The Christian Times says: "We know of no work where so much information is gathered under one cover. It must command an extensive circulation."

The Morning Advertiser says: "One of the most useful Christian Hand-Books we have met with for a long time."

The Rock says: "It is a most excellent guide to all Protestant Places of Worship in London."

The English Independent says: "Contains a quantity of ecclesiastical information very useful to visitors as well as residents in London."

The Church Standard says: "Compiled with great care, and published at such a modest price as to bring it within the reach of all."

The Protestant says: "Neatly got up, and seems to have been carefully compiled."

London: ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

PHOTOGRAPHIC PORTRAITS OF PHILO-ISRAEL, Editor of THE BANNER OF ISRAEL, Author of "The History of the House of Israel," &c., &c. Cabinet, 2s., post free; Carte-de-Visites, 1s., post free.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

TO AUTHORS. Authors desirous of issuing Works or Pamphlets on the great and increasingly interesting Question of the Identity of the Lost Ten Tribes with the British Nation, should first communicate with Robert Banks, of Racquet-court, Fleet-street, who has already been honoured by issuing, amongst others, the following works on the subject:

The Banner of Israel. Weekly 1d.; monthly 7d.

The Nation's Glory Leader. Weekly 1d.; quarterly 1s. 4d.

The Pillar of Witness. By late Captain Tracey. Cloth 2s. 6d.; paper 1s 6d (second edition).

The Anglo-Israel Post Bag. By Bishop Titcomb. Cloth 2s. 6d.; paper 1s. 6d. (second edition).

The History of the House of Israel. By Philo-Israel. Cloth 1s.; paper 6d. (sixth thousand).

The Great Pyramid of Egypt. Fifty-two pages, with three illustrations. Price 4d. (10,000).

The New Old Story. By A E I. Cloth 1s

THE GREAT PYRAMID, NOW READY. PHILO-ISRAEL'S NEW WORK. 56 pages, Illustrated with Diagrams, price 4d, post free 5d.

OUR IDENTITY WITH THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. By PHILO-ISRAEL. Price 4d. Third Thousand (reprinted from the Clifton Chronicle).

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

ARE THE ENGLISH PEOPLE THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL? By PHILO-ISRAEL Price 4d.

DEAFNESS CURED, NOISES IN THE EARS, &c. SPECIAL OFFER TO THE DEAF.

THE REV. E. J. SILVERTON having discovered that there are tens of thousands who are unable to obtain his 11s. Box of Aurial Remedy which has cured so many persons of Deafness and Noises in the Ears, &c., begs now to offer a 2s. 6d. Box of the Medicine, so as to put it within the reach of all. This arrangement is specially made to meet the deaf world. With every box of medicine will be presented the Rev. E. J. Silverton's "Health Advocate," containing valuable advice and information that everyone ought to know. Post Office Orders for 2s. 6d. to E. J. SILVERTON, Minister of Exeter Hall Church, Nottingham, or stamps, 2s. 8d.

WOOLS! WOOLS! WOOLS! Cheapest and Best. White and Black Berlin, Single and Double, 3s. 6d. per pound. Best quality Ice Wools, all Colours, 5½ per ounce ball. All other Wools at proportionate prices. Shetland, Andalusian, Fleecy, and Bonne Mere Wools. Welsh, Scotch, Peacock Victoria, and other Yarns. Crewel Filoselle Silk. M. WHELLENS, Wholesale and Retail Wool Warehouse, 3, 5, & 6, QUEEN'S TERRACE, CAMDEN ROAD LONDON.

Send for Price List and Sampler, which will be forwarded free on application.

LADIES' SILK SCARVES, price 1s. The choicest Silk Scarf ever offered. All Colours; richly brocaded ends. Send stamps for a sample.

M. WHELLENS, 5 & 6, Queen's-terrace, Camden-road, London, N.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, 5, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, JUNE 11, 1879. [All Rights Reserved.]

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. III. No. 129. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, JUNE 18, 1879. ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
"Britannia Rules the Waves"	245
Our Identity Discussed by the Episcopal Church Synod of British Guiana, on May 2, 1879	246
The Scattered of Israel.—Part I. By L. E. De Ridder	247
Ephraim as Distinct from Judah	248
The Reductio ad Absurdum	248
"Cursed be Canaan"	248
The Chosen People.—Part V. A Lecture by John T. Gott	249
Review	251
Correspondence—The Prophetical Conference at Wimbledon	251
Progress	251

"BRITANNIA RULES THE WAVES."

WE cannot resist the temptation to republish the following from the Daily Telegraph, of a date just prior to April 25, 1879. It is indeed a very complete answer to our pessimists, who assert that the commerce of our nation is rapidly falling off, and that "delenda est Carthago!" Israel cannot but rise in prosperity since the promise of her ascendency beyond all the nations of the earth, is one which once enjoyed, the anticipated decadence again is nowhere hinted at in God's Word. Neither do we allude to this matter in the spirit of self-assertion, of boasting, or of national glorification. Far from that! We freely admit all our blessings are wholly and utterly undeserved by our wicked, ungrateful race; but we are a nation whom God promised "blessing, to bless;" to make "the head and not the tail;" "above only and not beneath;" and we, who discern this our Identity, and the reason why the Lord has given the wonderful prosperity to which we point, should be ungrateful indeed if we did not acknowledge now His glorious benefits and cry aloud to our countrymen to note them too, as part of their heritage, AS ISRAEL. Being Israel, we have them, and they no more constitute reason for self-glorification than the accident of birth gives ground to the heir of a Dukedom to be puffed up with pride that he is his father's son. The knowledge of our nobility humbles. It lowers us to the dust to recollect our recreant past, and our very miserable present. It rejoices us to anticipate, with trembling gratitude, that in the future we have the promise of splendid spiritual gifts, even the national outpouring of God's Holy Spirit, and the "new covenant" which will cure the present maladies in our suffering body politic. Then the gifts, now so abundantly ours, will be enjoyed in ten-fold profusion, but not marred or disfigured as now they are, by hideous national sins, which blot and blur the face of God's people, and render them at times very unlike "the sons of the living God" (Hos. i. 10).

We now ask our readers to study the following statement regarding our commercial marine as compared with our foreign neighbours, and with what our own was some years ago. Verily, we must lift up our hands with glad thankfulness, and admit that the words of Moses's blessing to our race have come literally true, and that having nationally (alas! not yet individually) "hearkened unto the commandments of the Lord our God, which He commanded us in that day, to observe and do them, the Lord hath made us the head and not the tail; above only and not beneath" (Deut. xxviii. 13).

The Daily Telegraph said, regarding

ENGLAND'S PRE-EMINENCE.

Some years ago the refrain of a popular song had it that "Old England's a-going down the hill," and since then the infusion of pessimism into philosophy both of the schools and of the crowd has not induced a more cheerful view of things. At present, according to certain persons, this "tight little island" is in a very bad way indeed. Trade is leaving us, and we are getting poor; external difficulties are multiplying on every hand; and we are less able than formerly to cope with them; while the nation, as respects many grave matters, is divided against itself, and therefore doomed to fall. Altogether the outlook seems to timid souls a very gloomy one; but before anybody concludes that reason exists for real alarm we advise a glance at the tables showing the progress of British merchant shipping which have just been presented to Parliament by the Board of Trade. They are extremely comforting, except, perhaps, to those despondent natures who find an odd sort of pleasure in the very presentiment of ill; for they make it pretty clear that now, even more than in former years, England is commercially PRE-EMINENT UPON THE SEAS. We learn from them, first of all, that ever since 1840 there has been a large and steady increase in the tonnage of British sailing and steam vessels engaged in foreign trade annually entered or cleared at home ports. At the end of last year the tonnage of the merchant navy of the British Empire was 8,329,421 tons, of which 6,492,120 belonged to Great Britain. This is an enormous aggregate, unexampled, nay, unapproached in the history of the world. But a better idea can be formed of it by means of comparison. It is, for instance, very nearly double the tonnage of the United States, more than seven times that of the German Empire, eight times that of Italy and France, and considerably more than that of all these countries put together. In steam tonnage we are even better off, for though the United States keep their place, Germany and France are simply nowhere; while as regards recent progress, it is assuring to be told that 464,511 tons were added to our merchant navy last year. The significance of these figures cannot be overrated, nor should the fact be lost sight of, at a time when British ships are supposed to be largely manned by foreigners, that only 13·55 per cent. of our merchant seamen are aliens, the actual numbers being 28,848 foreigners against 172,242 British subjects.

Digitized by Google

From all this it is clear that our position as a maritime nation remains unshaken. THERE IS NOTHING NEAR US IN THE RACE FOR CONTINUED PRE-EMINENCE, and nervous folk may take comfort from the fact that still, in peace as in war, Britannia's "march is o'er the mountain waves, her home is on the deep."

The last words of our blind witness (the Daily Telegraph) remind us of Moses's blessing to Joseph, when he told him that "blessed of the Lord should be his land, for the precious things of heaven, for the dew AND for the deep that coucheth beneath" (Deut. xxxiii. 13). The sea was to pour down its blessings on him who was to have "his seed in many waters" (Num. xxiv. 7), who "go down to the sea in ships and do business in great waters" (Psa. cvii. 23). This seed remains to-day as God promised, and as the House of Joseph was destined to be, "pre-eminent upon the seas." Hence another Identity, linking our race, the British Anglo-Saxons, with Lost Israel, or "Ephraim."

Reader, thank God with all self-abasement for these His undeserved mercies to our fallen race. Sing ye "Hallelujah to the Lord." Cease not to cry, "O Lord, save Thy people, the remnant of Israel." For that prayer proves that your people need, and sorely need, SALVATION; which their mere origin never can procure for them. The blood, the blood of Jesus only, can obtain that boon for them (1 John i. 7).

OUR IDENTITY DISCUSSED BY THE EPISCOPAL CHURCH SYNOD OF BRITISH GUIANA, ON MAY 2, 1879.

THE Synod of British Guiana met on April 29th, 1879. The Lord Bishop appointed 2 p.m. of Thursday, May 2, as the time at which he wished the clergy and laity to attend to discuss the subject of a resolution affirming that "The Identification of the Lost Tribes of Israel in the British nation would substantiate and confirm the right of the Church of England to inherit, by direct succession, the blessings promised to our forefather Abraham, which she now claims in virtue of her Christian profession."

Although the hour named was an unusual one for Synod meetings, and one at which few of the laity could give attendance, yet some few were present, in addition to about twenty of the clergy. In a few opening words the bishop stated that it had been ruled by the Church Council that the resolution was inadmissable as a subject for discussion by the Synod in regular session; but that, as it represented a phase of religious opinion, he was not desirous that it should be unheard. He had therefore named the time for hearing it, and requested the mover to proceed. The latter then read the resolution, and stated that it contained a self-evident proposition, to which no exception could be taken, inasmuch as the denial of the heirship would involve the rejection of the heritage; it therefore only remained for him to show the descent, and here his difficulty arose from superabundance of proof rather than want of evidence. He quoted from "The Enquiry," by Philo-Israel, reading the greater portion of it; from Bishop Titcomb's Dialogues, and Bishop Bond's sermon, from the Rev. Mr. Savile's letter to Mr. Gladstone, all from the BANNER. He was listened to very intently by both clergy and laity; and after fully an hour's reading, he stated that as he knew a paper had been prepared to meet his argument, perhaps the Synod would like to hear it read before he went on. The great gun of the opposition was then got into position, and if it did not altogether miss fire, the recoil did more damage than the missile. The rev. gentleman began by saying that the resolution was nonsense, and the whole thing a "craze." He opened a heavy fire of ridicule upon an Irish fairy-tale about a beautiful woman carried to Ireland, it was said by Jeremiah and his friend Baruch, who offered the princess to the first needy Irish knight that they met, who did as every Irishman would who was offered a fine woman with a large dowry, he married her at once, and changed his religion, which latter did not inconvenience him much; and that he afterwards established the first Irish University. Jeremiah and his friend Baruch had dug out of Solomon's temple the corner-stone of that edifice, and carried that latter away out with them to Ireland. It was fairy-tales like this they were called upon to believe. Here he turned to the mover of the resolution, and said, "I am not replying to you, but to Philo-Israel." He was assured the latter information was unnecessary: the subject of the "Lia Fail" had not been touched upon. The rev. gentleman proceeded to deliver a discourse, without in any way affecting the matter at issue. On his sitting down, the mover of the resolution said that as the last speaker had stated certain circumstances, to which he gave the name of an Irish fairy tale, he would ask was there any doubt as to the fact of the Coronation Stone being now in Westminster Abbey, and that Dean Stanley described it as one of the most precious relics within its walls: that Her Majesty had been crowned upon it, as had all her predecessors since it had been brought to England from Scotland, and previously to that all her Scottish ancestors from Fergus, who had brought it from Ireland, to which place it had certainly been carried about the same time that an Eastern princess had arrived there, who married the king, and they established a college of Ollams: that she died, and was buried there, and her tomb is in existence to this day. If the tale was mythical, the stone was real, and it did not come of itself. One rev. gentleman here remarked that one link was wanting in the chain of evidence—that is, no direct proof could be given on one point only of an occurrence which was admitted to be mysterious, if not miraculous.

The mover then drew attention to evidence of England's being the "stone" kingdom of Daniel's prophecy; exhibiting Mr. J. Gilder Shaw's carefully prepared account of the victories over the kingdoms, representing the feet and legs of the image; this attracted attention, and was evidently new to many of those present. He then referred to the "Pyramid Digest," and pointed out the recent confirmation of the Pyramid record of the earth's density; this was much appreciated by one of the oldest and most respected of the clergy present. He asked for a perusal of the pamphlet, and the mover of the resolution was fortunately in a position to present him with a copy. After much question and answer, the meeting was about to separate, the mover stating that his object was attained in bringing the matter formally to the consideration of the clergy, and he would willingly wait until the next meeting of Synod for an expression of opinion, as he felt satisfied that the current events of the present year would render it unnecessary for him to adduce any arguments to convince them of the rapid development of the facts of the case. A vote of thanks was proposed, which was seconded by the rev. gentleman who was so interested in the "Pyramid Digest." He said that he was personally much obliged for the trouble taken in bringing this matter before the Synod; that things had been put in a very different light from that in which he had been accustomed to read them, and he had spent a most interesting afternoon; he cordially seconded the vote. The bishop in putting the motion also expressed his gratification that it had been brought before them in the way it had, and that it had been discussed in a serious and reverent manner; he also thanked the rev. gentleman who had prepared the paper, for his trouble. The meeting then terminated.

[The above has been forwarded to us by the mover of the resolution, a zealous believer in our Identity, and a large purchaser and distributer of our literature in British Guiana. —ED.]

George Town, Demerary, May 6, 1879.

Digitized by Google

THE SCATTERED OF ISRAEL.

By L. E. De Ridder.

PART I.

Our opponent in the North, whose letter appears in the Banner of Dec. 25, 1878, cannot have followed out the words "scatter" and "scattered" as they appear in the prophecies, or he would not have quoted Ezekiel xxxiv. 12, 13, in support of his argument that the Identity question is a fallacy; for he would have found that instead of being against, it is a strong point in favour of the Identity, as we shall find when we come to compare passages. He would also have found that there are two distinct and totally different scatterings and gatherings of the Ten Tribes alluded to in those passages he quotes; and our other opponents who have stated that it is only upon the mountains of Israel that the Ten Tribes will become a converted Christian people, would do well to follow out the sequence of passages to which the ones they quote, belong; for, by not doing so, they have fallen into very grievous errors, and have become, in truth, blind guides indeed to their following. As Scripture speaks more plainly than I can, I quote the passages in full that I may not destroy their beauty and force.

In Ezekiel xx. 33 and following verses, we have, "As I live, saith the Lord God, surely with a mighty hand, and a stretched-out arm, and with fury poured out, will I rule over you: and I will bring you out from the people, and will gather you out of the countries wherein ye are scattered, with a mighty hand, and with a stretched-out arm, and with fury poured out. And I will bring you into the wilderness of the people, and there will I plead with you face to face. Like as I pleaded with your fathers in the wilderness of the land of Egypt, so will I plead with you, saith the Lord God. And I will cause you to pass under the rod, and I will bring you into the bond of the covenant." This, then, is the first gathering after the first scattering, and there can be no doubt that the wilderness spoken of here is not the mountains of Israel where the final gathering takes place; for we have only to turn to Jer. xxxi. 1, 2, where we have the fact plainly recorded: "At the same time (in the latter days), saith the Lord, will I be the God of all the families of Israel, and they shall be My people. Thus saith the Lord, The people which were left of the sword found grace in the wilderness; even Israel, when I went to cause him to rest." Ezek. xi. 16: "Therefore say, Thus saith the Lord God: Although I have cast them off among the heathen, and although I have scattered them among the countries, yet will I be to them as a little sanctuary (i.e., holy resting place) in the countries where they shall come." This has, undoubtedly, reference to the first gathering; but the following verse has reference to the second: "Therefore say, Thus saith the Lord God: I will even gather you from the people and assemble you out of the countries where ye have been scattered, and I will give you the land of Israel." Verse 20: "And they shall be My people, and I will be their God." In verse 16 above, I would ask you to take particular notice of the words, "The countries where they shall come;" for are these not the "desolate heritages" alluded to in Isaiah xlix.—the waste and desolate place which was to be peopled by the overflow of population? "The children which thou shalt have, after thou hast lost the other, shall say again in thine ears, The place is too strait for me: give place to me that I may dwell." Also in Zech. x. 7—9: "And they of Ephraim shall be like a mighty man, and their heart shall rejoice as through wine: yea, their children shall see it, and be glad; their heart shall rejoice in the Lord. I will hiss for them, and gather them; for I have redeemed them (mark this well! they are redeemed before they return to the land): and they shall increase as they have increased (date B.C. 487, or about the date of the first entry of the Hebrew Cymry into this country under Hu Cadarn). And I will sow them among the people: and they shall remember Me in far countries; and they shall live with their children, and turn again."

This passage is conclusive in my mind of a distinct promise to the Ten Tribes, that after they had been gathered from among the heathen they should so increase, that it would cause them to be again scattered (or rather sown) among the desolate heritages of the earth, and should be at rest. Now, this passage, "I will sow them among the people," most beautifully illustrates the position of the Ten Tribes of the present day—viz., the Anglo-Saxon race. Are they not sown broadcast over the earth, and is not the seed of the Word sown by them springing up and bearing fruit through their remembrance of Him in far countries?

Then the words "where they shall come," would point to the fact that at the time they were written (B.C. 594), the Ten Tribes were even then on the road; or, rather, being scattered towards the wilderness of the people. And there is no question in my mind that there is evidence of this in history, and I venture to think even in sacred record, which I hope to produce as I proceed. That the Ten Tribes must be first gathered and sanctified before they can re-occupy the land, we find from Ezekiel xxviii. 25: "Thus saith the Lord God: When I shall have gathered the House of Israel from the people among whom they are scattered, and shall be sanctified in them in the sight of the heathen, then shall they dwell in the land that I have given to My servant Jacob." Ezekiel xx. 40: "For in My holy mountain, in the mountain of the height of Israel, saith the Lord God, there shall all the House of Israel, all of them in the land, serve Me: there will I accept them, and there will I require your offerings, and the firstfruits of your oblations, with all your holy things. I will accept you with your sweet savour (or, as it is in the margin, savour of rest; or the rest obtained in the wilderness through the sanctification and bond of the new covenant, as shown in the passages quoted above), when I bring you out from the people and gather you out of the countries wherein ye have been scattered: and I will be sanctified in you before the heathen."

By reading this chapter from verses 33 down to 43, we obtain a clear idea of the two gatherings as there recorded. We are also clearly told in which direction to look for Israel when they shall be gathered in the wilderness, and also from whence the second gathering shall come, in Jer. xxiii. 8: "The Lord liveth which brought up and which led the seed of the House of Israel out of the North country, and from all countries whither I have driven them; and they shall dwell in their own land."

Then have we not many other passages which are so strong, that even our opponents are forced to acknowledge they must refer to these islands, so that I need not dwell upon them here, but pass on to Isaiah xi. 11, 12: "And it shall come to pass in that day, that the Lord shall set His hand again the second time to recover the remnant of His people, which shall be left, from Assyria, and from Egypt, and from Pathros, and from Cush, and from Elam, and from Shinar, and from Hamath, and from the islands of the sea. And He shall set up an ensign for the nations, and shall assemble the outcasts of Israel, and gather together the dispersed of Judah, from the four corners of the earth."

Now with the above passages before us, let us read carefully Ezekiel xxxiv. 12, 13: "As a shepherd seeketh out his flock in the day that he is among his sheep that are scattered; so will I seek out My sheep and will deliver them out of all places where they have been scattered in the cloudy and dark day. And I will bring them out from the people, and gather them from the countries, and bring them to their own land, and feed them upon the mountains of Israel by the rivers, and in all the inhabited places of the country."

Here, then, we have reference made to the two gatherings of outcast Israel. The first is their delivery from the places where they were scattered in the cloudy and dark day, or during the period of God's wrath with them for their idolatry; and it alludes to their punishment by being made outcasts among the heathen. The more this passage is considered, the more remarkable it becomes; for does it not point to a brighter day, when the Lord, in the greatness of His compassion, turns from His wrath with the loving words, "Is Ephraim My dear son? is he a pleasant child? for since I spake against him I do earnestly remember him still: therefore My bowels are troubled for him; I will surely have mercy upon him, saith the Lord?" And is not this mercy poured out upon Israel when they are delivered from among the heathen and gathered into the wilderness of the people to plead with them face to face? and after being brought under the bond of the new covenant they are again scattered over the earth; but this time in mercy, as His witness to the new dispensation; and, what is more remarkable, the second witnessing of outcast Israel of the salvation of the Gentiles through the Redeemer of Israel, as is proved by history. Then comes the second gathering, which is not a delivery of a people in distress, but a redeemed people being brought out from among the people and from all countries, to re-occupy the land and to prepare it for the second coming of Israel's Redeemer, this time in all His glory. As the remnant of Judah was brought back to the land to prepare it for His first coming; but their hearts were not prepared to receive Him, and so they were dispersed; not so with the second gathering, for then the hearts of the people will be prepared to welcome their Messiah.

Digitized by Google

(To be continued).

EPHRAIM AS DISTINCT FROM JUDAH.

THE following appeared in the Standard of Ephraim, published in Launceston, Tasmania, on Saturday, March 1, 1879 :—

The Rev. George Stanley Faber, B.D., in his work on "The Jews," in a foot-note in vol. ii., p. 289, referring to a work he had published—"A Dissertation on the 1260 Years"—very candidly says :—

"I readily acknowledge that, when that work was first published, I did not entertain the slightest suspicion that the House of Israel would ever be restored separately from the House of Judah, and that afterwards the two would coalesce into one kingdom. Taking up the common notion that the Ten Tribes are irrevocably lost, excepting such individuals as returned from Babylon with Judah, I had a confused idea that all those prophecies which speak of the restoration both of Judah and Ephraim, meant that of Ephraim only as included in that of Judah. A more exact, laborious, and connected view of the subject has now led me to adopt a very different opinion."

Here are four things which may be remarked :—

1. A scholar, "taking up the common notion (which is erroneous) that the Ten Tribes are irrevocably lost, excepting such individuals as returned from Babylon with Judah."

2. A scholar entertaining "a confused idea that all those prophecies which speak of the restoration both of Judah and Ephraim" meant that of Ephraim only as included in that of Judah," whereas they mean no such thing.

3. A scholar, acknowledging that a "more exact, laborious, and connected view of the subject has now led him to adopt a very different opinion," implying, therefore, an opinion more nearly correct than that which he had entertained.

4. A scholar so humble-minded and candid as to confess his error of judgment, and bearing his testimony to the necessity for, and advantage of, "a more exact, laborious, and connected view of the subject" of prophecy. To make such an acknowledgment indicates true moral greatness, and is a spirit immensely removed from that dogged determination to adhere to opinions apart from the question of their correctness, simply because they have been long formed, or are "common notions." —Verbum sap.

THE REDUCTIO AD ABSURDUM.

THE Rev. J. B. Clifford's argument regarding the Hamitic origin of the Saxons, succinctly stated, is as follows :—

1. The ancestors of a part of the British folk were doubtless the Sacæ, or Gothic Saxons of Europe (page 13, pamphlet).

2. These Saxons derived their name from their god Sesac, Saca, or Secasa, and were called from Shishac (a god), Soco, Sukkim, Saxons (page 13).

3. Their remote progenitors were the sons of Cush, the son of Ham (page 14).

4. Therefore the Goths and Saxons of Europe were in reality not the children of Japheth, as many have usually supposed, but the posterity of Cush, the son of Ham (page 16).

5. Therefore the British folk have, for the most part, an origin which is Hamitic.

6. But the Word of God distinctly declares that "Cursed is Canaan, a servant of servants shall he be unto his brethren" (Gen. ix. 25).

7. For the sin of Ham, the descendants of Ham, in Africa, the land of slaves and of Ham, have, as the testimony of all mankind witnesses, been "cursed" ever since.

8. But the British are Hamitic.

9. Therefore the British are "cursed; a servant of servants" they must be, at this hour, and for all future time.

10. But there is no one so ready to admit as the Rev. J. B. Clifford (see sermon, page 176, BANNER vol. i., No. 21, May 23, 1877) that "England" is a peculiarly God-blessed nation, destined to convert Judah in part, to take back the said Jews to their land, fight Gog and Magog on their behalf, and finally to have the Lord Himself interpose in their favour while they defend the Israelites in Palestine.

11. Therefore the British, so far from being a "cursed," are a very "blessed people" even now, much more in time shortly to come!

12. The British further, as even Mr. Clifford will not deny, so far from being "a servant of servants," are the very liberators of Hamitic African slaves.

13. Therefore the British are a God-blessed, free, and much favoured race.

14. But Mr. Clifford has also proved them to be cursed—the slave of slaves—WHICH IS ABSURD!

15. Therefore the Rev. J. B. Clifford's argument is wrong from the beginning to the end; and

16. We had better trust to the Holy Scriptures, and not to the Rev. J. B. Clifford at all, believing that what they teach is true—namely,

17. That the British are the Lost Ten Tribes; and because God dwells in their tents,—

18. Therefore Semitic, but not at all Hamitic, in their origin.

Q. E. D.

NOTE.—God's Word calls Africa "the land of Ham," not the "land of Canaan" (Psa. lxxviii. 51, cv. 23—27, cvi. 22); therefore Mr. Clifford cannot say Canaan was only cursed, not Ham. Africa is par excellence the land of slaves—"the servant of servants."

"CURSED BE CANAAN."

THE author of "The Heir of the World," at page 136, writes of Gen. ix. 25, 26, that the Arabic version of the stanzas of which the passage is composed, reads in the first line as follows :—

"Cursed be Ham, the father of Canaan;"

and as the metre of this line is much shorter than the rest in our version, it seems likely something is deficient. Mr. Green, of Cambridge, writes that according to Bishop Hare's metre the Hebrew words "Ham abi," "Ham, the father" of Canaan,

Digitized by Google

are necessary to fill up the verse; and he would read it thus:—

"And Noah said,
"Cursed be Ham, the father of Canaan;
"A servant of servants shall he be to his brethren.
"And he said,
"Blessed be Jehovah, the God of Shem;
"And Canaan shall be their servant.
"God shall expand Japheth,
"And shall dwell in the tents of Shem;
"And Canaan shall be their servant."

We republish the above from vol. i. of the BANNER, page 112, No. 13, in order to guard our position as a Semitic nation from a possible counter statement from the Rev. J. B. Clifford that Canaan, the son of Ham, only, was cursed for the sin of his father, and that Ham, escaping without a curse, but being (we suppose) rather blessed than otherwise, was the father of favored Cush, the father of the honored Saxons, and of the blessed British, who have, like their favored progenitors Ham and Cush, received the choicest gifts that lie at the right hand of Almighty God, as it is this day!

. . . . credat Judeus Appella
Non ego!

God's Word calls Africa "the land of Ham." Africa has been always the land of the most "hideous" slavery, and of the most hateful slave trade for centuries, which this afflicted world has ever seen. Therefore "the cursed one" was Ham, and his whole progeny also was "cursed" after him; the very slave of slaves; the "servants" of Semitic Anglo-Israelites once, and of American Manassites lately; the "servants" also of Japhetic races in Europe all through the ages.

THE CHOSEN PEOPLE.

A LECTURE BY JOHN T. GOTT.

(Continued from page 242).

PART V.

Now I maintain that we are Lost Israel—1st. Because we are doing the work assigned to the chosen people by sowing the seed, which is the Word of God, over all the world—that seed, which, when the promised showers of blessing are poured upon the hearts of men, will eventually result in God's name being magnified, glorified, and made a praise in the earth. 2nd. Because there is not a more Divinely favoured nation on earth than our own, and not one less deserving of the many great blessings we receive. It may be said of us, as of Israel of old, "Unless the Lord of hosts had left unto us a very small remnant, we should have been as Sodom, and we should have been as Gomorrah." 3rd. Because the signs of the times have clearly shown that the British nation is "pre-eminent" in all things, that it occupies the position Lost Israel was to hold in the latter days, and the nations are a witness to the fact that to the British people has been assigned the protectorate of the lands of the Bible. Add to this also the fact that the prophets predict that in the latter days, "the House of Judah shall walk to the House of Israel, and they shall come together out of the land of the North to the land that I have given for an inheritance unto your fathers," and the published statement of the Editor of the Jewish Chronicle, that there is no nation whose aid and protection the Jews would more gladly receive than the aid of the British people in restoring them to their own land. Lastly, the prophets declare that in the latter days, Israel will have one dread foe in Gog and all his bands. Britain, representing Israel of old, has in Russia the very foe predicted—a foe that has hitherto been checkmated on every side, but one whose desire for more extensive territory will never die. Russia holds now the fortresses on the mountain heights in the North of Asia Minor. There is the fact, that the re-settlement of the Holy Land is in the near future. It will be inhabited by a people utterly defenceless, a land of unwalled villages, of towns without walls, having neither bars nor gates, a people that are at rest and dwell confidently (Ezek. xxxviii.). Ezekiel's prediction is that Russia, the ancient Gog, will think an evil thought, will come down upon this land with all his bands (probably from these very fortresses Russia now has in possession) like a storm and like a cloud to take a spoil and to take a prey. Who that has seen the mist and the cloud rolling down some lofty hill, can fail to grasp and realize the meaning of the prophet? Then will be that awful battle of Armageddon and the time of Jacob's trouble, when God will fight for His chosen people.

Let me now draw your attention to the second parable, the lost piece of silver. "What woman having ten pieces of silver, if she lose one piece, doth not light a candle and sweep the house and seek diligently till she find it?" The chief point in this parable is that something valuable was lost which must be found, and that great perseverance and diligence were necessary to find it. We fail to see the full force of the parable, for when we drop a coin on the floor, we do not need to get a candle and sweep diligently till we find it. In order to apprehend the meaning of the parable, we must therefore refer it to Eastern manners and customs, and we find that mother earth generally formed the floor of many of the houses. The constant traffic about the room pulverised the soil often to some considerable depth. Now picture such a room, and a woman with ten pieces of silver accidently dropping one. It passed into the dust of the floor, was hidden from her sight without leaving a trace behind. How is she to find it? She knows it is there somewhere and is determined to find it. She lights a candle, sweeps all the dust on the floor into a heap, and diligently begins to sift it until she does find it. It may be that she has nearly gone through the whole heap before the silver sparkles in the rays of her little light. That lost piece of silver, I imagine, has some reference to Lost Israel. God threatened to "sow them in the earth," to "sow them among the people," to "cast them out of His sight," to "hide His face from them, and eventually to raise them up out of their graves," and much has already come to pass. Just as the woman swept the floor to find her piece of silver, so have all the civilized nations in the world searched everywhere for the Lost Ten Tribes. And having nearly gone through all the heap by the candle-light of Identity truth, they have been found in the most unthought of place, and identified in the British people.

Just as this woman rejoiced with her friends and neighbours on the recovery of her piece of silver, so will there be great joy and rejoicing on that day when Lost Israel is identified in the British people before the eyes of an astonished world, as the great bulk of God's ancient and chosen people.

But there is a further application and meaning in this parable. The lost sheep of the House of Israel were to sow the seed—the Word of God—among all people, to be instrumental in making God's name a praise in the earth, and to be a blessing to all the families in the earth; and being redeemed, they were to carry "good tidings of great joy" to all men. Every living soul alienated from God is like a lost piece of silver. Every living soul restored to Divine favour—through faith in Christ Jesus—is a source of great joy, not only on earth, but in heaven, for the good Shepherd has said, "There is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner (no matter whether he be Israelite, Jew, or Gentile) that repenteth." And this world-wide expression of the good Shepherd's desire that no living soul should perish is grandly illustrated in the succeeding parable in the same discourse—the parable of the prodigal son.

I have not one disparaging word to say against many of the sublime spiritual lessons that have during the last 1800 years been drawn from this beautiful parable. But if we look on our Saviour as Divine, then His utterances are based on the foundation of fact, and have no place in the region of fiction; and by anticipating a literal meaning to the words He uttered, we in no way disannul the sublime spiritual instruction to be derived from His discourses, but rather add another strong proof of His divinity, by showing that He not only spake of what had occurred in the past, but typically showed what should be in the far future.

Digitized by Google

The certain man who had two sons I believe to be the Man Christ Jesus. The two sons I believe to be the House of Judah and the prodigal House of Israel—Judah was the first-born, Ephraim or Israel the younger. It was the younger son who said to his father, "Give me the portion of goods that falleth to me: and the father divided unto them his living." This is purely an Eastern custom, and we may perceive the literal application of this in the division of the Land of Promise, which occurred after the death of Solomon, when the younger son, Israel of the Ten Tribes, received his portion of the land, and became estranged from Judah of the Two Tribes, who received his portion; for the living which the God of Israel had to give to His two sons, was the territory He promised to give to the descendants of the patriarchs—the Land of Promise.

Not many days after, the younger son, Israel, gathered all together, took his journey into a far country and there wasted his substance in riotous living. Now, as a day in the Bible symbolises a year, we find that the kingdom of Israel existed only 255 years, or days, of the parable.

Then a famine arose, and this younger son began to be in want. This briefly depicts the many vicissitudes, afflictions, and trials the Ten Tribes would have to undergo before they became re-united in Great Britain. For although God had hidden His face from them, and left them to their own devices, He declares by His prophet Jeremiah, "I have surely heard Ephraim bemoaning himself thus, Thou hast chastised me, and I was chastised, as a bullock unaccustomed to the yoke: turn Thou me and I shall be turned, for Thou art the Lord my God. Surely after that I was turned, I repented; and after that I was instructed, I smote upon my thigh: I was ashamed, yea, even confounded, because I did bear the reproach of my youth." This prediction of Israel of the Ten Tribes has its counterpart in the parable when the prodigal son "came to himself." This "turning" and "repenting" were pleasing alike to the father in the parable and to the God of Israel, for when the prodigal had resolved to return with the prayer of penitence and humility on his lips, the father saw him a great way off, and had compassion, and ran, and fell on his neck, and kissed him. So God, seeing outcast Ephraim "turning," "repenting," "being instructed," in other words "coming to his right mind," begins to think with great loving-kindness of him; for in the verse following the prophecy I have been quoting, we read, "Is Ephraim My dear son? Is he a pleasant child? for since I spake against him, I do earnestly remember him still: therefore My bowels are troubled for him. I will surely have mercy upon him, saith the Lord."* In both instances we have the same yearning compassion, the same earnest desire to pardon and to bless. As time rolls on, and events transpire before our eyes, we shall understand, in measure, that our Saviour, by the parable of the prodigal son, was speaking of the prodigal House of Israel, the people of whom the Lord hath said that "He will wait that He may be gracious unto you, and therefore will He be exalted that He may have mercy upon you: for the Lord is a God of judgment; blessed are all they that wait for Him. For the people shall dwell in Zion at Jerusalem: thou shalt weep no more: He will be very gracious unto thee at the voice of thy cry; when He shall hear it, He will answer thee. And though the Lord give you"—or, literally rendered, "I (the Lord) will give you"—"the bread of adversity, and the water of affliction, yet shall not thy teachers be removed into a corner any more, but thine eyes shall see thy teachers: and thine ears shall hear a word behind thee, saying, This is the way, walk ye in it, when ye turn to the right hand, and when ye turn to the left" (Isaiah xxx.).

Now we must take this prediction very carefully into consideration with the parable of the prodigal son. Believing that Lost Israel is in Britain, let us endeavour to ascertain what Scripture declares must be the character of the times when the chosen people shall be restored to their own inheritance. In the parable itself we cannot go further with a literal meaning than the period when the prodigal "came to himself." The rest remains unfulfilled prophecy. But when prophecy is in the course of fulfilment, it is possible to perceive what is likely to take place in the near future, especially when such predictions harmonize with the Old and New Testaments. I have already shown that in the prophets, prodigal Israel "coming to himself" is represented under three aspects, "turning," "repenting," and "the time of instruction." In our British or Israelitish history, the "turning" took place at the Reformation. The "time of instruction" is now. The "repenting" is yet to come, because while the Almighty has promised to restore, sanctify, and bless His chosen people, we are distinctly reminded that it is not because of any inherent goodness in ourselves, nationally or individually. This is the stern reminder—"Not for your sakes do I this, saith the Lord God, be it known unto you; be ashamed and confounded for your own ways, O House of Israel. I do not this for your sakes, O House of Israel, but for Mine holy name's sake which ye have profaned among the heathen, whither ye went" (Ezek. xxxvi.). Thoughtful Christian Israelites know too well how true all this is. But this is not all. The time of instruction is now, as I have already intimated. Not instruction in Christian knowledge so much as instruction in our national history. The British people are an enigma to all nations. They are an enigma to themselves. How came it about that so many apparently different races of men have assimilated and consolidated themselves together into such a nation as this? What nation on earth has, or ever had, "such power, such wealth, such dominion, such greatness, such revenues, such commerce" as the British nation? Her ships are "to be found in every sea." Her "colonies open a door to us in every climate." Her "influence is felt by every government under the sun." Britain "is the heart of the world: the slightest movement in this little island is a pulsation felt in the remotest corner of the globe" (Canon Ryle). This is a very great difficulty with many, but when God cast out the Ten Tribes and left them alone in their idolatrous and backsliding propensities, He cast them not out for ever. He promised to gather them out, to establish them, and finally to restore a remnant of them to the land and inheritance of their forefathers. We are living in days when the fulfilment of that promise has been almost realised. In the British people, supreme on land and sea, the policemen of the world, you have a nation, and the only nation in the world, consolidated from several apparently different tribes. These can be no other than the Lost Tribes of Israel. God's ways are not our ways, nor His thoughts our thoughts. The fact is before us. We belong to that nation. A mightier nation never ruled in this world. Seeing that the Bible has predicted the rise and fall of all the great Powers that have existed on earth, and that the greatest, wealthiest, and most powerful nation that ever existed is to be found now in the British nation, if we are only a Gentile Power, then the Word of God, which has been given to man as a revelation for all time, has fallen short of the truth, for there are no predictions concerning any Gentile Power attaining such pre-eminence to be found there. This power, wealth, and supremacy belongs only to the chosen people, the great bulk of whom were to be found under a new name, who are yet in their graves, buried out of sight (so far as the world is concerned); but when the Spirit of God breathes upon them, they shall stand upon their feet an exceeding great army.

(To be continued.)

* With such a sweet vision as this, well might the prophet exclaim, "Upon this I awaked, and beheld; and my sleep was sweet unto me" (verse 26).

Digitized by Google

Review.

We are a Shemitic Race. Written in reply to the Rev. J. B. Clifford's "Hamitic Origin of the Anglo-Saxons." By the Rev. H. Herbert Marriott, M.A., curate of Amberley. W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, and I. E. Chillcott, 26, Clare-street, Bristol. Price fourpence.

WE are glad to see the Rev. H. Herbert Marriott has taken the field against the Rev. J. B. Clifford, in reference to the latter's recent attack on "our Identity," and on the views of all and sundry who hold it. Mr. Marriott adheres chiefly to the testimony of Scripture, that God being with our favoured race we inherit the Semitic blessing, "God shall dwell in the tents of Shem," and, therefore, cannot be Hamitic; but must be derived from his God-favoured (younger) brother. He refers also to the testimony of the Cuneiform inscriptions, and tells us what is true—namely, that they are the very essence of history, and point distinctly to British connection with Ten-Tribed Israel.

In reply to Mr. Clifford's argument against the Bishop of Rangoon, that he has misapplied Isaiah xlii. 1—4 (which, as a fact, the Bishop never quoted or alluded to at all in the "Post Bag"), Mr. Marriott refers us to the translation of the first verse by the LXX. as found in the Septuagint Version, and shows us that they at least held the view denounced by Mr. Clifford in pages 28 to 35. Their rendering of the verse was as follows:—"Jacob My servant whom I uphold, Israel Mine elect, My soul delighteth in him. I have put My spirit upon him, he shall bring forth judgment to the Gentiles." "Up to the time of the Messiah's appearance," says Mr. Marriott, "there was no other view entertained of the passage."

On the whole, we are satisfied that our opponent's attack has been fairly met in this little pamphlet by Mr. Marriott. We think that more of the points brought forward against us by our adversary might with advantage have been taken up, discussed, and refuted by our friend in the early part of his paper. There, however, he enters on a digression regarding the subject of Solomon's temple, which does not seem to us to relate particularly to the matter in hand—viz., our Semitic, but not our alleged Hamitic origin. We hope our readers will all peruse what Mr. Marriott brings forward against Mr. Clifford's now thoroughly discredited production, and that its sale may be rapid and also extensive.

Correspondence.

THE PROPHETICAL CONFERENCE AT WIMBLEDON.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—During the past week it has been my privilege to have attended the above-named conference, convened by my beloved brother the Rev. C. Skrine, chiefly in relation to the consideration of that most precious truth—viz., our blessed Lord's return and the signs which accompany the second advent.

One day was devoted to the following subject: "The purposes of God concerning ISRAEL and concerning the Church, especially in connection with the Second Advent, as separately revealed;" and as it is now generally admitted that a large and increasing body of prophetic students have accepted the doctrine of our descent as a nation from the "outcast" House of Israel, it was thought advisable to give up the afternoon meeting of last Thursday to a discussion on the subject, and eight brethren were appointed to advocate the pros and cons of this interesting question.

I regret to say that the discussion, with the exception of the golden rule which bore sway at Wimbledon on every occasion—viz., of its being carried on without any infraction of the law of love—was not satisfactory for this reason. Besides the time allotted being far too brief for such an object, there was this specific feature in the discussion which will account for its apparent failure respecting any useful purpose. Most of the speakers came prepared with their own arguments, and really had no time to notice the arguments on the other side of the question; so that it is probable each one left the meeting with the same opinion that he held at the commencement.

As it fell to the writer's lot to open the discussion, he was of course unable to notice anything that could be said on the opposite side, and the meeting broke up before there was time for a reply. Had there been time for this I would gladly have taken the opportunity of noticing the only two points which seemed to me to require an answer. As one of the appointed readers at the morning meeting, which was not intended for discussion, had spoken of the "LO-AMMI" people mentioned in Hosea i. as referring to the Twelve Tribes of Israel, and not to the Ten Tribes, as the whole of the chapter and especially the last verse seem clearly to indicate, I thought it well to call attention to this apparent error. Nevertheless, one of the succeeding speakers in the afternoon discussion, having it, as I conclude, in his prepared speech, again assumed that the "LO-AMMI" people did not refer exclusively to the Ten Tribes which formed the House or kingdom of Israel.

So another brother—in noticing my remark that Sir Henry Rawlinson considered the name of Sacæ or Saxons of the Behistun Rock, was the Aryan equivalent for the Beth Khumri or Cymry, the name which the House of Israel always bears on the Assyrian monuments—suggested that I might as reasonably contend that the Turks were of the House of Israel, because their forefathers were once supposed to dwell in the neighbourhood of the Behistun Rock. But here is an evident mistake, or rather a double one. The Behistun Rock does not tell us where the Sacæ dwelt, but only records Darius's triumph over them; and, again, my contention of course was very different from the interpretation put upon it, as will be seen by my allusion to the opinion of Rawlinson.

I only mention these trifling incidents to account for what I think was a failure in our friendly discussion at Wimbledon,

And remain, dear Sir,
Faithfully yours,
BOURCHIER WREY SAVILE,
June 9, 1879. (Rector of Shillingford.)

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—There seems to be an idea in the mind of your correspondent of April 15, A. J. J. Cachemaille, that if the birth-rate of England were lower than that of the three other European countries, there must, therefore, be some inferiority in the physical condition of the English as compared with those races; and, doubting the existence of this, he endeavours to account for the possible inaccuracy of the returns. This attempt, if called for, is unnecessary. The physical condition of a people is judged from the the death-rate; the birth-rate is no criterion. Thus, suppose two districts each to contain 10,000 inhabitants, the yearly number of births exactly equalling that of the deaths, and assume the number of births and deaths in the first case to be 250, in the second 500. Here it is evident that the population in each district would be stationary. But which would bear the palm as regards strength and longevity? Assuredly the former. For by calculating the average length of life by dividing the population by the number of deaths, we find it in the former case to be 40 years; in the latter, but 20. Thus, comparing the birth-rates and judging from these would inevitably lead us astray; for it is plain that, with the rates of increase equal, the higher the birth-rate the lower the longevity, and hence the physical stamina. By referring to the table published in your issue of April 9 (assuming it to be accurate), and calculating the average length of life by dividing 10,000 by the several numbers of deaths, we find the longevity to stand as follows:—England, 45·4 years; France, 43·3 years; Germany, 34·2 years; Italy, 32·7 years; Austria, 28·4 years.

But the fecundity of a people is measured by the excess of births over the deaths. Here England again holds the van, for the excess per 10,000 in each year stands thus:—England, 126; Germany, 114; Italy, 54; Austria, 50; France, 36. Thus there is no disparity for which it is necessary to account; for the statistics in whichever way viewed show England's superiority.

Yours faithfully,
Ludwell, Salisbury, May 19, 1879. JAMES RALPH.

PROGRESS.—A friend near Chippenham, residing at Marshfield, writes to say that among his fellow-villagers, chiefly labourers, the Identity is fast spreading. He promises us news as to the way it first got an entry among the people seven years ago, and the good it has done already. We shall be glad to receive this, and, if suitable, to publish it in the BANNER. He tells us that he has just been informed that in course of conversation with a Jew, the latter had stated his firm belief that a large majority of the Lost Tribes would eventually be found amongst the British. We quite concur with our Jewish friend and also in his surmise that the entire British race, as now existing, are not purely Israelites. No more were the Twelve Tribes when they left Egypt with a "great mixture" of strangers and the offspring of "mixed marriages" besides, such as Joseph contracted with Asenath, the daughter of Poti-pherah, priest of On (Gen. xli. 45).

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements

(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O O payable at Ludgate-circus.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed :—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

BANNER FREE CIRCULATION FUND.

	£	s.	d.
G. R....	0	10	0

Donations, applications for grants, to be addressed to R. Fergusson Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London.

NEW BOOKS AND NEW EDITIONS.

Price 6d., post free 7d.

THE ISRAELITISH ORIGIN OF THE ANGLO-SAXONS, IRISH, SCOTCH, AND WELSH. An Historical Proof, by THOMAS C. BALMER.

CONTENTS:—Division of Solomon's Kingdom—Kingdom of Judah and Kingdom of Israel—History of the House or Kingdom of Israel—Proof that They were Never Restored—Their Idols, Religious Festivals, Conversion, &c., &c.—Israelitish Origin of the Ancient Britons, Irish, and Scotch - Traditional Account of Their Migration From the East—The Language and Religious Ceremonies Considered—Observations on the Future Restoration—Ultimate Destiny of the Holy Land.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

Now READY, price 2d., post free, 2½d.

NEW PAMPHLET BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

THE HISTORICAL, ETHNIC, AND PHILOLOGICAL ARGUMENTS in PROOF of BRITISH IDENTITY with the TEN LOST TRIBES OF ISRAEL, clearly and simply stated.

BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

CONTENTS:—Introduction—The Celts—Professor Rawlinson's Testimony—The Cymry—The Cimmerii—The Gimiri and Khumri—The Testimony of the Nimroud Obelisk—The Scythians—The Anglo-Saxons—Sharon Turner's Testimony—The Jutes and Angles—The Danes and the Normans—General Conclusions—Philology—The Welsh Language—The Rev. Canon Lysons' Testimony—Idiomatic Identity Between Hebrew and English—Tyndal's Testimony—The Tribe of Dan—The Irish Celts—Are the Continental Nations Israelites?—Conclusions—Appendix.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane; and Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Just out. Price 4d.

NEBUCHADNEZZAR'S DREAM and THE BRITISH EMPIRE. By Ephraim. With Illustrative Prophetic Map.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; Sold by W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

This day. Price 2d. Post free 2½d.

MANASSEH AND THE UNITED STATES. An important Essay delivered before the "Lost Israel Identification Society," by the Rev. Joseph Wild, D.D., at Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, New York.

CONTENTS:—The Fulness of the Gentiles set in—For whom did God intend America—The Origin of the United States—The Footsteps of Ephraim and Manasseh—The Will of Jacob made to Ephraim and Manasseh—Manasseh a People, and a Great People—Manasseh's Birthtime of Separation—Out of nearly Sixty Conquered Colonies the only one England ever Lost was that of Manasseh (America)—The Great Seal of the United States—Manasseh was brought up at the Door of the Pyramid, &c., &c.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.; and of any Bookseller.

SOME of PHILO-ISRAEL'S papers, as they have appeared in THE BANNER, will be separately published from time to time in the form of Letters, for distribution.

No. 1. "The Identity of the British with Lost Israel."
No. 2. "The Glory of God."
No. 3. "An Address to British Soldiers.' (Now ready.)
No. 4. "An Address to British Sailors." (Now ready.)

Others will follow. Price One and Sixpence per 100; less quantities in proportion; postage extra.

Apply to R. Banks, 5 Racquet-court, Fleet-street. Also all Booksellers and Publishers.

PUBLIC ANNOUNCEMENTS.

THE REV. H. H. MARRIOTT'S LECTURE in Reply to the Rev. J. B. Clifford's Charge of Blasphemy, &c., will take place at the Victoria Rooms, Clifton, Bristol, at 7.30 p.m., on Thursday, June 19, 1879, when Col. Savile will be in the chair.

CARD OF MEMBERSHIP FOR ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATIONS.

The New Card of Membership is now ready. Prices in quantities, 4d. each; single copies, 7½d. post free. Supplied to the Metropolitan, Bristol and Clifton, Huddersfield, and other Associations. It is highly commended by many of the leading advocates of the Identity movement. Apply, Geo. W. Staniland, Castle-street, Sheffield, England, Hon. Sec. Sheffield Anglo-Israel Association.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION. Temporary office: 20, Warwick-lane, London, E.C. This Association is prepared to send out experienced and well QUALIFIED GENTLEMEN to LECTURE on the subject of "The Identity of the British Race with the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel." The terms are such as involve no liabilities as to loss, &c. Upon those needing their services—which are not restricted to the Metropolitan area—all applications as to the Lecturers, Subjects, &c., to be made to the Hon. Sec., JAMES BILLINGTON, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

HASTINGS AND ST. LEONARDS ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION, Auxiliary to the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association.

President :—
Lieut.-Col. W. H. LARKINS, Dymock, Ore.
Treasurer :—
Mr. COULTHWAITE, St. Andrew's Schools.
Hon. Secretaries :—
Mr. B. SARGENT, 37, London Road, St. Leonards.
Mr. J. R. MITCHELL, 52, St. Andrew's Road, Hastings.
Committee :—
Messrs. WHITEMAN, W. DUNGEY, KENT, PRYOR, R. GREEN

New and Revised Edition, Price 6d. Cloth boards, 1s.

THE "NEW OLD STORY," with an Introduction to a Marvellous Puzzle. The Story gives a sketch of the History of the Hebrews, showing distinctly the difference between the Two Nations, Judah and Israel, the latter being the British. The Story also tells of the Great Pyramid, and explains how its wonderful meaning can be, as it is only understood by measurement. An Appendix explains "The Eastern Question." The Story is written with great simplicity, and interests young children. By A E I, Author of "The Answer to the Eastern Question."

W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

Now ready price 7s., post free 6d. extra.

THE SECOND VOLUME OF THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

This volume contains a large number of articles on our Identity with Lost Israel, by the best and most learned writers on the subject. Also many interesting papers on the Great Pyramid by Professor Piazzi Smyth, F.R.S.E., Astronomer-Royal for Scotland, Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A., Major H. A. Tracey, R.A., Charles Horner, Esq., and others.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

Price 1d.; post free, 1½d.

GOD'S LOVE FOR ISRAEL. A GUARANTEE THAT HE WILL FULFIL HIS PROMISES TO ISRAEL. By JOHN GILDER SHAW.

Price 6d.; or with illustrative map, 8d.

BRITAIN (OR ISRAEL) THE FIFTH AND LAST, AND THE UNCONQUERABLE EMPIRE. By JOHN GILDER SHAW.

Price 3d.; post free, 3½d.

CHRONOLOGICAL CHART OF BRITISH VICTORIES OVER THE CONTINENTAL POWERS, ranging from the battle of Cressy (1346), to our last victory, the taking of Sebastopol, Sept. 8, 1855. Arranged by J. G. SHAW, of Leeds.

"We trust Mr. Shaw's labour in preparing this paper may be appreciated by the public and be largely sold."—Banner of Israel.

London: Published by Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; and may be had of the Author, 20 Park-row, Leeds, and of all booksellers.

THE GREAT PYRAMID. NOW READY, PHILO-ISRAEL'S NEW WORK, 56 pages, Illustrated with Diagrams, price 4d., post free 5d.

OUR IDENTITY WITH THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. By PHILO-ISRAEL. Price 4d. Third Thousand (reprinted from the Clifton Chronicle).

PHOTOGRAPHIC PORTRAITS OF PHILO-ISRAEL, Editor of THE BANNER OF ISRAEL, Author of "The History of the House of Israel," &c., &c. Cabinet, 2s., post free; Carte-de-Visites, 1s., post free.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

BOOKS, ETC.

This day is published, 8vo., cloth gilt, price 3s. 6d. post free.

A DISSERTATION ON THE CELESTIAL SIGN OF THE RAINBOW In connection with THE SACRED "OATH OF THE SEVENTH," BEING An Exposition of its Expansive Significance in accordance with the Teaching of TRANSCENDENTAL MASONRY.

BY PROTEUS.

"The publication is designed to be a dissertation on the celestial sign of the rainbow, in connection with the sacred 'Oath of the Seventh' in accordance with the teaching of Transcendental Masonry. It is full of cabalistic lore and mythologic suggestion, but at the same time it contains and popularises a large share of polyglot learning, to appreciate which one need not belong to the craft. Even as a dictionary of root words and root tracing the dissertation is both educative and interesting."—Freeman's Journal.

"As Freemasons we are always bound to be tolerant and trusting, no less than open to conviction, and friendly to free discussion, and we, therefore, note the appearance of a class of literature, remarkable in itself."—Freemason.

Dublin: Hodges, Foster, and Figgis, Publishers to the University.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

Now Ready. Price 3d.

THE WIMBLEDON ANGLO-ISRAEL DEBATE. A verbatim Report of the Debate held at Emmanuel Church, Wimbledon, on Thursday, June 5th, 1879, containing the speeches delivered by Colonel Sandwith, Rev. Bourchier Wrey Savile, Rev. J. W. Wilkinson, Rev. C. W. Hickson, Mr. Frank White, Mr. Douglas A. Onslow, J.P., Rev. S. Garrett, Rev. F. R. A. Glover, and the Rev. H. E. Brook.

London: Issued by the "Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association;" and published by W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

"THE MERCHANTS OF TARSHISH"—ENGLAND, AMERICA, AND RUSSIA, IN THE LAST WAR (Ezek. xxxviii., xxxix). By the Rev. SAMUEL MINTON, M.A. Price 6d.

Elliot Stock, 62, Paternoster-row.

TO AUTHORS. Authors desirous of issuing Works or Pamphlets on the great and increasingly interesting Question of the Identity of the Lost Ten Tribes with the British Nation, should first communicate with Robert Banks, of Racquet-court, Fleet-street, who has already been honoured by issuing, amongst others, the following works on the subject:

The Banner of Israel. Weekly 1d.; monthly 7d.

The Nation's Glory Leader. Weekly 1d.; quarterly 1s. 4d.

The Pillar of Witness. By late Captain Tracey. Cloth 2s. 6d.; paper 1s. 6d. (second edition).

The Anglo-Israel Post Bag. By Bishop Titcomb. Cloth 2s. 6d.; paper 1s. 6d. (second edition).

The History of the House of Israel. By Philo-Israel. Cloth 1s.; paper 6d. (sixth thousand).

The Great Pyramid of Egypt. Fifty-two pages, with three illustrations. Price 4d. (10,000).

The New Old Story. By A E I. Cloth 1s.

Why be Deaf when you may hear?
Take the help to you brought near.

DEAFNESS. Noises in the Ears! Medicine! Trumpets! Food! and Vigorous Health! The Rev. E. J. SILVERTON will send his Health Advocate, giving important advice and particulars on the above subjects, free to any person, showing how Deafness and other diseases may be at once relieved and ultimately cured. Thousands of persons are being benefited by these means. The Medicine for curing Deafness has usually been sold in boxes at 11s. each. It is now offered in boxes at 2s. 6d.; if stamps, 2s. 8d. The Trumpet for 12s., is now offered for 9s. 6d.—Of every Chemist, and all wholesale London Houses, or direct from the Rev. E. J. SILVERTON, Albert House, Park-street, Nottingham (Pastor of Exeter Hall Church).

WOOLS! WOOLS! WOOLS! Cheapest and Best. White and Black Berlin, Single and Double, 3s. 6d. per pound. Best quality Ice Wools, all Colours, 5½. per ounce ball. All other Wools at proportionate prices. Shetland, Andalusian, Fleecy, and Bonne Mere Wools. Welsh, Scotch, Peacock Victoria, and other Yarns. Crewel Filoselle Silk. M. WHELLENS, Wholesale and Retail Wool Warehouse, 3, 5, & 6, QUEEN'S TERRACE, CAMDEN ROAD, LONDON.

Send for Price List and Sampler, which will be forwarded free on application.

LADIES' SILK SCARVES, price 1s. The choicest Silk Scarf ever offered. All Colours; richly brocaded ends. Send stamps for a sample.

M. WHELLENS, 5 & 6, Queen's-terrace, Camden-road, London, N.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, 5, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 18, 1879. [All Rights Reserved.]

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. III. No. 130. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, JUNE 25, 1879. ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
The Cost of the Armies of Continental Nations.—A "Sign"	253
The Great Sign	254
The Chosen People.—Part VI. A Lecture by John T. Gott	254
Fresh Evidence from the Ends of the Earth of Spiritual Good to a Man's Soul by Belief in Our Identity	255
The Scattered of Israel.—Part II. By L. E. De Ridder	256
British Home Missions.—"An Identity"	257
The Opinion of His Infallible Holiness the Pope Regarding Israel, the British Nation	258
The Circulation of the Bible	258
A New Way of Opening "Our Identity" to Beginners	259
Testimony from Grantham of Spiritual Good Derived from Belief in Our Identity	259
Correspondence—Psalm ii. Verse 8	259

THE COST OF THE ARMIES OF CONTINENTAL NATIONS.—A "SIGN."

FROM the Times of the 25th April, 1879, we learnt that the increase on the cost of our army and navy for the last few years had not exceeded £1,700,000. The First Lord of the Admiralty, Mr. W. H. Smith, thought that the country had not now a man too many, nor a ship or a single ton of shipping too many either. While our own increase of armament had thus been of a merely trifling "automatic" character, as he described it, and that "during a period of the gravest European dangers," with war with Russia on several occasions trembling in the balance, what had during recent years been the increase in the cost of foreign armies and navies?

In 1870, when Mr. Gladstone's Government asked Parliament for a vote of credit to provide against the menacing aspect of European affairs, the armies and navies of Russia, Austria, Germany, France, and Italy cost in the aggregate £73,650,000. In 1878 that sum had been swollen to £97,744,000.

That is to say, while our armaments had increased in cost only under two millions sterling, those of the five leading States of Europe had cost in the aggregate, in 1878, over twenty-four millions more than they had done only eight years before. There surely is something very remarkable in this. In this, the land of God-protected, Divinely-favoured Israel, the extra cost of the needful preparation to meet the coming times of danger, troubles, wars, and rumours of wars, amounts only to £1,700,000; but abroad the average increased expense which each of the five leading States of Gentile Europe finds to be necessary to enable it to enter on the struggle that all perceive to be approaching is nearly five millions sterling. What is the comparative result? Let the Times tell us. Writing on the eve of the Queen's recent return from Baveno to her island home, the editor said:—

The Queen will be welcomed back by her people with their long-established loyalty; and, on her own part, she may well feel, as she sets foot on English soil, that she is treading on the most solid ground in Europe. With all the difficulties and troubles of the British Empire, we are in a far more secure and happy position than any other European State. In other countries, however strong and prosperous they may be in various ways, there is hardly an institution which is not menaced by powerful foes. Elsewhere neither Thrones nor Parliaments nor Courts of Law seem beyond the reach of revolution.

Such, then, is the outcome of a state of things which finds the British nation sitting at peace in their little sanctuary in the West, at one with all the civilized nations of the world—in rest, in quiet, none making her afraid, while abroad there is everywhere anxious and fearful expectation of wars, of revolutions, of conflicts, and of political upheavals, which force the five Powers (two against three, three against two—Luke xii. 52), to remain armed to the teeth, to add continually to their already costly preparations for what they know is coming—a devastation of political volcanic destruction, which God's Word calls the "great earthquake such as there was not since men were upon earth, so mighty an earthquake, so great;" and which the Times describes, in language men use, to tell of a coming subterranean volcanic catastrophe. Surely our unthinking, unbelieving opponents and friends must see in all this more than mere chance and accident. Why is ours, apparently the most defenceless, because widespread empire the world has ever seen, yet the most secure, its soil the "most solid ground in Europe," its institutions founded on the rock of a people's love and loyalty towards a monarchy which has endured for a thousand years, and sees no abatement after all in the affectionate hold it has on the nation's heart? It cannot be because of our deservings, for of that we verily see none. Nor of our Protestantism, our possession of the Bible, or of our love of liberty, of our truth, and hatred of all false ways? for these, if we really possess them (which some doubt), are God's good gifts to a recreant, undeserving, stubborn, headstrong race. What can, then, cause the difference, unless it be our Hebrew origin, and the faithfulness of our God to His oath to our forefather Abraham, which cannot but grant us all those good gifts He promised to him and to his seed for ever? Hence our stable Government—our securely founded Monarchy, destined to last for ever; hence our Protestant faith, our civil and religious liberties, our political freedom, our resolve to banish slavery throughout the world; hence our wealth, our Gates, foreign and domestic, both of them ours, and both free, safe, and secure as God can make them; hence our colonial, and our heathen empires, too; our desolate heritages, our maritime supremacy, our unconquerable armies, our security at home, our continually advancing military power abroad, our Bible circulation, our Sabbath-keeping, church-going propensities, our respect for God's Ten Commandments, our longing and waiting for the outpouring of God's Holy Spirit on our degraded heathen masses, even in God-favoured "England," the Isles of the West, where Israel dwells now so securely. These, and a thousand other blessings we derive, and our Gentile neighbours want, "because the Lord loved us, and because He would keep the oath which He had sworn unto our fathers;" for "the Lord our God hath chosen us to be a special people unto Himself above all people that are on the face of the earth" (Deut. vii. 6—8). Hence He has made our burdens light in respect to the cost of our necessary military armaments at the present time, but He has rendered those heavy which are laid upon the Gentile nations of the continental "earth," because, as He has told us, His determination is to gather the Goy-yim (or Gentiles), that He may "assemble the kingdoms to pour upon THEM His indignation, even ALL His fierce anger, for ALL the earth shall be devoured with the FIRE of His jealousy," what time "He turns to the people a pure language, that they may ALL call upon the name of Jehovah to serve Him with one consent" (or shoulder). What time, too, "His suppliants" "beyond the rivers of Cush," "even the (Ten-Tribed) daughter of His diaspora," or "dispersed," shall bring "the House of Judah" to Him as "His present" (Zeph. iii. 8—10).

Digitized by Google

Reader, these are things to make the heart sing and dance with joy, and to rejoice with exceeding exultation for our God's undeserved mercy to our ungrateful race! Let us "praise Him" for His tender love to US His chosen ones, and pray Him to hasten the day when WE shall all know Him, from the least of us to the greatest of us—when Judah shall be converted—when "many Gentile people" and "strong nations" shall "come" to the Lord, and the "earth," the afflicted "earth," shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord as the waters cover the sea" (Jer. xxxi. 33; Zech. viii. 22; Hab. ii. 14; Ezek. xxxvi. 25—32).

THE GREAT SIGN.

"And this Gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations, and then shall the end come."—Matt. xxiv. 14.

WHEN the disciples asked the Lord, "When shall these things be, and what shall be the sign of Thy coming?" He gave first a general reply, then one relating especially to the fall of Jerusalem, and lastly, one relating to the time of His second advent, to "gather His elect from the four winds: from one end of heaven to the other."

According to the present arrangement of the text, it appears that He gave the above particular sign of His coming at the close of His general reply; and a remarkable sign it was, and still is. At that time the Gospel had been preached only in Palestine for about three years, and very few had received it. The likelihood of it ever being preached in all the world was very remote indeed. But what is the fact at the present day—1879? The prediction is fulfilled; the Gospel is preached in all the world as a witness of the love and mercy of God, through Messias, the Redeemer, the Holy One of Israel.

Where is the land in which the glad tidings of the Gospel is not now proclaimed? The great wall of China, and the multitude of the inhabitants has not prevented it penetrating to the very interior of that country. The last dark place of the earth was Central Africa, and there its light now shineth, and its influence is felt.

The Gospel is published, and consequently preached, in upwards of two hundred languages and dialects, many of which had to be reduced to a written form before the Scripture could be printed. Through the instrumentality of the Bible and Missionary Societies of this and other countries, the people of every nation under heaven can now read and hear, in their own tongue, the wonderful works of God, and of His love and mercy to man through the Messiah, Jesus Christ. The great societies which were brought into existence in the early part of this century to finish the work in time have accomplished the task. The work is done. The sign of our Lord's coming is before our eyes in it completeness—the sign of His coming to gather to Himself those who love Him and look for His appearing.

Let Christians now take special note of the parable of the Ten Virgins, and also mark the warning our Saviour gave at the close of His particular reply: "WATCH ye, therefore, and pray always, that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of man." "WATCH, therefore, for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come, lest coming suddenly He find you sleeping. And what I say unto you I say unto all, WATCH!"

"Behold, the Bridegroom cometh."

"The Lord is at hand."

"He is near, even at the door." J. S. L.

THE CHOSEN PEOPLE.

A LECTURE BY JOHN T. GOTT.

(Continued from page 250).

PART VI.

THIS is the nation which God has promised to do so much for, but of which He has solemnly declared, "I will yet for this be inquired of by the House of Israel, to do it for them" (Ezek. xxxvi.). The prevalent idea respecting this passage is, that believers in our Israelitish origin ought to engage in united prayer at certain times and seasons. This was my first view of the passage, but I soon discovered that that was not its full scope; and while it has been a subject which has exercised much thought and meditation on my part, I will only undertake to suggest now what I think may be its deeper signification.

When the prodigal son said, "I will return and go to my father," the father ran to meet him. Did the prodigal see his father coming? Ah! no. His head was bowed low with shame and humility. So must it be with the prodigal House of Israel. God has promised that they shall dwell in Zion; and that they shall weep no more. That He will be very gracious unto them. When? "At the voice of thy cry!" So, then, it must be a national cry: such a cry as went up out of Egypt when God sent the Israelites a deliverer in Moses. Such a cry as went up from them on the brink of the Red Sea. Such a cry as was heard during the time of the Judges. Such a cry must be heard again from the chosen people, for it is declared that in these latter days, "Before they call I will answer, and while they are yet speaking I will hear" (Isa. lxv. 24). You will perceive that I am referring to a remarkable prophecy I have already quoted. It seems to my mind to bear exactly upon the times in which we are living, and to be another token of the near approach of those times in which God has promised to bless His people Israel.

Thus, in the parable, the prodigal began to be in want, and no man gave unto him; and then he came to himself—i.e., to his right mind; in the time of his deepest distress, human sympathy failed, so he turned to go to his father.

What is the condition of Anglo-Israel to-day? Complications in trade, bank frauds, gigantic failures, commercial depression, strikes, general discontent and insecurity, have brought upon us bad times, the like of which has no parallel within the recollection of living man. This has all been our own doing. The continued effect of bad times has been felt by all classes, in every grade of society. There are few now-a-days who have not had to eat the bread of adversity, and to drink the water of affliction. 'Seventy-eight was a year full of disaster, calamity, and trouble. It has been calculated that in that year 14,000 lives were lost by disasters round our shores, explosions in our mines, and other accidents! 'Seventy-nine, young as it is, promises to be no better than its predecessor. It may be worse. If worse, what then? Many of us have been well sobered by the events of 1878; compelled to think a little more seriously, to take heed to our steps, to be careful, prudent, and watchful. Another year's discipline may have a wondrous effect, for it cannot be denied that God Almighty is dealing with the British people in Great Britain in a manner totally different from that with which He is dealing with other nations. So it simply amounts to this. God has said that He will be inquired of by the House of Israel to do the good things He hath promised for them. But before that comes we distinctly read that there is to be a time of affliction, and that in their affliction the children of Israel shall "cry" unto the Lord. But we have this sweet promise to console us, "God will be very gracious unto thee at the voice of thy cry; when He shall hear it, He will answer thee" (Isa. xxx.). Many of you remember that we have had in the past a day set apart for national prayer, a day set apart for national thanksgiving, and we must now anticipate, in the near future, a day set apart for national humiliation before Almighty God for national sins. Just as no man gave to the prodigal son in the time of his trouble, so no nation is willing to assist us—even if any nation could. Just as the helpless prodigal turned to go to his father, so will we ere long bow in penitence and humiliation before the great God of Israel. Just as the father saw his son arise to go to him, so will Jehovah see the repentance and humiliation of the great bulk of His chosen people, the Ten Tribes of Israel. Just as the father saw the prodigal a long way off, so will Jehovah see His prodigal son Israel a long way off from home. Just as he ran to meet him, so hath God promised to bless Israel in the Isles, just where they are. The prodigal son returned just as he was, with wasted form, ragged clothes, and nothing left; returned with the words of penitence and confession on his lips; but "the half was never told." And there is the same gracious promise given to the prodigal House of Israel: "While they are yet speaking, I will answer." We are now dealing reverently and cautiously with what we believe Scripture declares to be God's dealing with His chosen people, the House of Israel, in the near future.

Digitized by Google

Now, when the father saw his prodigal son a long way off, what condition was that son in? In filth, in rags, shoeless, haggard, and utterly wretched. What did the father do? His son said, "Father, I have sinned against heaven, and in thy sight, and am no more worthy to be called thy son." Then followed the father's loving kiss of reconciliation. There was no confession after that kiss, and thus the "half was never told." This has its exact counterpart in the prodigal House of Israel. "Go and proclaim these words towards the North, and say, Return, thou backsliding Israel, saith the Lord, and I will not cause Mine anger to fall upon you; only ACKNOWLEDGE thine iniquity (there is the turning-point), and I will not cause Mine anger to fall upon thee. I will heal their backsliding, I will love them freely, for Mine anger is turned away from them" (Hosea xiv.). This is just as the prodigal of the parable was treated. No anger, all compassion; no reproof, but a kiss. And the next verse of this beautiful prophecy in Hosea contains the promise of great blessing: "I will be as the dew unto Israel; he shall grow as a lily, and cast forth his roots as Lebanon." This blessing partakes of the same character as the blessing which the father in the parable blessed his prodigal son.

We have the ring, the shoes, the robe, and the feast. These are all necessary preliminaries to investiture with the insignia of office.

The ring is the symbol of re-installation. The prodigal son then took up his proper position in his father's house.

Now I humbly believe that we, being Lost Israel, have already had the "ring" of re-installation given to us, inasmuch as the civilised nations of the earth have unanimously assigned to the British people the protectorate of the lands of the Bible. The ring typifies honour, and that honour has been conferred upon us.

Then we have the shoes. Slaves went bare-foot; and thus we have in the shoes the symbol of freedom.

Then we have the best robe—i.e., the robe of Christ's righteousness.

This is just what Jehovah has promised to do with the dry bones of Israel. They were buried in the earth, but He promised to raise them up, and He has done so. There has been a shaking. The bones have come together, bone to bone, sinews and flesh have come up upon them, and skin has covered them above, but there is no breath in them—i.e., no spiritual life. That is just the condition of Anglo-Israel to-day.

The Great Pyramid, commentators, and living divines, all point to 1881-2 as a remarkable era. Many anticipate the second advent; while we, who believe in our Israelitish origin, humbly think that it will be the time when God will make a new covenant with the House of Israel and with the House of Judah, when He will pour down upon us His Holy Spirit, and we shall become a righteous nation. Can such a thing be possible of the British people? The prophet Ezekiel was asked that question after having passed round the valley, and having seen the bones, very many, and very dry: "Son of man, can these bones live?" The prophet could not answer that question. It was as hard and stupendous as the one now under consideration: "Can the Spirit of the living God cause the British people to become a righteous people?" With God all things are possible. With the prophet let us answer, "O Lord God, Thou knowest."

The dry bones in the valley symbolise Israel's death and burial out of sight, but God hath promised to breathe upon them, and Israel's resurrection will be the manifestation of the sons of God, and will usher in the day when God will write His law in our hearts, when He will be our God, and we shall be His people for ever.

(To be continued.)

FRESH EVIDENCE FROM THE ENDS OF THE EARTH OF SPIRITUAL GOOD TO A MAN'S SOUL BY BELIEF IN OUR IDENTITY.

WE thought when we recorded the instance we gave from India, at page 159, BANNER No. 120, of the blessing our Identity had been the means of bringing to a man's soul there, that we should soon be privileged to announce yet another true case of conversion and turning to the Lord of one dead in trespasses and sin by the instrumentality—blessed of God—of the Identity, and the truths it teaches from the Bible. The good news we now have to tell is of a case somewhat similar to the one we noticed from Bombay. Here, again, was a young man straying from the right way—far from his parents' home—departed from the living God—and yet after years of sad declension brought to Jesus by the application of saving truth, found while searching the Word in order to learn the proof of the facts of "Our Identity." Who after this will dare to call our teaching "Satan's most subtle contrivance to rob Christ of His glory;" the system, nothing but the "mystery of iniquity;"

Digitized by Google

the teachers, anti-Christ and hideous "blasphemers?" We say if such reflections be henceforth entertained of a work which God is so clearly owning to the conversion of lost sinners, and to the glory of His own blessed Son, the very stones will cry out and rebuke the men who venture thus to pour contempt upon what has His blessing, "who openeth and no man shutteth, and shutteth and no man openeth." The details regarding this case, which have been furnished us by the parents of the young man in question, we may refer to but very indistinctly. We must not give either names or localities. But our readers may trust us that the facts are true; that the case is a genuine and a very remarkable one, perhaps the most remarkable in all its features we have yet had the privilege to record in the pages of the BANNER.

"You will be glad," writes the thankful parent of this youth, "to hear of the Identity spreading fast at the very ends and uttermost parts of the earth. But you will rejoice far more over the history of our mingled joy and sorrow in connection with it. 'This our son was dead and is alive again; was lost and is found.' The instrumentality of his conversion (for such I humbly trust it is) has been the subject which we both have so much at heart—namely, our Identity! After giving much occasion to the enemies of the Lord to blaspheme, he had thrown off all parental control and left his home. His has been the history of Ephraim in miniature. But prayer has prevailed on his behalf, and God has been unspeakably gracious to us. Every effort we had made had failed to bring him to Jesus. We had sent him the BANNER OF ISRAEL, and occasionally books and papers about our Identity. Now he writes as follows: 'Since studying this most interesting subject I have been enabled to see the Bible in an entirely different light; in fact, I may say it seems as though a new existence has been opened to me! I can hardly express the sort of feeling or change that has taken place in me, but I hope and trust that I have been led to see and to believe that Christ's precious blood has been shed to save sinners, and that all those that believe in Him shall be saved.' Much more of the same kind follows." The joyful, grateful parents end with the voice of praise, and ask us (as we ask all our readers) "to praise the Lord" for this His glorious work effected through means of the Identity, and by the written Word, blessed by the Divine Spirit to the saving of a precious, but till lately lost and erring, soul.

We do thank God for the encouragement this fact gives us in the midst, as our readers know, of the terrible contest with our opponents which we have just passed through. Accused openly of blasphemy, charged with leading men to dishonour that precious One whom to know is life eternal; compared with Korah, Dathan, and Abiram for hideous sins, which make us shudder as we read the awful charge; and publicly pilloried before the world by an aged and much honoured minister of the Gospel resident in the very town where our lot is cast, ours has been no bed of roses lately! We thankfully, therefore, turn to this proof of the good hand of our Lord upon our cause, and point with grateful satisfaction to the fresh instance we are now authorised to publish of the good done to a man's soul by those very truths which our enemies denounce as Satan's most subtle contrivance to dishonour Christ! How, we ask, can Christ be dishonoured by teaching which robs Satan's kingdom of an unrepenting sinner, and brings that sinner, sorry for his sins, to the feet of Jesus, henceforth a loving and obedient son, a true penitent, and believer in the redemption purchased for him as a son of Israel by his dying Saviour, now one who boldly lectures and writes in favour of the truths which concern our Identity, whereby he was first enabled to lay hold of the Sacrifice which has saved his ruined soul? Reader, make known this case far and wide, and be sure that as such as these multiply, the opposition of good men and good women to our glorious Identity must rapidly diminish, since nothing can withstand the evidence they afford that ours is a teaching which has our own God's blessing, our dear Lord's fullest approbation, and the sanctioning benediction of the Holy Spirit of truth, by whom it is revealed in the Scriptures written by His inspiration, for our comfort and for our learning. Finally, let us praise Him, with the rejoicing parents and with the restored son, that He has seen fit again so soon to give us manifest evidence, such as all men may see and understand, that this thing is from GOD.

THE SCATTERED OF ISRAEL.

BY L. E. DE RIDDER.

(Concluded from page 248.)

PART II.

SOME may say that many of the before-mentioned passages, if not the whole of them, refer to the House of Judah; but there is a fatal objection to that assertion; it is this:—In Isaiah xi. 12, we find the two Houses are referred to with totally different expressions—viz., the outcasts of Israel and the dispersed of Judah. Some may not think much of this distinction, but it becomes overwhelming when we consider the passages in Ezekiel v. 10—12: "Therefore the fathers shall eat the sons in the midst of thee, and the sons shall eat their fathers; and I will execute judgments in thee, and the whole remnant of thee will I scatter into all the winds. And a third part of thee shall die with the pestilence, and with famine shall they be consumed in the midst of thee; and a third part shall fall by the sword round about thee; and I will scatter a third part into all the winds, and I will draw out a sword after them." For in the above we have the description of Judah, a people who are to lose all national unity, without the power of cohesion, dispersed like chaff before the whirlwind; without leaders, without aim or purpose. Nor are they gathered again before the time of the second return, when they are to walk to the House of Israel, appointing themselves one head who will direct their return (Hosea i. 11). This is a very different scattering to that of Ephraim, for though they are outcasts they can be outcasts without losing the whole of their national unity, or without leaders. Far from this being the case, the whole of the prophecies point to their scattering as though it were a migration of a people with a promise of unity at the end of their wanderings towards a wilderness of refuge. Not only is this so, but we are forced to the conclusion that that migration had already begun, for if we turn again to Ezekiel xxviii. 25, we find there is a most important point that we did not notice before. Let us read it again: "Thus saith the Lord God, WHEN I shall have gathered the House of Israel from the people among whom they are scattered." Here, I take it, we are plainly told that the people are already on their journey, and a promise held out to them that they shall be gathered in the future, and when so gathered, shall commence their sanctification and keeping of the statutes, in repentance for the sins of their forefathers in the land of Israel. By reference to the margin we find the date given as B.C. 588 when these words were written. This gives us a clue to the date when we should search history to find them in scattered bodies migrating; and does history so speak? I say it does most eloquently. Not only so, but we find before they start a message is sent to them by the prophet Zephaniah to gather themselves together as though ready for flight from the land of their captivity. We have it in Zeph. ii. 1—3: "Gather yourselves together, yea, gather together, O nation not desired; before the decree bring forth, before the day pass as the chaff, before the fierce anger of the Lord come upon you, before the day of the Lord's anger come upon you.

Digitized by Google

Seek ye the Lord, all ye meek of the earth, which have wrought His judgment; seek righteousness, seek meekness: it may be ye shall be HID in the day of the Lord's anger." Now, what is the day of the Lord's anger spoken of here but the breaking up of all the nations through the instrumentality of Nebuchadnezzar? This message was written, we find by the margin, in B.C. 630, therefore before the destruction of Assyria and Nineveh, as is shown by the 13th verse, which destruction must have exerted a powerful influence upon the direction taken by the Ten Tribes even more than we can have any conception of at this distance of time. Taking the above message into consideration, what are we to say to this passage in 2 Esdras xiv. 39?—"And whereas thou sawest that he gathered another peaceable multitude unto him, those are the Ten Tribes, which were carried away prisoners out of their own land in the time of Osea the king, whom Salmanasar the king of Assyria led away captive, and carried them over the waters, and so came they into another land. But they took this counsel among themselves, that they would leave the multitude of the heathen, and go forth into a further country, where never mankind dwelt, that they might there keep their statutes, which they never kept in their own land. And they entered into Euphrates by the narrow passages of the river, for the Most High then showed signs for them, and held the flood till they were passed over. For through that country there was a great way to go—namely, of a year and a half; and the same region is called Arsareth. Then dwelt they there until the latter time; and now, when they shall begin to come, the Highest shall stay the springs of the stream again, that they may go through, therefore sawest thou the multitude with peace." With the undeniable facts of history before me, and the remarkable reference in this passage to the first and second gatherings of the Ten Tribes, I am persuaded we have not hitherto attached sufficient importance to the historical facts and prophecy therein recorded. Of this there can be no doubt, that they are of the utmost value in pointing to the direction in which we must look for waymarks of the people in their migration. Nor can I see what motive the writer could have had in so recording the fact if it were not true, for at the time those books were evidently written there must have been no lack of evidence that the bulk of the Tribes were not in the place of their captivity, as well as of the direction they took in their migration. That they were gone even before the year B.C. 587, I hold the following passage to be a confirmation—viz., Ezekiel xxxvii. 21: "Thus saith the Lord God, Behold, I will take the children of Israel from among the heathen whither they be gone, and will gather them on every side, and bring them into their own land." We thus see that in B.C. 630 they are told to gather themselves together, and in B.C. 588, that they are already scattered, and in B.C. 587, the same prophet speaks of them as gone, and I maintain that history fully bears out that statement. I would wish that deeper readers of history would take this subject up, and weave together the many silver threads that now be hidden in most of the ancient historical writers, as well as in many of the more modern, such as Strabo, Tacitus, Ptolemy, Pliny, Herodotus, George Smith, Layard, Sharon Turner, Rollin, and a host of other writers, for what little I have been able to glean proves to my mind that the wanderings of the Ten Tribes are not hidden under such an impenetrable mystery as we have been led to suppose.

Clifton, Jan. 14, 1879.

NOTICE.—The Hon. Secretary of the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association being about to organise a course of Lectures on the Identity for the first week in September, 1879, at or near Taunton, Torquay, Exeter, Devonport, or Plymouth, begs friends in towns and places near the above to write to him at once, should they desire Lectures or Meetings in their localities. For terms, apply to the Hon. Secretary, 20, Warwick Lane, Paternoster Row, London, E.C.

BRITISH HOME MISSIONS.—"AN IDENTITY."

WE must have observed in recent times the multiplication of Home Missions throughout our favored land. They have become exceedingly common everywhere in the British Islands, and throughout America. Partially also in the British Colonies there have been for some time past strong efforts systematically made to bring the Gospel of the grace of God, through the blood of the Cross of Christ, home to every man and woman of our sin-stained, lost, and erring race. This is a peculiarity of the Anglo-Saxon nations. Do our readers notice anything of the sort proceeding as the work of French agents in France? of German missionaries generally through their fatherland? Are Spaniards, Portuguese, Austrians, Greeks, Russians, or even Italians (except so far as the Waldenses are true Italians, which is doubtful), mindful to carry the Gospel to the semi-heathen in Spain, Portugal, Austria, Greece, Russia, or Italy respectively? Alas, no! Nowhere in these lands is the call felt by their home-born inhabitants that Christ ought to be made known to their fellow-countrymen "lying in the wicked one," as the Saviour of sinners, as He who died that even they might live! Whatever work of this character is done in France, or in Belgium, or Spain, or Austria, on purely Protestant and therefore, true Bible principles, is chiefly done by British or by American missionary agents, and by native catechists and teachers sent forth or paid for the most part by British aid.

This is certainly a curious state of things, and responds pretty faithfully to the prediction of the prophet, "ISRAEL shall blossom and bud and fill the face of the world with fruit" (Isa. xxvii. 6). But is there any other indication in God's Word that Israel's home missions should be a characteristic of her people in the latter day—one so marked that it would be worthy of special mention in connection with the great outpouring of the Holy Spirit, which it is the very object of these Protestant missions to seek and confidently to expect as the result of believing prayer? There is! Let the reader turn to Jer. xxxi. 33, 34, and he will read a passage very familiar and very precious to all "All-Israelites" in connection with "the new covenant" blessing promised only to the House of Israel at a particular crisis of the world's history, even to the British nation now. What are the words? "But this is the covenant I will make with the House of Israel: After those days, saith the Lord, I will put My law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts; and will be their God, and they shall be My people. And they shall teach NO MORE every man his neighbour, and every man his brother, saying, Know the Lord: for they shall ALL know Me, from the least of them unto the greatest of them, saith the Lord: for I will forgive their iniquity, and I will remember their sin no more." "They shall teach NO MORE every man his neighbour!" That clearly implies that up to the period of the expected outpouring of the spiritual blessing, these happy ones should be "teaching every man his neighbour, and every man his brother, saying, Know the Lord." No mention is made in this or other passages to show such will be the characteristic of any Gentile race properly so called. The nation distinguished by the desire and the practice too described—namely, that of a large proportion of the people (sufficient to represent the whole) teaching "every man his neighbour, and every man his brother, saying, Know the Lord"—is clearly the House of Israel wholly, exclusive, and independent of, the House of Judah. The British being Israel, they have to respond, just as the time of the Identity draws near, to this very important sign, and remarkably they do so to the very jot and to the very tittle of God's Word! London, Bristol, Liverpool, Brighton, Hull, &c., &c., have all, we believe, their City missions, their Bible women, their Scripture readers, Pastoral Aid and other Societies, and throughout the length and breadth of this Empire it is the same. Here, then, is a new Identity, a spiritual sign, tying us to Israel, and Israel to our nation, as described in God's Word, proving to all candid minds that we nationally are that very Hebrew people destined to be lost, and when "found" to be doing the gracious Gospel work for Christ, described by both Jeremiah and St. Paul, as "Teaching every man his neighbour, and every man his brother, saying, Know the Lord." Reader, let us thank God for our Identifications! let us prize and practise this new one more than all the rest, praying also for our people the words God Himself taught us to use, saying, "O Lord, save Thy people—the remnant of Israel" (Jer. xxxi. 7).

Digitized by Google

NOTE.—We are indebted to the Rev. C. W. Hickson for the bright new light furnished us as the chief point of the above. He dropped the hint during his address at a meeting we lately attended in Bristol, when, we are glad to say, we assisted at the organization of the Bristol Israel's Identification Association, in union and affiliation with the Clifton parent Society. The new Bristol branch was set on foot on the 20th March, 1879, with the Rev. C. W. Hickson as President, with a local Secretary and Treasurer, and a good working Committee. The future operations of the new Society will be confined to "publishing" the "Identity" in the Rev. C. W. Hickson's parish, and in those of the neighbouring clergy, of whom the chief are the Rev. Vicars of St. Emmanuel, of St. Paul's, and of St. Mary-le-Port, Bristol—that is of the Rev. R. Cornall, and S. A. Walker, and G. Alford (of whom the two first are our bitter opponents)—thus "overcoming evil with good" (Rom. xii. 21).

THE OPINION OF HIS INFALLIBLE HOLINESS THE POPE REGARDING ISRAEL, THE BRITISH NATION.

WE find the following in the Standard newspaper of May 31, 1879. The four friends who have drawn our attention to this extract, consider it remarkable enough for notice in the BANNER, and we agree with them. While on the subject, we think our readers would like to know that zealous Israelites, to the number of thirteen, have already each sent us a copy of the Daily Telegraph's leader of May 12, 1879, which we have already noticed in our issue of June 18. From every part of the United Kingdom—even from the Channel Islands—these extracts have come to us, showing we have eager, zealous friends everywhere, always on the watch to see we lose no good and cogent evidence to prove "our Identity" with Israel. We beg to thank these vigilant fellow-workers for their thoughtful aid, which we highly appreciate and wish them to continue.

Thirteen copies of the same article will, however, suffice; and we are inclined to cry out, "Enough!" when one post after another brings us more and yet more of M. Littré and his wonderful corroborations of our views.

Not quite so remarkable, but still very striking, is the Standard's quotation from Rome of the Pope's estimate of the importance of "England" in the affairs of the world just now. The extract is as follows:—

THE VATICAN AND ENGLAND.

ROME, Saturday, May 31, 1879.

The following report has reached me from the Vatican, and may be accepted as at least an authentic account of policy and opinion there:—

"The Holy See is at the present moment much occupied with England. It is known that the English Government holds all the threads of European events and the fate of Governments in its hand; and reports have reached the Vatican, leading to the belief that new events are imminent in sundry countries, that England knows all plans conceived, and that her policy tends to become dominant. In presence of these facts, the Vatican, desirous of not finding itself in the position of losing the game, and anxious not to be overtaken unprovided, is making every effort to unite its moral influence with England's material influence. Possibly the Vatican may think that it has cause to expect changes in the arrangements in the East which may produce conditions under which England's influence might be useful to the designs of enlarging the dominion of the Church in those regions. Fresh reports have reached the Vatican from France, indicating the critical nature of the situation, and the necessity for the Church to take some action in the question of public instruction; but the Vatican does not approve of the aggressive attitude of the French clergy. New instructions have been sent to the Nuncio at Paris to argue the question on the ground of the safety and the interests of France, but the Holy See remains firmly determined, come what may, to open no door to a breach of the relations."

What does the Vatican notice here?

1. That "the English Government holds all the threads of European events and the fate of Governments in its hands; its policy tending also to become dominant." We have in this as neat a way of describing Israel's God-prescribed position and functions as we could well desire. It says in plain words what the Scriptures foretell of Israel—namely, that she should be "the head, and not the tail; above only, and not beneath;" "the chief of nations" (Deut. xxviii. 13; Amos vi. 1).

2. That "England" has "the material influence," and the Pope desires to unite "his moral influence" with the same. But Israel is "God's dominion," and thus is gifted with "material influence" everywhere (Psa. cxiv. 2).

What concord, however, there can be between Israel, "God's dominion," and the Papacy—the enemy of the Lord's Christ, the Babylon of the Apocalypse—is best known to the Pope himself. For our own part we accept the above blind testimony, but reject the proferred "moral influence" of the mother of harlots.

We allude to the above on the principle that Fas est et ab hoste doceri—that is, that it is proper to learn even from a foe, such as the Vatican is to "free-born" Israel. We do not, as our readers well know, love the Papacy. Nay, we hate the system, though we may love the souls of the misguided men who uphold and believe in it, since Christ's salvation is for them as well as for all Israel. But we are glad to point to direct testimony such as we have here, unwitting blind evidence as it is, of the supremacy of the British among the nations; and that we are exerting an influence so dominant in its character, that even the prejudiced Pope can see and wish to use it for his own purposes.

Such a character, so powerful, so dominant, so leading, and commanding among the nations, is certainly the one the Word of God assigns to Israel in the latter days; and we are glad to recognise it even when the picture is drawn for us by the hostile hands of a Pope of Rome, and thus be sure that the British people are Israel of the Lost Ten Tribes, God's heritage and inheritance (Psa. ii. 8).

THE CIRCULATION OF THE BIBLE.

(Extract from the Graphic, April 26, 1879.)

FORWARDED BY DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW.

THE Printing Times says that the present century has witnessed the circulation of no fewer than 150,000,000 copies of the Bible. Of these the British and Foreign Society (founded 1804) have issued 82,000,000; the Hibernian Society, 4,189,000; the National Society of Scotland (1861), 4,768,000; the British Translation Society (1841), 3,200,000; the Trinitarian Society, 1,250,000; the American Society (1817), 35,000,000; the German Societies, 8,500,000; the Swiss, 2,000,000; the French, 1,600,000; the Dutch, 1,287,000; the Danish, 37,000; the Swedish, 1,000,000; and the Norwegian, 250,000; whilst the remainder have been issued by a few other organisations whose names are not given. The above estimate does not include those volumes issued by such institutions as are not primarily publishing societies, such as the Religious Tract Society, which last year issued 74,000 English Bibles and Testaments, and the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge, which circulates 250,000 copies annually. These and large numbers of private firms are allowed, however, as a set off against the separate issues of the Bibles and Testaments in the other societies, and it is assumed that the grand total thus arrived at is approximately correct.

Digitized by Google

A NEW WAY OF OPENING "OUR IDENTITY" TO BEGINNERS.

HITHERTO one has usually stated the case with an elaborate opening argument on the "Scriptural distinction between Israel and Judah." This is a mistake. The proceeding occupies too much time, and after all is not necessary to open the subject. This is better done in a clear, logical, forcible manner—very short, very exact, and perfectly unanswerable. The Rev. Mr. Hickson in his lecture, delivered at Riddings, in Derbyshire, on Monday, March 17th last, gave us a good example of this mode of reasoning. He said, "The theses of this theory were—(1stly), God cannot break His promises; (2ndly), He has made certain promises to the Hebrew people as a nation, and therefore cannot divert those promises to any nation not of Hebrew descent; and (3rdly), The exact counterpart of those promises is to be found in the present position of the Anglo-Saxon race. Wherefore it necessarily follows, since the first two propositions are accepted by all believers in the Bible, that the Anglo-Saxon race must be of Hebrew descent. That was the Anglo-Israel contention in a nutshell."

We believe the above will be found a very excellent method of introducing our Identity at lectures and general addresses. The distinction between Israel and Judah will of course follow, but it may be taken up quite as a subordinate point, independent of the reasoning which establishes our right to be considered the Lost Ten Tribes. God's promises to "Abraham and his seed for ever" are contained in Gen. xxii. 17, 18, also in many other similar Scriptures. These promises are inalienable, and were never, as a matter of fact, transferred or declared transferrable to any purely Gentile race whatever. Neither can they be for a moment in abeyance. "God is not a man that He should lie, nor the son of man that He should repent." "His gifts and calling are without repentance" (Numbers xxiii. 19; Rom. xi. 29). At this moment, and for hundreds of years past, this one nation only of all those on the face of the earth, possesses all, and lacks not one, of the promises God made "to Abraham and his seed for ever." So marked is the resemblance, that a Christian Jew, the Rev. J. C. S. Kroenig, the vicar of St. Barnabas, Hull, declares this nation is the "modern Israel," and that the "Identity is proved" (see BANNER, No. 110, et seq.). We may logically conclude, therefore, that the British are Hebrews. And as they certainly are not Jews, they must be Ephraim or the Lost House of Israel.

Q. E. D.

TESTIMONY FROM GRANTHAM OF SPIRITUAL GOOD DERIVED FROM BELIEF IN OUR IDENTITY.

WE have received from a believer in our Israelite origin at Grantham, the following acknowledgment of the good the subject has done to him:—"I cannot see," says this truly godly man, "how any one can read the Bible intelligently now without the help of the fact that we are the Lost Tribes. I love the Bible a great deal more since I have known we are God's chosen people set apart for a given work. Salvation is, indeed, for all men who believe in Christ; but my prayer is, 'Lord, remember Thine holy covenant and save the remnant of Thy people; for Thy glory and name's sake.'" The Identity thus has brought our friend—

1. To love his Bible as he never did before.

2. To recognise that he and his people are set apart for God's work.

3. To plead in prayer for his nation that God would give them "salvation."

4. To recognise that God's faithfulness, His glory, and His covenant with His people are involved in the issues of this great question.

Correspondence.

PSALM II. VERSE 8.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

SIR,—Mr. Clifford, in his pamphlet, "The Anglo-Saxons and the Israelites," accuses, as guilty of "hideous blasphemy," those who maintain that verse 8 of Psa. ii. means that the Father, at the request of the Son, gives the heathen and the uttermost parts of the earth to Israel. Let us look into the question a little and see whether we are not strictly justified in our views, and so remove the charge of blasphemy from ourselves.

The literal translation of the Hebrew, in which this Psalm was originally written, is as follows: "Ask of Me, and I shall give the heathen thine inheritance, and thy possession the uttermost parts (of) the earth." When this was translated into the Greek of the Septuagint, the word "thee" was introduced after "I shall give." As there is no "thee" in the Hebrew original, this word was most probably inserted by the translators because they could not make what appeared to them sense of the passage without the introduction of this pronoun "thee;" they evidently being under the impression that the gifts of "the heathen" and the "uttermost parts of the earth" were to be made to the Son just before mentioned. Our translators, with this idea in their heads, had to put the chapter into readable English, and to suit our idiom found it necessary to insert the preposition "for" before "thine inheritance" and "thy possession." Thus we get three words introduced into our translation not to be found in the original Hebrew in order to make the passage, with this idea, fit into readable idiomatic English.

Now let us take the passage as we find it literally translated from the Hebrew and put it into readable idiomatic English, without adding to or taking from the original, and see whether it is possible not only to make sense, but also to adhere strictly to the text. First, we will analyse the passage. There are two gifts to be made—"the heathen" and "the uttermost parts of the earth;" this is manifest and will hardly be disputed, because it would be nonsense to say the gifts are "thine inheritance" and "thy possession." Then these gifts are to be made to some recipient, or recipients; there being no others mentioned in the passage than "thine inheritance" and "thy possession," these must be the recipients. This being so, all that is required is to write the passage thus: "Ask of Me, and I shall give thine inheritance the heathen, and thy possession the uttermost parts (of) the earth." Here it will at once be seen we make sense of the passage without introducing any words not to be found in the original Hebrew, and also strictly adhere to the literal translation. This transposition of the words in the first sentence only is perfectly legitimate where the idiom of one language has to be rendered into the idiom of another. Where the dative case immediately follows the verb we know that the preposition is not needed; but where the object is interposed, as in our translation it is if the Hebrew is literally followed, it becomes necessary to insert the preposition "to" in order that the sentence may read agreeably in the English idiom. Probably Mr. Clifford may not approve of this explanation; but one thing, I think, is clear, there is no "hideous blasphemy" about it.

Yours obediently,

DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW.

14, Waverley-place, St. John's-wood,
May 27, 1879.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—I think that our friend E. J. Roberts in the BANNER of June 4, 1879, might rejoice with us and be glad rather than go seeking a champion to oppose Mr. Roberts, the Christadelphian, because the latter is only doing what God, by Hosea i. 10, said should come to pass. Mr. Roberts is as much under our heavenly Father's control as was Nebuchadnezzar when he put (what Mr. Roberts calls an interloper) Zedekiah on the throne over Judah. But for this, Nebuchadnezzar would no doubt have placed some of his own friends on the throne—just as Mr. Roberts would if he could have brought better proof that our most gracious Queen did not descend from King David. Is our most gracious Queen an interloper because her father was not king? Praise ye the Lord, say I, and also God save the Queen.

MATTHEW MARK.

Liverpool, June 5, 1879.

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements
(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O.O payable at Ludgate-circus.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed :—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

BANNER FREE CIRCULATION FUND.

Donations, applications for grants, to be addressed to R. Fergusson Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London.

NEW BOOKS AND NEW EDITIONS.

Price 6d., post free 7d.

THE ISRAELITISH ORIGIN OF THE ANGLO-SAXONS, IRISH, SCOTCH, AND WELSH. An Historical Proof, by THOMAS C. BALMER. CONTENTS:—Division of Solomon's Kingdom—Kingdom of Judah and Kingdom of Israel—History of the House or Kingdom of Israel—Proof that They were Never Restored—Their Idols, Religious Festivals, Conversion, &c., &c.—Israelitish Origin of the Ancient Britons, Irish, and Scotch—Traditional Account of Their Migration From the East—The Language and Religious Ceremonies Considered—Observations on the Future Restoration—Ultimate Destiny of the Holy Land.
London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

Now READY, price 2d., post free, 2½d.
NEW PAMPHLET BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

THE HISTORICAL, ETHNIC, AND PHILOLOGICAL ARGUMENTS in PROOF of BRITISH IDENTITY with the TEN LOST TRIBES OF ISRAEL, clearly and simply stated.
BY PHILO-ISRAEL.
CONTENTS:—Introduction—The Celts—Professor Rawlinson's Testimony—The Cymry—The Cimmerii—The Gimiri and Khumri—The Testimony of the Nimroud Obelisk—The Scythians—The Anglo-Saxons—Sharon Turner's Testimony—The Jutes and Angles—The Danes and the Normans—General Conclusions—Philology—The Welsh Language—The Rev. Canon Lysons' Testimony—Idiomatic Identity Between Hebrew and English—Tyndal's Testimony—The Tribe of Dan—The Irish Celts—Are the Continental Nations Israelites?—Conclusions—Appendix.
London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane; and Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Just out. Price 4d.

NEBUCHADNEZZAR'S DREAM and THE BRITISH EMPIRE. By Ephraim. With Illustrative Prophetic Map.
London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; Sold by W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

This day. Price 2d. Post free 2½d.

MANASSEH AND THE UNITED STATES. An important Essay delivered before the "Lost Israel Identification Society," by the Rev. Joseph Wild, D.D., at Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, New York.

CONTENTS:—The Fulness of the Gentiles set in—For whom did God intend America—The Origin of the United States—The Footsteps of Ephraim and Manasseh—The Will of Jacob made to Ephraim and Manasseh—Manasseh a People, and a Great People—Manasseh's Birthtime of Separation—Out of nearly Sixty Conquered Colonies the only one England ever Lost was that of Manasseh (America)—The Great Seal of the United States—Manasseh was brought up at the Door of the Pyramid, &c., &c.
London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.; and of any Bookseller.

SOME of PHILO-ISRAEL'S papers, as they have appeared in THE BANNER, will be separately published from time to time in the form of Letters, for distribution.
No. 1. "The Identity of the British with Lost Israel."
No. 2. "The Glory of God."
No. 3. "An Address to British Soldiers.' (Now ready.)
No. 4. "An Address to British Sailors." (Now ready.)
Others will follow. Price One and Sixpence per 100; less quantities in proportion: postage extra.
Apply to R. Banks, 5 Racquet-court, Fleet-street. Also all Booksellers and Publishers.

PUBLIC ANNOUNCEMENTS.

CARD OF MEMBERSHIP FOR ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATIONS.
The New Card of Membership is now ready. Prices in quantities, 4d. each; single copies, 7½d. post free. Supplied to the Metropolitan, Bristol and Clifton, Huddersfield, and other Associations. It is highly commended by many of the leading advocates of the Identity movement. Apply, Geo. W. Staniland, Castle-street, Sheffield, England, Hon. Sec. Sheffield Anglo-Israel Association.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION. Temporary office: 20, Warwick-lane, London, E.C. This Association is prepared to send out experienced and well QUALIFIED GENTLEMEN to LECTURE on the subject of "The Identity of the British Race with the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel." The terms are such as involve no liabilities as to loss, &c. Upon those needing their services—which are not restricted to the Metropolitan area—all applications as to the Lecturers, Subjects, &c., to be made to the Hon. Sec., JAMES BILLINGTON, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

HASTINGS AND ST. LEONARDS ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION, Auxiliary to the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association.

President:—
Lieut.-Col. W. H. LARKINS, Dymock, Ore.
Treasurer:—
Mr. COULTHWAITE, St. Andrew's Schools.
Hon. Secretaries:—
Mr. B. SARGENT, 37, London Road, St. Leonards.
Mr. J. B. MITCHELL, 52, St. Andrew's Road, Hastings.
Committee:—
Messrs. WHITEMAN, W. DUNGEY, KENT, PRYOR, R. GREEN.

New and Revised Edition, Price 6d. Cloth boards, 1s.

THE "NEW OLD STORY," with an Introduction to a Marvellous Puzzle. The Story gives a sketch of the History of the Hebrews, shewing distinctly the difference between the Two Nations, Judah and Israel, the latter being the British. The Story also tells of the Great Pyramid, and explains how its wonderful meaning can be, as it is only understood by measurement. An Appendix explains "The Eastern Question." The Story is written with great simplicity, and interests young children. By A E I, Author of "The Answer to the Eastern Question."
W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

Now ready price 7s., post free 6d. extra.

THE SECOND VOLUME OF THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.
EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.
This volume contains a large number of articles on our Identity with Lost Israel, by the best and most learned writers on the subject. Also many interesting papers on the Great Pyramid by Professor Piazzi Smyth, F.R.S.E., Astronomer-Royal for Scotland, Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A., Major H. A. Tracey, R.A., Charles Horner, Esq., and others.
London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

Price 1d.; post free, 1½d.

GOD'S LOVE FOR ISRAEL, A GUARANTEE THAT HE WILL FULFIL HIS PROMISES TO ISRAEL. By JOHN GILDER SHAW.

Price 6d.; or with illustrative map, 8d.

BRITAIN (OR ISRAEL) THE FIFTH AND LAST, AND THE UNCONQUERABLE EMPIRE. By JOHN GILDER SHAW.

Price 3d.; post free, 3½d.

CHRONOLOGICAL CHART OF BRITISH VICTORIES OVER THE CONTINENTAL POWERS, ranging from the battle of Cressy (1346), to our last victory, the taking of Sebastopol, Sept. 8, 1855. Arranged by J. G. SHAW, of Leeds.
"We trust Mr. Shaw's labour in preparing this paper may be appreciated by the public and be largely sold."—Banner of Israel.
London: Published by Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; and may be had of the Author, 20 Park-row, Leeds, and of all booksellers.

THE GREAT PYRAMID. NOW READY, PHILO-ISRAEL'S NEW WORK, 56 pages, Illustrated with Diagrams, price 4d., post free 5d.

OUR IDENTITY WITH THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. By PHILO-ISRAEL. Price 4d. Third Thousand (reprinted from the Clifton Chronicle).

PHOTOGRAPHIC PORTRAITS OF PHILO-ISRAEL, Editor of THE BANNER OF ISRAEL, Author of "The History of the House of Israel," &c., &c. Cabinet, 2s., post free; Carte-de-Visites, 1s., post free.
London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

ARE THE ENGLISH PEOPLE THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL? By PHILO-ISRAEL. Price 4d.
London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

BOOKS, ETC.

This day is published, 8vo., cloth gilt, price 3s. 6d. post free.

A DISSERTATION ON THE CELESTIAL SIGN OF THE RAINBOW
In connection with
THE SACRED "OATH OF THE SEVENTH," BEING
An Exposition of its Expansive Significance in accordance with the Teaching of TRANSCENDENTAL MASONRY.

BY PROTEUS.

"The publication is designed to be a dissertation on the celestial sign of the rainbow, in connection with the sacred 'Oath of the Seventh' in accordance with the teaching of Transcendental Masonry. It is full of cabalistic lore and mythologic suggestion, but at the same time it contains and popularises a large share of polyglot learning, to appreciate which one need not belong to the craft. Even as a dictionary of root words and root tracing the dissertation is both educative and interesting."—Freeman's Journal.
"As Freemasons we are always bound to be tolerant and trusting, no less than open to conviction, and friendly to free discussion, and we, therefore, note the appearance of a class of literature, remarkable in itself."—Freemason.
Dublin: Hodges, Foster, and Figgis, Publishers to the University.
London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

Now Ready. Price 3d.

THE WIMBLEDON ANGLO-ISRAEL DEBATE. A verbatim Report of the Debate held at Emmanuel Church, Wimbledon, on Thursday, June 5th, 1879, containing the speeches delivered by Colonel Sandwith, Rev. Bourchier Wrey Savile, Rev. J. W. Wilkinson, Rev. C. W. Hickson, Mr. Frank White, Mr. Douglas A. Onslow, J.P., Rev. S. Garrett, Rev. F. R. A. Glover, and the Rev. H. E. Brook.
London: Issued by the "Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association;" and published by W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

"THE MERCHANTS OF TARSHISH"—ENGLAND, AMERICA, AND RUSSIA, IN THE LAST WAR (Ezek. xxxviii., xxxix). By the Rev. SAMUEL MINTON, M.A. Price 6d.
Elliot Stock, 62, Paternoster-row.

TO AUTHORS. Authors desirous of issuing Works or Pamphlets on the great and increasingly interesting Question of the Identity of the Lost Ten Tribes with the British Nation, should first communicate with Robert Banks, of Racquet-court, Fleet-street, who has already been honoured by issuing, amongst others, the following works on the subject:
The Banner of Israel. Weekly 1d.; monthly 7d.
The Nation's Glory Leader. Weekly 1d.; quarterly 1s. 4d.
The Pillar of Witness. By late Captain Tracey. Cloth 2s. 6d.; paper 1s. 6d. (second edition).
The Anglo-Israel Post Bag. By Bishop Titcomb. Cloth 2s. 6d.; paper 1s. 6d. (second edition).
The History of the House of Israel. By Philo-Israel. Cloth 1s.; paper 6d. (sixth thousand).
The Great Pyramid of Egypt. Fifty-two pages, with three illustrations. Price 4d. (10,000).
The New Old Story. By A E I. Cloth 1s.

Why be Deaf when you may hear?
Take the help to you brought near.

DEAFNESS. Noises in the Ears! Medicine! Trumpets! Food! and Vigorous Health! The Rev. E. J. SILVERTON will send his Health Advocate, giving important advice and particulars on the above subjects, free to any person, showing how Deafness and other diseases may be at once relieved and ultimately cured. Thousands of persons are being benefited by these means. The Medicine for curing Deafness has usually been sold in boxes at 11s. each. It is now offered in boxes at 2s. 6d.; if stamps, 2s. 8d. The Trumpet for 12s., is now offered for 9s. 6d.—Of every Chemist, and all wholesale London Houses, or direct from the Rev. E. J. SILVERTON, Albert House, Park-street, Nottingham (Pastor of Exeter Hall Church).

WOOLS! WOOLS! WOOLS! Cheapest and Best. White and Black Berlin, Single and Double, 3s. 6d. per pound. Best quality Ice Wools, all Colours, 5½. per ounce ball. All other Wools at proportionate prices. Shetland, Andalusian, Fleecy, and Bonne Mere Wools. Welsh, Scotch, Peacock Victoria, and other Yarns. Crewel Filoselle Silk. M. WHELLENS, Wholesale and Retail Wool Warehouse, 3, 5, & 6, QUEEN'S TERRACE, CAMDEN ROAD, LONDON.
Send for Price List and Sampler, which will be forwarded free on application.

LADIES' SILK SCARVES, price 1s. The choicest Silk Scarf ever offered. All Colours; richly brocaded ends. Send stamps for a sample.
M. WHELLENS, 5 & 6, Queen's-terrace, Camden-road, London, N.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, 5, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, JUNE 25, 1879. [All Rights Reserved.]

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. III. No. 131. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, JULY 2, 1879. [DOUBLE NUMBER, TWOPENCE.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
The Ruling Race	261
"In the Place Where it was Said to Them, 'Ye Are Not My People,' There," Etc...	262
Judy on the Afghan "Gates."	263
Report of the Preliminary Meeting of the Perth British-Israel Association	264
Anglo-Israel Truth—The Fulfilment of Old Testament Symbology. By J. Catterall. Part II.	265
Progress in Italy	265
The Jews of To-day	265
The Rev. Dr. Parker Upon Israel's New Gate, &c.	266
The Former and the Latter Days. By the Rev. A. B. Grimaldi, M.A.	267
Is Paul Also Among the Blasphemers? By L. P.	267
Caiaphas' Prophecy	268
Confirmations from Allahabad, North India, South Australia, &c.	269
The Editor of Life from the Dead	270
Corroborations by the Way	270
The Chosen People. A Lecture by John T. Gott—Part VII.	271
"The Refuter," Mr. R. Roberts, Answered. By C. H.	272
The Times on Israel's Heathen Empire	272
Israel's Battles.—No. XIX.—The Battle of Talavera	273
Reviews	274
Correspondence	276

THE RULING RACE.

WE ask our opponents, and especially the three Bristol clergy who oppose us—namely, the Rev. Messrs. J. B. Clifford, S. A. Walker, and R. Cornall—men who stigmatise us as "blasphemous," "anti-Christ," and what not, for asserting that the British are Israel—to answer us two plain questions as in the sight of God.

1. To what race does God's Word assign the proud position of "Ruler over many nations," but never of subservience to the foreigner, provided only they be obedient to God's commands?

2. What nation at the present day exactly responds to the facts above stated—namely, that they "rule over many nations, but that the said nations never rule over them?"

To the first question, the above opponents, being men of truth, must answer in the words of Deut. xv. 6, and xxviii. 13, that the promise was made to Israel of the Twelve Tribes only, but to a Gentile people NEVER!

To the second, the consent of mankind responds that the British, and they alone, have been—since their Reformation certainly—"rulers over many nations, but subject to any foreign ruler NEVER." We ask these gentlemen, our opponents, to account for this. They deny our Israelite Identity. How have we then acquired a blessing given by the Lord to Israel-obedient only? Our opponents are bound to explain this phenomenon! We are, on our parts, quite ready to stake our origin on this one single Identification only. We believe it will bear us through triumphantly! Let our opponents try their skill in unseating us from our position. They may do it in two ways. First, by proof that the Word of God gives to Gentiles, such as they say the British are, this peculiar privilege of Israel's, temporarily, or for ever. Secondly, by showing we are wrong in declaring that the British alone "rule over many nations, but are never dominated by the foreign alien." We believe and know in both these points our opponents must fail! Nowhere in the British, Hebrew, or Greek Bible will be found a promise conferring on the Gentiles, qua Gentiles, any such a gift as that in question. We are sure they cannot find by careful search any such nation as the British which rules over many Gentile races, but has no ruler of the alien races domineering over even so much as one single village of the British folk! What said the Times on July 10th, 1876?

"There is no Englishman in any part of the world kept subject to a foreign Power." "We British alone among the nations of the world do not know what it is to feel that our kinsmen are the unwilling subjects of the foreigner. France, Holland, Denmark, Italy, even Germany, know this." On the other hand, over what races do the British rule? Over sixteen nations of Hindoos in India; over a million of Frenchmen in Canada and in the Mauritius; over Dutchmen and Germans at the Cape; over Caffres, Hottentots, and Africans in the land of Ham (not Canaan); over Chinese in Hong-Kong and Singapore; over Spaniards in Gibraltar; Italians and Levantines in Malta; over Greeks, Asiatics, and Turks in Cyprus; over Jews, Parsees, Arabians, and North Africans at Aden; over Cingalese in Ceylon; native Blacks in Australia; Maoris at New Zealand; Malays and Dyaks in Borneo; Red Indians in Canada; over various nationalities in the Falklands and St. Helena; and over Burmese and Peguans in British Burmah, over Russians in Canada, &c., &c.

If all this be not a literal fulfilment of the glorious blessings given to Israel obedient only, by her God in Deut. xv. 6, we know not what language means! Let our opponents explain their position! If we be really Gentiles, then has God forgotten His promise; and righteously failing to bless the disobedience of Judah-Israel, has bodily granted the very same blessings to disobedient British Gentiles, contrary both to the express words addressed to His people Israel, and contrary also to His antecedent unconditional covenants with His friend "Abraham and his seed for ever."

Our opponents are on the horns of this terrible dilemma, and they must make their choice on which they desire to be impaled! Either by their views they must admit the British, blessed with Israel's blessings, are "Lost Israel found" and now obedient; or, God has forgotten His promise, been faithless to His oath, and blessed a degenerate Gentile people called the Anglo-Saxons with a stupendous benison, unique in its character, universal and world-wide in its effects and incidence, which makes them "rulers over many nations, ruled over by none," although He promised His friend Abraham, unconditionally, that, "blessing, He would bless him" and "his seed FOR EVER" (Gen. xxii. 17, Luke i. 55).

Digitized by Google

We beg now to quote, for the benefit of our Bristol clerical opponents, the words of a fellow-townsman of their own, Mr. Elisha S. Robinson, J.P., a British merchant highly respected, as they well know, in Bristol, who has travelled much, seen and noted in foreign parts the real condition of British and foreign races, and now at a meeting of the Baptist Missionary Society, held in Bristol on May 21st, 1879, came forward to bear his testimony to the value of the mission work done by his denomination in British India as he has lately seen it with his own eyes. He said, inter alia,—

India has a population ruled over by the British of certainly not less than 200,000,000 people. I believe there are half a million of towns and villages included in British rule. One thing that has struck me very much in my travels, is—what I have long suspected—that the Anglo-Saxon race, to which we belong, is destined to rule, and to rule over a much larger population than we have under our sway at present. There is a sort of instinct, somehow or other, in the Anglo-Saxon race—in Englishmen—to rule; and go wherever you will—among Asiatics, Africans, Lascars, and men of different tribes, denominations, and nations—you will see Britons at the top of the tree. THE BRITON RULES THEM ALL: IT SEEMS INSTINCTIVE IN HIM. It is the instinct of this nation; it is the instinct of the Anglo-Saxon race, and we must realise it and recognise our responsibility in a larger and higher degree than we have done. It is no good dreading it; it is no good shirking it; we as a nation, we Britons, are bound—I was going to say condemned, but I will substitute the milder term—it is our duty, as it is our privilege, in the interest of humanity, civilisation, and Christianity, it is our destiny—TO RULE OVER FAR MORE MILLIONS OF PEOPLE THAN WE DO AT PRESENT, THOUGH WE NOW RULE OVER ONE-FIFTH THE HUMAN RACE.

Let our Bristol clergy note Mr. Elisha Smith Robinson's testimony! He suspects—

1. That the Anglo-Saxon race is destined to rule over a larger population than even at present! Was Mr. Robinson thinking of Israel's destiny as described in Dan. vii. 27?

2. He declares the Briton is the ruler go where you will. "Asiatics, Africans, Lascars, men of different tribes, denominations, and nations—Britons are at the top of the tree" among them all!

Surely Mr. Robinson had Israel's promises, as detailed in Deut. xv. 6, xxviii. 13, before him when he said these words! Yet we venture to state the speaker had not the slightest notion he was in the above giving "blind testimony" to our Israelite origin, and will be very much surprised when he reads this issue of the BANNER, to find that he has innocently been proving our Hebrew origin, and thus, according to the Rev. J. B. Clifford, has joined dangerously and too closely the company of the "hideous blasphemers," whose fate is likely to be Korah's, Dathan's, and Abiram's (see Rev. J. B. Clifford's Anglo-Saxons and the Israelites, p. 36).

Reader, let us thank God for our "blind witnesses!" They bring confusion to the ranks of our clerical and other opponents; they drive the wedge of the knowledge of our Identity far and firmly into the heart of God's people—the British-Lo-Ammi-Israelites; and will ere long, by God's blessing, raise in this dear old England of ours the glorious "Hallelujah chorus" of "Praise the Lord, for His mercy endureth for ever," and for His truth to the Lost House of Israel! Let our opponents do their worst! We can afford to smile at their efforts to frustrate the counsels of our God, who, having "raised us up," will cause us now to live in His sight" (Hosea vi. 2).

NOTE.—The Conservative Bristol Times and Mirror, commenting on the views of a Liberal and Liberationist such as Mr. Elisha Smith Robinson is, glories over him in the following way:—

Mr. Robinson, in his description of how the Briton is looked up to everywhere, literally exults in the dominant race, and almost implies that our heaven-born mission is to rule the whole human family, and in ruling to elevate and benefit them. We know nothing like the few touches which he gives of the evidence of the Englishman's supremacy wherever he goes, save the well-known passage in Eothen, where Kinglake tells us how the people of Cairo cleared the way for him as he rode through its narrow streets on a donkey, the donkey-boy shrieking all the time to the populace as he galloped along, "Eh! Sheik, Eh, Bint—reggelek—shumalek! O, old man, O, virgin, get out of the way on the right. O, virgin, O, old man, get out of the way on the left—this Englishman comes, he comes, he comes!" We can almost fancy our friend, Elisha Smith Robinson, not on a donkey, but on a dashing Arab steed, making his progress with equal effect through any number of the half a million towns and villages of Hindostan of which he speaks. We may depend upon it, he is made of the right ruling stuff, and if he had returned, not merely home, but to a seat in the House of Commons, and Earl Beaconsfield had asked for supplies to conquer, not Zululand alone, but all Africa—not merely to purchase the Suez Canal, but to appropriate Egypt itself—he might count on Mr. Robinson's vote in his present dominant mood and with his profound conviction that it is for the happiness of the whole human race, Kaffir and Zulu included, to be taken under the broad ægis of enlightened England.

"IN THE PLACE WHERE IT WAS SAID TO THEM, 'YE ARE NOT MY PEOPLE,' THERE," ETC.

WHERE is that place? Who is that people? Who says of this "people," so apostrophised, that they are "not" God's people? and what is the character, at the very time when the occurrence takes place, of this so villified a race? If we answer these questions in the order stated, we think a very remarkable result will be arrived at. Let us see to it. "The people" mentioned in the passage of Scripture, we quote (Hosea i. 10), are "God's people," the Ten Tribes of Israel. There is no manner of doubt respecting that fact. They are not Judah, they are not Gentiles pure. They must therefore be "the Lost Ten Tribes."

Where is the "place" in which the words are spoken? The "place" is indicated in 2 Sam. vii. 10. It is God's "appointed place for My people Israel," where once located, they are "to move no more;" where foot of foreign foe never treads; "a place of Israel's "own," where no sons of wickedness ever can or shall approach. It is the "wilderness" (Hosea ii. 14), where the Lord will "speak comfortably" to the heart of the poor "wandering" one, who has been "allured" there by her Lord, and re-married in faith, (Hosea ii. 14, 20) under grace. It is the "Isles of the sea," or "West," where Israel is "to sing" (Isa. xxiv. 14, 15); and that spot commentators and modern divines tell us is undoubtedly THE BRITISH ISLANDS. "The place," therefore, is this our own home! The people alluded to (being Israel)—who are they among modern races? Why, who but the inhabitants of these "isles of the West," the Anglo-Saxon, Celtic, British? But who are those who say of this people, that "they are not God's people"—that is, NOT Israel? We answer readily, the Rev. John Wilkinson, a friend of Israel, has said it! The Rev. R. Cornall, a Protestant Incumbent of the Church of England, has said it! A nameless Christian minister of Leeds, of the so-called Catholic Apostolic Church of Edward Irving, has said it! The Rev. S. A. Walker, a strong anti-Romanist, and one of God's own sons, writing to the Rock newspaper, repeated it. Philalethes, Mr. J. C. McClellan, the Rev. J. B. Clifford, and others, in separate publications, indirectly reiterated it. Mr. William Bathgate, of Liverpool, has said the very words as Scripture has it. The burden of all their separate cries was and is, "These British are NOT God's people Israel" Have our readers noticed how exactly, and perfectly literally, the very titles of the works of these opponents were repetitions of Hosea's own words? We quote them below, and we think our readers will mark here more than mere "coincidences."

Digitized by Google

1. What was the title of our first pronounced opponent's pamphlet, the Rev. John Wilkinson—the original Philo-Israel, or "friend of Israel?" It was "Englishmen NOT Israelites," the very words of Hosea i. 10: "Ye are NOT My people."

2. The Rev. R. Cornall followed, and his brochure was called "The British Nation NOT Identical with the Lost Ten Tribes." God's Word again repeated!

3. "Clericus," the "Christian minister," followed suit, and his work is called "The English Nation NOT the House of Israel." Here Hosea's prophecy, descriptive of the title of the opponents' attacks, was accurately and involuntarily followed in the very words! "NOT My people, shall be said," Hosea predicted. "These English are NOT the House of Israel," said Clericus, and also the clerical fulfillers of the prophecy, his co-adjutors!

4. Mr. W. Bathgate, a layman of Liverpool, has published a pamphlet in that city, which only reached us on May 2nd, 1879. The title of it is "The British Nation, &c., NOT Descended from the Ten 'Lost' Tribes of Israel." In each of the four cases let it be noted that the writers drew especial attention to their own fulfilments of the prophecy by printing the word "NOT" in capitals, thus drawing attention to Hosea i. 10, where the point lies in the fact of the "hidden Israelites" being described by men as Lo-Ammi (NOT His people), while the fact was all the time they were God's own Ammi—that is, "His people."

Philalethes and Mr. McClellan chose titles for their opposition booklettes which, if not in the exact words prescribed, followed them closely. The lady (Philalethes) declared "Philo-Israel (was) answered." Mr. McClellan proclaimed "the pernicious nature of Anglo-Israelism fully exposed." These were only paraphrases of the prophecy that "the British are NOT God's people." So literally true is the fulfilment of a wonderful text!

But we have yet another question to ask. What was to be the character at the very time of the occurrence of this virulent opposition, of this so villified a race?

The Word of God tells us. The people declared to be by the opponents "NOT God's people," are, at that same time, or soon after, to be recognised by the whole world in a two-fold aspect, as—

1. Miraculously multitudinous.
2. "The Christian nation."

So says Hosea i. 10. "Yet the number of the children of Israel shall be as the sand of the sea, which cannot be measured or numbered; and it SHALL come to pass, that in the place where it was" (Heb., shall be) "said to them, Ye are NOT My people, there it SHALL be said unto them, THE SONS OF THE LIVING GOD!" Reference to John i. 12; 1 John iii. 1; Rom. viii. 14—19; Phil. ii. 15, prove to us that a people who are "sons of the living God" are true believers in the Lord Jesus Christ, and a nation of such believers must be par excellence "a Christian nation," ipso facto.

The testimony of mankind is perfectly clear and undisputed, that the British people, as a race, are at this very moment exactly fulfilling both these prophetic requirements. We are fecund as a nation beyond compare; and the national Protestant Christianity of the British is proverbial, and proved by their world-wide character. To that very people's claim, to be recognised as Israel, there has arisen in our own very recent times the most bitter, biting, uncharitable, unchristian, violent, virulent opposition. It has been led by the clergy, by the good and by the holy; and the burden of their united cry is, "the British are NOT God's people:" the ipsissima verba of the prophecy being used by the opponents in total ignorance of what they were doing, in fulfilment of an attempt (like Isaac's), to defeat God's will; and yet in strict conformity with His declared purpose as to how the daring attempt should be made by their misguided zeal! Reader, let us no longer marvel at the wonderful acrimony of the opposition, nor think some strange thing is happening to us! It is but God's will we are suffering, and this is only a fresh Identity. Our opposing brethren, in their blind rage, are only doing what Paul thought he was about—viz., "doing God service"—when he went to execute his persecuting task near Damascus. But suddenly, the Lord spoke to him, and all was changed. So we trust our now bitter opponents, Messrs. Clifford, Cornall, Walker, McClellan, Philalethes, and the rest, may have the scales removed from their angry eyes even as St. Paul had from his; and "seeing" as we "see," may praise the Lord when they finally discover what we know to-day—namely, that the multitudinous, Lo-Ammi, Christian race, whom they so persistently declare are "NOT His people," are, after all, God's own AMMI, His chosen, His heritage, His inheritance, His people, ISRAEL! Oh, may that day soon come! May the Lord forgive the bitterness of our opponents, and make them, NOW BLIND, ONLY TO SEE!

"JUDY" ON THE AFGHAN "GATES."

WE hope our readers have seen the cartoon in Judy, June 4, 1879. It is worth their while to get it and study it, for it "blindly" speaks Identity in every line of the clever engraving! The subject of the drawing is "SHUT OUT;"—Russia "shut out" from British India, and from access through the "Afghan Gates" into that territory from Central Asia! The author of this capital idea could not conceive of a better way to depict the Khyber, Kuram Valley, and Michni Passes than by drawing a huge GATE in the middle of a solid wall of rock. This Gate has two leaves, giving thus the idea of "The Gates." The pair of doors has written on it in large letters, "BRITISH INDIA," and its hasp secured by an enormous padlock (marked "Treaty with Afghanistan") is tight locked, the KEY being presented on bended knee, in the far distance on an island, by Lord Beaconsfield to his liege lady and Queen, the seated mistress of the ocean, "Britannia," who "rules the waves." But the chief interest of the story centres not only in "The Gates," but in a figure of a burly Russian soldier, accompanied by a bear. Both intended to pass through those barred and locked-up "Gates;" but alas! their approach and ingress was utterly stayed by those provoking Gates, now closed and locked by the recent treaty! The Russian officer stands, therefore, a picture of mortified, "checkmated" ambition "SHUT OUT!" The bear, equally non-plussed, stands "nose to ground," sniffing under the door itself, trying to see or smell out what bars the way, and why he cannot enter by what was lately an "open road." Too late! Too late! The treaty is made! Britannia, being Israel, has entered on "possession of her enemies'" (the Russo-Afghans') "GATES," and the doors are closed, the locks are turned, the way is barred, and Abraham's seed, according to the promise, has acquired the firm hold, and right, in those Gates which time never again can sever (Gen. xxii. 17). The picture finishes the tale by showing us the rising sun of "Peace" depicted in the far distance in the Eastern seas; and we really do not know which to admire the most—Britannia's grateful look of admiration at her servant, the key-bearer's smiling, radiant, coronetted face, or the angry, disappointed scowl of the military Russ, foiled of his purpose (the bear being in the same sad plight), or the grim reality of the locked-up, massive British GATES, once Afghan, now, for all time, the "possession" of our race, because we are God's heritage Israel, His chosen ones, the seed of Abraham, the Hebrews (Deut. ix. 26, 29; Isa. xix. 25, xli. 9; Gen. xxii. 17).

Digitized by Google

REPORT OF THE PRELIMINARY MEETING OF THE PERTH BRITISH-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

A NUMBER of gentlemen, believers in our Israelitish origin, met in the Mason's Hall, Parliament-close, on Thursday night, for the purpose of considering the formation of an Anglo-Israel Association for Perth.

Mr. D. Fraser, lithographer, at once the senior member in point of years and in Identity knowledge, was called to the chair.

The meeting was opened by the chairman leading in devotional exercises, after which he gave a most interesting account of how he became acquainted with the question of our Israelitish origin, when quite a boy, through a then very-old man, and so far as he knew, before any book had been written on the subject, he had for many years looked upon the old man's story as merely a tradition; and yet it had made such an impression upon his mind that he could not shake off the conviction that there was a ground-work of truth in it, and the more he had studied the Bible in that light, just so much the more was he convinced of the truth of both. He then went on to show that the late Rev. John Willison, of Dundee, of hallowed memory, must have been of the same opinion in regard to our descent, and referred to his writings in support of this, where he traces and attributes the rise of Christianity in this country to the Culdees, a godly people who founded a faith almost identical with our Presbyterianism, and prior to the existence of the corrupt Church of Rome.

The Chairman then called upon Mr. A. D. Johnman, insurance agent, the convener of the meeting, to introduce the business of the evening, who, having read letters of apology for absence from several gentlemen, amongst which was one very encouraging note from a Presbyterian clergyman, who had thrown aside professional prejudice, and had gone into the study of this important and interesting subject, then said:—

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen,—I fancy you will expect me to say something in vindication of my conduct in calling you together here to-night. I understand that all here present are, in some measure, at least, conversant with the subject of our Identity with the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel, and consequently I do not consider it at all necessary, even were I able, to open any discussion as to the proof of that—which, I am happy to believe, is with most of us a settled question. Nor is that the object of our meeting; our business rather is, as stated in the circular of the promoters, "to consider the formation of an Anglo-Israel Association for this city." And, I take it, should we succeed thus far, the objects we have in forming such an association will be—

(1) Our own culture in this particular subject, through the united study of God's eternal truth.

(2) The systematic distribution of Identity literature; and

(3) The arrangement of popular lectures by talented Christian gentlemen (clergymen and others) able to speak to the subject in a manner that will not fail to bring conviction to the hearts and minds of those who may hear them. In short, our aim will be the dissemination of the glorious truth, that it hath pleased God to reveal to us, in His own good time and way, that we are indeed the long-lost children of Israel—the erring, backsliding, stiff-necked, rebellious people no doubt; but all the same, the peculiar, chosen people of God—that God who "slumbers not, nor sleeps," but who of His long-suffering mercy, has been watching, and guiding, and leading, as if by the hand, His people Israel through all their vicissitudes, during all these generations, "leading the blind by a way they knew not." It seems now to be a fact conceded by all Christian students of Scripture history and prophecy, as well as by the Jewish authorities and profane historians, that the Ten Tribes have never yet returned from the Assyrian captivity to possess their own land, and that they have not, since their revolt, re-united with Judah (or the Jews), and that they are not now assimilated with them; that, though lost, they are not annihilated—that they still exist as a nation, and must shortly be found, when they are to unite with Judah their brethren, and return together to possess the land promised to their fathers. So much, then, being conceded, is it not reasonable—is it not duty—that we should make diligent search after, that haply we might find them? This is exactly what we have been doing; inter alia, we have searched the Word of God for the marks of His lost ones that we might be guided to a successful issue. We have studied their history and wanderings, and we have marked the predictions and prophecies regarding them. We have laid these alongside the history and prospects and characteristics of our own "highly-favoured" nation, and we have been compelled to believe that we have indeed found the objects of our search. And all the more are we confirmed in our faith since the Identity has been offered (by blinded explorers) to almost every conceivable race under the sun, and there have not any people been found within the range of the known world who bear the marks of the "lost sheep" but our own. Such being the case, gentlemen, is it not to be expected that we should show a desire to unite in proclaiming the glorious result of our search to the nations, especially our own? This, gentlemen, I am convinced, is the alone subject, by the blessing of God, which is destined to remodel or reform our social, ecclesiastical, and political life. Yes, brethren! this is the panacea for all our social, civil, and religious evils, misunderstandings, and wrongs, as we shall then be brought to see eye to eye in all things. Being of God and to His glory, it shall at once invest the popular mind with faith in the reality and personality of the living and true God (Father, Son, and Spirit), and with a due and lasting sense of the authenticity, authority, and inspiration of His Word. Yes, gentlemen, this, I am convinced, is the subject which is destined to usher in the latter-day glory—which is to bring the individual to accept the finished work of Jesus Christ for his own salvation, and all nations to bow in adoration and praise at His feet—which is to hasten the time when nations shall no longer study the art of war—when one will not need to instruct his brother, saying, "Know the Lord," for then "all shall know Him"—when nations shall be born to Him in a day, and when Jesus shall "see of the travail of His soul and shall be satisfied." With these remarks, I shall now proceed to read to you the correspondence I have had relative to the formation of an Anglo-Israel Association for the city and county of Perth.

After the convener had read a number of letters he had received from various parts of the country, notably from Captain Webster, of Stirling, relative to the formation of an association, the chairman invited all present to give expression to their ideas on the subject before them, when a very agreeable conversation ensued, in the course of which Mr. J. Wilson remarked that when quite a boy he had an intuitive feeling that there must be something peculiar about this nation that God had blessed it so, and explained that a legend told him by an old woman about the prophet Jeremiah having escaped to this country had led him to think seriously of the matter and prepared him to accept the fact of our origin, when Mr. Hine's work on our Identity with Israel came into his hands. He also referred to the universally acknowledged fact that this special favour was on account of our Protestant Christianity, and no doubt it was. At the same time there was something behind and beyond that, and he rather thought we were first a Christian-Protestant nation, because we are God's chosen, peculiar people Israel, preserved by His covenant and oath.

Ultimately, the following motion was unanimously adopted—viz., "That this meeting resolves to form a British-Israel Association for the city and county of Perth, and that a committee be appointed to frame rules and arrange for the delivery of two lectures on the subject, kindly offered by the Rev. James Billington, hon. sec. of the Metropolitan Association." This concluded the business, and the meeting was closed by Mr. J. Davidson leading in prayer.

Digitized by Google

PROGRESS IN ITALY.

We are glad to hear and record the fact that in one of the Free Italian Evangelical congregations in Italy, about a dozen members, with their rev. pasteur, are firm believers in "Inghilterra Israele." "One evening lately, at a united meeting of Waldensian converts and Italian Evangelicals, the pastor proposed and offered prayer for the speedy recognition and restoration of Israel, and for Christ's reign on earth." We wish we could see work like this in Israel's own congregations here in her own land. But Italian Christians (being Gentiles joined to Israel) see us as we are, and pray for the speedy recognition of the "Inghilterra Israele." The worthy and learned pasteur in question, we heard, lately forwarded to our beloved Queen, while at Baveno, a poem, accompanied by a letter, asking her "if she knew that the good news of Israel's recovery was already rejoiced over in Italy, and congratulating Her Majesty on being descended from the House of David!" The poem thus sent is now under publication in an Italian journal, and has for its subject, "The Reign of Christ." It deals "with the 47 Identifications of the British with Israel—describes Iona as the refuge of the 'Dove,' Ephraim, with the two days' burial and third day resurrection of Israel, typified in our Lord's three days' burial and glorious resurrection from the grave," &c., &c. On the whole, the account we have just received from our friends in Italy tells of progress there, and of preparation for the coming times when Jer. xxxiii. 9 will be fulfilled! Well may Israel of the Isles be thankful, and praise the Lord for this and all the other "good news" we are constantly receiving of our cause's advance, not only in "the nation and company of nations" belonging to Israel, but also as in this case from Gentile Italy, where Israel's discovery and restoration are subjects for heartfelt rejoicing.

THE JEWS OF TO-DAY.

From the Spectator of Oct. 12, 1878, we take the following:—

"The dread which the Jews are awakening in Eastern Europe almost equals the dread felt for them in Western Europe 600 years ago, and is based on the same grounds. They display a talent for accumulation with which Christians cannot compete, and which tends to make of them an ascendant caste. It is gravely asserted in the Roumanian Parliament that the true difficulty in the way of allowing them the equal rights which were secured by the Treaty of Berlin, is the certainty entertained by Roumanians and Servians that they would gradually oust the peasantry, till they possessed the whole land.

"In Hungary it is asserted, even in Reuter's telegrams, that they have purchased so many estates as to make an alteration in the constitution needful, and in Germany literature is full of the success of the Jews in ousting the ancient families. Their remarkable success in politics, and their instinct for acquiring pecuniary control of the press, are observed in all free countries, and have recently called forth pamphlets, and even books, penetrated with a most energetic hate. Considering that 100 years ago the Jews were a despised caste, their rise into a dreaded order has been singularly rapid; too rapid, we imagine, for them to be perfectly safe in their new position.

"The explanation of their success is, we presume, that their peculiar capacity exactly suits the conditions of modern life, and their best defence would be this, that in the country where they are most perfectly free, France, they are least hated or distrusted.

"In England their conduct in reference to Turkey has undoubtedly profoundly modified the opinions of all Liberals, and will affect their future."

ANGLO-ISRAEL TRUTH—THE FULFILMENT OF OLD TESTAMENT SYMBOLOGY.

(Continued from page 233.)

The Vision of Dry Bones.—Ezek. xxxvii. 1—14.

By James Catterall.

PART II.

Most expositors contend that this vision is intended to set forth the restoration of the Jews from their captivity in Babylon. Dr. Adam Clarke, Canon Liddon, and a host of others might be cited. We take exception to this view. The whole context—foregoing and following the vision—forbids the conclusion. Let the reader carefully examine chapters xxxv. and xxxvi.; particularly xxxv. 12—14, which unquestionably depicts the overthrow of Turkey. "They (the mountains of Israel) are given us to consume," accurately describes Ottoman rule in Palestine. "I will make thee desolate," seals her doom. This overthrow of Turkey is immediately succeeded by the final and complete restoration of "all the House of Israel, even all of it"—not a temporary and partial return, such as characterised the Jewish restoration from Babylon (chap. xxxvi. 11). In connection with this return they realise a degree of prosperity and grandeur unparalleled in all their history. "I will do better unto you than at your beginnings." Calmet and Clarke both admit that it would be difficult to show the literal fulfilment of this prophecy from the days of Zerubbabel to the birth of Christ. The colouring is too high for that period. It is a fact of historical certainty that during that period they never attained to the success and prosperity enjoyed under the reigns of David and Solomon. Associated with this last and still future restoration is the inauguration of the new covenant (v. 25—29). The land is also restored to its primeval beauty and fertility, "it becomes like the garden of Eden" (v. 35). Dr. A. Clarke, in concluding his comments upon this chapter, remarks, "I do not ask my readers' pardon for having considered this most beautiful chapter as relating, not to the restoration from the Babylonish captivity, but to the redemption under the new covenant by Jesus Christ. There is no period of the Jewish history from that time until now to which it can be applied."

There is no warrant then to apply this vision of the dry bones to the Jewish restoration from Babylon, from its foregoing context. Equally decisive is the context which follows. You have the union of the two sticks symbolising the full and permanent restoration of the Two Houses—Judah and Israel—under one crowned head to the land of their fathers. "One king shall be king to them all . . . . and they shall dwell therein, even they, and their children, and their children's children for ever" (xxxvii. 22—25). The whole context, therefore, clearly shows that the application of this vision to the restoration of the captivity from Babylon is inadmissible.

Equally restricted and circumscribed is the view of many of our Identity friends, who exclusively apply it to the Ten-Tribed House of Israel. What language could be plainer or wider in its scope than the explanation vouchsafed to the prophet (v. 11): "Son of man, these bones are the whole House of Israel?" Nor is the term "all the House of Israel his companions" (v. 16) equivalent in breadth of meaning. There is appended a qualifying and restrictive clause, "his companions." Further, it is highly probable that the vision of the two sticks is the presentation of the same subject in another form. "The word of the Lord came again to me, saying, Moreover," &c. (v. 15). The term again and moreover prove conclusively that the subject-matter of the two visions is the same. And since the Two Houses are spoken of in the latter they must be equally included in the former. Again, verses 12—14 are probably not the explanation of verses 2—10, as is generally supposed. Dr. Clarke argues that they are not. Canon Liddon, who contends that they are explanatory, makes this remarkable admission, "The form of the representation changes as the explanation succeeds the vision. . . . . To the captive people Babylon was not merely a valley of dry bones, but socially and politically it was fatal to the corporate life of Israel. Babylon was a grave." In reply to this we merely ask, How can that be mere explanation when the whole form of the representation is changed? Observe that in verse 2 the bones lie upon the surface, exposed, uninterred. In the 12th they are concealed, hidden, buried in graves. Such a disparity favours the assumption that the vision resolves itself into two distinct phases. Having determined the chronological and general application of the vision, we come now to the vision itself.

Digitized by Google

Note the discrimination made by the prophet in the first and second verses of the chapter. It is a valley full of bones. "And behold there were very many in the open champaign, (marginal rendering), and lo these were very dry." The full sweep of the valley represents the whole House—the bones lying in the open champaign indicate only one section of it. The dry bones strewn upon the surface seem to us a graphic picture of the Jewish community. Three thoughts are suggested by this part of the vision, which receive abundant confirmation in the recorded history of the Jews. The dry bones lie—1. Exposed. 2. Disorganised. 3. Inanimate.

1. The corpses lying in the open champaign are subject to the disintegrating action of the atmosphere, and the ravages of birds of prey and wild beasts of the forest. What a startling and vivid picture this is of the persecutions of the Jews! "Here we behold," says Basnage, "a Church hated and persecuted for 1700 years. Kings have often employed the severity of edicts and the hand of executioners to ruin it. The seditious multitudes, by murders and massacres, have committed outrages against it still more violent and tragical. Princes and people, Pagans, Mohammedans, Christians, disagreeing in so many things, have united in the design of exterminating it. . . . . From age to age they have been exposed to misery and persecution, yet still they subsist, in spite of the ignominy and the hatred which hath pursued them in all places, whilst the greatest monarchies are fallen and nothing remains of them but the name."

2. The Jews are a disorganised, as well as persecuted, people. The bones promiscuously scattered and intermixed suggest this fact. They are to be found in all parts of the world. They do not federate for political purposes. They have no corporate existence.

3. They are inanimate and passive because disorganised. At present they (we think of them collectively, not as individuals) play no part in the fate of dynasties and the destinies of nations. They are utterly powerless. But a nobler and worthier part is accorded them in the rôle of prophecy. When the noise and the shaking take place, there shall be a re-adjustment of bone to bone. They shall be bound together with ligaments, clothed with flesh, and covered with skin. Then there shall be breathed into them an animal and intellectual life—such is the meaning of the original word ruach (Clarke).

As the prophet prophesied to the wind, "the breath came into them and they lived"—they obtain a national existence —"and stood upon their feet"—they regain their foothold in the arena of the world's politics—"an exceeding great army" —their forces are marshalled, and they become a mighty factor in international affairs. Verse 12 not only explains the vision but connects the two parts of it together. "These bones (comprising the whole valley) are the whole House of Israel." Behold they say, "Our bones are dried." This is the language of the dry bones—the Jewish section. The rejoinder, "our hope is lost," seems to me the emphatic and appropriate sentiment of the House of Israel. Then follows the chorus of their united testimony, "We are cut off for our parts." Observe the preposition for, not from. From would suggest the idea of severance; but that is conveyed by the term "cut off" without the help of the word from. We have a reason given for that severance in the use of the word for (see chap. xxxvi. 17—19). The term "our parts" strongly corroborates my view, that the vision must be regarded as having two phases, representing the Two Houses—Judah and Israel. Treacherous Judah and backsliding Israel are both cut off from their own land for the parts they have individually played.

Let us very briefly consider the last phase of the vision. "Thus saith the Lord God, Behold, O My people, I will open your graves, and cause you to come up out of your graves, and bring you into the land of Israel" (v. 12). Here are three stages. Let it suffice to mention them. 1. Their discovery. 2. Their resurrection. 3. Their restoration. This cannot apply to the Jews, they have never been buried or lost. The Ten Tribes, represented in Ephraim, have been interred (Hos. xiii. 12—14). An interment does not necessarily imply a disorganisation. True, it does imply a process of decay and decomposition which will tend to it. You put in the tomb a perfect organism, you have more than mere skeleton, you have a body with all its parts. What do we gather from this? That the Lost House of Israel may exist in a corporate capacity while buried in its grave. You have not a gradual creation of a corporate nationality, as in the first part of the vision. You have a sudden, unprogressive resurrection. The Divine mandate goes forth, "I will cause you to come up out of your graves." Let me call attention to the essential and crowning feature of this resurrection, "I shall put My Spirit in you, and ye shall live." It is no longer ruach (mere breath, wind, soul); but ruchi, "My Spirit." They shall be animated with the Divine Spirit; in other words, they become a Christian people (Hos. i. 10). The possession of the Spirit is at once the badge of discipleship, and the attestation of their sonship. "If any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of His" (Rom. viii. 9). "As many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God" (v. 14). This precedes and prepares the way for the restoration. Many students of prophecy believe that we are approaching the time of the end, that the restoration of God's ancient people is coming on apace. We respectfully submit that the discovery, the resuscitation, the Christianisation of the Ten Tribes must previously receive their accomplishment and fulfilment. Thank God that we can discern the traces of the Divine handiwork—the literal fulfilment of these prophetic symbols—in the work of the Identity, and the increased evangelistic efforts of the varied churches.

May 13, 1879.

THE REV. DR. JOSEPH PARKER
(of the City Temple, Holborn)
UPON ISRAEL'S NEW GATE CYPRUS, AND THE PROTECTORATE OF ASIATIC TURKEY.

In the issue of the Times, of Dec. 31, 1878, our readers may probably have perused an able letter by Dr. Parker on the late prevailing distress, its causes, and the mode of its probable cessation. With the first part of the letter we do not concern ourselves; but the last few sentences contain sentiments in accord with our Israelite beliefs, and we shall proceed to quote them for our readers' satisfaction. The doctor said,—

I am not one of those who believe that national prosperity or national adversity is to be accounted for by party politics; such politics are themselves accidental, and are limited to a very small sphere of vital operation. My deep conviction is that the Anglo-Turkish Convention is fraught with the happiest consequences to Europe and to the world, and that through its operation, due time and care being granted, prosperity will return to England. I am well aware that civilisation has always followed "the process of the suns," and that America is supposed by many to be the ultimate theatre of progress and dominion, but I am of opinion that civilisation does not go in straight lines, but in circles; that it goes West that it may get round to the East again, and that by the operation of this law we shall see the sunrise of honest and lasting prosperity. As to the process by which the Anglo-Turkish Convention was brought about there may be serious differences of opinion, but that our occupation of Cyprus and our protectorate of Asia Minor are essential to the most valuable and sacred interests of the world I have not the shadow of a doubt, and I am glad to be confirmed in my judgment by some of the most thoughtful and earnest men in America, whose political distance from the scene gives their opinion the advantage of impartiality. To all who are now suffering I would, with your permission, venture to say, look to the East for the return of the sun.

Digitized by Google

JOSEPH PARKER.

The City Temple, Dec. 28.

The rev. doctor, it will be seen, first looks to the enlargement of Great Britain's territorial possessions and her influence over the Eastern nations as a blessing to the world, as the signal in fact for returning "prosperity." This, we recollect, was exactly God's promise to Israel when He told her by Jer. xxxiii. 9 that all the nations of the "earth" should hear of the good He would do unto them, and hearing they should fear and tremble for all the goodness and "prosperity" that He procured to the nation.

2. The doctor also rejoices in the addition of Cyprus to the number of British possessions and to the protectorate, as valuable to the sacred interests of the world; pointing, doubtless, to our newly-acquired influence over Palestine, and the "Bible lands" of the East; but here the preacher recoghised clearly that Cyprus was a Gate which facilitates the future occupation of Palestine, and that the protectorate will secure also equal justice and the spread of the Gospel over lands and races now in outer darkness, enabling the British to fulfil Israel's functions as "the budding and blossoming ones" destined to fill the face of the world with fruit" (Isa. xxvii. 6).

We think Dr. Joseph Parker ranks high as a blind witness in favour of our origin, and we thank him for showing us also what God's Word so clearly declares, and what the editor of the Times not long since announced as a new fact (Jan. 1, 1879), that the British are a great Asiatic or Eastern, as well as a leading European or Western Power. "Israel is to fear the Lord from the West, and His glory from the rising of the sun" (Isa. xlv. 6, lix. 19). "We now contemplate the fact," said the Times in its leader for the opening year, "that it is our destiny and our duty to accept the position of a great Asiatic Power—dividing with Russia the responsibility for the gradual introduction throughout the East of the principles and the methods of European civilisation." Behind these words the thoughtful reader sees no doubt the Scriptural prediction revealed to the secular mind, and its fulfilment announced by the leading journalist, that now at length the king of the North (Russia) and the king of the South (Great Britain or Israel) stand prepared in opposition, ready for their last great conflict for the dominion of the globe.

IS PAUL ALSO AMONG THE BLASPHEMERS?

WE might have been excused if, after reading p. 36 of Mr. Clifford's pamphlet, "The Anglo-Saxons and the Israelites," we had unhesitatingly, and with a shudder, flung all our Identification literature into the fire, watching its destruction with exultation, till the fiery "Parson and Clerk" had glided into darkness, as the last sparks vanished creepingly from the mass of blackened tinder. But before proceeding to such violent measures, we thought we should like to be convinced that the terms used by the rev. author were quite justifiable and applicable; and whether the "company" to which we belong, in so far as believing ourselves to be Israelites, were after all such "miserable creatures" as Mr. Clifford would have us consider ourselves to be on that account.

Not having gone through a course of study of various "delightful books," we doubtless are very presumptuous in venturing to offer any opposition to one, who, though pronouncing the philosopher's "conclusions false," evidently "floated joyously along the stream of his argument, which proceeds smoothly and delightfully" (page 7). Ours, we fear, will be offered but in a short, rugged, and blunt fashion, consisting only of one point, and that one a reference to verses 13—16 of Romans iv.

We think none will deny that whoever "inherits the world" can thereby claim as an inheritance those who dwell on it, including "the heathen" of Psa. ii. 8. Who does St. Paul point to as the heir of the world but to Abraham and his seed? We think this cannot be made to refer to the Lord Jesus, since v. 14 distinctly speaks of "heirs;" and, moreover, the inheritance is to depend on "the righteousness of faith"—faith in God's promises: but how could the Lord Jesus exercise faith in promises, in the making of which He shared, as being one with God from the beginning?

Any suggestion that this passage is to be applied in a spiritual sense, falls, we conceive, to the ground, since we do not see how the heathen, by becoming Christians, or spiritual Israelites, as we presume Mr. Clifford would style them, can inherit themselves.

We thank Mr. Clifford for his appeal to us "miserable creatures" to leave the tents of such men as Philo-Israel, Messrs. Hickson, Piazzi Smyth, Horner, and other Identification writers, whose works and articles, as far as we are acquainted with them, tend to exalt the Master whom we humbly desire to glorify. But before following the advice given, we must first be convinced that the "sins" of these writers, in the question of our origin, are deserving of the hard names bestowed on them, or are any sins at all; and we confess Mr. Clifford has failed to prove, to our satisfaction, that the upholders of our Israelitish origin are a body of mischievous, God-dishonouring blasphemers, whose secret leader is the father of lies, and whose banner bears the brand of Satanic agency.

L. P.

May 7, 1879.

THE FORMER AND THE LATTER DAYS.

BY THE REV. A. B. GRIMALDI, M.A.

AT the recent Anglo-Israel discussion in Exeter Hall, one of the opponent's questions was, "When are the latter days?" and an Anglo-Israelite, reporting the discussion, observed, Who can answer such a question as that?

But Holy Scripture seems to give us sufficient information upon this important, but little understood, chronological era, as the father of the re-discovery of Israel long since pointed out (Wilson, "The Millennium.")

The probationary period of man upon earth appears to be divided in Scripture into two portions, called the former days and the latter days.

From a number of converging lines of evidence, from a comparison of the various prophetic data, the general views of the Hebrew and Christian Churches, the meaning of the typical periods arranged by Moses, all too extensive to go into here, we are led to the conclusion that these periods are equal. From Scriptural and historical evidence we are brought to the conclusion that the former days commenced at the creation of the first Adam, and terminated at the creation of the second Adam, or included the whole period of man upon earth before Christ.

This period of the former days was divided by the Hebrew Church into two smaller periods—viz., the first when man was without the law, and the second when man was under the law. These two smaller periods coincide with the times of the existence of the patriarchal Church, and the Hebrew Church, respectively. As the Old Testament writers actually lived in the former days, it is not to be expected that they would have occasion to speak of them as one distinct period of time; there are, nevertheless, intimations and allusions to the former things and former persons, showing that they referred to a period known as the former days. Thus the prophet says the House of Judah and the House of Israel had been a curse among the heathen, but that in the future it should not be thus as in the former days—clearly referring to times after the first advent (Zech. viii. 11—13). In other passages the prophet, speaking of the blessed state of Israel in the latter days, alludes to their state in the former days as the former desolations (Isa. lxi. 4), the former troubles (Isa. lxv. 16), their former estate (Ezek. xvi. 55), or the desolations, troubles, and estate which were their lot in the former days, as contrasted with what shall be theirs in the latter days. As to the exact length in solar years of the former days the best and soundest conclusions, deduced from a comprehensive and impartial study of the evidence contained in the historical, prophetical, and typical divisions of Scriptural chronology lead to a belief that they lasted 4,000 years. The second half of the probationary period is called, or alluded to in Scripture, as the latter days. This period would commence B.C. 0, or the beginning (probably September) of A.D. 1, not, of course, accepting Dionysius' very unsatisfactory so-called "correction" of the Christian calendar, which, to say the least of it, proceeded from a very unsatisfactory source (Dan. vii. 25). As before remarked, the study of the subject leads to the conclusion that the former and the latter days are periods of equal duration; the latter days, will, therefore, last for 4,000 years—that is, till A.D. 4,000. Like the former the latter days appear to be divided into two smaller periods corresponding with those in time and analogical character—viz., the first, when man is without Christ—i.e., without His bodily presence, ruling as King, neither by personal nor symbolical appearance; the second, when man is under Christ—i.e., when He will rule on earth, through His twelve apostles sitting on the twelve thrones, judging the Twelve Tribes of Israel, under the light of the Divine Shechinah, or His manifested bodily presence. Again, these two smaller periods (as in the former days) coincide with the times of the existence of the Christian Church, and the Universal Church, respectively. From many considerations we are led to the conclusion that, as the former and latter days comprise equal divisions of time, so these smaller periods are similarly equally divided. Thus, as to the former days, the Hebrew Church held the belief that the world was without the law for 2,000 years, and under the law for 2,000 years: thus making up the, on other grounds accepted, period of 4,000 years from the first to the second Adam.

Digitized by Google

So, also, as to the latter days, the Hebrew Church held the belief that the world would be under the Messiah for 2,000 years, and that there would then be a Sabbath of 1,000 years before the final closing of the world's history. Similarly the Christian Church has considered that the Christian dispensation will close after 6,000 years from Adam have passed away—i.e., after six working days of 1,000 years each, and, as 4,000 years were already gone at the incarnation, the same period of 2,000 years is left for the duration of the Christian dispensation, which was long since assigned by the Hebrew Church as the period of Messianic teaching: all portions of the ancient Hebrew and Christian beliefs thus agreeing one with another, in a remarkable and convincing manner: while, at the same time, coinciding with such Scriptural information as is vouchsafed to us. As the sacred writers, when speaking of the latter days, were referring to a period in no part of which they were living, they were naturally able to be much more explicit in their references than when alluding to the former days, which were then actually in progress: and consistently we find more and clearer references to them. Jacob says his prediction shall take place in this period (Gen. xlix. 1), and we know from Paul (Rom. xi. 25) that the blessings on Ephraim were not to commence till the Christian dispensation, or latter days, had commenced.

Moses alludes to the latter days also (Deut. iv. 30) when Israel, being out of the land, shall turn to the God of their fathers, and be accepted: which, of course, took place at the Reformation, during the Christian or latter days.

Jeremiah tells us that Israel shall consider their state perfectly in the latter days (chap. xxiii. 20, xxx. 24)—a prophecy not yet fully accomplished. Moab is to be restored (chap. xlviii. 47), Elam is to be restored (chap. xlix. 39), Gog is to be destroyed (Ezek. xxxviii. 16), Nebuchadnezzar's dream is to be fulfilled (Dan. ii. 28), the scattering of Israel must be completed (chap. x. 14), and, finally, Israel is to return to the Promised Land (Hosea iii. 5). All these events the prophets tell us are to take place in the latter days: and we know that they have all been accomplishing, or will be fulfilled in the period extending onwards from the first to the second advent. The latter days, then, commenced at the incarnation, when Israel at once began to receive some drops of Jehovah's over-flowing measure of mercy and loving-kindness, when her infant Saviour received Israel's wise and devout representatives at Bethlehem, coming from the far East of Media, and offering those costly gifts, symbols of that vast outflow of offerings for the cause of Christ which should be her pre-eminent glory in times of future restoration and re-union. To Judah belonged the honour of first welcoming their Messiah (Luke ii. 16), but Israel quickly followed (Matt. ii. 11), even in Immanuel's land, the Land of Promise; and then He was presented to the Gentile world in the most ancient Gentile kingdom (Matt. ii. 13).

We are told in Scripture that the Christian dispenation will be followed by a Sabbath of 1,000 years (Rev. xx. 1—3), and then is to take place the general judging and restoration, called the day of the Lord of a like period (2 Peter iii. 8), thus completing the 4,000 years of the latter days.

A brief synoptical table of the chief corresponding and analogous events and eras will make these Scripture periods more clear and manifest.

I.—THE FORMER DAYS, 4000 YEARS; B.C. 4000—A.D. 1.

First or Patriarchal Church for 2000 years.
1. The World without the Law for 2000 years.
(a) The First Adam created.
(b) The Shechinah at Eden.
(c) The Ascension of Enoch.
(d) The Purging Deluge by Water.

Second or Hebrew Church for 2000 years.
2. The World with the Law for 2000 years.
(a) Abram, "Heir of the World," born.
(b) The Shechinah at Jerusalem (Eden).
(c) The Ascension of Elijah.
(d) Judgment on Israel and Judah.

II.—THE LATTER DAYS, 4000 YEARS; A.D. 1—A.D. 4000.

Third or Christian Church for 2000 years.
3. The World without the Messiah for 2000 years.
(a) The Second Adam born.
(b) The Messiah at Jerusalem (Eden).
(c) The Ascension of Messiah.
(d) The Purging Deluge by Fire.

Fourth or Universal Church for 2000 years.
4. The World with the Messiah for 2000 years.
(a) The New Jerusalem.
(b) The Messiah at Jerusalem (Eden).
(c) The Ascension of the Church.
(d) Day of Judgment, 1000 years.

CAIAPHAS' PROPHECY.

WAS Caiaphas a prophet of the living God—he who was a murderer of the Lord Jesus Christ, and took an active part in procuring His condemnation? God's Word says "He prophesied," and we must conclude that as the Spirit of God spoke some of the most sublime prophecies which the Scriptures record by the vile mouth and the heathen lips of the soothsayer Balaam, so He also commissioned wicked Caiaphas the high priest to utter words which guide us now as to the destiny of Lost Israel, and show us that to him, and to the only wise God who taught him to speak in His name, the fact was well known that in A.D. 33, Israel and Judah were two separate nations. Let us look at the passage wherein Caiaphas' prophecy is set out—namely, John xi. 47—52. The stupendous miracle of the Lord, by which He had raised Lazarus from the dead—one who had lain four days in the tomb—had confounded the Jews. The Pharisees called a council to devise some plan for getting rid of this troublesome Nazarene; for they argued, "If we let Him thus alone, all men will believe on Him, and the Romans shall come and take away both our place and nation." This brought Caiaphas forward. As high priest that year, he was filled by the Spirit of God and forced to utter a prediction which tells us now "the mystery of Israel." "Ye know nothing at all," he said, "nor consider that it is expedient for us" (Jews) "that one man should die for the people, and that the whole "nation" (Judah) "perish not." "This he spake," says the Word and Spirit of the Lord, "not of himself; but being high priest that year, he prophesied that Jesus should die for that" (Jewish) "nation, and not for that" (Jewish) "nation only, but that also He should gather together in one" (therefore they were separate before) τὰ τέκνα τοῦ θεοῦ τὰ διεσκορπισμένα the children of God," those children "that were scattered abroad." Now who were these "children of God, those that once were scattered abroad?" They could not be Gentiles, because never is a Gentile—i.e., a non-Hebrew—nation called in God's Word "the children of God," independently of belief in the Lord Jesus Christ. Here, however, we have a people who, before they were gathered, and after their scattering, were always "the children of God." These must have been the Lo-Ammi Israelites, to whom the very name of "sons of the living God" is attributed in Hosea i. 10. They are God's first-born Ephraim (Jer. xxxi. 9), to whom He declared Himself to be "the Father." These scattered Hebrews therefore, Caiaphas teaches us, are the "children of the living God." They were scattered abroad, and the Lord Jesus' commission was "to gather together in one" those errant sheep and bring them, with Judah, into one fold, under one Shepherd, as the Lord Himself declared in John x. 16, in Ezek. xxxvii. 22, and also in the passage we are now considering. The whole proves, on the testimony of inspired prophecy, that at the date when Caiaphas spoke (A.D. 33)—1st. Israel the scattered was not in union with the Jews or Judah. 2nd. That these "scattered Israelites" were, nevertheless, "the children of God" even in their then unconverted state, just as Ephraim in Jeremiah's days (B.C. 606) was "God's first-born," the Israelite son of the great father, although an idolatrous and outcast nation at that very date. 3rd. That the Lord Jesus came to these "Lost sheep of the House of Israel" that He might gather them in from "the wilderness" where they were scattered abroad. 4th. That to do that, He was obliged to die as an atonement for both Judah and Israel; and thus 5th, "redeemed" them from that wrath to come, to which the Gentile nations, qua nations, are obnoxious.

Digitized by Google

We beg our readers to ponder this view of a passage that has not been hitherto suspected to bear on our Identity but which clearly meets, we think, the arguments of many persistent opponents, since it proves the separation in our Lord's days of Israel from Judah; and that the mission on which He came was to gather those two branches of "the children of God" into His own single fold as their great, glorious, and loving Shepherd. (See our remarks on this subject vol. ii. BANNER No. 76, page 194, 1878.)

WE have an excellent paper in three or four parts, by W. Burnett-Coates, on "Assyria to Britain," which will be published as soon as room can be found in the BANNER for it.—ED.

CONFIRMATIONS FROM ALLAHABAD, NORTH INDIA;

FROM TRICHINOPOLY IN THE SOUTH; AND GOOD NEWS ALSO FROM ADELAIDE IN SOUTH AUSTRALIA.

OUR friend John Butterworth sends us a valuable extract from the Pioneer newspaper published in Allahabad under date March 7, 1879, confirming our Montreal friend's information printed on page 107 of this year's BANNER OF ISRAEL regarding Her Majesty's Russian subjects in Manitoba in Canada. Our readers will be glad to learn from the quotation, that our correspondent, John Butterworth, is watching in the far-off Deccan for Israelite confirmations, and is not slow in sending us whatever he can find to serve our cause. The extract is as follows:—

In the year 1874 and the three years following, there went of the Mennonites 6,330 souls—men, women and children—from Russia to Canada. The Mennonites are the Quakers of South Russia, by whose peaceful industry and agricultural ability the Odessa wheat trade has been largely developed, and who, objecting to enlistment, have naturally grounds for disagreement with the Russian authorities. They have found emigration the simplest method of settling their disputes, and in 1874 fixed on Manitoba, one of the newest provinces of Canada, as their location. On their arrival they lost no time in astonishing the Canadians by the vigour with which they began making roads to the nearest markets, and reclaiming waste lands. They have now made a spirited offer to Government to construct sixty miles of road work for a railway across the prairies of Manitoba. During the recent war so many obstacles were placed to their exodus that emigration was interrupted, but large numbers are expected to leave in the approaching spring. England will have reason to be proud of her Russian subjects.

Reading this wonderful statement our instructed readers, of course, commence quoting Deut. xv. 6: "Thou shalt lend unto many nations, but thou shalt not borrow; and thou shalt reign over many nations, but they shall not reign over thee." We ask our opponents to find in Russia 6,330 British folk subjects willingly or unwillingly of the Czar! They will not! but here we show them that number of Russians, with large reinforcements to follow, who are useful and active subjects of her Majesty, doing much to make Manitoba "blossom as the rose" (Isa. xxxv. 1).

We turn now to Trichinopoly in South India, and from that city we receive by the mail of March 13, 1879, a capital little pamphlet written by Major J. Weldon, of the Madras Army stationed at Bangalore, to prove that the British as Israel are the "chief of nations." We shall republish this paper in the BANNER as soon as we can secure a little room, and meanwhile beg our opponents to notice how the Identity progresses. Major Weldon tells our correspondent (John Butterworth's near relative) that "he has never yet been worsted in an argument for the truth of our Identity by anyone;" "that he has obtained among the laity in India many a supporter of our views, but that there, as here, the clergy are the most determined opponents!"

Strange to say, Major Weldon had never seen the BANNER, an omission our friend at once rectified, and we hope he has now become a regular subscriber.

From Adelaide in South Australia the same mail brings us a most encouraging letter from the secretary of "The Israel's Identification Association" formed there. We publish this document below, and are sure our readers will thank us for the cheering news it contains. We wish our Adelaide friends "God-speed," and His best blessing in spreading our glorious truths far and wide throughout Australia.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—I have long had a desire to send a few lines to you concerning the Identity of our nation with the House of Israel, but have been prevented by various causes from doing so before. I am glad to be able to inform you that our association here is prospering; the knowledge of our Identity with God's chosen people Israel is spreading here very rapidly; and, like the Bereans of old hundreds of people here in South Australia are diligently searching, the Scriptures to see if these things are so. As one who has received great light and blessing through the writings of yourself and Mr. E. Hine, I feel it a duty incumbent upon me to send a few lines of encouragement to you and greeting in the name of the Lord Jesus, the Redeemer of Israel, although, no doubt, you receive sympathy and encouragement from those who are much nearer; yet I trust that a voice of greeting and encouragement from one of Israel's grand colonies at the ends of the earth will not be unwelcome, especially when it is remembered that this grand colony of South Australia was but a short time ago a "waste howling wilderness." To show what a wilderness this was, only forty-two years ago, I may just tell you, that the first settlers here disputed whether wheat could be grown here or not, and only a few years ago it was quite a common thing to hear people say wheat will not grow North of such and such a place; but experience tells a very different tale! The enterprising Israelites still keep pushing farther and farther North, and the wheat grows wherever the soil is broken up and prepared for it. South Australians have got quite accustomed now to taking the first prize for wheat wherever it is exhibited! Forty-two years ago people despaired of being able to grow any such thing here; now our wheat is known from one end of the earth to the other; but, sir, wheat is not all. South Australia is one of the finest fruit-producing countries that the sun shines upon.

Digitized by Google

Is there in this any fulfilment of Isa. xxxv. 1?—"The wilderness and the solitary place shall be glad for them, and the desert shall rejoice and blossom as the rose.

But to turn to the Identity question. A highly-respected minister of the Gospel in our city told me the other day that whatever else you may, or may not be doing, you were leading to an immense amount of Bible reading. I know many families who were very indifferent previously to all Bible topics, but now they are diligent students of the Word of God; it may now be very truly said of them, they > "Devoutly read therein by day, and from the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh. They cannot keep silence; and thus it is working like leaven in South Australia. They not only speak to others concerning the matter, but are continually pleading at the throne of grace, praying that all Israel may speedily be brought to the light, and I believe that this cry, now started in earnest, will continue; and that they will not cease nor give God any rest until "He establish and make Jerusalem a praise in the earth." People here are often asking, why do not the ministers take the matter up? But they seem to maintain a silence on the subject which is hard to account for. I suppose it is so ordered. One thing we know, and they seem to know it too—namely, that they are quite powerless to refute it!

> And meditate by night;"

I will not trouble you with anything more at present beyond saying that we should be very glad to receive a few words of advice and counsel from you, either through the pages of the BANNER, or privately. You and Mr. E. Hine are doing a grand work! My prayer is that the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ may ever be with you.

Yours in the hope of Israel,
H. W. JAMES,
(Secretary to Israel's Identity Association.)

Hutt-street, Adelaide, South Australia,
February 24, 1879.

CORROBORATIONS BY THE WAY.

WRITING on the subject of the work of the South American Missionary Society, we find in its 1st of October Magazine the following from the pen of one of its literary contributors.

The testimony of the Rev. Dr. M'Neile to these being the last days is striking, and confirms our contention that, such being the case, Israel must be discovered now or never; for on their discovery, as God's Word testifies, the whole of the events which crowd into "the time of the end," are made to hinge. Israel found, then the restoration of Israel and Judah can take place; then the Lord can deliver His people at Armageddon; and then, after destroying His enemies, He can begin to reign in Jerusalem over "His ancients gloriously." In all these things the discovery of Israel is the very first step to take; and without it God's purposes, as we see by Holy Writ, cannot (we say it with due reverence)—cannot be carried out. Our quotation is as follows:—

Ten years ago the Rev. Dr. M'Neile said, "I am very much in earnest about this Society, because it is the last part of the world remaining to have the Gospel sent to, and when it goes to the very last as a witness among all nations, then lift up your heads, for the end cometh—the glorious end when the will of God will be done upon earth as it is in heaven." On this subject our blessed Lord's words are very explicit, "And this Gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come."

This mission, then, in which we are privileged to labour, supplies the missing link in missionary enterprise. How sweet is that thought to them that love His appearing, and that thus the last link in the chain is forged and fitted, and the day is at hand!

Events are thickening around us, the world's pulse beats quicker each revolving year. Countless lives and treasures are expended to uphold the tottering kingdoms of this world, but they are hopelessly doomed, and will ere long be involved in one mighty overthrow; when upon their ruins will rise grand, stately, and glorious, the everlasting kingdom of Him "which is, and which was, and which is to come, the Almighty." May we, as good stewards of His manifold mercies, unweariedly strive by our pure lives, fervent prayers, and self-denying efforts, to hasten the coming of that blessed kingdom!

Here we see the writer of the above anticipates the speedy advent of the great earthquake which "will involve in one mighty overthrow the tottering kingdoms of the world," and also that on their ruins will rise what we know to be the great Israelite kingdom of the saints of the Most High, the extent and grandeur of which is the theme of Dan. vii. 22—27, explained by Psalm cxlviii. 14.

THE EDITOR OF "LIFE FROM THE DEAD."

WE apologise to our readers for personal references. We are obliged, in this instance, to deviate from our fixed and usual practice. It shall be only for a few moments. We are constrained to enter our protest against, and to repudiate an assertion to be found in a paper by "Harrison Oxley," on page 195, Life from the Dead, No. 67, for June, 1879, to the effect that "Edward Hine and the Deliverer," described in Rom. xi. 26, "are identical." That "Deliverer," as reference to Isa. lix. 20 will show, is "the Redeemer:" and if the editor of Life from the Dead has inadvertently admitted the monstrous statement in question, we trust he will hasten to repudiate it. But if from set purpose it appears in his journal, then it is ours, while we hold entirely aloof from such teaching, to say (while we refrain from judging the writer), "The Lord rebuke thee." Let not the public identify such statements as Mr. H. Oxley's with the BANNER OF ISRAEL, or with its editor. We henceforth must separate ourselves entirely from such doctrines, and as we, in the autumn of 1876, were unable further to contribute with satisfaction to Mr. Hine's journals, because of his failure to repudiate Mr. H. Oxley's application to him of the character of Joshua, mentioned in connection with the "stone" in Zech. iii. 9 (Glory Leader, Vol. iii., No. 80, p. 20), so now we are again constrained to enter a formal and public protest against the same writer's identification of a mere sinful mortal with the glorious "Deliverer" of Israel to come out of Zion, who is to turn away ungodliness from Jacob, even the Lord Jesus Christ. We have no desire to enter on controversy: but this is a matter on which to maintain silence would have been, we think, blameworthy. We therefore have recorded what we mean to be a decided protest, in view to guard our great cause from an injury which he, who was once its chief prop and stay, seems now bent on inflicting on it. May God forbid it.

PHILO-ISRAEL.

Bristol, June 19, 1879.

Digitized by Google

THE CHOSEN PEOPLE.

A LECTURE BY JOHN T. GOTT.

(Continued from page 255).

PART VII.

BEING Israel, the Land of Promise is before us, the right of entering in exclusively in our own hands, and we are thus living in the days when it is possible for the remnant of Israel and the Jews to re-settle in the Holy Land, in conformity with the predictions of the prophets, for the people then shall not go out by flight nor go in haste.

When Jacob entered the Land of Promise after many long years of exile, he sent on before a present of immense value. When Israel returns to the land of rest, they are commanded to bring a present unto the Lord of hosts of a people scattered and peeled—the Jews—whom Isaiah describes as the "plant of Jehovah's pleasures."

Being Israel, we are the people to whom the Jews look for assistance; but while they wish to settle there, they forget God's decree that from the House of Israel must be taken one of a city, and two of a family, to settle there also.

Just as Jacob and Esau were eventually united in bonds of brotherly friendship, so God has declared of Israel and Judah, that they shall yet be united not to be divided any more for ever.

Just as Jacob's name was changed into Israel, ere he entered the land, so when God pours out His Holy Spirit upon us, it shall come to pass, that in the place where it was said to the House of Israel, "Ye are not My people," there it shall be said unto them, "Ye are My people, Ye are the sons of the living God."

We have seen Jacob in exile grow rich and powerful. We have seen Joseph sold as a slave, become the greatest man of the age; and the Lost House of Israel, long banished from home, has, in exile, grown into the richest, the mightiest, and most exalted empire the world has ever seen, with one whom we believe to be of the royal line of King David on the throne, and little Benjamin our ruler at the head of affairs. When Joseph was raised to this exalted position, his name was changed to Zaphnath-paaneah, but when among his brethren, he said, "I am Joseph," and we have our "Benjamin of Israel," whatever the world or his enemies may call him.

We have seen Joseph, by his policy, receiving money, cattle, and land in return for succour and assistance, and people willingly becoming his servants to receive his favour and protection. And we are now seeing the same thing taking place on a grander scale! Our dominions were very extensive, but how much more during recent years has been added to them. The untold wealth of the vast continent of Africa is now lying at the feet of Anglo-Israel. We have had bad times—nay, have them now, but wait Jehovah's time! We shall, ere long, catch a sight of the silver lining behind the cloud of our troubles, and then "All will be well." We need faith and courage in these times. Faith to act, courage to speak fearlessly. We have added so much to our dominions of late, and so much increased our national responsibility, that many who know not our future destiny and past history, are incessantly predicting: "The ruin of the empire." No, no! The earth is the Lord's and the fulness thereof, and we are His chosen people, destined to make His name a praise in the earth, and to be the great ingatherer of all the races of men, to teach them the glad tidings of the Gospel, and to induce all to become servants of the one true God, and to become believers in the great Redeemer of mankind. Just as the Israelites in Egypt, by their energy and success in trade, by their wealth and extensive influence wielded almost the whole powers of the country, so now, on a world-wide scale, does Anglo-Israel wield the same mighty power, manifest unbounded national wealth, and exercise a similar world-wide influence among all the nations of the world.

When Israel was in exile in Egypt, Moses the deliverer was sent to them with certain God-given signs which the people saw and believed. So now, in the days when the people of Israel are to be raised up out of their graves, God has given, and is still giving to us—Anglo-Israel—signs many and convincing.

A sign in the multitudinous character of our people. A sign in our mighty prowess, unconquered on land, and mistress of the seas. A sign in being a great nation and company of nations—a position allotted only to the chosen people by Biblical prophecy. A sign in being the universal creditor, lending to all nations, but borrowing from none. A sign in being the encirclers of the earth. A sign in being the only nation who has let the slave go free. A sign in our utter isolation. A sign in being the only Christian nation, called to do a work specially allotted to the chosen people, and doing it in blindness. Sowing the seed without any idea of the blessed results that must accrue, foolishly thinking that we shall never know till we arrive in the "better land," forgetting that the chosen people must exist and finish the work allotted to them—viz., to make God's name a praise in the earth. A sign in our continual and ever-increasing annexation of territory. A sign in possessing the Gates of our enemies—i.e., in our holding the strongest place of defence and attack in their lands. These and many others by the score might be added, but one more we must notice.

But we have a sign, and a very wonderful sign, little known and less understood. A sign in the prospective colonization of the Holy Land.

Let me try to make this plain to you. When the Israelites journeying from Egypt were about to enter the Land of Promise, Moses sent out spies to spy the land. When the warlike Joshua, who led them into the land, was on the other side Jordan, he sent over spies to spy out Jericho. And inasmuch as there is no new thing under the sun; inasmuch as the thing that hath been, it is that that shall be, and that which hath been done is that which shall be done; inasmuch as the prophets demand of us to bring forth our strong reasons—to show the former things what they were, and to consider what the latter end of them should be—then we must conclude that as the land promised to the chosen people has always been spied by men specially appointed for the work, so must it be again, ere the return of the remnant of Israel and the Tribe of Judah can take place.

Without fear of contradiction, I assert that no land under the heavens has been more accurately and thoroughly spied out in these latter days than the land of Palestine—spied out by men specially appointed to the work from their Biblical knowledge and scientific attainments; spied out thoroughly, completely, and satisfactorily; spied out by one race of people—the English-speaking people; spied out by the Palestine Exploration Society, which is supported entirely by Christians in England and America. Here is a land the Lord Jehovah, the God of Israel, "careth for"—a land on which the eyes of the Lord are always fixed "from the beginning of the year even unto the end of the year—a land which Jehovah says "is Mine" and "shall not be sold for ever." Who dares to spy out a land so jealously guarded? None but the chosen people! How has it been spied? So thoroughly, that in the course of a year or so we shall be in possession of a map on which will appear the site of every wady, brook, hill, mountain, river, town, and city that formerly existed in the Holy Land, and of which we read in the Bible.

In a general way, many would say, Now what's the good of a map like that? You have been spending money and wasting time over a thing nearly worthless! Is that so? In our blindness and ignorance we have really been doing—unwittingly—a work absolutely necessary to be done by the chosen people if the predictions of the prophet Ezekiel are to receive a literal fulfilment, and such a fulfilment they must receive. I say "unwittingly" advisedly. I have met with clergymen who have been actually engaged in this work, who have thrown their whole soul into it. I publicly asked one of them if he knew why we were doing such a work? Why no other nation took any interest in the work? and concluded by asking, if he did not think this a clear proof that we were God's chosen people—long-lost Israel? He made no reply publicly. After his lecture, I went to him and asked him if he knew what I had been speaking about, and he informed me that he was aware of the Identity view, but saw nothing in it. I speak of the Rev. James King. So, just as Joshua sent out spies to spy the land without their knowing what his plans and operations might be, so have we been sending out our spies to spy out the land without their knowing what the purposes of the Holy One of Israel are! This suggests the question, Why has such a work been done? And the prophets supply the answer! Ezekiel declares that on the return of Israel and Judah, the land shall be divided into thirteen parts of equal breadth. To the Jews one part is allotted.

Digitized by Google

Now when we think of the map in course of preparation, and remember that Isaiah says, "the remnant of Israel that shall return will be one of a city and two of a family," we see the reason. In olden times the Land of Promise was divided by lots. Every man then entered upon his own inheritance. So must it be again. One of a city shall receive the inheritance, and two of a family enjoy it. The ark of the covenant was greatly in use among the children of Israel when Jehovah manifested His presence among them, and as greater manifestations have even yet to be made, the ark of the covenant must again be found and take up its ancient position as the standard of Israel.

NOTE.—Space prevents me touching on other kindred points equally interesting, striking and suggestive. I must pass on to the days of King Solomon. The early portions of his reign were bright, happy, peaceful and blessed, but they were not permanent. They are a fitting type of the final rest the Holy One of Israel has promised to give His chosen people Israel—a rest which will be permanent.

Solomon prayed for wisdom and an understanding heart, and that is just what we—God's chosen people, in particular, and the world in general—require now! The world is full of knowledge! There never was a time when science made such rapid strides, startled the world with so many discoveries, and piled up the ologies so furiously. What we want is Divine wisdom to make a judicious application of the knowledge we possess, and to establish and enjoy the blessed results which it promises. When the long-promised Holy Spirit is poured out upon us, Anglo-Israel, then shall we enjoy the blessed privilege of blending knowledge with wisdom and of acting accordingly.

King Solomon had eleven princes to assist him in the government of his prosperous kingdom, and we, being Anglo-Israel, with our extensive dominions, certainly require the same.

I may be wrong—but if there is one question more than another that must engross the attention of the leading minister of the cabinet in this empire it is, What is the best way to sustain and uphold our supremacy in these dominions? I may be wrong, I say, but I wish you to note that the Princess Louise is now in Canada with her Consort, and that the Duke of Connaught will probably take up his residence in Ireland. In the one case the result has proved eminently satisfactory. May it prove to be equally so in the other. And this calls upon us to watch what steps may next be taken, and to what several parts of our heathen empire the princes and princesses of the realm of Great Britain may be sent.

(To be continued.)

"THE REFUTER," MR. R. ROBERTS, ANSWERED.

BY C. R.

I CANNOT think with Mr. E. J. Roberts that it is necessary for some one like the late John Wilson to answer the arguments of Mr. R. Roberts, for the whole of the latter's statements are based on false premises (I do not use these words in an offensive sense), and it is only necessary to show this for the rest of his reasoning to fall to the ground.

The argument on which the whole of his contention is founded is that the blessings originally given to the patriarchs are granted to the Twelve Tribes collectively, and therefore can only be fulfilled when the whole of them are united. It would be perfectly fair to ask how, if this is the case, it happens that our Saviour was born in one section of the Tribes at a time when by far the larger part of them were dispersed? But it can easily be shown that Mr. Roberts' view is not well founded.

By referring to Gen. xlix. we get the key to the matter. We find that to Reuben, Simeon, Levi, Issachar, and Gad (five out of the Twelve) the promises given were certainly not such as were given to the patriarchs, and although to the others are spoken more comforting words, yet that the full blessings are divided between Two. To Judah is given the lawgiver, or (as I believe we are all agreed) the Messiah; to Joseph the rest of the promises in all their richness and fulness. This is made the clearer by turning to the preceding chapter, 13—20. In the sixteenth verse Jacob says: "Let my name be named on them, and the name of my fathers Abraham and Isaac, and let them grow into a multitude in the midst of the earth."

Now we know that Jacob was specially called "Israel" (Gen. xxxii. 28). In fact, he was the first Israelite (a prince of God), and here he is giving that very name to Ephraim and Manasseh (the sons of Joseph only); but not to any of the others. This fact, coupled with the other verses, shows plainly and decisively that, although the other Tribes have a portion in Israel, and are ultimately to be united to Israel, yet they only enter into the promises given to the patriarchs when they are united with the descendants of Joseph. In fact, wherever Ephraim and Manasseh are, there is Israel, and the blessings follow them; but not the other Tribes.

There is another passage bearing on this point which I think is not used as much by our friends as it might be. I allude to Jer. iii. 14—18, more especially verse 16. In this passage we find it clearly stated that when Israel is "multiplied and spread abroad," or already entering into the promises, then the House of Israel and the House of Judah are to be re-united, and the latter enter into the possession of the same blessings.

Thus I think the whole of Mr. R. Roberts' arguments utterly fall to the ground. His premises being wrong the rest of his statements and deductions must necessarily be so too. For if the foundation is bad, the building cannot stand.

I can quite agree with Mr. E. J. Roberts' views about the discussion as a whole.

It seemed to me as if for a very great portion of the time both the disputants were talking entirely wide of the subject. In fact, Mr. Hine seemed very much like a general who, though occupying an impregnable position, allows himself to be tempted off his ground by his opponent at any time that the latter chose to do so.

We owe much, very much, to Mr. Hine; but he can scarcely be considered a really good debater.

THE "TIMES" ON ISRAEL'S HEATHEN EMPIRE.

"IT is obvious to remark how very largely the whole foreign policy of England is affected by the fact that we hold India. Everything done East of Malta has some reference to this. If we are concerned for Asia Minor or for Egypt, it is because these countries lie on or near the highway to India. If the progress of Russia has been watched with jealousy, it is because each fresh step she has been taking has brought her directly or indirectly towards the sphere within which Indian interests are supreme. It is right that from time to time we should ask ourselves the reason and the justification of our Indian policy in the very wide sense we have given it. The advantage of our Indian Empire ought to be beyond doubt if we are to be at such vast and incessant pains in maintaining it. Nor can we refuse to look at the question from an Indian point of view, and to inquire what benefits we confer by the position we occupy. Our responsibility is immense. The well-being and happiness of more than two hundred millions of human beings are placed in our hands. There is no appeal from any course we may determine upon for them. We can govern well or badly, in our interests or in theirs, and they have no choice but to submit. Such plenitude of power seems almost greater than can safely be intrusted to any nation whatever. The fact remains that England possesses it and must use it.—Times, May, 1879.

Digitized by Google

The above shows, teste the Times—

1. That the British are an Eastern as well as a Western Power (Isa. xlv. 6, lix. 19).

2. That the Heathen Empire of the world is ours, God's gift to Israel at His Son's request (Psa. ii. 8 ; Isa. xli. 1—3 ; Rev. ii. 26, 27)

3. That we are the "Kings of the East," paramount in power and might, greater than ever any nation was before (Rev. xvi. 12 ; Dan vii. 27).

4. That holding India, our "interests" include Asia Minor, Egypt, all East of Malta, therefore "The Inheritance" of Israel' all derived and obtained by the possession of the East (Jer. iii. 18 ; Isa xli. 1—3).

ISRAEL'S BATTLES.

"FOR THERE IS NONE OTHER THAT FIGHTETH FOR US, BUT ONLY THOU, O GOD."

(Continued from page 59).

No. XIX.—THE BATTLE OF TALAVERA.

OUR subject now carries us to the scenes of the Peninsular War—a conflict when it was Israel, unaided by human allies of the smallest material value, against the colossal power of the great Napoleon. In that great war the God of Israel fought incessantly for His people, and brought her triumphantly and victoriously through all her dangers. He gave her first a great captain to command His host, and that captain was afterwards the hero of a hundred fights—the Duke of Wellington. In 1808, when the Peninsular War began, Sir Arthur Wellesley was appointed by Canning to command the expedition. On the 17th August that year, the British General let the Frenchmen, under Delaborde, see what kind of soldiers Israel's were on the heights of Roliça, in Portugal. The Bear Skins of the Grenadiers steadily struggling up to the attack, the cool precision of their fire, and their steady order "of upward march," struck terror into their foes and forced them to give way. The victory cost the French 600 killed and wounded against 480 on the side of the British.

The battle of Vimiero, in Portugal, followed Roliça, and there Wellesley sustained, on the 21st August, 1808, the assault of Junot, but sent him flying towards the heights of Terres Vedras. whither he was unable to pursue him. A year of uncertainty and humiliation followed, for Sir Arthur returned to England, superseded in command ; Sir John Moore's fatal retreat through North-west Spain, ending with the glorious victory of Corunna, intervened; and it was not till January, 1809, that Sir Arthur Wellesley, re-appointed, landed again at Lisbon, and advanced against the French under Soult, chased him out of Portugal into Spain, and met their army under Victor at Talavera on the Northern bank of the Tagus, 45 miles West of Toledo. On the 27th July, 1809, the battle was joined. Wellesley had with him about 25,000 men, aided by Cuesta's, the Spanish General's rabble called an army, numbering 30,000. These last were posted at the right of the position next the River Tagus and in front of the town of Talavera. On the left was a hill on which the British troops were posted, and this was the key of the position. On the evening of the 27th July, Victor attacked the British infantry on the hill, and sent column after column to the assault. In vain ! The British bayonet hurled them as they came on mangled corpses to the bottom ! Two thousand five hundred of the brave men who tried to storm that height, lay dead or dying there that night ! Bravely General Hill held his post that night and next day. But on the 28th July, a dreadful peril happened to the hosts of Israel, which, had it not been for their Divine protection, they had not been able to escape ! That day, when one of the attacks of the French had failed, and the British and German troops had pursued their flying foes too far, the latter fell into disorder, and in their turn were attacked by fresh French troops. The German legion was destroyed ! The British centre was pierced by the French ! and all was apparently lost ! Not so ! Man's extremity is God's opportunity. and He maintained His people's cause, whom He sent "to go out to battle against their enemies" into Spain. Sir Arthur had provided for this mischance, and instantly remedied it. He ordered the 48th Foot to occupy the gap formed by the breach of the British line, and to drive back the foe. And well that duty was performed ! The 48th sprung forward, and by their fire "withered and checked the torrent of the French attack," and hurled them down the hill again !

Thus ended the battle of Talavera ! The French, who were 50,000 in number, opposed to half that force of the British, after this fatal repulse, retreated across the Alberche during the night, confessing to a loss of 7,000 men killed and wounded—ours being about 4,000 to 5,000. The victory was celebrated by the bestowal upon Sir Arthur Wellesley of the title of Viscount Wellington, of Talavera, the first of a series of similar honours which terminated only in his attaining the highest rank to which a subject not of the royal blood can attain. Such was the battle of Talavera, one of the typical battles of Israel. It was fought out of their own land, at a long sea voyage distance from their base of operations in the native land of the troops engaged. The British, always a handful, not well provided with artillery or cavalry, were miserably served by their so-called allies, who, being consumed with jealousy of the strangers fighting for them, often treated Sir Arthur and his soldiers like open enemies, robbed, plundered, and betrayed them. And yet, though outnumbered by the foe, though served by bad allies, and feebly supported by a divided people at home, the British General and his gallant but small army were crowned with victory after victory by the Lord God of Israel. And why? Because, being Israel, they were still under the covenants of the New and Old Testament-blessing to the House of Israel, and God "heard in heaven their prayer and their supplication, and consequently He maintained the cause of His servants and the cause of His people Israel at all times as the matter required" (1 Kings viii. 59). Protected by the covenants of Solomon's prayer, the Lord watched over Israel's host under Sir Arthur Wellesley in the campaign which ended with the repulse of the French at Talavera, and "maintained their cause." We shall see as we proceed through the wondrous story of the Peninsular and Napoleonic Wars, that never once did the Lord forget His people, but always and at all times saved, succoured, and befriended them, giving them the victory over their enemies, and causing them to rejoice in His salvation

(To be continued).

THE Rev. J. Wild, D.D., of Brooklyn, U. S., says, in his recent book, that many have been savingly and truly converted to God through his discourses on "The Lost Ten Tribes and 1882." Let our opponents note this.—ED.

Digitized by Google

Reviews.

The Promises to Abraham, with Select References and Explanatory Notes, &c. By W. S. Cavill. Price sixpence. Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

We call our readers' attention to this valuable tabulation of Scriptural promises to Abraham our forefather, which Mr. Cavill has drawn up, joining with them other passages of the Word which "form a clear and undoubted commentary on them." Our author rightly observes that the promises to Abraham are the foundation of Identity belief and research, and with a view to that fact we think he has produced a very excellent vade mecum which cannot fail to be useful to the inquirer, to the Identity lecturer, and to the large and increasing number of our writers on the subject. The plan on which this part of the work is arranged is practical and useful. We have the text first named; then in parallel columns the promises quoted in full from the same, followed in the last part of the page by the Scriptural references which confirm or throw light on the promise quoted. Each cluster of promises is enriched by notes on the same, in which the author makes the Bible its own commentator. For "topical study" of God's Word the arrangement adopted by Mr. Cavill is well adapted, and we can imagine that for Identity readers and writers this pamphlet will become a valuable aide memoire.

At the end of his work Mr. Cavill has added a short treatise on "Israel Among the Gentiles." We are much pleased with the author's treatment of this part of our great subject, and feel that he is quite one with us in all our views as to the object our God had in mind in hiding Israel under her disguise, and in employing her, while so disguised as Gentiles, in evangelising the world. We wish our space allowed us to quote pages 45 and 46 of the work regarding this part of the subject treated, for our readers' gratification; but we have said enough to induce many, we hope, to make Mr. Cavill's work their own, and to peruse it for themselves. We wish it God-speed as a useful aid to Identity research and knowledge.

Nebuchadnezzar's Dream and the British Empire. By Ephraim. With prophetic map. Price fourpence. Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, E.C.,

We are glad to see another attempt to connect Daniel's dream of the metallic image and "the stone which becomes a mountain," with the British Empire. Since we ourselves wrote on this subject in No. 29, Life from the Dead, vol. iii., page 129, there have not been many who have entered on this path of interesting research and inquiry. Mr. J. G. Shaw. of Leeds, has published a very excellent little work on the subject, of which that now before us is a condensation.

It appears in the form of a letter to a friend abroad, and is illustrated by a map taken from Mr. G. Shaw's larger work, giving a picture of the great sprawling figure of the image stretching from the head of the Persian Gulf to Calais on the Straits of Dover, and to the East coast of Spain, at the Western extremity. The pamphlet, though very sketchy in its character and aim, is on the whole a useful little work, which will serve to introduce Mr. Gilder Shaw's more pretentious publication. We wish well to both, and trust, that being well conceived, and well executed, both pamphlets may have a large circulation.

The Gentiles and the Times of the Gentiles. By J. Leyland Feilden. Price Sixpence. W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

This little work is from the pen of our friend and ally, Mr. J. Leyland Feilden. Its object is to show, in the first instance, that the Gentiles of the Old and New Testaments are the hidden Israelites of the Ten Tribes—the Lo-ammi Gentilised people we are constantly identifying with the British folk. Mr. Feilden's second object is, we perceive, to warn his readers—the "Goim" inquirers of the present day—that we are living in times between the two latest termini—the space of 75 years—which bring to a close the "7 times" or 2,520 years that, in Mr. Feilden's view, are equivalent to the "times of the Gentiles."

In reference to the last point, our author relies a good deal upon Mr. Guinness's "Approaching End of the Age." He closes his pamphlet by stating his belief that while Satan's number is the three sixes—6 + 6 + 6—Israel's Royal Family, being an institution originally under God's ban, has the same number (!), since the age our royalty attains its majority is 6 + 6 + 6=18. Per contra, Mr. Feilden holds that the "number" of the children of Israel mentioned in Deut. xxxii. 8, was 7 + 7 + 7=21, a triad of perfect numbers.

In regard to the latter point thus raised, we fear we must state our conviction that the word "number" in Deut. xxxii. 8, had no reference at all to any particular numeral, but to the masses or multitude of God's people Israel, known, when the words were uttered, to Moses and his hearers. and known by prescience to the God who sees the end from the beginning.

In regard to the ingenious arguments by which Mr. Feilden endeavours to show that the Gentiles or Goim in God's Word, are synonyms for "Israel," we think some practical difficulties of interpretation occur to a person inclined to adopt that view. Let us see how a few texts answer to the rendering if we adopt Mr. Feilden's ideas. Hosea viii. 8 is distinctly a verse concerning Israel of the Ten Tribes and their disappearance (like Jonah in the whale's belly), when they were outcasted and sent out as "wanderers among the Goim" (Hosea ix. 17). Hosea viii. 8 read as Mr. F. would have us read the word Goim, is as follows:—

"Israel is swallowed up: now shall they be among the Israelites as a vessel wherein is no pleasure." Is that the meaning of the passage? Surely not. So in Hosea ix. 17 did God, we ask, send Ephraim to be "wanderers" among the Goim Israelites? Surely not again. Yet, if we understand Mr. F. aright, we are to come to that conclusion. The Holy Scriptures of the Old Testament, up to the date of the dispersion of Israel of the Ten Tribes, certainly deal with three nationalities—viz., the kingdom of Israel, the House of Judah, and the Gentiles. We do not see on what grounds Mr. Feilden alleges that no one in modern times identifies the Gentiles with Hottentots, Negroes, or Kaffirs. Why not? we would ask. God gave—at His Son's request—to the Lord's "inheritance," and, therefore, to Israel, the Goim or Gentiles as His free gift (Psa. ii. 8); and these include to-day certainly all the sons of Ham, millions of Hindoos, Chinese, Arabians, Australian blacks, Maories—the Gentile races, in short, embraced under the name Goim, granted in fee simple in the passage in question. These also are the dwellers in "the uttermost parts of the earth"—nay, "under the whole heaven" (Deut. ii. 25). If we are to accept Mr. Feilden's view, the passage would stand thus: "Ask of Me and I will give the Goim Israelites for, or to, thine inheritance"—i.e., I will give the Israelites to the Israelites. Referring to the New Testament, we find Cornelius, a Roman, and his party were all termed "Gentiles" in Acts x. 45. Were they then Israelites? We hope Mr. Feilden does not hold that error as some do, and so constitute, not the Romans only, but all the European world to be of the House of Israel.

The New Testament Scriptures, we affirm, know only of two races of men—namely, the Jews, representing Israel as the only Israelites extant or known then; and the Gentiles. Among the latter, no doubt, there were Gentiles and Gentiles. There were the Ten-Tribed House "swallowed up" and "wandering" even then in St. Paul's and St. Peter's days "among the Gentiles." St. Peter, doubtless, wrote to the Ten Tribes as "the dispersion" (1 Peter i. 1). In his second chapter, verse 12, he tells these same Lo-ammi people to have their "conversation honest among the Gentiles." Did he mean among the Israelites? If so, he indicated the Jews, for there were no Israelites qua Israelites then known. In truth he addressed the hidden Gentilised Israelites then "swallowed up" and living among the true Gentiles, just as Jonah was concealed and hidden by the whale's carcase, and our Lord was "hidden" while dead in "the heart of the earth" (Matt. xii. 40). As the Lord was concealed by the earth, as Jonah in the whale's belly was hidden, so is Israel of the Lo-ammi House now "swallowed up" by the Gentiles and concealed in those graves (Ezek xxxvii. 12, 13). The Gentiles, therefore, we submit (pace Mr. Feilden), are not the Israelites; but are the matrix in which, till the Identity be declared and Israel be revealed, that nation is now hidden from man's view.

We have delivered our verdict. We may, however, be in error, and urge our readers to judge for themselves. Let them all peruse Mr. Feilden's new pamphlet, and we are sure that even if they agree with us regarding "the Goim," there are parts of this little work which will well repay perusal.

We have received a capital little pamphlet, by J. Norman, of Exeter, on "Who and Where are the Lost Ten Tribes?" which we hope to notice soon. Price twopence. Chambers & Co., Exeter. —Ed.

Digitized by Google

Correspondence.

THE CHARACTER OF EVIDENCE PRODUCED AGAINST US BY THE "RECORD," MAY 12, 1879.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—The editor of the Jewish Chronicle has written an article in that journal, in which he gives it as his opinion that our case is "not proven." In reply to this opinion of one individual Jew, I quote the words of another individual Jew who resides in Newcastle; they are, "I have been persuaded for the last forty years that the Anglo-Saxon race are the lineally descended present representatives of our Lost Ten Tribes, from the incontrovertible fact that they alone, of all the nations of the earth, observe a Sabbath, whereby they prove themselves to be in possession of that sign which is common to ourselves and them, and given by the God of our fathers as a sign throughout our generations for ever." But does the editor of the Record, who transcribes this article from the Jewish Chronicle, really believe that Christian men, who of their ownselves judge what is right; who prove all things and hold fast that which is good; who are ready always to give an answer to every man who asketh them a reason of the hope that is in them with meekness and fear; who refer for all their proofs to the law and to the testimony, would give any weight to the opinion of a Jew, whose mind is so warped by the traditions of the Talmud that he is absolutely unable to see through that blinding vail; who sees no strength of reasoning in Gen. iii. 15; Isa. ix. 6, liii., and Dan. ix. 24—27? I have the assurance (ungentlemanly and un-Christian as it may appear) to declare, with the full persuasion that my declaration is true (and for the apparent want of courtesy I must beg the editor of the Record to excuse me in the cause of a truth so dear to me), that he himself does not value at one straw the assertions of all the Jews in the world in any matter connected with the interpretation of the prophets.

Further, I seriously consider his foisting this Jewish opponent into his pages to be a farce and a proof either of a wilful attempt to cast dust into the eyes of his readers, or a puerile joke altogether unworthy of the occasion. If the cause of our opponents requires buttressing up by such witnesses, it is indeed far gone and lost!!!

Non tal 'auxilio non defensoribus istis.

Yours faithfully,
H. MARRIOTT.

THE OBSCURITY OF JER. XXXI. 22.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—Seeing that my view of the above passage of the inspired Word is regarded by some as objectionable, I beg to state that it was not my intention to force it upon any mind as the only possible rendering of the Hebrew.

I will just compare it with another prophecy, and only so far set it before your readers as entirely satisfactory to the individual mind of myself alone. The reading I ventured to propose was, "The spouse shall return to the Mighty One;" and agreeable to this I read Isa. x. 21: "The remnant shall return, even the remnant of Jacob, unto the Mighty God." Yours faithfully,

HERBERT MARRIOTT.

"AND HE SET EPHRAIM BEFORE MANASSEH."

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—The British and Foreign Bible Society of England have published eighty-two million Bibles since the formation of the Association. The American Bible Society have published thirty-five millions.

No other society in the world approaches these numbers, the next highest being the Scotch National Society, which reaches four millions.

Let our friends, who hold to the North American Indian, the Chinese, the Persian, or other Identifications, explain this blossoming, and budding, and filling the face of the world with fruit, which so convincingly speaks for itself in support of our faith in opposition to their purely speculative ideas.

Yours faithfully,
H. MARRIOTT.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR MR EDITOR,—In the BANNER OF ISRAEL for this week, I was glad to find some more champions of Israel were battling with our opponent, "The Rev. Mr. Clifford," and that Psa. ii. was again the subject. It occurred to me, when reading the articles therein, that, as Scripture is of no private interpretation, he that is willingly led by the Spirit would, therefore, try and understand Scripture by Scripture. Now David, by the Spirit, wrote Psa. ii., and our Saviour in the Revelation, by the power of the Spirit, explains the verse of Psa. ii. which has been so much disputed of late. Christ sends a special message to each of the angels of the seven Churches, but at the end of each address He does not address the angel of the Church He is writing to, but the Churches. Now, in the end of the address to the Church of Thyatira He says these very remarkable words: "He that overcometh and keepeth My works unto the end, to him will I give power over the nations, and he shall rule them with a rod of iron; as a vessel of a potter shall they be broken to pieces, EVEN as I received of My Father."

I say, sir, the clear unmistakable explanation of this would be that Christ received from the Father the command to break the nations to pieces (heathen), and that mission He actually confers upon His own "heritage" Israel. Is it not, therefore, consistent to say, "Ask of Me and I will give the heathen to thine inheritance? and is it not most inconsistent for Christ to rule His inheritance with the rod of iron and dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel? To explain, or rather interpret, the passage in the original to mean "That God says to the Son, Ask of Me and I will give THEE the heathen for Thy inheritance," would land us in this predicament, that Christ intended to break His own inheritance to pieces as a potter's vessel! I place the heathen in the same category as the kings of the image of Nebuchadnezzar, and there is no mistake in that case! The stone kingdom, and not Christ, is to grind them to powder.

Yours faithfully,
H. SOWDON.

8, St. Andrew's-terrace, Belmont-road, Bishopston,
June 11, 1879.

JOHN BUTTERWORTH sends us the following extract from a Bombay paper, and suggests it is the first whispering of "Come out of her, My people" (Rev. xviii. 4):—"Naturalized citizens of the United States who have returned on a temporary visit to Germany, the land of their birth, have of late frequently been called upon by the German authorities to perform military duties and to respond to the obligations of laws, from which, as foreigners, they hold themselves to be exempt. This has led to numerous applications to the American Legation at Berlin to interfere on their behalf; and a recent despatch received at the Department of State at Washington, from the American Minister at Berlin, Mr. Taylor, gives some advice on the subject which these Americo-Germans will do well to follow. Mr. Taylor says that, in view of the prevailing political agitation in Germany, and the increased tendency towards repressive measures on the part of the Government, it would be well if naturalized citizens contemplating visits to their former homes were officially advised that many possible annoyances may be avoided by declaring the probable term of their stay to the local German authorities on arriving, and by abstaining from irritating political discussions; and by quickly obeying such municipal laws as apply to temporary as well as permanent residents. Another, perhaps more prudent, course might be adopted by German-born but naturalized United States citizens—namely, to refrain from re-visiting their "Father-land" until the advent of the Millennium.

EVIDENCE THAT PIAZZI SMYTH'S REASONINGS FROM GREAT PYRAMID TEACHINGS HAVE LED A SCEPTIC TO THE TRUE GOD.—We have much pleasure in quoting the following sent us by a friend at Portsea, taken from the Evening News of Portsmouth, under date May 20, 1879. If the perusal gratifies our readers as much as it does us, they will be well pleased indeed, and will join us in the cry of praise to the God of Israel! The matter relates to the proceedings of the Portsmouth Young Men's Christian Association. Yesterday evening, at the weekly meeting of the elocution class held at the rooms of the Association, G. Long, Esq., J.P., occupying the chair, MONS. DUSSURE read a paper on "The Great Pyramid," in which he argued that the subject of his paper, the largest and oldest known building in the world, must have been erected under Divine inspiration, and was intended in these latter days to give forth its wonderful parallelisms to the whole world. He had been converted by the reasonings of Professor Piazzi Smyth from scepticism to a knowledge of the true God. Messrs. Martin, Candey, Pullen, Way, and the president (Mr. Long) took part in the discussion which followed. Votes of thanks to the essayist and chairman having been passed, the meeting closed with prayer.

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements
(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O O payable at Ludgate-circus.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed :—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

BANNER FREE CIRCULATION FUND.

Donations, applications for grants, to be addressed to R. Fergusson Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London.

NEW BOOKS AND NEW EDITIONS.

Price 6d., post free 7d.

THE ISRAELITISH ORIGIN OF THE ANGLO-SAXONS, IRISH, SCOTCH, AND WELSH. An Historical Proof. by THOMAS C. BALMER. CONTENTS:—Division of Solomon's Kingdom—Kingdom of Judah and Kingdom of Israel—History of the House or Kingdom of Israel—Proof that They were Never Restored—Their Idols, Religious Festivals, Conversion, &c., &c.—Israelitish Origin of the Ancient Britons, Irish, and Scotch Traditional Account of Their Migration From the East—The Language and Religious Ceremonies Considered—Observations on the Future Restoration—Ultimate Destiny of the Holy Land.
London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

NOW READY, price 2d., post free, 2½d.
NEW PAMPHLET BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

THE HISTORICAL, ETHNIC, AND PHILOLOGICAL ARGUMENTS in PROOF of BRITISH IDENTITY with the TEN LOST TRIBES OF ISRAEL, clearly and simply stated.
BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

CONTENTS:—Introduction—The Celts—Professor Rawlinson's Testimony—The Cymry—The Cimmerii—The Gimiri and Khumri—The Testimony of the Nimroud Obelisk—The Scythians—The Anglo-Saxons—Sharon Turner's Testimony—The Jutes and Angles—The Danes and the Normans—General Conclusions—Philology—The Welsh Language—The Rev. Canon Lysons' Testimony—Idiomatic Identity Between Hebrew and English—Tyndal's Testimony—The Tribe of Dan—The Irish Celts—Are the Continental Nations Israelites?—Conclusions—Appendix.
London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane; and Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Just out. Price 4d.

NEBUCHADNEZZAR'S DREAM and THE BRITISH EMPIRE. By Ephraim. With Illustrative Prophetic Map.
London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; Sold by W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

This day. Price 2d. Post free 2½d.

MANASSEH AND THE UNITED STATES. An important Essay delivered before the "Lost Israel Identification Society," by the Rev. Joseph Wild, D.D., at Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, New York.

CONTENTS:—The Fulness of the Gentiles set in—For whom did God intend America—The Origin of the United States The Footsteps of Ephraim and Manasseh—The Will of Jacob made to Ephraim and Manasseh—Manasseh a People, and a Great People—Manasseh's Birthtime of Separation—Out of nearly Sixty Conquered Colonies the only one England ever Lost was that of Manasseh (America)—The Great Seal of the United States—Manasseh was brought up at the Door of the Pyramid, &c., &c.
London: Robert Banks, Racquet court, Fleet-street; W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.; and of any Bookseller.

SOME of PHILO-ISRAEL'S papers, as they have appeared in THE BANNER, will be separately published from time to time in the form of Letters, for distribution.
No. 1. "The Identity of the British with Lost Israel."
No. 2. "The Glory of God."
No. 3. "An Address to British Soldiers.' (Now ready.)
No. 4. "An Address to British Sailors." (Now ready.)
Others will follow. Price One and Sixpence per 100; less quantities in proportion: postage extra.
Apply to R. Banks, 5 Racquet-court, Fleet-street. Also all Booksellers and Publishers.

BOOKS, ETC.

Now ready, price 7d., post free 8½d.

THE JUNE MONTHLY PART OF THE BANNER OF ISRAEL. May be had, by ordering, of any bookseller or newsagent.
London: W. H Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row; and Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

CARD OF MEMBERSHIP FOR ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATIONS.
The New Card of Membership is now ready. Prices in quantities, 4d. each; single copies, 7½d. post free. Supplied to the Metropolitan, Bristol and Clifton, Huddersfield, and other Associations. It is highly commended by many of the leading advocates of the Identity movement. Apply, Geo. W. Staniland, Castle-street, Sheffield, England, Hon. Sec. Sheffield Anglo-Israel Association.

New and Revised Edition, Price 6d. Cloth boards, 1s.

THE "NEW OLD STORY," with an Introduction to a Marvellous Puzzle. The Story gives a sketch of the History of the Hebrews, shewing distinctly the difference between the Two Nations Judah and Israel, the latter being the British. The Story also tells of the Great Pyramid, and explains how its wonderful meaning can be, as it is only understood by measurement. An Appendix explains "The Eastern Question." The Story is written with great simplicity, and interests young children. By A E I, Author of "The Answer to the Eastern Question."
W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

Now ready price 7s., post free 6d. extra.

THE SECOND VOLUME OF THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.
EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

This volume contains a large number of articles on our Identity with Lost Israel, by the best and most learned writers on the subject. Also many interesting papers on the Great Pyramid by Professor Piazzi Smyth, F.R.S.E., Astronomer-Royal for Scotland, Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A., Major H. A. Tracey, R.A., Charles Horner, Esq., and others.
London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

Price 1d.; post free, 1½d.

GOD'S LOVE FOR ISRAEL, A GUARANTEE THAT HE WILL FULFIL HIS PROMISES TO ISRAEL. By JOHN GILDER SHAW.

Price 6d.; or with illustrative map, 8d.

BRITAIN (OR ISRAEL) THE FIFTH AND LAST, AND THE UNCONQUERABLE EMPIRE. By JOHN GILDER SHAW.

Price 3d.; post free, 3½d.

CHRONOLOGICAL CHART OF BRITISH VICTORIES OVER THE CONTINENTAL POWERS, ranging from the battle of Cressy (1346), to our last victory, the taking of Sebastopol, Sept. 8, 1855. Arranged by J. G. SHAW, of Leeds.
"We trust Mr. Shaw's labour in preparing this paper may be appreciated by the public and be largely sold."—Banner of Israel.
London: Published by Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; and may be had of the Author, 20 Park-row, Leeds, and of all booksellers.

THE GREAT PYRAMID. NOW READY, PHILO-ISRAEL'S NEW WORK, 56 pages, Illustrated with Diagrams, price 4d., post free 5d.

OUR IDENTITY WITH THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. By PHILO-ISRAEL. Price 4d. Third Thousand (reprinted from the Clifton Chronicle).

PHOTOGRAPHIC PORTRAITS OF PHILO-ISRAEL, Editor of THE BANNER OF ISRAEL, Author of "The History of the House of Israel," &c., &c. Cabinet, 2s., post free; Carte-de-Visites, 1s., post free.
London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet street.

ARE THE ENGLISH PEOPLE THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL? By PHILO-ISRAEL. Price 4d.
London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

WALTER KEAST'S Old Established BOOT AND SHOE WAREHOUSE, 102, KENNINGTON PARK ROAD, LONDON.

Gentlemen's Boots & Shoes for	Ladies' Boots and Shoes for
Winter and Summer, House and Garden, Walking, Riding, Rowing, Fishing, Shooting, &c.	Winter and Summer, Walking and Riding, House, Garden, or Dancing, &c., &c.

Children's Boots for School, Walking, Garden, or Sea-side.
Slippers in great variety at moderate prices.
Schools and Public Institutions supplied at wholesale prices.
Note the address—WALTER KEAST, 102, Kennington-park-road, S.E.

IS IT NOT REASONABLE? A Dialogue on the Anglo-Israel Controversy. By the Right Rev. BISHOP TITCOMB. Price 3d.; 18s. per hundred for distribution.
London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

BOOKS, ETC.

This day is published. 8vo., cloth gilt, price 3s. 6d. post free.

A DISSERTATION ON THE CELESTIAL SIGN OF THE RAINBOW In connection with THE SACRED "OATH OF THE SEVENTH," BEING An Exposition of its Expansive Significance in accordance with the Teaching of TRANSCENDENTAL MASONRY.

BY PROTEUS.

"The publication is designed to be a dissertation on the celestial sign of the rainbow, in connection with the sacred 'Oath of the Seventh' in accordance with the teaching of Transcendental Masonry. It is full of cabalistic lore and mythologic suggestion, but at the same time it contains and popularises a large share of polyglot learning, to appreciate which one need not belong to the craft. Even as a dictionary of root words and root tracing the dissertation is both educative and interesting."—Freeman's Journal.
"As Freemasons we are always bound to be tolerant and trusting, no less than open to conviction, and friendly to free discussion, and we, therefore, note the appearance of a class of literature, remarkable in itself."—Freemason.
Dublin: Hodges, Foster, and Figgis, Publishers to the University.
London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

Now Ready. Price 3d.

THE WIMBLEDON ANGLO-ISRAEL DEBATE. A verbatim Report of the Debate held at Emmanuel Church, Wimbledon, on Thursday, June 5th, 1879, containing the speeches delivered by Colonel Sandwith, Rev. Bourchier Wrey Savile, Rev. J. W. Wilkinson, Rev. C. W. Hickson, Mr. Frank White, Mr. Douglas A. Onslow, J.P., Rev. S. Garrett, Rev. F. R. A. Glover, and the Rev. H. E. Brook.
London: Issued by the "Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association;" and published by W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

"THE MERCHANTS OF TARSHISH"—ENGLAND, AMERICA, AND RUSSIA, IN THE LAST WAR (Ezek. xxxviii., xxxix). By the Rev. SAMUEL MINTON, M.A. Price 6d.
Elliot Stock, 62, Paternoster-row.

TO AUTHORS. Authors desirous of issuing Works or Pamphlets on the great and increasingly interesting Question of the Identity of the Lost Ten Tribes with the British Nation, should first communicate with Robert Banks, of Racquet-court, Fleet-street, who has already been honoured by issuing, amongst others, the following works on the subject:
The Banner of Israel. Weekly 1d.; monthly 7d.
The Nation's Glory Leader. Weekly 1d.; quarterly 1s 4d.
The Pillar of Witness. By late Captain Tracey. Cloth 2s. 6d.; paper 1s 6d (second edition).
The Anglo-Israel Post Bag. By Bishop Titcomb. Cloth 2s. 6d.; paper 1s. 6d. (second edition).
The History of the House of Israel. By Philo-Israel. Cloth 1s.; paper 6d (sixth thousand).
The Great Pyramid of Egypt. Fifty-two pages, with three illustrations. Price 4d. (10,000).
The New Old Story. By A E I. Cloth 1s.

Why be Deaf when you may hear?
Take the help to you brought near.

DEAFNESS. Noises in the Ears! Medicine! Trumpets! Food! and Vigorous Health! The Rev. E. J. SILVERTON will send his Health Advocate, giving important advice and particulars on the above subjects, free to any person, showing how Deafness and other diseases may be at once relieved and ultimately cured. Thousands of persons are being benefited by these means. The Medicine for curing Deafness has usually been sold in boxes at 11s. each. It is now offered in boxes at 2s. 6d.; if stamps, 2s. 8d. The Trumpet for 12s., is now offered for 9s. 6d.—Of every Chemist, and all wholesale London Houses, or direct from the Rev. E. J. SILVERTON, Albert House, Park-street, Nottingham (Pastor of Exeter Hall Church).

WOOLS! WOOLS! WOOLS! Cheapest and Best. White and Black Berlin, Single and Double, 3s. 6d. per pound. Best quality Ice Wools, all Colours, 5½ per ounce ball. All other Wools at proportionate prices. Shetland, Andalusian, Fleecy, and Bonne Mere Wools. Welsh, Scotch, Peacock Victoria, and other Yarns. Crowel Filoselle Silk. M. WHELLENS, Wholesale and Retail Wool Warehouse, 3, 5, & 6, QUEEN'S TERRACE, CAMDEN ROAD LONDON.
Send for Price List and Sampler, which will be forwarded free on application.

LADIES' SILK SCARVES, price 1s. The choicest Silk Scarf ever offered. All Colours; richly brocaded ends. Send stamps for a sample.
M. WHELLENS, 5 & 6, Queen's-terrace, Camden-road, London, N.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, 5, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW WEDNESDAY, JULY 2, 1879. [All Rights Reserved.]

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. III. No. 132. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, JULY 9, 1879. [ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
The Death of the Prince Imperial and the Zulu War	277
The Blessings on Israel	278
The Right Rev. Bishop of Rangoon on the Rev. J. B. Clifford's Recent Pamphlet	279
A Lecture at Clifton, Bristol, in Refutation of the Charges of "Blasphemy" Lately Made by the Rev. J. B. Clifford	279
The Chosen People. A Lecture by John T. Gott. Part VIII.	281
"The British Israel's Identity Literature Corporation (Limited)"	283
The Leading Journal on the English Language	283
Poetry.—Revival of the Hope of Israel	283

THE DEATH OF THE PRINCE IMPERIAL AND THE ZULU WAR.

IN common with every right-minded person in these islands we have heard of the death of the Prince Imperial in Zululand with the deepest sorrow and regret. We feel greatly for his widowed sorrowing mother, now an honoured guest in England. We regard the youth just fallen in Israel's cause as one of ourselves, for he lost his life in doing battle for our country, and we think of him as one of the princes of the land of our birth.

The whole story is a very touching, very sad one. We look back on his career, and that of his father, and of his father's uncle, with solemn awe, since we see in them the close of a dynasty whose record is in the Word of God (Isa. xiv. 22, and "remnant"). The death of the Prince Imperial, moreover, adds startling emphasis to what God is doing with our race in the savage lands of our present enemies, the Zulus. The sudden awful death of the aspirant to the throne of a European Empire has riveted the attention of all France upon our nation's action in South Africa. The strange indecision and apparent vacillation of Lord Chelmsford, who has improved no military advantage and followed up no success, has, on the other hand, made our position such that the whole civilised world is gazing in amazement at the barren results of a contest where all this great empire's strength seems foiled by naked savages, who are really few in number, and wanting every appliance of modern warfare in their contest with the best and bravest soldiery of Christendom.

How are we to account for the facts? How is it that God permits our nation to be thus set at naught, while we are in reality the chief of all? It befits us not in these circumstances to dogmatise. But we may venture an opinion which the light of our Identity seems to justify, and which we set out for our readers' consideration just for such value as they may consider it to be worth. Let us for a moment suppose that the battles of Ginglelova and Kambula Kop had been followed up by vigorous action, and such results obtained thereby that the Zulu nation had fallen prostrate at our feet last April, and Cetywayo had then sued for peace. Does any sane man suppose that in the temper our people were at that time there would have been any desire or intention whatsoever on our part to interfere in the government of the Zulus, to dethrone their savage king, or do more than secure a patched up peace to last for a few years and certain to break out again in open war when the Zulus were prepared afresh for action? At this moment also, sick as the nation and the people seem to be of an inglorious contest which has brought us only hard knocks, much loss of blood and treasure, no glory, and less renown, would not the country be glad if Sir Garnet Wolseley could so conclude a peace, however unsatisfactory, that forthwith we could be quit of the trouble for the present, recall our troops, and leave the Cape, Natal, Zululand, and the Transvaal to themselves? That, no doubt, would be the heartfelt desire of nine-tenths of our countrymen to-day. But what would be the result? The Cape colonists would be as averse as ever to confederation—knowing better than we in England seem to do, that nothing short of annexation of Zululand will make confederation safe for them, or render it possible for British colonists to live in safety in the neighbourhood of our Zulu enemies. The war would ostensibly thus be over, it is true, but God's will in reference to the formation of an Israelite nation at the Cape would be as far off as ever from accomplishment; and do we suppose that He would rest still and abide our time? His will, we believe, demands immediate confederation, and the birth at once of one of the company of Israel's nations. He therefore, we suggest, has caused our difficulties to increase. He has given our Commander-in-Chief the vacillating spirit we see to-day, and rendered his supercession needful.

The sad death of the Prince Imperial, which is such a startling blow, adds consternation and a nation's sorrow to what was trouble and grief before; till at last, taught by blow upon blow, trouble upon trouble, expense on expense, and loss upon loss, we shall do in the end what we have now set our faces, as a flint, on never doing at all—we shall have to dethrone Cetywayo, destroy his military organisation, disarm his people, take his country ourselves, "breaking and dashing it in pieces, like a potter's vessel, with a rod of iron," in order that his people may be brought to Christ (Psa. ii. 8—12); and in anticipation of the formation of that great independent "Confederated" nation belonging to England, which only awaits the conquest and annexation of Zululand to be formed at once, to fulfil God's will, and conduce to His glory.

Digitized by Google

Such, we believe, to be the real cause of all the present complications in the Cape Colonies. God has a controversy with us there because we will not fulfil His wise purposes. Those purposes were proclaimed in Psa. ii. 8—12, and perform them we must. The stroke will be laid on us till we do. The terrible events of Insandhlana, of Intombe, of Kambula Mountain, now the surprise in Bastoland and the Prince's death, all point, we think, in the same direction, and show God is withstanding us regarding the obstacles we offer to confederation, and demands of us the annexation of Zululand as the only way to effect that object. Once that be resolved on, just as the annexation of the Afghan Gates was declared to be the aim of our late war there, the difficulties in Zululand, we believe, will vanish, and the pacification of the country, with confederation in its train, will become easily accomplished facts. God's purposes, we believe, in Africa, as well as in Afghanistan, are purposes of mercy to Israel. He means to give us the heathen because we are "His inheritance," and the (people of the) "uttermost parts of the earth" because we are "His possession." We must, therefore, hold ourselves in readiness to fulfil His purposes, and not set our faces, as we are now doing, resolved when He bids, and the Cape colonists urge us to take over Zululand for our own, to do nothing of the sort, but merely to conclude in haste a patched up peace, leaving savage independence and heathen barbarity to a people whom Christ died to save, and whom He wills that we, as Israel (His dominion), should subdue, that we may bring them to Judah—His sanctuary—for their good (Psa. cxiv. 2). We ask our readers to consider current events in this, the light of our Identity, and we think if they will candidly reflect upon the sad and sorrowful occurrences which are presented to our view in South Africa to-day, they will see with us that God's hand is visibly working in all that is taking place, and that He is preparing us, against our will, for what must come at last (no reasonable man can doubt it)—namely, the incorporation of all Zululand and its inhabitants into the mighty empire of Israel's Queen, Victoria!

THE BLESSINGS ON ISRAEL.

OUR opponents are always reminding us that the Twelve Tribes of Israel were obnoxious to the curses pronounced for disobedience to God's laws and will, and that therefore the Ten as well as the Two Tribes must now be under the said curses. The Rev. J. W. Wilkinson, at the Wimbledon conference, was very particular on this point, and seems to have actually spelt out the word "few"—"f-e-w, few"—to show his hearers that fewness in number being a part of the curses pronounced on the Twelve Tribes for disobedience, the whole must now be f-e-w in number since all disobeyed. "If you can find any people on the face of the earth an innumerable host, until 'innumerable host' and 'few in number' are convertible terms, you will see," he said, "that Anglo-Saxons, if an innumerable host, are not the few in number that Israel is to be while in the lands of their dispersion." Just so. But Mr. Wilkinson is one of those divines who never has, does not now, and we fear never will, "see" that there are "Israelites and Israelites." With him all the "Israelites" were and are "Jews," and all "Jews" were and are Israelites." He cannot understand there being in existence now "Israel obedient" as distinguished from Jews who are "Israelites disobedient." The latter, as he himself admits, must be, and are, "few;" but if God's Word be true, the other, if existing, must be multitudinous, which, Mr. Wilkinson doubtless knows, means "many," and not "few."

The following are the texts that show (God being true and the Bible not being a fable) that "obedient" Israel was to cease to be "few," and to become "many." They are Deut. xxviii. 1, 4—11, 13, xxx. 1, 2, 9; Hos. i. 10; Ezek. xxxvii. 10—the last two passages showing that "the multitude" was to be realised before the return to Palestine of the Twelve Tribes, in the Lo-Ammi wilderness land, nay, in Israel's GRAVES. When Mr. Wilkinson has explained these passages on his principles and learnt to see the Scriptural distinction between Israel and Judah, we shall be willing to take a lesson from him in spelling and learning the meaning of the word "f-e-w."

We wish now to point out to Mr. Wilkinson, to Mr. Roberts, and to other opponents, a fact which perhaps they have hitherto overlooked. These gentlemen, by the way, though they differ from each other on every doctrine of the Christian religion (we wonder if Mr. Roberts' belief falls under the same category as an Evangelical Churchman's?), yet join hands in their earnest desire to destroy "our Identity" and God's glory with it. The fact we ask them to ponder is this: The patriarch Jacob, when about to leave the world, speaking by the inspiration and teaching of God's Holy Spirit, bestowed upon his two grandsons, the sons of Joseph, a blessing which for splendour, for extent, for depth, and for greatness, was not paralleled by any he bestowed upon his own sons. Not on Judah did such come from Israel's lips! Not to Joseph himself does God's Word show that the patriarch gave such particular and such grandly unique blessings. What were they?

1. That the God of his fathers, the Angel who had redeemed him, might bless the two lads (a world of blessing was therein contained).
2. That his own name, ISRAEL, the prevailing one with God and man, might be named on them (this was given to none of his own sons, not to Judah, not to Joseph, nor to the rest).
3. That the names of his fathers Abraham and Isaac might come on them.
4. That THEY might increase, as fishes do increase, in the midst of the earth (blessings these, reserved only for the grandsons; but not so fully given even to Joseph).
5. That they might become two separate powerful people.
6. The one "great," though standing (as Manasseh) alone.
7. The other "greater than he," because representing Melo-hag-goim—or "the nation and company of nations"—the "ten thousands of Ephraim" against the "thousands of Manasseh."

Our opponents will see that on the sons of Joseph (not on Judah at all) these peculiar and unique benedictions devolved. They were to be named especially "Israel." They were to be called par excellence "the sons of Isaac," or "Isaac-suna," Saxons. They were to be constituted "the seed of Abraham," "the spiritual house, which St. Paul so pointedly shows are the true Christian "sons of God," who constitute "the Church of Christ," found chiefly in connection with our own Anglo-Saxon race—more here than among any of the Gentile nations (Psa. cxlvii. 19, 20). To these two sons of Joseph were granted, and that without condition of any sort (let Mr. Wilkinson notice that!), the heritage of fecundity. They were to be, and none could or can let it, "a multitude." The word f-e-w was not to be their characteristic; but, on the contrary, the attribute of m-a-n-y, spelling "many" (see also Heb. xi. 12).

Let Mr. Wilkinson try to find any condition in the passage we have been quoting from Gen. xlviii. 15—22, and if he succeed we shall be prepared to admit that he is right. Till then, we maintain, that God being true, and His Word being also true, we are positively bound by the written promises of Jehovah to find that while Judah is, being yet "disobedient," "few in number," and therefore responding to the curse, there must be somewhere two races extant in the world to-day representing now Ephraim and Manasseh; the one "a nation and a company of nations," abnormally multitudinous, being Israel obedient; the other a separate and a "great" nation," similarly remarkable for vast and rapid multiplying power, both called Isaac-suna or Saxons; both testifying they are, as regards large numbers of their nationalities, "the seed of Abraham," and both now calling themselves and claiming to bear "the name of Israel."

Digitized by Google

The argument, to our view, seems particularly strong, and it shatters Mr. Wilkinson's little lesson to us in spelling completely, since it shows that so far from expecting to find the whole of the Twelve Tribes now under curse, and therefore "few" in number, God's Word distinctly shows that some Tribes of the House of Israel or Joseph must now be existing separate from the "few" men of Judah, both great Saxon nations, independent of each other, each wonderfully fecund, and rapidly increasing—even as fishes do increase—each belonging to, and now called, Israel, each possessing larger masses of truly converted Christians in their body politic than any other nation can produce—the one representing Ten-Tribed Ephraim-Israel, the other God-blessed Manasseh of the States.

Reader, we have reason to thank God for our opponents, since their opposition not only proves that their acquaintance with "the mystery of Israel" is limited, but leads us by prayerful study to find beauties and glories in God's Word, of which we had no knowledge or suspicion before.

N.B.—A hint from Mr. Matthew Mark, of Liverpool, has led us into the above train of thought, and we beg to tender him our thanks.

THE RIGHT REV. BISHOP OF RANGOON ON THE REV. J. B. CLIFFORD'S RECENT PAMPHLET.

In the BANNER OF ISRAEL, No. 125, May 21, 1879, page 210, we stated that on the second of that month we had forwarded to the Right Rev. Bishop Titcomb a copy of the Rev. J. B. Clifford's recent pamphlet, that we had pointed out those passages in it which seemed to reflect on his lordship, and asked him also for an explanation of certain remarks he appeared to have made to our opponent, regarding our published views on Psa. ii. 8.

The good bishop's reply was received by us on June 28, 1879, by return mail, and we hasten to place it before our readers, not quite in extenso, because the letter is, though intended for public use, written in part, we think, as a private communication to ourselves. We publish, however, what is needed to explain the bishop's conduct and words, to clear up what seems obscure in our reverend opponent's pamphlet on the subject of his lordship's opinions, and generally to set this matter before our readers as Bishop Titcomb views it. He wrote as follows:—

"Bishop's House, Rangoon, May 29, 1879.

"MY DEAR PHILO-ISRAEL,—In a country like this, where life may be described as a perpetual battle with heat, I shall certainly not inflame myself in an angry controversy with Mr. Clifford. My letters were strictly private, and written freely without the least idea they would be published. It is now nearly two years ago. So that I cannot positively remember whether Mr. Clifford ever gave me notice of his intention to publish my remarks, or asked my permission. I am, however, under the full conviction that this is one of the most flagrant cases of violated confidence ever to be met with. I wrote him with unsuspecting trustfulness, and of course with a gushing freedom I should never have adopted had I thought that they would be circulated among the public. By this proceeding he has gained an unjustifiable advantage over me; but it has been done (as I conceive) at the sacrifice of loyalty to that code of faith and honour which most gentlemen regard as supreme, and by a line of conduct which he himself repudiates in the note on page 34.

"The attack is too violent and unfair to be taken any notice of, and I shall treat it with silent contempt. As for his remarks about Isa. xlii., I wish you would look over your BANNER between May and November, 1877. I am under the impression that I wrote a short letter or article on that chapter, shewing the double interpretation of it, as having reference both to Christ as the then IDEAL Servant of the Lord, and to Israel the then real servant of the Lord—arguing that the picture of Messiah's person was to be seen in it most clearly, yet not to the exclusion of the Israel whom He represented. It was something of that sort. I know I sent it to Mr. Clifford; but while, for controversial purposes, he has quoted impulsive and vehement words never meant but for his own eye, he has disingenuously omitted that portion of my correspondence.

* * * * *

"If Mr. Clifford, or any of my friends, put me down for a Rationalist, let me beg them to read my book 'Before the Cross' (Religious Tract Society). No, no! I hope I have left my marks on my dear old country, which will make me quite independent of Mr. Clifford's criticisms.

"With regard to my writing as against yourself with any consciousness or any premeditation, dismiss it from your mind.

"My work out here is very hard and discouraging, though deeply interesting in many ways. How long I shall stand the climate I cannot tell; but there is one thing I am glad of, and that is, to get beyond the strife of bitter and rancorous controversy. Here we live in peace.

"Yours sincerely,

"J. H. RANGOON."

So far Bishop Titcomb. For ourselves we are quite satisfied. Doubtless the words Mr. Clifford parades were used. They were the bishop's opinion, when written, of our interpretation of Psa. ii. 8; words by him unguardedly expressed, too strongly urged, meant only for Mr. Clifford's eye; intended, perhaps, to disarm a known antagonist by a certain definite concession; but unfortunate in its results. We do not complain of them, and are perfectly content. For we know the good bishop never expostulated with us, and therefore we are sure his views of our opinions were either modified before he left England, or at any rate he did not deem the matter of really great importance on further consideration.

Of Mr. Clifford's conduct in using the late canon's letter at all, the public must judge. We shall offer no opinion. The charge against the bishop in respect to Isa. xlii. 1—4 seems to us to have been exploded by the latter's explanation of his views, though we do not doubt Mr. Clifford will fail to deem it satisfactory even now.

A LECTURE AT CLIFTON, BRISTOL, IN REFUTATION OF THE CHARGES OF "BLASPHEMY" LATELY MADE BY THE REV J. B. CLIFFORD.

We beg to annex a report taken from the Bristol Mercury and Daily Post of June 20, 1879, giving a detail of a crowded meeting held in the Victoria-rooms on the 19th, to hear a most excellent and able lecture from the Rev. H. Marriott, in refutation of the Rev. J. B. Clifford's recent pamphlet.

The report speaks for itself. We have only to thank God for the complete exoneration it afforded to ourselves and all who hold with us, regarding our rendering of Psalm ii. 8, as well as on other matters in which we have lately been doing battle with our rev. opponent. The meeting was enthusiastic and earnest, plainly showing that popular feeling in Bristol and Clifton was quite against Mr. Clifford, and in favour of our friends. Again we say, we thank God for this result, and pray He may soon open the Rev. Mr. Clifford's eyes, so that he may rejoice with us that we are indeed Israel. The report is as follows:—

Digitized by Google

THE ANGLO-ISRAEL CONTROVERSY.

A lecture in defence of the Anglo-Israelites against the Rev. J. B. Clifford's "Recent Unjust Charges of Blasphemy" was delivered last night in the Victoria-rooms, Clifton, by the Rev. Herbert Marriott, M.A., of Amberley Rectory, Stroud. There was a large attendance. Colonel Savile presided. A portion of Scripture having been read, and prayer offered,

The CHAIRMAN said the controversy which had led to this meeting had become so warm that it was incumbent on him to justify his position in taking the chair that evening. "Philo-Israel," whose views had been so severely condemned, was a personal friend of his own. He had long known him, and he had long listened to his views with the greatest interest, and on more than one occasion countenanced them in public. He was associated with him in a society which had for its object the maintenance of strict evangelical doctrines in the Church of England. Philo-Israel was also one of the hon. secretaries of that grand agency—the Church Missionary Society—for carrying the Gospel in all its purity to the ends of the earth. He was likewise the active hon. secretary of the Waldensian Church Missions in Italy, and of the South American Missionary Society—societies which were engaged in equally faithful work. He was treasurer of the Jews Society, and a cordial supporter of other societies engaged in disseminating the Gospel. Yet the views of this man on one text of Scripture were characterised by a minister of the Gospel highly respected amongst them (applause), eminent for his piety and faithful labours in the cause of truth, as "more hideously blasphemous than anything he had met with in all the records of infidelity or Popery." Such a charge, coming from such a quarter, demanded his serious and respectful consideration. If, after weighing the interpretation put upon this passage by Philo-Israel, he found this severe condemnation justified, it would become his duty not only not to preside at that meeting, but to dissociate himself from his friendship, and endeavour to save these societies from his influence. If, on the other hand, he found the condemnation unwarranted, it became his duty as a gentleman and a Christian to extend to him his sympathy and support. (Cheers.) The passage, the comment on which excited such indignation, and called forth such severe denunciations, is in Psalm ii. 8: "Ask of Me, and I shall give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession." Philo-Israel suggested that that was a promise of God to His own people, to be fulfilled in the future. His denouncer asserted that it was a promise to Christ, and Christ alone. Now, it was the province of the lecturer that evening to defend Philo-Israel from the charge of blasphemy for suggesting this interpretation; but perhaps he might be permitted to express briefly the thoughts which led him to believe that the interpretation was not only not blasphemous, but probably correct, and that in consequence, when invited, he was bound to preside at that meeting. (Cheers.) Looking at the passage, the first thing that struck one was that the form of language—"Ask of Me"—was more like that addressed by God to His own people than by one person of the glorious Trinity to another. Again, the same promise was made by our blessed Lord in Rev. ii. 26, 27, to His "overcoming" people; therefore it could not be blasphemous, even if a mistake, to suggest that the promise in Psa. ii. was made to the same person or persons as that of Rev. ii., the thing promised being identical. But Mr. Clifford said, "Look at the two previous verses; they are addressed to the Son;" and that, in his opinion, settled the question. But look at a succeeding verse: "Be wise, ye kings." That was not addressed to the Son. Therefore, knowing how suddenly the subject changed in the prophetical Scriptures, had anyone a right dogmatically to assert that the intermediate passage was confined in its application to the Son, and that he who gave it a wider interpretation was a "blasphemer?" He was not there to defend all the utterances of the professed supporters of the Anglo-Israel theory. (Applause.) Many foolish and vain things had been said, but Philo-Israel was not responsible for them; many of them were a cause of sorrow and vexation to him, but for his consolation he might remember that no vital truth of God had ever been brought forward without professed adherents bringing discredit on the cause by their utterances. Therefore Philo-Israel might comfort himself with the thought that if he was propagating the truth of God, the more important that truth, and the more it tended to God's glory and the exaltation of His people, the more active would be the exertions of Satan to discredit that truth by both the violent opposition of its opponents as well as the unwise utterances of its professed supporters. But let him go on in faith. God would vindicate His own truth in His own time. The chairman concluded by deprecating the use of personalities by the speakers at the meeting.

Mr. MARRIOTT then proceeded with his lecture, and said the supporters of the Anglo-Israel theory had many little things to complain of in Mr. Clifford's pamphlet. They imagined that they perceived a great deal of rashness and injustice in the rapidity with which charges were brought forth without proof; they thought that they saw a great want of careful Biblical criticism which would lead to a thorough investigation of those grounds which they relied upon, and which they desired to present to the minds of all their intelligent fellow-creatures. They saw in the pamphlet certain new historical features brought to light and adopted apparently rather greedily in mature life after having never been thought of during a long ministerial career. What could be more astonishing to an Englishman historically than to be taught suddenly that he was really a descendant of Ham, and that that conclusion was an absolute necessity on account of the opinion of a person named Pinkerton, who was charged by an able historian in England with coming to the most rash conclusions, and being altogether chronologically wrong? The principle on which their identifying of themselves with the Ten Tribes of Israel rested had not been noticed by their revered friend—Mr. Clifford. It was faith. They rested their belief in the Identity of the English nation in faith in God's Word, and they had no other principle in coming to the conclusion to which they had been forced by the diligent study of the prophetical writings in the Bible. They had been accused of glorying in their union with Abraham as their father according to the flesh more than they did in their Saviour. They did not glory in Abraham more than they gloried in Jesus Christ. It was a profound mistake to say so; it was a misconception of their views. They gloried more in the Lord Jesus Christ than they did in a universe full of Abrahams. (Cheers.) He proceeded to carefully examine the eighth verse of Psalm ii., and denied that he and his friends were open to the charge of blasphemy for the view they had placed upon it. He went on to say that, as a minister of the Gospel, he had been sorely persecuted on account of his views on this subject. He very seriously questioned whether any clergyman in Bristol would accept him as his curate at present. (Laughter.) He had no fear that if Mr. Clifford would come to him and allow him to talk over with him one point at a time, in a spirit of Christian love, he could prove that he was a descendant from Shem through the line of Abraham, through the line of Ephraim, and one of those blessed ones extracted from Samaria and brought to these islands.

Mr. COX supported the views of the lecturer as to the Identity of the Anglo-Saxon race with the seed of Abraham.

Commander ROBERTS moved—"That this meeting, having heard the able lecture of the Rev. Herbert Marriott, M.A., is of opinion that the charges of blasphemy and unscriptural teaching which the Rev. J. B. Clifford has lately preferred through the press against those engaged in this place, in the publication of 'The Identity of the Anglo-Saxon Race with the Ten Tribes of Israel,' are unfounded and groundless, and that this meeting regrets that, in the discussion of this subject, language has thus been used which certainly is uncalled for and far too strong."

Dr. ANDREWS seconded the resolution, and regretted that so few clergymen were present to hear Mr. Marriott's exposition.

The resolution, which was characterised by the chairman as a temperate and moderate one when they remembered the awful charges that had been made, was carried with a few dissentients.

A Mr. WALTON stated that all he had read on the subject had failed to convince him that the British nation was descended from the Ten Tribes of Israel, and he contended that the lecturer had failed to prove the Anglo-Israel theory. He asked Mr. Marriott when the Israelites came to Great Britain; why it was that they ceased to observe the right of circumcision; why they discontinued the use of the Hebrew language; and how was it that their Identity had been concealed so long?

Mr. MARRIOTT said the questions did not belong to the subject of the meeting. The object of the gathering was to give him an opportunity of refuting the charge of blasphemy which had been brought against him and his fellow-believers.

