons. We are sorry to state that these are not the only points on which we find our opponent's arguments utterly unfounded and inaccurate. We reserve further notice to our next, hoping that ere long other and abler pens than ours will undertake the ungrateful task of refuting the careless and reckless strictures of a clerical opponent who seems to have lost his self-command under the pressure of the reflection that his own parishioners are largely espousing a view of prophecy, which, after labouring nearly fifty years in the ministry, he has not originated himself, and was not taught in the theology he learnt during his University career.

(To be continued.)

The New Old Story. By A E I. Second Edition. Price sixpence. W. H. Guest, London.

We are glad to welcome our friend A E I's work in a second edition, which speaks well for its growing popularity. This edition appears with an addition to it in the shape of an appendix on "the Eastern Question," brought down to the comprehension of children. The work has been carefully done, and will, we believe, answer the purpose for which it was designed. We wish it God speed.

Correspondence.

OMRI.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—In the second volume of Professor Dunckers' "History of Antiquity," I find the description of the obelisk in Shalmaneser's palace at Chalah, with the inscription and representation of Jehu, the son of Omri (Israel), paying tribute to the Assyrian King; but he also mentions the fragment of an inscription of Bin-mirar III. (B.C. 810—781), son and successor of Samsi-Bin, grandson of Shalmaneser, showing the extent of the lands over which he ruled, or which he had compelled to pay tribute. Amongst many others, he says: I took unto my possession Tyre, Sidon, the land of Omri (Israel), and Edom.

Duncker evidently identifies the land of Omri, Khumri, with Samaria and Israel, and I think this is clear evidence that the Ten Tribes were known to the Assyrians, only as "the people of the land of Omri," or Khumri, and that they were carried away under that name (Hist. of Ant., vol. ii., Rise of Assyria). In his "Tribes of Israel," also vol. ii., Duncker, writing of Omri, King of Israel, says: "The Kings of Assyria speak of the King of Israel, even after the overthrow of Omri's house, as "the son of Omri," and the kingdom of Israel as the "House of Omri."

Josephus mentions the Dahæ, and the Sacæ invading Parthia A.D. 45-46 (Ant., xx., bk. iv., 2).

I write this merely to draw your attention to the wonderful fulfilment of Hosea's prediction that Israel was to be carried into exile under another name.

Yours truly,
L. C. V.

Eastbourne, March 28.

ANTI-CHRIST.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

SIR,—Many prophetic students think that the final three and a half years of the present dispensation will be taken up with the rise of Anti-Christ (1879-82). Spiritualism is rapidly preparing for this. It is also probable that the Anglo-Israel body may be the only "witness" against Anti-Christ.

I think that those interested in the Pyramid question should make a party for the next winter, in order thoroughly to investigate the important measurements.

I am, Sir,
Faithfully yours,
VIGILANTIUS.

April 21, 1879.

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements

(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O O payable at Ludgate-circus.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed :—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

BANNER FREE CIRCULATION FUND.

	£	s.	d.
M. A. T., per Abraham Storey...	1	0	0

NEW BOOKS AND NEW EDITIONS.

Now Ready.

THE PROMISES TO ABRAHAM.
WITH
SELECT REFERENCES AND EXPLANATORY NOTES,
To which is added an article entitled,
"ISRAEL AMONG THE GENTILES."

BY W. S. CAVILL.

Reprinted from the pages of "Life from the Dead," with Emendations and Corrections.

Price Sixpence, or free by post, Sevenpence.

London: Published by ROBERT BANKS. Racquet-court, Fleet-street, and may be had of all Booksellers.

NOW READY, price 2d., post free, 2½d.
NEW PAMPHLET BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

THE HISTORICAL, ETHNIC, AND PHILOLOGICAL ARGUMENTS in PROOF of BRITISH IDENTITY with the TEN LOST TRIBES OF ISRAEL, clearly and simply stated.

BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

CONTENTS:—Introduction—The Celts—Professor Rawlinson's Testimony—The Cymry—The Cimmerii—The Gimiri and Khumri—The Testimony of the Nimroud Obelisk — The Scythians — The Anglo-Saxons — Sharon Turner's Testimony—The Jutes and Angles—The Danes and the Normans—General Conclusions—Philology—The Welsh Language—The Rev. Canon Lysons' Testimony—Idiomatic Identity Between Hebrew and English—Tyndal's Testimony—The Tribe of Dan—The Irish Celts—Are the Continental Nations Israelites?—Conclusions—Appendix.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane; and Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

This day. Price 2d. Post free 2½d.

MANASSEH AND THE UNITED STATES. An important Essay delivered before the "Lost Israel Identification Society," by the Rev. Joseph Wild, D.D., at Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, New York.

CONTENTS:—The Fulness of the Gentiles set in—For whom did God intend America—The Origin of the United States The Footsteps of Ephraim and Manasseh—The Will of Jacob made to Ephraim and Manasseh—Manasseh a People, and a Great People—Manasseh's Birthtime of Separation—Out of nearly Sixty Conquered Colonies the only one England ever Lost was that of Manasseh (America)—The Great Seal of the United States—Manasseh was brought up at the Door of the Pyramid, &c., &c.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.; and of any Bookseller.

New and Revised Edition.

THE "NEW OLD STORY," an Introduction to a Marvellous Puzzle, expressly written for children, with a Short and Simple Account of the Great Pyramid, explaining the measurements, &c., so as to be easily understood by the young. By A E I. W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane.

Second edition, just published. Price 1s. 6d.; Cloth, gilt edges, 2s. 6d. Post free for 20 or 33 stamps.

THE PILLAR OF WITNESS. A Scriptural View of the GREAT PYRAMID. By the late Commander B. W. TRACEY, R.N.
W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

PUBLIC ANNOUNCEMENTS.

PUBLIC HALL, GRAVESEND.

TWO LECTURES

Will be delivered (D.V.) in the above Hall, as follows:—

Wednesday, May 21st—
DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, ESQ., J.P.
Subject—
"THE STONE KINGDOM OF DANIEL."

Wednesday, May 28th—
CHARLES STUBBS, ESQ., B.A.
Subject—
"OUR INHERITANCE IN THE PYRAMID."

The Chair will be taken at 8 o'clock each evening.

Admission Free. Enquirers are cordially invited.

Tickets for Reserved Seats may be had gratis, of Mr. Marriner, Stationer, etc., 7, Milton-road, Gravesend.

At the close of each Lecture a Collection will be taken in aid of the Funds of the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association.

Office: 20, Warwick Lane, London, E.C.

LECTURE HALL, ST. AUBYN'S ROAD, UPPER NORWOOD.

TWO LECTURES

Will be delivered (D.V.) in the above Hall, as follows:—

Tuesday, May 20th.
CHARLES STUBBS, ESQ., B.A.,
Subject:—"OUR INHERITANCE IN THE PYRAMID."
Chairman: BENTINCK CANNEY, ESQ.

Thursday, May 29th,
DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, ESQ., J.P.,
Subject:—"THE STONE KINGDOM OF DANIEL."
Chairman: DR. P. H. ROE.

The Chair will be taken at 7.30 each evening.

Admission Free. Enquirers are cordially invited.

At the close of each Lecture a Collection will be taken in aid of the Funds of the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association.

Office:—20, Warwick Lane, London, E.C.

HASTINGS AND ST. LEONARDS ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION, Auxiliary to the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association.

President:—
Lieut.-Col. W. H. LARKINS, Dymock, Ore.
Treasurer:—
Mr. COULTHWAITE, St. Andrew's Schools.
Hon. Secretaries:—
Mr. R. SARGENT, 37, London Road, St. Leonards.
Mr. J. R. MITCHELL, 52, St. Andrew's Road, Hastings.
Committee:—
Messrs. WHITEMAN, W. DUNGEY, KENT, PRYOR, R. GREEN

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION. Temporary office: 20, Warwick-lane, London, E.C. This Association is prepared to send out experienced and well QUALIFIED GENTLEMEN to LECTURE on the subject of "The Identity of the British Race with the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel." The terms are such as involve no liabilities as to loss, &c. Upon those needing their services—which are not restricted to the Metropolitan area—all applications as to the Lecturers, Subjects, &c., to be made to the Hon. Sec., JAMES BILLINGTON, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

WANTED, by a Lady respectably connected, a situation as HOUSEKEEPER. Is domesticated, and able to take the supervision of a household. Address, E. A. L., 34, Kennington park-road.

LO AMMI—NOT MY PEOPLE. A Handbill for shop-windows and for private circulation has been prepared, showing the connection between Hosea i. 10, as Prophecy, and the titles of various pamphlets of our opponents, recently issued from the press, as Fulfilments. To be had of W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane; Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; and of Philo-Israel, Bristol. Price 2s. per 100, or 3d. per dozen.

BANNER OF ISRAEL. VOL. II. Now ready, price 7s., of all Booksellers.

BOOKS, ETC.

18th Annual Issue, price 2d., post free 3d., 36 pages closely printed matter.

MAY MEETING VISITORS, be sure and get the A B C Church and Chapel Directory. The best and only correct guide to all London and Suburban Protestant Places of Worship, Ministers, Times of Service, &c., &c. A cheap and reliable Christian Guide Book to London.

The Record says: "A well-arranged List of all the London and Suburban Protestant Places of Worship, with the Clergy who officiate, services, &c. Exceedingly useful."

The Nonconformist says: "Very useful—containing a mass of useful information, which will be serviceable to visitors to London, not less than to permanent residents in the metropolis."

The Christian Times says: "We know of no work where so much information is gathered under one cover. It must command an extensive circulation."

The Morning Advertiser says: "One of the most useful Christian Hand-Books we have met with for a long time."

The Rock says: "It is a most excellent guide to all Protestant Places of Worship in London."

The English Independent says: "Contains a quantity of ecclesiastical information very useful to visitors as well as residents in London."

The Church Standard says: "Compiled with great care, and published at such a modest price as to bring it within the reach of all."

The Protestant says: "Neatly got up, and seems to have been carefully compiled."

London: ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Just published.

THE COMING COLLISION BETWEEN ENGLAND AND RUSSIA PREDICTED BY EZEKIEL; forming a Proof of the Identity of England with the Israel of Prophecy. Price 1s., post free 1s. 1d.

W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C. List of works on the Identity forwarded post free upon application.

PHOTOGRAPHIC PORTRAITS OF PHILO-ISRAEL, Editor of THE BANNER OF ISRAEL, Author of "The History of the House of Israel," &c., &c. Cabinet, 2s., post free; Carte-de-Visites, 1s., post free.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

TO AUTHORS. Authors desirous of issuing Works or Pamphlets on the great and increasingly interesting Question of the Identity of the Lost Ten Tribes with the British Nation, should first communicate with Robert Banks, of Racquet-court, Fleet-street, who has already been honoured by issuing, amongst others, the following works on the subject:

The Banner of Israel. Weekly 1d.; monthly 7d.

The Nation's Glory Leader. Weekly 1d.; quarterly 1s. 4d.

The Pillar of Witness. By late Captain Tracey. Cloth 2s. 6d.; paper 1s. 6d. (second edition).

The Anglo-Israel Post Bag. By Bishop Titcomb. Cloth 2s. 6d.; paper 1s. 6d. (second edition).

The History of the House of Israel. By Philo-Israel. Cloth 1s.; paper 6d. (sixth thousand).

The Great Pyramid of Egypt. Fifty-two pages, with three illustrations. Price 4d. (10,000).

The New Old Story. By A E I. Cloth 1s.

BRISTOL LEAFLETS ON THE IDENTIFICATION. 1 to 9; 1s. per 100.

DEAFNESS CURED, NOISES IN THE EARS, &c.
SPECIAL OFFER TO THE DEAF.

THE REV. E. J. SILVERTON having discovered that there are tens of thousands who are unable to obtain his 11s. Box of Aurial Remedy which has cured so many persons of Deafness and Noises in the Ears, &c., begs now to offer a 2s. 6d. Box of the Medicine, so as to put it within the reach of all. This arrangement is specially made to meet the deaf world. With every box of medicine will be presented the Rev. E. J. Silverton's "Health Advocate," containing valuable advice and information that everyone ought to know. Post Office Orders for 2s. 6d. to E. J. SILVERTON, Minister of Exeter Hall Church, Nottingham, or stamps, 2s. 8d.

WOOLS! WOOLS! WOOLS! Cheapest and Best. White and Black Berlin, Single and Double, 3s. 6d. per pound. Best quality Ice Wools, all Colours, 5½. per ounce ball. All other Wools at proportionate prices. Shetland, Andalusian, Fleecy, and Bonne Mere Wools. Welsh, Scotch, Peacock Victoria, and other Yarns. Crewel Filoselle Silk. M. WHELLENS, Wholesale and Retail Wool Warehouse, 3, 5, & 6, QUEEN'S TERRACE, CAMDEN ROAD, LONDON.

Send for Price List and Sampler, which will be forwarded free on application.

LADIES' SILK SCARVES, price 1s. The choicest Silk Scarf ever offered. All Colours; richly brocaded ends. Send stamps for a sample.

M. WHELLENS, 5 & 6, Queen's-terrace, Camden-road, London, N.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, 5, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, MAY 21, 1879. [All Rights Reserved.]

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. III. No. 126. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, MAY 28, 1879. [ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
The Present Aspect of Affairs	213
John Bunyan on Our Identity	214
St. Paul on Our Identity with Israel	214
The Chosen People.—Part II. A Lecture by John T. Gott	215
The Identity a Power	217
The Editor of the Rock and Ourselves.—"Which Spoke the Truth?"	217
A New Year's Wish	217
Review of the Rev. J. B. Clifford's Pamphlet.—Part III. By the Editor	217
The Means and the Place. By Rev. Herbert Marriott, M.A.	219
The Supposed Obscurity of Jeremiah xxxi. 22. By Rev. Herbert Marriott, M.A.	219
Correspondence	219

THE PRESENT ASPECT OF AFFAIRS.

WRITING as we are doing some days before we can hope these lines will meet the reader's eye, we doubt not that some of our anticipations will be falsified by the event, and that in others we may be taking too sanguine a view of matters. The first point that strikes us is, that by the good hand of our God upon our nation, the gloom which has for so long a time been settling on our country, seems, at last, giving way to better times. The six months' winter is over, and the bright and warmer days of a late spring have come. With them the tide, we hope, has turned, and there is a talk of revival of trade—an end of the distress which has so long been a burden to our poor. Food has always been cheap, fuel has been also cheap during our trial; and now that the prospect exists of the termination of the Durham strike, there is confidence the worst is past. It seems to us that each of these conflicts between labour and capital has been only a fulfilment of the Word of God, which in Zech. viii. 10, tells us that in the days just before the "prosperity" of the seed of Israel sets in (verse 12) there is to be "no hire for man, nor any hire for beast, neither peace to him that went out or came in, because of the affliction, for I (Jehovah) set all men everyone against his neighbour." When the Lord hath done this, who can let? When He determines that the distress, and strikes, and affliction, and national disturbance of relations between labour and capital shall precede the times of Israel's glorious prosperity, who would alter the providential arrangement, or wish one trouble avoided, one sorrow the less, so long as they lead us straight to the halcyon times beyond, when "the seed shall be prosperous, the vine shall give her fruit, the ground shall give her increase, the heavens shall give their dew, and God will cause the remnant of His people to possess ALL these things?" (Zech. viii. 12).

The domestic prospect being a shade less dark, how is Israel's foreign policy, and how are her Colonial and Indian troubles making progress? In Afghanistan there is decided improvement. Yakoob Khan, the Ameer, after long deliberation, has at last shown a real inclination to come to terms with his enemy. Having secured "the Gates" of India, hitherto in the hands of our Afghan foes, we have waited patiently to see what our adversary would do. Now, he has, it seems, "manifested so much readiness to come to an agreement, that he has put himself into our power, is already at Gundamuck, to confer with Major Cavagnari, and has settled the terms of peace!" Verily the Afghan war has been a "military march past!" God has given us "the Gates" with the least possible expenditure of blood and treasure; and we fully expect that the end will be, that the Afghan difficulty will at once be concluded—how triumphantly for Israel our readers know! Let them reflect on the past and see! The Russians have been discredited and diplomatically vanquished without firing a shot. They had to leave Shere Ali in the lurch after encouraging him to beard the Lion, and lo! the Bear is checkmated and has retired! The dreaded Khyber Pass fell almost without a blow. The Peiwar Kotal and the Khurum Valley Pass fell after a sharp struggle. The town and country of Candahar have succumbed at once to Israel, and evince a wish to remain Israel's subjects henceforth. God has given us a great success in our Afghan campaign, for which we nationally ought to be, and are, we trust, most thankful. In Burmah, the drunken tyrant who rules there, has, as yet, made no sign. We trust, as time elapses, that peace may yet be maintained, and the inevitable war we dreaded not take place till at least some reasonable ground for the conflict may arise. From Zululand the accounts are still of preparation. After the relief of Ekowe, and the disastrous defeats the Zulus sustained at Ginglelova and Kambula, there have, as yet, been no further operations. It is not too much to hope that after such disasters to the enemy, we may be approaching the beginning of the end. And then? Why then confederation must happen, and the South African States must be born as in a day, one of "Israel's company of nations." Let us hear what the Times said again on this subject, only on April 24, 1879, and let no one doubt what must and shall take place when once the Zulu army is destroyed, its king dethroned, and we trust, the country annexed to the British Crown.

The nation has made up its mind (said the editor) that this must be the last of our South African wars. It was admitted in both Houses and on both sides during the late debates that the Imperial Government must strike out a clear and decided line of policy for the future, and must adhere to it firmly. The South African colonies must be made to understand that the mother country cannot go on from crisis to crisis, taking no measure of her responsibilities, and ignorant even how far the colonists may be trusted to provide for their own self-defence. Some general scheme by which the whole European population of South Africa may be made to recognise and fulfil a duty from which free communities ought not to shrink is indispensable. Upon the question of form we are ready to make any reasonable concession to local opinion; we are willing to conciliate sectional jealousies by accepting and giving effect to any legitimate compromise. But the substance of the policy which must be enforced is out of the range of controversy. There are in South Africa nearly 400,000 men of European blood, dwelling in prosperous and lightly-taxed communities, the infancy of which has been protected against external and internal dangers by the Imperial power. The time has now come when these colonists ought to undertake the whole charge of their defence against the native races; and if they combined to do their duty, they could secure themselves easily, and at a small cost, against any probable danger. The inevitable period of transition would require liberal consideration; but, as we have suggested before, this difficulty might be met by fixing a term of years at the end of which the Imperial troops would be withdrawn from all the South African colonies, and the task of colonial defence would be left exclusively to colonial troops. We shall rejoice if the Ministry now in power at the Cape shows a disposition, as we believe is probable, to enter into some practical arrangement of this kind. What we contend is that, besides the local interests for the protection of which the Parliament at Cape Town may probably be trusted to provide, there are interests common to the whole body of white colonists in South Africa which those colonists ought to guard. They cannot plead that they are too few, too raw, and too poor to take this duty upon themselves. At least it is clear that the mother country is under no obligation any longer to bear the burden for them.

Digitized by Google

Such, then, is the condition of affairs abroad in Israel's Colonial and in her heathen Empires. The Eastern Question is for the present in abeyance, waiting the arrival of the time when, while "men say, 'peace and safety,' sudden destruction shall come upon them, as travail upon a woman with child, and they shall not escape" (1 Thess. v. 3). The condition of Russia, meanwhile, is alarming, as we lately pointed out. For there we see the future scourge and woe of Europe held back by the fearful leprosy of Socialism and desperate democracy, till (God's time having come), roused to madness, the nation will only be restrained from self-destruction by following the footsteps of the French after their great revolution in 1793—namely, by foreign war, and by the prospect of aggrandisement at the expense of Turkey—moribund, and drawing to its end. On the final review we see cause to praise God for national present mercies—in not one, but in many different, nay, in every direction! Therefore we say to our readers, once more what we have repeated so often, and hope to reiterate again and yet again, "Israel, praise YE the Lord!" (Psa. cxlix. 1—9).

JOHN BUNYAN ON OUR IDENTITY.

IN his "Grace Abounding to the Chief of Sinners," page 6, par. 18, John Bunyan says:—

"After I had been thus for some considerable time, another thought came in my mind; and that was, whether we were of the Israelites, or no? For finding in the Scriptures that they were once the peculiar people of God, thought I, if I were one of this race, my soul must needs be happy. Now again, I found within me a great longing to be resolved about this question, but could not tell how I should; at last I asked my father of it, who told me, 'No, we were not.' Wherefore then I fell in my spirit as to the hope of that, and so remained."

April, 1879.

NOTE BY THE EDITOR.—It is clear our opponents, Messrs. Cornall, Walker, Clifford, and the Rock, differ from John Bunyan! He, good Christian man, said he must needs be happy if he were of Israel according to the flesh. They would and do despise their birthright, and their spirits rise when they thus spurn God's good intentions towards them! Not so did St. Paul (Rom. xi. 1). Not so did our Lord Himself (Heb. ii. 16).

ST. PAUL ON OUR IDENTITY WITH ISRAEL.

(Concluded from page 152.)

PART III.

WE now ask our readers to follow us while we take up a passage from Gal. iii. 16, which is always quoted as proof that the great apostle to the Gentiles was directly opposed to the views we are constantly enunciating, but which, we have always maintained, is, rightly considered, a triumphant vindication of our Identity with the Lost Ten Tribes, while it draws the distinction beautifully not only between Israel and Judah, but between both and the "spiritual House," the children of Abraham by faith, "His seed," the heirs according to "the promise." What follows has already for the most part appeared at page 24 of Israel's Identity Standard, No. 3, but as that publication is out of print, and is not included in the published volumes of the BANNER, we think the paper is too valuable to be lost, and at any rate that it ought to have a place in connection with what we are now following in the pages of the BANNER. There is no passage which is oftener brought to bear against our views of the Identity of the British with Israel, than the 3rd chapter of St. Paul's epistle to the Galatians, verses 16—29, and none which is said so decisively to demolish and destroy our very foundations in the eyes of those who favour the spiritual interpretation of almost the whole of God's Word. Hence our opposing authoress Philalethes makes much of this chapter. Arguments founded on it are used largely by her and by Messrs. Cornall, Walker, and McClellan, J. D. H., and others. It seems the stronghold of the opponents of our glorious Identity, male and female.

The passage begins at the 16th verse, as follows: "Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made." Here the apostle refers to promises in the plural number; and he is of course accurately correct. For there were many promises given to Abraham and his seed. A reference to Gen. xxii. 17 and 18, will enable the reader to recognise at least three made on that one occasion. Let us see what they were.

1st.—That of the multitudinous human progeny, likened to the stars of heaven and the sand upon the sea-shore for multitude.

2nd.—The one granting them possession of the "Gate" of those who were to be the "enemies" of the Abrahamic stock—i.e., of the Hebrews.

3rd.—The promise that in and through that same race—the Hebrews (Gen. xxviii. 14,)—all the other nationalities of the earth—i.e., the Gentiles—should receive the great and glorious blessing, the full Christ, the Saviour of the whole world, long before promised to Adam and Eve at "the fall."

The next clause of St. Paul's letter to the scattered Hebrews, the Galatian Christians, shows that of these three blessings he was intending on that occasion to refer not to the 1st and 2nd we have enumerated, but to the 3rd only. For, he adds, "He saith not, And to seeds, as of many; but as of one, And to thy seed, which is Christ." Here he makes the grand distinction which our spiritualizing commentators, teachers, and preachers find it so hard to realise and believe. He distinguishes between the two great lines of Abraham's descendants, the human and the spiritual seeds; the one the multitudinous ones who at present may or may not belong to Christ; the other the spiritual offspring, "the seed as of one," whose head and representative, federally considered, is the Lord Jesus Christ; and who may or may not belong to the literal Hebrew stock; just as Abraham himself, his son and grandson, are the federal heads of the literal human Hebrew race, "the seeds as of many."

Now having made this grand distinction, and discovered that St. Paul's whole subsequent teaching and argument refers, not to the human offspring, the multitudinous "seeds as of many," but to the "spiritual children" of whom Christ was the head and representative, we obtain a clue to his meaning which must otherwise be hidden from us.

He speaks therefore, from the 17th verse to the end of the chapter, of that great division of the Abrahamic seed which is strictly of faith; that seed whose federal head is Christ; who are selected not only from Israel, the Twelve Tribes of the chosen ones according to the flesh, but also from the whole Gentile world, according to the good pleasure of God's electing grace. Now, the apostle does not thereby abrogate or cancel one iota of the Lord Jehovah's good promises made through Abraham to "the seeds as of many"—the multitudinous, worldly, powerful, and really blessed human progeny of the patriarch. Their title and their blessings rest on just the same foundation as those on which the spiritual sons of Abraham by faith must perforce rely for theirs! Speaking then to the spiritual seed alone, and not to the human flesh-and-blood progeny of Abraham at all, St. Paul tells them that their hopes rest on a promise (mark the singular number five times repeated in the passage), made long before the law (verses 17, 18, 19, 22); that they live by faith, by trust, by confidence in that great promise of the "seed," even Jesus Christ the Saviour of the world, and the Redeemer of "His people" Israel (verses 21—25); that whatsoever the nationality, whether Hebrews or Gentiles, the spiritual seed of Abraham is now in Christ, chosen independently of the accident of human lineage; and that, so far only as respects salvation and the destinies of the human race in the eternal world—i.e., in the heavenly state—"there is neither Jew nor Greek; there is neither bond nor free; male nor female; for ye are ALL one in Christ Jesus; and if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise." These are words, we submit, which correctly enough show that the "spiritual seed" are indeed chosen from all mankind; and that to become Abraham's seed in this sense, and heirs of salvation by Christ, there is now no longer any exclusive privilege appertaining to the Hebrew over the Gentile; to male over the female; to free over the bond; but all are one when in Christ, who is the Head of the spiritual portion of the Abrahamic stock. But does the apostle thereby cut off the entail of God's many promises to the other branch of Abraham's progeny, "the seeds as of many?" Nay, how can he? All the promises of God are "Yea, Amen," not "Yea and Nay." "But in Christ Yea and Amen unto the glory of God" (2 Cor. i. 20). The Lord Jesus came "to confirm the promises made to the fathers," not to abrogate them even in one point (Rom. xv. 8). We say, therefore, that the solemn promises of God Almighty, made on oath by Himself to Abraham, respecting his human descendants, must stand sure and be fulfilled, just as literally, just as fully, and just as gloriously as the promises made by the same faithful Being to the spiritual seed of the patriarch; that seed whose head and representative is Christ.

Digitized by Google

To show our readers that St. Paul, at any rate, did most clearly and distinctly appreciate the difference between the spiritual and human seed of Abraham, between Israel and Judah, and the Gentile Christian too, we ask them to follow us while we refer them to one more passage of the same apostle's writings in 2 Cor. xi. 22, 23, as compared with Gal. iii. 29. Certain Judaizing teachers had crept in among the Isaelitish and Gentile converts in Corinth, and had attempted to subvert the faith of that Church, depreciating the work of even the great apostle himself. St. Paul defends himself, and inter alia, breaks out in self-justification in the following words: "Are they (these false apostles) Hebrews?" (that is, members of the Twelve-Tribed nation. God's chosen race?) "So am I. Are they Israelites?" (that is, members of a narrower circle than the Twelve Tribes—namely, members of the Ten Tribes, the kingdom of Israel, now represented by the British). "So am I!" (St. Paul was an Israelite of Benjamin, recollect, one of the Ten Tribes.) "Are they the seed of Abraham?" (that is, do they belong to a yet narrower circle even than the Ten-Tribed Israelites, even to the selected spiritual seed, the seed of Abraham spoken of in Gal, iii. 29, the true sons by faith, who may be either Israelites or Gentiles as God's selecting grace may choose?) "So am I! Are they ministers of Christ?" (A narrower circle still.) "I speak as a fool," says the apostle. "I am more than even these, more than even a teacher and pastor of the true flock of Christ, gathered from all the world, for I am in labours more abundant, in stripes above measure, in prisons more frequent, in deaths oft!" Here we have then a regular gradation, a gradually rising scale of privilege—first, the Twelve, then the Ten Tribes of the House of Israel, the grand distinction we so much insist upon; thirdly, the true "spiritual seed of Abraham," as distinguished from the mere human descendants of the patriarch; fourthly, the pastors of these true sheep of Christ, with fifthly and lastly, one who, by his personal sufferings and devotion to the cause of their Master, was an approved apostle, who stood pre-eminent even among them all.