Mr. E. W. BIRD (Philo-Israel) thanked the meeting for having passed the resolution, and said that it had wounded his heart to have the charge brought against him by Mr. Clifford in that "dreadful pamphlet." Mr. Clifford was under a tremendous misapprehension as to their views, but he was not angry with him, nay, he did not feel a spark of anger towards him.

A vote of thanks to the chairman closed the proceedings.

Digitized by Google

THE CHOSEN PEOPLE.

A LECTURE BY JOHN T. GOTT.

(Concluded from page 272.)

PART VIII.

IN conclusion, let me remind you that when you speak of Israel, you speak of Israel the man, and Israel the nation. The picture of the life of the man is the prophetical picture of the life of the nation—the one is the fac-simile of the other, and must be found and identified as such.

What was there in the character and conduct of Jacob the supplanter—the darling of Rebekah—to commend itself? Very little!

What was there in Israel of the Ten Tribes? Nothing! Just as Jacob went out from his father to spend many long years in exile, so did Israel of the Ten Tribes! Just as Esau abode still in the land with his father, so did the Jews.

The first night that Jacob spent away from his father's home he had a vision, and God renewed the covenant blessing with him and said, "I am with thee, and will keep thee in all places; and I will bring thee again into this land: for I will not leave thee until I have done that which I have spoken to thee of."

The very same thing must take place with Israel of the Ten Tribes. The books of the prophets are full of promises to them of precisely the same character.

These promised blessings were not made because of any inherent goodness in Jacob—the supplanter—but because of the covenant made with Abraham and Isaac. So of Israel—"Not for your sakes do I this, O House of Israel, be it known unto you."

Jacob set up a pillar, and vowed a vow, saying, "Since God will be with me." The general reading is, "If God will be with me," but this partakes too much of a bargaining character, very unlikely in one who had had such a vision, and whose mind was filled with solemn awe, fervent piety, and lively gratitude (Fausett). "Since God will be with me and will keep me in this way that I go, and will give me bread to eat and raiment to put on, so that I come again to my father's house in peace, and since (not if) the Lord shall be my God, then this stone which I have set up for a pillar shall be God's house, and of all that Thou shalt give me, I will surely give the tenth unto Thee." This is one of the landmarks in Jacob's journey. How he got to Haran we know not, and the way we know not, save that it was not by the ordinary route, for he fled in fear of his brother Esau.

How the ancestors of Anglo-Israel reached these shores can only be conjectured by the landmarks which have been left behind.

Jacob grew rich in Haran. He increased exceedingly, and had much cattle and maidservants, and manservants, and camels, and asses. And Israel in exile, in the isles of the sea, has grown rich and increased in precisely the same way.

Jacob's prosperity caused the unbearable jealousy of Laban's sons. It had been Laban's special request that Jacob should tarry longer with him, for said he, "I have learned by experience that the Lord hath blessed me for thy sake." And are not the nations of Europe jealous of Anglo-Israel? Jealous of our wealth, jealous of our supremacy, jealous of our territory, and jealous of our invincible sway.

We know that Jacob the supplanter was decidedly a changed man, yet his character was far from being perfect. There was much worldly wisdom about him, and while he was himself pious, we cannot say that he was imbued with any idea of the personal responsibility which devolved upon him in attending to the moral and spiritual welfare of his wives and children, and the many servants that composed his extensive household. One thing we know, Jacob's God, the Lord Jehovah was acknowledged, Laban acknowledged Him. And when Jacob called Leah and Rachel and expressed his determination to leave Laban, they both said, "Whatsoever God hath said unto thee do." But Rachel the beloved stole her father's idols. Therefore idolatry must have been practised in Jacob's household; and when we remember that in it he had many Mesopatamian retainers who were addicted to superstitious practices, we cannot but infer that there was a great amount of laxity displayed in the moral government and religious instruction of his family and dependents. They all seemed to act as pleased them best.

And what of Anglo-Israel to-day? are we not supplanters? Is not our national character far from being perfect? Nationally, are we not possessed of a great amount of worldly wisdom? And while we nationally profess to be, and are, doing the Lord's work—sowing the seed—are there not many idols in the land? Is not God the Lord Jehovah acknowledged in our midst and worshipped? Is there not manifest in our midst a great laxity of moral government? Is there not a total indifference to religious instruction? Are not all in these realms at perfect liberty to worship God, or set up an idol?

As a nation, we are the fac-simile of Jacob's household.

At the ford Jabbok, Jacob wrestled all night with an angel, and his name was then changed to Israel. When he crossed the brook, he halted on his thigh. How did he account for this lameness? There is no record! Neither do we find that he even intimated to them his change of name! Doubtless, he would tell the beloved Rachel, and thus some would know the true circumstances of the affair, while the great bulk of them would be utterly ignorant of them.

Now where is the parallel to this in our Anglo-Israelitish history? The wrestling has its exact counterpart in the fierce struggle which brought about the Reformation. True British history began immediately after, and that history tells of national blessing and Divine favour, and an ever-increasing realization of the world-wide meaning of the covenant promises. Were there any then who knew the great secret that we were God's chosen people Israel? The compilers of the beautiful liturgy of the Church of England must have had their minds illuminated with this sublime view that the British people were Lost Israel. The prayers and supplications we nationally offer to Almighty God are positive blasphemy if we be not God's chosen people—the Ten Tribes of Israel. We confess that we have erred and strayed like lost sheep. We beseech the Almighty to open our lips that we may show forth His praise. We call upon Him to have mercy upon us, to grant us His salvation, to hear us when we call upon Him, to make His chosen people joyful, to save them and bless His inheritance, to give us peace in our time, to make our hearts clean within us and to take not His Holy Spirit from us. But the great bulk of worshippers in the Church of England do not realize the fact that we are verily and indeed God's chosen people—the Ten Tribes of Israel—and consequently do not comprehend in the least degree the true meaning of the petitions we make to Almighty God. Thus we are living in the days when the predictions of Isaiah are receiving literal fulfilment. "This people (Israel) draweth near to Me with their mouth, and with their lips do honour Me, but have removed their heart far from Me, and their fear toward Me is taught by the precept of men," instead of by the precepts of God given by His prophets.*

* Therefore, God declares that He will proceed to do a marvellous work among this people—the chosen people—even a marvellous work and a wonder, for the wisdom of their wise men shall perish, and the understanding of their prudent men shall be hid. There are many men known to you, accounted wise and learned by the world, who denounce the idea that we are God's chosen people—the Ten Tribes of Israel—in language not always becoming and in terms not even Christianlike. We are heretics, blasphemers, and the like. But when we ask whether or not the Bible is true, whether or not the Bible has predicted the rise and fall of all the mighty nations that have hitherto existed, and if we be not the chosen people, in what part of Scripture do you find any predictions respecting the rise and fall of the British Empire—the most extensive, the mightiest, and the wealthiest that ever the sun shone upon, and we get no answer. It is easy to practise abuse. It is not so easy to answer common sense questions respecting Biblical truth.

Digitized by Google

To return to Jacob or Israel. We find that he was between eight and ten years in the land before he thought of fulfilling that vow which he had made thirty years before at Bethel, the conditions and terms of which had been fully realized by himself. Here we have a trait in his character difficult to understand. Had he lapsed into spiritual indolence, or was he ashamed of his past career, and afraid to give expression to his convictions, and to set a better example as the head of the household?

Many trials and calamities had befallen Jacob during the last few years in which his vow remained unperformed. But his covenant-keeping God, after long waiting, said unto him, "Arise, go up to Bethel, and dwell there, and make thee an altar unto God that appeared unto thee when thou fleddest from the face of Esau thy brother."

Jacob had to be sent to perform his vow! We have seen him doubting, yet yielding under temptation. We have seen him planning and succeeding in his worldly schemes. We have seen him the deceiver, deceived many times over. We have seen him wrestling with the angel of the covenant. We have seen him a man of prayer. If you study the life of Jacob the supplanter Biblically, you will see one who began from the lowest step of the ladder and gradually ascended until, in peace and tranquility, he passed away from this earthly sphere.

So must it be with Israel the nation; buried out of sight, raised up from their graves, waiting for the light. Ever rising—ever taking in a broader view—ever gaining clearer conceptions of her destiny—ever working out the behests of the Almighty, and waiting now for the quickening power of the Spirit of God.

When God commanded Jacob to go up to Bethel, we see the patriarch nerved to do that which he should have done long before.

Then Jacob said to his household and to all that were with him, "Put away the strange gods that are among you and be clean, and change your garments." Here is a reformation in the household of an extraordinary character. Unexpected, too, and yet one that must be and was obeyed, no matter how reluctant some may have been. They gave Jacob all the strange gods that were in their hands, and all their earrings which were in their ears, and Jacob buried them out of sight for ever, beneath an oak tree by Shechem, and thus put an end to idolatry in his house.

This transaction in Jacob's or Israel's life must yet find its counterpart in Anglo-Israel's career. You will observe that Jacob's name had been changed to Israel, but not yet is he known or spoken of as Israel. So we, the British people, are not yet recognised as Israel. There is a reformation in our national household first to be brought about! We have yet to put away our national idols and bury them out of sight for ever.

There must yet come a day of national humiliation and prayer before Almighty God. Jacob had many sad days of trouble and sorrow before he carried out this reformation in his household, and we are passing through similar troubles now.

After Jacob had performed his vow at Bethel, God appeared to him. He had never appeared to him since he had left Bethel. Now there was a visible manifestation of the Almighty's presence; and let it be observed that God at that time renewed His covenant promises made to Abraham and Isaac.

1. The promise of the inheritance of the land of Canaan.
2. The promise of a numerous posterity.
3. The promise of salvation, through them, to the world.

So of Israel. There has been no visible manifestation of Jehovah's presence in our midst, but there will be, for it is written, God will make a new covenant with the House of Israel and with the House of Judah. That covenant will be an everlasting one. And further that when the remnant of Israel of the Ten Tribes and the Jews shall return to their own land, the Lord will go before them and the God of Israel will be their rereward—a plain indication of the visible manifestation of the presence of God.

Pharaoh commanded Joseph to place his brethren in the best part of the land of Egypt. "In the land of Goshen," said he, "let them dwell."

The earth is the Lord's and the fulness thereof, and God Almighty hath promised to give to His chosen people, all the Tribes of Israel, a land which is the best of all the lands of the earth and in the most highly-favoured situation. Beautiful and fertile, it presents unknown capabilities if colonised and properly cultivated. Jehovah says:

It is a good land.
A land of brooks of water.
Of fountains and depths that spring out of valleys and hills.
A land of wheat and barley; vines, pomegranates and figs.
A land of olive-oil and honey.
A land wherein thou shalt eat bread without scarceness.
A land wherein thou shalt not lack anything in it.
A land whose stones are iron, and out of whose hills thou mayest dig brass.

What pen can describe a land better that the heart of man could desire to possess? This is the land God hath promised to give to His chosen people! This is the land of which the nations of Europe have awarded to the British the protectorate! This is the land the British people have already spied and mapped out! This is the land to which the Jews have long desired to be restored. This is the land which the Jews—to-day—believe they will ere long regain, through the instrumentality of the British people; Israel and Judah are to go together—and world-renowned facts loudly proclaim that we must be the long Lost Ten Tribes of Israel—the great bulk of the chosen people—no matter how blind the eyes of many may be who deny the fact, who cannot perceive the truth, or render the Bible a harmonious book.

In advocating such a subject as this we are not laying down a new way of salvation, or interfering in any way with Gospel teaching. We are simply endeavouring to establish a national fact, to prepare our kinsmen for national blessing, which will result in a blessing on the whole earth. The first Adam brought sin into the world, and thorns and thistles were the consequences; the second Adam was crowned with thorns, the curse laid on the earth, and He carried the curse away. So through the instrumentality of the chosen people all the nations of the earth shall be brought to a knowledge of the salvation which is in Christ Jesus. Then shall we sing one of the songs of Israel, sing it in spirit and in truth:—

"God be merciful unto us (Israel),
And bless us,
And shew us the light of His countenance; and be merciful unto us,
That Thy way may be known upon earth,
Thy saving health among all nations.
Let the people praise Thee, O God,
Yea, let all the people praise Thee.
O let the nations rejoice and be glad,
For Thou shalt judge the people righteously
And govern the nations upon earth.
Let the people praise Thee, O God,
Yea, let all the people praise Thee.
Then shall the earth bring forth her increase,
And God, even our own God, shall give us (Israel) His blessing.
God shall bless us (Israel), and all the ends of the world shall fear Him."

This is one of the songs of Israel, brimful of Israelitish teaching; one often on our lips, but how few see its meaning! "This people draweth near to Me with their mouth, and with their lips they do honour Me."

We have been eating the bread of adversity and drinking of the waters of affliction, and the dark cloud still hovers over our head. The watchmen of Israel must be vigilant. We hope soon to see the silver lining behind the dark cloud of adversity. That silver lining will usher in a ray of hope and the prospect of better times.

Digitized by Google

Times of peace and not of war.
Times of fair trading and honest labour.
Times of empty prisons and workhouses.
Times when we shall see an immense reduction in our national expenditure, and consequently a very considerable reduction in our taxes.
Times when the long-promised Holy Spirit shall be poured upon all flesh.
Times when all shall know the Lord from the least unto the greatest.
Times when there shall be no more dissent, but when a pure national religion shall be established.
Times that will usher in the dawn of the glorious days of Millennial rest.

This subject is an important one, and a serious one, and demands the attention of every conscientious Christian. We are now living in the days of positive reality.

In Jacob or Israel, the man, the first Divine revelation made to him was in a dream. In his latter days there was a visible manifestation of the Divine presence when he was wide awake. Formerly it was a visionary scene, now an actual reality; formerly Israel was a fugitive, solitary and destitute, now he is wealthy and at the head of a large establishment.

Just so with Anglo-Israel of the Ten Tribes. Once fugitive, desolate, destitute; now strong, wealthy, powerful, and at the head of the mightiest empire in the world. Anglo-Israel has the Land of Promise under her protectorate, its re-colonisation is in the near future. The time is drawing near when Jehovah will make His new covenant with His chosen people, and when the return of the remnant of Israel and all the Jews takes place, then may we anticipate the dawn of that glorious period when all shall know the Lord from the least unto the greatest; when God's name shall be magnified and glorified, and through the instrumentality of the chosen people His name shall be made a praise and become a blessing to all the families of the earth.

"THE BRITISH ISRAEL'S IDENTITY LITERATURE CORPORATION (LIMITED)."

As doubtless many of our readers peruse Mr. E. Hine's journal, the Nation's Glory Leader, we notice a scheme put forward on June 18, 1879, in No. 229, for the formation of a "Corporation" to establish a weekly, then a daily Identity newspaper, to establish a central publishing office, also depôts in leading towns, to buy up the copyrights of Identity works, to organise meetings, &c., &c., &c., &c., on a capital of, at first, £50,000, eventually of £250,000, with a prospect held out at once of not merely 50 per cent, but "100 per cent, seven times told."

The centre of the movement is to be Mr. Edward Hine, who desires all promises of (pecuniary) help towards this gigantic project to be sent to him. We only allude to this matter to state our firm resolution never to take part or any share in any plan for degrading our Identity into a money-making or money-bringing scheme. We cannot therefore approve of this project (if gravely proposed) or the terms in which it is announced, and though, of course, such repudiation may seem interested on our part, since its success would certainly, be the death of the BANNER OF ISRAEL, and of the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association, also the entire supercession of its labours in the cause as well as our own, we must run some risk of being misunderstood, preferring to declare what we do at once and without hesitation, that with the matter in hand we have no sympathy ourselves whatever, and we hope our friends will none of them countenance, directly or indirectly, so open a degradation of our glorious Identity, by reducing its publication to what Mr. Hine himself lately so strongly denounced—namely, to "a heartless mercantile organisation" (page 232, No. 228, Glory Leader).

THE LEADING JOURNAL ON THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE.

THE Times, in its sub-leader of December 11, 1877, administered a severe lecture to our friends, the Welsh, for certain foibles of character, with which, however, we have no concern here. We draw attention to the article merely to notice the views entertained by the leading journal of our peerless language, the one which we know, and as the Times editor affirms, "is so likely to be the chief language of the world." He says:—

"How and why, by what means, by what arts, in what arena, have the Scotch and Irish equalled and so often passed Englishmen in the imperial competition? Not in their own provincial tongue, but in that English language, with all its faults, so glorious, so powerful, so classical, and so likely to be the chief language of the world. Scotchmen and Irishmen are great as far as they are also Englishmen. They are not great without us and apart from us, but as members of our own family and sharers of our unsurpassed stock of common words, ideas, and associations."

The Times deems the English language, therefore, (1) glorious, powerful, classical; (2) likely to be the chief language of the world; (3) and the three great divisions of our nation—English, Scotch, and Irish—it regards as members of one family and sharers in one common stock of words, ideas, associations.

The Britons, Saxons, Angles, Jutes, Danes, Frisians, and Normans were therefore brethren, Tribes of one stock; and as their common language is destined to be "the chief language of the world," the language, we say, must follow the race, and the latter must be the "chief people of the world;" the chief of all the nations, the inheritors of the earth, gifted with universal dominion. These are but the Scriptural descriptions of Israel in the latter days, and are so far "blind testimonies," adduced by the leading journal, that the British are indeed God's people Israel.

REVIVAL OF THE HOPE OF ISRAEL.

(EZEKIEL XXXVII. 4—14.)

BONES of Israel, ye that lie
In the valley dead and dry,
Hear the word of prophecy—
Breath shall enter you again,
Bone and sinew, flesh and skin;
Live, ye members, dead in sin.

Hark, a noise! a sudden sound,
Bone with bone together found,
Shake and stand upon the ground.
Mark the sinews how they play,
See the flesh and skin o'erlay
Growing limbs of human clay.

Breath alone is needed now:
Come, O breath, and quickly blow:
Life thy precious gift bestow;
Hark! the elements are stirred,
Rapid as prophetic word
Mighty rushing winds are heard.

Hopeless lately, and forlorn,
Scatter'd as the dust in scorn,
Multitudes at once are born.
See the graves that open stand,
See the mighty martial band,
Homeward march to Holy Land.

Spirit of death and food of worms,
Such, the living Spirit warms,
God who promises, performs.

(Taken from a very old Hymn Book used in London.)

A CORRECTION.—We have been informed that J. C. N., in his paper on "Anglo-Israelism and its Opponents," published on page 239, No. 128, BANNER, has fallen into a singular error, which vitiates his whole argument. For whereas he quotes Mr. Roberts as having said that Josephus connected the Scythians with Gomer, the lecturer really asserted that the connection was with Magog according to Josephus. Mr. Roberts, it is added, quoted Gen. x. 2, and Josephus's history, in support of his allegations. We request J. C. N.'s attention to these points, and shall be glad to have his explanation. Our correspondent refers to page 65 of Mr. Roberts's published debate in support of the matters now alleged.

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements

(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O O payable at Ludgate-circus.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed :—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

BANNER FREE CIRCULATION FUND.
Mr. John Lovegrove ... ... 5s.

Donations, applications for grants, to be addressed to R. Fergusson Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London.

NEW BOOKS AND NEW EDITIONS.

NOW READY, price 2d., post free, 2½d.
NEW PAMPHLET BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

THE HISTORICAL, ETHNIC, AND PHILOLOGICAL ARGUMENTS in PROOF of BRITISH IDENTITY with the TEN LOST TRIBES OF ISRAEL, clearly and simply stated.
BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

CONTENTS:—Introduction—The Celts—Professor Rawlinson's Testimony—The Cymry—The Cimmerii—The Gimiri and Khumri—The Testimony of the Nimroud Obelisk—The Scythians—The Anglo-Saxons—Sharon Turner's Testimony—The Jutes and Angles—The Danes and the Normans—General Conclusions—Philology—The Welsh Language—The Rev. Canon Lysons' Testimony—Idiomatic Identity Between Hebrew and English—Tyndal's Testimony—The Tribe of Dan—The Irish Celts—Are the Continental Nations Israelites?—Conclusions—Appendix.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane; and Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Just out. Price 4d.

NEBUCHADNEZZAR'S DREAM and THE BRITISH EMPIRE. By Ephraim. With Illustrative Prophetic Map.

"We are glad to see another attempt to connect Daniel's dream of the metallic image and "the stone which becomes a mountain," with the British Empire. It appears in the form of a letter to a friend abroad. The pamphlet, though very sketchy in its character and aim, is on the whole a useful little work."—Banner of Israel.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; Sold by W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

This day. Price 2d. Post free 2½d.

MANASSEH AND THE UNITED STATES. An important Essay delivered before the "Lost Israel Identification Society," by the Rev. Joseph Wild, D.D., at Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, New York.

CONTENTS:—The Fulness of the Gentiles set in—For whom did God intend America—The Origin of the United States—The Footsteps of Ephraim and Manasseh—The Will of Jacob made to Ephraim and Manasseh—Manasseh a People, and a Great People—Manasseh's Birthtime of Separation—Out of nearly Sixty Conquered Colonies the only one England ever Lost was that of Manasseh (America)—The Great Seal of the United States—Manasseh was brought up at the Door of the Pyramid, &c., &c.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.; and of any Bookseller.

SOME of PHILO-ISRAEL'S papers, as they have appeared in THE BANNER, will be separately published from time to time in the form of Letters, for distribution.

No. 1. "The Identity of the British with Lost Israel."
No. 2. "The Glory of God."
No. 3. "An Address to British Soldiers." (Now ready.)
No. 4. "An Address to British Sailors." (Now ready.)

Others will follow. Price One and Sixpence per 100; less quantities in proportion; postage extra.

Apply to R. Banks, 5 Racquet-court, Fleet-street. Also all Booksellers and Publishers.

BANNER OF ISRAEL. VOL. II.
Now ready, price 7s., of all Booksellers.

BRISTOL LEAFLETS ON THE IDENTIFICATION. 1 to 9; 1s. per 100.
London: ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

BOOKS, ETC.

Now ready, price 7d., post free 8½d.

THE JULY MONTHLY PART OF THE BANNER OF ISRAEL. May be had, by ordering, of any bookseller or newsagent.
London: W. H Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row; and Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

CARD OF MEMBERSHIP FOR ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATIONS.
The New Card of Membership is now ready. Prices in quantities, 4d. each; single copies, 7½d. post free. Supplied to the Metropolitan, Bristol and Clifton, Huddersfield, and other Associations. It is highly commended by many of the leading advocates of the Identity movement. Apply, Geo. W. Staniland, Castle-street, Sheffield, England, Hon. Sec. Sheffield Anglo-Israel Association.

New and Revised Edition, Price 6d. Cloth boards, 1s.

THE "NEW OLD STORY," with an Introduction to a Marvellous Puzzle. The Story gives a sketch of the History of the Hebrews, shewing distinctly the difference between the Two Nations Judah and Israel, the latter being the British. The Story also tells of the Great Pyramid, and explains how its wonderful meaning can be, as it is only understood by measurement. An Appendix explains "The Eastern Question." The Story is written with great simplicity, and interests young children. By A E I, Author of "The Answer to the Eastern Question."
W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

Now ready price 7s., post free 6d. extra.

THE SECOND VOLUME OF THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.
EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

This volume contains a large number of articles on our Identity with Lost Israel, by the best and most learned writers on the subject. Also many interesting papers on the Great Pyramid by Professor Piazzi Smyth, F.R.S.E., Astronomer-Royal for Scotland, Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A., Major H. A. Tracey, R.A., Charles Horner, Esq., and others.
London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

THE GREAT PYRAMID. NOW READY, PHILO-ISRAEL'S NEW WORK, 56 pages, Illustrated with Diagrams, price 4d., post free 5d.

OUR IDENTITY WITH THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. By PHILO-ISRAEL. Price 4d. Third Thousand (reprinted from the Clifton Chronicle).

PHOTOGRAPHIC PORTRAITS OF PHILO-ISRAEL, Editor of THE BANNER OF ISRAEL, Author of "The History of the House of Israel," &c., &c. Cabinet, 2s., post free; Carte-de-Visites, 1s., post free.
London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

ARE THE ENGLISH PEOPLE THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL? By PHILO-ISRAEL. Price 4d.
London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

WALTER KEAST'S Old Established BOOT AND SHOE WAREHOUSE, 102, KENNINGTON PARK ROAD, LONDON.

Gentlemen's Boots & Shoes for	Ladies' Boots and Shoes for
Winter and Summer, House and Garden, Walking, Riding, Rowing, Fishing, Shooting, &c.	Winter and Summer, Walking and Riding, House, Garden, or Dancing, &c., &c.

Children's Boots for School, Walking, Garden, or Sea-side. Slippers in great variety at moderate prices.
Schools and Public Institutions supplied at wholesale prices.
Note the address—WALTER KEAST, 102, Kennington-park-road, S.E.

LADIES' SILK SCARVES, price 1s. The choicest Silk Scarf ever offered. All Colours; richly brocaded ends. Send stamps for a sample.
M. WHELLENS, 5 & 6, Queen's-terrace, Camden-road, London, N.

WOOLS! WOOLS! WOOLS! Cheapest and Best. White and Black Berlin, Single and Double, 3s. 6d. per pound. Best quality Ice Wools, all Colours, 5½. per ounce ball. All other Wools at proportionate prices. Shetland, Andalusian, Fleecy, and Bonne Mere Wools. Welsh, Scotch, Peacock Victoria, and other Yarns. Crewel Filoselle Silk. M. WHELLENS, Wholesale and Retail Wool Warehouse, 3, 5, & 6, QUEEN'S TERRACE, CAMDEN ROAD, LONDON.
Send for Price List and Sampler, which will be forwarded free on application.

LO AMMI—NOT MY PEOPLE. A Handbill for shop-windows and for private circulation has been prepared, showing the connection between Hosea i. 10, as Prophecy, and the titles of various pamphlets of our opponents, recently issued from the press, as Fulfilments. To be had of W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane; Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; and of Philo-Israel, Bristol. Price 2s. per 100, or 3d. per dozen.

MISCELLANEOUS.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.
Temporary Office:
20, WARWICK LANE, LONDON, E.C.

Vice-Presidents:
Admiral DUNN, Weston-Super-Mare.
Captain E. WEBSTER, Stirling.
Rev. A. J. J. CACHEMAILLE, M.A., Vicar of St. Mary's, Oldham.
Dr. J. M. GRANT, Surgeon-General, Camp, Aldershot.
Rev. C. W. HICKSON, M.A., Vicar of St. Bartholomew's, Bristol.
Rev. G. A. ROGERS, M.A., Vicar of Christ Church, Dover.
W. H. PETERS, Esq., J.P., Exeter.
BOOTH MASON, Esq., Arley House, Leamington.
J. H. WELDON, Esq., J.P., Killmallock, N.B.
HENRY LESLIE, Esq., Regent-street, W.
Lieut.-Colonel W. H. LARKINS, Hastings.
JOHN T. GOTT, Esq., Stockton-on-Tees.

Chairman of Committee:
Mr. E. W. BIRD (PHILO-ISRAEL), Bristol.

Committee:
Major-General WM. HILL, Bath.
Lieut.-Colonel BENTINCK, Upper Grosvenor-street, W.
Capt. BAYLY, Streatham, S.W., and Trinity House, E.C.
Mr. JOHN S. ANDERSON, Upper Norwood, S.E.
Mr. ROBERT BANKS, London, E.C.
Mr. BENTINCK CANNEY, Lewisham, S.E.
Mr. FREDERICK CLIFT, B.A., LL.D., Upper Norwood, S.E.
Mr. FREDERICK C. DANVERS, C.E., India Office, W.
Mr. JOHN T. FLETCHER, J.P., C.L., Upper Norwood, S.E.
Rev. F. R. A. GLOVER, M.A., St. James, London, W.
Mr. H. L. GUERRIER, Tooting, S.W.
Mr. W. H. GUEST, London, E.C.
Mr. WILLIAM HASLAM, 2, Springfield, Clapton.
Mr. CHARLES HORNER, Mottlake, S.W.
Mr. W. W. INCE, Douglas, Isle of Man.
Mr. DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, J.P., St. John's-wood, N.W.
Mr. H. H. PAIN, Bromley, Kent, S.E.
Dr. HODSON RUGG, St. John's-wood, N.W.
Mr. J. L. WOOD, New Southgate, N.

Bankers:
CITY BANK, Ludgate-hill, E.C.

Hon. Sec.:
Rev. JAMES BILLINGTON, F.S.A.

This Association has been established to bind in closer union the many friends who rejoice in having a portion with the long Lost Tribes of the House of Israel; also to extend the knowledge of the truth that the Anglo-Saxon races are now identified with those Lost Tribes of the House of Israel. These objects, it is thought, will be best accomplished by means of Drawing Room and Public Meetings, by Sermons, Lectures, Bible Readings, by the diffusion of Literature upon the subject, and by such other ways and means as the Committee may from time to time determine.

Members' Annual Subscriptions is not less than 2s. 6d. per annum.

Donations and Subscriptions are needed to carry on the work.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION. The FIRST ANNUAL REPORT, containing a verbatim account of the speeches delivered at Exeter Hall by Admiral Dunn, Philo-Israel, Rev. H. Newton, M.A., D. A. Onslow, Esq., J.P., W. H. Peters, Esq., J.P., Colonel Bentinck, Esq., Charles Stubbs, B.A., &c., &c., will be sent free on application to the Secretary.

Now Ready. Price 3d.

THE WIMBLEDON ANGLO-ISRAEL DEBATE. A verbatim Report of the Debate held at Emmanuel Church, Wimbledon, on Thursday, June 5th, 1879, containing the speeches delivered by Colonel Sandwith, Rev. Bourchier Wrey Savile, Rev. J. W. Wilkinson, Rev. C. W. Hickson, Mr. Frank White, Mr. Douglas A. Onslow, J.P., Rev. S. Garrett, Rev. F. R. A. Glover, and the Rev. H. E. Brook.
London: Issued by the "Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association;" and published by W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

FURNISHED HOUSE TO LET near the sea; 2 Sitting and 6 Bedrooms; 2½ Guineas per week. K., 14, Kenilworth-road, St. Leonard's-on-Sea.

Why be Deaf when you may hear?
Take the help to you brought near.

DEAFNESS. Noises in the Ears! Medicine! Trumpets! Food! and Vigorous Health! The Rev. E. J. SILVERTON will send his Health Advocate, giving important advice and particulars on the above subjects, free to any person, showing how Deafness and other diseases may be at once relieved and ultimately cured. Thousands of persons are being benefited by these means. The Medicine for curing Deafness has usually been sold in boxes at 11s. each. It is now offered in boxes at 2s. 6d.; if stamps, 2s. 8d. The Trumpet for 12s., is now offered for 9s. 6d.—Of every Chemist, and all wholesale London Houses, or direct from the Rev. E. J. SILVERTON, Albert House, Park-street, Nottingham (Pastor of Exeter Hall Church).

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, 5 Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, JULY 9, 1879. [All Rights Reserved.]

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. III. No. 133. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, JULY 16, 1879. [ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
"The Gates of India"	285
The Very Rev. Dean Bagot, D.D., on "The Jews." By W. H. L.	286
Evolution and Identity. By a Country Parson	287
From Assyria to Britain.—The Sequel. By W. Burnett-Coates, Home Office, C.D.	288
The Rev. H. Marriott's Argument on Psalm ii. 8, as delivered at the Recent Lecture in Clifton, Bristol	289
The Times Gives Blind Evidence in Reference to the Recent May Meetings in the Metropolis	289
The Great Pyramid in Egypt. By E. H. Tuckett	290
Reviews	291
Dr. Newman's Testimony Regarding the Character of an Englishman	291
Correspondence	291

"THE GATES OF INDIA."

WE quote the words "The Gates of India" from the leading article of the Times newspaper (which is our best commentary on God's Word as far as the secular fulfilment of the prophecies is concerned), published on May 21st, 1879. Speaking of the submission of Yakoob Khan, the editor said—

It has, once for all, put an end to the doubts which may have existed in the native mind of the power of the Government of India to maintain its authority at home and abroad. We have secured an impregnable frontier on the North-west, which places in our own hands the control OF THE GATES OF INDIA, and renders it no longer necessary for us to watch anxiously over the fidelity of untrustworthy GATEKEEPERS. But more than this has been accomplished. The predominance of the Government of India, moral as well as material, in the countries lying beyond our borders has been demonstrated and established. That predominance, attacked and undermined by various hostile agencies, was at last openly challenged by General Kaufmann's negotiations with Shere Ali and by the significant rejection of the British Mission. If we had allowed these intrigues to take their course, Afghanistan would probably have become by this time a State substantially and avowedly dependent upon Russia. We have now obtained from Yakoob Khan the guarantees which Shere Ali obstinately refused to concede. A British Resident is to be accredited to Cabul, and the Ameer will surrender to the Government of India the control of the foreign relations of Afghanistan. It will hardly be possible henceforward to raise an alarm on this side, or to make external dangers an excuse for the maintenance in India, not only of a vast and costly Imperial organization for war, but of armies levied by feudatory princes.

Do our readers note all the stupendous and most wonderful results of the events which have issued from this Afghan war now closed? It has given us "The Gates of India." It has secured us the control of the foreign policy of Afghanistan. It has made us the responsible protectors of the Ameer's domains. It has given us the right to have a "British resident" at the court of Yakoob Khan, and thus reduced him to the condition of one of the protected States of India, and virtually extended Her Majesty's dominions to the Hindu Khoosh! And what is the price we pay? An almost bloodless campaign—a military march past—a cost, measured in money for 1878-9, of about £670,000 in all! On the other hand, the gain in prestige is enormous. The native races have seen the reputed power of Russia shrink and disappear at the very hint of the British lion's interference on the scene. "Israel verily has gone through, trodden down, torn in pieces, and there have been none to deliver"—no Russian legions, no Afghan armies, no real resistance to the might of God's chosen nation (Micah v. 8). And why? Because of our superior prowess, excellence, or godliness? Nay, nothing of the sort. But because, being Israel, our God has destined us for this rôle—has predicted it in the Word, and brought it to pass as the foretaste and promise, pledge and first-fruits, of the glorious spiritual gifts which are soon to make this "the righteous nation," the race filled with the Spirit, "knowing the Lord from the least of them to the greatest of them" (Jer. xxxi. 33).

In reference to "The Gates of India," which the Times now sees and proclaims are ours, let the reader note what these "Gates" are, and were. They are—1st, the Khyber Pass; 2nd, the Kuram Valley, with the Shutargurdan Pass; and 3rd, the Bolan and Khojak Passes with the Pisheen Valley to the South. These are the only three available routes for a foreign foe's entry into Hindostan from the North-west. All other paths are closed by lofty mountain ranges, impassible to a modern army formidable to such a Power as Israel in India. But these Passes being veritable "Gates" were "the Gates of India," and also the Gates of Afghanistan as well. The late Ameer, Shere Ali constituted himself and his people "our enemies," and the Gates in question were therefore in a most strict sense "the Gates of our enemies" held by them in menace of the British lion. But here God's promise "to our forefather Abraham and his seed FOR EVER" came into force. "Thy seed," said the Lord Almighty, "shall possess the Gate of his enemies" (Gen. xxii. 17). The Khyber and the other two Passes were therefore to be Israel's! They were God's gift from eternity to the British, and in His own good time He gave them to us! But Oh! let the reader mark the tender love that has given these "Gates" with that least possible expenditure of life and treasure which we have seen to accompany our present acquisition of our new possessions. The Khyber fell all but bloodlessly with the fall of Ali Musjid. The Peiwar Kotal and the Shutargurdan became ours as the result of a rush, and the sharp encounter at the former mountain fortress. The Bolan and Pisheen Valley, dominating Candahar, became British by mere force of occupation, without the faintest shadow of a show of serious resistance. So faithfully has God fulfilled His promise to us the seed of Abraham! Our hearts surely ought to bound with joy, and to rejoice in these great thoughts. The hallelujah chorus of grateful praise should rise from joyful lips for these things, wherever the House of Israel is located in "the nation and the company of nations" throughout the world. By the cession to our nation further of the right to have and to hold these passes (that scientific frontier we have so long desired), by our acquisition of the right of controlling the foreign policy of the Afghans henceforth—such right being guarded by a British resident at Cabul—we are about to witness the wonderful spectacle (perhaps the one anticipated by the Rev. C. W. Hickson, and B. T. S., for May 22, and 26, 1879, p. 147, and BANNER 83) of the assumption of the control of Afghanistan by the sovereign Empress of Hindostan. It is the beginning of the end no doubt. And Afghanistan is clearly about to pass under the sway and protection of the paramount Power, to merge into the dominion of the glorious Tribes of God's chosen people Israel, who are in truth the very "kings of the East." We wish our opponents would look into these things; and ceasing to revile would try to understand how, not only in Afghanistan, but in Zululand as well, and elsewhere too, Israel succeeds in spite of herself and of the nation's wishes, in acquiring dominion after dominion, territory after teritory, till men with bated breath ask where all this is to have an end? We, enlightened by the glorious effulgence of the Identity, on the pages of the prophetic Word, see the end of all these wonders, and recognise that they lead surely and rapidly to that time and to that state of things, when Armageddon fought and won in the Holy Land, Russia humbled there, "the kingdom and the dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High;" a race which Psa. cxlviii. 14 assures us is none other than "the children of Israel, a people near unto Him!" "Praise YE the Lord!"—a race we know to be the Anglo-Saxons.

Digitized by Google

THE VERY REV. DEAN BAGOT, D.D., ON "THE JEWS."

By W. H. L.

"For I would not, brethren, that ye should be ignorant of this mystery, lest ye should be wise in your own conceits; that blindness in part is happened to Israel, until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in.

"And so all Israel shall be saved: as it is written, There shall come out of Sion the Deliverer, and shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob." —Romans xi. 25, 26.

THE report of a sermon, preached from the above text, at St. Leonards, by the Very Rev. Dean Bagot, D.D., on behalf of the Society for the Conversion of the Jews, which appeared in a Hastings paper some time ago, calls for some remarks from those who believe in our Identity with Lost Israel; lest the preacher should lead his hearers to believe that the Jewish nation, or people, represent the Twelve Tribes, whereas they are but two parts of the Hebrew nation, and Israel made up the remaining ten parts. The Dean has, like many others, fallen into the too common error of failing to see the distinction between the Ten Tribes of the House of Israel and the Two-Tribed House of Judah, which have been separated since the death of Solomon, and have never been re-united.

But now to the first point—Who are the Jews? They are, as the Dean says, the descendants of Abraham. But Abraham was not a Jew. He was a Hebrew (Gen. xiv. 13). They were, therefore, Hebrews—a name by which they were known to foreigners. But they were also Israelites, a term made use of among themselves as descendants of their father Israel, and as such they were Israelites, but those of the Ten Tribes were not Jews. The first time we find the word "Jew" made use of was after the separation of the Ten Tribes, when Israel, in alliance with Syria, "drave the Jews out of Elath" (2 Kings xvi. 6). And, secondly, when the servants of Hezekiah, King of Judah, asked Rabshakeh "not to speak to them in the Jewish language, in the ears of the people on the wall" (2 Kings xviii. 26). And in both these instances it had reference exclusively to the House of Judah. But after their return from Babylon, the word (Jew) received a larger application, perhaps from the predominance of the members of the kingdom of Judah to which it more properly belonged; and all those of the captivity who returned came under the general denomination of Jews. But the Tribe of Benjamin did not belong to the House of Judah. It was one of the Ten-Tribed House of Israel attached merely to the former for a time, and for a special Divine purpose, but never incorporated with the kingdom of Judah, for Rehoboam "only reigned over the cities of Judah" (1 Kings xii. 17).

The distinction between the House of Israel and that of Judah may be said to have existed from the time when the rights of primogeniture were divided between Joseph and Judah. Of the latter came the Chief Ruler; but the birthright was Joseph's (1 Chron. v. 1, 2). And not only this, but all the blessings of his father were transferred to the head of Joseph (Gen. xlix. 26; Deut. xxxiii. 16). And Ephraim, again, who was put before Manasseh (Gen. xlviii. 20), and took his place in virtue of the birthright, because the heir to all his father's blessings, and the first-born—"I am a Father to Israel, and Ephraim is My firstborn" (Jer. xxxi. 9), and as such became the representative head of the House of Israel. On the death of Solomon, the Ten Tribes rebelled against the House of David, and "none followed it but the Tribe of Judah only" (1 Kings xii. 19, 20). But the latter was subsequently joined by the Levites and Benjamin (2 Chron xi. 12, 13). After the separation the Ten Tribes became a nation of idolaters, and were carried away captive by the King of Assyria; they have never returned to Palestine, and we, their descendants, are still exiles in these Isles of the West. The House of Judah (the Jews) were not long in following Israel into captivity, and from the very same cause. They returned, however, after seventy years.

Now, having reduced the Jewish question to its proper limits, I would ask the Dean to explain in what way, or in what manner, "the Jews" in time past have been employed by God as instruments of blessing to all the nations of the earth? This could hardly be expected of the worshippers of Baal! It is true the captivity had the effect of rooting out idolatry; but when Christ came, as predicted, "unto His own, His own received Him not;" and the Jews not only rejected His ministry, but consummated their guilt by the wicked act of the crucifixion, which brought down upon them all the judgments denounced against them by our Lord Himself (Luke xix. 41—43), "to be a reproach and a curse in all places whither I shall drive them" (Jer. xxiv. 9): and the curses cling to them to this day.

But it was different with Benjamin, "The beloved of the Lord" (Deut. xxxiii. 12), for like the good figs, in the parable of the two baskets of figs, they were sent into captivity for their good; but the bad figs (Judah) for their hurt. With the former, the chastening produced in them "the peaceable fruits of righteousness" (Heb. xii. 11), "and they returned with their whole heart unto the Lord" (Jer. xxiv. 5, 7); and when Christ came, they were ready to accept Him. Had they failed to do so, they would have been without "the light," to furnish which they had been attached to the House of Judah (the Jews), in order that they might be the light-bearers of the Gospel—in the first instance to their exiled brethren, the lost sheep of the House of Israel (Matt. x. 6, xv. 24), and eventually to carry the glad tidings of salvation to all nations.

Digitized by Google

To Judah was given the sovereignty, but, as St. Paul tells us, "The covenants and the promises pertained unto his kinsmen in the flesh who are Israelites" (Rom. ix. 4), and amongst the former was that which God made with Abraham, with Isaac, and with Jacob, saying, "In thy seed shall all the nations (or families) of the earth be blessed;" and this was passed on by Jacob to Joseph, and thence to Ephraim; and the fulfilment of this—viz., becoming an instrument of blessing to all the nations of the earth—devolves on Israel, and not on the Jews. And to whom was this duty delegated? Not to the unbelieving Jews, whose hands were stained with the blood of our Lord, but to the apostles of our Lord—poor Galilean fishermen, who, with one exception (Judas), were not Jews, but Israelites of the Tribe of Benjamin, one of the Tribes of Israel. The children of Benjamin, we may be assured, had no share in the crucifixion. They were warned by Jeremiah, and by our Lord Himself, to flee from Jerusalem, when they saw the city encompassed with armies (Jer. vi. 1; Luke xxi. 21); they left the city with the other Christian inhabitants before its final destruction, and they eventually rejoined their brethren of the House of Israel in these British Isles. This is the portion referred to by the Dean "who have been led to believe in Christ as our Saviour," and not the Jews, as he wished his hearers to believe. To say that the Jews in time past have been employed as instruments of blessing to all the nations of the earth, appears to me incredible; for how could they be so in their present unconverted state? And yet this is prominently put forward by the Dean, when, at the same time, he is pleading for funds to support a society expressly formed for their conversion.

This missionary work, which was to be a blessing to all the nations of the earth, was delegated, as I have shown, to the House of Israel only; and are we not, as Israel in Great Britain, jointly with our brethren in America (Manasseh), carrying out this good work?—and not only that, but doing our best to promote Christianity amongst our brethren the Jews? but we must not look for their general conversion until after their restoration (Zech. xii. 10).

Time and space will not admit of my offering any remarks on the exposition of the chapter from which the text is taken, but I might say that the Dean's teaching—like his other remarks—has the same tendency to overlook Lost Israel, and to apply to the Jews what more properly has reference to the House of Israel.

Ore, Hastings.

EVOLUTION AND IDENTITY.

By a Country Parson.

These two doctrines have now for many years run their course side by side, and though not directly connected together, the scope of either is so wide that it is not surprising they should have a bearing on each other; they may be called the two important philosophical questions of the day, and, as a general rule, I suspect, those who hold to the one, despise the other. The manner in which they were eventually first brought before the public and their after progress, form a very strong contrast; they have both succeeded in gaining very many adherents, but this appears in the case of evolution to be chiefly owing to the well-known character and learning of those who advocated it—they were men of renown in natural science; smaller minds follow in their wake—the doctrine is fashionable, it has prevailed and may do so yet awhile longer; but if not true, it will doubtless decline as rapidly as it has sprung up.

The Identity was not ushered in under such favourable circumstances; it seems to owe its continued existence not so much to the character and learning of its advocates, as to a vital force in itself; its growth has been most natural, slow, and sure; unperceived it had spread far and wide ere it attracted much attention; ridicule and abuse were then showered upon it; but it was too firmly established to be thus nipped in the bud; it is still spreading, and is occupying the minds of many in various parts of the globe—it is not a question only for a learned few, but concerns all mankind generally, and the British race most especially; for it sheds a light on God's written Word, leading us to interpret it in a far more literal way than we were taught; and thus taken, it seems to us much fuller of meaning, easier to be understood, and in harmony throughout.

I cannot go the length that some do and accuse evolutionists as of necessity guilty of atheism; for I know there are devout lovers of the sacred Scriptures in their ranks, who would renounce evolution if they thought it actually contradicted the Bible, or was in any way incompatible with their Christian profession; yet, for all this, my own private opinion of evolution cannot be better expressed than in the quaint language of the twenty-second Article of the Church of England, as a "fond thing vainly invented and grounded upon no warranty of Scripture, but rather repugnant to the Word of God."

There is one point not altogether a Scriptural one where the two doctrines we are considering come into collision. Evolutionists have their reasons for representing the age of man on earth as exceedingly great; believers in the Identity have their reasons also for being content with some date within 6,000 years. Many have been rashly persuaded into the idea that the antiquity of man has been fully established by recent discoveries; but from the other side of the Atlantic has issued a work on the recent origin of man,* in which some terrible flaws are found in the foundations on which the theory of his antiquity has been built. This and a smaller volume by the same author are well worth the perusal by all who are interested in such questions, and contain a caution suitable to all departments of inquiry, not to be too hasty to jump at conclusions. These works appear to me a very serious opposition to one part of the evolution theory; nor is it allowed to go unchallenged in England: some weighty papers have appeared in the transactions of the Victoria Institute on the subject. One in the vol. for last year by Mr. Howard is specially worthy of attention, as well as the reply that was made to it and his answer. Apart from the subject itself, the style of both paper and reply in their Christian calmness are a model of how such discussions should be conducted.

The opposition that Identity has met with has often been of such a nature as to render it unworthy of reply; all respectable opposition meets with its due regard in these pages, and from what I can remember, there seems to have been a great dearth of such telling home thrusts as have been dealt to evolution; but I am no unbiassed judge, I know, of such a matter. Let those who care to do so examine into it themselves.

I will conclude with one curious question for the evolutionists which has often come into my mind, If man was evolved from some of the lower animals, from what were angels evolved? They were higher than man at his creation. If it be admitted they were a separate creation, then there must have been more than one; and if the unchangeable God saw fit more than once to exercise His creative power, why shall we deny that He did so in more than one instance on earth, but did His work here all by evolution only? It is not for us to limit the Almighty in His actions, but we have reason to believe that He changes not His plan, but that all His works are done in harmony.

* "Recent Origin of Man," and "Epoch of the Mammoth." By J. C. Southall, A.M., LL.D.; former published in America, latter in London.

Digitized by Google

FROM ASSYRIA TO BRITAIN.

THE SEQUEL.

By W. Burnett-Coates, Home Office, C.D.

PART I.

In an essay on the above subject, I endeavoured to give a bird's-eye view (Banner, Feb. 26, et. seq.) of the Hebrew journey to the British Isles, an interest in which subject is—why or wherefore?—daily deepening and attracting attention, not only in Great Britain at home, but in the more extended Britain beyond the oceans and seas of the world we live in. Like the subtle mystery that conducts the whisper along the electric wire—sub-aerial, sub-aqueous—its limit seems, by some equally mysterious agency, to diffuse itself, and to swell from the whisper supposed to have died away when Wilson died, some few years ago, until it has become, in the present day, enunciated in a developed voice, telephonic in its tones and range, to which this nation and its company of nations can no longer "turn a deaf ear."

It speaks joyfully to the highest style of man—the Christian—to whom its resemblance to prophetic fulfilment appeals in the accents of that Word which is dear to him, and requires of him to investigate and to see for himself what it has to say on a certainly momentous question. It admonishes him that this Word is the word-embodied will of "Him who spake as never man spake." It calls upon him in these our latter times to "search and see whether those things are so"—to watch narrowly the bursting glories of the spiritual and temporal fruit ripening on the boughs of the great and grand old Hebrew tree, planted ages ago in earth's midst—a tree to bear fruit for the healing of the nations. Yes, that healing which, by another and more perfect figure, is in the wings of "the Sun of Righteousness" now risen upon us.

It appeals to the philosopher, the historian, and the statesman; and it calls upon each, also, to search and see whether these things are so, or not so. The philological philosopher is required to re-manipulate his ethnic acquirements—to re-examine his Aryan, Turanian, Allophyllian refuges, and see if they are perfectly consonant with the tripartite issues of the Toldoth-beni-Noah, the only after-flood roll-call that can exist to guide his craft, as given in the tenth chapter of Genesis.

The historian must learn to break away from the ostrich habit of hiding his bewildered head in the dust occasioned by the tumultuous eruptions of "Asiatic hordes," and rather turn to discover their ancient habitat, and follow in their wake.

The statesman, especially he who would hold the helm of England's ship, must look around, and keenly survey the verging tendencies of the British people, who gradually, and yet potentially, as a tidal wave, are overflowing the wildernesses of the wastes, and who are as certainly dominating the more civilised quarters, eventually to establish themselves as the heirs of him who was to be the "heir of the world," in virtue of their heirship. Their proclivities are inevitable, and the British statesman must be able to guide them, and quick to apprehend the resistless march of circumstances becoming more and more apparent, and gathering the force of a multiplying momentum as time advances. He must with courage and tact steer on her course of empire this noble vessel, which it is neither expedient nor possible to "bring to." He must approach his task with much more than a vestryman view, such as we have lately witnessed weighting the wings of a soaring spirit, and quickly reducing it to the unsightly proportions of a collapsed wind-bag, from which only foul gases evolve to offend a nation's nostrils. In good sooth it behoves the people generally to review their historical past, from the advent of the Kumri to this developed day of the unprecedented British Empire, unique in all its components.

Thus premising, let us hazard a guess at the aspect presented by our Western Isles when the bison, the bear, and the wolf were its denizens, no lord their "right to dispute;" the forest free, where stood the hoary oak, the towering beech, "the elm-tree tall," and the hardy fir, around whose trunks the brush-wood, the fern, and wild flower luxuriantly grew, covered hill and dale, save where the rivulet, the stream, and the debris-choked river overflowed the lowlands and ponded their surplus waters in pools and fens, giving birth and luxuriant growth to bulrushes, reeds, and sedge. A humid clime pervaded the land, induced by the frequency of forest, and almost universal woodlands. Green and fertile, the virgin soil put forth its strength, and forced vegetation into an abnormal growth, to flourish above the mineral treasure perdu in its bosom, or poetically assuming to rival the vegetable kingdom of the carboniferous age, when a tropical flora massed its myriads into the black diamonds that in our times far exceed the value of those crystallised gems, the glittering offspring of a cognate carbon. Then see where the miner strikes the iron-stone layers, even in the midst of the "black diamonds." How came they there, so diverse in their mineral form? The coal to smelt its iron hoard, and the iron hoard to be smelted. What for? Verily to bring wealth and power to a future people. Then the hills from whence copper and tin may be dug in abundance, to attract the keen Phœnician, who led Israel's sons, Dan and his sea-board fellows, to the "islands of destiny," where the Cassiderides rise roughly with heaped-up treasure.

The chalky cliffs, the granite and basalt rocks threw a ring of defence round the whole; still, here and there opening wide a water-way portal, to give egress to the land-bred rivers, and ingress to a coming navy, whose mission must be to "rule the wave." What hand unseen prepared these rock-bound sea-specks to harbour a people who must virtually dwell alone, whilst their energy draws wealth from every clime? We need not say it was the work of One who sees the end from the beginning, even though thousands of years elapse between them. Doubtless within this since well-proved magic ring, briars, and thorns, and thistles (earth's curse), and stubborn resistance, proceeding from natural sources, were present to try the mettle and endurance of the approaching wayfarers, whose journeyings lay on the route between N.E. and N.W. Presumably such were the features of the lands we live in when the Avant Couriers of an Asiatic exodus, after years of painful travel, arrived on our shores. These people made efforts to establish themselves in the Chersonese peninsula, now called "Jutland," and on the coasts of the Caspian and Black Seas; but it was only a short season of rest by the way, permitted to them on their route to a prophetic destination. They surely drank of the brooks by the way, and fastened their Oriental features even upon the brooks, by which they are recognised at this day. But the land of their rest was not yet attained. Their old friends, the Scythians, were on their track, and compelled them to "move on." On, on, was the word, until the littoral of "the Mawr Tawch,"—"the hazy sea"—or German Ocean, was reached. Here three peaceable tribes committed themselves to that flood one day to be the highway for their descendants to utility and to fame. Upon this flood they launched their people, not, surely, to dwell in their ships, as Dan had done centuries before, but to find an insular home, of whose existence they must have known something, ere they flung their destiny upon that hazy sea. How they effected a passage to the "Isle of Prydain," we who are accustomed to leviathan ships, and their luxurious living, can scarcely imagine. But they did come, doubtless with little impedimenta in their train, and found, so tell the Triads—and why not truly?—a land "where never man dwelt before."

This may be open to question as regards "the peaceable tribes;" for when Dan abode in his ships, and mingled intimately with the Phœnicians (whose language was nearly similar to his own)—and there are many reasons to induce belief in the conclusion, shared their sea-borne fortunes to a large extent—it becomes more than probable that he and the littoral

Digitized by Google

Tribes of Palestine, for whom their home allotments were so inadequate as to compel them to make independent wars on their own account, had formed a colony or colonies, previously to the arrival of "the peaceable tribes," in Cornwall, to trade in tin, from which locality this commodity was largely exported, and also in the North of Ireland, as established by Colonel Gawler in his exhaustive researches into "the Migrations of Dun."

Speaking, in his "History of Phœnicia," of the Cassiderides and their inhabitants, Mr. Kendrick (p. 219), quoting from Strabo, who follows Possidonius, says "the men were clad in dark garments, reaching to their feet, and bound round the waist with a girdle." Very unlike some of our modern professors of history's theory of "woad-and-raddle" disguise for the ancient Briton's nudity. At all events it cannot be correctly said that people—teste historical phraseology—are, like mushrooms or truffles, indigenous to the soil of a country. They are not its spawn, nor do they grow out of it; and no history can show that the Asiatic immigrants who assuredly peopled these islands were not its primitive inhabitants. There are philosophers who speak fluently of "pre-historic man," "the stone age," "the bronze age," &c., such as at this day may be found in the obscure places of Africa. They point to Celts, flint arrow heads, and other rude contrivances of necessity, to sustain the theory of a British "pre-historic man." Reflection, however, may be permitted to question the conclusion thus arrived at.

(To be continued.)

THE REV. H. MARRIOTT'S ARGUMENT ON PSALM II. 8, AS DELIVERED AT THE RECENT LECTURE IN CLIFTON, BRISTOL.

THE report of the able lecture we published lately, as given at the Victoria Rooms, Clifton, on the 19th June, 1879, by the Rev. Herbert Marriott, M.A., in refutation of the Rev. J. B. Clifford's charges of blasphemy, did not contain any distinct statement of the rev. lecturer's argument respecting Psalm ii. 8. It was the ablest part of the whole address, and our contention is left, as far as the public is concerned, quite undefended, since no account has been published of the arguments by which the lecturer showed that our opponent was unsustained in his charges, either by the Hebrew criticism, by the grammatical meaning, by the plain rendering of the passage, or by its significance as ascertained by the golden rule of comparison of Scripture with Scripture. We shall now endeavour to lay before our readers an outline of the argument used, which was illustrated by the texts themselves written out at length by the lecturer in illuminated characters, and displayed to the eyes of his audience. In what follows we have had the help of Mr. Marriott's rough notes of his speech, and our readers may therefore rely upon the accuracy of our account.

Mr. Marriott laboured first to show, and to demonstrate to the eye, as well as to the ear of his hearers, the fact that the verb "to give," so prominent in Psalm ii. 8, takes in Hebrew, as in English, two "objects" after it. Thus we say in English, "I give this book to you," or "I give you this book," "he gave her a horse," "they gave him a ring." In each of these cases the book, the horse, and the ring are the objects as well as the words "you," "her," "him." A case exactly parallel to the words of Psalm ii. 8 ("and I will give thine inheritance the heathen," or, "and I will give the heathen (to) thine inheritance") occurs in Ex. iii. 21: "And I will give this people favour in the sight of the Egyptians." Here the verb "give" has clearly two objects: first "favour," then "this people." Read as Psalm ii. 8 is read, the sentence would run thus, "And I will give favour (to) this people in the sight of the Egyptians." That, Mr. Marriott concluded, was the only proper method of illustrating the two nouns which follow "to give." Upon applying this, the legitimate and only method of interpretation, to Psa. ii. 8, he said we are driven to the necessity of translating it in plain English as follows: "Ask of Me, and I will give thine inheritance the Nations"—that is, "I will give to thine inheritance the Nations," just as we translate "I will give this people favour in the sight of the Egyptians." The lecturer then asked, how it was our translators had swerved from their usual method of literal translation, and instead of allowing two "objects" to follow the verb "to give," had introduced a word—"thee"—not in the original—and altered the entire meaning of the whole passage? He presumed it had occurred from the fact that the translators had not understood the prophecy, and thus they forced an ungrammatical rendering on the words foreign to their own usage, whereas they ought to have given implicit credit to "the word spoken." Mr. Marriott then pointed out an alternative rendering to the one Philo-Israel advocated, and that was obtained by placing a full stop after the word "heathen." The verse then would run thus: "Ask of Me, and I will give the nations. Thine inheritance and thy possession are the ends of the earth." To this translation the lecturer said he himself, for reasons he did not enter on, felt inclined to give the preference. But even this translation gave, he added, the very same sense as that propounded by Philo-Israel, and denounced unjustly as blasphemy by Mr. Clifford—namely, "Ask of Me, and I will give thine inheritance (Israel) the nations, and thy possession (Israel), the uttermost parts of the earth." Turning from this translation to the spirit of the prophecy, and not encroaching upon Col. Savile's most admirable defence of the interpretation insisted on by Philo-Israel based on Rev. ii. 26, 27, Mr. Marriott proved from Dan. vii. 13, 14, with 18—27, that the Word of God teaches us to understand that the glories of Messiah's kingdom will be the future possession of His people—that is, of Israel, His inheritance. Finally, the lecturer clenched all by appealing to the clearest and most precise of all the statements in the prophecies of the future of His people, which runs in these words—the words of the Lord Jesus Christ Himself—"To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with Me in My throne, EVEN AS I also overcame and am set down with my Father in His throne" (Rev. iii. 21). Words are wasted if employed in the attempt to increase the value of this promise. Such a wondrous glory being in store for the Lord's "overcoming" one, Israel, there is no blasphemy in the assertion that in Psalm ii. 8, the "nations" or Gentiles are given by the Father and Son together to those same children of Israel His inheritance, to break in pieces, to subdue, to make obedient to the spiritual yoke of their Lord Jesus Christ, their Saviour and their God.

Such is a somewhat meagre report of a very able, very successful lecture, which was delivered to a room quite full of deeply interested listeners—mostly Anglo-Israelites—with a fairly large proportion of the hostile partisans of the opposing clergy of the place. It was felt that the lecture was a decided success; that the lecturer had done justice to the cause he came to defend, and that he had amply vindicated not only his own reputation, but those of the Bristol and Clifton brethren in the faith of Israel he came to defend against the violent, and unjustifiable charges of "blasphemy," laid against them by the Rev. Vicar of St. Matthew's, Kingsdown, Bristol.

THE "TIMES" GIVES BLIND EVIDENCE IN REFERENCE TO THE RECENT MAY MEETINGS IN THE METROPOLIS.

WRITING on this topic on the 20th May, 1879, the Times made the following remarks which might quite naturally have emanated from the pen of the Editor of the BANNER OF ISRAEL! Regarding the May Meetings as one of the Metropolitan "Sights" at this season, the Times said—

Digitized by Google

The sympathy they arouse is given in about equal degrees to their objects and to their method. They stand for just everything which THE ENGLISH NATURE loves best and approves most deliberately. Philanthropy and religous zeal at home and abroad, displayed alike to friends and enemies and strangers, undertaken at no light expense, and started and directed all through by strictly voluntary agencies—all this is what the May Meetings represent in its most concrete shape, and assist very materially. A glance at the reports in our columns will show sufficiently the very varied interests these meetings include. There seems scarcely any form of good work which is left out. Schools, hospitals, benevolent societies, missionary societies, Bible societies, temperance societies, and a dozen other types of philanthropic or religious work, all come in, some of them several times over, and here and there with some little divergency in their respective aims. THEIR FIELD OF ACTION IS LITERALLY WORLD-WIDE IN ITS EXTENT. It reaches as far as there exist heathens to be converted, or Jews or Mahommedans or Roman Catholics to be brought to a sense of their more partial errors. Wherever, in short, there is ignorance, or vice, or suffering of any kind which human care and effort can hope to mitigate, in whatever part of the world it may be, there will a counter agency be set at work FROM THIS COUNTRY, and it will generally be found duly reporting itself at home in the course of the present month. In whatever direction the tide of human affairs is flowing, the forces which are represented at the May Meetings will find their opportunity or will make it. To whatever new regions ENGLISH POLITICAL INFLUENCE is extending or endeavouring to extend, it must take along with it the agents and messengers of this work in some one or other of its forms. Is Cyprus added to the dominions of the British Crown? The Church Missionary Society and the British and Foreign Bible Society seize at once upon the vantage-ground thus offered them for doing more effectual good. Are our troops sent out to Zululand? The Religious Tract Society keeps them well supplied with its publications, and the Wesleyan Missionary Society sends out its chaplains with them. Is there war between Turkey and Russia? The British and Foreign Bible Society pours its Bibles into both camps indifferently; and if prisoners are taken on either side, the same means are employed, even more hopefully, to relieve the ennui of prison life. But of all the societies of which we receive reports at this season, the Wesleyan Missionary Society seems, on its own showing, to be the most aggressive and ubiquitous. In Italy, Spain, Portugal, Bavaria, Austria, Ireland, wherever, in short, the Roman Catholic Church is strongest, the agents of the society rush in and dispute the ground. Of course all this costs money, and very large sums of money are forthcoming for it. The British and Foreign Bible Society has a free income of nearly £100,000, and with the help of the sale of its publications, deals in the course of the year with close upon a quarter of a million sterling. The Church Pastoral Aid Society received last year £56,644; the British and Foreign School Society, £23,676. The Religious Tract Society obtained from all sources a total income of £149,125. These are among the largest given, but the sum of the smaller ones taken together will probably be even more considerable. The sight is an extraordinary one on every account. The magnitude of the means employed, the character of the aims and purposes, and the vast multitudes interested in their success, mark it off from everything else of the kind, on this side of the Atlantic at all events. The May Meetings and all they imply are essentially Anglo-Saxon creations. The societies, so far as they are English, are also metropolitan. If they were deprived of the air of London, they would cease to flourish, even if they did not cease to exist. London is the great centre to which the performers and the audience are alike drawn, and in which the best chance is offered for recruiting the societies' strength.

What have we here? Much that points not uncertainly to our Israelite origin! For the Times implies and says—

1. That British benevolence, philanthropy, and religious zeal are shown forth at these May Meetings, as having for their field of action what is literally world-wide in extent. But this was what Israel was to do (Isa. xxvii. 6; Matt. xxviii. 19; Mark xvi. 15).

2. That these gatherings are unique at least in Europe. And why? Because Israel dwelleth alone (Num. xxiii. 9). The British are "a people to separation," "zealous of good works" (Matt. xxi. 43; Titus ii. 14).

3. That the May Meetings "are essentially Anglo-Saxon creations"—that is, they are Israelitish; and the continental nations, not being Israel, have neither part nor lot in the matter. Where, then, is there room for the Teutonic theory of Miss E. W. and others so vainly put forward again in "Philalethes Answered," where no cogent answer to that opponent can be found?

4. That the efforts for universal beneficence and Gospel evangelisation, represented by the May Meetings, are supported by immense national wealth expended on these objects. But God gave Israel wealth for this very special purpose, "that He may establish His covenant that He sware unto our fathers as it is this day" (Deut. viii. 18).

5. That the British religious societies are endeavouring everywhere to struggle with and conquer the Church of Rome. But this is Israel's rôle as "the witnesses for Jehovah," the Protestantes pro Domino Deo—the "Protestants" that God is true (Isa. xliii. 10, 12, xliv. 8). We thank God that our Identifications or test-marks that we are Israel are so clear and unmistakable, that even the Times is forced to see and record the points, albeit in complete ignorance of what their teaching is! While the Times "sees" not, we whose eyes are opened, read the happy omens—Rejoice in our Identity, and with heartfelt joy, "Praise the Lord!"

THE GREAT PYRAMID IN EGYPT

HAS BEEN PROVED TO BE A METROLOGICAL AND PROPHETICAL STRUCTURE.

The "PILLAR OF WITNESS."—Isa. xix. 19—25.

THIS huge pile of solid masonry covering an area of thirteen English acres, having a substance of five million tons of stone, rising to a height of 486 feet, the highest, largest, and most ponderous stone structure ever raised by man, has been proved by the measurement of the Astronomer Royal for Scotland to be built on a plan most scientifically perfect, microscopically close, accurately square, and astronomically oriented.

It tells its date of erection to have been 2170 B.C., 150 years before Abraham, and 800 years before Moses.

The passages from the entrance to the King's chamber, centre of the Pyramid, are said prophetically to shew the duration of the different dispensations. A very fine, thin, but exquisitely true line indicated in 2,170 inches that so many years were to elapse before the Redeemer came. The first entrance passage gives in inches the length of the dispensation from the dispersion to the Mosaic economy. The next gives, in 1,542 inches, the years of the Hebrew dispensation. Then the next is the grand gallery which gives 1,881-2 inches, and indicates the ending of the Christian dispensation at that date. There is a wall at the end of this gallery leaning inward, and so built, as though it might at any moment fall before these years were completed.

Does it not indicate that the Lord may VERY SHORTLY take the world by surprise, when even His own people are not looking for him? He said that His coming would be to the world as a SNARE; but He promised that they who watched for Him should not be taken by surprise.

There is much reason to believe that the Lord will call His waiting ones at some unexpected time before the date 1881-2 closes, perhaps very soon. The number of years of each preceding dispensation precisely equalled the number of inches in the Great Pyramid; this being the case, will not the present be as precisely fulfilled?

1 Thes. iv. 15—17; 1 Cor. xv. 51, 52; Sol. Song vi. 11—13, ARE YOU READY? "He will save" (Zeph. iii. 17; Heb. vii. 25), WHOM? The unworthy. Every applicant. "Whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord." "Him that cometh unto Me I will in no wise cast out" (John vi. 37; Acts xiii. 38, 39). "He delighteth in mercy."

The signs of the times, the fearful ungodliness abounding, the terrible calamities, the almost co-incident manifestation of all the signs of the end which Jesus gave, with the testimony of the "pillar of witness" constrain us to send these thoughts. WATCH (Ezek. xxxiii. 1—6).

Read: "Philitis," by C. Casey. "The Stone Miracle," by Dr. Seiss. "Our Inheritance in the Great Pyramid," Piazzi Smyth.

Exeter. E. H. TUCKETT.

Digitized by Google

Reviews.

Report of the First Annual Meeting of the Metropolitan (Central) Anglo-Israel Association. Price sixpence. W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane.

We beg to recommend this little publication. It gives a clear, full, satisfactory, and very accurate Report of the First Meeting held by the Association in Exeter Hall, Strand, London, on Monday evening, May 19, 1879. The Report is beautifully got up and printed, and does credit, not only to the Association which issues it, but to the reporters and to the printers. The secretary has evidently taken infinite pains to issue this first Report in an acceptable form, and we trust the committee will be rewarded by a large sale of the pamphlet, to be followed by a great increase of Identity interest not only in London, but also in the empire at large.

The Anglo-Israel Origin of the British Nation. Discussion at a Conference held at Wimbledon on June 5, 1879. Price threepence. W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

We are glad to see the Metropolitan Association have issued a verbatim shorthand writer's Report of the above important Discussion. The Identity was advocated by the Rev. B. Wrey Savile, of Shillingford Rectory, Exeter; by the Rev. C. W. Hickson, of Bristol; by Mr. Douglas A. Onslow, J.P., and the Rev. F. R. A. Glover. The opposition was represented by the Rev. John Wilkinson (the friend of Israel); by Mr. Frank White; by the Rev. S. Garrett, and by the Rev. H. E. Brook. The discussion, which was most interesting, has been well and impartially produced by our Metropolitan Association, and will repay perusal. We hope it will be largely read and circulated.

Correspondence.

THE REV. J. B. CLIFFORD ON PSALM II. 8.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

Sir,—Since reading the account of the lecture delivered by my friend Mr. Marriott, at Clifton, in which he defended many friends to Anglo-Israelism against the censures of the Rev. J. B. Clifford, I have been led to look critically into the meaning of Psa. ii. 8; and although I may be unable to say that I have altered my views of the interpretation of that verse, the result has been to show that much more may be said in favour of the view which Mr. Clifford condemns than I had reason to expect. Let me just give a literal translation of the Hebrew from Bagster's excellent edition of the Psalms with the interlinear English, which I believe to have been the work of my late friend Dr. Tregelles, who was confessedly the first Hebraist of his day. His rendering of the verse is as follows:—"Ask from Me; and I will give the Gentiles (as) thy inheritance; and (as) thy possession the ends of the earth." When we remember that the promise in connection with this verse—"Thou shalt break them with a rod of iron; as a vessel of a potter thou wilt dash them"—exactly accords with the promise to God's believing people, as our blessed Master teaches us in the Apocalypse when Christ promised that "to the overcomer will I give power over the Gentiles; and that whosoever overcometh shall rule them with a rod of iron; as the vessels of a potter shall they be broken to shivers, even as I received of My Father" (these words in italics prove to whom the promise refers), we can understand why some deeply-taught brethren may apply Psa. ii. 8 to God's Israel without being justly charged with "blasphemy," which Mr. Clifford has done. To quote an instance of the uncertainty attending the interpretation of this passage, let me mention that Dr. Gill, the first Hebrew scholar of his age, about two centuries ago, and the ablest commentator of Holy Scripture which the Church of Christ has ever produced, in his comment on Psa. ii. 8, thus writes: "Ask of Me, &c. Jehovah is either here again introduced speaking, or these words are a continuation of the Son's account of what His Father said unto Him." Here is an instance of a modest avowal of uncertainty attending the interpretation of a passage of Holy Scripture on the part of a godly and learned man to which Mr. Clifford and others may well give heed. Oh! when will men professing to be disciples of Christ learn that violent language is a certain proof that the Spirit of God cannot be with them, for His fruits are love and peace.

Yours faithfully in Christ,

Bourchier Wrey Savile.
(Rector of Shillingford).

June 26, 1879.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

Sir,—With all due respect for our English version it must nevertheless be admitted that it hides a great Identity sign in Luke ii. 32, which, to give words their ordinary meaning, should be read as follows:—Φῶς εἰς ἀποκάλυψιν ἐθνῶν καὶ δόξαν λαοῦ σου Ἰσραήλ, "a light to reveal the nations and glory of Thy people Israel." ἀποκάλυψιν means to reveal, to bring to light, and ἐθνῶν means nations, not Gentiles; for it is not a proper name, but refers to the people named in the sentence of which it forms a part, which in the verse quoted refers to the nations of Israel. The object of employing a light is to find something hidden or concealed in the dark. The Gentiles were never hidden; they are as easily known now as they were two thousand years ago, therefore no light was required to find them. On the contrary, a part of the people of Israel were hidden, and if language has any meaning, that of the above verse points out that the nations of Israel would be known by their walking in the light of the Lord Jesus; consequently, the Anglo-Saxons are Israel because they are walking in the full blaze of Gospel light.

Yours obediently,

James Rankin, F.R.A.S.

Queen's-road, Forest-hill, S.E.,
June 26, 1879.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

Dear Sir,—The supremacy of England is a theme never lost sight of in the Banner. Almost every week its pages call upon us to mark and digest the fact that we are the "head and not the tail" of nations, a position, it would seem from the following extract from Sir John Herschell's "Outlines of Astronomy," the inhabitants of this island were destined to hold from the beginning of time:—"It is a fact not a little interesting to Englishmen, and combined with our insular station in that great highway of nations, the Atlantic, not a little explanatory of our commercial eminence, that London occupies nearly the centre of the terrestrial (Northern) hemisphere."

It was surely something more than chance that led the captives of the House of Israel to locate themselves on the sea-girt shores of England?

Whoso is wise will ponder these things, and they shall understand the loving-kindness of the Lord.

Yours faithfully,

June 24. R. E.

DR. NEWMAN'S TESTIMONY REGARDING THE CHARACTER OF AN ENGLISHMAN.

In the "Apologia" the "great oratorian," Dr. Newman, bore the following witness that the British are a noble race. He wrote:—

"Mankind has the right to judge of truthfulness in the case of a Catholic, as in the case of a Protestant, of an Italian, or of a Chinese. I have never doubted that in my hour, in God's hour, my avenger will appear, and the world will acquit me of untruthfulness, even though it be not while I live. Still more confident am I of such eventual acquittal, seeing that my judges are my own countrymen. I think, indeed, Englishmen the most suspicious and touchy of mankind; I think them unreasonable and unjust in their seasons of excitement; but I had rather be an Englishman (as in fact I am) than belong to any other race under heaven. They are as generous as they are hasty and burly, and their repentance for their injustice is greater than their sin."

Though we differ toto coelo from the Rev. Doctor's religious views, his estimate of his Israelite fellow-countrymen is clearly correct. They are a hasty, violent, suspicious, touchy race; unreasonable and unjust in moments of excitement; generous and burly really at heart, and uncommonly like the sturdy Israelites who made King Rehoboam tremble when they cried, "Now see to thine own house, David! To your tents, O Israel" (1 Kings xii. 16); but who boldly took the solitary prophet's side in Carmel and slew the prophets of Baal, the favourites of their king, when they were persuaded in their mind that the Lord Jehovah He was the God (1 Kings xviii. 39, 40).

Notice.—The Rev. B. W. Savile's new Pamphlet on "Are we Israelites?" will shortly be published by Mr. Guest; price, we believe, 9d. It is introduced by a Preface from Philo-Israel's pen; contains twelve chapters, and is a learned, exhaustive Argument, proving from Scripture, Philology, History, and Chronology, that "The British are Israelites."—Editor.

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements
(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O O payable at Ludgate-circus.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed :—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

BANNER FREE CIRCULATION FUND.

Donations, applications for grants, to be addressed to R. Fergusson Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London.

NEW BOOKS AND NEW EDITIONS.

NEW PAMPHLET ON OUR IDENTITY:

Will be published in a few days, price 9d., post free, 10d.

ARE WE ISRAELITES? THE TESTIMONY OF HISTORY, PHILOLOGY, AND ETHNOLOGY on the Subject. By the Rev. BOURCHIER WREY SAVILE, M.A., Rector of Shillingford, Exeter. With an Introduction by Philo-Israel.

Contents.

Chapter I.—Hard Speeches.
" II.—Opponents' Arguments.
" III.—Common Errors.
" IV.—The Sacæ.
" V.—The Cymry.
" VI.—Historical Testimony.
" VII.—Philology.
" VIII.—Chief of the Nations.
" IX.—Multiplicity of Seed.
" X.—The Anglo-Saxon Race.
" XI.—Anglo-Ephraim.
" XII.—Summary.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row; Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; or of any Bookseller.

A NEW WORK ON THE IDENTITY.

THE PROMISES TO ABRAHAM, with Select References and Explanatory Notes, to which is added an article entitled, "Israel Among the Gentiles."

The aim of this Pamphlet is to present the Scriptural Argument in a new and concise form, both for examination and reference.

Price Sixpence, or free by post, Sevenpence. May be had of the Author, W. S. Cavill, Norton Woodside, near Sheffield; or of Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.; and of all Booksellers.

Just out. Price 4d.

NEBUCHADNEZZAR'S DREAM and THE BRITISH EMPIRE. By Ephraim. With Illustrative Prophetic Map.

"We are glad to see another attempt to connect Daniel's dream of the metallic image and "the stone which becomes a mountain," with the British Empire. It appears in the form of a letter to a friend abroad. The pamphlet, though very sketchy in its character and aim, is on the whole a useful little work."—Banner of Israel.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; Sold by W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION. The FIRST ANNUAL REPORT, containing a verbatim account of the speeches delivered at Exeter Hall by Admiral Dunn, Philo-Israel, Rev. H. Newton, M.A., D. A. Onslow, Esq., J.P., W. H. Peters, Esq., J.P., Colonel Bentinck, Esq., Charles Stubbs, B.A., &c., &c., will be sent free on application to the Secretary.

Now Ready. Price 3d.

THE WIMBLEDON ANGLO-ISRAEL DEBATE. A verbatim Report of the Debate held at Emmanuel Church, Wimbledon, on Thursday, June 5th, 1879, containing the speeches delivered by Colonel Sandwith, Rev. Bourchier Wrey Savile, Rev. J. W. Wilkinson, Rev. C. W. Hickson, Mr. Frank White, Mr. Douglas A. Onslow, J.P., Rev. S. Garrett, Rev. F. R. A. Glover, and the Rev. H. E. Brook.

London: Issued by the "Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association:" and published by W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

THE GREAT PYRAMID. NOW READY, PHILO-ISRAEL'S NEW WORK, 56 pages, Illustrated with Diagrams, price 4d., post free 5d.

BOOKS, ETC.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

Owing to the increasing interest taken in the Identity movement, it is found necessary to occasionally enlarge our space to make room for the important papers constantly reaching the Editor. It has, therefore, been determined to issue Twelve Double Numbers during 1879, for which Twopence will be charged. The first of these series of Double Numbers was issued the first week in January, and one on each succeeding first week in the month during the year.

	£	s.	d.
Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free	0	7	6
Two copies (including Double Numbers) ...	0	12	4
Three " " " " ...	0	18	8
Four " " " " ...	1	6	2
Six " " " " ...	1	17	4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-Grand, London, to W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

New and Revised Edition, Price 6d. Cloth boards, 1s.

THE NEW OLD STORY, with an Introduction to a Marvellous Puzzle. The Story gives a sketch of the History of the Hebrews, shewing distinctly the difference between the Two Nations Judah and Israel, the latter being the British. The Story also tells of the Great Pyramid, and explains how its wonderful meaning can be, as it is only understood by measurement. An Appendix explains "The Eastern Question." The Story is written with great simplicity, and interests young children. By A E I, Author of "The Answer to the Eastern Question."

W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

Now ready price 7s., post free 6d. extra.

THE SECOND VOLUME OF THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

This volume contains a large number of articles on our Identity with Lost Israel, by the best and most learned writers on the subject. Also many interesting papers on the Great Pyramid by Professor Piazzi Smyth, F.R.S.E., Astronomer-Royal for Scotland, Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A., Major H. A. Tracey, R.A., Charles Horner, Esq., and others.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

OUR IDENTITY WITH THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. By PHILO-ISRAEL. Price 4d. Third Thousand (reprinted from the Clifton Chronicle).

PHOTOGRAPHIC PORTRAITS OF PHILO-ISRAEL, Editor of THE BANNER OF ISRAEL, Author of "The History of the House of Israel," &c., &c. Cabinet, 2s., post free; Carte-de-Visites, 1s., post free.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

ARE THE ENGLISH PEOPLE THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL? By PHILO-ISRAEL. Price 4d.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

LO AMMI—NOT MY PEOPLE. A Handbill for shop-windows and for private circulation has been prepared, showing the connection between Hosea i. 10, as Prophecy, and the titles of various pamphlets of our opponents, recently issued from the press, as Fulfilments. To be had of W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane; Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; and of Philo-Israel, Bristol. Price 2s. per 100, or 3d. per dozen.

SOME of PHILO-ISRAEL'S papers, as they have appeared in THE BANNER, will be separately published from time to time in the form of Letters, for distribution.

No. 1. "The Identity of the British with Lost Israel."
No. 2. "The Glory of God."
No. 3. "An Address to British Soldiers." (Now ready.)
No. 4. "An Address to British Sailors." (Now ready.)

Others will follow. Price One and Sixpence per 100; less quantities in proportion; postage extra.

Apply to R. Banks, 5 Racquet-court, Fleet-street. Also all Booksellers and Publishers.

Price 1d.; post free, 1½d.

GOD'S LOVE FOR ISRAEL, A GUARANTEE THAT HE WILL FULFIL HIS PROMISES TO ISRAEL. By JOHN GILDER SHAW.

Price 6d.; or with illustrative map, 8d.

BRITAIN (OR ISRAEL) THE FIFTH AND LAST, AND THE UNCONQUERABLE EMPIRE. By JOHN GILDER SHAW.

Price 3d.; post free, 3½d.

CHRONOLOGICAL CHART OF BRITISH VICTORIES OVER THE CONTINENTAL POWERS, ranging from the battle of Cressy (1346), to our last victory, the taking of Sebastopol, Sept. 8, 1855. Arranged by J. G. SHAW, of Leeds.

"We trust Mr. Shaw's labour in preparing this paper may be appreciated by the public and be largely sold."—Banner of Israel.

London: Published by Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; and may be had of the Author, 20 Park-row, Leeds, and of all booksellers.

MISCELLANEOUS.

TO AUTHORS. Authors desirous of issuing Works or Pamphlets on the great and increasingly interesting Question of the Identity of the Lost Ten Tribes with the British Nation, should first communicate with Robert Banks, of Racquet-court, Fleet-street, who has already been honoured by issuing, amongst others, the following works on the subject:

The Banner of Israel. Weekly 1d.; monthly 7d.
The Nation's Glory Leader. Weekly 1d.; quarterly 1s. 4d.
The Pillar of Witness. By late Captain Tracey. Cloth 2s. 6d.; paper 1s. 6d. (second edition).
The Anglo-Israel Post Bag. By Bishop Titcomb. Cloth 2s. 6d.; paper 1s. 6d. (second edition).
The History of the House of Israel. By Philo-Israel. Cloth 1s.; paper 6d. (sixth thousand).
The Great Pyramid of Egypt. Fifty-two pages, with three Illustrations. Price 4d. (10,000).
The New Old Story. By A E I. Cloth 1s.

Now Ready, price 2d., post free, 2½d.

NEW PAMPHLET BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

THE HISTORICAL, ETHNIC, AND PHILOLOGICAL ARGUMENTS in PROOF of BRITISH IDENTITY with the TEN LOST TRIBES OF ISRAEL, clearly and simply stated.

BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

CONTENTS:—Introduction—The Celts—Professor Rawlinson's Testimony—The Cymry—The Cimmerii—The Gimiri and Khumri—The Testimony of the Nimroud Obelisk—The Scythians—The Anglo-Saxons—Sharon Turner's Testimony—The Jutes and Angles—The Danes and the Normans—General Conclusions—Philology—The Welsh Language—The Rev. Canon Lysons' Testimony—Idiomatic Identity Between Hebrew and English—Tyndal's Testimony—The Tribe of Dan—The Irish Celts—Are the Continental Nations Israelites?—Conclusions—Appendix.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane; and Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

This day. Price 2d. Post free 2½d.

MANASSEH AND THE UNITED STATES. An important Essay delivered before the "Lost Israel Identification Society," by the Rev. Joseph Wild, D.D., at Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, New York.

CONTENTS:—The Fulness of the Gentiles set in—For whom did God intend America—The Origin of the United States The Footsteps of Ephraim and Manasseh—The Will of Jacob made to Ephraim and Manasseh—Manasseh a People, and a Great People—Manasseh's Birthtime of Separation—Out of nearly Sixty Conquered Colonies the only one England ever Lost was that of Manasseh (America)—The Great Seal of the United States—Manasseh was brought up at the Door of the Pyramid, &c., &c.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.; and of any Bookseller.

Why be Deaf when you may hear?
Take the help to you brought near.

DEAFNESS. Noises in the Ears! Medicine! Trumpets! Food! and Vigorous Health! The Rev. E. J. SILVERTON will send his Health Advocate, giving important advice and particulars on the above subjects, free to any person, showing how Deafness and other diseases may be at once relieved and ultimately cured. Thousands of persons are being benefited by these means. The Medicine for curing Deafness has usually been sold in boxes at 11s. each. It is now offered in boxes at 2s. 6d.; if stamps, 2s. 8d. The Trumpet for 12s., is now offered for 9s. 6d.—Of every Chemist, and all wholesale London Houses, or direct from the Rev. E. J. SILVERTON, Albert House, Park-street, Nottingham (Pastor of Exeter Hall Church).

WOOLS! WOOLS! WOOLS! Cheapest and Best. White and Black Berlin, Single and Double, 3s. 6d. per pound. Best quality Ice Wools, all Colours, 5½. per ounce ball. All other Wools at proportionate prices. Shetland, Andalusian, Fleecy, and Bonne Mere Wools. Welsh, Scotch, Peacock Victoria, and other Yarns. Crewel Filoselle Silk. M. WHELLENS, Wholesale and Retail Wool Warehouse, 3, 5, & 6, QUEEN'S TERRACE, CAMDEN ROAD, LONDON.

Send for Price List and Sampler, which will be forwarded free on application.

LADIES' SILK SCARVES, price 1s. The choicest Silk Scarf ever offered. All Colours; richly brocaded ends. Send stamps for a sample.

M. WHELLENS, 5 & 6, Queen's-terrace, Camden-road, London, N.

BANNER OF ISRAEL. VOL. II. Now ready, price 7s., of all Booksellers.

BRISTOL LEAFLETS ON THE IDENTIFICATION. 1 to 9; 1s. per 100.

London: ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, 5 Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, JULY 16, 1879. [All Rights Reserved.]

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. III. No. 134. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, JULY 23, 1879. [ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

PAGE
Egypt and Its Affairs 293
England and the Second Exodus. By Robert Lamb 294
Are the British "Dogs" of Gentiles? 295
The Rev. Horatius Bonar, D.D., on "Israel" and "Gentile" England 296
From Assyria to Britain.—The Sequel. By W. Burnett-Coates, Home Office, C.D. 297
More "Blind" Testimony. By Jno. S. Anderson 298
Our Fathers.—A Difference with a Vengeance 299
Sir Walter Raleigh Testifies to Israel's Colonies 299

EGYPT AND ITS AFFAIRS.

WHAT are we to think of the late crisis in Egypt, its financial difficulties, the forced abdication of the Khedive and the accession of his eldest son Tewfik Pasha to the vacant throne under the Sultan's firman, procured by the influence and pressure of the British and France? Does Identity light reveal anything to us in these facts, and show aught of interest to us as God's chosen people Israel? We think it does. In the first place, what has caused all these difficulties and the events which have taken place? The late Khedive's terrible misrule was one cause; his consequent financial difficulties, and these leading to and resulting in the grinding oppression of his subjects, the miserable Fellahin of Egypt, were others. But what says the Word of God as to the condition of that "land of Ham" at the epoch we have now reached, just before the discovery of Israel and Assyria, and the constitution of the three Powers resting under God's blessing—namely, "Egypt My people," Assyria "the work of My hands," and Israel "Mine inheritance?" (Isa. xix. 25). In verse 20, where the Great Pyramid's mission, "as the sign and as a witness unto the Lord of hosts in the land of Egypt," is described, we have the further announcement made in respect to Egypt (that is, its people) in the following words: "For they shall cry unto the Lord BECAUSE OF THE OPPRESSORS, and He shall send them a saviour and a 'great one,' and he shall deliver them; and the Lord shall be known to Egypt, and the Egyptians shall know the Lord in that day." We see, then, that the first intimation that we are approaching the end is destined to be the "cry" of Egypt unto the Lord—and a "cry" too "because of the oppressors." What, then, is the condition to-day of the Egyptian peasant or Fellahin? Nothing can be worse. "The taxation is unequal and oppressive." "There is NO justice for the natives among themselves." "The country must be put into commission for a time" if it is to be reformed.

Such are the opinions expressed in the Times of June 28, 1879, and there can be no doubt that the unfortunate Fellahin are in such sad plight in consequence of "the extortionate and insatiable greed" of the rulers both of Egypt and of Constantinople, that misery is rife in the land, and the great cry of broken-hearted Egypt has gone up to the ears of the Lord of Sabbaoth! What is next to follow, and what events are to succeed, it is not our province to foretell. We have no power and no desire to indulge in vaticination; but if our position is correct, and we are chronologically at the middle of verse 20 (Isa. xix.), then we know by the light of our Identity that the time for Egypt's redemption from trial has come, and a saviour and a great one (who or whence he or they may be we cannot yet say) will soon appear to deliver the land of Ham from further suffering.

Assuming that this saviour and great one is the Lord Jesus Christ's "overcomer," the one to whom He hath given power to rule the heathen, and as His inheritance to possess the nations, we believe that matters are fast ripening for the potential interference of the British nation as the Israel of God, His heritage and inheritance, in the affairs of Egypt for the good of the Lord's "people" there. That the power of this country in the organisation of the needful remedies to meet the chaos into which Egypt has lapsed, is steadily growing, is seen by the reports daily appearing in our public journals. The following, taken from the Manchester Courier, of June 28, 1879, points in this direction. Its London correspondent said:—

There is no longer any necessity for the swollen armaments maintained by Ismail Pasha NOW THAT EGYPT HAS VIRTUALLY COME UNDER THE JOINT PROTECTORSHIP OF THE WESTERN POWERS, for they would assuredly defend her against attack, come from what quarter it might. Retrenchment, indeed, is to be the mot d'ordre of the new Administration in all directions, the hope being that it may be found possible hereafter to relieve the fellahin from some portion of the crushing taxation with which they are now burdened. Prince Tewfik, who is by no means the incapable he has been represented in certain interested quarters, is understood to have pledged himself to adhere strictly to these Governmental lines. It would be erroneous to suppose that England and France recognise in what has just passed any grounds for a possible claim on the part of Germany, Austria, and Russia to have a locus standi in the direction of Egyptian politics, nor, from what comes to my knowledge, does it seem at all probable that this pretension will be advanced by either of the three Powers, who only interfered on the present occasion, because the material rights of their subjects were directly affected and prejudiced by Ismail Pasha's usurpation of authority over the international tribunals. THE PROTECTORATE, such as it is, RESTS

Digitized by Google

EXCLUSIVELY IN THE HANDS OF THE TWO WESTERN POWERS, acting, of course, through the Porte as Suzerain. The Sultan's authority will, however, be zealously restricted within its present limits, while the English and French Governments will do what they can to prevent Constantinople extracting any more money out of Egypt than what is lawfully due as tribute. It was the extortionate and insatiable greed of the seraglio and palace at Stamboul that indirectly led to the chronic financial embarrassment of the late Khedive.

The French, it is true, are now jealously nervous of British supremacy in the affairs of Egypt, and it is obvious that to minister to and allay that feeling we are acting with such scrupulous care to carry France with us in all we do to-day. When matters have settled down in Egypt under a vigorous "joint protectorship" of the two Western Powers, we ask our readers to contemplate to whom the inheritance of Egyptian Suzerainty must exclusively lapse, when that great earthquake we all expect takes place in 1882, what time the Gentile Powers of Europe, including France, the eldest son of Rome, are engaged in their deadly contest; when Gentile Russia and France united together are locked in deadly internecine destructive war with Gentile Germany and Austria combined; with Italy also perchance arrayed against the latter Powers, in fulfilment of the prophecy. We seem to think we soon shall see that day, when, the Mediterranean being in the sole hand of British Israel, France can no more meddle with the affairs of Egypt, and will trust all care of her interests, as needs she must, to the only Powers resting in peace—namely, Israel and Judah, then combined and returning by Egypt to the land of their ancient inheritance in Palestine. Then will begin the halcyon days for Egypt, when British missionaries shall teach her people of the ways of the Lord, "when the LORD shall be known to Egypt" by means of the great one—Israel the servant of the Lord sent to her—and when consequently "the Egyptians shall know the Lord in that day," shall return to the Lord, and "He shall be intreated of them and shall heal them."

We are rejoiced to think these days are come; that the British, being Israel, are entered already on their work, that matters are transpiring for them to give them the land of Egypt as their portion IN PEACE, to rule for Christ, to preach the Gospel there, and to teach the Egyptians the knowledge of the Lord. Our opponents see no beauty in all this, have no desire that Egypt should be thus regenerated in the only way God promised she should be restored to His favour. We thank God we know better! we thank Him for our Identity, which teaches us, that being Israel, to our race is reserved the high honour of this work for Christ. It is already, we are thankful to know, begun, and the chain of events which is to find Israel at last as "the third with Egypt and with Assyria—even a blessing in the midst of the land"—is already forged and in view, never to be out of sight again till the whole purposes of God regarding our nation, His people Israel, like a great concatenation, are fully accomplished. Therefore, Israel, Praise ye the Lord!

We had written thus far when the Rev. Mr. Baxter's journal, the Christian Herald, for July 2, 1879, came to hand. From it we take (page 371) the following extract—singularly in accordance with our views as above expressed; and we begin to see that ere long we shall be able to claim the editor, Mr. Baxter, no longer as an opponent, but as an Israelite. He says,—

> The future of Egypt is thus foreshadowed by a distinguished American commentator, Dr. Schaff. In his recently published "Bible Lands," speaking of the Egyptians, he says:—"Is there any hope for such a people? Undoubtedly there is, in God's own good time and way. Great political changes must precede. It is not impossible that Egypt, the highway to British India, will before long be annexed to England. The most intelligent men in Egypt, not interested in the present reign of the Khedive, desire it, knowing that England has a strong and honest Government, would throw a vast amount of capital into the country, and promote liberty, education, and industry among the people. An English protectorate over Egypt would be a part of the solution of the Eastern Question. It would prepare the way for a still higher solution, the triumph of the Cross over the Crescent. 'The Egyptians shall cry unto the Lord because of the oppressors, and He shall send them a saviour, and a great one, and he shall deliver them. And the Lord shall be known to Egypt, and the Egyptians shall know the Lord' (Isa. xix. 20, 21)."

ENGLAND AND THE SECOND EXODUS.

(ISA. XI. 11—16).

BY ROBERT LAMB.

"Therefore, behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that they shall no more say, The Lord liveth, which brought up the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt; but, The Lord liveth, which brought up and which led the seed of the House of Israel out of the North country, and from all countries whither I had driven them; and they shall dwell in their own land."—Jer. xxiii. 7, 8.

THAT England will perform no unimportant part in the second exodus or restoration of the Jews, is the opinion of many people, who at the same time reject with contempt the fact of British Identity with Israel. Popular opinion, looking at the matter in the light of the Anglo-Turkish Convention, asserts with unmistakable emphasis that no restoration of the Jews can take place without the sanction and concurrence of England. The Rock, who superciliously asserts we are suffering from a craze, and who has the good taste (!) in its current issue of June 20, 1879, to ask the question, "Are not these men blasphemers?" confidently asserts that the "bringers back" of the Jews will be England.

Canon Hoare and others are constantly asserting at missionary meetings and otherwise, when opportunity offers, that the Power destined to restore the Jews to their own land—i.e., the land originally promised to their forefathers, from the Nile to the Euphrates, and which is at the present moment under the protection of Britain—will be England. But "what saith the Scriptures?"

There are three passages which especially treat of this great matter—viz., Isa. xviii., lxvi.; and Zeph. iii.

They inform us upon the following points in regard to "an offering to the Lord."

1. What that offering consists of.
2. Where the offering is brought from.
3. The bringers of the offering.

1. What is the offering or present? "A people scattered and peeled. A nation meted out and trodden down, whose land the rivers have spoiled" (or divided) (Isa. xviii. 2—7).

Bishop Horsley says: "The time present in prophetic vision is not the time of the delivery, but that of the fulfilment of the prophecy. Now, the people of Egypt have long ceased to be of any consideration, but the people of the Jews have been from their very beginning, are at this day, and will be to the end of time, a people venerable in a religious sense, awfully 'remarkable' (so the word might be rendered rather than 'terrible') on account of the special Providence visibly attending them; and all the other particulars of the description here given of the people to whom messengers are sent, agree accurately with the character and conduct of the Jews in their present state of dispersion." "Whose land the rivers have spoiled"—"that is, armies of conquerors which long since have spoiled the land of the Jews. The inundation of rivers is a frequent image for the ravages of armies of foreign invaders."—Bishop Horsley.

In Isa. lxvi. 19, 20, two sections of the Hebrew race are referred to. The prophet is directly addressing the Jews, or House of Judah, as we find from verse 22: "For as the new heavens and the new earth which I will make, shall remain before Me, saith the Lord, so shall your seed and your name remain." He refers then to the Ten Tribes or House of Israel who escape unto the nations "to Tarshish, Pul and Lud, Tubal and Javan."

Digitized by Google

Vitringa says: "The prophet's object here is to designate the most remote parts." After setting a "sign" upon them when among these nations, He sends them to "the isles afar off," "that have not heard My fame, neither have seen My glory;" when having arrived there, their destiny was to declare God's glory among the Gentiles—i.e., become a great missionary people. The prophet then declares: "And they shall bring all your brethren for an offering." It is quite plain, then, that the offering brought to the Lord in Mount Zion is the Jewish people.

2. Where the offering is brought from. Isa. xviii. 1 and Zeph. iii. 10 assert it to be brought from "Beyond the rivers of Ethiopia," and therefore West of Palestine, and beyond the Straits of Gibraltar. Bishop Horsley, Vitringa, and Bishop Lowth each say on the expression, "Woe to the land," in Isa. xviii. 1—"The Hebrew particle here used does not necessarily imply a threat, is sometimes an exclamation of surprise, and often simply appellative of persons at a distance. It may be rendered, 'Ho land!' or 'Ho! to the land.'"

"Shadowing with wings." Bishop Horsley remarks: "The shadow of wings is a usual image in the prophetic language for protection afforded by the stronger to the weak; and in this passage may be intended to characterise some great people who should be famous for the aid and protection they should afford their friends and allies."*

"Saying, Go, ye swift messengers." Bishop Horsley observes: "The word 'saying' is not in the original or old versions. It should seem that the command is God's, issued by His prophet; and that the messengers to whom the command is given are the very people summoned in the first verse to attend."

"Vessels of bulrushes." "If the country spoken of be distant from Egypt, those vessels may only be used as an apt image of quick sailing vessels of any material."—Bishop Horsley.

We get a further clue to the place "whence the offering is brought" in Isa. lxvi. 19—viz., "the isles afar off."

From all this it appears that the place whence the Jewish people will be brought as an offering to the Lord, will present the following marks for recognition:—

(a). "Beyond the rivers of Ethiopia"—i.e., more West than Africa and the Straits of Gibraltar.

(b). In the North (Jer. xxiii. 7, 8).

(c). In the isles (Isa. lxvi. 19).

(d). The home of a maritime nation noted for their power, and famed for their protection of the weak, the aid which they afford their friends, and the security which they give to their allies. There is only one island nation in the whole world which accurately and fully in every detail answers the above description, and that island nation and people is England and the English.

3. The bringers of the offering.

In Isa. xviii. 2 the messengers are sent to a people "terrible," or "remarkable hitherto." These same messengers are the bringers back, and are themselves called a people "terrible" or "remarkable" (v. 7). The bringers and the brought, then, have this characteristic in common.

Isa. lxvi. 19, 20, after referring to the Ten Tribes dispersed among the remote nations, and sent to the isles of the sea to declare God's glory among the Gentiles, says, "And they shall bring your brethren for an offering unto the Lord." The Ten Tribes, then, are the bringers, the Two Tribes are the brought. In Zeph iii. 10 we are distinctly told "My suppliants, the daughter of My dispersed shall bring Mine offering."

W. Lowth observes: "'The daughter of My dispersed' is the same with 'My dispersed,' as the 'daughter of Zion' is equivalent to 'Zion.'"

We have seen that the Jews are "the offering." The bringer of the offering is "My dispersed"—i.e., the Ten Tribes who are accepted suppliants of God, and, therefore, a Christian people. The place whence the offering is brought is the home of the Ten Tribes (Isa. lxvi. 19, 20). And if that place whence the Jews are brought be the British Isles, as the mighty Rock, Canon Hoare, and public opinion loudly declare, the Ten Tribes must be the British people, and the British people must be the long Lost "House of Israel."

Durham.

* The Anglo-Turkish Convention, for instance.—R. L.

ARE THE BRITISH "DOGS" OF GENTILES?

We do not think our readers have ever reflected that the British, if not Israel, are, by our blessed Lord's own statement, ranked by Him, in comparison with "the children," as "Dogs!" "It is not meet," said He who cannot err, "to take the children's bread and cast it unto dogs." "The children" in that case were Israel; the Gentiles, "dogs" (Matt. xv. 26). Now, we ask our readers seriously to ponder this question. Would the Lord, as a matter of fact, give to the British, as "Gentile dogs," the high and glorious privilege of taking the Gospel to "ALL the families of the earth," which is what this nation, and this alone, is doing (teste the May meetings, and the evidence of all mankind)? or is it not in accordance with His oath and His dealings too, for four thousand years with Israel, that that post of privilege should be reserved only for the Hebrews? Is it not certain, therefore, that the British are, on this ground alone, Hebrews of the House of Israel? Let us look into the facts for a little. How has the Lord dealt hitherto in this matter of grace and blessing to mankind? Let the history of the Bible tell us. That Book is God's message of love and mercy to all the human race. True! But of what nation is the Bible the recorded history? Of the Hebrews. In what language was its older portion written? In Hebrew. Who wrote it? Hebrew legislators, Hebrew prophets, Hebrew judges, Hebrew priests, Hebrew kings, Hebrew herdsmen, Hebrews of low and Hebrews of high degree. Who wrote the Greek New Testament? Greeks? Nay! Hebrews again. When the Son of God took on Him the form in which He lived and died, what flesh did He assume? The nature of angels? Nay! The seed of Gentiles? Nay, nay! It was the seed of Abraham. He was a Hebrew. Who were the messengers of grace and mercy under the old dispensation, and also under the new as well? "Ye are My witnesses," saith the Lord Jehovah to Hebrews (Isa. xliii. 10—12). "Ye are My witnesses," said the Lord Jesus Christ to His Hebrew disciples (Luke xxiv. 48). When the Gospel was sent for the first time to Gentile "dogs," by whose ministration was that great change effected? By an angel's? Nay! The angel said not a word to Cornelius of Jesus, nor of the blood of sprinkling, nor of the way of salvation. He merely gave the Roman an "address" or "direction;" told him to send for one Simon, whose surname is Peter, who lodgeth "in the house of one Simon, a tanner, whose house is by the sea-side;" and saying that, the heavenly messenger forthwith disappeared. Who, then, gave Cornelius the needful Christian instruction? Another Gentile? Nay! not so! They were never so commissioned, as we have seen since time began. It was Simon, surnamed Peter, a Galilean Israelite—a Hebrew! Where, then, is the proof that God has since changed His plans, which lasting from the times of Moses, of Samuel, of David, of Isaiah, of Malachi, of the apostles, and of the disciples of the Lord Jesus, ended with the call of the Gentiles, and all through, always, and in all ages, till then reserved to the Hebrews, and to them only, the blessed privilege of publishing and preaching the glorious Gospel of the grace of God to all races, orders, and conditions of men? We find it nowhere in God's Word. It is a fond invention of our modern opponents, who alleging we are Gentiles, and therefore dogs, who do this blessed work, thereby run counter to God's proved dealings with His chosen people for 2,000 years, counter to His oath to Abraham, His friend, counter to our Lord's own most solemn asseveration when He said He came not to destroy the law and the prophets, but only to fulfil (Matt. v. 17). Surely such allegations as these, that we British who perform all the God-assigned functions of the Hebrews in the matter of Gospel publication, "to ALL the families and to ALL nations of the earth" (Gen. xxii. 18, xxviii. 14), are mere "dogs of Gentiles" after all, approach to statements which must be offensive to the honour, the glory, and the faithfulness of our oath-keeping and covenant-observing God. We will not, therefore, for a moment give place to our opponents who declare we British, as Gentiles, are favoured to carry the Gospel to the whole world in virtue of our Protestantism, of our Bible-loving propensities, and of our general conformity to God's will, when in truth, these things, if we possess them at all, are our God's free, unmerited gifts to us because we are His people Israel, and not otherwise. Once more. Our opponents are never tired of telling us that we British (being Gentile "dogs") are as the "Land shadowing with sails of ships"—as "the ships of Tarshish"—as "Tarshish," and as "the isles of the sea" of prophecy, destined to the high honour and stupendous privilege of taking the Jews back to their land, and of restoring them to their pristine glory and privilege there. Where do our opponents find that God ever represents in the Holy Scriptures that this honour and this privilege are promised to "Gentile dogs?" Are they not rather most strictly tied up and entailed in God's Word on Israel of the dispersed Tribes, and on them alone? Where do they find any Gentile companionship whatsoever assigned to Judah in their "return?" Where in God's Word is any companion at all given them as equals but Israel? We read in OUR Bibles that "the House of Judah shall walk to the House of Israel, and that they shall come together out of the land of the North to the land that He hath given as an inheritance to their fathers;" that "the children of Judah and the children of Israel shall be gathered together, that they shall appoint themselves one head; that they shall come up out of the land; for great shall be the day of Jezreel" (which is Israel—not Judah); but not one word is said of any Gentile nation like the British having part or lot in the matter. And this is not all. In the prophecy of the "two sticks" we have the union and return of Judah, in dependence upon Israel, depicted; but not a hint, not an intimation of the most distant kind, that God will allow His ancient people, the Jews, to be brought to Him as "His present" by any Gentile race whatsoever; but only, solely, and alone by "His suppliants, the daughter of His dispersed," the people who are "terrible from their beginning and hitherto"—therefore Israel. The British being those set apart, as all men see, to be the chosen instruments for the restoration of the Jews, their hand being now upon Cyprus, as the "Gate" of Palestine, their arm of protection being even now stretched over the Holy Land as that powerful race who mean to guard and to watch over it as a part of Asiatic Turkey; the Jews even now looking to "England" as the nation destined to help them to return—we maintain, as the fair outcome of all this, as the dictate of logic, of reason, of Scripture, and of the arguments of our Identity in general, that the British races are not "Gentile dogs" at all, but God-favoured Israelites, and therefore the appointed agents, not only to carry the Gospel to ALL the families and ALL the nations "of the earth," but to conduct the Jews back to their land in triumph, as "the present to the Lord," and to take possession themselves of their God-allotted eleven-twelfths of their own glorious inheritance there. Israel! Praise YE the Lord!

Digitized by Google

"OUR poor troops have again behaved wonderfully everywhere. General Havelock has fought nine battles, frequently with 800 men against 10,000, in which he captured 66 guns in the open field."—Life of Prince Consort, Vol. iv., pp. 136, 137.

THE REV. HORATIUS BONAR, D.D., ON "ISRAEL" AND "GENTILE" ENGLAND.

THE Rev. Dr. Bonar has, at page 584 of the Christian Herald of October 16, 1878, No. 42, been doing his very best to make confusion worse confounded, and to upset all God's purposes, which are now being so majestically carried out in the East, by reversing the whole order of things. The "Jew" with him is "Israel," "Israel" is the "Jew." The British, regarding whom he can hardly say too much or speak too favourably, have the destiny allotted to them, the Doctor says, "to help the Jew and to deliver their land." "Hitherto the Gentiles have trodden down Jerusalem; now, the hand of the Gentile (meaning the British) comes forward to lift up her head."

All this is provoking enough, for Dr. Bonar knows quite well the nature of the stupendous evidence which has now been accumulated to prove that the British are not Gentiles pure, but Israelites of the Ten Tribes. He is deaf, however, to all that has been said, done, and written in regard to our Identity during the last three or four years, but continues doggedly to ignore the Ten Tribes' functions in the great matter of the restoration of the Jews, and ignoring scores of Scriptures which declare that the Houses of Israel and Judah shall return TOGETHER and be "united" in their restoration, persists in declaring that to which God's Word gives not the faintest support—namely, that England, as he calls the British nation, being a Gentile Power, is to succour and restore the sons of Judah.

Setting these provocations aside, there are many passages in Dr. Bonar's paper which we greatly admire and shall ask our readers also to notice.

Speaking of Lord Beaconsfield, whom the Rev. Doctor calls a Jew, he says, concerning the Eastern Question:—

> A Jew, then, in the person of our own Prime Minister, has been the moving, guiding, controlling power throughout these confusions and complications. The rightness or wrongness of what he has done is not to us just now the question. It is the fact that, in the providence of God, he should have been at the helm of England when these difficulties came up, and that he should have been made use of to settle them. The question is ultimately a Jewish one, and a Jew has been called in to solve it, and to solve it as only a Jew could do.
>
> It is a Jew that is now Premier of the greatest nation which the world ever saw. It is a Jew that commands the fleets and armies of the mightiest monarchy that has existed in the world. It is a Jew that is at the head, not only of the ten kingdoms of the Roman earth, but of the whole four monarchies of Daniel. It is a Jew that, when the great Northern Power was pouring its squadrons upon Europe, Asia, and Syria, ready to occupy not Constantinople only, but Jerusalem, interposed and bridled back the mighty hosts without the shedding of one drop of blood.

In these few lines our instructed readers see, doubtless, some wonderful blind testimony and also some surprising mistakes. Dr. Bonar alleges, truly enough, that—

1. The Jew, Lord Beaconsfield, is the Premier, at this crisis, "of the greatest nation the world ever saw," "of the mightiest monarchy that has existed in the world." But he said, by using these words, that the British were the Chief of nations—therefore Israel (Isaiah xli. 9; Jer. xxxi. 7; Amos vi. 1).

2. That this same Jew is head of the four monarchies of Daniel. This, of course, places Great Britain in the position of the stone of Daniel, which God's Word expressly says is (succeeding them) to break the four kingdoms into pieces, and itself, as the "mountainous kingdom," to "fill the whole earth" (Dan. ii. 35). Dan. vii. 22—27 with Psa. cxlviii. 14 shows that stone to be Israel.

But, as our readers observe, Dr. Bonar falls into the error of supposing Great Britain can be the head of the Roman Empire or one of the ten kingdoms of the Roman "earth." We have repeatedly shown the fallacy of this view and need not reiterate the argument here.

Digitized by Google

Dr. Bonar admits that the Ten Tribes exist somewhere at the present day, but, like the Rev. Mr. Goodhart and others, insists they must be "under the curse of scattering and unbelief."

What he says on the subject is this:—

Still, the events of the present day are calling the attention of men to the East, and especially to Israel. We do not attempt to arrange the many predictions concerning Israel. They will, ere long, unfold themselves—perhaps more rapidly than we think; the Ten Tribes, still, like Judah, under the curse of scattering and unbelief, will be brought into view in some way that we know not of; and it may be in various sections and at different times the whole nation will reappear to claim their ancient heritage.

It is nothing to Dr. Bonar that God solemnly promised erring Israel of the Ten Tribes that He would be to them as though He had not cast them off (Zech. x. 6); that He would be to them as a "little sanctuary" in the countries where they should come (Ezek. xi. 16); that it is to Israel's habitation in the North country the Jews have to "walk," prior to the return, the gathering being from the West (Jer. iii. 18; Isa. xliii. 5); that the blessings are promised to Israel obedient, and the British have had just those blessings specified in Deut xxviii. 1—14, xv. 1—6, conferred on them since their reformation in the sixteenth century.

These and many other points are nothing to Dr. Bonar. He has been reared and educated in the opinion that the Jews are to be restored—and now that it is clear the British and none others will or can do it, the British must be "Gentiles" because Dr. Bonar has been trained in that belief. But if the Scriptures declare that the sole companions of the House of Judah in the restoration must be not Gentiles, but Hebrews of the House of Israel—why, so much the worse for the Holy Scriptures! "Let the Doctor's opinion stand, but let the heavens, if they like, fall down."

We wish nothing worse for Dr. Bonar than that he should be condemned to go through a severe course of study of Identity literature for six months; and then, with pen, ink, and paper furnished him, he should be commanded to sit down and write a treatise exposing the fallacies of the Anglo-Israel belief as in the sight of God and of His Holy Word, if he dared or could. We venture to say he would come out of such an ordeal a wiser, but a happier man—one who had overcome rooted prejudice, "seeing," and no longer blind.

One word in conclusion and we have done. Dr. Bonar, throughout the article under review, speaks of the Jew as if he were the great and important factor in the immensely grand circumstances of "the return." But where did he find his Scripture warrant for that idea? We know of none. On the contrary, we find an inspired prophet of the Most High God (Hosea i. 11) declaring that "the children of Judah," at a certain chronological epoch identified with the word THEN (or AND), which begins the verse, "shall with the children of Israel be GATHERED TOGETHER; that they shall appoint themselves one head; and they shall come up out of the land; for great shall be the day of Jezreel;" and Dr. Bonar will find, by reference to the fourth verse of the same chapter, that Jezreel is ISRAEL of the Ten Tribes, but not Judah at all! (See also Zeph. iii. 12—Who are "the afflicted and poor people" but Judah in the midst of Israel the Ten Tribes?)

"THE AFTER SEED."—By L. G. R.—At page 337, Vol. ii., No. 94, Mr. Abraham Storey alludes to the phrase "seed after thee," and implies that the rendering might be the seed that should "walk before God in the steps of their forefather Abraham." In support of the above I beg to forward you the literal meaning of the Hebrew word אחריך (Fray's Dict.) "after thee." This word is derived from the root ארח to go in the track, travel (Job xxxiv. 8), a track, path, way, road (Gen. xlix. 17; Psa. viii. 8), a way, manner, custom (Gen. xviii. 11; Psa. xxv. 4), also a traveller (2 Sam. xii. 4) with the possessive pronoun suffixed, "in thy way," "in thy path," "after thee."

FROM ASSYRIA TO BRITAIN.

THE SEQUEL.

By W. BURNETT-COATES, HOME OFFICE, C.D.

(Continued from page 289.)

PART I.—CONTINUED.

WHEN the fugitive Asiatic people journeyed from Media and Persia to seek a spot where they might "dwell alone"—the burthen of a prophecy—their frequent disturbances, and their Scythian rere-ward "worry," did not admit of their carrying with them their smelting furnaces, forges, and the various implements so well known, and so deftly used in the land from which they were outdriven; perhaps with little ceremony and less evidences of the civilisation from which they were ruthlessly removed. Wanderers, harassed, and fleeced, and fighting for existence for many years—some for generations—how was it possible that they could retain the adjuncts of their civilized historical existence, so as to render them independent of rude resources amidst the wilds of an, until their advent, uninhabited country?

They surely came empty-handed and bare. Why need we imagine "pre-historic man" and a "stone age" to account for "Celtes" and flint arrow heads?" Necessity has ever been "the mother of invention," and surely suggested to the Celtic people, the Cymri, who landed in the East of Britain, the formation of stone implements and stone weapons. If wood could have survived the effects of time and climate for 2,500 years, the boomerang, the wattle-spear, and the war club, would doubtless bespeak a "wooden age," to supplement the "stone age."

I wonder much if the "Pilgrim Fathers" had stored away in the "Mayflower" all that was requisite for the daily necessities of a Sylvan war with nature's ferœ naturæ children. Have they not had recourse to the smooth stones of the brook, as did David; and the iron-wood of the forest, from which to form implements rude, yet "handy," and necessary? If they did so, could they be called "pre-historic" because an inventive and inherent genius, handed down to their posterity in great pre-eminence, led them to form "primitive" implements for many purposes? It might have been Crusoic, as Defoe would paint it, but not "pre-historic." Would not a little research into the ways of a remote cottage sanctum in England even now discover stones used for various domestic purposes, where iron or other metal contrivances cannot be conveniently procured? Nevertheless the cottage inmates are not "pre-historic;" it is nothing more or less than the suggestion of the aforesaid mother of invention. Even the Israelites, when they dwelt in their own land, and were under an adverse yoke, and rebelled, had but one sword amongst the host; no bows-and-arrows; nothing but the cattle goads from which to improvise their weapons; and, possibly, the sling and stone; yet they were not "pre-historic."

Such considerations being reasonable, a doubt may fairly be entertained relative to "pre-historic man" in the British Isles, especially in the absence of either history or tradition to the contrary. We are, therefore—aided by history in some sort, and tradition of a verisimilitude nature—still warranted in assuming that the aboriginal Britons were assuredly—with their cognate Tribes—the Cymri, and none other. They were not "a palœolithic people," but Asiatic Tribes seeking a refuge. The echoes of ancient history, as well as their presence undiminished at this day, on examination, will be found in pretty close union with a conclusive certainty, not only as to Asiatic origin, but as to Hebrew descent.

If in a pre-historic age a palœolithic people inhabited "The Isles of the West," surely stone implements and stone weapons, comparatively imperishable in their nature, must present themselves on every path we tread, and in every furrow of the modern plough. It is not so, however; for one might hazard an opinion that a costermonger's creel would afford ample packing space for those brought to light; else why so eagerly Museum every "find," whether genuine or not? As "one swallow does not denote summer," I apprehend that a bushel or two of the much-made-of "pre-historic Celtes" cannot be held to establish a palæolithic era in this country.

Digitized by Google

A similar mode of reasoning may as safely dispose of "lake-dwellings," and the "fire-hollowed canoes," which now and again turn up to glad the antiquarian's eyes, when exhumed on the drained site of some ancient lake, time-choked with alluvial deposit and swamp-grown vegetation.

Than that a palæolithic people, prone to the use of their stone implements, weapons, &c., inhabited these Islands in the pre-historic past, it is much more probable, as it is much more likely the men who gave the very ancient and time-honoured name to our British Islands were its first possessors. No tradition speaks of a prior race; no history alludes to one, except it may have proceeded from the hazy idea of an emasculated monkish mind, not vigorous enough to grasp the idea of a country without inhabitant. At all events, when Cæsar opened an ominous page, before the advent of the Christian era, Britain and the British were not unknown to fame, and to commerce; neither were they people of the painted pattern order represented by Gildas and the hapless historians who follow suit—viz., in "woad and raddle!"

When we know with what effective resistance the Romans were, over and over again, repelled by a people who used chariots with scythe-armed-axles, to the terrible dismay of their best legions, compelling them to employ elephants as a counterpoise, and that it occupied them during 264 years to reduce the Britons, who were sadly weakened by tribal interests and differences, to bear the burthen of their yoke, we can scarcely conclude that civilisation in Britain was overlain by coatings of "woad and raddle."

So persistently, so independently contended the various Tribes with the Roman "iron-clads," when the common danger led them in some measure to combine their forces, that the war-inured invaders were compelled to push a chain of military stations, numbering 92, across the country before they could render their position tenable, or exact tribute from the fiercely resisting Tribes. Some of these Tribes they never subdued, and some, there is good reason to believe, they never saw. Some retired to Armorica and Brittany, to return in after years as hostile invaders, and as conquerors, and to remingle with their kindred under the proud Norman name.

For many years the Romans found no bed of roses in Britain; although intercourse, time, and the stranger's yoke rendered the bulk of the population submissive to the dominant power, from which they learnt much, and to which they taught much. The men who could frame the scythed chariot, and train the war-horse to rush through the ranks of the Roman spearman, and discomfit them, when thousands perished in continuous battles, must have been of an order little inferior, if at all so, to their more warlike assailants. Want of homogeneity, and diversity of interest, rendered them unequal to a concentrated and sustained effort to foil the experienced foe; they succumbed after years of fruitless resistance. Disarmed and disheartened during the remaining centuries of the Roman rule, civil and military, there was no path to fame for them, save when their youths were drafted into the Conqueror's legions; therefore the great bulk of a numerous people sank into serfdom on their own soil; or, perchance, some occupied a few grades' higher position, when it pleased their masters to permit those who had ability to retain or acquire an independence to advance a few grades higher. But Nemesis rode to Rome on the "red horse," in the ranks of the Goths and Vandals, and Rome must totter ere she falls. Her Empire must decay—her glories lie in the dust.

Then occurs a strange phenomenon—perhaps a unique one: Rome withdraws, "bag and baggage," from British soil—en masse—leaving none but their British wives and hybrid children to merge in the native population, and to tell of their sojourn. Truly "the people shall dwell alone." The great Inspirer of prophecy seems to have called up circumstances to remove the alien and the stranger from the soil whose wilderness sheltered His outcast people. "The people shall dwell alone;" the Romans, root and tree, must disappear.

This is one other remarkable phase in the history of a remarkable people. Certain it is that no alien people have since found footing in Britain. Although Saxon, Dane, and Norman, each in turn dominated the Ancient Briton, the Cymri, Celt, and Gael, and successively dominated each other, they were but estranged kinsmen—time divided—and destined to re-unite in "The Isles of the West."

(To be continued).

MORE "BLIND" TESTIMONY.

By Jno. S. Anderson.

The present condition of this country, as well as that of the continental nations, and, we may as well say, of the whole world, having "all to do" with our great subject, confirmatory evidence, taken from the daily journals, cannot fail to carry weight. How strange that its application is left quite untouched by them! nay, after describing the position, which could not have been done in a more forcible manner by an Identity leader, the Standard proceeds to hope that the worst has passed, and that the present year, although opening badly, will, as it runs its course, bring about a better state of things. Of course this is not the Scriptural view we take of present prospects, and shows the utter blindness of the writers who cry "peace" when there is no peace, and endeavour to gloss over the present uneasiness, the existence of which they fully admit, with promises of better things at hand. The article in question is in the paper for the first day of this year. Speaking of 1878, they say:—

> He has sunk below the horizon amid wars and rumours of wars, amid dark and threatening clouds, amid cries of national distress, and leaving behind him a long train of lurid memories, such as we trust most sincerely will not be the legacy of his successor. The year 1878 has been a year of some glories, but of many calamities. Tragedy, both public and private, both Imperial and domestic, has reigned supreme throughout. The throes of tottering Empires, the anguish of august houses, disasters on so fearful and terrible a scale as to rank almost in their results with the great convulsions of nature, have combined with widespread social suffering to invest the last twelve months with a decidedly melancholy character. We trust we may hail the first day of the New Year as the harbinger of better things, and that we may shortly be able to look back upon the distresses and perplexities, the exhausting suspense and the bitter recriminations, of the departed year as men look back, not without some feeling of satisfaction, on the storm and dangers through which at last they have arrived in port. There are, however, some calamities which can never be regarded in this spirit, and the year 1878 is responsible for more than its share of those acuter sorrows which are inflicted by the hand of death. It is not often that one and the same year has witnessed two such melancholy events as the death of the young Queen of Spain and of our well-beloved Princess Alice, the one in the pride of matronly bloom, the other in her girlish springtide, with life just opening before her in all its most alluring colours. The same year saw the death of the great King who restored Italy; and of the venerable Pope who waged so long and so dauntless a struggle on behalf of the rights of the Church against the modern ideas of nationality and secularism. In a lower grade than Royalty the year just departed has deprived us of many a name of note, both in our social circles and the worlds of literature and politics.
>
> * * * * * *
>
> Of those appalling catastrophes by which thousands are plunged into mourning almost in a single moment the year 1878 has been unfortunately fruitful. The loss of the Eurydice on the 24th of April, in a calm sea and within sight of port, when so many hearts were rejoicing at the prospect of a speedy re-union with those they loved best, sent a pang through the nation's heart, which will not speedily be forgotten. The loss of the Grosser Kurfürst was but a shade less tragic; while that of the Princess Alice was, if possible, even still more appalling. These three collisions involved together the loss of fourteen hundred lives; while upwards of five hundred more have perished in colliery explosions at Abercarne, Wigan, Glasgow, and elsewhere.

Digitized by Google

* * * * * *

By flood and field, by the pestilence that walketh in darkness and the arrow that flieth in the noonday, death has indeed been gathering in his harvest throughout the year with no stinted hand. But even where the King of Terror has not laid his icy grasp, that has occurred in many households from which he would have been welcomed as a relief. The sudden fall from wealth to poverty, the fruits of a life of honourable labour turned to ashes in a single day, habits to be abandoned which use has made a second nature, children whose future in the world seemed assured and smiling compelled to abandon all the hopes and expectations in which they had been bred, and suddenly condemned to a path of indigence and obscurity—these are things which bring misery sometimes worse than death; and this, alas! is a misery in which the year 1878 has rarely perhaps been equalled. The failure of long-established firms of hereditary wealth and responsibility has not only brought ruin to the doors of thousands reared in every comfort and luxury, but has raised dismay, suspicion, and wretchedness through the whole commercial world.

"Et metus, et malesuada fames, et turpis egestas."

Nor have sufferings of this kind been peculiar to the wealthier classes. Strikes entailing great privations have occurred among the working men, and accompanied by riots to which England has been a stranger almost since the days of the Chartists. Partly owing to these, and partly to more general causes, vast numbers of the poor have been thrown out of work altogether, and are now appealing mutely to their more fortunate countrymen for rescue from absolute starvation. Such are the scenes on which last year's sun went down. Such are the scenes, alas! on which the New Year's sun has risen. But we know that now the crisis must be nearly past, and that at all events the sufferings of 1878, even should they extend into 1879 further than there is any reason to anticipate, will have taught us some lessons from which all of us may be the happier in future.

It would be a curious speculation to consider how far people really do learn anything from such calamities as have distinguished the late year.

We know by experience hitherto that our calamities and "afflictions" are not yet over! With Zech. viii. 10 before us we must not wonder, but rather rejoice, because of the happy prospects verses 11, 12, and 13 present to us as "His people Israel."

OUR FATHERS.

A DIFFERENCE WITH A VENGEANCE.

"We have heard with our ears, O God, our fathers have told us, what work Thou didst in their days, in the times of old."—Psalm xliv. 1.

"O Lord, my strength, and my fortress, and my refuge in the day of affliction, the Gentiles shall come unto Thee from the ends of the earth, and shall say, Surely our fathers have inherited lies, vanity, and things wherein there is no profit."—Jer. xvi. 19.

ANGLO-SAXONS of the Evangelical Churches of Great Britain, are you prepared to decide the following important questions :—

Have you inherited from your fathers the truth of God's most Holy Word? or have you inherited from your fathers—"lies, vanity, and things wherein there is no profit?"

If the former, you are Israelites of the seed of Abraham, to whom the promises were made. If the latter, then the words of Jeremiah must be fulfilled in you and your nation.

To those who halt between two opinions as to our Israelitish origin, and more particularly to those who ignorantly condemn it as a vain and false theory, let them contemplate the Israelitish expressions of our Church of England service, and which they utter Sabbath after Sabbath with their lips; let them consider that if they are Gentiles they have no right to make use of these expressions, for the simple reason that they do not belong to them : but if they are convinced that they are Israelites, then they are heartily justified in saying :—"Blessed be the Lord God of Israel; for He hath visited, and redeemed His people, and hath raised up a mighty salvation for us in the House of His servant David; as He spake by the mouth of His holy prophets, which have been since the world began : that we should be saved from our enemies, and from the hand of all that hate us" (remark how wonderfully this has been fulfilled by the Anglo-Saxon nation up to the present time); "to perform the mercy promised to our forefathers, and to remember His holy covenant; to perform the oath which He sware to our forefather Abraham, that He would grant unto us, that we being delivered out of the hand of our enemies might serve Him without fear, in holiness and righteousness before Him all the days of our life" (St. Luke i. 68—75).

From the exalted position of the powerful Anglo-Saxon nation, with regard to the rest of the nations in these last days of the present Christian dispensation, and their numerous Identifications, they are found to be fulfilling every one of the prophecies regarding the House of Israel; therefore, they are evidently the Ten long Lost Tribes who were to re-appear (previous to the return of Judah—Jer. iii. 18), and who are at present making searching enquiries regarding themselves, as it is written :—"Thus saith the Lord God, I will yet for this be enquired of by the House of Israel" (Ezek. xxxvi. 37). And they are now fulfilling the strange and wonderful vision mentioned in the thirty-seventh chapter of Ezekiel (Romans xi. 15; Isaiah lxiii. 16, 17).

Lastly, observe with attention this difference conveyed by the words of Simeon (Luke ii. 30), between the people of Israel and the Gentile nations—"For mine eyes have seen Thy salvation, which Thou hast prepared before the face of all people; to be a light to lighten the Gentiles, and to be the glory of Thy people Israel." The glory of the Sun of Righteousness shed upon, and reflected by, the people of Israel.

Extract from the letter of the special correspondent of the Daily Telegraph, Monday, Dec. 30th, 1878, relating to the operations of our gallant army in Afghanistan, who states as follows :—"We escape every possible danger with persistent good fortune that history will record as unprecedented."

These words remind us of our very remarkable campaign in Abyssinia, when our victorious army returned without the loss of a man, because the Lord of hosts protects the armies of Israel, and leads them on to victory.

GOD SAVE THE QUEEN.

R. W. D. NICKLE, Major.

Leamington, December 30, 1878.

SIR WALTER RALEIGH TESTIFIES TO ISRAEL'S COLONIES.

SIR WALTER RALEIGH, writing of the "Tribe of Ephraim, and of the kings of the Ten Tribes, whose head was Ephraim," speaks at length of their cities of note, and mentions some of their famous mountains. He then uses the following words :—

"The great plenty of fruitfull vines upon the sides of the mountaines was the occasione that Jacob in the spirit of prophecy (Gen. xlix. 22) compared Joseph's two branches—Ephraim and Manasse—to the branches of a fruitfull vine planted by the wel side, and spreading her (a) daughter branches along the wall; which allegory also Ezekiel in his lamentation for Ephraim (that is, for the Ten Tribes, whose head was Ephraim), prosequutes; as also in his lamentation for Juda, he followeth the other allegory of Jacob (Gen. xlix. 9) comparing Juda to a Lyon."

Two centuries ago, there were men who confounded not Israel with Judah.

At the words "daughter branches" there is a marginal note, as follows :—

"(a). It seemeth that Jacob in this prophecie, the rather useth the word daughters for branches, thereby the more plainly to signifie colonies : which in the Hebrew phrase are called daughters of the metrôpolis, as in Josua and elsewhere often."

Sir Walter Raleigh's work was published in 1614 in a wondrous era in Israel's history; and strange that he who thus testifies to Israel's colonies, should have been one of that daring band of illustrious men who ploughed the seas in quest of them, and, by the blessing of Israel's God, laid their foundation sure.

THOMAS BALES.

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements
(PREPAID).

	£ s. d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0 1 0
Each additional line	0 0 4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0 2 0
Each additional line	0 0 6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0 2 6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O O payable at Ludgate-circus.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed :—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

BANNER FREE CIRCULATION FUND.

Donations, applications for grants, to be addressed to R. Fergusson Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London.

NEW BOOKS.

NEW PAMPHLET ON OUR IDENTITY.
NOW READY, price 9d., post free, 10d.

ARE WE ISRAELITES? THE TESTIMONY OF HISTORY, PHILOLOGY, AND ETHNOLOGY on the Subject. By the Rev. BOURCHIER WREY SAVILE, M.A., Rector of Shillingford, Exeter. With an Introduction by Philo-Israel.

Contents.

Chapter I.—Hard Speeches.
" II.—Opponents' Arguments.
" III.—Common Errors.
" IV.—The Sacæ.
" V.—The Cymry.
" VI.—Historical Testimony.
" VII.—Philology.
" VIII.—Chief of the Nations.
" IX.—Multiplicity of Seed.
" X.—The Anglo-Saxon Race.
" XI.—Anglo-Israel.
" XII.—Summary.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row; Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; or of any Bookseller.

MR. ROBERTS REFUTED.

REPLY TO MR. ROBERTS.

Now ready, price 2d.

A REPLY TO MR. ROBERTS ON THE EXETER HALL DEBATE, on the Subject, Are Englishmen Israelites? By ALEXANDER DUNN.

A REPLY TO MR. ROBERTS will be sent post free for 2½d., from the publisher, W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

A REPLY TO MR. ROBERTS may be had, by ordering, of any Bookseller in town or country.

London: Published by W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

A NEW WORK ON THE IDENTITY.

THE PROMISES TO ABRAHAM, with Select References and Explanatory Notes, to which is added an article entitled, "Israel Among the Gentiles."

The aim of this Pamphlet is to present the Scriptural Argument in a new and concise form, both for examination and reference.

Price Sixpence, or free by post, Sevenpence. May be had of the Author, W. S. Cavill, Norton Woodside, near Sheffield; or of Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.; and of all Booksellers.

Just out. Price 4d.

NEBUCHADNEZZAR'S DREAM and THE BRITISH EMPIRE. By Ephraim. With Illustrative Prophetic Map.

"We are glad to see another attempt to connect Daniel's dream of the metallic image and "the stone which becomes a mountain," with the British Empire. It appears in the form of a letter to a friend abroad. The pamphlet, though very sketchy in its character and aim, is on the whole a useful little work."—Banner of Israel.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; Sold by W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

THE GREAT PYRAMID. NOW READY, PHILO-ISRAEL'S NEW WORK. 56 pages, Illustrtaed with Diagrams, price 4d., post free 6d.

BOOKS, ETC.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

Temporary Office:

20, WARWICK LANE, LONDON, E.C.

Vice-Presidents:

Admiral DUNN, Weston-Super-Mare.
Captain E. WEBSTER, Stirling.
Rev. A. J. J. CACHEMAILLE, M.A., Vicar of St. Mary's, Oldham.
Dr. J. M. GRANT, Surgeon-General, Camp, Aldershot.
Rev. C. W. HICKSON, M.A., Vicar of St. Bartholomew's, Bristol.
Rev. G. A. ROGERS, M.A., Vicar of Christ Church, Dover.
W. H. PETERS, Esq., J.P., Exeter.
BOOTH MASON, Esq., Arley House, Leamington.
J. H. WELDON, Esq., J.P., Killmallock, N.B.
HENRY LESLIE, Esq., Conduit-street, W.
Lieut.-Colonel W. H. LARKINS, Hastings.
JOHN T. GOTT, Esq., Stockton-on-Tees.

Chairman of Committee:

Mr. E. W. BIRD (PHILO-ISRAEL), Bristol.

Committee:

Major-General WM. HILL, Bath.
Lieut.-Colonel BENTINCK, Upper Grosvenor-street, W.
Capt. BAYLY, Streatham, S.W., and Trinity House, E.C.
Mr. JOHN S. ANDERSON, Upper Norwood, S.E.
Mr. ROBERT BANKS, London, E.C.
Mr. BENTINCK CANNEY, Lewisham, S.E.
Mr. FREDERICK CLIFT, B.A., LL.D., Upper Norwood, S.E.
Mr. FREDERICK C. DANVERS, C.E., India Office, W.
Mr. JOHN T. FLETCHER, J.P., C.L., Upper Norwood, S.E.
Rev. F. R. A. GLOVER, M.A., St. James, London, W.
Mr. H. L. GUERRIER, Tooting, S.W.
Mr. W. H. GUEST, London, E.C.
Mr. WILLIAM HASLAM, 2, Springfield, Clapton.
Mr. CHARLES HORNER, Moulsham, S.W.
Mr. W. W. INCE, Douglas, Isle of Man.
Mr. DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, J.P., St. John's-wood, N.W.
Mr. H. H. PAIN, Bromley, Kent, S.E.
Dr. HODSON RUGG, St. John's-wood, N.W.
Mr. J. L. WOOD, New Southgate, N.

Bankers:

CITY BANK, Ludgate-hill, E.C.

Hon. Sec.:

Rev. JAMES BILLINGTON, F.S.A.

This Association has been established to bind in closer union the many friends who rejoice in having a portion with the long Lost Tribes of the House of Israel; also to extend the knowledge of the truth that the Anglo-Saxon races are now identified with those Lost Tribes of the House of Israel. These objects, it is thought, will be best accomplished by means of Drawing Room and Public Meetings, by Sermons, Lectures, Bible Readings, by the diffusion of Literature upon the subject, and by such other ways and means as the Committee may from time to time determine.

Members' Annual Subscriptions is not less than 2s. 6d per annum.

Donations and Subscriptions are needed to carry on the work.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION. The FIRST ANNUAL REPORT, containing a verbatim account of the speeches delivered at Exeter Hall by Admiral Dunn, Philo-Israel, Rev. H. Newton, M.A., D. A. Onslow, Esq., J.P., W. H. Peters, Esq., J.P., Colonel Bentinck, Charles Stubbs, B.A., &c., &c., will be sent free on application to the Secretary.

Now Ready. Price 3d.

THE WIMBLEDON ANGLO-ISRAEL DEBATE. A verbatim Report of the Debate held at Emmanuel Church, Wimbledon, on Thursday, June 5th, 1879, containing the speeches delivered by Colonel Sandwith, Rev. Bourchier Wrey Savile, Rev. J. W. Wilkinson, Rev. C. W. Hickson, Mr. Frank White, Mr. Douglas A. Onslow, J.P., Rev. S. Garrett, Rev. F. R. A. Glover, and the Rev. H. E. Brook.

London: Issued by the "Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association;" and published by W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

PHOTOGRAPHIC PORTRAITS OF PHILO-ISRAEL, Editor of THE BANNER OF ISRAEL, Author of "The History of the House of Israel," &c., &c. Cabinet, 2s., post free; Carte-de-Visites, 1s., post free.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

New and Revised Edition. Price 6d. Cloth boards, 1s.

THE NEW OLD STORY, with an Introduction to a Marvellous Puzzle. The Story gives a sketch of the History of the Hebrews, shewing distinctly the difference between the Two Nations Judah and Israel, the latter being the British. The Story also tells of the Great Pyramid, and explains how its wonderful meaning can be, as it is only understood by measurement. An Appendix explains "The Eastern Question." The Story is written with great simplicity, and interests young children. By A E I, Author of "The Answer to the Eastern Question."

W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

ARE THE ENGLISH PEOPLE THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL? By PHILO-ISRAEL. Price 4d.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

MISCELLANEOUS.

TO AUTHORS. Authors desirous of issuing Works or Pamphlets on the great and increasingly interesting Question of the Identity of the Lost Ten Tribes with the British Nation, should first communicate with Robert Banks, of Racquet-court, Fleet-street, who has already been honoured by issuing, amongst others, the following works on the subject:

The Banner of Israel. Weekly 1d.; monthly 7d.

The Nation's Glory Leader. Weekly 1d.; quarterly 1s. 4d.

The Pillar of Witness. By late Captain Tracey. Cloth 2s. 6d.; paper 1s. 6d. (second edition).

The Anglo-Israel Post Bag. By Bishop Titcomb. Cloth 2s. 6d.; paper 1s. 6d. (second edition).

The History of the House of Israel. By Philo-Israel. Cloth 1s.; paper 6d. (sixth thousand).

The Great Pyramid of Egypt. Fifty-two pages, with three illustrations. Price 4d. (10,000).

The New Old Story. By A E I. Cloth 1s.

NOW READY, price 2d., post free, 2½d.
NEW PAMPHLET BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

THE HISTORICAL, ETHNIC, AND PHILOLOGICAL ARGUMENTS in PROOF of BRITISH IDENTITY with the TEN LOST TRIBES OF ISRAEL, clearly and simply stated.

BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

CONTENTS:—Introduction—The Celts—Professor Rawlinson's Testimony—The Cymry—The Cimmerii—The Gimiri and Khumri—The Testimony of the Nimroud Obelisk—The Scythians—The Anglo-Saxons—Sharon Turner's Testimony—The Jutes and Angles—The Danes and the Normans—General Conclusions—Philology—The Welsh Language—The Rev. Canon Lysons' Testimony—Idiomatic Identity Between Hebrew and English—Tyndal's Testimony—The Tribe of Dan—The Irish Celts—Are the Continental Nations Israelites?—Conclusions—Appendix.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane; and Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

This day. Price 2d. Post free 2½d.

MANASSEH AND THE UNITED STATES. An important Essay delivered before the "Lost Israel Identification Society," by the Rev. Joseph Wild, D.D., at Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, New York.

CONTENTS:—The Fulness of the Gentiles set in—For whom did God intend America—The Origin of the United States—The Footsteps of Ephraim and Manasseh—The Will of Jacob made to Ephraim and Manasseh—Manasseh a People, and a Great People—Manasseh's Birthtime of Separation—Out of nearly Sixty Conquered Colonies the only one England ever Lost was that of Manasseh (America)—The Great Seal of the United States—Manasseh was brought up at the Door of the Pyramid, &c., &c.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.; and of any Bookseller.

Why be Deaf when you may hear?
Take the help to you brought near.

DEAFNESS. Noises in the Ears! Medicine! Trumpets! Food! and Vigorous Health! The Rev. E. J. SILVERTON will send his Health Advocate, giving important advice and particulars on the above subjects, free to any person, showing how Deafness and other diseases may be at once relieved and ultimately cured. Thousands of persons are being benefited by these means. The Medicine for curing Deafness has usually been sold in boxes at 11s. each. It is now offered in boxes at 2s. 6d.; if stamps, 2s. 8d. The Trumpet for 12s., is now offered for 9s. 6d.—Of every Chemist, and all wholesale London Houses, or direct from the Rev. E. J. SILVERTON, Albert House, Park-street, Nottingham (Pastor of Exeter Hall Church).

WOOLS! WOOLS! WOOLS! Cheapest and Best. White and Black Berlin, Single and Double, 3s. 6d. per pound. Best quality Ice Wools, all Colours, 5½. per ounce ball. All other Wools at proportionate prices. Shetland, Andalusian, Fleecy, and Bonne Mere Wools. Welsh, Scotch, Peacock Victoria, and other Yarns. Crewel Filoselle Silk. M. WHELLENS, Wholesale and Retail Wool Warehouse, 3, 5, & 6, QUEEN'S TERRACE, CAMDEN ROAD, LONDON.

Send for Price List and Sampler, which will be forwarded free on application.

LADIES' SILK SCARVES, price 1s. The choicest Silk Scarf ever offered. All Colours; richly brocaded ends. Send stamps for a sample.

M. WHELLENS, 5 & 6, Queen's-terrace, Camden-road, London, N.

BANNER OF ISRAEL. VOL. II. Now ready, price 7s., of all Booksellers.

BRISTOL LEAFLETS ON THE IDENTIFICATION. 1 to 9; 1s. per 100.

London: ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, 5 Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW WEDNESDAY, JULY 23, 1879. [All Rights Reserved.]

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. III. No. 135. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, JULY 30, 1879. [ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
Is Manasseh Passing Us in the Matter of Manufactures?	301
From Assyria to Britain.—The Sequel.—Part II. By W. Burnett-Coates, Home Office, C.D.	302
Sir Bartle Frere on the British Empire	303
A New Zealand Opponent. W. Creighton, of Thames, N.Z.	304
A Fresh Instance of Good to a Dying Man's Soul by Belief in Our Identity	305
The Geography of the Gates. No. XXX.—Jamaica	306
"Arise Ye, and Depart; For This is Not Your Rest," &c.—Micah ii. 10.	307
Lord Chelmsford's Victory at Ulundi, on July 4th, 1879	307

IS MANASSEH PASSING US IN THE MATTER OF MANUFACTURES?

WE have always maintained that British supremacy in manufactures and in all branches of trade must be a fact, because God's Word promises it, and hence we have been incredulous in regard to the alleged destruction of certain portions of our iron and other trades in consequence of successful American competition. We have been fortified in our views by the article headed "Never Say Die," in the Financial Reformer of June 1st, 1879. It is there stated, on the authority of Mr. W. H. Bailey, of Salford, speaking at the festival of the London Association of Foremen Engineers and Draughtsmen, that the late commercial depression was not the consequence of loss of trade, or of the successful appropriation of our foremost position as a manufacturing country by America. In regard to this point, Mr. Bailey said that the United States could not supply the world either with sewing machines, padlocks, or anything else cheaper or better made than we could ourselves. He illustrated what he said as follows:—

"In 1876 we exported from England of manufactured iron to the value of £19,000,000 sterling. The American exports for the same period came to £1,000,000. The exports of machinery, such as agricultural mowing, sewing, and other machines of this country, came to £7,600,000; those from America came to £1,500,000. Some time ago all the sewing machines used in Europe, indeed in the whole world, were made in the United States. They sold at high prices, but during the past few years the trade in sewing machines of the United States manufacturer had rapidly decreased in this country; it was as well-known, that for a long time the machine that was sold retail in New York at £8, was sold retail in the shops at Liverpool at £6—both machines being made at one works in America. This lowering in price was the result of English competition. At last, the competition became unbearable, and what did the chief sewing machine makers do? They acted like wise men, and built factories in Glasgow, in Coventry, in Manchester, and came here to employ Englishmen, for that was the only way they knew of to meet the tide of English competition. Howe established a works; so did Singer; and others had followed. He ventured to assert, that in the boot and shoe manufacturing districts of England—Bristol, Northampton, Stafford, and at Leicester—the machines made by Englishmen, and sold at English prices, were the only machines that were being bought. Again, a great deal had been said about American padlocks. They were not as cheap as an English lock, and they were no better made. It was simply American ingenuity displayed in getting one paper here to advertise their wares without payment." "About our textile manufactures," added Mr. Bailey, "much had been said. Well, if they put together all the Americans sent abroad, added up all things made from fibre, all things with weft or warp, everything having longitudinal and latitudinal meshes, everything with tissues composed of either animal or vegetable growth, all those things from a yard of calico to a door mat, add them all together, and a cotton mill could be found, where he came from in Salford, that produced more in value than the United States exported in the year! So much for competition in that direction."

Mr. Bailey said much more of the same kind, for which we cannot find room. But the result of all is, that our pessimists are not to have it all their own way, and that God's promises to Israel must be fulfilled, giving her the first place among the nations—"the head, and not the tail," the position of "above only, and not beneath." Our detractors and opponents must learn that God's Word is certain to override all apparently contradictory appearances, and that if for a time we seem to be beaten in any part of the great world-wide competition in trade, the day is sure to come when the true supremacy of Israel in every branch of every trade will be asserted, and that only because of our Identity, but not otherwise. We are glad of the confirmation of our views which the Financial Reformer gives us in the extract we have now quoted, and we agree with the friend who sent us the paper, that the article appears to be a striking testimony to our Identity, which it is the function of the BANNER OF ISRAEL and of ourselves, its editor, to prove.

The present agricultural distress is another feature of the day apparently pointing to national decline, but really making for ultimate national good. The cause of the distress is the comparatively low prices of all British agricultural produce—that is, the nation's food is cheap. Our farmers are beaten for the moment by the competition from abroad, and while the people save, the home producers of food are distressed. The case of the latter is sad; but is the national condition one of ruin thereby? Nay! Food being permanently cheapened, the national wealth grows, for the people save. The capital value of land consequently increases; "the general prosperity of the country" improves; and in the end the landlords and farmers themselves, though they temporarily suffer, must, as the final result, share in the general prosperity, which will increase the value of residential property, and of all land besides, since their temporary loss of say ten per cent. of their profits is a real saving of £20.000,000 sterling to the whole community on the £100,000,000 worth of food imported from abroad.

Digitized by Google

Reader, have faith in your Identity! In all things, recollect that the promise is sure, that however things may look, Israel is ever to be "above and not beneath," and that, therefore, despondence does not become us, but only the spirit of praise.

FROM ASSYRIA TO BRITAIN.

THE SEQUEL.

By W. Burnett-Coates, Home Office, C.D.

(Continued from page 298).

PART II.

When Rome and her Pagan shadows departed from Britain, and its people literally dwelt alone, although light, and a bright light, in struggling rays had arisen, to shine in a future noon-day blaze, the thick darkness of a blended Druidism and Paganism still sat brooding over the land. Darkness in the one and semi-darkness in the other, afforded but a dull medium to a suddenly emancipated people, through which to observe their way to nation-hood; hence in the darkness they stumbled into the old ruts of tribal ways. Disunion amongst leaders, and self-interests pervading the ill-cemented clans, soon made it apparent that the power of national government was not a Roman legacy.

No; the Romans had reduced the descendants of the warrior Britons, at whose hands they had to accept frequently a tarnished glory, to a state of pupilage that unfitted them to demonstrate a nation's strength in a nation's rôle. Intoxicated by unlooked-for freedom, and emasculated in servitude to the foreigner, the forces which create a nation—although a multitude may be present—energy, cohesion, perseverance, and the stubborn vigour of developed manhood, was not amongst them. The Romans found them divided into disunited tribes, and left them almost dissolved into units. There does not seem to have been a man of mark to seize the reins. Petty chiefs attracted the débris of family clans, and doubtless revived family feuds to aggravate growing differences arising out of an unusual position, especially when contending for the "Pendragonship."

So they stood in naked weakness to tempt a strong-handed foe, when the Pictish people of the Northern highlands, needy and pinched in their barren hills, resumed their border habits of "cattle lifting," and made savage raids on the lowlands, plundering and massacreing the more peaceable inhabitants of the South. The terrified Britons sued for help from their departed lords, and found it to some extent. Ditches and walls were made to stem the human torrents from "the land of brown heath and shaggy wood." The Roman allies, however, having finally withdrawn, the wall and the dyke were but sorry defences against the persistent inroads of the hardy mountaineers, who soon revived their appetites for the booty of the lowlands.

Again dismay seized upon the luckless kingdom next the danger; and Vortigern, its prince, having wedded a Saxon, instead of allying himself with his British brethren, still farther South, induced a Saxon chief—said to be the lady's brother, or uncle—with willing heart, strong hand, and a warrior following, to come to the rescue. The brothers Hengist and Horsa appear on the scene—more follow—and "still they come;" some to augment the forces already "beati possidentes," and more to colonize, or form settlements on their own account.

Fertile and pleasant Britain, with its grand old forests, hills, and dales, now in a large measure smiling under the hand of cultivation, the attractive aspect of an advancing civilisation, and a people, the reverse of warlike (for reasons before observed) merging into the peaceful ways of a spreading Christianity, the semi-savage Saxon seeing his advantage, and comprehending the value of a prize, such as is rarely offered to the sword of valour, pounced upon the almost powerless prey; and after very many years of fire-and-sword strife, aided by the disloyalty of the Lorgrians and other British tribes, succeeded in occupying the Rome-vacated post, to the infinite cost of the "peaceable tribes," and of those tribes who did not originally come in peace.

As the Romans did, so did the Saxons and their British allies. They separated the opposing chiefs, and won the rule over a people greatly out-numbering their comparatively scanty sea-borne oppressors. These Saex-men, or sword's-men—from which it is said they derive the name of "Saxon"—after years of desultory warfare, parcelled out a large part of the country into petty principalities collectively called a "Heptarchy," and bore a bloody rule over the subdued Britons. They were not, however, suffered to enjoy their acquisitions undisturbed; for Scandinavia had other famished children—sea-prowlers—in romance "sea-kings"—who swooped upon Saxon and Briton, when the mood of the terrible pirate turned his prows towards Albion. He massacred, plundered, and shipped his booty to his own undesirable and stony soil. He repeated his excursions continually. Growing bolder, he ascended the Thames to London-bridge, ran his ships into other rivers, and forced his blood-stained marches inland. He then formed settlements on the Eastern coasts; also in Ireland, the strong-hand-law being a title as valid to him and his following as it was to the Saxon, the Jute, and the Angle.

The command of the sea, superior skill, and bolder energies now bore on the Saxon and his co-freres almost to annihilation; when, as the Briton was compelled to suffer his presence, he was obliged to yield and succumb to the irrepressible Dane. Then Canute, a brave and just prince—just for the times; probably no more—established his dynasty, not over all Britain, but over the Saxon Heptarchy, to the utter discomfiture of the Saxon rule. The glories of Alfred and Arthur passed away; and the crown of Harold, lost at the hapless fight of Hastings, the prestige of the Briton, Saxon, and Dane faded before the Norman chivalry. It left the conquering duke, sustained by the whilom Armorican Britons and cognate tribes, in possession of England's throne, as it was established by Canute.

This last invasion—be it remembered of ancient British and Saxon kindred—completed the blending of the Britons, (Celts and Kumry), Saxons, Danes, Armoricans, (or Bretons), Normans (or Danes), on the soil of destiny. In these isles the Ten disrupted Tribes of Israel, under the disguise of the above peoples, not greatly diversified in language and customs, although diverse in name (tribal, not generic), were then domiciled gradually together, to merge into an Empire-power of extent and magnificence, such as is not recorded in the annals of the world. Fecund and flourishing, this re-united people soon became "a spawning multitude," amongst whom abject squalor or poverty found no place to plant a footsole. Power and wealth—"power to get wealth"—God-given, soon exhibited a twin birth, and grew apace, even in "the dark ages," when the pure faith of Christ, taught by "Bran the Blessed," marred by Pagan violence, and overlain by the rot of Rome, could scarcely be recognised.

Digitized by Google

From William the Norman to Henry Tudor, another phase of Pagan Rome—complacently called "Christian"—usurped a rule over the minds of the men whose fathers suffered squelching from the Holy Land because of idolatry and superstition. It held them in an alien bondage of darkness sorely felt throughout European history. It galled the people born to be free in that truth that maketh its possessors free. It overran this goodly land, with the monk and his mischievous mission; his crudities, and his absurd travesty of Christian doctrine. It fettered the mind that must break the spell of death and darkness, and emerge from the clouds of the cloister. It sowed tares amongst the wheat till nothing but tares seemed to spring from the soil; yet wheat there was, one day to displace the enemy's seed sowings with a crop too vigorous to be lost amongst those tares.

Soon "the fires of Smithfield" succeeded the desultory persecutions of a localised priesthood. "The craft-in-danger" cry, from the obscure parish church to the centralized priesthood—from the rude Popish pedagogue to the chiefs of colleges—made its mark on the minds of men, and spread dismay throughout the hierarchical ranks, from whom the demon of discord and inventive torture went forth with fire and fagot to purify men's souls by the application of flame to their flesh. But the little leaven in the lump, deposited in the days of "Bran the Blessed," and trodden by Pagan Saxon, the Pagan Dane, and "the cloven foot" of Rome, remained to influence the thinking portion of the population. The martyr's fires scorched the Bible's bands, and the closed Book of life was unsealed. Tyndale and his co-mates worked in the old Abbey, under the noses of the broad sanctuarists, and afterwards on foreign soil, to multiply copies of "The Word" that has so effectually smitten the four corners of the Papacy, and that has wounded "the Beast" to death.

Then was unveiled the re-illumed star of the Hebrew Empire upon the Western Isles, to shine for ever with increasing effulgence in its re-habilitation. Steadily since those days the star of Empire has shone over Britain, to guide the marvellous march of its spawning multitudes, which surely increase "as fishes do increase"—and witnessing the last efforts of "the man of sin" to mar the land in the providential fiasco of the Spanish Armada; and later still, in the abortive attempt of a "French friend" to do likewise.

Truly marvellous has been the unretreating march of the British people, since ceased their internecine wars, to wealth, to fame, to power, and to glory; to Christianity, to civilisation, to dominion, and to the blessedness of a world-wide benevolence. These all seem to have grown with their growth, and to have strengthened with their strength, till culmination has taken its place in the midst of responsive witnesses in every quarter of the globe, who unhesitatingly reply that "these things are so." Not only has our great and good God caused the star of Empire to arise over Britain, but, under His own auspices, it still ascends, that its rays may reach to regions yet to be numbered amongst the "company of nations" springing, and still to spring, from its "peculiar people."

It is said by the learned who cater knowledge for the instruction of "the land we live in"—possibly on "the finger-in-the-pie" principle, charitably hoping that the alien and the stranger may have even an infinitesimal share in the attributes of Great Britain—that we are "a mixed people" of "various races," and that hence the agglomeration of nationalities compounded here, each contributing its quota of ability to mingle in a heterogeneous olla podrida, has produced a new and vigorous type of man, embracing a concentration of all the abilities bestowed upon the unities of the world of mankind; and therefore the acquisition of the stupendous accretions of the unequalled Empire of Great Britain has resulted well; our learned evolutionists, blind as yet to the grand cause of all, must say something to account for the unique position of their country.

We are not, however, in the constitutional foundation of population, a whit more hybrid than were the Hebrews of old. The tribal "hordes," fresh from the summerland—Defrobani, who poured into these islands since the advent of the Ancient Britons, as before alluded to, to the Norman descent upon the island, were but, hitherto, centriful fragments of a disrupted people Divinely attracted to a common centre in "the isles of the West;" and there submitted for many centuries to the smelting furnaces of dispeace and wars, until the fire-and-sword reduced atoms were ready for the remoulding that has eventually shaped the fused masses into the homogeniety of a glorious Empire, under the great Refiner's hand.

The work of amalgamation is now complete, although the silver may be occasionally consigned to the fining pot, to increase its lustre, and to purge away the residuum dross that unavoidably mixes still with the precious metal. But passing through our trial fires is exceptional, and has been so through the paternal care of our good God, whose hand has been our help and our stay;—it is not a periodical rule. It has acted but as the "rod" to admonish us to lean upon the "staff," and to bid us with the Psalmist say—"Thy rod and Thy staff, they comfort me." If sometimes we did not "pass under the rod," we might look upon ourselves as base-born, and not the seed of promise—not the son; for "what son is there that the Father chasteneth not?" "Grief may endure for a night;" but every such event has been followed by "joy in the morning;" and we find, through the grace given by our Heavenly Father, that still our country's head is high among the nations; that He has not hidden His countenance from us, and that our borders are enlarging almost co-extensively with the bounds of the earth. "This is the Lord's doing;" well may it be "marvellous in our eyes;" and well may we sing the songs of our salvation.

(To be continued.)

SIR BARTLE FRERE ON THE BRITISH EMPIRE.

THE speech of Sir Bartle Frere delivered on his return to Cape Town lately, as published in the London Times of July 5, 1879, has a true Israelite ring about it which compels us to find a place for it in the BANNER. Speaking of the political aspect of the question regarding the Zulu War, he said:—

There must be a clear understanding whether European ideas, as symbolised by the Crown, or native ideas, as symbolised by the Zulu assegais, should prevail. He had seen something of the difficulties besetting the problems as to native races elsewhere, but he felt satisfied it would be found that in no part of the world had a nearer approach been made to those conditions of peaceful living of two races alongside each other, sharing in the development of the country, than in Cape Colony. He alluded to the affairs of the Transvaal and Griqualand; the extension to them of the principles of self-government, and the union of all the colonies as an integral part of a great empire. The manner in which England came forward without a moment's hesitation on the occasion of the troubles in Natal sufficiently showed the advantage of being members of the British Empire; and was it not something to feel bound up with the other British Colonies? He had had communications saying that he had only to speak the word, and any assistance would be forthcoming to secure the safety of the European population in South Africa. Nobody could forget the noble way in which Mauritius came forward, sending not only soldiers, as St. Helena did, but also large contributions for the sick and wounded; and he felt assured that in Australia there would be a similar feeling from one end of the country to the other. In conclusion, referring to the remedies talked of for South African troubles, Sir Bartle said, "Critics and men of great weight, in forming opinions at home, have stated that the maladies which afflict us are due to responsible government, and that the sooner we revert to some more autocratic form of administration the better. I feel convinced my countrymen will never listen to such critics, and that sooner or later they will come round to my opinion, that it is to responsible government the safety of this colony is mainly due. Therefore, I will only venture to say vestigia nulla retrorsum, that there will be no going back in the matter of responsible government. To it you must look for the means of the development of South Africa; and it is by extending such government as you yourselves possess to other parts of the country that you may best join in promoting a united South Africa." (Applause.)

Digitized by Google

Do our readers notice Sir Bartle's points as they relate to our origin? He stated that—

1. His policy, which is that of the Home Government, aimed at the "union of all the colonies as an integral part of a great empire." But this is Israel's destiny—to form in these "latter" days a nation and a company of nations"—being the central nucleus and a cluster of giant colonial "dominions"—the empire of the stone of Daniel (Gen. xxxv. 11; Dan. ii. 35—44).

2. That in times of difficulty the component parts of this wondrous empire send help to the distressed members; and then he enumerated some of those "Gates" whence help came. He spoke of the Mauritius, of St. Helena, and of the Australian Gates. He might have added the help Ceylon and India sent. But the Gates are Israel's possession, and having them, the British Empire must be Israel's Empire (Gen. xxii. 17, xxiv. 60).

3. He pointed to certain political principles he was pursuing which would necessarily end in the CONFEDERATION of the South African Colonies, and this of course would be the birth of a South African British "dominion" or nation—one, in fact, of Israel's "company of nations" just mentioned (Gen. xxxv. 11).

Surely these are no coincidences; but the working out, on a gigantic scale, of a Divine plan, settled by God Almighty 3,800 years ago, imparted by Him to "our forefather," His friend Abraham, and promised to "his seed for ever." We are that seed; and therefore the promise has come to pass in "the fulness of times" in our own days; or if our opponents like the argument in another form—it has come to pass to us British in this nineteenth century ANNO DOMINI; and, therefore, there being no other fulfilment anywhere else, or in any other nation, we British must be "Israel's seed," to whom the promise was made. We shall be told, of course, that this is arguing in a circle. But we submit it is nothing of the sort. The promise was by the Divine Ruler of the world, who gave it without conditions and upon oath sworn by His own infinite being. It is, therefore, absolutely true. It contained no elements of uncertainty, and never contemplated the faintest idea of the transference of the promised benisons to any race other than the Hebrews; none as to the said blessings being at any time in abeyance. The promise was to the Hebrew race only—to Abraham and to his seed—and that "FOR EVER" (Gen. xxii. 17, 18; Luke i. 55). In the Old Testament, the promise was given by God Almighty Himself. In the New, the covenant, by the inspiration of the Holy Spirit speaking by the mouth of the blessed Virgin Mary, the mother of Jesus, was declared to be entailed on "Abraham and his seed for ever." The British possess these very blessings, and the whole of them to-day. We have "the Gates," the colonial empire, constituting ours "the nation and a company of nations;" abnormal wealth; a heathen empire such as the world never saw before; the supremacy of the sea; the rôle of universal beneficence; and desire of world-wide evangelisation; the love of the "ten laws of God" implanted in our nation's heart; hatred of slavery, longing for freedom; these, and countless other blessings we have nationally, are, on reference to the Word of God, found to be just those He promised to Israel-obedient—to Abraham unconditionally, and "to his seed for ever." Having them, we must conclude (reason, logic, religion, and the honour, truth, and faithfulness of our God all demand it) that we must be the portion of the Hebrew race known to be now existing somewhere, destined to be found at last, and to-day "Lost;" the Ten Tribes, in fact, of Israel. We thank Sir Bartle Frere for his blind witnessing, which has given us a text on which to hang a strong Identity argument.

A NEW ZEALAND OPPONENT.

W. CREIGHTON, OF THAMES, N.Z.

WE are favoured with a very small sixpenny treatise, and a letter also, from Mr. W. Creighton; the latter to a third party, the former professing in the compass of seventeen pages of print to effect for "the Ten Tribes—the House of Israel"—what no other writer on this side the water has yet done—namely, "to prove the absurdity of the attempt to show that the British people are they."

Mr. Creighton also in his letter before us states what we have long wanted some opponent to come forward and distinctly avow—namely, the reason why our adversaries allege that God has temporarily transferred (as every sane man must admit He has transferred) ALL Israel's blessings to the so-called Gentile folk—the British—and yet can be held to be "the God who keepeth covenant with Abraham and his seed FOR EVER."

Mr. Creighton's pamphlet, in fact, adds one more fulfilment to Hosea i. 10. He, too (from New Zealand), says to Israel, "Lo-Ammi"—"Ye are NOT God's people;" and we accept with joy the sign therefrom deducible, that we ARE "the sons of the living God"—i.e., Israel of the Ten Tribes (Hosea i. 10, 11). Mr. Creighton's published argument is this: He has really only one to rely on; and it is quite enough, he thinks—viz.:

1. The Ten Tribes deported into Assyria remained there, Josephus being witness till his days (A.D. 77).

2. There is evidence also that in A.D. 1145 the Tribes were in Media still (?).

3. Ginghiz Khan destroyed the Nestorian Empire, which was the kingdom of the Ten Tribes (?) in the thirteenth century—proving that the Tribes were still in Asia then; in fact, as the pamphlet sums it all up (page 12):—

"The Ten Tribes (the House of Israel) remained in the locality to which the Assyrian king (sic) transported them until, say the second century after our Lord, as appears by Josephus, Herod, Titus, &c. In the twelfth century they were still in the same locality, tributaries (?) to the Nestorian king, John III." THEREFORE, "they could not be the Saxons who entered and invaded Britain in the fifth and sixth centuries" (page 13).

This is the main argument. Let us put by its side one equally strong (or weak), and see if there be any real strength in either. Let us suppose an historian writing—in A.D. 3000—of the Anglo-Saxon Empire of Great Britain as it exists in our day A.D. 1879, and imagine him trying to show that the Australians were not then "British." His argument would be:—

1. The British of A.D. 1879 were the descendants of the Anglo-Saxons, who entered those "islands of the West" in cir. A.D. 400, and the historians of A.D. 1879 positively prove they were there in Britain in their millions in A.D. 1800.

2. Also in A.D. 1879.

3. And there is plenty of evidence to show they were there, most certainly, for at least 200 or so years afterwards.

Therefore, the people who invaded and occupied Australia, New Zealand, the Fijis, &c., &c., in A.D. 1800 and down to A.D. 2,000, could not have been of the same race. Q. E. D. What would be wrong in the reasoning here? A child could tell us! The whole is a non sequitur. It is not true, because the British in 1879 are now in the British Islands, that there are, therefore, no British to-day in the glorious colonial Empire of Great Britain. The fact is, the emigrants from Great Britain for a century past have been going out "to the ends of the earth," and occupying "the coasts, the ends, the uttermost parts" of it as "wanderers," or emigrants, exactly as predicted in the prophetic Word of the living God. So the Ten Tribes being destined to be "wanderers," and to be "swallowed up," and "among the Gentiles" (Hosea viii. 8, ix. 17; Ezek. xi. 16, 17), were all through the centuries, from B.C. 700 till A.D. 400, and later still, perhaps, throwing out off-shoots Westwards among Goths and Celts, Teutons and Scyths, as history and ethnic science teach us, till in the fourth and fifth centuries "the preserved of Israel," the offshoots of the main stock, reached their destined "islands," a "remnant," exhausted and worn out, to "renew their strength" (Isa. xlix. 1, 6, xli. 1, lx. 9).

Digitized by Google

Mr. Creighton thus has much to learn. And it is clear he has not fathomed yet "the mystery of Israel" (Rom xi. 25).

His next point is that "it is preposterous to suppose that the descendants of Israel should have utterly lost all trace of such an ancestry and relapsed into Paganism of such a character as was the religion of the Saxons" (page 14). "Why not?" we ask. God said they should do this very thing, and is it for Mr. Creighton to say it was impossible? Let him read Hosea iv. 16, 17, viii. 11, and many another passage showing how utterly depraved and debased in horrible Pagan idolatry Israel even in their own land became, before their outcast Lo-Ammi condition.

Did Mr. Creighton ever read Ezek. xxiii.? After that, can he call their relapse "preposterous?" As to loss of all trace of ancestry, can Mr. Creighton trace his for 500 years? Do the Jews now possess genealogies? or pretend to trace theirs? When God said Israel was to fail "to find her paths," is Mr. Creighton reasonable in demanding that the British, being Israel, are to be able to trace theirs? (Hosea ii. 6).

Finally, we have our old friend and worn-out argument reproduced in New Zealand, where it passes muster (as base coin) for a time—namely, that "Lo-Ammi Israel, as the British are, must, if Israel, be found with the rite of circumcision."

If so, could they be, we ask—

1. "Hidden and lost?" (Ezek. xxxiv. 4, 6, 8, 11, 16; Jer. l. 6, 17).
2. "Outcasted and divorced?" (Hosea i. 9; Jer. iii. 8).
3. "Uncovenanted and Lo-Ammi?" (Hosea i. 9; Jer. xxxi. 32; 2 Kings xvii. 18).

Mr. Creighton, at page 14 of his booklette, stipulates that he leaves out of his consideration "all prophetical and other relations in which the Tribes stand as a people under covenant with God." Why?" we ask again! This is just what we must not do. As well try and "play Hamlet without the part of Hamlet represented," or as well try to govern the world without recognising the Providence of the Divine Ruler of that world. Eliminate "all prophecy," and we grant we cannot hope for even the partial restoration of Lost Israel! But, blessed be God, it is because the Divine Word tells us Israel shall be found, and found as we find the British people are now answering to the tokens in all respects, that we conclude that we are they.

In one respect we can speak well of Mr. Creighton's pamphlet. He recognises the "Scriptural distinction between Israel and Judah," and knows that both shall yet be the most favoured earthly nation. Unfortunately, he relegates all the fulfilments of prophecy in their favour to "the millennium;" never reflecting that their discovery and blessing will of itself be the beginning of the millennium. He wants the millennium first, and then proposes to find Israel; whereas, God's plan is—1, to find Israel; 2, to join Judah to Israel; 3, to restore both Houses to their land TOGETHER; 4, to bring in "Jacob's trouble;" 5, to deliver them therefrom Himself by coming to their rescue; 6, then, to begin to reign over them at Jerusalem; and 7, thus BEGIN THE MILLENNIUM. Let Mr. Creighton reflect on all this; and if we are wrong, show us from chapter and verse in the Bible where our chronological sequence of events is erroneous!

In regard to the transfer of Israel's blessings to the Gentile British, Mr. Creighton, in his letter to a friend (handed to us), says, "That the literal fulfilment of the blessings promised to Israel on their obedience to the law and prophets is still an extant and uncancelled promise which all Israel reject to this day. We accept it, and so the kingdom of God is among our people; we keep the law (by faith) and the temporal blessings flow as a matter of providential law towards us." This is the long-waited explanation! We wonder what Messrs. Cornall, Clifford, and Walker think of this? and what verse of Mr. Creighton's Bible supports these astounding statements It must be a Maori version! It is not in the Hebrew or the Greek Bible! It is NOT in our British Bible! "The kingdom of God is among our British people," because "we keep the law by faith!" The thing can be bought then? Keep the law by faith, and God's sworn unconditional promises to Abraham (Gen. xxii. 17, 18) are abrogated, and presto! they are the property of the Gentiles! Does God say so? Nay! a thousand times nay! Then we wont believe, or have it! "The temporal blessings flow as a matter of providential law towards us," because we nationally keep the law. Do we British "keep the law" at all "nationally?" Alas, alas! we break the laws of God, and that continually, universally; and are thereby undone! So Mr. Creighton is wrong as to his facts; wrong as to his Divinity; wrong as to his Scripture; and his doctrine? that is downright unmitigated insult to God Almighty Himself, for he presumes to say that God's most solemn and unconditional oaths to Abraham His friend can be broken, and a Gentile people called the British inherit all of Israel's promised blessings—that British Gentile race being quite as undeserving as ever Israel was, and as stiffnecked and as abominable.

We thank God for our opponents; for they teach us how foolish is their opposition to His Word, and how securely our Identity is founded even on the solemn covenants of the great Jehovah Himself, which CANNOT be broken or cancelled! ISRAEL, PRAISE YE THE LORD for this!

A FRESH INSTANCE OF GOOD TO A DYING MAN'S SOUL BY BELIEF IN OUR IDENTITY.

WE have received the following statement regarding the benefit and comfort experienced by a man now in dying circumstances in consequence of his study of the BANNER OF ISRAEL, and of his acceptance of the views we teach in its pages. It will be seen that this individual, once the Secretary of a Liberation Society, and therefore the deadly enemy of the Church of England, became—1, a Churchman; 2, a constant attendant at its services; 3, one who enjoyed those services greatly; 4, a man entirely changed.

We are glad to receive authentic information of this case because it should disarm the opposition of such of our clergy as Messrs. Cornall, Walker, and Clifford, who are aware, to our knowledge, of the opposition the Church is experiencing in some sections of our people from the operations of the Liberation Society, and it is a satisfaction to know that even in that aspect the Identity is working, not for evil, but for good. But we must insist upon our opponents' recognition of the fact which we press upon their attention, that a man whom his vicar noticed once to be an enemy of the services of the Church of England, became the lover of them, a thoroughly changed man, a friend of the clergyman of his parish, and all through God's blessing on his study of the BANNER, which now in his dying state he desires to have for perusal, as his solace. The account our friend sends us is as follows. We are requested to suppress all names, and we accordingly do so. But our readers may rely upon the facts as true—sent us by a man of mature age, preparing himself for holy orders in the Church of England, and a hearty believer in, and worker for, our Identity.

The following extract from a letter I received this morning from my friend the vicar of S———, will, I know, please you.

Digitized by Google

"I was visiting a sick man the other day; he is dying, poor fellow, slowly of consumption, and I asked him if I could get him any work he would like to read. He said, 'there is one thing I should like. I cannot read books, they weary me. But if you can get me the BANNER OF ISRAEL since November, I shall be very delighted. I can read it. I used to read it every week with great interest in the Church Institute, but I have not seen it since I was unable to go; and although I do not always go with it in its theology, I have become a believer in its teaching on the one subject which it advocates, and in its views of Lord Beaconsfield and his policy.' Of course I sent him the magazines at once. It shows that one never knows what is working in men's minds, or what a little thing may accomplish.! I have often wondered if anyone, and who, read the BANNER in the Institute. Three years ago, or thereabout, he was a great Liberation Society man—he was their secretary here—then he threw that up, took to coming to Church, coming even three times on a Sunday; and he has spoken to me often of how much he enjoyed the services, and how his views entirely changed. The more curious change, too, is his having become apparently Conservative as well as Church."

Well, to explain matters, S———, as you know, was my old place of residence until two years ago. The Church Institute was opened about three years ago, and I took a little interest in it, and when the question of papers was discussed and agreed upon, I also agreed to contribute the BANNER, and which I instructed the bookseller to provide regularly, without fail. In the course of correspondence the other day with my friend, I asked him if it was delivered regularly, and the above is his reply apropos of the matter. He (the vicar himself) takes it in ever since I first recommended it to him, and I believe appreciates it. You are at liberty to make any use of the above you think proper, only please exclude all names.

June 26, 1879.

THE GEOGRAPHY OF THE GATES.

No. XXX.—JAMAICA.

(Continued from page 239.)

NESTLED in the Caribbean Sea, 400 miles due North of the Isthmus of Panama and South of the Eastern end of Cuba, in North lat. 17° 40′ to 18° 30′, and West longitude 76° 10′ to 78° 25′, there is situated one of the brightest jewels in the British crown—the island of Jamaica. It is one of the greater Antilles in the West Indies—is 150 miles long from East to West, 49 miles in greatest breadth North and South, the average breadth being 40 miles. The island contains 4,256 square miles, and in scenery is remarkably beautiful and grand. It is traversed by a range of mountains called the Blue Mountains, from five to seven thousand feet high. The island is well watered throughout, as many as seventy or eighty bright and rapid streams coming down from the lofty hills to the sea in all directions. In spite of this, the only navigable stream throughout the island (save for boats) is the Black River on the South-west coast. The island possesses many good harbours, "the chief of which is Port Royal—the harbour of Kingston."

Jamaica, or Xaymaca ("meaning in the Florida tongue, abundance of wood and water"), was first discovered by Columbus, and became, in consequence, a Spanish colony in 1494. The inhabitants then were very numerous, and were peaceable occupants of neat houses. When the Spaniards came in 1509 and occupied the island as colonists, they enslaved the Indians and set them in gangs to cultivate the cane, cotton, and vine plants. The cruel treatment these poor aborigines were forced to undergo utterly destroyed them, and they died completely out. In 1558 the Spaniards imported black African slaves.

In the seventeenth century Israel first appeared on the scene, and she made two attempts to capture her future destined West Indian Gate. These attempts both failed, as evidently the time had not yet fully come. The first attack on the island was made by Sir Anthony Shirley in 1605, but it was altogether abortive. In 1638 Col. Jackson inflicted a blow on the Spaniards when he seized Passage Fort, and was paid a large sum as ransom, or black mail, to depart. In 1655 Israel put in her claim to her heritage as the owner of this noble West Indian Gate, and would not be denied. The honour of the acquisition belongs to Cromwell, then Lord Protector of England, though he and the nation so little valued the capture that Admiral Pen and General Venables, who made it, were sent to the Tower for their pains and for failing to seize higher game. Cromwell, to punish the Spaniards for refusing some privileges he demanded for British subjects and the flag, forthwith sent off Pen and Venables with an army and fleet to attack Hispaniola. The attack failed, but the expedition passed on to Jamaica, and there entering Port Royal Bay, took "Passage Fort," which the Spanish garrison had abandoned. The latter, who took refuge in the interior, afterwards surrendered, and "the Dons went off to Cuba." Thus did the Queen of the Antilles fall without a blow struck, into the hands of Israel! The Gate of the West Indies was thus as purely the gift of God in peace to the chosen race as any other of our maritime Gates which have fallen to us without war. The island being within the tropics is excessively hot, but the heat is tempered by constant sea breezes, which set in every morning, and in the hills a screen of clouds tempers the climate, making it there most healthy, the air elastic and exhilarating. In the plains and lowlands the yellow fever prevails at certain seasons. In August, September, and October hurricanes occur and render the navigation precarious.

The island abounds in sheep, mules, cattle, goats, hogs, and the surrounding seas are alive with fish. All the staple products of tropical climates are raised in this beautiful possession, and the last few years has witnessed great improvements in this direction. The last census of the island showed there were 506,154 inhabitants. The government is conducted by a British "Governor assisted by a Privy Council of eight members, with a Legislative Council consisting of six official and six non-official members." The chief port and town is Kingston, and that is also the capital and seat of Government. This large and most valuable of all the British West Indian possessions is the true Gate of the whole neighbouring clusters of islands. It is surrounded by a large number of outlying posts and flanking "Gates" which afford it protection and receive it in return from Jamaica. Such outposts are Trinidad, the Leeward and the Windward Islands, the Bahamas, and the Bermudas. What may be the future of the many islands belonging to foreign nations in the neighbourhood of the Gate Jamaica we cannot say; but judging from God's words regarding the destiny of Israel and the manifest operation of the Gates in other parts of the world we cannot resist the belief that the time may come when the West Indian Gate of Israel will absorb the rest, and there remain not so much as one of the West India islands which does not belong to the dominant race, God's people Israel. Even in their geographical position the British West India Islands surround or belt the others; and that being their position, we think we see in it an indication that God means by giving us now the tactical place of advantage in reference to our future enemies, to grant us that in the West Indies, as elsewhere, "the kingdom and the dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High—even to the children of Israel—a people near unto Him. Praise YE the Lord!" (Dan. vii. 27; Psa. cxlviii. 14).

The Black population of Jamaica have always constituted a political difficulty in the government of this possession of the Crown. In early times their insurrections were constant. The abolition of slavery and the commencement of the apprenticeship system in 1834 produced the most salutary changes. Slavery was utterly abandoned, and though the change worked badly at first in some respects, and the revenue fell off largely, the final result is that the material prosperity of the island is recovering. Ere long, the condition of Jamaica will be fairly good, and the people will have recovered that share of prosperity which will lead to national regeneration. "A class of negro proprietors is rising up who cultivate small plantations cheaply," and from these and other measures the recovery of Jamaica to its former state of prosperity is early anticipated.

Digitized by Google

(To be followed by a paper on British Guiana.)

"ARISE YE, AND DEPART; FOR THIS IS NOT YOUR REST," ETC.

(MICAH. II 10.)

THE Prophet Micah clearly foretold the invasion and desolation of Samaria, on account of the sins of the House of Israel (i. 5—7). He does not address them as "the House of Jacob," but "Thou that art named the House of Jacob"—as if they had ceased to be so, except in name. He asks them, "Is the Spirit of the Lord straitened? Are these His doings? Do not My words do good to them that walk uprightly?" (ii. 7). He then reproves them for their oppression and injustice (ver. 8, 9); and concludes by telling them, "Arise ye, and depart; for this is not your rest; because it is polluted, it will destroy you, even with a sore destruction" (ver. 10). But observe, when devising evil against this family (ver. 3), the deep sorrow of the prophet (ver. 4) on account of the calamitie that he foretells, and how he tempers his denunciations of judgment with the promises of mercy (verses 12, 13).

"The rest" referred to is the literal land of Canaan (Deut. xii. 9; Psa. xcv. 11). This was "the rest," and the inheritance promised to the children of Israel; conditional, however, on their walking uprightly in God's commandments. And Moses, again and again, when on the eve of their going over Jordan to possess the land, warned them that, in the event of any failure on their part, they would not prolong their days in the land; for "it would spue them out, when they defiled it, as it had done the nations before them" (Lev. xviii. 26—28; Deut. iv. 25, 26, xxx. 18, 19).

The Promised Land was a place of rest for the worshippers of Jehovah, but not for those who served other gods and rebelled against the Lord their God (Numb. xiv. 23—35). Moses even was not permitted to enter the Promised Land. He was shown the land from the top of Mount Nebo prior to his death there; but the Lord said, "Thou shalt not go over thither" (Deut. xxxiv. 4), because he believed not God, to sanctify Him in the eyes of the people (Numb. xx. 12). In short, Israel, when obedient, had rest in the land; when disobedient, she was given over to the hand of her enemies. But how often, when they cried unto the Lord in their trouble, did He deliver them out of their distress (Josh. xiv. 15; Judges iii. 11—30, v. 31; Psa. cvii.).

After the separation of the Ten Tribes from the House of Judah the land was polluted with their wickedness (Jer. iii. 2); it was no longer a place of rest for the wicked idolaters; and the prophet tells them, "Arise ye and depart;" not on account of their wickedness, but in order to avoid "a sore destruction" (Micah ii. 10). Have we not in these words some visible signs of God's gracious favour towards the House of Israel? And had they listened to the voice of warning, to depart from their wicked paths of idolatry, they might have prolonged their days in the land. But Ephraim (Israel) turned a deaf ear to the words of the prophet. "He was joined to idols." "Let him alone," was the Divine edict (Hos. iv. 17). Ephraim consequently continued in her paths of wickedness; and Micah lived to see the fulfilment of his predictions, and Israel carried into captivity (Micah i. 5—7). But no sooner had backsliding Israel gone into captivity than the prophet Jeremiah is told "to go and proclaim these words towards the North, and say to her, Return, for I am merciful, and will not cause My anger to fall upon you. Only acknowledge thine iniquity" &c. (Jer. iii. 11—13). And 115 years after her captivity we find that Ephraim was the firstborn of the Lord Jehovah (Jer. xxxi. 9), as Israel was in former times (Ex. iv. 22). Oh! what a glorious privilege for us, the descendants of Lost Israel, now found in these Isles, to be reckoned amongst "the firstborn" of the Lord! Not through our own righteousness have we attained to this high estate; but through the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, our Redeemer, the Holy One of Israel.

The prophet Micah, after denouncing woes against the House of Israel, closes the chapter with promises of restoration, saying, "I will surely gather the remnant of Israel. They shall make great noise by reason of the multitude of men. Their king shall pass before them, and the Lord on the head of them" (ii. 12, 13). None of these events took place on the return from Babylon; those that returned were few in number, and no king returned with them. These words evidently refer to a return still in the future. Moreover, after the second return, "They shall no more be pulled up out of the land" (Amos ix. 15). "They shall inherit the land for ever" (Isa. xi. 11, lx. 21).

These words of the prophet Micah would admit of a higher signification, as referring to that rest that remaineth to the people of God (Heb. iv. 10); for as the apostle tells us, "here we have no continuing city, but seek one to come" (xiii. 14). We—Israel in Britain—are still exiles from the land of our inheritance, as when St. Peter addressed our forefathers "as strangers and pilgrims," at that time scattered throughout Asia Minor (1 Pet. i. 1), some 1800 years ago. We have, however, as Israelites, the fullest assurance of our return to Palestine; but that will not ensure us a place in the heavenly Jerusalem. This should be the wish and aim of every true disciple of Christ, whether Israelite or not; for the promise is open to all believers. "Let us therefore labour to enter into that rest that remaineth to the people of God," "The heavenly Jerusalem," &c. (Heb. iii. 9—11, xii. 22—24). The apostle then concludes with a few words of warning to his brethren: "See that ye refuse not him that speaketh; for if they escaped not who refused Him that spake on earth, much more shall not we escape if we turn away from Him that speaketh from heaven" (v. 25). These words were addressed by St. Paul to Hebrew converts to Christianity, and are equally applicable to us in these latter days.

W. H. LARKINS, Lieut.-Col.

Ore, Hastings, April 21st, 1879.

LORD CHELMSFORD'S VICTORY OVER CETEWAYO AT ULUNDI, ON JULY 4, 1879.

WE thank God for the great victory granted to Israel's arms over the savage barbarous foe who so long has held our forces at bay in Zululand. We have "gone through, trodden down, torn in pieces, and there hath been NONE to deliver" (Micah v. 8). This hath been "the Lord's doing" both in Afghanistan and Zululand, and it "is marvellous in our eyes" (Psa. cxviii. 23). But the result was always assured, since we are Israel—the remnant of Jacob! Success, under God, depended on our "going through" ("who if he go through"). We have now done so, and, thank God, a brilliant "decisive victory," with the dispersion of the flying foe, is the result, and this it is expected will be the END of the war! Israel, praise the Lord for this His additional mercy to our ungrateful, unbelieving, scoffing race, who attribute even now this glorious success to anything but to God's love and His faithfulness TO US HIS PEOPLE ISRAEL!

EDITOR.

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements
(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O.O payable at Ludgate-circus.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed :—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

BANNER FREE CIRCULATION FUND.

Donations, applications for grants, to be addressed to R. Fergusson Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London.

NEW BOOKS.

NEW PAMPHLET ON OUR IDENTITY.

Now READY, price 9d., post free, 10d.

ARE WE ISRAELITES? THE TESTIMONY OF HISTORY, PHILOLOGY, AND ETHNOLOGY on the Subject. By the Rev. BOURCHIER WREY SAVILE, M.A., Rector of Shillingford, Exeter. With an Introduction by Philo-Israel.

Contents.

Chapter	I.—Hard Speeches.
"	II.—Opponents' Arguments.
"	III.—Common Errors.
"	IV.—The Sacæ.
"	V.—The Cymry.
"	VI.—Historical Testimony.
"	VII.—Philology.
"	VIII.—Chief of the Nations.
"	IX.—Multiplicity of Seed.
"	X.—The Anglo-Saxon Race.
"	XI.—Anglo-Israel.
"	XII.—Summary.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row; Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; or of any Bookseller.

ARE ENGLISHMEN ISRAELITES?

MR. ROBERTS REFUTED.

REPLY TO MR. ROBERTS.

Now ready, price 2d.

A REPLY TO MR. ROBERTS ON THE EXETER HALL DEBATE, on the Subject, Are Englishmen Israelites? By ALEXANDER DUNN.

A REPLY TO MR. ROBERTS will be sent post free for 2½d., from the publisher, W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

A REPLY TO MR. ROBERTS may be had, by ordering, of any Bookseller in town or country.

London: Published by W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

A NEW WORK ON THE IDENTITY.

THE PROMISES TO ABRAHAM, with Select References and Explanatory Notes, to which is added an article entitled, "Israel Among the Gentiles."

The aim of this Pamphlet is to present the Scriptural Argument in a new and concise form, both for examination and reference.

Price Sixpence, or free by post, Sevenpence. May be had of the Author, W. S. Cavill, Norton Woodside, near Sheffield; or of Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.; and of all Booksellers.

Just out. Price 4d.

NEBUCHADNEZZAR'S DREAM and THE BRITISH EMPIRE. By Ephraim. With Illustrative Prophetic Map.

"We are glad to see another attempt to connect Daniel's dream of the metallic image and "the stone which becomes a mountain," with the British Empire. It appears in the form of a letter to a friend abroad. The pamphlet, though very sketchy in its character and aim, is on the whole a useful little work."—Banner of Israel.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; Sold by W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

BOOKS, ETC.

Price 1d.; post free, 1½d.

GOD'S LOVE FOR ISRAEL, A GUARANTEE THAT HE WILL FULFIL HIS PROMISES TO ISRAEL. By JOHN GILDER SHAW.

Price 6d.; or with illustrative map, 8d.

BRITAIN (OR ISRAEL) THE FIFTH AND LAST, AND THE UNCONQUERABLE EMPIRE. By JOHN GILDER SHAW.

Price 3d.; post free, 3½d.

CHRONOLOGICAL CHART OF BRITISH VICTORIES OVER THE CONTINENTAL POWERS, ranging from the battle of Cressy (1346), to our last victory, the taking of Sebastopol, Sept. 8, 1855. Arranged by J. G. SHAW, of Leeds.

"We trust Mr. Shaw's labour in preparing this paper may be appreciated by the public and be largely sold."—Banner of Israel.

London: Published by Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; and may be had of the Author, 20 Park-row, Leeds, and of all booksellers.

SOME of PHILO-ISRAEL'S papers, as they have appeared in THE BANNER, will be separately published from time to time in the form of Letters, for distribution.

No. 1. "The Identity of the British with Lost Israel."
No. 2. "The Glory of God."
No. 3. "An Address to British Soldiers.' (Now ready.)
No. 4. "An Address to British Sailors." (Now ready.)

Others will follow. Price One and Sixpence per 100; less quantities in proportion: postage extra.

Apply to R. Banks, 5 Racquet-court, Fleet-street. Also all Booksellers and Publishers.

AN ELEMENTARY DIGEST or SKETCH OF THE CHIEF FACTS and TEACHINGS of the GREAT PYRAMID of EGYPT: adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific. By PHILO-ISRAEL; together with Original Papers by the following leading Pyramidists, republished mostly from the BANNER OF ISRAEL (by kind permission of the proprietor)—viz., Professor Piazzi Smyth, the Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A., Charles Horner, Esq., and Major H. A. Tracey, R.A. Being a pamphlet by five authors (a Pyramid number).

LITERARY NOTICE.—The Great Pyramid of Egypt (52 pp.; Guest, London: price 4d.).—This pamphlet is put forth as "A Digest of Great Pyramid Teaching Adapted to the Comprehension of the Unlearned and of the Unscientific," and is from the pen of the able editor of THE BANNER OF ISRAEL. To it papers by other writers, including Professor Piazzi Smyth, are appended. Of it we need only that it is well calculated to serve the end in view, and gives a clear summary of the chief facts of Pyramid lore. Over 5,000 copies have been sold in the course of three months, and this alone proves how interest in the subject is extending."—Alfreton Journal, April 25, 1879.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION. The FIRST ANNUAL REPORT, containing a verbatim account of the speeches delivered at Exeter Hall by Admiral Dunn, Philo-Israel, Rev. H. Newton, M.A., D. A. Onslow, Esq., J.P., W. H. Peters, Esq., J.P., Colonel Bentinck, Charles Stubbs, B.A., &c., &c., will be sent free on application to the Secretary.

Now Ready. Price 3d.

THE WIMBLEDON ANGLO-ISRAEL DEBATE. A verbatim Report of the Debate held at Emmanuel Church, Wimbledon, on Thursday, June 5th, 1879, containing the speeches delivered by Colonel Sandwith, Rev. Bourchier Wrey Savile, Rev. J. W. Wilkinson, Rev. C. W. Hickson, Mr. Frank White, Mr. Douglas A. Onslow, J.P., Rev. S. Garrett, Rev. F. R. A. Glover, and the Rev. H. E. Brook.

London: Issued by the "Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association;" and published by W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

PHOTOGRAPHIC PORTRAITS OF PHILO-ISRAEL, Editor of THE BANNER OF ISRAEL, Author of "The History of the House of Israel," &c., &c. Cabinet, 2s., post free; Carte-de-Visites, 1s., post free.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

New and Revised Edition, Price 6d. Cloth, gilt, 1s.

THE NEW OLD STORY, with an Introduction to a Marvellous Puzzle. The Story gives a sketch of the History of the Hebrews, shewing distinctly the difference between the Two Nations, Judah and Israel, the latter being the British. The Story also tells of the Great Pyramid, and explains how its wonderful meaning can be, as it is only understood by measurement. An Appendix explains "The Eastern Question." The Story is written with great simplicity, and interests young children. By A E I, Author of "The Answer to the Eastern Question."

W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

ARE THE ENGLISH PEOPLE THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL? By PHILO-ISRAEL. Price 4d.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

MISCELLANEOUS.

HALF OF A FURNISHED HOUSE, NEAR THE SEA, TO LET, with use of kitchen and scullery, 35s. weekly. K., 14, Kenilworth-road, St. Leonard's-on-Sea.

TO AUTHORS. Authors desirous of issuing Works or Pamphlets on the great and increasingly interesting Question of the Identity of the Lost Ten Tribes with the British Nation, should first communicate with Robert Banks, of Racquet-court, Fleet-street, who has already been honoured by issuing, amongst others, the following works on the subject:

The Banner of Israel. Weekly 1d.; monthly 7d.

The Nation's Glory Leader. Weekly 1d.; quarterly 1s. 4d.

The Pillar of Witness. By late Captain Tracey. Cloth 2s. 6d.; paper 1s. 6d. (second edition).

The Anglo-Israel Post Bag. By Bishop Titcomb. Cloth 2s. 6d.; paper 1s. 6d. (second edition).

The History of the House of Israel. By Philo-Israel. Cloth 1s.; paper 6d. (sixth thousand).

The Great Pyramid of Egypt. Fifty-two pages, with three illustrations. Price 4d. (10,000).

The New Old Story. By A E I. Cloth 1s.

Now READY, price 2d., post free, 2½d.

NEW PAMPHLET BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

THE HISTORICAL, ETHNIC, AND PHILOLOGICAL ARGUMENTS in PROOF of BRITISH IDENTITY with the TEN LOST TRIBES OF ISRAEL, clearly and simply stated.

By PHILO-ISRAEL.

CONTENTS:—Introduction—The Celts—Professor Rawlinson's Testimony—The Cymry—The Cimmerii—The Gimiri and Khumri—The Testimony of the Nimroud Obelisk—The Scythians—The Anglo-Saxons—Sharon Turner's Testimony—The Jutes and Angles—The Danes and the Normans—General Conclusions—Philology—The Welsh Language—The Rev. Canon Lysons' Testimony—Idiomatic Identity Between Hebrew and English—Tyndal's Testimony—The Tribe of Dan—The Irish Celts—Are the Continental Nations Israelites?—Conclusions—Appendix.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane; and Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

This day. Price 2d. Post free 2½d.

MANASSEH AND THE UNITED STATES. An Important Essay delivered before the "Lost Israel Identification Society," by the Rev. Joseph Wild, D.D., at Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, New York.

CONTENTS:—The Fulness of the Gentiles set in—For whom did God intend America—The Origin of the United States—The Footsteps of Ephraim and Manasseh—The Will of Jacob made to Ephraim and Manasseh—Manasseh a People, and a Great People—Manasseh's Birthtime of Separation—Out of nearly Sixty Conquered Colonies the only one England ever Lost was that of Manasseh (America)—The Great Seal of the United States—Manasseh was brought up at the Door of the Pyramid, &c., &c.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.; and of any Bookseller.

BANNER OF ISRAEL. VOL. II. Now ready, price 7s., of all Booksellers.

Price 7s., post free 6d. extra.

THE SECOND VOLUME OF THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

This volume contains a large number of articles on our Identity with Lost Israel, by the best and most learned writers on the subject. Also many interesting papers on the Great Pyramid by Professor Piazzi Smyth, F.R.S.E., Astronomer-Royal for Scotland, Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A., Major H. A. Tracey, R.A., Charles Horner, Esq., and others.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

BRISTOL LEAFLETS ON THE IDENTIFICATION. 1 to 9; 1s. per 100.

London: ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

WALTER KEAST'S Old Established BOOT AND SHOE WAREHOUSE, 102, KENNINGTON PARK ROAD, LONDON.

Gentlemen's Boots & Shoes for	Ladies' Boots and Shoes for
Winter and Summer, House and Garden, Walking, Riding, Rowing, Fishing, Shooting, &c.	Winter and Summer, Walking and Riding, House, Garden, or Dancing, &c., &c.

Children's Boots for School, Walking, Garden, or Sea-side. Slippers in great variety at moderate prices.

Schools and Public Institutions supplied at wholesale prices.

Note the address—WALTER KEAST, 102, Kennington-park-road, S.E.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, 5 Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, JULY 30, 1879. [All Rights Reserved.]

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. III. No. 136. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 6, 1879. [DOUBLE NUMBER, TWOPENCE.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
The Supplanters	309
The Identity at Newmarket	310
Kedar	311
Progress in Montreal, Canada; in George Town, British Guiana; and Also in Cape Colony, South Africa	311
The Testimony of a Learned Unconverted Jew that the British are "Lost" Israel	312
Israel's Battles. No. XX.—The Battle of Albuera	313
An Italian Savant Suggests the Colonisation of New Guinea by "Israel"	314
Anglo-Saxons and Anglo-Israel.—By P. J. LeGeyt, of St. Heliers, Jersey	314
Identity Difficulties Answered.—Part V.	315
Anglo-Israelism and Its Opponents.—By J. C. N.	316
From Assyria to Britain.—The Sequel.—Part III. By W. Burnett-Coates, Home Office, C.D.	317
Reviews	318
For Good or Evil.—By Thomas Bales	320
How the Truth Prevails. A Personal Narrative.—By William Mellor	320
"Beauty" and "Banda."—Part I.	321
"Be Not Angry With Us For Ever!"	322
Is This the 1879th or 1880th Year of Our Lord?	322
Correspondence	323

THE SUPPLANTERS.

WE invite our opponents now to accompany us into another field of inquiry, and, like honest and candid men, to answer us two more questions. In our leader in No. 131, on July 3rd, 1879, regarding "The Ruling Race," we asked the opposing clergy of Bristol to tell us if the Hebrews were not destined in the Scriptures to rule over many Gentile nations and to succumb to none. Also, if we British had not exactly fulfilled those prophecies. We now beg for replies to the following equally simple queries:—1. To what race did God's Word assign the curious and rather unique function that it should "push the people together to the ends of the earth?" 2. What nation or nations at the present day are fulfilling this destiny exactly, by "pushing" other races out of existence at "the ends of the earth," and thus causing them to DIE OUT before them?

Now, of course, as before, our opponents having the Bible in their hands, must answer truly, that it was reserved in God's Holy Word for the seed of Ephraim and Manasseh only (two nations) to fulfil this prophecy, for so it is recorded in Deut. xxxiii. 17, and no one can find a similar declaration in the Scriptures pointing to any other nationality whatsoever as appointed to carry out such a destiny. The answer, therefore, is that the Hebrews, and they alone, were set apart to do this thing, and there is no condition whatever attached to the matter. It was to be done, and done by the Hebrews; the sons of Joseph, Ephraim and Manasseh both, and by them only.

In regard to the second question, we do not propose to give the answers ourselves. Philo-Israel, of course, would tell us that the British races, with their cousins across the water, were doing this work of "pushing" the Gentile "savage heathendom" of the earth out of existence and causing them "to die out." That too ardent writer's testimony would be deemed prejudiced and partial. We propose, therefore, to make two independent witnesses (a valid Hebrew testimony) speak for us—one from Melbourne, the other from New Zealand; both witnesses residing in the very localities God's Word indicates—"at the ends of the earth," where we know the "stationary savage heathendom" of the earth is now "dying out," and we shall ask these two witnesses to tell us what they know about it, the why and the wherefore of the phenomena. The advantage of the course we are pursuing is this: that one of our witnesses, the Rev. J. Dare, of Melbourne, testifies regarding the red man of America, whose condition he personally examined on the spot. His account was published in the Melbourne Spectator, and reproduced by the editor of the Standard of Ephraim, at page 60, April 16, 1879, of that journal, in Tasmania. Our second witness, writing from Wellington, publishes his testimony regarding the Fiji Islanders, and other Australasian races in The New Zealand Herald, at Auckland, New Zealand, on May 10th, 1879.

Our witnesses are, therefore, independent, impartial, and we believe, quite trustworthy. Weighing their evidence, let our opponents deny we are Israel of the prophecies, if they can; and let them explain to us why, if we be not Ephraim-Israel, and the American nation Manasseh-Israel, we British and Americans being so-called Gentiles, are exactly fulfilling the promises and predictions of God, made to Israel alone, and that without conditions of any kind whatsoever?

The Rev. Mr. Dare says in his "Notes of Travel"—

I cannot conclude my notes on America without a reference to the aboriginal inhabitants of the country. These are fast passing away before the "pale faces," the representatives of Western civilisation. The remnants of their once numerous tribes do not amount to nearly half a million, and it is the generally received opinion that in the lapse of years they will become totally extinct. The specimens I saw destroyed all my preconceived notions of the noble red man, which in boyhood days I had formed from the descriptions of Fenimore Cooper—gaily attired in his forest trappings, and bright in his war-paint, a plumed warrior, with lofty mien and elastic step. How different to the degraded Shoshones I first saw in Nevada besotted with bad whisky, with their matted hair, repulsive countenances, and small bowed legs, wrapped in dirty tattered blankets. I thought them the most degraded abortions of humanity I had ever seen.

Digitized by Google

Yet these races in their prime were a noble and brave, generous and hospitable people, and you cannot read without a melancholy interest the words of their leading chief to General Knox, when interrogated on his sadness :—"I will tell you what makes me sorrowful. I have been looking at your beautiful city, your great waters full of ships, your fine country, and I see how prosperous you all are. But then I could not help thinking that this fine country was once ours. Our ancestors lived here. They enjoyed it as their own in peace. It was the gift of the great Spirit to them and their children. At last white men came in a great canoe ; they only asked to let them tie it to a tree, lest the water should carry it away. We consented. They then said some of their people were sick, and asked permission to land them and put them under the shades of the trees. The ice came and they could not go away. Then they begged for a piece of land to build wigwams for the winter. We granted it to them. Then they asked corn to keep them from starving. We furnished it out of our scanty supply. They promised to go away when the ice melted. When this happened, they pointed to big guns and said, 'We shall stay here.' Afterwards came more. They brought intoxicating drinks, of which the Indians became fond. They persuaded them to sell this our land, and finally have driven us back to the wilderness, far from the water and the fish. They have scared away our game. My people are wasting away. We live in want of all things, while you enjoy abundance in our fine and beautiful country. This makes me sorry, and I cannot help it." The well-known bard of the West has beautifully expressed it in the vision of Hiawatha—

"I beheld, too, in that vision
All the secrets of the future—
Of the distant days that shall be,
I beheld the Westward marches
Of the unknown crowded nations.
All the land was full of people—
Restless, struggling, toiling, striving ;
Speaking many tongues, yet feeling
But one heart beat in their bosoms.
In the woodlands rang their axes,
Smoked their towns in all the valleys,
Over all the lakes and rivers
Rushed their great canoes of thunder.
Then a darker, drearier vision
Passed before me, vague and cloud-like.
I beheld our nations scattered,
All forgetful of my counsels ;
Weakened, warring with each other ;
Saw the remnant of our people
Sweeping Westward, wild and woeful,
Like the cloudrack of a tempest,
Like the withered leaves of Autumn."

Our second witness (a friend to our cause, but a stranger to ourselves) wrote as follows to The New Zealand Herald :—

THE DYING OUT OF ABORIGINAL RACES BEFORE THE ANGLO-SAXON RACE.

To the Editor.

SIR,—In your issue of this morning, the question of the dying out of aboriginal races is discussed. The absolute fact of the necessity of this dying out is denied, and the fact itself is accounted for in various ways. The Governor of Fiji is reported to have said, in his address to the native chiefs of that dependency, "It has grieved me much to learn how many of you believe that the native must gradually die out before the white man." Now, strictly, this is not a broad question of aboriginal races dying out before the white man, but of their dying out before the Anglo-Saxon race. As a matter of fact, they do not die away before all white men, but they do mysteriously melt away before the Anglo-Saxons. The Anglo-Saxon race is the only colonising race that does not amalgamate with the aboriginal races of the countries in which they settle—all other white men do, the Anglo-Saxons do not, they always stand aloof, and are distinctly a separate people. On the other hand, take the Portuguese and the Spaniards, who were the first modern colonisers on a large scale, and there we find that they have so inter-married, and become mixed up with the aboriginals of the countries where they settled, that now positively all the leading national traits and features of the colonising race are lost, and in its place is a nondescript breed, whose only characteristics seem to be that they possess all the vices of both races, and the virtues of neither. Take the French or the Dutch colonies, and the fact is still apparent that the aboriginal races are preserved. The only practical solution of this enigma, and of the unique position we hold in this respect, is to be found in the assumption that we are the descendants of that people to whom belong "the promises"—i.e., that we are the literal nation of Israel. One of the promises distinctly points to the fact that the aboriginies of Israel's colonies should die out. The promise was made upwards of a century after the Israelites were taken into captivity, and runs as follows :—"Therefore, fear thou not, O My servant Jacob, for I am with thee, saith the Lord, to save thee ; though I make a full end of all nations whither I have scattered thee, yet will I not make a full end of thee." A full end is, in other words, total extinction, and this is what we see taking place before our eyes. The Tasmanian natives have been made a "full end" of. They are extinct. The Australians are rapidly disappearing ; the Maories likewise ; the American Indians also, and this, notwithstanding the noble efforts that have been made by humane Governments to preserve them from extinction. Let no one cavil at what they may please to call the injustice of this patent fact, for God's ways are not our ways, and it is His decree that these people should disappear before the nation that He has chosen for Himself. Neither are we to presume that the blessings we have inherited from our fathers are bestowed upon us for any goodness of our own, for no sensible man believes that we, as a nation, have any ; and, moreover, the passage in the Bible stands out in bold relief, "Not for your sakes do I this, saith the Lord God, be it known unto you, be ashamed and confounded for your own ways, O House of Israel."

I am, &c.,

Wellington, New Zealand,
May 6, 1879. ANGLO-ISRAEL.

Here, then, is a valid and a perfect testimony. Two independent witnesses, speaking of heathen races subject to the Anglo-Saxons in all parts of the earth, declare from their own knowledge that they are miserably dying out before them ; and not only so, but that it is only before the Anglo-Saxon race that they so disappear ! God's Word, as our adversaries admit, declares that before the posterity of Ephraim and Manasseh, as representing TWO NATIONS, the people at "the ends of the earth" are to be "pushed together," "to die out," or come to a "full end," as the prophet Jeremiah predicts (chap. xxx. 11).

We ask, then, for the rational conclusion to be allowed us from all this—namely, that the Anglo-Saxon races are indeed the "remnant" of Ephraim and Manasseh of the latter days, and being so, are the Lost Eleven Tribes of Israel, of whom mankind have so long been in search.

Reader ! let us thank God for our opponents as well as for our blind witnesses ! For they teach us the meaning of His Word, and force us to recognise not only our Identity with Israel, but also His eternal TRUTH.

THE IDENTITY AT NEWMARKET.

WE are glad to report a commencement of the work in Newmarket. At a debate held by the Mutual Improvement Association on March 21st, 1879, Mr. A. G. Compigné, of Newmarket, moved, in an able and interesting paper, "That the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel are discovered in the British people." The mover commenced by giving a brief historical sketch of the Houses of Israel and Judah, and pointed out the distinctions between them. He then proceeded to lay down three lines of argument:—the historical, the coincidental, and the Scriptural. Owing to the short space of time allowed, the two first points were passed over, and the Scriptural argument only was enlarged upon. Evidence was here adduced of the Identity of the Lost Tribes of Israel with the British in a number of points, each based upon and illustrated by reference to the Holy Scriptures. The discussion was continued by Messrs. I. Purkis, H. R. Sherborn, G. A. Westrope, and the President. A passing reference was made to the historical argument by the opener in his reply. A division was not taken.

We have taken the above account of the meeting from the Newmarket Monthly Illustrated Journal for April, 1879, obligingly sent us by Mr. Compigné. It is a satisfaction to find fresh agents springing up, as it were out of the ground, to open the work in each new locality. Newmarket has at least one Israelite. We trust ere long there may be a vigorous association engaged in that part of the country publishing the Identity, praising the Lord while so doing, and praying for Israel's salvation the while (Jer. xxxi. 7).

Digitized by Google

KEDAR.

WE have received a suggestion from Mr. H. Sowdon, of Bristol, which, if only a curious coincidence, is worthy of notice; but if more, will, on investigation, be sure to lead to good results.

He points out that in Isa. xlii. 11 we have a reference to "the wilderness" as the residence of those who are the inhabitants of "the isles" of the previous verse, and that, doubtless, that is the name of the Home in the West where God's people Israel are "giving glory to Jehovah and are declaring His praise IN the islands" (verse 12). But, says Mr. Sowdon, this "wilderness" is associated in the Scripture in question with "the villages that Kedar doth inhabit," and with "the inhabitants of the rock" who "are to sing and to shout from the top of the mountains." These are all now islanders praising Jehovah, giving Him glory. It is interesting, therefore, he thinks, to ascertain, if we can, who these "inhabitants of Kedar" are, and how they have come to the British Isles of the West thus to glorify God in company with Israel "at the ends of the earth" (verse 10).

Mr. Sowdon is naturally led to read Jer. xlix. 28—34 for his information regarding "Kedar, and the kingdom of Hazor" mentioned there in connection with it. In that passage we find God's Word telling us that these races, whoever they may have been, were those whom "Nebuchadnezzar, King of Babylon, shall smite," and concerning whom the Lord said to the latter, "Arise ye, go up to Kedar and spoil the men of the East. Their tents and their flocks shall they take away, they shall take to themselves their curtains, and all their vessels, and their camels; and they shall cry unto them, Fear is on every side."

The above is followed by the very remarkable words addressed by the Lord to the same people of "Kedar and Hazor:" "Flee, get you FAR OFF, dwell deep, O ye inhabitants of Hazor, saith the Lord; for Nebuchadnezzar, King of Babylon, hath taken counsel against you and hath conceived a purpose against you. Arise, get you up unto the WEALTHY NATION (margin, that is at ease) that dwelleth without care, saith the Lord, which have neither gates nor bars, WHICH DWELL ALONE."

The succeeding verses show the future fate of the land when these warned ones shall have "fled afar off." The land Hazor was to be "a dwelling for dragons—a desolation for ever; there shall no man abide there, nor son of man dwell in it." But what of the inhabitants? those of Kedar who have "fled?" Why, Isa. xlii. 11 tells us that they went just where they were warned by Jeremiah they should go—namely, to the "isles," to "the wilderness," to the spot whence those who praise the Lord issue forth "to go down to the sea" and give glory unto the Lord Jehovah, to the British Islands—the home of Ten-Tribed Israel; for the spot is "afar off" from the Eastern Kedar and Hazor. It is, in fact, the "isles afar off;" for the same prophet recognises the latter as the habitat of Israel-Ephraim—God's firstborn (Jer. xxxi. 10). Their destination is the home of the "wealthy nation" "that is at ease;" and surely Deut. viii. 18 and Ezek. xxxviii. 11 tell us clearly that that race are Israel, holding their Northern and yet their Western island lands of "unwalled villages," where they dwell "all of them in safety," "in ease," with great store of cattle and goods, without walls and having neither "bars nor gates," which also dwell "alone" (Ezekiel xxxviii. 11; Jer. xlix. 31; Numbers xxiii. 9).

These inhabitants of Kedar and of Hazor are, therefore, with us now in Israel's island British home, and we ask who they are? and why they came from their FAR-OFF distant Eastern home, some time after B.C. 600, in obedience to the Lord's command, given them by the mouth of His prophet Jeremiah? The inhabitants of Hazor must have been those Ten-Tribed Israelites whom Ezra, in 2 Kings xv. 29, tells us, "Tiglath-Pileser, King of Assyria, came in Pekah's (the then King of Israel) days, and took from Ijon, Abel-bethmaachah and Janoah, and KEDESH, and HAZOR, and Gilead, and Galilee, ALL THE LAND OF NAPHTALI, and carried them captive to Assyria."

These unfortunate Israelites gave their name prophetically, we suppose, to the localities they occupied in B.C. 740; and to them, as Israelites, under the name of "inhabitants of Kedar and of Hazor," we think it very possible Jeremiah was commissioned to give the prophetic warning (in B.C. 600) that they should flee at once when the time for their escape should come. The terminus ad quem—i.e., the British Isles—being indicated by Isaiah; the terminus a quo, these captive Ten-Tribed Hebrews started from, is thus very clearly pointed out for us by Jeremiah. In Isaiah's prophecy they are addressed as the "villages of Kedar," representing the former inhabitants of Eastern Kedar and Hazor, and they are identified with the sea-faring, God-fearing, praising, Hebrew race serving the great Jehovah in "the islands," that "wilderness"-refuge of Hosea ii. 14, whither He promised to allure and there re-marry His Ten-Tribed faithless wife Israel. In Jeremiah xlix. 31, on the other hand, these very Assyrian Hebrew captives of Naphtali are warned to "flee" to a land "afar off," accurately described by marks which correspond precisely with unique descriptions of "Israel of the isles" to be found in Numbers xxiii. 9; Ezek. xxxviii. 11; Deut. viii. 18. The circle of Identity is thus complete, and our reader's common sense must do the rest.

We thank Mr. Sowdon for his suggestions, and have now much pleasure in placing his thoughts before our friends for their careful investigation, and possibly for their further elucidation of a new line of historical research and prophetic thought thus exposed to view.

PROGRESS IN MONTREAL, CANADA; IN GEORGE TOWN, BRITISH GUIANA; AND ALSO IN CAPE COLONY, SOUTH AFRICA.

WE like to show our readers how widely and rapidly our glorious Identity is spreading, and how wonderfully God is raising up for it friends and supporters who give the good news wings. The annexed we take from the Montreal Daily Star, of June 26, 1879, sent us by a zealous Canadian Israelite who is anxious to keep the BANNER OF ISRAEL well informed of progress in the Dominion.

In the present instance our friends will be glad to notice that an American preacher, the Rev. Joseph Williams, of Boston, Mass., was the lecturer on "Anglo-Israel," to a Canadian audience; "Manasseh," in fact, instructed "Israel" on her glorious pedigree, her rights, and her blessed God-sent privileges. The lecture was succeeded by an able address from Mr. Wm. Greig, the brother of our stalwart champion in Sunderland, who gave his testimony, we can see, in support of our Identity in no indistinct tones or dubious language.

The report runs as follows:—

ANGLO-ISRAEL.

The Rev. Joseph Williams, of Boston, Mass., lectured in Stanley-street Presbyterian church on Tuesday evening, June 24, on the subject of "Anglo-Israel;" Rev. Mr. McCaul in the chair. Mr. Williams read numerous passages of Scripture and made a running commentary on them, showing the continuity of the subject from Genesis to Revelation. At the close of the lecture Mr. Wm. Greig rose to propose a vote of thanks to the lecturer, and was requested by friends of the cause present to add a short exposition of his views.

Mr. Greig remarked that many had wondered why the Saxon race, above all others, had kept its candle burning brightly during all the centuries succeeding the Christian era; other lights had at last been extinguished and their candlesticks removed. The reason why our light held on to burn was not that we were better than others, but that God had loved us and had remembered His oath to our fathers, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. God had never taken away the blessings promised to the House of Israel. God had directed His messengers to the North, and the West, and the isles of the sea, even to the first century, and there the truth had taken root and no influence had ever been able to efface it. Our missionaries were scattered over every part of the habitable globe; our Bibles were distributed in every language; our money was launched out lavishly for every good cause. God had given us for a light to the Gentiles that we might be their salvation to the ends of the earth, and that we might say to the prisoners and enslaved, "Go forth," and to those that were in darkness, "Show thyself." That these duties should be performed we, as God's witnesses here in Canada, as well as those in Britain and America, had sent forth our quota of missionaries to the heathen in all parts of the world. Mr. Greig, in conclusion, moved a hearty vote of thanks to the lecturer, which was unanimously carried.

Digitized by Google

A transition from Montreal, in North America, to George Town, in British Guiana, from one British Gate and possession to another, seems quite easy and natural. Let us travel in imagination to South America and hear what our Israelite friend there, who brought our Identity so boldly before his bishop, and before the Synod so successfully in May last, has to say.

He asks, writing on June 25, 1879, for a further supply of Identity literature of all kinds, and he gives us the good news that our opponents there, as here, have, by public discussion in the Demerara papers, helped on our cause, but by no means retarded it, as they desired. He sends us an extract from the Royal Gazette newspaper, of George Town, dated June 5, 1879, wherein he does battle for us against the Rev. Mr. Farrar, whose pamphlet, "Truth versus Philo-Israel," has gone into a second edition.

This second edition, says our friend, was "only a reprint of the first with references to passages quoted and a postscript, wild and almost unintelligible." We have lately received Mr. Farrar's first edition of his attack, and we quote our English Israelite's gallant defence of ourselves against Mr. F.'s second edition to show our readers what the value of the same really was. Our friend says:—

> The promised second edition of Mr. Farrar's brochure has been issued with references and a postscript; as I suspected, the paper was prepared in utter ignorance of the writings by Philo-Israel, and yet it was put forth to the world as an answer to them. There is but one quotation from any of his numerous papers in the first edition, and this with three out of four others in the postscript to the second edition, are all of them taken from a foot-note on page 3 of the "Résumé of the Scriptural Argument proving the Identity of the British race with the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel." This is avowedly a compilation and contains the outlines only of the great argument, supported by an immense number of Scripture references which Mr. Farrar carefully eschews; yet with the "Résumé" in his hand he describes its purport to be "Philo-Israelism" (whatever that may be), and publishes a pamphlet professing to controvert the arguments of an author whose writings he has never read, unblushingly designating it "Truth v. Philo-Israel."

We do not trouble our readers with the arguments and refutations of these combatants on their merits, as they know pretty well the calibre of the Rev. Mr. Farrar, and can judge for themselves that a man so little read in our controversy as to do battle with an author he has never studied, is not one very difficult to answer. We have indicated enough to show that the cause is alive not only in Montreal, Canada, but also in South American British Guiana, in both of which places, under God's direction, it is in safe hands and progressing.

We must now cross the broad Atlantic and see what is doing in East London, Cape Colony, where our old friend and ally, Mr. John Bowers Janion, was on June 17 last, when he wrote us a long and cheering account showing how the grand cause was speeding there in spite of Zulu wars and of trouble of various sorts.

He tells us that he is hard at work disseminating our literature in railway carriages and wherever he goes officially in carrying out the duties of his profession. Returning from King William's Town, he found believers in our Identity in casual acquaintances, discovered editors of papers pleased and impressed with Identity literature forwarded from this country to the Cape through our instrumentality, and likely, ere long, to open their columns to the discussion of the subject. At Graham's Town our friend was called on suddenly to lecture before inquirers on the Great Pyramid and the Identity as well. The Dean of Graham's Town (Dr. Williams) was present on the occasion, with Dr. W. Guybon, M.D., F.R.G.S., the editors of two of the leading newspapers, and many others. The Dean contested our views (but feebly), and one of the editors then and there avowed himself a believer, adopting the Teutonic views imbibed from the late Mr. John Wilson's works. The upshot of the meeting and lecture in question was, that many of Mr. Janion's hearers pursued the subject for themselves, "with the result," as he observes, "we always expect—i.e., they are convinced of the truth."

We are glad to find that Mr. Janion is a great reader of Identity publications himself, and that on the arrival of his mails from England, though they generally bring him (he says) "a large number of papers, none interest him so much as the Identity journals, and of these he always reads the BANNER first and enjoys its contents the most."

We hope our readers will pardon us the editorial vanity we have been guilty of in publishing the above; but we have done it to prove to our distant friends that strangers to ourselves, such as Mr. Janion is, freely testify to the value they place on our poor labours; and for the sake of the views we constantly advocate, we wish this fact to be known. The approval of so intelligent a witness as Mr. Janion carries weight, and counts as something against the clerical depreciation of some of our adversaries residing not a hundred miles from our place of residence at Bristol. We are happy to say Mr. Janion desires, if possible, to be enrolled as a paying member of our Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association—his brother, Mr. Thomas A. Janion, an active worker, also has the same wish, and his son, aged 22, is a well-read Israelite, who, on the historical argument, has written and read some good papers before a local society in East London, Cape Colony, where the Identity is debated.

We think we have now said enough to cheer our friends. Good news from Montreal, from British Guiana, and from South Africa, all reaching our hands in the course of one single day, call for thanksgivings to the God of Israel; and we, therefore, ask our readers to join us in our usual response for such benefits received, by giving forth the united cry so often called for by us, and so comely in the House of Israel—namely, "Hallelujah!" "Praise ye the Lord!"

THE TESTIMONY OF A LEARNED UNCONVERTED JEW THAT THE BRITISH ARE "LOST" ISRAEL.

MAJOR H. SENIOR, of the Bengal army, now on leave in England, has personally communicated to us and repeated in writing the following remarkable testimony which at his request we publish for general information. We ask our opponents to ponder the statement. The Major states:—

> "I myself, in my late visit to Jerusalem, met a learned Jew, who for the first time was visiting 'the Holy City.' In an interesting conversation I had with him, he expressed his belief that the British nation were descendants of the Lost Tribes."

What does the Jew here testify on the evidence of Major H. Senior? (Bengal army). This:—

1. That the Tribes are "Lost." Mark that, opponents!
2. That the British are the "Lost" Tribes.

We beg our opponents to note these two facts which a learned Jew proves for us; and we ask them henceforth to cease to reproach us with the assertion that all the Jews are against us.

Digitized by Google

ISRAEL'S BATTLES.

"FOR THERE IS NONE OTHER THAT FIGHTETH FOR US, BUT ONLY THOU, O GOD."

(Continued from page 273.)

No. XX.—THE BATTLE OF ALBUERA.

IN BANNER No. 1, of January 3rd, 1877, we described the battle we are about to notice as a typical one, and therefore worthy of special notice as presenting many points characteristic of God's dealing with Israel in her conflicts with her enemies. The battle took place on the 16th May, 1811, on the ridge of Albuera, near Badajos, in the South-west of Spain. Lord Wellington's orders had directed Marshal Beresford to besiege Badajos, an operation commenced on the 4th of May, 1811, with utterly insufficient means, but cut short by the approach from Seville of Marshal Soult, the French General, with 19,000 foot, 4,000 cavalry, and 50 guns. Beresford, to meet this new foe, drew off from Badajos and formed his line of battle on the heights of Albuera. His forces consisted of 27,000 men, of whom only 7,000 were British troops, the rest a mere rabble of Spanish and Portuguese soldiery. The French arrangements for attack were ably made. During the night before the battle, Soult seized a height to the right of the allies which gave him almost the key of the entire British position. The French Marshal's plan was to make a feint at the British centre, but to throw the whole weight against the right, where Blake and his Spaniards stood. At the crisis of the action, the British General ordered the Spanish troops to change front to meet the French attack upon the right, an operation which of course threw the Spaniards into utter confusion. For a moment all was apparently lost. Charged on all sides by the French cavalry, torn by the fire of their cannon, met by a fierce hail of musketry, no wonder the Spaniards, at the moment caught in the act of changing front, were forced to give way, and all but driven off the ridge. The French considered the day was won. Not so! At the critical moment the British advanced to the relief of the disordered Spaniards. Colborne's brigade was pushed up the hill, but the formation being column of companies and not the order of battle, they were unable to open out for fire. Charged by four regiments of French Lancers and Hussars at that moment, two-thirds of that British Brigade were slain or taken prisoners. The rain, which had materially assisted in causing this disaster to the British, by preventing the approach of the French cavalry being seen, favoured them, however, in another way, for it hindered Soult seeing the extent of the disaster and taking full advantage of it. Failing to perceive his advantage, he kept his heavy columns inactive, and did not, therefore, drive Colborne and the 31st regiment from the heights. The time thus allowed (God-given to Israel) retrieved the all but ruined fortunes of the day. The weather cleared up. The British artillery began to pour a "dreadful fire into the thickest of the French columns," and Haughton's brigade began to mount the hill. Once there, they would not be dislodged. Dickson's artillery got into line. Two Spanish corps recovering formation, came up. A desperate fight ensued for hours. The French fought desperately—once with alarming success, for the Polish lancers captured six British guns. These were afterwards recovered by Colonel Hawkshawe; but matters went from bad to worse. Disaster and defeat seemed all but certain, when the conduct of Col. R. Arbuthnot, Cole, Hawkshawe, and Abercrombie, with the Fusiliers and the Lusitanian legion, changed the whole face of the battle as if by magic. The British troops—for it was on them the burden was finally cast—recovering from the fearful plunging fire of the enemies' columns, closed on the latter, and then was seen, says Napier, the historian of the Peninsular War, "with what strength and majesty the British soldier fights. In vain did Soult, by voice and gesture, animate his Frenchmen; in vain did the hardiest veterans, extricating themselves from the crowded columns, sacrifice their lives to gain time for the mass to open out on such a fair field; in vain did the mass itself bear up, and, fiercely striving, fire indiscriminately upon friends and foes, while the horsemen, hovering on the flank, threatened to charge the advancing line. Nothing could stop that astonishing infantry. No sudden burst of undisciplined valour, no nervous enthusiasm, weakened the stability of their order. Their flashing eyes were bent on the dark columns in their front; their measured tread shook the ground; their dreadful volleys swept away the head of every formation; their deafening shouts overpowered the dissonant cries that broke from all parts of the tumultuous crowd, as foot by foot, and with horrid carnage, it was driven by the incessant vigour of the attack to the furthest edge of the hill. In vain did the French reserves, joining with the struggling multitude, endeavour to sustain the fight. Their efforts only increased the irremediable confusion, and the mighty mass, giving way like a loosened cliff, went headlong down the ascent. The rain flowed after in streams discoloured with blood, and 1,500 unwounded men, the remnant of 6,000 unconquerable British soldiers, stood triumphant on the fatal hill" (Napier. Pen. War, vol. iii., pp. 540, 541).

In other parts of the field the result was the same. The French, after an arduous struggle, were beaten back, and in four hours' serious fighting nearly 7,000 of the allies, but over 8,000 of the French, were struck down killed and wounded. Three French generals were wounded, two slain, and 800 Frenchmen were so badly wounded that they were left on the field of battle. On the side of the allies only 2,000 Spaniards were touched, and 600 German and Portuguese. But the whole brunt of the battle having fallen on the British, they had only 1,500 men left standing out of 6,000. "The laurel," says Napier, "is nobly won when the exhausted victor reels as he places it on his bleeding front." Thus ended the bloody battle of Albuera. It was a critical fight indeed, and one proving that the victors were God's people Israel, under His eye and gracious care. The British were the only troops on whom the General could rely, and with 6,000 of these he had to oppose 23,000 of the picked troops of France. Undone by the folly of Blake, the wretched composition of the Spanish troops, and by the disposition of Soult, the British won by mere tenacity and God-given bravery. The rain and fog shielded them during the battle from destruction when their defeat seemed certain, and on the day after, when Soult ought to have renewed the fight, and destroyed the little handful of the 1,500 alone standing to oppose him, God restrained the Frenchman till the 3rd British Brigade came up from Jurumenha by a forced march, and then it was too late. On the 18th May Soult retreated. Had the French troops been successful in this great battle, all Lord Wellington's plans must have been compromised. "The French would have been fixed on the South of the Tagus, Spain would have been ruined, Portugal prostrate, England in dismay." "It was a battle," says Napier, "which ought not to have been fought;" but it was fought, and ended in a victory for God's people. It was an action in which His hand was conspicuous, as the Saviour of His afflicted ones, and "He maintained their cause," and that exactly, too, as "the matter then required" (1 Kings viii. 45—59.) Their powerful enemy came against them one way; but they had to retreat and leave them all the fruits of victory. With the handful of men the Lord gave deliverance to His people. When they were so reduced as to invite the further attack of their still powerful foe, who had 15,000 untouched infantry, cavalry, and artillery to oppose the 1,500 troops of the British who were alone fit, or likely to withstand them, the Lord gave Soult that wavering indecision of mind which saved His people, and ended in the final discomfiture of their enemies. The battle of Albuera was indeed a "typical battle," and it illustrates all the dealings of our God with us His people Israel in the matter of our conflicts.

(To be continued.)

Digitized by Google

AN ITALIAN SAVANT SUGGESTS THE COLONISATION OF NEW GUINEA BY "ISRAEL."

ON all sides Israel is regarded as the regenerator, the saviour, the enlightener of the waste places of the earth. In what follows we see an Italian savant recommends as the best and most proper thing in the world that the British should annex, colonise, and improve New Guinea! His paper, which reads something like one of ours on the Geography of Israel's Gates, may, we feel, furnish us with materials for a last final paper on that interesting subject some years hence, when having exhausted the Gates in esse, we take up the Gates now in posse and write of, say Yule Island as the providential Gate by which God will have given us all that land.

Our readers will note the curious fact which the Italian records—namely, that whereas the Dutch, not being Israel, "raise the nations of the countries they occupy," till they multiply on and possibly revolt as they are doing in Achin—in Israel's case the policy is one, he says, of "substitution"—that is, we presume, the Anglo-Saxon, being the ten thousands of Ephraim, "push the people together to the ends of the earth with the horns of their unicorns" (Deut xxxiii. 17), and the end, alas! is that they "die out" before them (Jer. xxx. 11). Here is blind testimony given by an Italian that while we are Israel, the Dutch are not, and that "England's mission to the world is to enlighten the less advanced races of the world." We should like to ask Signor D'Albertis why this should be? He could not tell us! But we, by the light of the Identity, can explain the curious phenomenon to him. It is because, being Israel, God has said, "Israel shall blossom and bud and fill the face of the world with fruit" (Isa. xxvii. 6); also, "This people have I formed for Myself; they shall show forth My praise" (Isa. xliii. 21); and lastly, because of the primeval benediction, "In thee" (the Hebrews) "and in thy seed" (which is Christ) "shall ALL the families of the earth" (therefore the aborigines of New Guinea we must hope) "be blessed" (Gen. xxii. 18).

Our quotation is as follows:—

COLONISATION OF NEW GUINEA.

Last night, before a meeting of the members of the Royal Colonial Institute, at the Pall Mall Restaurant, a paper, contributed by Signor L. M. D'Albertis, of Italy, was read, entitled, "New Guinea: its Fitness for Colonisation." In the absence of the Duke of Manchester, the chair was taken by General Sir Charles Daubeney, K.C.B., and the paper was read by Dr. Bennett, of Sydney, New South Wales. The author considered that the time had come when New Guinea was no longer to be considered an unknown land, and that the white man was eager to intrude upon that virgin ground to seek for wealth unobtainable by him in other parts of the world. Yule Island and the mainland in its vicinity were the portions most suitable for the commencement of civilisation—Yule Island for its salubrity, its position, its harbour, and the mainland, for its well-irrigated and extensive plains, the vicinity of the mountain range, and especially for its inhabitants, whom the author said he could trust as an intelligent, industrious, and hard-working people. The country around here appeared very suitable for colonisation, being well watered, with an abundance of grass, suitable both for agricultural purposes and the rearing of cattle. The climate was good and the heat moderate. From the summit of the hill, at an elevation of nearly 1,200 feet, could be observed a large extent of plains, with lagoons, and the river Amama flowing to the middle from the North. Judging from its depth, the author thought it might serve as a means of penetrating into the interior; but at present it could not be feasible, on account of the number of large trees that encumbered the passage of the river, which would require European skill and capital to render it navigable. The author next went into a description of the principal villages of the country, including those of Nicura, Biolo, and Naiabni; after which he gave a minute account of the manners, customs, and laws of the peoples. The race inhabiting Yule Island, and the coast of New Guinea East and West of the island, differed materially from the inhabitants of the far West of New Guinea—the true Papuans—or the mixture resulting from their intercourse with strangers. It was difficult to say to what race these people belonged, but in many respects they resembled the inhabitants of the Polynesian region; in other respects they differed materially. Signor D'Albertis held that a Government that would annex New Guinea would have to follow the Dutch policy in colonising rather than that of the English. The Dutch raised the natives of the country they colonised to the position of a civilized race, which he would call a system of association; whereas the English plan, if not always, was usually one of substitution. While from an interested point of view the latter was the most convenient, from a philanthropic point of view the other was preferable. Intelligent, industrious, and persevering as were the natives of this portion of the country, they might become in a short time an important people, with whom it would be possible for us to cement a friendship which would be advantageous to both parties—to us in obtaining the supposed productions of the land, and to them in exchanging their products for European manufactures. The missionary stations were powerful agents for the conciliation of the natives with newcomers, but they could never be the arbitrators, as it would result in their being the victims of both parties. Seeing that the country was being intruded upon by the miner, the author of the paper could not but feel that they should be dealt with in a manner most creditable and profitable to both parties, more particularly as he believed that, under the government of enlightened natives, New Zealand would be more advantageous to the European. In conclusion, he hoped that England, whose mission to the world seemed to be to enlighten the less advanced races, would not forget New Guinea, when the united efforts of the philanthropist, the missionary, and the commercial man would assist each other in the common work for the benefit of our dark brothers of New Guinea.

ANGLO-SAXONS AND ANGLO-ISRAEL.

BY P. J. LEGEYT, OF ST. HELIERS, JERSEY.

I HAVE lately been struck with an idea which I am inclined to believe will prove one of the strongest and most palpable Identities in favour of the British nation being, in reality, the chosen descendants of Isaac yet discovered. It originated in the unsummoned occurrence to my mind from the grave of my schoolboy days, where it had quietly reposed for some thirty-five years, of the famous expression reputed to St. Gregory before he ascended the Papal chair, who, when passing through the market-place of Rome, whilst some Anglo-Saxon children were exposed for sale, was so stricken with their symmetry of person and beauty of countenance, that he exclaimed, on being informed they were Angles:—"Non Angli, sed Angeli forent, si essent, Christiani"—"Not Angles, but angels would they be if Christians." It appeared to me at the moment, in characters and expression, radiant with prophetic lustre, the Angli and Angeli of the sentence seeming naturally and irresistably to associate with, and merge into, the Anglo of our then, and the English of our present name, and to become pregnant with meaning and declaration that we bear incontestible proof, not only of our descent, but of the nature of our office or calling, in our very name of Anglo-Saxons and English; the former meaning in its pure and simple interpretation nothing less than the chosen sons or descendants of Isaac, and our general name, whereby we are known and called throughout the world, English, signifies appointed, elected, deputed, delegated—in fact, specially chosen people, agents, or messengers. If, then, this be so, the point raised by some of our Identity friends as to whether the Anglo portion of the title assumed by the Metropolitan, Sheffield, and other associations—viz., Anglo-Israel—be not unnecessary, and, perhaps, objectionable, is at once settled negatively, and, on the contrary, suddenly becomes one of the mightiest powers in the Identification argument to attract attention and compel conviction, by, as it were, focussing, generalising, and crowning the whole.

The ANGLI, according to Lempriere's classical dictionary, were "a people of Germany, at the North of the Elbe, from whom, as being a branch of the Saxons, the English have derived their name. (Tacit. G. 40.) Now Goldsmith, in his history of England, speaks of the Saxons (and his statement is a well-authenticated historical fact) thus:—"A brave people, who, for their strength and valour, were formidable to all the German nations around them, and supposed to be more than a match for the gods themselves." Let us couple with this the astonishing prowess and prestige of the British people since then to the present time, and can the drowsiest mind be otherwise than completely awakened to the realisation of the fact that this people can be none other than that so markedly described in God's Word as "terrible from their beginning and hitherto?" If not, where are the people so alluded to to be found, and how identified, either in the actual embodiment of a literal existence, or the specious pretences of a spiritualising argument? For my part I conceive that to arrive at a satisfactory solution, be it negative or affirmative of an intricate problem, it is indispensable that one should commence by searching for fundamental principles, which, if found with reliable characteristics of solidity, skill and material alone are required to raise thereupon a superstructure of undeniable strength and indisputable magnificence, and place no reliance whatever on those fanciful imaginations which soar to the clouds, and conjure up such edifices there as at best can but claim an uncertain, intangible, shadowy existence, which is what I consider the Bible spiritualizers have all along been engaged at.

Digitized by Google

Now, since the Angli were a people of Germany, I think it safe to infer that their name had a Teutonic origin, which inference is intensified in the fact that it cannot be considered surprising a people whom the German nations around looked upon as "more than a match for the gods themselves," should have received from them a name as nearly descriptive of the light in which they regarded them, as their ideas would suggest and their language supply, and no more appropriate word to that end could they adopt than their word Engel, pronounced somewhat as though spelt in our language—Aingle—and meaning Angel, the g in the German being hard instead of soft as in the English word. Moreover, the very name by which we are universally known—ENGLISH—is a German adjective signifying angelic; gleich einem Engel (like an angel) Engellish or English. Our immediate ancestors were thus invested by the Germans (the heretofore Assyrians, by whom, some centuries before, they had been taken into captivity) with a name or title which declared them to be endowed with superhuman power and dignity, equivalent to that attributed to angels.

Now, the original meaning of the word angel is messenger, and Robinson, in his theological dictionary, states: "Angel, however, is properly a name of office, not referring to the nature of the person employed, but to his agency as a messenger; and it may be said that if the word messenger, envoy, or delegate, be mentally substituted by the reader for angel where it occurs (in Scripture), the passage will lose nothing by the change," and further on he remarks—"It has been already observed that the word angel in Scripture is understood as a name of office rather than of nature, and may denote an agent, an envoy, a deputy. If taken personally, it may signify him who performs the will of a superior; and if impersonally, that which performs what it is appointed to act. It seems, indeed, certain that personally taken, the sense of a messenger or one deputed by another to act for him, is a genuine idea of the word angel in both the Old and New Testament. Hence Christ Jesus may well be called 'the Angel of God,' for He is eminently the Deputy from God to man, the great Angel of the covenant (Malachi iii. 1), the Agent for God."

If, then, we succeed in associating and identifying the terms Angle, Angli, Anglo, Engel, and English (which beyond doubt have a common root) with the English word angel, in the above given sense, and as applicable to human beings presumably endowed with superhuman powers, we immediately arrive at the fact that (as a messenger, agent, envoy, delegate, or deputy, implies in all cases a person selected, elected, chosen, or specially appointed to fulfil the mission entrusted to him) our ANGLO-SAXON title conveys through its simple, uncontorted, and incontestible original signification, in startling and indelible characters, a proclamation to the world so genuine and authoritative as to irresistibly compel conviction that the British people are the specially chosen people of God, the descendants of Isaac, the hitherto LOST TEN TRIBES OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. Anglo, meaning chosen in a Divine sense, and Saxon, Sachsen, Sachite (the s in German pronounced z) meaning the sons or descendants of 'Sach, Saak,' Zaak or Isaac; while the national title, English, embodied in a universal sense the fact of their special appointment as chosen agents, with a more than human significance attached to the position.

The foregoing crude ideas, coarsely huddled together, I humbly submit to your earnest consideration, in the full belief that they form the groundwork of an astounding and convincing Identification in connection with the grand truth that we are God-privileged to assist (however slightly) in developing to the "devoutly-to-be-wished consummation" of its national acknowledgment. It opens up a theme susceptible of voluminous expansion in the hands of some of our learned contributors to "Identity" literature; and if this letter impresses you as possessing the merit of utility in God's service, and that its publication would be likely in any way to enhance the great "Identity's" development, I beg of you to dispose of it as your judgment will deem best, in the hope that Almighty God, to whom be all the glory, will favourably accept the mite and bless it.

IDENTITY DIFFICULTIES ANSWERED.

(Continued from page 201.)

PART V.

ARE THE UNITED STATES THE REMNANT OF MANASSEH?

A FRIEND to our cause lately put to us the question, How it could possibly be asserted that Israelite Manasseh and the United States are racially identical? The inquirer in this case had not read those back numbers of the BANNER in which the matter has been discussed, nor any of those works in which the proof which exists has been detailed. He, therefore, was quite unable to see the rationale of the assertion, and wanted information. As there must be thousands in the same plight, we propose now to place on record in a few words what can be said on the subject, leaving it to the reader to decide whether the proof is cogent or the reverse.

To approach this question, we must assume (as, indeed, we are entitled to do in all cases where this advanced view regarding the Identity of America with Manasseh is brought forward) that the British Anglo-Saxons are the remnant of Israel—Ephraim, God's first-born (Jer. xxxi. 9). That being granted, our task is easy. We now appeal to Scripture, and ask our readers to turn to Gen. xlviii. 15—22 for the evidence.

In that passage we find the purblind patriarch engaged, as one of his last solemn acts, in blessing Joseph's two sons, Manasseh and Ephraim—his own grandchildren. The father of the two lads was naturally anxious that the first-born's blessing should be the property of his eldest boy Manasseh, and that Ephraim, his younger son, should have the next best. He approached the old man, therefore, with Manasseh on his own left hand, opposite to Jacob's right; and Ephraim, the younger, on his own right hand, opposite to the patriarch's left. By such an arrangement, the right-hand blessing of the dying saint would have fallen to Manasseh; and Ephraim, opposite to Israel's left hand, would have had the inferior benison. But that was not God's will—nor Jacob's! Ephraim's was to be the right-hand best blessing, and he obtained it! How? Thus. The aged Israel crossed his hands, and, with his arms fashioned as a St. Andrew's cross (thus X), he pronounced his blessing on the lads, giving, with his right hand on Ephraim's head, the chief benediction, and on Manasseh's, with his left hand, the subordinate boon. The words he used were these. Replying to his son Joseph's expostulation, and refusing to uncross his arms or to place his right hand on the eldest lad's (Manasseh's) head, he said, speaking in the power of the Spirit: "I know it, my son, I know it; he (Manasseh) also shall become A PEOPLE, and he also shall be GREAT; but, truly, his younger brother shall be GREATER than he, and his seed shall become the multitude" (or fulness) "of the GOIM" (or Gentiles). "And he set Ephraim before Manasseh."

Digitized by Google

We see, then, the arrangement of God! Out of the waters of Israel were to arise two separate nations, both Israelite in origin; the one a "great people," so named, and the other yet greater than he, in respect of the fact that the latter should develop into a nation, and a fulness or company of apparently "Goim," or Gentile, races, really Hebrews in origin. The former were to separate from the latter, and yet be great in their separation. This (British) nation being "Ephraim and his fellows" of the nine Tribes (Ezek. xxxvii. 19), we ask, Has any nation, having gone out of her, become a "great people," independent of her, and yet continued during separation, one in language, laws, manners, customs, literature, religion, and almost identical in national institutions too? Surely there has! The American United States went out from the British nation when the Pilgrim Fathers left the shores of England, in A.D. 1623, and founded the thirteen colonies in the West, which afterwards asserted their independence and became a "great nation," as it is this day! From that time to this, our brother Jonathan has perpetually grown larger and greater, by constant accretions from the people of these islands, as well as from the continent of Europe, and by natural generation. His population, even now, exceeds that of the British Islands; but, in spite of that, as a nation, the States are inferior to the British Empire (pace Mr. Gladstone) because ours is an Empire "beyond sea"—situated in many lands—a nation with "a company of nations" in close and loving union, the owner of all the Gates; while theirs is, "though a continuous Empire," yet destined, by God's Word, to be the lesser of the two. To mark the contrast, let the reader observe that, of all the colonies, the United States was the only one the British ever lost. The States were destined to be "separated"—being an Israelitish race; to be "lost" to the Mother Country (Isa. xlix. 20, 21), and to become themselves a "great people," a name they always style themselves in their public documents. Do we not, therefore, recognise in these facts an exact fulfilment of the aged Israel's blessing pronounced on Joseph's younger son, justifying us, as Israelites, in saying that the American States are identical with the remnant of Manasseh?

An objection we have met with to this view must be stated, and the answer indicated, before we close. It is this:—How can the Americans be Israelites since it is clear their population is largely derived from all the nations of Europe by constant immigration?—and how can we say the present race of Americans are Manassites since all classes of the British, therefore of all the Ten Tribes, have joined them there, and become naturalised Americans?

To this objection we gave a detailed reply in BANNER, No. 91, vol. ii., Sept. 25, 1878, p. 309. We ask our readers to study that article again. The argument, concisely stated, is, that God sent over first to the States from our shores a great mass of the Tribe of Manasseh to form the nucleus of the new nation. The Anglo-Saxon blood thus established is strong. It assimilates all other races it draws into its meshes, and makes all comers Anglo-Saxon too. Hence the American nation is to-day Anglo-Saxon in language, laws, religion, literature, manners, customs, and in everything that goes to make up a nationality. Those who, since the formation of the nation, have joined it from these islands, may be members of all the Ten Tribes, probably are so. But the Tribal distinctions here seem for the present perfectly in abeyance, and the Tribal "leaven" wholly mixed up together. Hence it may be that a large or small mixture of the Ten Tribes with what is Manasseh in the main may have no really appreciable effect on the mass of that nation, but serve rather the good purpose of keeping up the Anglo-Saxon blood, and strengthening the tie with the Mother Country, which, after all, and before long, we believe, will be in federation with the stalwart and great people who, across the water to the West, we verily believe are, and hold to be, our great brother Manasseh.

May that day soon arrive! And when it does, Ephraim, "with the Tribes of Israel his fellows," and great Manasseh of the States, holding hands in loving union, will, with afflicted Judah, trusting to their united greater strength, present such a front of triple power and glorious might to the rest of the (Gentile) earth, that Israel shall be the acknowledged "heir" and ruler of the world—the power to whom the kingdom and dominion and the GREATNESS of the kingdom under the whole heaven shall naturally devolve, as God's own chosen, blessed people—the children of Israel!

ANGLO-ISRAELISM AND ITS OPPONENTS.

BY J. C. N.

HAVING been requested (BANNER, No. 132, page 283) to explain an apparent misconception or misrepresentation of Mr. Roberts's historical argument against the Identity by me, in a short paper under the above title (BANNER, No. 128, page 239), I hope the editor will allow me in this paper to give my explanation, which will shew that my mistake (if such it really was) was not intentional; and also to shew that my argument is not altogether "vitiated," but is still very nearly "in statu quo."

To explain:—My paper was written and forwarded very soon after the debate, and, of course, before the report, "published from shorthand notes revised," came out. I am still under the impression that Mr. Roberts gave us, at the time, an idea that the Scythians were from Gomer; and it should be remembered that the speaker was very excited just at this part of the debate, and may, possibly, have made a "slip" which does not appear in the revised report. If, however, the record at "page 65" be a faithful copy of the shorthand notes, I am quite willing to believe that my memory was in fault; and I can say honestly that I have no wish or intention to rival the writer of the "preface to the debate," in the art of misrepresenting other people's views. I hope this explanation will be deemed sufficient, and accepted.

And now to examine the historical refutation of Anglo-Israelism, as it stands recorded at "page 65." It is contended by Mr. Roberts that the British people are Japhetic, and not Shemetic; and to support this view he quotes Genesis x. 2—5: "The sons of Japheth: Gomer, and Magog, and Madai, and Javan;" "and the sons of Gomer: Ashkenaz, and Riphath, and Togarmah;" and then in verse 5: "By these were the isles of the Gentiles divided in their lands; every one after his tongue, after their families, in their nations." "Therefore," continues our opponent, "the Bible and Josephus (referring to the 'Magog' argument) concur in telling us that the original inhabitants of Europe were descended from Japheth, whereas the Ten Tribes were descended from Shem. Therefore, that is a complete disproof (if there were no other) of the claim of Israelitish descent for the British people."

In the face of this, I assert, and will endeavour to shew, that if the British people are Japhetic, they must be descended from Gomer and Magog. This would, of course, be fatal to the theory of Mr. Roberts and other opponents concerning the restoration of the Jews to Palestine by Britain, because the part we should have to play in the great drama of the latter days would be that of an enemy against God and His chosen people. Read Ezekiel xxxviii. and xxxix. See also Revelation xx. 8, 9.

Digitized by Google

I am not aware that Mr. Roberts has openly disputed Sharon Turner's conclusion that the Anglo-Saxons are descended from the Sacæ-Scythians. "But," he says, "supposing he (Sharon Turner) were sure; what then? Who are the Scythians?" Josephus answers, "Magog (one of the sons of Japheth) founded those that from him were called Magogites, but who are by the Greeks called Scythians." "Here Josephus tells us," continues Mr. Roberts, "that the Scythians are descendants of Japheth. The Ten Tribes were descendants of Shem; therefore, how can one be the other?" Here it will be seen that our opponent must acknowledge that the Anglo-Saxons are the modern Sacæ, or allow that there is nothing in his argument.

And now to consider the Celtic portion of the British race. Who are the Celts? Dr. Smith, in his "Classical Dictionary," tells us that the Celtae were also called by the Greeks and Romans, Galatae and Galli. Josephus informs us (Antiq. i. 6, 1) that "Gomer founded those whom the Greeks now call Galatians (Galls), but were then called Gomerites." The "Treasury of Bible Knowledge," Longmans, has the following under "Gomer":—

"The eldest son of Japheth. His descendants are generally supposed to be the ancient Cimmerians, the Cimbri of after times, whose name is yet to be traced in the Crimea—that great Celtic family of which we have in these islands the Gael of Ireland and Scotland, and the Cymry of Wales. Their migrations are recorded in history. Pressed by the Scythians, the wave of their population flowed into the Western part of Asia Minor; and thence, resisted and expelled by the Lydians, they turned to other quarters, and found settlements in the North and West of Europe. Of them came the occupiers of Denmark, the German coast, Belgium and Britain."

We see from the foregoing extracts that the Celts are the Galatae of the Greeks and Romans, and the Galatians or Gomerites of Josephus. I submit, then, the obvious conclusion is, that if the Saxon and Celtic peoples forming the British Empire are really Japhetic, they are Gomerites and Magogites. I need only say now, on the authority of Ezekiel xxxviii. and xxxix., that Mr. Roberts must either deny his theory concerning the "true position of Britain in prophecy," or allow that his "Japhetic" argument does not refute Anglo-Israelism.

The one way out of this historical difficulty is the Anglo-Israelitish way out. There will be no need for me to pass from point to point over the ground already traversed by Philo-Israel, Rev. H. Marriott, and others, in tracing back the Celt and the Saxon of our land to the city of the Ten Tribes, Beth-Khumri, or Samaria; but I will return to the argument from the prophetic symbols of Hosea. Gomer, being the eldest son of Japheth, fitly represents the Japhetic race, and Hosea, taking to wife Gomer, represents the contact of Israel with the idolatrous Japhetic race. In support of this view, I notice that the Cymry, being the first to break forth on their wanderings, have been mistaken for a Celtic people—that is, the Galatians or Gomerites of Josephus. Next the Sacæ, really of the same family as the "Cymry," have been mistaken for Japhetic Scythians, or Magogites.

In conclusion, I must say that our opponents have not, and cannot, find any mention or description in the Bible of this world-wide, continent-shadowing Empire of Britain, save in connection with the promises to Israel.

London, July 12, 1879.

FROM ASSYRIA TO BRITAIN.

THE SEQUEL.

By W. Burnett-Coates, Home Office, C.D.

(Continued from page 298).

PART III.

The ruck-and-rôle of feud-and-blood that careered over Britain, from the Roman invasion (and long before) until the fight at Naseby, in 1645, saw the Cavaliers worsted and broken on that famous field, held its destructive course for some 1700 years. This last battle was the beginning of the end of the sword-rule. Britons, Romans, Saxons, Danes, and Normans held ghastly orgies on this beautiful soil of loveliness, slaying and being slain with the ruthless persistence of savage greed for dominion and a lust for the possession of land.

A better day has dawned, and the power of the preacher and the power of the pen have superseded the sword and wanton excesses of the warrior and his fiery following. Britain's long and dreary baptism of blood, under a regime of sanguinary slaughter, has been succeeded by an internal peace such as few nations ever enjoyed. Peace, prosperity, and possessions are now a home-bred inheritance, palpable to every eye. Civilisation, with her "bonny bairns" of Arts and Sciences—twin beauties—has taken up her abode with us, and has clad the land and its people with robes of majesty unworn in any other country. So great has this nation become, although sprung from a people less than any other people, by the grace of our God, that its influences extend throughout the world, so high that its genial rôle of lights and shades, blended in a universal love to mankind, are seen in all quarters; so opulent and benevolent that its gift of wealth, with heart and hand, is ever ready to succour the distressed foreigner as well as its needy kindred; so powerful that its enemies whose gates it holds in its strength are fain to leave it unmolested, or to shelter under its lee; and so just, and so sensible of universal duty, that it is ever ready to tap the source of its own greatness, and to direct the vivifying streams to fructify the barren wastes where the ill-governed or down-trodden pine for the rivers of life.

Blest of her God, and by His favour, the chief custodian of His precious Word, the children of Britain are always anxious to communicate the treasures of salvation—the true riches—to all people. The Divine Word of truth has made them free, and gladly do they bear the priceless freight of love, its burthen, for the healing of the sin-bruised nations, well knowing that only "those are free whom the truth makes free," and that "all are slaves beside." Hence the unrolling of a stupendous rôle, from which proceeds marvels; each in itself a marvel; a splendid testimony to the truth of the asserted Hebrew origin of this people, who are now seen to enjoy the fulfilling of the promises made by Him whose promise is as a nail in a sure place—"Yea and Amen!" What the Lord has said, the Lord will do. "He is not slack concerning His promises, as some men count slackness, but will fulfil to the letter. The sacred page throws no uncertain light in these days upon what was formerly only a wordy shadow of good things to come.

Hence we have now testimony upon testimony—a wealth of evidence—grounded on what time has embodied in something more tangible than circumstantial proof; inasmuch as that witness after witness concur in testifying to the fact that the British Empire is practically dominant at this moment in all the earth; that its wealth, power, wisdom, commerce, possessions, literature, and science, have greatly outstripped its contemporaries; that its flag is on every sea; its feet planted firmly on portions of the globe far-and-away larger than the whole of Europe; that its language in literature is fast displacing the tongues of other countries, and is becoming a medium of diplomacy and commerce—thus verifying the prediction of foreign as well as domestic writers—that its population's increase is beyond that of any other nation; its trade and revenues infinitely greater and more prosperous than can be shown elsewhere; that its laws give perfect freedom to home and colonies, and that its colonial and subject races number 290,000,000.

Digitized by Google

Since commencing this part of "the Sequel," the substance of a paper from the pen of an amazed French savant, M. Littré, presented to the British public by another "blind witness," the Daily Telegraph on 12th of May, 1879, whose own corroboration of M. Littré's able notice of the status occupied by Great Britain in the rank of nations, and likely still to be more conspicuous, is not the least satisfactory feature in the unfolding rôle of the Hebrew Tribes united in "the Isles of the West"—"the Isles of destiny;" and, as the late Mr. John Wilson shows from the Hebrew application of the word Britain, to be equivalent to "the covenant land."

The savant, dazzled by the display of quiet greatness in the "astounding" discoveries opened up by his research into the comparative condition of European nations, on the points referred to, has been led to the conclusion of an almost ubiquitous Britain—a Britain giving rule, laws, and language to the known world, unless the teeming hordes of China or the Sclavonic element of semi-savage humanity appear upon the scene to disturb this dream of universal Empire. Well, our savant may set his disturbed mind at rest on these most interesting points. Sclavdom will never hold revel in Europe's extent: she may fret and fume, and chafe and champ upon the iron bit of prophetic destiny; she may, and possibly will, endeavour to free herself from it, and rush like an unspent torrent upon certain defeat; but the hook of prophecy is still in her nose; and like one of old—a fact not entirely new or unknown to the great leading Power of the Sclavs—she will recede baffled and broken; smitten before the, as yet, unnamed and supernaturally sustained antagonist.

The Chinese multitudes may surge and bilge their borders, may send a few units of their millions upon the overflow of population to other countries—even into some of our British territories—but they will arrive as "hewers of wood and drawers of water" to "the Imperial race" of Britain; certainly not as their supplanters. Japheth may find shelter in the tents of Shem; but no lordship there—not even equality; so the savant may rest re-assured.

(To be continued.)

Reviews.

The Anglo-Israelites. By the Rev. J. B. Clifford, M.A. Hamilton, Adams & Co., 32, Paternoster-row; J. E. Chillcott, 26, Clare-street, Bristol. Price threepence.

BY THE EDITOR.

THE public are indebted to us individually for a second pamphlet from the pen of the Rev. J. B. Clifford, M.A., Vicar of St. Matthew's, Kingsdown, Bristol. The reason why the rev. author is forced to follow up his late attack on our views, is that he alleges we "implied a doubt as to the truthfulness of his quotations from Canon Titcomb's letter to him." We protest against this statement. It is but another instance of our reverend opponent's want of accuracy in quotation. When and where did we ever "imply a doubt" on the truthfulness of the quotation? When did we attribute "imposture" to Mr. Clifford? (page 4.) Never in the BANNER OF ISRAEL. At page 210, where we stated that we had forwarded Mr. Clifford's first pamphlet to the bishop, we announced that we had pointed out to him "the passages which seemed to reflect on him, and asked, also, an explanation of certain remarks he seemed to have made regarding our views on Psa. ii. 8."

No doubt of Mr. Clifford's veracity or honour is here expressed! We only courteously pointed out to the bishop what required explanation. But for the rev. author's lack of accuracy as a reader, no second pamphlet from his pen was called for or needed, as far as Philo-Israel is concerned. We have got one published, however, and we must make the best we can of it. The paper opens with the then canon's letter, gravely authenticated by three gentlemen, who vouch by name (in capital letters) for its being a "true copy" of the original. The latter, as our readers are aware, and as Mr. Clifford knew on July 9, 1879, was declared by the writer, Bishop Titcomb, to be a "strictly private letter;" yet, on July 20, 1879, Mr. Clifford published not only the extract which the bishop complains has been given to the public "in violation of that code of faith and honour which most gentlemen regard as supreme," but the entire letter now as well. How our rev. opponent can defend this extreme proceeding we cannot imagine. Nothing now put forward seems, to our mind, to palliate it. We treated his private letters, as he well knows, very differently; when, being offered them for publication by those who deemed them public property, we desisted at Mr. Clifford's bare request, urged in writing, objecting to our using them, on the grounds that he deemed them strictly private papers. This, to our minds, was the right course to follow in such a case. Whether the Rev. Mr. Clifford's is the honourable line of conduct, the public will judge.

The next point our opponent takes up is the authority of Pinkerton and Faber in the matter of the antiquity of the Saxons and their descent from Cush, the son of Ham. Our objections to Pinkerton and Faber, already urged, are not traversed by Mr. Clifford, but he simply states again, that "their evidence is conclusive" (page 7). The matter is, therefore, for the public to decide, and their verdict, we think, has already been given—against Mr. Clifford's views.

Whether Ham was cursed by Noah or not, is Mr. Clifford's chief topic in the early part of his new pamphlet. He strives hard to show, from Jewish writings, from the Septuagint, by reference to Gen. ix. 24, and from Josephus's Jewish Antiq. i. vi. § 3, that Ham was not the cursed one at all, but Noah's "little son;" in other words, his grandson Canaan (the son of Ham) was the sole offender, and was, therefore, the only one cursed (page 9). This is what Mr. Clifford very earnestly presses on us (rejecting Josephus's account of the facts), because he is wedded to Pinkerton's and Faber's view, that we British have black blood—African Ham's blood—in us; and it will not do to allow that the British are "cursed," that Ham was "cursed," and that, therefore, Ham committed the offence at all mentioned in Gen. ix. 24—27. The offence is charged by Mr. Clifford on the "little son" Canaan. He, therefore, is selected for the curse, and, consequently, the Canaanite became the "invaded and subdued one, and, we suppose, "the servant of servants" to his brethren Cush, Mizraim, and Phut (Gen. ix. 25).

Our only objection to all this is THAT IT IS DIRECTLY CONTRADICTED BY GOD'S WORD! Mr. Clifford does not quote, and carefully abstains from quoting, verse 22. There it is distinctly stated that "Ham, the father of Canaan," committed the offence for which the curse was pronounced. Verse 24 tells us when Noah recovered from his drunkenness, he knew then what his "younger son" had done to him. Not a hint that the grandson was guilty. If this was not Ham, then certainly there was no previous mention of the "little son Canaan" to connect him with the crime. The land of Ham has ever since (true to the curse) been the land of the slaves, "the servant of servants," which is just what the land of Canaan never was, never has been. We have further, this argument which Mr. Edwin Cox, of Bristol, has just brought to our notice. Of the three sons of Noah, Shem and Japheth alone were blessed of their father. Ham was cut off without a blessing. THEREFORE, ipso facto, like Esau similarly treated, Ham was the cursed one!

We do not see that Mr. Clifford has improved his position one iota by his new pamphlet, and had we been his friend when he proposed to write it, we should have urged him, for his own sake, to desist.

Digitized by Google

We have a curious argument advanced by Mr. Clifford at pages 12, 13, and 14 of his pamphlet in regard to the wife of Joseph, the mother of Ephraim and Manasseh. He argues that if we be Israelites, as we allege, because descended from "our chief object of glory, Joseph and his two sons," (!) we can only claim to be "half castes between Joseph and his Hamitic wife." Our Lord's genealogy by this reasoning was also clearly vitiated by intermediate alliances with a Canaanitish woman, Rahab; also by one with Ruth, a Moabitess, "as if God would pour contempt on all the pride of national genealogy and ancestry" (page 13). This seems to our "lay" comprehension a remarkable sentiment to come from the pen of a learned divine instructed in God's Word. We read in our Bibles that our Lord "sprang from Judah" as a matter beyond all cavil (Heb. vii. 14), and the genealogies of our Lord were most carefully preserved, as Matt. i. and Luke iii. prove to us, because it was to be shewn thereby, beyond all doubt, that the prophecies were true, and that from Judah, Jacob, Isaac, Abraham, and Adam, He really sprung. When the genealogies were recorded by Matthew (i. 5), it is obvious that the Gentile crossing of the race twice even in the line of the Son of Man, made in the sight of God no difference in the purity of His lineage, SINCE IT WAS COUNTED ON THE FATHER'S SIDE (as was also argued by Mr. Cox); and, therefore, Mr. Clifford has made but a poor point when he jeers at us as "half castes," because one of the sons of Jacob was married to an Egyptian lady.

We wonder, again, that Mr. Clifford has been so ill-advised as to bring forward such an argument as this at all—one so very unworthy of his case and of his position as a minister of the Word of God. No doubt our opponent intended this part of his rejoinder to be very crushing, but it seems to us to be disastrous to himself, since it can be used by the infidel to prove that our Lord's descent from Judah was not pure, that He was what Mr. Clifford calls us (proh pudor!), and that the Tribes of Israel also cannot, if he be right, be deemed to be purely Semitic, since they must, as regards two of their Tribes, have been a half caste Hamitic race. But God "dwelt in their tents," as even Mr. Clifford will not dare to deny; and to Joseph and to his House was given the high honour of even the Hebrew birthright" (1 Chron. v. 1). Hence neither Joseph, nor Ephraim, nor Manasseh, could have had any stain of the cursed Hamitic blood in them in God's sight, in spite of their Asenathic maternal origin — considerations these, which bring all Mr. Clifford's little triumphs, at our expense, down into the very dust at once, to his own discredit. We leave the Rev. B. W. Savile, the Rev. H. Marriott, and H. S., to defend themselves if they think the matter worth their efforts.

We cannot conclude our notice of Mr. Clifford's new attempt to support a failing cause without adverting to the fact that our opponent, after lavishing on us the choice words of evil which will be found at page 36 of his first pamphlet, wherein he asks, "if these men are not blasphemers?" calls us "anti-Christ," "the mystery of iniquity," and likens the enormity of our case to the sin-stained condition of Korah, Dathan, and Abiram, now innocently turns the tables on us, and tells us that his long experience of controversy has taught him this, "that when arguments fail, the repulsed and conquered invariably resort to the free use of improper language, which always shows the weakness of a cause."

This is the "tu quoque" argument with a vengeance! and the public must decide on which side the blame attaches in the present matter, whether on that of a Christian divine of 75 summers, who, unprovoked, calls clergymen and laymen alike by names which certainly no mere human fallible creature is authorised to use in denouncing his fellow-sinners, or on ourselves, who, defending ourselves and a just and holy cause from unmerited and grave censure, reply in terms which, if strong, are, we have considered, within the limits which Christian courtesy requires.

In regard to our own remarks on Mr. Clifford's first pamphlet, which our readers should re-peruse, on page 203 of the BANNER, the second pamphlet (repeating Mr. Clifford's habit of inaccuracy) makes us say that "we thanked him for the unchristian, violent tone," &c. (see page 16). What we really said, and not what Mr. Clifford imagines we published, ought, in all rectitude, to have been quoted. What we said was this, and we see nothing "intemperate" in the words. Speaking of the rev. author's undeniable "violence against us personally as likely to spread our cause, while we disdained to imitate his example," we added, "We thank him, therefore, for the character of his present attack; and pointing to the unchristian, violent tone of the latter portion of his work, we ask our readers candidly, and his own parishioners and congregation in particular, if they will be led by one who so clearly is blinded by his own prejudices?" &c.

With the personal part of this controversy we have now done, and shall not re-open it. We merely, in conclusion, repeat what is patent to all men, that Mr. Clifford has not even now touched so much as ONE of the PRINCIPLES on which our Identity is based, and has not considered, nor accounted for the fact, that we British possess (as he cannot deny) ALL GOD'S PROMISES TO ABRAHAM AND HIS SEED FOR EVER." Having those, we either must be Abraham's literal seed, and are right, in gratitude to God, to acknowledge the fact, or God is unmindful of His oaths, covenants, and promises "to Abraham and his seed for ever," and hence the infidel's horrid arguments must prevail, which God forbid. Let Mr. Clifford tell us which it is to be.

NOTE.—At page 6 of his pamphlet, Mr. Clifford says Ham was the second son of Noah, not the "younger," because he is always placed second in the list—e.g. gr., SHEM, HAM, JAPHETH. By parity of reasoning, Japheth was the youngest. But in Gen. x. 21 (which, we conclude, Mr. Clifford overlooked) Japheth is declared to be "the elder." He was then at once the youngest and the elder brother, which is absurd! We prefer, then, to trust the Bible, and not to Mr. Clifford; therefore we believe Ham was the "younger son" of Noah, as the Bible declares, and we thus have another cause for rejecting the fallacious reasonings of our mistaken rev. opponent.

The Anglo-Israel Theory. By D. A. Onslow. Charing Cross Magazine, July No., vol. vi., page 655.

WE beg to draw the attention of our readers to the first of a series of remarkable papers which Mr. D. A. Onslow is contributing to the pages of the Charing Cross Magazine, the Editor of which serial is understood to sympathise with our views. Mr. Onslow's first paper is full of promise for an able and powerful vindication of our Israelite contention. We hope our friends will largely peruse his arguments. We like the two fundamental principles on which he proposes to conduct his inquiry—namely, Hooker's famous canon that the "most infallible rule in Scriptural exposition is, that where a literal construction will stand—the furthest from the letter is commonly the worst"—and next, Sir Isaac Newton's rule that "Old Testament prophecies were given not to enable men to prophesy or foreknow things, but that after they were fulfilled, the predictions might be interpreted by the events"—thus conducing to God's glory, and not man's. Mr. Onslow in his first paper establishes two or three points very well, thus clearing the ground. He proves—1st, the literal fulfilment of prophecy in very many instances, thus showing the inherent probability that the prophecies in favour of Israel will certainly be fulfilled. 2nd, that Israel and Judah are clearly distinguished in God's Word; and 3rd, that the "Ten Tribes" are what so many now strangely deny—namely, "Lost." We are very favourably impressed by Mr. Onslow's commencement; and foresee that he will make the Charing Cross Magazine popular among Israelites by his advocacy in it of our most righteous cause.

Digitized by Google

FOR GOOD OR EVIL?

By Thomas Bales.

The Identity is gaining many converts, and is no longer the subject for a jest. Its opponents full often entirely misunderstood it, and consequently misrepresented it; but now its points are more fully known, its Scriptural and historical correctness is fully admitted by candid students. All regard it seriously. The time for ridicule has passed. It is firmly established in the land—deeply rooted in the hearts of Christian men and women. It is a power for Christ, quickening faith, and preparing the way for the salvation of souls. It takes the sinner to the foot of the cross, points him to the dying Saviour, and tells him of redemption, without which outcast Israel must have been undone for ever. The faithfulness of God, and the Saviour's love, are its unfailing themes; and in the troublous days its advocates will be the stoutest soldiers of the cross.

Some, even now, understand it very imperfectly, and speak of it in terms unbecoming Christian men, asserting that its influence is for EVIL. Their remarks, well meant or ill, have not retarded the Identity; rather have they been over-ruled to further it, and establish it more firmly on its Scriptural basis. They have caused, and are still causing, a closer, deeper study of the Bible, and, day by day, God's Word comes forth clearer still and brighter. Fresh confirmations start from every line, rendering the truth of the Identity irresistible. Harsh criticism has but made it strike its roots more deeply, so that if its growth has not been tropical, it has at least been sturdy as that of the forest king. And wherein lies its alleged EVIL influence? Cherished by the pious, received by the thoughtful, respected even by the profane, its heavenly origin is manifest. It does not set aside the Saviour, as some maliciously affirm; it bids every heart be lifted up to Him in thankfulness and prayer. It is His witness. He is our God, and we are His people Israel. And is it not a fact that all are bidden every week, in these pages, to continue constant in prayer, calling upon His name, and watching for His advent? If this be EVIL, what is GOOD?

There is, however, one danger in connection with the Identity—the danger of accepting it SOLELY on patriotic grounds. This has been strongly condemned by the BANNER and its able editor; but it is nevertheless requisite to mention it once more. Englishmen are essentially patriotic, and the Identity is, in the very highest sense of the word, a patriotic subject. But it is more. Its application is intensely spiritual. It appeals to the heart of man. It goes direct to his nobler self, and tends to bring him to his God. Gratitude for mercies received often leads to repentance for sins committed; and the object of the Identity is not merely to identify Britons with "the lost sheep of the House of Israel," but to proclaim the abounding love of God for His people, rebellious and rejected though they were, to proclaim the priceless preciousness of the atonement, whereby, repentant and believing, they were received into covenant favour, and have realised the prophets' glowing words, and our duty, as Israel, the once rejected and now so highly blessed, to ever pray to Him for grace to glorify His holy name, to do His holy will, and to walk before Him in sweet humility and trust.

This is real patriotism. Earthly glory will fade away, and national pride grow dim, before the dazzling splendour of the nation's answered prayer. Great as our temporal blessings are, and thankful for them as we ought to be, the spiritual blessings to be conferred upon us are to be preferred, and should be remembered on our knees. Moreover, glory's lustre is chiefly shed on a prayerful nation; a patriot should, therefore, be a man of prayer. Do we desire spiritual blessings? The Spirit's blessings are bestowed on a praying people. Temporal? The nation's weal responds to the throb of the nation's heart. Thus, then, whether spiritual blessings are desired, or temporal, the national heart must be attuned to prayer. To be a citizen of a world-wide empire is no mean boast, but it is to be distinctly understood that the Identity rebukes a vain-glorious patriotism. Its advocates have no insane desire to sing "Rule Britannia" amid creation's wreck. Their's a loftier desire—to see Israel "the righteous people." For this they pray; for this they work.

And here I would most strongly enforce the necessity of prayer and work on the part of those accepting the Identity; prayer for strength to work, and for a blessing on their work; and work, because the harvest is ripe, and "the labourers are few."

The Identity is either known well or not well known. To be a passive believer in it is to shirk one's duty, "to praise and to publish" being the mission of every believer. The Identity does not leave a man as it found him. Once irresponsible, he is so no longer. From the time the Identity seizes his mind, and enters his soul, he is a minister, a witness for Christ. Every man, then, according to his ability, must labour for the Master, both in public and in private. The day is far spent, the evening is drawing nigh, and the work to be performed is great. Wherever Anglo-Israel, or kindred associations are formed, an earnest band of Christian workers are called into active existence; and these all testify to the Saviour's finished work, and publish the glad tidings of redemption to all within their reach. The Identity ennobles life by kindling the desire of magnifying the Holy One of Israel, by inciting Christians to prove worthy of their Captain, and by drawing forth life's best energies for the extension of His kingdom. The influence of the Identity is felt in every branch of Christian work. Its hope, its end, its aim, its joy, is Christ crucified—yea, rather, Christ exalted in majesty on high. Whatever it advocates, or causes to be done, is that "God in all things may be glorified through Jesus Christ, to whom be praise and dominion for ever and ever." For good, therefore, or for evil?

HOW THE TRUTH PREVAILS.

A PERSONAL NARRATIVE

By William Mellor.

Some twelve months ago I saw a copy of the BANNER on a railway book-stall, and under the impression that it was a Jewish publication, I purchased it, thinking to relieve the tediousness of a long journey with some of the thoughts that were interesting the minds of those of God's ancient people who are sojourning amongst us. It was fortunate that when I opened the paper that bookstall was many miles in the rear of an express train, for my first feeling was one of anger. There was no help for it, I must read this paper or nothing. However, this feeling of anger was soon replaced by one of amusement. Surely, I thought, it must be written by a lunatic for a constituency of imbeciles; and when I saw the Pyramid introduced gravely as an important witness in favour of this newest "craze," a vision of Mark Twain being hauled to the summit and bumped down again to the surrounding sand, caused me to fairly roar! In this mood I subsequently bought another one, and then another, until I found myself positively going miles out of my way to visit this particular station in quest of a BANNER, and then asking for it in the same subdued tone a youth employs in asking for his first half-ounce of tobacco! I was often disappointed. I had begun to perceive that there was some "method in this madness," and that the argument was from Scripture; and, more surprising still, to the point. The BANNER in one hand and the Bible in the other, I became so interested that I arranged with our village bookseller to get me a copy weekly; and yet notwithstanding the flood of light thrown around the most obscure portion of the sacred writing by this interpretation, it has required much prayerful study to bring home to my mind the glorious truth of the Identity of my people with the Lost Ten Tribes! The apparent heterogeneous mixture of British, Roman, Saxon, Danish, and possibly Norman blood, was only one of many stumbling blocks I found in my way; but now I bless and praise the Holy One of Israel each day that I can join in the cry, "We have Abraham to our father." There is a new joy in the old Book; a new hope in the heart of an English Christian, which shines like a bright morning star amid the ever-deepening gloom of commercial depression, cheering a jaded and wearied spirit with the rich promise, "And at eventide it shall be light!" I am your debtor before the throne, and pray for you, and send you this word of greeting from a thankful heart.

Digitized by Google

Castleton, viâ Manchester, July 12th, 1879.

"BEAUTY" AND "BANDS."

PART I.

AT a crowded monthly meeting of the Bristol and Clifton Israel's Identification Association, held in the Victoria Rooms, on the 27th June, 1879, we were gratified by hearing two addresses on the subject of those two mysterious names mentioned in Zech. xi. 10—14, by Commander L. G. A. Roberts, R.N., and Mr. Edwin Cox, respectively. The latter spoke on the subject of the Lord's second "Staff, Bands;" the former on His "Staff, Beauty."

The views put forward were, we think, original and valuable, and they shall, therefore, find a place in the BANNER OF ISRAEL. On the subject of "Bands," or "Binders," Mr. Cox pointed out most truly that before our views on the Identity were published, no commentator had succeeded in explaining, on any rational principles, why God should have broken the brotherhood between Judah and Israel at a period of time which synchronised with the betrayal of our Lord by Judas Iscariot, with his casting the 30 pieces of silver down in the Temple, and with the purchase with the same of the potter's field (Zech. xi. 13; Matt. xxvi. 15, xxvii. 3—10). On our opponents' principles the Houses of Judah and Israel were in union at that time, and both Houses immediately afterwards took part in the crucifixon of the Lord. No separation, actual or figurative, therefore, can be held to have occurred after Judas's treacherous act, and before the final scene on Calvary, from the opponents' point of view; for they never tire of telling us that the House of Israel was equally guilty with Judah of the murder of our blessed Lord, and is equally joined with Judah now in the punishment of dispersion, and in the curses which accompany it to-day. But Zech. xi. 14 stands on record to confront them! God, who cannot lie, tells us that after Judas Iscariot betrayed the Lord, "Then (mark the chronological indication 'THEN') I cut asunder Mine OTHER staff, even Bands, that I might break the brotherhood between Judah and Israel." The "Brotherhood," therefore, was severed before the last act of the crucifixion, and whatever the sentence means, there was no complicity of guilt between Judah and Israel at Cavalry, for previously the "Brotherhood" was broken. But what does it mean? The Identity comes grandly to our help here and tells us. What no one else without that light can explain, the light of the Identity reveals and tells us most plainly. And it is this:—When the Jews stood before Pilate, at the last scene, they cried, "His blood be ON US AND ON OUR CHILDREN" (Matt. xxvii. 25). Their doom was self-pronounced; and on the Jews, as such, "the wrath came henceforth to the uttermost" (1 Thess. ii. 16). The brotherhood between them and Israel, existing up to that moment, representatively through Benjamin, and through such of the Ten Tribes as might have, since the Babylonian captivity, returned to Judah, was then and there, by God's arrangements, as declared by Zech. xi. 14, "broken," and Israel was not, therefore, particeps criminis in the last horrid deed which sealed Judah's separate doom! Here, then, is one more proof of the God-made distinction between Judah and Israel—one more evidence derived from God's own Word that Israel was not guilty of Judah's crime in regard to the Lord's death, is not now under the same curse for the crime, and therefore must be apart and separate from Judah, since God declared that "Then He would cut asunder His other staff, even 'Bands,' that He might break the brotherhood between Judah and Israel." Henceforth there was to be no brotherhood of any kind between the two Houses. Then our opponents, who maintain that there is such brotherhood now, are contradicted by God's Word, and of this prediction they can make nothing, they can explain nothing, and they leave it accordingly to expound itself, because they are utterly unable to tell us what the words can possibly mean.

Why God should have resolved to break the brotherhood between the two Houses when He did, we reserve to our next, when we shall again place before our readers Mr. Cox's view of the subject.

The second speaker, Commander Roberts, R.N., addressed the meeting on the words referred to in Zech. xi. 10. He read the passage, which is as follows:—"And I took My staff, even Beauty, and cut it asunder, that I might break My covenant that I had made with all the people." It was a covenant once made with all the seed of Abraham. In Zechariah's time the House of Israel had been outcasted, and there was left then under the covenants of Jehovah only the House of Judah, which contained the representative Tribe of Benjamin, to answer for the outcast, uncovenanted, Lo-Ammi race, far away, at that period, in Media. The staff Beauty, the speaker thought, was meant to represent the House of Judah—composed of Judah, Levi, and Benjamin, which had gone to Babylon in punishment for its national sins. But just when that House was banished, what said Jeremiah in chapter xxiv. as to the constitution of that House? It was of a composite character, like the basket of "very good figs," just ripe, and like the basket of "naughty figs which could not be eaten they were so bad." "Figs, good figs, very good, and the evil very evil that cannot be eaten, they are so evil" (verses 2, 3). When the Lord, then, banished Judah to Babylon, He broke there the staff Beauty, and thus cut asunder the covenant He had made with all the people, leaving the "good figs" still under covenant in Babylon, when the return took place, but the evil, vile, and refuse figs to return to the land, a base kingdom "without a king, without a prince, without a sacrifice, without an image, without an ephod, without teraphim" (Hosea iii. 4), destined to wander, dispersed to the ends of the earth, waiting that time when, at last, Deut. xxxiii. 7, and Micah v. 3, shall be fulfilled, when the Lord "shall hear the voice of Judah, and bring him unto his people"—when, after Ephraim's "multitude of nations" shall be born, "the remnant shall return unto the children of Israel." The speaker pointed out that the Jews of the returning captivity were a degenerate, unhappy people, unblessed, uncovenanted by their God, always in wars, in insurrections, in turmoils, and in troubles after their return to their land; unhappy and wretched beyond all conception during and after the time of Antiochus Epiphanes in the second century B.C. They were then in the condition of that portion of the chosen people whose covenant (made with all the people) God had, during the captivity, broken with them by the cutting asunder in Babylon of the "staff" called "Beauty," the "good figs" being left there to follow probably the fortunes of Israel of the Ten Tribes in the lands where God would yet be to them as though He had not cast them off—a little sanctuary in the lands were they should come, free at any rate from the awful crime in which the uncovenanted evil figs would be disastrously overwhelmed, when they put to death the Lord of glory, and involved themselves in the fearful curse yet following them, which they invoked when they cried, "His blood be on us and on our children!"

Digitized by Google

(To be continued).

"BE NOT ANGRY WITH US FOR EVER!"

We have had a thought sent us by our good friend L. P. which we pass on to our readers because we think that our special function is to receive and re-produce, pro bono publico, all original or striking ideas and views as they bear upon the subject to which our efforts are devoted—namely, "the proof that the British are the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel." The thought is this: In the liturgy of the Church of England British Christians are nationally taught and directed to use, as a part of their beautiful litany, the prayer, "Spare Thy people, whom Thou hast redeemed with Thy most precious blood, AND be not angry with us for ever." Now here in this short prayer, offered by the minister for the people, are several remarkable sentiments. In the first place, the British Christians, for whom the words are meant, are termed God's "people"—His Ammi—distinctly a name of Israel. That people are described as those "redeemed" with "the most precious blood" of Jesus the Son of God. "The redeemed ones" must, therefore, perforce be Israel, and not really Gentiles, since nowhere in Scripture is any Gentile people described as "re-deemed," or "bought back." The Gentiles never having been God's people, and "lost" as such, cannot be "bought BACK." They may be, and are described as "saved," but "redeemed" nationally—never! Wherever the "redemption" of a people is mentioned, we find, and our readers will find too, the objects "redeemed" are those belonging to God—"His people," therefore Israel, but never a Gentile race.

Lastly, though "His people" are admitted to be "redeemed with the most precious blood of the Lord Jesus," He is requested by those His same people, on their bended knees, "Not to be angry with them for ever!" "How could that apply," asks L. P., "to converted Christians of all nations? For any one who is truly converted, and knows he is redeemed by the precious blood, knows also that all anger in God's mind is quenched, and that by the holy stream of the precious offering." It is evident, therefore, to L. P. that this prayer is not one intended for the Christian Church universal, at any rate! It does not apply to them, for THEY have no need to dread as "redeemed" men and women, washed by the precious sacrifice of the blood of God, that He will be angry with them at all, much less "for ever." Referring the prayer, however, to Israel, the outcast nation who are redeemed with the precious blood, bought back from Satan's slavery into God's freedom by the death of their daysman, they are free indeed, and can rejoice nationally in their deliverance. But it is not complete. They are still outcasts from home and fatherland. They have yet, according to the promise, to be restored to their "inheritance" in the Holy Land. Their prayer is, therefore, the prayer of faithful Israel of old in Isaiah lxiii. 17: "Return, for Thy servant's sake, the Tribes of Thine inheritance. The people of Thy holiness have possessed it but a little while. Our enemies have trodden down Thy sanctuary. We are Thine: Thou never barest rule over them! They were not called by Thy name!" Hence, we modern Israelites are told to cry now, even as a spiritually redeemed, sanctified, saved people, for the temporal blessing promised, which, granted, will show us, and all the world besides, that the last vestige of the Divine wrath against our race nationally is dissipated and gone; and hence we pray, "Be not angry with us for ever!" We like the view thus put before us by L. P., and trust it will be acceptable also to the "many" readers of the BANNER.

PROGRESS IN HASTINGS AND ST. LEONARDS.

We are glad to report that the Rev. George Hodges, M.A., Vicar of St. Andrew's parish, Hastings, has joined the Hastings and St. Leonard's Anglo-Israel Association as a member of it. He will, it is hoped, accept the office of chaplain of the society, and thus wisely do what we think all our clergy would be acting judiciously if they would follow out—namely, take the young and rising movement under their patronage and guidance, as our natural spiritual leaders, the honoured ministers of the established religion of Israel. We congratulate our Hastings and St. Leonard's friends in their energetic intelligent president, in their committee, and in their two associations. We are quite sure they will grow strong and spread abroad; and we trust the presence of the Rev. Mr. Hodges at their meetings will do for them what that of the Rev. Mr. Hickson does so often for those held in Bristol and Clifton—namely, solemnise the discussions, give them a good and a Christian direction, check all tendencies to wandering into the dangerous bypaths of speculative imaginations, and finally, by their knowledge, ripe experience, and linguistic gifts as the clergy of our people, lead to valuable discoveries, and to new light upon difficult portions of Scripture, resulting in fresh Identity information, as well as in the advance of the knowledge of the true meaning of "God's Word written."

We have to add that the Hastings and St. Leonard's Associations have adopted some excellent rules, and commenced their operations with a president (Col. Larkins), a treasurer, two honorary secretaries, a committee of five, a chaplain (we hope) in the Rev. George Hodges, and at least 27 members, as the result of the first two meetings. This Association means "work," and we feel sure they will not rest until all the neighbouring towns and villages have similar societies formed in them, after strong bodies of Israelite believers have been first established in each by their efforts made, in conformity with Jer. xxxi. 7. We wish them all from Bristol, "God-speed," and great success in their labours of love for the Lord.

IS THIS THE 1879TH OR 1880TH YEAR OF OUR LORD?

A SINGULAR controversy has arisen among some friends of Great Pyramid investigations, and it is this: Whether the current year is the 1879th year of our Lord or the 1880th? Whether, in short, the first twelve months after our Lord was born, was called A.D. 0, and the January 1st next following A.D. 1, or whether the former was in truth A.D. 1, and the January 1st next succeeding A.D. 2. Those friends who adopt the first (and we affirm the incorrect view) assert that by "grand gallery chronology 1878·388, means A.D. May 26, 1878, but not May 26, 1879. For" (such allege) "the expression 1878·388 means 1878 completed years, and ·388 of the next year; and since the year 1878 was completed on December, 1877, when 1877 years + 12 months expired, 1878 really began on January 1st, 1878, which was the 1879th of our Lord." To answer this, one of our best exponents, the Rev. C. W. Hickson, stated as follows:—

"The mistake arises when it is asserted that the year A.D. 1879 is not the 1879th year of our Lord's (commonly received) era, but the 1880th really. For if our opponents call A.D. (x—1) really the xth year of our Lord, then the actual first year of our Lord was the year A.D. 0. But chronology knows nothing of any such year as A.D. 0. A.D. 0 would mean the dividing point of time between December 31st of the year B.C. 1 (or A.U.C. 753), and January 1st of A.D. 1 (or A.U.C. 754). If between B.C. 1 and A.D. 1 there had been a whole year which chronologers agreed to call A.D. 0, that year really being the 1st year of our Lord, then our opponents would be right in saying that A.D. 1 was really the 2nd year of our Lord, A.D. 2 was really the 3rd, and so on; and therefore A.D. 1879 would be in that case truly the 1880th year of our Lord. A.D. 0 denotes the birth of our Lord, or ought to do so; A.D. 1, His first year; A.D. 2, His second year; and A.D. 1879 is truly His 1879th year, but not His 1880th."

Digitized by Google

So far Mr. Hickson. A friend to whom this very important matter presented a serious difficulty, since it seemed to throw all Great Pyramid dates, such as 1881·6, 1878·4, &c., &c., one year too far forward, resolved to submit the whole question to the very competent decision of the Rev. W. B. Galloway, M.A., Vicar of St. Mark's, Regent's Park, London. His reply we quote by permission, as follows :—

"Beyond all doubt the meaning of the reckoning of the years of the Christian era is that this is the 1879th current and not completed. In the common reckoning of A.D. 1 and B.C. 1, the latter, B.C. 1, ended on the day before A.D. 1. So that in summing the years B.C. and A.D., an allowance must be made for this, by deducting a year from the sum. Astronomers manage this in a different way. They count the year A.D. 1 as the year 1, but the year B.C. 1 they call the year 0, and the B.C. 2 they call the year—1; the year B.C. 3 the year —2. The reason of this mode of notation is obvious, because the year B.C. 1, in its currency, was not a whole year before the beginning of A.D. 1.

"I have most thoroughly examined the evidence, and entertain no shadow of doubt that our blessed Lord was born just about three months before our reckoning of the Christian era. The ancient patriarchal reckoning of the years was not from midwinter, but from the autumnal equinox. If we adhered to that mode of reckoning, and thus counted A.D., as beginning its currency three months earlier —namely, from the autumnal equinox, then the Christian era would be perfectly correct. But as we reckon from the 1st of Jan. (which in any case is later even than the common reckoning of the Nativity), then we must say the year B.C. 1 was still current at the the date of the Nativity. And in point of fact, Christ was born on or about St. Michael's Day, B.C. 1, or according to the astronomers in the year 0."

The above is quite satisfactory to ourselves, and has also satisfied a valued friend who for some time doubted whether, after all, the Great Pyramid date 1881·6 did not really mean August, A.D. 1881 —and not, as hitherto received by Identity believers, A.D. 1882. He now thinks as we do, and also "sees" that the Pyramid date 1881·6 means really August, 1882.

July, 1879.

Correspondence.

ONE "ALMOST PERSUADED."

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

SIR,—The Anglo-Israel controversy interests me so greatly that I trust you will excuse a few words from me, whether or no you think them worthy of further notice.

While I deem it impossible to prove demonstrably that your theory is true, I am struck with the repeated failures of those who would prove it to be false. Leaving out of consideration the many (to say the least) very close coincidences between the promises to Israel in the latter day, and the present character, and power, and apparent mission of the English, your opponents harp and harp upon the one string of historical obscurity, and when they have talked of old Herodotus and some moderns, such as Sharon Turner, and Faber, and the positive and passionate Pinkerton (like men whose research lies no deeper than some Encyclopœdia article), they think they have succeeded to a marvel by discovering that the Scythian Tribes were in existence long before Israel's captivity, or that Israel when carried captive were not recorded to have travelled in our direction, or could not have immediately been perverted from worshippers of the true God to a state of utter Paganism. They ignore the fact that for idolatry God banished them. They assume the supposititious necessity that to have migrated hitherward with the Scythian or Gothic races, they must themselves have been Scythians or Goths! It does not appear to enter into their narrow conceptions of possibility that one race could have been so merged into another as that their distinctiveness should be unrecognised for ages. See, say they, how the Anglo-Israel theorists talk of the present mixed race of Anglo-Saxons as if we were all pure Jews! Could anything be more ignorant than thus to confound Judah and Israel, whom God hath put asunder for ages? anything more crass than not to know the well-worn fact that Normans, and Danes, and Saxons, and Scots, were all originally of the same stock? We shall some day be told that because the Nile, with its affluents, runs into the Mediterranean, and is afterwards utterly indistinguishable from it, that God Himself cannot, if He would, both know and separate its waters. A very mixed race may have among it, even in considerable proportion, a people known to the Lord as of comparatively pure blood. I have never seen an historical argument to disprove the mergence of the Ten Tribes of Israel into the races which became a terror to civilised and Pagan Europe.

Your opponents succeed in showing some historical difficulty, and at once proceed to crow "Victory" in the most extraordinary manner. Or they peck about and pick up a few husks of questionable interpretations of Scripture (I confess I think them accommodations but too often), and then clap their wings as if they had got some inches below the surface!

Especially do I observe that men of the type of formerly popular clergy, and who would fain be the prohibitive popes of the inquiring minds among their congregations, delight in finding some straw-like error which floats upon the stream, and then do they rush incontinently into print, and appear to be infatuated with the notion that they could write the "3,000 proverbs!" Your "notion" was not theirs originally! You are a layman, and seem to have no right to learning, no title to acumen! If your interpretation of a Messianic passage be possibly rash, it is in their eyes and passionate pronunciation, blasphemy! They may have egregiously erred in their own pulpits, professing to be interpreters (save the mark) of prophecy, and you may not say a syllable of disapproval, but if you adopt a second sense of Scripture while not denying theirs—O the clamour! It reminds me of what Addison somewhere says of "little great men," as being of all men most disagreeable. One cannot doubt their piety, but piety and prejudice are by no means incompatible.

If, sir, these well-meaning and amiable individuals would take your strong points of parallelism between England and the promises to Israel, and grapple with these, and throw them on their backs, I should be more disposed to think favourably of their learning and their logic, as well as of their real depth and candour of inquiry.

Pardon me if my long letter is too long. You have, at any rate, the comfort of knowing that you need not print it, even if you have patience to read it thus far.

Yours faithfully,

June 26. P. Q. R.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

SIR,—In the Rock of June 20th, 1879, the number containing a well-merited rebuke to the extraordinary language of Mr. Hine's correspondent, I came upon the following, which is so pertinent to your last week's leader on the "Gift of the Gates," that I cannot refrain from sending it you, in case it should otherwise escape your eye :—

"An Inquirer" says: "Your contemporary, the Christian, published in March a report of an address by the Rev. Mr. Pelham Stokes, in the course of which he said 'he had recently met a friend, an officer in our army, who mentioned to him that some of the staff at the Horse Guards had at a conference with the Duke of Cambridge been looking at an old map there—or at the War Office—and discussing where the next great battle would be fought, and the officers shuddered on finding the name of the place was Armageddon!' Can you or any of your readers say what this old map is likely to be, and if they have ever seen one with such a name laid down and authenticated? Of course, Mr. Pelham Stokes's name is a sufficient guarantee for the truth of the facts."

Perhaps others than the readers of the Rock and Christian World may have somewhat to say to this.

Your obedient servant,

T. B.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—I send herewith extract from a letter received from a friend in Australia, to whom I have sent the BANNER OF ISRAEL since its commencement.

A. G.

Liverpool, April 18, 1879.

Extract from a letter from Broughton's Creek, near Sydney, February 18, 1879 :—"John Black delivered a lecture on the Identity at 'Kiama,' before the members of the Protestant Alliance, of which he is a member. They passed a vote to have him give it in public for the benefit of the Wollingong Hospital. The result is, he has been called on to give it at Gerringong, Gamberoe, and Shoalhaven. I believe it is an excellent lecture: all the rev. gentlemen in Kiama speak highly of it. From them there has not been a word of opposition, although many express themselves taken by surprise."

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements

(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O O payable at Ludgate-circus.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed :—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

BANNER FREE CIRCULATION FUND.

Donations, applications for grants, to be addressed to R. Fergusson Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London.

NEW BOOKS.

NEW PAMPHLET ON OUR IDENTITY.

NOW READY, price 9d., post free, 10d.

ARE WE ISRAELITES? THE TESTIMONY OF HISTORY, PHILOLOGY, AND ETHNOLOGY on the Subject. By the Rev. BOURCHIER WREY SAVILE, M.A., Rector of Shillingford, Exeter. With an Introduction by Philo-Israel.

Contents.

Chapter I.—Hard Speeches.
" II.—Opponents' Arguments.
" III.—Common Errors.
" IV.—The Sacre.
" V.—The Cymry.
" VI.—Historical Testimony.
" VII.—Philology.
" VIII.—Chief of the Nations.
" IX.—Multiplicity of Seed.
" X.—The Anglo-Saxon Race.
" XI.—Anglo-Israel.
" XII.—Summary.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row; Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; or of any Bookseller.

ARE ENGLISHMEN ISRAELITES?

MR. ROBERTS REFUTED.

REPLY TO MR. ROBERTS.

Now ready, price 2d.

A REPLY TO MR. ROBERTS ON THE EXETER HALL DEBATE, on the Subject, Are Englishmen Israelites? By ALEXANDER DUNN.

A REPLY TO MR. ROBERTS will be sent post free for 2½d., from the publisher, W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

A REPLY TO MR. ROBERTS may be had, by ordering, of any Bookseller in town or country.

London: Published by W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

A NEW WORK ON THE IDENTITY.

THE PROMISES TO ABRAHAM, with Select References and Explanatory Notes, to which is added an article entitled, "Israel Among the Gentiles."

The aim of this Pamphlet is to present the Scriptural Argument in a new and concise form, both for examination and reference.

Price Sixpence, or free by post, Sevenpence. May be had of the Author, W. S. Cavill, Norton Woodside, near Sheffield; or of Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.; and of all Booksellers.

Price 4d.; post free, 6d.

NEBUCHADNEZZAR'S DREAM and THE BRITISH EMPIRE. By Ephraim. With Illustrative Prophetic Map.

"We are glad to see another attempt to connect Daniel's dream of the metallic image and "the stone which becomes a mountain," with the British Empire. It appears in the form of a letter to a friend abroad. The pamphlet, though very sketchy in its character and aim, is on the whole a useful little work."—Banner of Israel.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; Sold by W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row

MISCELLANEOUS.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

Temporary Office:
20, WARWICK LANE, LONDON, E.C.

President:
VISCOUNT FOLKESTONE, M.P.

Vice-Presidents:
Admiral DUNN, Weston-Super-Mare.
Captain E. WEBSTER, Stirling.
Rev. A. J. J. CACHEMAILLE, M.A., Vicar of St. Mary's, Oldham.
Dr. J. M. GRANT, Surgeon-General, Camp, Aldershot.
Rev. C. W. HICKSON, M.A., Vicar of St. Bartholomew's, Bristol.
Rev. G. A. ROGERS, M.A., Vicar of Christ Church, Dover.
W. H. PETERS, Esq., J.P., Exeter.
BOOTH MASON, Esq., Arley House, Leamington.
J. H. WELDON, Esq., J.P., Killmallock, N.B.
HENRY LESLIE, Esq., Conduit-street, W.
Lieut.-Colonel W. H. LARKINS, Hastings.
JOHN T. GOTT, Esq., Stockton-on-Tees.

Chairman of Committee:
Mr. E. W. BIRD (PHILO-ISRAEL), Bristol.

Committee:
Major-General WM. HILL, Bath.
Lieut.-Colonel BENTINCK, Upper Grosvenor-street, W.
Capt. BAYLY, Streatham, S.W., and Trinity House, E.C.
Mr. JOHN S. ANDERSON, Upper Norwood, S.E.
Mr. ROBERT BANKS, London, E.C.
Mr. BENTINCK CANNEY, Lewisham, S.E.
Mr. FREDERICK CLIFT, B.A., LL.D., Upper Norwood, S.E.
Mr. FREDERICK C. DANVERS, C.E., India Office, W.
Mr. JOHN T. FLETCHER, J.P., C.L., Upper Norwood, S.E.
Rev. F. R. A. GLOVER, M.A., St. James, London, W.
Mr. H. L. GUERRIER, Tooting, S.W.
Mr. W. H. GUEST, London, E.C.
Mr. WILLIAM HASLAM, 2, Springfield, Clapton.
Mr. CHARLES HORNER, Moatlake, S.W.
Mr. W. W. INCE, Douglas, Isle of Man.
Mr. DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, J.P., St. John's-wood, N.W.
Mr. H. H. PAIN, Bromley, Kent, S.E.
Dr. HODSON RUGG, St. John's-wood, N.W.
Mr. J. L. WOOD, New Southgate, N.

Bankers:
CITY BANK, Ludgate-hill, E.C.

Hon. Sec.:
Rev. JAMES BILLINGTON, F.S.A.

This Association has been established to bind in closer union the many friends who rejoice in having a portion with the long Lost Tribes of the House of Israel; also to extend the knowledge of the truth that the Anglo-Saxon races are now identified with those Lost Tribes of the House of Israel. These objects, it is thought, will be best accomplished by means of Drawing Room and Public Meetings, by Sermons, Lectures, Bible Readings, by the diffusion of Literature upon the subject, and by such other ways and means as the Committee may from time to time determine.

Members' Annual Subscriptions is not less than 2s. 6d per annum.

Donations and Subscriptions are needed to carry on the work.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

PRESIDENT: VISCOUNT FOLKESTONE, M.P.

FRIENDS wishing for LECTURES on the important subject of "Britain's Identity with the Lost Tribes of Israel," by gentlemen of recognised position and ability, are requested to write for a Prospectus of Subjects and Lectures to the Hon. Secretary. Dates are now being filled for Yorkshire, Lancashire, Devon, Kent, and North Britain. The terms are such as involve no risk as to loss on the part of those friends inviting the Lecturers.

Office: 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London, E.C.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION. The FIRST ANNUAL REPORT, containing a verbatim account of the speeches delivered at Exeter Hall by Admiral Dunn, Philo-Israel, Rev. H. Newton, M.A., D. A. Onslow, Esq., J.P., W. H. Peters, Esq., J.P., Colonel Bentinck, Charles Stubbs, R.A., &c., &c., will be sent free on application to the Secretary.

Now Ready. Price 3d.

THE WIMBLEDON ANGLO-ISRAEL DEBATE. A verbatim Report of the Debate held at Emmanuel Church, Wimbledon, on Thursday, June 5th, 1879, containing the speeches delivered by Colonel Sandwith, Rev. Bourchier Wrey Savile, Rev. J. W. Wilkinson, Rev. C. W. Hickson, Mr. Frank White, Mr. Douglas A. Onslow, J.P., Rev. S. Garrett, Rev. F. R. A. Glover, and the Rev. H. E. Brook.

London: Issued by the "Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association;" and published by W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

PHOTOGRAPHIC PORTRAITS OF PHILO-ISRAEL, Editor of THE BANNER OF ISRAEL, Author of "The History of the House of Israel," &c., &c. Cabinet, 2s., post free; Carte-de-Visites, 1s., post free.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

BOOKS, ETC.

THE ANGLO-ISRAEL POSTBAG; OR, HOW ARTHUR CAME TO SEE IT.

THIRD EDITION of the ANGLO-ISRAEL POSTBAG; OR, HOW ARTHUR CAME TO SEE IT.

BY THE RIGHT REV.

BISHOP TITCOMB,

IS NOW READY. Two Editions are now published. The Eighteenpenny Edition, in Paper Covers, for general distribution. The Half-crown Edition, Printed on Toned Paper, Handsome Cloth Gilt.

THE ANGLO-ISRAEL POSTBAG contains Chapters on The Philological Difficulty—The Promises of God to the Hebrew Nation—To Joseph—To Ephraim—To the Kingdom of Israel, as distinct from Judah—The Anglo-Israel Theory and the Geographical March of Christianity, &c., &c., &c.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

TO AUTHORS. Authors desirous of issuing Works or Pamphlets on the great and increasingly interesting Question of the Identity of the Lost Ten Tribes with the British Nation, should first communicate with Robert Banks, of Racquet-court, Fleet-street, who has already been honoured by issuing, amongst others, the following works on the subject:

The Banner of Israel. Weekly 1d.; monthly 7d.

The Nation's Glory Leader. Weekly 1d.; quarterly 1s. 4d.

The Pillar of Witness. By late Captain Tracey. Cloth 2s. 6d.; paper 1s. 6d. (second edition).

The Anglo-Israel Post Bag. By Bishop Titcomb. Cloth 2s. 6d.; paper 1s. 6d. (second edition).

The History of the House of Israel. By Philo-Israel. Cloth 1s.; paper 6d. (sixth thousand).

Price 2d., post free, 2½d.

THE HISTORICAL, ETHNIC, AND PHILOLOGICAL ARGUMENTS in PROOF of BRITISH IDENTITY with the TEN LOST TRIBES OF ISRAEL, clearly and simply stated.

BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

CONTENTS:—Introduction—The Celts—Professor Rawlinson's Testimony—The Cymry—The Cimmerii—The Gimiri and Khumri—The Testimony of the Nimroud Obelisk—The Scythians—The Anglo-Saxons—Sharon Turner's Testimony—The Jutes and Angles—The Danes and the Normans—General Conclusions—Philology—The Welsh Language—The Rev. Canon Lysons' Testimony—Idiomatic Identity Between Hebrew and English—Tyndal's Testimony—The Tribe of Dan—The Irish Celts—Are the Continental Nations Israelites?—Conclusions—Appendix.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane; and Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

This day. Price 2d. Post free 2½d.

MANASSEH AND THE UNITED STATES. An important Essay delivered before the "Lost Israel Identification Society," by the Rev. Joseph Wild, D.D., at Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, New York.

CONTENTS:—The Fulness of the Gentiles set in—For whom did God intend America—The Origin of the United States The Footsteps of Ephraim and Manasseh—The Will of Jacob made to Ephraim and Manasseh—Manasseh a People, and a Great People—Manasseh's Birthtime of Separation—Out of nearly Sixty Conquered Colonies the only one England ever Lost was that of Manasseh (America)—The Great Seal of the United States—Manasseh was brought up at the Door of the Pyramid, &c., &c.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.; and of any Bookseller.

Price 1d.; post free, 1½d.

GOD'S LOVE FOR ISRAEL, A GUARANTEE THAT HE WILL FULFIL HIS PROMISES TO ISRAEL. By JOHN GILDER SHAW.

Price 6d.; or with illustrative map, 8d.

BRITAIN (OR ISRAEL) THE FIFTH AND LAST, AND THE UNCONQUERABLE EMPIRE. By JOHN GILDER SHAW.

Price 3d.; post free, 3½d.

CHRONOLOGICAL CHART OF BRITISH VICTORIES OVER THE CONTINENTAL POWERS, ranging from the battle of Cressy (1346), to our last victory, the taking of Sebastopol, Sept. 8, 1855. Arranged by J. G. SHAW, of Leeds.

"We trust Mr. Shaw's labour in preparing this paper may be appreciated by the public and be largely sold."—Banner of Israel.

London: Published by Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; and may be had of the Author, 20 Park-row, Leeds, and of all booksellers.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS 5 Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 6, 1879. [All Rights Reserved.]

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. III. No. 137. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 13, 1879. [ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
A Recent Battle of Israel.—Ulundi in Zululand	325
From Assyria to Britain.—The Sequel.—Part III. By W. Burnett-Coates, Home Office, C.D.	326
The Aborigines of Victoria, Australia	327
The British Empire	328
"Beauty" and "Bands."—Part II.	328
"The Tree of Low Stature."—By the Woodpecker	329
Marks. By L. P.	329
M. Loyson (Le Pere Hyacinthe) on Our Inheritance in the Holy Scriptures	330
Our Opponents.—Charles Stanley on the Lost Tribes of Israel	330
Correspondence	331

A RECENT BATTLE OF ISRAEL.

ULUNDI IN ZULULAND.

THE critical battle which we trust closes the Zulu War and brings peace to the South African Colonies, as well as Confederation also, merits on that account alone a special notice in the pages of the BANNER. It is, however, a battle unique in character, and one decidedly exhibiting Israelitish features in many respects which call for our particular attention. We proceed, therefore, to beg for this decisive victory, "vouchsafed"—as Sir Bartle Frere very properly describes it in his telegram to the Colonial Office (Times, July 24, 1879)—"to her Majesty's forces under Lord Chelmsford, in fair fight in the 'open' on July 4, 1879"—the careful notice of BANNER readers. We are glad indeed to think that God granted to this General the opportunity at the supreme moment (as he did to Lord Gough under very similar circumstances after the battle of Chillianwalla, when Goojerat set all straight), whereby a reputation that seemed somewhat tarnished was suddenly righted. Before Sir Garnet Wolseley could assume charge of his command in the field (being detained outside our new gate, Durnford), Lord Chelmsford had the rare fortune of meeting and destroying his foe in a battle fought on a spot and in a mode the latter chose for himself, thus proving to the whole Zulu nation, as well as to all Kafirland, and the Cape Colonies as well, that not only behind laargar and earthworks, but in the "open," and in a "fair field" as well, British soldiers, even when outnumbered, are, standing shoulder to shoulder, armed with the "new thrashing instrument having mouths," God-given to us in these last days (Isa. xli. 15), more than a match for the best and bravest savages of Zululand, unrivalled as their courage is, even though their numbers are, as compared with Israel's handfuls, as four to one. On the memorable July 4, 1879, Lord Chelmsford, with a force of only 4,062 European soldiers; 1,103 natives, 12 guns, and 2 Gatlings, crossed the White Umlovosi River, on the road to the Zulu capital, Ulundi, then about eight miles distant, at 6.15 a.m.; determined to offer battle in the open field to the brave enemy who boasted that in that position the British troops were no match for them.

The little handful under Lord Chelmsford were formed on the line of march in a hollow square, and so advanced. The flying column was in front; the 2nd Division in the rear. A spot chosen the day before as a likely site for a pitched battle, was reached; and there the British troops were halted, with the ammunition and water-carts, the Engineers and native Pioneers, reserves, stretchers, ambulance waggons and bearers, finally all the cavalry, securely located in the centre. Soon after half-past seven a.m. the Zulu army was seen leaving its bivouacs and advancing to the attack from Ulundi, and from the hills on the left flank of the British square. The cavalry, skirmishing, drew on the natives, who soon developed their deadly horn-like attack, and speedily enveloped the entire British army in its black folds;—a slender force apparently doomed to the destruction of Insandlana, when savage numbers overwhelmed the few, and the best soldiery of Europe overborne by brute power and outwitted by a new unlooked-for mode of warfare, robbed our soldiery of their ammunition, and reduced them at once to the level of the stabbing mob, who, ten to one against them, destroyed them all. But at Ulundi the difference was this. The ammunition of the troops was within their own hollow square; at Insandlana it was abandoned to the enemy, who seized it. At Ulundi the British fought in their old formation, which won them Waterloo, and all the Peninsula battles where cavalry was opposed to infantry, and where arms of precision, such as we now possess, were not in our opponents' hands. At Ulundi then we took reasonable care to fight the foe with the skill God has given us to use, and the result was a crushing victory "vouchsafed" by Him to His people Israel, for which we desire now to give Him grateful praise.

The actual fight and its results are so admirably described by the correspondent of the Times on the field of battle, that we beg our readers to peruse what we quote of it as the best account we can give them of a feat of arms which ends a war, inaugurates one of Israel's nations at the ends of the earth, and terminates a time of terrible suspense which has weighed all our spirits down for months past, till it seemed that even our hopes in Israel's God, and in His faithfulness, could hardly revive our sinking spirits. The correspondent, writing just after the battle on July 4 last, telegraphed as follows:—

Digitized by Google

Our mounted skirmishers were soon in retreat, and as they fell back great numbers of the Zulus swarmed over the ridges. Soon the mounted men on all sides were engaged, firing as they retreated towards the square, the lines of which were now opened to receive them. The men then closed up, and the artillery opened fire. Although the gunners made excellent practice, the Zulus advanced without any perceptible decrease in pace, their attack developing itself with wonderful rapidity. A few minutes before, but a few Zulus were to be seen towards Ulundi; now thousands upon thousands, shouting war cries, were seen sweeping round the square. Shells from right and left were speedily followed by firing from the front ranks of the infantry on the same faces, and as the enemy approached volley firing commenced on all sides. At length these were entirely surrounded and the attack was finally developed.

The principal effort was evidently to be made from our rear, over the rising ground from which Captain Shepstone's Basutos had been driven. The Zulus, swarming in continuous stream, crossed the left flank, partially under cover of Unodwengo kraal, and, passing the open ground between, which appeared black with them, formed a hollow square, and with a magnificent rush came in dense masses straight for the right rear corner of the square. The Royal Engineers, with the adjoining companies of the 58th and 94th, were as steady as rocks. The attack was directed particularly against the point covered by the two companies of the 21st. Neither volleys, shells, nor guns stopped them for a moment. It looked as if we were going to have a hand-to-hand fight; but at sixty or seventy yards they wavered before our fire, and in a moment halted dead. Through the smoke we could see from horseback the black rank hesitating, pausing as if for a spring. Eventually they turned and fled.

The 80th had the most difficult point in the position to defend. A short distance beyond their lines the ground suddenly dipped, and the enemy were thus enabled to close up without being seen. The men continued firing with great coolness, waiting time after time until they saw the Zulus rise. Shortly before this a Gatling had been taken from the front face and placed on the left flank, where the Zulus were at one time in great strength. The onslaught on this face was not nearly so heavy as on others. Reports say the Zulus have a great dread of Gatlings. As soon as the enemy showed a disposition to waver, the Lancers issued from the rear face with orders to wheel to the left and follow the enemy. There were great cheers as they left, led by Colonel Lowe, who a few minutes previously had been knocked off his horse by a spent bullet. The 17th made an attack with great skill, using their lances with great effect under a continuous fire from the Zulus, who fought doggedly. During a retreat on the face of a hill they halted in strong force and poured a hot fire into their pursuers.

Meanwhile, a troop of the King's Dragoon Guards, under Captain Brewster, and irregular cavalry, had left the square by various sides, and were following the enemy in all directions, Lord W. Beresford in front. The pursuit occupied some time, and it was during this part of the engagement that the Zulus suffered most severely. At length they gained the crests of the hills, where they again collected in small bodies. Shrapnel, fired with time fuses, soon dispersed them.

The actual attack commenced at 8.30. Prisoners state that the attacking rear was led by Ungegwelkail, the front by Dabulamanzi, the left by Sirayo, and the right by Malonia. Five days ago it was stated that Cetywayo sent 400 head of cattle with messengers commissioned to make peace, but that they were stopped by the Unclw Che Regiment, who stated that until they had been beaten no peace should be made. Cetywayo said, "You may fight and surround the English when they leave the laager and try to crush them; but white men have never been beaten." The prisoners say that Cetywayo and the old men are opposed to war, and were not expecting that the Zulus would again attack us. Women, children, and cattle have been removed for some time to Mazaine. The chief Zulu regiments, Angobamion, Nokraki, Unbonum, Bowoia, Unsempe, Umbapu, Uklako, Unaiad, Tulhluppo, Isangulubi, Ahe Undebiki, Tombi, and Uhlamibhle, remain with the king as a body-guard. The prisoners agree that the whole force of the Zulu nation was present. The force surrounding us was 15,000, 8,000 looking on. Their losses were estimated at 1,500; but this was less than the numbers killed by the cavalry and artillery. The victory was complete and Cetywayo's power is broken most satisfactorily. The British soldiers showed to the best advantage, proving to the Zulus that we can fight openly as well as in laager.

Already the results of this great victory may be foreseen. It places the most important part of Zululand at our mercy; the lower half, which possesses the valuable grazing lands of Cetywayo, and is best in fertility, is now in our possession. We have only to set up over it a ruler who will obey us, as Oham is sure to do, and we shall secure a territory which will keep Cetywayo, if he survives, at bay, and cut him off from any chance of injuring British possessions in Natal or the Transvaal. There, abandoned by his people, he will languish in a wilderness, where, bereft of power and of influence, he will soon sink into oblivion and harmlessness. Do our readers note the facts in this battle which bear upon our origin? We went forth to this combat far from our native land, and from our base of operations, sent there by the Lord, as none can doubt; and that was to be Israel's lot, as 1 Kings viii. 44 tells us.

For our armies so circumstanced, not only from this land, but wherever Christians of the House of Israel are located, and no doubt from many a heart in Lord Chelmsford's force, strong cries have lately gone up to the Lord for help; and He hath "heard from heaven our united supplication, and maintained our cause" at Ulundi, as He did before at Ginglelova and Kambula Kop. The enemy further "came out against us" to devour us, "one way, but they fled from us seven ways," utterly dispersed (Deut. xxviii. 7); which was a promise to Israel, and therefore to us, realised by us as we have seen. Further, as the result of this great battle, we know from the Times correspondent's further report that the two 7-pounder guns taken from our slaughtered division at Insandlana were recaptured at Ulundi, when the king's kraal and the town, with surrounding villages, were all burnt on July 4 by our conquering troops.

Surely here was a fulfilment of a splendid prediction of Israel's then future success in war, when the Lord, by Isa. liv. 15—17, said, "Behold they shall surely gather together, but not by Me; whosoever shall gather together against thee, shall fall, for thy sake." "No weapon that is formed against thee shall prosper." Surely here, too, was a fulfilment of the Lord's words by Micah v. 8, when he said of Israel, and therefore of the British force now conquering in Zululand, "The remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people; as a lion among the beasts of the forest, and as a young lion among the flocks of sheep; who, IF he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver." Just so, Israel conquered in Afghanistan, and now again at Ulundi. Israel, praise YE the Lord!

FROM ASSYRIA TO BRITAIN.

THE SEQUEL.

By W. BURNETT-COATES, HOME OFFICE, C.D.

(Concluded from page 318).

PART III.—CONTINUED.

THE historian will scarcely deny in the face of ethnology, tradition, and ancient history, clouded though each may be, that the progenitors of the British people were Asiatics, and aboriginal on British soil. The Biblical student who beholds with open eye the gradual fulfilment first, and then the rapid opening order, of the promises into fruition, as unconditionally given to the Hebrews, in the "astounding" circumstances attending the rôle of the British Empire, and in that rôle only, may "run and read" this joint testimony unmistakably placed in juxta-position in Britain and her annals to-day, and conclude, harbouring but little doubt relative to the pretensions of the round assertions "that the British nation is a Hebrew Nation;" and, if so, the veritable "Lost Tribes of Israel."

The Jewish-Israelites are, we know, unpossessed of a nation's adjuncts; and we know where they are. They cannot, therefore, embrace the Ten Tribes; for, in accordance with the inspired Word, "The Lost Tribes" must now be a nation, with a nation's entourage, although called "by another name" than that of Israel—the Christian name! There must be a ruler to satisfy the sacred forecast; there must be a powerful nation to verify the predictions; and it must be a benevolent nation, ruling by moral force—a blessing to all other nations.

Digitized by Google

It must be a nation of forgotten records, from the time the Tribes broke away in fragmentary batches from Assyria's grip until this day. Yet a nation with a history more conspicuous, under its new name and rôle, than the history of any other people. It must be a nation of nations, whose seed is multitudinous, whose natural increase is expressed in Scripture (Gen. xlviii. 16): "Grow into a multitude in the midst of the earth;" marginal reading—"as fishes do increase;" a spawning multitude to fill the world with fruit; possessing the gates of his enemies; the head and not the tail; above only and not below; lending to all and borrowing from none.

Are not all these attributes of the British Empire—Scripturally so? but they are distinctively Hebrew; therefore these Hebrew attributes must belong to a Hebrew nation. If they were equally accorded to a Gentile people, where would be the distinctive gifts to mark the distinguishing love that God bore to His servant Abraham? In what respect would the seed beloved for the father's sake differ from the Gentile people, on whom the love-laden outpourings of temporal gifts were bestowed by the Almighty hand that led Israel through the wilderness like a flock of sheep, when He delivered them from the bond of Egypt; and who gave their fathers promises, the fulfilment of which we enjoy? In what particulars would they stand above such a nation, so as to be the head and not the tail, if all the promises made to them culminated in equal cumulativeness on any Gentile people? There could be no difference; but the unrevokeable promises to Abraham and his seed are not only unconditional, but present a clear implication that no other people would enjoy an equal measure of the blessings they record.

If it is so apparent to the perception of "a cloud of witnesses" daily presenting testimony, and continually adducing it in fresh forms, to indicate the fact that the fulness of the blessings contained in these promises are enjoyed by the British people, as far as yet we can discern the "astounding" similarity that exists between them and our own Divinely bestowed gifts, we are surely warranted in cherishing the idea—if no more—that we must also be the veritable people to whom the promises were given; and that they are not gifts in duplicate to be concurrently enjoyed by a present Gentile Empire and a future Hebrew nation. It is not to be supposed that, if we are a Gentile people, we were raised up to supplant the "backsliding Israel," or to forestall his "birthright!" It is not in accordance with "the oath of the covenant," which the Lord, "with whom there is neither variableness nor shadow of turning," "sware by Himself because He could swear by no greater," when, of His free will, He communicated them to Abraham, His friend.

If there is an unmistakable similitude, with no deviation, between the comprehensiveness of the promises to Israel's seed and the gifts without promise bestowed upon the British nation, in what consists the distinguishing features of the assurances of a posterity of chosen people unequalled, or to be unequalled, possessing the earth and its fulness, as given to the favoured family through their federal head, and those gifts, similar in all points, so wonderfully lavished upon this Gentile nation—if Gentile it be—which has been, and still is, rapidly taking up the grand position, in its fulness, under the eyes of all men? If there is no difference, it is not unreasonable to conclude that the people now enjoying them are the descendants of him to whom the promises were given nearly 3,800 years ago.

An extract from the substance of a lecture delivered by the Rev. J. Baldwin Brown, reported in the Daily Telegraph, 14th May, 1879 — although the lecturer claims for London the successorship of Rome—an honour to be heartily repudiated by all Londoners who are not of Rome—I shall not hesitate to quote, because his "blind testimony" augments the evidence of many thousands of such witnesses. He is reported to have said that:—"Imperial we are, and must, as a people, remain while we carried on the largest trade in the world, whose highways we had secured, while we possessed the largest, richest, most influential, and now, perhaps, the most splendid city in the world. England, with London, had created a new age in which men lived—an age of gold, iron, and steel. She had passed into a land of progress, and grown rich with a rapidity that had no parallel in the history of the human race. With the progress made during the Victorian era the past history of our race could find no comparison."

Here it is again in multitudes, possessions, power, wealth, imperial instincts, and influence, altering the face of an age by rendering it creative of gold, iron, and steel; and the amassing of riches without historical parallel. Yea, and it may be added, changing the face of the wilderness in many lands, whilst pouring into the wounds of a mangled humanity wine and oil; and bearing to the wounded the comforts that comfort themselves, even "the bread of life." Yes, that under the guiding hand of Great Britain the desert is taught to blossom as the rose; ay, and the earth is being filled with fruit; the rough ways are being made smooth under her auspices, in anticipation of the coming of the covenant Messiah to claim the sovereignty of the world preserved for the perfecting of His glory.

What more can be said? Truly the signal of "The trip from Assyria to Britain" would, if considered in its component parts and its outcome, fill more space on paper in connection with the Hebrew origin of our British ancestry than all the periodicals published in the literary world could afford for many years. We can but, as yet, nibble at the outlines, so variously and wondrously filled in during 2,500 years, as men nibble at the crust of our globe to expose to view the treasures that overlie the vast secrets of its interior. It is with feelings akin to regret that necessity compels me to yield a place to consideration under pressure of "lack of space;" but, "as the ocean is made up of drops," so will, I hope, the great scope of this most important question be filled in, little by little, under the contribution of many pens, until the corner-stone finds its place upon the building being raised by many hands. Possibly in the eyes of "the learned" the builders are not strong and skilful as the men who designed the mathematical contents of "the Great Pyramid." Possibly they are not; "the conies are but a feeble folk, yet make they their houses in the rocks."

THE ABORIGINES OF VICTORIA, AUSTRALIA.

THE hapless fate which is befalling the Aborigines of Victoria in Australia is told with regret in the following feeling words. Confronted by the "pushing" Anglo-Saxons, "the stationary savagedom" resident in that Israelite colony is doomed to "die out;" for God's Word seems to foretell in Jer. xxx. 11, that such would be their fate. Our race has been "scattered" among those Aboriginal races in the "Land of Sinim," and there the prophet said, that "though I make a full end of all nations whither I have scattered thee" (addressing Israel), "yet will I not make a full end of thee; but I will correct thee in measure and not leave thee wholly unpunished." The following appeared in the Belfast News Letter, of April 7, 1879:—

"A DYING RACE.—The Aborigines of the colony of Victoria, Australia, are perishing so fast that they will speedily be only a memory. Small-pox and other diseases kill out the wilder tribes, and those 'black fellows' who come among the whites die of incompetence and melancholy. There are not above 4,500 left in all Victoria, and they are rapidly dying out—a sad specimen of a people perishing without a use in the world. They have no past, no present, and no future; have apparently done nothing for mankind. There is something painful in seeing them pass away, as beings incapable of improvement, and without energy to resist decay."

Digitized by Google

THE BRITISH EMPIRE.

A PERUSAL of Sir Chas. Dilke's "Greater Britain," gives us an opportunity to lay before the readers of the BANNER what may be termed a "secular estimation" of the British Empire and its present position in the world. In the preface to his interesting work the author says :—"In 1866 and 1867, I followed England round the world: everywhere I was in English-speaking, or in English-governed lands. If I remarked that climate, soil, manners of life, that mixtures with other peoples had modified the blood, I saw, too, that in essentials the race was always one.

"The idea which in all the length of my travels has been at once my fellow and my guide—a key wherewith to unlock the hidden things of strange new lands—is a conception, however imperfect, of the grandeur of our race, already girdling the earth, which it is destined, perhaps, eventually to overspread."

The significance of these remarks will not be lost upon Anglo-Israelites. In the last chapter of this book, we find a general survey of the "English race." "Everywhere," says the author "we have found that the difficulties which impede the progress to universal dominion of the English people lie in the conflict with the cheaper races. The result of our survey is such as to give us reason for the belief that race distinctions will long continue, that miscegenation will go but little way towards blending races, that the dearer are, on the whole, likely to destroy the cheaper peoples, and that Saxondom will rise triumphant from the doubtful struggle."

The phrase "progress to universal dominion" would be a happy Anglo-Israelitish expression. For we do believe that "universal dominion" will be given to our people. Our opponents have said that we look upon "British greatness" as the "sum and substance of all the glorious promises given to Israel." We do not say so. It is one of those malicious misstatements that will be bitterly regretted ere long. We know that the glory of the promises to Israel will only culminate when the Divine King shall rule all nations from the Mount Zion. But we see the blessings given to Israel, visibly stamped upon the British race, not in the glory of their final fulfilment, but growing more glorious year by year. And not only do we see this, but here I have given the convictions of a man convinced by observation—a man who certainly will not be taunted with "Imperialism."

Our author continues :—"The countries ruled by a race whose very scum and outcasts have founded empires in every portion of the globe, even now consist of nine-and-a-half millions of square miles, and contain a population of 300,000,000 of people. The surface is five times as great as that of the Empire of Darius, and four-and-a-half times as large as the Roman Empire at its greatest extent. It is no exaggeration to say that in power the English countries would be more than a match for the remaining nations of the world, whom in the intelligence of their people and the extent and wealth of their dominions they already considerably surpass." Now we ask our opponents where this altogether unparalleled empire is mentioned in Holy Writ apart from Israel. Are we a sham Israel—a dummy-Ephraim, to be knocked from the pedestal of our high estate in a few years' time? It cannot be.

To finish our quotations :—"No possible series of events can prevent the English race itself in 1970 numbering 300 millions of beings, of one national character and one tongue. Italy, Spain, France, Russia, become pigmies by the side of such a people.

"The ultimate future of any one section of our race, however, is of little moment by the side of its triumph as a whole, but the power of the English laws and English principles of government is not merely an English question—its continuance is essential to the freedom of mankind."

The views in the foregoing extracts are very striking, and, while considering them, Isaiah liv. comes irresistibly to mind :—"Sing, O barren, thou that didst not bear; break forth into singing and cry aloud, thou that didst not travail with child; for more are the children of the desolate than the children of the married wife, saith the Lord. Enlarge the place of thy tent, and let them stretch forth the curtains of thy habitations : spare not, lengthen thy cords, and strengthen thy stakes; for thou shalt break forth on the right hand and on the left; and thy seed shall inherit the Gentiles, and make the desolate cities to be inhabited. Fear not, for thou shalt not be ashamed: neither be thou confounded, for thou shalt not be put to shame; for thou shalt forget the shame of thy youth, and shalt not remember the reproach of thy widowhood any more. For thy Maker is thine Husband; the Lord of Hosts is His name; and thy Redeemer the Holy One of Israel; the God of the whole earth shall He be called. For the Lord hath called thee as a woman forsaken and grieved in spirit, and a wife of youth, when thou wast refused, saith thy God. For a small moment have I forsaken thee; but with great mercies will I gather thee. In a little wrath I hid My face from thee for a moment, but with everlasting kindness will I have mercy on thee, saith the Lord thy Redeemer."

Here God says to Israel, "For a small moment have I forsaken thee," and "In a little wrath I hid My face from thee." Our opponents say that God has forsaken Israel for 2,500 years or more; and some, as it seemed, have almost joyfully expatiated on the magnitude of the curses that are said to have fallen, and still remain, upon them. Which shall we believe—the word of God or the word of man?

J. C. N.

London, July 19th, 1879.

"BEAUTY" AND "BANDS."

(Concluded from page 322).

PART II.

WE proceed now to state why, in Mr. Cox's view, the Lord stated by the mouth of Zechariah His prophet, that He intended "to break the brotherhood" when He did (just before the crucifixion), between the Houses of Judah and Israel. In the first place, it was no act of sovereignty then and there newly resolved upon after the betrayal of the Lord Jesus by Judas Iscariot. It was done in fulfilment of a prophecy that had been recorded nearly 500 years before, and in carrying out a purpose present in the Divine mind long before even that date. What was that purpose? It was one announced by Moses, and thus commented on in Acts iii. 22, 23 :—"Moses truly said unto the fathers, A Prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you of your brethren like unto me. Him shall ye hear in all things whatsoever He shall say unto you. And it shall come to pass that every soul which will not hear that Prophet shall be destroyed from among the people." The sin of which the Jews were guilty was the one thus described. They refused to hear that Prophet, or to recognise in Him the only manifestation of the God of their fathers which He ever granted to man to see in human flesh. They fell, therefore, under the condemnation, and the penalty was "destruction" or "cutting off" by dispersion away from their Tribes, throughout the earth—a doom which is yet under process of devolution—a punishment which has not yet had an end! But the offence of which the Ten Tribes were guilty was a very different one. Theirs was idolatry; hateful to God. They followed the nations who surrounded them, learnt their false ways, made gods of wood and stone, fell down and worshipped them. They sinned not by refusing to obey the Prophet who was God manifest in the flesh, for Him they never saw. God, therefore, from the first, fore-knew that that division of the erring race, His people Israel, required a discipline and a teaching quite different from that which the Jews' case demanded. The sin of the latter was wilful disobedience to One whose advent was predicted, and whom, when He came, they refused "to hear." The two Houses, therefore, had to be separately educated to carry out the final purposes of God, and that in very different schools. The Ten Tribes had to be brought into a distant land; placed as a distinct nation under one head; and the Gospel of the grace of Jesus Christ was to be exhibited in the person of the dying Lamb of God, sacrificed for them. They were destined to receive it, to administer it to Jews and Gentiles, to renounce their idol-worship: and as history shows, just in proportion as the nation gathered in the Western Isles cast off their heathen idols, so they were promoted gradually, but surely, to earthly grandeur and dominion, till after the era of the Reformation we find them gifted by God Himself with every blessing promised to Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, and their seed for ever, without one single lapse or failure. The Jews, on the other hand, had to learn their lesson in a sadder school. They never after their captivity in Babylon were idolaters. But they refused to see in Jesus the Son of God their Messiah, and for that failure the doom which Moses pronounced in Deut. xviii. 15, 18, 19—commented on and explained by Acts iii. 22, 23—came on them to the very uttermost. In their solitude and dispersion they are now bearing the bitter penalty of refusing to obey their God, and they had to learn it sequestered from their brethren of the Ten Tribes, separated from the Gentile nations of the earth, among whom, as all allow, they truly "dwell to-day alone." So God, when the fulness of time came, broke the brotherhood between Judah and Israel just before the crucifixion and after the betrayal of the Lord by Judas. He did not suffer the remnant of Israel, in union with Judah, at that time, to have part in the guilt which drove Judah into banishment and dispersion to the ends of the earth. Thus the purposes of God, fixed and settled in the mind of Jehovah even in the times of Moses, were predicted by Zechariah 500 years before Christ came, and at the set time the thing that was resolved upon was fully carried out, and the Lord then and there broke the brotherhood existing between Judah—the majority of the then extant Hebrew race—and the small remnant of Israel still in cohesion and union with it. Henceforth, and to the present day, there has been no union of the two Houses. That can only take place when the joinder of the two sticks of Ezekiel xxxvii. is accomplished—an event, perhaps, likely to occur before many now living on the earth shall have passed away. The two Houses are gradually, but surely, learning their two solitary lessons Divinely taught, and thus, as Mr. Cox says, the Providence of God is teaching us in this wonderful way, by a Scripture little noticed hitherto, the God-made distinction between Israel and Judah, and what their present separation really means. We now are given to see the development of counsels hidden from eternity, and that in such wise, that "we are led to say of those who will not believe, that they are infatuated by their preconceived notions," and blindly refuse to see the sun shining in its noon-day splendour!

Digitized by Google

MARKS.—Some of our opponents regard, with what seems to us rather a contemptuous smile, the material signs which have been pointed out as sealing our claim to be the House of Israel. They apparently are quite content to believe that other nations, though bearing none of these signs, may be the Lost Tribes; and they appear to consider such marks to be unworthy of being sought for, or of attracting any attention if pointed out. Yet when our Lord Jesus Christ appeared miraculously in the midst of the Apostles, and the unbelieving Thomas could no longer doubt he saw the form and heard the voice of his loved Master, the latter was not content with giving His faithless disciple such proofs alone of His risen state, but bade him also test for himself the marks on His sacred person. He—the Lord Jesus—did not despise the testimony of signs and marks to awaken or confirm belief.—L. P.

"THE TREE OF LOW STATURE."

BY THE WOODPECKER.

DEAR MR. EDITOR,—The vineyard of the Lord of hosts (Isa. v.) presents a lively aspect just now. The Master is sending in "idlers from the market-place" to work therein, and sturdy, willing workers many of them have proved themselves to be. The digging about the roots of this gnarled old tree has been carried on so perseveringly that already the old trunk, so long despised by the shepherds in the vineyard as rotten, dead, and worthless, is actually blossoming and budding! Yea, the buds and the blossoms are to be seen at the very extremity of the widest branches and boughs of the "tree of low stature" (Ezek. xvii. 6).

I miss a few of the old familiar faces I knew before; I fail to hear the sterling ring of their manly voices encouraging the diggers to persevere, in the sure hope that they would yet find many pearls of great price to reward them for their labours, and the old labourers to train and prune this "tree of low stature," in the sure hope that it will blossom and bud, and bring forth much fruit. They are not dead nor sleeping. Two or three boughs, on which the labourers were doing vigorous work, are broken off, as if some rude hand had torn away each branch. The same ruthless hand has given work to these labourers somewhere else in the vineyard. It may be that they are working among the flower beds; but they can never forget the importance that must be attached to the trimming, pruning, and digging about the roots of the "tree of low stature;" probably they are watching it blossom and bud.

But others are filling their places well and worthily. There was a time when those who first laboured in the vineyard were branded as idiots and maniacs for supposing for a single moment that there could possibly be any vitality in the "tree of low stature;" but much to their chagrin and amazement the crazy idea has taken permanent root in every part of the world where the English language is spoken, and this is eminently one grand result of the honest, persevering digging about the roots of this grand old tree. Still the old labourers walk round this despised tree, and declare that they cannot see a blossom or a bud on it, that the diggers are labouring under a delusion, and that their work will be utterly unrewarded. But it should be observed that the diggers are more inclined for work than for argument, and thus it is not uncommon among them to hear the remark made, "Some people cannot see timber for trees."

This thought calls to mind the Roberts-Hine debate. Mr. Hine was dragged into this. The truth of our Identity with the House of Israel is not a subject to be settled in a debate, no matter of how long a duration it may be. We are living in an age of intellectual pride, in an age when educated men put the Bible (a Book about which they probably know the least) on a par with any other book. This was demonstrated by Mr. Roberts placing as much faithful reliance on the testimony of Josephus as he did upon the Word of God, if not more. Little good was the result of that debate, and little can come of any other debate. Debates call into force the acumen of the combatants; but this is a subject which calls for instruction, consideration, investigation, a prayerful and serious study of all that Moses and the prophets have written.

There is still a croaking from the lop-sided stone in the vineyard (The Rock). Many delight in taking shelter under the shadow thereof. The light is either too strong or too uncomfortable for them. There is a Divine saying, "Men love darkness rather than light," &c. Mocking, jeering, taunting, slandering, and incessant charges of blasphemy are continually issuing from the lop-sided stone against the diggers and labourers about the "tree of low stature;" but there is a great difference between the two. The one is sleekly dressed and works among his flowers with gloved hands. The other has coat off, sleeves rolled up, and is doing honest hard work. The one is sitting down quite content with the ideas and comments of old divines; the other, watching the signs of the times, keenly observing the events transpiring around us, noting the predictions of revealed truth, and devoutly studying all that Moses and the prophets have written.

Digitized by Google

There was once a wood-cutter who came to chop down this "tree of low stature." I recommended him to borrow a Gladstonian axe—a piece of advice I am sorry to find he has not availed himself of. But look up, Mr. Editor, here come two more wood-cutters, and one of them actually hails from Bristol! Gray hairs and old age should ever command respect, and this one certainly would have done so; but hark! he is haranguing a body of honest, conscientious labourers! And would you really credit it? Instead of arming himself with one of the best finished steel axes of the nineteenth century he is going to demolish the "tree of low stature" with an old-fashioned one made of stone! But let us listen to what he has to say, and contrast his address with another given by an old man, the only old man in the host of Israel—viz., the man Moses. Hark! here is manifest neither the spirit of meekness nor the voice of mildness. And why? Simply because he cannot see blossoms and buds where others think they can. It is possible for a man to run in a groove all his life and see nothing new! It is possible for a business man to ramble daily through certain thoroughfares, to flatter himself that he knows every inch of the way, and it is also possible for a stranger to pass that way and to notice something the former has never seen. The result is, the one maintains that it is there, the other denies it. Instead of going to see if it is there, they agree to differ, may be quarrel, and say "ugly" things. The harangue of this irate shepherd, thundering with the infallible voice of a Pope, does not commend itself to the judgment of thoughtful men who believe that the Bible is the Word of God. He asserts, from the outset, that there is something really comical in the idea that we can represent the Ten Tribes of Israel. Well, that must have been a comical idea that the prophet Ezekiel indulged in. The bare idea of a great eagle—the king of birds—going to a noble cedar, cropping off the top of his young twigs, carrying it into a land of traffic (Babylon—Faussel), and set it in a city of merchants (Ezek. xvii.). The king of birds ought to have had more sense! But, would you believe it? he took also of the seed of the land and planted IT in a fruitful field. He placed it by great waters and set it as a willow tree. And it grew, and became a spreading vine of low stature, bringing forth branches and shooting forth twigs. This is the gnarled old tree in the vineyard, bearing, as has been too truly remarked, "Nothing but leaves," and despised by the shepherds as dead and utterly worthless. Yet there are, yea, must be, blossoms and buds on it, though, through the multiplicity of leaves, it is not easy to see them. It is, however, no argument to persistently assert that they do not exist, before making a careful examination. But some do make an honest examination in their own fashion, and come to certain conclusions in a seemingly logical way, yet it should be observed that they never get out of the "old groove" in which they have been running all their lives. This is the stamp of the Bristol shepherd who is so angry with the labourers in the vineyard wherein is planted the "tree of low stature." Ye, one and all, are "theorists," "mere pretenders," striving to prop up "a baseless theory," propagating views which are simply "absurd." Ye, one and all, are shocking "blasphemous" writers of "dreadful things" and "awful books." Ye are nothing more nor less than very, very wicked men, from whom everybody ought "to separate themselves" if they value their soul's salvation. Search the Scriptures, and can you find any record of an aged man of God so far forgetting the duty of Christian charity? What need for all this abuse, when the majority of his colleagues say that if it "does no good, it can do no harm."

(To be continued.)

M. LOYSON (LE PERE HYACINTHE) ON OUR INHERITANCE IN THE HOLY SCRIPTURES.

FROM a paper by the Bishop of Western New York, quoted in the Foreign Church Chronicle, for June, 1879 (London: W. Wells Gardner) page 119:—

"The whole soul of M. Loyson is fired with this idea of giving the Bible to France. I heard him, in a torrent of eloquence and enthusiasm, address 3,000 Frenchmen last summer in one of his Conferences, on the amazing predominance in England of Biblical knowledge, principles, and ideas. 'These ancient, Oriental, Asiatic books,' he said, 'are as thoroughly assimilated in England, as if they were of English origin; the growth of their own language, history, and piety. Nobody in England can free himself from associations with Scripture, which imbue every thought, and colour laws and manners, legislation and literature. The very infidels of England think and speak in idioms of Scripture.' To this fact he attributed the grandeur and freedom of all the English-speaking peoples. This therefore he claimed for his own dear France: the Scriptures everywhere in the vulgar tongue."

OUR OPPONENTS.

CHARLES STANLEY ON THE LOST TRIBES OF ISRAEL.*

WE have a few words to say to a new opponent, who, writing, we understand, from Belfast, comes forward to add to the testimony of "Lo-Ammi," even from Ireland, and declares we are "not God's people," but only Gentiles. We wonder if Mr. Stanley would be surprised if we take him at his word, and admit we are Gentiles? That is positively the case! We are Gentiles! since we are "Lo-Ammi;" but "Lo-Ammi Israelites," disguised as Gentiles. Let Mr. Stanley study Hosea i. 9—11, and he will understand what we mean. In one respect we deem our new opponent superior to those who have gone before him. He admits that the Ten Tribes ARE LOST! On page 11 he makes this vital admission, and frankly owns that "they are lost; so that in their restoration the Divine principle of grace will be true of them as in the case of every individual sinner." "For the Son of man," he adds, "is come to seek and to save that which IS LOST" (the capitals are Mr. Stanley's). It is strange that while most of our opponents urge nothing so strongly as the point that "the Ten Tribes never were Lost," Mr. Stanley, agreeing with the Jews and ourselves, admits that they are Lost; and not only that, but that Christ came to seek and to save them (with others) as "the Lost." The chief points Mr. Stanley takes up against us are the spiritualizing views. He spiritualises all the promises, and of course cannot find anything literal for Israel or the British in the Bible. Referring to Rom. ix., x., xi., he urges that chap. ix. 30—33, and the opening of chap. x., apply distinctly to Israel, but that the Britons, Picts, Scots, and Saxons cannot possibly be made to answer to these descriptions of that people. Nay, he adds, these races in Paul's time clearly responded to his picture of the Gentiles, who "followed not after righteousness, and yet attained to righteousness." Would Mr. Stanley be surprised again if we perfectly agreed with him? We do, perfectly! The fact is, St. Paul was describing Israel—that is, the Jews—in the words quoted from Rom. ix. 30—33, x. 1—3, and the Gentiles who attained to righteousness were the (Lo-Ammi) Gentiles, yet Israelites, the British races, in fact, who Mr. Stanley finds were really pictured by the apostle. All this, no doubt, is an enigma to our opponent. But he must read, see, and learn for himself, and then will, doubtless, understand. Almost all Mr. Stanley's readings of Rom. xi. and the grotesque mistakes he makes regarding our views, arise from his misunderstanding that the Ten Tribes became downright Gentiles when "cast off"—that is, "Lo-Ammi"—"not God's people." They were, therefore, "the Gentiles to whom the Gospel was sent;" and when Israel (the Jews, the then only representative Israelites) were "disobedient" and "gainsaying," the "Goi-nabal," or foolish Gentiles, the "silly dove," "Ephraim-Britain," "which asked not after God," found Him! They provoked the real ostensible Israelites to "jealousy," "and as Gentiles, which they certainly were, have thus been blest" (page 15). Almost all Mr. Stanley has written turns on his tremendous misunderstanding of "the mystery of Israel." If he understood that, half his objections

* W. H. Broom, 25, Paternoster-square, London. Price 3d.

Digitized by Google

would not have been published. Of course, in commenting on Rom. xi. 25, our opponent entirely misses the apostle's point, since he fails to see a reference in "the fulness of the Gentiles" to Jacob's "Melo-hag-goim," or "fulness of the Goyim," or nations of the stock of EPHRAIM. He misunderstands the "fulness" of the apostle to be the "completion" of the Gentile Church, whereas it can only be the discovery of the Ephraimite "nation and company of nations" to render verse 26 Rom. xi. logically sense. "So ALL Israel shall be saved." To understand the "fulness" to be that of real Gentiles, not of the Hebrew race at all, is to make verse 26 a non sequitur; for the true conclusion then would be, "So shall all the pure Gentiles, destined to salvation, and all the yet unsaved Israelites, be saved," whereas the condition precedent of the apostolic hypothesis is the discovery of the Ephraimite majority of Israel, which being "the filling up of Israel," makes it possible at last to say, "So all Israel shall be saved." Our opponent finds Ezek. xxxix. 22—29 a complete bar to our Identity, because "the House of Israel" is therein described in terms Mr. Stanley cannot apply to the British of to-day. We demur to his conclusions, because we do not admit that in Ezekiel's terminology "the House of Israel" was a name applicable to "Ephraim-Israel" at all, but to "Judah-Israel" exclusively. Mr. Stanley must master that difficulty before he over-rides us thus. He thinks "the Lost Tribes" will be found at the time of the great battle with "Rosh" (Ezek. xxxviii., xxxix.), in Central Asia, in Russia's power; but this cannot be, since Zeph. iii. 10 describes the restorer of Judah to be the "dispersed" daughter of the Lord, His Christian "suppliants," and Jeremiah (iii. 18), with Hosea (i. 11), as well as Ezek. xxxvii. (16—22), prove that when Judah goes back to the land, Israel is to be her sole companion, leader, and protector. We do not follow Mr. Stanley in his attempted refutation of the Identifications. We have gone over that ground very often, and find the task now rather wearisome. We must, therefore, leave Mr. Stanley and his readers to accept or reject the test-marks, and make light of them if they please. He fails to find one single text in the "Résumé" applying to Britain, and that being the case, of course we have no more to say. The "nation and company of nations," "the multitudinous seed," "the new covenant," are all cursorily mentioned, applied to Christ, their application to the British ridiculed; and then we are solemnly warned of the danger we incur by trusting for salvation to any but Christ. We are represented as saying, "I am an Englishman, therefore God will remember my sins no more!" Our readers will smile at the absurdity of all this. We wonder, indeed, how a man can pretend to have read our writings, even cursorily, and yet so utterly mistake the meaning of what he has read Where did he find in our works or in the BANNER, that we have said, "He has washed us from our sins in His own blood, but that we may yet be, after all, prepared to give up Christ and trust in being a Briton?" (page 23). Philo-Israel, of course, comes in (at page 25) for severe castigation, for dishonouring Christ by attributing His honour to Britain, in his rendering of Psa. ii. 8. We are said to "rob Christ of His inheritance, by giving it to England." Strangely Mr. Stanley, quoting verse 9, refutes himself and asks, "Is Britain, then, to break the nations with a rod of iron?" We beg him to turn to Rev. ii. 26, 27, and he will find Christ Himself deputes that very work to the "overcomer" (Israel we take it)—certainly does not do the same Himself.

We do not see how Mr. Stanley maintains (page 26) from Scripture that because Jerusalem is to be trodden down of the Gentiles till the times of the Gentiles are fulfilled, that therefore Israel's blessings must be after the close of the times of the Gentiles? This reads to us like a non sequitur. For it is possible, with such texts as Zech. x. 6; Ezek. xi. 16; Deut. xxviii. 1—14, on record, that between Israel's repentance and the time of their return to the land the Lord may be blessing Israel greatly, only to bless them even more when the restoration takes place. We differ from Mr. Stanley regarding the stone of Daniel (ii. 35—45), and therefore he cannot expect us to admit that his view, that Christ is the stone, is correct, when God's Word says it is a "people" (ver. 44)—the people of the saints of the Most High (Dan. vii. 27)—even the children of Israel (Psa. cxlviii. 14). When Mr. Stanley has answered the three great arguments on which our contention rests, we shall agree with him in his repeated and dogmatic assertions that it is a "great mistake to apply the various promises of God to Israel, so as to make them His gifts to the British." Our three points are these:—

1. "God is not a man that He can lie, or the son of man that He can repent."

2. God made on oath to Abraham our forefather, many promises of temporal and spiritual blessings which He entailed strictly and unconditionally on him, and "his seed for ever," but never included in them any Gentile race whatever, and He never hinted that Israel's enjoyment of them should be in abeyance at any time.

3. We British have now in possession, either fully or in embryo, with prospect of full fruition, every one of the blessings granted "to Abraham and his seed for ever." We lack not one! Therefore, we say, we must be Israel of the Lost Ten Tribes—Judah being, as all allow, excluded, and presently under curse. We shall hold to this opinion in spite of all Mr. Stanley's sophistries, and we recommend all his readers to do the same, until he can demolish our three theses.

Correspondence.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

SIR,—Sir Stafford Northcote is reported to have said lately at the Bow and Bromley Institute that we have not yet seen the end of the Eastern difficulties. In this opinion few, probably, will refuse concurrence; but it is otherwise when he states that what has been accomplished ("Peace with honour") was "owing to the great firmness, the great energy, and the great courage of the Prime Minister." Humanly speaking, it may have been so, but the Chancellor of the Exchequer declines, one would think, to acknowledge the will, the word, or the power of Jehovah in appointing events which make history—using the mere instrumentality. He evidently does not know that God decreed the result of which he speaks, and so informed His servant Daniel 2,500 years ago. It is evident to my mind that the invasion of Turkey by Russia, and the reason she failed to occupy Constantinople and Palestine, are stated in Dan. xi. 29, 30, as follows: "At the time appointed he shall return and come toward the South; but it shall not be as the former or as the latter. For the ships of Chittim shall come against him; therefore he shall be grieved, and return and have indignation against the holy covenant." It was the presence of the British fleet in the Sea of Marmora last year that created such consternation in Russia, and which obviously led to the secret convention with which the names of the Prime Minister, the Marquis of Salisbury, and Count Schouvaloff are associated, to the Berlin Treaty, and finally to the return of the Russian army.

Taking this view then, the ships of Chittim would appear to be identical with the ships of Britain. I have no doubt that is so; the idea is not new. Chittim is mentioned six times in the Scriptures. Num. xxiv. 24: "And ships shall come from the coast of Chittim." Jer. ii. 10: "Pass over to the isles of Chittim." Ezek. xxvii. 6, refers to "benches brought out of the isles of Chittim." In the first place, then, Chittim, wherever it is, is represented by isles. Secondly, isles that possess ships, and these ships so formidable as to intimidate one of the greatest military Powers in Europe. Thirdly, such ships have an important commission assigned to them—namely, to threaten and alarm the king of the North. Our islands—and ours only—not merely claim to have the necessary ships, but, significantly enough, to have executed the commission assigned to Chittim. The identification seems to me to be complete.

Further, it is important to note what Scripture appears to indicate—namely, that the event which engages the ships of Chittim is synchronical with "the time of the end." If that be really so, as sure as it is that the Scriptures are true, so sure is it that a time of trouble such as the world has never yet known is approaching. Still more important is it for the British people to know whether tradition is right in describing them a Gentile nation. If tradition is right, then woe betides us, in common with the other Gentile nations in this "the time of the end." But the Identity of the British Isles with the Isles of Chittim adds, in my belief, another proof to the many that exist that the Tribes of Israel are to be found in the British nation and in America. The conclusion receives confirmation in the fact that throughout the prophecies of Isaiah and Jeremiah, Israel, while an exile, is many times referred to as being in the isles, "the isles of the West," &c. If we interpret these expressions to mean the isles of Chittim, as I submit I have shown we are justified in doing, then it follows that we have discovered the Ten Tribes, and have abundant assurance that the desolating and unparalleled wars that will shortly take place will not only issue in great glory to our nation, but, what is of most importance, in glory and praise to the God of Israel.

I am, Sir,
Your obedient servant,
T. T. P.

Harrowgate-road, South Hackney, E.,
June, 1879.

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements

(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O O payable at Ludgate-circus.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed :—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

BANNER FREE CIRCULATION FUND.
Spiro Milina ... ... 3s.

Donations, applications for grants, to be addressed to R. Fergusson Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London.

NEW BOOKS.

NEW PAMPHLET ON OUR IDENTITY.

NOW READY, price 9d., post free, 10d.

ARE WE ISRAELITES? THE TESTIMONY OF HISTORY, PHILOLOGY, AND ETHNOLOGY on the Subject. By the Rev. BOURCHIER WREY SAVILE, M.A., Rector of Shillingford, Exeter. With an Introduction by Philo-Israel.

Contents.

Chapter I.—Hard Speeches.
" II.—Opponents' Arguments.
" III.—Common Errors.
" IV.—The Sacæ.
" V.—The Cymry.
" VI.—Historical Testimony.
" VII.—Philology.
" VIII.—Chief of the Nations.
" IX.—Multiplicity of Seed.
" X.—The Anglo-Saxon Race.
" XI.—Anglo-Israel.
" XII.—Summary.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row; Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; or of any Bookseller.

ARE ENGLISHMEN ISRAELITES?

MR. ROBERTS REFUTED.

REPLY TO MR. ROBERTS.

Now ready, price 2d.

A REPLY TO MR. ROBERTS ON THE EXETER HALL DEBATE, on the Subject, Are Englishmen Israelites? By ALEXANDER DUNN.

A REPLY TO MR. ROBERTS will be sent post free for 2½d., from the publisher, W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

A REPLY TO MR. ROBERTS may be had, by ordering, of any Bookseller in town or country.

London: Published by W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

A NEW WORK ON THE IDENTITY.

THE PROMISES TO ABRAHAM, with Select References and Explanatory Notes, to which is added an article entitled, "Israel Among the Gentiles."

The aim of this Pamphlet is to present the Scriptural Argument in a new and concise form, both for examination and reference.

Price Sixpence, or free by post, Sevenpence. May be had of the Author, W. S. Cavill, Norton Woodside, near Sheffield; or of Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.; and of all Booksellers.

Price 4d.; post free, 6d.

NEBUCHADNEZZAR'S DREAM and THE BRITISH EMPIRE. By Ephraim. With Illustrative Prophetic Map.

"We are glad to see another attempt to connect Daniel's dream of the metallic image and "the stone which becomes a mountain," with the British Empire. It appears in the form of a letter to a friend abroad. The pamphlet, though very sketchy in its character and aim, is on the whole a useful little work."—Banner of Israel.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; Sold by W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row

MISCELLANEOUS.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

Owing to the increasing interest taken in the Identity movement, it is found necessary to occasionally enlarge our space to make room for the important papers constantly reaching the Editor. It has, therefore, been determined to issue Twelve Double Numbers during 1879, for which Twopence will be charged. The first of these series of Double Numbers was issued the first week in January, and one on each succeeding first week in the month during the year.

	£	s.	d.
Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free	0	7	6
Two copies (including Double Numbers) ...	0	12	4
Three " " " " ...	0	18	8
Four " " " " ...	1	6	2
Six " " " " ...	1	17	4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-Grand, London, to W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

Now ready, price 7d., post free 8½d,

THE AUGUST MONTHLY PART OF THE BANNER OF ISRAEL. May be had, by ordering, of any bookseller or newsagent.

London: W. H Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row; and Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

Price 7s., post free 6d. extra.

THE SECOND VOLUME OF THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

This volume contains a large number of articles on our Identity ith Lost Israel, by the best and most learned writers on the subject. Also many interesting papers on the Great Pyramid by Professor Piazzi Smyth, F.R.S.E., Astronomer-Royal for Scotland, Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A., Major H. A. Tracey, R.A., Charles Horner, Esq., and others.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

Now ready, price One penny, post free 1½d. One dozen copies, post free 1s. 100 copies 6s., post free 7s.

THE IDENTITY OF THE BRITISH NATION WITH THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. THE CLUE TO THE EASTERN QUESTION. By C. W. E.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row

New and Revised Edition, Price 6d. Cloth, gilt, 1s.

THE NEW OLD STORY, with an Introduction to a Marvellous Puzzle. The Story gives a sketch of the History of the Hebrews, shewing distinctly the difference between the Two Nations Judah and Israel, the latter being the British. The Story also tells of the Great Pyramid, and explains how its wonderful meaning can be, as it is only understood by measurement. An Appendix explains "The Eastern Question." The Story is written with great simplicity, and interests young children. By A E I, Author of "The Answer to the Eastern Question."

W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

AN ELEMENTARY DIGEST or SKETCH OF THE CHIEF FACTS and TEACHINGS of the GREAT PYRAMID of EGYPT; adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific. By PHILO-ISRAEL; together with Original Papers by the following leading Pyramidists, republished mostly from the BANNER OF ISRAEL (by kind permission of the proprietor)—viz., Professor Piazzi Smyth, the Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A., Charles Horner, Esq., and Major H. A. Tracey, R.A. Being a pamphlet by five authors (a Pyramid number).

LITERARY NOTICE.—The Great Pyramid of Egypt (52 pp.; Guest, London; price 4d.).—This pamphlet is put forth as "A Digest of Great Pyramid Teaching Adapted to the Comprehension of the Unlearned and of the Unscientific," and is from the pen of the able editor of THE BANNER OF ISRAEL. To it papers by other writers, including Professor Piazzi Smyth, are appended. Of it we need only that it is well calculated to serve the end in view, and gives a clear summary of the chief facts of Pyramid lore. Over 5,000 copies have been sold in the course of three months, and this alone proves how interest in the subject is extending."—Alfreton Journal, April 25, 1879.

BRISTOL LEAFLETS ON THE IDENTIFICATION. 1 to 9; 1s. per 100.

London: ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

PRESIDENT: VISCOUNT FOLKESTONE, M.P.

FRIENDS wishing for LECTURES on the important subject of "Britain's Identity with the Lost Tribes of Israel," by gentlemen of recognised position and ability, are requested to write for a Prospectus of Subjects and Lectures to the Hon. Secretary. Dates are now being filled for Yorkshire, Lancashire, Devon, Kent, and North Britain. The terms are such as involve no risk as to loss on the part of those friends inviting the Lecturers.

Office: 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London, E.C.

BOOKS, ETC.

THE ANGLO-ISRAEL POSTBAG; OR, HOW ARTHUR CAME TO SEE IT.

THIRD EDITION of the ANGLO-ISRAEL POSTBAG; OR, HOW ARTHUR CAME TO SEE IT.

BY THE RIGHT REV.

BISHOP TITCOMB,

IS NOW READY. Two Editions are now published. The Eighteenpenny Edition, in Paper Covers, for general distribution. The Half-crown Edition, Printed on Toned Paper, Handsome Cloth Gilt.

THE ANGLO-ISRAEL POSTBAG contains Chapters on The Philological Difficulty—The Promises of God to the Hebrew Nation—To Joseph—To Ephraim—To the Kingdom of Israel, as distinct from Judah—The Anglo-Israel Theory and the Geographical March of Christianity, &c., &c., &c.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

TO AUTHORS. Authors desirous of issuing Works or Pamphlets on the great and increasingly interesting Question of the Identity of the Lost Ten Tribes with the British Nation, should first communicate with Robert Banks, of Racquet-court, Fleet-street, who has already been honoured by issuing, amongst others, the following works on the subject:

The Banner of Israel. Weekly 1d.; monthly 7d.

The Nation's Glory Leader. Weekly 1d.; quarterly 1s. 4d.

The Pillar of Witness. By late Captain Tracey. Cloth 2s. 6d.; paper 1s. 6d. (second edition).

The Anglo-Israel Post Bag. By Bishop Titcomb. Cloth 2s. 6d.; paper 1s. 6d. (second edition).

The History of the House of Israel. By Philo-Israel. Cloth 1s.; paper 6d. (sixth thousand).

Price 2d., post free, 2½d.

THE HISTORICAL, ETHNIC, AND PHILOLOGICAL ARGUMENTS in PROOF of BRITISH IDENTITY with the TEN LOST TRIBES OF ISRAEL, clearly and simply stated.

BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

CONTENTS:—Introduction—The Celts—Professor Rawlinson's Testimony—The Cymry—The Cimmerii—The Gimiri and Khumri—The Testimony of the Nimroud Obelisk—The Scythians—The Anglo-Saxons—Sharon Turner's Testimony—The Jutes and Angles—The Danes and the Normans—General Conclusions—Philology—The Welsh Language—The Rev. Canon Lysons' Testimony—Idiomatic Identity Between Hebrew and English—Tyndal's Testimony—The Tribe of Dan—The Irish Celts—Are the Continental Nations Israelites?—Conclusions—Appendix.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane; and Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

This day. Price 2d. Post free 2½d.

MANASSEH AND THE UNITED STATES. An important Essay delivered before the "Lost Israel Identification Society," by the Rev. Joseph Wild, D.D., at Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, New York.

CONTENTS:—The Fulness of the Gentiles set in—For whom did God intend America—The Origin of the United States—The Footsteps of Ephraim and Manasseh—The Will of Jacob made to Ephraim and Manasseh—Manasseh a People, and a Great People—Manasseh's Birthtime of Separation—Out of nearly Sixty Conquered Colonies the only one England ever Lost was that of Manasseh (America)—The Great Seal of the United States—Manasseh was brought up at the Door of the Pyramid, &c., &c.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.; and of any Bookseller.

Price 1d.; post free, 1½d.

GOD'S LOVE FOR ISRAEL, A GUARANTEE THAT HE WILL FULFIL HIS PROMISES TO ISRAEL. By JOHN GILDER SHAW.

Price 6d.; or with illustrative map, 8d.

BRITAIN (OR ISRAEL) THE FIFTH AND LAST, AND THE UNCONQUERABLE EMPIRE. By JOHN GILDER SHAW.

Price 3d.; post free, 3½d.

CHRONOLOGICAL CHART OF BRITISH VICTORIES OVER THE CONTINENTAL POWERS, ranging from the battle of Cressy (1346), to our last victory, the taking of Sebastopol, Sept. 8, 1855. Arranged by J. G. SHAW, of Leeds.

"We trust Mr. Shaw's labour in preparing this paper may be appreciated by the public and be largely sold."—Banner of Israel.

London: Published by Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; and may be had of the Author, 20 Park-row, Leeds, and of all booksellers.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, 5 Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 13, 1879. [All Rights Reserved.]

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. III. No. 138. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 20, 1879. [ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

PAGE

"If He Go Through" (Micah v. 8) 333
"The Tree of Low Stature."—By the Woodpecker.—Part II. 334
Our Opponents' Language 335
Is It a Lost Blessing? 336
Mr. W. Greig, of Montreal, on "The Identity"—and on the Constancy of the Gospel to the British Islands 337
Where They Are Not. Where Are They? 338
Progress Among the Derbyshire Miners 339
Correspondence 339

"IF HE GO THROUGH."

(MICAH v. 8.)

THE passage we quote is one of Micah's prophecies, and relates to "the remnant of Jacob"—the Ten Tribes—who he predicted should be "among the Gentiles," "in the midst of many people" (just as the British are) "as a lion among the beasts of the forest, as a young lion among the "flocks of sheep"—the very emblem by which all mankind recognises this nation, since the British lion is proverbial, is the national representative of this people, and fitly corresponds with the character of the race, in boldness, in power, in strength, in pugnacity, and in a sort of sluggish inertness till aroused, and then its inherent vigour and might carries all before it.

The prophecy, however, does not end there. It goes on to say of this "remnant of Jacob among the Gentiles," so like "a lion" and a "young lion," that "IF he go through," certain results must follow. What are they? They are God's promises to this race, and ought to furnish us with a new Identity, to be proved from history. "If he go through," he "both treadeth down and teareth in pieces, and there is NONE to deliver." What, then, is required for the British invariably to conquer in war, "to tread down, to tear in pieces, and to find none to deliver" from their victorious grasp? THEY MUST "GO THROUGH." Vacillation or timidity in advance to battle has no promise of help for Israel. It is not "the faint heart which is to win" in her case. There is given only to the bold and daring "advance" the promise of success. Let us look back and see if history supports this promise. In quite modern days the advance of the three divisions of the British forces into Afghanistan, to avenge the insult Shere Ali offered to "the lion of India," was declared by the pessimists to be fraught with tremendous peril for our race. Death, defeat, and destruction, were foretold to be the certain consequences. So they would have been, had there been adopted a timid or vacillating policy. Not so were the Khyber or Peiwar Kotal seized; not so Candahar occupied. It was "by going through" that Generals Browne, and Roberts, and Stewart conquered, and God, according to the promise, gave them the victory, so that all their three columns of Israelite troops "both trod down" opposition, "tore to pieces" all resisting forces and defences, and "there was none to deliver" from their conquering hands—no Russian, no Afghan, no Afreedi, no Mohmund forces.

On the other hand, in Zululand, there was no "going through" at first. God gave Lord Chelmsford seemingly the vacillating, the hesitating mind which never could take a bold step, never pushed "forward," followed up no success, struck a timid blow here and there, and then shrunk back as after Insandlana, Ginglelova, and the relief of Ekowe. And what was the result? was there any "treading down or tearing in pieces" of the Zulu savage forces and impis? Alas, no! No blessing followed any of Lord Chelmsford's first plans; and the reason was, he had no power to "go through" Zululand, or throw himself and his Israelite bands upon the promises of the faithful God of Israel. Hence his utter failure at first and want of success.

Now Sir Garnet Wolseley has arrived upon the scene "the march forward" has been for some weeks in operation, and slow as the process is, what is the result? Cetywayo's opposition has already collapsed, the elephant tusks have been sent in—though in treachery—the enemies of Israel have been destroyed, and have, we hope, disappeared. The British troops are "treading down" the military pride of the brave naked savages who have so nobly died in this their foolish cause, and on July 4 "tore in pieces" a despicable murderous tyranny which is a disgrace to South Africa and to our long-suffering as well, that has permitted its so-long existence near our very borders.

Looking back a little, what brought the conquering legions of the Russians to a stand just outside the walls of our "Gate" Constantinople, when at San Stephano they looked down on the minarets of the city, they could find no way to enter, though, like "the wicked men of Sodom," they wearied themselves to find the door? (Gen. xix. 11). It was only Admiral Hornby's resolve (God prompted) to "go forward." He passed his ships up the Straits, anchored off the Golden Horn, and lo! the Bear was forthwith "check-mated," and now we see him sullenly retreating from the territory he has too long occupied, foiled only by Israel "going through" the Straits, and thus, without war or battle, "treading down" his boasted plans to occupy Israel's great "Gate," and "tearing in pieces" the proud purposes which had for their object the annexation of the entire Turkish Empire to the colossal territories of the Czar of all the Russias. Again, how often have we proved the truth of the prophecy in the sketches we have published of "The Battles of Israel," that all our successes have been gained by the resolute British "push forward" at the critical moments of the contests in which we have nationally been engaged! It was no vacillating policy, but the determination to "go through," which won for us Crecy, and Agincourt, and Poictiers, and Trafalgar, and the Nile, and Albuera, and Waterloo, and Plassey, and Argaum, and Goojerat, and the hundreds of successful fights fought and won in Indian and other lands since our history began. In all these, when we resolved to "go through," God enabled us to "tread down" and "tear in pieces" the enemies who opposed us, levelled their defences and gave us their lands as our heritages wherever we have had to wage war against them. It is, in fact, the same course of action which in these cases has led to our success, enabled the Tribes of Israel to march safely away from their pursuing foes, the Egyptians, when the Lord said to their complaining leader, "Wherefore criest thou unto ME? Speak unto the children of Israel that they GO FORWARD." The result of that injunction was that the Tribes obeyed the command, went into the midst of the sea, conquered their enemies by escaping from them, while the corpses of the latter on the sea-shore attested the fact that by obeying the Lord's directions they "both trod down" and "tore in pieces" their dreaded foes, and there was none to deliver them either from the fury of the returning sea or from the mighty One who fought for Israel, causing them to conquer simply by "going through."

Digitized by Google

"THE TREE OF LOW STATURE."

BY THE WOODPECKER.

(Concluded from page 330).

PART II.

LET us look at the other woodcutter. He is a different character—a veritable Pope—hailing from an opposite quarter entirely—viz., Birmingham. He is a very ambitious man, holding views of Biblical truth to which only few can accede. Being the great apostle of his clique, he valiantly makes known to the world who he is, and what the tenets of his religious belief are, by coming forward with a stone axe to chop down the "tree of low stature." Like his doughty Bristol colleague, his argument is the same, and therefore they must be examined together. If our opponents see much to ridicule in us, we certainly have much ground to travel in exposing the positive ignorance abounding on the other side.

The assertions of these two champion opponents are simply astounding when we are requested to remember that they have professed to study and expound the Scriptures for many, many years. Listen to the Rev. J. B. Clifford: "Let me say a word about 'The Lost Tribes.' From the frequent use of this phrase among the Anglo-Israelites one would imagine it occurred again and again in the Bible, but it does not occur there even once." Again, they were not lost "in the sense of its not being known where they were, for the disciples went forth at once to these lost sheep, and commenced their work among them of preaching and healing." Lastly, "There is not a single instance in the whole Bible in which the word lost is used to express the idea that the Israelites were lost in the sense of its not being known where they were. This phrase is, therefore, a mere human invention, without any foundation whatever" (Pamphlet, page 11).

This is the Bristol standard of opposition, and a bold one it is.

Turn we now to Birmingham. There Mr. R. Roberts says, "The idea that they were to regain nationality and become powerful in the earth while in judicial exile from their country is an invention of the Anglo-Israel theory. It is not testified anywhere in the Scriptures" (vide Pamphlet, page 27).

"Where is the information 'that the Ten Tribes were to be lost on the face of the earth existing, but not recognised?' It does not exist; it is a mere assertion, an invention, a statement of Mr. Hine's without the least proof. Perhaps we shall have an opportunity of putting that to the test more specifically on a future occasion; but I make that assertion at the present time, that there is no declaration in the whole Scripture to that effect"* (vide Pamphlet, page 15).

I am not going to defend all Mr. Hine's opinions, but a word must be spoken, for "the truth's sake," on behalf of the Master of the vineyard.

These irate shepherds use very strong language, but are their statements Biblically true? Is "ignorance" the term to apply to them, or should it be "blind prejudice?"

Hark! I hear a digger reading! "My people hath been lost sheep" (Jer. l.). The Jews never have been lost, but always known. Fausset says that "this is true, literally, of Israel before its coming restoration" (vol. iii., page 730).

"Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will sow the House of Israel and the House of Judah (two distinct Houses, be it observed) with the seed of man, and with the seed of beast. And it shall come to pass, that like as I have watched over them to pluck up, and to break down, and to throw down, and to destroy, and to afflict, so will I watch over them to build and to plant, saith the Lord." Here it is manifest that the two Houses are still being watched over by the Almighty, whose will and purpose it is "to build and to plant." "The same God who, as it were, was on the watch to destroy, shall be as much on the watch for restoration" (Fausset, vol. iv., page 109).

The Jewish Rabbis of the present day stoutly declare that the Ten Tribes are not incorporated with them; and that is just where such missionaries to the Jews as the Rev. J. Wilkinson and others ignominiously fail in their missionary efforts. They tell the Jews deliberately and persistently that they now represent the bulk of God's chosen people, and the Jews laugh at them and ridicule the idea. If their statements be true, then the Word of God is false, and the Almighty never spake by the mouth of Hosea the prophet. Hosea, who predicted of Israel of the Ten Tribes, in their cast-off condition, "Yet the number of the children of Israel shall be as the sand of the sea, which cannot be measured nor numbered; and it shall come to pass, that in the place where it was said unto them, Ye are not My people, there it shall be said unto them, Ye are the sons of the living God" (Hos. i. 10). Now the Jews are not a multitudinous race. They are known the world over as a portion of God's cast-off chosen people—the Hebrews. They are not to be found nationally located in any one place, for they are "scattered." The Jews are the plant of Jehovah's pleasures, and are to be carried back to the Land of Promise by Israel of the Ten Tribes. Where are the Ten Tribes? Hark!

> "The shades of night were falling fast,
> As through the vineyard broad there passed
> Two mentors, who, with steps precise,
> Bore banners with the strange device:"
> They never were lost,
> It's not in the Bible.

Hark! A shepherd from a bough doth read: "The children which thou shalt have, after thou hast lost the other, shall say again in thine ears, The place is too strait for me; give place to me that I may dwell. Then shalt thou say in thine heart, Who hath begotten me these? seeing I have lost my children, and am desolate, a captive, and removing to and fro. And who hath brought up these? Behold, I was left

* This is the Birmingham standard of opposition, and a bold one it is. Vide other parts of the same pamphlet.

Digitized by Google

alone: these, where had they been?" (Isa. xlix. 20, 21—evidently referring to Rachel's lament, who was one of the mothers of Israel—Ruth. iv. 11). There is a spiritual application to all Scripture, but there is also a literal. Fausset says this Scripture represents "Zion's," and we may also add the Jews', "joyful wonder at the unexpected restoration of the Ten Tribes," literally.

Hark! another digger reads, "Israel is swallowed up. Now shall they be among the Gentiles as a vessel wherein is no pleasure" (Hosea viii. 8). Anything "swallowed up" must pass out of sight! All modern commentators are agreed that Hosea was distinctly a prophet sent to the Ten Tribes, and that the majority of his prophecies refer entirely to them. Listen to his prediction because of their open wickedness and persistent disobedience:—"Therefore they (Israel of the Ten Tribes) shall be as the morning cloud (promising blessing, but suddenly vanishing), as the early dew that passeth away, as the chaff that is driven with the whirlwind out of the floor, and as the smoke out of the chimney" (chap. xiii. 3).

Again is heard that well-known cry, which cometh from the mountain high,

"They never were lost,
It's not in the Bible."

Here comes an inquirer who desires to know what Ezekiel's prophecy of the resurrection of the "dry bones" can mean? The prophet saw the bones in the valley, beheld the shaking, saw the bones come together, witnessed the sinews and the flesh come upon them, and the skin cover them, "but there was no breath in them." Here was a great army of people spiritually dead. "Then He said unto me, Son of man, these bones are the whole House of Israel: behold, they say, Our bones are dried, and our hope is lost: we are cut off for our parts. Therefore prophesy and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God: Behold, O My people, I will open your graves" (chap. xxxvii.).

Hark! again we hear that well-known cry,

"They never were lost,
It's not in the Bible."

(The Jews have never been buried out of sight, but the Ten Tribes have). The reader continues: "And I will cause you to come up out of your graves" (a clear intimation that some portion of the people whom the Almighty designates as "My people," which in the Old Testament can only refer to the seed of Abraham, have been buried out of sight), "and bring you into the land of Israel. And ye shall know that I am the Lord, when I have opened your graves, O My people, and brought you up out of your graves; and I shall place you in your own land. Then shall ye know that I the Lord have spoken it and performed it."

Here is a restoration predicted which has never taken place. The following prophecy in the same chapter—viz., of the "two sticks"—still more forcibly proves that the two Houses—Israel and Judah—are yet to be re-united; not to be separated any more for ever. The one (Judah) has ever been known and recognised, the other (Israel) buried out of sight.

A shepherd pruning the "tree of low stature," reads: "My sheep wandered through all the mountains, and upon every high hill. Yea, My flock was scattered upon all the face of the earth, and none did search or seek after them" (Ezek. xxxiv. 6). The spiritual application of this passage is perfectly right, but it has also a literal meaning which must not be lost sight of. "My sheep," in the Old Testament, decidedly refers to the chosen people—the seed of Abraham, the great bulk of which the world has lost sight of. What an absurdity for any sane man to say "They never were lost," when, for years and years, commentators, divines, and civilised nations have been looking round, seeking the Lost Tribes and wondering where they are! "Israel is an empty vine" (x. 1), or, as the margin renders it, "a vine emptying the fruit which it giveth." This is true of the British nation to-day, if it be true of any nation on earth. But the same prophet (Hosea) declares, "I FOUND Israel like grapes in the wilderness" (ix. 10). The Jews have never been lost, and if the Jews represent all the chosen people in the world at the present time, the prophet found something that never was lost.

This is simply "Irish logic." Said an Irish sailor to his captain, "Sir, can a thing be lost when you know where it is?" "Certainly not," was the answer. "Arrah," then said the sailor, "the bucket's not lost, it's at the bottom of the sea!"

Would you believe it? Once more is heard that well-known cry,

"They never were lost,
It's not in the Bible."

May 24, 1879.

OUR OPPONENTS' LANGUAGE.

WHAT is there in our Identity that transforms godly, courteous, educated servants of the Lord into angry, raging, evil-speaking, abusive men? It seems to us that the subject acts on some clerical minds like the red flag of the Matador on El Toro of the Spanish bull fights! We are really becoming ashamed of the tendency our Established and other clergy are exhibiting to break out when brought to bay, into language which disgraces their cloth as applied to our subject and its teachers! It is, further, a foolish policy which dictates this violence; for the lay folk cannot but be astonished when they note the fury of their teachers, and proceed at once (being human beings) to investigate, out of mere curiosity, a subject which so greatly throws their clerical friends off their mental balance. The Rev. Mr. Cornall, for instance, first set the evil example, by calling our belief a "heresy." The Rev. S. A. Walker followed up the attack by some choice specimens of language which served only to attract attention to our cause, but did no harm.

The Rev. J. B. Clifford went deeper into the slough, and roundly asked, "Are not these men blasphemers?" "Is not this an anti-Christ?" "the mystery of iniquity?" and the men who teach the doctrine obnoxious to the fate of Korah, Dathan, and Abiram?

We have now the Rev. John Wilkinson, once the "friend of Israel," the author of "Englishmen Not Israelites," breaking out into invective and vituperation which we think is simply disgraceful in a minister of the Gospel, and would be highly improper even in a layman! In his lecture, delivered at Sunderland on July 29, 1879, our rev. opponent, speaking of "the Ten Tribes, Where are they Not?" did not think it beneath him as a Christian, and as a Christian teacher, to use the following words of us Israelites, and of our teaching. "The Anglo-Israel theory," he said, "was one of the mischievous errors of these latter times, and it was said that in those days Satan would try to deceive the very elect. It suited DEVIL-INSPIRED MEN to study the Bible, and he believed that Satan was a deep student of the Scriptures; and knowing that the nations were to be blessed through the Jews, by a master-stroke was trying to persuade the people that the English were the Lost Ten Tribes, so as to draw attention away from the Jews and so defeat the plans." Surely the Rev. John Wilkinson ought to be ashamed of sentiments like these! By using such expressions he terms Bishops Bond and Titcomb, the Rev. Messrs. Savile, Hickson, Cachemaille, Morton, Rogers, Harding, Poole, and very many more godly clergymen "devil-inspired" men! Shame upon the man who has dared so to traduce his fellow-Christians! Well deserved was the rebuke Mr. Wilkinson brought upon himself from the secular journalist, who reported these his words in the Sunderland Daily Post of the 2nd August, 1879. He said then—

Mr. Wilkinson's closing observations were simply in bad taste and must recoil upon himself. To speak of his opponents as "devil-inspired" men, and the Anglo-Israel theory as a "master-stroke of Satan," may be the outcome of conscientious conviction on Mr. Wilkinson's part; but those who know the daily walk in life of Mr. Greig and his fellow-Israelites, as they choose to style themselves, will require something more tangible in the shape of evidence than mere assertion before accepting a statement of this kind. Mr. Greig has a wonderful grasp of Scripture subjects, and his exposition of the prophecies, although given in homely phraseology, would not have discredited a skilled divine. If the premises from which Mr. Greig starts are once admitted, you are hopelessly bound to accept his conclusions.

Digitized by Google

What, we ask, does Mr. Wilkinson mean by taunting us with being followers of "Satan" because we study God's Word? Is it wrong to do so? or is our fault only that when reading it we see not with Mr. Wilkinson's eyes, and observe what in his blindness he cannot see at all therein?

We charge Mr. Wilkinson with error when he tells us that God's Word promises that the nations were to be blessed "through the Jews." They were to be blessed in the Son of David, who was A Jew, but no other Jew remaining a Jew is fit or capable of being a blessing to the world, seeing that he is an enemy of the Son of God, and would crucify Him again if he had the power. We deny also that our teaching "draws attention away from the Jews and so defeats God's plans." The very reverse is the case. We draw fixed attention to the Jews in the only way Scripture sanctions, and quoting Isa. xviii. 1—7; Hosea i. 11; Jer. iii. 18; Ezek. xxxvii. 16—22; Zeph. iii. 10—12, we tell men that the restoration of the Jews is near at hand, their time of blessing is come, the removal of their curses is imminent, and that soon they will be joined to Israel of the Ten Tribes, and thus under British-Israel's protection be restored to the inheritance and God's favour at the self-same moment. We find, then, the Rev. Mr. Wilkinson not only has unworthily descended to the use of language unbecoming his cloth and his subject too, but that he is Scripturally wrong, prophetically wrong, philologically wrong (as the editor of the Sunderland Post also shows), and argumentatively hopelessly wrong in his contention with Mr. John Greig!

IS IT A LOST BLESSING?

WE can well imagine how generation after generation of Bible readers have pondered over the passage in Gen. xlviii., from verses 5 to 21, with a feeling of surprise and questioning wonder, allied to the displeased astonishment of the father, who, when he expected his first-born to receive the highest patriarchal blessing, heard and saw it by the crossing of hands descend on the head of his second son. No reason for this selection was vouchsafed to satisfy the father or to gratify our needless curiosity; either Jacob was permitted by God to bestow his blessing which was to entail pre-eminent privileges on the grandson of his own selection, or else he uttered his prophetic forecast in accordance with what he knew were God's intentions in regard to Joseph's descendants. Deeply as the weary, worn-out old man must have regretted paining in any way the best and noblest of his sons, yet he was not to be shaken in his doubtless Heaven-inspired decision, and he emphasized it (ver. 19) by asserting that while Manasseh should in truth be great, yet Ephraim should be greater than he, and thereupon Joseph apparently held his peace and remonstrated no further. How dearly the old man loved his Rachel's first-born, is seen in that to him he left a double portion of the land he had acquired by force of arms, yet the younger son of that first-born was to be preferred before his brother, who had to be content with a secondary place in the inheritance of greatness God destined for both.

Now we would enquire, What was the result of Jacob's blessing on the lads? What were the consequences to the descendants of Manasseh? Was it a mere string of idle words, rousing Joseph's displeasure for nothing, and calculated to mislead him in dwelling on the predicted future of his sons' sons? Nay, surely none can think this, and yet where do we read of Manasseh's greatness as compared to that of the other Tribes in the history of the Old Testament? In Num. i. 35 we see that it was the least of the Tribes at that period in regard to numbers, unless, indeed, Levi consisted of fewer, but they (verse 49) were not allowed to be counted; and, as we have had occasion to remark before now, it is singular that the former Tribe was exceptionally divided into two distinct portions, as if to prevent their attempting to be a great and separate dominion apart from the other Tribes, on the score of a distinct blessing having been bestowed on them and Ephraim by Jacob, though they were only his grandchildren and not his very own sons. Since the dispersion and captivity of Israel there is no especial record of Manasseh's fate. He was lost like the other Tribes, and while there have been many false claimants set up by others for the honour of being the Lost Tribes, we are not aware that it has been urged for any nation or people that they were representatives of Manasseh in particular, till Mr. E. Hine pointed to America, and bade us seek and find them in our brothers of the United States.

How entirely the latter fulfil the requirements of the patriarchal blessing, we think, can with difficulty be denied even by those who are most inclined to cavil at what we claim to be called a discovery, not a mere conjecture. They were of us and with us till we had rested and recruited our powers in the Isles of the West; then when the time had come for their independent greatness to begin, they went out from us, and God over-ruled that which we are wont to deem a mad and reckless policy, to the rise of a "people" into a greatness unsurpassed save by that of the nation from which they parted—and a people it has remained, not a company of nations, such as form the British Empire. They swarm over fresh lands, but they do not need to colonize in other parts of the world, for the wide plains and rich lands of their continent invite their super-abundant population to spread itself far and wide over the country contiguous to their first conquered territory. There was a fear at one time that they might have been split into two nations—a groundless fear! Manasseh was to be "a people," not two; and the danger melted away with the vanishing of a great national sin.

Why, we would ask, when America became free of the "old country," did they not set up a king of their own, for we believe a love of royalty and inborn loyalty still beats in American breasts, and are with them suppressed but not extinct feelings, ready to burst out again? When entering upon their share of the land which is Israel's inheritance, they shall be one in the great confederation of Israel's company of nations, "a people" great and free, yet acknowledging the supremacy of the earthly Prince of the House of David. Manasseh was to be "a people," not a kingdom, and their claim to a share in the rule of one of the seed of David as their earthly head, is as great as that of the other Tribes of Israel.

It is surely very noticeable that while supposed to be entirely the same as the British, from whom they went forth, Americans have since their independence developed very marked distinctive features of character, disposition, and taste, not to be accounted for by the mere fact of difference of climate, separate government, or other external circumstances. They speak our language, but differently, and their habits are not ours in various respects. They may be, they are, our brothers or our cousins, but they are not the same as ourselves; and while we are drawing together in closer bonds of friendship and more confiding intimacy than has ever before been the case since our national separation, our differences are none the less apparent. We are aware this has been stated on a previous occasion, but we find that an assertion, though it may be uncontradicted and undisproved, nevertheless requires frequent repetition before it is received into the minds of some and makes a lodgment there.

Digitized by Google

It has been urged that to suppose one Tribe would remain separate from the mass amidst whom they dwelt for centuries, is to imagine that which is too unlikely to be accepted; but we see no greater miracle in one Tribe remaining distinct from its surroundings, if such be God's will, than in the fact, which we assert to be true, that Israel was brought to these isles on the whole a pure unmixed stock, after all its wanderings with and amidst other nations. It may be a wonder within a wonder, but neither is greater than the other, and both possible to God.

May be some of the children of Manasseh escaped by sea from the great captivity and found their way hither in the ships of Dan; possibly they may have dwelt in the British Islands widely apart from their brothers who came hither by land, but on the other side of the Atlantic. The great God may have gathered them together, drawing them hence by invisible cords, while they have seemed but to follow their own leadings, and blending them in one in their new home. Just as you may separate a stream of quicksilver into many portions and part them widely, but they will not mix with other objects, and brought again together they join each to each and form one undivided body.

That any should be found to attempt to spiritualise away Jacob's blessing of the two sons of Joseph appears to us too foolish to be possible, for if the greatness of the two was to depend on spiritual gifts and knowledge, how can one be great and another greater, since all spiritual gifts are from the same source, and that is perfection? and surely it would be an absurdity to speak of a spiritually great people, second to another spiritually greater people, who are also a company of spiritual nations!

We think our opponents who accuse us of wresting Bible passages to suit our views would have some difficulty in explaining in a spiritual sense Isa. xlix. 20, and in saying who by that light is the one "lost" out of the multitudinous spiritual nation, which, nevertheless, so increases afterwards that it calls out for more room; unless such interpreters take very unjustifiable liberties with the text of Scripture. Whereas, by accepting Manasseh as literally the one lost out of the main body of Israel, every difficulty vanishes.

Of course Manasseh, as a portion of Israel, shares the marks and blessings that were not exclusively to belong to each separate Tribe; and the Americans of the United States are accordingly wealthy, possessing treasures of land and of water. They are a Christian Protestant people, they honour the Sabbath and the ten commandments, they walk side by side with the British in their missionary labours, they push the poor wild nations in their Northern continent to the outer borders of the land, till the latter are gradually dying out, or are swallowed up by their ever-advancing civilized neighbours.

We have said enough, we conceive, to justify our belief in the Manassite origin of the Americans of the United States. If others deem us mistaken, we would ask where, then, is this people consisting of the blessed thousands of Manasseh to be looked for? Are they to be gathered shortly in from their scatterings in various parts of the world, unknown and unhonoured, as the Rev Mr. Goodhart, lately at the Mildmay-park prophetical conference, suggested as the future lot of Israel's Lost Tribes. But if this be so, when and where can Manasseh become the great people Jacob pronounced it should be? When the mountainous stone kingdom fills the earth, which we fully believe it has already begun to do, whither can Manasseh turn to become a great people if its greatness has not already been attained? and if such promised and conspicuous greatness, such as Joseph must have pictured from his father's words, is never to fall to the lot of his first-born, then what has become of Jacob's blessing? Did the promise for Manasseh's future, uttered by him who had wrestled with the Angel of God and prevailed, fade away, as did the sound of the voice that spoke it, while on the other hand the blessings were to be bestowed in their fulness on Ephraim? Was the elder brother to be satisfied with only meaningless phrases? Impossible! The seed of his greatness was sown as his aged grandfather spoke the words of assured blessing to the lad; and if the upspringing therefrom has been the work of centuries, never, we may be sure, has it entirely ceased, and the noble plant with its wide-spreading branches has grown into beauty and greatness, which are destined to attain a grandeur and perfection beyond our present conceptions, when the Master shall gather His elect together, and plant a remnant of them again in the glorious Land of Promise.

L. P.

April 22.

MR. WILLIAM GREIG, OF MONTREAL, ON "THE IDENTITY"—AND ON THE CONSTANCY OF THE GOSPEL TO THE BRITISH ISLANDS.

The Rev. Jos. Williams, of Boston, Mass., lectured in the basement of Stanley-street Church, on the evening of Tuesday, June 24, 1879, subject:—"Anglo-Israel." The Rev. James McCaul, Pastor of the Church, occupied the chair, and after prayer introduced the lecturer. The lecture consisted in the reading of a great number of passages from the Scriptures, with a running exposition on them, and was intended apparently to show the continuity of the subject from Genesis to Revelation. At the close of the lecture, Mr. Wm. Greig, who was appointed previous to the meeting to move a vote of thanks, and to give a short address, spoke as follows:—

Mr. Chairman,—I rise to propose a vote of thanks to the lecturer of this evening, and in doing so would just like to add a few words by way of summing up the evidences brought forward in support of our Identity with the House of Israel, and will not at this late hour take up your time by a formal introduction, but plunge at once into the subject.

You are aware that Britain received the Gospel at an early date in the Christian era. Eusebius says, "St. Paul himself preached the Gospel there." Many have wondered how it is that our nation, more than all other nations, has kept its candle burning brightly in its candlestick during all these centuries.

The Gospel was preached and Churches established by the apostles and disciples of Christ in the cities of Asia Minor, in the North of Africa, and the South of Europe, yet, notwithstanding, their lights have been extinguished and their candlesticks removed. Why was it so? You will no doubt reply that errors crept in and godliness crept out. True, but the same can be said of our own nation. Infidels say that Christianity is not suited to the bulk of mankind, that in its pretended mission to the races of the world it has miserably failed, that religion is purely a matter of race, and therefore the Latin race is Papist, the Turks and Arabs are Mahommedan, the Hindoos and Chinese are Pagans, and the Anglo-Saxon tribes are Protestant Christians.

Mr. Chairman, we know that the Infidel has lied, and has lied presumptuously. The Gospel is suited to the wants of all nations, and people of every tongue under heaven shall sing the song of the redeemed. What, then, is the reason why our light holds on to burn? Have we been so very good that God could not in justice deprive us of our candlestick? Is it because we are Protestants, as some affirm, that we are of all nations the most prosperous? Germany is Protestant, so is Holland, and Denmark, and Norway, and Sweden, and some of the Swiss Cantons, and do their privileges at all compare with ours? No, sir, it is not because we are Protestants or better than others, but because of the great love our God has borne to us and with us, and because of His oath to our fathers Abraham, Isaac, and Israel, "saying, Surely in blessing I will bless thee, and in multiplying I will multiply thee; and in thee and in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed;" and did it ever strike you that these and many other promises were made to Abraham and his seed without condition, and ratified with an oath? and dare you imagine that God is a man that He should lie, or the son of man that He should repent? Were I to promise you, Mr. Chairman, one thousand dollars, say in three years' time, and give my oath that I would certainly perform it, would you hold me absolved from my oath or the payment of the money if meanwhile, because you had done me an injury and so lost my friendship, I should turn round and give the thousand dollars to some one else who did please me, and cut you off without even the customary shilling? I trow not! You would hold me perjured, and the world would sustain your verdict, and therefore I deny that God has taken the gifts and blessings promised to the House of Israel, or the Ten Tribes, and given them to a Gentile nation because it became a Christian nation, or for any other reason whatever.

Digitized by Google

Now, what are the facts of the case? Hosea, long after the captivity from whence they have never yet returned, says of Israel, "Call his name Lo-Ammi, for ye are not My people, and I will not be your God; yet the number of the children of Israel shall be as the sand of the sea, which cannot be measured nor numbered. And it shall come to pass that in the place where it was said unto them, Ye are not My people, there it shall be said unto them, Ye are the sons of the living God." Micah (iv. 7, v. 8) says, "I will make her that was cast far off a strong nation;" and again, "And the remnant of Jacob (the context refers to the House of Israel only) shall be among the Gentiles (therefore not themselves Gentiles) in the midst of many people as a lion among the flocks of sheep, who, if he go through, both treadeth down and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver." Jeremiah (li. 20) says of Israel, the rod of God's inheritance, "Thou art My battle axe and weapons of war, for with thee will I break in pieces the nations, and with thee will I destroy kingdoms, and with thee will I break in pieces the horse and his rider." Therefore Israel (not Judah, for they are as distinct in the Scriptures as are the British and American nations to-day, though of the same race) was to become the strongest war power on earth. God then, that these and many like promises should be fulfilled, directed His messengers to the North and the West, and the Isles of the sea, even in the first century, where the Tribes had previously and afterwards been gathering together, and there the truth as it is in Jesus took root, and all the influence of Paganism and Popery has never been able to efface it, and more particularly since the Reformation, since we, as a nation, have been spreading forth our hands to the Lord, the Lord has been drawing nearer unto us, has given unto us a name, has given unto us the power to get wealth, has given us, and is still giving to us, the gates of our enemies, has caused us to people the desolate heritages of which we here present are living evidences, in Canada and the United States, in Australia, New Zealand, in Africa, and around the whole world. He has verily given the heathen to us, His inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth to us, His possession; and now He is causing us to fill the world with fruit. We are in the "midst of many people as a dew from the Lord, and as showers upon the grass." Israel has budded and blossomed and is filling the world with fruit, our missionaries are scattered over every part of the habitable globe, our Bibles are distributed in every language, our money is launched out lavishly for every beneficent object; the nations of the world are our debtors to the amount of £4,000,000,000 sterling. Our home gates are not shut by day or by night, and the forces and wealth of the Gentiles come in to us. Our Queen, "God bless her," reigns over colonies from every nation, while no nation rules over us. Our flag floats proudly over land and sea, and for a "thousand years has braved the battle and the breeze;" every wind that blows carries the sound of our drums round the habitable earth; the sun never sets on our great dominions. Our fleets sail in every sea, "and not a hostile gun can be fired without our ships crowding in to see the reason why." No weapon lifted against us has prospered. The blessings of the breasts and of the womb are ours; the blessings of possession—even to the utmost bound of the everlasting hills—are fast becoming ours, of the heavens above, of the earth beneath, and of the deep that lieth under, of plenty of corn and wine. Surely as Jacob says when blessing the House of Joseph, "This is the shepherd, the stone of Israel," or as it has been rendered, literally, "This is the breaking stone of Israel," which has been smiting the image upon its feet, and filling the whole earth. But having now shown the reasons why our God has been so good to us—being His elect people Israel whom He foreknew, and could not cast off—let us inquire in a few words what these blessings involve. God says, "I will also give thee for a light to the Gentiles, that thou mayest be My salvation to the ends of the earth;" and again, "I will preserve thee and give thee for a covenant of the people to establish the earth, to cause to inherit the desolate heritages. That thou mightest say to the prisoners, Go forth (and we have freed the slaves), and to those that sit in darkness, Shew thyself;" and again, "Thou shalt be for a name and a praise unto Me in all the earth."

Mr. Chairman,—I agree to a large extent with what has been said this evening by the lecturer, though I cannot, being trained a Presbyterian, endorse all that was advanced. With these few remarks I very heartily propose a vote of thanks to Mr. Williams for his lecture this evening.

WHERE THEY ARE NOT. WHERE ARE THEY?

THE Rev. John Wilkinson, of London, has become mighty and valiant of late. The above is the subject of a lecture, delivered at Sunderland, July 29th, in which his reverence boasted that he would "smash" the Anglo-Israel theory. This ministerial "smasher," however, met with a fearless opponent in Mr. John Greig, who delivered a lecture in reply, the following evening. As our readers will probably hear more of these two lectures in due time, I merely wish to draw attention to another matter.

It is generally conceded that the Bristol clerics carry the palm for hurling the most contemptuous epithets at the heads of those poor people who believe in our Identity; but let them weep and mourn, for their glory has departed, and the laurel now undoubtedly belongs to the Rev. John.

What think our readers of this statement, as reported in the Sunderland Daily Post?—"The Anglo-Israel theory was one of the mischievous errors of these latter times, and it was said that in those days Satan would try to deceive the very elect. It suited devil-inspired men to study the Bible, and he believed that Satan was a deep student of the Scriptures, and knowing that the nations were to be blessed through the Jews, by a master-stroke he was trying to persuade the people that the English were the Lost Ten Tribes, so as to draw attention away from the Jews, and so defeat the plans."

I will undertake to prove, if need be, that this statement is false. Is it not pitiable to see a man, who constantly reminds his hearers that he has spent more than a quarter of a century in the ministry expounding the Scriptures and preaching the Gospel, tarnishing his reputation and blighting his work by making an assertion, couched in most unchristian language, without proof of any kind whatever to support it? To wit—Anglo-Israelism is "a master-stroke of Satan." Its supporters are "devil-inspired men."

In days gone by, the proud Pharisees called the Master Beelzebub, the Prince of Devils; and in these latter times there are proud Pharisees of the same stamp, and it is now time for us to remember that "It is enough for the disciple to be as his Master, and the servant as his lord. If they have called the Master of the house Beelzebub, how much more shall they call them of His household?" (Matt. x. 25).

Digitized by Google

In days gone by, the Master passed by the proud Pharisees, and selected simple-minded fishermen to proclaim the glad tidings of the Gospel; and in these latter days, the Spirit of God can, and does still, teach and influence the mind and soul of the humble and lowly. It ill becomes any man, more particularly a minister of the Gospel, to assume the part of dictator, and to bring an unqualified and vile accusation against Christian men and women, of whom he knows nothing, but who may be as honest and sincere in their religious belief as he is.

With all the Rev. John W.'s Christian experience, we are sorry to see, in this instance at any rate, such a lamentable lack of the greatest of all Christian virtues—charity (1 Cor. xiii.). We cannot understand why any man should make such a positive exhibition of himself, unless there be something behind the scenes which irritates like a cankering sore.

Let us, who are thus so unscrupulously dealt with, take one of the sayings of the wise man as a moral to this short paper: "Whoso keepeth his mouth and his tongue, keepeth his soul from troubles" (Prov. xxi. 23). JOHN T. GOTT.

PROGRESS AMONG THE DERBYSHIRE MINERS.

WE have received the following, being an extract from a long letter, addressed to us by the wife of a Derbyshire miner, on the subject of our Identity and its progress in her locality. What we have omitted concerns the apparent absence of female advocacy in the pages of the BANNER and elsewhere, in support of our great subject, which our correspondent deplores, and would fain see remedied, by appealing to the mothers and daughters of Israel to come to our aid in writing, speaking, and working to publish our Identity. We do not insert her complaint because it has no foundation! The daughters and mothers of Israel are, indeed, very active in this cause, and, as we well know, some of our best correspondents and writers for this truth are women. We know of ladies—married and single—who are working energetically to spread the Identity, and some who lecture successfully, distribute its literature unsparingly, lose no opportunity of speaking for it eloquently, and contest every point with an opponent manfully. One lady we know despairing of openings in the town she was staying in for the dissemination of Identity truth, resolved at last to place Identity leaflets or pamphlets in every letter-box in her neighbourhood indiscriminately, which she did. Many give largely of their means to help others to distribute; and on the whole so far from the mothers and daughters of Israel being backward in advancing this subject, we can truly say that as writers, as workers, as distributers, as speakers, as debaters, and as indefatigable helpers of the Identity, we have more women than men at work; and as in the days of our blessed Lord, so now, there are no friends so warm, or so zealous for His cause, as the daughters of Israel—the very best of them, the godly, pious, Christ-loving women of the British race. Having said this, we add the last cheering words of our miner's wife, and we think all-Israel will read them with joy, and say of her as we said when we read her letter, "May God bless that true mother in Israel!" She wrote as follows:—

I hope, dear Mr. Editor, you will agree with me on this subject, but I cannot conclude my note without telling you how the work is progressing amongst the miners of my district. The little village in which I am resident, is composed of them almost solely, and I myself am the wife of one of them, and it is strange how this doctrine is spreading like wild-fire amongst them. They have a warm impressive nature generally, and I often think, poor fellows, what a pity but they had more time for the earnest research of the Scriptures; more means to enable them to purchase books upon the subject; and I can tell you most confidently there are some of the despised miners even who are devoted, impassioned believers in the Identity, and would, if they had proper facilities for so doing, make good, talented, energetic workers in this cause. May God bless the work! M. A. S.

Correspondence.

THE WIMBLEDON PROPHETIC CONFERENCE OF 1879.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—I have a very serious matter of complaint respecting the Report of the Wimbledon Prophetic Conference, which I ask your permission to lay before the readers of the BANNER. I gladly accepted the invitation of my dear and honoured brother Mr. Skrine, the convener of the Conference, to deliver the opening address on the subject of "Anglo-Israelism," little anticipating that I should have occasion to make the grave complaint I now do. As the Anglo-Israel Association of London had sent down a reporter to give a full report of the Conference addresses pertaining to that subject, I did not expect that the authorised report of the Conference would have contained any account of the discussion, especially as the editor did not think it necessary to pay me the usual courtesy of correcting the proof of my speech on the occasion. Had he done so, he would, at all events, have been spared the ludicrous blunder, as I perceive by the report, which has just come to hand, of making me talk about "an inscription on the Cistine (? Tarpeian) Rock in Rome," in place of "the Behistun Rock in Persia"!!!

But I have something much worse to complain about—viz., that as, in my opening address, I dwelt much upon the absolute duty of conducting the discussion in the spirit of LOVE, quoting Lord Bacon's famous aphorism on the subject, and particularly dwelt upon the fact that, though I had been a student of prophecy for nearly forty years, it was only quite recently that I was enabled to see the great distinction made in the prophetic Scriptures between the House of Israel and the House of Judah as to Jehovah's dealings with the two; and that, though this was now made clear to my mind, it had made no difference whatever in my teaching the more precious and important doctrine to believers of the Pre-Millennial Advent, which was the cause of the Conference being held; or in my duty of preaching Christ and Him crucified to the Jewish people scattered throughout the world.

On these two points the report of my address is painfully silent, given as if I had not uttered a single word on the subject. I have a right, therefore, to complain of this very serious omission, and still more of the way by which my opponent (as I regret to be obliged to term him) met my olive branch of peace. According to the report now before me, the Rev. John Wilkinson, a respectable Nonconformist minister, who is, I believe, much engaged in missionary work amongst the Jews of the metropolis, who was appointed to answer me, in place of noticing anything that I had said, commenced his address in these words: "I regard this theory as an error, a mischievous error, and a downright evil." If this be a correct report of Mr. Wilkinson's words, I will not answer him, though tempted so to do, in the abrupt way which Mr. Canning once did on a memorable occasion in the House of Commons when similarly accused by the late Lord Brougham, "It is false;" but I am constrained to tell Mr. Wilkinson, through the columns of the BANNER, that his language was most uncourteous, that it displays nothing of the spirit of Christianity, and that I am reminded of a saying of Robert Hall, when, on a like occasion, he answered an opponent by telling him that "his ignorance was most profound, and his dogmatism most presumptuous."

It has been my privilege to know many holy, God-fearing men on earth who are quite incapable of receiving or believing the doctrine of the Pre-Millennial Advent, but if I were to treat them in the way Mr. Wilkinson—following the bad example of Messrs. Clifford and Cornall in their "hard speeches" against their opponents—has treated those who believe there is sufficient ethnographic evidence of the British people being descended from the "divorced" House of Israel, I should deserve to be banished from all Christian society. Oh! when will men learn that abuse and revilings are a sure sign of a falling cause, and that the Spirit of God cannot be with them, for His fruits are love and peace.

I am not without hopes that, when Mr. Wilkinson reflects on the way he has committed himself, he will apologise for the offensive imputations which he has made against Christian men who interpret prophecy differently from the way he does himself. Commending the aphorism alluded to above, as Bacon words it, "Certainly it is a heaven on earth to have a man's mind move in charity, rest in Providence, and turn upon the poles of truth," to Mr. Wilkinson's prayerful attention,

Believe me, dear Sir,
Yours faithfully in the Lord,
BOURCHIER WREY SAVILE,
(Rector of Shillingford.)

Aug. 5, 1879.

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements
(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O O payable at Ludgate-circus.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed :—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

BANNER FREE CIRCULATION FUND.
Spero Meliora ... ... 3s.

Donations, applications for grants, to be addressed to R. Fergusson Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London.

NEW BOOKS.

NEW PAMPHLET ON OUR IDENTITY.
NOW READY, price 9d., post free, 10d.

ARE WE ISRAELITES? THE TESTIMONY OF HISTORY, PHILOLOGY, AND ETHNOLOGY on the Subject. By the Rev. BOURCHIER WREY SAVILE, M.A., Rector of Shillingford, Exeter. With an Introduction by Philo-Israel.

Contents.

Chapter I.—Hard Speeches.
" II.—Opponents' Arguments.
" III.—Common Errors.
" IV.—The Sacæ.
" V.—The Cymry.
" VI.—Historical Testimony.
" VII.—Philology.
" VIII.—Chief of the Nations.
" IX.—Multiplicity of Seed.
" X.—The Anglo-Saxon Race.
" XI.—Anglo-Israel.
" XII.—Summary.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row; Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; or of any Bookseller.

ARE ENGLISHMEN ISRAELITES?

MR. ROBERTS REFUTED.

REPLY TO MR. ROBERTS.

Now ready, price 2d.

A REPLY TO MR. ROBERTS ON THE EXETER HALL DEBATE, on the Subject, Are Englishmen Israelites? By ALEXANDER DUNN.

A REPLY TO MR. ROBERTS will be sent post free for 2½d., from the publisher, W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

A REPLY TO MR. ROBERTS may be had, by ordering, of any Bookseller in town or country.

London: Published by W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

This day. Price 2d. Post free 2½d.

MANASSEH AND THE UNITED STATES. An important Essay delivered before the "Lost Israel Identification Society," by the Rev. Joseph Wild, D.D., at Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, New York.

CONTENTS :—The Fulness of the Gentiles set in—For whom did God intend America—The Origin of the United States - The Footsteps of Ephraim and Manasseh—The Will of Jacob made to Ephraim and Manasseh—Manasseh a People, and a Great People—Manasseh's Birthtime of Separation—Out of nearly Sixty Conquered Colonies the only one England ever Lost was that of Manasseh (America)—The Great Seal of the United States—Manasseh was brought up at the Door of the Pyramid, &c., &c.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.; and of any Bookseller.

Now ready, price One penny, post free 1½d. One dozen copies, post free 1s. 100 copies 6s., post free 7s.

THE IDENTITY OF THE BRITISH NATION WITH THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. THE CLUE TO THE EASTERN QUESTION. By C. W. E.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

ASSOCIATIONS, ETC.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.
Temporary Office:
20, WARWICK LANE, LONDON, E.C.

President:
VISCOUNT FOLKESTONE, M.P.

Vice-Presidents:
Admiral DUNN, Weston-Super-Mare.
Captain E. WEBSTER, Stirling.
Rev. A. J. J. CACHEMAILLE, M.A., Vicar of St. Mary's, Oldham.
Dr. J. M. GRANT, Surgeon-General, Camp, Aldershot.
Rev. C. W. HICKSON, M.A., Vicar of St. Bartholomew's, Bristol.
Rev. G. A. ROGERS, M.A., Vicar of Christ Church, Dover.
W. H. PETERS, Esq., J.P., Exeter.
BOOTH MASON, Esq., Arley House, Leamington.
J. H. WELDON, Esq., J.P., Killmallock, N.B.
HENRY LESLIE, Esq., Conduit-street, W.
Lieut.-Colonel W. H. LARKINS, Hastings.
JOHN T. GOTT, Esq., Stockton-on-Tees.

Chairman of Committee:
Mr. E. W. BIRD (PHILO-ISRAEL), Bristol.

Committee:
Major-General WM. HILL, Bath.
Lieut.-Colonel BENTINCK, Upper Grosvenor-street, W.
Capt. BAYLY, Streatham, S.W., and Trinity House, E.C.
Mr. JOHN S. ANDERSON, Upper Norwood, S.E.
Mr. ROBERT BANKS, London, E.C.
Mr. BENTINCK CANNEY, Lewisham, S.E.
Mr. FREDERICK CLIFT, B.A., LL.D., Upper Norwood, S.E.
Mr. FREDERICK C. DANVERS, C.E., India Office, W.
Mr. JOHN T. FLETCHER, J.P., C.L., Upper Norwood, S.E.
Rev. F. R. A. GLOVER, M.A., St. James, London, W.
Mr. H. L. GUERRIER, Tooting, S.W.
Mr. W. H. GUEST, London, E.C.
Mr. WILLIAM HASLAM, 2, Springfield, Clapton.
Mr. CHARLES HORNER, Mortlake, S.W.
Mr. W. W. INCE, Douglas, Isle of Man.
Mr. DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, J.P., St. John's-wood, N.W.
Mr. H. H. PAIN, Bromley, Kent, S.E.
Dr. HODSON RUGG, St. John's-wood, N.W.
Mr. J. L. WOOD, New Southgate, N.

Bankers:
CITY BANK, Ludgate-hill, E.C.

Hon. Sec.:
Rev. JAMES BILLINGTON, F.S.A.

This Association has been established to bind in closer union the many friends who rejoice in having a portion with the long Lost Tribes of the House of Israel; also to extend the knowledge of the truth that the Anglo-Saxon races are now identified with those Lost Tribes of the House of Israel. These objects, it is thought, will be best accomplished by means of Drawing Room and Public Meetings, by Sermons, Lectures, Bible Readings, by the diffusion of Literature upon the subject, and by such other ways and means as the Committee may from time to time determine.

Members' Annual Subscriptions is not less than 2s. 6d per annum.

Donations and Subscriptions are needed to carry on the work.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.
PRESIDENT: VISCOUNT FOLKESTONE, M.P.

FRIENDS wishing for LECTURES on the important subject of "Britain's Identity with the Lost Tribes of Israel," by gentlemen of recognised position and ability, are requested to write for a Prospectus of Subjects and Lectures to the Hon. Secretary. Dates are now being filled for Yorkshire, Lancashire, Devon, Kent, and North Britain. The terms are such as involve no risk as to loss on the part of those friends inviting the Lecturers.

Office: 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row London, E.C.

Now ready, price 7d., post free 8½d.

THE AUGUST MONTHLY PART OF THE BANNER OF ISRAEL. May be had, by ordering, of any bookseller or newsagent.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row; and Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

Price 1d.; post free, 1½d.

GOD'S LOVE FOR ISRAEL, A GUARANTEE THAT HE WILL FULFIL HIS PROMISES TO ISRAEL. By JOHN GILDER SHAW.

Price 6d.; or with illustrative map, 8d.

BRITAIN (OR ISRAEL) THE FIFTH AND LAST, AND THE UNCONQUERABLE EMPIRE. By JOHN GILDER SHAW.

Price 3d.; post free, 3½d.

CHRONOLOGICAL CHART OF BRITISH VICTORIES OVER THE CONTINENTAL POWERS, ranging from the battle of Cressy (1346), to our last victory, the taking of Sebastopol, Sept. 8, 1855. Arranged by J. G. SHAW, of Leeds.

"We trust Mr. Shaw's labour in preparing this paper may be appreciated by the public and be largely sold."—Banner of Israel.

London: Published by Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; and may be had of the Author, 20 Park-row, Leeds, and of all booksellers.

MISCELLANEOUS.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

President:—VISCOUNT FOLKESTONE, M.P.

Lectures will be delivered as follows, in connection with the above Association:—

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 20th, in the GUILDHALL, DEAL, (by kind permission of the Mayor). Afternoon at 3 o'clock, by

CHARLES STUBBS, Esq., B.A.,

of London. Subject:
"SCRIPTURE EVIDENCES OF BRITAIN'S IDENTITY WITH LOST ISRAEL."

Evening at 7.30, by

REV. J. BILLINGTON, F.S.A., F.R.His.S.,

of London. Subject:
"ARE ENGLISHMEN ISRAELITES?"

His Worship the MAYOR OF DEAL will preside.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 21st, in the ST. JAMES'S HALL, RAMSGATE. Afternoon at 3 o'clock, by

REV. J. BILLINGTON, F.S.A.

Subject:
"ISRAEL AND JUDAH, THEIR DISTINCTION AND DIFFERENCE."

Chair to be taken by W. E. SMITH, Esq.

Evening at 7.30, by

CHARLES STUBBS, Esq., B.A.

Subject:
"OUR INHERITANCE IN THE PYRAMID."

Chair will be taken by THOMAS BOWLING, Esq.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 22nd, in the FORESTERS' HALL, CLIFTONVILLE, MARGATE.

Afternoon at 3 o'clock, by

CHARLES STUBBS, Esq., B.A.

Subject:
"OUR SCYTHIAN ANCESTORS."

Evening at 7.30, by

REV. J. BILLINGTON, F.S.A.

Subject:
"CHRISTIANITY—JUDAISM—ANGLO-ISRAELISM."

His Worship the MAYOR of MARGATE will preside.

Collections will be taken after each Lecture in aid of the Funds of the Association.

Office—20, Warwick Lane, London, E.C.

THE ANGLO-ISRAEL POSTBAG;
OR,
HOW ARTHUR CAME TO SEE IT.

THIRD EDITION
of the
ANGLO-ISRAEL POSTBAG;
OR, HOW ARTHUR CAME TO SEE IT.
BY THE RIGHT REV.

BISHOP TITCOMB,

IS NOW READY. Two Editions are now published. The Eighteenpenny Edition, in Paper Covers, for general distribution. The Half-crown Edition, Printed on Toned Paper, Handsome Cloth Glit.

THE ANGLO-ISRAEL POSTBAG contains Chapters on The Philological Difficulty—The Promises of God to the Hebrew Nation—To Joseph—To Ephraim—To the Kingdom of Israel, as distinct from Judah—The Anglo-Israel Theory and the Geographical March of Christianity, &c., &c., &c.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

BRISTOL LEAFLETS ON THE IDENTIFICATION. 1 to 9; 1s. per 100.
London: ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

TO AUTHORS. Authors desirous of issuing Works or Pamphlets on the great and increasingly interesting Question of the Identity of the Lost Ten Tribes with the British Nation, should first communicate with Robert Banks, of Racquet-court, Fleet-street, who has already been honoured by issuing, amongst others, the following works on the subject:

The Banner of Israel. Weekly 1d.; monthly 7d.
The Nation's Glory Leader. Weekly 1d.; quarterly 1s. 4d.
The Pillar of Witness. By late Captain Tracey. Cloth 2s. 6d.; paper 1s. 6d. (second edition).
The Anglo-Israel Post Bag. By Bishop Titcomb. Cloth 2s. 6d.; paper 1s. 6d. (second edition).
The History of the House of Israel. By Philo-Israel. Cloth 1s.; paper 6d. (sixth thousand).

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS 5 Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW, WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 20, 1879. [All Rights Reserved.]

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. III. No. 139. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 27, 1879. [ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
Israel's Two Wars at the Ends of the Earth Honourably Concluded	341
The President of the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association	342
The Geography of the Gates. No. XXXI.—British Guiana	342
"The Lost Tribes of Israel—Where is the Evidence that They Are the British Nation?" Remarks on Charles Stanley's Pamphlet. By R. Y.	343
The Maories	345
Israel the Chief of the Nations	346
Mr. Roberts, the Refuter, Refuted. By J. G. T.	347
Cardinal Manning's Anticipation of the Coming Great Earthquake	347

ISRAEL'S TWO WARS AT THE ENDS OF THE EARTH HONOURABLY CONCLUDED.

THE fitting termination of the Afghan war was seen when the two Houses of Parliament, on the 4th August, 1879, passed votes of thanks to the Governor-General, the officers and men, European and native, for their gallant conduct during the late most successful operations in Afghanistan, whereby our enemies' "Gates" were wrested from them, added to Israel's territories, and a secure scientific frontier gained for our Indian Empire at a merely trifling cost. Lord Salisbury, speaking at Hatfield the same day, declared that the war in question was "probably the most momentous Asiatic war England ever waged." Even the Times concurs with that opinion, for the editor, on the 5th August, in his leading article, said:—

Those issues were, no doubt, far larger than were generally appreciated at the time. A critical moment had arrived in our whole position in the East. The question was practically raised whether we would allow our influence to be trenched upon by that of another great European Power, and whether we were strong enough to assert it. It is a question, no doubt, of policy whether that issue had been raised in a sufficiently distinct form before the war to justify our engaging in it. But it cannot be doubted that the moment war was declared that was the issue at stake, and any check to our arms might have had for the time a very injurious effect on our reputation in the East. It was the task of the military authorities to avoid any such check whatever, and they succeeded.

When the articles of peace were signed on the 26th May, 1879, between the British and Yakoob Khan, closing the door on Russian influence for ever, and opening the country to the control, power, and supervision of British authority, in respect to the foreign policy of our late enemies, the greatest and most important act ever carried out by the British in India took place. It certified to all British India, to Central Asia, and to the people of Afghanistan as well, that Russia was no match for Israel, and henceforth the Bear must never dare to meddle with the Lion in his Indian possessions. Then was the future prophetic fate of Russia also finally settled, for she had her path marked out for her, Westward and not Eastward, where she must seek her opponent on the mountains of Israel, and not on the Afghan hills—there to perish, as Ezekiel tells us she shall, during "the great and terrible day of the Lord."

The 26th May, 1879, was, indeed, an important day for Israel, and a date worthy of record in the Great Pyramid, where, indeed, as our readers know, it can be read as a day of note, 1878·4; and by the independent investigation of the Rev. C. W. Hickson, as 1878·388. Facts thus corroborate the Great Pyramid, and lead men to see that the stone monument of the great Jehovah is true to its prophetic character. The success of the treaty of peace with Yakoob Khan as a great political act is now revealed in all its grandeur. It has its bearing forwards towards Armageddon and Russia's awful destiny awaiting her on the fatal field of Esdraelon; and it has its reflex action on the millions of the heathen empire, who now know that their present and future Lord and Master is not Russia at all, but British-Israel.

On the same 26th May, 1879, as we pointed out on page 238 of No. 128 of the BANNER's leader, Sir Garnet Wolseley was appointed to the supreme command in Zululand and Natal—an event which we cannot doubt led to energetic action and a resolution to bring matters to a crisis, which, by God's grace and mercy to our race, resulted in the decisive battle of Ulundi, and to the end also of that important war. We look on the conflict at the Cape as no trivial matter. It crushes the last real resisting power among the entire native races in South Africa, and destroys, by "breaking it to pieces like a potter's vessel and as with a rod of iron," a heathen nation most dangerous to Israel and to Christ's dominion (Psa. ii. 9), places their country Zululand prostrate at the feet of our Queen, and renders the Confederation of those colonies, at last, both safe and possible. Now, then, "a nation will be born as in a day;" now another of Israel's company of nations will come into being, and the Gospel of Christ advancing in its strength, will, by the road which war has made, bring the subdued and humbled heathen "to kiss the Son," to accept His salvation through the blood of the cross, and lead to another glorious triumph of the Son of God (Psa. ii. 9—12).

Such are the great results of our two wars now safely, splendidly, successfully concluded, and both, we believe, to the glory of God and of the Lamb. It is objected by some that the God of Israel is not a God who acts by war, "by blood, and fire, and pillars of smoke." But we beg in reference to that point to quote an opinion lately expressed to us by the Rev. G. A. Rogers, of Dover, that Joel ii. 30, taken in connection with verses 28 and 29 of the same chapter, and also with Acts ii. 17—20, show that invariably when by Israel's instrumentality the Lord pours the blessing of His Spirit on any nation or community, it is done with the accompaniment of "the wonders in heaven above, and of the signs in the earth beneath, by BLOOD, AND FIRE, AND PILLARS OF SMOKE." Never is the one seen without the other, and all such events in times past have come to pass as types and shadows of the yet approaching great and more glorious new covenant, universal, outpouring of God's Spirit on Israel's masses, but to be exhibited side by side, even then, with the tremendous cataclysm of the fiery deluge of indignation on the Gentile nations, to whose lot there then falls, alas! the "blood, the fire, and pillars of smoke" of the LAST "great and TERRIBLE day of the Lord" (Joel ii. 28, 31). We beg our readers historically to apply this view to our nation's past career in reference to the heathen of the earth now enjoying the blessings of Israel's mild and beneficent rule. How did we acquire almost all North India, the Panjab, Scinde, the Coromandel and the Malabar coasts? By war! "By blood, and fire, and pillars of smoke." Yet now, on these very territories the Gospel is preached, peace reigns, and the land is being prepared for the baptism of the Spirit! So again in the Cape Colonies, after our "Gates" were acquired in comparative peace, the surrounding provinces had to fall to Israel, as Zululand has done, "by blood, and fire, and pillars of smoke," as the preparation for the subsequent blessings of the King of Israel, and for the outpouring of the Spirit on native (late heathen) Churches!

Digitized by Google

There seems to us much force in the Rev. G. A. Rogers' view which we give now to our readers as a new and remarkable corroboration of our Israelitish origin. It is a view which all the past history of Israel, and of the Anglo-Saxons since the siege of Jerusalem, supports. God's Word seems to show it is the way all our acquisitions of territory have been made, and are destined, indeed, to be hereafter made till the whole is consummated in the terrible and frightful catastrophe of the great earthquake (close at hand), when our nation, we believe, will be spared the task of bringing those miseries on the Gentiles, "but Jacob will return and be in rest and be quiet, none making him afraid," what time the Holy Spirit is poured out on the whole Anglo-Saxon (because Hebrew) race and "they all shall know Him, from the least of them to the greatest of them, saith the Lord," thus constituting this the only truly "all-righteous nation" (Jer. xxxi. 33; Isa. lx. 21). Israel, praise YE the Lord!

NOTE.—It is remarkable that at the climax of even our own blessed Lord's history, just when He was about to lay down His life to secure His people Israel's redemption, He told His disciples "to sell their garments and to buy a sword." "Now," He said, "he that hath a purse let him take it, and likewise his scrip. He that hath no sword let him sell his garment and buy one!" They said, "Lord, behold here are two swords; and He said unto them, It is enough." Here the Lord showed that the greatest blessing mankind ever received at His hands was to be even then accompanied by "blood, and fire, and pillars of smoke," even by the stroke of the sword! Let not men say, then, that war is not God's way of bringing mercy to men. It always accompanies it. The destruction of Jerusalem by Titus was a terrible example of what we advance. The Lord there spoke by "blood, and fire, and pillars of smoke." But what says God's Word? "They" (the Jews) "were broken off, that 'the Gentiles' might be grafted in" (Rom. xi. 19). Judah paid by bloodshed for the Gentiles' mercy. Now, alas! the cataclysm of Europe has to usher in stupendous blessings for "Israel of the isles," and for the "dispersed of Judah!"

THE PRESIDENT OF THE METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

WE are glad to congratulate our friends in the metropolis on the adhesion to our cause of the Right Honourable Viscount Folkestone, M.P. for South Wiltshire, and heir to the Earldom of Radnor. His lordship has for some time been a friend to the views we advocate, and we are glad to think that to him may possibly be reserved the high honour of bringing forward our Identity in the House of Commons, when the time for the open national acknowledgment of this glorious truth in its political aspect shall have arrived in the providence of God. His lordship, we see, has placed himself at the head of a committee for the spread of the temperance movement in London and elsewhere in the United Kingdom. The prospectus of "The Kiosk and Coffee-stall Company, Limited," aims at a good object, and we are glad to know that the President of our leading Identity association in Israel's chief city is also striving to put down Ephraim's woe—the terrible drunkenness of the British Israelite throughout the land. May God prosper his lordship's efforts in each direction, and we heartily wish him and his the benediction of Obed-Edom when "the ark of the LORD came unto him," and when "the LORD blessed Obed-Edom and ALL HIS HOUSEHOLD" (2 Sam. vi. 11).

THE GEOGRAPHY OF THE GATES.

(Continued from page 307.)

No. XXXI.—BRITISH GUIANA.

WE have now to describe a South American Gate—the only one the British possess as yet on the continent itself, although, as we have seen, we have some islands in the far South—the Falklands—which stand, Gate-like, as a menace to the South of the great continent, destined, we doubt not, yet to fall to British-Israel's dominion. Besides that, there are communities of British subjects dotted all along the Eastern and Western coasts of South America, attracted there by the mines, railway works, and pasturages which offer a lucrative employment to our surplus population, which going there in numbers, is largely influencing the Governments and people of the various States among whom they have taken up their temporary abode.

Between lat. 1° and 8° 40′ North, and long. 57° and 61° West, on the North-east coast of the continent, with 200 miles of sea-coast and 85,000 square miles of area, is a British territory we call the North-eastern Gate of South America—a wedge run into the heart of the country which will, we believe, in time prove of service in extending Israel's power and dominion in those parts. The territory lies between Dutch Guiana and Venezuela, with Brazil on the South and South-west.

The country is watered by three large rivers, the Essequibo, the Demerara, and the Berbice. The coast, however, is skirted by sandbanks except just opposite these rivers, which makes access to them difficult and dangerous from sea. Thick clumps of mangroves grow all along the shore and river banks. On the margin of the Demerara, the centre one, the capital of the country and colony, George Town, is situated. It was called Stabrock by the former owners, the Dutch. The whole place, in fact, has the appearance of a Dutch city—canals and dykes are everywhere; "the buildings, mostly of painted wood, set in trim gardens," tell plainly who once were masters there.

Originally the whole of British Guiana was the property of the Dutch West India Company. They called the settlement "New Zealand." In 1620 they occupied the banks of the Berbice, being driven by the Spaniards from the Orinoco, situated to the West. The French, for a short time, dispossessed the Dutch in the early part of the eighteenth century; but the latter regained their possession till the British appeared on the scene, when they were forced, as so often before elsewhere, to give place to the Lion of the House of Israel. While the British were occupied in their disastrous quarrel with Manasseh, and the latter was working out his destiny of independence by rebellion and successful resistance to Israel of the Isles, the Dutch seemed much inclined to help the rebellious American colonists.

Digitized by Google

In 1781 Lord Rodney undertook the protection of the country for the British, and took possession, through General Whyte, accordingly. In 1783, when the American war was just at an end (disastrously for the British), the French tried to seize from the Dutch, then again in occupation, their settlements on the Berbice. The British, however, took possession again before 1796, and then surrendered the country in 1802, at the peace of Amiens, to the Batavian Republic once more. But the next year, 1803, when war with France was declared by England, the British Lion finally stepped in and made British Guiana her own for ever.

The three portions of the territory, Berbice, Demerara, and Essequibo, were united under the title "British Guiana," in 1831, the peace of 1814 having finally confirmed the British in their right to retain the country from the Dutch, its former owners. The Government of this curious possession of Israel still retains its Dutch form. It consists of a Governor (British of course), a Court of Policy of nine members—four official, five elected, the Governor having two votes. The taxes are levied by another "Combined" Court, being the Court of Policy and six financial representatives. British Guiana boasts of a revenue of nearly £400,000 a year, expenditure a little less annually, and a national debt equal to a year's income. Its exports and imports together in 1877 were £5,250,000, those to the United Kingdom being £3,000,000 out of the five millions. The European portion of the population of British Guiana is small indeed, not more in 1871 than about 1,500 by birth. The total population was then under 200,000, and of these 56,500 were Government free immigrants from India, China, Africa, Madeira, and Cape de Verde Islands.

The cultivated parts of this British possession are confined to the sea-coast and to a short distance from the rivers. The staple productions of the colony are sugar and rum, with timber. The cultivation of coffee and cotton has almost ceased. Such is this British South American Gate. The climate being tropical is not healthy; but the heat is tempered by a strong North-easterly sea-breeze, which blows nearly all day, though the land winds of evening and night are said to be very prejudicial to Europeans. The diseases of the country are fevers and agues. It may be thought that British Guiana is an unimportant Gate and hardly deserving of the name. It is doubtless, however, so situated that it very well rounds off British prestige and power in the far West—that is, in trans-Atlantic South America. It connects British possessions in the Falklands with the West Indian "Gates" to the North, and with mid-Atlantic strongholds such as St. Helena and Ascension to the East. It is a pledge and promise that British power, steadily growing up now all over the Spanish and native Republics and Empires of that great continent, shall one day be predominant in South America as well, and shall add that mighty land to the world-wide Empire of the stone of Daniel.

British Guiana may not be a desirable residence for a European, it may not be an important "Gate," and its climate may be bad; but it is a "possession" which marks ours as a world-wide Empire, since it adds a South American territory to a dominion which is Asiatic as well as European, North American as well African, which holds almost all the islands of the sea, and has made all Australasian lands of any extent its own, and thus gives evidence that not a quarter of the earth exists without the discovery there of British power and of British rule, which is itself a proof that the nation which is so distinguished must be Israel, God's "dominion" of the latter days.

The British have as close neighbours in British Guiana the Dutch and the French, who each hold portions of contiguous territory to the East of that occupied by the former. But the areas claimed by the three Powers are in proportion to their political importance, the British holding or claiming about 100,000 square miles, the Dutch and French 38,500 and 27,500 respectively.

In the three Guianas the slave trade has been abolished. Israel's presence in those parts would, of course, lead to such a result. British Guiana was formed into a distinct bishopric in 1842. We have had testimony lately in the BANNER (page 246) that the Bishop met his Synod to consider the subject of our Identity—a meeting of a remarkable character which we think must satisfy our opponents that the inquiry and belief are now assuming proportions which exceed their desperate efforts to put them down. The following figures, now somewhat antiquated (but the best we can at the moment command), show that in British Guiana the various Churches and denominations are very well represented :—

The Established Church had	some years ago		39,787	members
The Roman Catholic Church	„	„	9,938	„
The Church of Scotland	„	„	11,668	„
The Congregationalists	„	„	14,000	„
The Methodists	„	„	15,000	„
Hindus and Mahommedans	„	„	7,037	„

On the whole we are thankful for our South American continental "Gate," one so little known or considered by the general reader; and we are glad also to have had this opportunity of introducing British Guiana to the Israelite reading world.

(To be followed by a paper on Labuan and Sarawak.)

"THE LOST TRIBES OF ISRAEL—WHERE IS THE EVIDENCE THAT THEY ARE THE BRITISH NATION?"

REMARKS ON CHARLES STANLEY'S PAMPHLET.

BY R. Y.

THE writer of the above pamphlet is concerned to know that an opinion is spreading in this country that the English nation is composed of the Lost Tribes of Israel. To this he would have nothing to say did not such a belief interfere with and affect the person and glories of Christ.

This is a very bad beginning, because the writer commences with a false statement, affirming that the believers complained of, alter the purposes of God and His dispensational dealings in connection with Christ. It is to be feared that Mr. Stanley is not a reader of the BANNER OF ISRAEL, otherwise he would scarcely labour under such an error as this. Let Philo-Israel speak for himself and for those who adopt his views, and let Mr. Stanley disabuse his mind of any apprehension that a belief in the redemption of Israel, brought to a knowledge of salvation in Christ in these British Isles, deludes anyone into depriving Christ of an iota of His glory; for says the editor of the BANNER: "Those who trust to their Israelite origin and to their national and personal Identity with Lost Israel for salvation, instead of unto Christ the Lord, will perish as they deserve to do; 'For there is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved than the name of Jesus Christ; neither is there salvation in any other.'"

Can the editor of the BANNER do more than proclaim that salvation is of Christ, and of Christ alone? And does not his doing so answer the question of our querulous author, "Does the Holy Ghost in Scripture set England before us or Christ?" We know very well what the Holy Spirit does not set before us, and that is the perversion of Holy Writ, for which Mr. Stanley shows such capacity. He, for instance, allows the literal fulfilment of certain passages referring to Christ, such as the "Sceptre shall not depart from Judah, nor a law-giver from between his feet, until Shiloh come;" but when Joseph is described as "a fruitful bough by a well, whose branches run over the wall," as inheriting the blessings of heaven above, the blessings of the deep, and the blessings that were to be a crown on the head of him who was separated from his brethren, everything is wrested from Joseph and applied to Christ. He says, "Oh, read every line in Jacob's blessing on Joseph—on the head of Joseph and on the crown of the head of him that was separate from his brethren. Surely every word points to the coming glory of the once rejected Jesus. Is it a light thing, then, to take these precious words that point to the coming glories of Christ as Messiah of Israel and apply them to England?" (page 6).

Digitized by Google

When Mr. Stanley arrives at the historical part of the question, he is much struck with what Josephus tells us of the Ten Tribes, how they were in his day still beyond Euphrates a great multitude.

"England or Britain," he writes, "was well known to the Romans when Josephus wrote of the Ten Tribes being beyond the limits of the Roman Empire. So that at the very time that the Ten Tribes were far beyond the Euphrates these islands were then peopled by the Britons, Picts, and Scots" (page 11).

Odd it is that Mr. Stanley should find it difficult to understand a slow migration of the Tribes. Nobody wishes to cajole him into believing that they all came over to the British Islands helter skelter, making a second exodus as it were. Perhaps Mr. Stanley is unaware that Britain was very well known to the Phœnicians, consequently must have been known to the Hebrews, inasmuch as in the time of Solomon the two nations undertook expeditions together; and though we have no positive evidence that they explored in company the "island of tin," as Herodotus calls Britain, it is more than probable that Cornwall—the Britain of Diodorus—was visited periodically by the navy of Tarshish.

The Saxons are very cavalierly treated in this instructive little pamphlet. "The Saxons were a most barbarous race of warlike Germans, the terror of the neighbouring nations." "Their religion was far more barbarous than that of the ancient Druids." "It would be difficult to imagine superstition more degraded than the gross idolatry of the Saxons." "The most diligent search of ancient history, however, utterly fails to give the shadow of a proof that these savages of the far North were ever the Lost Tribes of the far East."

It would be interesting to know on what foundation Mr. Stanley rests his assertion that the Saxons were Germans; forasmuch as Dr. Latham is of the opinion that the evidence of any Germans having called themselves Saxons is of an extremely unsatisfactory nature. To quote the Doctor further, we learn that the Saxons of the Upper Elbe are but remotely connected with the ancestors of the Anglo-Saxons of Britain. That under the name of Saxon nearly every German tribe has, at different times, borne the title of Saxon—Saxon being a name that someone may give to someone else, but one that he never necessarily bears himself; for "Nowhere can we find a definite tract of country upon which we can lay our finger and say this is the land of the Saxons, saving only the insignificant district to the North of the Elbe mentioned by Ptolemy; and to say that Ptolemy's term Saxon was a native name would be hazardous." Moreover, it is uncertain whether the Saxons of Ptolemy were German at all.

The origin of the name being Keltic, the natural inference is that the Saxons belonged to the Keltic branch of the human family.

It would hardly be necessary to notice the unfeigned horror with which Mr. Stanley regards the religious degradation of the Saxons, were it not that he takes their debasement as positive evidence that they were in no way connected with the Ten Tribes. It is with regret that one is obliged to force upon this gentleman the incontrovertible fact that the Hebrew race was at no time very highly civilised, not even in the land of Canaan in the palmy days of Israel's prosperity. Neither was the spiritual condition of the people such as to preclude a humiliating comparison with the moral depravity of the Saxons. With the inspired prophets in their midst, the Israelites were not to be restrained any more than the Saxons from following after idolatry; insomuch that hell, we are told, enlarged herself to swallow up the wanton apostates. Wherefore should we then expect an improved state of things in the subsequent career of the Tribes amongst the heathen, till the set time arrived for their conversion under the new covenant—a covenant not made with their fathers, but a covenant that was to write indelibly in their hearts the precious doctrines of the Christian faith? But the conversion of the House of Israel to the Christian faith is exactly what Mr. Stanley strongly objects to. "Where," he asks on page 39, "is there a single thought of Joseph or Ephraim being converted into Christian nations?" With considerable pleasure Mr. Stanley is referred to Hosea (a prophet he seems to have entirely neglected), chapter i. verse 10. Before the happy conversion of Lost Israel, Mr. Stanley and a predestinated few must first be caught up to meet the Lord in the air to reign with Him. After this happy consummation of his hopes, Mr. Stanley has no objection to the people whom God has formed for Himself, to shew forth His praise, participating in the redemption that Christ specially came to bring to the lost sheep of the House of Israel. Then, and not till then, will Christ fulfil His Messianic mission to the seed of Abraham.

Page 34, considerable alarm is expressed as to the harm this Israelitish theory is doing; and Satan is unkindly accused of using it as an instrument to divert believers from the coming of the Son of God from heaven. How much it is to be regretted that Mr. Stanley is not a reader of the BANNER! How much he would learn thereby, and how much unlearn!

"We will now," says the author of this brilliant refutation of Anglo-Israelism, "examine the supposed proofs that England is identical with the Lost Tribes." Philo-Israel! Philo-Israel! get thee into sackcloth and ashes. Mr. Stanley has utterly failed to find in that best work of thine, "A Résumé," one text that refers to Britain. Ah! wait, we are to look at another Scripture, perhaps that will have proved convincing to our astute friend. Alas, alas! worse than ever. Thou art now charged with rank apostasy! Thou carest nothing for the Son; with thee it is Britain, not Christ. Mr. Stanley is unfortunate in that he has never yet met an Englishman that observes the Sabbath-day: the Lord's-day may be, but that is a totally different thing and not to be confounded with Israel's Sabbath. Mr. Stanley is so confident on this subject that it would be vain to remind him that the first day of the week is the Sabbath of the new covenant, that it behoves him to remember that the Son of Man, the Lord of the Sabbath, had the power to institute another day than that observed in the old covenant days as a day of rest; that the observance of a seventh day of rest constitutes a Sabbath, and that, inasmuch as England alone enforces the observance of a seventh day, she only perpetuates the sign established between God and the children of Israel (integrally, not to a section) as a perpetual covenant not to be broken in any dispensation whatsoever.

The reader is now enjoined to notice a second tract on this subject (page 25), "Is It Not Reasonable?" by "Canon Litcomb." Mr. Stanley must here be admonished for his lack of politeness in mis-spelling the bishop's name. The bishop's urbanity, however, no doubt will overlook this breach of courtesy, especially as Mr. Stanley admits having taken up "Is It Not Reasonable?" with great hesitation; but one is not quite so certain that he will be so ready to forgive the accusation that he is teaching the reprehensible doctrine of "salvation by incarnation (St. Luke, however, is accused of doing likewise—Luke xxiv. 21), the great root error of Christendom."

Digitized by Google

It would be as well perhaps to let the bishop know what particular doctrine he ought to teach. He is to proclaim that Messiah has nothing, the Son of God has nothing, until the times of restitution, which would appear to mean that Christ does not enter upon His glorious reign over the House of Israel (Luke i. 33) till the earth is quit of Mr. Stanley.

To those unschooled in the subtle reasoning, or rather prating nonsense, peculiar to this pamphlet, the following remarks upon the prayer, "Lord, have mercy upon us, and write all these Thy laws in our hearts, we beseech Thee," will be food for astonishment:—

"If you really do believe God who also proclaims to you free forgiveness of sins through Jesus Christ, and who declares that all who believe are justified from all things, can you possibly, if you believe God, continue to pray for mercy? Unbelieving England may continue to pray for mercy. But it is the privilege of every Christian in it to know that God, for Christ's sake, hath forgiven him." Presumptuous words such as these call to memory the words of St. Paul, when he said, "We dare not make ourselves of the number, or compare ourselves with some that commend themselves." Mr. Stanley may have no need of mercy, and he may feel justified in seeking his God in the same spirit of self-complacency that prompted the Pharisee to exalt himself before the throne of Jehovah; but the humility of the publican is much more to the mind of believers in Anglo-Israelism, as to Anglo-Israel's National Church. Lastly, he may not think it necessary to confess himself before the Holy One of Israel as wretched and miserably poor, and blind, and naked, and he may think it right to mount himself on a pedestal of infallibility; but all the same Anglo-Israelites will, on bended knees, continue to send up to the throne of grace for themselves, for Mr. Stanley, and for all men, the prayer, "Lord, have mercy upon us, miserable sinners."

THE MAORIES.

In our leading article of August 6, 1879, No. 136, we drew attention to the wonderful fact, only to be explained on the hypothesis that the British are the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel, that the savage heathendom among whom God has scattered our race is coming to a "full end," or is "dying out," in not one, but in many different parts of the earth. Thus we showed that in Tasmania the native races are wholly extinct; that in Victoria they are rapidly disappearing; that in the Fijis they are melting away before the Anglo-Saxon; and that the case of the Red Indian of America is so terribly disastrous that poets and travellers alike are shocked at their deplorable fate which modern governments in vain strive to avert. But what of the Maories of New Zealand? Their case, as to population, we find thus stated in the Times, August 7, 1879. The account is a sad record of a noble race "ready to perish," and that for want of survivors:—

The Maories.—The following figures are taken by the Sydney Morning Herald from the census of the Maori population made last year:—"The Maori population was found to be 42,819; in 1874 it was 46,016, making a decrease in four years of 3,197. The males considerably exceed the females—the former being 23,533, and the latter only 19,286. But the most characteristic feature of these estimates for many years is the enormous disparity in the proportion of adults and children. Of the total of 42,819 souls last year, no less than 14,533 were males over 15 years, and females of the same age 11,802. In European countries the men usually average a fifth or sixth of the population, while at present among the Maories they constitute a third."

In other words, between 1874 and 1878, or in four years, out of a population of only 43,000 souls, nearly 3,200 had disappeared, or about 7½ per cent. The population left now is in a most alarming condition in respect to future continuance; for out of 43,000 living, over 26,000 were adults of over 15 years of age, and only 17,000 represent the children of the next generation! As to the sexes, the females are greatly in the minority as to numbers—the ratio being about 24 to 19 between males and females respectively.

We see, then, that the Maories are no exception to the Scriptural rule—that the savage races of heathendom are generally coming to a "full end," as it was predicted they should in the presence of Israel (Jer. xxx. 11, xlvi. 28). We are in their presence, and they in ours; therefore, we conclude, we are the Lost Ten Tribes.

But the Lord promises to make now a short work upon the earth (Rom. ix. 28). We expect, therefore, that the destruction of these aboriginal races will be accelerated in the present (or last) days.

The following seems to show that our anticipations are likely to be verified, and that the Maori will be forced out of existence by war and bloodshed, as though the rate of their "dying out" was too tardy to meet the requirements and exigency of the prophecy. What follows is taken from the Bristol Times and Mirror, August 6, 1879:—

It looks as though the last Zulu war will be followed at no distant date by another Maori war. The latest news from New Zealand is very disquieting, and unfortunately it appears to be only too evident that the conflict which now seems imminent has been brought about by the action of the Colonial Government. After the war ten years ago was concluded, a certain tract of country belonging to the hostile tribes was declared to be confiscated. Had the natives been turned off the land at the time, nothing could have been said upon this subject; but no steps whatever were taken to carry out the decree. The natives, finding themselves undisturbed, naturally supposed that if their conduct was good, the sentence hanging over their heads would never be carried out. Now, after ten years, they are told that they must turn out. Naturally they object, and when threats of force are used, they, as might have been expected, anticipate hostile action. A man has been shot, soothsayers stir up the minds of their countrymen, and the decree is to be opposed. When the last mail left, the colonists had taken the matter into their own hands and forcibly ejected the natives from their locations. The Government had sent large reinforcements to the front, and it was apprehended that should war begin, severe fighting would result, the settlers being resolved to end the native difficulty at once and for ever. This can only mean that the Maories, if ever they proceed to active resistance, are to be wiped off the face of the earth. They are growing, in numbers, small by degrees and beautifully less every year. One of the finest native races with whom we ever have been brought in contact, and at one time no mean opponents in the field, their power is now completely broken, and their numbers have so rapidly decreased that a war between the settlers and the original owners of the soil would be a very one-sided game. The Maories will have to go some day, no doubt, as the Redskins of America are going, and as the Zulus will by-and-bye disappear; but we need not unduly hasten that time after the fashion of the Yankees, at whose treatment of the natives we hold up our hands, although in New Zealand we are not behaving much better than they.

What our treatment of the natives has been in this affair we know not. We trust it has not been bad. With that matter we have in our present inquiry no concern, except to express a fervent trust that our nation will not be found to blame in this case. We only desire to point to the fact that the race which is dying out by natural causes, and that with fearful rapidity, is now threatened, at the hands of Israel herself, with utter extinction! thus fulfilling to the letter that prophecy applicable to the case only if we be Israel, which foretold, twenty-five centuries ago, that the Lord being with Israel they were not to fear; "for I WILL make a full end of ALL the nations (Gentiles) whither I have driven thee: but I will not make a full end of thee, but correct thee in measure; yet will I not leave thee wholly unpunished"—margin, "not utterly cut thee off" (Jer. xlvi. 28).

Digitized by Google

ISRAEL THE CHIEF OF THE NATIONS.

A TESTIMONY FROM BANGALORE, SOUTH INDIA.

WE commend the following capital little pamphlet, published by Major F. Weldon, of the Madras army at Bangalore, to the notice of our readers. It testifies to the fact that our Identity appeals to the Scripture, promotes and demands the careful, prayerful study of it as the Word of God, and conduces to the glory of our blessed Redeemer. Major Weldon, it will be seen, has been led to adopt all the views for which we have long contended, and we have no hesitation in re-publishing his little work, giving it a circulation to the very "ends of the earth," far beyond the limit it could compass as a publication issued in the presidency of Madras.

PREFACE.

In this pamphlet the writer maintains that "in the last days" Israel was to become literally the chief of the nations.

And in this view, although he is supported by many passages of Scripture, he has quoted only those which admit of but one interpretation, so that there may not be the slightest doubt as to whether their meaning be literal or spiritual.

The reader is invited to search the Scriptures for himself, to see if these things be so, when he will find many passages, hitherto rendered of none effect through tradition, which throw a flood of light on the present and future political state of the world: then no longer need it be said that "the vision of all is become unto you as the words of a book that is sealed" (Isa. xxix. 11). F. WELDON.

Bangalore, November 1st, 1878.

ISRAEL "THE CHIEF OF THE NATIONS."

The blessings promised by God to Abraham, and confirmed to Isaac and Jacob, were of a twofold nature, SPIRITUAL and TEMPORAL.

The first mention of a blessing occurs in Gen. xii. 2, 3—Abraham was to be a great nation, and in him all the families of the earth were to be blessed.

These blessings are renewed in Gen. xxii. 16—18: "By Myself have I sworn, saith the Lord, for because thou hast done this thing, and hast not withheld thy son, thine only son; that in blessing I will bless thee, and in multiplying I will multiply thy seed as the stars of the heaven, and as the sand which is upon the sea-shore; and thy seed shall possess the Gate of his enemies and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed."

In Gen. xxviii. 13, 14: "I am the Lord God of Abraham thy father, and the God of Isaac; the land whereon thou liest to thee will I give it, and to thy seed, and thy seed shall be as the dust of the earth, and thou shalt spread abroad to the West, and to the East, and to the North, and to the South: and in thee and in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed.

In the above prophecies it is to be observed that while "all the nations," "all the families of the earth," as well as the seed of Abraham, were to be partakers of a general blessing, the particular and special blessings of "land," "multiplicity of seed," and "Gate of their enemies," are promised solely to the literal seed of Abraham.

The universal and spiritual blessing, which is of supreme importance individually, was transmitted through the Tribe of Judah, of whom came our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ (Gen. xlix. 10; Heb. vii. 14).

The temporal blessing, which is of supreme importance nationally, was conferred on the sons of Joseph, to whom was given the birthright instead of Reuben (1 Chron. v. 1; Gen. xlix. 22—26).

This temporal blessing was confirmed to Joseph, and his sons Ephraim and Manasseh by Moses (Deut. xxxiii. 13—17).

"Blessed of the Lord be his land. His glory is like the firstling of his bullock and his horns are like the horns of unicorns: with them shall he push the people together to the ends of the earth: they are the ten thousands of Ephraim, and they are the thousands of Manasseh."

That this temporal blessing of multiplicity of seed, multitude of nations, with corresponding possessions, is meant literally, and not spiritually, is evident from the fact that the multitude of nations and multiplicity of seed were to come forth, not out of the "heart," but out of the "bowels" and "loins" (Gen. xv. 4, xxxv. 11, xlix. 25), and also that they were to possess land, and the Gates of their enemies, and were subject to curses (Deut. xxviii. 59), and that in Deut. viii. 18, wealth is mentioned as a means of establishing the covenant. Moreover, in Deut. xxxii. 8 it is written:—

"When the Most High divided to the nations their inheritance, He set the bounds of the people according to the number of the children of Israel."

It is hardly necessary to remark here that the spiritual blessing is boundless.

It must be borne in mind that all these blessings, spiritual and temporal, handed down through Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob to Judah and the sons of Joseph, were UNCONDITIONAL, and therefore each and all of them must be fulfilled somehow or other by the Lord God Almighty, who declares the end from the beginning (Isaiah xlvi. 10), who has sworn by Himself to bring it to pass, and is not a man that He should repent.

Have we in the present day any evidence that these blessings are being fulfilled?

As regards the spiritual blessing, we see the Gospel of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ proclaimed to all the world, so that every individual, irrespective of his nationality, may through faith become a child of Abraham spiritually (Gal. iii. 7, 9): "So then they which be of faith are blessed with faithful Abraham."

With reference to the temporal blessings promised to Israel, it was clearly foreseen that they would not be fully enjoyed under the old covenant, or Mosaic dispensation; the apostasy of Israel being foretold before they ever entered the land of Canaan (Deut. xxxi. 16—29), as well as after they had settled there (Joshua xxiv. 19): "Ye cannot serve the Lord." The consequence or penalty of breaking the covenant was, that they should be driven out of their land, and scattered among the heathen (Lev. xxvi. 33). This scattering took place in 721 B.C., when the Ten Tribes—including Ephraim, to whom the temporal promises were specially given—were carried captive to Media.

To these Ten Tribes, as distinct from the House of Judah, God Almighty, by the prophet Ezekiel, in ch. xi. 15—20, promises to be to them as a little sanctuary in the countries where they should go—to assemble them out of the countries where they had been scattered—to give them the land of Israel—and to renew the covenant with them. God Himself putting a new spirit within them (Deut. xxx. 6), in order that they might love and serve Him, which, according to Deut. x. 12—16, is all that is required on their part to entitle them, nationally, to all the blessings enumerated in Lev. xxvi., Deut. xxviii., and xxx.

From the above sure Word of prophecy it is clear that the House of Ephraim could not enjoy all the blessings promised to them by Jacob and Moses, until, through the grace of God, they had abjured idols, and become Christians under the new covenant (Jer. xxxi.; Heb. viii. 8, and xii. 24), which is the everlasting covenant promised to Abraham (Gen. xvii. 7), and by which his seed were to possess the land of Canaan for ever.

The patriarch Jacob himself distinctly specifies the time at which the prophecies, recorded in Gen. xlix., should befall his sons, and that time was not the immediate future, but "in the last days" (Gen. xlix. 1).

As regards the fulfilment of the temporal blessing—in the present day there exists a people who have spread abroad to the West, and to the East, and to the North, and to the South, who hold the Gate of their enemies, with possessions all over the world, who increase in number in a ratio far exceeding any other people, actually doubling their population every 56 years, and in their colonies every 25 years; a people strong, and ever increasing in strength; a people who alone of all the nations on earth, nationally and by law, observe the Sabbath—the "sign" (Ezek. xx. 12).

Digitized by Google

Secular historians* trace this people to the neighbourhood of the River Araxes in ancient Media, between the years 750 and 600 B.C., being the place where, and the time at which, the Ten Tribes of Israel were carried by Shalmaneser.

These people are now called Anglo-Saxons.

If the Anglo-Saxons, who include the Americans, are not descended from Israel, they must give up all their "Gates" and possessions to the true Israel, whose enemies they must therefore become; and thus the chief of the nations, Great Britain and America, with the Colonies, must look forward to a degraded future of unutterable misery, to be inflicted on them by a Christian nation—provided always that the new covenant means Christianity—who must now, as a people, be as numerous as the Anglo-Saxons, and who must now be on earth existing as a nation, for "If those ordinances depart from before Me, saith the Lord, then the seed of Israel shall cease from being a nation before Me for ever" (Jer. xxxi. 36).

MR. ROBERTS, THE REFUTER, REFUTED.

By J. G. T.

LIKE many other assailants of the Identity, Mr. Roberts, in his recent publication, denounces what he is pleased to call "the effrontery of Mr. Hine, and the gullibility of those who think with him," but the former gentleman has treated certain matters in such a way as to show that he himself is guilty of something worse than effrontery, and that the gullibility of his applauders is considerable. His main arguments are these: that the curses pronounced in Leviticus and Deuteronomy apply equally to the Ten Tribes as to the Two, and that Judah being at present subject to those curses, it follows that Israel must be subject to them also; in fact, to quote his own words, "if this remark has any force, it has more force against the Ten than against the Two." Very good. Now let us remember what the curses embrace. "Thou shalt be removed into all the kingdoms of the earth" (Deut. xxviii. 25). "The Lord shall scatter thee among all people, from the one end of the earth even unto the other" (verse 64). This disposes of the notion that they are stowed away comfortably in a remote corner of the globe. Further, "They" (the curses) "shall be upon thee for a sign and for a wonder" (ver. 46). "Thou shalt become an astonishment, a proverb, and a by-word among all the nations whither the Lord shall lead thee" (ver. 37). We know the Jews are in this plight, but according to Mr. Roberts' own admission, the Israelites have still a separate existence. Then where are they? Mr. Roberts cannot tell; and yet, says he, they are under the curses! Obviously, he will need all his ingenuity to explain how a race under the ban of universal dispersion and derision, can at the same time be utterly blotted out from the world's view. Nothing could be more absurd or unscriptural than the idea that Israel can be lost while bearing the curses, and it is our place to demand of our opponents that they point us to another people similar in every respect to the Jews, found in all countries of the earth, down-trodden, despised, an astonishment, a proverb, and a by-word. This they confess they are unable to do, and the conclusion is self-evident—namely, that the Ten Tribes are not under the curses, consequently they must be under blessing, as no middle or neutral state is hinted at in the Bible. The "irresistible deduction" from this is that Mr. Roberts has tripped, and is in a difficulty from which it will take several lectures on the true position of Britain to extricate him.

Again, in his hurry to destroy what he doesn't understand, Mr. Roberts evinces a strong partiality for Judah, and once more runs tilt against the clear statements of God. He sagely says, "If there is any difference between the kingdom of the Ten Tribes and the kingdom of the Two, it is a difference decidedly in favour of the Two. You may ask, 'How is this?'" Yes, that is just what we do ask. What is the value of his foolish assertion when read in the light of Ezek. xvi. 51?—"Neither hath Samaria committed half of thy sins." I quite agree with him that "there is a distinct recognition of this difference between the two kingdoms in the Scriptural records," but unfortunately this recognition is not of a nature to fit in with his theories.

Newcastle-on-Tyne, Aug. 5, 1879.

* Diodorus Siculus, Strabo, Homer, Herodotus, Pliny, Ptolemy, see "Speed's Chronicles," A.D. 1600, and "History of the Anglo-Saxons," by Sharon Turner."

CARDINAL MANNING'S ANTICIPATION OF THE COMING GREAT EARTHQUAKE.

IN his last Pastoral, published in the Times of February 25, 1879, Cardinal Manning gives us his views as to the probable character of the great earthquake which he considers is imminent for the Continental nations of Europe. He said:—

> The kingdoms of the Christian world have consented to the spoliation of the Vicar of our Lord, and have connived at the international compacts which hold him as neither Sovereign nor subject, as an outlaw in his own dominions. And therefore it is at this moment that every empire, kingdom, Government, is threatened in its own borders. The revolutions which pushed them into quarrel with the Vicar of our Lord now envelope them, and prepare their overthrow. Socialism, the human parody of society which God has created, threatens the subversion of every Christian State. It assails the rights of property and the sanctities of home. The Christian world is everywhere separating itself from the Church of Jesus Christ, and returning to its own primitive disorder of public and domestic life. The international law which once bound Christian nations together is broken. The wise foresight and firm resolve which once balanced the Powers of the European commonwealth are gone. Apathy and inertness, or slackness and fear, have suffered armed force to grow so strong as to reduce all weaker powers to dependence, or to paralyze their will. Europe has prepared for itself its own scourges, which before the reign of justice can be restored, must descend upon it in due time. We have need, then, to pray that these days may be shortened. And we have great need to pray for our country. The hand of God has built up for us an empire, which demands of us proportionate—that is, imperial service, sacrifice and effort, for the welfare of the millions under our sway. Politicians may look at this as a political theory. Christians will see in it a disposition of the Supreme Ruler of mankind. We cannot abdicate our state and power in the world without deserting from the order of Divine Providence; we cannot neglect its duties without unfaithfulness in our world-wide stewardship.

We have, of course, no sympathy with Cardinal Manning in regard to the reason he alleges for the expected visitation of God on the Continental nations, but in reference to the latter, we know he is right, for God's Word declares "the great earthquake such as was not since men were on the earth" shall ere long devastate the Continent, while Israel returns in peace to her own land.

NOTICE.—We regret that several valuable papers now in type have again been crowded out this week. Such are articles by L. P., Messrs. Westfield, J. F. Thomas, P. J. Le Geyt, and others. These will all we trust be published in our next week's double number.—ED.

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements

(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O O payable at Ludgate-circus.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed :—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

BANNER FREE CIRCULATION FUND.
Spero Meliora ... ... 3s.

Donations, applications for grants, to be addressed to R. Fergusson Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London.

NEW BOOKS.

NEW PAMPHLET ON OUR IDENTITY.
NOW READY, price 9d., post free, 10d.

ARE WE ISRAELITES? THE TESTIMONY OF HISTORY, PHILOLOGY, AND ETHNOLOGY on the Subject. By the Rev. BOURCHIER WREY SAVILE, M.A., Rector of Shillingford, Exeter. With an Introduction by Philo-Israel.

Contents.

Chapter I.—Hard Speeches.
" II.—Opponents' Arguments.
" III.—Common Errors.
" IV.—The Saco.
" V.—The Cymry.
" VI.—Historical Testimony.
" VII.—Philology.
" VIII.—Chief of the Nations.
" IX.—Multiplicity of Seed.
" X.—The Anglo-Saxon Race.
" XI.—Anglo-Israel.
" XII.—Summary.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row; Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; or of any Bookseller.

ARE ENGLISHMEN ISRAELITES?

MR. ROBERTS REFUTED.

REPLY TO MR. ROBERTS.

Now ready, price 2d.

A REPLY TO MR. ROBERTS ON THE EXETER HALL DEBATE, on the Subject, Are Englishmen Israelites? By ALEXANDER DUNN.

A REPLY TO MR. ROBERTS will be sent post free for 2½d., from the publisher, W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

A REPLY TO MR. ROBERTS may be had, by ordering, of any Bookseller in town or country.

London: Published by W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

This day. Price 2d. Post free 2½d.

MANASSEH AND THE UNITED STATES. An important Essay delivered before the "Lost Israel Identification Society," by the Rev. Joseph Wild, D.D., at Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, New York.

CONTENTS :—The Fulness of the Gentiles set in—For whom did God intend America—The Origin of the United States - The Footsteps of Ephraim and Manasseh—The Will of Jacob made to Ephraim and Manasseh—Manasseh a People, and a Great People—Manasseh's Birthtime of Separation—Out of nearly Sixty Conquered Colonies the only one England ever Lost was that of Manasseh (America)—The Great Seal of the United States—Manasseh was brought up at the Door of the Pyramid, &c., &c.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet court, Fleet-street; W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.; and of any Bookseller.

Now ready, price One penny, post free 1½d. One dozen copies, post free 1s. 100 copies 6s., post free 7s.

THE IDENTITY OF THE BRITISH NATION WITH THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. THE CLUE TO THE EASTERN QUESTION. By C. W. E.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

BOOKS, ETC.

THE ANGLO-ISRAEL POSTBAG;
OR,
HOW ARTHUR CAME TO SEE IT.

THIRD EDITION
of the
ANGLO-ISRAEL POSTBAG;
OR, HOW ARTHUR CAME TO SEE IT.
BY THE RIGHT REV.

BISHOP TITCOMB,

IS NOW READY. Two Editions are now published. The Eighteenpenny Edition, in Paper Covers, for general distribution. The Half-crown Edition, Printed on Toned Paper, Handsome Cloth Gilt.

THE ANGLO-ISRAEL POSTBAG contains Chapters on The Philological Difficulty—The Promises of God to the Hebrew Nation—To Joseph—To Ephraim—To the Kingdom of Israel, as distinct from Judah—The Anglo-Israel Theory and the Geographical March of Christianity, &c., &c., &c.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

In neat coloured cover, price 2d., post free 2½d.

BLESSINGS AND CURSES, AND THEIR RELATION TO ISRAEL AND JUDAH. By F. W. PHILLIPS, of Speedwell-road, Birmingham.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; and may be had, by ordering, of any Bookseller.

Price 7s., post free 6d. extra.

THE SECOND VOLUME
OF
THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.
EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

This volume contains a large number of articles on our Identity ith Lost Israel, by the best and most learned writers on the subject. Also many interesting papers on the Great Pyramid by Professor Piazzi Smyth, F.R.S.E., Astronomer-Royal for Scotland, Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A., Major H. A. Tracey, R.A., Charles Horner, Esq., and others.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

New and Revised Edition, Price 6d. Cloth, gilt, 1s.

THE NEW OLD STORY, with an Introduction to a Marvellous Puzzle. The Story gives a sketch of the History of the Hebrews, showing distinctly the difference between the Two Nations, Judah and Israel, the latter being the British. The Story also tells of the Great Pyramid, and explains how its wonderful meaning can be, as it is only understood by measurement. An Appendix explains "The Eastern Question." The Story is written with great simplicity, and interests young children. By A E I, Author of "The Answer to the Eastern Question."

W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.
PRESIDENT: VISCOUNT FOLKESTONE, M.P.

FRIENDS wishing for LECTURES on the important subject of "Britain's Identity with the Lost Tribes of Israel," by gentlemen of recognised position and ability, are requested to write for a Prospectus of Subjects and Lectures to the Hon. Secretary. Dates are now being filled for Yorkshire, Lancashire, Devon, Kent, and North Britain. The terms are such as involve no risk as to loss on the part of those friends inviting the Lecturers.

Office: 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row London, E.C.

Now ready, price 7d., post free 8½d.

THE AUGUST MONTHLY PART OF THE BANNER OF ISRAEL. May be had, by ordering, of any bookseller or newsagent.

London: W. H Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row; and Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

Price 1d.; post free, 1½d.

GOD'S LOVE FOR ISRAEL, A GUARANTEE THAT HE WILL FULFIL HIS PROMISES TO ISRAEL. By JOHN GILDER SHAW.

Price 6d.; or with illustrative map, 8d.

BRITAIN (OR ISRAEL) THE FIFTH AND LAST, AND THE UNCONQUERABLE EMPIRE. By JOHN GILDER SHAW.

Price 3d.; post free, 3½d.

CHRONOLOGICAL CHART OF BRITISH VICTORIES OVER THE CONTINENTAL POWERS, ranging from the battle of Cressy (1346), to our last victory, the taking of Sebastopol, Sept. 8, 1855. Arranged by J. G. SHAW, of Leeds.

"We trust Mr. Shaw's labour in preparing this paper may be appreciated by the public and be largely sold."—Banner of Israel.

London: Published by Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; and may be had of the Author, 20 Park-row, Leeds, and of all booksellers.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A NEW WORK ON THE IDENTITY.

THE PROMISES TO ABRAHAM, with Select References and Explanatory Notes, to which is added an article entitled, "Israel Among the Gentiles."

The aim of this Pamphlet is to present the Scriptural Argument in a new and concise form, both for examination and reference.

Price Sixpence, or free by post, Sevenpence. May be had of the Author, W. S. Cavill, Norton Woodside, near Sheffield; or of Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.; and of all Booksellers.

Price 4d.; post free, 6d.

NEBUCHADNEZZAR'S DREAM and THE BRITISH EMPIRE. By Ephraim. With Illustrative Prophetic Map.

"We are glad to see another attempt to connect Daniel's dream of the metallic image and "the stone which becomes a mountain," with the British Empire. It appears in the form of a letter to a friend abroad. The pamphlet, though very sketchy in its character and aim, is on the whole a useful little work."—Banner of Israel.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; Sold by W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row

AN ELEMENTARY DIGEST or SKETCH OF THE CHIEF FACTS and TEACHINGS of the GREAT PYRAMID of EGYPT; adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific. By PHILO-ISRAEL; together with Original Papers by the following leading Pyramidists, republished mostly from the BANNER OF ISRAEL (by kind permission of the proprietor)—viz., Professor Piazzi Smyth, the Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A., Charles Horner, Esq., and Major H. A. Tracey, R.A. Being a pamphlet by five authors (a Pyramid number).

LITERARY NOTICE.—The Great Pyramid of Egypt (52 pp.; Guest, London; price 4d.).—This pamphlet is put forth as "A Digest of Great Pyramid Teaching Adapted to the Comprehension of the Unlearned and of the Unscientific," and is from the pen of the able editor of THE BANNER OF ISRAEL. To it papers by other writers, including Professor Piazzi Smyth, are appended. Of it we need only that it is well calculated to serve the end in view, and gives a clear summary of the chief facts of Pyramid lore. Over 5,000 copies have been sold in the course of three months, and this alone proves how interest in the subject is extending."—Alfreton Journal, April 25, 1879.

PHOTOGRAPHIC PORTRAITS OF PHILO-ISRAEL, Editor of THE BANNER OF ISRAEL, Author of "The History of the House of Israel,' &c., &c. Cabinet, 2s., post free; Carte-de-Visites, 1s., post free.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Price 2d., post free, 2½d.

THE HISTORICAL, ETHNIC, AND PHILOLOGICAL ARGUMENTS in PROOF of BRITISH IDENTITY with the TEN LOST TRIBES OF ISRAEL, clearly and simply stated.
BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

CONTENTS:—Introduction—The Celts—Professor Rawlinson's Testimony—The Cymry—The Cimmerii—The Gimiri and Khumri—The Testimony of the Nimroud Obelisk—The Scythians—The Anglo-Saxons—Sharon Turner's Testimony—The Jutes and Angles—The Danes and the Normans—General Conclusions—Philology—The Welsh Language—The Rev. Canon Lysons' Testimony—Idiomatic Identity Between Hebrew and English—Tyndal's Testimony—The Tribe of Dan—The Irish Celts—Are the Continental Nations Israelites?—Conclusions—Appendix.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane; and Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

BRISTOL LEAFLETS ON THE IDENTIFICATION. 1 to 9; 1s. per 100.

London: ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

TO AUTHORS. Authors desirous of issuing Works or Pamphlets on the great and increasingly interesting Question of the Identity of the Lost Ten Tribes with the British Nation, should first communicate with Robert Banks, of Racquet-court, Fleet-street, who has already been honoured by issuing, amongst others, the following works on the subject:

The Banner of Israel. Weekly 1d.; monthly 7d.

The Nation's Glory Leader. Weekly 1d.; quarterly 1s. 4d.

The Pillar of Witness. By late Captain Tracey. Cloth 2s. 6d.; paper 1s. 6d. (second edition).

The Anglo-Israel Post Bag. By Bishop Titcomb. Cloth 2s. 6d.; paper 1s. 6d. (second edition).

The History of the House of Israel. By Philo-Israel. Cloth 1s.; paper 6d. (sixth thousand).

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, 5 Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 27, 1879. [All Rights Reserved.]

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. III. No. 140. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 3, 1879. [DOUBLE NUMBER, TWOPENCE.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

PAGE
Premonitory Symptoms 349
Russian Diplomacy Despondeth 350
The Historic Continuity of Protestantism Among God's "Witnesses," and the Constancy of True Gospel Light to "the Isles of the West."—Isa. xxiv. 15 350
Fresh Evidence in Our Own Land of Spiritual Good to a Woman's Soul by God's Blessing on Our Identity Believed 352
A Few Thoughts on Our Identity.—Part I. By Thomas Bales. 352
The Editor of the Sunderland Daily Post on the Rev. John Wilkinson's Philological Errors 353
"Israel "the Head and Not the Tail," "Above Only and Not Beneath," Even in Natural Scenery and Sylvan Culture 354
The Eternal Purposes of God in Israel 355
A Misquotation Corrected 356
Progress Reported from St. Ann's, Barbadoes 357
Confirmations from the Cape 357
The Identity in Adelaide, South Australia 358
Why the Church of Rome Seeks to Ally her Moral Influence to Britain's Material Influence. By J. F. Thomas 359
Israel Keepeth Sabbath 359
The Identity Ventilated by the Newcastle Chronicle 360
Testimony from Jersey, Channel Islands 360
St. Paul Distinguishes Between Israel and Judah 361
"He Shall Grow as the Lily" 361
The Testimony of an Aged Disciple 362
Reviews 363
Extract from Isaiah's Call to England 363

PREMONITORY SYMPTOMS.

WE have always been led to connect the "great earthquake," "such as was not since men were upon the earth, so mighty an earthquake, so great," with the coming Northern woe of Europe, the outburst of Russia, the enemy of God's people, in the last days. This visitation of God's wrath upon the Gentile nations of the West—"yonder ill-consolidated Europe"—we have thought would take place synchronously with the events typified by the Great Pyramid's impending Southern wall—that is, in August, 1882, or thereabouts. We have imagined also that the combination of Powers to cause this awful "cataclysm of nations" (from which the Anglo-Saxons will be wholly free as God's people Israel) will be Russia, France, and possibly Italy, in alliance, against the two German-speaking races—Germany and Austria; thus forming antagonistic sides, represented by "three against two, and two against three," as our Lord seemed to foretell in Luke xii. 52.

The difficulty always has been, how it was possible to conceive that either Russia or France would be willing—after the disasters of the past—to provoke another series of gigantic wars, to abandon all thoughts of improving the condition of their respective countries, sadly needing rest and domestic regulation—in the case of Russia especially—and to plunge into hostilities, the end of which no man could foresee, and which might result in national ruin and bankruptcy, to which the present condition of these unhappy lands would be as nothing.

We have only to look at the state of Russia, however, at the present moment to realise how possible it will be for God, if He so will, to make Russia, at least, perfectly mad and nationally insane, so as to scruple at nothing. The following, taken from a Bristol paper, August 13th, 1879, plainly shows that the whole press of Russia, with just one exception, is at this very day ready and eager to hurry their bankrupt country into war. They do this in order, doubtless, to recoup its losses, and to take off the national mind from the burning questions which just now are agitating the people. These, trodden to the ground by a grinding tyranny, long for the liberty of the West, nay, for that of even Bulgaria, which they know is unattainable without a mighty revolution which shall overturn the throne of the Czar, uproot all existing Russian institutions and prostrate them in the dust!

The Times and Mirror said:—

Some of the Russian papers have the war-fever very strong upon them just now. One proposes a war with Austria, because she is on the point of occupying Novibazar, or out of friendship to the Bosnians and Herzegovinians (who infinitely prefer Austrian to Turkish rule). Another recommends that the Bosphorus and the Danube be for the present left in peace (only "for the present"), and that Russia fall upon Prussia, to punish Prince Bismarck for his treachery in siding, as regards the Eastern Question, with the Western Powers. The Moscow Gazette would have a fling all round, attacking not only Austria and Germany, but also England, because of her wiles; France, because she is a Republic; the Tekkes, because they have stolen their horses; and the Chinese, because they claim Kuldja. There is at least one respectable journal opposed to all these wild schemes. The Molwa of St. Petersburg does not know what is to be said of the patriotism of any Russian who, having a full knowledge and understanding of the present necessities of that country, would wish it involved in a fresh war. Such councillors, it argues, are to be regarded by every right-minded Russian with unmitigated contempt and disgust. "Have we not," the journal we have quoted asks, "sacrificed sufficient for the benefit of the so-called Bulgarian emancipation? What do we care for the approach of the Western fleets to the Balkan peninsula? What concern have we with the declarations of the Prince of Bulgaria? Let them one and all follow their own devices; our interests are in our country; outside our frontiers we have none. Our own house, God knows, requires setting in order. What we should be exhorted to do is to renounce once for all the desire to meddle in European affairs, and in close and loyal union to plant our land, improve our institutions, better the condition of our people, accumulate our substance." This is certainly the true policy for Russia to pursue, but has Russia ever pursued a true policy?

It comes, then, to this:—There is but one Muscovite paper wise enough to see that Russia's true course is to follow a parochial policy henceforth, to attend to domestic legislation, to improve the condition of their own people, and let the outside world alone. But is that the rôle God's Word assigns to Russia and to all His Northern bands? Far different! The prophecy of Ezekiel xxxviii. and xxxix. clearly portrays as Russia's character, in these our last days, a needy, reckless, military Power, having its eyes fixed upon the Holy Land for the objective of its ambition, intent upon the pillage and the "loot" of God's people, then living securely in its mountains.

Digitized by Google

The invasion will be, it seems, undertaken by Russia, in order "to take a spoil, and to take a prey; to turn their hands upon the desolate places that are now inhabited, and upon the people that are gathered out of the nations"—i.e., out of the Gentiles—"which have gotten cattle and goods, and dwell in the midst of the land" (xxxviii. 12). In verse 13, the challenge and defiance of Israel and her heathen and colonial Empires turns upon the fact, that Russia's object is "rapine and robbery:" a bankrupt nation seeking to recoup itself, "to take a prey, to carry away silver and gold, and take away cattle and goods, to take a GREAT SPOIL."

Russia is true to her character drawn in Scripture even to-day. Her press and people are willing to precipitate her armies like those of revolutionary France on Austria and Germany for revenge, nay, on England, and against all the world, that the domestic agonies of the people may be forgotten, and that in flush of victory they may take perchance "a great spoil."

When God's time comes, when, as He Himself says (Isa. xlii. 13), "the Lord shall go forth as a mighty man, He shall stir up jealousy like a man of war, when He shall cry, yea, roar," what nation will withstand that impetus, or fail to carry out His purposes? Those purposes Zeph. iii. 8 declares! It is "His determination to gather the nations" (perhaps Russia, France, and Italy, against Germany and Austria), "that He may assemble the kingdoms; to pour upon THEM His indignation, even ALL His fierce anger, for all the 'earth' shall be devoured with the fire" (the fiery deluge) "of His jealousy,"—jealousy for their abominable idolataries, and jealousy, too, for His people Israel and Judah, whom they have contemned, resisted, and horribly ill-treated for over two thousand five hundred years. We believe, therefore, that the patriotic and sensible appeals of the Russian Molwa for a domestic policy is foredoomed to disappointment. Quem Deus vult perdere prius dementat; and we fear, that by that very process the nations of Europe will ere long be driven to their own ruin by a vast upheaval of democratic rage, which, leading to foreign wars, will end in that "cataclysm" which the continental nations, including Russia, have busily prepared for themselves, and will certainly bring about.

Reader! let us thank God that, being Israel, He hath promised to shield us from this coming woe and wrath Divine. Isa. xxvi. 20, 21; Joel ii. 32; Zeph. iii. 9; Isa. xlii. 16, and many other passages, such as Luke xxi. 28, lead us to the certain conclusion that while everywhere else in Europe there will be trouble, distress, war, "blood, fire, and pillars of smoke," in Israel's home and throughout her world-wide domains the Lord will send "deliverance," "the outpouring of His Spirit," "peace, quiet, and safety," so "that we may ALL call upon the name of the Lord, to serve Him with ONE consent!" (Zeph. iii. 9; Jer. xxx. 10; Joel ii. 28—31, iii. 1). Therefore, Israel, praise YE the Lord!

RUSSIAN DIPLOMACY DESPONDETH.

THE following, taken from the Daily Telegraph of the 31st July, 1879, gives a quotation from the Russian Golos which plainly shows that, in the opinion of that paper, matters are approaching a crisis in the affairs of Turkey, and that ere long either the supremacy of Israel over that Power will be established or disappear. We Israelites know which it is to be! Israel is to possess "the Gate" of her enemies. Her enemies are the Russians (Ezek. xxxviii., xxxix.). The Gate of the Russian's house is "La Porte Sublime," presently in possession of the Turk, and the Russians now see that either Lord Beaconsfield's policy respecting Turkey must conquer or disappear. But it cannot disappear, for God's Word guarantees it shall be dominant, and it must needs conquer. Constantinople must yet be Israel's Gate, where, seated, she shall be recognised as mistress of the world; "for the kingdom, and the dominion, and the GREATNESS of the kingdom under the whole heaven must be given to the people of the saints of the Most High," even to "the children of Israel, praise ye the Lord" (Dan. vii. 27; Psa. cxlviii. 14). The dominion of the world, as all men see, is joined with the possession of the Great Gate, and the Russian press at last sees in agony that the alternative now is, not whether Russia or the British shall be dominant there, but whether Turkey is henceforth to be Great Britain's vassal or sole mistress as the independent chief of all the Mohammedan States. The extract we quote is as follows:—

PARIS, Wednesday Night.

In an article on the crisis at Constantinople, the Golos remarks:—

"It is very difficult to predict how all this will end. Either the Porte will fall for ever under the tutelage of England, or the influence of that Power over Turkey will see its last days. As for a compromise, there is no question of such a thing. Lord Beaconsfield's Eastern policy has gone so far that there can no longer be any question of compromises or intrigues. It must conquer or disappear. A mortal blow has been dealt at the power of Turkey in the Balkan peninsula. Its complete destruction is only a question of time. Henceforth Turkey can only exist either as a vassal of England or as an exclusively Mohammedan and Asiatic State. All the present crisis is summed up in this alternative. It remains for the Sultan to make his choice. Will he be a vassal of England, or the chief sovereign of all the Mohammedans in the East?

The Golos sees clearly enough that the power of Turkey in Europe is dead—the waters of the Euphrates have dried up (Rev. xvi. 12)—and that what is left of it there (in the Gate itself) must continue either as "England's vassal" or ("England" being put aside) as the chief independent Asiatic State—turned out of Europe we presume. However that may be, we are certain of one thing. The power of Britain—being Israel—cannot disappear, but is destined to increase and fatally to circumscribe that of Russia! It is destined to hold the Gate of Russia's house, Constantinople, since God has promised that destiny to His people, ratified by an oath, sworn by His own Being. The Sultan, in short, will have no choice in the matter. But, however he comports himself, his destiny is to yield to Israel, and directly or indirectly to surrender to his control and possession "the Gate of the world"—the Gate of Israel's enemies—the Gate of Russia's Empire!

THE HISTORIC CONTINUITY OF PROTESTANTISM AMONG GOD'S "WITNESSES," AND THE CONSTANCY OF TRUE GOSPEL LIGHT TO "THE ISLES OF THE WEST."—ISA. XXIV. 15.

HAVE our readers seen and read an admirable work by a learned man just issued—namely, Dr. Samuel Wainwright's "Ritualism, Romanism, and The Reformation; a Question of Fact?" If not, they should procure it from S. W. Partridge and Co., 9, Paternoster-row, and carefully peruse it. It seems to us to teem with Identity light and information, revealing what we call (and justly) a new Identity—namely, The Historic Continuity of Protestantism Among God's British "Witnesses," and the Constancy of True Gospel Light to the "I'ai I'yâm," or Isles of the Sea (i.e., of the West) of Isaiah xxiv. 15. On one memorable occasion we were privileged to have a long conversation with the author of this book, to whom we detailed the grand outlines of our Identity. He received them with gravity and thoughtful consideration, terminating the interview by saying that a forthcoming work of his own (the one in question) would be found to point, by a different line of research, to the same result as that we had endeavoured to establish—namely, the special blessing on the British races, and their home, in the matter of the constancy of the Gospel to them, and its repeated return to these islands in spite of continual declensions of the nation into Papal error.

Digitized by Google

With the work now before us we are more than satisfied. It is full of subjects for reflection, and points in a manner which we hope to make clear, to a fresh Identity of our race with Israel—God's true Protestantes.

Dr. Wainwright's first point in the second part of his book shows the Identity of Protestant with Primitive Christianity, that it was no novelty, but only a restoration of antiquity (page 83). The existence of that very early and pure apostolic Christianity in the British Islands, so soon as A.D. 61, administered by either Peter or Paul, or both, is next demonstrated by reference to the testimony of Gildas, of Bede, of Cardinal Baronius, of Theodoret, of Eusebius, of Origen, of Dr. Lingard, and of Gibbon.

Dr. Wainwright, in speaking of these islands, gives inadvertent blind witness to our Israelite origin when at page 102 he quotes Theodoret's words regarding Paul's ministry of the Gospel bringing "salvation to the islands that lie in the ocean"—"a phrase which (he adds) constituted the current geographical designation of the British Isles at that time." So far our author. But we may add that this was Isaiah's name also for these islands, as chap. xxiv. 15 testifies; and in modern times we have the Rev. F. R. A. Glover's evidence that he learnt from Rabbi Schwartz—a Jew of Cologne—that at the present day the Jews speak among themselves of Great Britain, commonly, not as England, or Britain, but as I'ai I'yâm, the Scriptural "isles of the West"—the very Hebrew name which occurs in Isaiah xxiv. 15!

Dr. Wainwright clearly shows that the Protestantism of the British in Saxon times was as pure as that of the seventeenth century, and that the Christianity of the apostolic age was identical with that professed by the Anglo-Saxons of the seventh. But Augustine, the Romish monk, with his forty fellows, arrived in these islands in A.D. 597, and with him brought Popery into Britain. By his successors the pure Christianity of the Culdees, who Christianised the Heptarchy from Scotland, was neutralised and destroyed, and the British realms gradually but surely handed over to Papal degradation and that ignorance which is justly connected with the "dark ages" of our history. How was the "light of life" to be restored to the darkened heavens of God's people Israel? In darkness they could not remain. But how came the light? Through the continental "witnesses," the Waldenses, communicated to John Wycliffe, "the Morning Star of the English Reformation," when he was at Bruges in the Netherlands, as one of the English commissioners sent there to confer with the agents of the Papacy, in A.D. 1373, regarding certain grievances of the British nation.

Wycliffe raised high the glorious light that in two centuries later culminated in the Reformation of Israel itself. The light had to be imparted to Wycliffe at Bruges; but when he died in peace, before "the morning star's" effulgence could develope into the sun shining in its strength, a series of events were required which took the truth from England to Bohemia, which made Huss and Jerome martyrs for Jesus in that land—martyrs for the truth Huss learnt from Wycliffe—and which ended in the Reformation of the Erfurt University, where Martin Luther, "the miner's son that shook the world," lit up a torch of light, now gone out, alas! in almost outer darkness in Germany itself, but blazing afresh, and with ever-glowing glory, in "the isles of the West," where that light first arose in Europe, and to which it has, after all vicissitudes, constantly returned. To describe all this, Dr. Wainwright epitomises the facts as follows (page 141):—

"Thus Luther learned of John of Wesel what John of Wesel had learned from John Huss; what Huss had learned from Wycliffe; what Wycliffe had learned from the refugee Vaudois; what they had learned from the Paulicians; what they had learned from the Great Apostle of the Gentiles who called no man master."

Thus we see (guided by Dr. Wainwright) that the pure Gospel light was early rooted in British soil—as early, indeed, as in almost any land, even in A.D. 61—that for 600 years it was pure and apostolic in doctrine in these "isles of the West," then held by Saxon-Israel; that the darkness of Popery intervening, God gave us back the light through Wycliffe, in A.D. 1373; that when the Gospel was overclouded again by Papal rust, Huss, of Bohemia, and Jerome, had to die as martyrs, and Martin Luther had to storm and fight for Protestantism in Germany in order that the light of life might once more, in the sixteenth century, be kindled again in Israel's home—never again, thank God, to go entirely out!

Dr. Wainwright has a noble chapter on "What the Reformation did for England," which every Israelite ought to read and make his own. To our Reformation—when "Israel" became "obedient" to the Lord, turned the national face towards her God, and yielded the homage nationally due to His Christ—we owe everything according to our author, and in one sense we do. Dr. Wainwright finds, in his enumeration, that to that great national act we owe (pages 239 to 263)—

1. The English Bible.
2. The Book of Common Prayer.
3. The freedom of intellectual development.
4. Our industrial development, when the refugees from Protestant persecutions in France and Flanders filled these islands with the best blood and most cultivated intellects of continental Flemish and Huguenot refugees who fled here for asylum, and have become since incorporated into Israel's polity.

Dr. Wainwright, it is true, does not in his book attribute our wonderful prosperity and condition to-day to anything beyond our Protestantism. But, as our readers well know, there lies beyond our Protestantism a yet deeper cause for our success for God's wonderful blessings on our land and people—even "our Identity." We are Protestants because as Israel we are God's "witnesses"—witnesses that He is—and that He must be worshipped in spirit and in truth (Isa. xliii. 10—12, xliv. 8). In the train of the circumstance of our Identity there has followed us "the constancy of the Gospel to our islands," which Dr. Wainwright brings forward as a fact in his book, and noticed also as remarkable in his conversation with ourselves.

Thenceforth God gave us every good gift and every promise made on oath to our forefather Abraham and to his seed, the Hebrews, FOR EVER—we now lack not one. As our author shows, we are indeed to-day the "favoured nation," possessing the Bible as our heritage, an almost perfect book of Common Prayer, civil and religious liberty, and unique advantages in all matters concerning our industrial national development. Besides these He gave us the four Israelitish benisons promised in Gen. xxii. 17, 18; in Deut. xv. 6, also in many other passages: Fecundity abnormal, the Gate of our enemies, Gospel evangelisation, embracing ALL the nations and ALL the families of the earth, wealth untold, universal domination, freedom ourselves from alien subjection, love of God's Sabbath, love of His ten laws, and in short all those good things that He promised His friend Abraham should be the property and perquisites of "his seed for ever."

We conclude by hoping that ere long Dr. S. Wainwright, with whose zeal for the Protestantism of the British and their National Church we fully sympathise, may clearly see with us that these and all the other blessings he so grandly enumerates in his work, are but the outcome of our Identity, and not otherwise; also that being ours because of our origin, we are in no danger of ever losing our glorious privileges, since the gifts and calling of our God are absolutely without repentance (Rom. xi. 29).

Digitized by Google

In conclusion, we would point out that in every single case where Gospel light has been granted to Gentile Churches the day has come when the light has gradually faded away, corruptions have crept in, and the candlestick has been finally removed. Where are the seven Churches of the Apocalypse to-day? Praised mostly even by the Lord of glory, their light has been put out, and once out, never, never, was re-kindled. Where now are the Churches of the Romans? of the Corinthians? of the Colossians? of the Philippians? of the Thessalonians? of the Galatians? Alas, they are no more! the blackness of darkness reigns where once all was light. Where is Bohemian Christianity that Huss and Jerome died to raise? Extinguished. French Protestantism? It is a name, and nationally is dead. German light? It has long gone out. In Spain, Portugal, and Italy, the Gospel once shone clear and radiant; but has now disappeared and has never been nationally re-lighted. Why is this? Because all these are Gentile lands. But the "isles of the West" are Israel's domains, and always, as we have seen, the candlestick early lighted up, even in A.D. 61, has been again and again re-illumined, though man's fatal folly and gross idolatries would have quenched the light many a time and oft. Yet since we are "God's people Israel" He has always in mercy given us back the Gospel, because of His oath to "Abraham and his seed for ever"—which oath promised that "in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed."

Reader, in the glorious light of this our new Identity, learn to value your Hebrew origin more and more. Praise the Lord for His tender love and pity to us "His people Israel," whom (according to His promise) loving He hath loved to the very end; saying to us, not once, but continually, "Turn, O backsliding children, saith the Lord, for I am married unto you." "Thou, Israel, art My servant, I have chosen thee, and NOT CAST THEE AWAY" (Jer. iii. 14; Isa. xli. 9); and finally, see in what we have now feebly put before the readers of the BANNER, a grand illustration of Psa. cxlvii. 19, 20, since "He hath," indeed, "showed His words unto JACOB, His statutes and His judgments unto ISRAEL. He hath NOT DEALT SO WITH ANY NATION; and (as for His) judgments, THEY have not known them. Praise YE the Lord."