Now who were the multitudinous seed of the Abrahamic stock whom the apostle designates the "seeds as of many?" They were sons of Abraham it is clear. They were not the House of Judah of the apostle's times, since they were few and destined, as he knew, to be the objects of that "wrath which was even then come upon them (A.D. 54—58) TO THE UTTERMOST" (1 Thess. ii. 16). They were—and the apostle knew it, as we have shown before—the other House of Israel, the Lo-Ammi portion of the race, to whom Hosea gave the precious promises contained in chap. i. 10 of his prophecy (addressed altogether to them), declaring that in spite of their Lo-Ammi, outcast, forsaken, forlorn condition, "yet the number of the children of Israel" (the Ten Tribes) "shall be as the sand of the sea, which cannot be measured nor numbered"—a fact St. Paul in A.D. 60 quoted directly from Isa. x. 22 and from Hosea i. 10, when he said in Romans ix. 27, "Though the number of the children of Israel be as the sand of the sea, a remnant" ("in" or "among them," as Isaiah says) "shall be saved," or "return," as the Hebrew prophets have it (Isa. x. 21, 22; Jer. iii. 14—18; Hosea i. 11).

We have proved our case! St. Paul knew well the distinction between Israel and Judah! He knew Israel was in "the latter day" to develop into a "multitude," and as such, "return" with Judah to their land. Knowing and saying that, he pointed prophetically to the British nation and our times as the outcome and fulfilment of the prophecies of the servants of the living God, of whom he was one of the most distinguished by the Lord's own blessing and personal teaching.

THE CHOSEN PEOPLE.

A LECTURE BY JOHN T. GOTT.

(Continued from page 209).

PART II.

JUST at that identical time when despotism was ruling with a mighty hand, Moses was born, and hidden till it became dangerous to hide him longer. Placed in an ark of bulrushes, he is laid in the flags by the banks of the Nile, a place "fenced off as a protection from the crocodiles." As Moses was found by Pharaoh's daughter, it is just possible that this enclosure was one reserved for her own use, and this somewhat confirms the opinion that Jochebed, the mother of Moses, had some occupation in or about the palace, which afforded her good opportunities of knowing the daily movements of the royal family. How wonderful are the ways of Providence! How true are the words of Scripture: "My ways are not your ways, neither are My thoughts your thoughts, saith the Lord." Moses was born with the shadow of death hanging over his head. As the adopted son of Pharaoh's daughter, he was nursed by his own mother, and remained under the true parental roof long enough "to be thoroughly imbued with the true national feeling of an Hebrew and an Israelite."

Then it came to pass that when Moses was grown, not in age and stature only, but in power, as well as renown for accomplishments and military prowess, that one day he saw an Egyptian taskmaster smiting a Hebrew without just cause, and then his true inborn Israelitish sympathy, that will not even now quietly stand by and see unjust treatment without resenting it, was suddenly roused from its lowest depths. But that resentment was not a blind one. Hitherto, his studies and exploits had cut him off from any real and positive knowledge of the condition of his Hebrew brethren. Now, for the first time, "he went out unto his brethren, and looked upon their burdens." Most commentators are agreed that this Hebrew died under the cruel treatment he received. Moses, exercising that caution which all well-trained men invariably do—and he had perhaps greater reasons for doing so than many—"looked this way and that way, and when he saw that there was no man, he slew the Egyptian, and hid him in the sand," and thus avenged the death "of one of his brethren." Now, just as Jacob fled from his father's house, in dread fear of Esau's threat, so does Moses flee for his life, from his adopted home, and from his brethren.

Digitized by Google

Forty years Moses was an exile in the land of Midian. Forty years a wanderer in the desert. Forty years he spent in quiet meditation—for the leader of the Israelites must needs be also a great national reformer.

But during these forty years the welfare of his brethren in Egypt had gone from bad to worse; so bad indeed, that first they "sighed" by reason of the bondage, and then, secondly, their "cry" came up unto God. And God "heard" their groaning, and God "remembered" His covenant with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. Here we have the secret of the Almighty's loving-kindness to the chosen people. It all rests in the "covenant promises" made to the patriarchs. Hitherto they have never been fulfilled; but as sure as God's Word is truth, they must be.

Mark, the sigh of sorrow, and the cry for deliverance. What was the result? God looked upon the children of Israel, and God knew them. Yes; and in His mysterious dealings, which finite minds cannot comprehend, He was working all the time for their good. It was in the last year of their sojourn in Egypt that God appeared to Moses in the burning bush; and what did He say? In outline this:—

I have seen the affliction of My people.

I have heard their cry.

I know their sorrows.

I am come down to deliver them.

I will bring them up out of that land, unto a good land and a large, unto a land flowing with milk and honey.

I cannot resist pointing out to you, even at this early stage of my argument, that it has never been the will of the Almighty that trouble or sorrow should be the lot of His chosen people. Wilful persistence in open wickedness have ever prevented the hand of the covenant-keeping God of the chosen people from showering down upon them the blessings He hath promised.

And although God has hidden Himself for many years from the great bulk of His chosen people, the Ten Tribes of Israel, we may learn to our comfort, from Israel's exile in Egypt, that He still Sees their affliction. Hears their cry. Knows their sorrows. And will yet come down to deliver them, and bring them unto the land flowing with milk and honey, which He promised to give to their forefathers, as an inheritance for ever.

Moses went to the children of Israel with certain signs, and it is recorded of them that they believed; and when they heard that God had visited them, and looked upon their affliction, "they bowed their heads and worshipped." This national frame of mind is one which must again manifest itself.*

On the death of the first-born, the Israelites were literally driven out of the land. We must remember this, because it is predicted that when the chosen people are finally and firmly to be settled in the Land of Promise, they "shall not go out with haste, nor go by flight" (Isa. lii. 12). This passage seems to indicate somewhat of the world-wide supremacy of one portion of the chosen people.

Another point to be noticed is, that the term of Israel's exile in Egypt was a definite one. It was on the selfsame day that the hosts of the Lord went out from the land of Egypt, and we may confidently rely upon this, that it will be again on the selfsame day, according to the predictions of the prophets, that the remnant of Israel and the House of Judah will return to the land of their forefathers.

Encamped before the Red Sea, we have all the children of Israel, humanly speaking, utterly defenceless, "for the civilised state of Egyptian society required the absence of all arms, except when they were on military service." Imagine the consternation of the Israelites when they saw Pharaoh and all his host in hot pursuit. Again it is written, "They cried unto the Lord," and He prepared a mighty salvation for them in their passage through the Red Sea, and in the utter destruction of all their enemies. And when Israel saw that great work, the people "feared the Lord," and "believed the Lord."

Then sang Moses and the children of Israel a song unto the Lord—a song by some hundred years "the oldest poem in the world, and unexampled in sublimity and beauty."

At the time of the Exodus we must observe how literally and marvellously the covenant promise of a multitudinous seed was fulfilled, for the peopled numbered 2,000,000.

Forty years the chosen people sojourned in the wilderness, and thirty-eight of those years are an utter blank. "There is no record of those years of shame; the covenant seemed suspended." Here again note the silence and separation. Although Jehovah had withdrawn the visible manifestation of His presence from them, He was still with them, for at the end of the time Moses declared, "These forty years the Lord thy God hath been with thee, thou hast lacked nothing."

It would appear that during these years disaffection had spread among the leaders of the congregation, for we find that Korah, the Levite, Dathan and Abiram, the Reubenites, rebelled against Moses and Aaron, to their own destruction.

Note the significance of God's dealings with the chosen people. He appointed Moses to teach them in the wilderness, and Joshua to lead them into the land.

With respect to the multitudinous seed, we must here remark that the first census was taken at Mount Sinai, and the second about forty years after, "in the plains of Moab, by Jordan, near Jericho," and the difference between the two shows a total decrease of 1820. Now, when we consider the mortality occasioned by the conspiracy of Korah, we are constrained to acknowledge the justice and holiness, as well as the truth and faithfulness, of the great God of Israel: "His justice and holiness in the sweeping judgments that reduced the ranks of some Tribes, while His truth and faithfulness were manifested in the extraordinary increase of others, so that the posterity of Israel continued a numerous people."

The events which characterised the entrance of the chosen people into the Promised Land on the first return are worthy of a passing thought, as they bear direct reference to our own times, when we believe the second and final return of the chosen people to be not far distant.

Joshua sent out spies to spy the land. His instructions respecting the division of the land were very clear. It was to be divided by lot. To many was to be given more inheritance, to few less inheritance. Lastly, the placing of the chosen people in possession of the Promised Land was accompanied by a series of miraculous interpositions, such as the passage over Jordan, the taking of Jericho, the sun and moon standing still, and others.

Between the death of Joshua and the time of Samuel the chosen people were governed by non-regal rulers, called Judges.

The people served the Lord all the days of Joshua, and all the days of the elders that survived Joshua, and all that generation were gathered unto their fathers. But there arose another generation after them which knew not the Lord, nor yet the works which He had done for Israel. They went and served Baal and Ashtaroth, and God forsook them. He delivered them into the hand of the spoilers. He sold them into the hands of their enemies. They could not stand before their enemies. Then were they greatly distressed; but when they cried unto the Lord, then immediately He raised up for them a judge, deliverer, or saviour. When the chosen people continued faithful in their adherence to the true religion, they enjoyed universal peace, and a high measure of temporal prosperity. Whenever they declined and fell into corruption and idolatry, they suffered disastrous visitations from war and foreign oppression. Read the book of Judges, and you will find that whenever the chosen people, in the depths of their

* We pass over the method by which God brought the chosen people out of the land of Egypt, with a mighty hand, because the plagues of Egypt are so deeply significant in their teaching that they might well form the special subject of one lecture.

Digitized by Google

misery, cried unto the Lord, the deliverer was ready at hand, and the prayer answered.

If the chosen people have long been debarred the full realisation of the covenant blessings, it is because they have sinned against themselves and against their God, who has ever looked upon His people with eyes of compassion and with hands outstretched with mercy.

(To be continued).

THE IDENTITY A POWER.

THE Identity is not merely a subject to delight a patriot, or interest the learned; it is not a mere speculation, or a vain pursuit; Divinely created, it is warm with the breath of life, and God is using it for His name's sake, His honour, and His glory.

Its influence is manifest already. Where all was dark, light entered; doubts are removed, faith is strengthened; more, indifference is banished, scepticism overcome; the Book exalted.

The fight between good and evil was never waged more fiercely than it is at present. Satan's hosts are closing with the soldiers of the Cross. The latter are outnumbered; but reinforcements are at hand. The power of the Identity is being felt in the battle-field. Protestants to the very core, its adherents, are flocking round the standard of the Lord; and as Cromwell's Ironsides, trusting in Him, dismayed their foes, so will these theirs. Praising Jehovah with sounding tongues, they are resolved to maintain the faith the saints delivered, the faith the martyrs held.

Soon, there will not be a town without its Association. This means the strengthening of the hands of the clergy; for every believer in the Identity is morally bound to labour to the utmost for the extension of the kingdom of God; and when it is borne in mind what one can thus effect in the providence of God, what a telling answer we have to the falsehoods of those who state that we dishonour God!

Dishonour God, indeed! None honour Him more. None labour for Him more zealously. None speak for Him more boldly.

Those surnaming themselves by the name of Israel are in the thickest of the fight.

THOMAS BALES.

THE EDITOR OF THE "ROCK" AND OURSELVES. "WHICH SPOKE THE TRUTH?"

AT page 160 of our issue of April 16, 1879, No. 120, we challenged the editor of the Rock to prove the statements which we deemed that his correspondent had been allowed recklessly to make, to the effect that our views, as published, "practically revive the Judaizing heresy by which acceptance with God was made to rest not on the finished work of Christ, but on Identity with the family of Israel." We denied this and the other charges, and affirmed that neither we, nor any one else holding our views, had ever advanced such monstrous doctrines. We termed the allegations childish, defied their proof by reference to chapter and verse, and warned the readers of the Rock, as well as our own, that if the challenge were refused, we should call on them to take notice that a public writer, calling himself a leader of Christian public opinion, had ventured to traduce a body of his fellow-believers in our blessed Lord Jesus Christ, without cause and without a shadow of a shade of justice or of reason, and that, when brought to task for it, he shrunk away from his position without venturing to defend it.

To this challenge the Rock has now replied. The reply is contained in eight lines of a "notice to correspondents," on page 330 of the issue for Friday, April 25, 1879. It is to the effect following:—

"Someone has sent us the BANNER OF ISRAEL containing some severe strictures on our condemnation of the Anglo-Israel craze. We have neither space nor inclination for controversy on visionary subjects of this kind, and should not have noticed this one at all if we did not regard it as mischievous as well as foolish. We are invited in one of the articles contained in the BANNER sent to us to 'exercise our reason'—we do and—reject the childish reasonings of of the 'Identification' advocates."

This speaks for itself. The attack, which is thus confessed to be unchristian, groundless, and cowardly in its character, is exploded when fairly faced; and the writers who ventured to accuse their fellow-believers of hateful and traitorous conduct to their Lord, are now fain to hide their diminished heads, and to admit, by silence, that their accusations were really untrue. We are sorry for the editor of the Rock. He poses very poorly in this affair. We trust, ere long, he will heartily regret he falsely accused those who, with the mens conscia recti, know how to defend themselves.

A NEW YEAR'S WISH—CONFEDERATION.

OUR gratitude and greeting fair,
O'er land and sea to Britain bear,
Who doth a statesman true provide,
The fortunes of this land to guide.
Beneath his sway shall trade increase,
The grateful land shall rest in peace;
War's wild alarms shall cease to fright,
And unity prove Afric's might.

(From the Natal Mercury, January 20, 1879.)

Review.

The Anglo-Saxons and the Israelites. By the Rev. J. B. Clifford, M.A., Vicar of St. Matthew's, Kingsdown, Bristol. Price fourpence. Hamilton, Adams & Co., 32, Paternoster-row; J. E. Chillcott, Bristol.

THIRD NOTICE. BY THE EDITOR.

(Continued from page 211).

AT pages 16 and 17 Mr. Clifford has referred us to the authority of Pinkerton in his "Dissertation on the Scythians or Goths," both as conclusive regarding the immense antiquity of the Scythians, from whom the Sacæ or Saxons sprung, and also as confirmatory, we suppose, of the wonderful dictum of Faber, lately so cleverly demolished by the Rev. B. Wrey Savile, that the British Christian nation is descended from God-cursed Ham, the father of Canaan! Now, we have all respect for Pinkerton, and for his profound learning. Of him, however, we must say what the Rev. Mr. Savile observed regarding Faber, that, had he lived in the present day, with our increased knowledge of the history of races—nay, had he even lived to write after Sharon Turner—he had probably not fallen into the stupendous errors he adopted in regard to the enormous age he assigns to the Scyths and Sacæ, and that without the slightest foundation. We have no doubt that the Rev. Mr. Clifford, though he seems to have a high respect for Sharon Turner, has not the remotest idea of the opinion that writer formed of Pinkerton, and his title to be heard on this very question of the alleged antiquity of the Scyths and Saxons. Let the reader mark what we quote. It will be found as Note 1, p. 56, chap. i., book ii., vol i., Anglo-Saxons (Sixth edition). It is as follows:—"Mr. Archdeacon Coxe, in his 'Vindication of the Celts,' has rebuked many of Mr. Pinkerton's erroneous opinions, unfounded declarations, wrong quotations, and misconstruction, and misapplication of several ancient authorities. But amid these faults I have no doubt of the correctness of Pinkerton's general notion, that the German, Scythian, and Gothic nations were of the same generic family. This is all I can praise in his 'Dissertation on the Goths;' for the chronology which he attempts to build up, and many of his details, are not only unwarranted, but inconsistent with true history." (The italics are ours). This is the high authority, ignoring all modern writers, that Mr. Clifford, with seeming candour, points to, as the best guide we can have in regards to the antiquity of the Scyths and Sacæ! Surely he here either exposes his own ignorance, or presumes on the ignorance of his readers. What does he mean, when on page 14, he tells us Turner's views coincide with Pinkerton's and Faber's? We do not know which to admire most, Mr. Clifford's simplicity in referring us to Sharon Turner's History, where the condemnation of Pinkerton is distinctly recorded—without our opponent having the least suspicion of that fact—or the folly of a divine who ventures into print to prove the Hamitic origin of the most blessed Christian nation now extant upon this earth, in the face of the Divine record, in the face of the Saxon Chronicle, and in the face of modern ethnographical authorities, whose testimony points distinctly in a Semitic, but not in a Hamitic, direction for the true ancestry of the British folk!

Digitized by Google

Let the reader note the character of John Pinkerton, whose testimony Mr. Clifford wants us to accept as an historian and ethnic authority, while Esdras' claim must be rejected! It will be found painted in the following colours at p. 835, vol. iv., Chas. Knight's "English Encyclopedia" (Biography). It appears Pinkerton was born A.D. 1758, and died in 1826. He wrote his "Dissertation on the Goths" in A.D. 1787 (not 1814), republished it in 1794, and therein exhibited (says his biographer) "strong anti-Celtic leanings." He shows "perversity and want of judgment on some points." "His works are repulsively written, from his unfortunate fancy for imitating Gibbon. He was violent, dogmatic, arrogant, self-conceited, pugnacious, contemptuous to all who opposed him; he made shallow and petulant attacks upon the Common Creed, in Religion and Morals! and these are more prominent, unhappily, than his learning and ingenuity!" This is our model authority we are asked by Mr. Clifford to follow! Sharon Turner, who also condemned Pinkerton's inaccuracy, wrote his "Anglo-Saxons" in A.D. 1799; was born in 1768, and died in 1847.

We have, with Mr. Savile's assistance, written enough now, we think, thoroughly to discredit the Rev. J. B. Clifford as an historical or ethnic authority competent to teach us anything whatsoever regarding the true origin of the Gothic or Scythian ancestors of the British. Finding him as faulty in this as we know he is in Hebrew philology (simply because that with that language he is totally unacquainted), we proceed now to note his argument as founded on Josephus and his "Antiquities of the Jews." Mr. Clifford holds, that since Josephus records that the Ten Tribes were in his day (A.D. 77) "an immense multitude beyond Euphrates;" that since Agrippa in his speech (reported by Josephus) is alleged to have said that the fellow-countrymen of the Jews were then in Adiabene, therefore the Ten Tribes, without exception, in A.D. 77, were in Media still, and not in Europe! He also adduces the testimony of Jerome (vol. iv., pages 298, 378, 399) to show that in his day (the fourth century A.D.) the Ten Tribes were still in the mountains and cities of the Medes, but not, as alleged, near Great Britain, and already occupying, or about to take possession of, that land as the Celts and Anglo-Saxons. The argument as stated primâ facie, of course, looks strong, and requires examination. We observe first, that because Josephus and Jerome record that to the best of their knowledge, the Ten Tribes were in their masses in Media still, in their day, that is no argument to rebut the assertion which ethnic science, supported by prophetic guiding, leads us to adopt—namely, that all through the centuries, from B.C. 700 down to the first and fourth centuries A.D., a large emigration Westward was taking place from the redundant surplus population of those same Tribes, whose marked characteristic God's Word tells us, was always abnormal fecundity. To deny this possibility would be just as reasonable as to deny that because the British nation is present in these islands now, in their vast millions as "the nucleus nation," there is not to-day an enormous scattering of the same race West, East, South, in America, South Africa, Australia, India, China, and the "Islands of the sea!" Even if Josephus and Jerome were correct in their facts, it is perfectly possible, and there is no historic or ethnic reason to contradict or discredit it, that the bulk of the nation being near Media still, in the time of Josephus, the emigrants of the previous centuries (being the preserved of Israel—Isa. xlix. 6) had previously made their way, painfully, across Europe; and finally, in the fifth century, had arrived at their destined, God-allotted home in "the Isles of the West" (Isa. xxiv. 15). We deny that ours are "conjectures and surmises." But we charge it on Mr. Clifford, that ignorant of true ethnic science, he has tried to foist on us the "unwarranted and inconsistent chronology of Pinkerton," and the absurd blunders of Faber, of which a tyro in science in these days would (one would think) be thoroughly ashamed! We have for our contention the support of modern and well-instructed ethnic writers; the full support of God's Word written, historical and prophetic; besides a mass of corroborative facts connected with the condition of this nation, exactly answering to Israel's promised status (never even noticed by Mr. Clifford), which, weighed against this opponent's crude and ill-digested theories, cause the latter "to kick the beam!"

The Rev. Mr. Clifford has many hard things to say against Esdras, the reputed author of the Apocryphal Book bearing his name, sometimes quoted by Identity writers, and recently by the Rev. B. Wrey Savile (Esd. chap. xiii. 37—46). We do not ourselves usually rely upon this passage as of any weight to our contention. But we beg to remind Mr. Clifford that by the sixth of our "Articles of Religion," the 1st and 2nd Books of Esdras are included among the books which "the Church doth read for example of life and instruction of manners, but yet doth it not apply them to establish any doctrine." We are authorised, therefore, to take what seems rational record of facts, and leave on one side all such extravagances of belief as Mr. Clifford objects to in Esdras' writing. We accept it, in short, till rebutted, as primâ facie good accepted history of events narrated by the author. The wild theological views of Gibbon, or Hume, are not usually regarded as objections to their historical statements; and the visions of Esdras we may equally reject while we read and weigh the historical facts he narrates as "our instruction in manners" and history.

The Rev. Herbert Marriott being about to deal with Mr. Clifford's Scriptural criticisms, and the Rev. B. Wrey Savile being, we hope, engaged on a dissertation to be published separately, to refute not only Mr. Clifford's historical errors, but to give a succinct account of the true ethnic descent of the British nation, we shall ourselves in a further notice of the pamphlet under review enter upon the vexed question of Psa. ii. 8, and explain in detail once more the reasons why we hold still (pace Mr. Clifford and his strictures on the "hideous blasphemy" of the view), that when the Lord gave the heathen, at Christ's request, the gift was from Father and Son together, to "the Lord's inheritance,"—that is, to Israel; and not especially to Christ Himself, since the heathen were His before! In regard to the language which Mr. Hine has used, to which Mr. Clifford draws attention, all we would observe is this: that we are not responsible for Mr. Hine, for his views, for his words, or for the language in which he usually clothes his thoughts! On several matters we are—quite as much as Mr. Clifford is—at issue with Mr. Hine; and the question of the present right of Judah to the offer of Christ's Gospel is, as all who read the BANNER know, one on which we differ from Mr. Hine toto coelo. We have in time past, and even lately, withstood him to the face regarding it. In reference to ourselves, we decline to own anyone as our "apostle." Our motto is, "Nullius addictus jurare in verba magistri." But we do say, that if Mr. Hine has used, as alleged, language to which Mr. Clifford objects as "venom" and "wicked vituperation" (page 40), that fact certainly does not justify an aged Christian minister (whose duty it is with meekness to remonstrate with those who have fallen into error, or oppose themselves) to brandish weapons forged in the same armoury in our faces. The use of invective that would shock if uttered by a layman, is certainly out of place in a minister of the meek and lowly Jesus, who, when "He was reviled, reviled not again" (1 Peter ii. 21—23).

Digitized by Google

(To be continued.)

THE MEANS AND THE PLACE.

By the Rev. Herbert Marriott, M.A.

There are two very concise and significant prophecies respecting the means by which Israel would be recovered to the Mighty One connected with the particular place in which this recovery would be effected, which are well worth the investigation of your enlightened readers. Jeremiah being by far the least metaphorical of our prophets, I will give his words first, and then the less obvious, but not less deep and significant words of our prophet Isaiah.

Jeremiah xxxi. 10: "Hear the Word of Jehovah, O united Tribes, publish it in the Isles afar off, and say, the Scatterer of Israel will gather him, and will keep him as a shepherd his flock."

A plainer statement could not be made: the word Gog, which I have translated "United Tribes," is used of the Israelites as a nation separated from other nations; and is generally rendered by εθνος in the LXX., which is a general term. Now as Jeremiah is proclaiming his words to Israel, the word is necessarily so far restricted in this particular verse. The intelligent reader will observe in this word a latent reference to the re-union of the Tribes in the place prepared for them—viz., The British Isles.

The passage in Isaiah xxiv. 15: "Wherefore through the oracles (see Jno. xvii. 17: 'Sanctify them through Thy truth') ye shall glorify Jehovah in the isles of the sea."

Jeremiah places—first, the Word of Jehovah; secondly, in the isles. Isaiah places—first, the Divine revelation; secondly, in the isles of the sea.

I could expatiate at considerable length on these two parallel passages rife with import, pregnant with Divine foreknowledge; but forbear, knowing, from long experience of the pages of the Banner, that your readers and contributors are amongst those of whom it may be said, Verbum sat sapientibus (Dan. xii. 10: "The wise shall understand").

THE SUPPOSED OBSCURITY OF JEREMIAH XXXI. 22.

By the Rev. Herbert Marriott, M.A.

There are some prophecies connected with our race which have been so elaborately involved in mystery by our translators, who "seem to have done it, that they might refer (I quote Bishop Newton) to some favourite idea of their own; that it is not possible for our English reader to perceive the true meaning of the inspired writer—in other words, to hear the Word of Jehovah."

My own plan in all these obscurities is to translate literally, and if asked why our translators under James I. did not do so, I can simply reply, Because they were afraid to trust the text. Jer. xxxi. 22 is quite as easy to understand as any other inspired Word of this plain prophet. It runs thus:—"How long wilt thou wander, O backsliding daughter? For Jehovah has created something new in the land; the spouse shall return to the Mighty One."

Here we have—first, a remonstrance with Israel who had wandered into spiritual fornication or idolatry in the Lo-Ammi state; secondly, an established purpose that this bride should become Ammi, for "I am married unto you, saith Jehovah."

I recommend all English readers to erase from their Bibles the words as they stand in our version, and substitute the original roots as above.

Note.—In the last article, Banner No. 123, I should have said the actual Hebrew phrase given by the prophet in Isaiah xix. 19—viz., "An Altar to the Lord," may be read, in the "horizontal passage" leading to well's mouth, in number, thus:—מזבח ליהוה = 57 + 56 = 113 units. Then length of passage roof + floor's length, we have 57 + 56 = 113 units. Thus the Great Pyramid grandly testifies itself to be the veritable "Altar to the Lord" according to the prophetic declaration.—Chas. Horner.

Correspondence.

ENGLAND, RUSSIA, AND ISRAEL.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

Sir,—The Liberal Press would gain nothing by forcing on a dissolution at the present time, even if they were to succeed, as the determination of certain members of the Opposition to frustrate the final settlement of the wars in India and Africa will not be forgotten at the next election. They cannot shelter themselves under the plea of Christianity or economy for their opposition to the present small wars, which were stirred up by Russian design and forced upon the Government in their self-defence and have been the means of averting a more gigantic war with Russia, which would have deluged the whole of Europe with bloodshed.

England must expect vast responsibilities in proportion to the great extent of her dominions and trade. The "Inheritance of the Heathen" was allotted to her people by Almighty God for the purpose of Christianising them or driving them out of the land; and the same success which was awarded to those kings of Israel who uprooted idolatry from amongst their Tribes has invariably followed the British arms from the time of the great Reformation, when Popish idolatry and priestcraft were nationally abjured.

The great troubles and disasters which are prophesied to befall Russia and the nations who are the persecutors of Israel will be averted from England, and political and religious prosperity will ensue as the recent discovery of the Ten Tribes of Israel becomes revealed and more extensively made public amongst us; also by the restoration of the Two Tribes of Judah to the Holy Land. To many it would appear a miracle that these events should happen during the reign of our Sovereign Queen Victoria, that kings should have become their nursing fathers, and queens the nursing mothers of Israel, that the State ship should be piloted by the discerning eye of "Tancred," amidst the rocks and shoals of Europe, Asia, and Africa, with the satisfaction of witnessing each hemisphere in turn succumbing to his far-sighted wisdom and guidance. In shaping his course Eastwards, this distinguished astrologer and pilot turned his back upon the "Great Bear," fixed his eyes steadily upon the "Star in the East," which heralded the birth of Israel's rejected Messiah, and pondered over His desertion by the kings and princes of the East, and the destruction of their vast Empires in succession; but, the same star pointing Westward, rested for a time over Central Europe, where it kindled the glorious Reformation light that rendered Germany prosperous and powerful. The eye of the faithful pilot, still pursuing his Westward course in search of Israel, witnessed the star become stationary above a small island in "the North and the West," which, being enveloped "in the pillar of cloud by day, and by the pillar of fire by night, marked the abode of busy, peaceful Israel, who, after their long wanderings from the idolatrous East, found a secure retreat for the worship of their true Messiah. To the joy of every Englishman, let it be known the same island is the "Sabbath-keeping and Bible-loving" Britain, "which possesses the Gates of her enemies" in order to bar them against the future invasion of Russian priestcraft and of Popish idolatry. Yours obediently, Harefield, Exeter, May 14, 1879. W. H. Peters.