FRESH EVIDENCE IN OUR OWN LAND OF SPIRITUAL GOOD TO A WOMAN'S SOUL BY GOD'S BLESSING ON OUR IDENTITY BELIEVED.

WE have now to ask our readers to attend to an account it is our happiness to give them of the benefit a Christian woman tells us she has personally experienced from her belief in our Identity, and in all the glorious blessings it brings with it in its train. Among the latter she includes the hope of the speedy second advent of our adorable Redeemer.

It must not be supposed that these hopes were not presented to her mind before she heard of the Identity of the British with Israel. No doubt they were. But they fell on blinded eyes, on a darkened heart, and on a religious feeling that was dead. God in His love and mercy used the Identity to give life to a dead soul, to convert and revive one who could neither see nor feel, and henceforth the Scriptures were a new book to her. God's dealings with her and her people were seen in a perfectly new and glorious light, and, in the words of Scripture, "all things became new," and "she passed from death unto life" (2 Cor. v. 17; 1 John iii. 14), "out of darkness into His marvellous light" (1 Peter ii. 9). Such being one of many (therefore not a singular result) of the application of the truths of our Identity to the souls of men and women, not in one but in many lands, we ask our opponents to pause in their present course of opposition. Let them reflect that what the Lord is thus blessing they are violently resisting, and do they imagine they are stronger than He? This thing being of God, as we have proved it to be, must prevail. Let them, therefore, acquiesce in it, cease to withstand it: nay, help to make the glorious truths more widely known. But let them not fight against it "lest haply they be found even to fight against God" (Acts v. 39). The case we have alluded to is thus described by a godly mother in Israel who details her own history and shall tell her tale in her own few simple words:—

"I must tell you now (she says) that I owe to this our beloved doctrine of the Identity and the second advent of our glorious Redeemer my own resurrection from a dead formalism in religion. I was, until I began to read of this, a Christian in training, in profession, and everything but VITALITY. But since then, through these blessed teachings, I have seen new beauties in the Scripture, new glories in the wondrous dealings of the Almighty, and I have learned to look every morning and every evening for the coming of Him whom my soul loveth, and to order my walk and conduct, so as to be in readiness when the voice of the Bridegroom shall call."

Now we ask our clerical opponents, Messrs. Clifford, Cornall, and Walker, are these the results of God's work and of His Spirit, or are they the sad consequences of Satanic delusions, operating through the agency of the enemies of the Lord, to revive this woman's soul? To doubt for an instant is a simple absurdity. The consequences of belief in our Identity to this woman, as she herself describes them, are just such as every godly minister must wish to see effected by his own faithful preaching of the Gospel message—a dead soul was brought to life by the power of the Holy Spirit. A formalist was made a living, loving child of God. One who saw no particular beauty in God's Word found it full of new illustrations of His love. His wondrous glorious dealings with herself were now clear to her, and she learned by the teachings of the Identity to realise that her Lord's coming was near, very near, even at the doors. Are these horrible heresies, delusions, blasphemies? things which cause our adversaries justly to say that, henceforth we Israelites must be shunned, avoided, abandoned by all the truly faithful ones, "lest they be partakers of our sins," what time the fate of Korah, Dathan, and Abiram overtake us and ours? If so, then we have not so learned Christ's truths. We see in the results we have described the true fruits of God's Spirit, and recognise His work in the regeneration of a lost and ruined soul. We pray that our opponents may be candid enough to admit this truth, and, acknowledging their error, give a tardy adhesion to realities which cannot now be gainsaid.

A FEW THOUGHTS ON OUR IDENTITY.

BY THOMAS BALES.

PART I.

THE greatest objections raised to our Identity are founded on its supposed irreconcilableness with history, philology, and physiology. Many stake their belief on the writings of men like Professor Rawlinson, ready to attack the opinions of others, but incapable of defending their own, and reject it without inquiry, because these condemn it. Its bitterest foes are the clergy. Instead of looking fairly into the subject they affect to despise it, and smile at the credulity of those who accept it, although, thank God, there are not many ministers so forgetful of the precepts of the Saviour, as to denounce the subject and abuse its students in coarse and abusive language. That is reserved for a few, and these display their ignorance both of history and the Word of God whenever they attempt to argue; yet so great is their bigotry, and so blind their judgment, that they cleave to historical speculation and reject Divine revelation.

Digitized by Google

In tracing the records of remote antiquity there must inevitably be a great amount of uncertainty. Historians give different versions of the same events; the prejudices of the writers must be taken into consideration, and where everything is lax and vague, reference must be made to a higher authority, to test the accuracy of evidence adduced. Such a standard of appeal we possess in the Bible. Whatever, therefore, in the history of ages remote is in accordance with it, may justly and reasonably be accepted, and whatever is contrary to it, must with equal propriety be rejected. We know well that the Israelites were led captive into Assyria on more than one occasion, and the Bible declares they were totally expatriated. Does history accord with the teaching of the Bible? Professor Rawlinson says, "No;" but over two hundred and sixty years ago an historian* wrote on this very topic, and he not only shews that the whole of the Ten Tribes were carried into captivity, but also gives the names of the peoples by whom Samaria was afterwards inhabited.

These remarks are probably unknown to many, and I therefore give them at length, in the quaint words and spelling of the original :—

"Then Hoshea or Osea, who slew Pekah, became the vassal of Salmanassar; but hoping to shake off the Assyrian yoake, he sought ayd from So, or Sua, or Sebicus, King of Egypt: which being knowne to the Assyrian, he cast him into prison, beseiged Samaria, and mastred it; carried the Ten idolatrous Tribes into Ninive, in Assyria, and into Rages, in Media, and into óther Easterne regions, and there dispersed them; and replanted Samaria with divers nations, and chiefly with the Cuthæ (inhabiting about Cutha, a river in Persia, or rather in Arabia Deserta), and with the people Calanie bounding upon Syria, and with those of Sepharvajim (a people of Sephar in Mesopotamia upon Euphrates, of whose conquest Senacherib vaunteth), also with those of Ava, which were of the ancient Avins, who inhabited the land of the Philistims in Abraham's time, dwelling neere unto Gaza, whom the Caphtorims rooted out; and at this time they were of Arabia the desert, called Havæi, willing to return to their ancient seats. To these he added those of Chamath or of Iturea, the ancient enemies of the Israelites, and sometimes the vassals of the Adads of Damascus, which so often afflicted them. . . . . And this transmigration, plantation, and displantation, happened in the year of the world 3292, the sixth yeare of Ezekiah, King of Juda: and the ninth of Hosea the last King of Israel."

After this, there will, I think, be but little doubt as to the entire captivity of the Israelites.

I will now anticipate an objection. Some will clutch at the idea of dispersion as drowning men clutch at straws, and will at once say that the Israelites became "inextricably mingled" with the people among whom they dwelt. But for one thing this would not only be possible but probable. There was, however, this great bar to their being absorbed. God had decreed otherwise. The Scriptures plainly tell us so, and if we regard the God we profess to serve, we must not doubt His Word. He had been mindful of His people during their sojourn in Egypt; He had shewed mighty signs and wonders in their behalf; He led them forth triumphantly from the land of bondage; He made a path for them through the sea, and overwhelmed their foes with the returning waters: He led and preserved them during their forty years' wandering through the wilderness, and gave them the pleasant land of Canaan, driving out their foes from before them. Why should it, then, be deemed impossible for Him to maintain the integrity of His people, even under the most adverse circumstances? This was His declared intention; but some limit His power and deny His truth. It is, unhappily, a fact, that while we affect to believe His miraculous interventions, yet when we are asked to believe that, for His truth's sake, His honour, and His glory, He did not suffer Israel to be absorbed, we shrug our shoulders, look incredulous, and consult Rawlinson. Professing Christianity is often but little removed from practical infidelity.

To disperse a nation is a task not easy of accomplishment, even in the case of an ordinary people, however simple it may appear to a superficial mind. There are two great and well-nigh insuperable obstacles in the way of utter dispersion. They are cohesion and attraction. That this is a sound principle may be inferred from the case of the Jews. On the proclamation of the decree of Cyrus, the Jews mustered en masse for their return. If they had been dispersed in the strict sense of the word, such a mustering would have been impracticable. It is surely, therefore, no stretch of reasoning to conclude that they existed in masses, and have possessed the means of intercommunication. Similar manners, customs, and rites, knit men together, and attract their fellows from afar. And the Israelites were no ordinary people, for God had chosen them to be a special people unto Himself, distinct from, and high above, all other peoples and nations of the earth. We know there were flourishing Israelitish communities. These, in accordance with natural laws and the will of an over-ruling Providence, were attracted to each other, until they assumed large proportions, and commenced those wanderings destined to terminate in the isles of the West.

(To be continued).

* Sir Walter Raleigh.

THE EDITOR OF THE "SUNDERLAND DAILY POST" ON THE REV. JOHN WILKINSON'S PHILOLOGICAL ERRORS.

THE Rev. J. Wilkinson in the course of his lecture at Sunderland, on July 29, 1879, on "The Ten Tribes, Where Are They Not? and Where Are They?" spoke to the following effect on the subject of the philological affinity between the language of the Nestorians (who he suggested were a part of the Lost Tribes) and the Hebrew. He said:—

His contention was that they must look for the remainder of the Ten Tribes in the neighbourhood of the country where they were lost. He believed that the quarter of a million of Fallashas inhabiting Abyssina might be a portion of the Lost Ten Tribes. There were two reasons why, as in Ezra, the Word says that they offered sacrifice for the Twelve Tribes—first, that there might be sufficient of the Ten Tribes to be representative of the nation, or that what was considered the nation had returned. The evidence was satisfactory that they were in a great measure restored. He was not unwilling to admit that the present Jews might not represent the whole Twelve Tribes. The speaker had studied the question twenty-five years, and knew the Ten Tribes had been sought everywhere in the world. The lecturer then referred to passages in Josephus and Jerome, which he held went to favour the theory that the Nestorians were a portion at least of the Ten Tribes. The manners and customs of this people supported that conjecture. The Nestorians, he said, retained the Syriac tongue, which is similar to Hebrew. The lecturer recounted his interview with the two Nestorians who visited England in 1860, who considered that they were the undoubted descendants of the Ten Tribes.

In reply, the editor of the Sunderland Daily Post, of Aug. 2, 1879, set Mr. Wilkinson philologically right in the following sensible terms. We hope he will profit by the instruction. He said :—

Was Mr. Wilkinson really serious in requiring assent to the exploded theory that language was a test of race? It looked like it when he instanced the case of the Nestorians, who might be considered, he thought, descendants of the Ten Tribes because they spoke a language having some affinity to the ancient Hebrew. Such a doctrine is too absurd to be entertained for a moment. The greatest philologists of the day, from Sayce downwards, reject with scorn the theory that language is a test of race. It is not, and in the nature of the case, never can be. These affinities of language can be accounted for otherwise than by involving ethnic relationship. There is the influence of social contact. Take, for example, the case of the Gypsies, those nomads of the present day. Wherever they have settled down for a more or less lengthened period, they have acquired the language of the people among whom they have pitched their tents. But it could never be maintained that because they speak and converse and carry on business in another tongue, having, in the course of generations, lost that of their fathers, that on that account they were part and parcel of the people among whom they first came as strangers, and that the ethnic barriers governing race had been broken down and dissolved. And so with our Anglo-Saxon forefathers. In their migrations from the East, centuries passed ere they came and settled down in these "isles of the West." During that long and weary travel their language would become sensibly affected by the absorption of words and roots from the languages of the neighbouring peoples with whom they were constantly in contact. But being intellectually a vigorous people, the grammatical structure of their language, as has been well pointed out by Mr. Cockburn-Muir, an admitted authority in such matters, remained unchanged. It is certainly a very curious fact that the grammatical structure of the British language is purely Shemetic, and the Hebrew can be transliterated into British in a way not possible with any other modern language. The fact that our language is partially Teutonised and partially Gallicised is due to the cause above referred to, and cannot be put forward as an argument that we are half-brothers or first cousins to these people. Nay, according to the highest philological lights, though we were a wholly German-speaking people, that fact would not effect one iota the ethnic side of the argument. We make a present of these hurried and necessarily imperfect observations to Mr. Greig, who does not appear to have approached this side of the question.

Digitized by Google

ISRAEL "THE HEAD AND NOT THE TAIL," "ABOVE ONLY AND NOT BENEATH," EVEN IN NATURAL SCENERY AND SYLVAN CULTURE.

A FRIEND has pointed out to our readers that we never lose an opportunity of proving that our God has made this nation "above only and not beneath" its Gentile neighbours in every point of view. Whether in power, supremacy on sea or land, in manufacture, in cattle, horses, sheep or dogs, even in music, photographic art, and iron works of all kinds, we have shown, and have been right to show, that we are "the head and not the tail, above only and not beneath" as a nation. And why? Because God gave our forefathers the promise it should be so with "Israel-obedient," and this nation being Israel, now obedient to His will, and nationally hearkening to Him, in reference to the possession of a national faith in the Lord Jesus Christ the Redeemer of the race, it is needful to prove the faithfulness of our God, to show that we answer to this His promise, and consequently are in all things, as He said we should be, "above only and not beneath" our Gentile neighbours. In such matters as these, where a comparison has to be instituted between ourselves and the continental nations, it is always best to obtain our evidences ab extrâ. To advance our own opinions and draw our own conclusions from facts detailed would be of little avail. Such testimony would be set down to "interested advocacy," and would with our opponents, if not with our friends as well, count for very little. It is different when the Times or some other secular journal which knows nothing of our Identity, and cares less, comes forward and with blind eagerness hastens to prove our claim with strong true testimony just fitted, and that exactly, to our case, showing we are the very picture of what God said "Lost Israel" should be in "the latter days," the chief of nations, "the head and not the tail, above only and not beneath," a peculiar people dwelling in all respects "alone." We now undertake to prove, the Times of June 18, 1879, being our witness, that we answer to our likeness to Israel in respect of our British landscapes, our sylvan scenery, our picturesque mountains, hills, and dales, and that there is nothing anywhere the wide-world over to beat us, nothing certainly in Europe! Whether the Times proves this or not, let the reader judge. The words are the editor's of that journal, not ours; and we deem them good blind testimony to our Identity, and as such ask our friends to note them. He said:—

It may be questioned whether Nature, pure and simple, anywhere shows anything to surpass what can now be seen within a few miles of this metropolis and even in it. Nature, unassisted, nowhere brings together the brilliant colouring, the charming variety of tints and shades, and the well-formed masses to be found in our parks, pleasure-grounds, and flower-gardens. She no more does this than does she anywhere produce, unassisted, a good crop of wheat or other grain; and she is as much indebted to human aid in the one as in the other. The grandest and most beautiful scenery in the world, far or near, has its drawbacks in the predominance of sad hues with but little relief, in the presence of misshapen or ruined specimens, in the absence of grassy lawns, in precipices either sombre originally or blackened or bleached, in monotonous forms of vegetation, in a general want of accord between the streams and the beds they flow in, sometimes dry, and sometimes inadequate. When we have travelled a thousand miles, it is to find Nature savage, or gloomy, or dull, as giants always are, amazing beholders, and leaving them amazed. No lover of the English picturesque arrives in Australia, without experiencing a certain shock. The paths up the Himalayas are between new and wondrous varieties of shrub and flower, but when you look down it is into gloomy depths, without trees, meadows, or lakes, without even rivers that can be seen. Our own neighbour France exhibits nature and industry alike in their worst moods. The plains are bare; the rivers are wide beds of sand and shingle; the mountains are not clothed with trees; hedgerows there are none, and their place is supplied with hundreds of miles of poplars or pear trees, equally scant of foliage and devoid of form. It really is in England alone that Nature is helped to her true development. In our parks an endless variety of trees have space to grow to their true beauty. Our hedgerows, our hillsides, our beds of gorse and broom, the banks in our Western and other counties, are the traveller's garden everywhere, as well as shelter from sun, wind, and rain. Nowhere abroad can the botanist, the ornithologist, or the entomologist make so many observations as in this country. He has only to stop anywhere, and he can add to his collection, and his knowledge as well. Nowhere else in the frequented parts of Europe can the cattle be seen at large in the fields enjoying themselves. Nowhere is rural life so diffused over the country, or each little valley or knoll so vivified and humanized. But the acme and flower of all this natural beauty is the well-planned, well-planted, and well-kept pleasure-ground. Gathered together there from all parts of the world, each with his history, are the most beautiful and most innocent symbols of man's dominion over the earth. They are now to be seen in unprecedented perfection, so says Mr. Cole, no further off than Kensington-gardens. We believe we are correct in saying that every one of the trees he names, though so familiar to us, is a foreigner. The horse chesnut, white or pink, the laburnum, the lilac, the guelder rose, the azalea, the rhododendron, and many others there—nay, all but the hawthorn and one or two very old friends—have no more claim to be aboriginal than most Englishmen have.

God said He would be to His people Israel "as a little sanctuary in the countries where they shall come (Ezek. xi. 16); that the wilderness whither He would "allure and bring them" (Hos. ii. 14) should "blossom as the rose," being once a desert, now a rejoicing, gladsome place (Isa. xxxv. 1); and verily, as we see above, He hath kept His word.

Reader, let us thank God for our blessings, for our lovely, glorious, beautiful "England," meaning by the word our blessed island home in these Western isles, that "place of our own" which God told David He would appoint for us as a "place" to plant us there, whence we should "move no more," and where no foot of foreign foe should ever land in hostile force and oust us (2 Sam. vii. 10). For this our refuge we are indebted to the blood of Christ, for He it was who redeemed His people, and rendered possible the fulfilment of the covenanted blessings promised first to our forefather "Abraham and his seed for ever," repeated to Isaac, to Jacob, to David, and to all the prophets who have spoken by the Word of the Lord.

Digitized by Google

THE ETERNAL PURPOSES OF GOD IN ISRAEL.

"I am not sent but unto the lost sheep of the House of Israel."—Matt. xv. 24.

THAT there is a depth in the dealings of God with Israel which has never yet been fathomed by man is beyond dispute. And that the glorious purposes of God in Israel are but faintly comprehended, even by many who have made the subject their study, is equally certain. If we glance over the history of the children of Israel, we shall not fail to observe a strongly marked typical character displayed in the dealings of God with them throughout all the varying circumstances of their marvellous career. But what I wish more particularly to direct attention to now is, the exclusive dealing of God with Israel from their calling in Abraham to the last manifestation of God in Christ Jesus. Up to this point the whole of God's attention, so to speak, seems to have been directed to them, while the Gentiles were left to take their own course and to follow their own devices. At this point, however, the exclusiveness apparently ceases.

It is now becoming more and more manifest that God has been, and still continues, dealing with His people Israel in a manner in some respects as wonderfully as at any other period of their chequered existence. I am aware the command was given, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the Gospel to every creature" (Mark xvi. 15). But there are also other Scriptures which tell us that the Gospel shall be preached for a witness unto all nations, and then cometh the end (Matt. xxiv. 14); not the end of the world, but the end of the age, or dispensation. After which will be realised, in the fullest sense of the words, the promise of God to Abraham: "In thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed" (Gen. xxii. 18). And when this long-promised and now rapidly approaching age of blessedness shall have arrived, they shall be used by God as the governing body, and the honoured instruments of blessing to all the ends of the earth.

It must not be inferred, from what I have just stated, that the power of the Gospel is limited to the salvation of the children of Israel after the flesh. This we know is not the case; but that all believers, through faith in Christ, are accounted the seed of Abraham. "If ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise" (Gal. iii. 29). The promise was given unconditionally to Abraham long before the giving of the law, and therefore cannot be affected by the disobedience of his descendants; it is as children of Abraham that we are heirs according to the promise! "Thus, then, our Lord, as the seed of Abraham, is not only Heir, but the blessed guarantee that Abraham and his seed shall also have inheritance according to promise. Our inheritance as believers absolutely rests upon the fact that Jesus is Heir. Disprove that fact, and not a shred of title remains to any follower of the Lord Jesus."*

Before entering more fully into our subject, let me premise, for reasons which I have just stated, that the present, as well as the past, dispensations of the world almost exclusively concern Israel; that in the present dispensation Israel after the flesh has been lost, but that, by a marvellous providence, the spiritual Israel in Christ will be found Identified as Israel after the flesh. And thus pre-eminently significant are the words of the Lord, that "the Son of Man is come to seek and to save that which was lost" (Luke xix. 10). That the Saxon races,† as their name implies, are the Lost Tribes of Israel, and that, in recognising this fact, we also realise the meaning of the declaration of our Lord: "I am not sent, but unto the lost sheep of the House of Israel" (Matt. xv. 24). That the book of Revelation is in exact conformity with the foregoing. The sealing of the 144,000 of all the Tribes of the children (Rev. vii.). The woman clothed with the sun, and the moon under her feet, and upon her head a crown of twelve stars (Rev. xii.). The twelve foundations of the heavenly Jerusalem, and the twelve gates with the names of the Twelve Tribes written thereon. All, all is Israel from beginning to end.

Let us now endeavour to look a little more closely into our subject, although I cannot hope, in the limited space at my disposal, to render justice to a theme possessing such immense interest.

From the very earliest ages of the world we see manifested the intention of God to call, or gather out from among men, a people for Himself, in whom should be displayed His glory and power. We know how this intention has hitherto been carried out in the children of Israel, in accordance with the promise made to Abraham, and with, evidently, some grand ulterior purpose in view with regard to them. How, in mercy and judgment, but always in love, the Lord has dealt with them; by what manifold means He has instructed them; and how, with a "mighty hand and an outstretched arm," He delivered them out of Egyptian bondage, led them through the wilderness, and set them in the Promised Land; how He overcame all their enemies, and continued to prosper them, notwithstanding all their backslidings and sins, until the glory was consummated in the magnificent reign of Solomon, when their renown spread throughout the world, but which, after all, was only a type and a shadow of the glory and the magnificence hereafter to be revealed in them. For we find after this, Israel, for the most part, is lost. First, by the revolt of the Ten Tribes and their captivity; and subsequently the captivity of the remainder on account of their idolatry. "Therefore the Lord was very angry with Israel, and removed them out of His sight" (2 Kings xvii. 18). Afterwards, as we know, a portion of them, principally of the Tribe of Judah, were permitted to return, and from whom, in the fulness of time, came the Messiah, the Lord Jesus Christ, whom they rejected and crucified, but who will shortly come with power and great glory to re-establish the kingdom of Israel with a thousand times the grandeur it had in the reign of Solomon.

It is really painful to consider the numerous extravagant surmises as to where the Lost Tribes of Israel are to be found. Some have supposed them to be lost amongst the wilds and deserts of Central Africa: others have imagined that some of the barbarous Tribes in Asia are the Lost of Israel, and others have indulged in opinions still more incredible. Surely it cannot have been part of the plan of the Almighty that His people should lapse into barbarism, but most certainly the reverse. No, they are to be found "among the chief of the nations," and in the Northern parts of the earth (Jer. xxxi. 7—9, iii. 12, 18, xxiii. 7, 8), which fact is in accordance with the direction in which they were taken into captivity, for we read, "The King of Assyria took Samaria, and carried Israel away captive into Assyria, and placed them in Halah, and Habor, by the river of Gozan, and in the cities of the Medes" (2 Kings xvii. 6). Now Assyria and Media lay to the North-east of the Holy Land; Media is usually represented in the maps to include the Southern border of the Caspian, and here, singularly enough, does one of our greatest historians trace the rise and origin of the Saxon race, and at a time precisely coincident with the removal of Israel there from their own land. This is a well-worn argument I know, but it is independent evidence of the greatest weight and importance; and from it we can come to no other conclusion than that the Saxon and the Israelitish race are one and the same. And if so, what infinite skill and judgment are displayed by the Almighty in the training and development of Israel for the future government of the world — having brought them from the heat and oppression of Egypt through the wilderness to their own land, and again from thence up to these Northern quarters; thus making them to undergo every variety of change in circumstances, climate, and government, and by their being now spread abroad throughout the world, possessing a knowledge of the language and customs of its inhabitants, which will, together, eminently qualify them, under Divine tuition and government, for universal sovereignty. Marvellous, indeed, are the purposes of God. How wonderfully He has met His people and fulfilled that which He declared by His prophets, "Although I have cast them off among the heathen, and although I have scattered them among the countries, yet will I be to them as a little sanctuary in the countries where they shall come" (Ezek. xi. 16). And now are we able to understand the direction the apostles took in the proclamation of the Gospel, which, having been first offered to the Jewish remnant of Israel then in the land and refused, it was but just that it should also be offered to Israel scattered abroad, who, blessed be God, have received it! What is to be said of that very significant passage at the beginning of the Epistle of James: "James, a servant of God and of the Lord Jesus Christ, to the Twelve Tribes scattered abroad." Is it not conclusive evidence, even at that early period, that the Gospel had been largely received by portions of, not only the Ten Tribes, but of the whole Twelve? All this, coupled with the astonishingly significant declaration of our Lord before alluded to, "I am not sent but unto the lost sheep of the House of Israel," will, I think, carry conviction to the mind of any unbiassed reader that we are indeed the Lord's people in the double sense of the word, but not to the exclusion of others, who, although according to the flesh "aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenant of promise, are made nigh by the blood of Christ" (Eph. ii. 12, 13). In other words, "that the Gentiles should be fellow-heirs, and of the same body and partakers of his promise in Christ by the Gospel" (Eph. iii. 6); although not until the coming kingdom is established will the other nations fully participate in the promised blessings. The present is an elective dispensation, in which are being prepared the instrument or channels of mercy to be employed in the next dispensation, when Israel will truly be a holy nation unto the Lord, and then in a twofold aspect. There will be the heavenly Israel inhabiting the New Jerusalem, who will have been redeemed from the earth some time previous to the restoration of the "seed of the House of Israel" from the "North country," and from all the countries whither they have been driven, and there will be Israel so restored, inhabiting the earthly Jerusalem. The one, no doubt, in continual communication with the other, thus realising the figure of Jacob's dream when he beheld "a ladder set up on the earth, and the top of it reached to heaven; the angels of God ascending and descending on it" (Gen. xxvii. 12). In recognising these wonderful and blessed purposes of God, how exquisitely simple and beautiful becomes the Israelitish aspect of the various symbolisms in the book of Revelation! Whilst all seems to lead to the inevitable conclusion that inasmuch as God has dealt exclusively with the children of Israel through all the past ages of the world's history, so He has manifested His intention of conveying His blessings to the world at large, in the age to come, through the instrumentality of His chosen people. In contemplating this sublime scene of the future, in which Israel occupies such a conspicuous position, we are lost in wondering admiration at the grand, unfathomable, and mighty purposes yet to be displayed in them.

* "The Royal Rights of the Lord Jesus."

† Sons of Isaac, literally. "In Isaac shall thy seed be called" (Gen. xxi. 12).

Digitized by Google

THOMAS CLARK WESTFIELD.

LET the reader note that our Lord said to His Israelite Disciples, "Lo I am with YOU alway, even to the end of the age. Amen" (Matt. xxviii. 20). Such a promise was never given nationally to any Gentile race. "He hath NOT dealt so with any nation" (Psa. cxlvii. 20).

A MISQUOTATION CORRECTED.

WE have not the least desire to attribute to the Rev. J. B. Clifford intentional misquotation of our words. We are well aware, as a clergyman of the Church of England highly respected in his present sphere and as an aged minister of Christ, he is quite incapable of doing any such a thing in order to win a short-lived triumph. Still the unfortunate fact is this: that our adversary, whether led away by the heat of controversy or being the victim of an inveterate habit of inaccurate quotation, has laid himself open, over and over again, to the charge of using disingenuous tactics to upset our views and to throw discredit on the writers of the Identity.

For instance, at the head of page 26 of Mr. Clifford's last pamphlet ("The Anglo-Israelites"), there is a quotation from some of our writings calculated to do us great injury, to inflict on us great pain, and which left us utterly mystified when we read it, as to where and when we could have been guilty of writing that most obnoxious sentiment—one we "hate, and abominate, loathe, detest, and abhor," if we may be allowed to take up a bishop's anathema and make it our own! The words are these: "In his letter of June 25, Philo-Israel still insists that 'All God's good gifts are promised only to the Hebrews.' I deeply lament this infatuation."

So far Mr. Clifford. Had we written those words, and in the sense implied, we should join our adversary in his lamentation. But the sentiment is not ours. Mr. Clifford's imagination has conjured it up and fixed us with its authorship. We submit that when the truth is known, our readers will agree with us that a great injury has been done to us and to our cause by Mr. Clifford's inveterate habit. The words as quoted are made to pass muster as Philo-Israel's by the device of removing from rather a long sentence in which they are imbedded the head and also the tail, by introducing a verb in what was left, so as to make the words bear a totally different meaning to the author's intention, and, then, by telling the readers of the pamphlet that Philo-Israel insists on that. Can the force of injustice go further? and who can bear up against the results of such proceedings in a controversy?

In the first place, there was no clue which letter was referred to as the one wherein the objectionable passage occurred. When, after much trouble, the accused writer of these lines found it, he ascertained that it was one written by him to a local newspaper in Bristol, defending himself and our Identity from the odium which Mr. H. Oxley's late paper in Life from the Dead, regarding Israel's Deliverer, had brought upon the whole subject. He then discovered, to his great surprise, that in quoting from its last sentence our clerical opponent had so manipulated the latter as to make it read as he quoted it, and as we have already presented it to our readers. What we really wrote was as follows:—

"Because Messrs. Walker, and Cornall, and others are Israelites, they are doing Christ's work so successfully as preachers of the Gospel. My views would ask them to acknowledge the patent which confers on them this their nobility, and not ungratefully as they do, accept all God's good gifts promised only to the Hebrews and then decline to recognise the reason why those gifts are theirs.

"Yours, &c.,

"PHILO-ISRAEL.

"June 25, 1879."

Our readers will see that the question we were writing about was the Israelite gifts of God to "Abraham and his seed for ever"—those gifts confined to that race alone of which "world-wide Gospel evangelisation" is not the least. Speaking of that we urged that men like the Rev. Messrs. Walker, Cornall, and others who shine so greatly in this very function, should recognise in it the Israelite patent of their nobility, and not take to themselves all such of God's good gifts promised only to the Hebrews (that is, those set apart for that race alone), and then ungratefully refuse to recognise "the reason why" (the Identity "reason why") "THOSE gifts are theirs." Nothing could be plainer than this argument. But it would not do to quote the whole passage, so Mr. Clifford (inadvertently) cut off the head and tail of the sentence, introduced the word "are," and made us declare before all his readers that we hold that "all God's good gifts (and these are salvation, the Holy Spirit, health, moderate wealth, food, clothing, good temper, good children, earthly happiness, &c., &c.) are promised only to the Hebrews." The sentiment is outrageous, and the method by which the opponent of our Identity has turned the tables on us is, no doubt, very damaging to ourselves just so long as the error is left unexposed; but much the reverse when the truth is told.

Digitized by Google

We hope our opponents, the Rev. Mr. Clifford in particular, will recollect in future that even an Israelite ought to be treated fairly, and that to misquote, however unintentionally, does not, in the long run answer, even when dealing with so unimportant an individual as the BANNER'S EDITOR.

PROGRESS REPORTED FROM ST. ANN'S, BARBADOES.

WE are glad to report that our Identity and the BANNER in its train have penetrated even to Barbadoes, and that thence we have just received an encouraging letter from one who forwards us the Rev. Thomas Farrar's attack on us lately noticed, entitled "Truth versus Philo-Israel." Our West Indian friend says, that being "an earnest believer in the glorious origin of our race, he is anxious to see able and conscientious men enter the lists, and with honest, straight-forward, and temperate argument meet and demolish all such specious and superficial productions as the pamphlet in question" by the Rev. opponent to our views.

He goes on to say, that "notwithstanding the scholarly fulminations of Mr. Farrar and other 'clerical foes,' the belief in the Israelitish origin of the Anglo-Saxon race gains ground every day in this and other out-of-the-way corners of the globe. Would it not be well if those gentlemen took to heart the wise counsel of Gamaliel (a doctor of the law), who advised the Sanhedrim to 'refrain from these men; for if this counsel or this work be of men, it will come to nought; but if it be of God, ye cannot overthrow it, lest haply ye be found even to fight against God?'"

Finally, our friend (unknown to us, except now by name) wishes the BANNER OF ISRAEL a successful career in the cause of "truth." We beg our readers to note that Barbadoes is a perfectly new centre of Identity action, and that the seed has sprung up there spontaneously without any effort from any one on this side the water as far as we can tell. It would, indeed, appear that the opponents have, as usual, done the work for us, sown the seed of Identity knowledge at Barbadoes as elsewhere, and that we are indebted to the Rev. Thos. Farrar for the fact that men are investigating the subject in the West Indies. That investigation leads there, as here, and everywhere, to conviction, also to an earnest desire to propagate the truths we teach far and wide again. Of course this is no actual proof that the thing is of God; but as we point to the marvellous spread of Christianity as evidence of its Divine origin, so, soon if our learned and clerical opponents do not bestir themselves and prove us to be in the wrong, we shall be forced to conclude that they are wrong and we are right, that the Identity is God's truth and not man's lie, because God is causing it to spring up in all parts of the earth as if by magic, leaving fruits behind it which no man can mistake—"even the fruits of righteousness."

CONFIRMATIONS FROM THE CAPE.

ISRAEL'S GATES.

SOME time ago, in looking over a "Reader," used as a school-book by one of my children, I found the following article taken from the Atlantic Monthly. I have utilised it in lecturing in Natal and here, on our Identity with the Ten Tribes of Israel, but I have not seen it quoted in the BANNER, or by any of the writers on the subject of "the Gates." The article is so striking and so apropos, that well-instructed readers will require no comments from me, but can accept it as the testimony of another "blind witness" that we are, of a truth, God's elect people Israel, to whose father, Abraham, He promised: "Thy seed shall possess the Gate of his enemies," which promise has been grandly fulfilled by our possession of "the Gate of those that hate us."

"The sagacity of England is in nothing more clearly shown than in the foresight with which she has provided against the emergency of war. Let it come when it may, it will not find her unprepared. So thickly are her colonies and naval stations scattered over the face of the earth, that her war ships can speedily reach every commercial centre on the globe.

"There is that great centre of commerce, the Mediterranean Sea. It was a great centre long ago, when the Phœnician traversed it, and, passing through the Pillars of Hercules, sped on his way to the distant and then savage Britain. It was a great centre when Rome and Carthage wrestled in a death-grapple for its possession. But, at the present day, England is as much at home on the Mediterranean as if it were one of her own Canadian lakes.

"Nor is it simply the number of the British colonies, or the evenness with which they are distributed, that challenges our admiration. The positions which these colonies occupy, and their natural military strength, are quite as important facts. There is not a sea or a gulf in the world, which has any real commercial importance, but England has a stronghold on its shores. And wherever the continents tending Southward come to points around which the commerce of nations must sweep, there is a British settlement, and the cross of St. George salutes you as you are wafted by. There is hardly a little, desolate, rocky island, or peninsula, formed apparently by Nature for a fortress, and nothing else, but the British flag floats securely over it.

"These are literal facts. Take, for example, the great overland route from Europe to Asia. Despite its name, its real highway is on the waters of the Mediterranean and Red Seas. It has three Gates—three only. England holds the key to every one of these Gates. Count them—Gibraltar, Malta, Aden.* But she commands the entrance to the Red Sea not by one, but by several strongholds. Midway in the narrow strait is the black, bare rock of Perim—sterile, precipitous, a perfect counterpart of Gibraltar—and on either side, between it and the mainland, are the ship channels which connect the Red Sea with the great Indian Ocean. This England holds.

"A little farther out is the peninsula of Aden, another Gibraltar—as rocky, as sterile, and as precipitous—connected with the mainland by a narrow strait, and having a harbour safe in all winds, and a central coal depôt. This England bought in 1839.† And, to complete her security, she has purchased from some petty sultan the neighbouring islands of Socotra and Kouri, giving, as it were, a retaining-fee, so that, though she does not need them herself, no rival Power may ever possess them.

"As we sail a little farther on, we come to the Chinese Sea.‡ What a beaten track of commerce is this! What wealth of

* To which may now be added Cyprus.

† This is a mistake. Aden was not bought, but captured by us in that year.

‡ The writer has omitted our East Indian Gates.

Digitized by Google

comfort and luxury is wafted over it by every breeze! The teas of China! the silks of farther India! the spices of the East! The ships of every clime and nation swarm on its waters! The stately barques of England, France, and Holland; the swift ships of America! And, mingled with them, in picturesque confusion, the clumsy junk of the Chinaman, and the slender, darting canoe of the Malaysian islander!

"At the lower end of the China Sea, where it narrows into Malacca Strait, England holds the little island of Singapore—a spot of no use to her whatever, except as a commercial depôt, but of inestimable value for that; a spot which, under her fostering care, is growing up to take its place among the great emporiums of the world. Half-way up the Sea she holds the island of Labuan, whose chief worth is this, that beneath its surface and that of the neighbouring mainland there lie inexhaustible treasures of coal, which are likely to yield wealth to the hand that controls them. At the upper end of the Sea she holds Hong Kong, a hot, unhealthy island, but an invaluable base from which to threaten and control the neighbouring waters.

"Even in the broad and, as yet, comparatively untracked Pacific, she is making silent advances towards dominion. The vast continent of Australia,* which she has secured, forms its South-Western boundary. And, pushed out six hundred miles Eastward from this, lies New Zealand, like a strong outpost, its shores so scooped and torn by the waves that it must be a very paradise of commodious bays and safe havens for the mariner. The soil, too, is of extraordinary fertility; and the climate, though humid, deals kindly with the Englishman's constitution. Nor is this all; for, advanced from it, North and South, like picket stations, are Norfolk Isle and the Auckland group, both of which have good harbours. And it requires no prophet's eye to see that, when England needs posts farther Eastward, she will find them among the green coral islets that stud the Pacific.†

"Turn, now, your steps homeward, and pause a moment at the Bermudas, those beautiful isles, with their fresh verdure—green gems in the ocean, with air soft and balmy as Eden's was! They have their home uses too. They furnish arrow-root for the sick, and ample supplies of vegetables earlier than sterner climates will yield them. Is this all that can be said? Reflect a little more deeply. These islands possess a great military and naval depôt, and a splendid harbour—land-locked, strongly fortified, and difficult of access to strangers—and all within a few days' sail of the chief ports of the Atlantic shores of the New World. England therefore retains them as a station on the road to her West Indian possessions; and should America go to war with her,‡ she would use it as a base for offensive operations, where she might gather, and whence she might hurl upon any protected port all her gigantic naval and military power."

The writer of this article evidently knew nothing of our Israelitish origin, yet he refers to Gibraltar, Malta, &c., by the Scriptural designation of "Gates," of which, he says, "England holds the key." He has omitted to mention a large number of Gates which we, as Israel, hold, but "Verbum sat sapienti."

J. Bowers Janion.

East London, South Africa,
16th July, 1879.

Note by the Editor.—Our friend at the Cape does not tell us the date of the above extract from the Atlantic Monthly. If prior to 1875, it is clear the writer was led, without knowledge of our Identity, to term the grand strategic ports held by this country by the Scriptural term "Gates" as the most appropriate he could find—which it is. That being the case, he stands forth as an excellent unwitting blind witness to our Identity—for God promised only to Israel the possession of "her enemies' Gate." We only, of all nations, have those very "Gates," the world-wide over, this writer being our blind witness. Ergo, we must be Israel! Let our opponents try to contest our claim to "Our Identity" by showing—1st, that these possessions are not our enemies' Gate; or, 2nd, that other nations beside the British possess them as well as ourselves; or, 3rd, that, having them as a unique blessing, we British must fail, nevertheless, to be Lost Israel, and why. This is a fair challenge! We stake the Identity upon it! Upon Gen. xxii. 17, on the one hand; and on Mr. Janion's facts, patent to all men as fulfilment thereof, on the other. Let Messrs. Wilkinson, Cornall, Clifford, Walker, and others, with the Rock, try their best to defeat us! They must fail!

* See a leading article in the Daily Telegraph of June 10, 1879.

† The 225 Fiji Islands have come into our possession since this article was written.

‡ Of course Manassch will never again go to war with Ephraim.

THE IDENTITY IN ADELAIDE, SOUTH AUSTRALIA.

We think our readers would like to learn what progress the Identity is making in Adelaide, where, as they know perhaps (certainly we do), we have some of the very warmest friends out of Great Britain. We are glad to say that the gentleman who gave the lecture reported below is the talented son of a popular preacher in Dover, an Israelite, and who has contributed to our columns ere this. Mr. Rogers appears to have acquitted himself very well as a lecturer on the Identity, as he has, we also see by another of the Adelaide papers, as a public controversialist on Israel in the journals of the place. We are glad to find the Mayor of Strathalbyn took the chair, and though the meeting was not so crowded as anticipated, Mr. Rogers had for his hearers "all the ministers of the Churches there with most of the leading townsmen." We quote as follows:—

"Strathalbyn Institute (S. Australia). Tuesday evening, April 8, 1879, at 8 o'clock Mr. A. W. Rogers will deliver a lecture on the 'Identification of the British Race with the Ten Lost Tribes of Israel.' His worship the Mayor (Dr. Blue) in the chair. Other gentlemen have kindly consented to speak on the occasion. Tickets, 2s. and 1s., to be had at Mr. Miller's and other stores; doors open at 7.30. The proceeds, after paying expenses, will be devoted to charitable purposes."

"The British-Israel Theory.—On Tuesday evening last, Mr. A. W. Rogers delivered a lecture in the Institute-hall, Strathalbyn, on this very popular subject, having, as he said, been led into the discussion of the subject by a letter which appeared in the Southern Argus some few weeks ago against this theory. Many of the most scientific and learned men of the day have of late been taking the matter up earnestly, and all over the world the belief in the Identification of the British race with the Lost Ten Tribes of the House of Israel has been fast gaining ground, so that, together with these facts and the announcement that the proceeds of the lecture were to be devoted to charitable purposes, it was confidently anticipated there would be a large attendance at the hall on Tuesday evening; but we were sorry to see that it was not nearly so crowded as was hoped. His worship the Mayor of Strathalbyn (Dr. Blue, J.P.) presided, and was supported on the platform by Mr. West-Erskine, M.P.

"After a few introductory remarks by the Chairman, Mr. Rogers, who was received with applause, proceeded to deliver his lecture, and for the next hour-and-a-half he spoke uninterruptedly. The lecture was divided into four heads, which were as follows:—1. How the Ten Tribes were lost. 2. Our own origin. 3. Our Identification. 4. The benefits to be derived from our Identity; and under these heads the speaker reviewed the various links in the chain that identified the British with the Lost Tribes of Israel, and dwelt for some length on the benefits that must accrue from such Identity. Mr. Rogers quoted for support of his argument during the evening passages from the works of a number of the most eminent writers on the subject, the selections being in every instance very apropos and pointed. The gist of the lecture having already appeared in Mr. Rogers's letter in the Argus last week, we need not more than thus briefly review it; but we may say that he succeeded in holding the attention of the audience during its entire delivery, and at its close he was accorded very hearty applause in response to the Chairman's call for a vote of thanks. We were pleased to notice that all the ministers of the Churches here were present, as also were most of our leading townsmen."

Digitized by Google

WHY THE CHURCH OF ROME SEEKS TO ALLY HER MORAL INFLUENCE WITH BRITAIN'S MATERIAL INFLUENCE.

A VERY IMPORTANT USE OF PUBLISHING OUR IDENTITY WITH ISRAEL.

An article appeared in the pages of the Banner of Israel, of June 25, under this heading, "The Vatican and England," the article being an extract from the Standard of May 31, 1879; and both in the article, and the comments thereon, the readers of the Banner could plainly see two things: first, the Church of Rome recognises the exalted position and extensive material influence of the British nation as being greater than that of any other nation. And secondly, that the power and influence of this so-called British nation will become greater than it is at present; and therefore she is making every effort to unite her moral influence with Britain's material influence. But why is she seeking to do this? What is her real aim and purpose? Not only does the Church of Rome recognise the British as the chief of nations, and as the most powerful and most exalted of nations, but she also knows, and that to her cost, that from these Isles of the West the light of God's truth has gone forth, and, thank God! is still going forth to all the nations of the earth. And not only have millions of copies of God's Word gone forth from this land of Bibles, but godly devoted men and women, constrained by the love of Jesus, have gone forth, with their lives in their hands, to proclaim to those in darkness the glad tidings of a free and full salvation through faith in a once crucified, but now risen and ascended Lord and Saviour! The Church of Rome knows full well that we have been, and still are, Jehovah's witnesses (the work appointed to Israel). Founded on the grossest error and superstition, she has suffered much from the spread of God's truth among us, and through us among other nations; and she seeks to ally her moral influence with Britain's material influence that she may stop the outflow of the light of God's truth in any and in every way, not only here, but to other lands. If she could only extinguish the light here, she would soon make her power felt in extinguishing it elsewhere; with Britain under her control, she would soon control the rest of the world, and again plunge the nations in deepest darkness: it is to the accomplishing of this, her set purpose and aim, that her agents, with a devotion worthy of a better cause, work unceasingly; they know no rest, they spare no pains, they regard no sacrifice too great, so long as this their cherished object be unaccomplished. But let us thank God for the assurance that the Church of Rome, the mother of harlots and abominations of the earth, is doomed to disappointment in this her aim; she is concentrating all her power to make the great effort, but only to be defeated. Not again will she hold the reins of British government in her hands! Not again will she light up the squares of our large cities with martyr fires! And what is it that is to frustrate all her efforts? The very same power that broke her yoke from off our necks—the same glorious power that set us free from her accursed blighting thraldom! And that power is the light and truth of God as written in His Holy Word! As light only can dissipate darkness, so will the light of God's Word, received into the hearts of this people, save this nation from the malign purposes of the Church of Rome. And we, who believe in our Identity with Israel, are engaged in the glorious work of spreading the light and truth of God's Word, telling the people of His great love and faithfulness—bidding them to search earnestly and prayerfully for themselves, and see from Jehovah's own Word whether these things be so or not, and whether or not we are His own people Israel. And in this I think we can see a very important use of publishing our Identity with Israel, and a thorough and convincing answer to those who are continually asking the question, What good? Nor is this all that we are doing in publishing the news of our Identity with Israel. Jehovah has promised to be the God of all the families of Israel; to make with them a new covenant, even a covenant of everlasting peace; He has promised to write His laws in their hearts, to cleanse them from all their iniquities, thus making them a holy and righteous people. And this we are also bringing before the people, bidding them to pray earnestly for and expect this great blessing both for themselves as individuals and for the nation at large; knowing that Jehovah has spoken it, and will do it! But for this He will be inquired of by the House of Israel to do it for them. So let us ask, let us expect, and we shall receive; and also see the purposes of Rome frustrated. J. F. Thomas.

Torquay, July 5th, 1879.

ISRAEL KEEPETH SABBATH.

The Daily Telegraph of May 6, 1879, gave utterance to the following remarkable sentiments in reference to a late motion in the House of Lords, by Lord Thurlow, to open the art galleries and London museums on Sunday. We are glad to say the motion was rejected though by a narrow majority in a thin House; but as it is, we know, a measure which cannot be passed by the legislature of Israel, so as to become law, the result does not surprise us. The secular journalist writes as follows—

"Frenchmen, Spaniards, and Italians, Germans, Scandinavians, and Slavs, alike regard the Sabbath as a holiday set apart for recreation; but Englishmen persist in treating it as a day to be spent partly in devotional exercises, and partly in what is somewhat vaguely defined as 'taking rest.' Differences between the religious creeds prevalent in the respective countries which hold the recreative view of Sunday obviously exercise no influence upon their legislation in this regard; for Calvinistic Prussia and Presbyterian Holland are as tolerant of popular amusements on that day as Catholic Spain or Orthodox Russia. We alone among Christian nations assume that prayer and rest are the exclusive objects for which the Sabbath was instituted by Divine wisdom, and consider it our duty to enforce the achievement of those objects, as far as it may be humanly possible to do so, by the agency of repressive and prohibitive laws. No Act of Parliament can compel men to pray; but the law can, and does, constrain men to 'take rest,' whether they like it or not."

We would ask why "we alone of all the Christian nations assume that prayer and rest are the exclusive objects for which the Sabbath was instituted?" We answer, because of our Identity, and because the Lord showed His Word unto Jacob, and His statutes and His judgments unto Israel, as He hath not so dealt with any Gentile race (Psa. cxlvii. 19, 20).

Digitized by Google

THE IDENTITY VENTILATED BY THE "NEWCASTLE CHRONICLE."

THERE was lately quite a sharp controversy going on in the North respecting "our origin." One "Elfin" derides us in the pages of the Newcastle Daily Chronicle. This paper was our last year's "blind witness," from whose articles we quoted several times. Now, the worthy editor, we are told, is becoming an avowed friend! He permits Identity to be advertised gratuitously in his columns, and is rendering good aid to God's own cause in the North. "Elfin," quoting the BANNER OF ISRAEL, as "a little English newspaper," says that journal "swears we British are all Jews," which brought out J. N. C. to the rescue in the following terms.

We publish the letter on account of the instruction it contains; and reading between the lines we find the writer is an instructed Israelite, a diligent student of the BANNER. God grant the whole nation may be such before long!

JEWS v. HEBREWS.

To the Editor of the "Daily Chronicle."

SIR,—Your contributor "Elfin," in yesterday's letter, asserts that the BANNER OF ISRAEL swears that we are all Jews, and actually thanks God for our Hebrew origin. The latter portion of the assertion is quite true; the former equally erroneous. The periodical in question is too well informed to make such an egregious blunder as to claim for the British people a title that is now, and has been for the last 2,400 years, borne by a race still existing in our midst, and maintaining with ever-renewed youth and vigour its ancient laws and ceremonies. But Anglo-Israelites, of whom the BANNER is one of the chief organs, do maintain that the inhabitants of these isles are descended from the Ten-Tribed kingdom that was carried captive into Assyria, and of which all further history was lost, till now, the appointed time having apparently arrived, the "lost" ones are being summoned from their graves, and are becoming manifest to the world as the possessors of an Empire on which the sun never sets, thus fulfilling the prophecies of old that Israel should be the chief of nations—the head and not the tail, "above only and not beneath"—as we are at this day, and for whom the way of the Kings of the East is now being prepared, what time the waters of the Euphrates are drying up.

I am, &c.,

J. N. C.

TESTIMONY FROM JERSEY, CHANNEL ISLANDS.

WE draw attention to the following remarkable letter which appeared some months ago in a Jersey newspaper from the pen of Mr. Philip John LeGeyt. It is one which has attracted the notice of many in the Channel Islands, and contains so much that is striking that we gladly republish it in the BANNER. It seems, too, to throw out philological hints regarding the basis of the old Norman tongue, which it would be well if some learned in the subject would take up and, by research, work out for the benefit of our whole body deeply interested in everything that links us closer with God's people Israel. Mr. LeGeyt wrote as follows on the subject of

THE IDENTITY OF THE BRITISH NATION WITH THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL.

To the Editor of the "British Press and Jersey Times."

DEAR SIR,—Will you kindly permit me through the columns of your widely-circulated journal to direct attention to the world-important subject which forms the heading of this letter; at the same time, as I humbly submit, that however wild and frenzied the notion may at first sight appear, it will nevertheless, upon candid, unprejudiced investigation, be found to embody an incontestible fact—indicative of a fast approaching era for the British nation of unparelleled power and prosperity—viz., that the Anglo-Saxon, &c., races, constituting the British people—wherever located throughout the world—are none other than the representatives of the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel, who were by successive Assyrian Kings, from Tiglath Pileser to Esarhaddon, taken captive from the land of Samaria to the cities of the Medes, cir. B.C. 740 to 721—whence, by successive Western migrations, they at different periods, by different routes, and under different names—Saxons ('Saac-sons or Isaac's Sons—"In Isaac shall thy seed be called"), Angles, Picts, Scots, Jutes, Danes, Normans, &c., arrived and settled in Britain—the last of whom—viz., the Normans or Northmen—joined their fellow-tribes in the mother country ("mother of nations") under William the Conqueror, in A.D. 1066. It is of course generally known that long prior to that event—in fact, in the days of the good, wise, and redoubtable Rollo himself, the leader of the Northmen, and first Duke of Normandy—the Channel Islands were occupied by some of his Norman followers, and there only, at the present day, are to be found the pure types (in all respects of descent, language, institutions, &c.) of those bold, hardy, invincible warriors. Nor do I estimate it an insane notion to imagine the possibility of philological research discovering that the Norman language, as spoken in the days of Wace—a Jerseyman, and the greatest poet of his age—bears a very close relation to the language in which Christ the Saviour addressed His disciples—Benjamites—in the land of Judæa. If so, it all the more behoves Jersey men and women, as Benjamites, to bestir themselves seriously to a study of the subject; so that they may acquire the necessary knowledge to enable them to advance its claims, whilst earning for themselves the glory of having at least contributed their share towards bringing about its national acknowledgment, which, I am firmly persuaded, is destined to occur between this and the autumn of 1881 or spring of 1882—at which time the restoration to the land of Palestine of the House of Israel (the British races) representatively, "as one of a city and two of a family," and the House of Judah (the Jews) collectively, will commence.

Fearing to trespass too largely upon your space, and yet scarcely knowing how to be brief, and at the same time lucid, upon a subject of such stupendous magnitude, importance, and dignity, I will just adduce the following few facts for present consideration, in the hope that they will suffice to stimulate interest in, and prompt to investigation of, the subject; which, if pursued in an earnest spirit of inquiry after truth, cannot, I am confident, otherwise than lead to absolute conviction.

1st—It is an historical fact that the British nation is composed of several apparently different peoples, who fought their way into Britain at various epochs, and settled there.

2nd—It is an ethnographical fact that all those peoples were located in the land of Media in the 8th century B.C.

3rd—It is a philological fact that the root words, grammatic system, and idiomatic structure of the English language, are of Shemitic, and not Aryan origin, as generally supposed.

4th—It is a monumental fact that the Great Pyramid of Ghizeh declares, through weights, measures, &c., that the British people are of the seed of Abraham, through Jacob—Israelites.

5th—It is a genealogical fact that our beloved Queen Victoria (Empress of India) is a descendant of David the Psalmist (Throne of David perpetual).

6th—It is a significant fact that the name of Lord Beaconsfield—Benjamin d'Israeli—in conjunction with his position, may be interpreted Ruler of Israel (? Sceptre of Judah).

7th—It is a remarkable fact that the British people inhabit the Isles North-west from Palestine.

8th—It is a remarkable fact that they are a company of nations.

9th—It is a remarkable fact that their colonies, &c., belt the earth.

10th—It is a remarkable fact that they inhabit the desolate heritages.

11th—It is a remarkable fact that they have the heathen for a possession.

12th—It is a remarkable fact that they are the chief of nations.

13th—It is a remarkable fact that they are the wealthiest of nations.

14th—It is a remarkable fact that they lend to many nations, but borrow of none.

15th—It is a remarkable fact that they conquer against all odds.

16th—It is a remarkable fact that they are the undefeated nation.

17th—It is a remarkable fact that they multiply faster than other nations.

To which might be added many scores of very remarkable facts, attached to the British people, which square, in all and every, the minutest particular, with the Bible statements relative to Israel of the Ten Tribes, including the marks whereby they would be recognised at, or just prior to, the time spoken of by the prophet Jeremiah: "In those days the House of Judah shall walk with (margin, to) the House of Israel, and they shall come together out of the land of the North, to the land that I have given for an inheritance unto your fathers" (Jer. iii. 18).

Digitized by Google

Were it not that the Bible declares that "blindness in part has happened unto Israel," and that in these times infidelity would increase, it would be quite incomprehensible how so little impression appears to be made, generally speaking, by the signs of the present times; the surreptitious machinations of Russia (the Gog of the North) against Great Britain; the Beaconsfield surprise, or the actual protectorative occupation of the Land of Promise by the British people (destined shortly to prove a surprise of a nature little dreamt of by the world generally at the present moment), &c., &c.

With a view to acquiring a vast amount of enlightenment upon the present condition of mundane affairs generally (including of course the so-called Eastern Question), I earnestly summon the studious attention of everyone to chapters xxxvii., xxxviii., and xxxix. of Ezekiel, in the hope and belief that, their eyes will be opened to perceive that the "dry bones" are even now "shaking" and "coming together," preparing, by the power of the Identity, to "stand up upon their feet an exceeding great army."

In conclusion, I beg to say, that I shall never cease to feel grateful to the lady who was first instrumental in removing the scales from my eyes by presenting me a pamphlet, entitled "Forty-seven Identifications of the British Nation with the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel, founded upon 500 Scriptural Proofs,"—and thanking you by anticipation for according space in your excellent paper to this humble epistle (my only plea for soliciting the favour of which is its vital importance, considered with my duty towards God and my fellow-creatures),

I remain, dear Sir, yours sincerely,

PHILIP JOHN LEGEYT.

20, Devonshire-place, St. Helier's, Jersey,
January 24, 1879.

ST. PAUL DISTINGUISHES BETWEEN ISRAEL AND JUDAH.

AT page 215 of the BANNER, No. 126, we pointed to St. Paul's 2 Cor. xi. 22, 23, as a remarkable proof that the great apostle of the Gentiles distinguished between the Twelve and the Ten Tribes, and between them and the "Spiritual House," the seed of Abraham by faith, mentioned in Gal. iii. 29. We neglected on that occasion to quote 2 Cor. xi. 24, wherein, after asking, "Are they (the false apostles) ministers of Christ?" he broke out into the strain of self-justification which he called in verse 30 "the things which concerned his infirmities." One of these was, that "Of THE JEWS five times he had received forty save one" (stripes). Two verses above St. Paul had spoken of "Hebrews" and "Israelites," then of "the seed of Abraham," now of "Jews!" Were all these mere euphuisms used so by the translators to avoid tautology? Nay! the original Greek has been carefully and exactly translated. St. Paul's words were in verse 22, Ἑβραῖοί εἰσι; κἀγώ.—Ἰσραηλῖταί εἰσι; κἀγώ. σπέρμα Ἀβραάμ εισι; κἀγώ. and in verse 24, Ὑπὸ Ἰουδαίων πεντάκις κ.τ.λ. Why did not St. Paul say he had been scourged by the Hebrews, or by the Israelites, or by the seed of Abraham? they all meant the same thing by our opponents' argument! He did not, because St. Paul knew that those who scourged him were Jews, not Ten-Tribed Israelites, nor Twelve-Tribed Hebrews (regarded nationally). He knew, too, "the seed of Abraham," the Christian Church, had not flogged him with the cruel "forty save one." It was Judah, or the Jews only, who did it; and the apostle, beautifully distinguishing terms that differ, told us in the compass of only three short verses of his own inspired epistles what our learned divines of the present day have been forty and sixty years in the ministry without learning—namely, that while "all Jews" were and are Israelites, because they belonged, and still belong, to the "Dodekaphulon" or "Twelve Tribed," there were "Israelitai" or Israelites, who were not "Jews," and there was and is now the "Hebrew" nation, which includes all the Tribes; also "the seed of Abraham by faith," which is and was separate from, and yet might include not only Jews and Israelites, but pure Gentiles besides!

"HE SHALL GROW AS THE LILY."

GOD'S Word likens Israel's (the Ten-Tribed Ephraim's) growth or blossoming to the lily. Our readers have watched the growth and blossoming of the plants of the Liliaceæ or Lilium order, and probably recognise at once the singularly-appropriate image Hosea, in chapter xiv. 5, presents to us as the type of Israel's death, resurrection, growth, and blossoming. What is the history of an ordinary lily after its bloom is over and the plant prepares to winter? It dies down, the leaves wither, the plant is "lost" to sight, is hidden in the earth, and its place known no more for a season. To ourselves it has often occurred that a pot of favourite lilies of the valley, left, after autumn frosts have begun, to the company of its wintered companions in the shelter of the green-house, has been set aside unmarked "lost," forgotten, and thus has completely disappeared. But were the lilies really lost and dead? Nay, they were only "hidden" in the earth, "mingled" with the other common, less valuable, occupants of the place of refuge, and waiting the set time appointed by the God of nature for their "revival," their "raising up," and their "living" in our "sight" (Hosea vi. 2).

What happens, as we all observe, is this: When spring comes on, after long months of utter disappearance from human ken, the long-neglected, forgotten, "lost" lilies suddenly re-appear. They force themselves on notice by the vigorous signs of life they present to view on the surface of the ground. They burst their "graves," and come up, shooting into light and air their numberless points, which rapidly develop into green sheaf-like leaves, several of them holding in their embrace the embryo flower. The leaves and flower appear together, push up into life together, and soon the lately seemingly dead earth is alive with green luxurious growth—growth full of flower and lovely perfume, shedding abroad its proper fruit—the sweet, painted, or purely white lilies of our fields, filling the air with their pleasant odour.

Now to find Israel in the latter day you must find the nation just as we find the lilies. They must be hidden, lost, dead, and buried. "After two days," said the prophet (Hosea vi. 2), "will He revive us: in the third day will He raise us up, and we shall live in His sight." The Ten Tribes died, and were buried out "of God's sight," in B.C. 678, when "Ephraim" was broken, that it was not a people (Isa. vii. 8; 2 Kings xvii. 23). Israel has been "swallowed up" by the Gentiles "mingled with them" and "scattered among them" ever since that time (Hosea viii. 8; Ezek. xi. 16, 17; Psa. cvi. 35). till at last the remembrance of them has ceased among men (Deut. xxxii. 26); and for more than 2,000 years, or over two prophetic days, they have been in their graves, dormant; apparently dead; certainly "lost." Their brethren—the Jews—declare they are "lost," but destined to be found. "The special interest which surrounds the Ten Tribes is that they are lost," said the Jewish Chronicle newspaper on December 13, 1878. Learned Jews of Jerusalem speak of the British nation as, in their opinion, "Lost Israel found."

A Newcastle Jew tells the Rev. H. Marriott "that for forty years he has been satisfied that the British races are the 'Lost' Ten Tribes" (BANNER, No. 131, page 275). And now, "after" two days of a thousand years each, what do we see? God is "reviving" us as Israel. He is, in this third day or third thousand years from B.C. 678, or in A.D. 1879, causing us to be raised up, in order that we may "live" as Israel in His sight (Hosea vi. 2). Issuing from our hiding-place, how do we British answer to the lily? We are coming up with our multitude of leaves, and blossoms, and buds, and we are in all ways filling the face of the world with our fruit (Isa. xxvii. 6). We have sent forth our emigrants like "spawning fish" from London, "in the midst" of the Northern land-hemisphere, till our vast "multitudes" have laid hold of the "desolate heritages" as our own; and here, with our "daughters"

Digitized by Google

"running over the wall," have established the Hebrew "nation and company of nations" to spring from Joseph's Ephraim-Israelite progeny, "that fulness of the Gentiles" to come from the representative Head of the Ten-Tribed race (Exod. xlviii. 16, 19, xlix. 22; Jer. vii. 15; Gen. xxxv. 11; Isa. xlix. 8; Rom. xi. 25).

But we are also filling the face of the world with fruit of another kind. We have sent our living missionaries, men and women, with the love of God in their hearts, and the Word of God in their hands, to preach the Gospel to every creature, to tell them of salvation through faith in the blood of Jesus; and thus we have become a blessing to ALL the families of the earth (Gen. xxii. 18; Mark xvi. 15). Thus we grow, and are growing, AS the lily, and are fulfilling the prediction.

A friend to our cause, J. H. B., writing to a Ramsgate paper (the Kent Argus) on July 28, 1879, regarding our subject, aid:—

While reading over Hos. xiv. 4, 5—"I will be as the dew unto Israel; he shall grow as the lily"—I thought, Well, how does the lily grow? In what is it peculiar? Not being able to solve the matter, I referred to the dictionary, and found there what appears to be the very principle of growth intended by the prophet in the word "Endogen, a plant which increases in size by internal growth, and elongated at the summit, instead of externally, and having no distinction of pith, wood, and bark," as the lily or the palm.

The prophet Hosea wrote of Israel's future from their captivity by the Assyrians up to the great day of Jezreel (Israel Ten Tribes, Hos. i. 11) when Israel shall return with Judah—the Jews—to the land of their forefathers (ver. 10), an event yet future, and which every section of the Church thinks to be near. Israel, then, must grow as the lily while in exile or banishment. Grow—not scattered as the Jews, without a home, rallying-place, or centre. Grow—but where? See 2 Sam. vii. 10: "Moreover, I will appoint a place for My people Israel, and will plant them, that they may dwell in a place of their own, and move no more." This could not apply to Palestine; they were there then. Isaiah speaks of the Isles as waiting for His law—"Isles of the sea," "Isles of the West;" and Jer. xxxi. 10: "Hear the word of Jehovah, O united Tribes; publish it in the Isles afar off, and say, The scatterer of Israel will gather him, and will keep him as a shepherd his flock." So we find our own sea-girt island home referred to as the place where the people—redeemed Israel—shall renew their strength, the centre from whence they shall grow as the lily. How have we grown into our present world-wide Empire, a company of nations? Is it not from internal growth the hive becomes too full? We plant ourselves in America, Africa, Australia, New Zealand, occupying the desolate heritages (Isa. xlix. 8), the ends of the earth; and these colonies continually are increased, or fed, in numbers from the Mother Country, doubling their population in twenty-five years, a world-wide development from the centre Britain. And do we not cast forth our roots, establishing ourselves in new lands, making them our own? And do not our branches, our influence and authority, spread beyond our border, as in Afghanistan, Asia Minor, Palestine? and is not this wonderful development endogenous as the lily? "Israel-Ephraim shall grow as the lily." I turn to Isa. xlix., and there the same principle of growth from the centre is taught of Israel: "Thy waste and thy desolate places, and the land of thy destruction shall even now be too narrow by reason of the inhabitants, and they that swallow thee up shall be far away. The children which thou shalt have after thou hast lost the other—the United States—shall say again in thine ears, The place is too strait for me; give place to me that I may dwell." Here is the population overflowing, and again overflowing from the centre, the place of their own, where they should be planted in "the isles of the West." Is not the cry, "give place to me that I may dwell," a cry to Him "who divided to the nations their inheritance . . . . . and set the bounds of the people according to the number of the children of Israel?" (Deut. xxxii. 8, 9). With our national sins—such as are charged to Ephraim—do we not in all our difficulties look to God for help? May not this be the upward elongated tendency of the lily. In a spiritual sense, too, the same principle applies to our home and foreign philanthropy, and our world-wide missionary labours.

We would ask our Gothic or Teutonic friends if the German and other Gothic nations answer in any way to these descriptions of Ephraim-Israel's lily-growth, as Hosea is given to describe it? Have these nations been dead and buried over 2,000 years? Are they consciously reviving to their Israelite origin, and calling themselves Israel to-day? Is God raising them up now as Israel, and likely to cause them to live in His sight as His Ten-Tribed people? Are they a blessing to ALL the nations and ALL the families of the earth? Do they blossom and bud? Are they multitudinous, throwing off their shoals of emigrants who seize the desolate heritages of the earth for Israel? Do they send Bibles, tracts, missionaries, to all the nations? Are the heathen given to them to rule? Do they know nothing of the iron yoke of foreigners as subject races themselves? Do they hold their enemies' gates? When our "Gothic" friends establish these points, we shall believe the German and Teutonic races are Israelites as nations—not before!

THE TESTIMONY OF AN AGED DISCIPLE.

WE are glad, by permission, to quote the words of an aged Christian lady who for over 70 years has either been engaged in prophetic studies herself or been in close companionship with those who have been so occupied—words written in reference to "Our Identity." Though now a constant invalid, she says that "The grand subjects of the Identity and the Great Pyramid are a great resource to her mind." "It seems to me," she adds "that important internal evidence of the truth of the Identity is brought out by the fact that it casts a flood of light on the prophetic Scriptures. For our day it seems a sort of master-key to it all." The writer of the above is duly instructed in the subject of the promotion of the Gospel among the Jews. Her late father took a leading part in the proceedings which resulted in the establishment of the venerable "London Society." Such an one as this, then, is now an ardent Israelite; and in her old age writes to us words of sympathy and congratulation, on finding that we, too, feel strongly in favour of communicating the Gospel of the grace of God to the sons of Judah. What do our opponents make of this? They revile us and speak evil of us, as blasphemers and opponents of the evangelization of the Jews, though we repeat to them, and they well know, that personally we strongly favour all efforts to Christianize the Jews, and are one of the Treasurers of the Jews' Society! Let this aged Christian lady rebuke their uncharitable spirit! Let it lead them to inquire what the principles of the BANNER OF ISRAEL and its editor really are, and not to condemn them without due investigation! We are aware that Ezek. xliii. 27 has been referred to by the editor of the Glory Leader as his authority for the statement that God declares He will accept the Jews "through Moses or the offices of works" (No. 232, page 275, July 9, 1879). The whole context, however, of that passage, we find, refers to a different dispensation from the present—one that is to come after the return of Israel and Judah to their own land. This verse, then, can in no way modify such plain declarations of Scripture as those we find in Acts iv. 12; Rom. ii. 9, iii. 9 and 30. The Jews now, as well as the Gentiles, and Lo-Ammi Christians, are all equally under God's condemnation, and can find no salvation but through the blood of the Cross of Christ: "For there is NONE other name under heaven given among men, whereby they may be 'saved,' but the name of Jesus;" "Neither is there salvation in ANY other." We utterly deny, therefore, that Ezek. xliii. 27 is rightly quoted to justify the monstrous doctrine that at the present time the Lord accepts the Jews out of Christ, and by Moses, through the "offices of works." For such teaching we find no Scriptural basis; and we repudiate the doctrine et pro hac vice, the teacher. We cannot consent to swerve to the right hand or to the left where God's Word forbids us to follow; and in this matter we decline to shift our ground. We are glad, finally, to point to our aged friend's testimony in our support, and rejoice to think her ripe experience leads her to pronounce in favour of our views as regards all lawful efforts made for the promotion of the Gospel among the Jews. With the success or non-success of those efforts we have nothing to do! That matter must remain with the Lord! It is ours to obey His command, which tells us to go into all the world, and to preach the Gospel to EVERY creature—therefore, to every Jew; nay, to them first (Luke xxiv. 47).

Digitized by Google

Reviews.

Are We Israelites? By the Rev. B. W. Savile, M.A. Published by W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row. Price Ninepence.

WHEN we lately read the first telegram from Sir Garnet Wolseley, forwarded from the Cape, we felt at once a confirmed confidence in the fitness of the sender for the performance of his appointed task; it was the message, as it were, of one who knew perfectly well what he was about—saw at a glance the situation of affairs, and the necessary steps to be taken—and was animated by a spirit that would leave vacillation to the weak, and rapidly quench uncertainty in victory or defeat. It was with a feeling akin to this with which we perused the pamphlet that has just been published by the Rev. Bourchier Wrey Savile. We felt throughout it the impress of a mind stored with knowledge, who was secure of his footing; could, without despising his opponents, defy them to combat, knowing it lay in his power to blunt their weapons and to bring forth fresh supplies of ammunition which would carry on the fire long after theirs should be exhausted. Mistakes he might be guilty of, but his feet were firmly planted on the solid earth; and if a weapon missed fire, he could afford to cast it away as wrongly selected, and retrieve the error without fear of being dislodged from his position.

Yet the paper, entitled "Are We Israelites?" brings forth no new lights or striking novelties to confirm the Anglo-Israel belief, but Mr. Savile gathers up the many points—historical, philological, and ethnological—that have been scattered by the pens of himself and others in various Identification publications, enriching them with notes, and works them into a connected whole which, did we not hold his view, would yet commend itself to us by its clearness, varied information, and the calm tone of an experienced writer that patiently smiles at the irritation and angry assaults of opponents, while lamenting their intemperate language.

We do not doubt many, like ourselves, have felt perplexed, as short articles have frequently appeared, each with its little stock of ethnological and historic information to add to opinions previously stated, till we have been in somewhat of a maze concerning Khumree, and Getæ, and Massagetæ, and Cimmerii, with many more, and have longed for the good fairy, who, in the nursery tale, by a touch of her wand, laid every silken skein in its own place, gathering each colour to itself, and bringing order out of confusion. Mr. Savile has acted the helpful part we wished to see played; and we think many will, secretly at least, acknowledge their obligations to him for his aid to puzzled brains. We could wish that, at page 57, this writer had made it more distinct by whom he considers the Cimbri are now represented, and whether they are the inhabitants of the Scandinavian territories, while the Israelitish Tribes who had marched so far with, and dwelt amongst them, have been drained off to these Islands, bearing with them such of the Cimmerii as had been absorbed into their family by marriage or otherwise.

We would ask our Anglo-Israel friends, who we trust will circulate as much as lies in their power this valuable pamphlet, to point out especially to our opponents the remarks of Mr. Savile on the Bible; and to ask them if indeed such sentiments accord with the opinion we have seen attributed to the Rev. Mr. Wilkinson, that the holders of our views are "devil-inspired men." If such opinions of the Bible as are Mr. Savile's are the result of Satan's influence, we are inclined to think some so-called Christian teachers, who do not believe in our Identity with Israel, might take a lesson from our arch-enemy; for there are amongst them those who occasionally treat the Scriptures with a decidedly less loving and reverential spirit, and shew more hesitation in pronouncing it the outcome of inspiration throughout, and as truth "without any mixture of error," than does this "devil-inspired" writer.

We are convinced that did many of our opponents, who are not blinded by a rageful prejudice and unfounded fears, study this pamphlet, even only with the motive of replying to it, they would rise from the task changed in views and opinions, and prepared to examine in a more candid spirit than heretofore our claims to be listened to. As it is, they now appear to us like frightened children, who seeing a figure they have not been accustomed to, turn hastily away, crying out that it must be taken away, is dreadful, horrid, that they hate it, it will maim them, or it will kill them. In vain we say, "See, it is beautiful, there is nothing to hurt you about it, it is harmless, and perfectly symmetrical throughout, and its voice is sweet and melodious." "No, no," is the reply, "we won't look, it holds a concealed monster; we won't listen, it is the devil's music." So they shut their eyes, and shut their ears, and lose their reward of a joy that is, we believe, God-sent, and of heavenly origin.

If Mr. Savile's pamphlet removes, as we hold it is calculated to do, some of the groundless fears of an unexamined bugbear from pious souls, he will have done much service; and also great will be the gain if men of learning will follow the path that has now been clearly opened out to them, and will pursue the road that has hitherto been blocked up, and concealed under dark shadows, to serve the purpose that God designed to fulfil by exceptional, historical, and ethnological obscurity.

We do not shrink from searching examinations of our claim to hold a truth hitherto concealed; on the contrary, we court inquiry, feeling confident our view will only gain by the trial; and if what we consider to be correct proves false, the sooner we are made aware of our error the better.

We would point out, that, owing probably to a misprint, at p. 35, Matt. xxviii. 9 is substituted for Matt. xxvii. 9; and to Note 5, at page 62, we would suggest the addition of Hosea iv. 16 as another remarkable comparison of Israel to a heifer.

We hope this pamphlet will soon find itself in the hands of the friends of our cause in each quarter of the globe, meeting with a hearty welcome in Canada, British Guiana, New Zealand, Australia, the Cape, &c., and we think few things are better examples of the rapidity with which information flies over the world now, through the inventions and enterprise of the Anglo-Israel race, to which reference is made by Mr. Savile, than the fact that our view is being discussed, pondered over, lectured and written about, in the above-named lands, while it has not yet had time to break through the crust of prejudiced minds at home, and is barely known to multitudes in our little islands in the North and Western sea.

August 13, 1879. L. P.

Who and Where are the Lost Ten Tribes? By J. E. Norman. Exeter: Chambers & Co., 10 and 11, Goldsmith-street. Price Twopence.

THIS little pamphlet was intended originally for private circulation, but, a limited number being published, it was found to be read in the West of England, and was doing good. It has been forwarded to us for review, and we are glad to recommend it as a short epitome of other works which have preceded it, and as one well suited as a cheap vade mecum for those who wish to have the grand subject of the Identity placed in a small compass before them. Mr. Norman's motto is "Search the Scriptures," and therefore our readers will expect to find he confines himself to the Scriptural argument. Without pretending to depth, or any originality, this little pamphlet is a useful compendium of Identity information, which will, we hope, be largely put in circulation among inquirers. We wish it "God speed."

EXTRACT FROM "ISAIAH'S CALL TO ENGLAND." BY CHAMBERLAIN.

THE conclusions arrived at from Isa. xviii.; of what do they assure us among other things? Of these mighty national facts, which may well gladden the heart of England's anxious statesmen, and her noble people.

England's maritime supremacy is preserved to the end.

England's manufacturing supremacy is preserved to the end.

England's martial prowess is acknowledged to the end.

England's Mediterranean power is perpetuated to the end.

England's possession of Aden and command of the East Indian trade remains to the end.

England's Protestantism is assured to the end; and Israel to be restored unconverted.

Let England not fear political complications injurious to her Eastern ascendancy, even though another Power should assert to dominate in the Erythrian Sea. Such events will be over-ruled for England's final welfare; and when she asserts her right, let it be with especial proviso on Israel's behalf" (page 402).

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements
(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O O payable at Ludgate-circus.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed :—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

BANNER FREE CIRCULATION FUND.
Leamington ... ... 3s.

Donations, applications for grants, to be addressed to R. Fergusson Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London.

NEW BOOKS.

BLESSINGS AND CURSES, AND THEIR RELATION TO ISRAEL AND JUDAH.

In neat coloured cover, price 2d., post free 2½d.

BLESSINGS AND CURSES, AND THEIR RELATION TO ISRAEL AND JUDAH. By F. W. PHILLIPS, of Speedwell-road, Birmingham.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; and may be had, by ordering, of any Bookseller.

Price 1s. Post free, 1s. 1d.

ISRAEL'S CHRONOLOGICAL CHART, with EXPLANATORY NOTES.—This Chart, compiled from the Old Testament on a new system, gives the A.M. and B.C. dates of one hundred important events in Israel's history, and exhibits the perfect agreement of Scripture with the marks and measurements of the Great Pyramid of Ghizeh.

May be had of the Author, GEO. N. WALSH, Western Bank, Sheffield; of Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C., and of all booksellers.

Just published, price 2d., No. 1 of a

SERIES OF PAPERS OF "ISRAEL," by the Rev. R. DOUGLAS, M.A., Vicar of St. Stephen's, Sheffield. Subject: "The Purpose of God."

G. Slater, Snighill, and all booksellers.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

THE MIDNIGHT CRY; or, WORDS OF SOLEMN WARNING.

Second edition, price 1d.; post free, 1½d.; for distribution, 6s. per 100. W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

NEW PAMPHLET ON OUR IDENTITY.
NOW READY, price 9d., post free, 10d.

ARE WE ISRAELITES? THE TESTIMONY OF HISTORY, PHILOLOGY, AND ETHNOLOGY on the Subject. By the Rev. BOURCHIER WREY SAVILE, M.A., Rector of Shillingford, Exeter. With an Introduction by Philo-Israel.

CONTENTS: —Chapter I. Hard Speeches.—II. Opponents' Arguments.—III. Common Errors.—IV. The Saxe. —V. The Cymry. —VI. Historical Testimony. —VII. Philology.—VIII. Chief of the Nations.—IX. Multiplicity of Seed.—X. The Anglo-Saxon Race.—XI. Anglo-Israel. —XII. Summary.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row; Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; or of any Bookseller.

ARE ENGLISHMEN ISRAELITES?

MR. ROBERTS REFUTED.

REPLY TO MR. ROBERTS.

Now ready, price 2d.

A REPLY TO MR. ROBERTS ON THE EXETER HALL DEBATE, on the Subject, Are Englishmen Israelites? By ALEXANDER DUNN.

London: Published by W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

Now ready, price 7d., post free 8½d.

THE SEPTEMBER MONTHLY PART OF THE BANNER OF ISRAEL. May be had, by ordering, of any bookseller or newsagent.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row; and Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

MISCELLANEOUS.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.
Temporary Office:
20, WARWICK LANE, LONDON, E.C.

President:
VISCOUNT FOLKESTONE, M.P.

Vice-Presidents:
Admiral DUNN, Weston-Super-Mare.
Captain E. WEBSTER, Stirling.
Rev. A. J. J. CACHEMAILLE, M.A., Vicar of St. Mary's, Oldham.
Dr. J. M. GRANT, Surgeon-General, Camp, Aldershot.
Rev. C. W. HICKSON, M.A., Vicar of St. Bartholomew's, Bristol.
Rev. G. A. ROGERS, M.A., Vicar of Christ Church, Dover.
W. H. PETERS, Esq., J.P., Exeter.
BOOTH MASON, Esq., Arley House, Leamington.
J. H. WELDON, Esq., J.P., Kilmallock, Ireland.
HENRY LESLIE, Esq., Conduit-street, W.
Lieut.-Colonel W. H. LARKINS, Hastings.
JOHN T. GOTT, Esq., Stockton-on-Tees.

Chairman of Committee:
Mr. E. W. BIRD (PHILO-ISRAEL), Bristol.

Committee:
Major-General WM. HILL, Bath.
Lieut.-Colonel BENTINCK, Upper Grosvenor-street, W.
Capt. BAYLY, Streatham, S.W., and Trinity House, E.C.
Mr. JOHN S. ANDERSON, Upper Norwood, S.E.
Mr. ROBERT BANKS, London, E.C.
Mr. BENTINCK CANNEY, Lewisham, S.E.
FREDERICK CLIFT, B.A., LL.D., Upper Norwood, S.E.
Mr. FREDERICK C. DANVERS, C.E., India Office, W.
Mr. JOHN T. FLETCHER, J.P., C.L., Upper Norwood, S.E.
Rev. F. R. A. GLOVER, M.A., St. James, London, W.
Mr. H. L. GUERRIER, Tooting, S.W.
Mr. W. H. GUEST, London, E.C.
Mr. WILLIAM HASLAM, 2, Springfield, Clapton.
Mr. CHARLES HORNER, Mortlake, S.W.
Mr. W. W. INCE, Douglas, Isle of Man.
Mr. DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, J.P., St. John's-wood, N.W.
Mr. H. H. PAIN, Bromley, Kent, S.E.
Dr. HODSON RUGG, St. John's-wood, N.W.
Mr. J. L. WOOD, New Southgate, N.

Bankers:
CITY BANK, Ludgate-hill, E.C.

Hon. Sec.:
Rev. JAMES BILLINGTON, F.S.A.

This Association has been established to bind in closer union the many friends who rejoice in having a portion with the long Lost Tribes of the House of Israel; also to extend the knowledge of the truth that the Anglo-Saxon races are now identified with those Lost Tribes of the House of Israel. These objects, it is thought, will be best accomplished by means of Drawing Room and Public Meetings, by Sermons, Lectures, Bible Readings, by the diffusion of Literature upon the subject, and by such other ways and means as the Committee may from time to time determine.

Members' Annual Subscriptions is not less than 2s. 6d per annum.

Donations and Subscriptions are needed to carry on the work.

THE ANGLO-ISRAEL POSTBAG; OR, HOW ARTHUR CAME TO SEE IT.

THIRD EDITION of the ANGLO-ISRAEL POSTBAG; OR, HOW ARTHUR CAME TO SEE IT.

BY THE RIGHT REV.

BISHOP TITCOMB,

IS NOW READY. Two Editions are now published. The Eighteenpenny Edition, in Paper Covers, for general distribution. The Half-crown Edition, Printed on Toned Paper, Handsome Cloth Gilt.

THE ANGLO-ISRAEL POSTBAG contains Chapters on The Philological Difficulty—The Promises of God to the Hebrew Nation—To Joseph—To Ephraim—To the Kingdom of Israel, as distinct from Judah—The Anglo-Israel Theory and the Geographical March of Christianity, &c., &c., &c.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

Price 2d. Post free 2½d.

MANASSEH AND THE UNITED STATES. An important Essay delivered before the "Lost Israel Identification Society," by the Rev. Joseph Wild, D.D., at Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, New York.

CONTENTS:—The Fulness of the Gentiles set in—For whom did God intend America—The Origin of the United States—The Footsteps of Ephraim and Manasseh —The Will of Jacob made to Ephraim and Manasseh—Manasseh a People, and a Great People—Manasseh's Birthtime of Separation—Out of nearly Sixty Conquered Colonies the only one England ever Lost was that of Manasseh (America)—The Great Seal of the United States—Manasseh was brought up at the Door of the Pyramid, &c., &c.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.; and of any Bookseller.

ASSOCIATIONS, ETC.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

President:—VISCOUNT FOLKESTONE, M.P.

A COURSE OF LECTURES will be delivered (D.V.) in the following places:—

TORQUAY, ST. GEORGE'S HALL.—Monday, September 8th, by the Rev. J. BILLINGTON, F.S.A., F.R.H.S., of London. Subject: "Are Englishmen Israelites?" Chair will be taken at 7.30.

EXETER, the VICTORIA HALL, Tuesday, September 9th, in the afternoon at 3, by the Rev. J. BILLINGTON, F.S.A., F.R.H.S. Subject: "Anglo-Israelism and Its Most Recent Criticisms." PHILO-ISRAEL (E. W. BIRD, Esq.) will take part in this meeting.

In the evening at 8, by DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, Esq., J.P., of London. Subject: "Lost Israel Identified in the British Nation." Chair will be taken by PHILO-ISRAEL (E. W. BIRD, Esq.).

BUDLEIGH SALTERTON, in the TOWN HALL.—Wednesday, September 10th, in the afternoon at 3, by DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, Esq., J.P. Subject: "Historical Evidences of Britain's Identity with Lost Israel." Chair will be taken by W. H. PETERS, Esq., J.P., of Harefield.

In the evening by the Rev. J. BILLINGTON, F.S.A., F.R.H.S. Subject: "Are Englishmen Israelites?" Chair will be taken at 7.30.

EXMOUTH, in the ALBERT HALL.—Thursday, September 11th, by the Rev. J. BILLINGTON, F.S.A., F.R.H.S. Subject: "Israel and Judah, Their Distinction and Difference." Chair will be taken at 3 o'clock, by W. H PETERS, Esq., J.P., of Harefield.

In the evening by DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, Esq., J.P. Subject: "Lost Israel Identified with the British Nation." Chair will be taken at 7.30.

PLYMOUTH, in the MECHANICS' INSTITUTE.—Friday, September 12th, in the afternoon by DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, Esq., J.P. Subject: "Historical Evidences of Britain's Identity with Lost Israel." Chair will be taken at 3, by the Rev. J. M. HODGE, M.A.

In the evening by the Rev. J. BILLINGTON, F.S.A., F.R.H.S. Subject: "Anglo-Israelism and its Most Recent Criticisms." Chair will be taken at 8. It is expected His Worship THE MAYOR will preside.

The Rev. B. Wrey Savile, M.A., Rector of Shillingford; Colonel Savile; Captain G. de Courcy Hamilton; W. H. Peters, Esq., J.P., of Harefield, H. March Dunn, Esq., J.P., with other clergymen and gentlemen are expected to be present and assist in one or more of these lectures.

ADMISSION FREE.

Collections will be taken at the close of each Lecture for the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association, under whose auspices they are given.

Office—20, Warwick Lane, London, E.C.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

PRESIDENT: VISCOUNT FOLKESTONE, M.P.

FRIENDS wishing for LECTURES on the important subject of "Britain's Identity with the Lost Tribes of Israel," by gentlemen of recognised position and ability, are requested to write for a Prospectus of Subjects and Lectures to the Hon. Secretary. Dates are now being filled for Yorkshire, Lancashire, Devon, Kent, and North Britain. The terms are such as involve no risk as to loss on the part of those friends inviting the Lecturers.

Office: 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row London, E.C.

PHOTOGRAPHIC PORTRAITS OF PHILO-ISRAEL, Editor of THE BANNER OF ISRAEL, Author of "The History of the House of Israel," &c., &c. Cabinet, 2s., post free; Carte-de-Visites, 1s., post free.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

TO AUTHORS. Authors desirous of issuing Works or Pamphlets on the great and increasingly interesting Question of the Identity of the Lost Ten Tribes with the British Nation, should first communicate with Robert Banks, of Racquet-court, Fleet-street, who has already been honoured by issuing, amongst others, the following works on the subject:

The Banner of Israel. Weekly 1d.; monthly 7d.

The Nation's Glory Leader. Weekly 1d.; quarterly 1s. 4d.

The Pillar of Witness. By late Captain Tracey. Cloth 2s. 6d.; paper 1s. 6d. (second edition).

The Anglo-Israel Post Bag. By Bishop Titcomb. Cloth 2s. 6d.; paper 1s. 6d. (second edition).

The History of the House of Israel. By Philo-Israel. Cloth 1s.; paper 6d. (ninth thousand).

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, 5 Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW, WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 3, 1879. [All Rights Reserved.]

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. III. No. 141. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 10, 1879. [ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
The Next Elections	365
Ephraim's and Manassch's Treatment of Two Moribund Races	366
A Few Thoughts on Our Identity.—Part II. By Thomas Bales	367
The Metropolitan Association at Deal. By Thomas Bales	368
"Rifts and Remnants." By L. V., of Eastbourne	369
Mr. Stanley on Lost Israel. By L. P.	369
Reports as to the Return of Judah to Our Inheritance. By J. T. G.	370
Afghanistan Takes its Place as a State "Protected" by Israel	370
Progress in Toronto, Canada	370
Wimbledon Anglo-Israel Association	370
The Rock on "The Kings of the East"	371
The Rev. Savile's New Pamphlet. By J. C. N.	371
Fresh Evidence of Spiritual Good to a Man's Soul, From God's Blessings on the Study of Our Identity	371

THE NEXT ELECTIONS.

THE questions to be discussed at the coming general elections must be questions of the deepest interest to all Israelites. What will be the subjects on which the candidates will rely to secure their selection by the constituencies? Surely the foreign policy of the present Government. The tactics of the Opposition—"the vexatious pegging away" tactics as they have been called—have left no great opportunity for the Cabinet to attend to domestic legislation. Every link of the country's foreign policy and of the fiscal measures which it has necessitated, have been tested, not once, but over and over again, usque ad nauseam. Yet we never have seemed to get to the end of the Zulu-like attacks, the weary reiteration of the constant defeats the Opposition have suffered! But these burning questions all related to the foreign policy. It was now the Afghan campaign, anon the Zulu war; now the supplies which these wars necessitate; again it was the Government's policy in the Eastern Question! These endless and fruitless struggles each and all terminated in one constant result, the triumph of the Government, the waste of the public time, and the utter impossibility of satisfactorily advancing domestic legislation. But the purposes of party we suppose were served! It was needful also to prepare the constituencies for the coming general elections. The public suffered, it is true; the nation's time and patience were exhausted by the endless frittering of golden opportunities; patriotism was deceased; but the Government of the day was hampered! Their energies were taxed, so that full attention could not be given to the critical questions awaiting their disposal abroad, and above all, and beyond all, these discussions served their purpose by preparing for faction a battle cry to be used at the hustings, no long time ahead! We therefore must patiently endure. We must be resigned to see everything give way to party purposes! National interests must be sacrificed, national benefits set aside; our legislature must become a wonder to our foreign neighbours, that the Liberal party may succeed (perchance) in securing a majority for the next Parliament, and in ousting Lord Beaconsfield and his colleagues from power, if they can? But what issues will be at stake at these next elections? We Israelites well know what they are! Let one of ourselves, the editor of the Alfreton Journal, writing on the 9th May, 1879, tell us! Treating of this our subject, he said:—

> Step by step the policy of the Government has been disputed and criticised, and each time the verdict has been that what had been done was the best that could be done. But it is urged that the people have been under a delusion; have followed a will-o'-th'-wisp; have been dazzled by a false glitter. Who are the men who say such things? Are they not those whom the country has rejected? Was England less free at the last election, is she less free now, than she will be a few months hence? Why should the verdict of the next election be the only test? What matter though none can tell on what particular point the next election will turn? The main question will be one of empire abroad. Impelled by an instinct stronger than reason, England goes forward to fulfil her destiny; to fight the time-old battle; and to bear the burden as well as the glory of her power. Her mission is no new one; though, perhaps, she had well-nigh forgotten it. 'Tis hers to break the rod of the oppressor and set the peoples free; to restore the East to its glory, and to plant the cross in triumph in the ancient lands—not as the badge of the conqueror, but as the emblem of peace and good will. Such is England's true foreign policy, and her people and statesmen recognize it, though they have differed as to which way the path of duty lay. When that path becomes clear and defined, there will be no ground for party struggles. In home politics different schools of thought cannot but continue to exist, but the country will be spared the ignominy and danger of being torn by contending factions when face to face with her foreign foes.

We are not, of course, at one with our contemporary regarding the probability of our being soon "face to face with foreign foes," because, as our readers well know, we do not believe that, henceforth, Israel will have any such, till after her settlement in the land of the inheritance, and "the coming collision" takes place, regarding which the M.A. of Cambridge has written so well. But we are quite of one mind with the editor of the Alfreton Journal as to the mission and true foreign policy of Great Britain now and for all future time. Her's is Israel's mission, to "undo the heavy burdens, to let the oppressed 'go free,' and that WE break every yoke" (Isa. lviii. 6). It is ours too, like Israel, to restore "the glory to the East," since we have in Jehovah's strength to establish the "united kingdom" of Israel with Judah on the mountains of Israel, what time "David the Lord's servant" comes to be King there over us "for ever and for evermore" (Ezek. xxxvii. 24—28). It is our function, further, "to plant the cross in ancient lands in triumph, as the "emblem of praise and good will," for God has given Israel that rôle to perform—"to blossom and to bud, and to fill the face of the world with fruit," to bear "THE BLESSING," even the Lord Jesus Christ, to ALL the families of the earth (Isa. xxvii. 6; Gen. xxii. 18).

Digitized by Google

These, then, must be the burning questions at our next elections—namely, whether the British shall carry out this high destiny as the chief of nations, as the liberators of the down-trodden and of the oppressed, as the restorers of the East to its God-destined glory, and as the propagators of the Gospel of Christ —the true Protestant witnessing faith—to all the four quarters of the earth, in discharge of their true imperialism, as joined with a cosmopolitan character, which embraces the whole world in the folds of a peace and good will it is theirs by God's appointment to spread (Gen. xxii. 18; Matt. xxviii. 19).

Perhaps before the next elections (who knows?) the great outpouring of God's Holy Spirit may be given to our race, and then! how different will be the condition, how easy the government then of these realms! how Christian the conduct, not only of the nation's political ministers, but of Her Majesty's Opposition as well! No more will public time be wasted in frivolous contests leading to no good results. Our senators, our Irish Members being at peace with Israel's representatives then, will be wise, the counsels of our leaders, those worthy to guide a "righteous nation," the Queen a Sovereign happy in all her subjects, and in her own self too, and affairs both at home and abroad regulated as the domestic and foreign policy of ISRAEL always should be—for GOD'S GLORY ONLY!

EPHRAIM'S AND MANASSEH'S TREATMENT OF TWO MORIBUND RACES.

GOD'S Word gives to Ephraim and Manasseh both, the distinct rôle of "pushing the people together to the ends of the earth." No other people can do this thing but these two nations, and to them alone, as the ten thousands of Ephraim and the thousands of Manasseh, is the task assigned. The "pushing," alas! signifies for the "pushed ones" at the ends of the earth—annihilation in the long run. We propose now to show, by the record of two out of several sad stories, how Great Britain and America—the representatives of Ephraim and Manasseh—have answered to the Divine commission, and how they have fulfilled the dreadful destiny for which surely they must be nationally responsible.

The Maori race is one of the two in question; the Red Indian of the United States the other. How have we British "pushed" the former out of existence, till he is ready to disappear in New Zealand? And what are the facts regarding the imminent destruction of the latter from off their hunting grounds in the broad prairies of Central America? The histories are sad ones in each case, but they must be told in proof of the truth of "God's Word written."

The Maories were the noblest race of savages the world probably ever saw, and that not long ago. They were foemen worthy of British steel, and over and over again they inflicted on our best troops injury which we could hardly bear or retaliate upon them. In their stockaded pahs they used to defy the best-led English troops, and it took 10,000 of our picked men to subdue them at last. When we had by conquest reduced the power of the Maories, and humbled their military pride, we caused their country to be intersected with good roads and railways, and we filled it with our spawning multitudes. When our last war ended, some ten years ago, we were relatively as to numbers in no excessive majority. To-day all this is changed. The Maories all told numbered last year only 42,819. This year they are less. The Anglo-Saxon colonists, on the other hand, were, on March 1, 1878, the enormous multitude of 414,412 souls, being ten times the present number of the dwindling Maori aborigines. Our fighting power probably outnumbers that of the natives, "including our firm allies among them, by twenty to one."

From the Sunderland Daily Post, of August 7, 1879, we take the following graphic account of the cause of the trouble between the natives and our colonists, with some reflections as to the probable results:—

At the conclusion of the late war a large tract of land in the Taranaki province was confiscated by the Government. Years passed, however, without any attempt to occupy it, until the spring of the present year. The hostile Maories, whose lands these were, have remained in possession during the last ten years, and prematurely concluded that they would not be deprived of their estates. From this comforting delusion they were awakened by the arrival of a party of surveyors among them for the purpose of measuring off the land that had been advertised for sale. From some cause, which certainly requires explanation, the discontent of the natives was still further increased through the mistaken idea that certain reserves secured to them were to be sold. This state of feeling found vent in the murder of one of the surveying party, the murderer, named Hiroki, taking refuge with a fanatical priest or "prophet" named Te Whiti, a member of the Hauhaus, a sect whose religion consists of a curious mixture of Christianity, fanaticism, and Maori superstition. This man, who has been a source of trouble to the Government, instead of exerting his influence to calm the excitement, took a precisely opposite course. No doubt he instinctively feels that with the closer contact of the white man his influence and the office of "prophet" will disappear. Te Whiti assumed a very bold attitude. Not only did he refuse to deliver up the murderer Hiroki, but sent a message to the nearest constabulary detachment ordering them to quit their posts, and warning all Europeans off the disputed territory. Not content with this, and in consequence of the passive attitude still preserved by the Government, the Maories ploughed up some land in the neighbourhood belonging to Europeans. Government at this juncture stepped in, and forwarded armed detachments to the disturbed district. This action of the Government was well seconded by the settlers of Taranaki, who enrolled themselves as volunteers, and almost every volunteer corps throughout the colony volunteered for the front. This display has produced a more pacific feeling on the part of Te Whiti, who declares himself for peace. The colonists, however, are determined that Hiroki must be given up, and that the gang of desperadoes and rebels living under Te Whiti's protection be broken up. The latest news is that the settlers have precipitated matters by forcibly ejecting the native ploughmen. Should hostilities have broken out, there will be a short but deadly conflict. The Maories will fight with all the blindness of desperation, knowing that this would be for them the last effort that they could possibly make for independence. The settlers, in order to secure peace and immunity for the future, would not hesitate to read the natives a sharp and decisive lesson. The colonists, knowing their own strength, are determined to exercise it, so as to punish these refractory people, and extinguish for ever the smouldering fires of discontent and sedition, and thus put an end to all causes of uneasiness which might tend to retard the development and prosperity of the colony.

Such is the prospect, and it is a terrible one for the hapless natives. Any insurrection of the latter would now be put down at once by the colonists with a high hand. The disturbance would be confined to one secluded small part of the country, and if the war were to break out, it would probably issue in the utter extermination of the race whose "full end" would thus be very rapidly accelerated. The story is a sad one of the rapid decline and disappearance of a noble but savage people. Our own conduct, as the ruling, "pushing," dominant Ephraimite nation, supplanting these noble aborigines, has not always been either righteous or creditable to ourselves as a Christian nation; but we can see rightly or wrongly the will of God is being done even by the sins of fallen Israel, and a fair wilderness, too long marred by a savage and even cannibal race, has had to be occupied by a people formed by Jehovah for Himself, to show forth His praise (Isa. xliii. 21).

Digitized by Google

Turn we now to the other history—the treatment by Manassite America of the Red Indian literally "pushed" out of their own lands by our surging, encroaching, supplanting, annexing, grasping cousins across the water. It seems that in North America the British in Canada have discovered how to live in peace with the red man, and the latter has learnt to settle down to civilised modes of life. Not so in the States:—

There (said the Times in its leader of August 8, 1879) an Indian territory which has been set apart for the exclusive use of the red men is now coveted by some whites, who avow their determination to occupy the land which suits them. The United States authorities discountenance the flagrant breach of contract. It is feared, however, that the violation of the Indian territory will not be prevented. The corresponding case of the Black Hills forbids the hope that the Indians will receive fair play when their land is wanted by white citizens of the North American Republic. Only the other day 700 horses were stolen from the Red Cloud Agency; it was known to the authorities that the thieves were white men, and that the sufferers were Indians, and nothing was done either to check or punish the depredators. If the Indians steal anything from white men, there is no hesitation in punishing them with ruthless severity. In the present case justice is supposed to be satisfied by an order to the military authorities not to suffer the like robberies to take place under their eyes in the future. Sitting Bull has been one of the victims of the policy which the agents of the United States Government carry out with comparative impunity. He is the chief of the tribe to which the Black Hills were made over as a place of abode. Gold was discovered there, and the white men declared that the Indians must go. General Custer was despatched with an armed force to expel the Indians from the district which had been secured to them, and which they rightly regarded as their own. The Indians resisted; General Custer and many other brave men were slaughtered, but Sitting Bull and his warriors had to flee to Canada. He recently made public a statement of his case through the agency of Father Genin, who has been for ten years a Roman Catholic missionary priest among the Sioux in the North-west. He there recited how a treaty was made at Fort Laramie in 1868 between his tribe and commissioners representing the United States; how his tribe gave up their claim to a large tract of country on condition of the occupation of the Black Hills district being guaranteed to them; and how "no treaty ever made on earth received so little attention as the one we were got to sign at Fort Laramie." He appealed from the soldiers and authorities by whom he had been abused and deceived to "the just, sensible citizens of the United States," saying that in the latter and "the wise men in Congress" was his only hope. Now he has resolved to settle with his tribe within the boundaries of the Dominion. Let us hope that their wanderings have come to an end, and that they may attain to some measure of civilisation under a milder rule.

We are glad to think that in this case the British-Ephraimite shines by comparison with his more cruel brother Manasseh. "The history of the United States," as the Times truly says, "during the century of their existence, abounds in ghastly stories of massacres in which the white and the red men were in turn the aggressors and the victims. There has been no Indian war in Canada since it became a British possession." We treat the Indians with strict justice, and keep faith with them; and instead of forcing them by breach of treaties with them to fly the country (thus "pushing them together to the ends of the earth"), we try "to reclaim them from a nomadic aimless state of existence, persuade them to cultivate the soil, and so convert them into contented and industrious citizens."

Such is the sad tale of the dying out of two noble, ancient stocks of the "stationary savagedom" of God's earth. They are destined by His decree as the "cheaper" races to die out before the more costly. We are pushing them out of existence in New Zealand, and our brother Jonathan, the Americans of the States, are even more ruthlessly and savagely following in our footsteps in driving the Red Indian from his hunting grounds in the States into the Queen's Dominions in Canada, where, though sheltered and cared for, they are nevertheless, it is believed, "dying out" still, by the operation of natural causes, by sterility among women, by disease, and by following habits of life to which the race is not by nature accustomed.

A FEW THOUGHTS ON OUR IDENTITY.

By Thomas Bales.

(Concluded from page 353.)

PART II.

It is also said that on the issuing of the decree of Cyrus the Israelites of the Ten Tribes returned, although admittedly not in the same proportion as did those of the Tribes of Judah, Benjamin, and Levi. No Israelites returned with the Jews from Babylon. On this point Scriptural testimony is most decisive (see Ezra ii. 1, and iv. 1). Not one word is said of any of the Ten Tribes; nor, indeed, is this to be wondered at. According to the prophet Jeremiah, and the testimony of Josephus and others, the date of the Babylonish captivity is fixed at the time of the destruction of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar, the king of Babel, which event occurred in the year of the world 3425. Now, if only a short time had intervened between the date of the Israelites' captivity and that of the Jews' captivity, there would still have been a great objection to their returning in company. The Israelites had nothing in common with the Jews. Long years of separation had broken the ties once existent between them. Moreover, for Israelites, this return did not mean going home; others possessed the land of their fathers. As well might they be in Assyria as in a land unknown to them. With the Jews it was otherwise: their land was desolate; they had but to return to take possession of it. We read, "Sion was not onely become as a torne and plowed-up field, Hierusalem an heape of stones, the mountaine of the Temple as a grove, or wood of thornes or briars, but (as Hierome speaketh) even the birds of the ayre scorned to flie over it, or the beasts to tread on that defiled soyle." It is well known, too, that when the Jews, after their return, began to build the Temple, the Samaritans and idolatrous nations adjoining offered them every obstacle.

In reality, 203 years transpired between the commencement of the Israelitish captivity and the return of the Jews from the Babylonish captivity, and bearing in mind that the Israelites were to sink into the very depth of heathenism, they must have been far advanced in it; so that to state they coalesced and returned with the Jews is simply absurd.

Again—Bishop Titcomb shows most conclusively from 1 Chron. v. 26, that there was no known restoration, at the time of the Babylonian captivity, of the Tribes carried captive by Pul and Tiglath-Pilneser, kings of Assyria; and after quoting Zechariah (x. 6), who wrote some time after the return from Babylon, he asks, "How could this promise have been made to the Ten Tribes if they had all returned from captivity with the other Two Tribes?" He adds, "The bare supposition is so at variance with these evidences that I have scarcely patience to reason about it."

So much, then, for the historians who forge history and pervert Scripture. Blind leaders of the blind are they.

But apart from historical objections, the subject seems too stupendous to be accepted. It is too much of a good thing! We the Israelites lost for centuries? Incredible, absurd! At first sight it may appear so; but when the subject is fairly and prayerfully studied, conviction is brought home to the mind, scales drop from the eyes, and we see plainly what many have prayed to see, and yet have not seen. And when once realised, how simple it is! God decreed that the Israelites, for their idolatry, should be lost, yet in His providence preserved; lost to the knowledge of, yet distinct from, all other peoples and nations; lost even to themselves, yet only for a time. Christ was to come; the heathen were to believe; the ban of God's displeasure was to be removed, and the new covenant made—fuller and richer than the older one. Accordingly we find them in exile an idolatrous people, forsaking more and more their Hebraical manners, customs, and speech, and losing in the course of time all traces of their Hebraical origin. Lost indeed they were. Lost indeed they have been. To those who doubtingly ask when and how this mystery of miraculous disappearance and preservation came to pass, the reply is simply, "God willed them lost." Now they are found, found in Britons. Not with the precision of mathematical certainty perhaps. Nor is this to be expected at present. Men cannot fathom the inscrutable works of God, or search out His hidden counsels, or set out with rule and compass His wonderful designs. Enough for us to know that our ancestors have been traced to those regions where the Israelites were carried captive, and where they were last mentioned, as Israelites, on the page of undisputed history; that we alone are in complete accord with the inspired prophecies concerning them; that we alone have realised the promises addressed to them. Yet, though most Britons proudly admit that Britannia is high above all other nations of the earth, and that a Briton is an essentially different man from any other in his enterprise, valour, determination, and perseverance, they point to the improbability of the Israelites having conquered and populated this country, and to historical facts being entirely at variance with our theory as to their settlement in these isles. We are reminded that the waves of invasion frequently rolled upon our shores and inundated the country, and that these different sets of invaders materially differ in their characteristics. But is our Identity really opposed to the generally received account of the gradual formation of the British nation? I think not. The very fact of the Israelites being carried into captivity in sections or detachments, so far from damaging the cause, tends rather to confirm it in a very remarkable manner. These sections migrating from Assyria, wandered in different directions, came into contact with different peoples, and, led by the Almighty's hand, arrived here with such marked distinctions in language, features, and general characteristics, as their wanderings must inevitably have occasioned.

Digitized by Google

Then tracing the history of our country, and noting how it has expanded from an insignificant spot into the mightiest empire that ever existed, noting also that all that is truly great and truly noble in it either sprung to light, burst into being, or amplified a thousand fold, after the national renunciation of idolatry at the time of the Reformation; noting, moreover, how marvellously link after link of the Identity has been wrought by the All-wise and All-good, until, at this moment, scarcely any but the prejudiced and mentally blind can fail to acknowledge how strong, how surpassingly strong, is that chain of irrefutable evidence, we can but come to the conclusion, that the Israelites, lost for ages, are none other than Britons, feared and respected over all the earth. What a view does this present to us of God's love, and mercy, and faithfulness—and we all unworthy! Often as we have read of His wondrous attributes, few have ever realised them. But as His own peculiar people, His people whom He has loved with an eternal love, we can with confidence enter into the holy of holies, and appropriate to ourselves those precious gifts and promises, and those tender sayings that once seemed like dark parables of old.

Signs of the times plainly indicate that the consummation of prophecy is rapidly approaching. It may not be just yet; but it is not far distant. Here, again, is a subject for solemn thought. The masses know not Christ, nor are they likely to know Him. The ministry of ministers does not reach them. In the slums and the by-ways of our boasted civilisation, they perish unheeded: perish like heathen in the land of the open Bible. Christianity seems a mockery, all too powerless to cope with evil. Of ministers some are blind, others will not work for Christ, and those who do, find they can make but little impression upon the serried ranks of those going headlong to destruction. The Gospel of Jesus Christ must be proclaimed everywhere, in dens of iniquity, and in haunts of vice, as well as in churches and cathedrals vast. All mankind must hear the simple story of the cross, of man's salvation purchased by Jesus' blood. All mankind must hear that sin is hateful to Him, and that the wages of sin is death. How are the masses to be reached? By the ministry? Their preaching seems to avail but little. The burning words of the most ardent soldier of Christ fall cold and lifeless upon indifferent hearers. Preaching does not reach the heart of the masses, and therefore brings forth no fruit in this life. This arises from a want of vital interest in the Scriptures. The fact of our Identity will supply this want. It makes the Scriptures legible. It applies them to ourselves, it wakens our interest, and appeals to our hearts. It brings us into close communion with our God and Father. When it is more widely known and accepted, God's Word, faithfully preached, will be endowed with Pentecostal power, and its result will be everywhere revealed. Instead of a few devoted ministers there will be thousands, men zealous for God, men filled with the Holy Spirit. Instead of a few hearts being won for God, whole communities will turn from darkness and rejoice in the light of life. The name of the Redeemer will enter the vilest spots. Where sin now reigns supreme, thanksgiving and praise will daily ascend. By our Identity the way of the Lord will be prepared, and many will earnestly pray for the second coming and peaceful reign of our Creator, Redeemer, King.

THE METROPOLITAN ASSOCIATION AT DEAL.

By Thomes Bales.

Thanks to the spirit of enterprise animating the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association, Deal was favoured on August 20 with a public lecture, delivered by the Rev. Jas. Billington, F.S.A., F.R.H.S., in the commodious Guildhall, kindly lent for the occasion by the worthy Mayor, J. R. Lush, Esq., the chair being taken by Wm. Nethersole, Esq., a gentleman widely known, highly respected, and warmly attached to the Identity. Some time having elapsed since the delivery of the last lecture, and the remembrance of the truculent onslaught made upon it by a clergyman being still fresh in the minds of many, considerable interest was manifested, and the hall was filled with an audience, well-informed, critical, and select.

The subject of the lecture was indicated by its title, "Are Englishmen Israelites?" Mr. Billington's remarks were received with rapt attention; but having been requested to address himself to local prejudices, he did not speak of the Identity so fully as some desired. He set himself to the difficult task allotted, and succeeded most admirably. Unfortunately for the cause, too much stress had previously been laid on politics and creeds, and the Identity had been understood to be wedded to Conservatism and the Church; hence the general dislike for it in a stronghold of Liberalism and Nonconformity. Mr. Billington devoted some time to the removal of prejudice, and showing convincingly that the Identity was a national question, affecting the national welfare, and deserving national support. His explanation, or rather removal of misapprehensions, was well calculated to favourably impress the candid and impartial.

He next expounded with animation some of the principal Identities, adopting the suggestive tone rather than the positive, and concluded with some telling remarks on faith.

Everything passed off quietly and orderly; the chairman's words, full of worth, had a real, manly ring, simplicity and nobility in them being united—the vote of thanks accorded him on the motion of Mr. Billington, seconded by Mr. Stubbs, being marked with evident warmth; in short, the meeting was in every respect a success.

And so was the private meeting held in the afternoon of the same day, when Chas. Stubbs, Esq., B.A., gave a very entertaining address, "Scriptural Evidences of Britain's Identity with Lost Israel," winning from the chairman and the very select company assembled a justly deserved compliment for his extraordinary memory and remarkable knowledge of the Scriptures. To follow him in his Scriptural references was no easy matter; when one was seeking his texts, he had long since passed them and was engaged with others. He will prove of great service to the good cause.

Digitized by Google

These lectures have not been unproductive. They have revived interest sadly drooping, and stimulated sturdier action. There is a general impression that lectures must be delivered more frequently; that the local society must have an active instead of a passive policy; that increased efforts must be made to propagate the glorious fact that "Lost Israel is FOUND"—found in the British people.

The literature scattered at these lectures is not unproductive. In many houses it has been the staple theme of conversation. Copies of the BANNER, reports of the Metropolitan Associations, and other publications treating on the Identity, have been read, read again, and then passed on; and I can speak from personal knowledge to the delight they have occasioned in the minds, and the conversation they have caused in the homes, of workmen and others who became their fortunate possessors. Speaking for myself, and declaiming any idea of flattery, I would mention that Philo-Israel's address at the first annual meeting of the Metropolitan Association, as given in their report, has in it more of a Gospel tendency than is found in many a sermon.

I believe the Association realised their expenses; I am certain they were pleased at the results of their campaign. One thing they certainly did, nay, two things! They disarmed suspicion and they silenced the opposition. The chief opponent, who rivals Mr. Clifford, and, perhaps, eclipses even him, was asked, as a special favour, to be present at either or both of the meetings and to bring his friends with him; but his courage failed him. He once used swelling words; but they are vanity. Paper thunder avails but little, if it avail at all, against the Word of truth in competent hands.

MR. STANLEY ON LOST ISRAEL.

I PERCEIVE that Mr. Stanley in his tract, "The Lost Tribes of Israel," allows that the Ten Tribes actually were lost. I wonder if a certain learned canon, whose name has of late been heard of much in connection with the See of Jerusalem, has yet reached that advanced stage of conviction!

Mr. Stanley repudiates with scorn the idea of an Identification of ourselves with Israel being based on our observance of a Sabbath, because that which we keep as such, though frequently called by that name, is not the same as the day observed by the Jews. I have noticed that some of our upholders question whether we do not in reality keep the true Sabbath, while the Jews observe a false seventh day; but that, I think, has yet to be proved, and rests upon calculations too deep for my understanding. Mr. Stanley, and those who agree with him, being aware that Israel has again to come to the fore, know that they must be existing somehow and somewhere, and it does appear to me passing strange that they should be willing to believe that they are to be found as a people, or mixed with other peoples, possessing not the faintest reflex of a Sabbath in their religion and habits, while our Sabbatical laws and customs are to count for nothing.

I was struck the other day by hearing that an old Presbyterian woman narrated how she had many years before been reproved by a man for carrying a parcel on Sunday, though it contained a religious book she was conveying home to read, and when this circumstance was mentioned by my informant to an attendant of the Church of England, the remark was made, "Of course nobody would carry a parcel on the Sunday" (Jer. xvii. 21).

L. P.

"RIFTS AND REMNANTS."

BY L. V., OF EASTBOURNE.

I HAVE been reading with much interest the various articles in the daily papers about the origin of the Afghans, and the Siah-Posh natives of Kafiristan: the latter described as a fair complexioned, blue-eyed race like the English. The Afghans, it is said, claim to be descended from Saul, but I think they are more likely to be the descendants of one of the Tribes carried away by the Assyrians. We read in 1 Chron. v. 26, that "The God of Israel stirred up the spirit of Pul, King of Assyria, and the spirit of Tilgath-Pilneser, King of Assyria, and He carried them away, even the Reubenites, and the Gadites, and the half-Tribe of Manasseh, and brought them unto Halah, and Habor, and to the River Gozan, unto this day."

In Mr. Bourchier Wrey Savile's letter to Mr. Gladstone (BANNER, July 31st, 1878) he mentions an ancient roll belonging to the Hebrews at Tschufut-Kaleh, in the Crimea, which reads as follows:—"I am Jehudi, the son of Moses, the son of Jehudi the Mighty, a man of the Tribe of Naphtali, which was carried captive with the Tribe of Simeon and other Tribes of Israel, by the Prince Shalmaneser, from Samaria, during the reign of Hoshea, King of Israel. They were carried captive to Halah, to Habor, which is Cabul, to Gozan, and to the Khersonesus, which is the Crimea." Now in Num. xxxii. and Joshua xiii., we see that the children of Reuben, and the children of Gad, with half the Tribe of Manasseh, obtained permission to settle in Bashan, and in Gilead, beyond the Jordan, to the East—the other half of the Tribe of Manasseh taking up their lot amongst their brethren the Ephraimites to the Westward of Jordan. In Joshua xix. 27, Cabul is mentioned as one of the lots or boundaries of the Tribe of Asher. Is it not possible that these several Tribes settled to the North and East of Palestine may have been the first to fall into the hands of the advancing Assyrians, and have been carried away towards India and China; for in the days of Jehu King of Israel "The Lord began to cut Israel short, and Hazael smote them in all the coasts of Israel: from Jordan Eastward, all the land of Gilead, the Gadites, and the Reubenites, and the Manassites?" (2 Kings x. 32, 33). As the Pilgrim Fathers and first colonists named their new settlements in America after the old English towns of Boston, York, and Halifax, so may some of the exiled families of Asher have called their new place of residence "Cabul," in remembrance of their old home in Palestine. The Shiah-Posh Kaffirs are said to be inimical to the Afghans, and to claim relationship with Europeans. Are they not possibly the descendants of some of the half-Tribe of Manasseh? if so, their resemblance to the Anglo-Saxon race can be understood, if the other portion of the Tribe of Manasseh, together with Ephraim, migrated, as we believe, from their place of exile in the mountains and cities of the Medes towards the isles of the North-west.

Afghanistan seems likely soon to come under British rule, and in connection with the events now happening on our Indian frontier, it is interesting to read an article published in the July number of the Sunday at Home for 1878, on "The second Advent." In it there is an account of an interview which took place in 1853 between an officer in the East India Company's service and a young "Moolah." The latter, after a long discussion upon religious matters, asked the officer when the English were to move on Cabul, in order to annex it to the British Government? The officer replied that he hoped they would never be so foolish as to go there again. "Sahib," answered the Moolah, "this is not a matter in which there can be any doubt. The English Government has no choice in its future action, for it is written in an ancient book that momentous events are to occur in the world before the year 1883. People with fair complexions and red beards are to come from the other side of the sea to India, and are to advance through Cabul to the Euphrates, where Russian and Turkish armies are to fight and almost annihilate each other." He then went on to describe the coming of our Lord, and the destruction of Satan.

Digitized by Google

No doubt many fragments and scattered families (rifts and remnants) of the Lost Tribes will be found in India, Burmah, and elsewhere, under British rule, when in the fulness of time, as the Lord has said, "He will take the stick of Joseph, which is in the hand of Ephraim, and the Tribes of Israel his fellows, and will put them with the stick of Judah, and make them one stick" (Ezek. xxxvii. 19)—that is, make them all subject to Ephraim; then shall Joseph's dream be indeed fulfilled, the eleven sheaves shall make obeisance to the sheaf of Joseph (Gen. xxxvii. 7).

The Lord is now searching out His sheep (Ezek. xxxiv. 11, 16) to bring them from among the heathen into their own land (Ezek. xxxvii. 21), there to make them one people, under one king. "And My servant David shall be their Prince for ever" (Ezek. xxxvii. 25).

NOTE.—We must not be supposed to endorse all our friend's views above expressed. We believe the Afghans to be of Judah. —ED.

AFGHANISTAN TAKES ITS PLACE AS A STATE "PROTECTED" BY ISRAEL.

WE advance no proof of this fact ourselves. We depend on the Calcutta correspondent of the London Times, who telegraphed from the far East on August 17, words published in London in the leading journal on Monday, August 18, 1879. They were these :—

AFGHANISTAN.

CALCUTTA, August 17.

Ameer Yakoob Khan has already given an earnest of his desire to act up to his treaty engagements. He has shown Major Cavagnari three letters received by him from General Kaufmann. Two of these letters, dated March, conveyed the Russian general's congratulations on the Ameer's accession. The third, written in May, announced General Kaufmann's approaching departure for St. Petersburg. The Ameer consulted Major Cavagnari as to the answers he should return, and, in accordance with our envoy's advice, the Ameer replied in courteous terms, at the same time suggesting that all future communications should be sent through the Indian Government.

We hope our readers notice the above as the final result of our late operations? Afghanistan takes its place like any other of the "protected States" of India, and acknowledges the paramount power of the Government established by Israel in India. Henceforth the Russian communications with our frontier Afghan friends must be conducted through the Lion of the House of Israel! We can imagine the character of the Bear's approaches towards its late would-be victims if it should be unwise enough to attempt to renew them. The "crouching Lion" lies ready to spring, watching at the gate of the Afghan's house, sworn to protect the premises from all hostile comers. Henceforth, then, if the Russians wish to spoil Israel by appropriating the Afghan territories which defend her empire they must fight the Lion which lies ready for the contest at the frontiers. He will think twice, we know, before he ventures on such a course of conduct. And, therefore, we say, we thank God for the late Afghan successes; for our three "Gates" now newly acquired; for the loyal attitude the Ameer has assumed towards the paramount Power; and for the certainty which the whole of these events give us, as God's people Israel—namely, that the Russian Empire shall never include Afghanistan, and that the Heathen Empire of Queen Victoria is at last quite securely safeguarded! "Israel, praise YE the Lord."

PROGRESS IN TORONTO, CANADA.

WE are glad to find from the Christian Guardian, a newspaper published in Toronto under the direction of the Methodist Church of Canada, that such a work as the following (advertised for sale) is being published and recommended by the Methodist Magazine:—

"Anglo-Israel; or, The British Nation the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel." By Rev. W. H. Poole. 8vo., pp. 82. Price 25 cents. Bro. Poole presents in these eighty pages an elaborate argument—philological, Biblical, historical, ethnographic, and heraldic—in favour of their Identity with the British nation. Certainly many of these evidences are highly interesting and curious; as, for instance, the derivation of "Saxons" from, by slight modification, "Isaac;" the fulfilment, as alleged, of many Scriptural prophecies in the British nation; the existence of what might be called "Jewish quarterings" in the royal standard of England, and many other striking coincidences. The essay is instinct with patriotic sentiments, and whether one accepts the theory or not, he will find much food for thought in the argument.—Methodist Magazine.

The next advertisement proves also that the Methodists are looking to the Great Pyramid in Canada with interest.

"Scientific and Religious Discourses in the Great Pyramid, recently made by Prof. Piazzi Smyth." Five editions sold in a few months. Price 25 cents.

REPORTS AS TO THE RETURN OF JUDAH TO OUR INHERITANCE.

BY J. T. G.

AN American newspaper states that since the Turkish authorities removed the restrictions which limited the Jewish population in Jerusalem, the Jews have bought up all the land they could in the ancient city, and have built outside the walls, in some cases, entire streets of houses. Synagogues and Jewish hospitals have multiplied. The German Jews have sixteen charity associations and twenty-eight "congregations religiouses." Two newspapers have been started. Six thousand patients are annually cared for in the Rothschild and other hospitals. Baron Rothschild holds a mortgage on the whole of Palestine as security for his loan of 200,000,000 francs to the Turkish Government. It is said that the value of the land at the gates of the city has increased more than tenfold, while building and construction work of all kinds is carried on night and day. It is further reported that the emigrants, who, to a large extent, are from Russia, "are animated by a religious enthusiasm of a very pronounced type." How far the latter portion of this news may be true, remains to be seen.

THE WIMBLEDON ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

WE are glad to see that the formation of the associations at Hastings and St. Leonard's has been followed quickly by that of an auxiliary at Wimbledon. We believe that the movement has originated with the zealous and energetic hon. secretary and treasurer (pro tem.), Miss Lawrence, while the names enrolled as vice-presidents and on the committee are a guarantee that the Wimbledon Society means work, and will do it. We are much pleased with the prospectus put out by the new-born association, and think the rules adopted are most excellent. We hope future associations in posse will, before they proceed to adopt their organization, procure a copy of the Wimbledon prospectus from the secretary, at Stoneleigh, Worple-road, Wimbledon, and after consulting it, "go and do likewise."

ANGLO-ISRAEL SERVICES.—The Rev. H. Marriott, M.A., will conduct special services at Exeter Hall (Lower Hall) on Sunday next.—[See Advertisement.]

Digitized by Google

THE REV. SAVILE'S NEW PAMPHLET.

By J. C. N.

AFTER so many heated philippics against Anglo-Israelites by their opponents, it is most refreshing to meet with such a pamphlet as this by the Rev. B. W. Savile, which is a calm and temperate defence of Anglo-Israelism. I can cordially recommend the rev. gentleman's work to friends of the cause, and also to those seekers after truth who have not been distracted from their search by the noisy invective of our detractors.

In the first three chapters the author deals with "Hard Speeches, Opponents' Arguments, and Common Errors;" successfully rebutting the charge of blasphemy made against some of our friends by shewing the ignorance of their opponents as to the meaning of that word.

The next three chapters are devoted to the Historical Argument, and the seventh chapter to the Philological Argument. After an attentive perusal of these four chapters, we must come to the conclusion that the Cymry are the veritable descendants of the former inhabitants of Beth-Khumri, Samaria. There is the hypothesis that these Cymry may be descended from the Gomerim or Japhetic Gomerites. But opponents who hold this view must explain the close affinity which exists between the Welsh and Hebrew languages, and also inform us why Taliesin, the Welsh bard, should "sing and declare his lore in Hebrew." The author's conclusion concerning the Japhetic "Gomerim" and the Shemitic people of Beth-Khumri, is capped by the philological argument in chapter seven. This is not the place to repeat the full reasoning of the author, therefore, I must refer our readers to the book itself and beg of them to study these chapters earnestly and attentively. They will find therein much research into the history of the Sacæ, who are shown to be a portion of the people called Cymry, only a later wave of emigration; and they will see how the prophetic symbols of Hosea have been literally fulfilled.

The last five chapters treat the subject from the prophetic point of view, and we have many suggestive and interesting remarks from the author upon two points especially—viz., the "supremacy" above all nations promised to Israel obedient, and the unconditional promise of "multiplicity of seed" to Ephraim.

The rev. gentleman has wisely refrained from scrambling over a thousand and one minor points of Identity. He has successfully taken in hand what may be termed the cardinal points of Anglo-Israelism, and argues upon them as one seeking for the truth.

People no longer dare to laugh down the arguments of those "ingenious lunatics" who call themselves Anglo-Israelites; and if our opponents wish to show that they are gifted with more "ingenuity" than we poor "lunatics" are possessed of, perhaps they will take this pamphlet in hand and refute its arguments if possible.

The author does not "load all who differ from him with abuse," but places his arguments before all with Christian gentleness; and most certainly his pamphlet presents a striking contrast to the brazen trumpeting of those opponents whose sole aim, apparently, is to drown the sweet voice of truth which is fast alluring the sceptic and the infidel from their path to follow her

On to the bound of the waste,
On to the city of God.

THE "ROCK" ON "THE KINGS OF THE EAST."

THE following was published in the Rock on May 16th, 1879:

KINGS OF THE EAST (REV. XVI. 12).—(J. W.)—We have not the slightest doubt that the "Euphrates" symbolizes the Mohammedan power, and it is equally clear that the same is rapidly drying up; but we admit that the problem as to who are "the Kings of (or rather from) the East" still awaits its solution in futuro, and must therefore be to some extent an open question. We have, however, a strong conviction that Israelites—who were called "kings" while still in the loins of Abraham—are intended. We believe also that England is the prophetic "King of the South," and if so "the Kings of the East" will scarcely be the same. You should read, if you have not done so, "Birk's Two Later Visions of Daniel," in which England's supremacy in Egypt was anticipated thirty years ago.

We wonder that with these views as published, the editor of the Rock fails to join our ranks as an avowed "Israelite!" He holds "that the Euphrates waters now drying up rapidly are the Turkish or Mahommedan power;" so do we! He admits "that he strongly suspects that the Kings of the East are the Israelites;" so do we! He believes also that the "King of the South" (of Daniel) is England; so do we! But here comes the non sequitur. "If so, the Kings of the East can scarcely be the same." Why not? Israel was to spread "West, and East, and North, and South" (Gen. xxviii. 14). The Kings of the East, therefore, are very probably the prophetic "King of the South." The latter is clearly the opponent of Russia, the King of the North, of Daniel. Who, we ask, in Ezek. xxxviii., xxxix., are designated as the opponents of Russian Gog but the children of Israel—therefore, the "King of the South" of Daniel? The Rock agrees, it seems, with Birk in holding that "England will be supreme in Egypt;" but to fulfil this rôle, she must surely be the possessor of "the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven," for God describes the succourer of Egypt as a "Saviour, a great one, and a deliverer" (Isaiah xix. 20), "even Israel, the third with Egypt and Assyria, a blessing in the midst of the land" (ver. 24).

We are well aware that the Rock, speaking of the Israelites as probably "the Kings of the East" of prophecy, meant to designate the Jews. He called them the Israelites, however, and we would add they are the Ten-Tribed Israelites, being that portion of the family now inheriting the blessings so conspicuous in the British. We have had many a sharp word to say to and of the Rock, but we are the fast friend of the Protestant witnessing Rock, after all is said and done! For the Rock's editor is, after all, three parts persuaded we are Israel, and, like most of our opponents, nay, even like Mr. Robert Roberts, the opponent of our Christianity (as he is the opponent of our belief in our Identity), he affirms the British are to be the restorers of the Jews, are to be their champion, are their true friend, are their succourer! Saying all this, he and they are shut up, by God's Word to the belief, that the British are Israel; for Jer. iii. 18; Hoses i. 11; Isa. xviii. 1—7, lxvi. 20; Zeph. iii. 10; Ezek. xxxvii. 16—22, all declare it; and in the face of such Divinely inspired quintuple testimony, the denial of man goes for a mere nothing; nay, for less than nothing at all.

FRESH EVIDENCE OF SPIRITUAL GOOD TO A MAN'S SOUL, FROM GOD'S BLESSING ON THE STUDY OF OUR IDENTITY.

DEAR SIR,—I think it is the duty of all believers in our Identity cause to look after, and make known as far as possible, any genuine cases they may find of real conversions arising from the study of this subject, for experience teaches me that our most bitter opponents are members of our Christian Churches.

I have, therefore, great pleasure in sending you the enclosed to publish, if you think well; it was sent to a friend of mine (not an Identity man), and I can vouch for its accuracy.

Sincerely yours,

Hull, August 16, 1879. GEO. DIMBLELEY.

After speaking of his worldly career, the writer says:—"Some little time since I had put into my hand a pamphlet relating to the Israel Identity question. I read it, and procured other books treating on the same subject; and as many of the proofs were from God's Holy Word, I was obliged to read my Bible, and as I read I believed, and so by the simple reading of God's Word I WAS SAVED.

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements
(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O O payable at Ludgate-circus.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed :—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

NEW BOOKS.

BLESSINGS AND CURSES, AND THEIR RELATION TO ISRAEL AND JUDAH.

In neat coloured cover, price 2d., post free 2½d.

BLESSINGS AND CURSES, AND THEIR RELATION TO ISRAEL AND JUDAH. By F. W. PHILLIPS, of Speedwell-road, Birmingham.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; and may be had, by ordering, of any Bookseller.

Price 1s. Post free, 1s. 1d.

ISRAEL'S CHRONOLOGICAL CHART, with EXPLANATORY NOTES.—This Chart, compiled from the Old Testament on a new system, gives the A.M. and B.C. dates of one hundred important events in Israel's history, and exhibits the perfect agreement of Scripture with the marks and measurements of the Great Pyramid of Ghizeh.

May be had of the Author, GEO. N. WALSH, Western Bank, Sheffield; of Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C., and of all booksellers.

Just published, price 2d., No. 1 of a

SERIES OF PAPERS OF "ISRAEL," by the Rev. R. DOUGLAS, M.A., Vicar of St. Stephen's, Sheffield. Subject: "The Purpose of God."

G. Slater, Snighill, and all booksellers.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

THE MIDNIGHT CRY; or, WORDS OF SOLEMN WARNING.

Second edition, price 1d.; post free, 1½d.; for distribution, 6s. per 100. W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

NEW PAMPHLET ON OUR IDENTITY.

NOW READY, price 9d., post free, 10d.

ARE WE ISRAELITES? THE TESTIMONY OF HISTORY, PHILOLOGY, AND ETHNOLOGY on the Subject. By the Rev. BOURCHIER WREY SAVILE, M.A., Rector of Shillingford, Exeter. With an Introduction by Philo-Israel.

CONTENTS: — Chapter I. Hard Speeches.—II. Opponents' Arguments.—III. Common Errors.—IV. The Saxon.—V. The Cymry.—VI. Historical Testimony.—VII. Philology.—VIII. Chief of the Nations.—IX. Multiplicity of Seed.—X. The Anglo-Saxon Race.—XI. Anglo-Israel.—XII. Summary.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row; Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; or of any Bookseller.

ARE ENGLISHMEN ISRAELITES?

MR. ROBERTS REFUTED.

REPLY TO MR. ROBERTS.

Now ready, price 2d.

A REPLY TO MR. ROBERTS ON THE EXETER HALL DEBATE, on the Subject, Are Englishmen Israelites? By ALEXANDER DUNN.

London: Published by W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

A REPLY TO MR. ROBERTS will be sent post free for 2½d., from the publisher, W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

Now ready, price 7d., post free 8½d.

THE SEPTEMBER MONTHLY PART OF THE BANNER OF ISRAEL. May be had, by ordering, of any bookseller or newsagent.

London: W. H Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row; and Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

BOOKS, ETC.

Will be published early next week, beautifully printed on toned paper, with Illustrations, handsome cloth, gilt, price 3s., post free, 3s. 3d.

THE LOST TEN TRIBES, AND

1882.

BY THE

REV. DR. JOSEPH WILD.

For full contents see Advertisements next week.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet Court, Fleet Street, E.C.

THE ANGLO-ISRAEL POSTBAG; OR, HOW ARTHUR CAME TO SEE IT.

THIRD EDITION of the ANGLO-ISRAEL POSTBAG; OR, HOW ARTHUR CAME TO SEE IT.

BY THE RIGHT REV.

BISHOP TITCOMB,

IS NOW READY. Two Editions are now published. The Eighteenpenny Edition, in Paper Covers, for general distribution. The Half-crown Edition, Printed on Toned Paper, Handsome Cloth Gilt.

THE ANGLO-ISRAEL POSTBAG contains Chapters on The Philological Difficulty—The Promises of God to the Hebrew Nation—To Joseph—To Ephraim—To the Kingdom of Israel, as distinct from Judah—The Anglo-Israel Theory and the Geographical March of Christianity—The Gates, &c., &c., &c.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

Now and Revised Edition, Price 6d. Cloth, gilt, 1s.

THE NEW OLD STORY, with an Introduction to a Marvellous Puzzle. The Story gives a sketch of the History of the Hebrews, shewing distinctly the difference between the Two Nations, Judah and Israel, the latter being the British. The Story also tells of the Great Pyramid, and explains how its wonderful meaning can be, as it is only understood by measurement. An Appendix explains "The Eastern Question." The Story is written with great simplicity, and interests young children. By A E I, Author of "The Answer to the Eastern Question."

W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

Price 2d. Post free 2½d.

MANASSEH AND THE UNITED STATES. An important Essay delivered before the "Lost Israel Identification Society," by the Rev. Joseph Wild, D.D., at Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, New York.

CONTENTS:—The Fulness of the Gentiles set in—For whom did God intend America—The Origin of the United States The Footsteps of Ephraim and Manasseh—The Will of Jacob made to Ephraim and Manasseh—Manasseh a People, and a Great People—Manasseh's Birthtime of Separation—Out of nearly Sixty Conquered Colonies the only one England ever Lost was that of Manasseh (America)—The Great Seal of the United States—Manasseh was brought up at the Door of the Pyramid, &c., &c.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.; and of any Bookseller.

Price 1d.; post free, 1½d.

GOD'S LOVE FOR ISRAEL, A GUARANTEE THAT HE WILL FULFIL HIS PROMISES TO ISRAEL. By JOHN GILDER SHAW.

Price 6d.; or with illustrative map, 8d.

BRITAIN (OR ISRAEL) THE FIFTH AND LAST, AND THE UNCONQUERABLE EMPIRE. By JOHN GILDER SHAW.

Price 3d.; post free, 3½d.

CHRONOLOGICAL CHART OF BRITISH VICTORIES OVER THE CONTINENTAL POWERS, ranging from the battle of Cressy (1346), to our last victory, the taking of Sebastopol, Sept. 8, 1855. Arranged by J. G. SHAW, of Leeds.

"We trust Mr. Shaw's labour in preparing this paper may be appreciated by the public and be largely sold."—Banner of Israel.

London: Published by Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; and may be had of the Author, 20 Park-row, Leeds, and of all booksellers.

Now ready, price One penny, post free 1½d. One dozen copies, post free 1s. 100 copies 6s., post free 7s.

THE IDENTITY OF THE BRITISH NATION WITH THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. THE CLUE TO THE EASTERN QUESTION. By C. W. E.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

BRISTOL LEAFLETS ON THE IDENTIFICATION. 1 to 9; 1s. per 100.

London: ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet street.

ASSOCIATIONS, ETC.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

President:—VISCOUNT FOLKESTONE, M.P.

A COURSE OF LECTURES will be delivered (D.V.) in the following places:—

BUDLEIGH SALTERTON, in the TOWN HALL.—Wednesday, September 10th, in the afternoon at 3, by DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, Esq., J.P. Subject: "Historical Evidences of Britain's Identity with Lost Israel." Chair will be taken by W. H. PETERS, Esq., J.P., of Harefield.

In the evening by the Rev. J. BILLINGTON, F.S.A., F.R.H.S. Subject: "Are Englishmen Israelites?" Chair will be taken at 7.30.

EXMOUTH, in the ALBERT HALL.—Thursday, September 11th, by the Rev. J. BILLINGTON, F.S.A., F.R.H.S. Subject: "Israel and Judah, Their Distinction and Difference." Chair will be taken at 3 o'clock, by W. H. PETERS, Esq., J.P., of Harefield.

In the evening by DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, Esq., J.P. Subject: "Lost Israel Identified with the British Nation." Chair will be taken at 7.30.

PLYMOUTH, in the MECHANICS' INSTITUTE.—Friday, September 12th, in the afternoon by DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, Esq., J.P. Subject: "Historical Evidences of Britain's Identity with Lost Israel." Chair will be taken at 3, by the Rev. J. M. HODGE, M.A.

In the evening by the Rev. J. BILLINGTON, F.S.A., F.R.H.S. Subject: "Anglo-Israelism and its Most Recent Criticisms." Chair will be taken at 8. It is expected His Worship THE MAYOR will preside.

The Rev. B. Wrey Savile, M.A., Rector of Shillingford; Colonel Savile; Captain G. de Courcy Hamilton; W. H. Peters, Esq., J.P., of Harefield, H. March Dunn, Esq., J.P., with other clergymen and gentlemen are expected to be present and assist in one or more of these lectures.

ADMISSION FREE.

Collections will be taken at the close of each Lecture for the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association, under whose auspices they are given.

Office—20, Warwick Lane, London, E.C.

SPECIAL NOTICE TO PERSONS RESIDING IN LONDON, INTERESTED IN OUR IDENTITY.

ANGLO-ISRAEL SERVICES. The friends of the cause are invited to attend SERVICES at EXETER HALL (Lower Hall), on Sunday next, September 14, at 11 a.m., and 6.30 p.m., to be conducted by Rev. H. MARRIOTT, M.A.

LIVERPOOL.—ALEXANDRA HALL, corner of Northumberland-street, Park-road. S. MEETINGS on the Identity held EVERY THURSDAY NIGHT at 8 p.m. On Thursday, September 18, 1879, a LECTURE will be delivered by Miss TAINSH. Subject, "God's Inheritance." Collection at the close in aid of Bishop Hillery's Mission.

TO AUTHORS. Authors desirous of issuing Works or Pamphlets on the great and increasingly interesting Question of the Identity of the Lost Ten Tribes with the British Nation, should first communicate with Robert Banks, of Racquet-court, Fleet-street, who has already been honoured by issuing, amongst others, the following works on the subject:

The Banner of Israel. Weekly 1d.; monthly 7d.

The Nation's Glory Leader. Weekly 1d.; quarterly 1s 4d.

The Pillar of Witness. By late Captain Tracey. Cloth 2s. 6d.; paper 1s 6d (second edition).

The Anglo-Israel Post Bag. By Bishop Titcomb. Cloth 2s. 6d.; paper 1s. 6d. (second edition).

The History of the House of Israel. By Philo-Israel. Cloth 1s.; paper 6d. (ninth thousand).

Price 4d.; post free, 6d.

NEBUCHADNEZZAR'S DREAM and THE BRITISH EMPIRE. By Ephraim. With Illustrative Prophetic Map.

"We are glad to see another attempt to connect Daniel's dream of the metallic image and "the stone which becomes a mountain," with the British Empire. It appears in the form of a letter to a friend abroad. The pamphlet, though very sketchy in its character and aim, is on the whole a useful little work."—Banner of Israel.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; Sold by W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row

PHOTOGRAPHIC PORTRAITS OF PHILO-ISRAEL, Editor of THE BANNER OF ISRAEL, Author of "The History of the House of Israel," &c., &c. Cabinet, 2s., post free; Carte-de-Visites, 1s., post free.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS 5, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 10, 1879. [All Rights Reserved.]

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. III. No. 142. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 17, 1879. [ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
The British Workman as "The Head and Not the Tail, Above Only and Not Beneath," Among the Gentiles	373
Dr. Adam Clarke on Psa. ii. 8.—By J. Dobeson	375
The Geography of the Gates. No. XXXII.—Sarawak	376
"Straws"	377
The Maories	378
"The Stars in their Courses Fought Against Sisera."—Judges v. 20	378
Correspondence	379
The Marquis of Salisbury on the Fiery Deluge	379

THE BRITISH WORKMÁN AS "THE HEAD AND NOT THE TAIL, ABOVE ONLY AND NOT BENEATH," AMONG THE GENTILES.

AT page 365, vol. ii. of the BANNER, we pointed out that the British-Israelite was "The Head and Not the Tail, Above Only and Not Beneath, Even in Respect to Music on the Continent of Europe." This was testified, we showed, at the Paris Exhibition when the International Competition took place there. In painting, we have also proved, the same results have been witnessed. And why? Because this nation being Israel, we must perforce, God's Word being true, respond to the predictions of the prophets of the great Jehovah. Since our national repentance, and after we turned to our Redeemer at the Reformation, we have, as we were destined to do, shown superiority in all ways to the Gentiles, and that in not one respect, but all. In reference to the individual British-workman, there is no doubt that some have been latterly led to suspect that after all he is beaten on the continent by the skilled artificers there among the Germans, the French, the Belgians, and the Swiss, whom having originally taught, we have, at last, come to experience the sad result that the pupil is equal, if not superior, to his teacher; that he is soberer, cheaper to employ, more thrifty, steadier, more industrious, and, therefore, altogether a very formidable rival to the vaunted British operative.

All this sounds dangerous for our views, and were it not for patriotism preventing the ready acceptance of such distasteful ideas, we suspect many among us, led by the teachings of our pessimists, looking also only to the effect of strikes and of the sad distresses they have brought in their wake, would be ready to adopt opinions which place the British working-man "the tail, but not the head," "beneath only, and not above" his Gentile competitor in labour on the continent.

We have now before us, however, the means of bringing this matter to a decisive test, and to ask a blind witness whose impartial testimony has been kindly gathered and printed for us by the Leeds Mercury of December, 1878, to give us the facts from his own personal observation in the various countries of Europe he visited in order to judge, inter alia, of this very question, as to the merits of the English workman versus his foreign rival. We shall let our "blind witness" now speak for himself, and we beg our readers carefully to note how exactly his testimony agrees with God's promises to "Israel obedient" as contained in Deut. xxviii. 8—13.

Our extract is called—

THE ENGLISHMAN ABROAD.

(From an Occasional Correspondent).

In the first of the fugitive letters—which now, alas! can be dated from no pleasant continental city—that I have recently contributed to the Leeds Mercury, describing some features of a tour in Central Europe, I promised to say something ere I closed, of the question of the English versus the foreign workman. My only right to say anything on the subject is that in a journey which has extended from the Straits of Dover to the Black Sea in one direction, and from Berlin to Bucharest in another, I have lost no opportunity of acquiring information on the question. Technical knowledge I have none; and being unable to emulate such fellow-townsmen as Mr. Bousfield, Mr. James Kitson, jun., or Mr. Greig in their acquaintance with the comparative values of special products of English and foreign industries, I have contented myself with inquiring into a simpler, but not less important branch of the subject—the value of the men themselves. "How do you find the workmen here? Are they equal to Englishmen, or better, or worse?" has been the question I have invariably addressed to those persons with whom I have met in my journey who were qualified to give me an opinion on the subject thus raised. I must necessarily summarise the answers I have received from them; but in what I am about to state it must be understood that I am giving the result of inquiries made in Prussia, in Saxony, in Bohemia, in Austria, in Hungary, and in Roumania.

"We find our Englishmen," said one gentleman who employs about a score of English mechanics, along with three or four score North Germans, "by far the best men we can possibly get. I have no doubt, indeed, that a single Englishman is worth two Germans."

"In what way?" I asked.

"In the power of using his head as well as his hands. Your German mechanic can do his routine work very well; and he will do it at wages of only half the amount paid to an Englishman; but let him get into any difficulty—such as the break-down of part of the machinery—and you see at once his inferiority to his English colleague. He doesn't know what to do; but his first idea is that he must make a great noise, and let everybody know that a terrible misfortune has happened. Then, if by any accident he is able to put the thing right again, he gets all the more credit from his master for his wonderful achievement; whilst if, on the other hand, he cannot do anything, he has the satisfaction of knowing that nobody has expected him to succeed in repairing the mischief. The Englishman, however, in such a case, says nothing to anybody; but he looks about him, finds out for himself where the injuries are, uses his wits, and gets the thing put right again before anybody is aware that an accident has happened."

Digitized by Google

"Yes," interrupted one of my companions, who happened to have a special knowledge of the subject; "but remember that you are speaking of picked Englishmen, carefully selected for you out of one of the largest manufacturing shops in Great Britain. You will not find that the average English workman has anything like the superiority to the average German that you claim for him."

"I am not so sure of that," pursued my original informant. "It is true that mine are picked men, but I have the pick of the Germans also, and my conclusion is, that whilst the German may be trusted to do a routine piece of work, in which he has been thoroughly trained, nearly, if not quite, as well as the Englishman, in all labour in which you use your head, or, as Opie said, 'mix your colours with brains,' the Englishman ranks far before all foreigners."

"You must except the Americans," said my travelling companion. "I have been in the United States, and I can vouch for the fact that if the English workman has more brain than the German, the American is still better provided than the Englishman in that respect."

"Well, it may be so; but I speak only of what I know from my own experience. I'll tell you one little fact that illustrates my point. When we send out a certain piece of machinery, we invariably send out two of our men to work it for a time, or rather to instruct the purchaser in the mode of working it. One is an Englishman, at say £3 per week, and the other a German at 20s. per week; the wages in both cases being paid by the purchaser. At the end of a certain period we withdraw one of these men, and we leave our customer to decide which of the two he will keep. In every case, so far, it is the German, the cheap man, who is sent back, and the Englishman, the dear one, who is retained."

"By the way, these Englishmen, I suppose, have nothing to do with any Trades' Union?" I ask.

"Nothing whatever. Trades' Unions would not do for me. I pay the men far better wages than they would get in England, and I expect them to work for me with their hearts and their heads, as well as their hands. I have no nonsense about limitation of hours or of labour; but when I want a thing done, I have it done at once. The men can play a little when the work is slack. I am thankful to say these Englishmen of mine never grumble, and hardly ever disappoint me in any way."

"And the Germans?"

"Oh, I have little trouble with the Germans either; though they are not so willing as the Englishmen. Once or twice I have found men among them who had got their heads stuffed with Socialist ideas, and who tried to breed discontent among the others. But I make short work of such fellows whenever I come across them."

"Ah, if our English workman would work for us at home as yours seem to do here," said my companion; "if they would give us, that is to say, their hearts and heads as well as their hands, everything would go on smoothly. The men would be far better paid; the masters would make more money; and the country would be richer and better able to meet foreign competition."

I have given this little conversation nearly verbatim, because it fairly represents the gist of what I heard in most of my inquiries into this subject. I think it may be taken for granted that the English workman is on the whole more intelligent and more "handy" than his continental brother. And I do not except even the highly-trained and educated North Germans from this comparison. Where fertility of resource, a power of adapting means to ends, quickness of decision, and ready-wittedness (to coin a convenient phrase) are needed, the Englishman need fear no rivalry on the continent of Europe.

Perhaps, ere I leave this part of my subject, I may say a word upon the question of foreign engineering. Again and again I have been told by competent authorities that the German engineering establishments would be still more dangerous competitors against England were it not for one circumstance—that is, the love of the highly-trained German for experiments based on theory. If he would consent simply to copy English plans and models, he would be a most formidable rival of the English engineer. But our insular methods of reaching certain ends are far too practical and too simple to please the doctrinaire German. He must improve upon our models, the improvements being based upon theories of his own. Not in one case out of ten thousand does he fail, in these circumstances, to produce a worse machine than that which he has professed to copy.

I return, however, from the German engineer to the English workman; and now I have a very painful statement to make. Though there was some conflict of evidence among those whom I examined upon other points, there was absolute unanimity on that with which I am now going to deal. Even those men who were warmest and most enthusiastic in their praise of the English workman abroad, had to concur with less favourable critics in the statement that one great and fatal flaw attaches to his character. It is his intemperance. Said one large manufacturer at Prague to me, "I have never since I came into Bohemia seen a drunken man in my workshop; but then I have no Englishmen about me." Similar testimony came to me on all hands; and, perhaps, the saddest of all the statements made were those which related to picked Englishmen, who had been steady enough at home, but who, being sent out to these lands of cheap wine and bad spirits, had fallen victims to our degrading national vice. And here let me apologise to the cheap wine I have just mentioned. It was not because they drank that wine that they became drunkards, but paradoxical as it may seem, because they did not drink it. The light and simple wines of Germany, Bohemia, and Austria might have been drunk without injury; but, unhappily, the English palate cannot relish these slightly acid beverages. The Englishman finds he can get some fiery stuff made out of corn or potatoes at a ridiculously cheap rate, and he discovers that this decoction has, at least, the merit of possessing the worst qualities which distinguish bad whisky or brandy at home. He flies to this fierce stimulant, scorning his foreign comrades who are satisfied with their glass of light native wine, and too soon he becomes a byword and a reproach to the country which has sent him forth.

Such is our blind witness' testimony! A glorious one as to our British workman's superiority to his Gentile rival in regard to skill and steady work, sad as to the character for intemperance, which, alas! nationally, he has obtained abroad (and shall we say at home?) for this same Israelitish vice (Isa. xxviii. 1—8).

This woe of Ephraim is, we know, being resolutely faced, and such remedies as the case allows are being applied by noble men and noble women banded together at home to stem a hideous torrent of evil which is sending thousands of Israel's sons, aye, and daughters too, to a dishonoured grave. All honour to these "Philo-Israelites" whose efforts to oppose "the enemy," now literally "coming in like a flood," must be very pleasing to the great Master above. The true, and only final, and complete remedy we see, however, is not teetotal plans nor temperance projects to dam up this flood; these are useful and necessary, but they cannot stay the torrent. "The LORD must lift up the standard" against the alcoholic "deluge" which is that "enemy" that has verily "come in like a flood" on poor, sinning Ephraim, and then only down it will sink (Isa. lix. 19). Israel will be free then from this great disgrace and national sin; and then, but not till then, will happen what is described in Isa. lix. 20, 21: "The Lord the Redeemer will come out of Zion" to the repentant, sobered House of Israel, and, thereafter, being blessed with the outpouring of the Holy Spirit (ver. 21) and new covenant blessing, she will hear the joyous Identity cry, "Arise (Israel), shine, for thy light hath come, and the glory of Jehovah is risen upon thee. For, behold, the darkness covers 'the earth' and gross darkness the people" (of "the earth"); "but the Lord has arisen upon THEE, and His GLORY is seen upon thee."

Reader, these are splendid prospects. They all arise from, and are connected with, our Identity. They call on us in solemn tones to redouble our efforts in order to take the first steps to bring on that chain of magnificent events which shall abolish national drunkenness (all other remedies being really failures) and make this the "righteous nation." That step is to "publish" till all know the GOD-honouring truth that

"LOST ISRAEL IS FOUND."

For the great Redeemer's whole heart and His whole soul in fact is centered on this discovery, since its result is to be

GOD'S GLORY.

Digitized by Google

DR. ADAM CLARKE ON PSALM II. 8.

By J. Dobeson.

About a month ago I was in Newcastle, and seeing some bills about a meeting for the promotion of Christianity among the Jews, I went to a church in Blackett-street, and there I heard a Jew, Mr. ——, I forget his name just now; but no matter, he made an excellent address, telling us his experience in trying to convince the Jews of their errors. Next I heard a clergyman, whose love for his Master and his colleague impressed me very much indeed in his favour. I thought his kindness would be sure to win the affections of the Jew. He told us how the Jews sometimes interrupted his meetings by calling him a blasphemer, and other names. The meeting was about terminated, and I confess I felt that I had profited by his address; but the rev. gentleman had some pamphlets to sell, and, telling us that he could not suffer us to go without guarding us against a terrible error at present known as the "Identity," he then commenced to do to others as he had been done by, and, like as the Jews had called him a blasphemer, he denounced his brethren who believe in the Identity as such. This last proceeding had a peculiar effect on me. I seemed to lose the good impressions at once which I had gained during the evening. I thought I would like to know his name, so I examined the bill on the door, and found it to be the Rev. Mr. Wilkinson. He said the second Psalm was wholly relating to the Messiah, so I thought that I would read it. I found that, when Jehovah had established David on the throne of Israel, under his power, David drove all his enemies before him; he rid Jerusalem of its enemies, in celebration of which he writes his 68th Psalm: "Let God arise, let His enemies be scattered. . . . . As smoke is driven away, so drive them away: as the wax melteth before the fire, so let the wicked perish in the presence of God."

When David had thus partly completed his designs against his enemies by freeing Jerusalem, he determined to have the ark established in the fortress of Zion, to which place it was conducted with great pomp, amidst the transports of public joy; the king himself, without crown and sceptre, clothed as a simple Levite, sang praises to the Lord before the ark. On approaching Mount Zion, he intoned the following canticle, the people repeating it as they marched to the solemn fête:

"The earth is the Lord's, and the fulness thereof; the world, and they that dwell therein.

"Who shall ascend into the hill of the Lord? or who shall stand in His holy place?

"This is the generation of them that seek Thy face, O God of Jacob. Lift up your heads, O ye gates . . . . and the King of glory shall come in. Who is the King of glory? The Lord strong and mighty, the Lord mighty in battle" (Psa. xxiv.).

Psa. cx. shows us still further the meeting of which we have just spoken in the 6th verse—that is, of the two chiefs of the people—Jehovah, the invisible Master, and the king, His sensible representative. Hence David writes his 110th Psalm.

"Jehovah has said to the king: Sit thou on My right hand, until I make thine enemies thy footstool.

"The Lord shall send the rod of thy strength out of Zion: rule thou in the midst of thine enemies.

"The Lord hath sworn, and will not repent. Thou art a priest for ever after his order.

"Jehovah at thy right hand shall break the heads of kings in the day of His wrath. He shall judge the heathen; he shall fill the places with dead bodies.

"Then, as a victorious warrior: he shall drink of the brook by the way; therefore his head shall he lift up."

Dr. Adam Clarke says: "The learned Venema has taken great pains to expound this Psalm; he considers it a Divine oracle, partly relating to David's Lord and partly to David himself."

But the tabernacle prepared in Zion was only a temporary dwelling-place for the ark. Now, when David made known to the prophet Nathan his intention of erecting a magnificent temple for the Lord, the prophet tells him God's will with regard to the sceptre, and that the grand work of the erection of a temple was reserved for his son.

But, despite David's last victories, Israel was still subject to the Philistines. David could not endure this idea; he determined to drive them still further back. Having done so, David turned to the Moabites, and exterminated the half of them, and made them pay tribute. Between these two enemies to the South of Judea appeared two other enemies, which were subdued in like manner. David cut to pieces the armies of the Syrians near the Euphrates, taking from them 17,000 horses and 20,000 men. After David had thus rid Israel of their enemies on the one side, he next turned to the other.

On the East there remained a powerful people who were still independent—the Ammonites. David, however, remembered the services which their king had rendered him in days gone by; and hearing of his death, he sent ambassadors to his son, his successor, with a message of condolence; but, instead of their being treated as such, they were taken for spies, and cruelly outraged. The late king's successor, hearing of David's intention to revenge this outrage, raised an army, to which he joined 30,000 men sent by the Syrians and other allies. But a double victory, obtained by Joab and his brother, the generals of David, broke the league. The Syrians now feared for themselves; their own safety was now to be considered, which resulted in a powerful alliance of all the people between the Jordan and the Euphrates, and even beyond these rivers.

At this combined effort on the part of David's enemies, he expresses his feelings towards them in the 2nd Psalm.

Thus he says: "Why do the heathen rage? why these vain projects of the people.

"The kings of the earth set themselves up, and the rulers take counsel together, against Jehovah and against His anointed."

Dr. Adam Clarke says: "But, as the word signifies the anointed person, it may refer first to David, as it does secondly to Christ."

"Let us break, say they, the bonds by which they enchain us; let us throw off their power."

Now David tells them: "He who inhabits the heavens shall laugh at them: and hold them in derision.

"He shall speak in His anger, and shall disperse them in His displeasure.

"I whom He has established king of Zion, over His holy mountain, will announce His commandments.

"The Lord has said unto me, Thou art My son; this day have I declared Thee to be so.

"Ask of Me, and I will give thee the heathen for thine heritage, and the limits of the earth for thy possession. Thou shalt govern them with a rod of iron; thou shalt break them in pieces like a potter's vessel.

"Now therefore be wise, O ye kings of the earth; be ye reformed.

"Serve the Lord in fear, accept His commandments. When His wrath is kindled but a little, lest ye perish altogether. Blessed are all they who put their trust in Him."

David on this occasion took the command himself; he passed the Jordan, and cut to pieces his enemies, 40,000 men, 700 chariots, and took possession of an immense country. Next he turned to the Ammonites, and served them in like manner.

Now, what do the Identity people affirm? Simply, that the proper rendering of the 8th verse ought to be thus: "Ask of Me, and I will give the nations. Thine inheritance and thy possession are the ends of the earth." Or, "I will give the heathen to thine inheritance."

Now, if Dr. Adam Clarke be right in saying that the word signifying the anointed person in the second verse refers to

Digitized by Google

David first, as it does secondly to Christ, it does not require much effort to understand the following parts of the Psalm. David did partially, by his victories against the heathen, fulfil his own prediction, it only remains for his posterity to do the same, until the time shall come when its complete fulfilment shall take place in Israel having the limits of the earth for their possession.

And, to my mind, England has either usurped Israel's position, or else is really Israel itself, only needing the return of the Messiah to complete the chapter. This latter event is, I think, looked upon by all men as being near at hand, even by the Rev. Mr. Wilkinson, as he told us the other night: for he de-declared that, when this Eastern difficulty came up, he felt that we were approaching a crisis, and the consequence was the result of a very useful and prosperous mission. But if he believes the return of the Jews is so near at hand, where is he going to get Israel from? Perhaps our friend has got a plan of his own, for I find, on reading Jer. iii. 18, that "the House of Judah shall walk to the House of Israel, and they shall come together out of the land of the North to the land that I have given for an inheritance unto your fathers."

If the Rev. Mr. Wilkinson will be generous towards himself, he will surely grant that this verse is very plain in its meaning.

THE GEOGRAPHY OF THE GATES.

(Continued from page 343.)

No. XXXII.—SARAWAK.

BETWEEN Singapore, at the extremity of the Malayan Peninsula, and Hong Kong in the China seas, there exist at least eleven degrees of longitude, and 1437 miles of a crowded sea-way. The distance, therefore, is too great for safety for a nation depending on its maritime supremacy and on the close proximity of its "Gates" whereby to consolidate its power. God therefore provided His people Israel with not one, but two spots, for rendezvous between those extreme limits, and to carry out this object gave our nation in the second largest island in the world its two Bornean Gates—Sarawak first and the island of Labuan off the capital of Borneo proper afterwards. It will be convenient to pass in review now the possession on the mainland, since it became the property of a British subject at the outset, and then describe the colony taken by the nation as a military point d'appui for naval and commercial purposes in the Eastern seas, and to assist our trade with China and the further East.

It must be understood that Sarawak is not in the strict sense a British national "Gate." But it is British for all that, because acquired by a Briton (now no more)—Sir James Brooke, K.C.B.—and held to-day for the good and benefit not only of the native inhabitants, but of the mother country as well. The latter, though not outwardly and ostensibly, is actually, however, the possessor of this valuable door or key which is destined to give to British-Israel the command more or less of the Northern parts of the great island continent of Borneo. Sarawak is the name not of a chief town merely, but of a territory, situated in the North-west extremity of Borneo, "extending from Tanjong Datu, to the entrance of the Samarahan river, a distance along the coast of about sixty miles in an E.S.E. direction." The average breadth of the territory is fifty miles. The manner of the transfer of this spot to the jurisdiction and power of an Israelite was unique. It deserves notice in our pages.

James Brooke, the son of an English member of the Indian Civil Service, was in the Indian army. He saw service in Burmah, was wounded therein, retired home, and thence set forth in 1830 to visit in his yacht the coast of Borneo. A series of events, too long to notice here, attached him to that land and people. He assisted Rajah Mudah Hassim, the local ruler, to put down an insurrection in his territories. In return he obtained from the Rajah a promise that the territory of Sarawak should be made over to him in perpetual sovereignty. The Rajah being dilatory in performing his promises, as usual with native princes everywhere, and Mr. Brooke being in danger from local intrigues, he appeared off Mudah Hassim's palace with his armed yacht, landed with a strong party, and then and there demanded of the Rajah that his right to the governorship of the territory and town of Sarawak should be affirmed by treaty, signed, sealed, delivered, and at once proclaimed. The Rajah saw the reasonableness of the thing when so presented to his consideration, and on Sept. 24, 1841, Mr. Brooke "was declared Rajah and Governor of Sarawak amidst the roar of cannon, and a general display of flags and banners from the shore and boats on the Sarawak river" (page 271, "Brooke's Narratives," vol. i.). What Rajah Brooke (afterwards Sir James Brooke, K.C.B.) did for the country of which he became really the British king was this (it was told us by the Times in 1860): "He suppressed piracy in the seas which wash the coasts of Sumatra and Borneo; he reduced to its true proportions the phantom of Dutch supremacy; he diffused through the Eastern Tribes a reverence and respect for the English name; he governed the Asiatics committed to his charge not only for themselves, but by themselves (an experiment never tried before), and he did it successfully. Finally, he caused the country of which he was the Rajah to be ruled in such wise, that the people enjoyed as much freedom as do the residents of the British Islands."

Capt. Rodney Mundy, R.N., in his account of Rajah Brooke's rule in Sarawak, states it as his opinion that the administration of this Englishman was wholly for good; he so far weaned his subjects from savage habits that he cured them of piracy, and made them the friend of the shipwrecked mariner; he opened up Borneo to British commerce, and gave the helping hand to all efforts for the evangelisation of his native subjects. Under his Rajahship the Dyaks who before had almost been destroyed by mis-government and rapine, are now enjoying prosperity, peace, and the blessings of the Gospel. The reader may judge how successful the Rajah's administration was when he reflects that "now forty years after the date Mr. Brooke first reached Borneo the annual exports of Sarawak are valued at nearly half a million sterling, while the imports—chiefly British manufactured goods—reach a still higher figure! All this has been effected by the enterprise of a single Englishman" (an Israelite), "who has thus created a market for our manufactures and a new source for the supply of valuable raw materials."

The capital of the Rajah's dominions consists of a European and a native town, built on opposite sides of the Sarawak river. The approach to it is defended by a battery. The population, consisting largely of Chinese immigrants, was sometime ago 8,000, now doubtless many more. The country rises rapidly from the sea-shore into mountains, and has a soil which freely produces sugar, cloves, nutmegs, cinnamon, and rice. It is covered with cocoa-nut trees, and is rich in mineral wealth. In Sarawak there are found gold, antimony, coal, nickel, diamonds, and other precious stones.

The situation of Sarawak at the North-west corner of Borneo, in the neighbourhood of the sea route to China and Japan from Singapore and India, gives it the very position required for one of Israel's Gates. Its acquisition by a British subject who was proud to place his power and influence at the feet of his Sovereign, was the means on Dec. 18, 1846, of our nation's acquisition of a veritable island Gate, Labuan, at the mouth of the bay whereon the capital of Borneo proper is situated, and that spot (to be described in our next) furnishes Israel's fleets with a noble harbour and rendezvous, first-rate coal for steamers, and such influence all along the Northern coasts of Borneo and in the neighbouring seas, that it acts (with Sarawak) as a most formidable naval "Gate," crushing out Bornean and Dyak piracy, also all the cruel practices of the native races, whereby formerly they made peaceful trade with the aboriginal tribes of the country utterly impossible, and even navigation in those seas extremely dangerous. We may nationally thank God—the God of Israel—for Sarawak, as a British "Gate," and that at the proper time He raised up Rajah James Brooke to secure it for us, in order to consolidate Israel's power and influence, wealth and commerce, in the Eastern seas.

Digitized by Google

(To be followed by a paper on Labuan.)

"STRAWS."

We put together a few of those small and inconsiderable atoms called "straws," that our readers may see, when we cast them out before us, "which way the wind blows." Here is one. It is an extract from the Sheffield Daily Telegraph of June 12, 1879. Writing on the subject of George Elliot's review on "Theophrastus," it says :—

Our authoress gives an able résume of the history of the Jews, in the course of which she points out that those qualities of independence, strong nationality, &c., on which we pride ourselves are the very qualities for which the Jews are most remarkable. Indeed, so close does she make the parallel that there are several passages which will, we fancy, delight the members of the Anglo-Israel persuasion, and which we fully expect to see quoted by the Banner of Israel as "Fresh Identifications of the English people with the Ten Tribes." Here are a few such passages :—

The superlative peculiarity in the Jews admitted, our affinity with them is only the more apparent when the elements of their peculiarity are discerned.

There is more likeness than contrast between the way we English got our island, and the way the Israelites got Canaan.

We must refer the passionate use of the Hebrew writings by the English to affinities of disposition between our race and the Jewish.

This is a pretty strong corroboration of our views by one writing blindly of our "origin," and is one of the straws indicating coming events, which even the Sheffield Daily Telegraph, though in a taunting sort of way, cannot fail to note.

We next ask our readers to turn with us to the Daily Telegraph of London, and in the issue of June 7th, 1879, to peruse a part of the account of the proceedings at the grave of the late Baron de Rothschild. Regarding the address delivered on that occasion, the account states :

It is impossible to describe the effect of this address, spoken as it was with a trembling voice, and often checked in the utterance by emotion. The true orator was shown in the very loss of self-control; and the more he failed in mastery of his own feelings, the greater was the command he exercised on the feelings of those around him. The Orientalisms which, as all readers of the Bible should know, adapt themselves with marvellous poetic sympathy to the rough Saxon tongue, seemed, as no doubt they were, natural to the speaker, whose beautiful prayer in conclusion breathed the very spirit of Divine pathos.

We should like our opponents to explain on their principles why Orientalisms taken from the Hebrew Scriptures "adapt themselves with marvellous poetic sympathy to the rough Saxon tongue?" We know—since we know the ethnic and philological sympathy existing between our race and the Hebrews who wrote and read the Scriptures. But to the Jews and to our opponents this must indeed be a curious puzzle. Here, then, is another straw pointing with no uncertain indication to our Hebrew origin.

Our third straw is one to which we allude with some concern. It is the following account of the New "Prophet," one calling himself "Elijah." Our opponents are making merry on this fact. They taunt us with the appearance of the man and his self-declared mission. We must bear the taunts and let the opponents enjoy their laugh just now at our expense. What and who this so-called "Prophet" may be, we know not. Whether he be sane or not, we cannot tell! Time must show. That we believe in this particular individual, we cannot admit. But that the true Elijah is yet to appear, perhaps soon, we cannot doubt. How, where, or when, his mission is to begin, we know not! Time again will show. Meanwhile this is a "straw showing which way the wind is blowing," and, with the other signs, indicating that our Identity is advancing, also that even the New "Prophet" is conducing to that effect.

The notice taken from the Globe of the 10th June, 1879, is as follows :—

A NEW "PROPHET."

A correspondent writes to us :—A man, representing himself to be the prophet Elijah, is creating quite a furore in and about the ancient city of Chichester. Hearing the fame of this remarkable individual, I drove over from Portsmouth last week to have an interview with him. Passing through North-street I observed a tall, handsome man, dressed in a picturesque garb of sheepskin, with a cap of the same material, and high cowhide boots, standing in the doorway of the George and Dragon Inn. I went inside and commenced to speak to him, but he retired upstairs. After some difficulty he was persuaded to come down into the best room of the house, where he received me. His appearance is very striking, having very good clean-cut features of Asiatic type, being tall in stature, and having an ever-ready smile, and his dark whiskers being set off to perfection by the light dress and cap. He carries a staff and small horn which he blows through the streets and announces his meetings, which are held in the People's Park and are very largely attended. He told me that he had been a landscape painter, and that eight months ago he had seen several visions, in which he was told to call himself Elijah at all meetings; and that he was the real prophet as foretold and promised in Malachi iv. 5. This verse is the whole foundation of his doctrine, which is to preach Anglo-Israelism to the English people, who, he states, are the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel; and if they do not listen to him and in time return to Jerusalem, a great famine is prophesied. It is almost unnecessary to say that at some of his meetings he has to encounter great opposition; sometimes he has been stoned, and at others made quite a hero of. He was lately in the South-east of England. He now expresses his determination to go all over London.

Should the New "Prophet" do as he says he will, and "go all over London," we anticipate that the labour of the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association will be considerably lightened, for the masses will then be put upon inquiry, and our Identity as the result of such "inquiry" will make gigantic progress indeed, at the very heart of this "great" nation. Thus will this so-called "prophet Elijah" be an indirect means of spreading this good news!

But there is a fourth and last "straw" which we must notice, and this is one which, set floating by the astronomers, is already pointing in the direction of the Great Pyramid, and of our Identity too, since it gives warning of what is coming in A.D. 1881-2. We allude to the evils dreaded for our globe in connection with the simultaneous perihelia of the four largest planets at and after the years in question.

Our quotation again is from the Globe, and the results dreaded—namely, pestilences, (we may add) "great earthquakes, famines, signs in the heavens, in the earth, and in the stars"—are just those that our blessed Lord Himself (foreseeing these perihelia for our times) declared should accompany the portent (Matt. xxiv. 7—29; Luke xxi. 11—25).

The Globe said in regard to the BAD TIMES COMING.

It might have been thought that the heavenly bodies had been doing their worst this year to make human beings uncomfortable. But we are now solemnly warned by a seer writing to a provincial journal that there are far worse things in store for the world during 1881. He bases this prediction on a variety of concurrent facts, or what he considers to be such. To begin with, "over a hundred and fifty authors have agreed that the final and great prophecy of Daniel will be fulfilled in 1881." Next, there is a prediction inscribed on the Great Pyramid, which Professor Piazzi Smyth is said to have interpreted as foretelling "a most critical period in the world's history" for the year after next. But these rather vague foreshadowings would not be of so much consequence were it not for the alarming fact that four of the principal planets, Jupiter, Uranus, Saturn, and Neptune, will be simultaneously "in perihelion" at that date, an untoward circumstance that has not happened for 2,000 years. It is well known—at least, our seer says so—that the perihelion of even a single great planet brings more or less woe to the earth in the shape of pestilence, and what, therefore, may we not expect when a quartette of the very largest are arrayed against us at one time? The terrible consequences can only be surmised from what happened in the sixth and sixteenth centuries, when but three out of the four named planets were coincident in perihelion. On both occasions dreadful pestilences ravaged the earth, and it therefore stands to reason that the addition of another planet to the hostile band will produce still more awful results to mankind.

Digitized by Google

THE MAORIES.

In our article on the subject of the "Maories" which appeared in No. 139, page 345, we stated that we were not aware what our treatment of the natives had been in the difficulties which it seems have recently occurred with them, and that we hoped and fervently trusted our conduct as a nation had not been bad or harsh towards the aboriginies. We have since seen the following letter, published in the Bristol Times and Mirror of the 20th August, 1879, which, being apposite to our question, we partly re-produce.

We are glad to find (supposing the information to be correct), that so far from oppressing the Maories, our treaty with them is one-sided in their favour, and that from its absurdly unequal conditions the native question was sooner or later sure to end in an explosion of the enormous Anglo-Saxon majority against the dwindling, but presuming, ignorant, semi-savage minority. The letter we allude to was as follows:—

THE NEW ZEALAND TROUBLE.

GENTLEMEN,—I read in your Saturday's issue a letter on the native troubles in New Zealand, and, having but recently come from there, would like to say a few words on the subject, more especially as, if it does come to a war, there will not be wanting those assertions about it being an Imperial policy that has landed us in such a mess. In fact, I noticed something of the sort in a Liberal member's speech at the close of the session.

In making such a charge he displayed gross ignorance of the existing native question in New Zealand. The outbreak will not be at all a surprise to those who know anything about the matter; the wonder is that it has not occurred before.

A state of things and feelings have existed for some time which was nearly sure to end in war. This was particularly the case on the border, where people felt that neither their lives nor property were safe from savages who had never learnt the fact that we were able to beat them whenever we pleased, and that we were, in fact, their masters, not equals.

One cannot blame them for this when our very treaty contains a clause that is not only deeply humiliating to us, but is, in fact, a direct encouragement to Maories to rob and murder, and consequently to make war.

I am not sure about the exact words, but the substance is this—that no white shall under any pretence whatever settle or travel in the Maori Reserve, or King country, as it is called, and that no Maori shall be arrested for any crime whatsoever if once he is in the King country.

If any white does go there, he is nearly certain to be killed, and this applies to Government officers as well as to private persons. If any white man's cattle stray over the border and he fetch them, he is liable to be shot, while a Maori can reclaim his if they stray into white territory; the white can't even recover stolen property.

I will take four cases of murder and three murderers at large.

Captain Todd, a Government officer, surveying for Government on the border, was asleep in his hut, with three men who were under him. A party of Maories entered his hut, killed him, and walked off with his tools and baggage. His murderers are still at large, and though the farce of putting a price on their heads is, I believe, still kept up, they will never be caught.

Te Kooti, the head murderer of the awful Poverty Bay massacre, is a well-known man, and one of the chief counsellors of the Maori king. There is a price on his head, but who dare arrest him in the King country? Yet out of a prosperous settlement he and his band left but one child alive!

Another Maori murdered a white close by Auckland, ran the gauntlet of the whole white population, and is now safe in the King country. He was demanded of the Maori King, but was refused.

Lastly, there was Fe Patti, who murdered a man in the very prison where he was locked up. He broke prison, but was caught a quarter of a mile from the border line. He was, I am glad to say, hanged, though the Maori King threatened to sack the province where he was captured.

Of these four, three have positively benefitted by their crime, while the death of the last was accompanied by a direct insult to the whites.

Of robberies of cattle, of cases where our own cattle were offered for sale under our very eyes, I could mention a score, but will not detain you.

The direct causes of the present war are the predictions of a witch doctor, backed by the powerful agency of a bad harvest and the influence of Te Kooti, who is ever crying for war.

This being the state of affairs, can it be wondered at that some of the whites are in favour of war—that all are against the present state of things continuing?

Can it be wondered at that, having given way to the natives in so many things, they should imagine we would give way in all, and that we are afraid of them?

But I should like to say something of the armed constabulary, mounted police, and volunteers, by whom this war will be fought.

They cannot hope to escape having hard things said of them any more than the soldiers in Natal. We shall, no doubt, have tales of slaughters of wounded Maories, and refusals to give quarter, with possible atrocity meetings.

I ask, is it likely that it should be otherwise? In all savage warfare there are bound to be barbarities on both sides. Is it likely that men, many of them with private wrongs to revenge, will stay their hands because of the clamours of humanitarians?

I am, FAIR PLAY.

[We are glad to think that recent accounts seem to show that the danger of an outbreak has passed away, and that of Maori wars we shall probably hear no more.—ED.]

"THE STARS IN THEIR COURSES FOUGHT AGAINST SISERA."—JUDGES v. 20.

MR. J. THOMSON in his paper on the above subject, published at page 137, BANNER No. 118, pointed out how great was our debt of gratitude to Almighty God for His mercy to us as a nation in giving our soldiery in Afghanistan, last winter, mild open weather, while we had the severe prolonged winter to endure in our own happy and secure home. A correspondent of the Bristol Times and Mirror wrote to that journal on July 23rd, 1879, commenting on the same subject, and he writes as follows, pointing out more recent mercies in Zululand, which, no doubt, contributed to the late decisive successes in battle. His letter is as follows:

THE WEATHER.

GENTLEMEN,—Will you allow me to call attention to the following curious coincidence, to say the least?—Last winter, when the cold in this country was so abnormally severe and long-continued, it was remarked that the weather in Afghanistan was unusually mild and favourable for our troops. And again at the present time, when we have been deluged with rain, the heat of South Africa has been comparatively temperate, and therefore beneficial to Europeans. Is not this suggestive, at any rate, of cause and effect, and of an overruling Providence that controls, directs, and modifies the laws that He has made? At least, it is some consolation to reflect that while at home we are suffering discomfort and loss, our fellow-countrymen fighting our battles abroad have enjoyed a corresponding alleviation of the necessary hardships of a soldier's life.

Yours faithfully, STET PRO RATIONE VOLUNTAS.

We are sure our readers see the Lord's hand in all this, and join us in praising Him for His love and faithfulness to His people Israel.

Digitized by Google

Correspondence.

TO THE REV. J. B. CLIFFORD, M.A., OF ST. MATTHEW'S CHURCH, BRISTOL.

SIR,—A friend having sent me your second pamphlet on the "Anglo-Israel" controversy, and seeing therein some personal remarks on myself, I shall endeavour to make my reply as brief as possible. I observe, at p. 20, in a foot-note, you condemn me for not quoting that eminent commentator, Dr. Gill, as fully as you wished. I have not the BANNER of July 16 to refer to, but I accept your quotation of my words as doubtless correct. But when you find fault with me for not quoting Gill at greater length, I would observe that I have far greater occasion for complaint at your omission in not noticing that I take the same view as Gill does in applying Psa. ii. 8 to Christ and the Gentile world. I have done so at p. 7 of my pamphlet, "Are We Israelites?" using, at the same time, the argument that, as I know Christian men who interpret the passage differently, I say, "Is that any reason why I should 'revile' those who differ from my interpretation in the way Mr. Clifford has done? God forbid! I should then be verily guilty of proving that I had little or none of the fruits of the Spirit, which consist, not of 'bitterness and wrath, and anger and clamour,' but of 'meekness and gentleness, and love and peace.'"

In the next page (21) you quote, with deserved approval, the scholarship of the Bishop of Gloucester and Bristol, but chiefly because, as he says, no "professed scholar or ethnologist had entertained" the Anglo-Israel Question for a moment. If the Anglo-Israelites had no opponent more skilled in ethnography than you appear to be, they would not have much cause to fear; nor would your diocesan, probably, have gone so far as you wish to make him appear to have done in condemnation of this system. At all events, he could not by any possibility have approved of your "hard speeches" and "reviling" of opponents, as, only a few months ago, when sending him a work in which I had exposed the errors and the language of the Ritualists—in which latter respect you have so faithfully copied their example—your diocesan, while expressing his opinion that my "useful volume will do a great deal of good," added, "I have often thought that an exhibition of the violence, vulgarity, and totally un-Christian mode of writing and speaking adopted by leading Ritualists might go far to show to reasonable people that the Spirit of God could not be with them—for His fruits are 'love and peace.'"

I observe, at p. 15 of your pamphlet, that you comfort yourself by alleging what, compared with your other utterances, appear much less objectionable words, such as "a mass of fable and nonsense," "mystic trash and confusion," "the following nonsense," "this profound absurdity," &c.; and you prove your competency to be my censor by speaking of the "Saxon Chronicle" in the following way:—"If one traces the genealogy of our King Alfred back to Shem, another traces it back to Odin or Woden!!!" I have not time to point out at length the great mistake you have made in this single sentence, but I recommend to your careful attention any of the six ancient copies of the "Saxon Chronicle" which are known to exist, by which you will learn that whereas Woden, from whom every one of the kings of the Heptarchy trace their pedigree without the omission of a single link, lived about the time of the Christian era, the "Chronicle" traces back the pedigree of Woden himself (whether correctly or not is of no consequence in our present dispute) some 25 centuries earlier, to the time of Shem and Noah! So I venture to suggest that you had better study the subject a little more before asserting that some copies of the "Chronicle" give our Saxon kings a Semitic origin, while other copies trace their pedigree to Odin or Woden, whom you consider a son of Ham!

I am at a loss to understand what you mean by placing on your title-page, "Ham's descendants, especially Ephraim and Manasseh." If you mean to say that Joseph's sons were descended from Ham, you are greatly mistaken, as every student of Scripture well knows that Abraham was of a Semitic, and not of an Hamitic, race. If, however, you mean that the Anglo-Saxon race—which claims to be descended from Ephraim and Manasseh—are of the line of Ham, no one who knows anything of ethnographic science is likely to be misled by such a statement. Anyone who has the slightest knowledge of that science will tell you that the Egyptians were, if you like, descended from Ham; and it is equally clear that the Scythians and Cymry were not.

It is not on this point, however, that I think it necessary to dwell, but rather to the extraordinary strength of your language, so unaccountable in anyone professing to be a minister of Christ. I deeply regret to find that you have been surpassed in your attack upon Christian men, who interpret prophecy differently from yourself, by the Rev. John Wilkinson, a Dissenting minister of London, who has termed those who hold Anglo-Israel views "devil-inspired men!!!" Oh! when will men learn that such violence is the very reverse of that heavenly wisdom which is "first pure, then peaceable, gentle, and easy to be entreated?" &c. Praying that the Spirit of God may open your eyes to see the wrong you have done to others, and to soften your heart towards those who believe that we are descended from the House of Israel,

I remain, Sir, yours faithfully,

BOURCHIER WREY SAVILE,
(Rector of Shillingford.)

Shillingford Rectory, Exeter,
Aug. 23, 1879.

P.S.—I observe, at p. 16, that you endeavour to cast ridicule upon my remark that, in the "Saxon Chronicle," the pedigree of King Alfred "is traced up link by link, though many generations are omitted." On which you remark, "That it is not traced up link by link." If you will study attentively the first chapter of St. Matthew's Gospel, you will find that the evangelist, in recording Christ's pedigree, speaks of Salmon as the father of Booz, by Rahab, the woman who preserved the spies at the time of the Eisode, B.C. 1450; and that Booz was the father of Obed, who was the grandfather of David, who lived down to B.C. 1018. Who does not see that there must be many links wanting in this genealogical record? Yet who would think of ridiculing anyone who should say that the evangelist traces up the pedigree of Christ from David to Abraham link by link!

Aug. 25, 1879.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

SIR,—I have not noticed that anyone has as yet drawn attention to what is a practical confirmation of the Grand Gallery Great Pyramid dates, to be found in the "Horæ Apocalypticæ," by the Rev. E. B. Elliott, M.A., vol. ii., p. 433 et seq., where he gives his exposition of Rev. x., the vision and oath of the angel. He says, in effect, that the paragraph which is rendered in the Authorised Version, "That there should be time no longer," is wrongly translated, and would be more correctly stated by the words, "That the time shall not yet be." The only objection to this being, that the definite article is not in the original.

In vol. iii., p. 1430, he refers to the subject again. Speaking of this same phrase, he says: "If, as Messrs. Bickersteth and Birks would construe it," the kronos, &c., "in the angel's oath, in Apoc. x. 6, be meant, 'A year shall not elapse ere the consummation'—i.e., a prophetic year, whether 360 or 365 natural years," and so on.

Now, if the above construction be the true one, it only remains for us to find out when the Reformation commenced (for so Mr. Elliott interprets the vision of the angel). The first great public event which drew attention at that period was when Luther, on Oct. 31st, 1517, nailed his celebrated theses to the church door at Wittenberg. Adding, then, to this date 360 and 365 years, it gives us 1877 and 1882 respectively, the very dates of the two terminations of the Grand Gallery.

Allow me to earnestly commend to all students of prophecy this most thorough work of Mr. Elliott, which, published in 1844, speaks with even greater force now, as our knowledge increases.

I am, Sir, yours sincerely,

E. P. P.

Aug. 27, 1879.

THE MARQUIS OF SALISBURY ON THE FIERY DELUGE.

THE noble Marquis, on May 16, 1879, in his speech in the House of Lords on the Duke of Argyle's motion against the Government policy, stated in his peroration regarding his efforts to preserve the Ottoman Empire when the Berlin Treaty was under discussion in that city, as follows:—

"We cannot revive the dead; and if the gloomy auguries that we hear on the other side are true, of course the efforts of diplomatists and statesmen are worthless. But we can at least give time for ascertaining whether these gloomy anticipations are correct, or whether there is not really that promise of the fulfilment of the brighter hopes that we have entertained, and at all events of postponing what will be one of the most terrible visitations that can befall the world whenever it may occur. (Hear, hear.) This result, we believe, the Berlin Treaty has achieved, and that it has been achieved without the shedding of a drop of English blood, is a matter on which we may congratulate ourselves." (Cheers.)

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements

(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O O payable at Ludgate-circus.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed :—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

Temporary Office:
20, WARWICK LANE, LONDON, E.C.

President:
VISCOUNT FOLKESTONE, M.P.

Vice-Presidents:
Admiral DUNN, Weston-Super-Mare.
Captain E. WEBSTER, Stirling.
Rev. A. J. J. CACHEMAILLE, M.A., Vicar of St. Mary's, Oldham.
Dr. J. M. GRANT, Surgeon-General, Camp, Aldershot.
Rev. C. W. HICKSON, M.A., Vicar of St. Bartholomew's, Bristol.
Rev. G. A. ROGERS, M.A., Vicar of Christ Church, Dover.
W. H. PETERS, Esq., J.P. Exeter.
BOOTH MASON, Esq., Arley House, Leamington.
J. H. WELDON, Esq., J.P., Kilmallock, Ireland.
HENRY LESLIE, Esq., Conduit-street, W.
Lieut.-Colonel W. H. LARKINS, Hastings.
JOHN T. GOTT, Esq., Stockton-on-Tees.

Chairman of Committee:
Mr. E. W. BIRD (PHILO-ISRAEL), Bristol.

Committee:
Major-General WM. HILL, Bath.
Lieut.-Colonel BENTINCK, Upper Grosvenor-street, W.
Capt. BAYLY, Streatham, S.W., and Trinity House, E.C.
Mr. JOHN S. ANDERSON, Upper Norwood, S.E.
Mr. ROBERT BANKS, London, E.C.
Mr. BENTINCK CANNEY, Lewisham, S.E.
FREDERICK CLIFT, B.A., LL.D., Upper Norwood, S.E.
Mr. FREDERICK C. DANVERS, C.E., India Office, W.
Mr. JOHN T. FLETCHER, J.P., C.L., Upper Norwood, S.E.
Rev. F. R. A. GLOVER, M.A., St. James, London, W.
Mr. H. L. GUERRIER, Tooting, S.W.
Mr. W. H. GUEST, London, E.C.
Mr. WILLIAM HASLAM, 2, Springfield, Clapton.
Mr. CHARLES HORNER, Mortlake, S.W.
Mr. W. W. INCE, Douglas, Isle of Man.
Mr. DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, J.P., St. John's-wood, N.W.
Mr. H. H. PAIN, Bromley, Kent, S.E.
Dr. HODSON RUGG, St. John's-wood, N.W.
Mr. J. L. WOOD, New Southgate, N.

Bankers:
CITY BANK, Ludgate-hill, E.C.

Hon. Sec.:
Rev. JAMES BILLINGTON, F.S.A.

This Association has been established to bind in closer union the many friends who rejoice in having a portion with the long Lost Tribes of the House of Israel; also to extend the knowledge of the truth that the Anglo-Saxon races are now identified with those Lost Tribes of the House of Israel. These objects, it is thought, will be best accomplished by means of Drawing Room and Public Meetings, by Sermons, Lectures, Bible Readings, by the diffusion of Literature upon the subject, and by such other ways and means as the Committee may from time to time determine.

Members' Annual Subscriptions is not less than 2s. 6d per annum.

Donations and Subscriptions are needed to carry on the work.

Now Ready, price 9d., post free, 10d.

ARE WE ISRAELITES? THE TESTIMONY OF HISTORY, PHILOLOGY, AND ETHNOLOGY on the Subject. By the Rev. BOURCHIER WREY SAVILE, M.A., Rector of Shillingford, Exeter. With an Introduction by Philo-Israel.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row; Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; or of any Bookseller.

Now ready, price 2d.

A REPLY TO MR. ROBERTS ON THE EXETER HALL DEBATE, on the Subject, Are Englishmen Israelites? By ALEXANDER DUNN.

MERRICK'S PATENT BELT and BRACE SUSPENSION TRUSS. Washable, Efficient, and Comfortable. No steel spring or hard pad. Pamphlets post free. Address, mentioning this advertisement, "Patentee," No. 4, Lower Park-row, Bristol.

NEW BOOKS.

NEW WORK BY DR. WILD.

NOW READY, price 3s., post free 3s. 3d. Handsome cloth, gilt, printed on toned paper and illustrated.

THE LOST TEN TRIBES, AND 1882.

BY THE

REV. DR. JOSEPH WILD,
Of Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Printed and published by

ROBERT BANKS, RACQUET COURT, FLEET ST., LONDON, E.C.

And may be had, by ordering, of any Bookseller.

EXTRACT FROM PREFACE:—

The main idea I wish to convey in this book, is that God is conducting His Providence through His ancient chosen people, Israel, whom I believe are found in the Saxon race. And His throne on earth, through which flow the purposes of Providence, is David's throne, which I believe to be at present the English throne. Queen Victoria (and God bless her) I believe to be of David's seed. The United States fulfils the rôle of the Tribe of Manasseh. Therefore, to understand the prophecies, Providence, and the present movements of nations, as well as the future lot and destiny of each, we must read the Scriptures in this light. God has made the children of Israel and throne of David His executive, in time, on earth. They are His executive for civilisation, evangelisation, order, and conquest. Through them God will conquer the world to an universal peace. As Moses was to God, so is Israel. Moses being a Divine executor, was to the people a god—so is Israel to all mankind. Spiritual Israel will come through literal Israel.

CONTENTS:—

DISCOURSE I.—KEY DISTINCTIONS.

DISCURSE II.—ISRAEL AND THE GATES.
Israel—How the Gates of his enemies are to be given him—By this sign Lost Israel may be known—The giving will correspond to the multiplying—The promise, in this day, is rapidly fulfilling—England, Disraeli, "Tancred," and Russia.

DISCOURSE III.—ISRAEL AND TERRITORY.
Promises to Israel—Material nature—Location of the Tribes in Christ's day—God's Providence—British and American rule—"Life from the dead"—Teaching the Nations peaceful arbitration—England and Russia—Afghanistan falls to Anglo-Israel—God's political geography—Anglo-Saxon evangelisation—Russia opposing it—British and Russian outposts in contact—Wail of Judah—Earth's girdle.

DISCOURSE IV.—ISRAEL AND POPULATION.
Prophetic latter days—Our bearings in the ages—Unwise impatience—Israel to be always a nation—Her Empire—Historic career of and future of England, America, and Judah—Relative increase of population—The Infidel Saxon—Jewish, British, and American interests one—A full end of all nations but Israel—Famine henceforth only for the heathen—Arbitration to be enforced by Israel—American absorption—Startling figures of future population—The balance of power.

DISCOURSE V.—ISRAEL AND LANGUAGE.
Latter day prophetic promises—Time of Israel's revival—Pyramid testimony—British Island population in 1882—Affinity between the English and Hebrew—Cell of the honey bee—Origin of language—Lion of languages—Foreign testimony—All tongues indigenous but English—The pre-millenial tokens.

DISCOURSE VI.—ISRAEL AND GENTILE FULNESS.
Meaning of the Gentile fulness—Blessings through Judah and Ephraim—Best religion—Jews outwitted—Why Benjamin was kept at Jerusalem—French Protestantism—Gentile fulness contemporary with to-day—What is it—Turkey exceptional.

DISCOURSE VII.—DREAM IMAGE OF NEBUCHADNEZZAR.
Future history of the world—The destruction of the Papacy commenced—Ireland to be free and independent of England and Rome—Future glory of Britain and the United States.

DISCOURSE VIII.—LITTLE HORN AND TURKEY.
The Turks the Ishmaelites—England and Russia to partition the Mahommedan Empire—Why England sympathises with Turkey.

DISCOURSE IX.—LITTLE HORN AND ANTI-CHRIST.
Prophetic wonders—Twenty marks of the monster—The Berlin Congress—Anti-Christs many—Mistakes by writers.

DISCOURSE X.—ANTI-CHRIST AND LITTLE HORN.
Second Discourse on the m nster—Who he will be and his name—How he will obtain power—Trouble for Germany, France, and Russia—Communism—Romanism—Shakers—Matthias, Westchester Prophet.

NEW BOOKS.

CONTENTS OF DR. WILD'S NEW BOOK—continued.

DISCOURSE XI.—THE TWO WITNESSES.
Troublous times—Appearance of the witnesses—Who they are—How they can be identified—Their mission work and suffering—The time and circumstances of Christ's coming.

DISCOURSE XII.—MOSES AND ELIJAH.
More about the two witnesses—Mormonism—God ruling among the nations—Career of the two witnesses—Anti-Christ—The throne and House of David.

DISCOURSE XIII.—BATTLE OF ARMAGEDDON.
The combatants on both sides—Who "The Kings of the East" are—The great Napoleonic idea—Disraeli, Lincoln, and Grant—England's policy in Turkey—Future wars and intrigues—The great battle field—Gathering of the nations—Earthquakes—Jerusalem as a seaport.

DISCOURSE XIV.—ARMAGEDDON AND THE PYRAMID.
The forces in the battle—Time of its occurrence—Mistakes of Adventists—A Church "strike" wanted—The hard times after 1882—History of the world till 1935—Hine's theory.

DISCOURSE XV.—WONDERS OF THE FUTURE.
Purpose of the flood—The Abrahamic current—Rending Mount Olivet—Former earthquakes—Boundaries of Palestine—Dan and Gad to guard the "gates"—Gad the Scotchman—The future Jerusalem—The Dead Sea and the Mediterranean to be joined—Mistake of spiritualising everything.

DISCOURSE XVI.—NINETEEN HUNDRED AND FIFTY-SEVEN.
"Signs of the times"—The return to Jerusalem—Forces of Russia and England—Present locality of ancient nations—Origin of American Republicanism—Federation of the nations coming—Evolution and Devolution.

DISCOURSE XVII.—THE STONE WITNESS.
The Great Pyramid—Who Job was—Who built the Pyramid—What it was built for—An epitome of the earth—The history of man contained in it, past and future—Science and the Bible, etc., etc.

DISCOURSE XVIII.—SIGNS AND WONDERS.
The stone prophet in the wilderness—No war for four years—The great struggle to commence in 1882—Prussia ancient Assyria—England, Germany, and Egypt to be allies—The future history of the world—The Philistines the Southern Irish—Who their great ancestor was, etc.

DISCOURSE XIX.—THE THRONE OF DAVID.
England's prophecy fulfilled in the Berlin Congress—The harp of Tara the harp of Israel—The future European alliances—Royal succession of the House of Israel.

DISCOURSE XX.—JEREMIAH AND ST. PATRICK.
The prophet's commission—His life—The tribes in his day—Landing of Jeremiah in Ireland—What he brought with him—Colonisation of Ireland—Jeremiah the founder of the ancient Irish government and religion—Tea Tephi and Heremon—The ancient Irish flag—The harp and lion—Season of Ireland's historical prestige—Causes of her decline—St. Patrick a Benjaminite—How Rome destroyed Jeremiah's memory among the Irish—Destruction of Tara—Ulster never conquered—Irish independence—Ark of the covenant—Ruins of Tara.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet Court, Fleet Street, E.C.

NEW PAMPHLET ON OUR IDENTITY WITH LOST ISRAEL.

Now ready, price 2d., post free 2½d., in neat coloured cover.

AMMI;
OR,
THE CHOSEN PEOPLE,
BY MISS BIRD.

Tracing the descent of the British people from Abraham, the "friend of God," and showing that true science, history, philology, and ethnology, are on the side of the Identity of the Anglo-Saxon race with the Ten Lost Tribes.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

BLESSINGS AND CURSES,
AND THEIR
RELATION TO ISRAEL AND JUDAH.

In neat coloured cover, price 2d., post free 2½d.

BLESSINGS AND CURSES, AND THEIR RELATION TO ISRAEL AND JUDAH. By F. W. PHILLIPS, of Speedwell-road, Birmingham.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; and may be had, by ordering, of any Bookseller.

Price 2d. Post free 2½d.

MANASSEH AND THE UNITED STATES.

An important Essay delivered before the "Lost Israel Identification Society," by the Rev. Joseph Wild, D.D., at Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, New York.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS 5, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW, WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 17, 1879.

[All Rights Reserved.]

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. III. No. 143. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 24, 1879. [ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
Israel's Asiatic "Watch Tower," and "Treacherous" Afghanistan	381
Cetywayo Captured	382
A Battle of Israel.—Isandlwana	382
Have They No Grain That They Offer Us Chaff? By L. P.	382
"The Stars in Their Courses Fought Against Sisera."—Judges v. 20	383
The Pepul Tree	384
The Record on the Identity	384
Philological and Historical Links. By L. C. Vesey	385
The Great Earthquake and the Federation of Israel's Nations as Foreseen Even by Foreigners	385
Hath God Cast Away His People?	386
St. Paul on Our Identity with Israel. By the Rev. A. J. J. Cachemaille, M.A.	386
Correspondence	387

ISRAEL'S ASIATIC "WATCH TOWER," AND "TREACHEROUS" AFGHANISTAN.

WE had, according to a Bristol paper, acquired an excellent "Watch Tower" in Asia, from which we could survey the movements of all comers from Central Asia. That watch tower was Cabul. There the late Sir Louis Cavagnari, having been magnificently received in the capital of our late enemy, was (apparently) safely and sumptuously located as the ambassador, or resident, deputed by the British Government to the Court of the Ameer.

One after another, said our provincial contemporary, the predictions of our pessimists had been falsified. We should never subdue the hill tribes, they said. It was easily done! The Afghans, a warlike and independent race, would never submit to a partition of their fatherland. They have done so! If we could hold a frontier line advanced beyond our old one, we should be at perpetual war with the nations who rule the Passes. They have apparently become our very good friends! Lastly, if we forced a resident upon the Ameer, "he would be sullenly received, be the subject of perpetual suspicion, and would stand a good chance of falling a victim to popular resentment." These last anticipations, as our readers well know, have, alas! been terribly realised! Our ambassador and his personal staff and British native guard were left by the Afghan ruler to the tender mercies of a treacherous and blood-thirsty mutinous soldiery, who, on the evening of the 3rd September, 1879, broke into the envoy's utterly indefensible quarters in the Bala Hissar, set it on fire, and murdered him! The complicity of the Ameer in this dreadful crime is not proved, nor is it very probable. But we wonder with extreme surprise that Sir Louis Cavagnari consented to be so quartered; also that the Ameer, if innocent, proposed that his honoured guest, the envoy of the British Queen, should be provided with a residence, not in the Bala Hissar's fortress, but in a part of the city where no adequate defence against popular violence could possibly be attempted; nay, where destruction was certain, if those scenes of 1841 should be re-enacted, during which Sir Alexander Burnes met his death under somewhat similar circumstances. This event is doubtless a terrible and a startling one! But, regarded in the light of our Identity, we are not sure that it was unexpected! The Lord gave us the Passes, which are "the Gates of India." He also gave into our hands the lands and cities of our late enemies up to Candahar, the Shaturgardan Pass, Jellalabad, and the Gundamuk defile. But we refused to hold them! We restored them again to the Afghans, contenting ourselves with retaining "the Gates" only, leaving Afghan territory intact. We see in this event which has just occurred, a warning from our God that He meant us to occupy a more commanding position in the heart of the Afghan lands than we ever wished or proposed to hold. As by the disaster of Insandlwana, He forced us to conquer, to divide, and thus virtually to annex Zululand, preparatory to the gift of all Central Africa to our race, so we see by the catastrophe which has just occurred that He means us now to occupy the Afghan capital in force, to uphold the Sovereign there by military authority, to consolidate our power nearer to Cabul itself by the occupation of the territory we recently abandoned, and thus lead to what we in our short-sightedness considered to be impolitic and dangerous—namely, the assumption of the protectorate over the whole of Afghanistan. Ere long we shall see these results no doubt flow from the murder of our noble, deeply-lamented envoy, Sir Louis Cavagnari and his retinue. Hitherto God has greatly favoured us in the results of the past Afghan campaign. He has given to our arms a complete, a wonderful, almost a bloodless triumph, proving, as clearly as facts could show it, that we are indeed God's people Israel, to whom just such successes as these were promised.

The results of these operations disposes of the gloomy anticipations of those who regarded our recent war in Afghanistan, and our late complications with Russia in the East, as the results of national sin and God's resolve to humble us, thereby teaching us the bitterness thereof. We deserve, no doubt, all that our opponents allege, and think we shall incur, as the results of the Divine wrath. But our antagonists forget who and what manner of people we are. We are they to whom God has given a promise upon oath that He will not be wrath with them nor rebuke them any more (Isa liv. 9). "No weapon that is formed against us," He says, "shall prosper," and with such an assurance as that, why need we fear? Why should we insult God's truth and faithfulness by suspecting Him of a breach of His covenant towards His people Israel? Why should we flatly contradict His words and declare that His unconditional promises in Isa. liv. 9 were really conditional on our deserving His blessings, ceasing, in fact, to do evil, after first learning to do well? The fact is, our critics and opponents fail to see what God proposes to do for us at this great crisis of our history. Doubtless the whole national head of Israel is "sick," "the whole heart is faint;" but the only remedy to meet the case is the one promised! The Lord Himself will make the scarlet-dyed sins "white as snow," "though red as crimson, they shall be as wool" (Isa. i. 6, 18). The true cure of all Israel's national iniquities is that New Covenant outpouring on the whole race promised in Jer. xxxi. 33, and Heb. viii. 10—12, when the law of God will be "put in Israel's inward parts, and written in their hearts; when He will be their God, they His people; when they all shall know the Lord from the least of them to the greatest of them; when He will forgive their iniquity and remember their sin no more." May that day soon be here! May Israel soon be saved in the Lord! And then, disasters such as we are now mourning will be found to be only God's mercy to His wayward people, forcing them to follow out His will, and to put aside their unwillingness to comply with His wise Providence in reference to His people Israel.

Digitized by Google

CETYWAYO CAPTURED.

ON the 28th August, 1879, the despot who defied the armies of Israel so long in Zululand was captured by Major Marter, 1st K. D. G., and is now Israel's prisoner! We thank God for this mercy! God helping us, we "went through" at Ulundi; we "trod down" the Zulu army; we "tore them in pieces;" and now there has been "NONE to deliver" the fugitive king from Israel's hands (Micah v. 8). Surely all men see in these things proofs of our Identity? Israel! Psaise YE the Lord!—ED.

A BATTLE OF ISRAEL.

"I will correct thee in measure."

ISANDLWANA.

WHO shall the mournful story tell
Of the brave and true who fought so well,
Who dauntless fought and nobly fell,
When thy grey monumental height
At noon beheld the desperate fight,
God's truth! it was a sorry sight,
Oh ISANDLWANA!

Who, earlier, on that fatal morn
Saw DURNFORD'S levies backward borne,
The edge of battle frayed and torn;—
When RUSSELL fell, the flank was crossed,
The battery, men, and mules were lost,
And driven,—like wreck that's tempest tossed!

As sweeps the darkening storm along,
As scours the torrent swift and strong,
So spread the foemen's blackening throng:
"The hills were black" with men descending,
Encircling those the camp defending,
Round front, and flanks, and rear extending.

From two small guns though frequent fell
The hurtling shot, and screaming shell,
'Twas vain! naught could their courage quell;
The deadly volleys frequent pealed,
Th' advancing lines all shattered reeled,
Yet hundreds fallen but revealed

Rank beyond rank; for a moment stayed
By the fell havoc that our rifles made,
As ceaseless rang the deadly fusilade.
The painted shields in serried lines advance,
Feathers wave wildly,—thirsty steel spears glance,
And dark-skinned fiends with furious gestures dance:
And the fierce war song with discordant tone,
Fills the vexed air,—as ever pressing on
In wild array, and savage pomp, they shone.

Alas! too soon was the last cartridge spent,—
The native levies' yielding line was rent,
In tumult fierce, and dire confusion blent.
They broke and ran; swiftly they turned to fly,
But swifter flew the quivering assegai,
And deadly thrusts the ruthless warriors ply.

The camp was stormed. The guns tore o'er the ground,
Escape was none,—the rough track blocked they found;
SMITH fighting fell,—his men lay strewn around
Outspake brave PULLEINE, "Boldly MELVILL ride,
"Our colours save;—and if aught ill betide,
"Say how we fought,—how loyally we died!"

* * * *

No Pyrrhic phalanx swiftly formed to bear
The fierce assault: nor steady British square;
Only five hundred bayonets,—here and there!
With gaps between! as wildly surging close
The raging seas when firm rocks interpose,
O'erwhelming came their twenty thousand foes!

Who,—scorning death,—to earth our bayonets dashed
With their slain comrades! gleaming weapons clashed,
And our good swords, like vivid lightnings, flashed
In desperate fight. Of that devoted band,
Each dauntless fought, and made heroic stand,——
—Fell where he fought,—in conflict hand to hand.

Enough! 'twould make the boldest hearted quail:
COMPASSION, weeping, hides the ghastly tale,
GRIEF, unexhausted, drops her sacred veil.

* * * *

MELVILL, sore pressed, had neared the fatal shore,
His failing strength could scarcely bear him o'er,
True unto death, his precious charge he bore;
COGHILL, true comrade, dared the foe, and wave,
To save the friend,—he tried in vain to save,—
Both gained the shore,—both found an honoured grave!

* * * *

Undaunted Twenty Fourth! your noble name
Emblazoned shines upon the roll of Fame,
Proud are your deeds,—"For Valour" signs your claim!
Ye deathless ones! while we your names enshrine,
Your country bids them midst her glories twine,—
Though memories sad crowd in and murmur thine,
Oh ISANDLWANA!

Weymouth, Dorset. O. Y.

HAVE THEY NO GRAIN THAT THEY OFFER US CHAFF?

WE are much impressed by the fact that our opponents, while fiercely denouncing our views, are exceedingly careful not to state their own with any fulness and distinctness. They rail at our realistic opinions concerning Israel, and allow our writers to accuse them of spiritualising the promises to Abraham, and the blessings foreshadowed in the Old Testament prophecies, without contradiction. But I fail to see that they venture plainly to assert that there is a "spiritual Israel," which wholly swallows up the real one, or that they band themselves together in an open declaration of belief that all the promises and prophecies concerning Israel are to be received in an entirely spiritual sense, or else have already been fulfilled. Now to one or other of these opinions they are surely tied up, since the only other alternative left to them is that the Old Testament promises and prophecies being literal are yet to be fulfilled; which we hold that space on earth and length of time, according to the general belief of an approaching change of dispensation, alike tend to show will be impossible. If our opposers do hold either of the abovementioned opinions, why are they are not distinctly and fully stated, with arguments and proofs assigned in their favour, since surely the teaching of truth unreservedly is the best way of meeting and destroying the power of error, as the latter shrinks away and gradually disappears before the onward march of the former, whereas feeble argument and powerful abuse serve but as a hammer on nails to fasten them in, more firmly than before?

Digitized by Google

We advise our opponents to take the Anglo-Israel claims to be accounted Israel, in hand in a calm and judicial spirit, and proof by proof, to show how they have been already fulfilled, or how they can be spiritualised so as to satisfy reasonable thinkers and Bible students. We would suggest to them one point that we have not observed to have been dwelt upon by our writers, and that is, that not alone is it stated that Judah and Israel shall return to the land of their fathers (Jer. iii. 18), but also that Egypt and Assyria are to be blessed (Isa. xix. 23—25), that Ammon (Jer. xlix. 6), Moab (Jer. xlviii. 47), and Elam or Persia (Jer. xlix. 39), are to be restored from the state of their captivities—meaning, we imagine, that they shall be restored to, and hold positions of, favour. Now, as we cannot believe these prophecies have been already fulfilled, are we to spiritualise them also, and suppose there is a "spiritual Israel," and a "spiritual Assyria," and a "spiritual Elam," and a "spiritual Egypt," and so on? What are we distinctly to understand by a "spiritual Israel?" We would desire to be told; for if it means that Christians of all nations become the sons of Abraham, we are puzzled to know what will be the difference between "spiritual Israelites," and "spiritual Assyrians," and "spiritual Egyptians," and "spiritual Persians," &c., and if there is to be no difference, why are they named separately? Doubtless we may be considered foolish for our perplexity concerning this matter, but we are willing to be taught and enlightened, and shall feel grateful to any who may be inclined to flood us with more instruction and less abuse than heretofore, and who will explain to us what we are too dull to comprehend of ourselves.

It is a remarkable fact, we think, that the nations we have just referred to as being justified in expecting future prosperity, though they are at present either degraded or lost, appear to be selected from those with whom Israel of old was especially associated by immigration or captivity, or who may be supposed to have an especial claim on God's favour by their descent from the favoured Lot, whose righteous soul was vexed by the wickedness of his fellow-citizens. We think it is possible, nay probable, that kindness shown to Israel by the Egyptians in early times, and by the Assyrians and Persians to their Israelitish and Jewish captives at a later period, obtained for them the promised blessing of restoration, to be yet fulfilled. Why otherwise, we would ask, are great nations, such as those of ancient Greece and Rome, passed over in silence, as to any great good or glory to be theirs in the latter times? It may be replied, They had their period of greatness, misused it, and have lost it for ever; so far at least as to make it worthy of distinctive prophetical mention: but so, in like manner, had Egypt, and Assyria, and Persia their years of magnificence and grandeur, which they did not use to God's glory, and therefore they faded into obscurity; and yet they are again to rise into notice and be restored. Doubtless they will then be Christians, by faith in the Lord Jesus, made acceptable servants of Him; but if spirituality is the true meaning of the prophetical promises of good, why, we would enquire, are other vast multitudes, who we trust and believe are to be made righteous in Christ, not alluded to in God's Word in connection with earthly privileges? Where do we find especial mention made by Him, who knew all things and people that were and were to be, of the millions of India, of the swarming multitudes of China, of the intelligent, accomplished Japanese, of the hordes of Africa, and of the peoples of South America—numerous and powerful enough we should have naturally imagined to be thought worthy of notice in the prophetical Scriptures, and even to be placed on a very high level of distinction when once they became Christian peoples?

If, indeed, Christianity is to sweep away all distinctions, and cause every nation to be on one level, and wholly fused into one entirety, then truly we understand the silence of Scripture concerning many peoples now existing; but then, we ask, Why are there exceptions? Surely if no valid reasons can be given for such exceptions, in accordance with the theory of a spiritual Israel, it falls wholly to the ground. If it be admitted that there is to be a literal great Egypt and a literal great Assyria existing once again, such admission at once sweeps away all objections to a literal great Israel! And if it is to be great, why, we ask, may its greatness not have already begun? and if it has commenced, why may we not look for that beginning in our own exceptionally blessed land, and in our vast possessions throughout the world, instead of searching for it in some obscure district, and amongst some as yet unchristianised tribes? Our Israelite friends have no desire to answer railing by railing, but contrariwise, they would rather persuade their adversaries by quiet argument to believe with them that we are Israel, literal Israel, and thus be the instruments in God's hand of leading them to appreciate a blessing they now repudiate with more warmth than discretion.

L. P.

August, 1879.

"THE STARS IN THEIR COURSES FOUGHT AGAINST SISERA."—JUDGES v. 20.

ON the 2nd of April, 1879, Mr. J. Thomson told us how manifestly God had favoured our armies in Afghanistan in respect to the late cold season they enjoyed there, while we here were chilled with an endless winter. In our last issue, we drew attention to the fact that, in Zululand lately, while we have had deluges of rain in this country, the heat our troops have had to face in their South African campaign has been moderated, and the climate rendered bearable. We now quote the words of a correspondent of the Daily Telegraph, writing from Pietermaritzburg on the 20th of July, 1879, and published in the London journal on the 16th August. He describes an even more striking manifestation of the Divine favour towards us, His people Israel, which distinctly calls for our national gratitude, since, without it, Ulundi could never have been fought, the Zulus would not have been vanquished this year, and our losses and expenditure must have been carried over during another season, to our great affliction. Speaking of the immense change the battle of Ulundi had already caused, the correspondent wrote as follows:—

> In the meantime, it is significant of the effect produced on the more open part of Zululand by recent events, that Lieutenant Lysons, who has been carrying despatches for General Wood, has ridden from Kwamagwasa to General Newdigate's camp at Upoko without being molested, though he encountered a large number of Zulus on the road. A week back this would have been impossible. Meantime, coincident with the stoppage of offensive operations, the grass is reported to have utterly failed. This, of course, was in a measure anticipated. Indeed, the wonder of many is that the herbage did not vanish sooner than it has done. The truth is, the season has been a most unusual one, and even the oldest inhabitant professes himself to be puzzled. The rain that has fallen both in Natal and in Zululand, where it seems to have been most copious, has been rather that of September than of June and July, and the result has been to keep the grass fresh several weeks longer than is usually the case. Ordinarily, in Natal, it is burnt all over the colony in June. It is now near the end of July, and there has scarcely been a patch destroyed worth speaking of. It is true that, owing to prevailing high prices, a good many farmers in Natal have actually made an attempt to cut their grass and stock it for winter use, and this is a step which ought to afford Mr. Froude intense satisfaction. This question, however, bears specially upon the probable future of military movements. To move in Zululand without fodder is almost an impossibility. It has been, doubtless, upon the failure of the grass that the Zulus have been counting in the past, and the want of it cannot but seriously affect the disposition of our forces in the future.

Comment on the above is needless. The facts call for national thanksgiving, and we hope from many a heart, when the facts are realised, there will go up the joyful cry, "Hallelujah! Praise the Lord!"

Digitized by Google

THE PEPUL TREE.

We are rather astonished to find the Emperor of China coming forward as a blind witness to prove the Identity of our nation with Israel! Yet such is the case. If our readers will turn to the proceedings of the British Association, held at Sheffield, on Thursday night, August 21st, 1879, as reported in the Scotsman of the 22nd, they will find that Lieut.-Col. T. H. Lewin, late Deputy Commissioner of Darjeeling, gave an account of the resources of Thibet, and the splendid province of Western China—Szechmu. In the course of his paper, Col. Lewin said:

"As illustrative of the Chinese feeling towards England, he would read a curious letter (the original of which fell into his hands when he was in the East), which had been sent by the Emperor of China to the Emperor of Burmah. The letter began in this wise:—

"The royal brother, Tan Kwang Emperor of China, who, assisted by the rule of Heaven, exercises authority over a multitude of umbrella-bearing chiefs in the great Eastern Empire, affectionately addresses his Royal younger brother, the sun-descended King, lord of the golden palace, and ruler over a multitude of umbrella-bearing chiefs in the great Western Empire.

"Then the letter went on to announce that a thirteen-syllable title had been conferred on the royal mother, whose name is already ten syllables long, who "Possesses an excellent heart, who acts always like the wind and the rain, and who bestows good instruction on the Queen and the concubines and family attendants, in consequence of which the inhabitants of the golden palace are cheerful and happy.

"After reciting the homage paid to this excellent Princess, and the manner in which the fifteenth anniversary of the 'elder brother' had been celebrated, the letter concluded thus:—

"Everything that occurs in the elder brother's country shall be known to the younger brother. With respect to the younger brother's empire, it is not proper to allow England, after they have made war and peace has been settled, to remain in the city, for they are accustomed to act as a pepul tree. Let not the younger brother therefore allow England to remain in his country.

"The pepul tree, Colonel Lewin, explained was the ficus religiosa. It is wonderfully prolific, sending forth innumerable seeds which take root everywhere, and which, once having taken root, it is impossible to dislodge without injury to the building which has harboured them, and which, if suffered to remain, crack or crush the building in their growth. This pen-and-ink sketch of the national character was received with shouts of laughter. A number of Indian gentlemen took part in the discussion of this paper."

Now in this short message sent by the lord of the Celestial Empire to the "sun-descended" King of Burmah, what have we bearing on the Israelite origin of the British? Much! We have—

1. The British Empire likened to a pepul tree raised from seed. But the Lord said Israel (the Lord's kingdom) was to be like "a tree" raised from a small grain of mustard seed (Matt. xiii. 31, 32).

2. The "Celestial Monarch" likened the British Empire to a tree with "innumerable seeds," for that is the character of the "pepul." But Israel was "to blossom and bud, and fill the face of the world with fruit" (Isa. xxvii. 6).

3. He said the British were like the pepul, which once rooted anywhere, cannot be dislodged. But "the remnant of Jacob" was to have that very character, since Micah predicted that, having "gone through," none can deliver from their grasp (Micah v. 8).

4. He likened the empire to a tree wonderfully prolific. But that was to be Israel's peculiar characteristic—"multitudinous;" throwing off their spawning broods of colonists to the very "ends of the earth," "like the sands of the seashore," "the stars of heaven," and "the dust of the earth," for "multitude" (Gen. xxii. 17, xlviii. 16; Isa. xxvi. 15).

5. He likened them to a tree which, once rooted and suffered to remain, "cracks and crushes the building where the young seedlings grow." But this was to be Israel's rôle, to whom God "gives the heathen," "and the nations," in order that "they may break them with a rod of iron, and dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel" (Psa. ii. 8, 9; Rev. ii. 26, 27).

6. He advised the King of Burmah, therefore, "to eject the British," and thus become their open enemy. But the British are to possess Burmah, since God has given them the Burmese "city"-Gate Rangoon; and it was distinctly to carry out God's purposes, it appears, on part of the Emperor of China, that he thus was led to incite the Burmese to overt acts of hostility, since God has given to Israel "the Gate of their enemies," "of those that hate them," that He may grant them also "the lands of the heathen for their heritage" (Psa. cxxxvi. 21, 22, cxlix. 7; Gen. xxii. 17, xxiv. 60), and "the uttermost parts of the earth for their possession" (Psa. ii. 8).

On the whole, we deem the blind testimony of the Emperor of China of a very valuable and unique character. The simile of the "Pepul Tree" is an Oriental and expressive one, which, to minds acquainted with Indian arboriculture, has a distinct and special bearing on our subject. The ficus religiosa is a favourite, and even a sacred, tree in the East, giving a grateful shade. Men seek shelter and refuge under its branches, as they do under Israel's. It is wonderfully prolific, like Israel; it roots itself everywhere, like Israel; once rooted, it stays and cannot be torn up, like Israel; and wherever it is allowed to root itself and grow, it rends the body politic which nourishes it, it cracks and crushes the building, and fills it all itself, like Israel! We think the pepul tree must be taken henceforth as our Indian emblem, and we must thank the Emperor of China for his unfriendly, but blind testimony that we are God's people!

THE "RECORD" ON THE IDENTITY.

Our readers will not be surprised to learn that the Record has followed the Rock, and declares against the Identity, but in favour of the Christadelphian, Mr. R. Roberts, who denies our contention in toto. Writing on the 16th June, 1879, upon the lecture delivered by Mr. Robt. Roberts, "Anglo-Israelism Refuted," the Record says he made "short work of the historical argument." "Short work" of anything that requires patient investigation! Short work regarding what is so difficult and so laborious an enquiry, that nine clergymen out of every ten tell us they have "no time to look into our Identity arguments;" that is a strange way, indeed, of dealing with the subject, and a lecturer scarcely deserves commendation such as the Record bestows, for giving such a point as the historical argument (a boundless theme) "short" notice!

The recent pamphlet of the Rev. J. B. Clifford, against us, comes in of course for the Record's approval. "It is a good tract on the same lines as Mr. Roberts' lecture." Mr. Clifford's charge that we misquote Scripture is carefully noted, but our candid impartial Record says not a word on Mr. Clifford's attempt to change the reading of Gen. xxxv. 11 from "A nation and company of nations shall be of thee," to "A nation and the gatherer of the nations shall be of thee!" Another remarkable instance of the Record's treatment of Mr. Clifford, but this time sub silentio, is the suspicious failure to remark upon his new doctrine of the Hamitic origin of the British, and on the enormous, almost antediluvian age of the Sacæ—the ancestors of the Anglo-Saxons—the British. We suppose the Record finds these two points rather too much even for its powers of approval! To condemn them would be to cast ridicule on an opponent of the Identity; and so the tract is hailed as a "good tract," the alleged shortcomings of the Israelites paraded, but the absurdities of the rev. author are cast into the shade!

Digitized by Google

On the 16th June, 1879, the Record also took note of the Wimbledon Prophetic Conference, and dismissed the discussion on the "Anglo-Ephraim question," as it is inappropriately termed, in these words—"The Rev. John Wilkinson, S. Garrett, Frank White, and H. E. Brook, had no difficulty in disposing of the strange 'Identifications' advanced." From this, one would imagine the opponents had it entirely their own way. But having seen the reporters' account of the meeting, we are satisfied the Rev. C. W. Hickson completely disposed of the Rev. J. Wilkinson's arguments, and that the Identity did not suffer at all from the collision of opinions elicited at the conference. One fact stands out in bold relief in all this—namely, that the Record has joined the bulk of the clergy, and is now with the opposition! This fact does not dismay us, for "Magna est veritas, et prævalebit," and when it does prevail, great will be the confusion and shame of the Record, of the Rock, and of the clericals in general who malign fellow-Protestant Evangelical believers as "crazy blasphemers," but are ready enough to patronise and commend a Christadelphian, who believes not in the Divine Spirit, nor in devil, nor in hell, nor in the antecedent eternal Divinity of the Son of God, nor in the work of the atonement by sacrifice as we understand it, nor in the Christianity of Christian Britain, nor in the obligation to keep holy the Sabbath day as we hold it, and who receives many other articles of belief which truly place the sect out of the pale of that Christianity which Protestants of the Church of England, and of the Non-conforming bodies too, faithfully profess.

PHILOLOGICAL AND HISTORICAL LINKS.

By L. C. Vesey.

I send you some extracts from "The Origin of the English Nation," three lectures by Edward Freeman, published in Macmillan's Magazine for 1869-70, which I think may be a link in Identity evidence:—

Thus grew up the English nation; a nation formed by the union of various tribes of the same stock. Their language," Mr. Freeman says, "was the oldest form of Low Dutch, much resembling the English of the present day, but quite distinct from what is now called High Dutch, or German. It is not easy to say how far South the Low Dutch tongue once went. It certainly went much further South than anyone would think now. It is worth notice that whenever we find a German tribe mentioned by Roman writers, the names take the low form, and not the high. Thus we find Chatti and Suevi for Hessen and Schwaben.

Thus far W. Freeman. Now, if we turn to Professor Duncker's "History of Antiquity," we find the following:—

Bin-Mirar III. (810-781 B.C.), son and successor of Samsi-Bin, grandson of Shalmaneser, raised the Assyrian power still higher. The beginning of an inscription remains, from which we can see the extent of the lands over which he ruled, or which he had compelled to pay tribute. "I took into my possession," so this fragment tells us, "from the land of Siluna, which lies at the rising of the sun onwards—viz. . . . . the land of Chatti (Aram), the Western land, throughout its whole extent, Tyre, Sidon, the land of Omri (Israel), and Edom, &c. . . . . as far as the great sea to the setting of the sun."

Does not this prove beyond a doubt that the various "Low Dutch, or Teutonic Tribes," as Mr. Freeman calls them, who, in the fifth and sixth centuries, "pressing across the sea to seek new homes in the Isle of Britain, gave birth to the English nation," came, long centuries before, from the East, driven, as were the people of Chatti, from their own lands by the victorious armies of the Assyrian kings?

I have also copied the following extract from Herodotus' "Wars of Xerxes," vii. 89:—

The Phœnicians, with the Syrians of Palestine, furnished three hundred (triremes). These Phœnicians, as they themselves say, anciently dwelt on the Red Sea, and, having crossed over from thence, they settled on the sea coast of Syria; this part of Syria, and the whole, as far as Egypt, is called Palestine. (96) Persians, Medes, and Sacæ served as marines on board all the ships.

Our forefathers were evidently as brave and skilful seamen in those days as they are in the present.

The Sacæ, who are Scythians, had on their heads caps which came to a point, and stood erect; they also wore loose trowsers, and carried bows peculiar to their country, and daggers, and also battle-axes called sogares. These, though they are Amyrgian Scythians, are called Sacæ, for the Persians call all the Scythians Sacæ."—Herodotus, vii. 62.

Description of a picture upon the obelisk in Shalmaneser's palace at Chalah:—

The first Israelite prostrates himself, and kisses the ground before the feet of Shalmaneser; seven other Israelites bring jars with handles, cups, sacks, goblets, and staves. They are bearded, with long hair; with shoes on their feet, and round caps on their heads, the points of which fall slightly backwards. The under-garment reaches almost to the ancles; the upper garment falls in two parts, evenly before and behind, from the shoulders to the hem of the under garment.—Duncker's "History of Antiquity."

I also send you a paper given to me by a friend who has many valuable old books in his library. I do not know if it will be of any use to you.

THE GREAT EARTHQUAKE AND THE FEDERATION OF ISRAEL'S NATIONS AS FORESEEN EVEN BY FOREIGNERS.

Our friend L. J. D., of London, has sent us the following remarkable testimonies from St. Petersburg and Paris respectively, to prove that our anticipations of the terrible "woe" about to burst upon "yonder ill-consolidated Europe" are not only correct in that respect, but that we are right also in foreseeing for our God-protected Hebrew race the "world-wide union and universal power of Israel," at the very same time that Europe is rent and torn to pieces by "horrible wars and disruption." We follow up our friend's quotations by one from the Bristol Times and Mirror, plainly showing that these things are becoming patent, not only to our instructed eyes, but to those of secular journalists who know nothing of our Hebrew origin, and care less. Their testimony, blind though it be, is most valuable to the truth of God's Word and to our Israelitish origin:—

From the St. Petersburgh Times:—"With the Austrian occupation of Novi Bazaar, thanks to the blunders of the Berlin Congress, the Eastern Question is about to enter upon a new phase. Whether the freedom of the Slavs is to be sacrificed to the German Junkers, allied this time with the Austrian Court, is of course a question of the utmost importance, both as regards the future tranquillity of all Europe, and the civilisation of the emancipated Slavs. In that case the last word of Russia will be of weight; that last word must be soon spoken. Europe must give these matters its serious consideration, and make its choice between two courses; either the policy of the Iron Chancellor must be frustrated, or there must be a war, which will surpass in horror all those that have taken place during the present century. In the opinion of competent politicians, the time is now approaching when the rôle of Prince Bismarck as ruler of the Gate of Europe should come to an end. Europe impatiently awaits a rupture between France and Germany, which will inevitably arrive sooner or later. Everybody knows that; and it is the opinion of Prince Bismarck himself France will not begin war with Germany unprepared—'à la hero de Sedan'—and Russia will naturally not repeat the mistake she made in 1870." The quoter of these opinions remarks, that "we happen just now to be in presence of a series of facts the significance of which cannot be denied. Together with circumstances that are known at every foreign embassy and legation on the Continent, they justify a certain amount of curiosity, not to say anxiety, as to what the next six or eight months will bring us."

Digitized by Google

From the Moniteur Universel:—"The bonds of federation are the only ones suited to the British Empire, by proposing Lord Grey's idea, that the Privy Council should form a colonial committee consisting of residents from the various colonies; these people should be paid and be granted deliberative powers; they would then become a Federal Parliament. It is undoubted," says the Moniteur, "that the chief event marking the close of this century would be the general federation of all the British possessions bound firmly together in all its incoherent elements into an Empire of over two hundred and fifty million souls. When subjected to a single impulse, the forces by sea and land which the Empire could dispose of would be so colossal that they could only be counterbalanced by the federation of other States."—Daily Telegraph, Sept. 4, 1879.

The Bristol Times and Mirror, of September 5, 1879, writes, regarding these complications, as follows:—

We may hope that any danger of a collision between Germany and Russia has been averted by the meeting of the Emperors this week at Alexandrowo, though if it be true that the Kaiser left the place earlier than he intended, and without wishing his Imperial cousin good-bye, not much good can be expected to result from a conference obviously so unsatisfactory. But, whatever the rulers of the two peoples feel, the ill-temper of the two nations appears to be increasing rather than subsiding, and the language of the press, both in Germany and Russia, has undergone no diminution in bitterness. Nor is it only between the irresponsible and independent newspapers of the two countries that the exchange of angry words takes place. The Strassburger Zeitung, a paper long inspired by Count Bismarck Bohlem, and believed in this instance to express the views of his kinsman the German Chancellor himself, publishes an article intended to represent Bismarck to his countrymen as the only pilot that can possibly weather the storm; but, in order to establish his point, the inspirer of the article, whoever he may be, has not scrupled to speak of the "storm" in language which would be only justifiable if the clouds were on the point of bursting. Germany, it is said, has been able hitherto to divide her friendship between Austria and Russia, "but she must now take a side and choose between the two allies; and what that choice must be could hardly be a matter of doubt." And the article goes on to suggest that the only security for the peace of Europe is "the difficulty which Russia experiences in finding allies to help her against Germany and Austria combined." "It is difficult," says the Pall Mall Gazette, "to say how much fire may lurk under all this smoke; but that some is hidden beneath it, it is impossible to doubt." And the Standard is equally cheerful, remarking that the conflict may be delayed for months, perhaps for years, but it may be regarded as inevitable.

These quotations seem to us to establish our contention, repeated now for many months, nay, for two years past—namely:—

1. That "the great 'earth'-quake, such as was not since men were upon the 'earth,' so mighty an 'earth'-quake, and so great" (Rev. xvi. 18), is close to us, even at the doors.

2. That contemporaneously with that unparalleled convulsion the Lord's time to remember His people, and to have mercy upon Israel—"the year of recompenses for the controversy of Zion"—has come (Isa. xxxiv. 8; Zech. viii. 3, 8, 9, 11, 14, 15).

3. That He is now accordingly going to show to the whole world the truth of His Word when He promised that Israel should constitute "a nation and a company of nations;" a vast federation of 250,000,000 of Anglo-Saxon Hebrews, and their allied subject races, holding the "heirship of the world," the mistress-ship of the seas, the ownership of the Gates, and the "dominion" of the great God; the stone by and for which He breaks the world, and causes all its kingdoms, dominions, thrones, peoples, and powers to crumble into dust and make way for IT.

Israel! praise YE the Lord! for we know that these things also mean that the time to bless Israel with her SPIRITUAL blessings is close at hand, what time the new Covenant will be the glorious gift granted to the House of British-Israel as God's heritage, His inheritance, and His chosen ones (Jer. xxxi. 33; Heb. viii. 10).

HATH GOD CAST AWAY HIS PEOPLE?

WE are told by some that the Ten Tribes having fallen into idolatry and heinous sin, God cast them away, and they have been rejected for ever! Can this be so? St. Paul said, in reply to such a query, "God forbid!" (Rom. xi. 1). The Ten-Tribed House of Israel were "God's people," "the sons of the living God." Once sons, they are always sons; for the gifts and calling of God are without repentance! Let our objectors hear what "Sibbes" says regarding God's dealings with His children, and what their failures do for them. What happens to the spiritual House is only the type of the destiny of the literal House—which has promises of restoration and blessing just as full, and just as free, as those given to "the sons of God by faith." Our quotation is as follows:—

"God's children are strengthened by their failures. They learn to stand by their falls. Like tall cedars, the more they are blown the deeper they are rooted. That which men think is the overthrow of God's children doth but root them deeper; so that, after all their outward storms and inward declinings, this is the issue: 'They take root downward, and bring forth fruit upward.'"

Hence Ephraim-Israel's fall and outcasting is but a temporary eclipse. They, too, "take root downward, and bring forth fruit upward," for they "blossom and bud," and in the latter day "fill the face of the world with fruit."

ST. PAUL ON OUR IDENTITY WITH ISRAEL.

(GALATIANS III.)

BY THE REV. A. J. J. CACHEMAILLE, M.A.,
Vicar of Oldham.

I WAS much interested in reading the article in BANNER, vol. iii., No. 126, May 28th, 1879, on "St. Paul on our Identity with Israel," chiefly founded upon Gal. iii. 16. That is one of the strong forts of those who oppose our Identity, and it is as well to shell them out of it as often as needful. It is not fair to take any one solitary Scripture and to cause that to tell all the tale; other cognate passages must be allowed to modify what, taken alone, is scarcely intelligible. It seems to me that it is not necessary to confine the interpretation of that passage in Galatians to the spiritual children of Christ. There is besides this a broader sense, which is gathered from other passages—such, for instance, as those in Romans, chapters ii., iii., iv., v., to end of chapter xi. The election spoken of is, in the main, the election of a nation, not of an individual, and the distinction made is, it seems to me, between the chosen seed and the natural—such, for instance, as through Ishmael, and the children of Keturah (Gen. xxv.), and through Esau. I should not wish to say that the election or distinction was confined to this view, but it is the main line of it. In this case, it would seem to me that Gal. iii. 16, &c., is a much stronger argument for the transfer to these days of the blessings to Israel than that usually presented from Hosea ii. 23, and i. 10, both which are quoted by St. Paul in Romans ix. 25, 26. The general meaning of Romans and Galatians would, to my mind, suggest that all these promises were to be fulfilled to Abraham and to his seed, when they became members of Christ the seed. I say to Abraham and to his seed, not as derived from Gal. iii., but as a necessary consequence of other Scriptures containing the promises of God to Abraham—promises which are in no wise interfered with by the more spiritual and wider compass of the Christian Church gathered out of all nations. When we think of the matter in this light, those statements which seem most against are most for us; for St. Paul in Gal. iii. explains how even the condition of that chosen race in Egypt and in Canaan was a purely temporary one, being one chiefly under the law, 430 years younger than the original covenant, an original covenant not in any wise set aside by even the transgressions which called the law into existence. A condition of the chosen race, which, both in its best days and in its rejection, was foreseen and foretold by Moses the lawgiver, before even their temporary occupation of the land. A condition, the temporary character of which is fully recognised in the epistle to the Hebrews xi. 39, 40, and the permanent glory of which was not even then (Heb. xi.) to be expected, for it was to be only at the end of the dispensation, as St. Paul hints in 2 Thessalonians ii., and Daniel years before foretold (xii. 4, &c.), and as the facts before the world at this moment confirm. The promise still further sets forth that the land was Christ's and Abraham's in Christ, for Abraham had not yet possessed it, nor his seed; yet even the stoutest anti-Anglo-Israelite will allow that the Jew is to possess that land which is Christ's. And, if so, the fulfilment is again planted under Christian times and not in the past, nor even in the actual present, though it is on the threshhold, many of the preliminary conditions to the union of the two sticks in the land having been accomplished. Under these circumstances, and read in this light, it appears to me that the otherwise unaccountable nature of Galatians iii. is clear and strongly in favour of the views which the BANNER sets forth, and which are the greatest glory of this nation.

Digitized by Google

It is chiefly by the unwarranted isolation of Gal. iii. that the opposition advance refutations which are not supported by a well-rounded view of the question.

June 9, 1879.

Correspondence.

"THE BLIND WITNESSES."

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

SIR,—For our first witness I must go back more than 200 years in our country's history. Nathaniel Fiennes, the Chief Commissioner of the Great Seal, addressing the House of Lords, Jan. 20th, 1658, began his speech in this manner:—

"It is a signal and remarkable providence that we see this day in this place a chief magistrate and two Houses of Parliament. Jacob, speaking to his son Joseph, said: 'I had not thought to have seen thy face, and lo! God hath shewed me thy seed also;' meaning his two sons, Ephraim and Manasseh. Now, may the good God make them like Ephraim and Manasseh, that the three nations may be blessed in them, saying, 'God make thee like those two Houses of Parliament, which, like Leah and Rachel, did build the House of Israel.'" [The italics are the authors].—See the "Life of Cromwell," by Guizot, p. 418.

Our next witness is no less a personage than Sir Walter Scott. Describing the extensive funeral vaults beneath the ancient cathedral of Glasgow, he says:—"In those waste regions of oblivion, dusky banners and tattered escutcheons indicated the graves of those who were doubtless 'princes in Israel.'"

Probably the above extracts will be new to some of the readers of your valuable weekly; and if so, I shall feel proud of having added my poor mite to the glorious work of the Identity. The next time I write to you will probably be from Western Africa, where I shall not fail to work for the good cause, both in season and out of season. I enclose my card, and remain

Your obedient servant,

Liverpool, Aug. 7, 1879. ANGLO-ISAACSON.

P.S.—I don't think that either Fiennes or Sir Walter Scott were quite blind.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

SIR,—As some of our friends may be a little unsettled by some of the statements contained in the Appendix and Answers to Correspondents in the printed report of the recent debate at Exeter Hall, I thought that a few words on the more important parts of the subject would enable them to see that, although Mr. Roberts has very fiercely assailed our position, it still remains as firm and secure as ever, and from him we have nothing to fear. The first point I shall deal with is "The distinction between Israel and Judah, and the superiority of Israel over Judah in exile." Deut. xxxiii. 7: "And this of Judah, and he said, Hear, Lord, the voice of Judah, and bring him unto his people," &c.

This verse certainly applies to the then distant future, and Judah, or rather his House and Tribe, are here recognised as wanderers in distress, which we know them to be to this day. But then the people to whom these wanderers are to be brought must be a consolidated people, and located somewhere; and not only so, but they must also be a strong people, or what would be the use of their being brought? The same remarks may also be applied to Jer. iii. 18. We scarcely need to ask who are the people here referred to as his people; it can be none other than Israel, and therefore Israel must be in circumstances far superior to those of Judah, and therefore not wanderers under the curse.

The next portion of God's Word I would direct attention to is Hos. xiv. We have here, first, an admonition to turn to the Lord; then a prayer is put into the people's mouths; followed by a confession of their entire dependence upon Jehovah for salvation; and then Jehovah replies to them in words of mercy and forgiving love, followed by the promise of such great blessings as are but the reiteration of the blessings promised to Joseph and his two sons both by Jacob and Moses. Compare with Gen. xlix. 22—26, and Deut. xxxiii. 13—17, and what are these blessings as mentioned in Hos. xiv.:—I. "I will be as the dew to Israel." II. "He shall blossom as the lily" (פָּרַח, to blossom, bud, break forth and flourish; it is translated in Isa. xxvii. 6, blossom and bud). III. "And strike forth his roots as Lebanon" (into other lands). IV. "His branches shall walk" or go forward. V. "His beauty (הוֹד, honour and praise) shall be as the olive." VI. "And his smell (or odour) as Lebanon."

I do not think we have need to search very far to find the people to whom has been given these glorious blessings. But (say our opponents) that cannot be, for it was not intended for them to have these blessings until they had been restored to their land. Let us, then, read carefully the next two verses: "They that shall dwell under his protection" (or overshadowing or covering) "shall return; they shall revive" (or restore or live again) "as the corn; and they shall blossom" (פָּרַח, same as ver. 5) "as the vine, their strength" (זֵכֶר, strength, vigour, or remembrance) "as the wine of Lebanon. Ephraim" (Israel) "shall say, What have I to do any more with idols?" &c.

Who, then, are these who are to return, to revive as the corn and blossom as the vine? Any one that chooses may see that they are a people who had formerly enjoyed in some measure political greatness and blessing, because it says here that they are to revive again; it also says they are to return, plainly inferring that they, while under the protection of Israel, were also in exile. And who can this be but the people now known as Jews? They are the only known people in exile needing protection to whom has been promised restoration to home and former greatness. And where do they find rest and protection? Is it not alone under the British Government? And we know this state of things cannot exist after the return to Palestine, for we are expressly told in many portions of God's Word that Israel and Judah shall be gathered together, re-united; that they shall appoint to themselves one chief, and as a re-united people return to the land given to their forefathers, and their seed after them, for an everlasting possession, to be no more pulled up out of the land; and one king shall be king to them all. Therefore, the blessings here promised to Israel must be bestowed on them before the return takes place. See also Hos. i. 10, 11; Micah iv. 6, 7.

I think these few references, out of a great number which treat of this important part of the Identity subject, will be quite sufficient to show the distinction between, and the superiority of, Israel over Judah.

Torquay, June 21, 1879. J. F. THOMAS.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

SIR,—Through the kindness of Mr. Greig, of this town, I have been favoured with a copy of the BANNER OF ISRAEL for Sept. 3. I observe you quote certain editorial observations from the Daily Post of August 2, bearing on the Wilkinson-Greig controversy, which occurred here early in August. Perhaps, as you have done me the honour of a quotation in your journal, you will permit me to correct an error which crept into the article, and which is of consequence as bearing on the philological question. The sentence—"It is certainly a very curious fact that the grammatical structure of the British language is purely Shemitic, and the Hebrew can be 'transliterated' into British in a way not possible with any other language"—should read thus: "It is certainly curious that the grammatical structure of the English language is closely analogous to the Shemitic, and the Hebrew can be 'translated' into English in a way not possible," &c.

Transliteration is, of course, simply the writing of the words of one language in the letters of another; as, for example, the Hebrew word קוֹדֶשׁ, transliterated into English, is Kodesh; translated, it is Holy or Holiness. Now, as a matter of fact, Hebrew can be as well transliterated into German as into English. In one case there is no representative of th; in the other, none of the guttural, except by artificial combination (as kh, gh). But there is no European language into which Hebrew can be translated with the same perfection as into English, because the grammatical structure is so like.

Yours, &c.,

THE EDITOR,

Sunderland, Sept. 9, 1879. (Sunderland Daily Post).

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements
(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O.O payable at Ludgate-circus.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed :—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

NEW PAMPHLETS.

Price 4d., post free 5d.

JAPHETIC OR SEMITIC: WHICH ARE WE?
BY CAROLINE PEARSE.

Showing the different character of the promises and blessings, and chastisements foretold as destined for the two Houses of Israel and Judah, and consequently the different careers it was foretold they would accomplish. Also tracing the Anglo-Israel theory from its origin, and offering a clear statement of its creed, so that the most ignorant persons may be able to judge for themselves whether there is not solid reason for adopting it.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet Court, Fleet Street; and may be had, by ordering, of any bookseller.

Now ready, price 2d., post free 2½d., in neat coloured cover.

AMMI; OR, THE CHOSEN PEOPLE,
BY MISS BIRD.

Tracing the descent of the British people from Abraham, the "friend of God," and showing that true science, history, philology, and ethnology, are on the side of the Identity of the Anglo-Saxon race with the Ten Lost Tribes.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

BLESSINGS AND CURSES, AND THEIR RELATION TO ISRAEL AND JUDAH.