The First Annual Meeting of the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association was held in Exeter Hall, on Monday evening last, May 19th, when the Hall was quite full with a most respectable assembly, earnest in the good cause, amongst whom may be included—The Duke of Mantua, Count and Countess Bentinck, Sir Leopold McClintock, General Burgh, Colonel Hardy, Colonel Bentinck, Henry Leslie, Esq. (the eminent musician), John T. Fletcher, Esq., J.P., C.L., W. H. Peters, Esq., J.P., D. A. Onslow, Esq., J.P., Dr. G. P. Rugg, Lady Jane Ellice, Rev. Dr. Moore, Rector of Dagenham, Rev. E. W. Wilson, James L. Wood, Esq., &c. The chair was taken by Admiral Dunn. The Report, which was of a cheerful character, was read by the Secretary; that part of it relating to the munificent gift of £300 to the Society by W. H. Peters, Esq., being received with loud applause. The speakers were the Rev. Dr. Moore, who opened with prayer; Rev. H. Newton, B.A.; Messrs. E. W. Bird, D. A. Onslow, W. H. Peters, C. Stubbs, B.A., Colonel Bentinck, B. Canney, F. C. Danvers. Altogether, the meeting was a grand success; a fuller report of which may be expected in the next number of the Banner. The Hon. Sec. of the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association desires to thank Miss Kelly, of Hoxton, for her kind gift of some valuable books for the reference library of the Association, and commends this mode of helping the cause to other friends who may be in a position to do the same.

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements

(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O.O. payable at Ludgate-circus.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed :—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

BANNER FREE CIRCULATION FUND.

	£	s.	d.
Mrs. Sherwell	0	5	0

NEW BOOKS AND NEW EDITIONS.

Now Ready.

THE PROMISES TO ABRAHAM, WITH SELECT REFERENCES AND EXPLANATORY NOTES,

To which is added an article entitled,

"ISRAEL AMONG THE GENTILES."

BY W. S. CAVILL.

Reprinted from the pages of "Life from the Dead," with Emendations and Corrections.

Price Sixpence, or free by post, Sevenpence.

London: Published by ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, and may be had of all Booksellers.

NOW READY, price 2d., post free, 2½d.
NEW PAMPHLET BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

THE HISTORICAL, ETHNIC, AND PHILOLOGICAL ARGUMENTS in PROOF of BRITISH IDENTITY with the TEN LOST TRIBES OF ISRAEL, clearly and simply stated.

BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

CONTENTS:—Introduction—The Celts—Professor Rawlinson's Testimony—The Cymry—The Cimmerii—The Gimiri and Khumri—The Testimony of the Nimroud Obelisk—The Scythians—The Anglo-Saxons—Sharon Turner's Testimony—The Jutes and Angles—The Danes and the Normans—General Conclusions—Philology—The Welsh Language—The Rev. Canon Lysons' Testimony—Idiomatic Identity Between Hebrew and English—Tyndal's Testimony—The Tribe of Dan—The Irish Celts—Are the Continental Nations Israelites?—Conclusions—Appendix.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane; and Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Just out. Price 4d.

NEBUCHADNEZZAR'S DREAM and THE BRITISH EMPIRE. By Ephraim. With Illustrative Prophetic Map.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; Sold by W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

This day. Price 2d. Post free 2½d.

MANASSEH AND THE UNITED STATES. An important Essay delivered before the "Lost Israel Identification Society," by the Rev. Joseph Wild, D.D., at Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, New York.

CONTENTS:—The Fulness of the Gentiles set in—For whom did God intend America—The Origin of the United States The Footsteps of Ephraim and Manasseh—The Will of Jacob made to Ephraim and Manasseh—Manasseh a People, and a Great People—Manasseh's Birthtime of Separation—Out of nearly Sixty Conquered Colonies the only one England ever Lost was that of Manasseh (America)—The Great Seal of the United States—Manasseh was brought up at the Door of the Pyramid, &c., &c.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.; and of any Bookseller.

Second edition, just published. Price 1s. 6d.; Cloth, gilt edges, 2s. 6d. Post free for 20 or 33 stamps.

THE PILLAR OF WITNESS. A Scriptural View of the GREAT PYRAMID. By the late Commander B. W. TRACEY, R.N.

W. H Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

PUBLIC ANNOUNCEMENTS.

PUBLIC HALL, GRAVESEND.

A LECTURE

Will be delivered (D.V.) in the above Hall,

On Wednesday, May 28th—

CHARLES STUBBS, ESQ., B.A.

Subject—

"OUR INHERITANCE IN THE PYRAMID."

The Chair will be taken at 8 o'clock.

Admission Free. Enquirers are cordially invited.

Tickets for Reserved Seats may be had gratis, of Mr. Marriner, Stationer, etc., 7, Milton-road, Gravesend.

At the close of the Lecture a Collection will be taken in aid of the Funds of the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association.

Office: 20, Warwick Lane, London, E.C.

LECTURE HALL, ST. AUBYN'S ROAD, UPPER NORWOOD.

A LECTURE

Will be delivered (D.V.) in the above Hall,

On Thursday, May 29th,

DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, ESQ., J.P.,

Subject:—"THE STONE KINGDOM OF DANIEL."

Chairman: DR. P. H. ROE.

The Chair will be taken at 7.30.

Admission Free. Enquirers are cordially invited.

At the close of the Lecture a Collection will be taken in aid of the Funds of the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association.

Office:—20, Warwick Lane, London, E.C.

HASTINGS AND ST. LEONARDS ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION, Auxiliary to the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association.

President:—

Lieut.-Col. W. H. LARKINS, Dymock, Ore.

Treasurer:—

Mr. COULTHWAITE, St. Andrew's Schools.

Hon., Secretaries:—

Mr. B. SARGENT, 37, London Road, St. Leonards.

Mr. J. R. MITCHELL, 52, St. Andrew's Road, Hastings.

Committee:—

Messrs. WHITEMAN, W. DUNGEY, KENT, PRYOR, R. GREEN.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION. Temporary office: 20, Warwick-lane, London, E.C. This Association is prepared to send out experienced and well QUALIFIED GENTLEMEN to LECTURE on the subject of "The Identity of the British Race with the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel." The terms are such as involve no liabilities as to loss, &c. Upon those needing their services—which are not restricted to the Metropolitan area—all applications as to the Lecturers, Subjects, &c., to be made to the Hon. Sec., JAMES BILLINGTON, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

LO AMMI—NOT MY PEOPLE. A Handbill for shop-windows and for private circulation has been prepared, showing the connection between Hosea i. 10, as Prophecy, and the titles of various pamphlets of our opponents, recently issued from the press, as Fulfilments. To be had of W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane; Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; and of Philo-Israel, Bristol. Price 2s. per 100, or 3d. per dozen.

ARE ENGLISHMEN ISRAELITES? The Debate in Exeter Hall between Mr. Edward Hine and Mr. Robert Roberts. Just published, with appendix and answers to correspondents. Demy octavo, about 130 pp. Price 1s.

London: F. Pitman, 20, Paternoster-row. Birmingham: R. Roberts, Athenæum Rooms, Temple-row.

New and Revised Edition, Price 6d. Cloth boards, 1s.

THE "NEW OLD STORY," with an Introduction to a Marvellous Puzzle. The Story gives a sketch of the History of the Hebrews, shewing distinctly the difference between the Two Nations, Judah and Israel, the latter being the British. The Story also tells of the Great Pyramid, and explains how its wonderful meaning can be, as it is only understood by measurement. An Appendix explains "The Eastern Question." The Story is written with great simplicity, and interests young children. By A E I, Author of "The Answer to the Eastern Question."

W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

BANNER OF ISRAEL. VOL. II. Now ready, price 7s., of all Booksellers.

BOOKS, ETC.

18th Annual Issue, price 2d., post free 3d., 36 pages closely printed matter.

MAY MEETING VISITORS, be sure and get the A B C Church and Chapel Directory. The best and only correct guide to all London and Suburban Protestant Places of Worship, Ministers, Times of Service, &c., &c. A cheap and reliable Christian Guide Book to London.

The Record says: "A well-arranged List of all the London and Suburban Protestant Places of Worship, with the Clergy who officiate, services, &c. Exceedingly useful."

The Nonconformist says: "Very useful—containing a mass of useful information, which will be serviceable to visitors to London, not less than to permanent residents in the metropolis."

The Christian Times says: "We know of no work where so much information is gathered under one cover. It must command an extensive circulation."

The Morning Advertiser says: "One of the most useful Christian Hand-Books we have met with for a long time."

The Rock says: "It is a most excellent guide to all Protestant Places of Worship in London."

The English Independent says: "Contains a quantity of ecclesiastical information very useful to visitors as well as residents in London."

The Church Standard says: "Compiled with great care, and published at such a modest price as to bring it within the reach of all."

The Protestant says: "Neatly got up, and seems to have been carefully compiled."

London: ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Just published.

THE COMING COLLISION BETWEEN ENGLAND AND RUSSIA PREDICTED BY EZEKIEL; forming a Proof of the Identity of England with the Israel of Prophecy. Price 1s., post free 1s. 1d.

W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C. List of works on the Identity forwarded post free upon application.

PHOTOGRAPHIC PORTRAITS OF PHILO-ISRAEL, Editor of THE BANNER OF ISRAEL, Author of "The History of the House of Israel," &c., &c. Cabinet, 2s., post free; Carte-de-Visites, 1s., post free.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

TO AUTHORS. Authors desirous of issuing Works or Pamphlets on the great and increasingly interesting Question of the Identity of the Lost Ten Tribes with the British Nation, should first communicate with Robert Banks, of Racquet-court, Fleet-street, who has already been honoured by issuing, amongst others, the following works on the subject:

The Banner of Israel. Weekly 1d.; monthly 7d.

The Nation's Glory Leader. Weekly 1d.; quarterly 1s. 4d.

The Pillar of Witness. By late Captain Tracey. Cloth 2s. 6d.; paper 1s. 6d. (second edition).

The Anglo-Israel Post Bag. By Bishop Titcomb. Cloth 2s. 6d.; paper 1s. 6d. (second edition).

The History of the House of Israel. By Philo-Israel. Cloth 1s.; paper 6d. (sixth thousand).

The Great Pyramid of Egypt. Fifty-two pages, with three illustrations. Price 4d. (10,000).

The New Old Story. By A E I. Cloth 1s.

J. HANDLEY, 20, Paradise-st., BIRMINGHAM, Agent for the BANNER OF ISRAEL, and all Works on the Identity.

DEAFNESS CURED, NOISES IN THE EARS, &c. SPECIAL OFFER TO THE DEAF.

THE REV. E. J. SILVERTON having discovered that there are tens of thousands who are unable to obtain his 11s. Box of Aurial Remedy which has cured so many persons of Deafness and Noises in the Ears, &c., begs now to offer a 2s. 6d. Box of the Medicine, so as to put it within the reach of all. This arrangement is specially made to meet the deaf world. With every box of medicine will be presented the Rev. E. J. Silverton's "Health Advocate," containing valuable advice and information that everyone ought to know. Post Office Orders for 2s. 6d. to E. J. SILVERTON, Minister of Exeter Hall Church, Nottingham, or stamps, 2s. 8d.

WOOLS! WOOLS! WOOLS! Cheapest and Best. White and Black Berlin, Single and Double, 3s. 6d. per pound. Best quality Ice Wools, all Colours, 5½. per ounce ball. All other Wools at proportionate prices. Shetland, Andalusian, Fleecy, and Bonne Mere Wools. Welsh, Scotch, Peacock Victoria, and other Yarns. Crewel Filoselle Silk. M. WHELLENS, Wholesale and Retail Wool Warehouse, 3, 5, & 6, QUEEN'S TERRACE, CAMDEN ROAD, LONDON.

Send for Price List and Sampler, which will be forwarded free on application.

LADIES' SILK SCARVES, price 1s. The choicest Silk Scarf ever offered. All Colours; richly brocaded ends. Send stamps for a sample.

M. WHELLENS, 5 & 6, Queen's-terrace, Camden-road, London, N.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, 5, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, MAY 28, 1879. [All Rights Reserved.]

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. III. No. 127. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, JUNE 4, 1879. [DOUBLE NUMBER, TWOPENCE.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

PAGE

M. Littré, a French Savant, Gives Blind Testimony to Israel's Multitudinous Seed, and Coming Universal Empire 221
Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association 223
Time Indications of the Grand Gallery.—Part IV. By James Simpson 225
The Late Discussion Between Mr. E. Hine and Mr. R. Roberts. By E. J. Roberts 226
"Anglo-Saxons and the Israelites." By the Rev. J. B. Clifford, M.A. By L. G. A. R. 227
The Chosen People.—Part III. A Lecture by John T. Gott 228
Good News From the Anglo-Israel Association of New South Wales 229
Mr. John Greig, of Sunderland, Does Battle for Israel 230
Dr. Maitland on Romans xi. 25, and Genesis xlviii. 19 231
Anglo-Israel Truth, the Fulfilment of Old Testament Symbology.—Part I. By James Catterall 232
Reviews.—The Rev. J. B. Clifford's Pamphlet.—Part IV. By the Editor. "He saith, Ha, Ha; and he Smelleth the Battle afar off."—Job xxxix. 25 233
A New Testament Evidence of Israel's "Lo-ammi" Condition as Gentiles 235
Correspondence 245

M. LITTRÉ, A FRENCH SAVANT, GIVES BLIND TESTIMONY TO ISRAEL'S MULTITUDINOUS SEED, AND COMING UNIVERSAL EMPIRE.

WE have always thought the day would soon come when we should have to leave the Identity to be proved by our secular writers, and merely ourselves note their sayings, as they reach us. Who that read the Daily Telegraph leader of May 12, 1879, failed at once to think of the BANNER OF ISRAEL, and its much-reviled editor, and imagined that the whole might well have been the product of his too sanguine pen! We must re-produce almost the entire article for the benefit of our colonial fellow-Israelites, and of our readers in these Islands to whom the Daily Telegraph is not familiar. We hardly ever received so grand a confirmation of a large cluster of our Identity test-marks as this leader contains! We shall note them at the close of the article, to mark the points, but meanwhile beg our readers carefully to observe that while the prophecy of Hosea is a history of the House of Israel from Samaria to the British Isles, and back again to Palestine, the first chapter of that prophetic book is a sort of table of contents, of which the particulars are worked out in chapters ii., iv.—xiv. Where, then, has our nation's life reached in that table of contents? Manifestly at chap. i. 10, and that beyond the middle of the verse, nay, very near the end!

The article which follows proves that the British, as Israelites, have, beyond all nations of the earth, that sign which is described as constituting them "like the sand which is on the sea shore, which cannot be measured nor numbered." Our opponents' recent pamphlets, as we shall shortly show, prove that "in this place—the British Islands—it has been said to them Lo-ammi, or NOT God's people," and thus far the chapter in our history is accomplished. It only remains for these same, or other pamphleteers, to tell us British folk that we are "the sons of the living God," or the truly Christian nation; and "THEN," or as it is in the Hebrew original, "AND the children of Judah and the children of Israel shall be gathered together, and appoint themselves one head, and they shall come up out of the land, for great shall be the day of Jezreel."

We now ask our readers' particular attention to what the editor of the Daily Telegraph has to tell us regarding M. Littré's scientific conclusions respecting the present and future of the British Empire—the most magnificent (being Daniel's stone kingdom) the world has ever seen. He says:—

A few days ago our Paris correspondent drew attention to an interesting article from the pen of M. Littré, in which that well-known French scholar busies himself with the future of the leading races of the world. But now that the whole globe is practically revealed, and no more unknown continents or short routes by sea and land remain to be laid open, science undoubtedly takes the first place amongst the factors in the present and future which will "make mankind," and the gifts of science are now-a-days common property among civilised countries.

M. Littré, however, is so far justified in taking stock of the nations of the earth, that the existing division of race and sway is very strongly established, and future progression in commerce, art, and science, is more likely to increase geometrically the present superiority of leading peoples than greatly to transpose them. Prefacing his study with some such philosophic observations, the accomplished Frenchman stands ethnologically astounded at the figures which he meets with in surveying the British Empire. He speaks of the expansion of the English race and language as enormous, prolific beyond all Imperial fecundity, only half realised in Europe; for whatever, says M. Littré, may be the subsequent history of Canada, India, and Australia, in relation with the mother city of London—itself a nation—the British element is stamped in all of them far too deeply already to die out, so that at the end of all secular annals the broad arrow of England's influence must be permanent on these and a hundred other offsprings and dependencies. M. Littré is so struck by this magnificent arithmetic of her Majesty's dominions, that he passes quite late in his survey to the other prominent races, which he ranks in the following order:—The Chinese, the Russian, the Spanish nations of South America, the Germans, and the French, these last two representing more or less the scattered Teutonic and Latin populations.

If, then, the bare figures of the British rule produce so marked an effect upon the mind of this well-informed foreign savant, may it not be possible that many intelligent persons at home have never realised their force? Let us record some of the broadest facts about the Empire as it exists, stating them with the simplest brevity. Looking homewards first, it may be noted that we were in England and Wales, when the century commenced, a people of 9,000,000, but are now 24,000,000, while the inhabitants of the United Kingdom have increased from 16,000,000 odd to 34,000,000. The total population of the territories, ruled by her Majesty the Queen, may be to-day set at 290,000,000 of souls, in contrast with which the best authorities give to swarming China not more than 250,000,000, and to Russia, European and Asiatic, about 86,000,000, including Poland, Finland, and Turkestan. The area of the Empire, thus so very far outstripping, even in numbers, any other single sovereignty, is about 9,000,000 square miles, which may be roundly called seventy-five times greater than the parent islands, from which have issued this brood of "principalities and powers." The public debt of all these territories, taken together, is meantime not much larger than that of France, with her few outlying possessions, being about 970,000,000 sterling; but their conjoint revenue is far greater, amounting to 160,000,000, that of the French republic being 112,000,000. The total exports and imports of M. Littré's native land are about £300,000,000 in value; those of the British Empire—home, colonial, and Indian—reach £950,000,000 sterling, per annum. The greatest part of this majestic budget of supremacy has been added up since Newfoundland and Virginia were colonised; and, though the United States of America have long out-grown their connection with us, the place at the Imperial hearthstone, which that eldest daughter of Great Britain occupied, has been more than filled by the Indies —East and West—Guiana, the South African possessions, and the new and flourshing children of England in Australasia and New Zealand. These latter number, even now, many more inhabitants than did the thirteen united colonies, which a century ago threw off their union with us, although they never will or can throw off that close intrinsic tie of blood, language, and civilisation which makes them one for ever with the land of Shakespeare and Milton. Like a forest king this huge British oak grows at every branch unperceived. One of our latest acquisitions, the Fiji island group, is sometimes spoken of as though it were a small insular cluster, like the Hebrides or Scilly. Yet among 225 islands and islets, of which eighty are inhabited, this archipelago contains one larger than Jamaica, and another bigger than Cyprus, and it has lately been remarked that a fast steamer would occupy five or six days in steaming round the whole group. In Australia a continent is gradually becoming British, while New Zealand is but very little smaller than the entire area of these islands; and the Dominion of Canada, peopled by 4,000,000 of souls, is equal in extent to all Europe, omitting Norway and Sweden. Moreover, year by year the surplus of our home-brood overflows into these outlying dependencies, where from end to end of the earth's daily revolution the same laws, the same institutions, and the same ordered liberties exist.

Digitized by Google

These, roundly speaking, are the facts and figures which have called forth the admiration of M. Littré, and if we produce them, it is not in any boastful spirit. The accomplished French writer is simply correct in stating that nothing to approach such Imperial statistics was ever furnished before in history. The sway of the ancient Eastern Monarchs, the dominion of Macedonia, Carthage, Rome—and, in modern times, of the Czars—scarcely come into distant comparison with the enormous tracts of earth and the prodigious masses of mankind thus exhibited under the single sceptre of Queen Victoria. Coupling the immense advantages of such a predominance with the natural fecundity of the British race, and the lessening probability of any great historical changes of the kind so signally produced during the ages of discovery, M. Littré hardly sees where rivalry is to come from against us "in the struggle for existence," unless it be from the Slav or the Chinese movements as yet undeveloped. All this does not imply, of course, that the Latin and Teutonic elements are not and will not be of cardinal import and influence; but it does imply, according to M. Littré —since America is practically English—that the globe at large is likely to be Anglicised, if it be not Slavonised or overwhelmed by a Mongolian cataclysm. It is not British "Chauvinism," we think, but a true and lofty patriotism which should make every man born to a birthright of partnership in this splended inheritance proud of his breed, and eager to maintain the noble eminence of his country's flag. It is not partisanship, but wisdom and duty, which should incline every intelligent Englishman to sustain the statesmen who appreciate the responsibilites and opportunities of this wide sway, and to rebuke and disown those, however well deserving otherwise, who would diminish the prestige and shrink from the obligation of our magnificent strength. Great Britain must continue to grow in order that she may not decay; for the interval is brief and the prosperity illusory during that fatal period when powerful empires lose the instinct of vitality and withdraw from their destiny. Wherever England extends her authority, justice and freedom follow, and there is no dearer hope for mankind than that many a generation to come may see this marvellous agency of civilisation safely spreading, and still hear "the Queen's morning-drum beat round the world."

What are the lessons M. Littré and the editor of the Daily Telegraph, between them, teach us? They are these:—

1. That the British are beyond all compare the most numerous, and even now the most rapidly increasing race on the face of the earth. This, as we have already noticed, is the promise to "Lo-Ammi," "Outcast Israel," in Hosea i. 10, and in many another passage of God's Word.

2. That the wealth of this our nation exceeds the wealth of all the other nations of the earth. But this is God's blessing given to Israel alone, and that for a very special, specified purpose, as declared in Deut. viii. 18.

3. That though we "lost our children" when the American colonies rebelled, the children we have had since have more than filled the void, by the colonies sent out to South Africa, the East and West Indies, Australasia, and New Zealand. But these are the very words of Isaiah's prophecy, addressed to Israel, in chapter xlix. 19—21, and literally fulfil them in our own history, M. Littré being our French and quite "blind" witness!

4. That the British Empire, like a huge oak, "grows at every branch unperceived." But Israel was to blossom and bud and fill the face of the world with fruit (Isa. xxvii. 6), which finds thus its response to-day in British colonial history (see too, Matt. xiii. 31, 32).

5. That year by year our surplus population overflows into our outlying dependencies, which is only a paraphrase all can recognize, of Jacob's predictions regarding Joseph's seed, "the fruitful bough by a well, whose branches (or DAUGHTERS, marg.) run over the wall" (Gen. xlix. 22).

6. That no nation now extant, none of past ages, can compare with Queen Victoria's "enormous tracts of earth," and "prodigious masses of mankind," now given her for her possession—words that are parallel to the gift of God to Israel when He promised them, at Messiah's request, "the heathen" and "the uttermost parts of the earth," to have and to hold for Christ (Psa. ii. 8, cxi. 6, cxxxvi. 21, 22; Rev. ii. 26, 27).

7. That including the Americans as really "English," the globe at large is likely to be Anglicized, if it be not Slavonized or overwhelmed by a Chinese cataclysm—of which, however, even M. Littré sees, it seems, little chance! What is this but God's promise to Israel, and therefore to the British, that their's shall be finally "the kingdom, and the dominion, and the greatness of the kindgom, under the whole heaven, as the people of the saints of the Most High"—i.e., "the children of Israel, and their Prince Jehovah?" (Dan. vii. 27; Psa. cxlviii. 14).

We have said enough. Can our opponents be still so perverse as yet to contest the fact that the British are Israel? If they do, we believe the very stones will cry out and rebuke their God-dishonouring unbelief! We call on all our friends to rejoice and be exceeding glad, for such testimonies as those we have now detailed are proofs beyond all dispute that, being Israel, the hour of our redemption is drawing very nigh—and Oh! joyful fact! that our Lord, our glorious Lord, is close at hand! Israel, praise YE the Lord!

ERRATA.—In No. 126, page 218, first column, third line, for "regards" read "regard;" and on page 219, second column, Report of First Annual Meeting of Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association, for "Col. Hardy" read "Col. Le Hardy."

Digitized by Google

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

THE first Annual Meeting of this new and important Association was held at Exeter Hall on Monday evening, May 19th, 1879. The chair was taken at seven o'clock by Admiral Dunn. There was a respectable audience. The proceedings were commenced by the singing of the hymn beginning,

"O Israel, blest beyond compare,
Unrivalled all thy glories are."

An appropriate prayer was then offered by the Rev. Dr. MOORE, vicar of Dagenham, Essex.

The Rev. JAMES BILLINGTON, hon. secretary, read the report of the origin and operations of the Association since its formation, which was of a most gratifying and satisfactory character.

ADMIRAL DUNN, in his opening address, expressed his thankfulness that so young a society had been able to present a report of such a hopeful and encouraging character. Referring to the Association itself, he said,

Our secretary has just told you most of its objects, the principal one being that of spreading the good news that Lost Israel is found; in fact, that we—the English nation—are the Lost Ten Tribes. There are thousands of people in this kingdom who have not the slightest idea of the term. They are, generally speaking, under the impression that when Israelites are spoken of, Jews are meant. I remember that some four or five years ago was the first time I ever heard of the difference. I am ashamed of my ignorance, but I was asked by a friend of mine whether I knew that I was an Israelite. I laughed, and said, "Good gracious! do you take me for a Jew?" That was the state of my ignorance at the time. But, however, I am thankful to say that since then I have learned to know the difference —(hear, hear)—and I feel sure that after you have heard what these gentlemen who have come here to address you this evening have to say on the subject, you will take much home to think of and to reflect upon. This is a subject, dear friends, which is most interesting to us all. Most of us, I am afraid, take up the Bible and read a chapter here and there, or perhaps two, without really reflecting upon what we have read, and certainly not understanding it; but if you take up the whole Bible, what is it? After telling us as much as it is necessary for us to know of the creation of the world, the fall of man, and the flood, it goes on to give us a description of the call of Abram, of God's promises to him, and of his change of name to Abraham. After that the promise is renewed to Isaac and Jacob. It gives you a description of the Exodus from Egypt and the wandering of the children of Israel until they became a kingdom under Saul, David, and Solomon. After Solomon's death we are told that the kingdom was rent in twain, and since that time the two parts have never been re-united. One portion of it—Israel—in consequence of its idolatries under Jeroboam and other kings, was carried away captive by the Assyrians, and about 140 years afterwards the other portion of it—Judah—was carried captive into Babylon. After the account of the captivities, if you turn over the chapters of the Bible, you come to the book of Esther, and from that to the book of Job and the Psalms; and finally, you come to the prophets. Now, if you read over the books of the prophets, you find that they are full of the future of Judah and Israel, always speaking of them as two distinct nations, or two distinct peoples. We have, I know, many opponents. Some of them, among other things, will tell you that Israel returned to Jerusalem with Judah after the seventy years' captivity in Babylon, and that they have since merged into the Jews. Now, if such is the case, what becomes of God's promises which He sware by an oath—swearing by Himself because He could swear by no greater—that the seed of Abraham should be as the sand of the sea shore, or the stars of the heaven for multitude? We know from statistics that the whole number of the Jews throughout the entire world does not exceed about eight millions. Believe me, dear friends, this is a momentous question. We are living, I believe, in the times of the latter days, and it behoves us all to watch and pray. If you look round you, you read continually accounts of wars, rumours of wars, earthquakes and famines in divers places, distress of nations and perplexity, people's hearts failing them for fear of what is coming on the earth, all fulfilling our Saviour's own words. Then again there have been most wonderful discoveries made of late years in a building which I believe was constructed by the great Architect of the universe, or under Divine instructions. I allude to the Great Pyramid in Egypt. What has been discovered there leads us to believe that before very long, possibly within three or four years, something very remarkable will happen, though what it is of course no man can tell. But it is a subject for deep thought. I will not take up any more of the valuable time of this evening, dear friends, for there is much to be said to you yet; but I will refer your attention to those gentlemen who have kindly come here to speak to you this evening, and who will give you more particulars of what I have very briefly alluded to.

PHILO-ISRAEL, on being called upon to move the adoption of the report, and the appointment of the officers, which he did very cordially, received a hearty greeting by the audience, and said, I left my distant home in the West of England this morning with no other object whatever to bring me to London than to attend here on this platform, and by my presence and my words to express my approval and approbation of all the objects that the institution has before it. Its operations past, its operations present, and the programme that is put out for the future, I entirely approve. And I think that the operations of this society merit your approval as a whole. I have, therefore, very great pleasure in proposing the resolution which has been read to you, and I congratulate you upon your organization. I congratulate you upon your active committee, and upon your secretary. He is the right man in the right place. He is a man full of energy and full of power for organisation. I think that in all my Indian experience I have hardly ever seen a better organising power than there has already been exhibited by your secretary, and those who have been helping him during the few months that this association has been at work. You have got some capital lecturers on the committee, who, along with your honorary secretary, have been certainly carrying out a magnificent programme; and they are endeavouring to cover the suburbs of this metropolis with a network of lectures all upon the Identity. And not only that, but I am glad to say that they have a noble ambition. They not only want to occupy the metropolis, but they also want to occupy the United Kingdom, for I see that they have put out notice in the BANNER that applications should be made to them for lecturers, yet involving no liabilities to those who make them. They are not restricted to the metropolitan area. Therefore their exertions are exceedingly praiseworthy, and they make our association in Bristol somewhat ashamed of itself. We have not done half so much in our three years as you have done already, and mean to do, in your six months' existence. Not only that, but they have been carrying abroad and diffusing in all directions the Identity literature in a manner which astounds and surprises me, and they have sent in all directions the knowledge of this great cause, and this great truth, which I have so much at heart. Their example has excited and emulated others, in various localities, to desire associations in their own towns. Such has been the case in Lewisham, Hastings, and St. Leonards; and I am glad to know that the president of the St. Leonards and Hastings Associations, which have sprung up in consequence of lectures which have been delivered by the Metropolitan Association in those two towns, is present in this meeting, and can bear witness that what I say is true. I thank God for all this. Philo-Israel is glad of that; but he is glad of another thing, greater than that—that is, that the principles of the Association are so good. You may have a good cause, and good men working that cause, but if the principles that underlie the Association are not good, you cannot expect the blessing of the Father above. I think that the Association's motto is one that the Master will approve. It comes from the prophecies. That motto they have nailed to the mast; and you will understand that, Admiral Dunn. They are fighting under a banner that they have nailed to the mast. I see it published at the head of their prospectus, at the head of their notices, and I see that it is in their hands and hearts. It is taken from Jer. xxxi. 7, and is one that I am always quoting and telling you of in the BANNER OF ISRAEL, "Publish ye, praise ye, and say, O Lord, save Thy people, the remnant of Israel." What do these words mean? Let us just look at them, dear friends, for a few minutes. "Publish ye." Who are to publish? Why, we are to publish. Every man and every woman in this room is to publish. The duty of all of us is to publish this great truth. It is our committee's duty; it is my duty; it is your duty. "Publish ye." What are we to publish? The great and glorious news that Israel is found; that the Lost Ten Tribes are found in the Anglo-Saxon race, including America also; that they have been found just as God's Word stated that they should be found. We have to publish that God's Word has come literally true. They are found inconceivably multitudinous, split up into a nation and a company of nations; and God said that that should be the case with Israel. When found, they were to be a nation and a company of nations in the latter days, holding the Gates throughout the world in their own possession, their own Gates being intact, not one daring to touch their Gates—supreme at sea, mistress of the ocean, and also the chief of nations upon the land; invincible upon the land, as the Times newspaper said some time ago. And not only that, but abnormally wealthy—wealth given to them for a special purpose, that He, the great Jehovah, might establish by their means the covenant that He sware to their forefathers of old, as it is this day; and their possessions—the Queen's possessions—belting the whole earth and surrounding the Gentile nations, holding the strategical position which the victors always hold, surrounding their enemies. And not only that, but blest also with the two great spiritual signs—the Sabbath and the Decalogue. These people are even now looking for the great outpouring, the great spiritual blessing promised to Israel, and also afterwards to Judah, but first to Israel—that great new covenant which, I believe, will very shortly be poured out upon this great nation. They seek it, Sunday by Sunday, when they meet together in their high places, always praying that the Lord will be pleased to grant that His holy law should be written upon their hearts, and that it should be written upon their minds, and that they should be His people, and He their God. My dear friends, these are glorious and great things which this nation is doing, and which our friends are publishing, thereby showing that Lost Israel is found and carrying the blessed Gospel to the ends of the earth, and to all the families of the earth.

Digitized by Google

The speaker then referred to the conversion of a gentleman in India, arising from his first reading some numbers of the BANNER OF ISRAEL, which led him to examine his Bible to prove the things he read there; so the Identity question led to his conversion last November. The Identity leads to the Bible, and the Bible leads to the operations of the Holy Spirit on the heart of the reader. God honours that search, and so the sinner discovers that truth which is greater than the Identity. Let this be the answer to those who affirm that our doctrines are opposed to Christianity. The speaker then briefly alluded to the discoveries in the Great Pyramid, and the signs in the grand gallery there, which were believed to indicate the near coming of the Lord, and should therefore prompt us to live more useful, devoted, and holy lives. The constant cry of the BANNER is "Praise to God," and that should be also the constant cry of all the Lord's people, Israel. Prayer also characterises all our lecturers, and is part of our motto. Philo-Israel closed a lengthy, argumentative, and able address by a convincing refutation of the slanders which had been published in the Rock on the teaching of the Identity.

Mr. W. H. PETERS, J.P. (Exeter), seconded the resolution, and in doing so expressed his conviction that the pillar of cloud and fire which led the Israelites was an Identity when applied to England, and also that the fact of our having so many Hebrew words in our language was an Identity, and in particular the commonness with which the names of eleven of the apostles of our Lord were used in all parts of the land, these names themselves being used as surnames by the addition of a final s.

Mr. DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, J.P., proposed the second resolution, which acknowledged entire dependence upon God in making known the grand truth that the British people are the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel. He said that he had been lecturing on the Identity question, and the more attention he gave to it the greater he felt his responsibility; and noticing all the prophecies relating to our Lord's birth, life, and death, how very literally they had been fulfilled, so he believed all the prophecies relating to Israel would be also literally fulfilled. At some length he answered some of the objections raised by the opponents of the Identity question.

The Rev. HENRY NEWTON, M.A., vicar of St. Michael's, Southwark, seconded the resolution. At considerable length he expounded several prophecies which, to his mind, indicated clearly the importance of the discovery of the British people being Lost Israel found, and expressed his conviction that as the truths contained in the theses written by Luther, and nailed on the church door, have lived and spread like leaven, so will the truths contained in the discovery of our Identity diffuse themselves to the ends of the earth. The resolution was carried, and a collection made.

Mr. CHARLES STUBBS, B.A., moved the third resolution, the substance of which was, that the Identity is of the utmost importance to the Church of Christ, as it elucidates the hidden meaning of many portions of Scripture which have hitherto appeared irreconcilable, and it tends to the confounding of infidelity, and the increase of true religion. The speaker bore testimony that there was no heresy in this question, but that viewed either through the prophecies, or the knowledge we gain from the Great Pyramid, the Identity goes to confirm our belief in the entire Word of God.

COLONEL BENTINCK seconded the resolution, and in doing so, said he had not understood much that was in the Bible until he was made a believer in Christ, and found salvation. Both the Old and New Testaments then had new light in them, and when two years ago the Identity was named to him, after he had read what books he could get on the subject, the Word of God became to him additionally precious, especially as it enabled him clearly to understand many prophecies.

Mr. BENTINCK CANNEY supported the resolution, which was adopted.

The Rev. J. BILLINGTON, secretary, proposed thanks to the chairman and speakers, the former having travelled from Weston-super-Mare on purpose.

Mr. F. C. DANVERS, of the India Office, seconded, and spoke of important astronomical evidence which would soon become known, and which would help the confirmation of the Identity. The resolution was carried with applause.

ADMIRAL DUNN, in responding, urged upon all to pray for those who were spreading Identity knowledge, and that God would put a stop to infidelity, Sabbath breaking, and drunkenness. The meeting closed about ten o'clock.

NOTICE.—The Rev. H. Herbert Marriott, M.A., of Amberley, Stroud, will lecture at Clifton, Bristol, on Thursday, June 19, 1879, in refutation of the Rev. J. B. Clifford's late charges against Anglo-Israelites.

Digitized by Google

TIME INDICATIONS OF THE GRAND GALLERY.

By James Simpson.

(Concluded from page 153.)

PART IV.

In making the "fourscore years" of Judges iii. 30 extend to the beginning of the fourth servitude of chap. vi. 1, we have simply accepted the differential chronology in the margin of our Bibles at this place, without offering any theory of our own in regard to what appears a real difficulty. It is unlikely that Ehud's government extended, as Josephus supposes, over all these eighty years; and yet the next servitude (chap. iv. 1, 2) began soon after Ehud's death, and must have included Shamgar's judgeship as well as part of that of Deborah. Those who make the "fourscore years" retrospective, dating from the first rest obtained by Joshua and ending with Ehud's deliverance of Israel from Eglon king of Moab, appear to allow 20 years for the government of Ehud: and these added to the 20 years' oppression by Jabin and the 40 years' rest which followed, exactly make up 80 years as we have supposed. But whatever be the right explanation of this period, the 300 years of Judges xi. 26 do not admit, if they are interpreted literally and exactly, as we think they ought to be, of any extension beyond the limits we have assigned. For they date from the last year of the wanderings, when, after the conquest of Sihon king of the Amorites and Og king of Bashan, Israel arrived in the plains of Moab on the East of Jordan. This was but a few months before the crossing into Canaan; and when the "fourscore years" are interpreted as in the margin of our Bibles, there remain no more than 40 years for the period from the death of Moses to the beginning of the first servitude, in order to complete the 300 years to Jephtha. These 40 years cannot be reduced without unduly shortening the lives of the "elders," as has before been stated; yet neither can they be much extended when it is considered that Othniel, who about 7 years after the death of Moses was already a man valiant in war, lived to deliver Israel from Chushan-rishathaim and judge the nation 40 years thereafter (Josh. xv. 17; Judges iii. 11).

The twenty years of Samson are included in the latter part of the 40 years of Philistine ascendancy (Jud. xiii. 1—5, xv. 20); and these 40 years appear to have been contemporaneous with Eli's government, ending 7 months after his death (1 Sam. iv. 22, vi. 1).

The length of Samuel's government may be inferred approximately from the following data. He was still a youth at the death of Eli (1 Sam. ii. 22—26, iii. 1, &c.); and yet he was "old" (say 60 at the least), and assisted by his sons in the administration of justice, when the people demanded a king. As he lived to within 4, or 2, years of the end of Saul's 40 years, he would at his death be verging on 100. And thus we cannot allow much less or much more than 40 years for the time that he judged Israel before the anointing of Saul.

It has been suggested that the 450 years of Acts xiii. 20 may date from the Exodus. The passage, literally translated, runs thus: "And after that, as it were (or, about), four hundred and fifty years, He gave them judges, until Samuel," &c. It seems unnecessary to confine the 450 years to the period of the judges; they may embrace some portion of time antecedent thereto. Some, indeed, make them terminate at the beginning of the judges, or earlier, at the division of the land, and commence either about the time of Jacob's entrance into Egypt (those who adopt the long chronology of the Egyptian sojourn), or at the birth of Isaac (if the short reckoning be adopted). It seems preferable, however, to consider the Exodus as the era referred to in this verse; and the 450 years may then include the whole period of the judges, together with an interval of 88 years antecedent thereto. Thus, and thus only, does this passage appear to be reconcilable with the statement of time in 1 Kings vi. 1.

The date which has been assumed for the foundation of Solomon's temple—B.C. 1009—is lower by 3 years than that of Ussher; and, on the other hand, the date assumed for the destruction of the temple, July, B.C. 589, "in the 19th year of King Nebuchadnezzar" (reckoning his regnal years from B.C. 607, when he was associated with his father in the kingdom of Assyria and Babylon), is 1 year higher than Ussher's date; thus shortening by 4 years the intervening period, which measures the duration of the first temple. This deduction of 4 years may quite well be accounted for, without altering the date of the captivity of the Ten Tribes from the marginal date of B.C. 721, or doing violence in any degree to the numbers given in the books of Kings and Chronicles for the intervening reigns either of the Kings of Judah or of those of Israel (excepting in so far as the explanations given in the margin with regard to some of the latter reigns in both kingdoms require to be attended to).

If the Great Pyramid's date for the exodus from Egypt may, then, be regarded as fairly corroborated by Scripture, let us try the effect of correcting, by this epoch of B.C. 1543, the higher dates of sacred history, as these may be gathered from the various statements of time to be found in our English Bible. It would appear that from the call of Abram, in Ur of the Chaldees, to the exodus there elapsed 430 years (Exod. xii. 40, 41; Acts vii. 1; Gal. iii. 17). There is nothing in Exod. xii. which limits the 430 years' sojourning to the land of Egypt; nor can the 400 years of Gen. xv. 13 be limited in this way without limiting them also to the "affliction," which we know did not commence for at least a century after Jacob came into Egypt (Exod. i. 6—8). But as the sojourn in Egypt cannot Scripturally be extended to 500 years, it is clear that Genesis xv. 13 covers the whole interval from the birth of the promised seed Isaac to the exodus. The verse, indeed, evidently implies, what we know to have been the case, that the sojourning passed into three distinct phases or stages (each, however, running on to their common terminus at the exodus). "Thy seed shall be a stranger in a land that is not theirs;" that is the first stage, and was fulfilled in Isaac and Jacob as well as their descendants (Heb. xi. 9—13; Acts vii. 5; 1 Chron. xxix. 15). "And shall serve them;" that is the second stage, fulfilled during the whole of the Egyptian sojourn. "And they shall afflict them;" this last stage did not begin till after the death of Joseph "and all that generation," and only a short time before Moses was born. The "four hundred years" applies to the first part of the verse, the being a stranger; and the intervening clauses are parenthetic, describing the character of the later parts of that period.

As Abraham was 100 at the birth of Isaac, he must have been 70 at the beginning of the 430 years, which thus commence 5 years before he left Haran (Gen. xii. 4). It is usual to make Terah's life extend to near the end of these 5 years; it seems to me more probable that he died soon after reaching Haran, and that Abraham stayed about 5 years in that country after his father's death (See Josephus Ant., bk. i., chap. vii., § 2); and that thus he was born when Terah was 135, and not 130 years old. This places the birth of Abraham, 500 years before the exodus, in B.C. 2043; and of Terah in B.C. 2178. The generations in Genesis xi. give 222 years from the termination of the flood to the birth of Terah; hence the former event may be placed in B.C. 2400, or rather in the autumn of the preceding year B.C. 2401 (since it is generally agreed that the year of the continuance of the flood extended from autumn to autumn.)

Now this date of 2401 for Noah's exit from the ark and entrance into a new world, happens to be precisely twenty-four centuries distant from the birth of Christ, who came to make all things new (and the number twenty-four is typical in Scripture of a new creation). Moreover, the beginning of the flood in autumn, B.C. 2402, was 2401 years before the birth of the Saviour—i.e., $7 \times 7 \times 7 \times 7 = 49 \times 49$ = a jubilee of jubilees. Another date we have indicated in Gen. vi. 3: "My Spirit shall not always strive with man, for that he also is flesh: yet his days shall be 120 years."

Digitized by Google

These 120 years were undoubtedly a period of respite mercifully accorded to the old world, during which Noah was "a preacher of righteousness" in the days "when the long-suffering of God waited," "whilst the ark was a-preparing." One hundred and twenty years added to the date of the termination of the flood brings us to B.C. 2521—i.e., 2520 years, or 7 "times" before the birth of the Saviour. If the year during which the flood prevailed be deducted from the 120 years, the remaining period is also a Sabbatic one—17 weeks of years. "Noah was 500 years old: and Noah begat Shem, Ham, and Japheth." If this means that Noah had entered his 500th year, as in chap. vii. 6 compared with verse 11, then Shem, the father of the chosen seed, from whom came Immanuel, may have been born just 2500 years, a full jubilee of jubilees (50 × 50), before the birth of the Redeemer. Or the same may be true, if Shem was twin "brother of Japheth the elder" (Gen. x. 21), and born when Noah was 500 years complete. On either supposition, Noah was 500 in B.C. 2501, and, therefore, was born B.C. 3001, 3,000 years exactly before Christ.

The generations from Adam to Noah amount to 1,056 years: the creation of Adam is thus placed before the birth of Christ 4056 (or at the autumnal equinox of B.C. 4057). Ussher, it is well known, makes this interval only 4,000 years, a period admirably answering to the description of Paul in Gal. iv. 4: "When the fulness of the time was come, God sent forth His Son." Why, then, should there be an odd 56 years over and above that period? I would ask if these are not the 56 years of difference between the 7 "Immanuel months" so well contended for by Mr. Grattan Guinness in his recent work, and the 7,000 years of old tradition and modern Christian belief—the "week" of human history whose seventh day is the world's millennial Sabbath? As Mr. Guinness makes the 7 Immanuel months (which are = 144 jubilees of 49 years) and the Millennium, or seventh thousand years, end together, the former period must commence 56 years earlier than the latter—that is, B.C. 4056 instead of 4000 (assuming the Millennium to begin A.D. 2000). Perhaps these 56 years (emblematic in themselves, as being the product of 7 by 8, of an old creation re-created and perfected in a new one) were the time spent by our first parents in paradise, in holy and happy innocence, before "sin entered into the world, and death by sin." Then would 4,000 years exactly measure the interval from the fall to the first appearance of the promised Saviour, when the serpent was permitted to bruise His heel and gain a seeming victory; and 2,000 years more, the interval to His second and glorious coming, when Satan shall be bruised under His and our feet and bound, with his angels, in "chains of darkness" against the judgment of the great day.

Edinburgh, May 1, 1879.

P.S.—In Part II. of this paper, the day of our Lord's birth, September 30, B.C. 1, was in error stated to be a Thursday. It was really a Friday, the same day of the week on which His passion was accomplished.

The autumnal equinox of B.C. 4057 seems to have fallen on September 23 of proleptic New Style (about 9.40 p.m. for the longitude of Ararat), and that day was Saturday, the seventh day of our week, and, as usually understood, the primeval Sabbath. It appears also that the autumnal full moon of that year fell on Friday, September 22, and about a day and a half before the equinox. Hence the equinox may have coincided with the time of the monthly and biennial high or spring tide.

It may be noted that the length of the tropical year implied by our assumed length of the gallery floor (1881·6) is 365·2423396 mean solar days, a length just 12 seconds greater than the 365·2422 commonly assumed for its present value, and, therefore, very near the length which it must have possessed (according to astronomic records) at A.D. 0, that most central epoch of human time. It is very singular that then, and only then, did it possess the exact length from which the gallery's chronological index 1881·6 is derived (as at page 120), the more especially as that particular number co-ordinates so readily with the cyclic numbers of prophecy. For $1881{\cdot}6 \times 10 = 7 \times 7 \times 12 \times 32$; $7{,}056 = 7 \times 7 \times 12 \times 12$; $5{,}880 = 7 \times 7 \times 12 \times 10$. Observe also that $18{,}816 + 7{,}056 = 25{,}872$ $(= 7 \times 7 \times 12 \times 44)$, a nearer approach to the precessional period, or "year of the Pleiades," as usually quoted, than that given by the sum of the base diagonals of the Pyramid. The tropical year must have passed through the particular length which yields these results at some time within a century or two of the first advent—why not at that exact epoch?—J. S.

THE LATE DISCUSSION BETWEEN MR. E. HINE AND MR. R. ROBERTS.

By E. J. Roberts.

I am not one who can agree with the reasoning of Mr. Roberts in the recent discussion at Exeter Hall. To say that the conditional promises to Israel with respect to her national prosperity are entirely done away, appears to be a statement which is open to much questioning. They certainly were not all conditional. There are no conditions attached to the promise to Abraham in Gen. xxii. 17, &c. The blessing was promised for his obedience, but it is not added, "If thou shalt continue to obey," &c., &c. It was absolute: "Thy seed shall possess the Gate of his enemies; and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed." And as we read on, we will take the 28th Deut. as a chapter containing a cluster of promises of blessings or of curses, as the case may be; "if thou shalt hearken," or "if thou shalt not hearken." Now these conditions were certainly, as Mr. Roberts says, to all the Tribes, not to the Ten only; therefore he argues that what applies to the Ten applies also to the Two. And so far as the blessings are concerned, the whole Twelve, we know, over and over again, forfeited them. But as far as the curses are concerned, and we know that the whole deserved them, how is it that they (all Israel) exist at all, since the penalty of their sinning, in this 28th chapter, speaks of such fierceness of God's anger, that the result is simply destruction. But Mr. Roberts admits that the Ten are somewhere, and we know the Two are to be found. How comes this about, seeing that the conditions contended for have not borne their consequences—that is to say, in nonfulfilment? The truth is simply this—that the Ten Tribes which cut themselves off from the stock, have undergone the punishment for their disobedience, from the time of the revolt under Jeroboam until the time of their being assembled in Britain. Their banishment, so to speak, from God's favour, was of itself a tremendous penalty for their sin, and when assembled in part, or as a whole in these isles, it took hundreds of years before they, as a nation, did hearken or turn to the Lord at the Reformation. Israel has since enjoyed the blessing of being the "head and not the tail" as long as she has followed in God's ways, and God has been true to His promise by making her, in missionary work, a blessing to all nations. When Mr. Roberts speaks of conditions, what can be more to the point than Solomon's prayer (1 Kings viii.): "If Thy people sin against Thee . . . . and Thou be angry with them, and deliver them to the enemy, so that they carry them away captives, &c., far or near . . . . yet if they bethink themselves, and repent, and make supplication unto Thee, saying, We have sinned, &c., and so return unto Thee, then hear Thou their prayer and their supplication, and maintain their cause?" We have assurances in chapter ix. that God did hear this supplication, and the whole history of Israel, whether in Palestine or in Britain, constantly has given proofs of how God was with them when they turned to Him, and how He hid His face when they forgot Him. In the prophecies uttered soon after the revolt, we know how repeatedly Israel is mentioned as having, at least for a time, forfeited the blessings. Mr. Roberts looks upon this disobedience as fatal for ever. And this is where the difference principally lies. But where are the mercies of God? Are they clean gone? Let us consult His Word. With the fullest admission of Israel's departure from the ways of the Lord, let us see what He who cannot err says of His lost sheep. Hosea xi.: "My people are bent to backsliding from Me." Surely God knew this would be the case, when, to suit man's way of reasoning, He put the blessings and the curses before His creatures as a matter of choice. "Bent to backsliding." That was ever their tendency. Well, then, that being the case, Mr. Roberts' curses must come in. But what saith the Almighty? Hosea xi. 8: "How shall I give thee up? My heart is turned within Me; My repentings are kindled together." What! After saying that they had not kept to His conditions? Yes. Here follow more of the judgments (?): "I will not execute the fierceness of Mine anger; I will not return to destroy Ephraim." Why not, Mr. Roberts, if He had said so? Listen! "For I AM GOD, AND NOT MAN." "O Israel, thou hast destroyed thyself; but in Me is thine help." "Take with you words, and say, Take away all iniquity." Then follows, "I will heal their backslidings; I will love them freely, for Mine anger is turned away." Then in Micah vii.: "He retaineth not His anger for ever, because He delighteth in mercy;" and the closing verse gives us the key to all: "Thou wilt perform the truth to Jacob and the mercy to Abraham, which Thou hast sworn unto our fathers from the days of old." How could God give a promise upon oath, and then afterwards clog that promise with conditions? The Apostle Paul's argument in Galatians helps us to see the matter more clearly. In the third chapter he speaks of the law, than which nothing looks more conditional; but Paul assures us it cannot upset the promise which was given 400 years before. Christ's elect Church was chosen in Him from all eternity; but the backsliding of His children shall never be able eventually to shut them out of His kingdom. Their salvation, to a person who holds to conditions, or to the works of the law, would appear to depend upon their deeds; but Scripture triumphs in the majesty of God's promises, that the salvation might be sure to all the seed. So it is with the blessings to Israel. She has suffered, and will suffer for her backsliding; but the time we fully believe has come, when God has spoken to her comfortably, and made her, as He swore to Abraham, a blessing to all nations. If Britain be not Israel—and Mr. Roberts holds that the Ten Tribes are to be restored—how are they to go back? Where are they? Are they, at this advanced period of the world's history, to become so powerful that they can by force, by politics, by any human agency (and God works by means) be restored. How are they to become so great in Palestine that that country is to be the head-quarters for evangelising the world? Are they so quickly to increase in wealth and position as to lend to other nations, and not require assistance from any? (Deut. xv. 6). Yet this and every other Identity which is spoken of in the Word of God has been fulfilled by the British nation. We must not only take the promises in Deuteronomy, but those of the prophets when the separation had taken place. And we know that God had some fixed purpose in permitting the separation, for when Rehoboam (2 Chron. xi.) wanted to fight with Israel, he was checked by God: "Ye shall not go . . . . for this thing is done of Me."

Digitized by Google

A word on the discussion. It is a great pity that Mr. Hine undertook the matter at all. However he may be grounded in his subject, he is no match for so perfect a debater as Mr. Roberts, who, much to his honour be it said, with his powers of argument, possesses also so wonderful a knowledge of his Bible. But with those powers it does not follow he is right in the question before us. Many a Christian would be able in writing to disprove the arguments of unbelievers; but in a discussion the infidel, with his reasoning, and perhaps wonderful knowledge of texts, would in all probability be victorious. It is not given to all to possess good memories to call up passages at a moment's notice. Above all, it is a pity that the question of Judah's salvation was touched upon. It had nothing whatever to do with the Identity. In this, sir, I confess I never could hold Mr. Hine's views, and could never understand how anyone professing to believe the Bible could possibly see salvation out of Christ.

I do hope that some champion will come forward with the mantle of John Wilson resting on him—some one like the author of "Sixty Difficulties Answered," and offer combat to Mr. Roberts.

"ANGLO-SAXONS AND THE ISRAELITES," BY THE REV. J. B. CLIFFORD, M.A.

By L. G. A. R.

THE believers in our Identity must be glad to see in this work another feeble attempt to upset the main arguments upon which our convictions are based. From beginning to end there is nothing in this pamphlet but the reasoning of one prejudiced against the facts, without even so much as touching upon the Scriptural grounds. The matter lies thus. Our friend says we are descended from Cush. History seems to point to our descent from Japheth. The deduction from Scripture is, that we should be Shemitic. What a wonderful corroboration all this seems to be of the Word of the living God, "Israel is swallowed up; now shall they be among the Gentiles as a vessel wherein is no pleasure," so swallowed up as not to be discerned. The refutation of the arguments used in this pamphlet must devolve upon abler hands than mine. I would merely say, our author on pages 1, 39, and 40, denounces us for having placed Judah alone under a curse, but he himself is so inconsistent as to place both Israel and Judah in the like predicament! For in his exhortation to believers in our Identity, he says, "And Oh, take heed, lest by this usurpation you do not bring upon yourselves, and upon our nation, the fulfilment of the awful threat, 'I have given Jacob to the curse and Israel to reproaches.'"

Our author, on page 41, says, "But there is another passage which our translation has rendered obscure, and which is constantly quoted by the Anglo-Israelites in favour of their theory—'A nation and a company of nations shall be of thee;'" and then he launches out into his reasoning against this assumption, saying, "The translation in our version is ill-chosen, and ought to have been regulated by Gen. xlix. 10." Finally, he quotes from Bishop Horsley, who translates the passage as follows:—"A nation and the Gatherer of nations shall arise from thee."

The same word which is translated "Company" in Gen. xxxv. 11, occurs in xxviii. 3, xlviii. 4, and is translated "Multitude" in connection with the promise the Lord Almighty made to Abraham and renewed to Jacob, that too, not as to the "One seed, which is Christ," but as to "the seeds as of many;" which blessing the dying patriarch, by the Spirit's direction, bestowed upon Ephraim, in still stronger terms as Melo-hag-goim a "fulness of nations," in xlviii. 19. This was explained in verse 16, thus, "And let them grow into a multitude in the midst of the earth" (margin, "as fishes do increase")—a blessing this, mark you, not given to Judah, of whom came the Chief Ruler, although the birthright was Joseph's (1 Chron. v. 2).

We cannot wonder at commentators striving to prove the truth of God's Holy Word, whilst they are themselves "blind in part," trying to make things fit into their small imaginations; but now that the latter days are upon us, and God's people are being brought forward with so many and such irresistible proofs of their Identity, we must not allow a passage any more to be called obscure, and the translation ill-chosen, by an opponent who will not accept the views because his mind is stored only with old treasure. The scribe who is instructed unto the kingdom of heaven is like unto an householder, which bringeth forth out of his treasure, things new and old. It would be well if some of our shepherds remembered this before they abused their flock for holding opinions contrary to those they themselves entertain.

Digitized by Google

The word occurring in Gen. xlix. 10, and translated "gathering" really means "obedience," "obsequiousness," "expectancy," and is only once more found in the Old Testament—viz., in Prov. xxx. 17, where it is rendered "to obey." Whereas the alleged "obscure" word in Gen. xxxv. 11 occurs 124 times, and is always rendered by one of the following :—"Congregation," "Assembly," "Company," "Multitude," and "All," and never rendered by any other word. Is then the translation given in our text, obscure? is it ill-chosen ? For the sake of proof, let us render it by "the Gatherer" in a few passages and see what sense can be made of it. Levit. xvi. 17 (latter part) would read thus, "Until He come out, and have made an atonement for Himself, and for His household, and for all the gatherer of Israel ;" Num. xiv. 5 thus, "Moses and Aaron fell on their faces before all the gatherer of the congregation of the children of Israel ;" xvi. 3 (latter part), "Wherefore then lift ye up yourselves above the gatherer of the Lord ;" xx. 4, "And why have ye brought up the gatherer of the Lord into this wilderness ?" Deut. xxxi. 30, "And Moses spake in the ears of all the gatherer of Israel," &c. We might multiply instances and our Bible would then become indeed an "obscure" book ! Before closing I would say the word under discussion may be made to mean preacher by affixing a th and considerably altering the points ; and probably this word, as it is in Eccles. i. 1, 2, 12, vii. 27, xii. 9, 10, may have occurred to the minds of some as a make-shift; but this argument does not hold good, for the word under discussion is plain as plain can be; and cannot by any possibility be made to mean "the gatherer ;" therefore as of Judah was to come "the Christ," so of Joseph was to come "the company of nations," the unworthy instruments of a long-suffering Saviour.