In neat coloured cover, price 2d., post free 2½d.

BLESSINGS AND CURSES, AND THEIR RELATION TO ISRAEL AND JUDAH. By F. W. PHILLIPS, of Speedwell-road, Birmingham.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; and may be had, by ordering, of any Bookseller.

Price 2d. Post free 2½d.

MANASSEH AND THE UNITED STATES.

An important Essay delivered before the "Lost Israel Identification Society," by the Rev. Joseph Wild, D.D., at Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, New York.

CONTENTS:—The Fulness of the Gentiles set in—For whom did God intend America—The Origin of the United States—The Footsteps of Ephraim and Manasseh—The Will of Jacob made to Ephraim and Manasseh—Manasseh a People, and a Great People—Manasseh's Birthtime of Separation—Out of nearly Sixty Conquered Colonies the only one England ever Lost was that of Manasseh (America)—The Great Seal of the United States—Manasseh was brought up at the Door of the Pyramid, &c., &c.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; W H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.; and of any Bookseller

NOW READY, price 9d., post free, 10d.

ARE WE ISRAELITES? THE TESTIMONY OF HISTORY, PHILOLOGY, AND ETHNOLOGY on the Subject. By the Rev. BOURCHIER WREY SAVILE, M.A., Rector of Shillingford, Exeter. With an Introduction by Philo-Israel.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row; Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; or of any Bookseller.

Now ready, price 2d.

A REPLY TO MR. ROBERTS ON THE EXETER HALL DEBATE, on the Subject, Are Englishmen Israelites? By ALEXANDER DUNN.

THE MIDNIGHT CRY; or, WORDS OF SOLEMN WARNING.

Second edition, price 1d.; post free, 1½d.; for distribution, 6s. per 100. W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

NEW BOOKS.

NEW WORK BY DR. WILD.

NOW READY, price 3s., post free 3s. 4d. Handsome cloth, gilt, printed on toned paper and illustrated.

THE LOST TEN TRIBES, AND 1882.

BY THE

REV. DR. JOSEPH WILD,
Of Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Printed and published by
ROBERT BANKS, RACQUET COURT, FLEET ST., LONDON, E.C.
And may be had, by ordering, of any Bookseller.

EXTRACT FROM PREFACE:—

The main idea I wish to convey in this book, is that God is conducting His Providence through His ancient chosen people, Israel, whom I believe are found in the Saxon race. And His throne on earth, through which flow the purposes of Providence, is David's throne, which I believe to be at present the English throne. Queen Victoria (and God bless her) I believe to be of David's seed. The United States fulfils the rôle of the Tribe of Manasseh. Therefore, to understand the prophecies, Providence, and the present movements of nations, as well as the future lot and destiny of each, we must read the Scriptures in this light. God has made the children of Israel and throne of David His executive, in time, on earth. They are His executive for civilisation, evangelisation, order, and conquest. Through them God will conquer the world to an universal peace. As Moses was to God, so is Israel. Moses being a Divine executor, was to the people a god—so is Israel to all mankind. Spiritual Israel will come through literal Israel.

CONTENTS:—

DISCOURSE I.—KEY DISTINCTIONS.

DISCURSE II.—ISRAEL AND THE GATES.
Israel—How the Gates of his enemies are to be given him—By this sign Lost Israel may be known—The giving will correspond to the multiplying—The promise, in this day, is rapidly fulfilling—England, Disraeli, "Tancred," and Russia.

DISCOURSE III.—ISRAEL AND TERRITORY.
Promises to Israel—Material nature—Location of the Tribes in Christ's day—God's Providence—British and American rule—"Life from the dead"—Teaching the Nations peaceful arbitration—England and Russia—Afghanistan falls to Anglo-Israel—God's political geography—Anglo-Saxon evangelisation—Russia opposing it—British and Russian outposts in contact—Wall of Judah—Earth's girdle.

DISCOURSE IV.—ISRAEL AND POPULATION.
Prophetic latter days—Our bearings in the ages—Unwise impatience—Israel to be always a nation—Her Empire—Historic career of and future of England, America, and Judah—Relative increase of population—The Infidel Saxon—Jewish, British, and American interests one—A full end of all nations but Israel—Famine henceforth only for the heathen—Arbitration to be enforced by Israel—American absorption—Startling figures of future population—The balance of power.

DISCOURSE V.—ISRAEL AND LANGUAGE.
Latter day prophetic promises—Time of Israel's revival—Pyramid testimony—British Island population in 1882—Affinity between the English and Hebrew—Cell of the honey bee—Origin of language—Lion of languages—Foreign testimony—All tongues indigenous but English—The pre-millenial tokens.

DISCOURSE VI.—ISRAEL AND GENTILE FULNESS.
Meaning of the Gentile fulness—Blessings through Judah and Ephraim—Best religion—Jews outwitted—Why Benjamin was kept at Jerusalem—French Protestantism—Gentile fulness contemporary with to-day—What is it—Turkey exceptional.

DISCOURSE VII.—DREAM IMAGE OF NEBUCHADNEZZAR.
Future history of the world—The destruction of the Papacy commenced—Ireland to be free and independent of England and Rome—Future glory of Britain and the United States.

DISCOURSE VIII.—LITTLE HORN AND TURKEY.
The Turks the Ishmaelites—England and Russia to partition the Mahommedan Empire—Why England sympathises with Turkey.

DISCOURSE IX.—LITTLE HORN AND ANTI-CHRIST.
Prophetic wonders—Twenty marks of the monster—The Berlin Congress—Anti-Christs many—Mistakes by writers.

DISCOURSE X.—ANTI-CHRIST AND LITTLE HORN.
Second Discourse on the monster—Who he will be and his name—How he will obtain power—Trouble for Germany, France, and Russia—Communism—Romanism—Shakers—Matthias, Westchester Prophet.

NEW BOOKS.

CONTENTS OF DR. WILD'S NEW BOOK—continued.

DISCOURSE XI.—THE TWO WITNESSES.
Troublous times—Appearance of the witnesses—Who they are—How they can be identified—Their mission work and suffering—The time and circumstances of Christ's coming.

DISCOURSE XII.—MOSES AND ELIJAH.
More about the two witnesses—Mormonism—God ruling among the nations—Career of the two witnesses—Anti-Christ—The throne and House of David.

DISCOURSE XIII.—BATTLE OF ARMAGEDDON.
The combatants on both sides—Who "The Kings of the East" are—The great Napoleonic idea—Disraeli, Lincoln, and Grant—England's policy in Turkey—Future wars and intrigues—The great battle field—Gathering of the nations—Earthquakes—Jerusalem as a seaport.

DISCOURSE XIV.—ARMAGEDDON AND THE PYRAMID.
The forces in the battle—Time of its occurrence—Mistakes of Adventists—A Church "strike" wanted—The hard times after 1882—History of the world till 1935—Hine's theory.

DISCOURSE XV.—WONDERS OF THE FUTURE.
Purpose of the flood—The Abrahamic current—Rending Mount Olivet—Former earthquakes—Boundaries of Palestine—Dan and Gad to guard the "gates"—Gad the Scotchman—The future Jerusalem—The Dead Sea and the Mediterranean to be joined—Mistake of spiritualising everything.

DISCOURSE XVI.—NINETEEN HUNDRED AND FIFTY-SEVEN.
"Signs of the times"—The return to Jerusalem—Forces of Russia and England—Present locality of ancient nations—Origin of American Republicanism—Federation of the nations coming—Evolution and Devolution.

DISCOURSE XVII.—THE STONE WITNESS.
The Great Pyramid—Who Job was—Who built the Pyramid—What it was built for—An epitome of the earth—The history of man contained in it, past and future—Science and the Bible, etc., etc.

DISCOURSE XVIII.—SIGNS AND WONDERS.
The stone prophet in the wilderness—No war for four years—The great struggle to commence in 1882—Prussia ancient Assyria—England, Germany, and Egypt to be allies—The future history of the world—The Philistines the Southern Irish—Who their great ancestor was, etc.

DISCOURSE XIX.—THE THRONE OF DAVID.
England's prophecy fulfilled in the Berlin Congress—The harp of Tara the harp of Israel—The future European alliances—Royal succession of the House of Israel.

DISCOURSE XX.—JEREMIAH AND ST. PATRICK.
The prophet's commission—His life—The tribes in his day—Landing of Jeremiah in Ireland—What he brought with him—Colonisation of Ireland—Jeremiah the founder of the ancient Irish government and religion—Tea Tephi and Heremon—The ancient Irish flag—The harp and lion—Season of Ireland's historical prestige—Causes of her decline—St. Patrick a Benjaminite—How Rome destroyed Jeremiah's memory among the Irish—Destruction of Tara—Ulster never conquered—Irish independence—Ark of the covenant—Ruins of Tara.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet Court, Fleet Street, E.C.

Price 1s. Post free, 1s. 1d.

ISRAEL'S CHRONOLOGICAL CHART, with EXPLANATORY NOTES.—This Chart, compiled from the Old Testament on a new system, gives the A.M. and B.C. dates of one hundred important events in Israel's history, and exhibits the perfect agreement of Scripture with the marks and measurements of the Great Pyramid of Ghizeh.

May be had of the Author, GEO. N. WALSH, Western Bank, Sheffield; of Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C., and of all booksellers.

Now ready.

NEW AND ENLARGED EDITION OF COMING COLLISION BETWEEN ENGLAND AND RUSSIA. By an M.A. of Cambridge. Price 1s. The Appendix can be had for affixing to 1st Edition upon receipt of 1d. stamp.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick Lane, E.C.

ANGLO-ISRAEL SERVICES will be conducted (D.V.) on SUNDAY NEXT, at the ASSEMBLY ROOMS, Lyme Grove, St. Thomas's Square, Mare Street, Hackney, by Rev. H. MARRIOTT, M.A. (Late Missionary to the Jews at Tanjier). Hours of worship, 11 a.m. and 3 p.m.

MERRICK'S PATENT BELT and BRACE SUSPENSION TRUSS. Washable, Efficient, and Comfortable. No steel spring or hard pad. Pamphlets post free. Address, mentioning this advertisement, "Patentee," No. 4, Lower Park-row, Bristol.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, 5 Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW, WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 24, 1879. [All Rights Reserved.]

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. III. No. 144. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 1, 1879. [DOUBLE NUMBER, TWOPENCE.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
Cabul	389
"It Looks Like Armageddon!"	390
"The Company of Spearmen"	390
Israel "The Head and Not the Tail"—"Above Only and Not Beneath"—in Respect to the "Post Office	391
Our Opponents.—The Rev. Thomas Parrar, of Demerara	392
On Weights and Measures. By E. P.	393
A Zulu on Israel's Stone Kingdom	394
German Protestantism as Testified by a German Statesman	394
The Rev. C. H. Spurgeon Gives Blind Testimony Again	396
French Radical Testimony in Favour of Lord Beaconsfield	395
A Clergyman's Testimony From Quebec in Canada	396
The Geography of the Gates. No. XXXIII.—Labuan	397
The Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association at Work in Exeter	397
Russia, France, and Italy	399
Ashes Over Glowing Embers. By L. P.	400
Another Reductio ad Absurdum.—John Butterworth's Suggestion as to Psa. ii. 8.	401
The "Open Gates"	401
The Lintel and the Two Side Posts. By John T. Gott	402
"The Great Pyramid" Receiving Attention in New South Wales	402
Confirmations From Montreal. By A Bent Oar	402
Are Israel's Blessings Millennial Only?—By H. Sowdon	403
Review	403
Correspondence	403

CABUL.

VERY clearly the Word of God discloses to us, His people Israel, the character which the very name of this place, the capital of Afghanistan, bears. It is "displeasing" or "dirty." Hiram so called the twenty cities Solomon gave him in the land of Galilee. He came out of Tyre to see them—was "displeased" when he saw them; and said to Israel's king, "What cities are these that thou hast given me, my brother? and he called them the land of CABUL" ("displeasing" or "dirty," margin) "to this day" (1 Kings ix. 10—14; Joshua xix. 27). The inhabitants of the modern "dirty" and "displeasing" Afghan city, Cabul, present, if Jews, exactly the counterpart of God's description of "treacherous Judah." Their conduct to their guest and to the embassy living at peace in their midst, has covered their nation, their city, their country, and themselves with eternal infamy! "Cabul" is not now so much "dirty and displeasing" as a place utterly "cursed," and worthy of a fate which might sweep it away as with a besom of destruction; leaving behind it only the memory of an evil reputation. We wish, however, for a better revenge; and that for murder we may repay to Cabul the blessings of the Gospel.

The massacre of our noble, gallant, and deeply deplored envoy, Sir Louis Cavagnari, of his three British comrades, of his seventy-six faithful native body-guard of the Panjabi guides, was, indeed, a terrible disaster! It ranks in our view in the same category with Insandlwana. We doubt not the appalling event was sent us by a kind and merciful Father with the very same object in view. God's will has to be done by us His people, who are His "battle axe," and His instrument for the accomplishment of His wise purposes. Before Insandlwana happened, no power on earth would have forced our race to annex or occupy Zululand, destroy its blood-thirsty, guilty polity, or dethrone its king. But God forced us by reason of that terrible event to invade the country, defeat the armies of Cetywayo, depose him, and assume, at first indirectly, the government of the land ourselves. No reasonable man can doubt that the complete annexation of Zululand and its government by British officers will be the only safe or possible outcome of what is past; and thus Insandlwana has taught us a South African lesson we never should have learnt, excepting through that heavy and very grievous blow.

The murder of our envoy and his suite in Cabul is another precept and monition of the very same character we believe. God gave us Afghan territory to occupy, and pointed to the capital as our destination. In our blind ignorance we mistook the signals, unselfishly renounced the forward movement, declined to advance, and retired to "the three Gates" we had resolved to keep, thinking God meant we should go "thus far" Westward, "but no further!" But God's will, we believe, was that we should hold Cabul, Candahar, and we now think Herat as well; that the time had come for Israel to dominate over the whole of Afghanistan. What alone would now force us forward? Can we conceive of *any*thing short of what has happened compelling us to attack, take, and occupy in strength, not only Candahar, the Shaturgurdan Pass, and Jellalabad, but Cabul itself? We cannot! And this being God's will, and there being no other way to force us to do that will, we think we see that He has sent us this disaster to drive us forward. Once in Cabul, we believe retreat from an annexation policy will be as impossible as it has hitherto always proved. We acted precisely thus in reference to the Panjab. We conquered the Sikhs in the first campaign, and restored to them their own land. They rose again, and for the second time we brought them to the dust. We were on that occasion compelled, as we are in regard to Zululand to-day, and as we shall be in reference to Afghanistan to-morrow, to hold the land in perpetuity, and to carry out our God's wise will in reference to Israel's dominion. "For the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, SHALL be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, even to the children of Israel"—the British. And why should we be surprised, or grieved, or anxious when the Lord Himself urges us forward, and, in spite of ourselves, commands us to annex to our already world-wide Empire yet more and more masses of earth, and greater and greater multitudes of men? Foreign nations perceive our destiny more clearly than we do ourselves in regard to Afghanistan, and we find that our President, Lord Folkestone, in sending us the following extract, is also struck with the fact that Lord Beaconsfield's policy, as foreshadowed in "Tancred," is about to lead, not only to the speedy construction of "The way of the kings of the East," but that, holding Syria and Asiatic Turkey, we are aiming to govern Afghanistan as well, through Syria and Persia. Our extract is as follows. It appeared in the Standard of September 11th, 1879:—

Digitized by Google

The Deutsche Zeitung believes that there will now be a fulfilment of the prediction which Mr. Disraeli made in "Tancred"—namely that Afghanistan shall be ruled through Persia and Arabia. This newspaper, therefore, expects that England, immediately after having crushed the revolution, will unite the Mediterranean with India by a great railway. It says that a railway from Lahore to Cabul would much better guarantee the sway of England over Afghanistan than ten regiments in Cabul. The article ends in this way:—

"Lord Beaconsfield is not the man to shrink from difficulties. The plan of governing Afghanistan through Syria and Persia is on everybody's tongue. Both the occupation of Cyprus and the sovereignty of Asia Minor are steps in this direction. We shall probably soon hear of other surprises, as Lord Beaconsfield has already sometimes given us before, to the admiration of the English people, and of Europe."

For ourselves, we entertain no doubt that our present troubles in Cabul have been fomented by Russia, in order, during the confusion, to seize upon Merv. This step must necessitate our occupation of Herat, which, being the last Gate of Afghan territory towards Central Asia and the West, will bring Israel and Israel's foes—the Russian Empire—face to face in Asia. That event will prepare the way by-and-bye for that last great and terrible day of the Lord—the war of Armageddon, to be waged from the Hindu Khoosh in the East, to the Mediterranean coasts of Palestine on the West, between Israel and her prophetic foes, "The chief prince of Rosh" and all his Northern bands (Ezek. xxxviii. 2), what time the Lord personally comes to Israel's help, and utterly destroys His enemies by those tremendous instrumentalities described in Ezek xxxviii. and xxxix. with such minutiae.

Reader, let us look on passing events without fear or distress; the Lord is at the helm (Isa. xli. 10—16). These are not His rebukes or angry visitations for our sins, as men would have us think (Isa. liv. 8, 9). They are, we believe, rather the workings out of His providential arrangements for the devolution of His designs; and if we suffer from our ignorance of His purposes, we know, nevertheless, that those purposes must and will be accomplished, in spite of our ignorant opposition, by us, and through us, and in us, but altogether and always to God's glory and not for ours.

"IT LOOKS LIKE ARMAGEDDON!"

We quote above the words of the Bristol Times and Mirror of Sept. 9, 1879. The paragraph in which they occur will be found below, and we think them so important that we beg for them our readers' most earnest attention. The writer was pointing out how the irritation lately observed between Russia and Germany was for the moment passing off, but that Italy and Austria had a cause of angry contention in Italia Irredenta (unredeemed Italy), which, put off for the present, remains a fretting sore between the two nations, ready to break out into war and national trouble when God's good time for the "fiery deluge" shall have come. What the Times and Mirror said regarding the quarrel between Austria and Italy was this—

Austria, through Colonel Haymerle, tells the Italians she would fight every inch of Trieste and the Trentine Valley rather than surrender them; the Libertà tells the Austrians that the question is not on the order of the day of international relations. Italy does not admit Austria's right to the unredeemed provinces, neither does it expect Austria to attack the Italians because, like other peoples, they have aspirations. "Let it be understood on both sides that when we want the provinces of Italia Irredenta, we will go and take them by force, and Austria on her side will defend her possessions inch by inch. But let it be also understood that, inasmuch as we have not the most distant idea of moving to make that conquest or of permitting others to do so, and inasmuch as Austria on her side cannot be so mad as to undertake a war against those who do not attack her, it is consequently useless to discuss mere hypotheses devoid of any kind of foundation." The question is thus postponed. We fear it is only postponed, just as the quarrel between Russia and Germany is postponed, and the war of revenge between France and the conqueror of Sédan. When that evil time comes, if it come soon, it does not need a prophetic eye to see, at least five Powers of Europe drawn up in two main lines—Germany and Russia contesting for the Baltic provinces, Austria aiding Germany in return for favours received, France helping Russia by trying to get back Alsace and Lorraine, and Italy striking in on Austria to get Italia Irredenta. IT LOOKS LIKE ARMAGEDDON; but it may be only a scare.

It has not only the "look," but is in very truth the deepening shadow of a coming event big with the fate of nations, and which will develop into Armageddon ere long. It is remarkable that the secular journalist hits upon the "three against two" and "two against three" we have lately contended must ere long be in antagonism in Europe. The editor, we fancy, knows something of our Identity, but, like many of his kind, does not think it safe yet to avow belief. When the thing is manifest, and our Identity fully revealed, doubtless he, and others like him, will declare he knew it all along!

"THE COMPANY OF SPEARMEN."

A FRIEND writing to us from Kimberley, in South Africa, not far from the scene of the Zulu disturbances, points out that the only nation now in hostility to us who can be named as par excellence "spearmen"—men fighting with assegais or spears—who are brave to a fault, and thus disdain the use of any other weapons of offence but spear and shield—are the Zulus. They "delight in war." In Psa. lxviii. 30, 31, David sings certainly of Africa. His theme is the future of Egypt, of Ethiopia, or the Morians' (Moors') land, and in ver. 30 a people "who delight in war" are spoken of as "a company of spearmen," destined to be "scattered," "rebuked" by the God of Israel, and directed to "submit" themselves, prior to the issue of "princes from Egypt" and the conversion—"soon"—of Africa or Ethiopia unto God. Even that again is declared in ver. 32 to be an event which synchronises with the "kingdoms of the earth" singing unto God, singing praises unto the God, not of Israel only, but of the whole world. The glorious fact for our contemplation in all these references is this—that the Lord's "excellency" is declared to be over Israel and His strength is in the heavens (margin, ver. 34), giving strength and "power unto His people! Blessed be God!" (ver. 35).

Should our Cape friend's hint be correct as to the Identity of the Zulus with "the company of the spearmen" whom the Lord is urged "to rebuke," "to cause to submit," and to scatter, we have in this passage cause to thank God for a great encouragement. We have reason to bless Him for the good hope of the evangelisation through our means, of not only Egypt, but of all Africa as well; for our readers must reflect that God's people Israel have not had "strength and power" and "God's excellency" bestowed on them for nothing, but that He means in so distinguishing them to fulfil His covenant with "Abraham our forefather," and make us by these means a "blessing to all the families and all the nations of the earth," African, with the Zulu, nations, being especially named.

Digitized by Google

ISRAEL "THE HEAD AND NOT THE TAIL"—"ABOVE ONLY, AND NOT BENEATH"—IN RESPECT TO THE "POST OFFICE."

AT one of the meetings of the British Association, some years ago, it was proposed to assume as the proper test of a nation's civilisation the amount of correspondence which goes on within it through the public institution of the post office. Some think this would be one of the very best criteria of the condition of a people in respect to the amount of the civilisation to be found among them. If it is the fact that possibly Manasseh has even a larger amount of business passing through the post office than ourselves, we shall not grudge a Tribe of Israel that honour. But we do say, and shall now prove it, that no other nation upon earth even nearly approaches ours in the enormous volume of its letters, newspapers, post-cards, and telegrams, actually passing through the post.

Take a few facts. In Manchester alone the number of letters passing through the post office is greater than all those put together passing through the whole Empire of Russia. Again, "There is no country in the world where thirty millions of people carry on, in the course of the year, even a THIRD of the correspondence that passes through our post office in one form or another." Some of the figures presented to us in the Postmaster-General's last report, printed as a blue book, are sufficiently astounding. Let us present some of the nuggets to our readers as a proof that, in the matter of this index of our national civilisation, we are incomparably beyond all our Gentile neighbours.

The post office in England this year has carried more than a THOUSAND FOUR HUNDRED MILLIONS of letters, being nearly forty millions more letters than it carried last year, nine millions more post-cards, two millions and a half more newspapers than before. Yet these enormous numbers representing the increased correspondence were only four per cent. of letters, two per cent. of post-cards, and one per cent. of newspapers additional to, or in excess of, those carried last year. The registered letters passing through the post are now seven millions, and promise to be twelve millions the end of this year.

The undelivered letters dealt with during this year were five millions. The post-cards, book packets, and newspapers which were not delivered were over four millions. "London is the best customer of the post office—out of all proportion the best. With a population which is less than an eighth that of the country it takes more than one-fourth of the letters delivered in the United Kingdom. The London letters delivered to nearly five millions of people are more than twice as numerous as the letters delivered in all Scotland, and above three times as numerous as those delivered in all Ireland. One London firm alone receives on an average three thousand letters every morning. In the city proper (E.C.) about one million letters are delivered at the first or morning delivery every day. About the same number are posted at the General Post Office every week; more than half a million at the branch office, Lombard-street; nearly as many at the branch office in Mark-lane; and about 200,000 at the Ludgate-circus office" (Bristol Times and Mirror, Sept. 1, 1879). These are some of the astonishing results of the enormous operations now carried on by Israel's post office. Where can they be matched abroad in Gentile lands? Nowhere! As we have seen in one of our large, but by no means the largest, town (Manchester), the correspondence exceeds that of the whole of the mighty Empire of all the Russias. Learn, then, the comparative civilisation of Israel and of her prophetic future foes. No Gentile nation on the face of the earth can compare, not even by a third of the amount, with ours in respect to their correspondence in letters, post-cards, and telegrams.

Again, where do we find a nation like ours which in the vast volume of its business, and its correspondence, voluntarily brings it all to a dead stand every Saturday night in its great metropolis, and for twenty-four hours allows no letter to be delivered there, no letter to be issued there to the public, and this simply and solely because of the Lord's command that the Sabbath shall be kept holy for His name. Here, then, is a glorious unique fact, making ours that nation which is far above all Gentile races. "Above, not beneath"—"the head and not the tail"—pre-eminent in recognition of the commands of the Lord their God.

A further unique fact connected with this subject is, that the gift of cheap postage to the masses was first thought of and put into practice by the late Sir Rowland Hill for the benefit of this nation. Ours was the first nation in the world to recognise the magnificent boon cheap postage would be to the people, and having given it to them here, we find that our Gentile neighbours are tardily learning the lesson, and imitating us. But as yet, for want of education or civilisation, no nation possesses even a third of our national correspondence, and consequently our post office remains "the head and not the tail—above only and not beneath"—all others in the European world, for cheapness, for the enormous bulk of the operations, and for the blessings which have thus been secured for the people of this land. Even in these times of severe distress, when, as Mr. Henry Varley tells us, the "decline of England" is reduced to a mere matter of certainty, and we must be bankrupt as a nation before many years are passed (1882 does not exist for Mr. V.!), the Postmaster-General assures us that his office at least does not show signs of decline; but, on the contrary, has more business than ever, more telegraph messages than ever along the lines, more post-cards are being used, more money is sent through the office by registered letters than heretofore.

The Times and Mirror of Bristol has given us an amusing contrast between the British post office of to-day and the work it did forty years ago, which we think our readers will enjoy in these times of pessimists, and of the dismal forebodings of such croakers as Mr. Henry Varley who has just been publishing his view to the world. The extract is as follows:—

> The way to test the magnitude of these post office figures is to compare them with the figures we find in the earlier reports of the Postmaster-General, when the whole correspondence of the country was a great deal less than this of the City of London itself. It is said that in the last year of the old system of high rates the total number of letters passing through the post office was only about eighty millions, and seven millions of these were franks. It is said that on one occasion, only a single mail bag left London, and that that bag contained only one letter! That was forty years ago. Yet to-day more correspondence is carried on by the electric telegraph in a week than was then carried on by the mail bag in a year, and it was supposed that when the post office took over the telegraphs, the telegraphs at the shilling tariff would supersede to a great extent the use of the post office. But as a matter of fact the work of the post office has increased with every development of the telegraph system instead of decreasing, and even this year, with all the talk of the depression in trade, there is an increase of over three hundred thousand in the number of messages! The total number of messages passing along the wires in the year is close upon five-and-twenty millions, and independently of business and private messages the newspapers and clubs draw upon the post office for intelligence to the tune of nearly three hundred millions of words! It is quite as much as the post office can do to keep pace with the increasing demands of the public, and if the private companies had kept the wires in their hands, they must have doubled their capital long ago or have allowed their instruments to come to a dead lock. The post office has now a quadruplex apparatus at work—that is, an apparatus by means of which one wire is made capable of conveying four streams of messages, two in each direction, and of doing this simultaneously, without the slightest confusion or risk of confusion! Yet twenty years ago it was thought a marvellous thing that science could make a wire speak at all. It now transmits four messages at one and the same time, and transmits these messages as quickly as they can be read off by a clerk who transcribes with the speed of a shorthand writer. The next thing the telegraph wire will do will be to transcribe its own messages; and it will not be long before that is done. The financial results of all this telegraphy are hardly as satisfactory as the service itself; but there is a profit nevertheless, a profit of nearly £100,000, and in a few years this profit will probably be considerably increased. The cheapest work that the post office does is done upon the telegraph wires, and it is the service from which the commercial part of the community derives the chief benefit.

Digitized by Google

We commend the above to Mr. H. Varley as something to comfort him in the prospect he has pictured for us of the commercial bankruptcy of the land. "A large proportion of our trade (he says) is irretrievably gone." "There has been a national loss between exports and imports of £614,000,000 in five years," and "the national reserves are being rapidly expended," "the crisis of the national ruin is at hand." Verily, Mr. H. Varley, a noted pessimist, seems to gloat over these dismal figures. But the Postmaster-General tells quite a different tale, and so does the First Lord of the Admiralty regarding the national savings banks (see BANNER No. 113, page 85). When a nation realises, as ours has done hitherto, something like two thousand four hundred millions sterling during the past ten years (page 22, BANNER No. 106), and is laying by two hundred and forty millions sterling per annum, it is not a very serious or dangerous symptom to find in a time of universal distress, when all the nations are equally depressed, that ours should be a temporary sufferer in regard to her savings to the extent of one hundred out of two hundred and forty millions she has regularly laid by for the last decade.

The tide has now, please God, turned, and even Mr. H. Varley may soon have cause to rejoice should he find that he has faithlessly distrusted the kind and loving Father who "hath never failed nor forsaken His people Israel," and has especially told them "to remember the Lord their God who giveth them power to get wealth" (Deut. viii. 18, xxxi. 6). Mr. Varley does not believe in our Identity. He is therefore ignorant of our national security. He misses also more than half the comforts to which he is entitled as an Israelite. May our God soon open his eyes, and those of our nation, to "see" our blessed position of safety as the Lord's inheritance, His heritage, and His chosen ones; for we are indeed His purchased and redeemed possession, and it were sin to doubt His truth who has promised all blessings to, and shed His blood for, US.

OUR OPPONENTS.

THE REV. THOMAS FARRAR, OF DEMERARA.

WE lately considered what Mr. W. Creighton, of Thames, New Zealand, had to say against our Identity, and we did not find it came to much. We now have the unwelcome duty imposed on us of introducing to the British-Israelites a new opponent from British Guiana—"the Rev. Thomas Farrar, member of the Diocesan Council, Rector of St. Paul, and Chaplain to the Bishop of Barbadoes," &c. Mr. Farrar is an author too. He has written several small works, such as, "Naboth: an Example," "Mercy: a Warning," and he now appears against our Identity as a Demerara "Philalethes," under the title of "Truth versus Philo-Israel." In twelve pages and a postscript, the unfortunate editor of the BANNER OF ISRAEL is proved, in Mr. Farrar's estimation, to be the opposite of "Truth," and what that may be we dare not suggest to ears polite!

The much-maligned editor of this journal, however (nothing abashed), having done battle with the Rev. R. Cornall, the Rev. J. B. Clifford, the Rock newspaper, the Rev. Samuel A. Walker, and many another strong "Reverend" here and elsewhere, does not fear the face of the Rev. Thomas Farrar! And why? Because the Rev. Thomas Farrar, like so many of his cloth, has rushed into print against "Philo-Israel" without having first taken the trouble to read what "Philo-Israel" says and wrote! One would hardly believe such a thing possible in a clerk in holy orders, a rector of a parish, a chaplain to a bishop too! But the fact is so, nevertheless! The pamphlet was "published by request," and, had we not had a friend at Demerara, who, as soon as the same was out, interposed boldly on the 13th May, 1879, in the Royal Gazette newspaper of George Town, and exposed the Rev. Mr. Farrar as a "writer without knowledge," our views would have been in danger of misrepresentation in British Guiana. Our "English Israelite," however, denounced Mr. Farrar very properly thus:—"It is simply impossible to follow the Rev. Mr. Farrar through his pamphlet. He gives no references when he quotes what he says are 'Philo-Israel's' writings, but which, in many other instances besides those I have cited, I know not to be so! It would be unprofitable to follow him when we find the quotations in question culminate in the assertion that the promise of God to His friend Abraham was intended for the use and benefit of the son of the bondwoman—ISHMAEL!!" Such is, indeed, the fact, and what Mr. Farrar says! We wonder if our reverend opponents here in England—Messrs. Cornall, Walker, Clifford, and Benson—like the line their rev. brother in George Town takes, as a well-read, learned Biblical scholar?

"I know," says Mr. Farrar (p. 10), "that to Ishmael and to his descendants a temporal kingdom was promised (Gen. xvii. 20). 'As for Ishmael, I have heard thee. Behold, I have blessed him, and will make him fruitful, and will multiply him exceedingly; twelve princes shall he beget, and I will make him a GREAT NATION'—the very thing contended for by the prophet of the new revelation." "The temporal kingdom was most undoubtedly ISHMAEL'S. This temporal Messiah and earthly kingdom the House of Israel coveted" (p. 12). "This, I repeat, was the PROPER PORTION OF ISHMAEL; and the earthly crown and temporal conqueror which the Israelites thirsted after, his (Ishmael's) posterity obtained. MAHOMET, in a word, was to the Arab precisely what the House of Israel expected the Messiah would be to them, and what the new revelation" (our Identity) "expects to be to us now."

This, then, is the last outcome of the opposition to God's truth! No earthly kingdom was, we are told, promised to Israel, but only one to Ishmael and his seed! Mr. Farrar, of course, never read Gen. xxi. 12: "For in Isaac shall thy seed be called." Nor Gen. xii. 2: "I will make thee (Abraham) a great nation." I will make thy name "great." Nor Gen. xvii. 6: "I will make nations of thee, and kings shall come out of thee." Nor Gen. xviii. 18: "Abraham shall surely become a GREAT and MIGHTY nation, and all nations of the earth shall be blessed in him"—including among the "blessed" Ishmael also, Mr. Farrar! (Gen. xxvii. 29); and we recollect, do we not, what Melchizedek said to our forefather in Gen. xiv. 19? and what St. Paul's comment on that fact was in Rom. iv. 13?

We could, of course, add text to text to prove the utter fatuity of our would-be clerical teacher. But it is not needed. A babe in Bible-lore can set Mr. Farrar right, and show him that "the nation" to whom the great earthly dominion, described as "the kingdom and dominion and greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven," is promised in God's Word, is "the people of the saints of the Most High;" and that "people," the Bible tells us (though Mr. Farrar does not seem to know it), are the "CHILDREN OF ISRAEL—a people near unto Jehovah. Praise ye the Lord!" but certainly not now, and never will be, Ishmael's, or any of his descendants! (Dan. vii. 27; Psa. cxlviii. 14). We do not know which most to admire: the wisdom of the Rev. Dr. Verity, who declares the Turks are "the Lost Ten Tribes;" or the wonderful knowledge of Scripture the Chaplain of the Bishop of Barbadoes manifests when he tells us gravely that God's Word promised the great temporal kingdom of this earth (with Messiah at its head, we suppose?), not to Israel, but to ISHMAEL! (In our extracts all CAPITALS and italics are exactly reproduced from the Rev. Mr. Farrar's pamphlet.)

Digitized by Google

We do not propose to answer Mr. Farrar seriatim. What is new in his pamphlet is not true; and what is old has been over and over again refuted in our pages. Much is written to throw ridicule on the story of Jacob's Stone, Jeremiah, and the Princess Tephi. It seems to be implied by the pamphlet's title—"Truth versus Philo-Israel"—that this is an argument in proof of our Identity on which we are accustomed chiefly to rely in the BANNER OF ISRAEL, or in our writings generally. How untrue that is our readers best know! But Mr. Farrar does not know, because, as we remarked before, he has not read the bulk of "Philo-Israel's" writings! On the following points our opponent has something to say, but nothing new:—

1. That the one Tribe left to Rehoboam in 2 Kings xvii. 18 (!) was not Benjamin, but Judah! Here, of course, he mistakes the passage. It is 1 Kings xi. 13, 32, 36, to which we refer. But Mr. Farrar, alluding to these verses, sees no reference there to the "one Tribe" selection!

2. That we depend on Jer. xxxiii. 15, 16, 26, to show Christians are improperly termed spiritual Israel (!). We find the reference is to page 66, "Flashes of Light," and the statement is correct. Let Mr. Farrar show that Scripture speaks of "spiritual Israel" anywhere.

3. That Ten-Tribed Israel also crucified our Lord, since St. Peter so addressed those he accused as "men of Israel," and they were all "Jews" together. Therefore we suppose the Ten Tribes and the Two Tribes were one and the same people in St. Peter's days, and all termed "Jews?"

4. That our "separation and our mixture" of texts relating to the names of "Israel," "House of Israel," "House of Judah," and the "Jews," are of such a character that it may well puzzle the most famous universities to analyse them (page 9). We suppose these names do not occur in Mr. Farrar's edition of the Bible, and that in somewhat confusing sequence to those readers who have not yet mastered the "Scriptural distinction?"

5. In regard to "everlasting punishment," Mr. Farrar quotes "Philo-Israel" twice; referring in the appendix to pages 104, 105, "Flashes of Light!!"—but the words we know were never written by us (page 9). There is nothing in them we think wrong, but they bear internal evidence from the style that they are not ours. We mention this fact to show how careless our author is when he quotes "Philo-Israel." These misquotations occur on page 9, sect. viii.

6. Finally, after much flippant writing, but little argument, our Demerara opponent believes he extinguishes us utterly by asking (page 10), "Is Nature, the pure natural signification, after all, stronger than Nature's God—grace? . . . . Are we to believe that the Ten Tribes were never at any time under the curse, only Judah?" The fact is, the Rev. Mr. Farrar's pamphlet is almost unintelligible in parts because he never comes to any point; and where he thinks he makes one, as in the instance above last quoted, his meaning is so obscure, and his argument (if any) so concealed, that one can make nothing of it!

We bid adieu to Mr. Farrar without regret. He has done our cause no good in George Town it is true, but he has done it no harm! His gifts do not enable him to do that! We are glad to hear, in spite of his opposition, that our friends propose now to have an association there. And by-and-bye, perhaps, even the Rev. Thomas Farrar may be induced to join it, to learn at its meetings not only what "Philo-Israel" has written, but what the Identity of the British with Lost Israel really means! We are quite sure he has not the very remotest notion now!

NOTE.—From Mr. Farrar's "References," on page 16, 2nd edit., we find he had never read a page of BANNER, or any of "Philo-Israel's" writings, but pp. 3 and 4 of the "Résumé," when he published! He is under the impression that "P.-I." is the author of the "Forty-seven Identifications," the "Flashes of Light," "Cui Bono?" and the like, thus proving that he has not even had the energy or taken the trouble to find out whose writings he was denouncing when he indited "Truth versus Philo-Israel!" When will the clergy learn that for perfunctory work they must be brought to severe account, and that exposure is sure to follow such foolish criticisms as the Rev. Thomas Farrar's?

ON WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

BY E. P.

IT may be, few persons are aware of the immense influence, for good or evil, the metrology of a country exercises on its inhabitants, being closely associated with the religious belief there professed; all history clearly showing how every departure from righteous standards of weight and measure is invariably preceded by departure from the true worship of God.

We may be quite sure that when Adam was sent out of Eden, God gave to him the sacred cubit of 25 inches, other weights and measures being in accordance, as the basis of righteous dealing between man and man, which were duly acted on by the "sons of God" in contradistinction to the works of the "children of men;" because we find Satan, who always travesties all God's works, inciting Cain to oppose Him, setting up his false standard of 20·7 inches as the basis of his dealings with men; asserting thereby his self-righteousness, denial of sin, and therefore having no need of a Saviour and His atonement, which in time led to every wickedness, corruption, and violence, "bringing in the flood on the ungodly."

We know the Almighty did not leave Himself without a witness for righteousness, for we find His sacred measures were over and over again recorded in the building of the ark and the Great Pyramid; expressly again given to Moses for the erection of the tabernacle, and also to David for the building of the temple.

Now in what does righteousness consist? The Bible tells us, "Noah was a preacher of righteousness"—that is, he acted with integrity, honesty, and uprightness in all his actions, he was a just man—the first, last, and only thing accounted of by a righteous God, for He commandeth, "Ye shall do no unrighteousness in judgment, in length measure, in weight, or in measure of capacity. Just balances, just weights, a just ephah, and a just hin shall ye have. Thou shalt not have divers weights; thou shalt have a perfect and just weight, for all who do otherwise are an abomination to the Lord thy God" (Levit. xix. 35—37).

Now the Cainite or false standard of measure may be considered as the badge of Paganism, being used by the Assyrians, Babylonians, Egyptians, Chaldeans, Phœnicians, and all early historic nations, excepting the Hebrews, or God's chosen people, and even by them in their various idolatries; it continued in use till the times of the Greeks and Romans, when another religious idea being inaugurated, the standard of measures was necessarily changed to 18·24 inches. This was the classic period, when gods and goddesses, demi-gods and heroes, more or less Divine, were manufactured, diverging still further and further from the truth of revelation, which religion more or less dominated over millions of souls, and did not finally cease till replaced by the Christian religion, which, though it professedly did not bring in any new metrology, yet, as it was impossible to return to the Cainite standard of 20·7 inches, still some standard of weight and measure it must have. History informs us that in the latter days of the Roman Empire, Europe was inundated by immense Asiatic hordes of people from East to West, Goths, Huns, and Vandals, as they were first called, Saxons, Germans, and Scandinavians, as they called themselves, and long-lost Israelites, as some of them are now understood to be. These settled down in the countries they over-ran, and as each country accepted Christianity, it adopted the divers weights and measures each brought, for in those dark ages there were no schools or colleges to teach the care and science of metrology, which, even to this day, has unhappily experienced the world's contempt as if only belonging to trifles, never-ending contradictions and changes. Herein is clearly shown the love, mercy, and over-ruling wisdom of God, for these multitudinous varieties of weights did no spiritual harm (being radically opposed to and different from the Cainite and Theotechnic metrologies of old), ordained to last only for a time, till the second coming of the Redeemer, when His kingdom shall be set up for ever, with one universal standard of righteousness for all mankind.

Digitized by Google

The peculiar wickedness of men in modern times culminated about 1800, in the out-come of atheism at the French revolution, of course necessitating a change in metrology to a standard of 39·37 inches. It is true the Cainite Egyptian sinners never denied the existence of the Almighty, His power, or the truth of His revelations to the patriarchs; the deluge was too near to have any doubt on the subject, yet they hated Him, and strove to keep up their courage by banding together. The Greeks and Romans, too, never denied His existence, or the truth of the traditions of the Messiah ; but they perverted them to their own use in building up the system of human gods, and with the Cainite nations they refused to worship Him ; yet the French have dared to go further, denying His being and the truth of the Scriptures ; asserting man's reason and intellect as supreme, being ruler and owner of this world, by means of development and scientific education.

This atheistic standard of 39·37 inches, the symbol of the rule of man without a God above him, has been accepted by all the nations of Europe, the new republics in South America, and other countries Eastward ; Great Britain and America being the only ones which still retain their national weights and measures, though in some measure these have been changed, shewing how much deceit, trickery, double-dealing, and chicanery, are rampant amongst us even now.

What then, we ask, is the result of the eighty years' introduction of the atheistic weights and measures ? It is plainly seen in the Nihilistic, Socialistic, Communistic, infidel, and materialistic societies with which Europe is inundated ; and as the end of the Christian dispensation is close at hand, it will, no doubt, eventually culminate in the great apostacy, when "the man of sin" will be manifested, causing another change in metrology, for the Bible tells us he will ordain that "no man buy or sell save he that hath the mark of the beast."

For these thoughts I am largely indebted to Prof. Piazzi Smyth's paper on "Weights and Measures ;" and only trust they may lead us nationally to cling more to our old Saxon measures, and to reject with horror the atheistic metre.

A ZULU ON ISRAEL'S STONE KINGDOM.

"A Watcher," ever vigilant as a watcher of Ephraim should be, has sent us a notice of the speech made by John Eama, one of the Christian Zulus who fought for us at all the late battles, including Ulundi. "A Watcher" pointed out to us what we had already observed—viz., that this poor African sees what our own clergy are blind and cannot perceive—that is, that "there is no other rock on earth like the Englishman." This we take to be the native way of describing the British as "the stone kingdom," which God is about to establish on the earth. The Zulu warrior reverently discriminated between things that differ, for he pointed out in his speech what our spiritualisers here fail to see—that God has a stone kingdom on the earth, one which may be regarded as an "earthly rock," whereon all mundane affairs depend. That stone is the kingdom of Israel, shortly to be established in the world under the Lord's own rule and governance. But besides that, the Zulu saw there was a "spiritual stone," or "Rock," who was his sole rock and protection in all his battles with the enemy. This was the true view. For the Lord is indeed the spiritual Rock which followed Israel in the wilderness, and that Rock was Christ. But this fact does not prevent the existence of the typical rock on earth, the earthly and yet God-sanctioned, God-blessed "stone kingdom" to be set up in this lower world ; the stone God Himself has promised shall break all the other kingdoms into pieces, and "fill the whole earth" itself as a "mountainous kingdom."

The account published in the Times of the 4th September, 1879, of John Eama's speech made at a luncheon given in Natal in honour of the returning detachment of the mounted native contingent sent from Edendale into Zululand, was as follows :—

"The Zulus," he said, "would not let them drink out of the Umvolosi river and fired on them, so Colonel Buller took them across to turn the Zulus out of their position. They did so, and the next day before dawn they started for the battle, the soldiers marching in a beautiful formation. They said that this battle would be fought to the death. The soldiers made a nice ring or square. They were ordered to draw the Zulus on to the square, which they did. Then they retired into the square which was a living laager, made of the soldiers' bodies, and directly afterwards there was fire all round. The soldiers fought laughing and soon there were hurrahs. Shortly afterwards the mounted men were told that the enemy were now given over to them and were theirs now. So they pursued and trod them under their horses' feet. Time would not permit him to say all he saw, but he learnt a lesson and saw there was no other rock on earth like the Englishman, and he felt throughout that God had been their sole rock and protection."

We doubt not that God has put the fear of our race, by means of that culminating battle of Ulundi, on the whole of the South African nations ; and that henceforth they will regard ours as a veritable "rock" on earth—one the like of which is not to be found upon the earth elsewhere ! By this means the growth of the "stone kingdom" in South Africa must needs be promoted. But the fact need not injure our spiritual welfare if we learn from this poor Zulu that there is a yet far higher "Rock" in the heavens, at God's right hand—the spiritual Rock, who is our "sole defence and protector," even the Lord Jesus Christ !

GERMAN PROTESTANTISM AS TESTIFIED BY A GERMAN STATESMAN.

At the meeting of the Evangelical Alliance, held at Basle on Sept. 1, 1879, the chair at the Conference was taken by the President of the Swiss Alliance, M. Charles Sarasin, ex-Councillor of State. He spoke in German, and, inter alia, stated, as illustrative of the condition of religion on the Continent at present, as follows (Times, Sept. 4, 1879):—

"There was, on the one hand, the widespread infidelity, especially among the working classes; and, on the other, the authority claimed by the Church of Rome, which had committed the grave offence of placing the Church on the throne of God. He had received a letter from a friend of his own—a German statesman—in which he said that, 'Religion, as the basis of morals, had vanished from the middle classes of Germany,' and he could not help believing that one result of that great evil was to be seen in the increased number of suicides in Europe, no fewer than one in every 450 of the population of Switzerland alone having taken place in one year. But the Assembly ought not only to be a witness to Christendom, it ought also to bear practical fruit. If the difficulties they had to contend with were great, they must not despair of overcoming them. When Richard the Second, as given in their English 'Shakespeare,' had to face fearful odds, his words to his soldiers were, 'Look not to the ground, ye favourites of a king; look high.' So, in like manner, although they also had to face fearful odds, he would say to his brethren one and all, 'You are engaged in a great and glorious warfare; look not to the ground, ye favourites of the King of kings, but look high.' (Applause.)"

Digitized by Google

We argue, from the above, what we accept on the testimony of foreigners themselves—viz., that "the cities (or Churches) of the nations" (the Gentiles) "have fallen" (Rev. xvi. 19). The middle classes of Germany now are "without religion as the basis of morals!" This appears to us as the fearful preparation for that revolutionary and terrific outburst which God's Word calls "an earthquake, such as was not since men were upon earth; so mighty an earthquake, so great." A people among the middle classes, whose "religion as the basis of morals has vanished," is in a condition terrible to contemplate! As we know what Socialism and "widespread infidelity" has done for the lower strata of German society, we have here a picture of that nation which it is impossible to regard without grave misgivings! No wonder "men's hearts on the Continent are failing them for fear and for looking after those things which are coming on the" (prophetic) "earth" which they occupy!

Reader, let us thank God that, being Israel, the Lord has saved our race (just as undeserving and just as vile a race as the Germans) from this terrible affliction, for His Word tells us, that "when these things begin to come to pass"—those things we see in Germany, in France, in Switzerland, in Russia—"then lift up YOUR heads" (Israel's heads), "for YOUR redemption" (your national redemption) "draweth nigh!" (Luke xxi. 28).

We call on our friends to praise the Lord for His mercies to us His people, and to "watch and to pray always that we may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to STAND before the Son of Man" (Luke xxi. 36).

THE REV. C. H. SPURGEON GIVES BLIND TESTIMONY AGAIN.

LET the reader ponder on the great preacher's words as quoted below from his sermon delivered at the Metropolitan Tabernacle, Newington, on Sunday, Jan. 13, 1878. For "Gentiles" let the reader understand (what Mr. Spurgeon does not)—namely, Gentilized, Lo-ammi, outcast Hebrews of the Ten Tribes, described in Hos. i. 9; and that the "often alluded to islands" of Scripture are always mentioned (in Isaiah's prophecy at least) in reference to Israel of the Ten Tribes.

As to "the ends of the earth," we think Mr. Spurgeon is quite right in thinking God's Word alludes to the British by that term, but in Isa. xxvi. 15, he will find "the ends of the earth" are occupied by "the multitudinous Israel;" while from Isa. lxii. 11, we gather that to Israel is the message sent, there telling them, as "the daughter of Zion," that "their salvation is nigh to come!" We think the Rev. Mr. Spurgeon is one of our most satisfactory blind promoters. If Jehovah, further, is our God to-day, as Mr. Spurgeon rightly finds, then surely He was Israel's God in a covenant relationship peculiar to that one nation. As that covenant with Israel was an everlasting one (Exod. iii. 15, vi. 3, 4; Gen. xvii. 4—7), and "the gifts and calling of God are without repentance" (Rom. xi. 29), we argue from the premisses that the British are Israel; they the Lord's people; and He, Jehovah, their God. With these remarks we ask our readers to rejoice in the Rev. preacher's most welcome words. Discoursing on "Salvation" (2 Cor. vi. 2), he said—

"Beloved, tell it all over the world to-day, that salvation has come to the Gentiles, and especially to the dwellers in the islands. How remarkable it is that 'islands' are so often alluded to in the Scriptures, and that they receive the Gospel so much more readily than any other parts of the world. As for 'the ends of the earth,' surely we are intended by that term, for our forefathers dwelt where Phœnicians made distant and dangerous journeys to find tin and other metals, and our land was thought to be upon creation's verge, inhabited by a barbarous people of uncouth tongue; and yet to us, even to us, hath the Gospel come, and now—

> "The British Islands are the Lord's,
> Here Abraham's God is known;
> While powers and princes, shields and swords,
> Submit before His throne."

Jehovah, the God of the whole earth, is our God at this day; in this let us exult, for it proves that to the Gentiles the day of salvation has come."

FRENCH RADICAL TESTIMONY IN FAVOUR OF LORD BEACONSFIELD.

IT is not often, as our readers know, that we open the pages of the BANNER to a political or party view of our great subject, or mix up men and measures with God's dealings with us as His people Israel. At rare intervals it may be permitted us to say a word on this topic without offence to our many friends, or strongly leaning to either of the great parties which divide our country (properly too) in the matter of its Government. For ourselves we are free to confess that it would not matter to us greatly whether Lord Beaconsfield and his ministry or Mr. Gladstone and his following, were at the helm so long as they governed this country on Israelite, therefore Bible, principles. To do that, it seems to us, the Government we approve must distinctly favour, cherish, and manfully support all Protestant views, and "witness" for God, for Christ, for His truth and His religion in all ways and at all times. It must next have regard to the Empire of Great Britain, and see that its territorial magnificence, as we see it to-day, is never impaired; but, on the contrary, be continually enlarged as God opens the way and gives us the Gates by which such enlargements are always granted; and lastly, the Government of Israel having thus a godly home and a bold and Israelite foreign policy, should work might and main for the good of our people—God's chosen nation Israel—to put down and utterly to destroy all those gross and horrible sins—drunkenness, uncleanness, Sabbath-breaking, fraud, and the like, which are at the bottom of the whole of our national wretchedness—marring the face of that people whom God Himself declares to be "the seed which the Lord hath blessed" (Isa. lxi. 9). Given such a Government as this, it signifies nothing to us if the Prime Minister of the nation be Conservative or Liberal! There is nothing in a name! Measures and not men, principles and not acts without them, are what we want. Because we think we see in Lord Beaconsfield's public administration some approach—alas! a distant one—to our ideal, we incline to his as a fitting rule for Israel, and so far are glad to declare for a "party" which leads the country to national enlargement and honour abroad, and to such prosperity as God's providence, trade, and the dull seasons will allow at home. In saying all this we tread, we know, on dangerous ground, and we quit it with pleasure. But doing so we call in a foreign witness, a Radical journal, the Republicque Française of Paris, and ask its editor to tell us his appreciation of our Premier and his foreign policy.

Digitized by Google.

It takes, as a Radical journal of Paris, an impartial view of his lordship's policy, gives the Conservative Premier credit for the noble and patriotic work he has achieved, in spite of the opposition of his political adversaries. It says that when Russia invaded Turkey, English prestige had sunk very low. Russia had had her way in all things. Lord Beaconsfield undertook to correct former mistakes, and, the Republique says, it cannot be denied that he succeeded to the greatest extent possible. "He stopped the Russians at the gates of Constantinople. He brought about the Congress at Berlin. When once the Plenipotentiaries had assembled, he obtained for the Turks all that could be asked for them in the face of accomplished facts. After the signature of the Berlin Treaty, however, Lord Beaconsfield made known to Europe that he had taken precautions against the imperfection of that arrangement by assuming the protectorate of Asiatic Turkey. All this was incontestably the work of a skilful man, and we must do justice to the talent by which he has got out of a difficult situation. His adversaries would, in any case, have done much worse." It is not, happily, necessary to go abroad to read an appreciative notice of the great success Lord Beaconsfield has achieved for his country. But in order to show the English Radicals that his praises are not confined to his own party, it is useful now and then to quote for their benefit, and to their discredit, such cordial notices of Lord Beaconsfield's policy as this in the Republique, and the remarks of the Neue Freie Presse of Vienna, which, reviewing the Earl's Mansion House speech, says that "Lord Beaconsfield, supported by the whole country, will hear at the coming elections a universal call to remain in office."

We see, then, that foreign Radical journals can judge our Premier and his administration with greater fairness than our own Liberals—they see and commend Lord Beaconsfield for it; they admit also that the policy he pursued stopt Russia while thundering at the very thresholds of "our great Gate." It praises, but does not condemn him for the Turkish convention, and caps all (we must add that!) by declaring that while his lordship did his work at the Berlin Congress (and after it) well, "his adversaries would in any case have done much worse." These are not our words, but those of a foreign witness; and we can reproduce them without apologies to our "Liberal" Israelites, as the verdict of aliens who, perhaps from their standpoint, can take a fairer, and juster, and calmer view of our Premier's foreign policy (which is, indeed, as we must all allow, a truly Israelitish policy) than we can ourselves.

A CLERGYMAN'S TESTIMONY FROM QUEBEC IN CANADA.

I HAVE long been a student of the subject to which your paper, THE BANNER OF ISRAEL, is devoted—viz., "the Identification of the Anglo-Saxon race with the Lost Tribes of Israel." Although, from the beginning, this subject has possessed a good deal of attraction and interest for me, I have not been in any way biassed by what I may call my own predilections, but have carefully weighed the arguments which have been put forth in its support, as well as a great deal of what has been said against it; and have moreover made it a matter for careful search in God's Holy Word. Indeed I may say, that it was not until lately I could call myself a firm believer in the theory, though it has been before me as a subject of study for many years, and for a long time has worn to my mind the garment of probability.

In the progress towards the conviction which I now have, I was greatly assisted by the able articles which have appeared from time to time in your paper, and also by many of those in The Nation's Glory Leader, though the honour is due, I think, to the Right Rev. Bishop Titcomb, whose pamphlets I only lately saw, for having brought complete conviction to my mind. It seems to me a thing greatly to be desired that the works of that careful writer upon the Identity were more extensively circulated among the clergy, many of whom—now unconvinced—would greatly appreciate both the style and the arguments of the author, who are repelled from further consideration or study of the subject by the style of some of the works that are written in its support. I do not myself wish to be understood as excusing those who reject a theory because of the men or their style who bring it forward, and far less as casting a slur upon any of the good men who have begun and carried on the Identity work. Whatever their style or abilities may be, God has certainly made use of, assisted, and blessed them; and I say, all honour to their zeal, earnestness, and perseverance under so many difficulties and in the midst of a scoffing world. Nevertheless, the fact is the same, that there are different kinds of treatment necessary for different minds; and "doubting Thomas," according to our Lord's example, is to be gently dealt with.

However, that is quite apart from the object of the present letter.

Having become fully convinced of the truth of our Identification with the Ten Tribes of Israel, I feel it to be a duty boldly to acknowledge my belief, and send you all the good wishes and encouragement in my power. It is my opinion that a belief in these truths is spreading very rapidly in Canada. I think I am safe in saying, that in every township throughout the Dominion the subject of the Identity is known, and that in almost every township, village, and city, there are some believers. In my own parish, I am happy to inform you, there are quite a number who are convinced of, and anxious to propagate, the truth.

I brought the subject before one of my Bible classes last winter, and a good deal of interest was manifested in its discussion. I have since been obliged, I am sorry to say, to discontinue holding this class, as the summer is not a favourable season in our country parishes for gatherings of any kind on week evenings—the farms being large and the people scattered; but I propose, God willing, to take up the subject again next winter through the same medium, and have hopes of seeing then more definite results. In the meantime, I am trying to circulate all the Identity pamphlets and papers I can; and take every opportunity of speaking privately upon the subject to any one who is willing to listen.

A good supply of the literature ought to be kept in Montreal, and I think that agencies ought to be established in some of the other cities and towns of the Dominion, if that has not already been done.

I fear I have already taken up too much of your valuable time; but would like before closing to offer one or two thoughts connected with the great subject which I have not seen noticed by anyone else, and which might be turned to account by some of your contributors more capable of dealing with them than myself.

The harp appears in the royal coat of arms as an emblem of Ireland. This instrument dates back to the times of "Tara," and is intimately associated with the halls of Ireland's ancient king, as we see, for example, in Moore's melody of—

"The harp that once thro' Tara's halls."

But it is also as intimately associated with David, "the sweet Psalmist of Israel," and with the motto "Hallelujah," it would seem, as an appropriate crest for the family of David. Is there any connection between these associations? What is the origin and history of the harp, and where did it come from to Ireland?

I merely throw these out as suggestions, in hopes that some one in a position to make research may take up the matter, and throw light upon it. If an "Identity" is made out, then the harp in the royal arms will stand as a quartering, not for Ireland, but for the "House of David."

GEORGE T. HARDING,
(Incumbent of Durham).

P. O., Kirkdale, Prov. of Quebec, Canada,
July 28, 1879.

Digitized by Google

THE GEOGRAPHY OF THE GATES.

No. XXXIII.—LABUAN.

(Continued from page 377).

THE Island of Labuan, situated on the Northern coast of Borneo, extends from latitude 5° 11′ N., to lat 5° 25′ N., and from longitude 115° 10′ E., to 115° 22′ E., running in a N.N.E. direction. It is about 11 miles long, 5½ to 6 miles broad, and contains an area of 40 square miles, with a coast line of 30 miles. It is undulating with a few hills—the highest 80 feet only. It grows camphor and rattan trees, cocoa nut and betel, and the soil is fit for all sorts of palms. The island possesses water in abundance, with two streams, which are perennial, splendid timber for ship-building, and a beautiful harbour called Victoria. The sea around abounds in fish, the jungle on land being occupied by wild pigs and deer, though in no great numbers. Before the spot fell to Israel as a Bornean Gate it had not been inhabited by man or cultivated. Coal has been found on the island, and is described to be of most excellent quality. The possession of a Gate well stored with this invaluable article, indispensable both for war and commerce, in such a sea-way as the North coast of Borneo presents, would of itself make Labuan a first-class acquisition by Great Britain. Its special value to our race consists in the fact that it is situated just at the mouth of the Brunè river, about twenty miles North of the capital of that name. It acts therefore exactly as a British-Israelite Gate always does. It commands the position. It puts the bridle into the mouth of Israel's enemies and subdues them. The Bornean Sovereign was an enemy of the British on one foolish occasion. His people were the enemies of mankind as sea-coast pirates. Israel therefore seized Labuan, fortified and held it, and lo! piracy ceased at once after a desperate struggle, and the Bornean Sultan became our obsequious servant and friend henceforth.

The manner in which the island of Labuan passed under the British Crown, and was therefore constituted a true Gate of Israel, was as follows. In November, 1844, Mr. J. Brook, then Rajah of Sarawak, as we have described in our last paper on the Gates, visited Brunè in an official capacity, and there obtained from the Sultan an engagement "that he was willing to cede to the Queen of England the island of Labuan, and the adjacent islets, on such terms as may hereafter be arranged by any person duly appointed." In August, 1846, the Commander-in-chief on the naval station, Sir Thomas Cochrane, acting under orders from Lord Palmerston's Government, directed Capt. Mundy, R.N., of Her Majesty's ship Iris, to proceed to Brunè, and there, with or without the concurrence of the Sultan and his ministers, to take possession of the island in the name of Her Majesty. The step was called for by the insult offered to the British flag by the Sultan, who had fired on it, and by the necessity of clearing the seas of piracy which was practically carried on with the Sultan's concurrence. On the 18th December, 1846, all arrangements having been completed, the Sultan met Capt. Mundy, Lieut. Heath, and an armed party of marines, supported by the ships' boats drawn up opposite the Sultan's palace, in order to discuss the question of the cession. There was no difficulty in regard to the surrender of the island in perpetuity to the Queen. The only demur was to the clause stipulating that the Sultan and his subjects would henceforth aid Her Majesty's forces in suppressing piracy. Difficulties were raised. The Sultan and his followers became restive. Money was demanded as the cost of the transaction. Capt. Mundy refused, and peremptorily directed that the treaty resigning the island should at once be signed. The Sultan seeing matters growing serious, yielded with an ill grace, and then and there gave up to Israel the Gate of his dominions, destined yet to serve as the door by which Borneo shall belong to Israel for ever.

On the 24th December, 1846, the island was publicly and formally taken possession of by Capt. Mundy in Her Majesty's name, and in 1848 the colony was planted and recognised as an outlying bulwark of Israel's Empire, a veritable Gate for ever.

In 1849 the extermination of the pirates near Sarawak, by Rajah Brook, then Governor of Labuan, took place, and the completeness of the measure so greatly shocked the British public, that, in deference to the outcry, he was removed from his connection with the island, though the world benefitted by the cessation of the nuisance. Labuan, as a British colony, is under a governor, assisted by a nominated council. The trade in 1877 was valued at £126,594 total imports, and £112,996 exports. The revenue that year was £7,490; the expenditure £7,995. The trade consists in collecting the products of Borneo, the Lulu Archipelago, and neighbouring islands, and these are forwarded to Singapore for European and Chinese markets. "The chief productions thus collected are sago, beeswax, camphor, hides, rattans, tortoise shell, trepany, edible birds' nests, and mother-of-pearl shells. From Singapore there are received in exchange cotton and cloth goods, hardware, opium, tobacco, spirits, tea, provisions, &c., all retransferred to Borneo in exchange for native productions."

Such is this Bornean and most valuable Gate. Situated on the high road from Europe to China and Japan, it constitutes one of the outlying strongholds on which our Empire rests. It serves to consolidate British-Israel's rule in the far East, and is a fulfilment to all who love and honour God's Word that the dominion of the world promised to Abraham and his seed for ever as its heir, shall yet be the heritage of the British race, in consequence of our Identity with God's chosen ones! Israel, praise ye the Lord!

(To be followed by a paper on Cyprus.)

THE METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION AT WORK IN EXETER.

WE were privileged to attend two meetings held at the Victoria-hall, Exeter, on September 9, 1879, when the Rev. Jas. Billington delivered a lecture at 3 p.m. under the presidency of Mr. W. H. Peters, of Harefield, Lympstone; and in the evening at 8 p.m.—Philo-Israel being in the chair—Mr. Douglas A. Onslow lectured on "Lost Israel Identified with the British Nation." Mr. Billington's address had for its subject, "Anglo-Israelism and its Most Recent Criticisms."

In the afternoon the meeting was fairly and influentially attended. In the evening the room was quite full, the distinguishing feature of the scene being the large number of men, and young men too, who were present. The chairman in the evening was supported by Mr. Gerald de Courcy Hamilton, chief constable of Devon, who openly avowed himself an Israelite, and spoke in favour of the chairman's views. The chief constable's adhesion will prove, under God, a tower of strength to the cause in Exeter. As an association will, it is believed, be immediately formed there, as well as a ladies' association in Topsham, we look for great things from Mr. Hamilton's support and his promised help to the young society. The meetings have been well reported by the local papers. We take the following extracts from the Western Morning News, the Evening Express, the Exeter and Plymouth Gazette, the Western Times, and the Flying Post. We have selected such portions of the speeches as are best reported in each paper, and give the combined result to our readers:—

At the afternoon meeting the chair was taken by W. H. Peters, Esq. (Harefield), and the lecture was delivered by the Rev. J. Billington (secretary). There were also on the platform Mr. E. W. Bird (Philo-Israel), and Mr. D. A. Onslow.

Digitized by Google

The chairman, in opening the proceedings, said he had received a letter from the Rev. Bourchier Wrey Savile, who exceedingly regretted that he was not able to be present. Mr. Savile, as they might know, had written a most able pamphlet, in which he quite refuted the adverse criticisms brought against them so unjustly and untruthfully, and in his letter he desired him (the chairman) to say how inexpressibly shocked he was at the language professing ministers used against those who believed the English race were the Lost Tribes of Israel. From the earliest ages up to the present time, the Almighty had been pleased to accomplish great results through the instrumentality of humble and faithful Christians rather than the great and learned of the land. The object of the Anglo-Israel Association was not to introduce new-fangled dogmas of man's invention, but, from Scriptural investigation, to proclaim glad tidings in these latter days of importance to England, greater than had occurred since the glorious Reformation—viz., that the Ten Lost Tribes of Israel were chiefly domiciled within the vast domains of the British Empire, and that the English were for the most part the inheritors of the seed of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, not conditionally, or because we were better than anyone else, but because of the promises made by the Lord, as recorded in Deut. ix.: "Not for thy righteousness or for the uprightness of thine heart dost thou go to possess their land: but for the wickedness of these nations, the Lord thy God doth drive them out from before thee, and that He may perform the word which the Lord sware unto thy fathers Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob." These commands had lately been courageously responded to by Lord Beaconsfield and his Cabinet, both in Afghanistan and Africa. From the time of the glorious Reformation, when the ruler abjured the idolatries of the Papacy, England, like Israel of old, had prospered at home and abroad, had been victorious over enemies, and had inspired all other nations with the fear and dread of her arms. To their opponents, who asked what good it was that they should be Israel, he replied that the pages of the Bible abounded with promises of national blessings promised to Israel when they brought back the Tribes of Judah a present to the Lord, and that when nation began to rise up against nation, which he believed was near at hand, if our statesmen were strong and faithful to the Protestant religion, and of good courage to go forward and possess the land, England would be preserved in prosperity, security, and peace.

Mr. E. W. Bird (Philo-Israel) next addressed the meeting, taking as the basis of his remarks Genesis xxii. 17, 18, from which he deduced numerous arguments to show that England, and no other nation, answered to the promises contained in that passage. He pointed out how the promises there made, that the race should multiply and spread over the earth, and that "Thy seed shall possess the Gate of his enemies," were fulfilled in the case of this country. All over the world England's sons were to be found; and "the Gates" of the world—that was, the strategical positions—were almost without exception in our hands. And the time was fast approaching when the great Gate of Constantinople must pass from the Turk, and it should pass into no other hands but the British.

Rev. J. Billington, of London, Secretary of the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association, delivered a lecture on "Anglo-Israelism and its Most Recent Criticisms," and contended that the British were the true descendants of the Lost Tribes of Israel. The creed of the Anglo-Israelites was that God by special favour chose Abraham to make him the progenitor of a race which should know no equal as long as the world should stand. God made Abraham several promises, but strange to say there did not, at the time these promises were made, seem any human probability of their being fulfilled. Perusing Scripture, however, they would see that the blessings promised by the Lord were fixed in the Tribe of Ephraim, and the contention of Anglo-Israelites was that the British race were the descendants of the Tribe of Ephraim. It was said that the belief in the doctrines of the Anglo-Israelites was entirely opposed to Christianity and the spirit of the Gospel, and that those who held these doctrines were devil-inspired men. He threw back this libel, and asserted that in holding these principles they did but show their belief in the truth of the promises of Scripture. He defended the establishment of this association to promulgate the doctrines of the Anglo-Israelites—they in associating did but follow the example of every other religious society. Every member of the society was connected with one or another branch of the Christian Church. They had no individual prejudices or eccentricities, but they went solely to the statements of the Word of God and rested on them. The rev. gentleman then proceeded to answer certain criticisms which had appeared in the Family Herald, with regard to the supposed Identity of the British race with the Lost Tribes of Israel, and in continuing his speech he pointed out that the views held by the association were spreading rapidly among all classes, and there was no doubt that before long the British would everywhere be recognised as identified with the Lost Tribes of Israel. (Applause.)

Mr. Onslow remarked that in this matter the Association simply asked people to believe that the Bible meant what it said. The words of the Bible must be taken in their literal meaning. If they spiritualised everything, they simply mystified it. As the language of Scripture had received its literal fulfilment in the decay and destruction of many nations, so in this matter they had a right to literally accept the language of prophecy. Israel was set aside to be God's chosen people for ever; that people must be in existence somewhere; and he maintained that in the British people were found the absolute and literal fulfilments of the promises of God to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. He denied that the Anglo-Israelites were a set of crazy lunatics; they had good reason for their contentions, and all they asked was that those reasons should be looked into and examined. Then they were sure that the principles they held would gain ground. (Applause.)

A vote of thanks to the chairman terminated the afternoon proceedings.

At the evening meeting—when the room was quite full—the chair was taken by Mr. E. W. Bird, of Bristol, the chief literary champion of the cause, who, though he espoused it only five years since, is already widely known by his pseudomyn of "Philo-Israel." In opening the meeting Mr. Bird said the foundations underlying the Anglo-Israel theory were four—first, the distinction between Judah and Israel, of which he confessed he was ignorant until five years ago; next, that the distinction continues to the present time; third, that the House of Israel had been lost, and was destined to be found again; fourth, that the Lost House was to be found by the marks of Identification described in Scripture, and to these marks (as they contended) the British nation exactly corresponded. On these points the lecturer would enlarge. The enemies of the cause stigmatised them as blasphemers, and as opposed to the Gospel. To that he replied by stating that he was connected with several missionary societies, and he was most anxious to do all in his power to spread the Gospel. God had entrusted to England the ministration of His Word to all the nations and families of the earth. Search that Word through and they would find that this commission was given to the Hebrew race, and to that race alone. Therefore, logically and Scripturally, the British race must be Israel. As men of good sense, honouring and trusting the Scriptures, they were driven to that conclusion. All through the Bible the Hebrews were the instruments chosen for the conveyance of blessings to the Gentiles. God had distinctly promised that the seed of Abraham should bless all the families of the earth; and His Word was inalienable.

Mr. Onslow then delivered his lecture, which, he said, was a demonstration in detail of the four points sketched out by Mr. Bird. Having devoted an hour to showing that the separation between the Houses of Israel and Judah existed from the revolt against Rehoboam down to the captivity, he said he defied anyone to prove that the people brought from Babylon to occupy the land of the Ten Tribes had ever been turned out to make room for the people of Israel to come back. They knew from Hosea i. that the Israelites were to become lost wanderers amongst all nations, but ultimately they were to be sifted, and gathered into one place and planted there. Where were they to be looked for? Without going at length into the wanderings the Israelites after a dispersion in Assyria, he would apply a few tests to show that they were to be found in Great Britain and the American colonies. They were told by the prophets that Israel would be found a single nation, that he was to be made a strong nation, and that he was to be a Northern Power occupying islands in the Western sea—on this latter point there were no less than eight passages in Isaiah. Prevost Paradol had shown the power of England, and that in all human probability the dominion of the Anglo-Saxon race would extend the world over. Israel again was to possess the gate of his enemies, and that England answered this test "Philo-Israel" had shewn that afternoon. Another prediction was that he should lend money to "all nations," and not borrow, and that he should "reign over many nations." It could not be doubted that England fulfilled perfectly both of these marvellous predictions. Great Britain was the creditor of every nation on the earth—as many English families knew to their cost. The interest that ought to be received from foreign loans was five or six millions sterling a month. We lent to all nations for railways, docks, canals, and other purposes, and it was equally true that we never borrowed from them. (Hear, hear.) Could it be said that in pointing to these things they were torturing the Word of God? The catalogue of people over whom England reigned, large as it was, was destined to be increased. We saw it every day. In spite of all the efforts of our rulers to stop the spread of our dominion, that dominion was constantly spreading. Clive and Hastings received repeated instructions to go no further in their conquest of India, but they went on in spite of themselves. The same instructions were sent out by Sir Michael Hicks-Beach to Sir Bartle Frere. But in spite of Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, in spite of everything and everybody, the British Empire would, and must, grow in South Africa, as it had done, and was doing elsewhere. (Hear, hear.) Then the people of Israel were to be known as a people who rested from their work on the seventh day. Admitted that there was a great deal of Sabbath breaking in England, yet the Sabbath was observed by law; and they might go the world over and not find the Sabbath observed as it was by the Anglo-Saxon race.

Digitized by Google

Concluding, Mr. Douglas Onslow said he thought he had advanced enough to satisfy them that those who held the Anglo-Israel doctrine were not crack-brained lunatics, but had some substantial ground for their belief. They believed in it because they accepted God's Word literally; and if he had failed to convince his audience, the fault was his own, and not his subject's.

Mr. Gerald de Courcy Hamilton (Chief Constable of Devon) moved a vote of thanks to the chairman, and stated that he had become convinced of the truth of what he would modestly call the theory of the Anglo-Israel Association.

The Chairman, in replying, said he could not admit the use of the word "theory." As one who had for years been trained in judicial work, he was prepared to say that the Identity of the British people with the Lost Ten Tribes was a proved fact. He would stake his life on the truth of it, and was ready to die for it. (Applause.) He urged the formation of an association for the study of the subject in Exeter, observing that Mr. Peters would make a capital president, and Mr. J. E. Norman, whose excellent little work he held in his hand, was a ready-made secretary, or assistant secretary, to help on the project. The study of this question made men read their Bibles, and if it did nothing else, it deserved the countenance of all religious men for that reason alone.

In conclusion, we congratulate the committee in London on an excellent beginning at Exeter, and we think that the cause is indebted to the Rev. J. Billington and Mr. D. A. Onslow, for their disinterested labour in thus lending themselves to a work which brings them no other reward than what the Lord will confer on them when He will say, "Well done, good and faithful servants, enter ye into the joy of the Lord." But that suffices.

"RUSSIA, FRANCE, AND ITALY."

We stated in our leader of September 3, 1879 (No. 140), that we anticipated the conflagration of Europe—which, we fear, will break out in 1882—would be brought about by the alliance of "Russia, France, and possibly Italy," "against the two German-speaking races—Germany and Austria." We did not imagine, when we penned those words, that the very combination of Powers—"three against two, and two against three" (Luke xii. 52)—would be at once suggested, not only in St. Petersburg, but also in Paris, Berlin, Dublin, and London, as the probable outcome of present complications to bring on that awful catastrophe which the Times, on September 2, 1879, called "The Deluge," and God's Word designates as the "earthquake such as there was not since men were upon the 'earth,' so mighty an earthquake, so great" (Rev. xvi. 18).

We shall now quote the remarks which, doubtless, some of our readers have already perused with solemn awe in the Standard of September 2, 1879, adding those of the Paris and Berlin correspondents of that paper, with extracts from the leader of the Irish Times of August 29. The editor of the Standard reported:—

Our correspondents at Paris and Berlin both send telegrams which show that the relations between Germany and Russia have assumed a strained character. Russia has been doubly disappointed by Germany, first, in not being allowed to leave any troops South of the Danube, and again in seeing Austria permitted to advance to Novibazar. The inspired press of St. Petersburg is beginning to talk of an alliance between Russia, France, and Italy, with a view to reprisals on Germany and Austria. The Germans in Paris entertain a strong conviction that a rupture between the two great Empires of the North is inevitable, though as long as the Emperor William is alive, an open breach may be avoided.

The causes of the growing coldness between the two great Empires — Russia and Germany — are thus stated by the correspondent at Paris:—

There has been a long pent-up feeling of hostility between the Russians and Germans within the limits of the Czar's Empire. The Germans in Russia, as in France, England, America, indeed wherever they settle, are hard-working, pushing, determined, and thrifty. In Russia, moreover, they enjoy a large measure of Court favour, and such of them as have become Russianised occupy positions of honour and profit in the army and civil service. The Russians grudge them their success. The sum and substance of the matter is that the Germans here, who are naturally deeply interested in the maintenance of peace, entertain a strong conviction that a rupture between the two great Empires of the North is inevitable. So long as the life of the Emperor William is spared, an open breach may be avoided, but there is not much probability of the angry feelings, which have been accumulating for so many years, passing quietly away. This accounts for the rapprochement which has lately taken place between Prussia and Austria, and for the marked courtesy shown by the Russian Government to France. It may perhaps be asked why the Germans residing here trouble themselves on the subject. The reason is plain enough. They entertain a strong and perfectly justified misgiving that if Germany were engaged in war with Russia, then France would take the opportunity of retrieving her disasters of 1870. It is on this ground that I entertain a strong conviction that, no matter how bitter the feeling may become between Berlin and St. Petersburg, the German Government will never permit it to mature into actual hostilities so long as Germany has reason to apprehend an attack in her rear. There may be a great deal of acrimony, very angry recriminations, mutual reproaches, and so on, but there is no fear of a war between the Czar and the Kaiser, as the Germans know full well that, were such a contingency to arise, the temptation to France to wipe away the humiliation of Metz, Paris, and Sedan, would be such that no Government here could possibly resist it.

The correspondent at Berlin speaks out more plainly. He telegraphed, on September 1, 1879, as follows:—

The relations between Russia and Germany have indeed assumed a strained character. The height to which Russian ire has risen may be measured from the latest utterances of the inspired press. The St. Petersburg Vedomosti, a paper employed for the starting of ideas too advanced for the Journal de St. Petersbourg, the recognised and subsidised organ of the Foreign Office, in unmistakable language predicts an impending alliance between Russia, Italy, and France, in case the alleged Austro-German league is not immediately dissolved. By means of the threatened alliance, Russia, we are given to understand, would be enabled to chase Austria from the Balkan Peninsula, while France would seize the opportunity of conquering the Rhine, and Italy would pounce upon Italia Irredenta and its environs. If the terrible import to Germany of another French campaign is duly considered, the frivolity, or else the intense hostility, of the Russian menace will be sufficiently understood.

The Dublin Times, in its leader of August 29, discoursed thus on the political prospect, his words showing that, with our anticipations as Israelites, he is in full accord:—

The coming war is expected to have Russia and Germany for chief antagonists. But these will be the principal, not the only, belligerents. The mighty opposites have been grouped into Germany, Austria, and possibly, but improbably, England, on the one side; Russia, France, and Italy on the other. We have no hesitation in striking England out of the calculation. In an European war of this magnitude, or in a duel with any other first-class Power, Russia would have her hands too full to think of molesting us; and we, on the other hand, would serve our interests quite sufficiently by standing by, while our natural enemy was being drubbed, or was exhausting herself in administering a drubbing. If we leave England peacefully at home, and suppose the rest of the forecast to come true, it will be a gigantic complication indeed. But while Kaiser William lives there is little fear of war between the two Empires. If the old man died to-morrow, in a week there would be marked estrangement between them. What would ensue would be an affair of time and circumstance. It seems to us that the situation is resolving itself into the rapprochement of Russia and France; that Bismarck sees this, and, knowing how serious is its significance, is seeking a friend in future in the only Power he can appeal to. The question is, Can he trust Austria more than another?

Digitized by Google

What says the Times of September 2?—"For the past nine years Europe seems to have been ever expecting the deluge." "The whole continent remains an armed camp." "Nation is plotting against nation, not in arms alone, but in trade." (We are reminded here of Luke xxi. 10).

The Standard said on the same date: "It would be more agreeable to have to announce the disbanding of the enormous armaments of France and Germany, but there are no symptoms of any such intention on either side."

On the whole, the picture we have drawn is a sad, ominous, and very terrible one. It proves that the combustibles are thickly strewn over "yonder ill-consolidated Europe," and that any moment (as soon as God's time shall have arrived) an explosion is as certain to take place as an effect necessarily follows its cause. On the outbreak of hostilities, supposing the parties drawn into the conflict are, as we indicate, France, Russia, and Italy on the one side, with Germany and Austria on the other, do we fail to see that all the five belligerents will be anxious that the British should stand aloof from the war? France, that her seaboard and navy may be secure and free from all chance of disturbance. Russia, that her navy may keep the sea in the Baltic and Black Sea. Austria, that complications may not arise regarding her occupation of the two Turkish provinces lately acquired by her. Germany, that her own trade may continue to be carried on under the English flag. And what would all the nations be eager and ready to offer to Great Britain that she should thus consent to stand completely aloof? We can conceive that Russia and France would join in earnestly requesting the British protectorate and occupation of Constantinople (the Gate of the world), pending the frightful contest of the whole European continent. The great Gate would thus pass in peace to Israel—FOR EVER!

France and Russia, we think, would also urge on Britain to assume the protectorate, as a neutral, over the Holy Land, that Russia's flank may be safeguarded by a strong and friendly Power; and we imagine that both Powers would require, as their guarantee, that the British occupation of Palestine should be only in the nature (not of a military conquest), but of a peaceful, unarmed colonisation, which would meet the requirements of prophecy when the exigency of Ezekiel xxxviii. 8, 14, shall by-and-bye demand fulfilment. The Russian invasion will have to find Palestine occupied by our defenceless nation, "gathered out of many people," "brought forth out of the Gentiles," "dwelling safely" or carelessly, "all of them with valuable property in possession."

French interests in Egypt, we suppose, will, in that time of anxiety and trouble in France, fall, for a time at least, by consent, into British hands; and the British Lion, left in sole charge, will, we fear, act like the "pepul tree"—will crush, destroy, and disintegrate the body politic where his roots once strike, and end by occupying the whole ground himself. These seem some of the possibilities of the future which present facts, and prophetic Israelite anticipations, seem to warrant. We throw them out for our readers' thoughtful, serious consideration, begging them to bear them in mind as the scene before us gradually unfolds. Meanwhile, let us recollect, with thankful hearts, that, being Israel, we are certain to be exempted from the horrors, terrors, losses, and anxieties of that coming woe. Isa. xxvii. 19, 20, xlii. 16; Joel ii. 32, iii. 1; Zeph. iii. 9; Mal. iv. 1, 2; Luke xxi. 28; 2 Peter iii. 12, 13, and many other passages teach us that. It is a glorious answer to the foolish Cui Bono? question, to point to these texts and say, "Behold it there." Being Israel, God's chosen ones, He shields us, not for our deservings, but for the blood's sake of our precious Daysman, and by reason of the promise to "our forefather Abraham and his seed for ever," and we therefore call on all who have the faith we hold to praise the Lord, and to rejoice in His salvation with exceeding joy.

ASHES OVER GLOWING EMBERS.

WE hold it to be a fact, and a remarkable one, that while our power in the world, and our national greatness, are becoming universally acknowledged, there are evident signs of decay in home institutions which have hitherto been to us a source of pride and self-complacency.

If we look at our courts of law, we see doubt and indecision; a case may be decided, but by no means settled, and appeal after appeal may drag before the public, details the most frivolous, or saddening, or repulsive, with a sickening repetition. We are a law-respecting people, yet those who are by ordination pronounced fitted to be our guides and teachers, openly condemn decisions of appointed Courts, and set at defiance their ecclesiastical rulers, as well as the laws of their country. In this matter there are no signs of improvement, but rather symptoms of matters growing worse; and ordinary mortals ask themselves, with some dismay, if judges are become incompetent or powerless, since often, no sooner is a decision—lay or clerical—arrived at by one, than it is instantly subjected to revision, opposition, and possibly reversal, by other legal authorities.

Where is the majesty of law if those who administer it are thus to be subjected—not exceptionally, but continually—to have their labours ignored, and their decisions treated as worthless? Surely there are signs here of passing greatness, and of a state of gradual decay, as compared with previous dignity and grandeur.

We will not dwell on our Established Church. A house divided against itself, we know, cannot stand, and in this there are three very marked divisions—the High, the Low, and the Broad. In the meantime the work of evangelising the masses, which has fallen from the weak, incompetent, or unwilling hands of the Church, is taken up by others, and is being carried out in an erratic, but apparently none the less efficient manner, with no appointed officials, and no restraints but those of the laws of the land and of social order.

If we turn to our works of organised benevolence and charity, we again note marks of change and of decay. Committees once active and efficient are becoming feeble and difficult to keep up in numbers, while fresh associations are being perpetually started, which carry off activity into new paths. The restraints of regularly organised systems are rebelled against, and in benevolence, as in spiritual teaching, efforts are becoming increasingly numerous, but also increasingly unsustained by fixed law and regulations. Possibly this is as it should be. The character of times alters, and the needs of a people change with them; but we think it is undeniable that missionary efforts and benevolent works are altogether changing in their character, and giving signs, not of death, but of a coming mighty alteration.

There is, we believe, a growing feeling that our noble hospitals, those wonderful fruits of Christian pity, have nearly done their work, as at present constituted. That, as now managed, their benevolent object is frequently abused, and that, as a rule, those who benefit by them should aid in their support. Also, none can surely doubt that, as regards our Poor Laws, merciful as is their aim, there "is rottenness in their bones;" and that, in many ways, they foster improvidence extravagance, deception, and in more ways than one, encourage actual gross sin; while our system of national education, undertaking parental duties that are neglected by those whose they are by nature, at the expense of the industrious and provident, cannot be considered but as a temporary makeshift of an expensive and unsatisfactory character, though the results may in many ways be beneficial.

Digitized by Google

How little can we bestow unmixed praise and admiration on our Houses of Legislature! What do we see in the lower assembly? Wasted time, absence of high aim, any lofty object for the benefit of the country ignored or sneered at, and a general sense that speeches uttered are made but to appeal to the interests and passions of those who are likely, shortly, to have in their hands the power of rejecting or returning representatives. It has been said by one of its Members that there is nothing the House will stand with so little patience as any allusion to a sacred object. This, to our mind, marks a very low standard of feeling in a so-called Christian assembly, though none more than ourselves would abhor canting phrases, or the perpetual use of religious terms.

In all this we see symptoms of decay; signs that what has been, and is, will soon be no more; at least, not in its old or present condition. But the belief causes us no feeling of despair as it would do were we not conscious of being God's people Israel; for we look at Isa. i. 26, and there we read: "And I will restore thy judges as at the first, and thy counsellors as at the beginning." Therefore we rejoice with a great joy, believing the time is at hand when, as a righteous people (Isa. lx. 21), our judges and our counsellors shall be restored as of old, under the immediate guidance and direction of a heavenly King, while the need of many institutions required by an unrestored Israel shall pass away, with their generally acknowledged Identification, and return to God's favour.

We believe that a gradual fading away of an old state of things is to be succeeded by an outburst of flame that shall break forth from beneath the ashes of the past, and burn with ever-increasing brilliancy and beauty to God's glory, and to the furtherance of Christ's kingdom.

L. P.

May 2, 1879.

ANOTHER REDUCTIO AD ABSURDUM.

JOHN BUTTERWORTH'S SUGGESTION AS TO PSALM II. 8.

OUR Deccan friend sends us a thought from the far East which had better be placed before our readers at once. It is in the nature of another Reductio ad absurdum, suggested by "John Butterworth."

1. The Rev. J. B. Clifford (he says) holds that the Goyim or heathen are given by the Father to the Lord Jesus Christ as His inheritance. The Lord Jesus therefore inherits the heathen.

2. But Isa. liv. 3 proves that the seed of the barren woman, she who was, nevertheless, possessed of the multitudinous seed, whose youth was one of shame, and whose widowhood was a reproach, is to be the inheritor of the Goyim or Gentiles—i.e., of the heathen.

3. Therefore it follows, there being but one heir, that the Lord Jesus Christ was the multitudinous seed of the barren woman, whose youth was shame, and her widowhood reproach, with whom the Father was wrath (ver. 8), whom He forsook for a little moment, and that He was the destined Restorer of desolate cities.

4. But all this is absurd, if not blasphemous, since Isa. liv. refers to Israel in its Melo-hag-goim aspect; and therefore—

5. Mr. Clifford's interpretation of Psa. ii. 8 cannot contradict Isa. liv. 3, and yet be correct.

6. Therefore it is erroneous; and—

7. Since Isa. liv. 3, clearly shows that the inheritor of the Goyim is the headstrong, erring, expanding, pushing, multitudinous nation, Israel of the Ten Tribes, the inheritor of the same heathen in Psa. ii. 8 must also be Israel of the same Ten Tribes. Q. E. D.

We beg to add that Eph. iv. 8 shows that the Lord Jesus Christ "ascended up on high, led captivity captive, and GAVE gifts unto men." There He received the Goyim of His Father, and as the purchase of His blood He GAVE them to His "overcoming ones"—Israel (Psa. ii. 8; Rev. ii. 26, 27); which also it was desirable for John Butterworth to demonstrate.

THE "OPEN GATES."

To show how entirely the secular journalists of the day consider the Scriptural designation of the Passes we have lately secured in Afghanistan (and still shall keep, in spite of the recent disaster), to be the most appropriate possible, and use the same accordingly on all occasions, we quote the following from the Times' leading article of July 26, 1879. The editor said:

> The successful termination of the Afghan war ought ultimately to affect favourably the financial condition of India. THE OPEN GATES IN THE GREAT WALL ACROSS HER NORTHERN FRONTIER ARE NOW CLOSED. She is safe against attack from without. The last of the wars necessary for the consolidation of our Indian Empire has, it is to be hoped, been completed.

These open Gates were the natural roads into India from Afghanistan, and the only ones. They were properly described, therefore, by the Times, as "Gates." One of the Passes is even called by the natives the "Durwaza," or "Gate Pass." These "Gates" God's Word promised to the seed of Abraham, such being in their enemies' possession. We have them all the world over, and naturally came to acquire those also in our late Afghan enemies' lands. We thus have inherited one of Israel's blessings, and as God, who cannot lie, gave this benison to Israel only, and to his seed for ever, we must be Hebrews.

We lately attended a private meeting held at Wimbledon for the consideration of our subject, when an opponent present did us the honour to state in our hearing, that the idea of the "Gates" was one borrowed from the fact that the late Lord Ellenborough had taken the Gates of Somnauth from the Afghans when the conquering expedition returned from Cabul, in November, 1842! The idea of the "Gate of Israel's enemies" occurred first to ourselves about four years ago, when not a thought of Somnauth, or of Lord Ellenborough either was present in our mind! It was a question then with us what the word Shâr or Gate could possibly mean in Gen. xxii. 17: "Thy seed shall possess 'THE GATE' of his enemies." The enigma was solved by a hint which Bishop Patrick's commentary in loco gave us. "These Gates," he said, "are CITIES, consequently the country; for the Gates being taken, the cities are entered; and the cities surrendered, the country is conquered." After that, all was easy! Gibraltar, Malta, Perim, Aden, Bombay—the overland route to India in short, traversed by us over and over again—gave us the "Gates" in numbers, and once the idea was grasped, the beauty of the image in God's Word was seen, fully appreciated, and our Identity at once became to ourselves and to all reasonable minds a demonstrated fact! Our Wimbledon opponent need not dream of Somnauth! Our hint came from the Word of God, explained by a learned bishop of the Church of England, and illustrated by the ordinary overland journey to India! God's Word may be trusted to adopt the most appropriate word to depict a possession of Israel destined to be hers in Gospel dispensation times.

Digitized by Google

The word Shâr or Gate exactly answers to our strategic defensive positions all over the world where the British flag floats in proud defiance among races that verily "hate" us. "The Gate" is the word Capt. Columb, R.N., fixes on as the best to describe these positions, in his prize essay for 1878. The Times uses the word, as we see above, to designate the three Afghan Passes we have now conquered and hold in triumph. Many of these positions, such as Port Said, Bab-el-Mandeb, Gibraltar, the Sublime Porte, and the like, are known by their very names as "Gates." All these are British Gates in esse or in posse.

Besides the foreign Gates we have those of our own home, guaranteed to us in Isa. lx. 11 as safe and sure for ever. "Thy Gates," says the Word of God, "shall be open continually, they shall not be shut day nor night, that men may bring unto thee the forces (wealth, margin) of the Gentiles, and that their kings may be brought." This passage we hold to be pre-millennial, because it is now actually in fulfilment before our eyes, and has been so for a thousand years. It has given us the supremacy of the seas, a secure home in the I'ii I'yâm or "Isles of the West" (2 Sam. vii. 10), and a guarantee that our seaport towns and harbours shall never be blockaded, or their trade stopped, for all time to come! The merchants and tradesmen of England, Scotland, Wales, and Ireland, ought, we think, in mere gratitude, to appoint and keep a day of public thanksgiving, since the Identity has brought us this glorious assurance. To us all, nationally, it also brings "good tidings." For this thing, we being Israel, if we rejoice for nothing else, we are surely bound to cry, "Praise ye the Lord," for with the Gates all the other Hebrew blessings are bound up, and without them, not one were ours!

THE LINTEL AND THE TWO SIDE POSTS.

Ex. xii. 22.

By J. T. Gott.

The following will perhaps be new to many of your readers:—Dr. Dresser, in his "Principles of Design," says that there is a device in Egyptian ornament which the most casual observer cannot have failed to notice. "It is called the 'winged globe,' and consists of a globe or ball, immediately at the sides of which are two asps, and from which extend two wings, each wing being in length about five or eight times the diameter of the ball. The drawing of this device is very grand. The force with which the wings are delineated well represents the protection which the kingdom of Egypt afforded, and which was symbolised by the extended and over-shadowing pinions."

It appears that the priests taught the Egyptians that this was the symbol of protection, and that no evil could enter any dwelling where it was portrayed. Hence we find that every Egyptian building, whether residence or temple, had this device on the lintel (the post over the door).

What a staggering blow was aimed at the supposed power of the Egyptian gods, the influence of the priests, and the religious faith of the people, when the first-born of Egypt was slain! Moses was commanded to have the blood of the lamb, slain at the passover, "placed upon the lintel in the very position of this winged globe." The blood being sprinkled on the door post tended to show that "even in position as well as in nature this winged globe was powerless to secure protection." Even so must all the gods of the heathen and all forms of superstition fall before Israel's God.

Notice.—We apologise to many correspondents whose papers, kindly sent us, are crowded out. The fault is not ours. The size of the Banner and the magnitude of the interest it excites are our apologies.—Ed.

CONFIRMATIONS FROM MONTREAL.

By A Bent Oar.

In your No. 136, under the heading, "The Supplanters," I notice your correspondent "Anglo-Israel" says: "The Anglo-Saxon race is the only colonising race that does not amalgamate with the aboriginal races of the countries in which they settle." Permit me to verify his assertion, more especially as regards Lower Canada. You scarcely meet a French Canadian who does not show Indian blood; some of them are actually as dark, and the features of the Huron and Six-nation Indians are easily discernible. I scarcely know of more than half-a-dozen cases where a French Canadian has light hair. The English people here, on the contrary, are decidedly Saxon in appearance, and, with few exceptions, entirely free from any taint, unless got through the very few marriages with French Canadians. No doubt some of the old North-west Company's men married squaws, but I fancy they got their pick if they did.

In this connection I send you a clipping from the Montreal Star, in which you will observe they make use of the very unusual words "pushed back," in speaking of the Indians in our prairie province. This has, of course, been quite unintentional upon their part; and, in the relation in which it is used, is interesting to Israelites:—

"The North-West.

"Our Canadian Volunteers may have employment cut out for them, some of these days, in the North-west. The Indians are becoming more threatening every day; the buffalo is becoming more scarce, and the white settlers more aggressive. As the so-called red-skins are being pushed back, their temper becomes worse, and no one can tell how soon a tussle may take place. It may be with Sitting Bull, or it may be with some of our own Indians; it may be against a combination of both. Nor must we forget that such a fight would be no child's play. These Indians are excellent marksmen, and, if they mustered in strong force, they would give employment to as many men as we could conveniently put in the field without straining our resources. An Indian may not understand the theory of trajectory motions, of translation and rotation, windage, and all the theories by which rifle practice is taught, yet he can hit a stationary target as well as the most skilful soldier. But the advantage of the Indian is to be found in his skill when firing at moving targets; and the ease with which he knocks deer, buffalo, and big game over, when on the run, would be suggestive to a man who had to meet him in hostile array. Our mounted police would melt away before them; our Manitoba militia are too few to be of much assistance, and Quebec and Ontario would principally be called upon to meet this difficulty. However, it may not come to that; but if it does, no matter how the Indians may shoot, they will get the worst of it in the end."

"THE GREAT PYRAMID" RECEIVING ATTENTION IN NEW SOUTH WALES.

The following appeared in the Sydney Morning Herald of April 28th, 1879, and, being forwarded to us by the Sydney Anglo-Israel Association, we, in duty bound, respond to their zeal in the cause, by notifying to all-Israel throughout the world—located chiefly in "the nation and company of nations"—what our Australian New South Wales friends are doing. We wish them "God-speed," and much success! We trust that Mr. Percy Williams may make known our glorious subject with increasing acceptance, and to ever-increasing audiences. The extract is as follows:—

"The Great Pyramid" was the subject of a lecture delivered by Mr. Percy Williams, on Friday evening last, at the Town Hall, Newtown, before the members of the Prince Alfred Litera y and Chess Association and a large number of their friends—an audience of upwards of two hundred persons. Mr. Wyatt occupied the chair, in the absence, through illness, of the Mayor. The lecture was divided into two parts, the intermission being occupied by a pianoforte selection by Mr. Hugh Duff. The first part of the lecture was principally descriptive of the "Great Pyramid" and its origin, and was illustrated by diagrams, the work of the lecturer, which, with the clear and precise description given, carried the audience in imagination to the structure itself. The second part related to the scientific reading of the various passages and chambers to be found within the huge mass of masonry; and proofs were not wanting (said the lecturer) to lead to the conclusion that the Pyramid is the "Witness in Egypt" spoken of in the pages of Holy Writ. That the lecture was interesting was testified to by the fact that for two hours the audience gave rapt attention to it, frequently applauding the lecturer, and at the close giving, by acclamation, a most hearty vote of thanks. The chairman received a similar compliment.

Digitized by Google

ARE ISRAEL'S BLESSINGS MILLENNIAL ONLY?

By H. Sowdon.

Our opponents of the clerical and educated classes seem to rely entirely on the supposition "that Israel's blessings are to take place after their return to the Land of Palestine," as the one grand objection to our views that the Anglo-Saxon race is the "Lost Ten Tribes of Israel." But Paul's views are certainly in unison with ours, since he says in Romans xi. 17, "And if some of the branches be broken off, and thou, being a wild olive tree, were grafted in for them (margin), and with them (the branches still left on the olive tree), partakest of the root and fatness of the olive tree." According to our opponents' way of thinking the whole of the branches were cut off, and the Gentiles grafted into the olive tree in their place, but Paul distinctly says that only some were broken off, and in their place the wild olive tree (even the Gentiles) were grafted in, and partook, with the remaining natural branches, of the root and fatness of the olive tree. What is the grafting in of the Gentiles but God having mercy upon them? and if they were partakers of God's mercy, through Christ, so also must the remaining natural branches have obtained mercy, and have grown the same time as the Gentiles, and from the root received life and sustenance the same time as the grafted branches. Were the Jews the remaining branches? Paul himself firmly believed that the Jews as a body would continue in unbelief; for when he arrived in Rome, as a prisoner from Jerusalem, he called the chief of the Jews together, and when he had expounded the Word of God to them concerning Jesus, as only a few believed, he was forced to say, "Well spake the Holy Ghost by Esaias the prophet unto our fathers: Go unto this people, and say, Hearing ye shall hear, and shall not understand, and seeing ye shall see, and not perceive, for the heart of this people is waxed gross, and their ears are dull of hearing, and their eyes have they closed, lest they should see with their eyes and hear with their ears, and be converted, and I should heal them;" and the Lord Jesus, in Matt. xiii. 14, says, that in the Jews were fulfilled that prophecy of Esaias. We also know, and our opponents admit, that the Jews continue in unbelief unto this day. It is therefore beyond dispute that Judah and Levi were of the branches that were broken off. But who were those that were not cut off? We have no other alternative but to admit that they must be (if not the whole) some of the Ten Tribes and cannot be the Jews, whether they are more than the Tribes of Judah and Levi or not. We can, I think, most positively assert that the branches not broken off were of the kingdom of Israel and not of Judah. This being established, what was to be the result? Hosea (ii. 23) says, "And I will sow her unto Me in the earth, and I will have mercy upon her that had not obtained mercy, and I will say to them which were not My people, Thou art My people, and they shall say, Thou art my God." And again the prophet says in chap. xiv. 4, and following verses, "I will heal their backslidings; I will love them freely, for My anger is turned away from him." "I will be as the dew unto Israel. He shall grow as the lily, and cast forth his roots as Lebanon. His branches shall spread, and his beauty shall be as the olive tree, and his smell as Lebanon. They that dwell under his shadow shall return; they shall revive as the corn, and grow as the vine, the scent thereof shall be as the wine of Lebanon. Ephraim shall say, What have I to do any more with idols? I have heard him and observed him; I am like a green fir tree. From Me is thy fruit found."

Jeremiah (xxx. 11) says, "For I am with thee to save thee; though I make a full end of all nations whither I have scattered thee, yet will I not make a full end of thee, but I will correct thee in measure, and will not leave thee altogether unpunished."

Isaiah (liv. 13, &c.) says: "And all thy children shall be taught of the Lord, and great shall be the peace of thy children." "In righteousness thou shalt be established: thou shalt be far from oppression: for thou shalt not fear; and from terror; for it shall not come near thee." The same chapter, ver. 3, says, "For thou shalt break forth on the right hand and on the left, and thy seed shall inherit the Gentiles, and make the desolate cities to be inhabited."

I could quote hundreds of promises to be fulfilled when God's mercy was upon Israel, but have produced sufficient to show that God would increase and bless them, and that, as a consequence of His mercy upon them which Paul asserts was to take place during the time that the Gentiles were partaking of God's mercy through being grafted into the olive tree in place of the Jews. Cui Bono? For ours! and therefore we must be Israel.

Review.

Ammi; or, The Chosen People. By Miss Bird. Price twopence. R. Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

We strongly recommend this little work. It is only 16 pages long, but contains a good summary of the points of our belief, carefully put together, and told in a Christian spirit. We are glad to see female talent devoted to our work, and we are sure that Oldham has reason to be proud and glad of Miss Bird's presence there, where, doubtless, the Rev. A. J. J. Cachemaille's labours in our cause have infused great life and vigour among Israelites. Miss Bird's work is not original. Its merit is that it puts the labours of others into clear, condensed, interesting form. She has done for Oldham what Mr. Norman has effected for Exeter and the West. She has brought the subject of our Identity into the compass of a twopenny pamphlet, and has not only given sound reasons why our Identity should be believed by all, but why the objectors and opponents have not the least ground for their opposition, nor, as the saying is, "a leg to stand upon." We welcome our new Identity messenger, and trust her pamphlet may enjoy a long life and many editions. We should have preferred that Miss Bird had named her authorities.

Correspondence.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

Dear Sir,—As an Israelite, a Christian, and a Mason, I cannot resist sending you an extract from the Freemason of this day's date (the 13th inst.), which must prove of interest to your many readers now engaged in watching the "signs of the times."

Here we have a strong protest from the recognised organ of British Freemasons in favour of our Jewish cousins under the designation of Hebrews, he, the editor, probably being blind to the fact that we also are Hebrews.

"We, who have studied the Hebrew history know well what industrious and useful members of the body politic Hebrews are; and though, perhaps, it is true of them that they constitute a 'nation within a nation,' and that their true patriotic ardour is bound up with the land of their old renown—with Jerusalem and Jordan, the hills and vales of Palestine—yet we never could understand how Christians believing in Christianity could wish to persecute the Hebrews. We do, therefore, denounce to-day any refusal to them, in any quarter of the globe, of their just and undeniable rights. We protest against treatment which is detestable, and persecution which is cowardly, of a harmless, and kindly, and loyal race; and we trust that the time is not far distant when it shall be admitted that the rights of Hebrews are as sacred as those of any other religion or class in the world, and that they have every warrant to claim both our sympathy and our support, our goodwill and regard, as valued, and valuable, and industrious workers in the great social hive."

I would further, in reference to the above, call the attention of your readers to Grattan Guinness's incomparable work, "The Approaching End of the Age," 2nd edit., to the note on p. 480, in regard to the present year 1879.

I am, dear Sir, yours very truly,

Roppynden, Burwash, Sussex, Reuben.
13th September, 1879.

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements

(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O O payable at Ludgate-circus.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed :—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

LECTURES, MEETINGS, ETC.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

PRESIDENT: VISCOUNT FOLKESTONE, M.P.

THE REV. J. H. BILLINGTON, F.S.A., F.R.H.S., will LECTURE on

"LOST ISRAEL IDENTIFIED WITH THE BRITISH NATION,"

as follows:

Wednesday, October 1st, in the ASSIZE COURTS, KINGSTON-ON-THAMES (by kind permission of the Mayor). Chair to be taken at 7.30.

Tuesday, October 7, in the TOWN HALL, HYTHE, KENT (by kind permission of the Mayor). Chair to be taken at 7.30.

Wednesday, October 8th, in the TOWN HALL, ARUNDEL, SUSSEX (by kind permission of the Mayor). Chair to be taken at 7.30.

ADMISSION FREE.

Collections will be made at the close of each Lecture for the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association, under whose auspices they are given.

Office—20, Warwick Lane, London, E.C.

LIVERPOOL. — IDENTITY MEETINGS hitherto held at Alexandra Hall, Park-road, are REMOVED to ST. JAMES' HALL, 13A, ST. JAMES' PLACE, near St. James' Chuch. Every Thursday Evening at 8 p.m. Sunday Afternoons at 2.45. Admission Free. See Bills.

ANGLO-ISRAEL SERVICES will be conducted (D.V.) on SUNDAY NEXT, at the ASSEMBLY ROOMS, Lyme Grove, St. Thomas's Square, Mare Street, Hackney, by Rev. H. MARRIOTT, M.A. (Late Missionary to the Jews at Tanjier). Hours of worship, 11 a.m. and 3 p.m.

NEW PAMPHLETS.

Price 4d., post free 5d.

JAPHETIC OR SEMITIC: WHICH ARE WE?

BY CAROLINE PEARSE.

Showing the different character of the promises and blessings, and chastisements foretold as destined for the two Houses of Israel and Judah, and consequently the different careers it was foretold they would accomplish.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet Court, Fleet Street; and may be had, by ordering, of any bookseller.

Now ready, price 2d., post free 2½d., in neat coloured cover.

AMMI; OR, THE CHOSEN PEOPLE,

BY MISS BIRD.

Tracing the descent of the British people from Abraham, the "friend of God," and showing that true science, history, philology, and ethnology, are on the side of the Identity of the Anglo-Saxon race with the Ten Lost Tribes.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

In neat coloured cover, price 2d., post free 2½d.

BLESSINGS AND CURSES, AND THEIR RELATION TO ISRAEL AND JUDAH. By F. W. PHILLIPS, of Speedwell-road, Birmingham.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; and may be had, by ordering, of any Bookseller.

Now ready, price 2d.

A REPLY TO MR. ROBERTS ON THE EXETER HALL DEBATE, on the Subject, Are Englishmen Israelites? By ALEXANDER DUNN.

NEW BOOKS.

NEW WORK BY DR. WILD.

NOW READY, price 3s., post free 3s. 4d. Handsome cloth, gilt, printed on toned paper and illustrated.

THE LOST TEN TRIBES, AND 1882.

BY THE

REV. DR. JOSEPH WILD, Of Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Printed and published by

ROBERT BANKS, RACQUET COURT, FLEET ST., LONDON, E.C.

And may be had, by ordering, of any Bookseller.

EXTRACT FROM PREFACE:—

The main idea I wish to convey in this book, is that God is conducting His Providence through His ancient chosen people, Israel, whom I believe are found in the Saxon race. And His throne on earth, through which flow the purposes of Providence, is David's throne, which I believe to be at present the English throne. Queen Victoria (and God bless her) I believe to be of David's seed. The United States fulfils the rôle of the Tribe of Manasseh. Therefore, to understand the prophecies, Providence, and the present movements of nations, as well as the future lot and destiny of each, we must read the Scriptures in this light. God has made the children of Israel and throne of David His executive, in time, on earth. They are His executive for civilisation, evangelisation, order, and conquest. Through them God will conquer the world to an universal peace. As Moses was to God, so is Israel. Moses being a Divine executor, was to the people a god—so is Israel to all mankind. Spiritual Israel will come through literal Israel.

CONTENTS:—

DISCOURSE I.—KEY DISTINCTIONS.

DISCURSE II.—ISRAEL AND THE GATES.

Israel—How the Gates of his enemies are to be given him—By this sign Lost Israel may be known—The giving will correspond to the multiplying—The promise, in this day, is rapidly fulfilling—England, Disraeli, "Tancred," and Russia.

DISCOURSE III.—ISRAEL AND TERRITORY.

Promises to Israel—Material nature—Location of the Tribes in Christ's day—God's Providence—British and American rule—"Life from the dead"—Teaching the Nations peaceful arbitration—England and Russia—Afghanistan falls to Anglo-Israel—God's political geography—Anglo-Saxon evangelisation—Russia opposing it—British and Russian outposts in contact—Wall of Judah—Earth's girdle.

DISCOURSE IV.—ISRAEL AND POPULATION.

Prophetic latter days—Our bearings in the ages—Unwise impatience—Israel to be always a nation—Her Empire—Historic career of and future of England, America, and Judah—Relative increase of population—The Infidel Saxon—Jewish, British, and American interests one—A full end of all nations but Israel—Famine henceforth only for the heathen—Arbitration to be enforced by Israel—American absorption—Startling figures of future population—The balance of power.

DISCOURSE V.—ISRAEL AND LANGUAGE.

Latter day prophetic promises—Time of Israel's revival—Pyramid testimony—British Island population in 1882—Affinity between the English and Hebrew—Cell of the honey bee—Origin of language—Lion of languages—Foreign testimony—All tongues indigenous but English—The pre-millenial tokens.

DISCOURSE VI.—ISRAEL AND GENTILE FULNESS.

Meaning of the Gentile fulness—Blessings through Judah and Ephraim—Best religion—Jews outwitted—Why Benjamin was kept at Jerusalem—French Protestantism—Gentile fulness contemporary with to-day—What is it—Turkey exceptional.

DISCOURSE VII.—DREAM IMAGE OF NEBUCHADNEZZAR.

Future history of the world—The destruction of the Papacy commenced—Ireland to be free and independent of England and Rome—Future glory of Britain and the United States.

DISCOURSE VIII.—LITTLE HORN AND TURKEY.

The Turks the Ishmaelites—England and Russia to partition the Mahommedan Empire—Why England sympathises with Turkey.

DISCOURSE IX.—LITTLE HORN AND ANTI-CHRIST.

Prophetic wonders—Twenty marks of the monster—The Berlin Congress—Anti-Christs many—Mistakes by writers.

DISCOURSE X.—ANTI-CHRIST AND LITTLE HORN.

Second Discourse on the monster—Who he will be and his name—How he will obtain power—Trouble for Germany, France, and Russia—Communism—Romanism—Shakers—Matthias, Westchester Prophet

NEW BOOKS.

CONTENTS OF DR. WILD'S NEW BOOK—continued.

DISCOURSE XI.—THE TWO WITNESSES.

Troublous times—Appearance of the witnesses—Who they are—How they can be identified—Their mission work and suffering—The time and circumstances of Christ's coming.

DISCOURSE XII.—MOSES AND ELIJAH.

More about the two witnesses—Mormonism—God ruling among the nations—Career of the two witnesses—Anti-Christ—The throne and House of David.

DISCOURSE XIII.—BATTLE OF ARMAGEDDON.

The combatants on both sides—Who "The Kings of the East" are—The great Napoleonic idea—Disraeli, Lincoln, and Grant—England's policy in Turkey—Future wars and intrigues—The great battle field—Gathering of the nations—Earthquakes—Jerusalem as a seaport.

DISCOURSE XIV.—ARMAGEDDON AND THE PYRAMID.

The forces in the battle—Time of its occurrence—Mistakes of Adventists—A Church "strike" wanted—The hard times after 1882—History of the world till 1935—Hine's theory.

DISCOURSE XV.—WONDERS OF THE FUTURE

Purpose of the flood—The Abrahamic current—Rending Mount Olivet—Former earthquakes—Boundaries of Palestine—Dan and Gad to guard the "gates"—Gad the Scotchman—The future Jerusalem—The Dead Sea and the Mediterranean to be joined—Mistake of spiritualising everything.

DISCOURSE XVI.—NINETEEN HUNDRED AND FIFTY-SEVEN.

"Signs of the times"—The return to Jerusalem—Forces of Russia and England—Present locality of ancient nations—Origin of American Republicanism—Federation of the nations coming—Evolution and Devolution.

DISCOURSE XVII.—THE STONE WITNESS.

The Great Pyramid—Who Job was—Who built the Pyramid—What it was built for—An epitome of the earth—The history of man contained in it, past and future—Science and the Bible, etc., etc.

DISCOURSE XVIII.—SIGNS AND WONDERS.

The stone prophet in the wilderness—No war for four years—The great struggle to commence in 1882—Prussia ancient Assyria—England, Germany, and Egypt to be allies—The future history of the world—The Philistines the Southern Irish—Who their great ancestor was, etc.

DISCOURSE XIX.—THE THRONE OF DAVID.

England's prophecy fulfilled in the Berlin Congress—The harp of Tara the harp of Israel—The future European alliances—Royal succession of the House of Israel.

DISCOURSE XX.—JEREMIAH AND ST. PATRICK

The prophet's commission—His life—The tribes in his day—Landing of Jeremiah in Ireland—What he brought with him—Colonisation of Ireland—Jeremiah the founder of the ancient Irish government and religion—Tea Tephi and Heremon—The ancient Irish flag—The harp and lion—Season of Ireland's historical prestige—Causes of her decline—St. Patrick a Benjaminite—How Rome destroyed Jeremiah's memory among the Irish—Destruction of Tara—Ulster never conquered—Irish independence—Ark of the covenant—Ruins of Tara.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet Court, Fleet Street, E.C

Now Ready, price 9d., post free, 10d.

ARE WE ISRAELITES? THE TESTIMONY OF HISTORY, PHILOLOGY, AND ETHNOLOGY on the Subject. By the Rev. BOURCHIER WREY SAVILE, M.A., Rector of Shillingford, Exeter. With an Introduction by Philo-Israel.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row; Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; or of any Bookseller.

Now ready.

NEW AND ENLARGED EDITION OF COMING COLLISION BETWEEN ENGLAND AND RUSSIA. By an M.A. of Cambridge. Price 1s. The Appendix can be had for affixing to 1st Edition upon receipt of 1d. stamp.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick Lane, E.C.

Price 2d. Post free 2½d.

MANASSEH AND THE UNITED STATES.

An important Essay delivered before the "Lost Israel Identification Society," by the Rev. Joseph Wild, D.D., at Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, New York.

CONTENTS:—The Fulness of the Gentiles set in—For whom did God intend America—The Origin of the United States—The Footsteps of Ephraim and Manasseh—The Will of Jacob made to Ephraim and Manasseh—Manasseh a People, and a Great People—Manasseh's Birthtime of Separation—Out of nearly Sixty Conquered Colonies the only one England ever Lost was that of Manasseh (America)—The Great Seal of the United States—Manasseh was brought up at the Door of the Pyramid, &c., &c.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.; and of any Bookseller.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, 5 Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, OCT. 1, 1879. [All Rights Reserved.]

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. III. No. 145. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 8, 1879. [ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

PAGE
The Annexation of Afghanistan 405
The Problem of the Great Pyramid. By Professor Piazzi Smyth, Astronomer-Royal for Scotland 406
Punch and the Lion of Israel 407
"Ye Shall Not Have Gone Over the Cities of Israel Till the Son of Man Be Come" (Matt. x. 23). By Surgeon-General J. M. Grant, M.D. 408
The Editor of the Family Herald Gives Reasons for Rejecting Our Identity. By John T. Gott 408
The Anglo-Israel "Craze" at its Last Gasp 409
The Identity in Kimberley, Griqualand West, South Africa 409
Remnant—"Residue, That Which Is Left, That Which Remains."—Johnson's Dictionary. By L. P. 410
Reviews 410
Correspondence 410

THE ANNEXATION OF AFGHANISTAN.

THE public opinion of the country is rapidly forming, and coming to a conclusion which the foreign press of Europe sees clearly enough already, and "The Identity" has long ago expressed—namely, that there will be no peace for the British Empire in Asia till the power of Israel is extended over the whole of Afghanistan, as the paramount authority. The Treaty of Gundamuk, which tore the Gates from Israel's enemies, and transferred them to the Empress of India, virtually secured for the Empire the power of domination over the "displeasing" city—Cabul. The conduct of the Ameer, Yakoob Khan, in referring the Russian Envoy to the Indian Government in future diplomatic relations between the two States, was an indication in what direction matters were tending, The insurrection in the capital on September 3, 1879, the murder of the Envoy and his party, the action of the Ameer, and the alleged rebellion of the Afghan nation, now places on Israel the necessity of rising in her might and in the name of her God "passing through, treading down, tearing in pieces," and retaining the reins of power over a race which has defied the armies of the living God, adding to insult and injury a crime of the deepest dye, straight from the quiver of the wicked one. But it shall not and cannot prosper. God's promises are against the treacherous foe and in favour of His people Israel. As Shere Ali died, and the now captive Cetywayo "fell" for Israel's sake, so must Yakoob Khan, if indeed he have declared a "Jehad," or religious war, against the Lord and against His Christian, "anointed" people as reported lately; so must Cabul, the polluted, "dirty" city; so must the whole Afghan race submit. What says the voice of the nation now? Let a writer in the Times, under date September 10, 1879, signing himself "North-West Frontier," tell us. He said, addressing the editor,—

Some four months ago you were good enough to allow a letter from me about the new "scientific frontier" of India to appear in the Times. I advocated, particularly in the Kuram and Khyber directions, the retention of all the country we had occupied. We ought, I said, to keep possession of every place and position we had taken and give up nothing.

I do not wish to take up your space, but let me conclude with a repetition of the opinion that to whatever point we are compelled to advance, there we ought to remain. Cabul must now be permanently occupied. I cannot help thinking that if the Ameer Yakoob Khan has been killed, it will simplify our annexation of Afghanistan. The expense of this is a bugbear. An addition of 10,000 men to the army in India, European and native, would be more than sufficient. The cost of this and of the civil administration could be easily met from the ordinary revenues of the country.

In its leader of September 16, 1879, the editor admitted that "it was not now a policy of surrender and withdrawal from Afghanistan that is now really formidable to the settlement on which the nation was last year agreed. It is a movement for annexation and adventure that is to be dreaded and resisted." No doubt! The nation sees clearly, as nine out of every ten reasonable men do, that having "the Gates," we must, to secure our right to hold an embassy in safety in Cabul, retain the power to put down fanatical outbursts such as we have lately witnessed. If war is to be the consequence, war must be accepted. In such a righteous warfare God's hand will be for us and not against us. He has promised us this very thing in express words in Isa. xli. 10—12: "They that WAR against thee shall be as nothing, as a thing of nought." The Afghans were "incensed" against us, they have "striven" with us, and now they profess themselves ready to "war" with us. But, as God is true, they shall be "ashamed," "confounded," "they shall be as nothing," dissipated and dispersed, nay, "as a thing of nought." The Lord is on our side. He has told us often we are not to fear. In His name, then, we shall subdue them; and as in the Khyber, as at the Peiwar Kotal, as at Ulundi, so again in Dakka, in Jellalabad, at Gundamuk, and in Cabul itself, God being our helper and our strength, we believe we shall "tread them down," "tear them in pieces," and shall find no Afghan, no Ghilzais, no Mohmund, able to deliver. We ask our friends, then, not to allow fears to cloud their faith. It will be, we believe, constantly the temptation to faithless "Ephraim" "to tremble in the West" (Hosea xi. 10). But let the "tremblers" recollect, that once before, when they distrusted the God of Israel in the matter of the great Gate, Constantinople, He was better to them than all their fears, and "He placed us in our houses" safe and sound. The Russians we feared so much, failed to find the door of entrance to our Gate; and so shall it be again with the Afghan Mussulmans. They have dared to rise against us with foul murder, base treachery, and blood-shed of the innocent, defiling their national defence; and do our readers think that these are the accompaniments of a God-blessed warfare which He will allow to prosper against His people Israel? We look for the speedy destruction of the Afghan armies, for the occupation of the accursed city by our forces, for the punishment of the guilty people, and for the final domination of Israel, in a way the whole world shall recognise, over the rebellious power of a treacherous nation, destined ere long to submit to the already world-wide dominion of the Queen of British-Israel!

Digitized by Google

POSTSCRIPT.—The surrender of the Ameer and the collapse of all armed resistance to our march on Cabul, seem to lend strong support to our remarks above made.

THE PROBLEM OF THE GREAT PYRAMID.

THE above is the title of a paper in the September number of the Contemporary Review, by that able, stirring, insatiable writer, Mr. R. A. Proctor, and is replete with his characteristic defects as well as excellences. Nor is the discourse very new, for the main argument throughout, appears to be the same as that set forth by him to a Manchester audience several months ago, and not very much to their edification.

But that may have been their fault; so by all means let us inquire what the said main argument, as now furbished up for the Contemporary Review, really, purely, and simply is.

It is an endeavour, by Mr. R. A. P., to account by his own suppositions for some of the grandest facts about the old, old Great Pyramid; much in the same manner that certain rationalistic writers of our day do so often struggle to explain all the phenomena of God's wondrous creation, Jews and Israelites too, by nothing but natural and material progressive development of their own finding out, or imagining, alone. Wherefore no Scripture history of those early times wherein the Great Pyramid was built, no Isa. xix. 19, with its exquisite singling out of the ancient monument for a future purpose of the God of Israel, no allusion to Divine inspiration of any kind or degree to the unknown architect, is allowed to enter the ultra-modern disquisition which is now figuring in the present month's essay of a very pushing London magazine.

But as, in a subject of such primeval age as the Great Pyramid, something rather, or somewhat, old must be got hold of, to give just a flavour of at least a half-and-half kind of antiquity to the dreadful rawness of this very year's mental theories, hastily run together by Mr. R. A. P., he puts up horses, proh pudor, with Proclus! Proclus, a man consigned long ago to shameful oblivion, and most worthily, for who and what was Proclus?

A disreputable pervert from Christianity to the old heathen idolatry of the later days of the Roman Empire, somewhere about A.D. 450. A man whose science was astrology; from whom we know nothing really and positively about any of the Pyramids of Egypt, and least of all about the exactitudes of the great one; a man indeed whose writings are largely borrowed from others, but twisted and allegorised in the process. The very father, too, was he of modern rationalism; endeavouring to prove that the material world is eternal of, and by, itself alone; and all this as part of his malignant book, entitled, with a scorning grin, "Eighteen Arguments Against the Christians!!!" But he wrote even that with so little point or effect that Gibbon is constrained to say of him, "His life exhibits a deplorable picture of the second childhood of human reason."

An astrologer then, and a poor one, not worthy of being an astronomer, this Proclus, without any important facts to go upon, claimed King Cheops of the ancient Great Pyramid as being astrological, just like himself: and with this more than suspicious help, or worse than blind leading the blind, away goes Mr. Richard A. Proctor, brandishing the merely medieval name of the wretched Proclus before astonished moderns; and undertaking on his lines to prove King Cheops' object in building the grand monument of his reign and of all the early world, to have been astrological speculations about his own paltry life, but begun on a basis of practical astronomy.

The process, on paper, is really very cleverly conducted, albeit at least to the general reader rather wearisome, even dreary. But then, to see how Mr. Proctor assumes so positively that his own peculiar ideas, of an observing astronomy he has never worked out, must have infallibly controlled the gigantic works in stone of the primeval Pyramid builders, and caused them, before settling down to Procleian astrological applications, to be guided by, and for, astronomy alone. This, too, is all the more noteworthy by us, because it is so peculiarly to the horrification of another branch of the rationalistic, and (profiting by the melancholy but finished example of Proclus, we may now confidently say), anti-Christian, school—viz., the Egyptologists. For they (see the article "Egypt" in the presently publishing edition of the "Encyclopœdia Britannica") repudiate any astronomy in the Great Pyramid; and declare openly, roundly, insultingly, that no one who knows anything at all about the ancient Egyptians believes that the Pyramids were erected for anything else whatever than tombs.

Whether it is justifiable or not for any writer to put Scripture so totally on one side, and try his own rationalistic ideas for explaining the early mystery of man's present position on earth, it is plain that men will persist in doing so. And of the two classes of rationalists just mentioned, Mr. Proctor is, in our humble estimation, by far the less objectionable; for he does make use of, and endeavour to satisfy some of the positive measures of the antique structure, while the Egyptologists ignore them all. We should therefore have some hopes of Mr. Proctor eventually, were it not for his having just now woefully truckled down to the Egyptologists, in the clenching matter of dates; and he cannot apparently go so grievously wrong there, without exhibiting some lamentably bad feeling towards "the sacred and scientific theory" described in "Our Inheritance in the Great Pyramid."

At his page 110, therefore, we read the following flippant account of the chronology derived in that book from the ancient monument; and shown therein, again and again to come, on all disputed points, just about half-way between the dates of the Septuagint and those of the Hebrew version of the Bible—they being the two versions which have almost equal authority and an equal number of supporters throughout Christendom. Yet thus writes Mr. Proctor:—

"It is true not one of these intervals (of the Pyramid-derived chronology) accords with the dates given by those who are considered the best authorities in Biblical matters; but so much the worse for the dates."

Wherefore what does Mr. Proctor then do? Does he keep to one of the rival versions of the now lost original Bible, alone, and ignore the other? or whom does he go to as "the best authorities in Biblical matters?"

He goes straight to the Egyptologists, though their early dates lie totally outside and beyond all those of both the acknowledged versions of the Holy Scriptures. Hence we find him now advocating a date like B.C. 3,300, as being that of the foundation of the Great Pyramid. The Egyptologists simply say so, and apparently carry overwhelming weight with him; he not regarding that that date of their's implies a time when the earth was under the waters of the Noachian deluge according to the Septuagint translation of the Bible; or was still more impossibly about a thousand years before the earth's surface was supernaturally swept clean of wicked ante-diluvians and all their sinful works, according to the Hebrew version of the Holy Scriptures. Wherefore, totally opposing all that men have now to trust to for the Divine Word, Mr. R. A. Proctor claims the presently existing Pyramids in Egypt as buildings erected either under the waters, or long before the surging of the waters of the Noachian flood; and calmly assumes, notwithstanding all which the Bible teaches of the few then saved in the ark, that at that very time the Pyramid builders possessed the command "of enormous wealth, practically exhaustless stores of material, and the means of compelling many thousands of men to labour for them."

Digitized by Google

It is not, therefore, only the theory of the Great Pyramid, as contained in the book "Our Inheritance" therein, which is being fought against by Mr. Proctor on this score of date of the Deluge, and date of man's renewed numbers in post-diluvian times, it is all the Christian Churches, Roman Catholic and Protestant, Presbyterian also, and Episcopalian, and wherever any two or three worshippers may meet together to read the Scriptures, and believe them to be the Word of God.

Yet, however revolting so wide a contradiction to inspired history as Mr. Proctor's Egyptologically derived assertion may be to many—we, of the BANNER, must here, and in this place at all events, stay to inquire what are the astronomical grounds supposed to justify the assertion in Mr. Proctor's mind; for as to Egyptology, founded, as it is, on idolatry of the most degrading kind, we can have nothing to do with that.

The alleged astronomical grounds then are:—That at the first of two well-known, and often discussed occasions, when the Pyramid pole-star, Alpha Draconis, was visible at the "entrance passage" angle, a very bright star, Alpha Centauri, was observable Southward in the direction of the "grand gallery" of the Great Pyramid.

But that grand gallery is not an observing avenue. There are near 200 feet of solid masonry between its Southernmost end and the Southern skies. It can only, therefore, act as a symbolical astronomical apartment; and while its notable "seven overlappings" have been long held to typify the seven stars, or the Pleiades, the vertical meridian plane of those stars when Southing at midnight, at the more Scriptural date for any post-diluvian architecture of 2170 B.C., is both indicated by the whole length of the grand gallery; is emphasized, for that one date alone, out of 25,000 years, by the Equinoctial Colure having then coincided therewith, and with the Polar star on the Meridian; and is borne further testimony to by Pleiades-year traditions still forming the chronological heir-looms of most of the unchanged early races of mankind, as extracted out of aboriginal records with so much care and success by Mr. R. G. Haliburton; while, on the other hand, it is hardly necessary to remark, that there are no similarly wide-spread confirmations touching either the star, or the antiquity of the name, or the existence of that hybrid animal, the Centaur.

The scientific absolute date for the Pleiades group of stars having been in the remarkable position and combination above described, was computed with much skill in 1871, by Dr. Brunnow, then Astronomer-Royal for Ireland, as being 2248 B.C.; Mr. Proctor, after similar calculations, wherein we are most happy to bear our testimony that he is extremely skilful, and well versed, says that "2140 B.C., or thereabouts," is closer to the truth. Perhaps it is, and he may have involuntarily done hereby good service to the Pyramid cause. But in his haste, he is a sad blunderer, and attributes the former calculation to Dr. Ball, the present Astronomer-Royal for Ireland; and somewhat similarly, at his page 112, he puts the Swede of Upsala, Mr. Wackerbath, for the late Sir Henry James, R.E., as the inventor of a certain comical system of balance ropes, trucks, wheels, and weights, for going up and down the inclined passages of the Great Pyramid—in idea.

Far more seriously, however, than that, Mr. R. A. P., at his page 110, and again at page 113, ascribes to the author of "Our Inheritance in the Great Pyramid" the enunciation that "the end of the world is to take place in 1881;" whereas that person has not only not said that thing, but has said, printed, and published the very opposite; and we should be glad to have it proved that this duplicated erroneous statement of Mr. R. A. P.'s is only a blunder.

But his downright naming again (on his page 105) of what he will call, notwithstanding the most energetic denials of the principal persons concerned, "the Pyramid religion, established by Taylor, Smyth, and their followers," throws the most regretable doubts on the matter; leaving him thus an only too fit companion for his favourite, yet horribly anti-Christian, writer, picked out of the dregs of the dying Roman Empire, Proclus!

PIAZZI SMYTH.

"PUNCH" AND THE LION OF ISRAEL.

WE hope our readers have carefully studied Punch's late cartoon by Tenniel, giving blind testimony to our Identity in a very marked and forcible manner. It occurred in the number for September 20th, 1879, and is entitled "Fiat Justitia. The British Lion and the Afghan Wolves." The picture is a splendid commentary, giving direct but unwitting evidence of our origin, since it describes our race by its Scriptural emblem of the Lion, and gives by pictorial representation a capital illustration of Micah v. 8. That verse, as our readers know, runs as follows:—"The remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people, AS A LION among the beasts of the forests; AS A YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, IF HE GO THROUGH, both treadeth down and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver." The application of this verse cannot be to millennial times, for these will be times of peace. But this verse speaks of war and victory; of conquest and humiliation for the enemies of Israel. It cannot relate to past times when Israel was in the land of Palestine, for Micah prophesied in B.C. 710, just when the Ten Tribes had been ejected by their God with ignominy from their land, and were captives, for the most part, in Assyria. It could not refer to the history of the Jews then or since, for in truth facts belie the prediction, if any one should venture to assert that the words have such a reference.

It applies, then, to our times—Gospel dispensation times—when Israel shall be "represented" by the heraldic emblem of a lion, of a young, nay, a rampant lion, full of vigour, of strength; to a time when the nation, as a lion, shall be "cast away" among the "Gentile dogs," Afghan wolves, and "beasts of the forest," who, in comparison with that lion's strength, shall prove to be only "flocks of sheep," weak, powerless, and feeble in war and in military organization. The British being Israel, answer now to the description to the letter.

Punch in his cartoon gives us the illustration exactly, and we have only to describe his etching to make the fulfilment answer in every jot and in every tittle to the prophecy. The scene, then, is laid in Afghanistan, and the place the "dirty, displeasing" city, "Cabul." There, in the distance, several British soldiers and officers are lying prone, done to death by a pack of ravening Afghan wolves, who are tearing their prey to pieces, regardless of "the vengeance" near at hand. For Nemesis stands in awful majesty in the foreground. She is personified by the British Lion roused to vengeance, roaring in his rage, his mane erect, every sinew, every muscle rigid with concentrated passion, his feet firmly planted for a fatal spring, his cruel teeth showing, his back arched, and his tail lashing from side to side; the whole a picture of furious retribution ready to be hurled at the ignoble "beasts of the forest," who begin now to realise (too late) that their time has come. But the spot where the lion stands prepared to advance is suggestive. It is at an opening in the living rocks, a veritable GATE to the plain beyond. There, as a sentinel hard by, the king of beasts roars in tones of wrath, warning all the world that he means shortly "to go through" the Gates, "to tread down" the Afghan wolves, and their futile opposition, "to tear them in pieces," and that with the certainty of result, because JEHOVAH has promised it, "that NONE shall deliver" from his fatal attack. Fiat Justitia! The cause is God's! The injury was from beneath; the insult to God's own people. It cannot, shall not stand, as God is true! As in Zululand, as at the capture of Cetywayo, and at the utter destruction of the military policy of that blood-thirsty monster, so in the just recompense that must fall on the guilty city and its possibly treacherous ruler, the Ameer, Yakoob Khan, it will be found that Israel, if she go through, must, like the lion among the pack of wolves, both tread them down, tear them to pieces, and remain master of the ground, for from their hand there will be NONE to deliver. We thank Punch for his splendid pictorial testimony to our Identity, and we point to his picture of the British Lion as the best commentary we can have on both Balaam's and on Micah's prophecies (Num. xxiii. 24, xxiv. 9; Micah v. 8).

Digitized by Google

"YE SHALL NOT HAVE GONE OVER THE CITIES OF ISRAEL TILL THE SON OF MAN BE COME." (MATT. X. 23.)

BY SURGEON-GENERAL J. M. GRANT, M.D.

ON reading Matt. x. 23, it lately struck me that our Lord's declaration therein could not be rationally or intelligibly interpreted without the aid of Identity light; but, that if we supposed "the cities of Israel" and "the cities of Great Britain" to be the same, all difficulty of interpretation vanishes. I communicated this idea to a clerical friend, and the result was a correspondence, of which the following extract may be interesting to your readers. It is a portion of what I addressed to that friend, who regarded "our Lord's coming," mentioned in the passage, as a "providential," not a literal, real "coming," and that it related to the then impending siege of Jerusalem by Titus, when Christ might be said providentially to have "come."

"We read," I said, "nothing of 'providential comings of Christ' in the Bible; on the contrary, our Lord specially commended the faith of the centurion who believed that He would work the expected miracle as easily from a distance, and that it was unnecessary for Him to 'come' for that purpose. Besides, if we say that Christ comes providentially only at such eras of our world's history as we deem the most important, we imply, if we do not actually assert, that He is not so providentially present at other times and during other occurrences of apparently less importance; and how is this to be reconciled with His own express declaration that not a sparrow falls to the ground without His knowledge and permission?

"Strictly speaking, there was no 'Land of Israel' in the apostles' times, because the Ten Tribes were in captivity, and Judea was tributary to Rome, and ruled by a Roman king. I cannot decide what parts of Revelation are fulfilled and what remain to be fulfilled, but I feel certain, because Christ Himself says so, that the siege and destruction of Jerusalem by Titus was NOT one of the signs by which His coming was to be heralded. The question of the apostles is two-fold: 'What shall be the sign of Thy coming and of the end of the world?' and Christ's answer embraces the whole of their question. The only wars and rumours of wars that could ever give them any personal concern or apprehension were the impending conflicts with the Roman power, which ended in the fall of Jerusalem, and our Lord's prediction of these events in Matt. xxiv. 6 is coupled with the express declaration that 'the end is not yet.' At verse 14 of the same chapter, however, we have a distinct sign stated without ambiguity—viz., the preaching of the Gospel over all the world as a witness to all nations; so that the conclusion seems inevitable that the preaching the Gospel over all the world referred to here, and the going over all the cities of Israel referred to at chap. x. 23, must point to the same event, and be chronologically the same, and consequently (the Gospel having already been preached over all the world), that Israel must at this moment exist as a powerful empire, HAVING 'CITIES' and EMPLOYING MISSIONARIES amongst 'ALL NATIONS'—a condition that applies in all its literal fulness to Great Britain, but to no other nation under the sun.

"I strongly object to figurative interpretations of the Bible. I know that many good and able men have adopted them under the judicial blindness which God inflicted on His people, but which I believe is now in His providence being removed. Of course, much of the Bible admits of a spiritual interpretation only, but that is no reason why words should not be interpreted according to their literal meaning wherever it can be done without violating common sense. I think that to talk of providential 'comings' of Christ, is to violate common sense, and to adopt a loose and fanciful method of interpretation calculated to produce confused and obscure ideas regarding the second advent, and to keep unduly out of view the grand and essential doctrine of the resurrection from the dead."

THE EDITOR OF THE "FAMILY HERALD" GIVES REASONS FOR REJECTING OUR IDENTITY.

BY J. T. GOTT.

THERE are ever to be found people who are either too idle or too indifferent to examine a subject for themselves. They prefer to take the opinion of others, probably as ignorant as themselves, and to abide by their decision. To give an illustration: "Birmingham," writing to the editor of the Family Herald respecting the Ten Tribes, is answered thus (July 12, 1879): "There is nothing within our knowledge which can be taken as evidence that the British nation is composed of the Lost Tribes of Israel. There are traces of the Jewish type of countenance in every people. The British nation is a wondrous compound of races and nationalities, and cannot be regarded as representative of any one exclusively. The subject is not one in which we feel any great interest, and, in these times of great personal perplexity, we are interested to help the harassed in mind rather than discuss fables."

The first part of this reply would prove to a mere novice that the writer knew very little of what Moses and the prophets say about the Tribes of Israel, and the second part shows that he knows nothing whatever about the subject, or he would perceive more clearly the signs of the times, and what the present "perplexity" is likely to lead up to. Note the reasoning in this paragraph. It is not within the editor's knowledge—ergo, it is a fable! Truly this is an age of intellectual pride. Some of our leading opponents profess to have investigated this subject, but one and all have made statements which show that their investigations have been of a very superficial character. The editor of the Family Herald (or one of them) has supplied us with the true motive principle of nearly all our opponents—viz., it is not within our knowledge, therefore, it must be condemned.

HOW CAN THE BRITISH BE GENTILES?—I question, writes L. P., if those Bible-loving Christians, who speak with indifference or contempt of the British being literal Israel, can realize that the Holy Scriptures were written by Hebrews, for Hebrews, to Hebrews, mostly in Hebrew, recording the history of the Hebrews, to the glory of their Hebrew Redeemer, Saviour, God; and that to Hebrews was always entrusted the commission of making known and publishing to ALL the world that Hebrew Saviour's grace, through the same Hebrew Scriptures; such commission having never been abrogated in God's Word, never transferred to any Gentile race, but continued to this hour to the Hebrews. Ergo we British are literal Hebrews—God's people Israel—since we fulfil the function.

Digitized by Google

THE "ANGLO-ISRAEL CRAZE" AT ITS LAST GASP.

THE Rock newspaper says the "craze" is subsiding rapidly, and "the deluded ones are coming quickly to their right senses." The Liverpool Protestant Standard, in its issue of August 23, 1879, plumes itself on the same alleged fact, observing that that paper "showed up the errors of the Identification theory from its very beginning."

We confess we have not yet seen any arguments from the pen of the editor of the latter paper "showing up our errors!" Had we been so favoured, we should have certainly let our readers know, and publicly tried our opponents' mettle in an argument. We have not been so fortunate, and therefore cannot say how strong would have been the case against us had they come to light. We beg, however, to inform the editor of the Liverpool Protestant Standard that a still-"crazy one" in sending us his comments has notified to us that, so far from the "craze" having subsided, it is still so rampant, so full of life, and so vigilant, that in the editor's own city, Liverpool, two or three meetings a week are regularly held to aid it If the editor, for instance, would only honour these meetings with his company once or twice a week and give the members the benefit of his able arguments against our views, we can promise him, on part of the Liverpool Israelites, that he shall receive a full, satisfactory, and, we hope, unanswerable statement, to prove that "our Identity" is true, and his own objections unfounded, futile, and erroneous.

The Rock's position we all know. It is that of one who knows nothing of our views or arguments, who persistently repeats, parrot-like, that "the Identity of the British with Israel is a crazy delusion hatched of Satan;" but that "the Identity of the Afghans with the Lost Ten Tribes is very probably a God-sent truth which Christian men ought to accept," though to support it there is not a scintilla of evidence or the shadow of a shade of proof, either Scriptural, ethnic, philological, or physiological.

We have to notice further, in regard to the assertion of our two mentors of the press—namely, "the craze" is rapidly subsiding," that as editor of this journal we have no proof of the truth of that statement. On the contrary, to our certain knowledge the circulation of the BANNER OF ISRAEL is steadily increasing, the sale of the works on the subject, even at this dull season of the year, are constant, and fairly encouraging; new centres of interest are daily developing in the United Kingdom, and from the Empire at large we receive continued proof that the circle of Identity knowledge is enlarging without pause or ebb. Thus from the United States, from Canada, from the Cape Colonies, from Griqualand West, from Natal, from India, from New South Wales, from South Australia, from Tasmania, from New Zealand, from British Guiana, and from Barbadoes, from Italy as well, we receive news of progress, of advance, of interest, and of good wishes for the success of our efforts, which we cannot attribute to the subsidence of the "craze;" but rather to God's blessing on the onward move of the Identity, causing its spread to the very "utmost bound of the everlasting hills."

We have, beside the above considerations, another source of consolation. We know that "our Identity" and its teaching are not moribund, for their adversaries are still offensively urgent in their fierce opposition. Mr. J. C. McClellan of York, for instance, to comfort us, sends us a hand-bill he has just put out, headed "The Anglo-Israel Theory Refuted." It contains a notice to all beholders that not only may the author's (Mr. J. C. McClellan's) two pamphlets be obtained for sale, but that Philalethes' book, "The Israel of God," is also still ready to do battle against the Identity. Proofs these, we think, that the tide has not turned yet; but that our opponents feel that they have to be up and doing to stay our onward march. At the foot of his hand-bill our candid opponent, Mr. McClellan, states that the three publications advertised "contain a COMPLETE refutation of the absurd and mischievous statements advanced in support of this most pernicious theory." "Absurd," "mischievous," and "most pernicious," are adjectives which our readers see are deemed needful to point an opposition to what is hardly, we think, "subsiding," or evidence of a disappearing "craze." If subsiding, why the adjectives? why the animosity? Mr. McClellan, we feel, ought to thank us for advertising his works, and drawing attention to his strong adjectival condemnation of our really God-tanght truths.

Another symptom that we are not so very near death as the Rock hopes, is furnished to us by the fact that one Clericus, the pastor of the "Apostolic Church" of Leeds, who has written a pamphlet to add his testimony to "Lo-Ammi," against us, still persists in sending us now and again stinging words, recently one on a post-card open to the postman's perusal, which we conclude he thinks will discourage us. They do so in this respect, that we grieve to think an English minister of Christ's religion can bear to put his name as "Clericus" to such a document, in which he glories in the fact that "he is preparing a list of about twenty Anglo-Israel lies to appear when required." The state of mind which could induce a minister of religion, of our race, to pen the above regarding our sacred subject, so addressed to a perfect stranger as the editor of this journal is to him, depresses while it surprises. It certifies us, however, that our subject is yet far from "dead," and that Clericus, like others of his holy order, is ready to forget all decorum, all decency, and the apostle's injunction regarding "pitifulness" and "courtesy" (1 Pet. iii. 8, 9) in his one eager thought to destroy a faith which we believe and know to be of God; but which, though Clericus has tried his best, he has not yet destroyed or hurt, and we believe NEVER will. No! the Identity is no "craze." It is not subsiding. It is advancing, and that rapidly. Israel, praise ye the Lord.

THE IDENTITY IN KIMBERLEY, GRIQUALAND WEST, SOUTH AFRICA.

WE have been amused, if not gratified, at the honour done us in so remote a spot as Kimberley, in West Griqualand, a town to the West of Orange River, Free States, and at the extreme North of the Cape Colonies. A newspaper published there, called the Diamond Fields Advertiser, under date June 2, 1879, has been forwarded to us that we may see, we suppose, what the worthy editor says of the Identity and ourselves. He does us the honour of quoting the whole of our leading article from BANNER No. 115, of March 12, headed, "Israel's Great African Empire," and is greatly astonished at the discovery that "Mr. Philo-Israel, of Woodcot-villa, Tyndall's-park, Bristol," is promulgating views so exactly in unison with his own aspirations for confederation in South Africa, and thus bringing on "the consummation so devoutly to be wished of" Sir Bartle Frere's policy—namely, "Dominion."

Our friend the editor is rather inclined to be jocose at our expense, but, then, as he frankly admits (what we wish our opponents would do too) that he has read nothing and knows nothing of our opinions, we feel bound to forgive him the pleasantry he indulges in since it pleases him and does us no harm. Of one thing we are glad to disabuse his mind. He speaks of things being as "plain to us as the profits of our new publication." We beg to assure him the profits of the BANNER do not belong to us, and that ours is even a more anomalous position than he suspects, and voluntarily so—namely, that of an editor who wants no fee or reward, who refuses pay and profits from the paper he looks on as his heavenly Master's trust confided to his keeping for Israel's benefit, and who has, therefore, no pecuniary interest in his literary undertaking of any sort or kind whatsoever. We hope the editor of the Diamond Fields Advertiser will, before he again gives his readers so large a portion of his columns to the discussion of the views of MR. PHILO-ISRAEL and the BANNER, give a little time to enable himself to master the details of the subject, and so be in a position to tell his readers something rational, instead of proving to all the world of Kimberley what we fear is the bare truth—namely, that he knows nothing at all about it, as yet!

Digitized by Google

REMNANT—"RESIDUE, THAT WHICH IS LEFT, THAT WHICH REMAINS."

(JOHNSON'S DICTIONARY.)

WE are so accustomed to associate the word remnant with the idea of a comparatively small portion of an original thing, or substance, that the term, as frequently used in the Bible in connection with Israel, becomes a stumbling block, and many possibly cannot reconcile the term with the fact of what it refers to, being far more multitudinous than was the body of which it is a remnant. This difficulty is removed if we turn to the records in the four Gospels of the miraculous feeding of the multitude, at the end of which narratives we find that "twelve baskets full" were taken up of the "fragments" that remained over and above the two fishes and five loaves which were originally provided. In this case, the so-called fragments or remnants—for we conceive them to bear the same meaning—far exceeded in quantity that of which they were the remnants or fragments; yet this term is used which ordinarily conveys the idea of only small portions of what was a larger whole. In like manner the word remnant is appropriately applied to Israel when, by the marvellous blessing of the God of Israel, it outnumbers, to an exceeding great extent, the people from which it is descended.

L. P.

Reviews.

The Lost Ten Tribes and 1882. By the Rev. Joseph Wild, D.D., Pastor of Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, N.Y. Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C. Price three shillings.

WE have much pleasure in directing attention to a handsome Identity volume which comes to us from our London publisher, Mr. R. Banks, printed and published in London, and from its very appearance doing credit to the enterprising house which has issued it.

The volume contains twenty discourses of the well-known American divine, Dr. Joseph Wild, of Brooklyn, published originally in the New York paper, The Champion, and now collected into a very readable, interesting book. We are glad to find from these discourses that Dr. Wild is quite one with us on this side the water with most, though not all, the views we entertain on our great and glorious subject. This strikes us often as very remarkable in an American; for if our readers reflect, they will see it involves the cordial acceptance by an American of a position which nationally places him second to the British. He recognises that the British are Ephraim, and the American nation Manasseh. He well knows what in the prophetic word is said regarding the two: "Truly his younger brother shall be greater than he," is God's decision.

Dr. Wild, and American Israelites, to their infinite credit, accept this dictum notwithstanding, and embrace the Identity as a national glory and blessing, which will ennoble but never degrade them. Dr. Wild sets out by laying down the Scriptural distinction between "Israel and Judah," discoursing also of the "Samaritans," of "Benjamin" the Tribe, of "Manasseh and Ephraim," and of the Great Pyramid. He defines the meanings of the words "Gentiles," "throne of David," and "Ephraim"—the latter in a sense we recommend our Gothic friends to study. Then follows a fine chapter on "Israel and the Gates," well worth perusal; valuable sermons also on "Israel and Territory," "Israel and Population," "Israel and Language," "Israel and Gentile Fulness." The preacher grasps the idea of "The Stone Kingdom" of Daniel, and gives us in the volume a sermon on the "Dream Image of Nebuchadnezzar." Though we cannot agree with all his views—such as the probable future independence of Ireland—we heartily endorse his opinion that "America will federate" with England at the last.

Our limits forbid our enlarging, but we promise our readers that if they procure this work, and will peruse it, they will find "our Identity" discussed in a clear, novel, racy, and "American" point of view, which is sure to interest, sure to be instructive, and may lead the thoughtless and inquiring to pursue the investigation till possibly conviction may be the result.

We trust this American divine's writings will find acceptance among our British Israelites, and that our enterprising London publisher may not regret that he undertook the work.

Blessings and Curses, and their Relation to Israel and Judah. By F. W. Phillips, Birmingham. Price twopence. R. Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London.

MR. F. W. PHILLIPS has put his argument in opposition to Messrs. J. Wilkinson and R. Roberts in a neat form. The latter contend, we know, that since the whole of the Twelve Tribes were disobedient, all Twelve must now be equally under the curses predicted. Mr. Phillips' answer is this:—

1. God's threats of punishment were conditional. When Israel repented, the hand of correction was withdrawn always.

2. For certain transgressions Ten-Tribed Israel was deported. No other curse attached to them. For similar, and no greater, sins, Judah was deported too afterwards. Judah was permitted to return; Israel was not permitted to do so—for their good.

3. Judah committed the crowning sin of the crucifixion, which Israel did not. Our Lord Himself pronounced on the Jews, therefore, certain definite curses which have come on them alone to the very uttermost. That House only suffered them (Matt. xxiii. 34—39, xxvii. 25; Luke xxi. 22, 24); Israel escaped them.

4. Israel, besides, on the contrary, had, from the first, mercy extended to them in their outcast condition, and obtained it. Their mercies were promised unconditionally (Jer. iii. 12, 22, xxxi. 18, 20, 37; Hosea xi. 8, 9; Isa. xliii. 22, 25). They were preferred to Judah (Jer. iii. 14), for Judah's curses abide still on them to-day!

5. The very name of Israel was tied up to the sons of Joseph (Gen. xlviii. 15, 16; 1 Chron. v. 1; Jer. xxxi. 9). Judah had thus no part in the unconditional blessings while separate from Ephraim, the head of the Ten-Tribed House.

We recommend Mr. Phillips' little pamphlet—of which the above is a sketchy outline—and regard it as a clear exposition of a difficult part of our case which the opponents always misapprehend and use against us. The cost is only twopence, and the work handy, well got up, and very creditable to both author and printer.

Correspondence.

A VOICE FROM THE CAPE.—ISAIAH XLII. 1—4.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—I lately heard a sermon preached by a minister with whom I have had several conversations on our Identity with Israel from Isa. xlii. 1—4, in which the preacher said that the term "My servant," as used here, and throughout this, and the succeeding eleven chapters of Isaiah, refers to our Saviour, Jesus Christ.

I know that the preacher was in error in making this statement, for on reference to verse 19 of Isaiah xlii. we have in our Authorised Version, "Who is blind, but My servant?" &c., which evidently refers to God's servant Israel—the Ten Tribes, or the British people—and my opinion is that "My servant" spoken of in the first verse likewise refers to the same "elect" or "chosen" people, notwithstanding that the quotation by St. Matthew (xii. 18—21) is usually accepted as evidence that the words used by the prophet were applied by him to our Saviour exclusively. The passage in Isaiah, as given in our Authorised Version, runs thus: "Behold My servant, whom I uphold; Mine elect, in whom My soul delighteth; I have put My Spirit upon him; he shall bring forth judgment to the Gentiles. He shall not cry, nor lift up, nor cause his voice to be heard in the street. A bruised reed shall he not break, and the smoking flax shall he not quench; he shall bring forth judgment unto truth. He shall not fail nor be discouraged, till he have set judgment in the earth; and the isles shall wait for his law." The Vulgate gives this passage as follows: "Behold My servant, I will uphold him: My elect, My soul delighteth in him: I have given My Spirit upon him, he shall bring forth judgment to the Gentiles. He shall not cry, nor have respect to person, neither shall his voice be heard abroad. The bruised reed he shall not break, and the smoking flax he shall not quench; he shall bring forth judgment unto truth; he shall not be sad nor troublesome till he set judgment in the earth: and the isles shall wait for his law."

But I find that this passage is rendered thus by the LXX.: "Jacob is My servant; I will defend him. Israel is My chosen; My soul has accepted him; I have given My Spirit upon him: he shall bear forth judgment to the Gentiles. He shall not cry, nor lift up; nor shall his voice be heard without. A bruised reed shall he not crush, and smoking flax shall he not quench; but he shall bear forth judgment unto truth. He shall shine forth, and shall not be broken, until he set judgment upon the earth: and in his name shall the Gentiles hope."

Digitized by Google

If the Rev. Herbert Marriott, M.A., will kindly deal with this passage in the same way that he has dealt with Jer. xxxi. 10; Isa. xxiv. 15; and Jer. xxxi. 22, in No. 126 of the BANNER, for May 28 last, and will give your numerous readers the benefit of the literal translation, and his invaluable comments thereon, he will greatly oblige your constant reader and co-worker,

J. BOWERS JANION.

East London, South Africa, July 8, 1879.

NOTE BY THE EDITOR.—The Rev. H. Marriott has already, at pages 13 and 14 of his reply to the Rev. J. B. Clifford, "We Are a Shemitic Race," discussed Isa. xlii. 1, 2. The pamphlet had probably not reached the Cape when Mr. Janion wrote?

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—I clipped the enclosed letter from the Montreal Gazette this morning, and as it shews the warm feeling which has been silently but steadily growing upon the part of Manasseh towards his brother Ephraim for some time past, I thought perhaps your insertion of it in the BANNER would interest many of your readers, as it did

Yours faithfully,

"A BENT OAR."

The Exchange Bank of Canada,
Montreal, May 15, 1879.

"A HIGH TRIBUTE TO QUEEN VICTORIA BY THE GREAT GENERAL SHERMAN.

"IN answer to an invitation to attend the forthcoming review in this city, by Colonel Austen and others, the hero of the celebrated march through Georgia to the sea, has forwarded the following letter:—

"'Col. David E. Austen and Others of the Committee, Brooklyn, New York:—

"'GENTLEMEN,—I thank you for the courtesy of the invitation contained in your letter of May 8, to unite with you in the proposed international visit to the Dominion of Canada on Thursday, May 22nd inst., to participate in the festivities in commemoration of her Majesty Queen Victoria. I envy you the privilege of assisting in doing honour to a Sovereign who has presided over the destinies of Great Britain for more than forty eventful years, and whose life as child, wife, mother, Queen, and Empress stands resplendent as an example to the rulers on earth, by whatever title they may be known, and whose private life is a type which may safely be followed by the most humble, as well as the most exalted, among civilised and enlightened people. However beloved she may be by her own subjects, I believe in no land on earth is she held in more kindly respect than in this our Republic of America. I am sure that the Thirteenth Regiment, N.G.S.N.Y., will bear themselves as worthy descendants of our honoured ancestors and present friends; and I deeply regret that public business prevents my being one of their comrades on such an occasion. With great respect, your friend and servant,

"'A. T. SHERMAN, General.

"'Headquarters, Army of the United States,
Washington, D.C., May 9, 1879.'"

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—An old friend in South Wales with whom I have corresponded for some time on our Identity, after asking some questions about the Pyramid, puts forward the following, which furnishes an Identity, as well as other interesting matter.

Yours faithfully,

JOHN S. ANDERSON.

On the main Israelitish question we had an illustration in a sermon a short time ago as to the proofs of Christ's Messiahship, which, fitting that, seemed, too, most suituble to the case of Anglo-Israelism. It was like this:—Suppose a man takes a long board and cuts it down from end to end, with every conceivable difference of curve, angle, and line in the one long cut which divides it, carefully keeping one half hidden in his own house, and lets the other go abroad into the world. It falls into the hands of another man, who, struck with its peculiarities, keeps it. After many years, he comes by accident across the first half, and is struck with its similarity to that which he has. He compares them, and finds them tally, curve for curve, line for line, angle for angle, and the grain of the wood the same. He says at once, This is the half required to make my board complete, and I am certain the one belongs to the other.

Of course our minister's two halves were the types and prophecies under the old dispensation, and the life and work of Christ under the new; but it struck me at once there was a picture of Anglo-Israelism too, and I made up my mind to send it to you.

In the account of Saul's coronation as the first king over Israel, the cry he was greeted with was, "God save the king!"—just simply identical with our own cry and our National Anthem.

The Afghan "Gates" are secured to us it seems; and, if they were willing to see, it appears as if the opponents of the Government must acknowledge that the thing has been done, even by the human agency, wisely and well.

PHILIP OVENDEN.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

MY DEAR PHILO-ISRAEL,—Ever since I have become a believer in our Identity with Ten-Tribed Israel I have watched the course of public events with redoubled interest, finding in those now in progress the strongest evidence of its truth. It cannot be much longer, I believe, discredited, even by the most inveterate of its opponents. Wonderful, however, is the blindness and indifference generally prevailing with regard to the fulfilment of prophecy; yet how visible are the "signs of the times" to all but those who wilfully close their eyes to them. What proofs of abounding iniquity in every newspaper, which teems with histories of crime—wife and infant murder amongst the number?

"Running to and fro" also—even the poorest workman rushes hither and thither in excursion trains in search of pleasure and excitement; increasing knowledge another mark. Alas! it is not of a godly sort; but such as too frequently leads to infidelity. Even in our Board schools the knowledge which leads to salvation is the only learning which need not be imparted. There are, moreover, wars and rumours of wars, distress of nations, &c., &c. Yet Ephraim is still blind to all these warnings that the end is at hand, and hopes for peace ere the Prince of Peace appears. I believe that our Government has sought to, in vain, make peace with Afghanistan, without first adding it to our company of nations. Equally impossible will it prove for us to allow Zululand to possess an independent Sovereign of its own. We must annex both these countries, despite the outcries of the blind-to-Identity opponents, and the threats of the Northern Bear, whose very rage is preparatory to the predicted final, most terrible contest between Gog, the king of the North, and God's own people, the battle of Armageddon, and the glorious advent of our blessed Lord, when the Jews will look on Him whom they pierced, and be converted from that unbelief which has been their burden and curse for more than 1800 years. Then will the stick of Israel, which is in the hand of Ephraim, be joined to the stick of Judah, never again to be dissevered.

Well may we exclaim, God does indeed work in a mysterious way. "How unsearchable are His judgments, and His ways past finding out!"

I have written in haste and with many interruptions; but if anything I have said appears worthy of appearing in the BANNER, I shall be glad that I have sent it to you.

I am always,
My dear Philo-Israel,
Yours most warmly,

JOHN HUYSHE.
(Rector of Clysthydon, Exeter).

Clysthydon Rectory, Sept. 17, 1879.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—The village church here, a structure built probably in the 14th century, has three mural tablets facing the entrance: the central one, our Lord's prayer; to the right, the Creed; and to the left, part of the first verse of the fifth chapter of Deuteronomy, "Hear, O Israel, the statutes and judgments which I speak in your ears this day, that ye may learn them, and keep them, and do them," which latter has thus for many generations borne silent testimony to the truth of our Identity.

Faithfully yours,

Poyntington, Sherborne, Dorset. CANTAB.

ERRATUM.—At page 398, second column, No. 144, 26th line, for "pseudomyn" read pseudonym.

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements
(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O.O payable at Ludgate-circus.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed :—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

LECTURES, MEETINGS, ETC.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

PRESIDENT: VISCOUNT FOLKESTONE, M.P.

THE REV. J. BILLINGTON, F.S.A., F.R.H.S., will LECTURE on

"LOST ISRAEL IDENTIFIED WITH THE BRITISH NATION,"

as follows:

Wednesday, October 8th, in the TOWN HALL, ARUNDEL, SUSSEX (by kind permission of the Mayor). Chair to be taken at 7.30, by His Worship THE MAYOR.

ADMISSION FREE.

Collections will be made at the close of each Lecture for the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association, under whose auspices they are given.

Office—20, Warwick Lane, London, E.C.

ANGLO-ISRAELISM.

REV. JAMES BILLINGTON, F.S.A., F.R.H.S., of London,

Will lecture on the above subject in

THE CITY HALL, PERTH,

As follows:—

On Tuesday, October 14th.—Subject: The Lost Ten Tribes of Israel, Who Are They, and Where Are They?

In the unavoidable absence of the Right Hon' LORD KINNAIRD SHERIFF BARCLAY will preside.

On Thursday, October 16th—Subject: "The Anglo-Israel Theory and Its Most Recent Criticisms."

In the unavoidable absence of THE LORD PROVOST, COLONEL WILLIAMSON, of Lawers, will occupy the chair.

Doors open at 7.30; Chair to be taken at 8. A collection will be taken at the door.

The Rev. JAMES BILLINGTON will also lecture in BRECHIN on October 15th, MONTROSE on October 17th. Particulars to be announced.

NEW PAMPHLETS.

Price 4d., post free 5d.

JAPHETIC OR SEMITIC: WHICH ARE WE?

BY CAROLINE PEARSE.

Showing the different character of the promises and blessings, and chastisements foretold as destined for the two Houses of Israel and Judah, and consequently the different careers it was foretold they would accomplish.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet Court, Fleet Street; and may be had, by ordering, of any bookseller.

Now ready, price 2d., post free 2½d., in neat coloured cover.

AMMI;

OR,

THE CHOSEN PEOPLE,

BY MISS BIRD.

Tracing the descent of the British people from Abraham, the "friend of God," and showing that true science, history, philology, and ethnology, are on the side of the Identity of the Anglo-Saxon race with the Ten Lost Tribes.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

In neat coloured cover, price 2d., post free 2½d.

BLESSINGS AND CURSES, AND THEIR RELATION TO ISRAEL AND JUDAH. By F. W. PHILLIPS, of Speedwell-road, Birmingham.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; and may be had, by ordering, of any Bookseller.

Now ready, price 2d.

A REPLY TO MR. ROBERTS ON THE EXETER HALL DEBATE, on the Subject, Are Englishmen Israelites? By ALEXANDER DUNN.

BOOKS.

NEW WORK BY DR. WILD.

NOW READY, price 3s., post free 3s. 4d. Handsome cloth, gilt, printed on toned paper and illustrated.

THE LOST TEN TRIBES,

AND

1882.

BY THE

REV. DR. JOSEPH WILD,

Of Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Printed and published by

ROBERT BANKS, RACQUET COURT, FLEET ST., LONDON, E.C.

And may be had, by ordering, of any Bookseller.

EXTRACT FROM PREFACE:—

The main idea I wish to convey in this book, is that God is conducting His Providence through His ancient chosen people, Israel, whom I believe are found in the Saxon race. And His throne on earth, through which flow the purposes of Providence, is David's throne, which I believe to be at present the English throne. Queen Victoria (and God bless her) I believe to be of David's seed. The United States fulfils the rôle of the Tribe of Manasseh. Therefore, to understand the prophecies, Providence, and the present movements of nations, as well as the future lot and destiny of each, we must read the Scriptures in this light. God has made the children of Israel and throne of David His executive, in time, on earth. They are His executive for civilisation, evangelisation, order, and conquest. Through them God will conquer the world to an universal peace. As Moses was to God, so is Israel. Moses being a Divine executor, was to the people a god—so is Israel to all mankind. Spiritual Israel will come through literal Israel.

For Contents see BANNER for October 1st.

WORKS BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Price 2d., post free 2½d.

THE HISTORICAL, ETHNIC, AND PHILOLOGICAL ARGUMENTS in PROOF of BRITISH IDENTITY with the TEN LOST TRIBES OF ISRAEL, clearly and simply stated.

BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

CONTENTS:—Introduction—The Celts—Professor Rawlinson's Testimony—The Cymry—The Cimmerii—The Gimiri and Khumri—The Testimony of the Nimroud Obelisk—The Scythians—The Anglo-Saxons—Sharon Turner's Testimony—The Jutes and Angles—The Danes and the Normans—General Conclusions—Philology—The Welsh Language—The Rev. Canon Lysons' Testimony—Idiomatic Identity Between Hebrew and English—Tyndal's Testimony—The Tribe of Dan—The Irish Celts—Are the Continental Nations Israelites?—Conclusions—Appendix.

Price 4d., post free 5d.

AN ELEMENTARY DIGEST or SKETCH OF THE CHIEF FACTS and TEACHINGS of the GREAT PYRAMID of EGYPT: adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific. By PHILO-ISRAEL; together with Original Papers by the following leading Pyramidists, republished mostly from the BANNER OF ISRAEL (by kind permission of the proprietor)—viz., Professor Piazzi Smyth, the Rev. W. Hickson, M.A., Charles Horner, Esq., and Major H. A. Tracey, R.A. Being a pamphlet by five authors (a Pyramid number).

Third edition, ninth thousand. Price 6d., post free 7d. limp cloth 1s.

HISTORY OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL: HOW THEY WERE LOST AND HOW THEY WERE FOUND. Told for the Children by PHILO-ISRAEL.

SOME of PHILO-ISRAEL'S papers, as they have appeared in THE BANNER, will be separately published from time to time in the form of Letters, for distribution.

No. 1. "The Identity of the British with Lost Israel."
No. 2. "The Glory of God."
No. 3. "An Address to British Soldiers."
No. 4. "An Address to British Sailors."

Others will follow. Price One and Sixpence per 100; less quantities in proportion; postage extra.

OUR IDENTITY WITH THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. By PHILO-ISRAEL. Price 4d. Third Thousand (reprinted from the Clifton Chronicle).

ARE THE ENGLISH PEOPLE THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL? Price 4d.

LO AMMI—NOT MY PEOPLE. A Handbill for shop-windows and for private circulation has been prepared, showing the connection between Hosea i. 10, as Prophecy, and the titles of various pamphlets of our opponents, recently issued from the press, as Fulfilments. Price 2s. per 100, or 3d. per dozen.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane; and Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

BOOKS.

ROBERT BANKS'S CATALOGUE OF WORKS ON THE IDENTITY OF THE BRITISH PEOPLE WITH THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL will be sent to any address, post free, on application. Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London.

Price 6d., post free 7d. New work on the Identity. Dedicated to all faithful ministers of Christ.

ISRAEL! AN EARNEST APPEAL FROM THE PEW TO THE PULPIT IN FAVOUR OF OUR IDENTITY WITH GOD'S ELECT PEOPLE, ISRAEL; Being a Letter from JOHN G. SHAW to his Pastor, Rev. Eustace R. Conder, of Leeds, with an Introduction and Notes; to be followed by a Review of Mr Conder's Papers on the Lost Tribes.

By the same Author.

"BRITAIN (OR ISRAEL)," with Map. Price 8d., post free 9d.

"CHRONOLOGICAL CHART." Price 3d., post free 3½d.

"GOD'S LOVE FOR ISRAEL." Price 1d., 3 copies sent post free for 3½d.

London: ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

New and Revised Edition, Price 6d. Cloth, gilt, 1s.

THE NEW OLD STORY, with an Introduction to a Marvellous Puzzle. The Story gives a sketch of the History of the Hebrews, shewing distinctly the difference between the Two Nations, Judah and Israel, the latter being the British. The Story also tells of the Great Pyramid, and explains how its wonderful meaning can be, as it is only understood by measurement. An Appendix explains "The Eastern Question." The Story is written with great simplicity, and interests young children. By A. E. I., Author of "The Answer to the Eastern Question."

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C. W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

NOW READY, price 9d., post free, 10d.

ARE WE ISRAELITES? THE TESTIMONY OF HISTORY, PHILOLOGY, AND ETHNOLOGY on the Subject. By the Rev. BOURCHIER WREY SAVILE, M.A., Rector of Shillingford, Exeter. With an Introduction by Philo-Israel.

CONTENTS:—Chapter I. Hard Speeches.—II. Opponents' Arguments.—III. Common Errors.—IV. The Sacæ.—V. The Cymry.—VI. Historical Testimony.—VII. Philology.—VIII. Chief of the Nations.—IX. Multiplicity of Seed.—X. The Anglo-Saxon Race.—XI. Anglo-Israel.—XII. Summary.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row; Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; or of any Bookseller.

Now ready.

NEW AND ENLARGED EDITION OF COMING COLLISION BETWEEN ENGLAND AND RUSSIA. By an M.A. of Cambridge. Price 1s. The Appendix can be had for affixing to 1st Edition upon receipt of 1d. stamp.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick Lane, E.C.

Price 2d. Post free 2½d.

MANASSEH AND THE UNITED STATES. An important Essay delivered before the "Lost Israel Identification Society," by the Rev. JOSEPH WILD, D.D., at Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, New York.

CONTENTS:—The Fulness of the Gentiles set in—For whom did God intend America—The Origin of the United States—The Footsteps of Ephraim and Manasseh—The Will of Jacob made to Ephraim and Manasseh—Manasseh a People, and a Great People—Manasseh's Birthtime of Separation—Out of nearly Sixty Conquered Colonies the only one England ever Lost was that of Manasseh (America)—The Great Seal of the United States—Manasseh was brought up at the Door of the Pyramid, &c., &c.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.; and of any Bookseller.

Price One penny, post free 1½d. One dozen copies, post free 1s. 100 copies 6s., post free 7s.

THE IDENTITY OF THE BRITISH NATION WITH THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. THE CLUE TO THE EASTERN QUESTION. By C. W. E.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

Now ready, price 7d., post free 8½d.

THE OCTOBER MONTHLY PART OF THE BANNER OF ISRAEL. May be had, by ordering, of any bookseller or newsagent.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row; and Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

BRISTOL LEAFLETS ON THE IDENTIFICATION. 1 to 9; 1s. per 100.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

THE MIDNIGHT CRY; or, WORDS OF SOLEMN WARNING.

Second edition, price 1d.; post free, 1½d.; for distribution, 6s. per 100. W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS 5 Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, OCT. 8, 1879. [All Rights Reserved.]

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. III. No. 146. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 15, 1879. [ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

PAGE
Cetywayo's Capture, and the Settlement of Zululand 413
Missionary Operations in Zululand, and "John Dunn" 414
The Promised Land.—Part I. By the Rev. A. J. J. Cachemaille, Vicar of Oldham .. 415
The Land and the People.—Part I. By East Anglian 416
Another Spiritualising Dilemma.—By L. P. 417
Above Only, and Not Beneath—the Head and Not the Tail—in Regard to the Navigation of the Suez Canal 418
The Great Pyramid Ventilators. By N. M. B. 418
Reviews 418
Correspondence 419

CETYWAYO'S CAPTURE, AND THE SETTLEMENT OF ZULULAND.

WHILE we feel sorry for the individual, we cannot but rejoice that another enemy of mankind, and a bitter foe of Israel, has succumbed to our power. Cetywayo, the monster of cruelty and organiser of "the man-slaying machine," has been conquered, forced to fly, been hunted like a wild beast in his own dominions, and compelled, at last, to submit to the hated white man, who will forthwith banish him beyond sea, and protect his late country, and South Africa in general, from the curse which his rule has hitherto brought upon it. The surrender of this scourge of South Africa to Major Richard Marter, of the 1st King's Dragoon Guards, was dramatic in its incidents, and doubtless the story has been perused with breathless interest by most of the readers of the BANNER. Ere these lines are published we shall hear where Cetywayo will be interned, and henceforth we may be certain that public life will know the late Zulu king no more. The monarch being deposed, what is the result upon affairs in South Africa? Let the Times describe one aspect of them, and that almost in the very words of Scripture! Speaking of Cetywayo's capture, the editor said:—

The event marks the end not of a reign, but of a system. The Zulu kingdom has not only been subdued, but it has been broken to pieces. The army which its late king could summon to the field has been destroyed as an organised force, and for all practical purposes has ceased to exist.

"The Zulu kingdom has not only been subdued, but it has been broken to pieces!" We have seen and read something like this before in God's Word in reference to Israel! Why are "the heathen" given by God Almighty, at His Son's request, to Israel, "His inheritance?" Psa. ii. 9 tells us:—"Thou shalt break them with a rod of iron, thou shalt dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel." Here is verbal Identity! God's Word predicts, and the Times declares, the fulfilment in ipsissima verba! "The army which its late king could summon to the field has been destroyed," nay, "ceased to exist." Surely Micah v. 8 gives us the source whence these words were taken! There the remnant of Jacob is described "as a lion," and "as a young lion among a flock of" Gentile "sheep," who, if he go through, both "treadeth down and teareth in pieces, and there is NONE to deliver." Here, again, the illustration is perfect—the type and antitype exactly agree. These facts prove to us, and surely to all men who exercise their reason, that "Jacob's remnant" "among the Gentiles," "in the midst of many people," is now represented by the BRITISH LION both in heraldry and in actual fact; that this nation is thus identified with the Lost Ten Tribes, for whose discovery mankind is waiting; and that therefore the late events in Zululand speak to us in no uncertain tones, telling us the joyful news that Lost "Ephraim-Israel" is found.

What is, then, the settlement of Zululand to be, now their king is dethroned, a captive in Israel's hands, and its territory at the disposal of the conquerors? It will virtually, though not in name, be annexed to the empire. We have always said it would be so, and so it has turned out! The Times describes the proposed arrangement on Sept. 19, 1879, as follows:—

We give to-day a sketch of the new organization of the Zulu country as it will be, under English influence, though not under English rule. The reins of power will be in the hands of the native chiefs. They will not be free, however, to use them after their own pleasure. In the administration of their law they will be bound to act as their English advisers may, upon occasion, direct. The old savage punishments will be forbidden from this time forward. War will be undertaken only when the English residents, by whom England will be represented, have given their sanction to it, and the required permission, we may be sure, will not easily be obtained. Zululand, in short, will start on a peaceful career, and will thus be forced to exchange a military for an industrial life. We must be content to wait for the results, but we shall wait with confidence. Not only is the old danger over, but we may reasonably hope that we have put an end to it for ever in the most effectual way by turning an enemy into a friend.

Such is the scheme, and men say this is not annexation! Is it not? The country will be "under English influence." "The native chiefs will not be free to act after their own pleasure, but will be bound to act as their English advisers may direct!" English residents will tell the chiefs when they may go to war," and "that permission, we may be sure, will not easily be obtainable." If this is the scheme now to be adopted in the the beginning, when the PEPUL TREE is just rooting, we, who have watched the process in other lands, know what the end will be. Witness British India, Canada, Natal, Australia, New Zealand, and Israel's Empire, which is the supplanter's empire, everywhere!

Digitized by Google

We are, however, almost content with matters as they are. We know that Cetywayo being removed, the army of the Zulus gone, the country prostrate, divided into thirteen separate kingdoms (an Israelite number), and all governed by two supervising British subjects—this is ANNEXATION in embryo, and the thin red line may as well pass round Zululand at once. So, indeed, the Cape Colonists and their Parliament view matters. We may be sure, then, as they will soon confederate and deal with Zululand themselves, that short work will be made by them of any remnants of independence now left to the Zulus by Sir Garnet Wolseley. The present arrangement is only a step—rather a clumsy one—in the right direction. It must be greatly modified, and will lead at last—who can doubt it?—to "annexation," pure and simple. Many of the present arrangements—that forbidding European settlers, and the prohibition of the entry of the Gospel, if the natives so desire—are insults to our God! We may be sure He will speedily brush them aside and cause us to carry out, at last, HIS WILL, and not ours! That will is GOD'S GLORY.

MISSIONARY OPERATIONS IN ZULULAND, AND "JOHN DUNN."

THE modified but incomplete annexation of Zululand by Sir Garnet Wolseley is beginning to be seen in its true colors. As a step towards actual annexation, we were content to accept it. But when we saw the rules and regulations issued, and when we read the speech of Sir Garnet to the assembled chiefs at Ulundi in September last, as it affects the question of mission operations in our lately conquered territories, we foresaw what has since happened—namely, that under our sanction, and with our deliberate assent, the Gospel, which alone can bless, and on account of which alone God has given us that land, is already virtually, and as it turns out actually, excluded from a part of the Zulu territory. That country is thus the one exception to all the other dominions where God has made British power paramount. Elsewhere the missionary, the Bible, and the Gospel are protected, tolerated, and even welcomed. But in Zululand, under British sanction, supported by British bayonets and guns, in open insult to the God of Israel, who has in so marked a way delivered the nation and its despotic tyrant into our hands, we have framed rules and regulations by which one of the native chiefs we have set up (represented, too, in this case by a man who bears an English name), has dared to expel God's Word from the land, to exclude His ministers and His missionaries from teaching the benighted heathen races, and has treated His Holy Word as the one base and evil thing, too hateful even to enter the petty territory of this ignorant, upstart nominee of British power—John Dunn. Surely the report must be untrue? Surely Sir Garnet Wolseley must see that insults such as this to the great God of heaven, after mercies so transcendent as Ulundi, and the capture of the king, after chastisements so tremendous as Insandlwana and Kambula Mountain, can never be tolerated for a moment by the nation whose servant he is? much less remain unvisited by Him who calls Himself a jealous God? The correspondent of the Times telegraphing from Durban on Sept. 16, 1879, seems to cry "shame" on this transaction, for he writes that the act is against the wishes of John Dunn's more enlightened heathen subjects. The "Veteran missionary of Tebro" (says the report published in the Times of Sept. 6, 1879) "has been informed by John Dunn that he does not intend to allow any missionaries to settle in the territory where HE is chief. This is the most important district in Zululand, and the nearest to Natal. The Zulus were gladly welcoming the return of their old friends when they were stopped."

Even the Times seems shocked at this news, for its leader of the same date, we now proceed to quote, shows that the act was one which affronts the Christian sense of this country, and is felt to be so outrageous, so monstrous, that surely it never can be sanctioned when once its enormity is realised by the Christian Israelites of this happy land, who owe all they are and have to what John Dunn has dared to exclude from his newly-acquired domain! Speaking of this affair, the editor said:

A singular, and not altogether welcome, piece of intelligence reaches us from Zululand itself. The well-known John Dunn, one of the thirteen chiefs selected by Sir Garnet Wolseley for the government of the country, is said to have intimated that he does not intend to allow any missionaries to settle in the territory where he is chief. The example thus set by a man peculiarly friendly to Europeans is not unlikely to be followed by the other chiefs. It is quite within their rights, according to the engagement entered into with Sir Garnet Wolseley, to permit or to refuse the entrance of missionaries into their districts. But it is difficult not to regret that the question should at once have been decided against the missionaries by the one of the chiefs whose example is peculiarly likely to influence his colleagues. There have been mission stations in Zululand for many years; no doubt the action of missionaries may be occasionally injudicious. But, after all, it will probably be admitted that a European and a Christian, even if he is a missionary, is likely to be a better specimen of civilisation than the average Zulu; and, as missionaries are the only Europeans who will hereafter be permitted to settle in Zululand, it is to be regretted that one of the chiefs at least should show a disposition to exclude them. The Zulus, it is said, were gladly welcoming their old friends when their return was stopped by order of John Dunn. It will hardly be reckoned among the satisfactory results of the war, now happily at an end, that the mission stations scattered throughout Zululand should be abandoned, and that many peaceful examples of a civilised and a self-denying, not to speak of a Christian, life, should hereafter be withdrawn from the country.

We are glad to find a secular journalist speaking out so plainly! It is a token to us that the missionary societies and the public voice and conscience of England will, before a week is past, raise such a storm of righteous indignation against John Dunn, and the authors of the regulations by which it is vainly hoped Zululand will be pacificated, that the obnoxious clause at last will be repealed, and missionaries not only tolerated, but encouraged to settle in Zululand, and be protected by the British Government when there. For the message they bring is indeed the only hope for these natives, the only power that can reclaim them from savagery and from that cruel course of life which has made them, under Cetywayo, the bane and terror of South Africa. No wonder the Cape colonists, seeing these and other evil results of an ungodly scheme which will not work for a single year, call out for "annexation, pure and simple," as the only real remedy applicable to the case. No wonder they refuse CONFEDERATION till it be done! As it is, we believe God has given us Zululand to bring the inhabitants to Christ. If we not only refuse to take it, but when we have rejected His gift, openly insult Him to His face by sanctioning such outrages on His Gospel, on His Word, and on His messengers as we see this man John Dunn has perpetrated on all three, then we see no remedy but further loving chastisements like Insandlwana impending nationally over us, to be repeated until we do obey God's voice. We are God's people Israel. We know His will regarding the heathen and what treatment He metes out to them by the hand of His people (Psa. ii. 8—12). But if we refuse to carry out His wise will, what is like to be our fate? Let us beware how we incur His displeasure. Had Israel, when ordered to take possession of Jericho, what time its walls "fell flat down," refused to advance, held back from obeying God's command, and from executing His vengeance, would the Tribes of Israel have failed to feel the weight of God's chastising, albeit loving, arm? When the spies brought up the evil report of the Land of Promise and Israel refused to go up, and thought rather to stone Joshua and Caleb, to set aside Moses, and with another captain at their head to return to Egypt, did that rebellion against the Most High prosper? Alas! it ended in the death of a whole generation of the people! and God's majesty and authority were vindicated by the awful sufferings of His stubborn children! Let us not imitate their evil examples; but let us hasten as God's Israel to repudiate the hateful law at once, by which this petty, ungodly, ignorant chief, John Dunn, has been able to compromise this nation with the living God. If we cannot at once accept the Government of Zululand, and place the territory under a mild despotism, such as that of British India, let us at least give our conquered subjects the glad message of salvation which has done so much for us; let the missionaries have free access to the whole people; let us saturate the land with the Bible as the real Word of life; and let it not be said that Israel received the gift of Zululand from God, and at once passed upon their loving Saviour the deep affront of refusing Him access to the souls of those He died to save, and whom He confided to US, that we might bring them all to HIM.

Digitized by Google

THE PROMISED LAND.

BY THE REV. A. J. J. CACHEMAILLE,
Vicar of Oldham.

PART I.

THE intense interest which has in every age centred round that portion of this earth which is known sometimes as Canaan, or Palestine, or the Holy Land, or the Promised Land, is quite sufficient excuse for the attempt to assign an adequate cause for an interest which to many may seem little more than sentimental. For the main features of what is here put forward I am indebted to the mention made of it in "Our Inheritance in the Great Pyramid," 3rd edit., p. 580; and also to Professor Piazzi Smyth's kindness in sending me a copy of the publication by the Rev. W. Henderson (R.C.), to which he refers. I have also made use of a pamphlet written by my father, entitled, "Which is the Place Where Satan Fell?"

Let us first ascertain as far as possible what the geographical limits of that land were. These are given most clearly in the promises made to Abraham, to whom, and to whose seed, this land was given as an everlasting possession.

The first description occurs in Gen. xiii. 14—18. Abram was at that spot between Bethel and Hai which is mentioned in chap. xii. 8, and xiii. 3, 4. God bids him lift up his eyes, "and look from the place where thou art Northward and Southward, and Eastward and Westward, for all the land which thou seest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed for ever." The next description goes somewhat further, and places before us two, at least, of the boundary lines. We read (Gen. xv. 18): "Unto thy seed have I given this land, from the river of Egypt unto the great river, the river Euphrates"—that is, from the river Nile (for this river of Egypt is not the stream of Egypt, which ran nearer the confines of Palestine) to the river Euphrates; and probably a further description of the country is given in the mention of those various tribes or peoples which follow, but the precise positions of which we have little to enable us to determine.

In the 23rd chap. of Exodus we have a still further description of the same country (ver. 31): "I will set thy bounds from the Red Sea even unto the sea of the Philistines" (Mediterranean), "and from the desert"—i.e., the wilderness of Paran and Shur—"to the river"—i.e., LXX. Euphrates). Similar descriptions are given in Deuteronomy and in Joshua.

Such, then, is the geographical description given of the land which God promised to Abraham. This land was given "for ever"—words which are very observable, and which assure us that the promise in its deepest sense still awaits fulfilment. This land is also called, in a rather more restricted sense than the boundaries given allow, the HOLY LAND, the Land of Promise—peculiarly the land which contained the central interests, not only of mankind in all generations (for the words are "for ever"), but also of the far deeper mysteries which appertain to the work of redemption wrought by our Lord.

But, if this land is promised as a peculiar inheritance of the seed of Abraham, if this land is called the Holy Land, if this land is the spot in all the world which attracts the most earnest interest of all mankind, we may reasonably ask, "Are there any circumstances connected with that country which give it a peculiar character and a special interest?"

The answer need not be uncertain, the only uncertainty being where we may place limits to the deep interest attaching to it. For this question raises another through which our answer must in great measure come, and it is one of no secondary importance. The key-question is simply this: "Why should Jerusalem have been chosen as the scene of our Saviour's death?" We must remember that it was by no chance circumstances or chain of ordinary events that this occurred. On the contrary, Jerusalem was especially chosen for this purpose in preference to any and every other part of the world.

When God called Abram and decreed that he should be the head of that race from which the Saviour should spring, Abram did not live in Palestine; on the contrary, he was ordered to leave the country in which he was born and did live—that is, in Chaldea, which lay outside the limits we have described of the Holy Land—and to go to the Land of Canaan, which was most mysteriously promised to him and his descendants, though not a single foot of ground was given him in actual possession, he himself being a stranger in it, and there being no obvious reason why this land should at any time be his. Again we find, somewhat later, a circumstance happening which almost seemed to frustrate the promise of God. Israel went down into Egypt, and for a while seemed to prosper there (as they had never done in the Land of Canaan), till they were enslaved and brought down to the most bitter bondage, even to the danger of extermination. Yet, in the same mysterious manner, they were liberated from Egypt and led back into this same mysterious Land of Promise, this Holy Land, this spot which lay within the geographical limits we have described. Surely there must have been a reason for these special and remarkable events in God's mysterious providence. Taking out such special reason, may we not say that the world's redemption could certainly have been wrought as well in Chaldea, or in Egypt, as in Canaan? Yet we find God bringing back the people of Israel through miraculous means, and in spite of manifold difficulties, to this one particular spot. Why so? As far as we are able to understand the description of it, the position of the Garden of Eden, of which we read in Gen. ii., accords accurately enough with the description of the most sacred spot in the Holy Land; and the cradle of our first parents, both before and after the fall, lies, as nearly as we can describe it, within the same geographical limits as those of the Land of Promise. May we not, then, venture to say, with more than probable accuracy, that the Land of Promise was the scene of the birth and of the fall of man; that in this very land was the paradise or garden which God Himself laid out and planted with His own hands; in which He put Adam; and in which Adam also fell by transgression; and that this therefore gives a substantial reason for the special descriptions of this land, and for the events with which it, and especially Jerusalem, is connected both in the Old and in the New Testament? Such a probability would supply us with new and particular reasons for all that centralising of worship at Jerusalem. We can see why here only should the altar of God stand, and why all males in all Israel should present themselves before the Lord at Jerusalem thrice in each year. In the light which this probability sheds upon it, we may read much of the history, both national and religious, of Israel with a much clearer intelligence; and the New Testament comes with the brightness of noonday light to confirm the truth of what we venture thus to suppose.

Digitized by Google

But, before going further into details of deep interest, we may ask a still more remarkable question, which takes us a step further back, even anterior to the history of man, but a question and answer as closely connected as possible with the subject under consideration.

(To be continued.)

THE LAND AND THE PEOPLE.

By East Anglian.

PART I.

Out yonder, far over the blue waters of the Mediterranean, lies the inheritance of Israel; the land of David's might and Solomon's splendour; the "land which the Lord thy God careth for; the eyes of the Lord thy God are always upon it;" the land "flowing with milk and honey;" the "pleasant land;" the land of a thousand stirring memories, and the scene of that one act which "beggars all description." We all remember something of that.

"Three crosses in the noonday night uplifted;
Three human figures that in mortal pain
Gleam white against the supernatural darkness;
Two thieves that writhe in torture, and between them
The suffering Messiah, the Son of Joseph;
Ay, the Messiah triumphant, Son of David!
A crown of thorns on that dishonoured head!
Those hands that healed the sick, now pierced with nails;
Those feet that wandered homeless through the world,
Now crossed and bleeding, and at rest for ever."

"His blood be upon us and our children," was the cry of the Jews, and, behold, the curses have come upon them "to the uttermost." The desolations of Judah and Jerusalem have been added to the desolations of Samaria, and from thence there seems to come to us, over the ancient seas, a great cry, as of a mother mourning for her lost children. Is there any hope? Listen: "But ye, O mountains of Israel, ye shall shoot forth your branches and your fruits to My people of Israel; for they are at hand to come." "And I will bring again the captivity of My people of Israel, and they shall build the waste cities, and inhabit them. . . . . and I will plant them upon their land, and they shall be no more pulled up out of their land which I have given them, saith the Lord thy God."

Many Christians are afraid to touch upon the question of "unfulfilled prophecy." Hazlitt said of the allegories of Spenser, that "they would not bite;" and we say to all who are afraid, that the prophecies of the Bible will not bite us if we only accept the plain, simple statements of the Scripture as truth. We know how hard a thing it is to hold the faith in these days of scientific speculation and God-denying philosophy; but this question of Anglo-Israelism has shown that vast numbers of people (lunatics or otherwise) are still "so foolish" as to believe in the utter truth of the Bible. Think of it; and in this age of Darwins, Huxleys, and Bradlaughs, too! But crush us not, O ye professors. Pass on, ye mighty intellects, and leave us to our "Moses and the prophets," to the "Prince of the House of David" and His friends.

There are many reasons why this question of Israel and Israel's land should be of interest to us. Let us take one. It is quite certain that until the Scriptures just quoted shall have been fulfilled, the Eastern Question will have no final settlement; and until the Eastern Question shall have been finally settled, the time will not come when "the sword, and the bow, and the battle" shall be broken out of the earth—the time about which our poets have sung, "The Good Time Coming"—when

"The war drums throb no longer, and the battle flags are furled
In the parliament of man, the federation of the world."

If this were the only reason, it would be more than enough to command our earnest attention to, and interest in, this question.

It is quite clear from many Scriptures that the chosen race is, at the present time, in two sections. This our opponents will not allow; but until they acknowledge the fact, their exposition of the prophets will be at fault. The Word of God through Micah says: "And I will make her that halted (Judah) a remnant, and her that was cast far off (Israel) a strong nation" (Micah iv. 7). We know that Mr. Roberts, whose theory carries him a long way with us, would refer us to the context; but we have studied the context, and found nought therein to alter our belief that this prophecy is in process of fulfilment in these very days.

Moreover, in Isaiah xxvi., the prophet settles the question for us. There we have the prophetic forecast of a song that has yet to be sung in the land of Judah. It is evident that the singers of this plaintive song—presumably Jews—refer to two peoples—i.e., Judah and Israel. Thus they begin: "We have a strong city; salvation will God appoint for walls and bulwarks. Open ye the gates, that the righteous nation which keepeth the truth may enter in." This "righteous nation" undoubtedly refers to the multitudinous "Lo-Ammi" people of Hosea i. 10, who at some future time are to be called "sons of the living God." Isaiah also, in another chapter, refers to the same people (liv. 17): "No weapon that is formed against thee (Israel) shall prosper; and every tongue that shall rise up in judgment against thee, thou shalt condemn. This is the heritage of the servants of the Lord, and their righteousness is of Me, saith the Lord." Also chap. xli. 8, 10: "But thou, Israel, art My servant. . . . . Fear thou not; for I am with thee: be not dismayed; for I am thy God: I will strengthen thee; yea, I will help thee; yea, I will uphold thee with the right hand of My righteousness." Will not the singing of this song by the Jews be the manifestation to the world of that time when "Ephraim shall not envy Judah, and Judah shall not vex Ephraim?"

Continuing the song, we find at verse 12: "Lord, Thou wilt ordain peace for us." Such words of hope as these might well ascend from the hearts of the restored Jews, who, after wandering and sojourning in "strange lands," find themselves at last "in their own land." Again at verse 13: "O Lord our God, other lords beside Thee have had dominion over us"—a melancholy admission of their former down-trodden state. But (in verse 15) we find the singers referring again to "the nation" of verse 2: "Thou hast increased the nation, O Lord, Thou hast increased the nation: Thou art glorified: Thou hadst removed it far unto all the ends of the earth. Lord, in trouble have they visited Thee, they poured out a prayer when Thy chastening was upon them." This must be the "strong nation" of Micah, the people cast far off—i.e., Israel of the Ten Tribes.

In connection with the last-quoted portion of the song, we must remember the prophecy of Zechariah x. 7—9: "And they of Ephraim shall be like a mighty man, and their heart shall rejoice as through wine: yea, their children shall see it, and be glad; their heart shall rejoice in the Lord. I will hiss for them, and gather them; for I have redeemed them: and they shall increase as they have increased. And I will sow them among the people: and they shall remember Me in far countries; and they shall live with their children, and turn again." We must note the admission which the singers make in connection with this nation. It is: "Thou (God) art glorified." The following passage points to Israel as being this nation: "This people have I formed for Myself; they shall show forth My praise." Note in connection with this the passage in our Church Service: "And our mouth shall show forth Thy praise."

Digitized by Google

At verse 18 we hear from the singers another sound of lamentation: "We have not wrought any deliverance in the earth," sing they, as though in contradiction to their acknowledgment of the works wrought by the "nation" (Israel), whereby "Thou (God) art glorified." To Israel it was said (Isa. lviii. 6—14): "Is not this the fast that I have chosen? to loose the bands of wickedness, to undo the heavy burdens, and to let the oppressed go free, and that ye break every yoke? Is it not to deal thy bread to the hungry, and that thou bring the poor that are cast out to thy house? when thou seest the naked, that thou cover him; and that thou hide not thyself from thine own flesh? Then shall thy light break forth as the morning, and thine health shall spring forth speedily: and thy righteousness shall go before thee; and the glory of the Lord shall be thy rereward. . . . . And they that shall be of thee shall build the old waste places: thou shalt raise up the foundations of many generations; and thou shalt be called, The repairer of the breach, The restorer of paths to dwell in. If thou turn away thy foot from the Sabbath, from doing thy pleasure on My holy day; and call the Sabbath a delight, the holy of the Lord, honourable; and shalt honour Him, not doing thine own ways, nor finding thine own pleasure, nor speaking thine own words: then shalt thou delight thyself in the Lord; and I will cause thee to ride upon the high places of the earth, and feed thee with the heritage of Jacob thy father: for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it."

(To be continued).

ANOTHER SPIRITUALISING DILEMMA.

We are aware that Biblical spiritualisers, who explain away literal meanings by forcing them, by a play of their imaginations, out of their plain, simple, evident meanings, into that which is merely allegorical, though there is no reason in the context for supposing that a trope or figure was intended, accuse us of a like treatment of passages of Scripture, though in an opposite sense, and of interpreting literally what is intended only for an allegory. We have no desire to assert that our writers are never mistaken, but we confess, we occasionally, nay frequently, wonder how certain texts can be interpreted in a spiritual sense, when they obviously point to some temporal and secular advantage that is evidently considered worthy of the attention and appreciation even of those, who, as Christians, look for joys everlasting. We would instance the two last verses of Ezek. xlvii., and would ask if any unprejudiced person can deny that they point to privileges not to be shared by all the nations of the earth, even when in process of becoming, or after they have become, the kingdoms of Christ? If they refer to spiritual blessings, then why must Gentiles dwell in the inheritance allotted to Israel's Tribes in order to enjoy them, since spiritual blessings can surely be showered down on any individual or nation in the wide world?

That the command contained in these verses (22, 23) refer to a period of man's history in time, seems clear from the allusion to the birth of children, and increase of families, and to these births and the consequences enjoined, we point as a further corroboration of our opinion, for we cannot assert that parents can entail spiritual blessings for a surety on their children by themselves becoming Christians, nor can others do so for them, or faith becomes void, and is a mere matter of inheritance. The prophecy cannot apply to the past, as it was written after Israel's dispersion, and as regards the present, that is out of the question, according to our opponents, who take pains to show us that such privileges as are referred to cannot apply to Israel and to strangers residing amongst them, since, according to them, they are one with the landless Jews, or in some obscure position; therefore, in either case without spiritual, social, or temporal advantages.

By the references in the margin of the Bible, it is clear the compiler of these references understood the verses in a spiritual sense, whether those referred to bear the old interpretation put on them, and that only, or not. But this fact proves nothing in our estimation, except that as at present, so of old, men and women were distinctly blinded for the purposes of God concerning His chosen and hidden people.

Verse 23 appears to us quite conclusive against spiritual interpretations of this vision, for according to the Tribe the stranger elects to abide with, of that Tribe he shall be reckoned. Now, what possible meaning can be attached to spiritual Tribes or to a tribal spiritualism? If in a spiritual sense the distinctions of male and female, &c. (Gal. iii. 28), are to disappear, can our opponents contend that converted Christian Gentiles are to be ranked spiritually as Simeon, or Gad, or Manasseh? But, if so, under what head are to be ranked those who, Gentiles by birth, are called by our opposers, spiritual Israel, but yet have no directions given them to show how they may become spiritually attached to any particular Tribe?

In a note to the paragraph Bible to ver. 6, Ezek. xlvii., it is said, "The vision" (later on it is called "a beautiful and consistent allegory") "is completed by an ideal distribution of the Land of Promise among the people;" and further on it is added, "The very size, form and nature of the country are such as to render the literal fulfilment of this portion of the vision physically impossible, without such convulsions as would destroy the identity of the land." Indeed! and when those who are to be blessed everlastingly, but may on this earth have worn unsightly forms and woe-worn bodies, wake up to find themselves bearing the likeness of the Lord Jesus, they are thereby to lose their identity? I trow not. And if convulsions are necessary to reform the Holy Land, to make it adapted to Israel's future, what then? Cannot the Lord of all the earth heave up the vasty depth at His sovereign will, lay mountains low, lift up the bed of the ocean, and swallow up surface and cities in the bowels of the earth? What reasoning is this, that says an assertion of God's is not to be taken literally because it would involve physical changes which are beyond the power of man! nay, perhaps, not even that if the Lord and Master wills to give His servants the knowledge, and skill, and science which will enable them to work out that Master's ends. But if a convulsion of nature is required, who shall say nature shall not be convulsed? What seem but its ordinary workings, so that they are not ranked as marvels, have wrought, and are carrying out changes, which, for their rapidity and greatness of result, may well excite our surprise; yet they scarcely attract any notice, so quietly are they brought about. We ourselves, some years ago, stayed at a seaside village which is now cut off from the sea simply from the action of the waves, which incessantly in play, as in passion, have tossed up a long, low, broad bank of shingle, and the wide, deep, rapid river which poured its waters into the sea, close to the marine villas, now winds for a mile under the cliff, whose base, in our younger days was washed by the now gentle, now roaring waves. Their restlessness has raised up a barrier to themselves in less, we believe, than twenty years.

We have visited a spot on our English coast, where you now look down on a woody vale, which, some forty years ago, sunk in the course of a few days from the upland, leaving high, rough, craggy sides, as it tore itself away, and sought a lower level, wrenched from its former position by an invisible hand.

Shall we doubt, that if it be in accordance with His intentions, God cannot and will not level hills, upheave plains, and make bitter waters sweet, at the blast of the breath of His nostrils?

L. P.

September, 1879.

Digitized by Google

ABOVE ONLY, AND NOT BENEATH—THE HEAD AND NOT THE TAIL—IN REGARD TO THE NAVIGATION OF THE SUEZ CANAL.

WE take the following from an authentic source, and it tells its own tale very fairly :—

According to the report of Consul Perceval, of Port Said, the total number of vessels which passed through the Suez Canal in 1878 was 1,550, of which 1,227 were British, 89 French, 71 Dutch, 44 Italian, 38 Austrian, 22 German, 21 Spanish, 8 Egyptian, 8 Japanese, 6 Danish, 5 Swedish and Norwegian, 4 Portuguese, 3 Turkish, 2 Belgian, 1 American, and 1 Zanzibar. The total tonnage was 2,178,316 tons, of which 1,726,946 tons were British.

It comes to this, then. Last year over 78 per cent. of all the vessels passing through the Canal were British, and nearly 80 per cent. of the tonnage was also British. The nearest approach to the British (but at what a distance?) was made by the French, whose vessels were to the British as 89 to 1,227. The Americans figure as one ship only against our 1,227, and verily we may judge of the enormous trade, even in so dull a year as 1878, belonging to Great Britain, and how distinctly she is a great Eastern, as well as a great Western nation, when we see she owns four-fifths of the shipping navigating the Canal, or four times the number of vessels belonging to all the maritime nations of Europe, Asia, and Africa put together, including also that of the great Manassite Power across the Atlantic. We may say, in truth, Israel is "Mistress of the seas"—above only, and not beneath," as "The ruler of the waves"—unapproachable in ocean navigation; and all this, solely and wholly, because, BEING ISRAEL, she has the promise, first, of the Gates; second, of the heathen, third, of the colonial, empires of the earth; fourth, of immense wealth; and fifth, of the general blessing which makes her God's favoured nation, in virtue of the Lord's promise to "our forefather Abraham, and his seed for ever;" and of the redemption of our Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ, who died to make the fulfilment of these covenants possible.

THE GREAT PYRAMID VENTILATORS.

BY N. M. B.

I ENCLOSE you some thoughts which have arisen in my mind about Anglo-Israel and Judah, our brethren, and ask you, Has any competent person calculated if there be any proportions corresponding in the dimensions of the grand gallery and the narrow passage leading to the queen's chamber? It seems to me Judah has been walking in that narrow passage at the one level all the centuries from the year A.D. 0, while we (including all true believers in Christ) have been walking up the grand gallery, each year attaining a higher level in all things. I observe a line drawn straight down from the entrance of the narrow passage leading to the king's chamber cuts straight to the centre of the queen's chamber, the future ventilation of which seems to begin a little before that line on the North side, while both chambers have a future ventilation provided in the South sides of each chamber. Can that line thus touching each indicate the time when Judah and Israel shall begin to walk together again?

Also, the level on which the queen's chamber stands is slightly lower than that of the beginning of the grand gallery at the time of the birth of Christ.

The present condition of Judah is slightly lower than that of their House at the time of the birth of Christ; they have not advanced upwards since that time, either in worldly condition or in understanding of the Scriptures.

In the grand gallery the House of Israel has gone upwards, in worldly condition, ever since the birth of Christ; and also in understanding and practice of the Scriptures, and now are on the high level whence, if there were light in the Great Pyramid, they could see right into the king's chamber, having already begun their (missionary) Millennial work in A.D. 1813.

The ventilator situated close after the entrance of the narrow passage to the king's chamber, I suggest to you may represent the first pouring down of the Holy Spirit upon Israel, very soon after their entrance therein, to be followed by another pouring down when in the king's chamber. Does not this ventilator show Israel will be enlightened by the Holy Spirit when passing through that narrow pass? and the time of this effusion is capable of being read by ascertaining where the mouth of the ventilator opens.

The ventilators being provided, but not yet open, in the queen's chamber, the first seems to open a little before the straight line going through the entrance of the upper narrow passage, and the centre of the queen's chamber. Does this line indicate that at that date the two Houses of Israel shall walk together again, both under the influence of the blessed Holy Spirit?

Can it also be that the narrowness of the passge may represent, "Enter into thy chambers, and shut thy doors about thee?" (Isa. xxvi. 20).

If, then, we are not taken up to the chamber of refuge above, let us enter the narrow passage without fear; the Holy Spirit will be with us, and the passage is a passage ordained by our God and the God of our fathers, especially for Israel. In the narrow passage of the Red Sea there was room enough for all Israel, but not for others, so there is room for us now there, and also safety.

Sark, Sept. 8, 1879.

Reviews.

A NEW IDENTITY NEWSPAPER.

WE understand Liverpool is again going to be the birthplace of an Identity journal. We do not forget that the BANNER OF ISRAEL was born and nurtured in that city before it was transplanted to London. But now we hear that there is to be another paper published there by one who has written in the BANNER, and who wishes to provide for his particular locality, and its growing Identity association, an organ of its own. We welcome this proposal, and see nothing but good to our cause as the likely result. We are sure that in Mr. Catterall's hands the new monthly or weekly will prove a great success, and lead to the extension of our glorious cause.

We are requested to notice that the editor of the proposed journal was at one period greatly opposed to our views, and undertook, at one of the meetings of the Young Men's Christian Association at Liverpool, to refute them. He gladly agreed to fulfil that task, and spent the interval between two meetings in deep study of the subject. "His preparation," says our informant, "sent him to his Bible, and the Bible overcame him. When he came to the meeting where he was to attack and refute our belief, he honestly told his audience that his views were altered, and that there were, he found, BIBLE FACTS to bear out the Identity. He added, that he for one could not, and dared not, set these aside." Under the guidance of so candid and so honest an editor, we think the new journal has a fair claim to local patronage, and we hope it will fully answer the purposes for which we understand it is to be projected.

Apropos to the above, we add below a copy of a Liverpool leaflet, just published by Mr. Catterall, as the first of a series by "Ephratah." This paper shows that our Liverpool friends are up and doing, and that their publications, at any rate, are sound, clear, and, as regards the Identity, "to the point:"—

SCATTERED FRAGMENTS PICKED UP AS EVIDENCE.

"Gather up the fragments," &c.—John vi. 12.

1.—God's Special Protection and Care over His People.

"Happy art thou, O Israel; who is like unto thee, O people saved by the Lord, the shield of thy help, and who is the sword of thy excellency! And thine enemies shall be found liars (or shall be subdued) unto thee; and thou shalt tread upon their high places."—Deut. xxxiii. 29.

Digitized by Google

"Ask now of history's authentic page,
And call up evidence from every age;
Display with busy and laborious hand
The blessings of the most indebted land;
What nation will you find, whose annals prove
So rich an interest in Almighty love?
Where dwell they now, where dwelt in ancient day,
A people planted, watered, blest as they?
* * * * * *
Has He not hid thee, and thy favoured land,
For ages safe between His sheltering hand,
Given thee His blessing on the clearest proof,
Bid nations leagued against thee stand aloof,
And charged hostility and hate to roar
Where else they would, but not upon thy shore?
His power secured thee when presumptuous Spain
Baptized her fleet Invincible in vain."

Cowper's Expostulation.

"English history from the first day till now is as full of instruction as the history of Israel from Egypt even to Babylon. Did you ever read Cowper's wonderful description of the care which God has taken of this little island, how He has favoured and protected it? When all the nations were in arms against it, they could not touch its shore, for God was there. . . . . Our nation has been as much under the peculiar and especial providence of God as were the descendants of Jacob themselves, and therefore God deals with us as he does not deal with other nations."—Rev. C. H. Spurgeon's "Present Crisis."

2.—Stability of the Throne.

"Thy seed will I establish for ever, and build up thy throne to all generations."—Psa. lxxxix. 4.

"Once have I sworn by My holiness that I will not lie unto David. His seed shall endure for ever, and his throne as the sun before Me. It shall be established for ever as the moon, and as a faithful witness in heaven."—Psalm lxxxix. 35—37.

"This throne (England under Elizabeth) is not like other thrones, which can be overturned by a combination of powerful nobles; the broad foundations which support it are in the extended love and affections of the people. Neither yours (E. of Leicester) nor any other Power, foreign or domestic, will avail to overthrow, or even to shake it."—Sir W. Scott's "Kenilworth."

3.—Extended Empire and Fruitful Progeny.

"For thy waste and thy desolate places, and the land of thy destruction, shall even now be too narrow by reason of the inhabitants, and they that swallowed thee up shall be far away. The children which thou shalt have, after thou hast lost the other, shall say again in thine ears, The place is too strait for me, give place to me that I may dwell," &c.—Isaiah xlix. 19, 20.

A further quotation from the Daily Telegraph, of May 12th, 1879, we omit, as it appeared at page 222, No. 127 of the BANNER OF ISRAEL.

Japhetic or Semitic: Which Are We? By Caroline Pearse. Price fourpence. Robt. Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

WE hardly know why this pamphlet has been published. There is nothing new in it which has not been told before, and its price (fourpence) does not recommend it in quarters where Mr. Hine's or Philo-Israel's pamphlets could, on their merits, command a sale. The question stated is an ethnic one, but we fail to see that the authoress answers it. What there is to the point in the latter part of the work (pages 34 to 37) seems discredited by her own doubts as to the age of Homer. "The theory under consideration," the ethnic Identity, she says, "therefore rests upon a shifting basis as to uncertain dates, and does not" (she thinks) "warrant an absolute decision for or against" it. Why, then, are we favoured with the work? The rest of the pamphlet is mostly borrowed, it seems to us, from the writings of Mr. Hine, "the respected writer on Anglo-Israelism, really the apostle of this new idea," as our authoress describes him, quite forgetful of John Wilson! But even Mr. E. Hine comes in for blame in "calling every little point of the slightest resemblance between the prophecies and the British nation an Identification." Yet "Caroline Pearse" enumerates at least twenty-four (borrowed) Identifications herself; but from the total absence of authorities quoted, her readers must not conclude that she herself has discovered the leading points by which we are identified. Among these points are "The Gates," both the foreign and the home; "The heathen empire," as given us by Psalm ii. 8 (page 24), and some others which we think we have seen noted in "The Inquiry," "The Child's History," "The Résumé," and "Our Identity," but not in the "Forty-seven Identifications." We hardly think this is quite fair. If the previous writers on the subject have erred, let Caroline Pearse set them right. If they have done their work badly and clumsily, let Caroline Pearse, by all means, do it better. But do not let her re-issue their work; put it out in her own words; and ignoring the obloquy they have had to pass through in maintaining such views as those founded on Psa. ii. 8; Gen. xxii. 17; and Isa. lx. 11, &c., calmly appear before the public as an original writer on these Identities, and then forward her work to the BANNER for "favourable" notice! This we are quite willing to give to all "fellow"-workers. But if that notice is claimed, as some do, because the BANNER has "Tory proclivities," which naturally make it the objectionable thing to worshippers of the opponents of the present Government; also because Philo-Israel is the editor of that too partial journal, and because these new pamphlets are free from such stains, and can go where BANNER and its editor cannot, and must not, penetrate, then we do decline to consider such writers as "fellow"-workers. They are "opponents" in disguise, and must proceed on their own lines, and stand or fall by what they write. The latter is a matter which intelligent readers will soon discover is, after all, only a reproduction (good or bad) of those who have gone before.

Waiving these objections, we have nothing to say against C. Pearse's work. Her pamphlet is a useful, well-written one, though not original; but we promise her, that if she strike out some really new lights upon our subject, we shall immediately take notice of these in the BANNER, quote them in full, and record in capitals that the discoveries are those of CAROLINE PEARSE.

N.B.—The quotation from Anthony Trollope, on page 27, is very good, and we hope to reproduce it in the BANNER, giving C. P. the credit due to her.

Correspondence.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

SIR,—The many believers in "Anglo-Israelism" in this town were gratified yesterday by the visit of two gentlemen connected with the Metropolitan Association—viz., Mr. D. A. Onslow and the Rev. James Billington. In the afternoon the former gentleman lectured on the "Historical Evidences of Britain's Identity with Lost Israel," proving beyond all reasonable doubt that the Saxons, Danes, and Normans were all one race and were Israelites. The subject shewed that a vast amount of labour must have been spent on its production, and I am glad to say many went away knowing more about their forefathers than when they came. In the evening the Rev. J. Billington treated the public with another lecture defending "Anglo-Israelism." The recent charges brought against it were dealt with with great care, and above all the lecturer shewed that Christian spirit so much lacking in most of our opponents. Both lectures were listened to with the greatest attention, the audience manifesting their appreciation by their frequent and hearty applause. In consideration of our friends' great kindness, coupled with the fact that they receive nothing whatever for their trouble, but travel about solely from love of the Lord Jesus Christ, would you allow me through your valuable paper, not only for myself but for many other Plymouthians, to thank them and to express a hope that we may have the pleasure of again hearing both gentlemen at some future time? In conclusion, would you permit me to say that if Mr. Onslow could be persuaded to publish his lecture, it would form a valuable addition to Identity literature, while for the sake of many Israelites who may not have the opportunity of hearing Mr. Billington, his defence of Anglo Israelism if published in the BANNER would be a great boon. Apologising for trespassing on your space,

I am, Sir,
Yours in the hope of Israel,
Plymouth, Sept. 13, 1879. C. S. R.

NOTICE.—We are glad to announce that an Association has been, or soon will be, formed at Exeter, under the presidency of W. H. Peters, Esq., J.P., as the result of the late meetings there. We hope Topsham, Exmouth, and Budleigh Salterton will not be behind hand.—ED.

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements
(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O O payable at Ludgate-circus.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed :—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

LECTURES, MEETINGS, ETC.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

PRESIDENT: VISCOUNT FOLKESTONE, M.P.

ASSEMBLY HALL, MONTROSE.
On Friday Evening, October 17, 1879, A LECTURE will be delivered by

THE REV. J. BILLINGTON, F.S.A., F.R.H.S., of London. Subject: "Lost Israel: Who Are They? Where Are They Now? Chair to be taken at 8, by

DEAN OF GUILD SCOTT.

ADMISSION FREE.

A Collection will be taken at the door on behalf of the above Association, under whose auspices this Lecture is given. Office—20, Warwick Lane, London, E.C.

ANGLO-ISRAELISM.

REV. JAMES BILLINGTON, F.S.A., F.R.H.S., of London,
Will lecture on the above subject in
THE CITY HALL, PERTH,
As follows:

On Tuesday, October 14th.—Subject: The Lost Ten Tribes of Israel, Who are They, and Where Are They?
In the unavoidable absence of the Right Hon. LORD KINNAIRD, SHERIFF BARCLAY will preside.
On Thursday, October 16th—Subject: "The Anglo-Israel Theory and Its Most Recent Criticisms."
In the unavoidable absence of THE LORD PROVOST, COLONEL WILLIAMSON, of Lawers, will occupy the chair.
Doors open at 7.30; Chair to be taken at 8. A collection will be taken at the door.

HOME OFFERED A CHRISTIAN LADY who can pay 10s towards board, not objecting to give two hours in juvenile teaching daily. M. S., 35, Ditchling Rise, Brighton.

NEW PAMPHLETS.

Price 4d., post free 5d.

JAPHETIC OR SEMITIC: WHICH ARE WE?
BY CAROLINE PEARSE.

Showing the different character of the promises and blessings and chastisements foretold as destined for the two Houses of Israel and Judah, and consequently the different careers it was foretold they would accomplish.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet Court, Fleet Street; and may be had, by ordering, of any bookseller.

Now ready, price 2d., post free 2½d., in neat coloured cover.

AMMI;
OR,
THE CHOSEN PEOPLE,
BY MISS BIRD.

Tracing the descent of the British people from Abraham, the "friend of God," and showing that true science, history, philology, and ethnology, are on the side of the Identity of the Anglo-Saxon race with the Ten Lost Tribes.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

In neat coloured cover, price 2d., post free 2½d.

BLESSINGS AND CURSES, AND THEIR RELATION TO ISRAEL AND JUDAH. By F. W. PHILLIPS, of Speedwell-road, Birmingham.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; and may be had, by ordering, of any Bookseller.

Now ready, price 2d.

A REPLY TO MR. ROBERTS ON THE EXETER HALL DEBATE, on the Subject, Are Englishmen Israelites? By ALEXANDER DUNN.

BOOKS.

NEW WORK BY DR. WILD.

NOW READY, price 3s., post free 3s. 4d. Handsome cloth, gilt, printed on toned paper and illustrated.

THE LOST TEN TRIBES,
AND
1882.
BY THE
REV. DR. JOSEPH WILD,
Of Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Printed and published by
ROBERT BANKS, RACQUET COURT, FLEET ST., LONDON, E.C.
And may be had, by ordering, of any Bookseller.

EXTRACT FROM PREFACE:—

The main idea I wish to convey in this book, is that God is conducting His Providence through His ancient chosen people, Israel, whom I believe are found in the Saxon race. And His throne on earth, through which flow the purposes of Providence, is David's throne, which I believe to be at present the English throne. Queen Victoria (and God bless her) I believe to be of David's seed. The United States fulfils the rôle of the Tribe of Manasseh. Therefore, to understand the prophecies, Providence, and the present movements of nations, as well as the future lot and destiny of each, we must read the Scriptures in this light. God has made the children of Israel and throne of David His executive, in time, on earth. They are His executive for civilisation, evangelisation, order, and conquest. Through them God will conquer the world to an universal peace. As Moses was to God, so is Israel. Moses being a Divine executor, was to the people a god—so is Israel to all mankind. Spiritual Israel will come through literal Israel.

For Contents see BANNER for October 1st.

WORKS BY PHILO-ISRAEL.
Price 2d., post free 2½d.

THE HISTORICAL, ETHNIC, AND PHILOLOGICAL ARGUMENTS in PROOF of BRITISH IDENTITY with the TEN LOST TRIBES OF ISRAEL, clearly and simply stated.
BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

CONTENTS:—Introduction—The Celts—Professor Rawlinson's Testimony—The Cymry—The Cimmerii—The Gimiri and Khumri—The Testimony of the Nimroud Obelisk—The Scythians—The Anglo-Saxons—Sharon Turner's Testimony—The Jutes and Angles—The Danes and the Normans—General Conclusions—Philology—The Welsh Language—The Rev. Canon Lysons' Testimony—Idiomatic Identity Between Hebrew and English—Tyndal's Testimony—The Tribe of Dan—The Irish Celts—Are the Continental Nations Israelites?—Conclusions—Appendix.

Price 4d., post free 5d.

AN ELEMENTARY DIGEST or SKETCH OF THE CHIEF FACTS and TEACHINGS of the GREAT PYRAMID of EGYPT; adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific. By PHILO-ISRAEL; together with Original Papers by the following leading Pyramidists, republished mostly from the BANNER OF ISRAEL (by kind permission of the proprietor)—viz., Professor Piazzi Smyth, the Rev. . . W. Hickson, M.A., Charles Horner, Esq., and Major H. A. Tracey, R.A. Being a pamphlet by five authors (a Pyramid number).

Third edition, ninth thousand. Price 6d., post free 7d. limp cloth 1s.

HISTORY OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL: HOW THEY WERE LOST AND HOW THEY WERE FOUND. Told for the Children by PHILO-ISRAEL.

SOME of PHILO-ISRAEL'S papers, as they have appeared in THE BANNER, will be separately published from time to time in the form of Letters, for distribution.

No. 1. "The Identity of the British with Lost Israel."
No. 2. "The Glory of God."
No. 3. "An Address to British Soldiers."
No. 4. "An Address to British Sailors."

Others will follow. Price One and Sixpence per 100; less quantities in proportion; postage extra.

OUR IDENTITY WITH THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. By PHILO-ISRAEL. Price 4d. Third Thousand (reprinted from the Clifton Chronicle).

ARE THE ENGLISH PEOPLE THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL? Price 4d.

LO AMMI—NOT MY PEOPLE. A Handbill for shop-windows and for private circulation has been prepared, showing the connection between Hosea i. 10, as Prophecy, and the titles of various pamphlets of our opponents, recently issued from the press, as Fulfilments. Price 2s. per 100, or 3d. per dozen.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane; and Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

BOOKS.

THE ANGLO-ISRAEL POSTBAG contains Chapters on The Philological Difficulty—The Promises of God to the Hebrew Nation—To Joseph—To Ephraim—To the Kingdom of Israel, as distinct from Judah—The Anglo-Israel Theory and the Geographical March of Christianity—The Gates, &c., &c., &c.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

Price 6d., post free 7d. New work on the Identity. Dedicated to all faithful ministers of Christ.

ISRAEL! AN EARNEST APPEAL FROM THE PEW TO THE PULPIT IN FAVOUR OF OUR IDENTITY WITH GOD'S ELECT PEOPLE, ISRAEL; Being a Letter from JOHN G. SHAW to his Pastor, Rev. Eustace R. Conder, of Leeds, with an Introduction and Notes; to be followed by a Review of Mr Conder's Papers on the Lost Tribes.

By the same Author.

"BRITAIN (OR ISRAEL)," with Map. Price 8d., post free 9d.
"CHRONOLOGICAL CHART." Price 3d., post free 3½d.
"GOD'S LOVE FOR ISRAEL." Price 1d., 3 copies sent post free for 3½d.

London: ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

PHOTOGRAPHIC PORTRAITS OF PHILO-ISRAEL, Editor of THE BANNER OF ISRAEL, Author of "The History of the House of Israel," &c.,&c. Cabinet, 2s., post free; Carte-de-Visites, 1s., post free.

New and Revised Edition, Price 6d. Cloth, gilt, 1s.

THE NEW OLD STORY, with an Introduction to a Marvellous Puzzle. The Story gives a sketch of the History of the Hebrews, shewing distinctly the difference between the Two Nations, Judah and Israel, the latter being the British. The Story also tells of the Great Pyramid, and explains how its wonderful meaning can be, as it is only understood by measurement. An Appendix explains "The Eastern Question." The Story is written with great simplicity, and interests young children. By A E I, Author of "The Answer to the Eastern Question."

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C. W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

NOW READY, price 9d., post free, 10d.

ARE WE ISRAELITES? THE TESTIMONY OF HISTORY, PHILOLOGY, AND ETHNOLOGY on the Subject. By the Rev. BOURCHIER WREY SAVILE, M.A., Rector of Shillingford, Exeter. With an Introduction by Philo-Israel.

CONTENTS:—Chapter I. Hard Speeches.—II. Opponents' Arguments.—III. Common Errors.—IV. The Sacae.—V. The Cymry.—VI. Historical Testimony.—VII. Philology.—VIII. Chief of the Nations.—IX. Multiplicity of Seed.—X. The Anglo-Saxon Race.—XI. Anglo-Israel.—XII. Summary.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row; Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; or of any Bookseller.

Now ready.
NEW AND ENLARGED EDITION OF
COMING COLLISION BETWEEN ENGLAND AND RUSSIA. By an M.A. of Cambridge. Price 1s. The Appendix can be had for affixing to 1st Edition upon receipt of 1d. stamp.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick Lane, E.C.

Price 2d. Post free 2½d.

MANASSEH AND THE UNITED STATES. An important Essay delivered before the "Lost Israel Identification Society," by the Rev. JOSEPH WILD, D.D., at Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, New York.

CONTENTS:—The Fulness of the Gentiles set in—For whom did God intend America—The Origin of the United States—The Footsteps of Ephraim and Manasseh—The Will of Jacob made to Ephraim and Manasseh—Manasseh a People, and a Great People—Manasseh's Birthtime of Separation—Out of nearly Sixty Conquered Colonies the only one England ever Lost was that of Manasseh (America)—The Great Seal of the United States—Manasseh was brought up at the Door of the Pyramid, &c., &c.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.; and of any Bookseller.

Price One penny, post free 1½d. One dozen copies, post free 1s. 100 copies 6s., post free 7s.

THE IDENTITY OF THE BRITISH NATION WITH THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. THE CLUE TO THE EASTERN QUESTION. By O. W. E.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

Now ready, price 7d., post free 8½d.

THE OCTOBER MONTHLY PART OF THE BANNER OF ISRAEL. May be had, by ordering, of any bookseller or newsagent.

London: W. H Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row; and Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, OCT. 15, 1879. [All Rights Reserved.]

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. III. No. 147. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 22, 1879. [ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
General Sir F. Roberts' Victories Before Cabul	421
The Federation of "Israel's Company of Nations"	421
"A Good Deal Mixed"	422
The Land and the People.—Part II. By East Anglian	423
Work On. By C. R.	424
The Promised Land.—Part II. By the Rev. A. J. J. Cachemaille, Vicar of Oldham	425
Signs of the Times. By Alexander MacPhail	426
Israel's Identification Association, Plymouth	426
The Sabbath Day of Gentile Europe	427
Atmospheric Phenomena	427

GENERAL SIR F. ROBERTS' VICTORIES AT CABUL.

WE thank God for great military successes at and near Cabul on Oct. 6 and 9, 1879. The war of vengeance is over. Israel "has gone through," "trodden down," "torn in pieces," and, as we said in our leader in BANNER No. 145, there has been "none to deliver." Why? Because THE LORD fought on our side, and gave us the victory as He hath often promised. Israel, praise YE the Lord! To us only are such successes promised. See then in these great crowning glories the full proof of our Identity. In a month God has given our 5,000 gallant soldiers such success that we have, with that handful, captured Cabul, dispersed the enemy, taken a fortress, seized 110 guns in the field and 30 in the Bala Hissar, avenged the deaths of Sir Louis Cavagnari and his gallant escort, and entered the "dirty" city, Cabul, in open triumph. There has indeed been "none to deliver" from our hand, and that, because we are Israel, and the Lord would give us Afghanistan for our possession (Micah v. 8).

THE FEDERATION OF ISRAEL'S "COMPANY OF NATIONS."

THE promise to Jacob was that "a nation and a company of nations should be of him" (Gen. xxxv. 11). This we see and often point out is practically fulfilled at the present moment, when Great Britain, the "great mother" in "the little island of the North," is surrounded by such giant daughters as Canada, the five or six States of Australia, Tasmania, New Zealand, the mighty confederation just about to be formed at and near the Cape of Good Hope, and their infant sister growing up with good promise of future greatness in the Fiji Islands.

But the junction between these powerful British States, each with the other and all with the parent mother in the North, is of the slenderest kind. There is a large party among us who (like Mr. Gladstone perhaps) would be glad to part company with our offspring if mutual convenience demanded it, and would consider such separation a happy escape from future responsibilities and dangers. The tie between the all but independent Colonies and the mother country consists only of the Viceroy nominated by the Crown, and the power of veto on the legislative action of the Colonial Parliaments. There is no such federation of interests between the parent and the daughters (now come each to vigorous womanhood) as to make the state of things safe as to union for the future. Some more intimate ties than those now existing seem required to meet the exigency of the case if the permanence of the union between different parts of the Empire of Israel is to be firmly maintained, as prophecy tells us shall be the case. The question is what is required to render the Empire safe? to prevent its component parts flying away from each other by a centrifugal force which we can well imagine may some day, under unfavourable circumstances, overcome the centripetal? This question, curiously enough, has engaged the attention of the Cape Parliament and also of that of Griqualand West, and the scheme there proposed was "the Federation of the whole of the British Colonies" by the representation of its component parts in the Imperial Parliament.

The subject was brought before the Legislative Assembly of the Cape Colony by Mr. J. Orpen, though without success, for the House, we suppose, considered the moment inopportune for such a discussion, and the position of the Cape, itself in the throes of a confederation, not yet approved or accomplished, not quite suited for the leadership of such a mighty movement. It is enough for our purpose to point our readers to the fact that such an idea was mooted abroad, and is engaging serious attention in many colonial minds, since it seems to us that some way must be devised, and that speedily, to give solidity and form to a federation which at present is merely nominal. "The nation and company of nations" must present to the world the visible form and tokens of a union which is firmly cemented, is strong as adamant, irresistible in power, and more than a match for the whole world in arms. Whether Mr. J. Orpen's scheme be a wise or a practical one, we do not stop now to inquire. The thing itself is what we want, and we feel sure it is some day to be realised by the race.

"The Colonial policy of England," as Mr. Orpen said, "had hitherto been a ship without a rudder, and the Empire was at the mercy of party feeling and popular opinion, which was too often sadly erroneous or mistaken." We require a political union between the now separated parts of the great Israelite dominions which nothing but federation will give us, and to this, when formed, we believe the United States as Manasseh will gravitate, before the eleven Tribes can return to take possession of their God-allotted portions of their inheritance in the Land of Promise.

Digitized by Google

Our Griqualand friend, in sending us details of this movement and of Mr. J. Orpen's action in the matter, says that "his reason for so doing is not only that he expects we shall agree with what Mr. Orpen said in Parliament, but to let us see the extraordinary coincidence that he who has never read or seen Piazzi Smyth's 'Our Inheritance in the Great Pyramid,' or any of 'Philo-Israel's' or Mr. E. Hine's pamphlets, should have taken as his illustration of the British Empire A PYRAMID!"

We annex a portion of Mr. Joseph Orpen's speech in the Cape Parliament in support of his motion, delivered in July, 1879, advocating the federation of the British Colonial Empire by Parliamentary representation. He said:—

A Parliament is simply the family gathering, the home of the affections, developed till it first became the tribal Council, and then the nation's Parliament, and now, although our Home Parliament is the Parliament of the Empire, the tender name we give it is still the right one. It is our home, and its root, its main purpose, its reason for existence, and its relationships are still exactly and unalterably those of the original family home from which it sprung. It is the home of the nurture of its people's affections, and of everything which is calculated to make them kind, good, noble, and loving, knit together stable and strong as one family, and it is, still as ever, bound by those same ties to every humble home beneath its sway, and to every higher and higher association of this people, including this Colonial Parliament. The creative and vital principle of this home life is that which has given us strength to build up our material Empire upon which the sun never sets. and for which one complete and united home ought to be established. That Empire stands like a majestic pyramid, a stable monument of the principle of home on the world-wide foundation of fraternity and equal justice, and it would be a worse than ignoble dream to imagine that the people of two small islands should monopolise all representation in its Home Parliament—a proceeding which amounts to nothing less than an attempt to stand that pyramid upon its apex, and must inevitably end in a downfall causing world-wide ruin. Home is therefore our subject, and we must build up our case for home representation in stable form like that pyramid of which I have spoken, and on the same solid foundation—justice—that formation having just four sides on which it must be so built up and defended from attack. and they are these :—

1. That we have a birthright in our Home Parliament.
2. That not only we, but the whole Empire, suffer from our exclusion.
3. That all must benefit by our admission.
4. That the admission of the Colonies can be effected easily and well at the present moment.

We are unable to reprint the whole of the remarkable speech of our blind witness, the member for Aliwal North, but we have been favoured with five printed copies of it, which we shall be glad to distribute gratis to as many applicants should they desire it. Whether or not the representation of each of the company of Israel's nations in the Imperial Parliament in London be the right way of carrying out the idea of federation of the whole Empire, we do not need now to consider. We only desire to advocate the proposal that federation as a real fact be carried into practical operation, in order to consolidate the various parts of this mighty Empire, which is destined to dominate the world. Until such federation be adopted, it will be vain to expect the joinder of the American Republic to the confraternity of the Anglo-Saxon (and Celtic) States. Without it the Gentile nations will never recognise the mighty force of a "nation and company of nations" destined to overpower all other races, dominions, nations, and peoples by mere force of numbers, of wealth, of power, of majority, and of strength, the whole in union, all bound together in the might which righteous laws, institutions, and a God-sanctioned religion must confer. For they then will be "the nation and company of nations" of that "seed which the Lord hath blessed," and which all that "see them shall acknowledge them" that they respond to the letter, to that Divine description (Isa. lxi. 9).

"A GOOD DEAL MIXED."

IN the Standard newspaper of Aug. 26, 1879, our readers will probably have seen an article headed, "A Little Mixed," in respect to which we have a few words to say. The burden of the article, which no one would suspect from the title, is directed for the most part against the Identity. As usual with half-informed writers, whose ideas on the subject are not a "little," but really a "good deal mixed," the blunders that our would-be mentor has fallen into, are ludicrous and absurd to a degree. What do our friends think of a writer who undertakes to laugh our cause out of court, beginning his paper by the announcement that the point at issue may be stated in a very few words, which he holds to be these : "Are we—the English people of the present day—JEWS?" A little further down in his article he describes the lost nation (whom we are glad to find he describes and fully admits to be LOST) as the "Lost Tribes of the Jews!" What are we to say to this? Are Englishmen, who are generally accurate about matters that concern themselves, and respecting which they undertake to instruct their fellow-countrymen, so utterly indifferent to their own reputations, also to the grave injustice they do to the men and subjects they discuss, that they can afford to publish views on them, founded on nothing like accurate knowledge, but based, on the contrary, on downright error, of which they ought to be ashamed? Yet here is a man who, sitting down to rebuke us for folly in believing our Identity with the Lost Tribes of Israel, so ignorant of his subject that he speaks of them "as the Lost Tribes of the JEWS," and gravely sets himself the task of rebuking the folly which calls on men to believe that "the English people of the present day are—JEWS!" We may safely put down the writer as a man who has read nothing and knows nothing of our Identity; one, therefore, who is hardly worth notice by the BANNER. We think, however, with reference to the popularity and influence of the Standard newspaper, which has admitted the article in question, that a protest from the BANNER'S editor is called for in the matter, which we now proceed to put on record. We are amused at the assurance of this new opponent when he ridicules our subject by describing it as a "theory which has always had a number of fervid, and, it may be added, feminine enthusiasts" to support it.

It was only quite recently (page 339, No. 138) we published the lament of a Derbyshire miner's wife who deplored that our glorious subject had failed to attract female advocacy in the pages of the BANNER and elsewhere. This mistaken idea we controverted by pointing out that not men only, but many women, some of high degree connected with our nobility, were hearty, able, generous helpers of the cause. But now our half-informed, nay, wholly ignorant, opponent ventures into print to assert, what is quite untrue, that our "theory," as he terms it, "has always had a number of fervid feminine enthusiasts." If he means that female enthusiasts are its only supporters, we confront our detractor with the names of Piazzi Smyth, Bishops Bond and Titcomb, Cockburn-Muir, the Rev. Messrs. Savile, Hickson, Wrenford, Rogers, Cachemaille, of Hine, Horner, Onslow, Billington, Bentinck, and the writer of these lines, and ask him whether these are of the class he so contemptuously describes? If he asserts that its supporters, generally, can only be described as "female enthusiasts," we demur to accept his disparaging criticism till he has shown by his writings that he has read our authors, is acquainted with the subjects of which they treat, and, in fact, knows anything whatever about them himself.

Digitized by Google

Our opponent's argument to show that our cause is unreasonable and weakly-founded is based on the following statements.

Our readers will observe with surprise that our whole contention, as he puts it, rests on "an accidental and even that a faint similarity of sounds" between the words "Sacæ, Isaac, and Saxon." Violence is also done, it is alleged, "to the prophetical books to disclose further evidence in favour of our imaginary Identity." We should only like to subject our opponent to a slight examination in the said prophetical books, and should enjoy to test his knowledge of, say the prophecy of Hosea! His words are these :—

> Other persons than the Prime Minister have been quick to recognise the signs of Hebraic origin where it was least visible to the ordinary eye. But it must not be supposed that there is anything in common between Lord Beaconsfield's historical theory of race and the survival of race characteristics and the theme, or as it may be called without impertinence, the craze which recently engaged the attention of two rival lecturers at Exeter Hall. The discussion was a set one, and it had been carefully organised between a Mr. Hine and a Mr. Roberts. The former of these gentlemen advocated a theory which has always had a number of fervid, and, it may be added, feminine enthusiasts—that the English of the present day are the true descendants of Abraham. The so-called arguments in favour of this assumption—for every stage and step in the reasoning involve a purely hypothetical element—may be briefly recapitulated. The Ten Tribes, it is urged, that are said to have formed the "divided" kingdom of Israel were carried away into captivity by the Assyrians. These are usually called the Lost Tribes. Now it is not likely, so we are told, that they should have remained in Assyria. Naturally they may have pressed still further onwards—in all probability into the midst of nations of Scythian origin. In fact, we are assured, there was subsequently a bond of close connection and friendship between the Scythians and the Israelites. Now, of the Scythians the Sacæ are, or were in later days, an integral part, and Ptolemy places them besides the Massagetæ. But the word Sacæ is clearly connected with two other words—one of them Isaac, and the other Saxon. Hence, we are justified, as the advocates of this sufficiently extravagant doctrine maintain, in concluding that Saxon is merely a form of Isaac-son. It is unnecessary to add that the prophetical books are ransacked in a rather violent manner to disclose further evidence in favour of the imaginary Identity, and that many exploded notions of the migrations of different branches of the great family of mankind at successive epochs are revived, with the purpose of confirming independently the most preposterous inference which was surely ever based on an accidental, and even that a faint, similarity of sounds.
>
> The Lost Tribes of the Jews have, ages since, become incorporated in the body of the nations among whom they settled.

Putting aside all other points on which we, of course, differ from our really ignorant opponent, we would ask him how he ventures to assert that the Lost Tribes became "incorporated in the body of the nations among whom they settled?" Does he venture to contradict and throw contempt on God's Word, which declares that from such "mingling" and "scattering" among the Gentiles as the Tribes were doomed to suffer, He would certainly "gather" them and "assemble them out" before giving them back to their own land? (Ezek. xi. 17, xxxix. 27, xxxviii. 8; Amos ix. 9). If our opponent refuses the appeal to Scripture, we tell him we rely on no other authority as Christian men. But even on his own ground of secular authority we know he cannot show (for master minds, such as Canon Rawlinson's, have attempted the hopeless task and failed) that the Ten Tribes were absorbed by the Gentile nations among whom they mingled. This new opponent declares that at every step and stage of our reasoning we are involved in a purely hypothetical statement. Is that indeed so? We wot not! Where are the hypotheses in our three great premisses on which the Identity hangs? Let our antagonist point them out in the following :—

1. God Almighty is not a man that He can lie, nor the son of man that He should repent (Num. xxiii. 19). His gifts and His callings are without repentance (Rom. xi. 29).

2. This God, whose ways are truth, made "to Abraham, our forefather, and to his seed for ever," certain covenants, which were unconditional, intransferrable, and were never to be in abeyance (Gen. xxii. 17, 18).

3. We British to-day possess all these covenants to the smallest jot and tittle. No other nation has in possession so much as one of them.

4. Therefore we are, and must be, the seed of Abraham, the flesh and blood sons of the great Hebrew forefather.

5. Hebrews, who are not Jews, however—since these last stand ready to confront the allegation—but Hebrews, who being not Jews, are Israelites.

6. Therefore the Ten Tribes.—Q. E. D.

Let our opponent try and find the weak links in the above chain. We hold it to be absolutely irrefragable, irrefutable, and unanswerable.

THE LAND AND THE PEOPLE.

By East Anglian.

(Concluded from page 417.)

PART II.

There can be no doubt that this "nation" of Isa. xxvi. is identical with "Ephraim, and the Tribes of Israel his fellows," and there ought to be no doubt of its Identity with the Britain of to-day.

The first point to be noticed more particularly in connection with the Identification of this nation, is, "Thou hast increased the nation, O Lord." We remember, with some amusement, and more sorrow, the spelling-lesson given by the Rev. J. W. Wilkinson to the Rev. B. W. Savile and others, at the Wimbledon Conference. F-e-w spells few, said the Rev. J. W. W. (p. 12 of the Report), and "until 'innumerable host' and 'few in number' are convertible terms, I hope you will see that Anglo-Saxons, if an innumerable host, are not the few in number that Israel is to be while in the lands of their dispersion;" Jer. xxx. 19 being quoted in support of this.

Now this is from the gentleman who is going to "smash" the Anglo-Israel theory. We can only say that before he does so, he must study the prophets a little more intelligently than he has hitherto. The rev. gentleman quoted Jeremiah, therefore, out of Jeremiah will we condemn him. Giving forth a message from God to the Ten Tribes, the prophet says, "Turn, O backsliding children, saith the Lord; for I am married unto you: and I will take you one of a city, and two of a family, and I will bring you to Zion . . . . and it shall come to pass, when ye be multiplied and increased in the land, in those days, saith the Lord," &c. (Jer. iii. 14, 16). Who are to be increased? So far as Israel of the Ten Tribes is concerned, we answer, "One of a city and two of a family;" while the vast host of the literal, multitudinous seed of Israel are still in their homes at "all the ends of the earth"—the far countries of Zech. x., and the "North country," and "coasts of the earth," of Jer. xxxi. 8—positions literally and exactly filled by Britain and her "company of nations" only.

The next point is the assertion, "Thou (God) art glorified," which glory was obtained by the increase of the nation, and the removing it to "all the ends of the earth." Now the only way in which Israel could bring glory to God, would be by missionary enterprise—the spreading abroad of the Gospel of Christ—declaring God's glory amongst the Gentiles, as prophesied in the last chapter of Isaiah—a chapter which seems to be terribly misunderstood (see "Answers to Correspondents," in the Rock of August 22).

We know that at present, London is the great centre of missionary work, and that Britain and her Colonies are the chief workers in this department. There is scarcely a spot on the habitable globe where our people have not penetrated, carrying with them the "Light of the world;" there is scarcely an island in the whole circle of the seas that has not "heard His fame," by the instrumentality of "Israel in Britain." This is Israel "blossoming, budding, and filling the face of the world with fruit" (Isa. xxvii. 6). Surely if we are not Israel, we are doing Israel's work. Have we supplanted them? And, if so, what becomes of the integrity of the Scripture, when "Israel, My servant," is the everlasting diapason of Isaiah?

Digitized by Google

We should notice particularly that this portion of the chosen race termed "the nation," has been the means of bringing, in some way or another, "glory to God," before the singers—the Jews—have obtained peace. "Thou wilt ordain peace for us." Can our opponents reconcile this with their theories? Funny theories some of them! Mr. Roberts, at p. 12 of his pamphlet, "Anglo-Israelism Refuted," says, concerning Hos. i. 10: "Apart from the point who this Israel may be." There need be no question whatever about it. The "Israel" spoken of there undoubtedly refers to the Ten Tribes—the exiled "Lo-Ammi" people. The same gentleman at p. 26 of his pamphlet, "Coming Events in the East," says, "It is inconsistent to say the Jews have been cast off because the Gentiles have been chosen. The Gentiles have not been chosen." We ask, then, what good can come by obscuring such a plain text as Hos. i. 10? The distinction between Israel and Judah is very clear in Micah iv. 7; and so long as it shall be "The Jew, the Jew, and nothing but the Jew" with our opponents, their theories will be but of small value. We think Mr. Roberts has done his best to get out of this difficulty. But even he has helped to make light darkness. We only need to read the "Appendix" to his "Anglo-Israelism Refuted," and we shall see in what a confused state his notions concerning Israel are. In the Appendix to the recent debate, he admits that Israel and Judah "in the bulk are still dis-united" (p. 121). But in the Appendix to "Anglo-Israelism Refuted," he says, "There is along the Northern shore of the Black Sea, and in the frontier districts of Russia, Austria, and Germany, the thickest belt of Israelitish population to be found in the whole world." If these are descendants of the Ten Tribes, how can he say that the two Houses are still dis-united? In the same place (p. 26) he says, "There are bodies of Israelites in sundry parts, whose existence cannot be accounted for by the Roman dispersion after the capture of Jerusalem by Titus. Not to speak of Afghanistan and China," &c. Well, we have a point for Mr. Roberts to note in connection with his assertion that all the Twelve Tribes are Jews. He will find the following at p. 103 of "The Jews," by J. Alexander: "About the year 1845, Sir Alex. Johnston, who had lately returned from being chief judge of Ceylon, told me that on his landing at Madras, a guard of honour was, of course, turned out to receive him; on looking at the men, he remarked that two of them were of a different appearance from the rest, and he asked them, 'Of what caste are you?' 'Israelite,' was the answer. 'What, then, are you Jews?' 'God forbid,' said they, 'we are not Jews, but Israelites.'" "They are all Jews," says Mr. Roberts. But the Beni-Israel say, "God forbid, we are not Jews, BUT ISRAELITES." Perhaps if Mr. Roberts were to take his Christ-adelphianism to Afghanistan and plant it there, he might convince the Beni-Israel that they are Jews. Why does he not try?