God grant we may all act out the great work assigned unto us of being a blessing to all the earth by taking Christ to all nations.

THE CHOSEN PEOPLE.

A Lecture by John T. Gott.

(Continued from page 219).

PART III.

Between the death of Samson, the last of the Judges, and the birth of Samuel, the first of the prophets—a period which embraces about 50 years—we find it recorded that the Word of the Lord was "precious in those days—there was no open vision." Standing at the meeting-point of two diverging eras in the history of the chosen people, no figure occupies a more prominent place than Samuel. "The exquisite beauty of his early childhood—the vigour and wisdom of his administration as judge—the calm dignity with which he yields to the demands of the people, and bows to what he believes to be the Divine will—the energy with which he throws himself into the new system, alien as it was to his own personal feelings and cherished convictions—the self-forgetting zeal with which he devotes the whole of his powers to the efficient carrying out of its requirements—his warmth of affection for the youthful monarch who had supplanted him in the popular favour—the depth of his sorrow at the repeated failure of the chosen one whom he had been the instrument of raising to his high office—the reluctance with which he regards the breach as final, and seals Saul's rejection by anointing a successor—all combine to make up a portrait of no ordinary attractiveness, on which the mind rests with more complete satisfaction than on most of the heroes of the earlier and less perfect dispensation. After the death of Eli's two sons, Hophni and Phinehas, and the capture of the ark of the covenant, Holy Scripture is silent, and all speculation is vain. The twenty years of deep national humiliation and general confusion which followed are an absolute 'blank.' All we know is that Samuel was acknowledged in all parts of the country as a great prophet, and was thus quietly preparing for the important events in the nation's history in which he was destined to take a leading part. When he re-appears it is as the judge and deliverer of Israel, summoning the people to national repentance, and leading the armies of the Lord to victory over their enemies" (chap. vii.).—Canon Venables.

When Samuel was old, he appointed his sons to officiate as judges in the more distant parts of the land, but they walked not in the ways of their father, and their limited and occasional authority, combined with the disunion and jealousy of the various Tribes, created a desire for a united and permanent form of government. The elders of the people came to Samuel and said, "Behold, thou art old, and thy sons walk not in thy ways ; now make us a king to judge us like all the nations." This was a grievous national blunder. God was their King. The chosen people were never intended to be like other nations. The thing was very displeasing to Samuel, but God said to him, "They have not rejected thee, but they have rejected Me, that I should not reign over them." Samuel showed them, by samples of oppression and heavy exaction, the political servitude to which they would be reduced under a regal government, and predicted that they would assuredly have cause to repent of their rashness. Nevertheless, the people refused, and said, "Nay, but we will have a king over us, that we also may be like the nations : and that our king may judge us, and go out before us and fight our battles." This was the "conduct of the people whose glory and happiness it had been to be unlike other nations in having the Lord for their King and Lawgiver." The life of Saul, the first king over the chosen people, has been pronounced a disastrous failure, and must have fallen like a blight upon the cherished expectations of those who clamoured for a regal government.

When he was chosen king, there was none like him among all the people. We see in him a true spirit of humility when the royal dignity was offered to him : "Am not I a Benjamite, of the smallest of the Tribes of Israel (for the Tribe was nearly extinct), and my family the least of all the families of the Tribe ?" With such a spirit he could command his temper when the sons of Belial despised him, and brought him no presents ; and could pardon them, when, after his first great victory, the people demanded that these very men should be put to death. But we now perceive the downward career of King Saul. It began by disobedience to Samuel's command. True, he waited for the prophet seven days, but it is evident he was more ambitious of gaining the glory of a triumph to himself than of ascribing it to God. Again, in the matter of the Amalekites. He spared Agag, and the best of the flocks, and for this the kingdom was rent from him. Samuel came no more to see Saul : an evil spirit from God troubled him. Envy and jealousy took possession of him when he heard the women singing, "Saul hath slain his thousands, and David his ten thousands." This speedily paved the way for furious bursts of violent temper, ending in a spirit of murder towards David, whom he hunted "like a partridge upon the mountains." On the night before the fatal battle on the heights of Gilboa, we see this rebellious spirit seeking counsel of one that had a familiar spirit. No apology can be found for such a sin on his part. With Saul fell his house.

The second king was David—the man after God's own heart—the sweet singer of Israel. His was "a noble, a wondrous, and an humbling history." He was "a good man, yet his life was marred by crimes of a very gross character." He was a shepherd, a warrior, a poet, a prophet, and a king. He did much that contributed to the glory of God, and his Psalms are a rich heritage to the Church, and throw great light on his state of mind at different times. "The force of his character was vast, and the scope of his life was immense." In short, David was "a great sinner, a great penitent, and a great saint."

Digitized by Google

Solomon succeeded his father David, and no king ever ascended a throne under happier auspices. Though not the eldest son, according to Oriental notions, he had the most right to the throne because he was born after his father had become monarch over the whole of the Tribes of Israel. The chosen people at that time enjoyed internal prosperity, and were respected and renowned abroad. It was appointed that in and through the chosen people all the families of the earth should be blessed, and in those days it might appear to many that they were about to participate in the full realization of the covenant promises. I must remind you here of Solomon's prayer for wisdom, and an understanding heart. Wisdom, not so much of the heart as the head; not for himself personally, but for his office, "such as would qualify him for the administration of justice, the government of a kingdom, and for the attainment of general scientific knowledge." Solomon was king, and eleven princes assisted him in the government of his prosperous kingdom. Solomon reigned over all the kingdoms between the Euphrates and the Mediterranean, the limits of the territory promised to the patriarchs, and had peace on all sides round about him. Judah and Israel dwelt safely, every man under his vine and under his fig tree, from Dan even to Beersheba, all the days of Solomon. He was wiser than all men. His fame was in all nations. He spake 3,000 proverbs. His songs were 1005. He spake of trees from the cedar to the hyssop. There came of all people to hear the wisdom of Solomon, from all kings of the earth which had heard of his wisdom. The crowning event in his reign was the building of the temple, a work which occupied seven years and a half, and its solemn dedication eleven months after, in the year of jubilee. Solomon's blessing, prayer, and his sacrifice of peace offerings brought gladsome joy to the hearts of the chosen people. Seven days were occupied with the dedication, seven were devoted to the feast of the tabernacle. On the eighth day he sent the people away, and they blessed the king, and went unto their tents, joyful and glad of heart for all the goodness that the Lord had done for David His servant, and for Israel His people (1 Kings viii. 66). Then God made a solemn covenant with Solomon. The next great event in his reign was the visit of the Queen of Sheba to prove the wisdom of Solomon. And what was her judgment? "It was a true report that I heard in mine own land of thy acts and of thy wisdom. Howbeit, I believed not the words until I came, and mine eyes had seen it, and behold, the half was not told me; thou hast added wisdom and goodness to the fame which I heard."

Solomon enriched his royal exchequer, and increased the prosperity of his kingdom by giving every encouragement to commerce. One part alone of his income, derived from this source, was 666 talents of gold, or £3,996,000 sterling. His 200 targets of beaten gold, 300 shields of the same, and his great throne of ivory overlaid with gold, give us some idea of the immense wealth which abounded in his times.

"A fairer promise of true greatness, a more beautiful picture of juvenile piety never was seen than that which Solomon exhibited at the commencement of his reign. No sadder, more humiliating, or awful spectacle can be imagined than the besotted apostasy of his old age. A love of the world, a ceaseless round of pleasure, had corrupted his heart, and produced, for a while at least, a state of mental darkness. The grace of God deserted him who was accounted the wisest of all men. Solomon, the son of the pious David, the religiously trained child of Bath-sheba, the pupil of Nathan the prophet, became at last an old and foolish king: so he describes himself in Eccles. iv." There is a "But" in Solomon's history, just as there is in the history of all God's people, for none are perfect. This "But" is a very serious one. "BUT King Solomon loved many strange women." They turned away his heart after other gods: he built a high place for Chemosh, and burnt incense, and sacrificed unto other gods. Then God was angry with Solomon. Twice did Jehovah warn him not to go after other gods; and now follows the threatened punishment: "I will rend the kingdom from thee, and will give it to thy servant. Notwithstanding, in thy days I will not do it, for David thy father's sake; but I will rend it out of the hand of thy son. Howbeit I will not rend away all the kingdom, but will give one Tribe to thy son, for David My servant's sake, and for Jerusalem's sake, which I have chosen."

The latter period of Solomon's reign was disturbed by foreign adversaries. The Lord stirred up an adversary, Hudad the Edomite, another in Hadadezer, King of Zobah. He was an adversary to Israel all the days of Solomon, besides the mischief that Hadad did: and he abhorred Israel, and reigned over Syria.

The servant to whom God threatened to give the great bulk of Solomon's kingdom was no other than Jeroboam, the son of Nebat. His father was the last of the leaders of the rival factions among the chosen people that was put to death. Now in the days of Solomon's apostasy, and consequent national and domestic troubles, this very man's son became an internal enemy of a more formidable character than either Hadad or Rezin. This Jeroboam had been noticed by King Solomon as a young man, active, enterprising, and of strong mental capability, and he appointed him superintendent of the public works projected around Jerusalem. Thus Jeroboam was Solomon's servant, and after the king's death we find him made king over the Ten Tribes, while Rehoboam, refusing the counsel of the old men, and pursuing the policy of the young men, reaped his just reward. There was none that followed the House of David but the Tribe of Judah only. This was the Lord's doing, and was the fulfilment of His threat to King Solomon. Yet He sent Shemaiah, the man of God, to Rehoboam, Solomon's son, and to all the House of Judah and Benjamin, saying, "Ye shall not go up nor fight against your brethren, the children of Israel; return every man to his house, for this thing is from Me." Thus we see, even in the most adverse circumstances, God's over-ruling agency for the welfare of the chosen people.

(To be continued.)

GOOD NEWS FROM THE ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION OF NEW SOUTH WALES.

WE have much pleasure in drawing early attention to the annexed most cheering letter from our friends at Sydney, which reached us on May 5, 1879. It gives us personally intense pleasure to feel we have hearts in unison with ours beating in the distant antipodes. In South Australia, in Tasmania, in New Zealand, and now in Sydney we have testimony that our feeble efforts have been appreciated in this great cause. Thanking God we therefore take courage, nerved for our work with the knowledge that however much we are reviled by such opponents as Messrs. Clifford, Cornall, and the Rock, the BANNER and the cause it advocates finds fast friends all through the Israelite "company of nations," among "the shepherds in the far off bush, in the gold miners on distant rivers, among residents in the furthermost townships, who now have heard the glad tidings of our Identity."

In regard to the difficulty as it affects our literature, we can only suggest that a consignment be periodically ordered by the distant associations from Mr. R. Banks the publisher and owner of the BANNER; and we are quite sure that if proper arrangements be made regarding remittances, to cover the cost periodically, no difficulty need be felt by our distant friends. Till the demand grows, the local booksellers in Australia probably shun our pamphlets and penny papers, as they also do in India. But let them once see that the demand is a large and growing one, as it is in the United Kingdom, in Montreal, and in the United States of America, and we feel sure that they will soon perceive the advantage of undertaking the supply of a class of literature which must, ere long, reach an enormous volume, since it relates to a people over 100 millions in numbers already, and destined to fill and rule the whole earth. We beg now our readers will attend to Mr. Percy E. Williams while he gives us his message from "the very ends of the earth."

Digitized by Google

THE ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION OF NEW SOUTH WALES.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—I have been instructed by the members of this Association to inform you of its progress since its formation in 1877, with a view to invite correspondence, encouragement, and support from kindred societies in our parent country; and we feel that a message from the antipodes will not be unwelcome in England, as showing in what strong links the knowledge of our Identity binds "the nation and company of nations."

This Association was first formed by Mr. Alexander Gordon, Dec. 16, 1877, and numbered about eight members. To the energy, perseverance, and untiring patience of Mr. Gordon, the present Association owes its existence. The little band used to meet at Gordon's residence once a fortnight, and with Edward Hine's works in one hand and the Bible in the other, they traced out the truths of our Identity and imparted their acquired knowledge to all with whom they came in contact.

In July, 1878, the Rev. Wm. Allworth, of the Church of England, with two others including myself, heard of the labours of Mr. Gordon, and joined him; and shortly after hired a hall, meeting once a fortnight for the study of the grand subject. Since then our numbers have steadily increased, and the knowledge of our Identity is extending in all directions.

Philo-Israel, Edward Hine, Piazzi Smyth, Cockburn Muir, and others, are names familiar to numbers of our colonists—shepherds in the far off bush, gold miners on distant rivers, residents in the furthermost townships have heard the glad tidings.

We have one great drawback to contend with, which is the difficulty of obtaining the literature on the subject. The booksellers appear unwilling to order periodicals. Perhaps, Mr. Editor, you can offer some suggestion to remedy this evil; for I feel confident if there were greater facilities in obtaining the current literature, hundreds would flock to the BANNER OF ISRAEL.

I enclose a few extracts of our proceedings from the Sydney Morning Herald, and remain,

Yours faithfully,

PERCY E. WILLIAMS, Hon. Sec.

Treasury, Sydney, N. S. W., March 4, 1879.

[EXTRACTS.]

"The first meeting of the Anglo-Israel Association for the current year was held in the Old Temperance Hall, on Monday evening last. The Association has, during the past year, confined itself to the rudiments only of this question—namely, the Identification of the Anglo-Saxon race with the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel; and the works of Canon Titcomb and Edward Hine were taken as the basis of investigation. It is said that during the current year a wider field of study will be opened."—January, 15, 1879.

"At a meeting of the Anglo-Israel Association, in the old Temperance Hall, on Monday evening last, the first of a series of papers was read by the secretary to an appreciative audience. The subject was the 'Great Pyramid.' The lecturer, after briefly alluding to its origin and the tombic and other theories respecting this monument, proceeded to show how, through the labours of Professor Piazzi Smyth, the Astronomer-Royal for Scotland, General Sir Howard Vyse, and others, the mystery which had shrouded the Great Pyramid for nearly four thousand years was at last cleared up, and it stood now a monument of scientific truths, a perfect system of weights and measures, and a record of the past and future history of man. The paper was illustrated by a large diagram showing the system of passages and chambers, and a photograph of the Pyramid, together with a specimen of its masonry, were exhibited by the chairman."—February 15, 1879.

"A general meeting of the Anglo-Israel Association took place in the new Temperance Hall on Monday evening last. At the termination of the official business, the second part of the Rev. B. Wrey Savile's letter to the Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone, M.P., was read by Mr. A. E. Evans, showing the distinction made throughout the prophets between the Houses of Israel and Judah. At the close of the paper the president commented upon the most striking texts introduced, and a discussion ensued in which many members took part. The hon. secretary (Mr. Percy E. Williams), introducing his second paper on the 'Great Pyramid,' stated that in the first paper he briefly alluded to the leading features of the monument, why it was built, and the probable author of its design; that he would not then trouble the audience with measures and figures, but read Professor Piazzi Smyth's account of his first entrance into the wonderful chambers of 'that altar to the Lord in the midst of the land of Egypt.' The paper was illustrated with large diagrams of the antechamber, king's chamber, &c. The papers were listened to with marked attention."—February 28, 1879.

MR. JOHN GREIG, OF SUNDERLAND, DOES BATTLE FOR ISRAEL.

A WRITER, signing himself "Nemesis," has lately published a letter in the Sunderland Echo severely reflecting on our Government's foreign policy in Afghanistan, pointing out that the Zulu disaster is God's punishment on our nation for its Naboth-vineyard proceedings in the matter of the newly acquired Gates of Afghanistan. This letter, of course, exasperated all true-hearted Israelites in the North, and forthwith brought to the front our old and staunch ally, Mr. John Greig, in the Sunderland Daily Post, of Feb. 15, 1879. We think his rejoinder to the truculent "Nemesis," alleged, proh pudor, to be a clergyman, ought not to be lost, and we therefore publish the same for the information of our readers at home and abroad. It contains sentiments and views entirely our own, and which we are anxious to impress on instructed Israelites far and near, as those they should also embrace.

It would appear that "Nemesis," like the editor of the Rock, is absurd enough to entertain the view that the Afghans are the Lost Ten Tribes. This is, of course, only one degree less foolish and dishonouring to the Scriptures of truth than the Rev. Dr. Verity's published ideas that the Turks are the Lost Israelites. Both these errors have their answer from Mr. Greig. He deals further a heavy blow at the extraordinary mistake into which the rev. vicar of St. Barnabas, Hull, has fallen in his published sermon, as we lately showed (BANNERS, Nos. 110—112). Our champion, Mr. Greig, proves what we always also labour to show, that if God in truth has, as stated by the Rev. Mr. Kroenig, displaced Israel His chosen people, and put even temporarily in their place a purely Gentile nation, called the British, as he and others allege, then God's oath is broken. He has deceived Abraham and his seed. Of Him and His counsels it may be averred, falsus in uno, falsus in omnibus, regarding which we decline to give any other answer than the apostolic reply, "God forbid." With these few words of introduction we ask for attention to Mr. Greig, administering well-merited castigation to "Nemesis," et ad hoc genus omne. His letter is headed

THE RECENT MILITARY DISASTER IN SOUTH AFRICA.

To the Editor of the "Sunderland Daily Post."

SIR,—Permit me to notice a letter which appeared in yesterday's Echo on the above subject signed "Nemesis," in which the writer, whom we easily recognise in spite of his nom de plume to be a well-known local pastor, draws attention to what he deems the retributive justice of God as seen in "the shape of a most terrible and humiliating defeat in South Africa" as an earnest of what we have yet to expect on account of the foreign policy of our Conservative Government, which he denounces as iniquitous in general, and as downright robbery in North-west India in special, and he fears "that our Naboth's-vineyard scheme in that country has yet to experience the beginning of sorrows, for verily there is a God that judgeth in the earth." And he winds up with a hearty wish for a change of Ministry, so that we may have a thorough change of policy, and that the heavy hand of God may be lifted up from our nation, &c.

Digitized by Google

Now, I do most firmly believe that there is a God that judges in the earth, and that all events are controlled by Him for His glory, but I do not believe that the above disaster has anything to do with "our Naboth's-vineyard scheme" as he is pleased to call our present relations with Afghanistan. On the other hand, I believe that this disaster (which according to our present knowledge of the matter is very far from being a humiliating defeat, as I think our soldiers left in charge of stores, &c., showed their true British heroism in dying to a man rather than desert their charge, though overpowered with such overwhelming numbers, and though the enemy were armed with the best weapons, yet 3,000 to 5,000 dead on the field attest the heroic valour of the brave British defenders of our honour) is intended to quicken our steps in the occupation and evangelisation of Africa, which I firmly believe is God's good gift to His servant Israel.

Strange it must seem to many, that whenever we refuse to go forward, something always occurs to urge us on in the way God has designed for us, that we, as the stone kingdom of Daniel, may fill the whole earth. See His command to Israel (Isa. liv. 2—4): "Spare not, lengthen thy cords (i.e., of thine influence), and strengthen thy stakes" (i.e., of thine authority), &c; and then note the following verses, specially 9 and 10: "I have sworn that I will not be wroth with thee, nor rebuke thee. For the mountains shall depart and the hills be removed, but My kindness shall not depart from thee, neither shall the covenant of My peace be removed, saith the Lord, who hath mercy on thee," &c. Can "Nemesis" reconcile these gracious and everlasting promises of peace and good-will to this nation—His servant Israel to do His work, in whom He is to be glorified—with his own croakings of coming vengeance on us for simply fulfilling God's will. Or, if he still holds to the opinion that it is because the Afghans are the Lost Tribes of Israel that vengeance is coming on us for what we have done to them, will he give us some proofs of their Identity, by showing us in what particular way they have been His servant; how they have done His work; in what way they have been His witnesses? (i.e, Protestants) (Isa. xliii. 10). And if, as God says of Israel, "This people I have formed for Myself, they shall show forth My praise," how is it that Divine wisdom has been at fault, so that after making or forming an instrument for Himself to do His work, He could not work with it? And the same argument applies to ourselves as a nation. "Nemesis" himself, and many more besides, are not afraid to say that we, as a nation, are doing the work and inheriting the promises of Israel; that He hath taken us in their stead because of our being a Christian nation, a Protestant people and Government, an evangelizing and missionary people, hence our greatness as a nation, and our being set on high above all the nations of the earth.

If this be so, then God, our God, has broken His oath and hath not remembered His mercy to the House of Israel. He, the All-wise One, is charged with blundering and falsehood; He who made Israel His glory has given His glory to another—i.e., to a Gentile people; all His promises are unreliable and useless, and the Bible a fable and utterly useless; but, thanks be to God, this is not so. Rather let us believe that "Nemesis" and the bulk of our watchmen are blind—shepherds that cannot understand (Isa. lvi. 10, 11). May God open their eyes ere it be too late. Yet, though blind many of them, including "Nemesis," I believe them to be God's servants. "Who is blind but My servant? or deaf as My messenger that I sent?" &c. "Seeing many things, but thou observest not; opening the ears, but thou hearest not" (Isa. xlii. 19, 20). In conclusion, I have only to say that if "Nemesis" wants a change of Ministry, so as to secure a change in our foreign policy, he will have to wait for it.

I am, yours, &c.,

JOHN GREIG.

Bodlewell-lane, Sunderland,
Feb. 14, 1879.

DR. MAITLAND ON ROMANS XI. 25, AND GENESIS XLVIII. 19.

HAS the 25th verse of the 11th chapter of St. Paul's epistle to the Romans a reference to the 19th verse of the 48th chapter of Genesis? Dr. Maitland, in his "Essays on Various Subjects," has advanced this question in his fifth essay (The Fulness of the Gentiles), and has adduced arguments which he considers sufficient to justify an affirmative answer.

We may claim Dr. Maitland as one of the "blind witnesses" to our origin, though at the time he wrote, 1852, the evidence was not nearly so strong as now in our favour (we may say had only begun to shew itself); several voices might have been heard before that date, proclaiming the grand truth as to our position in the sacred volume; some venturing an opinion, others more bold, speaking out with a clearer note; but the latter generally held the idea that the Teutonic races were co-heirs with us of the promises, so laying a stumbling-block (unawares) in the way of those who might have accepted the proposition as proved.

We quote Dr. Maitland in order to shew that his opinion was that Israel is smitten with blindness in part, or a part of Israel is smitten with blindness, until the fulness of nations promised to the other part be be come in, and then "All Israel shall be saved."

Dr. Maitland begins his observations by giving to the term Gentile a meaning which we believe it has never yet received, but which many opponents have asked us if we intend to assert. We scarcely think we can go so far as Dr. Maitland, who says that all Gentiles are of the stock of Abraham! Let us hear Dr. Maitland's argument. His reasoning is as follows:

If one should understand the word "Gentile" as equivalent to "heathen," and applicable only to people and nations not descended from, or at all connected with, the patriarch Abraham, he would scarcely be prepared, he says, for the apostle's conclusion. He would probably be under the impression that the apostle was making a statement to this effect—"The seed of Abraham, or a part of it, is in a state of blindness; and that blindness will continue until the conversion of the heathen shall have taken place, and so"—what? such a reader would expect the apostle to proceed—"so both those who are, and those who are not, the seed of Abraham will be saved." Now it is our opinion that such a reader could not imagine, far less expect, this conclusion, for St. Paul's reasoning is very clear and explicit:—When all the Gentiles or heathen are saved, then part also of the children of Israel will be saved; but some of the children of Israel are already saved (v. 25, "Blindness *in part is happened to Israel, until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in"). therefore, all the children of Israel will be saved (v. 26: "And all Israel shall be saved"). Of course, the word "saved" is understood here as equivalent to the word "believed." How, then, anyone who understands "the word Gentile as equivalent to heathen" can be prepared for a different conclusion, is beyond comprehension. "It does therefore seem," proceeds Dr. Maitland, "though some readers might not be prepared to expect it, as if the 'fulness of Gentiles' was an integral part required to make up the whole number of 'Israel'—as if that number must be imperfect without it. What, then, is that 'fulness,' and to what does the apostle refer?" "We might perhaps truly say that the מְלֹא הַגּוֹיִם (fulness of nations) of the patriarch (Gen. xlviii. 19) and the πλήρωμα τῶν ἐθνῶν of the apostle (Rom. xi. 25) cannot be properly represented in English, except by the very same words. Do they mean one and the same thing? It seems highly probable that they do; and that St. Paul meant to allude to, and indeed to quote, the prophecy of Jacob."

And Dr. Maitland maintains and goes on to show that this prophecy of Jacob's has not yet been fulfilled.

So far Dr. Maitland. Do we not see in his arguments powerful reasoning in our favour? Unless we are to spiritualise away the whole Bible, or say as an eminent clergyman in our neighbourhood committed himself so far as to say from the pulpit, that the blessings of Jacob to his children were mere wishes of prosperity and may or may not be accomplished; the apostle Paul had in his mind the promises of the fathers. The "fulness of Gentiles" may certainly have a very broad meaning,

* "It means," says Dr. A. Clarke, in his Commentary, "partial blindness, or blindness to a part of them, for they were not all unbelievers; several thousands of them had been converted to the Christian faith."

Digitized by Google

and may refer to those who shall be gathered besides Israel, as the mission of Israel is to carry the blessed truths of Christ's salvation to the uttermost parts of the earth as a witness before the end come, and the influence of Israel scattered is to be as "dew upon the grass," as a blessing to all the families of the earth, and many shall be joined unto him. But Israel is a son, "Ephraim is My first-born," "My pleasant child," and those blessed upon earth are blessed through him. "I called Abraham alone and blessed him," and, says God's Word, in the Abrahamic man taking the seed (of Christ) into all the world, shall all the nations of the earth be blessed.

L. G. R.

ANGLO-ISRAEL TRUTH, THE FULFILMENT OF OLD TESTAMENT SYMBOLOGY.

The History of the Ten Tribes of Israel Foreshadowed in Prophecy.

By James Catterall.

PART I.

We confine ourselves chiefly to Hosea i. First, because of its distinctive and divergent histories of the two Houses of Israel and Judah; and 2, because the events recorded in it are graduated into a series, and are set forth in chronological sequence.

It is admitted on all sides that we have here presented to us a symbolical representation of the past, present, and future history of God's people Israel. Let us take and examine separately each link in this deeply-interesting chain of events.

First, we have the sad picture of Israel's apostasy. This is graphically represented as an unholy alliance. "Go take unto thee a wife of whoredoms, and children of whoredoms" (ver. 2). We have nothing to do with the question as to whether this was a real transaction in the life of the prophet, or whether presented to him in the form of a vision or parable. Expositors differ on this point. In either case it serves to illustrate the idolatrous state of the House of Israel. The metaphor employed cannot fail to suggest the very intimate relationship existing between God and His ancient people. He was their Husband. But the bride violates her plighted troth, strains and snaps the sacred ties of wedlock by her infidelity and unchastity. She withdraws her affections from God, and transfers them to idols. To give point, personality, and pungency to this picture, the prophet (in obedience to the Divine command) went and took Gomer, the daughter of Diblaim, to wife. Remembering the symbolical character of the entire narrative, we cannot evade the conclusion that the use of the term Gomer is significant, and must be pregnant with meaning. May we not fairly assume, that by this alliance of the prophet with Gomer, we have an intimation of the union of the Ten-Tribed kingdom of Israel with the Gomeric branch of the Japhetic race? Perhaps this alliance was only religious, and not racial. But no matter what the nature of it, the fact is indisputable. This is a point of some importance, because our opponents contend, that in order to strengthen our position, we ought, as Englishmen, to bear certain physiognomical features of a Jewish or Semitic character. Such is the demand of human reason, but not of God's Word. This prophetic page teaches us that the Ten Tribes, wherever and whenever found, must be looked for among the Gomerian or European nations. According to Bishop Titcomb, "Gomer is not an Asiatic or Semitic appellation, but European. In Gen. x. 2, we read that Gomer was a Japhetic title; he was one of his first sons. We read there of Gomer, Magog, Tubal, and Meshech; all of them being names identified with Europe instead of Asia. In Smith's Dictionary of the Bible, I read 'Gomer is generally recognised as the progenitor of the early Cimmerians, of the later Cimbri, and of the modern Gael and Cymry.' What, then, are we to make of this identification of Israel in exile with the Gomerian or early European family? Are we to suppose that this name was given to Hosea under inspiration for nothing? You will bear in mind that these exiled Tribes were first deported to Assyria, which was not a Gomerian country. Is not the inference plain, therefore, that they were to quit Assyria and travel Westward into Europe, so as to mix thus with Gomer, and become identified finally with that stock, rather than with the Semitic? In other words, that they were to lose their Semitic nationality, and become European."

The subsequent events recorded in this chapter are the offspring of this alliance, represented by the birth of three children, Jezreel, Lo-ruhamah, and Lo-ammi, named according to Divine intimation.

1. Jezreel is the firstborn, and signifies dispersion. To quote from Calmet's Dictionary, "There is a remarkable variation of this name employed by the prophet Hosea, symbolising the fate of the people of Israel. 'The Lord said to me, Call his name Jezreel, for yet a little while, I will avenge the blood of Jezreel on the House of Jehu, and cause to cease the kingdom of the House of Israel, and will break the bow of Israel in the valley of Jezreel." Here are three allusions in one name. The royal palace was called Jezreel; here Jehu slew Ahab's family. Jezreel was also a valley (Jos. xvii. 16) in the border of Naphtali, where the Assyrians routed Israel (2 Kings xv. 29). So that the blood shed in the palace Jezreel was avenged in the valley Jezreel, in the kingdom of Israel. Jehu's family was dethroned (2 Kings xv. 12).

"Moreover, the Hebrew words Zerah, to disperse, and Zero, to sow, in order to increase and gather, being nearly the same in sound, the prophet hints at the restoration (ver. 11): 'Then shall the children of Judah and the children of Israel be gathered under one head, and they shall come up out of the land (of their dispersion), for great is the day (Targ. gathering) of Jezreel.' Or as Jarchi, 'the gathering of the seed of Israel.'" He further adds, "It is impossible to preserve this play of words in translation; but this instance may stand in evidence of the allusions and references couched under prophetical symbols, concealed from uninformed or unobservant readers; and of the metaphorical import of names, occasionally imposed and variable by the slightest change of letters, or of emphasis, to different meanings." The birth of Jezreel obviously indicates the dispersion of the Ten Tribes. This is another thing, however, to effacement or obliteration. They were not to be so mixed up with the nations among whom they were deported and dispersed as to be completely and hopelessly lost. On the other hand, it should prove to be their seed time. They were to be sown, or dispersed, with a view to a future and glorious ingathering. They might, for a time, remain concealed, buried, lost, like seed embedded in the soil, but they should eventually re-appear more vigorous and fruitful. Hence the harvest (ver. 11): "Then shall the children of Judah and the children of Israel be gathered," &c. Their lost condition is only temporary. Their re-appearance is as certain as their disappearance. (See Ezek. xxxvii. 12; Luke xv. 24, 32.) Moreover, the term employed by Hosea, "I will cause to cease the kingdom of the House of Israel" (ver. 4), simply implies the destruction of the kingdom, and not the cessation of the House.

2. Lo-ruhamah, a daughter, is next born. Her name signifies disfavour, or "not having obtained mercy." Observe the Ten-Tribed House of Israel is not only expelled from the home of her Lord and Husband, and dispersed abroad—she is disinherited. She fails to obtain the mercy of the Lord, or to regain His affections. The rival House of Judah is not so unfortunate; for God says, "I will no more have mercy upon the House of Israel; but I will utterly take them away. But I will have mercy upon the House of Judah, and will save them by the Lord their God, and will not save them by bow, nor by sword, nor by battle, nor by horses, nor by horsemen"

Digitized by Google

(ver. 6, 7). The salvation of Judah here spoken of is evidently the restoration from Babylon after seventy years' captivity. This was accomplished, not by a bloody contest. It was the result, rather, of a direct and Divine interposition. How flatly opposed is this whole passage to the common and erroneous notion, that the Lost Tribes were amalgamated with the Jews at their restoration. Each House has here a distinct specification, and their histories are separate and divergent. Judah is restored from her captivity; Israel is not. At her restoration Judah is effectually cured of her idolatry. Israel plunges into it more and more—it is to her a matrimonial compact resulting in a progeny of evils. How absurd and contradictory, then, to talk about the absorption of Israel in the House of Judah at the end of the Babylonish captivity, in view of such passages as this. The demarcation could not be plainer. There is for each House a distinctive preservation, and their subsequent histories are not only not parallel, but exceedingly varied and diverse.

3. We have now to deal with the third and last child—Lo-ammi, "not My people." This is the "bill of divorce" spoken of in Jer. iii. 8. Observe the progressive character of Israel's downfall, consequent upon her idolatry. Dispersion, disfavour, divorcement. The adulterous House of Israel finds herself expelled from her home, deprived of the favour and friendship of her Lord, and is finally severed from His name, repudiated, divorced, Gentilised. This closes the dark and sombre picture of her retrogression and ruin.

We turn with considerable relief from this graduated scale of sin and suffering to its brighter sequel. "Yet (thank God for this redeeming and qualifying clause)—yet the number of the children of Israel shall be as the sand of the sea, which cannot be measured nor numbered" (ver. 10). In spite of all the trying and bitter experience incident to the House of Israel, she is not extirpated. True she has lost her ancient name (ver. 9), and bears another—that is, the Gomeric (ver. 3). But in this Lo-ammi, Gentilized condition she breaks the clods of her grave, and fructifies into a multitudinous seed. This is the multitudinous seed promised successively to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. Israel, less conservative than his father and grandfather, confers this blessing upon Joseph, to the exclusion of his firstborn, Reuben (see Gen. xlix. 22—26; Deut. xxxiii. 13—17). Touching the House of Joseph also, the election passes by the firstborn Manasseh, and takes in the younger son Ephraim. "They are the ten thousands of Ephraim, and they are the thousands of Manasseh" (see also Gen. xlviii. 19). In Hosea's prophecy, the terms Ephraim and Israel are convertible and synonymous. Let the careful reader note in the passages referred to how the ideas of strength—aggressive action—and extended empire are intimately associated with the numerous seed. "He shall push the people together to the ends of the earth."

Again, Israel, in her Lo-ammi condition, not only becomes multitudinous, but Christian. "It shall come to pass that in the place where it was said unto them, Ye are not My people, there it shall be said unto them, Ye are the sons of the living God" (ver. 10). The old relationship of Husband and wife has been abrogated, and God here enters into a new and paternal relation with His people Israel. "Sons of God" is unquestionably a Christian appellation. It is the same filial relation endorsed by Christ in that inimitable prayer which teaches us to address God as "Our Father" (see Gal. iv. 4, 6; 1 John iii. 1; Rom. ix. 24—26; 1 Peter ii. 10, and context).

I want to call attention now to the correspondence between our present experience as a nation, and the language here employed. It is just now fiercely and indignantly denied that we are, or can be, identical with God's ancient Israel. The very notion is denominated an absurdity, a craze, a delusion, a lie. This keen and bitter contention is a distinguishing feature of our times. But co-incident with this, is the frank and universal admission that we stand pre-eminent as a Christian people. What other nation or people combine these three marks—a multitudinous race, a persistent denial of their Israelitish origin, and a frank and generous admission of their Christianity? Do any of those people who are vaguely thought of as probably or possibly identical with the Lost Tribes—the Afghans, the Abyssinians, or any of the nationalities of India or China?

Again, this passage gives no sanction to the term spiritual Israel. It is because of the lost condition of Ten-Tribed Israel that this term has been invented. But their disappearance is not permanent. They exist, though not recognised. They need no substitute. They are not replaced by Christians. The fact is, that they, under an alien name, become Christians. Observe their relationship to Israel is natural, by lineal descent—"children of Israel." Their relationship to God is spiritual—"sons of God." The spiritual relationship is expressed by a term distinguishable from Israel, and at a time when their Israelitish descent is called in question.

Now we come to the true and Scriptural amalgamation of the two Houses. "Then"—synchronous with, or immediately sequent upon our attainment to the three marks alluded to in the previous verse—"Then shall the children of Judah and the children of Israel be gathered together, and appoint themselves one head," &c. (ver. 11).

This amalgamation is treated at greater length in Ezek. xxxvii. It is preceded by the resurrection of "the whole House of Israel" from their graves (ver. 1—14). It is symbolised by the union of two sticks in the hand of the prophet (ver. 15—20). It is authoritatively and Divinely affirmed, "I will make them one nation in the land upon the mountains of Israel; and one king shall be king to them all; and they shall no more be two nations, neither shall they be divided into two kingdoms any more at all" (ver. 22). It is succeeded by an everlasting possession of the land of Palestine. "They shall dwell in the land that I have given unto Jacob My servant, wherein your fathers have dwelt; and they shall dwell therein, even they, and their children, and their children's children for ever" (ver. 24, 25).

Into the grandeur and glory of this event I will not now enter. "Great," however, "shall be the day" (Hos. i. 11). The curse of the apostacy, the darkness of the grave, the aggravated evils of their estrangement and alienation are all over. There is a culmination of blessedness. It is day, the great day of Jezreel. "They joy before Thee according to the joy of harvest" (Isa. ix. 3). "And the ransomed of the Lord shall return, and come to Zion with songs, and everlasting joy upon their heads; they shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away" (Isa. xxxv. 10).

Liverpool, April 23, 1879.

An abridgment of a paper given at the opening meeting of a series on the Identity, at the Alexandra Hall, Park-road, Liverpool, April 9, 1879.

(To be continued.)

Reviews.

The Anglo-Saxons and the Israelites. By the Rev. J. B. Clifford, M.A., Vicar of St. Matthew's, Kingsdown, Bristol. Price fourpence. Hamilton, Adams & Co., 32, Paternoster-row.

FOURTH NOTICE. BY THE EDITOR.

(Continued from page 219.)

THE Hebrew of Psalm ii. 8, the passage in dispute between ourselves and the Rev. J. B. Clifford, is as follows: "Sh'al mimmen-ni w'et-nah go-yim na-chala-the-cha wa-akhooza-the-cha af-say a-retz." The translation perfectly literally rendered is, "Ask of Me, and I will give the nations, thine inheritance: and thy possession to the ends of the earth." The Authorised Version introduces the word "thee," which is not in the original; and, as the object of the verb "I will give," points to the "nations," or heathen, as thus given to Christ. The words "for thine inheritance," and "for thy possession," are taken as placed in apposition to, and agreeing with, the heathen in one clause, with "the uttermost parts of the earth" in the next. Now, we ask, how can the word "go-yim," the heathen, which we submit is obviously the thing given, and therefore is in the accusative case, be in apposition to nakala-the-cha, a compound word with the pronoun suffix? The rules of Hebrew grammar will not allow it. We are fortified in this view by the opinion of a Jew by birth, a Jewish scholar, a Hebrew clergyman of the Church of England, one well acquainted with Hebrew as his own mother tongue, and with Greek and English as his acquired languages. "Were these nouns in apposition," he says, "they would be in co-ordination; would limit or qualify each other, which they do not; and the sentence would be without a definite meaning, since the object of the gift, or the donee, rather, would not be expressed." But now, the pronoun "thee" being absent in the original, the gift of the nations is seen to be granted to or FOR Christ's Nakala by the Redeemer Himself, and the ends of the earth to or for Christ's Akhuzza by the Lord's own free gift.

Digitized by Google

What do the terms "Thy Nakala" and "Thy Akhuzza" mean? Deut. iv. 20, ix. 26—29; 1 Kings viii. 51—53; Psa. lxxiv. 2; Isa. xix. 25, &c., all show that almost invariably these words (sometimes, but very seldom, applied to Israel's land) are used in the Old Testament as the copyright names of a people, and that people God's own nation Israel; but were spoken of a Gentile people NEVER. We, therefore, on what we believe, and still hold to be, Scriptural grounds, read the verse as teaching that in this Messianic Psalm God, at His Divine Son's request, granted to Him, to be transferred to Israel, His inheritance, and to Jacob His people, the government of the Gentiles, or Go-yim, and the uttermost parts of the earth as well, to occupy and hold FOR CHRIST. Theirs it is, we also recognise from verse 9 of the same Psalm, as Christ's battle axe or hammer (Jer. li. 19—23), "to break the (heathen) nations with a rod of iron, and dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel." Why? To bring them to Christ! To teach them the Gospel; to fulfil verses 11 and 12 of Psalm ii.! Is all this "hideous blasphemy?" Are we "Antichrist" and "the mystery of iniquity" for believing and teaching this? Then, with deep reverence do we say it, the Son of God Himself repeats our blasphemy, reiterates our "mystery of iniquity," and is guilty of what Mr. Clifford accuses us. Rev. ii. 25—29 will show that. There He said (and no man can let HIM), that "he who overcometh and keepeth My works unto the end, to HIM will I give power over the nations" (επι των εθνων over the Gentiles), "and HE shall rule them with a rod of iron; as the vessel of a potter shall they be broken to shivers, even as I received of My Father, and I will give him the morning star." Here the Lord quoted the 2nd Psalm, 9th verse, and declared that the heathen Gentiles should be those over whom the overcomer (NOT HIMSELF, mark, but the believers in Himself—the Christian nation—Hosea i. 10; 1 John iv. 4) should rule, and that the overcomer should break and destroy the Gentiles.

To the same effect is Psalm cxlix. 2—9, where to Israel is entrusted by Jehovah the function "to execute vengeance upon the Go-yim, or heathen." Psalms cxxxv. 4—12, and cxxxvi. 21. 22, repeat the same gift to "Israel" of the "lands of the heathen," as their heritage (NOT Christ's heritage, mark, but as Christ's SERVANT, even to Jacob and Israel—Isa. xlii. 1; see LXX).

On these grounds, sufficient to satisfy us, we held, and hold still, we repeat, that Psalm ii. 8 (a Messianic Psalm) tells us what is A BRITISH FACT to-day—namely, that British Israel, being "the Lord's inheritance" and "His possession," is the donee of the glorious gift of the heathen empire granted them, not to pander to their pride and self-conceit—far from that—but as Christ's "servant"—"His chosen," and "His people"—to rule and dominate over those very heathen, to bring them by the Gospel to their Lord Christ, who is the King, not of Israel only, but of all the rulers, and of all the dominions of the earth as well.

While we state this view, we should be quite prepared and ready to acquiesce in another interpretation which is submitted as the correct one by many of our Israelite friends, in whose judgment and critical knowledge (better than our own) we feel we ought to rely, could one insuperable difficulty be overcome. Such a friend is the Rev. C. W. Hickson; such a one is also the Rev. Herbert Marriott. These friends hold, and possibly are quite correct in holding, that the Psalm being Messianic, the word "Thee" is rightly interposed to bring out the meaning of the Spirit in the 8th verse—that the "heathen," in fact, are thereby given to the Lord as "His inheritance," and the ends of the earth as "His possession;" but that inasmuch as the Lord's people Israel are one with Him, the gift to Him is the gift to Israel, and that therefore, being given to Him, the House of Israel possesses the heathen as "their inheritance," and the ends of the earth as "their possession." The difficulty to our mind is this: Nowhere else in God's Word are "the nations" or "heathen" represented to be "the LORD'S inheritance," or Nakhala. "For the Lord's PORTION is His people, JACOB is the lot of His inheritance" (Deut. xxxii. 9). Deut. iv. 20; Isa. xix. 25, and the other passages already quoted are decisive against the suggested view, and we therefore cannot adopt it.

One of our friends would even accept, we believe, a reading which we did not venture to suggest—namely that verses 8 and 9 of the Psalm refer entirely to "Israel, the people, and not to the Lord at all;" and, being detached from the 7th verse, should be understood as follows: "Ask (O Tribes of Israel) of Me, thy God, and I will give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession. Thou (O Tribes of Israel) shalt break them in pieces with a rod of iron. Thou (O Israel) shalt dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel," &c. We are not at all prepared to give our adhesion to this rendering, which really, however, agrees in the result with what we proposed; but we beg to observe that if our reading is "hideous blasphemy," the view taken by our rev. friends, Messrs. Hickson and Marriott, will, in Mr. Clifford's opinion, no doubt take rank in the same black, terrible category! Whatever may be our readers' judgment in the matter, what we desire now to point out is, that our rendering of the passage agrees with existing nineteenth century British facts; that it agrees perfectly with other declarations of God's inspired Word written; that it accords with our Lord's own declaration in Rev. ii. 27—29; and that such confirmations are enough for us. We shall not therefore be frightened by the Rev. Mr. Clifford's unwarrantable denunciations and presumptuous human judgments; we shall not be terrified by the adverse opinions secretly expressed (it would seem) to our rev. opponent, but never even whispered to us, by our right rev. friend, presently the Bishop of Rangoon; and that we shall continue to hold our own regarding the 8th verse, 2nd Psalm, willing, however, in all humility, to accept the Rev. Messrs. Hickson's and H. Marriott's modified views, in Christian deference to their superior critical abilities, if shown to be correct; but resolved at all costs to resist an opponent who for persuasion substitutes violent invective, and for Christian charity exchanges a bitterness and a dogmatism founded on error, which must repel all well-regulated minds.

(To be continued.)

"HE SAITH, HA, HA; AND HE SMELLETH THE BATTLE AFAR OFF."—JOB XXXIX. 25.

[THE following notice refers to an able pamphlet by an M.A. of Cambridge, called The Coming Collision Between England and Russia, and published by W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane. Price one shilling.]

We rejoice to learn that the pamphlet by an M.A. of Cambridge, The Coming Collision Between England and Russia, is to be met with on railway stalls, and is in great demand. We think the interest it is deservedly exciting must lead to further research into the matter of our Identification with Israel, and to a study of works on the subject, the comparative neglect of which, by the more educated classes, has been hitherto as strange as it is to be lamented.

Digitized by Google

This pamphlet utters no uncertain sound as regards the origin of the so-called English; but what we are specially glad to note is that it treats Ezekiel's prophecies in a reasonable manner, bidding the readers of them to believe that what the prophet utters, through the inspiration of God's Spirit, is intended to be understood according to the plain meaning of words. There are no twistings and turnings of distinct assertions concerning predicted earthly events to make them represent spiritual meanings and imaginings, and to turn fleshly foes into enemies of the soul; and there is no falling back on commentators who, pious and learned as they were, cannot be considered as safe guides in matters concerning which their eyes were blinded by God for His own purpose.

We commend "The Coming Collision" to all who have not yet read it, and wish it heartily good speed; but—we think the writer, perhaps, needs a little caution against falling into the very error to which he alludes in his opening sentence, and of too exclusively studying one portion of Scripture to the neglect of others; and, indeed, he almost seems to plead guilty to this mistake when saying (page 4) he entertains his "belief chiefly from a careful study of these chapters of Ezekiel" (xxxviii. and xxxix.). Had not this been the case, we think the M.A. would hardly have adopted the idea that the Ten Tribes were sharing the isles of the sea with peoples whose origin is unknown. Such a result is scarcely compatible with the prophecy that is quoted at the head of the BANNER—Deut. xxxiii. 17, nor with Psa. xliv. 5, neither with the first part of Jer. xxx. 11.

We cannot but hold the belief that Jer. xxxi. 2 was literally fulfilled, and that some of the chosen people were led to a "wilderness," where, being afterwards joined by the other Tribes, they found the promised grace. It is not hard to conceive that many Israelites in far years back, before the Christian era, indulged in our apparent inherent love of enterprise and of wandering research into other lands; that they struggled hither, we may believe, in small groups, which first brought humanity into the Western isles of Europe, and with it the worship of Baal and heathenish ceremonies connected with Israel's idolatry, yet to be traced in the records of the habits of the early inhabitants of these isles.

We could smile were we not pained by the calm way in which, in order to give pre-eminence to the Church of England, the M.A. shunts Cornish, Welsh, and most Scotchmen; also totally ignoring the mass of Americans (or Manassites), pronouncing them to be Gentiles enjoying the privileges of Israel by amalgamation with them, and not by any claim of birth. Does the writer realise the numbers, influence, and importance of Presbyterian and non-conforming bodies, their intense love of the Bible, and their noble Christian works?

It is true the Church of England has been a witness for our Identity with Israel by its liturgy since the Reformation, and has been ordained to utter the prayer for the writing of God's commandments on our hearts, which is a blessing He has in store for us; but this Church's claim to be the only witness for Christ throughout the world, we dare to deny, as we think of the records of missionary work done by Nonconformists and by the noble bands of Christian teachers who go forth from America. We are confirmed in our opinion as we sadly note the blight that is passing over this same Church of England in which, by the preaching and teaching of its appointed ministers, idolatry and false religion grow apace on one hand, and doubt and questioning threaten to land us in the darkness of a spiritual Nihilism on the other.

May 9th. L. P.

A NEW TESTAMENT EVIDENCE OF ISRAEL'S "LO-AMMI" CONDITION AS GENTILES.

WE are often asked for proof from the New Testament that Israel was distinct from Judah in our Lord's days, and that Israel was Lo-Ammised, or Gentilised—separated from Judah or the Jews, hidden or "outcasted" from the covenants of Israel. We have such a proof in John vii. 35—words said by the murmuring Pharisees, chief priests and officers, sent to take the Lord Jesus—therefore Jews of "Judah." The Lord, addressing them, told them He was to be with them only a "little while," and that once gone they should seek Him, but be unable to find Him, for "where I am, thither ye cannot come!" "Then said THE JEWS among themselves" (and the Lord, we may be sure, knew their mutterings, but He never denied their conclusions), "Whither will He go that WE shall not find Him? Will He go unto the dispersed (to the diaspora) among the Gentiles (or Greeks), and teach the Gentiles?" What did the Jews here allege and prove by their murmurings? The following points—

1. That the diaspora or dispersion—that is, the Ten Tribes—were "among the Gentiles"—"hidden"—so that the Jews could not "find" them; in other words, lost!

2. That the "dispersion" were, in very fact, thus, relatively to Jews, mere Gentiles.

3. That the Lord going "to the lost sheep of the House of Israel," would thus be teaching the Gentiles.

4. That, therefore, the "diaspora," or Ten Tribes, were not under Judaism, or the law of Moses, as our opponents say we must find them; but aliens from that law, inaccessible therefore, and "hidden away" from Judah, so that the Jews could not "find" them.

We have here testimony sufficient, derived from the Jews themselves, and recorded by the Holy Spirit as testimony given in our Lord's own presence, without contradiction from Him, that the Ten Tribes in His day—1, existed; 2, were "in hiding," or "lost;" 3, were not under the Mosaic covenants; 4, were "among the Gentiles;" 5, nay, were Gentiles themselves; 6, therefore "Lo-Ammi Israelites" (Hosea i. 10, ii. 23). We are indebted again to the Rev. C. W. Hickson for the above brilliant Identity light on this passage.

Correspondence.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—I am a regular reader of the BANNER, and take very great interest in it. It has made me take a much deeper interest in the Bible than ever before, and the prophecies are clearer to me. I also take a deeper interest in great national events, and follow them with a watchful eye, observing that in our nation a great many of the prophecies are being fulfilled. For certain private reasons I do not attach my name to this communication at present, but my object in writing to you is to supply you with food for the BANNER in calling your attention to an article in St. James's Magazine, vol v. (1862), pages 411, 417, entitled, "Ireland and Spain Formerly Connected by Land."

The writer believes that Ireland (posterior to the creation of man) was the upper part of a great continent, which reached from Spain through the Bay of Biscay; that this country was first inhabited by the Phœnicians, who, in this way, first set foot in Ireland, having come by land, and that owing to the submersion beneath the ocean of the intervening country, all connection between the two countries became dissolved.

He shows, in the first place, from whom the Irish Celtic race has descended; he shows the resemblance between ancient Irish alphabets and Hebrew and Punic; that the round towers of Ireland are identical with those of the Phœnicians; its name, as known to the ancients, as Ierne or Iberna, or furthest habitation; he is doubtful about Phœnicians crossing the Bay of Biscay without compass or without charts; he quotes Bede (A.D. 730) and Tacitus (A.D. 95). The former observes (Hist. 1, chap. 1), "Ireland is the greatest island next to Britain, and is situate to the West of it; but as it is shorter than Britain to the North, so, running out far beyond it to the South, it reaches even over against the North of Spain."

Tacitus, in his Life of Agricola, cap. 24, writes:—"Eam partem Brittaniæ quæ Hiberniam aspicit copiis instruxit in spem magis quam ob formidinem, siquidem Hibernia medio inter Britanniam atque Hispaniam sita" ("That part of Britain which looks towards Ireland is situate in the midst—in medio, midway?—between Britain and Spain.") He shows the probability by geology, vegetation, &c.; he refers to Professor E. Forbes (nineteenth century) as the first to show that a connection between Ireland and the continent must have existed at some early period.

The article is very interesting and worth reading, and no doubt the book (St. James's) can be had at the Athenæum or some other of our libraries.

I am, dear Sir,
Yours respectfully,

Bristol, March 8, 1879. C.

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements

(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O O payable at Ludgate-circus.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed :—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

NEW BOOKS AND NEW EDITIONS.

Now Ready.

THE PROMISES TO ABRAHAM, WITH SELECT REFERENCES AND EXPLANATORY NOTES,

To which is added an article entitled,

"ISRAEL AMONG THE GENTILES."

BY W. S. CAVILL.

Reprinted from the pages of "Life from the Dead," with Emendations and Corrections.

Price Sixpence, or free by post, Sevenpence.

London: Published by ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, and may be had of all Booksellers.

NOW READY, price 2d., post free, 2½d.

NEW PAMPHLET BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

THE HISTORICAL, ETHNIC, AND PHILOLOGICAL ARGUMENTS in PROOF of BRITISH IDENTITY with the TEN LOST TRIBES OF ISRAEL, clearly and simply stated.

BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

CONTENTS:—Introduction—The Celts—Professor Rawlinson's Testimony—The Cymry—The Cimmerii—The Gimiri and Khumri—The Testimony of the Nimroud Obelisk—The Scythians—The Anglo-Saxons—Sharon Turner's Testimony—The Jutes and Angles—The Danes and the Normans—General Conclusions—Philology—The Welsh Language—The Rev. Canon Lysons' Testimony—Idiomatic Identity Between Hebrew and English—Tyndal's Testimony—The Tribe of Dan—The Irish Celts—Are the Continental Nations Israelites?—Conclusions—Appendix.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane; and Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Just out. Price 4d.

NEBUCHADNEZZAR'S DREAM and THE BRITISH EMPIRE. By Ephraim. With Illustrative Prophetic Map.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; Sold by W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

This day. Price 2d. Post free 2½d.

MANASSEH AND THE UNITED STATES. An important Essay delivered before the "Lost Israel Identification Society," by the Rev. Joseph Wild, D.D., at Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, New York.

CONTENTS:—The Fulness of the Gentiles set in—For whom did God intend America—The Origin of the United States—The Footsteps of Ephraim and Manasseh—The Will of Jacob made to Ephraim and Manasseh—Manasseh a People, and a Great People—Manasseh's Birthtime of Separation—Out of nearly Sixty Conquered Colonies the only one England ever Lost was that of Manasseh (America)—The Great Seal of the United States—Manasseh was brought up at the Door of the Pyramid, &c., &c.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.; and of any Bookseller.

SOME of PHILO-ISRAEL'S papers, as they have appeared in THE BANNER, will be separately published from time to time in the form of Letters, for distribution.

No. 1. "The Identity of the British with Lost Israel."
No. 2. "The Glory of God."
No. 3. "An Address to British Soldiers." (Now ready.)
No. 4. "An Address to British Sailors." (Now ready.)

Others will follow. Price One and Sixpence per 100; less quantities in proportion: postage extra.

Apply to R. Banks, 5 Racquet-court, Fleet-street. Also all Booksellers and Publishers.

PUBLIC ANNOUNCEMENTS.

HASTINGS AND ST. LEONARDS ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION, Auxiliary to the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association.

President :—
Lieut.-Col. W. H. LARKINS, Dymock, Ore.
Treasurer :—
Mr. COULTHWAITE, St. Andrew's Schools.
Hon. Secretaries :—
Mr. B. SARGENT, 37, London Road, St. Leonards.
Mr. J. R. MITCHELL, 52, St. Andrew's Road, Hastings.
Committee :—
Messrs. WHITEMAN, W. DUNGEY, KENT, PRYOR R. GREEN

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION. Temporary office: 20, Warwick-lane, London, E.C. This Association is prepared to send out experienced and well QUALIFIED GENTLEMEN to LECTURE on the subject of "The Identity of the British Race with the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel." The terms are such as involve no liabilities as to loss, &c. Upon those needing their services—which are not restricted to the Metropolitan area—all applications as to the Lecturers, Subjects, &c., to be made to the Hon. Sec., JAMES BILLINGTON, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

This day is published, 8vo., cloth gilt, price 3s. 6d., post free.