Is there nothing in the Bible about this "remnant of Israel?" "In that day will I raise up the tabernacle of David that is fallen, and close up the breaches thereof; and I will raise up his ruins, and I will build it as in the days of old: that they (Israel) may possess the remnant of Edom, and of all the heathen, which are called by My name, saith the Lord that doeth this" (Amos ix. 11, 12). In these days of "Palestine Exploration"—days of preparation for "building the old wastes"—in the light of the above Scripture, the fact that Britain now has both Afghanistan and Asiatic Turkey (Edom) under her thumb, is, to say the least of it, very remarkable. This may be madness, may be "inspiration from the devil," as the Rev. J. W. Wilkinson, with a superabundance of Christian charity (?) calls it, but we do not think so. There is a certain "twist" in the intellect of every man—a "twist" away from the truth. We do not lay claim to infallibility, but we claim as Christians to be heard, and as Christians to be answered.

WORK ON.

By C. R.

No doubt it has appeared very strange to many of our friends that a subject in which the evidence is so clear, voluminous, and decisive, as is the case in the Anglo-Israel question, should have met with such violent opposition (an opposition which might almost be called unreasoning) in quarters where one would have expected that anything which would tend to a more perfect and clear comprehension of the prophetical Scriptures would have been at least calmly and candidly examined, instead of being treated as being utterly unworthy of investigation, as if it had no concern whatever with the glorious truths of the Scriptures.

It certainly does seem very remarkable that the same people who think it very likely that the Ten Tribes of Israel should be found amongst the Afghans, or some people of that sort, should call it "blasphemy," or "the inspiration of devil-inspired minds," to say that they are to be found in the Anglo-Saxon race, for to ordinary minds at any rate, what is blasphemy in one case seems to be equally "blasphemy" in the other, or vice versâ.

There can be no doubt that some of this opposition arises from the fault which is common with all humanity, of a great objection to believe that the way we have acted, or the things we have learnt in former years, and which have become part of our being, as it were, can possibly be wrong; and because of this we are all liable to treat with ridicule, or even more violent opposition, any man who shows us that such is the case.

This has been so throughout the history of the world; for scarcely any great inventor or discoverer has received the treatment he ought to have had, but, on the contrary, most of them have had to struggle on through neglect and opposition till they have compelled the world to acknowledge that they were right.

We have only to look at the manner in which Columbus, Galileo, and Stephenson (amongst many others) were treated, to see that this is so; but there is still stronger evidence of this in the case of our Lord and Saviour Himself.

We can see now that the prophetic Scriptures are very clear in speaking of Him and His work on earth, but yet how many of the Jews were there, who, though they read the Scriptures daily, either could or would do so? Why even the apostles themselves did not fully comprehend His mission till He had appeared to them after the resurrection.

But there is still another reason for this opposition, and that is, that there is a time appointed when Israel shall know nationally what we, as individuals, know now; and that time has not yet arrived, but it is our duty to prepare the minds of the people, so that when that time has come, when the event long foretold comes to pass, then the great truth shall burst on their minds and carry conviction with it. It will be asked, When is that time?

It is the time foretold in Ezek. xxxviii. and xxxix.; for we see in chap. xxxix. 22, "So the House of Israel shall know that I am the Lord their God from that day and forward." There can be no mistake about this; there the words are very plainly put, and they cannot be "spiritualised" away. We think that this time is very near; no intelligent man can look at the events of the present day without feeling that the time is not far off when "Rosh, chief prince of Meshech and Tubal," having already been foiled in his schemes against Constantinople, and again in his designs on India, will come up suddenly "against the unwalled villages of Israel" (and it is a fact that there is not a single fortification of any importance between the present borders of the Russian territory and Palestine), as being the only place in which he can strike a blow which, if successful, would seriously impair English interests.

Digitized by Google

It almost seems as if the hand of God is now at work preparing the means by which he will be compelled to make this effort, as by it is the only way in which he, a despotic monarch, can hope to re-unite his subjects and bring unity into an empire that is torn with an internal commotion, rapidly bringing about its ruin, as all empires built like this on despotism, ignorance, and cruelty, always do end.

There cannot be any doubt that a war with this country for the possession of Jerusalem and the "holy places" would be popular with nearly all Russians, and a desperate gamester, feeling that this is his last chance of maintaining his throne and power, would be quite capable of making this last desperate throw.

Our duty, then, is to work on, thanking God that He has opened our eyes and has permitted us to be the means of preparing the minds of His "people Israel" for this great event, and rejoicing exceedingly that the truth is already spreading so rapidly, and in such a marvellous manner, throughout the whole of the Anglo-Saxon race wherever they are located; let us reply gently and kindly to our opponents, however much they may rail at us, for we are quite sure that the time must come when they will see that we are right, and we have good reason for believing that that time cannot be very far off.

THE PROMISED LAND.

By the Rev. A. J. J. Cachemaille,
Vicar of Oldham.

(Concluded from page 416.)

PART II.

The advent of man upon this earth is an event in the course of time. The world is far older than man. We must, therefore, seek higher up the scale of time for a reason of His appearance on the scene. To do this, we must again take Him who alone is the revelation of all the mystery of God, and who is also the key to whatever we know or may know—even Jesus Christ. We ask, then, the still deeper question: "Why did Jesus Christ come to this earth at all? And, having come, why did He come to that particular spot known as the Holy Land?" The question seems a large one; it seems, perhaps, at first sight, as if it were a mere speculation more curious than wise, more dangerous than useful; and yet the reason which we may suggest is simple, and will commend itself to quiet thoughtfulness.

We know that our earth is not by any means the largest planet in our solar system; indeed, we form only an infinitesimal speck in the dust of the heavenly bodies. When, therefore, so marvellous and mighty an event as the coming of our Lord and the sacrifice of our Saviour is known to have taken place on so insignificant a speck as this world, the question almost forces itself forward, "Why did Christ come here in preference to any other spot in the vast array of worlds all around us in the heavenly system?" The plan, so we read in Scripture, was formed far away in the mysterious depths of ages before man.

We read in the Epistle to Titus (i. 2), "In hope of eternal life, which God, that cannot lie, promised before the world began, but hath in due times manifested;" and we feel that there must have been some stirring cause, even anterior to man, which set the eternal counsels of God in operation upon the scheme of redemption; for man comes in as an event far down in the sequence of time, as geology clearly testifies. What, then, was the cause that moved to the choice of this world? Scripture again comes to our assistance, and that with no uncertain sound, giving us the key: "For this purpose the Son of God was manifested, that He might destroy the works of the devil" (1 John iii. 8).

True; but how does this fasten the fact to this earth? By the same reason which governs every attack and every victory in the warfare of this world. The general who wishes to conquer a country or a kingdom will go to that particular country. The general who desires to conquer Asia will not send his troops to America, nor will he scatter his troops all over the continent or kingdom; he will, if wise, concentrate them upon the capital, the seat of government. Are we not, then, justified in believing that Jesus Christ came here because here was the seat and citadel of Satan, whom and whose works He came to destroy? It matters not whether we suppose, as some do, that Satan fell from some other outside position on to this earth, or whether, as others (notably the author of "Primeval Man Unveiled": Hamilton Adams, London), that Satan never was elsewhere but on this earth; Scripture abundantly testifies to the presence of Satan here, and he is frequently described, even by our Lord, as "the prince of this world" (John xii. 31). This very largely explains the remarkable prevalence of demoniacal possession during our Lord's ministry. It gives a very special force to the forty days' temptation in the wilderness, and to the language used by Satan on that occasion to our Lord. Till we are led to the conclusion that this world, being the place of Satan's dominion, perhaps even of his kingdom before his own fall, our blessed Lord came here to meet and to overthrow him, and for this purpose began the re-organisation of the surface of the globe as described in Gen. i.; and, having specially prepared the Garden of Eden, he placed therein the man He had made in His image, through the medium of whom He was Himself to carry out the supreme and complete victory over Satan and over his works.

We have thus assigned a special reason for the advent of Christ to this earth. We have also given a special reason for the position and sacredness of the Holy Land, a portion of this earth which God claims in a special manner as His own: a land which was never to be alienated nor sold to others; a land upon which the most mighty events have been enacted before heaven and earth; a land of peculiar and engrossing interest at all times to mankind; a land to which we are expressly told that God will again lead back His chosen people Israel and Judah; to which He Himself will return, and where He will reign gloriously as the one King to whom all nations shall bow.

It remains only in this light to consider one or two further incidents in this peculiar history. If we have so far established a reasonable argument for our Lord's advent and for the position of the Garden of Eden (which was not co-extensive with the limits of the Holy Land, but only with its most sacred spot—viz., Jerusalem—other portions of that land being the cradle of our parents before and after the fall), we may find in our blessed Lord's earthly history the repetition of the facts of man's creation and fall, &c. Our Lord is spoken of (1 Cor. xv. 45) as the last or second Adam. He is also described (Heb. ii. 17) as "in all things made like unto His brethren," sin only excepted. If this is the case, are we not within the bounds of reasonable interpretation when we assign to the particular localities, as well as to the particular events of His life, an identity with those of our first Adam?

May we not, under this impression, say that Bethlehem was the scene, not only of our Lord's birth, but of the formation of Adam also? That the Garden of Gethsemane was one of the scenes of the temptation of Adam, or of Eve, or of both? That in the forty days of temptation we have the locality of the repeated assaults of Satan against our first parents, who surely did not fall at the first solitary whispers of temptation? That in the place where our blessed Saviour sank under the cross Adam fell? That Calvary was not only the place of his fall and burial (there is a tradition to this effect—see S. Ephrem iii., p. 499; S. Augustine, Sermon vi., &c.), but also, thank God! the scene of his eternal redemption? That in the very spot where man fell there he was also redeemed by the one offering for ever of that Saviour, "Who for us men, and for our salvation, came down from heaven," and died upon the cross, "that He might make us the children of God, and exalt us to eternal life?" Surely the supposition is reasonable? It may justly be termed more than a supposition; it will bear investigation; it runs upon the same lines of Holy Scripture in their literal and plain interpretation. It in no way detracts from the solemnity of the events, nor from the sacred interest attaching both to the place and to the events; but, on the contrary, adds a new light in which to look at facts which have always been the most engrossing and the most inspiring ever recorded, and which gain only a clearer and closer interest as we are able to localise them in their transaction, and to extend them into the eternal purpose of God in their effects.

Digitized by Google

The land is holy for every reason we have adduced. To it our eyes are now once more turning in the hope that He who is to come there again will not tarry, but will hasten the time of His return to reign with His saints gloriously.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

By Alexander MacPhail.

In contrasting an extract, taken from the Times of Jan. 18th, 1875, in your valuable pamphlet, entitled, "An Inquiry Establishing the Identity of the British Nation with the Lost Tribes," with two leading articles in to-day's weekly reviews—the one from the Saturday Review, entitled, "Armed Germany;" the other from the Spectator, entitled, "The Conquest of Burmah"—I was so impressed with the remarkable evidence these publications afford—as blind witnesses—to our Identification with Israel, that I offer no apology for placing before the readers of your journal extracts from each. Your pamphlet goes on to say that:

> Not only has Israel the unspeakable blessing of the Spirit's outpouring granted to her; she has, besides, the promise of exemption from war and the chastisements now about to be inflicted on the Gentile world, for which they themselves are busily, but without apparent cause, making the most unparalleled preparations. In the Times newspaper of the 18th January, 1875, we had full details, in a most remarkable article, of what these preparations are. The leading article of that journal spoke of the condition of the Continent in alarming terms. It stated: "In the gloom that surrounds us, one thing is perceptible. All men are arming themselves. It is darkness that may be felt, and the sensation is not imaginary." It described Germany as arming en masse, and the rest of the Continental world following her example. "Germany," we were told, "has in arms 2,800,000 men; France, 1,750,000; Russia, 3,333,000. Austria, Italy, Denmark, Holland, Switzerland, are all arming as fast as they can." In regard to Great Britain, the contrast was described as ludicrous. We have "but 300,000 men, under all heads, for the protection of these Islands"—that is, about one-fifth or one-sixth of the force France could collect, and "one-tenth of what Prince Bismarck could raise out of the ground by a stamp of his foot."

From to-day's Saturday Review we read:

> That there were those who believed that the German army would remain a solitary example of what could be done by enlightened devotion to a patriotic end. Germany, after using her troops to emancipate herself from Austria, and to defend herself against France, would be able to lay down her weapons with the consciousness that other Powers had been sufficiently warned not to provoke her to take them up again. Instead of this, the one feeling awakened on the Continent by Sedan, and all that has followed on Sedan, has been desperate emulation. From 1870 onwards, France has been arming, Austria has been arming, Russia has been arming, Italy has been arming. The only thought in the mind of any one of these Powers has been a fear lest, with all their efforts, they should not be armed soon enough.

Truly our Lord's predictions are being fulfilled before our eyes: "Nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom" (Matt. xxiv. 7); for "My determination is to gather the nations . . . . to pour upon them Mine indignation, all My fierce anger" (Zeph. iii. 8).

The Spectator regards it as by no means improbable that the sensation of the recess will be the conquest of Burmah, and observes:

> We do not see we are bound to go to Mandalay unless we are attacked. . . . . The British Government is crushed with responsibilities already. We are loaded with provinces like a savage beauty with metal ornaments. We eat territories so fast that we have no time to digest them. This very Government, not yet in its teens, has absorbed the Fiji Islands, a whole group larger than the British West Indies; the Transvaal, half as large as France; the Suleiman range, say, three Pyrenees; and Cyprus—not to speak of the Protectorate it has claimed in Asia Minor; and it has not, nevertheless, added one man to the regular army.

"This is, indeed, the doing of the Lord, and it is wondrous in our eyes." God's purposes are ripening very rapidly, and soon shall the dispersed of Judah be gathered together and brought back to their own land. While the Continental nations are engaged with each other in deadly strife, Judah shall flee out of their midst and return with Israel to their own land which beforehand God has been preparing for her.

The Continental Powers are drawing rapidly toward that sad condition of things that they are circumscribed and locked in by each other, while Israel, unfettered and "alone," is turning the waste places of the earth into a fruitful field through the fulness of the Spirit's presence.

Israel's blessing upon the House of Joseph is having its complete fulfilment in our day—namely, "He shall grow into a multitude in the midst of the earth;" "His seed shall become a multitude of nations" (Gen. xlviii. 16, 19); "He is a fruitful bough by a well whose branches run over the wall" (not so the Gentiles, who are caged in by each other until the "time of the end"); "The archers have sorely grieved him, and shot at him, and hated him, but his bow abode in strength, and the arms of his hands were made strong by the mighty God of Jacob; from thence is the shepherd, the stone" (or "Lia Phail") "of Israel" (Gen. xlix. 22—24).

London, Sept. 6, 1879.

ISRAEL'S IDENTIFICATION ASSOCIATION, PLYMOUTH.

The second annual meeting was held in Charles-street Schoolroom, Sept. 17th, 1879, at eight p.m. The Rev. J. M. Hodge, M.A., presided.

The meeting being opened with prayer, the Chairman, briefly reviewing the work of the past year, called on the Secretary for his report.

The Secretary said: The question of our Identity with Israel was growing in the town more rapidly than some of the most sanguine anticipated. They were commencing the present year in good financial circumstances. Until very recently they had held their meetings weekly in a private house. Now that they had a public room for their meetings, he thought many would come who would not care to attend at a private house. The meetings in future would be held monthly, and be open to members and friends, and there would be essays followed by discussion. The subscription had been altered to sixpence per quarter; this, he thought, would meet all classes. During the present year they hoped to add to their numbers. He spoke of a case where a man had been brought to Christ through the Identity, and concluded with the hope that they would continue together acting with the same harmony in future as they had in the past, and that God would bless their efforts.

Digitized by Google

The Treasurer reported a balance in hand of £4 12s. 9d.

After some observations,

The Chairman addressed the meeting, taking as the text of his remarks the frequent allegation, "If you could prove the Identity true, what good would it do?" He pointed out the two prominent dangers of the present English generation: the tendency to Romanism and the tendency to scepticism. He showed that the strong point in the Roman position was the unbroken historical connection of the Church of Rome with the outward Church of the earliest ages. But he referred to the message of warning to the Church at Rome, that if she abode not in the faith, her members might be cut off from the olive tree, and the old branches grafted in again. If we could prove that we were nationally the Church founded in Abraham, our younger members would be guarded by a reference to the apostle's teaching to the Romans against leaving their true spiritual mother for a Church which had fallen into much the same state of legalism as that against which the apostle Paul had to struggle. As to the Rationalist school, many of its ablest members, whilst professing great reverence for the moral and spiritual teaching of the Bible, declared the earlier portions of it to be mere legendary myths. The literal fulfilment of promises by patriarchs and prophets would form a sufficient answer to such teaching. He then called on

Mr. Dann, who illustrated the historical link of our connection with Israel thus:—If we had a flock of sheep (he said) feeding by a river bank, each sheep with a special mark on it, and they all stray away and are lost; but after a time a flock is found on the other side of the river, each sheep in it bearing the very same marks, the common sense conclusion must be that the flock found is the very same one that was "lost." He then referred to various passages in Genesis, the prophets, and the Psalms, in order to establish the fact that the literal fulfilment of these passages requires that the natural seed of Abraham should inherit the actual land; also to prove that the Anglo-Saxon race was found bearing the special marks which God had set on Israel, and by which He said Israel was to be known in the latter days.

A vote of thanks to the Chairman brought the meeting to a close, when eleven persons gave in their names as members.

C. ADAMS, Hon. Sec.

THE SABBATH DAY OF GENTILE EUROPE.

WE have sometimes presented our readers with accounts of how the Germans spent their Sundays. In December, 1876, in No. 5 of Israel's Identity Standard, our leading article was devoted to this subject. Several times since we have alluded to it. We have recently had the opportunity of soliciting a friend about to visit Ostend, Metz, Strasbourg, Switzerland, and Paris, to note what seemed to him remarkable during his journey, with reference especially to the continental mode of spending Sunday, and we give from his replies the following "notes of travel," which speak for themselves, and show us that whatever is done better abroad than in Israel's home, God's day is not honoured there, nor His house frequented by the people as the "house of prayer." Our friend said:—

"During a recent trip on the continent opportunity was taken to compare the French and Belgian observance of the Sabbath with our own. Briefly the facts noticed were these:—

"As a rule the shops were all open, and buying and selling carried on just as briskly as on a week-day. During the morning—i.e., from about six to mid-day—services were conducted in the churches, but the congregations were composed, for the most part, of women and children. Very few men were present at the services, and they were chiefly elderly. The churches visited were the Madeleine and Notre Dame, in Paris. In the afternoon and evening everyone seemed to give themselves up to the pursuit of pleasure. The Bois de Boulogne was crowded in the afternoon with pedestrians and carriages; in the evening the Champs Elysées with its open-air cafés-chantants (three in number), merry-go-rounds, and other attractions, were patronised by thousands up to midnight.

"It was also noticed with surprise that labourers were working at house-building, road-repairing, &c., on Sunday; but it is possible that the necessary day's rest in the week is given on saints' days and holy days."

Our friend's journey extended also into Switzerland. There, too, he tells us, the day of rest was not observed as such after the middle of the day. Some shops, it is true, were shut there throughout the Sunday, but these, he suspected, were the residences of Protestants, of whom Zurich has a good minority.

Such, then, is the Gentiles' day of rest. The toil of the week ceases not, and labour, all the year round, goes on for man and beast without regard to God's kind provision, made especially for His people when He gave them the Sabbath as the "sign" to distinguish them from all the other nations of the world. "He showeth His words unto Jacob, His statutes and His judgments unto Israel. He hath not so dealt with any nation; and as for His judgments, they have not known them" (Psa. cxlvii. 19, 20). His judgments are His laws, His statutes and commandments (Deut. iv. 1, 2, 5, 6, 8, v. 1, 3, 6—22). These were not given to the Gentiles. They were enacted for Israel alone, and, consequently, the Gentile nations know not the privileges and obligations of the Sabbath laws; regard them not, and are filled with astonishment, as at the late Paris Exhibition (page 209, No. 78), when they see how strictly Israel observes the Lord's commands, and what deference she pays to His will regarding God's holy day. He verily showeth His judgments unto Israel. He hath not dealt so with the Germans, the French, the Belgians, or the Swiss; "as for His judgments, they have not known them." "Israel, praise YE the Lord!"

ATMOSPHERIC PHENOMENA.—Coincident with the theory of the sun's cycle another reason why extraordinary atmospheric phenomena may be expected till 1885 is not unworthy of notice—viz., the perihelion periods, or nearest to the sun of the four largest planets, Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus, and Neptune. The perihelion of all these planets coincidently has not occurred for more than 1800 years. Dr. Knapp, writing in the New York Medical Journal last year, remarked that "at former periods it has been observed that the approach of one or more of the great planets of the solar system occasioned disturbance in the atmosphere, causing great heat and cold, rains, drought, blighting of crops and fruits, epidemic diseases among the human race, and epizootics among animals, consequent on the interference with or abstraction of the usual amount of light and heat." No one will seriously dispute Mr. R. A. Proctor's assertion in his admirable work, "Our Place Among Infinities," that "not an atom in the remotest orb can move a hair's-breadth without producing in every other atom throughout the universe an effect infinitely minute to our perceptions, but as manifest to the Almighty as the noonday sun to us." This is admitted as a general principle, but few men have the courage to admit, even if they have the logical acumen to discern, that it may be formulated into a system whereby many useful warnings may be conveyed to the human race."—H. A. B.—Times, May 17, 1879.

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements

(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O O payable at Ludgate-circus.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed :—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

LECTURES, MEETINGS, ETC.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

PRESIDENT: VISCOUNT FOLKESTONE, M.P.

LECTURES WILL BE DELIVERED as follows, by the

REV. JAMES BILLINGTON, F.S.A., F.R.H.S.

Monday, October 20, WITHERNSEA.
Tuesday, October 21, HULL.
Wednesday, October 22, HUDDERSFIELD.
Thursday, October 23, LIVERPOOL.
Friday, October 24, CHESTER.

Also by

DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, ESQ., J.P.

Tuesday, October 21, SHEFFIELD.
Wednesday, October 22, OLDHAM.

ADMISSION FREE.

A Collection will be taken at the door on behalf of the above Association, under whose auspices these Lectures are given. Office—20, Warwick Lane, London, E.C.

ANGLO-ISRAEL SERVICES will be conducted (D.V.) on SUNDAY NEXT, at the ASSEMBLY ROOMS, Lyme Grove, St. Thomas's Square, Mare Street, Hackney, by Rev. H. MARRIOTT, M.A. (Late Missionary to the Jews at Tanjier). Hours of worship, 11 a.m. and 3 p.m.

TUITION.—An Undergraduate of London, and an experienced Tutor, prepares Candidates, by means of Examination Papers, in the Classical, English, and Mathematical subjects required for the Locals. Terms, Three Shillings per Letter. Address, MR. CHARLES JONES, 100, City-road, Bristol.

W. COCKRAM,
GENERAL DRAPER,
3, CHESNUT GROVE, BALHAM.

NEW PAMPHLETS.

Price 4d., post free 5d.

JAPHETIC OR SEMITIC: WHICH ARE WE?

BY CAROLINE PEARSE.

Showing the different character of the promises and blessings, and chastisements foretold as destined for the two Houses of Israel and Judah, and consequently the different careers it was foretold they would accomplish.

Now ready, price 2d., post free 2½d., in neat coloured cover.

AMMI;
OR,
THE CHOSEN PEOPLE,
BY MISS BIRD.

Tracing the descent of the British people from Abraham, the "friend of God," and showing that true science, history, philology, and ethnology, are on the side of the Identity of the Anglo-Saxon race with the Ten Lost Tribes.

In neat coloured cover, price 2d., post free 2½d.

BLESSINGS AND CURSES, AND THEIR RELATION TO ISRAEL AND JUDAH. By F. W. PHILLIPS, of Speedwell-road, Birmingham.

Price 2d. Post free 2½d.

MANASSEH AND THE UNITED STATES. An important Essay delivered before the "Lost Israel Identification Society," by the Rev. JOSEPH WILD, D.D. at Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, New York.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet Court, Fleet Street; and may be had, by ordering, of any bookseller.

NEW BOOKS.

NEW WORK BY DR. WILD.

NOW READY, price 3s., post free 3s. 4d. Handsome cloth, gilt, printed on toned paper and illustrated.

THE LOST TEN TRIBES,
AND
1882.
BY THE
REV. DR. JOSEPH WILD,
Of Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Printed and published by
ROBERT BANKS, RACQUET COURT, FLEET ST., LONDON, E.C.
And may be had, by ordering, of any Bookseller.

EXTRACT FROM PREFACE:—

The main idea I wish to convey in this book, is that God is conducting His Providence through His ancient chosen people, Israel, whom I believe are found in the Saxon race. And His throne on earth, through which flow the purposes of Providence, is David's throne, which I believe to be at present the English throne. Queen Victoria (and God bless her) I believe to be of David's seed. The United States fulfils the rôle of the Tribe of Manasseh. Therefore, to understand the prophecies, Providence, and the present movements of nations, as well as the future lot and destiny of each, we must read the Scriptures in this light. God has made the children of Israel and throne of David His executive, in time, on earth. They are His executive for civilisation, evangelisation, order, and conquest. Through them God will conquer the world to an universal peace. As Moses was to God, so is Israel. Moses being a Divine executor, was to the people a god—so is Israel to all mankind. Spiritual Israel will come through literal Israel.

For Contents see BANNER for October 1st.

HORE PROPHETICÆ: WHAT DOES THE BIBLE TEACH ABOUT GREAT BRITAIN? Establishing the Identity of the Anglo-Saxon Race with the House of Ephraim.

BY REV. H. MARRIOTT, M.A.

Price 3s. in paper, 4s. in cloth boards.
W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.
T. E. Chilcott, Bristol.

THE MIDNIGHT CRY; or, WORDS OF SOLEMN WARNING.

Second edition, price 1d.; post free, 1½d.; for distribution, 6s. per 100. W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

WORKS BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Price 2d., post free 2½d.

THE HISTORICAL, ETHNIC, AND PHILOLOGICAL ARGUMENTS in PROOF of BRITISH IDENTITY with the TEN LOST TRIBES OF ISRAEL, clearly and simply stated.

BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

CONTENTS:—Introduction—The Celts—Professor Rawlinson's Testimony—The Cymry—The Cimmerii—The Gimiri and Khumri—The Testimony of the Nimroud Obelisk—The Scythians—The Anglo-Saxons—Sharon Turner's Testimony—The Jutes and Angles—The Danes and the Normans—General Conclusions—Philology—The Welsh Language—The Rev. Canon Lysons' Testimony—Idiomatic Identity Between Hebrew and English—Tyndal's Testimony—The Tribe of Dan—The Irish Celts—Are the Continental Nations Israelites?—Conclusions—Appendix.

Price 4d., post free 5d.

AN ELEMENTARY DIGEST or SKETCH OF THE CHIEF FACTS and TEACHINGS of the GREAT PYRAMID of EGYPT; adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific. By PHILO-ISRAEL; together with Original Papers by the following leading Pyramidists, republished mostly from the BANNER OF ISRAEL (by kind permission of the proprietor)—viz., Professor Piazzi Smyth, the Rev. J. W. Hickson, M.A., Charles Horner, Esq., and Major H. A. Tracey, R.A. Being a pamphlet by five authors (a Pyramid number).

Now ready.
NEW AND ENLARGED EDITION OF

COMING COLLISION BETWEEN ENGLAND AND RUSSIA. By an M.A. of Cambridge. Price 1s. The Appendix can be had for affixing to 1st Edition upon receipt of 1d. stamp.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick Lane, E.C.

Price One penny, post free 1½d. One dozen copies, post free 1s. 100 copies 6s., post free 7s.

THE IDENTITY OF THE BRITISH NATION WITH THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. THE CLUE TO THE EASTERN QUESTION. By C. W. E.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

NEW BOOKS.

A NEW TALE OF THRILLING INTEREST FOR YOUNG PEOPLE ON THE IDENTITY OF LOST ISRAEL.

Now ready, price 2s. 6d., post free 2s. 9d. Bound in handsome cloth, gilt, bevelled boards, gilt edges, and beautifully printed on toned paper.

THE SISTERS
OF HARROWDALE RECTORY.
BY
MRS. M. A. SEARSON,
ILLUSTRATED WITH
BEAUTIFUL DOUBLE-PAGE FRONTISPIECE.

Printed and Published by
ROBERT BANKS, RACQUET COURT, FLEET ST., LONDON, E.C.
And may be had, by ordering, of any Bookseller.

CONTENTS:—

CHAPTER I.

Harrowdale Rectory. The Rector's Family. God's Own Architect. An English Parsonage. The Aged Grandmother. Hospitality to Strangers. Frances Farnwood. Restoration to the Promised Land. Discussion on "Our Identity."

CHAPTER II.

A Quiet Controversy. A God-given Dream. Guardian Angels. A Visit to Paradise. What Paradise is Like. The Occupation of Angels. Michael the Archangel. Before the Throne of God. Israel My Heritage. The Wondrous Love of Christ. Unfolding of Prophecy Concerning Israel. A Visit to Souls in Prison. The Wonders of God's Perfect Will. Hopeless Condition of Lost Souls.

CHAPTER III.

Mother's Dream. Old Mother Davis. The Village of Harrowdale Described. William Edwards the Miner. Working Men's Homes. The Miner and the Identification of Lost Israel. The Chariot Wheels of Israel. Discouragements Overcome. A Visit to Mrs. Bertram. Her Daily Life. Her Belief in the English being Lost Israel. The Sisters' Visit to Mrs. Bertram and Mother Davis. Dinner With Mother Davis. Mother Davis and the Lost Ten Tribes. God Faithful to His Promises. The Coming of Our Lord.

CHAPTER IV.

Visit of Aunt Winslow and Cousin Calvin to the Rectory. A Family Tea-party. An Anglo-Israel Meeting. Calvin and His Uncle. The Return to Palestine. Israel or Judah—Which? What the Bible Reveals. The Wanderings of Our Israelite Ancestry. The Second Coming of Christ. A Sunday Evening Identity Class. The Bible Appealed to.

CHAPTER V.

The Neighbouring Clergymen Visit the Rectory. A Mutual Understanding. Marion's Opinion of Cousin Calvin. Calvin's Opinion of His Cousin. A Sketch of Rural Life. Miss Stanmore. Matrimonial Mistakes. Marion's Firm Belief in Providence. Calvin's Engagement to Miss Stanmore. Remarks on Unequal Marriages. The Calm after a Storm. A Parable. A Pledge of Love. The Parable Explained.

CHAPTER VI.

Calvin's Belief in our Identity. Captain Johnstone Introduced. Captain Johnstone and Miss Stanmore. An Open Avowal. Calvin Released from His Engagement. The Fever-Stricken Family. Calvin's Second Visit to Harrowdale. Sympathy and Help. A Visit to the Sick Chamber.

CHAPTER VII.

Illness of the Rector's Wife. Poor Susan. Mrs. Wildman's Trust in Her Saviour. "Going Home" in the Glorious Sunshine. The Heavenly Jerusalem. The Mother's Last Charge. Calvin and Marion. Good-bye.

This book will be read with interest by both young and old, and found well suited for a BIRTHDAY GIFT, SUNDAY SCHOOL REWARD, OR PRESENT.

Price 6d., post free 7d. New work on the Identity. Dedicated to all faithful ministers of Christ.

ISRAEL! AN EARNEST APPEAL FROM THE NEW TO THE PULPIT IN FAVOUR OF OUR IDENTITY WITH GOD'S ELECT PEOPLE, ISRAEL: Being a Letter from JOHN G. SHAW to his Pastor, Rev. Eustace R. Conder, of Leeds, with an Introduction and Notes; to be followed by a Review of Mr Conder's Papers on the Lost Tribes.

By the same Author.

"BRITAIN (OR ISRAEL)," with Map. Price 8d., post free 9d.
"CHRONOLOGICAL CHART." Price 3d., post free 3½d.
"GOD'S LOVE FOR ISRAEL." Price 1d., 3 copies sent post free for 2½d.

London: ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, OCT. 22, 1879. [All Rights Reserved.]

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. III. No. 148. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 29, 1879. [ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
The Preparations of Europe for the Great Earthquake	429
Judy and the Lion of Israel	430
"Lost Israel" Found in the British Nation. By R. Sargent	430
The Sunderland Daily Post on "England's Mission and Policy	432
The Promises and Blessings.—Part I. By Thomas Bales	433
The Future of English	434
Review	434
Correspondence	435

THE PREPARATIONS OF EUROPE FOR THE GREAT EARTHQUAKE.

WE think it well to review what the nations of Europe are doing at this time by way of preparation for the great earthquake which is to devastate the "Gentile earth." We find the information given us by a Vienna correspondent quoted in a Bristol paper on Sept. 11, 1879. It appears that the German Empire has an army of the first and reserve lines, amounting to 2,550,000 men, which after deductions for dead, sick, &c., &c., may be counted as 2,100,000 troops available for real service in the field. The magnitude of this number appals. When it is recollected that this "man-slaying machine" is equipped with all that modern science can provide for the destruction of its enemies, that it is composed of the thew and sinew of a nation that performed the wonders we witnessed in 1870-71, when it brought the French nation to its knees and spoilt it of two provinces, we feel that we are dealing with an engine of destruction fully prepared to take part in a convulsion which will have, as God's Word tells us, no parallel since the world began—an "earthquake such as was not since men were upon the earth, so mighty an earthquake, so great." But assuming that in the next war Germany will have for its opponents Russia and the power of France combined, what force will these two Empires be able to bring to bear against the German 2,100,000 fighting men embattled against them? It will verily be almost an even match. France, it seems, has an army which on paper is declared to be 3,600,000 in number. But of this, half may be dismissed as "paper men," and her real strength estimated at only 1,800,000, of whom again, 600,000 are "men with muskets," unacquainted with drill. France then stands represented by a fighting strength of only (!) 1,200,000, subject to a deduction of 400,000 needed for garrison and other duties. Her available force for war is thus 800,000. In regard to Russia, though ostensibly she has an army of 1,800,000, it is declared she could not put more than 400,000 on the German frontier. The Germans thus, with 2,100,000 to defend two frontiers at once, 800 miles apart, will still be more than a match for the 1,200,000 Russians and Frenchmen together, with whom they will be embattled, since on the one side they can oppose to the 800,000 Frenchmen, 1,000,000 German troops, and to the 400,000 Russians the same number, or a million of German men in arms. If Austrian and Italian forces be thrown into the mêlee we suppose another half a million together may be calculated on, as certain to join the awful fray. In all, after making every deduction, we suppose 3,800,000 armed men may be reckoned upon as ready to rush upon each other when God gives the word. When the shock of such a storm of war as that takes effect, we shall see a sight which surely history has never known, and it will indeed be "an earthquake such as was not since men were upon the earth, so mighty an earthquake, SO GREAT!" No wonder the nations of Europe, seeing these things, and knowing, as they must, that the explosion is to come, nay, is even at the doors, "feel their hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming upon 'the earth.'" There is, therefore, on "the earth" now, distress of nations, "with perplexity" (Luke xxi. 25, 26). The situation on the Continent of Europe is indeed "ominous of bloodshed;" but "whether Germany's great superiority in the matter of 'big armies' will be adequate to the sacrifices entailed, is," says a provincial paper, "very doubtful." Looked at in the light of the Identity we suppose the contest, which is to be waged without Gospel light or mitigating Christian alleviations, will be marked by every extremity of atrocity, and will be fought out at great length, until utter prostration supervenes on all the parties engaged. The nation with the greatest power of prolonging the expensive contest in a pecuniary point of view, will surely then, as now, come out the victors. In such an aspect Russia, Austria, and Germany will count but little as compared with France, which, next to Israel, seems empowered "to get wealth." So guaged, the contest will find the German races vanquished at last by their French and Russian foes. All will be so exhausted, too, that Palestine and "the mountains of Israel," with "the treasures of Egypt," will be a sore temptation to a ruined polity like Russia, to demand of Britain the restoration of the "great Gate" of her Russian house (Constantinople). On the refusal of that, it will be hers to turn for compensation to the spoil of a defenceless people then located in the Holy Land. Then will begin Armageddon. Then will God Himself come down, and fight for His chosen people. Then will ensue the rout and ruin of God's enemies—the people who are destined to a destruction unparalleled in the history of mankind; when seven months shall be required to bury the dead, and seven years shall be consumed in getting rid by fire of the last of the weapons of that mighty invading host. These anticipations of coming sorrows remind us of God's undeserved mercies to our race, His people Israel. From all these sorrows we shall be wholly free, what time the Lord turns to us His people "a pure language, that we may ALL call upon the name of the Lord to serve Him with one consent" (Zeph. iii. 9). Wherefore, "Let Israel now say that His mercy endureth for ever!" (Psa. cxviii. 2).

Digitized by Google

"JUDY" AND THE LION OF ISRAEL.

AT p. 407 of No. 145 we drew attention to Punch's admirable cartoon depicting the retribution Sir F. Roberts has already inflicted on the "Afghan wolves," under the type of the British lion standing at the Gate roaring at the wretched creatures, and ready to spring upon them in his righteous wrath. How well that punishment was inflicted our readers have already seen by the telegrams from Char Asiab, when, on October 6, with his advanced brigade only, the British General routed the Afghan mutineers and the Cabul "Badmashes," or city rabble, with considerable loss, capturing first 12 guns, 2 standards, then 78 guns and a fine position, making the cowardly, murderous throng fly like deer, "utterly routed." That was a picture of the British-Israelite lion of the remnant of Jacob, in the midst of many people, among the ignoble beasts of the forest—Afghan wolves, and such canaille.

Turn we now to another portrait, this time drawn for us from the same text (Micah v. 8), showing us the same remnant of Jacob as a "young lion among the flocks of sheep," "going through," carrying all before him, receiving the humble Oriental obeisances of the crowding Afghan abject slaves around, fitly represented as bending low before the majestic king of brutes, who carries proudly his queenly burden—Britannia, supreme at sea, and Empress of the East; also the cringing Yakoob Khan, who has not manliness left to ride the lion with the bearing of a king, but terrified, clings to Britain's power, and with trembling, frightened aspect, is borne along behind Israel's noble figure, a very abject; miserable in his looks, the serf-like ruler of a set of treacherous, wretched, bending subjects, who with low Salaams let proud, God-favoured Israel pass. But walking by the lion's head is Yakoob Khan's commander-in-chief, Davood Khan, the king's shield-bearer, sword in hand, carrying also the scales of justice, to be meted out on the murderers in Cabul. The figure of the strong lion is a noble conception. It speaks in clear accents of the "young lion's" mission among the "flock of sheep." He is "going through" with rapid step, and shortly we may see by that lion's angry look, by his kindling eye, and by his steady march forward, that his work inside the "dirty" city will be what he fulfilled outside it—namely, "to tread down," "to tear in pieces," and so to deal with the cowardly murderers and slayers of a friendly "Elchi," or ambassador, that with God's blessing on his prophetic commission, there shall be NONE to deliver (Micah v. 8).

We recommend our readers to look at Judy's cartoon as portrayed in the 8th October number, and when they study the picture, to recollect, that just as Punch was forced unwittingly to declare the literal fulfilment of one part of the prophecy of Micah we now allude to, Judy, a few days afterwards, was equally constrained as a blind witness to testify to our Israelite origin by drawing the British again as a powerful, vigorous "young lion," "going through," amidst a crowd of cringing men, timorous as a "flock of sheep," a lion ready to fall with vengeance upon the enemies of God in the cursed, "displeasing" city, whither He had directed him to go, to do His will.

"LOST ISRAEL" FOUND IN THE BRITISH NATION.

BY R. SARGENT.

THE following is a paper by the Secretary for the St. Leonards Branch of the new Anglo-Israel Association formed in that locality for Hastings and St. Leonards, whereof we are glad to see that our old and tried friend, Lieut.-Col. W. H. Larkins, has been nominated President. The paper was, however, read before the St. Leonards Wesleyan Mutual Improvement Association last April, prior to the establishment of the new daughter of the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association; but as it appears to us a valuable and lucid contribution to our Israelite literature, we mean to give it the benefit of our now world-wide circulation, in view to others at a distance deriving benefit from Mr. Sargent's mode of treating our Identity.

With this introduction we leave him face-to-face with his audience, as he was reported by one of the St. Leonards and Hastings papers some months ago. After some introductory remarks, Mr. Sargent opened his case by speaking of

OUR ISRAELITISH ORIGIN.

In touching upon this point, Mr. Sargent said it covered a vast area of evidence of various kinds for calm and candid investigation. They were met together in a part of a building used for God's worship, and they were met under the auspices of a religious community, and it was thus fit that they should take the Scriptural argument as the line of discussion that evening. Although taking the Book of the sacred law as the foundation of his arguments, they should not expect him to preach a sermon; nor should they, because he did not talk about "the Gospel and salvation," say the subject was not pre-eminently a Christian one. What they had to consider on that occasion was the historical outline of God's policy in earth's government. Examining the Bible in this light, it was the written drama of the world's great acting drama, compressing into one small volume the wondrous scenes and acts of the world's existence. After referring to the early history of Israel, and the birthright being given to the sons of Joseph, the opener continued as follows:—Excuse all this well-known history—I could not do without it. Now it is time to see what this birthright includes. The heirship of the world, conveyed by three principal clauses, which may be expressed thus: The possession of a special land or country; an innumerable progeny; and universal power or Empire. The land was almost the whole of Asia Minor. In one part of Scripture the boundaries are very precisely marked out, and this stamps the whole with a material character, shows it to relate to this earth and its affairs, and divests these promises of a spiritual meaning, primarily if not absolutely. There are some good folk who affect to despise this earthly possession: "What is Palestine to them?" They would make you believe they are getting to be superior to such things—above valuing anything so sensuous. I have never found them really thus, talk as they may. But this is the record about that country, this geographical inheritance: not only is it called a "good land," but "it is a land the Lord thy God careth for; the eyes of the Lord thy God are always upon it, from the beginning of the year to the end of the year" (Deut. xi.). It is a land that all the greatest statesmen and military strategists—ancient and modern—know the value of: to them it is the true centre of earthly power. Thus, in their special line, in human wisdom, corroborating God's choice. Through this estimated value, it is the spring and root of the Eastern Question, for this is the real goal of Russian intrigue and duplicity, and will be to the end of that Empire described by Ezekiel; and that land is, according to the inspired Volume, destined to be eventually, as originally covenanted, the seat of the fifth and last Empire. A multitudinous progeny—to supply population to fill earth's desolate places—to govern all other races and peoples, kings and nations—kings to govern—nations to bless. Universal Power or Empire expressed in the sentence, "Thy seed shall possess the Gate of his enemies." Is not

THIS INHERITANCE A GRAND HERITAGE?

Here I will anticipate the question, "Does not this inheritance belong to the Hebrew race in its entirety—that is, the Twelve Tribes descended from the twelve sons of Jacob?" Most certainly; but of this presently, bearing in mind the partial division of the blessings—royalty to one family and the birthright to another. The descendants of Israel's sons formed a nation of twelve clanships, which was always from the Exodus from Egypt a dual commonwealth. When Israel went out of Egypt, the House of Jacob from a people of strange language, "Judah was His sanctuary, Israel His dominion" (Psalm cxiv.). So, too, you find in David's time the two distinct divisions mentioned and maintained long before the final partition and establishment of two kingdoms—Judah and Israel. From the earliest scenes in the history of this people, they are seen as antagonistic to God's laws. Had to be schooled in Egypt, while they were waiting "till the iniquity of the Amorites was full." Then, on account of their own wrong-doing and severance from God, had to wander in "that great and mighty wilderness" till the whole of that generation had passed away before they could enter the land of their heritage. So scene after scene of the world's history opens and closes. God's law, formulated and codified in this Hebrew nation, required individual and national goodness and integrity. As they obeyed, blessings to themselves and other nations were given; when they receded, and broke their part of the covenant they and their fathers made with God through Moses, the penalties they incurred were inflicted by other nations. This is the key to the rise and fall of Empires, and which I intended to make the groundwork of this paper, but omit it from want of time. You can trace it yourselves in ordinary secular written history, using God's Word as the key to the mysterious undercurrent of national life. After the final and palpable division of the twelve clans into two kingdoms, each in turn degraded itself so entirely that the penalties of that broken covenant were inflicted—Judah exiled to Babylon seventy years; Israel completely expatriated—banished by Assyria to Media, and there became lost as a people. "I will have no more mercy on the House of Israel, but will utterly take them away; but will have mercy on the House of Judah." The next sentence, "Ye are not My people," must refer to Israel, not Judah, for Judah is to be saved by the Lord their God; while following the words, "Ye are not My people," reads, "I will not be your God." Yet the number of the children of Israel shall be as the sand of the sea, and where it was said, "Ye are not My people, there shall ye be called sons of the living God. Then shall Judah and Israel be gathered together, and appoint themselves one head, and they shall come up out of the land." It seems clear to me that this increase is to be in exile; it implies that there they shall be unknown as to nationality, afterwards their genealogy traced, then re-united nationally, and return. This in order and circumstance agrees with the forecast of Ezekiel, illustrated by him with two wands, for House of Joseph and House of Judah. At the close of that seventy years' exile, Judah returned to Palestine—this much is acknowledged fact. Did Israel, the ten clans, return with them at that time? If not, did they become extinct? or, if still in existence, in what state and in what direction are they to be sought for? All history agrees in this, that the Israelite kingdom did not return with the kingdom of Judah. Josephus, as one historian, positively and distinctly asserts that the Ten Tribes did not return then. Esdras asserts the same, and points the way they took in leaving Media; and from the points he indicates, along the shores of the Black Sea, are traces of the slow migration of a multitudinous nation. Tombs containing relics and inscriptions—Hebrewistic in character. Nearer towards Europe, we even now have the Israelitish affix to the names of great rivers, Danube and others, just as in Palestine is the Jordan. Not only does history thus positively affirm that the Ten Tribes or clans did not return with Judah from the Babylonian exile, but it also re-affirms this in a negative process, by constantly supposing or guessing where these Israelite clans are posited. In Maundeville's Travels, written some 200 years ago, these clans are stated to be in some central part of a continent, closed in by mountains. In one of Fenimore Cooper's American novels (I think it is the "Pathfinder") this same fact of the existence of this people, as a people yet unknown as to their origin or ancestry, forms one part of the plot of that romance—thus showing incidentally that forty years ago it was an acknowledged fact that the two kingdoms did not return united. A Dr. Wolf, in later years, at a meeting of one of the scientific associations in London, made a statement to the effect that he was wearied with the continual questioning as to whether, in his world-wide travelling, he had hit on any traces of this people, ancient Israel. Thus, by a species of negative reasoning, proving that they did not return with Judah; for if they did, then they remain with them still, scattered truly, but no longer two nationalities. As to the next alternative, their being extinct, the same arguments apply. And then there is a still more serious one against this. The two nations are, if Ezekiel be true, to return once more to Asia Minor and re-possess their land; and then all the clans are mentioned, and the boundaries of their separate allotments. If extinct, this is a false forecast, and the Book itself becomes invalidated. Take the two theories together—that the two nationalities have been already re-united, and form the widely-scattered race known as Jews, or that the ten clans have become extinct—and, to my mind, they are both irrefutably answered by Paul's simile of the olive tree and his logic thereon. If, then, Israel, the ten clans, had returned, and were incorporated with Judah, what sheer nonsense to talk as Paul did of these clans as symbolised by branches of an olive tree "being cut off," "cast away." By this simile, Paul shows that in his day some branches were gone—thrown aside for a time—for, says he, "God is able to graft them in again" to the old stock; therefore they were not destroyed, not extinct. Now bear this in mind, that if still existing, though like branches cut off, Israel is still the heir, and in possession of the birthright with its privileges, its blessings, and its duties; this remains irrevocable. The covenant securing this has never been annulled. Another of a different character, and of universal application, has been added on to this oldest and national one. And it is a remarkable fact that it was just the races who occupied geographically the parts where national Israel can be most clearly traced, at the time when Paul wrote, who most eagerly accepted Christianity, "this new covenant," while Roman and Greek as scornfully repudiated it. This by the way. It is not altogether worthless in the inquiry as to Israel; it is a kind of corroborative evidence, and may indicate the direction in which to look for this race, the still rightful inheritor of God's gift by covenant, which I have shown to be, material and national, relating to earth and earth's polity. We claim that the British people, anciently known as Israel, and therefore entitled to have and hold by birthright all that that covenant guarantees. And we affirm that the position given to us as a nation, race, and empire, is not only a proof of this, but that thus by proving this first part brings glory and honour to God as showing His immutability, and the absolute truth of the Bible. I shall not bring forward "Identifications" this evening—only mention the agreement of our present position nationally with the original grants. You know one gentleman, quite a champion among our opponents, has stated there is not one point of Identity. Because in this year of grace we have not come to the full and perfect likeness of that which is portrayed of the ultimate state of Israel, because that in population, war, power, &c., we have not absolutely filled up perfectly the grand outline, he says the Identity fails. Examine this style of argument. Certain moralities are rightly stated to belong to Christianity, and to follow Christian belief, yet I never met a professed Christian that comes up to the mark of Christ's likeness. Did you? Yet is not the very growth in purity and goodness a proof of his Christian identity? Because the sapling has not the toughness and the gnarled majestic grandeur of the perfect oak, are we to disregard the generic peculiarities and say the Identity fails? The great champion in this appears to me to show his own littleness and weakness as a logician. Remember all God's works are characterised by growth and development—not generic changes. But can any one expect more than general, though specific likeness, partial in its application in our case, while the people, such a proportion of them, are yet, in spirit and life, antagonistic to the obligations, the duties specified as the conditions on which the high privileges were promised? Multitudes of people! philosophic statesmen (!) link hands with Bradlaughs and their Besants, and openly scorn God's verdict, and say progeny is a curse! And how can we hope for the full realisation of national greatness while so many are found willing to follow men who would gladly relinquish the points of vantage we, as a nation, held—men who would disintegrate the empire and sell our birthright for their ideal mess of pottage, less responsibility, easier work, and a surplus in national revenue? But, for all this, we can show in this British Empire the true germs of the growing likeness to Israel, as portrayed in the inspired volume, and can say, "He has not dealt thus with any other nation." Israel (Prince of God), by whom the rule of the world was destined to be administered, was to perform this duty, to hold the places of power. The original clause runs thus:—"Thy seed shall possess the Gate of his enemies." Take a map of the world, with gazetteer to aid, and mark all the points of power you can find—entrances of commerce, military stragetic points, East, West, North, and South, such as Gibraltar, Hong Kong, Pekin—spot them all, and then ask what flag, denoting possession and power, floats over them. Of all these "Gates" of the world, would there be half-a-dozen that were not Britain's (America is of the same race)? One Gate I know there is that is not absolutely ours yet—the Gate, the Sublime Porte, Constantinople, that strategical point of universal rule. But this, too, is fast falling to our hands. Coming events cast their shadows before.

Digitized by Google

THIS ANGLO-SAXON RACE, ARE THE LINEAL DESCENDANTS OF THESE CLANS OR TRIBES,

Digitized by Google

ARE WE NOT JUSTIFIED IN ASSERTING THAT ISRAEL IS FOUND IN BRITAIN,

when the position now, so close on to some great change in the world's history is imminent, is exactly that guaranteed in the promises and bequeathed birthright? If we be Gentiles, and not Israel, then is God "taking the children's bread and casting it to the dogs;" He would be breaking His word and oath, and this I cannot, dare not, allow to be possible. Do you say we hold these blessings for our Christianity? This would be boasting with a vengeance. This would be glorying over the iniquities of the people and accepting a meagre profession and half-hearted performance as the reason of reward, instead of the continually repeated reason, "Not for your sake, O House of Israel; but for My own sake, for My name's sake, for the oath I swore to your fathers, do I all this." What if we be not Israel? Then, the birthright not being ours, this empire, with its company of nations, with its Anglo-Saxon brother Jonathan, will fade away before as yet an unknown people. There is one more argument worth notice. It is recorded in Scripture that only one empire will follow the Roman. In Nebuchadnezzar's dream is given a scene, a stern forecast of the last acts of this world's imperial history. Four empires following each other are symbolised by an image. The fourth empire of iron, the Roman; on that empire falls a stone, crushing it and scattering the whole broken image, and this stone growing and filling the whole earth is the fifth monarchy, the last empire. This we hold to be this Anglo-Saxon commonwealth of nations—this British Empire. We possess the germs—aye, more, the germs of all God included in the promises and covenants to Israel. Even now Britain holds her hand over Asia Minor, the inheritance, possesses the Gate of that continent—Cyprus. To recapitulate from point to point of this bare unfinished sketch: Abraham was constituted heir of the world, unconditionally and by oath. This constituted the birthright, which eventually descended to the nationality or kingdom of Israel, through Joseph or Ephraim, the chief and head clan of that kingdom; and that being a birthright, and secured moreover by God, cannot be transferred to any other race on earth, or God's Word fails. That the British possess in the main the points that constitute that birthright, and being the nation that destroyed the fourth and Roman Empire, is consequently the fifth and last; and these circumstances justify the assertion, independently of other proof which does exist, that the British is indeed this Israel. Then what manner of people ought we to be, in justice, truth, and goodness—we, inheritors to covenants granted by the Eternal—constituting us by birthright the heirs of the world?

THE "SUNDERLAND DAILY POST" ON "ENGLAND'S MISSION AND POLICY."

We think we may add the Sunderland Daily Post to the list of the provincial papers which have openly advocated the Identity view of British greatness, and its present position in the world. We think that the extracts we give below of a leader in that journal of August 13, 1879, read very like the utterances of Banner writers, but especially of its much-abused editor. We are glad to think our opinions are taking root everywhere, and instead of "rapidly dying out," as the Rock lately said they were doing, and said with satisfaction, we may congratulate ourselves and our friends, too, on the fact, that while the empire is what it is, and we have the Bible in our hands, the glorious truth cannot but grow, and that rapidly. The following are choice selections from an excellent article, which our friends will read with pleasure. The editor said:—

Englishmen are supremely ignorant and indifferent regarding many things, but probably in none do they exhibit such unrivalled ignorance as in a knowledge of their own country and its geographical limits. Look back upon the rise and fall of empires, and there is nothing to compare for a moment with the wondrous growth of the British Empire. It is growing year by year—nay, month by month—and yet as a people we are as vigorous as ever, able and willing to carry the blessings of civilisation into far off lands, and to reclaim from barbarism the waste heritages of the earth. Our empire may not be inaptly compared to the grain of mustard seed. Its beginning was indeed small and insignificant; but nurtured by Providence, in the course of time, it has grown into its present vast proportions, and its branches so cover the whole earth that the nations take lodgment therein. From the reign of Queen Anne downwards, with few exceptions, our leading statesmen have with a prescience, rare and marvellous, foreseen the position which this country was destined to occupy, and the unique place it was to hold among the nations of the earth. Towards this goal they laboured. A foreign policy, common to all parties in the State, with a break now and again, as we have said, marks each successive reign. This has become what is known as the historical policy of the country. What is that policy? It is the policy with which the names of Castlereagh, Canning, Chatham, Pitt, Wellington, Palmerston, and Beaconsfield are closely associated. It recognises the responsibilities of the country, and that its world-wide interests confer upon it a right to exercise a powerful sway in the councils of the nations. We see how, under this policy, the historic policy, the empire has grown and prospered. Such a policy is suited to an Imperial race.

There is much prevailing ignorance as to what Great Britain really is. Advantage is unfairly taken of this. How few have tried to realise the full meaning of the phrase! It is no exaggeration to say that British interests, or if you will, British possessions, doubly belt this earth of ours. Look, for instance, at the Eastern Hemisphere, and you will find our power and influence acknowledged and supreme, among other places, in Tasmania, Hong Kong, Victoria, West Canada, Queensland, South Australia, Western Australia, Ceylon, India, Labuan, Natal, Aden, the Straits Settlements, Mauritius, the Cape of Good Hope, St. Helena, the African Protectorate, the Gold Coast, Lagos, Sierra Leone, Gambia, Gibraltar, Malta, and Heligoland. Then turn to the Western Hemisphere and what do we find? Excluding the United States (founded and peopled by our own race) we have the Hudson's Bay territory, Canada, British Columbia, the Pacific Islands, New Zealand, Fiji Islands, Falkland Islands, British Guiana, Trinidad, Antigua, Windward Islands, Jamaica, British Honduras, Bermuda, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Newfoundland, and other places too numerous to mention. A company of nations like these, having a community of interests with ourselves, intimately connected with us by blood, and whose commercial prosperity is bound up with that of the mother country, must surely be more or less affected by whatever happens to the original stem, the parent of them all? And, in the face of facts like these, it is sought to cram down the selfish doctrine that our chief, if not only concern, lies in the narrow field of domestic policy, applicable only to England, Scotland, and Ireland. Strange that those who discard such parochial views of England's position and rightful sphere of influence should be taunted with being the enemies of their country, inspired only with a love of power and lust of territory.

The question of the future of our country has unhappily been made a personal controversy. History strangely repeats itself. For the last few years, like Israel of old, the people have been divided, some shouting themselves hoarse in favour of Tibni, and the others being equally vociferous in favour of Omri. We have attempted to point out the immense interests to be conserved, and the responsibilities to be borne by England as a consequence of her unparalleled empire. It is not difficult to see that an insular policy must ignominiously fail to meet these. The stale platitudes, and the false economical theories by which it is sought to enforce such a view, are, when duly tested, "as the apples of the Dead Sea shore, turning to dust between the lips, and choking us with their pestilent rottenness."

Our readers, no doubt, clearly see our Sunderland friend's "Identity" points. They are, shortly stated, these:—

1. That the British Empire is "growing wondrously," "like a grain of mustard seed." This our Lord likened to "the kingdom of heaven" (Matt. xiii. 31, 32). The British Empire thus is destined to fill the earth like Daniel's kingdom of Israel—the true "kingdom of heaven," whose throne is "Jehovah's" (1 Chron. xxix. 23; Dan. vii. 27; Psa. cxlviii. 14).

2. That British possessions belt the earth; which was to be Israel's destiny (Deut. xxxii. 9).

3. That we have all places of power and influence abroad; Israel's Gates, in fact (Gen. xxii. 17).

4. That the Empire is a "company of nations." The promise to Jacob's seed—therefore describing Israel (Gen. xxxv. 11).

Digitized by Google

5. That for the last few years our people have been divided, and have acted like "Israel of old." Being Israel, nothing else was to be expected! On the whole, the Sunderland Daily Post is a satisfactory acquisition to Identity journalism, and we are glad to welcome it. If its editor writes in ignorance of our subject, then he is a splendid blind witness!

THE PROMISES AND BLESSINGS.

By Thomas Bales.

PART I.

The distinction between Israel and Judah being sharply drawn in Scripture, we have to consider the promises and blessings in order to prove our Identity with the former. I will, therefore, turn at once to the promises by God addressed to Abraham:—

"And I will make of thee a great nation, and I will bless thee, and make thy name great; and thou shalt be a blessing: and I will bless them that bless thee, and curse him that curseth thee: and in thee shall all families of the earth be blessed" (Gen. xii. 2, 3).*

"And I will make thy seed as the dust of the earth: so that if a man can number the dust of the earth, then shall thy seed also be numbered" (Gen. xiii. 16).

"And He brought him forth abroad, and said, Look now toward heaven, and tell the stars if thou be able to number them: and He said unto him, So shall thy seed be" (Gen. xv. 5).†

"As for Me, behold, My covenant is with thee, and thou shalt be the father of many nations—or the father of a multitude of nations. Neither shall thy name any more be called Abram, but thy name shall be Abraham; for a father of many nations have I made thee. And I will make thee exceeding fruitful, and I will make nations of thee, and kings shall come out of thee. And I will establish My covenant between Me and thee and thy seed after thee in their generations for an everlasting covenant, to be a God unto thee and to thy seed after thee" (Gen. xvii. 4—7).

"And God said unto Abraham, As for Sarai thy wife, thou shalt not call her name Sarai, but Sarah shall her name be. And I will bless her, and give thee a son also of her: yea, I will bless her, and she shall be a mother of nations (or become nations); kings of people shall be of her" (Gen. xvii. 15, 16).

"By Myself have I sworn, saith the Lord, for because thou hast done this thing, and hast not withheld thy son, thine only son: That in blessing I will bless thee, and in multiplying I will multiply thy seed as the stars of the heaven, and as the sand which is upon the seashore; and thy seed shall possess the Gate of his enemies; and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed; because thou hast obeyed My voice" (Gen. xxii. 16—18).

God's covenant with Abraham was established in Isaac, (Gen. xvii. 19, 21; Rom. ix. 7). Accordingly, we find Isaac addressed thus in Gen. xxvi. 3—5:—

"Sojourn in this land, and I will be with thee, and will bless thee; for unto thee, and unto thy seed, I will give all these countries, and I will perform the oath which I sware unto Abraham thy father; and I will make thy seed to multiply as the stars of heaven, and will give unto thy seed all these countries; and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed; because that Abraham obeyed My voice, and kept My charge, My commandments, My statutes, and My laws."

Again in the 24th verse of the same chapter:—

"And the Lord appeared unto him the same night, and said, I am the God of Abraham thy father: fear not, for I am with thee, and will bless thee, and multiply thy seed for My servant Abraham's sake."

It is worthy of note, too, that when Rebekah left her father's house to become Isaac's wife, her blessing thrilled with the tenor of inspiration:—

"Be thou the mother of thousands of millions, and let thy seed possess the gate of those which hate them" (Gen. xxiv. 60).

Of Isaac's sons, God decreed the elder should serve the younger, who, in fact, secured the birthright and the blessing recorded in Gen. xxvii. 27—29; and agitated as Isaac was by Jacob's cruel deception, he revoked not one word of blessing; but rather cried, "Yea, and he shall be blessed." And when through Rebekah's solicitude, Jacob left his home, he received from his father yet another blessing (Gen. xxviii. 3, 4). Then, self-exiled, he journeyed towards Haran, and, laying down to rest, received in splendid vision, this word of promise:—

"I am the Lord God of Abraham thy father, and the God of Isaac: the land whereon thou liest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed: and thy seed shall be as the dust of the earth, and thou shalt spread abroad (or break forth) to the West, and to the East, and to the North, and to the South: and in thee and in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed" (Gen. xxviii. 13, 14).

Years after, through wrestling intently, Jacob won a blessing, and thenceforth became Israel; so in Gen. xxxv. 11, 12, God calling him by that name, said unto him:—

"I am God Almighty: be fruitful and multiply; a nation and a company of nations shall be of thee, and kings shall come out of thy loins; and the land which I gave Abraham and Isaac, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed after thee will I give the land."

This was the last promise vouchsafed to Israel, and the last personally conveyed by God; and since we read in Exodus iii. 15, "His name for ever," "His memorial unto all generations," is "the Lord God of your fathers, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob," it will be well to examine His everlasting covenant with them, and summarise His irrevocable promises to them. Their seed was to become so vast a multitude as to be innumerable; a great nation, and a company or multitude of nations. Their seed was to have the land of Canaan, a line of kings, the power of extension, dominion over other nations, possession of the gate of their enemies. Their seed was to be a blessing to all the families of the earth.

Now to fix these promises with precision. To do so we must pass by Joseph's chequered career, though he was, indeed, "lord over his brethren," until we read of him standing, with his two sons, by the bed of aged Israel. Then, Scripture tells us, Israel claimed Joseph's sons in place of his eldest two dishonoured sons (Gen. xlviii. 5), "As Reuben and Simeon, they shall be mine." Therefore to them would necessarily descend the promises he had received from God and his fathers. To make this clear, he added (in the next verse), "And thy issue, which thou begettest after them, shall be thine." So, also, in blessing them, when "guiding his hands wittingly," and preferring Ephraim the younger, he exclaimed:—

"God, before whom my fathers Abraham and Isaac did walk, the God which fed me all my life long unto this day, the Angel which redeemed me from all evil, bless the lads; and let my name be named on them, and the name of my fathers Abraham and Isaac; and let them grow into a multitude in the midst of the earth—or as fishes do increase" (Gen. xlviii. 15, 16).

In the 19th verse, we find Manasseh was to become a great people; but Ephraim was to become a multitude, or fulness of nations.

The last scene in Israel's life is the solemn one just previous to his death, when all his sons were gathered round him to learn that which should befall them in the latter days. And here no one can fail to notice the promises given to Judah and to Joseph. To the other brethren were addressed minor blessings; but these two received transcendent blessings—the former, the

* Gen. xviii. 18; Gal. iii. 8. † Ex. xxxii. 13; Num. xxiii. 10.

Digitized by Google

promise of the Messiah, and the chief temporal power until His advent; the latter, the promise of both spiritual and temporal blessings beyond conception, for (Gen. xlix. 26) "The blessings of thy father have prevailed above the blessings of my progenitors unto the utmost bound of the everlasting hills: they shall be on the head of Joseph, and on the crown of the head of him that was separate from his brethren." Verily, Joseph's dreams were realities. "Lord over his brethren" in his own day, the eventual supremacy was his for ever, for the Word of inspiration had thus declared. The promise of Messiah was expressly made to Judah,* but Israel, as the grand colonising, pushing, extending, dominant nation, was as expressly chosen to propagate His name. Facts confirm my view. There is not now one land where Messiah's name is not preached. Judah has not published His name, therefore, Israel must have; for it was in Isaac's seed all the families of the earth were to be blessed; and, as we have seen, Ephraim and Manasseh became His by special adoption. Let it not be forgotten, however, their glory was to be paramount in Messianic times. "Thou art My servant, O Israel, in whom I will be glorified" (Isa. xlix. 3).

(To be continued).

THE FUTURE OF ENGLISH.

MR. E. B. NICHOLSON, M.A., the librarian of the London Institution, has delivered a lecture on this subject to its members under the title, "English Pronunciation—its Present Tendencies, and Their Future Results."

He first pointed out that English being, like nearly all other European tongues, only a dialect of a dead tongue once spoken in Middle Asia, had now been changing for more than 3,000 years. Surveying the causes which broke up the dead mother speech into Sanskrit, Greek, Latin, English, &c., he pointed out that the chief of them was laziness, influenced by diversities of climate and food, which, by causing changes in the organs of speech, made some sounds easier and some harder. He then sketched the working and results of the same cause on English from the seventh to the middle of the eighteenth century, and went on to show in detail that great vowel and consonantal changes had been going on ever since the latter time; change was unceasing, and literature had proved helpless to stop it.

Having described the phases of Colonial English, he said that English must be expected in time to break up into European, American, Australian, New Zealand, Indian, and African varieties, which would become distinct languages. There was only one way to prevent this—by setting a standard pronunciation, and having it taught in every English school. Such a standard could only be settled by an authority commanding higher and more general respect than any now existing; and the lecturer urged the formation of an English academy, composed of the leading philologists, speakers (whether in Parliament, the bar, the pulpit, or on the stage), writers, and educationists, a body whose judgments would have all the weight needed. Such an academy would also deal with the coming question of spelling, and might exercise a decisive influence in favour of a pure English as against a Romance and Latin style.

Phonetic spelling, though rational and inevitable, ought to be preceded by uniformity of pronunciation, or English would at once be broken up into written as well as spoken dialects; but if the two reforms went hand in hand, the only rule for spelling would be pronunciation, and the only rule for pronunciation spelling. The result of such uniformity would be that the English race, holding the three great emigrant-fields of the present and future—North America, Australasia, and South Africa—which would one day be occupied by 1,000,000,000 inhabitants of European descent, would in the end give the world a universal speech, which would be the surest pledge of universal harmony and progress."

We see here, 1st, that Mr. Nicholson anticipates for the Anglo-Saxon races nearly what God promised to Israel—that is, a population of "thousands of millions" (Gen. xxiv. 60; Deut. i. 11); 2nd, that, in the end, English will be "the universal language." No doubt! for the language must follow the race, and the race is to rule the world (Dan. vii. 18, 22, 24).

* Gen. xlix. 10.

Review.

Horæ Propheticæ. A Commentary on the Prophecies Concerning the Ten Tribes of Israel. Exegetical and critical. By the Rev. H. Marriott, M.A. Vol. I. Price three shillings. W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, London, E.C., and I. E. Chillcott, 26, Clare-street, Bristol.

FIRST NOTICE.

WE are very glad the commentary in question has been published. It is the first work of the kind which has appeared, meant for the use of Anglo-Israelites, and written distinctly on the lines we have always contended for in the BANNER. The name, character, and linguistic ability of the author—lately a missionary to the Jews, and well versed in the Hebrew Scriptures—are sufficient guarantees that the work has been well and carefully executed. We are sure no Identity library can be complete without a copy of this little volume, and we trust no Israelite will fail to procure and read it. Once in hand, we are confident it will not be put down till its 224 pages have been perused. The work does not profess to be a consecutive commentary on the Bible; it rather takes up particular subjects and passages, which are dealt with and explained in a way to satisfy the learned Israelite and Hebraist, to convince those who have not got beyond the border-land of the half-convinced, and to interest intensely those to whom the subject of our Identity is new.

The book, after a capital preface, opens, for instance, with a chapter dealing with Shem, and makes Gen. ix. 26, 27, clear to all but the wilfully blind, by showing that Jehovah is "the God of Shem," and "dwells" also in "the tents of Shem," but not in those of Japheth. Chapters on "The Blessed in Abraham," and "The Blessed in Jacob" follow, proving that as "supplanters" we British are the seed indicated.

The fourth chapter takes the view we cannot understand how any Israelite can reject—namely, that "the bride of the Lord is none other than the seed of Ephraim, Benjamin, and Manasseh"—the British and American nations. Many beautiful thoughts are embodied in Mr. Marriott's chapter on "The Bride," which we trust our readers will study for themselves. In chapter v., he proves that Israel's conversion, so as to be recognised as "a Christian nation," is to be before restoration to the land. He depends on the true reading of Ezekiel xxxvi. 24, 25, 33, for that view. Holding this, and on such just grounds, we cannot understand the author's opinions expressed at pages 112—114, chapter xiv., that after the Tribes are restored, and Russia has invaded our land (in A.D. 1980, as he supposes), the state of England, morally and religiously, will be just what it is to-day!—"ripe for the visitation Messiah has in store for those dwelling carelessly in the isles" (Ezekiel xxxix. 6).

We should be sorry to concur in this view if our author holds it. We rather incline to the meaning of Ezekiel xxxix. 6, which the Rev. Mr. McIntosh expounded for us so well at page 409, BANNER, No. 50, vol. i. We fail also to see how the express words of Jer. xxxi. 33, and Heb. viii. 10, conferring the outpouring of God's Holy Spirit on the whole race of the Ten Tribes, "from the least of them to the greatest of them," can be held to mean only "a remnant out of them" destined to be restored to Palestine. Chapters on Ephraim, The Bow, The Wild Olive Tree, Dan, Our Later Ancestors, The Wilderness, The Stone of Israel, Judah, The Mighty One, The Mountain, with many other topics, are ably and originally treated in the pages before us, on which we cannot now spare space to comment. They are all worthy of study, and that study we are sure will reward the attentive reader.

We find that Mr. Marriott still holds, and freely expresses, strong opinions on the subject of the Rev. J. B. Clifford's late pamphlets against our Identity and its supporters. Their reiteration may seem to some an objection, but when we remember the character of this rev. opponent's attacks, their bitterness and fierceness, we for one do not deem the Rev. Mr. Marriott has erred at all in pointing his arguments by reference to objections as vain as they were futile, and painful to all right-minded men.

Digitized by Google

We have said enough, we hope, to induce our friends to consult Mr. Marriott's pages, and we trust that he will, ere long, bring out his second volume, and also find that the small edition of the first he has published is far under the requirements of his many readers. We wish his work God's blessing, for it seems to us to have especially for its object "God's glory."

(To be continued.)

Correspondence.

"THE TRIBE OF BENJAMIN."

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—It has been remarked—regarding Christ's saying that the "Jews" should be "carried captive into all nations, and Jerusalem trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled"—that since the first part of His declaration has received literal fulfilment, it is only natural that with the "fulness of the Gentiles," at the time appointed, they will be gathered together—will literally return and re-occupy their land. I have asked myself, Would it not be precisely the same respecting the "Tribe of Benjamin?" They were left with Judah for three special purposes, upon completion of which it would be most reasonable to expect that, having finished their work, they should "return unto their brethren, the children of Israel" (Micah v. 3).

1 Kings xi. informs us that "Benjamin" was given to Judah for David's sake, Jerusalem's sake, and to be a "light." It was decreed to David that his seed should reign over "Israel" for ever; therefore, when the Ten Tribes were deported into Assyria, Benjamin was left to represent Israel, so that for "David's sake" his seed should reign over Israel. But his seed regnant was cut off, and the kingdom destroyed by the dethronement of Zedekiah; but his daughters were miraculously preserved to furnish kings from David's seed, for future generations; but so far as Benjamin was concerned, their purpose was accomplished. The second cause why they were selected, was for "Jerusalem's sake"—the city which God had chosen.

Well, since one Tribe had to be taken out of all the Tribes of Israel for Jerusalem's sake, it would undoubtedly be that Tribe within whose territory that city lay—which was Benjamin.

So much for their second mission, and they might have escaped at the time that Nebuchadnezzar utterly destroyed Jerusalem (since their presence did not save it from destruction), if they had not had another function to perform, and if not then, most certainly at a later period when the Romans compassed the city, and all hopes of preserving it had vanished. But their third, and last, and most glorious mission, was to be a "light." Christ said He was "the light of the world," and St. John said that "Christ was the true light;" therefore, when they had welcomed Him, and received Him gladly, and had become in themselves through Him, a "light" to others, it was their time to break away from Judah, and join their lost brethren in the "isles afar off."

F. W. PHILLIPS.

Birmingham.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—The note of the editor of the Sunderland Daily Post in to-day's BANNER, suggests to me that your readers might like to see the result of as literal as possible a translation of a few passages from Hebrew into English, the exact order of the words in the original being preserved, the various words which translate one word in Hebrew being written close together with dots between them, and the hyphen being employed where the thing corresponding to it occurs in the Hebrew.

The Hebrew language uses often before the objects of verbs an unemphatic demonstrative particle אֵת, eth, which is left untranslated in English versions. In order that no Hebrew word may be omitted in the English, I have ventured to represent this by "THIS," to distinguish it from the ordinary demonstrative represented by "this." In rendering some single words of Hebrew presenting more than one idea, I have not expressed the ideas in the exact order in which they are placed in the original—as for instance, in verbs having their pronominal inflexion at the end, I have put it at the beginning:—The Hebrew says, "Sworn·have·I," but I put it, "I·have·sworn." So with the affixes to nouns:—The Hebrew says, "Seed·thy," "brother·his." I translate, "Thy·seed," "his·brother." With this exception I have preserved the exact order in which not only the words, but the ideas, succeed each other in the Hebrew.

Yours truly,

C. W. HICKSON.

September 24, 1879.

GENESIS xii. 2, 3:—And·I·will·make·thee into·nation great, and· I·will·bless·thee, and·I·will·make·great thy·name; and·be·thou a· blessing. And·I·will·bless them·blessing·thee, and·them·vilifying· thee I·will·curse; and·they·shall·be·blessed (here the passive conjugation is used, not the reflexive, as in Genesis xxii. 18) in·thee, all families of·the·earth (17 words in Hebrew).

GENESIS xxii. 16—18:—And·he·said, by·me I·have·sworn, is·the· oracle·of·Jehovah: that because that thou·hast·done THIS·the· thing the·this and·not hast·held·back THIS·thy·son, THIS·thine· only·one; that·blessing I·will·bless·thee, and·multiplying I·will· multiply THIS·thy·seed as·stars of·the·heavens, and·as·sand which upon·shore of·the·sea; and·shall·seize thy·seed THIS gate of·his· enemies. And·shall·bless·themselves (or shall·account·themselves· blessed. Compare "bless·himself," Deut. xxix. 19, where the same conjugation of the verb is employed, the reflexive conjugation) in· thy·seed, all nations of·the·earth; because, that thou·hast· obeyed my·voice (46 words in Hebrew).

GENESIS xlviii. 19:—And·he·refused his·father, and·he·said, I know, my·son, I·know; also·he, he·will·be·into·a·people, and· also·he, he·will·be·great; and·yet his·brother the·little·one shall· be·great more·than·he, and·his·seed shall·be fulness·of·the·nations —of which the correct Greek would be, τὸ πλήρωμα τῶν ἐθνῶν, employed by St. Paul in Romans xi. 25, and translated in our version, "the fulness of the Gentiles" (22 words in Hebrew).

DEUTERONOMY xv. 6:—For·Jehovah thy·God blesseth·thee, as· that he·spake·to·thee: and·thou·shalt·cause·to·borrow·upon·security nations many, and·thou not shalt·borrow·upon·security: and·thou· shalt·rule over·nations many, and·over·thee not shall·they·reign (19 words in Hebrew).

PSALM ii. 8:—Ask·thou from·me, and·I·will·give nations, thine· inheritance: and·thy·possession, ends·of·the·earth (8 words in Hebrew). (Compare the grammatical structure of the first half of the following verse in Isaiah.)

ISAIAH iii. 4:—And·I·will·give children, their·princes; and·babes shall·rule·over·them (6 words in Hebrew).

EZEKIEL xxxvii. 19:—Speak to·them thus·saith Adonai Jehovah; behold, I taking THIS·stick of·Joseph, which in·hand· of·Ephraim, and·Tribes of·Israel his·companions, and·I·put with· them upon·it THIS·stick of·Judah, and·I·make·them into·stick one, and·they·shall·be one in·my·hand (30 words in Hebrew).

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—The Identity and consequent recovery of the Lost Tribes of Israel is a subject, in fact it is the tenor and hinge, upon which the Holy Scriptures turn, notably in the Psalms of David. The great poet makes the subject literally the "burden of his song," as in reading them (bearing in mind the Identity question) one must be struck with the constant allusion to the nation of Israel being favoured above all nations. Psalm lxxxix., beginning at verse 16, is a remarkable instance. Of course, verse 37, to the end, has reference individually—viz., to his (David's) own deplorable sin, for which he was sincerely penitent. In contributing these few thoughts, I am guided by the ardent desire for the success of our great and glorious cause.

Believe me, dear sir,

Yours very sincerely,

A CONSTANT READER.

31, Huntley-street, Bedford-square, London,
August 7, 1879.

NOTICE.—Papers by W. Mellor, J. Featherstone, and others will appear in our next. Two valuable articles by Piazzi Smyth have been received for publication in due course, and one by William Rowbottom, all of which will be issued as soon as space can be found for them.—ED.

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements

(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O.O payable at Ludgate-circus.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed :—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

BANNER FREE CIRCULATION FUND. Subscriptions, which are much needed, will be received by R. Fergusson Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, to whom applications for FREE GRANTS should be made.

ANGLO-ISRAEL SERVICES will be conducted (D.V.) on SUNDAY NEXT, at BARNSBURY HALL, Barnsbury Street, Islington, by Rev. H. MARRIOTT, M.A. (Late Missionary to the Jews at Tanjier). Hour of worship, 3 p.m.

NEW PAMPHLETS.

Price 4d., post free 5d.

JAPHETIC OR SEMITIC: WHICH ARE WE?

BY CAROLINE PEARSE.

Showing the different character of the promises and blessings, and chastisements foretold as destined for the two Houses of Israel and Judah, and consequently the different careers it was foretold they would accomplish.

Now ready, price 2d., post free 2½d., in neat coloured cover.

AMMI; OR, THE CHOSEN PEOPLE,

BY MISS BIRD.

Tracing the descent of the British people from Abraham, the "friend of God," and showing that true science, history, philology, and ethnology, are on the side of the Identity of the Anglo-Saxon race with the Ten Lost Tribes.

In neat coloured cover, price 2d., post free 2½d.

BLESSINGS AND CURSES, AND THEIR RELATION TO ISRAEL AND JUDAH. By F. W. PHILLIPS, of Speedwell-road, Birmingham.

Price 2d. Post free 2½d.

MANASSEH AND THE UNITED STATES. An important Essay delivered before the "Lost Israel Identification Society," by the Rev. JOSEPH WILD, D.D at Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, New York.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet Court, Fleet Street; and may be had, by ordering, of any bookseller.

Price One penny, post free 1½d. One dozen copies, post free 1s. 100 copies 6s., post free 7s.

THE IDENTITY OF THE BRITISH NATION WITH THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. THE CLUE TO THE EASTERN QUESTION. By C. W. E.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

New and Revised Edition, Price 6d. Cloth, gilt, 1s.

THE NEW OLD STORY, with an Introduction to a Marvellous Puzzle. The Story gives a sketch of the History of the Hebrews, shewing distinctly the difference between the Two Nations Judah and Israel, the latter being the British. The Story also tells of the Great Pyramid, and explains how its wonderful meaning can be, as it is only understood by measurement. An Appendix explains "The Eastern Question." The Story is written with great simplicity, and interests young children. By A E I, Author of "The Answer to the Eastern Question."

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C. W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

Third edition, ninth thousand. Price 6d., post free 7d limp cloth 1s.

HISTORY OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL: HOW THEY WERE LOST AND HOW THEY WERE FOUND. Told for the Children by PHILO-ISRAEL.

NEW BOOKS.

NEW WORK BY DR. WILD.

NOW READY, price 3s., post free 3s. 4d. Handsome cloth, gilt, printed on toned paper and illustrated.

THE LOST TEN TRIBES, AND 1882.

BY THE

REV. DR. JOSEPH WILD, Of Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Printed and published by ROBERT BANKS, RACQUET COURT, FLEET ST., LONDON, E.C.

And may be had, by ordering, of any Bookseller.

PHILO-ISRAEL (in the BANNER) says:—"We have much pleasure in directing attention to this handsome Identity volume. It contains twenty discourses of the well-known American divine, Dr. Joseph Wild, of Brooklyn, N.Y. We are glad to find from these discourses that Dr. Wild is quite one with us on this side the water with most, though not all, the views we entertain on our great and glorious subject. . . . We promise our readers that if they procure this work, and will peruse it, they will find 'our Identity' discussed in a clear, novel, racy, and 'American' point of view, which is sure to interest, sure to be instructive, and may lead the thoughtless and inquiring to pursue the investigation till possibly conviction may be the result."

EXTRACT FROM PREFACE:—

The main idea I wish to convey in this book, is that God is conducting His Providence through His ancient chosen people, Israel, whom I believe are found in the Saxon race. And His throne on earth, through which flow the purposes of Providence, is David's throne, which I believe to be at present the English throne. Queen Victoria (and God bless her) I believe to be of David's seed. The United States fulfils the rôle of the Tribe of Manasseh. Therefore, to understand the prophecies, Providence, and the present movements of nations, as well as the future lot and destiny of each, we must read the Scriptures in this light. God has made the children of Israel and throne of David His executive, in time, on earth. They are His executive for civilisation, evangelisation, order, and conquest. Through them God will conquer the world to an universal peace. As Moses was to God, so is Israel. Moses being a Divine executor, was to the people a god—so is Israel to all mankind. Spiritual Israel will come through literal Israel.

For Contents see BANNER for October 1st.

HORÆ PROPHETICÆ: WHAT DOES THE BIBLE TEACH ABOUT GREAT BRITAIN? Establishing the Identity of the Anglo-Saxon Race with the House of Ephraim.

BY REV. H. MARRIOTT, M.A.

Price 3s. in paper, 4s. in cloth boards.

W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London. T. E. Chillcott, Bristol.

WORKS BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Price 2d., post free 2½d.

THE HISTORICAL, ETHNIC, AND PHILOLOGICAL ARGUMENTS in PROOF of BRITISH IDENTITY with the TEN LOST TRIBES OF ISRAEL, clearly and simply stated.

BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

CONTENTS:—Introduction—The Celts—Professor Rawlinson's Testimony—The Cymry—The Cimmerii—The Gimiri and Khumri—The Testimony of the Nimroud Obelisk—The Scythians—The Anglo-Saxons—Sharon Turner's Testimony—The Jutes and Angles—The Danes and the Normans—General Conclusions—Philology—The Welsh Language—The Rev. Canon Lysons' Testimony—Idiomatic Identity Between Hebrew and English—Tyndal's Testimony—The Tribe of Dan—The Irish Celts—Are the Continental Nations Israelites?—Conclusions—Appendix.

Price 4d., post free 5d.

AN ELEMENTARY DIGEST or SKETCH OF THE CHIEF FACTS and TEACHINGS of the GREAT PYRAMID of EGYPT; adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific. By PHILO-ISRAEL; together with Original Papers by the following leading Pyramidists, republished mostly from the BANNER OF ISRAEL (by kind permission of the proprietor)—viz., Professor Piazzi Smyth, the Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A., Charles Horner, Esq., and Major H. A. Tracey, R.A. Being a pamphlet by five authors (a Pyramid number).

Now ready.

NEW AND ENLARGED EDITION OF COMING COLLISION BETWEEN ENGLAND AND RUSSIA. By an M.A. of Cambridge. Price 1s. The Appendix can be had for affixing to 1st Edition upon receipt of 1d. stamp.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick Lane, E.C.

NEW BOOKS.

A NEW TALE OF THRILLING INTEREST FOR YOUNG PEOPLE ON THE IDENTITY OF LOST ISRAEL.

Now ready, price 2s. 6d., post free 2s. 9d. Bound in handsome cloth, gilt, bevelled boards, gilt edges, and beautifully printed on toned paper.

THE SISTERS OF HARROWDALE RECTORY.

BY

MRS. M. A. SEARSON,

ILLUSTRATED WITH BEAUTIFUL DOUBLE-PAGE FRONTISPIECE.

Printed and Published by ROBERT BANKS, RACQUET COURT, FLEET ST., LONDON, E.C.

And may be had, by ordering, of any Bookseller.

CONTENTS:—

CHAPTER I.

Harrowdale Rectory. The Rector's Family. God's Own Architect. An English Parsonage. The Aged Grandmother. Hospitality to Strangers. Frances Farnwood. Restoration to the Promised Land. Discussion on "Our Identity."

CHAPTER II.

A Quiet Controversy. A God-given Dream. Guardian Angels. A Visit to Paradise. What Paradise is Like. The Occupation of Angels. Michael the Archangel. Before the Throne of God. Israel My Heritage. The Wondrous Love of Christ. Unfolding of Prophecy Concerning Israel. A Visit to Souls in Prison. The Wonders of God's Perfect Will. Hopeless Condition of Lost Souls.

CHAPTER III.

Mother's Dream. Old Mother Davis. The Village of Harrowdale Described. William Edwards the Miner. Working Men's Homes. The Miner and the Identification of Lost Israel. The Chariot Wheels of Israel. Discouragements Overcome. A Visit to Mrs. Bertram. Her Daily Life. Her Belief in the English being Lost Israel. The Sisters' Visit to Mrs. Bertram and Mother Davis. Dinner With Mother Davis. Mother Davis and the Lost Ten Tribes. God Faithful to His Promises. The Coming of Our Lord.

CHAPTER IV.

Visit of Aunt Winslow and Cousin Calvin to the Rectory. A Family Tea-party. An Anglo-Israel Meeting. Calvin and His Uncle. The Return to Palestine. Israel or Judah—Which? What the Bible Reveals. The Wanderings of Our Israelite Ancestry. The Second Coming of Christ. A Sunday Evening Identity Class. The Bible Appealed to.

CHAPTER V.

The Neighbouring Clergymen Visit the Rectory. A Mutual Understanding. Marion's Opinion of Cousin Calvin. Calvin's Opinion of His Cousin. A Sketch of Rural Life. Miss Stanmore. Matrimonial Mistakes. Marion's Firm Belief in Providence. Calvin's Engagement to Miss Stanmore. Remarks on Unequal Marriages. The Calm after a Storm. A Parable. A Pledge of Love. The Parable Explained.

CHAPTER VI.

Calvin's Belief in our Identity. Captain Johnstone Introduced. Captain Johnstone and Miss Stanmore. An Open Avowal. Calvin Released from His Engagement. The Fever-Stricken Family. Calvin's Second Visit to Harrowdale. Sympathy and Help. A Visit to the Sick Chamber.

CHAPTER VII.

Illness of the Rector's Wife. Poor Susan. Mrs. Wildman's Trust in Her Saviour. "Going Home" in the Glorious Sunshine. The Heavenly Jerusalem. The Mother's Last Charge. Calvin and Marion. Good-bye.

This book will be read with interest by both young and old, and found well suited for a BIRTHDAY GIFT, SUNDAY SCHOOL REWARD, OR PRESENT.

Price 6d., post free 7d. New work on the Identity. Dedicated to all faithful ministers of Christ.

ISRAEL! AN EARNEST APPEAL FROM THE PEW TO THE PULPIT IN FAVOUR OF OUR IDENTITY WITH GOD'S ELECT PEOPLE, ISRAEL: Being a Letter from JOHN G. SHAW to his Pastor, Rev. Eustace R. Conder, of Leeds, with an Introduction and Notes; to be followed by a Review of Mr Conder's Papers on the Lost Tribes.

By the same Author.

"BRITAIN (OR ISRAEL)," with Map. Price 8d., post free 9d.

"CHRONOLOGICAL CHART." Price 3d., post free 3½d.

"GOD'S LOVE FOR ISRAEL." Price 1d., 3 copies sent post free for 3½d.

London: ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW, WEDNESDAY, OCT. 29, 1879. [All Rights Reserved.]

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. III. No. 149. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 5, 1879. [DOUBLE NUMBER, TWOPENCE.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
Recent Battles of Israel	437
The Joint Heirs	438
Progress in the United States	439
The Sabbath Sign Reserved for Israel Only	440
Progress. By F. H. S. Orpen	440
Israel's Great Gate—Constantinople. By R. F.	441
The French Metric System in America. By Piazzi Smyth	441
Flint Knives. By J. A. H.	442
Jehovah's Witnesses. By John T. Gort	443
Israel and Her Opponents. By W. R. Mellor.—Part I.	444
The Promises and Blessings.—Part II. By Thomas Bales	445
The Chronology of the Ante-Chamber Passage in the Great Pyramid. By J. F. Wood	446
Good Gifts for God's Glory. By L. P.	446
Israel's Russian Subjects in the Dominion of Canada	447
Progress in New Zealand, Tasmania, Adelaide, and British Guiana	448
Confederation in South Africa as Pictured in the Times	448
Israel's Battles.—No. XXI.—Vitoria	449
The Rev. C. W. Hickson on "Lost, Gentile, Christian, British Israel"	449
Review	450
The B.C. and A.D. Chronology	451
Correspondence	451
Lines to H.R.H. the Princess of Wales	451

RECENT BATTLES OF ISRAEL.

CHAR ASIAB AND THE CAPTURE OF CABUL.

THE critical operations which have broken the backbone of the Afghan rebellion deserve note in THE BANNER OF ISRAEL. They are decidedly Israelite in their character, have been entirely successful, and have (like Ulundi), we trust, ended this new phase of the Afghan war. It has indeed been almost a bloodless campaign, and the figure that bulks largest in the foreground of the picture is that of Gen. Sir Frederick Roberts, K.C.B. The points to which we desire notice to be drawn especially are these. Sir Louis Cavagnari and his brave escort were massacred on Sept. 3rd, 1879. On Oct. 6th, 1879, or in a little over a month, Sir. F. Roberts, with only one wing of his small but compact force of 5,000 men, wretchedly served in the matter of transport, traversed a hostile country for about 60 miles, from the summit of the Shutargurdan Pass to Cabul, fought a battle on Oct. 6th, beat his enemy, followed him up on the 8th, caused him to take to flight during the night of the 8th (as that same cowardly foe did once before at Ali Musjid), and on Oct. 10th entered the Bala Hissar or citadel of Cabul (publicly as conqueror on the 12th) with cavalry, infantry, and artillery, having utterly routed and dispersed the multitudes who were his enemy, having taken 200 cannon including a park of heavy artillery, and all with the expenditure of not more than fifteen lives! Let the reader notice the facts as they bear on the fight of Char Asiab on Oct. 6th, and he will see how entirely that was an Israelite battle, how openly the Lord fought on our side, and gave us against enormous odds the most wonderful victory. We have looked in vain for a grateful public recognition of God's hand in the events of these engagements, but have failed to see in any public journal, telegram, or message from the seat of war, any hint that God's good providence helped us, or that any but the human valour of the British troops got us the victory on that occasion! Be it ours, though all the world were silent, to raise the shout of "Hallelujah! Praise the Lord, O Israel!" for we believe if we were silent, the very stones would cry out and put us to an open shame!

Early on the morning of Tuesday, Oct. 6th, 1879, as Gen. Roberts with about 2,500 of his forces was approaching Char Asiab, four miles from Cabul, a cavalry reconnaisance discovered that the enemy was posted in great strength on the hills in his front. Meanwhile the heights round Roberts' force were crowned by Ghilzais ready to pour down on flanks and rear of the British force as soon as the troops were engaged in front; and to add to the risk, the rest of the little army, under Gen. McPherson, was still on the road from Zahidabad, and, it was reported, was likely to be attacked. Sir F. Roberts sent back aid in cavalry to McPherson, and prepared at once to do battle with the foe in front. Let the reader note the numbers. About 700 British troops were detailed under Major White, being a wing of the 92nd Highlanders, 100 of the 23rd Pioneers, three guns of the G Battery 3rd Brigade Royal Artillery, and two squadrons of the Punjab cavalry, whose duty was to drive the enemy posted on their own hills out of carefully selected and entrenched positions in front. Gallantly Major White did his work! His 700 men drove the enemy from hill to hill, charged and cut them up, and took 21 guns from them during the day! Meanwhile Gen. Baker, with the 72nd Highlanders, a wing of the 5th Ghoorkas, the 67th Foot, 100 of the 5th Punjab Infantry, the rest of the 23rd Pioneers, 4 mountain guns and 2 Gatlings, with cavalry in proportion (about 1,700 in all), went off to the left to turn the enemy's position on their proper right. The same result followed as in the front attack. Opposed here by about 7,000 Afghans posted in a very strong position, the gallant 1,700 British troops seized height after height aided by the artillery, and drove the flying foe pell mell through the gorge of the hills towards the Bala Hissar. Thus ended that gallant day's work.

The 2,400 British troops kept at bay the whole of the Ghilzai levies on the hill tops round them, beat the enemy in four hours from their entrenchments, one after the other in their front, captured their 21 guns, and sent them flying towards their stronghold behind the Bala Hissar, where preparations to attack them on Oct. 8th were completed by the evening. These operations cost us up to that point only 12 killed and 68 wounded. Not an officer was killed, and only three were wounded. "It was too dark for Baker's attack on the entrenchments which command the Bala Hissar, when all was ready at nightfall on Oct. 8th." Before daylight he was reinforced by the 67th Foot, 28th Native Infantry, 4 Horse Artillery guns (sent up on elephants). But lo! when morning broke on Oct. 9th, that happened again which took place before at Ali Musjid (see BANNER No. 101, vol. ii.). "The Lord laid the fear of us, and the dread of Israel upon all the land we trod on" (Deut. xi. 25), and caused the Afghans, like the Syrians of old, "to hear a noise of a great host" (of cavalry posted) "behind them; and they arose and fled in the twilight; and they left their tents, and their horses, and their asses, even the camp as it was, and fled for their life" (2 Kings vii. 6). The story of the Syrian panic and flight, the Lord has repeated twice for us in our contest with the Afghans since December last. We should be ungrateful indeed if we did not thank Him for His tender mercies to us, His people Israel, and call upon all our fellow-believers to shout the glad shout of Hallelujah! praise the Lord! And what has been the effect of all these successes? Let the Viceroy tell us. In his telegram of Oct. 13th, 1879, he reported:—

Digitized by Google

"The Afghan troops are completely routed.

"The tribes who assembled to fight us have returned home.

"The heavy battery coming up with the Khyber column is to go back to India, as the heavy guns presented by the British Government are in our possession complete.

"Roberts visited the Bala Hissar on the 11th, and will make his public entry into Cabul on Oct. 12th.

"The whole of the enemy's guns, 110 in number, besides the 35 or 40 in the Bala Hissar and Cabul have been captured."

In short, the enemy was hopelessly beaten on Oct. 6th, and on the night of the 8th, they fled in all directions so secretly and so fast that only a few were found and slain within 25 miles of Cabul on the 9th, when the cavalry chased them for 40 miles. They left all their 150 guns, their stores, camp and equipage, a rich booty to the handful of men who took the spoil for Israel.

Verily this was indeed an Israelite operation! We entered the country very few in number. A nation in arms rose up "incensed" against us. We were as among the beasts of the forest and in the midst of many people (Micah v. 8). With a choice of positions in their favour, the enemy were beaten by Gen. Roberts even with one hand, as it were; and once beaten, their boasted strength was found the abject coward's weakness. So God fought for Israel! He promised that if we "went through," we should, as a lion, and as a young lion, tread down, "tear in pieces," and there should "be none to deliver!" and so exactly the promise has been perfectly, truly, and literally fulfilled to us, and that because we are Israel.

God gave first to US, the British Lion, "The Gates" of Afghanistan, and then beckoned us onwards to take the land itself. We declined to keep what we had His commission thus to take, when lo! a chastisement was forthwith sent us, in the murder of our envoy and suite, which forced us forward to avenge that national insult. We have now the guilty capital and the murderous nation at our feet—facts which native prophecies predicted (see BANNER No. 141, page 369) in 1853.

We take the omen then to mean that as the natives themselves and all sensible men here now see, that the result must be to place Afghanistan, in some form or other, under "British protection," that Cabul itself, with the chief cities of the "treacherous" nation, must and will be held in force by the armies of Israel, and that, in fact, the thin red line will go round Afghanistan as round Zululand by-and-bye on our maps, to prove that the promise is receiving rapid fulfilment, to the effect that—"The kingdom and the dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High" (Dan. vii. 27), "Even to the children of Israel. Praise YE the Lord" (Psa. cxlviii. 14). We went out of our land whither the Lord our God called us to go, even to Afghanistan, to fight with our enemies there, and "He maintained our cause" (1 Kings viii. 44, 45). Our enemies came out against us in multitudes to swallow up our "few men of Israel" (Isa. xli. 14), but "they fled before us" from the Bala Hissar and Sharpur "seven ways" (Deut. xxviii. 7), or as the telegram from the Standard correspondent reported on Oct. 10th, 1879 (writing from the Bala Hissar): "The enemy's position was abandoned; the line of retreat was observed to be towards Ghazni, and they had been flying all night." And again: "The enemy were scattered on the hills, in all directions." Here, then, are literal facts answering to literal prophecies; and all fulfilled in the British nation.

We ask our opponents to ponder these things; and our fellow-believers to thank the God of Israel, in the Redeemer's name, for His glorious mercies to us, His hitherto ungrateful, undeserving, now, we hope, praising people (Psa. cl. 1—6).

THE JOINT HEIRS.

IN our fourth notice of the Rev. J. B. Clifford's first pamphlet, published on the 4th June, 1879, at p. 233, No. 127 of the BANNER, we stated our readiness to acquiesce in the Rev. C. W. Hickson's view of the vexed question connected with the interpretation of Psa. ii. 8, if a difficulty regarding the meaning of "The Lord's Inheritance" could be cleared up. A solution of the matter, as an alternative rendering, has occurred to our mind (suggested by John Butterworth's late paper), which we beg to place before our readers. It will, we believe, meet Mr. Hickson's criticism on the passage, by allowing its possible grammatical accuracy, while it satisfies our own views, which we are willing to that extent to modify, since it allows that, in the sense we now propose, the heathen are, in the verse in question, described as given to the Lord Jesus Christ, while they remain still the gift of the Lord to His heritage and His "own inheritance," Israel (in this case) of the Ten Tribes—the British (Psa. cvi. 40; Rev. ii. 26). Our suggestion takes the following form:—

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the appointed "Heir of all things," and by "inheritance" He hath obtained a more excellent name even than the angels (Heb. i. 2—4. "This is the Heir, let us seize on His inheritance"—Matt. xxi. 38).

2. As Heir of all things, He is "the appointed Heir" of the world He made, and of the heathen located in that world. (Adopting the Rev. C. W. Hickson's reading, we accept Psa. ii. 8 as our authority for this statement).

3. But "the Heir of the world" was also, by the solemn promise and oath of Jehovah; and, therefore, of the Lord Jesus Himself—"Abraham and His seed for ever" (Gen. xvii. 4, &c.; Rom. iv. 13).

4. Therefore, the Lord Jesus Christ, and "the seed of Abraham for ever," are "joint heirs" of the world—therefore of the heathen in the world.

5. But "the sons of God"—those "led by the Spirit of God"—being "children," are "heirs—heirs of God;" nay, they are "joint heirs with Christ" (Rom. viii. 17).

6. And "the sons of God"—those "led by the Spirit of God," those whom the great God Himself calls His "children," since He is a "Father to Israel, Ephraim being His first-born"—are Ten-Tribed Israel—the British (Hos. i. 10; Jer. xxxi. 9, 33).

7. Therefore Israel of the Ten Tribes, constituted children by grace, are "joint heirs with Christ"—"heirs of the world" and of the heathen in the world (Isa. liv. 3).

Digitized by Google

8. But how so? By gift—by grace! Christ having received the heathen as "His inheritance" by gift from the Father, when He ascended up on high and led captivity captive, did what? (Eph. iv. 8; Psa. ii. 8).

9. He gave "gifts" to men!—to "the men of His pleasure," to Israel, to "His inheritance," the Ten-Tribed people—to the British! (Eph. iv. 8; Luke ii. 14). Those gifts included "the heathen" (Psa. cxxxvi. 21, 22; Rev. ii. 26).

10. Hence Israel became "joint heirs with Christ" in the possession of those heathen; for the Lord, in His lovingkindness and tender mercy, died for His people, made the fulfilment of the promises to Abraham and his seed possible, received the "gift" of the heathen from the Father as "HIS inheritance," and then, as stated in Rev. ii. 26, 27, He "GAVE POWER" over the (Gentile) heathen to "him that overcometh" and "keepeth his works unto the end," even to Israel—the prevailing one with GOD AND MAN (Gen. xxxii. 28)—"that they may do to the heathen what Psa. ii. 9 and cxlix. 7, 8, both prescribe. The British alone fulfil this rôle.

11. But if the Lord Jesus and His people are "joint heirs" of the heathen—the One in heaven, the others as His instruments on this earth—they must be "ONE."

12. This the Lord Himself declares in Jer. iii. 14: "I am married to you," addressing Ten-Tribed Israel. They are thus His bride, His wife, His Church, His body, His people; while He is their Bridegroom, their Husband, their Head, their King (Rev. xxi. 9; Jer. xxxi. 32; Hos. ii. 16; Eph. i. 22, 23; Matt. ii. 6).

Finally. The Lord Jesus Himself, in John xvii. 20—22, asks for the believers in Him—the faithful ones (surely Israel now, and Judah by-and-bye—literal and spiritual Israel, too, if we will)—that they may be ONE with the Father and the Son, partakers of His glory, "one" in perfect union.

We are well aware that much that is stated above will be rejected by our opponents. But, to our mind, we see in this view a means whereby many difficulties of interpretation may be reconciled; and for each step of our reasoning we are sure we have firm Scripture warrant. Of the absolute union and Identity between Christ and His people (Ten-Tribed Israel now and Twelve-Tribed Israel at the last), over whom He comes to reign (Matt. ii. 6), between the spiritual House and the literal Israel according to the flesh, there are many proofs. Let the following suffice:—

1. The Lord died—Israel as a nation died (Matt. xxvii. 50; Ezek. xxxvii. 1—3; Hos. vi. 2).

2. The Lord was a "worm, and no man"—Israel is a "worm," and "few men" (Psa. xxii. 6; Isa. xli. 14).

3. The Lord was buried—so is Israel in her graves to-day (Matt. xxvii. 60; Hos. viii. 8; Ezek. xxxvii. 12, 13).

4. The Lord rose—Israel is destined to rise again as a nation blessed of the Lord (Matt. xxviii. 1—7; Hos. vi. 2).

5. The Lord is the Father—Ephraim-Israel is His first-born (Isa. lxiv. 8; Jer. xxxi. 9).

6. The Lord is the Husband—Israel is His wife (Isa. liv. 5).

7. The Lord is the Head—Israel is His body, the Church (Eph. i. 22, 23).

8. The Lord is the King—Israel His subjects (Micah v. 2).

9. The Lord is the Bridegroom—Israel is His bride (Hos. ii. 16—20; Rev. xxi. 9).

10. The Lord is the Shepherd—Israel is His sheep (John x. 16).

11. The Lord is the Heir—Israel is His joint heir (Psa. ii. 8; Rom. viii. 17).

12. The Lord is their GOD—Israel of the Twelve Tribes is His people (Jer. xxxii. 38).

We have said enough. Those who have regarded our views respecting "the gift" of the heathen to Israel (the Lord's "own" inheritance) as blasphemy, will not, we fear, be inclined to entertain more favourably the Rev. Mr. Hickson's opinion that, though the heathen are "given" to Christ as "His inheritance," Israel, as one with Christ, are, ipso facto, gifted with the dominion over the heathen, as events attest.

Whatever may be the result, we are glad to arrive at a conclusion very slightly at variance with what we originally held; if, as we hope it may, our friends who have differed from us hitherto, may now be led to join us in holding that Christ and His people Israel—the British—whom He comes to "feed" and to "rule," are in all things ONE, absolutely and for ever!

PROGRESS IN THE UNITED STATES.

WE have good news to tell our readers from America. It shall be told in the words of our informants, who, we are rejoiced to see, are as busy and as earnest as we are at home, in propagating the wonderful story that "Lost Israel is found" in the British Empire, and that lost Manasseh, too, is discovered in the United States. We wonder what extraordinary theory the opponents will now invent to explain this startling fact. Here is one of the most astounding, and to all appearance, palpable absurdities daily gaining ground, which declares that a nation "lost" fourteen centuries ago to all secular knowledge, and which for twenty-five centuries has been "cast adrift" from home and fatherland, has suddenly re-appeared in these last days as the two most forward, favoured nations of the earth. This theory is rejected by men of learning almost to a man. It is spurned by the enormous mass of the clergy, conforming and nonconforming, mostly with horror, indignation, and contumely. The bishops contemn it; dignitaries of the Church refuse to examine it; the clergy and ministers smile at, when they do not anathemize, the believers in this monstrous teaching; and the laity?—as yet, though they are in the majority of cases, rather uneasy, they are unable to embrace these new-fangled notions, even when they understand their drift. Yet in spite of these tremendous disadvantages—greater, we believe, than even those which accompanied the first preaching of the Gospel, when miracles, the outpouring of the Spirit, and the presence of the Divine Son of Man, all gave support and dignity to the Christian teaching—the Identity is making way in a manner which is itself miraculous, and ought to impress our opponents. Town after town in the British Islands has now its Israelite Association. Abroad, in the Colonial Empire, the cause is rapidly advancing. In Tasmania, a newspaper devoted to Identity teaching is doing a good work. In Canada "every township and every village" is declared by the Rev. Mr. Harding to have its cluster of believers; and now from America itself comes the following welcome news. Let our opponents attend to it.

A gentleman in Brooklyn, long accustomed to editorial labours, has been commissioned by the "Lost Israel's Identification Society" to establish the first newspaper in the States devoted to our views. "Avoiding all unprofitable speculations," he says, "it is our purpose to make known the fact that the Lost Tribes of Israel are Identical with and found in the English nation, and in the United States, as the Tribe of Manasseh." "We are not going into the publication of this magazine with the idea of making money. On the contrary, it will be a source of voluntary outlay to a few who feel the importance of giving a wider circulation to the literature bearing upon the Identity." "The magazine will be got out in excellent style, so far as its typography is concerned. It will consist of twenty-four quarto pages, very much after the style of the BANNER OF ISRAEL. I propose to quote very freely from your valuable paper, always, of course, giving you credit. We have no publication exclusively devoted to this subject in the United States. Hence, we shall have to draw very largely from the mother country for much of our information." We are to add that the new American organ is to be called by the happy title "Heir of the World," and that the editor can be found at the address, "260, Schermerhorn-street, Brooklyn, N.Y."

Digitized by Google

We do not add those pleasing words of kindness which our Brooklyn friend addresses to us personally, nor allude to the value he has set on an article promised from this side the water to his first number. This will appear as requested, in due course, and we ask our British friends to patronise this Manassite journal, recollecting it is the very first of its kind in the States, and from what we are going to add, promises to have soon, if properly maintained, a very large circulation both in America and in the Dominion of Canada. Our further remarks are taken from a letter sent us by our good friend the President of the "Brooklyn Lost Israel Identification Society." Mr. Ker writes to us to say (under date, Sept. 9, 1879): "On Sunday evening last we were favoured with a discourse on Canada, by our champion on this side the Atlantic" (Dr. Joseph Wild we presume). "We were delighted to hear from him that this question was being discussed in many parts of that Dominion. I myself look for great things this fall and winter. We are united, and all prepared to work in the glorious cause. We look in confidence to Israel's God to crown our efforts with success. Societies are springing up all through the States, and we hope to give a good account next spring."

Such are the good tidings our American Manassites send us to cheer us in our contention here. The Identity is spreading fast everywhere all over the American continent. Not only in Canada, but in the United States too, where the believers in these new views must submit, as the very first step in knowledge, to the fact, that instead of America being the first, she is after all the second nation in the world, and that the lately despised Britisher is indeed "greater than he" (Gen. xlviii. 19). Such is the fact. How can the opponents explain it all? Is all the world gone mad? Are the opponents only sane? and we who appeal to God's Word at every step "crazy maniacs" still? We think the "opposition" game is nearly played out, and that henceforth of Messrs. Cornall, Clifford, Walker, McClellan, Stanley, and our other opponents, we shall hear but little. Soon, indeed, we expect to greet them as open friends; when they may be sure we Israelites shall be only too glad to welcome them as brethren, and fellow-helpers. We shall as readily then accept their help and powerful aid in carrying forward our glorious cause as the Christian Church was, at last, eager and thankful to receive the co-operation and vigorous assistance of Paul, the once persecutor, reviler, and injurious, but then "the apostle of the Lord," "the teacher of the Gentiles," and the learned Hebrew casuist, who, taught by his Saviour, confounded all those who opposed the blessed Gospel that he preached at last so faithfully.

PROGRESS.

A FRAGMENT FROM KIMBERLEY, GRIQUALAND WEST, SOUTH AFRICA.

By F. H. S. Orpen.

"Very lately I, for the first time, saw Mr. E. Hine's book 'Lost Israel Found.' I was much struck by his chapter on the duty of Britain to trust, and not to make great warlike preparations. This truth has in this little province (Griqualand West, South Africa) received a remarkable proof. We had here no standing army of our own, and no garrison of British troops, when last year war and rebellion broke out. We had only a couple of corps of fancy volunteers; yet when the necessity for it came, we turned out 12 per cent. of our whole white population, beat the natives utterly wherever we met them, in whatever numbers, and lost only about 20 men killed. Besides that, we freed our own province from war, relieved the old mission station of Kuruman, conquered a whole country in extent equal to Great Britain, and sent hundreds of men to assist the Cape Colony, the Transvaal, and Natal. We did all this without asking the old country for a single shilling or a single soldier. It is true that towards the close of our war we were given the assistance of a corps of about 40 regular soldiers, whom we did not want, and that the Home Government paid to our credit some £250,000 for the expenses of the war. But had the Home Government waged that war herself, it would have cost England £2,000,000, and have lasted twice as long. No infantry regiments could have moved or lived where our mounted colonists, accustomed to what you would call 'deserts,' were quite at home and comfortable."

Note by the Editor.—Our readers perceive from the above interesting communication from Mr. Orpen, that the Cape Colonists, when confederation takes place, will be quite able and willing to defend themselves and their beautiful land from all local native enemies. "The conquest of a whole country as large as Great Britain," is an apt illustration of our often repeated motto, "How the empire grows!" It is enlarged by the stalwart arms and power of the Anglo-Saxon vigorous colonists who have gone out to possess the earth; and we may be sure that when confederation enables the South African States to combine their great strength, we shall never again hear of new Cetywayoes, or other such native monsters gaining head, to put in peril Israel's God-given supremacy; for the high-handed colonists may surely be trusted to safeguard their own homes, and to prevent the danger from native races ever becoming acute again.

THE SABBATH SIGN RESERVED FOR ISRAEL ONLY,

FOREIGNERS BEING OUR WITNESSES.

We have the strongest confidence in the sign of the Sabbath which God has put upon us, His people Israel, as the one which will open the eyes of vast masses of our people to the knowledge of our Identity with the Lost Tribes. The Sabbath was given by the Lord to His people as a sign "throughout their generations" (Exod. xxxi. 13—17; Ezek. xx. 12—20). It is one which is monopolised by the Jews and Anglo-Saxons only, identifying, and yet separating, them from each other, as Hebrews of the two Houses. Judah keeps hers on the 7th day; the British Ephraimite and American Manassite on the 1st, or Christian holy-day. But the Gentiles have not the sign, not being Israel; and the Lord has not put on them the obligation to keep the day holy, or to regard it as a mark of their Identity. When they come under the bonds of the Gospel of Christ, it is their privilege to use the day as one of holy rest; but even in this respect we see by the experience of German, French, Swiss, and Swedish Christians, that they keep it much less strictly than do British Israelites, and that the most rigid Sabbatarians of Germany and the Protestant continent think that their duty is done when only half the day is kept holy to the Lord. The law of God requires the day to be kept holy. Gentile Christians give the Lord half the day and use the rest for themselves. But they are not, we believe, penally responsible for these laches, because we hold that the institution was not given them as it was to Israel, as a binding obligation. But that they lose national, personal, and spiritual benefit by using the holy-day as they do, we do not doubt. "The International Society for Promoting the Better Observance of Sunday," held their second Conference at Berne during the week ended Sept 13, 1879, when the following remarkable discussion took place on "Sunday Observance." Its subject was:—

Sunday Work on Railways and in Public Offices.—Pastor Rohy, of Berne, enlarged on the advantages, as touching health and increased capacity for labour, which flow from the regular keeping of Sunday, and deplored the state of things in France and Austria, where Sunday as a time of rest can hardly be said to exist. Germany is almost as bad, there being in that country railway employés who have not had a free Sunday for ten years. It is the same in Continental Post-offices, where, in many instances, the employés are harder wrought than on any other day of the week. This is especially the case in Berlin, for a considerable portion of the population of the German capital being Jews, who refuse to receive their letters on Saturdays, the deliveries have, therefore, to be made on Sundays. The example of England and America in those matters was frequently mentioned with warm approval. It was stated that in the former country the number of trains run on Sundays is only 8,000 as compared with 36,700 on week days, while in America there are no fewer than 65 railways which run no trains whatever on Sundays. The Philadelphia Exhibition was rigorously closed on Sundays, while the Vienna Exhibition was invariably open, nevertheless the pecuniary result of the latter undertaking was in no respect more satisfactory than that of the former. After the reading of a report by M. Charlier, engineer of Lausanne, who called attention to the fact that there are 500,000 railway servants in Europe, the greater part of whom do not enjoy a single holiday from one year's end to another, the Conference passed a series of resolutions, the first of which was that railway accidents, being in great measure due to the continued strain on their faculties to which railway employés are subjected, by reason of the deprivation of a weekly rest day, it became the duty of the State to insist on the right of these men to the enjoyment of at least one free Sunday in two. It was further resolved to recommend railway companies entirely to close their goods offices on Sundays; to keep open their offices for the reception of urgent parcels until 9 a.m. only; to suspend altogether work of construction on Sundays, and to take into consideration the expediency of discontinuing the running of cheap trains on that day. So far as attendance and unanimity are concerned, the Conference seems to have been highly successful. Delegates were present from England, France, Scotland, Germany, Italy, and Sweden.

Digitized by Google

It will be thus seen that the foreigner himself admits that Sunday, as a time of rest, "can hardly be said to exist for France, Austria, or indeed Germany." In Italy, Spain, Greece, Sweden, and Denmark, we know matters are no better. In our own highly-favored land the Sabbath-keeping ways of the people, as well as those of America, were "warmly commended." We have read here in sundry journals that British railways desecrate God's day. On the continent they judge us more correctly and view our conduct more justly. In the matter of railway traffic, the Conference at Berne held that British Israel "keepeth Sabbath." On the whole we are satisfied that while our observance of the day of rest is marred and blotted by much that requires amendment, there are, nevertheless, no nations on the face of the earth, besides the Americans and the Jews, who can be said to keep the day holy according to the commandment, and who, therefore, have "The SIGN." Possessing it, we British are therefore Israel—of the Ten Tribes—and we rejoice and will rejoice therein! We wish the efforts of "The Sunday Observance Society" God speed; and, as in duty bound, shall do all that lies in our power to further their objects. Israel! bless the Lord for binding you to the Sabbath, and binding the Sabbath to you as your glorious God-given SIGN of your Identity with the Lost Ten Tribes!

ISRAEL'S GREAT GATE—CONSTANTINOPLE.

By R. E.

CONSTANTINOPLE is so often referred to in the BANNER as the "Gate of the world," as "Israel's Gate," that it may not be uninteresting to some readers of the BANNER to peruse the following description of the once Christian city, so graphically described by Dean Stanley in his "Eastern Church."

Speaking of the genius of Constantine in choosing Byzantium as the site of a great capital, the Dean says: "No city chosen by the art of man has been so well chosen and so permanent. Alexandria is the nearest approach. All the others erected by the fancy or policy of individual Sovereigns are miserably inferior, Berlin, Madrid, and even St. Petersburg. As his (Constantine's) conversion was ushered in by the story of a preternatural apparition, so was his choice of this, as it may well be called, predestinated capital. The situation is indeed unrivalled. It stands alone of the cities of the world, actually on two continents. It has the advantages of the confluence as of two rivers, and of a splendid maritime situation besides. It is impossible to look down from the Galata Tower on the complication of sea and land, island and mainland, peninsula and promontory, strait and continent, and not feel that the spot is destined to be, what it seems more and more likely to be, both historically and politically, the Gordian knot of the world. And this situation is further designed by nature, not merely for a great city, but for a capital of the most imposing aspect, nay, more, for a second Rome. As truly a city of the sea as any of the maritime cities of the West, it has the advantage of being raised aloft on a line of hills, towering high above the level waters of the Bosphorus. In the Apocalyptic vision of Babylon, which brings together in one the various images of earthly greatness, there are features taken from the ancient Tyre which are vainly sought in the old Rome beside the Tiber. Constantinople alone unites them all. Few would pretend to say that she was designed, however remotely, in the prophet's vision. But it is a proof of what she is, that she, and she alone, in her union of traffic, and ships, and splendour, and her seat of seven hills, comes up to the highest local images of earthly grandeur, as therein presented to our view."

With the history of the Eastern Church before us, we can understand the ambition of Russia to possess herself of a city, not only associated with her religion, but boasting a position "which appears," says Gibbon, "to have been formed by nature for the centre and capital of a great monarchy."

O Israel, thy God hath said, thou shalt possess thy possessions. He hath testified unto thee that thou shalt possess the remnant of Edom. Despise not His promises, but watch for the day that shall put thee in possession of the great Gate, the Gate of the Golden Horn, the Imperial Gate of Constantinople.

THE FRENCH METRIC SYSTEM IN AMERICA.

"The French Metric System; or, the Battle of the Standards." A Discussion of the Comparative Merits of the Metric System and the Standards of the Great Pyramid. By Charles Latimer, C.E. Printed by J. B. Savage, 65 and 67, Frankfort-street, Cleveland, Ohio, United States, North America.

AT last our brethren of Manasseh have got their eyes open to the efforts which are insidiously making there, as well as here—not by Government officials, not by manufacturers, not by the people, but by a dangerous class of political agitators, who endeavour day by day, and by any means, to get their country to suppress its ancient hereditary weights and measures, and take to those of the new and atheistic, or contra-theistic, French metric system instead.

And how does Manasseh express himself on so vital a point of his history and origin?

Just as might be expected of the sons of the Pilgrim Fathers. The Bible, with its inspired history of the past and prophecies of the future, is their rule of life in practice as well as theory. Wherefore first came out with trusty advice on this matter the Rev. Dr. Seiss, of Philadelphia, then Dr. Joseph Wild, Brooklyn, New York, and now more particularly, pointedly, and to this one metrical subject undeviatingly, appears an American of the Americans, Charles Latimer, of a most honoured name and descent, and himself specially prepared for the argument, being by profession a civil engineer, indeed Chief Engineer of the Cleveland and Ohio railway. This Charles Latimer, then, has just set forth to the public his views, beliefs, and reasonings on the weights and measures question for his country in an intensely written pamphlet entitled nearly as above.

Even by our enemies it is allowed that this subject is one where both the interests, and hitherto happily the acts, of the United States and Great Britain are identical; that those two countries form together "the Anglo-Saxon" (pity they did not say at once the Israelite) world, in excellent and necessary agreement with each other; but in opposition to all the Gentile nations with their Communistic French measures of the day. And not in ignorant opposition either, for in Washington as well as in London, agreeably we suppose with St. Paul's injunction, to try all things and hold fast only to that which is good, there has been a permissive use of the French metric system sanctioned by law; but in each Anglo-Saxon country the people have not responded. In each country the opinion of leading officials has been given against the innovation, and yet in each country a ring of individuals is found endeavouring to urge on their respective Governments to make the adoption of the French system penal and compulsory; though the people, and especially the poor who will suffer most, will have to be compelled "at the point of the bayonet."

Digitized by Google

And why should there be, asks Mr. Latimer, such ceaseless efforts of this agitating, under-hand working ring to get our ancient and hereditary measures abolished in favour of the bran-new French system? "If we look ahead, we can see no evidence of decay in our civilisation or prosperity, or diminution of our business, because we have not adopted it. Certainly our Centennial exhibited a most wonderful spectacle; and did we notice that the French were in advance of us? Is their flag seen in every port on the face of the globe because of the superiority of their measures? Is it not the 'Anglo-Saxon world' which is in advance to-day? What superiority or advantage can the French point to on account of their system? None whatever."

Then, after showing how "the ring" has been garbling evidence and misrepresenting facts before Congress, in order to fix the French system on the American people—and had almost succeeded in doing so before the said people were aware of the nature of the proposed change—the descendant of old Hugh Latimer breaks forth thus unexceptionably in an address to an Engineering Society in Boston :—

"Gentlemen, you may rely upon it that these pilgrim ancestors of yours are not resting easily in their graves on account of your action. They were sticklers for Magna Charta, they loved just weights and measures, and the words of John Quincey Adams, delivered in 1817, are exactly the words they would give you now. I beg you not to make the mistake of taking the advice of the young men (like those about Rehoboam) and ignoring the counsel of your fathers. Think for a moment. This French system came out of the 'bottomless pit.' At that time, and in the place whence this system sprang, it was hell on earth. The people defied the God who made them; they worshipped the goddess of Reason. In their mad fanaticism they brought forth monsters—unclean things. Can you, the children of the Pilgrim Fathers, worship at such a shrine, and force upon your brethren the untimely monster of such an age and such a place?

"Surely not.

"Say rather, 'O my soul, come thou not into their secret.'"

Such, then, is the front which Manasseh offers to the French metricalisers on one side; while on the other, gifted with excelsior proclivities of the highest, and never failing to look to the rock whence he was hewed, he is troubled at the medieval imperfections which have, in latter days, unavoidably injured the once perfect exactness of his own weights and measures, though given out as he believes originally by inspired men of the type of "an Enoch, a Seth, an Abraham, a Melchizedek, a Job." But "where shall he look to find the perfection of the past?"

He answers at once, "To the Great Pyramid of Ghizeh. For there have been found within that grand pillar of stone the standards of weights and measures, earth commensurable, and so assimilated to our own ancient hereditary system that it does seem as if the Almighty Himself had given them to us as an inheritance, to be kept precisely for the emergency of the present day and hour. The inch is there, the yard is there, the cubit or arm of twenty-five inches is there, our year is there, Christ is there, our past, our present, yea, perhaps our future."

"We say," continues Mr. Latimer, "there is a Divinity that shapes our ends, rough hew them how we may. Surely a Divinity directed the hand and inspired the mind that wrought the great seal of the United States, and more particularly its reverse, for what is that?"

A figure of the Great Pyramid, with its flattened top, and its mysteriously missing "topmost corner-stone" elevated above it in the sky, with the same Divine emblems which the New Testament attaches to that unique block.

"What other nation," demands Mr. L., "has such a seal?

"Will the Great Pyramid speak to those whose measures are not there? Will a symbolic stone speak its language to those who have thrown away the key—their tradition?

"The Pyramid speaks in inches. Will this be intelligible to those who have thrown away their birthright, and speak only in metres?

"What inheritance in the Great Pyramid have those nations or peoples who have thrown away their traditions—i.e., destroyed their old measures, and made it a penal offence to use any other than the French metric system."

But by all means let Ephraim get hold of Manasseh's own pamphlet, and the brothers who were both brought up within full view of the Great Pyramid ages ago, will find that their instincts and interests are still the same though spread through one hundred millions of souls.

PIAZZI SMYTH
(Astronomer-Royal for Scotland).

FLINT KNIVES.

By J. A. H.

IN the BANNER OF ISRAEL for April 3, 1878, there is a review by L. P., of the two pamphlets—"The Lost Tribes," by Rev. Professor Campbell, of Montreal, and "Anglo-Israel," by Mr. W. Greig—in which I have noticed the following paragraph :—

"Of the argument given by Mr. Campbell on circumcision, Mr. Greig says : 'With regard to the religious Identifications wanting to connect our nation with the Israelites, he (Professor Campbell) states that circumcision is found among Abyssinians, Caffres, Malays, and other people, but never was known to Saxons or Gaels.'"

I don't think it seems to strike L. P. that it is not impossible that some of the earlier Israelitish settlers in Europe may, in their heathen state, have brought this rite with them from the East. There seems to me to be no difficulty in the supposition, and the establishment of this fact would solve one of the problems which, to this day, puzzle scientific men.

There is a very interesting article in the "Quarterly," vol. cxxviii., page 434 ("A Review of Pre-historic Times," by Sir J. Lubbock), in which the reviewer proves the fallacy of the Danish theory, which classifies all relics of antiquity by the stone, the bronze, and iron ages. After showing that carven, as well as rude stone monuments and tumuli are found evidently of the Christian period in India, Burmah, and Denmark, he remarks that, "so far as evidence at present extends, it seems to show that the practice of raising mounds and erecting megalithic monuments increased rather than diminished, from the Christian era till the time when the nations of the North and West of Europe were converted to Christianity."

"Both Bertram and de Bonetellin seem to have arrived at the conclusion that the Dolmen builders came from the North of the Black Sea to Scandinavia, along the route said afterwards to have been followed by the historic Woden, thence migrated into the British Isles, into France, thence to Africa."

Digitized by Google

"If a straight line is drawn from Narbonne on the Mediterranean to Morlaix, in Brittany, it will pass through the centre of the Dolmen country, in France." "Who were these people? Cæsar and Strabo mention Gaul as divided into three parts, the inhabitants of which were totally distinct; they are known as Belgæ, Celts, and Acquitanians, the latter bearing more resemblance to the Spanish Iberians than to the Celts. These Acquitanians seem to have carried with them the Dolmen, or sepulchral mound, and in these dolmens have generally been found implements of bronze and bone, but with them invariably some rude flint knives."

At page 452 the reviewer remarks, "When we ask why the Dolmens are all pre-historic, we are told that none of them contain iron, few bronze implements, and most of them only bone and stone; all, therefore, must be pre-historic or before the Christian era. It is in vain to suggest that their builders may have thought bone and stone would be quite as well suited for service in Walhalla as the more perishable metals, or rather that their heirs may have concluded that the precious metal implements would be of use to those that remained behind, and the cheaper ones quite good enough for the dead. This may have been selfish and unreasonable, but men do such things; it was equally unreasonable in Zipporah and Joshua to perform the rite of circumcision with flint implements long after the use of bronze and iron was familiarly known; and as strange, as the Septuagint adds, that the Israelites should have buried with Joshua in his grave the stone knives which were used on that occasion. Be this as it may, we have one instance in which flint was used long after iron was known, and one tomb in which stone implements were buried for other reasons than those actually assumed."

Quoting Petrie on the round towers of Ireland, the reviewer adds: "It appears that all the kings of the Tuatha de Dannans were buried on the banks of the Boyne, between the reigns of Crimbthan and Leoghain, with certain exceptions, the most remarkable of which was Cornac (A.D. 227), son of Conn, of the hundred battles; he was not buried there because he had faith in the one true God, and would not adore stones and trees." "These tumuli having been plundered by the Danes (A.D. 862), their chambers have yielded no relics to modern explorers, but this is not the case with a large group of cairns, above twenty-five miles further West at Lough Crew. In external appearance they are quite undistinguishable from those on the Boyne, but in one of these cairns, the explorer (Mr. Eugene Conwell, of Trim) found first, the inevitable flints, then 4,884 fragments of bone implements, mixed with them were vessels of bronze, then seven implements of iron much corroded, but one of which seemed to be the leg of a pair of compasses, with which the circles on the bone implements had been engraved."

"In Ireland we find before the Christian era, a state of things almost identical with that which existed in France at a somewhat earlier period. We find in the North the Firbolgs corresponding with the Belgæ, and equally without monuments; the Tuatha de Dannans in the South and West, occupying the same position as the Acquitanians, and with megalithic monuments and sepulchres hardly distinguishable from those of the West of France; lastly, we have the Scots or Celts entering as colonists, but gradually expanding themselves, till, in the fifth century with Christianity, they extended themselves over the whole of Ireland, and eventually absorbed and obliterated the earlier races."

This article shows:

First, that the division of time into ages of stone, bronze, and iron, is an untenable theory, as stone, bone, and bronze, are found together in the oldest monuments.

Secondly, that though we cannot mark ages by these monuments, we may by them trace and connect races.

Thirdly, that science has marked the Dolmen builders as Acquitanians in France, Tuatha de Dannans in Ireland, and follows them back to the shores of the Black Sea, when they migrated into Europe.

The last conclusion is that one instance, and one only, is recorded in history of flint implements being buried in a tomb, and this is in the Septuagint Version of Joshua v., which states that flint knives used in circumcision were buried in Joshua's tomb. Does not this force on us the question, May not those heathen Tuatha de Dannans, or Acquitanians have brought from their home in Asia, mixed up with heathenism, the rite of circumcision, and the tradition that flint knives used in the rite should be buried in the chieftain's grave?

County Kerry, Ireland.

JEHOVAH'S WITNESSES.

By John T. Gott.

God has ever had His witnesses in the world, and there have ever been two. In these latter days, the Great Pyramid has come forth as Jehovah's Stone Pillar of Witness in the midst of the land of Egypt. Isaiah predicted that it should stand there 714 B.C. For hundreds of centuries it has been considered as only a mausoleum. Man has marred it of its beauty, and done his best to demolish it altogether. But still, there it stands, imposing in appearance, towering in majestic grandeur high above all other Pyramids—a mere wreck of its former self. Externally, man, acting under all the evil influence Satan could suggest, has endeavoured to lay it level with the ground, but has failed. Despised and rejected of men, it has no form nor comeliness to commend itself to their intelligent consideration. As one of the great curiosities of the earth, it is visited by the high and noble in the world. Every one seems to know of its existence, but all do not know that the crown of its glory, the chief corner-stone, is missing. This, the Bible declares, is God's Pillar of Witness—a very, very old witness, but one existing and visible still. In these latter days, devout men have been raised up to teach God's people the deep significance of this Stone Pillar of Witness, and to impart what it teaches.

But Jehovah has two witnesses? This is one, and an old one. Where is the other? We humbly think, and have maintained for some years, that the other witness is not a stone witness, but a wooden one—to wit, Noah's Ark, hidden for ages in the clifts of the rocky mountains of Ararat. It was made of gopher wood, which is indestructible, pitched inside and outside to preserve it, and has for centuries been lost to human sight in the frozen regions of Ararat, where it can take no harm. Thus we have a visible and an invisible witness for God. We live in days when the greater portion of Christian people disbelieve that there ever was a Flood, or such a man as Noah. Why? Because the science of these latter days demonstrates clearly that a universal flood was a sheer impossibility; and clearly so from their standpoint of reasoning. But latter-day science falls foul of the Bible, and what scientists to-day cannot understand, and who therefore condemn the Bible as the Word of Truth, Bible students may understand, and many do. In the time of the coming earthquake, when the Almighty shall spread forth His hands as a swimmer spreadeth forth his hands in the sea (Isa. xxv. 11), and those terrestrial changes in the East take place, which God's Word speaks of, then we believe Noah's Ark will become visible to the eyes of an astonished world, vindicating at once the truth of the Bible and the faithfulness of Jehovah. If Noah's Ark is not yet to become a witness for God, why was it made of indestructible wood? Why pitched inside and out? Why preserved in a frozen region? And how is it that so many good people (as the world calls them) disbelieve in the Ark and the Flood to day? Let time prove all things. Noah's Ark is the oldest witness for God in the world, and we humbly think will yet be instrumental in dealing a stern and an astounding blow to modern scientists. God will vindicate the truth of His Holy Word, no matter what vain man, exulting in intellectual pride, may say to the contrary.

Digitized by Google

But we must pass from the inanimate witnesses—the pristine witnesses—God has in the world, and consider what His living witnesses are. They are simply the fac-simile of the inanimate ones, and prove at once to the reasonable mind that there is a God that ruleth the earth, and that His revelation to man is true.

The Jews to-day are God's visible witness in earth. Like the Great Pyramid, they are known to all men, despised, and rejected, abused, persecuted, and spoiled by all, and like the Great Pyramid, it is just a mystery that they are living in the world to-day. Though few in number, they still form "the plant of renown, the plant of Jehovah's pleasures," and will ever be preserved by Him.

Just as the Pyramid lacks the chief corner-stone, so did the Jews reject the crown of glory—the Messiah—the chief corner-stone. Just as the Great Pyramid represents a building spoiled, robbed, and marred of its beauty, so do the Jews present themselves to the eyes of many nations to-day.

Now we ask, Where is God's other witness? And we answer, Hidden in the clift of the rock, Great Britain. There you find a Protestant, Christian, witnessing people, the identical SOWER of the parable. Really, there is only one sower in the world, the British people, sowing one kind of seed, the Word of God, and thus they constitute themselves God's living witness in the world. But the oracles of God were only committed to the chosen people, the great bulk of whom have been lost to sight, just as much as Noah's Ark has been, but God's Word declares that they shall rise out of their graves, shall yet be found, shall be recognised as sons of the living God, and shall be known among the heathen. The remnant of Lost Israel is in Britain. The British people are a mixed people, but the seed of Abraham is among them, and since they turned unto the Lord (at the Reformation), the blessing of the Lord has been with them. Abraham's household was a mixed people, so was Isaac's, so was Jacob's; the latter very mixed. Israel was a mixed people when they left Egypt, a mixed people they have ever been, and this must be a leading characteristic of Lost Israel existing to-day. This feature is peculiarly British, and we are known to all as an ingathering people. Hence, just as the chosen family (Noah's), with beasts clean and unclean, were gathered into the Ark and preserved there, so God has appointed a place for the chosen people and the strangers sojourning among them, who shall be protected and preserved in the day when the Lord shall go forth as a mighty man, and shall stir up jealousy like a man of war (Isa. xlii.).

Oct., 1879.

ISRAEL AND HER OPPONENTS.

By Wm. W. Mellor.

PART I.

DURING these last three weeks I have been inundated by such a volume of varied wisdom and sage counsel on this subject, that it will be passing strange if I miss the truth. If any one of the authors of these various interesting epistles had appended either name or address, or any other clue than the post-mark on the envelope, I should have been tempted to have asked of them permission to forward their contributions for publication in the BANNER, that we might have before us the worst that can be said against us personally, and against what we consider the truth. As each writer sets out with the intimation that he has made this matter a special study, and looked up all the authorities on the subject, ancient and modern, sacred and profane, and in one instance, supplemented all this by extended travel in Bible lands, we should, on their own showing, have felt bound to have given them a respectful hearing. I am asking myself why should all this learned lore and deep research be poured into one solitary pair of ears, and why all this wasted wisdom on the desert air of an obscure Lancashire village when it might have flooded the whole land with light? Evidently, as will be seen hereafter, anything but superficial thinkers, theirs is just such evidence as will weigh with their less read and untravelled countrymen, providing always that bold assertion can be made to do duty for argument, and gross personalities for logic. "Slippery fellows" is a mild form of speaking of the leaders of the Identity movement, and "dupes" their followers. That I am wrong, grievously wrong, sinfully wrong, and all who think with me on this subject, is a point on which all my learned correspondents are agreed; in fact, that is about the only point on which any two of them do agree! There is therefore a possibility that in this particular they may be right. And I would have personally thanked them for the information had not their unfortunate omission mentioned above, rendered such a courtesy impossible!

And now as to the unanimity of their statements on the weightier matter. One says, "that the Ten Tribes never were lost, or why are they to be seen at this day in so many Eastern lands, and always calling themselves Beni-Israel. In India every regiment contained a few that I had to do with; in Afghanistan they are more in number; Abyssinia, Persia, China, Japan, and in other countries, I myself can testify to. The whole of those I mention, are circumcised and must needs be. Again, why are the apostles told to go and preach to them if they were lost. They are to be few in number like the Jews, and not many." Our next authority, speaking with equal confidence, asserts that "the Ten Tribes were so entirely absorbed by the people amongst whom they were transplanted, as to lose all distinctive trace, and so lost, that they can never be recovered as a separate people." And yet another, and with these three representatives I will content myself as giving a fair sample of what is advanced against what they are pleased to call an "amusing and ingenious theory." "It is certain that the bulk of the Ten Tribes returned with the other Two Tribes of Judah and Benjamin and settled about Samaria, where their descendants dwell to this day, and where I have not only seen them, but worshipped with them on Mount Gerizim, dwelt with them for a whole week, read their genealogy, which, in the priests' family runs in an unbroken chain right up to Aaron;" "besides, there was always a remnant left in the land who never went into captivity; there were on the highest authority, in the darkest hour of their history, 7,000 men in Israel who had not bowed the knee to Baal, or kissed his image." With this testimony before me, divested of all objectionable matter, I am constrained to ask myself, and should like to put the question to them, "Have they read the Bible story? or reading, have they believed?" or "How do they propose to reconcile this evidence with the plain declaration of Scripture?" We may be under a delusion, we may be the subjects of a craze, giving ear to cunningly devised fables, and under a strong delusion to believe a lie, but I submit, in all humility, that roundly making the assertion is not one of the best methods of convincing us of error and bringing us back to a sober mind and a sound judgment. We are reasonable men, earnest inquirers after truth, with minds open to conviction, our arguments are before the world, our appeal is to the Book! Then bring forth your "strong reasons" and deal with us openly and above board in a good old English and Christian fashion!

(To be continued.)

NOTICE.—Two Papers from a "Country Parson" are at hand, and will be published as soon as space can be found for them.—ED.

Digitized by Google

THE PROMISES AND BLESSINGS.

By Thomas Bales.

(Concluded from page 434).

PART II.

When Moses blessed the Tribes of Israel* before ascending the mountain, Joseph's was again the superlative blessing, so that the House of Joseph were the recipients of the glowing promises addressed to them by Israel and Moses by virtue of Joseph, their head, in addition to the solemn promises of God addressed to Abraham, Isaac, and Israel, and by Israel conferred upon Ephraim and Manasseh.

To go no further; let us consider these promises. I purposely pass over the covenant God made with Israel in the land of Moab, for to every clause therein, stringent conditions were attached, whilst these were absolute, unconditional, everlasting. The possession of the Promised Land is most ably discussed by Dr. Keith in his "Land of Israel," a book full of Identity truth, and deserving a place in the library of every Identity student.

With respect to the multitudinous seed, we read in Deut. x. 22: "And now the Lord thy God hath made thee as the stars of heaven for multitude;" and in 1 Kings iv. 20, "Judah and Israel were many, and as the sand which is by the sea in multitude;" but as in Deut. i. 10, we read, "The Lord your God hath multiplied you, and, behold, ye are this day as the stars of heaven for multitude," so we read also in the next verse, "The Lord God of your fathers make you a thousand times as many more as ye are, and bless you as He hath promised you," and learn from Isaiah xlviii. 19, that the full extent of this promise had not then been attained. But as God's Word is sure, His promise to "Ephraim, His firstborn," must be fulfilled. Wherever Ephraim and Manasseh may be, they must be a people remarkable for fecundity, a multitude so vast as to be innumerable. And as the promise of the great nation, and multitude of nations, was directly conveyed to Ephraim, and that of the great people to Manasseh, they—wherever they may be—must possess these distinguishing test marks—one, a great people as distinct from a monarchy; the other, a mighty nation and a confederation of nations, having world-wide influence, and possessing the Gate of their enemies.

But now to meet an objection. By the covenant made in the land of Moab, Israelites, if unfaithful, were to be few in number (Deut. xxviii. 62). But against this may be set the words of the prophet Hosea, who, in obedience to God, called them "Lo-ammi," but, in the same breath, added, "Yet the number of the children of Israel shall be as the sand of the sea, which cannot be measured nor numbered" (Hos. i. 10).

To proceed. We will briefly consider the Land of Promise, so far as it relates to Israel's conversion. This was the common inheritance of all the sons of Israel. Its possession was secured to them by the performance of certain conditions. If those conditions were broken, they were to be scattered among the heathen. This is written in Deut. iv. 24, in the most precise manner; and this is still further set forth in Deut. xxviii. 36, 37. In connection with this, I would point to Israel's history. Forgetful of the Lord, they worshipped other gods. The curses of Mount Ebal fell upon them. They were led into captivity, lost in idolatry. But not for ever, else God had lied unto faithful Abraham! Chapter xxx., from the first verse to the tenth, is very pertinent to this, representing the forgiveness of the penitents, and their restoration to favour. This must have occurred in Messianic times, and in all probability subsequent to, or about the time of, the siege of Jerusalem by Titus; for we know Israel was then outcast, the men of Benjamin had fled, and Judah was left alone to the terrible fate, graphically predicted in Deut. xxviii. 49—57, when the nationality of Israel was seemingly destroyed, and God's truth overthrown, as the power fell from Judah's palsied grasp. He who came to seek the lost, had sent His apostles to proclaim Him to the scattered strangers, and ere the nationality was lost in Palestine, re-nationalisation on a Christian basis had begun in Ten-Tribed Israel. On this point Bishop Titcomb is very clear. Others, too, admit, "A simple un-ritual Christianity once reigned in this island—knowing nothing of Rome and its Pagan corruptions."

If Israelites and Jews return in unbelief, as many avow, then is the former part of this chapter a reflection upon Divine truth. But no; God be praised, Israelites have cried unto the Lord; their prayers have been heard, their petitions granted. That they were thus to cry and be heard is manifest; Israel's sublime chapter, Isa. xlix., proves this: "And now, saith the Lord that formed me from the womb to be His servant, to bring Jacob again to him," &c. (5, and following verses). This chapter may well cause every true believer to cry in thankfulness of heart, "Oh! the love of God! The mystery of redemption!" Amos, the prophet of Israel, spoke the gracious word of the Lord thus: "For, lo, I will command, and I will sift (or cause to move) the House of Israel among all nations, like as corn is sifted in a sieve, yet shall not the least grain fall upon the earth" (Amos ix. 9).* This verse I hold to be a crushing answer to those who allege Israelites have been absorbed, and a complete vindication of the feasibility of their re-union here. Zech. x. 6—10 will prove Israelites were to cry to the Lord in far countries, and to be heard and saved. "The heart of Ephraim shall rejoice in the Lord." What a glorious prediction! Now for its realisation in the vivid language of Hosea, who prophesied concerning Israel. Chapter xiv. of his book, is, I make bold to affirm, a striking picture, a truthful description of the ever-blessed British Reformation. It is a wonderful, a soul-stirring chapter. It contains, firstly, the prophet's injunction to Israel to return to the Lord their God; secondly, it gives us Israel's contrite petition; thirdly, while their words are yet in their mouths, God answers, and assures them of the full enjoyment of His promises. Here is love. Here is forgiveness.

"I will heal their backsliding, I will love them freely: for Mine anger is turned away from him. I will be as the dew unto Israel: he shall grow (or blossom) as the lily, and cast forth (or strike) his roots as Lebanon. His branches shall spread (or go), and his beauty shall be as the olive tree, and his smell as Lebanon. They that dwell under his shadow shall return; they shall revive as the corn, and grow (or blossom) as the vine: the scent (or memorial) thereof shall be as the wine of Lebanon. Ephraim shall say, What have I to do any more with idols? I have heard him, and observed him: I am like a green fir tree. From Me is thy fruit found."

Yea, indeed; from Him is our fruit found. Has not Israel expanded since the Reformation? Has not God been to him as the dew? Has he not blossomed like the lily? Has he not cast forth his roots afar? Have not his branches spread? What spot is there where Israel's power is not felt? where the God of Israel is unknown? Do not they rejoice who dwell under the shadow of Israel's protection, and enjoy the settled government of Israel's colonies? Is not Israel's "memorial" sweet in every land, through his spread of the Gospel? I dwell upon this at some length, because many whom I greatly respect mistake the term "outcasts of Israel," inferring therefrom they are outcasts from God's love, and implying thereby they will return a heathen people. But how, then, can Scripture be fulfilled, which so clearly predicts their conversion prior to their return?

Britons are a vast multitude—a sovereign race—a peculiar people; as pre-eminent in force of character as they are prodigious in point of numbers.

Britain is a mighty nation, a confederation of nations; the

* Deut. xxxiii.

* Does not this read like: "Yet shall not the least grain be lost by the wayside?"

Digitized by Google

world has never seen aught so great. Surpassingly great in temporal blessings and in spiritual endowments, she everywhere holds the reins of power, and possesses the Gate of her enemies in every land and on every sea. She is, moreover, the witness for Christ, the Christian nation, the evangelising nation. In her glorious Protestantism and pious sons, all the families of the earth have been blessed ; and her mission is not yet ended, for still she carries the glad tidings of the Redeemer's name to benighted souls. Britain, in every particular, corresponds exactly with the predicted Israel of the latter days. With feelings of humility, and thankfulness, and prayer, let us then acknowledge our origin, and look ever to Him who redeemed us—look to Him for guidance and support, and pray without ceasing for the gift of His Holy Spirit, remembering Abraham, our father, who was chosen by Him before all others because—Oh! splendid example!—he obeyed His voice, and kept His charge, His commandments, His statutes, and His laws.

THE CHRONOLOGY OF THE ANTE-CHAMBER PASSAGE IN THE GREAT PYRAMID.

By John F. Wood.

With your permission I should like to lay before the readers of the Banner a few thoughts relative to that wonderful "witness to Jehovah in the land of Egypt," the Great Pyramid. I have for some months past, while meditating on this absorbing subject, been deeply impressed with the idea, that if the ante-chamber passage typifies (as I believe it does) the "great tribulation" foretold by Daniel, and described more fully by our Saviour, that the usual scale of an inch to a year would not be used in its construction, seeing that our Lord promised that for the elect's sake those days should be shortened. Bearing in mind that, as Mr. Gott has shewn us, the history of Joseph in Egypt portrayed the history of Israel in Britain, and that, consequently, the making known of himself to his brethren typified the manifestation of Israel, I have been led to wonder whether the great distress which then prevailed—the famine which was "sore in all lands"—was not also typical of the dread period which many of us believe to be at our very doors. If it should, then we may expect its commencement about two years before the manifestation of Israel, for we read that there were yet five years of famine to come when Joseph made himself known to his brethren.

The time at which many think the Identity will be fully demonstrated and generally acknowledged, is 1882. If, then, these views are correct, the coming "time of trouble" will begin in 1880, and end in 1887. The first two years (or thereabouts) will, consequently, happen during the winding-up of the Christian dispensation, and will constitute the "beginning of sorrows." These two years will be but the prelude to the five of unparalleled horrors which will assuredly follow. During the former part of this period the "mystery of iniquity" will be assiduously working, but under disadvantages, for He—the Third Person in the ever-blessed Trinity—that now hindereth, will continue to hinder until,—the nations of the earth, having filled up the measure of their iniquity, and the fiat of the Almighty having gone forth that His Spirit shall no longer strive with man, and the last hours of the day of grace having run out, and the "cities of the nations fallen"—He be taken out of the way, and with Him the few faithful ones who, having given due heed to the Master's warning, shall be accounted worthy to escape those things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of Man.

And then will be ushered in the times of the "great earthquake, such as was not since men were on the earth—so mighty an earthquake, so great." To come to the point, then. "Does the Great Pyramid testify to the duration of this 'tribulation?'" We think it does. The length of the ante-chamber passage is said to be fifty-two inches, which at the usual rate of computation would indicate fifty-two years, but as the days were to be shortened, suggests, we believe, fifty-two weeks, which, if multiplied by the Pyramid number five, would equal five years—the period named above. That this mode of computation would not be an anomaly in Pyramid chronology is proved by Mr. Charles Horner's valuable paper on "The Grand Step" in the "Pyramid Digest," wherein he demonstrates, that for special reasons, the height of the said step should be reckoned at an inch to a month, instead of a year.

Again, according to Cunningham, Purdon, and others, the coming of our Lord in the air to receive His waiting people, will happen about five years before the end. This view confirms our opinion, for, according to Professor Smyth, the "Retreat," which is situated in the upper South-east corner of the grand gallery ceiling, typifies that event, and indicates its sychronism with the commencement of ante-chamber passage troubles. Once more, "seven years" is the period that Professor Grimmer fixes for the duration of the "coming troubles" from an astrological point of view, and he, too, represents it as ending in 1887. He predicts that the star of Bethlehem will re-appear in that year, which, as was recently suggested in the Banner, is probably "the sign of the Son of Man," referred to in Matt. xxiv., and which will herald His second coming in glory to "avenge His elect," "vanquish His enemies," and "set up His kingdom."

Lastly, we find in Isa. lxiii. 4, the length of the present dispensation represented in relation to the period of vengeance as being in the proportion of a year to a day. "The day of vengeance is in Mine heart, and the year of My redeemed is come." Bearing in mind that the "year of My redeemed" could not commence until after the death of Christ, which secured our redemption, we must deduct the thirty-three inches representing our Saviour's earthly life from the full length of the grand gallery, which will leave us 1,849 inches. Divide this number by 365, to ascertain the length of the "day of vengeance," and we have $5\frac{24}{365}$, or five years, and from three to four weeks.

In conclusion, we would just remark that the above views are not enunciated in any dogmatic spirit, but are humbly submitted for the due consideration of the "watchmen of Ephraim," with an earnest hope that, imperfectly as they may have been presented, they may be the means of assisting some little towards a right understanding of the "times and seasons," and of leading to a closer, fuller, and more prayerful investigation of that part of the Great Pyramid which we are all agreed symbolises the near future, but the precise signification of which has hitherto been shrouded in mystery, owing chiefly (we believe) to the prevailing idea that it must of necessity represent fifty-two years. I trust that some earnest seeker after truth will take up and further elucidate this subject.

Barugh-green, near Barnsley,
Oct. 4, 1879.

GOOD GIFTS FOR GOD'S GLORY.

We have cause to think that some persons continue to urge against the belief of the British being the Lost Tribes of Israel, that this view gives too much prominence to temporal blessings, thereby interfering with a due interest in things spiritual.

We deny this being a fact. But we do believe that our view raises these blessings called temporal (if temporal in themselves, yet how eternal may be their influences!) and places them on a higher level, ennobling, purifying, and glorifying them, causing us to see more distinctly than before, the love, power, and faithfulness of our covenant God, and crushing any self-glorification, and proud self-reliance which, with head held aloft, would point to our nation's past and the present as proofs of what man can do for his own advancement and elevation. An English lady lately remarked to us, "There is one thing I feel, and that is intense admiration for my own country." We presume the fair speaker referred to the bravery, wisdom, and consequent successes of Great Britain, and to its grand relative position as compared with other nations. While deeply thankful for these sources of national rejoicing, we think it safer to trace our greatness to the free grace of a selecting Ruler of the whole world, rather than to attribute it to any virtue or qualities in ourselves, though He who implanted those qualities may have used them as instruments for the furtherance of His own designs.

Digitized by Google

Are we to shut our eyes to the fact of wonderful gifts, privileges, and enjoyments having been bestowed on us, and endeavour to ignore and depreciate them as much as possible, lest our seeing and acknowledging them should trench on our spirituality? If so, we would not deal with them otherwise, if we thought they were actually Satanic in their origin! That there is danger accompanying every earthly advantage bestowed on us, while in our present condition we are subject to temptations of the world, the flesh, and the devil, we do not indeed deny; but temporal blessings are far less calculated to ensnare and injure us spiritually when we look for, and see God's bounteous hand bestowing them, in accordance with His promises to "our forefather Abraham," than when we look upon them as the mere outcome of human science, increased knowledge, light of experience and advanced civilisation, or as owing to our own national innate powers and natural intelligence.

It is, as we have said, evidently a fear with many that our believing we inherit the promises made to Israel, and endeavouring to persuade others of the fact, interferes with the advancement of spirituality, as if temporal good and spiritual good must be essentially antagonistic; and as if the man who rejoices in the greatness, wealth, power, or moral excellencies of his countrymen, was in so far a hindrance and a snare to them, by claiming their attention to what is unworthy of it, on the part of those who, being converted, are sinners saved by grace; and, therefore, should have their minds wholly fixed on heavenly things. Yet earthly matters may be so illuminated by light from on high as to become sanctified thereby; and many temporal things which are seen, by their very existence, enable their possessors to advance the spiritual things that are not seen. For instance, Britain's wealth and her power by land and by sea, which enable her to carry Christian civilisation to every part of the world, to set machinery at work which prints and spreads the Gospel throughout the universe, and which sweeps away before them ignorant, idolatrous, and brutalising savagery, destroying the rule of the petty tyrant, and the curse of the slave dealer.

We do not believe we are to put aside as adjuncts of mere sensuous worldliness and wickedness the mighty results of the intellectual inventiveness, which our God has planted in man's mind, causing it to bear fruit in the well-being and comfort of humanity. Neither do we believe that our heavenly King has in vain created us with tendencies, tastes, and mental qualities which are fed by the senses, and which may be innocently gratified and usefully employed in administering to the earthly happiness of our fellows, even to their physical improvement and the elevation of tastes which on the face of them appear to be only earthly in their associations, or that He will condemn our grateful appreciation of His own gifts.

If we thought otherwise, we must believe our pains and our sufferings are more pleasing to God, if borne in a Christian spirit, than our joys and our pleasures when impregnated with that same spirituality; that crushing beneath our feet with unappreciative carelessness the exquisite flowers painted by the hand of Omnipotence, while our eyes are fixed on heaven, was more pleasing to the Maker than to gaze with loving wonder at those beautiful creations, while thanking Him for so enamelling the earth with gems. We should open our ears to jarring sounds and harsh cries, instead of welcoming harmony, believing it to be a gracious gift from on high, and we should turn with reprehension from the artistic works of man, however faithfully portraying the works of God's hands, because savouring too much of the earth earthy.

Were it thus, we should end by conjuring up a harsh, stern Master in heaven, rather than a gracious, indulgent, beneficent Father, who does not afflict willingly and would have His children to rejoice. Though He abhors sin and would stamp it out of us, even though it costs us pain and anguish, surely He does not grudge us our appreciation of and pleasure in possessions, individual or national, that accord with tastes He has implanted in us, when the gratification entails no sin.

Would pious men have us believe our God is like the stern Christian parent, of whom the little son enquired of his gentler mother, if she thought his father would go to heaven? "I hope so," was the reply. "Then," remarked the child, "I do not wish to go there."

We know and lament that the multitude cling too fondly to the things that are passing away, and have little place in their hearts for holy thoughts and the highest aspirations; but shall we therefore condemn those who gratefully acknowledge Israel's possession of earthly treasures, and turn from what pleases the natural man, though it be the gift of God, lest it should veil our eyes to spiritual matters? Are we to be more afraid of dwelling on this world's good things than was the Lord Himself for us, who gave promises concerning them through His favoured servants Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob? Did He do so that they might be lightly esteemed? Surely not.

There are possibly some who were indifferent, or at any rate, but little awakened to the importance of spiritual things, and who, becoming convinced of our being Israel from Scriptural proofs, are more alive to the earthly advantages of that circumstance than to the promise of our becoming a righteous nation, and a witness for Christ throughout the world. But, even in such like cases, we think a great advance in the right direction has been made when any who cared little for the Bible, has learnt to dwell on, understand, and believe the promises of the Old Testament; and we have small doubt that the next step will be a stronger belief and interest in the truths and promises of the New Testament; and that those who have begun by a startled and awakened curiosity and surprise will eventually pass into the loftier regions of a high spiritual faith and love.

L. P.

October, 1879.

ISRAEL'S RUSSIAN SUBJECTS IN THE DOMINION OF CANADA.

THE Ottawa correspondent of the Scotsman of the 19th of August, 1879, writes as follows regarding Her Majesty's Russian subjects, and the grain-growing capacity of her giant daughter in the Canadian Dominion. He said regarding the province of Manitoba:—

The wheat grown in this Province and in the North-western Territory is of the finest description, and as it can be grown so much cheaper there than on lands which have to be highly cultivated and manured, the time is not far distant when the rapidly-increasing products of our North-west territories, along with those grain-growing countries of Illinois, Minnesota, Dacota, and Nebraska, lying in our immediate neighbourhood, will seriously affect the English landowners and farmers of land in the United Kingdom to a considerable extent. Already large parties of emigrants are going into Manitoba, and in the same steamer in which I went through the lakes to Duluth there were 303 Mennonites from Russia, who had just crossed the Atlantic, and were about to join their friends in the Mennonite settlements in Manitoba. These Russian settlers make excellent farmers, and wherever they have settled, they are rapidly becoming well off, and their children will probably nearly all become well-to-do, as they are accustomed to live on very little, and they are very industrious.

Digitized by Google

PROGRESS IN NEW ZEALAND, TASMANIA, ADELAIDE, AND BRITISH GUIANA.

FROM all the above spots at the "ends of the earth" we were privileged to receive good tidings again on one day, September 27, 1879, last. Our news is all of progress, of advance, and thanksgiving for the wondrous way the Identity is spreading everywhere. The following is the Rev. Canon W. Blake Brownrigg's intelligence of what is taking place in New Zealand. His words, taken from his leader to the 15th July number of The Standard of Ephraim, are to the following effect:—

By a late mail from New Zealand we have had some encouraging news of the spreading of Identity interests in that Colony in which certain clergymen have taken part. A letter, with a perusal of which we have been favoured, contains the following items:—

"We have now an open meeting at our own home for all comers on Monday evenings for the discussion of the Identity Question. Two of our clergy, one the Church of England, and the other the Church of Scotland, attend and assist us in our inquiries—the latter a thorough Identity man, and the former will I trust soon see the truth as we endeavour to teach it. Mr. —— (a particular friend of mine) writes me a most cheering letter from ——, where he is engaged in the native lands court. He tells me, on Sunday morning the 15th, at the Church of England, the incumbent gave notice that in the evening the sermon would be on "The Identity of the British Nation with the Ten Tribes of Israel." At the evening service the church was crowded, and the attention given to the subject intense. The archdeacon read the prayers, and Mr. Williams preached, putting the Identity before his hearers in different lights, and doing it well."

The good Canon then asks "Why the clergy in general do not proclaim the Identity?" He answers the question by saying they will not take the trouble to inquire into the evidence on which it is held. We can show him a clergyman in Bristol, the Rev. C. W. Hickson, who is constantly alluding to the matter in his sermons, and who proposes, we believe, shortly to devote one Sunday evening (to be publicly announced hereafter) to "The Identity of the British with Lost Israel" as the subject of his sermon. We trust all Israelites in the city and neighbourhood will make a point of attending, and by crowding the building mark their gratitude at the conduct of the first divine in England who will thus have opened the topic from his own pulpit; following (somewhat tardily) an example which New Zealand has already set the clergy of the Church.

From Adelaide, South Australia, we have from Mr. H. W. James (of Hutt-street, Adelaide), the secretary of the local Association, a very excellent account of Identity progress there. What he writes is so important, encouraging, and interesting, that we annex an extract from his letter, which we hope our readers will appreciate. He says :—

I am not sure whether I mentioned in my last letter the name of the Rev. G. Taplin as an advocate of our cause; he was a missionary to the natives. We have here what we call "a Native Mission Station," or farm, carried on by the natives under the supervision of a superintendent or missionary. The natives on this station are educated and clothed in European fashion, they are taught to build cottages to live in instead of in their native wurleys, they are lawfully married, they assemble together to hear the Gospel preached, they have a Sunday school; in fact we endeavour as far as possible to give them all the advantages of civilisation, and the proceeds of the farm are devoted to this purpose. But in spite of all this our natives are decreasing very rapidly. The Rev. G. Taplin was acknowledged by all to be a highly-gifted man, and very successful in his work; he has written extensively on the natives and their language. One of his lectures on our Israelitish origin appeared some time ago in The Christian Colonist, and a very able lecture it was. But this good Israelite is no more, for God has taken him. "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord." A Mr. B. here is doing the Identity cause good service by writing some letters full of sound argument in our favour in the columns of the local newspapers. We all appreciate the kindness of the editor of one of them, the Rev. John McEwin. There are numbers of people now at this place inquiring into the matter, and I invariably recommend to those who are commencing to search into this great truth the following works: "The Forty-Seven Identifications," by E. Hine, "The Inquiry" and "The History of the House of Israel, Told for the Children," by Philo-Israel. I admire the last-mentioned book for its force, combined with its simplicity. I have been for the last ten years a teacher of the first-class boys in a Sunday school, and you may depend upon it my boys are not strangers to Anglo-Israelism. I have several times addressed the school on the subject; but when your little book came to hand, I at once thought it would be a good idea to read it before the whole school. I gave the superintendent a hint to that effect. So the time allowed for addresses I occupied for three consecutive Sundays in reading your book. As I read chapter after chapter, every countenance seemed beaming with delight, they all seemed to understand it at once. It has led several to buy books and to give the matter further study. There are a number of new books at the Wesleyan book-room just arrived, and fifty of "The Sheffield Cards of Membership," which I have secured on behalf of the Association here. It is full of meaning. I am very much pleased with the design. The majority of the clergy seem to be as much in the dark as ever. Sometimes I think the darkness seems to be getting more intense than ever. Only last Sunday I heard a minister declare that we British were Gentiles; were it not that they are protected by law in the exercise of their sacred office I believe they would be openly challenged when they make such assertions as this; however, I suppose the God of Israel will remove the veil in His own good time. Let all those who have their eyes open pray for the blind shepherds of the House of Israel. But in spite of the clergy, it is spreading rapidly. It is being discussed in Bible classes, in Sunday schools, adult classes, in the streets, in the workshops, and all over the land.

From our friend in George Town, Demerara, Mr. F. R. Winter, we have the gratifying intelligence that "though there are no outward signs visible, there are several indications that 'the news' spreads."

We thank God for all these symptoms of progress abroad. At home we know, in many ways, that the Identity is making steady advance. The pamphlets of all kinds are selling largely and increasingly. The circulation of the BANNER is encouraging, and has doubled in the course of little over a year. There are no signs here or anywhere else that the subject is "dying away," as the Rock fondly hopes. On the contrary, being God's truth, it is destined to become constantly more widely known and appreciated, till at last it will fill the earth, causing "the hallelujah chorus" of "Praise to the Lord" for "Israel found" to rise from "the coasts, the ends, and the uttermost parts of the earth," from wherever, in fact, Israel, God's chosen ones, "His own inheritance," are located (Psa. cvi. 40).

CONFEDERATION IN SOUTH AFRICA AS PICTURED IN THE "TIMES."

IT is the singular characteristic of the South African colonies that the native races have not receded before the European advance. In America, in Australia, and in New Zealand we have had no such problem to deal with as that which confronts us in South Africa; for while the Europeans have advanced from the South, the Caffre races have slowly descended from the North and have helped to displace the original inhabitants of the country. This, however, is only another and a more cogent reason for unity of purpose among the European inhabitants of South Africa. In the face of this problem all intercolonial jealousies sink into insignificance. It is the common destiny of colonies to be divided first and only to amalgamate after long disunion. It took a very long time to weld the various European races which settled in North America into a common nationality; but we have now almost forgotten that New York was once a Dutch colony. It is not too much to hope that the time is coming when even the Boers in South Africa will acknowledge that their interests are really identical with those of their European neighbours.

August 30, 1879.

Digitized by Google

ISRAEL'S BATTLES.

"FOR THERE IS NONE OTHER THAT FIGHTETH FOR US, BUT ONLY THOU, O LORD."

(Continued from page 313.)

No. XXI.—THE BATTLE OF VITORIA.

ON June 21, 1813, the battle was fought between the allies under the Earl of Wellington, and King Joseph of Spain, with Marshal Jourdan under him, which concluded the Peninsular war. It was, therefore, a combat which was the crisis of an important part of Israel's history, and being on many accounts a wonderful battle in several of its details, it deserves a notice in the BANNER OF ISRAEL.

Vitoria is a town on the North of Spain, near the South-west frontier of France, and it was there that King Joseph with over seventy thousand French troops gave battle to Wellington, and the allies numbering about the same. At early dawn General Hill attacked the heights of La Puebla on the Frenchman's left; took the village of Subijana de Alava, the position of which secured him against all the charges of the enemy, and forced the French Marshal eventually to withdraw from the heights of the Zadora river towards Vitoria itself. Meanwhile General Graham turned the enemy's right by the Bilboa road. Ere long the French army was overpowered on the right, the left, and the centre too. The beaten army endeavoured to retreat towards Bilboa and the sea; but their road of retreat was held by Graham and his victorious troops. The disordered French then rushed towards Pamplona in the very opposite direction. "Many guns were taken," says Napier (vol. v., page 561), "as the army advanced, and at 6 o'clock the French reached the last defensible height—one mile in front of Vitoria. Behind them was the plain in which the city stood, and beyond the city thousands of carriages and animals, and non-combatants; men, women, and children were crowded together in all the madness of terror, and as the English shot went booming over head the vast crowd started and swerved with a convulsive movement, while a dull and horrid sound of distress arose; but there was no hope, no stay for army or multitude. It was the wreck of a nation."

After this the French made a gallant stand on the Upper Zadora, between the villages of Ali and Armentia. In vain! The French retreat was blocked along the royal road, the retreat became a rout, and in their escape by the road of Salvatierra to the right of Vitoria, the French guns were abandoned by the gunners, and the final resistance being overcome by the conquering British and their allies, the last of the French army fled from the field, leaving everything worth having in the conquerors' hands.

"The French indeed," says Napier in his comments on this battle, "escaped with comparatively little loss of men; but to use Gazan's words, they lost all their equipages, all their guns, all their treasure, all their stores, all their papers, so that no man could prove how much pay was due to him, generals and subordinate officers alike were reduced to the clothes on their backs, and most of them were barefooted." "Never was a victory more complete. The trophies were innumerable. The French carried off but two pieces of artillery from the battle. Jourdan's baton of command, a stand of colours, one hundred and forty-three brass pieces, one hundred of which had been used in the fight, all the parcs and depôts from Madrid, Valladolid, Burgos, carriages, ammunition, treasure, everything fell into the hands of the victors. The loss in men, however, did not exceed six thousand, exclusive of some hundreds of prisoners. The loss of the allies was nearly as great—the gross numbers being 5,176 killed, wounded, and missing."

So far Napier's account of this great battle and its wonderful results. It drove the French out of Spain, forced them to retreat into France, and utterly destroyed all Napoleon's schemes for the subjugation of the Peninsula for ever. His own power soon after crumbled to pieces at the great battles of Leipsig, and his abdication followed in 1814.

Such is the field of Vitoria and its glorious results. It was purely an Israelitish battle, and one exemplifying the dealings of God with His people according to His promise. They were warring out of their own land, to combat the great enemy of the Lord in the only spot where he seemed vulnerable. There they went out to battle as the Lord's people, because He had sent them, and He heard their prayer and their supplication for His help and "maintained their cause" (1 Kings viii. 44). He gave them a captain whose hand He always seemed to guide—a warrior who was the hero of a hundred fights and every fight he fought he won. He sent confusion and feeble counsels to the enemy and his captains, and just those things that that enemy ought not to have done, as Israel's enemies, the Lord made them do to ensure their destruction. Writing of the battle of Vitoria, Napier enumerates the various military errors and blunders of which King Joseph and Marshal Jourdan were guilty before and during this great battle, and declares that if they had acted otherwise, nothing could have saved Lord Wellington and his brave army. But these errors were just the secret of our success. Being Israel, He gave us the very military blessings promised to Israel obedient in Deut. xxviii. 7. He caused "our enemies that rose up against us to be smitten before our face; they came out against us one way, and fled before us, as at Vitoria, seven ways."

Then, too, was fulfilled another promise made to Israel in Micah v. 8, since it was Lord Wellington's resolve to "go through" Spain and drive the invader out of the Peninsula, that led to the battle of Vitoria, and behold! when that resolve was taken, the remnant of Jacob, then in the midst of many "people" in Spain, "as a lion among the beasts of the forest and as a young lion among the flocks of sheep" (for this battle's burden fell entirely—like the rest—on the British), in "going through" both "trod down" King Joseph, Marshal Jourdan, and his armies, "tore them utterly to pieces," stripped them of their guns, munitions of war, treasure, and of all but the clothes on their backs. "It was the wreck of a nation," as Napier describes the rout, and in fact "there was NONE could deliver" the French. Not Napoleon himself, not Soult, not King Joseph, nor Jourdan, could rescue the hosts of Israel's enemies from the destruction that God sent them as He hurled them out of Spain across their own borders and into France. Surely the battle of Vitoria was one where Israel's God fought openly for His people, and "maintained their cause as the matter then required" (1 Kings viii. 59). History in general, and the history of the Peninsular war especially, read in the light of "our Identity," becomes a new and deeply interesting page in British story, and adds another to the many calls we have now crowding round and confronting us nationally to cry, "Hallelujah! praise the Lord."

(To be followed by a paper on the Battle of Waterloo.)

THE REV. C. W. HICKSON ON "LOST, GENTILE, CHRISTIAN, BRITISH ISRAEL."

THE following report of a lecture by the Rev. C. W. Hickson on the above subject, appeared in the Bristol papers of the 11th October, 1879, giving only the Chairman's remarks, and not a word of the lecture itself. We add a few notes of what was a lucid, telling, clear exposition of our Identity. The newspaper notice was as follows:—

The Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A., vicar of St. Bartholomew's, lectured last evening, in the new Broadmead-rooms, on "Never Lost, Jewish Israel and Lost, Gentile, Christian, British Israel." Mr. E. W. Bird (Philo-Israel) presided over a large attendance. The proceedings having been opened with prayer by Commander Roberts,

Digitized by Google

R.N., the Chairman said that they meant by the Identity of the British race with the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel, that they were absolutely one with the descendants of Jacob and of Israel. The subject was being taken up with the greatest interest, and was rapidly gaining ground, not only in these islands, but throughout the British Empire, and also in the United States, and in some parts of the continent of Europe. He said that before the point upon which Mr. Hickson was going to lecture was taken up by the latter, Mr. Hickson had felt great difficulty about what Scripture declared would be—that Lost Israel would become Gentile, but having studied the matter he began to speak, preach, and lecture upon it, and he now stood forth boldly declaring his opinion upon and facing the persecution which he (the speaker) believed would come upon men of his cloth who took the matter up. The Rev. C. W. Hickson then proceeded to deliver his lecture, which was listened to with great attention.

The lecturer commenced with a careful statement of the Scriptural distinction between Israel and Judah, dwelling on the fact, that when the Jews returned from Babylon the great bulk of the Ten-Tribed body did not.

He then turned to "The Kingdom," or Ten Tribes, and proved, first, that they were actually "LOST." He pointed out that the Jews, and all ancient and modern commentators, admitted the fact, while the following passages fully proved it —viz., Hos. viii. 8, ix. 17; Amos ix. 9; Ezek. xi. 16; John vii. 35. The last passage led to the conclusion that Israel "Lost" was to be found as Israel—

2. "Gentilized," or among the Gentiles, nay, actually and ostensibly Gentiles. In proof of this the lecturer dilated on Gen. xlviii. 19. in connection with Rom. xi. 25; on Hos. i. 2, 3, 6, 8, 9; Isa. liv. 1, 3, 6; Gal. iv. 22—27, where Isa. liv. 1 is quoted, and on John xi. 51, 52, proving on the strength of Caiaphas' prophecy that the Ten Tribes were at that time, A.D. 33, separate from Judah, and destined in God's good time to be gathered to Christ, being even then in their unconverted state the children of God (Hos i. 10). These considerations led up to the proof that Israel was to be found—

3. A Christian Nation. In regard to this point, Hos. i. 10 and Caiaphas' prophecy were chiefly relied upon, with other passages which will readily occur to the reader.

In consequence the lecturer in conclusion asked where this "Lost," "Gentile," yet "Christian" Israel could now be found, except in the great British Empire? For the discovery of the nation depended upon its answering to those distinct promises made by the Lord to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, which provided that the seed when found should be:—

1. A great nation.
2. One whose name was "Great."
3. Wonderfully numerous.
4. A nation and company of nations.
5. Having the Gate of their enemies.
6. Spread abroad everywhere.
7. Having kings from them.
8. Blessed with the abundance of blessings.
9. Possessing all those good things promised to "Israel obedient," in Deut. xxviii.
10. The "evil beasts" being caused to cease out of their land (Ezek. xxxiv. 25).
11. Being a holy people, separated to good works.
12. Feared by all nations.
13. The head and not the tail, above and not beneath.
14. Supplanting other nations everywhere.

These and other such like, the lecturer observed, were marks pointing only to one nation, and that the British, and we were justified, from all the considerations adduced, to conclude that "Lost," "Gentile," "Christian" Israel was now "found" in the British races only, but were not to be discovered elsewhere.

"And if so," concluded Mr. Hickson, "what then? What good will come of it if we be Israel? Cui bono? These were the questions often asked us! Well, this very question was once put by one of old, and he asked it in this way, 'What profit shall this BIRTHRIGHT do to me?' We know what God's own verdict was regarding this wretched man! 'He was a profane person (Heb. xii. 16) who for a morsel of meat sold his birthright.' But he despised his birthright only for a time! 'When he would have inherited the blessing, he was rejected, for he found no place of repentance, though he sought it carefully with tears.' It is profanity to despise the birthright God gives us nationally, and to account as a worthless thing the glorious promises of national righteousness, the outpouring of the Holy Spirit, and other spiritual and great temporal blessings God has tied up to the Identity of our race with Israel!"

Such is a sketch only of an excellent lecture which took nearly an hour and a half to deliver. We cannot of course endorse every word the lecturer uttered, and that were hardly to be expected. We can safely affirm, however, that the lecture, on the whole, was highly appreciated by Mr. Hickson's attentive audience, and we feel sure it has served the cause well in Bristol. It was delivered under the auspices of "The Bristol Israel's Identification Association," and was a creditable proof of the vitality of that young, but vigorous organization.

Review.

The Coming Collision Between England and Russia. By an M.A., Cambridge. Second Edition. Price one shilling. W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

The first edition of this clever pamphlet, written on BANNER lines, was noticed in our pages on June 4, 1879, in No. 127. We are glad to see the work has got into a second edition, which is always a good sign, one not welcome to the opponents of course—such as Messrs. McClellan, Clericus, and the like; but most acceptable to those who, like ourselves, watch every sign of the coming of the dear Master, and who know that ere He can come Israel must be found, Israel's arch foe must be designated, and the symptoms of "the coming collision," foretold by Ezekiel, be clearly seen. Our M.A. of Cambridge has enriched his second edition by a "Supplement," which contains some very valuable matter, and can be obtained separately by those possessing the first edition. He treats of the Berlin Treaty, of Elam and Gog, of "Cush Stirring," of "the Ordnance Survey of Palestine Completed," of "Gold Found in India," of "the Duel between Gog and Israel Begun," of "Israel's Seed in Many Waters," and of "Nihilism in Russia." Our author plainly identifies Great Britain with Israel in all he writes, and we are glad to see he accepts our views of THE Gate, and highly approves of that "annexation policy" which we see to be according to God's providence for Israel; but which the opponents of our present Government so greatly abominate. In order to let our readers estimate the character of the M.A.'s views in the second edition of this capital little work, we reprint the following on "The Duel Begun" and "Israel's Seed in Many Waters." He says regarding

"THE DUEL BETWEEN GOG AND ISRAEL HAS BEGUN.

"Judging from the constant discussion of our relations with Russia in common conversation, in the press, in periodicals, it would seem that the nation at large is beginning to feel a presentiment of the impending struggle. The duel in fact has already begun, though there is not open war. Does Gog menace the Gate? Israel sends her fleet thither, and draws on Tarshish for troops. Does Gog annex Northern Armenia? We annex Cyprus. Does he threaten us from Central Asia? We occupy Quettah. Does he intrigue with the Afghan ruler? We make war on that ruler, and assert our legitimate influence in his country. When we have trouble in Afghanistan, Gog ingratiates himself with the Shah; when we hear of disturbances in Burmah, Gog seeks to establish intimate relations with Siam. His latest move is the advance on Merv—and we? The jealousy of united Europe has turned Gog back in the West: Israel has laid her hand firmly on the Gates of India, thereby checking his advance Eastward. He is like a strong man held in confinement, and were it not indicated by prophecy, common sense would tell us that he is most likely to break out at the weakest point of the environment—viz., where his frontier adjoins that of Turkey in Asia—weakest for these three obvious reasons: (1) His possession of Kars, as has before been shown, puts Asiatic Turkey at his mercy. (2)

Digitized by Google

He has nothing to fear in that quarter from the jealousy of Europe, but would be left face to face with England. (3) By his Caucasian railways and fleets on the Caspian he could transport uninterrupted supplies of men and stores to the seat of war.

"ISRAEL'S SEED IN MANY WATERS.

"It is marvellous with what rapidity England is extending her sway over heathen lands, and such more especially as are accessible from the sea. God seems to be constraining us to undertake UNIVERSAL DOMINION. We shrink from annexation, yet it is thrust on us. Zululand is to be divided into four districts governed by native chiefs subject to British residents. Disguise it as we may, independent rule in Zululand is at an end. We are evacuating Afghanistan, leaving it to the charge of its native prince, when a fanatical outbreak, prompted, it may be, as the Continental press unanimously would have us believe, by Russian machinations, is as the voice of God peremptorily commanding us to return and possess the land. We seem on the verge of a war with Burmah, and we may see the same process repeated there. In fine, in all parts of the world it seems to be England's mission to break down governments founded on blood and barbarism, and substitute her own mild and Christian sway. It has been rumoured that 'Sir Arthur Gordon is instructed to take the first opportunity after his return to Fiji, to inquire into the advisability of annexing not only New Guinea, but Samoa, Tonga, and New Britain.' In all this annexation of so many heathen and mainly maritime countries, the eye of faith cannot but see the fulfilment of Balaam's prophecy that Israel's 'seed shall be in many waters,' and of the Divine promise: 'Thou shalt break forth on the right hand and on the left; and thy seed shall inherit the Gentiles, and make the desolate cities to be inhabited.'"

As a comment on the above, we ask our readers to peruse the following remarks published in a Bristol paper on Oct. 8, 1879, with reference to the state of affairs now obtaining between Russia and "England," and the anticipations of "the coming collision" cherished and welcomed by the rabid Russian writers. The Bristol Times and Mirror says:—

"England is just now coming in for quite as much abuse as Germany from the Russian press, and if we believe all we read, we ought to prepare at once for the war with Russia against the world which is to leave the Czar master of Europe and Asia. The rubbish that the St. Petersburg papers are allowed by the official censors to publish indicates more than anything else mental aberration on the part, not only of the writers, but of the authorities also. Peace in Europe and progress in Central Asia are, according to these lucubrations, only minor objects of the Turkoman expedition—it supplies a strategical basis which the Russians have long been aiming at in those quarters. 'A Russo-English collision is simply inevitable in the future,' and therefore it is a question of importance which road to Hindustan ought to be chosen. The best road, it is added, is that through Bokhara to Afghanistan and Herat, and this will be taken when the time comes. This collision, however, is in the far future; before that comes on, Germany and Austria have to be annihilated, and the Golos demands that the utmost exertions be made to prepare the country and the army for the impending war with these Powers. The Vedomosti contends that the war is likely to break out in a few months, and bluntly suggests at the same time that the Nihilist propaganda, which saps the foundations of Russian strength, is kept up by foreign money and intrigue. According to the same journal, Germany is impelled against Russia by the necessity of providing food for her hungry millions, and by the conviction that she possesses the power to take the requisite amount of arable soil from Russia and the Sclavonic East. The Russian privateer squadron forming in the Pacific is about to be reinforced to the number of twelve, 'with an eye,' it is added, 'to a speedy war.' All this talk is harmless, so long as it is confined to talk; it does them good, and doesn't harm us. When it comes to fighting, we shall have something to say on the subject.

THE B.C. AND A.D. CHRONOLOGY.

WE have the Rev. W. B. Galloway's permission to add to his testimony on the subject of our chronology, published at page 323 BANNER OF ISRAEL, No. 136, the following:—

"In illustration of part of my letter I may mention that, in speaking of the Eclipse of Thales, the Astronomer-Royal, Sir George Biddell Airy, writes the date in both forms of expression—namely, May 28th, B.C. 585, and May 28th—584."

"These two forms of expression mean the same thing."

Correspondence.

THE PROPHET ELIJAH.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

SIR,—During the past few days we have had an individual, evidently an enthusiast on the Israelitish question, but whose mode of procedure will do much harm I fear for the cause he professes to have at heart, lecturing nightly in the public streets at Maidstone, on the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel, and his mission in connection therewith. After narrating the many proofs that have been adduced from time to time in support of the fact that the British nation, and no other, are the Lost Ten Tribes, he informs his hearers that he is commissioned by God to say at all meetings that he is "Elijah the Prophet." He disclaims any relation to that prophet who was carried up into heaven, for in the last two verses in the last chapter of Malachi he says he is spoken of as follows: "Behold, I will send you Elijah the prophet before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord; and he shall turn the heart of the fathers to the children, and the heart of the children to their fathers, lest I come and smite the earth with a curse." The prophet informed his hearers that it was his mission to gather together the lost sheep of the House of Israel, to enforce the rite of circumcision, to abolish our sham Christian Sabbath, and institute that of the Jews—namely, the seventh day instead of the first. The sheep-skin that he wore, he said, was typical of the lost sheep, the red lining of the same indicated the sins of the people, and his boots, which were of the Wellington pattern, were typical of the Tribe of Manasseh, the Americans, and the Lost Ten Tribes. He did not state what his money bags were typical of, and which were handed round at the end of each meeting in aid of what he termed the "Restoration Fund."

I do not know whether you, sir, or any of your readers have heard of this individual, and although his appearance is attractive, especially to boys, who imitate the crying of so many lambs, his mode of lecturing is clear, and he has evidently studied the Anglo-Israel question very considerably. I think it is necessary to put our readers and others on their guard, and to listen to the words of One who has said, "Prove all things, hold fast that which is good;" and, above all else, "Beware of men in sheep's clothing."

Yours obediently, THOS. FEATHERSTONE.

5, Rock-terrace, Boxley-road, Maidstone.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—Allow me to thank you for the favourable notice you have given to our forthcoming penny monthly periodical. I would not trouble you further were it not that your informant has, unintentionally, represented me as readily embracing Identity truth. Instead of being won over to it by one week's study of the subject, I combated the arguments advanced in its favour for over two years. In connection with the meetings at the Young Men's Christian Association, I gave two papers consecutively, one partly in favour of the Identity, the other flatly opposed to it. Your correspondent, speaking from memory, and after the lapse of a considerable period, may easily have forgotten one paper. He is right, however, as to his deductions. As an instance of the false impression produced, I may state, that during the week I have received both a letter and pamphlet from Clericus, who must have seen the BANNER and evidently thinks me an easy prey. Kindly insert this in an early issue of your invaluable paper, and you will oblige

Respectfully yours,

Liverpool, Oct. 15, 1879. JAMES CATTERALL.

LINES TO H.R.H. THE PRINCESS OF WALES.

(From the "Pall Mall Gazette," Oct. 8, 1879).

WRITTEN on March 10, 1879, the anniversary, sixteen years ago, of the landing of the Princess:

"Great Princess, daughter of the great sea kings;
Chaste wife, thy husband's blessing and his crown;
Fond mother, circled by thy children's love,
True woman, crowned and throned in Britain's heart,
Till crowns and thrones and Britain pass away!

Whatever faction stirs on foreign soil,
Rest thou at home upon thy people's love:
Though other Powers' long-laid foundations shake,
A throne is builded in great England's heart
For thee and thine: and millions yet unborn
Shall speak thy praise in all our country's GATES."

Was the authoress of the above lines an Israelite?

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements
(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O O payable at Ludgate-circus.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed :—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

BANNER FREE CIRCULATION FUND. Subscriptions, which are much needed, will be received by R. Fergusson Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, to whom applications for FREE GRANTS should be made.

THE HASTINGS AND ST. LEONARDS BRANCH OF THE METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

ANGLO-ISRAELISM.

A LECTURE

Will be delivered on November 6, by

THE REV. C. W. HICKSON, M.A.,
Vicar of St. Bartholomew's, Bristol, at the CASTLE HOTEL ASSEMBLY ROOMS, HASTINGS.

Subject, "The British Nation a Hebrew Nation Argued from Scripture."
The Chair to be taken at Eight o'clock.

Also at the ASSEMBLY ROOMS, ST. LEONARDS, on November 7.
Subject, "Scriptural Objections Considered."
The Chair to be taken at 8 o'clock.

ANGLO-ISRAEL SERVICES will be conducted (D.V.) on SUNDAY NEXT, at BARNSBURY HALL, Barnsbury Street, Islington, by Rev. H. MARRIOTT, M.A. (Late Missionary to the Jews at Tanjier). Hour of worship, 3 p.m.

NEW PAMPHLETS.

Price 4d., post free 5d.

JAPHETIC OR SEMITIC: WHICH ARE WE?

BY CAROLINE PEARSE.

Showing the different character of the promises and blessings and chastisements foretold as destined for the two Houses of Israel and Judah, and consequently the different careers it was foretold they would accomplish.

Now ready, price 2d., post free 2½d., in neat coloured cover.

AMMI;
OR,
THE CHOSEN PEOPLE,

BY MISS BIRD.

Tracing the descent of the British people from Abraham, the "friend of God," and showing that true science, history, philology, and ethnology, are on the side of the Identity of the Anglo-Saxon race with the Ten Lost Tribes.

In neat coloured cover, price 2d., post free 2½d.

BLESSINGS AND CURSES, AND THEIR RELATION TO ISRAEL AND JUDAH. By F. W. PHILLIPS, of Speedwell-road, Birmingham.

ISRAEL'S HOPE AND DESTINY.
A New Monthly Journal.
EDITED BY EPHRATAH.
Advocating the Identity of the British Nation with the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel.
No. 1, Published November, 1879.
Price 1d. Monthly. Per post 1s. 6d. per Annum.

Contents of No. 1 (Now Ready): 1. Our Aim. 2. Original Poetry (written expressly for this Journal), Mrs. Harrison. 3. The Merchants of Tarshish and Russia (especially contributed to this Journal), Philo-Israel. 4. Rachel's Children, G. Bullock. 5 God's Inheritance, Miss Tainsh. 6. Poetry (selected), Cowper. 7. Gleanings. 8. Correspondence. Clericus. Will shortly appear "An Adversary on the Scriptural Distinction between Judah and Israel," by Philo-Israel.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row. Liverpool: J. Catterall, 3, Mill-street. Also through any Newsagent or Bookseller. Order Early.

NEW BOOKS.

NEW WORK BY DR. WILD.

NOW READY, price 3s., post free 3s. 4d. Handsome cloth, gilt, printed on toned paper and illustrated.

THE LOST TEN TRIBES,
AND 1882.

BY THE

REV. DR. JOSEPH WILD,
Of Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Printed and published by

ROBERT BANKS, RACQUET COURT, FLEET ST., LONDON, E.C.

And may be had, by ordering, of any Bookseller.

PHILO-ISRAEL (in the BANNER) says:—"We have much pleasure in directing attention to this handsome Identity volume. It contains twenty discourses of the well-known American divine Dr. Joseph Wild, of Brooklyn, N.Y. We are glad to find from these discourses that Dr. Wild is quite one with us on this side the water with most, though not all, the views we entertain on our great and glorious subject. . . . We promise our readers that if they procure this work, and will peruse it, they will find 'our Identity' discussed in a clear, novel, racy, and 'American' point of view, which is sure to interest, sure to be instructive, and may lead the thoughtless and inquiring to pursue the investigation till possibly conviction may be the result."

EXTRACT FROM PREFACE:—

The main idea I wish to convey in this book, is that God is conducting His Providence through His ancient chosen people, Israel, whom I believe are found in the Saxon race. And His throne on earth, through which flow the purposes of Providence, is David's throne, which I believe to be at present the English throne. Queen Victoria (and God bless her) I believe to be of David's seed. The United States fulfils the rôle of the Tribe of Manasseh. Therefore, to understand the prophecies, Providence, and the present movements of nations, as well as the future lot and destiny of each, we must read the Scriptures in this light. God has made the children of Israel and throne of David His executive, in time, on earth. They are His executive for civilisation, evangelisation, order, and conquest. Through them God will conquer the world to an universal peace. As Moses was to God, so is Israel. Moses being a Divine executor, was to the people a god—so is Israel to all mankind. Spiritual Israel will come through literal Israel.

For Contents see BANNER for October 1st.

HORÆ PROPHETICÆ: WHAT DOES THE BIBLE TEACH ABOUT GREAT BRITAIN? Establishing the Identity of the Anglo-Saxon Race with the House of Ephraim.

BY REV. H. MARRIOTT, M.A.

Price 3s. in paper, 4s. in cloth boards.
W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.
T. E. Chilcott, Bristol.

WORKS BY PHILO-ISRAEL.
Price 2d., post free 2½d.

THE HISTORICAL, ETHNIC, AND PHILOLOGICAL ARGUMENTS in PROOF of BRITISH IDENTITY with the TEN LOST TRIBES OF ISRAEL, clearly and simply stated.

BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

CONTENTS:—Introduction—The Celts—Professor Rawlinson's Testimony—The Cymry—The Cimmerii—The Gimiri and Khumri—The Testimony of the Nimroud Obelisk—The Scythians—The Anglo-Saxons—Sharon Turner's Testimony—The Jutes and Angles—The Danes and the Normans—General Conclusions—Philology—The Welsh Language—The Rev. Canon Lysons' Testimony—Idiomatic Identity Between Hebrew and English—Tyndal's Testimony—The Tribe of Dan—The Irish Celts—Are the Continental Nations Israelites?—Conclusions—Appendix.

Price 4d., post free 5d.

AN ELEMENTARY DIGEST or SKETCH OF THE CHIEF FACTS and TEACHINGS of the GREAT PYRAMID of EGYPT; adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific. By PHILO-ISRAEL; together with Original Papers by the following leading Pyramidists, republished mostly from the BANNER OF ISRAEL (by kind permission of the proprietor)—viz., Professor Piazzi Smyth, the Rev. W. Hickson, M.A., Charles Horner, Esq., and Major H. A. Tracey, R.A. Being a pamphlet by five authors (a Pyramid number).

Price 2d. Post free 2½d.

MANASSEH AND THE UNITED STATES. An important Essay delivered before the "Lost Israel Identification Society," by the Rev. JOSEPH WILD, D.D at Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, New York.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet Court, Fleet Street; and may be had, by ordering, of any bookseller.

NEW BOOKS.

A NEW TALE OF GREAT INTEREST FOR YOUNG PEOPLE ON THE IDENTITY OF LOST ISRAEL.

Now ready, price 2s. 6d., post free 2s. 9d. Bound in handsome cloth, gilt, bevelled boards, gilt edges, and beautifully printed on toned paper.

THE SISTERS
OF HARROWDALE RECTORY.

BY

MRS. M. A. SEARSON,
ILLUSTRATED WITH
BEAUTIFUL DOUBLE-PAGE FRONTISPIECE.

Printed and Published by
ROBERT BANKS, RACQUET COURT, FLEET ST., LONDON, E.C.
And may be had, by ordering, of any Bookseller.

CONTENTS:—

CHAPTER I.
Harrowdale Rectory. The Rector's Family. God's Own Architect. An English Parsonage. The Aged Grandmother. Hospitality to Strangers. Frances Farnwood. Restoration to the Promised Land. Discussion on "Our Identity."

CHAPTER II.
A Quiet Controversy. A God-given Dream. Guardian Angels. A Visit to Paradise. What Paradise is Like. The Occupation of Angels. Michael the Archangel. Before the Throne of God. Israel My Heritage. The Wondrous Love of Christ. Unfolding of Prophecy Concerning Israel. A Visit to Souls in Prison. The Wonders of God's Perfect Will. Hopeless Condition of Lost Souls.

CHAPTER III.
Mother's Dream. Old Mother Davis. The Village of Harrowdale Described. William Edwards the Miner. Working Men's Homes. The Miner and the Identification of Lost Israel. The Chariot Wheels of Israel. Discouragements Overcome. A Visit to Mrs. Bertram. Her Daily Life. Her Belief in the English being Lost Israel. The Sisters' Visit to Mrs. Bertram. Mother Davis. Dinner With Mother Davis. Mother Davis and the Lost Ten Tribes. God Faithful to His Promises. The Coming of Our Lord.

CHAPTER IV.
Visit of Aunt Winslow and Cousin Calvin to the Rectory. A Family Tea-party. An Anglo-Israel Meeting. Calvin and His Uncle. The Return to Palestine. Israel or Judah—Which? What the Bible Reveals. The Wanderings of Our Israelite Ancestry. The Second Coming of Christ. A Sunday Evening Identity Class. The Bible Appealed to.

CHAPTER V.
The Neighbouring Clergymen Visit the Rectory. A Mutual Understanding. Marion's Opinion of Cousin Calvin. Calvin's Opinion of His Cousin. A Sketch of Rural Life. Miss Stanmore. Matrimonial Mistakes. Marion's Firm Belief in Providence. Calvin's Engagement to Miss Stanmore. Remarks on Unequal Marriages. The Calm after a Storm. A Parable. A Pledge of Love. The Parable Explained.

CHAPTER VI.
Calvin's Belief in our Identity. Captain Johnstone Introduced. Captain Johnstone and Miss Stanmore. An Open Avowal. Calvin Released from His Engagement. The Fever-Stricken Family. Calvin's Second Visit to Harrowdale. Sympathy and Help. A Visit to the Sick Chamber.

CHAPTER VII.
Illness of the Rector's Wife. Poor Susan. Mrs. Wildman's Trust in Her Saviour. "Going Home" in the Glorious Sunshine. The Heavenly Jerusalem. The Mother's Last Charge. Calvin and Marion. Good-bye.

This book will be read with interest by both young and old, and found well suited for a BIRTHDAY GIFT, SUNDAY SCHOOL REWARD OR PRESENT.

Price 6d., post free 7d. New work on the Identity. Dedicated to all faithful ministers of Christ.

ISRAEL! AN EARNEST APPEAL FROM THE EW TO THE PULPIT IN FAVOUR OF OUR IDENTITY WITH GOD'S ELECT PEOPLE, ISRAEL; Being a Letter from JOHN G. SHAW to his Pastor, Rev. Eustace R. Conder, of Leeds, with an Introduction and Notes; to be followed by a Review of Mr Conder's Papers on the Lost Tribes.

By the same Author.

"BRITAIN (OR ISRAEL)," with Map. Price 8d., post free 9d.

"CHRONOLOGICAL CHART." Price 3d, post free 3½d.

"GOD'S LOVE FOR ISRAEL." Price 1d., 3 copies sent post free for 3½d.

London: ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, NOV. 5, 1879. [All Rights Reserved.]

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. III. No. 150. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 12, 1879. [ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

PAGE
"Defence—Not Dominion" 453
The Future of Afghanistan 454
The High Sheriff of Bristol as a Blind Witness 454
Identity Difficulties Answered.—Part VI. 455
"In Labours More Abundant" 456
The Times, and Others, Against the Great Pyramid. By Professor Piazzi Smyth, Astronomer-Royal for Scotland 456
Israel and Her Opponents.—Part II. By Wm. W. Mellor 457
Progress.—The Rev. James Billington at Perth, N.B. 458
Review 459
Correspondence 460

"DEFENCE—NOT DOMINION."

LORD SALISBURY, when at Manchester, on Oct. 17th, 1879, made a great and a remarkable speech at the banquet given in his honour at the Manchester Free Trade Hall. During the course of it he declared that our national policy in reference to the affairs of Afghanistan and Central Asia, was "Defence and not Dominion." "It is that," his Lordship said, "we seek." No doubt! Israel in these days desire ostensibly no new acquisition of territories anywhere. We have already one-fifth of the earth included in our empire, and about 280,000,000 of the globe's inhabitants as the Queen's subjects. Why, then, should we want more? We know nothing nationally yet of our Identity, and the royalty it brings with it; and nationally we desire to know nothing of either. But God's will has to be done! Lord Salisbury may declare amid "cheers" in Manchester that "Defence and not Dominion is what we seek," but the question is, What would God have us to do?

In Zululand we had no wish for conquest or annexation either. Yet God, against our wishes, sent us the disaster of Isandhlwana, which forced us to conquer the Zulu nation, dethrone Cetywayo, banish him and "break" his nation and his policy "into pieces" (Psa. ii. 9). We had no wish to touch the Transvaal; yet God made our condition at the Cape, in view to the dangerous misconduct of the Boers, so precarious, that we were forced to take their country, annex it, and to tell the Boers in stern and determined tones, only last month, that "the Queen's standard shall float over the Transvaal as long as sun and moon endure!" We "sought not Dominion but Defence" at the Cape, but God arranged that Defence could only be secured by additional Transvaal Dominion. Thus, and thus only, we acquired the whole of the Punjab, after the decisive battle of Goojerat on Feb. 21st, 1849. The Sikh nation invaded our Indian territories, and after their crushing defeat at the battle of Subraon, on Feb. 10th, 1846, we thought more of "Defence than Dominion," for we left their territories intact, and refused annexation. But God raised them once more in rebellion against us at Mooltan and at Chillianwalla—events which taught us a lesson we have to learn yet again, it seems, to-day in Afghanistan (if Lord Salisbury can induce us to be so foolish)—that our Indian policy is not "Defence without Dominion," but through dominion, security, and defence!

We hear reports as we write, which we suppose may be premature, but which we ardently hope are true—namely, that the Russians are already at Merv, and mean if they can, to get the "Gate" of Afghanistan before we can secure it by occupying HERAT. We trust that report is founded on fact; since then the British nation will be united as one man in the true policy, which is, that to hold India we must secure Afghanistan, and to keep our grasp of the latter, we must have its Western Gate (as we already possess its Southern and Eastern Gates), Herat. Herat must be ours sooner or later. Russia will see to that; and meanwhile, what we would urge on our readers to comprehend is this—that the talk of British policy as "Defence and not Dominion" is absurdity itself, in the face of patent facts, and it is infatuation, too, in the mouth of the Minister of a people which has spoilt the nations of the world of their lands in the four quarters of the earth, and to exist at all must constantly acquire still more! "Defence not Dominion" is a saying which has no meaning in the utterance of a Foreign Secretary, who, since he has been in the Ministry now in power, has added to the empire the Transvaal, Cyprus, the Fiji Islands, immense territories near and round the Cape Colonies, and various islands of the sea, —a Ministry which maintains (very properly) her Majesty's royal claims over countless possessions in Europe, in Asia, in Africa, in America, and in Australasia, which claims the supremacy and guardianship of almost all the ocean high-ways of the world, and which boasts that the morning drum never ceases for a moment during our livelong day and night throughout the globe, in one part or another of her Majesty's world-wide dominions. "Defence" our object, "not Dominion!" What could Lord Salisbury have meant? Our national object always has been, always is, and always will be, universal dominion, till the whole globe is ours, since we are God's supplanting people —Jacob and Israel—and the Lord Himself has said, that "the kingdom and dominion and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven SHALL be given to the people of the saints of the Most High; even the children of Israel—a people near to Him. Praise ye the Lord!" And those people are the British!

Digitized by Google

Not Dominion? Then God's Word fails. Not Dominion? Then His purposes are defeated. Not Dominion? Then His plans collapse. The very reverse must be, and always is, the case; for this nation, knowing universally their high destiny, longs and pants for universal domination, and thinks not of "Defence" at all, but "Dominion" always and everywhere.

We trust Lord Salisbury will, ere long, realise who and what this race is, for whom he rules as chief Foreign Minister. It is God's chosen people Israel—HIS dominion! "God's dominion" needs not "Defence!" His Lordship need not dream of that. It craves earthly supremacy, and that world-wide, for GOD'S GLORY. Of this we may be sure, "the kingdom" being God's, He will secure that its extension shall be "to the utmost bound of the everlasting hills: which are HIS" (Gen. xlix. 26).

THE FUTURE OF AFGHANISTAN.

THE Pall Mall Gazette, of October 9, 1879, had some sensible remarks regarding our future action in Afghanistan. We must, indeed, convince these enemies of ours of our mastery. And how is that to be done? By running away again from Cabul in a few weeks, just as we conquered Zululand, and then made haste to send every soldier away, telling the Zulus "to behave well in future," excluding the Bible, and leaving barbarism and murder to have full scope? Nay, that will not "pay" now, as it has never "paid" yet. It did not "pay" in the Punjab, but cost us millions of money, and heaps of slain, in a second campaign. So, unless we retrace our steps, Zululand will cost us much more blood and treasure; so will Afghanistan, too, if we fail to do what the Pall Mall counsels—namely, to "establish permanent military posts in the more important 'strong places,'" and make the subjugated country pay for the occupation till they see that peace and honest dealing are more to their own advantage than murder and treason. The Pall Mall Gazette said:—

> Precipitate retirement from such strongholds as fall into our hands is a policy always open to misconstruction by Orientals, and by the Afghans it has been obviously misconstrued. This mistake, therefore, must on no account be repeated. We must show the inhabitants of the country that we are neither unable nor afraid to keep possession of what we take, and this we can easily do without resorting to the extreme measure of annexing Afghanistan. It would be enough to establish a permanent military occupation of the more important of its strong places; but nothing less than this will suffice. It is out of the question to incur the risk of a third insurrection in Cabul necessitating a third expedition to subdue and punish the insurgents; and we must not shrink from the only measures by which this risk can be obviated in the future. The presence of British garrisons in the various strongholds of Afghanistan would be a sign of our superior strength and a memento of its latest exercise, which would probably have their effect upon even the most disaffected of the Afghan people; and, even if it did not effectually deter from insurrectionary movements, it would afford ready means of suppressing them. Annexation, as we have always insisted, is not to be thought of; but between this policy and that of annexation, there is a substantial difference. A permanent occupation of fixed points in Afghanistan can be perfectly well combined with whatever plan of political reconstitution may approve itself as the best to be adopted when once the country has been reduced to order. Difficult as that question may be to settle—and we can see its difficulties already—it lies apart from the military question, and need not prejudice or complicate it in any degree.

With this programme (since the word annexation terrifies Israel) we are quite content. What is required is political and permanent British supremacy over Afghanistan. The troops which "hold the country down" at its "Gates" must, of course, be paid for by the country where their presence is required, and just as Scindia and Holkar, and the Rajahs of Mysore and Travancore, the Nizam of Hydrabad, and the late Gaicawar, had to pay, and most of them still pay for the British contingents which hold their respective "Gates," while we leave the Hindu States, each a nominal independence, as the paramount Power in the East, so all we look for prophetically in the case of Afghanistan, is what the Pall Mall Gazette sketches out for us—namely, to rule over that county by placing "the bit in its mouth;" by controlling its foreign and domestic policy; by forcing it to keep the peace at home and also abroad; and to do no act, fire no gun, think no thought, of which we, as "the kings of the East," disapprove. But all this need not involve that terrible thing, "annexation," or interference with the local rule of the country thus conquered. It represents the youth of "the pepul tree"—its early stage. But, then, that youth is followed, as we all know, by a time when the pepul tree is mature—and then—? (Dan. vii. 27).

THE HIGH SHERIFF OF BRISTOL AS A BLIND WITNESS.

AT a meeting of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel, held in Clifton during the late anniversary, celebrated in September, 1879, Mr. C. B. Hare, the High Sheriff of Bristol, was in the chair. In his opening address, the chairman said:—

> It had often struck him in considering missionary work what an extraordinary thing it was that one of the most distinctive features of the English race was the wonderful missionary enterprise which seemed to take hold of the hearts of the people. When they thought that the English nation was doing more for mission work than the whole of the other Christian nations, it spoke well for the hearts of her people. (Hear, hear.) He believed England was far ahead in the interest she took in this work. Next came America, but she could not reach in any degree the work which emanated from England. (Hear, hear.) Some people outside England might say that she had only one idea—that of making money; and others in England might say that she only went abroad for the sake of aggrandisement and increasing her territory. But it was a fact that a large amount of money was annually sent out, and a large number of gentlemen went abroad, for the sake of Christianising the heathen. The money was sent forth without the slightest hope of return, and the missionaries went out with only the hope of spreading the Gospel. (Applause.) When the world looked at these facts, it would see that there was nothing selfish in the missionary spirit which emanated from the English nation. (Hear, hear.) Missionary enterprise was inculcated into the English people from their earliest childhood, and he hoped the day was far distant when that enterprise would be counted a thing of the past. (Applause.)

Mr. Hare did not stop to inquire why the British did more for mission work than all the other Christian nations. We know—since the Identity has enlightened us—that the reason, and the only one, is "because we are Israel," and to that race, and that only, the Lord has entrusted the commission to take the Gospel "to ALL the nations and to ALL the families of the earth" (Gen. xxii. 18, xxviii. 14). The exact proportion between the missionary zeal put forward by our race (being Israel) and the Gentile nations, we calculated in 1876, and the results were published at pages 44, 45, Life from the Dead, No. 26, vol. iii. We then found that "the British and American nations and Churches which represent the seed of Abraham, maintain about twice as many foreign Protestant missions as all the Gentile nations of the earth put together; also that the expenditure on the work by the former compares with the income of all the foreign missions of Gentile Protestant nations combined, as £1,519,000 is to £120,000, or in the ratio of 12 to 1."

The exact sums received by the British religious and missionary societies during 1878 and 1879 have been well recorded in the following, and we publish the items now for future use and record. It will be seen that the volume of

Digitized by Google

British beneficence for Christ's cause at home and abroad is immense, and we are certain it cannot be even distantly matched anywhere abroad. Our statistics, taken from page 479 of the Sunday at Home for July, 1879, are as follows:—

The receipts of the five principal missionary societies for the past year and the year preceding were as follows:—

	1878.	1879.
Church Missionary Society . . .	£223,038	£232,836
Society for the Propagation of the Gospel.	148,438	145,236
Wesleyan Missionary Society. . .	146,017	133,333
London Missionary Society . . .	109,348	101,100
Baptist Missionary Society . . .	50,068	46,092
	£676,909	£658,597

The decrease thus shown on last year's receipts as compared with the year preceding is more than counterbalanced by the increased income reported by other societies. We find that fifty-six of these institutions (including the most important) received in the aggregate, during the past year, the following amounts:—

Bible Society.	£213,811
Religious Tract and Kindred Societies	171,590
Missionary Societies	700,238
Colonial, Jewish, and other Missions.	145,222
Home Missions	386.248
Religious Educational Societies	86,414
	£1,703,523

There has been a clear increase in the aggregate amount received last year by our religious institutions of about £16,000.

Well may Mr. Hare wonder when he considers these figures without Identity light. They fill us with joy and astonishment as well. They constitute a unique and utterly confounding evidence—which our opponents cannot get over or explain—to prove the British are Israel, since God, who cannot lie, who cannot repent, whose "gifts and callings are" absolutely "without repentance," gave to Israel, and that race only, the privilege of "blossoming, and budding, and filling the face of the world with fruit" (Isa. xxvii. 6). We alone fulfil the function, and therefore must be Israel. Mr. Hare need wonder no more.

IDENTITY DIFFICULTIES ANSWERED.

(Continued from page 316.)

PART VI.

ARE THE BRITISH THE "REMNANT" OF THE SINGLE TRIBE OF EPHRAIM, OR OF THE TEN-TRIBED PEOPLE "EPHRAIM?"

WE find the Teutonic or Gothic theory hard to kill. It rears its head at unexpected times and seasons. Its advocates are often clergymen, who, seeing at last the impossibility of denying our "Israelitish origin," take refuge in some of the late John Wilson's early views; also, those now held by the "Gothic" theorists. Such stoutly maintain that we are the representatives of only the single Tribe of Ephraim. They appeal to Gen. xlviii. 15—20 as authority for this view, and regard the nations of the Continent as the remaining nine Tribes. We propose to deal with this question once more, and to show our readers the utter impossibility of explaining either our national position, or the plain statements of the Scriptures on the subject, should it be asserted that our Gothic friends are right.

In the first place, let these our friends try and explain to us the prophecy of Hosea on the hypothesis that the prophet meant, by speaking of "Ephraim," to designate the one Tribe of that name, and not the Ten of which it was the head. They cannot! Hos. iv. 17; v. 3, 9, 11—14; vi. 4, 10; vii. 1, 8, 11; viii. 9—11; ix. 8, 11, 13, 16, and other verses too numerous to mention in that prophecy, can none of them be explained if the allusion was to the one Tribe—not the Ten, of Israel. The words "Ephraim" and "Israel" are used often interchangeably, and the Gothic theorists cannot by any ingenuity separate them.

Throughout this great prophecy relating to the history of the Ten Tribes, the latter are without doubt called "Ephraim" as well as "Israel." In the next place, no man can show from Scripture that the nine Tribes were ever dealt with by their God in their political capacity separately from "Ephraim," the one Tribe. The latter is the designation of God's "first-born" in Jer. xxxi. 9, after the Assyrian captivity had occurred; and there God Himself records: "I am a Father to Israel and Ephraim My first-born." (The verb is is not in the original Hebrew.) Here the two names are also synonymous, and both are applied to "the House" or "Kingdom" of Israel, then in captivity together, under universal condemnation. Again, how is Isa. vii. 1—9 to be explained except on the admission that Ephraim is Israel of the Ten-Tribed kingdom? The thing is impossible. "Syria is confederate with Ephraim." Was this with the one Tribe or with the Ten? Were Syria and the son of Remaliah, of the fifth verse, acting in confederation with Ephraim the Tribe, or Ephraim the Ten-Tribed Nation? Was it only the Tribe which was to be broken—"that it be not a people," as stated in ver. 8—or the whole kingdom? "The head of Ephraim is Samaria, and the head of Samaria is Remaliah's son," says ver. 9. Did this mean that the latter was king of one Tribe only, and that Ephraim? Was Samaria, the capital, the representative of only one Tribe? Did only Ephraim, the one Tribe, depart from Judah 2,700 years ago? Jer. vii. 12, 15 compared, plainly prove that "My people Israel" and "the whole seed of Ephraim" were one and the same, not the mere one-tenth of the Hebrew nation, serving Baal and departing by idolatry from the living God. "The Tribe of Ephraim," of Psa. lxxviii. 67, 68, was plainly descriptive of the House of Joseph or Ephraim—the type of Israel of the Ten Tribes, with whom, since they partook of their sins, they had to share the punishment. Lastly, Isa. xi. 12, 13, are verses inexplicable except on the supposition that the Ten Tribes, compared in this passage with Judah, are the Long Lost House of Israel.

Further, if we compare the words of Jer. xxxi. 9 with those of the dying patriarch in his blessing to the two sons of Joseph (Gen. xlviii. 16), we learn that Ephraim and Manasseh were the special inheritors of the name of "Israel." The other Tribes partake of the name only by union and companionship with them. If the nine Tribes are now, then, in separation, they do not bear to-day the name of "Israel," nor, we add, are they entitled to bear it in the future. By one consent, people call the Tribe of Judah "The Jews." They are "OF Israel," but they are not "Israel" itself.

Once more we would ask our Teutonic believers to explain why, if Ephraim is separate at present from his fellows, his stick has on it the record that it is "For Joseph, the stick of Ephraim, and all the House of Israel his companions." God promises also, in Ezek. xxxvii. 16—19, to take "the stick of Joseph, which is in the hand of Ephraim and the Tribes of Israel his fellows," and unite it with the stick of solitary Judah, making thus one stick, not of eleven, but of TWO sticks. Our Gothic friends say, the House of Israel are now in these "latter days," when the junction of Israel and Judah is at hand, in separation: Ephraim in the British Isles, the rest in the Continent of Europe—Australia, America, and elsewhere. But God's Word says, Ephraim and the rest of the nine Tribes are "fellows," "companions," and that, as representing "all the House of Israel." Which are we to follow, God's Word, or our Gothic friends?

We would ask our opposing Israelites, further, how it has come to pass, if we British are only Ephraim the one Tribe of Israel, we have had bestowed on us all the promises and blessings that belong to all the Tribes alike if obedient, such as "the Gate," the power "to lend to many nations, never the need to borrow; the power "to rule over many nations, the freedom from alien domination;" the privilege of Gospel propagation "to ALL the nations and ALL the families of the earth;" the blossoming and budding faculty, "filling the face of the world with fruit." We know from Scripture that Judah is now under special curse for crucifying the Lord, and therefore has no part in these blessings as yet. But what Scriptural warrant is there for the idea that only one Tribe has turned to the Lord and "become obedient?"—thus acquiring, as the exclusive inheritor, privileges and blessings promised to the seed of Abraham generally "if only obedient?"

Digitized by Google

The Ten Tribes went by the common representative name of "Ephraim," the leading Tribe of Israel. Just so our own nation, composed of four nationalities so-called—English, Scotch, Irish, and Welsh—is called by the common name of England and the English. The English gained the battle of Waterloo, possess India, rule the sea, are an abnormally wealthy race, and carry the Gospel to the ends and uttermost parts of the earth. But does any sane man suppose we desire, by using that name, to imply that the Scots, the Irish, and the Welsh were not the conquerors of Napoleon, the holders of India, the rulers of the ocean, wealthy beyond description, and are not sharers in the propagation of the Gospel? Just so, speaking of Ephraim, the Scriptures include the nine other Tribes, of which the former was the head; and the term includes, but cannot exclude, the nine Tribes, who were Ephraim's "fellows."

The above by no means exhausts the arguments we can bring to bear on our subject, but they suffice to discredit the Teutonic, or Gothic, theory. It has not, and never had, our sympathy; and just so far as the late good John Wilson held it, so far we believe him to have been in error. Had he lived till now, when we see all Europe, including the beloved German nation of our Gothic friends, about to be plunged into the horrors of the great "earth"-quake, instead of being shielded therefrom, as promised in Isa. xxvi. 20, 21, he would have seen that the House of Israel is not Tribally connected with the Teutonic nations now, but has been clean separated out of them, and gathered in perfect safety (waiting the outburst of the awful storm) in I'ii I'yâm, the prophetic "Isles of the West" of Isa. xxiv. 15—the "British Isles" of the modern Continental Jews.

"IN LABOURS MORE ABUNDANT."

WE wish our readers to note the unparalleled exertions our Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association is making in the person of its able and indefatigable secretary, the Rev. Jas. Billington, F.S.A., and F.R.H.S., to spread the knowledge of "our Identity."

On Oct. 7th, 1879, he lectured in the Town Hall, Hythe, Kent. The audience was good.

On the 8th, at the Town Hall, Arundel. The audience fair.

On the 13th, he travelled up to Perth, N.B., and on the 14th, lectured on the same subject to about 1,500 people in the City Hall.

On the 15th, he was at Brechin and spoke to about 500.

On the 16th, he was back again at Perth, and delivered his second lecture there to 1,400 persons.

On the 17th, he lectured at Montrose, to over 700.

On the next day, Saturday, Oct. 18th, he left for London, and conducted two services there on the 19th.

On the 20th, he left for Hull, and lectured at Withernsea, 12 miles further on.

On the 21st, at Hull, to 1,100 people.

On the 22nd, at Huddersfield, to a good gathering.

On the 23rd, at Birkenhead and Liverpool, to two deeply interested audiences.

The 24th, a very wet night, saw a fairly good audience listening to our friend on the subject of our Identity at Chester.

The rev. secretary thus travelled 2,000 miles, delivered 14 lectures, preached 4 sermons, within the space of 14 days, all on the subject of our Identity, and had for his audience no fewer than 8,000 persons! Other tours on the same scale are under arrangement—one into Cornwall, where we know, as a fact, Redruth wants a lecturer; and meanwhile, though applications for lectures are coming in from all parts, Sheffield, Oldham, Mirfield, Shipley, Chichester, Littlehampton, and Arundel have not been neglected.

We say indeed, with reference to Mr. Billington's zealous efforts, assisted by those of Mr. Douglas Onslow, that "in labours" for our cause these friends "are more abundant" than any of their predecessors in this field. We hope, if God grants them health and strength, that they may continue to do this work for the Lord, and that He will send them many able fellow-helpers with much fruit for their labours.

"THE TIMES," AND OTHERS, AGAINST THE GREAT PYRAMID.

A FRIEND, "trembling in the West," has sent me a copy of the Thunderer for October 15, containing a review of a book called "A Ride in Egypt," by one Mr. W. J. Loftie. The review is of more than a column's length; is laudatory to a most high degree; gives favoured extracts from the work; indulges in Egyptologically-inclined remarks of its own; and shows the fluent writer of it, whether high up or low down on the contributors' staff of the Times, to have been recently on an ordinary tourist's excursion in Lower Egypt; to be a contemner of the Great Pyramid for anything else than a royal tomb; and to have spent a morning, perhaps two, in looking over relics at the Egypto-French Museum at Boolak.

No wonder, then, that this reviewer, on striking in with Mr. Loftie, of whom nearly all the same things may be said, but with the addition in his case that he has taken a donkey-ride in Egyptian land, as well as been a boat voyage on the Nile—no wonder, we say, that on the meeting of two such geniuses, the sparks of enthusiasm between them leapt high; while they were busily engaged in raising up some things, chiefly their own opinions, to the pinnacles of fame, and knocked down others including private reputations, with surprising facility and happy dispatch. The Thunderer, moreover, is gracious enough to "prophesy" remarkable success, at least during the next traveller's season, to Mr. Loftie's book; and though finding need to correct him very considerably whenever he touches upon the well-known men or things of modern Egypt, yet gives him unlimited praise and confidence for his thorough knowledge of everything during the very oldest of all the old ages of the so-called ancient Egypt. In virtue of which surpassing amount of antiquated information, it would seem that Mr. Loftie tosses the Bible chronology of early periods overboard as totally false; "absolutely revels in the extreme age of Egyptian civilization" according to Manetho; denounces the "time-progress and other fantastical theories," whatever they may be, about the Great Pyramid; and declares that monument, "without any doubt which a reasonable man can entertain," to be merely "a burial mound of one of a long line of kings who all erected similar mounds."

Really, when a Times-approved author, said to be so perfectly at home with everything of, or belonging to, the most ancient Egypt, can deliberately call a finished architectural monument like the Great Pyramid, of the best masonic construction the world has seen yet in squared and polished stone-work, "a mound;" and can see no difference in it from a number of other "mounds;" some actually mounds or mere subsiding heaps of nameless dust and dirt; but others, sound architectural works enough in themselves, yet without one important feature in number, weight, or measure, like or similar to what has been incontestibly ascertained by most precise measure and attested record of the Great Pyramid—it is perfectly useless to argue with him on any part of that subject. Moreover, the line and character of his assertions is merely after the accustomed way of all Egyptologists, beginning with the inveterately anti-Christian Proclus of 450 A.D., down to his followers of the present time. We have placed the necessary Great Pyramid facts, to confute those theorists, in print, before the public years ago; we abide by them still, and are quite content to leave the result in the hands of a righteous and merciful God.

Digitized by Google

But is there nothing, demands our friend, really new and terribly important to all believers in Scripture, in this fresh and Times-applauded book of Mr. Loftie's? Does he not prove the Egyptological side of the grand question for the Egyptologists; and show Manetho to be all truth, and Moses all error, when touching upon the chronology of man's real history?

You must not expect too much from an author who, as the Thunderer rather boasts concerning Mr. Loftie, "has gathered a capital lecture on the kings, the gods, and the people, with many details of the old social life (of the most ancient Egypt), and has added some valuable hints to collectors as to scarabs true and false," all from "a visit to the Boolak Museum." But as we ourselves know the articles he saw there, we have no objection to trying a tilt with him as to their bearing on Moses versus Manetho, and on the Biblical inspired history of man as God-assisted in the beginning, versus nothing but rationalistic progressive development of Nature's iron laws.

On this line, says M. Mariette Bey in his Catalogue Boulakienne—and, as follow him implicitly both hight W. J. Loftie, and eke Mr. Times Reviewer—"The earliest statuary of Egypt is the best. Where," ask they, "are the signs of the infancy of Egyptian art?" "The further we go back, the more complete it (Egyptian art) appears."

Now let all BANNER readers mark that! The further we go back in Egyptian history, the more excellent, perfect, and complete is the sculpture we find of Egypt at that early time. So the quoted trio says; so say the Museum facts also, and so do I too. But then, how do the first three grandees reason on such a remarkable conclusion; they who basely stigmatized the Great Pyramid students as being unreasoning? Roars the mighty Thunderer, in its own renowned type, for itself and its Egyptological friends, "It is evident the style grew up by degrees."

Nay, dear Mr. Thunderer, not so at all: the evidence, if you please, is exactly the other way; for even by your own just previous statement, the earliest specimen of Egyptian sculpture (as so abundantly evident to you and others practically at the Boolak Museum) is invariably found to be the best of all the Egyptian ages; so that the style must have come out, not by degrees, as of men or of nature, but suddenly, and perfect at once, as by the fiat of Almighty God.

We do not in truth need anything more than this simple and well-attested evidential fact to turn the scales for early Biblical history against latter-day rationalistic theory. It is perfect! But on so important a question, Providence has given us proof upon proof. And there is actually more still to be obtained out of those pieces of ancient sculpture, put in as solid blocks of evidence on the other side. For both the Times writer, Mr. Loftie, and Mariette Bey do fully, though unintentionally, agree with what I had already detailed in "Our Inheritance in the Great Pyramid," to the effect,—that those earliest specimens of Egyptian sculpture show a rapid physical change in its human subjects, to have been going on during the first few reigns only; starting from a very stout, muscular, Assyrian, modern European type of man, and ending, in a few years, in the well-known long slim figures which the later Egyptians always presented during the lengthy remainder, or full nine-tenths, of their whole populous Pharaonic duration of empire. Not only indeed do the Times-introduced authors agree with me there as to that characteristic and easily recognisable fact of anthropology, but they supply a most happy intensification to my description of the earlier, short-lived phase, by declaring that the earliest, a Second Dynasty, Egyptian sculptured man at their favourite Boolak Museum is the very image of that portly, round-about, protuberant Quaker gentleman, John Bright, M.P.; and they wonder whether he has ever been to Boolak, and recognised the likeness to himself. But what follows from this piece of evidence?

Why, that the Egyptians of the Great Pyramid or Fourth Dynasty date, when the lank and thin Egyptian figure had become established and remained so ever afterwards, had not been vegetating uniformly in Egypt for thousands of years previous thereto (a rationalistic clergyman says three hundred thousand years); but had rapidly altered, after having just come in, aliens from another land, at the precise time and in the manner of the supernaturally compelled dispersion of nations from the Tower of Babel; so admirably, with even fearful pathos, described by the late excellent William Osburn, of Leeds, in his too-little-read "Monumental History of Egypt."

But such questions are, I am afraid, rather above the Times daily newspaper, as well as the author of "A Ride in Egypt." Wherefore, instead of discussing more of their puny aggressive rationalisms with them, it may be more useful to the general cause that I should point out a split which has eventually occurred between the noble, doubtful pair; as thus:—

The Times Reviewer is an immense admirer of that biggest, oldest, and ugliest idol of the world, the great Sphinx; while Mr. W. J. Loftie, Egyptological though he may be, hates it.

The Times Reviewer holds (with Mariette Bey and his mysterious fragment of an "inscribed stone" in the Boolak Museum) that the said Sphinx is incomparably older than the fourth, or Great Pyramid, dynasty; but Mr. Loftie, with all the positiveness of the rest of his volume, declares that the Sphinx is comparatively quite modern, dating only from the 18th, or a mere Theban, dynasty.

Oh! thanks to Mr. Loftie who has come in at last out of the ranks of Egyptological rationalism, and helped me to denounce that supposed inscribed Sphinx-stone of both Mariette Bey, Dr. Samuel Birch, and a host of other members of the London Egypto-Assyrio-"Anti-Biblical" Society, as the most misleading piece of idle scratching ever introduced to the notice of the learned world.

PIAZZI SMYTH.

ISRAEL AND HER OPPONENTS.

BY WM. W. MELLOR.

(Concluded from page 444).

PART II.

I MAY be permitted to observe further, that if our friends would have the goodness to extend their reading somewhat further than they seem to have done, and would look up a particular writer of the last century that I have in my mind—one who wrote on this subject long before this "ingenious and amusing theory" saw the light, and therefore likely to be impartial between us—I refer to a "Dissertation on the Prophecies," by the Right Rev. Thomas Newton, D.D., Lord Bishop of Bristol—they would there find the Scriptural distinction between Judah and Israel beautifully brought out and explained. Hear what he says on the literal fulfilment of the prophecy: "Within three-score and five years shall Ephraim be broken, that it be not a people" (p. 99). "Another of his sons Esarhaddon, succeeded him in the throne, but it was some time before he could recover his kingdom from these disorders, and think of reducing Syria and Palestine again to his obedience, and then it was, and not till then, that he completed the ruin of the Ten Tribes, carried away the remains of the people, and, to prevent the land from becoming desolate, "brought men from Babylon, and from Cuthah, and from Hava, and from Hamath, and from Sepharvaim, and placed them in the cities of Samaria, instead of the children of Israel. Ephraim was broken from being a kingdom before, but now he was broken from being a people again" (p. 100). "The difficulty of finding out the habitations of the Ten Tribes hath induced others to maintain that they returned into their own country with the other Two Tribes after the Babylonish captivity. The decree of Cyrus extended to all the people of God, and that of Artaxerxes to all the people of Israel, and no doubt many of the Israelites took advantage of these decrees and returned with Zerubbabel and Ezra to their own cities; but still the main body of the Ten Tribes remained behind" (p. 102). "The Samaritans indeed pretend to be the descendants of the children of Israel, but they are really derived from those nations which Esarhaddon, King of Assyria, planted in the country after he had carried thence the Ten Tribes into captivity. And for this reason the Jews call them by no other name than Cuthites (the name of one of those nations), and exclaim against them as the worst of heretics, and, if possible, have greater hatred and abhorrence of them than of the Christians themselves." And in answer to the objection of some in his day that Israel was brought to a full and utter destruction, the good old bishop goes on to say (p. 101)—"But if the whole race of Israel became thus extinct and perished for ever, how can the numerous prophecies be fulfilled which promise the future conversion and restoration of Israel as well as of Judah?"

Digitized by Google

Hear what another aged pillar of the Church, but lately gone to his rest, in his own eloquent fervour had to say on his reading of the Scripture of truth as to the dwelling place of that remnant said to have escaped the general doom of Israel and Judah—"The Gospel in Ezekiel," by Thos. Guthrie, D.D. (p. 25): "Thy holy cities are a wilderness, Zion is a wilderness, Jerusalem a desolation; so low as this had the fortunes of Israel ebbed: Judah was in chains; the people were captives in the land of the heathen, sad exiles in Babylon, Jerusalem lay in ruins; the grass grew long and rank in her deserted streets—an awful judgment-like silence filled the temple; the fox looked out of the window, and foul satyrs had their lair in the holy of holies. No plough turned its furrows in the field; the vines grew wild and tangled on crumbling terraces; nor cock crew, nor dog bayed, nor flock bleated, nor milkmaid sang, nor shepherd piped, nor blue smoke curled up from homestead among the lonely hills; the land was desolate—almost utterly desolate. She now enjoyed what the love of pleasure and the greed of gain had denied her, she rested and had a long Sabbath; while over an expatriated people, far away beyond the desert and by Babel's streams, the seventy years' captivity rolled wearily on."

Though not one of those "gentlemen of England who sit at home at ease," yet it has not been my high privilege to visit the glory of all lands, and stand on the pulpit-like projection on Mount Gerizim, with the cradle of our race at my feet, revel in the incomparable memories of the scene; there the oak under which Jacob buried the idols of his father-in-law's household, and beneath whose branches Joshua set up his pillar of witness; there the well which the patriarch digged for his flocks and household, in the midst of a hostile people who might have forbidden him the use of the stream which flows near, and where the Master sat and taught the woman of Samaria, and there that parcel of ground bought of the sons of Hamor, the father of Shechem for a hundred pieces of silver, and where the returning wanderers laid the bones of Joseph, which they had brought with them out of the land of Egypt, all that weary forty years' journey.

It is, however, not with a land of ruined cities, broken terraces, and choked wells, blighted and trodden down by an effete and alien race, that we are at present concerned, it is another and far different prospect our friends would do well to study. It is a land thickly studded with vast hives of industry, where millions of busy hands and feet, and thousands of gigantic steam engines are darkening the very heavens with the smoke of their toil six days in each week; it is the time of harvest, but the summer sun is shrouded in a mist of clouds, and a ceaseless torrent of rain deluges the land until the standing grass is beginning to spoil. At length brief intervals of fair weather allow of some portion to be cut, and still the weather improves and the sun begins to shine, thousands of willing hands are pressed into the service and the harvest goes merrily on with slight interruption, and late on the Saturday evening a considerable portion was gathered into the barns; another day's fine weather and most of the remainder might have been fairly won. But that day although fine and hot was Sunday. Now I looked around in all directions, knowing that the temptation was great, but with the aid of a powerful field glass I was unable to find any workers! In every field the land had rest. Like lightning flashed the thought, as certain it is these people are not Jews, so certainly is not this a Gentile practice. In the solemn stillness of those Sabbath hours it did seem at least to me a louder, deeper note of praise, and, in its mighty volume, altogether sweeter music than could possibly be raised by those 130 survivors of a vanishing race worshipping in the ruined vault on Mount Gerizim.

Castleton, via Manchester,
August 27th, 1879.

PROGRESS.

THE REV. JAMES BILLINGTON AT PERTH, N.B.

We take the following from the Perth Courier of Oct. 17, 1879:—

Anglo-Israelism.—On Tuesday night Mr. James Billington London, delivered the first of two lectures in the City Hall, under the auspices of the Perth branch of the British Israel Association, on the subject, "The Lost Ten Tribes of Israel: Where are They?" In the absence of Sheriff Barclay, occasioned by family bereavement, Councillor Munro presided, and amongst those on the platform were —Councillers Brown, M'Leish and Walker; Drs. Patterson and Fleming; Mr. Wilson, druggist; Mr. Gregor, postmaster, &c. The proceedings having been opened with prayer by Mr. Fairbairn, city missionary, Mr. Billington then delivered his lecture. Having premised that the Association was in no way identified or connected with any political party, he observed that every-day facts were demonstrating the British people to be the nation inheriting the blessings promised to Ephraim. By quotation from the Old Testament Scripture the lecturer went on to show the Identity of the Lost Ten Tribes with the British nation, and said that the blessings promised were dependent on the observance of the law, but that belief in the theory advanced involved no change of doctrine. It simply proved that God was exerting His power to the preservation of His people Israel. The lecture was listened to with continued attention by a large audience, and at the close a hearty vote of thanks was awarded to the speaker. On Thursday night Mr. Billington continued his lecture in the same place. Col. Williamson, of Lawers, occupied the chair, and, after some introductory remarks, Mr. Billington proceeded with his lecture. After recapitulating the main points of his previous address, he went on to combat the various objections that had been brought against the theory of "Anglo-Israelism." The lecture, which occupied nearly two hours in delivery, was listened to with the utmost attention by a large audience, who at times testified their appreciation of the speaker's observations by applause. At the close a vote of thanks was given him on the motion of Councillor Munro, and another to the Chairman at the instance of the lecturer.

Publisher's Notice.—Should any difficulty be experienced in obtaining the Banner, please communicate with the publisher, W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, E.C.

Digitized by Google

Review.

Horæ Propheticæ. A Commentary on the Prophecies Concerning the Ten Tribes of Israel. Exegetical and critical. By the Rev. H. Marriott, M.A. Vol. I. Price three shillings. W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, London, E.C., and I. E. Chillcott, 26, Clare-street, Bristol.

SECOND NOTICE.

THE Rev. Mr. Marriott very justly holds to the view that our so-called lesser Identifications, properly estimated, are not really "proofs" of our Identity with the Tribes. He looks on them only as "little details"—as "confirmations and corroborations of a position already proved." "The proofs of our position" he holds to be (page 178) :—

1. The possession of God's sign, the Sabbath.
2. The possession of His commission to evangelise the world.
3. Our geographical position in "the Isles of the North," "afar off," from Palestine.
4. Our political state, as represented by the rampant lion—"a position of royal and pre-eminent dignity among the nations" (page 140).
5. Our commercial success and financial superiority which gives us unbounded wealth, and power to lend to many nations, borrowing from none.

Mr. Marriott has a valuable chapter (page 194) on the Stone of Israel. His views are in many respects original, and must carry weight with his brethren in the ministry. They go strongly to confirm our contention that we are Israel. He points out that Jacob of old foretold that the Stone of Israel would proceed from Joseph (Gen. xlix. 24). That stone, the "Shepherd Stone," or "Breaking Stone"—the feeder of nations, the destroyer of nations—was, he shows, to develop from the bowmen of Israel, being the warriors and conquerors of the world, found, now, the victors everywhere in all wars. "The Shepherd, the Stone," our author points out, is, as regards the first noun, "a participial form," and should literally be rendered, "one feeding," or "one breaking." The Power indicated (British Israel) has been ever a fostering, feeding, protecting Power, and also, at the same time, a crushing, bruising, beating, "breaking" one. A forcible exposition of Dan ii. 35—44 follows, connecting the "Stone of Israel" with the British Nation in the manner so often mentioned in these pages.

We are glad to find so clear an intellect, and so judicious a critic as Mr. Marriott is able so fully to confirm our views regarding the Identity of the two. We beg our readers to note, in passing, that our author applies Jer. li. 20—23 to Israel, and holds that the Lord's inheritance, the British Nation, is "His battle-axe" (page 201). Expositions of Num. xxiv. 7 and Ezek. xxi. 27 follow, which cannot fail to be deeply interesting to the reader.

We revert for a little space to Mr. Marriott's views regarding the expected universal outpouring of the Holy Spirit on Israel, or the British. From his statements on pages 112 and 113, we gather that he does not believe it will be universal, but confined, we imagine, only to those chosen as the remnant to return to "the land." The analogy of God's dealings in other cases leads him, we suppose, to distrust the idea of a whole race being suddenly moralised. "The nation in the land" will only, he believes, "be righteous." The argument founded on Hosea i. 10 he answers, we are aware, by the statement that St. Paul quoted the passage, and explained it in Rom. ix. 27, by saying, "though the number of the children of Israel be as the sand of the sea, &c., yet a remnant shall be saved." The word "saved" is, he believes, applied only in the sense taught in passages relating to the "restoration." To this we reply that the same apostle, two chapters on (Rom. xi. 26), speaking clearly there also of the restoration, declares that πας Ἰσραὴλ σωθήσεται. In the one case το κατάλειμμα, in the other πας Ἰσραὴλ are said to be destined to "salvation." We argue, then, that our friend's views are not upheld; and though there will certainly be greater blessedness granted to those who go up to the land, yet to those who remain in Israel's "possessions" (Obad. 17), there will be the Spirit's "outpouring," or "salvation," for the "whole house" (Jer. xxxi. 33; Heb. viii. 10).

Our author does not tell us why Zeph. iii. 9; Isa. xxvi. 2, should not be held to support our view of an entire national conversion. But in truth his known admission that the many millions who return of our Tribes, will be the "righteous" nation promised, involves so stupendous a miracle in itself, that faith should not halt at the larger universal Israelite blessing God's Word distinctly predicts, and which we contend for, merely because "analogy" seems to forbid the supposition and "the phenomenon" of a whole race suddenly converted and moralised is a thing yet unknown to men. Men are now suddenly "moralised" every day! Paul was one instance in bygone times; the thief upon the cross was another; the 3,000 converts when Peter preached, were instances of mass conversions. And if so, cannot God's power, when, in totidem verbis, He promises this very thing, be trusted to effect the wonder, even though all analogy and all Bishop Butler's arguments rolled into one, were dead against it?

We hope our rev. friend will reconsider this one point, and in his second edition so modify his opinions as to make his whole volume appear in absolute harmony with the views, hopes, and aspirations of the vast majority of the readers of the BANNER.

(To be continued.)

Correspondence.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—Referring to page 435 of your journal bearing this day's date, I venture to suggest two corrections in the literal translations given by Mr. Hickson. The first is the substitution of πληθος for πληρωμα in his Greek rendering of Gen. xlviii. 19. If it be asked why Jacob's word should be rendered πληθος and the apostle Paul's translation of his word be πληρωμα, it suggests itself to my mind that Jacob predicted the destiny in its developed state, of which πληθος is the Greek rendering. Whereas the apostle Paul spoke of a gradual working out, or development, or "coming in" of this πληθος, and therefore uses the verbal noun in preference. In the other correction I should substitute for Mr. Hickson's translation of Psa. ii. 8 a more literal one, being, "Ask from Me and I give nations Thine inheritance and Thy possession limits of earth:" and as Mr. Hickson has, by way of comment on the rendering which he has given, produced an instance of a similar construction, I will do the same; asking your readers to compare with the above Exod. iii. 21: "I give grace this people in eyes of Egyptians." I do not at all approve our adoption of the comments of Talmudists in critical translation, which Mr. Hickson adopts by taking account of the accents which were added to the words of David perhaps as late as 1,500 years after he had written them. This opinion is held by Rabbi Ceirta, Cappel, Calvin, Luther, Casaubon, Scaliger, Masclef, Erpenius, Houbigant, L'Advocat, Bishops Walton, Hare, Lowth, and Kennicott, and Geddes, and other eminent scholars, and is now generally received. As punctuation forms a comment in English, so do accents in the Hebrew; I have therefore omitted Mr. Hickson's stops, which force a meaning on the original not necessarily conveyed by the unaccented words.

Yours faithfully,

HERBERT MARRIOTT.

11, Beresford-road, Mildmay, Oct. 29, 1879.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—To every impartial mind there can be little doubt that a knowledge of the Identity is fast spreading widely. A question suggested by this fact is, "How many are there now in this country who have accepted this truth?" I do not know that even an estimate of this number can at present be even guessed at, with any approach to truth. But 1881 is coming on, and in that year, if former precedents are to be followed, an opportunity of obtaining the information will be furnished by the taking of the census. I would therefore suggest, as a thing to be thought over by the readers of the BANNER, the propriety, or otherwise, when the census papers are filled up, and the question of religious belief is answered, that we Israelites, after stating the particular Church system to which we may each adhere, should add, "And I believe in the Identity of the British nation with the Lost House of Israel." Such a confession of faith would also virtually be a national declaration, and seems essentially necessary for the completion of the Identity as a national movement.

I remain, yours truly,

J. THOMSON.

Ashton-under-Lyne, Aug. 21, 1879.

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements

(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O.O payable at Ludgate-circus.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed :—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

BANNER FREE CIRCULATION FUND. Subscriptions, which are much needed, will be received by R. Fergusson Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, to whom applications for FREE GRANTS should be made.

ANGLO-ISRAEL SERVICES will be conducted (D.V.) on SUNDAY NEXT, at BARNSBURY HALL, Barnsbury Street, Islington, by Rev. H. MARRIOTT, M.A. (Late Missionary to the Jews at Tanjier). Hour of worship, 3 p.m.

NEW PAMPHLETS.

ANGLO-ISRAEL ALMANACK FOR 1880.

SECRETARIES of ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATIONS will oblige by forwarding particulars of their Associations to the Editor, Rev. James Billington, Secretary of Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association, for insertion in the above Almanack. Address—20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

ADVERTISEMENTS

for the Anglo-Israel Almanack for 1880, should at once be sent to Mr. Robert Banks, Printer, Racquet court, Fleet-street, London

The Almanack will be published early in December.

Now Ready. NEW LEAFLET of four pages. Price 2s. per hundred.

HISTORICAL AND PROPHETICAL DISTINCTIONS BETWEEN THE TWO HOUSES OF ISRAEL AND JUDAH.

Selected and Arranged by W. S. CAVILL.

Also by the same Author,

THE PROMISES TO ABRAHAM: with SELECT REFERENCES AND EXPLANATORY NOTES. To which is added an Article entitled, ISRAEL AMONG THE GENTILES.

Price Sixpence, or free by post Sevenpence.

The aim of this Pamphlet is to present the Scriptural Argument in a new and concise form, both for examination and reference.

May be had of the Author, Norton Woodside, near Sheffield: or of the Publisher, Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C; and of all Booksellers.

Now ready, price 2d., post free 2½d., in neat coloured cover.

AMMI; OR, THE CHOSEN PEOPLE,

BY MISS BIRD.

Tracing the descent of the British people from Abraham, the "friend of God," and showing that true science, history, philology, and ethnology, are on the side of the Identity of the Anglo-Saxon race with the Ten Lost Tribes.

In neat coloured cover, price 2d., post free 2½d.

BLESSINGS AND CURSES, AND THEIR RELATION TO ISRAEL AND JUDAH. By F. W. PHILLIPS, of Speedwell-road, Birmingham.

Price 4d., post free 5d.

JAPHETIC OR SEMITIC: WHICH ARE WE?

BY CAROLINE PEARSE.

Containing a clear and impartial statement of the Anglo-Israel Case, shewing that it is fully proved by comparison of Bible Prophecy with English History, and accounting for the existence at present of difficulties in other lines of evidence.

NEW BOOKS.

NEW WORK BY DR. WILD.

NOW READY, price 3s., post free 3s. 4d. Handsome cloth, gilt, printed on toned paper and illustrated.

THE LOST TEN TRIBES, AND

1882.

BY THE

REV. DR. JOSEPH WILD, Of Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Printed and published by

ROBERT BANKS, RACQUET COURT, FLEET ST., LONDON, E.C.

And may be had, by ordering, of any Bookseller.

PHILO-ISRAEL (in the BANNER) says:—"We have much pleasure in directing attention to this handsome Identity volume. It contains twenty discourses of the well-known American divine Dr. Joseph Wild, of Brooklyn, N.Y. We are glad to find from these discourses that Dr. Wild is quite one with us on this side the water with most, though not all, the views we entertain on our great and glorious subject. . . . We promise our readers that if they procure this work, and will peruse it, they will find 'our Identity' discussed in a clear, novel, racy, and 'American' point of view, which is sure to interest, sure to be instructive, and may lead the thoughtless and inquiring to pursue the investigation till possibly conviction may be the result."