A DISSERTATION ON THE CELESTIAL SIGN OF THE RAINBOW In connection with THE SACRED "OATH OF THE SEVENTH," BEING

An Exposition of its Expansive Significance in accordance with the Teaching of TRANSCENDENTAL MASONRY.

BY PROTEUS.

"The publication is designed to be a dissertation on the celestial sign of the rainbow, in connection with the sacred 'Oath of the Seventh' in accordance with the teaching of Transcendental Masonry. It is full of cabalistic lore and mythologic suggestion, but at the same time it contains and popularises a large share of polyglot learning, to appreciate which one need not belong to the craft. Even as a dictionary of root words and root tracing the dissertation is both educative and interesting."—Freeman's Journal.

Dublin: Hodges, Foster, and Figgis, Publishers to the University.
London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

LO AMMI—NOT MY PEOPLE. A Handbill for shop-windows and for private circulation has been prepared, showing the connection between Hosea i. 10, as Prophecy, and the titles of various pamphlets of our opponents, recently issued from the press, as Fulfilments. To be had of W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane; Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; and of Philo-Israel, Bristol. Price 2s. per 100, or 3d. per dozen.

ARE ENGLISHMEN ISRAELITES? The Debate in Exeter Hall between Mr. Edward Hine and Mr. Robert Roberts. Just published, with appendix and answers to correspondents. Demy octavo, about 130 pp. Price 1s.

London: F. Pitman, 20, Paternoster-row. Birmingham: R. Roberts, Athenæum Rooms, Temple-row.

New and Revised Edition, Price 6d. Cloth boards, 1s.

THE "NEW OLD STORY," with an Introduction to a Marvellous Puzzle. The Story gives a sketch of the History of the Hebrews, shewing distinctly the difference between the Two Nations, Judah and Israel, the latter being the British. The Story also tells of the Great Pyramid, and explains how its wonderful meaning can be, as it is only understood by measurement. An Appendix explains "The Eastern Question." The Story is written with great simplicity, and interests young children. By A E I, Author of "The Answer to the Eastern Question."

W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

WALTER KEAST'S Old Established BOOT AND SHOE WAREHOUSE, 102, KENNINGTON PARK ROAD, LONDON.

Gentlemen's Boots & Shoes for Winter and Summer, House and Garden, Walking, Riding, Rowing, Fishing, Shooting, &c.

Ladies' Boots and Shoes for Winter and Summer, Walking and Riding, House, Garden, or Dancing, &c., &c.

Children's Boots for School, Walking, Garden, or Sea-side. Slippers in great variety at moderate prices.

Schools and Public Institutions supplied at wholesale prices.

Note the address—WALTER KEAST, 102, Kennington-park-road, S.E.

BANNER OF ISRAEL. VOL. II. Now ready, price 7s., of all Booksellers.

BOOKS, ETC.

18th Annual Issue, price 2d., post free 3d., 36 pages closely printed matter.

MAY MEETING VISITORS, be sure and get the A B C Church and Chapel Directory. The best and only correct guide to all London and Suburban Protestant Places of Worship, Ministers, Times of Service, &c., &c. A cheap and reliable Christian Guide Book to London.

The Record says: "A well-arranged List of all the London and Suburban Protestant Places of Worship, with the Clergy who officiate, services, &c. Exceedingly useful."

The Nonconformist says: "Very useful—containing a mass of useful information, which will be serviceable to visitors to London, not less than to permanent residents in the metropolis."

The Christian Times says: "We know of no work where so much information is gathered under one cover. It must command an extensive circulation."

The Morning Advertiser says: "One of the most useful Christian Hand-Books we have met with for a long time."

The Rock says: "It is a most excellent guide to all Protestant Places of Worship in London."

The English Independent says: "Contains a quantity of ecclesiastical information very useful to visitors as well as residents in London."

The Church Standard says: "Compiled with great care, and published at such a modest price as to bring it within the reach of all."

The Protestant says: "Neatly got up, and seems to have been carefully compiled."

London: ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

PHOTOGRAPHIC PORTRAITS OF PHILO-ISRAEL, Editor of THE BANNER OF ISRAEL, Author of "The History of the House of Israel," &c., &c. Cabinet, 2s., post free; Carte-de-Visites, 1s., post free.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

TO AUTHORS. Authors desirous of issuing Works or Pamphlets on the great and increasingly interesting Question of the Identity of the Lost Ten Tribes with the British Nation, should first communicate with Robert Banks, of Racquet-court, Fleet-street, who has already been honoured by issuing, amongst others, the following works on the subject:

The Banner of Israel. Weekly 1d.; monthly 7d.
The Nation's Glory Leader. Weekly 1d.; quarterly 1s. 4d.
The Pillar of Witness. By late Captain Tracey. Cloth 2s. 6d.; paper 1s. 6d. (second edition).
The Anglo-Israel Post Bag. By Bishop Titcomb. Cloth 2s. 6d.; paper 1s. 6d. (second edition).
The History of the House of Israel. By Philo-Israel. Cloth 1s.; paper 6d. (sixth thousand).
The Great Pyramid of Egypt. Fifty-two pages, with three illustrations. Price 4d. (10,000).
The New Old Story. By A E I. Cloth 1s.

THE GREAT PYRAMID. NOW READY, PHILO-ISRAEL'S NEW WORK, 56 pages, Illustrated with Diagrams, price 4d., post free 5d.

OUR IDENTITY WITH THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. By PHILO-ISRAEL. Price 4d. Third Thousand (reprinted from the Clifton Chronicle).

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

J. HANDLEY, 20, Paradise-st., BIRMINGHAM, Agent for the BANNER OF ISRAEL, and all Works on the Identity.

DEAFNESS CURED, NOISES IN THE EARS, &c. SPECIAL OFFER TO THE DEAF.

THE REV. E. J. SILVERTON having discovered that there are tens of thousands who are unable to obtain his 11s. Box of Aurial Remedy which has cured so many persons of Deafness and Noises in the Ears, &c., begs now to offer a 2s. 6d. Box of the Medicine, so as to put it within the reach of all. This arrangement is specially made to meet the deaf world. With every box of medicine will be presented the Rev. E. J. Silverton's "Health Advocate," containing valuable advice and information that everyone ought to know. Post Office Orders for 2s. 6d. to E. J. SILVERTON, Minister of Exeter Hall Church, Nottingham, or stamps, 2s. 8d.

WOOLS! WOOLS! WOOLS! Cheapest and Best. White and Black Berlin, Single and Double, 3s. 6d. per pound. Best quality Ice Wools, all Colours, 5½. per ounce ball. All other Wools at proportionate prices. Shetland, Andalusian, Fleecy, and Bonne Mere Wools. Welsh, Scotch, Peacock Victoria, and other Yarns. Crewel Filoselle Silk. M. WHELLENS, Wholesale and Retail Wool Warehouse, 3, 5, & 6, QUEEN'S TERRACE, CAMDEN ROAD, LONDON.

Send for Price List and Sampler, which will be forwarded free on application.

LADIES' SILK SCARVES, price 1s. The choicest Silk Scarf ever offered. All Colours; richly brocaded ends. Send stamps for a sample.

M. WHELLENS, 5 & 6, Queen's-terrace, Camden-road, London, N.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, 5, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, JUNE 4, 1879. [All Rights Reserved.]

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. III. No. 128. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, JUNE 11, 1879. ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
The Gift of the Gates	237
The Geography of the Gates.—No. XXIX.—The Falkland Islands	238
Anglo-Israelism and Its Opponents	239
The Chosen People.—Part IV. A Lecture by John T. Gott	240
The Rev. J. B. Clifford's Recent Pamphlet and Psalm ii. 8.—By H. S.	242
An Anglo-Saxon Saying. By R. W. D. Nickle	242
Review.—The Rev. J. B. Clifford's Pamphlet.—Part V. By the Editor.	243
Correspondence	243

THE GIFT OF THE GATES.

THE Rev. C. W. Hickson, on February 19th, 1879, BANNER No. 112, page 83, expressed a strong conviction that May 22nd, 1879 (1878·388), would be the date of some great occurrence. A writer, B. J. S., following on the 2nd April, 1879 (page 147), thought that the 26th May, 1879 (1878·4) would prove to be such an epoch in Israel's history. Practically, the two days named are the same period. The difference between the 22nd and 26th May is but three and a half or four days, an inappreciable portion of time in reckoning the prophetic time-lengths of the Great Pyramid. We have now to ask ourselves, did any great and marked event likely to have a vast prophetic bearing on Israel and her future take place on either of these two dates, the 22nd or 26th May, 1879? There did! On the latter date, the treaty of peace between the Empress of India and Yakoob Khan, the Ameer of Afghanistan, was signed and sealed, which transferred for all time to Israel's custody the three great Gates of India hitherto in the keeping of her enemy. These, on that day, the Lord gave to Israel according to the promise, and actually in peace! We have received this great gift without that bloody and terrific war our pessimists and our opponents assured us would ensue if we meddled with the territory of the Afghans. We have had, on the contrary, a "military march past," and the result has been all but a bloodless victory, which has not only secured us the scientific frontier needed to make India safe on the only vulnerable point she always hitherto had, but has also laid the whole of Afghanistan tied and bound at our feet, made the Ameer a British feudatory, and his foreign policy one we shall henceforth dictate from Cabul itself, by means of a British Resident. But this is not all. The result of the event of the 26th May, 1879, has far reaching consequences as to Russia. She has been foiled in her designs on the territories of the Empress of India! The Russian Envoy and Embassy, which instigated the insult that Shere Ali offered to the British Raj, have had to leave Cabul, the Russian help proferred to the Ameer against the British Empire has utterly collapsed, and the Russian Bear, checkmated at Cabul as previously at Constantinople, has had to retreat ignominiously from his position, never to show his face again on the Eastern side of the Afghan frontiers! But what prophetic bearing has all this on Israel? And how does this signature of the Treaty, which gives India the custody of her Gates, constitute an event worthy of record in the Pyramid computations, and figure as a fact second only, we may suppose, to Waterloo in this century? In this wise. It forces the great enemy of Israel henceforth to look not to India at all, but towards Palestine as the weak point of our Empire, and therefore as the great battle-field between herself and British Israel for the mastery of the world. This event, which was consummated on May 26th, 1879 (1878·4), is in truth the turning point in Russian and British history as well, since it will force the former to her fate at Armageddon, and leave India secure, safe, and peaceful, what time the two great Powers of the world, Gog and Israel, are face to face, fighting on the plains of Esdraelon for the heirship of the globe! But that heirship and dominion we know have already, by the will of our God, been strictly entailed, and will devolve on British Israel as He is true. It is curious how in the arrangements which have now been made, the iron hand of Britain, covered with the silken glove, has been laid on Afghan territory; and lands which are ostensibly taken under our protection for "administrative" purposes, have virtually become as firmly a part of the Empire as the Berars in Hydrabad, or Cyprus, which is nominally Turkish still. The Times of the 24th May, 1879, gives us the particulars of the terms which have been agreed upon, and they are worthy of our study. The leader said:

> In point of fact, not an acre of Afghan soil is annexed by Great Britain, not a rupee is demanded as a war indemnity. We content ourselves with taking permanent possession of the Khyber and Michni Passes, which run through territory belonging to independent tribes, who have never owed allegiance to the Durani monarchs, By treating the Kuram, Sibi, and Peshin valleys as assigned districts. the administration of which will be carried on by us, all surplus revenues being handed over to the Ameer, we shall possess the right to locate troops at such points in these valleys as we may deem necessary for the due protection of common interests, and we shall also be justified in opening up military highways to the extreme limits of the assigned districts. In his foreign relations, and in the conduct of affairs with the intermediate frontier tribes, the Ameer will act in subordination to the British Government, and to aid him in such matters a Resident will forthwith be appointed to the Court of Cabul, whose post will be in the Ameer's capital. The treaty will also give us the right to place British Residents at Herat, Candahar, and other cities in Afghanistan, but at present it is not judged necessary or expedient to avail ourselves of this clause. Communications to Peshin will be maintained not only from Quettah by way of the old Bolan route, but also from Dera Ghazi Khan through the Thall-Chotiali Pass. In return for these concessions, which after all have been fairly won at the point of the sword, we shall guarantee to the Ameer a subsidy of about £120,000 per annum, contingent, of course, on his carrying out the treaty with faithful exactitude.

Digitized by Google

Now what is the meaning of this treaty thus signed on the 26th May? Let the Bristol Times and Mirror tell us:

Simply this, that in future Afghanistan is strategically and politically at our mercy. The Passes and the Valleys give us the military advantage, the superintendence of Afghan foreign relations give us the political advantage. When the Russian Mission was at Cabul, even the Opposition admitted that we could not allow the predominance of any other Power but ourselves there. With an English Resident at Cabul, there can be no idea in future of a Russian Mission being received there; and if the Russian force in Central Asia or the Persian army should threaten Herat, our Agent will be in a position to get the earliest information, and the vanguard of our army will be within reach, almost in sight, of the capital of Afghanistan. The occupation of the Shutargardan Pass places our troops within four days' easy march of Cabul, while the intervening Kuram Valley is rich and the tribes are friendly. The Pisheen Valley is a natural granary, and the Kojak Pass, also to be ours, is the sole obstacle between Quettah and Candahar. Thus the two most important places in the country are to be dominated by British troops, by way of supporting our Agent at the capital; while the occupation of the Khyber Pass will not only give us a splendid strategical position in case of invasion, but will finally set at rest the question as to the sovereignty of the Afridis and Momands, who claim the lands through which it runs. In brief, we have completely turned the tables on Russia.

Here, then, is concluded the first act of the great drama which is to end in Armageddon, and the coming of the Lord! It brought to a triumphant close the series of events which, planned by Russia for the appropriation of India from Israel's Queen, has terminated in the security of the territories of the Empress of India; also in the gift to our nation of the three magnificent Gates, the Khyber, the Kuram, and Kojak Passes, which testify to all mankind that, as possessor of them, she verily is Israel. These Gates are vital to the protection of our mighty Asiatic Empire. The mode we have been granted them, no less than the wondrous circumstances which accompanied the gift as they affect our future Russian foe, mark the 26th May, 1879, as a day much to be remembered by Israel, one worthy of record in the Great Pyramid—our inheritance. On the same day that peace was signed between our late enemies and ourselves, the Government of the day announced in both Houses of Parliament that they had appointed Lieut.-General Sir Garnet Wolseley to be Governor of Natal and the Transvaal, with the chief civil and military command in those parts where the Zulu War is now in progress. We see in this, too, the beginning there of a God-blessed glorious end. We trust that the appointment thus made, which fills us and the majority of the nation with satisfaction, will tend, under God, to the attainment of an honourable and speedy peace for Israel in the Cape Colonies—a peace which shall result in Confederation, and in the extension of British influence, British power, and British Christianity in the lands of a ruthless savage nation, whose only hope is to come under Israel's iron rod, and there being "broken," to fall to Christ! We thank God for the two great events which have marked the month of May, and particularly the 26th of that month in 1879. Finally, we call on all our friends, seeing and observing these things, to praise the God of Israel for His lovingkindness, tender mercy, and compassion to us "His chosen people."

ERRATUM.—In our last issue, No. 127, p. 233, second column, "Reviews," sixth line from the end of the page, omit the word "to" and read, "and thy possession, the uttermost parts the earth."

THE GEOGRAPHY OF THE GATES.

(Continued from page 169.)

No. XXIX.—THE FALKLAND ISLANDS.

NEAR and about 52° South latitude, and 60° West longitude, there are two large islands, with a group of 200 or so smaller ones attached to them, lying 310 miles to the East of the South-eastern point of the coast of South America, called the Falklands. These two fine islands in the South Atlantic Ocean, which seem to guard the approach to the Straits of Magellan, and to watch the South-east shores of Patagonia, as well as the territory (itself a cluster of islands) of Tierra del Fuëgo, constitute a veritable British "Gate." The two islands are called East Falkland and West Falkland respectively. They are separated by a channel two to seven and twelve miles wide. The East Falkland is the larger island of the two. It is about 100 miles long, N.E. to S.W., by 60 broad. The West Falkland, running parallel with its sister isle, is 90 miles long by 50 broad, giving an area for the two of about 6,000 square miles. The islands possess large, safe harbours, fresh water in abundance, fish and game in quantities, herds of horned wild cattle, a lovely climate, and material in stone, in one island at least, well adapted for building purposes. The rainfall is frequent, but not of long continuance. It is said that, on the whole, the climate is remarkably similar to that of the British Islands. Of trees there were originally none, though there are a few bushes to be seen in parts. The country, however, abounds in grasses of a splendid quality, just suited for cattle rearing, but not for sheep. Though there are no rivers in these islands, ponds and springs of water are common enough. When we have said that the islands are in the very track of vessels navigating round Cape Horn (noted for it terrific storms), also that they are admirably suited to the British constitution, as proved by long experience, we think we have said enough to show that this is not an unimportant Gate of the House of Israel, and that whatever induced our race to fix its eyes on this spot as a settlement and RENDEZVOUS for its colonising effort, it answers in every respect to the proper description of "the British Gates."

Having a rich soil, the Falklands repay the labour of the husbandman handsomely. Placed at the Southern extremity of the great continent of South America, these islands are in a position of strategic importance, regarded in a naval aspect, as to the territory they dominate. The British, as owners of them, virtually control the commercial route round the Horn which the nations (not especially our own) are obliged to take to carry on their vast and increasing commerce with the Western sea-board of the South American Republics. As a harbour and a refuge for the wearied and storm-tossed mariner, these islands afford an admirable shelter in the neighbourhood of the dangerous Horn. In the possession of the mistress of the sea, of the owners of the ocean highways of the world, whose power is supreme upon the waters, they are a guarantee that the savagery and cannibalism of the opposite coast of the mainland must cease, that the Gospel of the grace of God, through the dying love of the mighty Saviour of mankind shall triumph in Patagonia, in Fireland, and among the nomade tribes of uncivilised men who sparsely hold those inhospitable regions. And so the event has proved, as we shall show before we have concluded our notice of this great South American Gate. We have now to tell how these islands came to fall to the possession of the House of Israel, and how our connection with them was brought about. They were discovered in the reign of Queen Elizabeth by John Davis, or Richard Hawkins, in A.D. 1592. First the French formed a settlement on the Islands; but finding them unsuitable, or for some other reason, they were given up, and the Spaniards temporarily occupied them, naming them the "Malvinas." The British, in A.D. 1765 appeared upon the scene, and a naval officer (generally the founder of Israel's Gates), Commodore

Digitized by Google

Byron by name, took possession of the islands in the name of his Sovereign, King George III., spending a fortnight there, and hoisting the British flag upon the soil. The Spaniards endeavoured to dispute Great Britain's right to the territory; and after them the Government of Buenos Ayres asserted theirs by establishing a colony in Port Louis on the island of East Falkland. But in vain! The British Lion, the rightful owner of the islands of the world, and the destined heritors of "the ends, the coasts, and the uttermost parts of the earth" as well, would brook no denial, and maintained his right in the strength of the Lord of hosts. In 1833 the British, ostensibly to protect the whale fishery in those parts, entered on their last and final occupation of the islands, which were surrendered to them then and there, and have ever since been occupied by them in strength. The capital of the colony is Stanley, at the head of Port William, in the East Falklands; and this Gate has been constituted, like Singapore and Hong-Kong (the Eastern Gates of the House of Israel), a free port, or open Gate to all the world, for purposes of commerce. The Falkland Islands form a secure and acceptable harbour, as we have said, to the storm-tossed mariner after his passage past the dreaded Horn, and are the rendezvous of British, American, French, and other whalers and sealing vessels frequenting those Southern seas.

We have previously noticed that the islands in question, as one of the Gates of Israel, have fulfilled a double purpose—namely, as a strategic naval station on the one hand, giving our nation power and consolidated influence over the neighbouring lands and oceans; and on the other as a central point whence the blessed Gospel has been sent far and wide; not only to the wild tribes of Patagonia, to the semi-cannibals of Tierra del Fuëgo, but to the whole of the littoral of South America, North, South, East, and West. The Falkland Islands are the head-quarters of the South American Missionary Society, whose operations, superintended by Dr. Stirling, the Right Rev. the Bishop of the Falklands, embrace missions to the Firelanders at Ushuwia, to the Spanish-speaking Roman Catholic populations on the coast, to the degraded, neglected Aborigines in the interior, and on the Amazon with its affluents; finally, to our own neglected countrymen, located in their hundreds of thousands, without a shepherd to guide them, nor ministrations of their own church to comfort them in their voluntary exile in pursuit of livelihood, throughout the coasts of that vast continent. This great Southern British Gate occupies thus a unique position in reference to the whole of the South American States; for from it there goes forth the Gospel, and thus there proceeds an influence for good, to the British colonist first, to the Roman Catholic native next, and lastly to the heathen and nomadic tribes occupying the Southern and extreme Northern territories of the continent, through the agency of British missionaries, brave men and women. At the head of these is a resolute and holy man who has not feared to risk his own life for the name and the cause of Christ. His official title is derived from the very spot which is Israel's Gate—the Gate of political as well as of naval strength, in the South Atlantic Ocean.

We may thank God that the Lord has given our race and nation the Falkland Islands at the South-eastern point of South America, because such Gate is another witness, and another promise, too, of that universal domination reserved, as we know, for this race throughout the globe. The Falklands loudly testify that this shall include territory also in the continent of South America, as it already does in every other region "under the whole heaven" where the British are now scattered, as a dominant, ruling people (Dan. vii. 22—27).

The reader will note that the three Powers which first strove to secure the Falklands were Roman Catholic. They were France, Spain, and Buenos Ayres. They were each tried here, as at so many of the other British Gates, were found wanting, and were set aside. The witnessing, protesting nation, God's people Israel (the British), at last were seated in their place in the providence of God, and the "significance of this fact is surely remarkable when we know that the British officer who raised the standard of his country in these antartic regions was the very man by whom the idea of benefitting the degraded people of Tierra del Fuëgo and Patagonia was first reduced to practice." Capt. Allan Gardiner, R.N., who sacrificed his life for these same heathen Aborigines, wrote in 1841 regarding the Falklands, words which prove he recognised them even then as the glorious British Gospel-Gate, for he said, "Happily for us, and I trust eventually for the poor Indians, the Falkland Islands, so admirably situated for the purpose, may become THE KEY to the Aborigines both of Patagonia and Tierra del Fuëgo." Capt. Gardiner called the spot "the key;" but God's Word describes it better as "the Gate" promised to the possession of the seed of Abraham, and verily to that martyred officer and his fellows, those native Tribes, who are now benefitting so wonderfully by British occupation of the Falklands, were his bitter enemies, for he and his party died of famine and disease in 1851, on their then most inhospitable shores.

(To be followed by a paper on Jamaica.)

ANGLO-ISRAELISM AND ITS OPPONENTS.

I WISH to call attention to a few remarks made by Mr. Robert Roberts, the Christadelphian opponent of our Anglo-Israelism, during his too fierce denunciation of that truth, in Exeter Hall, on April 23, 1879. It may be important that what I have to say should be noted at once, because that gentleman (quite unintentionally I have no doubt) not only gave us a beautiful Identity, but having built up a theory of his own, concerning the restoration of the Jews to Palestine, in certain pamphlets and lectures, proceeded to undermine it and blow it up with his own gunpowder in Exeter Hall.

He tried but one refutation of the historical Identities, and that is what I have to deal with. Taking for granted, with Sharon Turner, that the Sacæ were the most likely people from whom descended the Anglo-Saxons, Mr. Roberts wished to prove, from the same historian, that Sacæ were not Israelites, but Scythians. "Now," said he, "the Sacæ were Scythians—but who were the Scythians?" "Israelites, of course!" shouted some enthusiastic Anglo-Israelites from the body of the Hall. "But I will prove they were not," said Mr. Roberts (tremendous cheers from Christadelphians). Our opponent then quoted Josephus, to show that in his day Scythians were the supposed descendants of Gomer. He gave a text also from Genesis, which did not prove anything. "Thus," exclaims Mr. Roberts, "the Saxons are descendants of the Sacæ, who were Scythians, who were from Gomer."

We must now consider Mr. Roberts's theory of the restoration of the Jews. I gather from his pamphlets that the Jews of the present day are the Twelve Tribes (he has not proved that they are), and that the time of their return is at hand. Britain is to be THE servant of the Jews; Britain is to see them safely to their land; British hands will put their land in order; Britain's ships will guard their coasts; Britain's army will guard the mountains of Israel against the approaching Prince of Rosh, Meshech, and Tubal; yet Britain's army will be defeated and her ships will meet with general destruction. Thus far Mr. Roberts. But we must remember that our opponent wishes us to believe that all Anglo-Saxons are Gomerites. Let us grant for a moment that they are; at the same time turn to the Bible and find out what part Gomer shall yet play in that great battle upon the mountains of Israel. Ezekiel xxxviii. 6 informs us that "Gomer AND ALL HIS BANDS" are to be arrayed in conjunction with other peoples and nations AGAINST Israel. If, therefore, the Anglo-Saxons are Gomerites, it follows that our nation cannot be the restorer and guardian of the Jews. On the other hand, if the Anglo-Saxons are not Gomerites (and I do not for one moment believe they are) our opponent's historical reputation falls to the ground.

Digitized by Google

The fact is, it cannot be proved that all Scythians were of one race, and what can be gathered from old writers goes to prove that there was a vast difference between certain sections of the peoples called Scythians.

Now, the Bible comes in to shew us why it is a beautiful Identity that the ancestors of the British Nation (being really a portion of the Ten Tribes) should be mistaken for Gomerites. The first chapter of Hosea is a prophetical and symbolical intimation that the Ten Tribes would form an illegal alliance with Gomer, and their descendants would appear to God and man in the following condition—first, as Jezreel (God has scattered); secondly, Lo-Ruhamah (not compassionated); and thirdly, Lo-Ammi (not My people), and we know that they reached that condition, the lowest depth of their degradation, about the time of their leaving the continent for Britain, when they bore so little resemblance to God's chosen and highly-favoured nation—Israel.

Mr. Roberts is under the impression that the return of Christ to the earth is imminent. If so, then we must look for the Ten Tribes of Israel after the flesh, as a people in number, speaking comparatively, "as the stars of heaven"—that is, a multitudinous people (Hos. i. 10). We cannot apply this passage to Christian Gentiles, because we know that the curses are for Israel only; and the blessings must be even now upon them; because if Christ came to redeem them from the law, He came also to redeem them from the curses of the law. There is no doubt but that He came likewise to redeem the Jews of His day, but they rejected His redemption; even as do the Jews of our day. Hear His words:—"O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them which are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wing, and ye would not." Nevertheless, as St. Paul says, it is "not as though the Word of God hath taken none effect. For they are not ALL Israel, that are OF Israel." Wherefore we are very glad to know that there are, at the present time, other representatives of God's chosen people than those whom we call Jews.

J. C. N.

THE CHOSEN PEOPLE.

A Lecture by John T. Gott.

(Continued from page 229).

PART IV.

Now the chosen people are split into two distinct factions, made two distinct nations, alienated the one from the other. Hitherto, they have had little cause to rejoice that they had demanded a king to reign over them, that they might be like other nations. Jeroboam, the first king over the Ten Tribes of Israel, was the man that made Israel to sin. The history of the kingdom of Israel, distinctly understood as separate from the kingdom of Judah, is the most lamentable record extant. As we are more particularly concerned about the Ten Tribes, let us take a bird's-eye view of their history, under their monarchy in the land of Palestine.

Jeroboam established the worship of the golden calves. Being warned by two prophets, and yet persisting in his idolatry, he died a miserable death. In the record of the kings of Israel of the Ten Tribes, we clearly see that the deliberate object of almost every succeeding king was to undermine and destroy the whole family of his predecessor.

Baasha utterly destroyed the family of Jeroboam. Elah, his son, was murdered in his drunkenness by Zimri, who destroyed all the House of Baasha. Zimri set fire to his palace after seven days' reign, and died there. Omri built Samaria. Ahab, his son, influenced by his wife Jezebel, far outstripped the idolatry of his predecessors. And so the history proceeds from bad to worse, until we find the House of Israel carried captive, bodily, into Assyria. The Scripture record states that there were "none left."

Hosea was decidedly the prophet sent to the Ten Tribes of Israel. He ranks foremost among the prophets because he held the prophetic office for the longest time, a period of sixty-two years, or more. He laboured long in his ministry with very little success, and probably lived to see his awful threatenings executed in the captivity of the Ten Tribes.

The Ten Tribes of Israel did not go into Assyrian captivity without due warning of the calamities that would befall them. Of all the prophecies in the Bible respecting them, none, to my mind, are more clear and distinct than Hosea's. Said he, "Ephraim—i.e., Israel of the Ten Tribes—is joined to idols; let him alone." Solemn thought! There may be a time in a nation's history when God leaves them alone. Solemn thought! There may be a time in the history of every individual when God may leave him or her alone. The Israelites were idolaters when they were cast out, and they became thorough heathens. The prophet Hosea presents them to our notice in their cast off condition, under four aspects, in chap. xiii. 3:

I.—"They shall be as the morning cloud; as the early dew that passeth away; as the chaff that is driven with the whirlwind out of the floor; as the smoke out of the chimney."