EXTRACT FROM PREFACE:—

The main idea I wish to convey in this book, is that God is conducting His Providence through His ancient chosen people, Israel, whom I believe are found in the Saxon race. And His throne on earth, through which flow the purposes of Providence, is David's throne, which I believe to be at present the English throne. Queen Victoria (and God bless her) I believe to be of David's seed. The United States fulfils the rôle of the Tribe of Manasseh. Therefore, to understand the prophecies, Providence, and the present movements of nations, as well as the future lot and destiny of each, we must read the Scriptures in this light. God has made the children of Israel and throne of David His executive, in time, on earth. They are His executive for civilisation, evangelisation, order, and conquest. Through them God will conquer the world to an universal peace. As Moses was to God, so is Israel. Moses being a Divine executor, was to the people a god—so is Israel to all mankind. Spiritual Israel will come through literal Israel.

For Contents see BANNER for October 1st.

HORÆ PROPHETICÆ: WHAT DOES THE BIBLE TEACH ABOUT GREAT BRITAIN? Establishing the Identity of the Anglo-Saxon Race with the House of Ephraim.

BY REV. H. MARRIOTT, M.A.

Price 3s. in paper, 4s. in cloth boards.

W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.
T. E. Chilcott, Bristol.

WORKS BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Price 2d., post free 2½d.

THE HISTORICAL, ETHNIC, AND PHILOLOGICAL ARGUMENTS in PROOF of BRITISH IDENTITY with the TEN LOST TRIBES OF ISRAEL, clearly and simply stated.

BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

CONTENTS:—Introduction—The Celts—Professor Rawlinson's Testimony—The Cymry—The Cimmerii—The Gimiri and Khumri—The Testimony of the Nimroud Obelisk—The Scythians—The Anglo-Saxons—Sharon Turner's Testimony—The Jutes and Angles—The Danes and the Normans—General Conclusions—Philology—The Welsh Language—The Rev. Canon Lysons' Testimony—Idiomatic Identity Between Hebrew and English—Tyndal's Testimony—The Tribe of Dan—The Irish Celts—Are the Continental Nations Israelites?—Conclusions—Appendix.

Price 4d., post free 5d.

AN ELEMENTARY DIGEST or SKETCH OF THE CHIEF FACTS and TEACHINGS of the GREAT PYRAMID of EGYPT; adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific. By PHILO-ISRAEL; together with Original Papers by the following leading Pyramidists, republished mostly from the BANNER OF ISRAEL (by kind permission of the proprietor)—viz., Professor Piazzi Smyth, the Rev. J. W. Hickson, M.A., Charles Horner, Esq., and Major H. A. Tracey, R.A. Being a pamphlet by five authors (a Pyramid number).

Price 2d. Post free 2½d.

MANASSEH AND THE UNITED STATES. An important Essay delivered before the "Lost Israel Identification Society," by the Rev. JOSEPH WILD, D.D. at Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, New York.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet Court, Fleet Street; and may be had, by ordering, of any bookseller.

NEW BOOKS.

A NEW TALE OF GREAT INTEREST FOR YOUNG PEOPLE ON THE IDENTITY OF LOST ISRAEL.

Now ready, price 2s. 6d., post free 2s. 9d. Bound in handsome cloth, gilt, bevelled boards, gilt edges, and beautifully printed on toned paper.

THE SISTERS OF HARROWDALE RECTORY.

BY

MRS. M. A. SEARSON,

ILLUSTRATED WITH BEAUTIFUL DOUBLE-PAGE FRONTISPIECE.

Printed and Published by ROBERT BANKS, RACQUET COURT, FLEET ST., LONDON, E.C.

And may be had, by ordering, of any Bookseller.

CONTENTS:—

CHAPTER I.

Harrowdale Rectory. The Rector's Family. God's Own Architect. An English Parsonage. The Aged Grandmother. Hospitality to Strangers. Frances Farnwood. Restoration to the Promised Land. Discussion on "Our Identity."

CHAPTER II.

A Quiet Controversy. A God-given Dream. Guardian Angels. A Visit to Paradise. What Paradise is Like. The Occupation of Angels. Michael the Archangel. Before the Throne of God. Israel My Heritage. The Wondrous Love of Christ. Unfolding of Prophecy Concerning Israel. A Visit to Souls in Prison. The Wonders of God's Perfect Will. Hopeless Condition of Lost Souls.

CHAPTER III.

Mother's Dream. Old Mother Davis. The Village of Harrowdale Described. William Edwards the Miner. Working Men's Homes. The Miner and the Identification of Lost Israel. The Chariot Wheels of Israel. Discouragements Overcome. A Visit to Mrs. Bertram. Her Daily Life. Her Belief in the English being Lost Israel. The Sisters' Visit to Mrs. Bertram and Mother Davis. Dinner With Mother Davis. Mother Davis and the Lost Ten Tribes. God Faithful to His Promises. The Coming of Our Lord.

CHAPTER IV.

Visit of Aunt Winslow and Cousin Calvin to the Rectory. A Family Tea-party. An Anglo-Israel Meeting. Calvin and His Uncle. The Return to Palestine. Israel or Judah—Which? What the Bible Reveals. The Wanderings of Our Israelite Ancestry. The Second Coming of Christ. A Sunday Evening Identity Class. The Bible Appealed to.

CHAPTER V.

The Neighbouring Clergymen Visit the Rectory. A Mutual Understanding. Marion's Opinion of Cousin Calvin. Calvin's Opinion of His Cousin. A Sketch of Rural Life. Miss Stanmore. Matrimonial Mistakes. Marion's Firm Belief in Providence. Calvin's Engagement to Miss Stanmore. Remarks on Unequal Marriages. The Calm after a Storm. A Parable. A Pledge of Love. The Parable Explained.

CHAPTER VI.

Calvin's Belief in our Identity. Captain Johnstone Introduced. Captain Johnstone and Miss Stanmore. An Open Avowal. Calvin Released from His Engagement. The Fever-Stricken Family. Calvin's Second Visit to Harrowdale. Sympathy and Help. A Visit to the Sick Chamber.

CHAPTER VII.

Illness of the Rector's Wife. Poor Susan. Mrs. Wildman's Trust in Her Saviour. "Going Home" in the Glorious Sunshine. The Heavenly Jerusalem. The Mother's Last Charge. Calvin and Marion. Good-bye.

This book will be read with interest by both young and old, and found well suited for a BIRTHDAY GIFT, SUNDAY SCHOOL REWARD, OR PRESENT.

Price 6d., post free 7d. New work on the Identity. Dedicated to all faithful ministers of Christ.

ISRAEL! AN EARNEST APPEAL FROM THE NEW TO THE PULPIT IN FAVOUR OF OUR IDENTITY WITH GOD'S ELECT PEOPLE, ISRAEL; Being a Letter from JOHN G. SHAW to his Pastor, Rev. Eustace R. Conder, of Leeds, with an Introduction and Notes; to be followed by a Review of Mr Conder's Papers on the Lost Tribes.

By the same Author.

"BRITAIN (OR ISRAEL)," with Map. Price 8d., post free 9d.

"CHRONOLOGICAL CHART." Price 3d., post free 3½d.

"GOD'S LOVE FOR ISRAEL." Price 1d., 3 copies sent post free for 3½d.

London: ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, NOV. 12, 1879. [All Rights Reserved.]

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. III. No. 151. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 19, 1879. [ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
Asia Minor Stretches Out her Arms to Israel for Help	461
The Rock Silenced. By C. Rabbidge	462
The Heir of the World	463
The Rev. Canon M. Blake Brownrigg, M.A., Editor of the Standard of Ephraim, and the Jewish Chronicle	463
Mr. R. A. Proctor and Great Pyramid Chronology. Part I. By W. Rowbottom	464
Our Opponents.—The Rev. Frank H. White	465
The Death of a Christian Believer in Our Identity	466
Reviews	466
Correspondence	467
Poetry—"Rorke's Drift"	467

ASIA MINOR STRETCHES OUT HER ARMS TO ISRAEL FOR HELP.

AN officer of Her Majesty's Indian forces, who is inclined to look favourably on "our Identity," is repelled by what he deems our inordinate desires for territorial extension, and considers such views, largely recommended, likely to pander to national pride, and therefore should be shunned. We are well aware of these objections, and how they are used against us. We regard them just as we look at the views of those who believing in the Lord Jesus for their soul's salvation, yet consider it presumptuous to assert, much more to think, He has really saved them. They dare not, therefore, entertain or avow that belief. The result in both cases is practical unbelief in the Lord's assurances. In the one case, that He has engaged to save, and has saved, once for all, the really penitent believer, now—to-day; in the other, that He really has given to the British, as His people Israel, universal dominion—"the heirship of the world." To doubt either is to dishonour Christ; in the latter case, to doubt is really to insult the God of Israel, since "the kingdoms of this world are to become the kingdoms of our Lord and of His Christ," and that "kingdom and dominion" He positively assures us "shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High," "even the children of Israel," for which He demands the cry of "Praise ye" (Israel) "the Lord!" To renounce and refuse this dominion is to fly in the face of our God, to deny Him His glorious kingdom, and since that is impossible, it simply courts chastisements, such as Insandlwana and the massacre of Cabul, till we do consent to carry out our God and Father's will. We are led into these reflections by finding that, do what we will, God is thrusting on us Empire, which we shall refuse or put from us at our serious peril.

In the Times of Oct. 28, 1879, the Smyrna correspondent of that paper sent to the editor a vivid account of the present state of Asia Minor, which deserves all Israelites' most earnest consideration. It will be found that his statements on "The Policy and Archæology of Asia Minor" are literally filled with blind evidence of our Identity. He proves, for instance—

1. That "European Turkey outside the walls of the great Gate, has ceased to exist;" "the Turkish Empire is a thing of the past" (that is—that "the waters of the Euphrates have dried up"—Rev. xvi. 12).

2. That a railway from the Mediterranean to the Persian Gulf could now be constructed, or that "the way of the kings of the East," following up the drying of the river, could be prepared (Rev. xvi. 12).

3. That the crushed and down-trodden people of the land are crying to England, and to the English, to take the country and govern them, as the only Power able to succour them. (Here fulfilments of Isa. lxi. 9, and Jer. xxxiii. 9, are being prepared, which will fill us with gratitude and wonder, but the Gentiles with consternation.)

4. That the wealth, riches, and power for good the annexation by Great Britain of Asia Minor would bring to our nation and the Turks, would be incalculable. (A fulfilment this of Isa. xxxv., for these lands are verily desolations now, only waiting God-blessed Israel's advent, "to blossom as the rose.")

5. That if "we don't take these lands, Russia is ready to annex them;" thus showing that the enemies of God's people stand as a foil to Israel, to prove that God's Word is true, and that what Satan prepares for his people, God can and will arrange that Israel shall possess.

Such are some of the results which a perusal of this wonderful report of a blind witness leaves upon the mind. We now proceed to quote those portions of the article which illustrate our points, and beg for them the reader's attention:—

SMYRNA, OCT. 10.—The friends and foes of Turkish rule alike ought to visit Constantinople and such of the provinces as still depend on it before hazarding opinions on a subject which continues to baffle the wisest counsels of European diplomacy. By the provinces I do not mean those of Europe, for European Turkey may also be said to have ceased to exist beyond the fortifications of Stamboul, but the provinces of Asia, and more especially Asia Minor, the richest and choicest of the districts which still profess to obey the Government of the Porte. It is impossible to understand the Turk except at home; it is even more impossible to understand the Turkish Government except where we can see it in actual working.

At the present moment it may be described as a strange compound of bankruptcy, apathy, and jealousy of strangers. The Turk is naturally the most docile and quiet of men; give him but the shadow of a Government, and he will do his daily work and be content.

Digitized by Google

. . . . The present state of inert tension, if such a phrase may be allowed, cannot last much longer, even in Turkey, and this I found to be allowed wherever I have gone, by Turks as well as by Christians.

Such an admission is of itself significant enough; what is still more significant, however, is that the Osmanlis themselves are beginning to look forward to foreign rule, not only as the inevitable will of fate, but as an event to be desired. The fanaticism which once distinguished Stamboul has disappeared, and the lower classes who remember the help sent from England during the terrible winter of 1877 are now to be heard asking, "Why do not the English come and drive away our present rulers?" In Asia Minor there are still louder murmurs against the existing Government and a still more pronounced desire for English rule. The recollection of the Crimean war, when for the first and last time in his life the Turkish soldier was regularly fed, clothed, and paid, is still fresh among the peasantry, and I found the Turks of a village in the interior going so far as to say that they not only hope that the Queen of England would come to rule over them, but that English schools would be established in their midst, where their children could learn how to be just and upright. I need hardly add that the Christian population seems as anxious for a change of masters as the Turks; but I was surprised to find that none of the Greeks I came across dreamt of union with Greece itself; all they wanted was to be under the sway of one of the Western Powers.

After speaking of the deplorable state of the country in consequence of brigandage, and the utter ruin of the Government, and its inability to pay either its army, or police, or Civil Service, the writer goes on to say:—

With all this it is not surprising that the inhabitants of Asia Minor are beginning to turn longing eyes towards England as the only Power they believe able and willing to help them. It was very gratifying to one's national pride to hear the hopes expressed wherever I went, by both Christians and Moslems, that England would take the government of the country upon herself. And there can be no doubt that England, with her wealth, her energy, and her Indian experience, would be better fitted than any other civilised Power to cleanse the Augean stable of Asia Minor and restore the country to its former condition of happiness and prosperity.

But there is one important respect still to be mentioned in which the practical possession of Asia Minor would be of supreme political value to England. It is a point which the framers of the Anglo-Turkish Convention had in mind, though it has been but little noticed by the public. The Turkish population of Asia Minor are born soldiers, and, properly officered and equipped, would form an invincible military force. The force, too, would cost but little to maintain, and could easily be provided for out of the revenues of the country itself. With such an army at our command, we need never fear Russian aggression or the interruption of our communications with India. We might construct a railway from the Mediterranean to the Persian Gulf without misgiving, even though Kars and Ardahan are now in Russian hands. Our road to India would be protected by a garrison which nothing could force, and whose fidelity might be implicitly relied upon. With Asia Minor in our hands the fate of Constantinople would be of secondary consequence. We cannot raise or maintain an army in England, and experience has shown that the cost of transporting native troops from India to the West is too great. Unless, therefore, we can make Asia Minor what it is by nature, the bulwark of our Eastern Empire, we must continue to trust for our communications solely to a canal which the convenient shipwreck of a merchantman or two might at any time block. What makes the matter of the more moment is the fact, forced home to the mind of every traveller in Turkey at the present time, that the Turkish Empire is already practically a thing of the past and that its final dissolution cannot be long delayed. When the inevitable event happens, there are only two Powers into whose hands the possession of Asia Minor can fall—namely, England and Russia. Russia is already on the spot, fully alive to all that is passing and prepared for every emergency that may arise. If we do not occupy Asia Minor, we may feel pretty certain that the Russians will; and this will imply the Russian command not only of the valley of the Euphrates, but also of the military services of the Turkish inhabitants of Asia Minor. Our best protection against the chances of Russian attack would then be turned into a most formidable weapon against ourselves—how formidable, indeed, it is almost impossible to realise.

The suggestion that the British should raise a force of Turks to resist Russia forcibly brings to our recollection our friend Colonel Gawler's remarkable paper we published in Dec., 1876, in No. 5 of Israel's Identity Standard, p. 54, wherein he alluded to the "whirlwinds of Teman" (or the South) of Zech. ix. 14, as the armed and disciplined mounted infantry which "the clouds of horsemen of the Arabian Peninsula and the Southern coasts of Asia" would supply to British Israel when the conflict with Russia once begins. It would be, he said, "the work of a few weeks to loose these whirlwinds of Teman to sweep away the aggressor" ("Teman was the grandson of Esau, or, according to the LXX., of Ishmael, and in almost all other passages," says Col. Gawler, "the proper name 'Teman' is maintained.")

The Times, of course, laughs at the idea of British administration superseding the effete Turkish rule, while admitting that the latter really is non-existent. It denies "our right and our will" to do more than we are doing in Asia Minor now, which is nothing, and yet allows that the time must soon come when something must take the place of the present chaos. Shall it be Russia's "dominion" or Israel's? God's Word says "Israel's," and with that verdict we are quite content. Are not our readers also ready to say "Aye?"

THE "ROCK" SILENCED.

By C. Rabbidge.

A few weeks ago I entered into a correspondence with the editor of a journal for which all Anglo-Israelites have a respect, although it is one of our most vehement opponents, because every Anglo-Israelite must necessarily be a thorough Protestant, and therefore we sympathise heartily with anyone who is doing Protestant work.

The editor of that journal believes that Isa. xviii. alludes to England as being the people who are to carry back the House of Judah to the Holy Land, and seeing a few words from him to that effect, I wrote to him, asking if there was any evidence in the Scriptures that a Gentile people were to do this.

To this I received a reply directing my attention to Isa. lxvi. 19, 20, and contending that the "they" of the 20th verse, alluded to the nations mentioned in the 19th. I replied that I could not possibly see how this could be, as it seemed to me to apply rather to those who were to be scattered amongst the nations named; but even supposing that there was any difficulty in understanding this passage if taken by itself, yet, when read by the light of Zeph. iii. 10, there could not be the slightest doubt about it, and I begged that he would kindly give me his opinion on this passage.

I then received a reply to my argument about Isa. lxvi., but nothing was said about Zeph. iii. 10, to which I returned an answer, and again pressed the latter passage on his attention. I was then favoured with a reply from another correspondent, which I followed out and showed that it positively supported my argument, and again pressed for a reply to my question on Zeph. iii. 10.

To this I received a courteously worded reply from the editor, that he could not discuss the Anglo-Israel question. Now, I think, it will readily be seen that the question I asked only concerned the Anglo-Israel question indirectly. And therefore I think I am justified in considering that this was an indirect acknowledgment that he could not answer my question.

I of course accepted this reply, but at the same time begged that when he was next tempted to use hard words against us, he must remember Zeph. iii. 10.

If, Sir, he could not answer this question, I am quite sure that no one else who holds his views on Isa. xviii. can do so, and, if any of our friends meet with an opponent who entertains them, I think if they draw their opponent's attention to this prophecy, they will find it unanswerable. In fact, Sir, those who hold with him are more than three-parts on the way to being Anglo-Israelites, and when you show them this passage, they are on the horns of a dilemma, for they must either admit that we are Israelites, or else that we are not the people alluded to in Isa. xviii.; and they don't like to admit either, but there is no escape from it—at any rate, this has been my experience in debating the subject with my friends.

Digitized by Google

7, Newcommon-road, Finchley, London,
September 27th, 1879.

[NOTE BY THE EDITOR.—We heartily endorse our friend's words as above given. We have to add a fresh instance of acknowledged defeat similarly expressed by silence, when our attack was once made against an avowed opponent by weapons furnished us by Zeph. iii. 10, and so wisely used by the Rev. C. W. Hickson when addressing the Rock in January last (see page 121, BANNER No. 116). The occasion we allude to was the morning meeting of "The Clerical and Lay Annual Conference," held in Clifton, on May 27th, 1879. The Rev. Dr. Baylee then attacked our "Anglo-Israel theory" as he was pleased to call it, and his attack is duly printed on page 11 of the report just issued. But Philo-Israel's spoken reply, when he brought Isa. xviii.; Zeph. iii. 10; Hosea i. 10, and other such texts to bear upon him with effect, is totally ignored, and Mr. E. W. Bird's name (though a member) is not allowed even so much as to appear as one of the speakers at that meeting, in the published report. If this be fair and English dealing, let our readers judge! We maintain the report, as published now, is not a true report! It is obvious that the attack was allowed, but the defence ignored; for the same reason the Rock declined the contest with Mr. Rabbidge—namely, because the Israelite argument, founded on Zeph. iii. 10, is unanswerable.—EDITOR.]

"THE HEIR OF THE WORLD."

WE have received the first number of The Heir of the World, an Israelite, or rather Manasseh-Israelite paper, published in Brooklyn, New York, under the editorial management of Mr. George W. Greenwood. The paper is a most creditable publication. Its price is one dollar per annum, single copies ten cents. It may be ordered from 260, Schermerhorn Street, Brooklyn, or we presume through Mr. Guest, our London publisher. Our readers can judge how favourably inclined the new paper is to our cause as the British writers have developed it on this side the water, when we say that this first issue contains papers by Professor Piazzi Smyth, L. P., Cymru, J. G. Shaw, E. Hine, H. L., John S. Anderson, Philo-Israel, with extracts from the "Post Bag," from C. M.'s "Israel in Britain," and whole articles taken from THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

The original American articles are by Dr. J. Wild, the Rev. Jos. Williams, of Boston, Mass., and several editorials and serials. When we have said that the typography is excellent, the paper good, the editing careful, we have said enough we hope to induce our friends largely to patronise the first Identity journal ever published in America—but not destined to be the last. Far from that! We have just heard from Mr. Greenwood, that Boston, Mass., means to have a paper of its own, and the Rev. Joseph Williams of that town is to be the editor of The Trumpet of Israel. Verily the cause is growing! Our opponents must be in despair! But we know that all things are working for God's glory in this matter, and we rejoice exceedingly to see the progress we report, not only in America, but the world-wide over! News has just reached us from Carrara, Italy, where one Italian at least has gone deep into our subject, is striving hard to spread it, and has met with some success. He is firmly persuaded that, Italian as he is, he is an Israelite! We are quite sure he is, and if not of the Hebrew blood, he is one of those described in Isa. lvi. 6, whom the Lord will accept and make joyful in His holy mountain, and regard precisely as if he were of the stock of Abraham.

THE REV. CANON M. BLAKE BROWNRIGG, M.A., EDITOR OF "THE STANDARD OF EPHRAIM," AND "THE JEWISH CHRONICLE."

PART I.

OUR friend and coadjutor at the antipodes in Launceston, Tasmania, has particularly requested us to insert the following letter he has just sent to the editor of the Jewish Chronicle, in London. We do so with great pleasure, because it is an able and admirable contribution to our Identity literature, and valuable besides as testimony to our opposing clergy here, that one at the antipodes, of their own cloth, who is well known for his ability and worth, whose praise is in all the Churches of our Greater Britain in Australasia, can speak and write with power on a subject they despise, but which in truth is the foremost topic of the day. We quote the letter from page 134 of No. 17 of The Standard of Ephraim, of September 1st, 1879:—

THE "JEWISH CHRONICLE" AND THE ANGLO-ISRAEL QUESTION.

To the Editor of the "Jewish Chronicle."

DEAR SIR,—As an advocate of the Anglo-Israel Identity, I have read with close attention your leader on this question, under date May 2, 1879, which has to-day been placed before me. The purport of your leader is made known to us in definite terms in its concluding paragraph, which is to enable you to record against it (Anglo-Israelism) your "verdict of 'not proven,' and to protest against the use of evidence which can only be obtained by violently straining the language of Scripture and utterly over-riding common sense." While, however, in your own judgment, the case is "not proven," I have yet to thank you for that measure of support to the question which your own witness most undoubtedly supplies. In the opening paragraph of your leader you say, "The fate of the Lost Ten Tribes is a mystery which has a peculiar fascination for some minds. While not a link is missing of the historical chain, so far as the remnant of the House of Judah is concerned, the Israelites who were subjugated by the Assyrian power, disappear from the page of history as suddenly and completely as though the land of their captivity had swallowed them up. Beyond some vague reference to them in a passage of Josephus, no mention is made by any authentic writer of their surviving the destruction of their nationality. There has always been, however, an unwillingness to admit that a fate which had befallen so many nations has overtaken the Ten Tribes. Why should they have been less tenacious of life than their brethren of Judah? Nay, the Scriptures speak of a future restoration of Israel, which is clearly to include both Judah and Ephraim. The problem, then, is reduced to the simplest form. The Ten Tribes are certainly in existence. All that has to be done is to discover which people represents them."

Your testimony thus recorded is reducible to the following heads:—

1. That the fate of the Lost Ten Tribes is a mystery.
2. That there is a real present distinction between the Houses of Judah and Israel.
3. That while the history is clear concerning the remnant of the House of Judah, it is silent about Israel, as Israel.
4. That while other nations have been destroyed, there is an unwillingness to admit such a fate in respect of the Ten Tribes.
5. That the Scriptures speak of a future restoration of Israel, which is clearly to include both Judah and Israel.
6. That the Ten Tribes are certainly still in existence.
7. That all that has to be done is to discover which people represents them.

In my view all this is very important, and I would employ it in support of my contention, as against those who maintain that Israel was never lost: that there is no distinction between Judah and Israel: and that the modern Jews represent the Twelve Tribes of Israel. Your teaching is the very opposite of this, and I am quite in accord with you thus far in your leader. Beyond a doubt it is as you say—"the problem is reduced to the simplest form. THE TEN TRIBES ARE CERTAINLY IN EXISTENCE," and "all that has to be done is to discover WHICH PEOPLE represents them."

Now, in these words, I observe, you state the "Problem," and indicate what is necessary to its solution. The problem is to Identify the kingdom of Israel, and the problem will be solved when it is discovered "which people represents them."

Let it now be considered that you are called upon to undertake the solution of this problem. It is not unreasonable that you should be supposed to take an interest in this discovery. It would be unreasonable, indeed, were it otherwise. And if "the fate of the Lost Ten Tribes is a mystery," it ought not to be otherwise than "fascinating" to the Jewish mind, for "the Scriptures speak of a future restoration of Israel, which is clearly to include both Judah and Ephraim," and in this re-union and restoration, which will settle the question of "the fate of the Lost Ten Tribes," Judah ought to be deeply interested. Supposing, then, that you undertake the problem of discovering the Kingdom of Israel, you would, of course set about the solution by searching for a people which "represents them." But what is essential to this end? You will admit that these two things are absolutely essential—1st. That the features of the kingdom of Israel must first be known—that is, the marks by which Israel is to be known must be ascertained and acknowledged; and 2ndly, that the people to "represent" Israel must be a people possessing those identifying marks or features. Refuse either of these conditions, and then the elements for working out the problem would obviously be wanting, and a solution therefore impossible,—Admit them and there is at once a satisfactory foundation upon which to work.

Digitized by Google

Speaking of the Scriptural evidences which are adduced by Anglo-Israel advocates, you say—"Their Scriptural proofs are derived from passages foreshadowing a certain character and destiny for the Ten Tribes, which they profess to find reproduced only in the genius and present condition of the English people." Now, as it would be impossible to identify any missing object unless that object possesses identifying marks, and as it cannot be justly denied that the Scriptures treat largely of the interests of the kingdom of Israel, past, present, and future, the conclusion is inevitable, that there must be in the sacred writings "passages foreshadowing a certain character and destiny for the Ten Tribes." Here, then, we are brought directly to the question—What are the Identifying marks whereby the Kingdom of Israel is to be recognised? What is "the certain character or destiny foreshadowed of the Ten Tribes?"

(To be continued.)

MR. R. A. PROCTOR AND GREAT PYRAMID CHRONOLOGY.

By William Rowbottom.

PART I.

Professor Piazzi Smyth's reply to Mr. Proctor's article in the Contemporary Review for September will have been read with pleasure by all whose attention had been called to the ill-digested and contradictory theories advanced in that article, and especially ought we to be thankful that the author of "Our Inheritance in the Great Pyramid" has so clearly and indignantly repudiated the assertion that the Great Pyramid teaches that "the end of the world is to take place in 1881." It is this distorting of Great Pyramid teaching that prejudices many against the subject, and therefore it is very essential that the hurriedly-formed conclusions of reviewers and opponents should not go uncontradicted, and also, that Great Pyramid symbolic teaching should not be burdened and overlaid with assumptions unsupported by Scriptural or scientific evidence.

The object of the present article is to direct more particular attention to Mr. Proctor's attack on Great Pyramid chronology, which was only partially dealt with in Professor Piazzi Smyth's reply. Speaking of the chronological interpretation of the passages, Mr. Proctor says, "It is true not one of these intervals (of the Pyramid-derived chronology) accords with the dates given by those who are considered the best authorities in Biblical matters; but so much the worse for the dates." Of course, the only reasonable conclusion on the above is that Mr. Proctor refers to the systems of Ussher and Hales, who are the accepted exponents of the Hebrew and Septuagint chronologies respectively, and Professor Smyth, in his reply, contents himself with maintaining that while the Great Pyramid chronology, as read by him, and nearly all Pyramid writers, falls within these two—the longer and the shorter—systems of dates, Mr. Proctor uses dates which are unsupported by either. But two blacks won't make one white, and the fact that Mr. Proctor is out of agreement with Scriptural dates does not tell against his assertion that Great Pyramid chronology is not in harmony with the sacred narrative.

Doubtless Mr. Proctor thought that the satire of the concluding words of the paragraph quoted disposed effectually of the pretensions of the Great Pyramid in the matter of chronology. What he wrote satirically we have no fear in accepting literally. If Great Pyramid chronology does not agree with either or both of the two rival systems of dates, then, so much the worse for the dates. It is not an approximate agreement with what may be considered by any section of the Christian Church as the best authority on sacred chronology that we have to look for in the Great Pyramid, but a perfect agreement with the chronology of the text of the Scriptures as preserved by the people to whom was committed "the lively oracles of God."

The impossibility of reconciling the then accepted readings of the epoch-marking measures of the Great Pyramid with the sacred narrative and authentic profane history, led to the enunciation of other readings, the reasons for which, together with such confirmatory evidence as he was then able to obtain, the author set forth in "The Mystery of the Bible Dates Solved by the Great Pyramid."

That book met with somewhat severe treatment at the hands of a few Pyramid writers, who appeared to think that the canon of Pyramid interpretation was already perfected, and that any attempt to revise the chronological readings of the passages aimed at the subversion of all Pyramid teaching. That was not the opinion, however, of Professor Piazzi Smyth, who openly avowed in the appendix to the third edition of "Our Inheritance in the Great Pyramid," that the interpretation of the epoch-points of the passages was an open question, and gave a kindly notice of the new readings advanced.

Had Mr. Proctor, when he undertook to dispose so summarily of Pyramid dates, first considered their relation to the text of the Authorised Version, and then taken into account the diversity of the opinions held by chronologists, he might have hesitated before writing "so much the worse for the dates." He rightly sees that there must be an agreement between the intervals of the passage measurements and the periods of the true sacred chronology for any theory to be sound which maintains a connection between the two. The proposition to be proved has been clearly stated—viz., "That the Pyramid, which gives dates without events, agrees exactly with the Bible, which gives events and periods without dates."* The theory, as thus stated, ought to be as capable of proof as any other scientific theory based upon ascertained facts, and there would be little difficulty in this case were it not for the variant readings which at one or two points have been accepted in lieu of the actual literal statements of the sacred text. But setting aside all authorities, even though "considered the best," when those authorities are in conflict with the Word, it has been shown that the epoch-markings of the Pyramid are in perfect agreement with the chronological periods of the sacred text when read thus:—

Commencement of Entrance Passage . The Flood.
The Ruled Lines in that Passage . . The Birth of Abraham.
The point of intersection of Floor-line by plane of first-ascending Passage . The Birth of Moses.
Commencement of Grand Gallery . . The Birth of Christ.

The three passages thus symbolise those three great dispensations which have for their lawgivers, Noah, Moses, and Christ respectively. The birth of Abraham was an event occurring during the first or patriarchal era, and is fittingly symbolised by the ruled lines which mark an event without breaking the continuity of the dispensation. These lines, moreover, also commemorate the date of the building itself, which, in one sense, may be regarded as the horoscope of the man whose natal year

* "The Mystery of the Bible Dates Solved," p. 23.

Digitized by Google

it marks. It is, therefore, by no means improbable that the use made of astronomy by the architect of the Great Pyramid, might, in course of time, by perversion and decadence of true knowledge, form the basis of that science—if it may be so-called—of astrology, with which Mr. Proctor is so persistent in associating the building of the Great Pyramid.

(To be continued.)

OUR OPPONENTS.

THE REV. FRANK H. WHITE.

A PAMPHLET by the Rev. F. H. White, entitled "Anglo-Israelism Examined in the Light of the More Sure Word of Prophecy" (Haughton & Co., price 4d.), has been placed in our hands, and we feel we have something to say to Mr. White. When he sat down to prepare his lecture, why did not this new opponent first see that he had rightly comprehended our Israelite teaching? Where did he find, for instance, the wonderful statement we read on page 30 of his pamphlet, that "according to the Anglo-Israel theory the Ten Tribes are to be restored to their land, and blessed in it before they are re-united to the Two Tribes?" "This notion," we are wisely informed, "is altogether contrary to the Old Testament prophecies on the subject;" and then we have Isa. xi. 12, 13; Jer. xxx. 3, 4; Ezek. xxxix. 25, 27; and Zech. x. 6, quoted at length to prove how silly are the Anglo-Israelites. Let Mr. White tell us whom he quotes, and where he finds this absurd mistake, which was, in truth, the coinage of his own brain, before he administers a reproof to men who can read their Bibles, and know that "the House of Judah shall walk to the House of Israel, and that they shall come TOGETHER out of the land of the North to the land that I have given for an inheritance to their fathers" (Jer. iii. 18; Hos. i. 11). Mr. White finds our Israelite views "fraught with the greatest peril to those who take up with it, and full of deadly antagonism to the truth of God."

The peril to the believers in our origin seems to consist in this, that we take God at His word and believe that what He promised He performs. Thus, since we ourselves have maintained in the BANNER and in our "History for Children" that all the blessings we constantly quote from Deut. xxviii. 1—14 are given us from on high because we are Israel, we are held to have committed an enormous offence. These blessings Mr. White implies are the allotted portion of those "renewed in heart by the Holy Spirit, and have become new creatures in Christ Jesus" (page 7). Let us test this by Mr. White's own case.

We have no doubt Mr. White is a man whose "heart is renewed by the Holy Spirit, and become a new creature in Christ Jesus." What has he, as an individual Christian, got to do with the twenty-four national blessings we were speaking of in our writings as specified in Deut. xxviii. 1—14? Does he hope to be "set above all nations?" to be the "blessed one in his city," and in "his field" (of course he has one)? is the promise certain to him regarding his "children"—"the produce of his lands," which he must possess? are his cattle, which as the "godly man" he possesses, blessed? his kine and flocks of sheep, his basket and his store, are these all his, and is he blessed in them? when he goes out and when he comes in, do all things go well with him? when he fights his enemies (fancy Mr. White going out to real battle!), does he vanquish them and cause them to "flee" before him "seven ways?" does he lend to many nations? and do none lend to him? and does God make him (Mr. White) the head and not the tail, and never let anyone triumph over him? The whole thing is a mistake, and Mr. White utterly misunderstands us, for we were writing of national blessings promised by the Lord to His people Israel, which we Anglo-Saxons, as His people, have; but Mr. White, mistaking our views in toto, starts back with horror because we say nothing of the "spiritual" blessings promised to individual believers, regarding which we have advanced nothing at all. The "new covenant outpouring of the Holy Spirit," it is true, is a national gift to Israel as God's people; but this in no way interferes with "the renewal by the Holy Spirit," of individual souls now. Herein also Mr. White misapprehends our teaching in toto, and in truth he is not competent to write against us, because he is positively only partially informed of our views, and in some particulars his statements are, as we have shown, absurdly wrong.

But it appears by Mr. White's pamphlet that the rock on which we have split is, that our Anglo-Israelite writings abound with quotations from millennial Scriptures (page 7). We apply these millennial Scriptures to the British nation in this present evil age, and hence do greatly err. Such texts are Jer. xxxi. 7, 8; Psa. xxii. 27, xcviii. 3, ii. 8; Isa. xli. 8, 9, xlii. 10, &c. The only thing we have to say here is, "Who told Mr. White these were millennial Scriptures?" The Bible does not say so! We do not see it so stated there! The "millennium" seems to us to be mentioned as such only in four verses in the entire Bible—viz., in Rev. xx. 2, 4—6. To say then, on Mr. White's own mere assumption and ipse dixit, that a large number of passages in the Old and New Testament refer "only to millennial times," is what we decline to admit. Commentators do not concur with our new mentor in this his dictum, and on the whole, without any evidence, we fail to see that Mr. White has any grounds for his somewhat dictatorial assertions. In Mr. W.'s view we all "repeat the sin of the Romanists," we are guilty of frightful, nay, "revolting perversion of truth" in the matter of Psa. ii. 8 (we are glad "BLASPHEMY" is not hurled at our devoted heads again!). The Identity of Britain with "the stone of Daniel" is regarded as one of our heinous offences against Christ's glory, and Dan. vii. 27, with our application of it to the British races, is held up to horror, because Mr. White asks, "Can a people characterised as the saints of the Most High in high places be identical with the people of a mere earthly kingdom, such as our own?" We answer, that if the verse in question be correctly quoted, "yes!" The "dominion" is promised not "to the saints," but "to the people of the saints," those "of the Most High," and not a word is added about the "most high in high places." The kingdom will be a "people's," those people are the saints of the Most High, and Psa. cxlviii. 14 tells us, on the authority of God's Word (which Mr. White dare not deny), that they are "the children of Israel, a people near to Him. Praise ye the Lord." The children of Israel were and are of this world, and the British being they, to them is destined "the kingdom" universal, here below (not in high places, Mr. White). We see nothing, therefore, shocking in our views, but we are sorry to find that in quoting, Mr. White fails sometimes to quote correctly.

We cannot profess to answer Mr. White fully. Much of his pamphlet we have already answered in replying to other opponents. Such old arguments are the denial of the fact that Israel was "Lost," or so described in God's Word. We maintain it was so lost just as Saul's father's asses were "lost" and "found again;" but not otherwise (page 17). The Scriptural distinction between Israel and Judah is admitted by Mr. White in a measure. But he appears to hold that after the return of the Jews from Babylon, and in New Testament times, no such distinction is maintained, though as a fact he seems to allow the "Houses" are now distinct (page 30). We say "seems to allow" because on this point his language, like that of all our opponents, is ambiguous, and we cannot clearly discern what the belief of our antagonist really is. Our "Identifications" are in Mr. White's view "pitiably ridiculous," and "no Identifications at all." But he does not in his first pamphlet do more than merely enumerate—1, the Gates; 2, the heathen Empire; 3, our nation and company of nations; 4, our wealth; 5, our evangelising tendencies; 6, our Sabbath laws; 7, our love of the ten commandments. These are all nearly put out of sight or passed over slightingly, and Mr. White selects for his ridicule such points as—1, British and Jewish physiognomy; 2, the Irish Canaanites; 3, Jacob's stone; 4, a State Church; 5, prayer towards the East; 6, John Bull; and 7, some writer's statement about "Beer-lah-ai-roi" having reference to "Beer!" We cannot say we ever heard of the latter "Identity;" but it serves Mr. White's purpose well.

Digitized by Google

We ask our readers, Is all this fair? does Mr. White shine as "a foeman worthy of our steel" in the whole matter? We say, No! We deem his attack weak, childish, and unfair, and we tell Mr. White that the Identity will not be damaged by such shafts as his; but that, on the contrary, men will see that if his present efforts to destroy our teaching are all that the opposition can do, this, like so much that has gone before, will prove weak indeed! Ours is God's truth! Neither the sophistries of perverse men, nor the wiles of Satan himself, can or will prevail against it for a single instant. Readers, let us thank God for that.

THE DEATH OF A CHRISTIAN BELIEVER IN THE IDENTITY.

THE fact was mentioned at a recent meeting of the Anglo-Israel Association, at Clifton, that there had that day been consigned to the tomb the remains of a servant of the Lord, who had been for about two years interested in the Identity, who had rejoiced in it, and had studied God's Word diligently to find in it new beauties by the light which this truth sheds on every page.

But how did this servant of God die? Was his trust then on the Identity for his soul's salvation? Nay, not so! his dying testimony was that "He trusted only in Christ—only in Christ!" A true believer in our Hebrew origin, and in his own Identity with the stock of Abraham according to the flesh, this Israelite, for his soul's salvation, looked always only to Jesus! Where, then, is the danger our opponents are always telling us exists, as a system, in our Israelitish origin? We imagine not a single individual believing in our Identity ever makes the absurd mistake attributed to us by our opponents, of relying upon his Hebrew descent for salvation and not upon the sacrifice at Calvary, if upon anything, for his soul's safety. The deceased died rejoicing in his Israelitish origin. But he died also trusting for salvation only in Jesus, and rejoicing in the expectation of soon meeting that Saviour Himself, to see the restoration of whose ancient people Israel it had been his and his wife's daily prayer that they might both be spared. Addressing his wife shortly before his death he said, "Ah, Nan, I shall see the King in His beauty, I shall see the New Jerusalem before 1882." At that date he supposed the Israelites would return to Jerusalem. He was a diligent distributer of Identity literature; and was thus the means of at least one man's being aroused to a living interest in not merely Identity truth, but in Christ Himself.

We thank God for all this! and trust such cases as that we record may be largely multiplied, and widely published!

NOTICE.—We hope within a week or two to publish in the BANNER three papers proving the fulfilment among us of Isa. i. 26, by the existence to-day of the unique fact, unknown elsewhere among Gentiles, of the British Political Constitution—i.e., Crown, Prime Minister, Cabinet, Lords, and Commons. We show these to have been God-given institutions granted to Israel of old, as evidenced by 1 Sam. viii. 6, 7, 20, 21; by Exod. xviii. 21; and by Num. xi. 16, &c.—EDITOR.

Reviews.

The Sisters of Harrowdale Rectory. A Tale for the Young on the Identity of Lost Israel. By Mrs. M. A. Searson. Price 2s. 6d. Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

THIS is an interesting, pleasing story, in which the chief features of our Identity with Israel have been introduced in a manner likely to be appreciated by many. We could scarcely venture, however, to describe it in the terms first chosen to recommend it in our advertising columns, for it does not, we imagine, pretend to be a work of "thrilling interest." It is a simple narrative artlessly told, written by one evidently inexperienced in literary work; but, on the whole, a well-intentioned book meant to serve the cause we, as well as the writer, love, but which, for all that, we wish had not been issued without curtailment and modification in respect to the points we now proceed to indicate. We think the "God-given dream" (somewhat like a Swedenborgian revelation, wholly apart from the Scripture) to be found on page 29, et seq., is an excrescence on the work which mars it. It is misleading, is erroneous in its tendencies, and is sure to direct against "our Identity" the finger of the adversary. The ministry of angels, besides, is so taught here as to lead directly to the inference that they carry the prayers of sinners to their Saviour and His returning answers to them. The guardian angels are thus placed in the room of, or as a medium between, "the one Mediator between God and men," who declared, "No man cometh unto the Father but by Me" (1 Tim. ii. 5; John xiv. 6). Mrs. Searson's teaching goes far beyond the scope of Heb. i. 14, and we think we cannot safely notice her book without warning our readers against these serious errors.

The descriptions which follow of paradise, of Michael the archangel, of God Himself upon the throne, of our blessed Lord, and of the colloquy in heaven regarding Israel between the accuser, the archangel Michael, the Lord, and God the Father, are such as we cannot approve. We do regret their insertion in the work, and we are sure most of our readers will concur with us. The descriptions of a three-fold place of torment, where the lost are in one place comparatively "in comfort and even luxury" (page 43); further on in another are in deep distress; and yet lower still, in horrible, terrible torments, seem to us an unauthorised and presumptuous intrusion into secrets not disclosed in God's Word, which read like some of the revelations of the spiritualists. These all Israelites (we strongly urge) ought instinctively to shun.

Putting these objections on one side (though they are really serious) the book is a cheerful and instructive work likely to be popular with juveniles, conveying some of our arguments clearly and convincingly, and is exceedingly well got up by our enterprising publisher, Mr. Banks. We trust, should the work reach another edition, that the second chapter will be re-written and the dream omitted.

Israel's Chronological Chart. By George N. Walsh. One shilling. Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

This chart has been prepared by Mr. G. Walsh to correct all previous sacred chronological systems which, in his view, are faulty in some respect or other. To the Pyramidist the chart is presented as singularly confirmed, in regard to the accuracy of its details, when viewed in the light of the great building itself. The points wherein the Great Pyramid dates and Mr. Walsh's scheme, however, coincide, are the following six only—namely:

1. B.C. 2170	=Birth of Abram	=A.M. 1948
2. B.C. 1542	=Birth of Aaron	=A.M. 2585
3. A.D. 0	=Birth of Christ	=A.M. 4090
4. A.D. 1849	=Decadence of Anti-Christ begun	=A.M. 5939
5. A.D. 1878	=Signature of Berlin Treaty	=A.M. 5968
6. A.D. 1910	=Possible completion of the 3rd Dispensation	=A.M. 6000

These six Pyramid epochs, Mr. Walsh considers, are marked by—1, the Messianic lines; 2, the commencement of the ascending passage; 3, the commencement of the grand gallery; 4, the edge of the grand step; 5, the end of the grand gallery ceiling; 6, the end of the grand gallery floor line, respectively.

The only point we propose to mention in Mr. Walsh's scheme is that relating to the proper length of the grand gallery itself. He considers that Pyramidists have hitherto erred in measuring the floor's length through the great step. He believes the true result should be obtained "by measuring the length up the face of the step, along its level surface at its top, instead of through it." Thus measured it is found the whole length is not 1881·6, but (1813 + 36 + 61) exactly 1910 Pyramid inches. His computation for the

Digitized by Google

Annus Mundi at the birth of our Lord gives for result 4090, and this number with 1910, of course, is the whole even number 6000, or the Annus Mundi when the third dispensation shall be brought to a close.

What Pyramidists say to Mr. Walsh's mode of measuring the floor-line length, we know not. It occurs to us, however, that the fact recorded by the builder was the actual length of the floor line of the chamber, which is 1881·6—neither more nor less. To count up the 3 feet of the upward rise of the step as 36 inch-years, and not three years regarded as an inch for a month, is to our mind improper. Mr. C. Horner, at page 44, of "The Digest of Great Pyramid Teaching," by Philo-Israel, has considered Mr. Walsh's theory, and satisfactorily (as it seems to us) set it aside. The entire gallery is only 1881·6 inches long; and to suppose that the distance to traverse is really 1910, would exceed the limits of the chamber itself, a supposition quite inadmissible.

On these grounds we cannot ourselves give adhesion to Mr. Walsh's views, though we commend his laudable endeavour to throw light on what seems, to some minds, very obscure. It is well for us in such a matter, involved in doubt and difficulty, to consider all schemes of measurement. But the only true teacher will be God Himself, when the fulfilment will tell us whether the dispensation will end, as we now suppose, in A.D. 1881·6, or as Mr. Walsh suggests, in A.D. 1910.

Correspondence.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—After an amused perusal of Mr. Clifford's second pamphlet, I cannot but congratulate you that his artillery finds no hopeful aim except at some apparently weak points, and that the personally seeming advantage which he claims does not by any means reach the pith of your argument.

What if one of your correspondents was really irritated by an antagonist's crowing; or if another confounded Ham with Canaan; or what if Hamitic blood be in the veins of Joseph's lineage; or if the coronation-stone be not of Eastern origin; or if it could be shewn (p. 16) that there were "a thousand generations" from Shem to King Alfred; or that the Anglo-Israelites believed some absurd interpretations about the lion as eating straw; would all this (and just no more) touch the heart of the question? Would it even serve by one iota to show the writer's candour and fairness?

More than this, suppose it could be proved that your interpretation of the passages, Psa. ii. 8 and Isa. xlii., was erroneous (as I myself always thought in the latter case), how could this justify the determined closure of the eyes against the clear and unanswerable purport of such passages as Mr. Hickson has adduced? Let opponents grapple with his argument in the BANNER of March 19 for instance. People who can only bespatter a wrestler should not cackle about throwing him.

Neither all the wrath of man, nor all the self-satisfied chuckle of assumed infallibility can disprove the facts that our mixed race has, in fecundity and imperial power, excelled all other races, that God has used us for world-wide blessing, that He has given us, with (humanly speaking) very inadequate means, the widest range of victory, that He has placed us in possession of numerous vantage points against our enemies, that He has made us mainly the conservators and propagators of the oracles of God, has given us untold and unexampled wealth in alliance with the descendants of Judah, and why all this if His people Israel be not largely among us; thus constituting the "great nation." P. Q. R.

P.S.—Seeing that you have honoured my former letter of July with a place in your columns, I beg to enclose some brief remarks on the pamphlet above referred to. It had been a matter of some doubt to me whether you would take the least notice of such a production. Permit me to add that the brochures of such opponents as Messrs. Clifford and Cornall (each of whom I have learned through years of good repute very highly to esteem for their work's sake) have gone far to convince me of the truth of your theory. For if all such opponents can say amount to no more than superficial special pleading based on traditional interpretations, then, expert as their mental somersaults may be, they do but remind one of the homely old proverb, "None so blind as those who wont see."—Aug. 9.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—Have you noticed the secular rendering of the fulfilment of the prophecies contained in Genesis xxxv. and xlviii.? In case you have not, I herewith append it word for word, as copied from the Daily Telegraph of yesterday's date. It is strikingly illustrative of the views which foreigners hold with regard to the greatness of the British Empire:—

"The bonds of federation are the only ones suitable to the British Empire."

Such is the verdict of the Moniteur Universel after a careful examination of England's colonial policy. This is urging that England must "become a multitude of nations," and therefore Israel.

It is the basis of this federation, continues the French paper, which Lord Grey has timidly put forward in his article, "How shall we retain our colonies?" by proposing that the Privy Council, whose duty it is at present to examine all colonial questions and refer them to the Queen, should form a colonial committee consisting of residents from the various colonies, who would be assimilated to Imperial councillors and have a consultative voice on all questions concerning British possessions. These councillors should be paid. It would be sufficient to grant them deliberative power, and they would become a Federal Parliament. "It is undoubted," says the Moniteur, "that the chief event marking the close of the century would be the general federation of all the British possessions, bound firmly together in all its coherent elements into an Empire of over 250 million souls. When subjected to a single impulse, the forces by sea and by land which the Empire could dispose of, would be so colossal, that they could only be counterbalanced by the federation of other States, and the balance of power in Europe would have to be established on a new basis."

Yours faithfully, P. J. HOLDEN,
(Hon. Sec. North London Anglo-Israel Association).

Regent-house, Stoke Newington, Sept. 4, 1879.

"RORKE'S DRIFT."

January 22nd, 1879.

A HUNDRED! And they held the day
Against three thousand foes!
Nought save corn-bags and waggons
To aid them as they close.

A Hundred! brave, immortal souls!
By Chard and Bromhead led!
Be still the same cool courage shown
Where Britain's armies tread!

Thermopylæ and Marathon
And Lenctra rise once more,
And Britons do as erst they did
In grand old days of yore!

The mightier and the grander days
Throng fast around us now,
And Godlike spirits cast their rays
On earth, and witness how

'Gainst more than mortal odds the strength
That strengthened them comes still,
And gives, as at Rorke's Drift, the length
To brave determined will

Not e'er to yield, but life to sell
Dearly. With each bold plan,
Much exercised, they held out well,
For terror soon began

To take the place with Zulu crowds,
Of onslaught sure to win.
Jehovah thus led Israel's host—
The cloud of fire from Him

Lightened the Israelites on their way—
For forty years they trod
The wilderness, beset by foes,
Their strength their fathers' God.

Lord bless old England's armies now!
Lead over in the van!
And give our leaders strength to seize
Each bold determined plan.

That thus no life may recklessly
Be lost, but peace ensured,
And Britain's rule guide all the world
By wisdom high secured.

KATHERINE BOND.

[From Londonderry Sentinel, April 8, 1879.]

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements
(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O.O payable at Ludgate-circus.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed :—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.
PRESIDENT: VISCOUNT FOLKESTONE, M.P.

LOST ISRAEL FOUND IN THE BRITISH NATION.

A LECTURE under the auspices of above Association will (D.V.) be delivered on Wednesday, November 19th, in the LECTURE HALL, BOGNOR, by the
REV. JAMES BILLINGTON, F.S.A., F.R.H.S.,
The Hon. Sec. of the Association. Chair to be taken at 8 o'clock by the Rev. J. P. HUTCHINSON.

THE REV. J. BILLINGTON, F.S.A., F.R.H.S.,
Will also Lecture at
THE LITERARY INSTITUTE, WORTHING,
On Friday, November 21st.
Admission free. Collection at close of each Lecture for Association funds.

LIVERPOOL.
A GENERAL MEETING to consider the advisability of forming a BRANCH of the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association, will be held in ST. JAMES'S HALL, TOXTETH PARK, on Thursday, November 27, 1879, at 8 p.m. All interested in the spread of the knowledge of the Identity are specially requested to attend.

NEW PAMPHLETS.

Now Ready. NEW LEAFLET of four pages. Price 2s. per hundred.

HISTORICAL AND PROPHETICAL DISTINCTIONS BETWEEN THE TWO HOUSES OF ISRAEL AND JUDAH.
Selected and Arranged by W. S. CAVILL.

Also by the same Author,

THE PROMISES TO ABRAHAM: with SELECT REFERENCES AND EXPLANATORY NOTES. To which is added an Article entitled, ISRAEL AMONG THE GENTILES.
Price Sixpence, or free by post, Sevenpence.
The aim of this Pamphlet is to present the Scriptural Argument in a new and concise form, both for examination and reference.
May be had of the Author, Norton Woodside, near Sheffield: or of the Publisher, Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C; and of all Booksellers.

Now ready, price 2d., post free 2½d., in neat coloured cover.

AMMI;
OR,
THE CHOSEN PEOPLE,
BY MISS BIRD.
Tracing the descent of the British people from Abraham, the "friend of God," and showing that true science, history, philology, and ethnology, are on the side of the Identity of the Anglo-Saxon race with the Ten Lost Tribes.

In neat coloured cover, price 2d., post free 2½d.

BLESSINGS AND CURSES, AND THEIR RELATION TO ISRAEL AND JUDAH. By F. W. PHILLIPS, of Speedwell-road, Birmingham.

READ
ISRAEL'S HOPE AND DESTINY. A New Identity Journal, published monthly. Price 1d. No. 1 (now ready) contains an Original Article on "The Merchants of Tarshish and Russia." By Philo-Israel.
London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row; Liverpool: J. Catterall, 3, Mill-street; and all Booksellers. Order early.

NEW BOOKS.

NEW WORK BY DR. WILD.
NOW READY, price 3s., post free 3s. 4d. Handsome cloth, gilt, printed on toned paper and illustrated.

THE LOST TEN TRIBES,
AND
1882.
BY THE
REV. DR. JOSEPH WILD,
Of Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, N.Y.
Printed and published by
ROBERT BANKS, RACQUET COURT, FLEET ST., LONDON, E.C.
And may be had, by ordering, of any Bookseller.

PHILO-ISRAEL (in the BANNER) says:—"We have much pleasure in directing attention to this handsome Identity volume. It contains twenty discourses of the well-known American divine Dr. Joseph Wild, of Brooklyn, N.Y. We are glad to find from these discourses that Dr. Wild is quite one with us on this side the water with most, though not all, the views we entertain on our great and glorious subject. . . . We promise our readers that if they procure this work, and will peruse it, they will find 'our Identity' discussed in a clear, novel, racy, and 'American' point of view, which is sure to interest, sure to be instructive, and may lead the thoughtless and inquiring to pursue the investigation till possibly conviction may be the result."

EXTRACT FROM PREFACE:—
The main idea I wish to convey in this book, is that God is conducting His Providence through His ancient chosen people, Israel, whom I believe are found in the Saxon race. And His throne on earth, through which flow the purposes of Providence, is David's throne, which I believe to be at present the English throne. Queen Victoria (and God bless her) I believe to be of David's seed. The United States fulfils the role of the Tribe of Manasseh. Therefore, to understand the prophecies, Providence, and the present movements of nations, as well as the future lot and destiny of each, we must read the Scriptures in this light. God has made the children of Israel and throne of David His executive, in time, on earth. They are His executive for civilisation, evangelisation, order, and conquest. Through them God will conquer the world to an universal peace. As Moses was to God, so is Israel. Moses being a Divine executor, was to the people a god—so is Israel to all mankind. Spiritual Israel will come through literal Israel.

For Contents see BANNER for October 1st.

HORÆ PROPHETICÆ: WHAT DOES THE BIBLE TEACH ABOUT GREAT BRITAIN? Establishing the Identity of the Anglo-Saxon Race with the House of Ephraim.
BY REV. H. MARRIOTT, M.A.
Price 3s. in paper, 4s. in cloth boards.
W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.
T. E. Chilcott, Bristol.

WORKS BY PHILO-ISRAEL.
Price 2d., post free 2½d.
THE HISTORICAL, ETHNIC, AND PHILOLOGICAL ARGUMENTS in PROOF of BRITISH IDENTITY with the TEN LOST TRIBES OF ISRAEL, clearly and simply stated.
BY PHILO-ISRAEL.
CONTENTS:—Introduction—The Celts—Professor Rawlinson's Testimony—The Cymry—The Cimmerii—The Gimiri and Khumri—The Testimony of the Nimroud Obelisk—The Scythians—The Anglo-Saxons—Sharon Turner's Testimony—The Jutes and Angles—The Danes and the Normans—General Conclusions—Philology—The Welsh Language—The Rev Canon Lysons' Testimony—Idiomatic Identity Between Hebrew and English—Tyndal's Testimony—The Tribe of Dan—The Irish Celts—Are the Continental Nations Israelites?—Conclusions—Appendix.
Price 4d., post free 5d.
AN ELEMENTARY DIGEST or SKETCH OF THE CHIEF FACTS and TEACHINGS of the GREAT PYRAMID of EGYPT: adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific. By PHILO-ISRAEL; together with Original Papers by the following leading Pyramidists, republished mostly from the BANNER OF ISRAEL (by kind permission of the proprietor)—viz., Professor Piazzi Smyth, the Rev. J. W. Hickson, M.A., Charles Horner, Esq., and Major H. A. Tracey, R.A. Being a pamphlet by five authors (a Pyramid number).

DISCOVERY OF ISRAEL.—BIBLE PROOF.
See paper No. 2 on "Israel and the Church." By the Rev. R. DOUGLAS, M.A., Vicar of St. Stephen's, Sheffield. Price 2d.
G. Slater, 54, Snig-hill, Sheffield; W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.
Pamphlet No. 1.—"The Purpose of God."

NEW BOOKS.

A NEW TALE OF GREAT INTEREST FOR YOUNG PEOPLE ON THE IDENTITY OF LOST ISRAEL.
Now ready, price 2s. 6d., post free 2s. 9d. Bound in handsome cloth, gilt, bevelled boards, gilt edges, and beautifully printed on toned paper.

THE SISTERS
OF HARROWDALE RECTORY.
BY
MRS. M. A. SEARSON,
ILLUSTRATED WITH
BEAUTIFUL DOUBLE-PAGE FRONTISPIECE.
Printed and Published by
ROBERT BANKS, RACQUET COURT, FLEET ST., LONDON, E.C.
And may be had, by ordering, of any Bookseller.

CONTENTS:—

CHAPTER I.
Harrowdale Rectory. The Rector's Family. God's Own Architect. An English Parsonage. The Aged Grandmother. Hospitality to Strangers. Frances Farnwood. Restoration to the Promised Land. Discussion on "Our Identity."

CHAPTER II.
A Quiet Controversy. A God-given Dream. Guardian Angels. A Visit to Paradise. What Paradise is Like. The Occupation of Angels. Michael the Archangel. Before the Throne of God. Israel My Heritage. The Wondrous Love of Christ. Unfolding of Prophecy Concerning Israel. A Visit to Souls in Prison. The Wonders of God's Perfect Will. Hopeless Condition of Lost Souls.

CHAPTER III.
Mother's Dream. Old Mother Davis. The Village of Harrowdale Described. William Edwards the Miner. Working Men's Homes. The Miner and the Identification of Lost Israel. The Chariot Wheels of Israel. Discouragements Overcome. A Visit to Mrs. Bertram. Her Daily Life. Her Belief in the English being Lost Israel. The Sisters' Visit to Mrs. Bertram and Mother Davis. Dinner With Mother Davis. Mother Davis and the Lost Ten Tribes. God Faithful to His Promises. The Coming of Our Lord.

CHAPTER IV.
Visit of Aunt Winslow and Cousin Calvin to the Rectory. A Family Tea-party. An Anglo-Israel Meeting. Calvin and His Uncle. The Return to Palestine. Israel or Judah—Which? What the Bible Reveals. The Wanderings of Our Israelite Ancestry. The Second Coming of Christ. A Sunday Evening Identity Class. The Bible Appealed to.

CHAPTER V.
The Neighbouring Clergymen Visit the Rectory. A Mutual Understanding. Marion's Opinion of Cousin Calvin. Calvin's Opinion of His Cousin. A Sketch of Rural Life. Miss Stanmore. Matrimonial Mistakes. Marion's Firm Belief in Providence. Calvin's Engagement to Miss Stanmore. Remarks on Unequal Marriages. The Calm after a Storm. A Parable. A Pledge of Love. The Parable Explained.

CHAPTER VI.
Calvin's Belief in our Identity. Captain Johnstone Introduced. Captain Johnstone and Miss Stanmore. An Open Avowal. Calvin Released from His Engagement. The Fever-Stricken Family. Calvin's Second Visit to Harrowdale. Sympathy and Help. A Visit to the Sick Chamber.

CHAPTER VII.
Illness of the Rector's Wife. Poor Susan. Mrs. Wildman's Trust in Her Saviour. "Going Home" in the Glorious Sunshine. The Heavenly Jerusalem. The Mother's Last Charge. Calvin and Marion. Good-bye.

This book will be read with interest by both young and old, and found well suited for a BIRTHDAY GIFT, SUNDAY SCHOOL REWARD, OR PRESENT.

Price 6d., post free 7d. New work on the Identity. Dedicated to all faithful ministers of Christ.

ISRAEL! AN EARNEST APPEAL FROM THE EW TO THE PULPIT IN FAVOUR OF OUR IDENTITY WITH GOD'S ELECT PEOPLE, ISRAEL; Being a Letter from JOHN G. SHAW to his Pastor, Rev. Eustace R. Conder, of Leeds, with an Introduction and Notes; to be followed by a Review of Mr Conder's Papers on the Lost Tribes.
By the same Author.
"BRITAIN (OR ISRAEL)," with Map. Price 8d., post free 9d.
"CHRONOLOGICAL CHART." Price 3d., post free 3½d.
"GOD'S LOVE FOR ISRAEL." Price 1d., 3 copies sent post free for 3½d.
London: ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, NOV. 19, 1879. [All Rights Reserved.]

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. III. No. 152. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 26, 1879. [ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
Israel's Navy	469
The Geography of the Gates.—No. XXXIV. Cyprus	470
Lord Carnarvon Gives Identity Evidence at a Missionary Meeting	471
Mr. Roebuck on the Empire of Israel	471
A.D. 1881	472
The Rev. Canon M. Blake Brownrigg, M.A., Editor of the Standard of Ephraim and The Jewish Chronicle.—Part II.	472
A Wesleyan Missionary on Israel's Heathen Empire	473
Mr. R. A. Proctor and Great Pyramid Chronology. Part II. By W. Rowbottom	474
Correspondence	475

ISRAEL'S NAVY.

OUR nation's power exists under God on our naval supremacy. Being Islanders ourselves, and yet holding the desolate heritages at the ends of the earth—the coasts and the uttermost parts thereof—how could we have retained our hold of the latter had not God given Israel the command of the sea? It is thus obviously one of our brightest and clearest Identities that "Britannia rules the waves." Did she not do so, she were not Israel, for then she could not have answered to Israel's description as the holder of the Gates, of the coasts, the ends, the uttermost parts of the earth. She does, however, so answer, and that exactly. Therefore the British must be Lost Israel, since no other nations of the world respond to the prophecy, least of all the Jews, who have no possessions whatever anywhere, nay, are not even a "nation" with a local territory, government, army, navy, or polity to raise them to the status of a nation.

It is improper for us as a nation, and especially as Israel, to rely upon our navy for safety or support. Our refuge, reliance, and strength are derived decidedly from the living God—the God of Israel. But He is a God who always and at all times has worked through and by means. He works in this case also by human means. Thus He has given us, His people, universal domination, the heathen and colonial Empires, the Gates, the command of the ocean highways of the world, and all that He promised to "our forefather Abraham and his seed for ever." But He has done it by and through the means of the naval supremacy and powerful marine He has armed us with, as His precious earthly gift. The Admiralty inspection of Portsmouth dockyard has lately been completed, and the Lords have had the opportunity of viewing "the earliest stages of our newest first-class ships." They have also seen all that the Portsmouth dockyard has to show (a part only of the whole) of Israel's enormous fighting strength as a maritime nation, second to none on the face of the globe. "The British navy," said the Times on the 24th Sept., 1879, "has grown in strength from year to year in more than equal proportion to the growth of foreign navies. If we look back to the close of the Crimean war, we may remember that the rivalry of France and of the United States was an object of constant apprehension with naval men in England. Those countries may now be said to have receded, for different reasons, from the competition for supremacy on the seas. Germany, Italy, and Russia have since come to the front, but none of those Powers can show an accession of naval strength equivalent to that for which this country annually provides. The Portsmouth dockyard, indeed, exhibits only a part of this provision."

With these views, we are glad to find that the Government is steadily carrying out our national policy, and is continually adding to our navy. New and more and more powerful vessels are being yearly added to our force. Our newest war-ship, it seems, is the Polyphemus—a torpedo-ram—now being constructed at Chatham. She will carry "no guns, no weapons, except a powerful ram-bow, and some apertures for ejecting torpedoes." As an engine of destruction our readers can easily imagine what immense power such a ship as this would possess built for great speed, and constructed with no other object than to deliver the fatal blow by her formidable ram at full career, a slight stroke of which from sister vessels sent the Vanguard and the Grosser Kurfürst to the bottom of the sea!

It is a satisfaction to us to know, as a proof that our God has fitted us for Israel's destiny, that "now, as at any time during the past twenty-five years, the British navy, whatever may be the judgment afterwards passed upon the individual ships composing it, is stronger than any probable combination of foreign navies." We greatly rejoice that this is true, for, in fact, on our naval supremacy our whole case and claim as Israel depends! Without the mastery of the seas, we should soon be stripped—1st, of our Gates; 2nd, of our colonies; 3rd, of our heathen Empire; 4th, of our commerce; 5th, of our mercantile marine; 6th, therefore of our wealth; 7th, also of our power to propagate the Gospel to the ends of the earth; and, 8th, of our own security, humanly speaking, as a God-defended, safety-assured Island-nation in the North-west of Europe. We see, then, how inexpressibly important it is for us as British Israelites to have the great instrument God has given us, not only for our own safety, but for the subjugation of the earth, always and at all times ready, prepared for instant use. We must maintain it so powerful in character that it may be able, by God's help, to bear down all opposition, to prevent war, and to uphold the dominion and Empire He has given His people intact for future generations. And this is to His glory and praise, since His promise was, that "the kingdom and dominion and greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven" should be granted to us, "the people of the saints of the Most High"—"even to Israel." Humanly speaking, then, there are no means God has devised more exactly adapted to effect that object He has in view than Israel's navy!

Digitized by Google

But we have yet a more marked instance of God's providence securing us maritime supremacy in these latter days. It was pointed out to us (blindly) in a leader of the Standard newspaper on Sept. 25, 1879. The editor, indicating the modern change of construction of ships of war from wood to iron, noted that, before the days of ironclads, it required forty acres of oak forest to be cut down to build a seventy-four gun wooden ship, and three times that amount to construct a ship of the Duke of Wellington class. "As these oaks were the growth of sixty years or a century, and the ships were only good for fourteen years, the supplies of home-grown timber were then quite inadequate to meet the Admiralty's demands. Foreign supplies were open to the objection that they might fail us in time of war, and would be more costly always to us than to foreign countries which could command a cheap material." This was only twenty years ago. Yet just when the need of Israel was greatest the Lord gave her the national discovery that iron ships of war were preferable in every way to wooden vessels. As Great Britain is the land of iron, of steel, of coals, and of the workmen skilled to use these very materials too, God's providential kindness to His people was thus shown to them just when the need arose, and "as the matter then required." Here, then, are mercies we have nationally received from our covenant God—mercies totally unmerited and undeserved, but bought for us by the precious blood of the Son of God Himself! There is surely a loud call here for praise from Israel!

As we write, the latest instance of British power, as proved by her ironclad marine defence, is brought vividly before our eyes by the episode of the "Turkish Reforms in Asia Minor." The Turks, of course, refused to make them, and asked for delay. The mere threat that Admiral Hornby would take up Israel's ships to Vourla caused the resistance to crumble away, and now the Porte is eager (though enraged) to meet the reasonable demands of the British Government. Here the power of Israel's navy, under God, caused the change in Turkish resolutions; and around that navy God has given, as we may see, to grow up a dread and a terror which none of the Gentile nations of the earth—least of all the Turks—will ever be able to resist.

THE GEOGRAPHY OF THE GATES.

(Continued from page 397.)

No. XXXIV.—CYPRUS.

In lat. 35° North, long. 33° East, 44 miles from the coast of Asia Minor, 67 from Latakia in Syria, and 150 from Acre in Palestine, there lies one of the gems of the Eastern Mediterranean, the ancient, renowned, and beautiful island of Cyprus. This lovely spot, now a British Gate, extends 132 miles East and West, and 30 to 35 miles North and South in breadth. Its area is 4,500 square miles, being about the size of Jamaica. The population is said to consist of between 90,000 and 100,000 souls, of whom more than half are degenerate Greeks, the rest Turks, Fellahs, and Arabs. In ancient times the island had 1,000,000 inhabitants, but only half that number when the Turks conquered it in A.D. 1571. Since that event, the prosperity of the island has fallen off, and it is now a land in ruins, waiting for the blessed hand of Israel's God, acting through His servant, to raise up this beauteous desolation in the North-east corner of the Levant. The island produces and exports even now, though in small quantities, corn, wine, cotton, salt, carobs, olive oil, silk, tobacco, madder, hemp, colocynth, timber, pitch, rice, and fruits. Its situation constitutes it a veritable Gate for a first-class Naval Power. It is placed, as we have noticed, just off the North coast of Syria, and commands the sea-way to the Gulf of Scanderoon, and the mouth of the Orontes. It thus is a Gate guarding the entry to the valley of the Euphrates, where the terminus of the railway from the Mediterranean to the head of the Persian Gulf must of necessity be located, and the "preparation" be made for the "way of the British Israelite kings of the East."

The harbours of the island are not now in a satisfactory condition. They are mere open roadsteads, and those not said to be of a safe kind. Money and skill must be expended on these to make them what British commerce and British enterprise will demand immediately. Constituting the natural Gate of the North coast of Syria, as the Suez Canal and Port Said are of the South coast of the Holy Land and Egypt, Cyprus, in the hand of the mistress of the seas, helps to enfold the Land of Promise in a military grasp, which renders it impossible for any Power to attack Syria or Egypt without the full consent of the owners of these Gates—now the House of Israel.

"It is probable that Cyprus is the one place in the world which could easily be turned into a storehouse of timber for the national dockyards. The oak grows in profusion, and the cedar of Lebanon would be at home there. In the beautiful valleys every cereal and every known fruit will reach perfection. The tobacco plant and the apple grow almost side by side. In ten years," says the journal from which we quote, "in Anglo-Indian hands, the island would pay all expenses, provide much of the wood needed for the dockyards, supply half the cities of Eastern Europe with cut marbles, fine tobacco, fruit, and liqueurs. The island might be made a splendid garden thrice the size of Suffolk, and from the extraordinary variety of its climates a sanitorium for the wealthy invalids of Europe."

"The hills and valleys of Cyprus are said to swarm with hares, partridges, bustards, quails, and in winter woodcock, snipe, and wild duck are common." Such is this splendid acquisition, the result of the high statesmanship of the British Premier, Earl Beaconsfield, who at the discussions which succeeded the treaty of San Stefano, concluded a defensive convention with the Porte, whereby the latter engaged, as a set off for the protection of her Asiatic territories and for the good government to be secured for her Province, to surrender the protectorate of this matchless Gate, as a material guarantee and as a "commanding station," "conferring influence, with facilities for British action, for military, naval, commercial, and communicatory purposes." The power of Israel will therefore be securely consolidated henceforth, both at Cyprus as the Northern, and at the Suez Canal as the Southern, Gates of the Levant, pending the evolution of the set time when the return of the chosen people of God to their own inheritance, which lies between these two great Gates, will have to take place. Then it will be found that Cyprus on the North, the Suez Canal on the South, Malta and Gibraltar on the West, will so secure and safeguard the grand procession of the return, that God's Word will come literally true, and verily "Jacob shall return and shall be in rest—and be quiet—and none shall make him afraid" (Jer. xxx. 10).

This island-Gate once before belonged to Great Britain, what time Richard Cœur-de-Lion won it from the infidels and held it as an appanage of the British Crown. He surrendered it to the Knight Templars, and they to other Powers, till in the 16th century the island fell to the blighting possession of the Ottomans.

The climate of Cyprus is generally healthy. In summer the heat, though great, is tempered by the winds from the mountains, but in winter the cold is very severe. What Cyprus will be ere long as a British Gate cannot be estimated from its condition to-day. It has by the Turks been permitted to fall into absolute ruin and decay. Its mountains have been denuded of their forest clothing, which has affected the climate and the water supply of the island detrimentally Its drainage and its sanitation have been utterly neglected by its late owners, and such neglect of course has its penalties, which it will be Israel's first concern to obviate and remedy. God has given our nation this glorious "Gate" in a sudden, strange, startling manner, just as He did a few years since the Southern Gate of the Suez Canal. These two marked interpositions in our favour point with no uncertain significance to the Land of Promise, and are tokens which all Israelites can readily read, that the purposes of the Lord are ripening rapidly—that the time for the return is come. Events are shortly to happen which will place the Great Gate of Constantinople in British hands; and then, but not before, will the Lord's promise to our forefather Abraham be fulfilled: "Thy seed shall possess the Gate of his enemies;" "The Gate of those that hate them;" then, and not before, will Israel and Judah return in glorious triumph to their land, assisted on their way by the left-hand powerful "Gate" of Cyprus.

Digitized by Google

We conclude our sketch by quoting the words of Sir Samuel W. Baker (no mean authority) published in the Times on the 14th July, 1879, and written from the Island when resident in "The Trooditissa Monastery, 4,400 feet above the sea." He said:—

The prime object in the occupation of Cyprus was the possession of a strategical position to complete the chain of military stations throughout the Mediterranean—"Gibraltar, Malta, Cyprus." I have no hesitation in saying that the unhealthiness of last year was exceptional, and that no reason exists for the declaration "that Cyprus is unfit for a military station," provided the troops are quartered in the highlands (as at present) during the summer months. Although Larnaca and Limasol cannot be classed as harbours, they are safe roadsteads with good anchorage. Famagosta may be made a first-rate harbour with a moderate outlay, and would be improved in sanitary condition. The geographical position of Cyprus as a military point cannot be too highly estimated. The natural resources of the island are great, and have been appreciated from the earliest times; but there is an absolute necessity that confidence should be established among all classes of the inhabitants before any permanent improvement can be expected. Cyprus must belong absolutely to England or we should have nothing to do with it.

It is an anomaly that British officers should be responsible for the administration of Turkish laws, and too much praise cannot be bestowed upon all those military officials who now occupy such posts of responsibility, and who exhibit an industry and devotion to the task which, in spite of many difficulties, must gain the respect of the Cyprian population. Trade is paralysed; the people waver in the uncertainty of the British occupation; the example of Corfu is before them; and suspense fetters all enterprise and checks development.

(To be followed by a paper on the "Channel Islands.")

LORD CARNARVON GIVES IDENTITY EVIDENCE AT A MISSIONARY MEETING.

WE are glad to see that Lord Carnarvon, speaking on April 29, 1879, at the annual meeting of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts, was obliged, in spite of himself, to give utterance to sentiments which point to British Identity with Israel in respect to our relations with the native races throughout the world with whom we are brought in contact by our "destiny." The Standard, writing on the subject on April 30, spoke as follows:—

A wider, and, as it may truly be called, an Imperial interest was given to yesterday's meeting of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel by Lord Carnarvon's remarks on the relations between England and the native races with which, in all parts of the world, English power and influence are now being brought into friendly or hostile contact. But his Lordship could only touch the fringe of a great subject. What permanent form—and with what results to mankind—these relations are to assume is the problem of the future. All that we now know is, that a destiny which we cannot gainsay forces us onwards, and that in the immediate consequences of this continually progressive movement there is much which humanity may indeed deplore, but which statesmanship does not yet see its way to avoid.

What is this "destiny which cannot be gainsaid, and which forces us onward?" The statesman cannot tell! the journalist is ignorant of its origin, its terminus a quo, and its terminus ad quem! Humanity, it seems, deplores the result, for the most part, and yet there is no way to avoid the consequences. We Israelites can reveal this secret; we know "the why" and "the wherefore" of this destiny; what forces the nation forward, who impels it, what its object is, and where it is to end. The cause of the progress is the Israelite origin of the British; the reason for the advance of the race is God's promise to their forefather Abraham; He who impels them is their great Jehovah; and the object and end of their wondrous never-ending "progress," which baffles the statesman and the journalist alike, is nothing more nor less than the universal dominion promised to "His people," "the saints of the Most High," "even the children of Israel," when the Lord allotted them "the kingdom, and the dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven." To this He added, as its complement, the rôle of being the honoured Missionary agents "to ALL the families of the earth." Whether it be "hideous blasphemy" or not, we stop not to inquire; but we do see that God gave to Israel the lands of the heathen"—"even an heritage unto Israel, His servant; for His mercy endureth for ever" (Psa. cxxxvi. 21, 22). He made His king "the head of the heathen" (Psa. xviii. 43); He authorised Israel "to execute vengeance upon the heathen and punishments upon the people" (Psa. cxlix. 7), and all this, we believe, in virtue of the original gift of those said heathen "to Israel His inheritance," and "the uttermost parts of the earth" to Jacob, "His possession," made by the Father, at the request of the Divine Son of His love (Psa. ii. 8).

We see nothing "blasphemous" in all this, but we recognise a consistent Scriptural conformity with actual nineteenth century British facts, which cannot be gainsaid nor ridiculed by the vehement bitter opposition of antagonists who set themselves against God's most glorious truth.

MR. ROEBUCK ON THE EMPIRE OF ISRAEL.

WE always admire Mr. Roebuck's utterances. He is an Englishman to the backbone! He loves his country first, and his party next. We don't want to know whether Mr. Roebuck belongs to the Tories or the Radicals, to the Conservatives or the Liberals. His sentiments are our sentiments, and we gladly quote his words. They were uttered several months ago, and appeared in the Daily Telegraph of April 3, 1879, on some occasion when he was returning thanks for the "House of Commons."

In his view there is no decadence in that noble institution. It represents "the United Kingdom," and the Government by the people of themselves. His ideas of the world-wide character of our Empire, why we have it, what we do there, and the raison d'être of the British in India, in America, and everywhere, as the dominant race, are so thoroughly in accord with Identity and Israelite teachings, that we ask for them our readers' attention, satisfied they will appreciate them. He said:—

We are now—I do not speak in vanity, speaking of myself and my country, but I say it as a matter of fact—we are at the head of civilisation. (Hear, hear.) We now set the world an example of how they may govern themselves, and how they should have a House of Commons; for if they have not a House of Commons they will not be represented, and if not represented they will not govern themselves. I say that the House of Commons which we have has led England to the glory which she has achieved, and it ought to be followed by a House of Commons that will lead England onward on the path of glory upon which she has been so long established. There are wars going on, and there are questions being raised by which it would seem that men forget the past history of their country. (Hear, hear.) We have put forward our feelers throughout the world. We have subjugated savage nations, and taken possession of their country. We have dispossessed them; and if that be an evil, then it is an evil which shows our civilisation. (Cheers.) That is our only justification for having taken possession of America—for having driven out the red man, and taken his possessions—in order that we might take upon ourselves the better government of the country. Now, where a few hunters followed the wild animals which gave them food, there are millions of educated men—men of our own blood, who sustain our own feelings and opinions, and who have taken their place in America. (Cheers.) Then, again, our Government in India is only to be defended by the fact that by governing them we render the people of India more happy than they were under their former rulers. (Cheers.) If they are not, we have no business there. (Hear, hear.) But those who want to introduce a new system into our Government do not understand how we have become the rulers of India and of the commerce of the world. (Cheers.) That which has made us what we are will continue to make us if we are true to ourselves. If we carry out all the old principles of English Government in our dominance over the savage nations within our control, we shall be, as we ever have been, the precursors of humanity, civilisation, and peace. I say this is the only qualification for what we have done, and for what I hope we shall do. The House of Commons—that abstract House of Commons to which I have alluded—will, I hope, support the Government of England in doing that which former Governments have done; and by so doing we shall carry civilisation, peace, and happiness throughout all our dominions. (Loud cheers.)

Digitized by Google

Here we find Mr. Roebuck assuming the rôle of a "blind witness," testifying to our Hebrew origin; for he asserted—

1. "That we have put forward our feelers throughout the world." But this is what God said He would do to Israel, by "removing the race far unto all the ends of the earth" (Isa. xxvi. 15).

2. "That we have subjugated savage nations and taken possession of their country." But this was God's command to Israel in Psa. ii. 9, cxlix. 7, 8; Rev. ii. 26, 27, in respect to the execution of judgments on the Gentiles. Also as to the occupation of their country, Isa. xlix. 8; Psa. cxxxv. 12, cxxxvi. 21, 22, give that to Israel for ever. It includes "the desolate heritages" and "the heathen Empire"—both.

3. We are glad to see Mr. Roebuck's views point to our nation as one likely to be a "world-wide, ever-growing Empire," which was what God promised Israel in Dan. vii. 22, 27. Its object is, he says, "to carry civilisation, peace, and happiness, throughout our dominions;" therefore, through the whole world, like Israel. For "He shall cause them that come of Jacob to take root (which reminds us of the pepul-tree). Israel shall blossom, and bud, and fill the face of the world with fruit" (Isa. xxvii. 6).

A.D. 1881.

THE year 1881 will be a mathematical curiosity. From left to right and from right to left it reads the same; 18 divided by 2 gives 9 as a quotient; 81 divided by 9 and 9 is the quotient. If 1881 is divided by 209, 9 is the quotient; if divided by 9 the quotient contains a 9; if multiplied by 9 the product contains two 9's. 1 and 8 are 9: 8 and 1 are 9. If the 18 be placed under the 81, and added, the sum is 99. If the figures be added thus—1, 8, 8, 1—it will give 18. Reading from left to right is 18, and reading from right to left is 18, and 18 is two-ninths of 81. By adding, dividing, and multiplying, nineteen 9's are produced, being one 9 for each year required tocomplete the century.—Philadelphia Ledger.

THE REV. CANON M. BLAKE BROWNRIGG, M.A., EDITOR OF "THE STANDARD OF EPHRAIM," AND "THE JEWISH CHRONICLE."

(Concluded from page 464.)

PART II.

As it would be impossible within the limits I might hope to occupy in your paper to sketch out the whole "character or destiny" of the Ten Tribes under notice, I would content myself with a reference to a few of its features; and submit the following in illustration—That the seed of Joseph, through Manasseh, should be a "great" people, while Ephraim (also of Joseph) should be "greater;" and his seed a multitude or fulness of nations (see Gen. xlviii. 19). That Israel should be a great colonising Power—"Thy seed shall spread abroad to the West and to the East, and to the North and to the South" (see Gen. xxviii. 14). That Israel should possess an extensive Gentile empire—"Thou shalt break forth on the right hand and on the left; and thy seed shall inherit the Gentiles, and make the desolate cities to be inhabited" (Isa. liv. 3); and "I will preserve thee, and give thee for a covenant of the people, to establish the earth, to cause to inherit the desolate heritages" (Isa. xlix. 8). That Israel should possess "the Gate of his enemies"—that is, should hold places of strategic importance in enemies' lands: "Thy seed shall possess the Gate of his enemies" (Gen. xxii. 17, xxiv. 60). That Israel should be a great money-lending Power—"Thou shalt lend unto many nations, but thou shalt not borrow" (Deut. xv. 6, xxviii. 12). That Israel, as distinct from Judah, should be a most numerous people—"Yet the number of the children of Israel shall be as the sand of the sea, which cannot be measured or numbered" (Hos. i. 10). Without extending this sketch, let me now directly ask you—Do not these particulars form a portion of that "certain character and destiny for the Ten Tribes?" They either do not, or they do. If they do not, then to what or to whom do these particulars relate? If these passages do not mean what we affirm that they mean, upon you, therefore, rests the burden of explaining their true meaning, for there they are in the sacred writings, and as part of God's Word they assuredly mean something! But if they do relate to the "character and destiny" of the Ten Tribes, then we are agreed as to some of the marks by which Israel is to be discovered. This being so, the solution of the "problem," as you rightly say, is "to discover which people represents them." Our solution is that this "character and destiny" is "reproduced only in the genius and present condition of the English people," or, as we prefer to say, in the British nation! And we base our argument on the fact, that the British nation is a nation and a company of nations—that it is the only colonising nation in the world that can be rightly so called—that it does possess a vast Gentile Empire—that it does hold strategic positions in all lands—that it does lend to all nations, but borrows from none—that it is, in respect of population, as the sand of the sea.

One of two courses only are now open to you in reference to this—viz., either to deny, on just grounds if possible, that these are facts in reference to the British nation, and then discover, if possible, some other nation possessing these marks of Israel; or honestly to admit the facts, and thereby accept the Identity. I observe that you speak of our Scriptural proofs as "of so airy a character as almost to defy the assaults of logic;" rather is it the case that they are of so solid a character as to absolutely defy the assaults of logic. I quite agree with you in your remark that if "other nations besides the English represent the missing Israelites, all the Scriptural texts which have hitherto been quoted in support of the theory will be so many arguments against it." But the question is—Do any other nations represent them? Could you point to any besides the English who possess even the few Identifying marks noticed in this letter? We do not doubt that scattered throughout the world there are "rifts and remnants" of our brethren of Israel—such as you refer to in your leader—but you would not "logically" speak of these as "nations." Until, then, it can be shown that "other nations besides the English represent the missing Israelites," it is fair you should allow that far from our reasonings from Scripture being either "ludicrous" or "Satanic," they are natural, and reasonable, and Scriptural.

Digitized by Google

We necessarily lay greater stress upon the testimony of Scripture than upon that of history in dealing with the discovery of the Ten Tribes, because, even upon your own admission, the Israelites, as such, "disappear from the page of history as suddenly and completely as though the land of their captivity had swallowed them up," but we do not ignore such help as secular history may afford. You affirm "that it must, however, be evident that if there is any truth in the theory at all, its greatest support must be looked for in historical proofs." Now, as you have just told us that "the Israelites disappear from the page of history as suddenly and completely as though the land of their captivity had swallowed them up," is it reasonable and consistent on your part to hold "that if there is any truth in the theory at all, its greatest support must be looked for in historical proofs?" It is in my view far from "evident" that such should be the case. I accept, however, your historical admission as important, that the "eighth century B.C. is given as the earliest date of the Gothic migration from Asia to Europe, and it is the date, too, of the Assyrian captivity;" but I notice that you enquire "how is the Identity of the two nations to be established?" The object of your enquiry is, doubtless, to suggest that if "the Goths" cannot be Identified with the Israelites, the Anglo-Saxon Identity is a "phantasy," and not a "fact." But I venture to say that a misapprehension of the argument from history, so far as it gives any light on this question, has led you astray in reference to the Anglo-Saxons and the Goths. Your statement, "The Anglo-Saxons were the descendants of the Goths," is not sufficiently accurate. You are not clearly distinguishing between the generic and the specific. "The Goths" is a generic title, the "Anglo-Saxons" specific, and no Anglo-Israelite maintains that the "Goths" are the Lost Ten Tribes, but that the specific "Anglo-Saxons" are such. Nor does it follow, as you maintain, that "if the Anglo-Saxons are the Ten Tribes, that therefore all the Normans, the Danes, the Germans, the Dutch, the Swiss, and the Norwegians, all of Gothic extraction, would have to be regarded as of Israelitish descent," for this obvious reason, that in applying to these peoples your own method of solving the Ten Tribes "problem," these peoples, as not possessing the "character and destiny foreshadowed for the Ten Tribes," cannot be "the people which represent them." It is again, through not keeping distinct the difference between the generic and the specific, you have been led to require as essential to the proof of the Identity something which does not really belong to it. You say—"If it could be shown that the Goths were characterised by decidedly Israelitish manners and beliefs, the advocates of the new theory might hope to present a prima facie case worthy of the consideration of logical minds. It is at all times pleasant in argument to have "logical minds" to deal with, and I therefore trust it has only to be pointed out to be "logically" admitted, that as we have here to do with the specific rather than with the generic, it will be quite sufficient if it can be shown that the specific—the "Anglo-Saxons"—were characterised by manners and beliefs indicative of, and explainable only by, their Israelitish descent. For the evidence of such Israelitish manners and beliefs, I must refer you to our Anglo-Israel literature, wherein it is unmistakably recorded, as it would greatly extend my letter to detail them here.

In bringing my letter to a conclusion, I am glad to find that you "have no objection to discovering that Englishmen are Israelites in disguise," but, "on the contrary, should be rather glad to find that they were." It is cheering to learn from your leader that "the theory seems to be gaining ground, if we are to judge by the fact of there being in existence more than one periodical" (there are five now) "specially devoted to its exposition and promulgation;" that "meetings in support of it are constantly held; and there is scarcely a town of importance in this country which does not contain some persons who earnestly believe in its truth." I have no doubt that the day is not far distant when that "most startling theory . . . . which discerns the Lost Israelites, not in any distant romantic people, but in the prosaic Englishmen," will be so strongly confirmed, that you will hail us as your missing brethren of the kingdom of Israel, and rejoice with us in the conjoint occupation of Palestine—a territory which belongs by Divine gift, not alone to Judah, but to Judah and Israel.

I am,
Yours fraternally,

M. BLAKE BROWNRIGG,
(Incumbent of St. John's Church, Launceston, and Editor of the "Standard of Ephraim.")

Tasmania, August 27th, 1879.

A WESLEYAN MISSIONARY ON ISRAEL'S HEATHEN EMPIRE.

WE beg our readers' attention to the following testimony from a retired Indian Missionary—a Wesleyan—to the value of India to our race, to the blessing our rule has been to the heathen there, and to the results already apparent in reference to the success of the Gospel among the people. We are rejoiced to find this independent testimony so freely offered to our treatment of the heathen empire, because in some quarters here it is the tendency to depreciate our management of that glorious gift of God to His people Israel, and to undervalue its importance to us in a secular point of view.

India is God's gift to us His heritage, and as one who has long lived and laboured in the midst of the heathen in an official capacity, we are always prepared to maintain that the British Government has been a blessing to the land—both temporal and spiritual—and that our pessimists are wrong in saying that the Eastern Empire is a loss and dead weight to the Home Government, while our rule over the Indian nations has brought on them curses only and no blessing. The Rev. H. J. Sykes, of Oldham, at any rate thinks differently. Let the readers of the BANNER ponder over his words, and repeat them far and wide. They are true to our own knowledge, and we are glad to be able to publish that conviction to the world's end in the pages of the BANNER. Our report is taken from the Oldham Standard, of Sept. 27, 1879:—

LECTURE ON INDIA.—A lecture was delivered on Thursday night in the Wesleyan Chapel, St. Domingo-street, by the Rev. H. J. Sykes, Wesleyan minister, Oldham, formerly a missionary in India; subject: "India, How we got it, How we have used it, What is its present relation to Christian England?" Mr. T. Broome presided. The lecture was delivered in connection with the St. Domingo-street Young Men's Mutual Improvement Association. The lecturer said India was in his opinion the brightest gem in the British Crown. He believed that as sure as God gave Canaan to Israel, had He given that great Empire to Great Britain. He was there to state his conviction that our rule in India is and has been an absolute blessing. One blot remained on it, the terrible opium blot, a question far more terrible than the drink question of England, because in India the opium traffic was in the hands of the Government, which got some millions of revenue from it. We had accomplished the unification of India. As the natives of that country said, we had brought India "under one umbrella," and there was now no fear of anarchy or foreign invasion. We had also given her security to life and property, the blessings of an advanced civilisation, equal-handed justice, our laws, our liberties; we had made highways, and done much in the matter of canals and irrigation, had made railways on a grand scale, and had given India blessings of an intellectual character.

Digitized by Google

Last year there were more converts to Christianity in India than in all other mission fields put together. In one place, where, as the result of thirty years there were thirty converts, last year 8,000 were baptized, and in another place 15,000 were baptized. India he regarded as the battle-field of the Church. Let India be won to Christ, and Asia would be at the feet of the Church. The proceedings terminated with the usual votes of thanks.

Do our readers note Mr. Sykes' blind witnessing to our Israelite origin? He said—

1. As God gave Canaan to Israel, so had He given that great Empire—India—to Great Britain. But this is our view of Psa. ii. 8, as modified by Rev. ii. 26, 27.

2. He said British rule in India has been an absolute blessing. But so God said Israel's should be, where once they had been a curse (Zech. viii. 13; Isa. xxvii. 6).

3. That last year India produced more converts to Christ than all other mission lands put together. But this seems a fulfilment of Psa. ii. 10—13.

4. That India converted, Asia would be at the feet of the Church (which is Israel). This illustrates our doctrine of the Gates. For India would thus be the great Gate by which Christ would subdue Asia to Himself through Israel, HIS GLORY (Isa. xlvi. 13).

MR. R. A. PROCTOR AND GREAT PYRAMID CHRONOLOGY.

BY WILLIAM ROWBOTTOM.

(Continued from page 465).

PART II.

BUT to return to the amended reading of Pyramid dates and the system of chronology which results therefrom. It will at once be admitted that a chronology fixed at such certain epochs as the Flood, and the births of Abraham, Moses, and Christ, possesses great claims to credence, on the strength of agreement with the Scriptures only; and that it may be relied upon with absolute certainty, if proved to be also in accord with authentic profane history. The testimony of this last is not, however, obtainable for the earlier epochs, and we have therefore to rely on confirmations important in proportion to the authority of the sources from which they are derived.

The unity of the system limits the margin of possible error to a fractional part of a year, though this may occasionally be sufficient to change the name of a year. Thus, as the Deluge began towards the close of one year, and terminated early in the year following, the date of the Flood might be variously stated as B.C. 2528, and B.C. 2527, and could only be correctly called the year B.C. 2528-27. Again, the preparations for the Exodus occurred during the closing months of a year, but the event itself was to mark a new year, wherefore, since the judgments upon Egypt occurred in the year B.C. 1462, the right date of the Exodus itself would be the commencement of B.C. 1461. It is as well that this should be fully explained, as in "The Mystery of the Bible Dates Solved," as well as in earlier notes on the same subject which appeared in the BANNER, the Deluge date was given simply as B.C. 2528, and the Exodus date as B.C. 1462.

Further, in none of those earlier writings was any attempt made to fix a date for the creation of Adam, since any calculation of that date is necessarily dependent upon the Deluge date, and the genealogies of Gen. v. The sum total of those generations is generally taken as 1656 years, and this must be added to the Deluge date B.C. 2528. 2528 + 1656 = 4184 B.C. as the date for Adam. Now Dr. Hales in his great work gives the following dates as maintaining among the Jews—viz: Chinese Jews, B.C. 4079; Eastern Jews, B.C. 4220; and Western Jews, B.C. 4184. It is therefore evident that the ordinary reckoning of the generations of Gen. v. deducted from what is called the "secret" chronology of the Western Jews—for it is quite distinct from the vulgar Jewish reckoning—gives a Deluge date identical with the reading of Pyramid symbolism here maintained.

But readers who took note of the exact literal reading of the generations of Gen. xi. which increased the sum of those generations from 352 to 358 years, and was necessary to agree with the Pyramid interval of B.C. 2528 to B.C. 2170, will see that the same rule must be applied to the generations of Gen. v., and their sum total must therefore be increased to 1662 years, and the creation date raised to B.C. 4190. Now it has been urged that it is absurd to read the generations so literally, and that there exists no authority for so doing. Let objectors turn to "Josephus' Antiquities," book v., chap. 3, and they will read, "Solomon began to build the temple . . . . . after the Deluge one thousand four hundred and forty years; and from Adam, the first man who was created . . . . there had passed in all three thousand one hundred and two years." 3102—1440 = 1662, the interval from Adam to the Deluge, a reckoning fully justifying the exact reading of the generations in Gen. v. and xi. Moreover the whole reckoning above quoted from, taken in conjunction with that of Josephus in his "Wars of the Jews," book vi., chap. 10, gives a Creation date of B.C. 4174, a Deluge date of B.C. 2512, and the birth of Abram B.C. 2167.

The Creation date of B.C. 4190 is thus supported approximately by the reckonings of the Jews throughout the world, by one of the many reckonings to be found in the writings of Josephus, and among modern chronologists by Clinton, B.C. 4130; Sharpe (Samuel) B.C. 4121; "Palmoni," B.C. 4128, &c., &c., while the self-styled prophet Richard Brothers, who in 1794 propounded a chronology wonderfully correct from Abraham (B.C. 2171) downwards, strangely gives the Creation date as B.C. 4119, proving that he had no reliable source of information for that date, since he drops no less than 72 years in calculating the period upwards from Abraham to Adam, and his creation date must be amended to B.C. 4191, to be in harmony with his later dates.

Within the limits of a newspaper article, it is impossible to enter minutely into the details of the proofs which have rewarded recent investigation into this matter, and which must form the substance of another and more complete work on this subject. A few particulars may, however, serve to strengthen the convictions of some of the readers of the BANNER, and it is due to the courtesy of its able Editor that its pages should be the first to give publicity to what are really remarkable confirmations of Pyramid chronology as herein set forth. The following comparisons of dates ought to satisfy even Mr. Proctor that if Pyramid chronology does not agree with the received systems of dates, then so much the worse for the dates:—

		B.C.
GREAT PYRAMID DATE . . .	FOR ABRAHAM	2170.
Jackson's (1752)	„	2098.
Richard Brothers (1794) . . .	„	2171.
Josephus (according to Hales) . .	„	2153.
Josephus (Antiq. bk. v., c. 3, in conjunction with Wars bk. vi., c. 10.)	„	2167.
Principal Playfair	„	2060.
Rev. Samuel Sharpe (Orientalist) .	„	2173.
"Palmoni"	„	2066.
GREAT PYRAMID DATE FOR ENTRY OF JACOB INTO EGYPT.		1880.
Richard Brothers		1881.
Rev. Samuel Sharpe		1883.
GREAT PYRAMID DATE FOR EXODUS . . .		1461.
Sir Gardner Wilkinson (earlier reckoning) . . .		1460.
J. W. Bosanquet (earlier writings)		1461.
„ (later writings)		1468.
Rev. Samuel Sharpe		1453.
D. W. Nash (see "Pharaoh of the Exodus") circa. .		1445.

Digitized by Google

	B.C.
GREAT PYRAMID DATE FOR FOUNDATION OF TEMPLE,	982.
J. W. Bosanquet (earlier writings)	982.
" (later writings)	989.
Rev. D. H. Haigh	997.
Professor H. Brandes	966.
Ernst Bunsen and Sayce	971.
Lepsius	989.
"Palmoni"	970.
Richard Brothers	971.
Rev. Samuel Sharpe	973.
Kennedy	983.
GREAT PYRAMID DATE FOR DESTRUCTION OF TEMPLE.	555.
Josephus (reckoning in Antiq. bk. x., c. 8, with Deluge date at B.C. 2512)	555.
Richard Brothers	553.
"Palmoni"	555.
J. W. Bosanquet (earlier writings)	555.
" (later writings)	563.

Alfreton, October 11th, 1879.

P.S.—The writer will be glad to hear of any other confirmations of this reckoning which may come under the notice of readers.

Correspondence.

GALATIANS III. 16.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

SIR,—I believe that the following extract from Farrar's "Life and Works of St. Paul," vol. i., p. 52, may throw some light on the interpretation of Gal. iii. 16. This extract refers to St. Paul's style and mode of quoting Scripture. "A similar, but more remarkable instance of this apparent subordination of the historic context in the illustrative application of prophetic words is found in 1 Cor. xiv. 21" (and so on in reference to Isa. xxviii. 11). And now comes the important quotation (vol. i., p. 52): "One more instance, and that the most remarkable of all, will enable us better to understand a peculiarity which was the natural result of years of teaching. In Gal. iii. 16, he says, 'Now, the promises were spoken to Abraham and to his seed. He saith not, and to seeds, as applying to many, but, as applying to one, and to thy seed—who is Christ.' Certainly at first sight we should say that an argument of immense importance was here founded on the use of the Hebrew word zerâ in the singular, and its representative σπέρμα of the LXX; and that the inference which St. Paul deduces depends solely on the fact that the plural, zerâim (σπέρματα), is not used; and that, therefore, the promise of Gen. xiii. 15, pointed from the first to a special fulfilment in ONE of Abraham's descendants. This primâ facia view must, however, be erroneous, because it is inconceivable that St. Paul—a good Hebraist, and a master of Hellenistic Greek—was unaware that the plural zerâim, as in 1 Sam. viii. 15; Dan. i. 12, and the title of the Talmudic treatise, could not by any possibility have been used in the original promise, because it could only mean 'various kinds of grain,' exactly in the sense in which he himself uses spermata in 1 Cor. xv. 38, and that the Greek spermata, in the sense of 'offspring,' would be nothing less than an impossible barbarism. The argument, therefore, if it be an argument at all, and not what the Rabbis call a sod, or 'mystery,' does not, and can not, turn, as has been so unhesitatingly assumed, on the fact that that sperma is a singular noun, but on the fact that it is a collective noun, and was deliberately used instead of 'sons,' or 'children;'* and St. Paul declares that this collective term was meant from the first to apply to Christ, as elsewhere he applies it spiritually to the servants of Christ. In the interpretation, then, of this word, St. Paul reads between the lines of the original, and is enabled to see in it deep meanings, which are the true, but not the primary ones. He does not say at once that the promises to Abraham found in Christ—as in the purpose of God it had always been intended that they should find in Christ†—these highest and truest fulfilments; but, in a manner belonging peculiarly to the Jewish style of exegesis, he illustrates this high truth by the use of a collective noun in which he believes it to have been mystically foreshadowed." ALPHA.

* See Lightfoot, ad loc, page 139.

† The purely illustrative character of the reference seems to be clear from the different, yet no less spiritualised, sense given to the text in Rom. iv. 13, 16, 18, ix. 8; Gal. iii. 28, 29.

THE HEAD AND NOT THE TAIL, ABOVE ONLY AND NOT BENEATH, IN THE MATTER OF CAPITAL.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—The following paragraph taken from Iron, of October 24, and quoted by that journal as an extract from a letter to the Times, of Philadelphia, by Judge Kelly, says .—

"England is the world's creditor. Every nation is in debt to her, and there is no field for the investment of her accumulated capital, as is shown by the fact that, though money may be borrowed in London at less than one per cent. per annum, the Bank now holds more gold than it ever did before. Her losses will be incalculable, but not ruinous, as are those which debtor nations are suffering from the same world-wide cause. As creditor she loses by the failure of individuals, corporations, and States, the world over. But while ruin overtakes them, what happens to her is but a reduction of surplus capital, so relatively slight, as to leave her the means with which to buy in at her own price the assets of her debtors and to hold them until the repeal of unwholesome laws shall restore the value they possessed before the volume of the world's metallic money was arbitrarily reduced."

This is the testimony of another blind witness to our Identity and to England's being "the head and not the tail" among the nations of the earth. Thinking that this may interest some of your readers should you be able to find room for it in the BANNER,

I am, dear sir, Yours very truly,

Cornwall-buildings, 35, Queen Victoria-street, PETER SIBREE.
London, E.C., Oct. 30, 1879.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—I find in many places I visit to lecture, and in several newspapers forwarded me by friends from various parts of the country, that an opinion prevails that the "Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association" and another Society with a somewhat similar name, are identical in their aims and objects. Will you, therefore, permit me to say through your columns, to the public in general, that the Association which I have the honour to represent is a religious organisation, and that its work is of a missionary character, while the Society with which we are at times confounded is a "Commercial Limited Liability Speculation," and as such we can have neither connection nor sympathy with its operations? By kindly inserting this in an early issue of your paper you will oblige

Yours faithfully,

JAMES BILLINGTON, Hon. Sec.

Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association Office,
334, Strand, W.C.

NOTE.—As chairman of the committee of the above Association we ask our readers to note the change of address, the office being now located at 334, Strand, W.C., also that the letter itself has our entire sympathy and approval.—ED.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

SIR,—In reference to the short article by J. T. Gott, "The Lintel and the Two Side Posts," it is known to many of the learned that the "winged globe" referred to was the Egyptian representation of the deity—the Egyptian deity. This ought to be made generally known, for without this key the story of the Passover loses half its force. An allusion to, or application of, this figure is made by the prophet, "To you who fear My name shall the Sun of Righteousness arise, with healing in His wings."

The material globe which we call the sun, being the source to us of all physical light and heat, is a fit emblem of the Deity, the source of spiritual light; and it should be borne in mind that the Great Pyramid was so placed by its designer that twice a year, viewed from the North side, the sun rested for a short time on its apex, like a ball of fire in the clear atmosphere of that climate on a gigantic altar (see verse in Isaiah).

Doubtless, originally, the Creator was seen through the created—God through the luminous globe that He had made; but the truth was gradually obscured to the popular mind, and the worship of the creature substituted for that of the Creator; and hence, partially, no doubt, the stern lesson given to the whole Egyptian people in the death of their first-born. Yours faithfully,

A. S.

Orient-house, Atlingworth-street, Brighton,
Oct. 1, 1879.

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements
(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O.O payable at Ludgate-circus.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed :—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

BIRTH.

HULL.—November 18, at Albany-street, the Wife of ARHTUR THOMPSON, Corn Merchant, of a Son.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.
PRESIDENT: VISCOUNT FOLKESTONE, M.P.

LOST ISRAEL FOUND IN THE BRITISH NATION.

A LECTURE under the auspices of above Association will (D.V.) be delivered on Monday, December 1st, 1879, in the ASSEMBLY ROOMS, Church-street, STOKE NEWINGTON, by
DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, Esq., J.P.
Chair to be taken at 8 o'clock by COLONEL GAWLER, Keeper Crown Jewels, Tower of London.
Admission free. Collection at close of the Lecture for Association funds.

BRISTOL AND CLIFTON ISRAEL'S IDENTIFICATION ASSOCIATION.
At the Meeting at the VICTORIA ROOMS, CLIFTON, on Friday, November 28th, the Address by THE CHAIRMAN will be on THE BRITISH CONSTITUTION, proving that it is derived from the Bible, and that the Crown, Lords, and Commons, being God's Gifts to Israel in Moses' Days, are now strong proofs of Our Identity, as promised in Isaiah i. 26.

LIVERPOOL.
A GENERAL MEETING to consider the advisability of forming a BRANCH of the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association, will be held in ST. JAMES'S HALL, TOXTETH PARK, on Thursday, November 27, 1879, at 8 p.m. All interested in the spread of the knowledge of the Identity are specially requested to attend.

NEW PAMPHLETS.

Now Ready. NEW LEAFLET of four pages. Price 2s. per hundred.

HISTORICAL AND PROPHETICAL DISTINCTIONS BETWEEN THE TWO HOUSES OF ISRAEL AND JUDAH.
Selected and Arranged by W. S. CAVILL.

Also by the same Author,

THE PROMISES TO ABRAHAM: with SELECT REFERENCES AND EXPLANATORY NOTES. To which is added an Article entitled, ISRAEL AMONG THE GENTILES.
Price Sixpence, or free by post, Sevenpence.
The aim of this Pamphlet is to present the Scriptural Argument in a new and concise form, both for examination and reference.
May be had of the Author, Norton Woodside, near Sheffield; or of the Publisher, Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.; and of all Booksellers.

Price Threepence.
THE ANGLO-ISRAELITES. The full Text of Canon Titcomb's Letter Authenticated. Ham's Descendants, especially Ephraim and Manasseh. By the Rev. J. B. CLIFFORD, M.A., Vicar of St. Matthew's, Kingsdown, Bristol.

Also by the same Author, price 4d.
THE ANGLO-SAXONS AND THE ISRAELITES.
London: Hamilton, Adams, & Co., 32, Paternoster-row; Bristol: J. E. Chilcott, 26, Clare-street.

THE MIDNIGHT CRY; or, WORDS OF SOLEMN WARNING.
Second edition, price 1d.; post free 1½d.; for distribution, 6s. per 100. W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

NEW BOOKS.

NEW WORK BY DR. WILD.
NOW READY, price 3s., post free 3s. 4d. Handsome cloth, gilt, printed on toned paper and illustrated.

THE LOST TEN TRIBES, AND 1882.
BY THE
REV. DR. JOSEPH WILD,
Of Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, N.Y.
Printed and published by
ROBERT BANKS, RACQUET COURT, FLEET ST., LONDON, E.C.
And may be had, by ordering, of any Bookseller.

PHILO-ISRAEL (in the BANNER) says:—"We have much pleasure in directing attention to this handsome Identity volume. It contains twenty discourses of the well-known American divine, Dr. Joseph Wild, of Brooklyn, N.Y. We are glad to find from these discourses that Dr. Wild is quite one with us on this side the water with most, though not all, the views we entertain on our great and glorious subject. . . . We promise our readers that if they procure this work, and will peruse it, they will find 'our Identity' discussed in a clear, novel, racy, and 'American' point of view, which is sure to interest, sure to be instructive, and may lead the thoughtless and inquiring to pursue the investigation till possibly conviction may be the result."

EXTRACT FROM PREFACE:—
The main idea I wish to convey in this book, is that God is conducting His Providence through His ancient chosen people, Israel, whom I believe are found in the Saxon race. And His throne on earth, through which flow the purposes of Providence, is David's throne, which I believe to be at present the English throne. Queen Victoria (and God bless her) I believe to be of David's seed. The United States fulfils the rôle of the Tribe of Manasseh. Therefore, to understand the prophecies, Providence, and the present movements of nations, as well as the future lot and destiny of each, we must read the Scriptures in this light. God has made the children of Israel and throne of David His executive, in time, on earth. They are His executive for civilisation, evangelisation, order, and conquest. Through them God will conquer the world to an universal peace. As Moses was to God, so is Israel. Moses being a Divine executor, was to the people a god—so is Israel to all mankind. Spiritual Israel will come through literal Israel.
For Contents see BANNER for October 1st.

HORÆ PROPHETICÆ: WHAT DOES THE BIBLE TEACH ABOUT GREAT BRITAIN? Establishing the Identity of the Anglo-Saxon Race with the House of Ephraim.
BY REV. H. MARRIOTT, M.A.
Price 3s. in paper, 4s. in cloth boards.
W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.
T. E. Chilcott, Bristol.

WORKS BY PHILO-ISRAEL.
Price 2d., post free 2½d.
THE HISTORICAL, ETHNIC, AND PHILOLOGICAL ARGUMENTS in PROOF of BRITISH IDENTITY with the TEN LOST TRIBES OF ISRAEL, clearly and simply stated.
BY PHILO-ISRAEL.
CONTENTS:—Introduction—The Celts—Professor Rawlinson's Testimony—The Cymry—The Cimmerii—The Gimiri and Khumri—The Testimony of the Nimroud Obelisk—The Scythians—The Anglo-Saxons—Sharon Turner's Testimony—The Jutes and Angles—The Danes and the Normans—General Conclusions—Philology—The Welsh Language—The Rev. Canon Lysons' Testimony—Idiomatic Identity Between Hebrew and English—Tyndal's Testimony—The Tribe of Dan—The Irish Celts—Are the Continental Nations Israelites?—Conclusions—Appendix.
Price 4d., post free 5d.
AN ELEMENTARY DIGEST or SKETCH OF THE CHIEF FACTS and TEACHINGS of the GREAT PYRAMID of EGYPT; adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific. By PHILO-ISRAEL; together with Original Papers by the following leading Pyramidists, republished mostly from the BANNER OF ISRAEL (by kind permission of the proprietor)—viz., Professor Piazzi Smyth, the Rev. J. W. Hickson, M.A., Charles Horner, Esq., and Major H. A. Tracey, R.A. Being a pamphlet by five authors (a Pyramid number).

READ
ISRAEL'S HOPE AND DESTINY. A New Identity Journal, published monthly. Price 1d. No. 1 (now ready) contains an Original Article on "The Merchants of Tarshish and Russia." By Philo-Israel.
London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row; Liverpool: J. Catterall, 3, Mill-street; and all Booksellers. Order early.

NEW BOOKS.

A NEW TALE OF GREAT INTEREST FOR YOUNG PEOPLE ON THE IDENTITY OF LOST ISRAEL.
Now ready, price 2s. 6d., post free 2s. 9d. Bound in handsome cloth, gilt, bevelled boards, gilt edges, and beautifully printed on toned paper.

THE SISTERS OF HARROWDALE RECTORY.
BY
MRS. M. A. SEARSON,
ILLUSTRATED WITH
BEAUTIFUL DOUBLE-PAGE FRONTISPIECE.
Printed and Published by
ROBERT BANKS, RACQUET COURT, FLEET ST. LONDON, E.C.
And may be had, by ordering, of any Bookseller.

CONTENTS:—

CHAPTER I.
Harrowdale Rectory. The Rector's Family. God's Own Architect. An English Parsonage. The Aged Grandmother. Hospitality to Strangers. Frances Farnwood. Restoration to the Promised Land. Discussion on "Our Identity."

CHAPTER II.
A Quiet Controversy. A God-given Dream. Guardian Angels. A Visit to Paradise. What Paradise is Like. The Occupation of Angels. Michael the Archangel. Before the Throne of God. Israel My Heritage. The Wondrous Love of Christ. Unfolding of Prophecy Concerning Israel. A Visit to Souls in Prison. The Wonders of God's Perfect Will. Hopeless Condition of Lost Souls.

CHAPTER III.
Mother's Dream. Old Mother Davis. The Village of Harrowdale Described. William Edwards the Miner. Working Men's Homes. The Miner and the Identification of Lost Israel. The Chariot Wheels of Israel. Discouragements Overcome. A Visit to Mrs. Bertram. Her Daily Life. Her Belief in the English being Lost Israel. The Sisters' Visit to Mrs. Bertram and Mother Davis. Dinner With Mother Davis. Mother Davis and the Lost Ten Tribes. God Faithful to His Promises. The Coming of Our Lord.

CHAPTER IV.
Visit of Aunt Winslow and Cousin Calvin to the Rectory. A Family Tea-party. An Anglo-Israel Meeting. Calvin and His Uncle. The Return to Palestine. Israel or Judah—Which? What the Bible Reveals. The Wanderings of Our Israelite Ancestry. The Second Coming of Christ. A Sunday Evening Identity Class. The Bible Appealed to.

CHAPTER V.
The Neighbouring Clergymen Visit the Rectory. A Mutual Understanding. Marion's Opinion of Cousin Calvin. Calvin's Opinion of His Cousin. A Sketch of Rural Life. Miss Stanmore. Matrimonial Mistakes. Marion's Firm Belief in Providence. Calvin's Engagement to Miss Stanmore. Remarks on Unequal Marriages. The Calm after a Storm. A Parable. A Pledge of Love. The Parable Explained.

CHAPTER VI.
Calvin's Belief in our Identity. Captain Johnstone Introduced. Captain Johnstone and Miss Stanmore. An Open Avowal. Calvin Released from His Engagement. The Fever-Stricken Family. Calvin's Second Visit to Harrowdale. Sympathy and Help. A Visit t the Sick Chamber.

CHAPTER VII.
Illness of the Rector's Wife. Poor Susan. Mrs. Wildman's Trust in Her Saviour. "Going Home" in the Glorious Sunshine. The Heavenly Jerusalem. The Mother's Last Charge. Calvin and Marion. Good-bye.

This book will be read with interest by both young and old, and found well suited for a BIRTHDAY GIFT, SUNDAY SCHOOL REWARD, OR PRESENT.

Price 6d., post free 7d. New work on the Identity. Dedicated to all faithful ministers of Christ.
ISRAEL! AN EARNEST APPEAL FROM THE NEW TO THE PULPIT IN FAVOUR OF OUR IDENTITY WITH GOD'S ELECT PEOPLE, ISRAEL; Being a Letter from JOHN G. SHAW to his Pastor, Rev. Eustace R. Conder, of Leeds, with an Introduction and Notes; to be followed by a Review of Mr Conder's Papers on the Lost Tribes.
By the same Author.
"BRITAIN (OR ISRAEL)," with Map. Price 8d., post free 9d.
"CHRONOLOGICAL CHART." Price 3d., post free 3½d.
"GOD'S LOVE FOR ISRAEL." Price 1d., 3 copies sent post free for 3½d.
London: ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW, WEDNESDAY, NOV. 26, 1879. [All Rights Reserved.]

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. III. No. 153. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 3, 1879. [DOUBLE NUMBER, TWOPENCE.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
The Political Aspects of Our Identity.—"The British Constitution."—Part I.	477
The British the Head and Not the Tail, Above Only and Not Beneath in the Matter of Railways	479
Prince Leopold on the "Magna Virum Mater"	480
The Late John Wilson's View of "The Gate" as Contrasted with Lord Salisbury's	480
Preparations for the Coming Woe	481
Jewish Testimony as to the "Lost" Condition of Israel	481
Israel Keepeth Sabbath	482
Narrative of the Proceedings of the Great Council of Jews Assembled at Ageda, in 1650.—By Samuel Brett, There Present.—By Thomas Bales	483
Justice for Our Brethren the Jews; and Lord Salisbury on the Coming "Re-Arrangement of Europe"	484
Doom of the House of Napoleon	485
British "Science and Art Education" as "the Head and Not the Tail, Above Only and Not Beneath" Among the Gentiles	486
Dr. Wylie Gives Blind Evidence to "Our Identity"	487
"Imperium et Libertas"	487
The Identity in the United States	488
"The Stars in Their Courses Fought Against Sisera" (Judges v. 20)	488
The Political Effect of the Identity Described by the Mussulman Editor of a Newspaper in Bombay	489
Progress in Lincoln	489
John Butterworth on Hosea xiv. 8	490
Fresh Evidence of a Soul Saved by Identity Knowledge	490
The Exeter Anglo-Israel Association at Work	490
Review	490
Correspondence	491

THE POLITICAL ASPECTS OF OUR IDENTITY.

"THE BRITISH CONSTITUTION."—A SIGN.

PART I.

OUR friends, at times, have not been slow to warn us that we tread on dangerous ground when we touch on politics, or venture on the subject of the proper policy of the British Empire at home and abroad, viewed from the standpoint of our Identity with Israel. We are now going to enter on this topic; but shall speak of principles and measures, not men or names. We thus hope to avoid offence, and trust, on the contrary, to indicate some points opening up new evidences of our Hebrew descent, hitherto unsuspected and quite untouched.

Men say that our Identity has nothing to do with politics. Has it not? Had not Israel's history, as given us in God's Word, its political aspect throughout? Did not the Lord Himself arrange every step of this people's career? Who gave His chosen ones their tribal formation? their laws? their polity? their judges? their kings? their dual kingdoms? their foreign policy? their wars? and treaties? Surely our readers know that God's own hand, working by the prophets, the seers, the judges, the lawgivers, and kings, He sent them, arranged all the national affairs of Israel, superintended all their international and internal relations, and that He was indeed "a Father to Israel, and looked on them as His first-born" (Exod. iv. 22; Jer. xxxi. 9).

We maintain, therefore, that our origin and Identity, so far from divorcing us from politics, must force us to regard Israel's political condition in her latter-day British aspect as one especially under God's own supervision—a subject therefore for our most earnest, most prayerful, inquiry and investigation.

Our readers recollect that the Lord gave us a promise in Isa. i. 26, to which allusion was made some time since by L. P.; but which has not been suspected to be "fulfilled prophecy." We hold it to be such. The promise was, "And I will restore thy judges as at the first, and thy counsellors as at the beginning. AFTERWARD thou shalt be called the city of righteousness—the faithful city." That is, after the grant to Israel of her ancient polity—God-sanctioned, God-granted at the very first—then will the outpouring take place, then will the city Church of British-Israel be the righteous, the believing "city Church," the "Christian nation" (Hos. i. 10). The chapter has reference to Israel of the Ten Tribes, to the destruction of God's enemies in the Gentile "earth" (Isa. i. 28, 29), and to "the redemption" with "judgment" of Israel-Zion, and to them "that return of her" (margin) "with righteousness" (verse 27).

The restoration of "the judges" of Israel and "of her counsellors," "as at the beginning," point to the early days when Israel's nationality was formed. What was her political constitution then? First, she had "a King"—Jehovah was her King, her Judge. 1 Sam. viii. 5, 7, x. 19, 24, xii. 12; Psa. ii. 6, xxiv. 8, xlvii. 6; Ezek. xxi. 27; John i. 49, xviii. 37; Psa. vii. 11, teach us that. The people rejected God their King* "that He should not reign over them," and demanded an earthly Sovereign as JUDGE, who in point of fact sat on "Jehovah's throne" at last (1 Chron. xxix. 23). Israel of old had therefore a royal Head, a King, in the beginning. We need not say we British answer accurately to that part of the Divinely-appointed Constitution. We have the crown, and its wearer is a scion of the House of David, seated on Jehovah's throne; but in ancient days (Moses' time) the chief servant, or Prime Minister of the King, was Moses. The Lord called him "His servant," and he was "the chief" (Num. xii. 7, 8; Psa. cv. 26), made of God "a god to Pharaoh" (Exod. vii. 1). Our Constitution accordingly demands, and has, its "Prime Minister," the chief servant of the Lord's representative, the Crown. Joshua, Caleb, and others were Moses' servants and fellow-helpers, his Cabinet (Num. xi. 28).

* It may be said that Deut. xxxiii. 5 shows that Moses was "King in Jeshurun" during his days, not God. But Gen. xxxvi. 31 and 1 Samuel xii. 12 contradict that. The Lord Jehovah was always "King of Israel" as well as of Judah; and Moses and other earthly rulers were but His viceroys, servants, or prime ministers. Moses did not "reign." He was a "law-giver," acting under God's visible rule. "The LORD their GOD was their KING."

Digitized by Google

But the estates of this realm are three—the Crown, the Lords, and the Commons. This triad of Powers has been gradually under formation here, and it is not quite perfect yet. The question is, Were these three represented in God's Government given to His people under Moses? and do we, and we only, of all nations answer as to them all, at the present day? We do, and no other nations answer as do we; not one. Where do we find in God's record what can be a parallel to the representative House of Legislature of our day, "the House of Commons?" Let the reader open God's Word at Exod. xviii., and beginning at the first verse, read carefully through to the end. He will see that Jethro, Moses' father-in-law, gave Moses advice, which, being God-sanctioned (verses 23, 24), ended in the calling together of a representative body out of all the people of Israel (chosen by the people themselves, too!—Deut. i. 13, 14, 15; Josephus's Antiq. iii. 4), "heads over the people, rulers of thousands, rulers of hundreds, rulers of fifties, and rulers of tens" (or tythings), these "JUDGED the people at all seasons, every small matter they JUDGED, and they bore the burden with Moses" of the people's legislature — a function exactly parallel (if in embryo) with what the British House of Commons accepts as its constitutional function to-day. Dr. Hales, in his comment on this passage says that "Lord Bacon thinks in his essay on 'English Government' that Alfred the Great took from hence" (i.e., from this passage of God's Word) "his idea of the old Saxon constitution of sheriffs in counties, hundredors or centgraves in hundreds, and deciners in decennaries or tithings, who were a sort of justices of peace in their respective divisions." "Our Parliamentary House of Commons," says Beeton, "is traced back to the free councils of our Saxon ancestors, which existed under the names of michel-synoth or great council, michel-gemote or great meeting, and wittena-gemote or assembly of "wise men." Sharon Turner considers the Anglo-Saxon wittena-gemote "was identical with our present Parliament in the orders and persons that compose it. God's Word, as we may see, prescribed that this representative council of thousands, hundreds, fifties, and tens should be composed of men who were "able," "God-fearing" persons, "men of truth," "who hated covetousness," to be taken "ont of the people." These in every respect answer to a modern British Parliament, whose individual elements should be "righteous." We have thus the Crown, the Prime Minister, and Cabinet, also the House of Commons, as promised, and all of them described in Scripture as "JUDGES."

What, then, of the House of Lords? Is that shown to be an institution God gave Moses, and has now granted to us "as at the beginning"—one which, as we have it now, is but a fulfilment of Isa. i. 26? Let a reference to Numbers xi. 1—30 tell us. It is an affecting chapter, one little read; but well worth deeply searching into. The burden of the people was too heavy for Moses. The murmuring, complaining, lusting people of Israel would have meat. God was angry, "Moses was also displeased" (verse 10). The meekest of men (Num. xii. 3) appealed to God to take his life, so great was the burden he, as God's Prime Minister, had to bear. God allowed the plea, and Himself found His servant a remedy, an alleviation, by giving him what was, we believe, the embryo of the present House of Lords to stand between the Crown and the Commons, to relieve the Prime Minister of his great and intolerable burden. God bade him thus: "Gather unto me seventy men of the elders of Israel, whom thou knowest to be the elders of the people." Here was the selection of the first peerage, the "earls," or "ealdormen," or "elders," the very names the Saxon Heptarchy gave to the nobles generally, in contradistinction to the ceorls or "freemen, the great middle class of the Anglo-Saxon nation" (Beeton p. 673). But the "elders" or "ealdormen" were the very class God specially directed Moses to gather to Him, being "officers over the people" whom He baptized with Moses' spirit and constituted them a great council (probably hereditary judging from the facts) to help the Prime Minister—His servant Moses—"to bear the burden with him of the people," that he bear it "not himself alone" (verse 17). This was the selection of the very first House of Lords, the great upper judicial council of the Israelite nation, which appearing again in the Sanhedrim of our Lord's days, re-appeared in the time of the Heptarchy under the original name of "ealdormen" or elders. In the time of King John, A.D. 1215, the two Houses seem to have been recognised as distinct, and they sat separately at some subsequent date which seems uncertain. The three estates of the Israelite polity, the Crown, the earls, or elders, and the Commons, with the minister of the Lord Jehovah, were constituted as it were by letters-patent Divine, and we find that in these our days, since Israel was settled in these "isles of the West," "our judges, as at the first," and "our counsellors, as at the beginning," have been very gradually added to us, as promised; till now, we may say that "at the end of the days," the Lord has faithfully fulfilled His word, and we have all that He said He would give us. The machinery still wants, it is true, some "reforms," some repairs, a fuller representation of the "congregation" of Israel. The human constitution also requires some very needful improvement to constitute both the representative and upper Houses "able," "God-fearing," "truthful" men, who "hate covetousness," fit representatives, in short, of a truly "righteous" nation, such as Israel of the Ten Tribes is soon to be.

Let us now look around. Is there another nation extant in God's earth to whom the Lord has granted "judges as at Israel's first, and counsellors as at her beginning?" Has America such a constitution? She has no king. Or France? She has none either. Or Germany? Hers is a kaiser, not a king, and her upper house is chosen from the States for each session. It is not a house of ealdormen or elders at all. Or Austria? The same remark applies. Or Russia? She has no parliament at all. Or Spain, and Portugal? Their Constitutions are not like British Israel's, and their kings are not of the House of David, nor their thrones Jehovah's. Their cortez or upper houses are chiefly only appointed for life. Look where we will, the Crown, the Lords, and the Commons of the British Empire are not repeated anywhere in Europe or elsewhere! and we may, therefore, discover in the unique facts of this case, as we now reveal them, that there is a new and splendid Identity herein opened to us, which politically proves our Hebrew origin in a startling way, showing that as God promised in Isa. i. 26 to Israel, so He has performed His promise to us British literally, to the very jot, to the very tittle. No other nation on the earth has any such proof to adduce that He has so regarded them. We, and we alone, English, Scots, Welsh, and Irish, respond by facts to the prophecy, and thus we are standing proofs that we, and we alone, are Israel. Much wants altering, mending, reforming in our Constitution no doubt. God will do that for us, as He hath promised. He has been engaged on the task since great Alfred's days, and the work will not be done till the Divine King reigns again on the throne of David in Jerusalem, as He hath appointed. Then the elders of Israel, of the House of Lords, will be men on whom God's Spirit again will manifestly rest, then will the Commons House of Parliament be filled with "able men, such as fear God, men of truth, hating covetousness," the foremost men, in short, of the foremost, because most righteous, nation on the earth.

(To be continued.)

ONE of the best tributes to the memory of the late Princess Alice is given unconsciously by a South German writer, when, after saying how much good the Princess had done them, he added, "Although through her influence, after the accession of the present Grand Duke to the throne, the peculiarly English Sunday was introduced into our Court-life, and the Sunday representations of the opera ceased in Darmstadt."—Note to "A Peerless Princess," by Miss Marsh.—L. P

Digitized by Google

THE BRITISH THE HEAD AND NOT THE TAIL, ABOVE ONLY AND NOT BENEATH IN THE MATTER OF RAILWAYS.

A FRIEND, who says he is a constant reader of the BANNER, sends us from Halifax, Yorkshire, an extract from the Leeds Mercury, of Nov. 9, 1879, which is exactly to the point, in regard to our British railways. Our blind witness is the very man we want to call into the witness-box—a German railway manager. By his testimony our British-Israelite railways excel those of the whole Gentile world, "both as to the convenience of passengers and in regard to the management of traffic." We beg to thank W. S. for sending us this interesting paper, which we now lay before our readers as a new and splendid testimony that Deut. xxviii. 13 is true in another feature of our nation's character, regarding which those of us who have never travelled had always a suspicion "that they manage these things better abroad." Our article is headed—

"ENGLISH RAILWAYS FROM A GERMAN POINT OF VIEW.

"(From the 'Railway News.')

"A very striking little work on English railways, their traffic and general management, based on personal inspection, was recently published in Germany. It is from the pen of a well-known writer, Herr Wehrmann, manager of the railway between Berlin and Dresden, and seems to have attracted great attention all over the continent. A full translation of the book, made by Messrs. A. Huberti and G. Mans, engineers of the Belgian State Railways, is published by Hachette, of Paris, besides which a long notice of it, by M. Crété, of the Northern of France, appears in one of the last numbers of the Revue Générale des Chemins de Fer, an ably conducted French monthly, devoted entirely to railway matters. Under these circumstances it may not be out of place to give a summary of Herr Wehrmann's book in the Railway News. It must always be of interest to know what 'neighbours think of us.' All the more so, of course, if our neighbours are good judges of what they see and observe. This clearly was the case with the manager of the Berlin-Dresden Railway on his tour of inspection in England.

"The first impression made upon Herr Wehrmann was the greatness of our traffic, together with the systematic regularity with which it is conducted. He was particularly struck with the arrangements made for conveying the millions constantly moving about in London; with the trains running every few minutes on the Metropolitan, the District, the Chatham and Dover, the South London, and other lines, and crammed with human beings, moving quietly in and out at every station, the trains stopping not a second longer than is absolutely necessary. Contrasting this with the slowness and irregularity of most Continental railways, the tedious delays occurring everywhere, the crawling of the trains, our German critic thinks it a sight approaching the marvellous. M. Crété, in the Revue Générale, agrees with him in describing it as a 'spectacle grandiose,' the like of which is 'not to be met with in the whole world.' Perhaps those of our countrymen who grumble and threaten to 'write to the papers' when their train is five minutes late will not agree with the verdict. But it is undoubtedly true. Nobody who has not had experience of foreign railways can sufficiently admire the certainly wonderful management of our own lines. But then, alas! as we too well know, familiarity breeds contempt.

"The second point which struck Herr Wehrmann was what he calls 'the sumptuous design and arrangement' of our great railway stations, not only in London, but in the chief towns of the kingdom, such as Manchester, Birmingham, Liverpool, Edinburgh, and Glasgow. He seems to thinks the 'luxury' almost too great, but admits that it is exceedingly pleasant. Where in Europe, or, indeed, in the world, are such stations to be found as Euston and St. Pancras, with their magnificent waiting-rooms, their vast bookstalls—'libraries' the critic calls them—their commodious booking-offices, open all day long, their lavatories and refreshment rooms, and last, not least, their broad and in many cases gigantic platforms, perfectly free to all comers and goers. If this is not quite true of all railway stations, some of them still shutting out persons not provided with tickets from their platforms, it is decidedly correct as regards most of them, particularly the two great metropolitan termini before named, those of the London and North-Western and the Midland Railway. One can well fancy the surprise of a Continental railway manager on paying a visit to Euston or St. Pancras. As is well known to travellers, the continental system consists in driving railway travellers, according to their respective classes, first, second, and third, into separate waiting-rooms, the doors issuing towards the platform being carefully locked. At the appointed time, often not more than a couple of minutes before the starting of the train, the bolts are withdrawn, and then begins the rush of the penned-up bipeds. But, like the imprisonment in the waiting-room, the further movement of the travellers to whom the privilege is allowed of going on a Continental railway is as carefully watched over as the maintenance of prisoners in gaol. Not all the carriages are unlocked together, but only in turn, and it is only when one has been completely packed that the next follows suit. It sometimes happens that individuals who think themselves specially clever attempt to get a little more breathing space by waiting till the mass of their fellow-travellers have been pushed into seats, trusting to the chance of the residue being assigned into a compartment not quite crammed. But this is a somewhat dangerous experiment. It is as likely as not that they may get no seats at all, or that the watchful officials, irate at such pranks being played upon them, order them back into the waiting-pens, to sit there in patience till the arrival of the next slow train. Such is the management on most, if not nearly all, Continental railways. One may well fancy, therefore, the surprise and delight of the German traveller on entering a train at Euston, St. Pancras, or may be Paddington. No human cattle pens, no crowding, no driving, but absolute liberty to all who wish to come and go. Parents placing their children into the carriages, affectionately bidding them farewell, with a scrutinising glance at their companions; friends offering a last hand-shaking, not leaving till the train absolutely moves on; and again, 'spectacle grandiose,' the sight of railway officials behaving, not as masters, but as courteous servants of the public. Where are such things to be found but in England, the paradise of railway travellers? It is curious to find that the manager of the Berlin-Dresden Railway has words of praise even for our much-abused refreshment rooms at stations. He found them charming; but then, perhaps he looked too deep into the eyes of the fair Hebes who ministered to his wants.

"Some of the most important remarks of Herr Wehrmann are upon the question of speed on our railways, not only as regards passengers, but in the carriage of goods. He expresses decided opinions that in regard to this we are in the van of the whole of Europe, and our example ought to be followed. His argument is that the first aim of all railway management should be that of the utmost speed consistent with safety, since this was the primary aim in the construction of iron high roads, and putting upon them trains propelled by steam. Had the locomotive not been able to draw carriages along at a greater speed than horses, even of much greater loads, we should never have had railways. What the author dwells upon, and very justly so, is, that to develop the trade and commerce of a country, together with the movement of the population, all the railways should have frequent fast trains; and this system is followed, he says, nowhere so well and so completely as in England. He gives some interesting facts as to the speed as well as frequency of goods no less than of passenger trains in connection with the working of the London and North-Western Railway. There start from the Camden goods station, he informs his readers, every night no less than 1,200 waggons, and the whole of this immense array are despatched between eight o'clock in the evening and four o'clock in the morning. The greater number of these trains, composed of from thirty to forty waggons each, proceed at great speed, those making the journey to Liverpool running at the rate of thirty miles an hour, or more than twice as fast as any continental goods trains. To make such speed possible, the trains are not heavily loaded, many of the waggons not carrying more than two or three tons' weight of goods. The tariff is higher, but not much, than in Germany; but, on the other hand, the immense advantage of prompt delivery is gained. 'Goods despatched from London at midnight are delivered at Liverpool the next morning, and may be placed on board the Atlantic steamers sailing before noon.' The English waggons, says Herr Wehrmann, are not so large as those used on the Continent; but this, again, he considers a great advantage. English railway managers do not wait for full loads, but look more, in the interest of their customers, to quick delivery of goods. On the Continent, the 1,200 waggons despatched every night by the London and North-Western Company, and speeding along at the rate of thirty miles an hour, would have been divided into four or five trains, despatched in as many days, and lumbering along at from eight to ten miles an hour, shunted at almost every station. It is satisfactory to learn, from so good an authority as the manager of the Berlin-Dresden Railway, that we need not say in all things, 'They manage these matters better abroad.'

Digitized by Google

"The book of Herr Wehrmann has a special interest at this moment, which, apart from its own merits as a trust-worthy account of English railways and railway management, may account for the attention it has attracted on the Continent. The tendency there—and a feeble echo of the cry is heard on this side of the Channel—is for the purchase of all railways by the State. Bismarck the Great is bent upon bringing all German railways under the domination of the central Government; and even in Republican France the legislation tends to make the great iron high roads of the country State property. Virtually, all French railways are already under State management, the control of the shareholders and boards of directors being merely nominal, reduced to matters of finance. It is the same in Italy, in Spain, in Russia, and other countries. Against this condition of things the book of Herr Wehrmann is an eloquent protest, not so much in words, but in recorded facts. He shows, and shows conclusively, that no State management of railways can bear comparison with that of the private management of English railways, as energetic, as sagacious, and unrivalled for efficiency 'in the whole world.'"

PRINCE LEOPOLD ON THE "MAGNA VIRUM MATER."

Our Prince Leopold, on the occasion of opening Firth College at Sheffield, concluding a speech instinct with the spirit of his noble father, after quoting from the poet Laureate the lines—

> "Men, my brothers, men, the workers, ever reaping something new,
> That which they have done but the earnest of the deeds that they shall do."

said, "And among the things that you shall do will be not only such as shall increase your wealth and spread your manufactures, but such as shall imbue you with that culture which descends from generation to generation, and that wisdom which should make of us all a people ever more worthy of our great country—

The Mother of Mighty Nations."

THE LATE JOHN WILSON'S VIEW OF "THE GATE" AS CONTRASTED WITH LORD SALISBURY'S.

It has sometimes been said that the late Mr. John Wilson had the correct idea of "the Gate of the enemies," which was God's promise to Abraham, and one of our Identifications. It is asserted, in fact, that the modern idea which links Malta, Gibraltar, Cyprus, and the rest of these strategic places and strongholds, with the true idea of "the Gate," is only a barefaced plagiarism from good John Wilson's thoughts. Let the reader judge if this be true. In "Our Israelitish Origin," page 36, lec. iii., Mr. Wilson lectured on "the Gate," inter alia. He said, "The second of these promises regards the place of rule—the kingship—which is expressed by its being said that they should possess 'the Gate of their enemies.' It was in the Gates of old that the people held their councils, and that rule was exercised. 'To possess the Gate of the enemy' was the same as overturning his counsels, and possessing his power.

"Now, it may be observed that it was from the North that the great enemies of Israel proceeded; the Babylonian, Median, Greek, and Roman, all proceeded from the North. These were the Empires that composed the great image described in Daniel ii., as well as the Assyrian, who had previously ravaged the land, and led away the main portion of the people into the North country, where they have multiplied as promised, and where they were given possession of the Gate of their enemies; and have GONE OUT OF IT, unto all parts of the world."

This, then, was Mr. J. Wilson's conception of "the Gate." Do the readers of the Banner recognise here even the faintest germ of the idea which is the true one? Mr. Wilson said Israel goes out of "the (promised) Gate"—i.e., the North, or Great Britain, to conquer the world! We rightly represent that Israel leaves his little island in the North, and occupies the Gates, or strategic positions, everywhere in his enemies' (or neighbours') lands, South, East, and West, but not in the North especially.

In another work, "The Title Deeds of the Holy Land," at page 18, Mr. Wilson wrote again of "the Gate" on this wise: "Our view is that God, nevertheless, was true to His promise, and has so far accomplished it as that His people have become many nations—and these, even the chief of the nations—here, in the North country, so frequently intimated in prophecy as the principal quarter out of which His people will flow up to Jerusalem, when it shall be made the throne of the Lord. Already do they possess 'the Gate of their enemies.' They have broken forth on all sides: seem adapted for all climates and all occupations, and are rapidly colonising the globe."

Here, again, the idea seemed, in Mr. Wilson's view, to be attached to Israel's home in the North, and Great Britain to be the promised Gate. Do our readers recognise in that the true modern idea—even in its germ?

Mr. E. Hine did not attempt, in his "Forty-seven Identifications," to explain what the Lord really meant by the promise to Abraham.

Mr. J. Wilson, in his "Mission of Elijah," at page 126, speaks of the time after the restoration to Palestine, and says that "We suppose them (the Tribes of all-Israel) to be a multitude of nations who cannot be pent up into so small a space. They are, moreover, to possess the Gates of their enemies in all parts of the globe."

Here there is no hint of a present realisation of the gift, or its application to-day to such places as Gibraltar, Aden, Bombay, or Singapore. In the Hebrew Christian Witness for August 1, 1866, an article appeared on "Syria, Media, and England," in which, at pages 349 and 350, the writer alluded to the Gates. But he did so, first, as the prophetic evidence that Israel was destined "to supplant other nations" and possess the dominion everywhere. In the second case, he merely recorded a fact vaguely stated because, we suppose, he did not know its meaning; that Israel "was being given possession of the Gates of their enemies." We can see no traces here of the true idea God gave to man—a clue that he had lost.

Digitized by Google

Turn we now to Lord Salisbury, and let him show us what the "Gates" really are, and how we acquired those in the Mediterranean. The words occur in his Lordship's speech at Manchester, on October 17, 1879, and were reported in the Times on October 18:—

Men are much more readily persuaded by acts than by words, and therefore we occupied the island of Cyprus to show our intention of maintaining our hold in those parts. There has been a very great deal of absurd criticism upon the occupation of Cyprus. Some ingenious people think that they have entirely disposed of the policy of the Queen by finding out that, in a very rainy year, fever prevailed upon its coasts. (Laughter.) Fever prevailed in Malta, on the coasts of Greece and of Africa, and it prevailed throughout the Mediterranean in that year; but the occupation of Cyprus was merely following out the traditional policy of the English Government for a long time past. (Cheers.) When the interest of Europe was centered in the conflicts that were waged in Spain, England occupied Gibraltar. (Hear, hear.) When the interest of Europe was centered in the conflicts that were being waged in Italy, England occupied Malta: and now that there is a chance that the interests of Europe will be centered in Asia Minor or in Egypt, England has occupied Cyprus. (Great cheering.) There is nothing new in the policy; we do not claim to have anything new in our policy. Our claim is that we follow the tradition that has been handed down to us, with but one very disastrous interruption, for a long succession of Governments. (Cheers.)

Here, then, is the true idea. When Israel was concerned about a particular foreign land, our interests demanded that we should seize and occupy "the Gate," or stronghold, or strategic position dominating that locality. Such was Gibraltar, the Gate of Hercules; such was Malta, the Gate of the Levant; such Cyprus, the Gate of Syria and of the Promised Land. This is the true meaning of "the Gate," described and promised in Gen. xxii. 17, and it seems to us Mr. John Wilson missed it entirely. The time for the announcement had not then come, and, therefore, to one so privileged as to see almost the whole of the rest of Identity truth since published widely by his successors, it was not given to grasp what, if he had seen it, would have told him that the Gothic theory was utterly false—but the Anglican, God's own truth.

PREPARATIONS FOR THE COMING WOE.

We take the following from the Bristol Times and Mirror, of November 13, 1879:—

In spite of the expression of optimist views, the Continental Powers are evidently terribly afraid of one another, and are taking extraordinary precautions against surprises. Fortifications are being everywhere constructed. Russia is building half-a-dozen new forts at Ivangorod, in Poland, and pushing them forward with all possible speed. France seeks only peace, but she has nevertheless commenced the erection of fresh forts at Maubeuge, Lille, and Dunkirk, all on the Belgian frontier. The War Minister of Prussia reports upon the strategical necessity of adding another set of metals to the Moselle railway. Austria fortifies the Alpine Passes against Italy, while Holland is perfecting her inundation system, and Denmark discusses the protection of Copenhagen from the land side. While nearly every European Power is thus acting upon the proverb that the best way to secure peace is to be prepared for war, there are English Liberals who would have us disband our army and sell our fleet, and take the position in the settlement of European politics which would be allowed to a weak Power by its puissant neighbours.

JEWISH TESTIMONY AS TO THE "LOST" CONDITION OF ISRAEL.

Many of our opponents maintain that the "outcast" Ten Tribes have long since united with the "dispersed" of Judah. The following extracts are from a book written by one of those earnest believers in the literal fulfilment of prophecy who looked for the return of the Jews to their own land after, and not before, their conversion to Christianity, and he cannot, therefore, be charged with any leaning to Anglo-Israelism. The extracts are from pages 110 and 111 of "The Fall of Nineveh and the Reign of Sennacherib, Chronologically Considered, with a View to the Re-adjustment of Sacred and Profane Chronology," by J. W. Bosanquet, Esq., and published in 1853.

"I have before me a Jewish catechism, in which the twelfth article of belief runs thus:—'That the Almighty God will send a Messias to redeem His people, and that though you should meet with delays, nevertheless expect Him. This Messias shall be of the offspring of David, a branch of the root of Jesse the Bethlemite. He shall establish justice on the earth, and judge many nations; righteousness shall be the girdle of His loins; He shall see His seed and prolong His days over His kingdom; and there will be no other difference between the present state of the world and what it shall be at the time of the Messiah's coming, but that the kingdom, as it was originally, shall return to the people of Israel, and they shall inherit their own land, build their temple, and offer sacrifices as they did in their primitive station: the priests shall attend their service, and the Levites glorify God in their hymns. The Ten Tribes carried into captivity by the king of Assyria, and not since known or heard of, shall again be discovered, and joined to the Tribes of Judah and Benjamin.'"

On this Mr. Bosanquet says:—

"There is little in this article which a Christian may not believe. There is little in it which I and many do not profess to believe. And why? Because we believe that the Jews more truly interpret the words of the prophets than those who venture to do away with the direct meaning of expressions by what they call spiritual interpretation. Moreover, 'I surely believe,' with the pious Tobit, 'those things which Jonas the prophet spake of Nineveh, that it shall be overthrown: and that for a time peace shall rather be in Media: and that our brethren shall be scattered in the earth from that good land: and Jerusalem shall be desolate, and the house of God in it shall be burned, and shall be desolate for a time. And that again God will have mercy on them, and bring them again into the land, where they shall build a temple, and not like to the first, until the time of that age be fulfilled; and afterward they shall return from all places of their captivity, and build up Jerusalem gloriously, and the house of God shall be built in it for ever, with a glorious building, as the prophets have spoken thereof" (Tobit xiv., 4, 5).

W. Rowbottom.

Alfreton, Nov. 5, 1879.

"The only point in this connection [the idea of nationalities] on which Englishmen are agreed, is that England itself shall not be subject to foreign rule. The fiery resolve to resist invasion, though with an improvised array of pitchforks, is felt to be virtuous, and to be worthy of an historic people. Why? Because there is a national life in our veins. Because there is something specifically English which we feel to be supremely worth striving for, worth dying for, rather than living to renounce it. Because we too have our share—perhaps a principal share—in that spirit of separateness which has not yet done its work in the education of mankind, which has created the varying genius of nations, and, like the muses, is the offspring of memory."—Theophrastus Such. By George Eliot.

Digitized by Google

ISRAEL KEEPETH SABBATH.

THE Rev. Dr. Philip Schaff, the American divine, speaking at the Evangelical Alliance in Switzerland, gave us some particulars regarding the Protestant and Christian character of the American and British nations (Manasseh and Ephraim), which it would be well to repeat to the readers of Identity literature. His statements regarding the love of the Sabbath, which both these sister nations exhibit, are pregnant proof of their Israelite origin. No other nations on earth show the like, and his testimony regarding their deep reverence for God's Word—the Bible—is equally striking. Two of our best Identities rest upon our national love of the Holy Scriptures and on our reverence for the Lord's-day. The former are the oracles of God, and they are, as St. Paul shows, committed to the Hebrews. In his days they were in the custody of the Jew (Rom. iii. 1, 2). In ours they have been transferred, as part of "the kingdom of God," to the keeping of Ephraim—the fruitful British nation, therefore Israel of the Ten Tribes (Matt. xxi. 43). What Dr. Schaff said was this (we take it from the Christian Herald of September 10, 1879) regarding the

"CHRISTIAN CHARACTER OF THE AMERICAN NATION.

"If the religion of the American people may be judged from the number of churches, and Sunday schools, colleges, and seminaries, from the extent of Bible-reading, Sabbath-keeping, church-going, liberal giving, and active charity, they need not fear a comparison with any nation in Christendom. The clergy are, upon the whole, the most respected and influential class of the community. They are invited to all public festivities, and called upon to open even political meetings with the invocation of the Divine blessing. Christianity is an integral part of the common law of the land, and enjoys as much protection in courts of justice as in any country under the sun. It is deeply rooted in national habits, which are even stronger than laws, and has a mighty hold on the respect and affections of all classes of society. A strict regard for

"THE CIVIL AND RELIGIOUS SABBATH is a national American custom, and dates from the first settlement of the country, especially in Puritan New England. Law and custom go hand in hand. So general and deep-rooted is this sentiment in the American people, that President Lincoln, even in the midst of the civil war, when everything seemed to give way to military necessity, issued a memorable order enjoining the proper observance of the Sabbath upon the officers and men in the army and navy. The order, dated Washington, November 15, 1862, said,—

"'The importance for man and beast of the prescribed weekly rest, the sacred rights of Christian soldiers and sailors, a becoming deference to the best sentiment of a Christian people, and a due regard for the Divine will, demand that Sunday labour in the army and navy be reduced to the measure of strict necessity.'

"The sanctity of the American Sabbath is threatened by infidels and foreigners from the Continent, who would like to turn it into a day of secular amusement, and to substitute the theatre and beer saloon for the church and Sunday school. The Sabbath Committee of New York have done a good work in the direction of maintaining their time-honoured institution, and have stimulated similar efforts in other large cities. The great British and Foreign Bible Society forms a common platform for ministers and men who widely differ in their theological views, and continues to send forth complete versions or portions in upwards of 220 languages, and in an ever-increasing ratio.

"Truly, England may be said to be—in no exclusive sense, however—the land of the Bible. Attempts have been made, no doubt, to dissociate education from religious teaching. The Government no longer grants pecuniary aid or subsidy to schools in respect of the religious teaching. Probably those who agitated for the change were guided by a cold philosophy rather than by any particular concern for the spiritual good of the people. Be that as it may, it is certain that the popular instinct still demands and prefers religious education. Parents have a feeling that the Bible is the thing for their children. Sunday schools are more than ever flourishing and well cared for. Ladies, and gentlemen, and persons of humbler life also find their places as volunteer teachers. There is one ex-Lord Chancellor of England who has been all his life a Sunday school teacher. The names of the most recent holders of the Great Seal, Hatherley, Selborne, and Cairns, vie with one another in religious as in legal excellence.

"If England is the land of the Bible, it is undoubtedly the country of the Sabbath, in its most blessed sense as the Lord's-day. Whatever may be the premises, whether kept more or less as a Jewish Sabbath, or as a day of Christian liberty, whether from love or for fear, the conclusion arrived at is the same, to keep the seventh day holy. Most of us will recognise the perfect liberty of the Christian not to judge, or to be judged, in respect of a holy day; and I, for one, would even take my stand upon the Lord's most precious assurance that 'the Sabbath was made for man.' In proportion as that is recognised and understood, I believe the mind of man will be in accordance with the mind of God, and the observance of the Lord's-day must be both happy, and successful, and well marked.

"It is a grand fact—I hold it to be a great national fact—that the Sabbath is regarded by all thoughtful British Protestants as a Divine institution of the very first rank. I grieve to say that the modern facilities of locomotion and travel have made many of our people look to the Continent for some justification of a lax observance of the Sunday. But assuredly theatres, balls, bands of music, worldly pleasure-seeking of all kinds, par excellence upon the Sunday, must be distinctly contrary to the mind of God. The sanctification of the Sabbath, spoken of by Isaiah, points forward to the latter days. 'If thou turn thy foot from the Sabbath, the holy of the Lord, honourable,' &c. Great Britain has, to a large extent, reaped the blessings spoken of, and now desires that its voice may be heard gently, but yet firmly, protesting against the desecration of the Sabbath in other lands, while it longs sincerely that the blessing which has been realised in its own case may be extended in a still higher degree far and wide to all Protestant nations of the earth.

"I have pointed out thus briefly what seem to be three of the favourable features in the present state of Protestantism in Great Britain—reverence for the Word of God, observance of the Sabbath, active evangelisation."

We are glad of the Rev. Dr. Schaff's blind testimony; for a "protesting" nation must be—

1. A nation of "witnesses" for God—therefore Israel (Isa. xliii. 10—12).

2. A Sabbath-keeping nation—therefore Israel (Exod. xxxi. 13—17; Ezek. xx. 20).

3. A missionary race taking the Gospel "to ALL the nations and ALL the families of the earth" (Gen. xxii. 18, xxviii. 14)—therefore, most surely, of the seed of Abraham according to the flesh, since God's solemn promise, made on oath, was to that effect.

"A THOUGHT." By A. J. J. C.—It concerns Deut. xxx. 1. Not only is the blessing and the curse in present operation—viz., blessings on Joseph and Ephraim, but curses upon Judah—but through our Identity we are "calling them to mind in all the countries whither the LORD our God hath driven us." "The Identity" is discussed all over the Anglo-Saxon world, including Manasseh's home. Is not this a SIGN of Deut. xxxi. 3 being on the threshold?

Digitized by Google

NARRATIVE OF THE PROCEEDINGS OF THE GREAT COUNCIL OF JEWS ASSEMBLED AT AGEDA, IN 1650.—BY SAMUEL BRETT, THERE PRESENT.

By Thomas Bales.

Although the following may not be strictly pertinent to the Identity, yet it raises so many thoughts in connection therewith, that I venture to send it you for the benefit of your numerous readers, for many of whom it will have no little interest.

About 300 rabbis assembled at Ageda, in A.D. 1650, to examine the Scriptures concerning Christ. None were admitted to the council who failed to prove their strict Jewish descent, and for this cause full 500, though doubtless true-born Jews, were excluded from the council, but permitted to abide, with strangers, outside the rail.

"On the second day the assembly being full, the propounder stood up, and made his speech concerning the end of their meeting. And this, said he, is to examine the Scriptures concerning Christ, whether He be already come, or whether we are yet to expect His coming. In examining this question, they searched the Old Testament with great care and labour, to be resolved of the truth thereof, having many Bibles with them there for this end. And about this point there were great disputes among them. The major part were of opinion that He was not come, and some inclined to think that He was come; being moved thereunto by their great judgment that hath continued now this sixteen hundred years upon them.

"One of the council seemed to be very apprehensive of the great and long desolation of their nation, ever since their destruction by the Roman Emperors; and he imputed this their affliction to their impenitency. And, comparing their present judgment with their other judgments they had suffered before, he ingeniously confessed that he did conceive it was for some great wickedness, and that their nation was guilty of the blood of the prophets sent from God to their nation, and the many massacres that had been committed by the several sects and factions amongst them. For, said he, we are no idolaters, neither do I think we were guilty of idolatry since our captivity in Babylon: and, therefore, said he, I do impute this, our calamity and present judgment to the fore-named causes. And this was the sum of that which was disputed amongst them the second day of their meeting, and so they adjourned till the next morning, which was the third day of their meeting.

"When being assembled together again, the point that was chiefly agitated was concerning the manner of Christ's coming. And this, some said, shall be like a mighty Prince, in the full power and authority of a King, yea, in greater power than ever any king had; and that He will deliver their nation out of the power of their enemies, and their temple shall be rebuilt again, and that the nations shall be of their religion, and worship God after their manner. For they hold that the Messiah will not alter their religion whensoever He cometh; and further, concerning His parentage, they did agree in this, that He should be born of a virgin, according to the prediction of the prophets; and they agreed also, that He may be born of such a virgin which might be of mean note amongst their nation, as was the Virgin Mary. And here some of them seemed to me to incline to think that Christ was come. Therefore, when they came together again the next day, the propounder demanded of them if Christ were already come, and who they thought He was? and to this demand they gave this answer, that they thought Eliah was he, if He were come, because he came with great power, which he declared by slaying the priests of Baal; and, for the fulfilling of the Scripture, he was oppressed by Ahab and Jezebel, yet they esteemed Him to be more than a mortal man because he so strangely ascended up into heaven. And because this opinion was contradicted by others, the day following they took into examination the same question, to answer them that said Eliah was not the Messiah. They of the contrary opinion did urge the care and love of Eliah for the good of their nation, in that he left them Elisha his disciple to teach and instruct the people; which they expect to be the care of their Messiah. These were the chief arguments they had to defend their opinion, and the same day, towards night, it came into question amongst them, What He then was that said He was the Son of God, and was crucified by their ancestors? And because this was the great question amongst them, they deferred the further consideration thereof until the next day.

"When meeting again, the Pharisees (for some of this sect were amongst them, that were always the enemies of Christ) they first began to answer the last night's question; and these by no means would yield that He was the Christ; and these reasons they gave for their opinions.

"First, because (said they) He came into the world like an ordinary or inferior man, not with His sceptre nor royal power; wherewith they affirmed the coming of Christ should be glorious. Secondly, they pleaded against Him the meanness of His birth, in that His father was a carpenter; and this, they said, was a dishonour that Christ should not be capable of. Thirdly, they accused Him to be an enemy to Moses's law, in suffering His disciples, and in doing works Himself that were prohibited on the Sabbath-day; for they believe that the Messiah will punctually and exactly keep the law of Moses; and where the Gospel doth testify of Christ that He did fulfil the law, they reject the testimony thereof, because they do not own the Gospel. But I observed these reasons of the Pharisees did not satisfy all that heard them, but there still remained some doubt in some of them concerning Christ; for there stood up one rabbi, called Abraham, and objected against the Pharisees, the miracles that Christ wrought while He was upon earth, as His raising of the dead to life again, His making the lame to walk, the blind to see, and the dumb to speak. And the same Abraham demanded of the Pharisees, By what power He did these miracles? The answer the Pharisees returned to him was to this purpose: They said He was an impostor and a magician; and blasphemously traduced Him of doing all His miracles by magic: thus, said they, He first caused them to be blind, to be dumb, to be lame; and then, by taking away His magical charm, they were restored to their former condition. Nevertheless, this answer gave little satisfaction to the said Abraham, but thus he replied that He could not charm those that were born in that condition, as blind, &c., and born also before Christ Himself was born; as it appeareth some of them were. This seemed to him an absurd paradox, and truly the pressing of this argument did almost put them to a nonplus, till at last they had this evasion (the weak and vile): They were (said they) by other magicians convinced to be so in their mother's wombs; and that, although Himself were not then born when they were born with these evils, yet He being a great dissembler, and more cunning than any magician before Him, power was given him by the devil to remove the charms which others had placed. And there was one Pharisee named Zebedee, who of the Pharisees there did most opprobriously revile Him, and vehemently urge these things against Him; but I conceive he did it not to the well-liking of many there that heard him, even members of the council. And as the Pharisees that day played their parts against Him, so did the Sadducees also endeavour (for some of that sect were also of the council) to render Christ vile and odious to the rest of the Jews that were assembled there.

"We are now come to the seventh and last day of their council; and on this day, this was the main query among them: If Christ be come, then what rules and orders hath He left His Church to walk by? This was a great question amongst them, and because they did not believe the New Testament, nor would be guided by it, they demanded some other instruction to direct and guide them in this point. Thereupon six of the Roman clergy (who of purpose were sent from Rome by the Pope, to assist in this council) were called in—viz., two Jesuits, two friars of the order of St. Augustine, and two of the order of St. Francis. And these being admitted into the council, began to open unto them the rules and doctrines of the holy Church of Rome (as they call it), which Church they magnified to them for the holy Catholic Church of Christ, and their doctrine to be the infallible doctrine of Christ, and their rules to be the rules which the apostles left to the Church for ever to be observed, and that the Pope is the holy vicar of Christ, and the successor of St. Peter; and, for instance, in some particulars they affirmed the real presence of Christ in the sacrament, the religious observation of their holy days, the invocation of saints, praying to the Virgin Mary, and the commanding power in heaven over her Son, the holy use of the cross and images, with the rest of their idolatrous and superstitious worship, all which they commended to the assembly of the Jews, for the doctrine and rules of the apostles. But so soon as the assembly had heard these things from them, they were generally and exceedingly troubled thereat, and fell into high clamours against them and their religion, crying out, No Christ, no woman-God, no intercession of saints, no worshipping of images, no praying to the Virgin Mary, &c. Truly their trouble hereat was so great that it troubled me to see their impatience; they rent their clothes and cast dust upon their heads, and cried out aloud, Blasphemy, blasphemy; and upon this the council broke up. Yet they assembled again the eighth day; and all that was done then, was to agree upon another meeting of their nation three years after, which was concluded upon before their final dissolution.

Digitized by Google

"I do believe there were many Jews there that would have been persuaded to own the Lord Jesus; and this I assure you for a truth, and it is for the honour of our religion, and the encouragement of our divines. One eminent rabbi there did deliver me his opinion in conference with me, that he at first feared that those which were sent from Rome would cause an unhappy period to their council; and professed to me, that he much desired the presence of some Protestant divines, and especially of our English divines, of whom he had a better opinion than of any other divines in the world. For he did believe that we have a great love to their nation, and this reason he gave me for their good opinion of our divines, because he understood they did originally pray for the conversion of their nation, which he did acknowledge to be a great token of our love towards them; and especially he commended the ministers of London for excellent preachers and for their great charity towards their nation, of whom he had heard a great fame. As for the Church of Rome, they accounted it an idolatrous Church, and therefore will not own their religion, and, by conversing with the Jews, I found that they generally think that there is no other Christian religion in the world but that of the Church of Rome; and for Rome's idolatry they take offence at all Christian religion. By which it appeareth that Rome is the greatest enemy of the Jews' conversion."

From this we learn that the Messiah was present in the thoughts of many of Judah's afflicted sons, and that Gospel light was then commencing to glimmer upon their reason. Now, I am told by one intimately acquainted with them, their conversion to Christianity is not far distant. In India they are openly enquiring of each other whether their forefathers did not err in rejecting Christ; in this country many of them are asking themselves the same question. Then let those who rejoice in the name of Israel, aid every effort for their conversion; and as they revered our divines for praying for them, so let us too win their gratitude and love by remembering them in our petitions to the throne of grace. Jehovah yearned for the penitence of Israel, and Judah is precious in His sight. In no way can we please Him more than by taking the name of His Son to them. Brethren once, long severed and estranged, let Israel's recognition re-unite them, and make them brethren again, worshipping the self-same God, rejoicing in the same glorious Hope, and ruled over by the self-same King. Thus it must be. God speed the time, and cause us to perform our duty in this and every respect!

We have a duty too, in respect to Rome, the chief enemy to the conversion of the Jews, and a growing evil in our Protestant land. Ours as Israelites to vindicate our faith, and oppose in every shape and form every wile and artifice of the woman in scarlet. Ours the reformation, and ours the cross of Calvary. Christ is ours and we are His, to extol His acts, to publish His love.

JUSTICE FOR OUR BRETHREN THE JEWS; AND LORD SALISBURY ON THE COMING "RE-ARRANGEMENT OF EUROPE."

WE take the following from the Bristol Times and Mirror," of July 28, 1879:—

"Lord Salisbury spoke rather strongly to the Jewish deputation on Friday for one who, as he described himself, was in the position of hearing and being bound not to say anything. His speech, read between the lines, contained a distinct menace to Roumania, a plain threat that if it does not do its part towards carrying out the stipulations of the Treaty of Berlin it may simply cease to exist when that new re-arrangement of Eastern Europe comes which we so constantly see predicted. Roumania, it appears, has made, and made only informally, propositions, or rather intimations, to the Western Powers on the Jewish question, which do not seem to them adequate to satisfy the demands of the Treaty. That is, England, France, and Italy, acting by virtue of the blood and treasure which they shed in the Crimea, inserted in the Berlin Treaty certain stipulations which they required Roumania to carry out with a view to improve the position of the Jews in that country—a country which, as Lord Salisbury observed, owes its existence to the acts of friendliness and goodwill of other Powers. In response, this ungrateful State has intimated, informally, that it will do certain things which do not amount to the stipulations. The question is at present, therefore, in a state of crisis, and Lord Salisbury accordingly intimates that it would be improper for him either to indicate any opinion as to the precise nature of the solution to be obtained—'to be obtained,' Roumania willing or unwilling—or to indicate what the results would be if no agreement should be arrived at. But none of the Powers, and least of all England, France, and Italy, are likely to recede from the very solemn international act recorded at Berlin.

"With respect to the future, it is obvious that in any case, putting apart all question of the proceedings of the Powers in the present day, Roumania will be pursuing a course of the greatest unwisdom if she does not heartily comply with the stipulations of the Treaty of Berlin, because no one can conceal from themselves that the equilibrium of the States in that part of the world is at present an unstable equilibrium, and that to give it stability is the great object of the diplomacy of the majority of the Powers of Europe at the present time. But any Power, any State which refuses practically to adhere to the international act by which that security and that stability are guaranteed, threatens it for the future, and if it should happen in the course of events that new confusions were to arise and that landmarks were again removed, and that Europe had again to take the territorial arrangements of any part of that extensive region into its consideration, a State like Roumania, owing its existence to the action of other Powers, and depending largely now for its existence upon a strict adherence to international law and regard to treaties, would have gravely compromised its own future chance of existence if it had treated those treaties with contempt.

"The deputation were not far wrong in interpreting this as an assurance that the English Government will do all that lies in its power to promote the civil and religious liberty of the Jewish population in Roumania."

We see from the above what Lord Salisbury expects:—

1. That "new confusions" in territorial arrangements in the East of Europe are possible.

Digitized by Google

2. That dependent States like Roumania refusing to carry out the Berlin Treaty, may then be "gravely compromised" even as to a chance of future existence.

3. That one of the conditions of that Treaty, in which Roumania is now making default, is her treatment of God's ancient people, the Jews.

We are led to reflect from this, What if the great earthquake expected in 1882, should, after all, be caused by an Hebrew question? What if the Jews be the cause of it? What if Europe be plunged again into the Eastern Question war by the great cry, "Come out of her My people"—that people being Judah, and the scattering of Israel now on the Continent? We think that this may indeed be the course of coming events, and that Lord Salisbury has unwittingly predicted for us both the cause and the results of the great political disturbance approaching, which will bring about the "new re-arrangement" of Eastern, and of all Europe; indeed, that disturbance which God's Word calls the "Earthquake such as there was not since men were upon the earth, so mighty an earthquake, so GREAT" (Rev. xvi. 18); also "the great and terrible day of the LORD" (Joel ii. 31).

THE DOOM OF THE HOUSE OF NAPOLEON.

WE conclude our readers have often perused Isaiah xiv., and pondered on its wonderful verses. The head-lines of the chapter are for once not very misleading, for they are to the following effect:—"1. God's merciful restoration of Israel. 4—24. Their triumphant insultation over Babel." We propose to pass the chapter under review, and to suggest a rendering of verses 12—23, which is satisfactory to our own mind, which fits wonderfully to existing nineteenth century historical facts, and which we believe to be the true interpretation of what confessedly has hitherto been an obscure portion of Scripture.

The first four verses of course speak for themselves. God there promises mercy to "Jacob," that He will yet choose Israel (His Ten-Tribed people) and will set them after their long captivity in their own land, Gentiles being joined to them. Their triumphant position as the chief of nations, lording it over the Gentiles, is distinctly marked in verses 2, 3, as "The Ruling Race." With verse 4 begins the burden of Babylon and its king or ruler. Babylon we believe to be the modern, the anti-type of the first Babylon of the times of Nebuchadnezzar, the conqueror and oppressor of the House of Judah of B.C. 606. The modern Babylon consists, we think, of two representatives, the spiritual and the temporal powers, both enemies of the God of heaven—the one the Church and Pope of Rome, the other Rome's eldest son and right hand, France, and its late ruling dynasty, the House of Napoleon. We believe verse 6 commences with the record of the destined fall of Napoleon the Great. The rejoicing of the Gentile nations, whom he oppressed and "ruled with anger," follows. They exult over him at his utter and complete downfall. "All they speak and say unto him, 'Art thou also become weak as we? Art thou become like unto us?'" This, some of us can recollect, was the sentiment of the nations after the collapse of the great conqueror's power, when Israel's great and crushing blow fell on the foot of the image on the 18th June, 1815, at the fatal battle of Waterloo. With the 12th verse we suppose the Divine voice takes up the prophetic story, and describes what shall befall the man and his fallen house. Let the reader mark the passage well:—"How art thou fallen from heaven, O Lucifer, (O day-star!) son of the morning!" A fitting description of the great Napoleon. The "son of the morning," proud as "Lucifer the day-star," fallen yet brilliant! But what follows? "Thou art cut down to the ground, which didst weaken the Goyim or Gentiles!" This verily did the scourge of Europe! "He weakened the nations." What was his aim and object? "For thou hast said in thine heart, I will ascend into heaven, I will exalt my throne above the stars of God (above the political Powers and the highest thrones in Europe): I will sit also upon the mount of THE congregation (Israel of the Isles), IN THE SIDES OF THE NORTH" (in Great Britain, which was Napoleon's ambition). "I will ascend above the heights of the clouds; I will be like the Most High." This gives a vivid but true picture of the insatiable ambition of Napoleon, and possibly he did secretly design to be "like the Most High," in earthly splendour and power. Hence his tremendous fall, and that by the hands of God's people Israel! How goes on the account?

"Yet thou shalt be brought down to hell (the grave); to the sides of the pit" at St. Helena. "They that see thee shall narrowly look upon thee, and consider thee, saying" (as any one visiting the Invalides in Paris, and, as we have done, looking down on his tomb there), "Is this the man that made the earth to tremble, that did shake the kingdoms? That made the world as a wilderness, and destroyed the cities thereof; that opened not the house of his prisoners?" (or margin, "did not let his prisoners," or DETENUES, "loose homewards.") This is exactly what Napoleon did in May, 1803, after the peace of Amiens of 1802, for when France was full of British tourists, during the short truce, and war broke out again in 1803, several thousand Englishmen were, by a decree of the First Consul, thrown into prison, and God's Word by Isaiah, 2,515 years before the event, recorded that this "Lucifer, son of the morning," in his pride and power, "did not let his prisoners or detinues, loose homewards"—mentioning it as an act of peculiar perfidy and wickedness, which it was. The account in verse 13 describes the burial of this great one; not like the burials of the kings of the Gentiles, "Who lie in glory each in his own house." "But thou art cast out of thy grave" (as at St. Helena, and probably, alas! yet again by-and-bye, when the Commune burns Paris, and casts out the body of the mighty dead from its glorious tomb in the Invalides). "Thou shalt not be joined with them in burial, because thou hast destroyed thy land (France), and slain thy people (the French): the seed of evildoers shall never be renowned. Prepare slaughter for his children for the iniquity of their fathers; that they do not rise, nor possess the land, nor fill the face of the world with cities. For I will rise against them, saith the Lord of hosts, and cut off from Babylon (France and Paris) the NAME (the Napoleonic name), and remnant" (the last of the dynasty, the Prince Napoleon, just deceased, alas! in Zululand, June 1st, 1879), "and SON" (the Duc de Reichstadt, who died a youth, in exile from France), "and NEPHEW" (Napoleon III., the late Emperor, who died an exile in Chislehurst, a few years ago), "saith the Lord." The fate of Paris itself we fear is given us in verse 23: "I will also make it a possession for the bittern, and pools of water: and I will sweep it with the besom of destruction, saith the Lord of hosts."

We know not what our readers' view of the above rendering may be, but we cannot but feel that if the facts we allude to be not the fulfilment of the prophecy, they have a most startling resemblance to the same. If we are correct, what conclusions do we arrive at? These:—

1. That no future ruler of France bearing the name of Napoleon shall ever be known there again.

2. That the lamented death of Prince Napoleon, having filled up the cup of the Lord's righteous anger against the head of that doomed house, the next event we look for is the judgment of Paris and its awful devastation, as by "the besom of destruction."

3. That all these events have come about in connection with Israel; since Napoleon the Great died on British soil in St. Helena; his nephew, Napoleon III., died in Great Britain itself, an honored exile there; and the "remnant" in Zululand, fighting nobly and gallantly, face to face with Israel's savage enemies.

4. That Napoleon's inordinate ambition led him to desire to rule "in the sides of the NORTH," even in "the mount of the congregation" (of Israel), and that possibly in revenge for that "evil thought" (Ezek. xxxviii. 10), the afflictions and destruction prophesied came upon him and upon his whole race.

Digitized by Google

These thoughts we place before our readers in no spirit of boasting. On the contrary, we feel that the solemn hour now passing, when the remains of the young Prince have just been consigned to their last resting place, it befits us not to regard with satisfaction the destruction which has befallen a dynasty once the bitter enemy of Israel. But we allude to the passage as proof of God's truth; of His tender love to Israel; and as the sure and certain testimony that His prophetic Word shall stand, even though man may forget his Maker, and fail to note that what He hath said, He also hath performed, and will yet fully carry out.

July 12, 1879.

BRITISH "SCIENCE AND ART EDUCATION" AS "THE HEAD AND NOT THE TAIL, ABOVE ONLY AND NOT BENEATH," AMONG THE GENTILES.

We lately proved that the British workman occupied, as compared with his Gentile European brother, a position of superiority which God originally conferred only on "Israel obedient." The fact, therefore, was appealed to by us as pregnant proof of our Hebrew origin. We now take another ground, and declare that in "Science" as well as in "Art Education," the British people are "above only and not beneath" the continental Gentile nations, despite the protestations of our pessimists, who never tire of telling us that the country is ruined, and that the star of British supremacy in Science and everything else is set. We find here again our work ably done for us by a provincial journal we have quoted on previous occasions, the Newcastle Daily Chronicle. In its issue of the 18th September, 1879, we had an exhaustive and able article on the very subject we have now in hand, and we propose to make the greater part of it our own, because we think in such a department of our great subject as that with which we are dealing, it is important our readers, and opponents too, should receive the evidence, not from our too partial and prejudiced hands, but from those who, not knowing of, or rejecting, our Identity, prove our case for us in the most admirable and decisive manner. Speaking of the work of our national detractors and self-depreciating pessimists, the editor said:—

For thirty years now it has been repeated by all classes of public men, and by many influential writers, that the Germans especially are vastly superior to us in the intelligence displayed in their handicraft and manual dexterity. The people chiefly blameworthy in this respect are the educational reformers. The unselfish advocates of compulsory education, they know it has existed for years in Germany; convinced that the methods of enforcing instruction are in Germany the best, in that country they see everything to be best. In the same way there is no end to their admiration of French taste, and to their praise of the spread of technical knowledge in Belgium and elsewhere. In itself the mere exaggeration of foreign skill would be of little moment, were it not generally accompanied by a corresponding depreciation of our own intelligence and ingenuity. Yet there is scarcely now an educational meeting in any corner of the land where the superior skill of the foreigner is not only not disputed, but where it is brandished as the blue light of national decline, or as the pattern for national emulation.

At the outset, it is somewhat hard for an Englishman to be persuaded of all this, seeing that the moment he sets foot on a foreign strand his eyes encounter the skill and genius of his countrymen. Every steamer that ploughs the rivers and channels of Continental Europe bears the stamp of English enterprise, if not the actual hammer-mark of the English artisan. Excepting the few causeways that still exist, there is not a turnpike road in France, in Germany, or elsewhere, that shows not the impress, if not the name, of our own Macadam. And then the railway. So much is this the offspring of British ingenuity, that from the moment it has been transplanted to foreign countries, not a limb has been severed, or an organ added, to mar its national purity. From the sleeper to the engine-whistle the railways of the world are all English. So is it with the telegraph, even to the wires and non-conductors. So in the mines and quarries, in the workshops and factories of every country, one traces everywhere the creation of the English inventor or the skill of the English mechanic. English enterprise has brought water to foreign cities, and lighted foreign towns with gas. Indeed, at one time, almost every gas company in Europe was English. In the rich meadows of the continental noble, if there be a steam plough or a locomotive thresher, it is, almost without exception, of British origin; and if the peasant has added one modern implement to his antiquated plant, it is an Aberdeen scythe or a Bedford turnip-hasher. Without saying more, therefore, it needs not even a patriotic Englishman to think twice before believing that his fellow-countrymen are so much more stupid than their neighbours. A nation whose industry and enterprise has done so much to modify the conditions of economy, and advance the well-being of the world at large, surely cannot be, comparatively speaking, so backward in education. Whether or not the cause is to be traced to these inherited educational forces, one thing is certain—namely, that the intellectual life of the English working classes will compare favourably with that of the corresponding classes in any other country whatever. Among our country folk, in our pit villages, and in our towns, it is rare to enter a workman's house and not find some books on the shelf; in corresponding houses on the Continent, and especially in France, it is rare to find any. The Mechanics' Institute, the debating society, the literary club—in so far as working classes are concerned—are peculiarly British; and the publishing statistics tell that, in no land on earth, do the labouring people spend more money on books than do those of our own country. The test of a people's education is not to be made by comparing the systems employed, but by observing the results as manifested in actual life. "I was brought up at the feet of Gamaliel," said Paul; and in times when the means of knowledge were private property, the argument held; but in our day, when the temple of wisdom has a thousand gates, the fact of a man's having attended a certain school, or listened to a certain professor, goes for little. We judge his acts. In short, the education of the people is to be tested by their moral and civil life, and especially by the extent to which they make subservient to their interests and comforts the natural forces surrounding them. It is to be seen in their raiment, in their houses, on their farms, in their workshops, in their tools, and in their manner of using them. And will anyone say that in the matter of tools the British workman is behind his neighbour? Is there, for example, in all Germany a shovel to be compared, in convenience and strength, with that used by the English navvy? The continental shovel is an iron scoop, with a bent handle at least six feet long. Out of England the delving spade is almost unknown; and the unwieldy shovel, a clumsy shoulder pick, and a kind of whin hacker are the sole implements for trenching. The typical trampick is never seen. The Continental waggon is a ricketty tumbril; spring carts for carrying goods are rare, even in the towns; while the four-wheeled lorry, the tipping box-cart, and the chaste iron-wheeled barrow of the English garden are instruments of labour unheard of abroad. Our village blacksmith—the most skilful and intelligent of mechanics—the man that can make a horse-shoe, pick a lock, ring a wheel, and turn his strong and dexterous arm to the hundred and one devices of his cunning handicraft, is unknown in other lands. Except at an agricultural show or in the meadows of a model farm, it is rare to find a well-made plough out of England. In the common French and German plough, the sock is often only a prolongation of the earth-board, the coulter is mostly placed too far in advance, and its blade is generally clumsy and badly set. And then the stilts—the unhandy wooden stilts—they spring from the body of the machine as if the ploughman were intended never to bend his back.

Much of the endless eulogy bestowed by our public men on foreign education and intelligence has its origin in a limited observation abroad.

Here, then, is the case fairly stated. Our race, which is declared to be distanced by the continental Gentiles, is found to be leading the van still in continental railways, in submarine and land telegraphy, in ocean and river steamers, in machinery of all sorts, in agricultural implements, in water accommodation and gas lighting within foreign cities and towns, in road making, in house building, in farms and workshops, in libraries, schools, and literature, in mechanics' institutes, in debating societies, and in literary clubs; in each and all of these the British are seen and known, and admitted to be, facile princeps, "the head and not the tail, above only and not beneath," the continentals. In ocean-going steamers of foreign lands, who are the engineers almost everywhere abroad? Scots or Englishmen! If a railway is to be laid out, planned, and constructed, what brains alone can ordinarily be trusted to carry out that design? An English—that is, a British engineer's! In mining operations it is just the same. Everywhere the chief agent for doing all the scientific practical work of the world is almost always British, and British only. We ask our readers to ponder these things, and henceforth never to give way to despondency, but, on the contrary, always and at all times to rejoice in their origin, also that God has cast their lot among His so favored, so highly-blessed people—the children of Israel.

Digitized by Google

POSTSCRIPT.—We had written thus far, when the Marquis of Hartington's speech at Newcastle, reported by the local Daily Chronicle on the 19th September, commenting on the editor's opinions above recorded, reached us. They are added for our readers' satisfaction, and as a full and clear confirmation by the Liberal leader of H.M. Opposition, of all we have written. He said:—

Ladies and gentlemen, I observed in the daily local journal of this town this morning, a very eloquent and powerful defence of the education of this country as compared with that of other countries, in comparison with which it is so often depreciated. I am not prepared to controvert any of the statements made in that article. I do not know whether its inspiration can be traced to any of the gentlemen who sit in my immediate neighbourhood, but at all events I think we shall all admit that it is a very gratifying and a very spirited defence of English education as it exists now. There can be no doubt, ladies and gentlemen, that whatever we may say in our fits of self-depreciation, our English manufactures are, and I hope will long continue to be, pre-eminent throughout the world. But I think we must also recollect that a great deal of the pre-eminence which has been obtained by British industry, has been the result of that indomitable energy which we know the British manufacturer and the British artizan to possess; and all the pre-eminence which they have attained has been in spite of, to a certain extent, some drawbacks under which we labour from our deficiency in scientific and artistic education.

DR. WYLIE GIVES BLIND EVIDENCE TO "OUR IDENTITY."

BY. R. S. CLARKE.

I HAVE great pleasure in sending you two extracts I made recently from Dr. Wylie's work, "The History of the Papacy." At page 484 the Rev. gentleman says:—

"It is obviously unnecessary to compare the shipping of France with that of England. In 1788 the French tonnage was 500,000 tons, and that of England 1,200,000. In 1848 the tonnage of France amounted only to 683,230 tons, and that of England to 3,400,809 tons. These figures speak volumes." The italics are ours.

It must be borne in mind that the above work was written in the year 1851. And again at pages 492 and 493:—

"To make the contrast complete let us glance at the career of Protestant Britain during the past hundred years.

"In 1750 . . . . England was but a second-rate Power, not daring even to dream of the career of greatness which was just then opening to her. The British sceptre was swayed over not more than thirteen millions of subjects, including our North American colonies. . . . . The French were masters of Canada and Louisiana, and threatened to expel us from the American continent altogether. Our Indian Empire was then limited to the British settlement in Bengal, and the French who held the Deccan threatened to deprive us even of that. Holland and Portugal rivalled us as commercial Powers; France far eclipsed us in political importance, and Spain, mistress of the gold mines of Mexico and Peru, outstripped us in wealth. . . . . Since that period Britain has pursued a career unexampled in the history of nations. Canada has become ours. The Mogul Empire has fallen under our sway. We have called hitherto unknown continents and islands from out the Pacific, and are peopling them with our race and our language, ruling them with our institutions and our laws, and enriching them with our commerce, our science, and our faith. Thus the chain of our power encircles the globe; we have become the mother of nations." The italics here are also ours.

I have been induced to trouble you in hopes that these extracts may prove interesting to your readers (See Deut. xxviii. 13; Psa. ii. 8; Hosea i. 10; Isa. xlix. 8, xxvii. 6; Deut. xxxii. 8, 9).

4, Athenæum-terrace, Plymouth,
October 31, 1879.

"IMPERIUM ET LIBERTAS."

THESE words were Lord Beaconsfield's, as everybody knows, used in his Guildhall speech, on Lord Mayor's day, Nov. 10, 1879. They have the true Israelite ring in them! They tell of "Empire," and of "Liberty;" but not a word of "Defence NOT Dominion," which Lord Salisbury gave out as our watch-word. Our true note is "IMPERIUM," and "LIBERTAS" for the whole Empire we have acquired. This is Israelite to the very core! and, as his lordship said, was "not a bad programme for a British ministry." No wonder "cheers" followed the sentiment. It is the true Israelite rôle. It recognises "kingdom and dominion under the whole heaven" as our British-Israelite portion, because it is God's own will, and it sees that our "Empire," or "Imperium," brings with it the happiness of the millions, the contentment of the subjugated masses, and the "liberty" of the whole earth under British Israelite rule (Dan. vii. 27; Isa. lviii. 6). We are thankful to know from Lord Beaconsfield's lips that "this programme is not one from which her Majesty's advisers shrink." We are not unaware of the grounds of the Prime Minister's confidence. We know well that Imperium et libertas have in India, as Dr. W. Hunter has so well taught us lately, done infinite good there to our millions in the heathen Empire of Queen Victoria. The proof is close at hand and personally known to us. When Upper India was torn in pieces by the mutiny in 1857 and 1858, all Central and Southern India rested in peace because Israel's rule was known and felt there to be founded on "justice, mercy, and liberty."

In Natal recently, even when Insandlwana gave to the 320,000 Zulus who there encompassed the 20,000 Europeans the opportunity of destroying them off the face of the earth had they been so minded, they lifted no finger against the dominant white race. And why? Because Israel's IMPERIUM was well known, and felt to be an Empire of justice, and of freedom, and of equity. The same knowledge has spread far and wide all over Asia, and hence we know that all Asiatic Turkey, all Egypt, and many parts of Africa are already stretching out their arms to Britain "to come and rule them." The reason is (who can doubt?), because God has given to His people a desire and ability to rule with justice and mercy, and liberty, freedom, and safety follow the British Raj or Imperium, wherever the "Union Jack" is planted in real power.

We thank God for Lord Beaconsfield's cheering speech, and though we cannot agree with him when he sees a prospect of a "long and protracted peace for Europe" if only British power and advice be maintained in the councils of her courts, we know quite enough to feel glad that our Prime Minister maintains our Israelite great "corner stone"—namely, that our motto must and always will be, not "Defence" only, but "IMPERIUM ET LIBERTAS."

Digitized by Google

THE IDENTITY IN THE UNITED STATES.

BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT IN BROOKLYN.

I AM glad to inform you that the knowledge of our Identity is progressing very rapidly in this country. We hear of societies springing up in almost every State in the Union. There are more than thirty ministers of the Gospel proclaiming the glad tidings from Sabbath to Sabbath, and the arguments of our friends, who are engaged in advocating the theory publicly, are listened to with the greatest interest. The most encouraging feature, however, attending the success of our Identity in the United States, is the great amount of spiritual good it is effecting, and the testimony on this point is voluminous.

On Thursday evening, Nov. 6, the Brooklyn Identification Society held its first annual meeting, and although the night was stormy and cold, the attendance was large and enthusiastic. A faithful report of this meeting would furnish the best evidence of the interest which the subject of our Identity has created in the city of Brooklyn. This annual meeting had been looked forward to with great hopes and high anticipations, and many prayers were offered to Almighty God for its success. The day was ushered in, however, with a heavy snowstorm, which finally ended in rain, and when the time appointed for the meeting arrived, there was "A murky storm deep lowering o'er our heads."

Yet, notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather, the attendance was large, and the meeting proved in every way a decided success. The President, Mr. George Ker, in the course of a very spirited address, reviewed the history of the society from its commencement, from which it appears that the editor of the BANNER OF ISRAEL was the first to suggest its formation. The chair was occupied by Joseph Wild, Esq., of Bay Ridge, who has been a staunch advocate of our Identity for many years. Addresses were delivered by the Rev. Joseph Williams, of Boston, and the Rev. Dr. Wild, of Brooklyn. A letter was read from Mr. J. H. Puleston, one of your Members of Parliament, now on a visit to this country, excusing himself for being unavoidably absent, and expressing his well wishes for the society and the cause it advocated. He believed there was a glorious future for Ephraim and Manasseh. The Rev. Mr. Williams was extremely happy in his remarks, and was listened to for more than one hour with the greatest interest and marked demonstrations of approval.

The introduction of Dr. Wild was the signal for a general and hearty applause, which was renewed several times during his address. His fine physique, his deep and magnetic voice, and his thorough earnestness, coupled with a powerful grasp of mind, are qualifications which make the great champion of our Identity in America a very effective and successful speaker. I make these personal allusions to Dr. Wild believing that many of your readers would like to know something of this American divine, who for the past four years has persistently and eloquently advocated our Identity with Lost Israel in the face of much opposition, and at the peril of sacrificing his ministerial reputation. Like Cowley's hero—

"His purpose chose,
He forward pressed outright,
Nor turned aside for danger or delight."

Dr. Wild is a thorough believer in our Identity. He believes that God's chosen people are found in the Anglo-Saxon race, and chiefly represented in the British Isles, and he further believes that it is the paramount duty of the Christian Church to make known this fact, and his particular duty to preach it from the pulpit continually. This he does every Sunday, and if we may estimate his success by the number of his hearers, then he has succeeded beyond all doubt, for his church is generally filled to its utmost capacity.

There is in the hands of a Committee of our Congress a bill for abolishing our present standard of weights and measures—Israel's standard—and substituting the French; or, as it has been designated, the infidel system. Great wealth and influence will be brought to bear upon Congress at its next session in favour of this measure; but I am happy to inform your readers that Manasseh is now preparing for a vigorous resistance. The Society of Engineers, now in session in Boston, have the matter under consideration, and an immense pressure is brought to bear upon this organisation by the promoters of the bill, in order to secure its endorsement of the French system.

The importance of this weight and measure subject cannot be properly estimated at present. It is believed by many that it will take its place as one of the great issues of the near future, when it will be known who are the people of God by the very weights and measures they use. This bill seeks to compel the universal adoption of this new infidel system, bringing to pass the literal fulfilment of St. John's Revelation (xiii. 17), "And that no man might buy or sell, save he that had the mark, the name of the beast, or the number of his name."

The future of this country is pregnant with the most important issues, which will immediately concern God's people Israel. Foreign Infidelity and Popery are the two great evils which menace the future peace of Manasseh; but once our people can be made to understand their Divinely-appointed mission and destiny we need have no fear for the future. May God in His infinite mercy open our eyes to see and understand His will concerning us.

G. W. G.

Brooklyn, Nov. 8, 1879.

"THE STARS IN THEIR COURSES FOUGHT AGAINST SISERA."—JUDGES V. 20.

TWICE recently has the BANNER made "honourable mention" of our article as above. "Not unto us, but to God be all the glory." He it is who has given us all we possess; and if we are, or have, at any time been able to influence a single soul, or suggest a single thought to another upon the wonder-working ways of Providence, it is not for us to glory therein, but still continue humbly to work in the same way, assured that we shall be blessed as far as the cause is for God's honour and not our own.

A fear of making the article too long prevented our previously quoting from Josephus respecting the defeat of Sisera; this and a few further thoughts we now supply. From Judges iv. we learn that the Israelites had been oppressed by Jabin, King of Canaan, for twenty years, when Deborah, for his encouragement, predicted to Barak the defeat of Sisera at the river Kishon: and the history goes on to say that "The Lord discomfited Sisera, and all his chariots, and all his host, with the edge of the sword before Barak" (Judges iv. 15). Josephus says, "The battle began, and when they were come to close fight, there came down from heaven a great storm, with a vast quantity of rain and hail, and the wind blew the rain in the face of the Canaanites, and so darkened their eyes that their arrows and slings were of no advantage to them, nor would the coldness of the air permit the soldiers to make use of their swords; while this storm did not so much incommode the Israelites, because it came in their backs. They also took such courage, upon the apprehension that God was assisting them, that they fell upon the very midst of their enemies, and slew a great number of them; so that some of them fell by the Israelites, some fell by their own horses, which were put into disorder, and not a few were killed by their own chariots" (Ant. v. 5, 4). The peculiarity of the Scripture writers (and also observable in Josephus), is that they trace everything up to God. It is He who fights for Israel when they turn from their evil ways, and cry unto Him. Our Lord assured His disciples, "Even the very hairs of your head are all numbered" (Luke xii. 7); and, if this is so, and if we believe it, can we doubt that He takes part in all the affairs of men? Can we doubt that it is by His permission that nations engage in deadly conflict, and that He has a purpose to be accomplished in this way? Dreadful as war is, we believe that it has a mission in the present state of things. It is very easy to declaim against it in this country, and profess the peaceable doctrines of our amiable Quaker friends, as long as we live under the shadow of Britannia's flag, for we all know that wherever that standard waves, there is a Power behind to which we can appeal (and not always in vain) for justice and protection.

Digitized by Google

The progress of our arms in the present day, in Zululand and Afghanistan, will furnish matter to test the Identity in this light. If our cause be not agreeable to the will of God, we shall be miserably overthrown, sooner or later; but if it be, though disaster after disaster may meet us, the circle of British influence will steadily advance; and probably, humanly speaking, in spite of any and every disaster; while it is also not at all impossible, and far from improbable, judging from the past, if we proceed in a right spirit, we may see that even the natural elements fight on our side. If we, as a people and a nation, could but realise this nearness of God, and that in His hands we are but instruments to do His pleasure, and becoming awed by this thought, would seek to learn and do His will, we should soon see a great and beneficial change come over the character of the great bulk of our countrymen. Rampant vice would be abashed, and, slinking away, disappear from our midst; while the loud-mouthed scepticism, which has so grievously invaded even our churches, would be confounded and put to silence by the universal faith in the Word of the living God.

"The Lord reigneth: let the earth rejoice;
Let the multitude of isles be glad.
Clouds and darkness round about Him:
Righteousness and judgment the habitation of His throne."
Psa. xcvii. 1, 2.

"God is our refuge and strength,
A very present help in trouble.
Therefore will not we fear, though the earth be removed,
And though the mountains be carried into the midst of the sea;
Though the waters thereof roar and be troubled,
Though the mountains shake with the swelling thereof.

* * * * * *

Come, behold the works of the Lord,
What desolations He hath made in the earth.
He maketh wars to cease unto the end of the earth;
He breaketh the bow, and cutteth the spear in sunder;
He burneth the chariot in the fire.
Be still and know that I am God:
I will be exalted among the heathen,
I will be exalted in the earth.
The Lord of hosts is with us;
The God of Jacob is our refuge."—Psa. xlvi. 1—3, 8—11.

Such being the "Rock" of our salvation, therefore we have great confidence that, however dark and gloomy may be the look out, all is well; for "we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to His purpose" (Rom. viii. 28). Seeing that these things are so, and that God worketh according to His own will among the hosts of heaven above, and the inhabitants of the earth beneath, there is no room for fear, for "perfect love casteth out fear" (1 John iv. 18); and "if God be for us, who can be against us?" Moses long ago testified, and age after age since, has only added weight to his testimony, that there is "none like unto the God of Jeshurun. . . . . The eternal God is the refuge" of Israel, and "underneath are the everlasting arms. . . . . Happy art thou, O Israel; who is like unto thee, O people saved by the Lord, the shield of thy help, and who is the sword of thy excellency! and thine enemies shall be found liars unto thee; and thou shalt tread upon their high places" (Deut. xxxiii. 26, 27, 29). "Ye that make mention of the Lord, keep not silence, and give Him no rest till He establish, and till He make Jerusalem a praise in the earth" (Isa. lxii. 6, 7).

J. THOMSON.

October, 1879.

THE POLITICAL EFFECT OF THE IDENTITY DESCRIBED BY THE MUSSULMAN EDITOR OF A NEWSPAPER IN BOMBAY.

WE have received the annexed from Mr. M. Mark, of Liverpool, and publish it with great satisfaction. It is a matter of even national concern that our Identity, presented to the Mohammedan mind, should lead the Mussulman subjects of her Majesty the Empress of India to acquiesce in her rule with feelings of loyalty and content. The letter we now publish shows this is likely to be actually the case in Bombay, where the editor of a native newspaper is teaching his fellow-countrymen that the governing race, as the "sons of Isaac," are after all, their own "rich relations," since they are themselves from the same forefather Abraham, by Ishmael. We commend the letter and the subject to our rulers, to whom we trust copies of this issue of the BANNER will be sent; and we hope it will circulate largely also in India. Our Identity is a national, political matter, of the gravest importance both here and in India, and we are sure, ere long, that fact will be duly recognised. The letter we allude to is as follows:—

Extract from a letter received from Bombay by a friend of mine, Richard R., Liverpool:—

"Many thanks for your extreme kindness in continuing to send me the BANNER. There are several people of my acquaintance here now who eagerly borrow them. The other day in a Mussulman Hindustani paper, which I take in for the sake of acquiring a knowledge of the best newspaper terms when translated into Hindustani, I came across a statement that a new prophet, named Hine, was making himself known by his writings in England, those writings having for their object the dissemination of the fact that the British are the Lost Tribes of Israel. The editor—a devout Mussulman with whom I am personally acquainted—concluded by stating that he thought it not unlikely; and that, in his opinion, it was an omen of good for India that their governing race should appear to have every prospect of eventually making good their claim to such an illustrious ancestry.

"Of course, all Mussulmans consider themselves, through their connection with the Arabs, to be in some sort related to Abraham, and thus the Anglo-Israelite theory gives them a chance of putting themselves into a position of the poor relation of the greatest Power the sun ever yet shone upon."

November 13, 1879.

PROGRESS IN LINCOLN.

A NEW LECTURER.

ALL honour to Mr. John Young, the respected organist of Lincoln Cathedral! He has given an excellent lecture on "our Identity" in his own town, which, by request, is to be repeated in the "Masonic Hall," on December 2, 1879. We hear his lecture gave great satisfaction, made a great impression, and was hardly opposed at all. "Not an outwork of our Identity fortress was taken, or for a moment in danger." The public notice of his lecture, which follows, we take from the Lincolnshire Chronicle of November 7, 1879:—

"A most interesting lecture, on 'The Identity of the British Nation with the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel," was delivered in St. Paul's Mission-room on Thursday evening, to a large and appreciative audience, by Mr. Young, the respected organist of Lincoln Cathedral. The lecturer was frequently applauded during the delivery of the lecture, and at its close an animated discussion took place on the subject, in which the Rev. Mr. Fynn, the Rev. the Precentor, and others, took part. We believe it is Mr. Young's intention to continue the subject on some future occasion. Mr. Young generously gave the proceeds of the lecture towards the reduction of the debt on St. Paul's church.

Digitized by Google

JOHN BUTTERWORTH ON HOSEA XIV. 8.

In Banner, No. 122, page 175, our friend L. G. A. R., commenting on Hos. xiv. 8, wrote as follows: "Saith Ephraim, 'What have I to do any more with idols?' God says, 'I have heard and regarded him.' Saith Ephraim, 'I am like a green cypress.' God says, 'From Me is thy fruit found.' The cypress is supposed to be a tree with a hard grain, producing no edible or useful fruit."

Our distant coadjutor in the Deccan (India), John Butterworth, commenting on the above, writes to us under date Sept. 14, 1879, to the following effect:—

"I see our friend L. G. A. R., writing on the 30th of April last, or at least in that number of Banner, does not know that in the East, from time immemorial, the cypress has been used as the symbol of freedom, and gracefulness, and perfectness. And so he misses a point he might have made in speaking of Ephraim comparing himself to a 'green fir tree' (he is responsible for the word cypress) in Hos. xiv. The cypress is also taken as symbolising 'fire the all-reducer and over-comer, because its shape is so like a flame.' The Mussulmans always plant the cypress in their graveyards to denote that the souls of the buried true believers have become as a flame always tending upward, free, and perfected as if purified by flame. This idea is prevalent throughout the East, and is constantly alluded to in all Persian and Arabic poetry, and when the prophet represented Ephraim speaking of himself as a cypress, probably he meant to convey the idea of complete freedom and perfectitude becoming the ulterior attributes of the future nation of Ephraim. Now for a bit of your old argument. What nation is celebrated for its perfect liberty, distinguished among the other nations for its (comparatively) fair dealings, and famed for its upward tendencies and godly aspirations, and at the same time for its irresistible strength in reducing and annihilating nations, in all parts of the earth? Why, Englishmen of course! Another Identity!"

We are glad to hear from our distant correspondent, and to find him throwing light reflected from Oriental philology and poetry upon God's Word. As the Lord's overcomer we know that He has granted to Israel, His cypress tree, the dominion over the Gentile nations as declared in Rev. ii. 26, 27. To the British is now given this rôle of rule over the heathen races, breaking them in pieces as at Ulundi, the Peiwar Kotal, Char Asiab, and at Cabul, "treading them down" in such wise that "there is none to deliver" (Micah v. 8). From John Butterworth's point of view a fresh beauty attaches to the imagery of Hos. xiv. 8, and we are glad to think the light is flashed to us, as by a Scriptural heliograph, by our Deccan Israelite who is always on the watch to help on our cause.

FRESH EVIDENCE OF A SOUL SAVED BY IDENTITY KNOWLEDGE.

We have the following from one whom we highly esteem, and feel justified, without mentioning names or addresses, in giving our readers the purport of the testimony we have received.

"The Banner," says our correspondent, "has still its old delight for me. 'Calais' was no more engraven on Queen Mary's heart than our 'cause' is on mine! But where hers was 'heart-breaking' ours is 'soul-renewing.' R. L., regarding whom we corresponded, is savingly converted to God now, solely through Identity study."

Reader, let us thank God for this! Let us now earnestly and kindly press on our opponents this fresh case (one of so many), and ask them to think more favourably and lovingly of a view prevailing so widely, which has on it so manifestly God's blessing. It must be of Him, for it leads men who study it to the sinner's Saviour, Jesus Christ.

THE EXETER ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION AT WORK.

We take the following from the Western Times of Exeter, published on November 8, 1879. We understand Mr. Norman had a good audience, and the lecture was a success. We congratulate our Exeter friends on so good a beginning, and trust their Association will rapidly grow in importance and influence. Our extract is as follows:—

The Anglo-Israel Association.—Last evening Mr. J. E. Norman, the honorary secretary and treasurer, delivered a lecture before the members and friends of the Exeter branch of the Association, on the "Identity of the British Nation with the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel," in the Assembly-room of the Devon and Exeter Coffee Tavern. The lecturer handled his subject in a capital manner, and at the close very courteously answered the various questions put to him by those present. W. H. Peters, Esq., of Harefield, presided.

We are glad to welcome Mr. Norman's new work, "Gleanings from the Great Pyramid with Diagrams." It can be had from Mr. W. H. Guest, in Warwick-lane, London, for threepence, and will be found a useful help to beginners in Pyramid knowledge. Mr. Norman describes the building, suggests who built it, discusses the various problems the building solves, enters on the question of its sacred chronology, and concludes a very readable pamphlet by pointing to A.D. 1881-2 as "a year of tremendous import to mankind."

Review.

Horæ Propheticæ. A Commentary on the Prophecies Concerning the Ten Tribes of Israel. Exegetical and critical. By the Rev. H. Marriott, M.A. Vol. I. Price three shillings. W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, London, E.C., and I. E. Chillcott, 26, Clare-street, Bristol.

Third and Final Notice.

(Concluded from page 459.)

The Rev. Mr. Marriott has something to say respecting Romans xi. 22, which the general reader little suspects, and never realises. It has a strong bearing on our position as a Gentile Church, if we are such, as our opponents never tire of repeating. After showing that verse 17 has been wrongly rendered, and the Gentile wild olive branch has been translated improperly "a wild olive tree," he points out that verse 22 positively declares the time must come when that wild olive Roman Gentile branch "is to be cut off." The fact is, the English translation has supplied two words not in the original, expressed in the statement "otherwise thou also shalt be cut off." Read as the original Greek records it, Mr. Marriott shows that the decision is express—"The Roman Gentile Church is doomed to be finally cut off." The Old Testament parallel and confirmation of this fate is found to be in Daniel's vision of the metallic man in chap. ii., and in the consumption and destruction of the fourth beast in Dan. vii.

We beg our opponents to consider these facts. If ours be as they allege—a Gentile Roman nation and Church—then Daniel's teaching, corroborated by St. Paul, dooms our race and Church as well, to destruction, from which there will be no recovery, while some yet undiscovered Christian nation—Israel of the future—will trample on us, acquire our possessions, occupy our present place of God-favoured privilege, leaving us to be "cut off." We either must be Israel, and so escape this doom, or, being Gentiles, shall incur it and be undone. Let our opponents say which they prefer.

Mr. Marriott has some original views to give us in his chapter on "The Captivity" (page 104). He points out that this state of captivity exists, as proved from Scripture, long after the conversion and restoration of Israel to God's favour; that it is the condition of the nation to-day. Deut. xxx. 1—5; 2 Chron. vi. 36—39; Isa. xlix. 21, 25, vi. 1—13, are quoted to show that the state of captivity in Scripture language is Israel's portion "as long as the Land of Promise is retained by the sword of the destroyer." It has nothing to do with the prosperity and grandeur of the captive nation; nay, it is quite compatible with a high condition of both, but answers merely to the status of "transportation," or absence from their own land, and will last while that lasts.

Digitized by Google

Mr. Marriott, at page 108, has a fine exposition of the meaning of Ezek. xvi. 53—55, which has puzzled many commentators, and has been variously explained by Israelite writers. We are not sure that the author has hit upon the right meaning when he identifies Sodom with the two and a-half Tribes to the North and East of Judah, beyond Jordan. We are not prepared to suggest a better rendering of an obscure prophecy, and think Mr. Marriott's is worthy of careful consideration. Such are some of the salient points in the volume we have been reviewing. We have great satisfaction in recommending the work to our readers' notice, and are glad to hear that already a second edition is being spoken of, and will soon be wanted. We think the plan Mr. Marriott has adopted of treating the Scriptures topically is interesting and advantageous. We wish him, for the effort he has now made to throw light on the Word of God, the blessing of the great Jehovah, the King of Israel.

Correspondence.

"THE TIMES," AND OTHERS, AGAINST THE GREAT PYRAMID.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—Suffer me to supplement Professor Piazzi Smyth's excellent article under the above title in the BANNER of Nov. 12, by pointing out that, however closely men who have no faith in the supremacy of Holy Scripture may cling to Manetho versus Moses, as the late Baron Bunsen unhappily did, when he frantically sang of Manetho—

"Truth have I sought at thy hands, Truth have I found by thy aid"—

the early chronology of Egypt, as interpreted by the Turin papyrus of the age of Ramesses the Great, which is 1,000 years earlier than the time of Manetho, not only confirms the truth of the Hebrew, or Biblical chronology, as against the Egyptian scribe, but as far as may be computed from that ancient document, yields the date of B.C. 2170, as the era for building the Great Pyramid of Ghizeh. It would trespass too much on your space to show this at any length; but having recently written articles on Assyriology and Egyptology in two of the London quarterlies, I am delighted to find such important and yearly increasing evidence in confirmation of the truth of the Bible,

Yours, &c.,

BOURCHIER WREY SAVILE,
(Rector of Shillingford.)

Nov. 12, 1879.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR.—The Lord, by the prophet Isaiah (liii. 8) declares our Saviour was stricken for the trangression of His chosen people, the House of Israel. God having cast off His people, is at the same time very anxious as to their end; hence we find Him in Hosea xi. 8, saying: "How shall I give thee up, Ephraim? how shall I deliver thee, Israel? how shall I make thee as Admah? how shall I set thee as Zeboim? Mine heart is turned within Me, My repentings are kindled together. I will not execute the fierceness of Mine anger, I will not return to destroy Ephraim: for I am God and not man." God's first thought seems to be: "How shall I give thee up, Ephraim?" To give Ephraim up to utter destruction He could not do, so we therefore find God asking Himself the question: "How shall I deliver thee, Israel?" He looked and there was no man, and He wondered there was no intercessor; therefore His own arm brought Him salvation, and His righteousness it sustained Him. Ephraim was so utterly bad that there seemed no hope. He got worse and worse and there was none to plead his cause, but just at the time of Ephraim's extremity—which we may reasonably conclude was when Christ was born—the arm of the Lord, even Jesus, brought salvation to the "Lost sheep of the House of Israel." "For the transgression of My people was He stricken." God having through Christ blotted out the handwriting that was against His covenant people, is desirous to receive them at once. He asks further by His prophet Jeremiah (iii. 19): "How shall I put thee among the children and give thee a pleasant land, a goodly heritage of the hosts of nations? and I said, Thou shalt call Me, My Father, and shalt not turn away from Me." Our Saviour may have had that verse in His mind when He taught the disciples to say: "Our Father which art in heaven." When, then, would Israel accept the invitation? St. Paul believed that when he lived was the accepted time for the children of Israel to return to God, for he says that God declared that then, even then, "was the accepted time—the day of salvation for the House of Israel." That he meant the House of Israel is clear, or else why should God through the Psalmist desire His people not to harden their hearts as in the wilderness, when their fathers tempted Him, proved Him, and saw His works. The people Paul applies that Scripture to was none other than the House of Israel, and he distinctly says that then was the accepted time, the day of salvation for them. But our opponents no doubt would tell us, "We do not dispute that Israel would believe in Christ, but what we contend for is, that it would be only a remnant, just as all did not die in the wilderness because of their unbelief; so in the Christian dispensation there would always be a remnant, but the rest would be blinded, as the bulk of the Jews are to this present day." But was such really to be the position of God's chosen people during 1800 years of the Christian dispensation? We believe not, for Ephraim was to hold a very high position in the Christian world. This we find by referring to Psa. lx. 7, where God says: "Gilead is Mine and Manasseh is Mine; Ephraim also is the strength of My head." Now we may reasonably desire to know how Ephraim was to be the strength of God's head. If we turn to Isa. lix. 17, we shall find that God says: "He put on righteousness as a breastplate, and a helmet of salvation upon his head." Such being the case, we may fairly conclude that Ephraim, if the strength of God's head, would be as a helmet, and such a helmet as to be none other than the means whereby salvation was to be heralded to the ends of the earth. Is there any nation or people of whom it can be said that they are the strength of God's head, in the spreading of the tidings of salvation to a lost and ruined world? Yes, thank God there is; that nation is Great Britain as the nucleus of the whole Saxon race, as the entire body. In face of such an indisputable fact, how can we be any other than Ephraim, than Israel? Praise ye the Lord!

Yours faithfully,

HUGH SOWDON.

13, Aberdeen-terrace, Whiteladies-road,
Nov. 8, 1879, Bristol.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

MY DEAR SIR,—I think it is a fact to be deplored that though there are so many believers in our Identity in the British Empire, nothing (as far as I am aware) has been done to aid the formation of a really working Prayer Union. I note, with great satisfaction, that you, sir, as editor of the BANNER, do individually direct your readers' attention to prayer, but still I think that something more ought to be done. Would you permit me, as a firm believer in Anglo-Israelism, to throw out a few suggestions as to the formation of a Union? The first difficulty is to obtain a gentleman who is willing to act as honorary secretary. That settled, the next thing would be as to membership. Ladies and gentlemen who are convinced that they are really and truly Israelites, might become members on sending their names and addresses to the secretary, and engaging to pray morning and evening—

1. For his, or her, own personal salvation.
2. That God would continue to spread Identity truth.
3. For the speedy coming of Christ; and
4. For the spread of Missionary effort both at home and abroad.

Of course I do not lay claim to infallibility, and many of your readers perhaps will be able to suggest something better, always bearing in mind that the above are only suggestions.

In conclusion, I would add that I should be pleased to hear from my brother Israelites through your valuable columns, on this subject.

Apologising for trespassing on your space,

I am, dear sir,

Yours in the hope of Israel,

ROBERT S. CLARKE.

4, Athenæum-terrace, Plymouth,
Nov. 11th, 1879.

NOTICE.—We have received papers from Professor Piazzi Smyth (on "The Sacred Cubit"), from Major Nickle (on "The Lily"), from Mr. Bales, L. P., Mr. Sydney Hall, Reuben, A Vicar, C. Horner, and others, which will appear as soon as room can be found for them in the BANNER.—ED.

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements

(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O O payable at Ludgate-circus.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed :—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

FRIENDS of the Identity are invited to attend DRAWING-ROOM READINGS in the Minor Prophets, by the Rev. H. MARRIOTT, at 30, LADBROKE GARDENS, KENSINGTON, at 3 p.m., on the 10th and 17th of December.

NEW PAMPHLETS.

THE DECEMBER MONTHLY PART OF THE BANNER OF ISRAEL. May be had, by ordering, of any bookseller or newsagent.
London: W. H Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row; and Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.
PRESIDENT: VISCOUNT FOLKESTONE, M.P.

The Hon. Sec. will be pleased to receive APPLICATIONS FOR LECTURES, irrespective of distance, for the New Year. In addition to those delivered with marked success during the last few months under the auspices of this Association, the following NEW LECTURES are specially prepared :—

DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, Esq., J.P. Subject: "The Anglo-Saxons—the Chosen People."

CHARLES STUBBS, Esq., B.A. (London University). Subject: "Our Scythian Ancestors."

REV. JAMES BILLINGTON, F.S.A., F.R.H.S. Subject: "England's Place in Universal History."

The terms are such as specially commend these Lectures to Identity friends. Address, Offices, 334, Strand, W.C.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.
PRESIDENT: VISCOUNT FOLKESTONE, M.P.

The REV. JAMES BILLINGON, F.S.A., F.R.H.S., will LECTURE as follows:—
TUESDAY, DECEMBER 9, BEDFORD.
Particulars will be locally announced.

Now Ready. NEW LEAFLET of four pages. Price 2s. per hundred.

HISTORICAL AND PROPHETICAL DISTINCTIONS BETWEEN THE TWO HOUSES OF ISRAEL AND JUDAH.
Selected and Arranged by W. S. CAVILL.

Also by the same Author,

THE PROMISES TO ABRAHAM: with SELECT REFERENCES AND EXPLANATORY NOTES. To which is added an Article entitled, ISRAEL AMONG THE GENTILES.

Price Sixpence, or free by post, Sevenpence.

The aim of this Pamphlet is to present the Scriptural Argument in a new and concise form, both for examination and reference.

May be had of the Author, Norton Woodside, near Sheffield; or of the Publisher, Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street. London, E.C; and of all Booksellers.

Price Threepence.

THE ANGLO-ISRAELITES. The full Text of Canon Titcomb's Letter Authenticated. Ham's Descendants, especially Ephraim and Manasseh. By the Rev. J. B. CLIFFORD, M.A., Vicar of St. Matthew's, Kingsdown, Bristol.

Also by the same Author, price 4d.

THE ANGLO-SAXONS AND THE ISRAELITES.
London: Hamilton, Adams, & Co., 32, Paternoster-row; Bristol: I. E. Chillcott, 26, Clare-street.

In neat coloured cover, price 2d., post free 2½d.

BLESSINGS AND CURSES, AND THEIR RELATION TO ISRAEL AND JUDAH. By F. W. PHILLIPS, of Speedwell-road, Birmingham.

NEW BOOKS.

NEW WORK BY DR. WILD.
NOW READY, price 3s., post free 3s. 4d. Handsome cloth, gilt, printed on toned paper and illustrated.

THE LOST TEN TRIBES,
AND
1882.
BY THE
REV. DR. JOSEPH WILD,
Of Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, N.Y.
Printed and published by
ROBERT BANKS, RACQUET COURT, FLEET ST., LONDON, E.C.
And may be had, by ordering, of any Bookseller.

PHILO-ISRAEL (in the BANNER) says:—"We have much pleasure in directing attention to this handsome Identity volume. It contains twenty discourses of the well-known American divine, Dr. Joseph Wild, of Brooklyn, N.Y. We are glad to find from these discourses that Dr. Wild is quite one with us on this side the water with most, though not all, the views we entertain on our great and glorious subject. . . . We promise our readers that if they procure this work, and will peruse it, they will find 'our Identity' discussed in a clear, novel, racy, and 'American' point of view, which is sure to interest, sure to be instructive, and may lead the thoughtless and inquiring to pursue the investigation till possibly conviction may be the result."

EXTRACT FROM PREFACE:—

The main idea I wish to convey in this book, is that God is conducting His Providence through His ancient chosen people, Israel, whom I believe are found in the Saxon race. And His throne on earth, through which flow the purposes of Providence, is David's throne, which I believe to be at present the English throne. Queen Victoria (and God bless her) I believe to be of David's seed. The United States fulfils the rôle of the Tribe of Manasseh. Therefore, to understand the prophecies, Providence, and the present movements of nations, as well as the future lot and destiny of each, we must read the Scriptures in this light. God has made the children of Israel and throne of David His executive, in time, on earth. They are His executive for civilisation, evangelisation, order, and conquest. Through them God will conquer the world to an universal peace. As Moses was to God, so is Israel. Moses being a Divine executor, was to the people a god—so is Israel to all mankind. Spiritual Israel will come through literal Israel.

For Contents see BANNER for October 1st.

HORÆ PROPHETICÆ: WHAT DOES THE BIBLE TEACH ABOUT GREAT BRITAIN? Establishing the Identity of the Anglo-Saxon Race with the House of Ephraim.

BY REV. H. MARRIOTT, M.A.

Price 3s. in paper, 4s. in cloth boards.
W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.
T. E. Chillcott, Bristol.

WORKS BY PHILO-ISRAEL.
Price 2d., post free 2½d.

THE HISTORICAL, ETHNIC, AND PHILOLOGICAL ARGUMENTS in PROOF of BRITISH IDENTITY with the TEN LOST TRIBES OF ISRAEL, clearly and simply stated.
BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

CONTENTS:—Introduction—The Celts—Professor Rawlinson's Testimony—The Cymry—The Cimmerii—The Gimiri and Khumri—The Testimony of the Nimroud Obelisk—The Scythians—The Anglo-Saxons—Sharon Turner's Testimony—The Jutes and Angles—The Danes and the Normans—General Conclusions—Philology—The Welsh Language—The Rev. Canon Lysons' Testimony—Idiomatic Identity Between Hebrew and English—Tyndal's Testimony—The Tribe of Dan—The Irish Celts—Are the Continental Nations Israelites?—Conclusions—Appendix.

Price 4d., post free 5d.

AN ELEMENTARY DIGEST or SKETCH OF THE CHIEF FACTS and TEACHINGS of the GREAT PYRAMID of EGYPT; adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific. By PHILO-ISRAEL; together with Original Papers by the following leading Pyramidists, republished mostly from the BANNER OF ISRAEL (by kind permission of the proprietor)—viz., Professor Piazzi Smyth, the Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A., Charles Horner, Esq., and Major H. A. Tracey, R.A. Being a pamphlet by five authors (a Pyramid number).

READ
ISRAEL'S HOPE AND DESTINY. A New Identity Journal, published monthly. Price 1d. No. 1 (now ready) contains an Original Article on "The Merchants of Tarshish and Russia." By Philo-Israel.
London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row; Liverpool: J. Catterall, 3, Mill-street; and all Booksellers. Order early.

NEW BOOKS.

A NEW TALE OF GREAT INTEREST FOR YOUNG PEOPLE ON THE IDENTITY OF LOST ISRAEL.

Now ready, price 2s. 6d., post free 2s. 9d. Bound in handsome cloth, gilt, bevelled boards, gilt edges, and beautifully printed on toned paper.

THE SISTERS
OF HARROWDALE RECTORY.
BY
MRS. M. A. SEARSON,
ILLUSTRATED WITH
BEAUTIFUL DOUBLE-PAGE FRONTISPIECE.
Printed and Published by
ROBERT BANKS, RACQUET COURT, FLEET ST. LONDON, E.C.
And may be had, by ordering, of any Bookseller.

CONTENTS:—

CHAPTER I.
Harrowdale Rectory. The Rector's Family. God's Own Architect. An English Parsonage. The Aged Grandmother. Hospitality to Strangers. Frances Farnwood. Restoration to the Promised Land. Discussion on "Our Identity."

CHAPTER II.
A Quiet Controversy. A God-given Dream. Guardian Angels. A Visit to Paradise. What Paradise is Like. The Occupation of Angels. Michael the Archangel. Before the Throne of God. Israel My Heritage. The Wondrous Love of Christ. Unfolding of Prophecy Concerning Israel. A Visit to Souls in Prison. The Wonders of God's Perfect Will. Hopeless Condition of Lost Souls.

CHAPTER III.
Mother's Dream. Old Mother Davis. The Village of Harrowdale Described. William Edwards the Miner. Working Men's Homes. The Miner and the Identification of Lost Israel. The Chariot Wheels of Israel. Discouragements Overcome. A Visit to Mrs. Bertram. Her Daily Life. Her Belief in the English being Lost Israel. The Sisters' Visit to Mrs. Bertram and Mother Davis. Dinner With Mother Davis. Mother Davis and the Lost Ten Tribes. God Faithful to His Promises. The Coming of Our Lord.

CHAPTER IV.
Visit of Aunt Winslow and Cousin Calvin to the Rectory. A Family Tea-party. An Anglo-Israel Meeting. Calvin and His Uncle. The Return to Palestine. Israel or Judah—Which? What the Bible Reveals. The Wanderings of Our Israelite Ancestry. The Second Coming of Christ. A Sunday Evening Identity Class. The Bible Appealed to.

CHAPTER V.
The Neighbouring Clergymen Visit the Rectory. A Mutual Understanding. Marion's Opinion of Cousin Calvin. Calvin's Opinion of His Cousin. A Sketch of Rural Life. Miss Stanmore. Matrimonial Mistakes. Marion's Firm Belief in Providence. Calvin's Engagement to Miss Stanmore. Remarks on Unequal Marriages. The Calm after a Storm. A Parable. A Pledge of Love. The Parable Explained.

CHAPTER VI.
Calvin's Belief in our Identity. Captain Johnstone Introduced. Captain Johnstone and Miss Stanmore. An Open Avowal. Calvin Released from His Engagement. The Fever-Stricken Family. Calvin's Second Visit to Harrowdale. Sympathy and Help. A Visit t the Sick Chamber.

CHAPTER VII.
Illness of the Rector's Wife. Poor Susan. Mrs. Wildman's Trust in Her Saviour. "Going Home" in the Glorious Sunshine. The Heavenly Jerusalem. The Mother's Last Charge. Calvin and Marion. Good-bye.

This book will be read with interest by both young and old, and found well suited for a BIRTHDAY GIFT, SUNDAY SCHOOL REWARD, OR PRESENT.

Price 6d., post free 7d. New work on the Identity. Dedicated to all faithful ministers of Christ.

ISRAEL! AN EARNEST APPEAL FROM THE NEW TO THE PULPIT IN FAVOUR OF OUR IDENTITY WITH GOD'S ELECT PEOPLE, ISRAEL; Being a Letter from JOHN G. SHAW to his Pastor, Rev. Eustace R. Conder, of Leeds, with an Introduction and Notes; to be followed by a Review of Mr Conder's Papers on the Lost Tribes.
By the same Author.
"BRITAIN (OR ISRAEL)," with Map. Price 8d., post free 9d.
"CHRONOLOGICAL CHART." Price 3d., post free 3½d.
"GOD'S LOVE FOR ISRAEL." Price 1d., 3 copies sent post free for 3½d.
London: ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW, WEDNESDAY, DEC. 3, 1879. [All Rights Reserved.]

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. III. No. 154. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 10, 1879. [ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
The Political Aspects of Our Identity.—Our Home and Foreign Policy as the House of Israel. Part II.	493
Syria Stretches Out Her Arms to Israel for Good Government	494
Israel's Navy as Regarded by Gentile France	494
What say the Jews to the Question, "Are the Ten Tribes Lost?"	495
A Word of Warning	495
The Sacred Cubit and the Palestine Exploration Society, Limited. By Professor Piazzi Smyth, Astronomer-Royal for Scotland	496
The Jews of Great Britain	497
Do Two Lights Create Darkness? By L. P.	497
Blind Testimony. By L. G. R.	498
Regarding the Jews. By A Vicar	498
Thoughts. By the Rev. A. J. J. Cachemaille	498
Review	498
Correspondence.—The Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association	499

THE POLITICAL ASPECTS OF OUR IDENTITY.

OUR HOME AND FOREIGN POLICY AS THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL.

(Continued from page 478.)

PART II.

IN our last we drew attention to the fact that the prediction in Isa. i. 26, appeared to us to have its fulfilment in our nation's political Constitution. In restoring to us "our judges as at the first and our counsellors as at the beginning," we pointed out there had been given us by our God the form of Government which He Himself devised and granted to Israel after they had left Egypt, and were on their journey to the Land of Promise. The Constitution of this country, based on the Crown, the Houses of Lords and Commons, had its counterpart, we showed, in the Divine king, the representative assembly, and the council of elders (earls or ealdormen) whom Moses selected out of the officers who were over the people. Having these, and no other nation possessing them in the whole earth, there was wanting, we remarked, only the reform of the three estates of the realm to make them the exact counterparts of what God gave Israel at the first as "judges."

The next subject for our inquiry now is, having such a constitution as God has approved and blessed, such as was described also by the inspired king of Israel in Psa. cvii. 32, what ought to be the politics, home and foreign, of God's people British Israel? Manifestly, as regards our domestic legislation and political action, we ought to be a people attached to the throne. Thank God we are that! No nation's heart beats truer to the monarchy than Israel's does to their Queen Victoria! God for ever bless her! Then next, there must be no doubt or hesitation in regard to the Houses of Lords and Commons. They must be preserved—reformed certainly—brought nearer to the pattern God gave us "in the beginning," but respected, honoured as the Divinely constituted and best constitutional arrangement possible for Israel's government now, and they must be earnestly prayed for! With what end? That on the elders, "earls," or House of Lords, the God of Israel will be pleased soon to pour out His Spirit, as He did on the "seventy," first set apart for their hereditary functions as "judging ones," to help God's then "Prime Minister." That the House of Commons, selected from the people soon to be "all righteous" (Isa. lx. 21), "knowing the Lord from the least of them to the greatest of them" (Jer. xxxi. 33), may be "able men," "such as fear GOD," "men of truth," "hating covetousness," fit to judge the people at all seasons (Exod. xviii. 21). In other respects it seems to us the home policy of those who know the truth of our Identity must be to advance all measures which make for the progress of the people, for their true education; for the promotion of godliness; of Sabbath keeping; for the putting away of drunkenness, of the social evil, of vice, and of all wickedness. These and many other measures and principles appear to us to be the necessary outcome of the Identity, and such as we, whatever our political creed, must strive to compass.

But what of Israel's foreign policy? On this point we must speak out with distinctness, and without fear of being misunderstood. To comprehend our true foreign policy as God's people Israel, we must realise our present position in the earth, and what God intends we should as a nation eventually become. We are even now an Eastern as well as a great Western Power. Our naval supremacy is beyond all doubt. All the ocean highways of the world are ours. We dominate in them everywhere. We hold these, and the great colonial and heathen empires of the earth besides, by reason of our possession of "The Gates." These are ours in the four quarters of the globe; God's true gifts to Israel! Why are they granted us? Because Israel is "GOD'S DOMINION!" He has decreed that "the kingdoms of this world are to become the kingdoms of our Lord and of His Christ, and He shall reign for ever and ever" (Psa. cxiv. 2; Rev. xi. 15). This DOMINION being His, and the "kingdom and dominion, and greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, being promised to the people of the saints of the Most High"—that is, to "the children of Israel"—the British—surely our readers see that our foreign policy must, and ought to be, to accept whatever enlargement of territory, power, and dominion God Himself puts within our reach and never to decline them! Thus, when in 1846 God gave us the Punjab and we refused it, we did it to our own great damage. He forced us by chastisement at last to take it! When Zululand was offered us and we declined or hesitated to accept the charge we were stimulated to action by a tremendous chastisement at Insandlwana, which forced us to accept the duty of breaking up Zululand and to assume its protectorate! When Afghanistan lay at our feet, before the treaty of Gandamuck was signed, and we refused to undertake the jurisdiction, God forced us to conquer the country and to become its masters by causing foul treachery to destroy our envoy, and thus to pass a frightful, unpardonable insult on our national honour.

Digitized by Google

So it always has been! And shall we never learn our lesson? Are we always to refuse what God insists on—namely, our domination of the earth? And are we always to force Him to chastise us till we consent to do His settled will? We think, then, our foreign policy should be to embrace all lawful openings to extend this Christian empire; to take possession of new Gates whenever offered us in all parts; and to hasten the day when the whole earth shall fall under the power of a race which, being Imperial and Cosmopolitan as well, has the will (God-given), as well as the wealth and the power (both God-given), to take the Gospel of the grace of God, the Bible, the saving knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, and the means of otherwise benefitting the Gentiles, to all the dark, fettered regions of the earth, in order to bring those that are blind, enslaved, and "out of the way," to the knowledge and freedom of Jesus Christ, the Son of God. The dominion of the world being God's, and Israel being the Lord's dominion (Psa. cxiv. 2), His battle-axe and hammer, it is ours knowing the facts, to forward God's plans, but never to thwart them. Such plans being for HIS GLORY and not ours, we are bound, we contend, to carry out His wise purposes by extending the empire of the stone (God's kingdom), till it literally "fills the whole earth" itself (Dan. ii. 35 and 44). We need not add that we would never accept "Dominion" obtained by fraud, or crooked ways, by violence or unrighteous paths, for those would not be God's. But where God opens the road Himself, we say we are nationally bound to follow it; and taking up points of vantage, to acquire new avenues of national influence whereby the Gospel may advance and the imperial rule of righteousness may prevail. Therefore we would never give up so much as a rood of the present British Empire. We would not consent to the surrender of Gibraltar to Spain, or of Malta to the Italians, of India to the Hindoos, or of Cyprus again to Turkey! We should repudiate such an act as that which gave up the Ionian Islands to Greece, and we would consent to the surrender of the Transvaal to the Boers and to barbarism at once, only when "the Vaal river should run backwards to its source, and sun and moon ceased for ever to shine in South Africa!" Would this be a policy of blood and war, and a needless meddling in the affairs of foreign nations? Not so! We would rather confine ourselves to our own world-wide Empire and its vast complications, leaving Europe to its own approaching troubles. We would speak firmly to such a Power as Turkey, and insist by threats, and if needful by direct pressure, at "The Great Gate" (destined to be ours), that the lands over which we have secured a protectorate, shall, and must, be reasonably administered. We would present a firm front to such an Empire as Russia, bidding her to take note that the limits of her rule are fixed, and beyond them she must not come, on pain of war. And these menaces would suffice! Neither Russia nor Turkey, nor both combined, are prepared to resist the British Lion's God-given strength. They would and must submit! All opposition does, and must, crumble before Israel!

Such, then, we consider is the political aspect of our Identity. Our Hebrew origin, in God's hands, shapes our political destinies, and what these destinies are, we know! God's Word tells us! It says that as to our domestic condition they point to a people "all righteous;" "whose God is the Lord;" while they are His subjects, and their political Constitution God's own devising. In reference to our foreign policy, it proclaims that its aim is universal domination; since being the stone of Daniel's metallic vision, it is surely destined, after the destruction of the Gentile polities, to grow into a great mountain AND TO FILL THE WHOLE EARTH, ITSELF!

(To be continued.)

SYRIA STRETCHES OUT HER ARMS TO ISRAEL FOR GOOD GOVERNMENT.

WE rest our proof of the allegation that Syria is crying out to the British to govern them on the statements of the correspondent of the Morning Post, published Oct. 27, 1879, and dated from Constantinople, Oct. 16. The writer said, regarding Sir Henry Layard's late tour:—

Sir Henry Layard returned last Monday. His trip seems to have been a decided success. Everywhere he found the people rivalling the authorities in their demonstrations of friendship. After all, the heartiness and coldness of valis and pashas is of slight consequence in comparison with the feelings of the great body of the inhabitants: and if we indeed run a certain risk in forming our judgment from the attitude of the mob—since cheers are too easily raised to be infallible tests—in Turkey, where silence and indifference generally prevail, the warmth, and at times enthusiasm, with which the masses greeted Sir Henry Layard must be regarded as of the utmost significance. What, then, provoked this unusual outbreak of popular sentiment? England has no particular claim to the affections of the Syrians. It is indeed true that we have assumed the protectorate of Asia Minor; but did we not exclude Syria from our sphere of operations? The Syrians answer, No! To their minds the Anglo-Turkish Convention is merely the thin edge of the wedge. The true political instincts of the people of Syria and Asia Minor lead them to turn with eagerness towards the British Empire. To repulse them would be to commit the fatal error of driving them into the arms of another Power, for under the shield of some State able to protect them they are determined to be. Recollect that there is no need to pull down the Crescent if we accept the responsibility. We should simply have to secure to these provinces a sound, just, and honest administration, and this we could do without injuring the Sultan's authority. And at no period has it ever been more requisite that Great Britain should strengthen herself in the East.

Why do "the people of Syria and Asia Minor politically turn with eagerness towards the British Empire?" Because the British being Israel, "they are the seed the Lord hath blessed," and the Syrians and Asiatics seeing them, acknowledge "they are so." Because, also, to this race, as Israel, is reserved "the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, as the people of the saints of the Most High" (Isa. lxi. 9; Dan. vii. 27).

ISRAEL'S NAVY AS REGARDED BY GENTILE FRANCE.

IN our leading article in BANNER, No. 152, we quoted the Times of Sept. 24, to show that our navy is now "stronger than any probable combination of foreign navies." We have now to present our readers with a Gentile confirmation of that verdict taken from the Standard of Nov. 19, 1879. That paper quoted the Parisian Liberté, a financial and commercial journal, which, speaking of the late Turkish complications, declared regarding reported intrigues between Russia and Turkey, as follows:—

In the presence of these intrigues, more or less disguised, England did not hesitate. She determined not to be trifled with, and to put an end to any mysterious plotting. She resolutely faced and met the danger. Armed with her private treaty, she required its fulfilment, AND HER FLEET—THAT MIGHTY FLEET WHICH, AFTER ALL, IS ABLE TO COPE WITH ALL THE NAVIES OF THE UNIVERSE—WAS set in motion to support the British ultimatum. This show of energy did the business. The Porte gave way, and Russia herself, if it i-true that she had founded hopes on the Sultan's resistance, has been compelled to postpone her designs. We can now understand Lord Beaconsfield's speech at the Guildhall. England will never allow Russian influence to be paramount in the Sultan's Councils. She fought that influence in Afghanistan, and will combat it in Turkey. It is her Indian Empire she is defending, and while she is protecting her own interests she is also protecting the interests of Europe. No one in England dreams of destroying the Turkish Empire and taking possession of it, as no other Power will be allowed to do so; and thus we regard England's private treaty, taken together with the Treaty of Berlin, as a guarantee that that peace which all stand so much in need of, will not be destroyed. It is on these grounds that we applaud the policy of England as energetic, prudent, and in the highest degree calculated to prevent complications and secure the repose of Europe.

Digitized by Google

WHAT SAY THE JEWS TO THE QUESTION—"ARE THE TEN TRIBES LOST?"

IT is the fashion in some quarters to deny the fact that Israel was "lost," and to assert that the Ten Tribes were not "lost;" also, that they returned with Ezra and Zerubbabel from Babylon in B.C. 530, and are now amalgamated with the Jews. What say the Jews themselves, however, to these assertions? If any one ought to know the truth, they should! Do they lend countenance to this modern argument of "our opponents?" Certainly not!

We proceed to quote the first few sentences from an article published on Dec. 13th, 1878, in The Jewish Chronicle, on the subject now under consideration, and headed "The Lost Ten Tribes." The Jews do not admit the truth of our contention regarding our "Identity," but they are not stupid enough to allege that the Ten Tribes are now in union, and amalgamated with themselves. They know better than that! Let the reader carefully weigh the following, recollecting they are the views of a well-educated Jew, one by race, and by religious convictions too. The writer, who is, we believe, also the editor, says respecting

THE LOST TEN TRIBES,

We can only approximately guess how much learned speculation has been wasted in the endeavour to trace the existence of the Ten Tribes, who appear to have vanished out of the world leaving little behind them but a name in history, and ample food for the recondite speculations of literary leisure. Theory after theory has been advanced only to be cast aside, as ingenious at the best, but entirely unworthy of credence. It may be that among the multitude of conjectures there have been some which approach more or less near the truth, but when no one is able to determine where the truth lies, the conflict of theories is continued with no practical result, and the Ten Tribes of Israel remain "lost" as before—hidden somewhere in a cloudland, deepening in density as the centuries roll on. It may be said, and with some little show of truth, that these conjectures, shallow or learned as the case may be, have served the purpose of keeping alive an interest in the fortunes of our brethren who are living in lands remote from the civilising influences of Europe; and, further, that in causing search to be undertaken for descendants of those who once did exist, many valuable discoveries have been made. But side by side with discoveries of real value, there has been a great deal of so-called "discovery" which has served no practical purpose, and only furnished hypothesis-makers with fanciful trimmings for bald theories. Dr. Hermann Adler, in a recent sermon at the Bayswater Synagogue, has directed communal attention once more to the fate of the "Lost Ten Tribes," and has, as is his custom, put forth some practical suggestions which are well worth consideration. Now, it will scarcely be denied by the great majority that the special interest which surrounds the Ten Tribes is that they are "Lost." If by any accident they were to be discovered living in a "Happy Valley" in some out-of-the-way part of the world, uncontaminated and unvexed by the anxieties of the nineteenth century civilisation as we understand it, the subtle and mysterious charms which now surround them would be lost. The Anglo-Saxon race would in the eyes of some people lose its great privilege of Israelitish relationship, and even the poor Afghans would suffer a heavy discount in the market of physiological and speculative romance.

So far the Jewish journalist writing only four months ago. He knows nothing of the utter disappearance of Israel or of the amalgamation of the Ten Tribes among his own people, the House of Judah. The special interest which surrounds the Ten Tribes, says the Jew, "is that they are lost." Nothing can be clearer than this testimony! Similar is the evidence of modern Jewish historians writing of the "Lost House of the Ten-Tribed Israelites."

The Misses C. and A. De Rothschild, in their "History and Literature of the Israelites" (London, 1870, vol. i., cap. 129, page 489), say:—

The Israelites were, almost without exception, ruled by weak or sinful kings. The gloom of their history is rarely relieved by a ray of prosperity or hope, yet their ultimate fate of being entirely merged in the race of their hated conquerors, is full of melancholy and touching interest. For the Ten Tribes of Israel were not even permitted, like the sister kingdom of Judah, to bequeath to later ages and Western nations, the memory of rich and varied destinies. They were irretrievably lost; and a deep and impenetrable silence clings around their dispersion.

These Jewish ladies, differing from the Jewish journalist, believe Israel of the Ten-Tribed House were mixed with the Gentiles, and so "lost." Both agree that the "sister kingdom of Judah" has none of them now in safe keeping or amalgamation. The Jews contradicting each other thus as to the whereabouts of Israel, the matter is at large, and our proofs as to the discovery of the Tribes await their consideration.

A WORD OF WARNING.

THE SCRIPTURE TESTIMONY REGARDING Η ΣΩΤΗΡΙΑ

"Go ye into all the world, and preach the Gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned" (Mark xvi. 16).

"He that believeth not is condemned already, because he hath not believed on the name of the only begotten Son of God" (John iii. 18).

"Thus it behoved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day: and that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in His name among ALL nations, beginning at Jerusalem" (Luke xxiv. 46, 47).

It appears, then, that "THE salvation" for the Jews can only be had on the same terms as it is offered to Gentiles and Israel—viz., by repentance, and by faith in the Lord Jesus Christ.

That Jews as well as Gentiles are in need of this salvation, and are "lost" without it, are facts testified by Rom. iii. 9—31; John iii. 14—18, 35, 36. None can dispute the doctrine there laid down. Similar is the testimony borne by 1 John ii. 1, 2, v. 10, 13, John vi. 47; Acts iv. 12, xiii. 38, 39, 41. This last text was addressed to Jews only.

Acts xiii. 46 is a solemn passage to those who allege that the Jews are under a different obligation regarding "THE salvation" from that by which Gentiles and Israelites are bound. St. Paul told the Jews, who were blaspheming and contradicting his Gospel, that "It was necessary that the Word of God should FIRST have been spoken to you: BUT seeing ye put it from you, and judge yourselves unworthy of everlasting life, lo, we turn to the Gentiles." Thus "THE salvation" for the Jews, was bound up in St. Paul's days with acceptance of the Gospel of Christ, and its rejection entailed self-condemnation and LOSS of everlasting life for them. Has anything happened since to alter the conditions by which the Jews can be accepted by the Lord, and thus only partake of THE salvation?

Acts xvi. 31 was addressed to Gentiles only, and it shows that they, as well as the Jews, were, and are, under one rule in regard to the soul's safety.

The conclusion of the whole matter is this:—Luther's fundamental principle "of a falling or a standing Church" holds good both for Jews, Gentiles, and Israelites to-day! They can find "THE salvation which is OF the Jews" (John iv. 22) only through "repentance towards God and faith towards our Lord Jesus Christ" (Acts xx. 21). This was St. Paul's inspired testimony regarding "both Jews and Gentiles," as the passage itself proves, and woe be to us, as believers in our Identity, or to anyone else, who dares to shake that foundation laid in the blood, the precious blood, of the SON OF GOD! Jews, Gentiles, or Israelites rejecting this only remedy to-day, do so at their own proper, personal peril.

Digitized by Google

THE SACRED CUBIT AND THE PALESTINE EXPLORATION SOCIETY, LIMITED.

(A LETTER.)

MY DEAR FRIENDS,—When one of you in the West, and then another in the South, write so earnestly desiring me to answer the recent article on "The Sacred Cubit," in the "Quarterly Statement of the Palestine Exploration Fund for October, 1879," pp. 181—184, I cannot but deeply sympathise with you on the violence which has been done to your ideas of what is in this case just, true, and long since of good report.

Under the name of the one and only Sacred Cubit which is possible for them, Christians generally, and Israelite-Christians in particular, have learned a great deal of late years; and have found so much of it bound up with Scriptural expressions in religion, and superlative exactness in cosmical science of the highest range, that they cannot but feel exceedingly surprised at the Palestine Exploration Society, of all other societies in the kingdom, having just assisted a Mr. S. B. to rush into the subject with their types, declare everything hitherto supposed settled, even in the grandest manner, to be totally erroneous, and to bring out instead sundry new and raw inventions of his own.

The amount of mischief that will be done is perhaps incalculable; for the said society has such large printing and publishing agencies, such an array of learned divines, noble lords, and wealthy commoners to subscribe to its funds and guarantee its statements, that nearly the whole religious public already follows them in whatever they give out; and in the present matter, who can save them?

No one man whatever. It depends on the pleasure of God alone, whether the following of the Palestine Association are to see the light of truth again in this most important, "sacred" subject of the day wherein we are living.

But for yourselves, my friends, you whose letters testify that you, two individuals only, have not been deceived; and who have been for years past well accustomed to study this question down to its very foundations, and have found the calm, the stedfastness, and the consolations of the Rock of Ages; you have no need that I should attempt to write anything. It is for you merely to think for a moment, to remember the principles you have long since learned to respect, and the new theory spontaneously falls into pieces before you.

Let us take an example:

That practical weights and measures can only be settled by practical and doubly contemporary exhibited specimens, is now the full and final outcome of all the metrological history of not only this country, but of all the civilised world. In perfect conformity with which grandly deduced principle, the really Sacred Cubit of the Bible—viz., the cubit of Noah and Moses—as you have learned to know and respect it, may be seen still and tested, in its nearly 25 British inch length, by positive examples in both granite, limestone, and living rock in a prophetical stone building dating even from before Moses; a grand building stamped with the inspired words of the Messianic Hebrew prophet, and visited daily still, as through centuries past, by a ceaseless train of European travellers.

Surely that is a foundation for your belief in what "the Sacred Cubit" really is, in the matter of length, not very easily disturbed either in character, age, world-wide notoriety, or Scripture documentation. And what does the Palestine Exploration book set forth on its most opposite side?

Their author, "S. B.," writes thus on p. 182: "The formula I have adopted for the actual value of a cubit (the Sacred Cubit of the essay) is $\sqrt{3{\cdot}14159} \times 10 = 17{\cdot}7245$ inches."

That is—he has no example contemporary with the times of the Theocratic lives of the Israelites; nothing at all of that age to show; only his own opinion to set forth, formed on his own will; he, a man living in the present day amongst us. And what an opinion for the sense thereof. It states that the square root of the quantity 3·1459 (which every Pyramid reader will perceive is the well-known π, pi, of the Great Pyramid), when multipled by 10, makes or yields "17·7245 inches." But where did Mr. S. B. get the inches from? He might just as well have called his numbers miles, or leagues, or anything; for his formula is merely a piece of arithmetic, which expresses itself necessarily in certain numbers, but has no reference to any unit or standard of linear measurement whatever.