In the Holy Land dense clouds often appear in the morning, cover the whole heavens, and promise fertilizing showers of rain. The farmer looks at his parched land, and with anxious hope in his heart longs for the descent of the promised blessing. But as the sun rose higher, the morning cloud that promised so much, suddenly disappeared. So of the chosen people. Much good was expected from them, and through them a blessing was to fall on all the nations upon earth. Dean Stanley says that the Assyrian Empire "suddenly vanished from the earth," and with it disappeared from the ken of man, like a morning cloud, the great bulk of God's chosen people, the House of Israel.

II.—They were to be as the early dew that passeth away. The same lesson is taught here. Just as the warm rays of the morning sun caused the early dew to pass away out of sight, so, when the burning anger of the Lord passed over the House of Israel, they disappeared out of sight entirely; like the dew they passed away silently, mysteriously, and became unknown, unseen, lost.

III.—They were to be like the chaff that is driven with the whirlwind out of the floor.

The most common mode of threshing the corn in the Holy Land was effected by a slab, which was drawn by a yoke of oxen, until not only the grain was shelled out, but until the straw itself was ground into chaff. The grain as it was threshed was heaped into the centre of what was called the threshing-floor. This was not in a covered building, but was laid down in the open field. The corn and chaff were tossed up in the air; the grain fell in one place, and the wind blew the chaff away, to fall and rot in the ground. Do we not see how forcible this illustration is as applied to the House of Israel, who were blown away as chaff before the breath of their long-suffering God, and have been buried out of sight for so many centuries?

IV.—They were to be as the smoke out of a chimney—that is, just as smoke is extremely offensive to man, and just as he adopts means to remove it from his presence, so God removed the offensive House of Israel bodily out of His sight, for their continued and persistent wickedness.

All this has become a literal fact, and as we turn to the end of this prophecy we lay hold of this promise, made to the Ten Tribes, with the strong hand of faith: "I will heal their backsliding; I will love them freely; for Mine anger is turned away from him." And just as Israel mysteriously disappeared like dew, so mysteriously will they re-appear, for God hath promised

Digitized by Google

"I will be as the dew unto Israel." But the question comes, When will God do this? And again, we find the prophetic response, "After two days will He revive us, and the third day He will raise us up, and we shall live in His sight." Now, as one day is with the Lord as 1,000 years, and more than 2,600 years have passed since Israel of the Ten Tribes, the great bulk of the chosen people were cast out and buried out of sight, the second day has passed, and the people must have been "revived," and the third day has come, during which they will be "raised up," and "live" in the sight of the Lord their God.

But how are they to be known? They must be recognized, first, in having fulfilled in them, and in being in actual possession of, all the covenant blessings; and secondly, in the work they are doing in the world for the glory of God—making God's name "a praise in the earth," the characteristic office of God's chosen and peculiar people.

Hosea distinctly declares of the children of Israel in exile, that their number should be as the sand of the sea, which cannot be measured or numbered, that this should be so in a place where it should be said, "Ye are not My people;" not My chosen people. This is to be the fulfilment of the covenant promise of a multitudinous seed. The Jews, or House of Judah, do not possess this sign. The day is too far spent for any fresh people to manifest this sign. There is no nation in the world can lay the shadow of a claim to the sign save and except the British people. No people on the face of the earth are doubling their population in so short a time. Continental statisticians are united in their opinion that the British people are filling the world, and that their language will eventually become universal.

But while the British people are undoubtedly a multitudinous seed, while they hold the Gates of their enemies in all the maritime highways of the world, while they are not only a great nation and a company of nations, and thus inherit all the covenant blessings promised to the patriarchs, and consequently have a right to lay some claim to be acknowledged as God's "chosen people," the Ten Tribes of Israel, there are other signs which they possess, which are undeniable, and cannot belong to any other than the chosen people.

We are sometimes censured for taking too literal a view of the predictions of the prophets. The Bible is an old book. Its prophecies have been literally fulfilled in the past, are being fulfilled in the present, and who will dare to say that they cannot be in the future?

Many tell us that there is nothing in the New Testament about the Ten Tribes, and that it does not matter a straw now where they are, or what has become of them! But it does matter; and the New Testament is not silent thereon. The remnant of Israel and the House of Judah have yet to be restored and re-settled in their own land, and the predictions respecting that time, and the work to be done, are as plain as noonday.

We are living in times when many, especially among young men, deny, in toto, the Divinity of our Saviour. Was He Divine, or was He not? Take the parable of the sower. He saw a sower scattering his seed. He directed the attention of the people to him. He spake the parable. If Divinity was in His nature, the meaning of this parable must be infinite, and its application world-wide. If Divine, then He could look far back into the past, and forward into the future. I would not disparage, in any way, the beautiful spiritual instruction that has been derived from this parable, but I ask, have we individually realized the full scope of its meaning? Our Saviour explained this parable, and said the seed was the "Word of God." He spake several parables beginning with "A certain man," A certain man had two sons. That certain man, I believe, was the Man Christ Jesus. His two sons, I believe to be the House of Judah and the House of Israel; the chosen people whom He formed for Himself, that they might show forth His praise. He said to the one son, "Go work to-day in My vineyard." He answered, "I will not." The flat, deliberate refusal of Israel of the Ten Tribes to obey the Divine decrees. But afterwards "he repented and went." He said likewise to the other—i.e., the House of Judah, or the Jews—who answered, "I go, Sir," and went not. Now, our Saviour being Divine, according to my belief, the full scope of this parable, and of all others, must be national. The Jews are not working in the Lord's vineyard; therefore, Lost Israel, the son who said rebelliously, "I will not," must be; and I am confirmed in my opinion when I read in Isaiah that the vineyard of the Lord of hosts is the House of Israel, and the men of Judah are His pleasant plant—the one great, the other small; the one bringing forth fruit, the other a "plant of renown." Now, if we are Lost Israel, we must, nationally, be performing the part of the sower, and I say we are. Our people do not know this, but is is, nevertheless, a fact. Let me explain. Carl Ritter, the founder of historical geography, divided the world into two hemispheres, which he called a land hemisphere, and a water hemisphere—i.e., he drew a circle in which he enclosed all the largest portions of land, and called it a land hemisphere. Occupying the very centre of this land hemisphere is the island of Great Britain. The city of London is nearly the central point of that circle. What more fitting place wherein to plant "the tree of low stature!" The tree that took root in this little island, and grew, and became "a spreading vine," not like the noble vine—the parent stem—but a vine of "low stature, bringing forth branches, and shooting forth twigs" (Ezek. xvii.).

To return to the parable. There was only one sower, sowing one kind of seed—the Word of God. Now, in the British people there is one nation, and one alone, standing in the centre of the land hemisphere, scattering the seed—the Word of the living God, all over the round world. Through the agency of our British and Foreign Bible Society during the past century, copies of the Scriptures have been multiplied from 5,000,000 to 200,000,000, and it is calculated that the production of English Bibles in our time is equal to more than 1,000,000 copies a year, more than 19,000 per week, more than 3,000 a day, 300 an hour, or 5 every minute of working time (vide BANNER, vol. i.). At this rate the English press is publishing a Bible or New Testament every 12 seconds. It appears also that none of those Bibles are wasted, the demand for them being equal to the supply. As this is the circulation of the Sacred Scriptures in the English language only, and England alone gives encouragement and assistance to more than 150 different versions, I maintain that the British people nationally are illustrating the parable of the sower—that our Saviour was Divine—and that we are that great bulk of the chosen people, the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel—that chosen people whom God ordained to make His name a praise in the earth.

The Lost Tribes must be found, just as the lost sheep were, just as the woman found the lost piece of silver, and they must return home, just like the prodigal son.

There are three parables of our Saviour, all strung together, and delivered by Him on one occasion.

The lost sheep of the House of Israel went astray. All shepherds will tell you that no matter how far they may have strayed, you will find the bulk of the flock all together. Then they are counted over, and the good shepherd will go in search of the stragglers—yes, if there be only one. And when he hath found it, he layeth it on his shoulders, rejoicing, and calling his friends and neighbours together they all rejoice because he found the sheep that was lost. Here again we may perceive that this parable has a world-wide signification. The Good Shepherd came to seek and to save that which was lost. The great bulk of His chosen people were lost—the people that God had "formed for Himself" in order that they might make His name "a praise in the earth." He came to redeem them, that they might be the instruments of blessing to all the families of the earth.

Just as the good shepherd in the parable is represented as carrying the lost sheep on his shoulders, so has the Almighty promised to gather out the lost sheep of the House of Israel, to bring them into their own land, and to cause them to dwell safely there for ever. Just as the shepherd gathered together his friends to rejoice with him, so, on the restoration of Lost Israel, the Almighty has promised to make unto all people a feast of fat things, a feast of wines on the lees, of fat things full of marrow, of wines on the lees well refined. Then will be a season of unalloyed happiness, of heaven-given joy—for God shall wipe away tears from all faces.

Digitized by Google

(To be continued.)

THE REV. J. B. CLIFFORD'S RECENT PAMPHLET AND PSALM II. 8.

By H. S.

As a feeler after the truth of the Identity, it has been with great pain that I find one who, in the past, has been a faithful defender of the truth of God, condescending to use such language, in opposition to the views of the editor of the BANNER, as we have been accustomed to find proceeding only out of the mouths of revilers of the truth itself. Such language, compared with the temperate reply in No. 124 of the BANNER, will, I think, predispose many to conclude that the truth is on the latter side, and will, doubtless, lead many to examine the passage commented on, which excites Mr. Clifford's ire.

The passage is Psa. ii. 8: "Ask of Me, and I will give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession." And Mr. Clifford's remark on the editorial view of this text is, "And so this glorious promise was made to Israel. . . . . I can only say this, that I never met, in all the records of infidelity or Popery, with more hideous blasphemy. . . . . Tell me, Is not this an anti-Christ? Are not these men blasphemers?" &c., &c.; and Mr. Clifford justifies these awful conclusions by appealing to "the two previous verses" as evidently addressed to the Son, implying, therefore, that the whole passage refers to the Son, and the Son exclusively; the Head, not the Head and body together; but why not look at the two succeeding verses, 9 and 10? Verse 10 is not addressed to the Son, and verse 9 may not be also, for we find the very same promise made to the body—the Church (Rev. ii. 26, 27).

All students of the prophetical Scriptures must have observed how frequently the subjects and objects change suddenly, strikingly, and repeatedly, even when standing in the closest verbal connection. Has any interpreter of prophecy a right to call another a "blasphemer" because he gives a different interpretation to a prophetical Scripture from himself, or even from standard commentators? But let me take advantage of this letter to beg Mr. Clifford seriously to reconsider this passage and his strong expressions on Philo-Israel's views respecting it. The passage in Psa. ii. is, "Ask of Me, and I shall give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession. Thou shalt break them with a rod of iron; thou shalt dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel." One whom Mr. Clifford will not dare to style a "blasphemer" (awful thought!), says, "He that overcometh, to him will I give power over the nations; and he shall rule them with a rod of iron; as the vessels of a potter shall they be broken to shivers: even as I received of My Father" (Rev. ii. 26, 27).

I do not think Philo-Israel has ever said more than this. If he has attributed this glorious promise to Israel, he has abundantly shewn that it is only as to one "that overcometh" that he can be a partaker of it.

Mr. Clifford knows some expounders of prophecy who hold "that it is impossible that ever 'the lion shall eat straw like the ox,'" but Mr. Clifford would be astonished to find the holder of such an opinion branded as a "blasphemer," though he apparently denies a plain statement of Scripture, yet he hesitates not to brand a brother with this awful title who, comparing Scripture with Scripture, arrives at an interpretation of a more obscure passage different from his own.

Mr. Clifford seems to forget two things. 1. That Christ and His people are "one," and, therefore, what may be predicated of one may be true of the other; and (2) that the restoration of the Jews and Israelites will be as "life from the dead" to the whole world. Would that the whole question of the Identity were treated by its opponents in a more Christian spirit. They may depend upon it, their contention would be none the less successful. They should remember that long-lost Israel must be in the world somewhere, and that God will reveal them in His own good time. Let them take heed that it be not to their own confusion.

AN ANGLO-SAXON SAYING.

WE have often heard the question asked, Where is truth to be found? and the remarkable answer is, "That it is to be discovered at the bottom of a well." It has been said that this reply is intended to express the difficulty which is sometimes experienced in getting at the truth; but to most persons the answer appears to be meaningless, at the same time there is something in it that attracts attention, and leads one to inquire what could have been the origin of this very common saying.

I never understood that it had any meaning, until one day a friend of mine, who prided himself in having a fine collection of clocks, showed me one of a singular construction—the design being entirely composed of Masonic emblems, Jachin and Boaz supporting the face of the clock. Near the base of the latter I observed what appeared to be an exact resemblance to a WELL surrounded by a low parapet, and just above it was a STAR from which rays of LIGHT were represented streaming down the mouth of the well, which evidently had a deep and mysterious meaning in connection with light—that glorious and marvellous emanation from the presence of God.

Now just at the time I saw this interesting Masonic clock it so happened that I had the pleasure of becoming acquainted with your correspondent Manasseh, and in the course of conversation with him, regarding the Anglo-Saxon race being the descendants of the Ten Tribes of the House of Israel, also the relationship betwixt Ephraim and Manasseh, and that there was every reason for believing, from the researches that had been made by the Rev. F. R. A. Glover, M.A., that the sacred ark of the covenant would be discovered very soon at Tara, my friend Manasseh appeared to listen very attentively to what I was saying. He then rose and went to his writing table, unlocked a drawer, from which he presented me with four Masonic diplomas, which he told me I might examine. Upon my doing so, one of these interesting documents rivetted my attention. I was astonished at what I beheld admirably engraved upon it, causing me at the same time to think of the old Masonic timepiece with its emblems the WELL and the MORNING STAR.

There was engraved very distinctly upon this particular diploma what appeared exactly like the shape of a bottle with the neck knocked off, in the interior of which there was a succession of arches, each arch having a circular opening in the centre, and at the bottom of this peculiar and strongly-built bottle-shaped WELL, just beneath the opening there was a correct representation of THE SACRED ARK of the COVENANT, rays of light being depicted streaming down through the various openings upon the ark from the sun, in the centre of which was the triune emblem, the equilateral triangle, with the sacred name JEHOVAH, and in the midst of clouds the names ALPHA and OMEGA. So that there could not be a doubt as to the meaning which this marvellous engraving was intended to convey regarding the long lost treasure of Freemasonry, and which the Freemasons go through the ceremony of finding as a constant reminder of what has to be accomplished.

Digitized by Google

Now, from the emblems on the Masonic clock, and from what was more fully displayed by the engraving upon the diploma, it was evident that there was a great deal more in the well than most persons have the slightest idea of, and that we have every reason for believing, from good authority, that ere long the great fulfilment of prophecy to the praise and glory of the Lord, also the crowning Identification of the Anglo-Saxon race being the children of the House of Israel, will take place, and thus the truth will be discovered at the bottom of this WELL very wisely constructed by the grand master builder, the prophet Jeremiah, into whose hands the precious contents of the well were given by the "CHIEF CORNER STONE" (Eph. ii. 20; 1 Pet. ii. 4—7) for their preservation until the time appointed for their restoration.

R. W. D. NICKLE, Major.

Leamington, May 16, 1879.

Review.

The Anglo-Saxons and the Israelites. By the Rev. J. B. Clifford, M.A., Vicar of St. Matthew's, Kingsdown, Bristol. Price fourpence. Hamilton, Adams & Co., 32, Paternoster-row; I. E. Chillcott, Bristol.

FIFTH NOTICE. BY THE EDITOR.

(Concluded from page 234.)

HAVING shown that the Rev. Mr. Clifford, in his attack upon our glorious cause—the cause of the Lord Jehovah and of "Israel His glory" (Isa. xlvi. 13)—is, as regards his history and ethnology, wrong; in reference to his chronology, wrong; as to his Hebrew criticism, wrong; as to his view of Psalm ii. 8, wrong; as to his Christian charity, decidedly wrong, and unlike his Divine Master—let us now indicate some minor points on which our would-be mentor has mistaken the facts, or so produced them to the public in his pamphlet, that he has given an erroneous impression. At page 27, et seq., he fastens an interpretation of Isa. xlii. 1—4 upon the Bishop of Rangoon, which the latter never in the "Post-bag" advanced at all; for he never mentioned those verses, but only verse six of that chapter, in page 142 of his work. If the reference is to some private letter of the Bishop's, why was it not published? We protest against such tactics as this. They are neither fair nor just towards an absent man who cannot be heard for at least three months to come.

We next demur with indignation to the closing words of the note which appears at the foot of page 35, that "persons should avoid answering letters from Anglo-Israelites, unless they are assured of the honourable character of their correspondents." The insinuation is as unjust as it is unworthy of the divine who makes it. We know the circumstances alluded to, and can assure our readers that, as far as we can judge, no turpitude at all attaches to the excellent lady (a rector's wife) or the clergyman at whom the remarks are pointed, for their concern in this matter.

These and some other minor criticisms on our views and opinions being disposed of, what remains of Mr. Clifford's charges against the cause of truth we advocate? Nothing! Absolutely nothing! Has he touched the great PRINCIPLES which underlie our Identity? Not once! Not one! He picks a hole here, another there; he starts an absurd theory of the Hamitic origin of our race, which, if true, destroys the integrity of God's Word, root and branch, since it makes the most favoured nation now on the face of this earth to descend from that stock which God Himself declared should be "cursed," a servant for ever to his brethren. He adopts a chronology for his views which his own authority, Sharon Turner, laughs out of court, and Mr. Clifford exposes himself to ridicule thereby. He ventures on Hebrew criticisms, striving to upset renderings which have stood the test of 300 years, but only thereby tells the tale that of the Hebrew language he is innocent of knowledge.

Has he disposed of Bishop's Titcomb's famous argument as contained in the preface to the second edition? He never even once mentions it, and we question if he has ever seen or read it. Can he deny, or does he attempt it, that the House of Israel and the House of Judah, now in separation, must one day be united in the "North country" exactly as described in Hosea i. 11; Jer. iii. 18; and Ezek. xxxvii. 16—19? Not at all. Has he ventured to deny or account for the fact, that we British have every one of the splendid blessings promised by God Almighty upon oath to His servant Abraham, our forefather? Can he deny we are the owners of "the Gates," the privileged servants of the Most High, commissioned to send—and actually sending—the Gospel "to ALL the families of the earth," the liberators of the slave, the owners of the desolate heritages, of the colonial and of the heathen empires of the world as well, that the Queen's possessions belt the earth, that ours is the only land where foot of foreign foe has never trod, and there dictated terms of shameful peace? Can he deny we British are the wealthiest, as we are the most generous nation upon God's earth, the mistress of the seas, and invincible, too, upon the land? And as to all these blessings, straight from the right hand of the God of Israel, promised to His people if obedient, can Mr. Clifford or any one else tell us how it comes to pass we British possess them ALL unless either we be Israel obedient, or God can forget His solemn oath to the seed of Abraham, His friend?

These are the great principles which underlie our contention, and Mr. Clifford has not so much as a word to say on any one of them. We have done our duty. The attack has damaged the man who made it, but not the cause—Jehovah's—he seeks to overthrow. He seeks in vain! It is "hard" for Mr. Clifford "to kick against the pricks," and we tell him that attempts such as his must recoil, must end in failure, in his loss of reputation as a scholar, and in loss of respect as a preacher of God's Word. We hope ere long to hear that, repenting of his violence and unseemly bitterness against what is God's truth, he will bring himself calmly and with Christian humility to examine the evidence for our Identity, and in the end to preach it from his own pulpit in St. Matthew's, Kingsdown, Bristol.

Correspondence.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—Has any one called the attention of the Rev. Mr. Cornall to the fact that Shashang I. King of Egypt, the Shishak of Scripture, was an Assyrian, that he headed the twenty-second dynasty, according to Brugsch, succeeding his father Nimrod of the previous dynasty, the latter part of which saw Egypt under Assyrian dominion? This being so, we must, in conformity with Mr. Cornall's assertion that we are descended from Shishak, be—not Hamitic, but decidedly Semitic; the Assyrians being of Shem, and not of Ham. We are told, Genesis x., that out of Shinar went Asshur and builded Nineveh; and Rawlinson, in his "Ancient Monarchies," states that the Assyrian monuments show clearly that the language of the Assyrians was Semitic, in harmony with their Semitic descent. If "Identity" opponents would kindly remember that the theory of our Israelitish origin is principally taken up and inquired into by the more intelligent part of the community, they would, I think, pause ere they essayed to bring forward their one-sided views of their own particular theories.

Yours faithfully,
R. E.

May 14, 1879.

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements
(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O.O payable at Ludgate-circus.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed :—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

BANNER FREE CIRCULATION FUND.

	£	s.	d.
Spero Meliora	0	2	6

NEW BOOKS AND NEW EDITIONS.

Price 6d., post free 7d.

THE ISRAELITISH ORIGIN OF THE ANGLO-SAXONS, IRISH, SCOTCH, AND WELSH. An Historical Proof, by THOMAS C. BALMER.

CONTENTS:—Division of Solomon's Kingdom—Kingdom of Judah and Kingdom of Israel—History of the House or Kingdom of Israel—Proof that They were Never Restored—Their Idols, Religious Festivals, Conversion, &c., &c.—Israelitish Origin of the Ancient Britons, Irish, and Scotch—Traditional Account of Their Migration From the East—The Language and Religious Ceremonies Considered—Observations on the Future Restoration—Ultimate Destiny of the Holy Land.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

NOW READY, price 2d., post free, 2½d.

NEW PAMPHLET BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

THE HISTORICAL, ETHNIC, AND PHILOLOGICAL ARGUMENTS in PROOF of BRITISH IDENTITY with the TEN LOST TRIBES OF ISRAEL, clearly and simply stated.

BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

CONTENTS:—Introduction—The Celts—Professor Rawlinson's Testimony—The Cymry—The Cimmerii—The Gimiri and Khumri—The Testimony of the Nimroud Obelisk—The Scythians—The Anglo-Saxons—Sharon Turner's Testimony—The Jutes and Angles—The Danes and the Normans—General Conclusions—Philology—The Welsh Language—The Rev. Canon Lysons' Testimony—Idiomatic Identity Between Hebrew and English—Tyndal's Testimony—The Tribe of Dan—The Irish Celts—Are the Continental Nations Israelites?—Conclusions—Appendix.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane; and Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Just out. Price 4d.

NEBUCHADNEZZAR'S DREAM and THE BRITISH EMPIRE. By Ephraim. With Illustrative Prophetic Map.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; Sold by W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

This day. Price 2d. Post free 2½d.

MANASSEH AND THE UNITED STATES. An important Essay delivered before the "Lost Israel Identification Society," by the Rev. Joseph Wild, D.D., at Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, New York.

CONTENTS:—The Fulness of the Gentiles set in—For whom did God intend America—The Origin of the United States—The Footsteps of Ephraim and Manasseh—The Will of Jacob made to Ephraim and Manasseh—Manasseh a People, and a Great People—Manasseh's Birthtime of Separation—Out of nearly Sixty Conquered Colonies the only one England ever Lost was that of Manasseh (America)—The Great Seal of the United States—Manasseh was brought up at the Door of the Pyramid, &c., &c.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet court, Fleet-street; W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.; and of any Bookseller.

SOME of PHILO-ISRAEL'S papers, as they have appeared in THE BANNER, will be separately published from time to time in the form of Letters, for distribution.

No. 1. "The Identity of the British with Lost Israel."
No. 2. "The Glory of God."
No. 3. "An Address to British Soldiers." (Now ready.)
No. 4. "An Address to British Sailors." (Now ready.)

Others will follow. Price One and Sixpence per 100; less quantities in proportion: postage extra.

Apply to R. Banks, 5 Racquet-court, Fleet street. Also all Booksellers and Publishers.

PUBLIC ANNOUNCEMENTS.

SHEFFIELD ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

THE NEW CARD OF MEMBERSHIP is now ready. Price in quantities, 4d. each; single copies, 7½d. post free. Supplied to the Metropolitan, Bristol and Clifton, Huddersfield, and other Associations. Apply, Geo. W. Staniland, Castle-street, Sheffield, Hon. Sec.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

A PUBLIC MEETING will be held in the VILLAGE CLUB and LECTURE HALL, WIMBLEDON, on Friday Evening, June 20, 1879, to form a Local Branch of the above Association. The Chair will be taken at 8 o'clock, by the Rev. The Vicar, M.A. Colonel Bentinck, D. A. Onslow, Esq., J.P., James L. Wood, Esq., and Rev. J. Billington will attend and take part in the meeting. Admission free. Identity friends in the neighbourhood are earnestly invited to be present.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION. Temporary office: 20, Warwick-lane, London, E.C. This Association is prepared to send out experienced and well QUALIFIED GENTLEMEN to LECTURE on the subject of "The Identity of the British Race with the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel." The terms are such as involve no liabilities as to loss, &c. Upon those needing their services—which are not restricted to the Metropolitan area—all applications as to the Lecturers, Subjects, &c., to be made to the Hon. Sec., JAMES BILLINGTON, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

HASTINGS AND ST. LEONARDS ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION, Auxiliary to the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association.

President:—
Lieut.-Col. W. H. LARKINS, Dymock, Ore.
Treasurer:—
Mr. COULTHWAITE, St. Andrew's Schools.
Hon. Secretaries:—
Mr. B. SARGENT, 37, London Road, St. Leonards.
Mr. J. R. MITCHELL, 52, St. Andrew's Road, Hastings.
Committee:—
Messrs. WHITEMAN, W. DUNGEY, KENT, PRYOR, R. GREEN

LO AMMI—NOT MY PEOPLE. A Handbill for shop-windows and for private circulation has been prepared, showing the connection between Hosea i. 10, as Prophecy, and the titles of various pamphlets of our opponents, recently issued from the press, as Fulfilments. To be had of W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane; Robert Banks, Racquet court, Fleet-street; and of Philo-Israel, Bristol. Price 2s. per 100, or 3d. per dozen.

ARE ENGLISHMEN ISRAELITES? The Debate in Exeter Hall between Mr. Edward Hine and Mr. Robert Roberts. Just published, with appendix and answers to correspondents. Demy octavo, about 120 pp. Price 1s.

London: F. Pitman, 20, Paternoster-row. Birmingham: R. Roberts, Athenæum Rooms, Temple-row.

New and Revised Edition, Price 6d. Cloth boards, 1s.

THE "NEW OLD STORY," with an Introduction to a Marvellous Puzzle. The Story gives a sketch of the History of the Hebrews, shewing distinctly the difference between the Two Nations, Judah and Israel, the latter being the British. The Story also tells of the Great Pyramid, and explains how its wonderful meaning can be, as it is only understood by measurement. An Appendix explains "The Eastern Question." The Story is written with great simplicity, and interests young children. By A E I, Author of "The Answer to the Eastern Question." W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

Price 1d.; post free, 1½d.

GOD'S LOVE FOR ISRAEL. A GUARANTEE THAT HE WILL FULFIL HIS PROMISES TO ISRAEL. By JOHN GILDER SHAW.

Price 6d.; or with illustrative map, 8d.

BRITAIN (OR ISRAEL) THE FIFTH AND LAST, AND THE UNCONQUERABLE EMPIRE. By JOHN GILDER SHAW.

Price 3d.; post free, 3½d.

CHRONOLOGICAL CHART OF BRITISH VICTORIES OVER THE CONTINENTAL POWERS, ranging from the battle of Cressy (1346), to our last victory, the taking of Sebastopol, Sept. 8, 1855. Arranged by J. G. SHAW, of Leeds.

"We trust Mr. Shaw's labour in preparing this paper may be appreciated by the public and be largely sold."—Banner of Israel.

London: Published by Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; and may be had of the Author, 20 Park-row, Leeds, and of all booksellers.

BANNER OF ISRAEL. VOL. II. Now ready, price 7s., of all Booksellers.

BRISTOL LEAFLETS ON THE IDENTIFICATION. 1 to 9; 1s. per 100.

BOOKS, ETC.

18th Annual Issue, price 2d., post free 3d., 36 pages closely printed matter.

THE A B C CHURCH AND CHAPEL DIRECTORY. The best and only correct guide to all London and Suburban Protestant Places of Worship, Ministers, Times of Service, &c., &c. A cheap and reliable Christian Guide Book to London.

The Record says: "A well-arranged List of all the London and Suburban Protestant Places of Worship, with the Clergy who officiate, services, &c. Exceedingly useful."

The Nonconformist says: "Very useful—containing a mass of useful information, which will be serviceable to visitors to London, not less than to permanent residents in the metropolis."