To get, therefore, any cubit at all in that way, is folly; but to pretend to obtain the Sacred Cubit of the God of Israel in that manner, is far worse; yet is it not the end of the lamentable stumblings of "S. B.?" for thus he follows up and intensifies his first error:

"And I" (S. B.) "regard $\sqrt{3{\cdot}14159}$ as the ancient standard or canon of proportion, and the foundation of every standard of length and capacity used by the ancients."

Here, my friends, you see once again that the sole metrological authority with "S. B." is his own will; and what an awful and anti-sacred position generally, it leads him into. For he would make out that all the profane, idolatrous, and Cainite nations of old possessed the same idea, which he would pretend constituted the peculiar virtue of the Sacred Cubit of the Bible.

How happy you should be, you two who trust in the truth, that the length we have believed to distinguish the Sacred Cubit of the God we, and all the best of our fathers from Abraham, have worshipped, contains nothing of that one thing which "S. B.," whether rightly or wrongly, attributes to the ancients generally. The religion of Revelation in all its accompaniments, as well as in its central ideas, is perfectly distinct from the idolatries invented by man.

Indeed you may see evidently, that whatever lamentable assertions have appeared in the "Palestine Exploration Journal," your position is not disturbed in the slightest degree. And, in fact, there is only one other point to which it is in any way worth while to call your attention—as thus: After having formed his own mental idea of what ought to be the Sacred Cubit's length, "S. B." then proceeds to apply it to recorded measures of actual buildings in Palestine, and declares it must be correct because it fits them exactly.

But what are the buildings so fitted?

They should be of the same primeval age as the first giving forth of the Sacred Cubit, and of the events described in the Pentateuch;—i.e., in an age when God was graciously pleased, on certain occasions, to speak with man; and the Abrahamic promises, on which the whole Anglo-Saxon race is now counting so much, were ordained and established for as long as the sun and moon should endure.

The following are the nearest approaches that "S. B." makes to what is required:—In his first case he speaks of a Roman-dated arch, and quotes a measure of it from Josephus about 70 A.D. And in his second case, "S. B." actually refers to no older a document than an Arab MS. of 1444 A.D.

But what possible authority of the contemporary kind can those very recent cases be in matters of Abraham, Isaac, and

Digitized by Google

Jacob, and what the Spirit of God did appoint to them in their day and for evermore?

The application of the stated principle of test to merely mediæval cases of modern Palestine exploration, can only bring out the measures of the moderate times they belong to. And if it has already, in "S. B.'s" hands, brought out something very near to 18 inches for a cubit, that is by no means because the Sacred Cubit of old was of that length; but because Josephus lived in a late, degraded, and impious day of Jerusalem, when the Jews both spoke and wrote Greek, used the Greek cubit 18 inches long, crucified Christ the Son of God; positively desired that His blood should be upon them and their children; and did everything they possibly could, to convince a subsequent Christian world that at that time they, the Jews, had not the oracles of God with them; neither His precepts in their hearts, nor His Sacred Cubit in their hands or before their eyes! The blood, therefore, of the Crucifixion does not soil the 25 inch cubit of the Great Pyramid, but lies thick on that profane 18 inch cubit, nearly, which the Palestine Exploration Society is rashly affirming must be the Sacred Cubit of God, the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ!

PIAZZI SMYTH.

THE JEWS OF GREAT BRITAIN.

THE Globe newspaper some months ago published a remarkable article on the Jews of modern England, in which it broaches the view that the British Jews are being absorbed into the Anglo-Saxon race, and that thus a "theory recently revived by a writer on prophecy" (evidently Mr. Edward Hine), "regarding the merging of the missing Ten Tribes in the present inhabitants of Great Britain," is corroborated and supported by actual facts. We republish a portion of this article for the reader's information.

We remark the striking fact, if such it be, that just as the time approaches when, according to God's Word, "the House of Judah shall walk to the House of Israel, and they shall come together out of the land of the North to the land the Lord hath given to their fathers for an inheritance,"—just at that very epoch, it should be found that an amalgamation of Judah with the British-Israelite population is commencing—a prelude and promise of the time when Judah and Israel shall be "no more two nations and two kingdoms, but one nation and one kingdom on the mountains of Israel" (Ezek. xxxvii. 22).

The editor of the Globe said:—

"Wherever fashion exhibits itself, the Jew is now part of the show. The proudest of our best descended people accept his hospitalities, and his children intermarry with the families of our aristocracy. And what is done in this respect by our great families is done also by our gentlefolk of inferior rank and status.

"This being so, a question arises respecting the future of our Jews. So long as Christians kept aloof from them, and deemed intermarriage a physical contamination and a moral defilement, it is not wonderful that Jews remained a separate and distinct people. It was physically impossible for them to be lost in a people that refused to be intimate with them, or for familiar purposes even to touch them. But under the new conditions of English society such a fusion of the two races is not only possible, but in some degree probable. For whilst the Christians of our country exhibit increasing tolerance of Judaic thought and usages, the Hebrews are seen to avail themselves gladly of their new opportunities for blending with our people. In their eagerness for a complete absorption into their adopted nation, or at least in their desire to be taken for genuine English folk, our London Jews are seen to modify the spelling of their surnames, or to assume the names of our historic families. Every new volume of Mr. Kelly's 'Directory' contains a larger number of Jewish names that have been artfully manipulated into English ones; and in every quarter of the town the bearers of these cleverly doctored patronymics pass for Christians with their ordinary Christian acquaintances, or at most labour only under a faint suspicion of secret Judaism. Are not these facts so many indications that the Jews of England will at no very distant date be amalgamated with the ordinary stock of the country? To answer this question in the affirmative is not to declare disbelief, or even to suggest a doubt, respecting the eventual fulfilment of the sacred prophecies touching the chosen people. Even if the English Jews should be thus inseparably incorporated with the Saxon race, the bulk of the Israelitish people would still remain for the complete accomplishment of the Biblical predictions. Such absorptions of branches of the Israelitish people have taken place in past times. It is the general opinion that the Lost Tribes were removed from history through their amalgamation with other peoples. Indeed, the theory revived by a recent writer on prophecy, whose doctrines have the approval of some of our religious schools and circles, is that the missing Tribes were somehow merged and lost in the present inhabitants of Great Britain. Anyhow, it is certain that one great absorption of Israelitish populace has taken place in this country. Though some fifteen or sixteen thousand English Jews preferred exile to conversion in Edward I.'s time, several thousands of their brethren took the less heroic course and were converted to Christianity in order that they might retain their diminished wealth and remain in England. There is no question that these 'New Christians' of Plantagenet England were absorbed into the English commonwealth. Such an absorption of Jews having been accomplished by our forefathers of mediæval England, why should not a larger multitude of Israelites be absorbed by the English of the nineteenth and following centuries?

DO TWO LIGHTS CREATE DARKNESS?

THE fears of Anglo-Israel opponents take various forms. One is, that this belief interferes with a due appreciation of our Christian privileges; that it "shunts us off the main line," to use an expression applied to the subject by a late writer in the Christian.

It is a poor compliment, if we may use such a term, when speaking of this most serious subject, to deem the glory of Christ's gift of salvation is dimmed by Israel's promised earthly and spiritual blessings, past, present, and to come.

But we are aware arguments of this kind have no influence on those who, instead of carefully weighing them, put them hastily aside. Therefore, we will turn on them, and ask, in the name of mercy and pity, why they seek to add to the terrible responsibilities of our Jewish brethren, by trying to bring them to a knowledge of Christ Jesus, to whom, if converted, they must, in spite of themselves, offer an added insult to those of which they are already guilty. Poor souls! they cannot, if they would forget who they are; they cannot deny their descent from the chosen people of the God of Israel; they cannot refuse to believe they are heirs, with the other Tribes, of the future glorified Promised Land; they cannot cease to know they are destined to dwell in and about a restored and perfected Jerusalem, in a country abounding with every source of wealth and comfort, under the especial blessing and government of God, while to their capital the steps of all the world will be bent to hear and learn about Jehovah.

If this knowledge is to cause the Messiah to be dishonoured afresh, to be put aside as a secondary subject for adoring gratitude, and the worship of Him is to be lost in worship of their own coming greatness, then, we say, better they should remain ignorant of Him altogether. They will be weighted more heavily with sin than heretofore if they are taught to believe in the atoning sacrifice of the Lord Jesus, and then when converted say: Secondly we are Christians, but first and above all we are Israel. This, according to the arguments of our opponents, must be expected on the conversion of the Jews to Christianity, IF we being Christians, the natural result of believing we are also Israel, would be to make us despise the former for the latter privilege.

Digitized by Google

Who can rightly dare to say that any light from heaven shall quench or dull another brighter one springing from the same source? Rather shall they mix, and blend, and intertwine one with the other, increasing, if possible, the brilliancy of each, to the glory of the Giver of all light, and life, and salvation, through Himself, the Sun of Righteousness.

L. P.

November.

BLIND TESTIMONY (JER. XXX. 11.)

BY L. G. R.

"THE 20,000,000 of Indians our forefathers found in North America have dwindled down to 2,000,000. The 200,000 natives found by Captain Cook in 1776, at Tahiti, have been reduced to 8,000; the Sandwich Islanders from 400,000 to 80,000; the Maories, in forty years, from 1836, have decreased from 180,000 to 40,000; the Tasmanians are gone. Brainerd's translations are unintelligible; not one of his Delaware Indians survives. The subjects of Montegunia have vanished like a dream; gloomy is the prospect of the Moravian missions in Greenland and Labrador. Humboldt met with only one creature that could then speak any words of a once mighty Indian nation's language, and that survivor was a parrot that had outlived its teachers"

[Extracted from Bishop Ridley's "Appeal," first Bishop of Caledonia. September No. of Missionary Gleaner, 1879.]

"THERE is more likeness than contrast between the way we English got our island and the way the Israelites got Canaan. We have not been noted for forming a low estimate of ourselves in comparison with foreigners, or for admitting that our institutions are equalled by those of any other people under the sun. . . . . Again, it has been held that we have a peculiar destiny as a Protestant people, not only able to bruise the head of an idolatrous Christianity in the midst of us, but fitted, as possessors of the most truth and the most tonnage, to carry our purer religion over the world and convert mankind to our way of thinking. The Puritans, asserting their liberty to restrain tyrants, found the Hebrew history closely symbolical of their feelings and purpose; and it can hardly be correct to cast the blame of their less laudable doings on the writings they invoked, since their opponents made use of the same writings for different ends. . . . . We must rather refer the passionate use of the Hebrew writings to affinities of disposition between our own race and the Jewish.—From The Modern Hep! Hep! Hep! Forwarded by L. P.

REGARDING THE JEWS.

BY A VICAR.

THE 11th of Romans is a very wealthy chapter, and will, no doubt, repay study, which will yield much instruction in our cause. There is matter concerning the Jews which we may well note as being favourable to them in a special manner. It will go to refute the charge of short justice done to them by us. I refer more particularly to the purposes wrought by their rejection of Christianity, and the glorious reversion of their condition upon their obedience. Not only has salvation, revelation, &c., come to the Ten, and to the Gentiles through their rejection of Christ—a blessing great enough in itself—but also, it seems to me, that their rejection and obstinacy has served, and still serves, the purpose of keeping alive the expectation of the fulfilment, both material and spiritual, of the promises made to Abraham (Rom. xi. 11, 30, 31). Were it not so, the still futurity and peculiar nature of those promises would be forgotten or lost sight of. The determined way in which all God's promises are made to refer merely to a spiritual Israel, and to things spiritual, is greatly counteracted by the presence of the Jew in the world; except for these I can almost imagine that we should have declined the possibility of there being actual descendants to inherit actual promises. Further than this, it does not seem to be remembered that, after all, the Jews are sharing very largely the prominence and the blessing which attaches to Israel, even though some may say that it is merely representative; for, Judah was to hold the sceptre and give the law until Shiloh came, not as I understand commentators to say, at our Lord's first advent, for it is with great difficulty that an appearance of such a fulfilment occurred at the first advent, but rather until Shiloh comes, and the gathering of THE people to Him take place—i.e., to the end of this dispensation, when the two sticks become one in the hand. Now, if this is so, the case of the Jews is not so utterly despised as some suppose, they have not stumbled, that they should fall; indeed, at the head of this great nation of Israel sits the ruler of the Tribe of Judah, Her Majesty Queen Victoria; the Jews are, therefore, represented in her, and actually rule the destinies of Israel's Empire. The prospect, moreover, constantly before them, is "the receiving of them," which, as compared with their casting away, will be so full of blessing that it will be as life from the dead.

I have taken the translation which the Rev. W. Saumarez Smith B.D., Principal of St. Aidan's College, gives of Gen. xlix. 10—viz., "There-shall-not-depart sceptre from-YHUDAH, nor-lawgiver from-between his-feet; until that-there-come SHILOH, and-to-Him [shall be] obedience-of peoples," where the gathering of the peoples seems to be an event coincident in time with the coming of Shiloh.

I have been writing above merely a train of thought, which is not at all worked out, but it is put down in order to send it through the mill of thought, in the hope of fine flour coming out at the finish.

In connection with Gen. xlix. 10, "the gathering of the peoples," we should read Hag. ii. 7: "The desire of all nations," and, shall I say, put for "all nations"—"the Twelve Tribes?" Haggai prophesied during the time of the governors of Jerusalem, after the captivity.

THOUGHTS.

BY THE REV. A. J. J. CACHEMAILLE,
Vicar of Oldham.

1. HOW strange it is that people cannot see there is no collision between a spiritual truth and an actual material truth, such as our Identity offers to our contemplation! I suppose this is the "blindness in part" that has happened to Israel. They have a moral, mental, or spiritual obliquity of vision.

o o o o

2. Mr. James Rankin has very well written on the translation of Luke ii. 32 in BANNER, No. 133, page 291. It seems to me that ἐθνῶν in this passage should refer to the Ten Tribes, and λαοῦ σου Ἰσραήλ to the Twelve Tribes. The ἔθνος of John xi. 49, &c., is peculiarly accurate for the Jewish nation; whereas ἐθνων of Rom. ix. 12 and 13, and Luke ii. 32, is equally accurate for the Ten Tribes; for besides the fact of their numerical majority, there was the promise that they were to be "a nation and a company of nations." They could not, therefore, be spoken of in the singular number as merely "the nation" or "kingdom of Israel," for they truly were "the nations of Israel." In Luke ii. 32, I should refer δόξαν λαοῦ σου to the whole Twelve Tribes, and φως. . . . . ἐθνῶν to the Ten. Actual facts are in accord with this. Christ has been "the light" which revealed the Ten, as He will be "the glory" of the Twelve. Therefore, I suppose, τὸ ἔθνος	would mean	the Jews.

τὰ ἔθνη	" "	the Ten Tribes.
ὁ λαος σου Ἰσραήλ	" "	= the Twelve Tribes.

Review.

Israel! An Earnest Appeal from the Pew to the Pulpit. By John Gilder Shaw. Price Sixpence. Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street. S. W. Partridge and Co., 2, Paternoster-row.

WE are glad Mr. Shaw has published this valuable work in a separate form. In its original manuscript it was offered by the author to the pages of the BANNER OF ISRAEL some months ago; but we were unable to accept it because of its length, and from the fact that it seemed to us unsuitable in various ways to a weekly serial, where shorter articles, sub-divided into telling chapters, are better appreciated naturally, than such a clear but exhaustive argument as our author has brought to bear on his unbelieving pastor, the Rev. E. R. Conder, M.A., of Leeds.

After a preface and introduction, which the reader should by no means miss, the earnest layman who so boldly appeals from the pew to the pulpit (whence he is spiritually taught), opens on his minister the battery which he calls "Israel!" Mr. Shaw's views are too well known from his other works to need any recommendation or illustration from us. Suffice it to say, he is a full supporter of all the teaching which finds its expression in the BANNER OF ISRAEL, and in the best of Mr. E. Hine's works. Accordingly, we find these largely quoted. The Rev. E. R. Conder, it seems, is an opponent of Israelite teaching, and that of the most decided kind. He holds that the Jews represent the whole Twelve Tribes now. He spiritualises many of the promises, though not all, and considers that in so doing he is honouring God, since "the spiritual sense is the higher sense" (page 28). Herein Mr. Shaw grapples with his pastor, and shows him that "to be spiritual" is one thing, but "to spiritualise," and thus evaporate all God's promises, is another. Mr. Shaw hits the point when he tells Mr. Conder that "the idea of a spiritual Israel other than a real Israel made perfectly righteous, is preposterous!"

Digitized by Google

The work which we are discussing is a close, clear, consistent argument, without break or pause from first to last, and therefore one to which, we fear, no review can do justice. To give the reader a good idea of its power entire pages should be transcribed and quoted. Our space forbids that; but we must give our readers one gem of an argument which runs quite parallel with what we ourselves so constantly urge as to the necessity God is under with reference to His faithfulness, His oath, His truth, and His covenants with Abraham, to give what He promised him to Hebrews only, but to Gentiles never. As we have these covenants and promises, the argument stands that we must be Hebrews; or God is a God who is unfaithful to His own solemn oath (which God forbid!).

Mr. Shaw, at page 32, says: "I cannot see how any Gentile nation could possibly be in possession of the blessings—taken in the aggregate—promised unconditionally to Abraham, unless God broke His oath to Abraham—unless, too, our covenant-keeping God had altogether changed His character. . . . . If God had thus changed, should we not find some faint approach to a parallel in a loving father—say an Englishman—vowing to give some substantial gifts to his son, which said gifts were to remain as an heirloom in his family for ever. And in defiance of his oath, that loving (?) father sought some Caffre, Hottentot, or North American Indian, and not only bestowed the gifts upon such a man, but entailed them to his family? Would not the descendants of such a father have just reason to curse his memory? But anything approaching to this conduct could never be perpetrated by the God of Abraham, who has said, 'I will not suffer My faithfulness to fail'" (Psa. lxxxix. 33).

The little volume sparkles with passages like this, and we need not say that we recommend the book. We do so heartily, and re-echo the Rev. C. W. Hickson's opinion, which appears at the end of a letter he addressed to Mr. G. Shaw, published at page 64: "It is excellent." We have only one suggestion to make in reference to this work. It would, we think, be improved in the second edition if it could be sub-divided into chapters, or sections, each with its appropriate subject noted. This is often a relief to the eye, and a guide to the reader in the careful perusal of a book—both matters of some importance when the difficulty is to get men and women to read to any purpose at all.

Correspondence.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—In reference to your remarks upon "Israel's Chronological Chart," at page 466 in this week's issue of the BANNER, I would observe that while diversities of opinion do, and must, exist, as to the interpretation, or symbolism, of the various features of the Great Pyramid, it is of the utmost importance to maintain the integrity of the measurements as given to us by Professor P. Smyth in "Life and Work."

Whether the true length of the grand gallery be 1881·6 as claimed by Mr. James Simpson, or 1910, as assumed by Mr. Walsh, may, in some minds, be open to a question, and I should be loath to make any assertion on the matter. But when Mr. Walsh takes 1,878 as the end of the ceiling of the grand gallery, he is manifestly in error on either view of the grand gallery length. For 1881·6 minus (seven overlappings, and the amount due to the one degree of the impendence of the South wall) 26·79, gives 1854·8 for the end of the ceiling. And if we take 1,910 minus 26·79, we have 1883·31 for the same, so that in neither view of the subject can 1,878 (by whatever process that number is arrived at) represent the point on the floor at which a plumb-line dropped from the end of the ceiling would strike it.

I am, yours faithfully,

SYDNEY HALL, C.E.

London, Nov. 20, 1879.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

MY DEAR PHILO-ISRAEL,—I have been so constantly and intimately associated with the clergy all my life, that I feel but little surprise, although much sorrow, at the blindness prevailing amongst them with reference to our Identity with Ten-Tribed Israel.

Their sermons are almost invariably confined to dissertations on detached texts of Scripture, seldom going beyond the moral and religious lessons therein inculcated. The wider range of prophecy is rarely entered upon, as to do so would call for much research and labour, and require more leisure than many possess, thanks to the multiplied services now said to be necessary, on week-days as well as Sabbaths, although there is for such no warranty in Scripture. Probably, also, those who have hitherto looked upon the names of Judah and Israel as referring to the same people, find it difficult to admit their error, or rather, their want of attentive consideration of those passages of Scripture in which each is so distinctly mentioned, and to which such opposite careers are assigned, and, like Mr. Clifford and his party, are far too much accustomed to work in one narrow groove to endure the idea of quitting it, however old and worn out it may be.

For myself, who have from early life delighted in the study of prophecy, the light thrown upon the apparent contradictions contained in them, by the belief in our Identity, has been a joy and comfort to my heart, by the proofs that this knowledge affords, that God's purposes of love and mercy to the children of His friend, are daily being fulfilled, and that very soon the long-lost, but now found, Ten Tribes of Israel, will be joined to their brethren of the Two Tribes, Judah and Levi—one people under one King.

A RECTOR'S WIFE.

October, 1879.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

We re-publish the following circular, as requested, with our best wishes for its success.—EDITOR.

DEAR SIR,—In consequence of the increasing work of this Association the Committee have felt it to be necessary for them to remove to more commodious offices in a prominent central position, easily accessible to all its Members and Friends interested in its operations. They have therefore secured very suitable accommodation at No. 334 STRAND, opposite Somerset House. One of the rooms will be so furnished as to form a comfortable meeting place for about sixty or seventy persons, and it is arranged that Weekly Meetings for Prayer and Addresses shall be held therein, to be conducted by prominent friends of the Identity Cause.

The Committee are most anxious that the expenses of Furnishing these offices shall not be defrayed out of the General Fund of the Society, but by special donation given for that purpose; and have therefore among themselves contributed for this object part of the necessary funds. May I be permitted to seek your co-operation in accomplishing this task, by asking your kindly assistance in contributing however small a sum to attain the desired aim of opening and furnishing the offices free of debt? The sum required will be about £50. Faithfully yours,

JAMES BILLINGTON,
Hon. Sec.

20, Warwick Lane, London, E.C.,
November 17, 1879.

DONATIONS TO FUND FOR FURNISHING NEW OFFICES, 334, STRAND, W.C.

	£	s.	d.
The Lady Jane Ellice...	1	0	0
Captain Bayly, R.N. ...	1	1	0
Captain John Fenwick	2	18	0
E. W. Bird, Esq.....	1	1	0
Douglas A. Onslow, Esq. J.P.	0	10	6
James L. Wood, Esq...	1	1	0
Robert Banks, Esq.....	1	1	0
W. H. Peters, Esq., J.P.	1	1	0
H. L. Guerrier, Esq.....	1	1	0
Miss M. C. Smith.....	0	10	0
"Delta".....	1	0	0
L. Biden, Esq.	1	1	0
Mrs. Butterworth.....	1	0	0
Mrs. Charles Fox	1	0	0
Miss J. Lawrence.....	1	1	0
J. T. Fletcher, Esq., J.P.	1	1	0
Promised: Messrs. Rugg, Danvers, Haslam, 21s. each	3	3	0
TOTAL ...	£20	10	0

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements
(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O O payable at Ludgate-circus.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed :—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

BANNER FREE CIRCULATION FUND Subscriptions, which are much needed, will be received by R. Fergusson Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, to whom applications for FREE GRANTS should be made.

A Believing Reader - - - - - - - - - - 5s.

FRIENDS of the Identity are invited to attend DRAWING-ROOM READINGS in the Minor Prophets, by the Rev. H. MARRIOTT, at 30, LADBROKE GARDENS, KENSINGTON, at 3 p.m., on the 10th and 17th of December.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.
PRESIDENT: VISCOUNT FOLKESTONE, M.P.

The Hon. Sec. will be pleased to receive APPLICATIONS FOR LECTURES, irrespective of distance, for the New Year. In addition to those delivered with marked success during the last few months under the auspices of this Association, the following NEW LECTURES are specially prepared:—

DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, Esq., J.P. Subject: "The Anglo-Saxons—the Chosen People."

CHARLES STUBBS, Esq., B.A. (London University). Subject: "Our Scythian Ancestors."

REV. JAMES BILLINGTON, F.S.A., F.R.H.S. Subject: "England's Place in Universal History."

The terms are such as specially commend these Lectures to Identity friends. Address, Offices, 334, Strand, W.C.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.
PRESIDENT: VISCOUNT FOLKESTONE, M.P.

The REV. JAMES BILLINGON, F.S.A., F.R.H.S., will LECTURE as follows:—
TUESDAY, DECEMBER 9, BEDFORD.
Particulars will be locally announced.

THE MIDNIGHT CRY; or, WORDS OF SOLEMN WARNING.
Second edition, price 1d.; post free 1½d.; for distribution, 6s. per 100. W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

ROBERT BANKS'S CATALOGUE OF WORKS ON THE IDENTITY OF THE BRITISH PEOPLE WITH THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL will be sent to any address, post free, on application, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London.

Third edition, ninth thousand. Price 6d., post free 7d. limp cloth 1s.

HISTORY OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL: HOW THEY WERE LOST AND HOW THEY WERE FOUND. Told for the Children by PHILO-ISRAEL.

OUR IDENTITY WITH THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. By PHILO-ISRAEL. Price 4d. Third Thousand (reprinted from the Clifton Chronicle).

ARE THE ENGLISH PEOPLE THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL? Price 4d.

London: W. H Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row; and Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

Price 1s. Post free, 1s. 1d.

ISRAEL'S CHRONOLOGICAL CHART, with EXPLANATORY NOTES.—This Chart, compiled from the Old Testament on a new system, gives the A.M. and B.C. dates of one hundred important events in Israel's history, and exhibits the perfect agreement of Scripture with the marks and measurements of the Great Pyramid of Ghizeh.

May be had of the Author, GEO. N. WALSH, Western Bank, Sheffield; of Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C., and of all booksellers.

NEW BOOKS.

NOW READY, PRICE THREE-PENCE.
Post free 4d.

THE ANGLO-ISRAEL ALMANACK
FOR 1880.

THE ANGLO-ISRAEL ALMANACK
Contains a

LIST OF ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATIONS in various parts of the United Kingdom. with particulars as to place, time of meeting, Secretary's name and address, President, Committee, &c., &c. Also the following important Articles:—

THE "GATE" OF HIS ENEMIES.
By Philo-Israel.

THE GRAND CONSUMMATION.
By Thos. Clark Westfield.

THE HAND OF GOD IN ISRAEL'S HISTORY.
By W. S. Cavill.

LITERAL AND SPIRITUAL.
By Douglas A. Onslow.

THE PRESENT ASPECT OF AFFAIRS AND EMIGRATION.
By John S. Anderson.

WHAT THE SCRIPTURES SAY CONCERNING GOD'S DEALING WITH ISRAEL after their Dispersion (into Captivity —2 Kings xvii.) until their Latter Day Union with Judah and Subsequent Final Restoration to their own Land.
Arranged by James L. Wood.

EXTINCTION OF THE ABORIGINAL RACES IN BRITISH POSSESSIONS.
By Frederick Charles Danvers.

OUR ANCESTRAL PRIDE.
By Miss J. Lawrence.

EGYPT'S DIVINE MONUMENTAL TESTIMONY TO THE IMPENDING COMING OF OUR SAVIOUR.
By Charles Horner.

STAMPS, Taxes, Excise Duties, &c., Almanack and Diary, Moon's Changes, Sun's Rising and Sitting, Gardening, Principal Festivals, Eclipses, Rates of Postage, &c., Royal Family, Sovereigns of Scotland from A.D. 1057 to the Union of the Crowns, the Ministry, Public Officers, &c., Area and Population of British India, with Estimate for the Native States; Emigration, 1857 to 1877; Statistics of the British Australian Colonies, English Weights and Measures, Foreign Moneys and their English Equivalents, Ready Reckoner, Table of Income or Wages.

London: ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.
W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

NOW READY, price 3s., post free 3s. 4d. Handsome cloth, gilt, printed on toned paper and illustrated.

THE LOST TEN TRIBES,
AND
1882.
BY THE
REV. DR. JOSEPH WILD,
Of Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Printed and published by
ROBERT BANKS, RACQUET COURT, FLEET ST., LONDON, E.C.
And may be had, by ordering, of any Bookseller.

PHILO-ISRAEL (in the BANNER) says:—"We have much pleasure in directing attention to this handsome Identity volume. It contains twenty discourses of the well-known American divine, Dr. Joseph Wild, of Brooklyn, N.Y. We are glad to find from these discourses that Dr. Wild is quite one with us on this side the water with most, though not all, the views we entertain on our great and glorious subject. . . . We promise our readers that if they procure this work, and will peruse it, they will find 'our Identity' discussed in a clear, novel, racy, and 'American' point of view, which is sure to interest, sure to be instructive, and may lead the thoughtless and inquiring to pursue the investigation till possibly conviction may be the result."

NEW BOOKS.

A NEW TALE OF GREAT INTEREST FOR YOUNG PEOPLE ON THE IDENTITY OF LOST ISRAEL.

Now ready, price 2s. 6d., post free 2s. 9d. Bound in handsome cloth, gilt, bevelled boards, gilt edges, and beautifully printed on toned paper.

THE SISTERS
OF HARROWDALE RECTORY.
BY
MRS. M. A. SEARSON,
ILLUSTRATED WITH
BEAUTIFUL DOUBLE-PAGE FRONTISPIECE.

Printed and Published by
ROBERT BANKS, RACQUET COURT, FLEET ST. LONDON, E.C.
And may be had, by ordering, of any Bookseller.

CONTENTS:—

CHAPTER I.
Harrowdale Rectory. The Rector's Family. God's Own Architect. An English Parsonage. The Aged Grandmother. Hospitality to Strangers. Frances Farnwood. Restoration to the Promised Land. Discussion on "Our Identity."

CHAPTER II.
A Quiet Controversy. A God-given Dream. Guardian Angels. A Visit to Paradise. What Paradise is Like. The Occupation of Angels. Michael the Archangel. Before the Throne of God. Israel My Heritage. The Wondrous Love of Christ. Unfolding of Prophecy Concerning Israel. A Visit to Souls in Prison. The Wonders of God's Perfect Will. Hopeless Condition of Lost Souls.

CHAPTER III.
Mother's Dream. Old Mother Davis. The Village of Harrowdale Described. William Edwards the Miner. Working Men's Homes. The Miner and the Identification of Lost Israel. The Chariot Wheels of Israel. Discouragements Overcome. A Visit to Mrs. Bertram. Her Daily Life. Her Belief in the English being Lost Israel. The Sisters' Visit to Mrs. Bertram and Mother Davis. Dinner With Mother Davis. Mother Davis and the Lost Ten Tribes. God Faithful to His Promises. The Coming of Our Lord.

CHAPTER IV.
Visit of Aunt Winslow and Cousin Calvin to the Rectory. A Family Tea-party. An Anglo-Israel Meeting. Calvin and His Uncle. The Return to Palestine. Israel or Judah—Which? What the Bible Reveals. The Wanderings of Our Israelite Ancestry. The Second Coming of Christ. A Sunday Evening Identity Class. The Bible Appealed to.

CHAPTER V.
The Neighbouring Clergymen Visit the Rectory. A Mutual Understanding. Marion's Opinion of Cousin Calvin. Calvin's Opinion of His Cousin. A Sketch of Rural Life. Miss Stanmore. Matrimonial Mistakes. Marion's Firm Belief in Providence. Calvin's Engagement to Miss Stanmore. Remarks on Unequal Marriages. The Calm after a Storm. A Parable. A Pledge of Love. The Parable Explained.

CHAPTER VI.
Calvin's Belief in our Identity. Captain Johnstone Introduced. Captain Johnstone and Miss Stanmore. An Open Avowal. Calvin Released from His Engagement. The Fever-Stricken Family. Calvin's Second Visit to Harrowdale. Sympathy and Help. A Visit t the Sick Chamber.

CHAPTER VII.
Illness of the Rector's Wife. Poor Susan. Mrs. Wildman's Trust in Her Saviour. "Going Home" in the Glorious Sunshine. The Heavenly Jerusalem. The Mother's Last Charge. Calvin and Marion. Good-bye.

This book will be read with interest by both young and old, and found well suited for a BIRTHDAY GIFT, SUNDAY SCHOOL REWARD, OR PRESENT.

Price 6d., post free 7d. New work on the Identity. Dedicated to all faithful ministers of Christ.

ISRAEL! AN EARNEST APPEAL FROM THE NEW TO THE PULPIT IN FAVOUR OF OUR IDENTITY WITH GOD'S ELECT PEOPLE, ISRAEL; Being a Letter from JOHN G. SHAW to his Pastor, Rev. Eustace R. Conder, of Leeds, with an Introduction and Notes; to be followed by a Review of Mr Conder's Papers on the Lost Tribes.
By the same Author.
"BRITAIN (OR ISRAEL)," with Map. Price 8d., post free 9d.
"CHRONOLOGICAL CHART." Price 3d., post free 3½d.
"GOD'S LOVE FOR ISRAEL." Price 1d., 3 copies sent post free for 3½d.
London: ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, DEC. 10, 1879. [All Rights Reserved.]

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. III. No. 155. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 17, 1879. [ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
The Political Aspects of Our Identity.—The Constitutions of Gentile Nations.—Part III.	501
Mrs. Hannah More on the British Constitution	502
British Identity with the Lost Ten Tribes.—By J. Green	503
Freemasonry and the Great Pyramid	504
The Federation of the Empire	504
The Monstrous Fable	505
Blind Testimony!—By Thomas Bales	505
Her Majesty Queen Victoria's Accession to Israel's Throne the Result of the Wise and Urgent Advice of a Jew	506
"The Head and Not the Tail, Above Only and Not Beneath," in Respect to Cavalry Horses	506
Review	507
Correspondence	507

THE POLITICAL ASPECTS OF OUR IDENTITY.

THE CONSTITUTIONS OF GENTILE NATIONS.

(Concluded from page 494).

PART III.

WE have stated already our view in regard to the Scriptural origin of the Constitution God has given these realms as His provision for the House of Israel, in fulfilment of the promise He made to His people in Isa. i. 26, also our proper policy, foreign and domestic, under the circumstances (as far as it seemed to us to be right to pursue the subject), in the light of our Identity.

We propose now to describe the various Constitutions under which the Gentile nations are living politically, that our readers may compare their condition with our own. We shall take the nations in order, observing first, in regard to our Israelitish brethren in America, that they naturally do not fall into the comparison we propose to make, since their political Constitution, to distinguish them from Ten-Tribed Israel, was necessarily Republican, and not under a Crown at all. Their polity further differs from ours in reference to the constitution of its Senate, which is elected by the various States Legislatures for six years only. The United States, therefore, wanting the Crown and the House of elders or earls—i.e., hereditary lords—has not had fulfilled to them God's promise to Ten-Tribed Israel, conveyed (Judah being, as facts prove, inadmissible) in Isa. i. 26. Turn we now to FRANCE.—She has no king! Her Constitution, which dates only from Feb. 25, 1875, prescribes that the Upper House, or Senate, shall be elected for nine years as regards 225 members by the Departments and Colonies of France, while seventy-five were nominated by the National Assembly and elected by the Senate. France thus has no claim to Israel's form of Government.

RUSSIA.—Is a pure despotism, all power being centered in an emperor—not a king. She has no right at all to Israel's blessings.

GERMANY.—Has no king, but an emperor. Her Constitution dates only from April 16, 1871. Its Upper House or Bundesrath is composed of members nominated by the Governments of the States, for each session; and therefore, neither as to the Crown, nor as to the Upper House, does German polity bear any comparison with Israel's Constitution.

SPAIN.—Was lately a Republic, and its present king has no hereditary right to the throne like Israel's, nor has its Cortes any resemblance to our House of Lords. Its senators or Upper House are of three classes.—1. Those who are senators of their own right—e.g., the king's sons—grandees, admirals, and other ex-officio persons. 2. One hundred life nominees of the Crown; and 3. One hundred and thirty nominated by the Corporations of State pro. tem. Spain, therefore, has no claim to compare with the British Constitution.

PORTUGAL.—The Constitution dates from April 29, 1826. The House of Peers was once hereditary in certain families, but now is wholly nominated by the Crown for life. The comparison thus fails in toto.

ITALY.—Has a Constitution dating only from March 4, 1848. The Upper House of Legislature, or Senate, is composed of princes of the royal house over forty years of age, and an unlimited number of members all nominated for life by the Crown. Italy, therefore, has no approach to Israel's God-appointed Constitution.

NORWAY.—The Constitution dates from Nov. 4, 1814. It has one representative assembly only, called a Storthing, which the king controls as to its measures. The Storthing, a nominated and then self-elected assembly, in practice divides into two Houses when sitting; the "Lagthing," and "Odelsthing," the former representing the Upper House. Norway, therefore, has no political likeness at all to Israel, and cannot share her political blessings.

SWEDEN.—Has a Constitution dated June 6, 1809. The Crown is assisted by two Houses, both elected by the people, for nine and three years respectively. This, then, is only an imitation of Israel's Constitution, and cannot compare with it.

AUSTRIA.—Since 1867 has been a bipartite State—Austria and Hungary. Each country has its own Parliament and Government, but the two have one emperor (no king) and a Parliament of 120 members called the "Delegations," sixty for Austria, sixty for Hungary, sitting and voting in two chambers. These delegations are elected, and therefore in no way respond to our Constitution.

Digitized by Google

BELGIUM.—Was endowed with a chartered Constitution in 1831. It has a king, a "Chamber of Representatives," and "The Senate." Both Houses are elected by the people. It is not, therefore, to be compared with our Governmental system.

DENMARK.—Her Constitution dates from June 5, 1849, modified in 1855, 1863, and 1866. The king is assisted by an Upper and Lower House, the latter a House of Commons. The Landsthing, or Upper House, of 66 members is partly nominated for life by the king, and partly elected by the people for eight years. The system thus bears no comparison with ours.

GREECE.—Has a king and a Constitution dated Dec., 1863, but as it has only one House, or Chamber of Representatives, it cannot be compared with the British Constitution.

THE NETHERLANDS.—Has a Constitution dated Nov. 3, 1848, by which its king, aided by two Chambers, an Upper and Lower House, both elected, carries on the Government. This is not Israel's form of Constitution, and must be rejected.

TURKEY.—Is a modified Despotism, under a sultan—not a king. It has no resemblance to the British Constitution.

SWITZERLAND.—Is a Republic, and therefore quite outside the purview of our inquiry.

Other minor States have no conditions in common with our complex form of Government, and may be dismissed also from consideration.

It remains only to sketch the well-known features of the ancient British Constitution to see how superior is ours, and how "our peculiar form of Government has ever been, and still continues to be, a model to all the nations of the earth." They all copy ours; and what they have is quite modern in comparison!

First, we have a limited Monarchy, holding power by inheritance and election; the Sovereign, a Protestant by law, and, therefore, God's "witness" under the Act of Settlement of William III., sits on David's throne, which is Jehovah's, being also in real fact a lineal descendant of the son of Jesse! (2 Sam. vii. 12—16; 1 Kings viii. 25; 1 Chron. xxviii. 23).

2. The supreme legislative power of this empire is vested, by very ancient usage, in the Parliament, which has its origin in Anglo-Saxon times, and was derived, as we have shown, from Mosaic models, furnished in Exod. xviii. 21, and Num. xi. 16.

3. The Parliament has been divided into two Houses since the time of Edward II.—a Plantagenet, A.D. 1308.

4. The lords, or peers, hold their seats for England,—(1.) By hereditary right; (2.) By creation of the Sovereign; (3.) By virtue of office, as in case of the English bishops; for Ireland (4.) By election for life; for Scotland (5.) By election for duration of Parliament.

5. The Commons House is selected by the votes of the people, and consists of—(1.) Knights of the shires or counties; (2.) Of citizens, or representatives of cities; (3.) Of burgesses, or representatives of boroughs.

The very names of some of the representatives mentioned in Exod. xviii. 21, as those of hundreds and of tens (tythings), are still known among us. They were restored when the Saxon Heptarchy merged into the British Monarchy, and we have their clear traces still. The Prime Minister and his Cabinet had their counterpart in Moses, and his servants Caleb, Joshua, &c. (Num. xi. 28). All were, even in those days, as now, the "ministry," or "servants" of the king (Jehovah in those times, the royal descendant of David in these), and yet were sometimes called to account by the "congregation of the people," and "the assembly of the elders" (Psa. cvii. 32). This seems to have been the case at the time mentioned in Num. xvi. 3.

On the whole, we find the British Constitution to be derived by clear descent from an Israelite origin; and as the Gates testify (ab extrâ) that we are Israel, so does the glorious British Constitution (from within); since it has its pedigree traceable for 1,000 years back to great Alfred's days, and beyond that again to B.C. 1491—a period of 3,370 years!—when Moses was God's first Prime Minister on earth, and the first peerage of ealdormen with the first Commons House of Israel's Parliament, were summoned to "judge" His people. On the other hand, facts testify that all the other nations being Gentiles, have no share in this stupendous Identity, bearing by contrast, as it does, on the political Constitution of their respective States. It ipso facto testifies by an unanswerable chain of evidence that they are not the Ten-Tribed House, or "kingdom" proper of Israel, as our Gothic friends allege, but that we ALONE are!

Finally, we beg our readers to call to mind the almost mysterious devotion to our political Constitution which we British evince, as evidence of a valuable kind to our innate God-taught respect and reverence for a Heaven-given polity. To what else are due our frequent cries, "that the Constitution is in danger," when a rough hand from whichever party so much as touches it? To what else our almost nervous adherence in our Upper and Commons Houses of Parliament to the rule that precedents must ever guide all proceedings, even to the smallest jot and tittle? To what else our still strongly implanted national belief that a Divine right doth hedge our kings, since Shakespeare says:—

> "There's such Divinity doth hedge a king
> That treason can but peep to what it would?"
>
> —Hamlet, act iv., scene 5.

Is there not evidence, also, of this same Divine origin in our very State Church prayers for our Sovereign the Queen, when, after the ten laws of God are recited in our hearing, we are taught thus to pray for her?—"So rule the heart of Thy chosen servant VICTORIA, our Queen and Governor, that she (knowing whose minister she is)," &c., ("duly considering whose authority she hath), we may faithfully serve, honour, and humbly obey her; in Thee and for Thee, according to Thy blessed Word and ordinance." Here seem clear retrospective allusions to a God-given royal appointment, pointing to our Sovereign as God's gift to Israel, according to the Mosaic Constitution and "ordinance" granted to His people "at the first."

Our task is done. We leave these reflections to the public as a strong confirmation of our views, and desire to thank God for enabling us thus to add one more proof, of a valuable kind too, to our already strongly supported contention, that we are in truth "God's people," to whom He promised, 760 years before Christ, "to restore their judges as at the first, and their counsellors as at their beginning." Israel, Praise YE the Lord.

MRS. HANNAH MORE ON THE BRITISH CONSTITUTION.

MRS. HANNAH MORE writing in 1825, fifty-four years ago, to Sir Hart Davis, quoted the following opinion with approval, supporting in a singularly forcible way our views as detailed above on the origin of our noble unique God-given British Constitution. She said:—

"I cannot send you his (Mr. Harford's) letter; but I will quote a part of it. 'The Roman Catholic gentry . . . . are very sincerely attached to the British Constitution; for they are not so blinded by party as not to see that they may traverse the whole world, or call up the spirits of all the ancient legislators and statesmen, and that nothing could be devised to compare with the British Constitution.'"

ISRAEL'S TRADE IN COALS.—It is a remarkable tribute to the stability and soundness of our position as a manufacturing people that in the severest and most protracted industrial crisis the world has ever known we should continue to consume, within the four corners of the United Kingdom, and in our shipping trade together, more than a hundred and thirteen million tons of coal—a consumption exceeding the united production of all the other countries of Europe. It is not less remarkable that when Germany, France, America, and other nations are doing their utmost, not only to exclude us from their own, but to beat us in neutral markets, our coal exports should continue to increase as they have done during the past years.

Digitized by Google

BRITISH IDENTITY WITH THE LOST TEN TRIBES.

By J. Green.

From the Scriptural evidence which your readers well know, we have fair grounds for deducing the following facts:—

1. That the Houses or families of Israel and Judah are as distinct and separate now as they were under Jeroboam and Rehoboam, because the Jews have never literally realised the promises which God made (on oath and without condition) to Abraham, nor fulfilled those predictions which the dying Jacob uttered in reference to Israel—i.e., to that particular son and his offspring to whom the birthright had been transferred, and in virtue of which the distinction of "Israel" was originally given, because he "prevailed" (Gen. xxxii. 28).

2. That in virtue of those promises made by Jehovah no Gentile nation or the aborigines of such countries can effectually stop or hinder the onward flow of the Israelitish stock. And—

3. That wherever Israel is found, they have the prevailing birthright with its accompanying signs or marks by which they may be known from all the rest of the human family. For as the "gifts and calling of God are without repentance" (Rom. xi. 29), how can we conceive of the omniscient Jehovah, who "ends remote from their beginnings sees," vainly making all those declarations personally and through His prophets, accompanied so often by the terms "for ever" and "evermore?"

How can we conceive that He who hath said, "This people have I formed for Myself, they shall show forth My praise" (Isa. xliii. 21), "Thou art My servant, O Israel, in whom I will be glorified," could possibly fail in His choice or "cast away His people" (Israel)? St. Paul answers, "God forbid!" To deny a literal, as well as a spiritual, Israel, so long as there is a single promise unrealised or one prediction in reference to this people unfulfilled, would be to deny the veracity of God, or drag Him down to the level of a man who has failed in his purpose, which cannot be. Besides, every living Jew now on the earth proves the stability of God's Word; for how could they (the House of Judah who crucified our Lord and cried, "His blood be upon us and on our children") be preserved through all time whilst the Ten-Tribed Israel are extinct or irrecoverably lost, and that too, in the face of Jer. xxxi., especially from verse 35, which was written 130 years after the Israelites were taken into Media?

Now this leads us to ask the plain question, "Where are these Ten Tribes or their representatives to be found?" What nation or people under the sun will answer to each and all of the signs given in Holy Scripture and by which they must be eventually recognised? We say the Anglo-Saxon—the English-speaking race—whose seed is becoming as the stars or the sand for multitude, who do blossom and bud, and will eventually fill the earth with fruit. How strange that we do not recognise how wonderfully our own country answers to the description here! We have been blessed with the blessings of heaven above, inasmuch as at the present day there is not a land upon the broad surface of the world where we, by our missionaries, are not proclaiming the Gospel of salvation in such a manner as no other nation ever did since the beginning of the world. To England, too, are there not the "blessings of the deep that lieth under?" Has she not the lion's share of the empire of the seas both for war and commerce? To her is there not also the blessing of a numerous seed pushing its way, as was prophesied, to the ends of the earth and becoming a multitude of nations? Cannot we see in the form of our peculiar Constitution the reproduction and development of those principles originally stamped upon the Israelitish national character during their training in the wilderness, and in the peculiar way other nations melt away before us—melt away not so much by contact with the superior discipline or combined efforts of sudden military force, as by the individual superiority and force of character of a dominating race, which either compels an aboriginal population to change their inferiority of character or causes them gradually to become extinct. This effect happened when the Israelites invaded Canaan; this happened when the Anglo-Saxons invaded England; and this happens when their descendants occupy America, Australia, or any colony. They are, in fact, the melo-hag-goim of the Bible, and must prevail. Then there is the direct historical evidence, which is more remarkable still, but into which I have not the time nor the space to enter now; suffice it to say that the Saxons (who were the dominant race) came, according to Sharon Turner, from near the Caspian, the very place where the Scriptures leave captive Israel; at the very date, too, when from Scripture we know the Israelites were there. Truly "Israel's grave was the Saxon's birthplace."

But the question, cui bono?—what is the good of it all?—seems to be uppermost in the minds of many. First, it is a great good to us spiritually; we can place our finger upon prophecy that has been fulfilled or is being fulfilled; feeling at the same time that an essential ingredient has been added to our faith which will make us strong in confidence towards our covenant-keeping God, knowing full well that the every "jot and tittle" of His Word must be fulfilled. It will also do more to convince the sceptic (yea, it has done more already than anything else in the time) that our Bible is the inspired Word of God. By this light they see a beauty and a harmony in it which was not before visible, through our expounders spiritualising those portions which demand from their very contexts quite a different rendering; but, above all, this Identity truth is, we believe, God's way of bringing about the restoration of His people to their own land. Upon this Jehovah Himself tells us through His servant Jeremiah (xxxii. 41), He has set His whole heart and His whole soul. The joining together of the "two sticks" described by the prophet Ezekiel (xxxvii. from ver. 15) and which has never yet been fulfilled, is God's great desire; so that "the knowledge of the Lord may cover the earth as the waters cover the sea;" therefore it ought to be the earnest desire of every Christian. I have mentioned the Restoration, for in addition to the references given above, we have Ezek. xxxvi. from ver. 11; Isaiah xi. 10—16, with many more passages all unfulfilled, and all proving that God will set His hand again the second time to recover the remnant of His people, and that He will do better for them than at their beginning. In reference to this event we think that the Scriptures read in and by the light of our own history, together with all those events and doings amongst the nations which are causing all thoughtful students to inquire, What can these things mean?—I say, these things, compared with the dates and information vouchsafed to us through the inspired Word, greatly aided by scientific and other information, lead all clear discerners of these "signs of the times" to the conclusion that this event must take place before long. Daniel's "two thousand three hundred days" (years), the "forty and two months" of the Revelation, the "eighteen hundred and eighty-two inches" in the grand gallery in the Great Pyramid, the astronomical events which are pending and which will shortly be in full force, all speak trumpet-tongued of great and momentous changes. 1881-2, as set forth in the above references, is thought by many to be pregnant with wondrous interest—some say the Restoration will take place about that time, which, according to the Great Pyramid, is the end of the Gospel dispensation; but this we are all agreed upon, that the House of Judah or the "Jews" will return as a whole, for they are to be gathered together from the four corners of the earth. They are also to come to Israel, who are to bring their brethren as an offering unto the Lord (Isa. xviii. 7; Zeph. iii. 10). Now although this people (the Jews) that are scattered and peeled are to return as a whole, the people by whom and through whom their return will be accomplished —"a people terrible from their beginning hitherto" (Israel)— will not all return. It is only a selection of the people that will return in the proportion of two from each family; this is clearly taught in Isa. x. 22, 23; Jeremiah iii. 14: "One of a city and two of a family," the proportion being according to "the consumption decreed," the scale being determined by the Lord. It is held by some of our "Identity" friends that before this return takes place, the ark of the covenant will be discovered; that this ark is likely to be found in a mound at Tara—a mound containing arches, and that beneath the fifth arch it is most likely to be deposited, the finding of which is essential to the return, for the glory of the Lord is promised to be "their rereward." It is also held by some that the finding of this ark with the Urim and Thummim, and other title deeds (which will be sought for before 1882) will be the means appointed by God to bring the "two Houses" together; but in these minor details I am not an authority; it is sufficient for us to know we shall "all flow together" and see "eye to eye."

Digitized by Google

If I have unduly trespassed upon valuable space, it is the importance of the theme which has compelled me; for if through the investigation of this subject we can only lead people to the truth, spiritual as well as temporal, we shall be amply repaid.

FREEMASONRY AND THE GREAT PYRAMID.

WE take the following from the Freemason newspaper of. Aug. 30, 1879, being sure that our Masonic believers will be interested, and that those who are not Freemasons will be glad to know that our subject is attracting attention in unexpected quarters:—

DERBY.—ARBORETUM LODGE (No. 731).—The regular monthly meeting of the above lodge was held at the Masonic Hall, Derby, on Wednesday, the 13th inst. Bro. G. T. Wright, P.P.J.G.W., as W.M. (in the absence of Bro. W. Cooper, W.M., who was unavoidably absent from the town), Bros. J. C. Merry, P.P.G.D. of C., as S.W., &c., &c., &c. The lodge was opened at 7.15, and the minutes of the last lodge were read and confirmed. After the election of two candidates for Freemasonry, the W.M. opened the lodge in the Second Degree. The lodge was then advanced to the Third Degree. The W.M. said that he should at once proceed to the principal business of the evening, which was to listen to a lecture, which they were all expecting with very great interest, from one of the visiting brethren. The subject was one which he (the W.M.) had studied, and in which he found an inexhaustible and fascinating charm. He would at once introduce to them Bro. W. Rowbottom, the orator of the evening. Bro. Wm. Rowbottom, Royal Alfred Lodge, 1028, rose to deliver his lecture, entitled, "The Great Pyramid of Egypt; its Masonic Origin and Teaching." It should be said, in passing, that for the intellectual treat afforded by this lecture the lodge is indebted to Bro. H. Burn, P.M., by whose influence it was arranged some months ago, but the somewhat heavy work of the lodge prevented its earlier delivery, and it speaks highly for the character of the lecture, and the strong interest felt in the subject, that at this holiday season so many brethren attended, some from long distances. One of the most remarkable signs of the progressive state of Masonry in the present day seems to be that we are not content to limit our attention exclusively to speculative Masonry, the ordinary and beautiful ceremonies of our ritual, or the attractions of the Fourth Degree, but there is an increasing desire to penetrate and study the historic work and teachings of our ancient brethren in the far-off ages of the past, in which they left their mark upon the world, "in records that defy the tooth of time." It is quite impossible in a short report to give anything like a fair résumé of this admirable lecture, which was delivered quite orally and in the number of figures and statistics proved Bro. Rowbottom's memory to be one of the most retentive. In eloquent language the lecturer showed how architecture "is the printing press of all the ages," giving the Masonic history of every time, from the Pyramids of the Pharaohs to the cathedrals of our own day. The theory and construction of the Great Pyramid, and its dependence on the proportions of the square and circle, were dealt with in a masterly manner, proving clearly their connection with Masonic ritual and teaching. By observing the tendencies of analogous formations, it is most interesting to trace the links in the design of this wonderful and mysterious structure, and their intimate connection with general Masonic laws. Every great national architecture "is the manly language of a people inspired by resolute and common sense," and rendering resolute and common fidelity to the legible laws of an undoubted Great Architect of the Universe. In summarising the symbolical teaching of the mystic numbers in the measurements of the passages leading to the centre, or king's chamber—the corner stone—the grand base and apex of this four-square pyramid, or perfect pentagon, the lecturer concluded by proving an eloquent parallel between the time of its construction, and the days of the later Temple, in the course of which the chronological symbolism of the passages was explained, and its result applied to the sacred narrative. In an eloquent peroration, showing how all this ancient symbolism, worked in imperishable stone, which time ever consecrates, and which, though grey with age, still more eloquently teaches—illustrating the unity and consistency of that old and illustrious brotherhood, whose immemorial watchwords have been "Love, Relief, and Truth"—the speaker brought his most interesting lecture to a close. Bro. Whittaker, J.W., proposed a vote of thanks to Bro. Rowbotton for his exceedingly interesting and instructive lecture. For his own part he had been delighted to listen to it, and, judging from the rapt attention of the lodge, he had no doubt he was expressing the sentiments of every brother present. Bro. Taylor, P.M., seconded, and the vote was carried unanimously. Bro. Wm. Rowbottom, in reply, said that it had given him great pleasure to be present that evening with the Arboretum Lodge, and if anything had given him more gratification than another it was the great attention with which the brethren had been pleased to receive his lecture. At the conclusion of the business of the evening, the W.M. received the "hearty good wishes" of the visitors, and the lodge was closed in harmony.

> "Scrutinised the dates
> Of long past human things,"

THE FEDERATION OF THE EMPIRE.

WE must often recur to this proposal. It is the next great subject for Israel's consideration affecting her domestic policy. Without it the true significance will not be given in fulfilment to the Lord's promise to Jacob our forefather, "A nation and a company of nations shall be of thee" (Gen. xxxv. 11). Our colonial parliaments are beginning to see this, and are looking forward to the time when the Federation must be a fact. We noticed in our leader in BANNER No. 147, that the subject had been debated in the Cape legislative assembly, also in that of Griqualand West. It has been discussed in the Westminster Review of this year, No. cxi., July, and following Nos., with rare ability and care, by a Canadian writer, as we are informed.

We have also noted in our columns (see pp. 385, 386) that foreign writers (the Moniteur Universel, to wit) have made up their minds that "the bonds of Federation are the only ones suited to the British Empire;" to result in a force "so colossal that it would only be counterbalanced by the Federation of the other States." The leading article in The Colonies and India, a paper of large circulation, had on September 13, 1879, the same idea ("Imperial Federation") for its theme. So exactly did its views coincide with ours of Oct. 22, 1879, published in BANNER No. 147, that a friend in British Guiana has written to us, gravely to ask if "Philo-Israel wrote it or inspired that article!" We had not seen The Colonies and India of Sept. 13, when our article was penned. But we were glad, indeed, subsequently to read its editor's treatment of a matter which he justly observes must shortly be taken up and carried into operation if our Empire is to continue united. What the writer said about the proposal is this:—

The one broad fact has but to be dwelt upon for the present—viz., that Federation must be the outcome of the growth of our dependencies, and that a Council of the Empire must eventually be formed to decide upon all matters affecting the Empire at large. The Imperial Parliament, as at present constituted, is, we regret to say, year by year becoming gradually more and more an assembly wherein parochial matters are debated, and where some petty dispute tending to further party interests receives more attention than vital questions which cannot be made subservient to the interests of Liberal or Conservative. It is impossible that Colonies which, in less than half a century hence, will have populations of European descent as numerous as the inhabitants of the mother-country, will be content to be ignored in representation, and if Great Britain wishes not only to maintain her prestige and supremacy amongst nations, but to enhance it many times, she must take the Colonies into her counsels, and give them the right and opportunity to exercise co-equal power and influence with herself. Intensely loyal and patriotic as are the Colonies now, it is impossible to suppose that they would feel the same warm disposition to the mother-country if, when they were rapidly approaching it in wealth and power, they saw no readiness to treat them as on a par, but as excluded from real Imperial influence. At the same time, whilst the mother-country should offer a share of her authority to the Colonies, the latter must be prepared to accept the attendant responsibilities. Otherwise there can be no community of interests or unity of action. It may be that the Royal Commission just constituted to consider and report upon the question of Imperial defence will be but the avant courier of some scheme intended to cement the Colonies still more closely with the parent country, and thus be a powerful factor towards the establishment of Imperial unity and Federation.

Digitized by Google

The difficulties connected with the just liabilities of the Colonies in the matter of the cost of Imperial defence are, of course, the chief matters requiring adjustment and agreement between the mother and her daughters. On this subject our Israelite friend, Mr. F. R. A. Winter, of Demerara, British Guiana, sends us some observations for publication which we cannot do better than append here. "The problem of Federation for the Empire," he says, "is not easy of solution, and the apportionment of the cost of Imperial defence is not the least of the difficulties which have to be surmounted. The votes for the army and navy are the heaviest in amount of any on the estimates. Taking them as in 1877 at £30 millions sterling as the ordinary peace estimate, the question arises, What impost, having imperial scope of operation, could be levied to meet such an amount? The imports into Great Britain in 1877 from foreign countries exclusive of India and the Colonies amounted to £304 millions sterling. The cost of the army and navy, then, was just a tythe of the imports from countries which would lie outside the limits of the Federacy. A tythe of foreign imports into Great Britain would, therefore, cover the cost of the army and navy. But by giving this tax an Imperial action, an equal amount would probably be raised upon foreign imports into the Colonies and India, making an aggregate sum of £60 millions for Imperial defence. The levying of this Imperial Tax for defence solely, would not press heavily on any one class, or individual in the Federacy; leaving in Great Britain £30 millions for re-adjustment of taxes which have a special bearing upon classes, or individuals, or for remission.

"In such of the Colonies, or India, as now provide for partial protection, the amount raised to-day would be equally available for adjustment, or remission. An Imperial tariff for defensive purposes could not reasonably be objected to by any of the Colonies. The figures I have used are in excess of requirements in time of peace; but the principle admits of contraction or expansion. The Royal Commission, sitting on Colonial Defences, may, perhaps, not despise a hint from even so remote a corner as British Guiana. Such combined action throughout the Federacy need cause no interference with the local powers of taxation and appropriation so long as the proceeds of the Imperial Tax, should be appropriated to the one purpose of Imperial Defence."

So far Mr. Winter. We have satisfaction in giving publicity to his proposal, because we feel that the sooner the matter is agitated, the sooner shall we have the thing we want, which is absolutely needed to give the Empire cohesion and consistency. When the Federation is a fact, then will the Israelite "nation, and company of nations," respond to what we believe God intended it to represent—namely, a dominion which should be world-wide in extent and influence; which should, by its size and colossal power, bear down all opponents; not by violence, wrong-doing, or force, but by the influence of righteous dealing, justice, equity, and good government, the very personification of a "Christian nation." The Colonies and India says of such a Federacy:—

So far from an Imperial British Confederation being a menace to the world, it would afford a strong guarantee of peace throughout the globe. The Moniteur is correct in its estimate of the power which it would wield; but it looks at it from a wrong point of view when it alludes to the necessity of its being counterbalanced by the Federation of other States, and by the balance of power in Europe being established on a new basis. The Imperial Confederation would be ever anxious to promote civilisation, peace, and prosperity, all of which are threatened by wars and rumours of wars. Its strength would be colossal, and its immensity would be a guarantee against that strength being exercised, except under the most serious pressure and necessity.

We leave the subject for the present; but we must revert to it continually! It is one we are sure our God would have us constantly keep in view now. We feel satisfied that ere long He means to make the British Colonies to be in truth what they are aiming at to-day—namely, a "Confederation of States" in close and loving union with their old Israelite mother in the "Isles of the West" (Isa. xxiv. 15).

"THE MONSTROUS FABLE."

THE Rev. C. H. Spurgeon describes our Identity as "The monstrous fable of our Israelitish origin," but adds "that it is seriously believed." This last is true enough; and we wish our readers to note from the popular preacher's testimony, how this truth spreads! There is no man who constantly, and so beautifully in his sermons, bears "blind evidence" to our Identity as Mr. Spurgeon. This we have shown; and yet he parades his "blindness" (predicted indeed of him and his cloth in Isa. xlii. 19), so that no one shall doubt that God's Word is really fulfilled in every jot and every tittle! He, too, like Messrs. Cornall, Clifford, Benson, McClellan, Stanley, White, Clericus—that useful band of opponents—raises the shout of "Lo-Ammi," while in the next breath he is ready to pile proof on proof that verily we are as like Israel of old as we possibly can be. We have adduced some striking evidence of that fact in pages 67, 395, and 419 of our third volume. We should like our readers to turn to these, and they will find that if Mr. Spurgeon calls ours "a monstrous fable," he has himself given us excellent grounds for believing it!

BLIND TESTIMONY!

BY THOMAS BALES.

CASUALLY opening an old work this evening, my attention was drawn to a letter written—on April 2, 1660—by Raimond Gaches, pastor of the Reformed Church of Paris, "to the most famous man and most upright pastor, Richard Baxter." In this letter occur the following words, which by some may be considered as curious only; by others, as both curious and instructive; by others, again, as curious, instructive, and inspired:—

"I will say more: I could not but hope well of Britain; for I was, and am still, of this opinion, that God hath reserved to himself in England more elect, and more godly men, than ever flourished of old, or can be shewn now in any realm of Christendom. Let both fearful brethren and furious enemies judge your safety desperate, and ask in their unbelief who will give salvation to Israel out of Zion; God will provide; there are, not ten, not a thousand just men, but entire millions of godly men. I will hear what the Lord God will say, for He will speak peace to His people. But because the Most High Ruler of the world (who can, indeed, without the intervening of means, both scatter the darkness, and call back the light, yet nevertheless) wills not (for the most part) to put forth His power immediately, we ought (reverend sir) to lay together our studies, and all counsels to establish firmly the safety of Britain."

Digitized by Google

The conclusion, likewise, abounds with meaning:—

"Further, God bless your studies, your labours, your Church, and all your, nay, our England, which is the flower and glory of all the kingdoms wherein God is truly worshipped."

That Britain has often been associated, or Identified, with Israel in the writings of ancient authors, is as suggestive as it is remarkable. That Britain has ever been distinct from all other nations, both in the make and temper of her sons, is evident from the candid admission of intelligent foreigners. That Englishmen, with all their faults, passions, and vices, have, for upwards of three centuries, been regarded by the wise and learned of other lands, as the flower of Christendom, the upholders of order, and a God-blessed people, is a fact full of significance. That with such the aptest simile for Britain should be Israel, God's chosen, seems unaccountable, more especially since thousands here are still blind to the Identity, and deem its advocates the victims of a craze. Why these authors of old, and illustrious strangers, should have likened Britain to Israel, and paid their tribute of respect to Englishmen so earnestly and lovingly, is not readily realised, unless it were that Britain, even then, vividly displayed to their eyes, at least, some of those distinguishing characteristics peculiar to Israel of the prophets, and that it was owing to these Identities they were led by the Spirit so to write and speak.

If but one had thus declared, his sole declaration might be regarded as a strange conceit: if but a few had expressed themselves similarly, their expressions, though striking, might not be deemed of real importance; but when numerous authors unite in designating Britain Israel, we, who claim that name, are justified in asking our opponents to explain the reason. Did these men wildly write they knew not what? or were they instructed of God? Turner's glowing masterpieces are said to have been the result of excessive visual perception, the very opposite of colour-blindness. It may be, too, that the testimony under consideration was due to much the same cause, to undue perception rather than to blindness. It may be they had read the Scriptures in the spirit of understanding, or in that of prophecy, and were permitted to see, in part, the mystery of God in Christ, the redemption of Israel. It may be they were favoured with a glimpse of the dawn of the Identity, and consequently wrote of Britain's glory as an object of admiration, a mark of recognition, and an earnest of progression and expansion. If such were the dawn, its promise has been maintained; yet the splendour of to-day is but an imperfect symbol of that attainable at the national recognition and redemption. The streak of light that gleams on the Eastern wave when all around is black, gleams feebly at the first; but though darkness flee not away, the day must come; the sun will rise. In time the clouds disperse, the morning brightens, and light spreads far and wide. Then mounts the golden sun, and shines the perfect day. So with the Identity! Light is spreading. Israel's recognition and redemption will not long be delayed; nor will He long tarry "Whose countenance was as the sun." Those of old saw the Identity in faith, and wrote of Britain's destiny in hope:

"Then praise we our Father in heaven,
Him who has given us more; for to us has hope been transfigured,
Groping no longer in night."

The hope of Israel is fast approaching. Watching, waiting, praying for His coming, every believer's heart exclaims, "Sounds of His coming already I hear." How soon may not be known! Let all, then, watch and pray continually, that when the sun does burst through the clouds and mists of uncertainty, this spontaneous testimony may also burst from us:

"On His bosom
Freer breathes, in its coolness my breast; and face to face standing Look I on God as He is, a sun unpolluted by vapours."

October 14, 1879.

HER MAJESTY QUEEN VICTORIA'S ACCESSION TO ISRAEL'S THRONE THE RESULT OF THE WISE AND URGENT ADVICE OF A JEW.

We take the following from the Leisure Hour, August, 1879, forwarded to us by Mr. James Rankin, F.R.A.S. Our readers will see in the facts, if true, a remarkable leading of providence resulting in all those great national benefits which are comprised in the historical fact that Queen Victoria has ruled this vast Empire for over forty years.

"Duke of Kent.—A German-Jew paper, the Israelitishe Wochenschrift, has published the following historical reminiscence: 'In the year 1816, under the nominal rule of George III., his third son, Edward, Duke of Kent, settled in Brussels, in consequence of the unsettled state of his finances, and of the necessity of living more economically than was possible in England. Two years later he married the widowed Princess of Leiningen, with whom he subsequently resided at her Castle of Amorbach, in the Odenwald. There the prince was visited by Moses Montefiore (with whom he was acquainted), in order to arrange some financial matters, and during this visit the last-mentioned personage took the opportunity of calling the attention of the royal duke to an expected change in the occupancy of the English throne, and advised him, therefore, to return to his native country. The duke was, however, unwell, and postponed his departure, being desirous of awaiting his recovery before introducing his consort at the English Court. Montefiore then betook himself to the duchess, and urgently pressed on her notice the fact that no one could be heir to the throne unless he or she were born in England; that, under the circumstances in which she was then situated, she owed it to herself and to her coming child at once to repair to England. He reminded her that the death of George III. was shortly to be expected; that both the Prince Regent and the Duke of Clarence (afterwards William IV.) were childless—the Prince Regent had lost his only child, the Princess Charlotte, in 1817; and that, consequently, after the two princes just mentioned, the throne would devolve on the Duke of Kent and his descendants. So earnestly did Mr. Montefiore press his point, especially with reference to the necessity for the heir to be born in England, that the duchess followed his advice, and urged her husband to accompany her to England. On May 24, 1819, she gave birth to a daughter, who, eighteen years later, succeeded to the throne as Queen Victoria. This circumstance, concludes our contemporary, was the result of the sensible advice given by Moses Montefiore, and in part accounts for the esteem in which the venerable baronet is held by the Court.'"

"THE HEAD AND NOT THE TAIL, ABOVE ONLY AND NOT BENEATH," IN RESPECT TO CAVALRY HORSES.

We ask our readers' attention to the following letter, signed "British Centaur," which appeared in the Times of Oct. 8, 1879. It furnishes us with authority for the statement we make above, that our "British horses are the best in the world for Cavalry purposes." Here again God's Word is found correct and true; His promises to "Israel obedient" in Deut. xxviii.

Digitized by Google

4, 11, are fulfilled in the British nation—to the letter—since He has "blessed us in the fruit of our cattle," and made us also "plenteous" in the same. Our quotation proving our case is as follows:—

FOREIGN CAVALRY HORSES.

SIR,—It appears the Government is contemplating, or has already completed, the purchase of a large number of horses in Hungary wherewith to remount some of our cavalry regiments returning from India. Now, I know not on whose authority this step is taken, but from every point of view I do think it most injudicious and impolitic. In the first place, these horses are small and light—15 hands to 15·1 high—and this dwarfishness must place their riders at a disadvantage when opposed to cavalry mounted on taller animals. In the second place, these horses are notoriously deficient in stamina, as the experience of the German and French armies will prove. At one time these armies had a large number of Hungarian horses, and many were purchased every year. Now they have none, as it was found that in war-time these animals were nowhere against German or French, much less English horses. In the third place, at the present time horses are abundant in England and Ireland, and excellent troopers can be obtained at as low a price in the market, if not less than these Hungarian weeds will have cost the country. There are no better cavalry steeds in the world than the English or Irish saddle horses, and evidence of this is to be found in the fact that they are eagerly bought at our markets and fairs for every European army, and are exported in great numbers almost every week. And, in the last place, it is surely most impolitic, when there is such severe agricultural depression, when so few people are buying horses and so many farmers have them to sell, to neglect the interests of our own breeders and send good money out of the country to buy the untrustworthy, undersized, and very expensive (comparatively) hacks of the foreigner.

BRITISH CENTAUR.

Review.

The Anglo-Israel Almanac for 1880. Edited by Rev. Jas. Billington, F.S.A., F.R.H.S., Hon. Sec. Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association. Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane. Price 3d.

THE Hon. Sec. of our Metropolitan Association has done a good work. The almanack he has just issued is an excellent idea well carried out, well printed, nicely got up, and sure to be popular. It has, we plainly see, cost our Metropolitan friends much money to publish, and we trust all Israelites throughout the Empire will order and pay for large numbers to be given away in view to spread the knowledge of our cause. The little volume contains not only the usual matter one looks for in a good almanac for a new year, but original articles by Identity writers on various topics, all interesting and carefully written, prepared solely for this publication. Thus we have Mr. Westfield writing on "The Grand Consummation;" Mr. Cavill on "God's Hand in Israel's History;" Mr. Onslow on "Literal and Spiritual;" Mr. Danvers on "The Extinction of the Aboriginal Races in British Possessions;" Col. Larkins on "The Adoption—to Wit, the Redemption;" Mr. J. L. Wood "On What the Scriptures Say Regarding Israel;" Mr. C. Horner on "The Great Pyramid;" Mr. Anderson on "Emigration;" poetry by Hecla; "Our Ancestral Pride," furnished by Miss Lawrence; and a paper on "The Gates" by Philo-Israel. Besides these attractions Mr. Billington has furnished what we have long tried, but in vain, to obtain for the BANNER—viz., a correct list of all Anglo-Israel Associations in the United Kingdom, with names of presidents, secretaries, treasurers, &c., &c. Next year we hope the Colonial and American Associations, affiliated and otherwise, will be added to this list.

We have much pleasure in recommending the results of Mr. Billington's labours to the public, and have not failed ourselves (as an example) to send to the publisher a fairly large order for the almanac for circulation in our own locality.

NOTICE.—The editor's three papers on "The British Constitution" will shortly be republished as a pamphlet, under the title, "Our Government and Constitution. Where They Come From." By Philo-Israel. To be followed by a paper, we trust, by L. P., entitled, "A Necessary Consequence."

Correspondence.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

SIR,—I am a constant reader of the BANNER OF ISRAEL and a firm believer in the Hebraic origin of the British nation. With your permission, therefore, I would ask to be allowed to point out what appears to me to be a fallacy in your otherwise admirable article on "The British Coustitution." You say, "The estates of this realm are THREE—the Crown, the Lords, and the Commons." Of the same opinion was the late Lord John Russell, but I must join issue with both of you. I contend that our beloved Queen never has been an "estate" of the realm, nor ever will be, any more than King David was before her. You are perfectly right in saying "the estates of this realm are THREE;" but pardon me if I maintain that you have mistaken the trilogy. The true three estates of the realm are, the estate of the Lords spiritual, the estate of the Lords temporal, and the estate of the Commons. The Crown, with all due deference to you, is no estate at all.

I believe the analogy which you wish to bring out will not lose, but gain in force by this correction, and that must be my reason for troubling you.

I remain,
Your obedient servant,
FREDK. ARTHUR HYNDMAN.

2, Glebe-villas, Mitcham, Surrey,
Dec. 4, 1879.

NOTE BY THE EDITOR.—We thank our correspondent for his correction, which is perfectly right no doubt, technically. We used the word "estates," however, in its more commonly accepted signification, representing the three great Powers on which the British polity rests, and of these three the Crown is, to use the language of the lawyers, caput, principium, et finis. We add in defence of our (strictly) incorrect position that "Chambers' Etymological English Dictionary" defines the word "estate" to mean "the legislature—KING, Lords, and Commons." Our "Judges" we contend are the Scriptural trilogy—i.e., "Crown, Lords, and Commons," "THE LEGISLATURE," and that is our position as promised in Isa. i. 26. For all that, we repeat that our correspondent is right, and technically speaking the crown is no "estate."—ED.

DANIEL'S 1,290 AND 1,335 DAYS.—(J. Dean.)—These are of course to be reckoned from the same starting point as the great prophetic period of 1,260 year-days. Mr. Elliott, when we last saw him, had no doubt whatever that the latter period, which he measured from the decree of Phocas, A.D. 606, expired in 1866, or thereabouts. Then came the Vatican Council, the invitations to which were, as never before, confined to ecclesiastics, there being, so the Papal authorities expressed it, "No Catholic Princes left." The Franco-German war now broke out, followed in a few weeks by the utter ruin of the temporal power of the Papacy. So that as regards the ending of the 1,260 year-days we are doubtless on firm ground. As to the events which may probably mark the termination of the two additional periods of 30 and 45 year-days, Mr. Elliott hazarded no conjecture—his mission, as he always declared, being far more with the past than with the future. But a few years ago Mr. Niven read a paper in which he accounted for the presence of these numbers in the book of Daniel, and their absence from the Apocalypse (where the 1,260 year-days are frequently referred to) on the principle that the latter is almost exclusively a Gentile prophecy, whereas many of Daniel's predictions have special reference to the chosen people. He therefore concluded that the 1,290 and 1,335 day-years (all measured from the decree of Phocas) would be found to mark important epochs in the future history of Israel or Judah. And in this we entirely agree with Mr. Niven, though without attempting to dogmatise as to the nature of the events intended. These are doubtless wisely concealed from us. The earlier date might mark the Lord's coming to "gather His saints," or—after an interval of uncertain duration—His glorious manifestation in the midst of them. Or the time of the gathering of the scattered remnant of Judah may be intended, or the invasion and (after another interval) the destruction of Gog and all his hosts. Again, one of the dates may refer to the return of the Ten Tribes, and the commencement of the Millennium, but it is useless to make impatient guesses.

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements
(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O O payable at Ludgate-circus.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed :—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS. SUBSCRIPTIONS for the NEW YEAR should now be sent to the Publisher.

	£	s.	d.
Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free	0	7	6
Two copies (including Double Numbers) ...	0	12	4
Three " " " " ...	0	18	8
Four " " " " ...	1	6	2
Six " " " " ...	1	17	4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-Grand, London, to W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

DEATH.

On December 5, at 22, Farrier-street, Deal, Mabel, daughter of Thomas and Rebecca Bales, aged 11 months.

LECTURES, MEETINGS, ETC.

FRIENDS OF THE IDENTITY are invited to refer after 3 p.m. at 30, LADBROKE GARDENS, for information respecting A DRAWING-ROOM READING to be held by Rev. H. MARRIOTT, in the Minor Prophets, at 3 p.m., on the 17th of December.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

PRESIDENT: VISCOUNT FOLKESTONE, M.P.

The Hon. Sec. will be pleased to receive APPLICATIONS FOR LECTURES, irrespective of distance, for the New Year. In addition to those delivered with marked success during the last few months under the auspices of this Association, the following NEW LECTURES are specially prepared :—

DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, Esq., J.P. Subject: "The Anglo-Saxons—the Chosen People."

CHARLES STUBBS, Esq., B.A. (London University). Subject: "Our Scythian Ancestors."

REV. JAMES BILLINGTON, F.S.A., F.R.H.S. Subject: "England's Place in Universal History."

The terms are such as specially commend these Lectures to Identity friends. Address, Offices, 334, Strand, W.C.

TO AUTHORS. Authors desirous of issuing Works or Pamphlets on the great and increasingly interesting Question of the Identity of the Lost Ten Tribes with the British Nation, should first communicate with Robert Banks, of Racquet-court, Fleet-street, who has already been honoured by issuing, amongst others, the following works on the subject:

The Banner of Israel. Weekly 1d.; monthly 7d.
The Lost Ten Tribes, and 1882. By Dr. Wild.
The Sisters of Harrowdale Rectory. By Mrs Searson
The Pillar of Witness. By late Captain Tracey. Clot 2s. 6d.; paper 1s 6d (second edition).
The Anglo-Israel Post Bag. By Bishop Titcomb. Cloth 2s. 6d.; paper 1s. 6d. (second edition).
The History of the House of Israel. By Philo-Israel. Cloth 1s.; paper 6d. (ninth thousand).

ROBERT BANKS'S CATALOGUE OF WORKS ON THE IDENTITY OF THE BRITISH PEOPLE WITH THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL will be sent to any address, post free, on application. Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London.

Price 1s. Post free, 1s. 1d.

ISRAEL'S CHRONOLOGICAL CHART, with EXPLANATORY NOTES.—This Chart, compiled from the Old Testament on a new system, gives the A.M. and B.C. dates of one hundred important events in Israel's history, and exhibits the perfect agreement of Scripture with the marks and measurements of the Great Pyramid of Ghizeh.

May be had of the Author, GEO. N. WALSH, Western Bank, Sheffield; of Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C., and of all booksellers.

NEW BOOKS.

NOW READY, PRICE THREE-PENCE. Post free 4d.

THE ANGLO-ISRAEL ALMANACK FOR

1880.

THE ANGLO-ISRAEL ALMANACK

Contains a

LIST OF ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATIONS in various parts of the United Kingdom, with particulars as to place, time of meeting, Secretary's name and address, President, Committee, &c., &c. Also the following important Articles:—

THE "GATE" OF HIS ENEMIES.
By Philo-Israel.

THE GRAND CONSUMMATION.
By Thos. Clark Westfield.

THE HAND OF GOD IN ISRAEL'S HISTORY.
By W. S. Cavill.

LITERAL AND SPIRITUAL.
By Douglas A. Onslow.

THE PRESENT ASPECT OF AFFAIRS AND EMIGRATION.
By John S. Anderson.

WHAT THE SCRIPTURES SAY CONCERNING GOD'S DEALING WITH ISRAEL after their Dispersion (into Captivity —2 Kings xvii.) until their Latter Day Union with Judah and Subsequent Final Restoration to their own Land.
Arranged by James L. Wood.

EXTINCTION OF THE ABORIGINAL RACES IN BRITISH POSSESSIONS.
By Frederick Charles Danvers.

OUR ANCESTRAL PRIDE.
By Miss J. Lawrence.

EGYPT'S DIVINE MONUMENTAL TESTIMONY TO THE IMPENDING COMING OF OUR SAVIOUR.
By Charles Horner.

STAMPS, Taxes, Excise Duties, &c., Almanack and Diary, Moon's Changes, Sun's Rising and Setting, Gardening, Principal Festivals, Eclipses, Rates of Postage, &c., Royal Family, Sovereigns of Scotland from A.D. 1057 to the Union of the Crowns, the Ministry, Public Officers, &c., Area and Population of British India, with Estimate for the Native States; Emigration, 1857 to 1877; Statistics of the British Australian Colonies, English Weights and Measures, Foreign Moneys and their English Equivalents, Ready Reckoner, Table of Income or Wages.

London: ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.
W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

NOW READY, price 3s., post free 3s. 4d. Handsome cloth, gilt, printed on toned paper and illustrated.

THE LOST TEN TRIBES, AND

1882.

BY THE

REV. DR. JOSEPH WILD,
Of Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Printed and published by
ROBERT BANKS, RACQUET COURT, FLEET ST., LONDON, E.C.

And may be had, by ordering, of any Bookseller.

PHILO-ISRAEL (in the BANNER) says:—"We have much pleasure in directing attention to this handsome Identity volume. It contains twenty discourses of the well-known American divine, Dr. Joseph Wild, of Brooklyn, N.Y. We are glad to find from these discourses that Dr. Wild is quite one with us on this side the water with most, though not all, the views we entertain on our great and glorious subject. . . . We promise our readers that if they procure this work, and will peruse it, they will find 'our Identity' discussed in a clear, novel, racy, and 'American' point of view, which is sure to interest, sure to be instructive, and may lead the thoughtless and inquiring to pursue the investigation till possibly conviction may be the result."

NEW BOOKS.

A NEW TALE OF GREAT INTEREST FOR YOUNG PEOPLE ON THE IDENTITY OF LOST ISRAEL.

Now ready, price 2s. 6d., post free 2s. 9d. Bound in handsome cloth, gilt, bevelled boards, gilt edges, and beautifully printed on toned paper.

THE SISTERS OF HARROWDALE RECTORY.

BY

MRS. M. A. SEARSON,
ILLUSTRATED WITH
BEAUTIFUL DOUBLE-PAGE FRONTISPIECE.

Printed and Published by
ROBERT BANKS, RACQUET COURT, FLEET ST. LONDON, E.C.

And may be had, by ordering, of any Bookseller.

This book will be read with interest by both young and old, and found well suited for a BIRTHDAY GIFT, SUNDAY SCHOOL REWARD, OR PRESENT.

Price 9d., post free, 10d.

ARE WE ISRAELITES? THE TESTIMONY OF HISTORY, PHILOLOGY, AND ETHNOLOGY on the Subject. By the Rev. BOURCHIER WREY SAVILE, M.A., Rector of Shillingford, Exeter. With an Introduction by Philo-Israel.

CONTENTS: — Chapter I. Hard Speeches.—II. Opponents' Arguments.—III. Common Errors.—IV. The Sacæ. — V. The Cymry. — VI. Historical Testimony. — VII. Philology.—VIII. Chief of the Nations.—IX. Multiplicity of Seed.—X. The Anglo-Saxon Race.—XI. Anglo-Israel. —XII. Summary.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row; Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; or of any Bookseller.

Third edition, ninth thousand. Price 6d., post free 7d. limp cloth 1s.

HISTORY OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL HOW THEY WERE LOST AND HOW THEY WERE FOUND. Told for the Children by PHILO-ISRAEL.

OUR IDENTITY WITH THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. By PHILO-ISRAEL. Price 4d. Third Thousand (reprinted from the Clifton Chronicle).
Now ready, price 2d.

A REPLY TO MR. ROBERTS ON THE EXETER HALL DEBATE, on the Subject, Are Englishmen Israelites? By ALEXANDER DUNN.

Now ready, price 2d., post free 2½d., in neat coloured cover.

AMMI;
OR,
THE CHOSEN PEOPLE,
BY MISS BIRD.

Tracing the descent of the British people from Abraham, the "friend of God," and showing that true science, history, philology, and ethnology, are on the side of the Identity of the Anglo-Saxon race with the Ten Lost Tribes.

Price 2d. Post free 2½d.

MANASSEH AND THE UNITED STATES. An important Essay delivered before the "Lost Israel Identification Society," by the Rev. JOSEPH WILD, D.D at Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, New York.

BLESSINGS AND CURSES, AND THEIR RELATION TO ISRAEL AND JUDAH. By F. W. PHILLIPS, of Speedwell-road, Birmingham.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet Court, Fleet Street; and may be had, by ordering, of any bookseller.

Price 6d., post free 7d. New work on the Identity. Dedicated to all faithful ministers of Christ.

ISRAEL! AN EARNEST APPEAL FROM THE NEW TO THE PULPIT IN FAVOUR OF OUR IDENTITY WITH GOD'S ELECT PEOPLE, ISRAEL; Being a Letter from JOHN G. SHAW to his Pastor, Rev. Eustace R. Conder, of Leeds, with an Introduction and Notes; to be followed by a Review of Mr Conder's Papers on the Lost Tribes.

By the same Author.

"BRITAIN (OR ISRAEL)," with Map. Price 8d., post free 9d.
"CHRONOLOGICAL CHART." Price 3d., post free 3½d.
"GOD'S LOVE FOR ISRAEL." Price 1d., 3 copies sent post free for 3½d.

London: ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, DEC. 17, 1879. [All Rights Reserved.]

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. III. No. 156. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 24, 1879. [ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
"Peace and Safety"	509
Activity in Hastings and St. Leonards	510
A Word of Warning	510
A Stranger Doth Not Intermeddle. By L. P.	511
"Thy Kingdom Come. Thy Will be Done on Earth, as it is in Heaven. By Jared Dobeson	512
"The Birds" and "The Beasts"	513
A Note on Some Recent Suggestions Touching Certain Features in the Great Pyramid. By Charles Horner	514
The Lily. By R. W. D. Nickle, Major	514
Review	515
Correspondence	515

"PEACE AND SAFETY!"

OUR readers have doubtless noticed that the two words we have placed at the head of this paper are quoted from St. Paul, 1 Thess. v. 3, where they are read as follows: "When they shall say, Peace and safety, then sudden destruction cometh upon them," and the contrast is the fate of those represented by the Christians whom St. Paul addressed. "But YE, brethren, are not in darkness that THAT day should overtake you as a thief!" The epoch to which allusion was made by the apostle was "the latter days"—our times—when the Lord's "great and terrible day" should be near at hand. That day, we consider (guided by the Great Pyramid), will be near us—nay, at the very doors—in 1882; and now, when 1879 is drawing to its close, we ought to be hearing men "say, Peace and safety" as the sign-precedent to the "great earthquake such as was not since men were upon the earth;" which, we conclude, is synonymous and synchronous with what St. Paul terms "the day of the Lord."

Do we begin to find now that, contrary to the evidence of their senses, and in the teeth of facts which none can gainsay, men are actually at this moment talking of "peace and safety" for the Continent, when really the Lord means war and dreadful "sudden destruction coming, as travail upon a woman with child?" We certainly do! Let the reader judge if it be not so, when the Times spoke as it did on the 24th Sept., 1879. Commenting on the recent conference of the "Two Chancellors" at Vienna regarding the disturbed condition of Europe, and the alliance which it is understood was the result thereof, the editor said:—

It is well known, too, that Russia has watched the Austrian occupation of Bosnia with ill-concealed jealousy and mistrust, and only accepted with reluctance the portion of the Treaty of Berlin which sanctioned it. On this side, therefore, the understanding between Germany and Austria means a check to Russian aggression and restlessness, a maintenance of the international settlement accomplished last year, and a determination on the part of the central European Powers that the re-organisation of Eastern Europe shall be conducted at least as much under Western auspices as under the not very disinterested patronage of Russia. On whichever side we look, therefore, we may see in an Austro-German alliance a fresh guarantee that the peace and tranquillity of Europe will be maintained. It has little direct influence, perhaps, on the immediate interests of this country; but, as our interests are always those of peace, as we have nothing to gain and a great deal to lose from disquiet or disturbance in Europe, we cannot but regard with satisfaction an understanding which makes on all sides for peace, and furnishes in more than one direction a security against aggressive impulses, the existence of which it would be mere blindness to ignore.

Here is the Times lulling itself and Europe into the false security that matters are tending to "peace and safety" because Germany and Austria have just cemented the alliance which, as we have shown in a previous issue, is destined to constitute one of the hostile camps into which "yonder ill-consolidated Gentile Europe" is shortly to be divided. So literally is God's Word fulfilled! Men are only "to say, Peace and safety!" St. Paul does not say they shall really believe it! That were impossible. For what are the facts? The Daily Telegraph told us plainly, in the early part of September, 1879, in the following words:—

It is useless to disguise the fact that a dark and threatening cloud, which may, indeed, be dissipated, still hangs over Europe, casting its gloomy shade upon trade and commerce, and vexing the souls of men with apprehensions. In what quarter, and at what moment, if at all, it may break and discharge its dire load of horror and calamity we cannot venture to predict. It lowers above the Continent, alike in the Northern, Eastern, and Southern sky, portentous of difficulties to come and political tempests. Circumstances may retard the cataclysms of which it is darkly symptomatic, but not for long. The lives of a few men, some already advanced in years, interpose between the present generation and eventualities of the gravest character. So long as the thrones of Germany and Russia continue to be tenanted by their present occupants, no outbreak of actual hostilities between those Empires need be apprehended; nor is any rupture between France and Germany likely to accrue during the reign of William I. over the united fatherland. For the moment, "the nations do but murmur, snarling at each others' heels." But the state of Europe promises no respite from diplomatic problems. Angry feelings are being fostered and encouraged—national prejudices and antipathies are being revived and stimulated. With four millions of trained soldiers "straining on the leash," and an inexhaustible stock of grievances to quarrel over, Europe cannot congratulate herself just now upon the outlook of her affairs—at least, as far as concerns the proximate future of the chief nations inhabiting her continent. More than ever it is necessary to dismiss the amiable idea that English ministers have finished with foreign politics, and need henceforth only devote themselves to domestic or parochial matters.

Digitized by Google

The picture drawn is a terrible one, but not a stroke is overdrawn! And yet the Times speaks of "peace and safety," of the "peace and tranquillity of Europe being maintained"—speaking, too, in the very words of Scripture—"saying" what is not even likely to be true, and which no sane man in his heart believes will be the upshot of present eventualities.

But God's Word must be fulfilled. As men, against their own will, have brought to pass the words of the prophet Hosea when he predicted that "in the place where it should be said to Israel, 'Lo Ammi'" (not God's people), "there it should be said to them, 'Sons of the living God;'" so now the words of the prophet Paul are strangely verified, quite unwittingly, by the editor of the Times, who declares that the meeting of the Chancellors "cannot but be regarded with satisfaction" as "an understanding which makes on all sides FOR PEACE!" We venture to say that, on the contrary, the alliance is one which prepares for the greatest war this world ever saw; and that, instead of "peace and safety," we are destined to see ere long —in God's own appointed time—"sudden destruction coming upon them" (the Gentiles) "as travail upon a woman with child; and" (awful words) "they shall not escape!"

Reader, let us thank God for our Israelitish origin! What should we do, knowing these things, if our national fate led us to be involved in "this sudden destruction?" Blessed be God, there is reserved for us a very different lot! "God hath NOT appointed us to wrath," says the same prophet Paul, but to obtain salvation (or safety, σωτηρίας), temporal and spiritual both; and then the apostle gives us that admonition we strive so hard to impress also upon our readers, and which is the New Testament version of the Old Testament "Fear not" consolation. "Wherefore" (says St. Paul) comfort (or exhort) yourselves together and edify one another even as also ye do" (ver. 11). The scenes we shall hear and read of (but never see) in Europe will be, during that "destruction," awful and terrible beyond all description! But God says to us, His people Israel, not once, but over and over again: "Fear not! I will help THEE." "Fear not, I will help thee!" Let us praise the Lord for this His distinguishing mercy—a mercy we do not deserve, but which is ours because of the Lord's promise to "our forefather Abraham and his seed for ever"—purchased for us by the precious blood of Him "who died for us, that, whether we wake or sleep, we should live together with Him" (1 Thess. v. 10). In His sovereign love, He has set His heart upon His people Israel; declared He is married to them (Jer. iii. 14); that they are joint-heirs with Him (Rom. viii. 17); that they are His people, He their God and King, and destined to live with Him for ever! Israel, praise YE the Lord for these His stupendous mercies to our ungrateful race!

ACTIVITY AT HASTINGS AND ST. LEONARDS.

WE are glad to see the editor of the Hastings and St. Leonards Observer, of the 22nd November, 1879, noticed our associations there in the following terms:—

"The 'Anglo-Israelites' of Hastings and St. Leonards clearly do not intend to submit themselves to the extinguishing process to which some very enlightened folk would subject them. They are still alive, and literally kicking against what they believe to be the benighted state of the local mind over the doctrine of the descent of the British race from the Lost Ten Tribes. And they are hopeful, too, of ultimate success. They have made, they say, more converts than they could have anticipated, and they are looking to the time when the Anglo-Israel Association is to become a prominent institution of the borough."

A WORD OF WARNING
REGARDING 'O PYOMENOΣ.

WE desire to say a few words regarding a view of Isaiah lix. 20 and Rom. xi. 26 which some of our fellow-believers have adopted, and which seems to us both dangerous and unsupported by the Scriptures. We allude to the rendering of these passages which makes "the Redeemer who shall come to Zion and unto them that turn from ungodliness in Jacob," a mere earthly "deliverer," a human "redeemer" or "kinsman," a sinful man like ourselves, one who "shall come out," or "on account, of Sion," as St. Paul renders the passage quoted from Isaiah.

On reference to these Scriptures the first thing that strikes us is, that the two verses are not transcripts or translations of each other. St. Paul, following the LXX., speaks of the Deliverer ('ο ρυομενος) yet to come "out, or on account, of Sion;" Isaiah, of the "Redeemer" (the same individual) destined after his day "to come to Zion." 'ο ρυομενος 'εκ Σιων is distinctly THE Deliverer, THE redeeming One, coming "out," or "on account, of Sion;" but not "a" Deliverer, "who is to turn away ungodliness from Jacob" (Rom. xi. 26). We cannot find in God's Word any hint that a mere sinful man is ever recognised as capable himself of "turning men from their ungodliness" otherwise than instrumentally. Such instruments are described in Malachi iv. 6 and James v. 20.

But "the Redeemer or Deliverer" in the passages in question is described as acting in this matter as the principal or prime cause of the repentance of Israel: "For this is MY covenant unto them when I shall take away their sins." The Deliverer or Redeemer first came to Zion, we believe, when the Lord was born (A.D. 1). He will come "on account of" Sion, or "out" of Sion when the Identity is proclaimed and Israel is baptized universally with the Spirit in (say) A.D. 1881·6. Then will the Lord come "in the air" as the Divine One, once sacrificed in Sion; then will Psalm liii. 6 be fulfilled; then will the LORD deliver Israel first—nationally—from their sins (Jer. xxxi. 33, 34). The first coming was in humility, to end in Calvary. The next, in the air (as its first stage) to receive up part of the Church—that is, the "watching ones" of Israel, and to take "vengeance" on the Gentile world as a Man of war (1 Thess. iv. 17; Isa. xlii. 13, 14, lxiii. 4). This "coming" will, we suppose, be completed at the crisis of Armageddon, when the Lord descends to this earth with all His saints to save all Israel and Judah too, and to reign over His ancients in Mount Zion and in Jerusalem "gloriously" (Isa. xxiv. 23). And, meanwhile, before the proclamation of the Identity of the Ten Tribes, the Lord's fiat goes forth addressed, we think, to the Divine "Deliverer" or "Redeemer" (there can be none but a Divine sin-pardoning Redeemer—Psa. xlix. 7, 8) in these words: "As for Me this is My covenant with them, saith the Lord. My Spirit that is upon THEE and My words which I have put in thy mouth, shall not depart out of thy mouth, nor out of the mouth of thy seed, nor out of the mouth of thy seed's seed, saith the Lord, from henceforth and for ever." The Lord Jesus' "seed's seed" is the same, we presume, as that mentioned in Isa. liii. 10.

As a matter of Hebrew and Greek criticism (which, after all, must have much to say to such a subject as the one in question) we beg attention to the following, for which we are indebted to the Rev. Herbert Marriott, the Rev. James McIntosh, and other competent Hebrew scholars:—

"The words of Isaiah lix. 20 are plain and the construction the usual one. The definite article is not in the Hebrew; but the word used is "near kinsman"—Gôel, which applies to Jehovah in Gen. xlviii. 16: "The One redeeming me from all evil." In Psalm xix. 14 it is, "Jehovah my strength and my Redeemer."

Digitized by Google

In the prophecies the following is the use:—The word גּוֹאֵל Gôel occurs in Jer. l. 34, "Their Redeemer is strong, Jehovah his name;"in Isa. lxiii. 16, "Our Redeemer, Thy name from everlasting;" Isa. xlviii. 17, "Jehovah, thy Redeemer;" Isa. xli. 14, "Thy Redeemer, the Holy One of Israel;" Isa. xliii. 14, "Jehovah, your Redeemer;" Isa. xliv. 6, "His Redeemer, Jehovah of hosts;" Isaiah xlvii. 4, "As for our Redeemer, Jehovah of hosts is His name;" Isa. xlix. 7, "Jehovah, Redeemer of Israel" (no definite article); Isa. liv. 5, "Thy Redeemer, the Holy One of Israel;" Isa. liv. 8, Jehovah, thy Redeemer; Isa. lix. 20, Redeemer goes to Zion (no definite article); Isa. lx. 16 and xlix. 26, "Thy Redeemer, the mighty One of Jacob."

Let the reader reflect! Here are fifteen passages in which Moses, David, Isaiah, and Jeremiah used this word, and in fourteen the name "Redeemer" applies manifestly to Jehovah. Would it not be strange indeed if another person—a mere man—was meant in Isa. lix. 20 only, differing in all respects from Jehovah, the "Mighty One" specified in all the rest? Who can "turn away sin" from Jacob but "The Mighty One?" A sinful mortal? Never!

"The literal exact translation of Isaiah lix. 20 is (says Mr. Marriott) as follows:—'And goes to Zion Redeemer (or Kinsman) and to turners from wickedness in Jacob, declares Jehovah.' St. Paul follows the LXX., which reads, 'And shall come for the sake of Sion, the Rescuer; and shall turn away sins from Jacob.' St. Paul appears to have changed the ἕνεκεν into ἐκ ('out of'); 'but, if so, it really means the same thing, having the force of 'out of regard for;' and St. Paul's translation will bear this English: 'Out of regard for Zion, the Deliverer shall come forth, for those who turn away from sin, of Jacob'—that is, 'to take away their sins, to remember them no more, and to receive them again to His own favour.'"

So far the Rev. H. Marriott. No mere mortal, full of sin, and wanting redemption himself or herself, can fulfil the exigency of Isa. lix. 20 and Rom. xi. 26. We beg our readers, therefore, putting away the errors which we indicate, to adopt the only possible reading of these prophecies, as true believers in "our Identity," according to the Scriptures. To do otherwise is to dishonour our blessed Jehovah-Jesus, to bring "our Identity" into disrepute, and to stultify the Word of God.

A STRANGER DOTH NOT INTERMEDDLE.

We have been shown by Philo-Israel that Isa. i. 26 has been undergoing the process of fulfilment since our Constitution was formed, or rather restored, in accordance with God's promise, on the gathering together of the Tribes of Israel in "the wilderness" or the Isles of the West. We say advisedly in process of fulfilment, because the revival was not at once made perfect and entire, since for instance our legislators do not unfortunately answer the requirements as yet of Exod. xviii. 21. We are also about to suggest that a very important step will have to be taken before the promise of Isa. i. 26 can be fulfilled in another particular.

We hold that Deut. i. 15 and Exod. xviii. 21 prove that the rulers of the people were to be chosen entirely from among themselves, if proof could be required for what common sense would suggest, as a needs be, considering the exceptional position of Israel in relation to the "God of Israel," and as compared to all other nations. Therefore if the "judges and counsellors" of Israel are to be wholly restored, as at the beginning, we would contend that no foreign element can possibly be allowed to share in such rule, and that no foreigner or stranger, whose original extraction has not been wholly merged and lost sight of, by contact and absorption into Israel, can be permitted to hold sway in his councils and government.

We have been frequently shown by our Identity writers, and various historical proofs have been adduced, that the Southern Roman Catholic Irish are descended from the Canaanites or Philistines, &c., and are permitted to be a cross in our lot in accordance with punishment awarded to our forefathers in Num. xxxiii. 55. Centuries have failed to eradicate the signs of these Irish being a different race from that of the rulers and owners of the land where they dwell together. Their habits, characters, countenances, and adherence to a false religion set their indelible seal on them, and stamp them as aliens to the British, while deep in their hearts seems to dwell a hatred of the Saxon race, that no justice, kindness, patience, or liberality can apparently destroy.

Fragments may be broken off the main body, and in due course be swallowed up by, and all distinctiveness lost in, the general masses of Ephraim or Manasseh; but wherever a body of these our ancient foes congregate, there will assuredly be found the usual features of rebellion, discontent, and disturbance.

The Parliamentary history of the last few years is very significant, as regards the obstructive part that has been played by the members of the Lower House, who represent the disaffected portion of Ireland. This determinate obstructiveness has burst forth in a most troublesome and obstinate form, when least to be expected. People were looking for a better and more reasonable state of things in the Emerald Isle than had ever before existed. Wealthy landlords dwelt amongst their tenants, improved their properties for the benefit of all, and studied the comfort and well being of the peasantry. Traffic and prosperity had increased, religion was free, education encouraged, and an obnoxious established Church removed. What has been the result? The uplifting of the cry for "Home Rule" which is shouted forth, and grows louder and louder, bringing in its wake insidious words provocative of savage acts, and impediments to the advancement of needful business in the Imperial Parliament.

We think there is a lesson to be learnt from all this, and that is, that the Canaanite has no place rightfully in the councils of Israel, and that they shall, and must, go thence. For the counsellors of the Lord's chosen people are to be as at the beginning, alone provided "out of all the people" (Exod. xviii. 21). That there might be tremendous difficulties in expelling the Canaanite from the Imperial councils, and in making after arrangements, we are ready to admit; but difficulties in doing what is right are seen and acknowledged by the brave and true hearted, but to be fought, and in the end overcome, and the impossible is a term we do not find in our vocabulary, in connection with the revealed will of God.

Let it not be supposed that for a moment we imagine any portion of our dominions are to be cut off and parted with. Ireland is a portion of Israel's kingdom, given by the Great Ruler, and whatever changes may be made in its rule, from that kingdom it will never be rent. We believe that what God has given to us He has given to us lastingly, for surely in temporal, as in spiritual, things, God's gifts to His people are "without repentance." We are the "United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland," and may we not now add, of the colonies? and united we think we shall continue.

For some purpose of good, of that we do not doubt, the Canaanite was permitted to share for a time the rule over Israel, amidst the "counsellors" of the nation. But we distinctly confess our belief that the time is at hand when the councils of the nation shall be purged from this foreign element, and then, and not till then, can we expect it shall become as "at the beginning."

What part is to be played hereafter in the great stone kingdom by that enemy who, by being allowed to dwell in the land given to God's people (Num. xxxiii. 55), was to become a torment, a vexation, a perplexity, and a religious snare for many a long year in the then far away future, is not now revealed.

Digitized by Google

We have little doubt, however, that submissive love is eventually to take the place of hatred, and mistrust and false accusations be succeeded by confidence and a ready trust; while false religion and idolatry will be exchanged for the pure worship of the God of Israel and Saviour of the world, through the teaching of the Holy Spirit.

L. P.

December, 1879.

"THY KINGDOM COME. THY WILL BE DONE ON EARTH, AS IT IS IN HEAVEN."

By Jared Dobeson.

These words form neither the beginning nor the end of the prayer which our Lord taught His disciples, but may be said to be the very heart.

Those who believe that this kingdom has already come cannot consistently use this prayer. Ever since the time when Christ dwelt among the children of men have His followers never ceased to pray, "Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done on earth, as it is in heaven."

If it, however, be claimed by some that this kingdom means the reign of God in the hearts of believers, then we may justly conclude that its existence does not commence with the appearance of Christ among men, for we may date its existence back throughout the whole of the Old Testament times.

How the introduction of Christianity can be confounded with the reign of Christ, for which Christ Himself taught His disciples to pray, seems to me difficult to understand; besides, we see the whole creation still groaneth and travaileth, and Satan exercising great power; but when Christ reigns, all enemies shall be put under His feet, and then shall the Lord be King over all the earth. "For the kingdom is the Lord's, and He is Governor among the people" (Psa. xxii. 28). "All kings shall fall down before Him: all nations shall do Him service" (Psa. lxxii. 11). "When the Lord shall build up Zion, and when His glory shall appear" (Psa. cii. 16). "I will make them one nation in the land upon the mountains of Israel; and one king shall be over them all: and they shall be no more two nations, neither shall they be divided into two kingdoms any more at all. . . . . And David My servant shall be king over them" (Ezek. xxxvii. 24). "Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will raise up unto David a righteous Branch, and a King shall reign and prosper, and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth. In His days Judah shall be saved, and Israel shall dwell safely: and this is the name whereby He shall be called, The Lord our Righteousness" (Jer. xxiii. 5, 6). "And the Lord God will give Him the throne of David His father: and He shall reign over the House of Jacob for ever: His kingdom shall have no end" (Luke i. 32).

To-day, we pray, "Thy will be done on earth, as it is in heaven:" but, during Christ's reign, God shall bless us, and all the earth shall fear Him.

Now, we ask God to "give us this day our daily bread;" but in those days shall the earth bring forth her increase, and God shall give us His blessing.

Now we labour under the curse; then it will be removed.

Again, we ask God to "forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive them that trespass against us (for if ye forgive others their trespasses, your heavenly Father will also forgive you)." To-day we frequently reap ingratitude for services rendered; and the number of those who forgive men their trespasses is not extremely numerous, and it may be doubted if we have made the progress in Christian love to our neighbour we ought to have made considering the knowledge we possess, and the advancement of civilisation: but this principle of love and equity can only be carried universally into practice when God shall write His law in our hearts, and when every man shall know the Lord from the least unto the greatest. To love God and not to love our neighbour means a contradiction, for the one implies the other.

Again, we pray, Leave us not in the hour of temptation, "but deliver us from all evil;" then all enemies shall be put under His feet, and by virtue of the preceding change and the removal of the tempter, "the knowledge of the Lord shall cover the earth as the waters cover the sea."

This brings us to that period mentioned in the concluding words of our prayer: "For Thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, for ever. Amen." "For, behold, I create new heavens and a new earth: and the former shall not be remembered, nor come into mind. But be ye glad and rejoice for ever in that which I create: for, behold, I create Jerusalem a rejoicing, and her people a joy. And I will rejoice in Jerusalem, and joy in My people; and the voice of weeping shall be no more heard in her, nor the voice of crying. There shall be no more thence an infant of days, nor an old man that hath not filled his days: for the child shall die an hundred years old; but the sinner being an hundred years old shall be accursed. The voice of weeping," &c.

("Because of untimely deaths, shall no more be heard in thee: for natural death shall not happen till men be full of days; as it is written (ver. 20), 'There shall be no more thence an infant of days'—i.e., the people shall live to three or five hundred years of age, as in the days of the patriarchs; and if one die at one hundred years, it is because of his sin; and even at that age he shall be reputed an infant; and they shall say of him, An infant is dead. These things shall happen to Israel in the days of the Messiah." Kimchi.—Dr. Adam Clarke's Commentary.)

"And they shall build houses, and inhabit them; and they shall plant vineyards, and eat the fruit of them.

"They shall not build, and another inherit; they shall not plant, and another eat: for as the days of a tree are the days of My people, and Mine elect shall long enjoy the work of their hands."

Here we see the curse is removed. "The length of days is compared to the days of a tree, which, in the case of the oak, lasts about a thousand years; being five hundred years growing to full perfection, and as many decaying. The prophet's idea seems to be that they shall live to the age of the antediluvians; which seems to be very justly expressed by the days of a tree, according to our notion.

"The Rabbins have said that this refers to the tree of life, which endures 500 years."—Dr. Adam Clarke.

"They shall not labour in vain, nor bring forth for trouble; for they are the seed of the blessed of the Lord, and their offspring with them."

(That is, they shall not generate a short-lived race).

"And it shall come to pass, that before they call, I will answer; and while they are yet speaking, I will hear.

"The wolf and the lamb shall feed together, and the lion shall eat straw like the bullock: and dust shall be the serpent's meat. They shall not hurt nor destroy in all My holy mountain, saith the Lord" (Isa. lxv. 17—25).

Christ's kingdom is inseparable from Israel and Judah, as we are told, "The Deliverer shall come out of Zion and shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob" (Rom. xi. 26).

The conversion of Israel and Judah will be the coronation day of the Messiah. These two events are indissolubly united, as the prophets unanimously declare.

"And He shall judge among the nations, and shall rebuke many people; and they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruninghooks: nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more" (Isa. ii. 4).

"And the wolf also shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid; and the calf and the young lion and the fatling together, and a little child shall lead them" (xi. 6).

Digitized by Google

"And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away" (Rev. xxi. 4).

Then follows a description of the city of Jerusalem: "And the nations of them which are saved shall walk in the light of it: and the kings of the earth do bring their glory and honour into it" (ver. 24).

This description is uniformly maintained throughout the whole of the Bible, exhibiting one great and glorious period, the reign of Christ, or "Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done on earth, as it is in heaven."

"Because the creature itself also shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God.

"For we know that the whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain until now.

"And not only they, but we ourselves also, which have the firstfruits of the Spirit, even we ourselves groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of our body" (Rom. viii. 21—23).

Here the apostle shows the suffering state of the whole creation brought upon us by the sin of one man by whose disobedience sin and death entered into the world.

"Violence shall no more be heard in thy land, wasting nor destruction within thy borders; but thou shalt call thy walls Salvation, and thy gates Praise" (Isa. lx. 18).

"Thy sun shall no more go down; neither shall thy moon withdraw itself: for the Lord shall be thine everlasting light, and the days of thy mourning shall be ended" (ver. 20).

"And I heard a great voice out of heaven saying, Behold the tabernacle of God is with men, and He will dwell with them, and they shall be His people, and God Himself shall be with them, and be their God" (Rev. xxi. 3).

In reading the book of the Revelation, we must take into consideration the period and circumstances under which it was written. Nero, who tortured the early Christians, was ever ready to find a pretext whereby to gratify his fiendish inclinations. And doubtless the apostle was guided by the Holy Spirit to clothe his utterances in such a way as to be understood only by Christians; hence, by observing the leading features of it, we shall be able to see the overthrow of those corrupt cities which existed then, with their different religions, and the final triumph of Christ's kingdom. The removal of the curse, Christ as the second Adam; the complete fulfilment of Jehovah's promises to His people Israel and Judah, a united Church, brotherly love, earnestness instead of cold formality, when men will be truly delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God; and it may be safely assumed that these figures of speech in the Revelation, which refer to a new heaven and a new earth, mean a great change in the universe, and have reference to the words of Isa. lxv. 17, which it is more reasonable to suppose is intended to convey the idea of the earth undergoing a complete restoration, than of it being finally destroyed, wherein dwelleth righteousness, when Christ shall be Head over all, "and the sucking child shall play on the hole of the asp, and the weaned child shall put its hand on the cockatrice's den. They shall not hurt nor destroy in all My holy mountain: for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea" (Isa. xi. 8, 9).

"Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done on earth, as it is in heaven."

Gateshead.

PUBLISHER'S NOTICE.—We would respectfully remind Subscribers that the yearly Subscriptions are now due. For particulars see last page.

"THE BIRDS" AND "THE BEASTS."

COMMANDER G. ROBERTS, R.N., at a late meeting of the Clifton Israel's Identification Association, made some observations on the subject of the Scriptural distinction between the figurative expressions above indicated—"the birds" and "the beasts" of prophecy—which struck us as being forcible and original. He asked us to notice the "Ten-Tribed prophecy" of our Lord in Matt. xiii. 31, 32, wherein He likened the British-Israelite Empire to a vast tree sprung from a single grain of mustard seed, so great that "the birds of the air come and lodge in the branches thereof." Not a word is mentioned here of the beasts of the "earth." No shelter or lodging is afforded THEM by the great mustard or (shall we say?) "pepul" tree. It is only a shelter for the "birds of the air." Why is this?

Again the speaker bade us notice that when the great slaughter of the enemies of Israel's Captain takes place, as described in Rev. xix. 15—20, the invitation to feed on them, spoil them, and enter on the possession of what appertains to them, is issued "to the fowls that fly in the midst of heaven," and "all the fowls were filled with their flesh. No beasts of the earth were (in the New Testament Scripture) invited or allowed to partake of that "supper of the great God," though in Ezek. xxxix. 17, those of the field are distinctly included. The fowls or birds of the air only—those presumably "lodging" under the protection or "shadow" of the great tree—were permitted (in the Rev. of St. John) to have this privilege.

Turning to the Old Testament, we find the same figures presented to us in Ezek. xvii. 23, 24. The Lord plants "the tender one of the highest branch of the high cedar," and sets the regal stem upon a "high mountain and eminent" (in Irish Dan). It is "the height of Israel," and the "tender one" brings forth her branches and bears fruit, and becomes a "goodly cedar" (even the British monarchy). Under it there were to dwell "all fowl of every wing;" in the "shadow of the branches" (the colonial Empire) thereof shall they dwell."

We notice here, again, that the "goodly cedar" (or, we may add, the PEPUL tree) harbours the "birds of the air," and "all fowl of every wing;" but not a word is said of any refuge being afforded to "the beasts of the earth." These seem excluded from the noble tree's world-wide protection. It clearly affords them none. But protection from what? It is heat, fire, destruction, earthquake, "fiery deluge," that these "beasts" have to expect, since they are of the "earth," earthy; and, therefore, the "tree" of Israel and its world-wide colonial branches are forbidden to give THEM "shadow," protection, comfort, lodging, or refuge from the coming storm.

The "fowls" "dwell" or naturalise in the colonies or "branches" of the cedar and pepul, but the beasts have no such right, and fail to exercise it, or obtain what cannot be theirs. What is the fate, then, of the earthly "beasts," and where is their meaning explained to us? In Daniel vii. There we find the history of the four great "earthly beasts" divulged. The first is like a lion (not a real lion, but "like" one); the next like a bear; the third like a leopard; and the last, the great and terrible one with the iron teeth, which destroyed the residue of the beasts with its feet, but was itself destroyed by the power of the Ancient of Days; and the kingdom, and dominion, and greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, appertaining to these four great beasts (or KINGDOMS of the EARTH—ver. 17, 18), was finally given to THE PEOPLE of the saints of the Most High, "whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey Him" (ver. 27).

In this vision we find "the earthly beasts" are doomed entirely to destruction, but no mention is made of "the birds of the air" or "fowls of every wing" as participating in that destruction. The earthly "beasts," then, are the accursed rulers of "the earth," holding power from Satan, enemies of God's Israel, the "kingdoms" represented by the head, the breast, and arms, belly and thighs, legs, feet, and toes of the metallic image of Daniel ii. 35—44, destined to break up into a thousand pieces, and to give place to "the people of the saints of the Most High"—"the children of Israel"—THE BRITISH (Psalm cxlviii. 14).

Digitized by Google

Who, then, are these "birds of the air," "the fowls of every wing?" They are those nations, we believe, who, being territorially outside the Medo-Persian Greco-Roman EARTH of the "metallic man," are "the heathen" or "Goyim" of the Scriptures; "the nations" "given" of the Lord to Christ's own inheritance, the "overcoming" Twelve Tribes of Israel, for them "to dash and to break in shivers and to pieces like a potter's vessel;" "to rule with a rod of iron," and to bring them ALL finally to Christ (Psa. ii. 8—12; Rev. ii. 26, 27). Their's is the privilege, therefore, as "birds of the air," to take shelter and lodging under the "shadow" of the branches of the cedar, pepul, or mustard tree of British-Israel's colonial and heathen Empires; to participate (with the beasts of the field, not of the earth) in the "spoil" of Europe, perhaps as Israel's Sepoys or mercenary troops, what time "yonder ill-consolidated" territory is devastated with "our God's indignation, all His fierce anger," and devoured with the "fiery deluge of His jealousy;" what time, too, the chief prince of Rosh meets his doom at Armageddon!

Such is Commander Roberts' explanation of these figures, and we present them to our readers as what we believe to be original lines of thought, but which, at any rate, whether original or not, are new to us, and to BANNER readers generally. We believe they are as true as they are new to us, and we beg our friends to give them their due consideration as valuable "Identity" light.

A NOTE ON SOME RECENT SUGGESTIONS TOUCHING CERTAIN FEATURES IN THE GREAT PYRAMID.

BY CHARLES HORNER.

I NOTICE the BANNER, pages 418—46, contains articles by N. M. B. and Mr. J. F. Wood respectively, in which they make some suggestions on parts of the structure which have not, as yet, received a full and satisfactory elucidation.

I think the chronological questions relating to the low passage, and to the House of Judah, present difficulties; but it may interest your readers to know that our excellent friend and kinsman of Israel, Mr. Thomas Wilson, of Chicago, the editor of Our Rest, in a late private letter, writes to me as follows:—

". . . . I have been for some time prayerfully engaged in the study of that greatest wonder of earth, 'the Witness,' and the Lord has, at last, blessed my investigations by revealing to me what I sought after—viz., a perfect chronology, reaching back to the beginning of the world. I have felt impressed for some time with the idea that this building of His, so perfect in all other respects, would not fall short here, and so it has proven. The testimony is gradually being given, and in every instance it witnesses for the truth of that good old Book, the Holy Bible. O how my heart rejoices in this fact, that whilst thousands are trampling under foot this best boon of man, yet scarcely a day passes that God does not bring forth some new evidence of its truthfulness and authenticity . . . ."

Here, then, is a very remarkable and encouraging announcement from one who believes he has received great light from the Source of all light, even from Him who opened the understandings of those early disciples that they might understand the Scriptures. Wherefore, we may hope that he possesses the wisdom which shall clear away all obscurity and adjust all difficulties which at present surround the chronological problems adverted to. And let us remember that though on the one hand the revelations have been given to us with startling rapidity, yet the knowledge communicated, first to one here and another there, has uniformly been given by degrees.

In conclusion, I may notice in reference to the Northern "air channel," that since it does not open into the low passage or the ante-chamber, N. M. B.'s proposed interpretation cannot for a moment be maintained. Both channels enter the king's, or coffer-chamber, and, therefore, rather refer to an order of things pertaining to the new heavens and new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness. Where He that hath the key of David, who openeth and no man shutteth; whose gates are open continually, and where those made white by the blood of the Lamb, shall, as angels of God, have power to enter in and out.

THE LILY.

THE FORM OF THE LILY IN HERALDRY.

THE fleur-de-lis of heraldry is the bearing or cognisance of the Bourbons of France. This conventional form is understood to represent the lily, which is placed alternately with the Maltese cross upon the crown of Great Britain (Gen. xii. 2, xlviii. 19). Our history informs us that King Edward III. took possession of Calais in August, A.D. 1347, and that it was retaken by the Duke of Guise in 1558. In 1658 Dunkirk surrendered to Oliver Cromwell, and was sold by Charles II. to France for £400,000.

Thus we learn why some of our kings were styled Sovereigns, by the grace of God, of England, France, and Ireland, &c., &c., and why the fleur-de-lis appeared upon the Royal shield of the British nation in former times.

Now it is remarkable that when the British nation had no longer any territory in France, and, consequently, had to resign the proud title of Sovereign of France with the fleur-de-lis upon the shield, that the fleur-de-lis should be upon the Crown of Great Britain at the present time; one would naturally have supposed that this heraldic emblem would have been discontinued; but it appears to have been designed by the God of Israel to be attached to the Crown of the great nation, because we find that it is written, "I am the Rose of Sharon and the Lily of the valleys" (Cant. ii. 1), and that the Lord who is thus mentioned has declared by the mouth of His prophet, "I will be as a dew unto Israel: he shall grow (or blossom) as the lily, and (strike) cast forth his roots as Lebanon" (Hosea xiv. 5; Isaiah xxvii. 6). The whole of this chapter of Hosea is clearly applicable to the Anglo-Saxon nation at the present time, and accounts for the Israelitish emblem being seen in the conventional form of heraldry upon the Crown of her Majesty Victoria, the great Queen of Israel, by the grace of God.

Concerning the temple of Jerusalem it is mentioned, "That the chapiters that were upon the top of the pillars were of lily work in the porch, four cubits. And he (Hiram) set up the pillars in the porch of the temple: and he set up the right pillar, and called the name thereof Jachin (i.e., He shall establish): and he set up the left pillar, and called the name Boaz" (i.e., in it is strength—1 Kings vii. 19, 21, 22, 26). These pillars appear to signify that the Lord has established the House of Israel to show forth His glory and praise in the isles of the West" (Isaiah xlii. 12, xliii. 21). "And in it is strength." "He (Israel) shall blossom as the lily." This is signified by the heraldic form of the lily on the Crown of the nation as it appeared on the crown of the pillars in God's house. Our Saviour in His sermon on the mount drew the attention of His hearers to the remarkable beauty of the lily: "Consider the lilies of the field how they grow: they toil not, neither do they spin: and yet I say unto you that Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these" (Matt. vi. 28, 29).

Digitized by Google

In conclusion, as our Lord is called "the lion of the Tribe of Judah," so He is also called the lily; and as He has stated through the mouth of His prophet that Israel was to grow and blossom as the lily, the Lord, therefore, chose the lily as the Israelitish emblem that should appear upon the Crown of the British nation in these latter days as one of the many Identifications of the Anglo-Saxon nation being the long-lost, now found, House of Israel who were to blindly fulfil (unknown to themselves) His sacred promises made to Abraham (Gen. xxii. 15—18; Isa. xlii. 19; Romans. xi. 25).

It is to be observed that the heraldic form of the lily has a triple appearance united, significant of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland.

R. W. D. NICKLE, Major.

Leamington, Oct. 20, 1878.

Review.

The British Nation Proved to be the Remnant of Israel, &c. The second of a series of lectures by J. H. Weldon, J.P. (Kilmalloch). Purnell & Co., Cork; George Herbert, Dublin, &c. Price fourpence.

WE are glad to receive a second lecture delivered, and since published, by Mr. J. H. Weldon, J.P. It is a thoughtful, carefully weighed essay on our subject that will repay perusal. Mr. Weldon strongly urges the necessity for distinguishing Judah from Israel in the prophetic Scriptures—points to Ezek. xxxvii. as proof of the literal character of the prophecies, and remarks that no one can read the Old Testament Scriptures without seeing the value of the "great prize to be attained by whatever people shall prove to be the remnant of the Lost House of Israel." We wish our opponents could recognise this! We are sorry our author has gravely alluded to the initial letters of our four British nationalities as representing the word "Jews," for in truth there is no force whatever in this argument. Setting this aside, the pamphlet is full of valuable thought, and well deserves careful study.

Correspondence.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—The Church of God has in all ages been a great factor in the changes which have taken place in the Empires and kingdoms of the world, so much so, that the very bounds of the Gentile world are such as to leave the necessary room on the earth for the children of Israel. We are always conscious when we mention Israel as "the Church of God," that we are committing a grave error according to our opponents' views; but we are, nevertheless, reluctant to keep back a grand truth simply to avoid offence. We never have contended that the Church of God were simply Israelites and only the descendants of Jacob; but we look upon the chosen people of God as the olive tree, and the Gentiles who have been "grafted in" as branches from the wild olive tree. We make this affirmation with no pride, but simply as a declaration of the Word of God.

It is a leading thought with those who believe in a "spiritual Israel," that the Church of God is a "hidden people," born again by the Word of God, and of whom this world is not worthy. We, as Christians, believe just the same, with this difference, that we believe "the Church of Christ"—the bride, "the Lamb's wife"—has an immense influence over this world's polity, and has succeeded in getting the world somewhat to pay honour and partial obedience to their Lord and Master. Scripture will fully bear us out in this idea. Rev. xii. 1—6 gives the greatest support to this view. "The woman" therein mentioned, clothed with the sun and the moon under her feet, is clearly none other than the Church of God clothed with the righteousness of Christ and also with other signs, showing dominion and authority. She is the spouse of Christ, but we read she was with child and pained to be delivered. But what does she bring forth? "A man-child, which was to rule all nations with a rod of iron;" this "man-child" was caught up to God and to His throne.

Some would, therefore, interpret the man-child as Christ Himself; but this will hardly bear second thought when we consider that "the Church" is "the woman," and the Church could not have borne Christ, but Christ the Church. We find that Scripture will in this case, as in all others, fully explain who "the woman" was and who "the man-child" she brought forth was. Isaiah lxvi. 5—8 declares that the "Church of God" is none other than Zion, which was to bring forth a "man-child," and that man-child the same passage affirms—viz., ver. 8—is a nation. This nation, then, was to rule all nations with a rod of iron; and, according to the book of Revelation, this nation was to be the offspring of the Church of God. Here, then, we have a spiritual power acting through an earthly power in the advancement of the kingdom of Christ. Christ is the power that breaks the nations—Israel the medium. But thou "Israel art My servant." But though apparently an earthly power, it is, nevertheless, composed not of the "saints of the Most High exclusively," but also of the "people of the saints (woman) of the Most High." This nation, however, though an earthly one at present, was destined to hold a very high position, to be caught up, in fact, to God and to His throne.

In conclusion let me notice that this man-child was to exist during the time of the beast and red dragon. Where is that nation? Our answer is that in Great Britain is that nation—a people near unto the Lord; for "He hath not dealt so with any nation, and as for His judgments, they have not known them. Praise ye the Lord" (Psa. cxlvii. 19, 20). Yours truly, 13, Aberdeen-terrace, Clifton, H. SOWDON.

Nov. 30, 1879.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—It may be gratifying to you to know that here, in the South of Ireland, there are those who are greatly interested in the matter of which your paper treats, and who have become regular subscribers.

When writing lately to an old and valued standard-bearer, I mentioned an idea of mine for his consideration, styling it an extravagant conjecture; he replied: "I like your 'extravagant conjecture;' you ought to send it to 'Philo-Israel.'" I therefore venture to do so. It is this:—

1st. Israel, in her "Lo-Ammi" condition, was to be brought into the wilderness, and there comforted, &c. (Hos. ii. 14; Ezek. xx. 35.)

2nd. The faithful Church, or sun-clad woman, was to flee to the wilderness (Rev. xii. 6).

Wilderness, in both connections, seems to mean a "hidden place," or place of concealment, where blessing, and strengthening, and covenant-nearness was promised.

The "protesting" Church has had her true home and refuge in Britain. We recognise that Israel has also been led there. If so, Britain is "the wilderness," and the twofold prophecy has one fulfilment. Truly yours,

D. H.

NOTE BY THE EDITOR.—We refer our clerical correspondent to Vol. I., Nos. 23 and 25, pages 190 and 206, of the BANNER, for two papers on "Israel's Wilderness," where he will find the idea enlarged on. We republish it now, as confirmation is always acceptable.—ED.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—May I point out that the passages in Mr. Wilson's works, quoted by the writer of the article in your last number, on the late John Wilson's view of the "Gate," do not necessarily bear, and I fully believe were not intended to bear the meaning which he attributes to them?

Agreeing with earlier commentators in understanding possession of an enemy's Gate to signify having the power to rule over, or control him, Mr. Wilson, as I understand what he has written, says, in effect, that Israel, having multiplied and gained the power of ruling and controlling his enemies since he has been dwelling in the North Country, is now spreading on all sides, to do the same in the other quarters of the globe.

By having "gone out of it" he meant having gone out of the North Country, not having gone out of the "Gate."

There is no doubt some ambiguity in the words quoted; but they should be taken in connection with the context, and what he has said on the subject elsewhere. Yours truly, Dunmore House, Stanwell, Staines, JAMES E. NELSON.

4th December, 1879.

NOTICE TO OUR READERS.—Our next number will consist of 20 pages including a 4 page supplement; giving reports of the lectures, meetings, &c., of the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association. This will be the largest Identity paper ever issued, and we trust our friends will give it a wide circulation. The Price will be 2d.

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements

(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O.O payable at Ludgate-circus.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed :—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS. SUBSCRIPTIONS for the NEW YEAR should now be sent to the Publisher.

	£	s.	d.
Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free	0	7	6
Two copies (including Double Numbers) ...	0	12	4
Three " " " " ...	0	18	8
Four " " " " ...	1	6	2
Six " " " " ...	1	17	4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-Grand, London, to W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

TWO NESTORIAN YOUTHS, aged respectively about 20 and 13 years, have just finished their first year at school in England. They are at Monkton Combe College, Bath, and are being educated at their own and their father's request to become missionaries to the East. They continue earnest in their intentions, and their conduct and progress have been excellent. Inquiries may be addressed to the Rev. R. G. Bryan, M.A., Monkton Combe, Bath, and to Colonel Gawler, Tower of London, E.C. Subscriptions for "NESTORIAN EDUCATION FUND" received by Messrs. Barclay, Bevan and Co., 54, Lombard-street, London, E.C.

NO SALARY. A CHRISTIAN LADY (middle-aged) desires a re-engagement in a Christian Home, as COMPANION, HOUSEKEEPER, AMANUENSIS, or in any capacity not menial. Laundress and travelling expenses required. Good references. Address, A., 2, Stanhope-terrace, Horncastle.

"OUR REST" FOR 1880. This is a Monthly Magazine devoted to the subject of the Great Pyramid, Christ's Second Coming, and the preparation of the Church for this great event. For two years past it has been devoted to these subjects, and has been the means of doing much good if the testimony of many of its readers is received. Pyramid articles and illustrations in every number. It is the only paper in the United States exclusively devoted to these subjects. Beginning with the number for January, 1880, a series of articles will be introduced in the shape of EASY PYRAMID LESSONS, in which the subject will be adapted to the understanding of the unlearned.—Thomas Wilson, Publisher, Chicago, U.S.A. London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane. Subscriptions: post free, 5s. per year, payable in advance.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

PRESIDENT: VISCOUNT FOLKESTONE, M.P.

The Hon. Sec. will be pleased to receive APPLICATIONS FOR LECTURES, irrespective of distance, for the New Year. In addition to those delivered with marked success during the last few months under the auspices of this Association, the following NEW LECTURES are specially prepared :—

DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, Esq., J.P. Subject : "The Anglo-Saxons—the Chosen People."

CHARLES STUBBS, Esq., B.A. (London University). Subject : "Our Scythian Ancestors."

REV. JAMES BILLINGTON, F.S.A., F.R.H.S. Subject : "England's Place in Universal History."

The terms are such as specially commend these Lectures to Identity friends. Address, Offices, 334, Strand, W.C.

THE NEW OLD STORY, with an Introduction to a Marvellous Puzzle. The Story gives a sketch of the History of the Hebrews, shewing distinctly the difference between the Two Nations, Judah and Israel, the latter being the British. The Story also tells of the Great Pyramid, and explains how its wonderful meaning can be, as it is only understood by measurement. An Appendix explains "The Eastern Question." The Story is written with great simplicity, and interests young children. By A E I, Author of "The Answer to the Eastern Question." London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

NEW BOOKS.

NOW READY, PRICE THREE-PENCE. Post free 4d.

THE ANGLO-ISRAEL ALMANACK FOR

1880.

THE ANGLO-ISRAEL ALMANACK

Contains a

LIST OF ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATIONS in various parts of the United Kingdom, with particulars as to place, time of meeting, Secretary's name and address, President, Committee, &c., &c. Also the following important Articles:—

THE "GATE" OF HIS ENEMIES. By Philo-Israel.

THE GRAND CONSUMMATION. By Thos. Clark Westfield.

THE HAND OF GOD IN ISRAEL'S HISTORY. By W. S. Cavill.

LITERAL AND SPIRITUAL. By Douglas A. Onslow.

THE PRESENT ASPECT OF AFFAIRS AND EMIGRATION. By John S. Anderson.

WHAT THE SCRIPTURES SAY CONCERNING GOD'S DEALING WITH ISRAEL after their Dispersion (into Captivity —2 Kings xvii.) until their Latter Day Union with Judah and Subsequent Final Restoration to their own Land. Arranged by James L. Wood.

EXTINCTION OF THE ABORIGINAL RACES IN BRITISH POSSESSIONS. By Frederick Charles Danvers.

OUR ANCESTRAL PRIDE. By Miss J. Lawrence.

EGYPT'S DIVINE MONUMENTAL TESTIMONY TO THE IMPENDING COMING OF OUR SAVIOUR. By Charles Horner.

STAMPS, Taxes, Excise Duties, &c., Almanack and Diary, Moon's Changes, Sun's Rising and Setting, Gardening, Principal Festivals, Eclipses, Rates of Postage, &c., Royal Family, Sovereigns of Scotland from A.D. 1057 to the Union of the Crowns, the Ministry, Public Officers, &c., Area and Population of British India, with Estimate for the Native States; Emigration, 1857 to 1877; Statistics of the British Australian Colonies, English Weights and Measures, Foreign Moneys and their English Equivalents, Ready Reckoner, Table of Income or Wages.

London: ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

Price 1s. Post free, 1s. 1d.

ISRAEL'S CHRONOLOGICAL CHART, with EXPLANATORY NOTES.—This Chart, compiled from the Old Testament on a new system, gives the A.M. and B.C. dates of one hundred important events in Israel's history, and exhibits the perfect agreement of Scripture with the marks and measurements of the Great Pyramid of Ghizeh.

May be had of the Author, GEO. N. WALSH, Western Bank, Sheffield; of Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C., and of all book sellers.

TO AUTHORS. Authors desirous of issuing Works or Pamphlets on the great and increasingly interesting Question of the Identity of the Lost Ten Tribes with the British Nation, should first communicate with Robert Banks, of Racquet-court, Fleet-street, who has already been honoured by issuing, amongst others, the following works on the subject:

The Banner of Israel. Weekly 1d.; monthly 7d.

The Lost Ten Tribes, and 1882. By Dr. Wild.

The Sisters of Harrowdale Rectory. By Mrs. Searson

The Pillar of Witness. By late Captain Tracey. Cloth 2s. 6d.; paper 1s. 6d. (second edition).

The Anglo-Israel Post Bag. By Bishop Titcomb. Cloth 2s. 6d.; paper 1s. 6d. (second edition).

The History of the House of Israel. By Philo-Israel. Cloth 1s.; paper 6d. (ninth thousand).

ROBERT BANKS'S CATALOGUE OF WORKS ON THE IDENTITY OF THE BRITISH PEOPLE WITH THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL will be sent to any address, post free, on application. Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London.

NEW BOOKS.

A NEW TALE OF GREAT INTEREST FOR YOUNG PEOPLE ON THE IDENTITY OF LOST ISRAEL.

Now ready, price 2s. 6d., post free 2s. 9d. Bound in handsome cloth, gilt, bevelled boards, gilt edges, and beautifully printed on toned paper.

THE SISTERS OF HARROWDALE RECTORY.

BY

MRS. M. A. SEARSON,

ILLUSTRATED WITH BEAUTIFUL DOUBLE-PAGE FRONTISPIECE.

Printed and Published by ROBERT BANKS, RACQUET COURT, FLEET ST. LONDON, E.C.

And may be had, by ordering, of any Bookseller.

This book will be read with interest by both young and old, and found well suited for a BIRTHDAY GIFT, SUNDAY SCHOOL REWARD, OR PRESENT.

Price 9d., post free, 10d.

ARE WE ISRAELITES? THE TESTIMONY OF HISTORY, PHILOLOGY, AND ETHNOLOGY on the Subject. By the Rev. BOURCHIER WREY SAVILE, M.A., Rector of Shillingford, Exeter. With an Introduction by Philo-Israel.

CONTENTS: —Chapter I. Hard Speeches.—II. Opponents' Arguments.—III. Common Errors.—IV. The Sacæ. —V. The Cymry. —VI. Historical Testimony. —VII. Philology.—VIII. Chief of the Nations.—IX. Multiplicity of Seed.—X. The Anglo-Saxon Race.—XI. Anglo-Israel. —XII. Summary.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row; Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; or of any Bookseller.

Third edition, ninth thousand. Price 6d., post free 7d. limp cloth 1s.

HISTORY OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL, HOW THEY WERE LOST AND HOW THEY WERE FOUND. Told for the Children by PHILO-ISRAEL.

OUR IDENTITY WITH THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. By PHILO-ISRAEL. Price 4d. Third Thousand (reprinted from the Clifton Chronicle).

Now ready, price 2d.

A REPLY TO MR. ROBERTS ON THE EXETER HALL DEBATE, on the Subject, Are Englishmen Israelites? By ALEXANDER DUNN.

Now ready, price 2d., post free 2½d., in neat coloured cover.

AMMI; OR, THE CHOSEN PEOPLE

BY MISS BIRD.

Tracing the descent of the British people from Abraham, the "friend of God," and showing that true science, history, philology, and ethnology, are on the side of the Identity of the Anglo-Saxon race with the Ten Lost Tribes.

Price 2d. Post free 2½d.

MANASSEH AND THE UNITED STATES. An important Essay delivered before the "Lost Israel Identification Society," by the Rev. JOSEPH WILD, D.D at Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, New York.

BLESSINGS AND CURSES, AND THEIR RELATION TO ISRAEL AND JUDAH. By F. W. PHILLIPS, of Speedwell-road, Birmingham.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet Court, Fleet Street; and may be had, by ordering, of any bookseller.

Price 6d., post free 7d. New work on the Identity. Dedicated to all faithful ministers of Christ.

ISRAEL! AN EARNEST APPEAL FROM THE NEW TO THE PULPIT IN FAVOUR OF OUR IDENTITY WITH GOD'S ELECT PEOPLE, ISRAEL; Being a Letter from JOHN G. SHAW to his Pastor, Rev. Eustace R. Conder, of Leeds, with an Introduction and Notes; to be followed by a Review of Mr Conder's Papers on the Lost Tribes.

By the same Author.

"BRITAIN (OR ISRAEL)," with Map. Price 8d., post free 9d.

"CHRONOLOGICAL CHART." Price 3d, post free 3½d.

"GOD'S LOVE FOR ISRAEL." Price 1d., 3 copies sent post free for 3½d.

London: ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, DEC. 24, 1879. [All Rights Reserved.]

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. III. No. 157. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 31, 1879. [DOUBLE NUMBER, TWOPENCE.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
1879	517
The Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone as a Blind Witness	518
The Condition of Russia To-day—A Sign of the Coming Woe	519
"The Blue Mountains"—Where Are They? Asked by the Rev. John C. Boyce, And the Question Answered by the Editor	520
India Loyal and Contented	520
Bishop Wilkinson, Late of Zululand, on the British Empire	521
The Geography of the Gates. No. XXXV.—Herat	522
The Thin Edge of the Wedge	523
Were Moses' Seventy Elders an Hereditary Nobility?	523
The Editor of the Family Herald	524
The Promised Land	525
How the Stone Empire Grows	525
"Upon Earth Distress of Nations with Perplexity, Men's Hearts Failing Them for 'Fear.'" For "Israel," Safety, "Redemption," and Ease (Luke xxi. 25—28)	525
The Sabbath Sign in Austria	526
Unanswered Prayer. By a Country Parson	526
When the Lord Roars Like a Lion, the Children Trembie "in the West" (Hosea xi. 10)	527
Progress	527

1879.

A YEAR of gloom; a year of trouble, of anxiety, of loss, national and individual; a year of disasters abroad, of wars and rumours of wars, of "distress of nations" and "perplexity;" a year when "men's hearts have been failing them for fear," and "for looking after those things" rapidly "coming upon 'the earth,'" is drawing to its close.

The year 1878 was bad enough, men said: but surely 1879 has been infinitely worse! It began with "hard times" (BANNER Nos. 106 and 108), dull trade, scarce money, bank failures, distress, acute and painful; with perishing want, though even then the dark cloud, as we pointed out, had for us its silver lining; for success having been vouchsafed to our arms in Afghanistan, the three great Gates of that country were finally surrendered to us by the Treaty of Gundamuck, dated May 26, 1879—an event of prophetic, nay, even of Great Pyramid, signification, as we showed in BANNER No. 128. But early in the year, trials and troubles awaited us in another quarter. South African confederation demanded Israel's attention and action, but the hostility of Cetywayo and of the Zulu nation, with its fearful "military man-slaying machine," stood in the way. War was precipitated by the action of Sir Bartle Frere—properly, as we think; improperly, as the Times never ceases to repeat—and then God sent our nation a disaster at Isandlwana, on January 22, 1879, which sent us in terror to our knees, but which was only a blessing in disguise (BANNER Nos. 112 and 118). It forced the nation to "go through," and true to His promise to Israel in Micah v. 8, the Lord gave our armies then a crushing, decisive victory at Ulundi, on July 4, 1879, besides previous successes at Ekowe and Kambula Kop, which closed the war, dethroned Cetywayo, sent him a prisoner to Cape Town, "broke in pieces" the Zulu armies and polity, and left us masters of the whole country (see BANNER Nos. 135, 137, 138, 139, and 146).

But the year did not end without further troubles in Afghanistan, which have not yet, in fact, quite cleared off. On September 3, 1879, our gallant envoy, Sir Louis Cavagnari, and his small escort, were foully murdered by Afghan soldiery and the rabble of the "cursed" city, Cabul, rendering it necessary for the British Lion at once to rush forward to revenge an insult, which, if it had been unheeded, would have cost us India, and had placed the foot of Russia on Israel's neck! How well Sir Frederick Roberts, with his mere handful of brave troops, beat down all opponents, took the city, captured all the enemies' guns, seized the Bala Hissar, conquered his country's enemies, and led to the abdication of the weak and worthless, if not treacherous ruler, Yakoob Khan, our readers full well know!

The year ends with improving trade, with peaceful prospects in South Africa, and with the certainty, under God, in spite of late sinister events, of a glorious termination of hostilities on our Indian frontier, which will give the Empire a secure defence; and on Afghan territory, under British rule, will provide an impregnable fortress to defy the attempts of the Prince of Rosh and "all his bands" "to break through and steal."

The year has been one of great advance in respect to our Identity. The "good news" has gone into every city, town, and hamlet, we think, of the United Kingdom, and the Empire at large responds from many a quarter to the "glad tidings." We have sympathy and hearty greetings from New South Wales, from Melbourne, from Adelaide, Tasmania, New Zealand, Natal, Griqualand West, India, Montreal in Canada, from Barbadoes, New York, Chicago, Florence in Italy, and from British Guiana. On all sides the tidings reach us of advance, of increase, of spread, and of the circulation of our views and publications. Nowhere do we hear that opposition (rife enough) has succeeded in putting down what we know is God's truth.

At home it has been a year of severe and of painful controversy. During it, the Rev. J. B. Clifford, the aged, now the retired, pastor of St. Matthew's Church, Kingsdown, Bristol, wrote and published two pamphlets, which, for violence of language, for vehemence of expression, for want of ordinary, much more of Christian, charity, had an evil notoriety, amid the efforts of our opponents, to destroy our Identity, and to bring to bear on us their testimony to "Lo-Ammi." In vain. It has been hard for Mr. Clifford, for Mr. Stanley, for Clericus, et hoc genus omne, "to kick against the pricks." They have all been fully answered during the year, and have elicited the fact, which the public has appreciated, that the argumentative and controversial strength on our side is greater (we thank God for it!) than that on the side of our opponents (BANNER Nos. 124 et seq.).

Digitized by Google

This past year has also witnessed the publication of several works which will be valued by our friends. Such are the treatise by the Rev. B. W. Savile, M.A., on "Are We Israelites?" which is popular already; the Rev. H. Marriott's commentary styled "Horæ Propheticæ;" Miss Bird's and Miss Pearce's works; Dr. Wild's Sermons on "The Lost Ten Tribes and 1882;" a tale by Mrs. M. A. Searson, "The Sisters of Harrowdale Rectory;" the Metropolitan Association's Almanac for 1880, &c., &c., most of which have been received and noticed during the twelvemonth in the BANNER OF ISRAEL.

Regarding our own progress as a journal, it does not behove us to speak. We are thankful for the signs around us, which no editor can fail to note, that our labours are increasingly appreciated, and for that fact we desire to give God the thanks. It is, we feel, a high honour to be connected, even in a humble capacity, with a work such as that in which the BANNER is engaged; and in spite of obloquy, of public, and even of private, harass and contumely, which this work unfortunately brings with it to its managing literary conductor, we rejoice to think we are helping in the devolution of designs which the God of Israel has at heart, and which the glorious Redeemer of His people told us is one on which His "whole soul" is set (Jer. xxxii. 41).

We must not conclude our retrospect of the past year without tendering the thanks of a grateful public to those writers in the BANNER OF ISRAEL who have so kindly given its editor their gratuitous literary aid during the twelvemonth.

To Mr. J. T. Gott we owe special thanks, not only for the instructive contributions from his pen, which we have published from time to time, but for the indexes which the year's volume and the two previous ones also have given to our readers. These have been to Mr. Gott labours of love, very valuable to ourselves and friends; but the cost in time, and labour, and patience their preparation must have been to our friend, otherwise professionally employed, demand of us special acknowledgment, and, from his readers, thanks.

For ourselves, we cease from the efforts, the struggles, and the anxieties of the year 1879 with sad, and yet with grateful, feelings. Sad for omissions, neglects, faults, and errors which are visible enough now to us, and doubtless to our readers too; with grateful feelings because, in spite of them all, our friends have nobly stood by us, and condoned them all. We thank God for the results. And if by our humble but poor efforts the cause of our Identity has been advanced ever so little, the knowledge spread, comfort in its belief increased, and souls brought to Christ thereby, to Him be all the praise, to Him be all the glory, for by Him alone, whatsoever has here been done according to His will, has in very truth been brought to pass.

THE EDITOR.

ABOVE ONLY AND NOT BENEATH.

TELEGRAPH OFFICES ON THE NILE.—By letter, dated Cairo, Oct. 21, the manager of Messrs. Cook and Son's Egyptian business informs them that the Khedive's Administration has appointed English speaking telegraph operators to the offices of Assioot, Belhanah, Luxor, and Assonan, and the Administration wish the English public to be advised that they need no longer have any fear of the misinterpretation or mis-sending of telegrams from and to the above telegraph stations on the Nile.

THE RIGHT HON. W. E. GLADSTONE AS A BLIND WITNESS.

ON November 25, 1879, Mr. Gladstone addressed a large audience in the Music-hall, Edinburgh, on the occasion of his first address to the electors of Midlothian preparatory to the general election and his candidature for that locality. During the course of his speech he made some statements regarding the British Empire and its late growth which require our attention and some comments from the BANNER. He enumerated the annexations of the present Government, and classed them as follows:—

1. The Fiji Islands—an annexation excusable and proper.
2. The Transvaal—a violent and unprincipled proceeding.
3. Zululand—a land now unjustly ours by military force.
4. Cyprus—an annexation the enormity of which is to be mentioned in a future speech.
5. Egypt—where, with the French, we now virtually govern.
6. All Central Africa—whose conquest we threaten.
7. Asiatic Turkey—which we have (a monstrous proceeding) engaged to defend and govern.
8. Afghanistan—a country that we have wantonly "broken in pieces."

But Mr. Gladstone made many other statements besides the above which point to our Hebrew origin. For example, he showed—

That "this small island at one extremity of the globe peoples the whole earth," which was the function of Daniel's stone (chap. ii. 35—44) and the predicted future of Jacob's seed (Gen. xxviii. 14).

That it had subjected 240 millions of the ancient races of Asia to its rule, which was the promise of God to Israel regarding its heathen Empire (Psa. ii. 8).

That its commerce is such as no imagination ever conceived in times past or poet painted—a description of Israel whose "seed should be in many waters," "doing business in great waters," "a seed known by all beholders to be blessed of the Lord" (Numbers xxiv. 7; Psa. cvii. 23; Isa. lxi. 9).

That we had "broken in pieces" with our forces the Afghans' country, and, he might have added, Zululand, Secoeceni's, and Basutoland as well, which was the assigned duty of the Lord's Israel (Psalm ii. 9; cxlix. 7—9).

Such are some of Mr. Gladstone's blind testimonies to our Hebrew origin. He seems to disapprove of the enlargement of our Empire and would devote attention to parochial rather than to world-wide politics. He might as well try to limit the blessings of the sunshine to a portion of God's earth instead of permitting it to enlighten, bless, and warm the whole planet. We proceed now to present to our readers the salient extracts of that most eloquent speech as far as it relates to our present purpose, though, doubtless, most of our readers have perused the whole and wondered at the blindness of a noble genius which, knowing and seeing so much, still doubts what the functions of such a nation as he describes must and ought to be, seeing it can only be "Lost Israel," now "found" in Great Britain. He said, inter alia:—

That this Empire is an Empire the daily calls of whose immense responsibilites task and overtask the energies of the ablest of her statesmen. There is not a country in the history of the world that has undertaken what we have undertaken. There is no precedent in human history for a formation like the British Government. A small island at one extremity of the globe peoples the whole earth with its colonies, but it is not satisfied with that. It goes among the ancient races of Asia and it subjects 240,000,000 to its rule there. Along with all this it disseminates over the world a commerce such as no imagination ever conceived in former times and such as no poet ever painted. (Cheers.) And all this it has to do with a strength that lies within the narrow limits of those shores; not a strength that I disparage; on the contrary, I wish to dissipate if I can the idle dreams of those who are always telling you that the strength of England depends—sometimes, they say, upon its prestige—sometimes, they say, upon its extending its Empire and upon what it possesses beyond these shores. Rely upon it, the strength of Great Britain and Ireland is within the United Kingdom. (Loud cheers.) Whatever is to be done must be done by the force derived from you and from your children; derived from you and your fellow-electors in the land; from you, and the citizens, and people of this country. (Cheers.) And where are they? They are some three-and-thirty millions of persons; they are a population less than the population of France, less than the population of Austria, less than the population of Germany, less than the population of Russia. But the population of France, Austria, Germany, and Russia find it quite hard enough to settle their own matters within their own limits. We have undertaken to settle the affairs of a fourth, or nearly a fourth, of the entire human race scattered over the world, and is not that enough for the ambition of Lord Beaconsfield? (Laughter and cheers.)

Digitized by Google

"Be satisfied with these tasks." But what has been the course of things for the last three years? I will run them over almost in as many words. We have got annexation of territory in the Fiji Islands, of which I won't speak, because I do not consider the Government is censurable for that act. Whether it is a wise act or not I do not consider them censurable for it. Nobody can say that was their spontaneous act. Let us look at what have been their spontaneous acts. They have annexed in Africa the Transvaal territory inhabited by a free, European, Christian, and Republican community which they have thought proper to bring within the limits of a monarchy, although out of 8,000 persons in the Republic qualified to vote upon the subject, we are told, and I have never seen that statement officially contradicted, that 6,500 protested against it. Those are the circumstances under which we undertake to transform Republicans into subjects of a monarchy. We have made war upon the Zulus; we have thereby become responsible for their territory. And not only this, but we are now, as it appears from the latest advices, about to make war upon a chief lying to the Northward of the Zulus; and Sir Bartle Frere, who was the great authority for the proceedings of the Government in Afghanistan, has announced in South Africa that it will be necessary for us to extend our dominions until we reach the Portuguese frontier to the North. So much for Africa. I go to Europe. In Europe we have annexed the island of Cyprus (laughter), on which I will say more at another time. (Hear, hear.) We have assumed jointly with France the virtual government of Egypt; and possibly, as we are to extend, says Sir Bartle Frere, our Southern dominions in Africa till we meet the Southern frontier of the Portuguese—possibly one of these days we may extend our Northern dominions in Africa till we meet the Northern dominions of the Portuguese. (Laughter.) We have, then, undertaken to make ourselves responsible for the good government of Turkey in Asia, not of Asia Minor exclusively, as you are sometimes told, but of the whole of that great space upon the map, including the principal parts of Arabia, which is known geographically as Turkey in Asia. We have undertaken to defend the Armenian frontier of Turkey against Russia, a country which we cannot possibly get at except by travelling over several hundreds of miles of land, including mountain chains never adapted to be traversed by armies, or some thousands of sea ending at the extremity of the Black Sea, and then having to effect a landing. That is another of our engagements. Well, and as if all that were not enough, we have by the most wanton invasion of Afghanistan broken that country into pieces (hear, hear), made it a miserable ruin, destroyed whatever germs there were in it of peace and order, caused it to be added to the anarchies of the Western world, and have become responsible for the management of the millions of warlike but partially civilised people whom it contains in circumstances where the application of military power—and we have nothing but military power to go by—is attended with numerous difficulties. (Applause.) Now, gentlemen, these are proceedings which I present to you at this moment in the view of prudence only. I really have but one great anxiety. This is a self-governing country. Let us bring home to the minds of the people the state of facts that they have to deal with, and, in Heaven's name, let them determine whether or not this is the way in which they like to be governed. (Loud applause.)

Verily the Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone is our best witness that we are Israel! for he proves we have (1) almost universal dominion; (2) are God's battle-axe; (3) are pushing to occupy the whole globe; (4) like the stone of Daniel are few in number, but holding a superb heathen Empire and a glorious colonial Empire too; besides being (5) mistress of the seas and (6) of the commerce that brings with it. We thank God for Mr. Gladstone's speech, though evidently he would say of Israel's "Dominion" as Canute said of the waves, "Thus far, but no further." The result will be the same however.

THE CONDITION OF RUSSIA TO-DAY—A SIGN OF THE COMING WOE.

We have not hitherto written on the subject of the disgraceful and horrible attempt on the life of the Czar, perpetrated near Moscow on the night of Dec. 1st, 1879. The life of the Sovereign of all the Russias was then happily preserved, in consequence of his train having passed on first over the mine laid for his destruction; but the baggage-train, that his would-be murderers thought contained Alexander II., was wrecked.

His Majesty has escaped; but the danger, alas! remains. His people are stirred from end to end with a revolutionary spirit—the effect no doubt of the "three unclean spirits, like frogs," "the spirits of devils working miracles" (or wonders), "which go forth to the kings of the earth," and of the whole world to gather them to "the battle of that great day of God Almighty" (Rev. xvi. 13, 14). The Nihilist conspiracies, the attempt by fire to take the life of their Czar, and the fearful "voices" emitted in their proclamations by the conspirators are premonitions, if not fulfilments, we think, of the evil times at hand, when there are to be "voices, and thunders, and lightnings," preparatory to the "great 'earth'-quake such as was not since men were upon the 'earth,'" "so mighty an 'earth'-quake—SO GREAT" (Rev. xvi. 18). Let the reader listen to the following proclamation or "voice" issued just recently by the "Executive Committee" of the Nihilist uprising. Addressing themselves to "all honest Russian citizens who value liberty," they point to Alexander II. as "the personification of a despicable despotism, of all that is cowardly and sanguinary. The reign of Alexander II. from the beginning to the end is a lie, in which the famous emancipation of the serfs ends with Makoff's circular. From the commencement to the end it has been devoted to the consolidation of the classes hostile to the people, and the destruction of everything by which the people lived and wish to live. The will of the people was never so contemptuously disregarded and trampled on." The robbers and oppressors of the people have been supported, and all who are honest and devoted to the nation systematically exterminated. Alexander II. is spoken of "as the usurper of the nation's rights, the main pillar of re-action, the chief author of judicial assassinations. Fourteen executions weigh on his conscience. Hundreds of sufferers cry for vengeance. He deserves to die for all the blood he has spilt, for all the suffering he has inflicted. If, however, recognising the dreadful calamities he is inflicting on Russia, he would renounce his authority and transfer it to an elected assembly, his enemies would leave him in peace and forgive him all his offences. Will Alexander II. accept the compromise?" If not, an implacable struggle will be maintained "while there remains in us a drop of blood, until over the ruins of despotism there waves the standard of national liberty, and the will of the people shall become the law of Russian life." Such is this "voice!"

These are indeed fearful words, and plainly point to a Satanic agency at work similar to that which preceded and accompanied the great French Revolution at the end of the last century. The appearance of this national "sore" in the body polity of a Power destined, we believe, to be the coming "Northern woe of Europe," accounts for our Lord's solemn words He used in Matt. xxiv. 29, and Luke xxi. 25, 26. When these evil spirits, acting on a maddened nation, are let loose with no Divine check to restrain them, can we not see what will be the consequence? Will not the "sun and the moon" of the "earthly" monarchies be "darkened," "withdraw their light," and be "turned into blood?" Will not then attempts such as we now deplore, successfully carried out, cause the "stars" of the "earthly" political firmament to "fall from their heavens?" Surely "men's hearts will" then (as now), "fail them for fear, looking after those things coming on 'the earth?'" On "the earth" will be "distress"—unmitigated—such as is already begun there now in parts; "the sea" of the populace and "the waves" of democracy "roaring!" But here appears a word of comfort for British-Israel in this time of horror and unparalleled destruction. Our Lord Himself tells US—British-Israelites—"When these things," just described, of which we see the hints and premonitions as they are occurring in Russia; "When these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads; for YOUR redemption draweth nigh!" (Luke xxi. 28). Here is one of our answers to the now stupid "Cui bono" question. The advantage we derive from our Israelite origin is the security it will give us—nay, affords us now, in anticipation—what time the fiery deluge devastates and utterly destroys "yonder ill-consolidated Europe" which rests so ill at ease to-day. This is the temporal bonum we derive from our origin, and surely our readers see it is no trifling benefit? Endowed with this freedom from the affliction imminent on yonder Roman Europe, we British-Israel, as those "who have gotten the victory over the beast, and over his image, and over his mark, and over the number of his name, stand on the sea of glass" (the British Channel shore), "having the harps of God" (Rev. xv. 2). Here we sing the Israelite pean of "Hallelujah! Praise the Lord! for His mercy (to Israel) endureth for ever." Here we glorify the Lord "Jehovah, the God of Israel, by the Urim and Thummim, the name of Jehovah, God of Israel, in the Isles of the WEST" (Isa. xxiv. 15).

Digitized by Google

"THE BLUE MOUNTAINS"—WHERE ARE THEY?

ASKED BY THE REV. JOHN C. BOYCE.

AND THE QUESTION ANSWERED BY THE EDITOR.

I SHOULD be sincerely grateful if you, or any of your readers, could inform me where the "Blue Mountains" are. I entered into conversation with a brother clergyman the other day, to whom I had been saying that, at a clerical meeting held a few days previously, I introduced the topic of Anglo-Israelitism with the rather discomfiting result that I found myself the sole supporter of the theory, among about twenty earnest and hard-working brethren in the ministry; I told them, however, that I was far from convinced. One gentleman, whose noble head and refined spirituelle countenance testified to his being both a scholar and a true servant of his Lord, objected that in the mere descent of the Twelve Tribes alone from Jacob there was a sufficiently ample fulfilment of the prophecy that "a nation and a company of nations" should be born of him. And another brother denied that we could be said to have sprung from the Israelites alone, seeing that so many nationalities form the basis of our origin. I will not trouble you, Sir, with their reasonings. Had anyone more learned on the subject than myself been present (as I wish had been the case), they could have been closely grappled with and refuted over and over again; for evidently they had not read up the subject, and the chairman went so far as to decide that it was an unpractical matter, that could not be discussed with any hope of benefit accruing therefrom. The clerical friend to whom I have made allusion, in reply to the story of my discomfiture, said, "Well, I too should have been against you." He, I assure you, would have been no mean antagonist. "But," said I, "I can't help thinking there is great inconsistency somewhere. Many of us believe that we are nearing the end of the present dispensation; I have just been reading with intense interest, 'The Approaching End of the Age,' by Mr. Guinness. I gather from Holy Scripture that the Ten Tribes will come to light before the millennial reign, and, if so, where are they?" "Oh," he replied, "the Jews say they are behind the Blue Mountains, and will come out and astonish the world some fine day."

This, dear Sir, is a typical answer of many who have not read up the subject, and it is, of course, an exceedingly unsatisfactory one. I am won over to the belief your able and deeply interesting journal advocates by not a few strong arguments in its favour which have certainly never yet been refuted. Speaking reverently, I cannot conceive it possible that in some quarter of this world God is holding back, hidden, as it were, in "the hollow of His hand," a numerous, great, powerful, missionary people, whose prestige when He sends them forth, shall be found to eclipse that of Great Britain. I say, I cannot conceive of even the existence of such a people, much less of "all the families of the earth" being blessed through them. I am astonished that any one can hold out against the cause you advocate. "Blindness in part has indeed happened unto Israel," because the times of the Gentiles are not yet "fulfilled." One is thankful that the sun is rising slowly but surely on this great truth of our descent from Israel, and that one day something will happen—we know not what it will be as yet—which will confound all opponents and convince them that you are right and they are wrong. It refreshes one, even now, to see an earnest and foretaste of this inevitable climax, in the weakness of their arguments; but I believe that the Spirit is leading some to ponder this great subject; and that the small drops are even now descending of those refreshing showers of blessing which will at no distant date descend upon our parched and thirsty creation.

Wakefield, December 8th, 1879.

REPLY BY THE EDITOR.

We are glad to be in the position to answer our rev. friend's question. His clerical opponent was quite right. The Lost Ten Tribes are "behind the Blue Mountains"—"have appeared there already," and are "astonishing the world." There are three sets of Blue Mountains in the world, as any atlas will show, and all three in Anglo-Saxon, or Israelite, hands. Manasseh-Israel has one set called "The Blue Ridge Mountains" in Virginia, near Washington, United States, the home of Manasseh-Israel; another due West of and "behind" Sydney, in New South Wales, where British-Israel resides in great power; and a third, where we ourselves know every inch of ground—the Nila-Gherries, or "Blue Mountains" of the Madras Presidency, now in the firm grasp of the Empress of India, the glorious Queen of England seated on Israel's throne. Let the Rev. Mr. Boyce recollect this little lesson in geography, and in the next clerical meeting propound to the astonished assembly, that "the Jews are right, and the Lost Tribes are indeed behind the shadow of the Blue Mountains at the ends of the earth, and are already astonishing the world" by their wonderful prosperity, and by their response to the promises of God, to "Abraham and his seed for ever" (see Gen. xxii. 17, 18, xxviii. 14, xxxv. 11; Deut. xxviii. 1—14). EDITOR.

December 10th, 1879.

INDIA LOYAL AND CONTENTED.

WHILE Mr. Gladstone was thundering in Glasgow against the British administration in Israel's Heathen Empire, declaring "things are going there steadily from bad to worse"—"the people loaded with debt, impoverished, oppressed, misgoverned," and wretched—we have the testimony of the Times of Dec. 8, 1879, that so far from this being the truth, it is the very reverse of it. Our late policy in Afghanistan, according to the Times, has worked nothing but good. The natives of India, from the highest of the feudatory princes down to the poorest of the peasantry, are more loyal to our rule, more convinced of our strength, more sympathetic with our motives and measures, more resolved to be with us and not against us in any possible convulsion, than they were a few years ago. And why is this? Because they see God has given us success; that we have "gone through, trodden down, torn in pieces, and there has been none to deliver" from our hands! When Shere Ali defied us and was backed by all the moral strength of Russia, as India verily believed (for a time) he would be, the native races saw us defeat the Ameer's troops by a single blow, seize his fortresses, tear from his grasp his mighty "Gates," and dictate a peace to his son, after the defeated father had been forced to fly from his capital and country, to die at last a miserable death, a suppliant in a foreign land, for help the Russians never dared to send him. India saw, too, the boasted alliance of Russia with Shere Ali dissolve and collapse at the first collision. The Russian envoy was once the honoured guest at Cabul when the British ambassador was repulsed with insult at the frontiers. But now? India sees that Russia has disappeared, cowed from even the neighbourhood of the Western frontier of Afghanistan, and British power having "broken the kingdom in pieces" (as Mr. Gladstone, unwittingly quoting Psa. ii. 9, described the operations), has now seated itself near Cabul, dethroned and carried off Yakoob Khan a state prisoner to India, destroyed the Bala Hissar, and quietly enthroned the British Empress as the de facto ruler, present events notwithstanding, of the once independent kingdom of Shere Ali. All this acts with power on the Oriental mind. It has its reflex operation in every bazaar from the Himalayahs and Hindu Khush to Cape Cormorin; from Peshawur to Singapore; in the Khanates of Central Asia to Asia Minor, and even to Arabia in the South; and as far as Constantinople, the capital of the followers of Mahomet in the North. Speaking of the magical effect of the late policy of our Government and its results on India, the Times describes he situation thus. Let our readers note the words—

Digitized by Google

The change has beyond all controversy come. The language and demeanour of princes and people, the tone of the Press, the gossip of the bazaars, show that the natives have once more recognised the fact that the British have not lost the qualities of a ruling race, and that they have not the least intention in the world of letting slip or surrendering to anybody the Empire which their fathers won, and that they are prepared to fight, if necessary, in defence of their dominion. The delusion that Russia is a stronger Power than England, and that the fortunes of Russia are rising while those of England are sinking, has been dispelled by the events of the past two years. The ordering of the Indian regiments to Malta, however its expediency may be contested on economical or constitutional grounds, produced an immediate and most powerful effect upon native opinion. It showed our Indian fellow-subjects that this country was thoroughly in earnest, was determined to hold its own, and, in case of need, to put forth all the forces of the Empire in its defence. But it proved also that the people of India could be brought within the circle of imperial interests and sympathies, and it touched the national pride of the natives. The declaration of war against Afghanistan, in the same way, whatever may be urged against it on grounds of policy or even of morality, was regarded in India as a further proof that the British dominion was a vigorous reality. The natives did not clearly understand the diplomatic question, and were not as greatly concerned as Mr. Gladstone supposes about the financial question. But they saw that Russian policy had apparently threatened British interests in Afghanistan, and that the attack was promptly and unflinchingly met. Probably it would be found that the determination of the Government to deal sternly with sedition and conspiracy, shown by the passing of the Arms Act and the Vernacular Press Act, increased rather than diminished the respect of the native population for their rulers. But the main point is that they have ceased to question the stability of the British power and to speculate upon the impact of Russia as menacing the Anglo-Indian dominion with overthrow. In Asia still more than in Europe the great gain of recent policy—a gain by which Liberal as well as Conservative Governments will profit in the future—is that it has put an end to the mischievous and misleading belief that England's day is over, and that her Empire is held together only by a conventional cohesion. The natives of India now understand that the bonds of imperial unity are as strong as ever, and that not less strong is the national spirit which in time of need Empire and Fatherland must alike depend for safety. On this conviction we believe the loyalty of our Indian fellow-subjects is securely anchored, and it will not be disturbed by criticism which addresses itself to ideas not yet engrafted upon the Oriental mind.

Do not our readers see now how God is working by the policy we are properly pursuing, to bring large masses of the Eastern world under the supremacy and power of Israel? India sees who her master is, and submits with alacrity and gratitude to the Power that brings her peace, safety, trade, and contentment. Distant nations in Asia Minor, hearing of the success of the British Raj and the happy condition of her 200,000,000 of subjects in the East, stretch out their arms to Israel for similar good government, as we have proved to be the case in Asia Minor, Syria, Palestine, and Egypt. And are these blessings and advantages such as we can rashly cast to the winds to please a single man, and place him in power? Are we to abdicate this high position of vantage, and yield all we hold to the grinding oppression of Russia, to anarchy and misery, leaving her unmolested to stir India to rebellion if she can, and unsettle what all men know, who know aught of India to-day, is now happily established on a footing of security and contentment throughout the whole East? We know such will not be the case! God's plans and purposes, we believe, all point to the advance of British interests and power throughout the East, and neither the statesman's speeches, nor the plaudits of the party which acknowledges him as leader, will, we are sure, be able to shake or alter that policy one iota, or destroy the splendid fabric of power and dominion which God has given to our race in yonder Heathen Empire, because we are Israel!

BISHOP WILKINSON, LATE OF ZULULAND, ON THE BRITISH EMPIRE.

We seldom get a bishop into our witness box. Indeed, never since Bishop Crowther, the negro bishop of the Niger territory, gave such splendid blind testimony to our Identity, which we reported faithfully at page 246, vol. i., No. 30 of The Banner, so far back as July 25th, 1877. We fear that since that date (over two years), not a bishop of our Anglican Church has so much as alluded favourably to our Identity, directly or indirectly, blindly or otherwise, though some have now and then done their best to throw discredit on our views.

We welcome some outspoken sentiments of Bishop Wilkinson, reported in the Bath Argus, of Nov. 1st, 1879, from two sermons preached by his lordship in St. John's and St. Mary's, Bathwick, respectively, on Sunday, Oct. 26th, to crowded congregations. The object of his lordship's advocacy was "South African Missions," but the burden of the two discourses (preached in one case before Lord Chelmsford), was to show that the late policy of our Government in Zululand was absolutely correct, the war inevitable, the results in a six months' campaign wonderful, and the future outcome, the necessity we are under that we should at once occupy the ground with the Gospel of Christ. We are quite at one with Bishop Wilkinson on all he urged during both his sermons; and wish our space allowed us to republish the two reports we have received. We append the shorter of the two, that relating to the discourse in St. John's, and may find, in future, room for a part of the second sermon. The bishop said regarding Zulu Missions:—

The books of the Old Testament contain the principles upon which true politics should be based. What was it that made a people great? Of course all wise men would say good government, according to the laws of God, based upon justice, mercy, and truth; but there was a multitude which cried loudly that it was wealth which made a nation great. God nowhere in His revelation says that a nation should not be wealthy, but He tells nations to hold to justice, mercy, and truth, and warns us that wealth is a curse to a nation that uses it badly. Nations are composed of individuals, and each individual that is selfish and luxurious is not doing the best for his nation, but weakening it. God had placed in our hands wealth and significance such as no other European Power possessed. He had made us guardians of all the families of the earth, our commerce the commerce of the world, and our language seemed likely to become the common tongue of the nations. He (the rev. preacher) had been told that the British people were to double themselves during his own time, and that such would not be so with the French nation for 300 years to come. Was all this given to us simply that we should be a great commercial people? No, we were also to be the greatest Christian people. Our treatment of the heathen nations under our rule was the means whereby as a nation we should stand or fall. God never punished nations without giving them due and ample warning. He had given us more than one such warning in our day. Was not the Indian Mutiny a warning that we were not doing in India the work which we ought to do? If it had not been for the Christians we made in India, we should have lost it. In the South of India, where we had spread Christianity, there the people were most loyal. Our past experiences in South Africa, and especially in Zululand, where he had lived for several years, had been of the same kind. The disaffection had been the greatest where neither we nor the Dutch Boers, who had preceded us, had done anything to raise the natives from their degraded state. In Natal, however, all through the recent war, 320,000 Zulus, chiefly exiles from their own country, lived side by side by 20,000 colonists, with the greatest loyalty through the first terrible reverses, because they valued the good works which we had done for them. Sir Bartle Frere had warned us that we must not rely upon the fidelity of the natives unless we benefitted them more than we have. He (the bishop) believed that one day we might be the possessors of the whole of Africa, because he saw no other nation who could hold and develop that continent as we could. Necessary as he believed this late war to have been, inevitable as we know it was, many as he believed were the blessings which would flow from that war, we must not forget that a good Government should benefit as well as punish the people it ruled. We already had had seven wars in Africa, and that should remind us that England was not to kill, slay, and destroy only, but to spread the Christian faith, which is civilisation amongst the people. Numbers of tribes in the North of Zululand would, in a few years, become dangerous if we did not do this. Therefore he asked for help. They were trying to establish a bishopric at Delagoa Bay, which would include these Northern tribes, and he would be glad of the prayers as well as the pecuniary help of those he addressed, for he had seen what prayer had done for the mission field.

Digitized by Google

Here we have noticed that God has given us abnormal wealth, which is in accordance with God's treatment of Israel, as Deut. viii. 18 tells us.

That God had also made us guardians of "ALL the families of the earth!" The very words of God's blessing to Jacob, in Gen. xxviii. 14.

That "our commerce is the commerce of the world," which was Balaam's and David's promised blessings to Israel (Num. xxiv. 7; Psa. cvii. 23).

That "our language seems likely to become the common tongue of the nations;" which, however, is another way of saying that our race is Israel, for the language must follow the race; and if the language is "to fill the earth," so must the race; which is Israel's rôle (Dan. vii. 27; Zeph. iii. 9).

That the British nation is to double its numbers (as he hears) in the bishop's lifetime—an event which we believe is probable, if his lordship only lives 41 years—a rate of multiplication, truly Israelitish, and the actual one which is British now (Hosea. i. 10).

That "one day we British might be, he believes, the possessors of the whole of Africa." No doubt! Being Israel, we shall certainly be (Dan. vii. 27); and—

That "we are to become the greatest Christian people!" Hosea's prophecy of the Ten Tribes (chap. i. 10).

On the whole, we thank Bishop Wilkinson for his blind testimony in our favour, and suggest that if his lordship has not been reading the BANNER OF ISRAEL lately, he should at once invest in that useful publication, and thus discover that all his anticipations regarding the British Empire are absolutely certain to be realised, and that—because of our Identity with Lost Israel. We hope the new see of Delagoa Bay will act as a new Gate, spiritual and temporal, for all Central Africa.

THE GEOGRAPHY OF THE GATES.

(Continued from page 471).

No. XXXV.—"HERAT."

In lat. 34° 5′, and 62° 20′ East, due West of Cabul, on its Western frontier, towards Central Asia and the Khanates, is situated the city of Herat—"that special city," as Colonel G. B. Malleson calls it, "which the highest military authorities have described as 'the GATE of India;' which the commercial instincts of traders have made the mercantile capital of Central Asia—I mean the city of Herat."

We are aware that Herat is not yet a British Gate. But as we entertain no manner of doubt that before long it will be one, we think we serve our cause by placing before our readers—in lieu of a paper of the Channel Islands as promised—Colonel Malleson's account of the place as published in the Times of Oct. 23, 1879. It is the best description of the spot we have seen. As the public in general are perfectly unacquainted with the locality, a detailed picture of what will ere long be deeply interesting to Israel as an Eastern "Gate" of the first magnitude confronting Russia is sure to be acceptable, and we do not apologise, therefore, for transferring to our pages the letter which the Colonel addressed to the Times on the subject. It was as follows:—

The position I claim for Herat is one of very ancient date. The prosperity of that city, even before the invasions of Genghiz Khan, was assured. In those days the city could boast of 12,000 retail shops, 350 schools, 144,000 occupied houses, and 6,000 baths, caravanserais, and water mills. That prosperity, though it suffered, disappeared neither before the rapacity of Genghiz Khan nor before the ruthlessness of Tamerlane. Under the mild and genial rule of the son of the latter, Shahrukh Mirza, it recovered all it had lost. The restored prosperity continued till the beginning of the sixteenth century. Up to that period Herat was not only the richest city in Central Asia, but the resort of the greatest divines, philosophers, poets, and historians of the age.

Such was Herat under good administration. But in the beginning of the sixteenth century Herat was conquered by and annexed to Persia. Herat in the hands of the Persians was like Venice in the hands of Austria. Venice was starved and milked to build up Trieste. Herat was starved and milked to build up Meshed. No wonder, then, that its trade dwindled and its prosperity melted away.

In 1715, however, the Abdali Afghans wrested Herat from Persia. In 1731 the city was conquered by Nadir Shah. On his death, 1749, it again fell into the hands of the Abdali Afghans. Since that time the fate of Herat has been linked to that of Cabul. Although constantly besieged and always misgoverned, the prosperity of Herat has revived considerably since her severance from Persia. Looking at the enormous disadvantages under which she has laboured, at the fact that she been governed by a race of mountain robbers, who know no rule but that of extortion, and marking the advance she has made since she was freed from the forced rivalry with Meshed, it is clear that were she administered on the principles which characterise British rule in India, she would speedily attain a position far exceeding in splendour that which she reached even under the fostering care of the descendants of Tamerlane.

The position occupied by Herat—on the high road between India and Persia, the centre spot of an extensive and fertile valley, well watered by channels made from a perennial stream—marks her out as the natural garden and granary of Central Asia. Let us see for a moment how she responds to this claim.

Herat was visited by Mr. Forster in 1783. That gentleman describes the city as far surpassing Candahar in the extent of her markets and the amount of her merchandise. European wares were then brought thither by way of the Persian Gulf. In the caravanserais in Herat Mr. Forster met about 100 bankers and traders from India—all rich and well-to-do men and whose credit was at the highest.

Digitized by Google

The next English traveller of whom I find any record is Captain Christie. He visited the city in disguise in 1810, and spent a month there. He describes Herat as situated in a valley, stretching six geographical miles from East to West and about half that breadth, fertilised to a degree not to be surpassed by the streams which richly watered it. As far as the eye could reach were orchards, and gardens, and cornfields. On the North side rose lofty mountains; on the South, the traveller, coming from Candahar and Farrah, would have to ride for two hours through luxuriant fields and gardens before he could reach the bridge over the Herirud; crossing that bridge, he would have another ride of a similar length through the same class of country before he could reach the city gate. Christie described the city as covering four English square miles. In the public market, of vast extent, he found wares and merchandise from India, from Persia, from the shores of the Caspian, from Orenberg, from Samarcand, and from Afghanistan. The population he reckoned at 100,000, of whom 10,000 only were Afghans. Of Hindoos there were 600, held in the highest esteem; and there were a few Jews.

Arthur Conolly visited Herat twenty-one years later, in 1831. He travelled all over the province of which Herat is the capital, found its natural capabilities far greater than had been represented, but records that these were wasted—partly by the misrule of the Afghans, partly by the unchecked plundering by the Persians and border Tribes, and partly by internal feuds. The same causes had produced a decline of the population to 45,000; the Hindoos, however, had increased to 1,000, and the Jews maintained their position. The city he describes as being dirty in the extreme. But if any one ventured to express surprise that in spite of the filth it should be healthy, he received the stereotyped answer, "If dirt were to kill, where would the Afghans be?"

Conolly describes the environs as being wonderfully beautiful, and he confirms the accounts of previous travellers as to the extraordinary fertility of the soil. The gardens, vineyards, cornfields, and hamlets occupying the valley which stretches four miles to the foot of the mountain ranges on the North and twelve miles to the ranges on the South are described by him with an enthusiasm worthy of the theme. The water of the Herirud he pronounces the best he ever tasted; the fruits as the rarest and most delicious in flavour. They are so plentiful that people are allowed to enter the gardens and pluck and eat them. Each visitor is weighed as he enters and again as he returns, and pays at a fixed rate the difference in weight.

The climate is the finest in Asia. There are two hot months in the year, but the thermometer even then rarely stands higher than 85deg. (Fahrenheit) in the shade. The nights are always cool, often cold. The Heratis have a proverb—"If the soil of Ispahan, the cool breezes of Herat, and the waters of Khwarizin were in the same place, there would be no such thing as death."

The districts of Herat boast of extensive mines of iron and lead. These have, as yet, only been worked at the surface. If properly dealt with, they would yield enormous returns. The character of the iron is shown by the fact that the scimitars made at Herat are considered the best in Central Asia. The breed of Herati horses is scarcely less renowned; they are very cheap and are exported in large numbers. Herat, too, is famous for its carpets. Worked in silk and in wool, and in both combined, they are made of any size and command large prices. Hitherto the difficulty in the way of transport has prevented their being so well known as they deserve. Silk is spun in large quantities in the districts. The districts likewise produce largely assafœtida, saffron, pistachio nuts, gum, and manna. These and horses constitute the principal exports. Of skins, only those of the sheep and the lamb are used in Herat. But of these the supply is insufficient. Shoes are, therefore, imported from India viâ Candahar. Herat produces neither cotton goods nor cloths. The sheep-skins are made up into coverings.

Such is Herat—a place possessing vast capabilities, the employment of which demands only intelligent rule. The annual revenue, under the tyrannical government of Shah Kamran, was £89,248. Under the rule of the British it could be made to cover the expense of the occupation of the great cities of Afghanistan. Again would Herat become what she was 500 years ago—"the garden and granary of Central Asia." In the course of a few years this garden and granary must fall either to Russia or to England. Why not take it now? The possession will solve every difficulty. Not only would England govern the country with its own revenues, but she would rescue from Afghan tyranny a race who hate the Afghans, and obtain for the industries of England the market of Central Asia.

I remain, Sir, your obedient servant,

27, West Cromwell-road. G. B. MALLESON (Colonel).

Such is Col. G. B. Malleson's monograph of Herat. He begins his account by calling it "the Gate of India," and ends it by hinting that the "possession" of that Gate will fall probably to "England." God gave all the Gates to Israel. As Herat is a "Gate," and the British are Israel, we cannot but conclude that the Colonel is perfectly correct, and that before long "the Gate" Herat will be in the "possession" of British-Israel, to enable her therefore to meet, to confront, and to conquer her enemies, the prince of Rosh, and all his Northern bands (Ezek. xxxviii. 6, 22, xxxix. 4, 5).

THE THIN END OF THE WEDGE.

THE federation of the company of nations will, it seems, be brought about in a quiet, yet wonderful way. The appointment of Sir A. T. Galt to be a resident minister in London, in order to fulfil the rôle of a representative of the Canadian Dominion at the head-quarters of the British Empire, will, if followed by similar appointments by all the company of Israel's nations, lay the foundations of what may prove to be in the end a federation which will be a real and satisfactory solution of a difficult problem now. A provincial contemporary writes of this matter thus, under date Dec. 4, 1879:—

The Imperial and Canadian Governments are about to make an arrangement which will not only facilitate the transaction of business between the mother country and one of her most important colonies, but cannot fail to strengthen the ties that exist between them. Someone made the rather wild suggestion the other day that our colonies should send representatives to a sort of high Imperial assembly, thus establishing a relationship something like that existing between the German States and Prussia. This being impracticable, if only for one reason, because of the great distance between the mother country and some of our colonies, the Canadian Dominion are about to take a middle course by appointing a member of the Dominion Cabinet as a Resident Minister in London, to be a sort of connecting link between the Imperial and Colonial Governments, able and willing to give expression to the views and policy of the Canadian Government of the day. Questions are continually arising upon which communications directly between the two Governments would be of great value, and immensely facilitate negotiations. The stoppage of the Canadian cattle trade, the fisheries question between this country and the United States, the relation of local fishing laws of the British North-American provinces to certain clauses of the Treaty of Washington, the conclusion of commercial treaties with foreign countries, colonial defences, financial arrangements between the Colony and English financiers—these are a few of the important questions that render the presence of a member of the Dominion Government in London desirable and even necessary; and the appointment of Sir A. T. Galt for the position is a most desirable one, seeing that, besides a general knowledge of Canadian politics and public affairs, he acted as British Commissioner in the late Halifax International Arbitration, and therefore is conversant with all the details of the fishery dispute which the American Government appears determined to resuscitate.

WERE MOSES' SEVENTY ELDERS AN HEREDITARY NOBILITY?

IN our article on "The British Constitution—A Sign," published in BANNER, No. 153, p. 478, we stated that, in our view, it was "probable" the seventy elders chosen by Moses, as detailed in Num. xi. 16, were Israel's nobles constituted an hereditary body appointed as a great council to help the Prime Minister "to judge" the people of God's inheritance. We wish now to advance some reasons which lead us to this conclusion. In the first place, "the elders" of Israel appear to have been the nation's "nobles." Exod. xxiv. 9—11 seem to us to tell us that "Moses, Aaron, Nadab, and Abihu, and seventy of the elders of Israel" went up to Mount Sinai, and there they saw the God of Israel. Verse 11 tells us that "upon the nobles of the children of Israel He laid not His hand: also they saw God and did eat and drink." It seems, then, the seventy elders were nobles of the children of Israel. 1 Kings xxi. 8 further shows that if there were nobles who were not elders, or vice versâ, they were co-ordinate in authority and respect; for Jezebel addressed her letters, in Ahab's name, to both "the elders and to the nobles" of Jezreel. That the nobles were also judges in Israel as well as the elders seems manifest by Prov. viii. 15. The seventy elders of Moses' selection were men whose names being first recorded in writing (Num. xi. 26), were afterwards solemnly set apart and consecrated for their official judicial functions by the Spirit of God, put on them by the LORD Himself. We never hear that such selection and consecration were afterwards repeated—a fact which favours the idea that they belonged to "the nobles of Israel," and were set apart by this act for an hereditary office like the king's, or like Aaron's.

Digitized by Google

Another view, confirming our conclusion as to the hereditary function of the upper house chosen by Moses, arises from our Identity. Being Israel, we have the promise addressed to us recorded in Isa. i. 26. Our judges being the "earls" or "elders" of the Upper House, are hereditary legislators, and we conclude, therefore, from the facts, that the original institution in Moses' time, given "as at the first," was composed of an hereditary nobility too, to which ours answers to-day, "according to the promise." The Anglo-Saxons further brought in with the Heptarchy a class of hereditary nobility, vested with judicial functions, whom they too called "elders," "earls," or "eldormen," recognised now to be their nobles;" and as the Anglo-Saxons were Israelites of the Lost Ten Tribes, we conclude they merely perpetuated an institution, which, like their "dooms," or laws, and their manners, customs, and political constitution generally, they derived straight from Moses, and from those times which Isaiah was Divinely instructed to call "the first," and "the beginning" of Israel's polity. The balance of evidence satisfies us that the seventy elders chosen by Moses were an hereditary body of judges like our House of Lords. But as Israel, in the wilderness, contemned and cast aside all that God's good providence provided for their benefit, no doubt the upper and lower houses of legislature, instituted for them under the theocracy, fell into disuse and neglect, but is now by God's grace and mercy being restored to us "as at the first," and "as at the beginning," according to the Divine promise made to us by our prophet Isaiah in chap. i. 26.

THE EDITOR OF THE "FAMILY HERALD."

THE editor of the Family Herald being earnestly urged by some of our friends in British Guiana to discuss the "Anglo-Israel question and movement," published on the 29th November, 1879, at page 76 of his issue for that date, the following "Notice to Correspondents." Our readers are requested to peruse it before we proceed to discuss it.

BRITISH GUIANA, writing from George Town, contends that we ought to discuss the Anglo-Israel question and movement. Beyond doubt many persons are interested in the subject, and a large number of excellent folk are intent on promulgating their views with regard to the "Identity" proposition. We do not either challenge the right or desire to oppose the endeavour of those who are of this way of thinking to spend and be spent in the service of their idea. Nor do we wish to offer an opinion on the subject of the Lost Tribes and the Identity of the English nation with the race of wandering stars. Our position is this. If we are Israelites, that will be shown in good time. A warm discussion on the subject will not change the fact, or make us more or less Jewish in our extraction. We have stigmatised the movement as a "craze," and in all honesty the remark must be repeated. These "burning questions" do constitute crazes, and exert most injurious effects on the minds of those who, diverting the talents vouchsafed to them for the earnest duties and purposes of life, apply their energy and time to profitless disputes of this nature. It was against strifes and questionings and genealogies of this class that the apostle warned his readers. We are not careful to vindicate ourselves against the charge of "ignorance." That is the weapon to which passionate persons invariably have recourse when they cannot work their will on an opponent. Let it pass with the other silly things warm-tempered but well-meaning enthusiasts write for their partisans to read. To those who really care to know our opinion on the subject we simply say that, having carefully investigated the question when some of those who treat it so glibly were learning their letters, we arrived at the conclusion that the evidence collected from a scientific and natural-history standpoint is altogether insufficient to support the view taken. Nothing we have since seen or heard on the subject has shaken the opinion then formed; and in the presence of the many great and pressing needs and perplexities that week by week engage our attention, and to which in most cases we are unable to give the time and space legitimately demanded, we are not disposed to revive the controversy or again allude to it in these columns.

We ask our readers what the condition of mind of a leader of public opinion must be who, openly declaring certain opinions are a "craze," "one exerting an injurious influence on the minds of those applying their energies to profitless disputes of the nature" of our Identity, refuses to give his readers the benefit of his own researches into the scientific and natural-history (?) stand-point of the matter! About fifty years ago we were ourselves about to begin learning our letters. The editor of the Family Herald was then, we suppose, carefully investigating the evidence of "Our Israelitish Origin," and doubtless weighed the probative value from a natural-history stand-point (!) of "The Gates," "The Nation and Company of Nations," "The Multitudinous Seed," "The wondrous Heathen and the splendid Colonial Empires of the British," and the like, as those grand foundations of "the craze," which we, as one of the "well-meaning enthusiasts," but "silly," "warm tempered" people, write so "glibly about" now. Our mentor must, we suppose, now be over 70 years of age. Our only objection to his rather incisive words is this, that when we were learning our letters, the British nation had but few "Gates," no "Company of Nations," a comparatively very small "Heathen Empire," no "Colonial Empire" to speak of, but only a few scattered "Plantations," and a population in these islands of about 14 millions of souls, as against the 32 millions of the present hour. We may safely say, then, that the "careful" study the editor of the Family Herald gave to our Identity 50 or so years ago, was not the question we are now propounding, but quite a different one. His related obviously to our Jewish, ours to our Israelitish, origin. Hence the questions were not the same. He is not, therefore, in a condition to pass judgment on our present contention; but must, if he still calls ours a "craze," and the other disparaging epithets he hurls at our heads, submit to be deemed by us a man obnoxious to the charge of "wilful ignorance," even though we who allege it are "passionate persons," who are endeavouring, but cannot "work our will" on him as an "opponent" (whatever that may mean).

The editor of the Family Herald may be sure of this: that ours is a "burning question" which seeks, and will have, its response from every rational man in these realms ere long. It cannot be ignored, and it will haunt and harass him, as it does our clergy, the editor of the Rock, and other "opponents," to whom we shall, and are bound to, give no rest till they calmly sit down and deal with the matter, answering "yea or nay," "whether we British be Israel or no?" We shall require, too, from the editors of public journals the reasons for the rejection of the claims (if they be rejected), that the question may be argued. And if the claims be allowed, we shall expect and welcome with joy the co-operation of every rational man who sees the force of reasoning founded on Holy Writ, as well as on the irresistible logic of nineteenth century facts; demanding, what we have a perfect right to expect, that all who admit our Identity, should forthwith commence an earnest propaganda for the further spread of the "good news;"

Digitized by Google

knowing as we do the national, spiritual, and temporal blessings that lie behind these glorious truths. We are sure our readers have perused the remarks of the editor of the Family Herald with real pain and real shame. They are not wise remarks nor prudent remarks. But we fear they are the opinions of a man who is wilfully "ignorant" of what he fears to investigate, and who, closing his eyes and shutting his ears against all light and sound, is as blind and as deaf as a man can be, to his own great damage. Readers, pray give no rest to the editor of the Family Herald till he consents to open his eyes, and see what we see! And may God bless that effort, for his paper has great influence.

THE PROMISED LAND.

We take the following from the Oldham Standard of Sept. 20, 1879. The report of Mr. Robinson's lecture seems to us to have been very imperfectly given, as not a word is stated regarding the subject of the lecture, "The Promised Land." What is given us is merely a sketch of our "Identity" belief, with which our readers are familiar. We were therefore inclined to omit that portion of the report, but give it in full, as sent to us, on second thoughts. The rev. chairman's remarks are striking, and worthy a place in the Banner, which we accordingly give them.

A lecture on "The Promised Land; the Welfare of England; and the Glory of God Concerned," was delivered in the Temperance Hall, Horsedge-street, on Wednesday night, by Mr. A. K. Robinson, of Leeds. The lecture was under the auspices of the Oldham branch of the Anglo-Israel Association, which has for its object the Identification of the British race with the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel. The chair was occupied by the Rev. A. J. J. Cachemaille, vicar of Oldham Church, who, in introducing the lecturer, said he was delighted to see the room so well filled. It was better than the attendance at the last meeting, which showed that they were not going backward, but forward, in their work as a society. The present was the first meeting of their winter campaign as an Israel Identification Association, and as it was beginning so well he hoped by the spring of the coming year that they would have taken the town by storm, and probably become the leading town in Lancashire in the matter of the Israel Identification movement. The subject was very interesting, and those who took it up would not be likely soon to put it down again quietly. It was not a matter they could very well discuss, but rather a subject to be searched out. It could not be cut down to a single lecture. It must be studied right through and through. First of all, it took them to the Bible, and if they could not found their proofs upon the Bible, they had better give it up at once; but when they had once established that, then they could bring all the sciences to bear upon it—ethnology, and history: so that, really, the subject of the lecture, if they took it up, and followed it, would take them through a round of research which was as interesting and as whetting to the literary appetite as possible. (Cheers).—The lecturer, who ably supported the theories of the society throughout a lengthened but interesting discourse, said that in the Old Testament they read of the Twelve Tribes of Israel. Those Tribes were governed by various kings and judges up to the time of Solomon, and were known as the Hebrew race. After the death of Solomon they were divided into two separate nations. Ten Tribes were called Israel, and Two Tribes the kingdom of Judah. On account of the sins of Israel, various nationalities—principally the Assyrians—were sent to make war upon them. Judah worshipped the true God, but the other fell into idolatry. The Assyrians took them captive, and 130 years after, Nebuchadnezzar took Judah to Babylon. In 70 years from that date Cyrus set them at liberty, and they returned from their captivity and rebuilt Jerusalem. Their descendants were, and are now, known as Jews. It was the Jews who crucified our Lord; the people of Israel's land were then Samaritans, &c. The Ten Tribes took no part in the crucifixion of Jesus Christ, neither were they inheritors of the fearful curse incurred by the Jews in their assertion—"His blood be upon us and upon our children." Jesus Christ redeemed the Ten Tribes from the bondage of the Mosaic law. Circumcision was abolished, and God said He would sift them among all nations like as corn is sifted, yet not a lost grain should fall to the earth. The theory of the Identification Society, therefore, was this, that just as they knew the Jews who were scattered abroad among all nations as a peculiar people, so they maintained that the inhabitants of Great Britain, America, and the English Colonies, were the lineal and indisputable descendants of the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel.—A vote of thanks to the lecturer and chairman concluded the proceedings. There was a large attendance.

HOW THE STONE EMPIRE GROWS.

The following two proclamations by Sir Bartle Frere tell us how this Empire grows. We take the information from the Times of the 28th October, 1879:—

The Transkei Territory and No-man's Land.—Sir Bartle Frere has issued two proclamations declaring that from the first day of the present month certain portions of the above-named territories shall be finally incorporated into the colony of the Cape of Good Hope. The area defined in the order includes two distinct districts. First a three-cornered strip of land bordering the East bank of the river Kei, which may be roughly described as being embraced between that river and its tributary the Gouwa and the Xwexweni Mountains, including Fingoland and the Jantywa Reserve, and containing an area of about 1,600 square miles. This territory is to be known as the territory of the Transkei. The second area, to be known as Griqualand, East includes the territory between the Drakensburg Mountains on the West, the Mataana Mountains on the South, Amapondoland and Alfred Country, Natal, on the East, and the Imgwangwane and Umzumkulu rivers on the East. This territory covers about 7,000 square miles. The boundary between this area and Amapondoland may be described as following the Nofangweni and Noabeni Mountains, as far as the Umzimvubu river, and thence by a line drawn in a South-westerly direction to Umtata, or Uhitshana Drift on the Umtata. The regulations for the allotment of land to natives in these areas enact that for every dwelling, hut, or house erected on such allotment there shall be paid a hut or house tax of 10s. per annum, and that in computing the liability of any person for payment of the house or hut tax it shall be held that payment at the rate of 10s. per annum shall become due for each wife of any person residing on any such lot, whether a separate house or hut shall be erected for the use of each such wife or not.

Reader, note this! 8,600 square miles have just been added to the "Empire of Stone," and the fact is pushed away in small type into a corner of the Times, and no man notices it. The Times' own Asia Minor correspondent tells us on the 28th of October, 1879, that the "Turkish Empire is dead and gone, and the whole land cries to Great Britain to come and govern it;" but the Times coyly pushes aside the gift and will have none of it. "Who is blind but God's servant" Israel?

"UPON 'EARTH' DISTRESS OF NATIONS WITH PERPLEXITY, MEN'S HEARTS FAILING THEM FOR 'FEAR.'" FOR "ISRAEL," SAFETY, "REDEMPTION," AND EASE (Luke xxi. 25—28).

We cannot have a better testimony to the truth of the above Scripture than the Pall Mall Gazette of Nov. 17, 1879, gave us. We quote the passage as follows:—

"It is depressing to look through the leading articles of the ministerial press this morning. Telegrams and letters from every capital in Europe warn us of the gravity of the situation. The smaller Powers, whose very existence is involved, are one and all in the greatest trepidation. From Vienna comes the news to one journal that the Three Emperors' League is virtually re-established; from Constantinople we are told that the Sultan has given way, but Mahmoud Nedim, Said, and Osman are still supreme, and Prince Lobanoff's influence has certainly not decreased. That the French are by no means satisfied, and the Italians only too eager to move, is matter of common notoriety. And yet, in the face of all this seething mass of trouble, we read nothing but platitudes about the necessity for paying more attention to domestic politics; the danger of trusting the English people in their own affairs, for fear of what Mr. Gladstone may say; comments upon the want of patriotism shown by Mr. Forster and the Duke of Argyll, and much other cuttle-fish twaddle besides."

Digitized by Google

THE SABBATH SIGN IN AUSTRIA.

ONE who we thought was fully with us, and sympathised with all our views, has startled us lately by broaching Gothic, or anti-Ten Tribe, opinions, asserting his belief that the Tribe of Gad may be located now among the "Siah Posh Kaffirs" in the neighbourhood of Afghanistan. He maintains this because, 1st, these are the "last days;" 2nd, in the "last days" the Tribe of Gad was to be "overcome by a troop," or to be a "conquered" people; 3rd, these Siah Posh Kaffirs are conquered people (?), and reported to be "very like" the Saxons in their complexion; and 4th, therefore they may be the Tribe of Gad, of Israel. The same friend also starts the wondrous theory that the Tribe of Issachar cannot be in these islands now, because in the "last days," Gen. xlix. 14 declares that Tribe was "to be paying tribute." He suggests, therefore, that possibly the Hungarians, who are paying tribute (?), are that Tribe.

When we reflect that these opinions were elicited by perusal of our paper on this very subject, published at page 455, No. 150 of the BANNER, we feel somewhat surprised, if not discouraged. Of such an one we would ask if he has ever reflected on "The Sabbath SIGN," and what God said regarding it? His record regarding it is contained in Exod. xxxi. 13 and 17. "The children of Israel shall keep the Sabbath," is God's unfailing decree; and they SHALL keep it (He adds) as His SIGN "throughout their generations."

Wherever, therefore, we see a people keeping the Sabbath nationally, there we know Israel is; but wherever we find distinct dishonour done to the "sign," there we are entitled to say, "that people cannot be Israel." Now, let our dissenting brother apply this test to the Siah Posh Kaffirs, and to the Hungarians. Do those two nations keep God's seventh day holy according to the Commandment? The former are Mohammedans as we understand—certainly not Christians; and they know not the Hebrews' Sabbath. The Hungarians disregard it, and dishonour the day. The latter now belong nationally to the Austrian Empire. Let us hear how the day is kept in their capital, Vienna, as reported to us by an American in the columns of the Belfast Weekly News, of Nov. 15, 1879. He wrote as follows:—

NO SABBATH IN AUSTRIA.—An American traveller abroad writes:—"Whatever else Vienna may have, she certainly has no Sabbath. Unless the traveller keeps close watch of the lapse of time he will himself forget the recurrence of Sunday; for there is nothing here—as in most other continental cities—to remind him when the Lord's-day is come. We have been in Vienna two Sabbaths, and outside of our own party and a few American and English travellers, we have not heard any suggestion of the day. Traffic, work, amusements, and worldly occupations have gone on just the same on the seventh as on the sixth day. Indeed, the theatres and the dance-houses do a better business than on any other day. The Catholic churches (for nearly everybody here is a Roman Catholic) have services on the Sabbath, and small audiences gather, but the noise of business outside drowns the voice of prayer. Continental Europe has virtually set aside the Fourth Commandment."

That being the verdict of an American traveller, we can safely declare srael is not nationally in continental Europe; which therefore is Gentile; also that Hungary does not represent any Tribe, probably not even a part, rift, or remnant of any Tribe of Israel. As to the Siah Posh Kaffirs there is not even the smallest shadow of a shade of a proof that they have anything whatever to do with Israel at all.

Our friend's idea that the present year must be a portion of the "last days" of Gen. xlix. 1 is correct, but we take leave to remind him that St. Peter also regarded A.D. 33 as "the last days" (Acts ii. 17),and the Rev. A. B. Grimaldi has taught us in his paper published at page 267, BANNER, No. 131, that the term applies to the whole Christian dispensation from the time of the Nativity till the "age" itself comes to a close in (say) A.D. 1881·6. The prophecies regarding the Tribes of Gad and Issachar, therefore, may have been fulfilled long before these Tribes converged with their brethren into these "isles" in the fifth century; and our objecting correspondent's argument, consequently, is baseless, unsupported by proof, and utterly at variance with the principles which have from the first regulated the IDENTITY STANDARD and BANNER OF ISRAEL, as announced in the first number dated October, 1876, published under our editorial management.

UNANSWERED PRAYER.

BY A COUNTRY PARSON.

THERE is one kingdom continually spoken of in the Scriptures; the prophet Daniel mentions it when interpreting Nebuchadnezzar's dream, and describes it under the figure of a little stone hewn without hands that struck the feet of the great image made up of divers metals, which represented the kingdoms of the world. Rome, the last of these, was struck by the stone. The image fell, and its various parts, representing Babylon, Persia, Greece, and Rome, were broken to pieces. The stone grew to a mountain and filled the whole earth. This would be none other than the kingdom of God. When St. John the Baptist's voice was heard in after days in the wilderness, his cry was, "Repent ye, for the kingdom is at hand." Shortly after our Lord took up the same cry, the message was repeated by His apostles, and to this day is delivered by the Church in our ears. The kingdom is not yet come, nor has yet filled the earth. It has increased, and is increasing; but still it is only "at hand." In the New Testament we read a very great deal about this kingdom. The Gospel is called the "Gospel of the kingdom." The apostles talked freely about it, but understood but little in early days. Among our Saviour's parables are many that tell us what it is like; they show it forth in various aspects. After His resurrection His advanced lessons to His apostles were of things concerning it. The last question of the Church to her risen Lord in Person was whether He would at that time restore again the kingdom to Israel; evidently referring to the same kingdom. They were assured it should be restored, and would fain believe the time had arrived for the kingdom to come. Our Lord did not rebuke them for believing this; but reminded them of a time of witnessing that must needs first take place, and of their parts and duties during that time. That time still continues. That kingdom is still at hand—still future. How long ere it be revealed, God only knows!

Our Saviour taught His disciples to pray, "Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven;" and thus continually for more than 1,800 years has the Christian Church been offering up this prayer of her Lord's. Still the kingdom tarries; we must yet wait for it, pray for it, hope for it, never doubting but that it will come some day, and that speedily.

This delay in answering prayer cannot be because of any fault in the substance of the petition, for Christ Himself taught us thus to pray; and if many repeat the words little thinking what they mean, there are always some faithful souls waiting for the consolation of Israel. It may seem strange to us there is this delay; but not stranger than that there should be some delay in answering our Lord's own prayer for unity in His Church. We may be sure there will be a gracious answer vouchsafed in God's good time, and that our Saviour did not pray in vain, though we may be puzzled to know how or when it shall be. It may so be it is one of the hidden things of God. Then, in vain, shall we seek to find out the answer to the question, "How can these things be?" But it seems far more probable that it is like other parts of God's great plan that have been already revealed, that those who humbly study what is written for their learning, and take a delight therein, may, to a certain extent, pierce through the mystery and comprehend in part what is hidden from those who never ponder over what they read, and compare the sayings of the Scriptures with events taking place around them. The question has often occurred to my mind, May not the Identity be a mighty instrument in God's hand of bringing about that unity in His Church for which Christ prayed? as I suppose most of us are ready to look on it as a means under God of hastening Christ's kingdom. For what is it to those who receive it but a doctrine that enlightens us as to "who is who" and "what is what?" for by it we are instructed that the unchangeable God has not altered His mind with respect to His chosen ones; that His people are still flesh and blood descendants of Israel; and that their Church is no other than the Church of the First-born, the same as that (in all essentials) which was endued with power from on high on the day of Pentecost; that though in the eyes of the world it has appeared the junior member of the main branches into which the Church has become divided, yet, in reality, it is the stem which shall absorb the best individuals of the other divisions, leaving nothing but dross behind. History confirms the antiquity of the Church of our forefathers, and should it so come to pass that it absorbs all that be good out of other divisions, as Moses' rod when turned into a serpent devoured the others, would not unity be secured?

Digitized by Google

Let it be understood that I am not saying this is the way unity in the Church shall be brought about; but that this appears to me a way in which such unity could be brought to pass without compromise in matters in which our Church considers the Gentile Churches in error.

"God moves in a mysterious way."

His purpose is eternal, and all we do and say cannot alter His grand plan being accomplished. Still, from what we know of the unchangeable God, it seems but reasonable to expect that the bringing about of unity in His Church will be in keeping with the establishing His kingdom on earth. We know how this is pictured forth in Nebuchadnezzar's dream. We also know what was foretold of the chosen ones, especially of the double Tribe of Joseph. Ephraim and Manasseh are compared to the two horns on one head that should "push the nations."

The national history of our race shows us this very event in progress. Our dominions on earth are continually increasing, and those who see not the hand of the Lord in this matter and would fain prevent it, are powerless. If nation after nation are to be crumbled to dust before "the kingdom of the stone," why should it seem improbable that the Churches of Greece, Rome, or any other, should melt away before that of the "First-born," and thus secure unity rather than by amalgamation? Salvation is open to the Gentiles. Members of other Churches, ere they utterly pass away, can find a Zoar in ours; and through association with us can be made partakers of Israel's privileges —ours by right, not for our own deservings, but because of God's oath; theirs to enjoy through us, because in Abraham and in his seed were "all the families of the earth to be blessed."

WHEN THE LORD ROARS LIKE A LION, THE CHILDREN TREMBLE "IN THE WEST."

(Hosea xi. 10).

The terrible events which are occurring in Afghanistan are a trial to Israel's faith. Poor, faithless, "silly doves!" They hear the Lord's roar in the East, and they tremble in the West. All over England to-day men and women, with trembling voice and anxious faces, are asking, "How shall we escape those dangers? The Afghans will defeat and swallow us up."

We urge our friends to lay aside these faithless fears. The Lord has said to us, "Fear not: I will help thee. Fear not, thou worm Jacob, and ye (few) men of Israel; I will help thee, saith the Lord, and thy Redeemer, the Holy One of Israel" (Isa. xli. 13, 14). Our Lord Himself in view of present events, speaking of times when men's hearts shall be failing them for fear, looking after those things that are coming on the earth, when the powers of heaven shall be be shaken, gives a positive command, which we are bound to obey, and have no right modestly and diffidently to put from us: for He tells us just then —that is, now, to-day—"When these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads: for your redemption draweth nigh"—the redemption of the nation and the redemption from captivity and outcasting. We urge our friends then to joy and rejoice at these commotions, for let them be sure the Lord is riding on the storm, He is at the helm of Israel's destiny, directing her course, steering her ship through the rapids, and making all things work together for her good. Let us recollect "Ulundi," which proved that the Lord was better to us than all our fears; Ali Musjid, which showed that He could put the dread of us, and the fear of us, on our Afghan enemies; Char Asiab, which was a testimony that the Lord our God fought for Israel, and Himself discomfited our foes. And shall we tremble and fear now? Has the Lord forgotten to be faithful? Has He cast off Israel again? Away with such faint-hearted terrors! If we tremble at the Lord's judgments, we have His solemn promise that He "will place us in our houses," that "He will hold our right hand with the right hand of His righteousness" (Isa. xli. 10, 13; Hosea xi. 11). "Those that war with us," as the Afghan infuriated fanatics are doing now, "shall be as nothing, and a thing of nought," for the Lord OUR God will be our Helper, Strengthener, Succourer, Aid. Why, then, should we now fear or tremble? why should we dishonour Him, and displease Him, by doubting His solemn oath that "He will not be wroth with us, nor rebuke us" ever more? (Isa. liv. 9). Let us rather go to Him right humbly, confessing our national sins, praying Him to pardon us in the blood, to give us the trusting and believing spirit, and then with patience and confidence, ceasing our tremblings, and drying our tears, let us wait for the deliverance of the Lord, which, in His own due good time, He will show, who is Israel's God, Israel's Father, and Israel's Redeemer, Sanctifier, Friend.

Let us see in passing events that the Lord is rebuking in words of storm and thunder, the muttered threats of our public journalists, uttered only last week, that "now our work was done Israel must retire from Cabul and Afghan territory," leaving the people to themselves. God answered the suggestion, we think, by raising a commotion, which will now force us to annex the land, and probably advance our borders soon to the great Western "Gate" of Hindustan, which, as Col. Malleson lately told us, is the city of Herat.

Again we repeat, "Israel, fear not." Rather join in the joyous shout, "Hallelujah! Praise ye the Lord" (Rom. v. 3—5).

December 18, 1879.

PROGRESS.

We take the following from the Sheffield Telegraph of October 15, 1879:—

Sheffield Anglo-Israel Association.—The usual meeting was held on Monday night, in the Cutlers' Hall, Mr. C. Wardlow in the chair. Mr. W. H. Swingler read a short paper on emigration, viewed in the light of Anglo-Israelism. The lecturer gave quotations and statistics to prove that we were pre-eminently the colonising nation, that we were fast pushing other peoples to the ends of the earth, and were stretching forth our habitations, lengthening our cords, and strengthening our stakes. The promise to Israel was to "Inherit the Gentiles," and to "make desolate cities to be inhabited." After giving extracts from Sir Charles Dilke's "Greater Britain," some of which the lecturer pronounced as almost prophetic, he stated it as his opinion that our Government ought not to allow so many of our teeming population to remain in forced idleness, but should make some arrangement whereby they might be assisted to our colonies, there to earn their bread by the "sweat of their brow," and to obtain those comforts and luxuries the earth is ready to bestow. An interesting and animated discussion followed.

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements

(PREPAID).

	£ s. d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0 1 0
Each additional line	0 0 4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0 2 0
Each additional line	0 0 6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0 2 6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O O payable at Ludgate-circus.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed :—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS. SUBSCRIPTIONS for the NEW YEAR should now be sent to the Publisher.

	£ s. d.
Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free	0 7 .6
Two copies (including Double Numbers) ...	0 12 4
Three " " " " ...	0 18 8
Four " " " " ...	1 6 2
Six " " " " ...	1 17 4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-Grand, London, to W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

BIRTH.

On the 21st inst., at The Retreat, New Southgate, the wife of James L. Wood, of a son.

SITUATION WANTED, either in Devonshire, Cornwall, or upon South Coast. Advertiser can undertake office work of any kind, is thoroughly experienced in general routine; conversant with hardware trade, shipping, exporting, &c. Unexceptionable references. Salary moderate. Age 22. Address, X., care of Phillips, Speedwell-road, Birmingham.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

PRESIDENT: VISCOUNT FOLKESTONE, M.P.

The Hon. Sec will be pleased to receive APPLICATIONS FOR LECTURES, irrespective of distance, for the New Year. In addition to those delivered with marked success during the last few months under the auspices of this Association, the following NEW LECTURES are specially prepared :—

DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, Esq., J.P. Subject: "The Anglo-Saxons—the Chosen People."

CHARLES STUBBS, Esq., B.A. (London University). Subject: "Our Scythian Ancestors."

REV. JAMES BILLINGTON, F.S.A., F.R.H.S. Subject: "England's Place in Universal History."

The terms are such as specially commend these Lectures to Identity friends. Address, Offices, 334, Strand, W.C.

NOW READY, price 3s., post free 3s. 4d. Handsome cloth, gilt, printed on toned paper and illustrated.

THE LOST TEN TRIBES, AND 1882.

BY THE

REV. DR. JOSEPH WILD, Of Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Printed and published by ROBERT BANKS, RACQUET COURT, FLEET ST., LONDON, E.C.

And may be had, by ordering, of any Bookseller.

THE JANUARY MONTHLY PART OF THE BANNER OF ISRAEL. May be had, by ordering, of any bookseller or newsagent.

THE NEW OLD STORY, with an Introduction to a Marvellous Puzzle. The Story gives a sketch of the History of the Hebrews, shewing distinctly the difference between the Two Nations Judah and Israel, the latter being the British. The Story also tells of the Great Pyramid, and explains how its wonderful meaning can be, as it is only understood by measurement. An Appendix explains "The Eastern Question." The Story is written with great simplicity, and interests young children. By A E T, Author of "The Answer to the Eastern Question." London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

NEW BOOKS.

NOW READY, PRICE THREE-PENCE. Post free 4d.

THE ANGLO-ISRAEL ALMANACK FOR

1880.

THE ANGLO-ISRAEL ALMANACK

Contains a

LIST OF ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATIONS in various parts of the United Kingdom, with particulars as to place, time of meeting, Secretary's name and address, President, Committee, &c., &c. Also the following important Articles:—

THE "GATE" OF HIS ENEMIES. By Philo-Israel.

THE GRAND CONSUMMATION. By Thos. Clark Westfield.

THE HAND OF GOD IN ISRAEL'S HISTORY. By W. S. Cavill.

LITERAL AND SPIRITUAL. By Douglas A. Onslow.

THE PRESENT ASPECT OF AFFAIRS AND EMIGRATION. By John S. Anderson.

WHAT THE SCRIPTURES SAY CONCERNING GOD'S DEALING WITH ISRAEL after their Dispersion (into Captivity —2 Kings xvii.) until their Latter Day Union with Judah and Subsequent Final Restoration to their own Land. Arranged by James L. Wood.

EXTINCTION OF THE ABORIGINAL RACES IN BRITISH POSSESSIONS. By Frederick Charles Danvers.

OUR ANCESTRAL PRIDE. By Miss J. Lawrence.

EGYPT'S DIVINE MONUMENTAL TESTIMONY TO THE IMPENDING COMING OF OUR SAVIOUR. By Charles Horner.

STAMPS, Taxes, Excise Duties, &c., Almanack and Diary, Moon's Changes, Sun's Rising and Setting, Gardening, Principal Festivals, Eclipses, Rates of Postage, &c., Royal Family, Sovereigns of Scotland from A.D. 1057 to the Union of the Crowns, the Ministry, Public Officers, &c., Area and Population of British India, with Estimate for the Native States; Emigration, 1857 to 1877; Statistics of the British Australian Colonies, English Weights and Measures, Foreign Moneys and their English Equivalents, Ready Reckoner, Table of Income or Wages.

London: ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

Price 1s. Post free, 1s. 1d.

ISRAEL'S CHRONOLOGICAL CHART, with EXPLANATORY NOTES.—This Chart, compiled from the Old Testament on a new system, gives the A M. and B.C. dates of one hundred important events in Israel's history, and exhibits the perfect agreement of Scripture with the marks and measurements of the Great Pyramid of Ghizeh.

May be had of the Author, GEO. N. WALSH, Western Bank, Sheffield; of Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C., and of all booksellers.

TO AUTHORS. Authors desirous of issuing Works or Pamphlets on the great and increasingly interesting Question of the Identity of the Lost Ten Tribes with the British Nation, should first communicate with Robert Banks, of Racquet-court, Fleet-street, who has already been honoured by issuing, amongst others, the following works on the subject:

The Banner of Israel. Weekly 1d.; monthly 7d.
The Lost Ten Tribes, and 1882. By Dr. Wild.
The Sisters of Harrowdale Rectory. By Mrs. Searson
The Pillar of Witness. By late Captain Tracey. Cloth 2s. 6d.; paper 1s 6d. (second edition).
The Anglo-Israel Post Bag. By Bishop Titcomb. Cloth 2s. 6d.; paper 1s 6d. (second edition).
The History of the House of Israel. By Philo-Israel. Cloth 1s.; paper 6d (ninth thousand).

ROBERT BANKS'S CATALOGUE OF WORKS ON THE IDENTITY OF THE BRITISH PEOPLE WITH THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL will be sent to any address, post free, on application. Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London.

NEW BOOKS.

A TALE OF GREAT INTEREST FOR YOUNG PEOPLE ON THE IDENTITY OF LOST ISRAEL.

Price 2s. 6d., post free 2s. 9d. Bound in handsome cloth, gilt, bevelled boards, gilt edges, and beautifully printed on toned paper.

THE SISTERS OF HARROWDALE RECTORY. By MRS. M. A. SEARSON, ILLUSTRATED WITH A BEAUTIFUL DOUBLE-PAGE FRONTISPIECE.

Printed and Published by ROBERT BANKS, RACQUET COURT, FLEET ST. LONDON, E.C.

And may be had, by ordering, of any Bookseller.

This book will be read with interest by both young and old, and found well suited for a BIRTHDAY GIFT, SUNDAY SCHOOL REWARD, OR PRESENT.

Price 9d., post free, 10d.

ARE WE ISRAELITES? THE TESTIMONY OF HISTORY, PHILOLOGY, AND ETHNOLOGY on the Subject. By the Rev. BOURCHIER WREY SAVILE, M.A., Rector of Shillingford, Exeter. With an Introduction by Philo-Israel.

CONTENTS:—Chapter I. Hard Speeches.—II. Opponents' Arguments.—III. Common Errors.—IV. The Sacæ. —V. The Cymry. —VI. Historical Testimony. — VII. Philology.—VIII. Chief of the Nations.—IX. Multiplicity of Seed.—X. The Anglo-Saxon Race.—XI. Anglo-Israel. —XII. Summary.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row; Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; or of any Bookseller.

Third edition, ninth thousand. Price 6d., post free 7d. limp cloth 1s.

HISTORY OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL HOW THEY WERE LOST AND HOW THEY WERE FOUND. Told for the Children by PHILO-ISRAEL.

OUR IDENTITY WITH THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. By PHILO-ISRAEL. Price 4d. Third Thousand (reprinted from the Clifton Chronicle).

Now ready, price 2d.

A REPLY TO MR. ROBERTS ON THE EXETER HALL DEBATE, on the Subject, Are Englishmen Israelites? By ALEXANDER DUNN.

Now ready, price 2d., post free 2½d., in neat coloured cover.

AMMI; OR, THE CHOSEN PEOPLE

BY MISS BIRD.

Tracing the descent of the British people from Abraham, the "friend of God," and showing that true science, history, philology, and ethnology, are on the side of the Identity of the Anglo-Saxon race with the Ten Lost Tribes.

Price 2d. Post free 2½d.

MANASSEH AND THE UNITED STATES. An important Essay delivered before the "Lost Israel Identification Society," by the Rev. JOSEPH WILD, D.D at Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, New York.

BLESSINGS AND CURSES, AND THEIR RELATION TO ISRAEL AND JUDAH. By F. W. PHILLIPS, of Speedwell-road, Birmingham.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet Court, Fleet Street; and may be had, by ordering, of any bookseller.

Price 6d., post free 7d. New work on the Identity. Dedicated to all faithful ministers of Christ.

ISRAEL! AN EARNEST APPEAL FROM THE JEW TO THE PULPIT IN FAVOUR OF OUR IDENTITY WITH GOD'S ELECT PEOPLE, ISRAEL; Being a Letter from JOHN G. SHAW to his Pastor, Rev. Eustace R. Conder, of Leeds, with an Introduction and Notes; to be followed by a Review of Mr Conder's Papers on the Lost Tribes.

By the same Author.

"BRITAIN (OR ISRAEL)," with Map. Price 8d., post free 9d.

"CHRONOLOGICAL CHART." Price 3d., post free 3½d.

"GOD'S LOVE FOR ISRAEL." Price 1d., 3 copies sent post free for 3½d.

London: ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

THE MIDNIGHT CRY; or, WORDS OF SOLEMN WARNING.

Second edition, price 1d.; post free 1½d.; for distribution, 6s. per 100. W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, E.C.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, DEC. 31, 1879. [All Rights Reserved.]

Digitized by Google

REPORT OF
METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION LECTURES.

PUBLISHED WITH "THE BANNER OF ISRAEL," DECEMBER 31, 1879.

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

ITS WORK AND PROGRESS.

By whom and in what manner the fact in the first instance was made public that the Lost Tribes of Israel existed in the British race, cannot now be positively determined. It has been stated that as far back as Bishop Horsley the question was hinted at, if he did not more openly propound it. Then in 1794 one Richard Brothers publicly advocated it in a work he published, entitled, "A Revealed Knowledge of the Prophecies and Times." The result of which was, that making some allusion to King George III. which was not considered complimentary, he was incarcerated by the Government of the times in a lunatic asylum for eleven years.

It was not, however, till the year 1839 that the question began to engage the public attention, when John Wilson, of Brighton, published a work entitled, "Our Israelitish Origin," which commanded the profound and serious study of many truly pious and good people. From a position wherein we have been able to exercise much observation and inquiry, we have no hesitation whatever in saying that to this good and holy man all who are interested in the grand question of "our Israelitish origin," either directly or indirectly, owe their knowledge of the first principles of the subject.

It remained, however, to Mr. Hine to bring the subject before the general public and to popularise its study—this gentleman having greatly added to the facilities by which its principles may be comprehended by the production of some cheap pamphlets which have had an extensive circulation.

There is also another gentleman who, from the the position he occupies, his varied attainments, and indefatigable labours as a writer, is producing so much good to the cause in general, that the "Identity" history would be incomplete without naming him—need it be said that this is "Philo-Israel," the editor of the BANNER OF ISRAEL?

Thus the cause designated "Anglo-Israelism" has been growing. Some months back it was felt by several friends that an effort ought to be made so that those who hold the fact that the Lost Tribes of Israel are to be found in the British, might by means of a recognised organisation concentrate their power and know something of their strength; accordingly, in Dec., 1878, a few of the friends met together to consult upon the formation of an association which should have for its aim and object the spreading the knowledge that "Lost Israel" was found, and the strengthening the hands of those who are anxious to make this fact known. The result of their deliberations was the establishing of the "Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association." For a detailed list of its present executives we refer our readers to next week's BANNER OF ISRAEL.

This Society is purely a religious one, partaking of a missionary character. It works with every section of the Church of Christ, as well as with every colour of politics. There is nothing whatever about it which makes it a "Business Company, Limited." It exists for the glory of God, and not for the payment of a large dividend. Seeing, therefore, that it enrols upon its banners obedience and profound reverence to God, salvation by Christ, faith in obedience to God's Word, it commends itself to every true Christian as worthy of their countenance and support.

For twelve months this Association has been pursuing its work under many disadvantages—not the least of them may be found—1st. That its lecturers, Messrs. Douglas A. Onslow, J.P., Charles Stubbs, B.A., and the Hon. Sec., were not known to the public at large, nor Identity friends in particular; and, then, 2nd. From the obscurity of its office: yet under these difficulties God has given it a wonderful success. By means of its lectures some 150 audiences have been gathered during the last eight months, and some 50,000 persons, the majority of whom knew nothing whatever of the "Identity," have been addressed and interested in the question.

Lectures have also been delivered by members of the Association in their various localities, among whom may be mentioned Mr. Waymann Dixon, Colonel Bentinck, Mr. B. Canney, and the Rev. F. R. A. Glover, M.A. The Rev. A. J. J. Cachemaille, M.A., the popular and energetic vicar of Oldham, has given several during this month at St. James, Oldham, the Heyside Church Institute, and other places; these were attended principally by MEN, thus completely answering those of our opponents who urge that our question is only entertained by feminine minds. The Association is now located in premises most admirably adapted for its increased work at No. 334, Strand, W.C., opposite Somerset House, and friends will do well if they call and see the premises, also to learn other particulars of the Society's operations.

In the matter of finance there is very much to thank God for. The income during the past twelve months from all sources has reached quite £500—this, of course, includes the munificent donation of £300 from W. H. Peters, Esq., J.P., which was given for special purposes of Identity work.

It was felt that it would not be altogether just to defray the expenses of furnishing the new offices out of the General Fund; a special subscription list was therefore opened to cover this cost—amounting to about £50: already £40 has been contributed for this purpose, and friends are now asked to share the honour and privilege of clearing off this debt.

As to the future, classes will be held every week, notices of which will appear from time to time in the BANNER OF ISRAEL. These classes will be conducted by writers and others of acknowledged ability and authority on Identity matters, so that friends desirous of obtaining information upon the different phases of our question will have no difficulty of being satisfied upon any point.

We cannot close this short epitome of our work and progress without submitting the opinion that every true friend of our cause ought to feel it their duty to join the Association, the minimum subscription to which is 2s. 6d. per year. The Hon. Sec. will feel it a pleasure to give every particular, and answer every inquiry which may be made to him, concerning the Association.

EXETER.

SPEECHES BY W. H. PETERS, PHILO-ISRAEL, AND D. A. ONSLOW.

On Tuesday, Sept. 9, meetings were held at the Victoria Hall, Exeter, in aid of the above Association. The object of the Society is to propagate the knowledge that the Lost Tribes of the House of Israel have been found in the Anglo-Saxon races. The first annual meeting was held a few months since, when Viscount Folkestone was elected President, and special reference was then made to the support given by Mr. W. Peters, of Harefield. who has contributed about £300 to the funds of the Association. This gentleman occupied the chair at yesterday afternoon's meeting, and there was a larger attendance than is generally secured by religious societies. Mr. E. W. Bird, "Philo-Israel," Rev. J. Billington, and Mr. D. A. Onslow, of London, were on the platform.

Digitized by Google

The Chairman, in the course of his remarks, read a letter of apology from the Rev. .B. W. Savile, who regretted that he was unable to be present, and expressed himself "inexpressibly shocked" at the language which some professing Christian ministers used with regard to those who maintained that to the English race might be traced the Lost Tribes of Israel. The Chairman expressed his own strong belief that the Association was engaged in the work of God, and that before twelve months were over it would be seen that the Anglo-Israelites were right, and their opponents would be obliged to bow down in submission before them. The whole of Christian England were deeply indebted to "Philo-Israel" for the gratuitous services he was rendering in this cause. (Hear, hear).

Mr. E. W. Bird, "Philo-Israel," then addressed the meeting. He reminded his hearers of the blessings promised to the seed of Abraham, and pointed out that Rebekah was to be "the mother of thousands of millions, and her seed to possess the Gate of those which hate them." This being the promise of God, it was clear that the race of Israel could not have passed away, and he maintained that the position occupied by England at this time showed that the Anglo-Saxon race were descended from the seed of Abraham. From their numbers, as well as by the strong places they occupied on the earth, it was plain that they were the fulfilment of the words quoted above. The English race had so multiplied that they occupied the whole earth, and at the present moment we held the Gate of every part of the world with the exception of Constantinople, and if that left the Turks, it would never pass into any other hands than those of England. By obtaining the control of the whole world England would be able to spread the knowledge of Christianity, for everything was worthless without Christ. No other nation in the world answered to the fulfilment of the promises made to Abraham, and he maintained that the Identity of the British with the so-called Lost Tribes of Israel was established beyond question.

Rev. J. Billington, of London, Secretary of the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association, delivered a lecture on "Anglo-Israelism and its Most Recent Criticisms," and contended that the British were the true descendants of the Lost Tribes of Israel. The creed of the Anglo-Israelites was that God, by special favour, chose Abraham to make him the progenitor of a race which should know no equal so long as the world should stand. God made Abraham several promises, but, strange to say, there did not, at the time these promises were made, seem any human probability of their being fulfilled. Perusing Scripture, however, they would see that the blessings promised by the Lord were fixed in the Tribe of Ephraim, and the contention of Anglo-Israelites was that the British race were the descendants of the Tribe of Ephraim. It was said that the belief in the doctrines of the Anglo-Israelites was entirely opposed to Christianity and the spirit of the Gospel, and that those who held these doctrines were devil-inspired men. He threw back this libel and asserted that in holding these principles they did but show their belief in the truth of the promises of Scripture. He defended the establishment of this Association to promulgate the doctrines of the Anglo-Israelites —they in associating did but follow the example of every other religious Society. Every member of the Society was connected with one or another branch of the Christian Church; they had no individual prejudices or eccentricities, but they went solely to the statements of the Word of God and rested on them. The rev. gentleman then proceeded to answer certain criticisms which had appeared in the Family Herald, with regard to the supposed Identity of the British race with the Lost Tribes of Israel, and in continuing his speech he pointed out that the views held by the Association were spreading rapidly among all classes, and there was no doubt that before long the British would everywhere be recognised as identified with the Lost Tribes of Israel. (Applause.)

Mr. Onslow remarked that in this matter the Association simply asked people to believe that the Bible meant what it said. The words of the Bible must be taken in their literal meaning. If they spiritualised everything, they simply mystified it. As the language of Scripture had received its literal fulfilment in the decay and destruction of many nations, so in this matter they had a right to literally accept the language of prophecy. Israel was set aside to be God's chosen people for ever; that people must be in existence somewhere, and he maintained that in the British people were found the absolute and literal fulfilment of the promises of God to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. He denied that the Anglo-Israelites were a set of crazy lunatics; they had good reasons for their contentions, and all they asked was that those reasons should be looked into and examined. Then they were sure that the principles they held would gain ground. (Applause.)

A vote of thanks to the Chairman terminated the afternoon proceedings.

The evening meeting was held under the presidency of Mr. E. W. Bird, of Bristol "Philo-Israel," when Mr. Douglas Onslow lectured on "Lost Israel: Identified with the British Nation."

Mr. Onslow then delivered his lecture, which he said was a demonstration in detail of the four points sketched out by Mr. Bird. Having devoted an hour to showing that the separation between the Houses of Israel and Judah existed down to the captivity, he said, he defied anyone to prove that the people brought from Babylon to occupy the land of the Ten Tribes had ever been turned out to make room for the people of Israel to come back. They knew from Hosea i. that the Israelites were to become lost wanderers amongst all nations, but ultimately they were to be sifted, and gathered into one place, and planted there. Where were they to be looked for? Without going at length into the wanderings of the Israelites after the dispersion in Assyria, he asked them to apply a few of the tests generally used to shew that they were to be found in Great Britain and the American colonies. They were told by the prophets that Israel would be found a single nation; that he was to be made a strong nation, and that he was to be a Northern Power occupying islands in the Western sea—on this latter point there were no less than eight passages in Isaiah. Provost Paradol had shewn the power of England, and that in all human probability the dominion of the Anglo-Saxon race would extend the world over. Israel, again, was to possess the Gate of his enemies, and that England answered this test, "Philo-Israel" had shewn that afternoon. Concluding, Mr. Douglas Onslow said he thought he had advanced enough to satisfy them that those who held the Anglo-Israel doctrine were not crack-brained lunatics, but had some substantial ground for their belief. They believed in it because they accepted God's Word literally; and if he had failed to convince his audience, the fault was his own, and not his subject's.

Mr. Gerald de Courcy Hamilton, Chief Constable of Devon, moved a vote of thanks to the Chairman, and stated that he had become convinced of the truth of what he would modestly call the theory of the Anglo-Israel Association.

The Chairman, in replying, said he could not admit the use of the word "theory." As one who had for years been trained in judicial work, he was prepared to say that the Identity of the British people with the Lost Ten Tribes was a proved fact. He would stake his life on the truth of it, and was ready to die for it. (Applause.) He urged the formation of an Association for the study of the subject in Exeter, observing that Mr. Peters would make a capital President.

Digitized by Google

EXMOUTH.

On Thursday, September 11, two lectures were delivered in the Albert-hall in support of the object of the above Association —the Identification of the British Nation with the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel. At the afternoon meeting W. H. Peters, Esq., J.P., of Harefield, presided. In introducing the Rev. James Billington, the Secretary of the Association, Mr. Peters said:—

In a sea-faring town like Exmouth we all know the necessity of a chart in the hands of every pilot or mariner who leaves these shores for foreign lands; nothing would induce him to set sail without it. There is a chart of far greater importance than this for every human being, if he will make proper use of it, and without which the All-wise Creator would never have framed mankind as it is; our only paternal or sure Guide to conduct us safely through every step and stage of this life to that endless eternity of happiness for which we were originally created. This blessed and sacred Chart—the Bible—has been profusely dilated upon both by sacred historians and divines as regards the dealings of the Almighty with us as individuals, but seldom do we read it as regards His dealings with nations. The Anglo-Israel Association (in tracing out the distinction between Israel and Judah) introduces before you truths relating to this question, which seem to have lay hidden in obscurity until it has pleased the Lord to lift up the veil from the eyes of His people Israel and Judah at this the latter end of the present dispensation, and to reveal to us that we British are the inheritors of the promises made to the seed of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, to whom so many great national blessings are vouchsafed at the time of the restoration of Judah to the Holy Land, through the instrumentality of the British. We do not presume to say, nor ever said, that the blessings of salvation can possibly accrue to us individually because of our being Israelites, but only nationally, and that nations are nationally judged in this generation, and that they stand or fall according to the acts of their rulers now, equally as they did in the time of the kings of Israel, who, when they obeyed the commands of the Lord and put away all idolatry from the land, prospered at home, and were victorious over all their enemies. That the sin of idolatry, which caused their being scattered throughout the earth (as an example to all future generations) caused also the overthrow of all the great kingdoms of the East. The same subtle form of the Papacy, accompanied with its national and sacerdotal rites and superstitions, is now at the present time paralysing and keeping in ignorance and utter darkness the great nations of Europe, which one after the other are stumbling and tottering, and will be soon overtaken in that great earthquake which is destined to shake to their very foundations those nations of Europe which did not cast off the idolatries of the Papacy at the time of the great Reformation; but which this nation (being the Israel of God) escaped by abjuring its delusive superstitions. As regards the Jews, we need say little more about them; they cannot be spiritualised away to fall in with doctrines of the multitude, for they are patent to us all—a standing miracle of God's displeasure upon those Two Tribes, depicted even upon their downcast countenances, for the great sin of the crucifixion, for which they were scattered as outcasts to the ends of the earth, but soon to be restored, we believe, by the British-Israelites as a present to their Lord on Mount Sion. The Chairman concluded by introducing the Rev. James Billington to deliver his lecture: subject, "Israel and Judah, Their Distinction and Differences."

The evening lecture was delivered by Douglas A. Onslow, Esq.

PERTH.

The first of two lectures, under the auspices of the Perth branch of the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association, was delivered in City Hall by the Rev. James Billington, London, on Tuesday evening, Oct. 14. In the absence of Sheriff Barclay, who was prevented from being present on account of family bereavement, Councillor Munro presided. Amongst the gentlemen on the platform were Councillors McLeish, Brown, and Walker; Dr. Pateson, Dr. Flemming, Mr. John Wilson, druggist, Mr. John Macgregor, postmaster, Mr. Fairbairn, city missionary, &c. Mr. Fairbairn having opened the proceedings with prayer—

Rev. Mr. Billington, whose subject was "The Lost Ten Tribes of Israel; Who are They? and Where are They?" proceeded to deliver his lecture. The lecturer commenced by pointing out that their Association was identified with no particular denomination or political party, but dealt with facts that were every day becoming more apparent. They took their stand upon the Bible, and were convinced that the British people were the nation that were inheriting the blessings promised to Ephraim. He then proceeded to show that the great bulk of the Jews at the present day were descended from Judah and Benjamin; and that the most intelligent Jews believed that the British people corresponded with the Lost Ten Tribes. He next proceeded to show that the Lost Tribes were to be Identified by certain characteristics, to every one of which Britain answered in a way that no other nation did. The blessings promised were contingent upon the observance of God's law, and he urged upon his audience not to depart from the faith that was in Christ. In conclusion, he said that a belief in the Identity of Britain with Israel involved the acceptance of no new doctrine. It simply pointed out that God was preserving His people Israel; and that people were composed of the British people. The lecture was altogether most instructive and interesting, and evidently made a deep impression upon the large audience. At the close, a hearty vote of thanks was awarded to Mr. Billington.

On Thursday night, Rev. Mr. Billington delivered a second lecture in connection with the Anglo-Israel Association, his subject being, "The Anglo-Israel Theory, and its most Recent Criticisms." There was a large attendance, Colonel Williamson, of Lawers, occupied the chair.

At the close, on the motion of Councillor Munro, a hearty vote of thanks was passed to the lecturer, and a similar compliment to the Chairman, on the motion of the lecturer.

THE IDENTITY MOVEMENT AT UPPER NORWOOD, SURREY.

By John S. Anderson.

The object of the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association's Supplement to the Banner of Israel being to make known the progress of the movement as well as the work done by the Association, the following will show that zeal has not been wanting at Upper Norwood on the part of those able to instruct in Identity lore.

On the second Sunday after Trinity, 1877—the 10th of June, two years ago—the subject was introduced at All Saints' church by the vicar. The text was taken from Isa. xlviii. 9: "For My name's sake will I defer Mine anger, and for My praise will I refrain for thee, that I cut thee not off."

The discourse was opened by the statement that this promise was made to the children of Israel, and as other important promises were made to them in the Scriptures, it was proposed to bring the subject forward on successive Sundays. The importance of every Christian being well up in these matters was shown, and it was also noted that what was then taking place in the East was undoubtedly the beginning of the fulfilment of some of the prophecies. To understand the subject properly, it is necessary to be perfectly acquainted with the history of the children of Israel. This was followed by a lucid sketch of their history, pointing out most clearly the distinction between Israel and Judah, following the Ten Tribes of Israel, and leaving them in Assyrian captivity on the Southern shores of the Caspian Sea about 740 B.C., from which time all real traces of them have been lost.

Digitized by Google

The next sermon was preached from Jer. i. 1: "The words of Jeremiah the son of Hilkiah, of the priests that were in Anathoth in the land of Benjamin."

No doubt many facts in Bible history have not attracted special notice. Two-and-a-half miles North of Jerusalem was Anathoth, a refuge for the priests, and the birthplace of Jeremiah. Tracing his life when he went to Egypt, his Bible history ends. Having every opportunity, he no doubt would save all the treasures and relics, the ark, the tables written with the finger of God, also the stone of destiny called Jacob's pillar. It is not known where the ark and other treasures are, but the stone of destiny is now in Westminster Abbey. Zedekiah's daughter accompanied him Westward; and when the lost nation shall be recognised, it will be reigned over by a descendant of the House of David.

The next sermon was founded on Gen. xvii. 2: "And I will make My covenant between Me and thee, and will multiply thee exceedingly." This was treated in an exhaustive manner.

On the next Sunday, the fifth after Trinity, the text was Ezek. xxxviii. 2: "Son of man, set thy face against Gog, the land of Magog, the chief prince of Meshech and Tubal, and prophesy against him."

It ran somewhat thus. It is now our intention to point out and explain, so far as history goes, the present position of the Russian Empire, about which there are only two passages in the Bible; the end of Dan. xi., and the above chapter with the next. Ezek. xxxviii. gives first a description of a great Power, and describes three different periods in its history.

What is the Power? It is found described in the second verse: "Gog, the land of Magog," and to identify it further, "the prince of Meshech and Tubal."

On the next Sunday the subject was continued, alluding to the first period being already completed, and Russia being so weakened, some time must elapse before the close of the second when the Jews and some of the Israelites will return to Palestine, where they will not be strong enough to withstand Russia without aid.

Russia with her companions are to be opposed by a Power which it is easy to identify. Verse 13: "Sheba and Dedan, and the merchants of Tarshish, with all the young lions thereof." About the identity of the other country there cannot be a doubt; it is England.

On the seventh Sunday after Trinity, Dan. xi. 40 was considered: "And at the time of the end shall the king of the South push at him: and the king of the North shall come against him like a whirlwind, with chariots and with horsemen, and with many ships: and he shall enter into the countries, and shall overflow and pass over."

The knowledge we have already obtained by examination of Ezek. xxxviii., will enable us to understand the above, which is the second detailed account of the movements of Russia in this stage of the world's history. In conclusion, it is all told by Daniel regarding the second assault of Russia after the return of a few Israelites and the Jews to the land allotted to their race until the end of the world. Between the first and second periods there was an interval of twenty-one years, and between the second and third according to Daniel, the interval is to be thirty-seven years. Both give detailed accounts of the future of Russia, a time of power to be followed by her destruction.

The next on the following Sunday—the 8th after Trinity—the text was from Dan. xi. 45: "And he shall plant the tabernacles of his palace between the seas in the glorious holy mountain; yet he shall come to his end, and none shall help him."

By the examination of two passages from Ezekiel and Daniel, we have proved that the war now raging—July, 1877—is that named by the prophet. Whether it is to end by the Russians being victors, we are not told by either; we can only gather the fact that when the Russian Empire is confederated, Turkey will be found under Russian rule. These facts are all in the future, yet the narrative is given in a full, clear, and graphic manner, so although we may be wrong in some of the details, the chief points are right in the end. The return of Israel to Palestine will then take place. Syria having been assigned to the people to whom it belonged of old, under their protection many Jews will no doubt return.

Ninth Sunday after Trinity. "And the sixth angel poured out his vial upon the great river Euphrates; and the water thereof was dried up, that the way of the kings of the East might be prepared" (Rev. xvi. 12).

Of course the Euphrates means Turkey, and our nation the kings of the East, viewing our vast Indian Empire under the Queen of England; having a population of 200,000,000 souls, it is a most remarkable instance of a large Eastern nation governed by a foreign State. What a responsibility for us, bound as we are to do all we can for the Indian people, &c.

"Is it conceivable that when God thought fit to notice events in the minutest detail, that He should overlook our nation and pass us by without notice?"

The subject of the promises to the patriarchs was resumed by a sermon from Gen. xvii. 2: "And I will make My covenant between Me and thee, and will multiply thee exceedingly."

Twelfth Sunday after Trinity. "So shall My word be that goeth forth out of My mouth: it shall not return unto Me void," &c. (Isa. lv. 11).

Conclusion arrived at, after going over the promises and the seed in the singular, which is Christ, is this, that if God has fulfilled all the evil He prophesied against Judah, then when we are informed in the same sacred Book of blessings promised to the people of Israel, we cannot doubt all being faithfully fulfilled.

Thirteenth Sunday after Trinity. "Be fruitful and multiply: a nation and a company of nations shall be of thee" (Gen. xxv. 11).

Noting the difficulty in tracing the wanderings of the Lost Tribes, we can arrive at the same conclusions by another course of argument. Let us see what nation holds the required position. This was elaborated, going into statistics of population; comparing increase with that of other nations, &c.

Fourteenth Sunday after Trinity, 1877. "In blessing I will bless thee, and in multiplying I will multiply thy seed as the stars of the heaven, and as the sand which is upon the sea-shore; and thy seed shall possess the Gate of his enemies" (Gen. xxii. 17).

After touching on the allegorical stone in Nebuchadnezzar's dream (Dan. ii. 34) cut out without hands, or which was not in hands, applying to which must be the result of our rapid increase, and describing, amongst other things, the Gates, all of which, but two, are in our possession, and if the Danes are of the same seed as ourselves, there is only one left—Constantinople.

The fourteenth, and last of this series of sermons, preached on the Fifteenth Sunday after Trinity, Sept. 9, 1877, was from Gen. xii. 7: "And the Lord appeared unto Abram, and said, Unto thy seed will I give this land."

The land being all that country from the river Nile to the Euphrates, which belongs to us and the Jews by Divine authority, the highest authority possible under which such a title could be given. Regarding the number to return, reference was made to Jer. iii. 14—"One of a city, two of a family," &c. Our nation being so favoured entails on itself, as well as upon every separate individual, a great responsibility to use their position to do good in every way to every nation in the world.

Upper Norwood, Dec. 15, 1879.

Digitized by Google